Tableau server performance recording

Getting data from, can display tableau Will leave the steps and how it compares other recorded events chronologically. Events shows mid-view events in a display summary dashboard, sort by View server documents. Sometimes for efficiency, Tableau combines multiple queries in the same query against data. In this case, you may see an executed query event for null worksheet and The questions are being executed for your named worksheet. Detailed Timeline This view is a detailed version of timeline view that shows all events and separates individual objects grouped into timeline view. It aims to be used by advanced users during workbook design. Detailed view detailed view dashbord includes depth, exclusive CPU, inclusive CPU and elapsed time view. The view of depth is the topmost view in the detailed view dashboard and provides information about what happens when requested. This view is most useful when filtered on a single user request. Examples of user requests are: loading a view, selecting a mark, or changing filters. The depth represents the same activity each time on the view. An activity is a unit of work that is performed as part of processing a user request. Multiple activities occur as a result of the same user request. The length of each time when viewed is proportional to the elapsed time for the activity that represents the bar. High-level activities appear at the top of view. Low activities are child activities generated by high level activities. Provides additional details about the activity hovering over each bar and also highlights the same row in the CPU and elapsed time view described in the next section. Which parts of the request took the most time, to investigate long-running activities at the highest level. CPU and elapsed time CPU and elapsed time views are the least visible in the detailed view dashboard. You can toggle between special CPU, inclusive CPU and elapsed time views by clicking on the radio button. While depth views can help quick visual recognition of long-running activities, it doesn't necessarily highlight activities that occur multiple times with each instance. Special CPU, inclusive CPU, and elapsed time considerations provide total statistics for each activity. The number of times an activity has occurred in the Count column is shown in the Count column and the total amount of time taken by the same activity is shown using the bar chart. Chart.
