The Rush Is On

Panhellenic

By ANN CUTLER
Junior Editor

Sorority rush continues tonight for the more than 900 freshman coeds registered with Panhellenic.

Plan A (Christian) and C (cross-rush) rushees will attend nine parties from 6:30 p.m. to 10:05 p.m. today and Plan B (Jewish) rushees, whose names begin with M-Z, will attend seven parties from 6:30 p.m. to 9:40 p.m.

The traditional four rounds of rush parties began Monday night with nine parties for Plan A rushees. They continued Tuesday night with seven parties for Plan B and Plan C rushees.

With the start of rushing Monday night, silence period began and will continue to Feb. 20 when bids will be given out.

Under the rules of silence period, sorority women may not speak to freshman coeds, other than to say hello.

Carol Shire, Panhellenic rush chairman, emphasized that this rule will be strictly enforced. Both houses and rushees will be penalized for any infractions.

After these first round of parties rushees will plan their own schedules for the succeeding parties according to the invitations they receive.

Bids

Bids for the informal parties will be distributed in the recreation lounge of the Woman's Building from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday.

These 30 minute parties will be held Saturday and Sunday. Plan A and Plan C will attend six parties each day from 1

The 30 Hill fraternities open their doors tonight to some 860 freshmen in the first of five informal rush sessions.

Informal sessions are, scheduled from 7-10 p.m. today, Friday, Monday and Tuesday and from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. this Saturday.

For the purpose of the first three informal rush sessions, rushees have been divided into three groups, x, y, and z.

Rushees with last names beginning with letters A-G are in group X; H-P are in group Y; and Q-Z are in group Z.

Groups

Fraternities also have been divided into the following three groups for the informal sessions:

Group Number One: Beta Sigma Rho, Delta Upsilon, Kappa Phi Delta, Phi Delta Theta, Phi Gamma Delta, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Sigma Alpha Mu, Sigma Nu, Sigma Phi Epsilon and Tau Delta Phi.

Group number two: Alpha Chi Rho, Kappa Sigma, Phi Epsilon Pi, Phi Kappa Psi, Psi Upsilon, Sigma Chi Psi, Tau Epsilon Phi, Tau Kappa Epsilon, Zeta Beta Tau and Zeta Psi.

Group number three: Acacia, Alpha Epsilon Pi, Alpha Tau Omega, Beta Theta Pi, Delta Kappa Epsilon, Delta Tau Delta, Lambda Chi Alpha, Phi Sigma Delta, Pi Kappa Alpha and Theta Chi.

Today

Today rushee group X goes to fraternity group one, group Y goes to group two and group Z to group three.

On Friday, group X goes to group three, group Y goes to Ax Glitters Over SAE; Alumni Hold Charter

The charter of New York Delta of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity is in serious jeopardy under the terms of a disciplinary decision announced Tuesday by SU Dean of Men Earle W. Clifford.

The charter was placed in escrow with the local Sigma Alpha Epsilon Alumni Assn. Clifford explained.

The alumni act as a third party between the university and the local chapter and will hold the chapter until the question is resolved and the conditions of the act fulfilled.)

Final decision on the eligibility of the chapter to continue operation after this June will be made by a combined committee of the dean of men's office, the local alumni association and the national officers of the fraternity at a review of the progress of the chapter this semester at a meeting in early May.

The decision resulted from a recent review of violations of university policies concerning drinking and possession of firearms by individual members of the fraternity. During the first week of Christmas vacation, while investigating an illegal entry into the SAE house, Hill Security Police found several violations of university policy. The disciplinary actions taken by the chapter in individual violations received concurrence from the dean of men's office.

The house has not been restricted in its fraternal and social functions, including rushing, explained Fraternity Administrator James P. McMurray. This was done so that the house could prove itself as an operating fraternity following university policy.

6,143 Register Monday, Tuesday

By AUDREY LIPPMAN

Several students took an unnecessary hike to Manley Fieldhouse as Piety Hill prepared for spring semester with registration Monday and Tuesday.

Actually, 6,143 registered Monday and Tuesday in the Men's Gymnasium. The two-day total is about 68 per cent of the total undergraduate and graduate student body.

The rest of the total is scheduled from 8 to 11 a.m. and 1 to 5 p.m.

Registration is being held at the gym instead of the fieldhouse because the Manley basketball court is set up for three games this week, the track and bleachers are also ready for use. Registrar Edwin D. Smith said the long distance hike in bad weather was also a deciding factor.

Registration by classes for Monday and Tuesday were: 1575 freshmen, 1153 sophomores, 1120 juniors, 938 seniors, 1403 graduate students

NEW DO

The Daily Orange has a new look for the Spring semester (see top of page). The squiggly "Daily Orange" has been replaced by a new nameplate or "flag" designed by DO Executive Editor John Greenwald. The "flag," using a version of the Times Roman Bold type face also appears, in a three column version, on the back page which is now the exclusive property of the DO sports staff

Students Play Musical Chairs With Housing

One SU coed has been moved into her boyfriend's former room as student housing is rearranged for the spring semester.

Men were moved from Scott, White, Wilson and Hangerford cottages, from 603 University, all Comstock cottages, the guest rooms of Sadler Hall and Sims Hall. They are now living in Booth Dorm, formerly known as the Flick site.

Coeds were moved from Schultze Cottage Friday and Haven Hall Monday. A few Haven residents and coeds from Lima Cottage will be moved Sunday into Scott and Wilson. These cottages are presently being painted, according to Jean Crawford, director of women's housing.

SU's newest dorm has been named Willis H. Booth in honor of the late banker and financier a member of the SU Board of Trustees until his death in 1958.

Men have been moving into Booth since Friday. Director Carl Fisher said about 275 students were moved in by Tuesday. The rest will be moved by Thursday. Three hundred fifteen men are expected to occupy the dorm.

SIMS

Sims Hall, which will be vacated by this weekend, is the oldest men's dorm on campus and first occupied in 1907. It will be closed this semester and opened again in the fall.

The Youth Development Center, now located at 404 Comstock, will be moved to Lima Cottage at the end of February.

The nine-story new men's living center faces Thorden Park and Comstock Ave. The Booth Ferris Foundation, founded by the late Mr. and Mrs. Booth, last month gave the university $300,000 to be used to furnish the new dorm. Chancellor William P. Tolley announced the gift has been credited to the University Syra-

'Beggar's Opera' Bows Tonight

Presenting a kaleidoscope of social, moral and political satire of the characters of theatrical history, "The Beggar's Opera" opens at 8:30 p.m. today in the new University Coronet Stage of the Drama Building.

The production will run eight performances on a specially designed panoramic "open stage".

Because the American audience is "happiest when the action is pushed right into their laps, this new stage will do just that—the action will surround the audience," observes Ben Shakktman, 'Opera' stage director.

Such proximity of audience to stage action requires near perfection in every physical object from make-up and costumes to furniture and fight scenes, Shaktman notes.

Original costumes for the production were designed and constructed according to 18th century styles by university fashion design students under the supervision of Dr. Charles Dibble.

Designer Joseph Morton of the drama departments made the changes in structure and shape of the actual stage area.

A specially created woodwind ensemble will provide the over sixty musical numbers whose tunes range from "zesty" Scotch melodies to "dignified" English hymns.

Bonnie Bradt, Bill Harris and Karen Faulkner star in tonight's performance at the Drama Building.

Music will be directed by Dr. Earl George while Ruth Pinnell will be vocal coach. They are both School of Music faculty.

Portraying the extravagent rogues of London's 18th century underworld, the cast features: William Harris, native Syracusan, as Macheath, a dashing knight of the highway after dark and lover by day; Bonnie Bradt, last seen in "Little Mary Sunshine", as Polly Peachum, a wide-eyed ingenue; and Karen

Miles to Go And Now He Sleeps

Robert Lee Frost spoke softly and wrote simply, yet his words, spoken and written, were filled with a zest for living and a deep understanding of life. His death, as President Kennedy said, left a void in the lives of us all.

This was a man who gained fame in his lifetime—a rarity among poets. He has been called the greatest American poet of his time. Yet Robert Frost was much more than a poet; he was a teacher and a farmer. Perhaps the order should be reversed: He was first a farmer, a man of the soil who learned to understand and live with the whims of nature. And from his own lessons he was able to teach the world about his favorite subject.

To our New England ears his words were reflections of a life well-known. A Robert Frost poem warmed the soul and filled the memory with pleasent thoughts of deserted country landscapes in a snowstrom, a blazing autumn hillside, the roar of the summer ocean and the first bud of springtime. These are all facts of nature in New England and Robert Frost was their spokesman—a travel agent for the northeast.

And to the world he was the calm voice of the died-in-the-wool Yankee. He spoke firmly throughout the world of the country he loved so well. And now he sleeps.

To understand the man was not a difficult task. He was not a complicated man; he was a simple man with lucid thoughts like a New England stream—clear, yet swift-moving and turbulent below the surface. When he spoke the world listened and his words were nothing more nor less than the man himself and his life.

"A poem begins with a lump in the throat; a homesickness or lovesickness. It is a reaching out toward expression, an effort to find fulfillment. A complete poem is one where an emotion has found its thought and the thought has found the word."

Thus he described perfectly all his work. And he spoke as simply on freedom: "You have freedom when you're easy in the harness."

Now Robert Frost has left the earth but his words will always be read and loved as long as there are men to read and remember. And what of the world he left behind?

"Life goes on. I don't hold with people who say, 'Where do we go on from here?' But if you ask me what the direction is, I don't answer. I'm a little coy about where the human race is headed. As a matter of fact, whenever you can't pin me down on a specific point, it's due to my quality of uncatchability."

His epitaph was self-written in 1900 and published in 1942:

"They would not find me changed from him they knew.
Only more sure of all I thought was true."

Again.. With Vigor

Today the Daily Orange begins its second semester of publication for the current school year. As can be seen from today's issue, there have been a few changes made in typography and format.

The main purpose of the Daily Orange is to present news of the campus to the campus. We feel that our new format will enable us to give better news coverage.

The importance of sports on campus cannot be disputed and so its new position gives it deserved prominence while at the same time opening up the middle of the newspaper for more general news.

Once again we pledge ourselves to fulfilling our obligation to the campus and to performing to the best of our abilities and facilities. Welcome back.

NOSTALGIA

A Dorm Remembered

By Jan Gilmore

Sims is to be transformed into offices and classrooms.

Shortly after the unpleasantness with Spain, someone got the idea of building a dorm to put the students in. They built one and stenciled "SIMS HALL" in rock over the doorway, so it was generally referred to by that name.

Looking at it today, you can see that the construction is quaint and rather prolific, indeed the architect must have had a part interest in a building materials company. It was laid out in a kind of a three room suite affair with a single room thrown in every now and then where there was some extra space too big for a broom closet.

The suite consisted of one large center room with two smaller rooms branching haphazardly off from it, so that the tenants of the small rooms had to go through the large one to get to their own. The inhabitant of the latter was generally a 2.6 man with five eight o'clocks and his roomies would come stumbling in shortly after Fooey turned the lights out, quiet as a wounded tank going through a scrap heap.

The furnishings were early-depression antiques, and were not bolted down so you could reassemble your room if you wanted to. In every room there was an easy chair that had a habit of being comfortable, an art lost sometime during the last war. There was a semblance of screens in the windows capable of keeping out any fauna larger than a caribou.

Electricity was clearly an after-thought. There were ventilator shafts placed in the woodwork for some extinct reason, but recently used as an intercom between these living above and below you. They also served as a general disposal unit where you could quickly throw anything that looked like it might explode soon. The dorm was heated with a series of steampipes from antiquity, that clanked very loudly, generally when you were sleeping. The noise was a sporadic SPHLANG that rose you about 2½ feet off your bed the first time you heard it.

Sims was originally divided into five sections, and of late three. Each section had a lounge on the first floor equipped with a Marconi original, and it served as a forum and an indoor sports arena. The lounges were lousy with lamps of all types and sizes, and kept fraternity houses stocked in light bulbs via felonious pledges.

Sims dining hall sprawls behind the dorm and in good weather the roof of same replaced the lounge as a recreation area. In the springtime large puddles would accumulate on the flat surface, these puddles would transform into swamps replete with algae, tadpoles and other creatures of the wild which deft-footed frisbee players would skillfully avoid.

Resident Advisers dwelled on the first floor, thus inhabitants of the top floor were insulated from all but the most bloodthirsty of that clan by four flights of stairs. The incumbents of that upper area were generally potential academic casualties who passed the hours in marathon gin games and arching marbles up against the roof of the security police shack out the back windows with Whammo slingshots.

In the bathroom was a cold water reservoir where you could keep your furniture polish chilly against a rainy day. After more than six decades of playful scholars, the dorm, walls, furniture, everything was in a dilapidated state and survived each new onslaught of playfulness with no more damage done than looking dilapidated in a different way.

In its declining years the venerable apartment housed freshmen. This is a curious breed of sapiens that believes anything different is cool. Where else but in a freshman dorm could you find someone earnestly cultivating Venus Flytraps, buying surplus weather balloons, circulating a petition outlawing dingle trucks or taking a good stout piece of rope and securing the old dingle truck to a lamppost?

An old man with a long beard, shabby clothes and a hunched-over frame used to toddle by Sims late in the afternoon every garbage day. At first his movement from trash can to trash can was punctuated by an occasional water bomb, but after a while a few of us got on speaking terms with him.

He called himself Harrison, as during his childhood he had shaken the hand of the late President. He lived in a shack in the woods out by the end of Comstock, he told us. We offered him some food that we had found at the food service but he declined it, thank-you, saying he didn't trust people in general and college students in particular, and he would continue on sustenance placed in garbage cans anonymously.

They can't build dorms like Sims anymore, it costs too much.

LETTERS

Greenwald

To the Editor,

John Greenwald, presumably the writer of the review (Jan. 10) entitled "Phaedra," acts as though Jules Dassin, in his admittedly poor attempt, has personally insulted Mr. Greenwald. The writer's criticisms are generally accurate, but Mr. Greenwald overdoes it.

To say that Dassin failed is one thing, but reducing the man to ridicule with the statement that "he has fallen flat on his face" is unnecessary, to say the least. Also, there is no apparent reason why Mr. Greenwald can not refrain from adding insult to injury with the last sentence, "We much less care (what Dassin was trying to say)." If one must be that way about it, why bother at all?

This would not be particularly significant if it were not that this type of overly-critical writing characterizes much of the opinionated fare that is to be found in a great many college newspapers, including the Daily Orange.

Constantly caustic, venomous criticism smacks of immature journalism. It would be hoped that the propensity to take the freedom of the press as a plaything is outgrown by young journalists before they reach college. One can see that it is not. It appears that many writers have not yet learned that freedom of speech not only means the freedom to say that which one wants to say but tacitly implies a responsibility of the writer to the reading public. It doesn't necessarily imply that one has to rant and rave about everything that does not meet his approval. Anyhow, a writer with sound logical arguments does not need to resort constantly to cutting, didactic doesn't have to indulge in fault-finding. Certainly he needless mockery. Surely, though, one can do this.

It may be a way to make one's name well-known on campus. It may be fun. It may even be journalism. But it's not good journalism. Ask any professional newspaperman.

'Songs of a Wayfarer' Set

Ellen Nash, a member of the SU class of 1955, will be soloist in Mahler's "Songs of a Wayfarer" at the Syracuse Symphony Orchestra concert Friday in Lincoln Auditorum.

Cellist Theo Salzman, former solo cellist with the Israel Philhamonic and professor at the Jerusalem Conservatory, will play Tchaikovsky's "Variations on a Rococo Theme" and Bruch's "Kol Nidre.'

Mrs. Nash made her professional debut last season in the Symphony's production of Honeggers' "King David." A voice student since she was 14, she majored in voice at Syracuse and was a member of the Hendricks Chapel Choir and the Madrigal singers.

She was coached for a year under Prof. Ernst Bacon, professor of music.

This season she sang in several Messiah "Previews" before church groups, the Syracuse Symphony Guild and on television. An active member of Civic Morning Musicals, Mrs. Nash appeared in a recital for that group in January.

ELLEN NASH

She is also a member of Pro-Art and will participate in their presentation of excerpts from "Hansel and Gretel" to be given in public schools in late February and March.

Salzman, now cellist with the Pittsburgh Symphony, gave many recitals in Vienna and other European music centers before being appointed solo cellist with the Vienna Symphony at the age of 18.

Karl Kritz, director of the Syracuse Symphony, was formerly associate conductor with the Pittsburgh Symphony and knew Salzman then. Although both musicians were born in Vienna, they knew each other only by reputation until they met in Pittsburgh in 1953.

Also on the program are Schubert's "Symphony No. 2 in B flat major" and the "Adagietto' from Mahler's "Symphony No. 5."

Mahler's "Songs of a Wayfarer," a cycle of four songs, was written in 1884, with words by the composer, and expresses the sentiments of a young man scorned by his sweetheart. Mahler eventually put many of the most important parts of this song cycle into his first symphonic score, the "D Major Symphony."

Mahler and Schubert both felt a kinship with folklore and folk music and used it freely in their music. They were also keenly aware of nature and infused much of this feeling into their work.

Schubert's "Symphony No. 2 in B flat major" was completed in 1815 when he was 18.

Tickets for the concert begin at $1.50 and are available at the Symphony office, 218 Harrison St.

Bach's Organ Pieces Slated For Recital

Carol Crumrine, a graduate student in Syracuse University School of Music, will give an organ recital 8:30 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 9 in Crouse College Auditorium.

Miss Crumrine will play the music of Johann Sebastian Bach including Toccata and Fugue in D minor; Sei gegrusset, Jesu gutig; Trio Sonata No. 6 in G Major; Two chorale Preludes; Wir glauben all' an einen Gott, Schopfer (No. 12, Klavierubung, Part III), Schmucke dish, o liebe Seele (No. 4, Leipzig 18); and Prelude and Fugue in B minor.

Miss Crumrine, of Wadsworth, Ohio, received her Bachelor of Music degree from Oberlin Conservatory of Music in June, 1961. During her junior year she studied at the Mosarteum in Salzburg, Austria.

This recital is given in partial fulfillment of the requirements for Miss Crumrine's Master of Music degree. She is studying under the direction of Dr. Arthur Poister.

Starker to Perform

'Cloudborne' Cellist Here February 14

One of the world's leading cellists, Janos Starker, will play works by Beethoven, Couperin, and Mendellsohn at 8:15 p.m. Feb. 14 at Lincoln Auditorium.

Described by Time magazine as a "cloudborne cellist," Starker records for Period and Angel. His recordings range over the entire cello literature from Vivaldi to Bartok. In 1948 he received the Grand Prix du Disque International for his recording of Zoltan Kodaly's Sonata for Unaccompanied Cello.

Born in Budapest in 1924, Starker began to play the cello when he was seven and made his first public appearance as a soloist when he was ten. After graduating from the Budapest Academy of Music he held the first cello chair in the Budapest Opera and Philharmonic Orchestra.

In 1946 he left Hungary, concertized widely in Europe, and in 1948 came to the United States, of which he is now a citizen.

He was quick to make his mark on the American musical scene. He has occupied the first cello chair in several American orchestras, and made a return visit to Europe in 1956.

Besides appearing as a soloist, he has gained a reputation here and abroad as an outstanding interpreter of chamber music.

In 1957 Starker appeared at the Hollywood Bowl, where he was called "one of the few ranking cellists of the day" by the Los Angeles Herald and Express. His performances at Edinburgh the same year were among the highlights of the world-famous festival.

After Starker's performance of six unaccompanied suites of Bach, Desmond Shawe-Taylor wrote in the New Statesman and Nation: "His masterly phrasing, pure tone, varied dynamics and subtle rubato confirmed an impression that he is the most notable interpreter of such music since Casals."

Because he feels that the prestige of his instrument suffers in comparison with that of the violin, which is decades ahead of the violin in the development of performance technique, wealth of repertoire, and audience understanding, Starker devotes a great deal of time and effort to developing the potential of the cello.

He travels among American community orchestras as a string consultant and aids aspiring string players.

At Indiana University, where he is professor of music, a large group of students have the advantage of long-term study under his guidance.

Mrs. Corbin Sings at Crouse

A mezzo-soprano, Carol Corbin, and her accompanist, Veronica Rohan Sage, will present the first Crouse Concert of the spring semester at 4 p.m. Sunday in Crouse Auditorium.

Mrs. Corbin is soloist at DeWitt Community Church, will sing songs by Samuel Barber, Brahms, Faure, Debussy, and Aaron Copland.

She is known for her appearances in duet programs with her husband, John Corbin.

Mrs. Corbin Ed undergraduate work at Syracuse, received her master's degree from the University of Illinois and attended the Aspen School of Music.

An organist, Will O. Headlee will present the next Crouse Concert Sunday, Feb. 17.

'Greasy' Profit For Hair Tonic

(ACP)—William Cole, 19-year-old junior at Emory University, Atlanta, Ga., says he expects to become a doctor. But in the meantime he is willing to give the business world a whirl.

Cole and a friend from the same home town, Miami Beach, Fla., put together a hair tonic consisting of methycellous, artificial scent and water. They called it, to take advantage of a competing product's TV ads, Greasy Kid Stuff.

They bottled and labelled enough to be in business, and are conferring with a magazine to see if the company will buy an interest in the product.

The university's newspaper, The Emory Wheel, notes that Cole's inventiveness did not begin with the hair tonic. Last year he designed ties which he sold to department stores in Atlanta and Miami.

Printmakers Show SU Work

A Syracuse University senior and two faculty members in the School of Art will each have an example of their work exhibited at the 34th International Exhibition of the Northwest Printmakers in Seattle, Wash.

Beginning today and continuing until March 10, the exhibition will feature a print by Hill coed, Susan B. Hale, entitled "Two Women."

Prof. Robert Marx also has submitted one of his works, "The Three Prophets," and Prof. John Vargo has entered his print, "Silent Rider."

Before joining CBS News, Charles Kuralt, Latin American correspondent, won the Ernie Pyle Award as a reporter for the Charlottee (N.C.) News.

If you are considering a career in business management or actuarial science, we invite you to investigate the Summer Programs at the Home Life Insurance Company. These programs offer challenging, well paid summer work with an opportunity to prove your qualifications for a management career in one of America's top "growth industries."

HOME LIFE'S SUMMER PROGRAMS

There are two programs—the Summer Internship for men interested in a general business management career and the Summer Actuarial Program for Math Majors. These programs offer . . .

- a responsible college-level job (not just a "make-work" situation) in a progressive, highly-regarded company
- a series of interviews with key executives of Home Life
- informal meetings with department heads and other management people in vital areas of company operations
- plus, of course, the New York metropolitan area's unique business, cultural and recreational advantages.

You May Qualify For...

The Summer Internship in Business—

if you have a genuine interest in business, a good academic record, evidence of leadership potential, and are within one year of permanent full-time employment (exclusive of any military obligation).

The Summer Actuarial Training Program—

if you are interested in exploring an Actuarial career, are a Math major with at least a "B" average, and have successfully completed your Sophomore or Junior year.

FOR MORE INFORMATION OR TO ARRANGE AN INTERVIEW...

Contact your placement office. The Home Life representative will be on campus on Feb. 28th.

Senior Mathematics Majors are invited to inquire about Home Life's full-time actuarial training program.

Ax Glitters Over SAE

ternity involved in violation is not customary in disciplinary decisions short of suspension. "This public release is felt necessary in order to fully inform those freshmen who will be going through rush, Dean Clifford explained.

Pledges

"Initiation of spring semester pledges will not be permitted until the May review. It would be unfair to allow initiation into a fraternity whose status after June 1963 is in serious doubt, Clifford emphasized.

In a statement made to the dean of men, the brotherhood of SAE stated: "We, whose names appear on the affixed sheet, all brothers in Sigma Alpha Epsilon, by our signature affirm that at some time or times since our association with this fraternity, we have violated the drinking policies of Syracuse University. We feel that the importance of this statement, however, does not rest in this admission nearly as much as the following promise: The signing of this document is a pledge as men that as long as we are students of this University there will be no drinking in our house.

"We further welcome and encourage a visit or inspection of the house at any time by any university official. In all honesty and sincerity, we hereby sign.

Suspensions

In the violations of the University's drinking policies, some individual members have been suspended from membership in the fraternity. All others involved are required to decide on a project as individuals or a group to make a positive contribution to the chapter.

A written report of each project will be submitted with the chapter's report for the review in May. Those other individuals who are not involved in the violation but who indicated that they had on some previous occasion violated the university's drinking policies, may make their own decisions as to their need or desire to participate in similar projects.

"Because of our previous one year committment to the chapter and due to a change in leadership in the chapter just prior to Christmas vacation, it was our decision not to take more drastic action at this time," said McMurray.

Last spring the chapter was placed on a year's probation for violation of university's policies. At that time a suspension action was considered, but it was decided to allow the chapter one full year to prove itself "capable of being a fraternity."

Conditions of the probation required attendance at a National Leadership School held by the executive committee of chapter, monthly progress reports to Clifford, and the final review.

The disciplinary decision by the dean of men's office was further conditioned upon acceptance by the local alumni and the nationa office.

Jan. 19 Dean Clifford, McMurray, and two undergraduates of the chapter attended a meeting of the Supreme Council of Sigma Alpha Epsilon in Buffalo. After a review of the facts, the council decided to support the university's decision. The review in May will be held jointly with the dean of men's office, the members of the local alumni commission and the national office of the fraternity.

"This has been a very difficult case, and the decision was even more difficult," McMurray explained. "I am more encouraged at this time than I have ever been over the past two years. The straight forward attitude of the chapter, the individuals and their actions since the decision was announced convinced me that Sigma Alpha Epsilon at Syracuse is on its way to becoming a worthwhile and contributing member of the University community."

Bailey Plans Tour

Dean Stephen K. Bailey faces a busy seven weeks abroad as he departs Monday from Hancock field.

As part of his three continent tour, the dean of the Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Pulbic Affairs will visit the various Maxwell-sponsored programs in Europe, Africa and Asia.

He will deliver a paper at a United Nations Science and Technology Conference at Geneva, Switzerland, and will tour Africa for a month.

A major portion of Dean Bailey's African tour will be spent in Kenya where the Maxwell School is aiding in the development of the Institute of Administration at Katebe.

While in Africa, the dean will also meet with persons holding Africa-Asia public service fellowships. The program, started by the dean in 1960 and supported by the Ford Foundation, sends students overseas for administrative experience in foreign agencies.

Dean Bailey was recently named to the Educational Liaison Committee of the Sam Rayburn Foundation National Development Program.

He is one of more than 125 prominent Americans to accept active roles in the $20 million program to provide scholarships and fellowships to outstanding students in political science and governmental studies.

Hawaii, Africa, Europe Beckon

Hawaii! Europe! Africa! Students now have opportunities to spend summer sessions in these areas under the guidance of the University Study Tour to Hawaii, Marsh Tours of New York City and the African Studies Group Plans.

University of Hawaii sessions extend over a six week period. Accommodations are at the Waikiki Beach Hotel, and transportation will be handled by Pan American Airlines and Matson Steamship Lines.

Cost of the program, which includes study and off campus activities such as dinner dances, sightseeing trips, beach parties, cruises and field trips, starts at $555. Information on the Hawaii program may be obtained from Dr. Robert E. Cralle, 2275 Mission St., San Francisco 10, Calif.

Groups under the European Plan will leave New York City July 3, aboard the Queen Elizabeth. Countries visited will include France, Monaco, Italy, Austria, Leichtenstein, Switzerland, Germany, Belgium, Holland and England, with unscheduled days in the larger cities.

The tour will end in Liverpool, England, when students will board the Sylvania for arrival in New York on Aug. 20. Information on the tour can be obtained from Mrs. Sara Jernigan, c/o Physical Education Department, Stetson University, DeLand, Fla.

The African Study program, limited to twelve students, extends over an eight or nine week period. The first four or five weeks will be spent in Kenya, Tanganyika, Uganda, Sudan and Egypt, with visits to Peace Corps installations and local tribes.

Highlights of the plan are a trip to the African bush on a safari, and student photographic work for the National Geographic and Museum of Natural History. After departure from Africa, the group will tour Greece, Rome, Paris and London. Information is available from The African Studies Group for College Students, c/o Mr. Ted Estabrook, 8 East 92nd Street, New York, N. Y.

Booth

Booth was born in 1874 in Winnemucca, Nev., and educated in the Los Angeles public schools. He was graduated from the University of California in 1897. He was known throughout the world in the Fields of finance and foreign trade. Six countries in Europe and Asia gave him their highest national award. He was made an officer in France's Legion of Honor.

He was a leader in establishing Chambers of Commerce throughout the world, served as president of the International Chamber of Commerce during the mid-twenties and was honorary president at the time of his death. For more than two decades he was vice-president of Guaranty Trust Co. of New York, retiring in 1941.

Booth was a director in many national corporations including IBM, Intertype and Commercial Solvents. He was also on the boards of directors of a number of insurance and investment companies. SU awarded him an honorary degree of doctor of law during the dedication ceremony of Hinds Hall of Engineering, October, 1955.

The dorm is equipped for 315 men plus 11 staff members. Rooms are furnished with dressers, desks, lamps, chairs, bookcases and beds which convert to sofas for daytime use.

An unusual feature of Booth Hall is a system of conduits for individual closed circuit educational television. The new dorm also has an exercise room, hobby room, library, recreation room, main lounge, floor lounges and study rooms. Men living on floors one through five eat in Watson Dining Hall while those on six through eight eat in Kimmel Hall.

The architects for the new building were King and King. The limestone and brick exterior is similar to other recent construction on the Hill. Windows and doors are aluminum; blue-green panels of porcelain enamel trim the space between window sills and the tops of windows just below them.

Ground for Booth Hall was broken in spring, 1961. The total cost of construction, $2 million, was financed by a long-term loan from Federal Housing and Home Finance Agency.

Moving In.....

GETTING SETTLED in new Booth Dormitory are TOM-LENA and JOHN AUTH. Male students are still moving into the dorm, which will eventually hold 315 students.

Mondlane Readies for Mozambique Post

By DANIEL RITEY

Leaning back in his chair amidst an incredibly cluttered office, Dr. Eduardo Mondlane, professor in the Hill sociology and anthropology department, held forth on a variety of topics ranging from freedom for his country to the state of American undergraduates.

"My leave of absence from SU begins Feb. 26, and I will then return to my country, Mozambique (Africa), where I am the president of the Mozambique Liberation Front."

"The aim of our group, of course, is to give independence to our people as soon as possible—probably in two or three years," he stated.

Portugal

Dr. Mondlane emphasized that Portugal — the country which, in the end, must grant Mozambique its freedom — and Portugal alone will have to decide whether or not there will be bloodshed during Mozambique's independence campaign.

"Freedom is inevitable for my country," Mondlane said, "but if Portugal continues to pursue the same policies toward our freedom as she is doing now, then I think there will be fighting in Mozambique."

"If, however, Portugal alters her viewpoint and accepts our freedom bid graciously, I forsee a peaceful turnover of government and continued good relations between and free Mozambique and Portugal," Mondlane said. "The decision is totally hers," he added, referring to Portugal.

Tactics

The African leader noted that if fighting result, "we would use tactics like those used by the Algerians and, further, we would expect diversionary outbreaks in Angola, Portugal's other African territory."

"Once we have gained our freedom," he went on, "we will deal economically with both East and West as long as such dealings were beneficical to our country." Mondlane also noted that the Eastern and Western blocs of nations would be equal recipients of exports from Mozambique.

"Our natural resources are steadily being developed," Mondlane said. "Oil was recently discovered in Mozambique, and, in addition, there are deposits of gold, chromium and other minerals." The African also stressed the availability of great hydra-electric power sources in his country.

"We would like to join and actively participate in United Nation functions," he said. "We are presently a member of a Pan-African Movement for Eastern, Central and Southern Africa and our first loyalties belong to this regional organization," he added.

Unity

This Pan-African group believes in the development of the area—and, eventually, all of Africa—and unity for all its peoples. "We deplore the present, minor African power blocs and would like to unite all of Africa," Mondlane said.

Dr. Mondlane has only praise for SU and his one-and-a-half year stay here. "It was a thoroughly enjoyable stay here, and also a pleasant surprise to me when I discovered the good quality of the school here after I had been exposed to some really fine U.S. colleges."

He was "impressed with the faculty and administration of the university—especially the Maxwell School"—and has "made many lasting friendships here among faculty and students."

Disturbed

"The one disturbing aspect I found here," he said, "was the fact that so many SU undergraduates spent a lot of time on inconsequential social activities and lost excellent opportunities to get good benefits from the school and the presence of first rate professors."

Mondlane reflected upon the educational situation in his country. "Only two black Africans have ever received college degrees in Portugal in 450 years," he said. The African leader further noted that his country's educational facilities are for whites at the expense of the native Africans.

"We have a three-fold project for Mozambique," Dr. Mondlane said. "First is the independence drive, second, the diplomatic efforts is get freedom through conferences and negotiations, and third, our educational plans, which are very important."

Three-Fold

The Mozambique educational plan is also three-fold: first to give a rudimentary education to the 150,000 adult refugees in Tanganyika who have fled there to escape Portuguese terror and pressure; second, to organize a formal high school program in Tanganyika for those who can not receive education at home. "This plan involves the use of U.S. students as teachers," Mondlane noted.

The third part consists of finding those people in Mozambique who have some degree of education and getting for them scholarships to study at colleges abroad. "These people will return to Mozambique to become the nucleus of leadership for the new country."

Dr. Mondlane explained that while he is the president of the Liberation Front, he may not necessarily become the head of a free Mozambique. "Someone else may come up, but whatever the case, I will serve in the government in some capacity."

UC Registration Continues

Thursday is the last day to register for courses at University College, the Hill's downtown branch. Although classes also start Thursday, registration will continue until 8:30 p.m.

Business administration offerings for the semester cover 14 subject areas, while there are 26 courses in aeronautical, chemical, electrical, industrial, mechanical and metallurgical engineering.

Two new political science courses, "State and Local Government" and "Introduction to Public Administration" will be offered. New fine arts courses are "Arts and Ideas in Contemporary Culture" and "Orchestral Music from Haydn to Stravinsky."

University College's Humanistic Studies Center will start its fifth year with five new study programs starting next week.

Assignment: put more pep per pound into Ford-built engines

Result: New family of lightweight powerplants . . . including a new V-8 that weighs 110 pounds less than the comparable V-8 it replaces

In our search to provide good performance with lighter powerplants, Ford Motor Company engineers and foundrymen have pioneered new techniques that now let us cast our engine blocks with such precision that much lighter engines are made possible.

New materials used to make cores and molds and new casting methods enable us to make engine parts with walls as thick as necessary—but no thicker. This eliminates weight of extra material which must be used to provide adequate strength with less precise casting methods.

Reducing engine weight through precision casting means more performance per pound—and since lighter engines mean overall car weight can be reduced, better fuel economy results.

Another assignment completed—another Ford First—and one more example of how Ford Motor Company continues to provide engineering leadership for the American Road.

SUMMARY: A sunny mild day today may delight many but skiers will be dismayed to find the snow turning to slush and melting. A fresh push of cooler air approaching from the NW should bring an en dto the springlike weather by the first day of classes along with cloudiness and a period of light precipitation.

FORECAST: Considerable sunshine with patchy cloudiness spreading over towards sundown. With a moderate southerly breeze, temperatures will rise all the way up to 45.

By schools, the total was: business administration, 467; engineering, 347; education, 836; architecture, 96; art, 374; music, 80; graduate school, 1020; home economics 172; journalism, 10; liberal arts, 2604; nursing, 130; public health nursing, 62; and speech, 168.

Tuesday's total was 3,471. Monday's was 2,672.

There is little trouble in registration this year until students reach tuition payment lines. Students first see their advisors to fill out dean's office schedule cards.

Then a trip to H. B. Crouse Hall lobby is in order to pick up and fill out IBM packets. The stay at HBC may be fairly long since students queue up every half hour for their letter of the alphabet to be called.

Class cards are the least of a student's problems unless he happens to be a freshman. Required courses for frosh have the longest lines in the gym.

Check-out booths have also improved their speed and most students only wait from ten to twenty minutes there. Then comes the horror show. Following the path indicated by signs and Security policemen, students head for the practice gym in a vain attempt to settle tuition bills.

For those who have a check or cash with them, there is little problem. A stop at Line L solves all.

Those who receive scholarship, incentive awards, grants-in-aid or New York State Regents Scholarships, go to line H before line L.

Those with tuition paid, National Defense Loans or deferred payments go to line K before line L.

After wading through the maze of these lines and going to cashiors to receive stamped tuitions slips, weary SU students head for the bookstore.

Classes start Thursday.

Robert E. Costello, producer of "Armstrong Circle Theatre" on the CBS Television Network, has worked as a circus hostler and animal trainer.

Research Teaching Grants Available

Chemistry or botany college teachers interested in a research program at SU this summer must apply by Feb. 15.

Under a $7,500 grant to the State University College of Forestry at SU from the National Science Foundation, three college teachers, two in forest chemistry and one in forest botany, will work with outstanding scientists at the College of Forestry on special research projects.

The teachers will receive stipends of $75 per week, plus allowances for travel and dependents.

Under direction of Dr. E. C. Jahn, associate dean of physical sciences and research, College of Forestry, the 10 week program will start June 17.

Applications should be submitted to Dean E. C. Jahn, c/o the College of Forestry at Syracuse.

Honorary Taps 8

Eight seniors were recently initiated into the Syracuse Chapter of Scabbard and Blade.

The new members are Vincent A. Brooks, Washington, D.C.; Christos I. Grigoriou, Horseheads; Daniel B. Houston, Wappingers Falls; Terry L. Hughes, Huntington; Art Irwin, Jersey City, N.J.; Garrison A. Marsted, Cortland; Donald E. Osteen, Ft. Pierce, Fla; and James R. Tallon, Binghamton.

Coeds to Join ROTC Corps

With the formation of an auxiliary unit to the Army ROTC Cadets, there will be a new look in uniformed personnel on campus.

Army ROTC has announced that applications for the auxiliary corps will be accepted at the Dean of Women's office and at Army ROTC headquarters in the men's gym until Feb. 12.

All undergraduate, full-time female students with a 1.5 cumulative average, or equivalent high school standing for freshmen, are eligible. Application blanks and further information is available from either of the above offices.

Jerome to Head Bowling Green State U.

Dean William T. Jerome III of the College of Business Administration has been named president of Bowling Green State University in Bowling Green, Ohio. Dean Jerome, who will succeed Ralph G. Harshman, visited the college Monday.

President Harshman's retirement becomes effective in June. Dean Jerome and his family will move to Ohio in August.

A 1941 magna cum laude graduate of Colgate University, where he was a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Dr. Jerome earned his master's degree and doctorate at Harvard University. He is 43 years old.

DEAN JEROME

Dr. Jerome, a native of New York City, has had wide experience in a variety of educational fields. He has served as a teacher, administrator, research associate, lecturer, writer and consultant to business and government.

He is a member of the Board of Trustees of two of his alma maters, Colgate University and Riverdale Country School, a New York preparatory school. Dr. Jerome also serves on the board of the Graduate School of Sales Management and Marketing, and last year completed a six-year term as a member of the Board of Education of the Fayetteville-Manlius school district.

Currently, Dr. Jerome is assisting the United States Agency for International Development in establishing the College of Business and Finance at Medellin, Colombia. The new institution, the first and only business school in the South American country, is part of Washington's participation in the Alliance for Progress in Latin America.

The new dean of the Syracuse business school will take Dr. Jerome's position in the Colombia project.

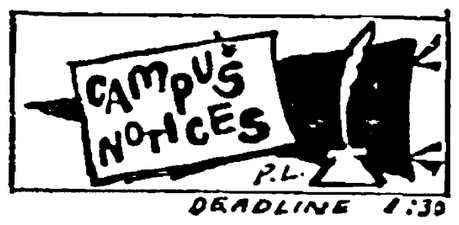
At Colgate Dr. Jerome majored in philosophy, with minor studies in economics, history and government. He attended Yale Law School and served in G2, military intelligence, during World War II.

He earned a Masters of Business Administration from Harvard in 1946 and a Doctor of Commercial Science there in 1952.

Dr. Jerome began his career as an educational administrator at Middlebury College, where he was assistant to President Samuel S. Stratton from 1946 to 1950. He also served as instructor of economics, leaving Middlebury to complete his doctoral studies at Harvard and to teach and engage in research.

In 1953 he was named associate professor of business administration at Syracuse, teaching business policy and management control, and also became director of the Army Comptrollership School conducted by Syracuse in cooperation with the Department of Defense.

He helped develop an Executive Controls Program, a four-week course for businessmen and administrators, and in 1958 was named full professor and dean of the College of Business Administration.



Under Dr. Jerome, major revisions have been made in the curriculum of the college at both the graduate and undergraduate levels. Increased emphasis is placed on quantitative subjects, such as mathematics and statistics, as well as economics and the humanities.

The present enrollment of the College of Business Administration totals 1,153, and includes more than 800 undergraduates, over 300 graduate students and many special students from foreign lands, including Africa and the Far East.

Among Dr. Jerome's publications is a volume that has provoked considerable discussion entitled "Executive Control—the Catalyst," published in 1961. He frequently lectures to business groups such as the American Management Association, the Columbia Executive Program and the Cornell Management Developmental Program.

Dr. Jerome has won a number of golfing championships, including the Vermont State.

He is a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon, social fraternity; Beta Gamma Sigma and the University Club of Syracuse. He is listed in Who's Who in America and in Presidents and Deans of American Colleges and Universities.

Sophs Attend Convention

Roger Kelley and Le Metrick, sophomores in the Hill electrical engineering department, represented the Syracuse chapter of Theta Tau, national professional engineering fraternity, at a recent national convention.

The biennial convention, held Dec. 27-30 in Louisville, Ky., was attended by nearly 100 delegates, officers and alumni representing 25 chapters across the country.

SU Debators Attend Tourney

Four Syracuse University debators attended the annual Western New York Debate Tournament last weekend at Niagara University.

The varsity debaters, accompanied by their coach, Dr. J. Edward McEvoy, are Stephen Hallmark, Paul De Santis, Richard Siegel and J. Nelson Happy.

You'll find a young man's world at New York Telephone

Due to continued growth in the next ten years, qualified men must be found to fill more middle- and top-management positions than exist in the company today.

If you want to move into a responsible, challenging job. If you want the personal satisfaction of knowing you're doing important work. You'll want to work at New York Telephone.

If you're qualified. Creative. Hard-working. And, you like to make decisions on your own—we have the job.

The young man below is Cornell graduate Dean Hickox. He had the qualifications. We had the job.

From his first assignment in June, 1959, he has shown the skill, the aptitude, the initiative to move ahead. And he has. Right now he's District Manager of a Manhattan office. Supervises more than 100 people. Is business manager for over 3 million dollars of monthly billing. In three years! But that's New York Telephone—a young man's world. An exciting, challenging, rewarding world of progress . . . a world with a future.

FOR INFORMATION about your future with the New York Telephone Company, write Ed Dooley, College Employment Coordinator, Room 1770, 140 West St., New York 7, N.Y. Or inquire at your College Placement Office.

Average

To the Editor:

I saw the funniest article so far in the D.O. January 11. The article was on the front page. It said, among other things: "A tally indicated that senators believe averages should be lowered to approximately 1.3. At present, candidates for JSG president and vice president must have a 1.5 average. The JSL speaker must have a 1.0 average. To qualify as a court justice, students must have a 1.6 average, but need not maintain the average after selection as a justice. The chief justice is selected by a vote of the other justices."

At first I thought it superficial to write a letter to the D.O. about my complete amazement at such utter nonsense, but then I realized that if the majority of people in JSL actually think this way, then perhaps I won't be stating tautologies (a word JSL speakers with 1.0 averages don't need to know) when I sound a cry in the wasteland.

Let me base the little I have to say on the name of this organization we all find so much fun to criticize. It is called Student Government (and not JSG like the article has it), I believe. Setting aside the question of "why student government," let me ask the finals-ridden campus population: Do you people want to be led, governed by morons? Is it right to have a man in student court who lets his grades slip because he has bitten more of the pie of activities than he can chew? Is it right to have a speaker in the Legislature, supposedly representing the many good students of this University, who gets by with a C average, when, even in case of dire financial need, the minimum average needed to get any scholarship is 1.5? Is it right that the mediocre (gee, what's that mean?) are the leaders of a great student body that has in it so many excellent people?

Or should not the president and vice president of a student body of over eight thousand undergraduates be required to have at least a 2.0 average? That is the minimum you need to get into most any honor societies. Could we not find a good man or woman among ourselves to "govern" us that we could be proud of?

Or is it just the core of the question? That we don't care to be proud of our government. That they are not really our government at all, just a few activity-happy kids who are playing games they don't believe in themselves.

If that be the case, then I seriously propose to my fellow students to consider the example of Columbia University and remove this insult to our intellect from the picture at Syracuse.

Infirmary

To the Editor:

Since several of our co-eds have recently visited the Student Health Center, or Infirmary, either as patients or visitors, we feel qualified to report what we must describe as the disgusting conditions of a supposedly modern medical institution. In general, the institution is understaffed, ill-equipped, inefficiently run and operates in an old wooden-frame house. More effective than mere adjectives, however, are concrete examples of the conditions we have stated; such examples can be cited in actual "case histories."

1. Student A was admitted to the infirmary with what was later diagnosed as a broken knee cap, but was not seen by a doctor for three days.

2. Student B, whose neck was sprained, after being told that she must walk to the infirmary, was forced to rent an ambulance from the Security Police at the price of $20, and was carried from her house by the Police in an extremely painful position because the gentlemen did not know, and neglected to ask, what was wrong with her. Arriving at the Infirmary the patient was allowed to sit up in bed, apply her own compresses and walk to the kitchen for her own tray, tolerating the pain only because she had been given sedatives.

Actual conditions which exist in the Infirmary are the following:

1. One of the bathtubs was found on two occasions, by a patient who wished to use it, badly rusted and covered with a distinct layer of dirt and dust.

2. At certain times of the day and evening, one patient reports, it was impossible, after searching on all three floors, to find a nurse or doctor, even though another patient, suffering from a high fever, had received no medication.

3. Visitors for two different patients were told at the desk that the patients were located in rooms actually occupied by other patients. The visitors were forced to find the real location of their friends, and discovered that not only were they in totally different rooms; they were also on different floors from the ones recorded by the nurse.

4. Patients' temperatures are taken in the morning and during visiting hours, not in the evening.

5. Patients not running a fever must walk down to the kitchen, stand in line for their trays and eat together at a table covered with oil-cloth. Thus patients with broken legs are exposed at close range to the germs of those who have intestinal flu, or bad chest colds.

6. The nurses show very little concern for the patient's condition; this is left to the doctor, who sees the patient only once, early in the morning. Thus during the rest of the day, and evening, the patient's health is left to the care of nature and to drugs, the only commodity furnished liberally by the infirmary.

There is little doubt that Syracuse University is a wealthy institution; further, parents pay for the "Student Health Service"—and it is thus deplorable that such a situation—one which is not only unpleasant, but which could also seriously endanger student health — exists under the auspices of the University.

Drinking

To the Editor:

On the eve of Wednesday, Jan. 9, the Joint Student Legislature met to discuss the drinking policy of the school. The purpose of this discussion was to seek a possible change or modification of the present rules on the consumption of alcoholic beverages on campus. The interest level on this particular topic ran extremely high, though the amount of enthusiasm was entirely unwarranted.

It seems to me that a change of our present policy is incomprehensible, incohesive, and utterly ridiculous. Relaxation of the drinking policy is a complete impossibility. Rules must be created and enforced either to permit or prohibit drinking, but there is certainly little possibility of enforcing modified drinking or limited social drinking, as the establishment of such a rule would be entirely too arbitrary and the enforcement of such, a total impossibility.

To have drinking permitted on campus only on the big weekends or on special occasions would be to defeat the purpose of the drinking policy. To illustrate this point, imagine the impact that would be created if a cage of half-starved wolves were permitted to roam the streets freely on infrequent occasions. Each time the experience would contain about the same emotional stigma and each time utter chaos would result. However ,if the animals discovered that their freedom was more the rule than the exception—then, after the initial adjustment period, the thrill would wear off. To a somewhat milder degree, this example could be applied to the students at S.U., if such a policy were to be accepted.

Many students demonstrate a great deal of temperance and abstinence from over indulgence in anything—but the stiff laws are made for the few who are overly aggressive and far too unruly. And these people whom I last cited must definitely be curbed and can't and shouldn't be overlooked.

Our present policy involves a considerable amount of off-campus drinking and definitely the driving hazards are not negligible. However, a gradual change of policy involves an even greater threat to the students and to the school itself, if the destruction of property is considered when students go on a rampage. Therefore, modification of the drinking policy is foolish and discussion of it should be eliminated. Instead, the issue should be whether this campus should remain dry or become wet.

Chimes

To the Editor:

What could be rarer than hearing Luther's hymn "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God" coming from St. Peter's Basillica in Rome, "Ave Maria" being sung in a Jerusalem synagogue, or "Havah Negileh" echoing the streets of Mecca? Perhaps the answer is hearing "Christ The Lord Is Risen Today" pealing from the Crouse chimes throughout Advent. At this rate, the DKE's should come out with "We Three Kings Of Orient Art" during Lent, and, of course, what they 'are' and what they 'will be' is lost.

—Avenge Only Defeat—

Frosh Comeback Tops Red

By ART ROSSKY

The Syracuse frosh basketball team avenged its only loss of the season by scoring a come-from-behind win over Cornell, 77-72, at Manley Fieldhouse Tuesday evening.

The victory snapped an eight game winning string of the previously unbeaten Cornell five. Both teams are now 8-1, with Syracuse's only loss coming at the hands of the Little Red.

Showing balanced scoring plus an excellent rebounder in 6-7 Steve Cram, Cornell grabbed an early 17-7 lead. Syracuse narrowed the gap but left the floor at the half trailing, 38-32.

Opening the second half Syracuse's Frank Nicoletti and Norm Goldsmith traded baskets with Cornell's Don Munson and Bob Berube as the Hill frosh narrowed the margin to 44-43 at the 14:34 mark.

A moment later a Sam Penceal jump shot put Syracuse ahead, 45-44. For the next few minutes the lead changed hands often and Nicoletti and Penceal kept Syracuse in the running.

Urged on by a noisy crowd of more than 2,000 the Syracuse tide swept ahead by as much as nine points with about five minutes remaining in the game.

Cornell made a game effort at a comeback and at one point closed the gap to three points. But the Tangerines, shooting rather poorly from the foul line all night, iced the contest from the charity stripe in the waning moments.

Once again it was Dave Bing who added the spark to the Syracuse attack. Bing led all scorers with 27 points and was followed by Goldsmith's 18 in a strong performance from the Long Islander.

Munson led Corneli with 19 points while Cram grabbed 26 rebounds. Cornell outrebounded Syracuse 70-65.

Al though the totals showed the Orange frosh behind in the rebounding column, the figures do not accurately reflect the hustle and fight they showed in the second half in which they made up in ruggedness what they lacked in height.

Coach Morris Osborne used only seven players in gaining the win, which was especially pleasing to him.

Cornell previously topped the Tangerines by one point in a game played at Barton Hall on the Ithaca campus. In that contest the Syracusans blew a lead similar to the one they held late in the second half Tuesday night. The two clubs meet twice more this season.

The high-flying Tangerines face a solid Niagara frosh quintet at 6:30 p.m. Thursday at Manley.

Big Red Topples Orange, 80-71; Dominate Boards

Cornell continued its domination of Upper New York State basketball last night at Manley Fieldhouse, squelching a rallying Syracuse University varsity basketball team, 80-71, before 2,304.

Outrebounding the shorter Orangemen, 59-44, Cornell poured on an early attack and led the host club 18-8 at the half way mark of the first stanza.

Led by 6-5 Manny Klatchkowski, who had a 10 point first half effort, Syracuse rallied to within two points 23-21 with five minutes remaining, but trailed at the half 34-24 after a 10 point Big Red rally led by forward Orlo Clark's 5 markers.

Syracuse started slow in its shooting in the second half, but Cornell again poured it on — six by Jerry Szachara and eight by Ray Ratkowski — stretching its lead to 58-43 at the ten minute mark.

From this point on Cornell led in double figures until a late Orange rally brought it within nine points, 74-65, with five minutes left. Dick Duffy engineered this last Orange drive with five points on two stolen balls and a free throw.

Jim Seaman and Carl Vernick were the high point getters for the Orange. Seaman had 14 while Vernick had 13. Manny Klatchkowski, held to one basket in the second half, scored 12.

Ratkowski and Szachara paced the visitors with 16 markers apiece while 6-8 Krumbein tapped in 15.

Syracuse made only 17 of 33 free throws while Cornell hit 18 for 25 at the line. Syracuse shot 40 per cent from the floor while Cornell rebounding gave it a shot edge on the same 40 per cent average.

Cornell has a 9-8 record while Syracuse is 5-8. The Big Red's win was its seventh consecutive over SU and its fifth in a row this season.

The Orange have two more home games this week, Niagara Thursday and LaSalle Saturday.

SU Grapplers Defeat Army For Sixth Win

The Syracuse University wrestling team edged closer to the Eastern title Saturday by romping the Cadets of Army, 26-9.

Coach Joe Scandura's grapplers now boast six dual match victories without a loss. The Orangemen also won the Coast Guard Invitational Tournament early in December.

In the opening match against Army, 123-pound sophomore Terry Haise decisioned Wilderman (A), 8-2. Undefeated senior Bethel Greenhalgh followed with a hard-fought 3-2 win over Grates (A) in the 130-pound class.

Junior Jim Murrin, wrestling at 137 pounds, managed a 4-4 draw with his Cadet opponent Winborn. Orangeman Dick Slutzky likewise drew with Vinneman (A) in the 147-pound division.

George Reidener, a 157-pound junior, claimed the third Syracuse victory by decisioning Thompson (A), 5-2.

Army captured its lone win of the match when 167-pound Mike Natvig downed Hillman Gary Sirota, 1-0. Natvig is the defending NCAA 147-pound champion.

At the 177 level, soph Lew Roberts decisioned Arvin (A), 4-2. Football tackle Gerry Everling produced the meet's first pin when he dropped Army's Vaughan at 5:39.

Heavyweight Jim Nance, a fullback on the Orange grid squad, used a double arm bar to pin Coulson (A) in 8:34. Both Nance and Everling are undefeated in dual match competition this year.

In the match previous to the Army encounter, SU dropped the Midshipmen of Navy, 20-10. Greenhalgh, Slutzky, Reidener, Sirota, Everling and Nance gained victories for the Orange. Lew Roberts drew in the 177-pound class.

Syracuse journeys to Ithaca Saturday to tangle with the Cornell matmen. Matches with Penn State, Colgate and Cortland remain before the Eastern Intercollegiate Wrestling Championships at Annapolis March 8-9.

Syracuse University's leading football ground-gainer, fullback Jim Nance of Indiana, Pa., is now the Orange's heavyweight wrestler. "He should be a great one," says Orange coach Joe Scadura of the 220-pound sophomore.

Gymnastic Squad Is Undefeated With Victories Over Cortland and Army

By TOM MULLER

The Orange gymnasts, coached by Paul Romeo, took two more steps towards an undefeated season during this school's newspaper blackout. The well-balanced Orangemen trimmed Cortland 73-23 and then edged a tougher Army team 48½-47½.

Cortland had been unbeaten through two meets before they met the men from Syracuse on January 18. Three of the S.U. performers garnered enough points between them to almost clinch the meet, and a fourth Orange gymnast put them into the clear.

Corky Voas, Sid Oglesby, and Carl Poplar each collected 14 points, and Captain Ray Grimaldi earned 12 points.

Voas took first place on the high bar and free exercise, and Grimaldi was victorious on the still rings and side horse. Poplar on the parallel bars and Oglesby on the long horse were the other Syracuse victors. The Orange swept three of the six events in addition to winning all six.

The Black Knights of Army proved to be a much worthier opponent, and it took a win on the final event to finally put Syracuse into the winner's circle. Last year the Cadets tied the Orangemen and eventually tied Penn State for the league title.

The Army meet was by far the most rigid test for Romeo's undefeated squad, and the estimated 1,000 spectators were well aware of the fact. The Cadets were 6-0 going into the meet and the Orangemen were 4-0.

The Orange jumped off to an early 15-point lead with lopsided wins in the first two events, but they were behind by three points as the final event rolled around.

Corky Voas remained undefeated in the floor exercise as he completely outclassed his Army counterparts. He finished directly ahead of Sid Oglesby, the ever-improving sophomore from Jersey City, N. J. Senior Ron Orlick tied for third place with Cadet Jerry Dufour. The Orange won the event by a score of 12½-3½.

It was Captain Grimaldi who came through for the Orange on the side horse. Jon Meury finished third for S.U., and his performance gives Syracuse backers high hopes for the ensuing years; he is only a sophomore. Tom Thomas of Army was second and junior John Bird placed fourth for the Syracuse contingent as S.U. won the event 11-5.

On the horizontal bar the story was a little different, and the Cadets began to show their stuff. Voas placed third and Carl Poplar placed fifth as the Black Knights romped to a 12-4 victory. Ken Slutzky, brother of Syracuse wrestler Dick Slutzky, was the individual winner.

The military men continued to apply the pressure as they won the long horse vaulting 11-5. Marty Ischinger was the individual victor for the Cadets. Orlick placed second to save some glory for S.U., and Oglesby was fifth.

The parallel bars proved to be a real battleground as the Cadets won 10-6. Oglesby tied Slutzky for first place, and Poplar scored the other point by placing fifth. The Cadets now had a three point lead, and Orange hopes were starting to dim.

After the first two men had competed in the still rings, the soldiers had really taken command, and the Orange had to place 1-2 in order to win the meet. Voas scored 92 out of 100 and the second Army competitor scored 91 to put the meet right in the laps of the remaining two men. Captain Grimaldi came through with his usual great performance and was awarded a total of 95.5, which is an amazing score considering the pressure being exerted by the 1,000 silenced fans. The final Army competitor scored 90.5 and the victory was Syracuse's, but by the slimmest of margins.

Coach Romeo was probably the happiest man in Archbold Gym after the meet. 'The kids did a great job. We've won meets that were this close before, but this one was the most important."

Unlike the Cadet coach, Romeo was swift to praise his opponents. "Army has a fine team. We know they'll be tough in the individual championships here in March."

The next opponent for Syracuse will be mighty Penn State, who inflicted the only loss on the Orange last year. Syracuse is now 3-0 in EIGL competition.

High School Students Confess to Thefts

By HOWIE GINSBURG

Two Syracuse high school students recently confessed to stealing property from the Kimmel Hall locker room.

The two, aged 16 and 17, were arrested Jan. 23 for petit larceny and pleaded guilty to the charge.

A black knit sweater valued at $8 was reported missing by Jaroslow Pikolycky and a $15 nylon jacket was reported missing by Steve Schliecker. Both work in food service at Kimmel. The items were taken from the locker room of the food service area.

Pickolycky saw his sweater on one of the defendants at Central Tech High School, which both attend, on Jan. 24.

On Jan. 25 William Jeffery Radford, a Syracuse University junior employed by food service, reported a wallet missing. According to Radford, the wallet contained $100 in travelers cheques and $18 cash.

Radford's selective service card was found in one of the defendant's socks when he was searched by the police. District Attorney Francis Sardino postponed sentencing until the Radford theft could be investigated.

Confess

After questioning by the Syracuse police, the high schoolers confessed to the thefts.

One of the teenagers told police "We went into Kimmel Hall's cafeteria and went to the area where the lockers were. We started looking in the lockers and found a sweater and ski jacket. In another locker I found a man's trausers and in the pocket I found a brown leather wallet. We took the sweater, the ski jacket and the wallet and left the building.

The teenagers said a selective service card belonging to Radford had been hidden in a book in a high school desk. Some of the personal effects they took were put into a brown paper bag and buried it in a snow mound at the corner of Jefferson and Almond streets.

After a search was conducted most of Radford's personal property was recovered.

A search was then conducted to find the missing checks; three were found near the Sherbrook Apartment.

One of the teenagers worked at Kimmel Dining Hall but left the employ of food service Oct. 15.

The other also worked at Kimmel and at Sims Dining Hall. On Nov. 6 he left the employ of food service.

Teaching Jobs In East Africa

Teachers College of Columbia University is recruiting 100 Americans for teaching positions in Kenya, Uganda, Tanganyika and Zanzibar in East Africa.

The Teachers for East Africa program, sponsored by the Department of State's Agency for International Development, has requested teachers of physics, chemistry, biology, mathematics, English, history and geography.

No teaching experience is necessary. Accepted candidates will receive training fellowships at Teachers College or Makerere College in Uganda.

Applications are available from the Teachers for East Africa Project, Teachers College, Columbia University, New York 27, N. Y.

Four Houses Off Pro; Two Still On

Four fraternities have been removed from probationary status, Fraternity Administrator James P. McMurray announced Wednesday. Two other houses, Alpha Epsilon Pi and Sigma Alpha Epsilon remain on probation.

The AEPi case is expected to be reviewed early next week, while the dean of men's office yesterday took action aganist SAE.

Sigma Phi Epsilon, suspended last year, and on probation during the last semester has been completely cleared with a very creditable report, McMurray said.

Another unidentified house, placed on probation for one semester for an illegal initiation has also been cleared.

Two additional houses placed on disciplinary probation early this year also have been cleared by the dean of men's office. One was on disciplinary probation for a hazing violation and the second on restricted social probation.

RUSH RULE CLARIFIED

Freshmen who signed up for fraternity rush but did not make a 1.0 average the past semester may participate in the five informal rush sessions but not in the formal rush session, James P. McMurray, fraternity administrator, has announced.

These freshmen may complete their rushing procedure following their second semester here.

9,021 Register on Hill In Three-Day Period

A gross total of 9,021 students registered at Syracuse University in the three-day period ending Wednesday.

This total includes those studying on both graduate and undergraduate level.

This time last year 8,657 persons went through registration lines for the second semester, according to Registrar Edwin D. Smith.

The 9,021 figure this year represents about 94 per cent of the total student body, said Dr. William P. Ehling, director of the SU Office of Information Services.

Late registration dates will be announced.

Monday saw 2,672 students processed in the Men's Gym, Tuesday, 3,4471, and Wednesday, 2,878 students.

The freshman class is the largest this semester, with 2,072 enrolled in the class of '66. 1,437 seniors are scheduled to graduate this June, and there are 1,789 sophomores and 1,596 juniors on the Hill.

Graduate students registered total 1,915 and special students totals 152.

Also released Wednesday night were threeday cumulative totals for the university's colleges.

These are: College of Liberal Arts, 4,139; College of Business Administration, 700; School of Art, 519; School of Architecture, 115; School of Music, 107; College of Engineering, 448; School of Journalism, 20; School of Education, 1081; Graduate School, 1,160; College of Home Economics, 251; School of Nursing, 158; Public Health Nursing, 72; School of Speech and Dramatic Art, 246.

'Opera' Plays for JSG

Tonight's performance of "The Beggar's Opera" at the Coronet Theater at the Drama Building has been bought out by Joint Student Government.

The "Opera," which opened Wednesday and today, Friday, Saturday, and February 13, 14, 15, and 16, is directed by Ben Shaktman. Stage manager is student government Vice President, Carol (Schaltze) Lucha.

A dinner party will be held before the performance at the Drama Building for student government guests.

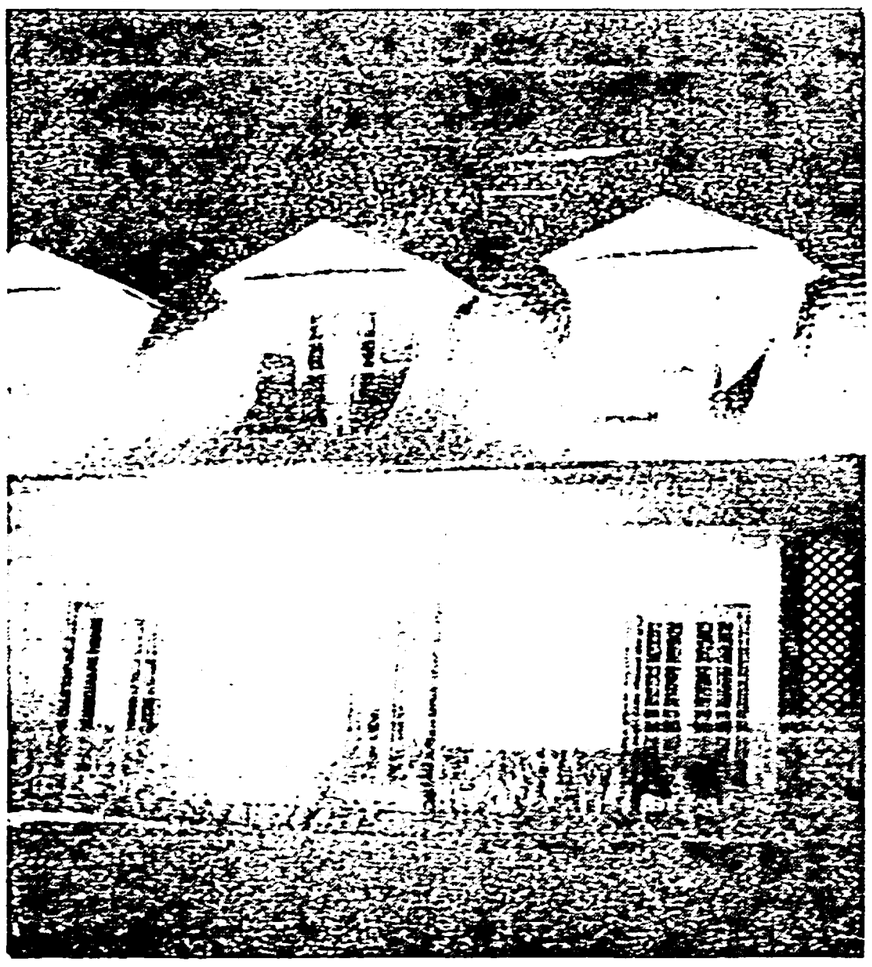
There will be a party at Shaw Dormitory after the performance for all students attending the play. Ticket stubs will serve for admission to the after-treater party.

Cornell, LeMoyne Up Tuition

Piety Hill's neighbors Cornell University and LeMoyne College have raised their tuition rates.

LeMoyne raised its tuition $75 a semester. Cornell's tuition was upped to $1700 a year, it was announced this week. This is a raise of $50 per semester.

SU officials are not talking yet about a raise for Syracusans for next year.



In line with the State University's recent decision to institute tuition at its units, Cornell also raised tuition at its four state-supported colleges. The average increase to New York residents attending these schools will be $150 annually.

The increase to $1700 will affect students in Cornell's Colleges of Arts and Sciences, Architecture, Engineering, Law and Hotel Administration and the Graduate School's of Business and Public Administration and Aerospace Engineering, and the Division of Unclassified Students.

State-supported schools at Cornell are the College of Agriculture, School of Industrial and Labor Relations, College of Home Economics and the Veterinary College.

Also increased is tuition at the Medical College in New York City. It was raised to $1700 a year.

Sigma Chi Psi Petitions National

The Sigma Chi Psi house, 501 Comstock Ave.

By CLAY RICHARDS

Sigma Chi, the nation's second largest social fraternity may soon return to Syracuse. The national will vote Saturday on the petition for admission of Sigma Chi Psi, a local Hill fraternity.

Sigma Chi reigned as one of the Hill's biggest houses until 1956 when the alumni confiscated the charter after repeated disciplinary conflicts. At its height in the early 1950's the fraternity had 125 brothers.

In 1959 the fraternity began its return when six Sigma Chis, including three members of the old Psi Psi house and three transfer Sigma Chis began the Sigma Chi Club.

Within a semester the club became the Sigma Chi Psi fraternity, founded with the aim of reestablishing an active Sigma Chi chapter at SU.

Fly to Illinois

This Saturday Dean of Men Earle W. Clifford; past Sigma Chi Psi President George "Skip" Stanger; Prof. R. Ford Prey, co-faculty advisor; Douglas Graham, a Sigma Chi Psi founder; and Atty. John Shaffer, a member of the Sigma Chi alumni association will fly to national Sigma Chi headquarters at Evanston, Ill., to request the return of the Psi Psi Sigma Chi charter to Sigma Chi Psi.

The move is being made with the support of the Syracuse Sigma Chi Alumni Association, all seven Sigma Chi chapters in New York State and Sigma Chi leaders throughout the Northeast.

Close observation of Sigma Chi Psi and its program and activities during the past academic year has documented a steady growth to maturity as an organization and significant realization of the individual potential of its members, commented Dean Clifford, offering "full and enthusiastic support" of the Sigma Chi Psi petition.

Tolley

Further support has been given by Chancellor William P. Tolley, who in a letter to Sigma Chi stated, "We are genuinely interested in the early restoration of this charter so that further strength may be added to

Gifts Committee Makes Report

Additional gifts totalling $841,585 were reported at the second meeting of the Leadership Gifts Committee of the Onondaga area campaign for Syracuse University's $76 million expansion plan.

T. Frank Dolan, Jr., chairman of the county campaign, made the announcement at the group's Jan. 21 meeting. He noted that the new gifts bring the total local solicitation to $1,003,320. Goal for the Onondaga County campaign is $11,400,000.

Tax and Tyranny: Rocky's New York

When this nation was still a scattered group of thirteen colonies searching for freedom, a cry went up in the land. "Taxation without representation is tyranny."

Of course that was some time ago and the words of mortal men have been immortalized by history. Yet the sentiment uttered then in a quest for liberty has never died.

The people of New York State would do well to heed the mighty words of that patriotic time lest they too, become subjected to a latter-day tyranny emanating from Albany State House.

For, if we may paraphrase history: Taxiation by any other name would smell as vile. For that little phrase we must also apologize to Mr. Shakespeare, but the fact remains a serious one—Governor Nelson A. Rockefeller has propose an almost all-encompassing tax measure and has haphazardly labelled it a fee.

Now it seems rather petty of the governor to take such steps to evade the fact that he broke a campaign promise not to raise taxes. The proposed automoble registration fee increase is a tax and nothing else. The automoble is far from a luxury these days and the persons owning them and operating them in New York constitute such a large proportion of the adult population that the entire state, in fact, is faced with a new tax measure.

We cannot argue with the possible need for more revenue to meet the proposed budget for the coming year and we realize that most of the money received will be used for highway construction and improvement.

Yet this does not detract from the tyrannical method in which Rockefeller is trying to push this measure by the citizens of this state. His request for a silence period by Republican state leaders smacks even more of strong-handed one man rule.

Perhaps in Albany the calendars show that 1964 is closer than it is here in the frozen depths of Syracuse. Whatever the reason, the governor is looking more and more like a good candidate for that highest office in the land. After all, presidential candidates are known by the promises they break.

The governor has broken a campaign promise and has alienated many of his constituents. What the real effect of this will be on his future plans is hard to say. He holds a lot of power and in Washington he could hold more. If this proposal is just another of Rocky's presidential warmups at the expense of New York State residents, it is unfair and devious, to say the least.

Tyranny is tyranny whether you're fated to go down in history or you're a taxpayer fated to go down the Thruway. At least we have advanced to the point where we can drive to the poor farm.

Registration: Finis

We hesitated writing that registration was smooth and uncomplicated this semester, knowing full well that three-hundred twenty-two irate students would storm the Hellbox sporting scars of battle and screaming that we were out of our type writing minds.

But heartened by Mr. Olan's letter (see letters) we feel obligated to say that this last of our eight registering sessions was by far the smoothest and quickest.

Maybe because it was the last, the IBM cards seemed smaller, the lines more fast moving, the instructions less complicated and the checkers more efficient. Maybe because we never earned a scholarship, the tuition lines were small.

But perhaps the system has just improved. Here they come—all 322 of them-

Drinking Policy

By Howie Ginsburg

The recent poll conducted by Joint Student Legislature reviewing the university drinking policy has brought the annual topic, "our outdated policy," to the foreground of student thought once again.

There are those, as always, who scream for a liberal drinking policy just as a matter of habit. They have given no thought to the repercussions that might follow; they think only of a "Liquor fountain" where liquor will flow as easily as water.

It was pointed out at the last JSL meeting that at Cornell, where drinking is permitted in the dormitories, there are frequent "joyrides" and other disturbances. This does not seem, however, to phase the supporters of a free drinking policy; perhaps they are here for nothing more than a "joyride."

Seldom is there an evening when the various university libraries are not filled with students trying to study in peace and quiet. Dormitories and fraternities are obviously not satisfactory to the student who needs reasonable quiet to work.

Saturday night seems to be "relieve the pressure with liquor" night at SU and most residents accept the fact that their living centers will be unlivable until dawn. If a policy existed whereby liquor was permitted in university living quarters, Syracuse would have to rebuild Archbold Stadium to accommodate all the students trying to study.

Resident advisors, who are having enough trouble enforcing "quiet hours" without liquor-filled halls, may as well resign if floor members are permitted to have New Year's Eve celebrations every night.

There seems to be little disagreement, however, that the current university drinking policy is, as described by Chancellor Tolley, "outdated." This column will agree with that and favors a change, although a sensible, moderate one.

Fraternity men have long been after the administration to allow liquor at weekly house parties. There would be definite advantages to following a policy of that nature. It would no longer be necessary for men to travel into the city with their dates and then drive back to campus after having had a "few" drinks. This could conceivably eliminate many of the unnecessary accidents that involve Syracuse University students.

The university is worried, according to JSL Speaker Ronald Mittleman, that this policy would bring added "social pressures to those students who do not want to drink." That is true; these pressures, however, are encountered today at parties at Drumlins and other places where there is a bar.

Again, a completely free drinking policy would be considerably worse. Then pressures would be applied to every non-drinker and it would make the dormitories unbearable.

Strict supervision would be necessary at parties where liquor is served, particularly in the dormitories. If no liquor got past the parties and into the rooms, I don't think there could be many objections.

LETTERS

Register

To the Editor.

I have found John Trever's cartoon of Feb. 6, which criticizes our spring registration, quite inappropriate. The university has obviously given more money and effort in order to shorten our old lengthy lines. When referring to registration this semester, the administration should be complimented rather than scorned.

Appreciation

To the Editor:

In my two short years here I have come across a small number of professors who are not "just doing a job" but are actually dedicated to doing the job right. These certain professors make it almost "fun" to learn. They instill the desire in you to do better, and I have seen some with the personality and unknowing influence to induce a student to settle on a major or even to change his major in parallel with a respected professor's.

Teaching of this personal magnitude should be more stressed in this institution. Let your professors know that you are there not only in body but in spirit, also. You and I revel in others' praise of our efforts; how about these dedicated men?

This university has been defined coldly as a "big business." You pay money and the institution absorbs it. The professors have been involved inadvertently in it all. They are thought of as a "tool" of the administration by the student body; I contend that they are a separate entity just as we are.

We should appreciate those who make learning interesting and "fun" and encourage those who are lacking in spirit and personality to help them help us.

THEATER

'Beggar's Opera'

Something odd and strange occurred at the Coronet Theater Wednesday night: Ben Shaktman's production of 'The Beggar's Opera.' We say odd and strange because this combination of satire and pathos, social comment and slapstick, great theatricality and a ten minute movie has been presented in a manner new and unfamiliar to us.

Mr. Shaktman's "Beggar's Opera" is a play of contrasts in a gigantic (for the small Coronet Theater) stage he lays the play quite literally in the audience's lap. Yet, by purposely using artificial looking make-up and hair coloring, by having stage hands appearing on the set, and by having actors continually posed Mr. Shaktman insists on withdrawing the action from the audience always reminding them that this is theater, and not even the vaguest pretense of life.

To be sure this paradox is in the play with its combination of sarcastic dialogue, witty lyrics, enchanting music and somber overtones. But the production falls obliquely on our senses. It is intriguing colorful and musical but it is not extremely satisfying.

The story concerning the exploits of highwayman Macheath in 18th century London is well acted. (A music review of "Beggar's Opera" will appear in a future DO.) As Macheath Bill Harris bounces with vigor between jails, women, and his two "oppressors," fen ce Peachum, pleasantly portrayed by Peter Maloney; and jailer lockit, strongly portrayed by Paul Dieke.

Both Bonnie Bradt as the innocent Polly and Karen Faulkner as the jilted Lucy do well especially Miss Faulkner. A charming ensemble of prostitutes (Martha Kolota, Annabelle Honig, Penny LaBorde, Mary Willie and Leslie Meek.) add a bit of sensual grace just when it is needed.

The Beggar Esen Wiegand, like the play was humorous but cold, in a well suited performance.

Special mention should be given to Marian Present as Mrs. Trapes received a warm reaction from a rather quiet first night audience that may have been as unnerved by Mr. Shaktman's production as we were.

The gaily costumed full company sing, as a finale, "The wretchers of today may be happy tomorrow." But we take the point of the "Beggar's Opera" to be Lockit's line, "Men pray upon each other yet they horde together." We cannot escape Mr. Shaktman's paradox. JEG

Guitarist Montoya Here

"The music — it must be in you," says Carlos Montoya, the celebrated Flamenco guitarist, who will give a recital 8:30 p.m. Saturday at the Regent Theater.

Processing a musical gift inherited from his parents, both Spanish gypsies, Montoya has the Flamenco heritage which he declares is so vital to anyone who wishes to make his mark in that musical genre.

Flamenco music, Montoya explains is, despite its lack of written background (or, perhaps, because of that lack) a most demanding and exhausting idiom.

"Flamenco must come from the heart. You do not pick up a sheet of music and say, 'now I play Flamenco.' The music must come from the guitarist — not from a book."

At the age of eight, Montoya started playing the guitar under the guidance of his mother, "La Tula," herself a most accomplished performer. By the time he was fourteen, young Montoya was the toast of the "cafes cantantes" in the heyday of Falmenco singing and dancing.

His virtuosity was such that the leading singers and dancers of the time, all of whom had become aware of the prodigy, Montoya, were soon seeking him as their personal accompanist.

Plan Career? Here's Advice From Cadillac

How far have you gone in your executive career? How far do you expect to go? How can you alter your career planning to advance faster?

Lee D. Barton, of Cadillac Motor Car's executive placement and procurement organization, feels that this is a "time" month to inventory your own executive advancement, no matter whether you are a junior, middle, senior level executive, or a beginner still in school.

"No self respecting business man who expects to stay in business more than a year would think of letting more than 12 months pass without taking a comprehensive inventory of what he has on his shelves and balancing it against what he has sold. I am astounded at the slip-shod methods too many executives adopt in regard to their own personal advancement," he said.

Are there yardsticks by which one's own advancement can be measured or ways of facilitating that advancement? After 35 years in the business of helping executives, Barton is positive that there are. Here are a few of the points he makes:

"As a screening device, if for no other reason, a college degree, preferably in business administration, is essential. You won't even clear the first hurdle if you don't have a BS or BA and advanced degrees are becoming more and more common now. To the sophomore or freshman Barton insists: Make certain you are taking meaningful subjects and that your marks in them are superior.

"Pick a growth company. The size is not as important as that intangible feeling of a corporate entity that it is alive. You can judge it by its attitude toward new products, new faces and new marketing techniques, the acceptance of other companies of its training program. If it has an industry record of developing good new people, your time there won't be wasted. How does your company rate?

"Time is becoming an increasing luxury as your idea of marketability is shortened every year by increasing competition. Devoid of gobbledegook, this means that you shouldn't waste more than three years of your career development in job hopping and preferably your first job should be a bridge to something better—never a period of experimentation to see if work agrees with you.

"Changing jobs from strength is another matter. Industry is becoming increasingly favorable toward the idea of promoting new blood. If you move because you are given a better offer after evaluating everything about the proposed company, don't hesitate to take the job. We are finding that many firms, in fact, are perfectly willing to admit mistake and hire back people that have slipped through them after completing training programs. The strong willed corporate kings were formerly never privy to error. Now the wise decision maker is looking for performance and is willing to buy back his own graduate. Don't vent your spleen or make enemies as you leave.

"I hesitate to put it in these terms, but the dedicated career executive must consider the selection of a wife with dedication. If you are married and working on your career inventory, it may well be too late. If you are still in school, there possibly is still time. Industry sees the wife as a reflection of the ability of the executive and as his assistant in the pursuit of his career. Its judgment may at times seem weird, but this happens to be an economic fact of life.

"Shooting your wife because she has booby-trapped your advancement or has become a dead weight on your career is still not recognized in our country as grounds for justifiable homicide, but it might be a good thing if our staff continues to see the number of tragic cases that we have seen in the past.

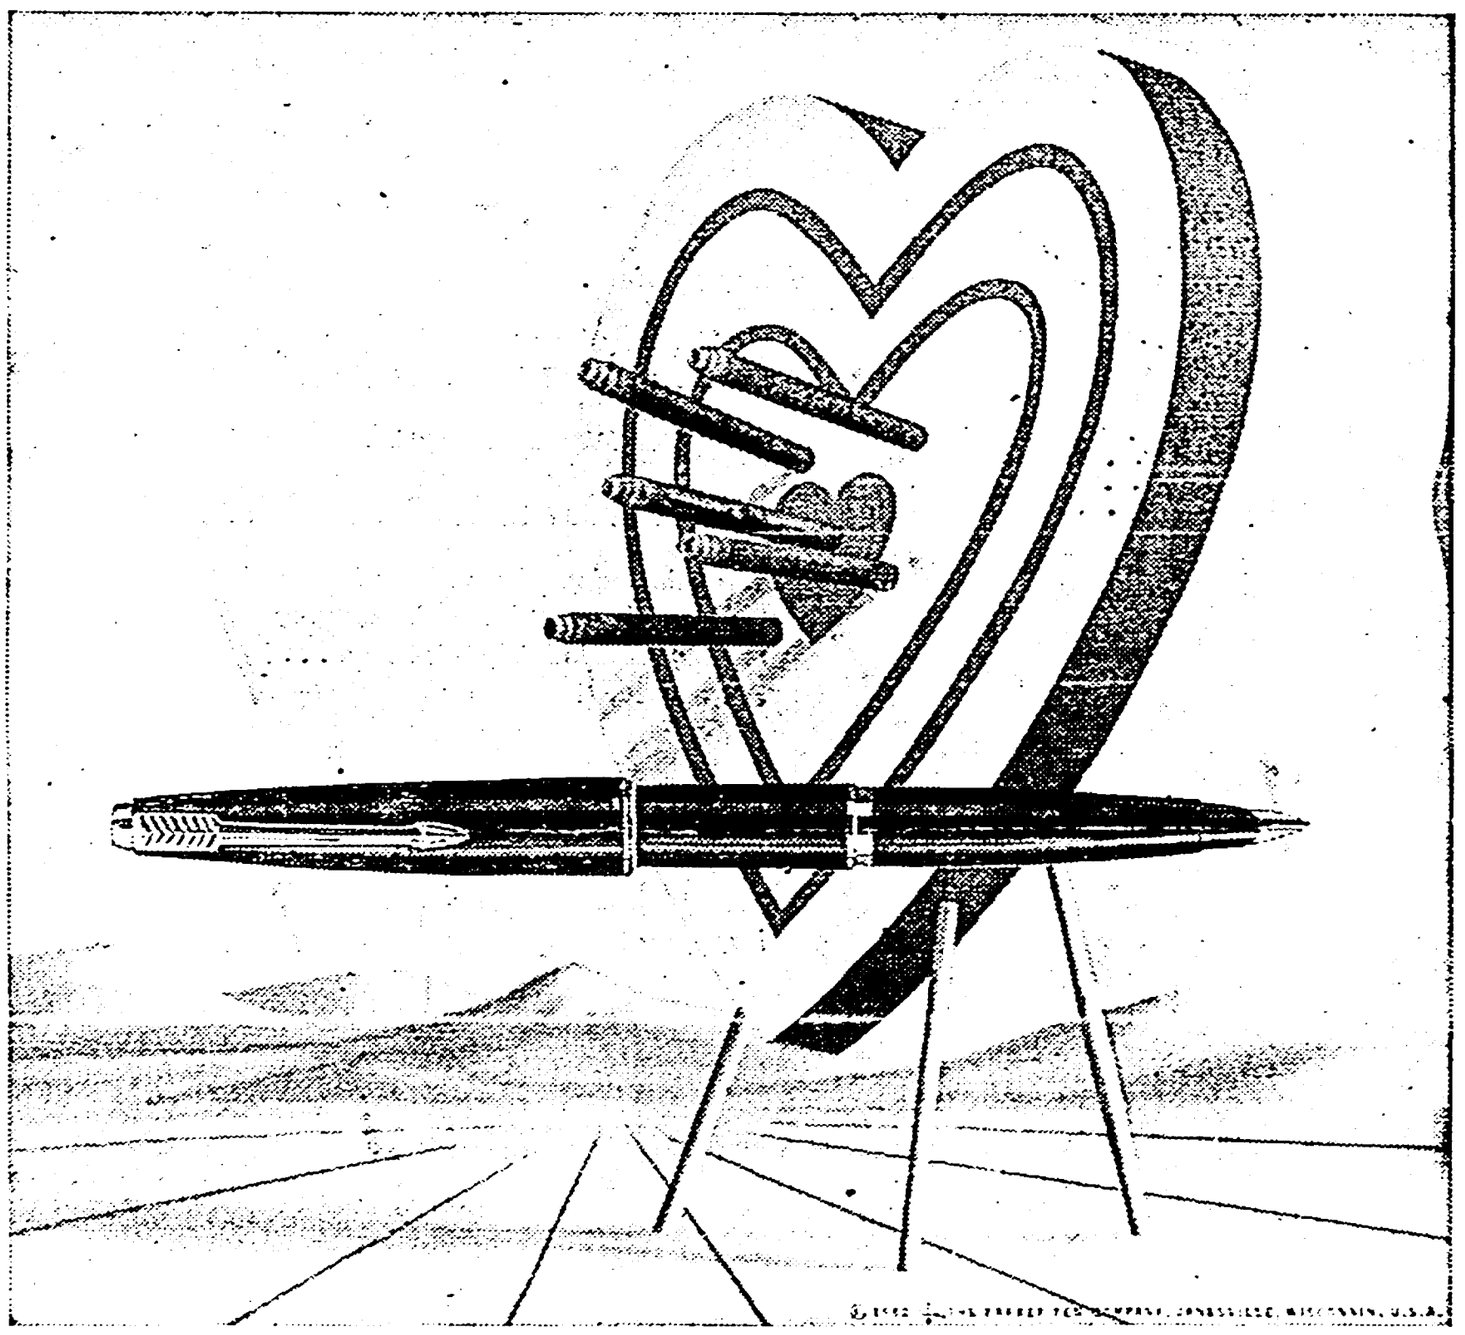
Lloyd Addresses New York State Bar Association Plan

Prof. William J. Lloyd, Congdon Professor of public law and legislation in the Syracuse University College of Law, recently addressed a meeting of the New York State Bar Association.

Lloyd, who discussed "Municipal Tort Liability in New York State," addressed the municipal law section of the state group at its annual meeting in New York City's Americana Hotel.

Lloyd came to the university in 1938, and has had many years of experience in the legislative field. He has acted as a research consultant to the New York State Law Revision Commission, an agency which constantly updates New York State law.

His published studies of legal questions have led to the solution of several local government problems in the area of liability resulting from negligence of local officials.



SUPER SMOOTH SHAVE

New "wetter-than-water" action melts beard's toughness—in seconds. Remarkable new "wetter-than-water" action gives Old Spice Super Smooth Shave its scientific approximation to the feather-touch feel and the efficiency of barber shop shaves. Melts your beard's toughness like hot towels and massage—in seconds.

Shaves that are so comfortable you barely feel the blade. A unique combination of anti-evaporation agents makes Super Smooth Shave stay moist and firm. No re-lathering, no dry spots. Richer and creamier...gives you the most satisfying shave...fastest, cleanest—and most comfortable. Regular or mentholated, 1.00.

If you have trouble saying it...

Say it with a Parker

If you're a little shy and have difficulty saying "I love you" or even "I like you very much"—say it with a Parker.

The new Parker Arrow makes a beautifully expressive gift and looks as if you paid a small fortune for it. It only costs $3.95, however, which should leave you with enough date money for an impressive presentation ceremony in romantic surroundings such as the second booth from the back in your local drugstore.

The new Parker Arrow comes in black, dark blue, light blue, light gray, and bright red, with a choice of four instantly replaceable solid 14K gold points. Gift-boxed with five free cartridges.

P.S. To girls: a Parker Arrow—besides being a very romantic gift—comes in one size (the right one), should last at least ten times longer than a scarf or a tie, and should bring in a harvest of correspondence you'll cherish the rest of your life.

the fraternity system at Syracuse University."

Letters of support have also been received from Irwin B. Birnbaum, president of the SU alumni Interfraternity Council; Thomas Rigoli, president of the undergraduate IFC; and many Hill fraternities.

Sigma Chi Psi first applied for admission to Sigma Chi in early 1961. At that time the national called for a chapter house corporation, support of the seven state chapters and the local alumni, and a financially successful board club for one semester as conditions for the reinstatement of the charter.

These four requirements "have been solidly fulfilled, having a 60 man alumni association, 100 per cent suport from the New York State chapters, and a successful board club an dhouse corporation within the house," Ex-President Stanger commented.

Bridge Club Tournament

The Syracuse University Bridge Club has been invited to play in the first annual West Point Bridge Club Invitational Inter-Collegiate Tournament.

The bridge club will send two teams of four players, which will be chosen Sunday at a qualifying duplicate tournament.

The qualifying tournament will be held at 1:45 p.m. in the main lounge of Sadler Dorm. There is no entry fee and refreshments will be served. All men and women graduate and undergraduate students are eligible for the team. Fractional master points will be awarded.

The bridge club will provide transportation to West Point on Feb. 16, and overnight accommodations have been arranged.

The West Point tournaments begin at noon on Sat., Feb. 16 with registration, and extend from 2:30-6:00 p.m. and from 7:30-11:00 p.m. There will be an Open Pair Duplicate Event on Sun., Feb. 17, at 1:30 p.m.

For further information, contact Saul Berkowitz, Sadler Hall, ext. 2926.

Seminar Open To Students

SU accounting majors have been invited to the two-section accounting seminar sponsored by the National Association of Accountants, James Evans, NAA program director, has announced.

The first section will be held at the Carrier Corp. Administration Building on Carrier Parkway.

This is the first time that the Syracuse chapter has invited non-NAA members, Syracuse business executives and students to attend.

State U. Gets Tuition; Foresters Calm

By SANDY MYERS

An effigy of Gov. Nelson Rockefeller was burned at the State University College at Oneonta, and on Tuesday more than 900 of the college at Albany marched to the state capitol carrying a state college flag and a coffin.

But at the State University College of Forestry at Syracuse, there were no student protests about the governor's decision to set a $400 yearly tuition at State University units, according to Lawrence J. Belanger, forestry school registrar.

The coffin in Albany symbolized the "death of the ideal" of tuition-free education.

Under Rockefeller's plan, effective in September, there will be a yearly $400 tuition and $25 student fee. However, this would be offset by Scholar Incentive awards, ranging from $100 to $300 annually, and students from families in the lowest income bracket would not have to pay the tuition and fee.

New Charges

The new charges will apply at 52 state colleges throughout New York, all now tuition-free. Tuition to the State University's graduate schools will range to $800, but Scholar Incentice Awards at the graduate level are as much as $800 annually.

Gov. Rockefeller, faced with the worst fiscal situation since he took office in 1959, viewed the move as a key step in the solution of a pressing financial problem.

Some of the income gained from tuition will be used for Rockefeller's $1 billion State University expansion plan.

The State University board of trustees voted Jan. 22 to institute the tuition charge.

$8 Million

The state now receives about $8 million a year from students at State University schools charging tuition. The new plan will raise the income to $24 million annually. Students in teacher-training schools and agricultural and technical institutes will be chiefly affected.

The boards of trustees of Cornell and Alfred Universities will determine whether to establish the same tuition and fees at State University colleges which they operate on their campuses. The State University trustees recommended a similar policy at the colleges, which are under contract with the state.

The State University trustees also suggested that New York City adopt a tuition plan for its municipal colleges. They hinted that state aid to the city schools might be curtailed if no steps toward a tuition charge are taken.

Residents

The $400 tuition will apply only to New York State residents. Non-residents will pay $600 tuition yearly at the four-year colleges and the two-year college agricultural and technical institutes, and $1000 in the professional schools.

Before the board of trustees met to consider the tuition increase, nine students from state colleges at Albany, Oswego and Cortland appeared in Albany to demonstrate against tuition.

They gathered on the steps of the state capitol with placards reading "No Tuition." They brought bundles of letters and petitions, saying that they had 15,000 letters from students in all the State University's unit. The petitions reportedly contained more tha 40,000 signatures of parents, relatives and friends of students.

At several campuses, students kept their dormitory lights on Jan. 18 until early morning of the 19th to demonstrate their opposition to the proposed tuition plan.

Students Protest

Many students wrote their protest letters during the lights-on period.

Effigy

At the State University College at Cortland, students burned an effigy, but it was labeled "Mr. Tuition." According to Cortland students the effigy was originally to be named Rockefeller, but college officicals said that this would not be permitted.

A grave with a headstone marked "A Teacher—Jan. 22, 1963—Cause: Tuition" was placed on the campus at Albany. Most Albany students are training to be teachers.

Assemblymen Charles D. Henderson (R-Hornell) and Melville E. Abrams (D-Bronx) have introduced a bill in the State Assembly to bar implementation of tuition.

At the march in Albany Tuesday 70 patrolmen and state troopers with night sticks stood by, but there was no disorder. The 900 students surrounded Capitol Park for about an hour.

Earlier Tuesday, about 500 students had staged a mock funeral on the Albany campus.

Eight representatives of the AFL-CIO council of Hudson took part in the march. They carried signs reading "We're for Free Tuition for College Students" and "Upper Hudson Area AFL-CIO Supports the College Students."

Walter Cronkite, CBS News correspondent, has covered every major American space story, including all manned Project Mercury launches.

Frosh, Varsity Face Eagles

Maddrey, Glenn Lead Visitors

By ALLAN KORT

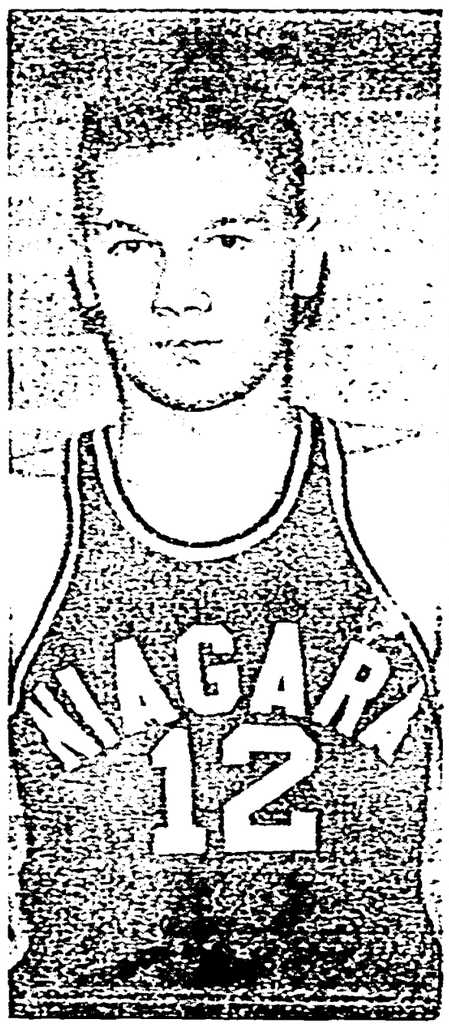
A star-studded Niagara will be out to find the winning touch tonight meeting Syracuse at Manley Field House.

Niagara owns a 10-1 record, having won 10 in a row before losing to Providence last week. The Purple Eagles are rated 15th nationally.

Junior guard Jim Kuryak leads seniors Joe Maddrey, Andy O'Connell, Ken Glean and Bill Kennedy into the fieldhouse aiming for their fifth in a row over Syracuse.

O'Connell leads the Eagles in scoring with 20.4 points per game while Maddrey and Glenn hit at a 17 point clip. Kuryak, the squad's playmaker, averaged 10 while the other starting guard Bill Kennedy tossed in nine markers each tilt.

Highscoring



The visitors starting five pushed in 62 points per game while Syracuse's stalwart of Manny Klutchkowski, Carl Vernick, Dick Duffy, Herb Foster and Phil Schoff have accounted for 46.5 points each contest.

Syracuse will be out to stretch its home record to 6-2 having dropped home tilts only to Cornell and Penn State. The Orange, who face consecutive Manley tests against the Eagles, LaSalle, Canisius and Boston College, have yet to win a road contest.

Fred Lewis will go with his same offense against the taller Purple Eagles. Starting for Syracuse will be Vernick, Finley, Seaman, Klutchkowski, and Foster.

Pondering over Tuesday's 80-71 loss to Cornell, Lewis said, "We'll have to be better at the line if we're going to come through." Syracuse shot a poor 17 for 33 at the foul stripe in the Cornell loss.

Another problem the Orange will have to overcome against the Eastern power is height. Syracuse has been forced in recent games to shoot from the outside since its drives are initiated by sub-sixfooters such as Finley, Duffy and Seaman. On the whole Syracuse's field goal shooting percentage is only 44 per cent.

JIM KURYAK

Bing Doubtful Starter in Prelim

A "Bingless" Dave Bing and Co. will be put to a severe test tonight when the Tangerines match basketball skills with a strong Niagara quintet. The services of Bing appear doubtful. The game will be played at 6:30 p.m. at Manley Fieldhouse.

Bing was feeling under the weather before Tuesday night's contest against Cornell, but still managed to pace the Orange to a 76-72 victory, with 26 points. Immediately after the game Dave was taken to the infirmary.

The frosh hoopsters seek their ninth victory and their sixth consecutive in what may prove to be one of their toughest games of the season. The team currently holds an 8-1 record, losing only to the Big Red earlier in the year.

High Scorers

The Purple Eagles of Niagara are paced by Art Coleman, John Hayward, and Pat Broderick. Coleman and Hayward are forwards, while Broderick is a guard. In their last game against the Buffalo frosh the team was beaten, but played a strong game. Coleman and Broderick scored 16 and 14, respectively. Rounding out the formidable squad is center Phillips and guard Delaney. The team also defeated the Buffalo squad earlier in the season.

The company that Dave Bing keeps on the basketball cot. t has also shown they can shoot baskets with the best of them. Forwards Frank Nicoletti and Norm Goldsmith, and guard Sam Penceal turned in fine performances in this week's game against Cornell. Nicoletti scored 17, Goldsmith pumped in 18, and Penceal scored 13.

Leading Rebounders

Nicoletti and Goldsmith, besides being offensive standouts, pulled down clutch rebounds. Penceal has become coach Morris Osburn's top playmaker and has teamed up well with backcourt partner Bing. At center Osburn is alternating 6-8 Rex Trowbridge and 6-4 Dick Abelman.

Bing leads the Orange scorers with a sizzling 26.5 average. Goldsmith is averaging 18 points a contest, and Nicoletti and Penceal a little over 10. In the assist department Bing once again is the leader, with Penceal a close second.

Syracuse's varsity swimming team continued on the winning track last night, submerging a weaker Cortland squad, 68-27, before 1,000 at Orange Pool.

Jeff Meyer paced the Orange in the meet with a pair of firsts—a win in the 50 yard freestyle with a time of 23.5 seconds and a victory in the 100 yard freestyle with a time of 53.2 seconds.

The Orange mermen allowed the visitors only one first in the 11-event meet—that in the 200 yard breaststroke in the next to last event. Bob Whitcomb and Bill Ferguson on Cortland took the top two spots in that race over Carl Nichols of Syracuse.

Syracuse took a 7-0 lead in the meet with a win in the 400 yard medley relay. The Orange team of Bill Holmes, Carl Nichols, Roger Ellenberger and Hugh Duncey ran away from the visiting four with a 4:10.2 timing.

The local squad stretched its lead to 18-1 in the 200 yard freestyle. Tom Watts took first for the Hill in 1:56.2 and swept away to a 25 yard victory over teammate Bob Myerberg and Ed Grogan of Cortland.

Meyer took the 50 yard freestyle while Schmich and Tansey of Cortland grabbed second and third respectively. Syracuse's lead stood at 20-5.

Joe Morrison of Syracuse outswam Ferguson and Mike DeFranz of Cortland for the win in the individual medley in 2:13.4 to give the Piety a 25-9 lead.

A one-two finish by Chan Rudd and Alan Ross of Syracuse in the diving competition gave the Hill a 33-10 lead. Buckholtz copped the third place point for Cortland.

Ellenberger of Syracuse outdistanced Horgan and Cahill of Cortland in 2:22.4 in the 200 yard butterfly event to give the Hill a 38-14 lead.

Meyer's win in the 100 free, backed up by Marshall's third, and Holmes' and Dwayne Lehigh's one-two finish in the 200 yard backstroke gave the host team 52-18 lead.

Syracuse continued to romp as Morrison took a first in the 500 yard freestyle while Myerberg of Syracuse copped second to put the Hill at a 60-19 advantage.

Cortland took the first two spots in the 200 yard breaststroke putting the score at 61-27.

Syracuse ended the meet at 68-27 with seven points for first in the closing event—the 400 yard relay. Syracuse's team of DeWolfe, Duncey Ellenberger and Watts just edged the visitors in the closest race of the day as Watts came from a 10-yard deficit to nail the first spot in 3:22.5.

Basketball Stats

The varsity basketballers boast two men in double figures, Carl Vernick averaging 11.6 per game and Phil Schoff at 10.4. Herb Foster comes close with 9.8.

In point totals, Vernick leads the squad with 150 scores, Schoff second with 135 and Herb Foster with 127.

In the category of rebounds, Foster is head and shoulders over his teammates with 109 grabs, averaging 8.3 per game. A close race for second includes Manny Klutschkowski with 68, Schoff with 67 and Vernick at 63.

Foster also sets the pace in free throws, having an average of .691. Vernick has sunk 43 throws from the line to lead the team in that total, but averages only .632. Phil Schoff averages .675 with 35 free ones, Dick Finley has made two-thirds of 21 shots. Duffy has .641 with 25, and Klutch has .648 with 20.

Manny Klutschkowski, however, leads the team from the field with a .447 percentage, dumping 38. Dick Finley is in the runner-up slot with .431, although only dumping 31. Foster is close behind with .428 with 49 swishes. Schoff and Duffy each have a .360 percentage with 50 and 32 sinks respectively.

Carl Vernick, though leading the club in field goals was 53, has shot them in but 35.4% of his tries. A stellar performance against Cornell lifted Jim Seaman up to a .370 mark, with 17 baskets.

As a whole the team has now averaged 59.2 per game against their opponents 65.7. The opposition has sunk 856 points, the Orange has 770. Syracuse and its opposition both have exactly 580 rebounds. But the hometown club has been out-percentaged and out scored at both the free throw line and from the open court.

Low Rates For ND Tix

The web of silence surrounding next year's controversial Notre Dame-S. U. football game in Yankee Stadium has finally been removed, and it now appears that Syracuse students, at least those from the Metropolitan area, will be able to see the game for a minimum cost.

Tickets will be given out two weeks before the game at a cost of $1. Students will be expected to present both their tickets and their I.D. cards at the gate.

The seats will be located between 20 and 30 yard lines on the third base side of the stadium. All other Syracuse seating will also be on the third base side, but they will be slightly more expensive. Limited box seats will sell for $7, and other seats will be $5.

WAA Dip On Feb. 11

The WAA spring lay swim will be held from Feb. 11 to Feb. 14 for the independent living centers.

All those girls interested in swimming but who do not have service privilege cards may pick up special cards at the pool on Monday night. All independent living centers must enter their teams on Monday night.

Sorority houses will begin to swim on Feb. 18, and their section will end on Feb. 21. Sorority women who don't have service privilege cards may pick up their special cards Wednesday afternoon between 3 and 4:30 in the lobby of the Women's Building.

A reminder to all co-eds — the volleyball intramurals begin Tuesday, Feb. 12, in gyms A and B.

Dean Smith Leaves Today For Italy

After many years as an administrator, Dean Marjorie C. Smith will again become a student. She will study Italian in Florence with the students in the Semester in Italy program for a month this spring.

The group will sail at noon Saturday from New York City on the liner S. S. Constitution. Dean Smith will stay in Florence for almost two weeks. In addition to studying Italian on the ship, she will attend classes in Florence. "I have a good reading background in Italian, but have never spoken it," the dean of women admits.

She will observe the difference in the life of the American student when attending college in the United States and when attending school in a foreign country.

Dean Smith will also interview Italian college women, in view of a possible exchange program with Syracuse University. The program will begin next fall, if problems of transferring college credits can be solved.

Today Dean Smith will travel by train to New York where she will attend an evening reception for everyone in the semester program.

Dean Eric H. Faigle of the College of Liberal Arts, and Dr. and Mrs. John Adams, former administrators of the Semester in Italy program, will be in New York Saturday to see the ship's departure.

After two weeks in Florence, Dean Smith will travel for several days to Bologna and Geneva. She will return on the Queen Mary in mid-March.

During Dean Smith's absence, Cleo McCracken will represent her at meetings and will assume her responsibilities.

Action Taken Against 7 In LA Cheating Cases

By CHARLES STEINBERG

"We are fighting to keep the honest students from being cheated," Associate Liberal Arts Dean Alfred H. Cope told the Daily Orange Thursday in announcing the latest cases of academic dishonesty in the College. Seven students in all have been subjected to disciplinary action by the Committee on Academic Dishonesty.

Four students in a social science course have been punished for attempting to substitute pre-written blue books in the "prepare at home" part of the final examination. "This places the honest students at a tremendous disadvantage," Cope pointed out, not only in answering the take-home question but because there were three other essays to be completed in the allotted time.

"In light of the students' generally poor records," he said, two of them have been expelled from the university, one suspended for two years and the other suspended for one year.

Problems

In a second case a student has been suspended until June for alleging personal problems in attempting to secure a WP (Withdrawn Passing) grade in a language course.

At University College a student in an English course was detected plagiarizing a paper. He was given a minimum penalty of a D grade because the Committee felt he had not had the proper warning about plagiarism as he had never taken English 1. The student was also required to take English 1 before being allowed to pursue any more courses at University College.

The seventh student, a sophomore, has been punished for a "marginal case of plagiarism" (improper footnoting and paraphrasing). The student was given an F in the course and limited to twelve semester hours this term. The professor involved was led to suspect the plagiarism because the student had a low college board score, Cope said.

Hearings

Cope pointed out that all disciplinary action must be handled by the Committee. If a student feels he is being improperly penalized by an instructor he may request a hearing. In one case this semester a student was found innocent and was completely exonerated.

The Committee has jurisdiction over all liberal arts courses and is composed of Dean Cope, Professors Oscar Barck and Albert George and a representative of either the dean of men or dean of women depending on the sex of the student involved.

The actions of the Committee are subject to review by Liberal Arts Dean Eric H. Faigle, Personnel Dean John S. Hafer and Vice President for Academic Affairs Frank P. Piskor. If the student involved is not regularly enrolled in the College of Liberal Arts the action is subject to review by the dean of his college.

Boozy Hotel Birthday Party Leads to Disciplinary Actions

Strong disciplinary action has been taken against 11 members of one fraternity who participated in "a private drinking situation," in a suite in the Hotel Onondaga prior to Christmas. Action is still pending against several freshman coeds who attended the party.

According to Daily Orange sources the fraternity is Zeta Beta Tau. The dean of men's office does not release such information.

The party, described as a birthday celebration for one of the brothers, was in no way fraternity - sponsored, commented Dean of Men Earle W. Clifford in announcing the action.

In action taken by Clifford's office, the sponsor of the party was placed on probation for a year, and another member of the party who admitted his attendance was placed on disciplinary probation for a semester.

Reprimand

An officer of the house who attended the party for only a short time and without a date was severly reprimanded by the office for failing to show responsibility in his position.

Eight other members of the house, who "refused to take the responsibility of their act," have been suspended from the fraternity for one semester and must live and eat in university facilities.

This action was taken by the alumni association of the fraternity in accordance with the dean of men. The brothers may be reinstated in the chapter only on the approval of both the alumni and undergraduate chapters.

Additional unidentified persons involved in the case are being sought by the dean of men's and the dean of women's office.

Dean of Women Marjorie C. Smith said that a case of curfew violation for the Kimmel dance also held that night was being investigated by the Asso-

TKE Gets Full Charter

The Syracuse affiliate of Tau Kappa Epsilon, international social fraternity, was officially chartered as a full chapter Feb. 1 and 2. The official installation was conducted by William A. Quallich of Lakewood, Ohio, grand treasurer of TKE, and members of Epsilon Pi chapter of Colgate University.

Affiliation with TKE began a year ago when a 54-year-old local fraternity, Pi Alpha Chi of Theta Alpha, entered a year's probationary period. In November of 1962 the affiliate submitted to the grand chapter of Tau Kappa Epsilon a petition for full membership. Following approval of this petition the chapter was designated Iota Zeta of Tau Kappa Epsilon.

The local was actually a merger of two former locals. Theta Alpha founded in 1909 and Pi Chi founded in 1936. The two merged in 1947, but did not investigate nationalization until December, 1961.

Investigation

Six nationals were investigated before Tau Kappa Epsilon was considered. Presently the international fraternity

Late Night Meeting Announces Reversal Of Move Policy

By JOYCE HERGENHAN

The living center shuffle received a late starter early Thursday morning when the residents of Roosevelt Cottage, 805 Walnut Ave., learned they will soon move to other housing.

Jean Crawford, director of women's housing, informed the cottage's 14 sophomore residents of the impending move during a specially called post-midnight house meeting.

According to Miss Crawford, the decision to vacate the cottage was reached early in the week. The announcement was withheld, however, until all the girls returned from intersession.

An unexpectedly large number of housing vacancies necessitated closing a small living center, Miss Crawford explained. Roosevelt was selected primarily because its head resident recently resigned and her temporary replacement has just moved in.

According to Miss Crawford, the girls will move "as soon as possible after Lima Cottage is vacated." Since Lima's residents are scheduled to move out Sunday, Roosevelt probably will be vacated sometime next week.

What the girls describe as "a very close-knit cottage" will be broken up as the girls move singly and in pairs to other cottages, the Ambassador, Flint, and Shaw dorms.

"We just don't want to move," explained one unhappy coed. "We feel there are many sociological reasons for keeping this particular unit open."

These reasons include: the cottage's proximity to campus and a dining hall (Kimmel); its comparative distance from the Fifteenth Ward and the compatibility of its occupants.

Roosevelt's residents also oppose the move on the grounds it "reflects a betrayal of trust by the administration." A cottage spokesman said the residents have been assured repeatedly that Roosevelt would not be closed nor its residents moved.

Evidence of this promise was seen Monday when two girls moved into Roosevelt from Haven. They, too, must move out next week.

SAE, AEPi CAN RUSH

The disciplinary action taken against Sigma Alpha Epsilon this week by the dean of men, and the probationary status of Alpha Epsilon Pi fraternity last semester in no way restrict their rushing or pledging activities, Fraternity Administrator James P. McMurray told the Daily Orange Thursday.

At the present time there is no Hill fraternity that is in any way restricted in it's rushing or pledging activities, he emphasized.

The AEP case will be reviewed Monday, McMurray said.

World Rumblings

Between the time the Daily Orange ceased publication for examinations and its return Wednesday the world of diplomacy has been shaken again and again.

The problem seems to be that some nations still insist on remaining sovereign rather than giving up their sovereignty in an alliance. In both East and West there have been loud rumblings caused by the fear of losing power; and power, after all, is the raison d'etre of the state.

There was a time in history when one nation could do battle with another single nation without causing much of an alarm in the rest of the civilized world. Thus England and France ran a continual series of wars over religion, succession to the throne and whatever else could be flamed into an open dispute.

But war, although never really glorious, was at least less damaging than it has become of late. And the nations themselves were affected by these changes in warfare. No longer could one government wage war on a limited scale with a single nation.

The cause of war became a quest for power and it took mighty nations to arrest the plans of mighty rulers backed by strong military power. Thus alliances came into being to equalize the balance of power in the world and to insure that no one power would be able to force its own will over the unwillingness of other sovereign nations.

And so in World War I and World War II the result became full-scale war of alliances—groups of nations contesting other groups of nations for world dominance.

Since the end of the war and the establishment of the United Nations plus the advent of nuclear warfare, government on an international or supranational basis has been considered the only means of maintaining peace and the balance of power.

Thus the world formed into two armed camps—the Western powers of the United States, Great Britain and France, and the Communist bloc of the Soviet Union and Communist China.

Faced with the threat of nuclear warfare which could eliminate all human life from the earth the nations entered the state of Cold War we know so well yet today. Still the philosophy was that as long as both blocs were capable of totally destroying each other, the balance of power would remain intact and the world would remain if not at peace, at least not at war.

The rest of the world meanwhile was emerging from decades of colonialism and foreign rule to become independent sovereign nations. These, of course, became areas of conflict as both ideological blocs sought the friendship of these nations. But that is another topic worthy of a separate article.

What we are concerned with is the recent change in the political picture. For it appears that rather than continuing to strengthen the two alliances which oppose each other, the member nations are being torn by internal strife and quarreling.

What this will do to the balance of power in the world and how it will affect the future of the Cold War is still too early to tell. Yet the fact remains that we may be faced with yet another change in the overall picture of world relations. Alliances may not hold the answer to prevention of war.

Gen. DeGaulle of France has shown forcefully that French sovereignty means more to him than membership in an all-encompassing alliance. His reasons are patriotic and reflect the will of the French people, long forced to take a lesser role in the affairs of Europe.

Canada, too, has balked at blindly accepting a role in an alliance—in this case NATO—and thus compromising its sovereignty. Here, however, the national will may not reflect the words of the Diefenbaker government, recently dissolved.

And on the other side of the Cold War front, Russia and China have been openly antagonizing one another over the correct approach to setting the stage for the worldwide dominance of Communism.

As we said, the consequences of all this are not yet clear but we shall examine some of the issues in the next few days.

TREVER ON CAMPUS

"Rush? Tonight!?"

LETTERS

Moving

To the Editor:

The random movement of students in university housing was at its worst when the residents of Theodore Roosevelt Cottage were notified at midnight on the closing day of registration that they would be dispersed in other housing. This was announced with no previous indications after the residents had just completed registration, the payment of fees, and the settling of two new residents as well as a new head resident.

Students in the cottage were reassured before Christmas vacation by the head resident that the unit would not be closed the following semester. This information from the Dean of Women's office left no opportunity for residents to plan other housing arrangements or the possibilities of transferring.

It was admitted that there was no serious consideration of the conditions of other cottages or of alternative plans suggested by the residents.

The seielction of Roosevelt seemed improbable because the cottage is located in a position much more favorable than the majority of other cottages and the Ambassador. The entrance of campus is two blocks away and the cafeteria only a block away.

Evasive reasons for the closing of the cottage were presented. Since there are numerous vacancies on the Mount and in the Ambassador, it was stated that it would be more economically profitable to close the unit. However, it seems even more profitable to close a unit larger than Roosevelt, which houses fourteen sophomore girls, since there are such numerous vacancies and the maintainance of a larger and more unfavorably located cottage would exceed that of Roosevelt.

There are also a number of Haven Hall and Lima Cottage residents waiting to be placed in cottages which are being renovated. It seems that the awaiting vacancies could be used to accommodate these unhoused persons.

The property on which the cottage is located is too small to be used in itself immediately, for it is in between a sorority and fraternity house in the center of the Walnut Avenue block. The cottage will stand unoccupied in its convenient location for at least a semester.

Most outstanding is that this action is academically unfavorable for the fourteen girls in the unit. Not only will moving during the beginning of new classes and the requirement of adjustment to a new living center be difficult, but the study advantages of a small unit, the number of single rooms, and the number of room facilities for art and writing students will be lost. These facilities were important in the last fall consideration of housing units.

The large number of vacancies on the Mount and the badly located Ambassador seem to suggest the fact that Roosevelt residents are being placed in the most undesirable positions left after room selections by all other women students in university housing.

Drink

To the Editor:

Since this is my last semester at old S.U., I have decided to air my views on some of the subjects that come up in the D.O. instead of "apathetically" keeping them to myself. This time I am joining the never ending discussion (controversy?) on drinking.

The two sides to the argument start from different premises. 1) The Immature Side's (as represented by Mr. Howie Ginsburg) basic axiom is that students are generally a dumb, weak, and irresponsible lot, from among whom no Franklin, Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln, Roosevelt, or Kennedy could ever come (at least not at Syracuse). Thus, the only way to treat them is by restraining the poor subhuman things from harming themselves with that delicious, overpowering, and habit-forming stuff (no, no, not sex—we're talking drinking now, remember?).

2) The Practical Side (Miss Cynthia Marks in Wednesday's D.O.) contends that it is impractical, and leads to arbitrary decisions, to create some wishy-washy middle-of-the road drinking policy. I completely agree with her on this; as she observes with good psychology, permission to drink on big weekends only would not change whatever the present glamour attached to drinking alcohol on this campus.

My stand is that we should definitely have a wet campus (I say this as a non-drinker). Soon the novelty of the situation would wear off, and students would pass beyond the stage where drinking is such a big deal to them. Mr. Ginsburg's objections that this freedom would lead to unbearable disorder in dorms, and would not be conducive to studying, does not convince me at all. Part of the effect of having a wet campus would be, in my mind, the setting up of a student disciplinary committee in every living center to deal specifically with disturbances resulting from drinking, or from any other idiocy. These committees would have about 3-5 members from every floor, membership would be rotating, and they would have the privilege to recommend transfer of an excessively noisy student to another dorm, as well as to recommend suspensions to the academic deans' offices (either through Student Court or directly).

This, or some similar scheme, is the only way I can fathom "unglamourizing" this whole ridiculous business of drinking as well as teaching students self-moderation, autonomous self-discipline, and the wonderful feeling of responsibility in self-government.

And even if we act today, we will still be way behind the times of Franklin, Washington, and company.

FIRST RUN THEATERS

RIVIERA-CINEMA — Two of Ingmar Bergman's first films. These are so old even Weekend hasn't seen them. We figure Bergman fans should like them. For the rest of the population, we won't say. "The Devil's Wanton" at 6:50 and 9:40, and "Night is my Future" at 8:10.

LOEW'S—This is Tony Curtis Week in Syracuse. The curly-headed kid plays in two flicks downtown and has the rare opportunity to compete with himself. At the Loew's he competes with Yul Brynner who in turn competes with the rewrite of this old Russian story. All-in-all it's very competitive and re-written. If you like excitement and like to identify, see this one. Imagine going out with a girl and saying, "My name is TARAS BULBA." Wow. She's impressed. Too bad Tony's real name isn't Taras Bulba. Maybe he wouldn't have lost Janet Leigh. "Thrills" at 7:14 and 9:41.

PARAMOUNT — Tony is more at home at the Paramount as he stars in "40 Pounds of Trouble." There is a good cast backing him up in this Las Vegas-set comedy. A lot of light fun and worth the trip. Come late, however, or you'll have to wriggle through "Stagecoach to Dancers' Rock" starring a cast of unknowns. But see Tony. It's fun. "Trouble" at 6:26 and 9:44. "Double Trouble" at 6:06 and 9:24.

KEITH'S—Two of the screen world's acting greats combine in the film that won the 1962 Vienna Film Festival's Special Award. Laurence Olivier gives a strong performance in the role of a teacher who runs into some sticky going with a young female in his class, played by Sarah Miles (they didn't have a 16-year-olds like that in our high school). Simone Signoret plays the wife caught in between. It drags somewhat in parts but Olivier holds it together and makes it worthwhile. By the way, it's called "Term of Trial." Check the co-feature. It's "The Night They Killed Rasputin." Reminds us of a Playboy cartoon in which a man is saying to his bearded friend, "You know, for a monk you're a real nut, Rasputin." "Teenager for Two" at 6:30 and 10:20 and "The Monk" at 8:50.

SHOPPINGTOWN—We have to check on how long "Gypsy" ran on Broadway because it seems as though the great underground movie theater in Dewitt is trying to break the record. People keep hearing that it's nothing like the show but go to see it ayway and then tell their friends that it's nothing like the show. "Run, Gypsy, Run" at 7 and 9:30.

OTHER FILMS OF INTEREST

ECKEL—It's "Gone With the Wind" again. One DO staffer said she cried more the fifth time she saw it than any other time. The antebellum was never so romantic, the war never so gruesome, Vivien Leigh so vivacious, Clark Gable so sexy and Leslie Howard so Ashley. Besides, it's a required film for Cinema Appreciation. "Tomorrow is Another Day" at 8:00.

HOLLYWOOD — Oh my gosh, "El Cid" is back in town. It must be that his horse likes to travel and doesn't have a very good sense of direction what with his rider being dead and all. This film has been in and out of Syracuse with the rapidity of a mis-guided missile. Charlton Heston and Sophia Loren prove that two Oscars don't make a poor movie any beter. "El Cid" rides again at 7:45.

MIDTOWN — "The Hustler's" back again, with Jackie Gleason proving he can act. (After "Gigot" a few may have their doubts.) "Bachelor Flat" is bland enough to set you up for Gleason, Newman and Co. No times available.

KALLET-GENESEE and PALACE — Another returnee is "West Side Story." We all know the story and we probably have all seen it twice but it's at two neighborhood houses if you've missed it.

ALSO PLAYING

FRANKLIN — "If a Man Answers" at 9:30 p.m. "Raintree County," Liz Taylor fans, at 6:40 p.m.

DEWITT DRIVE-IN—"Strangers When We Meet" and "Homicidal." No times available. Who needs them.

LAKESHORE—Shock your date with this quadruple bill (watch the movies, that'll be some shock.) "Hell to Eternity," "I Passed for White," "I Was a Teenage Werewolf," and "Teenage Monster." No times wanted.

ON STAGE

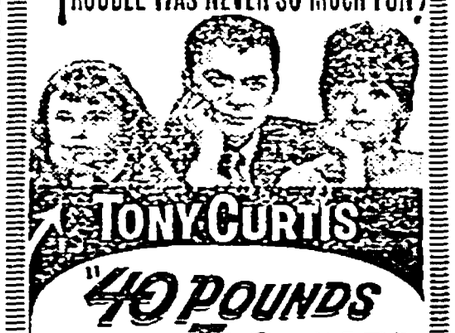
CORONET — John Gay's "The Beggar's Opera" is a good try actor-wise, but Director Ben Shaktman isn't quite sure what he wants, or if he is, then the audience isn't too sure. Maybe John Gay wasn't too sure. 8:30 p.m. curtain. Friday and Saturday.

LINCOLN AUDITORIUM — Syracuse Symphony performs Mahler's "Songs of a Wayfarer" 8:30 p.m. Friday.

REGENT THEATER—Guitarist Carlos Montoya 8:15 p.m. Saturday.

CROUSE RECITAL—Bach organ works performed by Carol Crumrine, 8:30 p.m. Saturday at Crouse College Auditorium.

CROUSE CONCERT — Mezzo-soprano Carol Corbin sings 4 p.m. Sunday at Crouse College Auditorium.



WAER HIGHLIGHTS

I'VE BEEN READING—A discussion of "Politics of Hope" with Arthur Schlesinger, Jr. Friday 8 p.m.

TELL ME DOCTOR—"What is Acne?" Saturday 5:55 p.m.

Lady Bugs Visit Booth; 'Paradise' Needs Screens

Last summer's bugs have come out of hibernation in the new Booth dormitory.

Reports from residents indicate that both, mosquitoes and lady bugs have been found in the rooms of this men's dormitory built to replace Sims Hall and some of the men's cottages.

Residents of Booth 4 noted that lady bugs have been found crawling on the window ledge. "This situation is probably due to the lack of screens on the windows," one occupant said.

The numbers have not been overwhelming, however. Residents expressed hope that screens would be put on the windows eventually to eliminate the problem which can become more acute as the weather becomes warmer.

Director of Booth dormitory, Charles Fisher, told the Daily Orange Thursday he has not received any complaints about bugs in the rooms.

Fisher explained the bugs are a natural part of any new building. "Eggs were probably left in the building during its construction in the summer and hatched when the heat was turned on at the completion of the building," he hypothesized.

Other complaints such as rough-moving doors, ill-fitting drawers and keys which do not open their intended doors were explained by Fisher as a normal part of breaking in a new dormitory.

"We have had a lot of repairs and more need to be and will be made," he observed. "Construction has not been fully completed and the university will not accept the construction contract until all of these repairs are finished."

With the sound of the still uncloseted phones ringing in their ears and the din of noise echoing through the painted cinder block walls, most residents agreed that compared with their old living center Booth is "paradise revisited."

Fiesta Tonight

Armando Joaquin Protto, president of the Hispanic-American Student's Assn., has invited all South American, Central American, Spanish and Mexican students to a welcome party.

In the form of a fiesta the party will be held at 7:30 p.m. tonight at the St. Thomas More Chapel, 112 Walnut Pl.

Professor's Book Added to Series

A new volume by Dr. G. Orville Johnson, professor of special education, has been added to the Prentice Hall, Inc. psychology series edited by Arthur T. Jersild.

Entitled "Education of the Slow Learners," the book is designed to help parents, schools and communities give assistance to slow learners at elementary, primary, junior and senior high school levels.

Two of Dr. Johnson's earlier volumes in the field of special education are "The Education of the Exceptional Children and Youth," co-edited with Dr. William M. Cruikshank, director of SU's division of special education and "Educating the Retarded Child," co-authored with Dr. Samuel A. Kirk.

Larry Keating, Alan Young's next door neighbor on "Mister Ed," spent six years as next door neighbor of Burns and Allen on their show.

1963 GRADUATES!

CON EDISON WOULD LIKE TO TALK WITH YOU ABOUT WHAT YOU CAN BE DOING IN 1973

We're looking ahead 15 years, because within that period Con Edison will have about 800 top management and staff positions opening up.

Right now we can offer ambitious young college graduates unique opportunity to move to the top. We're looking for engineers...accountants... economists...math majors...and chemists who can be trained now, to be ready to move into these important posts.

Immediate prospects at Con Edison are bright, too, for the right men: good starting salary...an individually tailored training program, with interesting assignments from the start...the chance to do original, creative work in a progressive company that's pioneered many developments in the power field . . . generous financial help toward graduate studies. And all in the stimulating environment of exciting New York!

So don't miss the chance to get the low-down on this dynamic company that supplies the energy —electricity, gas and steam—that keeps New York going and growing. Talk with the Con Edison man.

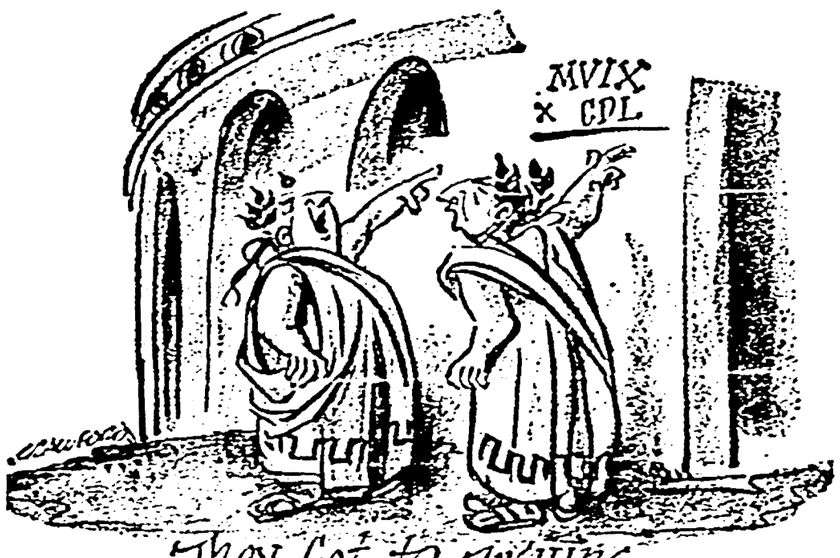
CALPURNIA, HERE I COME

Now, as the college year approaches its mid-point, one fact emerges clearly: you are all going to flunk everything.



There are two things you can do about it. First, you can marry money. (I don't mean you marry the money itself: I mean you marry a person who has money. Weddings between people and currency have not been legal anywhere in the United States since the Smoot-Hawley Act. Marlboro Cigarettes, on the other hand, are legal everywhere and are, indeed, smoked with great pleasure and enthusiasm in all fifty states of the Union. I bring up Marlboro Cigarettes because this column is sponsored by the makers of Marlboro, and they are inclined to brood if I omit to mention their product.)

But I digress. I was saying you can marry money but, of course, you will not because you are a high-minded, clean-living, pure-hearted, freckle-faced American kid. Therefore, to keep from flunking, you must try the second method: you must learn how to take lecture notes.

According to a recent survey, 123.6% of American undergraduates do not know the proper way to take lecture notes. To illustrate this shocking statistic, let us suppose you are taking a course in history. Let us further suppose the lecturer is lecturing on the ruling houses of England. You listen intently. You write diligently in your notebook, making a topic outline as you have been taught. Like this:

I. House of Plantagenet.
II. House of Lancaster.
III. House of York.

Then you stop. You put aside your pen. You blink back a tear, for you cannot go on. Oh, yes, you know very well that the next ruling house is the House of Tudor. The trouble is you don't know the Roman numeral that comes after III.

They got to arguing...

(It may, incidentally, be of some historical interest to point out that Americans are not the only people who don't know Roman numerals. The Romans didn't know them themselves. I suppose they could tell you how much V or X were or like that, but when it came to real cuties like LXI or MMC, they just flang away their styluses and went downtown to have a bath and take in a circus and maybe stab Caesar a few times.

(You may wonder why Rome stuck with these ridiculous numerals when the Arabs had such a nice, simple system. Well sir, the fact is that the Emperor Vespasian tried like crazy to buy the Arabic numerals from Suleiman the Magnificent, but Suleiman wouldn't do business—not even when Vespasian raised his bid to 100,000 gold piastres, plus he offered to throw in the Colosseum, the Appian Way, and Charlton Heston.

(So Rome stuck with Roman numerals—to its sorrow, as it turned out. One day in the Forum, Cicero and Pliny got to arguing about how much is CDL times MVIX. Well sir, pretty soon everyone in town came around to join the hassle. In all the excitement, nobody remembered to lock the north gate and —wham!—before you could say pecca fortiter, in rushed the Goths, the Visigoths, and the Green Bay Packers!)

Well sir, that's the way the empire crumbles, and I digress. Let's get back to lecture notes. Let's also say a word about Marlboro Cigarettes. The makers would be so pleased! And is it not fitting that we should please these honest tobacconists—these fine men, fond of square dancing, water sports, protein, and tattoos—these tireless perfectionists who spend all of their days trying to please us—searching everywhere for the best of all possible tobaccos, aging them with patience, blending them with tender, loving care? Marlboros are available in soft pack and flip top box. You will find XX cigarettes in each package.

rushes, even if they did not make a 1.0 average. They may not sign up for formal rush, however.

Rushees must rush within their group and are liable for ineligibitity for pledging if they do not rush within a group on an assigned night.

Sorority rush will resume this weekend with two days of informal parties for Plan A, Plan B and Plan C.

Plan A (Christian tradition) rushees will attend six parties on Saturday and six on Sunday, from 1 to 4:50 p.m. each day.

Plan B (Jewish tradition) rushees will attend six parties over the two-day period from 1 to 3:30 p.m. each day. Rushees in this group may attend parties in any combination; however, they may not attend more than four parties on any one of the days.

Plan C (cross rush) coeds will visit twelve houses over the two days from 1 to 4:50 p.m.

Attire for these parties will be dresses and heels.

At present each college has its own academic dishonesty committee, but according to Cope the university is now considering establishing a university - wide committee.

Dean Karl Vogt of the College of Business Administration has told the Daily Orange that evidence of academic dishonesty in his college will soon be released.

Dean Cope said that the intensified battle against dishonesty over the past three years has apparently been effective with half the number of cases being reported this year as compared to previous years. "We think the ambitious honest student ought to have the advantage over the dishonest student, not the other way around," he said.

Student Union Activities Begin

Student Union activities resume in the Women's Building tonight with showing of "The Five Pennies," which stars Danny Kaye, Louis Armstrong and Barbara BelGeddes.

The showings will be at 6:30 and 9 p.m. boasts nearly 200 chapters, the largest number of any U. S. social fraternity. They include several in Canada.

During the one year probationary period the house was intensively surveyed by national officers and field men who made visits every month. The chapter was also required to have 30 undergraduate members, an active building fund, a functional bylaws and constitution, local alumni support, a revamped financial structure and an active alumni housing corporation. Most of these needs had been filled at the start of the beginning of the probationary status.

Alumni

Alumni of the two locals back to 1909 are retroactively eligible for membership in the international house. They may be initiated at the local house or any one in the country.

The official initiation banquet was held at LeMoyne Manor Feb. 2, followed by a ball at the Hotel Onondaga. At the banquet Dean of Men Earle W. Clifford was presented with a copy of the Golden Book of Tau Kappa Epsilon for the university library. A congratulatory plaque was presented to the local chapter by Mr. and Mrs. Carl Sorenson. He is marshall street Balfour dealer.

In accordance with a Teke tradition, Fred B. Hershey, vice president and founder of the chapter, accepted the golden horseshoe presented to the youngest chapter.

The present brotherhood of 31 members have lived in their chapter house at 111 College Pl. since 1929.

Standards Board Chairman Ula Wiltse told the Daily Orange that the case would be discussed at the next meeting.

One of the coeds involved, a freshman, has already left school voluntarily, Dean Smith said.

"The case is directly opposed to the spirit and the policy of the Syracuse University regulations," Dean Clifford commented. Not only was the party unregistered and in violation of the university's drinking policy, it was also a violation of a special curfew given for the Kimmel Christmas formal, he continued.

The coeds in question signed out for 2 a.m. permissions for the Kimmel dance, but instead attended the hotel party.

HILL UPSETS NIAGARA!

LaSalle Invades Manley Saturday

By MARK DIAMOND

Utilizing a tight defense and clutch offensive performances by Jim Seaman and Phil Schoff, Syracuse pulled off one of the year's most startling upsets, edging nationally-ranked Niagara, 68-67, last night before 2,165 screaming fans at the fieldhouse.

The Orangemen frittered away an early 12-3 lead but were continually able to come up with the big play when the Purple Eagles threatened.

Syracuse's zone, which completely bottled up high scoring Joe Maddrey until the closing minutes, was also effective in triggering several fast breaks.

Coach Fred Lewis called this one of the keys to victory, since Niagara was often caught getting back too slowly on defense.

Paced by Seaman's 17 tallies, Syracuse led 38-33 at halftime. The Hillmen were 17 for 38 from the floor. Niagara, while holding a 28-21 rebounding advantage, only shot 12 for 36 in the first half.

As the second half began the visitors scored six straight points to lead 40-38. Schoff hit on three jump shots with captain Herb Foster adding two lay ups but Niagara hung on.

Andy O'Connell, Bill Wrench and Ken Glenn kept Niagara close. Foster then added two more baskets giving Syracuse its largest lead of the half, 55-49. Glenn and Tom Lemky countered this with baskets.

The last six minutes of play were tension-ridden and kept the crowd in a constant uproar.

Schoff then hit two straight shots, restoring the lead to six points. Niagara was able to penetrate the middle for the first time in the game. Maddrey broke clear for three layups while O'Connell and Glenn each added one apiece.

With Seaman and Carl Vernick connecting, Syracuse maintained a 67-63 lead with two minutes left. Glenn then drove through to make it 67-65 as 58 seconds showed on the clock.

After a Syracuse timeout Seaman was fouled and as the excited crowd hushed, he calmly sank the free throw. Glenn's last second basket was meaningless and Syracuse won the game 68-67.

While Syracuse has been a fine home team all year, winning five of seven, Niagara was expected to be much too tough for the young Orangemen to handle. Only last Saturday Niagara had lost their only game of the season to Providence.

Seaman and Schoff led the attack with 24 and 20 points respectively. Foster had 13. Glenn was Niagara's big man with 21 points and 23 rebounds.

Tomorrow night Syracuse faces a tough LaSalle squad. The Explorers, with a 12-3 record, have four men in double figures: Frank Corace, Bill Raftery, George Sutor and Tony Abbott.

Fencers Face Penn Saturday

The Orange fencers, losing two and winning one during the intersession, put their 2-3 record on the line against Penn State Saturday at 1 at Archbold Gym.

The first loss came at the hands of Eastern Power Cornell Jan. 12 at Ithaca, 17-10. The locals were in the meet all the way losing three bouts only by a single point.

Sabreman Stu Hollander paced the varsity winning his three bouts. He handed Big Red star Szerenyi his first defeat of the season.

Other scorers for the varsity were epeemen Bill Wandemacher, Duane Harrington and Marv Stone; foilers Marty Cohen, Harvey Schuman and Les Mononstory; and sabreman Marty Dako.

Coach Alex Dako praised his freshman squad for its fine performance in nipping the Cornell frosh, 15-9. Barry Kliger swept five bouts while Dennis Lambert won four of five.

Other frosh scorers were Klint Wigren, Bill Shell and Tony Berkman, who had three, two and one victories respectively.

The fencers won their next match, defeating Utica College, 19-8, on Jan. 16 at Syracuse. The injury - riddled Orangemen were without the services of Marty Dako after he had won his first bout while epeeman Bill Wandemacher was forced to fence righthanded for the first time because of a blister.

Ailing Bing Leads 82-70 Frosh Win

By JUDY ADAMS

"Dave Bing is sick?

"If this is how he plays when he is sick, what does he do when he's well?"

This was the general feeling of the Niagara frosh coach and his squad after they were trounced by the Syracuse cubs last night, 85-70.

Just what did Bing do? Only tallied 24 points to lead the scoring; grabbed 12 rebounds—one behind leader Dick Ableman; and completely dazzled the visitors and fans with his acrobatics — complete with a swing on the hoop. And he sat out nearly 10 minutes of the game.

Coach Morris Osburn thought it wiser to save Dave for the rugged schedule they must face in these three days. After tonight's tussle with Niagara, he takes his boys to revisit Cornell tonight, while the varsity stays home.

Then tomorrow in the LaSalle preliminary, they entertain a group from Maroon Ford. The Maroon Ford boys headline a player who should be familiar to Syracuse basketball fans, one of SU's greatest—Pete Chudy.

In last night's battle, Bing quickly dispelled any fears that he might sit it out. He initiated the scoring, pacing his team with 16 points in the first half as Syracuse easily moved out in front.

But the big story is told under the boards. Niagara came away with 35 rebounds while Syracuse pulled down 68, almost double the visitors' total.

Orange Meet Pitt Swimmers

The Orange mermen put their chances for the Eastern swimming championship on the line Saturday when they travel to Pittsburgh to tangle with a strong Panther squad.

Syracuse Coach Ted Webster feels that the Pitt meet could be the toughest of the current campaign. "They have a small team," he asserts, "but they're not short on quality performers."

The Panthers were most impressive in defeating Princeton, the defending Eastern swimming champs, early this year.

Syracuse owns victories over NYU, Buffalo, Lehigh and Cortland, with a single loss coming at the hands of Cornell. The Hill swimmers conquered Cortland, 68-27, in their last outing.

Pittsburgh is paced by Ron and Rob Levine, both fine all-around swimmers. Other top Panther mermen include free - stylers Reed, Shanahan, Ribochick and Patterson; distance man Steve Ganong; Sollinger in the backstroke and Coleman in the diving competition.

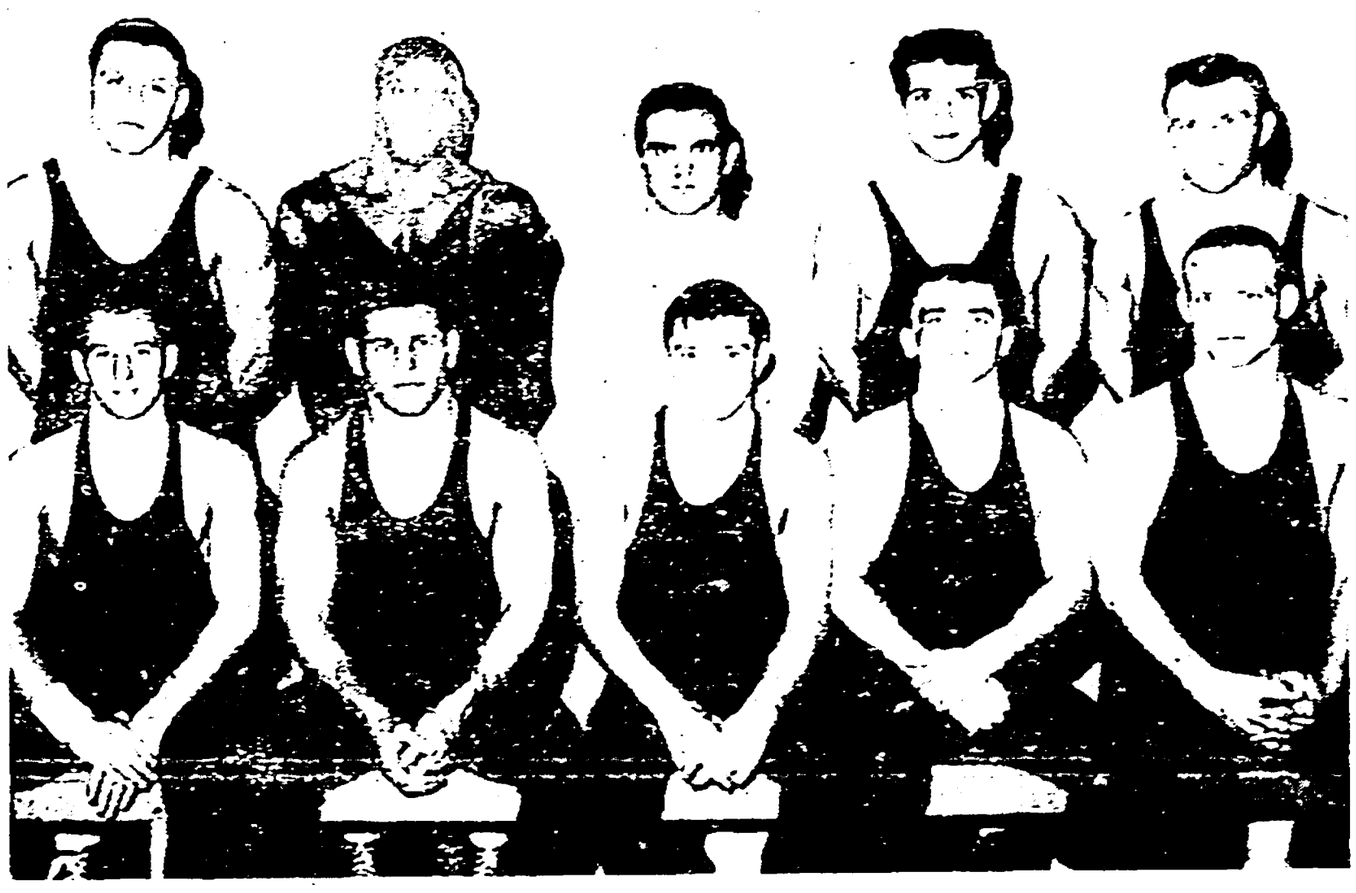
Among the strongest Orange performers are senior Jeff Meyer in the 50 and 100-yard freestyle; Tom Watts in the 200-yard freestyle; and Joe Morrison in the 500-yard freestyle.

Wrestlers Seek 7th Win at Cornell

Coach Joe Scandura's football-studded wrestling squad will journey to Ithaca tomorrow to face Cornell. The undefeated matmen will seek their seventh consecutive win en route to a shot at the Eastern Championship.

Fresh from an impressive victory over Army's Black Knights the squad is paced by gridders Jim Nance and Gerry Everling. Against Army, Everling produced the meet's first pin, dropping Cadet Vaughan. Heavyweight Nance used a double arm bar to pin Cordan. Both Nance and Everling are undefeated in wrestling competition this year.

Other standouts on this season's squad have been 123-pound sophomore Terry Haise, undefeated senior Bethel Greenhalgh, and Gary Sirota, Dick Slutsky, Jim Murrin, Gary Reidner and Lou Roberts have also proved valuable to the Orange title-contending squad.



Cornell coach John Miller boasts, while not an exceptionally outstanding team, a strong, well squad. Peter Cummings and Jim Meldum have paced the Big Red to a 7-4 record so far this season. Cummings is 9-0 in his 167-pound class, and Meldum has an impressive 7-2 slate in the 130-pound class.

Other Cornell grapplers who will be seeing action against the Hill are: Naef Orr, 123; Tom Jones, 137; Carl Capra, 147; Dennis Makarainen, 157; Robert Bogenrief, 177; Keith Olon, 177; and heavyweight Joe Bruchac.

The Big Red have defeated Rochester Tech, Yale, Penn, Harvard, Colgate, Winneta State of Minnesota, and Cornell of Iowa. Miller's squad dropped meets to Springfield, Lehigh, Penn State, and in a close match was beaten by Iowa State.

Before defeating Army the Orange sunk the Midshipmen of Navy, 20-10. In earlier matches they whipped Lehigh, Ithaca College, Pittsburgh, and copped the Coast Guard Invitational Tournament early in December.

The Piety squad will still have to outwrestle Penn State, Colgate and Cortland to maintain an unblemished record if they beat Cornell. The Intercollegiate Wrestling Championships will be held at Annapolis March 8-9.

Queen for a Weekend

Plans Set for Winter Weekend: 'Warmer', Stockingfoot, Concert

By CISSY POSSELT

Committee chairmen of the 1963 Winter Weekend met Thursday night at Delta Upsilon fraternity and released plans for the weekend, which runs from Feb. 22-24.

Highlights of the weekend, announced by overall chairmen Rosalee Comer and Richard VanWinkle, will be a "Warmer" and afternoon sports on Saturday, the Peter, Paul and Mary concert on Sunday, and the annual Stockingfoot Dance on Friday night.

There will also be a traditional snow sculpture contest. The theme for the contest is "No Biz Like Snow Biz," with musical comedy the theme for sculptures. Sculptures can be colored and will be judged on Friday afternoon. There will be three awards.

Warmer

The free-admission Warmer, beginning a new tradition at SU, will be held on Saturday afternoon at Drumlins Country Club. Busses will run from Slocum Hall between 1:00 and 1:30 p.m. on Saturday and will return between 4:00 and 4:15 p.m.

An outdoor campfire and jazz band at Drumlins will highlight the Warmer, and students can ski, watch the skiing competition or slide on the slopes. Snacks will also be served.

The State Fair Coliseum will

SU Receives 27 NDEA Grad Aids

By DANIEL RITEY

Syracuse University is the recipient of 27 National Defense Education Act graduate scholarships, according to SU Vice President for academic affairs Frank P. Piskor.

Piskor cited the total of 27 fellowships for Syracuse as "a most unusual number of awards." This total tied SU with Cornell for second highest in the country, behind the University

Piskor described these Title 4 (a branch of the NDEA program) scholarships as "an allocation of money to the university to select students in their first year of graduate work."

Current seniors can apply for these fellowships at the graduate office, 101 Slocum, or can discuss them with the various graduate departments, Piskor said. "Whether or not a student receives a fellowship will depend upon the standards of his particular department," he added.

General Average

Although certain selection criteria will very with the departments, a general average of over 2.0 will be required, the vice president noted.

"The aim of this scholarship money is to provide College professors of the future," Piskor continued. "The candidates must want to pursue their studies to the doctoral level; they cannot stop after a master's degree," he said.

A total of 1500 grants were awarded to 535 different colleges and universities, pointing up the extent of the search for future college teachers.

"While attending the graduate school, the scholarship candidate will be expected to maintain a quality record—usually A's—in order to keep his fellowship stipends," the SU administrator remarked.

Three Year Plan

"In the first graduate year, the student receives approximately $2000," Piskor said. "For the second year this is increased by $200 and for the third year, an additional $200."

"Thus, this NDEA grant is

Acacia To Join Gray's GIA; 7th Member

By ANDY PORTE

Acacia fraternity has applied for membership in the Greek Independent Alliance, a campus political party, GIA President James Gray (Theta Chi) announced Friday.

Acacia becomes the seventh member of the party. It had been a member of Campus Alliance Party, but withdrew in March of 1962.

Gray said the application will almost certainly be approved.

Gary Rehm, Acacia political representative, said "GIA will provide the proper guidance needed in student government while encouraging independent thought and action in campus affairs."

RA Off to Africa For School Post

By HOWIE GINSBURG

A DellPlain Hall resident adviser has accepted an offer to coordinate an educational program in Masaka, Uganda, East Africa.

Richard C. Drinon, from Boston, Mass., leaves for Masaka, February 15. The program will result in the first non-mission, non-governmental school in Masaka, according to Drinon.

"The Africans have already built the buildings and we are ready to do our part," the R.A. said. Accompanying Drinon will be one teacher from Ohio and one from Boston.

Drinon, an anthropology expert, will be working with a native African as the directors of the project.

Culture

"We will try to create a school concerned with African culture rather than imitating English or American education," Drinon said.

The tuition for missionary schools is too high for many of the Africans. According to Drinon, the nominal fees to be charged in the private school he is heading will not offer this problem.

"Eventually we hope to add a medical clinic, a child-care center and a technical assistance center, he said.

The program is being co-sponsored by the Unitarian-Universalist World Service Organization and the Mugobamasa Organization. They are staffing the school and giving books to the program, according to Drinon.

Drinon earned his undergraduate degree at St. Lawrence University and then received his Master's in philosophy at Tufts University. He is working for his doctorate at Syracuse and will be gathering data for this program at Masaka.

Drinon, a member of the Arbeiterwohlfahrt, an arm of the Social Democratic Party, worked as supervisor of American students working in refugee camps in Germany for two years.

Drinon expects to return to Syracuse to complete his doctorate work next year or the year after, depending on the success of the project.

He was instrumental in exposing the American Nazi Party along the North Shore of Massachusetts a few years ago.

FRATERNITIES: NO COOKIE PRO!

Contrary to the beliefs of IFC rushing chairmen Michael Steinberg (Sigma Alpha Mu), there will be no "cookie probation" for a number of Hill fraternities.

During the first rush session Wednesday, Steinberg censured several houses for serving cookies or brownies to freshmen during rush. This is definitely not a violation of the rushing rules, Fraternity Administrator James P. McMurray told the Daily Orange Thursday.

Student Singers In Concert Run By Bookstore

By JOHN E. GREENWALD
Entertainment Editor

The Syracuse University bookstore is going into the entertainment business via the folk music route.

The Bookstore, under manager Burton Fink, is sponsoring a concert Friday, March 8, at the Regent Theater featuring popular folk singer Oscar Brand and student folk singers.

Tickets will be distributed free to students at the Corner Store branch of the bookstore at a date to be announced.

The Corner Store plays an important part in the Brand promotion, Fink said, since he hopes the store will become the folk music headquarters of Syracuse.

Auditions for the student part of the concert are 2-4 p.m. Friday, Feb. 15, 108 Crouse College. A panel, tentatively con-

DeGaulle's Folly

In Friday's editorial we puzzled over the fact that in recent weeks a basic concept of the Cold War balance of power has undergone some harrowing moments. The traditional Western bloc versus Communist bloc set-up has been faced with internal strife and disagreement.

We also pondered how this will affect the balance of power in the world as it relates to the strength of these two tremendously powerful alliances.

Today we begin to get down to specifics and turn to the biggest crack in the solid wall of Western unity —France. The issue which has placed Charles DeGaulle in such a bad light in the rest of the NATO countries, in particular, has been his veto of Great Britain's application for membership in the European Economic Community (Common Market).

But the independence of DeGaulle and his disregard for the welfare of the Atlantic community started long before the infamous day in Brussels at the end of last month.

For, prior to that DeGaulle had refused point blank to allow NATO (American-manned) missiles to be located on French territory. He declared that France was a sovereign nation and would establish its own bases for defense of its own land.

So we see that DeGaulle has placed both economic and military obstacles in the path of the Western alliance. But, of course, we have been hearing mostly one side of the story—our side—and we should stop to consider the possible motives of DeGaulle.

Firstly, DeGaulle is one of the great French patriots. The people of France respect him and regard him with a type of reverence usually reserved for dictators and movie stars.

And despite what other reports might say about DeGaulle's feelings toward himself, we feel that he loves France first and that all his actions are based on this nationalistic love for the country which he saw nearly collapse in the Second World War.

Because France's political and military power, not to mention its economy, was at such a low ebb during and after the war, it is understandable that DeGaulle and the French people welcomed their recent opportunity to play a major role in the affairs of Europe once more.

Not only that but France has the economic level and the political stability once again to exercise its strength.

Nevertheless, DeGaulle seems to base his actions too much on the past and is basking too much in this brief moment of glory for his beloved land.

For the facts of world politics have changed since World War II, as we have noted, and no amount of dreaming can change those facts. A sovereign France, trying to dominate Europe and face the world as a single power, doesn't have a chance for survival in the modern world.

France needs the collective military might of NATO and any notions DeGaulle may have to the contrary are just unrealistic in this world.

Economically, France has erred greatly in keeping Great Britain out of the Common Market. The actions of DeGaule on this point are even more unrealistic than his military actions.

One reason for that is the fact that France seems to ignore the tremendous potential of West Germany. This nation will, if the trends continue the way they have been going, be the most powerful nation in Europe in terms of economy.

For DeGaulle to ignore this and dream that France can be the one strong nation in the EEC is again irrational. There is no room in this type of supranational community for one dominant nation and so the entrance of Great Britain would serve to balance power among the three strongest nations in Europe—Great Britain, West Germany and France.

The road to sovereignty in this nuclear era is a dead-end. DeGaulle must be convinced of his folly and turned toward the path of a strong alliance—the only way to possible peace.

TREVER ON CAMPUS

"We have the highest average on campus—82% pinned!"

ALTERNATIVES

Is There Another Way?

By Ron Corwin

And the rich get richer . . . ad nauseum.

Scattered throughout the campus in various locations are rather ominous signs. Placards dressed in bright colors announce the annual Book Award for undergraduates. For those who have not noticed these signs (it is almost inconceivable that the announcement could not attract attention) a brief explanation and discussion follows.

In the freshman category, for instance, the brouchure states that, "Thorugh the generosity of David A. Fraser, Syracuse attorney, book collector and trustee of Syracuse University Library Associates, a prize of $25 will be awarded to the Syracuse University freshman whose personal collection of books is adjudged the best."

Awards are similar in nature for the sophomores, juniors and seniors except that the award size increases with increasing class status. A senior, therefore, is eligible for a $100 award — a pleasant gift.

So what's the gripe? Essentially this: If my fate dictated that my father were John D. Rockefeller then I would have the best book collection on campus. Not necessarily, you say. All right, "not necessarily," but a distinct possibility nevertheless.

And if my father were in the lower socio-economic class and I had to work my way through school and sell any books which I had accumulated in order to meet my tuition demands and if I really needed the money, well then my chances of winning the prize are virtually eliminated.

What to do then? It is no indictment to recognize excellence in any area — especially in the area of collecting books. It would seem that recogintion alone should be enough — if such are the rewards demanded by the individual who achieves. What I would propose then is an alternative to the present system.

Honor the book collectors at the Scholastic Achievement Convocation as is planned. But instead of giving them money just note their excellence. Instead direct the money where it is needed. I would propose giving the money to the student with the worst book collection with the stipulation that he buy books with the award.

Then two things would be accomplished. First the student who had the best book collection for his class would be recognized. Second, some student who up until that time had not collected books would be launched on a new and possibly exciting area of interest.

Possibly there would be a third accomplishment of this re-directing of the awards. It might show in some little and probably barely discernable way that fantastic wheel which invariably grinds the people who are trying to "get it" into the dust.

As was dutifully suggested to me when I proposed the ideas (buried) in this column, "Be realistic and face it. This kind of economic discrimination is at the basis of most contests." Good girl!

To the Editor:

Research Assistants (1) who are candidates for advanced degrees and (2) who are paid for performing research which is part of a degree requirement and (3) whose research is equivalent to that required of all other candidates for the same degree may be eligible for income tax refunds.

The basis for claims is two Federal Tax Court cases:

Chander P. Bhalla, Docket No. 83128, October 7, 1960, Opinion by Judge Pierce, Reference 35 TC No. 3.

Grace Marnor Spruch, Docket No. 75637, March 6, 1961, Opinion by Judge Murdock, Reference 61,063 TC Memo. 1961-63.

Section 117 is the pertinent section from the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. New York State tax liability is governed by Federal tax liability.

Claims should be filed on Federal Form 843 and New York State Form IT 113 for past years. A two year statute of limitations exists for New York State Income Tax claims while claims for the last three years will be considered by the Federal Internal Revenue Service. April 15, 1963, would be the last date on which one could file for 1959 Federal Income Tax.

At this time I know of no claims that have been actually paid in Syracuse though many are in "suspense." If anyone has direct knowledge of a Federal case that has been claimed and paid through the Syracuse District Office on the basis of the above cases I would appreciate hearing of it (x-2588). Such information might allow the University to take some more direct action on behalf of claimants.

Sincerely yours,
John A. Hofland,
Graduate Student.

Infirmary

To the Editor:

I feel that the views on the Syracuse University Infirmary put forth in today's (Feb. 6) D. O. by the residents of Lima Cottage are nothing but grossly distorted opinions.

For the past five days I have been a patient in the Infirmary and have received the finest and most conscientious attention imaginable. I sincerely thank the doctors and nurses of the Health Service for speeding my recovery.

Name Withheld.

POLICY ON LETTERS

The Daily Orange invites, and even urges, the expression of opinion on the part of its readers. The editors make a sincere effort to publish as many letters as possible, but space and the illegible condition in which some letters are received eliminate several from consideration.

THEATER

'Beggar's Opera' Revisited

Though the egg "The Beggar's Opera" laid opening (Wednesday) night had been swept away by Friday's performance the pieces still remain.

The play has been shortened, cut and tightened. It has neither the boredom nor the jerky pacing that plagued it opening night. The performances have been strengthened; the musical numbers now have more time (relatively) to spread their joy; the story line manages to carry the action with greater clarity; and the humor, though more brittle than biting, is half-way effective.

The acting is still, for the most part, top notch, with Pete Maloney (as Peechum), Jean Slentz (as Mrs. Peachum), Bonnie Bradt (as Polly), Paul Dieke (as Lockit), Karen Faulkner (as Lucy), and Esen Wiegand (as the Beggar) getting better with age.

If Bill Harris's Macheath seems more stiff than regal at times, and Macheath's gang appears more scrawny than brawny, these are minor complaints.

Our major complaints rest with Ben Shaktman, the director of "The Beggar's Opera". By tightening the production he has made it more enjoyable and satisfying. He has not, though, made it any more comprehensible.

What is "Beggar's Opera" all about? If Mr. Shaktman imagines it to be a parody of society's more "successful" and honored people he communicates such an idea quite feebly. He does have caricatures of today's world leaders, and Peachum reads the Wall Street Journal. But these are merely gimmicks and cannot serve as the meat of an overall concept.

If Mr. Shaktman hopes to prove these members of "the bowels of London" no better than the rest of us, he fails again. There is only one beggar in the production, with Peachum, Lockit and Macheath all well-dressed, possessing accoutrements of respectability.

The Beggar's opening lines suggest we are about to see a play performed by beggars. Yet Pete Maloney plays a bookkeeper thief. He is not playing a beggar portraying a bookkeeper thief. Similarily Leslie Meek plays a high-spirited prostitute and not a beggar uncomfortable in petticoats and lace.

Mr. Shaktman seems to have lost John Gay's overall satiric comment that society, high and low, is all the same. If he has tried to do this through specific line readings he has also failed. In this age of Lenny Bruce and H. L. Mencken, Gay's dialogue, as delivered on the Coronet stage, is, for the most part, neither acid nor biting.

Not that Mr. Shaktman is without ability. When the play requires scenes of tragedy, pathos, and stark, unimbellished power, such as the parting duet of Polly and Macheath and Macheath's capture at the tavern, he directs in a subtle but telling style. The scenes with Peachum and Lockit are strongly acted moments of men in conflict.

But when the play seems to require bowdy and boisterous effects, as in the highwaymen and prostitute scenes, Mr. Shaktman appears hesitant.

When one wants power and drama, Mr. Shaktman man delivers. When one wants humor, whether it be low slapstick or high comedy, Mr. Shaktman seems afraid to let loose, with the exception of the motion picture sequence.

For us, "The Beggar's Opera" was ultimately unsuccessful because, for all its qualities, we could not detect any overall theme that could hold the play together.

JEG

Peter, Paul and Mary

Despite their short association together the popular folk singing group of Peter, Paul and Mary have had considerable success, including two best selling albums, appearances at the Bitter End cafe in New York, Miami's Lamb's Club, and hungry "i" in San Francisco, and guest shots on the "Today Show" and "P. M East."

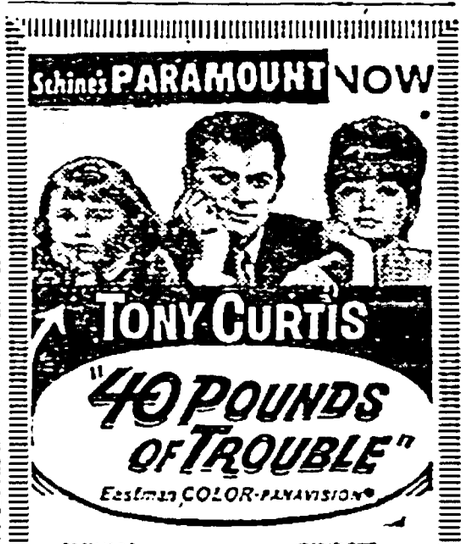
The group will give a concert Sunday, Feb. 24, at the Onondaga War Memorial as part of Winter Weekend.

"We are a cosmopolitan group" says Cornell graduate Peter Yarrow, "It would be dishonest for us to imitate the folk singing style of any particular ethnic group. But our urban background is an asset. We can present in a modern musical from the feelings of many ethnic groups, and do it with integrity."

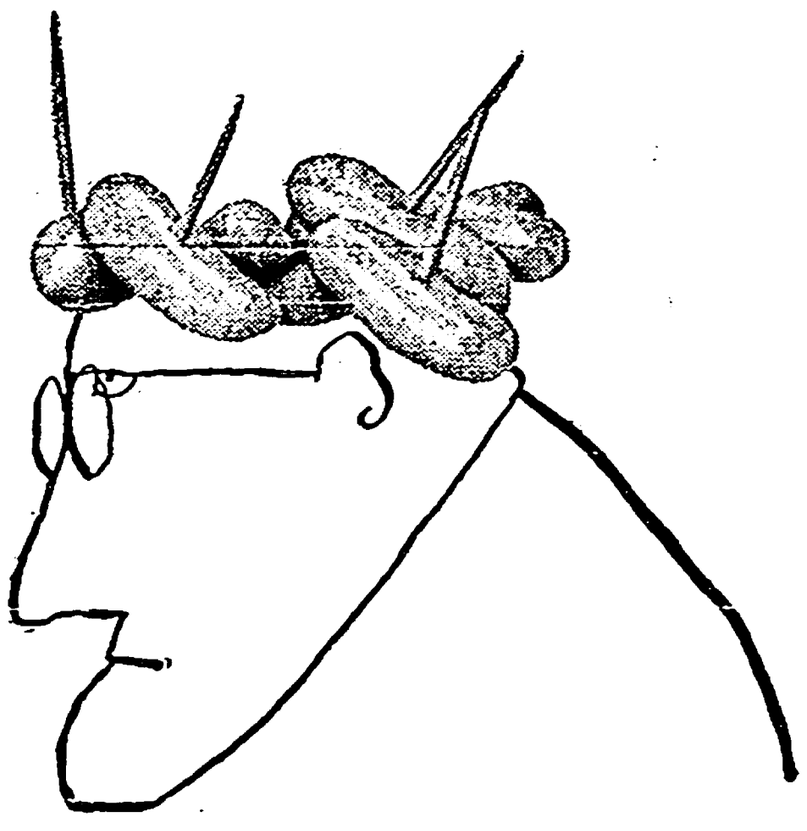
Mary Allin Travers was born in Louisville, Ky. and Paul Stookey grew up in Birmingham, Mich., before they converged on Peter's native New York City.

Life-long interests in folk music led all three to Greenwich Village were All Grossman, manager of Odetta, put them together as a trio. Peter was appearing as a single after his own successful tour that included the Newport Folk Festival, 1969, the Gare of Horn in Chicago, and the Ash Grove in Los Angeles.

Paul was doing stand - up comic routines in the village, "a lot of sound effects with virtually no plot." He was also helping Mary get back on her feet as a singer after going down with Mort Sahl in a Broadway flop, "The Next President."



The group spent seven months working up their initial repertoire of 18 numbers with the help of Milton Okum (formerly with Harry Belafonte) to polish their arrangements.



The group has regular talk sessions as strenuous as their rehearsals, in which they try to reach a song's philosophic implications before translating it musically.

Since their musical education has been more "creative," than formal, they achieved an instinct for surpassing without breaking rules. In these "crucible" sessions they strike a balance between Peter, who is never satisfied, and Paul's eagerness for new material.

As for Mary, "I do the unexpected," she says.

Five SU Grads Get Army Bars

Five Syracuse University graduates were commissioned Second Lieutenants in the Army. Receiving their Lieutenant's bars were Eugene F. Farabaugh of Northport, New York; Brian P. Howard of Amityville, New York; Jeffrey L. Scribner of Gloversville, New York; Burton L. Tornstrom of Jamestown; and Ronald F. Vincent of Syracuse.

Ceremonies were conducted in Maxwell Auditorium by Lt. Col. Raymond C. Wittmayer, professor of military science, and Frederick J. Kramer, associate dean of the College of Liberal Arts.

The five new Army officers were commissioned in branches of their choice and will report to active duty during the year 1963.

How far can your ideas take you in the new world of opportunity in data processing at IBM?

Growth and discovery: The development and application of data processing at IBM open a new world of exciting opportunities for individual career growth. Data processing is producing some of the most far-reaching developments of our age. Each basic advance in technology and application requires new concepts. Ideas—new thinking and new ways to approach problems—are needed. For the individual who likes to discard conventional solutions and find new ideas, there's room to grow in IBM.

IBM offers graduates with Bachelor's or advanced degrees in Engineering, the Sciences, Business Administration, Economics, or Liberal Arts challenging assignments in the marketing of information systems and equipment. These opportunities increase with each new system that is designed to meet the growing needs of business, industry, government, research, education, and space. Each technological advance and each new application can enlarge the scope of your own career at IBM.

A wide range of positions: Rewarding opportunities will exist in more than 190 IBM Sales and Service Offices, located in major cities throughout the United States. Positions open include:

Marketing-Sales: The IBM Data Processing Representative is a consultant to his customers. He calls on customer executives, giving timely information, presentations, and demonstrations for better business management and controls through data processing.

Systems Engineering: IBM Data Processing Systems Engineers are men and women who study customer requirements in depth, devise the best approach, define a preferred machine and operational solution, and assist in the implementation of this solution.

Customer Engineering: The IBM Customer Engineer is a specialist in precision data processing machines and systems. He is responsible for the installation, maintenance, and functioning of IBM's vast line of electronic and electromechanical equipment.

Opportunities for advancement: IBM offers you extensive initial training, both in the classroom and on the job, in the area of your special interest. This training continues as you advance along a planned career path leading to professional or managerial positions. IBM also offers company-sponsored education programs to keep you abreast of developments in your field, and a tuition-refund plan to give you financial assistance for graduate study.

Company-paid employee benefit plans are comprehensive, and include life insurance, family hospitalization and major-medical coverage, sickness and accident pay, and retirement benefits, to name but a few.

See your college placement director to determine when IBM will interview on campus, and make an appointment to see our representative. We will be glad to discuss openings and opportunities at IBM, including our training and education programs, financial rewards, and company benefits. IBM is an Equal Opportunity Employer.

GIA . . .

Rehm added "GIA promises to provide a year round political party rather than a group gathered together to nominate people selected by a favorite few."

He said Acacia withdrew from CAP "because the party failed to represent properly the smaller houses on campus and was apparently controlled by power factions representing select interests."

Acacia, with an active brotherhood of 22, is one of the smaller houses on campus. No member of Acacia has run for campus office in the past four years.

Other GIA members are Theta Chi and Tau Kappa Epsilon Fraternities and Alpha Delta Pi, Lambda Psi, Alpha Sigma Tau and Phi Mu Sororities.

of Oregon's 28 awards.

Syracuse's awards were in the field of English language literature (3); economics (3); political science (3); comparative education, studies of educational systems here and abroad (3); chemical engineering (3) and educational media, botany and educational psychology testing (four each).

Piskor pointed out that the economics and political science awards were unusual in that "they provided the students with at least one semester of study overseas."

Overseas Studies

"This is interesting because it relates to the concern of SU in overseas studies and it stress on education and administration abroad," he said.

"This is a popular and much sought after fellowship," Piskor noted. "Because of its highly competitive nature, usually only those who consider themselves qualified for a fellowship apply," he added.

Funk Speaks At Press Club

"The Strange Case of Idea 3:2" was the topic of a speech by Dr. Frank E. Funk, chairman of the department of public speech in the School of Speech, recently.

The speech, delivered at a dinner meeting of the New York Association of Industrial Communicators at the Overseas Press Club in Manhattan, dealt with barriers to oral communication of ideas.

Dr. Funk also compared the advantages of verbal and written communication patterns in industry.

His appearance was sponsored by the Speaker's Bureau of the National Society for the Study of Communication, of which Dr. Funk is a member.

sisting of Ian Henderson, associate professor in the School of Music and Rick Hermle, a music graduate student will pick a card of about seven students to fill half the concert. Brand will hear tapes of the auditioners and make the final choice.

Bob Thiel, of the Impulse division of ABC-Paramount records, will attend the concert which will also be taped. The tapes will be sent to record companies for possible release. The bookstore would have distribution rights in Onondaga County for any recording of the concert.

Brand will be at a reception in Watson Dormitory prior to the concert, Fink said, and may also be autographing his records and books at the Corner Store.

Goal

The goal of the concert, the guitar-playing bookstore manager explained, is to get a "theater full of people interested in folk music.

He admitted, though, he wouldn't object to a theater of people interested in the Corner Store and its selection of guitars, folk music books and magazines and records.

If the Brand concert, he said, results in increased good will for the University Bookstore, increased, business for the Corner store, and increased local interest in folk music, the expense of the concert will be justified.

Brand is probably most famous for his eight "Bawdy Songs" records. In addition he has cut over twenty other albums including "Drinking Songs," "Boating Songs," "Riddle Me This" and "Children's Concert."

Village

Currently living in New York's Greenwich Village, Brand was born 43 years ago in Winnepeg, Canada. He has worked on some 45 films, and has received the Venice, Edinburgh, Golden Reel, Valley Forge and Scholastic films awards.

He has provided scenarious, scores or narrations for movies such as Gulf Oil's "Invisible Journey," Ford's "Highway by the Sea" and Allied Chemical's "The Farmer Comes to Town."

He scripted CBS-TV's "The Gold Rush" for Agnes DeMille and has done commercials for Bardhal Oil. Brand's "Wandering Minstrel" telecasts were regular features of the Kate Smith tv show. He recently gave up his Emmy-nominated "American Treasure Chest" to write part of NBC's new children's tv series.

Some of the books Brand wrote are "Singing Holidays," "Western Guitar," "Bawdy Songs" and "The Ballad Mongers." He also is a reviewer for the Saturday Review.

Every Sunday, since 1945, Brand has presented the award winning "Folksong Festival," rebroadcast overseas by the United States Information Agency.

He has performed as singer-guitarist and actor on many tv programs. He was a soloist for Oldsmobile, Ipana, Cheerios and other advertisers. Brand also wrote the popular hit, "A Guy is a Guy."

Syracuse Scares La Salle

By JUDY ADAMS

Syracuse made a gallant try at a second major upset in as many games Saturday night, but fell short this time 74-66.

By outlasting the Orange, La Salle stretched their winning streak to 10—best in three years— and strengthened their first place positions in the Middle Atlantic Conference and Philadelphia's "Big Five".

The Explorers are now 14-3. Syracuse is 6-9.

In 1960 La Salle had reeled off nine straight wins before the Orangemen stopped them in an overtime thriller.

For much of Saturdays' game, it looked as though Syracuse was aiming for a repeat of their 1960 performance. It wasn't until the third quarter was nearly gone that La Salle caught fire and subdued their shorter hosts.

Although the Orange passing and shooting fell off in the waning minutes, it was La Salle's overwhelming height advantage that stopped them in their quest for another upset. The starting Explorer squad had over two inches per man on their hosts. They had little trouble in pulling down 64 rebounds. Syracuse nearly held their own with 47.

La Salle led most of the way in the first half, but the underdog Orangemen kept pace with the Explorers, although once they were down by as much as seven.

The Orange managed to pull ahead for the first time, 16-14, at the ten minute mark on two field goals and a free throw. With a crowd of 2,220 hollering for more, Syracuse struggled to hold on to their slim margin, but a basket by George Sutor tied it up.

Manny Klutchkowski put the Orangemen in front again when he sank two free throws. La Salle followed with scores by Walt Sampson and Tony Abbot to regain their lead.

A free throw by Phil Schoff and a jump shot by Jim Seaman put Syracuse in the lead once more, 21-20, but it was for the last time.

La Salle spurted, building up a 28-21 margin. Then just when it looked as though Syracuse was coming apart at the seams, they tightened up again and in the last three minutes pulled within a point of the Explorers. A La Salle free throw ended the half with the Orange down only 33-31.

Phil Schoff tied up the game with one of his corner throws in the opening minutes of the second half. La Salle then spent the next six minutes fashioning a six-point lead before Syracuse came on strong again to narrow it to 44-42.

Then the roof fell in. In the six minutes that followed, La Salle poured in 15 points. Syracuse could manage only three. Although the Orange pulled within six points again with a minute remaining, they couldn't make it up and finished 74-66.

Jim Seaman was the top man for Syracuse for the third game in a row, with 19. Schoff had 11 and Herb Foster 10.

Foster, in addition was suffering with a badly-bruised hip. "He could hardly walk this morning," explained Lewis after the game.

"But that 34, that Abbot really hurt us."

It was Abbot and Bill Raftery who sparked La Salle's second half surge, combining for 29 points. Raftery led the scorers with 21. Abbot was right behind him with 20.

"It was hard to get the boys in shape," Lewis went on, "they took an awful physical beating in Thursday's game. And after beating Niagara, it wasn't easy to get up for this game.

"But still, I think we should have won."

La Salle shot a poor 27 per cent from the floor during the first half, but came back to hit 50 per cent of their shots in the last 20 minutes. This was the difference.

Walt Sampson, 6-8, whose 12 rebounds were second only to Sutor's 14, had little but praise for the hustling Orange squad.

"This Syracuse team, they've improved an awful lot since last year," he observed, "and yet they seemed to have pretty much the same material.

"And they beat Niagara," he whistled. "Boy, that must have been some game.

"They really scared us. With this frosh team, they're gonna go places next year."

Cornell, Maroone Ford Shade Ailing Frosh

By ART ROSSKY

Playing without high-scoring Norm Goldsmith for the second straight game, the Syracuse Frosh basketball team dropped its second decision in two nights, 85-82, to powerful Al Moroone Ford Saturday night at Manley Field House. Friday night the cubs dropped a 73-70 verdict to Cornell at Ithaca.

Goldsmith has been bedded by illness the last two games. Saturday night Goldsmith was joined on the sick list by starting center Dick Ableman.

Al Maroone Ford, comprised of several former college players including former Orange Ace Pete Chudy, pulled into a 25-25 deadlock at the mid-point of the opening half by continually breaking loose for easy lay-ups.

Ken Parr, U. of Buffalo alumnus, paced the automen's early offense with 13 markers as the shoting of Sam Penceal and Frank Nicoletti enabled the Tangerines to keep pace.

With 8½ minutes left in the opening half Dave Bing, playing though hampered by illness, sank a one-hander to give the cubs a 27-25 lead that stood for the next three minutes.

At the five minute mark Frank Rojek, ex-Canisius star, sank a jump shot that gave the Buffalo team a 33-32 lead.

In the closing moments of the half a seven-point string paced by Bill Washington, ex-Montana St., featured a surge that pushed the automen ito a 45-41 lead at the buzzer.

Starting the second half the shooting of Washington and Parr quickly widened the Maroone margin to eight points at 55-47.

The jump shooting of Dave Bing featured a Hill rally that cut the margin to 56-63 at the 15:20 mark.

With 11½ minutes left a Parr lay-up gave the automen a nine point edge, largest of the night, at 69-60.

In the next two minutes Bing almost single handedly cut the Maroone margin to one point at 69-68.

In chronological order Bing dropped in a lay-up, dunked the ball, and pased to Nicoletti for an easy lay-up. For good measure Bing blocked a Maroone shot.

At 4:30 Bing rifled another bullet pass to Nicoletti for an easy lay-up that deadlocked the ssore at 75.

With three minutes left a Nicoletti free throw put the Hill on top, 78-77, for the first time since the latter part of the first half.

For the next two minutes the lead changed hands several times, with Bing's scoring keeping Syracuse in contention.

At 1:07 a Chudy jump shot gave the automen the lead for good at 83-82.

Free throws by Parr and Washington in the closing seconds gave the winners "insurance" points.

Bing tallied 26 points to lead the Tangerines and bring his weekend point total to 44. Nicoletti was close behind with 25.

Game scoring honors went to Parr, who poured in 31. Other automen in double figures were Rojek, 19 points; Washington, 15, and Chudy, 12.

Nicoletti paced the rebounders with 15 caroms as the cubs held a 42-25 edge in rebounding.

Maroone Ford, playing mainly AAU teams, has a 23-6 season record. Maroone last year reached the quarter-finals of the national AAL tournament.

Syracuse now is 9-3. The Tangerines next see action Wednesday night when Canisius' cubs invade Manley in the preliminary to the varsity clash betwen the same schools.

Hill Mat Machine Swamps Cornell

By RICHARD GOULD

The Syracuse University Varsity Wrestling team extended their dual meet undefeated streak to 12 in a row (6 this year) with a 28-5 swamping of Cornell Saturday at Ithaca.

In the opening event Sophomore Terry Haise edged his opponent, Neal Orr, 5-4. Terry came on strong in the third period to tie his opponent 4-4 and won the watch by virtue of 1 point gained for riding time. Senior Bethel Greenhalgh needed the 2 points he earned for riding time to insure his 6-3 victory over Jim Meldrim (C).

Jim Murrin faced Tom Jones, Cornell's most improved wrestler, in the 137 lb. division. For the third straight match Syracuse's ability to stay in control paid off as Murrin was awarded 2 points for riding time and won the match 7-5.

Dick Slutsky opposed Carl Ogna (C) at 147 lbs. The Syracuse grappler was in control all the way and earned an easy 6-1 decision.

Junior George Reidner kept the Hillmen rolling with a 5-3 victory over Cornell's Dennis Makarainen at the 157-pound level.

Forfeit

Gary Sirota, the Orange captain, had to forfeit his match with Pete Cummings (C). Gary had been sick all week and was unable to work out. Although Cummings is 9-0 this year, Sirota had previously defeated him in close matches.

Lew Roberts met Bob Bogenrief (C) at 177 pounds. Earning points in the first and third periods Lew easily controlled his opponent to gain a 6-1 victory.

At 191 pounds undefeated sophomore Gerry Everling opposed Keith Olin (C). In an exciting match Everling reversed Olin after only 3 seconds of the second period and then put his opponent away with a pin at 2:54.

In the heavyweight class Jim Nance, an Orange fullback, faced Joe Bruchac (C). Although Bruchac earned one of the very few points that Nance has allowed this season, the big grappler and little trouble in pinning his opponent at 2:32 of the first period.

Pin

Coach Joe Scandura's forces have three more hurdles to clear in order to complete a perfect season. The Hillmen face dangerous Penn State on Feb. 16 (home) and Colgate on Feb. 22 (home). A match at Cortland on Feb. 27 will end Syracuse's regular season. Then the Orangemen travel to Annapolis on March 8-9 to compete in the Eastern Intercollegiate Wrestling Championships.

In a preliminary wrestling meet the Cornell freshmen extended their undefeated streak to 8-0 by downing the Syracuse frosh 38-5. Seven of the nine matches were forfeits: Cornell forfeited at 123 pounds while Syracuse conceded matches at the 130, 137, 157, 167, 177 and heavyweight divisions.

At the 147-pound class Gilbert (C) decisioned Smyzer (S) 5-0 while Buchwald (C) pinned Bulger (S) in the 191-pound division.

Penn State Edges Orange Swordsmen on Final Point

By IRA BAKST

The Orange Swordsmen dropped a heartbreaker to Penn State Saturday afternoon in the Archbold Gymnasium by the score of 14-13.

For three hours and fifty-five minutes Coach Alex Dako watched his fencers fight back from 6-3, 8-4 and 10-8 deficits only to lose out on the last point of the final match.

The score was tied 13-13 when Dwayne Harrington met Penn State epee star Dave Lewis. Harrington jumped out to a 3-0 lead and then beautifully stretched it to 4-0 on a quick and sudden attack which just nipped his opponent's hand.

Lewis then masterfully picked out his openings to gain the match 5-4 and the meet. Penn State thus retained their undefeated status after having already beaten Johns Hopkins and Temple.

Orangemen Stu Hollander and Harvey Schuman won all three of their matches, while Les Monastory won two.

Hollander displayed a great amount of skill and poise in defeating Charles Doler of State 5-1 to even the meet at 1-1. It was 6-3 in favor of State at the end of the first round.

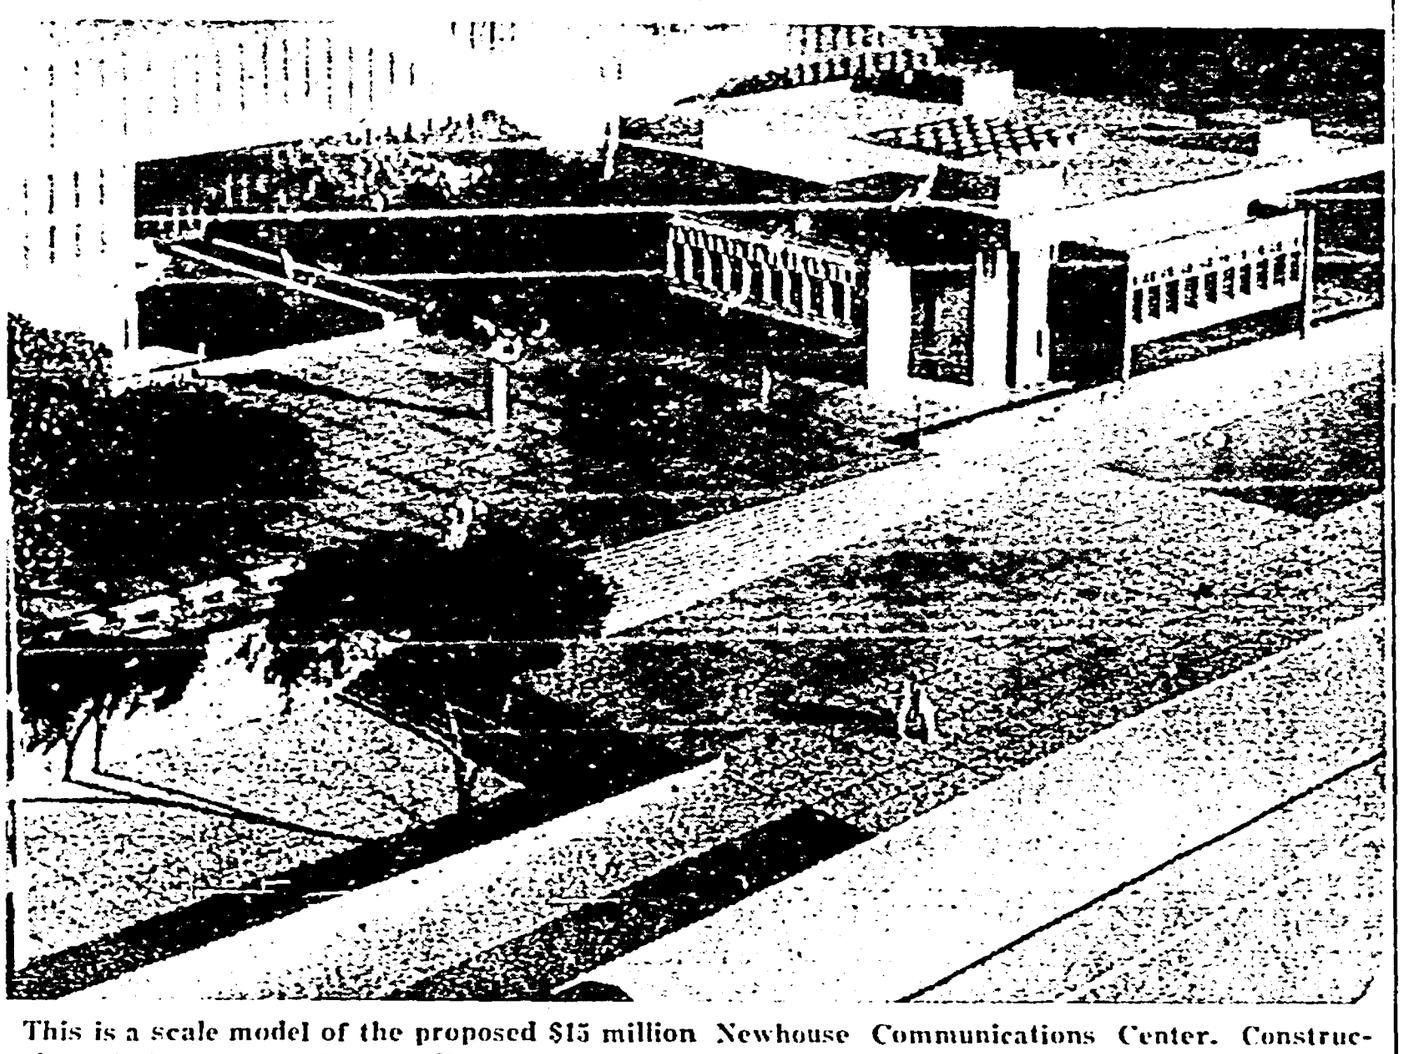
Marty Dako lost a heartbreaker in Sabre by a 5-4 margin after being down 4-0, but Stu Hollander won his second round match easily outpointing Charles Poole 5-3.

Schuman, Monostory, Harrington and Marty Cohen then reeled off consecutive victories for the Orange which tied the score at 8-8.

The score remained close and it was 10-8, State, at the end of the second round.

Junior Stu Hollander then outclassed his third opponent Gerald Evans 5-2. It climaxed an outstanding day for him, as he outclassed each man that he met. He accomplished the same feat in the Cornell meet this year.

After Monostory, Schuman and Marv Stone had taken decisions in exciting matches the score stood at 13-13.



The Harrington-Lewis battle was a tension filled event which ended the Orange's chance to even their record. The swordsmen now stand 2-4 and play RIT Saturday away.

J-School Going Up

This is a scale model of the proposed $15 million Newhouse Communications Center. Construction of the School of Journalism, at the right, will begin later this month. View of entire complex is from University place.

Site Clearance Speeds Up For Newhouse Center

Syracuse University's Newhouse Communications Center moved closer to reality this week with demolition starting Monday for final clearing of the site and the construction of the first building to house the School of Journalism.

The current construction project, which begins later this month, will include the journalism building proper—five stories in all—and a number of additional classroom facilities which eventually will be joined to two other buildings to be constructed in the future.

The Communication Center ultimately will cover eight acres and consist of three buildings located around a spacious central plaza. Below the plaza level, the buildings will be connected to form one integrated unit for education and research in all mass communication media.

Block

When complete the Center will occupy most of the block bounded by University place, University avenue, Waverly avenue and South Crouse avenue. The journalism building will be at the southeast corner bounded by University place and University avenue.

University officials Saturday night announced award of demolition and general construction contracts.

According to purchasing agent E.E. Thompson, the demolition contract went to Tarosan Construction Co., East Syracuse. Work started Monday tearing down a stone maintenance shop. Demolition of historic Haven Hall begins next Monday.

Construction contracts were announced by Dr. John F. Olson, vice president and executive assistant to Chancellor William P. Tolley. Dr. Olson is in charge of coordinating construction planning of the journalism building.

Contract

The $1,999,500 contract for general construction has been awarded to the J. D. Taylor Construction Corp. Other low bidders for the project—all local firms—are Kenneth A. Taylor, Inc., heating and air conditioning for $443,086; Irving Solomon, Inc., electrical work for $266,533; and Thomas A. Murphy, Inc., plumbing for $132,330.

Rudolph Gives $50,000 For Jewish Lectureship

Bernard C. Rudolph, co-founder of Rudolphs Jewelry store, in the city of Syracuse has given Syracuse University $50,000 to establish an annual lectureslip in Jewish studies, it was announced Monday by Chancellor William P. Tolley.

The grant will be used to set up the B.G. Rudolph Lectureship in Judaic Studies which will be sponsored by the SU religion department.

According to Dr. A. Leland Jamison, chairman of the religion department, the lectureship will bring outstanding scholars here and interpret Jewish thought and culture to the university.

Rudolph, a local leader in civic Jewish community affairs, has expressed the hope the lectureship may eventually be developed by other gifts into an endowed professorship.

The first speaker in the series will be Dr. Moshe Davis provost of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America. He will speak on "The Jewish People in Metamorphosis" on Wednesday, March 6.

In addition to his speech, Davis will conduct and SU religion class, a faculty seminar discussion, a coffee hour with Jewish students and participation in an annual clergy institute sponsored by Temple Society of Concord.

Dr. Davis, an ordained rabbi, is currently serving as head of the Institute of Contemporary Jewry and visiting professor at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem.

In addition he has written and edited several books, and has contributed to various academic journals and the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

His latest book, "The Emergence of Conservative Judaism," will be published this spring.

Rudolph is well-known locally both in Jewish philanthropic organizations and general community projects. He has been active in Zionist affairs, served as chairman of several United Jewish Appeal campaigns and was founder and president of the Syracuse Jewish Welfare Federation.

Dr. Harrison Begins Duties

Dr. James W. Harrison, former dean of Syracuse University's Utica College, assumed his new duties Monday as executive assistant in charge of graduate education to SU's academic Vice President Frank P. Piskor.

In his work with Piskor, Dr. Harrison will be involved in four major areas: assisting in the administration of the graduate school; aiding department in student recruitment; helping develop graduate program policy; and administering financial aid.

In his announcement of Harrison's appointment last July, SU Chancellor William P. Tolley said he is being called on to help solve one of the university's most pressing problems. During the past five years graduate student enrollment at Syracuse University has increased from 200 to more than five thousand.

Rethinking

Said Tolley, "to maintain true high quality graduate study in the face of such demands requires a rethinking of our traditional program and policies."

Tolley added Harrison has

JAMES HARRISON

the educational and professional background to help develop the necessary new approaches.

One of Harrison's first objectives this spring will be to contact graduate student leaders in order to form a graduate student organization.

UC

During his term as dean, Utica College grew to nearly 1,000 full time students and 2,000 part-time students and climaxed a major development program.

A native of Binghamton, Harrison came to Utica College from Michigan State University where he was assistant director of continuing education and head of the university conference program.

His other positions included registrar of SU's University College and research associate for the Center for the Study of Liberal Education for Adults in Chicago.

He earned his bachelors degree at Harvard, his masters from SU and his doctorate from the University of Chicago.

FALSE ALARM AT WAER

Syracuse University Security Police and the Syracuse Fire Department investigated reports of a fire at the WAER-FM prefab about 8 p.m. Sunday.

Robert Feldman, WAER announcer and technician, reported a smell of smoke but a search by firemen revealed nothing.

Alpha Epsilon Pi fraternity has been completely removed from any probationary status announced Dean of Men Earle W. Clifford following a conference with fraternity officials Monday afternoon.

The fraternity was suspended last spring and returned on probationary status at the beginning of last semester. At Monday's review with alumni and undergraduate members of the fraternity, Fraternity Administrator James P. McMurray and Clifford completely vindicated the undergraduate chapter.

Internal problems including violation of the university's drinking policy, brought about the original action against the local chapter.

The action left only one fraternity, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, on any kind of disciplinary restriction. At the beginning of the year, five Hill houses were on probation.

Last Informal Rush Tonight

The final unrestricted fraternity rush will be held from 7-10 p.m. today co-rush chairmen Michael Steinberg (Sigma Alpha Mu) and Jon Ebernez (Kappa Sigma) have announced.

For this final session, freshmen may rush any house they wish, or may revisit houses earlier visited. They must still obtain stamps from three houses though, in order to fill the required 15 stamps for formal rush eligibility.

The eligibility list of those freshmen academically eligible for formal rushing will be released by the dean of men's office today, James P. McMurray fraternity administrator announced today.

ID PICTURES

ID pictures for students who do not have identification cards will be taken from 6 to 9 p.m. Friday and from 9 a.m. to noon Saturday in 215 Men's Gym.

Students will be required to know their student number and show tuition receipts before picture will be taken.

Students whose ID cards were confiscated during the fall semester are not eligible for new cards.

Defense in Canada

Despite the rumblings that have been coming from north of that unguarded border, there is little danger that Canadian-United State relations will suffer any irreparable damage.

Nevertheless, the controversy that brewed between the Diefenbaker government and the United States Department of State has implications that are not any less important than the stirrings on the European continent of Charles DeGaulle.

The relations of the two North American nations have almost always been friendly, sharing as they have many common elements in their respective histories. However, being a weaker nation politically, Canada has always felt at least the shadow of United States dominance if not its substance.

Operating in this type of atmosphere, it has been natural for the Canadian government to be somewhat touchy about American interference in its affairs, both internal and international.

So it was not surprising when Prime Minister John Diefenbaker spoke out so loudly against United States interference in the Canadian arm of the North American Defense Command. The dispute was not as flagrant a rejection of alliance government versus national sovereignty as that espoused by the French recently but nevertheless it pointed to the fact that nationalism should not be lightly regarded.

For, indeed, nationalism did not cease being a force in politics with the end of the French Revolution nor with the defeat of Germany in World War II. Nationalism became the guiding force of the former colonial countries of Africa and Asia which asserted their independence from European powers.

Nationalism, therefore, is a fact of today just as much as the balance of power is. We must not take a nationalism such as that shown by Canada too lightly either. For failure of Canada to join in the mutual defense of this hemisphere could lead to ultimate disaster.

But the problem which was raised by Diefenbaker and worsened by the State Department note to Canada, which caused hard feelings in that country against United States, dates back to 1958 and 1959.

At that time Canada first agreed to contribute to the North American Defense Command and also promised jet squadrons for the air defense arm of NATO's European forces. However, Diefenbaker has continually refused to allow American nuclear warheads placed on these planes and missiles.

This failure prompted Gen. Lauris Norstad, former Supreme Commander of NATO forces in Europe, to comment in Ottawa Jan. 3 that Canada has not lived up to its NATO pledge.

This in turn led to Diefenbaker's defense of his stand and the subsequent American note for which Dean Rusk apologized in tone but not content. Diefenbaker asserted that Canada "is not a part of Kennedy's New Frontier."

But cooler—more realistic—heads prevailed, this time in the case of Liberal Leader Lester Pearson who initiated a no-confidence motion in Commons. He attacked Diefenbaker for "lack of leadership, the breakdown of unity within the Cabinet, confusion and indecision on handling national and international affairs."

In this case, the people seemed to agree with Pearson as did Commons and the government was dissolved with elections to be held April 8. Although anti-Americanism may be an issue, it appears that Pearson will win and the issue will be taken off the board of disputes.

For Pearson, Defense Minister Harkness, who resigned, and a majority of the Canadian press, agreed that the defense of North America was of prime importance and without it Canada's sovereignty would be impossible.

So it appears that in Canada the cart will be put where it belongs—in back of the horse—and a rift in the alliance will be patched. Common defense is a prerequisite for peaceful existence in Canada and the United States as well as in Europe and France.

TREVER ON CAMPUS

"This is our mascot. Don't make any sudden movements..."

GARDEN OF EDEN

And In Conclusion

By Carol Schlageter

When someone retires, this writer gathers that it is meet and right for him to utter a few words of eulogy, blessing or what-have-you to the cause. Schlageter has retired as Joint Student Government reporter.

At the end of the year, the Daily Orange will no doubt run a list of just what student government has accomplished. Considering that group's administration-ordained limitations, the list will be impressive.

Methinks, however, that sizable portion of the campus which never mobilizes to a JSL meeting might be interested in some personal impressions on the participants. Might I at this point assert that Schlageter will no doubt take typewriter-on-lap at occasional times in the future. Roommate—soothsayer that she is—points out that some slightly yellowed journalists cannot pass up a burning issue. She may be right.

But back to the characters who are the vital stuff of JSL. Speaker Ronald Mittleman personifies dogmatism. And this is not a derogatory caricature. Mittleman rules the legislature with a fist of metal. He believes in getting things done, does them capably, and just doesn't worry over questionable parliamentary operation.

J. Nelson Happy is the JSL dramatist. With a finger next his quivering nostril, Happy characteristically tosses his bespectacled head, charging anything from legislative preoccupation with trivia to administration attempts to railroad a bill.

Win Whittaker is perhaps the biggest character. Whittaker is the campus conservative, though he claims to have mellowed with age. When the legislature takes itself too seriously, when it bogs down in petty bickering, Whittaker does one of two things: 1. proposes a bill so petty that it makes the legislature want to go home for the night and drink its collective bathwater, or 2. engages in some parliamentary means to put clamps on discussion.

Carl Corallo, contrary to his Goon Show image, is the legislature's good guy. After everyone has jumped and chattered like unsuspecting chickens en route to the chopping block, Corallo calls the question.

And throughout, JSG President Ted Bayer lounges across three chairs, grinning affably.

There is Dave Knickerbocker of the HUAC, as good a politician as is going. He can do a lot with his guilded tongue—if the fork on the end can be concealed.

There is Kathy Kapsol, junior financier, who is an angry young woman because others can't always follow the dollar signs.

There is Robby Stern, that handsome though verbose young southerner whose heart is in the right place even if his logic isn't.

And there is Speaker Pro Tem Bob Becker, who thinks the D.O. is his personal public relations agent. One day he may learn otherwise.

There are the lobbyists, those who grow intent over even the taking of attendance; there are those who could counter-charm a snake, and those who refuse to be counter-charmed.

There are those who will form a lynch mob for Schlageter, and those who will take this column as it is intended—an opportunity to laugh a little. Student government isn't really a lot of laughs; just a few. It can do some little liaison activities; it can try to make some students happy.

And the legislature characters—I hope they hang in there. If nothing else, they provide a lesson in humored civics.

LETTERS

Frosh

To the Editor:

On Dec. 14 we submitted a letter to the Daily Orange concerning our class activities. Immediately prior to Christmas recess we were heavily criticised for this letter. We submit this letter in rebuttal.

We address this letter not merely to the person who so vindictively struck out at us but to all persons whom that writer represents. Our letter stated facts, or what we believed to be facts, and sought answers to the many questions prevalent amongst our fellow classmates. We did not besmirch the class officers, as no names were mentioned. However, if said letter is in any way indicative of the attitudes and methods of our class officers then we feel that they have inflicted injury upon themselves.

We did not receive answers to our questions from our elected officers; instead we were labeled "blind, self-righteous, know-it-all, infallible skeptics" by a self-appointed defender of our class organization, or do we see here merely the seed of an apathetic body of class officers?

We regret that we have not been informed of what has been happening in our class organization. Since committees were appointed to handle the different aspects of Frosh Weekend why was no committee set up to handle the formulation of a class Newsletter? If volunteers were needed for the Newsletter project why were they not sought out? Also, we might point out, there has been no treasurer's report published. For the record, Mr. Cifuni was on a Frosh Weekend committee and Mr. Morris is a J.S.L. Senator and is on the Local and National Affairs Committee.

As for the Frosh Forum—when does it meet? what does it do? what are its results? Is class unity the functioning of an Exec Council, or a composite effort of the Frosh class? A democratic government depends upon communication to its constituents. There has been little such communication.

Our purpose is not to engage in the name-calling game so very obvious in past Daily Orange issues. We merely petition our class officers to function as leaders, and in that capacity communicate the direction in which they are channeling our class activities.

THE CUTTING ROOM

It's Greek to Me

by John E. Greenwald

IT IS SIGNIFICANT that fraternity and sorority rushing, the biggest snow job since the blizzard of '88 occurs during the winter. The following column is offered as a bit of rock salt.

It is difficult for an Independent to write about the fraternities and sororities on campus because they present, to this outsider at least, such a damning image.

For the past three and a half years the Greeks have, probably unknowingly, offered us as the image of themselves the Bonneville, the iridescent mohair sweater, the petroleum jellied head of hair, and the deep eyes languidly laced with mascara.

Like all stereotypes the above characteristics (and many more), though based in fact, are largely unrepresentative of the group. Not all houses are more decadent than decorous and emphasize parties over pedagogy. But there are enough Bonnevilles bombing around campus, their convertibled seats overflowing with the Bryl-creamed hair, Maybellined eyelashes, Pepsodent smiles, and Playboyed personalities to convince the uninitiated innocents that this is what "Greek" means.

When university regulations are to be broken, the Greeks seem to be the ones to break them. The campus rumor mills crackle with the names of houses that have over-partied, over-boozed or over-pokered, and have got caught.

When Independents participate in university "vices" the coffee machine gossip seems to ignore them. To the casual observer, like the Independent, Greeks are the promoters of levity, not learning; of decay, not discipline; of cliques not college.

The fraternities and sororities may be the victims of bad public relations. Without knowing it they have convinced 60 per cent of the student body, SU's "outsiders," that their "social" side is their only side.

To the "insiders" though, Hill Greeks present a more complicated image than the one they have inculcated among many Independents. In the past few months we have talked with a number of Greeks, ranging from the pledged to the excommunicated. These people see their houses, and their system primarily as a convenience for "gracious living" in the physical plant of their house, and in the human context of dealing with other people.

Many Greeks stay Greek because of the comfort of their living center. To them only the most strong willed can overcome the cinder blocked suffocation of university housing, whereas they can "go to breakfast in a muumuu," as one sorority president put it.

Opportunities for learning the "social graces" are readily available Greeks told us. Learning how to set a table, say the right things, do (and don't do) the right things, dress appropriately etc. are all a part of Greek life, we were informed.

"My first two years at my house were like a finishing school," another sorority president said. "I think all girls should join a house for two years. Most valuable," she continued, not going into great detail about her last two years in her sorority.

Lastly, and most important, Greeks teach the art of living together, we were told. The push and pull, the give and take, of a fairly close knit, similarly inclined group of people builds human beings, they said. Those from a more rural, more secluded background were inclined to emphasize this point. "My house taught me how to live with people," one fraternity man explained.

Slowly, the image of Greeks as a social vaseline came to our minds, where each "brother" or "sister" could use as much as he or she desired. Interacting smoothly with one's fellows can be a difficult task, especially for the inexperienced. And Greeks offer an opportunity to be and work with others that Independent life at Syracuse cannot. In this sense Greeks are, to many people, most valuable.

But they can also be dangerous, for what is the ultimate purpose of all this pushing and pulling, giving and taking. The responsibility of each member towards his house, that each Greek kept on mentioning, is a responsibility towards what: winning the Tolley Cup or getting a revoked charter. What does each house do with its well integrated personalities?

"We're a social fraternity. What's wrong with having a good time?" a fraternity member said. Nothing, we suppose. Nothing, except that colleges and universities, and their various organizations, are supposed to furnish something more than "a good time" in this day and age. By their very nature, if the picture drawn from our interviews is accurate, Greeks can't go beyond a convenient living center, the instruction of some social graces, and creating a body of individuals learning how to live with each other so they can have a good time.

We cannot deny the value of the social vaseline the Greeks manufacture. But we can question the purpose that vaseline is being put to, and whether that purpose is conducive to implementing the reason we're all in college: to learn something about the lifestuffs of humankind.

At worst the Greek vaseline greases the way to the Water Tower or beerfoamed afternoons at Green Lakes. At best, the vaseline greases its way to nowhere. Who's for sliding?

Foresters Pick Sweetheart

Preliminary competition for the title of "Queen of the '63 Sweethearts' Ball" will take place at 8 p.m. today in Marshall Auditorium of the State University College of Forestry. Final rounds of judging for the 15 semi-finalists will be at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in Marshall Lounge.

The Sweethearts' Ball is sponsored by the Wood Engineers' Club, a student organization of undergraduates specializing in wood products engineering.

The ball is slated for 9 p.m.-1 a.m., Sat., Feb. 16 at Drumlins Country Club. Music will be provided by Gene De Santis and his orchestra.

The queen will be named at special ceremonies during intermission at the dance. She will be crowned by Susan Grieve, a sophomore nurse, who was the '62 Sweethearts' Ball Queen.

General chairman of the dance is Paul H. Sarver. Other chairmen are H. Newton Baker Jr., publicity; and Robert H. Collins, queen chairman.

Space Expert To Speak

Dr. William B. Foley, a member of the American Rocket Society, will present an illustrated lecture at a seminar meeting of the mechanical engineering department at 2 p.m. Thursday in 209 Hinds Hall.

Dr. Foley will speak on "Hypersonic Non-equilibrium Heat Transfer." A discussion period will follow the talk.

He is supervisor of the gaseous physics group, research division, of the United Aircraft Co. He is a graduate of the University of Minnesota and earned his master's and doctorate degrees at Stanford University.

Dr. Foley is also a member of the American Physical Society and the Institute of Aero-Space.

Footprint Sponsors Series of Lectures

Freshman Footprints will sponsor a series of five lectures this semester, Howard Messing, chairman, has announced.

The first lecture will be Feb. 21, but the speaker is not yet definite.

The group is working with Special Opportunities in arranging the series. All lectures are open to all interested freshmen.

Sawyer: Equal Chances Lacking

By DANIEL RITEY

Commenting on discrepancy between idealism and reality in America today, Dr. Michael O. Sawyer remarked, "the task of providing equality of opportunity is America's greatest unfinished business."

Addressing the freshman citizenship sections Monday afternoon at Marshall Auditorium, the director of the Maxwell School citizenship department noted that "the theory of American equality, as outlined in the Declaration of Independence, falls short of equality as practiced in our society."

Dr. Sawyer pointed out some of these gaps and then speculated that many people "do not really want equality for people and opportunity, but just accept it because they have been brought up with it."

"We can divide equality between equality of sameness which derives from the "all men are created equal" and the "unalienable rights" phrases of the Declaration) and the equality of opportunity," Sawyer said.

"The latter equality," he went on, "is derived from the equal pursuit of happiness" phrase of the Declaration."

Some basic equalities, like the equality to vote, to be respected as a man and to have economic levelling off, are given in theory but withheld in fact, he said.

"When reality and idealism are too closely aligned there is the tendency to lose sight of the ideal while, when they are too far apart, cynicism sets in," Sawyer remarked.

Dr. Sawyer presented five taped interviews with Negroes who experienced housing difficulties in Syracuse solely because of their race.

"These tapes serve to refute the popular rationalizations that Negroes can't afford better housing or are desirous of it. They also reject the idea of minorities like the togetherness of a ghetto."

Among the difficulties these Negroes ran into were landlords who would not rent because of their race, agencies which told them there were no available houses, shabby living conditions and a ghetto-like area for Negroes — the Fifteenth Ward.

Forestry School Announces February Convo Schedule

Dr. Wilfred W. Westerfeld, chairman of the biochemistry department at the State University Upstate Medical Center at Syracuse, will speak on "Man's Use of Alcohol" at 11 a.m. Wednesday in Marshall Auditorium.

Dr. Westerfeld is the first of speakers scheduled for the College of Forestry's February student convocations. All the convocations, scheduled each week of the academic year, are held Wednesday mornings at 11 a.m. in the College's auditorium.

On Feb. 27, Stephen Kovacs will present a piano recital comprised of classics and light classical compositions. There will be no convocation on Feb. 20, when the 1963 commencement exercises of the State Ranger School at Wanakena will be held.

Chairman of the College's General Education Committee is Henry G. Williams Jr., instructor in landscape architecture. Other members of the student-faculty committee are: Dr. Edwin H. Ketchledge and Robert H. Marchessault, representing the faculty, and Frank B. Parusel, a freshman in landscape architecture; Robert E. Acciavatti, a sophomore in forest entomology; Richard Cipperly, a junior in land management; and Raymond E. Rebby, a senior in landscape architecture.

Chapel Programs Start Today

The first of a series of receptions in honor of Father Charles L. Borgognoni, new Catholic chaplain, will begin tonight at St. Thomas More Chapel.

The reception for freshmen will begin at 7 p.m. tonight. Other programs, all beginning at 7 p.m., are sophomores, Wednesday; juniors, Thursday; seniors, Feb. 19; and gradaate students, Feb. 20.

Each program will feature entertainment by the Pompeian Players, a talk by Father Borgognoni and open discussion. Refreshments will be served.

was made possible by a $15 million gift from Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Newhouse through the Newhouse Foundation. The journalism building, expected to be ready for use when the university opens for the 1964 fall semester, will cost $3.4 million.

Clearing of the area began last year with the demolition of three living centers on University place and two prefab classroom buildings on University avenue. Currently underway is relocation of a steam heat line to University Hospital.

Haven Hall, located at the corner of University avenue and University place, will be town down along with Schultze Cottage next door on University avenue. Haven has been the home for generations of women art students.

Quonset

The stone structure being demolished was occupied by buildings and grounds service, which have been transferred to the university's Ainsley drive warehouse. A quonset-type building will be left standing temporarily for use by the builders during construction.

Remaining buildings on the block — including the Corner Store—will continue to be used.

The ultra-modern Newhouse Center was designed by I. M. Pei and Associates of New York in cooperation with King and King, university architects. Described by its planners as "a study in proportions" the architectural style is contemporary, with several distinctly unique adaptations.

Resting on the spacious paved plaza which is the integrating feature of the eventual three-unit center, the journalism building will rise three stories high. Two more levels will extend below the surface. Sculptured slabs of pre-cast concrete provide support at the four corners of the modified cross-shaped building.

Glass Walls

The first and third floor exterior walls will be of deeply recessed bronze tinted glass set in steel mullions. Second story exterior walls of pink granite chips and bronze colored glass will appear suspended from the main structure. The roof is a large horizontal slab extending beyond the walls of the building.

The main entrance of the journalism unit will be from the west plaza into a Dedication Hall, a three-story high lobby extending to a skylight effect made of 25 glass prisms.

Teak balconies surround the Dedication Hall at the second and third floor levels.

The office of the dean of the School of Journalism will be on the main floor, with a large lounge and a library reading room overlooking the paved terrace. The second floor will have news and editing laboratories, teletype rom, classrooms, seminars, offices and a large lecture room. The third floor will be devoted primarily to office space.

The two levels of the journalism building below the plaza will occupy nearly twice the area of the floors above—extending tures of the complex that will to meet the future two structure be devoted to radio, television and audiovisual education and research.

In the lower level of this initial unit will be a special classroom equipped for telectures with notables from distant points. It also will have a special student-responding system to permit feedback of information to the instructor through an electro-mechanical device at each student's desk.

Also located in the below-piaza levels will be a two-story photographic studio, dark rooms, advertising studio, typography lab, newspaper room, library and micro-reader room and classrooms equipped for closed circuit television. Labs will contain white chalkboards for illustrating in color.

Pitt Mermen Rap SU, 56-29; Host Ephmen

By HOWIE SCHNEIDER

Despite a gallant effort by Orange swimmer Joe Morrison to rescue a sinking Hill squad, the Syracuse mermen dropped their second dual meet of the year, 56-29, to a strong University of Pittsburgh team Saturday at Pittsburgh.

Morrison swam to victory in the 200-yard medley and the 500-yard freestyle. In the first event Joe's powerful breaststroke on the third segment gave him a winning time of 2:11.1. In the freestyle event Morrison triumphed by half a lap in a time of 5:32.8

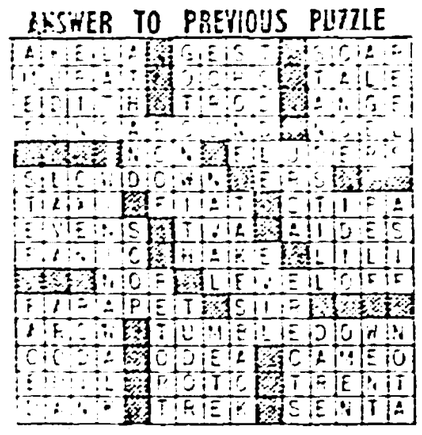
Other standouts for Syracuse were Captain Bob Ohman and [illegible] Tom Watts. Ohman set a new Trees Hall pool record. Bob shattered the 200-yard breaststroke mark finishing in an excellent time of 2:28.1.

Watts, the third Hill victor, [illegible] previously mentioned Rob Levine in the 200-yard freestyle to topped the Pitt swimmer in 1:55.4.

The Orange mermen now stand at 4-2 on the season. Coach Ted Webster's squad previously beat NYU, Buffalo, Lehigh, and Cortland. The team's only other loss was at the hands of Cornell.

This Saturday the team travels to Williams, where they will face a tough squad.

Pitt took five of nine individual events, including four 1-2 finishes, and both relay races. Pittsburgh registered its seventh consecutive win of the season without a loss.



Facing the Pitt attack was a "double dose" of talent in identical twins Rob and Ron Levine. Rob captured one first, one second and swam as anchorman on the winning 400-yard freestyle medley team. Brother Ron took a first, third, and was another member of the winning 400-yard medley relay squad.

Other outstanding Panthers were Tom Ribarchak and Rick Peterson. Ribarchak set a school record in completing the 100-yard freestyle in 51.3. Teammate Peterson was second. In the 50-yard freestyle event the results were reverse, with Rick finishing first and Tom second.

The home team also triumphed in the diving, 200-yard butterfly event, but their runner-up was disqualified for an illegal kick, and Ellenberger copped the number two slot for Syracuse.

In the diving performance Panthers Coleman and Lund out-classed the field, finishing one and two. In the back stroke opposing swimmers Rob Levine and Solinger finished in the two top spots. Once again brother Ron Levine equaled his brother's performance winning the butterfly event.

Syracuse Skiers Capture Paul Smiths Invitational

Syracuse University's Ski team won the Paul Smith's College Invitational Skiing Trophy recently at Whiteface Mountain.

Dave Menotti and Bob Thorenson led the Hill to a 370.7 to 361.5 victory over second-place Cornell. Menotti took the slalom event and finished third in the downhill event while Thorenson took a second place in the slalom. Bill Dalton finished third in the slalom. Chal Lyons took a third for Syracuse in the slalom.

Gary Ginter, Bill Dalton and Chal Lyons along with Bob Bryant strengthened the Syracuse victory with points in SU's weak spot, the Nordic events.

Cornell's second-place squad had 361.5 points while St. Michaels of Burlington, Vt., finished third with 353.7 points. Other squads taking part in the invitational were Buffalo, Army, Paul Smiths, Syracuse B and Colgate.

The Syracuse squad has several meets remaining this year including invitationals. Menotti, Thorenson and company will lead the Syracuse A team against Cortland Feb. 16 and Colgate Feb. 17.

Coach Elton Fairbank expects to go with the same squad against the weaker Cortland and Colgate squads.

Keep Off The Floor!

White-sweatered members of the Syracuse crew ringed the court at Manley Fieldhouse following Saturday's basketball game with LaSalle to prevent an outburst similar to the one at the end of the Niagara game when jubilant fans swarmed the team.

Officials, worrying about their hardwoods, sought to keep the fans off and so the crew was called out. Fortunately, they were not tested because of the Syracuse loss. Those who had been on the floor two nights earlier wondered about the odds — a thousand to ten.

Sigma Chi May Get Local Charter in Fall

By CLAY RICHARDS
Junior Editor

"Only the procedure providing for the return of the Sigma Chi charter at SU remains", commented Dean of Men Earle W. Clifford, returning from Evanston, Ill. Saturday.

Clifford led the petitioning delegation of Sigma Chi Psi fraternity asking for the reinstatement of the Psi Psi charter to the local fraternity.

The executive committee of the nation's second largest fraternity's social committee was "very much impressed by the four year progress of Sigma Chi Psi," commented Clifford, and "on the basis of written material and the verbal review only the mechanics remain before the charter returns."

Included in the mechanics for the return of the charter will be a visit by James J. Overlock, a professor from the University of Illinois and a member of the Sigma Chi executive committee. The Chicagoan will visit the house sometime during the next months.

Confidence

A vote of confidence before the grand chapter of the 138 Sigma Chi chapters in June will be the final step toward the return of the charter.

"We are now laying plans for the formal installation in September," commented Douglas L. Graham, a Sigma Chi Psi founder. Graham, who attended the Chicago meetings last weekend, transferred to Syracuse from Gamma Pi chapter of Sigma Chi at the University of Rochester

Students whose ID cards were confiscated during the fall semester are not eligible for new cards.

Gas Furnace Breaks Down; Girls Moved

By SANDI EHRLICH

Fifteen girls from Hughes Cottage were moved out suddenly Friday night when the gas furnace in the basement broke down and gas fumes escaped.

Electricians declared the cottage unsafe, according to Jean Crawford, director of women's residences.

Since the furnace cannot be repaired, and because the cottage, at 1202 East Adams St., is part of Crouse site, where ground will be broken next month for a new women's dormitory, the cottage will be closed permanently at the end of this week. The residents are now moving their trunks and possessions.

To Mount

The 15 girls, sophomores and juniors, were moved into empty rooms in Mount Olympus dormitories for the weekend. They have been reassigned to new rooms, mostly on the Mount.

While a majority of the girls were quite unhappy about the sudden move, there was no alternative, Miss Crawford said. "We didn't want to move them, but we wanted the girls to be safe," she added.

Coeds from Roosevelt Cottage, 805 Walnut Ave., will definitely move Thursday. The 14

JSL Starts Drinking Inquiry; Whittaker Heads Committee

ALFRED WHITTAKER

By SUSAN WEINBERG
Junior Editor

Joint Student Legislature will organize its inquiry into university drinking policy at its first meeting of the spring semester at 7:15 p.m. today in Maxwell Auditorium, it was announced at JSL Steering Committee meeting Tuesday.

Alfred (Win) Whittaker, JSL senator (Lambda Chi Alpha), will head the specially-formed committee which will conduct the investigations. At the meeting tonight Speaker Ronald Mittleman will call for volunteers to assist Whittaker. Final selection will be made by Whittaker, Mittleman said.

Tentative planning calls for the inquiry to be lengthy and complete. "Once we start something, we have to do it right and finish it," Mittleman emphasized Tuesday.

It is probable that the legislated recommendation, the result of the inquiry, will not be made during Mittleman's term of office because of the thoroughness such an investigation requires.

Since the drinking policy is an administrative policy, Joint Student Government has no jurisdiction to legislate in this area. All it can do is make a recommendation to the university Personnel Committee.

Should a proposal to modify

Annual Giving Program Income Tops 1962 Endowment Return

By SANDY MYERS

Income from the Annual Giving Program, designed "to meet university expenses on a day-to-day basis," was $311,00 more than the income from university endowments last year, Robert W. Leberman, director of the annual program, said in an interview Monday.

The program received gifts totalling $1,142,837 in 1962. Income on the $22,961,000 endowment was $831,570, according to Leberman and SU Comptroller Victor J. Colway.

Money from the Annual Giving Program is used for current operations, including scholarship assistance, faculty salaries and the daily operation of the universisty, Leberman said.

Its main purpose, he noted, is to "bridge the difference between what the university receives from tuition, fees and endowments, and the actual operating costs."

Leberman emphasized that the Annual Giving Program is distinct from the current Centennial program, known as the Syracuse Plan.

The Syracuse Plan is long-range, to develop and finance new programs and buildings, hopefully with $76 million by 1970.

Gifts to the annual program come from a variety of sources —alumni, friends, parents, corporations, organizations and foundations. Last year, Leberman said, there were 13,667 contributors.

Bailey Paper Read In Geneva Today

The emergence of the less developed areas of the world requires identifying the most vigorous, intelligent and influential local leaders and securing their commitment to a program of long-range planning.

This view is expressed by Dean Stephen K. Bailey of the Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs at Syracuse University in a paper prepared for a special conference of the United Nations taking place this month in Gen-

Coed Rushees Pick Up Coke Bids Today

Sorority rush takes another step towards completion today as freshman coeds pick up their bids to coke parties from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the recreation lounge of the Woman's Building.

Plans A (Christian) and C (cross rush) rushees will attend five parties from 5:30 to 9:45 p.m. Friday.

Plan B rushees will attend four parties from 5:30 to 9 p.m. Friday.

Dress for these parties will be skirts and sweaters.

Rushees may pick up bids to formal parties from 2 to 4 p.m. Saturday in the main lobby of the Woman's Building.

All plans will attend two parties from 2 to 4:45 p.m. Sunday.

Attire for these parties will be cocktail clothes.

Final bids will be given out at 5 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 20 by living center head residents. City women may pick up bids at 5 p.m. Feb. 20 in the Women's Building.

Campus Magazines on Sale Soon

By STEVE MONBLATT

The Syracuse '10' that will go on sale two weeks from today will be on "as high a level as any college magazine in America," according to James Gorney, '10' editor-in-chief.

The '10,' which will place strong emphasis, both in this and in its second issue, on poetry and short stories, will also feature a tear-out parody of the Daily Orange, to be titled the "B O."

Decay

Gorney said that the lead article in the magazine will examine what he termed the "cultural decay of the American university."

Gorney explained the article, the result of several months of research, will examine the proposition that the "American university is decaying in that it is no longer effectively transmitting the cultural heritage of the western world."

The magazine will also feature an article on the House Un-American Activities Committee by the president of the Syracuse chapter of the Young Americans for Freedom, Michael Kogan.

Gorney said this year's '10' will see a "re-emphasis on the literary function which the magazine was created to perform."

He said one short story in the magazine, "After We Have Happily Lived" by Terry Rogers, is as "good a piece of fiction as has ever been printed in a student publication."

Gorney added that he felt that the Sword of Damocles, which is supposed to appear for the first time next week, is complementary, not in opposition, to Syracuse '10'. "We

The Sword Of Damocles will make its first appearance on the Hill next week, according to Editor Terrence Hughes.

"Sword," resembling the physical make-up of the Saturday Evening Post, "is geared to readability," according to Hughes.

The magazine is especially oriented to life at Syracuse University, the editor said. The main article, which took three months research, is a story on alleged inadequacies of the SU infirmary. "We have some very specific facts and expect to enlighten quite a few people about the infirmary," Hughes said.

Foreign Students

Another major article will be a discussion on the problems of foreign students on campus. "For many years the university has not had an adequate program for foreign students and we will show why," Hughes said.

"Another particularly interesting article will be a detailed account about the bookstore: its prices and profits. We hope to show just where the money goes," he said.

Hughes described the "Sword" as "one of its kind."

Hughes, 1961-62 editor of Syracuse '10,' began the student-run, student-supported magazine when the SU Board of Publications refused to give his plan for a magazine university sanction.

Clifford

Dean of Men Earle W. Clifford recently commented, "I think the Board of Publications was generally misinterpreted in its decision

China and Russia; Misunderstanding

For our final study of the weakening alliances, we turn eastward to the vast sprawling homeland of international Communism. Here, perhaps more than anywhere else in the modern world, the split of allies with common objectives is strongest.

We have dealt with the implications that De-Gaulle's fierce nationalism and Canada's assertion of independence have had on the Western alliance and how these attempts at sovereignty may weaken the unity of the West's defense against the Communist bloc.

But while storm clouds were gathering in Europe and while Canada and the United States faced a strained relationship, the Communist leaders of the Soviet Union and China were openly shouting at one another for the world to hear.

We must turn now to that split and examine not only the implications that it may have, but also the forces that have led to it.

To do this, we must first accept the hypothesis that the entire China-Russia dispute is not a guise of the Communists to woo the rest of the world into complacency born of relaxation of tension. For if the Western powers believed that Russia and China would eventually have an armed showdown, they might stand idly by. Therefore, we must assume that the split is real and not merely a device to further the aims of international Communism.

The most basic cause of the Chinese-Russian split seems to be the very issue over which the Communists are arguing—the Russian policy of peaceful coexistence. The Chinese have felt that Communism must be imposed on the world through whatever means possible including war.

Thus the Peiping government entered the Korean War, engaged in the battle over Indo-China, and more recently has entered into open conflict with India while continuing its jungle warfare in Southeast Asia.

The fact that Russia sees other means to the eventual overthrow of the West is hard for the Chinese to comprehend. Yet, the policy of peaceful coexistence has in fact made the Chinese split with Russia more readily attainable.

For the Chinese have apparently felt as have the French that the current world situation, as expressed by the actions of the United States and the Soviet Union, will not lead to war. Thus, they feel that they have some freedom of action in asserting their own dogma though it is different than the Russian line.

It is interesting to note that in more tense times, the Chinese position wasn't as readily expressed in public forums as it has been of late.

However, it would seem that the Chinese action is premature. The world situation is far from peaceful and the idea of strength through unity is still the most important truism of the mid-twentieth century.

In fact the positions of China and France, though certainly based on very divergent philosophies, may eventually lead the world to all-out nuclear war.

For these nations seem to feel that the two greatest powers—the United States and the Soviet Union—will not unleash their nuclear weapons. But in the event of smaller conflicts the two powers might find it necessary to enter into nuclear battle.

The point of all this is that the actions of China and France in rebelling from the two alliances of the balance of power has caused an odd bit of circular relationships. They have asserted independence because they feel war is not probable, but by their independent actions they could make war a reality.

In unity there is strength. In this world, if the strength is large enough on both sides, there will not be war.

AMIDST THE CLAMOR

A Laugh and A Snap

By Win Whittaker

Again that time of year has come. The Greeks are now rounding up this year's flock. But, the fraternities and sororities have adopted entirely different methods of artificial snow-making. All this is not meant, in any sense, to be critical of the Greek system; for much doubt arises about anything constructive getting done at SU if it were not for the fraternities and sororities. However, rushing always leads to peculiar circumstances as each house tries to make that "lasting impression."

The sororities, it appears, attempt to gather in their prey by out-shouting their Pan-Hell opponents. From the front porch males watch in amazement as the young ladies of Greek enlightenment stand on the front steps of their feminine castles clad in light sweaters and Revlon smiles singing away trying to draw the rushees in like a moose-hunter blatting out with a duck-call.

And, according to one rushette, after she was stripped of her boots and coat, a sorority girl—just beginning to thaw out—would come over and ask, "Cold out, isn't it?" Then after some more witty conversation about the weather, the prospective Greek is shoved into a sofa.

While the comfortable rushee is deluged with cigarettes, the sister kneels in front of her holding an ash-tray like she was making an offering to some ancient god. After two minutes in this position, one receives the impression the kneelers are trying to drag in some of the exhaled smoke. But the unwritten code states: Sisters shall not smoke during rush. The reason, a sorority girl says, certain of her sisters are constantly saying to rushees, "Will you please excuse me, I have to go to the ladies' room (to grab a quick drag)."

Fraternities, on the other hand, have developed more subtle methods of reeling in the prospects. From the day rush starts, male-Greek PR men make it prime duty to get their house's name in the front-page headlines of the Daily Orange. A reason great fraternal events occur during rush-week, e.g., houses switch political parties.

But maybe it is just coincidence two houses happened to get their charter in the past week. Then, again, maybe it is just coincidence "Amidst the Clamor" is appearing the day before formal-rush sign-up.

Although by now Greeks and rushees alike are tired of handshakes, looking at bathrooms, and remembering unpronouncable names, they can look-back at some of the inane humor that has come forth. Several times the prospective Greeks, sick of the same questions, have rebelled.

For instance, one person who should know swears the following conversation is the absolute truth. The scene is the ends of a rush session in a large, well-known sorority:

"Sally, I just can't seem to find your coat anywhere. Would you mind terribly telling me what it looks like again, please?"

"Well," came the Frosh's reply, "I understand you look at labels, so why don't I just tell you where I bought the coat."

Rushees, and rushers all wear name tags to make it easier to remembers names. Usually the name blares out like a neon-sign in a church. The following took place despite the tag because a vain sorority girl refused to wear her specs.

"Hi, I'm Suzy Sister." While saying this Suzy was leaning over and squinting at the name on the rushee's tag. Suzy then asked, "Errr, what did you say your name was."

One girl came back with, "What's the matter, can't you read?"

On the male side of the Greek aisle, it would be most interesting to speculate what the ultimate consequences might have been had cookies been banned from fraternity rushes. Imagine sneaking a rushee up to a room and, behind a locked door, offering the future pledge a cookie or two. Sort of the modern version of yesteryear's giving swigs of a now unmentionable commodity. Yesteryear being B.C. (Before Clifford).

Then after all the Frosh are nestled in their bunks, the Greeks busily gather to hash over the prospects. So the Dean of Women will not think they are going past curfew (a dreadful sin), the Sisters turn-off lights at 15 minute intervals while discussing the rushettes until 6 in the morn. The brothers laugh at the Orange-aid pictures, discuss, and then retire to their neat-for-once rooms.

Until reading Greenwald's column, this article had reached an end. But, after digesting Greenwald's abyss of ignorant sarcasm, a few comments are in order—and not too complimentary ones at that.

Granted the Greeks are social minded, but beer and the opposite sex do not rule their lives. Look beyond the bottom of your beer glass, John, and you will see the fraternity and sorority members are the campus leaders. They are president of this and that, editor of the D.O., ad infinitum. The Greeks visit retarded kids, clean-up Scout Camps, etc. etc.; they have the organization. And with this organization they do useful things in the community and on the campus.

Greenwald bills himself as the carefree independent, actually he is nothing but a misanthrope. For the Greeks are the true independents: they can decide through the democratic processes, policy, appropriation of money, and group activities. Whereas all of Mr. Greenwald's policies of living are controlled by the dictatorial administration, the Greeks within the university's broad regulations do as they wish.

Maybe Greenwald is just jealous a few fraternity men can afford Bonnevilles and Bryl-Cream. Maybe he cannot see the honor that comes with winning the Tolley Cup or getting back a charter. For sure he is blind to the true meaning and the true good of the Greek way of life.

Pops Concert Friday

Baritone Chester Ludgin, a favorite of Syracuse audiences who was last seen here as Rigoletto in the New York City Opera Company production, and coloratura soprano Linda Newman, of the same company, are featured singers at the Syracuse Pops Concert, Friday, in the War Memorial Concert Circle.

Director Karl Kritz has planned a program of moments from the lyric stage, from opera to musical comedy, which will include favorite light classics, popular and novelty numbers.

In keeping with the Pops tradition, table seats for party and family groups will be set up on the floor in front of the orchestra.

Ludgin, a leading baritone at the New York City Opera Company, earned rave reviews for his performance in "Rigoletto." He has also sung with the San Francisco opera and appeared as soloist in the Hollywood Bowl and Lewisohn Statiuom.

Linda Newman, who has performed in Italy, Austria and the United States, is scheduled to sing the leading role in "La Traviata" with the Baltimore Civic Opera Company.

Ludgin and Miss Newman will sing songs from "Porgy and Bess" and "Kiss Me Kate," and a duet from "Barber of Seville," among others.

Tickets for the Pops Concert begin at 75 cents, and are available at the Symphony office, 218 Harrison St.

MUSIC

Syracuse Symphony

Friday night the Syracuse Symphony performed several works for small orchestra, all of which demonstrated that the organization is beginning to come into its own as a professional ensemble.

The violin section was taxed the most in the opening Overture to "The Marriage of Figaro" by Mozart. The rapid sections were articulated well and the group was in near-perfect synchronization.

Theo Salzman then joined the orchestra for Bruch's Kol Nidrei. Despite a zeal which sometimes caused him to slap the bow on the strings, he generally maintained the lyrical mood of the piece. His tone carried well through the hall with a pulsing warm vibrato.

Mahler "Adagietto" from his Fifth Symphony was next performed by the string section and harp. At any given moment during the piece, one might think he was listening to music of the most common character. At the next, an unusual interval or change of harmony might alter his opinion. Thus the nostalgia never becomes oversweet.

Ellen Nash became the soloist in Mahler's "Songs of A Wayfarer". Unfortunately, Miss Nash had a voice which did not carry well above the orchestra, and when she was forced to push it, her vibrato became uneven in the upper register. However, the quality of her voice was pleasing and no doubt she would be given considerably more credit in a different musical situation.

The second half of the program consisted of Tchaikovsky's "Variations on a Rococo Theme", and Schubert's Second Symphony. The former saw Mr. Salzman return to demonstrate his skills on the cello in what is almost strictly a showpiece. He handled it admirably with however, some distortions in intonation.

The Schubert work ended the concert in fine style as the orchestra presented what is probably its finest program to date.

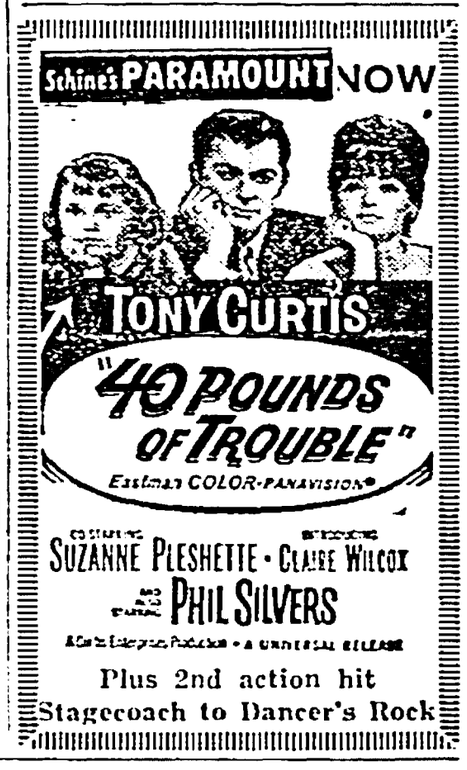
Organ Recital at Crouse

Will O. Headlee will present an organ concert 4 p.m. Sunday, in Crouse College Auditorium. He will be assisted by Betty Gehring, violinist.

The recital will feature a work for Violin and organ, "Praeludium, Kanzone und Rondo," by Hermann Schroeder. The work was performed last summer but nature intervened with a great thunderstorm, making a repeat performance without thunderstorms desirable.



Headlee will also play works by Muffat, Bach, Frank, Gigout and Messiaen.

Baritone?

A baritone to play the leading man in Ernst Bacon's opera "A Tree on the Plain" is wanted. Those interested should contact G.F. Reidenbaugh, of the drama department, ext. 2708. The opera, conducted by Bacon and directed by Reidenbaugh, will be produced in the spring.

Beverly Garland, "Stump the Stars" panelist on the CBS Television Network, studied dramatics with Anita Arliss, sister of famed English actor George Arliss.

Bailey Paper Read

eva, Switzerland. He is presenting his paper today.

The conference, first major international effort of its kind, was arranged by the U.N. Scientific Advisory Panel and the participation of the United States is under the direction of former dean of the Maxwell School Harlan Cleveland who now is Assistant Secretary of State for International Organization Affairs.

Dean Bailey's Paper

Designated the United Nations Conference on the Application of Science and Technology for the Benefit of the Less Developed Areas of the World, the sessions got underway Feb. 4 and will continue through Feb. 20. The topic of Dean Bailey's paper is "The Place and Functioning of a Planning Agency within the Government Organization of Developing Countries."

For the purpose of conference discussion, developing nations are described as those having low per capita income, low literacy, a high proportion of the population engaged in subsistence agriculture and a recent sense of national identity.

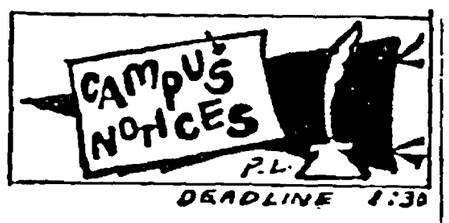
The key leaders in an underdeveloped nation, Dean Bailey says, may be found in its governmental force or in its society at large. After they are discovered they must be provided with competent help who will assist in establishing realistic goals and build public support for the program.

In his recommendations for central planning for newly developed countries Dean Bailey calls attention to a number of false illusions about planning which he says must be understood if effective results are to be achieved.

Misconceptions

Among the misconceptions to be avoided, he warns, is the notion "that planning is synonymous with proposing. The libraries of the world are stuffed with big and little plans which have never been translated into action.

"And just as proposing is not planning," Dean Bailey cotinues, "so a staff of hermetically-isolated professional economists and administrative or engineering specialists can never be at the center of the planning process. Staff planners must recommend action but responsible officials must make the hard decisions if the recommendations are to be relevant."



Another recurring illusion Dean Bailey warns against is the belief that planning for the future of the underdeveloped countries can be accomplished by major dependence on outside consultants who are frequently naive about the administrative, intellectual and political structure of the nation that is writing a blueprint for its future.

"With the best will and technical skill in the world," the dean advises, "short term consultants have tropped from so call advanced countries to help in the master minding of three, five, seven, or even ten-year plans. All too often the consultants have brought with them an intellectual aparatus which either was not germane to the problems of the societies they were visiting or was incapable of being transferred to an alien soil."

All-encompassing

Warning that central planning will not succeed if it is centralized in one agency or at one level of government, Dean Bailey stresses that it must of necessity encompass the interests and desires of every agency of government. And, by the same token, it must not be divorced from private energies and endeavors.

"Planning is not something that political leaders do to a society," Dean Bailey concludes. "Successful planning is cooperative action within procedural restraints for the realization of popularly supported goals. It is a highly complex, consent building operation and cannot be achieved by orders alone."

SU Gets Taiwanese Letter

By CAROL RUBRIGHT

Nannette Ludwig Williams, a Syracuse student, is teaching now in Taiwan as a representative of Syracuse-In-Asia. Sponsored by the proceeds of the S-I-A's annual Christmas Sale, Miss Williams is currently teaching French and English to students in Tunghai University. She writes:

Hong Kong

Dear Syracusans,

The firecrackers have died down a little—much to the relief of the city fire department. Chinese New Year officially began on the 25th of January and fireworks were permitted. The sparks set off over 300 fires in a 48-hour period, and in the crowded wood and tarpaper squatters' shacks, hundreds of people were made homeless in a matter of minutes.

Taiwan is a place full of charm, but also of frustrations. The raw winter weather brought by the cold winds blowing off the Mongolian plains brings the temperature close to freezing so that warm padded jackets and long scholar gowns must be brought out to ward off the wind.

Another frustration in Taiwan is knowing that the mail is being opened and read by a mail inspector. Several people here have had letters sent back with notes from the inspector about the contents.

If my copy of Time magazine is late, I can usually be sure that there is a picture of some Communist official in it. Every time a picture of Mao-tse-tung appears in a publication, it arrives with the Chinese character for "bandit" printed over it.

At the movies everyone rises for the Chinese National Anthem. On the screen flashes a map of mainland China, the Nationalist army in preparation for invasion, and the president making plans for attack. Most people I have been able to talk to consider this to be an old man's dream, but there is a great longing of the Chinese refugees to get back to their homeland. They consider themselves as Chinese temporarily living in Taiwan not as Taiwanese at all, although only one and a half million of the total eleven million population is made up of Chinese refugees.

Sincerely,
Nannette L. Williams

Sigma Chi Charter

in 1959 and was instrumental in organizing six Sigma Chi brothers to found the local.

Delegation

Included in the Syracuse delegation were Atty. John Shaffer of the Syracuse-Central New York Sigma Chi alumni association, ex-Sigma Chi Psi president George (Skip) Stanger, and Dr. R. Ford Prey, co-faculty advisor of the chapter.

There had been an active Sigma Chi chapter at SU until 1956 when the alumni removed the local charter due to repeated disciplinary conflicts. In 1956 it was one of three nationals to leave the Hill. One, Beta Theta Pi, has returned.

Traditions

The return of Sigma Chi will mark the return of several traditions to the Hill. Probably the best known is the annual "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi," chosen by each campus for national competition. Another, the Miami Triad, a Spring Weekend celebration with two other fraternities, has been continued with the local, despite the lack of the national charter.

Heading the petitioning delegation here Saturday morning was SU Dean of Men Earle W. Clifford and Atty. John Shaffer of the Syracuse Sigma Chi Alumni Association. Also included in the Syracuse delegation were Ex Sigma Chi Psi president George "Skip" Stanger, Douglas L. Graham, a Sigma Chi Psi founder, and Dr. R. Ford Prey, co-faculty advisor of the chapter.

The move was made with the full backing of local Sigma Chi's, the seven New York State chapters, Sigma Chi leaders throughout the Northeast and SU Chancellor William P. Tolley.

Since its founding in 1959 the fraternity has grown from six to 30 members. Its active campus program has been climaxed this past semester by winning the Inter - Fraternity Council Blood Drive award and showing the most scholastic improvement of any house on the Hill during the past year.

For the past two years the brotherhood has lived in the chapter house at 720 Comstock Ave. During their initial three years of existence they were forced to move into three different houses to hold their expanding brotherhood. With the granting of the charter, the money derived from the sale of the old Sigma Chi house in 1956 will revert to the new chapter, and plans for a new chapter house, perhaps the first in the new fraternity site near Manley Fieldhouse, will soon be drawn up.

Vandals Strip M - Street Car

Equipment valued at $260 was taken Sunday from a car parked in the 300 block of Marshall street, about 10 feet away from the door to Kimmel Hall.

Gerald Matlin, a junior living in Kimmel, told Syracuse police that the side window was cracked and two rear tires and rims, four hubcaps, two sets of floor mats, a radio and two cigarette lighters were taken.

Group to Hear Religion Prof

Dr. Gabriel Vahanian, associate professor of religion, will speak at the Feb. 21 meeting of Freshman Footprints.

The meeting, to be held at 7:30 p.m. in DellPlain lounge, is open to all freshmen.

Howard Messing, chairman of Freshman Footprints, has recommended that freshmen attending the meeting read Dr. Vahanian's "The Death of God." However, this is not required.

Dr. Vahanian, who joined the department of religion in 1958, received his bachelor of arts degree at Grenoble, and degrees at the Sorbonne University and the Faculte de Theologie Protestante de Paris.

He earned his master's and doctorate degrees of theology at the Princeton Theological Seminary.

Eric Fleming, star of "Rawhide," was featured on Broadway in "No Time for Sergeants," "My Three Angels" and "Stalag 17," among other plays.

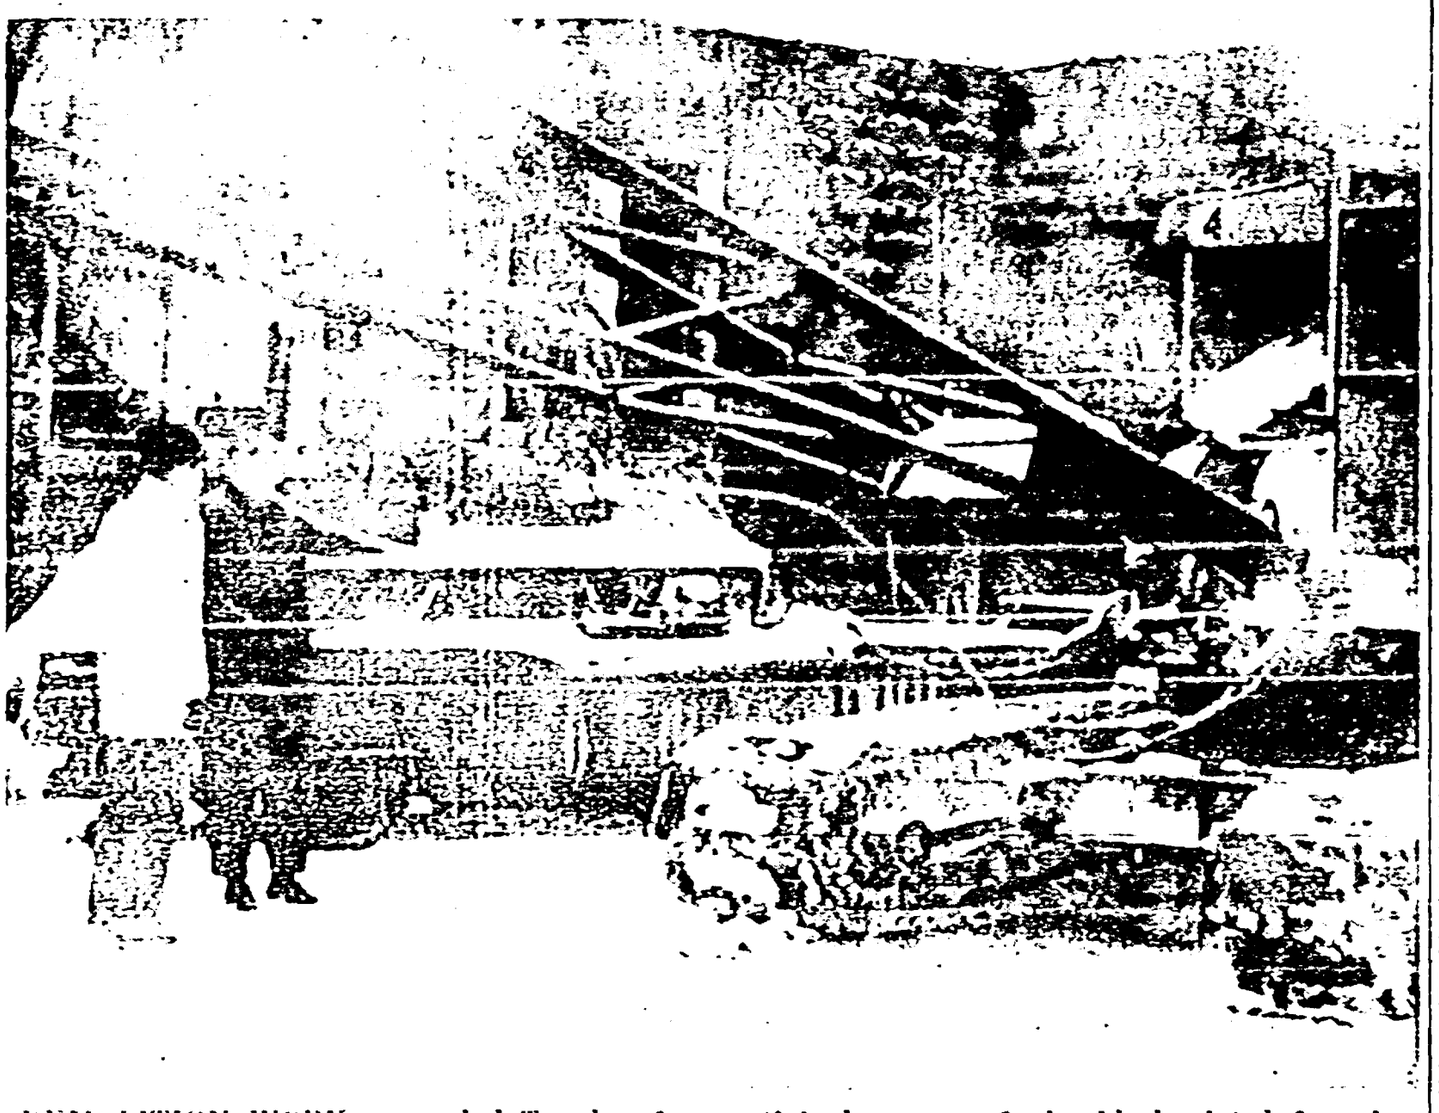
ENGINEERS!

Which career pathway will you take?

AT NEW YORK TELEPHONE YOU CAN START IN ONE FIELD...LATER SWITCH TO ANOTHER... WITHOUT WASTING ANY PRECIOUS EXPERIENCE!

At New York Telephone we take a strong interest in building your career. We begin by relating your interest, experience and education to three broad fields of operation — Administration, Engineering, and Sales-Marketing. We help you find out where you show your greatest promise. Perhaps it won't be in the field where you started. No matter. At New York Telephone the comprehensive training you receive will help you to grow into any number of key positions.

Look at these exciting opportunities for young men:



Administration — Due to continued growth in the next ten years, qualified men must be found to fill more middle- and top-management positions than exist in the company today.
Engineering — Here, too, it's a young man's world at New York Telephone! We need competent, creative young engineers to help us move ahead fast in systems engineering, construction, planning, transmission, special-facilities design.
Sales-Marketing — An exciting new side to the communications industry. New Jobs are opening up for industrial specialists, sales managers, account managers — as well as in market analysis and product development.

No matter which career path you choose at New York Telephone, you get these advantages: good pay, a chance for rapid advancement.

For full information about New York Telephone — and your future here — write to Ed Dooley, College Employment Coordinator, Room 1770, 140 West Street, New York 7, N. Y. Or inquire at your College Placement Office.

One Coming Down

DEMOLITION WORK proceeded Tuesday for partial clearance of the block slated for the Newhouse Communications Center. JAMES STELTENPOHL and RONALD MATHEWSON, SU engineering senior and junior, inspect progress on tearing down of a stone structure formerly occupied by the campus buildings and grounds service, which is now in the university's Ainsley drive warehouse. Haven Hall and Schultze Cottage, on University avenue, will come down next.

The 1000 copies of the magazine will be sold in living centers for 35 cents per copy, according to Hughes. Marshall street dealers have also agreed to sell the magazine.

"Starting from scratch financially and having a small staff has made it more difficult than I had realized," the editor said.

"Our advertising, however, has been excellent," Hughes added.

Gene Gilmore, instructor in the School of Journalism, commented "Terry Hughes' magazines are always stimulating. The articles usually deal with subjects pertinent to campus life. I am eager to read his latest edition."

the drinking policy be approved by the Personnel Committee, the administration and the chancellor, it must be approved further by the SU Board of Trustees.

"No student is allowed to come before the Board, so we must have all of our suggestions carefully documented." Mittleman pointed out. "No matter what the results are, we must present them to the administration. It is perfectly possible that the present policy might be the best one for Syracuse," he added.

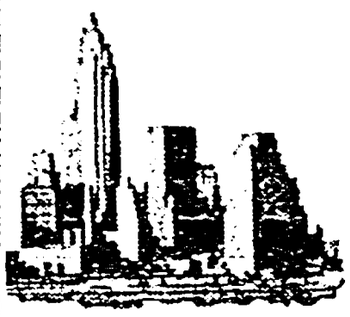
No Change

Mittleman personally favors no change in the present drinking policy.

Suggested sources by Steering Committee of information on the effectiveness of the drinking policy are the administration, students, alumni, parents and other universities.

Also, at the Steering Committee meeting, Robert Stern, chairman of JSL's student conduct and welfare committee, announced that all transfer students who are sophomores and have 1.6 averages are eligible to have cars as long as they are not on any type of probation.

First semster adviser to JSL, citizenship Instructor Joseph V. Julian, of the Maxwell School was approved unanimously by Steering Committee as second semester adviser.



The rapid removal of weight may be a problem for some athletes, but not for Gerry Everling, a Syracuse University sophomore from Binghamton, N. Y. SU's top rookie interior lineman in football, Everling weighed 265 pounds following Syracuse's final grid contest with UCLA on Dec. 8. With little effort, Gerry peeled off 14 pounds in one week and wrestled at 191 pounds against Lehigh on Dec. 15. (He won, too.)

Annual Giving Program Income

He said that the largest percentage of gifts are from alumni, although these are usually in the under-$50 range.

Many corporations match their employees' donation to the fund, as well as having programs of direct grants to higher education.

Most contributions from foundations, Leberman said, are for specific projects, such as the Maxwell School's Overseas Research Center.

Leberman added that gifts to the Annual Giving Program thus far in 1963 have more than passed the halfway mark of last year's total. He attributed this to "alumni who are more loyal, more aware of the university's needs and more conscientious."

Part of the annual program is the Parents Program, organized by parents to meet the cost of a new health service and infirmary.

Goal for this program, Leberman said, is $350,000. About $150,000 has been raised already.

Leberman said that the Parents Program hopes to raise the additional $200,000, with four-year pledges, during 1963.

Chest Drive Nets $900

The results of the Campus Chest Dollar Drive, held for two weeks in December, were announced today by co-chairmen Joanne Stote and Steven Wimpfheimer. Over $900 was contributed during the drive.

Eight living centers received trophies for achieving 100% participation. They are Day 2, Day 4, Iota Alpha Pi, Kappa Kappa Gamma, Lambda Psi, Sigma Kappa, Tau Kappa Epsilon, and Alpha Tau Omega.

Faculty participation was 300% better than last year.

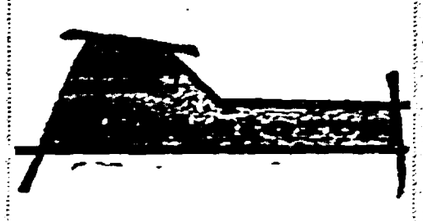
After tonight's Ithaca contest, the Syracusans travel back to Ithaca this Saturday for a rematch with tonight's visitors. They have games remaining with Brockport before the R.I.T. battle and with the University of Rochester after it.

So far this season, Syracuse has lost to Brockport 5-2, and R.I.T., 6-1, then beat Hobart 4-1 and University of Rochester, 5-0. They dropped a non-league game to Hamilton 4-3, before topping Hobart again last Saturday 4-1.



Both Brockport and R.I.T., Syracuse's only two league losses, are undefeated and meet tonight with the first-place standing at stake.

Seven DO Staff Members Appointed Junior Editors

Seven Daily Orange staff members have been appointed junior editors, Editor-in-Chief Milton Joffe announced Tuesday.

The newly-appointed junior editors include junior Rea Turet and sophomores Howard Ginsburg, Audrey Lippman, Andrew Porte, Clayton Richards, Daniel Ritey and Susan Weinberg. All have worked at least three semesters on the paper.

Miss Turet, a drama-journalism major from Yorktown Heights, is presently participating in the Syracuse Semester-in-Italy. A member of Alpha Lambda Phi sorority, she has covered the drama department for the entertainment page.

Brooklyn Resident

A resident of Brooklyn, Ginsburg is a liberal arts student and Phi Sigma Delta brother. His Daily Orange beats include the School of Journalism, Security Police and "Sword of Damocles," a magazine edited by senior Terrence Hughes.

Another student in the College of Liberal Arts, Miss Lippman is a resident of Utica. During her three semesters as a Daily Orange staff member, she has covered the Association of Women Students, the Greek-Independent Alliance and the dean of men's office.

A member of Phi Epsilon Pi fraternity, Porte hails from Chicago, Ill. A liberal arts student, Porte's beats have included Joint Student Government, the United Students party, the Class of 1965 and ROTC. He has also served on Good Squad and the sophomore class executive council.

Watkins Glen

Richards, from Watkins Glen, is enrolled in the College of Liberal Arts. A member of Sigma Chi Psi fraternity and Goon Squad, his Daily Orange beats include the dean of men's office and Interfraternity Council. He also formerly covered the Maxwell School.

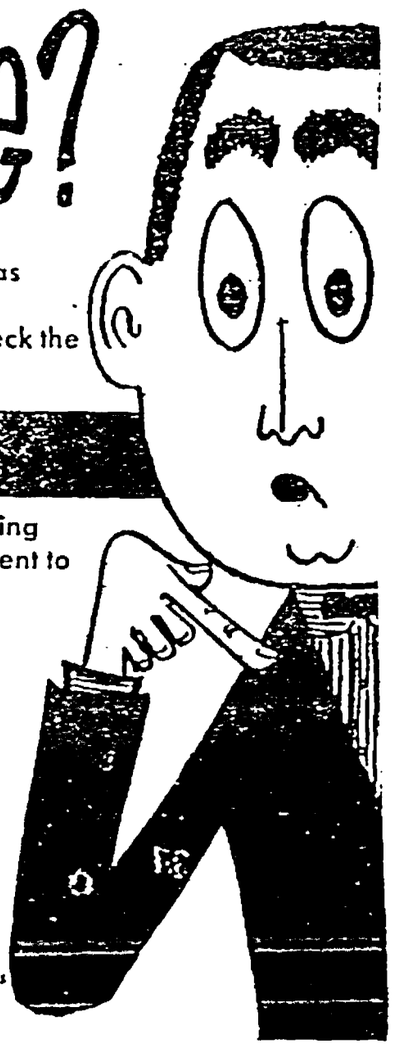
Also in the College of Liberal Arts, Ritey hails from New York City. During his three semesters on the Daily Orange staff, he has covered the Maxwell School, the Syracuse University Press, and the citizenship lecture series.

Miss Weinberg, a member of Alpha Epsilon Phi sorority, resides in Williamsville. A liberal arts student, her Daily Orange beats have included Joint Student Legislature, Panhellenic Council and the Campus Alliance Party.

Architecture Talk Slated

"Pursuit of Excellence" in architecture will be discussed by Dr. Hollister Kent, a consulting planner, at 4 p.m. today in Kittredge auditorium.

Dr. Kent, president of the New York chapter of the American Institute of Planners, received his bachelor's degree from Harvard University. He received his master's degree from Cornell University.



He was general manager in charge of site selection for Brasilia, in Brazil, and director of town planning for the Canadian town of Kitimat, n British Columbia.

From 1955 until this year Dr. Kent was director of the Division of City and Regional Planning. He is currently a partner in Planners Collaborative in Syracuse.

Tangerine Cagers Host Baby Griffins

By VIN ZUKOWSKI

A physically-weak Tangerine quintet will face a strong, tall Canisius frosh squad tonight at Manley Fieldhouse. Syracuse's Coach Morris Osburn stated, Canisius' frosh has a real good ball team and we will be going into the game with five of our 11 squad members having had virus."

Thus far, Canisius has played three Tangerine opponents. Buffalo defeated the Griff frosh while Canisius has defeated Niagara and Maroone Ford. "On the basis of these two games, we have to assume Canisius' strength," said coach Osborne.

Traditionally the Griffs employ a fast-break offense and a man to man defense. This year is no exception. However, breaking from tradition Canisius will floor a tall team. Ken Spisiak 6-7 center, backed by Tim Hessinger 6-5, and forward Warren Plant 6-6 will give their squad a decided advantage under the boards.

Canisius is led by assistant coach David C. Markey. Markey played college basketball for Canisius and was second team Little All-America in his senior year. He has served four years as frosh coach and is also the varsity baseball mentor.

Markey will bring his squad to Syracuse against sub-par frosh. Coach Osborne said he would go with his usual starting five. But both Goldsmith and Aldeman, weakened, by virus are doubtful starters.

With the Canisius team, Markey set the school record for most free-throws in one game. Against Wayne State, Markey hit for 18 charity tosses. Before moving into the coaching position, he played baseball at Batavia, a Cleveland Indian farm team.

The Tangerine will risk its 9-3 record in the preliminary. After its second loss to Cornell, the team will be hoping to return to its winning ways. All indications point towards another close game.

Dave Bing, who has been under-the-weather the past three games, has still maintained his 24-point average. Recently, Goldsmith has been able to pick up where Bing has not been able to improve. These two small men, Bing 6-2 and Goldsmith 6-3, will have to be in best condition to undermine Canisius' height.

Battle-Scarred Orange Faces Canisius Five

By BILL CRONAUER

A battle-scarred Orange cage squad receives more top-flight opposition tonight when the Golden Griffins of Canisius invade Manley Field House for an 8:30 encounter.

Canisius, fresh from a 105-72 slaughter of Manhattan University, arrives in Syracuse with a 12-4 record and an All-American candidate in Bill O'Connor.

Tonight's contest is the fourth in eight days for the rapidly improving Piety. Syracuse (6-9) has recently dropped games to Cornell and LaSalle while upsetting Niagara, 68-67.

Orange coach Fred Lewis feels that the Griffins "are one of the best shooting clubs we'll face all season. They had a 74 shooting percentage in the first half of the Manhattan game."

The big man in the Canisius attack is 6-5 center Bill O'Connor. The 205-pound senior from Stamford, Conn., stands as the third leading scorer in major college circles.

O'Connor has hit for 406 points in 16 games this season, averaging 25.4 tallies per contest. He also tops his squad in rebounding with 159 snares.

Only one of O'Connor's two senior running mates will be dressed for action tonight. No. two scorer and rebounder Tom Chester will play, but guard Pat Turtle is sidelined by an ankle injury.

Junior Joe Bossert, the top Canisius reserve, assumes Turtle's backcourt duties. The 5-10 Bossert, a jump shot specialist, made only 19 per cent of his shots last year, but has impressed coach Bob MacKinnon with his improved offensive play.

Chester, a rugged 6-4 forward is considered one of the better defensive ballplayers in the country. He ranks behind O'Connor in scoring with 13 points per game and in rebounds with 142.

Completing the Griffin starting lineup are 6-3 junior Tony Gennari and 6-3 sophomore Dick McClory. Gennari is averaging 12.1 with most of his points on a fine outside jump shot.

McClory spent last year recovering from a wrist injury. He is scoring at a 8.8 pace in 1962-63.

SU coach Lewis' starting lineup for the Canisius clash includes Carl Vernick 10.7 points per game, Herb Foster (10), Manny Klutchkowski, (7.1), Dick Finley (5.3) and either Jim Seaman (7.1) or Phil Schoff (11).

Foster and Vernick are both under the weather and may see only limited action. Foster bruised his hip in the Niagara encounter and is not fully mended.

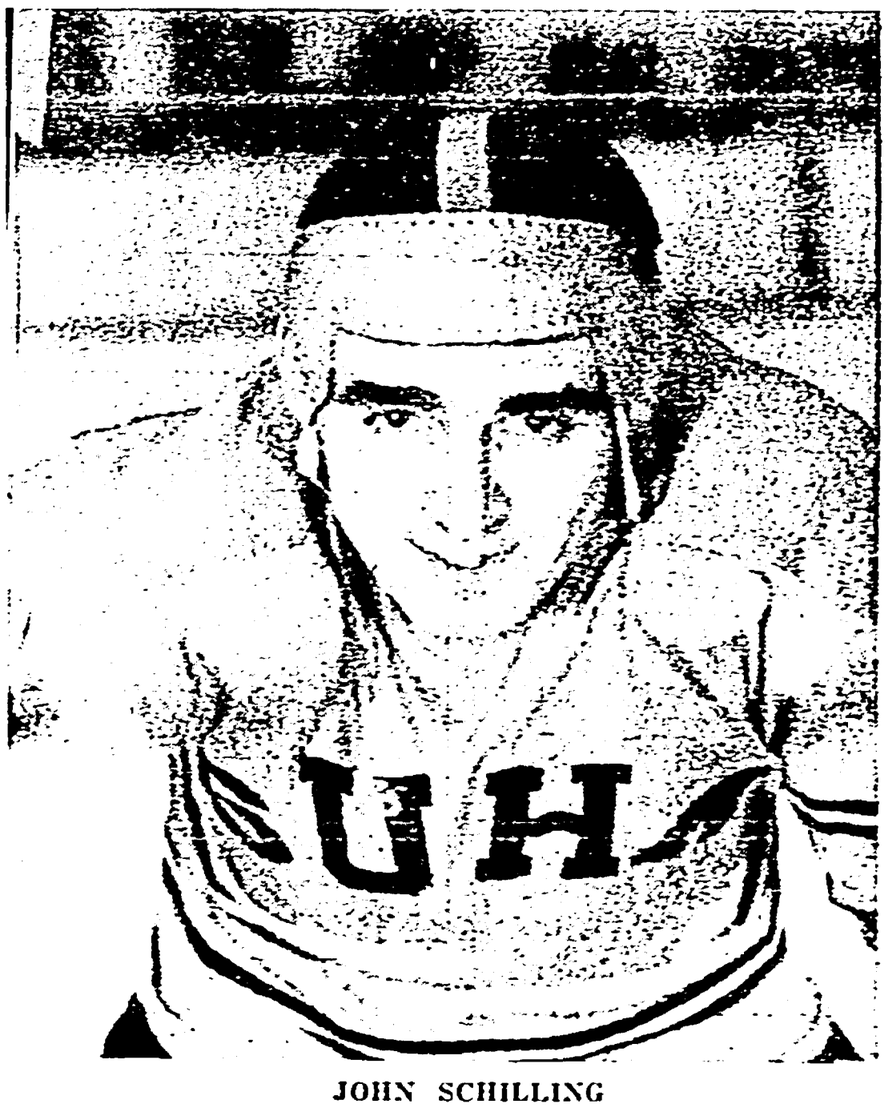
Vernick is slowed by a heavy cold which may limit his play. Sophomore Dick Duffy provides backcourt strength.

Hockey Association Faces Ithaca at Coliseum

FRED ROBINSON

By JUDY ADAMS

Fred Robinson is a name feared around the local amateur rinks, and rightly so. The Syracuse senior is currently leading the Finger Lakes Collegiate Hockey League in scoring with nine points, an average of nearly two points per game.



Tonight Robinson and his crew that compose the Syracuse University Hockey Association host the Ithaca Big Red in the State Fair Coliseum. Face off time is 9:30 p.m.

The Syracuse representatives are 3-2 in League play and are holding down the third-place position. Ithaca is presently fourth.

Tonight's game is next-to-the-last home game of the season for the Syracuse club. The home finale will be held Saturday, February 23 against R.I.T., as one of the highlights of the winter weekend.

The hockey club has made it a big hockey day, with the renting of the Coliseum for public skating after the hockey game. Busses have been hired for students attending the con-

Three Suspended, 1 Student on Pro

By CLAY RICHARDS
Junior Editor

Two Hill students have been suspended and a third placed on disciplinary probation by the dean of men's office. A Joint Student Court recommendation to suspend a fourth, has been approved, Dean of Men Earle W. Clifford announces.

In the first case, a sophomore has been suspended for a year for taking part in the theft of an amplifier and turntable from Huntington B. Crouse Hall offices during the summer session. A second student involved in the theft is no longer at the university but has been informed that he will not be eligible for readmission for a year.

Investigate

The case has been under extensive investigation since last June, Clifford said, but the long process of eliminating students and outsiders here during the summer session has only recently brought its solution.

The ex-student involved in the case left the school for academic reasons prior to the discovery of his connection in the case.

The stolen goods have been returned by both men, and no criminal charges have been placed against the duo, Clifford said.

In the second suspension action a freshman distributing football parleys will not be able to apply for readmission until February, 1964, Clifford said. Because he was a freshman and not the "pusher" in the parley, stronger action was not taken.

Parleys

Investigation is still being made into the roles of other student distributors in athletic parleys, Clifford commented.

In the third action, a junior has been placed on disciplinary probation for a violation of the university's drinking policy off campus that led to police action. While the charge of public intoxication against the student was dropped, violation of the university's policy to the point of being charged brought the school's action, Clifford said.

In the student court action, approved Monday by the dean of men's office, a student previously on probation for violation of library privileges has been suspended for one semester for violation of that probation.

The student had been guilty of driving a car on campus which is directly contrary to the terms of the probation, Clifford explained.

The first three cases arose during the vacation period while court was not in session, Clifford explained, while the fourth came during court's session.

3 Cottages, 3 Prefabs Set to Close

Three men's cottages and three prefabs are being closed in the normal spring semester rehousing program, Men's housing Director Bruce DeBruhl announced Wednesday.

Slated for emptying are University Cottage at 811 University Ave., and Lund Cottage at 911 South Crouse Ave., both freshmen cottages; Roosevelt Cottage at 777 Irving Ave; prefabs one, two, and five near Archbold Stadium.

The move will affect some 75 students, DeBruhl stated. No freshmen will be living in cottages after Lund and University are closed, he said. This is the usual spring semester moving arrangement.

Roosevelt was chosen for closing because nearly 40 percent of its residents had already been moved, DeBruhl said. The three prefabs are being closed because they lack telephones.

The students move into vacancies in major dorms created by students leaving school.

Shhhh! - - - - Carpet Quiets Flint Coeds

Carpeting will cushion the cacophony in the Crouse site upperclass women's dormitory, to be finished in the fall of 1964. The contract for the new dormitory includes carpeting in all corridors and public places, said Jean Crawford, women's housing director.

Drinking Inquiry Phases Outlined

By SUSAN WEINBERG
Junior Editor

The chairman of the Joint Student Legislature special drinking policy committee offered a five point plan of inquiry into the university drinking policy at the JSL meeting Wednesday.

The proposals of Sen. Alfred "Win" Whittaker (Lambda Chi Alpha) are to:

1. Find out all university objections to having liquor on campus.

2. Form a letter-writing committee to send a statement of university objections and policy on liquor to other college campuses, both wet and dry, for their opinions and suggestions.

3. Get the opinion of Syracuse students through a survey poll. Both Greek and independent opinions will be sought and in particular the opinions of resident advisors who did not spend their undergraduate years at Syracuse.

4. Have a group discussion with the dean of men, the dean of women, the chancellor and various vice presidents.

5. Ask for letters from parents who "have a right and obligiation to comment on university policy."

To carry out these five phases Sen. Whittaker said five committees will be formed. He asked for volunteers to head and work on the committees. He also wants a junior to act as his assistant.

Open to All

All of these posts are open to the campus at large as well as JSL senators, he emphasized.

The order of the proposals indicate the order of the investigation. Once these five steps have been taken, specific recommendations will be formulated, Whittaker said.

"To be successful we must be able to answer every objection

Marion Group Files Petition To Join GIA

A group of Marion Dormitory residents have filed a petition to join in the Greek Independent Alliance, a campus political party.

The group consists of 25 Marionites headed by Frank Kelly, a liberal arts sophomore from Cohoes. All of the group's members are upperclassmen; none are members of fraternities.

One other independent group, Independents on Campus, is active in campus politics. IOC is a member of Campus Alliance Party. The United Students party has no independent members.

According to GIA President James Gray (Theta Chi), the group will become a non-dues paying member of GIA. Both US and CAP have passed resolutions approving entrance of independent groups into their parties, but both require the payment of dues.

Kelly said that his group chose GIA over the other parties because "CAP and US are more composed of large houses and are not as interested in independents as GIA is."

Some Slam Rush; Dropout Still Low

Despite rumors to the contrary, this year's large sorority rush, drop out rate after the first round of parties does not indicate freshman women are dissatisfied with sororities rush, Carol Shire, PanHellenic rushing chairman, has told the Daily Orange.

The majority of coeds drop rush because they fail to make the required minimum one point average; so the important factor to know in comparing the drop rate of varsity years is the time marks are given out to students, she explanied.

The Daily Orange has asked a number of freshman women who withdrew from sorority rushing their reasons for withdrawal. Here are their comments.

"It's all a big act," commented one Day Hall resident who dropped rushing. "It seemed that they were begging us to join," she added. She mentioned that her coat was "priced" at several houses. "It's just too much a farce," she concluded.

A Flint Hall coed stressed she thinks there is too much conformity in sororities. "I want to do things because I want to, not because I'm told to," she stated. She termed sororities a "crutch" for many girls who are unable to get along by themselves.

Another Day Hall freshman said that she will only pledge if she finds the "perfect" sorority, but has not yet found it. She added that she is looking for a house with coeds with whom she would like to live. She termed the sorority system "too organized and business-like."

Attitude

"I didn't like the snobby attitude," a Winchell Hall resident commented. She also said that she dislikes rushing procedure. However, she said that she might rush informally later in the year.

ID PICTURES

ID pictures for students who do not have identification cards will be taken from 6 to 9 p.m. Friday and from 9 a.m. to noon Saturday in 215 Men's Gym.

Students will be required to know their student number and show tuition receipts before picture will be taken.

Students whose ID cards were confiscated during the fall semester are not eligible for new cards.

Meet Father Borgognoni

By SANDY MYERS

He has blue eyes, thinning black hair, an avid interest in music and drama.

He sees "anything that's good" on Broadway and often, with the shorthand learned in high school, copies the music and scripts for shows he produces with the Syracuse Pompeian Players.

He is Rev. Charles L. Borgognoni, recently appointed Hill Catholic chaplain.

Father Borgognoni, named to replace the late Rt. Rev. Msgr. Gannon F. Ryan, likes young people, and feels that if he "speaks their language, they'll give 100 per cent attention."

To do this, he instituted a series of coffees at St. Thomas More Chapel. Nearly 100 freshmen at the initial reception Tuesday night. A social for sophomores was held Wednesday night.

A coffee for juniors is set for 7 p.m. tonight, with seniors and graduate students slated for next Tuesday and Wednesday.

Socials

The purpose of these socials, Father Borgognoni said, is "for me to get to know the students, and for them to get to know me." At the coffees he distri-

Dead Week

Syracuse University needs a dead week.

It has come to our attention that the practice of some universities of suspending all activities, except classes, during the last week before examinations could prove to be an invaluable aid to the improvement of academic achievement at Syracuse.

We are currently working under the system of an unwritten "semi-dead week" in which most activities cease but none is required to. We suggest a strict ruling that would legislate a required dead week for all campus activities.

This would include all extra-curricular activities, social functions and athletic events. The implication here is that by suspending such activities—including even, administrative committee meetings—students will be given the opportunity to prepare for the examination period in a much more orderly and unhurried fashion. The final result, if students take advantage of the opportunity, will be improved performance on final examinations, higher grades, and ultimately, a higher academic standard for Syracuse.

The plan will also call for the class time during this dead week to be concerned mainly with review of course material without further new assignments.

Obviously, such a plan needs the cooperation of all parties concerned. Campus organizations must be willing to allow for a halting of their work, administration officials must agree to postpone committee meetings, faculty must be willing to spend the final week of classes for review material.

However, the most important ingredient is the student. Without his cooperation, dead week will never work. He must be convinced the plan is for his benefit and any avoidance of his obligation to the plan will end it immediately.

Thus if students fail to attend these review classes and if they fail to avail themselves of the studying opportunities afforded by a dead week, they will lose the chance to help themselves.

The Daily Orange urges students, faculty and administration to seriously consider a plan for such a dead week, or one very similar. All aspects of the university community stand to benefit from it.

Be Your What?

Little did we think, while writing our series on the proverbial world situation, that we would be forced to follow the series with a defense of love.

We do not mean that the Daily Orange feels the need to come out in favor of love but we must defend Valentine's Day. For, it came to pass, earlier in the week that we wandered into a local card store in quest of a card which could aptly express our feelings to those who mattered.

And what did we find? The biggest turnover in cards was among those that not only made a mockery out of the whole idea of Valentines Day but which went a step beyond and somehow replaced love with sex in the messages the cards bore.

Now, we are not without a sense of humor and agree that some of the so-called contemporary or "sick" cards are indeed humorous, but the line should be drawn somewhere and certainly it should be traced between the distinction of love and sex.

Why, before we know it the biggest thing on the market will be "sick" Mothers Day cards.

We left the card store, shocked and saddened. Wiping a tear from two misty eyes, we thought of those golden days when a man could pore out his heart to the woman he loved by sending a flowery card with a giant heart, bearing some original thought such as: "Roses are Red," etc.

Happy Valentine's Day!

College newspapers have been working overtime to satisfy the news-starved New York City residents. COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY and NYU carried national news, and Columbia's Spectator had the privilege of printing columns by James Reston, Art Buchwald, Walter Lippmann, Red Smith, and Russell Baker. Some other Ivy League schools helped. The HARVARD Crimson distributed 10,000 copies of a special edition in New York, and the YALE Daily News carried the New York Times News Service.

A new organization, the Metropolitan Inter-Collegiate Council, was formed by five universities to coordinate activities and to exchange ideas and suggestions concerning student government. The universities are AMERICAN U., UNIVERSITY OF MARYLAND, HOWARD, GEORGETOWN, and CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY. They are all located in the Washington, D.C. area.

The Metropolitan Inter-Collegiate Council, meeting at least once a month, hopes to establish inter-university participation in various school activities. The group will also attempt to obtain student discounts. Juniors and seniors may be permitted to take out library books from any of the included schools, if the council can clear this plan with the schools.

The arrival of a new president, Vincent MacDowell Barnett, at COLGATE UNIVERSITY has provoked all sorts of rumors about future changes. The one most grounded in reality is the increase in enrollment to about 2,000. There has also been more talk about co-education at Colgate than ever before.

The CORNELL Daily Sun announced that it will publish a "confidential guide" to fall term courses next month. The guide will summarize students' opinions of their courses on the basis of a survey.

The course review is intended to fill the large gaps existing in college catalogue descriptions of courses. It will describe in detail the range of subject matter and reading covered in each course and will indicate what students think of the quality of teaching, the value of the lectures, sections and reading, and the finals and/or papers. The HARVARD Crimson already has a 50-page magazine that serves this purpose.

The BRANDEIS UNIVERSITY newspaper, The Justice, recently published a front-page editorial entitled "Death of a Liberal Tradition," which strongly opposed the creation of a student publications board that the administration had suggested. The editorial claimed that such a board would have no other purpose than censorship or the removal of editors.

COLUMBIA'S Spectator has maintained editorial freedom by being financially independent from the university. An independent corporation, the paper's board of directors, headed by Emmanuel Freedman, foreign news editor of the New York Times, is the ultimate decision-making unit on the paper.

TEMPLE UNIVERSITY in Philadelphia became the largest college in Pennsylvania as of September, when 20,698 degree-seeking students enrolled. The university is the third largest private institution in the United States, ranking behind NYU with 33,232 students and COLUMBIA with 24,000 registered pupils.

PRINCETON has instituted a new course entitled "Physics for the Non-Scientist." The course is restricted to upperclassmen majoring in the humanities and social sciences and its stated purpose is to increase scientific literacy and to study the relation between modern science and technology and the humanities.

Princeton President Robert F. Goheen described the course as "a first concrete step in what is to be a continuing university-wide attack upon one of the urgent problems of our times: the whole question of scientific literacy and the dangerous failure of communications between the scientists and non-scientists."

A clever satire on the Peanuts book, "Happiness is a Warm Puppy," was discovered in a column of the HOLY CROSS Crusader. Here are a few examples from the article, entitled "Hate is a Cold Puppy": "Hate is guys talking in your room the night of a bluebook. Hate is a bluebook. Hate is no cigarettes. Hate is a watery coke. Hate is a professor who doesn't laugh. Hate is a taken telephone. Hate is after the No-Doz wear off. Hate is three philosophy courses in senior year. Hate is senior year."

Skeptics

To the Editor:

Until the present time, an open discussion circle, run entirely by students, has been operating one night a week under the name "Upperclass Skeptics Corner." Since the name falsely implies, to some people, that the quality of skepticism is a requirement for those who wish to attend, a new name will be adopted: Contemporary Conscience.

Another misgiving that some people have had is about the fact that the meetings are held in Dean of Hendricks Chapel Charles C. Noble's home—this has apparently caused some people to fear that they will be preached at.

We wish to make clear the fact that it is Dean Noble who initiated Skeptics Corner some 18 years ago, but solely for the purpose of providing thinking, interested, and aware students with a place where they can meet, invite different professors, and have lively discussions on whatever topics they choose. There are no requirements of any sort; you may be a believer in anything you like, as well as an agnostic, a skeptic, a humanist, or what have you. The more differing opinions we have, the livelier the discussions are. If you are the timid type and would rather just listen, come anyway. There are already about 18-20 people there talking it up.

Before anyone gets the idea that we are trying to recruit more people, we want to make it clear that our sole purpose in publishing this letter and in changing the name to Contemporary Conscience is to point out the fact that anyone at all interested in having a place to go to broaden himself and test out some of his ideas in friendly discussions is invited to Dean Noble's living room. If the number gets too large, we'll find a larger meeting place, like the Colonial Room or the Founders Room. Watch the Campus Notices.

Krasner Directs Everson Concert

Prof Louis Krasner of the School of Music faculty will direct the third concert in the Syracuse Friends of Chamber Music series at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday, February 19 at the Everson Museum.

The varied program will include works by Hindemith, Brahms and Mendelssohn, and will feature woodwinds and piano as well as the strings of the Krasner Music Ensemble.

Highlighting guest artists John Oberbrunner, flute; Gerald Zampino, clarinet; Philip MacArthur, oboe; Anthony De Angelis, bassoon; and Marvin Howe, horn; the concert will open with the Hindemith "Quintet."

Hindemith is the only composer on the program who is living.

The "Trio for Piano, Violin and Horn" by Brahms also will be heard Tuesday. Performing in this number will be: Sara Lombardi, piano; Marvin Howe, horn; and Louis Krasner, violin.

The final work of the evening, the "Octet for Strings" by Mendelssohn will feature the Krasner ensemble with Louis Krasner, Adrienne Galimir, Ethel Freeman Black, and Larraine Shapiro, violins; Claude Bortel and Betty Gehring, violas; and Frederick Miller and George Mulfinger, Jr., cellos.

Student and regular tickets are available at the door.

Lowe Displays Busch Photos

An exhibition of 40 photographs of monuments of German medieval sculpture taken by Harald Busch opens today at Joe and Emily Lowe Art Center.

The photographs will be on display until March 4 Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and 7-10 p.m., Saturdays 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sundays 2-6 p.m.

They are enlargements which present a pageant of medieval character beginning with a head of Christ from an 8th century casket and continuing through the 13th century monuments of Bamberg and Magdeburg to the late Gothic Madonnas and portraits from Cologne, Bonn and Strassburg.

Born and educated in Germany where he received his doctorate, Busch has long been concerned with photography and historical studies. In addition to his photographs, Busch has written a series of articles dealing with sculpture and architecture in Germany and in Europe as a whole.

His photographs emphasize historical authenticity. "I try to take things the way they are and should be seen," he has said.

Top Cellist In Syracuse

One of the world's leading cellists, Janos Starker, will play works by Beethoven, Couperin, and Mendelssohn at 8:15 p.m. tonight at Lincoln Auditorium.

Described by Time magazine as a "cloudborne cellist," Starker records for Period and Angel. His recordings range over the entire cello literature from Vivaldi to Bartok.

In 1948 he received the Grand Prix du Disque International for his recording of Zoltan Kodaly's Sonata for Unaccompanied Cello.

A professor of music at Indiana University, Starker travels among American community orchestras as a string consultant and aids aspiring string players.

Besides appearing as a soloist, Starker has gained a reputation here and abroad as an interpreter of chamber music.

Exchange Recital

As part of an informal international exchange program, Marek Jablonski, a young Canadian pianist, will give a recital at 8:30 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 21 in Crouse College Auditorium.

This program which started in Belgium in 1940 is designed to increase the interest of youth and young adults in serious music. Sponsor of the program, Isaac Stern, president of Carnegie Hall and violinist, first interested Syracuse University in it when he gave a recital here in January.

Jablonski's program will consist of compositions by Chopin, Brahms and the twelfth Hungarian Rhapsody.

There is no admission charge and campus parking is free.

'2 Pianos' Play Monday

A recital of music for two pianos will be given by Stuart Raleigh and Stuart Lanning, both in the School of Music, at 8:30 p.m. Monday, in Crouse College Auditorium.

The two will play J. S. Bach's "Sheep May Safely Graze," Brahm's "Variations on a Theme by Haydn;" Hindemith's "Sonata for Two Pianos;" and Riegger's "Finale from the New Dance."

Raleigh, a graduate student in the school is music director for the campus radio station WAER, and a member of the Civic Morning Musicals and Pro Art Society, and is a staff pianist for the Syracuse Symphony Orchestra.

Lanning, a senior, was formerly musical director of the Three Rivers Inn.

FILMS

'Billy Budd'

Peter Ustinov has done a fine job in transfering Herman Melville's "Billy Budd" to the screen. He has not altered the basic plot and has maintained the novel's theme. Beyond that he has given "Billy Budd," now playing at RKO Keith's, an added visual dimension that increases the human and emotional aspects of the original.

Billy Budd is a young American seaman on the merchant ship "Rights of Man" impressed to serve aboard a British man-of-war. Here, the innocent lad finds all the cruelty and paradoxes of life, locked in a wooden microcasm machine of war. He is confronted by a crew of frustrated men, a sadistic master-at-arms and by a captain who allows his intellect to dominate his emotions to the point of bringing about Billy's destruction Terence Stamp, as the blond Billy, is a rare find indeed. His Billy is naive but not stupid, pure but not frail, delicate but not effeminate.

As the purveyor of human evil Robert Ryan delivers a strong but not overdone performance, as too often is the case in this kind of role, as Claggart. Sharply costumed in black, Ryan reveals something sinister behind his handsome face.

Claggart is first amused, then confused, and finally frightened by Billy. Always mindful of his camera, despite the physical limitations of shooting in close ship quarters, producer-director-author Ustinov films the confrontation between Claggart and Budd with tension and shock.

Billy's face contorts with studied frustration and agony as Claggart presses his accusations. Ustinov, as Captain Vere, convincingly portrays the dilemma of the human" innocence versus the "legal" guilt of Billy. If, in this sequence, the intellectual subject matter tends to bog the film down, it is quickly overcome by the heart rendering but tragic finale.

NASA Grants Now Available

Syracuse University has received eight three-year predoctoral fellowships from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration for graduate students in space-related sciences.

Each fellowship grants $2400 per year, and the University provides all tuition and fees. The University, under terms of the NASA contract, will select individuals for the program.

The purpose of the grants is to help meet the nation's need for highly trained scientists and engineers.

This is the second year of the experimental NASA program, and the first in which Syracuse University has participated.

Paul Brinegar, Wishbone on "Rawhide" on the CBS Television Network, learned stagecraft as "everybody's helper" backstage at a Santa Fe theatre.

gan later this year than last, the majority of rushees either knew their marks before first parties began or received them during first parties, commented Miss Shire.

This is in contrast to last year, she continued. Then most rushees did not know their marks until during or after the second round of parties.

Thus to get an accurate picture of this year's rush in relation to last year's, it is necessary to compare drops for the first two rounds of parties last year with those after just the first parties this year, she said.

"On the basis of experience," she said, "I would say that 95 per cent of those who failed to pick up their cards after first parties did not make their grades."

Miss Shire explained that the University releases the marks of all coeds registered for rushing to PanHellenic.

Miss Shire also said that a few coeds drop every year for other than academic reasons, ranging from financial problems to dissatisfaction with the invitations they receive.

Of the 40 coeds who dropped rush this year for known reasons, only 9 were for other than academic reasons, she stated.

Miss Shire also emphasized that any coed who has not yet received her grades is still eligible to rush.

However, she stated, no coed who failed to make her one point will be allowed to rush until next fall.

Bus Ad Group To Interview

The College of Business Administration Student - Faculty Council will hold interviews for freshmen, sophomores and juniors in the college who are interested in membership, on Monday and Tuesday from 3-4:30 p.m. in the Pine Room of Lubin Hall.

The council sponsors the annual college picnic and frequent coffees and discusses various college problems.

Other coeds attacked "small talk" and monotony of the continuing rush sessions. Several others said they dropped rushing because of failure to receive invitations from the houses they wanted.

Other girls who dropped rushing cited academic and financial reasons. Several mentioned stiff pledge requirements, including a "strenuous series of coffees" and Saturday work sessions.

SCHOLARSHIP FORMS DUE

All applications for 1963-64 financial aid are due April 5, Director of Financial Aids Jim G. Carleton has announced.

Students desiring financial aid should fill out applications which are available from the offices of the dean of men and the dean of women.

Carleton explained that a cumulative 1.5 grade point average is required for consideration for scholarship assistance.

Army Blues Unit Formed

An Army Blues Unit, an auxiliary to Army ROTC, is being organized at SU.

Interested girls may pick up applications at the Women's Building or at the Army ROTC Headquarters, Men's Gym. The deadline for submitting applications is Feb. 21.

Further information can be obtained at either of the above offices. Announcements are posted on the bulletin boards in sorority houses and dormitories.

In ten years with CBS News, Blaine Litten, Africa correspondent, has served as reporter, unit manager and program producer.

On Campus with Max Shulman

(Author of "I Was a Teen-age Dwarf," "The Many Loves of Dobie Gillis," etc.)

THE CURSE OF THE CAMPUS: NO. 1

Hate me if you will, but I must speak. We college types are far too complacent. Sure, we've got plenty to be proud of. We've got atom smashers, we've got graduate schools, we've got new peaks in scholarship, new highs in academic honors. And yet, in the midst of these triumphs, we have failed dismally to make any progress in solving the oldest and most horrendous of all campus problems: we've still got roommates.

To be sure, all roommates are not bad. There is the well-documented case of Hilquit Glebe, a student at the Manhattan College of Agriculture, majoring in curds and whey, who admitted publicly that he actually liked his roommate—an odd admission when you consider that this roommate, Mervis Trunz by name, was frankly not too winsome a fellow. He practiced his tympani in his room, he kept an alligator, and he collected airplane tires.

But, on the other hand, Mervis bought two packs of Marlboro Cigarettes every day and gave one of them to Hilquit and—I ask you—who can stay mad at a man who gives you Marlboro Cigarettes? Who, upon tasting that flavorful blend of Marlboro tobaccos, upon drawing through that pure white Marlboro filter, upon exulting in this best of all possible cigarettes, Marlboro—who, I say, can harden his heart against his neighbor? Certainly not Hilquit. Certainly not I. Certainly not you, as you will find when you scurry to your nearest tobacconist and buy a supply. Marlboros come in soft pack or Flip-Top Box. Tobacconists come in small, medium, and large.

But I digress. Roommates, I say, are still with us and I fear they always will be, so we better learn how to get along with them. It can be done, you know. Take, for instance, the classic case of Dolly Pitcher and Molly Madison.

Dolly and Molly, roommates at a prominent Midwestern girls' school (Vassar) had a problem that seemed insoluble. Dolly could only study late at night, and Molly could not stay awake past nine o'clock. If Dolly kept the lights on, the room was too bright for Molly to sleep. If Molly turned the lights off, the room was too dark for Dolly to study. What to do?

Well sir, those two intelligent American kids found an answer. They got a miner's cap for Dolly! Thus, she had enough light to study by, and still the room was dark enough for Molly to sleep.

It must be admitted, however, that this solution, ingenious as it was, had some unexpected sequelae. Dolly got so enchanted with her miner's cap that she switched her major from 18th Century poetry to mining and metallurgy. Shortly after graduation she had what appeared to be a great stroke of luck: while out prospecting, she discovered what is without question the world's largest feldspar mine. This might have made Dolly very rich except that nobody, alas, has yet discovered a use for feldspar. Today Dolly, a broken woman, squeezes out a meagre living making echoes for tourists in Mammoth Cave.

Nor has Molly fared conspicuously better. Once Dolly got the miner's hat, Molly was able to catch up on her long-lost sleep. She woke after eight days, refreshed and vigorous—more vigorous, alas, than she realized. It was the afternoon of the annual Dean's tea. Molly stood in line with her classmates, waiting to shake the Dean's hand. At last her turn came, and Molly, full of strength and health, gave the Dean a firm handshake—so firm, indeed, that all five of the Dean's knuckles were permanently fused.

The Dean sued for a million dollars, and, of course, won. Today Molly, a broken woman, is paying off her debt by walking the Dean's cat every afternoon for ten cents an hour.

with facts, we must have student backing, and we cannot leave anything out," he noted. "We must be open and above board" in our presentation to the administration.

Whittaker pointed out that at this time he does not have any preconceived ideas as to what the drinking policy should be.

"This is what the inquiry should determine, but I do not feel that we should have a totally wet campus," he added.

Next Week

Chairmen of the committees will not be named and actual work will not begin until next week.

A senior JSL senator, Whittaker has been in the legislature for three and one half years. He represents Lambda Chi Alpha. Known as the senate "conservative", he is also a Daily Orange columnist.

In other legislature business, Sen. Robert Stern, chairman of student conduct and welfare committee, announced that all sophomores who for the first time have a 1.6 cumulative average may have cars on campus. Registration procedures will appear in the DO next week.

Carpet . . .

ing is presently being made on Flint 1A. A bit of carpet was recently laid in a heavily-traveled corridor there to test its durability and noise-muffling efficiency.

The Flint carpet, of 80 per cent wool and 20 per cent nylon, is proving quite durable and very effective. "It's fun to watch the girls walk through the corridors; their voices immediately drop," noted Miss Crawford.

Carpeting produces a warmer and more pleasant atmosphere, she said. She hopes that someday it will be possible to carpet the corridors in all large women's dormitories.

"We hope to do interesting things with color in the new dorm," said Miss Crawford. The Comstock site is on Comstock Avenue, between Adams and Marshall streets.

The building itself will be very different from any existing dormitories on campus, according to Miss Crawford. The eleven floors will have no more than 45 residents on each, and there will be more single rooms than in other dormitories. The double rooms will be split by a partition.

And the corridors will be quiet and peaceful because of the wall-to-wall carpeting.

"Billy Budd' is playing at RKO Keith's Theater, not at the Paramount as reported in Wednesday's Daily Orange.

Free passes to the movie will be given to the person who best writes, in 25 words or less, why someone they know or now of, is like Billy Budd.

Entries are due by noon Friday at the DO business office, prefab 7B.

H-J Honors Three Syracusans

A Syracuse University vice president and two outstanding SU alumni are among eight men selected as Syracuse's Outstanding Men of 1962 by the Syracuse Herald-Journal.

Kenneth G. Bartlett, vice president and dean of public affairs, and SU alumni Eric W. Will and Forrest H. Wittmeyer were presented plaques Tuesday by Stephen Rogers, Herald-Journal publisher.

Others cited as outstanding business leaders were: Ransom G. MacKenzie, Gerry J. Dietz, John J. Farrel, Thomas W. Smith and Byron H. Rogers.

Chosen outstanding in the field of education, Bartlett is president of the University Hill Corp., president of Metropolitan Development Association, director and vice president of the Chamber of Commerce and a director of the Community Hospital.

Will, outstanding in industry, is president of Will and Baumer Candle Co. He is a member of the Syracuse Plan Council and has headed the SU alumni association. General co-chairman of the campaign that raised funds for Manley Fieldhouse, Will is area chairman of the university building and development campaign.

A 1928 SU graduate, Witmeyer, president of Excelsior Insurance Co., was cited as outstanding in business. Witmeyer has been active in the University Club, SU alumni association, Syracuse Free Dispensary, the Syracuse Y.W.C.A. and Y.M.C.A. and the Greater Syracuse Safety Council.

ROTC Holds Rifle Course

The first US Army Marksmanship Unit conducted an instruction course in gallery shooting Tuesday and Wednesday in the rifle range of the Men's Gym.

The purpose of the course was to train ROTC cadet company rifle teams for the inter-company rifle competition.

Instructors were Staff Sergeants Charles Kospelas and Maurice Lacasse from Fort Dix, New Jersey.

SU Nurses Receive Grant

The Syracuse University School of Nursing has received a gift of $1,715 from the newly organized National Fund for Graduate Nursing Education.

SU is one of 33 accredited graduate nursing schools to receive the grant.

The fund was established about a year ago to increase nursing enrollment at the graduate level.

Contributors include leading industrial concerns, foundations and a number of private individuals.

Contest Offers $250 Prize

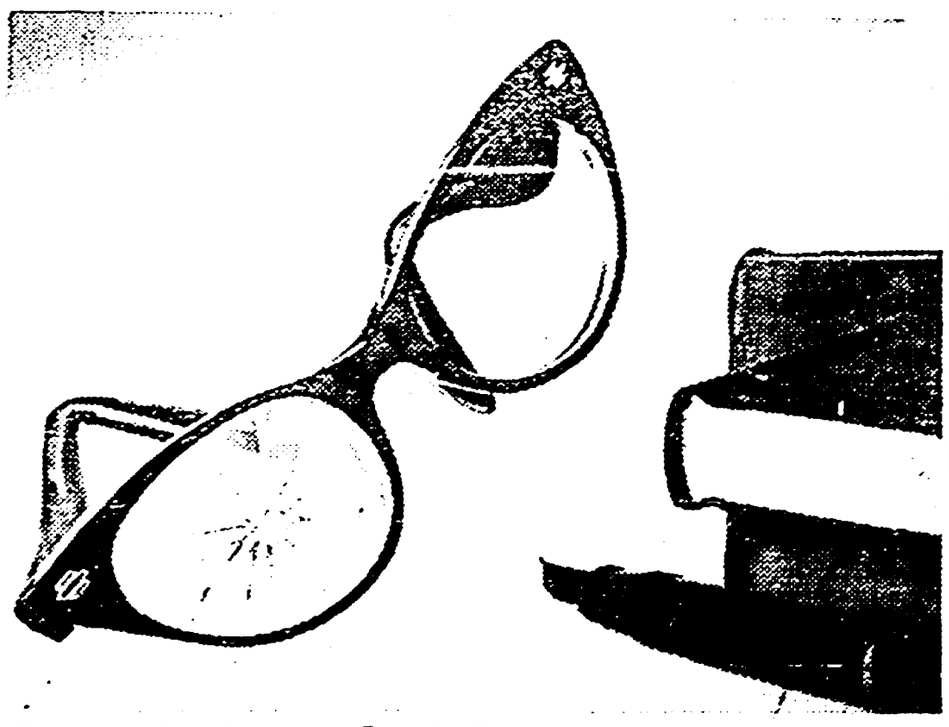
New Jersey residents attending out-of-state colleges are eligible to enter an essay contest sponsored by the New Jersey Goldwater Association.

The theme of the contest is "Dynamic Conservatism: The Turning of the Tide." Judges for the contest are novelist John Dos Passos; William Buckley, editor of the National Review and Robert Morris, former New Jersey candidate for the United States Senate.

The first prize of $250 and three honorable mention awards will be announced late in May.

All essays must be mailed by May 1 to the New Jersey Goldwater Association, Box 410, Montclair, N. J. Essays must be typed, double-spaced and accompanied by three carbon copies. Word length is 1,000 to 1,500 words.

SKI-FARING



with JON WEISBERG

The advent of the ski bug has finally hit the Hill. Every weekend, more and more students are joining the ranks of the renowned "sno-bunnies." Many of these beginners and other skiers have asked us where they should call for snow reports. The five major areas in the vicinity have joined together with a common phone number, which gives the latest in the snow conditions. This is HO 3-4533.

A few days ago, we visited MYSTIC MOUNTAIN. This year, two new trails were added to this area in Cazenovia, as well as the new trails, a new French Canadian Ski School, under the direction of Canadian racer Michel Turcotte, has been added.

This weekend, SONG MOUNTAIN plays the host to an invitational ski meet in which the SYRACUSE SKI TEAM will be going at full force. Jerry Laffer, assistant coach under ELT FAIRBANKS, told us that he expects BILL DALTON, a senior from Beaver Falls, to score high in his events. DAVE MENOTTI, CHAL LYONS, GARY GINTER, and BOB BRYANT, all juniors from the Syracuse area, are combined with Dalton and BOB THORENSON, a sophomore from Claremont, N.H. to form our 'A' team.

butes questionnaires about Chapel policy and activities to students.

Father Borgognoni first became interested in drama and music at Canastota High School. At St. Andrew's College and St. Bernard's Seminary, in Rochester, he produced variety song and dance shows.

When he was named assistant at Our Lady of Pompeii Church in Syracuse in 1949, he began working with the Pompeian Players.

"All clergymen must use some method to attract young people to the church. Some use athletics; I use dramatics," Father Borgognoni said.

The Players perform at the chapel coffees.

Father Borgognoni admitted that he is not yet familiar enough with the campus to know if religious apathy is a problem.

"I am very gratified with the number of students who attend Sunday Mass, and with their attention and interest," he noted. He also said that he has received "greatest cooperation" from the students who have worked with him in planning the St. Thomas More programs.

"Apathy is a result of failure to communicate. I am trying to reach as many Catholic students as possible," he commented.

Father Borgognoni does not feel that there is any pressure from Hendricks Chapel. He has met the other university chaplains and attended a Hendricks chaplains' meeting.

"I don't know the situation well enough now to know if there will be any possibility of St. Thomas More Chapel's eventually rejoining Hendricks," Father Borgognoni said, "but I cannot compromise any of the beliefs I hold as a Roman Catholic priest. While I respect others' rights to challenge me, I cannot soft-sell the differences in our religions," he added.

He does not feel that the strictness of religion is a factor in creating apathy.

"Religion was made to change men, not men to change religion," Father Borgognoni emphasized.

He explained that in the Catholic faith there are natural laws and church, or man-made, laws. "These natural laws, such as the law of forbidding birth control, cannot be changed," he said.

"Sin is abused free will. Fasting is a method of atoning for sins and learning to restrain one's free will," he added.

He explained society's "sicknesses" as a necessary result of violation of moral laws." "People cannot see the immediate results when they break a moral law, as they can if they cut their veins or otherwise break a physical law," Father Borgognoni said.

"But the damage is the same, even though it is not outwardly visible," he continued.

In attempting to bring more Catholic students to St. Thomas More Chapel, Father Borgognoni has started a series of weekly newsletters, distributed at Mass.

The name of the newspaper is a play on words: St. Thomas "More News."

Canisius Overpowers Orange Five, 71-60

By MARK DIAMOND

Breaking up a close game with a 20-5 burst, Canisius' Griffins defeated Syracuse, 71-60 at the Fieldhouse last night, before 1,437.

Syracuse, which had been outclassed all night, had closed to 36-30 with 16:46 remaining in the first half. The Griffins' Bill O'Connor, who had been held in check up to this point led the charge with 10 points. Tony Gennari added three baskets and the unstaters forged to 57-36.

Although the Orange's full court press eventually narrowed the count to 65-54, Canisius had enough left at the end.

Syracuse started the game off well, taking a 4-0 lead in the opening three minutes, as Canisius couldn't get a shot off against the Pietymen's zone.

This was to be Syracuse's only adantage of the night, as Canisius, sparked by Tim O'Mara sprouted to a 10-5 margin.

The visitors began scoring consistently from the outside, with Tom Chester hitting a couple of long jumpers. This opened up the middle and enabled O'Connor, a 25.4 scorer, to begin making his presence felt underneath.

Syracuse, though heavily outrebounded, was only down 31-25 at halftime, chiefly through the efforts of Carl Vernick and Herb Foster, who had 17 points between them. They had 10 and 7 points respectively.

Canisius had doubled the Hill's seven baskets, but Syracuse had an 11-2 margin from the free throw line.

Until Canisius' big burst, it appeared that the Orange would be able to pace the Griffins, who have been one of the major independent squads in the country all year.

As the tide began to turn, Coach Fred Lewis was forced to put six-foot Dick Finley on the 6-5 O'Connor. This strategy had proved effective in strifling Niagara's Joe Maddrey in Syracuses' recent 68-67 upset of the Purple Eagles, but O'Connor proved equal to the task.

The senior from Stanford, Conn., who has been mentioned as an All-America possibility, twisted and spun his way free for 24 points, 16 in the second half.

Tangerines Snap 2-Game Streak

By ART ROSSKY

Syracuse's frosh basketball team broke a two-game losing streak by trouncing Canisius, 86-48, last night at Manley Field House. The Tangerines now have a 10-3 season log.

Syracuse encountered some uneasy moments in the opening half as Canisius, playing very carefully, made the most of its opportunities. Canisius enjoyed several leads in the first 15 minutes of play.

In the last five minutes of the half Syracuse's Dave Bing and Rex Trobridge combined for a 12-2 rally that pushed the Hill into a 31-21 lead at the buzzer.

As the second half opened the Syracuse defense forced the Baby Griffs into numerous errors as the Tangerines widened the gap to 49-29 with eight minutes gone.

Although Sam Penceal left at this point after incurring his fourth foul, the Hill team rallied to increase the margin to 70-38 at the four minute mark as Dave Bing, and Sub Ted Holman began hitting.

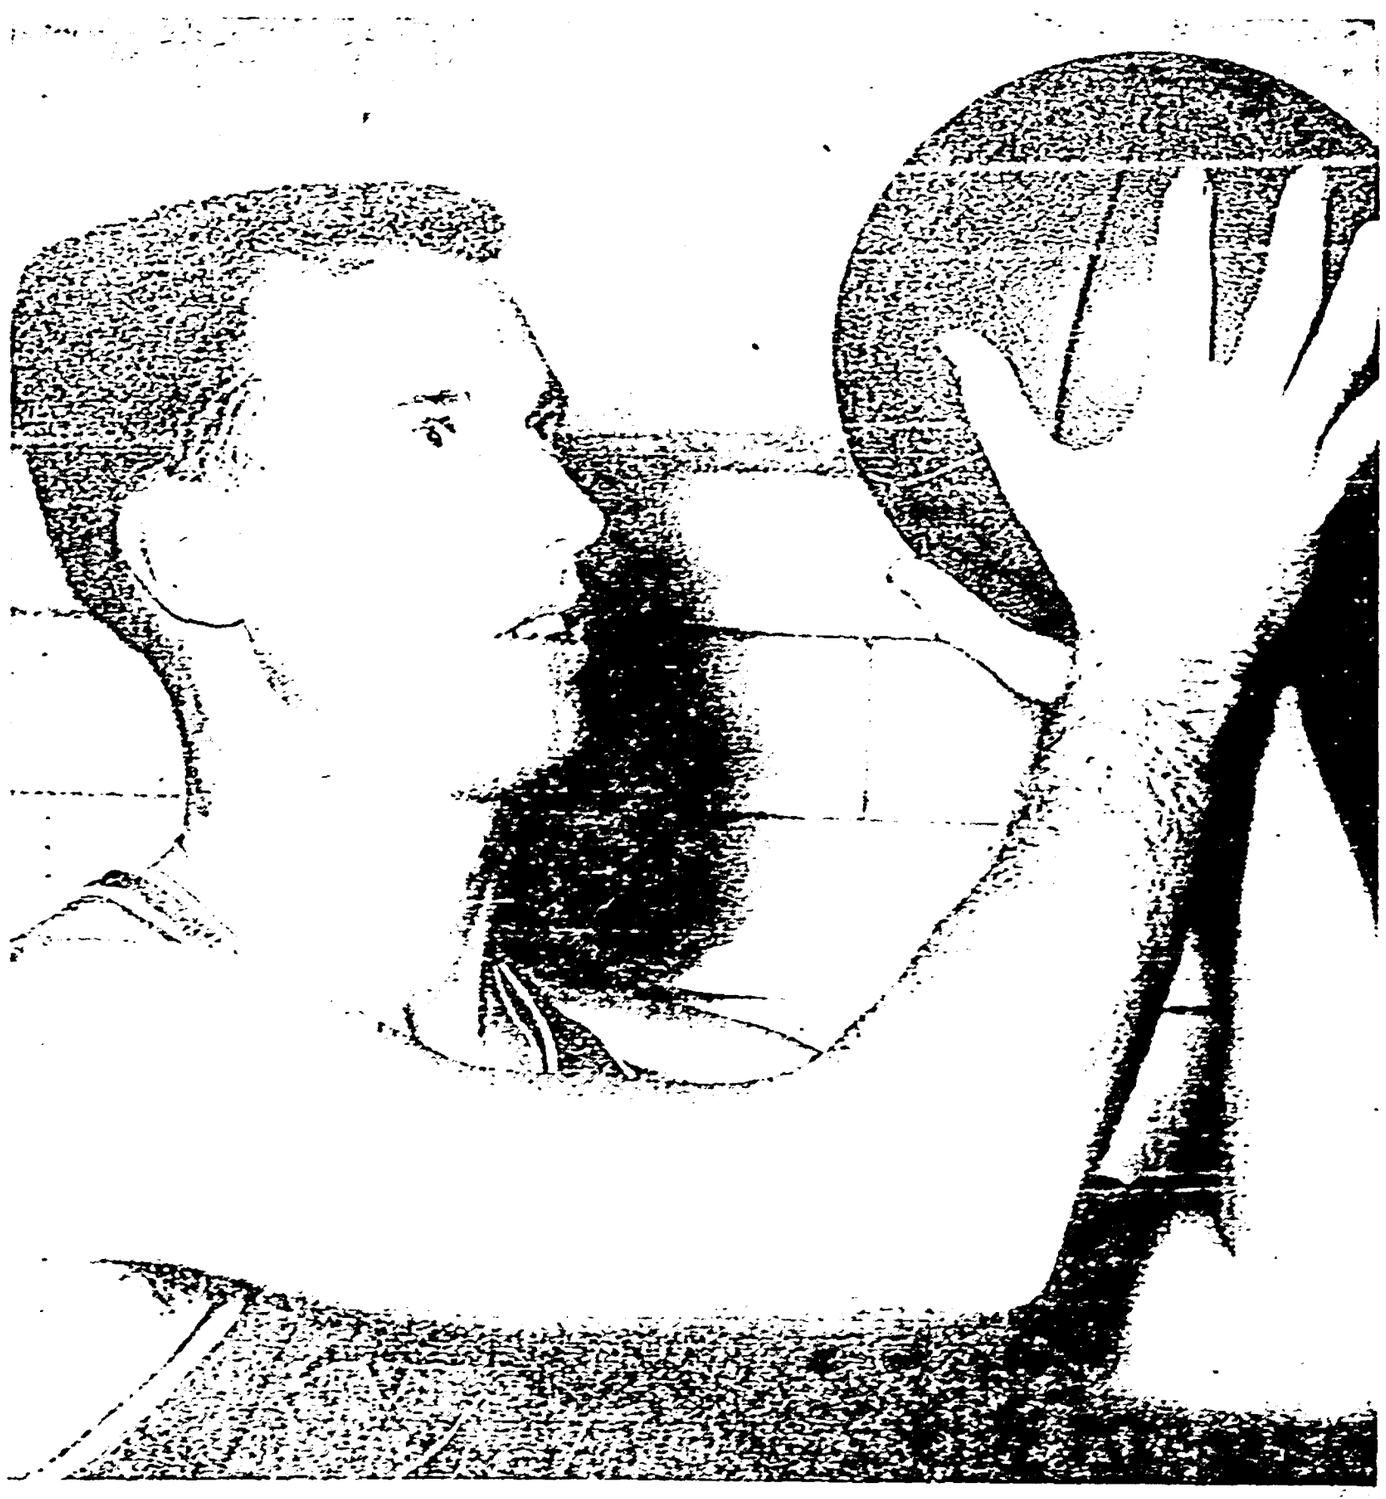
Penceal returned with four minutes left in the game and sparked another Tangerine surge that raised the lead to 80-43 in the waning minutes.

Sam Penceal thrilled the large crowd by dunking the ball in the closing seconds. That basket increased the Hill margin to 86-45, largest of the night.

Five points by 6-7 Ken Spisiak in the closing seconds enabled Canisius to cut the Piety edge to 86-48 at the buzzer.

Bing played another outstanding game, scoring 24 points to lead all scorers and added 10 rebounds and five assists to gain runnerup honors in those departments.

Other Tangerines in double figures were Frank Nicoletti, 16, and Norm Goldsmith, 15.



Jon Nichols paced Canisius with 13 points.

Under the boards the Hill held a wide margin with a 60-33 rebounding edge. Nicoletti paced the rebounders with 15 grabs. Penceal led in assists with six.

Syracuse was strengthened by Dick Ableman and Goldsmith, both returning from the sick list. Ableman was injured in the game but is expected to be ready for the Tangerines' next tilt, a Feb. 22 clash with Onondaga County Community College at Manley.

Ex-Orange Impressed By Frosh

Scored 1,079 Points

PETE CHUDY

By ART ROSSKY

An all time great in Syracuse basketball history has been added to frosh basketball player Dave Bing's growing list of admirers.

Pete Chudy, holder of the Orange single game scoring mark with 41 points, declared that Bing is "just a wonderful player" after Chudy's Al Maroone Ford team had beaten the Tangerines Saturday night at Manley Field House. Bing, though handicapped by illness, led all Hill cagers with 26 points and played a stellar floor game.

Wearing the same jersey number 44 Saturday night that he had worn in his undergraduate days, Chudy brought back memories by hitting a game-winning jump shot with just a minute left in the game.

In addition to his single game mark, rung up in a January, 1961, clash with Alfred, Chudy totaled 479 points in the 1961 season (his senior year) to record the second highest season total in Orange annals.

Another entry in the record book shows Chudy scoring 1,079 points in his three varsity years to gain sixth place on the all time list.

Among Chudy's teammates were big Jon Cincebox, all time Piety rebound leader and fifth highest scorer in Syracuse history, and Ed Goldberg, one of the best little men in the college game in the late '50's. Cincebox received his sheepskin in 1959. Goldberg graduated in 1960.

Following graduation Chudy saw action with the Denver Truckers of the National Industrial Basketball League before entering military service.

Chudy kept in shape while in service by playing basketball with such standouts as Ned Twyman, former Duquesne star, and George Blaney, former member of the New York Knickerbockers of the National Basketball Association.

Since being discharged from the army last year Chudy has stayed in shape by playing with the Al Maroone Ford team of Buffalo.

Maroone Ford, comprised mainly of former stars of colleges in the Buffalo area, last year reached the quarter finals of the National AAU tournament to climax a year in which the automen won 40 of 51 starts.

Chudy currently is being trained for the banking business at the Marine Trust Company in Buffalo.

Noting that "home" games were played before small crowds at the War Memorial during his varsity days, Chudy declared that the new fieldhouse will give Hill players added incentive for winning.

"This fieldhouse court is the best floor I've ever played on," Chudy praised.

In addition to Bing, Chudy was also impressed with Frank Nicoletti, 6-1 Frosh forward. Nicoletti led all rebounders Saturday with 15 caroms and added 25 points, runnerup to Bing in Tangerine scoring.

Peace Corps Repsto Speak On Campus

Peace Corps representatives will be on campus today, Monday and Tuesday.

Dr. William Rhoade, Peace Corps training director, will speak on teaching opportunities in Africa, South America, the Pacific area and Asia at 4 p.m. today in Kittredge Auditorium, Huntington B. Crouse Hall.

He will show a movie illustrating the work of the Peace Corps.

The program is designed primarily for liberal arts, education, fine arts and engineering students.

James D. Lay, special asistant for the division of agricultural affairs in the Peace Corps Office of Public Affairs, will be at the College of Forestry campus Monday and Tuesday.

He will meet with interested students and faculty members at 4 p.m. Monday in 126 Marshall Hall, and at 7:30 p.m. will present a film and discussion in Marshall auditorium.

Lay will be available for consultation Monday and Tuesday morning.

CURFEWS SET

Sunday, Feb. 17, sorority women will have an automatic midnight curfew in order to evaluate rushes.

Winter weekend curfews are special two's for Friday, Feb. 22, and Saturday, Feb. 23.

Sunday, Feb. 21, students attending the Peter, Paul and Mary concert will have 10 p.m. curfews extended to 30 minutes after the concert ends. These students must bring back their ticket stubs.

SU, VA Land Rush

By BEV LURIA
Junior Editor

A small plot of Syracuse University-owned land, formerly St. Mary's Cemetery, has proven a big headache to Hill and city officials alike.

The Veterans Administration Hospital, recently halted an unofficial battle between SU and the Syracuse Housing Authority by filing a court order announcing their intention to take the four and a half acres of land.

The disputed land is on Van-Buren and Burt Streets and Renwick avenue.

According to SU Vice President John F. Olson, the VA Hospital proposes to use this land bordering their property for an out-patient clinic and parking lot. The out-patients clinic is presently located in the Chimes Building on South Salina street.

Frank Taaffe, administrative assistant to the VA chief of staff, said he had no knowledge of the papers filed by the VA at the Utica Federal District Court. Taaffe said, "the matter is all tied up in Washington; we don't know where we stand."

Interview

In an interview Thursday with the Daily Orange, Edward Williams of the Washington, D.C. branch of the VA said "Dec. 20, 1962 the United States district attorney for the Northern District of New York filed an action for the condemnation" of land formerly known as St. Mary's Cemetery.

Williams added, "when the action is granted the VA will have the power to purchase the land from Syracuse University," this will be "a transfer of public land."

Olson explained that as a government body, the Veterans Administration could seize the land and purchase it from the university. He added "we knew that they had an interest in the land but we never had an offer from them."

SU Chancellor William P. Tolley told the Daily Orange that for many months plans have been underway for a graduate student housing project on the disputed site.

Tolley explained the university needs all the land it can get for future expansion. He noted that SU would be willing to trade land with the VA Hospital.

The chancellor continued, "the issue with them is not a matter of dollars; we don't want to surrender any land we have."

Before the VA made public its plan for the land, the Syracuse Housing Authority had been eyeing the land as a site for a housing project.

The proposed $5,600,000 federally-aided 350-unit specialized public housing project would provide "low income housing accommodation for elderly persons who would have easy access to medical facilities in the Upstate Medical Center."

The Housing Authority brought the site before the City

Formal Rush Dinners Start This Evening

418 Signed Up For Formal Rushing; 452 in 1962

By CLAY RICHARDS
Junior Editor

Fraternity rushing enters the second round from 5:30 to 10 p.m. today as some 418 freshmen enter the first of three formal dinner sessions.

For the purpose of this rush the frosh have been divided into three series assignments for the three nights.

Remaining sessions will take place from 12:30 to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Alumni Interfraternity Council rushing chairman attorney Howard Helf announced late Thursday night the assigned groups for the formal rush dinner.

Set A houses will formal rush Friday, 5:30-7 p.m.; Saturday, 2:15-3:30 p.m.; Sunday, 3:15-5 p.m.

Set B houses: Friday, 7:15-8:30 p.m.; Saturday 3:15-5 p.m.; Sunday, 12:30-2 p.m.

Set C houses: Friday, 8:15-10 p.m.; Saturday, 12:30-2 p.m.; Sunday, 2:15-3:30 p.m.

Formal dinners are slated for the first session each day.

The groups are coupled with the formal rush their time periods arbitrarily by the Alumni IFC and are announced the day of first formal rush, Helf explained.

Noble, Baskin, Davis Star

By CISSY POSSELT

Highlighting this year's Winter Weekend, the Stockingfoot Dance will feature the entertainment of Dean Charles C. Noble of Hendricks Chapel and students Lloyd Baskin and Robert Davis.

The dance is slated from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m., Fri., Feb. 22 at Drumlins Country Club, with music by Dick Kowell's band.

Dean Noble, as much a tradition of Winter Weekend as the dance, will play his accordion.

Baskin, a junior majoring in design, has been featured at several SU dances. He will sing "What Kind of Fool am I?" and "Fly me to the Moon." A brother of Sigma Alpha Mu fraternity, Baskin has sung at the Intrigue Room in Syracuse.

"I Left my Heart in HL Basement" is the selection of entertainer Davis. Arrangements for this rendition are by Andrea Fastiggi, a sophomore. Davis, an advertising and English major, is a member of Sigma Nu social fraternity. Both Baskin and Davis are members of Orange Key, junior men's honorary.

Also featured in the show are a musical spoof of rushing and a satire based on the recent popularity of coloring books.

Dean Noble, the Rev. and Mrs. David Engle, Patricia Howland and David Beers will judge the traditional stocking decoration contest. Two prizes will be awarded on the basis of originality in keeping to the theme of the weekend, "No Biz Like Show Biz." All shoes must be checked at the door.

Queen for the weekend will be announced at the Torch Parade starting at 7:30 p.m. at Drumlins Country Club and will be presented at the dance.

Coke Parties Set Tonight

Coke parties, the next step in sorority rushing, start at 5:30 p.m. today. Plan A (Christian) and C (cross rush) rushes will attend five parties from 5:30 to 9:45 p.m. Plan B (Jewish) rushees will attend four parties from 5:30-9 p.m. Dress will be skirts and sweaters.

Formal party bids will be distributed from 2 to 4 p.m. Saturday in the main lobby of the Women's Building. All rushees will attend two formal parties from 2 to 4:45 p.m. Sunday. Attire will be cocktail clothes.

Living center head residents will give out final bids at 5 p.m. Wednesday. City women may pick up their bids at 5 p.m. Wednesday in the Women's Building.

DO Interviews With Frosh Find Prejudice in SU Life

By HOWIE GINSBURG
Junior Editor

Prejudice is found in most areas of Syracuse University life, according to almost 200 freshmen interviewed by the Daily Orange.

After 15 weeks of interviews in and around Dell-Plain Hall, 188 opinions on racial and religious prejudice were recorded.

"Students of various religions stick together particularly in fraternities," according to Russell Deming, a Protestant. "I think some fraternities, are hesistant about letting people join that are not of their faith," he said.

Seventy-two freshmen accused Jewish students of forming their own groups, thus partially isolating themselves from other students.

Deming's views coincided with a large minority of those offered. "There is no discrimination in my hometown; however, I would not join a Jewish fraternity. I would feel like an outsider because of the sticking together," he said.

"Ever since World War II there has been a difference between Jews and other groups," Deming added.

Anti-Semitism

Brian Maday, a Catholic, claimed there is "lots of anti-Semitism" on the university campus and especially in his dormitory. He claimed that prejudice is brought about to a great degree because Jewish groups form and isolate themselves from other students.

Robert Just, Jewish, admits that religious groups form early in Syracuse University life but denies that this is actually a form of prejudice. Just said that he would like to rush all fraternities but because of his background and because of tradition he would probably wind up in a Jewish tradition house.

Victor Iannelli, a Catholic, denies that prejudice exists on campus. Religious groups do not stick together he claims. "I know nothing about fraternities and can not include them in my statement," he said.

Little Agreement

Only 24 of the 188 students agreed with Iannelli. These students claim is no prejudice or discrimination on campus and say they would rush and judge fraternities by the brothers in them, giving no

Poems of Maloney

By Stephanie Brill

THIS MARKS the beginning of a series of columns introducing poets on campus and presenting samples of their work. Serendipity, a word coined by Horace Walpole in 1754, seems an appropriate title because it means "an apparent aptitude for making fortunate discoveries by chance or by sagacity."

Peter Maloney, whose name is ubiquitous in the drama department, is known to only a few people as an artist and a poet. He has, however, been writing poetry since his sophomore year of high school when his work appeared in both the Regional and the National High School Anthology of Outstanding Poetry. The "Syracuse 10" has also included his contributions. The poems published in this column are his most recent, written last semester while studying with poet Phillip Booth, associate professor of English.

"I feel that my poems are in a state of transition: that I'm still waiting for my own style to come out," the blue-eyed, red-haired Irishman observed.

Having been severly criticized in his freshman year for his poems in "Syracuse 10", Maloney explained that he was going through an "e. e. cummings-phase". cummings, William Carlos Williams and Dylan Thomas are his favorite poets though he extensively reads other modern poets.

"In most of my poetry", he commented, "I deal with the things I see around me in terms of the impressions they make on me".

"Here I find a correlation between acting and poetry", he added thoughtfully.

"With both media one needs a keen eye for trained observations. The same selectivity required for poetry is required for acting when the actor must choose just the right glances or raising of the eyebrow—must allow a paring down to essentials —in order to reveal the character."

Several of his poems deal with circus life which, the campus's favorite comedian added quietly, "all has to do with my dream of being in the theatre."

"I chose between acting, painting and writing—all things my father did—when I was a sophomore in high school."

His father, who had been a professional actor for fifteen years, remained active in community theatre in their home town, Honeoye Falls, New York, taking his son along to be a "call-boy" when Peter was only seven.

A far cry from a call-boy now, Maloney is a candidate for a Fullbright Fellowship to study classical comic tradition in England next year.

President of Boar's Head, the Hill's dramatic society, he currently appears as Mr. Peachum in "The Beggar's Opera". Audiences will remember how he selected "just the right gestures and raising of the eyebrow" to create roles in Albee's "The American Dream," "Anything Goes" and "Little Mary Sunshine". He was also the stage manager for the Famous Artists Country Playhouse in Fayetteville where he performed with Joan Fountain, Daren McGavin, Martha Raye and Guy Madison.

As for his efforts as a painter—Maloney mused, "I used to paint in oils but now only have time to sketch."

When still in high school the artist Maloney contributed a print to the New York Coliseum national exhibit of high school art.

Remembrance

It was a good five miles from our place in Town to the old farm at Moran's Corners.
My father and I often walked from home,
Above the bar my father tended nights,
Down West Main Street, up Monroe until the Sidewalk ended, then along the roadside
Past strangers' houses, few and scattered then.
We walked in snow, at least twelve years ago,
Some time before we ever owned a car.
I held my father's hand, barely minding
Winds which sliced across the frozen fields, past
The tracks where engines larger than I dared
To watch alone stormed through my sleep, sometimes Hooting me awake, a town away. Past
The burning dump, we came to the corners
And were careful to look both ways before Crossing over to the house above the Road. Past the friut stand, empty in winter,
Tiered slats of snow, past the yellow swing,
Rusting in the chickenless yard, thought the Badly hung back door and into the warm
Kitchen, where George sat by the big stove in Tired overalls and cap, warming his feet
After chores. His wet, leather boots, crusted
With manure, steamed, and he removed, slowly,
A toothpick from his nearly toothless mouth
To make us welcome with a corn-mash grin.
George, who downed bad whiskey in the corn field,
Who wheeled and chased us, spying children on
An autumn prowl, stumbling drunken, squashing
Old tomatoes as he reeled in anger;
Who grabbed a chicken, thrust its legs between
The tracks hung from the low barn ceiling, and
With one swing cut off its head, its body
Still jerking, spraying dark blood all over,
George always had a friendly smile for me.

The whole house seemed to tilt, its walls leaned in
And ceilings sagged with the roof beneath the Weight of a dark winter sky. I walked through
The dining room, my father stayed behind
To talk. I stopped as I always did to Stare at the prize bull above the sideboard,
Above the crystal heirlooms, goblets, salt
And pepper shakers on a silver tray.
Waiting in the next room, sitting deep in Her worn chair, looking into the snapping
Fire behind its black spark-screen, was "Old Mom",
Moran by marriage, owner of the house,
My father's friend and mine. Her Ancient face
Brightened as we creaked across the rough floor,
Wide-boarded and dark in the murky light
Of late afternoon. Her sharp eyes took in
The both of us, then her thin hand lifted
Up a jug of wine from the floor beside
The chair, raised it toward my father and said, Smiling: "David!".
Seldom listening, I seldom Understood the grownups' talk, preferring
To watch the fire and breathe the whiskey smell
And smoke from burning wood and cigarettes.
Old Mom is dead, and the farm, collapsing,
Beyond repair, is rented to strangers.
Careless of the house and mindless of my Memories. George, enduring at the bar
My father tended years ago, still smiles
And asks my age and how school is going
And how my father is, his toothless grin
Reminding me of winter years ago.

A Sad Thing

A man I didn't know too well
Was found this morning, dead, with all
The blood gone out of him. He left
Three notes, to mother, brother, friend;
And a bottle of sleeping pills,
As empty as himself.

I trim
The Christmas tree in my small room
With homemade ornaments. The string
Of stale popcorn, looped on branches
Like well-organized snow, reminds Me of stale popcorn left unstrung.
I munch a handful, then I go.

Gothic Revival

It was raining, and I didn't stop to Look at spires or tympanum, or any Of the things I'd learned were gothic. The two Oak doors swung in and I with them. Many People, sightseers probably, crowded
The aisles necks craning, genuflecting here
And there. A wax Pope Pius sat, shrouded
In the clothes he died in, behind four clear
Glass walls.
I'd been there only once before;
Had knelt beneath the vaulted roof to say
A prayer, and staring, daydreaming, I wore
The regal scarlet cassocks worn that day
By New York acolytes. Envious of City alterboys, and longing to serve
At that great alter, I looked up, above
The canopy. There, a wavering curve
Of incense smoke changed color in the light
And was lost in high-arched gloom above tall
Windows. The windows burned, and in their height
And fire I felt appropriately small.
Someone came in, and sunlight flashed across
Pope Pius' glass box. "How real it looks,"
Said someone, with, it seemed, a sense of loss.
The rain had stopped. I left, and bought some books.

The Non-Skier; Study in White

When winter comes to New York State one can rest assured that little white flakes will soon begin to fall. Usually these flakes are snow particles (none of which are the same, they tell us) but in some rare instances they have been known to be flakes of dandruff from the scalps of nervous collegians.

And why are these nervous collegians shedding flakes from normally calm scalps? Because it is winter, the time of the skier, and these poor worriers, alas, cannot walk two blocks on a snowy sidewalk without slipping to the pavement, let alone maneuver a slope.

Yet they are caught up in the collegiate society which says conform. And what does the typical collegian do when the snow falls on the slopes? He skis, by golly, he skis.

But what becomes the fate of our friends, the worriers who wouldn't have a chance of survival on even the novice slopes? The answer is simple, of course, because we all know at least one of this type.

The non-skier heads to the ski shop, buys a blue ski jacket, a fifty-dollar pair of ski boots, an imported pair of skis, a ski rack for the sportscar and some "Man Tan" for that wind blown, just-down-from-the-slopes look.

Then he heads for the ski country and the ski lodge. And when this hardy soul heads for the ski lodge, he heads for the ski lodge. The only time, in fact, that he leaves it is to go out in the sunlight to try out his new tinted glasses, and even then he leans against the ski lodge.

But the funny part is, the non-skier is accepted by the skiers as a necessary evil. Girls crowd around him (must be the "Man Tan"); skiers admire him (actually they admire his equipment); novices pat him on the back (he makes them look like champs).

And so at the end of a busy weekend at the lodge our hero heads back to the campus with a little tag on his parka to show the squares back home that he indeed is a real adventurer of the slopes, a veritable slalom champ.

And do you know what? Nobody notices the little white flakes of dandruff clinging to his blue parka.

Esen: A Turkish 'Beggar'

By VIVIAN TAYLOR

Hurrying her workers, setting the stage, insulting the characters and audience, the Beggar, in her tattered rags, connects the scenes and adds the lowbrow to "The Beggar's Opera," concluding its run at the Coronet Theater this weekend.

Without the burlap and rope of her costume, Mrs. Esen Wiegand is astonishing different from her role as John Gay's Beggar.

A young woman with brains and a pixie beauty, Mrs. Wiegand came to the United States from Istanbul, Turkey three years ago. Her Turkish career began with the role of Charlotte Bronte in "Wild Decembers" and continued with parts in Ionesco's "The Chairs," and "The Tragic Comedy of Donna Rosetta" by Garcia Lorca. She is married to Donald Wiegand, a New York City concert pianist.

As a member of an experimental theater group Mrs. Wiegand performed during the summer in small villages in Turkey. At the Istanbul International Festival she appeared in Eugene Ioncesco's "Endgame."

ESEN WEIGAND

Coming to the U. S. on a Fulbright scholarship, she studied at Carnegie Tech and played in an off-Broadway production of Arrabell's "The Automobile Graveyard.

At Syracuse she acted in G. B. Shaw's "Arms and the Man," and received excellent reviews as the grandmother in Edward Albee's "The American Dream" and as the hunchback sister in Lorca's "The House of Bernarda Alba."

The 23-year old redhead has appeared at the Lively Arts coffeehouse in Strindberg's "The Stronger" and will soon be seen in Goldoni's "The Servant of Two Masters" and an English version of "The Chairs," directed by Peter Maloney.

The first time Mrs. Wiegand saw a play her career was decided, she says. For her there was no need to think, "What shall I do when I grow up" She always knew the theater was for her.

As a graduate assistant in the drama department, Mrs. Wiegand is working for her masters degree.

Students, she says, who have been in her acting class assert she is a pure method school of acting instructor.

"I only want to point out what will best help an actor," she explains. "It is not possible to establish complete emotional reality with pure technique for enacting certain arts.

Folk Auditions Today

Auditions for those folk singing and guitar playing students interested in appearing in the Oscar Brand concert are being held 2-4 p.m. today, room 108 Crouse College. The judges for the auditions Ian Henderson, associate professor in the School of Music; Rick Hermle, a music graduate student; and Bob Feldman, conductor of a folk music program on WAER.

Enough students will be picked to fill about half of the concert. Brand, who will hear tapes of the auditions, will approve the final selection.

Phi Sig Wins Its 3rd 'Quiz'

Phi Sigma Delta retired itself to WAER's Syra-Quiz semi-finals by beating Winchell Hall, 195-80 Thursday night. It was Phi Sig's third win.

Next week Syra-Quiz will host Flint 1C and Booth 3. Phi Sig scored an all time record by defeating Zeta Psi, 205-200, last week. Members of the winning team are: Joe Marco, Patterson, N.J.; Martin Anisman, Brooklyn; Steve Monblatt, Brooklyn; and Roy Abrams, Cedarhurst.

In the event that no other team wins three matches Phi Sig will play last semester's champions, DellPlain 6.

Organ Concert Set for Church

Miss Carol Ann Crumrine will be featured with the Syracuse String Quartet in a program of compositions for organ and strings at 7:30 p.m. Sunday at St. Paul's Methodist Church, 2200 Valley Dr.

Works by Handel, Vivaldi, Mozart and Brahms will be performed by the ensemble.

Miss Crumrine is a graduate student in organ, studying under Prof. Arthur J. Poister of the School of Music. She is also organist at St. Paul's Church.

FIRST RUN THEATERS

RIVIERA-CINEMA — Sex with a touch of satire is the Riviera's all laugh show. First, Anita Ekberg plays an overstuffed milk poster designed to lure. Ah, nature's most perfect food! Next, Romy Schneider plays a loored aristocrat, but mainly sits by a bathtub and talks on the phone: it's a funny and brutal satire. Lastly, Sophia Loren falls out of her blouse as a peasant raffled to a church sexton. The trio's called "Boccaccio 70" whatever that means; it's in the original Italian. Also on the bill is some wonderful Harold Lloyd silent film clips. "Boccaccio Cleavage" at 8:35 p.m. "Lloyd's Laugins" at 7 p.m.

KEITH'S — Producer-director-writer-star Peter Ustinov does okay by Herman Melville's "Billy Budd." Or maybe, Melville does okay by Ustinov. Anyway the classic story of good versus evil against the Navy sea, as personified by Terence Stamp (yea!), Robert Ryan (boo!) and Peter Ustinov (yea! but boo!) is quite entertaining, exciting and movie-y. Weekend almost ruled at the end. (Sight Unseen: "Billy Budd," is an Oscar winning trek through darkest Africa. "Serengeti." "God Bless Captain Vere" at 6:45 and 10:25 p.m. "Serengetiambutcool" at 8:50 p.m.

FOKEL — Darryl F. Zanuck's "The Longest Day": the movie is magnificent, too bad the war isn't. Zanuck and his four directors, 42 stars and cast of thousands, flies D-Day with power, scope, and impact. Never very corny, always with a documentary air of authenticity. "The Longest Day" belches forth noise men and guns till you wish the war would end already. But Zanuck does it so well you wish the movie would never end. "Darby's War" at 8 p.m.

LOEW'S — Weekend saw "Divorce Italian Style" in its original Italian version and boy was it funny! As dubbed in at the Loew's we ain't saying. Marcello Mastroianni, hair slicked down like some people on Comstock avenue we know, and with a mustache, tries to get rid of his wife so he can marry his cousin. She's the bikinied one in all those ads. It's all very involved, ludicrous, straight faced and Sicilian. There's even a scene from "La Dolce Vita" for irony or something. Co-featured is "Sword of the Conqueror," for Terry Hughes only. "Italian Reno" at 6:25 and 0:54. "Swordie" at 8:13 p.m.

SHOPPINGTOWN — Gypsies are supposed to be a nomadic lot, moving from town to town, camping in the woods and not claiming anywhere as home. Well, we've found a gypsy who has settled in the suburbs of DeWitt and doesn't shown signs of moving. This is "Gypsy," the story of a stripper and it's still running at Shoppingtown. Speaking of strippers, we heard about a part-time stripper and part-time bearded lady. She had a beard that came down to her knees and she used to come out on the runway and shave. This doesn't have much to do with "Let Me Entertain You," but then "Gypsy" wasn't so hot either. In fact, all night they were begging "let me entertain you" and we thought maybe they might. They might. They didn't "Strip" at 7 and 9:30 p.m.

PARAMOUNT — Tony Curtis finds "40 Pounds of Trouble" in Las Vegas and the audience finds mirth in this bundle of frivolity. We'd like to say more but the paper is starting to roll in the press and if we don't stop you'll find us rolled out on the page and we would so like to remain anonymous. "Trouble" at 6:26 and 9:44 p.m.

OTHER FILMS OF INTEREST

HOLLYWOOD—Blood and guts, fans of the fight arena, as Jackie Gleason and Tony Quinn fight it out for the Oscar. "Requiem for a Heavyweight" may refer to boxing, it sure doesn't refer to Gleason. Peter Sellers tries hard in "Only Two Can Play," too bad. "Fightscene" at 9 p.m. "Sellerscene" at 7:15 p.m.

FRANKLIN — Terror, agonies, sweaty palms, edges of seats. Experience them all in "Whatever Happened to Baby Jane?" Personally, we'd like to know whatever happened to Robert Aldrich, who, after making this pic, sold out to boredom and made "Sodom and Gomorrah." Bette Davis and Joan Crawford battle it out, for the Oscar that is. "Oceans 11" is the first of the Clan's home movies; also the best. "Baby Ruth, oops, Jane" at 9 p.m. "Rat Pac" at 6:50.

PALACE—Recall those wonderful days of yesteryear when Audrey Hepburn was Audrey Hepburn and not Holly Golightly. "Roman Holiday" at 8:15 p.m. "It's Only Money" says Jerry Lewis, the only Hollywood star whose movies have never lost money. He's right, "It's Only Money," and Lewis makes it. "Roman" at 8:15 p.m. "$" at 6:50 and 9:45 p.m.

WESCOT—High adventure and low murder across the park this week. "Damn the Defiant" heaves and haws with the rolling sea. But Alec Guinness doesn't get seasick and wins the day for England. "13 West Street" is what the French call a "Film Noire." We call them "Grade B" pics. Rod Steiger hides in the shadows, while Alan Ladd hides behind Steiger's talent. "Darn the Defiant" at 8:55 p.m. "13 West" at 7:30 p.m.

ALSO PLAYING

MIDTOWN—"Return to Peyton Place" at 8:05. "The Hand" at 6:40.

ON STAGE

CORONET—"The Beggar's Opera," just for the record since it's all sold out. Hang around, just in case, if you really want to see it. Curtain, Friday and Saturday, at 8:30 p.m.

WAR MEMORIAL — Syracuse Symphony Pops concert 8:30 p.m. Friday, featuring baritone Chester Ludgin and soprano Linda Newman.

CROUSE CONCERT — Organ, with violin, recital by Will O. Headlee at the keyboard and Betty Gehring at the strings. 4 p.m., Sunday, Crouse College Auditorium.

WAER HIGHLIGHTS

Four different ways to make going more fun than getting there

You can see why one of America's favorite outdoor sports is driving Chevrolets, with four entirely different kinds of cars to choose from. There's the Jet-smooth Chevrolet, about as luxurious as you can go without going overboard in price; the low-cost Chevy II, a good-looking car that would send any family packing; another family favorite, the sporty Corvair, whose rear-engine traction will make you think that ice and snow are kid stuff; and for pure adventure, America's only sports car, Corvette—now in two all-new versions with looks that can stop traffic like a rush-hour blizzard. Picked your favorite already? The next thing is to take the wheel at your Chevrolet dealer's. If that doesn't have you thinking of places to go, maybe you'd rather just have a ball around town!

Syracuse Dabbles in Real Estate

By BEV LURIA
Junior Editor

Modern American universities dabble in many things besides their primary concern, education.

Universities engage in business transactions ranging from government research to publishing companies to real estate agencies.

At Syracuse University real estate is a flourishing department run by William T. Burch, real estate director and Charles H. Morgan, real estate coordinator.

Burch is concerned with the acquisition of property and Morgan manages current holdings.

Purchases

SU purchases land and buildings from public and private concerns for future university expansion. Until the university is ready to utilize or develop a real estate possession, it may be rented to or used by non-university people.

The Vincent Apartments at 109 Smith Lane is a university-owned and operated project. Asher B.C. Douthwaite, director of SU's married student housing, explained these apartments are rented to private individuals as well as university faculty, graduate students and married students.

Douthwaite said the 260 apartments are currently occupied by 35 SU faculty, 32 graduate students, 16 married students, 8 medical students and 4 medical personnel.

Rental

The remainder of the apartments renting for $98 to $115 unfurnished and $104 to $124 furnished are leased to private individuals, Douthwaite added.

Burch, president of SU's Vincent Development Corp., said the corporation was purchased by SU in August 1959 and were refinanced in July 1961. At this time the university gained title to the apartments.

Built by a private corporation about 10-12 years ago, SU Vice President John F. Olson said the apartments were rented unfurnished as middle income housing.

SU has furnished 37 apartments primarily for use by married and graduate students, Dr. Olson explained.

Douthwaite noted that these rooms were furnished in three groups, "the first last year and the bulk this year."

When asked if the university plans to use the apartments solely for housing students, Dr. Olson replied, "by that time (about 30 years ago) the buildings will be demolished for new buildings."

Organizations Must Register

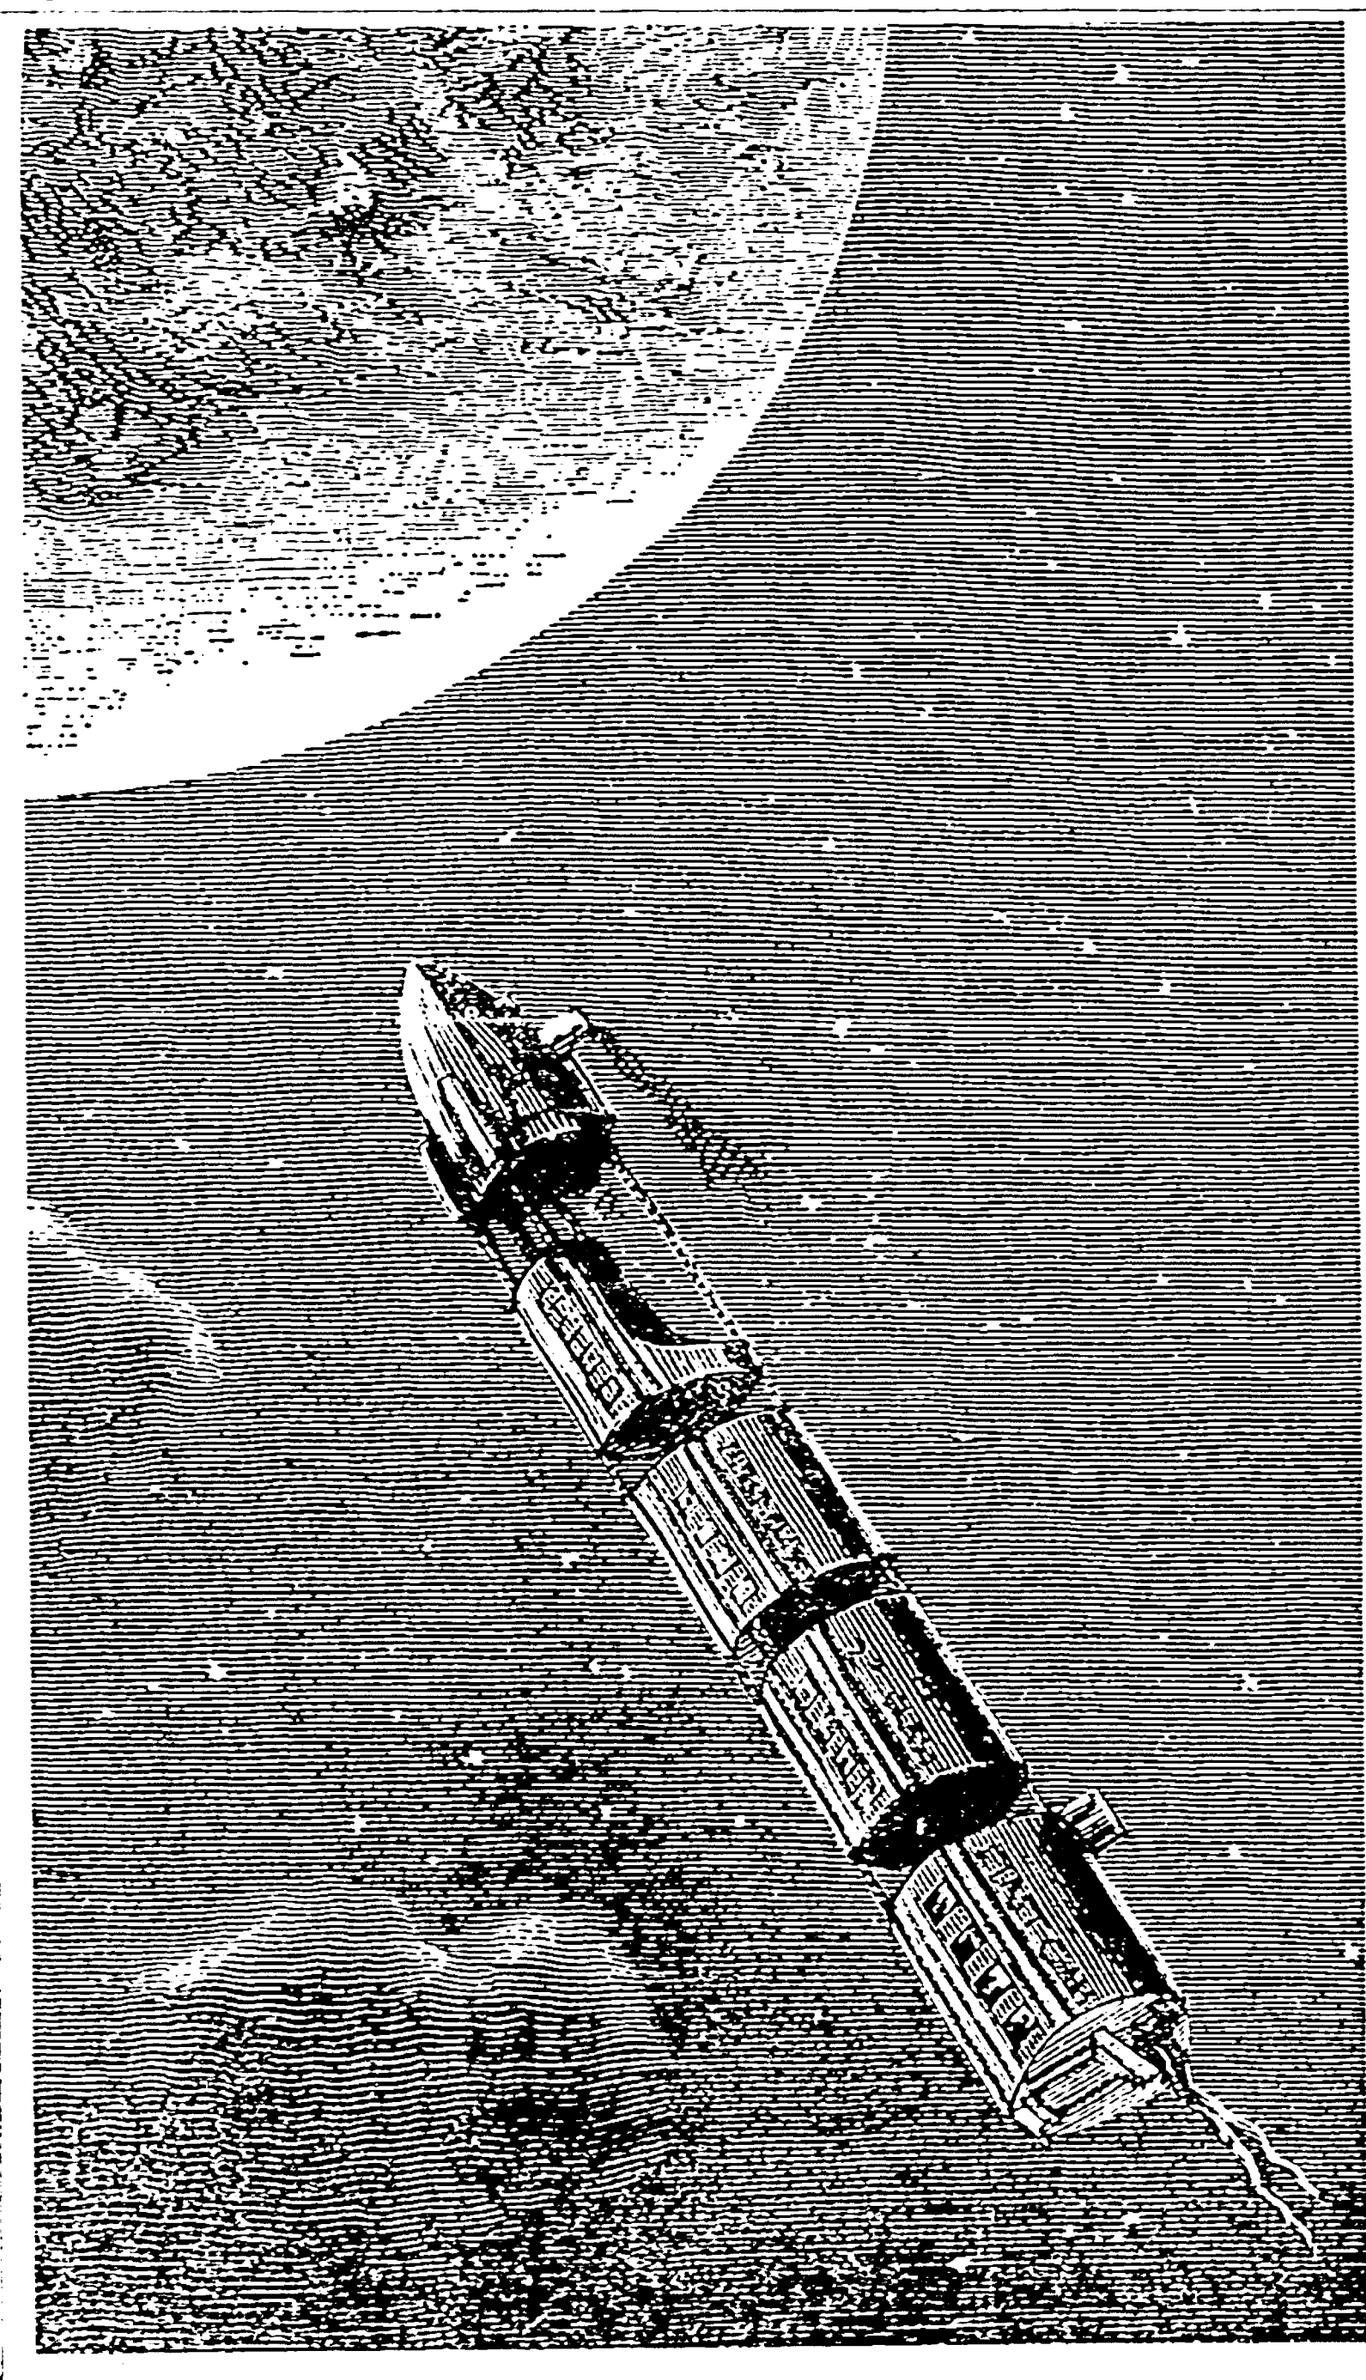
All clubs and organizations must register with Joint Student Government Activities Coordinator Beverly Lewis, according to a statement issued by Miss Lewis.

The purpose of the registration is to make available to faculty, administration and students a list of existing organizations.

In addition, a new handbook of activities, to be published in the summer, will include the information.

A registration form must be completed and returned along with a copy of the club's constitution, before March 15.

Any organization which does not meet these requirements by the deadline will be denied all university privileges.



Registration forms are available at the student government office, 904 University Ave., from 2 to 4 p.m. each afternoon beginning today.

Alexander Kendrick, CBS News London Bureau Chief, has reported the news from Japan, India, China, Austria, Russia and Africa.

Rushing . . .

The Greek fraternity system will have fewer pledges this year according to figures released Thursday by the dean of men's office.

Only 418 freshmen signed up for formal rush Wednesday while 452 freshmen pledged last year. The large drop has been attributed to the deferred rush scholastic average requirement, Fraternity Administrator James P. McMurray explained.

Three hundred freshman who informal rushed were not able to formal rush because they did not make a one point average. Another 100 of those who informal rushed decided not to formal rush for personal reasons.

Last year 625 formal rushed compared to the 418 currently rushing.

While the number rushing now is somewhat lower than last year, the number participating in the fall upperclass rush is expected to be greatly increased, McMurray said. This increase will come from the freshmen who did not make their average first semester but will second, this making them elgible pledging in the fall.

Freshmen will sign and submit their preference cards from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday in the Trophy Room of the Men's Gym. Fraternities will submit their preference lists in triplicate to the fraternity administrator at 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. in the dean of men's office.

Bids can be picked up from 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Tuesday at the dean of men's office. Fraternities will pick up selection lists at the same time in the dean of men's office.

Silence period is now being maintained between houses and freshmen, (except for formal rush sessions), until bids are announced. The silence period includes no phone calls, personal contact, written communication, freshmen attendance at fraternity functions or other fraternity entertainment.

Rushing violators will be reported to the IFC judicial board and if found guilty may not be allowed to take a pledge class this semester.

Panhel Gives $1700 to YOU

Panhellenic has contributed $1700 to Youth Opportunities Unlimited from last November's second annual Panhellenic Charity Ball, Geraldine LaDue, Panhel treasurer, announced Tuesday.

YOU was selected as this year's recipient of the Panhel Ball profits by a vote taken last fall of all sorority women.

Last year's profit of $950 was given to the SU infirmary.

Study in Guadalajara, Mex.

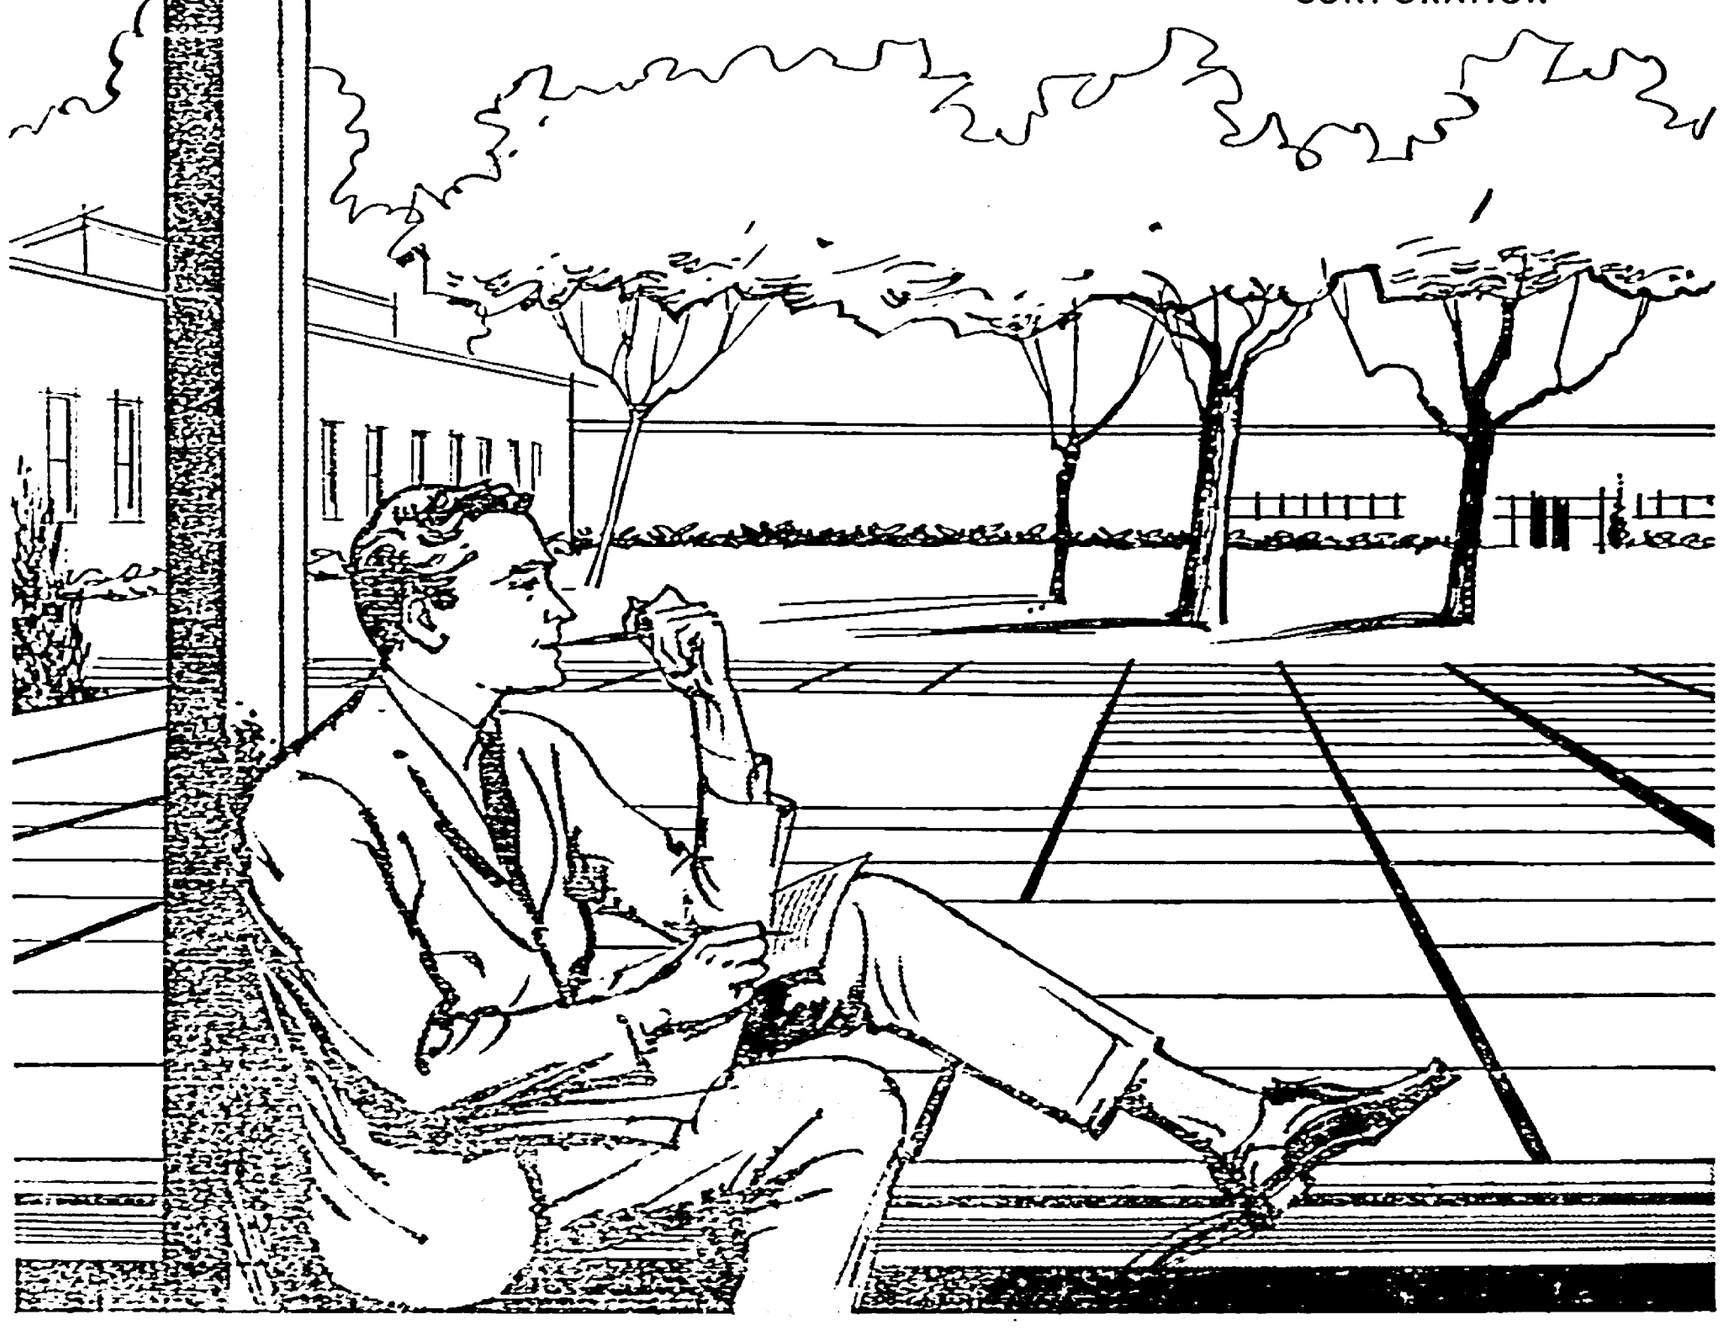
The Guadalajara Summer School, a fully accredited University of Arizona program, conducted in cooperation with professors from Stanford University, University of California, and Guadalajara, will offer July 1 to August 11, art, folklore, geography, history, language and literature courses. Tuition, board and room is $240. Write Prof. Juan B. Rael, P.O. Box 7227, Stanford, Cal.

WHERE IN THE WORLD . . . will you go after graduation? . . . will you find challenging opportunity? . . . will you be in 10 years? These important questions you must answer within the next year.

Real opportunity is a two-way street, a 50-50 proposition. Your professional advancement is based on two interdependent factors:

First, the growth potential of the firm you join—secondly, your own competence and initiative.

The following figures show our ability to provide the first requirement. You must furnish the second.



Xerox Corporation has doubled its sales in the past three years—from $27 million annually to $60 million, with less than 1% in military billing • tripled its profits—from $1.6 million to $5.3 million • increased employment from 1,650 to 4,300, branch offices from 17 to 35 . . . And plans for the future are even more astounding (see Fortune, July, 1962).

Opportunities exist in the following areas: Research and engineering • manufacturing • control • finance • sales.

Contact your placement office to arrange an interview with a Xerox representative, who will be on your campus . . . .

DO Interviews With Frosh Find Prejudice

consideration to the religious breakdown of the house.

One freshman, an Episcopalian, said "Jews are not acceptable to the society I am in. I accept them but cannot really be friendly towards them." He also said "Negroes hold themselves aloof on this campus and thereby create discrimination."

A Jewish boy claimed there is no discrimination but said he would not consider pledging a non-Jewish fraternity. He claims groups form after a student's freshman year.

More Discrimination

Thomas Lowy, Jewish, claims that there is a definite discriminatory attitude against Jews, Negroes and Puerto Ricans. He claimed that Jewish groups in general tend to stick together, especially in fraternities. He added he would not rush a fraternity where any religion dominates.

One Jewish student claimed that "fraternities breed discrimination". He added that he would rush only tradtionally Jewish houses.

Another Episcopalian found no religious prejudice on campus although he thinks there is some racial prejudice.

Thomas Meggysey, brother of Dave Meggysey of gridiron fame, claims there was no discrimination on his dormitory floor.

Another student, a Negro, claimed there definitely is discrimination "but you find it all over." Jews discriminate religiously but other groups discriminate against them, he said.

"There is racial and religious discrimination in fraternities," he charged.

The Negro described the situation as being "very bad all over, even in the north. I hope the situation improves but I know it can't be done overnight."

A Jewish, Puerto Rican student claimed there is discrimination especially against Negroes in the 15th Ward. He claims the residents of the area are blamed for every wrong-doing that occurs on or around campus.

Gary Walters, Presbyterian, discounted racial discrimination but said there is "a small religious problem". He claimed that "certain fraternities discriminate."

Japanese Student

A Japanese student, Ernest Harada, said there is no discrimination against him but "religious groups do stick together".

A DellPlain advisor says there is no discrmination on his floor and that groups do not stick together. "If anything, there is a lack of religious groups," he said.

Robert Eckert, a Catholic said there are many jokes about Jews on his floor and in the dormitory. He said he did not know enough about fraternities to say if they discriminate. He added that the religious breakdown of fraternities would make no difference to him in choosing his house.

Many Interests

A Baptist student said he would look for a fraternity which specialized in a wide variety of interests. He claimed that Jews stick together by choice and because of this he would not rush a Jewish house. "I would feel lost," he said.

A Methodist said that although there is no prejudice, foreign students and Jews form their own groups. He said he would not rush a predominantly Jewish fraternity because he wants to find a wide variety of experiences in a fraternity.

Two Jewish roommates claimed there is no prejudice in the dormitory or on campus; however, both said they would not consider rushing a predominantly non - Jewish fraternity.

Nine Jewish students said they notice a good deal of discrimination and prejudice in their dormitory and on campus in general.

Robert D'Angelo accused some members of his floor of being anti-Semitic. D'Angelo, Jewish, claimed there have been many thefts on his floor, almost all of them occurring in rooms occupied by Jews. One room on the floor was robbed three times this year.

Goolsby Speaks

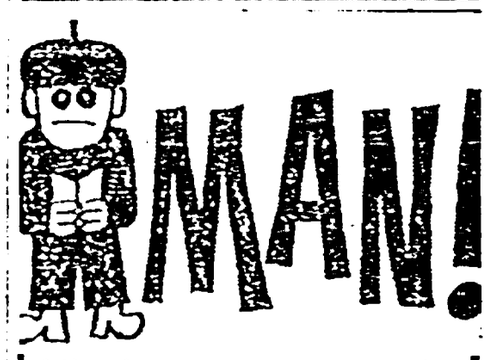
Richard Goolsby, DellPlain director, denied accusations of prejudice in the dormitory. "All of our men mix well and most don't notice whether their religion is different from their friends'."

He said the thefts described by D'Angelo were "pure coincidence".

A resident advisor said the reason there are so few nonsectarian fraternities (in practice rather than name) is because the freshmen discriminate.

One Jewish student said he is afraid to rush a non-Jewish house because he doesn't know which ones are anti-semitic.

Another student charged that a freshman brings certain prejudices to campus, some even hidden to himself, and he follows these in choosing friends.



Another freshman described the situation in his dormitory as "de facto prejudice".

Few of the students think the situation was worse at Syracuse than other campuses. "You can't get away from personal prejudices in Syracuse, New York, Russia or anyplace in the world," one freshman commented.

Land . . .

Planning Commission in July for approval of its proposed use, HA Executive Director William L. McGarry told the Daily Orange.

At this time McGarry explained, HA plans only called for about one acre of university land at the foot of the hill. The Commission, he continued, told the Authority their plans did not coincide with zoning requirements.

Zoning regulations controlling the housing project called for "not less than 1000 square feet of land per dwelling unit," McGarry said. "This required doubling the land," he noted.

"At that point, in consideration of no known plans of the university or any other group for the land," McGarry said, "we went ahead planning with the total of St. Mary's Cemetery."

The Authority brought its revised plans before the Planning Commission in September, McGarry said. This time, he added, the Commission found the proposal acceptable in view of zoning regulations.

Explaining that the Commission passed it with qualifications, McGarry said, "Under the law a qualified approval requires approval by three quarters of the Common Council."

"By polling the Council we found that we couldn't get seven out of nine votes," McGarry stated. Noting that the authority is a public organization, McGarry said the Council's approval is necessary.

If the VA takes the land, McGarry said, "they have indicated they would lease or dispose of to us the piece of land at the foot of the hill which would be of no use to them."

Gymnastics Title at Stake

the trampoline title; Orlick won the long horse vaulting crown; and Grimaldi placed second on the side horse.

Lettermen

Penn State has two big men returning from last year's title-winning squad. Captain Tom Seward was second in the free exercise in the Eastern championships last year, just edging out Voas, while George Williams placed second in the Eastern still rings competition.

In the floor exercise Orlick, Voas, and soph Sid Oglesby will represent the Orange. They will be met by Seward, Jim Culhane, and Bill Schegel.

In the long horse vaulting the Orange representatives will be Orlick, Oglesby, and Junior Tom Steeves. Tom is currently hindered by a bruised heel, but he should be ready for action on Saturday. Tom Burnett, Pete Saponara, and Sforza will carry the Nittany colors.

Junior John Bird, sophomore Jon Meury, and Grimaldi should be the Orangemen on the side horse. The Lions will be represented by Ray Cherry, Pete McCormick and Gene Harlacher.

Best Event

The still rings should provide a startling finale for SU fans. The Orange will send Carl Poplar, Voas, and Grimaldi to compete against Bill Jenkins, Al Porter, and Williams. Grimaldi has been consistently scoring in the 90's and Voas has been right on his heels, so Williams may be up against his toughest competition of the year.

The parallel bars could prove to be the turning point in the meet if the Orange can score well. Penn State boasts one of the most powerful parallel bar combines in the East. The Lions are represented by Steward, Harlacher, and Jacobson.

The Orange will probably counter with Poplar, Orlick, and Oglesby. This combination has met defeat at the hands of both Pitt and Army, but sophomore Oglesby has been a real standout, and his teammates are both seasoned veterans in the event.

Orange Weakness

The roughest event by far for the Orange will be the horizontal bar. Paul Romeo's stars have been consistently weak in this event, and may have to hope for a first by Voas and good showings by Poplar and Steeves to keep Penn State's score down. Representing the Lions will be Culhane, Jacobson, and Steward.

Thus far this year the Orange squad has been blessed with strong sophomore performances. Meury and Oglesby have been outstanding in their events, and the latter has compiled a total of 29 points in the three league tilts. This added strength could prove to be the deciding factor in this EIGL showdown.

"They have a well-balanced team," warns Romeo, "but the most consistent team will win. It should go down to the last event."

The Piety record now stands at 5-0, including lopsided wins over Cortland and Toronto. The Piety gymnasts have an unblemished record in Archbold Gym which extends beyond last year.

Ithaca Defeats SU Six

By IRA BAKER

The Syracuse icemen suffered a 5-4 sudden death defeat at the hands of Ithaca College Wednesday evening at the Coliseum.

The Orange sextet had trailed 2-0 in the opening minutes of play before Tom Borg dented the nets before the end of the first period.

Ray Nozynski and Fred Robinson flipped in goals for the Orange in the second period to offset another Ithaca tally. Robinson's goal came at a time when the Orangemen were shorthanded.

Jim Hamel then blasted a shot past a bewildered Ithaca netminder in the early going of the last period to put the Orange in front for the first time.

Ithaca came right back to push through their fourth goal past Orange goalie Dick Van Winkle.

Each team then put on an all out effort to score the winning marker in regulation time. Syracuse failed to dent the nets despite some close shots and the game ended deadlocked at 4-4.

A 10 minute sudden death overtime was then cut in half when Ithaca scored at 5:05 to end the contest.

The Hill coaching staff of Babe LaRose, Jack Cern, and Mac "MC" Kiver were disappointed with the play of their skaters. They felt the team was ready for a good showing after Monday's Coliseum workout.

They look for quick revenge, however, with the Orange sextet moving on to Cornell's Lynah Rink to face Ithaca in the second game of a doubleheader.

Orange Observations

By ALLAN KORT

Sports Editor

Syracuse University's new basketball look added a few corollaries which fit in nicely with Coach Fred Lewis' psychological outlook on the game.

Earlier in the season, the squad had bought the coach a rock-and-roll record, "We're Working for the Man." Misplaced for five weeks, the disc made its Manley Field House debut Wednesday night prior to the Canisius game, but didn't overpower the Canisius five which overpowered the Orange, 71-60.

But the record did show the relationship of Fred Lewis to his squad—one of respect as a basketball mentor. Earlier in the season, clippings from opponents' home bases dripped into Syracuse uttering Lewis quotes which were derogatory to the players on the squad. These were finally attributed to misquotes. This, we feel, will not be repeated as Lewis begins to realize he is working with a hustling, but not extremely talented ball club at Syracuse this year.

But the look is already toward next year. Lewis's players are already talking of warmup procedures for the Orange's opening game next year against the University of Toronto. The psychological music element will also be present in these warmups as the Orange will adopt the old Harlem Globetrotters standard, "Sweet Georgia Brown," for their pregame warmups.

The trend in basketball strategy for the Orange next year appears to be a method of scaring the opponent in pre-game warmups. One warmup pattern has the Orange's two little men, Dick Duffy and Frank Nicoletti, laying up the ball followed by 10 consecutive dunks by the squad's "taller" men.

This warmup is a good one, but it could run into difficulties if a man missed his dunk, hurting the Orange morale rather than the opponents.

This type of strategy already had an adverse effect on an Orange club earlier in the year. The Syracuse frosh, facing weak competition in their earlier games, set as their mark 100 points in various games. This was wholly condoned by Coach Morris Osburn, in fact encouraged, as it pleased the crowd and raised the morale of the squad. But in one particular contest, the squad had 93 points with four minutes remaining but failed the century mark by one. Even though they had completely demolished their opponents, the Tangerines came off the court with a look of defeat.

The Canisius game also had another basketball first. This was the first time, memory permitting, that a Syracuse team had to be told in a pre-game pep talk not to go to pieces because a certain referee officiated.

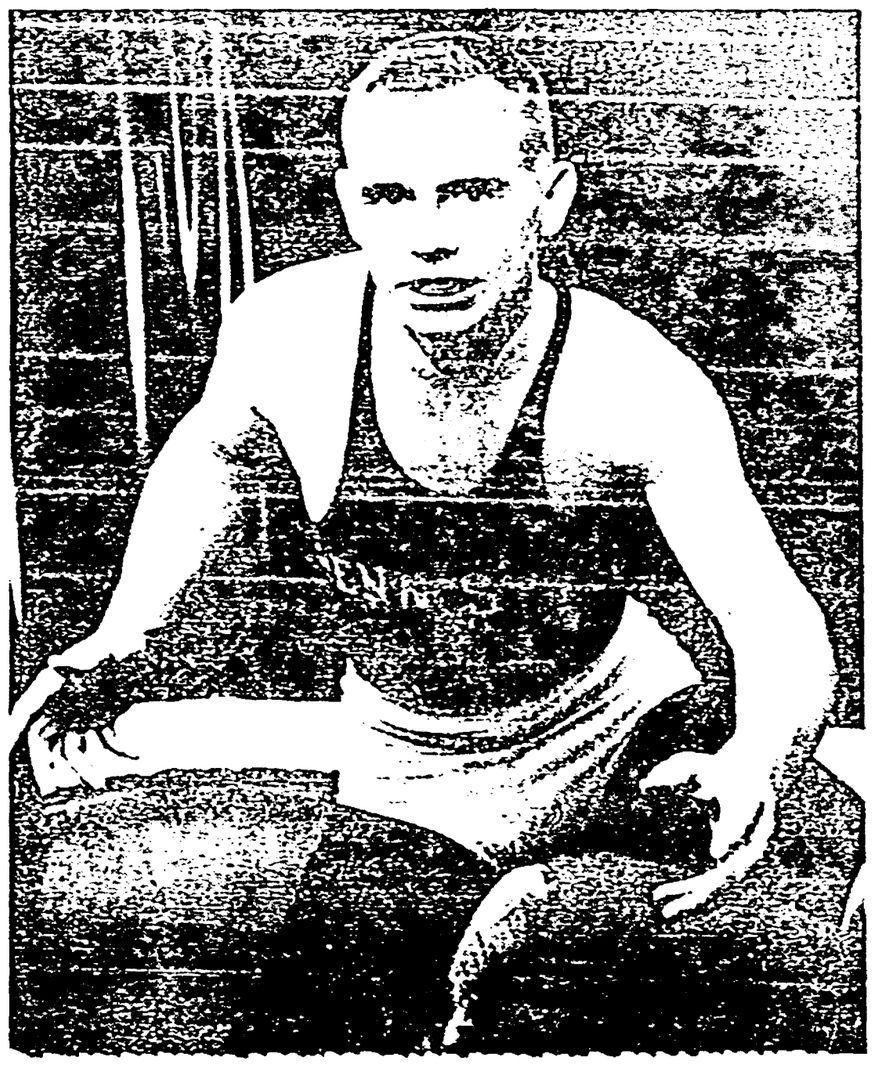
That referee, Dolly King, had previously "shook the morale" of the Orangemen in the Manhattan game earlier this year. Yells have been heard from local mentors of poor officiating all year, but Dolly King exemplifies the worst—he is not, as Canisius Coach McKinnon inferred " a homer."

Undefeated Piety Ranked 4th In Nation

By JIM DINE

The Penn State Nittany Lions will move into Manley Fieldhouse Saturday afternoon at 2:30 after having routed VPI, 30-0 and meet the red hot Syracuse University wrestling team.

The win over V.P.I. extended the Lions' winning streak to three, and their overall record to 4-2, but they will be playing the role of underdogs as they face a team which as not been defeated in a dual match this year.



According to Coach Scandura "This is the dual meet we must win. After this we look to the championships."

The rejuvenated Staters have really hit their stride after dropping two out of their first three matches to Navy (by 2) and Lehigh (by 3).

Since these two losses the Nittany Lions have added some new members to their team who have proved to be valuable assets. One is Ed Pohlands, who is undefeated since he joined the team and wrestles in the 191-pound class. So far Michigan, Maryland, Cornell, and V.P.I. have been defeated by Penn State, while the conquerers of the Nittany Lions have both met defeat by Syracuse.

If the Orange grapplers can manage a win Saturday against State, it looks as though there will be easy sledding until the Eastern finals at Annapolis. Only Colgate and Cortland will have to be overcome.

Penn State's main strength comes in the lighter classes, and Scandura says, "The first four weights are critical as we see it. If they are to make their move it will have to be then."

BOB HANEY

The most interesting matches should come in the 123, 130, 137, and 147 pound classes. Out of the nine matches, two of them will feature undefeated opponents. These are in the 130-pound class where Syracuse's Sonny Greenhigh will opposes State's Bob Haney, and in the 191-pound class where undefeated Gerry Everling will meet Ed Pohland. The Lions have one other undefeated wrestler, and he really test the skills of Syracuse's Dick Slutzky. His name is George Edwards and he wrestles in the 147-pound class.

Penn State holds a wide margin in this wrestling series with a 30-5 record with 2 matches ending in ties. Last year the Nittany Lions were involved in a 15-15 deadlock with Syracuse. Penn State's Coach Charles Spiedel will bring a remarkable record with him thjs Saturday afternoon. Teams under his lead have compiled 180 wins, 49 defeats and 12 ties for him. He has contributed so much to amateur wrestling that he was inducted into the Helms Amateur Wrestling Hall of Fame.

This Saturday's match tends to be a real crowd pleaser and an overflow crowd is expected.

Unbeaten SU Penn Meet

By TOM MULLER

The 1962-3 Eastern Intercollegiate Gymnastics League title will be up for grabs Saturday, when the undefeated gym teams from Syracuse and Penn State clash in Archbold Gym at 7:30 p.m.

This will be the second straight year that these 2 teams have entered their meet without a loss between them. Last year the Nittany Lions surprised the Orangemen 56-40, and went on to tie Army for the league's top spot.

The two teams have put their common foes away in similar fashion and by almost identical scores. The toughest opponent met by each this year has been Army. The Nittany Lions tripped the Black Knights 49-47, and the Orange eked out a 48½-47½ win over the Cadets. Can there be any doubt why the meet has been rated a toss-up?

Point-getter

The "big" point-getter for the Orange has been Phil "Corky" Voas. This 5-3, 115-pound package of dynamite has already scored 46½ points in three league tests, and he seems to be seriously threatening the school scoring record, which he set last year. With two league meets still remaining, Corky needs only 17½ points to tie the record; he is currently averaging 15½ points per meet.

The three Orange seniors, Voas, Ron Orlick, and captain Ray Grimaldi, were in the thick of things at the Eastern championships last year. Voas won

SU Swimmers Travel To Williams College

The Syracuse mermen will travel to Williamstown Mass. Saturday to face a tough Williams College aggregation.

The Orangemen, who were crushed by Pittsburgh 56-29 last Saturday, will have their work cut out for them.

Last year Williams was edged out 48-47 at the Orange pool, and looks to avenge this defeat.

Syracuse has a 4-2 record this year. They have counted heavily on Joe Morrison for the 200 yd. medley and the 500 yard freestyle, and captain Bob Ohman for the breast and backstroke.

Tom Watts, who defeated Pittsburgh's undefeated freestyle star Rob Levine in the 200 yard event, will be again looked for to gather in some needed points.

Diving has been a sore spot this year for the Orange since the loss of Jerry Rosenthal last year. Rosenthal was State champion in 1961 and his replacements have had trouble capturing the first places he usually garnered in.

Saturday's meet will be a tough assignment for Coach Ted Webster and his swimmers who are preparing for the State Championships to be played here in March.

Entertainers

Weekend to Feature Old and New Events

This year's Winter Weekend will feature traditional events and new activities.

A free "Warmer," beginning a new tradition, will be held from 1:30 - 4:30 p.m. Saturday afternoon at Skytop, not at Drumlins Country Club as previously announced.

Features of the "Warmer" are an out-door campfire, open slopes for skiing or sliding and a snack bar. Busses to the "Warmer" will run from Slocum Hall between 1 and 1:30 p.m. and will retun between 4 and 4:15 p.m.

Parade

The Torch Parade, in which each campus living center has a representative, is slated for 7 p.m. Friday night at Drumlins.

Paraders will march down the slope and surround the ice rink, where the Queen of Winter Weekend will be crowned.

Pageant

Following the crowning, there will be an Ice Pageant, based on the weekend theme, "No Biz Like Show Biz."

"Stockingfoot," the traditional weekend dance, will take place from 8 p.m. - 1 a.m. Friday at Drumlins. Intermission entertainment is by Hendricks Chapel Dean Charles C. Noble and his accordian and singers Lloyd Baskin and Bob Davis.

Songs

Baskin, who has sung at the intrigue Room, will sing "What Kind of Fool am I?" and "Fly Me to the Moon." Davis will give his interpretation of the smash hit "I Left my Heart in HL Basement," aranged by Andrea Fastiggi.

Tickets for "Stockingfoot" will be sold from 9 a.m. - 1:30 p.m. today - Friday in Huntington B. Crouse Hall lobby. Tickets are $2.25 per couple.

Citizenship Department Sets Lecture Schedule; Ribicoff Heads List Of Four

Connecticut Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, political writer James MacGregor Burns, Kenya's first African Minister Musa Amalemba and U. S. Deputy Attorney General Nicholas Katzenbach will speak at citizenship lectures this semester.

Katzenbach will discuss "Opportunities and Limits of Equality through Law" at the first lecture at 8 p. m. Wednesday in Hendricks Chapel.

Other scheduled speeches are Amalemba, March 7; Sen. Ribicoff, March 15, and Burns, April 16.

Katzenbach

Katzenbach, assigned to the Justice Department in Washington, is in charge of prosecuting cases involving enforcement of the Fifth and 14th amendments to the constitution.

A former Rhodes scholar and Ford Foundation fellow, Katzenbach served as professor of law at Yale University and the University of Chicago. In 1947 he was editor of the Yale Law Journal.

He is an alumnus of Princeton, Yale and Oxford Universities and received an air medal and three clusters for service with the U. S. Air Force during World War II.

Co-Author

With Morton A. Kaplan he co-authored "The Political Foundation of Internaitonal Law," published in 1961.

Katzenbach is considered an expert in cases involving civil liberties and has written numerous articles dealing with problems of law and law enforcement.

Amalemba, born near Lake Victoria, Kenya, was a journalist in Nairobi.

For his non-racial ideas he was attacked by Kikuhu terrorists and native extremists promoting an all-African state of Kenya. He served as a member of Nairobi's City Council before being named Minister of Housing for the entire colony.

Amalemba is the first Negro appointed to a high rank in Kenya.

Ribicoff

Sen. Ribicoff, formerly governor of Connecticut, is serving his first term as a senator. He resigned his past as secretary of health, education and welfare to run for the senate last November.

A cum laude graduate of the University of Chicago, he holds honorary degrees from eight municipal judge and state legislator before being elected governor in 1955.

Burns is the author of "Roosevelt: The Lion and the Fox," published in 1956, and "John Kennedy: A Political Profile," published in 1960.

Deadlock

His most recent volume, "The Deadlock of Democracy," appeared earlier this year.

Winner of the Woodrow Wilson prize and the Tamiment Institute prize for the best biography of 1956, Burns is professor of political science, where he received his bachelor's degree.

He earned his master's and doctorate degrees at Harvard University, and also studied at the National Institute of Public Affairs and the London School of Economics.

During World War II he was a combat historian in the South Pacific.

The lecture series is made possible by a grant form the Sperry & Hutchinson Foundation.

BusAd Takes Cheat Action

A student in the College of Business Administration has been suspended for one term because of academic dishonestry, Assistant Dean Karl E. Vogt has announced.

The student was detected plagiarizing a report in a written communications course. In addition he received a cricled F for his final grade in the course.

Last week the College of Liberal Arts announced disciplinary action against seven students because of academic dishonesty.

RUSH CHOICES DUE TODAY

Freshmen rushees must sign and submit preference cards from 10 a.m. - 3 p.m. today in the Men's gym, Fraternity Administrator James P. McMurray announces.

Fraternities will submit their preference lists in triplicate to McMurray from 8:30 a.m. - 1:30 p.m. today in the dean of men's office.

Bids and fraternity lists can be picked up Tuesday in the lobby of Huntington B, Crouse Hall, not the dean of men's office as previously stated.

Sports Queen Crown Open

Competition is now open for "Miss North East," queen of the North Eastern Sports Show.

The contest, open to single girls between the ages of 16-21, will be based on beauty, poise and personality, sports interest and attire.

The 7th annual Sports Show will be held March 6-10 at the Onondaga County War Memorial.

Sports attractions feature in the show will include hunting, fishing, bait casting, decoy contest, camping conservation, skin diving, water skiing, bowling, golf, archery, outdoor life, recreation and travel.

Contestants for the Miss North East competition must submit applications and photographs of themselves. Further information and application forms can be obtained at the Sports Show headquarters, 989 James St.

Fund Totals $4.6 Million

The Onondaga Area Committee of Syracuse University's Syracuse Plan Saturday reported $4,623,355 has been pledged locally for the fund drive. The figure represents an increase of $620,035 from the previously - announced total.

According to Earle J. Machold, national chairman of the Syracuse Plan, 33 gifts made up the $620,035 figure.

He added that the local fund goal is $11.4 million and is expected to be reached by June. Two milion dollars will go to scholarships.

Machold announced the new totals in the absence of T. Frank Dolan Jr., Onondaga chairman.

Onondagan Needs Typists, Writers

Typists are needed for the Onondagan, the Hill yearbook.

Staff members who have already signed up to work on the "On" should come to the office, as there is typing and writing to be done.

11 GROUPS LOSE SEATS AT JSL

Eleven groups have lost representation in Joint Student Legislature after missing three meetings, according to Sen. Harvey Nathan, legislative commissioner.

They are Alpha Tau Omega and Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternities, Delta Gamma sorority, Co-op I and II, Corneille, Fenton Grover Cleveland 1 and 2, Sadler 8, International Students Organization and Mott Cottage.

"Unless these groups have a good excuse, they will not be readmitted to the legislature this semester," Nathan said.

Snow Clearance Tonight

All cars must be removed from the St. Thomas More Chapel parking lot on East Adams Street by 8 p. m. today, according to Security Police Director Robert D. Flaherty.

Cars remaining in the lot at this time will be towed away so that the lot can be cleared of snow, Flaherty said.

The St. Mary's parking lot behind the Veterans Administration Hospital will also be plowed at 8 p. m. Over-night parking is prohibited in this lot, Flaherty said, and all cars found will be towed away.

Annex Parking

Persons who park their cars over night in the St. Thomas More lot are asked to use the annex "which is in fairly good condition," the security director said. The annex entrance is on University Avenue.

This request is being made as "a snow removal emergency appeal," Flaherty said. "We have been unable to plow the lot because of cars parking over night."

Three cars have already been towed from the St. Thomas More lot, Flaherty noted. One, he said, lacked license plates and the others "weren't registered for 1963."

Starting today, unauthorized cars will be towed off the main campus and the Smith parking area, he said. He stressed that no parking is allowed on the campus after 10 p. m. unless special permission is granted.

Flaherty emphasized "we don't want to tow away unknowing violators." However, he added, "if it is determiend they are flagrant violators, students will be brought before the dean of men or the dean of women."

Only 388 parking spaces are available on the main campus and 90 in the Smith area, Flaherty said. He said that 837 campus parking stickers have been issued in addition to guest, medical' and temporary stickers.

The only stickers permitted on campus are on campus, temporary and medical stickers. Staff stickers issued to employees, graduate assistants and head residents and faculty stickers issued to instructors are not permitted on campus.

Discrimination: Time Will Tell

Personal discrimination, one of the leading sociological problems of our time, exists everywhere. However, the views expressed in the recent Daily Orange survey on discrimination showed prejudices not unlike those known throughout history.

When only 12 percent of the university's freshmen believe there is no discrimination on campus, it is time to stop and think. Only 24 of the 188 freshmen interviewed in the past 15 weeks were able to say they found no discrimination on campus.

It's easy enough to point to this problem in the South. However we cannot ignore a statement made by a Negro in the survey, and echoed by many others throughout the country. "The situation is very bad all over, even in the North," he said.

A student brought up in the deep South, who has been taught white supremacy all his life, cannot be expected to forget this merely because he is enrolled at Syracuse. Likewise, a northerner is not expected to change his views the moment he hits campus. However, this forces us to assume the situation in the North is as bad, if not outwardly, at least in the minds of its citizens.

Our generation is supposedly building a "better society." Who can believe this, however, when we step in the same pitfalls, make the same msitakes as our civil war ancestors made and learn nothing

A few freshmen blamed discrimination on fraternities and upperclassmen in general. They say groups form after a lovey-dovey first year. If this is true, and 88 percent of the freshmen claimed there is discrimination in their class, we hate to think of the upperclass percentage.

We condemn racial and religious prejudices as much as anyone but realize a university cannot change a person's deep rooted views. This the person himself must change. The question to ask is how does a student change his views and believe something he has never before been taught?

The university should present the opportunity for the student to associate with persons of all types, persons of different religion, race, national origin and political and cultural backgrounds. Only then can we hope to tumble the walls of discrimination.

Only when these freshmen, and college students throughout the country and, indeed, the world, make use of these contacts can we expect answers and attitudes other than those expressed to the Daily Orange.

Ignorance

By Ron Corwin

"The Greeks visit retarded kids. . . . For the Greeks are the true independents. . . ." Win Whittaker, D.O., 2/13/63

Now the hour for the final decisions concerning whether or not to "go Greek" is drawing near and the flurry of activity inside the fraternity and sorority houses is increasing. So too, the amount of literary (?) information and opinion being disseminated by the D.O. is reaching a fever pitch (See Whittaker's column, 2/13; front page story, 2/14; Greenwald's column, 2/12).

Mr. Greenwald's basic argument is that the Greeks are "social vaseline" producers. "At worst the Greek Vaseline," says Mr. Greenwald, "greases the way to the Water Tower or beerfoamed afternoons at Green Lakes." Aside from the glaring Freudian overtones of his interpretation, Mr. Greenwald falls essentially short of his apparent goal—that of slamming the Greek organizations.

Mr. Whittaker, in a futile and somewhat pathetic attempt to refute Mr. Greenwald, inadvertently provides the damning and condemning information which shows exactly how rotten the Greek system really is.

Mr. Whittaker asserts that the Greeks are true independents essentially because they use the democratic process—at times they vote. However, democracy is considerably more than merely casting a ballot.

And even when it is cramped into those proportions, hopefully, the votes are cast by intelligent voters and not by people who: 1) Have ingrained in their system the most sophisticated and deeply rooted forms of prejudice; 2) Are basically anti-intellectual (The competition for an academic trophy no more represents intellectual activity than mere voting represents democracy); 3) in short, by people who define for the individual who he is and worse still, what he is.

Prejudice is the essential aspect of Greek organization and is, therefore, the focal point of the attacks against them. Certainly in the broad sense of what prejudice is, it penetrates all three counts of the indictment above and probably many more. It is this aspect of Greekdom which with some digressions, I will now deal.

Most houses have "one." Having "one" in their house seems to be the absolver of guilt for the Greeks and the panacea for their system. Having "one," for those who do not know, means that some organization (no doubt some very "liberal" organization) has a member of an ethnic group who is not in the ethnic group which comprises the entire house—save this "one" and in some cases "two."

That attitude of having "one" is childish and unsophisticated. ("Sophistication is used here, not in the narrow sense of eating with a knife and fork—monkeys have been taught to do that and even rats have been toilet trained—but in the broad sense of being "highly complicated, refined and subtilized.") Thus while prejudice in the Greek system is itself, quite sophisticated, the Greeks, themselves, are not.

When I left the Greek system because I maintained that among other things, that it was highly prejudicial, I was told that it was simply not so. I was told that a particular house had pledged a crippled boy and what is more, this house had a good reputation. I smiled softly on the outside (I knew how to do that before I pledged but, I must admit that I really developed finesse during rush.) and said, "That's just what I mean."

My informant did not understand me then. I saw him some time later (after he had deactivated—he had gotten married, it seems) and we had a long talk. He understands me now.

So Mr. Whittaker maintains that "Greeks visit retarded kids. . . ." Yes. And it's the same as one house "pledged a crippled boy" and one house pledged a Negro, and one house pledged a Jew and one house pledged a Christian and "some of my best friends are Jews" and all those superficial contentions directed as a show of liberalism and instead cover a thinly veiled show of bigorty. I certainly hope you did not miss out during rush. I hope each house showed its "Negro." They are so proud of them.

Progressive school administrations all over the nation are curtailing Greek action. At Brown University, for instance, all fraternities have been barred from campus. And at the University of Wisconsin no new Greek organizations are allowed (In fact, last year one house was removed from campus because against the rules, it had a discriminatory clause in its constitution.)

Lack of clauses, of course, does not signify the end of discrimination but, nevertheless, it is a step. Wisconsin's action is indicative of what is happening on many campuses. The administration at Wisconsin, I might add, sees fit to provide its students with a fabulous Student Union so that they have a greater range of activity choices.

But 60% of the students at Syracuse can't all be wrong. Oh no? The irony of the saying, "Forty million Frenchment can't be wrong" is that they were!

And Greek organizations perpetuate themselves. They breed ignorance and narrowness and then they live on these diseases. Contact with foreign students who have a different perspective on life is sheered to almost no-contact. The simple social grace of being able to mix with different people ("different" in the narrow sense of color, religion or national origin; and "different" in the broad sense of ideas and values) is fatally curtailed.

In fact, the element of sameness is devastatingly wielded like a sledge hammer over the heads of the Greeks—and it is just as destructive to the personalities, growth and expansiveness of the individuals as it would be to the house itself if the hammer was used against it (an interesting and perhaps hopeful image).

Often in "hash" one hears, "He's just not our material," or "she won't fit in." How blatantly narrow people can be! The function of the university is not to merely provide a narrow education—to keep you with people just like yourself.

Hopefully, when we leave our college days we have learned to shed some of the shackling prejudices and narrowness with which we enter university life—not, as is often the case, to be more glib about our bigotry. I can not see how fraternities or sororities contribute in any way to defeating prejudice. In fact, they nurture it. Such is certainly the case when individuals are accepted or rejected primarily according to how well they fit the mold.

Further, when individuals in Greek organizations do become campus leaders they do so in spite of their Greek affiliation—not because of it. When I rushed I was never once told that joining a campus activity would be good for the house. Instead, I was lied to. I was told that it would be good for me.

When I finally pledged I was told that whether I wanted to or not I had to get active in some organization for the good of the house. When they show you their Negro, did they show you their BMOC, also?

Rushees, remember what they said to you over the last two weeks? They told you that you have got a ready-made social life. That is true. But it is narrow. The same people will be at all the parties—your brothers. The parties will all be essentially alike. As an upperclassman you probably will not go anymore (unless you have to pay a fine if you do not go) because you will be bored—although you will have "outgrown" them is a more precise term.

It will not be easy to refrain from taking the lure that promises a "ready-made social life with ready made friends (who will be there whenever you need them)" or whatever else is offered. It may at first, be difficult to carve a life out of the vast complex of opportunity presented by a university education.

You might find that instead of going to a fraternity party you go to the Syracuse Symphony (Heaven forbid!) or you might find yourself at the Regent Theater for the Tuesday film series. No it may not be easy. But at the risk of sounding corny, the fish who takes the easy lure loses out. There is no reason to believe that it will be otherwise with you. Quite the contrary.

And finally, the argument that all the individuals of the Greek system are not like those I have described here and that the system, even with its monstrous ramifications, is not indicative of the individ-

Color?

By LESLIE BERG

I'm tired of hearing about advances in color television. All I ever see is black and white: the people on the screen. The blacks and the whites are still very much divided.

Television has only allowed Negroes or orientals on the screen when they fit the stereotype. We all felt very liberal watching our old radio favorites Amos and Andy. There they were up on the screen — black as life. But our liberalism was not strong enough to rebel against the sterotype of the homespun, drawling, lower-class Negro. We were willing to accept Kingfish and Sapphire — nothing more.

Other racial minorities fare no better. According to TV drama no oriental ever did anything in the west aside from laying Negro. We were wililng to ac- Japanese with wit and charm were allowed to become house boys for affluent bachelors.

The surprising thing about this trend is the lack of notice that accompanies it. New Yorkers who daily travel subways that look like miniature melting pots never question the all-white population that depicts their home on "Naked City".

The television audience seems quite wililng to accept the fact that only whites are treated in hospitals, allowed to join the police force or seen walking in crowds on city streets. Even the furvor over integration in schools, bus stations, restaurants and other public facilities has not transferred its enthusiasm to the television screen.

The broadcasting media are an integral art of our national culture. Research studies prove conslusively that television is one of the first medium our children come in contact with. In front of a television set they learn our culture. The magic box is a teacher of mores and stereotypes.

As long as we allow television to keep its blacks and whites so well separated, our culture will suffer. Our dramatic programs will feature Rochester instead of Ralph Bunche. Technical color TV is more expensive, can we afford black and white.?

FILMS

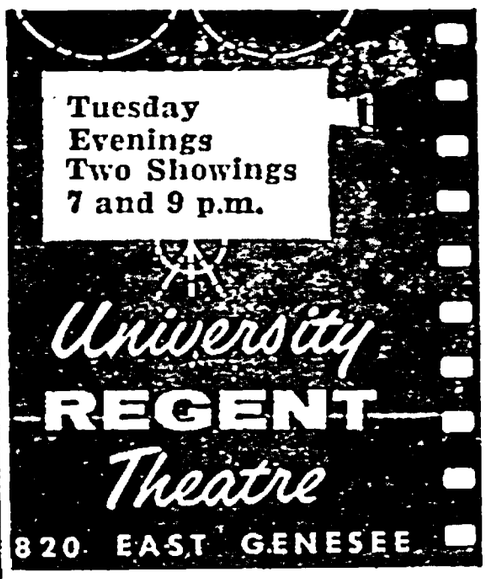
'Longest Day'

The world may have to have another war before someone will be able to duplicate the efforts of Darryl F. Zanuck's filming of the last one. "The Longest Day," now playing at the Eckel Theater, is Zanuck's version of World War II, or more specifically, the Allied invasion of France.

The three hours of wide screen action and stereophonic noise go fast. And if the constant barrage of fighting men, dying men, ear-pounding cannons and exploding shells becomes a bit oppressive one is almost ready to blame the war and not Zanuck's capable international crew of four directors and 42-odd stars.

"The Longest Day" is told in a pseudo - documentary style with the major historical events of the invasion presented via the experiences of specific individuals. The apprehension, on both sides of the Channel, is revealed by having the narrative focus on various people, from the German's Rommel to crap shooting American GIs.

The massive war machine that both sides, and Zanuck, have assembled is depicted through the men who are that machine. The beaches crowded with a "cast of thousands" are seen from a German plane strafing them. The gigantic Allied armada is first revealed when a German officer spies them and is flabergasted. The scattered efforts of the French underground are depicted by a few indicative episodes.



Because of the film's scope each of the 42 stars can only reveal how he is representative of an aspect of the total D-Day effort.

Like the real soldiers of war, most of the performers have little time but to die.

The total effect of "The Longest Day" is quite impressive. His war is an awesome, human, but not grotesque, juggernaut of destruction.

If by the very bigness of the production one cannot find a person or a sequence to "get one's teeth into" such a defect has to be excused because of the "big picture" Zanuck has tried, and succeeded, to give us. He has sketched in D-Day with power. We have to wait for films like "Attack" and "Paths of Glory" to fill in the gruesome details.

1. I'll tell you what you have to look for in a job. You have to look for fringe benefits. That's the big thing today.

Yes—the big thing.

2. You have to consider your needs. You're going to get married some day, aren't you? Then you need life and accident insurance.

Go on—go on—

3. You're going to have kids—so you'll want maternity benefits.

I'd like lots of children.

4. And what about medical bills? That's something every big family has to think about. You need a good major medical plan that covers almost everything.

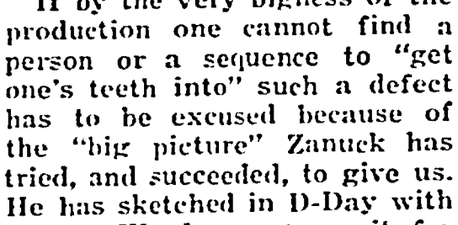
5. And you're not going to want to work all your life, are you? You're going to want to take it easy—you know, travel around, live it up. So you need a retirement plan that guarantees you plenty of dough.

I can see it now.

6. That's why I say you have to look at the fringe benefits when you look for a job.

But don't you also have to look for interesting work, good income, the chance for advancement?



7. You sure do. That's why I'm going to work for Equitable. You get all those job advantages—and all the fringe benefits, too.

I admire your thinking.

Brisbane Papers Added to Library

By ERIC S. BENDERSON

The personal papers of Arthur Brisbane, famous newspaper editor under William Randolph Hearst and multimillionaire, have been acquired by Syracuse University.

According to Howard Applegate, the university's manuscripts consultant, the papers were presented to SU by Brisbane's daughter, Mrs. Chase Mellon of New York City.

The collection consists of 80 scrapbooks of his editorials and articles, four diaries of the 1880's and numerous personal letters.

Among the collection is a portfolio of congratulatory messages on Brisbane's seventieth birthday, including salutations from President Franklin D. Roosevelt, James Farley and Hearst.

Brisbane was born in Buffalo in 1863, and at the age of twenty went to work for the New York Sun for $15 a week.

In a diary he started on his twentieth birthday, Dec. 12, 1883, he successfully predicted that he would soon become a famous newspaper man: "Now that I have justified to my satisfaction the keeping of a diary, how shall I write it, so that when my fame as a journalist, politician and philosopher shall have rendered my name immortal these pages may be most intelligible to the admiring millions destined to read them."

The diary ends March 20, 1884.

Included is a list of all his expendiutres, from theatre tickets to food and clothing. Brisbane, interested in land speculation, left an estate estimated at $25 million.

These manuscripts are a part of the collection of historical papers in SU's archives. Among other collections are the complete papers of the four-year administration of Gov. Averill Harriman; Dorothy Thompson's columns, and the correspondence of Gerrit Smith, a social and political reformer of the 19th century.

There is also a complete record of all student publications since the beginning of the University.

According to James Owens, archivist, many of these collections serve as the impetus for future biographies and histories. Prof. Frank J. Munger, of the political science department, is currently working on a history of the Harriman administration.

Many of these papers are open to undergraduates. A complete list of those manuscript collections available to students can be obtained in the Gov. Harriman archives on the fourth floor of the Main Library.

SCHOLARSHIP FORMS DUE

All applications for 1963-64 financial aid are due April 5, Director of Financial Aids Jim G. Carleton has announced.

Students desiring financial aid should fill out applications which are available from the offices of the dean of men and the dean of women.

Carleton explained that a cumulative 1.5 grade point average is required for consideration for scholarship assistance.

Opportunities at Du Pont for technical graduates—fourth of a series

Right now Du Pont needs many new mechanical, electrical, civil, chemical, instrumentation, industrial and systems engineers, along with chemists, physicists and mathematicians.

The reason why is very simple: Du Pont manufactures and sells more than 1200 products. And new ones are being developed every day.

Take DYCRIL® Photopolymer Printing Plates, pictured above. We started producing them in 1961. But we had been working on them since 1948. Between these two dates we spent $10 million on research and development. Hundreds of top-flight technical men spent thousands of hours making DYCRIL commercially acceptable.

And with DYCRIL, as with all of our products, it will take a continuing flow of man-hours to make sure that it is manufactured in sufficient quantity—and of optimum quality—to satisfy growing customer demand.

You can see that, with hundreds of diverse products being produced in many plants across the nation, technical men—many of whom were in college, like yourself, just a few years ago—shoulder big responsibilities.

If you're a technical man, and a challenging future in industry appeals to you, write us. Use our coupon. You'll receive information about employment opportunities at Du Pont, and, if you like, about DYCRIL Photopolymer Printing Plates.

Hill J-Professor to Speak At Religious Press Institute

Prof. Roland E. Wolseley of the School of Journalism will give the concluding address on March 8 in New York, at an institute on the religious press.

The National Conference of Christians and Jews is sponsoring the institute, which begins March 6. Writers and editors unofficially representing Catholic, Jewish and Protestant publications will meet.

Prof. Wolseley, who headed the J-School's religious journalism prgram when it started in 1947, is now chairman of the magazine department.

He will summarize the institute's sessions and speak on "The Responsibilities of the Press in a Pluralistic Society."

Others speakers will include Dr. Harold Fey, edior of Christian Century; Joseph G. Weisberg, "Jewish Advocate" executive editor; Wayne Couse, managing editor of Christianity and Crisis; and Msgr. Daniel Moore, editor of the St. Louis Review.

The purpose of the conference is to focus attention on the role of church publications in reporting and interpreting major social issues on which religious groups differ.

It has been planned jointly with the Associated Church Press, Catholic Press Association, the Anglo-Jewish Press Association and the Religious Freedom and Public Affairs Project of the National Congress.

It is one of several Congress projects supported by the Ford Foundation.

Two Houses Elect Heads

Phi Kappa Psi and Lambda Chi Alpha fraternities have recently elected officers.

New Phi Psi officers are Robert Ellis, president; Roy Price, vice president; Walter Haglund, treasurer; Jack White, corresponding secretary, and Alfred Pardi, recording secretary.

Other house officers include Bert Herdegan, historian; David Boysen, sergeant-at-arms; Gene Bonstein, messenger, and Jerry Heller, chaplain.

At Lambda Chi, David Benjamin was elected president. Other officers are Jim Trombino, vice president; Garth Dugolinsky, treasurer; Fred Boehner, secretary; Anthony Shay, rushing chairman; Marty Schneider, social chairman; Douglas Griset, pledge trainer, and Howard Rowe, ritual master.

A Phi O Elects New Officers

Phi Chapter of Alpha Phi Omega, national service fraternity, has elected officers for the year.

They are Lawrence Hoch, president; Michael Reitelman, first vice president; Donald Fleming, second vice president; Edward Weiss, recording secretary; James Lindberg, corresponding secretary; Joseph Poras, treasurer; Ronald Thompson, parliamentarian; John Fuchs, historian; and Ronald Kingsley, advisor.

WHERE IN THE WORLD . . . will you go after graduation? . . . will you find challenging opportunity? . . . will you be in 10 years? These important questions you must answer within the next year.

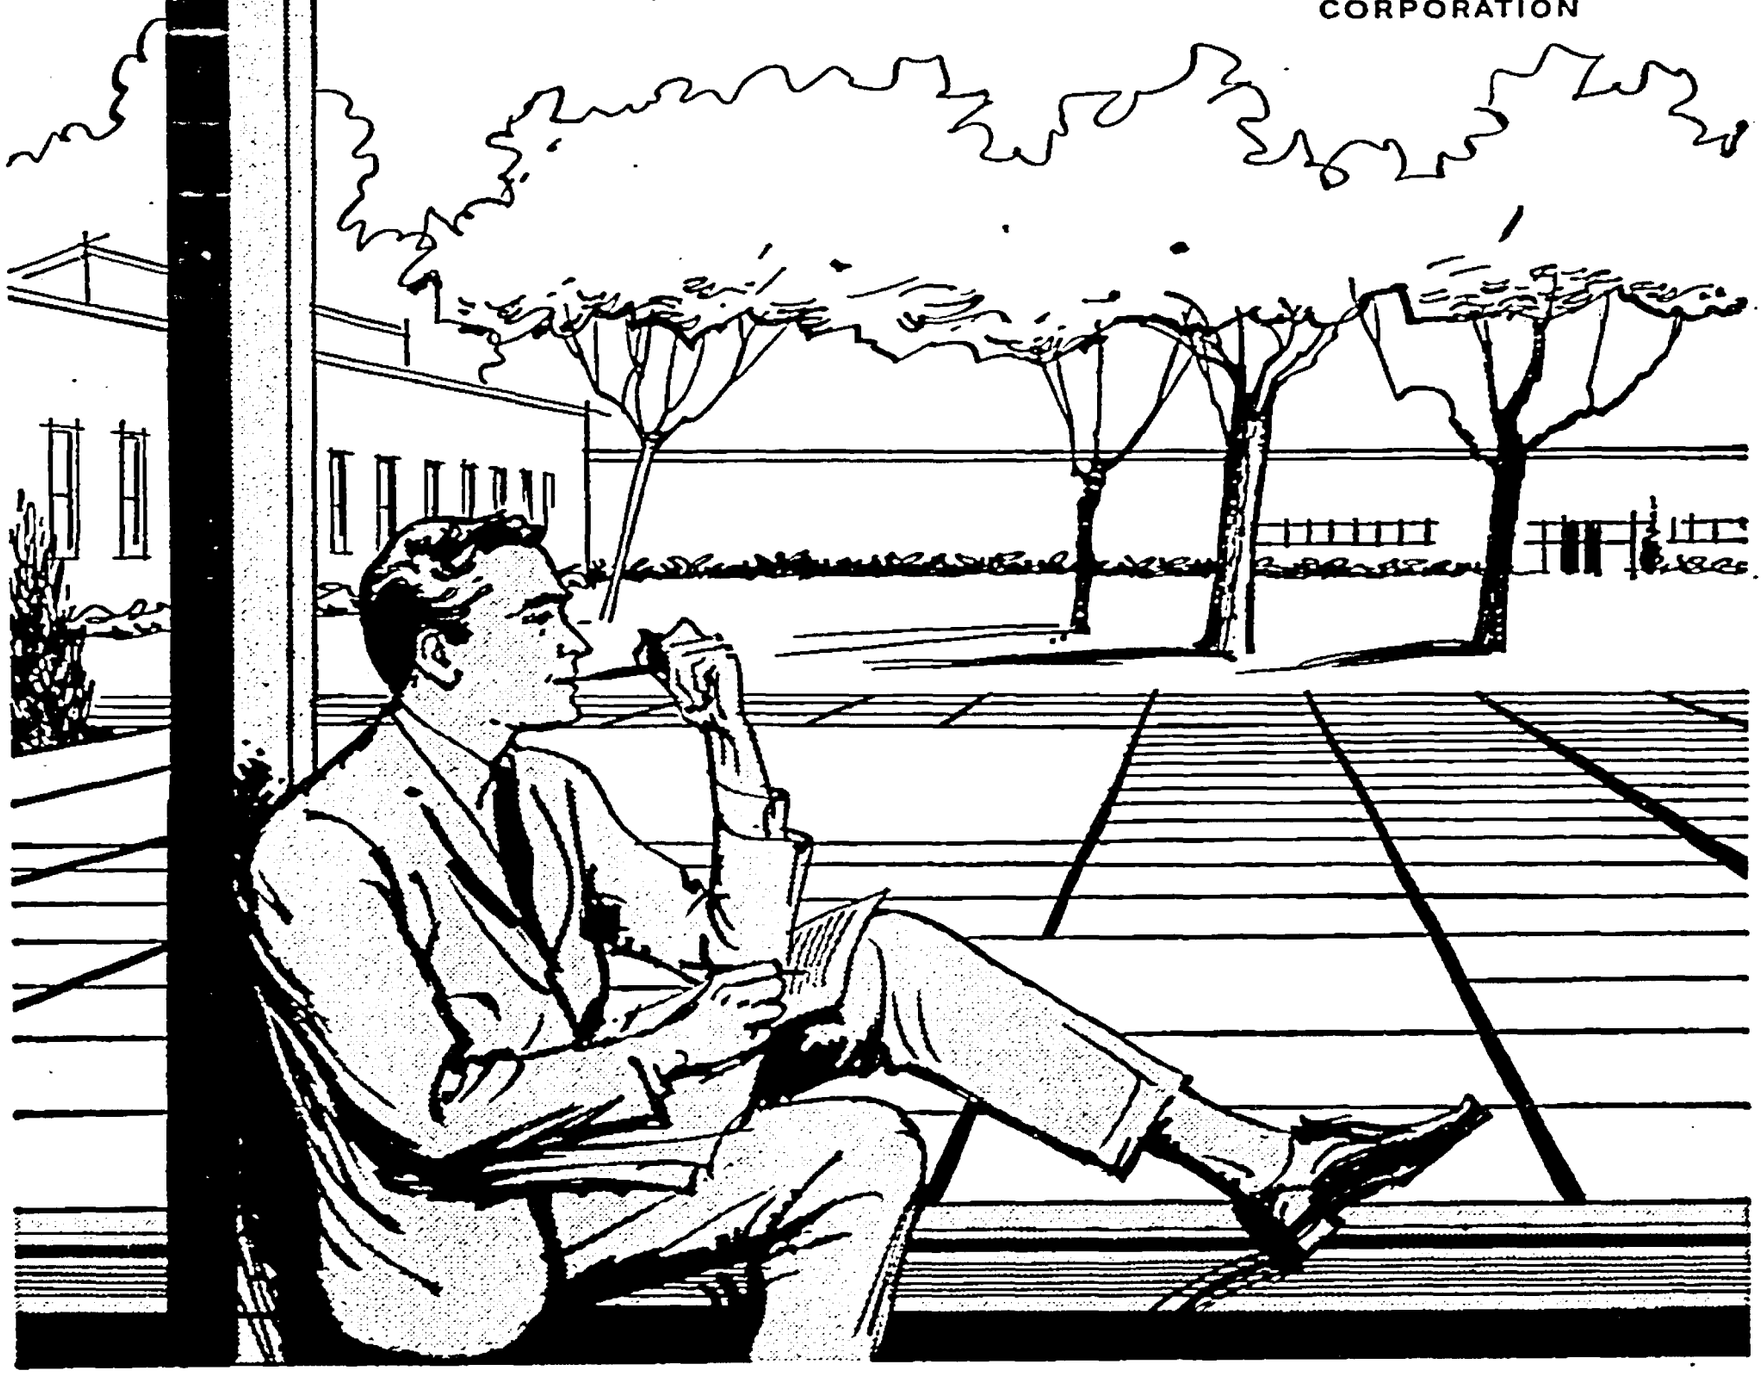
Real opportunity is a two-way street, a 50-50 proposition. Your professional advancement is based on two interdependent factors:

First, the growth potential of the firm you join—secondly, your own competence and initiative.

The following figures show our ability to provide the first requirement. You must furnish the second.



Xerox Corporation has doubled its sales in the past three years—from $27 million annually to $60 million, with less than 1% in military billing • tripled its profits—from $1.6 million to $5.3 million • increased employment from 1,650 to 4,300, branch offices from 17 to 35 . . . And plans for the future are even more astounding (see Fortune, July, 1962).

Opportunities exist in the following areas: Research and engineering • manufacturing • control • finance • sales.

Contact your placement office to arrange an interview with a Xerox representative, who will be on your campus . . . .

ID Cards For Drinks?

If the bill raising the legal drinking age to 21 in New York State is passed, there is a possibility that state residents between the ages of 18 and 21 could buy alcoholic beverages, if they have an identification card stamped with $2 and parental permission.

Sen. Thomas Laverne (R-Rochester) and Assemblyman Verner Ingram (R-Potsdam) have introduced a bill in the state legislature which proposes that the drinking age be raised to 21, but that younger people be allowed to purchase beverages if they have the consent of their parents.

The ID cards would be issued only to New York State residents.

The proposal is a revision of the recent recommendation by the Joint Legislative Committee to study the alcoholic beverage control law.

Under that proposal, there would be ID cards for New York residents, but parental consent would not be needed.

Ingram and Laverne said that their bill was designed to "strengthen the concept of parental control over persons between 18 and 21."

Sellers of alcoholic beverages would be responsible for determining the eligibility of buyers. There would be a fine of up to $100 and a jail sentence of up to 60 days for selling to non-card holders under 21.

Garrett Joins Summer Staff

W. E. Garrett, National Geographic Magazine's assistant illustrations editor and photographer, has been appointed to the faculty of the Syracuse summer workshop in color photography, Fred A. Demarest, director, has announced.

Garrett will join Arthur Rothstein, technical director of photography of Look magazine, and Gordon Parks, free-lance photographer formerly with Life Magazine, as instructor for the June 9-14 workshop.

The workshop won national recognition last year and has been the subject of feature articles in several national publications.

Enrollment is open to professionals working in publications-photography and to advanced students planning to enter the publications field.

Demarest said the emphasis of the courses will be on creative photography as a more effective means of communication. Enrollment will be limited in number.

Fees, room and board for the workshop will cost $150. Applications may be obtained by writing Director, Syracuse Workshop in Color Photography, School of Journalism.

LA To Accept Credit Tests

Up to 30 hours of advanced placement tests and be accepted for credit toward graduation, College of Liberal Arts Asst. Dean Alfred H. Cope has announced.

Grade point averages will be calculated only on courses actually taken at Syracuse. In this way, Dean Cope said, advanced placement credit will not endanger academic averages.

The policy is retroactive, but students cannot get double credit for courses for which they have obtained credit by actual class attendance.

Additional information is available from Mrs. Irene Marquart, 210 Hall of Languages.

AWS Reinstates Constitution

By NORMA GERKENS

The 1961 Association of Women Students constitution was reinstated at Wednesday's AWS meeting.

The constitution had been waived in November 1961 "to allow AWS justices to form the Joint Student Court," according to AWS president Marilyn Burke.

She added, "in place of the AWS court, we set up a temporary Judicial Review Board." An amendment to permanently retain the review board was proposed by Miss Burke, since the board has proven successful.

Other proposed amendments include enlarging the AWS executive council to include the junior officers, and shortening the time lapse required for amending the constitution from two meetings to one.

The new amendments will be voted on at the AWS meeting March 13.

In other business Miss Burke announced that freshmen must submit applications for sophomore justice by the end of March. Applications should include name, living center, activities, reasons for wanting the position, and average which must exceed 1.5.

Campuses for late minutes acquired between Jan. 19 and Feb. 28 must be taken by the end of March, according to Ula Wiltse.

Three living centers, Sperry Cottage, Huey Cottage and Iota Alpha Pi, were added to dorm council.

Ben Hand: Gate Keeper

Benjamin J. Hand and his corncob pipe no longer greet students and staff and visitors entering the university.

Hand, a former Syracuse policeman and a Security patrolman for the past nine years, retired from university service earlier this year.

During his years at Syracuse, he was traffic control officers at the main gate.

Robert Flaherty, security director, called Hand "one of the most reliable and trustworthy men" he has ever known. "Every morning, regardless of weather, Ben would be on that gate directing and controlling traffic," Flaherty said.

Hand was a member of the Syracuse police department for 32 years.

Underwood

The long-established Underwood Corporation has recently joined forces with youthfully aggressive Olivetti, Europe's largest manufacturer of office machines. With a complete range of electric and standard typewriters, and as distributors of adding and multiplying machines, calculators, accounting machines, electronic and data-processing systems within the United States, Underwood now offers the most complete line of office machines ever available from a single source.

Because of this recent expansion of domestic marketing facilities, and an increase in overseas operations, Underwood has established a management program for qualified holders of graduate degrees. The objective is to place qualified men in managerial positions as soon as they have indicated their readiness for this level.

Successful applicants will attend a three-weeks session at the Underwood training center. From here they will be assigned to Underwood marketing areas for on-the-job training. Duration of this training and future appointments are contingent solely on the progress and aspirations of each individual.

For information or to arrange for an interview, contact your Placement Director. A representative of the Underwood Corporation will be on campus, Monday, March 11th.

Wrestlers Top State

By STEVE SPIEGEL

Coach Joe Scandura's wrestling forces maintained their perfect record and high national standing by overcoming a powerful Penn State squad, 17-11, in Manley Fieldhouse Saturday.

The victory did not come easy, however, for it took a come from behind effort in the final matches to defeat the upset-minded Nittany Lions.

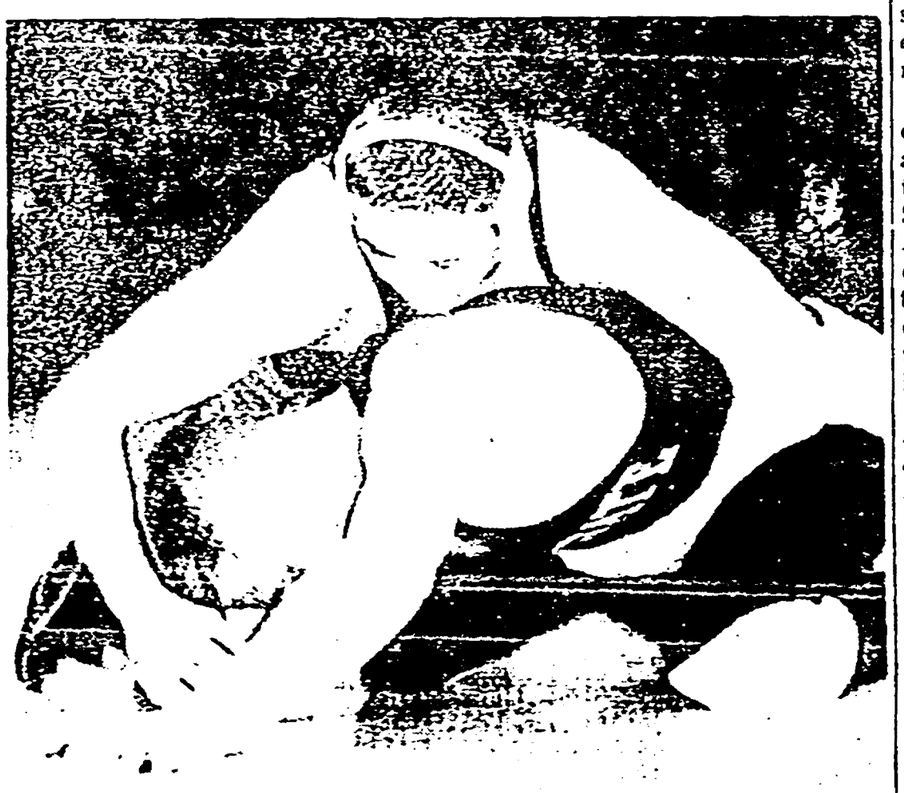
Terry Haise led off with a three-pointer for the Orangemen, defeating Tom Balent of Penn State 40-2 on the basis of two minutes riding time.

Syracuse's Sonny Greenhalgh, wrestling at 130, got into early point trouble and could never catch his tiring opponent, Bob Haney, who took a 2-0 lead in the first period, and keeping the pressure on, trok the match 8-5. This evened the team score at 3-3.

After a slow start in the next match, Jim Murrin, wrestling at 137, tied State's Mark Piven and went on to a 6-3 win. Syracuse regained the team lead 6-3.

Penn State edged ahead 9-6 as Art Weiss near-pinned George Redner in the 157-pound class and won easily, 15-6.

Syracuse Captain Gary Sirota again evened the match in the 157-pound class, stalling State's Marty Strayer to a 5-1 decision.



The match stayed even in the next weight, as Lew Roberts of Syracuse and Mike Gill of State battled to a 3-3 draw. Roberts, leading 3-1 most of the way, got himself into a two-point predicament with five seconds remaining in the match.

Gerry Everling gave Syracuse a 14-11 advantage, handily outwrestling State's high rated and previously unbeaten Ed Pohland. Behind 2-1 at the end of two periods, Everling put the pressure on with an escape and a take down in the final stanza for the 4-2 win.

The final match pitted Syracuse's big Jim Nance against Penn State's Dick Walker. Nance outpowered and outwrestled his opponent taking a 4-0 lead in the first period. After this, Nance, despite the yells of the crowd, refused to jeopardize the team win by going for the pin. Instead, Jim completely dominated the last two stanzas, and easily won 6-0, the last two points being awarded for riding time.

Penn State appears to have been the final major obstacle between Syracuse an an undefeated season. Only Colgate and Cortland remain on the schedule, and neither appears to be powerful enough to stop the Orangemen.

According to Coach Scandura, "We've got to point towards the Easterns. All the teams are vastly improved, and we will be the team everyone will try to beat."

Gymnasts Edge Closer to Crown With PSU Victory

By TOM MULLER

The sun set orange in Eastern gymnastic circles Saturday night as coach Paul Romeo's undefeated Syracuse gymnasts made powerful Penn State their sixth victim by a score of 51-45.

The well-coached Orangemen jumped off to a quick 11-5 lead, fell behind 25-23, and rallied to clinch the victory in the final event, the still rings. Over 2,500 fans, largest in S. U. history, watched the meet.

The win is one of the sweetest in S. U. history, because it almost assures the Orangemen of the Eastern title, which Penn State currently shares with Army. The Piety gymnasts need only to defeat Temple to clinch the EIGL crown. In 1949-50 Syracuse tied for the top spot, but the Orangemen have never won it outright.

The Orangemen started on their winning ways as Phil "Corky" Voas captured first place in the floor exercise. Tom Seward, the Staters' all-around stand-out, took second, but soph Sid Oglesby and senior Ron Orlick placed third and fourth respectively for the Orange.

On the side horse captain Ray Grimaldi picked up six points for Syracuse, and sophomore Jon Meury placed third. Al Porter of Penn State took second place. The score now stood at 20-12 in favor of Syracuse.

Lose Lead

The Nittany Lions took a temporary 25-23 lead by sweeping the horizontal bar. Seward, Mike Jacobson and Jim Culhane finished in that order for the visitors from Pennsylvania.

Voas, Oglesby and Orlick placed first, second and third respectively on the long horse to give S. U. a sweep and a 36-28 lead.

The Lions brought the count to 41-39 as Seward collected his second win and the Staters won the parallel bars. Oglesby was third and Carl Poplar finished fourth for Syracuse.

Tremendous performances by Grimaldi and Voas on the still rings brought the Syracusans the long-awaited victory. Grimaldi's score of 95 gave him his second victory of the night. Voas finished with two firsts and a second to tie Seward for scoring honors.

Penn State coach Gene Wettstone had nothing but praise for the Orange after the meet. "That's the best Syracuse team I've ever seen. They deserve the victory. I'm very happy for Paul Romeo."

Praise

"The team worked well," praised Romeo. "Carl Poplar deserves a lot of credit. It was the first time he worked that routine on the parallel bars."

The S. U. gymnasts meet Temple next Saturday in Philadelphia, and then return home to host the Eastern individual championships March 1-2.

Upsets

Syracuse didn't play basketball this weekend but the number one and two teams in the nation did—and lost. Cincinnati, unable to score in the final four minutes, lost to Wichita, 65-64, and second-ranking Chicago Loyola was smashed by Bowling Green, 92-75. Also victims of upset were Illinois and Mississippi State, both highly ranked.

Shakespeare at Fieldhouse

HELEN HAYES and MAURICE EVANS

Hayes, Evans In Program March 5

Helen Hayes and Maurice Evans will perform an evening of William Shakespeare, "A Program for Two Players", at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday, March 5, in the George L. Manley Fieldhouse.

On the last leg of a four-month, 135-performance, 19,000-mile "run," the famous performers will appear before an expected 3,600 on a specially designed proscenium stage.

Special student seating at $2 each for individuals or block seating has been arranged through the University Regent Theater, which is sponsoring the program, and the SU dean of men's office.

Other tickets range from $2.50 to $4. About 1,700 permanent fieldhouse seats will be used. The stage will be on the edge of the basketball floor, with 1,500 seats on the floor and an additional 400 seats rising between the floor and permanent seats.

"There was a time," Helen Hayes wrote, "when I thought the theatre and all its absorbing work had deprived me of other things in life. I have learned I was wrong. For what God has given me through my profession has made me sometimes able to help others—and myself. Certainly it has made my life rich and meaningful."

Often called "The First Lady of the American Stage" Miss Hayes has starred in such plays as "Victoria Regina," "What Every Woman Knows" and "Mrs. McThing."

Engineering Program Today

Guidance counselors from more than 75 central New York high schools will be guests today for a College of Engineering special program in observance of National Engineers Week.

The schedule includes a luncheon, a tour of facilities and an informal discussion period with Hill faculty members.

Among facilities open for inspection will be the water desalting and space metals laboratories and the digital and analog computer installations. Each of the college's five departments will have a display.

The luncheon, set for 1 p.m. in Sadler Hall, features an address by Dean Ralph A. Galbraith on current trends in engineering education.

Arrangements for the day's activities are under direction of Dr. Robert V. Jelinek.

New Semester in France Program to Start in Fall

By SANDI EHRLICH

A semester in France program will begin in the fall of 1963, the SU romance language department has announced. Syracuse students will study at the University of Poitiers, a state university southwest of Paris, in a setup similar to the Semesters in Guatemala and Italy.

Approximately 20 students will be chosen to participate in the first session, directed by Prof. Albert J. George of the romance language department.

Students applying must have reasonable competance in French. This includes an ability to read and understand the language, and three years of college French or its equivalent. Unlike the program in Italy, students will be expected to know the language because no beginning courses will be taught.

Language courses will be offered at the intermediate and advanced levels. Others courses will be given in French civilization, romanticism and classicism.

Fifteen credit hours will be offered each semester. Students will have option to stay one or two semesters in France, since different courses will be offered each time.

Costs

Transportation and general costs will be the same as in the Semester in Italy program. Room and board, insurance and boat transportation to Europe is about $615. Tuition for the semester is $735, the same as a regular semester on campus.

Prof. C. G. Christofides of the romance languages department made the final arrangements for the French program recently, when he was in Europe between semesters. He reports study and living conditions at Poitiers are most impressive, with superb library facilities and modern dormitories.

It is not decided whether Syracuse students will live in the Poitiers dormitories, or with French families in their homes. The students in Italy live in private homes.

Interviews

Students interested in the Semester in France program should contact Prof. George in 205 Huntington B. Crouse Hall as soon as possible.

A personal interview will be required for each applicant. Students who will be seniors next year will be given preference, but anyone who meets the French competance requirement is urged to apply.

The current six-week summer in France program will be dropped because it has been difficult to make permanent arrangements for the program with any university of the language department's choice.

2 Houses Hit By IFC Board

By CLAY RICHARDS
Junior Editor

Two Hill fraternities have been hit with stiff penalties as the result of dirty rushing violations, according to Interfraternity Council Judicial Board minutes released Monday.

One house, reported by another source to be Theta Chi, has been slapped with a $100 fine.

The second, Delta Upsilon, has been required to have each brother and new pledge write individual reports on their contributions to the University, the fraternity system and IFC.

Names of the houses were not released by the board, but the Delta Upsilon brotherhood in their defense statement declared that they would release their name.

Charge

In the Theta Chi case, the house was charged by Acacia fraternity with violation of the silence period to telephone eleven rushees and ask them to save a specific series number on their formal rush cards.

Acacia brothers stated they were pressing charges in order to prevent future violations rather than bring a restriction or financial burden upon Theta Chi.

In a statement read at Theta Chi's formal rush sessions the IFC board fined the fraternity $100 and declared any further violation would prohibit the house from taking any pledges during the next year, and would further mean the dropping of any pledges taken after that violation.

Suggestions

Theta Chi has been further required to submit to the Interfraternity Council suggestions for the improvement of the rushing rules. The fine must be paid prior to March 1, the decision stipulates.

In the Delta Upsilon case, a brother in the house was introduced to a freshmen in Stowe, Vt., Jan. 31, and on Feb. 1 the freshmen was in a motel room with the DU brothers. Several references to the brother and the freshmen riding together in a car were also made.

"This case involves a flagrant violation of the spirit as well as the letter of the rushing law, for it deprives equal access to all houses," the IFC statement said.

Spring

Prior to initiation of the spring semester pledge class, every DU pledge will be required to write an analysis of his per-

Coed Unhurt In Attack Friday Night

A Syracuse University coed was unhurt Friday night after a man attempted to assault her as she walked up the path between Slocum and Lyman Hall to College place.

The Security Police records state a man grabbed the coed from behind. Both scuffled and fell to the ground. The coed screamed and her attacker fled south on College place toward Sims Hall.

He was followed unsuccessfully by brothers of Phi Kappa Psi, 113 College Pl., who had heard the screams.

Phi Psi president Robert Ellis described the attacker as a man of medium height and average weight, about college age.

The coed was given coffee at Phi Psi and later was escorted to her cottage by a brother.

It's a 'Square' This Weekend

Above appears the first square button to symbolize any weekend in recent Hill history.

The "No Biz Like Snow Biz" Winter Weekend '63 symbol can be purchased for a quarter this week in the lobby of Huntington B. Crouse Hall, according to the weekend committee.

Also on sale are $82.25 per couple tickets to the annual Stockingfoot dance, scheduled for 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. Friday at the Drumlins Country Club.

Tickets may be bought from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. each day this week in HBC.

One button will be given free to each purchaser of a Stockingfoot ticket.

Corwin, Rigoli Clash Soon

The president of Interfraternity Council will soon meet with a Daily Orange columnist to debate the merits of college fraternities.

IFC leader Thomas Rigoli (Phi Delta Theta) late Monday submitted a letter to the DO challenging Ron Corwin to debate "anytime, anywhere and on any questions concerning the merits of college fraternities."

The challenge stems from a column titled "Ignorance" in Monday's DO, which slammed the Greek system with emphasis on its alleged prejudice and conformity.

Corwin accepted Rigoli's bid for debate in a telephone conversation with DO editors Monday.

Rigoli, suggesting that the title of Corwin's column applies more readily to its author than to the subject he attempted to discuss, proposed the campus radio station, WAER-FM, as a forum for the clash.

Corwin told the DO he "would love the opportunity to debate with Rigoli." The columnist is a graduate student in psychology.

He received his bachelor's degree from the University of Wisconsin.

Scandura, Romeo: A Big Weekend

The names of Schwartzwalder and Lewis are generally well known on the Syracuse campus. The students' familiarity with them stems from the emphasis given to football and basketball. This emphasis is natural for most students since a majority of our high schools feature football and basketball as the major, if not the only, sports.

Therefore, it has been common in years past for the names of coaches of other sports at Syracuse to become less than household words for the student body. While Syracuse has produced some outstanding teams in these so-called minor sports, interest among the students has usually been limited to the few who have had a real interest in the sports themselves.

For these reasons, we were very pleased this weekend to witness the student support and spirit which pervaded the wrestling and gymnastic meets with Penn State.

The large crowd, despite fraternity rushing, in Manley Fieldhouse Saturday afternoon saw Syracuse's finest wrestling team battle a stubborn Penn State team to the finish before Syracuse was assured of the Eastern title.

The more than 1,200 people there showed a spirit which hasn't even been in evidence at football games of late, let alone at "minor" sports events.

The spirit given in the team's support was given deservedly for they showed their talents in their final obstacle to the Eastern crown.

We are sure that the name Joe Scandura is now more widely known than it had been in the past. For Joe is the man who has worked hard to mold this group of talented performers into the champions they are.

The wrestlers themselves also deserve praise for their strong effort Saturday with all the pressure on them. Without meaning to belittle others, we must single out the performance of Gerry Everling, who knew he had to win and who did just that with a thrilling battle against State's best, Ed Pohland.

But whatever the wrestlers accomplished in the afternoon the gymnasts made up in spades that evening. The scene in Archbold Gym was one we have never witnessed before as more than 2,500 came out to watch the Orange gymnasts assure themselves of an Eastern title in their field.

And as thrilling as the wrestling was, the gymnastics sent more shivers up and down the spine. Not until the final event was over were the Syracuse men the champions.

And so another coach, Paul Romeo, became a familiar name for many who had not known him before. The large crowd could appreciate his handling of these fine athletes representing Syracuse.

And few in the stands could doubt that pound-for-pound Phil Voas is one of the finest athletes ever to represent Syracuse. But just as impressive was the almost flawless work of Ray Grimaldi on the still rings when perfection was what was needed.

Nor can we neglect the grace of Sid Oglesby, just a youngster in the field, and the gameness of Carl Poplar and Ron Orlick. They all made the Syracuse students proud.

So two names, at least, finally got the place they have deserved this weekend. Scandura and Romeo saw the fruit of hard work and patience blossom in the soil of student support and appreciation.

LETTERS

Corwin

To the Editor:

The recent columns of the Daily Orange endeavoring to discuss discrimination and the Greek system did not comment upon the universal quality of human behavior which leads to such organizations and actions.

What I am referring to might be classed as fear, insecurity, or lack of self-reliance, depending on the case discussed. It may be said that discrimination (in the social sense) is motivated by any of the three above qualities. The threat, whether real or imagined, seems to be present and the individual is placed in a state of mind which allows for his discriminatory action.

The Greek system, or for that matter, any mass organization, which is socially discriminating, is motivated by such fear or insecurity. The group, for its own benefit, combines for strength, and security, while removing the traits of the individual which make it less homogeneous, and hence less powerful. How much of the individual which is subjugated depends upon the group with which he is involved.

The group is needed, but so must the individual be prevalent. Yet the individual is changed by the group and somewhat changes the group in the process. Supposedly, an educated person is discriminating (in a personal sense) in his choices and beliefs. Yet when this discrimination extends to hedge the "freedom of choice or belief" of another individual, it cannot be condoned.

The quality of human beings which animates the operation of the Greeks is present in some degree in all of us. Legislation against discrimination or outlawing the Greeks may frost over the surface problem; but it will take a great deal of awareness of the individual by himself to change the inherently stagnating qualities which lurk in the hearts of men.

A college education may provoke such examination; it does not make it obligatory. Unqualifiedly, the uniformity of the Greek system makes the world around conform, and without an opportunity to see something different, one cannot realize he is as his brothers; it is the same with all groups. One may say that the Greeks allow education by memory, and not education by realization. The fault is not with the man; he cannot be expected to change by law. The fault is with his educational experience, and this may be changed.

Barnet C. Corwin '64

Note: I am no relation to Ron Corwin and thus this does not take the form of a family discussion through the DO, even though the paper might be more interesting if such was the case.

Prejudice

To the Editor:

In regard to Mr. Ginsburg's article on prejudice at Syracuse University:

1. Your conclusions were based on inadequate evidence —of a total mixed population, male and female, of 18,000 you interviewed only 188 people. The opinions solicited came only from the freshman class, and those freshman were male. An inadequate sampling upon which to base a trend concerning university opinion!

2. What was your purpose in running that article? I think it served no purpose. You've succeeded in shaming a few people, but those who are most guilty haven't been touched—they never are.

3. Did you expect to find that we who are in a select group (I believe it's 20% of the total national pop. is college educated) would be above this baseness? No one is above prejudice. I need only remind you that some of the most brilliant people were Nazis.

4. If your purpose in running that "gem" was to shock, it did not. All one can feel is shame and pity. For if change must come, and it must, what better place than here. We're a select group, possessing youth and intelligence. All of us from different racial and religious backgrounds. Yet we're living together because of a shared goal, to learn to improve. What an experiment in living. What a tragedy that these feelings of prejudice have been given verbalization. What a pity that they exist at all.

Again I say that it wasn't necessary for your article to be printed. Not that these things should be forgotten either. You've just "rehashed" something that we've all known; and no amount of journalistic skill or sensationalism will resolve the issue. The change in sentiment must come from the individual himself. He must want to change. It's a question of relearning, or reconditioning. It's my contention that we've been conditioned to expect a scapegoat. Be it the Jew or the Id, we need someone or something upon which to blame the evils in ourselves and our society. Maybe we should recall that quote from Julius Caesar, "The fault, dear Brutus, lies not in our stars, but in ourselves, that we are underlings."

If prejudice is to be eradicated, both the Christian and the Jew are equally responsible. It's about time the "chip on the shoulder," supposedly in keeping with the image, be cast off. It's about time the Christian avail himself of his education and his faith. He must understand and accept, and no amount of "some of my best friends are . . ." will accomplish this. I thought Those Teachings, and the Golden Rule, etc., all had love as the basic premise.

The problem is great—it's steeped in tradition. The fraternal system only helps to widen the gap. Yes, I know there are social benefits, but these social activities are exclusive. It's ironic that "brotherhood" is such a relative word. . . .

POLICY ON LETTERS

The Daily Orange invites, and even urges, the expression of opinion on the part of its readers. The editors make a sincere effort to publish as many letters as possible, but space and the illegible condition in which some letters are r e c e i v e d eliminate several from consideration.

Consequently, writers are urged to type their letters, preferably double-spaced, and to limit them to a maximum of 200 words.

Out of necessity, the editors reserve the right to edit letters for reasons of grammar, space and good taste.

THE CUTTING ROOM

Columnist and Critic

by John E. Greenwald

SHADES OF Carl Gotlieb/see where Mr. Greenwood is following in those hallowed shoes . . . a real Critic . . . one thing though, John . . . just was the devil is a critic and what is his or her function? Would really like to know . . . to strike out and on with vehemence (or whatever it is) or to help mold a better watever yur pickin on ? ? or something else . . . carry one . . . shakyspeare . . . sage o'de tootbhrush

Greenwald's hit the big time: we made the Savoy menu! Stuck in between the whipped spuds and fresh veg we were immortalized by Gus's noble prose. Our college career is now complete.

Actually Gus has made some interesting points concerning our functions as a DO columnist and critic.

We are, theoretically, the amusements and arts columnist. Of the upwards of 50 columns we have written during the past two years only four have not dealt specifically with the arts. Despite our great interest in them we will go off our concentration in the future, as we have in the past, when we feel we have something of interest and importance to tell our readers.

We wrote our "Greek" column, not because we felt we were saying anything very original or new in the way of "Greek" thinking, but because we felt something was needed to offset the "lines," both true and false, offered freshman during rush.

Quite frankly, now that we have said our piece, it's good to be back writing about the arts. Gus wants to know what is a critic's function. We've been at the critic and reviewing bit for two years now and have worked out a pretty good definition. "Good," not in the sense that it conforms to anything taught in philosophy or critical writing classes, but "good" in the sense that it works, for us at least.

(At this point we have probably lost most of our readers who were hoping that Greenwald would strike out in "vehemence" against something. We've probably even lost Gus. Oh well.)

The critic's and reviewer's job is to appreciate: to understand; to "dig." A reviewer discusses a particular work such as a play or movie or book. A critic discusses the art form itself: music, drama, cinema, literature, etc.

When we write a review we try to do three things. First, we try to tell the reader what it felt like reading that book or seeing that movie. What was the film like? Was it moody, happy, frivolous, bawdy, depressing, action packed, mystical, thought provoking? This requires the talents of the journalist.

Second, we try to figure out what the work was all about. What was its theme, its point? Did it say man was next to God or an insect? Are men basically just, or corrupt? Is society noble or does it sell out? We try, as best we can, to answer these, or whatever questions, the work may pose. If there is no theme, as in Burlesque, we say so. This requires the talents of a philosopher.

Lastly, we attempt to judge how well the theme was carried out. Did the play convince us? Were we moved to compassion or anger or disgust or boredom? Were the unique qualities of the medium used to advantage, or did the movie seem more like a radio play, the novel like a short story, the poem like an essay? This requires the talents of the technician in the particular art form.

It's difficult to do, in a limited space, all three jobs. Sometimes the particular work makes it tough. Sometimes our own lack of time, talent and insight creates problems. We do the best we can. Okay Gus?

(P.S. None of the above refers to "This Weekend," that widely read DO service. "Weekend" tries to inform as well as entertain. Beyond that, it's anybody's guess.)

MUSIC

Pops Concert

Though there is much to say for the Syracuse Symphony Orchestra Pops Concert presented Friday night at the War Memorial, there is little to be said for the performance of the orchestra itself.

Whatever success the occasion had was due to solo performances by baritone, Chester Ludgin and colorature soprano, Linda Newman. Both are very fine actors as well as singers. Mr. Ludgin, especially, has a pleasing acting style which, along with a powerful voice, tended to overshadow Miss Newman for most of the evening.

The vocal portion of the program included operatic works by Rossini, Leoncavallo and Mozart with lighter numbers from works by Gershwin, Porter and Lerner-Loewe. The orchestral selections were the "Dance of the Comedians" from the Bartered Bride by Smetana, "Espana" by Chabrier and the "Russian Sailor's Dance" from "The Red Poppy" by Gliere.

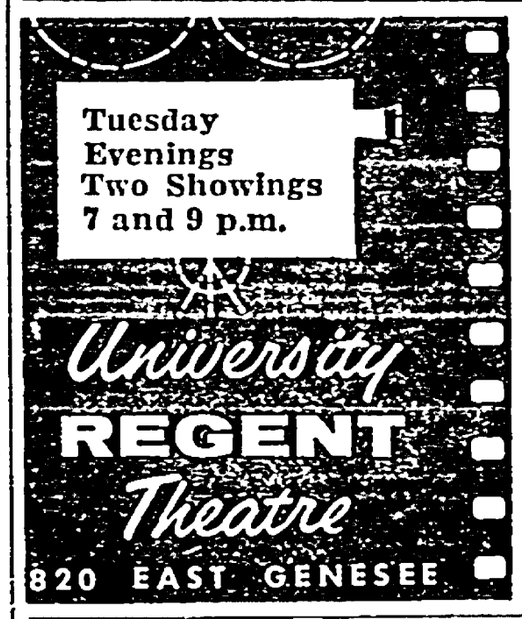
The orchestra, so successful scarcely a week before, played very raggedly, sloppy on some of their entrances, and sometimes with poor intonation. They were, despite the best efforts of those concerned, still hampered by poor acoustics. Although electronically amplified, the orchestra still had problems along this line. The violins, in their high register, were noticeably thin, and the singers, when their musical numbers dictated that they move about somewhat, often faded in and out.

Despite a humorous and informal treatment, the two singers often seemed to have a Nelson Eddy-Jeanette MacDonald relationship toward each other. This coupled with what must be called a corny treatment of their closing song, "You'll Never Walk Alone" left some people dissatisfied with the program. But, for the most part, the audience was enthusiastic and appreciative of the talents of the two artists.

SW

Auditions 'Overwhelming'

Room 108 Crouse College was filled with cigarette smoke, guitars and loden coats as some 25 singers and groups auditioned Friday afternoon to appear in the Oscar Brand Concert March 8.



The turnout completely "overwhelmed" Syracuse University Bookstore manager Burton Fink. The Bookstore is sponsoring the concert in an effort to publicize folk music and singing and the Corner Store bookstore branch.

All three judges, Ian Henderson, associate professor of musis; Rick Hermle, a music graduate student; and Bob Feldman, host of a folk music program on WAER said they were impressed by the quality of the turnout.

Those students and/or groups selected will be announced later in the week.

Beg Pardon

The third paragraph in Leslie Berg's "Color?" column Tuesday should have read: "Other racial minorities fare no better. According to TV drama no oriental ever did anything in the west aside from laying railroad tracks. Only Japanese with wit and charm were allowed to become house boys for affluent bachelors."

Newspaper Book Translated

Prof. Edmund C. Arnold's book "Functional Newspaper Design" will be translated into Japanese and published in Tokyo early next year.

Arnold is chairman of the departments of graphic arts and publishing in the School of Journalism.

He recently signed a contract for a book on the same subject directed specifically to Latin American newspapers. It will be translated into Spanish and published in South America, probably in Chile.

"Functional Newspaper Design" won a George A. Polk Memorial Award in 1957, the first time a book ever was so honored.

Friedman on Prejudice

By DANIEL RITEY
Junior Editor

"One of the major consequences of racism in regard to our relations with Africans in the cold war is the fact that our appeals to them will be judged on our prejudices," Prof. Julian R. Friedman said Monday.

Speaking to the freshman citizenship sections in Marshall Auditorium, the political science instructor cited "gross inequalities, heightened political tensions and fuel for nationalistic renovations" as other racial consequences.

"Furthermore," he said, "those who believe in racial discrimination are obsolete people in that their ideas are becoming outmoded as the prejudicial system breaks down."

Friedman cited some reasons by which those who defended racial differentation justified themselves. "These people—usually European settlers in Africa — referred to cultural education, social and political reasons as allowing for prejudice."

Explaining these reasons, Friedman said the settlers applied discrimination to colored people because "they had a distorted view of Africa because of slavery practices and this discrimination was an integral part of the colonialistic order which gave the whites complete supremacy."

Reviewing a recent trip to Africa, Friedman cited examples of discrimination not only between the Europeans and the Africans, but between Africans themselves and the other colored minorities of the continent.

Discrimination to Africans occurs in all aspects of life, Friedman said. "Europeans selected the best lands for themselves and barred Africans from using them, education was denied to most natives, and housing was based on color."

Lifted Restrictions

"Some of these restrictions are being lifted by the governments, but, in some countries, discrimination still extends to working conditions, salaries, public and private facilities," he noted.

"Privately, in their segragated groups, whites and Negroes will exchange prejudicial remarks about each other." Friedman further noted that while discrimination is widespread in some countries, only in one, the Republic of South Africa, is it official policy.

Joe Morrison put SU on the win ledger with a first in the 200-yard medley. With only the Williams diving victory intervening, Morrison followed with his record breaking butterfly performance. SU's only other individual first was Bob Ohman's 200-yard backstroke. His 2:15.0 tied the pool record.

Co-Captain Connard's second win came in the 500-yard freestyle. His team of 5:21.8 established similar records as his 200-yard mark. SU copped the final event — the 400-yard free style relay — to lessen the margin to 58-37.

Mrs. Crouse Honored By Post-Standard

Mrs. Huntington B. Crouse, SU trustee-at-large, has received a plaque and traditional silver bowl award as the Syracuse Post-Standard All-time Woman of Achievement.

The newspaper made the award at the annual mid-winter luncheon of the Syracuse Federation of Women's Clubs.

More than 800 people attended the 12th annual presentation of the traditional awards to community women leaders.

Also receiving awards were: Mrs. Murray Bernthal, music; Mrs. Fred E. Blackner, community relations; Mrs. Marvin Brown, citizenship; Mrs. Daniel Burdick, youth development; Mrs. James A. Close, volunteer; Mrs. Robert J. Daly, cancer; Dr. Mary [illegible]kee, science; Mrs. Holden F. Hills, community sevice; Mrs. Eleanor L. Kennedy, education; and Mrs. Frank T. Wood Jr., health and welfare.

The citation for Mrs. Crouse reads, "It is with a deep sense of reverence that we pay tribute today to a lovely lady, Mrs. Huntington B. Crouse, who eternally has demonstrated her loyalty to Syracuse University since her graduation, cum laude, in 1899."

Appointed a trustee-at-large in 1940, Mrs. Crouse attends all meetings. She has also received the George Arents medal, "for excellence in devoted service to her alma mater."

Huntington Beard Crouse Hall, built in memory of her husband, was constructed through a gift from Mrs. Crouse.

She is a sister of Gamma Phi Beta. She works for various community projects, including the Rummage Shop and the Wagon Wheel, and is a life member of four hospital auxiliaries: Harmony Circle, University General, Community and the Boys Club.

A charter member of Corinthian Foundation, she also has carried on her interest in Huntington Family Centers, formerly Huntington Club, for more than 40 years.

Premed Group Signups Today

Sophomores, juniors and seniors wishing to apply for membership in Alpha Epsilon Delta, the national premedical honorary, may sign up in Dr. Clinton Root's office, 107 Lyman Hall.

To be eligible for membership, the applicant must have a 2.0 cumulative average as well as a 2.0 average for all science courses.

The object of AED is to encourage excellence in premedical scholarship and to stimulate an appreciation of the importance of premedical education in the study of medicine.

Art Director Speaks Today

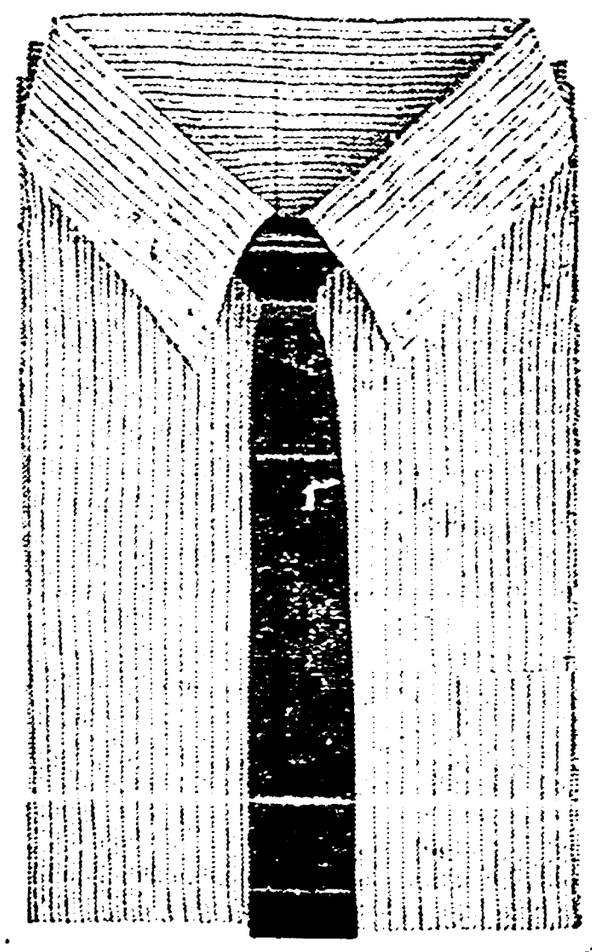
IE Professor Writes Book

Statistical methods of solving problems of production and inventory control are discussed in a new book by associate professor of industrial engineering John E. Biegel.

Entitled "Production Control: A Quantitative Approach," the volume is intended for use as a textbook for students in industrial engineering and business management. It will be published this month by Prentice-Hall, Inc.



Prof. Biegel is a graduate of Montana State College and earned a master's degree in engineering science at Stanford University. In addition to teaching he has engaged in research at SU, including a project testing micro - hardness of electrical steel conducted for the American Society of Tool and Manufactoring Engineers.

Commission Granted

Page Edward Rozelle of East Syracuse, New York, was commissioned a 2nd Lieutenant in the Air Force early this month. While at the New York State Forestry College, Lt. Rozelle majored in wood products engineering.

IS THIS YOUR SHIRT?

If so, Miss Afflerbach will send you your [EAGLE SHIRTMAKERS SINCE 1867] label.

THIS is a two-color striped button-down shirt designed and tailored by Eagle Shirtmakers and sold everywhere by fine men's stores. Many of them admire our shirts so much they sell them under their own names. High praise indeed, and we should like to reciprocate by advertising their (our) shirts. But it's hard to know just where to start. Obviously we can't say things like "None Genuine Without This Label", when they are all quite genuine, you know. And it would be silly to say "Try An Eagle Shirt Today!" when it is likely you already have a drawerful; even though you didn't know it until just this minute. So all we can suggest is that you send in for your Eagle label. Write Eagle Shirtmakers, Quakertown, Pennsylvania; Attention Miss Afflerbach.

Linda Larson Named Queen

Linda Larson, a junior from DeWitt, was named queen of the Sweethearts' Ball of the College of Forestry Saturday night.

She won the women's title from a field of nearly 60 contestants.

Miss Larson is a member of Alpha Chi Omega sorority and was sponsored in the contest by Kappa Phi Delta fraternity.

Milner's Book Now in Arabic

Dr. Ernest J. Milner, associate professor of education, will have one of his books translated into Arabic.

"You and Your Student Teacher" will be translated and published in the Arabic symbols by Franklin Publications, New York City. The book was written to assist classroom teachers in adjusting to and aiding student practice teachers.

On the Hill, Milner is coordinator of student teaching and chairman of admissions for the School of Education.

Bluem Named Judge

Dr. A. William Bluem, director of television programming, has been named judge of the Boston Press Photographers Assn. documentary tv-newsreel contest. He will select the best filmed sequences shown last year on New England television stations.

Bank Director To Lecture

An official of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development will be a guest lecturer on the Hill this week.

Dr. John H. Adler, director of the bank's Economic Development Institute, will speak at 3:30 p.m. Thursday in the Founder's Room of Maxwell Hall. His topic will be "The Strategy of Directed Social Change."

The speaker has had long experience in underdeveloped countries and has written extensively on economic development policy. The institute he heads is a training center for government officials from emerging nations.

Dr. Adler's lecture is sponsored by the SU economics department.

If you are considering a career in business management or actuarial science, we invite you to investigate the Summer Programs at the Home Life Insurance Company. These programs offer challenging, well paid summer work with an opportunity to prove your qualifications for a management career in one of America's top "growth industries."

HOME LIFE'S SUMMER PROGRAMS

There are two programs—the Summer Internship for men interested in a general business management career and the Summer Actuarial Program for Math Majors. These programs offer...

- a responsible college-level job (not just a "make-work" situation) in a progressive, highly-regarded company
- a series of interviews with key executives of Home Life
- informal meetings with department heads and other management people in vital areas of company operations
- plus, of course, the New York metropolitan area's unique business, cultural and recreational advantages.

You May Qualify For...

The Summer Internship in Business—

If you have a genuine interest in business, a good academic record, evidence of leadership potential, and are within one year of permanent full-time employment (exclusive of any military obligation).

The Summer Actuarial Training Program—

if you are interested in exploring an Actuarial career, are a Math major with at least a "B" average, and have successfully completed your Sophomore or Junior year.

FOR MORE INFORMATION OR TO ARRANGE AN INTERVIEW...

Contact your placement office. The Home Life representative will be on campus on February 28

Senior Mathematics Majors are invited to inquire about Home Life's full-time actuarial training program.

A winning team. A winner. They have precedence over quality and even conventional popularity. On campus Saturday 1,527 people sat in the fieldhouse to see the wrestling team win. An attendance record was set in the gym Saturday night with 2,527 present. Both Orange teams are matching wins this winter while chasing Eastern Championships.

If we had a fencing team with a shot at geographical recognition they'd be passing out swords to the crew team to limit crowds in the practice gym. (For you non fencing lovers, that's where home meets are held.)

Last winter it was swimming. The Orange Pool gallery, the closest thing to a turkish bath on campus, was packed as the team put together a 10 meet victory streak. This season it's been getting a little lonesome there.

The spring saw 5,000 in Archbold Stadium for a lacrosse match.

The Syracuse Stars won 49 games in succession and attracted amazing crowds for an amateur team. Downtown in the War Memorial ushers outnumbered people at Syracuse Braves games. The Braves played a far better grade of hockey than their coliseum colleagues, but had a difficult time winning. They were forced by poor crowds to pack their shin guards and move to St. Louis by mid-season.

People often go to see a team win rather than watch a sport played.

Most of the people were at the fieldhouse to see the Everling-Nance and Co. team win rather than watch wrestling.

Penn State's coach Charlie Spiedel thinks Nance is going to find it very rough going at the Nationals. "Jim relies on his size to bull his way around. In the Nationals he'll meet some boys his own size who are pretty good wrestlers."

A tip of the hat to Lew Andreas for scheduling again another in a series of top gridiron attractions. Virginia Tech has been signed to play in Archbold Stadium in 1964. Williams Drops Orange Mermen

Williams swimmers keyed a 58-37 defeat on SU's mermen, and in the process set nine records. Leading Williams, Co-Captain Carroll Conrard established six separate marks with two wins. Syracuse's Joe Morrison added a tenth mark with a 2:14.5 in the 200-yard butterfly.

SKIERS PRACTICE on the Syracuse University ski course. Eleven schools have entered the university's Winter Weekend Ski events Friday and Saturday at Skytop.

Winter Weekend Features Hockey, Skiing Contests

Sophomore Bob Thoresen led the Syracuse University Ski Team to victory Saturday in the Colgate sponsored meet at Song Mountain.

The skiing Syracusans rolled up a total of 196.5 points in the slalom and giant slalom under ideal race conditions: second place Cornell scored 183.5. Colgate came in third, followed by the Cornell B team and the University of Buffalo. The Syracuse B team, Paul Smiths, and Hamilton completed the field.

Thoresen placed second behind Faker LaFountain from the University of Buffalo. LaFountain's winning time was 26.3 seconds; Thoresen finished in 27.1 seconds. The Orange's David Menotti placed third. Chal Lyons and captain Bill Dalto, both of Syracuse, also finished high in the field.

Thoresen came back to win the giant slalom in 32.9 seconds, followed by Lyons of S.U. and Warner of Colgate, who tied with a time of 32.4 seconds.

Lacks Depth

Led by Gary Ginter, the Syracuse B team did well but lacked depth in the slalom. Bob Bryant, George Durick, and Gary Dwyer round out the squad.

The frosh ski team, which will make its debut on Winter Weekend, held one of its final practices. Coach Elt Fairbank's team, consisting of Rick Talmadge, Harold Shapiro, and Andy Simon, will host 11 teams in Saturday's spectacular.

The varsity ski team will open up the weekend by competing in the slalom and cross country events on Friday. The Saturday activities will include the giant slalom jumping with the big banquet being held Saturday night. All ski events will be held at Skytop.

At Coliseum

The Syracuse University Hockey Association team will also compete at home during Winter Weekend. The game time has been changed from 7:30 to 1:30 at the New York State Fair Grounds. Buses will leave from the men's gym at 1:00 p.m.

Syracuse's opponent will be Rochester Institute of Technology. R.I.T. is presently running second in the newly Finger Lakes League, which consists of R.I.T., Syracuse, Brockport State, Ithaca, Hobart, and the University of Rochester.

R.I.T. has 250 fans coming down by bus and others by car. At the end of the game the Winter Weekend Queen and her court will present a trophy to the victors.

New Coaches

The S.U.H.A. has recently acquired three coaches in an attempt to ease the burden on the players. Mac McIver, Babe LaRose, and Jack Cern, officially recognized as the Syracuse Buttercup's Sports Club Inc., have been invaluable to the players. They attend all work-outs and games, and they have also helped carry on a drive to bring athletic department status to the team. McIver has recently returned from a trip to Boston, where he talked with Fernie Flaman, formerly of the Boston Bruins and picked up many valuable tips.

RIT Nips Fencers

The SU swordsmen dropped a heartbreaker 13-14 Saturday to the RIT fencers in Rochester. This was the third consecutive meet the Orangemen have lost in the final bout.

Coach Dako's fencers opened strongly, but were unable to maintain their 10-4 lead. RIT moved up slowly to tie the meet 13 - 13 and won the final bout by one touch.

Foilman Harvey Schuman took all of his bouts, and teammates Marty Cohen and Les Monostory chipped in a victory apiece.

The sabre team scored best, with Stu Holander, Marty Dako and Mike Conte each winning two bouts. Marv Stone and Duane Harrington scored a victory apiece on epee.

The SU Freshman fencers smothered the RIT Frosh 15-1 in a near shut-out. Scorers were Barry Kliger, Dennis Lambert, Clint Wigren, Bill Shell and James Satterlee.

The Fencers close their season next Saturday in an away triangular meet with Buffalo and Case Tech. The post-seasonal North Atlantic Championships follow.

Skytop Ski Tow Open Tuesday

The Syracuse University ski tow at Skytop will maintain its regular hours this week. The tow will run Wednesday and Friday night from 7:30-9:30 and Saturday and Sunday afternoons from 2-4. In addition the tow will be open this afternoon from 2-4.

Katzenbach First Speaker Tonight In Cit Program

Nicholas Katzenbach, U.S. deputy attorney general, will open this semester's evening series of citizenship lectures at 8 p.m. today in Hendricks Chapel. He will discuss "Opportunities and Limits of Equality Through Law."

Katzenbach, assigned to the Justice Department in Washington, is in charge of prosecuting cases involving enforcement of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution.

A former Rhodes scholar and Ford Foundation fellow, Katzenbach has served as professor of law at Yale University and the University of Chicago. In 1947 he was editor of the Yale Law Journal.

He is an alumnus of Princeton, Yale and Oxford Universities.

With Morton A. Kaplan he coauthored "The Political Foundation of International Law," published in 1961.

Other scheduled citizenship lectures are Kenya's first African Minister Musa Amalemba, March 7; Connecticut Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, March 15; and political writer James MacGregor Burns.

The lecture series is sponsored by a grant from the Sperry & Hutchinson Foundation.

Pledge Numbers Low; Fraternities Bid 323

By CLAY RICHARDS
Junior Editor

Fewer fraternity pledge pins will appear on campus this week as the lowest number of Freshmen in recent years have chosen to go Greek.

Unofficial totals show 323 freshmen were given bids Tuesday by the 30 Hill houses, but freshmen have to accept these bids before the official number of pledges can be determined. Nearly 450 freshmen pledged last year.

No house on campus filled its quota, while only five houses gained more than 20 pledges. Fourteen houses, nearly half of the 30 fraternities, failed to get at least ten pledges. One house got none.

In total, nearly 21 per cent of the freshmen class went Greek, while last year 39 per cent pledged.

Reason

The main reason for the low number of new Greeks is thought to be the deferred rush system new this year, which cut nearly 250 rushees because they did not make the 1.0 minimum average required to pledge.

Another 300 rushees dropped rush because they did not get formal rush or pledging bids, or for personal reasons.

The unofficial tally shows that the Jewish tradition houses with one exception, faired well in the deferred rush. Those eight houses, which compose just over 25 per cent of the total number of houses, pledged 129 men. This figure, which is over 40 per cent of the total freshmen pledging, represents a slight drop for the Jewish tradition houses, but only slight compared to the Christian tradition drop figures.

The 22 Christian tradition houses pledged 192 men, or just over 59 per cent of the total number of those who pledged.

Average number of men pledged in the Christian tradition houses was 8.7 men per house, well below any former figures. Since Delta Upsilon and Phi Delta Theta fraternities both took over 20 men, the average for the other 20 Christian houses is considerably lowered.

Sawyer to Speak On Civil Liberties

Dr. Michael O. Sawyer, chairman of the Maxwell School's citizenship department, will speak Thursday in the second of a series of lectures sponsored by the senior class executive council.

Dr. Sawyer will discuss "Civil Liberties and College Students" starting at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Colonial Room of Hendricks Chapel.

He has been teaching at SU since 1948. He received his bachelor's and masters degrees and his doctorate here.

He teaches constitutional law and citizenship 10 on campus and is on the faculty of the summer sessions at the University of Notre Dame.

Aside from his faculty duties, Dr. Sawyer is a member of SU's National Alumnae Board, the Syracuse University Senate and is now president of the SU Faculty Club.

Dr. Sawyer, also active in community affairs, is currently on the Advisory Committee for the Youth Development Center, and is the Executive Board of the Mayor's Committee for Youth. He has also served on the County Charter Commission and has been chairman of the Area Council on Human Rights for the past three years.

Dr. Sawyer's lecture will be followed by a question and answer period and refreshments.

The senior class executive council wishes to emphasize that all students and faculty members are cordially invited to attend.

It is hoped that students and faculty members will become better acquainted through these lectures, and that undergraduates will become more familiar with the courses offered by Syracuse University, according to '63 President Henry Lee.

ABC to Broadcast Syracuse 'Hootenany'

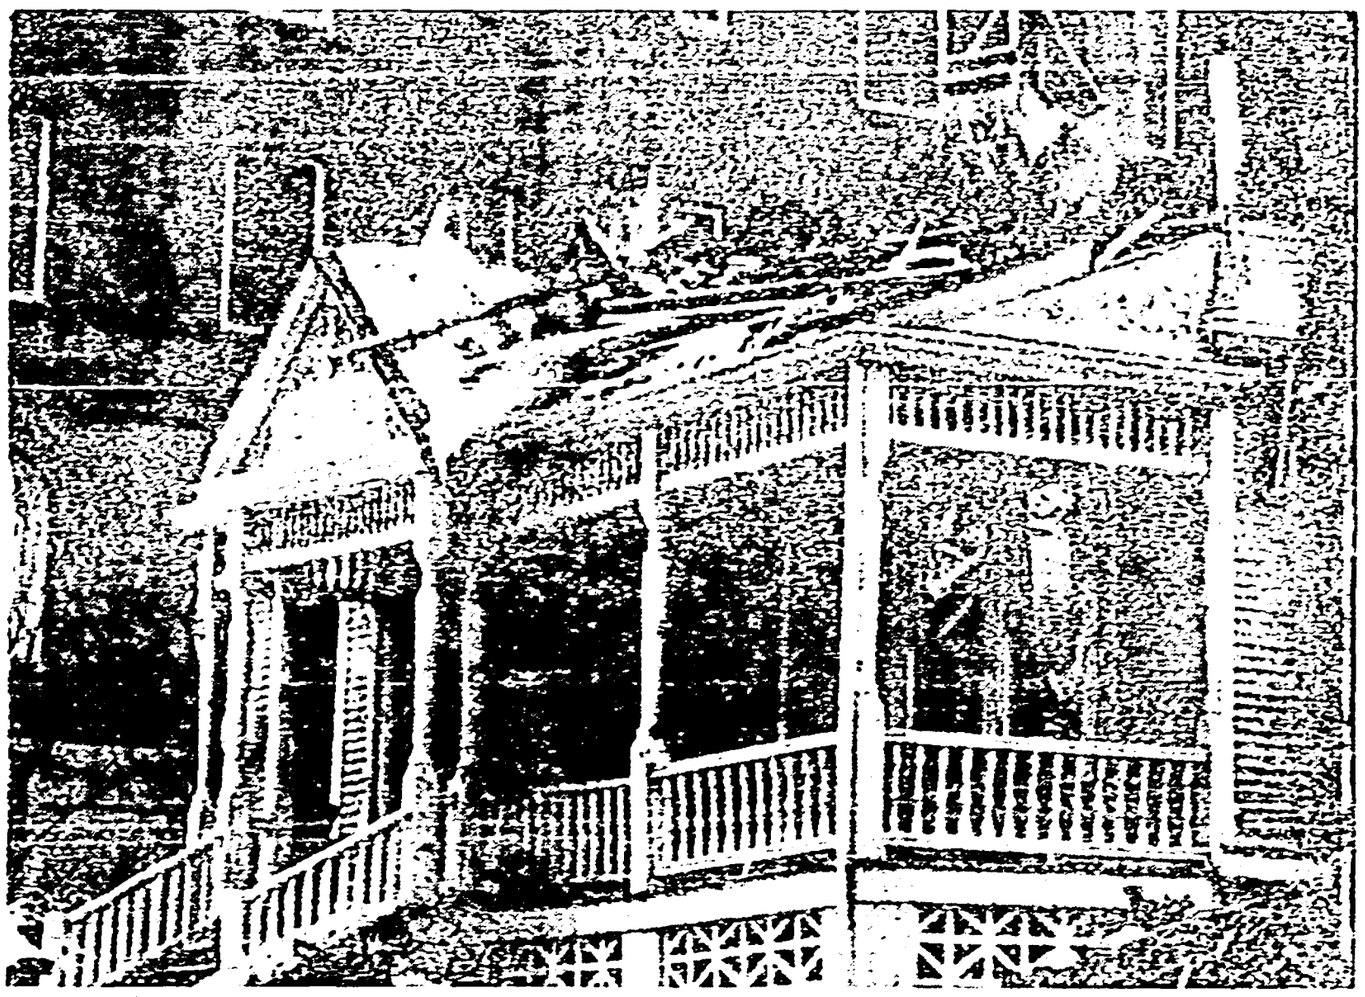
The ABC-TV "Hootenany," taped at Syracuse last November, will be broadcast at 8:30 p.m., Saturday, April 6, on WNYS, channel 9, that station has told the Daily Orange.

"Hootenany at Syracuse" will be the first of a 13 week series of similar "hoots" video-taped at other schools. Gil Cates, producer and director of the Syracuse "hoot," an SU grad, will not work on future "hoots" as he now is associated with NBC's "International Showtime."

Cate's production company, however, will produce the other "hoots" for ABC.

Taped at Sims Hall, the program featured Jean Shepherd, the Limeliters, Jo Mapes, Mike Settle and Clara Ward and her gospel singers, plus 2,000 hooting Hill students.

IFC Meets At Teke



The Interfraternity Council will hold its first post- Christmas meeting at 7:30 p.m. today at Tau Kappa Epsilon, President Thomas Rigoli (Phi Delta Theta) announces.

The meeting will be highlighted by a discussion of the rush situation and possible legislation concerning rushing freshmen who did not make their average, Rigoli said. A list of eligble freshmen who have not pledged will also be handed out.

GATEKEEPERS WANTED

Gatekeepers are wanted for Winter Weekend ski events, Friday and Saturday afternoons at Labrador and Skytop. Call Mrs. Vander-Stok, ext. 2908, will take names, according to the Winter Weekend committee.

Take a Big Bite...

FAREWELL SCHULTZE — this yellow frame building at 906 University Ave., once occupied by Hill coeds, went to its rendezvous with a steam shovel Tuesday. Haven Hall, in rear, also comes down next week to make way for the first building of the Newhouse Communications Center complex.

Thoughts Written While Thawing

Driving a car on campus is most certainly a privilege for the few that have clearance to do so. However, at this time of year it also entails an obligation.

The obligation is to be considerate of the pedestrians on campus who must face the obstacles of puddles on the quad. In times of quick thaws such as we have been experiencing this week, the melting snow has no place to go and just lies their in the path of sneakered students who must seek new routes to their classes.

When these routes lead to the roads of campus, the student finds not only more puddles but an added hazard—the driver. Tires, it seems, just happen to seek out big puddles and send the water from these puddles flying in all directions.

Consequently, for the sake of the students on foot, who far outnumber the few in cars, we urge the latter to keep the pedestrians in mind. If you cannot avoid puddles, at least moderate your speed while passing people on foot.

Before we close this, we must note that consideration is a two-way thing. So we also urge pedestrians to be thoughtful of the drivers on campus on days that are colder than these. When the roads are rutted and slippery and snow is blowing at your windshield, driving is no picnic.

And so if the notion that one good turn deserves another still holds true, we must ask the pedestrians on campus to remember that the right-of-way is not a carte blanche for daring drivers to stop from hitting you or swerve around you just because you are on foot.

A thoughtful driver is what this campus needs during the messy days of thawing and puddles. A careful, considerate pedestrian, however, is a man for all seasons.

Green Weekend

Speaking of the weather, it occurs to us that Syracuse is fast establishing a jinx. This jinx is called Winter Weekend. It comes about by the fact that for the past few years, the most important commodity of the weekend—snow—has been noticeably lacking.

Now, this has led to scientific calculations, which begin in September, to determine which weekend in the winter will produce a sure bet for snow.

To be honest, this weekend seemed like a good choice—we've had a lot of snow, cold temperatures and a tradition of February snow.

But sure enough, the thaw has come and we can only hope that for once there will be enough white stuff left over to produce snow sculptures.

Oh well, back to the weather instruments.

THE GADFLY

A Case Study

By T. Lee Hughes

The following column is not intended to single out a particular house. What it describes is symptomatic of a whole system, perhaps of a whole society. But it is in the particular that a problem may best be tackled.

* * * * * *

Monday night the fall semester pledges of Kappa Delta sorority heard the phrase. It was at the second-degree pledging ceremony. And the president of the house said the words.

"For caucasians and Christians."

For most of the pledges it was the first time they had heard it. Because Kappa Delta is one of the many houses without a "written" discrimination clause.

But this is at best a technicality—and at worst a complete sham.

There is indeed no "written" clause. But months after girls have become pledges, they take part in a ritual in which the purposes of sorority are read, and the "clause" is verbally added by the house president.

Some girls are shocked. They have been told that if they find the clause disagreeable they can approach the house president and de-activate. But under the subtle pressure of the group they never do.

And discrimination continues.

Several years ago a number of girls rebelled and pulled out of the house. Recently, there have been more discontented rumblings over the policy—quelled by house members with the threat of monetary fines. This year, the national sorority sent Mrs. Ames Pattersen — a national rush counselor—to keep a watchful eye on rush proceedings.

Mrs. Pattersen had the party line refined to a 'T'. Sisters were told that if any question concerning discrimination came up during rush, they were to tell the rushees that the house "has no written membership clause." If the question was pressed, the sisters were to "say it is a Christian tradition house, and then change the subject."

Some girls were disgusted. But Mrs. Pattersen had the soothing words of rationality. "This house is founded on Christian ideals — non Christians would be uncomfortable in it. It's for their own good," she would say. Or "we like to feel that a sister can go to any KD house in the country and feel comfortable." Sisters were placated again.

And discrimination continues.

During the past two weeks, post-rush hash sessions again brought the discrimination issue to the fore. All under the watchful eye of Mrs. Pattersen.

Some girls were rebellious. They contemplated accepting an oriental girl. But Mrs. Pattersen was there. "Of course if you like her, you can ask her back," Mrs. Pattersen said, "but you know what the consequences would be."

The "consequences" are quick retribution by the national sorority. The house is owned by the national, and the local currently $100,000 in debt to the national. The end would be swift and painful. The girls know it.

And discrimination continues.

Mrs. Pattersen even raised an eyebrow when discussion turned to accepting a unitarian. Apparently unitarians are not Christian enough. They "were not raised so as to be comfortable in the Christian principles and rituals of the house." This time the girls won. They have before.

But all too often they do not.

Ironically, the so-called "Christian rituals" which are supposed to be so "uncomfortable" to the "non-white, non-Christians," are lightly regarded by the sisters themselves. Some of them think they are actually funny.

The days of the ritual went out with the bustle.

Yet a combination of bigotry on the part of the national and apathy and fear on the part of the local allow these rituals to stand as the rational for the "clause."

And discrimination continues.

Many of the girls dislike the clause. But for a good number of them the sorority is the only thing with which they can identify. It is an ivory tower on a plain of lost individuality and loneliness. So they swallow the soothing phrases and they try to forget. They become too vindictive towards those girls who actively try to change the clause.

And they're afraid to buck the national.

Laura Z. Hobson, in "Gentleman's Agreement," one of the most lucid of the recent novels on discrimination, writes of them. "They aren't consciously (discriminatory). They despise it, it's an 'awful thing.' But all of them, who also deplore it and protest their own innocence — they help it along and wonder why it grows. Millions like them backing up the lunatic vanguard in its war for this country. . . ."

And they aren't alone. Most houses, most independents, most administrators—"all deplore it and protest their own innocence."

A recent survey of fraternities by the IFC revealed that only four houses had "written" discriminatory clauses. After which the Dean of Men lauded this "sincere interest in giving an honest picture of the Hill fraternity system."

Yet most houses still stagnate in the "unwritten clauses."

Christian ideals.

And a girl is rejected because her skin is yellow.

Christian ideals.

And a girl against discrimination is threatened with a fine.

Christian ideals.

And the IFC closes its eyes to the "unwritten clauses."

Christian ideals.

And an SU administrator applauds the "honest picture" of the Hill Greek system.

Christian ideals.

And discrimination continues.

Corwin

To the Editor:

Mr. Corwin's article entitled "Ignorance," which appeared in the edition of February 18 was interesting to say the least.

To say the least. I know that I could contest without end the various points which he has so ably submitted. They are all cliches by now, and there will always be controversy. But his presentation of them, to say the least once more, was self-condemning as well as anything else.

He says that the Greeks breed and nurture ignorance. Perhaps they do. But is it not possible, Mr. Corwin, that some do not? Is there no doubt in your mind that some don't? Is it not possible that you yourself are? Have you ever belonged to more than one fraternity, or even one sorority?

Obviously not. What I humbly submit is that you have created a perfect example of the most self-contradictory, hypocritical endeavor there is concerning any form of criticism: you are criticizing one institution which in fact consists of many divisions, none of which are the same. In effect, you are basing your conclusions on very limited evidence, on samples which you might call "representative." But, Mr. Corwin, and you and I both know it, no sample is ever truly representative. I cannot believe that you can be "ignorant of that."

Your article was well worded, but childishly rationalized. Your style may be outstanding, but your opinions are terribly limited in scope. Your article has ceased to be observation, or, for that matter, good criticism. It appears more to be in itself a subjective treatise on ignorance, contradiction. Remember that you left no margin for your own fallibility. You have forgotten, momentarily I hope, that one quality, so necessary for good literature of any sort: humility. Mr. Whittaker had it—you don't.

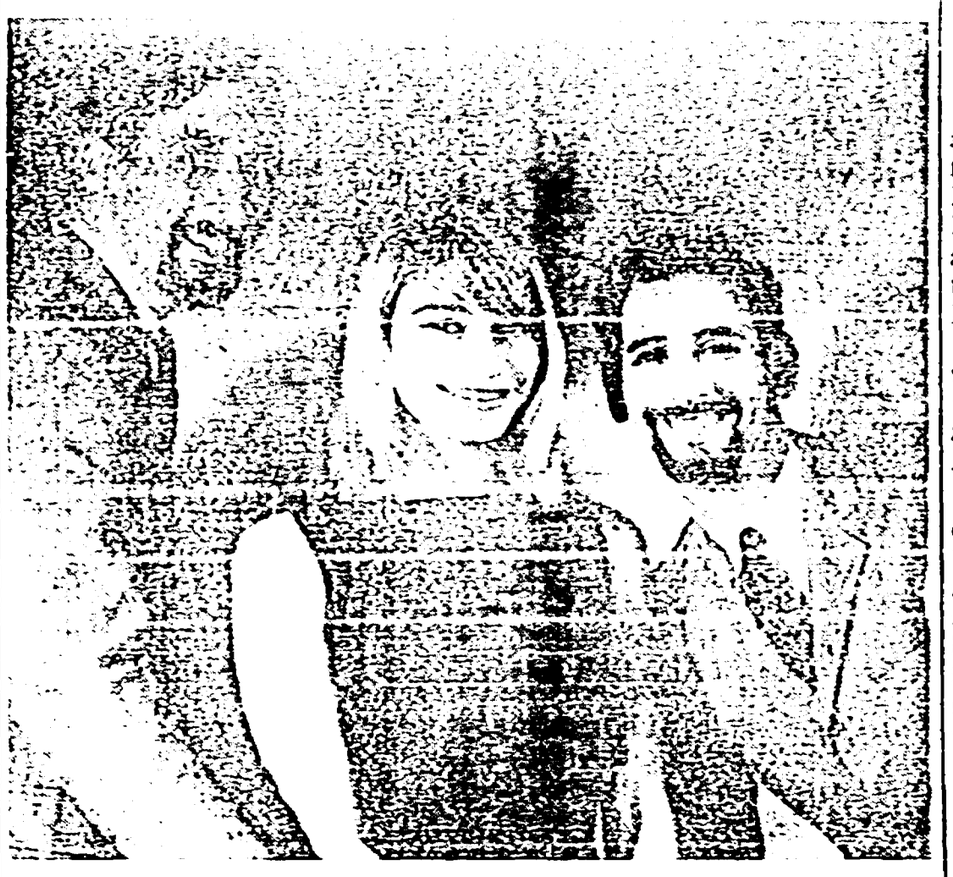
Books

To the Editor:

Concerning editorial on the Book Award Contest in the DO of February 11, 1963.

A discussion of the inequities of life could go on for hours and hours. We shall try to be as brief as possible in rebutting your statement that a rich boy stands a better chance of winning the monetary awards of the Book Collection Competition than a student of more limited means. To this end we point out the following contradictions to your argument.

1. The value or size of the collection is not of prime importance. It clearly states in the brochure (which you mention) that "Collections will be judged on a basis of intelligent interest, knowledge of the books collected, scope and imagination shown in creating the collection. Rarity, handsome format, and monetary value are secondary factors of consideration." Also ". . . the number of books is secondary to discriminating selection." There are three judges for each class award who carefully assess in each contestant his knowledge of and enthusiasm for books. These qualities are not sold at a bookstore with the purchase of a $10 book. One of the prize-winning collections last year was a group of paperback books.



2. The winners of the past contests have not necessarily been the offspring of well-heeled parents. Two of the award winners of last year were students who worked to earn money for college expenditures. That they preferred to spend their recreational money on books rather than TGIF-ing was their decision. However this decision resulted in award winning collections of books.

3. An interesting collection of books does not necessarily involve the expenditure of large amounts of money (nor the converse). Part of the excitement of the game of book collecting is the discovery of bargains in second-hand bookstores, remainder lists, and even auction sales. But this successful bargain-hunting presupposes an informed, enthusiastic book collector. One is not necessarily an informed book collector because one happens to have a fat purse. We have mentioned that the converse is true: that the expenditure of large sums of money does not necessarily result in an outstanding collection of books or a distinguished book collector. A favorite butt for the jokes of humorists are the newly rich who purchase books as a status symbol, books whose pages are never cut.

4. The Prize money should go to the student who has already demonstrated his interest in books and some success in practicing the art of book collecting. You mention that the monetary award should go to launch a student, who up until that time had not collected books, in a new and possibly exciting area of interest. Were it that easy!—the launching, I mean. A boy (or girl) who is truly interested in books would long since have been infected by the bug of book-collecting even though his collection was not large and represented only a small financial investment.

THEY'RE SINGING SUNDAY. Peter, Paul and Mary, popular folk singers, will, appear 8:30 p.m. Sunday in the War Memorial, as part of the SU's Winter Weekend.

To Give 'Messiah'

One hundred seventy voices, representing 14 churches in the Syracuse Council of Churches, will be heard at 8 p.m. Sunday in Hendricks Chapel in the Council's second ecumenical musical service.

The chorus will sing the second and third portions of "The Messiah" by George Frederic Handel.

Soloists, will appear with the chorus under direction of Prof. Frank E. Hakanson, of the School of Music. Instrumental parts of the work will be performed by Prof. Arthur Poister, also of the School of Music, at the organ, and the Carl Silfer orchestra.

SU student ushers are being recruited by the Rev. Norman L. Keim, Hill Baptist student pastor.

Singers, who have been attending weekly rehearsals for more than two months, are from Baldwinsville Presbyterian, Eastwood Baptist, First Evangelical United Brethern, First Baptist, First Methodist, First Presbyterian, Manlius Baptist, North Presbyterian, Park Central Presbyterian, Plymouth Congregational, Rockwell Methodist, St. Paul's Episcopal, University Methodist and West Genesee Methodist churches.

AuditionsSet For 'Mikado'

The Syracuse Musical Drama Co. has chosen Gilbert & Sullivan's "The Mikado" for spring production at the University Regent Theater.

Auditions for principal roles and chorus members will be held at 4 and 7 p.m. Sunday in the Niagara Mohawk Power Corp. auditoriam.

Those trying for principal roles must be prepared to sing a song, preferably from "The Mikado." Prospective chorus members need not prepare a song.

In addition, anyone interested in working on other phases of the production may register at this time.

Peace Corps Plans to Send Trainees Here

SU officials have "government encouragement" that more Peace Corps trainees will be sent to the campus in the future.

A Peace Corps group is expected this summer. Two other groups have already been trained through University College, SU's downtown branch.

Clifford Winters Jr., administrator of the past two programs, said he fully expects the Peace Corps to continue to send volunteers to Syracuse, although training contracts are awarded on an individual basis.

Syracuse is favored as a training center because it has many specialists on East Africa and South Asia, two areas where Peace Corps help has been requested and sent.

Although the demands of training the future corpsmen tax university facilities, Winters said the program is considered a prestige item.

He said that he has had indications that the Peace Corps office in Washington was highly pleased with the results of the two SU training programs.

66 Rangers to Graduate

Sixty six future forest technicians will be graduated from the New York State Ranger School at Wanakena at the 49th Commencement program.

The exercises are scheduled for 11 a.m. Wednesday in Marshall Auditorium. Dean Charles C. Noble will deliver the commencement address.

Dr. Hardy L. Shirley, dean of the College of Forestry, will welcome the Class of 1963 and guests. Dean Shirley and Professor Lucian P. Plumley, director of the Ranger School, will present diplomas to the graduates.

The graduates, their families, and faculty will gather at Drumlins Country Club for the traditional commencement luncheon after the ceremony.

Toastmaster will be Professor Raymond F. Crossman, dean of students at the College of Forestry.

The Ranger School, the oldest institution of its kind in the western hemisphere, is one of two such schools in the United States.

World Government Advocated

By JOHN LINDEROTH
Associate Editor

"The majority of the problems facing the world today must be handled by the social scientist, rather than by the physicist, chemist or engineer," believes Dr. Byron Fox, associate professor of sociology at SU's Maxwell School.

"For example," he stated in an interview, "social scientists, not physicists, must pave the way for nuclear disarmament and peacetime use of the atom."

Dr. Fox indicated that the physical scientists have shown their ability to perform, and "no one doubts that within ten years we shall have a man on the moon by dint of their efforts, even though this achievement now appears very difficult."

World Government

"But," he asked, "How many now believe that a world government organization can be achieved within ten years?" The sociologist sees the operation of such a political structure as not something unique, but simply as government on a larger scale than that of the family, community and nation.

"My loyalty to a world political government would in no way reduce my allegiance as an American, but would involve what I call proportional loyalty. In fact, I might be an even better national, state and community citizen because of my belonging to a world institution," Dr. Fox asserts.

He graphically illustrated this hierarchy of governments as a series of concentric circles, each one acting upon the individual within certain jurisdictions. "The world organization could do likewise," Dr. Fox asserted, "but the problem is to change attitudes of people, including Americans, who identify themselves with a national state."

DR. BYRON FOX

Obsolete

"The system of nation states is as obsolete as a horse and buggy on the Thruway, and needs to be replaced by a world government," Dr. Fox said. "But most persons do not tend to think of social control of the individual and of nations from a world level," he went on.

He compared possible worldwide attitudes with those held with respect to social control in America. "Here, if disagreement exists, peaceful means of solution are worked out," he said. "We now need to extend such thinking and methodology to a world level," he continued, "and so achieve a warless world."

Dr. Fox indicated that the real question is whether alternate peaceful measures can be created to solve international differences, and thereby rule out irresponsible violence.

Model

He pointed out the need for setting up a model of what is desired, then deciding how the requirements for transforming it into reality can be met.

Dr. Fox, who came to Syracuse in 1947, earned his bachelor of arts and bachelor of science in education degrees from Ohio State University.

He then developed an interest in sociology, especially at the international level, and earned his master's and doctorate degrees at Ohio State in that field.

International Cultural Relations

He now teaches international cultural relations, which deals with cultural exchange, propaganda and psychological warfare as these relate to national foreign policy and the United Nations.

Before coming to Syracuse, Dr. Fox worked for three years in Washington, D. C., with the United States Department of State Information and Educational Exchange Program.

Citizenship

Now in charge of the citizenship 1 honors program and adviser to the International Students Organization, Dr. Fox is also acting chairman of the International relations concentration committee.

Dr. Fox conceives of sociology as concerning individuals as well as the world as a whole.

At present, he is working on an introductory sociology text which uses a world orientation as a frame of reference.

Rush...

To be financially stable, one fraternity president commented, a house must have at least ten men per class. With this rush system it is going to be hard to be sure of initiating that many, he said.

More hopeful opinions among the Greek world have expressed the opinion that an increased upperclass rush in next fall, when many of the 300 will make their average, plus the current open rush will bring the figures closer to the necessary quotas.

There was a much more pessimistic side to the Greek world Tuesday morning. Talk of three or four houses leaving campus prevailed, because of this additional strain, while many called for immediate revision of the rushing rules.

Two years ago when the sorority system adopted the deferred rush, they too were hit hard by a dearth of pledges. No sorority houses were forced off campus but the Panhel system was forced to revise rules and tighten up on the dirty rushing.

Scholarship Applications

Applications for Panhellenic's annual $500 scholarship are now available in the Panhel office or the Dean of Women's office. Deadline for the applications is April 5.

The scholarship, open to all sophomore and junior women, is based on scholarship, citizenship and need and is given each spring for the following fall semester.

Last year's winner was Mary Tapley, a junior majoring in English education.

Panhel also give a $300 scholarship every fall for study abroad. Sharon Yates, a junior art major participating in the Semester in Italy program, received the award this year.

New PARKER ARROW

This pen can save you money on cartridges. Parker Super Quink cartridges are BIGGER and last longer (each is good for 8 or 9 thousand words). But, even if you didn't save a dime, this pen would be worth the extra price. It's a Parker.

And only Parker gives you a solid 14K gold point tipped with plathenium—one of the hardest, smoothest alloys ever developed. It should last you for years no matter how much you use it.

The pen won't leak the way cheap ones do. It has a built-in safety reservoir, and meets most of the tough specifications we set for our $10 pens.

If you have trouble saying it, say it with a Parker. If you're a little shy and have difficulty saying "I love you" or even "I like you very much"—say it with a Parker.

The new Parker Arrow makes a beautifully expressive gift and looks as if you paid a small fortune for it.

The new Parker Arrow comes in black, dark blue, light blue, light gray, and bright red, with a choice of four instantly replaceable solid 14K gold points. Includes five free Super Quink cartridges with pen-protecting Solv-X (49¢ value).

FALCON IS "NEW KING OF THE MOUNTAINS"* IN TOUGHEST 2,500-MILE MONTE CARLO RALLYE

Special edition Falcon V-8 "Sprint" defeats the world's best in final 490-mile test section on icy Alpine cliff roads . . . then outperforms every sedan on famous Monaco circuit!

Falcon picked the world's roughest winter ordeal to reveal an astonishing new brand of total performance. Four days and three nights through an inferno of ice, snow, freezing fog, endless curves —2,500 miles against an implacable time schedule, designed to try a car's reliability, road-holding and performance to the ultimate. Experts said a first-time car couldn't hope to finish—and two thirds of the 296 competitors did drop out. But Falcon not only placed first and second in its class, it defeated every car, regardless of class, on the brutal Chambery-Monte Carlo final leg, set best time among all finishers in all of the six special test sections—and showed its heels to every sedan in the dramatic three-lap elimination on Monaco's famous round-the-houses course. You couldn't get better proof of total performance anywhere!

You can read the dramatic report of the world's most rugged winter Rallye in Sports Illustrated's February 4 issue. And you can get the full story of this and Ford's other total performance accomplishments from your Ford Dealer.

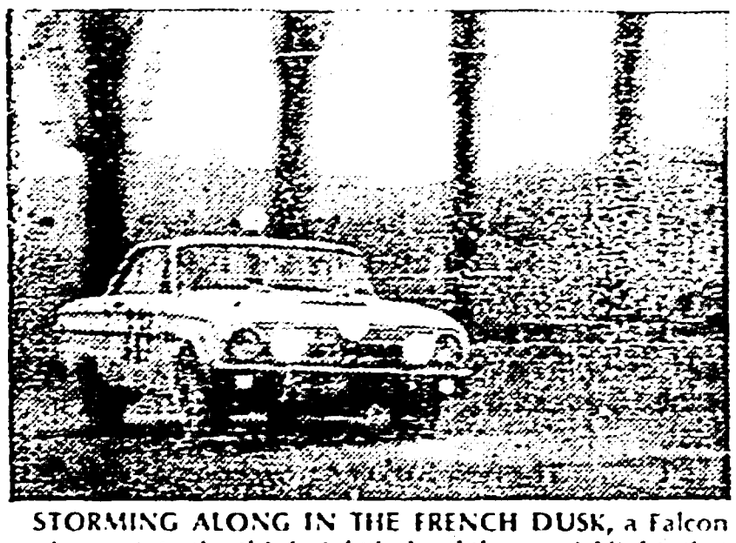
FALCONS TOOK CURVES LIKE THESE—hundreds upon hundreds of them—and proved that road-holding is not a European monopoly. In fact, Sports Illustrated magazine called them "the new kings of the mountains" and quoted a London newspaper as declaring, "The Falcons are part of a power and performance plan that will shake up motoring in every country of the world."



DEEP SNOW on the Col de Turini special section didn't even slow the "Sprint." And sure-footed Falcon also amazed the Rallye experts by its traction on glare ice.

"LACETS" is French for zigzags like these. It means "bootlaces", but to Rallye drivers it means an ultimate test of steering, stability, brakes and, above all, durability.

BEST OF ALL "TOURING" CATEGORY CARS in the three-lap Monaco circuit was the Falcon piloted by Swedish ice expert Bo Ljungfeldt. It was surpassed by only three cars, all of them two-seater sports cars in the Grand Touring category.

STORMING ALONG IN THE FRENCH DUSK, a Falcon plunges into the third night behind the special lights that let a Rallye driver see around curves, spot patches of ice, penetrate fog.

America's liveliest, most care-free cars!

'Warmer', Party-Hopping Slated

"The 1963 Winter Weekend promises to set the pace for weekends in future years," says Edward Vincent, committee member for the event.

A free admisison "Warmer" to be held from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. Friday at Skytop will begin a new tradition this year. Students can dance to a jazz combo, ski on open slopes and watch skiing competition. There will be an outdoor campfire.

Open house fraternity party hopping is a second new feature of the weekend. Some fraternities will have open parties Saturday night, and party, hopping is encouraged.

Friday night's Stockingfoot dance will be brightened by the entertainment of Hendricks Chapel Dean Charles C. Noble and students Lloyd Baskin and Robert Davis. Singer Ed Vincent will act as master of ceremonies. Stockingfoot chairmen are Elaine Weiss and Ben Hubbard.

Tickets for the Stockingfoot are on sale from 9 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. daily in Huntington B. Crouse Hall lobby. Tickets are $2.25 per couple.

Campus snow sculpture judging is scheduled for Friday afternoon. The sculptures this year can be colored. If there is no snow, the contest will automatically become a poster contest, according to Vincent.

Junior Gets Art Award

An award for outstanding achievement in the field of fine arts has been given Barbara Hartman of South Orange, N. J., a SU junior in the School of Art.

The award, given by the Art Gallery of South Orange and Maplewood, N. J., was presented by Mrs. Nestor MacDonald of Maplewood, chairman of the scholarship fund. Mrs. MacDonald is a 1957 graduate of the SU School of Fine Arts.

Miss Hartman is a member of the Art Students Assn. and is on the dean's list. Her paintings have been exhibited for the past two summers at Lowe Art Center.

Miss Hartman is social chairman of Day Hall, and she heads the Winter Weekend snow sculpture committee.

She has also given guitar concerts on WAER-FM. She has studied art with Seong Moy in Provincetown, Mass., and at the Art Students League, New York City.

SU Students Enter Tourney

Three Syracuse University bridge teams placed sixth, seventh, and eighth in a 20-team bridge tournament held Feb. 16-17 at West Point. Joel Rabine, and Carl Strass took first place in the Sunday open air event.

Members of the SU teams are: team1, Saul Berkowitz, Peter Watchmaker, Hans Stocker and Jeffrey Winicour; team 2, Tony DeFilippo, Stephen Stapholz, Alan Harris and Robert Berenbaum; team 3, David Harris, Nicholas Ecker-Racz, Joel Rabine and Carl Strass.

Other schools participating in the tournament were: Cornell, Columbia, Maryland, Harvard, Dartmouth, Monmouth and West Point. The next regular weekly tournament sponsored by the bridge club will be held at 1:15 p.m. Sun., Feb. 24, in the main lounge of Sadler Hall. Fractional master points will be awarded. Entrance fee is 50c.

Clark Leaves For Vacation

Dr. Wesley C. Clark, dean of the School of Journalism, will leave this week for the Carolinas on a one month vacation.

Dean Clark postponed his vacation temporarily to take part in a journalism colloquum last night. No acting dean was appointed, but Dr. George L. Bird will assume the chairmanship of the journalism faculty during Clark's absence.

According to sources in the School of Journalism, Clark takes his vacation during the academic year rather than the summer for health and administrative reasons.

Tow 15 Cars

Fifteen cars were towed away by Security Police in the past two days, according to Security sources.

Security towed six cars from the St. Thomas More Chapel parking lot in order to clear the lot for snow removal.

Nine cars were towed from the Smith parking area.

A charge of $10 and a parking fine must be paid by owners to reclaim cars.

Lelli to Coach (Not Play) Football in 1963

BOB LELLI

Quarterback Becomes Frosh Backfield Aid

Bob Lelli throws a pretty good pass and an even better fast ball left handed. He will now have a chance to try out additional talent, having been made a backfield coach for the freshman football team.

Coach Ben Schwartzwalder believes that the ex-quarterback will make a good coach because he knows the style of play that is used on the varsity, and can help bring the youngsters along nicely.

Lelli is a senior in physical education who hopes to get into professional baseball when he graduates, a hope not altogether unwarranted. He feels that the coaching post will be good experience for him, and Schwartzwalder agrees.

Bad Start

It would be a bit unkind to say that Lelli got off to a bad start last year in the quarterbacking department, but the feeling is that he has an excellent knowledge of the game. Most of his experience has been playing offensive, but Ben feels that he can also help the Tangerines defensively, having played there occasionally. Lelli has been here on the soon to be discontinued five year plan, and he will continue in school as part of the football scholarship quota.

His time on the squad as an offensive field general will stand him very nicely as a coach. It would be difficult to find a better man.

Lelli looked to be the starting quarterback at the beginning of last season, but like the team, he ran into trouble, and competition. Previously he had been a large portion of the depth behind Dave Sarette.

Baseball First!

His chief distinction and chief interest, however, is baseball. Able now to get in a full season, he will be the stopper on the staff. Baseball Coach Ted Kleinhans looks forward to a good year, and Lelli is one of the main reasons for such hopes.

With Lelli on the mound in a game during the southern tour last year, the opposition heard the call of strike three 19 times. He is no slouch at the plate either, having finished that trip hitting .500, including many taps for extra bases.

The young quarterbacks, Mahle and King, will not have to compete with Lelli. But they may have to compete with his products.

Signs of Spring

Spring is in the air—at least at Manley Fieldhouse.

As hundreds of students trudge through the snow-covered paths of the main campus, a staunch group of a hundred Hill athletes, dressed in the uniforms of their individual sports, are going through daily workouts in the dirt-covered arena.

Five sports, three spring, are represented. Spring sports, baseball, lacosse and track are getting the advantage of working out in the arena before the snow melts.

Coach Ted Kleinhans reported that 25 players have already started warming up in the fieldhouse, but he said official practice will not start until a batting cage has been installed in the edifice. Baseball varsity applicants will meet with Kleinhans tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 in the fieldhouse. Frosh baseball applicants will meet Thursday afternoon at 3 at room 201, Men's Gym.

Lacrosse hopefuls are going through the basic paces of passing and throwing. Official practices will start later this month, according to lacrosse coach Roy Simmons.

Every section of the arena is being used, including the wooden basketball court and track. Coach Fred Lewis' varsity is prepping for Friday's contest with Boston College.

Meanwhile Bob Grieve's trackmen are running circles around the basketeers in peparation for Satuday's intra-squad 880-440-220-mile medley meet between halves of the varsity basketball game.

Last but not least are the faces of a dozen footballers who are getting loose in preparation for spring practice.

If you are ever in doubt as to whether or not you should kiss a pretty girl, always give her the benefit of the doubt. — Thomas Carlyle

DO-WAER Fives Seek 'Church Key' Trophy

By ALLAN KORT
Sports Editor

The Shot heard around the world has again been fired. Radio Station WAER has challenged the Daily Orange sports staff to another in a series of basketball contests.

Fresh from a 78-77 double overtime setback at the hands of the DO last year, WAER has been practicing for 11 months in an attempt to regain the coveted "Church Key Trophy."

As has been our duty many times in the past, we of the Daily Orange, will again give the radiomen another chance.

A DO squad of 15 has been holding secret practices in the women's gym (from midnight to six) every day for the past two weeks and plans to use the basic SU pattern of a disciplined offense and a sliding zone defense.

This major change in defense (we used the Californian last year) will give the DO an even chance against the taller radiomen. WAER Coach Barry Lewis has informed us he will be without last year's high scorer Jeff Williams, who is currently playing for the U. S. Army.

Coach Dave Dean will again lead the DO into combat. Dean has regularly been attending Syracuse University and Syracuse Nationals workouts and has been given valuable pointers by coaches Fred Lewis, Alex Hannum, and Morris Osborn.

Dean announced the Daily Orange again has done a great job in recruiting. Frosh who will see considerable action are Boys' High star 6-3 Vin Zukowski, snared from the hands of Ohio State; Steve Spiegel, 6-5; Howie Schneider, 6-2; and Tom Muller, 6-4, the budging boardman from Alexander Whitnell High.

Regulars who will again be pressed into duty in defense of their homeland are last year's stars, Ed Silverstone, Milt Joffe, Bill Cronauer, and Bob Breier; Bernie MacCallum, Ron Roberts, Steve Moss, J. Adams, Steve Monblatt, Ira "the shot" Bakst and Jan Gilmore.

Injuries have plagued the DO in pre-game practices but we pledge consistent workouts to avoid the 11 "charlie horses" that plagued last year's con-

The Challenge

Allan Kort
Sports Editor
Daily Orange
Dear Al:

The radio station has not been the same since we lost to the Daily Orange in last year's annual "Church Key" Daily Orange-WAER basketball clash.

Many of the female members of the WAER staff have refused to talk to us since the double overtime loss.

Most of the male staff members have spent a lonely Friday afternoon, minus the traditional "Church Key."

Our female staff members have practiced all year under the capable leadership of J. B. Barrett and Jan Griffen, who've led the famed WAER cheerleaders in their "uncensored act," for the past three years.

We at the station feel that the game should be played sometime next week. Although there was a sellout crowd last year, I feel that the game shouldn't be played in the War Memorial.

There was some question as to whether Val Pinchbeck, Jr. could last an entire game as referee, but he proved more than capable last year. On this basis, I'm writing the Naval Reserve Training Center asking permission for Val's use.

Other possible referee's that have been suggested are: Dean Clifford and Dean Noble.

We're anxiously awaiting your reply and any suggested time, date, and site.

Sincerely,
Barry Lewis
Sports Director

Sororities Pledge 342 In 3rd Deferred Year

By ANN CUTLER
Junior Editor

Like the fraternities, there will be fewer sorority pledge ribbons on campus this year than at the same time last year.

According to Carol Shire, Panhellenic rushing chairman, 342 freshman women were pledged to the 25 Hill sororities Wednesday night.

This is in contrast to a total of 404 girls pledged during last year's freshman rush.

Of the 909 girls who registered for freshman rush this year, 200 were forced to drop because they failed to make the minimum 1.0 average required for rush or pledging, said Mrs. Witmyer, chairman of the Panhel alumni preference committee. Another 73 girls received no bids, she said.

This year's dropout rate was also somewhat higher than that of last year; a total of 567 girls dropped rush this year as against 482 for last year.

The largest number of dropouts 235, occurred after open house parties, when freshman received their grades, Miss Shire said.

This year's rush figures are very similar to those of two years ago when deferred sorority rush started, commented Mrs. Witmyer.

In 1961, more than 900 girls registered for rush and 348 were pledged, she continued.

Mrs. Witmyer admitted that deferred rush means sororities

(See Pledges, Page 5)

Registration for upperclass women will be held 2 to 4:30 p.m. Friday in the Panhellenic office, Woman's Building. Freshman women who registered for formal rush and have a 1.0 average do not need to reregister, said Carol Shire, Panhel rush chairman. Upperclass women who registered for rush last fall will not be required to pay the $3 rush fee, she said.

Katzenbach Cites Anti-Prejudicial Legal Operations

By DANIEL RITEY
Junior Editor

Nicholas Katzenbach told freshman citizenship sections Wednesday "events at the University of Mississippi were the dramatic expectation to the rule," and that "many responsible leaders in the South were working to stop situations without federal legal action."

Speaking at Hendricks Chapel, the deputy attorney general of the United States also made the following points:

(1) "Equality in voting is the most important civil - rights problem and is the speedy solution to the present problem of discrimination that we have."

(2) In certain aspects of living "discrimination is more serious in the North than the South because it is more difficult to find solutions to covert prejudice."

(3) "There must be an acceptance of the law and court decisions in Southern states and an increase in responsible leaders who will work within the framework of the Constitution to help the Negroes."

(4) "Equality for Negroes through the law is the conflict which cuts most deeply and needs the most urgent solution in the North and the South."

Equality Struggles

Katzenbach cited four fields in which Negroes are struggling for equality. They seek equality of voting, use of public facilities, rights of education and rights to equal hous-

Pledges Equal '62 Initiates

By CLAY RICHARDS
Junior Editor

The SU fraternity system "did better than expected in deferred rush" according to figures released by Fraternity Administrator James P. McMurray at Wednesday's InterFraternity Council meeting.

McMurray told the council that last year only 324 of the original 490 pledges were eligible for initiation, while this year all 323 pledges have met the necessary scholastic requirement for initiation.

In view of the fact that nearly 100 additional freshmen will probably pledge through the current open rush, this will mean an even larger number of initiates than last year.

"Not Bad Shape"

"I don't think we're in bad shape at all," McMurray commented Wednesday. "Granted there aren't the number of freshmen in the houses and there is not the additional financial support, but there also is not the number to drag down the scholastic average of the houses."

At present there are 238 freshmen who did not pledge, but who signed up for rush and are eligible to pledge, he said.

Heavy protest was levied against the deferred rush system by several IFC members at the meeting. "The rushing system will never be strong as long as the deferred rush system goes under the premise that fraternities are bad for the freshman's average," commented James Tallon (Sigma Phi Epsilon).

"By forcing them to make their averages before they can rush we are creating just this impression," he said.

Experiment

IFC President Thomas Rigoli (Phi Delta Theta) commented the deferred rush system has been an experiment this year and still requires some reviison. Houses are urged to hand in suggestions for changing rushing rules to the dean of men's office by Friday, Rigoli said.

IFC rushing co-chairman Michael Steinberg (Sigma Alpha Mu) said this is only the first Speech, Debate, Festival, Fair, Dance: Take Your Pick During International Week

A speech by the French consul general, a Festival of Nations and an international World's Fair will highlight International Week, which begins Monday.

The event is sponsored annually by the Hill International Students Organization.

Ramon Laporte, French consul, will speak on the European Common Market at 7:30 p. m. next Thursday in Maxwell Auditorium.

A question and answer period will follow his lecture. International student guides will serve refreshments.

International Week will open at 7:30 p.m. Monday, when the Festival of Nations will be held in Crouse College auditorium.

The festival will feature songs and dances presented by students from Latin America, China, Hungary, the Ukraine, Pakistan and Israel. Performers will wear native costumes and describe some customs of their homelands.

SIA

Syracuse-in-Asia will co-sponsor Tuesday's debate, set for 7:30 p.m. in Maxwell Auditorium.

Tentative topic for the debate, directed by Carol Eaton, is "Resolved: That a democratic system is not suitable for new independent nations." Students from several world areas will participate.

Fraternity and sorority houses will be opened to international students Wednesday night for traditional exchange dinners. International student guides, under Linda Simson and Jon Halter, are arranging the dinners.

No Charge

There is no charge for any of these events, including M. Laporte's lecture.

Students from most of the 77 nations represented on -campus will display food, art and clothes of their native lands at the World's Fair Friday.

The fair, which will include an international fashion show, will begin at 8 p.m. in Sims Hall.

Students manning the booths will answer any questions about their homelands, and will serve refreshments.

There will be a 10 cent charge for the fair.

Bucky Straub's quartet will play for the international dance, which will be held from 9 p.m. - 1 a.m. Saturday in Sims Hall.

International entertainment will be feautred.

Tickets for the dance, available at the door, will be 25 cents per person.

GIA to Meet

The Greek Independent Alliance will meet at 7:30 p.m. today at Phi Mu sorority.

Acceptances of Phi Mu, Accacia fraternity, and a Marion dormitory group as members will be made.

General party strategy and the independent situation on campus will also be discussed.

A Questionnaire For Hill Greeks

We are not ready to sound the death knell over fraternities at Syracuse University. Death just doesn't come that quickly to such a firmly established system.

Nor do we wish to confuse change with attrition, which some seem to be doing already. For we cannot be sure that what was feared as a symptom during formal rush and became a malady with the final announcement of bids, will necessarily mean lingering ailment and ultimate death.

Deferred rush is new at Syracuse and like all new things it has not met with instant acceptance. Large numbers, unable to pledge in the fall, were forced to miss freshman rushing because of academic deficiency.

So the Greeks were left with a shockingly low number of men pledged as a result of the rush.

As we said, we cannot accurately project the overall picture which has been only faintly traced in. Much remains in the realm of conjecture:

—Will those houses with unusually small pledge classes manage to gain more pledges in the informal rush or will the wide-spread low total mean more keen competition among all house in the informal rush, which could mean just another round of failure for the houses with small pledge classes?

—Will the picture change in the fall when most of those who didn't make their average this semester will be eligible to rush? Or will those that did reasonable well this time merely add to their numbers, again squelching the smaller houses?

—Will the large majority of freshmen who have not pledged houses feel less need for doing so next year and will the total effect be a sharp and permanent decline in rushing and size of houses

—If so, will smaller numbers mean the end of some Hill houses?

—Will the effect of such low numbers of pledges this semester lower the morale of that large percentage of houses which failed to take in what they consider a workable number of pledges?

—Will a lowering of morale, in the long run, undermine the entire Greek system on campus?

—Could the figures for this rush reflect a drastic change in the university system at Syracuse—perhaps even its ultimate death?

We do not profess to have the answers to these questions. But they are questions that will be asked, or should be asked, by Greeks and independents alike.

The answers must come from higher sources. They may lie in the dimness of the future. They may, indeed, lie within the system itself.

The figure "323" represents a challenge to all Greeks on this campus to answer the questions for themselves and for the entire university.

Other Voices

The following appeared in "New Yorker" magazine, Jan. 17. We reprint it here without comment.

"We don't altogether understand the following conversation, but we reproduce it as a service to future historians.

"We got up early one morning last week, hailed a cab, and asked the driver to take us to the Yale Club, where we had a breakfast appointment.

"'They still in business?' is what we thought we heard him say. We asked him to repeat himself. 'They still in business?' he said.

"We asked him why he had inquired. 'All you used to hear was Yale and Harvard, Yale and Harvard,' he said. 'You don't hear that much now.'

"We asked what he does hear. 'Syracuse,' he said."

Speakers

To the Editor:

The four speakers for the Spring Citizenship Lecture Series have just been announced. Each is outstanding in his field and we will be extremely fortunate to be able to hear them. However, if one balances the high prestige and voluminous publicity that this program has been receiving with the comparative brush-off which has been given our speakers in the humanities, we perhaps are not so fortunate.

Maxwell's citizenship lectures have for years been granted extensive publicity, both in the D.O., in the two Syracuse newspapers, and in citizenship 1 classes. However, guest lecturers in the Humanities Lecture Series, the Visiting Writers Program, and the Footprints Series have not received equal treatment. Victims of insufficient publicity (How many Humanities Series lectures were covered in the next day's D.O.?), indifference (professors rarely mention them in their classes), and deliberate discrimination (the citizenship series was able to schedule seven lectures this year; the humanities series only five) humanities lectures have not been granted the attention that they deserve on a college campus.

The large numbers of students who turned out for the three Humanities Series lectures last semester, in spite of the small publicity which they were given, indicates the high degree of student interest for guest lecturers in the humanities. I myself am a political science major, and carry no prejudices against Maxwell Hall. However, I believe it only right that the humanities—a vitally important area of concern in any society—should receive equal treatment.

Name Withheld

Keating

To the Editor:

In this time of great world problems, we are fortunate, indeed fortunate to have a self inspired defender of right, representing us in Washington.

I am talking, of course, about the Honorable Kenneth B. Keating, senator from our own New York State. This man, realizing that although he comes up for election in 1964, feels that there is a greater call than that of personal prestige or gain, has taken his cause to the nation. Senator Keating has taken up the unpopular and rational call of "Fidel go to hell." The Senator has become the defender of all Americans (particularly of those living in New York State), against the most serious threat to our shores since, well, prohibition. The Cuban issue will make Keating look bad in the eyes of his public—but the Senator is a brave man.

Being the self-appointed guardian of the Cuban people and also the whole of Latin America, the good Senator views the problem deeply. After much thought and remorse, the solution hard to imagine is that the Russians must leave Cuba. The problems in Latin America are not the simple obvious kind like: a) unequal class structure, b) millions of landless peasants, or c) the need for initiative and reform, but is of the more complex form—the Russian cancer in Cuba. The panacea is before your eyes—can't you see it!

Senator, because of your unwavering stand on this issue of national importance, you have won my vote along with that of millions of other narrow-minded Americans.

Corwin

To the Editor:

It was certainly an education(?) to read Ron Corwin's article in Monday's D.O. It isn't too often when one can hear from a person with such superiority and an open mind to boot. There is just one small problem—Mr. Corwin was so busy ranting and raving about the Greek system, that he was unable to point out the true advantages of being independent.

By his own admission, independents and Greeks find it difficult to associate with one another. If this is true, how can he possibly claim that there is more freedom in choosing your associates as an independent. 60% of the student body has been eliminated from his world!

Mr. Corwin seems to be very quick to deflate the Greek boasts of service to the community, but what have the various independent living centers done to aid others?

Surely a person like Corwin, who is free from all prejudices (?), can see that it takes all kinds to make a society. Some people are made for fraternities and sororities, and others aren't. It's up to them to make their own choice and to learn with the others who chose differently.

Draft

To the Editor:

On June 30, the government's authority to induce young men 18½ to 26 into the armed forces will expire. As of this week there has been no official statement by President Kennedy or his administration on draft extension. But there are indications that, like his predecessor, he will take the advice of the Department of Defense and ask for a four-year renewal. It is important that the American people be alerted to the impending legislation.

Not only is the draft an invasion of the citizen's rights of privacy but it conflicts with our historical traditions. Many of the first American settlers came here to escape the militarization of European countries. Rep. Byron Johnson has said that the present "military influence on American life is contrary to our constitutional intent to maintain civil dominance over the military."

Personally I can't agree with Rep. Johnson more strongly. If you also feel that the draft should be ended when it comes before Congress later this year, write to the Friends Committee on National Legislation, 245 2nd Street, N. E., Washington 2, D. C.

'Candide'

"Candide," which opened at the Rivieria-Cinema Wednesday night, is an often funny, occasionally brutal, but sometimes sloppy updating of Voltaire's classic. Jean-Pierre Cassel is perfect as the innocent Candide, who, despite the most despicable of cruelties that befall him in our modern age, firmly believes in his tutor Pangloss's sophistry: "Ours is the best of all possible worlds."

Candide goes through the parodied horrors of eager war officers, "Heil Hitlered" German POW camps, hourly executions of singing Latin American dictators, American divorce courts and a host of other slapstick satires.

Some moments of "Candide" are brilliant in their sharp cynicism: African natives decide not to eat Candide since their leader has to go to the U. N.; America is plastered with photographs of the Statue of Liberty (just as Germany is covered with pictures of Hitler).

Other sequences, such as Pangloss' philosophizings that cause him to join the French, German and Russian armies, are effective because of ther dialogue and not because of any cinematic creativity on the part of director and adaptor Norbert Carbonnaux. It is Carbonnaux's (and Voltaire's) writing that creates most of "Candide's" caustic effect, not Carbonnaux's camera.

Also at the Riviera is "Girl With the Golden Eyes," a tragic but sensuously told love story.

4 JCC Folk Finalists

Four Syracuse University students are among finalists in the Jewish Community Center's folk music talent contest which will wind up at 8 p.m. Saturday, March 9, in the center auditorium.

Hill folk soloists include Elaine Meltzer, a senior in Liberal Arts, Harold Glatzer and Morty Jacobi, all freshmen in Liberal Arts. Another LA frosh, Brian Maddy will appear with Glatzer in a duet.

Bob Feldman, of WAER, will emcee the show, which will be taped for re-broadcast by the station.

The winner of the semi-finals will appear with the center's choral group in concert March 31.

MUSIC

Krasner Ensemble

By STEPHEN WINDHEIM
DO Music Critic

Tuesday night brought to Syracuse the third in the current series of chamber music concerts offered by the Syracuse Friends of Chamber Music. The program was such a thoroughly enjoyable one one hates to make any criticism at all.

The opening "Quitet for Wind Instruments" by Paul Hindemith was introduced to the community by the recently formed Syracuse Woodwind Quintet. The sonority of the ensemble was quite pleasing, much of the material being sly and humorous. Themes were easily discernible and never belabored by undue repetition or development. The ensemble consisted of flutist, John Oberbrunner, horn player, Marvin Howe, Gerald Zampino on clarinet, Philip MacArthur on oboe, and bassoonist, Anthony De Angelis.

The popular Brahms "Trio in E flat Major" saw Mr. Howe return along with pianist, Sara Lombardi and Mr. Krasner on violin. The timbres of the horn and these other two instruments, are so different from each other that the work is made doubly difficult. Not only do the musicians have the problem of creating the psychological impression of a blend, but they are individually more exposed to the ear of the of the listener.

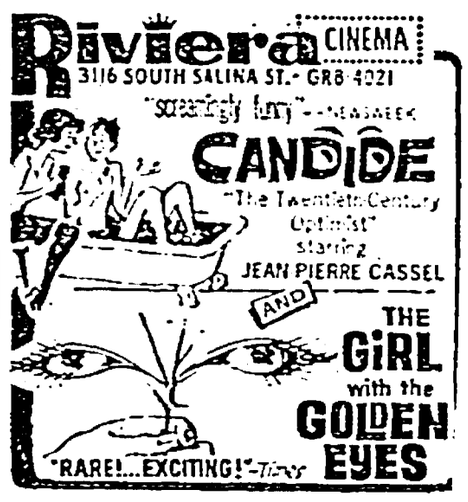
In this particular case, it was Miss Lombardi's playing that sometimes stood out due to missed notes, and sometimes did not stand out dramatically enough in regards to volume. She played however, with a good sense of phrasing and dynamic variation within the range she permitted herself. In general, the trio acquitted themselves quite well, especially in the fourth movement, with its great rhythmic drive and syncopation. The audience was warmly responsive.

The Mendelssohn "Octet" comprised the second half of the program. The Krasner ensemble together with four local musicians, played with a great deal of spirit, despite an occasional lapse in intonation.

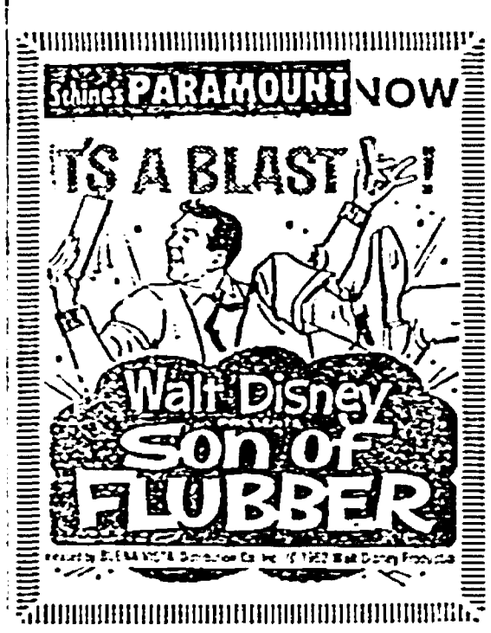
Folk Singers Here March 3

Two international folk singers, Francois Daniel and Dimitri Bolgar, will sing at 7 p.m. Sunday, March 3 in Hendricks Chapel.

The program, sponsored by Hendricks Chapel and the Hillel Foundation, will be held in conjunction with International Week.



Francois Daniel, a recent arrival from Paris, has accompanied himself on his guitar in cafes in France and New York City and on American television.



Dimitri Bolgar, a Bulgarian who studied law, speaks twelve languages and sings in all of them. He has also appeared in Europe and New York.

A Look at Fraternities - - Part 1

The following story, gathered at the recent National Interfraternity Conference in Pittsburgh, seeks to discuss the truth in recent publicity that fraternities are raising their scholastic standards and returning to the traditions of their earliest days is true, or just so much lip service for campus organizations which many claim are only social.

The story was written by a senior journalism major from the University of Nebraska and an active member and past president of the Nebraska IFC.

By DONALD L. FERGUSON

The college fraternity could be compared with the dinosaur. The dinosaur had history, tradition, and strength, but failed to adapt to the changing environment.

The fraternity, too, has its history, tradition and strength. But many educators have asked, will it be able to adapt for survival, or will it, too, become a historical footnote?

What type of adaptation will be necessary?

Can, or is, the fraternity system taking steps to insure its survival and live up to its principles?

Or, is the fraternity a dying institution?

Frank M. Hallgren, dean of men at the University of Nebraska, stated that, "If the fraternity system is to survive it will need to demonstrate that it is a positive educational influence in the college community."

Hallgren noted that to remove the problems of poor scholarship and poor citizenship "is not enough." This, he said, only indicates that the fraternity is not a negative influence.

"To demonstrate a positive contribution, the fraternity system must become a leader in the solution of social problems and not a defender of the status quo; a leader in cultural and intellectual development and not a debunker of the creative and imaginative intellect."

"I think the days of keg, combo, and collection of couples approach to social life of the fraternity are largely gone," indicated Earle W. Clifford, dean of men at Syracuse University, "and that in a very significant way, a prime characteristic, a principle dimension of fraternity experience that has evolved is not modern at all, but a return to the literary-scholastic origin of those organizations."

Clifford, when interviewed at the November meeting of the National Interfraternity Conference (NIC) in Pittsburgh, noted that the first college fraternity was Phi Beta Kappa, now a scholastic honorary.

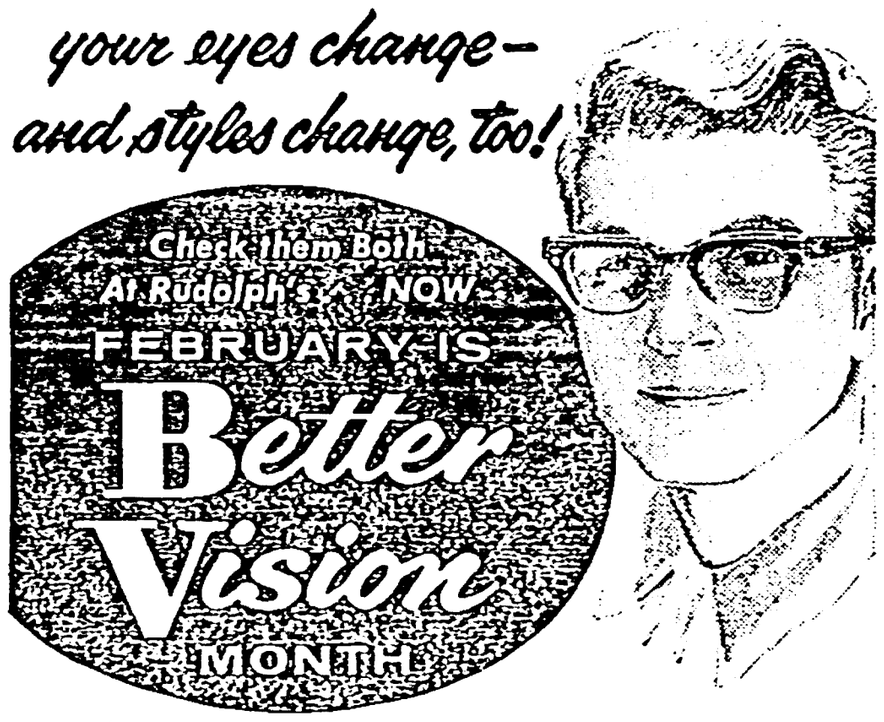
Hallgren stated that while "Brotherhood" means a sincere feeling of friendship, a closeness and concern for the other person's character and social development, it should also mean a concern for the intellectual enrichment of the rest of the fraternity membership.

Nearly all of the national college fraternities were founded, at least in part, to supplement and contribute to the intellectual development of the individual.

One fraternity, in its early years, required regular participation in chapter-room debates over current political, social and cultural topics.

Phi Gamma Delta, in its national history books, indicates that the members debated such topics as "Should a man be convicted of murder in the first degree on circumstantial evidence?" and, "Is the prescholastic and cultural stimulation and development is a program cited by Dean Clifford.

The residence halls at Syracuse were encouraged to bring lectures, one-act plays, recitals, and other forms of cultural programs into the residence halls each week. This, he noted, was to supplement the original purpose of care, feeding and supervision (along with a small recreation program), making the residence halls into "residential centers."



He noted that this type of program soon caused the fraternities to sit back and take note. The fraternities were "forced" to add this type of sent war with Mexico a just war on the part of the United States?"

THE CURSE OF THE CAMPUS: NO. 2

As was pointed out last week, one would think that with all the progress we have made in the education game, something might have been done by now about roommates. But no. The roommate picture has not brightened one bit since Ethan Goodpimple founded the first American college.

(Contrary to popular belief, Harvard was not the first. Mr. Goodpimple started his institution some 75 years earlier. And quite an institution it was, let me tell you! Mr. Goodpimple built schools of liberal arts, fine arts, dentistry, and tanning. He built a lacrosse stadium that seated 102,000. Everywhere on campus was emblazoned the stirring Latin motto CAVE MUSSI—"Watch out for moose." The student union contained a bowling alley, a clock, and a 16-chair barber shop.

...and as for shaving, they didn't.

(It was this last feature—the barber shop—that, alas, brought Mr. Goodpimple's college to an early end. The student body, being drawn from the nearby countryside, was composed chiefly of Pequots and Iroquois who, alas, had no need of a barber shop. They braid their hair instead of cutting it, and as for shaving, they don't. The barber, Tremblatt Follicle by name, grew so depressed staring all the time at 16 empty chairs that one day his mind finally gave way. Seizing his vibrator, he ran outside and shook the entire campus till it crumbled to dust. This later became known as Pickett's Charge.)

But I digress. We were discussing ways for you and your roommate to stop hating each other. This is admittedly difficult but not impossible if you will both bend a bit, give a little.

I remember, for example, my own college days (Berlitz, '08). My roommate was, I think you will allow, even less agreeable than most. He was a Tibetan named Ringading whose native customs, while indisputably colorful, were not entirely endearing. Mark you, I didn't mind so much the gong he struck on the hour or the string of firecrackers he set off on the half-hour. I didn't even mind his singeing chicken feathers every dusk and daybreak. What I did mind was that he singed them in my hat.

To be fair, he was not totally taken with some of my habits either—especially my hobby of collecting water. I had no jars at the time and just had to stack the water any-old-where.

Well sir, things grew steadily cooler between Ringading and me, and they might have gotten actually ugly had we not each happened to receive a package from home one day. Ringading opened his package, paused, smiled shyly at me, and offered me a gift.

"Thank you," I said. "What is it?"

"Yak butter," he said. "You put it in your hair. In Tibetan we call it grce see kidstuff."

"Well now, that's mighty friendly," I said and offered him a gift from my package. "Now you must have one of mine."

"Thank you," he said. "What is this called?"

"Marlboro Cigarettes," I said and held a match for him.

He puffed. "Wow!" he said. "This sure beats chicken feathers!"

"Or anything else you could name," I said, lighting my own Marlboro.

And as we sat together and enjoyed that fine flavorful Marlboro tobacco, that pure white Marlboro filter, a glow of good fellowship came over us—a serene conviction that no quarrels exist between men that will not yield to the warmth of honest good will. I am proud to say that Ringading and I remain friends to this day, and we exchange cards each Christmas and each Fourth of July, firecrackers. © 1963 Max Shulman are taking smaller pledge classes than under the old system.

However, she explained, the sororities are initiating approximately the same number of girls as they did under with first semester freshman rush.

All that is hapening, she explained, is that the weeding out process is done earlier.

Under the old plan, girls depledged when they failed to make their averages; under deferred rush, they are never pledged at all unless they have minimum 1.0 averages. The end result is the same, she said.

ing and job opportunities," he said.

"I believe these principles of equality will prevail," he went on, "but it will depend on individual self - examination, change in attitudes and work by people in the North and South. The law will be an important but not exclusive aid in this goal," he added.

"There are no places in the U.S. where the principle of equal opportunity to vote is not accepted," Katzenbach noted." Nowhere can there be found a defense to the idea that Negroes cannot vote, because this right is granted in the 14th and 15th Amendments of the Constitution."

Katzenbach cited examples where the Justice Department has acted to insure the right of qualified Negroes to vote. "There has been an increase in the number of Negro voters, but federal action is sometimes needed when local officials do not help," he said.

Referring to the use of public facilities, Katzebach noted "there are still isolated cases of Negro discrimination in interstate transportation, but systematic segragation has almost disappeared."

The lawmaker stressed that discriminatory dealings with states involved could be fought as being illegal, but that "when the violations were brought to a private level it is hard to act on them."

"There is still a gulf between the Supreme Court rulings as the law of the land and their acceptance by people," Katzenbach said in regard to the Negroes' quest for educational equality.

"The Courts alone cannot remake the U.S. educational system or change peoples' habits, but we still hope that respect for the law will continue in the South as happened in the Clemson case," he continued.

"The process of getting Southern leaders to follow the law and thus bring about the end of discrimination is slow, but has been accelerating," Katzenbach said. "Recent attitudes have been changing for the good, though," he concluded.

Vandals Hit

Convertible tops were slashed and windshield wipers and radio antennas taken from ten cars in a lot behind the SU reading center, 508 University Pl., Tuesday night.

The lot, opposite Dell Plain Hall, is university-owned.

According to Security Police, the vandalism occurred between 10:30 p.m. and midnight.

The ten cars, all convertibles, are owned by university employees and students.

City police are investigating.

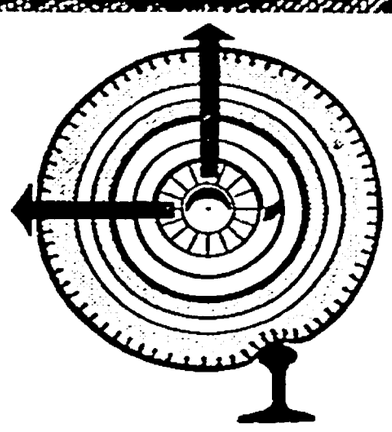
Assignment: design a suspension that "paves" its own way!

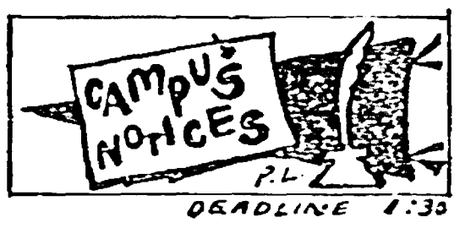


Result: "Cushion Recoil" provides a dramatically smoother ride in 1963 Ford-built cars

The challenge given Ford engineers was to design suspensions that would permit wheels virtually to roll with the punches—not only in a vertical plane but fore-and-aft as well. Conventional suspension systems provide only a partial solution to road shocks by limiting wheel recoil to an up-and-down motion.

The solution? Exclusive Cushion Recoil suspension design in all Ford-built cars for '63! Cushion Recoil, with cushioning action in a fore-and-aft plane as well as vertical, smothers the jars and jolts of rough roads, adds to your comfort, safety, and driving pleasure. Even the thump of freeway tar strips is reduced, and on deeply rutted roads you experience better control of the car. Furthermore, your Ford-built car is spared the wear and tear of road-induced vibration.

Another assignment completed—one more example of engineering excellence at Ford and new ideas for the American Road.



SOAKS UP ROAD SHOCK. Exclusive Ford Motor Company Cushion Recoil action moves back as well as up for a smoother ride.

JSG Takes the Floor

Today the Daily Orange begins publication of a regular column prepared by Joint Student Government personel to inform students on a detailed basis of the workings of their government. Contents are entirely compiled by JSG and are edited by the DO only for style, taste and accuracy.

Organization, reorganization, and action have become keywords in the Joint Student Government vocabulary. Under the direction of President Theodore Bayer and Vice President Carol (Schultze) Lucha, JSG has undergone a semester of planning, experimenting, trial and error—and hierarchial adjustment.

Now, this administration is ready to roll—if the student body is prepared to step in and assume the responsibilities of its place in the governmental structure.

Since the fundamental purpose of JSG is to uncover student sentiment, and see that it is directed to the proper channels for deliberation, its success depends largely on communication, which is a two-way process. Not only should JSG pass on information to the students, but they also must react by giving their opinions to JSG.

Too few students are aware of the potentiality of this organization and fail to realize that their desires, complaints and criticisms could initiate action if only JSG were informed.

How does the average student make known his particular opinions?

Each living center has a representative who attends Joint Student Legislature and who is qualified to present the ideas of those he represents. Moreover, when JSG wants to discover a particular consensus of opinion, a Student Opinion Survey is conducted.

For all new ideas and policy changes, JSG does not expect immediate results. Major suggestions must first be supported by documentation of student feeling, before becoming involved with the necessary red tape. Thus, when a JSG representative meets with a university administration committee on cultural, academic or social activities, he must have definite evidence of student interest.

If the study body becomes a more organized pressure group through JSG, it will have more influence with the administration.

In order to mobilize student sentiment, and thus, achieve these aims, the executive branch has been altered to establish a more effective coordinated structure. Under the president and vice president, three major committees have been formed: public relations; social, cultural, and academic (SAC); and special services, headed respectively by Carol Wurthner, James Morris and Douglas Long.

Among the major achievements of JSG during the fall semester is the Car Bill, which allows sophomores with a 1.6 cumulative average to register cars on campus while prohibiting juniors and seniors on probation to register them.

Supervised study rooms, later library hours, and later curfews were established during exam period.

Larger budgets allowing classes to finance "big name" entertainment for official university weekends were approved.

In addition, JSG supervised freshman elections, the distribution of ABC-TV hootenanny tickets, the Student Union Nights at the Women's Building and seating arrangements for football and basketball games.

Generally speaking, the sophonrores who now have cars on campus, the coeds who benefited from curfew extensions during exams and the frosh held elections without campus party interference never stop to credit JSG for gaining these privileges. However, receiving "thank you's" and signs of appreciation is not the object of this government. The point is that JSG DOES have the power to do these things and a lot more—if it has student support.

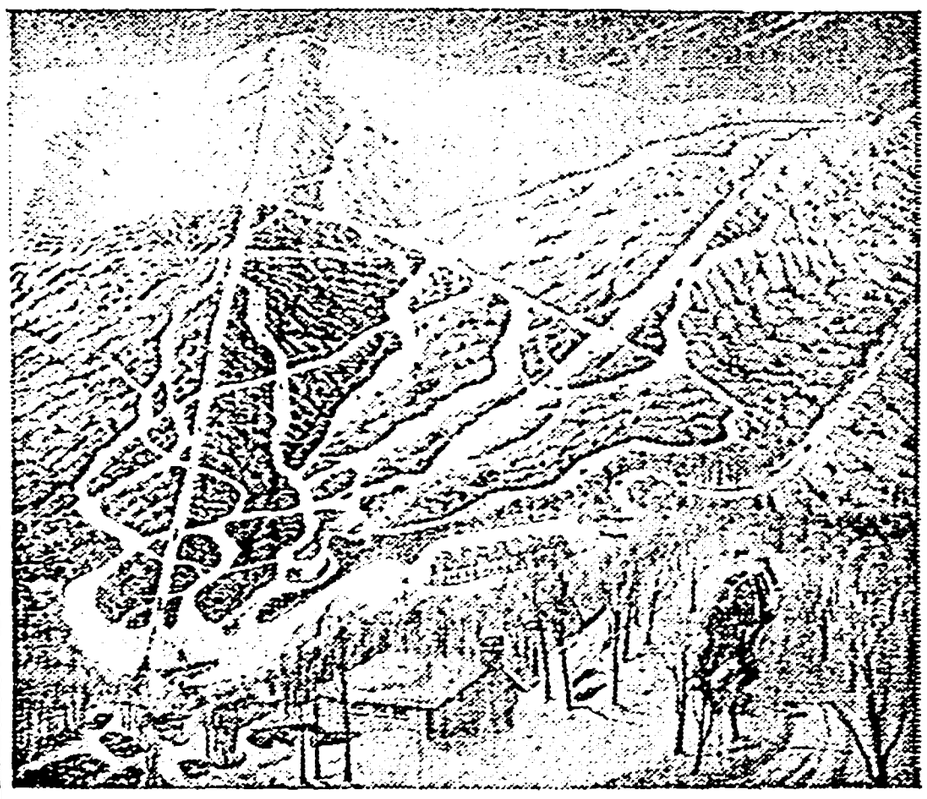
Seniors are Leslie Berg, Beverly Brown, Renate Bruns, Sharon Gersten, Helen Gott, Marilyn Greenspan, Carol Kaufman, Andrea Nissen and Maureen O'Donnell.

Two graduate students, Margaret Martin and Susan Shields, were also initiated.



SKI-FARING

with JON WEISBERG

This coming weekend is going to be filled with gay ski festivities for the entire campus. Among the featured events, intramural ski races are to be held at Skytop on Saturday afternoon. LABRADOR MOUNTAIN in Truxton is playing the host to many schools (including Syracuse) for a major INTER-COLLEGIATE RACE. Labrador is an excellent area serviced by a T-bar and a rope tow. The day we skied there, we were welcomed with the sound of folk music pealing from their PA system. Saturday's races should be interesting and the weatherman is predicting snow. Go out to watch the races and to ski—it'll be worth it!

BOB FRIEDMAN at MYSTIC MOUNTAIN was telling us that a lot of people are taking advantage of the sleigh rides, and the well-groomed slopes offered at this Cazenovia ski area. If your ambition is to get away from the crowds this weekend, stop down and ski at Mystic. And if you are more of an apres skier, the STEINHAUS is a new addition to the lodge which will cater to your taste.

Murphy Cites News Hunger

By DAVE BORTHWICK

"News hunger gnaws at the intellectual stomach," Dr. Robert D. Murphy, newspaper department chairman, said Wednesday night at a panel discussion sponsored by the Hill School of Journalism.

"No one should be able to entirely interrupt communication," he continued, speaking about current newspaper strikes in Cleveland and New York.

Topic for the discussion was "The Economic Factors of Mass Communication."

The panel, moderated by Dr. Edmond C. Arnold, chairman of the graphic arts department, included Rr. Roland E. Wolseley, Dr. Murphy and Dr. Philip W. Burton, of the J-School, and Dr. Eugene S. Foster, radio-tv department chairman.

Each panel member presented his views on economic factors in his field of specialization.

Dr. Wolseley, chairman of the magazine department, listed five economic factors which affect the magazine industry: capital investment, operating costs, rising costs, profits and loss.

"The apparent financial success of the television industry is not as rosy at it seems, because 25 per cent of the stations are operating at a loss," Dr. Foster pointed out.

He commented that the image of a "vast wasteland" is not entirely true, and mentioned presidential conventions and orbital flights on which the networks spend more than thay gain directly.

"The advertising sum will increase from its present $12 billion as the national economy grows," Dr Burton said.

However, he feels that there will be no propostional change in advertising revenue because "we have all the advertising we can take."

Dr. Burton heads the J-School's advertising department.

Chess Group Meets Today

Students interested in playing chess are invited to the initial meeting of a new chess club at 7:30 p.m. today in 310 Hall of Languages.

The club is open to all underclass and graduate students regardless of ability. The idea of the club originated with Peter Kinney, a sophomore in the College of Liberal Arts.

Advisors to the club are Asst. Liberal Arts Dean Alfred Cope and Dr. Robert Exner, associate professor of mathematics.

A chess club on the Hill gained national status in the late 1940's.

That club, advised by Dean Cope, met weekly. In 1949 four members took third prize among 15 Eastern colleges at the Columbia University biennial intercollegiate team meet.

One member of the team reached runner-up position in individual U.S. intercollegiate championships.

Further information about the new club is available from Kinney, ext. 3111.

Raymond Burr, the CBS Television Network's "Perry Mason," has worked as rancher, salesman, teacher, explorer and weather observer.

Dr. Sawyer To Lecture

"Civil Liberties and College Students" will be the topic for the second senior class sponsored lecture at 7:30 p.m. today in the Hendricks Chapel Colonial Room.

Dr. Michael O. Sawyer, chairman of the Maxwell School citizenship department, will speak.

A question and answer period and refreshments will follow the lecture.

Dr. Sawyer, who received his bachelor's, master's and doctorate degrees at Syracuse, has been teaching here since 1948.

The lecture is open to all students and faculty.

Premed Convo

The College of Liberal Arts and the Upstate Medical Center will hold a special convocation for all premed students at 7:30 p.m. today in the main auditorium of the Medical Center.

The theme of the conference is "Medicine As a Career."

On the panel will be Dr. Gordon D. Hoople, chairman of the SU Board of Trustees and director of the Gordon D. Hoople Hearing and Speech Center and Dr. Wilfred W. Westerfield, associate dean and chairman of the department of biochemistry, Upstate Medical Center.

Also on the panel is Dr. Donald Boulton, assistant dean of admissions, for the medical center and two gradutes of the College of Liberal Arts now studying at the Upstate Center, Miss Lucy Parisi and Ray Shramp.

Gymnast Finale: One For The Road

By TOM MULLER

Coach Paul Romeo's gymnasts will put their unblemished record on the line in Philadelphia Saturday when they meet Temple University in their final meet of the year.

Temple is the proud owner of a 6-2 record and could very easily prove tough for the Orange. Their only losses have been to Army and Penn State, and they are unbeaten at home this year. However, win or lose, the Orangemen cannot be denied their title, which they have already clinched.

Senior Phil "Corky" Voas, praised for pound probably one of the greatest athletes in S.U. history, may be in for some personal glory, because he needs only two points to break the school's EIGL scoring record of 64, which he set last year. Corky will be coming on the still rings, the horizontal bar, and in the floor exercise.

Captain Ray Grimaldi, one of the best men in the East on the still rings and side horse, will be competing in those two events.

The third senior on the S.U squad, Ron Orlick, will be tuning up for the defense of his Eastern long horse vaulting crown. He will also compete in the floor exercise.

Sophomore Sid Oglesby, who will be competing in the floor exercise, on the parallel bars, and on the long horse, has been one of the big reasons for the Orangemen's great success this year.

The highly-improved Carl Poplar will be entered in the horizontal bar, parallel bars, and still rings events.

Rounding out the S.U. line-up will be Tom Steeves on the horizontal bar and long horse, soph Jon Meury on the side horse, and John Bird on the side horse.

Carl Pattersons' Temple gymnasts will rely on the performances of Mark Cohn, Dick Phillips, Wright, and Weissman.

Cohn is exceptionally strong on the side house and could give Grimaldi plenty of trouble.

Phillips, the son of Navy's gymnastics coach, is rated by Eastern coaches as the number one horizontal bar man in this area.

Wright, who is exceptional on the long horse, also competes on the parallel bars and in the floor exercise.

"Temple will be up for this meet," warns Romeo. "They have a fine sophomore neucleus."

The Eastern championships, which will be held in Manley Fieldhouse March 1-2, will be the next event on the S.U. docket. The Temple meet is not only the final league meet, but also the final team event of the year. The championships are merely individual scrambles for honor.

"Colors" Run Friday

Sixteen Syracuse University trackmen will compete in an intra-squad medley relay Friday night at the Manley Field House.

Four squads (Blue, Gray, Orange, Green) composed of four runners each will perform during the halves of the SU-Boston College basketball game.

In the medley relay, the first threesad runs 880 yards, the second, 440, the third, 220, with the anchor man covering a full mile. The event is the first of its kind at the new fieldhouse.

The Blue team consists of sophomores Tom Higgins, Dick Burke and Dave Snipe and junior Mouncey Ferguson. The latter, one of the top Orange milers, injured his leg last year and has done little running.

Four freshman track stars make up the Gray squad. Mike Stiles, Ron Bukow, frosh football halfback Charlie Brown, and Bill Chiak represent the Gray. Chiak is the freshman cross-country record holder at Syracuse.

The Orange club is composed of members of the varsity indoor relay squad. They include Cal Evans, Bob Brown, Charlie Gaston and Mike Guzman. Guzman ran against Canadian Bruce Kidd in the fieldhouse dedication.

Freshmen Tom Pigage and Marty Miller and seniors John McAuley and Gary Sherman are running for the Green team.

Syracuse will enter a mile relay squad in the New York K of C meet March 1. The Orangemen are also scheduled to compete in the IC4A championships on March 9.

Syracuse may send individual trackmen to Madison Square Garden for the IC4A's.

Phys Ed HoldsSmoker

Phi Epsilon Kappa, men's professional physical education fraternity, will hold a smoker for physical education majors at 7:30 p.m. Sunday in the women's lounge of the Men's Gym.

Henry Woessner, a graduate assistant in the educational philosophy department, will speak. Refreshments will be served.

Physics Colloquium

Dr. Nathan Ginsburg, SU professor of physics, will speak on "Atmospheric Optical Noise" at 4 p.m. today in 106 Steele Hall.

Tea will be served at 3:30 p.m. in the same room.

Row, Row, Row Your Boat

"Lean, Mean and Tough" Oarmen Practice Daily

The main characteristic for a good oarsman is physical ability. A man must have a good combination of long, strong arms and legs connected by a strong back.

The "lean, mean, and tough" member of a crew squad averages 6' 3" tall and is 185 lbs. of muscle. No excess flab is tolerated on a man. "We want to be able to count his ribs," stated coach Loren Schoel. There are some exceptions to these qualifications, and "light, but tough and wiry" men sometimes develop into good oarsmen.

The members of the crew squad practice from September until their efforts are tested in the spring. Every day the squad has workouts which include running, calisthenics, weight lifting, and rowing.

During the winter months the crew rows in an indoor tank where all of the techniques are mastered. "Here the main problem is to get the power in the arms, legs, and back applied properly in order to master the secret of good rowing: quick power and smooth glide."

Coach Schoel is trying out a new method this year to obtain more "power per strike." This method will be tested when the crew goes out on the lake as soon as the ice thaws.

"The coxswain is as important to the boat as a jockey is to a horse," commented Schoel. He must know the capabilities of not only the crew as a whole, but also of each man. The coxswain's job is not limited to his own boat. He must be alert and observe the other boats in a race in order to second-guess the other coxswains.

Once out on the lake the crew uses a shell, not a boat. The shell is hand-made from an ash tree and is covered with a light, flexible skin.

Colleges employ the sweep-swinger method in which each shell has a coxswain and eight men. Each oarsman controls one oar. In the sculling method each man controls two oars. However, these shells usually contain only one or two men.

Most colleges run the two mile course in competition. One of the other races covers distances of 2000 meters (1¼ mile). The 1961 Syracuse Freshman squad won the Eastern Sprint Championships over this distance. Three and four miles courses are also used.

Coach Schoel feels that this could be a very good year barring injury and sickness. The coach has two good crews and three good coxswains from which to select a varsity squad.

This year, with a little luck and a few good breaks, the Orangemen are looking for victories in the Intercollegiate Rowing Associate meet, the Pan American Championships (Syracuse won in 1959), and the Olympic competition.

Richards vs Rex

Syracuse's first authentic big man in five years will be on display at Manley Field House Friday night when the Syracuse basketball players engage in an intra-squad scrimmage prior to the varsity clash with Boston College.

Chuck Richards, at 6-8 is Syracuse's first big man since Jon Cincebox (6-7) graduated in 1959, is expected to give the 1963-4 Hill varsity the backboard sweeping big man recent varsities have missed so badly.

The scrimmage replaces a scheduled game between the Syracuse Frosh and Onondaga County Community College. The Hill yearlings were left without an opponent when Onondaga elected not to play the game.

Richards is a transfer student from West Point, and is sitting out one year of varsity competition.

In Richards' lone varsity year at West Point he averaged nearly 20 points a game and showed trmendous ability as a rebounder and scorer.

In practice sessions the Poland, N.Y., native has shown good moves in the vicinity of the basket.

The scrimmage will feature freshman and varsity players divided into two teams. The first is made up mainly of first-string frosh. The second have dubbed themselves the "Pine Riders."

The "first" team, includes Dave Bing, Frank Nicoletti, Norm Goidsmith, Sam Penceal, Dick Ableman, Rex Trobridge, and Larry Bailey.

The "Riders" unit includes Richards, Jim Boeheim, Jay Rettberg, Andy Menschel, Bill Tydeman and Eric Weber.

Sources close to the "Riders" reveal that their basic strategy will be to "keep Bing below 10 points."

The frosh return to playing for keeps Wednesday when they journey to Niagara Falls in their quest for a second victory over the little Eagles. The Tangerines whipped Niagara 85-70 last week at Manley.

Prucha To Head Geology Dept

Dr. John J. Prucha will become chairman of theHill department of geology, succeeding Dr. William M. Merrill who leaves at the end of the spring semester to assume the chairmanship of the geology department at the University of Kansas.

Announcement of Dr. Prucha's appointment, effective June 1, was made jointly Thursday by Dr. Frank P. Piskor, vice president for Academic Affairs and dean of faculties, and Dr. Eric H. Faigle, vice president and dean of the College of Liberal Arts.

Widely experienced as a teacher and industrial geologist researcher, Dr. Prucha for five years was senior geologist of the New York State Geological Survey at Albany. At present he is engaged in basic research in structural geology with the Shell Development Company at Houston, Tex.

The new chairman is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin where he earned his bachelor's and master's degree majoring in geology. He engaged in field studies at the Geology Field Station in Wyoming conducted by the University of Michigan and continued formal education at Princeton University, where he earned a second master's and a doctorate, both in geology.

At Princeton he was named a Fellow in Geology for two con-

Bio Research Labs Opening Delayed

By BEV LURIA
Junior Editor

Delays in delivery and installation of fixed laboratory equipment have postponed the official opening of SU's new Biological Research Laboratories, according to Hill Research Institute Director William C. Wheadon.

The laboratories, adjacent to Sims Hall, were originally scheduled to be opened Feb. 15, Wheadon said. A new opening date has not been announced.

Wheadon said the building will be the right hand portal of the future entrance to the campus.

At present, Wheadon said, the new building is partially occupied by members of the SU bacteriology and botany department who recently moved from the biological research laboratories at Collendale barracks D2.

This barracks will be torn down after the laboratories move to their new home, Wheadon said, adding "the move is expected to be completed in in three weeks."

Research

"The major program of research in the new building will be carried out by the bacteriology and botany department," Wheadon said. However, he noted, "the zoology and the psychology departments may also conduct work there."

"We're not shutting out classes in the building, Wheadon stated, "but for a period of years we anticipate the space needs of research in biological sciences will require use of the whole building."

Three stories of the laboratories will be entirely devoted to research. The basement contains the south entrance to Sims Dining Hall and a food service delivery platform, Wheadon said.

Foundation

Although the as yet-unnamed building is four stories high, (including basement), Wheadon said, "its foundation is designed to support another four stories."

When completed, the building will cost $1,200,00, Wheadon noted. SU received a $374,000 grant from the National Institute of Health, a branch of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare for construction of the Laboratories and paid the additional construction costs itself.

Sawyer Hits 'Privilege,Not Right,' Clause

Dr. Michael O. Sawyer, chairman of the Maxwell citizenship department, said Thursday night that an ideal school would be one in which "students and faculty are colleagues, combined in imaginative pursuit of learning."

Realty is opposed to his ideal university, Dr. Sawyer said.

This reality, he noted, in-

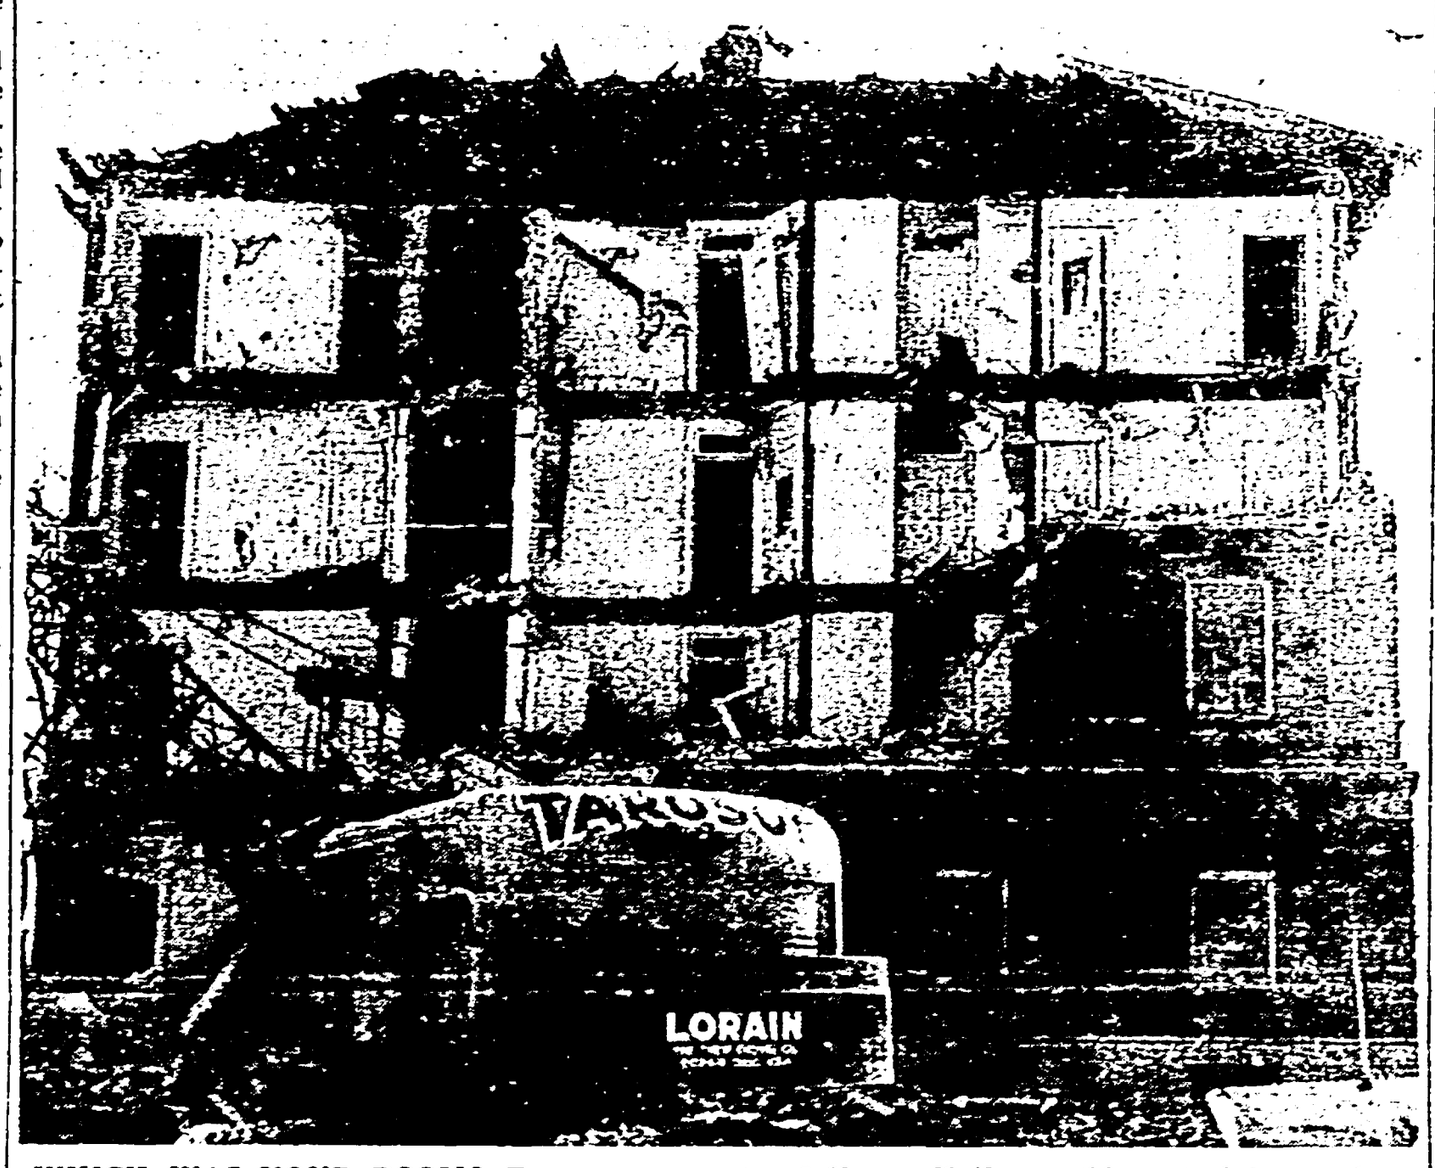
Four Disciplined By Dean of Men

By CLAY RICHARDS
Junior Editor

Three full time Hill students and a part time University College evening student have come under disciplinary action from the dean of men's office, Dean Earle W. Clifford announced Thursday.

In the strongest action a junior has bene suspended for one year for repeated fighting with other students despite warnings.

There was no indication the student had paid any attention to previous warnings, Clifford commented. Approximately $100 property damage involved in the student's latest fight was considered in the suspension action, Clifford said.



The readmission of a sophomore who dropped out of school for a semester has been declared invalid after he was involved in a $45 theft from the SU bookstore.

After the student withdrew from school last Fall for personal reasons, he took a job in the Bookstore. He had been approved for readmission prior to the disclosure of the theft, Clifford said, but now will not be eligible for readmission for one year.

Disciplinary action has been taken against a full time sophomore and a part time night stu-

Man on the Floor

WHICH WAS YOUR ROOM? Former occupants of Haven Hall saw this sad sight as they walked by their old home at University avenue and University place Thursday. Demolition of the building is expected to be finished today; Schultze Cottage came down earlier this week. Construction will start soon on this site for the first building of the Newhouse Communications Center complex.

GIA Admits 5 Members

Five new members were admitted Thursday to Greek Independent Alliance, one of the three campus political parties.

Phi Mu sorority, Acacia and Beta Theta Pi fraternities, 25 students from Marion Dormitory and 33 from the seventh floor of Sadler Hall were unanimously voted into the party.

Other GIA members are Theta Chi, Tau Kappa Epsilon, Alpha Delta Pi, Alpha Sigma Tau and Lambda Psi sororities.

Sir Mervyn And Soap Operas

A recent announcement by the National Broadcasting Company that it would discontinue the Merv Griffin Show as of the end of March took many persons by surprise—especially those who have seen the show and have enjoyed it.

For this show was a departure from the usual formula of daytime television. This hour-long show, broadcast throughout the country from two to three (in Syracuse from two-thirty to three), is a daytime version of the old Jack Paar "Tonight" show.

Griffin is a more palatible version of the Paar-type host in that he has talents of his own and doesn't always have to rely on his guests to keep the show interesting. He sings, dances, plays the piano and has a light patter that is entertaining without being oppressive.

Griffin seems somewhat like a Perry Como with vitamin pills. In short, he has produced a show that has brightened the afternoon for many who despaired of the wasteland of soap operas and quiz shows.

The guests on this show have been delightful almost without exception. The chatter is not noticeably paced by any desire to leave the studio to head out for a night on the town or return to appear in a show.

In fact, the human touch comes across even better when we see a favorite personality before the cameras with the wryness of a hangover rather than the brightness of the first few drinks, which used to be a problem of some of Paar's guests.

We deal at length with this description of the show in an effort to somehow acquaint those who haven't seen it with the quality of the show.

We were frankly shocked and upset when we heard of its cancellation. Then we heard what was taking its place: two soap operas.

This seemed to add insult to injury. The daytime audience—the housewife—just wasn't watching the Merv Griffin Show. In fact, it was consistently down in ratings to a quiz program and a court room "drama."

Perhaps the housewife should not be watching television at all. And this could be our first problem. But if she does, it is frightening to us that our nation's housewives would rather see "John's Mother's Cousin's Other Milkman" rather than some valid and enlightening entertainment.

AMIDST THE CLAMOR

Rebuttal

By Win Whittaker

Contemptuous ignorance concerning "Greek discrimination" irrationally has been bantered through the D.O. This hysteria has resulted in a graduate student reducing himself to name-calling and untenable gibberish. Another columnist has put forth a "case history" which damns without intimate knowledge of the whole situation.

Therefore, let us now review the charges and admit the truths. Then present the numerous facts that previously have been left out.

Charge 1: Greeks reject certain groups solely because of their religion.

The charge is, in part, true. However, the rationality offered by Messrs. Corwin and Hughes demonstrates their incomprehension about members of a Greek Bond. Mr. Hughes pointed out that a ritual stands in the way of pledging a person of a particular faith. Then he proceeds to call rituals a farce—a farce that Greeks do not live up to in practice.

First, many "closed" houses' rituals come directly from the Torah or the New Testament. Individuals, going through initiation, take oaths from passages contained in one of these works. Because a person does not live up to these pledges, is this a justifiable reason for condemning the ideal? Are critics suggesting the abolition of a sacred ritual, thus lowering the standards to a meaningless conformity?

Should the Catholic Mass delete any mention of Christ? Oh, but there is a direct relationship between religious services and a fraternity ritual. Many initiation ceremonies are based almost in their entirety on Jewish or Christian ideals, teachings, and symbols. For this Corwin and Hughes would and do condemn the Greeks.

Second, a fraternity man or sorority woman in a "closed" house cannot be equated to a bigot or prejudiced person. A person may be prejudiced but his Greek affiliation is not the reason. The fact is a vast majority of Greeks have close friends who could not be admitted to their house because of a religious ritual.

Charge 2: Fraternities and sororities exclude individuals just because they are Negroes.

Some do—it is an undeniable fact. Can it be justified? Probably not; at least not without seeming prejudiced. Can it be explained logically and rationally? Definitely YES!

When critics damn discrimination in the Syracuse fraternities, they fail to realize that most houses are but a single unit in a large, national organization. It is a simple, indisputable fact that many fraternities represented on this campus have chapters in Southern states.

When the representatives of the various chapters of a national gather to legislate the "fraternity policy," the Southern "bloc" often has enough votes to veto the ending of discrimination. And because we believe in the democratic processes, the decision must be accepted in good faith.

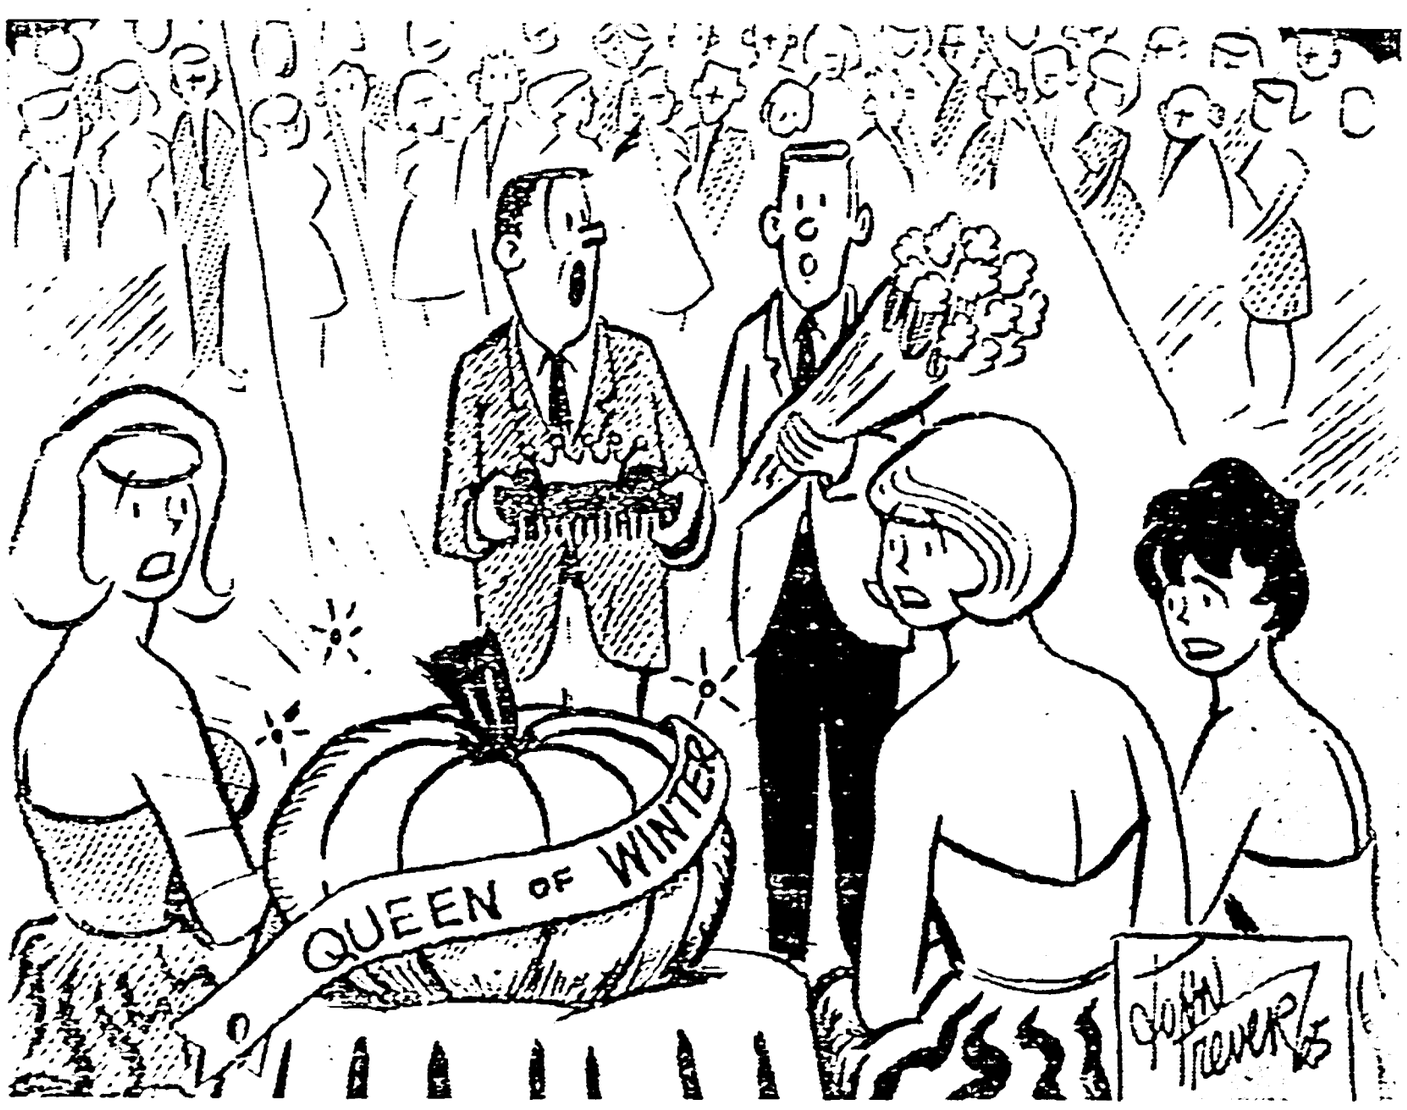
"No the decision doesn't have to be accepted. Go local!" To many outsiders this appears to be a logical solution, but it most definitely is not. A national offers a member chapter more than a name and prestige. To list the advantages gained from belonging to a national would take the rest of this page with a continuation.

But, all this is not to suggest that progress has not been made, for it has. Fraternities are moving toward eliminating discrimination, in fact as well as in word. "Grandfather clauses" (an individual may be the 'right religion' but his father or grandfather was not, so the boy could not be pledged) no longer are in constitutions or in practice. Others have dropped all restrictions in all areas altogether.

As integration in the South, the fraternities are moving slowly toward "open houses." In the years to come most houses will be able to take whomever they wish.

Charge 3: Consistent hollering by critics will bring about Greek integration quickly.

Here the critics of the Greek system are wrong. In fact they have helped perpetuate discriminatory clauses. Critics have forced the fraternities to take a defensive stand — to rationalize their policies.



While defending themselves they cannot look ahead and plan a progressive campaign to eliminate discrimination. Greeks have had to adopt "Gentlemen's Agreements" and "acceptable-to-the-general-fraternity" clauses. Thus, in effect, the Greeks, have had to go underground. Open discussion that might have led to the goal of "open" houses is no longer possible.

The Syracuse University Administration has adopted without doubt the wisest policy in working toward the elimination of restriction clauses. In essence, the policy is this: We expect the fraternity and sorority representatives going to their national conferences will work to eliminate discriminatory practices.

Most of the fraternities and sororities on this campus have worked for this goal. Several have led the fight. But because they were not successful or only partially successful does not mean they did not try.

Few people realize that discriminatory practices will be done away with by the Greeks themselves—not by the outsiders who have found a new area to scream about even though they do not know the facts and the progress that has already been made.

Debate

To the Editor:

I am happy to see that Mr. Corwin and Mr. Riggoli plan to debate on their respective favorite subjects. It should be quite enlightening to witness such a battle of opposite views.

I wonder if this is how Lincoln and Douglas started.

Thanks

To the Editor:

I would like to use the opportunity to thank the students of Syracuse University and especially the International Student Guides for the hospitality extended to our group during our stay here last weekend.

We were very pleasantly surprised to see how much attention we received and the International Students Guides did so much to make our short stay a very enjoyable one. We hope that all US students will be welcomed in Brazil as much as we were welcomed at Syracuse. On behalf of our group I would like to say thank you very much.

POLICY ON LETTERS

The Daily Orange invites, and even urges, the expression of opinion on the part of its readers. The editors make a sincere effort to publish as many letters as possible, but space and the illegible condition in which some letters are received eliminate several from consideration.

Consequently, writers are urged to type their letters, preferably double-spaced, and to limit them to a maximum of 200 words.

Out of necessity, the editors reserve the right to edit letters for reasons of grammar, space and good taste.

Books

3 by Baldwin

James Reilly a sophomore in the College of Liberal Arts will probably be an English major. In addition to academic interests he takes organ lessons and has played for various churches. The books he discusses are available at the Corner Store.

"Another Country" by James Baldwin. Dial Press 436 pp. $5.95
"The Fire Next Time" by James Baldwin. Dial Press 120 pp. $3.50
"Nobody Knows My Name" by James Baldwin. Delta Paperbacks 241 pp. $1.65

In an essay in "Nobody Knows My Name," James Baldwin stated that because he was an American writer, his material for a novel inevitably consisted of "a handful of incoherent people in an incoherent country." "Another Country" consists of just such material.

The country, this country, is represented by New York City. There are eight major characters, who are involved in a remarkable number of affairs and sexual bouts. Each relationship is a variation on the theme of love, or more often, hate. And the theme of deceit and self-deceit also serves to unify the novel, for all the relationships, except the homosexual affair between Eric and Yves, are the same in at least one respect: two people not telling the truth to each other or to themselves, and knowing, or sensing, that they are not. And the one relationship which has been successful, despite its ususual nature, occurs in France; at the end of the novel it is being transplanted to the United States, and there is a sense of doom when one realizes the new strains it will be subject to here.

For, according to Baldwin, self-deceit is an integral part of our culture, or the culture of the white majority.

In "The Fire Next Time," his latest book, Baldwin talks about this self deception and the myths it supports, the myths of free, honorable, pure Americans in a free country. Baldwin says the American Negro has the advantage of never having believed the myths; the reasons are obvious. No one is free if he consistently and irrationally denies freedom to others. Likewise, the myths of honor and purity are nothing more than myths; Baldwin states, "Whoever debases others is debasing himself." The only way to end the "racial nightmare" in our country, Baldwin concludes, is for those who are conscious of the inequities and falsities in the country to create this same consciousness in others.

Thus, to end a "public nightmare" thousands of private nightmares must be destroyed, as sugar-coated and pleasant as they may seem to be. And just as our private nightmares are related to our public ones, "Another Country" is related to "The Fire Next Time." The first, a novel, shows its "incoherent people" adding incoherence to their culture and becoming even more incoherent because of the same culture. The second, a short letter and a long essay, talks about the culture directly; its messages are obvious and unavoidable.

Cousins, Miller in 'Romeo'

Bonnie Cousins and Rick Miller have been selected to star in the Drama Department's forthcoming production of William Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet."

Miss Cousins has appeared in "This Property is Condemned," at the Lively Arts coffeehouse, and in "Little Mary Sunshine." She was a production assistant at New York's Shakespeare Festival.

Miller has been seen in Tennessee Williams' "Moony's Kid Don't Cry," Christopher Fry's "A Phoenix Too Frequent," and Samuel Beckett's "Endgame."

Friar Lawrence, who unites the "star crossed lovers" in marriage, is played by native Syracusan, Dick Harris. He was last seen in the Civic Company's production of "The Lark."

Julliett's parents will be played by three people. Dick Folmer, who has appeared in "Endgame" and Jean-Paul Sartre's "No Exit," is playing Capulet. Lady Capulet will be performed by Leslie Meek and Ellenjoy Schindler. Miss Meek was last sene in Gay's "The Beggar's Opera". Miss Schindler appeared in Edward Albee's "The Death of Bessie Smith" and in Jules Feiffer's "Crawling Arnold."

A new set for the Boar's Head Theater has been designed by Joseph Morton. Consisting of a series of platforms and pillars representing the city of Verona, the stage features an 8 foot balcony.

Juliett's nurse will be portrayed by Marion Present, Miss Present was last seen as Mrs. Trapes in "The Beggar's Opera." She has also performed in Albee's "The American Dream" and Garcia Lorca's "The House of Bernarda Alba.

G.F. Riedenbaugh, chairman of the drama department, will direct "Romeo and Julliet."

Others in the cast include Peter Maloney, Bruce McCurdy, Kathy Bindert, Bob Winter, Jeff Gus, Ed Roman, Stu Dillon and Ken Pearlman.

Romeo's friend, Mercutio, will be played by Tom McKee, who starred in "Little Mary Sunshine."

FIRST RUN TREATERS

RIVIERA-CINEMA—The Girl with the Golden Eyes," though only the second feature at the Riviera, is an enticing film of perversity worthy of note. In the context of the sensual phoniness of high fashion photography this French pic examines a strange triangle of a girl and a guy after a chick. Beautifully filmed to emphasize and degrade sex and physical passion "Girl" seriously parallels the satiric, updated "Candide." This is an obvious but funny parody of modern cruelities and hypocrisies. Both flicks have lots of French chicks, va-va-va-voom! "Candide" at 6:45 and 9:50 p.m. "Golden Eyes" at 8:15 p.m.

ECKEL—Darryl Zanuck fights a bloodless World War II, but boy he certainly fights a lot of it, all of D-Day. He's got the Germans, and the French, and the British, and the Americans, and 42 stars who just have time to die. And the Eckel adds wide screen battles and stereophonic noise. It's enough to make you join SANE, or quit ROTC, unless you like that kind of stuff. "The Longest Day" at 8:15 p.m.

SHOPPINGTOWN — "Mistah Christian!" Woops, wrong version of "Mutiny on the Bounty." No Charles Laughton's blustering. No Clark Gable's seething. This current widescreen fullcolor version of the South Seas adventure features a tight-lipped Trever Howard and a rather campy Marlon Brando. "Oh you nasty man, Captain Bligh." But you can't ruin a good story and director Lewis Milestone fully exploits Brando, Howard, the scenery, and some luscious natives, while Brando exploits the budget. Besides, the rolling seas and swaying girls beats the Syracuse weather. "Brando's Bounty" at 8 p.m.

LOEW'S — "Jack and Jill went up the hill." Watch them slide down and get into a big mess in this better-than-average flick. Shirley MacLaine and Robert Mitchum pour on their acting ability and turn out "Two for the Seesaw" from the Broadway show "See for the Twosaw." Cofeature is "The Great Van Robbery," which is the grandson of the Great Train Robbery, which is a distant cousin of Robbin Hood, who is a legend. "Seesaw" at 6:10 and 9:30 p.m. "Ho-hum" at 8:15 p.m.

KEITH'S — Laurence Harvey, praised by "Esquire" for his life-like portrayal of a zombie in "Manchurian Candidate," stars in a Hal Wallis (Jerry Lewis' old producer) film called "A Girl Named Tamiko." This one has all your favorite Oriental stars except Red Buttons. Maybe we've seen too many "Geisha Were Here" movies in our lifetime. E. A. Poe, that well known Hollywood screenwriter, hits Keith's again with "The Tell-Tale Heart." No Buttons at 7:17 and 10:35 p.m. "No Heart" at 9:10 p.m.

PARAMOUNT — Disney did it! He made a movie out of an insult and of course it's playing at the Paramount. It seems that someone at Disneyland, upset by the fact that Walt was paying his help in Mickey Mouse Club hats, which are as useful as Alf Landon buttons, rebelled and stormed into his office. "Mr. Disney," he said, "you are a son of flubber." Walt thought it was a great movie idea and so we get to see it. "Son of Flubber" flubs though. Tough luck, Walt. See you at the bank. "SOF" at 7:46 and 9:50 p.m.

OTHER FILMS OF INTEREST

KALLETT - GENESEE and PALACE — In case you haven't heard, Walt Disney is back in town. But not only that — he's in the suburbs too. "In Search of the Castaways" plays twice out here in the Vale of Onondaga (whatever that means). Here is adventure; here is excitement; here is romance; here is a dime — go call all your friends.

FRANKLIN — Today is George Washington's birthday. That doesn't have much to do with "El Cid" but we just thought we might tell you in case you wondered why the bank is closed and why someone is chopping down your cherry tree. Blame it on George. But we digress. "El Cid" is a long movie about a legendary Spanish hero. It now occurs to us that if we had started telling the story a little at a time each week in Weekend, during its long stay in town, we would be up to the part that goes something like this: "How do you ever expect to make anything of your life, Sid? I mean with a name like Sid Leontowski, what can you do Why not change your name and open a drive in beauty parlor. Call yourself something romantic like El Cid . . . ." Continued next week. Shown at 7:30 p.m. in case you can't wait.

A Look at Fraternities: Part Two

The following story, gathered at the recent National Interfraternity Conference in Pittsburgh, seeks to discuss whether recent publicity that fraternities are raising their scholastic standards and returning to the traditions of their earliest days is true, or just so much lip service for campus organizations which many claim are only social.

The story was written by a senior journalism major from the University of Nebraska, an active member and past president of the Nebraska IFC.

By DONALD L. FERGUSON

Another national fraternity, Chi Phi, was originally patterned after a literary society.

"At early meetings (1854-1900) members were called upon to prepare and deliver papers, essays, poetry, and reviews," noted Carl Gladfelter, Chi Phi executive secretary.

Another large national fraternity, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, according to executive secretary Rex Smith, had as one of its constitutional requirements that "each member of the fraternity choose a subject on which he had to write essays throughout his college course, for the literary meetings of the chapter."

Indicative of this return to scholastic and cultural stimulation and development is a program cited by Dean Clifford.

Syracuse

The residence halls at Syracuse were encouraged to bring lectures, one-act plays, recitals, and other forms of cultural programs into the residence halls each week. This, he noted, was to supplement the original purpose of care, feeding and supervision (along with a small recreation program), making the residence halls into "residential centers."

He noted that this type of program soon caused the fraternities to sit back and take note. The fraternities were "forced" to add this type of program to keep pace with the competition.

"This is the type of program," noted Hallgren, "that more college fraternities should incorporate to live up to their principles."

He added that too many chapters look upon community service projects as a freshman activity held once or twice each year with little or no concern for incorporating this phase of fraternity into a year-around program.

Chapters also invite faculty members to speak to them but often force members to listen or have as their only purpose "good public relations," said Hallgren.

Many Interfraternity Councils (IFC) across the country are taking steps to help their member fraternities to incorporate these activities into their program.

Tennessee

At the University of Tennessee, according to the Adviser to Fraternities, Joseph A. Cecil, the IFC took voluntary action to correct their scholastic record. Through legislation, the IFC levied a penalty on any fraternity failing to make a 2.0 or C average. For the first quarter of failure, the chapter will lose social privileges. If there is a repeat the second quarter, they add the loss of intramurals. If the deficiency continues for a third quarter, the chapter is placed on full activities probation and is suspended from the campus if the record is not improved by the next quarter.

Initiation averages have also been raised on many campuses. In addition, IFC's recently legislated requirements on pledging. At the University of Nebraska, the IFC recently voted that no man may be pledged or participate in rush the first semester unless he was graduated in the upper half of his high school class.

Many campuses, such as Syracuse, have also gone to a program of "deferred rush." Under this type of system, no fraternity may take a pledge class of new members until after the first semester. Most campuses have their pledging period or "rush week' just before the school year starts. Under the Syracuse program, only those students who have proved scholastically capable the first semester may be pledged.

Queen

SU's "1963 Winter Weekend Queen" is to be crowned at the end of the Torch Parade. Contestants are: Gretchen Ehle, Sheryll Barnes, Karen Welsh, Sandra Frye and Ellen Schonbar.

Ice Pageant committee chairmen Linda Colten and Nancy Fryer have announced the best skaters on campus have been enlisted for the show. Featured will be numbers revolving around the theme of the weekend.

This year's Stockingfoot features the traditional sock decorating contest. Dancers are required to check shoes at the door; socks are to be decorated according to the theme of the weekend, "No Biz Like Snow Biz."

Noble Dean

Intermission entertainment centers around Dean Noble and his accordion. Ed Vincent, publicity chairman for the weekend, will act as master of ceremonies.

"I Left my Heart in HL Basement," as arranged by Andrea Fastiggi is the intermission selection of Bob Davis.

Included in the entertainment are a musicial spoof of rushing and a satire based on the recent popularity of adult coloring books.

Lloyd Baskin rounds out the show with "What Kind of Fool am I?" and "Fly me to the Moon." Baskin has sung at the Intrigue Room in Syracuse.

Saturday's schedule features a day of sports, beginning at 10 a.m. with a Giant Slalom at Labrador.

Warmer

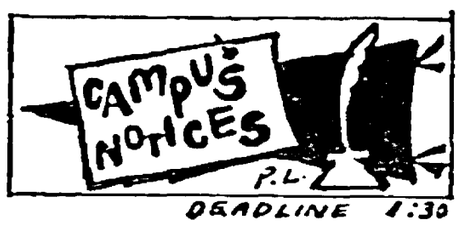
Winter Weekend commitees have invited the entire campus to a party at Skytop Ski Lodge from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. Saturday.

This free admission "Warmer" is sure to begin a new tradition on the Hill. Students attending the "Warmer" can watch intercollegiate jumping events, dance to jazz band music or gather at the lodge fireplace. Refreshments will be served.

The slopes will be open to students with ID cards, after the skiing events, for skiing, tobagganing, or just plain sliding.

Buses are to leave Slocum Hall at 1:30 p.m. and return at 4:30 p.m.

The State Fair Coliseum is the scene for Saturday's Intercollegiate Hockey Game between the SU Hockey Asociation and Rochester Institute of Technology.



Following the game, the rink will be open to all students present.

Free buses for the hockey game will leave the men's Gym at 1 p.m. and return at 4:30 p.m.

InterFraternity Council unanimously accepted the Weekend committee's motion for party hopping Saturday night.

Hill fraternities have been urged to have registered parties, to be closed until 10:30 or 11 p.m. By then, the parties, to follow the theme of the weekend, will be in full swing, and should be opened to other houses.

Closing the weekend Sunday night is the Peter, Paul and Mary Concert. To be held at the Syracuse War Memorial, the concert has been planned by the Winter Weekend Committee in conjunction with the Famous Artist Series.

CAMPUS NOTICES are no longer taken by phone. All notices must be brought to the Daily Orange, prefab 7D, by 1:30 p.m. the day before publication.

cludes the fact that schools act "in loco parentis" (in place of parents) and have waiver clauses.

These clauses, Dr. Sawyer said, enable the university to dismiss a student without giving specific reasons, on the basis that "attendance at the university is a privilege and not a right."

"However," Dr. Sawyer said, "this may not be reasonable, because as students become better qualified they demand more responsibility and leadership, and because the number of married undergraduate students and foreign students is steadily increasing."

Houses may invite rushees to their houses at any time during hours.

Bidding will begin at 8 a.m. on March 6 and will continue to the end of rush at 8 p.m. on March 8.

Rushees are expected to accept or reject bids by calling houses as soon as possible after receiving their bids.

Registration for informal rush will be from 2 to 4:30 p.m. today in the PanHellenic office, Women's Building.

Miss Shire emphasized that freshmen with 1.0 averages who registered for formal rush do not need to register. All upperclass women must register but those who paid the $3 fee to rush last fall do not have to pay again.

Chicago Prof Joins Maxwell in Fall

By DANIEL RITEY
Junior Editor

Syracuse University's faculty will be enhanced by the presence of Dr. Donald Meiklejohn when the University of Chicago professor takes up permanent residence and position here this fall.

Meiklejohn's (pronounced Micklejohn) interest in SU "began in 1955, when Dean Harland Cleveland was here, and when I heard about the reputation of the Maxwell School and its citizenship program."

Dr. DONALD MEIKLEJOHN

"More personally," he said, during a visit here Thursday, "I wanted to leave the big city and live nearer my native New England."

Next year Meiklejohn will teach a junior philosophy course — the philosophy of law — and two citizenship classes: a freshman 1 group and an upperclass cit 10 section.

To Be Prof

Meiklejohn, who will have the status of a full professor, will officially be a member of the philospohy department faculty and at the same time will replace Dr. Michael O. Sawyer as the head of the Maxwell citizenship program.

Dr. Sawyer is taking a sabbatical (one year leave) from the university beginning next fall.

Open Discussion

"I hope to employ the principle of open discussion in my classes next year, because I feel this is the best way to run a class," Meiklejohn commented.

"I seriously think the way to test any institution like this is by the way discussions are run and by the amount of participation that the people make," he said.

Meilklejohn intends to "devote about a third" of his time to philosophy instruction. "At Chicago, I was attached to the social science department and, consequently, could not devote as much time as I wished to philosophy."

"I have observed some classes here in the course of my visits this year and have been impressed by what I've seen and hear in discussion," he said.

Observation

As far as curricular matters go, "this year has been a year of observation for me, but I have no intention of importing Chicago ideas to Syracuse," he said. "I want to learn how the SU system operates and do what I can to help it."

Meiklejohn received his bachelors degree from Wisconsin in 1930, and his doctorate from Harvard in '36. Both degrees were in philosophy.

"I would like to combine philosophy and citizenship in my classes with an emphasis on abstract ideas as they relate to active politics," he stated.

Following a term of service in the intelligence corps and the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency, Meiklejohn taught at Chicago until last year.

AEPhi Elects 1963 Slate

Officers of Alpha Epsilon Phi sorority for 1963 were elected recently.

They are: Myra Adler, president; Judy Robin, vice president; Pamela Bennett, secretary; Bonnie Brigadier, treasurer, Harriet Reisner, rush chairman; Susan Chalkin, social chairman, and Susan Yeager, standards chairman.

SUMMARY: Winter Weekend should begin quite wintery indeed as the remains of the Arctic cold linger through Saturday. The ten inches of snow on the ground will continue to blow and drift about under strong westerly winds.

Skies will remhin generally clear and skiers will find excellent, near-excellent, conditions.

FORECAST: Clear skies and frigid air with blustery WSW winds. Zero temperatures should continue throughout much of this morning, but should rise to the teens by late afternoon. Outlook for the weekend: fair and not as cold tonight and Saturday. Sunday promises to be milder.

Law School Plans Dinner

The College of Law will hold its annual dinner for students and alumni at 8 p.m. Saturday, March 9 in the Hotel Syracuse main ballroom.

Featured speaker will be Prof. Delmar Karlen, director of New York University's Institute on Judicial Administration. His topic is reorganization of the court system.

Law Dean Ralph E. Kharas will present awards to outstanding students. J. Boyd Mullin, a Rochester attorney and member of the law school alumni board, will be master of ceremonies.

General chairman of the dinner is Stanley Messinger. Serving with him are Allen Marmon, arrangements; Carmen Parenti, tickets; Miss Phyllis Orlikoff, program; and Sergei Klinow, publicity.

High - Flying Skier

SKI JUMPING will highlight winter weekend activities. Jumping contests will be held at Skytop Saturday afternoon at 2:30.

Skiing, Hockey Top Weekend Activities

Two of Syracuse's minor sports get their chance to star this weekend as the school's ski and hockey teams swing into action.

The ski squad hit the trails at 10 a.m. today in a slalom competition at the Labrador Ski Center in Truxton. Then today at 2:00 p.m., Skytop will be the site of the cross country races.

Tomorrow the ski activities will continue with a Giant Slalom at Labrador at 10 a.m. followed by jumping at Skytop at 2:00 p.m.

Hockey Game

Saturday is also the big day for the hockey team. The puckmen face off with R.I.T. in a game scheduled for 1:30 p.m. at the Coliseum.

This weekend's ski competition features a Syracuse team that will be going after their third consecutive Winter Weekend victory. Coach Elt Fairbank boasts that this year's squad is the strongest he has had.

His Alpine squad will list captain Bill Dalton, Bob Thorenson, Dave Menotti, Chal Lyons and Gary Ginter.

Dalton, Ginter, Lyons, Thorenson will repeat on the Nortic squad, along with Bob Bryant.

11 Representatives

There will be representatives from 11 eastern schools on hand aiming to give the SU skiers their first defeat in these winter carnival activities.

Saturday the SU hockey club clashes with an R.I.T. squad who, until this past week, was leading the Finger Lakes Collegiate Hockey League. Last weekend in a battle of the unbeatens Brockport nipped the R.I.T.ers to move into undisputed first place.

This past week, Syracuse's team upset first place Brockport to send them back into a first place tie.

Student Support

In a game earlier in the season, R.I.T. swamped the Syracusans, 6-1. This time they're bringing bus loads of R.I.T. students to back them up. They plan on broadcasting the game back to Rochester.

The Syracuse club hopes to bolster their cheering section with a good turnout. They are providing buses that will leave the Men's Gym at 1:00 p.m. Saturday. The Coliseum has been rented for public skating following the ice contest.

Rested Syracuse Five Hosts Boston College

By BERNIE MacCALLUM

What a difference a year makes will be the theme at the Manley Field House tonight when the Orange varsity meets Boston College at 8:30 p.m.

When the two teams met at Boston last year the Orangemen had achieved national recognition with a losing streak of 27 games on the fire. Syracuse shocked the basketball world by upsetting the Eagles for the first Hill win in 28 starts.

A new season, a new coach, a new home court and new players have the Orange on a par with the Eagles this season. Boston is 8-12 with Syracuse having a 6-10 season mark.

Top Gun

Gerry Ward, a 6-4 possible All-American choice, is the top BC scoring gun with a 18.9 average. The senior captain from New York also leads the club in rebounding with 14 per game.

Dave Reynolds, 6-6, and Bob Madigan, 6-5, will team with Ward in the forecourt to put Syracuse at another height disadvantage. George Fitzsimmons, 6-2, and Bob Human, 6-1, will start at guards. Fitzsimmons has had a hot hand of late averaging 18 points in his last four games.

Week Rest

After a week layoff Lewis has as probable starters Phil Schoff, Jim Seaman, Carl Vernick, Herb Foster and Manny Klutchkowski.

Vernick is the leading scorer with a 10.8 average. Schoff is scoring at a 10.7 clip, with Foster averaging 10.3.

The Eagles have won three of their last four games with wins over Fairfield, Tufts and Northeastern University. Boston lost to Fordham, a club which also has defeated Syracuse. Against other common opponents the Orange have beaten Georgetown and Army, while Boston has lost to both teams.

Boston College came within one point of an overtime victory over West Virginia in the ECAC Holiday Festival in Madison Square Garden. In the tourney they went on to beat Holy Cross and lose another one pointer to Penn.

Syracuse's claim to fame is their 68-67 upset over Niagara. The Orangemen have lost their last two contests to LaSalle and Canisius who this week accepted an NIT bid.

Intra-squads

In the prelim game at 6:30 p.m. brother meets brother in an intra-squad game. The frosh squad, a few pine sitters and Chuck Richards will tap off against each other.

The "first" team includes Dave Bing, Frank Nicoletti, Norm Goldsmith, Sam Penceal, Dick Ableman, Rex Trobridge and Larry Bailey.

The other squad includes Richards, Jim Boeheim, Jay

Engineers Lose Grid Contest to Ottawa

Put together a group of engineers, two-and-a-half feet of snow, and a cold day in February and you've got the ingredients for a football game.

However, the recipe didn't add up to victory for two dozen Syracuse University engineering students who recently journeyed to Ottawa, Canada.

The locals dropped an 18-0 decision to the University of Ottawa School of Engineering in the first annual Chrome Bowl game.

Ottawa, paced by varsity gridmen Pete Sarantos and Glen Robinson, scored a touchdown in the opening period and added two more scores in the second half.

Syracuse apparently scored a TD in the third quarter on a pass from Vince Turano to Craig Bender, but the tally was nullified by an offside penalty.

Coached by Orange halfback John Humphreys, the SU engineers threw up a strong defense against the more experienced Canadians.

Bernie Eisenfeld, Ray Cardillo, Jim Kazel and Ray Caputo (former Frankfort Falcon star) stood out on the forward wall.

Leading rusher from Syracuse was halfback Bill Sabis. Don Bender, Lloyd Jacks and Bill Davis topped the pass receivers.

SU Swimmers Face Colgate, Cortland St.

Coach Ted Webster's swimmers, after dropping two consecutive meets, seek the winning channel this weekned with a pair of meets. Syracuse hosts Columbia Friday night at Orange Pool and travels to Colgate Saturday.

The Orange swimmers hold a 4-3 record and Coach Webster needs victories in both of these meets to enter the New York State Swimming Championships with a winning record. The state tourney wil lbe held March 8 and 9 at Orange Pool.

Syracuse opened the season defeating NYU and Buffalo, then dropped a meet to the East's leading team, Cornell. Syracuse then won another pair over Lehigh and Cortland before succumbing to a strong Pittsburgh squad. The Orangemen then travelled to Williams and accepted another setback.

Highriding Wrestlers Seek 8th at Colgate

By JIM DINE

Fresh from a solid thumping of Penn State the Orange grapplers are headed for their first undefeated season in Syracuse's history. After a few anxious moments against State last week, S.U.'s wrestlers are now awaiting the invasion of the Colgate Red Raiders tonight at 8:00 in the Archbold Gym.

Colgate poses as little threat to Syracuse's unblemished record, but only a more than respectable showing will bring a victory. Colgate does not wrestle in the same class as Syracuse, but they should give Coach Scandura's team a workout.

Coach Scandura will not be sticking with his usual lineup, but he is moving most of his light weight men up one class. There may be a few intra squad matches in this meet mainly because Colgate does not wrestle at 191-pounds. In ECAC rules a 191 pound match is required, and that is why in previous matches against such teams as Penn State and Pittsburgh there has been competition in this class. Colgate may also forfeit a couple of the light weight matches. These will come in the 130 and 137 pound classes, which will set up a few intra-squad matches.

To go along with its undefeated record Syracuse has been named as the third best wrestling team in the country. They have reached their highest rating on this list this year as they moved up from last week's No. 4 standing. Only Oklahoma State and Iowa State are seeded higher.

Substitution

Since most of the light weight wrestlers have moved up one class, the 123 pound class usually secured by Terry Haise will feature Bob Murray. Bob has seen limited action this year, and his last outing was down at Ithaca. Terry Haise will wrestle in the 130 pound class even if the match is forfeited. Coach Scandura has scheduled Terry's teammate Gene Inch to step in and wrestle Terry providing the match is forfeited. Sonny Greenhalgh will be working out of the 137 pound class against Lou Bay of Colgate. Sonny will be looking for a victory after he was just defeated by Bob Haney of Penn State. At 147 pounds will be Syracuse's Jim Murrin against Colgate's Scull.

The best match of the night looms in the 157 pound class where Dick Slutzky opposes Young of Colgate. This will be the fifth meeting between these two wrestlers who have opposed each other since high school days.

Young who has lost all four matches to Slutszky by real close scores will undoubtedly be out for revenge. In the 167 pound class Lister will meet S.U.'s George Reidner and in the 177 pound class Captain Gary Sirota will face Colgate's best wrestler, Hilgendorn who defeated Lou Roberts as a freshman.

It will either be Bo Nance or Gerry Everling in the unlimited class against Colgate's Jorgensen. If Everling wrestles in the unlimited Coach Scandura would like to have Bo Nance wrestle 265 pound Tom Wilhelm of Syracuse. Wilhelm a real rugged football player has not been on the mats too much and Scandura would like to have a looksee at this big fellow.

These next two meets will be warm-ups for the big showdown in Annapolis on March 8-9. As Coach Scandura remarked "This tournament is the whole season in a nutshell."

Dr. Donahue Named Utica College Head By Chancellor Tolley

Dr. J. Kenneth Donahue, who joined the faculty of Syracuse University's Utica College three years after its founding in 1946, has been named president of the college by Chancellor William P. Tolley.

He succeeds Dr. James W. Harrison, who resigned Aug. 1 to become executive assistant in charge of graduate education on the Hill.

Dr. Donahue has been UC acting dean since August.

President

Chancellor Tolley said that the position was changed from dean to president because of the college's increased size and the chief executive's added duties and responsibilities.

Dr. Donahue earned his bachelor's degree at the University of Iowa an dhis master's and doctorate degees at Princeton University.

He served two years as a research associate at Prineton and was chairman of the biology department at the College of Charleston (S.C.) before joining the Utica factulty.

ISO Festival of Nations Starts International Week

The Festival of Nations, 7:30 p.m. today in Crouse College auditorium, will open the International Students Organization International Week.

Fourteen groups will dance and sing in their traditional native costumes. The groups in order of their presentations are: Latin America, Samoa, New Zealand, Indonesia, Philipines, Korea, India, the Arab nations, Africa, Israel, Hungary, Latvia, Scandinavia and the United States. Each national group will have approximately 10 minutes to perform and each continental group will have about 15 minutes.

Chairman is Hasintongan L. Tobing of Indonesia with co-chairman Evelyn Dinsdale of New Zealand.

Syracuse-in-Asia will co-sponsor a debate at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday in Maxwell Auditorium. The topic will be "Resolved: That a democratic system is not suitable for new independent nations." Chairman of the debate is Carol Eaton.

On Wednesday fraternity and sorority houses will be opened to international students for traditional exchange dinners. The chairman of this event is Linda Stimson.

The French consul, Ramon Laporte, will speak on the European Common Market at 7:30 p.m. on Thursday in Maxwell Auditorium. There will be refreshments and a question and answer period after the lecture.

Most of the 77 national groups represented on campus will participate in Friday's World Fair. The group will display food, art, and clothes of their native lands. An international fashion show at 8 p.m. in Sims Hall will be included. There will be a 10 cent charge for the fair. The chairman of the World's Fair is Lisa Lovell.

All the students manning the booths will answer questions about their native lands.

A dance, under the chairmanship, of Mary Roberts, will be held at 9 p.m. on Saturday in Sims Hall with Bucky Straub's quartet playing. Tickets will be 25 cents per person collected at the door.

Snow . . . .

WINTER WEEKEND 1963——and it was cold! Snow sculpture competition came off as planned, with Alpha Chi Rho fraternity, 131 College Pl., the winner. "She Should Have Danced All Night" was their consolation to a snow-girl and her baby carriage. Delta Upsilon fraternity, 126 Ostrom Ave., second, presented a nude and shivering? girl——"Whatever Lola Wants, Lola Gets." Delta Gamma sorority and Phi Gamma Delta fraternity pooled efforts on DG's front lawn, 901 Walnut Ave., for third place, sculpting "Schultz and Dooley" beer steins, as "The Student's Prince.

Installation Starts Soon For New Campus Lights

By BEV LURIA
Junior Editor

"Good lighting discourages delinquency of any kind."

This philosophy stated by James V. Latorre, assistant to SU Vice President for Administration and Research Clark D. Ahlberg, is the major reason for a new campus lighting program Mercury vapor bulbs (Luminaire) will be installed on campus in a five phase program starting this spring, Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds Olgean S. Ohab told the Daily Orange.

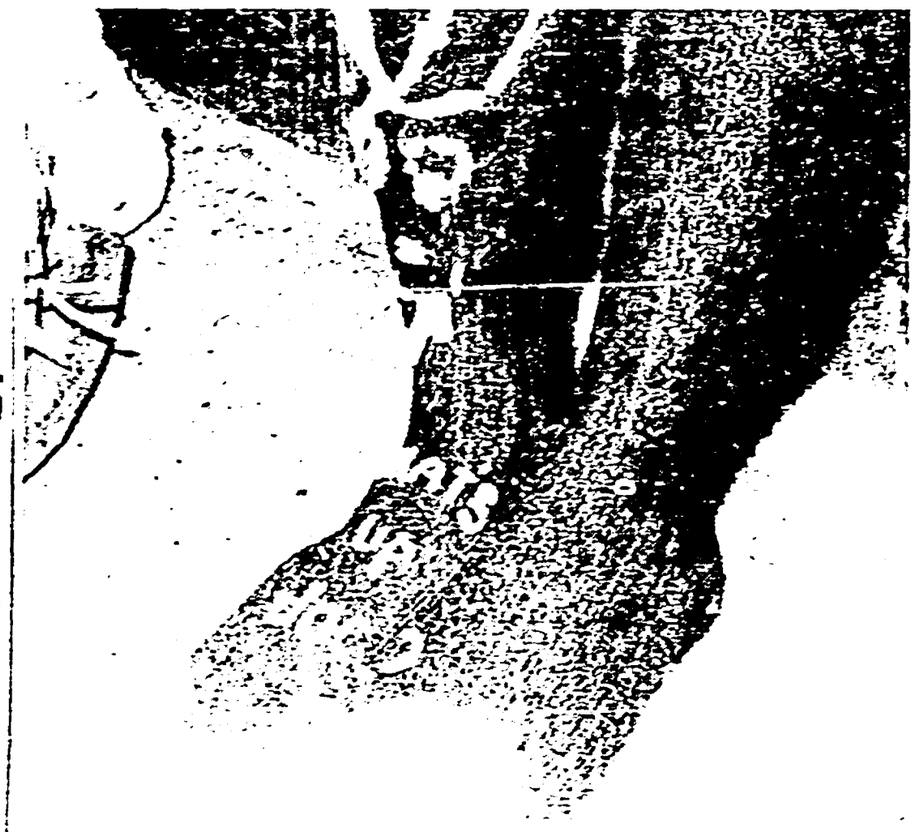
First Phase

"We will start, the initial phase, lighting the area from the corner of South Crouse avenue and University place, north of Maxwell Hall and partially north of the Hall of Languages, as soon as the ground thraws," Ohab said.

This phase to be installed by Buildings and Grounds, will extend to University avenue, Ohab added.

The new arc-shaped lights similar to those the city installed between the Ambassador Apartments and Walnut avenue will be "14 feet high with 175 watt bulbs or 25 feet high with 206 watt bulbs, depending upon their location," he said.



Better Lighting

These lights will make the campus safer by discouraging prowlers and providing better illumination for pedestrians, Ohab said.

As the university appropriates additional funds for new lighting, Ohab said, four additional phases will be carried out. These are:

1. Continue lighting eastward toward College place.
2. Illumination of the main quadrangle.
3. From the quad to Sims and Bowne Halls and the Women's Building.
4. The main library, the men's gym, Steele Hall and the area behind Crouse College toward the Law College.

. . . . And Socks

It was shoes off, everyone, Friday night at Drumlins Country Club for the annual Stockingfoot dance. Sock contest winners were: first, Robert Scharff of University College and Catherine Sherman, SU junior, with a four-section, soda straw-and-cardboard "Carousel;" second, senior Lynn Madden and sophomore Linda Kresge presented "What's Up, Doc?" Miss Kresge sported a rabbit, while Madden displayed a carrot with a bunny-bite in it.

Political Fever Hits SU Campus

CAP

Because three political parties offer keener competition for campus posts, the president of Campus Alliance Party hopes the rumor that United States party is folding is false.

Ronald Brzezinski said Friday that more of the five houses in US rumored to be leaving the party had applied to join CAP.

"The only houses which have approached us are Gamma Phi Beta sorority and Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity," he said. "Membership for Gamma Phi

InternationalWeek

Today marks the beginning of one of the campus' annual atractions—International Week. This yearly event sponsored by the International Students Organization is one of which all conected can be proud.

This is the week when the numerous International students from all parts of the world bring the traditions and customs of their native lands to the community of Syracuse University.

All parties are the better for the merging of the many traditions. But we think Syracuse comes out the biggest winner.

Unfortunately, there are times when the international students on this campus are ignored and forgotten. They travel long distances to partake of the educational benefits of Syracuse but they also seek more than this. A good bit of learning comes from living.

In their case, the living and learning together with students from this country can be a wonderful experience for them. Sadly enough, they often fail to gain this experience because the native students just won't go out of their way to become friends.

But International Week is a beginning toward the mutual understanding of foreign students and Americans. Here in the festive atmosphere of this most festive week new friendships can be made and dull lives can be brightened.

To the committe and participants of International Week, we wish every success. To the student body we urge attendance and a first effort at understanding our fellow students from distant lands.

We all shall gain.

$100 Idea

The last two issues of the Daily Orange have carried letters referring to a contest of sorts(we believe) entitled the "$100 Idea." Earlier in the year we had seen some of these slips but had forgotten about them.

These two letters make us believe there is more to this than just a stunt. The letters came through campus mail and so we suspect a university connection.

The Daily Orange would appreciate anyone with information about this series of letters to contact the editor.

Who couldn't use $100?

ALTERNATIVES

Another Shine, Mister?

By Ron Corwin

"And there is no Negro living in America who has not felt, briefly or for long periods, with anguish sharp or dull, in varying degrees and to varying effect, simple, naked and unanswerable hatred; who has not wanted to smash any white face he may encounter in a day, to violate, out of motives of the cruelest vengence, their women, to break the bodies of all white people and bring them low, as low as that dust into which he himself has been and is being trampled; no Negro, finally, who has not had to make his own precarious adjustment to the 'nigger' who surrounds him and to the 'nigger' in himself."

"Notes of a Native Son"
by James Baldwin.

"No, mister, I don't remember you but if you say I shined your shoes a few weeks back, well, I'm not goin'to argue. I can't remember every one and you know what you say about all of us lookin' alike — well believe it, mister, you all look alike to us.

"But anyway you tell me that I was talkin' to you last time and I said some things that you were interested in. You say I told you how it feels to be a 'Negro.' Well, then either it wasn't me you were talkin' to (sometimes you get us confused with one another) or you didn't understand what I was sayin'. I don't know what it's like to be a 'Negro.' You ask Ralph Bunche that; he'll tell you what it's like to be a 'Negro.' I only know what it feels like to be a 'nigger.'

"You see, mister, well, it's like Ralph Bunche, he isn't a colored man. He's white. Now I know you gonna say that his skin isn't white. But I got some things to say about that. First off, a man's skin ain't what makes him a colored man. It's a lot more 'n that.

"Mister, Ralph Bunche's skin is the only thing about him that isn't white. Same for Thurgood Marshall and Robert Weaver and Jackie Robinson and a whole mess of 'em. A guy like Robinson, for instance. He's the vice president of some kind of big coffee company and he's got a big office with secretaries and all. And he's always wearin' a tie and jacket. Even on weekends when they show pictures of him home with his family, he's got a tie and jacket on. They even invite him to parties to make sure that there' s'one' there.

"But they makin' a big mistake because Robinson ain't a colored man. He's white. I mean just look who he wanted to win the last election for president. He was rootin' for Nixon. Now this man, Kennedy, he's no great shakes. You know what I mean. He makes a lot of noise in those speeches of his but if that guy Meredith didn't decide to take the chance of havin' himself killed, Kennedy wouldn't have anythin' to shoot off his mouth about in civil rights.

"But Nixon would have been even worse and Robinson wanted him elected. Robinson should've stuck to stealin' bases. So when you tell me that Robinson is a colored man I say it ain't so. And I say the same thing for Bunche. Be honest, mister. Does Ralph Bunche have natural rhythm? Is Ralph Bunche a great lover? Hell no! And we both know it. There isn't a thing colored about Bunche except his skin. Now that's enough for some people but not for the 'liberals.'

"They say, 'It's not the color of a man's skin that counts.' It sure isn't. It's how white he is under that skin. And for all intents and purposes Ralph Bunche is white — just like you.

"Understand me, mister? Do you see what I'm trying to say? It's simply that Ralph Bunche is no more like me than you are. And, mister, I don't have to tell you how different we are. I'll let the nervous sweat on your brow answer that. Come to think of it we even sweat for different reasons. You and Bunche sweat from nerves and you and Bunche maybe'll get ulcers. But I sweat from work and I get calouses and blisters.

"Gimme the other shoe, mister, and I'll explain some more why Bunche ain't a colored man. New shoes, huh?

"I really spoke on this before. Could you see Ralph Bunche playin' the bongos? No—because you won't let him (that's one reason which I already talked about) and more important to me he doesn't want to. Now you may say that's the same thing but I don't think it is.

"Not only have you taken from Bunche and the others everything that made them 'colored' but they have wanted to get rid of those same things. So you can make them white—that is white enough—because they want to become that way. Well some of us are ready to make that sacrifice and become white and that's how some of us get 'accepted'.

"But others of us aren't going to do that. I like playin' the bongos and I'm teachin' my boy how to play the bongos and believe-it-or-not mister, I have to teach him how to play 'em. He wasn't born knowin' how. And this 'll throw ya' but I could even teach you how to beat those drums if you'd let yourself go for a little bit and feel the music instead of thinkin' it.

"You see the thing is you gotta feel things, but I ain't got the time to talk about that now. I'll tell you about feelin' the next time. The thing I want to say now is that some of us think things about the Negro culture (or what you call the 'nigger' in us) are worth saving and being proud of.

"And there's a group called the Black Muslims who tell us that we shouldn't be ashamed to be Negroes. That we should be proud to be Negroes. That's part of what they say that the white man ain't ever gonna' let us be free. They say that the only way we'll be free is if we have our own land. And guys like Robinson and Bunche and them, well, they can be partly free if they promise not to be 'niggers'—if they become white. But let's face it, mister, even Bunche can't go into a restaurant in the south or live in some neighborhoods in the north.

"Malcom X, he's one of the heads of the Black Muslims and, man, you should hear this guy talk. He's got the whole argument of history on his side. He says, 'Brothers, you are not free! The Bill of Rights is for whites only! You were not free yesterday; you are not free today; and you will not be free tomorrow. And at this rate you will not be free in another hundred years.'

"He says, 'There has been nine percent integration in almost nine years since that so-called 'historic Supreme Court decision'. Nine per cent, brothers, nine percent of the Negro children who went to segregated schools nine years ago now go to integrated schools. Ninety-one percent are still segregated. And who says integration is the answer? Is the Negro free in the north? The answer is No, brother. No, No, No!'

"Now some guy up at the university hill, mister, he's at a committee meeting where they're talkin' about bringing speakers to Syracuse. He says that they ain't bringin' Malcom X 'cause, he's just plain controversial and ain't constructive'.

"Well, mister I don't know too much but it would seem to me that that is what you have speakers for. I mean if they're controversial then that's why you have 'em. How can you deal with their ideas if you don't even know what they're sayin'. And as for Malcom X. Don't tell me he ain't constructive.

"There's lots of people who say that ain't so. The Black Muslims get more members every year. They're gettin' stronger and stronger and more people are listenin' to what the Muslims say 'cause we lookin' around and we see that as the only alternative—our only chance to really live. Now don't go tellin' me Malcom X ain't constructive.

"But some one up on the hill, he says that Malcom X ain't constructive. Well for him the Muslims aren't but for me they are. That guy in the committee don't know what the hell he's talking about. I'm willin' to bet that he knows as much about the Black Muslims as you did when you got up here on this shine seat.

"And even if he did know about them (and I'm sure he didn't 'cause if he did he would never have said those things about them) but even if he did know, who is he to decide for the rest of the students up there who they shouldn't? He don't even know what's goin' on and he's makin' decisions for you. And the real tragedy is that when he does that he makes decisions for me too—he doesn't give me a choice. He proves what Malcom X says is so by not letting Malcom X speak.

"Listen, mister, there are

HELEN HAYES and MAURICE EVANS

Maurice Evans

Maurice Evans, acclaimed as one of our foremost Shake - spearan actors, has included television, musical comedy and film roles in his versatile acting career.

Coming to America in 1935 from England to appear as Romeo to Katherine Cornell's Juliet, he later played Falstaff in "Henry IV Part I" and "Hamlet".

One of the first major stars to recognize the possibilities of television, Evans has produced and acted in several Shakespearean plays on the Hallmark Hall of Fame, including "Taming of the Shrew," and Macbeth" with Judith Anderson.

Mr. Evans served for three years as head of troop entertainment for the army in the Central Pacific. He was also in the movie "Gilbert and Sullivan" and the musical "Tenderloin".

Helen Hayes

A legend in her own time, actress Helen Hayes will appear in "A Program for Two Players" 8:30 p.m., March 5, in the George L. Manley Fieldhouse. She and actor Maurice Evans will present selections from Shakespeare before an expected audience of about 3600.

Although Miss Hayes has not been seen in many Shakespearean roles she has created numerous characters on the Broadway stage and in Hollywood.

Miss Hayes was hailed as superb in "What Every Woman Knows (1925). In "Victoria Regina" (1935), perhaps her most memorable role, she aged 80 years in two and a half hours.

She appeared as Harriet Beecher Stowe in 1944 while Maxwell Anderson wrote "Mary of Scotland" expressly for her in 1933. As the tragic Mary Stuart Miss Hayes became a star.

Making her professional debut at the age of 5, Miss Hayes was honored on the 50th anniversary of her stage career when New York's Fulton Theatre was renamed Helen Hayes Theater.

Off - stage Miss Hayes also leads an active life. She has been a national chairman of the woman's division of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, women's chairman of the National Citizens for Eisenhower, and past president of the American Theater Wing, among other organizations.

Miss Hayes was married to the late author and playwrite Charles MacArthur, and has an adopted son, the actor James MacArthur.

UP IN THE AIR

The Democracy of Video

By Leslie Berg

Up in the air went the Daily Orange editorial this week in protest of the cancellation of the Merv Griffin Show. The reverberations of the network action ran rampant in the editorial offices of the DO. Said a vehement writer, ". . .It is frightening to us that our nation's housewives would rather see 'John's Mother's Cousin's Other Milkman' rather than some valid and enlightening entertainment."

The meaning of the editorial was clear. The Daily Orange had set itself up as the giver of standards for the television audience.

"Shocked and upset" the irate critics of daytime television were even more incensed by the soap opera replacements for the Merv Griffin Show. Because soap opera does not come up to the cultural standards they have set for the broadcasting media.

I am not surprised by the outburst. This is not the first time that critics have damned tv programming. Most "intellectuals" are fond of saying that they never watch television. It isn't up to their standards. Others with very distinct ideas of what they would like to see on television never choose the high level programs they recommend when doing their own viewing.

We don't have to look very far. Just observe the viewing habits of the cultural elite at Syracuse University.

Television is the most democratic of all the mass media. It operates very much like a political system. Through polls and rating services the viewers vote for their favorite programs. They get ones they want, not necessarily what some higher authority on culture and standards thinks they should have.

And this is the way it should be. As in political elections, the winners cannot be contested because they appealed to emotions rather than intellect or used rhetoric instead of logic. More people voted for Kennedy — he won.

Fewer housewives watched Merv Griffin — he lost. Maybe Griffin appealed to the wrong audience. Maybe he had the wrong time slot. Maybe the people who would have enjoyed his approach felt themselves above daytime tv.

All of the analysis in the world never changed an election verdict. It doesn't change the fate of a tv show either. right to criticize of they didn't participate. And it doesn't change the right of the viewer to select a program for whatever reason he or she wishes.

Television is a democratic media. It speaks to anyone who is willing to listen. Because of its importance and widespread effects we have a right to set up standards against obscenity and indecency. But we have no right to set a cultural level.

The day we decide broadcasting must be for enlightenment and education rather than entertainment — the day we get rid of all the soap operas, Chester A. Rileys and Marshal Dillons because they don't meet the standards we wish to set —that's the day I get "shocked and upset".

And frightened, Daily Orange, very frightened.

A Look at Fraternities: Part Three

The following story, gathered at the recent National Interfraternity Conference in Pittsburgh, seeks to discuss whether recent publicity that fraternities are raising their scholastic standards and returning to the traditions of their earliest days is true, or just so much lip service for campus organizations which many claim are only social.

The story was written by a senior journalism major from the University of Nebraska, an active member and past president of the Nebraska IFC.

By DONALD L. FERGUSON

There are still the "gimmick" approaches to raise scholarship in individual chapters and national fraternities — national trophies, bean and steak dinners, recognition certificates, reduced initiation rates, and many others— all in an effort to give more than lip service to the need for good scholarship. But the term "scholarship," in the original sense, is much more than good grades, as noted by our knowledge of the early fraternity meetings.

Is there, then, a new trend to comply not only with aiding and encouraging better classroom scholarships, but to give the student these extra benefits?

On many campuses, according to Alpha Tau Omega national executive secretary Stewart Daniels, it already appears that "our chapter houses are becoming more of a forum for an exchange of ideas."

"Libraries are being upgraded, grants are being made from national fraternity foundations to increase library facilities — all (with the purpose of) looking toward making the fraternity a more vital adjunct of the institution," he added.

Many chapters are starting to adopt parts of the Syracuse plan and are incorporating the idea of making the fraternity a second classroom.

Obligations

"In addition to an astute awareness to the purpose for being in college — education — the fraternity should never lose track of its other obligations to the individual member," said John Nolon, former IFC president of the University of Nebraska.

What are these other obligations?

According to one national fraternity's pledge manual, the fraternity should aid in the development of good manners; teach the democratic process, instilling an understanding of the majority rule concept.

"We can teach you," stated the manual, "how to study, how to organize study; how to get maximum benefits from your professors; how to broaden your education. Do not think we can teach you how to avoid work; we can't open your head and pour it in."

A fraternity, the manual explained, is a business which is operated by the members. One chapter cited in the manual handles more than $75,000 yearly, operates $200,000 worth of property, buys food, supplies and furniture, has a housemother and a staff.

In addition, the manual states, the fraternity should teach you to get along with people, how to dress cleanly, neatly, and presentably, and how to be a gracious winner and a good loser.

Many fraternity leaders, administrators, and undergraduate IFC officers indicated at the NIC meeting that the college fraternity can do these things for the individual. They also seemed to be of the general opinion that the fraternity is not a dying institution.

Healthy Corpse

"If fraternities are dying, they are the healtheist corpses you ever saw," stated Joel Reynolds, a leader in the NIC.

To back up his statement, he referred to the recent NIC expansion committee report which indicated that there is an immediate need for 500 more chapters on campuses across the country.

The report also indicates that undergraduate membership in fraternities over the past five years has inreceased from 1,578,870 to over 2,500,000.

"The question of survival is still a relevant one, however," according to Nebraska's Hallgren. "Many chapters have not yet grasped the changing role of fraternity; many lack mature leadership, many lack a purpose."

Richard Fletcher, executive secretary of Sigma Nu fraternity, commented that fraternities will survive, the same as any human institution, if it is "useful, purposeful and alert."

Fletcher continued, "We started as fraternities, took on hotel and cafe functions, went into the club business in a big way, and are still in the club business primarily. . .with only casual concern for hotel and cafe and little or no emphasis upon fraternity, our original business."

"Now the institutions are doing the hotel, cafe and club business for the masses better than we can, leaving us only the fraternity business, a field in which—happily—we have no competition."

"We'll survive," he concluded, "if we're useful; we'll flourish if we're purposeful; and will insure our future if we're alert. Our future in the sixties, as at any time, will depend on whether or not we are in fact what we say we are."

nineteen million Negroes in America right now and every day more of us are listenin' to the Black Muslims. Even though you don't want to listen 'cause you don't like what they say, I'm gonna listen. They're tellin' me that I don't have to become white and gain partial freedom. They say that if I set up my own society with my own land for black men only, then I'll have real freedom.

"And since I listen' you better listen too. You can't hide your head like an ostrich for another 300 years. We have been angry for a long time and we ain't done anythin' about it. But now we want action—not token stuff. We want a real change—a change below the surface. So don't bury your head, mister, 'cause if you do its not only gonna be my head that rolls like its been doin' for 300 years. No sir, very soon its gonna be your head, too.

"What I mean, mister, is that I see only two ways out of this thing. Either I ain't gonna be here to shine your shoes or you ain't gonna be here to have your shoes shined.

Result: All 3-speed manual transmissions in Ford-built cars with V-8's now are fully synchronized in each forward gear

To get more "go" in low, Ford engineers were asked to upgrade the conventional 3-speed transmission to give drivers more control in all three forward gears—to make "low" a driving gear—and they tackled the problem imaginatively.

Their achievement, another Ford First, is the only U.S. 3-speed manual transmission with all three forward gears fully synchronized! No need now to come to a complete stop when you shift into low—and no clashing gears! It lets you keep more torque on tap for negotiating sharp turns and steep grades. It makes driving more flexible, more pleasurable.

Another assignment completed and another example of how engineering leadership at Ford provides fresh ideas for the American Road.

'Playmate' on Campus Thursday

LYNN KARROL

Playboy magazine's December 1961 "Playmate" will be on campus Thursday.

Lynn Karroll, 23, is the first prize in a contest sponsored by Whitehall Tobacco Co.

The contest is open only to Hill fraternities.

Miss Karrol will visit four houses, to be announced later this week, for lunch and will be at Tecumseh Club from 2-4 p.m. Thursday.

Interfraternity Council approved the contest at its meeting Wednesday. The contest is the first of its kind on any campus.

Miss Karrol will be guest of honor at a party sponsored by the wining fraternity.

Three Playboy party kits, six jazz records and six year subscriptions to Playboy magazine will be consolation prizes.

Miss Karrol has been an airplane pilot since she was 16, and is a skydiver and parachute jumper.

She is a fashion and television model and hopes to go into movie acting.

For further information on the contest, fraternities should contact the campus Playboy representative, Michael Lehnering, ext. 2937 and 2938.

ROTC to Choose Queen

Army and Air Force ROTC cadets will meet at a special queen convocation at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in Marshall Auditorium to choose the Military Ball queen.

In past years, cadets voted for the queen after looking at photographs of the candidates.

The seven candidates will stage a 40-minute mock court martial at the convocation. Cadets will then vote by written ballot.

Finalists include Judith Miller, Day 2, a junior majoring in special education; Judith Pool, sponsored by Haven Hall, sophomore in Liberal Arts; Carol Rondeau, Smith Cottage, sophomore in liberal arts; and Barbara Smyth, Sigma Kappa sorority, a junior illustration major.

Other finalists are Gail Soltysik, Flint 2C, a freshman in liberal arts; Joan Spaet, Shaw 4C, a junior elementary education major; and Sally Wiley, Alpha Phi sorority, a senior majoring in English.

The contest and the Military Ball are sponsored by the Cadet Association.

The queen will receive a crown, an expense-paid weekend for two in New York City and gifts, from local merchants.

Cadets are required to wear ROTC uniforms to the convocation.

COUNTY EXEC.

Eugene Nickerson, Nassau County executive, will speak at the Young Democrats meeting on March 7, Young Dems President Vincent Monterosso has announced.

John English, Nassau County Democratic chairman, will also speak at the meeting.

12 to Appear with Brand

A total of 12 students will appear with Oscar Brand in a folk concert Friday at the University Regent Theater.

Six are Syracuse University students; four come from Utica College.

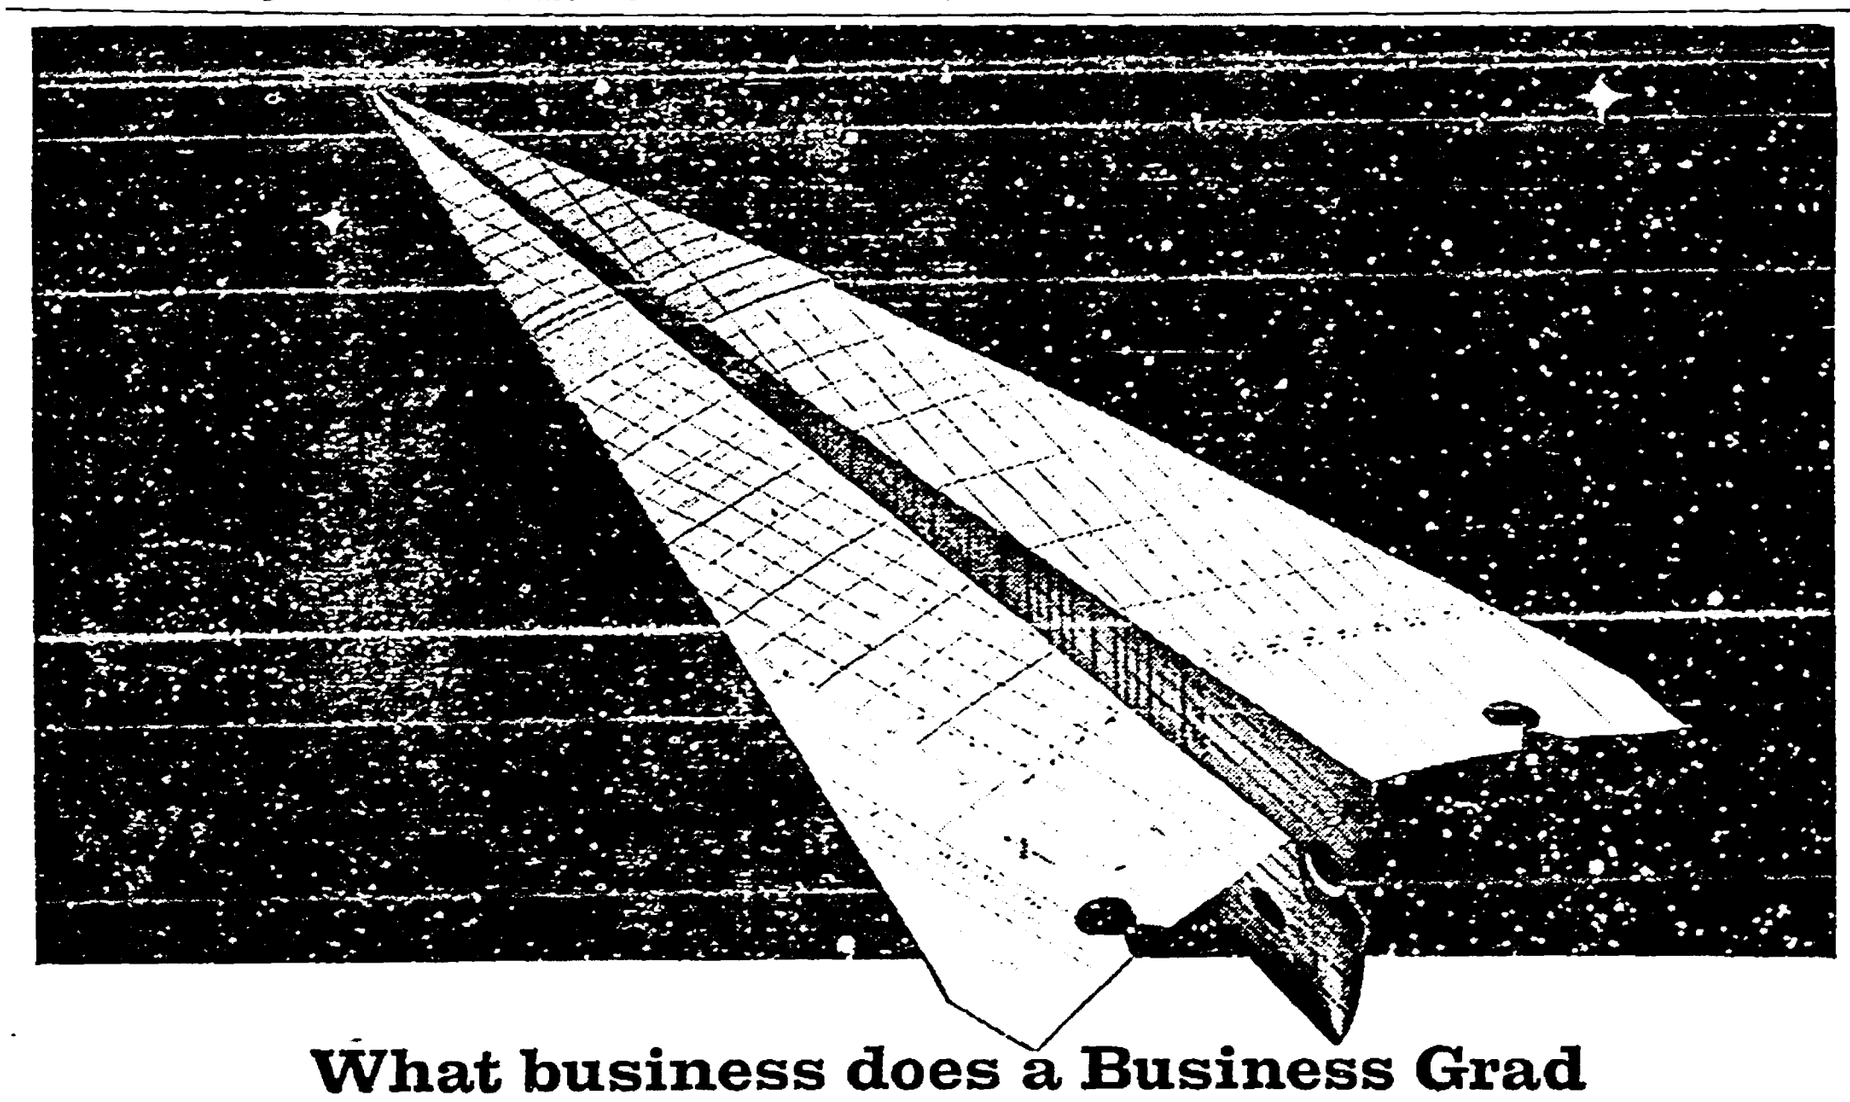
The Utica students are a folk group, known as the Gallows Singers. They are F. Kurt Rolfes (12-string guitar), a public relations major from Rome; Barry Damsky (guitar), a psychology major from Utica; David Sumberg (guitar), a physics major from Utica; and Lynn Jones (vocal), an English major from Whitesboro.

Tickets for the Oscar Brand concert will be distributed on a first come, first served basis 9:30-11:30 a.m. and 1-5 p.m. Friday at the Corner Store. Tickets are free to students with ID cards and are $1.50 for the general public.

Miss Jones and Damsky are sophomores. Rolfes is a freshman, Sumberg a junior.

The Brand concert will also feature two folk groups from the Hill. Three brothers from Alpha Chi Rho fraternity, calling themselves the Crows, will appear. They are Robert Chaffer, a sophomore industrial design major from Syracuse; Robert Goettinger, an English major from Syracuse; and Jerry Grandy, a sophomore radio-tv major from East Aurora, N.Y.

The second SU group consists of singer Audrey Elayne Freeman, a liberal arts freshman from Syracuse, who will be backed by Steven Moore, a freshman architecture student from Greensburg, Pa. and Ralph Stockmaer, a freshman forester from Norwich, Vt.



The three soloists are Loraine Heyman, a junior French major from Bayone; Elaine Meltzer, a senior English major from Syracuse; and Morty Jacoby, a liberal arts freshman from Staten Island.

A subsequent student folk program, featuring other student singers and groups, is being planned by Burton Fink, SU Bookstore manager and promoter of the Brand Concert.

These 12 were chosen from about 30 students who auditioned last week.

What business does a Business Grad have in Aerospace?

Chances are, you know that Aerospace is America's fastest-growing major industry—and Curtiss-Wright is one of the leaders.

Chances are, too, that Engineer friends of yours are considering the Wright Aeronautical Division of Curtiss-Wright.

But do you know that Wright Aeronautical offers equally promising opportunities to Business Administration, Economics, Finance and Commerce grads?

It works this way. You receive initial assignments in corporate or division planning, financial analysis, auditing, budget, cost, systems, tax administration or accounting.

These—and seminars conducted by corporate officers—give you individual orientation in company operations and policy.

At the end of the first year, when you and the company know each other, you get your permanent assignment. Prospects include managerial and staff positions with the corporate office, divisions and subsidiaries. And you're rated annually for the jobs you've done—and the jobs you're ready to do.

See why the future's bright at Curtiss-Wright for qualified Business grads? Why not see where you fit in. Our Interviewer will be glad to help you.

Get this free booklet at your College Placement Office. It tells about Wright Aeronautical—and you.

We'll be interviewing on your campus February 27

'Music Grads Competent'

By STEPHANIE BRILL

"I would say that graduates from Syracuse's School of Music are as competent as those of Juillard and Oberlin Conservatories or of the Eastman School of Music," observed Dr. Kirk Ridge, director of the School of Music.

With a smile the deep-voiced professor explained, "Our school is the oldest degree-granting college of music in the country. Formerly a part of the College of Fine Arts, which included both the art and architecture colleges, the School of Music found an identity of its own when the three branches separated."

Alumni

"This school has produced many distinguished alumni," reminisced the sleek-figured mentor. Brilliantly-white hair is perhaps the only clue to the 33 years that he has taught piano here. Before he replaced Director Alexander Capurso in 1961 he saw many students graduate to become leaders in the world of music.

One graduate, Loren Driscoll, has appeared with the New York City Center Opera and is a leading tenor with the Opera Society of Washington, D.C. He has recorded several Stravinsky operas, directed by the composer, for Columbia Records.

Carlisle Floyd, another alumnus in the field of opera, has had several of his operas presented by the New York City Opera Company, among them "Susannah" which appeared in the 1959 Brussel's World Fair as the most representative opera by an American composer.

"Head of the composition department at the University of Southern California, Halsey Stevens makes us proud of his piano works, chamber music and symphonies which have been performed by major orchestras," Ridge continued.

Summer Session

Another alumnus, Robert Goldsand, is a noted pianist who will be guest artist during the perspective summer session. Having performed in the new Philharmonic Hall in New York last November, he will give three recitals and a lecture here this July.

No stranger himself to the concert stage, Dr. Ridge plans to appear as soloist with the Mansfield Symphony orchestra of Mansfield, Ohio rendering Liszt's Concerto in E Flat on May 5.

A love for music—his favorite kind being "the one I'm playing or listening to at the moment"—makes this former infantryman particularly suited for his position. His two god-children are currently attending a college of music.

This year 125 graduate and undergraduates are enrolled as full time students in addition to about 250 part-time students. They achieve either a joint A.B. degree from the College of Liberal Arts and the School of Music or they take the professionally-oriented music program leading to the Bachelor of Music degree.

'Unique'

Since 1889 the school has occupied its present castle-like building, John Crouse Memorial College. Syracuse became a charter member of the National Association of Schools of Music in 1928 and is accredited by the Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

"The school is unique," Dr. Ridge explained "because of the celebrated Holtkemp classic style organ in our auditorium. That auditorium also houses a series of 18 Sunday afternoon concerts throughout the years."

Teaching

A graduate of the Oberlin Conservatory of Music he later studied with Stokowski and Eisenberger in New York and Vienna, concluding his stay in Europe with a concert tour of her major cities. After teaching at Oberlin for a year Ridge came here where he has coordinated his teaching duties with many national concert tours.

Other distinguished alumni include: Bruce Foote, a baritone who starred for about 14 years on the Chicago Theater of the Air; Norma Simmons-Newton, the winner of last year's finalist auditions at the New York Metropolitan Opera; Bliss Hebert, General Manager of the Opera Society of Washington, D.C.; Dr. Waren Angel, dean of the College of Fine Arts at Oklahoma Baptist University; and Guilford Plumley, head of the piano department of Baldwin-Wallace Conservatory in Berea, Ohio.

In 1949 Dr. Donahue came to Utica as associate professor and chairman of the biology department.

He was named full professor in 1952, chairman of the division of biological and physical sciences in 1959 and associate dean of the college in 1961.

He is the author of more than 30 articles about endocrine physiology, blood circulation and science education.

A member of the Society for Experimental Biology and Medicine, Dr. Donahue also serves on the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation.

Utica College, founded in 1946 as a branch of SU, now has a total enrollment of 2,774.

Day division students total 990, with 1,784 in the evening division.

50-Mile Hike Challenge Set

Students from Utica College, a branch of SU, will hike 50 miles to the Hill Saturday to challenge Syracuse University students to a return trip."

The 25 UC students will bring a potted fern and a chip from the burrstone block to Chancellor William P. Tolley.

The burrstone is embeded in the floor of the Student Union on the college's Burrstone road campus in Utica.

Shirley King, spokesman for the Utica group, said that cars will follow with food and first aid supplies.

Joint Student Government President Theodore Bayer said that he had heard nothing of the challenge, but that he would prefer "to wait until the weather is warmer" before thinking about a return trip.

will be voted on at our meeting Thursday. Membership for Deke is just in the negotiation stage."

Both of these houses are currently independent.

Another rumor that Delta Gamma sorority had asked to join CAP was squelched for the time being by Brzezinski. "No one from DG has approached me personally," he said. "Unless its representative contacts me, I cannot comment on the situation."

The president of DG also said she had heard nothing of the proposed move.

He pointed out that while CAP is strong with over 20 member houses and will accept any new members, it does not favor a two or one party system.

"More parties encourage more candidates to compete which makes for a more lively campaign and more qualified competitors," he said.

This year especially there is a wealth of candidates who have expressed a desire to run for office, Brzezinski noted. Last year the two parties had trouble finding suitable candidates.

Conventions for class and government officers will be held the week before spring vacation. The campaign is set for the week following vacation.

ed houses, as well as encouraging independents to organize.

"As the Greeks are aligning themeslves, I would like to point out that the independents are about 70 per cent of the campus.

"A three-party race would be exciting, but most important, conducive to the election of qualified student officials.

"Student government greatly progressed this year; I hope the trend isn't toward a machine which would be a definite detriment.

"GIA wants a more representative, efficient student government which can command respect from the administration, thus bettering the position of the whole student body."

In business from a GIA meeting Thursday Gray announced the appointment of a button comimttee for the spring elections.

Val Farney (Tau Kappa Epsilon), Frank Kelly (Marion), Jeannie Limbaugh (Phi Mu) and Gary Rehm (Acacia) will serve on the comittee with Gray.

Reasonable sources report GIA is planning to organize floors of Sadler Hall into a working block for the party. Sadler 7 with signatures of 33 residents was admitted to the party at Thursday's meeting.

US

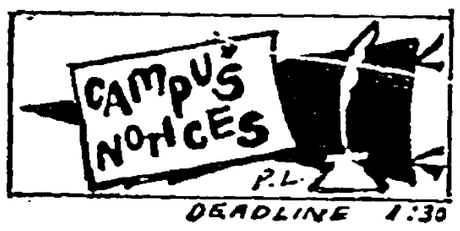
had also said Friday that her sorority would withdraw from the party, another decision which will await the outcome of the meeting.



US President Robert Taylor (Alpha Chi Rho) withheld comment on Miss Pechenik's actions, but said that he hoped the situation might be resolved at meetings of the executive committee and general party this week.

In other developments, Lois Wiltse (Alpha Xi Delta), US campaign chairman, said that she might not have enough time to devote to the party and might be forced to resign.

According to several sources, five houses were considering leaving US, but no definite actions have been announced.

One US official reported that officials of the Campus Alliance Party were attempting to enact a merger with US, which would make the resulting party an overwhelming power.

The spokesman reported that the move would strengthen CAP to a dominating positon, but other sources said such a move might be made for the purpose of squelching the Greek Independent Alliance, the third campus political party.

Dr. Irwin Cuts Disc in New York

By JOHN E. GREENWALD
Entertainment Editor

-- Dr. Ray Irwin, chairman of the department of interpretation, returned to Syracuse Thursday after recording works by Shakespeare,, Dylan Thomas and Alexander Pope for a record in New York City.

The album will be distributed with a high school text, "Prose and Poetry of England," published by L.W. Singer Co., a division of Random House.

Dr. Irwin, an associate professor of interpretation, read Hamlet's "to be or not to be" soliloquy, and excerpts from Thomas's "A Child's Christmas in Wales" and Pope's "Essay on Man." The tall, goateed instructor will also be a consultant on future records issued with Springer texts. Appearing on the disc with Irwin are, among others, Jason Robards Jr., Julie Harris, Martin Gabel, Dane Clark and narrator Clifton Fadiman.

Dr. Irwin came to the attention of Springer after a representative of that company, Mrs. Gene Wilkins, heard his radio program, "The Spoken Word." Broadcast locally on the campus station WAER-FM for the past 13 years, "The Spoken Word" is now carried by seven other stations of the Education Radio Network (ERN) in New York, Albany, Amherst, Washington, Philadelphia and Boston.

Dr. Irwin's weekly half hour of readings is the first Syracuse program to be carried by the entire network. WAER joined the ERN last fall.

"There is no sharp line between interpretation and acting," Dr. Irwin explained. "In interpretation we stress the lines and the literature: what the voice can do with the play. Everything else is subordinated."

At the suggestion of Sawyer Falk, late chairman of the drama department, Dr. Irwin organized the Syracuse Readers' Theater 14 years ago. "The first theatre of its kind," according to Irwin, "we've been turning people away at nearly every performance."

Under the direction of Harold Hogstrom, an instructor in the department, the Theater will present Sophocles' "Antigone" this spring.

Hill Wins In Final Seconds

ORANGE HOOPSTER Jim Seaman goes up for a basket during Friday's thriller with Boston College. Seaman's shot cut the Eagles' lead to 52-51 with two minutes to play.

By JUDY ADAMS

There's a new book about to be put on the market. It's a jointly-authored work entitled "How To Have A Nervous Breakdown."

It contains but one sentence: "Take in a Hill basketball game."

Friday night's addition to its successes is as good an example as you can find.

"If anyone had told me seven minutes before the game was over that we were going to win," said Coach Lewis, shaking his head in disbelief after his squad had just beaten Boston College, 55-54, "I'd have thought they were nuts."

At the seven minute mark, Lewis' crew had been down, 39-52. The game was a runaway. Syracuse was destined to hold the lead only four times during the game for a grand total of two minutes. But they were leading when it counted the most—when it was over.

It was a game filled with surprises. Lewis surprised everyone by starting junior Ken Wellman.

"Wellman had been shooting great in practice," Lewis explained after the game. "I don't think he missed more than two from any spot on the floor."

Ken scored the first Orange basket that stood as the only Syracuse two-pointer in the first seven minutes of play.

"You should have seen their faces," Lewis laughed. "They had never even heard of Wellman.

"We were using the zone and we wanted to see how they would react. I kept Carl and Phil and Dick on the bench so we could see what they (BC) would do."

What they did was to almost run away with the first half. Syracuse never had the lead. By the time Finley scored the second field goal, the Eagles had built up a 10 point margin.

But Syracuse went to work. By the time the first half ended, the home team had whittled the lead down to four, 23-19.

The Orangemen continued to jab away at the Eagles in the second half until Finley's third field goal (he would have one more) put them in the lead for the first time, 27-26.

Then just when it appeared as though Syracuse might pull it out, they collapsed.

At the start of the Orange decline, BC coach Frank Power substituted George Fitzsimmons, 6-2, for 6-5 Bob Madigan. Lewis countered by sending Seaman in for Klutchkowski.

"Their big mistake was when the took 45 (Madigan) out," explained Lewis. "Then I could substitute Seaman for Manny. Manny wasn't having a good night, but who else could contain that big man?"

Seaman's two field goals and Vernick's two free throws were Syracuse's only points after that, until with six minutes left, they were down, 52-39.

Then Fitzsimmons fouled Vernick and Carl sank his one shot. It seemed to be the cue for the home team to come alive. Exactly four minutes later, they were in the lead.

Carl hit from the floor. Schoff and Bob Murray did the same. Seaman sank a free throw. Duffy sank two. Seaman drove for a basket. There were a little over two minutes left when Herb Foster scored from the corner to put Syracuse in the lead, 53-52.

Boston College regained the lead when Fitzsimmons made two free tosses. Only 1:15 remained.

At 0:46 he was fouled again, but failed to make the throw. BC grabbed the rebound and started to freeze the ball, when an errant Fitzsimmons pass went out of bounds.

Syracuse took the ball, passed it once before giving it to Dick Finley. Finley saw an opening, drove toward it, and shot. The ball dropped through the cords as he was fouled. He missed the free throw and when the ball went off the court, a jump was called. With only 0:16 remaining, the Orange were ahead, 55-54.

The Eagle's Gerry Ward grabbed the tap and with 0:13 left, they called time out.

Boston College made one last attempt when they put the ball in play, a long set shot by George Humann. It missed. Manny grabbed it off the boards and cradled it as time ran out and pandemonium broke loose.

Wrestlers Trounce Colgate; Continue Unbeaten String

By TOM MULLER

Coach Joe Scandura's undefeated grapplers blanked archrival Colgate 36-0 Friday. It was the eighth win of the current season for the Orangemen, who haven't lost in 14 outings over a two-season span.

A small group of fans saw the SU powerhouse register three pins and two decisions on the Archbold mat. Colgate was forced to forfeit in the other divisions and, even then, the Orange wrestlers were all moved up one weight class.

Sonny Greenhalgh pinned Jeff Loubet in 5:18 of their 137-pound match to get Syracuse started. Jim Murrin then added three points to the Piety score by decisioning Brian Small 4-2 at 147.

Dick Slutzky then continued his domination of George Young by pinning the latter in 7:15. It was the pair's fifth meeting, and Young has yet to win.

Syracuse's George Riedener made the score 26-0 by trimming Bill Lister 3-0 in the 167-pound division.

Gary Sirota ended the day on a high note by pinning Pete Hilgendorff in 7:20 of their 177-pound bout.

Undefeated Gerry Everling and Jim Nance did not see any action. Their next test will be against Cortland State on Wednesday. A victory in Cortland will bring Syracuse its first undefeated season since 1949-50.

Gym Title

The Syracuse Gymnastics team beat Temple 56-40 Saturday to clinch the Eastern Intercollegiate Gymnastics League championship title.

The Orange Gymnasts finish the season with a 7-0 record and their first championship since 1950, also the last year the wrestlers won their Eastern title.

Mermen Down Columbia; Drop Decision To Colgate

By HOWIE SCHNEIDER

While the rest of Syracuse was having fun in the great outdoors over the weekend, coach Ted Webster's swimming squad was performing in the warm waters of indoor pools. The mermen celebrated Winter Weekend early by topping Columbia, Friday night, at Archbold, but then bowed to Colgate, Saturday, at Hamilton.

The win over the Lions was a relatively easy one, and broke a two meet losing streak. Paced by double winner Bob Ohman, the Orange won 70-25. Ohman captured the 200-yard breaststroke in a time of 2:28.1, and copped the 200-yard individual medley in 2:14.1.

Syracuse jumped out to an early lead after the 400-yard relay team of Nichols, Lehigh, Watts, and Morrison won their event in 4:06.9. The Orange extended their lead, despite two victories by Columbia's Nash, taking five more events to the visitors three. Syracuse winners were: Myers, 500-yard free style, 23.7; Ellenberger, 200-yard butterfly, 2:22.4; Holmes, 200-yard backstroke, 2.22.3; Myerberger, 500-yard free style, 6:08.1; and the 400-yard free style relay team of Dunseath, Duthis, Marshall and Morrison, 3:36.1.

Saturday the tables were turned, with the Orangemen on the shorter end 70-26. The Red Raiders set three pool records and won 10 of 11 first places en route to their eighth victory. They have dropped but two. The loss gave the Syracuse squad a 5-4 record to take into the New York State Swimming Championships, March 8, at Archbold.

Bill Stuck was the outstanding performer for Colgate. Stuck captured both the 100 and 200-yard free style events. Stuck also swam a leg on each of Colgate's record performing marks in the 400-yard medley and 400-yard free style relays.

Skaters, Skiers Win

By BERNIE MacCALLUM

Snow and ice provided winning environment for Winter Weekend University teams as the ski team and hockey association won Saturday.

The skaters won their fifth of the season 5-2 over R.I.T. at the Coliseum. Syracuse forward John Cordner scored the "hat trick" to pace the winners.

The Syracuse University Ski team remained undefeated winning the team title in the Winter Carnival meet with 370.03 points. Paul Smiths finished second, followed by Cornell, St. Michaels, Buffalo, Colgate, Clarkson, Swarthmore, Hamilton and LeMoyne.

The 30-meter ski jumping competition, held at Skytop, was won by Bill Birk of Paul Smith's with a jump of 90 feet. The jumping was the top attraction at the weekend activities Saturday at Skytop. A large gallery was gathered at the bottom of the jump run, many of them getting their first taste of skiing competition.

Earlier Saturday at Labrador, Bill Barton of Buffalo took first place in the giant slalom covering the course in 87.1 seconds.

Bob Thoreson and Dave Mentti placed second and third in the slalom for Syracuse.

Bill Dalton placed fifth in the jumping to be Syracuse's top point getter in that event.

The Syracuse hockey club got off to a 2-1 first period lead, scored twice in the second period and once in the final one.

John Schilling and Fred Robinson registered single goals to combine with Cordner for the 'cuse scoring punch.

The club has a 5-3 mark in league competition and is in second place.

SKI ENTHUSIASTS turned out en masse for Saturday's jumping competition at Skytop.

Dancing Filipino Style

"BAYAH KUBO". A popular song of the Philippines, is danced to by SYLVIA MAGPAYO and CHITO DE GUZMMAN at Monday's Festival of Nations.

Festival of Nation Gives Taste Of Native Song, Dance, Costume

Two little boys, one three and one six, sat next to each other in the front row of Crouse College Auditorium Monday night.

One had blond hair and blue eyes; the other, dark hair and Oriental features. Both watched the performers in the Festival of Nations, which opened the International Students Organization's 1963 International Week.

Representatives of 13 nations and world areas danced and sang. Dressed in their native costumes and singing in their native languages, they did not seem to be the same students who attend Hill classes every day.

Belly Dance

One of the highlights of the program was an Arabian belly dance by an eight-year-old boy whose parents are American and Arabian.

Paul Hodges, dressed in a black robe with gold jewelry, performed all the exotic movements of the dance. He has appeared on Lebanese television.

Another highlight was the Mayoor Nritya, or peacock dance, which shows the Indian belief in the poetic kinship between peacocks and rain clouds. The dancers wore aqua, turquoise and green costumes with headpieces of peacock feathers.

Bamboo

Nine Indonesian students performed on the angklung, a bamboo instrument, each piece of which is different, so that each performer plays only one note.

Groups from the Philippines, India, Africa, Israel, the Arab nations, Hungary, Latvia and the United States whirled through native dances.

The American group did a square dance.

Representatives of these countries and of South Korea and Latin America sang traditional songs.

Elizabeth Laulusa, of Samoa, and Evelyn Dinsdale, of New Zealand, performed traditional dances of their countries. Both are Syracuse students, as were nearly all participants.

Acacia House To Come Down For New Dorm?

University plans for construction of the new Crouse site dormitory may call for the demolition of the Acacia fraternity chapter house, Roosevelt Cottage and the Reding Apartments.

Space occupied by Acacia at 807 Walnut Ave., Roosevelt at 805 Walnut Ave. and Reding Apartments at 301 Marshall St. might be needed for Crouse site dorm parking, according to Noreda A. Rotunno, SU landscape architect.

Rotunno explained city code requirements affecting the new dorm call for "250 square feet of land per student" in the living center.

To meet this requirement and also provide one parking space for each five students in the dorm, Rotunno said, the university will need the land occupied by the three buildings.

SU holds title to the Reding Apartments and Roosevelt Cottage. The Acacia house is owned by the Acacia House Corp., Ralph G. Unger, corporation president told the Daily Orange.

Acacia alumni officials were first approached three years ago by the university concerning sale of the house and land, Unger said.

Unger stated Acacia alumni would be willing to sell if the university provides the chapter with a new house "suitable to the fraternity's needs. We do not want to go into an old cottage," he added.

The corporation president noted Acacia is interested in "leasing, not buying" a house from the university. He said the fraternity would like to occupy a house in the proposed Greek complex at Collendale.

No definite agreement has been made for sale of the land, Unger said.

University officials could not be reached for comment on a proposed demolition date for the three buildings.

Jean Crawford, director of women's housing said, "they must come down by the time the dorm is opened."

International Week Debate: Democracy in New Nations

Can democracy be successful in a new nation?

This will be the topic of the annual East-West debate, a feature of International Week, at 7:30 p.m. today in Maxwell Auditorium.

The debate is sponsored by Syracuse in Asia.

"Resolved: That democracy is not a suitable form of government in newly-independent nations" will be discussed.

The debators represent Cambodia, Kenya, Nepal and the United States.

Ly Luoeng, from Cambodia, will argue for the affirmative with Kamu Mwangi. Luoeng, a graduate of Dickinson University, spent a year at Tokyo University and is working for a master's degree in international relations at Syracuse.

Mwangi, who has taught in Kenya, is working for a combined master's and doctorate degree in political science.

The team defending democracy includes Siddhiraj Shah and John Nellis.

Miss Shah, a graduate of Calcutta University, is working for her master's in international relations.

Nellis, a Syracuse resident, is finishing work on his master's in political science.

Members of the audience will act as judges.

After the formal debate there will be a short question and answer period.

Moderator will be Carol Eaton, executive secretary of Syracuse in Asia.

Winter Weekend Success; Snow, Weatherman Help

Lots of snow and "good" weather, along with careful planning, made this year's Winter Weekend one of the most successful on record, Edward Vincent, weekend publicity chairman, announced Monday.

Friday afternoon brought many frostbitten fingers, as snow sculpturers sat back and viewed the results of their efforts.

Alpha Chi Rho took first place in the contest with "I Should Have Danced All Night." Second prize went to Delta Upsilon and "Whatever Lola Wants, Lola Gets," and third place went to the "Student's Prince" of Delta Gamma and Phi Gamma Delta. Miller Cottage, with the "Sound of Music," won honorable mention.

Ellen Schonbar, a 21-year-old senior from Flushing, was crowned Queen during the Stockingfoot dance Friday night. Miss Schonbar, an art student, represented Alpha Epsilon Phi sorority.

Stockingfoot chairmen estimated that 1,200 attended the Friday night dance which was a sell-out, with many turned away.

Skytop Ski Lodge, the scene of Saturday's "Warmer," was filled to capacity with over 1,000 students. Open slopes, ski events and the snack bar were major attractions of the "Warmer," which will be continued as a tradition of future Winter Weekends.

Bumpy ice caused the Ice Pageant to be postponed Friday night at Drumlins Country Club. It was held Saturday afternoon at the Coliseum after the hockey game.

Sunday night's Peter, Paul and Mary concert, held at the Syracuse War memorial, was also a sellout feature of the Weekend.

Committee chairmen for next year's Winter Weekend will be announced next week.

Discrimination Board Meets

The Syracuse University Discrimination Board will meet in closed session at 4 p.m. Thursday in the Board Room of the Women's Building, SU's dean of men said Monday.

Included on the agenda is the InterFraternity Council survey of the 30 Hill fraternities concerning discriminatory clauses in the national chapter. Plans for the rest of the year will also be discussed.

Appointed members of the board include Dean of Men Earle W. Clifford, Asst. Dean of Women Cleo McCracken, Panhellenic Council President Virginia Frykman (Delta Delta Delta), InterFraternity Council President Thomas Rigoli (Phi Delta Theta), Joint Student Government President Theodore Bayer, and JSG Vice President Carol (Schultze) Lucha.

Members yet to be appointed are a member of the College of Engineering faculty and one member from an honorary.

Throwing Light On Darkness

"Good lighting discourages delinquency of any kind." So stated James V. Latorre in an article in Monday's Daily Orange. His optimism is to be complimented but his faith in Thomas Edison as a crime-buster is too idealistic.

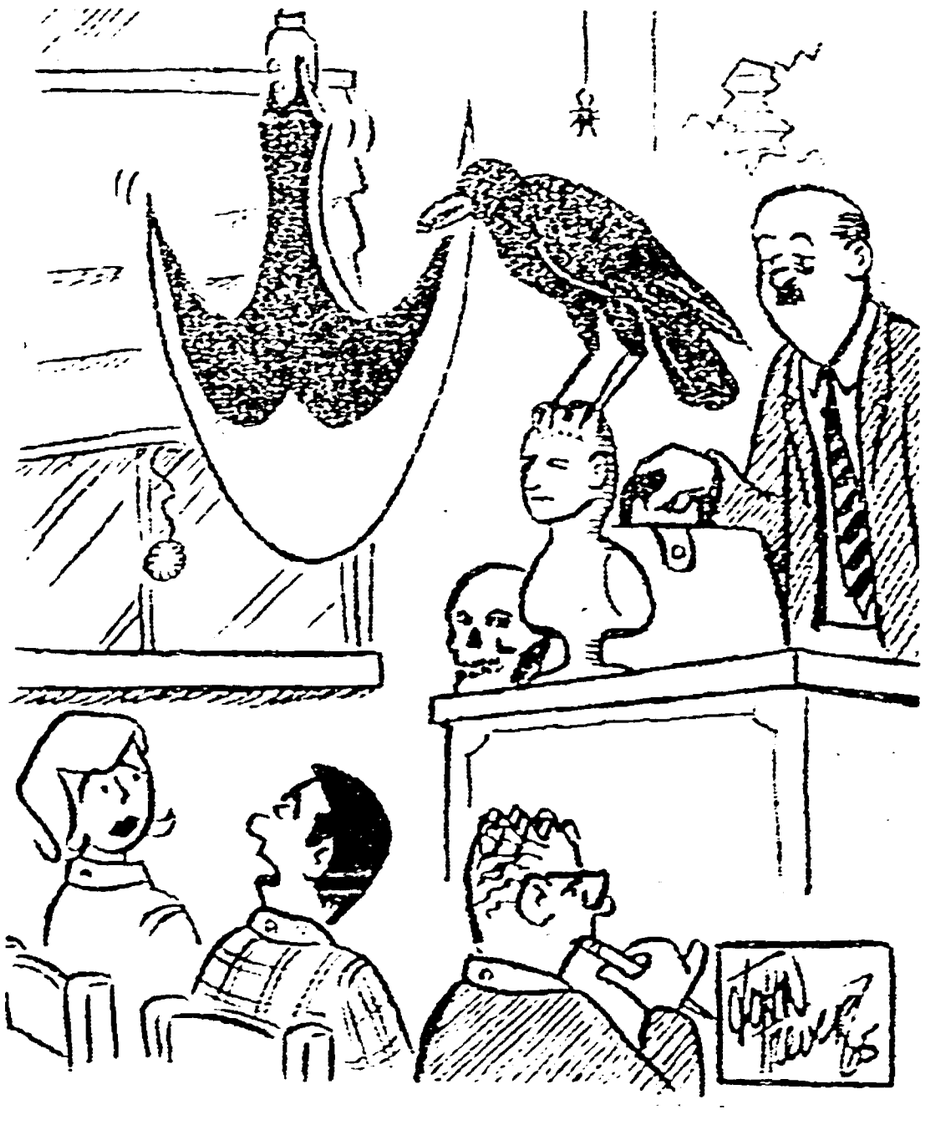
Lighting is important for the safety of students walking the quadrangle at night but to suggest that this is the cure-all is naive. Too many factors remain to start writing off the threat of muggings and assaults on campus and in its environs.

Nevertheless we are happy to hear of the lighting plan of the university. Mr. Latorre's words express the right kind of attitude needed to being a strengthened campaign to wipe out the threats hanging over students.

However, these threats to the well-being of Syracusans and their property still exist and will exist long after the quad is lighted like second base at Yankee Stadium on a June night.

For a well-lighted campus will protect our coeds while they are on the quad but the threat of attack by marauding delinquents on the fringes of campus will still be strong in the minds of all. Few will dare to travel the campus alone at night despite the warmth of lights on the quad.

Few students with cars will feel confident that they will not awaken to the sight of slashed convertible tops or stolen hubcaps.



The deep-rooted threat of attack and assault will not be overcome by lights on the quad. The lights will serve their purpose to be sure. But they cannot be expected to solve such an immense problem.

As long as women live so far away from the quad that they must walk blocks and blocks of shadowed paths to reach the library, the problem will still be there.

As long as the city fails to add its part to the lighting of the university area, the problem will still be there. Look at the lights on University Avenue some night. They look like throwbacks to the days of the old lamplighter.

And on Walnut Park the lights have progressed to the era of the '40's when they began hanging over the street but the light they give is negligible.

TREVER ON CAMPUS

"I understand we read a lot of Edgar Allen Poe in here..."

Campus Clips

By SANDI EHRLICH and MELANIE COHN

The space age is being acknowledged on college campuses with special new buildings. At the UNIVERSITY OF PITTSBURGH, a Space Research and Coordination Center for the study of natural sciences, social sciences, engineering and health and areas concerned with the aere space field, will soon be constructed. This may make western Pennsylvania one of the nation's major locations for space work.

The Center will include several buildings on Pitt's campus and the cost will probably exceed $30 million. Support was received from private donors, the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA).

The UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA also has plans to construct a space study center. NASA has granted the university $700,000 for such a project. The university plans to ask for $3 million in all from various government agencies to finance a bio-engineering and life - sciences center and a control, information and computer theory center. Perhaps "astronautomy" will be a future major.

ROCHESTER INSTITUTE OF TECHNOLOGY isn't limiting its growth to a few new buildings. Instead, the school is planning an entirely new campus. Target date for occupancy has been set for 1967.

The 1,271 acre campus will include eight academic buildings, dormitories, student center, auditoriums, gymnasium, recreational and athletic facilities. The total development program will cost about $53 million. This figure also includes a new College of Health Sciences and several endowed professorships. An $18.8 million investment in building funds will be sought in 1963-64 from the Rochester area, state and national citizens and corporations.

Syracusans—don't give up. Student unions can turn from dreams to reality. After 20 years of talking and planning, BOSTON UNIVERSITY will unveil its new George Sherman Union March 1.

An "anti-necking" bill is now under consideration by the Motor Vehicles Committee of the Minnesota state legislature. The bill would make it a misdemeanor for an automobile driver to have his arm around a passenger or for a passenger to have an arm around the driver while the car is on the road.

Eleven midwestern universities have agreed to link their graduate facilities to form what this week's Time magazine calls "the world's biggest academic common market." The plan will allow the 43,300 graduate students to transfer freely among the 11 campuses, and in this way to take advantage of the top departments at each school. UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA President O. Meredith Wilson said that this program will eliminate the need for every college to be strong in every field and end needless competition.

The schools included in the "Big Eleven" are: CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, INDIANA, IOWA, MICHIGAN, MICHIGAN STATE, NORTHWESTERN, PURDUE, OHIO STATE, WISCONSIN and MINNESOTA. These schools, which together grant about 30 per cent of the nation's doctoral degrees, have discussed the idea since 1957.

While the National Interfraternity Conference reported that fraternity membership has risen from 1,400,000 in 1954 to 1,800,000 now, another school has recognized a decline in the system. FURMAN UNIVERSITY in South Carolina, is replacing its fraternities with social clubs.

LETTERS

Military

To the Editor:

I have read Mr. McCain's interesting letter in the Orange issue of the 21st and feel that the matter he touched upon is so important and pressing that as many of us as possible should air our views over it.

Let me say from the outset that I believe (for what little it may or may not be worth) that the president should not ask Congress for an extension of the government's privilege to induct young men into the Armed Services. Instead, young men of this country should be told that, in reality, they do have an obligation to their country, and that they should be happy to serve this obligation, whether it be for two, four or even six years, voluntarily and without (I believe) unnecessary governmental duress. For it is possible to have an obligation without having it imposed from without, and it should be obvious that men do have a moral military obligation to their country as long as it is necessary for their country to draw on the services of a standing military army.

History runs amuck with the sad fates of nations and empires that have enforced a necessary military obligation upon its male citizens. Imposed service can do nothing but instill an ingrained antipathy for the impressor. How can a person serve that which he inwardly turns away from? Are not we supposed to hold a deep and abiding love for this country which gave its first citizens liberty of choice, thought and movement? Is the draft an expression of our American freedoms? I think not.

How much better can a man serve his master when he does so by choice? With what lifted soul does he enter into those activities which are required of him by his station? Can the master choose the dog and force his love upon it? Certainly not. More often, the dog will lend its love to the child, sensing the innocent's love and patience. So it should be with us. Rather should we enter willingly and hopefully into the defense of our great land knowing that our VOLUNTARY efforts may someday count towards a world that has no need of armies, war, mass-murder.

Thus let us enter without pressure into the service of our country. Do not compel us to do that which we will gladly do if only you will let us show you. Take our lead—and we shall follow.

Eulogy

To the Editor:

She gazed at the men
With their gnarled,
Work-roughened hands.
At other times she
Would have heeded them not
For she, a relic of more gentile days
Considered them beneath her.
Yet a horrid fascination
Possessed her—for she knew
Knew in her heart
Why they had come.
They had taken one friend
And now, possessed by
Some strange authority she Could not understand,
They came for her.
Still she stood stolidly
And peered at them
With empty eyes.
Her gray face
Still held touches
Of youthful red
But she was old and
The men's contemptuous leers
As they surveyed her in silence
Told her she was no longer
Desirable.
They stretched forth their hands
To seal her doom.
It had not always been so.
Once she had cared for many
And they had pointed her out with pride
To those who passed her by.
Such glory was faded and dead.
No hope remained, for there was
No escape, no flight open to her.
The monsters of the men
roared
Forward, tearing at her side,
Leaving gaping wounds as they Withdrew their ugly heads.
And Haven crumbled and swayed and crashed to the dust.

Keating

To the Editor:

In this time of great world problems, we are unfortunate, indeed unfortunate, to have a self-admitted "narrow-minded American" representing university students in print. I am talking, of course, about the letter concerning the Honorable Kenneth B. Keating which appeared in Thursday's edition.

I find it exceedingly difficult to comprehend why the man who, sans CIA, predicted the October Cuban Crisis a full two months beforehand, has his latest counsel upon the very same subject rejected, cum humoresque. Especially when one considers those "heavily-armed" troops, according to State Sec'y Rusk, in Cuba. Defense Sec'y McNamara propounds that they are "defensive," sent by Senor Khrushchev to protect his missiles. But the missiles went back where they came from! Why didn't the troops? What are they defending? Manager-in-Chief of Public News, Arthur Sylvester, in commenting upon the matter, stated, "What are in the caves of Cuba? We do not know!"

As for the complex problems in Latin America, consider our attempt to throw money at them in the name of progress. When we do, ala Adlai, with no strings, our billions are spent by a corrupt bureaucracy. Yet, if we insist on purposeful spending for basics such as roads, education and sanitation, with controls adequate to insure competent management, we are damned for interference in internal affairs. Either way we end up even less popular than we are presently. And that is upsetting to USIA Chief, Edward Murrow!

I conclude hoping Mr. Voniski's predictions concerning the votes garnered by Senator eating are but half as accurate as the Senator's Cuban prognostications.

THE CUTTING ROOM

'Dirty Linen'

by John E. Greenwald

"I don't want to broadcast the university's dirty linen over a 60 mile radius," Mike Styer, program director of the university owned, student operated WAER-FM told us.

The "dirty linen" in this case are the issues about Hill fraternities that would be discussed in the proposed debate between DO columnist Ron Corwin and IFC prez Tom Rigoli.

The debate, Styer said, "does not fit in with our listening audience." Besides, he added, "I personally don't think the campus really cares. Everyone's been through this before. I don't think a debate would offer any new evidence for or against fraternities."

"The DO," Styer added, has been doing a fine job."

But things weren't all that simple at the campus station. After a little probing Styer became more candid.

"WAER is a public relations function of the university," he explained. And since the station is "so far reaching" it shouldn't be broadcasting "bad things."

Styer, it should be pointed out, said this not because he is any under pressure from the university (he has about two weeks left as program director before a new senior staff takes over), but because he honestly believes them.

Too bad.

WAER is licensed, as Styer inevitably points out, as an educational station. The merits of a fraternity debate may be questioned. Its interest to WAER's audience may be questioned. But it also appears that some people at WAER have been questioning the merits of an educational radio station.

It seems that public relations superseeds education.

We asked Styer if he would, theoretically, broadcast debates or discussions about other intra-university problems such as housing, discriminating, sports scholarships etc. His arguments were the same; these topics presented the university in a bad light, and were of small interest to those outside the campus, anyway.

The second argument, lack of listener interest, seems shallow since WAER's audience consists of many highly skilled and management personnel who, as college graduates, would be interested in topics as college fraternities, sports etc.

Styer's main argument, the station shouldn't "knock" the university since it's footing the bill, destroys the "educational" purpose of WAER. If WAER is afraid to hurt SU's image, why shouldn't they become afraid of hurting other special interest groups? Why not kill a program about foreign policy because it hurts the Kennedy administration? Why not kill a show about religious morality because it might offend a Hill chaplain.

By establishing a station free from the pressures of sponsors and audience ratings the university was supposedly setting up a station free to investigate, the same way it gives grants so that professors are free to investigate.

WAER has taken a step backkward if educational broadcasting can take a second place to good public relations.

Let's air the dirty linen along with the dress shirts.

MUSIC

P, P & M

With Peter, Paul and Mary, folk singing may have found its compromise between the purely traditional and the professional. The group, appearing at the War Memorial on Sunday night, not only displayed versatility as to the range of their material, but they delivered some neo-folk numbers which had the breadth and sincerity of real folk music.

Not that polish or sophistication was lacking. The group is well-oiled and synchronized vocally and instrumentally. Paul Tooke provides most of the humor for the group. Although some of the innuendo falls flat and relies on meaningless though funny mugging, it is delivered with skill.

Some of the humor was based on Mr. Tooke's talent for sound effects. Between this, occasional satire, and a variety of musical effects ranging from delicate and wispish treatments of children's material to rousing spiritual numbers, the audience interest never lagged.

There was even some audience participation with Peter Yarrow leading the singing of union songs. The audience, unfamiliar with the historical background of these songs and some of the terminology involved often took the opportunity of laughing at inopportune moments.

The only major criticism of the evening is that the sound system did not offer the best opportunity for complete enjoyment, there being some distortion at high volume, and the voices being somewhat thinner than desirable.

SU Orchestra Plays Sunday

The University Symphony Orchestra, Louis Krasner conducting, will present a concert featuring works by Kabalevsky, Bruch and Brahm 4 p.m. Sunday in Crouse College Auditorium.

Wayne Barlow will appear as composer-conductor for his "Night Song" and a graduate student, Larraine Shapior, will perform the Bruch G minor Violin Concerto.

The program will open with the "Overture to Colas Breugnon' 'by Kabalevsky. The orchestra will play Brahms Symphony No. 2 in D Major.

All Crouse concerts offer free admission and campus parking.

Youth Orchestra Auditions Set

Those unable to attend last Saturday's auditions for the Central New York Youth Orchestra are urged to attend additional try-outs on Wednesday, Feb. 27 said the group's director Karl Kritz, announced. Talented string, oboe and bassoon players are especially needed.

Those eligible for membership must be between the ages of 14 and 22 must live within a 75-mile radius of Syracuse. Those auditioning should prepare a three to four minute piece in addition to a required sight-reading test.

Auditions for strings will be heard from 3:30 to 6 p.m.; woodwind and brass from 7 to 9:30 p.m. Registration tables will be on the seventh floor of the Hotel Syracuse.

EVER SUFFER FROM "SUNDAY SLUMP"?

Happens to the best of us. Nothing much to see... or do. 'Course there's always studying, but . . . to cure this "Sunday Slump," call the folks at home. They'll have lots of bright things to tell you. Cheer you up in no time. Just hearing your voice will make them feel good, too. Rates are lower, remember, every evening after 6:00 and all day Sunday. Extra low for many calls within New York State after 9:00 p.m.

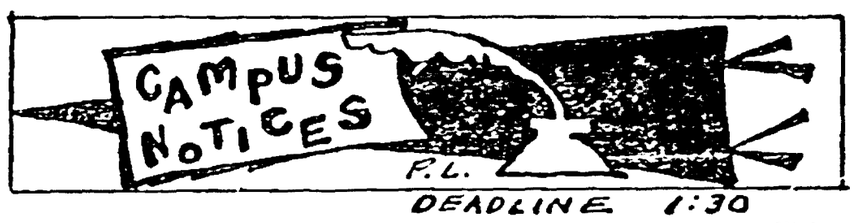
'Discrimination Still Exists'

"Discrimination in the United States based on race, religion and creed is still entrenched, although we are gratified to see success in combating it," Edward Conway told Citizenship 1 sections Monday afternoon.

The senior commissioner of the New York State Commission on Human Rights noted that "discrimination is making its last stand against justice and laws in the U.S., as witnessed by the limited freedom that Negroes actually enjoy.

"All people are heir to the American way of life," he said. "Equality is an invisible whole and to treat it any other way would bring about inequality," he added.



The commissioner described the workings of his group in terms of case histories. "The Commission has regulatory powers—it tries to settle cases to the justification of all, but if need be, can show the teeth of the law by getting court support," he said.

Conway explained the Commission's efect "is not measured by statistics, but the progress being made to end discrimination."

The commissioner traced the development of laws in New York State outlawing discrimination in various fields. This movement was climaxed in 1945 by the State's creation of anti-discrimination legislation.

"This legislation—a fresh affirmation of American justice and liberty for all—just confirmed the illegality of discrimination as set forth in the 1863 Emancipation Proclamation."

"Individuals must develop ideas of equality and thoroughly know the law," Conway said. "Furthermore, in order to combat discrimination, they must speak out and influence others with their knowledge of the law and the rights for all people, he concluded.

Haven Hall: A Lost Tradition

The tradition of Haven Hall is hardly recognizable now in the nearly-demolished dormitory.

The building has lost its identity; only the skeleton structure and exposed partitions remain.

Haven Hall was constructed especially for fine arts students. Music students were unpopular in other rooming houses because of the disturbance caused by their practicing.

The new dormitory, built in 1903 and 1904, was named for Erastus Haven, the university's second chancellor.

The first students moved into Haven in September, 1904.

Profs. Frederick Revels and Earl Hallenbeck of the School of Architecture drew up plans for the building.

Haven was constructed in Italian Renaissance style. The basement was of Onondaga limestone, the first floor of Ohio limestone, and the upper three floors of brick and sandstone.

The basement housed dormitory storage rooms, in which the first inhabitants kept their bicycles. Two dining halls, two parlors and the faculty club were upstairs.

The 37-year-old Katzman returned to Syracuse in 1961 where he has been instructing physical education classes.

He was tapped to coach the "Rider" array that lost to the varsity frosh team Friday, 89-71.

"It was a bad season, 0-1," Katzman quipped after the game, "but it could have been worse."

Guley's departure had left two coaching positions open, basketball and golf, in 1962. Fred Lewis took over the first. Now Mogish has the second.

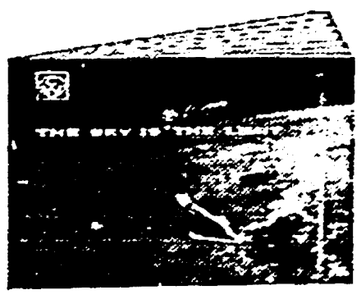
What business does a Business Grad have in Aerospace?

Chances are, you know that Aerospace is America's fastest-growing major industry—and Curtiss-Wright is one of the leaders.

Chances are, too, that Engineer friends of yours are considering the Wright Aeronautical Division of Curtiss-Wright.



But do you know that Wright Aeronautical offers equally promising opportunities to Business Administration, Economics, Finance and Commerce grads?

It works this way. You receive initial assignments in corporate or division planning, financial analysis, auditing, budget, cost,, systems, tax administration or accounting.

These—and seminars conducted by corporate officers—give you individual orientation in company operations and policy.

At the end of the first year, when you and the company know each other, you get your permanent assignment. Prospects include managerial and staff positions with the corporate office, divisions and subsidiaries. And you're rated annually for the jobs you've done—and the jobs you're ready to do.

See why the future's bright at Curtiss-Wright for qualified Business grads? Why not see where you fit in. Our Interviewer will be glad to help you.

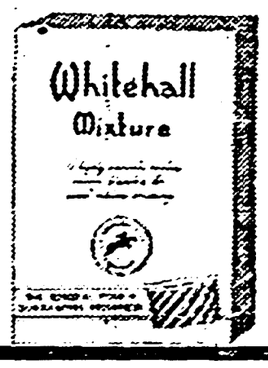
FIRST PRIZE—a real live playmate!
Lynn Karrol will be guest of honor at the winning fraternity's own Playboy Party! You also win an exciting Playboy Party Kit!

15 Fun-Filled Consolation Prizes!
Runners-up can win one of these:

★ 3 Playboy Party Kits
★ 6 Playboy Jazz All-Star Albums
★ 6—1 year subscriptions to Playboy Magazine



Now you have 2 GOOD REASONS to smoke Whitehall —the pipe tobacco active men prefer!

The first reason is obvious—the chance for your fraternity to win a real live Playmate (temporary possession only) plus a complete Playboy Party Kit. A lively combination that will make your fraternity's Playboy Party the most talked about social event of the year!

And the second reason for smoking Whitehall Mixture is pure smoking pleasure. Six superb tobaccos, hand-blended to smoke mild, mellow and cool—without bite. Whitehall is popular with active men—on campus and off. It has a bracing "outdoorsy" aroma that "indoorsy" Playmates love. And a deeply satisfying flavor that never tires your taste.

So what are you waiting for? Buy a case of Whitehall Pipe Tobacco as a start! Zip off the tops from the outer wrappers and save 'em. The fraternity that saves the most, wins the Playmate!

AAUP Meets 4 p.m. Today

Syracuse University's faculty will consider the ways, means and needs of expressing itself collectively at today's meeting of the SU chapter of the American Association of University Professors.

Scheduled for 4 p.m. in the Maxwell Founders' Room, the meeting will discuss "The Voice of the Faculty."

Prof. William Zelermyer of the College of Business Administration will introduce the national AAUP position on the faculty's role in making administrative decisions.

Prof. Jesse Burkhead of the College of Liberal Arts will then suggest issues on which the SU faculty might consider expressing itself collectively.

SU Gymnastic Squad Prepares for Easterns

By TOM MULLER

Coach Paul Romeo's Eastern gymnastics champions rolled to the first undefeated, untied gym record in SU history, as they humbled Temple 56-40 in Philadelphia on Saturday.

The 1949-50 gymnastics team, which tied for Eastern honors, was also undefeated, but a tie with Army blemished that record. This year's squad is sporting a perfect record through seven meets, including non-league tests against Cortland and the University of Toronto.

Senior Phil "Corky" Voas also set a new SU gym mark by compiling a total of 78½ points in the five EIGL meets. This total breaks the old record of 64 which Corky set last year. Corky ran up 115½ points in the seven meets.

Corky paced the Orange gymnasts on Saturday by copping two firsts and a second. He was victorious on the long horse and in the floor exercise, and he placed second to Syracuse captain Ray Grimaldi on the still rings.

Grimaldi displayed his usually fine form on the still rings, but fell prey to two breaks on the side horse, causing him to place fourth. His score of 95 on the still rings gave him his sixth win of the year in that event; he and Voas have placed 1-2 on the rings in every meet with Corky winning once.

Senior Ron Orlick caused a little surprise in Philly as he placed first on the parallel bars. It was the first time he had hit his routine. Ron also came in fourth on the floor exercise.

Junior Carl Poplar continued his upward climb by placing third on both the horizontal bar and the parallel bars. John Bird, another junior, came in second pn the side horse.

Sid Oglesby, the startling sophomore, picked up 11 points for the Piety performers. Sid was second on the parallel bars and in the floor exercise, in addition to registering a third place finish on the long horse. Soph Tom Steeves finished fourth on the horizontal bar for the Orange.

The big man for Temple, who finished the season with a 6-3 record, was sophomore Mark Cohn. Cohn was first on the side horse and second on the horizontal bar. His win ended Grimaldi's unbeaten string on the side horse.

The turning point in the meet proved to be the parallel bars, which the Orangemen swept. Up to that point, the Owls had kept the potent Orange in check.

"This is the best team I've ever had," praised Romeo after the victory. "This year will be remembered for a long time."

The Syracusans are now pointing to Friday and Saturday's Eastern championships in Manley Field House. The championships merely determine individual stand-outs, and in no way count towards the team title.

Hill Fencers End Season; Edge Buffalo, Case Tech

The fencers rallied Saturday in Buffalo to defeat Buffalo 16-11 and Case Tech 15-12 in a triangular meet. The double victory broke the Orange swordsmen's losing streak, and gives the team a 4-5 season's record. The SU frosh chipped in a third victory for the afternoon by defeating the Buffalo freshmen 15-10.

Coach Alex Dako praised his epee team for their splendid performance. Led by undefeated Duane Harrington, the epeemen won 7-2 over Buffalo and 6-3 over Case Tech. Marv Stone and Bill Wandmacher won 4 and 3 bouts, respectively. After being the weakest element in most of the meets this season, the epee team rallied and turned in the top score of the day, winning 13 and dropping only 5 bouts.

The foil team was led by Harvey Schuman with 4 victories; Marty Cohen and Les Monostory each won three bouts.

Stu Hollander led the sabre team with 4 wins. Other sabre points were scored by Mike Conte and Dick Dauenhauer. Dr. Dako praised the talents of junior Mike Conte, who boasts a remarkable record after only one season of experience.

Freshman scorers were Barry Kliger, Dennis Lambert, Jim Satterlee, Clint Wigren and Bill Shell.

The fencers are now training for the North Atlantic Championships in Rochester next month.

An apology for the devil: it must be remembered that we have heard only one side of the case; God has written all the books. — Samuel Butler

Changes Jobs

ANDY MOGISH . . . new golf coach

Golf Head Named

The second half of Marc Guley's former position has finally been filled. Andy Mogish, frosh baseball coach has been named to coach the 1963 Orange golf team.

Stepping into the position vacated by Mogish will be Larry Katzman, whose most recent duty was the directing of the "Pine Riders" in Friday night's intra-squad game.

Mogish, who is currently a physical education instructor, holds the post of Field House Co-ordinator. Athletic Director Lew Andreas, in his announcement of the appointment, said that Mogish will remain at his present position.

The 42-year-old Binghamtonian began his career with Syracuse as a basketball player. In 1947 he was added to the athletic staff.

The 1959-1960 season found him coaching freshman basketball under Guley. And until this year, he directed the frosh baseball squad.

Larry Katzman comes to Syracuse after a seven year hitch at Buffalo State where he served as a man of many jobs. From 1954 until 1961 Katzman was the school's athletic director as well as their baseball and basketball coach.

As a Syracuse undergraduate, he was a member of the gymnast team. In 1950, the new

Syracuse Favored in Wrestling Tourney

By ANDY PORTE

The wrestling capital of the East moves to Annapolis next weekend when the Navy plays host to the 59th annual Eastern Intercollegiate Wrestling Association tournament.

JOE SCANDURA . . . wrestling coach

Nine Syracuse grapplers will be in the field of 150 as the tourney gets under way Friday, March 8. The meet will continue through the ninth. Sixteen schools are competing.

The Orange, who finished a distant seventh in last year's meet, rank among the favorites for the 1963 crown. The Hillmen are unbeaten in eight matches this season, have a two-season record of 14 matches without a defeat.

Defending champion Lehigh returns with another powerful squad. Lehigh's only loss this year was an early-season 23-6 setback by Syracuse, but the red-hot Engineers have rebounded for six wins in a row, most by sizeable margins.

Rutgers, sixth in last year's tournament, boasts a 7-1 season record, and also ranks as a title threat. Syracuse did not meet the Scarlet Knights during the regular season.

Navy, Penn State, and Pittsburgh, who all sport 4-3 records, will all be high in the final totals. The Orange defeated all three during the regular season.

Other competing schools are Army, Yale, Harvard, Cornell, Columbia, Brown, Princeton, Pennsylvania, Franklin & Marshall, and Temple.

Four of last year's individual champions will again be competing. Navy's Mike Harman, winner at 137-lbs. last year, was unbeaten this year and appears as a likely top seed. Harman handed Syracusan Jim Murrin his lone setback of the campaign, 4-2.

Pat Smartt of Lehigh, 130-lb. victor last year, has been bothered by injuries this season. Moving up in weight class against the Orange, he was easily beaten by Pietyman Murrin, 11-5.

Kirk Pendleton of Lehigh, defending 157-lb. titlist, is expected to renew his battle with Army's Mike Natvig. Pendleton defeated Natvig to win the eastern crown last year, but Natvig trimmed Pendleton in the NCAA finals.

Nance Foe

The fourth deturning champion, Rutgers junior Ed Scharer, will have his hands full with Syracuse's hero, Jim "Bo" Nance. Nance will be meeting his toughest opposition in heavyweight Scharer, who has not lost in dual meet competition since his freshman year in high school. His lone setback last season came in the second round of the NCAA championships.

Nance, unbeaten in two years of collegiate competition, has not suffered a defeat since his junior year in high school. He twice reigned as Pennsylvania state champion.

Syracusans

Also among the favorites for individual individual championships are Syracusans Terry Haise (7-1), "Sonny" Greenhalgh (6-1-1), Dick Slutzky (6-1-1), Gary Sirota (5-1-1), and Gerry Everling (7-0).

Foreign Students Talk Democracy

By CAROL RUBRIGHT

"Democracy is a luxury which the emerging nations cannot afford," said Kamau Mwangi, of Kenya in a debate Tuesday evening in Maxwell Auditorium.

The topic of the debate, which was sponsored by the Syracuse-In-Asia program, was "Resolved that a democratic system is not a suitable form of government in newly independent nations."

The debate was won by the negative team consisting of John Nellis and Miss Siddhiraj Shah, who supported democracy. The affirmative team, which opposed democracy on the grounds that it would not solve the economic and political prolems of the young nations, included Ly Luoeng and Kamau Mwangi.

Audience Votes

Prior to the formal debate score, sheets were distributed to the audience. The audience gave the negative team 3,222 votes and the affirmative 2,781.

International students will be entertained at fraternity and sorority dinners tonight.

French Consul Georges Fieschi will speak on his nation's stand on the European Common Market at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in Maxwell Auditorium.

Luoend, first speaker for the affirmative, said although democracy "sounds very good, it is hard to put into effect."

The emerging nations have innumerable economic and political problems, he said, and "it is very doubtful that democracy can cope with them."

These problems include lack of national unity, lack of capital, lack of machinery and technical know-how and a high mortality rate.

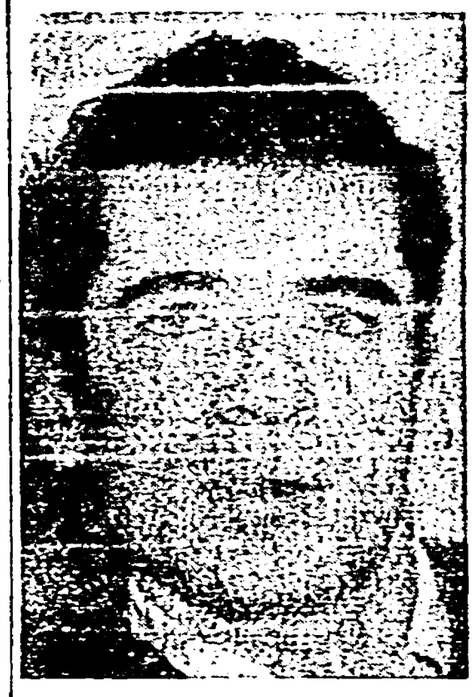
Democracy

Since democracy in America had such trouble coping with Little Rock and Mississippi, Luoeng stated, it undoubtedly would be difficult to put to use in a new nation.

Luoeng suggested that a "benevolent dictator" would be most successful in aiding a young nation as it emerges into the international scene.

Mwangi, second affirmative speaker, said democracy is fine in America and England where a two-party system is used.

However in a new nation, political unity must be preserved.



Therefore a one-party system with a strong centrally-planned government is necessary.

He compared the positions of Nehru, Nassar and Nkrumah in their governments to that of George Washington in early American history.

Nellis stated the first goal of a new nation is economic viability. Since all economic systems are based on savings, he said, the capitalistic system is best; it can give the new countries the economic blood they need.

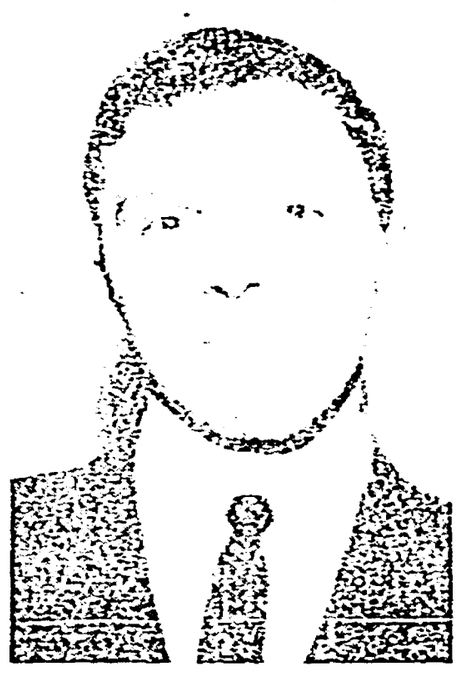
"We're past the stage of the 19th century myth that found colonialism profitable, past the stage of John Foster Dulles' thinking that neutrality was immoral and at the stage where we wish all nations to be above and beyond the call of poverty, both economic and political."

IFC Leader, DO Columnist Debate Tonight in Gifford

RON CORWIN

Gifford Auditorium, Huntington B. Crouse Hall, will be the scene of tonight's debate between Thomas Rigoli, president of the InterFraternity Council, and Ronald Corwin, Daily Orange columnist. The debate will begin at 8:15.

The two men will discuss discrimination in Syracuse fraternities in particular and the fraternity system in general. Rigoli challenged Corwin to the debate after the latter wrote a column in the Daily Orange titled "Ignorance", in which he slammed fraternities for breeding, narrowness and prejudice.



Corwin will begin the debate with Rigoli rebutting. There will then be a round of further rebuttal and questions from the audience. Corwin has informed the Daily Orange everyone is invited—"regardless of race, religion, grade point average, Greek affiliation or anything else which might exclude an individual from other organizations on campus."

Daily Orange Editor-in-Chief Milton Joffe will moderate the debate.

WAER-FM, the campus radio station, has decided not to broadcast the debate, according to its Program Director Michael Styer. Styer said such a debate "does not fit in with our listening audience."

The issue, he said, is a campus one and would not interest the majority of WAER's audience.

Rigoli is a member of Phi Delta Theta social fraternity, Tau Theta Upsilon, senoir men's honorary and is a liberal arts senior. His home is in Jamestown.

THOMAS RIGOLI

Corwin is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin and is in the graduate school of psychology here. His home is Mt. Vernon.

He was affiliated at separate times with Phi Sigma Delta and Zeta Beta Tau social fraternities at Wisconsin.

County Tops $5 Million In Local Centennial Effort

Twenty-one pledges totaling $405,000 have boosted the Onondaga Area Campaign for the Syracuse Plan to total $5,005,249, DeBanks M. Henward, associate campaign chairman, has announced.

This total is 43.9 per cent of the $11,400,000 local goal towards the $76 million SU Centennial Plan.

Henward said 92 separate pledges make up the total received to date in Onondaga County: 1 gift @ $91,000; 1 gift @ $69,000; 1 gift @ $60,000; 1 gift @ $59,000; 3 gifts @ $25,000; 1 gift @ $10,000; 4 gifts @ $5,000; 1 gift @ $4,000; 1 gift @ $3,000; 3 gifts @ $2,500; 1 gift @ $1,200 and 2 gifts @ $1,000.

Hughes' 'Sword of Damocles' Cuts Into Campus Tonight

The student - run, privately-supported "Sword of Damocles" goes on sale in all Hill living centers tonight, Terence Hughes, editor-in-chief, said Tuesday.

Marshall Street merchants will have some of the 1500 copies in their stores beginning Thursday morning.

Refused university sanction at Board of Publications meetings last October, Hughes has since received special permission to sell his magazine in the university living centers.

Selling for 35 cents a copy, "Sword" deals mainly with campus issues. Included in this first issue are:

1. "Constructive criticism" of the SU infirmary pinpointing alleged inadequacies.

2. The situation of the foreign students on campus includng the "whole story" of the Savoy Apartment picketing and sit-in in December.

3. An explanation of textbook prices, where the profits go and how much the SU Bookstore makes selling textbooks to students.

Fiction

In addition, fiction and humor will fill the rest of the 24 pages of the magazine.

The official university magazine under the editorship of James Gorney, will go on sale Tuesday.

At 35 cents a copy, "Syracuse 10" will feature a full-size "BO." Also, it will contain articles on the cultural decay of American universities and the House Un-American Activities Committee.

Other features include: a photo display of the ABC-TV "Hootenanny" filmed here in November, poems and literary criticism.

"Sword of Damocles" is an outgrowth of last year's controversy over the purpose of

Perschetz Named New Election Chief

Arthur Perschetz, a Hill sophomore, has been named elections commissioner of Joint Student Government, succeeding Katherine Antony. The announcement was made Monday night by Douglas Long, JSG special services director.

Perschetz will direct the operation of the general spring elections, scheduled for Thursday, April 11, and will supervise the fall elections for the incoming freshman class.

He will be assisted in his job by two members of the freshman elections committee, which supervised last fall's frosh elections. Members of this committee are Ruth Jelline, Carol Glickman, Barbara Ann Kling, Mary Lee Stryker, Edmund Gelgud, Robert Heins, Douglas Ruffley and Anthony Sherman.

Perschetz, a member of Phi Epsilon Pi fraternity, is a student in the College of Liberal Arts. He has a 1.9 cumulative average, and is a member of the Liberal Arts Advisory Council.

He is currently a sophomore senator-at-large in Joint Student Legislature, and was commissioner of Student Opinion Service (SOS) until his appointment as elections head. A new SOS commissioner will be named.

Bob Taylor Denies US Party Demise

"The United Students party is very much alive," US President Robert Taylor (Alpha Chi Rho) said Tuesday.

Taylor added "The members we have now are solid, active houses and will easily be able to put up the best qualified slate for the coming election."

He squelched ideas that US is folding, saying "Despite recent rumors there has been no current change in party membership. I predict a successful year for US party."

Vice President Sharon Pechenik (Phi Sigma Sigma) said reports of her resignation were prematurely issued, and after consultation with Taylor, she has decided to remain as vice president.

"I am still in office and very much a part of campus life," she commented. She added her house is still a member of US.

US currently has 16 members. Campus Alliance Party has 19 members, including Independents On Campus. The Greek Independent Alliance has 10 members, including two independent groups.

Student Union Off Friday

The Student Union Board has cancelled its Friday night program this week in co-operation with International Week sponsored by the International Students Organization.

BIRTH CONTROL

The College of Law will show a film "Birth Control and the Law" 11 a.m. Thursday in 104 White Hall. The film is open to the public.

JSL TONIGHT

Joint Student Legislature will consider a revision of the Elections Act and the latest developments in the university drinking policy inquiry at its meeting at 7:30 p.m. tonight in Maxwell Auditorium.

JSL Steering Committee will meet at 6:45 p.m. also in Maxwell Auditorium.

Happiness Is A Saltine Warrior

Recently in the column entitled "Campus Clips" there appeared an item from the Holy Cross "Crusader" concerning the new Peanut book, "Happiness is a Warm Puppy." The good men of Worcester saw fit to satirize this work and call it "Hate is a Cold Puppy."

The latter was an amusing treatment of some of the petty peeves and frustrations that confront us all at one time or another. We enjoyed it thoroughly.

But it also led us to thinking. If the Holy Cross paper can do a light-hearted study of hate on the college campus, why can't the Daily Orange take the other point of view?

And so we did, entitling it "Happiness is a Saltine Warrior:

Happiness is when the temperature goes above freezing Happiness is getting eight hours sleep. Happiness is a cancelled eight o'clock. Happiness is a weekend.

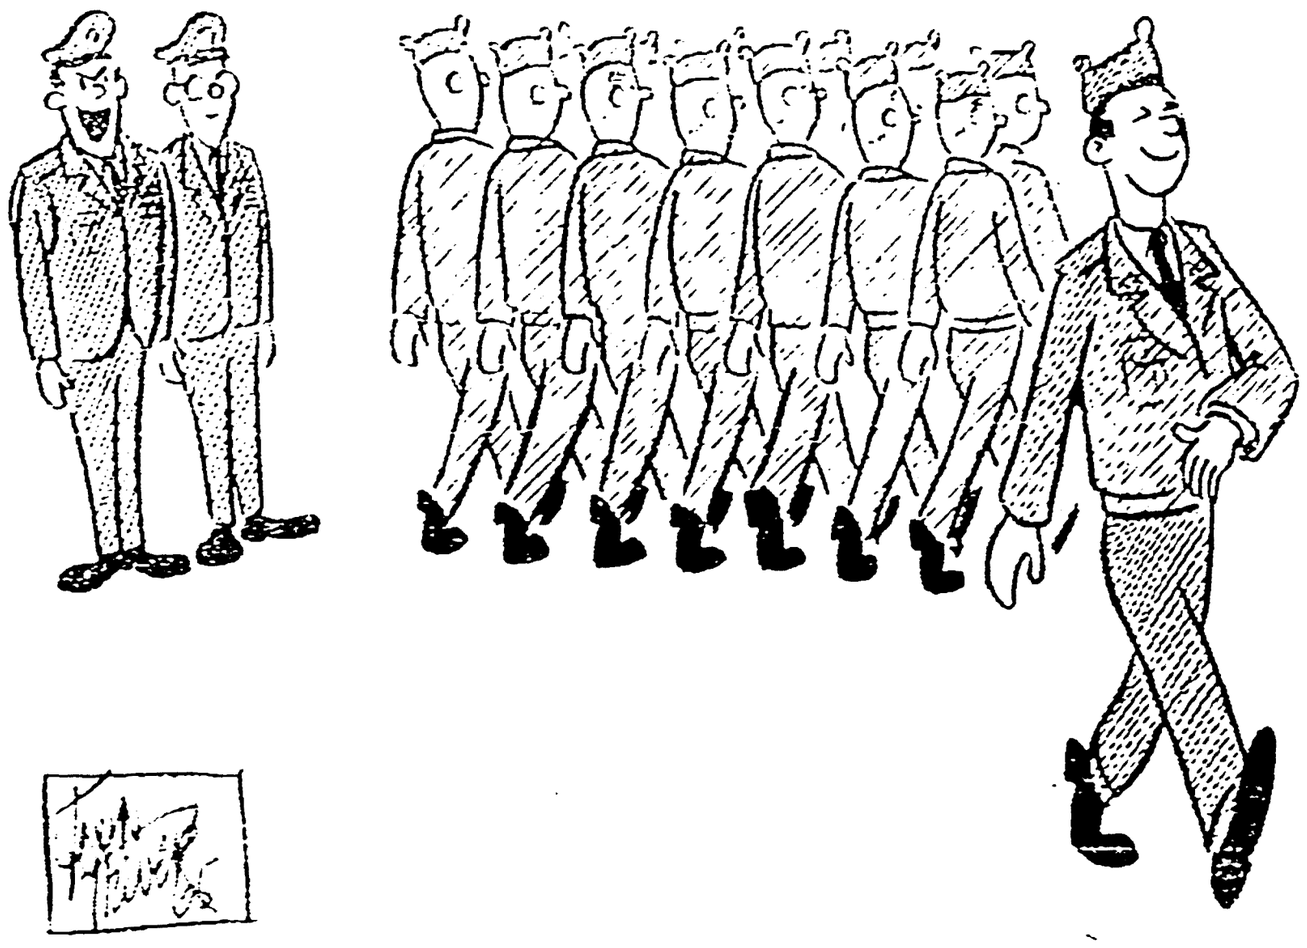
Happiness is when you get your date home before curfew. Happiness is a special two. Happiness is staying awake in an hour and fifteen minute class. Happiness is legible notes. Happiness is a question on a test that coincides with your answers.

Happiness is the last day of your finals. Happiness is the first day of classes. Happiness is no lines at the dining hall, the book store or the movie theatre.

Happiness is when you get a term paper done ahead of time. Happiness is when the class seems to go quickly. Happiness is raising your hand and saying the right thing.

Happiness is an enjoyable blind date. Happiness is doing your own laundry. Happiness is when the gasoline prices drop to 25.9. Happiness is three letters in your mailbox. Happiness is mailing a letter five minutes before the mail truck comes.

Happiness is a long distance phone call. Happiness is finding a parking place. Happiness is when you get to sit neither too close nor too far back in the movies.



Happiness is being caught up with your work. Happiness is finding your name spelled correctly in the Daily Orange. Happiness is finding a Daily Orange in HL. Happiness is finding a seat on the bus.

Happiness is when the library actually has the book for which you filled out a card. Happiness is a roommate who is quiet when you sleep. Happiness is a clean shirt. Happiness is when rushing is over.

Happiness is when the machine takes quarters and gives back change. Happiness is a familiar face on the quad. Happiness is night before the morning after. Happiness is a glass of tomato juice.

Happiness is meeting your deadline. Happiness is. . . . .

TREVER ON CAMPUS

Esty-biPlex

To the Editor:

While the campus is embroiled in the Greek controversy and the infirmary conditions are a constant source of speculation, Whitman Cottagers feel that they have a graver reason to be up in arms.

Thus far they have suffered through: uneven distribution of heat in the cottage (whereby those on the second and third floors live in a tropical climate while those on the first are considering the possibilities of starting an indoor hockey team), a broken sewer pipe in the basement (flooding the storage space allocated for luggage) and a perpetual lack of hot water (which is self-explanatory).

And now the final blow. The girls of Whitman cottage have been notified that they have used up their supply of Esty-biPlex and will not be reinforced until further notice.

"This implies," declared one girl, "that the University expects us to replace the absent Esty-biPlex with a product of equal functional value."

As one Whitmanite so vehemently stated, "I feel that for the money we are forced to pay for mandatory room and board we should be sufficiently supplied with enough Esty-biPlex to last for the school year of thirty-three weeks."

"Personally," commented another Whitmanite, "I prefer Scotties."

Esty-biPlex, for the uninitiated, is toilet paper.

Football

To the Editor:

Due to the numerous well composed bits of information regarding the seemingly degenerative football players at S. U., I would like to defend these men and try to straighten out a few accusations made against them.

As you may have guessed, I'm a football player and take considerable pride in the fact.

There was an article concerning football players and cheating in the D. O., January 14, which seemed to try to make me ashamed of my sport and my fellow players. That article, however, was one of the biggest farces I have ever read (and I have read quite a few textbooks which I thought were contenders for this title).

The student who wrote that article contended that he saw a football player cheating on an exam. But more than that he tried to make all football players sound like the largest group of imbeciles in S. U. history.

I have seen many students cheating on exams and I know for a fact that none of them were football players. I have also heard of many regular students who have been thrown out of school for cheating this year. Of course there are bad apples in any barrel, but it takes a pretty narrow mind to try and tear down the rest of the barrel for the bottom apple.

People seem to be extremely critical of football players, and while I realize that whatever we do is greatly magnified, I wonder if people realize that all football players are human. This means that they are not immune to making mistakes.

In the future I hope people try to take these facts in hand and do a bit of analyzing on themselves before they start to degrade football players.

Hughes

To the Editor:

The case study by T. Lee Hughes on February 20 raises a pathetic issue which I fear has already been decided. Before getting into that let me clarify my own position. I am a member and still maintain an association with a fraternity on another campus which through the years has been a literary society as well as an eating club and a better than average place for undergraduates to room. I realize that each one of us discriminate in our personal relations for personal reasons and this right to privacy is respected in the legal and moral fabricate of our nation. At the same time corporate discrimination is increasingly questioned in that same society both legally and morally—so much so that it can be said that there is a growing consensus on this point with some painful struggles still before us.

To justify discrimination on the grounds or in the name of Christianity, however, is clearly un-Christian. This is no new problem in Christian circles. For years churchmen attempted to justify segregation on biblical grounds. But there is no such biblical ground! In fact, there is no visible alternative to a non-discriminatory policy in corporate life from the viewpoint of the Church catholic.

The obvious problem with the attitude of certain sororities and fraternities based on "Christian principles" is that those principles have borne no fruit. This is not merely a matter of failure to live up to principles. The Church frequently does that. But it retains then a penitent stance, at least.

If these so-called "Christian" groups would wish to become some secular arm of the Church or would envision their life in terms of the European "house Church," I am sure there are people trained and willing to assist. But such assistance has never been sought and I seriously doubt if it is desired. So I don't know of a house that is clearly in the Christian tradition.

But I asserted in the beginning that this pathetic issue (and it is the cause of deep social and individual pathos) has already been decided. Like it or not in the next ten years we shall see a radical readjustment in racial and social patterns peacefully or not depending on white reaction in our urban centers at least in the north perhaps more dramatically than in the south. The issue will not be one of the white accepting the black, of the Christian relating to the non-Christian (after all, Constitutionally ours is not a Christian society, nor is it one in fact), or of anyone favoring integration, non-discriminatory practice, and the like. That has already happened. This is a mopping up period painful to some as that may be.

The real issue in our nation as in our world is whether or not the white Christian minority will be accepted. Let us hope that we will be accepted as charitably as James Baldwin has suggested in a letter to his nephew:

"There is no reason for you to try to become like white people and there is no basis whatever for their impertinent assumption that they must accept you. The really terrible thing, old buddy, is that you must accept them. . . . You must accept them and love them. For these innocent people have no other hope."

Let us pray that we are innocent or at least acknowledge our guilt.

Drinking

To the Editor:

On Wed., Feb. 13, JSL convened at the request of Win Whittaker so that discussion of the drinking topic could continue. Mr. Whittaker had the floor for a considerable amount of time during which he proposed a plan attacking the situation. The Whittaker plan consists of a detailed investigation of the drinking policy. This includes the adherence of the policy by the students, as well as the attitudes of those in administrative offices concerning the use of alcohol on the S.U. campus. Thus, we can say that Whittaker intends to collect a sufficient sample of factual material. He then expects to turn over the results to the faculty for their consideration.

Let us introspect the effects of this investigation. Most undoubtedly, Mr. Whittaker is aware of campus politics, appearing as an aspiring politician himself. However, he has chosen the worst possible time to conduct such a "drinking investigation." At present, the school is involved in perhaps its most extensive fund-raising campaign. Some of the S.U. administrators, I'm sure, are regretting the publicity the drinking policy is receiving. The risk of losing potential donors due to an issue considered to be closed is definitely undesirable from the administration's standpoint. Thus, it is not feasible to consider an even slight modification of campus prohibition.

Therefore I feel that it is safe to conclude that nothing beneficial will result from the present deliberations and investigations on drink. The time is unripe for discussion of the policy by either the administration or the student body.

Swash Buckling Romeo

BESEIGED BY KEN PEARLMAN as Tybalt, RICK MILLER as Romeo, fights on. Behind Miller, on the uncompleted Boar's Head Theater stage are STU DILLON, Benvolio, and bearded TOM McKEE as Mercutio. This is the famous dueling scene from Act III, Scene 1 of "Romeo and Juliet."

By VIVIAN TAYLOR

The slashing, swashbuckling battles fought between the Montesques and Capulets in William Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet" will not be merely composed of haphazard thrusts and parries.

The fencing scences are currently being choreographed by the production's fencing director, Rick Miller, to provide the audience with a sense of realism.

Miller also stars as Romeo in the Boar's Head presentation which opens 8:30 p.m. Saturday March 9 in the Drama Building.

In choreographing the "Romeo and Juliet" fights Miller, who learned fencing at the Connecticut Shakespearan Festival in 1961, began by teaching his generally inexperienced cast the basic positions.

As soon as the play's director, G.F. Reidenbaugh, acting chairman of the drama department, blocked out the action, Miller worked out the fights on paper to coincide with the timing and action of the scences. Using a system of graphic devices Miller transcribed the parries, attacks and beats to aid the actors in remembering their movements.

"By using this system of transcription," the youthful Miller said, "I have been able to choreograph each fight scene so the audience's attention is carried from fight to fight by the alternation of colorful attacks with relatively routine movements."

The six separate fights, three of which contain bloodshed, have each taken ten hours of work outside of regular rehearsal to develop.

"The great danger to the actors," Miller explained, "is during the heat of the performance when some of the choreography may be forgotten and, in resorting to impromptu fighting, someone may be injured. For this reason, the actor are required to spend an hour a day rehearsing their own fights."

The fencing style of the actors has been calculated to be an expression of their characters. The firey-tempered Tybalt, for example, use power and strength in his attacks, while young Romeo relies on quickness and dexterity.

SU Readers 'Antigone' Set

A reading of Sophocles' "Antigone" will be presented by the SU Readers' Theater 8 p.m. Sunday, March 10 and Tuesday, March 12 in Gifford Auditorium, Huntington B. Crouse Hall.

Featured in the cast of 14 are Linda Sternberg, Antigone; Palmer Dante, Creon; Clyde Cawley, Haimon; Andrea Gurner, Ismene; Arthur Shapera, Teirisias; Ron Corwin, the Messenger; Henry Kahn, the Century; and Kolver Mowers, the leader of the Chorus.

The reading, which is open to the public, is directed by Harold Hogstrom, a graduate student in the department of oral interpretation.

The readers wil wear costumes suggesting ancient Greek dress. "We wanted something more dignified than street attire," Hogstrom explained.

The cast, arranged in two groups on either side of the stage, will come forward to speak. "There is no communication between the other people on the stage," Hogstrom continued. "The work is thrown into the laps of the audience."

9 Students Receive Awards

Nine students at the New York State College of Forestry at Syracuse University are the 1962-63 recipients of Henry H. Buckley Student Aid Awards amounting to a combined total of $1,300 in scholarships.

The nine award winners are Terry Lee Wilcox, a junior majoring in wood products, $200; John E. Hudson, a junior studying forest botany and pathology, $200; Stanley J. Martin, a junior in land management, $100; and Donald A. Wharton, a junior in general forestry $100.

Also; George D. Davis, a junior in land management, $200; Rostyslaw R. Smyk, a sophomore majoring in wood chemistry, $200; David M. Norris, a junior in pulp and paper technology, $100; Raymond C. White, a sophomore also in pulp and paper technology, $100; and Douglas R. Simmons, a senior in land management, $100.

This is the second year that the Henry H. Buckley Student Aid Awards have been presented. Last year only five scholarships were given.

The Henry H. Buckley Student Aid Foundation was established at the College of Forestry in 1961. Its purpose is to aid worthy students of any class who need financial assistance and live in Chenango, Delaware, Herkimer, Madison, Montgomery, Oneida, Otsego and Schohaire counties of New York State.

Get Lucky
Play "Crazy Questions"

(Based on the hilarious book "The Question Man.")

50 CASH AWARDS A MONTH. ENTER NOW. HERE'S HOW:

First, think of an answer. Any answer. Then come up with a nutty, surprising question for it, and you've done a "Crazy Question." It's the easy new way for students to make loot. Study the examples below; then do your own. Send them, with your name, address, college and class, to GET LUCKY, Box 64F, Mt. Vernon 10, N. Y. Winning entries will be awarded $25.00. Winning entries submitted on the inside of a Lucky Strike wrapper will get a $25.00 bonus. Enter as often as you like. Start right now!

RULES: The Reuben H. Donnelley Corp. will judge entries on the basis of humor (up to ⅓), clarity and freshness (up to ⅓), and appropriateness (up to ⅓), and their decisions will be final. Duplicate prizes will be awarded in the event of ties. Entries must be the original works of the entrants and must be submitted in the entrant's own name. There will be 50 awards every month, October through April. Entries received during each month will be considered for that month's awards. Any entry received after April 30, 1963, will not be eligible, and all become the property of The American Tobacco Company. Any college student may enter the contest, except employees of The American Tobacco Company, its advertising agencies and Reuben H. Donnelley, and relatives of the said employees. Winners will be notified by mail. Contest subject to all federal, state, and local regulations.

Greeks Don't Tip Our H-J Newsboy

By SANDY MYERS

"What do the fraternities and sororities tip you?"

"The only tips they give me are when they tip their hats!"

That's the comment of Richard Wright, Herald-Journal newspaperboy in the university area. He admits that he loses his tips because most of his customers — fraternities, sororities and four on-campus stops—pay directly to the newspaper office, but he likes not having to spend time collecting.

One of his favorite stops is at the dingleman near Watson Dormitory, because "he gives me tips."

But his mother, Dr. Bernice Wright, assistant professor of family relations and child development in the SU College of Home Economics, says that he spends "a little too much of his earnings at that stop.

Richard, 13, is an eighth grader at Aaron Levy Junior High School. He plans to attend Dartmouth College, but his post - college plans include only "being rich."

Looking at a photograph of Publisher Samuel Newhouse in the Daily Orange office, he sighed, "Oh, that Newhouse. He's loaded!"

RICHARD WRIGHT

The paper route has been in the family for five years, although Richard has been working it for only two. A brother, 16, had it for the first three years.

He also has another brother, 23, in Minnesota, and a sister, Deborah, who is an SU freshman.

He lives, he says," in the shadow of Mount Olympus," across from the Women's Building.

His one special philosophy in life is simply to "play it cool." But at times, Richard says, he tends to follow another philosophy: "You can't go wrong with basic green."

Of the eight dollars he earns weekly, he saves as much as possible. According to his mother, one of the major recent expenses was a trip to Boston, which he financed himself. Some college-age friends of the family had invited the 13-year-old to tour Harvard and Radcliffe.

"This week, though, I'll just about break even financially," Richard commented. The reason: he bought a ticket for the Peter, Paul and Mary concert scheduled for Winter Weekend.

Richard feels that a major problem is that he doesn't have time to spend his money. But Dr. Wright feels that he just can't make up his mind about what to buy.

His favorite hobby is cars, "all kinds, but especially racing and ancient cars." His father owns two 1930 Model A's—as well as a more recent model for the family's personal use.

His father is minister of University Methodist Church. Both his parents believe in letting the children do what they want, but they admit that Richard is different.

"The others are more intensive and driving. Richard's more relaxed and comfortable," his mother said. She feels that this may be one reason for his "moderately good" school grades.

Richard attributes a lower average to the advanced algebra course he is taking, in addition to the regular eighth grade courses.

"I sweat my head off on the paper route, but won't quit — unless I get frozen," he said.

He recently twisted his ankle while delivering papers, but feels that "those are the breaks of the game."

His route, of about 70 customers, extends from the 900 block of Comstock avenue, about halfway to Manley Fieldhouse, to the Administration Building.

In between, he stops on the 700 and 800 blocks of Comstock, on College place, some of University avenue, on the main campus—and of course, at the dingleman.

His campus stops are at the Administration Building, Journalism Center, Main Library and the Daily Orange office.

"I know that when I come into the DO I'll stay for at least 15 or 20 minutes," he notes. "First I'm smothered by newshungry reporters. Then I have to listen to the numerous problems of the newspaper world and read "Peanuts."

He thinks his "college beat" is "a lot of laughs," and he likes the students. A devoted Syracuse fan, he attends weekend sports events since "I don't have school the next day," and listens to mid-week games on the radio.

His paper route accounts for about an hour and 45 minutes of his day. He spends approximately two hours on homework and sometimes watches television.

"There's a whole list of shows I like—Jackie Gleason, Yogi Bear—and Bob Hope Specials. Boy, I love those Bob Hope shows!" he remarks.

And he has a favorite comic strip, too—"Peanuts."

"I think maybe I'll write to the Department of Agriculture and start another business on the side," Richard concluded.

Wednesday Services Begin

Evening preaching services will begin at 7 p.m. today in the North Wing of Hendricks Chapel.

Participating during the series will be American Baptists, Protestant Episcopal Church, Lutheran Church, Methodist Church, United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A., and United Church of Christ.

The preacher this evening will be the Rev. Vernon Bigler, SU Methodist chaplain.

Today's service is the first of a weekly series to be held each Wednesday evening as a part of the Christian Church's observance of Lent.

Other services during Lent include interdenominational services of Holy Communion held each Wednesday at 7 p.m. in Hendricks Chapel, and a three hour service on Good Friday.

Hill Professor In Washington

Dr. Clayton L. Dawson, chairman of the department of Slavic languages and literature, is in Washington, D.C., serving with a national panel of language consultants processing applications for National Defense Foreign Language (NDFL) Fellowships.

Dr. Dawson, who also serves as chairman of the SU Committee for NDFL Fellowships, was invited by the language fellowship section of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. He is participating in the evaluation of applicants for fellowships in Russian study.

A graduate of the University of Washington, Dr. Dawson earned his master's and doctorate degrees at Harvard University.

He is chief lingaist for the Air Force language instruction program in the United States and is author of a number of textbooks used to teach Russian at several American universities.

Cohen at Parley

Dr. Julius S. Cohen, coordinator of Syracuse University's rehabilitation counselor training program, is in Washington today and Thursday for a planning conference on vocational rehabilitation of mentally retarded individuals.

Dr. Cohen has been invited with nine other authorities by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to discuss vocational programs for the mentally retarded.

ISO also hopes to sponsor several cultural events, bring foreign diplomats to the campus and co-operate with other student groups such as the Student Union board and the international student guides.

On Campus with Max Shulman

(Author of "I Was a Teen-age Dwarf", "The Many Loves of Dobie Gillis", etc.)

GLAD RAGS

The hounds of spring are on winter's traces. Soon buds the crocus, soon trills the giant condor, soon come the new spring fashions to adorn our lissome limbs.

And what will the American college student wear this spring? Gather round, you rascals, and light a Marlboro Cigarette and enjoy that fine mellow tobacco, that pure white filter, and possess your souls in sweet content, and listen.

As everyone knows, campus fashions have always been casual. This spring, however, they have gone beyond being merely casual: they have become makeshift.

The object is to look madly improvised, gaily spur-of-the-moment! For example, why don't you girls try wearing a peasant skirt with a dinner jacket? Or matador pants with a bridal veil? Or Bermuda shorts with bronze breastplates? Be rakish! Be impromptu! Be devil-take-the-hindmost!

And, men, you be the same. Try an opera cape with sweat pants. Or a letter-sweater with kilts. Or a strait jacket with hip boots. Be bold! Be daring! Be a tourist attraction!

Be rakish! Be impromptu!

But all is not innovation in college fashions this spring. In fact, one of the highlights of the season turns time backward in its flight. I refer, of course, to the comeback of the powdered wig.

This charming accoutrement, too long neglected, has already caught on with in undergrads everywhere. On hundreds of campuses the bossa nova is giving way to the minuet, and patriotic undergraduates are dumping British tea into the nearest harbor. This, as you may imagine, does not sit well with King George III who, according to reliable reports, has been stamping his foot and uttering curses not fit to reproduce in this family newspaper. For that matter, a lot of our own people are steamed up too, and there has even been some talk about the American colonies declaring their independence of England. But I hardly think it will come to that. I mean, how can we break with the mother country when we are dependent on her for so many things—linsey-woolsey, Minié balls, taper snuffers, and like that? She, on the other hand, relies on us for turkeys, Marlboro Cigarettes, and Route 66. So I say, if Molly Pitcher and those other Radcliffe hotheads will calm down, and if gentlemen will cry "Peace! Peace!" we may yet find an amicable solution to our differences. But let not our British cousins mistake this willingness to negotiate for weakness. If fight we must, then fight we will! Paul Revere is saddled up, the rude bridge arches the flood, and the ROTC is armed!

But I digress. We were smoking Marlboro Cigarettes—O, splendid cigarette! O, good golden tobaccos! O, pristine pure white filter! O, fresh! O, tasty! O, soft pack! O, flip top box! O, get some!—we were, I say, smoking Marlboros and talking about spring fashions.

Let us turn now to the season's most striking new feature—pneumatic underdrawers. These inflatable garments make every chair an easy chair. Think how welcome they will be when you sit through a long lecture! They are not, however, without certain dangers. Last week, for example, Rimbaud Sigafoos, a sophomore at the University of Pittsburgh, fell out of a 96th story window in the Tower of Learning. Thanks to his pneumatic underdrawers, he suffered no injury when he struck the sidewalk, but the poor fellow is still bouncing—his seventh consecutive day—and it is feared that he will starve to death.

Hughes' Magazine

a campus magazine.

Hughes, as editor of last year's Syracuse '10', came under sharp criticism from Hill Chancellor William P. Tolley and the Board of Publications for "airing the university's dirty linen" in the magazine rather than using it as the administration's ' 'showcase" of literary art.

Last fall Hughes went before the Board to ask support of a second campus magazine to deal specifically with current campus problems.

He was refused university authorization, which meant the university would not finance the publication; neither would it allow the sale of the magazine on campus.

The administration recently reversed the latter decision.

Hughes and his staff have been working on this issue for the past three months. Profits will be used to finance a second issue scheduled for sale in April, Hughes said.

Private donations from students, political groups and faculty members supplied the money needed for publication of the magazine.

Staff members include many who worked on Hughes' Syracuse '10' last year. They are: Renee Bruns, managing editor; Morey Foreman and Jeffrey Radford, senior editors; Brian Donovan, Judith Hill, Susan Crumbaker, J. C. Petersen, Susan Dreher, Helen Weldon, Mary Louise Wright, associate editors; and Ellen Becker, business manager.

therefore, must charge for admittance.

Only two of last year's eight champions will be among this year's crop of competitors, and host Syracuse boasts both men on its roster.

Phil "Corky" Voas is the reigning Eastern tumbling champ, and Ron Orlick will be defending his long horse vaulting title; both men are seniors.

Many fine performers will be representing Syracuse's vanquished EIGL foes. Tom Seward, Penn State's all-around performer, was runner-up in the floor exercise last year, and he should be expected to make his presence known this weekend.

Soph Sensation

Temple University, Syracuse's latest foe, will be led by sophomore sensation Mark Cohn and Bill Wright. Cohn is the only man to beat captain Ray Grimaldi of SU on the side horse this year, and Wright is a stand-out in the floor exercise and on the long horse.

The University of Pittsburgh's biggest man is senior Ed Zameonik. Zameonik took two seconds and a first against Syracuse this year. His specialties are the horizontal bar, the still rings, and the parallel bars.

Ken Slutzky of Army, brother of Syracuse wrestler Dick, placed first on the parallel bars and horizontal bar, and third on the still rings against SU, and he may be counted on to be among the finalists.

Voas Versatile

Besides winning the tumbling last year, Voas placed third in the floor exercise and second on the long horse. This year he is unbeaten in the floor exercise. Corky is entered in all eight events, which include the usual six plus the tumbling and the all-around.

Junior Carl Poplar of Syracuse was second on the parallel bars and flying rings last year, and he may compete in all eight events this year.

Captain Grimaldi was third in the side horse in 1961 and second last year. If he continues to progress at this rate, he should capture first place this year. He will also compete on the still rings, where he has only been defeated once this year, that by Voas.

Heavy Load

Sophomore Sid Oglesby will carry a good share of the load, since he is entered in all eight events. By Friday coach Romeo must decide whether Sid or Carl Poplar is to join Voas in the all-around.

Junior John Bird will represent the Orange on the side horse, possibly the long horse, and in the tumbling. Sophomore Tom Steeves will vie for the Orange on the long horse.

Orlick will compete on the parallel bars, in the tumbling, and in the floor exercise as well as the long horse.

may have run itself out defeating BC, 55-54, and has an indicative 0-6 road record.

The three leading Orange scorers are Carl Vernick with a 10.8 average, Herb Foster 10.6, and Phil Schoff 10.4. Herb Foster is also team rebound leader but is only 6-4 and will be giving away inches under the boards.

The Orange frosh will also travel to Niagara. The previous encounter saw the Tangerines defeat the Eagles. Sporting a 10-3 record and a recent victory over the Canisius frosh, the Orange frosh will be comparatively healthy with all members fit for action.

The Niagara frosh are paced by forwards Art Coleman and John Hayward, and guard Pat Broderick. Coleman and Broderick are 15-point men.

Skiers Close Season; Seek Perfect Record

The Syracuse University ski team, runaway winner of the 10-school competition last weekend at Labrador Mountain, shoots for a perfect season this weekend at the University of Buffalo.

The Orangemen won the team title at Labrador with a total of 370.93 points in four events. SU took first in the slalom, third in the cross country, third in the giant slalom and second in the jumping.

Buffalo lacks a solid team punch, but boasts two fine individual performers in Faker LaFountain and Bill Barton.

LaFountain, a versatile skier, gained second place honors in both the slalom and jumping competition at Labrador. He totalled 122.1 points in the 30-meter jumping event.

Barton won the giant slalom in a combined time of 87.1 seconds for two runs.

A number of individual skiers stood out for the victorious Piety. Chal Lyons of Syracuse snared the slalom title in 41.1 seconds, three-tenths of a second ahead of the Bulls' LaFountain. Orangeman Dave Menotti finished third.

Gary Ginter of SU took third place in the cross country competition behind Shepard of Cornell and Fay of Paul Smith.

Syracusans Bob Thoresen and Menotti finished two-three in back of Buffalo's Barton in the giant slalom.

In the 30 meter jumping, Orange team captain Bill Dalton took fifth place to give Syracuse a big boost in the team score. Bob Bryant and Lyons also did well for SU in the jumping event.

Orange Face Niagara, Seek Another Upset

By VIN ZUKOWSKI

The last time Syracuse faced a Niagara five, the Eagles were ranked 15th nationally and sported a 10-1 record, losing only to New England power Providence College. The Eagles left Syracuse 10-2, unranked, and upset by a 4-8 Orange squad.

Tonight Niagara will face Syracuse with a 12-4 ledger and a home-court advantage. Attempting to rebound from a recent beating from St. Bonaventure and vieing for a tournament spot in the NIT or the NCAA at-large group, the Niagara five will be playing for revenge.

Niagara has a definite height advantage and will force SU to shoot from the outside. Leading the high-scoring Purple are Andy O'Connell with a 20-point average, and 15-point producers Ken Glenn and Joe Maddrey.

These odds are stacked against the scrappy Orange squad. SU, 7-10, lacks a consistent tall man, a high-scorer, a defeat to rebound from, and a home-court advantage. The last two odds are important for SU

No whistling or shouting or calling by name. You sit there doing the twist from the neck up. Silence is broken after each score with polite applause, sometimes louder than others. Any boisterous name calling or cheering by nonconformists who might be in the crowd, or should we say gallery, is met with frowns and turned heads in unison.

While lobbying it during intermission, spectators discussed how "this backhand did that, and that shot drew this out of position and why they could never do it themselves."

Then it was back to your seat to "ou and ah" (to yourselves that is) some more. You turn your head from left to right, and then back following the bouncing ball as it is cleverly smashed back and forth with concentration and Australian skill.

The Professional Tennis Tour stopped in Utica Sunday night. We saw Bucholz defeat Laver, Rosewall win over McKay and Ayala defeat Gimeno. The Aussies won the doubles.

The two Americans, McKay and Bucholz, look more like they should have been handed a football instead of a racket as kids. Both stand over six feet.

MacKay played one of the more colorful sets of the evening, not hesitating to verbally express dissatisfaction with one of his shots. Andres Gimeno also commented on his own game. An interpreter wasn't readily available to cope with his Spanish, however.

Ken Rosewall is leading the tour with an 8-2 record. Rod Laver has won four of eleven matches. Bucholz had little trouble with Laver, who has a long way to go to catch up to the pros. His game doesn't appear quite as awesomely played as it was when we saw him last summer in one of his romps through an amateur ladder. Time should prove him one of the greatest.

Syracuse University's Eastern gymnastic champs will play host to the 36th Annual Eastern Individual Gymnastic Championships this coming Friday and Saturday. The meet, which is to be held in the new Manley Field House, features 99 entrants, representing 11 schools.

Action will get under way at 2:00 p.m. Friday with the preliminaries in the floor exercise, horizontal bar, side horse, and long horse events being held at that time.

After a break for dinner, the preliminaries of the parallel bars, still rings, and tumbling events will commence at 7:00. Before the evening is over a new all-around champion will be crowned, and the field will be narrowed down to the top eight and ties in each event.

Finals Saturday

The finals for all events will be held during the Saturday session, which starts at 2:00 p.m. The individual champions will be determined by averaging Friday's score with Saturday's score, thus insuring against the crowning of a performer because of a fluke performance. There will be no team titles awarded in the meet except to Syracuse for winning the EIGL crown.

Each of the Friday sessions will have a general admission charge of $1, and the finals will cost $1.50; I.D. cards will not be honored. The proceeds go to the ECAC, which sponsors the meet.

18 Senators To Investigate Liquor Ruling

No Actions Taken On JSG Constitution, New Elections Act

By SUSAN WEINBERG
Junior Editor

The chairman of Joint Student Legislature's special committee on the university drinking policy named 18 students to aid him in the inquiry at Wednesday's JSL meeting.

Chairmen of the five sub-committees, according to Sen. Alfred "Win" Whittaker (Lambda Chi Alpha), will be: J. Nelson Happy, information; Jan Semple, correspondence; Geraldine Porter, opinion; Ceci Sogioka, proposals and report; and William Gedalecia, overall assistant.

Members of the committees include: Louise Bal, Carl Corallo, Ronald Zoung, information; Anna Lee Gruber, Diane Hoffman, Ruth Jelline, Margaret Seeley, correspondence; and Richard Gould, Judith Findling Taunya Lovell, Judith Piester, Mark Samuel, Trish Spear, opinions.

Under Whittaker's these guidance committees will investigate thoroughly the campus drinkfic recommendations to the Hill administration.

Heads of the subcommittees probably will choose additional members to work with them, Whittaker said. "Any interested students should contact the individual chairmen."

Novelist C. P. Snow to Speak At 109th Commencement

British novelist and physicist Charles P. Snow will deliver the major address at the 109th SU commencement exercise June 2, Chancellor William P. Tolley announced Wednesday night.

Snow, who was knighted in 1957, will receive an honorary doctor of letters degree from the university.

Senior class President Henry Lee, speaking on behalf of the class, said, "We feel very honored to have C. P. Snow as our commencement speaker, and look forward to sharing with him the culmination of our college careers."

Snow has received world-wide attention in both arts and sciences. He has done work on molecular structure, while his novels have been compared to those of Marcel Proust and John Galsworthy.

Lecturer

The 58-year-old scholar is also a lecturer, essayist and playwright.

Dr. Snow started writing for relaxation from his scientific studies. His first novels were mysteries.

By 1935 he had changed to more serious fiction and has since written "The Affair," "The Masters" and "Strangers and Brothers."

As a lecturer, Dr. Snow is best known for his 1958 address at Cambridge Uniyersity on "The Two Cultures and the Scientific Revolution." In the talk, he expressed concern over lack of communication between people in science and literature.

He was born Oct. 15, 1905, in Leicester, England. He graduated from Leicester University College with first class honors in physics in 1927 and earned his master of science degree there the next year.

Dr. Snow received his doctorate at Cambridge University in 1930.

C. P. SNOW

At Christ's College, Cambridge, he worked from 1930-1950 on scientific research and a projected 11-volume set of novels on 20th century British life. Eight have been published to date.

At the outbreak of World War II, Sir Charles temporarily left the university and served in the British Ministry of Labour. He was civil service commissioner from 1945 to 1960 and presently is physicist-director of the English Electric Co., Ltd.

In California

During a visit to the United States three years ago, Dr. Snow taught at the University of California at Berkeley.

He delivered the 1960 Godkin lectures, later published as "Sci-

'A Jew?-No Pledge Pin,': Lambda Chi

Frosh Claims Bid Withdrawn

By T. LEE HUGHES

A Hill freshman said Tuesday a pledge bid he had received from Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity was withdrawn when brothers learned he was Jewish.

Sy Oskeroff, of Syosset, said the bid had been submitted by Lambda Chi Alpha to the dean of Men's office Monday, Feb. 18.

"Late that night a brother from the house came to my room and said that one thing had been bothering the brothers," said Oskeroff." It had been bought to their attention that I might not be Christian."

Oskeroff told the brother he is Jewish. According to Oskeroff, the brother told him, in apologetic tones, that Lambda Chi Alpha has been traditionally Christian" house.

The following day the bid was withdrawn.

Oskeroff said he spoke to Alfred (Win) Whittaker, past president of the house.

"He told me essentially the same thing that had appeared in his column in the Daily Orange Friday," said Oskeroff.

Whittaker defended fraternity discriminatory policies on grounds that some "sacred" fraternity rituals could not be acceptable to persons of certain religions.

"I told him that I could not expect him to go through our ritual without his being a hypocrite to his religion," Whittaker said. Whittaker said the house had been informed by a coed that Oskeroff might be Jewish. Brothers then checked with "a person connected with the university," who affirmed the freshman's religion.

Oskeroff said there was no mention of Lambda Chi's Christian tradition" at any time during rush sessions he attended.

He said Asst. Dean of Men David Tatham told him "some action might be taken with regard to the problem." Oskeroff added Dean of Men Earle W. Clifford considered the problem, but no promise of a definite course of action was made.

Clifford was not available for comment Wednesday.

Dean Tatham described the incident as a "classic of its kind," and told the Daily Orange "it is

Alaska Honors Maxwell Grad

A graduate of the Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs has been named outstanding young man of the year by the Anchorage, Alaska, Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Dr. William M. Shear, who received his doctor of social science degree from Syracuse, is currently a political science professor at Alaska Methodist University.

Idealistic Goals? A Personal View

By SY OSKEROFF

THROUGHOUT MY educational expeience I read. I studied. I heard about prejudice and discrimination. And, I said to myself, "It is a bad thing. I shall not uphold it." but like most of us I vegetated.

Unfortunately it took an act of discrimination to show me that until now I have done nothing significant to combat it. For those of you who claim to despise prejudice and those of you who, in your hearts, believe that discrimination should have no home in a democracy I say this: Striving for a society established on principles of harmony not hatred is morally rewarding. What are YOU going to do?

In past weeks, more than just superficial glances have been taken toward the current problem of the Greek society on campus and the pitfalls which exist there. Strong and bitter accusations have been made against the Greeks. Contentions for the beneficial aspects of the system have been expounded upon. Unfortunately, exponents of either viewpoint, have neglected to realize the obvious prejudice they display by taking such one-sided views. These exponents, in general, either completely condemned or atoned the Greek system. I am not committed to either viewpoint but will attempt to take an unbiased middle course in scrutinizing the situation.

The concept of the social fraternity, like any other organization founded on high ideals and noble intensions, has proven its value; if it had not it would have floundered in its infancy. But now, let us examine the creeds of our campus fraternities. We observe beliefs in "fairness" and "fellowship;" we hear phrases of building character, "striving for truth," and "teaching morals;" and inevitably there arises the word "brotherhood." These ARE worthy ideals—ideals no opponent of the Greek system could refute. But in many instances they seem to be ideals in theory only, not in actual practice.

Right to Know: Policy Statement

It is indeed unfortunate that the name of a specific fraternity must appear in such an embarrassing position on the front page of today's Daily Orange.

It is unfortunate not because the Daily Orange chose to use the name Lambda Chi Alphia but because the nature of the story left us no choice but to use the name. For the seriousness of the incident demanded identification of the fraternity. Without identification the story would be meaningless.

Without identification it would join that useless pile of generalities which always appear about discrimination in fraternities without getting very much concerned except for idealists who also deal in generalities.

For this reason alone we would be justified in using the names of these organizations that create news which is of such a nature as to cause concern among the university population. But we have further reason for doing so.

We have facts to deal with and to present to our readers. The organizations whose names appear in such stories have sorely abused the trust of Syracuse University and so we feel no obligation to treat them specially. We are free from the shackles of subjectivity and self-interest.

Our obligation is to the students who read the Daily Orange. When confronted by such a story as that which appears in today's issue, they ask one question before all others: What is the name of the fraternity concerned? We must answer that question.

When the facts of the story are reported to us first hand from persons closely involved we feel confident of our right to publish names in such stories. Anything else would be less than good journalism.

We learned a long time ago that, even if you try, you cannot have the pleasure of everyone's friendship. If friendship is lost while we are performing this most important duty, then we stand ready to suffer the consequences.

When the Daily Orange has the facts, it will give those facts to the readers. For only with a completely informed public can we expect to arouse feeling against wrongs that are allowed to happen.

We realize that other houses practice discrimination but these are houses who are still in the relative security of general statements against prejudice and clauses which cannot bring pressure on the houses to change.

The names which have appeared in the Daily Orange thus far are those which we learned of. We hope the threat of unfavorable publicity may have some effect in stemming other similar activity. If not, it is just a matter of time before other names are placed before the reader for consideration.

Here we must add our belief in the justification of mentioning names of fraternities which are brought up for disciplinary action of all types. When these names are made available to us through reliable sources, we shall perform our duty and publish them.

It may be argued that this is prejudicial against fraternities. But is not fraternity membership a privilege that carries with it an obligation? That obligation is for its members to act so as not to discredit the fraternity and for the fraternity as a body to act so as not to discredit the fraternity system and Syracuse University.

When these trusts are broken and violations occur, the readers have the right to know by whom they were violated.

It is not pleasent, but it is right. And because it is right, we shall not cease from using names when names are needed. To do otherwise would be to fail in our obligation.

Curfew

To the Editor:

In the Thursday, Feb. 21, DO, the first article of a regular column on JSG appeared. The article reiterated the accomplishments of JSG through the fall. Two items in this article stood out to me. The first was the statement under the major achievements of JSG which ran, ". . . curfews were established during exam period." Later on in the article I read, ". . . the coeds who benefited from curfew extensions during exams . . . never stop to credit JSG for these privileges."

The second fact that stood out was the statement at the top of the article that the contents were to be edited by the DO only for style, taste and accuracy. In my opinion the latter two were missing in the article. The Association of Women Students is in charge of curfew extensions. The Standards Board of AWS initiated and decided upon the extension of curfew for studying purposes. The Standards Council was never approached by JSG to consider this action. Neither has AWS been consulted on any other program involving coeds.

The purpose of the article, as stated, is to inform students of the workings of JSG. What we got was a list of achievements which had already received much publicity. I question the necessity for the c o n t i n u a l self-praise which JSG sees fit to splash across the DO. Let's have a little less back-slapping and a little more honest reporting out of the future articles of this column.

Spokesman

Mr. Corwin seems determined to ride the racial issue as far as it will take him. The manner and quantity of his writing suggest a man who enjoys listening to his own impassioned tirades.

It is very unfortunate that a serious problem that needs a spirit of "let's see what we can do about this" should be backed in the campus newspaper of a northern university by a man who, despite being a graduate student, can only sound like a crackpot.

Though I, who have experienced discrimination much more violent and certainly more traditional and widespread than the kind Mr. Corwin talks about, dislike very much Mr. Whittaker's last D.O. article, let me call your attention to one good point he made: Persistent hollering about the discrimination issue has caused the Greeks to go "underground." I would modify this to the national context to which Mr. Corwin has expanded his field of criticism and say that hateful hollering can only intensify hate on both sides.

Mr. Corwin, a graduate student in psychology, should be quite aware of this. If he is not, then I am sorry for both him and the Hill psych department; if he is, which I rather suspect, then he is a clever man with something in the back of his mind. His cleverness is a bit transparent though—while in his "article" he plans his semantics so that the end result is that Negro=white man; "nigger" = colored man = poor (low socio-economic status) man, thus ditching the racial issue per se and leading up to an argument for some form of communism. he writes his argument in a slightly phony-sounding "nigger" accent and puts the whole thing between quotation marks. Why? Perhaps because now when criticized, he can say that what he wrote is not necessarily his own view.

Regardless of that, if I were a "nigger," I would want another, more intelligent, Negro to speak for me rather than some patronizing white with his phony semantics and illogical arguments.

Draft

To the Editor:

When will "draft-dodgers" realize conscription is necessary to keep the military forces of the United States at minimum strength? I may have misconstrued Mr. McCain's main point in his "DRAFT" article appearing in Thursday's DO, but it seems to have been made without any consideration being given to the very serious problem of Communist world domination and the subsequent loss of those freedoms for which our forefathers founded this nation.

It is extremely doubtful that complete voluntary armed forces could possibly provide the manpower needed to meet the defense requirements of this nation. Mechanical fighting elements alone cannot keep lands free; this can only be done by men, men in large numbers.

There is a possibility the fighting armies of the future will be voluntary, highly paid and consequently comparatively small; but for the present, Mr. McCain had better offer a good alternative to conscription, or as he called it—the draft, before he encourages "draft-dodgers" to write to the so called "Friends Committee on National Legislation."

Time

To the Editor:

The writer of the editorial "Discrimination: Time Will Tell" in Monday (2/18)'s D.O. has the wrong answer to the right question. He asks, regarding prejudice, "How does a student change his views and believe something he has never been taught?" The writer's answer is that "to tumble the walls of discrimination" the university should present the opportunity . . . to associate with persons . . . of different religion, race, national origin and political and cultural backgrounds."

People differ, and the groups they are members of differ. The university, in bringing these different groups together, can and does in fact breed and reinforce prejudice, not dissipate it. This it does by exposing the student to ethnic groups he has never had contact with before. He sees that, in fact, these groups do differ from other people, and sometimes differ in ways that are undesirable. This is one way prejudice actually begins and is reinforced. Thus, prejudice, in many cases, is not based on fiction, it reflects reality.

Also, minority ethnic groups whom majority prejudice is against are not justified in s c r e a m i n g, "persecution!" This is because they are, more often than not, just as guilty as their "persecutors"; for they are, in fact, prejudiced also—against the majority.

Block Seating Set For Hayes, Evans

Block seating for Syracuse University students who wish to plan "theater parties" for the Helen Hayes Maurice Evans performance Tuesday night in the George L. Manley Field House is available, according to University Regent Theater business manager.

The two stars will appear in "A Program for Two Players" at 8:30 p.m. They will present selections from Shakespeare.

The University Regent, administered by University College, the adult education division of Syracuse University, is sponsoring the one-night event, which has been scheduled for the Manley Field house due to the large crowd expected.

Burt said the block seating is being offered to fraternities, sororities, living centers and others because several campus organizations expressed interest in making the event "a special date night."

Tickets are on sale at the University Regent Theater, 820 E. Genesee St., from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. weekdays and from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday.

Folk Concert Set for Sunday

Four young local folk singers will give a concert 3 p.m. Sunday at the Syracuse Polish Home, 915 Park Ave.

John Gaines, SU grad and ex-Daily Orange columnist will head the bill. He has played and sung in New York City and area colleges.

Also on the bill are singer Duffy Kivert, '62 grad; Mill Haliwel, a grad student banjo player; and Martha Lent, a local housewife who plays the autoharp.

Books

Salinger

REVIEWER RISA GLAUBMAN, a sophomore in the College of Liberal Arts, is a member of Freshman Women's Honorary. Though interested in speech, drama, writing and sociology, she plans to attend law school. The book she discusses are available at the Corner Store.

"Raise High the Roof Beam, Carpenters and Seymour, an Introduction" by. J. D. Salinger. Little, Brown and Co. 218 pages. $4.

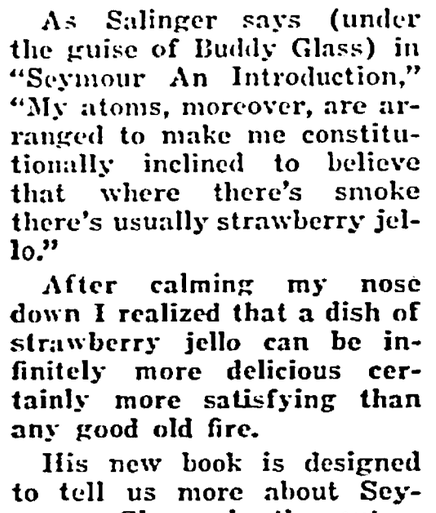
To anyone who has read "Nine Stories" and then gone on to "Franny and Zooey," the publication of a new J. D. Salinger book, especially one concerned with the Glass family, is like an invitation to sit on the fire engine, next to the dalmation at the biggest fire of the year.

As Salinger says (under the guise of Buddy Glass) in "Seymour An Introduction," "My atoms, moreover, are arranged to make me constitutionally inclined to believe that where there's smoke there's usually strawberry jello."

After calming my nose down I realized that a dish of strawberry jello can be infinitely more delicious certainly more satisfying than any good old fire.

His new book is designed to tell us more about Seymour Glass, brother-extraordinare, "banana fish" esquire. The answers are there but not on the surface. The first long piece treats Seymour's wedding day through Buddy's eyes. Enlarging upon the mysterious Muriel, Seymour's wife, it finishes placing her among the "over-analysis leads to paralysis" brigade of angry analyzed young women.

The images and interspersed anecdotes provide crumbs of information to further whet the appetites of all who desire to understand the Glass family. We've even given a portion of Seymour's diary dug up from a bathroom hamper. (Where else would a Salinger character put a diary?)



"Seymour, An Introduction" is different. The book is a characterization of an individual's relation to his God and his guilt is sometimes wavering in his belief. The only annoyance in this part is that Seymour's much talked about poetry is never produced. The superficial reason for this does not satisfy the reader and I doubt it is even meant to.

"Seymour" is more conversational than the other stories and its nature is not disguised by even the pretense of a unified story line.

"No, no, I can't stop now," Salinger says at one point. Indeed, for the last half of the piece the reader is certain of the fact. He says all he wants to (under the guise of necessary catharsis) and at some points the piece gets bogged down. However, the latter half more than makes up for this, it being an expanded version of Zooey's phone conversation at the end of "Franny and Zooey."

His boyhood reminiscences of "stoopball" and "curbside marbles" induce "grin-lines" much wiser and worthwhile than the lines in some of today's best selling literature.

In quoting Chuang-tzu, Buddy (speaking for Salinger) says, "The sage is full of anxiety and indecision undertaking anything and so he is always successful." The author's anxiety is evident and in "Seymour An Introduction" the indecision is palpably there but J. D. Salinger is once again ultimately successful.

FILMS

'Days of Wine & Roses'

The excellent qualities "Days of Wine and Roses," which opened at RKO Keith's Wednesday, are its acting and its theme. Stars Lee Remick and Jack Lemmon turn in fine performances (Lemmon's being of Oscar winning caliber) as a young alcoholic couple.

The film's theme, that of degradation of liquor, is dramatically revealed through J. P. Miller's script that he adopted from his original television play.

"Days of Wine and Roses" has its faults though. Powerful, indeed overwhelming as a tv drama, this intimate story of a superfically happy, but insecure couple destroyed by demon rum, becomes a bit thin, and almost cliche when blown up to fit the giant theater screen.

Director Blake Edwards, aware of his stars' talents give them almost full reign during some sequences. When Lemmon goes beserk in his father-in-law's green house looking for booze it is all Edwards' camerman can do to follow Lemmon's "drunken" eratic movement.

And despite a few unusual camera angles during Lemmons "d. t.'s'- the impact of this almost terrifying sequences is conveyed through the acting, not through the camera.

But, if one can accept the non-cinema moments of the film and the occasionally obvious cliche (Lemmon hides under a blanket when he thinks his father-in-law will discover him, and his wife's, drunkeness) the film becomes quiet moving and meaningful.

Lemmon plays a public relations counselor frustrated by the hypocrisies of his job. He drinks to "sweeten" up his life. Remick, at first a tea-totaler, begins drinking to participate in the "joys" her husband receives. As the film continually points out, theirs was a three-way marriage, Lemmon, Remick and booze.

Soon the two of them go deeper and deeper into the lies of liquor: Fired from his job, Lemmon blames inter-office politics. Eventually, instead of rationalizing their failures, they hide them under the rose of scotch.

Here the tv play becomes a bit padded as Lemmon goes off and on the wagon more times than is necessary to communicate the lonliness of a solitary drunk and the essential weakness of their marriage.

Love is not enough. One needs will power to save an alchy homelife.

sociation of persons having similar tests and interests, only if those persons are all white? Is character building actually worthwhile if it builds only one type of character? Is all the truth concerning people with varying social backgrounds and cultural traditions actually strived for? Why must brotherhood be construed to mean an organization whose members are bound by common ideals, among them reverence, but one specifying that reverence should be confined to only one religious belief?

The Boy Scouts of America, for example, is an organization committed to worthy ideals, among them reverence to God. Thus, when a Scout recites the Scout Law he says, "A Scout is reverent." He does not say a Scout is reverent, but only to the principles, traditions, and beliefs of the Christian religion, or the Jewish religion, or the Buddhist. Reverence like truth is an all encompassing concept which cannot be specific or discriminating.

Education

Cognizance that the Greek system is instrumental in the educational process is vital. The close contact and association which life in a fraternity or sorority involves offers a lesson in living unobtainable in a college classroom. And, as such, it composes much of ones informal education. After considering that of the Syracuse fraternities, eight are "traditionally Jewish" and twenty-two "traditionally Christian," we could draw an analogy to a southern educational policy which was declared unconstitutional; a policy of "separate but equal."

In 1954 the United States Supreme Court made the following judgment in the Brown verses the Board of Education of Topeka case: "To separate them (students of different ethnic groups) from others of similar age and qualifications. . .may effect their hearts and minds in a way unlikely ever to be undone." This decision of the courts is founded in the belief that prejudice can only be eliminated when peoples of "different' backgrounds meet, work, and speak together. How else can one "thoroughly" understand a stranger unless he had such intimate association with him?

Rumors

Religious, political, or racial discrimination among the Greeks has been rumored about, and only vague accounts of such discrimination are heard. The following incident, for those people either naive or still unconvinced, is an explicit case of discrimination within the Greek system. Here are the facts.

After two weeks of informal and formal fraternity rushing a rushee submitted, on February 18, his bids. On the same date the fraternities placed their bids. After the Alumni IFC matched the bids, the rushee had been formally accepted by the fraternity of his first choice. Then, late that same evening the fraternity sent a representative to speak to the rushee. It appeared that the all Christian fraternity, after placing its bids, had been recently informed that their rushee might not be of the Christian faith. Their representative went to verify the report. The rushee told the representative the shocking truth, he was Jewish. The following day the rushee spoke to a more formal representative of the fraternity who stated that 1) the fraternity was "traditionally" Christian and 2) they could not expect the rushee, without becoming a hypocrite to himself and his religion, to profess belief in Christian ideals, something each pledge must do in the initiation ritual. On February 20, the fraternity withdrew its bid and the rushee was free to pledge any other house.

Clear Cut

The situation is clear cut. The rushee was barred from membership in the fraternity on the grounds of his religious belief.

Prejudice, discrimination, bias. These prehistoric monsters have survived through countless decades. They manifest themselves even as our professors and guest speakers discuss their apparent evils. They are monsters, we are constantly reminded of. Opponents of democracy harangue, "Americans, you speak of democracy, yet look at your Negroes, look at the Jews," and we are flushed with embarassment. Prejudice is definitely a national problem. But, it is only one large puzzle composed of individual pieces. Our campus is a component part.

Is not the college campus, as the last threshold of one's formal education, the place where any existing prejudice should be stifled? As an international juncture should it not be conducive to harmony, not antagonism? Should not each of us take pride in our fellow students and any of their activities?

Bias

Prejudice, discrimination, bias. They smother one of our basic rights, the freedom of choice. On this topic, Dean Clifford comments, "Any restriction on freedom of choice is something we (the administration) have traditionally opposed. The real freedom of groups and individuals to choose their associates without restriction, either legislative or procedural, is our ultimate goal."

My ultimate goal is to see the creation of completely "open" fraternities and sororities to all individuals fulfilling university rush requirements, regardless of their race or political or religious affiliations; and, thus the realization of dynamic, not stereotyed organizations; organizations marked by diversity and formed by members instilled with the belief that in the transiently intellectual university society, a common desire for the total elimination of prejudice and discrimination, will, on the grounds mentioned above, if it has not yet taken root, be planted and nurtured.

No Pledge Pin

not often that we come up with such a clear-cut case."

Oskeroff said he has been invited by Clifford to attend the Discrimination Board today to relate his story.

Whittaker said Lambda Chi Alpha has no written clause against taking a Semite. He said the ritual of the house, however, would be difficult for a Jew to accept.

Whittaker refused to comment on whether his house has worked actively in the national fraternity to have the "ritual" revised.

"Our conventions are secret," he said.

Brazil Group Visits Campus

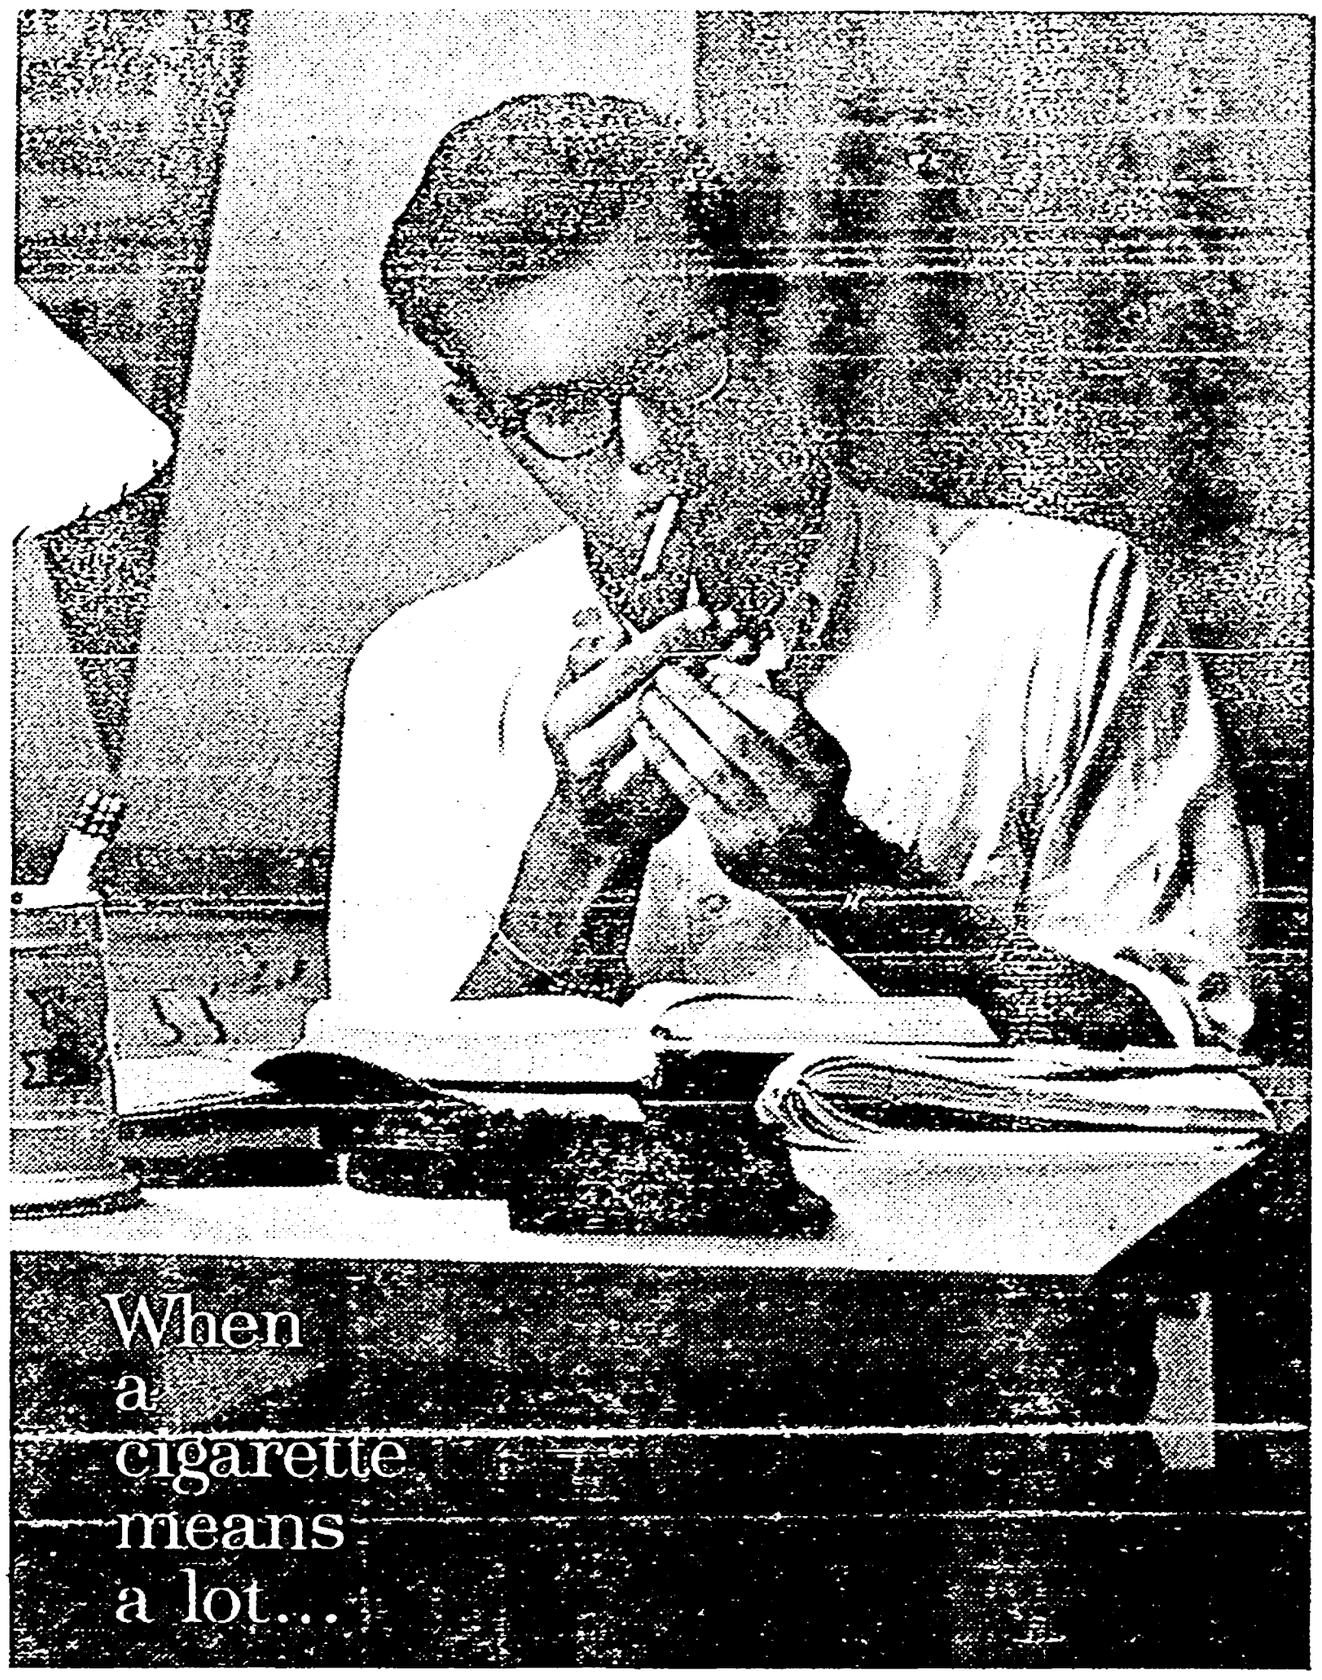
A group of engineering students from Brazil visited the Syracuse campus last weekend.

The 15 students, from the University of Rio Grande do Sul, are making a one-month tour of the eastern United States under the cultural exchange program of the State Department.

In Syracuse, the Brazilian students were guests of the World Affairs Council.

Friday night they attended a reception given in their honor by the Hispanic-American Student Association at the St. Thomas More Chapel.

After visiting several industries in the area, the Brazilian students left for Boston.



PhiBetaKappa Takes Three

Bruce Baker Roswig, Susan Rachel Grimley, and Jeffrey Allan Greenhouse were initiated into the Syracuse chapter of Phi Beta Kappa honorary fraternity recently.

The three seniors were selected based on 90 hours work with a 2.8 cumulative average. Seniors with 105 hours and a2.5 average will be eligible in March.

Dr. Snow also spoke on "The Moral Un-Neutrality of Science" at a meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, warning of the need for restricting nuclear arms.

Queen Elizabeth II knighted him in 1957 and named him commander of the Order of the British Empire.

Dr. Snow is former president of the Library Association and is a member of the Societe Europeene de Culture.

A foreign honorary member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, he holds honorary degrees from two British universities and four American schools.

Booth to Head UC Seminar On Poetry of Robert Frost

Philip Booth, associate professor of English and Hill poet-in-residence who studied under the late Robert Frost, will begin a six-week seminar at University College March 4.

The seminar topic will be "The Poetry of Robert Frost." Frost's poems will be read to discover levels of meaning, implications and metaphors and the paradox of Frost's view of the world.

Booth's first collection of poems, "Letter from a Distant Land," won the Academy of American Poets Lamont Prize.

That volume and his second, "The Islanders," were nominated for the National Book Award and a Pulitzer Prize.

Booth has held a Guggenheim Fellowship in writing. His works have been published in Atlantic, New Yorker and Partisan Review.

Prior to coming to Syracuse in 1961, Prof. Booth taught at Dartmouth and Wellesley Colleges.

The seminar, offered by UC's Humanistic Studies Center, will meet Monday evenings from 8-10 p.m.

TriDeltOffers Scholarship

All women students are eligible to apply for the annual Delta Delta Delta sorority general fund scholarship award.

Applications for the $300 scholarship are available in 108 Women's Bldg. Friday is the deadline for applications.

Applicants do not have to be sorority members but should be well-qualified students, according to Elizabeth Dye, service projects chairman.

The scholarship will be forwarded to the winner at the beginning of the term for which it is awarded. The grant may be used for summer session study.

JSG Takes the Floor

Among the accomplishments of Joint Student Government listed in last week's column were longer library hours, supervised study rooms, and extended women's curfews during exams. Actually, the Association of Women Students (AWS) was, and always has been, responsible for the lengthening of curfews and we apologize for the oversight. A situation such as this, in which two student organizations collaborate to benefit the student body, can serve as an example of the importance of close cooperation among all student organizations in the future.

When evaluating the potential power of our students government, students generally fall into one of two main categories.

There are those who feel totally insignificant, and, thus are hesitant to make suggestions to their Joint Student Legislature delegate, because what "they may want would carry no real influence."

On the other hand, there are those who blindly argue that "if student government is as powerful as it contends, why can't it run the university?" These people, who hold that JSL is ineffective, support their attack by pointing out how useless it would be if a bill approving a wet campus, off-campus living, etc. were passed.

Both groups are missing the point. They are overlooking just exactly what functions JSL has.

First of all, let's look at where ideas may originate, and what happens to them after they reach the assembly.

Suggestions, criticisms, and complaints can be taken by individual students to their JSL delegate, who, in turn, should carry them on to the assembly meetings, while others may be discovered in a student opinion survey. Many suggestions arise at the annual Fall Pinebrook Conference and still others can be initiated by JSG, class presidents, or, as a matter of fact, anyone who wishes to attend a JSL assembly meeting.

Bills, such as the anti-noise legislation, require little research and red tape, and thus, may be acted upon almost immediately. However, topics such as a drinking policy or the car bill, deal with areas outside the scope of JSL and another type of action is undertaken.

For example, the drinking policy is the current subject of deliberation. This is automatically referred to a committee which investigates, does research, discovers the general tone of student opinion, and prepares an official report.

The report is given to the JSL steering committee where it undergoes more examination. The subject may be terminated right there, or taken back to the senators by a two-thirds vote.

In other words, after the case has been built up sufficiently, the proposal is subjected to free debate in the assembly. If it is voted upon and passed, then it is ready to present to the administration as a recommendation.

The JSL president and vice president or their representatives serve as members of all university committees such as athletic, social, orientation and design.

Sitting on these committees and boards with members of the administration, student government leaders are able to present officially student views on any matters and, consequently participate in the making of university policy.

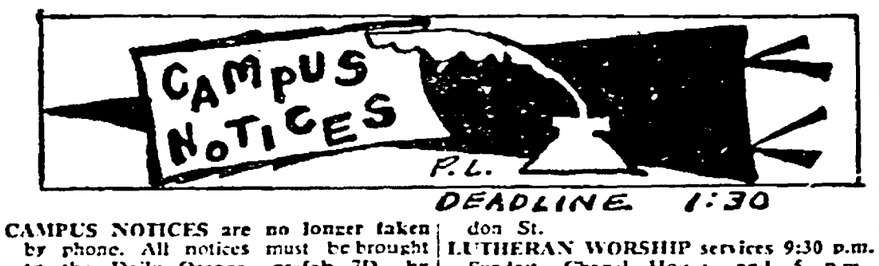
Dr. Hart Gets Anthro Grant

A grant of $1,200 to be used for anthropological research has been awarded to Dr. Donn V. Hart, SU associate professor of anthropology and social sciences.



The award, made by the Wenner-Gren Foundation, will be used to finance Dr. Hart's project of preparing an annotated bibliography for scholars interested in Southeast Asia.

The bibliography will cover material available in five languages: English, Spanish, French, German and Dutch.

Dr. Hart is a graduate of the University of California at Berkeley and Harvard University and earned his doctorate at Syracuse.

He was a Fulbright Research Fellow in the Phillipines and also a Smith-Mundt Exchange professor at the University of the Phillipines.

He is author of several books and articles dealing with South-east Asia.

Discussing discrimination in Syracuse University fraternities specifically, and the fraternity system in general, the two men debated two hours before opening for a half hour audience question period.

Daily Orange Editor-in-Chief Milton Joffe moderated the debate.

"You have a right to be prejudiced," Rigoli commented. "Sure you are a bigot, but you're a bigot by choice." He advanced the theory that one has the right to choose his friends on any basis he desires, as long as he does not infringe upon the rights of others.

"We have a right to be bigots, but so did Germany in 1939," Corwin countered. Because a thing is legal doesn't make it morally right, he contended.

He also attacked the theory of choosing friends as one pleases on grounds it narrows one's circle of intellectual stimulation to include only people of similar ethnic backgrounds.

Limiting himself to a circle of acquaintences from similar backgrounds, the individual is committing "psychological suicide," Corwin said.

Supporting the Rigoli theory that it is an infringement upon a group to say it must accept someone into their circle, an unidentified Hill law student, who is a resident advisor, told Corwin such a doctrine forces "everybody to love everyone else."

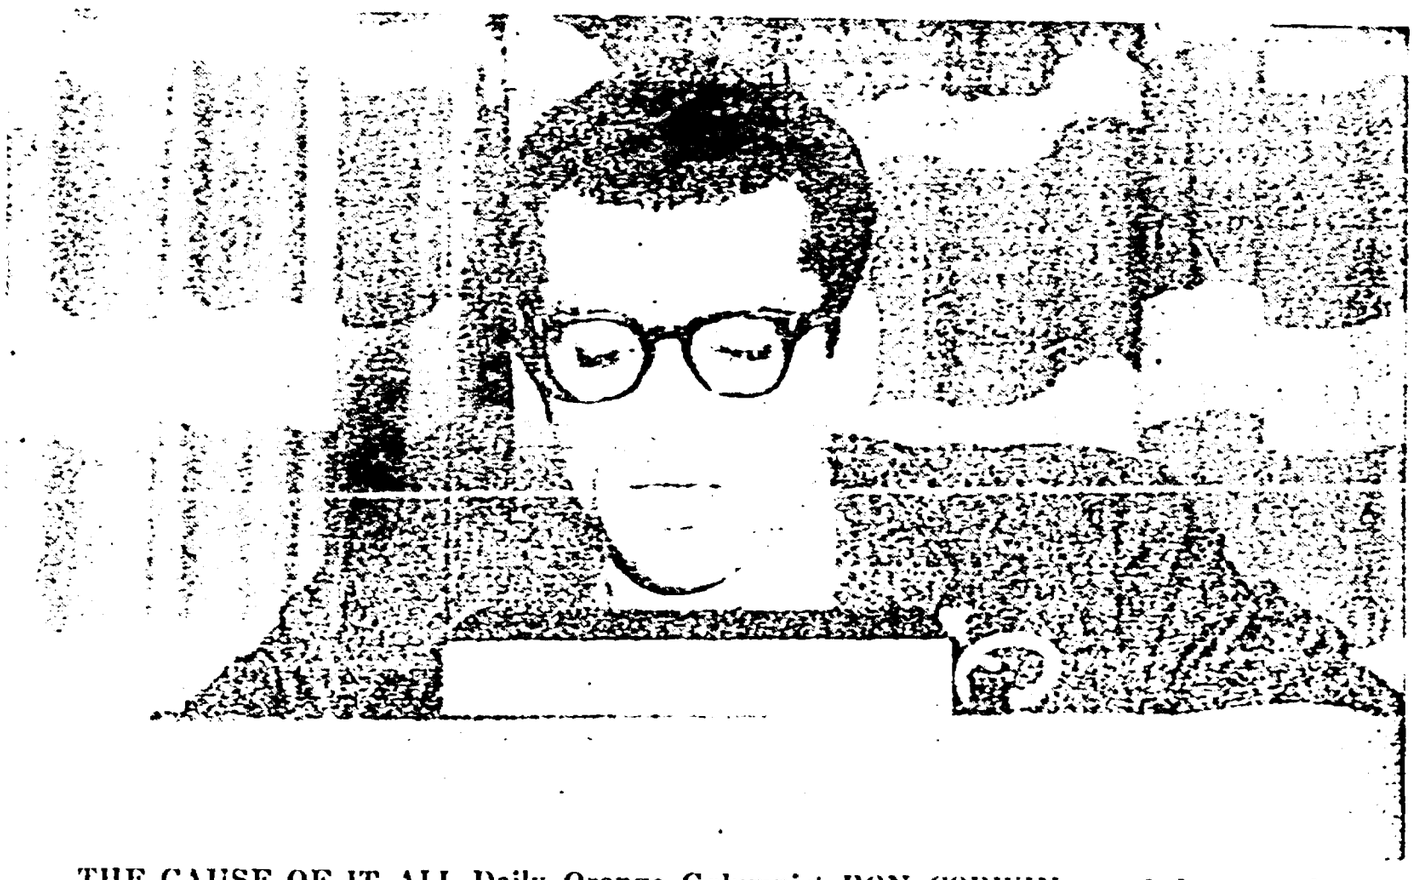
When asked his criteria for an ideal fraternity, Corwin replied he would like to start a house where "the first twenty boys over the line" would get bids.

"Then I might find out something very important. I might find out that all Negroes do not have natural rhythm and are not natural lovers. I might find out that all Jews are not misers. I might find out that all Christians don't cross themselves 15 times a day.

Corwin urged university administrators or fraternity councils to take immediate steps to eliminate local houses with discriminatory clauses in their national charters.

A date should be set to have all the clauses removed, and if this is not done, houses should be removed fro mthe campus., Corwin asserted.

"Even this allows for the admission of only one Jew, Christian or Negro," he said. "Living in a democracy means more than this spasmodic attempt."



Rigoli called for understanding rather than deadlines to deal with the problem of discrimination. "Integration in the South was not achieved overnight. In like matter neither can this basic problem be changed overnight," he said.

Rigoli cited the case of his own house, Phi Delta Theta, as one of four Hill fraternities with written discrimination clauses.

A vote for local autonomy at the Phi Delta national convention last summer lacked only 15 votes for passage, he said. The Syracuse chapter actively backs this move to change the clause, active evidence "of the interest here at SU to solve this problem.

Rigoli challenged Corwin to the debate after the latter wrote a column in the Daily Orange entitled "Ignorance," in which he slammed fraternities for breeding narrowness and prejudice.

18 Senators to Investigate

In other Legislature business, the subcommittee reports on proposed JSG constitution changes and the Elections Act were read. No action was taken upon either.

Some of the proposed changes in the constitution which will be considered further at special hearings next week include:

1. Dropping the "Joint" from Joint Student Government.

2. Requiring all appointments made by JSG president to be confirmed by a two thirds vote of JSL.

3. Requiring candidates for class office to have a minimum 1.2 accumulative average.

4. Requiring all candidates for JSG president, vice president, JSL speaker and JSL speaker pro tempore to be juniors at the time of election, have at least a 1.5 average, and at least two semester of service in student government.

5. Adding six senators at large to JSL Steering Committee.

The Elections Act, essentially last year's elections procedures in written form, will be brought to a vote next week. This act will make invalid a 1958 act which has not been followed for several years, noted Katherine Antony, former elections commissioner.

Procedure for car registration for sophomores with 1.6 cumulative averages was explained by Robert Stern, chairman of JSL's student conduct and welfare committee. "All sophomores with a 1.6 who wish to drive on campus and in Syracuse whether they have a car or not must register."

To register, sophomores should go to the student government office, 906 University Ave., from 3-5 p.m. today and pick up a registration card signed by a JSG official. This card should be taken to the registrar's office to be validated for grade average and then to Security Police, Building 19.

Motions to investigate the possibility of putting a wide variety of magazines on sale at the Corner Store, the "outrageous" prices charged by Marshall Street merchants, and a more strictly enforced dead week were also made.

Speaker Ronald Mittleman proposed inquiry into barring activities including sports events, tests and papers during the last week of classes.

"Then it would be possible to use this last week as a period for review," he said.

A Phi O Seeks New Members

Alpha Phi Omega, national service fraternity, will hold its spring semester rusher at 8 p.m. Sunday in the Booth Hall main lounge.

All male undergraduates interested in the campus and community service group are urged to attend according to Richard Kuzmack, publicity chairman.

Space Flight Lecture Sunday

John E. Murphy Jr. will lecture on "Flights into Space" at 7 p.m. Sunday, in the main lounge of DellPlain Hall. Films illustrating space flights and missile development will be shown.

Murphy, who is the contract administrator in the instruments and guidance products section of General Electric's defense systems department, is a graduate of St. Bonaventure University.

He also attended the U.S. Army Artillery and Guided Missile School at Fort Sill, Okla., and is a resident of Dewitt.

All interested persons are welcome to attend the lecture and discussion period following. There will be no admission charge to the lecture which is sponsored by DellPlain 6.

'Playmate' Here Today

'Playmate' Lynn Karrol of Playboy magazine will be on campus today in connection with the Whitehall Tobacco contest open to all Hill fraternities.

Miss Karrol will have lunch at Delta Upsilon, dinner at Psi Upsilon, and will be at Tau Delta Phi and Phi Delta Theta for coffee.

Since it will be impossible for her to visit each individual fraternity, Miss Karrol will be at Tecumseh Club from 2-4 p.m. this afternoon to meet any other interested persons.

Miss Karrol will be the guest of honor at the winning fraternity's own Playboy party. The contest closes March 15.

'CUSE JUICE

By RON ROBERTS

If you are walking down Marshall Street two years from now, you might see a car pull to a stop. A fella wearing a cool hat and an S.U. jacket with "Duke" scrawled across the pocket will get out. Then he'll flip a nickle some 15 feet into the parking meter slot.

If Dave Bing's shooting improves in the next two seasons, the scene won't surprise anyone.

In the first 13 games this year the Syracuse freshman has connected on 128 of 234 shots from the floor for 54.7 percent. He must practice by tossing ping-pong balls into milk bottles.

Dave has also scored 71.6 percent of his free throw attempts enroute to a 24.9 point average. This guy makes more shots than Tom Heinsohn misses.

The only thing brighter than Bing on the Orange basketball scene is Fred Lewis' satisfied recruitable, smile. The competition for "Duke" after he helped Springarn High to the City Championship in Washington, D.C. had been on the rough side.

"After considering the offer," said Dave, "I narrowed the choices down to Syracuse, San Francisco, NYU, Bradley, Providence, Temple, Seattle and Ohio State."

The tone of voice was anything but cocky. That cool hat will never be too small. The facts are that over 100 schools wanted him.

San Francisco almost lured him away from Syracuse because Dave's two-year teammate at Springarn, Oliver Johnson, is a sophomore there. Johnson, incidently, was named to SPORTS magazine's pre-season sophomore All-American team, and he led the nation in field goal percentages early in the season.

But Bing chose Syracuse because "I wanted to come up with a team that was rebuilding, where I could get to play some ball." Now that's modesty.

The new fieldhouse and the new coach impressed him on his look-see visit last year. So did his meeting with John Mackey, Ernie Davis and John Brown.

So the "foundation" of the Lewis' Rebuilding Plan enrolled at S.U. A few months later the 6-2 guard began accustoming Piety fans to the real live "dunk shot," something he has been able to do since his junior year in high school.

In the first few games those at courtside could hear Dave talk to his defender: "Follow me, man, I'll show you how to play this game. Follow me."

Still not cocky. Just sound psychological basketball, which, after this season, will never have its value doubted at Syracuse.

"I like to play against someone who is very good or who thinks he is good," explains Dave. "Then by talking to him I can build up my morale, and if I make a few shots it might get him riled up and he'll make mistakes."

Bing has put 324 points over the heads of opponents. That could tend to rile them up a bit. The only guy he may follow around the court is Elgin Baylor, who also graduated from Springarn High, and whose footsteps Dave may well trace.

In addition to his point production and percentages, Bing has hauled down 131 rebounds and has racked up 74 assists, easily the best total on the team.

Some games he's played with the flu, and some with a temperature of 100-plus. Still he has never scored less than 17 points in a game. Other guys should be so sick.

Syracuse Aiming For EIWA Mat Crown

By JAN GILMORE

The 50th annual Eastern Intercollegiate Wrestling Association meet will be held at Annapolis the eighth and ninth of March. Syracuse University will be perhaps the prime contender to dethrone last year's champion and perennial power, Lehigh.

Wrestling coach Joe Scandura will present a squad with some top individual performances. Terry Haise, fighting at the lightweight 123 has seven victories against one defeat. Senior Sonny Greenhalgh at 130 has topped his opponents six times, losing and tying one, each in dual meets. He placed first in the Coast Guard tourney, and has had a 9-3-1 record over the last two years.

James Murrin has wrestled at 137 and 147 and emerged with six victories, a tie and a loss. Fluctuating between 147 and 157. Dick Slutzky has also come out of it 6-1-1, including a first in the Coast Guard multiples, which he placed in last year. His overall record is now 11-3-2.

Junior George Reidener has an even three and three record at 157 and a victory at 167. He managed a 5-2-1 last year, and has two consecutive runner-up slots in the Coast Guard meet.

Gary Sirota has grappled his way to victory four times at 167 with a tie and a loss, and another victory at 177. Chalked up on his record are a Coast Guard first at 167, another at 157, and a fourth place in the Easterns. Over-all he is 14-5-3 in three years. Soph Lew Roberts has a 4-1-2 record.

Rounding out the club at 191 and unlimited are the popular and undefeated fooballers Gary Everling and Bo Nance. Syracuse success in the EIWA will probably depend on these two wrestlers that have meant victory for Syracuse many times this year.

Despite a 23-6 loss to Syracuse, Lehigh looks to be the top competition. After that defeat, Lehigh went on to win six in a row by wide margins. The Engineers won the EIWA last year at University Park, Pa. to add another team victory to their total of 16, tops in the history of the competition.

Penn State is also an annual trouble maker who won't be a pushover. Rutgers and Maryland likewise could be contenders.

There will be four returning individual champions. Mike Herman of host Navy will defend in his 137 class. Rutgers heavyweight Ed Scharer is tops in his class, by last year's standards, and is returning.

The other two are both from Lehigh, Pat Smartt at 130 and Mike Pendleton at 157.

There will be four sessions in the EIWA, the prelims, quarter and semi finals and the finals which will take place at 7:30 PM on the ninth.

Basketball Bulletin

A taller Niagara team turned back a hustling Syracuse varsity five Wednesday night, 82-61 before 4,000 fans at Niagara.

The Niagara victory, which avenged an earlier 68-67 loss to Piety at the Field House, boosted the Eagles' record to 13-1 for the season. Syracuse's record now stands at 7-11.

Ain't Got No Refs!

"A referee, a referee, my kingdom for a referee."

A plea is going out from both camps as officials for the annual DO-WAER Church Key Trophy clash search the boondocks for some kind soul to referee their game.

"How could anyone refuse," says David Dean, the beloved court leader of the DO. "We play a high calibre brand of basketball."

One of those under consideration by the 22-man screening committee is Floyd "Ben Schwartzwalder. Ben insists on two platoon officiating, however, with a wild card whistle.

Then there is Fred Lewis. Fred wants new uniforms for the refs and a new colored towel which promoters of the game feel ing signs of a possible withdrawl is beyond their budget. Then he never liked referees anyway.

"Robin red breast" Osburn has offered his services, but coach Dean fear that his players wouldn't be able to understand the "you all" talk of Mr. Osburn.

Andrew (FHC) Mogish was also considered but he refuses to leave the fieldhouse.

Lew Andreas was also offered the position but he hasn't recovered from his Monday birthday party.

It was suggested by an unnamed source that Marc Guley be invited back for the one night stand.

Valjean Pinchbeck Jr. is showing signs of a possible withdrawal from his position as official which he occupied last year. Apparently he feels a 50-mile hike would be more in order as part of Naval Physical Fitness.

'EEC Door Still Open To Great Britian'

By PETE KOSSEFF

"The birth of the Common Market is an event comparable to dropping the atom bomb at Hiroshima or to the Russion revolution," George Fieschi, French deputy consul general to the United States, said Thursday in Maxwell Auditorium.

Fieschi stated that "nobody has vetoed England's entrance into the Common Market." His address was part of the Hill's International Week.

International Week continues with a free World fair at 8 p.m. today in Sims Hall; most of the 77 nations represented on campus will have displays.

Coeds attending Saturday's International Week dance will have special 2 a.m. permissions, the Assn. of Women's Students has said.

A semi-formal dance from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Saturday in Sims concludes the week. Tickets, available at the door, are 25 cents per person.

'Chaos and Cosmos' Theme For Footprints March 12-14; Three Speakers Featured

By SANDY MYERS

Footprints 1963, set for March 12-14, will revolve around the theme "Chaos and Cosmos," Rosaleen Jacobs, chairman, has announced.

Dr. Joseph Tussman, Dr. Eugene E. Borowitz and Dr. Philip Morrison will speak.

Dr. Tussman, Hill associate professor of citizenship and philosophy from 1956-1960, is now professor of philosophy at Connecticut Wesleyan University.

Professor

In September, he will join the philosophy department at the University of California at Berkeley as a full professor.

A book by Dr. Tussman, "Obligation in the Body Politic," was published in 1960 by Oxford University Press. He also wrote "The Supreme Court on Church and State" and "The Supreme Court on Racial Discrimination."

Dr. Tussman will speak at 3:30 p.m. March 12 in Hendricks Chapel.

A faculty panel will discuss his lecture at 7:30 p.m. the same day in Maxwell Auditorium.

Dr. Tussman received his bachelor's degree at the University of Wisconsin and his doctorate at the University of California.

Borowitz

Dr. Borowitz, a rabbi, will speak on "Religious Elements in the Theatre of the Absurd" at 3:30 p.m. March 13 in Hendricks Chapel, with a faculty discussion at 7:30 p.m. in Maxwell Auditorium.

DR. EUGENE BOROWITZ

Dr. Borowitz is professor of education and lecturer in Jewish religious thought at the New York school of the Hebrew Union College. He also serves as adjunct professor of religion at Temple University.

He earned his bachelor's degree at Ohio State University and was ordained by the Hebrew Union College. He holds doctorates from Columbia University and Hebrew Union College.

DR. JOSEPH TUSSMAN

DR. PHILLIP MORRISON

Articles

Dr. Borowitz's articles are in "Heritage of America Education," "Philosophies of Education" and "The American Jewish Yearbook."

A delegate to both the midcentury and the 1960 White House conferences on Children and Youth, Dr. Borowitz also served as a member of the American and international planning committees for the 1962 World Conference on Jewish Education.

Dr. Morrison, professor of physics and nuclear studies at Cornell University, will speak on "The Ape of the Typewriter," at 3:30 p.m. March 14 in Hendricks. A faculty panel will be held at 7:30 p.m. in Maxwell Auditorium.

Order and Chance

Dr. Morrison's speech will deal with order and chance in the universe.

He is co-author of a textbook, "Elementary Nuclear Theory," and has written numerous articles.

A graduate of Carnegie Institute of Technology, he earned his doctorate at the Universityof California.

20 UC Students March Here; Challenge SU to Return Hike

At 6 a.m. Saturday 20 Utica College students will gather on Route 5 just west of Utica.

By 2 a.m. Sunday they hope to be at Hendricks Chapel—after walking exactly 50 miles.

The group decided to make the march in response to President John F. Kennedy's physical fitness program.

They also hope that Hill students will accept the challenge to return the hike. Theodore Bayer, Joint Student Government president, said that no action has yet been taken on the challenge.

Shirley King, a psychology major at Utica and spokesman for the group, said hikers have sworn off cigarettes and alcoholic beverages as preparation for the march.

They will bring two "gifts" for Chancellor William P. Tolley —a potted fern and a chip from the burrstone that is cemented in the floor of UC's new student union on the Burrstone road campus.

Miss King said that cars with food and first aid supplies will follow the hikers. The students will return to Utica in these cars and in busses.

DRIVING REGISTRATION

Sophomores with 1.6 cumulative averages can register for campus driving privileges from 10 a.m. to noon today in the Huntington B. Crouse Hall lobby, Robert Stern, chairman of the Joint Student Legislature student conduct and welfare committee, has announced.

Students who have previously registered their cars do not have to reregister, Stern said.

OSCAR BRAND TICKETS

Tickets for the Oscar Brand concert will be distributed on a first come, first served basis 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. and 1 to 5 p.m. today at the Corner Store. Tickets are free to students with ID cards and are $1.50 for the general public.

Student Leaders Face Administration, Frosh Challenge Varsity March 15

Students will fight the administration and the varsity team will challenge the frosh squad in a doubleheader basketball game set for 7:30 p.m. Friday, March 15 in Manley Fieldhouse.

The Hill's Student Union fund raising committee is sponsoring the game to start the student drive to raise funds for the proposed Union.

Buttons will be on sale next week.

Dr. Eric H. Faigle, vice president and dean of the College of Liberal Arts, will coach the administration team.

Players will include Clark D. Ohlberg, vice president for administration and research; Francis A. Wingate, vice president and treasurer; Comptroller Victor J. Colway; Earle W. Clifford, dean of men; and Lester H. Dye, director of admissions.

Also on the administration squad are Karl E. Vogt, assistant dean of the College of Business Administration; Andrew Mogish, fieldhouse coordinator; Robert W. Leberman, associate in the Development Office; Gerald F. Reidenbaugh, acting chairman of the drama department; Burton Fink, Bookstore director; and Eldridge W. Roark Jr., Sadler Hall director.

(Administrators who are interested in playing and who have not yet been contacted are urged to call Coach Faigle.)

The challengers, coached by James Morris, student government social, academic, and cultural director, will feature Joint Student Government President Theodore Bayer, and Joint Student Legislature Speaker Ronald Mittleman.

The squad will also boast Robert Dick, Joint Student Court chief justice, and class presidents Henry Lee, Logan (Slugs) Sallada, Charles Stackhouse, and Dennis (Tex) Green, Daily Orange Editor-in-Chief Milton L. Joffe and DO Business Manager Edwin Silverstone.

Rounding out the team will be Thomas Rigoli, InterFraternity Council president; Gene Bonstein, IFC treasurer; Leland Peterson, Traditions Commission president; Ronald Brezinski, president of Campus Alliance Party; Robert Taylor, president of United Students party; and Robert Stern and Douglas Long of JSG.

The second game will pit the the varsity against high-scoring freshmen.

The two games are being presented as the first all-campus event to give students an opportunity to back the fund drive, which is part of the $76 million Centennial Plan.

Admission to the game will be 50 cents for students and university personnel with identification cards and one dollar for all others.

Groups interested in buying advertisements int the program for the doubleheader should call Carol (Schultze) Lucha, ext. 2641, or Joan Siegel, ext. 2897.

Each ad will cost three dollars.

'Sword' Faces Sales Problem In Doromitories

The Sword of Damocles almost went back to its sheath Wednesday night when the dean of men's office said the magazine could not be sold in men's living centers.

The independently financed student magazine continues to be sold at Marshall Street stores and in SU's main and Corner bookstores, according to Sword Editor Terrence Hughes. Over 1,000 of the 1,500 copies printed had been sold by Thursday night, Hughes said.

Asst. Dean of Men David Tatham said that the Sword was never given permission to sell "formally" in dormitories.

Beginning at 5 p.m. Wednesday, Dean of Men Earle W. Clifford and Tatham called dorm

Sy Oskeroff

Sy Oskeroff is now pledging another fraternity. At Wednesday night's debate between Ron Corwin and Tom Rigoli, the latter announced that fact and seemed to imply that since Oskeroff had been pledged by one house, the fraternity system had been absolved of all guilt.

That is, Rigoli tried to advise the audience, which had been alerted to the Oskeroff incident by Corwin, that there is a place for every person in the Greek system. If one house doesn't want a man, some other house might.

This may sound good but it is a poor excuse for a defense of the system.

Oskeroff rushed Lambda Chi Alpha and apparently wanted to become a pledge of that house. The house, likewise, accepted him and decided to turn in a bid for him.

Then, suddenly, religion entered the scene and this acceptable person became unacceptable on the spot. Yet before this revelation, this was the one house for the man and the man was wanted by the house.

How can it mean, then, that there is nothing wrong with the system if a man cannot become a member of a house of his choice when that house wants him also?

For Rigoli to imply that all is right with the Greek world because Sy Oskeroff has found a home is a sign of unthinking and naivete.

The shocking aspect of the case is that such a thing really happened and was reported to the campus. This is a first step in what we hope will be a series of positive actions.

The university has been given a real case of discrimination in a Hill fraternity and we expect it to do something about it. Failure by the university to act now would amount to tacit approval of the discriminatory practices which are going on.

Mr. Corwin said Wednesday he is not against fraternities as such. Nor are we. But we are against a fraternity or a fraternity system that breeds prejudice and allows it to take place.

We are against a fraternity that can almost magically change an acceptable man into an unacceptable one by merely placing the label "Jew" on him.

We are against a fraternity that fails to fight for a broadening of its horizons and a tumbling of the walls that make it insular.

For any fraternities of this type are incapable of serving the university in a positive way. By their nature they are an antithesis to the university way of life—a life of broadening horizons and diversification of experiences.

So Sy Oskeroff is in another fraternity. No doubt he is the better for it.

But none of us are the better for it. You're not, I'm not, Tom Rigoli's not, Chancellor Tolley's not, Syracuse University is not.

No, we could all sleep soundly tonight only if Sy Oskeroff were a pledge of Lambda Chi Alpha.

Poems of Gorney

By Stephanie Brill

James Gorney, editor of the "Syracuse 10" stirred his coffee while our table in the Coke and Capers Club jiggled on its one weak leg. Glancing at the Club's quiet Saturday morning atmosphere he delved into his attache case for the poems.

"This first poem, 'Urban Renewal,' has a special meaning for me," he admitted.

"It stems from an experience of mine last spring when I saw a demolition team wrecking some houses in the fifteenth ward. It struck me," he added excitedly "that the gigantic white-wash crosses the workmen splashed on the house-doors as they left were almost exactly like the white crosses that townspeople during the Middle Ages would put on the door posts of homes to distinguish the victims of the Black Plague."

"Then I saw what a peculiar coincidence it was," he revealed, eyes flashing, "that fourteenth century victims and fifteenth ward Negroes both suffered from varieties of a Black Plague."

Taking a cigarette from his suit jacket, he continued calmly.

"I found inspiration for the camp poems in working with young boys for three years as a counselor in a Westchester camp."

His plans for a career as a clinical psychologist suggest his apparent interest in people. Gorney, who graduates this June after three years, hopes to work toward masters and doctorate degrees. He also spends four days each week at the Jewish Community Center teaching a poetry-writing course for 8-10 year olds as well as teaching photography.

Shrugging when asked where he finds time to do everything he turned to another topic. Writing poetry, he explained, has been an interest of his since he wrote his first poem a year and a half ago. He attributed a great deal of his writing skill to his studying with poet in residence Phillip Booth and Donald Dike, both associate professors of the English department.

"Without question, I consider these men two of the best poetry teachers in the country," he asserted.

"Though my poetry has been criticized for its condensed quality," he commented "I do it intentionally." He reasoned, "Poetry is most effective through particular, concrete and vivid images. The poet must present his total experience in the least amount of words, with none wasted and with none being superfluous."

As for the poetry in the "10"—Gorney feels "it is on as high a level as any collegiate material."

Editor, perspective clinical psychologist, director of camp plays whose hobbies include theater and opera, Gorney, nevertheless, is a philosophy major.

"Any student seriously interested in getting the most out of a college education should not fail to take some philosophy courses," he recommended "especially since Syracuse has one of the most outstanding departments in the country."

"I've found that no other subject provides the same intellectual discipline," he explained.

"It's been the most important educational experience I've gained at the university."

Urban Renewal

"It was as if the earth on which our houses stood were being purged of its secreted humors; thrusting up to the surface the abcesses and pussclots that had been formed in its entrails."
Camus—"The Plague"

Planting beer-cans on the lawn,
They await the final convulsion.
For soon serpentine cranes will rear,
And black sheep will again be offered redemption.
But the Plague poisoned their fallen porches
Long before civic whitewash crosses
Signalled imminent death.
Even as children
They learned to offer eager fingers to rats,
Or hide behind corpses when they found they were "It."

All are prepared for the monster fist
Of the pile-driver. When it strikes,
Their rotting skins will be whisked
Through our most modern,
spotless halls.
Dead, they will rise over their own graves,
Amidst our freshly painted white walls.

Picasso

Once his undulant blues made lean pierrots, and mesmerized a circus mute. The drawn clown and sparse scene, cramped elbows crowding tables of loss.

Now he sits twirling his yellow crayons;
his masks so like a child's desperate play.
While bright senoras flare skirts of flames,
he waits for evening blue, the complete day.

Summer Initiation

Watch their dance! Little painted indians.
Those taught trippings can easily be mocked.
Whooping and hollering,
they clap belled hands
To tom-tom tunes; stomping in the old act.

We chiefs have long planned this ceremony
For fresh arrived braves.
Nodding, we keep watch
While they spin, tumbling in rhythmic play;
Their blunted knives drawn from each belted breech.

We try to remember this ordered fight
Is all a game. What glistens
now as blood,
Is just greasepaint we have smeared. Just a sketch
On their small limbs, of our ancient cryptic code.

Piggy-back

Bumping along,
you rode astride
My neck. Muzzling me, your tight clasped Hands. Racing past, the rocky path;
We stepped a trot
like quick-caught breath.
No thought, just our shoulders shaking.
No sound, just your laughing, laughing.

Softball

They gaped at my perfect swat.
Their eyes darted with the ball after the bat-crack. A boy fell in the outfield and just sat, while I scored. All ran to me and admired my peerless blow.

Would they have cheered if they knew my hardball hits were paltry?

The Pool

A spaghetti pile of slippery limbs,
A wriggling ankle sticking up and semaphoring
Between greased necks and and candy-cane trunks.
Enormous sloshing and splashing as sleek eels
Tie themselves into tighter contorted knots.
Stoic at the bottom of this—me.

I sink a little further, dragging the laughing demons along;
There is no better way to drown.

Concerts Movies

FIRST RUN THEATERS

RIVIERA-CINEMA — It's Academy Award time again and all the producers and distributers are trying to work up double bills of Oscar hopefuls. (Remember "Elmer Gantry" and "The Apartment"?) The Riviera is first with a "hope it wins a few Oscars, we need the business" bill: "The Miracle Worker" and "Birdman of Alcatraz."

Both are excellent American pies, though compared with the foreign sort the Riv usually has they're not that hot. Anne Bancroft chases Patty Duke around the dinner table in "Miracle" and Burt Lancaster chases birds around his cell. Between the two of them they chalked up 5 Oscar nominations, not to be confused with Melvin, Edgar, or Alfred. "Bir" at 8:15 p.m. "Mir" at 6:30 & 10:40 p.m.

LOEW'S—"Two for the Seesaw" was a fine movie. But the Loew's turnover schedule demanded change. And boy what a change. "Follow the Boys" is all about the wives of the men of the Mediterranean fleet. It stars (ugh) Connie Francis and some of the others from that movie masterpiece "Where the Boys Are." You may remember that after that movie was made, everyone flocked to Ft. Lauderdale. And we know what happened there. Wouldn't it be wild if all these impressionable neo-adolescents saw this flick and enlisted in the Navy?

In case you don't like water, the co-hit has plenty of sand. "Cairo" has lots of sand and George Sanders which is probably not much more than an Egyptian coincidence. "Boys" at 6:16 & 9:30 p.m. "Camels" at 8:03 p.m.

KEITH'S—Oh my Mama and Papa, they were done caught crying in their Gin. Weekends at TC won't seem the same after catching "Days of Wine and Roses." Jack Lemmon (Papa) discovers that Lee Remick (Mama) likes chocolate. So he seducers her into the world of booze via a Brandy Alexander. From then on it's a Ragtime Band to the Bowery. Lemmon and Remick turn out top performances, tho the gin looks like water, the whisky like tea. (Tea, not tea!)

Charles Bickford's there, playing a Norwegian papa-in-law and Jack Klugman is a friendly (maybe too friendly) AA rep. Strong stuff. Too bad the Keith's ain't equipped for smellovision. "Rosey Winos" 7 & 10:50 p.m. "Strongroom" at 8:55 p.m. P.S. It also got 5 Oscar nominations.

PARAMOUNT—"Son of Flubber" continues at the Disney annex. This light-headed comedy is a sequel to the "Absent Minded Professor" which is an adaptation of a true life experience of Dr. Wilhelm Snozxbh, noted physicist of the University of Transylvania. It seems that Dr. Snozxbh invented a unique way to commit suicide. He gathered together all the sheep he could find in the Transylvania Cooperative Grange and extracted their lanolin. He extracted this lanolin and placed it in a large vat and then jumped into it. That's right, he softened to death. How Disney ever found out about this story we'll never know. Formula 9 shares the bill with "Nature's Strange Creatures," which turns out to be nothing more than an interview with the John Birch Society. "Disney at Dizzy" at 7:20 & 9:52 p.m.

SHOPPINGTOWN — Ha ha! Good old Shoppingtown. While all the other theaters have pies with only 5 academy award nominations, they've got one with 7 Count 'em seven (7). Including "Best Picture!" The academy has changed their awards. Used to be "Best Picture" now it's "Best Picture!" "Mutiny on the Bounty" is the name. Any resemblance to the original film is purely coincidental. Any resemblence to Stanley Kowalski is also purely coincidental. Got lots of rolling seas and swaying girls. Lots of color too. Lots of prices, in addition. "Gobs of Brando" at 8 p.m.

ECKEL — Oh, those were the days. When men were men, the army was tough, and death was death. Go to the Eckel and see those great, glorious, battle scarred World War II vets. See that gleam in their eye as millions get killed. See them hiss the Germans, cheer the allies. See them love the war. See them love violence. See them love killing. See them hate, see them murder. Hate. Hate. See their eyes, gleaming with steel and gunpowder. See the picket "Spartacus." See them picket "Exodus." See their five o'clock shadow. See their pot bellies. See their tight fitting mothballed uniforms. See "The Longest Day" at 8:15 p.m. This one won 5 Oscar nominations, too.

On November 2, 1909 on 22 Joy street, Boston, as a breakoff of the Metropolitan Law Club, Lambda Chi Alpha was founded as a Christian Fraternity. Last summer due to the pressure of national attitude a clause was removed by legislation at our yearly conclave which is represented by members from most of the chapters of this international organization) from the Constitution which had stated that "we could not accept as members people who were of a non-Christian faith." But it was clearly stated that in order to maintain the original purpose and resulting tradition of the brotherhood that we must still remember that our Constitution (as it was founded) is Christian.

The initiation ceremony is Christian, and the oath which we must take to become members of this Fraternity are Christian. One could not expect a person of another faith to swear to that which he does not believe in.

We do not discriminate. We cannot change the purpose of our original foundation—to promote closer brotherhood among people who are Christians, and to promote local, national, and even international brotherhood by actively working with others whose religious beliefs are different but certainly equally justified to better the social, political, and economic condition of our fellow man.

No one should say that we should no longer remain Christian, because why should we no longer believe in Christ, just because he doesn't. This rather terse statement does not mean that we do not appreciate and respect the religious beliefs of others. We do! As proof we work shoulder to shoulder with Jewish houses to promote community service. We have hired dance bands by combining our funds and active interest with Jewish fraternities. Currently we are working with Jewish houses to get a food cooperative which shall be sponsored by the non-biased Interfraternity Council. One doesn't ever hear at an I. F. C. meeting: "We Christian Houses want to get special food, and we don't care what the other houses get."

I was co-chairman of the I. F. C. Blood Drive Rules Committee, and the other co-chairman was Jewish. We didn't work against each other and formulate two sets of rules—one for the Jewish Houses and one for the Christian Houses. We worked together and combined our knowledge. The result was the most successful Greek sponsored Blood Drive ever at Syracuse University.

We don't live on an island and say because we are Christian nobody else can come ashore—everyone else must drown in the sea. We say: "Welcome. Share this island with us, and together (yet still maintaining our own belief in God) we will improve our lot."

P.S. This is not a challenge and should be read with an open mind, which I hope that even a certain graduate student does possess.

James Skillen

Welcome

To the Editor:

In Mr. Corwin's illuminating attack on the Greeks last Wednesday evening, he was attacked as an outsider because he had not remained in a fraternity long enough to obtain the dubious blessings of the mystical initiation. Having been active as a pledge, member, and house officer of a large national fraternity in two universities, I feel there is merit to the charge and his failure to become a member of the Greek system has caused him to err occasionally in his charges.

For example, he charges the Greeks with attempting to "judge a man's character in five or six hours." Had he been present at a members' hash after rush he would have known that there is seldom any attempt made to judge a candidate's character. The perspective member is judged by a far more important set of standards—his clothes, his athletic prowess, his car, his suburb, and most important of all his looks and casual conversation—(after all, who could afford the luxury of associating with anyone with the physical ugliness of an Abraham Lincoln or an Eleanor Roosevelt?) and the process usually takes not five or six hours for each candidate but five or six minutes.

As for discrimination on the basis of color and religion, the issue is usually so settled that it is seldom a factor in selection. Anyway, Plan A and Plan B generally takes care of such an annoying triviality. There are, of course, exceptions made for such valuable celebrities as Ernie Davis who are so important at rush, though awkward at fraternity-sorority functions. And what would happen if they decided to transfer and join the brotherhood at the Univ of Alabama or Mississippi? But having A negro, A Jew, or A Gentile is good public relations and nullifies the "unfair" charges of "outsiders" like Corwin.

Our new addition from Wisconsin is perhaps also unaware of the rushing policy of at least one SU fraternity which regularly uses an upstairs "goon room" where "goon" members (taken in to fill the house and pay expenses) are employed to keep "goon" rushees out of sight so that perspective "sharp" rushees won't get the wrong impression. This fine example of "brotherhood" also has a "movie money" policy in which the extreme "goon" members are told to stay completely away from the house during rush.

As Mr. Rigoli tells us, there are "progressive" Greeks who have honestly attempted to eliminate the discriminatory clauses from their charters. But the arguments for abolition of the clauses behind the closed doors of convention meetings are most revealing.

"Why," they maintain, "is the clause necessary since the discriminatory policies can easily be maintained by the unwritten Gentleman's Agreement (nice phrase isn't it?) and enforced by alumni and the all-powerful national? The clause merely gives the universities and outsiders something tangible to attack." When such a "progressive" proposal was put forth at one national convention (in 1955 not 1915) the speakers were shouted down and silenced by catcalls and a mass singing of Dixie. Such are the "progressive" activities of the brothers at the convention.

As for Mr. Rigoli's attack on the undemocratic time limit, he might reflect on the situation at the University of Colorado. In 1956, the University Board of Regents imposed a highly controversial time limit of five years for the elimination of discriminatory clauses. After many heard attacks on the policy that reminded one very much of Mr. Rigoli's presentation, the time limit order was rescinded in favor of gradualism and allowing the Greeks to deal with their problems in their own way.

Result, in 1963 the discriminatory clauses and discriminatory policies remain intact and presumably will remain until 1993 unless a time limit is imposed. With the disgusting record of the 150 year old Civil War Amendments behind us, few will be taken in by the old saw of gradualism.

Speaking as a fraternity man of ten years membership, I would like to welcome Ron Corwin and others like him to the Syracuse Campus. If some Greeks don't like his "Wisconsin" ideas, there are those of us who greatly appreciate his courageous words too long left unsaid.

culties" that ended negotiations in Brussels and added that England "is not yet ripe" for the European Economic Community.

Fieschi said England's ties with the Commonwealth are still too strong to allow for the economic unity and conformity demanded by the EEC.

He noted "deGaulle wants only a postponement of negotiations, not a termination. He wants to work in a clear view of reality."

"This EEC is the beginning of a new nation," Fieschi noted.

He said the Common Market is presently economic in nature, but is moving toward a political alliance. He said tariff reductions and free flow of trade and people among member nations show the advance in this direction.

"England is no longer and island. Spiritually, and geographically it belongs to Europe," Fieschi said.

He cited three primary goals of the market.

First, he said, is the removal of tariffs within the Market and regulation of tariffs for nations not in the "inner six."

Pursuing a common trade policy with these non-member nations is the second goal; association with the United States and newly independent nations is the third goal, Fieschi said.

"The U.S. must be a partner with the Comomn Market, not join it," he continued.

He said he believes the EEC is the legal and functional foundation of a new Europe, adding that it will survive, "for with it goes the fate of Europe and many of the free nations of the world."

As a part of International Week, Hillel will present Daniel and Dimitri, International Folk Singers, at 7 p.m., March 3, in Gifford Auditorium, H. B. Crouse Hall.

SHE'S A PRIZE — Daily Orange reporter BERNIE MCCALLUM, left, enjoyed his assignment Thursday. He joined many other Hill students who crowded into Tecumseh Club to meet Lynn Karrol, Playboy's bunny, who can be "won" by the Hill fraternity collecting the most Whitehall Pipe Tobacco tops. Also in picture is MICHAEL LEHNKERING, campus Playboy representative.

'Playmate' Charms at TC

By BERNIE MacCALLUM
Junior Editor

The Syracuse college male met with the high approval of "Playmate" Lynn Karrol at Tecumseh Club Thursday afternoon.

"They're just great," she said as plenty of samples buzzed around her while she posed for photographers and signed autographs.

There was a TGIF crowd on a Thursday to see Miss Karrol, who provided a welcome change for the eyes from text books. Even a few Colgate students made the pilgrimage to TC spurred on by their aesthetic senses.

Miss Karrol, who was the "Playmate of the month" in December, 1961, is on campus as first prize in a contest sponsored by Whitehall Tobacco Co.

She was selected to be in the magazine after a photographer took her picture and submitted it to Playboy. "That gave my career a big push. Since then I have done fashion modeling and telivision work. I haven't had much time for flying," she said.

The attractive model had a pilot license when she was 16 and has been skydiving off and on since then. She has made eight jumps to be one of the prettiest things in the air. "My father has a pilot license and he got to be interested in flying and jumping."

A 23 year old native of Pittsburgh, Pa., Miss Karrol is taking drama coaching and hopes to enter motion pictures.

"Of course I'd like to get married," she said when asked about her modeling career and future plans. "When I meet the right guy."

The former "Bunny" in the New York Playboy Club had lunch at four Hill fraternities before going to TC for the publicity reception.

Miss Karrol will be the guest of honor at a party sponsored by the winning fraternity in the contest. That's why the smoke screen around Walnut Park as the fraternity are smoking tobacco at a fast and furious pace.

Three Playboy party kits, jazz records and subscription to Playboy mazagine will be consolation prizes.

Fraternities wishing further information on the contest can contact Michael Lehnering, Playboy campus representative at ext. 2937.

'Sword' Faces Sales Problem

directors with instructions to stop and take the names of any students selling the magazine in dormitories.

Sword Business Manager Ellen Becker said Thursday she had been forbidden two weeks ago to set up tables in the lobbies. She said, however, that Tatham and Jean Crawford, director of women's housing, had given permission for staff members to sell "informally" on dorm floors.

"That is what we were doing," she said. "There were no tables or signs set up anywhere."

Tatham termed Miss Becker's interpretation "a misunderstanding."

"It is a long-standing university policy to prohibit selling of any sort in university dormitories," he said. "We want to avoid badgering the students."

Miss Becker said word has been received from the dean of women's office regarding cancellation of sales in dormitories.

Stores now carrying the Sword are Siegel's, the Hill Bookstall, Jacob's, Lund's, the Savoy, Ivy Hall and Burnett's Pharmacy, as well as the bookstores, Miss Becker noted.

In past years Syracuse "10," the official campus magazine, has been sold at tables and from door to door in living centers.

Tatham said this would not be permitted this year.

Hughes commented, "This appears to be a misunderstanding. I would hate to think it is anything else."

The editor said most staff members had already been dispatched to their living centers to sell before word was received from Tatham.

"There was one person in the office at that time," he said, "and we sent him out to recall some of our salesmen."

"It is very disappointing," Hughes added, "because we had been given permission at the Board of Publications meeting to sell informally in dorms, and, according to Ellen, this is what we were told two weeks ago."

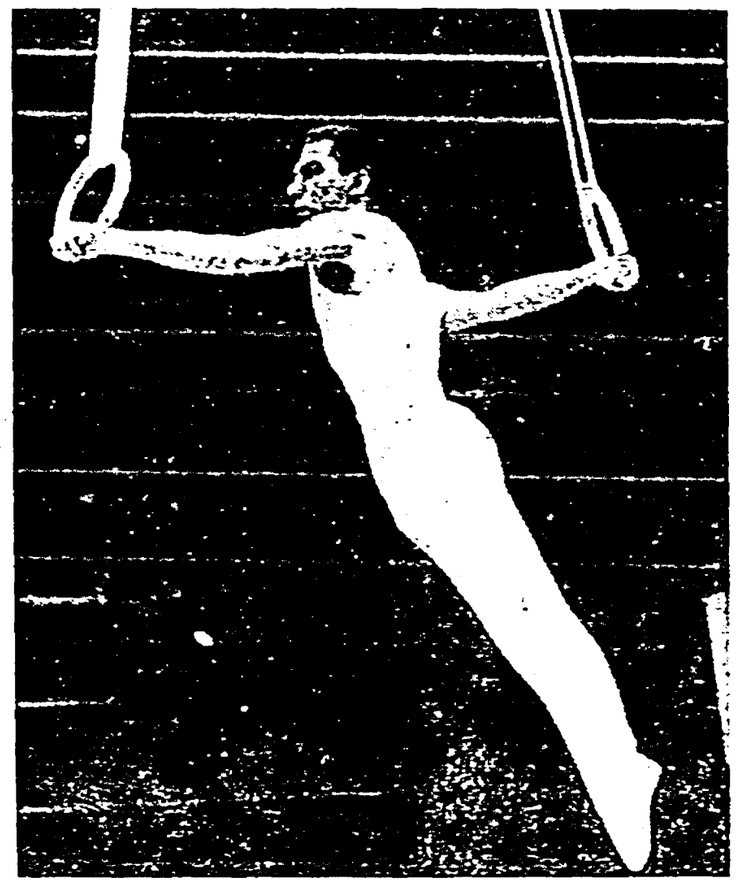
Championships Begin At Manley

RON ORLICK

Voas, Orlick Defend '62 Crowns



By TOM MULLER

The mad scramble for Eastern individual gymnastic titles gets under way today at 2:00 p.m. in the new Manley Field House. Vying for the eight first place medals will be 99 athletes representing 11 schools.

The events include the usual six (floor exercise, side horse, horizontal bar, long horse, parallel bars, and still rings) plus tumbling and the all-around division. Each team may enter five men in each event, but only two men from each team may compete in everything. At the close of the preliminaries, the all-around winner is chosen on the basis of total points scored for the seven events.

The top eight contestants and all those who tied for the eighth spot in each event will enter the finals, which commence at 2:00 p.m. Saturday. At the close of the finals the individual winners will receive medals. Syracuse's Eastern Champions coached by Paul Romeo, will be awarded the Eastern Intercollegiate Gymnastics League trophy.

Today's activities will consist of a 2 p.m. matinee, and a 7 p.m. evening performance. The floor exercise, long horse, side horse, and horizontal bar events will be run off in the afternoon. The parallel bars, still rings, and tumbling events will be held at night. There are close to 30 gymnasts involved in each event except tumbling, which boasts only eight competitors.

CORKEY VOAS

Two of last year's winners will be back to defend their crowns this year. They are Syracuse's "Corky" Voas and Ron Orlick, who won the tumbling and long horse vaulting respectively.

Corky is in top shape for the meet, but Ron has recently sprained two fingers and may be unable to compete on the parallel bars, floor exercise and tumbling. He took first place for Syracuse on the parallel bars last week and poses as a threat to place high in that event. And Ron has not been ruled out of the competition yet.

Many of Syracuse's opponents are highly ranked for today's activities. Army is represented by Ken Slutzky, who managed to garner two first and a third against S.U. this year.

The University of Pittsburgh's representative is senior Ed Zameonik. Ed, who leads a fine Panther contingent, scored a first and two seconds against the Orange.

Penn State is headed by Tom Seward. The senior was second last year in the all-around competition. Voas, who was third last year, just nipped Seward in their one meeting this year.

Mark Cohn and Bill Wright should be the guiding lights for Temple. Both boys have had fine records all year.

An interesting event will be the parallel bars, which will feature Seward, Zameonik, and Slutzky, plus Voas, Oglesby, and Poplar of Syracuse.

Syracuse captain Ray Grimaldi, who placed second on the side horse last year, has been equally outstanding in that event and on the still rings this year. He has only lost once in each event.

Glenn Launches Eagles To Win Over Orange

By BILL CRONAUER

A fired-up Niagara basketball team, piloted by a man named Glenn, exploded for an easy 82-61 win over the Orange cagers Wednesday.

To the delight of 4,000 screaming fans at the Niagara Student Center, Ken Glenn and his fellow Purple Eagles avenged a one-point loss to Syracuse earlier this month.

Glenn, a 6-5 senior from Cleveland, Ohio, dazzled the Niagara supporters with his amazingly accurate shooting.

The Eagle forward hit on 14 of 18 shots from the field and nine of 10 from the foul line—a total of 37 points.

In one streak, Glenn netted 16 straight markers for the winners. He also spearheaded the Niagara rebounders with countless snares off both the offensive and defensive boards.

Teammate Andy O'Connell had 17 points for the Eagles, while Joe Maddrey followed with eight.

Junior guard Jim Seaman was Syracuse high scorer, hitting for 11 points. Carl Vernick and Phil Schoff added 10 apiece, and Herb Foster, nine.

Orange Coach Fred Lewis felt that his players performed well in the opening half. "We stayed with Niagara for 17 minutes of the game," he stated.

"We lost our big chance when we missed three foul shots late in the first half," Lewis continued. "We had a chance for the lead, but folded under the tremendous pressure of the crowd."

At the time, Syracuse trailed by two points, 26-24. However, the Eagles then went on a fantastic scoring rampage, outhitting the Pietymen, 35-3, over a 16-minute period.

With 11 minutes gone in the second half, the hosts upped their lead to 59-29.

"We made a number of careless mistakes throughout the final half," commented Lewis. "Our boys threw the ball away too much to challenge them seriously."

Syracuse also lacked strength under the boards. "Our rebounding suffered when Herb Foster fouled out," Lewis said. Orangemen Manny Klutchkowski and Dick Finley likewise departed with five fouls.

The locals shot 37 per cent for the contest, making 25 of 67 field goal attempts. Niagara scored at a 53 per cent clip, with 31 fielders in 59 tries. Both teams had trouble at the foul line.

Syracuse, standing 7-11 on the season, travel to Colgate Tuesday for a make-up contest with the Red Raiders.

The game was originally scheduled for Feb. 23, but has been moved up to March 5.

Inspired Niagara Frosh Clip Tangerine Cagers

Playing before an enthusiastic packed house the fledgling Niagara Purple Eagles sharpened their claws at the expense of the invading Syracuse Frosh basketball team Wednesday night.

When the buzzer sounded the Eagles had clawed the Tangerines by an 82-73 count to avenge an earlier loss.

The Eagle with the sharpest claws was guard Pat Broderick, who threw in 20 points. Broderick thus continued his feast on the Hillmen, for he had tallied 20 when the two clubs met three weeks ago at Manley Field House.

Syracuse opened the game impressively and appeared on the way to a successful invasion of the Eagles' nest by rolling to a 42-36 halftime lead.

The Hill's Dave Bing paced the opening half attack with a 17-point harvest.

However, in the second half the Eagles snatched the lead by shooting at a torrid pace while the Tangerines' shooting tailed off considerably.

To add to their woes the Hill cubs played the last 15 minutes without high-scoring Norm Goldsmith, who was forced out of action by illness.

Tangerine coach Morris Osburn commented, "In the second half we threw the ball away too many times and didn't block out under the boards. We weren't mentally prepared after a two-week layoff."

Bing took game honors by tallying 21 points.

The Eagles raised their record to 7-6 while the Tangerines saw their log dip to 10-4.

The cubs next see action Mar. 5 when they journey to Hamilton, N.Y., to face the Colgate yearlings in a 6:30 p.m. clash.

Wrestlers Nip Cortland

And then there were eight. Eight wins, that is, and no losses for Syracuse's undefeated wrestling squad as they wrapped up their season Wednesday night with a 20-10 win over Cortland State.

More than 1,000 fans looked on as the visiting Orange team lost the first match, then went on to take six others. Cortland took the 147-lb. class by forfeit.

Two men continued undefeated, while another lost his first match. Bo Nance pinned his onponent in the unlimited division. Cortland's 123-lb. John LaBombard similiarly delt with Bob Murray.

After Syracuse's Terry Haise had taken the 130-lb. division, Sonny Greenhaulgh handed Charlie Wilkenson his first defeat of the season. It was Sonny's seventh win at 13 7lb.

Jim Murrin won at 147-lb., before the 157-lb. class was forfeited by the Orange. Syracuse came back with Gary Sirota and Lew Roberts scoring decisions at 167 and 177-lb. respectively.

The grapplers now have more than a week to prepare for the Annapolis championships.

Emtage to Speak

A physics colloquium will meet at 4 p.m. today in 106 Steele Hall.

Dr. Peter Emtage of the General Electric Company will speak on "Photovoltaic Effect in Semiconductors". A tea will be held 3:30 p.m. in the same room.

Tolley:No Drinking Policy Change

By SUSAN WEINBERG

Syracuse University's drinking policy will never be changed.

Chancellor William P. Tolley made this statement Friday after a meeting with the SU Board of Trustees.

"We are always willing to listen to the conclusions of the Joint Student Legislature committee investigating the drinking policy," he said, "but there will be no change if one is recommended."

The Chancellor said he asked each member of the Board at the meeting whether a change would be desirable. "All were against any modification," he noted.

This stand is the same as that taken in 1959 when JSL passed a bill legalizing the use of alcoholic beverages at university - approved events where chaperones were present.

After the passage of this bill, Chancellor Tolley killed it, saying "So long as I am chancellor there will be no modification of the drinking policy."

After Friday's meeting he issued a statement referring to the general information bulletin of Syracuse and commenting on it.

The section he referred to reads:

"Students registered at the university are expected to understand and respect university rules and regulations, which, like most standards, are intended to encourage fair play and a sense of responsiblity for the other person's rights.

"They are based on common sense and normal rules of good conduct.

"Briefly summarized, university rules and regulations prohibit possession or use of any intoxicating beverages in any campus building or living center, any conduct in violation of the law, giving of false or misleading information on any document and dishonestly or plagiarism in school work."

The views of the chancellor are:

"This has been the general policy of the university for some time and it will continue to be a polcy of the university. It should be noted that the university has no rules against drinking by those of legal age. It does have a rule that liquor is not permitted in university buildings and at university social functions.

"This is a good rule and has the full support of the trustees."

As in his 1959 statement Chancellor Tolley said his disapproval of a change in policy has nothing to do with the fact that Syracuse was founded as a Methodist school.

"The Board of Trutees and I feel that the present policy is the best and for that reason no change will be made," he explained.

The Chancellor also repeated his 1959 statement that he disapproves of college freshmen and sophomores drinking even if they are legally of age. "I'm old fashioned in this respect," he observed.

When informed of the chancellor's statement Joint Student Legislature Speaker Ronald Mittleman and Special JSL Drinking Committee Chairman Sen. Alfred (Win) Whittaker said their investigation will continue as planned.

Mittleman commented, "I am pleased to have a clear and definitive statement from the administration on the university's drinking policy. However, this will not deter ou refforts to find out what all members of the university community feel. This inquiry will help those who tackle this problem of policy when it comes up in the future."

Agreeing with Mittleman, Whittaker said, "We are not out to change the university drinking policy, but rather

No More Disciplinary News Clifford Tells Daily Orange

By MILTON L. JOFFE
Editor-in-Chief

The Hill dean of men's office will withhold all information regarding disciplinary cases from the Daily Orange until further notice, pending a Board of Publications review of the situation.

Dean of Men Earle W. Clifford announced the decision Friday on the basis of his interpretation of an editorial in Thursday's Daily Orange entitled: "Right to Know: Policy Statement" (see story on this page).

He said that previously his office has not interfered with the use of names of individuals or groups when they have come to the attention of the Daily Orange from other sources.

"However," Clifford said, "my interpretation of the editorial was that a systematic seeking of offenders in disciplinary cases has become a Daily Orange policy. This caused my action."

He added that the previous conditions which his office set up for the anonymous relating of disciplinary cases is still acceptable to him if Daily Orange policy is clearly stated to be one of reporting such cases anonymously.

On the basis of the policy stated in the editorial, however, Clifford said he must enforce university policy, which is opposed to publicizing names of fraternities or individuals in disciplinary cases.

This order will affect all cases handled by the Interfraternity Council Judicial Board, Joint Student Court and the dean of men's office.

If information is made available to the Daily Orange by members of the two student judicial groups above, it may become necessary for the dean of men's office to stop referring cases to these bodies, said Dean Clifford. "However, it is obvious we do not wish to take any steps which would negatively affect an already promising student judicial system," he added.

This policy will be maintained until the Board of Publications meets to discuss the two divergent policies, he said. Dean Clifford and Daily Orange Editor Milton Joffe have jointly agreed to request a meeting of the Board as soon as possible.

Clark Away

Dr. Wesley C. Clark, dean of the School of Journalism and chairman of the Board of Publications, is on an extended vacation in Virginia but it is believed the Board can meet in his absence.

The specific reasons given by Clifford for implementing his policy were:

1. The decisions made by the judicial groups is sufficient penalty against the group or individual involved.

2. Printing names in the Daily Orange adds an unpredictable element to the disciplinary action. "The university's disciplinary philosophy focuses on an attempt to tailor relations and decisions in such a fashion that the punishment fits the individual as well as the offense," he said.

"This requires that as much as possible all elements in a given penalty be under the control of either of the three judicial groups," he added.

May Effect

3. Further, publishing the names in the Daily Orange may have a permanent effect on the individual or group involved. Here he cited the specific instance in which the Daily Orange used the name of freshman basketball player Francis Pinchot, who was suspended in connection with a number of violations of city laws.

Dean Clifford then reflected on the nature of disciplinary action. It is basically an educational rather than a punishing experience, he said.

"Therefore publicity has a differential and unpredictable impact that is not controllable. People reading the story don't know the individual's personality and the public opinion aroused by such articles cannot be controlled," he said.

Whether the public reaction be complete chastisement or hearty applause for the individual or group involved in the case, the reaction can so effect the involved party that the proper disciplinary course cannot be followed affectively, Clifford said.

In summary, he said he took the action because he has a responsibility to the individuals and groups even though they haven't met their responsibilities to the university.

Editorial In Question

The following are excerpts from the editorial "Right to Know: Policy Statement", which has aroused the conflict between Daily Orange policy and university policy:

". . .the seriousness of the incident (Lambda Chi Alpha) demanded identification of the fraternity. Without identification the story would be meaningless."

"Without identification it would join that useless pile of generalities. . ."

"We have facts to deal with and to present to our readers. The organizations whose names appear. . .have sorely abused the trust of Syracuse University and so we feel no obligations to treat them specially. We are free from the shackles of subjectivity and self-interest."

"Our obligation is to the students who read the Daily Orange. When confronted by such a story as that which appears in today"s issue, they ask one question before all others: What is name of the fraternity concerned? We must answer that question."

"When. . .trusts are broken and violation occur, the readers have the right to know by whom they were violated."

"It is not pleasant but it is right. And because it is right, we shall not cease from using names when names are needed. To do otherwise would be to fail in our obligation."

Isaac Singer Gives Advice For Writers

English Department Sponsors Speech By Yiddish Author

American novelist, short story writer and journalist Isaac Bashevis Singer will speak on "Some Advice to Young Writers-and Old" at 4 p.m. today in Gifford Auditorium, Huntington B. Crouse Hall.

Singer, who writes in Yiddish, has been hailed by literary critics as "the greatest living Yiddish author" and "the last of the great Yiddish fiction writers."

He will appear as a guest in the English department's visiting writers series.

During his visit, which continues through Wednesday, the writer will confer with students and appear as guest lecturer in

Utica Hikers Hit Hill 9:45 Sat. Night

It was about 9:45 p.m., the swinging side of a Saturday night, and the main quad was cold and deserted. A carful of weary Utica College students chugged through the main campus entrance and up to Hendricks Chapel, followed by a few straggling pedestrians.

Only one of the Hill's Utican cousins had made good his promise to hike 50 miles from his campus to SU: Steven Seidel, 21, a night school UC student, resting his sore feet in the Chapel Coffee Corner.

His fourteen companions had dropped out along Route Five after 40 miles, 24 miles and less. When they reached DeWitt, they called SU's Episcopal chaplain, the Rev. Robert Ayers, who is all-denominational chaplain at UC.

Fr. Ayers opened the Chapel to the group, which came without its promised presents for Chancellor Tolley—a potted fern

'10' Out Tuesday

A full-size parody of the Daily Orange, called the Bruised Orange, will be the feature of Syracuse '10,' on sale Tuesday.

The magazine will be sold in living centers, dining halls, Maxwell Hall and Huntington B. Crouse Hall.

The BO will be printed to look exactly like the DO. Weekend, campus classifieds and campus notices will be included.

Headlining the paper will be articles about a ROTC coup of Joint Student Government and a report of unidentified flying objects at Manley Fieldhouse.

The magazine will also include a photo section on the ABC-TV hootenanny and articles about the House Un - American Activities Committee and the alleged cultural decay of American universities, as well as stories, poems and literary criticism.

Syracuse '10' is the official campus magazine.

This issue, the first of the 1962-63 school year, will cost 35 cents per copy.

Wins Award

Owen K. Gregory, a senior in business administration, has received the $200 Robert Bertram Roantree scholarship.

The award is given annually by the Syracuse Association of Credit Management.

The Daily Orange's Right to Know

The slashing knife of censorship strikes quickly and cuts deep. And it hurts.

We were surprised and shocked Friday when we received the call from the dean of men's office informing us of the decision to withhold all information concerning disciplinary cases from the Daily Orange.

Later at Dean of Men Earle Clifford's home we were told of the reasons for making this move. These reasons appear on page one. We had them explained clearly, rationally and in an almost apologetic tone.

This we appreciate but cannot accept. Censorship is censorship and one kind is as bad as the next. A shutting off of news from this source can lead to a shutting off of news from another source.

The cycle can continue and grow like a rolling snowball until soon the Daily Orange has no function as an informative newspaper. No longer can the campus become aware of what is going wrong in the university as well as what is right.

Without being allowed to perform the function of informing the university community of all happenings on campus, we are no longer working in the field of journalism; we have become public relations men.

The Daily Orange does not want to become a public relations publication for the dean of men's office or any other part of the university except when there is good news to report from these offices.

Turning to the disputed editorial, we pointed out to Dean Clifford that nowhere in the editorial did the word "individual" appear. The editorial was written in reference to our right to publish the names of fraternities who violated regulations and have thus failed in their trust to the university. In this regard, we said, they deserve to be named since they have not performed well in their obligations.

However, Dean Clifford pointed to the use of basketball player Francis Pinchot's name earlier in the year when the latter's name appeared on city police records. The use of an individual's name in this case was a departure from tradition. All other suspensions from the university have been handled anonymously. But in this case, we were dealing with a prominent person whose name was written all over city police records. Thus we were justified, in our view.

We cannot say we wouldn't do it again if a prominent campus personality were suspended from school. But we consider these exceptions.

Dean Clifford said there is a fine line separating cases involving groups and those involving individuals. Because he cannot be sure the line will not be crossed, he has made his move.

And so we feel there is a thin line separating the withholding of news "for the good of the university and the education of the parties involved" from flat censorship of stories.

In fact, they are on the same side of the line. So we must stick to our editorial of Thursday and bring before the Board of Publications a statement of our rights as a newspaper, performing a newspaper's task.

Thursday we demanded the public's right to know. Now we must insist on our right to know so that the public in turn may also know the bad with the good.

Last week we received a letter from George Lockwood, former managing editor of the Daily Orange and now an editor of the Milwaukee Journal. Two portions of his letter are pertinent:

"I suppose most alumni would prefer to read only nice things about their university. But it's your job to report all events that affect the college community — and you're doing just that.

"Keep jabbing that pen in the wrong places. The 'ouch' of publicity is good for the university."

Publish or Perish: A Bind

By Ron Corwin

"Syracuse University recognizes conspicuous success in teaching as of prime importance."—Faculty Manual, Syracuse University, 1962/63

* * *

As students we come to a university to learn. The learning can come about in many ways. One vehicle is the classroom. Because of our earlier experience with the academic learning process we have come to depend upon the lecture as a chief source of information and intellectual stimulation.

When we come to college our ideas about the educational process get a stiff jolt.

We find that the classroom and lecture hall have let us down. In particular and lecturer has failed us. Often he is dull and boring, hardly our image of the exciting college professor. Why?

Possibly because the role of the college instructor is not primarily to teach but to do research. We realize that the people whose names appear in our textbooks, who are mentioned in the lectures for discovering this or that, are not teachers but academicians who have published in their fields.

Further we find that with all the protestations about the vital role that teaching plays in our society, there is little or no recognition given to the man who is an excellent teacher. The rewards that he does reap are from the students. His colleagues often look condescendingly at a serious teacher, who some feel is shunning the real role (?) of the academician — research.

When we note that the final step in receiving a Ph.D. is to do an original piece of research published in the form of a dissertation, the situation comes more into focus.

When a Ph.D. applies for an academic position the question about him is not, "is this man a good teacher?". More often it is "How many publications does this man have to his credit?"

In fact, the best-known men in their field are rewarded by having their teaching loads reduced. The Ph.D. is a research degree not a teaching certificate. Consider the fact that college instructors do not have to take education courses while high school teachers do. (Not that one can really learn how to teach in an education course —it is merely a question of emphasis.)

It has been brought to my attention that last year the man on the Hill faculty to receive the highest salary raise was the man who produced the most journal publications. The man who received the second highest raise was the instructor who produced the second greatest amount of publications. Coincidence?

So while we as students tend to view the role of the instructor as a teacher, the instructor and his colleagues may, and often do, see themselves with a different purpose. Some, of course, combine both functions.

Pressures on the faculty member from within the system are often vital. In a phrase, "publish or perish." The faculty member, as the university itself, is torn between satisfying his professional need to produce articles and the need of the student to be stimulated.

All universities are in a bind. They want to build a reputation—attract reputable men to their campus. Reputation is not based on teaching ability; it is grounded in research publications.

So we feel cheated.

We pay our money for a course and sometimes the instructor is not interested in teaching. He would rather be in the laboratory collecting data and preparing journal articles. After all, the students have no role in determining an instructor's tenure or advancemet or salary raises.

And the instructor must satisfy the god (or devil) who brings him the bread. It used to be—in the olden days—the students hired and fired faculty members. The instructor's colleagues have since subsumed this function.

Research is vital in an advancing society. So is the student. From the student springs tomorrow's research. Must one be sacrified for the other?

LETTERS

Corwin

To the Editor:

In your recent debate Mr. Corwin you expressed a desire to have the administration of this university set a date for the end of all discriminatory clauses in the hill fraternity system. If this is not accomplished in the required time you ask for the removal of those concerned. I respect your opinion and your views, however I find it impossible to reach agreement with them.

My house and many others involved in this dispute have continuously advocated the removal of selectivity clauses at our national conventions. Speaking from my own experience I can honestly say that much progress has been made along these lines, but in a national organization we must consider greatly the factor of timing. Great advancements do not occur in days but over a period of years.

Should my fraternity decide to change its membership requirements I am sure that I will continue to be loyal to it and appreciate my membership in the organization. I would still have difficulty understanding why it is wrong to be Christian, Jewish, or of any other Faith.

I can understand people thinking that social organizations, should not have a religious faith as a basis for the organization and I think it is the privilege of those persons to join organizations which leave religion out. However, is that a good argument why any house should not continue to be a Christion or Jewish fraternity.

In many cases the ritual traditions of fraternity are founded and based upon their religious convictions. Sure, I can see these organizations stepping aside from their traditions in order to broaden the basis for membership in them. However, where does this leave the organgization? Destruction of an institution does not bring about any solution as to the problems which face it. Rather let's have it look to a reassessment of it's values and goals in which strength may be found.

The Past - 1942 Hayes, 'Harriet'

If you are a well known actress, and after seeing a play on the Hill take it to Broadway as a staring vehicle for yourself, Syracuse University may give you an honorary degree.

That's at least, what happened to Helen Hayes, who will appear with Maurice Evans at the George L. Manley Fieldhouse Tuesday, some 20 years ago.

On a brisk October evening in 1942, Miss Hayes and her late husband, Charles MacArthur, arrived at the old university Civic Theater, now the Civic Follies. The play they saw later became one of Miss Hayes' most successful White Way hits.

Boar's Head was presenting Colin Clements and Florence Ryerson's "Harriet" that autumn evening, and Miss Hayes was looking for a new play to take to New York.

After the first act curtain she made an important decision. She bought the original play that night, saying she felt it to be the perfect vehicle for her talents.

"Harriet" ran for three years, a second only to Miss Hayes' "Victoria Regina."

Attending the Hill premiere of "Harriet" with her was Miss Hayes' "good friend," the late Sawyer Falk, chairman of the drama department.

"Its the first time I've ever played a supporting role to a better actor and really enjoyed it," Miss Hayes said about Falk.

Several months after "Harriet" opened she was invited to appear at SU's 72nd commencement to receive an honorary Doctor of Letters degree.

In confering the degree Chancellor William P. Tolley called Miss Hayes a "people's artist of this republic . . . an inspiring and inspired artist, radiant and irresistible in spirit, gifted with a speaking voice of incredible magic, the foremost actress of our generation."

The Present - A Philly Preview

DOUGLAS KERR, a graduate journalism student, saw "A Program for Two Players" last week in Philadelphia. Following is a preview of this collection of scenes from William Shakespeare.

With the help of three plain benches, elevated platform and simple backdrop, Helen Hayes and Maurice Evans brought Shakespeare to life last week in Philadelphia's famous Walnut Theater. "A Program for Two Players" is not, of course, a Shakespearean play. But the material chosen by the theater's most cultivated players for their program happens to be Shakespearan.

It is a living scrapbook of Shakespeare: some comedy, some tragedy, a bit from the chronicles and a trimming of a sonnet or two. The lighting and simple staging are very effective. A small platform, in turn, becomes the Forest of Arden, Macbeth's castle, ancient Troy, Cleopatra's Egypt and a dozen other locations.

Miss Hayes, in a green gown, and Evans, in black-tie dress, begin by swapping quotes from the Bard. With this amazing exchange setting the mood, the co-stars render a charming woodland scene from "As You Like It." and, after a pause, slip into the black mood of "Richard III," with Evans as the crook-backed king indecently courting the widow of the man he has murdered.

Evans shucks his black jacket and tie for "Hamlet" and the soliloquy, "O, that this too, too solid flesh." Miss Hayes, now in a green gown, returns as Gertrude to face up to her anguished son.

For the second half (with Miss Hayes in a becoming black gown), the two stars have a go at "Macbeth," but recover to allow Miss Hayes to render the inevitable "quality of mercy speech" from "The Merchant of Venice," to die as Celopatra, and to be reunited with Evans in a telescoped version of "The Taming of the Shrew.

Cinda Ends Reign

TALKING IT OVER—Discussing this year's Miss Central New York contest are THEODORE ECKERMAN, Jaycee president; C. T. DUNCAN of Pepsi-Cola Bottlers; CINDA BUSWELL, Miss Central New York for 1962; and JEROME WILSON of Wilson's Leading Jewelers.

Miss Syracuse of 1963 will be crowned May 15 in the University Regent Theatre, Ted Eckerman, president of the Syracuse Junior Chamber of Commerce, has announced.

Prizes for the title include a $250 scholarship offered by T. C. Duncan; a $250 Keepsake diamond ring from Jerome Wilson of Wilson's Leading Jewelers and more than $1500 in prizes, including wardrobes, luggage, electrical appliances, hair styling and shoes.

Application blanks for the contest are available until April 30 at Wilson's Leading Jewelers, Wilson Building, South Salina St.

Contestants are judged on beauty, poise and talent, with the last two categories receiving special attention.

Last year, Miss Cinda Buswell, a Hill student and winner of the Miss Central New York pageant, and Miss Sharon Branigan, winner of the previous Miss Syracuse contest, represented the area at the statewide event.

Miss Buswell placed second in the statewide competition, winning more than $2,000 in prizes.

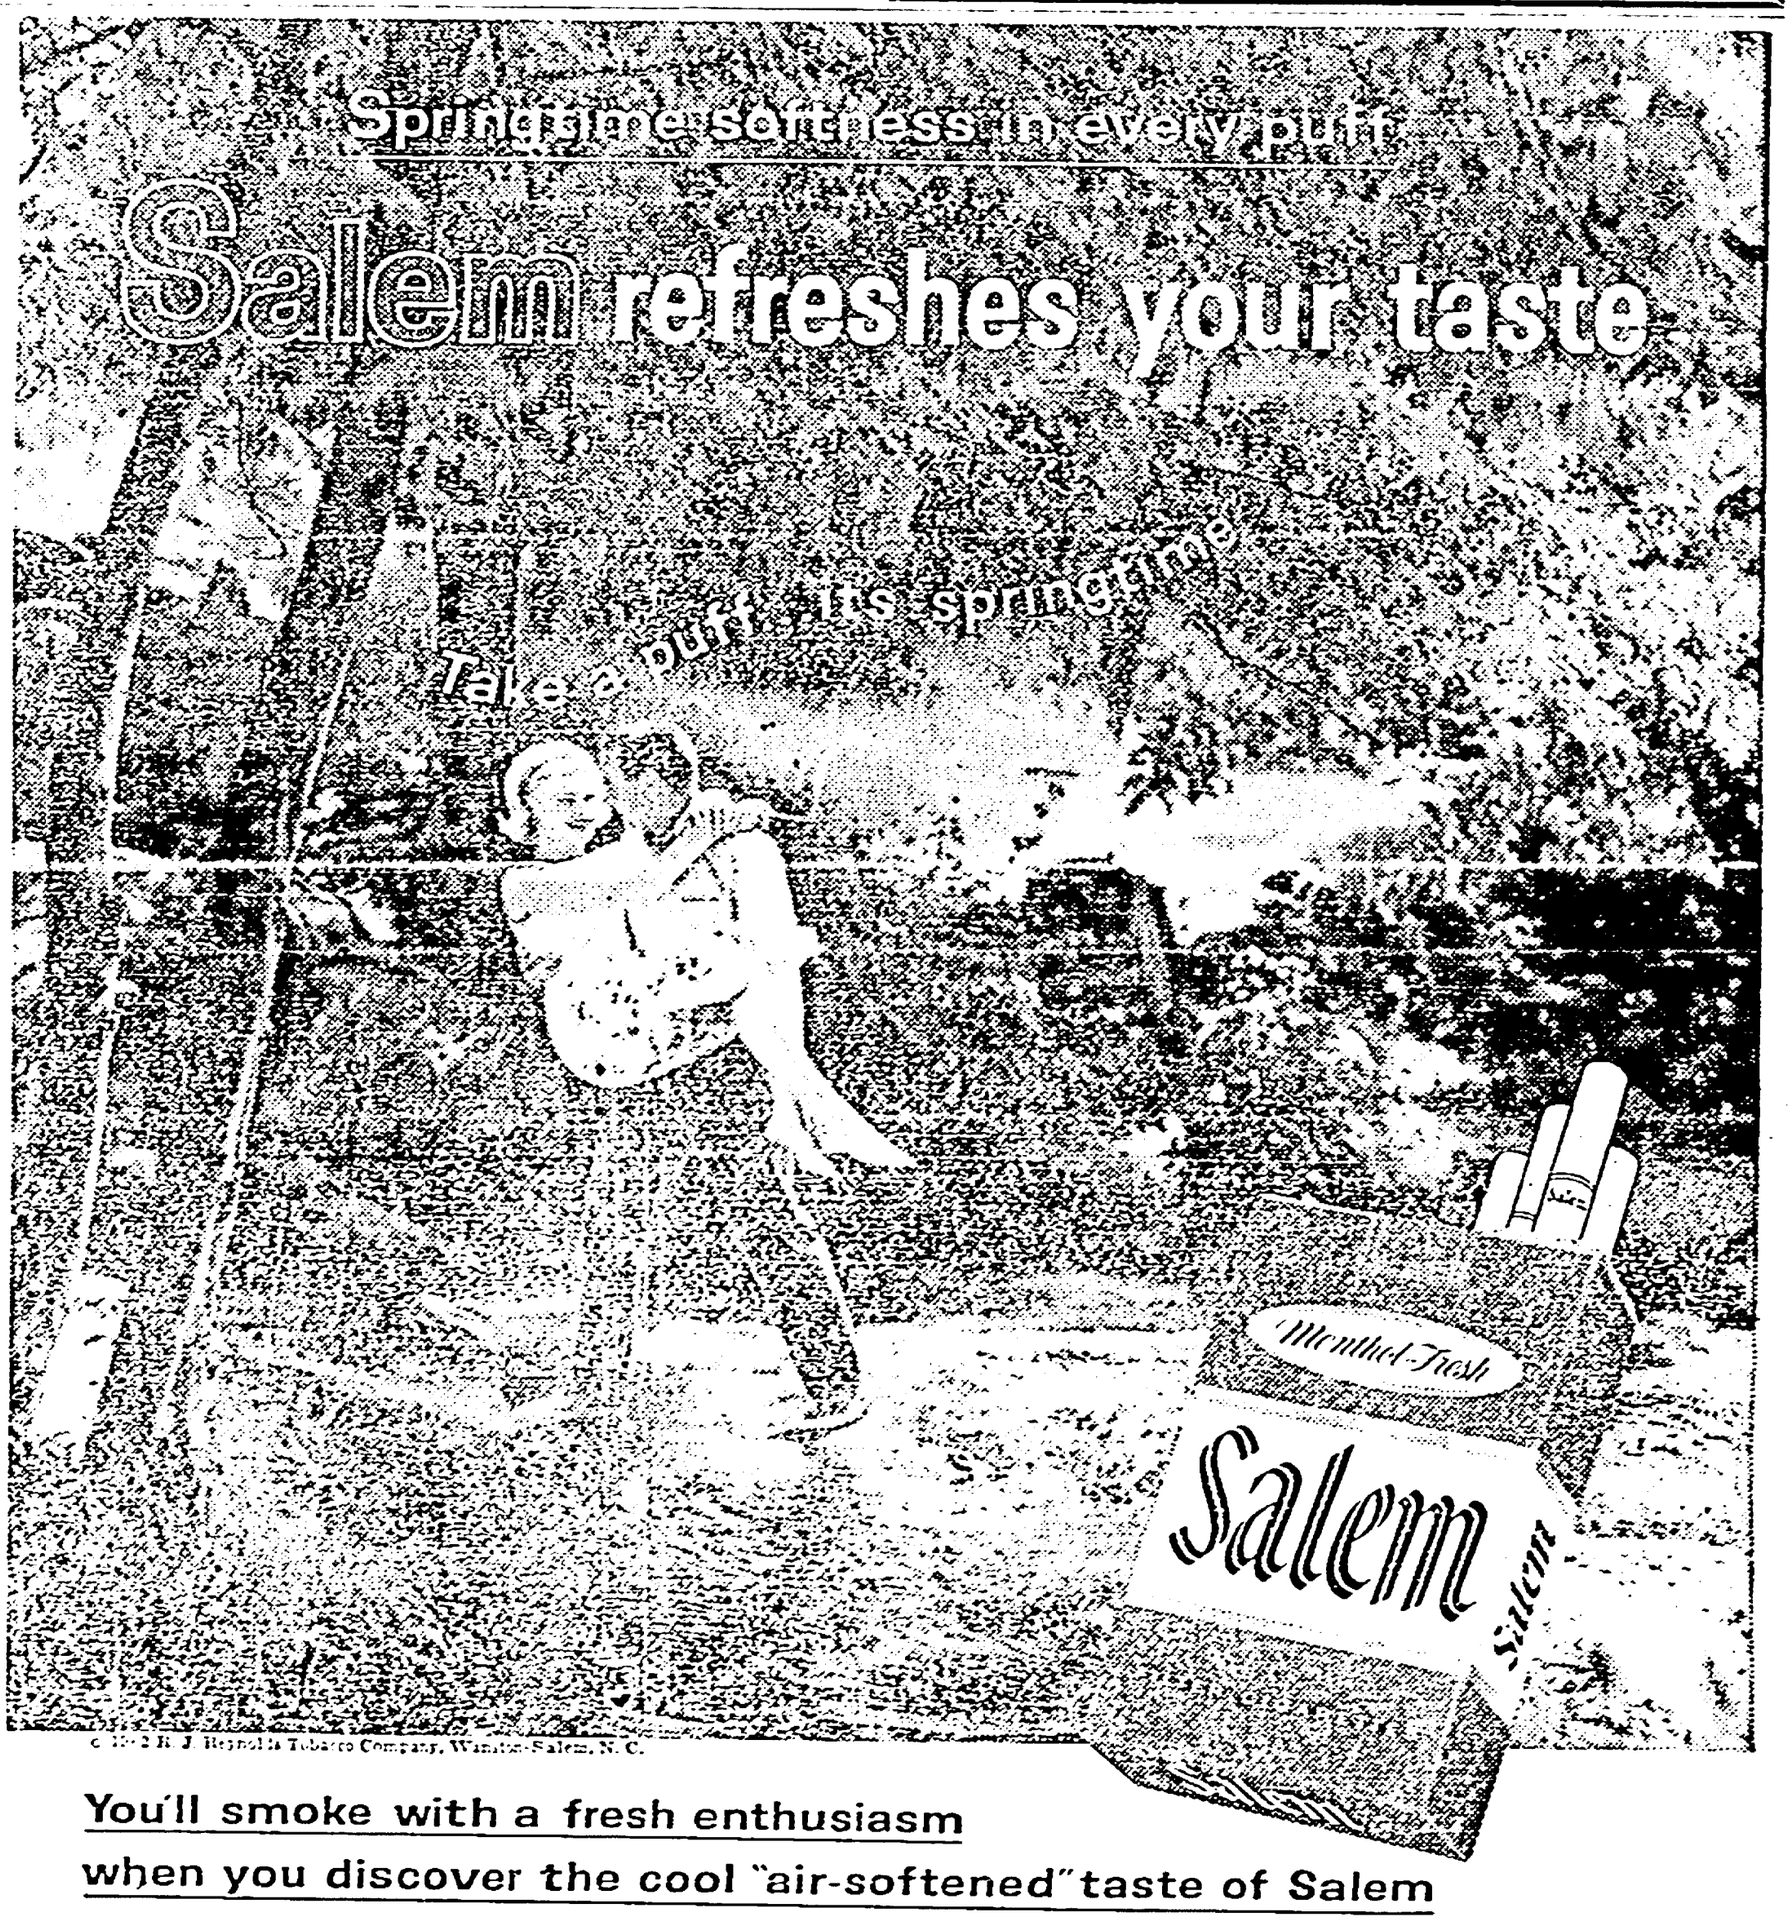
The course is taught by instructor Gene Gilmore of the School of Journalism.

Watson Flight Exhibit Opens



"The Beginnings of Flight," an exhibition tracing man's attempt to gain mastery of the air will be displayed today through March 25 in the Watson Dormitory main lounge.

A series of panel photographs and illustrations will give a pictorial history of aviation from the 14th century to the jet age.

Featured in the exhibition will be scale models of a mid-19th century balloon, the Wright brothers' airplane and the Thor-Delta rocket which carried the Echo satellite into orbit.

Another feature will be an antique peek camera flicker show containing a film of the Wright brothers' flying demonstrations in Italy, France and the United States.

Bookstore, Infirmary Reach for Band-Aids

The Sword of Damocles cut into campus last week, but the wounds were not too deep.

According to Sword Editor Terrence Hughes, all copies of the magazine were sold. University officials about whom articles were written had varied comments.

Burton Fink, bookstore director, said that he felt the reporting on bookstore article, "Neither Love Nor Money," was "a very good job — unbiased and unprejudiced."

He added, however, that there were "a few specific glaring errors."

Bookstore employees receive a 40 per cent discount on some articles, but not on textbooks, as the article said, Fink noted.

Textbook discount is 20 per cent.

Fink also said the staff's unofficial breakdown of the administrative charge and bookstore profits in the article were in error.

"This would have to be checked with the treasurer's office to see if the actual figures could be released," he said.

Fink said that while the article cited an instance where the bookstore had netted over $3000 on texts not reordered, "there is another side to the coin."

He said the store had also ordered 1,100 books which were not used. Now, there is no place they can be sold. This was a loss of $3000.

He also noted that sometimes students can receive more than 25 per cent of the original price on books they resell, even if the university has not reordered them.

"If we've made arrangements to sell the books to other colleges — as we try to do — students can get back up to 40 per cent," Fink noted.

Dr. Frederick N. Marty, director of Student Health Service, said two examples in a Sword article about the infirmary were "grossly distorted."

He said that the instance where a student came to the infirmary with a knee injury which was, according to the Sword, misdiagnosed, was not true.

He noted that the student came to health service two weeks after he had received the injury. Dr. Marty said that there was no swelling and no apparent injury.

The knee operation required later was probably not due to that injury, Dr. Marty said.

Hughes said that he has a letter from the boy backing up his story.

Dr. Marty also said that interns "are not allowed to do pelvic examinations on women and never have."

However, Hughes said that he has a letter in which a girl said she had received such an examination. He added that the girl is willing "to stand by her assertions."

Commenting on the infirmary's physical plant, Dr. Marty said, "We think that it's well kept up. We make every attempt to keep it clean, and have constant repairs, such as in plumbing facilities."

He said that he feels the infirmary has adequate nursing service.

"The problem," Dr. Marty noted, "is that no one can ever staff for an emergency. However, we get extra nurses in when we need them."

He said the infirmary will have new facilities "in a short time." One of the possibilities, he added, is a new building on the present health service site.

Mrs. Mary Palmer, international students secretary, said that she had not yet read the Sword article on international students and could not comment.

An Ambassador living center head resident, Mrs. Ruth Hawthorne, also had not read the article at the time she was contacted by the Daily Orange. She said, however, that she did not know of any "problems" caused by the location of the Ambassador at Madison street and University avenue.

Bloomberg to Leave Hill Staff

By DANIEL RITEY

Asst. Prof. Warner Bloomberg Jr. will leave the Hill sociology and anthropology department at the end of the summer session for a higher position at the University of Wisconsin.

"I am leaving Syracuse permanently," he said, "and joining the department of urban affairs at Wisconsin, which is located in Milwaukee, as an associate professor.

DR. WARNER BLOOMBERG

"My new position will represent an advance in my professional development and will also be of benefit to my family," he explained.

Action Research Project

At Wisconsin, Dr. Bloomberg will conduct two experimental seminars while taking part in "an action research project in the Milwaukee metropolitan area."

Dr. Bloomberg cited the urban affairs department as one "involving people in the fields of history, economics, political science and sociology."

The Milwaukee research project will deal with "a variety of problems, ranging from improvement of the area's economic base and a stimulation of citizen interests and participation in the community, to 'far out' phrases like "Utopian Thinking by community leaders," said Dr. Bloomberg.

Specific Research

This research is specific and its results apply only to Milwaukee, Dr. Bloomberg said. "It is aimed at particular problems for a certain time and place."

Dr. Bloomberg was also involved in research projects while at Syracuse; "these were general in nature, dealing with the politics of local government."

Dr. Bloomberg, who received his degrees from Chicago University, came to Syracuse in 1957 with a masters degree in social sciences and a doctorate in sociology.

Army ROTC Names Davis

HOW'S YOUR MEMORY

"LITTLE" FACTS YOU FORGET MAKE BIG DIFFERENCES IN YOUR GRADES!

THE PROBLEM:
Few students can remember every name, date, formula, conjugation, theorem, definition, principle, demanded by a 4-year program. Educators know that through the "extinction process" you will forget many of the facts taught last week, last month, last term, last year. Thus a "Memory Gap" develops between the facts you are required to remember and the facts you do remember. The smaller you can make your "Memory Gap" the higher your grades will be.

THE SOLUTION:
Only DATA-GUIDE solid plastic loose-leaf summaries are specifically designed to close the "Memory Gap." DATA-GUIDES preserve, on solid plastic, the essential facts core of each subject to give you a permanent, portable reference that can be used from term...to term ...to term—throughout your entire school career. Thus in spite of lost notes, surrendered texts, a difficult program, and an overburdened memory, with DATA-GUIDE solid-plastic charts, you will always have the facts you need.

Authored by leading educators, the subject matter on each DATA-GUIDE solid-plastic chart is imaginatively written and uniquely organized for rapid fact location and memory strengthening. Students throughout the U.S. are using all-plastic DATA-GUIDES to insure success in school. REMEMBER: Today's lessons are based on yesterday's facts! HOW IS YOUR MEMORY?

Work Begins on Crouse Site Dorm

Contracts Awarded

Contracts totalling $2,773,822 have been awarded for the Crouse site women's dormitory and dining hall, to be built at 400 Comstock Ave.

Construction will get underway by the middle of this month, with occupancy set for September 1964.

Dr. Clark D. Ahlberg, vice president for administration and research, announced Saturday that the contract for general construction, amounting to $1,842,870, was awarded to Dygert Construction Co., Inc., of Syracuse.

The building, designed by university architects King and King, will have dormitory facilities for 416 women.

Housing will be in a tall main section, with lounges and dining facilities in a short, circular wing.

Like other recent Hill construction, it will be of red brick with limestone trim.

The property, bounded by Marshall and Adams streets, has been occupied by the School of Social Work and the Youth Development Center, which move this week to 926 S. Crouse Ave., formerly Lima Cottage, a coed residence.

As soon as the transfer is complete, the former Crouse home will be demolished.

Other firms receiving contracts and their low base bids are Randall Electric, Inc., electric, $258,889; C. W. Davis Supply Co., Inc., heating and ventilating, $277,875; Burns Bros. Plumbers, Inc., plumbing, $187,315; Otis Elevator Co., elevators, $128,886; and Heifetz Metal Craft, kitchen equipment, $77,987.

James V. Latorre, assistant to Dr. Ahlberg, said the contract for demolition has been awarded to Bielec Wrecking Corp.

The new dormitory, as yet unnamed, will be constructed in a curved design to eliminate all straight corridors. It will be eight stories high on one side and 11 stories on the other.

Financing is by a long-term Federal Housing and Home Finance Agency loan.

Social Work Moves

The School of Social Work begins its move to Lima Cottage and prefab 1 today.

The school is being moved from its present Crouse House location, 400 Comstock Ave., to make way for the new Crouse site dormitory, between Marshall and Adams streets, and Comstock and Walnut avenues.

Classroom equipment will be moved to the prefab today. Faculty offices will move Wednesday to Lima, 926 S. Crouse Ave.

The school now has three classrooms. After the move, five will be available.

Howard B. Gundy, director of the school, said that the major difference from the present setup would be the separation of offices and classrooms.

Under present plans the school will move again in the fall of 1965 when it occupies a new School of Social Work building behind the Crouse College of Fine Arts.

This building will be financed through a $400,000 grant from the Rosamond Gifford Corp.

Chancellor William P. Tolley has indicated it will be possible to allocate approximately one million dollars from the Syracuse Plan for the construction.

To preserve the walnut paneling in the Crouse House living room, now used as a classroom, the room will be dismantled and the paneling installed in the new building.

Traditions Commission initiated five new officers Sunday night at its annual banquet at Airways Inn.

Richard Cost succeeds Leland Peterson of Delta Upsilon as president of the commission. Cost, a liberal arts junior, is past president of Phi Delta Theta social fraternity. He is from Highland Park, N. J.

Barbara Schiebel became Traditions vice-president in the moving-up ceremonies. A liberal arts junior from Caldwell, N. J. and Phi Sigma Sigma member, she succeeds Monica Polozie of Delta Gamma.

Secretary of Traditions Commission is Nancy Booth of Kappa Alpha Theta, a liberal arts junior from Cheyenne, Wyo. She succeeds Mary Schwartzwalder of Kappa Alpha Theta.

Chosen as the new treasurer is Ronald Brezinski of Phi Gamma Delta, a liberal arts junior from San Bernadino, Calif. He is also president of Campus Alliance Party. Brezinski and Miss Booth are members of the junior class executive council. Brezinski succeeds Jerry Renske of Phi Gamma Delta as Traditions treasurer.

Robert Davis of Sigma Nu is the new public relations chairman of the commission. A Joint Student Legislator senator, he is from Erie, Pa. The liberal arts junior succeeds Michael Johnson of Delta Upsilon.

The new officers have all served as committee chairmen of Traditions Commission.

Traditions is composed of 36 juniors and sophomores, selected from sophomore Goon Squad members. Seniors were retired from the Commission after the moving-up ceremonies.

Traditions Commission is responsible for the entire orientation program for freshmen and transfer students. Another Commission project is choosing the Goon Squad in early April.

Starting at 6:30 a.m., the Uticans stocked a car with sandwiches—ham, peanut butter, baloney—, two thermoses of coffee and a first aid kit (put to use after one freshman's ankle became sprained about 33 miles along.

A sign on the car said "Caution—Walkers Ahead, Utica College to Syracuse University."

Shirley King, a psychology student and leader of the group, tramped for 17 miles, then rode a while, then walked another 18 miles. Freshman Phillip Silsner got his blisters from 40 miles of stumping it.

The rest of the hiker's roster read: Richard Suter, Bethann Shibelski, Dorothea Smith, Dennis Lee, David Kunkel, Geraldine Frisbie, Janice Yeoman (car driver), Nancy Boyden, Patricia Szlek, Gary Major, Carmen Borgia and Wallace Brown.

At this point The Daily Orange knows of three Hill freshmen who plan a return hike to UC this weekend. Joint Student Government President Theodore Bayer, while he won't be walking himself, has offered JSG backing for all volunteers—in the way of cars, food, new shoe soles and encouragement.

Both Mittleman and Whittaker said they believe current drinking policy investigation is not hopeless, even in light of the chancellor's statement.

Syracuse Dominates Meet

By TOM MULLER

The Syracuse University gymnasts, undefeated champions of the Eastern Intercollegiate Gymnastics League, swept 12 individual awards in Saturday's finals of that league's individual championships.

Displaying strength never before matched in SU gymnastics history, the powerful Orangemen picked up five of the eight first places in the meet. They also collected two seconds, four thirds, and one fourth.

Hail "Corky" Voas started the ball rolling by placing third in the all-around competition with a score of 519.5. Sophomore Mark Cohn of Temple was second with 528.5 points, and senior Tom Seward of Penn State won with a total of 557.5. The all-around title is awarded to the gymnast who has the highest point total at the close of the preliminary rounds in the six Olympic events (tumbling excluded).

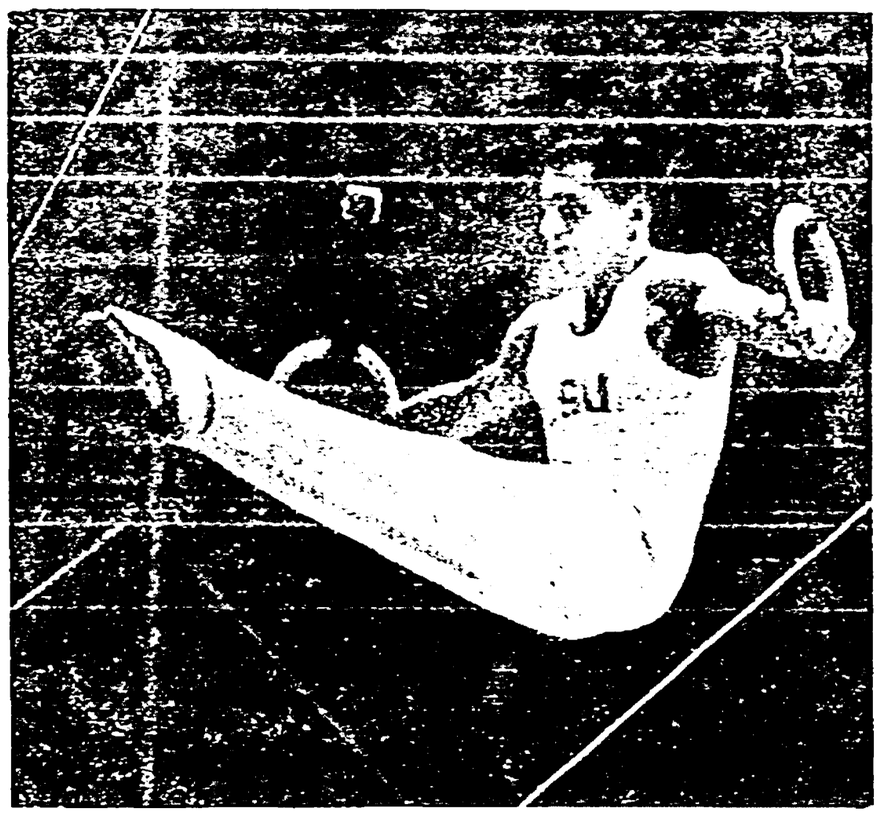
In the floor exercises, Corky found himself locked in a tight battle with Seward. Corky was ahead by .5 at the close of Friday's prelims, but he dropped that half point to Seward in the finals, and the two tied for first place. Orange sophomore Sid Oglesby placed fourth in that event.

The next event, the side horse, brought another Syracuse victory. Riding the crest of a fine 96 preliminary score, captain Ray Grimaldi got a 97.5 and won the event going away. The victory was especially sweet, because it avenged his only loss of the season to Mark Cohn. SU sophomore Jon Meury proved that he will be the one to watch in coming years by placing seventh out of the field of 29.

Once again the Syracuse trouble spot was the horizontal bar, an event which saw no SU finalists. Tim Phillips of Temple displayed great ability in rolling up a score of 191.5 to emerge victorious on the bar.

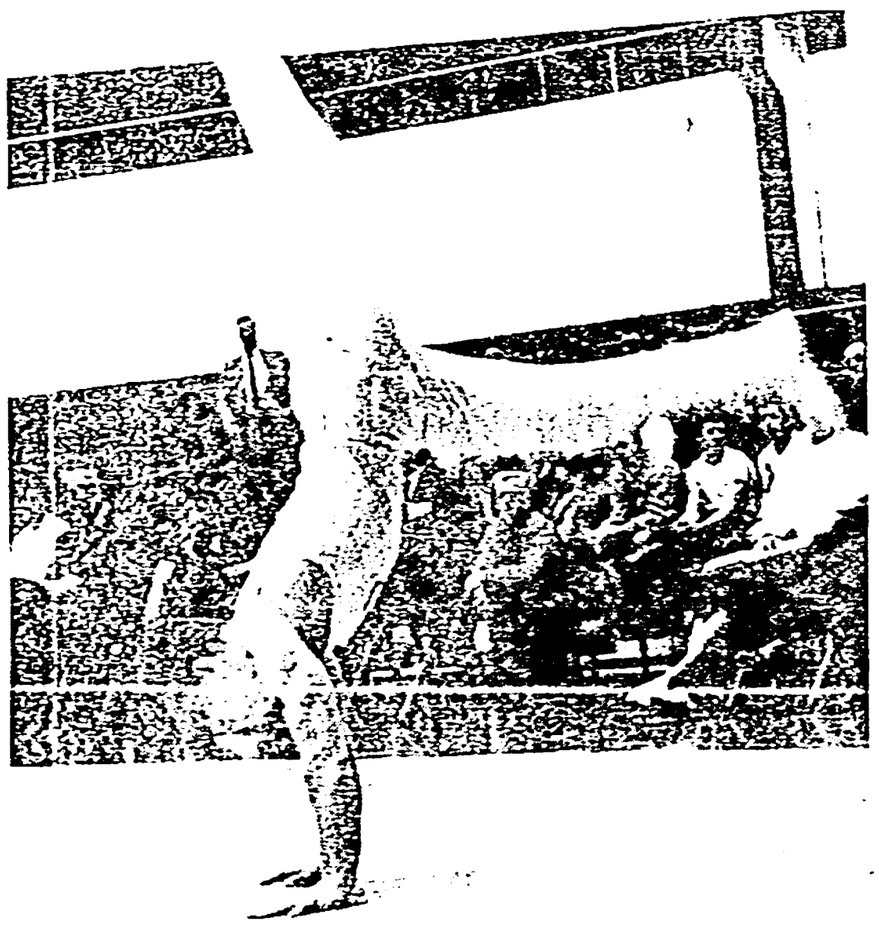
The Orangemen got back in the groove on the long horse, however, and amazed the fans by sweeping the first three places. Oglesby, Ron Orlick, and Voas finished in that order for coach Paul Romeo's champs. Oglesby surprised everybody by relieving Orlick of his crown in that event, but by a small margin.

Although they weren't quite as successful on the parallel bars, the Orangemen did gain a second in that event. Carl Poplar repeated his performance of a year ago, and finished behind Temple's Cohn. Seward, who held a commanding lead going into the finals, broke several times and finished fourth.



On the still rings Grimaldi rolled to a total of 193 and his second victory of the day. His closest competitor, Seward, was a distant 5.5 points behind. Grimaldi's win gave him a perfect batting average in the championships—two events entered and two events won. An interesting point is the fact that during his two days of competition Ray didn't have a single score below 96. Corky Voas tied with Bud Williams of Penn State and Barry Weissman of Temple for the third spot on the rings.

Tumbling, an added event, saw only six competitors, but plenty of excitement. Voas tried his best to make his final SU appearance a memorable one, and memorable it was. Corky put on a display that would be hard to match, as he was given a 99.5 rating by the judges. His routine was highlighted by a double back somersault, one of the hardest stunts in tumbling.



"It couldn't have been better," said Dr. Ricciardi, one of the judges, after seeing Corky's tumbling display. "Corky should undoubtedly win the national championship in that event." Oglesby overcame a poor prelim score and placed third, and junior John Bird finished sixth for Syracuse.

Eyeing the two-foot team trophy that his boys had won during the dual meet season, coach Romeo said, "This has been our year. This is the best we've ever done. The boys didn't let up a bit." After being quizzed about Corky's tumbling performance Romeo said, "Corky's one of the best tumblers in the U.S.A."

The closest an SU team came to winning this many medals was in 1950 when they won four out of the seven events. They were also undefeated that year, but they had one tie on their record. The whole SU squad and the other winners will now go to the NCAA trials at Pittsburgh.

RAY GRIMALDI

CORKY VOAS

98, 100, 100, 98!

By JUDY ADAMS

It was the 220th performance of the meet, the last of the afternoon. It was going to be the best.

Five feet, three inches of gymnastic wonder stood at the end of the tumbling mat and prepared to begin his routine. He glanced at the judges for the OK. They nodded and with a hop, he was off.

Four trips, the rules say, in a minute and a half. But the general consensus Saturday was that this time, one would have been sufficient.

Thump, thump, thump sounded the progression of his feet and hands as he spun swiftly and smoothly down the mat. And then there is was: the reason five extra minutes had suddenly been added to the tumbling warm-up time; the double back-sumersault.

"He wasn't sure he could do it," beamed Romeo later, "but you saw him."

It's not an easy thing, this double sumersault. Tremendous spring is needed to propell the performer backwards through two complete spins.

This 115 pounder executed it perfectly to the delight of the 1,341 fans. They sounded their appreciation almost before his feet touched the mat.

Three more trips were required, but none compared to the first. The last was ended with a clap and a wild enthusiastic jump that was not part of his routine. Then he raced back to his delirious teammates.

The furious applause of the crowd broke into a screaming roar when score cards were raised. They showed: 98, 100, 100, 99.

Announcer Ken Orkin, a gymnast himself, began reciting them as he had done hundreds of times this year. But this time few heard him. The powerful fieldhouse speaker system was drowned out by the yelling of the crowd. They didnt have to hear the scores, they could see them.

They could also see his teammates try to lift the littlest performer onto their shoulders. But his teammates aren't very big themselves and Corky Voas doesn't go for that sort of stuff. He struggled to his feet and jogged over to the winners platform to mount the steps for the fifth time that day.

When he stepped down, he became lost among admirers and autograph seekers.

Boys with programs clutched in their hands were after another who had almost been forgotten in the excitement of Corky's performance. Ray Grimaldi, who like Corky had won two first place medals, stood practicing his signature.

Until the closing minutes, Ray's final performance on the side horse had stood as the most outstanding of the weekend. Later he had almost equaled that average of 97.5 with a 97 on the grueling still rings.

The winners were called for a final photo. Six men gathered. One wore Penn State's blue and white. Two boasted Temple's red T. The other three were from Syracuse: Voas, Grimaldi and soph Sid Oglesby. As the bulbs flashed, coach Paul Romeo stood grinning at his three boys.

"It was a real team effort," he cliched. He was right. In a weekend designed to stress the individual over the team, Romeo's boys finished as they had all year—as the team on top.

A good folly is worth whatever you pay for it. — George Ade

Hoop All-American Poll

By BILL CRONAUER

Center Art Heyman of Duke and junior Ron Bonham of Cincinnati head the 1962-63 Associated Press and United Press International All-America teams. Heyman, a 6-5 forward and the candidate for college player-of-the-year honors, received a total of 744 votes on the AP ballot.

The AP sports writers and radio - TV broadcasters gave Heyman 142 of 183 possible first team ballots. The Duke star was also the top vote-getter in the UPI poll.

Bonham, also a 6-4 forward, is the number one player on the number one team in the country. He finished a close second to Heyman in the AP selections with 706 votes.

The Cincinnati junior also gained first squad honors on UPI.

Completing the Associated Press "dream team" are senior Jerry Harkness of Loyola (Chicago) and juniors Gary Bradds of Ohio State and Barry Kramer of NYU.

Harkness obtained 428 AP votes; Bradds, 321; and Kramer, 319.

United Press bolstered its first team with Bradds and senior guard Tom Thacker of Cincinnati.

The second UPI five includes senior Rod Thorn (West Virginia), junior Cotton Nash (Kentucky), sophomore Bill Bradley (Princeton), senior Nate Thurmond (Bowling Green) and Kramer.

Members of the third unit are junior Walt Hazzard (UCLA), senior Eddie Miles (Seattle), junior Nick Werkman (Seton Hall), senior Bill Green (Colorado St.) and soph Dave Stallworth, the Wichita star who scored 46 points against Cincinnati.

The second AP club is composed of Thorn, Nash, Thacker, Bradley and Hazzard. The third squad is composed of Werkman, Miles, Green, junior Jim Rayl (Indiana) and senior Tony Yates (Cincinnati).

Among those included on the UPI honorable mention list are LaSalle's Bill Raferty, CaNisius standout Bill O'Connor, and Ken Glenn and Andy O'Connel of Niagara.

Singer Advises: Don't Take Advice When You Write

By STEPHANIE BRILL

"The deader the language, the more alive the ghost," quipped author Isaac Bashevis Singer.

"I know that ghosts like Yiddish and they all speak Yiddish." Thus explaining why he writes in the "dying" Yiddish language, the guest of the English department's visiting writer's series spoke on "Some Advice to Young Writers-and Old", in Huntington B. Crouse Hall Monday.

Singer, whose dark suit sharply contrasted with his cream-colored face and almost bald head, would probably make a good subject for a painter. A sharp profile and thin line forming his lips changed to a gentle smile as he spoke.

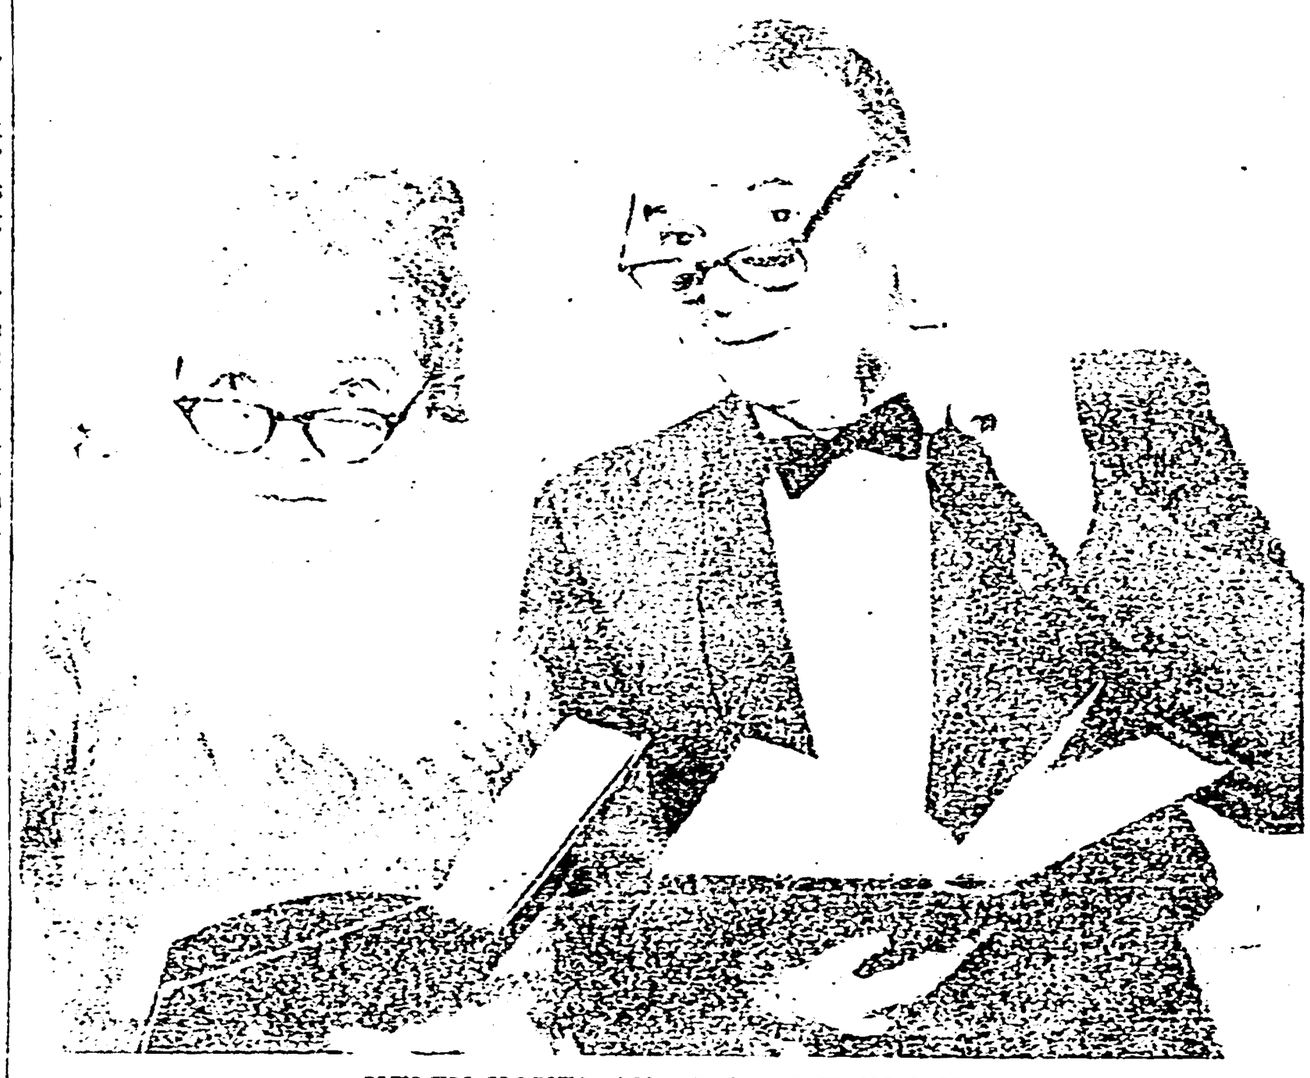
"Before I give you advice. I want to give you some 'advice': Don't take anybody's advice when you sit down to write." Explaining his talk would be based on his personal writing standards, he asserted that literary standards vary with each work and its writer; that it is subsquently difficult to draw the line between an amateur and a professional writer on any other basis than the specific work.

Noting that a cohesive plot and theme are essential in novels, he referred to Tolstoi's "War and Peace," an example of a work whose diffuse plot is not its strongest point.

He also stated that, "the roots of art are essentially provincial, nationalistic and clannish".

"Don't aim for universality of subject," he advesd. "If you can't write about the people you know, how can you write about strangers?"

Raising his eyebrows, his forehead becoming a series of furrows, he observed, "Riddles in the writer's own psyche hold a wealth of material for him."



"Discover in yourself what sets you off from others, whether you like it or not, and use this to write for yourself rather than for the majority."

"The great works, the eternal ones, were written by religious men," he asserted. A writer must be concerned with moral questions if he is to produce works of any consequence, he continued.

He defined a religious man as one not necessarity committed to a specific dogma but rather a person who believes in a higher power and is concerned with questions of good and evil and

Hayes, Evans Present Shakespeare Tonight

HELEN HAYES AND MAURICE EVANS

SU's Manley Fieldhouse, normally the home of the Hill's athletic events, will take on an intellectual atmosphere at 8:30 p.m. tonight as Helen Hayes and Maurice Evans present an evening of Shakespeare.

The performance, "A Program for Two Players," is part of the University Regent Theatre's Celebrity Series.

Using three plain benches, an elevated platform and a simple background, the two stage veterans present a showcase of Shakespearean comedy and tragedy. Highlight of the program is Evan's tour de force as he plays all the clowns from "A Midsummer Night's Dream." Miss Hayes has received special acclaim for her portrayal of Rosalind in "As You Like It."

Tonight's performance is part of a 19-week tour for the two performers. The duo last appeared together in 1942 when they appeared in "Twelfth Night."

Student tickets for the Helen Hayes-Evans performance will be on sale 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. today in the main SU bookstore.

The Association of Women's Students has announced coeds' curfew will be extended to one half hour after the end of the performance. Ticket stubs must be shown.

Jewish Scholar To Speak Wed.

A distinguished Jewish scholar is on campus this week for a series of lectures, seminars and informal discussions.

Dr. Moshe Davis, provost of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, will make four Syracuse University appearances and one off-campus address. The Hill talks are part of the B.G. Rudolph Lectureship in Judaic Studies.

His major lecture, "The Jewish People in Metamorphosis," is set for 8 p.m. Wednesday in Hendricks Chapel

Dr. Davis will speak today to

Sick Chicks Outnumber Sick Chaps

There's a 4 to 1 ratio of females to males one place on campus.

But most of them — men and women — have upper respiratory infections, and they're separated in the informary.

Dr. Frederick N. Marty, Student Health Service director, said Monday that 21 coeds and five men are presently in the infirmary.

Normal capacity is 20 in each ward. Dr. Marty said the additional number in the girl's ward results in some strain, although the infirmary is equipped to handle more than capacity.

He added that under normal

Meeting Set Friday on Summer Reading Program in Humanities

The Summer Humanities Reading Program of Syracuse University will be discussed at 1 p.m. Friday, Gifford Auditorium, Huntnigton B. Crouse Hall.

The reading program deals with major intellectual problems in Western thought. The course is divided into two weeks in June and August-September. The interim is devoted to assigned readings.

The program this summer will being with the ideas of the Enlightment. It will deal with the philosophical background of the American and French revolutions.

The program also considers Romanticism as a reaction to the age of reason and the advance of the realistic novel in the nineteenth century.

There will also be an investigation of Darwinism, Marxism, and scientism and the impact of the two wars of the twentieth century on literary, philosophical and religious thought.

Dr. C. G. Christofides of the romance language department, coordinator of the program, will show slides of his documentation of the Upper Nile River temples at the meeting.

$93,340 Given SU For Undergrad Lab Equipment

A grant of $93,340 has been awarded Syracuse University to improve science laboratory equipment for undergraduate students, according to Dr. Clark D. Ahlberg, SU vice-president for administration and research.

The National Science Foundation of Washington, D.C. awarded grant on the condition that Syracuse University provide matching funds for renovating and enlarging undergraduate science laboratories and purchasing equipment for undergraduate science teaching.

Funds are allocated to four different departments and will be administered by the departmental chairman as follows: chemistry, $49,940; electrical engineering, $49,860; Physics, $49,880; and geology, $37,000.

Last year, with the matching funds provided by SU, $134,660 was spent refurnishing laboratories and purchasing such equipment as a low-speed wind tunnel, a controlled environment chamber, etc. This year's award represents the largest amount of money the foundation has ever granted to Syracuse.

Junior Class Names Eisner, Miss Manaker

The Junior Class Executive Council has named Linda Manaker vice president and Neil Eisner treasurer of the class.

The two replace Wendy Wilton and Alan Roth, now studying in Italy. Joint Student Government authorized the exec council to choose the new officers.

Linda, a major in American studies, is from Baltimore, Md. She was a Goon Squad member, Queen of Winter Weekend 1961 and is president of Phi Sigma Sigma sorority.

Eisner, a city student, was also a member of the Goon Squad. He participated in the 1962 Washington Seminar and is presently recording secretary of Phi Epsilon Pi fraternity.

Working members of the Spring semester Junior Class executive council will be Pamela S. Bennet, Bipra F. Block, Nancy E. Booth, Ron Brazinski, Alden Barr Cair, Susan

The Chancellor, The Committee

Did you really expect a change in the drinking policy of Syracuse University? You're kidding.

If you did you're either: a) a freshman; b) a transfer student; c) very naive; d) oblivious to the facts of life at SU; e) a member of Win Whittaker's drinking committee; or f) dead drunk.

If you don't fit any of those categories and you know a little about Syracuse you weren't too surprised at the chancellor's statement in Monday's Daily Orange.

First, the chancellor is a man of his word. In 1959 he said the policy would never change as long as he is Chancellor. He meant that.

Now he says the policy will never change, period. Now we are sure he is not intimating immortality. For some day he will retire and a new chancellor will enforce the current policy on drinking.

We are sure the students running the committee on the review of the drinking policy are realistic. They know that whatever they do will not change the policy one iota.

Yet statement's such as Mr. Mittleman's reflect a typical example of wasted energy among the good senators of JSL: "I am pleased to have a clear and definitive statement from the administration on the university's drinking policy. However, this will not deter our efforts to find out what all members of the university community feel. This inquiry will help those who tackle this problem of policy when it comes up in the future."

But we must assume that what the chancellor was trying to say was that students have made investigations and suggestions on the drinking policy before with no success.

And thus it will be in the future.

We can picture Mr. Mittleman and Mr. Whittaker gathering the views of the university community, sealing it in a vault and burying it in the cornerstone of the student union, whenever that is built.

The problem is two-fold and cut and dried. It involves tradition and money. The tradition is Methodist and the money is too. You make the equation.

"We are always willing to listen to the conclusions of the Joint Student Legislature committee investigating drinking policy but there will be no change if one is recommended," said Chancellor Tolley.

Maybe he'll join the senators at that cornerstone laying.

Letters to Editor

We have been receiving many good, but long, letters recently and so we have seen fit to issue our policy on letters in this column for emphasis.

We repeat, letters must be typed, double-spaced and not to exceed two pages. Some of these letters are great and we have made rare exceptions in printing them. But no longer.

Why, under our policy, Lincoln's Gettysburg Address would have been rejected unless typed.

Acacia

To the Editor:

The front page article February 26 on the possible demolition of the Acacia House requires clarification.

First, as a matter of policy, Syracuse University has never insisted that any group sell its property to the University. In this instance, with fine cooperation of Acacia alumni and undergraduates in planning the new Fraternity-Sorority Housing Complex and with their expressed intent of participation in it, the University proceeded with reasonable assurance to plan a dormitory in that block. The Acacia land was counted in the site for the dormitory for the projected Federal loan, There is no question of good faith on both sides.

Second, the Acacia House, even if acquired by the University, as it hopes, would not have to be demolished for about two years.

Third, we expect Acacia to be among the first to move into the new Fraternity-Sorority Housing Complex.

Fourth, if the planning and construction timetable is too tight, Acacia will have available to it alternative facilities equal to or better than those presently occupied.

The cooperation of Acacia has been splendid as all of us seek a finer campus with every group's interests enhanced.

Sincerely yours,
John F. Olson
Executive Assistant to the Chancellor

'Brothers'

To the Editor:

As one who went through the same initiation as Mr. Skillen some years ago, I read with interest his rather pretentious exposition of the Christian foundations of Lambda Chi Alpha.

To begin, let me concede Skillen and his brothers their constitutional right to live and study in a religious vacuum—the "right" they recently invoked to prevent formal association with the embarrassing Sy Oskeroff. Now let us examine their policies and actions in the light of the high Christian principles they pretend to profess.

Lambda Chi Alpha is a very large national fraternity with chapters in many universities both in the United States and Canada. In the course of my college and military experience, I have had occasion to visit many chapters and talk with many members of this fine old institution in various sections of the country and I would like to relate some of my experiences and impressions.

First of all, the "progressive" activities during a convention and the "Gentleman's Agreement" argument I mentioned in Friday's article refers to Mr. Skillen's own Lambda Chi Alpha. If Skillen and his brothers doubt that such an attitude still exists they might find it enlightening to visit the Lambda Chi chapters of the South and hear their brothers staunchly maintain that a "nigger" (the term negro is virtually unknown among the southern brothers) will never enter their chapter, clause or no clause. In the west one sometimes hears similar declarations about "chinks" and "gooks". (Orientals to our more civilized readers.)

Is it not strange that this fine Christian institution cannot see its way clear to share its stagnant atmosphere with Negro, Oriental, or full blooded Indian Christians? To use Mr. Skillen's eloquent phrase, can't they say "Welcome. Share this island with us," to these colored Christians? (and an island it is, a cultural, intellectual desert island.) The Christianity of Jesus would not make such a distinction, but there are many different kinds of Christianity—the Christianity of the Puritan who would force everyone into blue nosed closet, the infamous Christianity of the Inquisition, and the Christianity of the South that claims God as the original segregationist.

If you cannot or will not face the hypocrisy of your fraternity's brand of Christianity, Mr. Skillen, at least ponder the significance of the motto at the base of the coat of arms you so proudly display on your blue blazer—"Vir Quisque Vir," every man a man.

The representative from Lambda Chi has declared his desire and willingness to work shoulder to shoulder with Jewish houses" and cited an example of such an activity. Of course you are willing to cooperate with Jewish fraternities. In the end you both stand for the same principles—cultural exclusion ,racial and religious bigotry, and social snobbism. On the higher issues of humanity, it really matters little whether you hide behind the Cross or the Star of David. We are all happy to hear that you collected all that blood, but don't try to palm it off as a magnificent example of tolerance and integration.

But in my long overdue criticism of the Greek system, I do not wish to be limited to criticism of Lambda Chi Alpha. The discussion of my experiences and the case of Sy Oskeroff is not meant as an indictment of only one fraternity. And what about the even more discriminatory sororities? (beauties only unless we need plain Janes to defray expenses) Perhaps some sorority member will tell us why they attempt to make selections sight unseen from the very handy Orange Aid. Or perhaps you will answer the question Ron Corwin raised and Tom Rigoli chose to ignore. What do you mean when you say a girl has nothing?

In all fairness, however, it must be pointed out that there are Greek organizations who do not have a long history of racial and religious discrimination, such as Tau Delta Phi. They and others like them deserve credit for their enlightened attitude. But unfortunately they comprise only a minute percentage of the whole and the charges stand as yet unanswered and perhaps unanswerable.

Gordon Beadle

PS. In Friday's reference to the "goons" and the "goon room" I erred in terminology. The correct name for these second class members is "ding" and the room in which they and the unacceptable "ding" rushees are hidden is referred to as the "ding wing." My apologies.

Debate

To the Editor:

In spite of our long established confidence in your excellent reporting of facts we are forced to admit that your coverage of Tuesday night ISO debate contained importan misrepresentation:

1. The purpose of debate is to present both sides of an issue in the strongest possible terms. The arguments of the debaters do not necessarily represent their personal convictions. As in all debates, the moderator asked any reporters present not to quote the debaters directly. In violation of this, your reporter did so extensively. For example, the article quotes Mr. Ly and Mr. Mwangi directly and out of context and suggests that they have personal feelings against democracy. This is not the case.

2. The suggestion that the debate was "won" by an idea is misleading. Though the audience felt the argument of the negative team was a bit tighter, a full statistical sampling of the audience's opinion after the debate revealed that the majority were personally convinced of the legitimacy of the resolution.

The idea that supposedly mature students—both debaters and audience—could hold such simple and dogmatic convictions on such complex social problems is misleading and absurd.

The Fire in Bonnie's Eyes

By JOHN E. GREENWALD
Entertainment Editor

There's a fire behind Bonnie Cousins' eyes.

It's a fire that forces this demure, petit, 21-year old drama major to run the gamut of emotions, changing from an innocent Juliet to a mature woman in two hours.

Miss Cousins is playing Shakespeare's most famous heroine in the Boar's Head production of "Romeo and Juliet," which opens this Saturday in the drama building.

This same fire has built a passion in this slightly built, strong featured, wisp of a girl to become an actress, and nothing less.

"Hell," she exclaimed, "I love it!"

Playing Juliet "is like plunging into a human being," Miss Cousins explains. "Juliet is innocent, passionate, practical, witty, and sensual."

Miss Cousins doesn't quite remember when she first read "Romeo and Juliet," but she has wanted to play the role ever since.

BONNIE COUSINS

In high school, in Westport, Conn., she would memorize lines from the play, finding solace when depressed.

Two summers ago members of the New York Shakespeare Festival would listen to an encourage apprentice Cousins as she read scenes from "Romeo and Juliet."

For a long time Miss Cousins wasn't sure she "had it" and could be an actress. After playing the mother in George Kaufman and Moss Hart's "You Can't Take It With You," an unusual role for an engenue, she was sure.

"It was the reactions of the audience that did it. I had poise on stage. I could make them laugh."

"Romeo and Juliet" will run at the Boar's Head theater March 9, 11-16, and 20-22.

Show Set for Lowe Art

The School of Art will present a month long exhibition of work by 15 American illustrators beginning Wednesday March 6 in the galleries of the Lowe Art Center.

Professor John Vargo selected and assembled the exhibit which includes samples of magazine, advertising and book illustrations.

Artists include Norman Rockwell, Tom Allen, Joe Bowler, Austin Briggs, Steven Dohanos, Robert Fawcett, Dean Ellis, Bernard Fuchs, Tom Lovell, Ray Prohaska, Robert Weaver, Coby Whitmore and Anthony Saris.

THE CUTTING ROOM

Fade In... The Mount

by John E. Greenwald

The following column is a two-pronged piece. It makes a "literary" point about the Mount at curfew time. The same point could be made by T. Lee Hughes or Ron Corwin using the essay technique. We have told our story, though, as a description of a hypothetical movie, using the cinema's techniques of editing, panning, selection of shots, etc. In this way we hope to illustrate how the motion picture can be used to dramatize an issue, and visually reach a "literary" conclusion.

* * *

Fade in. Night. Very long shot looking down onto steps of Mount. Couples are walking up path to steps. They cast long, long shadows. Camera slowly moves up to entrance of steps, then turns and begins to track up side of Mount following happy couples as they climb.

Some couples aren't so happy. Some are bored, tired, confused. Some walk hand in hand, arm in arm. A few hold each other tightly. A few walk on opposite sides of steps. There is talking, laughing, seriousness, silence. It's Saturday night.

At top of steps camera pulls way back then pans for long shot of couples entering Flint.

Cut to Flint interior, gay, light. Happy sounds. We follow one couple as they enter and turn into lounge area. They walk to back of lounge. As couple walks we see eight or nine couples sitting, talking. One or two couples are necking.

Cut to medium shot of couple just sitting down in back of lounge. Behind them we see most of lounge. It's filling up, more and more people are entering. Most are talking. A few, when seated begin to neck. Couple in foreground begin talking. Dialogue merges indistinguishable from other noise. Kostlanetz on p.a. system.

Girl talks with animation, obviously about herself. Guy looks a bit bored. Girl reaches in her bag for cigarettes and begins to light one. Cut to close-up of dark, full lips as she takes first puffs, then long, sensuous drag. Her lips begin to flap as she talks again.

She takes another sensuous drag, and talks some more. Cut to close-up of hand as it is lowered to ash tray. Long fingers flick ashes into ash tray. Cut to close-up of girl's lips as she takes another drag and continues talking. Cut—close-up — of mouth: she's talking a mile a minute.

Cut to close-up of her feet as she eases a foot out of a high heeled shoe. Cut—close-up—of sneakers. Girl wearing sneakers is sitting with feet under her on couch. Camera pans up bobby socks, then up bare legs to bare knees. Camera pans back over skirt till it reaches her waist. It slowly pans up her body till we see girl's face.

As camera moves up we notice girl is slowly but purposefully leaning forward. Just as we reach her face she enters into a hard, cold kiss. Camera doesn't move; the couple doesn't move. You can almost hear a clock ticking away: one . . . two . . . three . . . four . . . five . . . They begin to break. . . .

Cut—close-up — to another couple kissing: they move a lot. Cut—close-up—to third couple, then cut to fourth couple, fifth couple, sixth couple, all kissing.

Cut — close-up — as girl moves back and boy pulls her toward him. Cut—close-up—as boy moves back and girl pulls him toward her. Cut to medium shot of lounge. Camera tracks down side of lounge. Different groups, most necking, come into view. Camera turns and we see long shot crowd by control room.

Cut to series of close-ups of couples kissing and saying goodby by control room. Camera tries to move but its jostled and shaken by crowd. Suddenly light flicker on and off.

Cut to close-up of girl's head turning quickly and looking up Cut—close-up—to clock on wall. It reads 1:30. Cut—close-up—to speaker in ceiling We hear scratchy version of "Good Night Sweetheart" above noise of crowd.

Cut to medium shot of lounge as couples get up and walk to crowd. Cut to crowd. Camera tries to move toward door. People cross in front of lens, shake camera, but it moves on. Finally it reaches door.

Cut to close-up of girl's face, facing camera. Her eyes are closed and her lips are puckered, ready for a good night kiss. Camera moves forward and her eager face gets out of focus as we dissolve to . . .

Night. Exterior long shot of stairs leading down Mount. Camera stays still for a while as we see boys slowly descend steps. Fade out . . .

. . . Fade in to close-up of ash tray, brimming full with cigarettes, ashes, crushed cigarette packs, matchbooks, pieces of Kleenex, etc.

Fade out.

HAIL TO THE DEAN!

Today let us examine that much maligned, widely misunderstood, grossly overworked, wholly dedicated campus figure—the dean.

The dean (from the Latin Deanere—to expel) is not, as many think, primarily a disciplinary officer. He is a counselor and guide, a haven and refuge for the troubled student. The dean (from the Greek Deanos—to skewer) is characterized chiefly by sympathy, wisdom, patience, forbearance, and a fondness for homely pleasures like community singing, farina, spelldowns, and Marlboro Cigarettes. The dean (from the German Deangemacht—to poop a party) is fond of Marlboros for the same reason that all men of good will are fond of Marlboros—because Marlboro is an honest cigarette. Those good Marlboro tobaccos are honestly good, honestly aged to the peak of perfection, honestly blended for the best of all possible flavors. Marlboro honestly comes in two different containers—a soft pack which is honestly soft and a Flip-Top box which honestly flips. You too will flip when next you try an honest Marlboro, which, one honestly hopes, will be soon.

Here is not a dry eye in Yutah

But I digress. We were learning how a dean helps poor, troubled undergraduates. To illustrate, let us take a typical case from the files of Dean S..... of the University of Y..... (Oh, why be so mysterious? The dean's name is Sigafoos and the University is Yutah.)

Wise, kindly Dean Sigafoos was visited one day by a freshman named Walter Aguincourt who came to ask permission to marry one Emma Blenheim, his dormitory laundress. To the dean the marriage seemed ill-advised, for Walter was only 18 years old and Emma was 91. Walter agreed with the dean, but said he felt obligated to go through with it because Emma had invested her life savings in a transparent rainhood to protect her from the mist at Niagara Falls, where they planned to spend their honeymoon. If Walter called off the wedding, what use would the poor woman possibly have for a rainhood in Yutah? The wise, kindly dean pondered briefly and came up with a brilliant answer: let Walter punch holes in the back of Emma's steam iron. With steam billowing back at the old lady, she would find a rainhood very useful—possibly even essential.

Whimpering with gratitude, Walter kissed the dean's Phi Beta Kappa key and hastened away to follow his advice—and the results, I am pleased to report, were madly successful!

Today Emma is a happy woman—singing lustily, wearing her rainhood, eating soft-center chocolates, and ironing clothes—twice as happy, to be candid, than if she had married Walter . . . And what of Walter? He is happy too. Freed from his unwanted liaison with Emma, he married a girl much nearer his own age—Agnes Yucca, 72. Walter is now the proud father—*step*father, to be perfectly accurate—of three fine, healthy boys from Agnes's first marriage—Everett, 38; Wilhelm, 43; and Irving, 55—and when Walter puts the boys on a lead and takes them for a stroll in the park on Sunday afternoon, you may be sure there is not a dry eye in Yutah.

And Dean Sigafoos? He too is happy—happy to spend long, tiring hours in his little office, giving counsel without stint and without complaint, doing his bit to set the young, uncertain feet of his charges on the path to a brighter tomorrow.

Skin Bracer's rugged, long-lasting aroma is an obvious attribute. But is it everything?

After all, Menthol-Iced Skin Bracer is the after-shave lotion that cools rather than burns. It helps heal shaving nicks and scrapes. Helps prevent blemishes. Conditions your skin.

Aren't these sound, scientific virtues more important than the purely emotional effect Skin Bracer has on women? In that case, buy a bottle. And—have fun.

Nature of Conflict Outlined

By DANIEL RITEY
Junior Editor

Conflict is normal in international relationships and must be accepted as such, Prof. Warren B. Walsh told the freshman citizenship sections Monday afternoon at Marshall auditorium.

"The ideas that international conflict is equated with international war is somewhat confusing," the chairman of the SU history department said; "but history shows that international conflict is not necessarily war."

Walsh cited examples from U.S. history showing her to be involved in major diplomatic conflicts with other nations, but not involved in open warfare with them.

Cooperation

"Cooperation is as much a part of international relations as is conflict," Walsh stated. He used the current international postage setup as an example of "coinciding national interests."

"National interests are those considerations whose promotions advance national objectives," said Walsh. The Maxwell professor further defined national objectives as "goals which the nation and government devote their resources and efforts."

Walsh cited some of our national objectives as the premises found in the preamble to the Constitution. "It is our national interest to prevent a strong hostile power in Cuba because of our national objective to provide for the common defense,' he added.

Rational?

"Some national objectives cannot always be rationally defended, such as the German contention that she had to eliminate all the 'hostile countries' which threatened her existance," Walsh explained.

Historical developments were used by Walsh to trace the trends of conflict in man. "It is believed that conflict is inherent in man, but it should be noted too that all conflicts do not result in warfare—that peaceful settlements have been arranged."

Walsh said history "supports the observation that the range and variety of human interest expands as human mobility and communication increases." This expansion may take the form of territory or frontiers of knowledge.

Secondly, he noted, history supports the ideas that "areas of peace have increased over the ages. Man forms large groups and introduces peace into those areas — an example being Pax Romana," he concluded.

Cheng Gets $89,920Grant

One of the largest individual research grants received by a Syracuse University professor has been awarded to Dr. David K. Cheng of the electrical engineering faculty.

Dr. Cheng, awarded $89,920, has been conducting antenna research for the Air Force since 1959. Working with him is a research group which consists of two assistant professors, one instructor, three research associates and two research assistants.

The grant was awarded by the Rome Air Development Center for the continuation of Cheng's work in the field of microwave antennas.

"American Women: The Changing Image" will be the topic for discussion of Dr. Ethel J. Alpenfels at the Syracuse University College of Home Economics annual Orchid Dinner.

The banquet, sponsored by the Home Economics faculty, is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. Thursday at Sadler Hall. The home economics senior with the highest academic average will be honored at the dinner with an orchid.

Dean Barbara P. Griggs will introduce Dr. Alpenfels. Dr. Elizabeth Manwell will serve as dinner toastmistress.

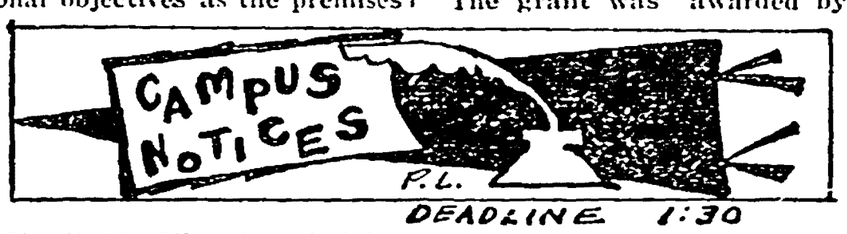
A distinguished anthropologist and sociologist, Dr. Alpenfels is author of two books and numerous monographs. She has served as an editor for the Encyclopedia Britannica.

Prof. Alpenfels is a member of several professional organizations and has been honored by the American Women's Association, National Association of Negro Women, Federation of Jewish Women's Organizations and Pan-Hellenic Society of the United States.

Premed Honorary Opens

Requirements for membership in Alpha Epsilon Delta, national premedical honorary, have been lowered, Paul DeMare, president of the New York Beta Chapter, has announced.

Standards have been lowered from a 2.0 accumulative average to a 1.75 with a 2.0 average in all science courses. The change has been made so that more students may benefit from membership in the honorary.



Membership is open to all sophomores, juniors and seniors who are premedical, predental, or nursing students. All those students eligible for membership should sign up in Dr. Clinton Root's office, 107 Lyman Hall, by Friday.

JSG, Theta Chi, 3 Frosh Plan 50-Mile Hikes

Theta Chi

To "uphold the reputation of the university" Theta Chi fraternity has responded to Utica College's challenge to walk 50 miles.

This challenge is being answered with another one: a challenge to walk 100 miles to Utica and back this weekend, James Gray, leader of the hike, announced.

Thus far, two other members of Theta Chi have decided to take the two and one-half day walk. A third is undecided and is waiting to see what the weather conditions will be.

The two Theta Chi's planning to take the weekend jaunt are Robert Strasser and Keith Appel.

Gray, confident of success, explained how such a hike will be made.

"Leaving Syracuse between 6 and 7 p.m. Friday, we plan to walk for four hours and then take a half an hour break," he said. "Thereafter, we will take half-hour breaks every four hours and a ten minute break every hour."

As in running a mile, pacing is important, Gray noted. The group plans to walk about three miles an hour. At this rate a round trip should take them two and one half days.

In such an undertaking, distance not time, is of prime consideration, he stressed. "The only time condition is an 11 a.m. class Monday."

To improve the reputation of Greek physical fitness, Theta Chi extends this challenge to each fraternity on campus.

"Besides improving the Greek reputation, the more people participating, the greater chance there is for success," Gray said.

Gray, president of Greek Independent Alliance party, issued a personal challenge to Robert Taylor, United Students Party president, and Ronald Brzezinski, Campus Alliance party, to join him.

He also challenged Joint Student Government President Theodore Bayer and his cabinet.

A track runner for two years, Gray feel that with a good easy stride, he should have no trouble completing the trip.

"I know I can walk 100 miles," he said. "I'm not sure the others can make 100 miles, but they all should be able to make 50 miles."

Gray estimated that he himself could complete the trip in one day and one-half. He said he would probably go slower if the other members of the group cannot keep up the pace.

The group will not take time to sleep during the trip, Gray added. A car with change of socks and food for the marchers will follow along.

Gray also contemplated walking 250 miles to New York City, but decided to save this hike for spring vacation.

Anyone interested in accompanying Gray and his marchers can contact Gray at Theta Chi, ext. 2660.

Frosh

Three freshmen who have accepted the challenge to hike 50 miles to Utica will swear off alcohol, but not cigarettes to prepare for the march.

David Bronner, Raymond Pennell and Kerry Quinn, all from Watson West 2, will march Saturday "regardless of the weather."

Their goal is to beat the 15-hour, 45-minute trip of Utica College's Steve Seidel, who walked to the Hill last Saturday.

They hope to recruit other students to march with them, but said they will do it alone if necessary.

Interested hikers should call any of the marchers at ext. 2878.

JSG

Joint Student Government will sponsor a "Crusade to Utica" in response to Utica College's 50-mile hike last weekend.

JSG special services director Douglas Long said the hike will probably take place Saturday. He asked for volunteers for the hike to sign up today and Wednesday afternoons in the student government office, 907 University Ave. He said that JSG must know by 5 p.m. Wednesday how many will be hiking, so provisions can be made.

Long said that the march will take place because of a flood of phone calls to the JSG office by persons willing to make the trip.

Long also asked for volunteers with cars who would accompany the hikers. He added that JSG will provide necessary food and medical supplies.

All students wishing to go on the hike must sign up before 5 p.m. Wednesday in the student government office, 906 University Ave.

Piano Reducing -- New College Fad

By CISSY POSSELT

"Piano reducing" has officially joined the list of college fads, which includes bed - pushing, telephone booth stuffing and Volkswagen stuffing.

In fear that novices and publicity seekers might pursue the newest of college sports without reverence, a group of California Institute of Technology students have formed a "Reduction Study Group."

Instituted to insure that official rules can be followed in future events, the group has sent the Daily Orange a complete list of rules and a sample registration blank.

Foster Investigation

As stated by the Upright Piano Reduction Procedures, "The art of piano reduction, in its modern form, is intended to foster fundamental undergraduate investigation of the detailed basic structure of the upright piano, and its relation to other similar devices of modern technology which may be subject to reduction in the future."

"The technical term 'reduce,' as adopted by the group, is synonymous with dismantle, demolish or rend. The object of piano reduction is to reduce the piano, in the shortest possible time to such a state that it may be passed through an aperture of 20 cm. diameter."

"In addition to scientific, educational, and cultural value, this activity possesses usefulness in that 'it promotes psychological catharsis.'

Judge, Observer

The contests are to be mediated by one judge to supervise the reduction operation and at least three observers, who will keep time.

The piano to be reduced must be a full-sized upright, with 88 keys, of which 66 must produce approximately the standard notes. It is not necessary that the piano be finely tuned.

Exterior panelling of the piano chosen must be in place, although repairs with substandard materials may be made, within reasonable limits.

Six on Team

Teams are to consist of six or fewer undergraduate members. Officially recognized teams consist of a captain, an action man, a pin man, an axe man, a mauler and an orifice officer.

Only hand tools can be used in the reduction. Each tool must weigh not more than 15.4 pounds in its assembled form. The number of tools is not limited.

No hand tool may utilize either electrical power or any chemical explosive, nor may chemical devices such as solution of the piano in liquid be used. The piano may not be burned up.

The piano reduction record is presently held by a Caltech team. Time of the winning team was 10:44.4 for complete demolition of the piano and was recorded at a contest held Feb. 14, 1963.

For further information on these contest contact the Daily Orange, prefab 7, where an official entry blank is on file.

Singer Advises

the ultimate destiny of man.

Such a person feels that people are more than just atoms put together without purpose, said Singer.

Speaking of pitfalls awaiting modern writers, Singer said psychology is a frequent snare since authors may feel a need to explain the characters' motives rather than letting their actions and literary existance reveal this.

He also criticized symbolism, used today "en masse" as "the second great error" of our age. All art is symbolic, he emphasized. Most literature contains several levels of meaning but symbolism today is often supercilious.

Sick Chicks

conditions more coeds than men are in the infirmary, "but infrequently this high a ratio."

Dr. Marty could give no specific reasons for the larger number of sick coeds.

Although most of the students in the infirmary, are under treatment for viral respiratory infections, Dr. Marty does not believe it likley they have Asian flu.

"There's a possibiilty that some of them (the infections) are a subgroup of Asian flu. But the test is very complicated and takes two or three weeks for positive identification, while the illness lasts for only three or four days," he noted.

He said that it is usually not practical to take tests because students don't come to the infirmary until they have been ill for several days.

Six cases of Asian flu have been postivitely identified in city hospitals, but none on campus.

If there was an Asian flu epidemic, it probably reached its peak in this area about 10 days ago and is now on the decline, Dr. Marty said.

At present there are one diagnosed and one possible case of mononucleosis, also a respiratory infection, in the infirmary.

Dr. Marty said that there have been a "significant number" of mono cases on campus in the last three months.

However, he noted, this number is not of epidemic proportions and is only slightly above average.

Jewish Scholar

Hill religion classes, meet Thursday afternoon with students and conduct a faculty seminar Thursday evening.

He appeared Monday before 150 area Christian and Jewish clergymen at an interfaith institute sponsored by Temple Society of Concord.

Bernard G. Rudolph, retired local businessman, recently established the lectureship in the Hill religion department to bring outstanding Jewish scholars to the university. Dr. Davis is the first.

Guest lecturers are selected by a local committee with assistance of Dr. Judah J. Shapiro of the National Foundation for Jewish Culture.

Dr. Davis is on leave this academic year from the seminary and is a visiting professor at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem. He was the first American to receive a Ph.D. at the latter institution.

The visiting lecturer is head of the Institute of Contemperary Jewry and is co-director of the American Jewish History Center.

A leader in the cultural and educational activities of the American Jewish community, Dr. Davis served from 1945 to 1950 as dean of the seminary's Teachers Institute and College of Jewish Studies. He was a founder of this country's first Hebrew-speaking summer camp.

Dr. Davis, an ordained rabbi, lectured on several occasions at the Hebrew University prior to his present guest professorship there. His editing and scholarly writing have been in both Hebrew and English.

TEP Elects

Steven Selig, a junior from Laconia, N. H., heads the list of officers elected by Tau Epsilon Phi fraternity for the 1963 calendar year. Selig succeeds Robert Kaye as the chapter's chancellor.

Other new officers include: Edward Lebar, vice chancellor; Ronald Rudolph, scribe; and Alan Heifetz, bursar.

Syracuse Sextet Outskates Ithaca In 8-2 Ice Win

By ART ROSSKY

The Syracuse Hockey Club invaded Ithaca College's Lyman Rink Saturday determined to avenge an earlier setback.

When the game was over Syracuse had unleashed its fury by an 8-2 count and had run its winning streak to three games.

The Hill skaters have not tasted defeat since dropping an overtime verdict to Ithaca on Feb. 18 at the State Fair Grounds Coliseum.

Victory did not come as easy as the score would indicate, for the two clubs were locked in a 2-2 tie after two periods.

Featuring a third period six-goal outburst were two-goal specs by John Cordner and Jim Hamel.

Other scorers in the big third session were Tom Borg and Fred Robinson.

Syracuse opened the game by grabbing a 2-1 lead at the end of the first period. John Shilling and Tom Borg, another two-goal man, found the net for the Hill team in the opening canto.

Ithaca goalie Steve Gilbert was forced to make 15 saves in the initial session while Piety goalie Dick Van Winkle was only credited with eight retrieves.

Though peppering Gilbert with eight shots in the middle period, Syracuse was unable to score, but Ithaca added a goal to move into a 2-2 deadlock.

In the third period Cordner beat Gilbert to break the deadlock and ignite the Hill six goal rally.

The hard-working Gilbert was peppered by 35 shots while Van Winkle, receiving a lot of help from the Syracuse defense, only made 17 retrieves.

Syracuse raised its record to 6-3 and moved into second place in the six-team Finger Lakes Collegiate Hockey League.

Ithaca's season log dipped to 1-6.

The Hill team concludes its season with a home game against Rochester on an undecided date.

Four goals were scored by Syracuse's third line of Hamel, Borg, and Thistle. Thistle was credited with three assists.

The league hopes to play an all-star game with either Cornell or Colgate at the close of the campaign.

Varsity, Frosh Cagers Invade Colgate Court

Fred Lewis' cagers cart a 7-11 record to Hamilton tomorrow to do battle with the Red Raiders of Colgate. Coach Bob Dewey's crew will be out to retaliate from its 65-57 loss to the Piety here in mid-January.

To do this, Colgate will array against the Orangemen a team of fair but superior height. Tom Cruthers tops the squad at 6-6; Druckenmiller, Corbett and Munther stand at 6-4, and Tercarr rounds off the starting five at 6-5 .

The latter, a guard, leads the Red Raiders with a 14-5 average.

In its last outing Colgate was whipped by Bucknell, and hasn't played since Saturday.

Lewis will present the opposition with Manny Klutchkowski, Herb Foster, Carl Vernick, Jim Seaman and Dick Finley. Vernick leads the quintet with 10.7 and scored 20 in the previous Colgate contest.

Phil Schoff, Bob Murray and Richard Duffy should also see plenty of action, according to their coach. The strategy against Colgate will be agressiveness, which has been responsible for several Orange victories this season.

The SU frosh will make the same trip, taking on the young Red Raiders at 6:15 while the varsity contest will come off at 8. The freshmen are looking for their second victory over Colgate.

Thursday night the varsity will return to Manley Fieldhouse to tap off against the University of Connecticut.

UConn will throw quite a bit of height against the Orangemen. Heading the list is Ed Slomcenski at 6-10 and 240 pounds. Gerry Manning scrapes the top at 6-6 and is backed up by back court man Dale Comey.

DO MEETS WAER

March 13, 1963 — a date that will go down in the history of Syracuse University.

For at 7:30 that night, the basketball powers of the communications world — the Daily Orange and radio station WAER — will do battle for the coveted Church Key Trophy.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association has apponted Sir Val Pinchbeck, Jr., SU Athletic Publicity Director, to officiate the game.

Controversy surrounds the choice of the second referee: The DO favors NBA official Sid Borgia, but WAER insists upon popular Dolly King. Compromise candidate Fred Lewis appears to have the inside position.

Daily Orange head coach Dave Dean reports that his squad is in peak physical condition for the upcoming encounter.

Each DO player has been given a thorough physical examination by SU trainer Neil Pratt to prevent a reoccurence of last year's charley horse epidemic.

After a vigorous scrimmage last night, Dean released his starting lineup. The DO opening five features four left-handed shooters, a situation that could give the radiomen fits.

Southpaws Ed Silverstone (6-1), Milt Joffe (6-0), Marv Lender (6-0) and Bob Brier (5-11) will combine with right-handed pivot Bill Cronauer (6-4).

WAER mentor Barry Lewis has been operating in a cloak of secrecy and has refused to release his Big 5. However, informers loyal to the DO have secretly scouted WAER and come up with the possible lineup of Al Davis, Bill Ledger, Dick Stokvis, Mark Diamond and sleeper Jon Galinsky, a cage transfer from Rutgers.

Syracuse Wrestlers on All-American Squad

JIM NANCE

A couple of footballers who have continued to throw their weight around this winter have been named second team All-America's.

Sophomore's Gerry Everling and Jim "Bo" Nance who handle the two heaviest weight classes for the Orangemen were chosen in a poll of NCAA coaches and officials announced in the Amateur Wrestling News. The official selections will be determined by the winners of the NCAA tourney at Kent State.

Everling and Nance were listed behind representatives from two mid-west powerhouses: Wayne Baughman of Oklahoma and Joe James of Oklahoma State.

Four other Orange matmen received honorable mention nods—Sonny Greenhaulgh, Jim Murrin, Dick Slutzsky and Gary Sirota.

Both Everling and Nance have been undefeated on the mats since their junior years in high school with Bo starting his string at Indiana, Pa. and Gerry his in Chenango Forks, N. Y.

Everling began as an unimpressive 120 lb. frosh in high school, but since his one loss as a 138 lb. soph—an overtime sectional defeat—his record has been perfect.

The two gridders were still playing football a week after the season's non-league opener. But they made up for lost time by defeating the dozen and a half opponents they've faced, five by pins.

Irwin to Read Modern Poets Thursday

Eliot, MacLeish, Dylan Thomas Featured

Poetry by T. S. Eliot, Dylan Thomas, Archibald MacLeish and other modern poets will be read by Dr. Ray Irwin, chairman of the SU department if interpretation, at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the city students lounge, Women's Building.

The reading is part of the senior class "Getting to Know Your Professors" series.

Dr. Irwin has taught at Syracuse for 17 years. In 1947, at the suggestion of the late Dr. Sawyer Falk, then chairman of the drama department, he organized the Readers Theater, which has since presented 40 productions.

He recently recorded works by Dylan Thomas, Shakespeare and Alexander Pope for L. W. Springer Co. in New York. The Applications must be written and submitted at the meeting, Rigoli said.

Also on tonight's agenda is a complete revision of the rushing rules, and legislation for freshman who did not fulfill academic requirements for pledging.

AWS Elects March 19

Hill juniors Sandra Thibault and Sharon Katz will vie in the March 19 election for president of the Association of Women Students.

Eighteen students will run in the elections, which will determine AWS officers for 1963-64. Posts to be decided are president, speaker pro tempore, and six junior officers. The loser of the presidential election will become vice president, and the loser of the speaker contest becomes senior guide.

Voting will be in university dining halls, H.B. Crouse, Slocum and Maxwell Halls. The candidates will visit Flint and Day Halls and Shaw Dormitory on Sunday, March 17.

Running for speaker pro tempore are Jill Moss and Elaine Weiss. Candidates for overall guide chairman are Lorraine Frosini and Janet Zimmerman.

Competing for the six junior guide posts are Thea Benzelewski, Linda Galloway, Helen Goff, Diane Kessler, Bette Leitman, Anne McCormick, Joan Moore, Dorothy Penrod, Elaine Pinsky, Mary Jane Rinzler, Margaret Semel and Kathleen Taylor.

AWS Council

Miss Thibault, a junior majoring in elementary education, is a member of the AWS executive council and judicial review board, and is also coordinator of AWS Day Hall guides. A resident of Alexandria Bay, she has a 2.0 cumulative average.

Miss Katz, a resident of Binghamton, is also a junior in elementary education. An AWS junior guide, she is also Day Hall coordinator. She has a 1.6 average.

Miss Moss, a resident of Great Neck, has a 2.4 average. She is a sophomore in special education, and president of Ambassador Apartments.

Flint Board

A special education major, Elaine Weiss was also chairman of the Stockingfoot dance. A member of the Flint Hall standards board, she hails from Erie, Pa. She has a 1.56 average.

Miss Frosini, a junior majoring in chemistry, is an AWS guide. She is a resident of Brooklyn, and was co-chairman of the Winter Weekend ice pageant. She has a 1.92 average.

Miss Zimmerman is a resident of Livingston, N.J. She holds a

Since '52: Twelve Houses Drop Discrimination Clauses

By CLAY RICHARDS
Junior Editor

Twelve Hill fraternities have removed national written discrimination clauses since the first annual report of the Syracuse University Anti-Discriminatory Clause Board in 1952, Board chairman Dean of Men Earle W. Clifford has stated.

The report, given at the Board's meeting last week, followed a survey by present InterFraternity Council President Thomas Rigoli, showing that four Hill fraternities presently have written discrimination clauses.

The Board then requested that each of these four houses submit statements detailing their existing clause, and their "case for compliance" with the act the board administers.

The statement must include efforts the local chapter has made since its last national convention to secure removal of the clauses. They must also detail immediate and long range plans

Doubleheader Tix Sale Set

Tickets and buttons for the basketball doubleheader between the administration and student leaders and the freshmen and varsity will go on sale Thursday night.

Tickets will be sold Wednesday evening in dining halls and from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. beginning Thursday in H.B. Crouse lobby. Prices are 50 cents to students and personnel and $1 for all others. Buttons are 25 cents each. ID cards must be presented.

Sorority and fraternity sales will be handled by Geraldine LaDue and Gene Bonstein, Panhellenic and InterFraternity Council treasurers.

Students are reminded that there will be a limited number of seats available because the bleachers are being dismantled to make room for spring sports.

Changing Jew Speech Topic Of Dr. Davis

Hendricks Scene Of 1st in Rudolph Lecture Series

Dr. Moshe Davis, of Jewish Theological Seminary, will discuss "The Jewish People in Metamorphosis" at 8 p.m. today in Hendricks Chapel.

On leave this academic year from the seminary, Dr. Davis is a visiting professor at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem. He was the first American to receive a doctorate at the Hebrew University.

Dr. Davis is head of the Institute of Contemporary Jewry and is co-ordinator of the American Jewish History Center.

Dr. Davis appears as the first in the B. G. Rudolph Lectureship in Judaic Studies series, a newly-founded $50,000 gift to SU.

Dr. Davis spoke to a religion 1b class Tuesday, and will participate in a coffee hour with students and a faculty seminar Thursday.

JSG Election Deadline Set

Students considering running for either president or vice president of Joint Student Government in the spring elections have been urged to check their eligibility with their respective deans' offices.

JSG President Theodore Bayer said that male candidates should contact James McMurray in the dean of men's office; women should contact Mrs. Margaret Stafford in the dean of women's office.

Bayer said that the university Personnel Committee will meet Thursday, March 14 to consider all cases of students not meeting all the requirements for office.

The qualifications for president and vice president, according to the JSG constitution are: a 1.5 cumulative average, completion of the student government training program, two terms of an elected or appointed office in JSG, a second semester junior at the time of election, and must be on no individual probation of any kind, at the time of election.

Bayer said that students lacking one or more of these requirements must submit a petition stating the reasons they feel they should be able to run to Earle W. Clifford, dean of men, by 5 p.m. Wed., Mar. 13 in order that Personnel Com-

TEAMING UP—DR. PAULINE M. and DR. JOHN H. MILLER view new equipment in their laboratory in the new Biological Research building on College place.

By CISSY POSSELT

A busy husband and wife team are among 50 researchers now using the new biological research laboratories on College Place. They are Dr. John H. and Dr. Pauline M. Miller, both doctors in plant physiology, and both new members of the university staff in the department of bacteriology and botany.

The Millers are at SU on a $37,200 National Science Foundation grant for joint research in plant behavior.

He is a "Sunday-afternoon painter" who employes a "Van Gogh style." His "artistic tastes stopped with impressionism," he says. She enjoys cooking and sews her own clothes.

Together, the Millers collect and refinish antiques and listen to a new hi-fi set. They have repaired and repainted their new home on Maryland avenue, their first after a series of apartments.

Rude Reception For Hill Guest

Said the young coed at the conclusion of what we, in our inferior capacities of critic, had found an enjoyable and informative lecture: "Did he say anything at the end when I was sleeping?"

This shook us up quite a bit since indeed he had said quite a few things at the end of his lecture as well as at most other junctures.

But then came the clincher from the friend, who had apparently fallen into the bad habit of sleeping at night. "No," she said, "he didn't say anything."

This we will admit is an extremely isolated instance yet it is so typical of the intellectual attitude here that we just couldn't keep it to ourselves.

And we have more to say on that subject. For at

We cannot help thinking this distinguished guest this week, a number of students saw fit to notify him that he had exceeded his fifty minutes of time by slamming shut their notebooks and even standing to put on their coats.

It took some words by the speaker himself to quiet the rude mob. By this time we had already passed through the stages of embarrassment into the realm of lost pride.

We cannot help thinking this distinguished quest will leave Syracuse not with memories of the bright lights that can be found here, but rather with visions of notebook closing and coats being put on as though education ends at ten to the hour.

Accept our apologies, Dr. Davis. Perhaps we have more lessons to learn than those that can be offered in the classroom or in the text. We need a few trips into the world before we can learn to walk with our notebooks always open.

Passing Gallants

James McNeil Whistler, better known as a painter but also a charming writer, in one of his collections of essays said: "Ladies and gentlemen, Art is upon the town to be chucked under the chin by the passing gallant."

We were reminded of this Sunday at the Crouse Concert when Art was forced upon the pledges of a Hill sorority. That is, they were asked by their house to attend the concert since the house had in some way connected itself with this particular performance.

Now this in itself is hard to swallow. If the girls do not attend the concerts regularly why make them go to this one? Surely no one missed them on the many weeks they weren't there.

But Sunday they were missed when en masse they decided after the intermission that they had done their part for sorority and for culture.

So they left with the concert half over, leaving a conspicuous space of empty seats in the front rows in which they sat, presumably to let everyone know they were there. Everyone may not have known they were there but they certainly could tell when they left.

This leaves us with two messages.

First, to the hierarchy of the house: Don't force culture on your pledges. You can never tell what the results may be.

Second, to the pledges: A little Brahms never hurt anyone, girls. That's what you missed, you know. We're not too good at what color ribbons belong to what house. For that matter we're color blind. However, you certainly didn't look good.

Stay till the end next time. Perhaps you'll learn to like it. Or else stay away. Art has been chucked under the chin before and is beginning to get irritated.

LETTERS

To Mr. Flohr

To the Editor:

I am writing this letter in reply to a letter of last Thursday by Louis Flohr, a critic of Mr. Crowin's articles, which appear periodically in the Daily Orange repudiating prejudicial practices and legislative procedures among the Greeks.

Mr. Flohr made the following declaration: "If I were a 'nigger,' I would want another, more intelligent, Negro to speak for me rather than some patronizing white with his phony semantics and illogical ' arguments." Undoubtedly Mr. Flohr, you have missed the boat. Mr. Corwin isn't speaking solely of Negroes when he speaks of prejudice among sororities and fraternities at Syracuse University. Rather, he is speaking of Jews, Mongolians, Chinese, North-East Africans, Black Africans, or whatever else you may.

The American Negro, Mr. Flohr, speaks for himself in his everyday life as a student at Syracuse. In speech, in dress, and manners being borught into view. He speaks for himself as a symbol of faith, in his effort to achieve real progress through education. He speaks for himself, Mr. Flohr, by encouraging others to join him in the fight against racial prejudice and discrimination, that is done solely on the basis of skin, color or ethnic origin.

The American Negro speaks for himself through faith in God—in the promises that God makes to him, and to you, Mr. Flohr, through revelation and divine spirit. He speaks for himself by actually rushing sororities and fraternities knowing from the state that his chances of acceptance into such a social organization are few.

Nevertheless, he fights on because he knows that the wind of change is inevitable only through everyday efforts in all directions of progress, and in all walks of life.

Specifically, you mentioned that if you were a "nigger," —Do you take it for granted that a "nigger" means a colored person?—because anyone can be a "nigger." What a pity you were not born with black skin! But maybe your cleverness, instead of Mr. Corwin's, as asserted, is transparent, to the extent of that the end result is that the Negro=White man. But there is one corection, and that is "nigger" — any man, white or black. Mr. Flohr, you can become a "Nigger" if you are not already one, whenever your little soul desires— and retain your skin color.

So — you see Mr. Flohr, you formula works for the whole society. There are just as many "White Niggers" in the world as there are Black, perhaps more.

Syracuse University is turning the corner in the recognition of the rights and potential of ethnic minority groups, though failure to act sooner has laid a taint on our student body and administration. The conflicts and consternation surrounding the minority groups on campus are more intense, more complex, more demanding of organized approaches to solutions than ever before. One might ask, "What lies behind this push, this adventurous spirit, this zeal that prompts, ethnic minority groups, especially the Negro, to want things done?" A look at the world today will provide the answer.

Wake up, man! Racial prejudice is everybody's concern. In essence, we are our brothers' keeper. Things that affect one segment of society also affect the other. So do not make the mistake that the White Segregationists (in the North as well as South) are making by referring to racial prejudice as solely the Negro problem because it is not. It is everybody's problem, yours and mine.

I am a Negro. I am a proud Negro. I am a potential leader of progress and change, equipped with the courage to dare and do, the faith to believe in God, and the promises and guarantees of the Constitution, and the education to open the door to real progress and change. I am the past, present and the future.

Market

To the Editor:

A university has been called a "market place of ideas," and Syracuse University in particular was envisioned by the first Board of Trustees as "a great university which, in character and philosophy, would exemplify the American tradition of equality and freedom."

S.U. today is more concerned with its image than with the enrichment of its students. The lofty ideals S.U. once ascribed to have given way to maniacal obsession for a good image. Where did the "American tradition of freedom" go when The Sword of Damocles was denied the University's official sanction? Where has "the American tradition of equality" gone when the administration permits fraternities and sororities to maintain discriminatory clauses?

If the administration is so concerned with image, why don't they correct the flagrant abuses heaped on the student body (i.e. discriminatory clauses, censorship, health service, Ambassador apartments, etc.)? It seems to me that the present administration is making a sham out of the original intentions of Syracuse University, and rather than do something constructive, it uses totalitarian methods to preserve the phony image. As far as I can comprehend, the administration bureaucrats are hypocrites, or the first Board of Trustees were fools.

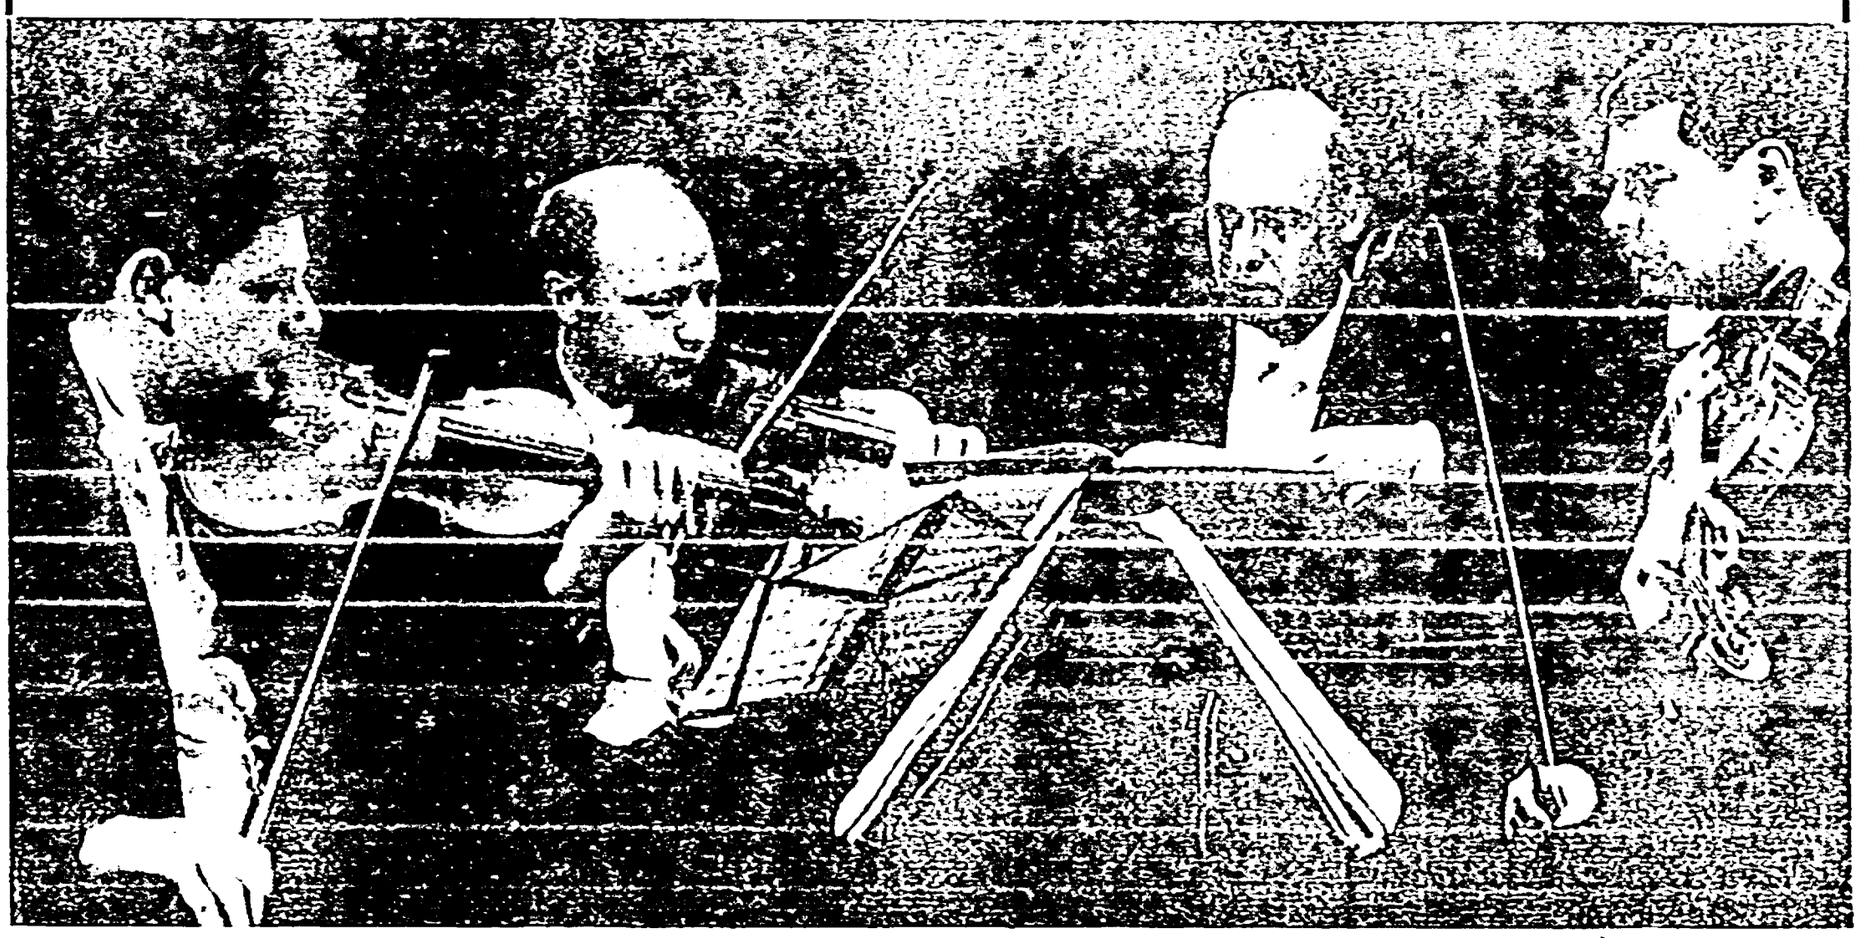
'Sword'

To the Editor:

No one was happier than I to see the "Sword of Damocles" make its debut after its long period of preparation. I particularly enjoyed reading about the Infirmary and the Bookstore.

When I got to the only fiction in the issue—"Something More" by J. C. Petersen—I expected it to measure up to the general standards of the other articles. The story was disappointing to say the least.

My first reaction was: "Oh, what a gimmicky ending." If the author has to use the gimmick of having poor Peter eat his woman's eyeballs, something is wrong.



The whole story is a sad commentary on the quality of collegiate fiction writing. The only thing that seems to matter is giving a cliche ridden situation (the ugly unhappy man finds a woman who is beautiful) a shock ending reminiscent of "Twilight Zone."

I am not asking for happy endings. That would be too shallow. All I am asking for are stories which get their merit from a solidly written framework of plot, character development, consideration of human problems and whatever else a story needs to be good.

On the other hand I have no use for the story which derives its only impact from the juvenile act of eating eyeballs (which could possibly taste better than live goldfish).

Juilliard Quartet Plays Saturday

ROBERT MANN, ISIDORE COHEN, CLAUS ADAM, RAPHAEL HILLYER

The world-famed Julliard String Quartet will present a concert 8:30 p.m. Saturday in Nottingham High School auditorium, sponsored by the Syracuse Friends of Chamber Music.

Founded in 1946 by William Schuman, president of the Juilliard School of Music, the quartet is composed of Robert Mann and Isidore Cohen, violinists; Raphael Hillyer, violist, and Claus Adam, cellist. The four have appeared as soloists with major symphony orchestras.

Their repertoire of more than 135 works ranges from the classics to modern European and American composers. Saturday's program includes the Haydn Quartet in E Flat Major, Opus 64; the Elliot Quartet No. 2 (1959) which the Quartet premiered, and the Beethoven Quartet E Flat Major, Opus 74.

The Juilliard musicians have been appointed quartet-in-residence at the Library of Congress, the highest honor an American string quartet can receive. For the Library concerts they use the treasured Stradivari instruments of the Whittal Collection.

Tickets for the concert cost $2.50, $1.50 for students and are available at Olmsted's on the Hill.

THEATER

Hayes and Evans

It was nip and tuck till the third quarter Tuesday night as Bill Shakespeare played George L. Manley. At that point the Bard from Stratford-on-Avon pulled out one of his better plays, "A Midsummer Night's Dream," and the highly rated Maurice Evans scored for the visitors' period.

Until then Manley, backed by his overpoweringly large Fieldhouse and some 3,500 fans, had overwhelmed Shakespeare, confused the Bard's players and only mildly moved this sports-goer.

But the final victory for Stratford was scored by Helen Hayes. Her maneuvering of the famed "I dreamt there was an emperor, Antony" from "Antony and Cleopatra" overcame the crowd. Manley was finally driven to a hard defeat by "The Taming of the Shrew."

If the second half of "A Program for Two Players" was Shakespeare's, the first half belonged to the Fieldhouse. Opening with a series of quotes about love, Evans and Miss Hayes were tripped up by "As You Like It's" word play and "Henry V's" delicacy.

In the first play, try hard as they could, the two could not convince us they were the romantic Orlando and the impetuous Rosalind. In the latter play, Evans' Henry V became a middle-aged man's version of an energetic and charming youth. Miss Hayes' Katherine lost the toss-up between a foolishly silly and a delicately coy Katherine.

But the tide against the Fieldhouse turned during the "Macbeth" sequence. Though Evans seemed stiff as Macbeth, Miss Hayes had mastered the Fieldhouse terrain. She conquered all as the disheartener Constance from "King John" and the despairing Cleopatra.

'The Centaur'

JIM ROBINSON, author of the following review, is dually enrolled in the College of Liberal Arts and the School of Education. He plans to teach high school French. Below is Robinson's explanation of the myth of the centaur:

KRONOS ASSUMED the shape of a horse in order to deceive his wife Rhea while he carried on illicit relations with Philyra. She bore Kronos a child, Chiron, who was half man and half horse.

CHIRON BECAME the wisest and noblest of all the Centaurs. His pupils were the greatest princes and heroes of the age. When Hercules drove the Centaurs from Mount Pelion, Chiron was wounded with a poison arrow. Although he sacrificed his immortality for Prometheus, he was placed among the stars after his death and became the constellation Sagittarius.

The Centaur by John Updike. Knopf, 302 pages, $4.

"The Centaur," John Updike's third novel, is a giant undertaking. It is a task worthy of the mythological gods he weaves throughout his story.

It is, though, too ambitious for even such a talented writer as Updike. Where it fails is not, ironically, in the mythological but in the conventional, the commonplace. George Caldwell, the central character, is neither memorable nor admirable. He is, though, an improvement over Rabbit Angstrom, the hero of Updike's last novel, "Rabbit Run."

Caldwell, a general science teacher in Olinger, Pa., would like to be a bum. But he has ties that prevent him from running off: a job he detests; a wife he shouldn't have married; a father-in-law he hopes will die; and a son he loves.

Death would be a convenient escape, but Caldwell refuses to accept the fact that life has no more meaning than this. Death cannot be the ultimate purpose of life.

Every man, in a sense, wishes to be a god—to have some control over his universe. But Caldwell has control over nothing. Everything slips out of his grasp.

He fails as a teacher because he lacks discipline; he fails as a father because he is weak; he fails as a provider because he is impractical.

The juxtaposition of omnipotent Greek gods and Caldwell's bumbling incompetence provides a striking contrast; one that is perhaps unfair, however. Caldwell is not even a man, much less a god.

What gives Caldwell character is that he stands up under a brutal psychological beating and takes it. He is literally a human punching bag. People walk all over him and he accepts it as his due.

Far from evoking pity from the reader, Caldwell's humility makes him laughable. A fine thread separates him from the beast-like impulsiveness of a Rabbit Angstrom and the assertiveness that would make a man of him. In truth, he is neither man or beast; he is a centaur.

Where the novel breaks down is in the picture Updike paints of the modern generation and present-day society. The post-war generation is selfish, anti-intellectual, and obsessed with sex, says the author. How much truth lies in this viewpoint is a matter for conjecture. However, Updike's exaggerations do nothing to help prove his point.

I sincerely doubt that students shoot steeltipped arrows through their teachers' ankles, no matter how dull he may seem. Nor do many principals go around undressing girls in the classroom. Updike's portrayal of a carefree, sex-happy society often borders on the ludicrous.

The explanation Caldwell's wife gives him, "they want to love each other and you're in the way," is over-simplified. J. D. Salinger has, I believe, come much closer to the truth. Adolescent sex is mostly talk. If Updike is to be believed, the talk generally materializes into over actions.

Nevertheless, "The Centaur" bears reading, for Updike is a master craftsman, a stylistic prodigy. His concern for the well-turned phrase, le mot juste, is reminiscent of Flaubert; and like the latter, Updike is often so tangled in a web of detail that the total effect escapes him.

Unlike Flaubert, Updike has not yet written his "Madame Bovary," and "The Centaur" is not to be it. Unlike Flaubert, Updike's accomplishments do not include French; for what little Gallic flavoring he inserts in his works is invariably misused.

John Updike is one of the most important writers of our time, but is still not a great author.

Painter Rick's 'Romeo'

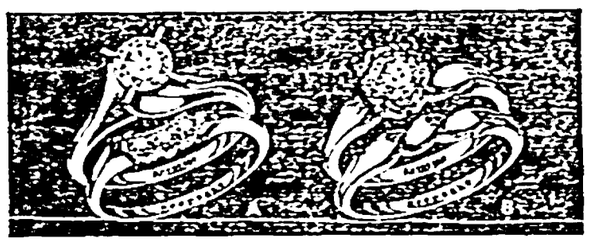
Dark-haired, blue-eyed Rick Miller, playing the immortal lover, Romeo, brings to the role the painter's enjoyment of a beautiful work. Art, however, is only Miller's avocation. Though he has sold his paintings and once considered art as a career he finally chose the theater.

"I'm basically a socially minded person. Painting requires a great deal of seclusion and work alone," Miller explains, "whereas in drama you are constantly in contact with other people."

RICK MILLER

Miller stars as Romeo in the Boar's Head production of William Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet," opening Saturday at the drama building.

The 20 year old sophomore was introduced to the stage by his parents who had been in semi-professional theater since their high school days.



Because of his love for Shakespeare, and a desire to learn to act, Miller joined the American Shakespeare Festival and Academy at Stratford, Conn. in 1961.

He is currently a member of the Ensemble Theater, a fledgling repertoire company that hopes to establish itself as a full time production company in Syracuse. "It is my idea of what theater in this country is lacking."

If the Ensemble does not become the type of off-Broadway theater hoped for, Miller says "I'll go to New York City and starve until my talents are recognized."

Dennis Day got his first major broadcasting break on radio's "Jack Benny Program" in 1939, has worked with Benny ever since.

Meet Dr. Miller and Dr. Miller

Both Dr. Miller and his wife say they feel there is a limited future in botany for anyone with only a bachelor of science degree.

Future Limited

Mrs. Miller says the future for women teachers, even those with doctorates, is mostly limited to women's colleges. She also notes it is especially difficult for married women to get into the teaching profession in any field, although the area is gradually opening up.

Dr. Miller cited his alma mater, Yale, as an example, where "female faculty members are scarcer than flashy ties."

Both noted "there is an unusual number of women professors at SU."

Gardener Too

Originally from Harrisburg, Pa., Dr. Pauline M. Miller has always been interested in gardening. She began her college career as a major in horticulture, and was advised during her freshman year to major in something more scientific. She chose botany.

After undergraduate work at Penn State, Dr. Miller went on to the University of Pennsylvania, where she was awarded her doctorate. She was an instructor for two years at Connecticut College for Women, and a research associate there, also for two years.

After spending one year as a research associate at Yale, Dr. Miller came to Syracuse. She is working here as a research associate.

Changed Mind

Dr. Miller, an assistant professor in botany, began college as a chemistry major, but took one botany course and changed his mind.

Dr. Miller went to graduate school at the University of Pennsylvania for two years, where he met Mrs. Miller. He then returned to Yale for his doctorate and a post-doctoral fellowship.

After working for one year with the National Cancer Institute, Dr. Miller spent two years as an instructor with the Yale botany department.

He is presently teaching the second part of the botany 2 course, and a graduate plant physiology course. Dr. Miller prefers smaller classes, where he can get to know each of his students.

Now established in their new offices in the biological research laboratories, the Millers are beginning their research work. Their lab is fitted with the newest equipment and working space for several research assistants.

Security Seeks Molester On Prowl for Past Month

A man of medium height, dark-haired and dark complexioned, is being sought by SU's Security Police in connection with molesting of SU coeds over the past month.

Two coeds were molested Monday night in the same 20 minute period, according to Security Director Robert Flaherty.

Flaherty warns coeds to be on the alert for a suspicious man answering the description.

One coed was followed along University place between University and South Crouse avenues by an unidentified man who grabbed her, "smiled wryly" and ran.

Minutes later another coed was followed down the steps of Maxwell Hall towards South Crouse and University by a man who grabbed her from behind, smiled at her then ran.

Both coeds describe their smiling attacker as medium in height, dark, and with short brown hair.

Last Tuesday a coed was similarly attacked on the '77 steps" up to Mount Olympus. As she walked up to Day Hall she passed a man on the stairs. He grabbed her, shook her violently and chased her as she tried to escape. This coed's description of her attacker is similar to that of the man being sought in relation to Monday's incidents.

Two weeks ago an indecent exposure case was reported to Security from the Maxwell Citizenship Library. No description was given and it is not known if the same man was involved.

Feb. 15 a coed was attacked on College place. She was unhurt and her attacker was chased unsuccessfully by brothers of Phi Kappa Psi fraternity, on the same street.

Alpine Expert Speaks Today

An internationally known Alpine geologist, Prof. Rudolf Trumpy, will be the guest of the geology department for the remainder of the week.

He will lecture on "Life History of a Mountain Chain: The Alps" at 8:15 p.m. today in 117 Lyman Hall. The lecture is open to the public. He will conduct seminars and informal meetings with the students and faculty of the geology department Thursday and Friday.

Trumpy is taking part in the Visiting International GeoScientist program, sponsored by the American Geological Institute and several universities across the country. Funds are provided by the National Science Foundation.

Trumpy is an internationally recognized authority on the geology of the Alps. He has travelled widely in Europe and Africa's Sahara region, and was a member of the Danish expedition to East Greenland.

He is presently an associate professor at the Swiss Federal Institute of Technology and Zurich University.

record will be distributed with a high school textbook published by the company.

Dr. Irwin received his bachelors degree at the University of Minnesota, his masters at Cornell University and his doctorate at Minnesota.

As an undergradate, he was a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon social fraternity. During the Korean War, Dr. Irwin served with a radar outfit.

His short stories have been published in Esquire, Parents, Show and other magazines. Last year, during a semester and summer leave of absence, he wrote a novel, a play and several short stories.

"The Spoken Word," which Dr. Irwin has presented on WAER-FM for 13 years, is now carried by seven other radio stations of the Educational Radio Network.

On the Hill, he teaches interpretation, phonetics and Shakespeare courses.

Thursday night's reading will also feature works by Theodore Roethke, Federico Garcia-Lorca and Dame Edith Sitwell.

toward changing these clauses.

Panhellenic Council representative Jolene Johnson (Kappa Delta) volunteered to pursue a similar survey among the sororities. Similar action as expected to be taken with sororities having clauses, Clifford commented.

In focusing attention on the removal of the discriminatory clauses in student organizations, the Board acknowledged definite improvement in reducing the number of fraternities with clauses, Clifford noted.

Both the IFC report and the Panhel survey are on the agenda for the Board's March 13th meeting, Clifford said.

Members of the Board include Acting Dean of Women Ceo McCracken, Associate Prof. John D. Brule of the School of Engineering, Joint Student Government President Theodore Bayer and Vice President Carol (Schultz) Lucha, Clifford, Rigoli and Miss Johnson.

The Hill's Anti-Discrimination Board was formed 10 years ago for the purpose of removing discriminatory clauses from constitutions of all student organizations.

The formation of the Board followed passage of the university's anti-discrimination bill, which bans from campus any incoming group with a clause, and requires existing groups to work toward the removal of their existing clauses.

National Fraternity Magazine Features Syracuse Conference

By CLAY RICHARDS
Junior Editor

The Syracuse Conference for fraternity executive secretaries has attained national Greek prominence. The current issue of Banta's Greek Exchange, a national fraternity magazine, devotes a five-page feature article to the Hill system.

The article "The Syracuse Conference: No Chapter is an Island," is written by Hill Dean of Men Earle W. Clifford and Fraternity Administrator James P. McMurray. The article explains the purpose, activities and results of the conference and features a montage picture of articles from the Daily Orange on the conference.

The Hill conference also is featured in other articles in the magazine.

Praise Hill

Praising the Hill system, Dean of Students Fred H. Turner (Sigma Alpha Epsilon) at the University of Illinois stated in the magazine: "Contrast the Williams situation (of removing fraternities from campus) with that of Syracuse University which invited thirty fraternity secretaries and executives to. . . 'tell us what is wrong with our system and what work must be done to have the best program of its size in the country.'"

"The Syracuse sudy," Turner continues, "was a definite study in the direction of university officials asking the co-operation of a group of well informed fraternity officers in appraising the local programs, proposing changes which might seem available and looking toward assisting fraternities to find their proper places in the entire educational program of their institution.

SU Sets Pattern

"Let us concede that not every institution could wo what Syracuse has done. . .but Syracuse has set a pattern which can be emulated and, with variations used by other institutions," he concluded.

The Clifford-McMurray article detailed the Syracuse Conference, quoting Chancellor William P. Tolley (Pi Kappa Alpha) for his "continuing and constant" interest in Hill fraternities.

Oe of the few criticisms of the conference, the article states, was the lack of sufficient time, to have the secretaries visit the local chapters, and to talk to outsiders as well as fraternity men.

"The full consequences of the conference will not be known until the recommendations have been implemented," the article comments.

"Reactions by fraternity representatives on the evaluation team suggest that the conference was a useful experiment, One participant said, '. . .my mind is fulled with only pleasant recollections of Syracuse University and its provoking new dimensions in college fraternity relationships.'"

Six Student Court Justice Jobs Open

Positions for six Joint Student Court justices and two judicial commissioners are now open, Robert Dick, JSC chief justice, has announced.

Justiceships are available for two present juniors, one man and one woman, and four present sophomores, two men and two coeds.

The positions of judicial commissioner, involving keeping court records and notifying students of sentence, are open to members of any class.

Applicants must have 1.5 cumulative averages.

Apprenticeships are available for freshmen who want to learn about the court's operation. Apprentices attend court sessions, but do not act on cases.

Applications are due March 22 at Dick's office in the student government office, 907 University Ave.

Interviews will be held during the first week in April.

The court is composed of 10 justices and two commissioners who meet weekly to review cases. The judicial branch of Joint Student Government, the court functions as a student disciplinary board.

Cases involving stulent violation of university rules are referred to JSG by the office of the dean of men and the dean of women.

JSL to Discuss Election Bill

The proposed Joint Student Government elections act will be discussed at an open meeting of the Joint Student Legislature ways and means committee at 7:30 p.m. today in the student government office, 906 University Ave.

Committee chairman Kathleen Kapsol has invited all persons interested in discussing the bill to attend the meeting. However, she added, only committee members will be able to vote on the act.

1. My theory on looking for a job is—Play it big! Shoot for the top! Go straight to the prez for your interview.

I don't know any presidents.

2. Use your head, man. Have your dad set up appointments with some of the big shots he knows.

He's a veterinarian.

3. Beautiful! All you have to do is find a president who likes dogs. You'll have him eating out of your hand in no time.

4. Frankly, I don't know what else to tell you. You've got a problem.

It's not as bad as it seems. My idea is to find out the name of the employment manager at the company I'm interested in. Write him a letter telling him my qualifications. Spell out my interests, marks. Simple as that.

5. A letter to the employment manager! Ho ho ho! You've a lot to learn.

Then how come I landed a great job at Equitable—an executraining spot that's interesting, pays a good salary and has a lot of promise for the future.

US, CAP Plan Campaigns

By ANDY PORTE
Junior Editor

CAP

Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity and Gamma Phi Beta sorority were admitted to Campus Alliance Party Tuesday night. Both houses were unanimously accepted.

The two new members bring the CAP roster to 21. Also present at the meeting were representatives of Psi Upsilon fraternity and Kappa Alpha Theta sorority, both currently independent, as well as a representative of Alpha Phi sorority, currently a member of United Students party.

CAP President Ronald Brzezinski (Phi Gamma Delta) said the poltical representative from Psi U had expressed interest in joining CAP but would have to get the approval of his house. The Alpha Phi representative withheld comment until consultation with her house.

Campaign Chairman Susan Chalkin (Alpha Epsilon Phi) announced that the CAP nominating convention will be held March 16-17. JSG and class officers will be nominated beginning at 1 p.m. Saturday, March 16 at Zeta Tau Alpha sorority, while senators-at-large will be nominated beginning at 2 p.m. Sunday, March 17 at Phi Gamma Delta.

A motion to return to a system of open convention balloting, rather than the present secret ballot method, was defeated.

Possible platform planks were also discussed. Among the topics proposed were a joint class weekend, a revised marking system, a suggestion for more information about the student union committee and a proposal for a JSG cabinet composed of students from all phases of campus life.

US

The United Students party set up it's campaign organization at its general party meeting Tuesday night.

The party selected David Hartman (Sigma Alpha Mu) and Patricia Healy (Alpha Chi Omega) as overall campaign chairmen. In addition, it was announced that each class will have its own campaign manager. Ciass chairmen will be announced before the nominating convention, at a date still unknown.

Hartman and Miss Healy succeed Judd Epstein (Phi Sigma Delta) and Lois Wiltse (Alpha Xi Delta), who were elected after last spring's elections.

Epstein is currently abroad with the Syracuse-in-Italy program, and Miss Wiltse, who just returned from Italy, said she feels she will not have enough time to devote to the job.

Party President Robert Taylor (Alpha Chi Rho) announced that US will hold a coffee at 7:30 p.m. next Tuesday at Alpha Gamma Delta sorority so prospective candidates may meet each other as well as the convention delegates.

Taylor stressed that the coffee is open to all persons interested in running with US, including independents. The party has no restrictions on independents or on-member Greeks running on its ticket.

Book Profits Go To Award

Phi chapter of Alpha Phi Omega, national service fraternity netted $250 on its second semester book exchange by charging a ten cent service charge on each book.

This money will be placed in a scholarship fund maintained by the fraternity.

Every year the interest from this fund, which has a principal of $3000, is withdrawn and donated to the university for scholarship purposes.

The book exchange was held during registration in the chapter's third floor office in the Men's Gym.

It was conducted on a non-profit basis for the benefit of those students who wished to sell their books directly, rather than through the bookstore.

Frosh Class Nets $560

The freshman class made a profit of $560.96 on its class weekend, frosh treasurer Janet Aspinwall announced at the Freshman Forum meeting recently.

Miss Aspinwall said the class spent over $2,800 on the weekend, but showed over $3,300 in receipts.

Laurie Weisman, frosh vice president and chairman of the forum, requested that forum representatives discuss the idea of a class project in their living centers. Among the suggestions made were a Sadie Hawkins dance and a milk drive.

Orange Observations

By ALLAN KORT

Sports Editor

Coach Fred Lewis, apparently riding the ebb of a highly successful coaching career, has revealed he may be forced to leave college basketball.

Lewis, who has made the game his life, complained the malpractices in recruiting circles are enough to force any sane coach to quit.

Freddie said he and assistant coach Morris Osburn have been "continuously pressured in recruiting by other schools' illegal offers."

He contends the NCAA has been ineffective in halting "strong-arm" coaching methods. "In my years here and at Mississippi Southern, I've run into instances where boys have been offered cars, money etc. All I've been able to offfer to a boy is a good education, both in basketball and academics."

Lewis suggests the NCAA enforce its recruiting rules by suspending schools practicing these tactics.

"Light has been brought upon point-shaving by college students but the public fails to realize why players cheat. It's probably because they were bribed. by the school that they are attending," Fred contends.

Now that Lewis is operating from a bigtime school, he finds he has more to offer interested lads. "The main thing a ballplayer wants is an education and here at Syracuse we can offer anything from physical education to medicine."

We agree with Lewis—Some of the offers are ridiculous and should be eliminated from the game. NCAA rules say the only thing a school can offer an endowed lad is an education. So how was NYU All-American Barry Kramer offered a car, money and a med-school education without NCAA intereference, according to a recent "Saturday Evening Post" article?

Lewis contends Kramer is not the only lad to be offered illegal terms. He contends several schools make a practice of this. "NCAA suspensions, however, are not levied for these major infractions but for insignificant breaking of the rules," Freddie said.

He lays blame not only to the schools who make offers, or to the boys who accept them, but also allots a share to the parents who try dishonestly to make a profit of their son's prowess.

Lewis, however, is not completely amiss. "There are a lot of good boys who scorn at these offers and choose the school they like the most. But there are not enough of these."

"Since Syracuse is going big-time, we need top basketball talent—and since we cannot operate under such expensive recruiting methods, we need a revision—a cleanup of recruiting."

Lewis is hopeful the NCAA, which he considers a weak body, will levy and enforce stiff penalties at its spring meeting.

It appears the only way to have a great team in college basketball is to buy one. Fred Lewis disagrees and will continue to contact top talent until the NCAA cleans up the sport or he retires.

Orange Rout Colgate In First Road Win

By JUDY ADAMS

The whole bench was jumpy. Vernick and Klutchkowski couldn't sit still. Finley was screaming at his teammates. Lewis held his familiar towel nervously over his mouth.

Carefully Phil Schoff stepped up to the foul line. The clock behind him showed two seconds remaining. He sank his first shot. He took the ball again, bounced it twice, took a deep breath and with the perspiration dripping from his chin, shot again. The ball arched through the hoop.

Colgate grabbed it, but it was too late for another score. Schoff was mobbed by his delerious teammates.

Easy

Another close win for the Orangemen? Nope. This was the easiest win of the season, in fact, in a couple of seasons.

Then why all the excitement? Easy. Syracuse had notched its first victory on the road since last year's finale. But more important, they had just scored 100 points in doing it.

The Orangemen had a surprisingly easy time knocking off the Red Raiders, 100-76 last night at Hamilton. Syracuse went ahead 4-2 at the three minute mark in the first period and were never in trouble.

They shot a fierce 16 for 33 from the floor the first half for nearly 50%. Colgate had a dreadful 11 for 45 for less than 25%. Vernick had the hottest hand for the Orange in the first half with 17 points.

At one point in the middle of the first half, the visitors reeled off points while the hosting club could manage only 4. The half ended with the Orangemen in the lead, 43-24.

Syracuse was never in danger of losing their lead after the half. The best Colgate could do was to narrow it to 15 early in the third period.

It wasn't until the last 2 minutes that the century mark dawned a possibility. Eight minutes earlier the Orange has surpassed their previous high-water mark of 77 against Cornell in December. At the two minute mark they led 86-66. With one minute left, they had jacked their score up to 94-70.

Duffy

The clock read 0:45 when Richie Duffy scored. It stood at 0:25 when Schoff stepped up to the foul line for the first of two times in the last minute. He could only make one of his chances, as could Duffy seven seconds later.

Richie missed the shot seconds later, but Schoff was fouled. At the two second mark he got his second chance.

Jim Seaman had another hot night with Syracuse with 25, 16 in Syracuse's 56-point second half. Vernick finished with 21, Manny with 17 and Finley with 12.

Psi U Wins Skiing

Two fraternity cousins competed for the 1963 Intramural Ski Championship, Feb. 23 at Skytop.

Psi Upsilon out-skied rival Delta Upsilon, finishing with a percentage score of 94.51 to the opposition's 64.93.

Frank Rose, John Skinner, Mikke Lehnkering and Charles Smith performed for the winners. Smith had the best total score, ending his two runs with a mark of 36.2. The Psi's total team score was 186.1.

Tom Valey, Doug Shaver, Eric Gilbert, and Tom Mead represented D U. Valey topped his teammates finishing with a score of 42.8. Together the quartet finished with 270.9.

Phi Epsilon Pi and Sigma Alpha Mu were disqualified when one of their four skiers failed to finish the run correctly. Six other squads entered, but forfeited before the start of the meet.

Frosh Beat Colgate; Bing Paces Victory

Just when you think Dave Bing can't do anything else he does it. Tuesday night Dave turned in his finest performance of the year, pacing the Orange to an 80-60 win over Colgate at Hamilton. Bing pumped in 38 points and pulled down 21 rebounds to give the frosh their second victory of the year over the Red Raiders, and their eleventh win of the season.

Although Dave boasted an impressive set of credentials, he was cold from the floor, hitting only 13 for 31. He added the rest of his tallies from the charity line, making 12 of 15.

Sam Penceal was unable to play due to a neck injury. Coach Morris Osbourne started Bing, Frank Nicoletti, Dick Abelman, Norm Goldsmith and Rex Trobridge. Goldsmith was the only other starter to hit in double figures, scoring 13.

Both teams played a sloppy first half, but play picked up considerably in the second half. Colgate closed the gap to 35-27 at the half, and threatened again at the start of the second period. Their hopes were short-lived, however, as substitutes Ted Holeman and Jim Bocheim turned in fine performances, both scoring 10 and putting the Orange out of reach. Engler and Zamat paced the home team, scoring 17 and 16 respectively.

Swim Championships Friday

Top varsity and freshman swimmers from 13 schools will compete in the Upper New York State Swimming Championships, Friday and Saturday, at Orange Pool.

Outstanding mermen from St. Bonaventure, the University of Buffalo, Niagara, Brockport, Rochester, Cortland, Oswego, Geneseo, Colgate, Union College, R.P.I., Buffalo State, and Syracuse, will battle. Orange coach Ted Webster looks for tough competition and fine individual performances.

Except for the 500-yard free style event all other events in varsity competition will be the same as those in regular dual meets, and swum in the same order.

The freshman events will immediately precede their varsity counterparts. The frosh will compete in the 200-yard medley and free style relays, the one-meter diving event, and the 100-yard freestyle, backstroke, and breaststroke events.

Each school is permitted to enter one relay team in each event, and two individual swimmers and an alternate.

Coach Webster, surveying the scene, is optimistic that Syracuse swimmers Tom Watts, Barney Morrison, and Bob Ohman will make strong bids for wins.

Other performers who boast fine records so far this season, and who will be anxious to bring home a few victories, are Colgate's Bill Steuk, Jim Elder, Rett Foster, Ray Williams, Dennis and Lee Johnson, and Pat Laforte.

In the distance events Rochester and Cortland will bring with them two excellent swimmers in Nauman and Grogan, respectively. Hebert of Niagara also figures to be a top contender for distance honors.

Hill IFC Removes Rush Restriction

By CLAY RICHARDS
Junior Editor

Freshmen who did not make their averages may enter fraternity houses and attend social functions held by houses, but may not pledge until they make their average, according to legislation passed by the Hill InterFraternity Council Wednesday night.

Registered freshmen whose names appear on the eligibility list may pledge at any time. Those who did not register and are eligible may not pledge until they have signed up in the dean of men's office.

An informal open rush will be held from 2 to 4 p.m. Sunday, March 17, chairman James Hadnagy (Theta Chi) announced.

Participating in the open rush are Delta Tau Delta, Beta Theta Pi, Theta Chi, Sigma Chi, Beta Sigma Rho, Acacia, Phi Kappa Psi, and Pi Kappa Alpha.

Applications for IFC president and vice-president will be open until Friday, President Thomas Rigoli (Phi Delta Theta) announced. Written applications may be turned in to Fraternity Administrator James P. McMurray in the dean of men's office.

All candidates who meet the requirements of one semester's participation will speak to an open meeting of all fraternity members Wednesday, March 13 in Kittridge Auditorium. All fraternity presidents and junior house representatives are required to attend the meeting.

Elections will be held at the March 24 IFC meeting, Rigoli stated.

Greek Week will be held April 15-22, Rigoli announced. The council voted unanimously to have a Miss IFC for the week. It will be the first time that the Hill IFC has had a Greek queen.

A complete report of Greek Week activities will be given following the candidates' speeches next week.

32 to Attempt Hike to Utica

The "Crusade to Utica" will depart from Hendricks Chapel at 6 a.m. Saturday, Joint Student Government special services director Douglas Long announced Wednesday.

Long said that 32 persons had registered for the trek as of Wednesday afternoon. He added that half of the group were women, and most of the courageous hikers were freshmen.

Estimated time of arrival in Utica is 8 p.m. JSG is arranging for a return trip by bus. Long said that JSG will supply lunch, snacks and necessary medical supplies to needy hikers.

Long said that JSG needs several "patriotic crusaders" to follow the hikers in automobiles. Interested persons should call the JSG office, ext. 2650 or 3138.

Long added that if inclement weather persists through Saturday, the hike will be postponed.

JSL Program Talk Today

An open meeting to discuss plans for a spring program on Communism will be held at 4 p.m. today in 111 Maxwell Hall.

Jay Litwin, chairman of the Joint Student Legislature and local and national affairs committee, has invited all interested students, faculty and administration to attend the meeting.

Litwin said the group will attempt to decide on a speaker and format for the Communism program.

STUDENT UNION BASKETBALLERS

All students scheduled to play in next Friday's Student Union Fund basketball game at Manley Fieldhouse are requested to get a T-shirt to Carol Schultze) Lucha at the student government office before the weekend.

The T-shirts will be appropriately marked for the players. A team practice session will be held at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Archibold practice gym. Today's practice is postponed. All are requested to attend Tuesday.

Amalemba of Kenya To Lecture Tonight

MUSA AMALEMBA

Musa Amalemba, Kenya's minister of housing, will discuss African problems at the second citizenship lecture at 8:30 p.m. today in Hendricks Chapel.

Amalemba was the first African to be appointed to the inner government councils in Kenya five years ago.

In 1952 he was threatened by Kiyuku terrorists during the early days of the Mau Mau revolt. Amalemba continued working in Nairobi as a journalist and merchant.

Amalemba, 37, was born near Lake Victoria in Kenya's Nyanza Province.

When African nationalists became intent on creating an all-Africa state in Kenya in 1955, Amalemba was censured for his non-racial approach. At this time, he was a member of the Nairobi City Council.

His grocery store was boycotted and his house stoned by mobs.

The extremist campaign intensified when Amalemba was named minister of housing in 1958.

With a staff of Europeans, Africans and Asians, Amalemba has worked to provide housing for the 30,000 people in Nairobi who needed homes two years ago.

He has established a series of housing estates, serving 25,000 people, on the plains east of the city.

Housing has also progressed in other parts of Kenya, especially Mombasa, a seaport town.

Amalemba is now working on establishing Kenya's first multiracal party, the New Kenya Group. Aims of the party are respect for the rights of all racial groups and no policy of domination.

Dr. Davis Cites Jewish Love For Learning

By CHARLES BARNEY

"The Jewish tradition is the continuing tradition of the love of learning," said Dr. Moshe Davis at the first B. G. Rudolph Lecture in Judaic Studies series.

Dr. Davis, a visiting professor at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, spoke last night in Hendricks Chapel on "The Jewish People in Metamorphosis."

Dr. Davis listed five relating components of the Jewish tradition. They are:

1—The daily life of the Jew; the moral life is the universal thread.

2—The bond of love of the Jew feeling responsible for one another.

3—The sense of belonging to the brotherhood of Judaism.

4—The synagogue is the common center of life.

5—The homeland of the Jew.

Past - Present

Davis emphasized that to understand the future one has to understand the past and present. The past not only influences the present, he said, but the present illuminates the past. From this Davis presented seven basic

JSG Constitution To Be Discussed

The proposed student government constitution will be discussed at a meeting of the Joint Student Legislature government structures committee at 7 p.m. today in the student government office, 907 University Ave.

Committee chairman David Knickerbocker, a senior class senator-at-large, requested that all persons interested in submitting proposals or changes for the constitution come to the office between 7-8 p.m. to present their arguments. He asked that committee will decide on the form 6:45 p.m.

Following all proposals, the committe will decide on the form to be submitted to the legislature. Knickerbocker said he hoped the constitution will be ready for the next JSL meeting.

Skeptical

Knickerbocker was skeptical as to passage of several points of the new constitution. "It's going to be a fight that may result in no constitution passed this year," he commented.

Opposition is expected on several main topics of the constitution. Among the key points are qualifications for campus offices. The proposed constitution sets the average requirement for speaker and speaker pro tempore of JSL at 1.5, and says they must be juniors when elected. There is currently no restriction.

Also proposed is raising the grade qualification for class officers from the present 1.0 to a 1.2. Appeals for all offices would be referred to the JSG

Recent Poetry Reading Tonight

Dr. Ray Irwin, chairman of the department of interpretation, will present a reading of modern poetry at 7:30 p.m. today in the city students' lounge 309 Women's Building.

He will read poems by T. S. Eliot, Archibald MacLeish, Dylan Thomas, Theodore Roethke, Dame Edith Sitwell and other modern poets.

His lecture is sponsored by the senior class as part of the "Getting to Know Your Professors" series.

History of Drinking Policy--Part I

By JAN FOWLER

This article represents a month of research, both in the archives, interviews with the policy makers, and several outside sources. My purpose is not to condemn the policy or propose changes. This is merely, I hope, an end to the "sword rattling" that has gone on in the last several decades. I have tried to make it as nearly objective as I am able and if a small amount of my personal voice is evident, please accept it as only that.

I am a sophomore, in relatively good standing with the University and my fellow students. I am a non-drinking Methodist, partly by preference and partly by religion, so I feel that the policy doesn't affect me as much as others, giving me a still more objective view.

I have for the most part paraphrased what has been related to me, this way no one can be critized excepting myself. I often wondered why the University didn't in fact place an article in the D.O. and end it all. But every time this is done, personality conflicts are instituted by "Letters of the Editor" and the like, so the University retains a policy of passive resistance.

The fact that the JSL is entering into an investigation is purely coincidental to this brief and I shall list my sources since I am sure that they will utilize these same sources. I don't mean to "cut their grass" but I hope by this I can be a small help to them so that they might bring out their report sooner, reducing the probability of their Drinking Policy Committee being obliterates by apathy and bureaucracy.

'A Challenge To Journalism'

In line with the current discussion over what the college paper should and should not print, we offer, without comment, excerpts from an Associated College Press feature entitled "Challenge to Journalism."

"The nation's newsorgans are not improving enough to meet the challenges of atomic-age democracy, says Dean Edward W. Barrett of Columbia University's Graduate School of Journalism.

"'Let's face it,' Dean Barrett told student editors representing more than 100 college newspapers at the fifth annual International Affairs Conference for College Editors in New York Feb. 24. 'Our normal media of news communication, if we look at them nationwide, are not doing an outstandingly good job."

The conference featured a panel discussion entitled "Freedom and Responsibility of the Student Press" and centered on the role of the college newspaper and its relation to college administrator.

The story continues: "Press freedom has been a major issue on many campuses during the past year. Student editors have been particularly concerned since a number of publications were attacked by college administrators and by legislators, were suspended or closed and their editors punished or dismissed on campuses in New York, Pennsylvania, Colorado, Michigan, California and Florida.

"Several student editors said that the campus newspaper is the 'last citadel of free expression' in the publishing field . . . . One view taken was that a college newspaper should be a 'voice of gentle persausion and responsibility.'

"An opposite view taken was that college newspapers should 'agitate and raise hell.'"

The other opinion voiced on various subjects were just as varied and opposite in view. Following are random quotes:

"Most college editors wouldn't know what to do with complete freedom of the press if they had it. Further, if their papers are subsidized, they cannot expect complete freedom. What college president is going to pay to hear views he doesn't want to hear?

"I go all over the country investigating suppression for them and defending them. I defend both the idiots and the ones really being censored. But I sure do get fed up with defending the idiots—and there are plenty of idiots."

"Student journalism should be thought-provoking not big agitators. The trick is to use wise judgment and to show a sense of maturity and responsibility. This will help you obtain and maintain—and help others obtain and maintain— college freedom of the press."

"The truth can be known only if you are free to tell it. Basically a university newspaper must be responsible like any other newspaper. It must not become the mouthpiece of an administration or the mouthpiece of a person. And it must not be a public relations outfit for its college.

"Most newspapers are writing editorials about Afghanistan and ignoring the home issues. The college papers are the only ones who dare touch some issues."

These quotes came from a former editor of the University of Chicago newspaper, the prize-winning editor of the University of Mississippi newspaper and the editor of the University of Alabama paper, whose editorials on the Mississippi school riot brought threats on his life.

THE GADFLY

Thinking Man's Filter

By T. Lee Hughes

"How much better it is to understand it all, to be conscious of it all, all the impossibilities and the stone walls, not to resign yourself to a single one of those impossibilities and stone walls if it disgusts you to resign yourself, to reach through the most inevitable logical combinations, the most revolting conclusions on the everlasting theme that you are yourself somehow to blame even for the stone wall, though again it as as clear as day you are not to blame in the least. . . ."

FYODOR DOSTOEVSKY

There is a certain futility to the "educational experience" at Syracuse University.

Two weeks ago, Kappa Delta sorority was charged in print with enforcing an "unwritten" discriminatory clause. A scant five days later, the Daily Orange pointed the finger at Lambda Chi Alpha for withdrawing a pledge bid from a Jew named Sy Oskeroff.

There was a promise of more to come. And the dean of men's office pounced.

Not on discriminatory clauses.

Not on the fraternity.

But on the Daily Orange.

In the wake of an editorial justifying the use of fraternity names in all discriminatory and discrimination cases, the dean of men solemnly stated that it would withhold all information concerning disciplinary action from the Daily Orange.

It was not the first time this year that the D. O. has had its knuckles rapped, and from this very office.

During a Board of Publications meeting early this year, editor Joffe was given a tongue lashing for printing info on the mechanization of the board. Administrators told Joffe that no more could the D.O. decorate its pages with material concerning internal board preceedings.

At the same time, Student Government Prexy Teddy Bayer was told that if he did not withdraw his motion for "open" board meetings, he would be "heading down the road to impeachment."

The Daily Orange again felt the lash during the CORE picketing of the Savoy apartments. Out of the dean of men's office came the word that if the D.O. did not underplay a canceled CORE rally, the paper's editor would "at best get his hands slapped at the next board meeting."

And Friday, Thor's hammer struck again.

Clifford's arguments were couched in the rationality of protecting Greek houses from punishment through publicity. The argument was specious at best. For a discipline case in which the fraternity goes unnamed tends to impose a stigma on the Greek system as a whole. Naming the house makes the individual organization responsible for its actions.

The fact is, the timing of the statement indicated possible alumni pressure had resulted from the D.O.'s naming of specific Greek discrimination cases.

For the administration's attempts to deal with discrimination have been feeble and far between.

At Cornell, administrators gleaned a copy of this column of two weeks ago exposing Kappa Delta's discriminatory clause. Cornell administrators told the local Kappa Delta chapter there (one of the largest and most powerful in the national) that it had until September 1 to eliminate its clause or it would be unceremoniously bounced off campus.

At Syracuse University, administrators sat and watched.

The Sy Oskeroff case, which gobbled up nearly half a Daily Orange front page last week, fared little better.

It was tossed by the dean of men's office with a noncommittal "no promises can be made" to the Discrimination Board, another humpty-dumpty student organization that argues technicalities while the world goes on.

And the recent "no-news" edict passed down by the dean of men means the Daily Orange will have no access to the results of the Sy Oskeroff case.

Speaking with Dean Clifford two days ago, we hit upon the subject of the Daily Orange.

"They make so many mistakes," he said, "we just don't take them seriously any more. Oh, we read it, but we just don't take it seriously."

Whether this quote will be classified as another one of those "mistakes," I do not know. But I do know it was said.

Unfortunately, it is tinged with the same attitude reflected in the, Chancellor's statement on drinking.

"We are always willing to listen to the conclusions of the Joint Student Legislature committee investigating the drinking policy," the Chancellor said, "but there will be no change if one is recommended."

It may in fact be that a no-liquor policy is best for the sanity of a campus of this caliber, but the statement only underscored the futility with which student organizations labor at S. U.

If JSL will be ignored by the Chancellor, then the Student Discrimination Board will be ignored by the dean of men's office.

An informed source told me that brothers of Lambda Chi Alpha have been told to keep their mouths shut about the Sy Oskeroff case, and nothing will be done about it.

But the fact is, the Lambda Chi fraternities will always be told that "nothing will be done about it."

And discriminatory clauses will always be eliminated "at other universities."

And the Daily Orange will never be "taken seriously."

For students are transient factors. What they say will be said again and again during the next generation. And ignored by administrators.

Because administrators are a breed steeped in the "status quo." A breed involved in its own struggles for power and importance. A breed which peddles the rationality of the "educational experience" with its tongue in its cheek.

They try to convince us this is our "educational experience."

While always reminding us that it is "their" university.

Set to Sing

Annapolis, Md., Regent Theater Hosts WAER

WAER will conduct remote broadcasts this weekend from the Oscar Brand folk concert at the Regent Theatre and the Eastern Intercollegiate Wrestling Tournament in Annapolis, Md.

The folk concert, 8:30 p.m. Saturday, features Brand in one part of the program and 12 SU students in the second part. Bob Feldman, student producer of the weekly "Folkways" will produce and direct the concert.

The Syracuse University television-radio center has appropriated approximately $300 to cover expenses for telephone lines and "beeper" reports from the wrestling tournament.

FM radios will be available to students in Flint, Day, Shaw, Kimmel, Marion, Booth, Watson, DellPlain and Sadler dormitories for the wrestling tournament at 7:15 p.m. Saturday.

Personnel for the wrestling broadcast are Barry Lewis, sports director; Dan Stone, announcer and Dick Spencer, engineer.

The weekend broadcasts comprise the biggest week-end of "live-on-location" programming in the history of the student-run FM station.

Shirl Conway of "The Nurses" on the CBS Television Network was a magazine cover girl before acting success came her way.

Piano Lecture, Recital Today

Paul Jacobs, New York Philharmonic Orchestra staff pianist, will lecture at 10 a.m. today and present a piano recital of contemporary works at 8:30 p.m. in Crouse College Auditorium.

Jacobs spent nine years in France, where he performed works by Messiaen, Boulez, Stockhausen and Stravinsky.

He has been pianist for the New York orchestra since 1960. Jacobs also teaches courses in contemporary music at the New School for Social Research.

Next Thursday Otto Luening, professor of music at Columbia and Barnard Colleges, will present examples of electronic music and analyze contemporary techniques in composition.

FILMS

'The Island'

Opening Wednesday night at the Riviera Cinema "The Island" conveys its message without words with a quiet voice and subdued tension.

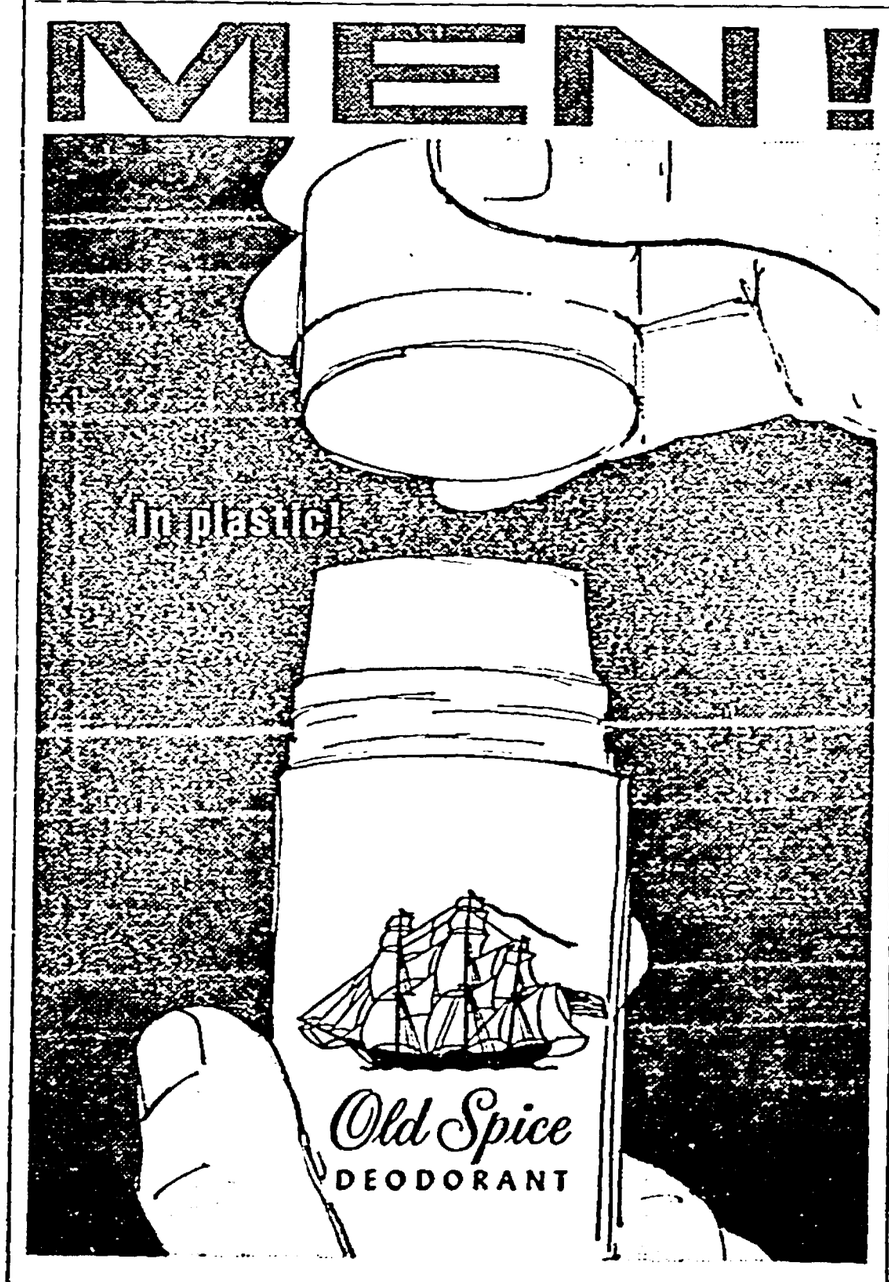
This Japanese film directed by Kaneto Shindo is something more than a documentary about a Japanese farm family living on a secluded island.

Mother, Father and their two sons live on the island, rowing distance from the mainland. Every morning Mom and Dad take the boat to shore and get the water.

The water is important and the film makes that very clear. We see shots of the water as it is poured into the buckets; water in the sea; water as Dad quenches the thirsty crops.

When Mom spills the water by accident one morning, it's more than Dad can take and resolutely he knocks her to the ground.

Almost existential in its picturing of man in nature, even to the favorite existential theme of the dying child, "The Island" sets its family in a beautiful seascape, which is both their enemy and their livelihood.



There are scenes to break up the monotony of the grueling work routine, but even these fail to give relief to the underlying mood of living only to stay alive.

To make his point, director Shindo relies almost entirely on camera techniques. Although the contrast between natural beauty and human hardship is intriguingly depicted, the constant repetition of the family's pointless life spoils the delicacy and hedges on the monotonous.

Junior Exec Council Newsletter

Rather than publish a newsletter as has been customary in the past, the Junior Executive Council takes this opportunity to report its past activities and future projects.

At its first meeting last spring the council divided its members into various departments. By dividing into smaller departments as such it was felt that the sense of individual responsibility and interest in specific areas would make the whole exec council work more efficiently.

PUBLICITY COMMITTEE

The publicity committee directed its activity towards better communication through the Daily Orange and personal visits throughout the university complex.

ACADEMIC COMMITTEE

The academic committee attempted to coordinate a program whereby a specified book would be incorporated into various departmental courses taken by a majority of freshmen. Class discussions, interdepartmental debates, and lectures would be centered around this book. To climax the program the author of the book would appear on campus. It was planned that the program would be carried on by the present freshman class as they progressed through their four years of college. The program would be introduced to each incoming freshman class. Therefore when the original class would become Seniors the whole university would be participating.

SOCIAL COMMITTEE

The President of the junior class traditionally represents his class on the university social committee and has a final vote. There he helped to plan and approve the final activities for Homecoming, Freshman, and Winter Weekends. Working with the President of J.S.G. he proposed a plan to revamp the present structure of the university's social committee.

ORANGE SHAKER COMMITTEE

As our first project, the exec council rallied to participate in the traditional heralding at Spring Weekend and to sell 1963's leftover shakers. We also presented a class skit which was a satire on "Cleopatra" mocking university life. After selling shakers throughout Spring Weekend festivities, at the Freshman orientation picnic, and at the first two home football games, we had completely exhausted our supply.

FRESHMAN CLASS COMMITTEE

The idea for independent freshman elections was initiated and brought about by the junior class last spring. After introducing this idea, the exec council turned it over to the newly-formed J.S.G. Elections Commission which in turn formulated the structure for freshman elections. The junior class actively participated in manning the election booths.

During the summer Burney Croll proposed the idea of having a freshman directory as is found on many other campuses. Logan Salada and Burney, advised by Dean Clifford, achieved a workable plan for this project. The junior class began its work on the book by acquiring statistics about freshman students at registration. Later it was found that final approval had not been given by the administrative departments.

Many can imagine from experiences of their own the extensive "red tape" which followed. However, the council continued to work for this book and was greatly aided by Dean Clifford's administrative "know-how." Dean Clifford gave the final "go-ahead" after we received confirmation of 1,000 copies from sororities, fraternities, and other living centers. Finally the actual work began on the day the "Orange Aid" was formally announced at Pinebrook Conference. Registration cards were alphabetized; pictures were trimmed; form sheets were typed; pictures were numbered and matched to the form sheets, etc. This work was carried out at the J.S.G. office for many hours and weeks. Aid came from sources other than the exec council.

An intensive sales campaign, carried on in living centers and the book store, resulted in almost a complete sellout the first day. Continual sales were carried on personally by members of the exec council on campus. A limited number of "Orange Aids" can still be purchased for $1.00 at Phi Sigma Sigma sorority at 113 Euclid Avenue on weekdays after 1:00 p.m.

ORANGE GUIDE COMMITTEE

The junior class felt that the present "Orange Guide" sent out to incoming freshmen was inadequate and needed to be revamped. A plan was proposed to combine outdated and superfluous pamphlets. It will be arranged so that supplements of current information such as newly-elected officers can be inserted. Next year the booklet will be given to all classes. In years to follow it will be given only to the incoming freshmen with supplements being given to all other students.

We have included the major activities of the junior class. Many other ideas such as the luncheon for presidents of major organizations with administration officials have been originated by members of the exec council. The council feels that it has done its best to represent the junior class in all its endeavors. It sincerely hopes that successive class governments will continue programs we have started and will carry on the spirit of service we have initiated.

History of Drinking Policy--Part I

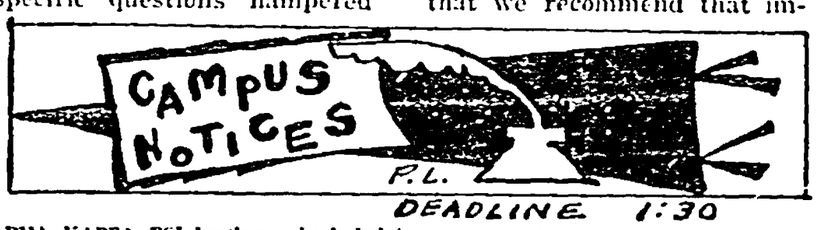
sonal Admin.; Charles Noble, Dean of Chapel; Frank P. Piskor, V.P. for Academic Affairs, Past S.U. Dean of Men, 1937-53, under whom the last change in Drinking Policy was seen.



I have also accumulated an amount of personal opinions from other faculty members, alumni, parents and you students. I am sure the above are reliable, now all that remains is that I piece together their separate ideas and philosophies into a comprehensive account of why things are as they are.

My biggest problem was finding a concrete written standard and all along the uncanny lack of evidence on specific questions hampered me, but as I went from one source, I was recommended to another and in this way the information was eventually recorded, sometimes given reluctantly, round about and sometimes outright and straight. JSL, good luck.

The big question, I feel, is whether this can ever become a wet campus. Theoretically and practically - no. Here's what I found out and why.

At the convention on the conception of the University it was resolved, "That this State Convention of the Methodist Episcopal Church of New York approves of the plan to establish without delay in the City of Syracuse or its immediate vicinity, a first class university, and that we recommend that immediate awareness be taken to raise at least $500,000 to endow the university". When the money was partly raised Dr. Taylor of the Methodist Episcopal Eastern Conference said, "A great Methodist University for the Empire State is now a certainty, Glory be to God". Amen. The University was subsequently chartered on March 30, 1870 in accordance with an act of the New York State Legislature. Dr. Alexander Winchell became its first Chancellor but he soon retired due to domestic problems. Chancellor Haven, next came from his post at the Methodist School at Troy N.Y. Then came Chancellor Sims who was pastor of Summerfield Methodist Church of Brooklyn. He finished out the century.

Davis Cites Jewish Love

problems of adjustment confronting the Jew in the world of today.

Davis' seven factors are:

1—The creation of new settlements. "From the 1880's to the 1950's," Davis said, "90 per cent of the world's Jewry has settled in these establishments."

About half of the world's Jews are in the United States. Behind the United States in population are Israel and the USSR.

2—The continuing enlargements of cultural patterns. Not only have the Jews contributed to their host countries, but the host has greatly influenced the Jew, Davis said.

Historic Roll

This means, he said, that "the roll of historic tradition can't be as powerful. Many Jews are confused in self-identification. They don't want to detach from the old."

3—The structure of the Jewish community in relation to the host.

As an example Davis cited Canada, the United States and Argentina. "In Canada," he said "the Jewish culture is treated as a minority in a majority."

"In the U.S. Judaism is treated from the standpoint of religion. And in Argentina Jews are considered as an ethnic group," he said.

4—The increase in variety of Jewish identification.

5—Physical proximity of cultures in an air age. Said Davis. "Geography was once the enemy of the Jew. Now it is its friend."

6—The synagogue has become an organ of social and civic function as well as religious.

7—The state of Israel has become a creative force.

Davis emphasized that meeting the problems of contemporary world knowledge was the main tool. This, he concluded, was symbolized in the motto of Syracuse, "Knowledge Crowns Those Who Seek Her."

Chancellor William P. Tolley spoke briefly before the lecture explaining the series and thanking Mr. Rudolph who was present, for making it possible.

Shirl Conway of "The Nurses" made her Broadway debut in Eddie Cantor's "Banjo Eyes."

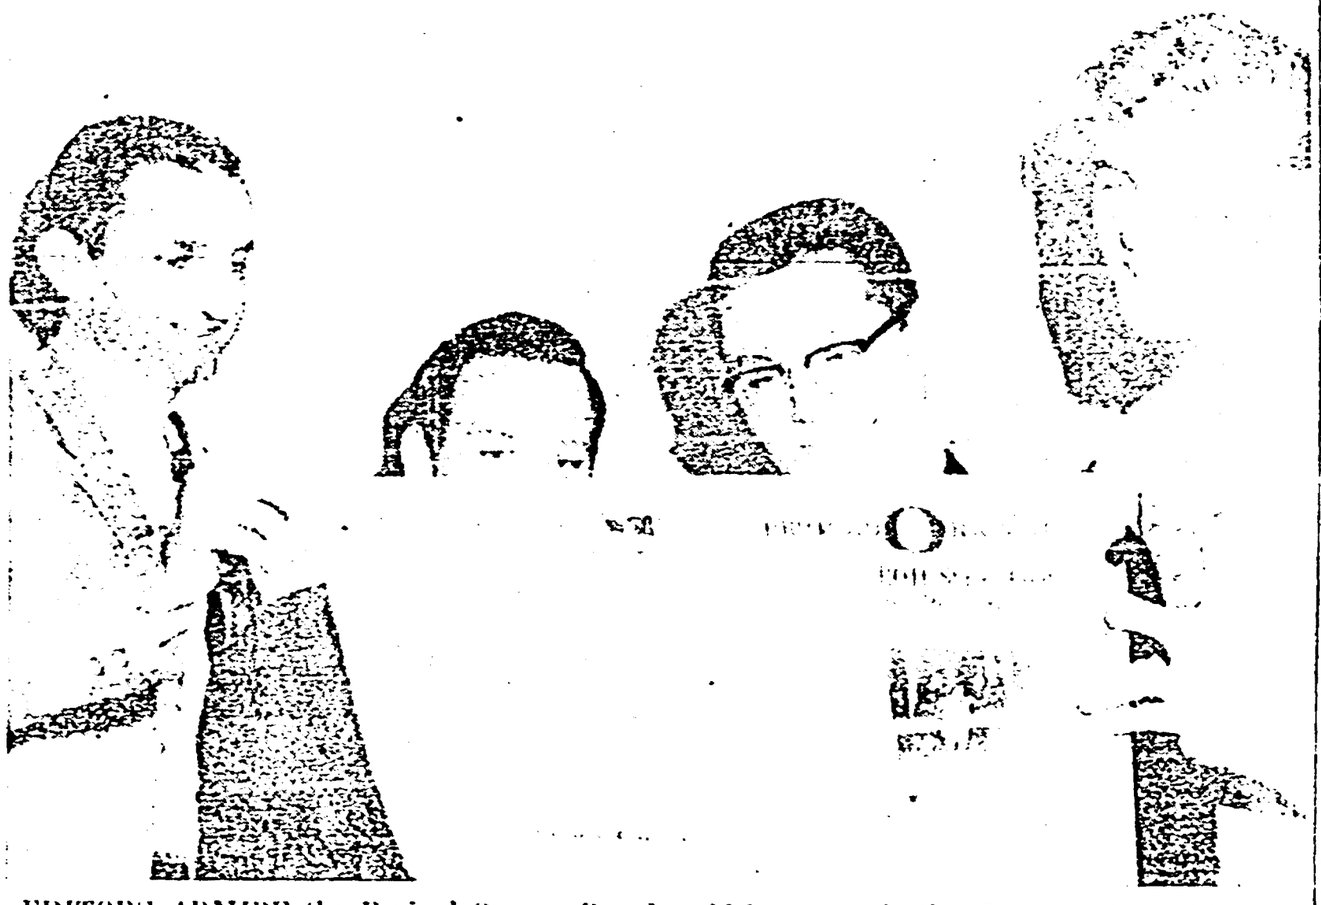
It's now a fact: every Ford-built car in '63 has self-adjusting brakes

"Give us a brake," Ford Motor Company engineers were told, "that will automatically compensate for lining wear whenever an adjustment is needed—and make it work for the entire life of the lining."

Tough assignment—but not insurmountable. Today, not only does every Ford-built car boast self-adjusting brakes, but the design is so excellent that adjustments can be made more precisely than by hand.



This Ford-pioneered concept is not complex. Key to it is a simple mechanism which automatically maintains proper clearance between brake drum and lining.

Self-adjustment takes place when the brakes are applied while backing up. This adjustment normally occurs but once in several hundred miles of driving. The brake pedal stays up, providing full pedal reserve for braking.

Another assignment completed—and another example of how Ford Motor Company provides engineering leadership for the American Road.

Nassau Dems Speak Today on Campus

Nassau County will be represented on campus at the Young Democrats meeting at 3 p.m. today in Maxwell Auditorium when Eugene Nickerson, Nassau County executive, and John English, chairman of the Democratic party in Nassau County, will speak.

Nickerson is a possible future candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, with English as his campaign manager.

English is an attorney and a commissioner of elections in Nassau County. He will speak on "The Responsibilities of Political Parties in the '60's."

Nickerson received his bachelor's degree from Harvard University and his bachelor of law degree from Columbia Law School. At Columbia he was a Kent scholar and an editor of the Columbia Law Review.

Nickerson was a law secretary to Chief Justice Harlan F. Stone and is a member of the New York and the Supreme Court Bars.

His topic will be "Responsibilities of the State and Local Governments in the '60's."

Yesterday Nickerson and English participated in a graduate faculty-student seminar on suburban government and politics.

NYU Prof to Talk At 'Orchid Dinner'

Dr. Ethel J. Alpenfels, professor at New York University's School of Education, will discuss "American Women: The Changing Image" at tonight's annual Orchid Dinner of the College of Home Economics.

The banquet opens at 6:30 p.m. in Sadler Hall. Dean Barbara P. Griggs will introduce Dr. Alpenfels; Dr. Elizabeth Manwell will be toastmistress.

The home economics senior with the highest academic average will be honored at the dinner with an orchid. Faculty will present other awards to other top students.

A distinguished anthropologist and socialogist, Dr. Alpenfels, is author of two books and numerous monographs. She has served as an editor for the Encyclopedia Britannica.

Prof. Alpenfels is a member of several professional organizations and has been honored bythe American Women's Assn., National Assn. of Negro Women, Federation of Jewish Women's Organizations and the Panhellenic Society of the United States.

Cabinet, rather than to the university personnel committee, as is now done.

Opposition

Robert Stern, chairman of the JSL student conduct and welfare committee, summed up the case for the opposition to the requirement that the speaker and speaker pro tempore be juniors when elected. He commented "You can't judge capability by years in college or by average, although a reasonable average should be necessary."

Another major facet of the constitution reverses the Pinebrook Conference resolution calling for two, rather than the present six, senators-at-large from each class. The constitution will retain the six senator clause.

Increased duties for the senators-at-large may also be added. A proposal calls for six senators-at-large to be added to the JSL steering committee, the governing body of the legislature.

Three of the added senators will be seniors, two will be juniors and one will be a sophomore, as the proposal now stands. Opposition feels that no class distinction should be made and two should be selected from each class.

GERRY MANNING

Sharpshooting UConn Quintet Meets Orange

By BILL CRONAUER

Riding the crest of its highest scoring rampage in seven years, a confident Orange basketball team entertains the University of Connecticut tonight at Manley Field House.

The UConns won the Yankee Conference title last weekend and received an invitation to the NCAA tourament. They oppose West Virginia in the opening round of the tourney on Monday.

Syracuse turned in its first performance of the season Tuesday with a 100-76 romp over Colgate.

"Everyone was up sky high for the Colgate game," stated Piety Coach Fred Lewis. "Our agressive defensive coupled with our fine rebounding meant the difference."

Syracuse steps onto the court tonight against its tallest opposition of the season. The Huskies' front line averages 6-8 in height.

Top performer for the visiting UConn squad is 6-10 center Ed Slomcenski. The 240-pound junior boasts a 15 ppg scoring average and a 52 per cent shooting mark.

The Connecticut strong man is the number two rebounder on the Huskie squad with 11.1 retrives per contest.

The UConn forwards are 6-7 sophomore Toby Kimball and 6-6 senior Gerry Manning. Kimball, the leading Connecticut rebounder (15.7 a game), has chipped in 14.6 ppg.

Manning owns a fine corner jump shot and has good speed for a big man. He has averaged 12.7 ppg this season.

In the backcourt, the Huskies open with 6-1 junior Dom Perno and 6-0 senior captain Andy Czuchry.

Perno has an eight point norm while Czuchry accounts for five scores a contest.

However, the big man among the UConn guards is reserve Dale Comey. Comey, a 5-9 spark plug, has come off the bench to post 11.5 ppg.

Lewis figures to go with his usual starting lineup of Carl Vernick (11.3 ppg), Herb Foster (10.4), Jim Seaman (8.4), Manny Klutchkowski (7.1) and Dick Finley (5.3).

Forwards Phil Schoff and Bob Murray will be platooned up front against the taller UConns.

Matmen At Annapolis Preparing For EIWA

By VIN ZUKOWSKI

Each time an SU grappler entered the wrestling room, he was challenged by an ultimatum: "Do you feel tough? Do you act tough?? Are you tough??? If you can answer yes—you belong here!!! If not . . ."

Nine tough athletes answered and proved they belonged. And a perfect season resulted. Again, the Orange wrestlers are challenged. This time by 11 opponents in the 50th Eastern Intercollegiate Wrestling Association Tournament.

Yesterday after practice, the team drove to Annapolis, Md., host city of the meet on March 8-9. Coach Scandura will hold a light practice today. Friday, the competition begins at 1:00 p.m. and 8:00 p.m. Saturday, the matches resume at 12:30 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. WAER will broadcast the tournament.

Before leaving, Coach Scandura said, "The boys are as ready as they're going to be. They'll give a good account of themselves. With enough determination and our share of luck, we'll come off the mats all right. Once you've prepared all year, you go out and do the best you can."

Penn State

All eyes [illegible] the AEIW defending champions. Scandura placed special emphasis on Penn State, [illegible] seven of eight opponents but lost to SU 6-23.

"Penn State held us to a close score during the season and lost two other close matches. Penn State is a darkhorse among the prime contenders but has the men to take it."

The Naval Academy will mat four high-placing vets from the '62 tourney. Mike Harmon, undefeated this season, holds the 137-lb. championship. Flanking him are Fred Crawford, fourth in the 123-lb. class, Dennis Farrar, second at 130 lbs. and Dave Carey, third at 157 lbs. In dual competition, Navy was only 4-3 and lost to Syracuse.

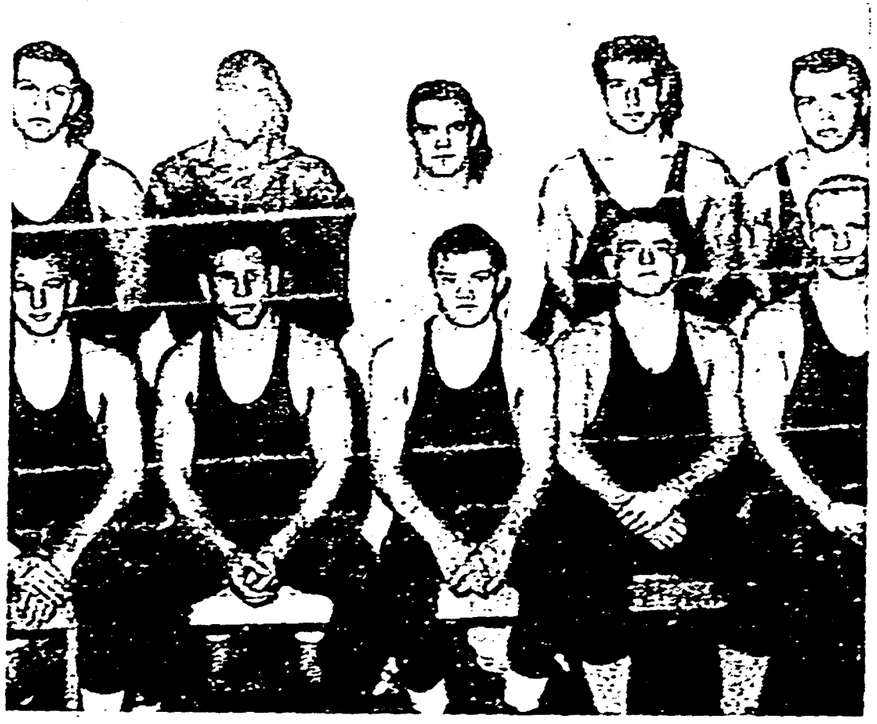
Unheralded Temple rated Scandura's close look. "Temple is a young team. They're not strong enough for the championship, but they could upset a favorite."

Rutgers has two individuals capable of giving two SU big men sizeable pain. Ed Sharer, unlimited, grabbed last year's title as a sophomore. "Bo" Nance may be seeded against him. Gerry Everling's potential opponent is Dennis Focht, sixth placer in 1962.

Army and Pitt, both beaten by Syracuse, will be top contenders. Rounding out the field are Ithaca, Franklin and Marshall, and, except for Dartmouth, all the Ivy League teams.

150 Compete

These teams will send 141 men into competition. Of the nine SU participants, Scandura stated, "Any one of the boys could go all the way. Many of the opponents will be even. Our only concern is that we don't lose to anyone we should beat. The boys we beat before, but could give us trouble, must be taken again."



He added that this competition would be a team effort. However, once an individual is on the mat he is there alone. The record supports the fact that SU grapplers can stand alone.

Wrestling at 123-lbs., Terry Haise finished the season with a personal 8-1 record, including a win over the Eastern's defending champ. Haise was named to the NCAA first team.

Sonny

In the 130-lb. class, Sonny Greenhaulgh, NCAA honorable mention, copped the Coast Guard tourney and continued to a 7-1-1 ledger. Penn State's Haney, top seeded in the Easterns, inflicted the loss. Greenhaulgh deadlocked second-seeded Johnson becoming the first man ever to take Johnson down and the first blemish on his record in 90 bouts.

The next weight class, 137-lbs., cards Jim Murrin, also honorable mention. Murrin's 7-1-1 mark includes a win over Lehigh's Pat Smartt, '62's tourney 130-lb. champ. However, Murrin was edged 2-1 by the 137-lb. defending champ Harman.

Dick Slutzsky, 147-lbs., will carry a 5-2-1 record into the Easterns. His two defeats were inflicted by undefeated George Edwards (Penn State) and national semi-finalist Vachavelli of Ithaca. Slutzsky also attained honorable mention in NCAA polls.

Although losing to Pendleton, the Eastern champ, in a season match, George Reidner, 157-lbs., placed at the Coast Guard tournament and suffered only one other defeat.

Captaining the team, 167-lb. Gary Sirota compiled an individual 6-1-1 mark and received NCAA honorable mention. The lone loss was a 0-1 decision to NCAA champion Natvig (Army).

Heavies

At the high end of the scale, Lew Robberhts, 177-lbs., marked five in the victory column. Gerry Everling, 191-lbs., and Jim Nance, unlimited, swept all opposition mounting a 7-0 and 8-0 mark, respectively.

Though the Orange is a young team—only Greenhaulgh and Sirota are seniors—and failed to place a finalist in the 1962 tournament, they loom big in Annapolis. The Orange are tough enough to belong at the tourney—the outcome will show how tough.

'Romeo' Premieres

Shakespeare makes his second appearance on the Hill this week when Boar's Head opens its production of "Romeo and Juliet" at 8:30 p.m. Saturday on the Boar's Head Stage in the Drama Building.

The play, directed by G.F. Reidenbaugh, starts Rick Miller and Bonnie Cousins in the lead roles.

The specially constructed stage, designed by Joseph Morton, will utilize five wide-span levels and a 10-foot balcony. The pillared playing area extends toward the audience.

Marion Present will play Juliet's nurse.

Also in the cast are EllenJoy Schindler, as Lady Capulet; Richard Folmer, Capulet; Peter Maloney, the servant Peter; Tom McKee, Mercutio; Stu Dillon, Benvolio; Ken Purlman, Tybalt; Ed Roman, Paris; Kathy Bindert, Lady Montague; and Dave Hamilton, Lord Montague.

Miller has appeared in "Moony's Kid Don't Cry" and will be seen in "A Phoenix Too Frequent." He will join the company representing Syracuse at the Yale Drama Festival with "Endgame."

Miss Cousins, who has been production assistant at New York's Shakespeare Festival, has acted in "Little Mary Sunshine" and "This Property is Condemned."

Assistant director of "Romeo and Juliet" is Manfred Berman, with Dave Hamilton stage manager.

TRAGIC TRIO — BONNIE COUSINS, Juliet, RICHARD HARRIS, the Friar, and RICK MILLER, Romeo.

Kenya No Congo, More Responsible Amalemba States

By DANIEL RITEY
Junior Editor

"Our country wants not only political freedom but also economic security. We won't develop into another Congo because they got independence too soon and we have learned from their mistakes."

Musa Amalemba, Kenya's minister of housing, expressed these sentiments at Thursday night's citizenship lecture in Hendricks Chapel.

At present, Kenya is the last East African land not yet free, "but we want it to be the best freedom in East Africa," Amalemba said. "We want other countries to envy us, and that is why we are taking so long on our constitution."

Amalemba said. "We must have a crash program to train Africans in taking over civil service jobs from the British." Although partly successful in the public administration department, "we still need more manpower in science and technology," the minister added.

Politics, Amalemba continued, is serious business in Kenya. "It is very dangerous to voice disapproval of one's party actions or to come out against another party at the wrong place or time," he noted.

Because of this, political leaders have a great responsibility and what they say is usually taken to be public opinion, Amalemba said.

"The British cannot be blamed for their actions in Africa, because it is their nature not to recognize a problem until it is very serious," the Kenyan administrator commented.

Amalemba traced the development of his country from the first coming of the white man to the present. Kenya will begin internal self-government in about two months.

Africans would not have made so many demands over the years if the purpose of the British had been to develop Africa's potential, he explained. "But they came to conduct business and settled on the good land," Amalemba noted.

"The missionaries who came with them had a genuine desire to bring the word of God, but their action caused the Africans to distrust them. In trying

Summer Reading Program Discussion Today at HBC

Procedures for application and acceptance to the summer Humanities Reading Program will be discussed at an open meeting at 4 p.m. today in Gifford Auditorium, H. B. Crouse Hall.

Dr. C. G. Christofides, director of the program, will also distribute a reading list at the meeting.

This year's reading program will begin with ideas of the Enlightenment, dealing with the philosophical background of the American and French Revolutions and Romanticism as a reaction to the age of reason.

The advance of the realistic novel in the nineteenth century will be discussed, and Darwinism, Marxism and scientism investigated.

Consideration will be given to the impact of World Wars I and II on literary, philosophical and religious thought.

In an assessment of Western fine arts and culture at midcentury, guest lecturers will discuss modern art, theater and music.

At the meeting today, Dr. Christofides will discuss "The Three Faces of Art" and present slides of his documentation of Upper Nile temples which may be submerged when the Aswan Dam is completed.

He will draw parallels between statues in these temples, sculptures in the Parthenon and statues at Chartres Cathedral.

Orchid to Miss Sibson

Senior Sandra Sibson was named Orchid Girl at the 29th annual Orchid Dinner of the College of Home Economics Thursday night.

The award traditionally goes to the graduating home ec senior with the highest cumulative average.

Also honored were Margery Anderson, outstanding sophomore; Judith Nonnenmocher, outstanding freshman; and Joan Wheeler, outstanding in foods and nutrition work.

Hike Saturday

Weather permitting, the "Crusade to Utica" will depart from the Syracuse University campus at 6 a.m. Saturday. If all goes as expected, the nearly 40 hikers will arrive in Utica at 8 p.m. the same day.

Joint Student Government special service director Douglas Long asks all hikers to meet in front of Hendricks Chapel at 6 a.m. wearing hiking boots or oxfords, with two pairs of socks. Warm, but not heavy, clothing is recommended.

Folk Sing Tonight: Brand, Students

Folk music-conscious Syracuse University will have an opportunity to hear and see its own, and a professional, practioners of the art today.

Oscar Brand and 12 SU students will appear in a concert at 8:30 p.m. today at the Regent Theater. Sponsored by the University Bookstore, Brand will autograph his books and records at the Corner Store at 2 p.m. today.

Two hours later, he will appear at a reception in Watson Lounge.

The 12 students sharing the Regent stage with Brand are the Gallows Singers from Utica College (F. Kurt Rolfes, Barry Damsky, David Sumberg and Lynn Jones), the Crows (Robert Chaffer, Robert Goetinger and Jerry Grandy), Audrey Freeman, Steven Moore, Ralph Stockmaer, Lorraine Heyman, Elaine Meltzer and Morty Jacoby.

They were chosen from about 30 students who auditioned for the concert.

WAER-FM, 88.3 mc, will broadcast the program "live" from the Regent.

Brand is probably most famous for his eight "Bawdy Song" records. In addition he has cut over 20 other discs.

He has also written books, movie scripts, television shows and commercials.

Every Sunday since 1945, Brand has presented the award-winning "Folksong Festival," rebroadcast overseas by the United States Information Agency.

Law College Holds Dinner

Delmar Karlen, professor at New York University School of Law, will speak at the SU College of Law annual dinner at 8 p.m. Saturday in the Hotel Syracuse main ballroom.

College of Law Dean Ralph E. Kharas will present student awards for academic excellence.

Prof. Karlen received his bachelor's degree at the University of Wisconsin and his bachelor of law degree at Columbia University.

He has taught at the University of Wisconsin and the University of Chicago.

In 1956 Karlen served as American co-director of the Legal Research Institute at Ankara, Turkey.

Keep a Good Thing Alive

Today at 4 p.m. in Gifford Auditorium an open meeting will be held to explain the Summer Humanities Reading Program.

Established two years ago under a $10,000 grant from the Ford Foundation's Fund for the Advancement of Learning, the program is one of the unique educational experiences to be found at Syracuse University.

But unless the students of Syracuse University act they may lose this opportunity as well as create an embarrassment for the University.

The first year the program was in operation the results were so successful that despite a sub-capacity enrollment of 65 students more foundation support was awarded in order to establish similar programs in the social and natural sciences.

But last year student support instead of increasing strangely diminished. While each program is designed for 100 students only 40 participated in the Humanities course, eight in the natural science and five in the social science.

Needless to say, the natural science and social science programs have been discontinued. The future of the Humanities course is in doubt.

For a university with over 7000 undergraduates this is hard to explain.

The Summer Humanities Reading Program is an attempt by Syracuse University to serve educationally-minded students. The course was designed with summer vacation and employment in mind, meeting for two weeks in June and two weeks before the start of classes in September. Because of foundation support the cost is nominal: only $325 for seven credits, room and board; scholarships are available.

The university has recently added additional grants for scholarships.

But the most attractive feature of the program is the unduplicated intellectual atmosphere: important ideas, superior teaching, small discussion groups, and the close-knit companionship of faculty and similarly interested students.

Every academically-minded student, and there are many at today's Syracuse University, should come to this afternoon's meeting and carefully consider participating in this program. After three years, this may be the last chance to take advantage of an excellent opportunity.

LETTERS

Clarified

To the Editor:

Mr. Michael S. Gelacak, past president of Alpha Tau Omega fraternity, has clarified, once and for all, the position of Syracuse fraternities on the issue of discrimination. (DO Mar. 4) He implies that Christian fraternities are based on rituals peculiar to Christianity.

Therefore, non-Christians would not find fraternities practicing such rituals to their liking. The fraternities, by denying membership to persons outside of a specific religious faith, are acting for the good of the rejectee; for the primary purpose is to prevent an undesirable and uncomfortable conflict of religious ideas that might embarrass a member from a minority religious group.

This position, and a popular one it is, a clear and eloquent clarification and one with which any thinking person, regardless of his cigarette brand, must reckon.

Now that Mr. Gelacak has clarified the issue, the noisy people shouting for an end to fraternity discrimination can return to their studies and cease the writing of lengthy letters. For what Mr. Gelacak has told us is that all Christians are welcome to be considered as possible members of Christian fraternities.

As such, it is encouraging to note that Negroes—Christian Negroes to be sure—are now considered potential members. The lack of Negroes in fraternities at the present time is apparently due to Negroes failing to apply for membership, believing as they did, that discrimination was along racial as well as religious lines.

But now that this distinction between racial and religious discrimination has been clarified, Christian Negroes can look forward to becoming happy, prosperous members of Christian fraternities. Or did I misunderstand you Mr. Gelacak?

To the Editor:

I am just catching my breath after the big blow of January 29th. Thank you so very much for your robust support of the show.

That is the kind of support, after such a sudden reversal and rebuke, that puts the sparkle back in our eyes and the spring back in our step. I speak for the staff as well as myself.

Psychologically it wouldn't have been possible for us to continue doing a show a day with any kind of genuine gaiety if we had not received such massive doses of encouragement from columns such as yours and marvelous letters that have arrived. Lots from the Syracuse area, I might add.

Isn't it ironic that we have this substantial proof of literally thousands of letters (over 50,000 as of this morning) from people all over the United States, people with names and addresses (and immense charm) who have lavished us not only with approval but old fashioned affection—and yet we have failed to pass the bleak, mechanical rating test that sample only a few hundred anonymous folks. But they control the whole industry!

My appreciation and every good wish.

Corwin

To the Editor:

"Syracuse University recommends promotion for a Faculty Member on the basis of three factors: A. Teaching ability B. Productive scholarship: involving competence in scholarship and/or research C. University and public service: implying participation in University and community activities."—Faculty Manual, Syracuse University, 1962-63.

It seems obvious that the most difficult factor to evaluate in the above quote is teaching ability. Because it is the most difficult, this does not mean that it should be ignored. The administration, in awarding promotions, seems to place more emphasis on a professor's research and publishing prowess as pointed out by Mr. Corwin, thus probably ignoring teaching ability.

No doubt, the administration of Syracuse University places high value on the research work of its faculty. However it seems somewhat hypocritical to see the following statement concerning student-faculty relations, "It is the philosophy of this University that a student's first responsibility is to the academic side of college life. In like manner, an instructor's first obligation is to his classes and students." (ibid. p. 3) It appears that the University discourages this ideal by rewarding other activities.

In pointing out the shortcomings of the administration, Mr. Corwin liberates the individual professor from any personal responsibility. Indeed the instructor must satisfy the God (or Devil) who brings him the bread, but this does not relieve him of his personal responsibility to his students, who incidently at Syracuse pay a tidy sum for their instruction. This situation is analogous to problems which exist in other professions. Must a policeman sell out by taking graft because his superiors do not encourage honesty? Must a teacher sell out on his students? I think not. In my experience I have had excellent teachers who concommitantly carried on top grade research. Teaching is a personal commitment.

To the Editor:

We would like to take this opportunity to thank the many fellow-students who helped to make this years International Week a great success.

The regional groups, made up of students from almost any part of the world, made a great contribution with their active participation. We would also like to thank the sororities and fraternities, who invited many foreign students during International Week.

Without the active help of the Campus Peace Corps, or International Student Guides as the are commonly called, the week would have lacked a lot. The ISGs are our most faithful helpers, not only during International Week but also throughout the year. We would also like to express our thanks to the Student Union Board for their cooperation and last but not least the Daily Orange for the excellent coverage they gave us.

Thank you very much again.

WAER

To the Editor:

Although WAER chose to ignore Mr. Greenwald's biannual column of tears, misquotes and paraphrases concerning our refusal to broadcast the earth-shaking event of a fraternity debate, I would now like to bring a few details to the attention of our supposedly "deprived" student body and the editors of the Daily Orange.

In your eagerness to make room for the startling news that "Shirl Conway of 'The Nurses' — was a magazine cover girl before acting success came her way" you condensed and rewrote our press release on WAER'S coverage of the Eastern Intercollegiate Wrestling Tournament and the Oscar Brand Folk Concert. In the inimitable style of your talented re-writers and editors, you managed to convey that the Brand Concert would be broadcast at "8:30 p.m., Saturday" when our release clearly stated that it would be carried live at 8:30 FRIDAY. It is rather difficult to broadcast an event live 24 hours after it has taken place.

Despite Mr. Greenwald's piteous and highly poetic plea to "wash the dirty linen along with the dress shirts," it seems that you preferred to devote twice as much space to the "Dirty Linen" column, as you did to a story of "dress shirt" activities.

I might remind you that the university is paying well over $400 to enable us to carry these two events to the student body whom you say we "ignore" in our programming. One of the details which you elected to omit from our story was the fact that a portion of the wrestling tournament would be piped into the Manley Fieldhouse Saturday night between the two basketball games.

Although your sports editor Allan Kort plans to listen to WAER's coverage of the tournament rather than go to Annapolis himself to cover it for the Daily Orange, he neglected to mention on the sports page what time we are broadcasting the event.

Furthermore, if the Daily Orange is as concerned about the campus's "lack of coverage" on WAER as Mr. Greenwald would have us believe, perhaps such momentous front page news items as taking tee shirts to Carol Lucha, hiking to Utica and re-hashing the worn old topic of drinking policies might bow to the information that we carried former Dean Harlan Cleveland's press conference on Tuesday (no mention in the D.O.) and Kenneth Keating's challenge to President Kennedy (three lines in the D.O.).

Is it naive of me to assume that the student body would rather be informed of the above topics than another in the endless series of "you discriminate," "No we don't" debates? Is it beyond the realm of the Daily Orange's comprehension to see the differing news values between another college debate attended by 200 "required" pledges and the two programs covering a prominent folk singer and the third best wrestling team in the country?

Sincerely,
JB Barrett
Public Relations Director

Wonder

To the Editor:

Though I agree that there are obvious, pathetic, and, in some instances, tragic shortcomings in the fraternity-sorority system, I am wondering whether the methods employed by Mr. Corwin to bring about their eradication are the best.

Will sarcasm and vilification help to achieve the elimination of discriminatory clauses and aid in the construction of a healthy and constructive Greek system devoted to other than social ideals or serve only to harden the opposition, and force its fence-straddling members who have genuine doubts to choose the only possible side? In short, which methods are most efficacious: those of a reasoning Christ or a sword-bearing Mohammedan?

'Antigone' Sunday

A reading of Sophocles' "Antigone" will be presented by the SU Readers' Theater 8 p.m. Sunday, March 10 and Tuesday, March 12 in Gifford Auditorium, Huntington B. Crouse Hall.

Featured in the cast of 14 are Linda Sternberg, Antigone; Palmer Dante, Creon; Clyde Cawley, Haimon; Andrea Gurner, Ismene; Arthur Shapera, Teirisias; Ron Corwin, the Messenger; Henry Kahn, the Century; and Kolver Mowers, the leader of the Chorus.

The reading, which is open to the public, is directed by Harold Hogstrom, a graduate student in the department of oral interpretation.

The readers will wear costumes suggesting ancient Greek dress. "We wanted something more dignified than street attire," Hogstrom explained.

The cast, arranged in two groups on either side of the stage, will come forward to speak. "There is no communication between the other people on the stage," Hogstrom continued. "The work is thrown into the laps of the audience."

The 4 Men of the Juilliard Quartet

The Juilliard String Quartet, appearing in Syracuse Saturday evening at the Nottingham High School auditorium, are musicians with an interesting diversity of backgrounds and interests.

First violinist Robert Mann was born in Portland, Ore. and come to the Juilliard School to complete his musical training. A composer as well as a concert and recording soloist, the late Dimitri Mitropoulus included Mann's compositions in his programs. Mann loves the outdoors, and spends as much time as possible in the Rockies with his wife and young children.

Isidore Cohen, the second violinist, is a native New Yorker and also an alumnus of Juilliard. He has been a member of a number of chamber music ensembles before joining the Juilliard Quartet. Married and the father of two children, Cohen is also a cat-fancier and a cactus-gardener.

Violist Raphael Hillyer is a native of Ithaca and attended the Curtis Institute in Philadelphia. He holds an A.B. degree in mathematics from Dartmouth and an M.A. from Harvard. His hobbies are modern art and foreign language. He speaks Russian, Japanese and Korean.

Claus Adam, the Quartet's cellist, was born in Indonesia, attending schools in Europe. He came to the U.S. when he won a Philharmonic Scholarship. Married to a painter, Adam is an ardent photographer and a collector of oriental art.

Sponsored by the Syracuse Friends of Chamber Music the Quartet will play Haydn's Quartet in E Flat Major, Opus 65; the Elliott Carter Quartet No. 2 (1959), which they premiered; and the Beethoven Quartet in C Major, Opus 74, the "harp" quartet.

Tickets cost $2.50, $1.50 for students. They may be purchased at Olmstead's or at the concert.

Band Plays At Crouse

The Syracuse University Symphonic Band, Harwood Simmons conducting, will give a concert 4 p.m. Sunday in Crouse College Auditorium.

The program will consist of Overture to Le Roi D'Ys by Lal; Elsa's Procession from Wagner's Lohengrin; the Allegro from La Sultane by Couperin as arranged by Milhouad, a Frescobaldi Toccata, the Overture to Richard III by German, and Pines of the Appian Way from the Pines of Rome by Respighi.

The concert features free admission and campus parking.

THIS WEEKEND

RIVIERA-CINEMA — It's cultural anthr-apology time at the Riv with the Japanese "The Island." Up the island, down the island this agrarian couple go lugging buckets of water. Up and down, again and again. They sweat, they endure. You're chugging popcorn, guzzling sodapop. It's an impressive, though somewhat overdone film. Makes us rich Yanki Imperialists feel a bit guilty though. "Island" at 6:45 & 9:55 p.m. Co-feature "End of Desire" at 8:25 p.m.

KEITH'S — Wouldn't be surprised if the Chancellor saw "Days of Wine and Roses" before reiterating SU's anti-booze policy. Powerful stuff, alcohol. Jack Lemmon and Lee Remick are almost as powerful in this damning of drink movie. "Strongroom" is a pretty watery chaser. "Roses" at 7 & 10:55 p.m. "Room" at 8:55 p.m.

PARAMOUNT — Flubber, in case you forgot, is a kind of anti-gravity silly putty. "Son of Flubber" is a kind of anti-gravity invisible gas. "Son of Flubber" also is a few million for Uncle Walt's vault. Doors open at 11 a.m. in case you want to take the kids. If your date has a 3-year old mind take her at 7:20 or 9:52 p.m. Maybe they'll open the balcony.

LOEW'S — "Diamond Head" is a colorful, inter-racial, saga about Hawaii. Unfortunately, in flying the footage from the islands to Hollywood the plane forgot to crash into the ocean and we have to see it. Charlton Heston plays the fraternity man who doesn't like this mixing the race stuff. "Glass Bottom" 6:18 & 9:42. "Hero" at 8:08 p.m.

ECKEL — Shine's Showcase is still playing the Second World War. Forty-two stars grunt and groan, smile and die, mutter and salute for three hours as a cast of thousands recreates D-Day. Those of you who spent $2.50 to catch those World War II vets eating up the action can now eat your wallets. Student tickets now cost 90 cents. The war begins at 8:17 p.m. The Star Spangled Banner begins at 8:15 p.m. Ron Corwin can miss that part.

SHOPPINGTOWN — Marlon Brando's still tripping up Trever Howard in "Mutiny on the Bounty" at Syracuse's underground swimming pool. These Tahitian girls are still making audiences wonder what's keeping those leis up. A few are wondering what keeps Marlon straight. One or two are asking whatever happened to Clark Gable and Charles Laughton. Personally, we're wondering when some nice chick with a car's going to drive us out to 'Town. Maybe we'll wait for the Paramount to get it so we can hoot at the out-of-focus projection. For those who can't wait, the swishy sea begins at 8 p.m.

WAER Heads Named Today

The new WAER program director and production director will be announced at 3 p.m. today.

It's the rich-flavor leaf that does it! Among L&M's choice tobaccos there's more longer-aged, extra-cured leaf than even in some unfiltered cigarettes. And L&M's filter is the modern filter—all white, inside and outside—so only pure white touches your lips. L&M's the filter cigarette for people who really like to smoke.

History of Drinking Policy--Part II

THE FOLLOWING is part of the long history of the drinking policy at Syracuse University. It is the result of over a month of research, both in the archives, interviews with policy makers and outside sources. The article is written by Jan Fowler, a sophomore, who stated his purpose as an attempt to "put an end to the 'sword rattling' that has gone on in the last several decades."

By JAN FOWLER

Officially, this university was not inaugurated as a Methodist University. At the inauguration ceremony the principle speaker concluded, "We propose no narrow - minded sectarianism on the one hand, nor infidelity on the other. We are, in the words of our fundamental law, devoted to the promotion of Christian learning". But, the precedent of this University was set by the old Genesee Methodist Seminary. Legally it was Methodist.

For it does say in the original charter that it will be under the "control and general patronage of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the State of New York" (the revised charter of 1953 does not contain this and at this time Methodist "control" legally ended). In fact only two trustees are sponsored by the Methodist Church where formally all were, the tradition lingers. There are now twice as many Jewish and Catholic students as there are Methodists, whereas in 1900 you could count all non-Methodists on two hands.

The Chancellor is traditionally Methodist, — that word again. It's true that only two Chancellors were not Methodist ministers, Graham and Haven, but they were Methodist laymen. Also, contrary to some belief, this is not at all a land grant college. All University property was formally bought from the City of Syracuse.

In 1872 the Drinking Policy was taken for granted to be complete abstention, so there was no actual need for a written policy. The practice was unthinkable. The policy therefore is a matter of regulation, that is, there is nothing written in the charter at all on Drinking Policy.

The Methodist belief on drinking is actually a By-law and not a belief, no drinking by implementation. Methodist ministers are still required to sign a waiver that they will not imbibe alcoholic beverages. How did this By-law come about? At the time of the 18th Century English Methodist Churches, the conditions in England were wretched, partly because of drunken brawls. Because of what this drinking truned the populace into, Wesley made a point of preaching against it. This University became co-ed in 1884, one of the earliest to do so, after much controversy. The women had even stricter rules than the men which I can't imagine at the time.

Then there came a transition period. People became more liberal; it started with University housing. Before 1900 there were no dorms, Winchell was the first, and all students chose private housing and were under the jurisdiction of those they boarded with and under community supervision so far as personal conduct. After 1900 students had a choice of living privately or through the University. After 1911 though it became mandatory for students to live in University sponsored living centers and the Drinking Policy was defined almost as it is today except that no drinking was allowed at all, at home or at school.

Nickerson Knocks Rocky's 'Pay-as-You-Go' Program

The Rockefeller "pay-as-you-go" plan is a "total and complete hoax," Eugene Nickerson, Nassau County executive, told Young Democrats Thursday.

The pay-as-you-go basis is "totally unworkable and totally unsound," because it exhausts non-recurring revenue supplies, Nickerson noted. He said that this would soon cause a state tax increase.

The state does not really have a balanced budget, he said, but deficits are not included in the written budget.

This type if hidden-deficit budget is "basically deceitful," Nickerson said, because it is used for easily hidden, non-priority projects.

"The most meaningful thing to us (Democrats) is human values," Nickerson noted.

He said the most satisfying of his achievements is the rehabilitation program in homes for the aged. This, he said, is paradoxically a way of saving money by helping patients be more self-sufficient.

Nickerson's advice to aspiring politicians is "to choose a very weak opponent."

John English, Nassau County Democratic Party chairman, was unable to attend the meeting because of inclement weather.

Military Ball Set Saturday

Crowning of the queen will highlight the annual Military Ball tonight at the Hotel Syracuse grand ballroom.

At 11:15 p.m., the seven finalists will be escorted beneath an arch of raised sabers to the ballroom throne. Jean Moore, a member of Angel Flight, the women's auxiliary to Air Force ROTC, will crown the queen.

The queen was chosen by members of the Cadet Association.

Finalists are Judith Miller, Judith Pool, Carol Rondeau, Barbara Smyth, Gail Soltysik, Joan Speat and Sally Wiley.

The winner will receive a crown, an expense-paid weekend for two in New York City and gifts contributed by local merchants.

Lionel Hampton and his orchestra will perform for dancing and the coronation.

Union Shows 'Funny Face'

"Funny Face," starring Audrey Hepburn, will be shown in the Women's Building recreation lounge at 6:30 and 9 p.m. today as part of Student Union night.

Volleyball will begin at 8 p.m. in Gyms A and B. The game room will also open at 8.

The Women's Building alleys will be available for open bowling.

to convert the natives they caused intense rivalries and tensions," he said, but added "we owe a lot to the missionaries for introducing education to Africa."

"Political action in Kenya's march to independence began in 1923 when the British fired upon Africans who had become upset with colonialism and the European policy of treating them as sub-humans," he noted.

In 1944 African representation began in the legislature and after the war it increased, as did the boldness of demands for freedom, Amalamba stated.

The Mau-Mau underground terrorist movement grew out of a desire to take action where study groups had bogged down, he continued. "Their aim was to get rid of the whites; Kenya was placed in a state of emergency for nine years during which little progress was made owing to preoccupation with fighting," he concluded.

UConn Rally Sinks Orange

POETRY IN MOTION is the theme as Syracuse's MANNY KLUTSCHKOWSKI (50) is surrounded by Connecticut's TOM KIMBALL (42) and an unidentified player as they reach for the ball in Thursday's game at Manley Fieldhouse. UConn's ANDY CZUCHRY (21) and GERRY MANNING (31) look on with Syracuse's JIM SEAMAN (23).

By BERNIE MacCALLUM

The Orange suffered its worst home defeat of the season, 92-74, to the University of Connecticut Thursday night before 1,049 fans.

The UConns took an early lead in the first quarter with Syracuse closing the gap late in the half to trail 35-34 at halftime. A six-point spurt by Connecticut with 10 minutes remaining put the visitors ahead to stay.

Tom Kimball, 6-7, 235-pound-UConn forward, was top scorer with 22 points. Dom Perno was second high with 20 points.

Honors

Herb Foster and Phil Schoff shared scoring honors for Syracuse with 17 points. Jim Seaman had 16 and Carl Vernick 13.

Syracuse was out-rebounded 45-36 by the much taller UConns, who had little trouble controlling the boards with a 6-10 center and a pair of 6-7 forwards.

Manny Kiutschkowski was rebound leader for the Orange with 10. He pulled all of them down in the first half when he scored all of his nine points before getting into foul trouble. Ed Solmcenski and Kimball had 13 rebounds each for Connecticut.

The Orangemen hit on 28 of 64 field goal attempts for a .438 shooting percentage. Connecticut made almost half of their shots with 35 for 71 and a .494 percentage.

Syracuse used a full court press after they fell behind at the outset, 15-5. Near the five minute mark of the first half, Klutschkowski scored twice to tie it up before Schoff put the Orange ahead for the first time, 29-27.

The two clubs traded baskets in the second half with Syracuse leading for the last time, 59-58, with ten minutes remaining. Bill Hulteen then scored three baskets in a row to start the UConn surge which put them ahead by as many as 20 points.

Kimball had 18 points in the second half to spark the drive. He was nine for 11 from the floor in the game. This was the first win over Syracuse for the NCAA-bound UConns.

The Orangemen end the season Saturday at the fieldhouse when they host St. John's at 8:30 p.m. The frosh meet the Cornell frosh in the opener at 6:30.

Orange Swimmers Host Upper New York Meet

By JIM DINE

Syracuse University will act as host to 13 colleges as the 11th annual Upper New York State Individual Swimming Championships will commence tonight at the Orange Pool.

Starting tonight and lasting through Saturday night 300 individuals will be called upon to display their skills as the largest field in the history of the championships will take to the water. Individuals entered will represent teams from Colgate, St. Bonaventure, University of Buffalo, Buffalo State, Niagara, Brockport State, University of Rochester, Cortland State, Oswego State, Geneseo State, Union, RPI, and Syracuse.

The tournament organized in 1952 is mainly for the smaller schools which are unable to send their perspective squads to the Easterns. Both freshmen and varsity squads will compete in a wide variety of events, where honors will be presented only to individuals and not to the teams.

Tonight at 7:00 p.m. there are seven events listed including finals in frosh 200-yard freestyle and diving and varsity 550-yard freestyle.

The diving trials will be the only event on Saturday morning, but starting at 2:00 p.m. the meet will really start to pick up steam as there will be 12 trial events in both freshman and varsity competition.

The climax to the entire meet will come on Saturday night beginning at 7:00 where awards will be presented to 11 varsity and six freshmen members. Colgate is a heavy favorite to cop the most individual honors.

Featured events of varsity competition will be the 400-yd. medley relay, 200, 100, & 50-yd. freestyle, 200-yd. individual medley, 1 meter diving, 200 yd. butterfly 200 & 100 yd. backstroke, 200 yd. breaststroke, and 400 yd. freestyle relay. Many of the freshmen events will coincide with those of the varsity.

Colgate will be among one of the teams which will present swimmers worth watching. These performers are Gerden Fluke, a senior from Ashland, Ohio and Bill Stuek from Manchester, Conn. Both men race in the freestyle event. Also from Colgate will be Pat LeForte whose specialty is diving.

Syracuse hopes to see Barney Morrison, Bob Ohman and Tom Watts place high in the individual standings, as well as Niagara, which has high hopes for Jim Herbert. Both Cortland and Rochester boast of their fine individuals Joe Grogan and Hal Nauman respectively.

Since this meet isn't under the auspices of Syracuse University there will be a slight admission fee to each day's event. Friday night a half dollar will admit a fan and for the Saturday night finals the admission price will be $1.00.

Frosh Crush Manlius For Twelfth Victory

By ART ROSSKY

Syracuse's frosh basketball team rolled to its twelfth victory Thursday night with an easy 79-61 win over Manlius School at Manley Fieldhouse. Once again Dave Bing was high scorer, this time with 27 points.

Manlius remained in contention only for the first six and a half minutes as the shooting of the Red Knights' Del Handcox matched the scoring of the Hill's Bing and Frank Nicoletti.

With 12 minutes and 18 seconds left in the initial half, Tangerine Dick Ableman hit a three-point play to break an 11-11 tie. The Hillmen were never headed after that.

Late in the first half seven points by sub Jim Bocheim paced a 9-1 Syracuse spurt that pushed the Syracuse margin to 38-20 at the three-minute mark.

For the remainder of the half, both teams played evenly. As the buzzer sounded the Tangerines held a 44-27 edge.

Opening the second half, the scoring tempo slowed as Syracuse surged to a 51-31 edge with five minutes gone. Meanwhile Manlius had suffered a crushing blow as Handcox, their season's high scorer, fouled at the four-minute mark.

A hot hand by the cadets' Bob Loghry featured a mild rally that cut the Hill edge to 56-42 with 11 minutes left.

Manlius could get no closer and the Tangerines coasted the rest of the way.

Loghry paced the Red Knights with 12 points, with Handcox, 11, and Covatta, 10, close behind.

Late in the first half Nicoletti suffered a scratched eyeball which forced him out of action. He is a doubtful starter for Saturday's season finale.

The Tangerines close their campaign Saturday against Cornell with a 6:30 p.m. engagement at the fieldhouse. The Little Red have taken two of the three previous engagements.

Feldman, Moller Selected for Top WAER Positions

Robert A. Feldman, a junior radio-television major, has been named program director of WAER, the university's FM radio station. He succeeds Michael Styer.

Peter Moller, a sophomore in the College of Liberal Arts, was named production director, succeeding Janet Griffin.

Feldman said he plans to continue the present ratio of music, news, and network programming. He added that the only change being contemplated is an increase in local news coverage, so that the station may have a wider appeal to the community.

He said he will continue with the present program schedule until the completion of the school year.

Feldman has been the producer of the WAER program "Folkways" for three years. He was executive producer of WAER's coverage of the Oscar Brand concert over the weekend.

A resident of Brookline, Mass., Feldman is a member of Phi Epsilon Pi fraternity. He is a summer employe of WBZ-TV in Boston.

Moller is a resident of Lagos, Nigeria, where his parents are stationed in the foreign service. He is producer of "Showcase," "To the Bookshelf" and "Broadway on Record."

Feldman and Moller will join the present senior department heads and the faculty of the radio-television center in interviewing candidates for the remaining nine executive posts next week. The senior staff for next year will be announced Friday.

The new senior staff will work with the present staff until after the spring vacation, when the new staff will assume control.

Dr. Marshall Offers Advice At Luncheon

An estimated 1,000 sorority women attended Saturday's Panhellenic luncheon in the Grand Ballroom of the Hotel Syracuse. The luncheon, a tradition of the Syracuse Panhellenic organization, featured scholarship awards and a speech by guest Dr. Mary Marshall of the Hill English department.

Dr. Marshall, who discussed the need of intellectual stimulation for the married woman said women today "make no projection into the future beyond Lohengrin's 'Wedding March'."

Dr. Marshall stated "You should get the fullest equipment for life that you can while you're still on the family payroll.

"Don't let the stereotype of a woman's role overimpress you. Try to define your personality in accord with your deepest wishes and deepest nature."

Virginia Frykman, president of Panhellenic Council, awarded the luncheon theme cup to Alpha Epsilon Phi. The winning theme was "Many Hearts, Single Purpose." In a short speech, Miss Frykman stresses that the sorority woman "must go with the spirit of time or go to meet it."

After an introduction by toastmistress Shelley Doctor, Panhel vice president, Mrs.

Dr. Tussman Opens 10th Footprints

A philosopher, a rabbi and a nuclear physicist will participate in the tenth annual Footprints series, which begins Tuesday and ends Thursday.

Footprints is a student-organized symposium on contemporary ideas and values. When it was organized in 1954, the theme was "Footprints on the sands of time: an individual's design for living."

Topic for this year's conference is "Chaos and Cosmos".

"Government of Mind"

Dr. Joseph Tussman, associate professor of philosophy at Connecticut's Wesleyan University, will speak on "The Government of the Mind" at 3:30 p.m. Tuesday in Hendricks Chapel.

From 1956-1960 Dr. Tussman was associate professor of citizenship and philosophy on the Hill.

In September, he will join the faculty of the University of California at Berkeley as a full professor.

Dr. Eugene Borowitz, a rabbi, will speak on "Heroes and Anti-Heroes in the Theater of the Absurd" at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday at Hendricks.

Borowitz

A professor of education and lecturer in Jewish religious thought at the New York school of the Hebrew Union College, Dr. Borowitz is now serving as adjunct professor of religion at Temple University.

He was a delegate to the mid-century and 1960 White House Conference on Children and Youth.

At 3:30 p.m. Thursday in the Chapel, Dr. Philip Morrison, professor of physics and nuclear studies at Cornell University, will lecture on "The Ape at the Typewriter."

Chance

He will consider order and chance in the universe.

Dr. Morrison joined the Manhattan Project in 1943 to work in its metallurgical laboratory at the University of Chicago. In 1944 he worked for the Los Alamos laboratory in New Mexico and the first test atomic explosion.

WAER-FM, 88.3 mc, will broadcast the afternoon lectures.

Button, Button-That's the Name

The last word in buttons has arrived on campus.

One word—"button" — stands out from the black background. The "button" button sale will benefit the student union fund drive, which sponsors Friday's basketball doubleheader at the Manley Fieldhouse.

The first game will match student leaders and members of the faculty, and the second game will pit the Syracuse freshmen against the varsity.

The button, a product of sophomore Joan Siegel, was designed to be "subtly different."

Buttons and tickets to the basketball games are on sale in the lobby of Huntington B. Crouse Hall. Tickets to the games are 50 cents with an ID card, and $1 without. Buttons, on sale from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., are 25 cents.

3 Students Mugged

Three students from Watson Dormitory were attacked and beaten Friday while walking along South Crouse Avenue near Madison Street.

A gang of 20 Negroes approached Ronald Taskey, 18, Ralph Van Derveer, 19, and Norman Grenell and began beating and kicking them for no apparent reason.

The students said the boys' ages were between 14 and 19.

The three students were treated at the university infirmary for injuries. Taskey was beaten about the face and suffered bruises around his mouth while the other two received minor cuts and bruises.

Permit Issued

Syracuse University has been issued a permit by the Bureau of Building for the proposed $2,772,822 masonry and steel woman's dormitory and dining hall at 400 Comstock Ave. in the 16th Ward.

Plans filed with the bureau indicate a part of the new structure will be eight stories and another part 11 stories. Different elevations on the site make this difference necessary.

History of Drinking Policy-Part III

THE FOLLOWING is part of the long history of the drinking policy at Syracuse University. It is the result of over a month of research, both in the archives, interviews with policy makers and outside sources. The article is written by Jan Fowler, a sophomore, who stated his purpose as an attempt to "put an end to the 'sword rattling' that has gone on in the last several decades."

By JAN FOWLER

Trouble, right here in River City. In 1913 the D. O., which did not used to be the official University paper, was prone to have liquor, dance hall and public party ads. The University even prohibited this practice or else the D.O. goes. In 1921 the controversy over the D.O. was renewed, this time over tobacco and pipe ads.

Until 1927 no students were allowed to even smoke on campus. This was almost 60 years after its founding. On October 7, 1919, Chancellor Day, by far the strictest of any Chancellor, complimented the D.O. on its truthful summary of his address on campus cigarette smoking. And on September 18, 1920, Chancellor Day again, "It is extremely gratifying that the saloon temptation has been removed and has gone forever", (in regard for prohibition of the whole country). Then he reaffirmed the Drinking Policy which was in fact in effect long before the Prohibition Amendment. "Liquor must not be taken to any Dormitory, Chapter House or boarding house.

"The offenders will hereafter be expelled. No excuses will be accepted for having or using intoxicating liquors." From the D. O. on October 28, 1921, in this article, "Aim to End Intoxication on Hill", the students themselves are urging the prohibition of alcohol, — today some are encouraging it, — full circle? In this article the ancestor of JSL, the Senior Council and Women's League, seek the aid of the living centers. "There is only one way to cast out this vice, the Senior Council declares, and that is to make public the stand which every fraternity, sorority and living center will take in the matter.

In view of this, certain pertinent questions have been placed before these organizations." Theme: Disgrace yourself and you disgrace Syracuse. This same article causes a furor, it was published in the Elmira Star Gazette, an influential paper of the time, with the lurid headline, "Syracuse Students Urge Halt to University Booze Parties". The University was severly criticized as reveling in liquor parties. Chancellor Peck notes in comment that he respected the students for taking the initiative themselves but that this article accentuated the yellow journalism of the day. The University here, rarely brought into the open, saved face. You must remem-

Do-It-Yourself Student Union

A Watson Hall resident adviser has his own little student union going this year and he's doing very well, thank you.

Lonnie Torman, a first year graduate student in public administration and resident advisor on Watson West Two, is interested in going into student union work when he completes his two-year course at Syracuse. Thus far he has afforded himself a good opportunity to practice for his field.

At the same time, Torman has brought something new to Watson in particular and the dormitory system in general. He has brought something more than the usual smattering of social activity to the dormitory. He has brought a good deal of culture to the Watson program.

And the response has been heart-warming to Torman and to Watson director Frank Harrar, who has had a good deal to do with the success of Torman's program.

In addition to running a varied program of cultural and social events, Torman finds time to publish a weekly newsletter and a more comprehensive monthly bulletin for the residents. He sums up his task as one of providing and publicizing.

A look at some of the recent events offered shows that this an active and worthwhile program. The film "Operation Abolition" attracted approximately 120 persons on a Wednesday evening. The CBS documentary series called "Operation Information" is a well-received film series extending through the spring.

Receptions for Sammy Davis, Jr., and Oscar Brand have been well-attended as have displays, and talks by guests. In the past week, in connection with the Oscar Brand concert, a display on folk music was in the lobby.

And the residents enjoy these opportunities and take advantage of them. Which leads to the suggestion that other dorms should have a Lonnie Torman or, even better, the housing system should have an all-dormitory co-ordinator for cultural activities.

This is the era of the big dormitory at Syracuse and Syracuse has been called a city within a city. Now the dormitory residents must be given an outlet to cultural and social activities that is accesible.

We expect that soon the university will actively begin such a co-ordinated program. We only point out that already one man had the initiative and the faith in his dormitory's residents to start a program virtually on his own.

Finally, we are reminded this is not a provincial thing. Others can attend these functions and gain by the experience also.

We salute Lonnie Torman and say to you: See you at Watson!

Yech!

"Yech" is an all-inclusive word of vague derivation. It is not to be found in the dictionary, in your English text book or your mother's cookbook. It can be found in "Mad", "Help", and Humbug."

Yech is a physio-visual word, which means that it is brought to the voice box from the gut on the sight of an unsightly apparition. Yech has been heard most recently from the area of campus known so quaintly as the quad.

"Yech, these puddles are three feet deep and my sneakers have holes in them."

"Yech, that mud is not unlike a bottomless quagmire of quicksand and my loafers have holes in them."

"Yech, the path is icy and my skates have holes in them."

"Yech, the road has holes in it and my car is an obstinate organism of rattles and chrome, lost in its own tire tracks and looking for existence from the precarious grease rack."

Debate

To the Editor:

It is unfortunate that such a diluted version of the Corwin-Regoli debate was the only one to appear in print in the DO. The issues discussed and the points of view espoused by each of the respective debaters deserves a more thorough treatment as well as more wide-spread publicity.

It is abundantly clear that the issues being defended and attacked by the two men encompassed a much wider scope than merely the Greek system at SU. They were, in fact, by an easy extension, relevant to our entire society. As such, they merit critical attention by all of us — Greeks as well as non-Greeks.

Mr. Corwin's cogent and biting criticisms of the fraternity-sorority complex at SU were evaded for the most part by Mr. Rigoli because his position is, at the very least, an indefensible one. At no time during the course of the debate did Mr. Rigoli, his both feet planted firmly in mid - air, address himself meaningfully and constructively to the horrendously unjust policies of the Greek system on campus. His speech was reminiscent of the empty filibustering that at times goes on in the floor of Congress — it was vacuous, diversionary and fraught with egregious rationalizations.

Mr. Rigoli's attempt to justify the current principles of the fraternity-sorority system by stating, "Sure you are a bigot (referring to members of the Greek system), but you are a bigot by choice," justifies, and more than that, implicitly applauds the policies of Nazi Germany as well as the policies of the KKK in our own Southern United States, for were not these groups bigots by choice? And were not the policies advocated by these groups therefore justifiable?

There is no question that the Greek system as it now functions on this campus has no place in what is supposed to be an intellectual and enlightened community for the same reason that prejudice in all of its forms, nurtured by sheer ignorance, has no place in any community in a democracy, much less a university community.

Mr. Corwin did not by any means "win" this debate; an idea won it (if it is appropriate to speak of "winning"), and that idea is freedom and equality. Mr. Rigoli did not "lose" the debate; an idea lost it, and that idea is rationalized bigotry and prejudice in its most insidious form: The form now practiced by the vast majority of Greek houses on this campus.

A word, too, must be said about the appallingly narrow policies of the people in charge of programing for WAER who have refused to play the tape of this fine debate on the air on the grounds that: 1) it would not interest a large enough audience, and 2) that it is not the place of the university radio station to discuss or present issues which might throw a bad light on ceratin aspects of campus functioning.

I submit that the issues discussed were of such crucial importance that to argue that it would not interest a large enough audience is to argue the ignorance of that audience. Perhaps such a contention is justified. I hope not.

I further submit that it is the very duty and responsibility of a communications system such as WAER to present critical evaluations, criticism if you like, of the blatant injustices practiced by the very groups that it reaches, for the most part, in its broadcasts.

Change comes about through the investigation, evaluation and clarification of issues, through the open, not the closed mind. Change does not occur when people choose to ignore the issues at hand. A person or a group that is not amenable to criticism, both by self and others, that is not amenable to self-analysis is, consequently, not amenable to change and has as little place on a university campus as does the bigotry fostered by the Greek system itself.

David Geisinger,
Graduate Student.

Points

To the Editor:

While it is not at all to my taste to explain myself, present credentials, and try to smooth things over when a disagreement arises between someone and myself, I would hate to lose some possible friends, or antagonize well meaning people with whom I happen to agree, on account of a misunderstanding, or lack of communication.

It seems that the wording of my last letter to the DO has caused some of my fellow integrationists to have difficulty in understanding its essence.

There are three points I wanted to make in that letter: 1) I don't like the theatricality and emotionalism Mr. Corwin employs in some of his long ariteles (the most typical example is "Another Shine, Mister?").

They make them hard to read, do not appeal to the very readers they should impress, and thus do not serve the cause of integration well enough. Being a member of two ethnic groups at once that are discriminated against in this country, and most anywhere else, I can't be a cold fish about discrimination either, but I believe that if one writes long articles as Mr. Corwin does, he ought to put more substance into them than can be summed up in a paragraph, and should not complicate them by dialects that are not followed through consistently. To sum up point one: I don't like his style. And don't make the mistake that this means I am against everything he says.

2) My main point was this: If you had the patience to read Mr. Corwin's article critically, you had to notice that he was switching the basis of his argument from race to socio-economic status. Now I have nothing against discussing what we should do to relieve poverty in the nation, but I think I ought to point out that if I were a Negro, I would not like it if my self-styled spokesman, a white, used only the racial issue as a means by which to drag in an argument for something else. Not only does it seem logically inconsistent ("To hell with logic," you might say), but it is also unethical. Or else don't write in a southern accent and don't talk about race.

3) Finally, a general principle in the Western tradition that works: If our goal is to put an end to racial, religious, etc., discrimination, we must deny ourselves the satisfaction of letting hate enter into our arguments; it may be hard to do but it helps to get results. Of course, whether we can do it or not depends on why we entered the argument in the first place: To put an end to the hate and lack of communication among the various ethnic groups, or (to use somewhat figurative language) in order for slaves to become slave masters.

Thanks for bearing with me.

Louis Flohr.

'Mary, Mary' Set

ON STAGE in a scene from Jean Kerr's comedy, "Mary, Mary," are JOHN LASELL and HEDDIE BATES. The play opens March 19 at RKO Keith's Theater.

The Broadway comedy, "Mary, Mary" will appear at Keith's Theater Tuesday, March 19.

The playwright, Jean Kerr, has also written the best-sellers, "Please Don't Eat the Daises" and "The Snake Has All The Lines". Now in its second year on Broadway "Mary, Mary" will soon appear in London in addition to performances by the two National companies.

Patricia Smith and John Lasell play the roles of Bob and Mary Kellaway the young couple who meet unexpectedly on the eve of their divorce, after a period of separation. Taking place in their former apartment, the play-recounts their memories of marriage. A combination of a movie idol, tax department and snowstorm brings a turning point to the comedy.

Patricia Smith who plays the title role began her acting training at the Neighborhood Playhouse in New York City. She appeared with Burgess Meredith on the New England summer circuit in "The Silver Whistle". She later starred with Henry Fonda in "Point of No Return" and appeared in Paddy Chayefsky's "The Bachelor Party." She has appeared on Studio One, Kraft Theatre, Playwrights 56, Lux Video Theatre, Robert Montgomery Presents and Philco Playhouse.

John Lasell, her stage husband has been affiliated with the Brattle Theatre, The Poet's Corner and the Group 20 Players all Boston companies. He has appeared with the Stratford (Conn.) and San Diego Shakespeare Festivals.

On Broadway he appeared in Maxwell Anderson's "The Golden Six," Clifford Odets' "The Big Knife," John Dos-Passo's "USA" and "Roman Candle." He has also appeared on tv in "The Nurses," "Ben Casey" and "Wagon Train."

Tickets will cost $4.50, 4, 3.60 and 3.

Religious Play Today

"The Terrible Meek," a one act religious drama, will be presented 9 p.m. today, in Hendricks Chapel.

The play, written by R.A. Kennedy, is being directed by Alex Kleinsorg.

The cast includes Joan Artsis as Mary, Ira Leitzes as the Roman Centurian and Dennis Cullen as the Soldier.

The play is sponsored by the drama department. There is no charge. The group will present the drama to various churches in Syracuse this week.

THEATER

'Romeo and Juliet'

Juliet came alive Saturday night in the Boar's Head production of William Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet" at the Drama Building.

As portrayed by Bonnie Cousins, Juliet gleamed with innocence and tragedy, youth and maturity, hope and desperation. Next to Miss Cousin's light though, the rest of the production flickered.

"Romeo and Juliet" is not a tragedy in the sense of a "Hamlet" or "Macbeth." In those plays human souls, through their own inadequacies, lead themselves to destruction. "Romeo and Juliet" is a tragedy of fate, timing and incidence.

Its effectiveness lies in the poetry, the characterizations, the skillfully written lines and scenes. Its theme of the futility of feuding families becames almost secondary to the depiction of Romeo's and Juliet's intense fire of love.

As directed by G. F. Reidenbaugh, the production often reaches moments of beauty and sensitivity. But almost as often it doesn't. The blame, as well as the praise, lies with the performers.

Miss Cousin's Juliet is so subtle, varied and touching that characters who seem adequate and convincing when Juliet is offstage appear stiff and one dimensional when sharing Joseph Morton's attractively designed multi-leveled set.

The greatest discrepancy occurs in scenes between the two lovers. This sigh-ridden, love-sick boy is not one of Shakespeare's most vital characters. It is a challenge for an actor to make the sickly sweet Romeo appealing to both the audience and Juliet.

Richard Miller's Romeo seems to do neither. With his compatriots Mercutio and Benvolio, Miller is quite adequate. With Juliet though, his performance becomes sadly lacking. His speeches become recitations, and not expressions of love. One wonders why such a beautiful and sensitive Juliet could fall for this foolish boy.

The same occurs in scenes between Juliet and her parents. Richard Folmer's Capulet becomes superficial bluster. Leslie Meek's Lady Capulet's alternation between a doting and a severe parent becomes strained and hard to take.

Only in those scenes between Juliet and Marian Present's wonderfully funny Nurse does the play go beyond competent theater and reach moments of charm and joy.

Not that "Romeo and Juliet" is without moments of enjoyable theater. The production is loaded with exciting dueling scenes, Shakespeare's bawdy ribaldry, Esen Wiegand's beautiful costumes and charming period music.

Peter Maloney is enchanting, as usual, as the Nurse's servant. Thomas McKee is outstanding as the spirited Mercutio. Ken Pearlman is firey as the hot tempered Tiball. Director Reidenbaugh's staging of his large cast is effective and fluid.

The play develops swiftly and surely. Scenes of love, fighting, joy and despair are expertly paced and balanced. The production is a fast two and a half hours of Shakespeare.

The company as a whole creates competant college theater. But only when Miss Cousins is on stage does "Romeo and Juliet" begin to reach truly exciting, moving and touching drama.

MUSIC

Oscar Brand

As expected, at Friday's Oscar Brand concert, much of the entertainment that did not consist of Oscar Brand himself, was embarrassing. If you are one of those who is upset by scatalogical references, the rest of the program was too.

On the happier side, there were some amateur performances that bore promise. Chief among these was the performance of Elaine Meltzer, whose group of three songs was highlighted by a moving rendition of "Song of My Hands." Miss Meltzer sings simply and naturally, her bearing unaffected, so as to allow the power or the charm of her material present itself.

A group called "The Gallows Singers" sang, for the most part, stock versions of overexposed songs. They did them well, however, greatly due to the efforts of their female vocalist. Comparing them with the highs and lows of the great profusion of professional groups on the loose, they should fall somewhere in the bottom third (with of course, a chance for improvement of sophistication, arrangement and performance.

Loraine Heyman appeared just long enough to sing two songs and was gone before she had a chance to lose her nervousness. Her voice had the most pleasant quality heard during the evening. Guessing, from what one did hear, one could say that Miss Heyman has a great deal of talent, and needs only to master herself.

The rest of the local talent consisted of singers Audrey Freeman, Ralph Stockmayer, Steve Moore, Mort Jacobi, and a group called the "Three Crows." Except for Mr. Jacobi who was undistinguished but competent, here lay the embarrassment.

The "Three Crows" introduced a new concept in music, barbershop harmony. Audrey Freeman sang with poise, assurance, stage presence, and a vibrato of about an octave. Stockmayer and Moore had the poetic vision to sing "This Land is Your Land" with two false endings.

The second half of the concert, consisting solely of Oscar Brand, presented a folk performer of great sophistication, if only because he sings the most simple of songs, and still manages to give the audience an awareness of the context and meaning of the material.

History of Drinking Policy-Part III

ber that the nation was reading these articles. It definitely looked poor for the University.

In the past there has been even a double standard, in regard to women and for men. After the last policy change men could drink in public, women could drink nowhere. They have realized this privilege only in the last twenty years. In 1911, the Rules and Regulations of the University stated simply, "Traditions and principles of the University prohibit drinking of any intoxicating liquors." Period. This meant anywhere. The big break and last change came in 1946. The same publication states "(1) Misuse of any intoxicating beverages and (2) Possession on campus buildings or at University functions". (This meant you could drink off campus BUT, "the University reserves the right to interpret the term "misuse." If you drink off campus like ladies and gentlemen, no problem. This is the way it reads today. Under General Rules, the University also reserves the right at any time "to make any changes deemed advisable in the Rules and Regulations of the University", that's the Chancellor.

The 1946 change occurred because of the returning servicemen and for that reason only. It literally took a war to change the Policy and it will probably take more than a war to change it again.

Up until ten years ago, Syracuse University was legally attached to the Methodist Church until the charter change in 1953. But we still belong to the Association of Methodist Schools and Colleges. This is not so dissimilar from other colleges. Columbia is Anglican, there has always been an Episcopalian Chancellor there, and this is tradition. Brown University is a Baptist institution, and so on.

At De Pauw the feeling is almost rabid against drinking. A Bishop's daughter was expelled for drinking. You know they're tough. Just look and see how few students here are ever expelled for drinking violations. In most cases the penalty is a probation period. The Trustees that we have now are all nominated and elected instead of being appointed as they were under the Methodist stewardship. But this word tradition, let us remember, is also the law.

Actually there are two different Drinking Policy questions, undergraduate and graduate. They are similar only in the policy of liquor at functions and living in dormitories. These cases are handled almost the same way but they are distinct cases. Does JSL realize this? The climate has much to do with the ruling on function drinking. Public drinking is O.K. as long as you don't monopolize the bar. When that happens you are at an illegal function.

Americans seem to feel very strongly either way on this question because for the most part people know and have seen evidence on which they are giving this opinion. So now we have a problem that embraces the planes of religion, morality, social society, politics, psychology and procedual obstacles. I was amazed at the number of freshmen coming to college here who were below eighteen years old. This is definitely a problem.

The argument that driving back from a party causes accidents is not entirely accurate. We have not had a death or serious accident caused by drunken driving by a student at this University in over two decades, while Cornell, which is a wet campus, can boast twelve deaths per year attributed to intoxication by students. This is a problem. When it comes right down to it we are comparing gross unlikes when you compare Cornell and Colgate with us, as I shall point out. To make this a wet campus you would have to change the whole character of the institution in relation to: its being co-ed, the spectrum of education, our cosmopolitan situation and community relationship. The image of the University is an ethereal thing, but it is also a big factor to place in mind.

Also, parents still, by and large, have control of where their children go to school. True? And then there is that word TRADITION and you have already seen how strong this can be. The problem is aggravated today by the factor that drinking starts in high school and pre-high school as opposed to the past when drinking in general started after graduation or in college days.

What I mean to say is that the relaxation of the policy would be a trap for some of the younger members of this University. They feel when they come here that drinking is a way of life and these younger students very positively are apt to become problem drinkers. There are statistics on this. The Freshman feels that this policy is an abridgement of his new life of freedom. This is a place to mature to adulthood and when you are realized as one, there is no independence like it. How long do you wish to be children about this? Do not throw your, or the University's, self respect out the window. The image here is important.

Our administration is far from perfect in virtue, but that is only to say that it is managed by real men and women. They are far from high minded in interest, but that is only to say that the interests they represent are substantial. The University has to think of many publics that they deal with, mainly parents, who in nine out of ten cases pay the bills. Whether you Freshmen like it or not you're still under their control.

Opportunities at DuPont for technical graduates—fifth of a series

Du Pont manufactures and sells more than 1200 different products and product lines. Such diversification offers tremendous opportunities to technical men.

For example, Du Pont's sales force is made up predominantly of engineers and chemists. One important reason for this is that 95% of all our sales are to manufacturers who process our products further or use them in their own operations. It's up to our sales force to see that our products live up to our advertising claims in each end product.

Suppose you were selling our versatile DELRIN® acetal resin. It's a plastic with good tensile strength and creep resistance under a wide range of temperature and humidity conditions.

You might be helping to solve the problems of a gear pump manufacturer one day, an automotive parts builder the next, and an electric razor manufacturer another time.

Diversity of applications for most of our products is the main reason why each of Du Pont's 12 sales divisions has its own lab. They back up our salesmen and are available to them for trouble-shooting work of their own.

A career in sales at Du Pont requires technical know-how, persistence and dedication. It also requires a searching, inventive mind: one that can envision new markets for our products as well as follow through on sales and quality control within our customers' organizations.

If you are a technical man with a feeling for sales and a desire to apply your technical knowledge creatively almost every day—mail our coupon. You'll receive information about employment opportunities at Du Pont, and, if you like, about DELRIN and other new Du Pont products featured in our "Opportunities" series.

SU Phone Problems Over? New Lines for Switchboard

By AUDREY LIPPMAN

Students and faculty.

Have you had trouble getting phone calls through during the busy hours of the afternoon?

Cheer up.

The situation should improve next week when the university switchboard adds 11 new trunk lines to its telephone system,

The new lines will help to alleviate jamming of the switchboard to provide a constantly even flow of traffic, according to Muriel L. Day, chief operator.

Also being added to the new switchboard equipment is the Spot Page, a device for keeping communication contact to the university maintainence foreman.

Staff of 21

With a staff of 21 operators, consisting of six full-time and two part-time permanent operators, five occasional operators and 11 student operators, Mrs. Day handles 140,000 direct extension calls and 30,000 incoming calls through the operators.

The operators do many things besides monitor the switchboard. They are responsible for other equipment such as burglar alarms connected to both Manley Field House and the Barsar's office.

The switchboard also handles emergency calls from 4:30 p.m. to 8 a.m. on weekdays and all day Saturdays, Sundays and holidays.

TWO of Syracuse University's 21 switchboard operators are shown manning the mammoth switchboard in Sims Hall. The board will become even larger next week when the university adds 11 new trunk lines to the system.

Fire Phone

A red colored phone in the switchboard room handles all fire alarm calls. The operators answer this line whenever security police are out of their office, said Mrs. Day.

Mrs. Day said student cooperation is good when asking information from the operators. She said some times students could give aid to increase the efficiency of the switchbord.

Among her suggestions for student cooperation were: calling by extensions number instead of floor and dorm; limiting calls to ten minutes; forwarding the correct address and extension number of the dorm to parents; and providing friends with the extension number and outside line number of the dorms.

Person-to-Person

An important factor of long distance calling is to warn parents to call person-to-person, said Mrs. Day. If a station-to-station call is placed, the toll is paid from time the operator answers the Granite number to connect the extension.

If a student is not in or the extension number is busy, a station-to-station call is still charged for the toll.

Complete Info

With approximately 9,000 names in the Orange directory, full information on the location cards from registration should be given. In the second revision this year, there were about 900 changes, or 10 per cent of the listings, Mrs. Day said.

With a machine to check trouble spots for further analysis, room open for expansion and constant checking of equipment by repairmen, Mrs. Day has many aids as she tries to provide efficient telephone service to the campus.

Inflation Talk

Dr. Franklyn D. Holzman professor at Tufts University will visit Syracuse University to lecture on inflation at 8:30 p.m. Thursday in the founder's room of Maxwell Hall.

Dr. Holzman, an authority on trade and finance, will speak on "Aspects of Cost-Push Inflation." His appearance is sponsored by the Hill economics department.

An author of a book on Soviet taxation, Dr. Holzman has written widely on international monetary policy. He holds a Ph.D. from Harvard University.

Applications for the position of financial director of Joint Student Government are due at the JSG office, 907 University Ave., by Mar. 15th.

This position is open to freshman and sophomore men who have passed the JSG. test. Applicants should include their average, past and present activities.

Dr. Ely Named To Committee

Dr. Donald P. Ely, director of the audiovisual center, has been named to the National Educational Policies Commission's advisory committee.

The organization studies educational problems and publishes policy recommendations on them.

Rally Planned Against Tuition

Students from the State and City Universities of New York will meet today in Albany for a mass demonstration in support of free tuition.

After a march in front of the capitol building, students will attend a rally. Monday night, they will observe a State Assembly session.

The students are seeking to restore the guarantee of free tuition to the State Education Law. It was removed by the State Legislature two years ago.

Last month the State University Board of Trustees announced plans to charge $400 tuition at State University units which have been tuition-free.

"LITTLE" FACTS YOU FORGET MAKE BIG DIFFERENCES IN YOUR GRADES!
THE PROBLEM:
Few students can remember every name, date, formula, conjugation, theorem, definition, principle, demanded by a 4-year program. Educators know that through the "extinction process" you will forget many of the facts taught last week, last month, last term, last year. Thus a "Memory Gap" develops between the facts you are required to remember and the facts you do remember. The smaller you can make your "Memory Gap" the higher your grades will be.
THE SOLUTION:
Only DATA-GUIDE solid plastic loose-leaf summaries are specifically designed to close the "Memory Gap." DATA-GUIDES preserve, on solid plastic, the essential factcore of each subject to give you a permanent, portable reference that can be used from term...to term ...to term—throughout your entire school career. Thus in spite of lost notes, surrendered texts, a difficult program, and an overburdened memory, with DATA-GUIDE solid-plastic charts, you will always have the facts you need.
Authored by leading educators, the subject matter on each DATA-GUIDE solid-plastic chart is imaginatively written and uniquely organized for rapid fact location and memory strengthening. Students throughout the U.S. are using all-plastic DATA-GUIDES to insure success in school. REMEMBER: Today's lessons are based on yesterday's facts! HOW IS YOUR MEMORY?

'Demons of Fear' Exist In Mind Today: Ayers

By SANDY MYERS

"People today don't believe in objective demons, but demons still exist in their mind," says the Rev. Robert C. Ayers, Hill Episcopal chaplain.

Fr. Ayers explains that fears and anxieties, today's demons, are a result of the "coming of age" of the world.

Many people hide their emotions, and thus appear to be apathetic, he said.

"Our culture is one in which many people are ready to take advantage of you if you open up," Fr. Ayers continued. "You learn to keep your mouth shut."

Fresh Start

For Christianity to be truly effective, Fr. Ayers feels, a fresh start should be made.

"We should find the essentials and necessities of life, and the resultant needs. But the only answer is one which comes from God," he noted.

A major problem today is that religious words—such as repentence, salvation and forgiveness—still have deep meaning, but have become "shopworn," Fr. Ayers said.

"Our big mistake is acting as if formal religion is all-convincing. Nothing can convince people to be religious except faith," noted.

Hill in '58

Fr. Ayers, who came to the Hill in 1958, earned his bachelor of arts degree at Roanoke College in Salem, Va., and his bachelor of divinity degree at the Lutheran Theological Seminary at Philadelphia.

He later became an Episcopalian.

A faculty adviser to Sigma Chi Psi fraternity, he is also all-denominational chaplain for Utica College, a branch of SU.

In this capacity, Fr. Ayers travels to Utica every Thursday to attend personnel committee meetings. He emphasized that his work there is primarily with faculty members.

UC has Protestant, Catholic ad Jewish chaplains to work with the students, he noted.

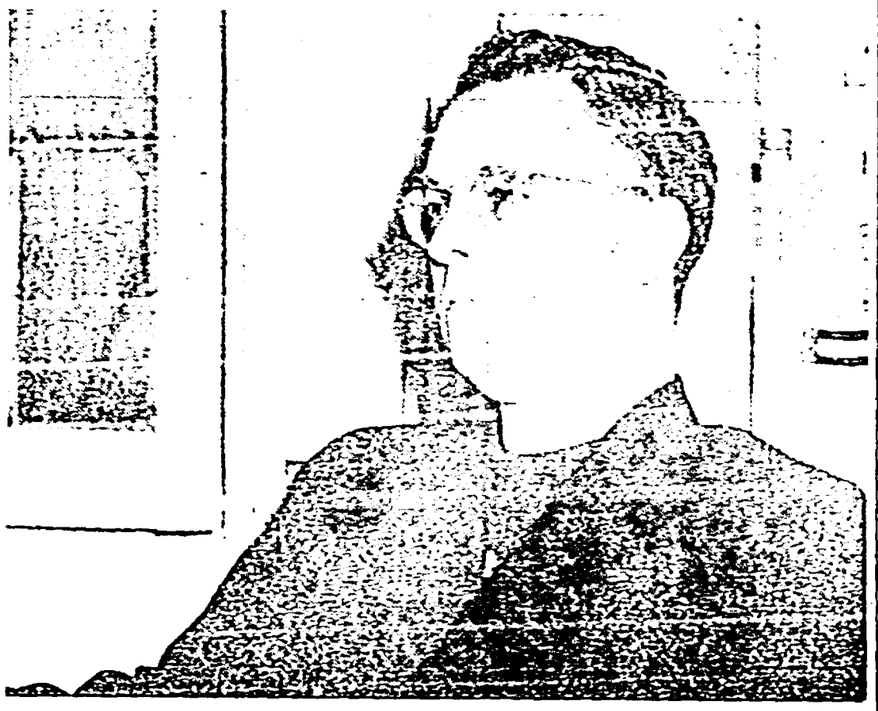
Fr. Ayers is also adviser to the Utica College Religious Association.

In Washington

He recently returned from a six-week stay at the College of Preachers in Washington, D. C., on a special fellowship.

The college is a post-graduate conference center at Washington Cathedral. As a fellow, Fr Ayers studied and assisted in the college programs.

During the summer, Fr. Ayers and his wife spend much of their time at their camp in the Thousand Islands. While there, he rows on the St. Lawrence River.



Reads Too

At Syracuse, he spends much of his time reading — "almost everything, but mostly contemporary novels and books on theology."

"There's so much being written, though, that it's difficult to keep up with the transitions in theology," he admits.

The Ayers, who live at 818 Ostrom Ave., have a Laborador retriever, named Ebony, and a cat, Little Black.

"Little Black used to be part of a two-man team, with another cat, Sambo," Fr. Ayers said. "But Sambo died when he went to the veterinarian's to earn his doctorate degree and couldn't meet the academic standards."

Booth Open For Inspection

Syracuse's newest dormitory will be open to the campus from 2-5 p.m. Sunday. All floors, rooms and lounges of Booth Hall, located at Ostrom and Waverly avenues, will be open for inspection, and refreshments will be served.

The Collegiate Jazz Quartet, which performed at the Skytop "warmer" during Winter Weekend, will perform in the main lounge.

There will be no charge for the program.

William Matteson, president of the Syracuse City Panhellenic awarded the Louella Bothwell Scholarship to Joline Johnson, secretary of Panhellenic.

Service awards, "for sorority women who have made contributions surpassing the expectancy of their duties" were awarded to Marni Walrath, in charge of rush counselors; Geraldine LaDue, panhel treasurer; and Miss Frykman.

Acting Dean of Women Cleo McCracken presented the Panhellenic scholarship awards.

A special placque was presented Sigma Tau Upsilon, associate member of Panhellenic. The award was given because the house, if in full membership, would have been in first place with scholarship and in second place with improvement with an overall house average og 2.0527.

Iota Alpha Pi was named the house with the greatest improvement in average over last year, with a 1.76.

Alpha Sigma Tau was awarded the trophy for highest house average with a 1.8818. In second place was Chi Omega; Phi Sigma Sigma was third; Kappa Kappa Gamma, fourth; and Kappa Alpha Theta, fifth.

The banquet was concluded by the "Syracuse Panhellenic Song" directed by Ann Goldsmith and Marcella Rast.

S. U., Nance Win Titles

Colgate Dominates Meet With Eight Swim Title

By HOWIE SCHNEIDER
VIN ZUKOWSKI

With all those Colgate varsity victories, you knew it wasn't football. Sweeping eight of eleven firsts and four seconds, the current Raider PT's rocked the field of 13 upper New York schools — including SU. But in the frosh channels, our Orange Pools raced to four firsts, four seconds, and two thirds in nine events.

The meet, the 11th Annual Upper New York State Swimming Championships, was held Friday and Saturday at Orange Pool.

Frosh Winner

Saturday, the SU frosh guessed the gun edging the Colgate medley relay by less than a second. For SU, Steve Beaudry swam backstroke, Steve Haesche breaststroke, Dennis Harvey butterfly, and Bill Hotchkiss freestyle.

Colgate then set two pool and meet records. The Raider 400-yd. medley relay's 3:51.6 record won the event by fifteen seconds. Bill Stuek's 1:49.6 in the 200-yd. free set the second Colgate mark.

Union's Fletcher Espenschied swiped a tenth-of-a-second 50-yd. free win over Colgate's Ray Williams with a 22.7 time.

SU's "Barney" Morrison and Robert Oikman placed one, two in the varsity 200-yd. individual medley. The colgate tide returned as Pat LaForte and Robert Bryant took first and second in the varsity diving.

SU then won the next two butterfly events. Frosh Steve Haesche's 59.1 in the 100 and Morrison's 2:12 in the 200 turned the crimson tide. Morrison's win made him the first doubles winner of the meet.

UNIDENTIFIED DIVER takes one last breath before executing his dive during the Upper New York State Swimming Championships at the Archbold Gym pool this weekend.

Varsity and frosh 100-yd. freestyle records were broken and tied. Orange frosh Bauschard tied the frosh mark with a 51.4 time, and Colgate's Stuek set a pool and meet record with his 49.2, Stuek was the meet's other double-winner.

Three more varsity wins gave Colgate a closing four event streak. Jim Renne, although he missed a touch and stopped to hit the turn, won comfortably in the 200-yd. backstroke. Raider Lee Cook copped the 200-yd. breaststroke with a 2:25 mark.

The Raiders set a pool and meet record in the final event, the 400-yd. freestyle relay. The times were 50.8 for Jim Elder, 50.6 for Gordon Fluke, 50.6 for Ray Williams, and 48.1 for Stuek.

Frosh Relay

The Tangerine 200-yd. free relay team of Bauschard, Beaudry, James Pond, and Pete Hickman won the final frosh event with a 1:33.2 time.

St. Bonaventure and RPI sent first place winners to the frosh competition. The Bonnie's Terry Keegan won the 100-yd. backstroke with a 60.6. Jim Bradburn from Trey set a freshman meet record with a 66.3 timing in the 100-yd. breaststroke.

Friday's competition included Gordon Fluke's 500-yd. freestyle record Rich Arluck's (Colgate) 200-yd. record, freestyle win, and Dave Warner's (Buffalo St.) frosh diving win.

Led by Jim Nance, the SU wresters Saturday won the Eastern team championship at Annapolis, Md. Nance dethroned defending champ Ed Scharer of Rutgers 5-0 to remain unbeaten this season.

In addition to "Big Bo" Nance's gold medal, Syracuse took three seconds, two thirds and two fourths for a total of 70 points and the first EIWA title for the Orange in 13 years.

Lehigh was second in the field of 16 teams with 60 points. Pitt had 59, Navy 47, Penn State 28, Rutgers 27, Army 26 and Cornell 24.

One of the meets biggest upsets had Syracuse's Gerry Everling, top seeded 191-pounder, losing 5-3 to Steve Speers of Temple.

The Orange had four men in Saturday evening's finals in the nine weight classes. Terry Haise, Syracuse 123 wrestler, had to forfeit because of an ankle injury after making the finals.

Jim Murrin and Dick Slutzky both lost in final matches after overtime semi-final wins.

In the 137-pound class final, Navy's Mike Harman decisioned Murrin 2-1. Slutzky lost a 4-0 decision to Natvig of Army.

Everling and Sonny Greenhalgh were consolation round winners. Everling beat Burns of Lehigh 6-2 for a third place. Greenhalgh was the 130 pound consolation round winner 4-3 over Meldrin of Cornell.

Gary Sirota and Riedner lost consolation round decisions for fourth place finishes. Riedner lost to Gay of Pitt 6-5 and Sirota 3-2 to Cummings of Cornell.

Titles were won by Merriam, Lehigh, 123; Smart, Lehigh, 130; Harman, Navy, 137; Natvig, Army, 147; Pendleton, Lehigh, 157; Harrison, Pitt, 167; Franzen, Navy 177; Rader, Rutgers, 191; Nance, Syracuse, heavyweight.

Steve Spears, who beat Everling, lost by a pin in the finals.

Slutzky's conqueror, Mike Natvig of Army, is the defending NCAA Champion.

The Orangemen, unbeaten and untied this winter, can now look forward to the National Championships at Kent State in two weeks.

Orange Frosh Down Cornell; End Season With 13-4 Mark

A fired-up Syracuse frosh basketball team rallied for an 84-72 victory over nemesis Cornell Saturday night at Manley Field House. The win ended the teams' four-game rivalry in a 2-2 split.

A highlight of the game was a technical foul call against Syracuse with 2:26 left in the game that helped the Little Red pull into a tie for the final time.

The technical was assessed after Syracuse had disputed the referee's decision to allow a basket by Cornell's Don Munson, who had been fouled. Syracuse argued that Munson had been fouled before attempting the shot.

Following the technical Syracuse, spurred by the enthusiastic crowd, scored the last twelve points of the game.

Cornell had held a 35-33 first half lead.

Dave Bing was high Hill scorer with 27, for a season average of 25.7. However, a lot of credit should be given to the Tangerine defense, which stole many passes intended for Cornell's high-scoring, 6-7 Steve Cram.

Munson paced Cornell with 24 points while Cram and Bob DeLuca scored 15 apiece.

Runnerup in Tangerine scoring was Frank Nicoletti with 18 points.

Syracuse closed its campaign with a 13-4 record while Cornell is 10-2.

St. John's Subdues Orange

By JUDY ADAMS

St. John's wrapped up the Syracuse basketball season in a neat little package Saturday night with a comparatively easy 87-68 win over the hosting Orangemen.

Not that Syracuse didn't put up a good fight. They always do. But for the second game in a row, the visiting club has run away from the Orangemen in the closing minutes.

Thursday night's UConn game had been close until the end. Saturday night the Orange led as much as did St. John's during the first half, which ended 21-21, tied sporadically in the second. With six and a half minutes remaining, they were within striking distance (three points).

In the next 90 seconds, St. John's upped their margin to 10. Dave Duffy added two for St. John's. St. John's continued their spurt until with two minutes left they were well ahead, 58-48. The only Syracuse scoring in the last four and a half minutes was the two free throws. The visitors had made 14 points.

It was the final game for two Orangemen, Capt. Herb Foster and Dick Finley. Foster tallied nine points, one behind Klutsch-kowski's team high of 10. He led both teams in rebounding with nine.

It was a night with many side features. The 1,649 fans were treated to some hold-by-hold accounts of the wrestling meet and to some unusual actions by the referees, in particular, to the ejection of Chuck Richards from the press table for his "disturbing eloquence."

The St. John's squad, who won their eighth against 15 losses, hit 47 per cent from the floor, 36 for 43. Syracuse made 17 of 44 tries for a 36 per cent average and finished with an 8-13 record.

The visitors divided their field goals evenly, 10 and 10, between the halves, but concentrated their foul shots in the second 20 minutes. Or rather, the Orange concentrated their fouls in that time.

St. John's scored only once from the free-throw line in the first half, 16 times in the second.

Sharpshooter Ken McIntyre led the scoring with the wiry Don Burks following with 16.

Jim Seaman, who injured his back in the UConn contest, played only the first 10 minutes of Saturday's game before retiring to the locker room.

ORANGE PLAYMAKER Dick Finley goes up for a basket during Saturday's losing effort against St. John's. Finley and team captain Herb Foster closed out their Syracuse basketball careers this weekend.

Tussman's Topic For Footprints: Governing Mind

Footprints 1963, "Chaos and Cosmos," gets under way at 3:30 p.m. today with a lecture by Dr. Joseph Tussman, associate professor of philosophy at Connecticut's Wesleyan University and former associate professor of philosophy and citizenship on the Hill.

Dr. Tussman will speak on "The Government of the Mind" in Hendricks Chapel.

At 7:30 p.m. today, a faculty panel will discuss this topic in Maxwell Auditorium.

On the panel will be Dr. Joseph S. Berliner, professor of economics; Dr. C. G. Christofides, associate professor of romance languages; Dr. Theodore C. Denise, chairman of the philosophy department; and Dr. W. David Falk, professor of philosophy.

All Footprints lectures are free and open to the public.

Dr. Tussman, author of "Obligation and the Body Politic," "The Supreme Court on Church and State" and "The Supreme Court on Racial Discrimination," received his bachelor's degree at the University of Wisconsin and his master's and doctorate at the University of California.

DR. JOSEPH TUSSMAN

He spent four years in the Army, doing intelligence reports for the Chinese Combat Command.

After leaving the service Dr. Tussman joined the philosophy department at the University of California at Berkeley, where he taught for nine years.

In 1955 he came to Syracuse. On the Hill, one of Dr. Tussman's projects was conducting a study-discussion "Issues of the 20th Century" seminar, part of University College's Humanistic Studies program.

He left SU in 1960 for Wesleyan. Next September he will

Andreas Retirement Verified by Ehling

By ALLAN T. KORT
Sports Editor

Rumors flying around campus that Athletic Director Lewis P. Andreas is soon to retire are true, according to Dr. William P. Ehling, director of the Office of Information Services.

Ehling told the Daily Orange a spring meeting of the Board of Trustees' executive board will decide the "when's, where's and how's of retirement."

He said Andreas, 68, a member of the faculty since 1924 had been scheduled for retirement last year by the university's 65-year retirement rule, but was asked by Chancellor William P. Tolley to remain in his post until a proper replacement is found.

Asst. Athletic Director James Decker is considered by most SU athletics officials and coaches as the most probable successor to Andreas.

Ehling said Decker is one of several persons who have been considered for the post, but that no official decision will be made until the spring meeting.

Andreas' retirement will not be announced until a successor has been selected, Ehling said.

He also suggested the possibility that the chancellor will ask Andreas to remain with the university in an advisory capacity. "A man with as much experience as Lew would be very helpful in scheduling," he said. The chancellor was not available for comment.

An official source reports Andreas' retirement possibly will lead to a reorganization of the duties of the Hill athletic director. Suggested changes include removing the duties of physical education coordinator from the athletic director's jurisdiction.

LEWIS P. ANDREAS

Andreas was born Feb. 25, 1895, in Sterling, Ill. He was educated in the Sterling school system, the University of Illinois and Columbia University, receiving bachelors and masters degrees from Syracuse in 1921 and 1933 respectively.

He was married in 1925 to Annetta Smith and has one daughter, Elizabeth A. Andreas, Tuscon, Arizona.

Andreas completed part of his sophomore year at Illinois, playing basketball and baseball before being forced out of athletics by an injury.

Service

After service in World War I, he selected Syracuse to compiete his education, graduating in 1921 after earning varsity letters in football and baseball.

Upon graduation, he entered

C. Schoeneck Heads Lawyer 'Plan' Group

Charles A. Schoeneck Jr., a 1933 graduate of the College of Law, has been appointed chairman of the lawyers committee for the Onondaga area council of the Syracuse Plan by Earle J. Machold, chairman of the council.

The first meeting of this committee was held Friday at the Hotel Syracuse with Ralph E. Kharas, dean of the college of Law, as featured speaker.

Through the Syracuse Plan the College of Law hopes to provide 30 national competitive scholarships for outstanding students selected from 10 geographical divisions, 30 full-tuition grant and 75 part-tuition grants according to Dean Kharas. It is anticipated that the $11,400,000 goal will be met by June.

In outlining the needs of the college, Dean Kharas said that since its founding 68 years ago, mroe than 2,000 students have been graduated from the school.

"Now among the leading law colleges in the state," he said, "the Syracuse College of Law must continue to increase its faculty and staff allowing adequate time for research and writing increased salaries to attract competent scholars.. Similarly, more library acquisitions are needed and endowed scholarships are necessary for qualified students."

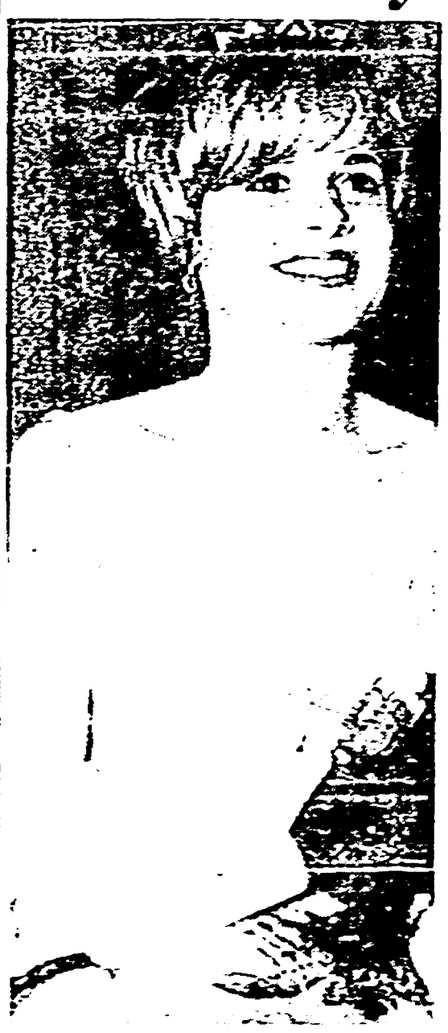
TRAFFIC COURT

Student Traffic Court will meet at 4:45 p.m. today in the Security office, Bldg. 19. Anyone who wishes to appeal any parking tickets must attend.

Coed Room Signup

Number drawing for 1963-64 room assignments for upperclass women will be held today through Friday in the Women's Building, according to the dean of women's office.

Students will draw numbers and receive applications and room contracts. Room assignments, which will be announced after spring vacation, are made on the basis of priority of the number drawn by the individual student. Those with the lowest numbers receive their first choice of rooms.



Room assignments will be made after receipt of the $100 Advance Payment for 1963-64.

Number drawing for next year's seniors and juniors was held Monday and continues today in the recreation lounge of the Women's Building, 9:30 to noon and 2 to 4:30 p.m.

Future sophomores will choose numbers at the same times Thursday and Friday. The drawing will be held in 110 Women's Building Friday, instead of the recreation lounge.

Students are expected to take room applications and contracts home durin gspring vacation for their parents' signatures. Contracts will then be turned in at room assignment time. The list of spaces available for upperclass women will be available after spring vacation.

Military Queen

JUDITH POOL

Haven Hall officially may be stricken from the list of Hill living centers, but Friday night 200 SU cadets and their dates paid tribute to the demolished dormitory in the person of Judith Pool — selected queen of annual Military Ball.

Last month Haven residents were relocated and the hall torn down to make way for the first building of the multi-million dollar Newhouse Communications Center. Before they moved, the coed Havenites picked Miss Pool to represent them in the contest.

Miss Pool, a sophomore studying fashion merchandising in the College of Home Economics, is a resident of Allentown, Pa. She shows her own horses in local contests.

Miss Pool receives an all-expense paid weekend for two in New York City and gifts from local merchants.

Finalists in the contest were Gail Soltysik, Carol Rondeau, Barbara Smyth, Sally Wiley, Joan Spaet and Judith Miller.

Miss Pool was selected in cadet voting after all seven finalists took part in a mock court martial before SU Cadet Association, made up of all Hill students enrolled in Army and Air Force ROTC.

GOON SQUAD APPLICATIONS

Good Squad applications are due Thursday, March 21 by 5 p.m. in the Women's Building. Applications should include name, address, phone, average, high school and college activities, and ideas concerning improvements and recommendations for the 1963 Goon Squad and Orientation Week.

Note: The JSG training program is not a requirement.

14 Students Finish Walk Of 50 Miles

Walking their blisters to class this week are 14 Hill students with the proud claim that they walked 50 miles last weekend.

Ten Syracusans in a student government party and four Theta Chi brothers made separate trips Saturday and Friday respectively to meet the challenge of Utica College students who walked to the Hill March 1. Only one Utican tramped the full 50.

The government group started 35 strong at 6:30 a.m. Saturday, led by JSG Special Services Director Douglas Long. The first of the 10 straggled into Utica about 9 p.m.

Long did not have available Monday a complete list of the successful hikers; they included himself, Renee Bruns and Lisa Coleman, the only coeds to complete the hike. Brian Albing, Kerry Quinn, Thomas Driscoll, Larry Hillel, Michael Schwan and a German Shepherd puppy, later claimed by its Fayetteville owner.

Theta Chi's James Gray, Robert Strasser, Keith Appell and Christopher Pilliton failed to come through on their promise to hike 100 miles — to Utica and back to SU. They started 7:30 p.m. Friday, staggered to UC at 1:30 p.m. Saturday.

Today

READER'S THEATER — presents Sophocles' "Antigone," 8 p.m., Gifford Auditorium, H. B. Crouse Hall.

'ROMEO AND JULIET' — performance 8:30 p.m., Drama Building; tickets $1.50.

HENDRICKS CHAPEL DEAN Charles C. Noble speaks "My Last Words," 7:30 p.m., Watson Hall main lounge.

It's All Just A Matter of Time

Have you been late to classes lately? Have you been bringing your date in after curfew lately? Have you missed lunches or dinners lately?

If your answer to any or all of these questions is "yes" then you have been initiated into the order of the misset timepiece. Or in other words you have become aware that life at Syracuse, like anywhere else, is just a matter of time.

But to get even closer to the point, life at Syracuse is a matter of unsynchronized time. Herein lies the problem.

The clocks on campus (by this we mean the university clocks, which right away gives them a kind of bureaueratie aura which is synonymous with perfection) are unfortunately at wide variance with one another.

That is, if you get out of a ten o'clock class in Maxwell a little late, chances are you will probably find your class in HL has already begun.

Likewise, if you pass from any other building on campus to another you may find yourself so far removed in time from the rest of campus that you may as well be in Fort Wayne contemplating your regional time zone.

But there are other problems involved in this race with time. Say, for instance, that you are one of the many who has somehow convinced himself that by setting his clock ten minutes ahead at night, he will thereby gain some extra minutes sleep in the morning.

If you rely on your souped-up alarm clock or your erratic wristwatch, you could be as much as ten minutes late on SUST (Syracuse University Standard time) for your class.

And if, heaven forbid, you should rely on the radio for a correct time, you're really sunk. The "Timekeeper" it seems has a different time than the clock-conscious disc spinners on the other end of the dial. And neither of them coincide with the university's clocks or yours.

Should you happen to survive such torments as these described and should you establish an envious record for promptness to class, we defy you to beat the system on the Mount.

They are on another system entirely. Your car clock and your radio both agree that it is 11:10 but the clock in Flint Hall says 11:20. This has led some to believe that head residents devise ways of turning the clock ahead and ending another hectic day a little earlier. We don't know.

But sometimes they're still saying goodby in one hall while a coed bangs on the locked door of another.

What we're looking for is coordination. Let's have Maxwell's time be the same as HL's and Smith's. Let Day Hall be the same as Flint. Let time be standardized at least in our little world.

Clocks of the campus unite. You have nothing to lose but your mainsprings.

Welcome Back

Welcome back Joe Tussman. It's been a long time.

It's been a long time since you sat on your desk during a lecture and asked the class what questions they wanted on their midterm. It's been a long time since you played handball at Syracuse. It's been a long time since you upset a freshman citizenship lecture by saying the Declaration of Independence is a bit presumptuous.

It's been a long time too, since we've had a professor who came to class genuinely worried about the world. Genuinely troubled. Honest enough to admit you didn't know all the answers. Honest enough to question.

Welcome back Joe Tussman. It's been a long time.

TREVER ON CAMPUS

"Watch out for the next one: it's deep . . ."

GUEST SPOT

50 Miles

By RENCE BRUNS

Saturday, March 9, 6:10 a.m. "Onward!" was the battle cry of 35 bold crusaders, as they started their historic journey—in the wrong direction.

"Hey you guys, Utica is that way!" A splendid beginning to a memorable day . . .

Keeping up a pace of four miles an hour, we soon reached Fayetteville. Half of our crusaders took a breakfast break; the rest marched on, disappearing over a hill, not to be seen again until 15 hours later.

25 miles down—25 miles to go. We had come halfway. Blisters and aching muscles began to take a heavy toll: our group melted down to ten. The only one unaffected by pain and fatigue was our mascot Coco, a young German shepherd dog that had followed us since Fayetteville. As I watched her running along the highway with apparent ease, I began to doubt seriously that the Homo sapiens manner of walking upright was the most perfect way. I was ready to crawl the rest of the journey on all fours.

30 miles down — 20-more-miles-to-go . . . and-there-were-seven-of-us-left - limping along Route 5. Perhaps it was motivation, perhaps it was the publicity we continued to get on the Utica radio station that kept us moving along mile after mile. After we had conquered another hill, someone in the group sighed, "Wouldn't a beer taste great now?" The thought was too tempting to be ignored. We stopped at a restaurant and poured a bottle of beer down our dry throats. Getting up, of course, was torturous.

Then—there — were—four —of—us left: Doug, Mike, Dean, and I and the dog; we were determined to get to Utica somehow. I began to picture our goal as a kind of Mecca, dreaming of a warm fire, coffee, dry sox, and a hot bath. Momentarily I forgot the ordeal we were going through. But reality was cruel, and cold, and windy. With vigah, we—collapsed in a pile of snow. A car stopped.

"You guys from Syracuse?"

"Yes, Ma'am."

"Well, keep up the good work. It's only 15 more miles!"

Only 15 more miles. . . . Walking had become an automatic act of placing one sore foot ahead of the other sore foot. We stopped again at a restaurant, this time ordering something slightly more powerful than beer. Contrary to expectations, our heads stayed totally clear. Coco was rewarded with half a pound of ground beef.

Another car pulled over to the side of the road, and a lady equipped with a camera jumped out.

"Are you kids walking to Utica?"

"We're trying . . ."

"Good. Let me take your picture."

"Ma'am, we can't stop walking—we won't get started again."

A thought crossed my mind. "Are you from the press?" I asked. She nodded. We obeyed her request, lined up, smiled, and continued our excursion, hobbling along the highway.

Only . . . ten . . . more . . . miles to Mecca. It was getting dark and chilly. Cars from the Utica College campus drove past us to check on our progress. We had come this far; we knew we would finish. Doug was limping heavily; Dean developed a blister on his hand; Mike talked about comfortable couches, but no one listened; I sang "I ran all the way home . . ."

9:15 p.m. We had reached the outskirts of Utica. A gas station attendant informed us that the campus was only two more miles away.

"But there's a shortcut you can take. You'll save about a mile," he said. "Take the road that says 'Road Closed' and follow it until you come to the railroad tracks . . . " etc.

Before long, we found ourselves knee-deep in snow in the middle of nowhere. Walking became almost impossible. We were lost. On top of our misery, it began to snow heavily. Even Coco showed signs of exhaustion, as we staggered towards several isolated houses in this Siberian area.

Doug approached one of the houses and knocked on the door.

"Sir, this may sound crazy, but we just walked here from Syracuse. Could you tell us how to get to Utica College?"

The man looked at us twice —four ragged individuals, ready to collapse any moment, and a German shepherd stretched out in the snow.

To make a long, painful story short, we finally found the railroad tracks, as we rolled down a snowbank. 15 minutes later, the lights of the Student Union building were visible. Our last reserve of energy was spent as the four of us ran towards the entrance. Utica College students and members of our crusade greeted and congratulated us.

The challenge had been answered—our mission was accomplished.

LETTERS

Antigone

To the Editor:

The following letter is to John Greenwald, entertainment editor.

Thnak you for the story mentioning "Antigone" which appeared in Friday's Daily Orange.

Evidently it is the same story that was used about ten days ago because it has the same misspellings and inaccuracies that were contained in that earlier story. Henry Kahn is not a "Century" in the piece but a sentry. Mower's first name is Culver rather than "Kolver." I am an instructor in the department of oral interpretation rather than a "graduate student."

It is our hope that someone will find the time to review the show. If so, the above observations may be useful.

Please don't assume that I am offended at being identified as a graduate student. Some of my best friends are graduate students. But I feel that an audience is less likely to be attracted to a performance which has been advertised as having been directed by a graduate student than they would be if it were being directed by a bona fide faculty member.

Harold Hagstrom

POLICY ON LETTERS

The Daily Orange invites, and even urges, the expression of opinion on the part of its readers. The editors make a sincere effort to publish as many letters as possible, but space and the illegible condition in which some letters are received eliminate several from consideration.

THE CUTTING ROOM

A Nuisance?

by John E. Greenwald

There are two red-brick, turreted buildings on either end of the SU campus. What is taught in one, the Journalism Center, seems unacceptable to the other, the Administration Building.

That appears to be the gist of the current "difference of opinion" between the Dean of Men's office and the Daily Orange. Affairs are unpredictable enough at the DOM office for the few puppet strings they control to be occasionally snipped at by the DO.

Trying to mete out a "punishment" certainly is complicated by trying to judge how campus publicity will effect the student, house, or public opinion of the crime. Alumni may have a low opinion of the university anyway; there's no point (and no dollars) in aggravating that opinion.

We agree Dean Clifford. There's nothing more efficient than operating in a vacuum. Who needs unpredictable pressures? Who want's damaging headlines? Who likes disgruntled alumni?

No one, we suppose. No one, that is, who is merely concerned with the dangers of publicity, headlines and tight-walleted grads. After all, Dean Clifford, a newspaper that is something more than a bulletin board just gets in the way. A newspaper that digs and reports more than press releases is a troublesome newspaper—a nuisance.

Unfortunately, Dean Clifford and his superiors are not the only ones who consider a NEWSpaper annoying. Everyday the Hellbox is crowded with students, Syracusans, faculty members, "public relations directors" etc. who want that story, that picture, that release printed.

If the DO printed all those blackface, bordered boxes that we were asked to print the front page would resemble a checker board more than a newspage.

University religious leaders get upset when some other religious leader's service gets mentioned first in "Chapel Roundup." Foreign students, after appearing in a public debate, browbeat a reporter for mentioning their names.

Campus leaders, whose intelligence varies inversely with their egos, claim "inaccuracies" when their inanities are correctly quoted. Faculty submit campus notices telling what assignments are required for Tuesday's class.

This year's DO is no sensation monger, no scandal rag. It is an attempt to publish a daily newspaper as complete, as accurate, as responsible as a part-time, student staff can make it. If, in printing a paper as close to those standards taught us, we step on the petty toes of small minded, scared students, faculty and officials, then perhaps the Journalism School should alter its curriculum.

In closing, let us remind the campus that the Daily Orange has one of the proudest histories of editorial freedom of any campus paper. It is one of the few traditions that Syracuse University can be proud of.

We hope the second floor of the Administration Building is aware of that. The Journalism Center is.

THEATER

Antigone

If Harold Hogstrom, director of the Reader's Theater production of Sophocles' "Antingon" wanted something stark Sunday night, he succeeded.

Indeed, he succeeded too well for our tastes. "Antigone" went beyond the stark becoming a barren, dry, often unemotional, often unlyrical presentation.

This classic drama of a strong-willed king in conflict with a woman who merely wants to bury her dead brother was read, for the most part, with a minimum of histrionics. The emphasis was on the language.

With the exception of those lines read by the chorus most of the dialogue was pure and simple but not very lyrical.

The readers were all of high quality, especially Linda Sternberg, as Antigone, Palmer C. Dante as Creon, Clyde Cawley as Creon's son Haimon and Henry Kahn as the Sentry.

Two of the scenes, when Haimon fights with Creon and when Antigone is about to go to her death, were done with power and beauty, respectively.

"Antigone" will be read 8 p.m. today in Gifford Auditorium, Huntington B. Crouse Hall.

JEG

'Juliet' Playdates

The Boar's Head production of William Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet," starring Bonnie Cousins and Richard Miller will run this week through Saturday, and next week Wednesday, March 20 through Saturday, March 16. Tickets cost $1.50 on weeknights and $2 on weekends. Discounts are available for block seating.

Sebok U. S. Debut Today

Music history will be made in Syracuse tonight with the American concert debute of Hungarian pianist Gyorgy Sebok, 8:15 p.m. today in Lincoln Auditorium.

Sebok was hailed last February when he accompanied cellist Janos Starker in a Famous Artist Series concert.

GYORGY SEBOK

Starker brought Sebok to this country to introduce him to American audiences. Since 1956, Sebok has been a resident of France. He has performed with many major orchestras, many times, under the baton of Pierre Monteux.

A recording devoted to the works of his compatriot, Liszt, won him the Grand Priz du Disque in France.

Murray Bernthal, director of Famous Artists, decided to engage Sebok for one of a series of two piano concerts offered in lieu of the cancelled Sviatoslov Richter recital. The Russian performer is currently recovering from a heart condition.

The other Famous Artist piano concert will feature Byron Janis on March 27. Specially priced student tickets for both concerts as available at the School of Music.

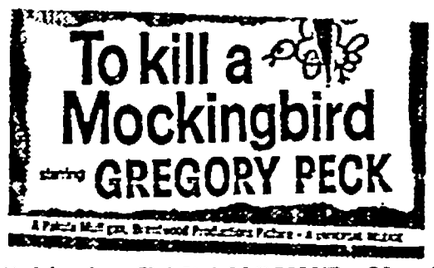
Sebok will open his program with Handel's Chaconne in G. Major, followed by the Sonata No. 14, K. 476, by Mozart.

Bela Bartok's Dance Suite, written in 1923 for orchestra and transcribed later for solo piano, will provide the highlight of the evening.

Sebok will perform Claude Debussy's Suite Bergamasaue for his first number in the second portion of the program. The suite is comprised of Prelude, Menuet, Clair de lune and Passepied.

Closing his performance, Sebok will play Franz Liszt's Spanish Raphsody.

Writers Needed



Interested in writing skits, black-out sketches, songs or dialogue? If you want to express the drama in your soil you can do it by writing material for a review at the Lively Arts. Jean Sabatine, ext. 2480, is directing the program as part of her senior honors project in drama, with Robert Scarpato as faculty advisor.

'Mockingbird' Set

The movie, based on the Pulitzer prize winning Harpur Lee novel, "To Kill a Mockingbird" opens today at the Paramount. Gregory Peck stars in the film which has been nominated for eight Academy Awards.

History of Drinking Policy-Part IV

THE FOLLOWING is part of the long history of the drinking policy at Syracuse University. It is the result of over a month of research, both in the archives, interviews with policy makers and outside sources. The article is written by Jan Fowler, a sophomore, who stated his purpose as an attempt to "put an end to the 'sword rattling' that has gone on in the last several decades."

By JAN FOWLER

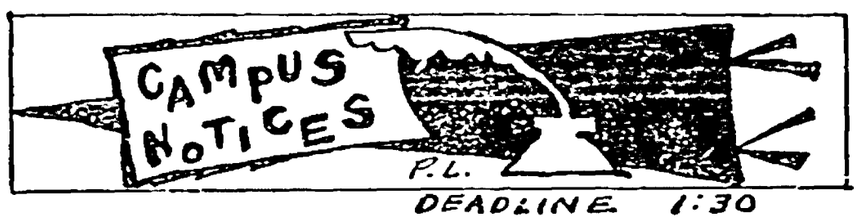
Trustees vs. endowments. These men do make a very big impact, an absolute impact on policy. Sometimes it has been said that their position is equal to the amount of money given. But the ultimate trustees make large responsibility donations to policy, also. We are increasing our wealth in endowments as evidenced by the 76 million dollar building program. But I hasten to say that money is not a sole factor. Also, that setting policy is not up to the parent, student or alum, it is up to the educator, he alone makes the decision.

Stated positively, this university would not accept money contingent on educational policy. Gifts are free gratis, nothing is ever written about keeping the policy the same to receive a gift. Of course, the donor could express desires, but he has no actual authority; each one of us has the same priviledge. Under educational policies we find the subject of drinking policy, cars, fraternities and sororities and sports. I was surprised about this title.

Any policy always inconveniences some but actually the majority rule is in effect. The University happens to care about its students in their out of class experiences as a part of their education as opposed to Cornell policy which has very little regard for student-University relationships.



Because of our size, clandestine drinking does go on although it is the University's responsibility to curb this. If people wouldn't get irrational and cause "public" reaction to the problem, the advantages would be yours. Granted?

Drinking does not improve you scholastically, and there is good evidence to the contrary. Some fraternities and sororities realized this and some surprisingly have a national policy against drinking.

Even the Chancellor's personal beliefs, and those of his family are important and must be weighed in his mind. The Chancellor has absolute authority in policy making, less than was rarely was a chancellor ever censured by the trustees. The Chancellor has specific jurisdiction while the trustees have ultimate jurisdiction. Since the Chancellor has absolute policy making power, he pretty well summed up what there was to be said in relation to can and will the policy be changed.

In the DO article of March 3, 1963, Chancellor Tolley said, "So long as I am Chancellor there will be no modification of the drinking policy." Also it is significant that at Friday's, March 3, board meeting there was a unanimous decision of the board to support the Chancellor. See my point? Are we being put upon? To show the width of the present policy, another article of the DO, on Feb. 14, 1963, said, "A junior has been placed on disciplinary probation (not expelled, pretty lenient considering) for a violation of the University's drinking policy off campus, that led to police action. While the charge against the student was dropped, violation of the University's policy to the point of being charged brought the school's action, Clifford said." The point is — he was arrested, charged, and is still in school.

MARKING ON THE CURVE—AND WHAT TO DO ABOUT IT

Twonkey Crimscott was a professor. Choate Sigafoos was a sophomore. Twonkey Crimscott was keen, cold, brilliant. Choate Sigafoos was loose, vague, adenoidal. Twonkey Crimscott believed in diligence, discipline, and marking on the curve. Choate Sigafoos believed in elves, Julie London, and thirteen hours of sleep each night.

Yet there came a time when Twonkey Crimscott—mentor, sage, and savant—was thoroughly outthought, outfoxed, outmaneuvered, outployed, and outwitted by Choate Sigafoos, sophomore.

"You and your ideas!"

It happened one day when Choate was at the library studying for one of Mr. Crimscott's exams in sociology. Mr. Crimscott's exams were murder—plain, flat murder. They consisted of one hundred questions, each question having four possible answers—A, B, C, and D. You had to check the correct answer, but the trouble was that the four choices were so subtly shaded, so intricately worded, that students more clever by far than Choate Sigafoos were often set to gibbering.

So on this day Choate sat in the library poring over his sociology text, his tiny brow furrowed with concentration, while all around him sat the other members of the sociology class, every one studying like crazy, every one scared and pasty. Choate looked sadly at their stricken faces. "What a waste!" he thought. "All this youth, this verve, this bounce, chained to musty books in a musty library! We should be out singing and dancing and cutting didoes on the greensward! Instead we are here."

Then, suddenly, an absolute gasser of an idea hit Choate. "Listen!" he shouted to his classmates. "Tomorrow when we take the exam, let's all—every one of us—check Choice 'A' on every question—every one of them."

"Huh?" said his classmates.

"Oh, I know that Choice 'A' can't be the right answer to every question," said Choate. "But what's the difference? Mr. Crimscott marks on the curve. If we all check the same answers, then we all get the same score, and everybody in the class gets a 'C'."

"Hmm," said his classmates.

"So why should we knock ourselves out studying?" said Choate. "Let's get out of here and have a ball!"

So they all ran out and lit Marlboro Cigarettes and had a ball, as indeed, you will too when you light a Marlboro, for if there ever was a cigarette to lift the spirit and gladden the heart, to dispel the shades of night, to knot up the ravelled sleeve of care, to put spring in your gait and roses in your cheeks, it is filtered Marlboros—firm and pure and fragrant and filled with rich, natural, golden tobacco. And, what's more, this darlin' smoke comes in soft packs that are actually soft and flip-top boxes that actually flip.

Well sir, the next morning the whole class did what Choate said, and, sure enough, they all got 'C's, and they picked Choate up and carried him on their shoulders and sang "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" and plied him with sweetmeats and Marlboros and girls and put on buttons which said "I DOTE ON CHOATE."

But they were celebrating too soon. Because the next time shrewd old Mr. Crimscott gave them a test, he did not give them one hundred multiple choice questions. He only gave them one question—to wit: write a 30,000 word essay on "Crime Does Not Pay."

"You and your ideas," they said to Choate and tore off his epaulets and broke his sword and drummed him out of the school. Today, a broken man, he earns a living as a camshaft in Toledo.

Theta Sig Banquet Slated

Members of the Hill undergraduate chapter of Theta Sigma Phi, honor fraternity for women in journalism, will be guests at the annual Matrix Table Banquet Thursday in the Corinthian Carriage House.

At the dinner the Mary Zoretskie key will be awarded to the outstanding senior woman in the SU School of Journalism.

A second award of $100 will be given to the junior woman giving the most promise of professional achievement in the field of journalism.

The winner of a county-wide high school essay contest on the subject of journalism as a profession also will receive an award of $25.

Main speaker at the banquet, sponsored by the professional Theta Sig chapter, will be a Syracuse alumnus, Mrs. Vincent M. Barnett, Jr., wife of the new president of Colgate University.

She will speak on "The Other Side of the Fence," as she contrasts her experiences as a student editorial writer with those of a university administration wife.

Graduating in 1935, the former Barbara Brown was a Daily Orange senior editor and member of Theta Sigma Phi. She was also secretary of Women's Student Senate, a member of Eta Pi Upsilon, senior women's honorary, and Delta Delta Delta sorority.

Among the guests at the head table will be Prof. and Mrs. Roland E. Wolseley of the J-School, and Vice-President and Mrs. Kenneth G. Bartlett.

Awards will be presented by Mrs. John Kohl, former member of the Office of Information Services staff at Syracuse and now president of the professional chapter of Theta Sig.

Frances Sliney, president of the SU undergraduate Theta Sig chapter will also participate in the program.

The story of a classic

In many ways the story of the Thunderbird is one of the most unusual in the automobile business. The whole idea of the car was born at one of the great European automobile shows. The then president of our company pointed to some of the small, lush sports cars that are always a center of attention at such shows and asked his companion, "Why can't we build something like these?"

The companion, who later became a vice president of the company, said, "It just so happens I have one on the boards. I'll show it to you when we get back to Detroit." Then as fast as he could discreetly get to a transatlantic telephone he called his assistant and told him, "Remember that car we've been talking about? Finish those sketches on it."

The Thunderbird became one of the few cars ever built that was produced essentially as the original sketches presented it. Most cars undergo countless changes in the design period. But there was a natural clarity and cleanness to the Thunderbird design that immediately captured all of us at Ford.

It was probably this clean, sharp look that won so many friends so fast when the car went into production. That first Thunderbird had its drawbacks. For example, it was too soft-sprung for true sports-car handling. But, the truth is, it was not designed in the European tradition of the fast performance car. Some people called it a sports car but we never did. We called it a "personal" car; a small, fairly luxurious car that was fun to look at and fun to drive. It had its own integrity: it was one alone.

We built the Thunderbird as a bellwether car for Ford. It was our intention to test new ideas before we put them into our Fords, Fairlanes and Falcons. The new Ford ride and Swing-Away steering wheel appeared first on the Thunderbird, for instance. However, we never foresaw the extraordinary influence Thunderbird would have on the whole automobile business here and abroad. Almost everybody offers the Thunderbird bucket seats these days. And the Thunderbird look is the most decisive styling of the '60s.

The Thunderbird is a classic, made so by a peculiar blend of magic ingredients of which we would love to know the secret. We're building cars right now we hope will become classics, but the truth is, we don't make classics, we make cars. People make the car a classic. And that's the story of the Thunderbird.

America's liveliest, most care-free cars!

Sufrin: History Not Inevitable

By DAN RITEY

"We have in our grasp the capacity to make changes in our world," Prof. Sidney C. Sufrin told freshman citizenship sections Monday afternoon in Marshall Auditorium.

"By a rational approach to a problem, which includes discussion and moral considerations, we can escape the inevitability of history and restore the 'if' of history," the Maxwell economics teacher said.

"The theory of one factor being the cause of all events is wrong," Sufrin said. "It is held because people like simple explanations for history."

This type of theory (like the Marxist view) is attacked as being too simple and not inclusive of all the possible relationships between the elements of history, he explained.

Imperialism

Sufrin elaborated on imperialism as an example of the nature of economic conflict other than wartime effects.

"Imperialism is defined as the control of a country by another for 1) purposes of exploiting the former's desired raw materials, and 2) the construction of an economic system whereby the richer country can use its colony as a market for its goods," Sufrin said.

In addition, he went on, imperialist countries used their colonies as convenient places to send parts of the population that the home country could not absorb.

"Imperialism was justified in the eyes of political leaders when their society was too poor to develop their own resources and had to exploit other lands' material," Sufrin said.

Prestige

Backward lands and cultures were totaly exploited because the imperialist countries had come to regard this practice as mandator for prestige and ideological reason if not for economics, he continued.

"Alternate arguments to imperialism included free trade among nations and free investment in undeveloped countries," he said. "This investment usually was equal or better than imperialism," Sufrin added.

AirmanFound Dead Monday

An 18-year-old airman was found dead early Monday morning in his room at the Skytop living center on E. Colvin st.

The man was identified as Homer Wilson by officials from the County Medical Examiner's Office. He was on detached servce from the U.S. Air Force taking special courses at Syracuse University, they added.

Officials from the Medical Examiner's office later Monday issued a verdict of strangulation suicide by hanging.

Wilson, an airman third class who enlisted Oct. 25, 1962, was assigned by the U.S. Air Force for language training in Russian at Syracuse University, an Air Force spokesman said. It was to be a nine-month assignment, he added. Wilson arrived at Skytop in February.

Police said the victim's body was found by his roommate after another airman-student in Building M-8 broke open the door which had been locked.

Wilson's body was found hanging from a center beam in the room, police said. His home is listed as Hobbs, N. M.

A farewell note was found in the room, they said.

GIA Meeting To Approve Constitution

Discussion and formal approval of the Greek Independence Alliance constitution will be the main topic at GIA meeting at 7:45 p.m. today at Lambda Psi sorority, 512 Comstock Ave.

Also on the agenda is the discussion of a convention site for spring elections naminations, according to James Gray, GIA president.

GIA has added seven members since its beginning last spring, bringing the total membership to 10, including two independent groups, a Marion Hall group and Sadler 7.

the coaching profession at Norwich (N.Y.) High School where he coached all sports. He later became president of that institution.

Andreas returned to Syracuse in 1924 as an instructor in physical education. He became the university's head basketball coach the same year and retired from coaching in 1950 with a winning record of 355 victories and 133 losses, a winning average of 73 per cent.

Football Coach

From 1927 to 1929, he added the duties of head football coach to his job of basketball coach and phsical education instructor.

He became director of athletics in 1937, a job which until recently included such varied divisions as required physicial education, intramural and intercollegiate activities, teacher-training and physical education for women.

ECAC

Andreas is a member of the Eastern College Athletic Conference and former president of the National Association of Basketball Coaches, the Eastern Intercollegiate Football Association and the Intercollegiate Wrestling Association, and the Intercollegiate Rowing Association.

From 1955-1959, he served as chairman of the planning committee for Eastern Universities in the National Basketball Tournament Committee, and in the spring of 1958 was appointed chairman of the Citizen's Committee for high school athletic facilities in Syracuse.

Hall of Fame

Highlights of Andreas' career at Syracuse include his naming to the Helms Collegiate Basketball Hall of Fame in 1940 and sharing in a national championship football team in 1959 and dedication of the Manley Field House Dec. 15.

Andreas has long been considered a leader in Eastern Intercollegiate Athletics, having been named to almost every ECAC committee.

Seeking the betterment of Eastern Collegiate Activities, Andreas has often come up with rule change proposals. His most noted achievement was the agreement reached last year among three schools to ban the practice of red-shirting, or saving a player for another year.

Andreas has proposed several other major changes, including a ban on spring football practices and the formation of a conference of Eastern independent football schools.

Cleveland Pennant Hopes Depend on Pitching Staff

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first in a series of stories on the pre-season possibilities of the 20 major league baseball clubs.

By JAN GILMORE

The Cleveland Indians are again deep in mediocrity. They have the finest crew of rookies in the majors, and a vast assortment of veterans fresh from a bad year.

At first base is Joe Adcock, an old man who hits homers right-handed. There is also Fred Whitfield, a young man who hits homers left-handed. This is an ideal combo if they both come through.

Jerry Kindall at second makes the amazingly good play and the amazingly bad, tending towards the former. At the plate it is either the strikeout or the long ball, also tending towards the former.

Two kids are up from the minors to try to make short and third. Tony Martinez and Max Alvis. Martinez has great range, good hands. The only question is his bat. Alvis can also field, hit .319 in Triple A ball and has power. Woody Held, a versatile veteran with a capable glove and an erratic bat waits in the wings for a failure on the part of one of these kids.

The outfield is also crowded with possibilities. Alphabetically they go like this:

Walt Bond has speed and an arm. Hit .320 in the minors and .200 major league pitching at a clip in September.

Ty Cline has speed, can field and run the bases but hit .248 so he may be beaten out by Vic Davalillo, a pint sized ex-pitcher who can run like a Kennedy and led the International League in hitting with a .346.

Then there is Tito Francona who moves to the crowded outfield from first base. Francona has a tough, consistant bat but a defensive asset he is not.

They will say that Willie Kirkland can do everything. Last year he didn't, hitting only .200. He should improve.

Al Luplow is the best of the crop. He can run, throw, hit with power. All he has to do is break his habit of running into brick walls in chase of flys, something that benched him three times last year with injuries.

Also there is Gene Green, a strong hitter who has mastered the art of dropping flys. And there is also Willie Tasby.

The catching is one very sound spot. Johnny Romano led major league catchers in home runs. He is capably seconded by young Doc Edwards.

The pitching last year started with Dick Donovan and just about ended there. Donovan has a great slider and his control tops. Pete Ramos has finally come up wth a tangible curve, and was tough in the second half of last year. Mudcat Grant is out of the Army, and will probably be the third starter.

Every year since 1959 they have been saying that Cleveland has a great young pitching staff, and that they should come back from the bad year they have just had. Largely responsible for these statements are Gary Bell, Jim Perry and Barry Latman. They are all still young, have great potential, and should benefit from the increased strike zone.

The Indians gamble that Jerry Walker will make a comeback. Young lefty Ron Nischwitz and minor league pitcher-of-the-year Joe Schaffernoth make up a good bull pen. Sam McDowell will try to fill the Indians' need for a lefthander. McDowell is very fast, has a great curve but needs a strike zone the size of a picture window.

The Indians have practically set an all time record in "ifs," and could finish anywhere from second to eighth depending on if. . . .

Vernick Leads SU Scorers

Final SU basketball statistics show Carl Vernick again leading the varsity in scoring.

Vernick averaged 11.1 points a game over the 21-game schedule. Herb Foster with a 10.6 average and Phil Schoff with a 10.4 mark were the only other Orangemen in double figures for the season.

Vernick led the team last season with a 16.5 average.

The 6-0 junior totaled 233 points with a .354 field goal shooting percentage this year.

Herb Foster was second in total points with 223 and Schoff third with 219.

Foster led the team in rebounds with 178. Klutchkowski had 123, Vernick 105, Schoff 95 and Finley 91.

In compiling their 8-13 season record the varsity averaged 62.0 points a game to the opposition's 68.1. The team shooting percentage was .396 compared with the oppositions .395.

Dave Bing domniated frosh stats leading the club in just about every department. Bing averaged 25.7 points a game with 437 points. His shooting percentage of 49.9 and 192 rebounds were also tops on the little Orange squad.

The frosh averaged 82.2 a game with the opposition scoring 61.9.

Four Home Grid Games On 1963 SU Schedule

Archbold Stadium visits by UCLA, Kansas and the Pitt Panthers feature the 1964 Syracuse University football schedule according to Athletic Director Lew Andreas.

Syracuse will again play a 10-game slate, with four of the contests at home. VPI will also appear in Archbold, taking Colgate's former spot on the Orange card.

The Bruins of UCLA will be making their first visit to Syracuse. Syracuse hosts the west coast team Oct. 10, 1964.

Kansas, one of the stronger Big Eight entries, last appeared here in 1959. The Orangemen entertain Kansas on September 26, 1964.

Pitt moves into the oval Oct. 31, 1964, while the VPI game is set for Nov. 14.

In addition to the four home games, Syracuse has road contests listed with Boston College, Holy Cross, Penn State, Oregon State, Army and West Virginia.

Syracuse will also play a 10-game slate this coming season, with six contests listed for Archbold. Boston College, Holy Cross, Penn State, Oregon State, West Virginia and Richmond all appear here in 1963.

Andreas said that SU's season ticket drive for 1963 is away to a fast start. He reported that over 2,000 season tickets have been sold. . .an increase of 10 percent over a comparable date a year ago.

The complete 1964 schedule—Sept. 19, Boston College, away; Sept. 26, Kansas, home; Oct. 3, Holy Cross, away; Oct. 10, UCLA, home; Oct. 177, Penn State, away; Oct. 24, Oregon State, away; Oct. 31, Pitt, home; Nov. 7, Army, away; Nov. 14, VPI, home; Nov. 21, West Virginia, away.

Constitution Of AWS Up For Changes

Several constitutional amendments will be ratified or rejected at tonight's Association of Women Students' meeting, 7:15 in the Women's Building dance studio.

The major amendment involves changing the Women's Student Court permanently to the AWS Judicial Review Board. The Board temporarily replaced the Court in November, 1961, so that the Court justices could join Joint Student Court (a branch of Joint Student Government).

Another amendment will enlarge the executive council to include the AWS junior officers. The reason for the addition, according to Marilyn Burke, AWS president, is "to make AWS more flexible."

Other proposed amendments give the president power to designate committees or panels on which junior officers serve, and modify the speaker pro tempore's duties on the panels.

The secretary-treasurer's duties will be affected by two amendments. In the first she is made responsible for the coordination of the AWS office hours "and all other activities connected with the office." In another amendment, she is no longer to submit AWS's annual budget to the Budget Board.

The final amendment will shorten the time lapse required for amending the constitution from two meetings to one.

Footprints Continues Today

Tussman Lecture

By SANDY MYERS

To many of the students and faculty members at Hendricks Chapel Tuesday afternoon, Dr. Joseph Tussman was a familiar figure.

The professors and seniors remembered him as Hill associate professor of citizenship and philosphy from 1955-1960.

Younger students recalled reading some of his articles in citizenship pamphlets.

Dr. Tussman, speaking without a prepared text, called for strengthened governmental control of the mind to make democracy more effective.

His speech was the first in the tenth annual Footprints lecture series.

Fear of Control

Fear of governmental control of the human mind stems from the Jeffersonian tradition of horror at the thought of any intellectual control, and from novels such as George Orwell's "1984," which illustrate inescapable mental control, Dr. Tussman said.

"People today are inclined to believe government should leave the mind alone," he asserted.

The remedy, he said, lies not in anarchy, but in a legitimate government.

(See Tussman, Page 5)

Borowitz Speaks

DR. EUGENE BOROWITZ

"Heroes and Anti-Heroes in the Theater of the Absurd" will be the theme for the second Footprints lecture and faculty panel discussion today.

Dr. Eugene Borowitz, professor of education and lecturer in Jewish religious thought at the New York school of the Hebrew Union College, will speak at 3:30 p.m. today in Hendricks Chapel.

At 7:30 p.m., a faculty panel will discuss the topic in Maxwell Auditorium.

On the panel are Dr. Fernando R. Molina, assistant professor of philosophy; Dr. Gabriel Vahanian, associate professor of religion; and Asst. Prof. Yvonne Guers of romance languages.

WAER-FM campus radio station (88.3 mc) will broadcast Dr. Borowitz's lecture at 9 p.m. today.

Dr. Borowitz, a rabbi, is serving this year as adjunct professor of religion at Temple University.

Ordained by the Hebrew Union College, he earned his bachelor's degree at Ohio State University and doctorates at Columbia University and Hebrew Union College.

Dr. Borowitz created and for several years led the national leadership institute and national kallah (study retreat) programs of the National Federation of Temple Youth.

A representative in London at the founding convention of the youth section of the World Union for Progressive Judaism, he also served as a member of the American and international planning committees for the

Revised 'S G' Constitution Goes to Senate Tonight

By ANDY PORTE
Junior Editor

A revised student government constitution will be brought to the floor of Joint Student Legislature tonight in 207 Hall of Languages. If the constittution is approved, it will appear on a ballot April 11 for all campus ratification.

Many minor changes have been made in the constitution is approved, it approved, it will appear on a ballot April 11 for all campus ratification.

Few major changes came as a result of final approval of the revised document by the JSL government structures committee Tuesday.

Several general changes were made in the body of the constitution, including changing the name of the organization from Joint Student Government to Student Government.

When JSG was founded in 1961, the "Joint" was included because the new government was a merger of Men's Student Government and Women's Student Government. It is now felt "J" is no longer a necessary part of student government.

The constitution is also reworded so that students are now "represented by" student government rather than the present "are members of" student government.

(See Constitution, Page 7)

David Knickerbocker, chairman of the JSL government structures committee, announced copies of the constitution will be available after 1 p.m. today in the student government office, 907 University Ave.

He asks all JSL senators to obtain a copy of the constitution before the meeting tonight so they will be familiar with the revisions and prepared to vote on ratification.

GIA Admits Two Groups

By AUDREY LIPPMAN
Junior Editor

Greek Independent Alliance, meeting Tuesday at Lambda Psi sorority, admitted two independent groups, Dell Plain 7 and Booth 5. Other independent GIA members are Sadler 7 and a Marion group.

GIA also gave its support to proposed revisions in the student government constitution. The party spoke against a clause that would keep underclassmen from holding the Joint Student legislature speaker post; however this clause was removed at a legislature government structures committee meeting elsewhere on campus Tuesday night.

In other business, GIA's constitution was approved by party delegates and comes before Joint Student Legislature for its approval tonight.

GIA needs this ratification in order to run candidates in spring campus elections April 11.

GIA's nominating convention will be held starting noon Saturday at Phi Mu sorority, 208 Walnut Pl.

Spring elections involve selection by the student body of sophomore, junior and senior class officers, 18 class senators-at-large and the president and vice president of Joint Student Government.

Joint Student Legislature speaker and speaker pro tempore are elected that body after nominations from the legislature floor.

United Students party and Campus Alliance Party are also nominating candidates this weekend.

CAP nominations are open only to party members.

LENT SERVICES

The schedule of today's Lenten services follows:

ACTIVITY REGISTRATION

All Hill student organizations must return government forms to Activities Coordinator Beverly Lewis by Friday to the student government office, 907 University Ave.

Miss Lewis is in the process of compiling a list of SU activities. The form is available in the Activities Exchange Commissioner mailbox in the government office. There is no fee, Miss Lewis said.

Penalties for non-registration include revocation of university privileges such as financial aid and room reservations.

Those with questions may contact Miss Lewis at ext. 2639.

IFC Nominees Campaigning

By CLAY RICHARDS
Junior Editor

The six candidates for the Hill's InterFraternity Council president and vice presidents posts will give campaign speeches 7:30 p.m. today in Kittredge Auditorium of H.B. Crouse Hall.

The meeting is open to all fraternity men, and must be attended by house presidents and junior representatives.

The three candidates for president are; George (Skip) Stanger, (Sigma Chi Psi), Michael Steinberg, (Sigma Alpha Mu) and Jeffrey Kaplowitz (Phi Sigma Delta).

Junior Exec

Stanger, a junior from Bridgeton, N.J., has been Sig president for two semesters. He has participated in IFC for three semesters., is a member of the junior executive council and a former member of the Goon Squad.

Steinberg, a junior from Scarsdale, is IFC co-rushing chairman. He is a member of Orange Key and a Joint Student Legislature senator. He has spent three semesters in IFC.

Kaplowitz, a junior from Elmont, is under co-chairman of Greek Week. He is social chairman of Phi Sig and has worked for three semesters in the council.

Veep Nominees

Running for vice president are Benton Hubbard, (Delta Upsilon), William Christie (Theta Chi) and David Barrie (Tau Kappa Epsilon).

Hubbard, a sophomore from Darien, Conn., has served in IFC for two semesters. He was co-chairman of the Stockingfoot Dance Winter Weekend.

Christie, a sophomore from Newton, Conn., is vice president of Theta Chi. He has served two semesters in IFC.

Barrie, a sophomore from Basking Ridge, N.J. is rushing chairman of TKE and has been in IFC two semesters. He is a member of the varsity tennis team.

Speeches

Speeches will also be given by Joseph White (Phi Kappa Psi), IFC undersecretary, and Paul Derounian (Phi Delta Theta), IFC undertreasurer. The two will present their ideas for the coming year before receiving final approval for assuming the offices next year. Dissention against their assumptions of the offices of secretary and treasurer will also be heard.

Preceeding the speeches a full report will be given on Greek Week by Chairman James Hormel (Sigma Nu).

The Trophy Game: Just Once a Year

A word about the Daily Orange-WAER basketball game. It has become a tradition in the four short years since it was started and is annually contested bitterly.

Tonight the teams meet again for the coveted Church Key Trophy. This, in itself, is significant because it reflects one of the many bits of symbolism and tradition that have entered into the game.

The Church Key is, of course, a small metal object useful in the opening of bottles, particularly that brand of bottle which contains the liquid of the hops. On the key is etched the heart-warming words "Budweiser, King of Beers."

So each year as we two giants of the campus communications world leave our respective pre-fabs and head for the gymnasium under cover of darkness, it has become significant that what we battle for is a little dust-covered opener, currently gathering dust on the wall of our editor's office.

A fine tradition, you say, adding, but why all the publicity? A fine question, we respond. And we too have addenda:

This is the one time a year for most of us when we can find our own names in news stories. This is the big kick for people in the media. Then too it is a time when athletes of sort find a chance to get some practical experience in the sport they once knew so well.

Once a year we put down the well-worn scrapbook and try to write a few more lines in the book of myths.

Call it vanity, conceit, or whatever. But please give us the benefit of the doubt. This is our one chance to read good things about ourselves. It will be over tomorrow and we won't bother you again till next year.

Or till we run out of Budweiser, whichever comes first.

New Constitution

Ted Bayer is in his final days as student government president but he is doing a lot of work to make sure that his successor will not have to start from scratch—the usual fate of the student government leader at Syracuse.

Thus, the proposed constitutional changes made by Bayer and Dave Knickerbocker are pointed toward just such a continuity. The requirements suggested for top offices seem to pave the way to a better transition between leaders.

The qualifications themselves are reasonable requirements to ask of students in such high positions on campus.

We hope the Joint Student Legislature will consider the proposed changes favorably and reward Bayer and Knickerbocker, and the many others who have labored the changes, with an affirmative vote.

BOOKS

'Ivan Denisovich'

GORDON FREUND, a sophomore in the College of Liberal Arts, is deliberating between a major in English, philosophy or women. Energetically "independent," he claims no campus group affiliations.

"One Day in the Life of Ivan Denisovich" by Alexander Solschenitsyn, 160 pages.

Living is a simple process; it is a question of securing from the environment the products necessary to satisfy the needs of the body. The success of life depends on the abilities of the individual and the barrenness or fertility of his environment.

"One Day in the Life of Ivan Denisovich" is a narrative of human life under very unusual and difficult conditions: those of a concentration camp in Siberia for men imprisoned on charges of having committed political crimes against the Soviet Union during and shortly after the Second World War.

As the title suggests, the entire book concerns itself with only one day in the life of Ivan, but within that one day the author, Alexander Solshenitsyn, attempts to portray the major facts of prison life.

Ivan Denisovich (Shukhov, as his fellow prisoners call him, S 854, as the guards call him) is a Russian peasant farmer who fought with the Russian army in World War II until he was captured by the Germans. He soon escaped, but was accused of being a German spy when he returned to his own lines and, rather than being shot on the spot for lying, lied that he was a spy. This "confession" saved his life, but sent him to a Siberian prison camp for a term of eight years.

Camp life is hard. It is hard because of the severe cold, the scanty food and clothing, and the natural selfishness and bratality of man. The book's emphasis, however, is not on the difficulties of camp life, but on the human resources which must overcome them.

The Soviet government, at least in the early 1950's, did not take very good care of its political prisoners. They were used as labor for government building projects without compensation and they lived on a level of subsistence. They were constantly living on the edge of disease and death—not quite enough food and sleep for good health, not quite enough clothing to keep warm, but just enough to keep alive and working if one could learn the tricks of survival.

Subsistence could not long sustain life. One had to use every resource of craft and cunning. The problems became—how to steal an extra bowl of soup (often little more than boiled water) at breakfast; how to do favors for fellow prisoners who receive food packages from home; how to avoid the often senseless anger of a guard; how to break stupid prison rules without being caught; and finally, how to keep one's will to live, one's pride in existence for its own sake, from being destroyed by meaningless hardship.

Meaningless, because unjust. The author presents two forms of injustice: the external injustice of society—those forces which, from fear and selfishness, first put innocent men into these prisons, and the internal injustice of prison life—those covenants among men of any institution which guarantee a better life for some than for others through bribery or blackmail.

There are those prisoners who bribe themselves into soft jobs by distributing some of the contents of their food packages from home among certain guards. There are those prisoners who inform on others for rewards of extra food or less difficult work. There is the policy of the camp commander to economize by giving four day's food for five day's work. There are all the ruthless, relentless ways in which men prey on one another when they see their often puny interests possibly threatened.

But even amidst the hardships there are the moments of triumph. Small perhaps, but the stuff which makes life tolerable. The bowl of soup successfully stolen from the cook, the knife made from a smuggled hack-saw blade, a wall well built, the confidence of a friend, a cigarette.

The author's style is often a source of pleasure. He narrates simply and effectively, perhaps modeling the simplicity of his language on what he presents as the basic honesty and simplicity of his central character, Ivan Denisovich. As a peasant, intelligent but not brilliant, with a poor education, Ivan is naturally limited in the quality of his thinking.

His perceptions, his insights into the world around him, are true, but they reside entirely in the actualities of that world. Ivan has very little ability to generalize, or to bring into high intellectual relief the basic moral and psychological issues of his situation. He accepts his life as it has been molded by forces greater than himself, and lives only for the sake of living and the vague possibility of a better future.

The author often makes statements obliquely, directing the reader's conclusions but not stating them, in such well-fashioned sarcasms as these: "You don't have to be very bright to carry a handbarrow. So the squad leader gave such work to people who'd been in positions of authority." Or, "There at the table . . . a young man crossed himself. A West Ukranian. . . . As for the Russians, they'd forgotten which hand to cross themselves with."

I wonder, though, what particular value the book can have for an American reader. As with the anti-Stalinist poems of the young Yevgeny Yertershenko, the basic anti-Stalin message of One Day apparently suited Khruschev's purposes.

If one has seen the motion picture Stalag 17, or read about the American POW of the Korean War, this book contains no new knowledge or emotion.

Since the book does not concern itself with the great moral and political issues which produced these camps, it gives me a sense of only partial completion. At only one point in the narrative does the author allow himself to present such questions.

In a conversation between two prisoners, members of the Russian intelligentsia, which Shukhov partly overhears, the motion picture Ivan the Terrible is discussed.

"Ivan the Terrible, isn't that a work of genius? The dance of Ivan's guards, the masked oprichniki.

"Ham," said X 123 . . . "It's all so arty there's no art left in it. And then, that vicious political idea—the justification of personal tyranny. A mockery of the memory of three generations of Russian intelligentsia.

"But listen . . ., art isn't a matter of what but of how."

But this is where the conversation ends. There is nothing more. The great issue which alone gives this book its contemporary importance is passed over, is included only as one of the many elements in prison life.

Ivan Denisovich does not contain himself the full sense of the useless, stupid, ironic injustice of the experience of being a political prisoner in the Soviet Union.

The knowledge of what everyday life in a prison camp is like, which the reader certainly receives, without an attempt at understanding the meaning of that life, is just so much documentation.

It is only the author's style, his ability to bring alive the cold, the hunger and the frustration of prison life, which prevents the book from becoming a dry documentary. But in its essentials, that is what the book is.

For any American who does not know what concentration camp life is, this book can be well worth reading. For those that do, I do not think they will find in it any deep satisfaction.

Bacon's Opera Here May 2, 3, 4

"A Tree on the Plain," an American opera with music by Ernst Bacon and text by Paul by Horgan, will be presented May 2, 3 and 4 at the University Regent Theater.

It will be the world premiere of a revised version of the opera originally commissioned by the League of Composers with premiere at the Spartanburg, S.C. Festival.

The work was produced in the spring of 1947 at the Syracuse University campus and has been presented on many other campus including Denver, Columbia, North Carolina, Harvard and Standord universities. The opera received the David Bispham award for contemporary opera in 1946.

Despite its popularity the authors felt the need of many revisions and withdrew the work from performance.

This year's prorduction will be conducted by Bacon, composer-in-residence on the Hill, and staged by G.F. Reidenbaugh, acting chairman of the drama department.

The children's chorus, representing the children of the neighboring men and women from surrounding farms will appear from the first time in this production.

NITELIFE

Thrush at Manor

By Jeff Zients

Currently appearing in the Driftwood Lounge at the Le Moyne Manor out in Liverpool is Marie Sayles. The intimacy of the quiet room seemed near perfect for the many qualities of this talented thrush. Seated at the piano she accompanies herself through many standard and new pieces with a Sarah Vaughnish jazz feeling for her offerings.

In the four sets caught last week Miss Sayles displayed a wide variety in her selections. Along with her original comic material she sang "What Kind of Fool Am I?" and a particularly rousing "I left my Heart in San Francisco."

Her voice is a striking combination between the aforementioned Miss Vaughn and Della Reese. Her ballads seem to have the same warmth and blues technique of these two. Yet, she maintains her own individuality in new interpretations of many songs. Whether playing or singing, or both, Miss Sayles is always conscious of her jazz root assets.

Miss Sayles is also always conscious of the lyrics. This is something missing in a great deal of our modern vocalists. Her music is believable because she sounds as if she means it. Her blues are irresistably poignant and the few songs she belts are vibrant and striking.

This songstress is obviously one who enjoys her work. She sits at the piano, smiles, asks for audience requests and gets them. Her song book is larger than most as she usually "bats three out of five."

When we asked for "Small World" from Gypsy Miss Sayles said she would try and out came a beautifully different interpretation of the Jule Styne smash. Hardly meant as a blues number Miss Sayles projected new life into this standard, keeping the original intent of the composer while adding an undertone of sadness.

Obviously a trouper, Miss Sayles joked with the audience on numerous occasions and brought some real continuous applause from the house. This is quite rare for a place as small and intimate as the cozy Driftwood Room.

Marie Sayles has style, class and an exciting manner in performing. We would like to hear her away from the piano, standing up, with a full brass orchestra behind her.

Electronic Music Man

Otto Luening, composer, professor of music at Columbia University, and an authority in the field of electronic music will appear in a lecture-demonstration at the Crouse College Auditorium 10 a.m. Thursday.

This is the second of two special programs arranged by the Special Projects Committee of the School of Music dealing with contemporary techniques in music composition.

Luening has served as musical director of the Brander Matthews Theater since 1944. He conducted first performances of Gian-Carlo Menotti's opera, 'The Medium" and Thomson's "The Mother of Us All."

He has been prominent in musical activities at Barnard College and Bennington College. His "Louisville Concerto" was commissioned by the Louisville Philharmonic Society in 1951.

Choral works, piano compositions, orchestral music and compositions for a wide variety of chamber music ensembles, music for the theater and works involving tape recorder have been published, recorded and widely performed.

Luening will meet informally with students 2 p.m. Thursday.

UP IN THE AIR

'Television Quarterly'

By Leslie Berg

Deep down in the basement of the library where only tv graduate students dare to venture (and with trepidation) an interesting publication is emerging. "Television Quarterly" the journal of the national academy of Television Arts and Sciences is being published from Syracuse University.

Under the editorship of Dr. A. William Bluem of the SU Television and Radio Center, the Quarterly raises some interesting questions about the broadcasting media. I was especially interested in an article by Joseph Golden of Cornell on "TV's Womanless Hero."

Pooh on scholarly journals, you say. But when a man dares start an article with the sentence "Women—particularly the wife and mother species—are in an alarming state of decline,"—then you keep reading. "And if the number of popular Westerns and Easterns bear any witness, women have not only declined in interest and importance, but virtually have vanished altogether."

"There is no horse being kissed by the hero at the final fade; there is no woman either," he continues.

Golden goes on to document the number of tv heroes who have deceased wives or none at all. The hero is a courtly man but at the sight of a female he "stammers and blushes and leaps to his feet at the mere crinkle of a crinoline or a whoosh of nylon."

Apparently male script writers and producers are rebelling against the all-wise mother image created by radio soap operas. Good ole Ma Perkins and Helen Trent were the type of women who "comforted their suffering males . . . and were sexually aloof, emotionally eclectic, morally rocklike. Serene in their wisdom, wise in their guidance, determined in their self-effacement, they saturated listening housewives with a magnanimity that stultified reality at its root."

Now have a womanless hero who cooks his own meals, spends his time in the company of other doctors or cowpokes and stocks his own bandaids. This is supposed to make him a symbol of a more "sterner, more patriarchal society than we now enjoy."

I must say this trend is disturbing. It has ruined my illusions. I still labor under the delusion of a soap opera heroine like "Our Gal Sunday." How well I remember staying home with a cold and listening to daily installments, always positive that the little girl from the mining town would make good. She never seemed like a domineering female to me?

"OK—I'm prejudiced. But I must admit that "Television Quarterly" does raise some interesting questions about life on the magic box.

JSG Takes The Floor

This year student government has experimented in various forms of organization. Each branch--executive, legislative and judicial has experienced changes.

Now all the experience gained has been written down in the new Constitution. Many of the people who were responsible for government this year are graduating.

The constitution must be passed this year so all their work and ideas will not be lost. Otherwise next year's officers will have to start all over again.

There must be some basis for continuity from one year to the next. Otherwise half the time of the government officers is wasted in organization.

The new constitution is written to be as broad and flexible as possible. Essentials are included for each branch. In addition, each branch has its own by-laws. These allow for minor changes without involving a campus wide referendum.

For example, in the constitution public relations is named as one division under the executive departments.

Functions assigned the department are listed in the by-laws. If one of these minor functions needs to be altered the executive branch itself can amend its by-laws.

Actually many provisions of this new bill are clarifications of the old constitution.

One basic change is the incorporation of class officers and class councils into student government. Requirements for officers and the method for choosing executive council members are listed.

In order to tie class government to student government two legislature senators must be on each class executive council. The councils are also requested to consider various projects which the government president may assign them. The president in turn must approve all class projects.

The constitution will be discussed at the JSL meeting tonight.

Tussman---More Control

By SANDY MYERS

"For angels, terrible. But for animals, not bad."

Dr. Joseph Tussman, at the Footprints panel discussion Tuesday night in Maxwell Auditorium, said the government he would propose would have pitfalls—but these would be outweighed by the advantages.

In his government, the mind would be controlled by teaching people the basic principles of democracy.

The democracy would involve complete supression of advertising, which, Dr. Tussman said, "destroys the mind, damages character and is leading to the destruction of the universe."

Dr. Joseph S. Berliner, economics professor, a member of the panel, asked Dr. Tussman how the governmental leaders would be selected.

"Would it make a difference whether we were to assume they are incorruptible, or that they are the best leaders but possibly corruptible or that they are totally corrupt?" Dr. Berliner queried.

Theories

Dr Tussman cited theories on which political structure can be built: "everyone is like us, so we have to create a political system where no one can do too much harm; or 'government is difficult, requiring intelectualism and good will, and the problem is marshalling these qualities into government.'"

At the preesnt Dr. Tussman said, government, with its checks-and-balances system and basic distrust, is based on the first belief.

"But risky as it is, we have to act on the second assumption," he asserted.

"We can't distruct the only remaining structure that remains hopeful in the universe," he continued. "The church and home have failed. We must salvage politics."

Reform

Dr. W. David Falk, professor of philosophy, noted that any political refrom in a democracy would necessarily be self-correction.

"I'll accept the importance of a democratic institution as an integral part of the democratic process. But we should pay more attention to the state of intelligence in that democracy," Dr. Tussman answered.

Philosophy department Chairman Theodore C. Denise, panel moderator, asked about institutions which do not derive their strength from the government, such as the medical profession.

Dr. Tussman admitted, "there are times, in our society, when professional workers become more interested in money than in work."

Control

In an attempt to show why government should control communication media, especially television, Dr. Tussman said too much emphasis is placed on the freedom of speech clause in the first amendment to the Constitution.

"Nowhere does the amendment say anything about television, or about television, or about getting books into libraries, and influencing minds that way," he noted.

Irwin Sirota, a graduate student in drama, commented from the audience, "If it's not television, it'll be something else."

"We'll control that too," Dr. Tussman answered.

He emphasized his proposed government is hypothetical, but asserted many of his ideas could be put into practical use.

Also on the panel was Dr. C. G. Christofides, associate professor of romance languages.

History of Drinking Policy-Part V

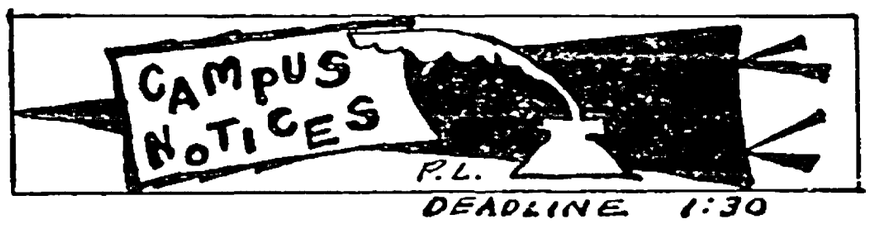
THE FOLLOWING is part of the long history of the drinking policy at Syracuse University. It is the result of over a month of research, both in the archives, interviews with policy makers and outside sources. The article is written by Jan Fowler; a sophomore, who stated his purpose as an attempt to "put an end to the 'sword rattling' that has gone on in the last several decades."

By JAN FOWLER

This problem, believe it or not, is one of education. A renewed effect here is an answer to the problem. This goes through the IFC, Panhel, student leaders, and more communication in the freshman year, the why's and wherefore's, which I never received. There is a revision of the student handbook in process in which more things will be spelled out.

The last ditch effort may be the student union, ten years hence. I was informed that there is a faint glimmer, but only under the right conditions, that the student union may have a bar that serves beer under the auspices of the university and supervision of the faculty. But it was added that there are projects more pressing as far as money resources go.

It has been said that if you give in to student pressure they will constantly use this as a lever possibly to lower the standards of their institution; here is another factor. Anyway, it was unanimous among those policy enforcers that I interviewed that they wouldn't like to see a change and that they did not see a change in policy forthcoming.



If the state raises the minimum age to 21 the problem will be noticeably reduced, in fact, the problem will be nil at the level of the freshman. We are relatively lucky in this state to be able to drink at 18; think of other universities out of state where they are not allowed to drink until they are seniors, in most cases. This problem seems to indicate that drinking in the home is rampant. But in all income classes the percentage of families buying any alcoholic beverages at all is only 59% (Bureau of Labor Statistics, 1961). You might deduct from this that 41% of the United States families don't encourage drinking.

College is supposed to "prepare you for life." Where can you find and point out a duplicate situation in life that is comparable to your college experiences, say even on a dry campus. Does a wet college campus prepare you for life, just because you may learn to hold your liquor? I think not.

"Only the visionary can survive." This thought, taken from the Old Testament, is an unwritten clause in the charter of every university. I believe this university follows this law; evidence is the continued increase in enrollment but over that, the quality of those enrolling, in all aspects, is rising. The university has a knack for adapting to all situations. We expect this of the university without thinking of it unless we feel they are out of bounds; but are they, here?

Turning to a popular argument, that of other colleges in relation to ours. Take that ideal drinking haven, Cornell University. The student-administration relationship is a direct opposite of ours. There is no, so-called "spoon-feeding" there. No RA's or advisors; BUT, we must have something on our side since they are more and more turning and readjusting their program of student relationship policy to ours and those similar to ours.

Joe Tussman's Government

This control must extend in two directions: control of education and control of communication, Dr. Tussman said.

Cognitive Enterprise

"Education is a cognitive enterprise to develop and create a certain kind of mind. Knowledge for knowledge's sake is as outmoded as art of art's sake, but it lingers in the academe and makes truth education almost impossible," Dr. Tussman noted.

A democratic government has a high stake in shaping the mind in certain directions, he said.

Government of other institutions in society which maintain intelligence is also necessary, Dr. Tussman continued.

Suffering

"We are suffering very heavily from the view that communication best serves the public interest when the government does not interfere," he added.

"But turning instruments of communication to private enterprise has ruined them," he said.

Dr. Tussman noted that Americans become "intellectual idiots" unless they isolate themselves from the lack of controversy offered by communications media.

"People who buy television and radio time want to sell. Thus, they don't want to offend anyone, and they keep all genuine controversy away from the public," he asserted.

Truth

Dr. Tussman, associate professor of philosophy at Wesleyan University in Connecticut, said people must learn to depend on the government for truth, just as they now depend on administration for fair standards of weights.

"You can't put truth in the same category as a scale that correctly measures 16 ounces," he said. "But through failure of will and of institutions, we're not doing what should be done. We're drifting toward disaster."

Only through a government guarantee of truth in statements that are in the public domain can a true democracy be maintained, Dr. Tussman concluded.

'Party' Politics

UNITED STUDENTS party rolled on down the election trail Tuesday night with a coffee at Alpha Gamma Delta sorority. Party delegates mingled with prospective nominees; US' nominating convention is this weekend. Here, laying plans, are PENNY SHAPIRO, SHARON PECHENIK (US vice president), SIGMUND SUGARMAN, PATRICIA HEALY, DAVID HARTMAN and ROBERT TAYLOR (US president).

Foresters Set Drive Record

Students, staff, faculty, and administration of the State University College of Forestry at Syracuse University contributed almost 200 pints of blood to the Red Cross during the college's 24th semi-annual blood drive which has just been concluded.

The 200 total comes close to tying the college's all-time record of 210 pints.

Over the last 12 years, Forestry College personnel have given 3,921 pints — about 500 gallons — of blood to the Red Cross.

The blood drive marked the beginning of the Red Cross' participation in a new, five-year study of nutrition of adolescents and senior citizens as determined by biochemical tests on blood.

The five year research project is being conducted by the Syracuse University College of Home Economics in collaboration with the Upstate Medical Center. The College of Forestry also is cooperating.

In charge of the research program for the College of Home Economics is the Department of Foods and Nutrition, of which Dr. Anne Bourquin, chairman, is chief investigator.

The twice-yearly blood drives at the forestry campus are sponsored by The Students' Association of the College of Forestry.

Student chairman of the latest blood drive was C. Nelson Hoy, a junior specializing in land management.

President of the Students' Association is Terry Amburgey, a senior in forest botany.

Dr. Goodman ToReadPaper

Louis J. Goodman, associate professor of civil engineering at SU, will present a paper Thursday at the first regional meeting of the United States-Canadian Eastern Section of the International Society for Terrain-Vehicle Systems.

Prof. Goodman's paper, "Land Locomotion Mechanics Research at Syracuse University," will help review current research activities in the eastern half of the country and Canada in the field of land locomotion mechanics and off-road transportation problems.

Goodman has been working in this field at SU for three and one-half years.

His current studies are concerned with the influence of disturbance processes on soil values related to vehicle mobility.

SU Grad Wins LibraryAward

A book jacket designed at the Syracuse University Press has won first prize in national competition.

Prepared by Robert Toper, the jacket was for "America's Emerging Role in Overseas Education," edited by Dr. Clarence W. Hunnicutt, SU education professor and published last year.

Sponsored by the Mead Library of Ideas, the contest included items from colleges, universities, foundations and other educational institutions.

The winning book cover is red, white and blue based on an unusual perspective of the American flag.

Toper, a 1958 SU School of Art graduate, is a water-colorist as well as a designer. One of his recent paintings is part of the current regional show at the Everson Museum.

Constitution ChangesSlatedTonight

CAMPUS OFFICE

Several of the present qualifications for campus office are revised in the new constitution.

The president and vice president of student government are not required, by the new document, to be graduates of the government training program. They may also be first semester juniors at the time of election, as opposed to the present requirement that they be second semester juniors. The 1.5 cumulative average requirement remains.

Several restrictions are also placed upon the speaker and speaker pro tempore of the legislature. The speaker must now have a 1.5 cumulative average, as opposed to the present 1.0. Both the speaker and the speaker pro tempore must have served two semesters in an elected or appointed legislative post.

A provision has been included so that anyone who lacks one of the requirements may petition the JSG Cabinet for permission to serve. The Cabinet is composed of the student government president and vice president, the legislature speaker and the chief justice of student court.

Candidates for class office, who also had no requirements previously, will have to meet the 1.2 grade requirements.

Senator - at - large requirements will remain at its present 1.2 level.

EXEC BRANCH

Several changes are made in the organization of the executive branch of the government.

Succession to the presidency, if necessary for any reason, will fall first upon the vice president of the government and then upon the speaker of the legislature. The current constitution names only the vice president in its succession clause.

If the office of vice president becomes vacant, the president may appoint any student meeting the requirements for the office to the post, pending approval of two-thirds of the legislature.

The succession to the office of speaker falls upon the speaker pro tempore, while a vacancy in the speaker pro tempore post will be filled by the legislature.

The new constitution calls for four divisions of the executive branch — public relations, finance, special services, and social - academic - cultural (SAC). The present constitution calls for five other posts, now combined under the four divisions.

All officials appointed by the president must be approved by a two-thirds vote of the legislature. There is no current clause requiring such approval.

Each class executive council will now have two senators-at-large, chosen by the officers, among its membership. Procedures for choosing council members and purposes of executive councils are also included.

LEGISLATURE

The major change in the legislature branch concerns the composition of the steering committee governing body of the legislature.

The steering committee will be composed of the speaker, the speaker pro tempore, who will act as chairman, the chairmen of all legislature committees, a legislative commissioner, a parliamentarian, and six senators-at-large.

The proposal calls for the six senators-at-large on the steering committee to be divided equally among the sophomore, junior and senior classes.

The current constitution calls for five senators to be on the steering group, but that procedure has not been followed.

Another change in the new constitution calls for standing committees of the legislature to be established at the beginning of the school year, depending on the need for committees.

The chairmen of standing committees will be appointed from the general legislature. Several procedures have been used in the past.

The name Joint Student Legislature will be changed to Student Senate.

STUDENT COURT

Among the changes in the judicial branch of the government is an expansion of student court from the present 10 to a total of 12 justices. Six of the justices will be men and six women.

Also included in the new document is a provision for two judicial commissioners to aid the court in its work.

The academic requirement for court justices has been reduced from a 1.6 to a 1.5 cumulative average at the time of appointment to the court.

The new constitution also provides for the establishment of a special Emergency Court, to be used during final examination week and at other necessary times.

The new group will consist of any three justices, one of whom must be the chief justice or the associate chief justice. The court will be used when situations make it impossible to have a complete functioning court.

Provisions for traffic court have also been included. This group will hear appeals from students who have paid traffic fines, and will also deal with constant offenders of university driving and parking regulations.

Such a group now exists separately from Joint Student Court.

JSG Needs Poll Watchers

Poll watchers are needed to supervise voting in the April 11 campus elections, elections commissioner Arthur Perschetz has announced.

Forms for signing up for poll watcher positions are available in the elections commissioner's mailbox in the student government office, 907 University Ave.

Perschetz requested that students interested fill out one of the forms, and leave the slips in the mailbox.

Borowitz . . .

1962 World Conference of Jewish Education.

Dr. Borowitz was a delegate to the mid-century and 1960 White House conferences on children and youth.

After serving congregations in St. Louis, Mo., and Sands Point, N.Y., Rabbi Borowitz served a tour of duty as a Navy chaplain.

He was then appointed national director of education for Reform Judaism.

In that post, he led all educational programs of the Union American Hebrew Congregations, as well as editing its books and periodicals, including Jewish Teacher, Keeping Posted and Religious Education Newsletter.

Dr. Borowitz's writings are included in the volumes "Heritage of American Education," Philosophies of Education" and "The American Jewish Yearbook."

At 3:30 p.m. Thursday in Hendricks Chapel, Dr. Philip Morrison, professor of physics and nuclear studies at Cornell University, will speak on "The Ape at the Typewriter."

His lecture will be broadcast by WAER-FM at 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

A faculty panel will discuss Dr. Morrison's lecture at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in Maxwell Auditorium.

Daily Orange Favored In Tonight's Hoop Contest

By JUDY ADAMS

The memory darts back across the months to a Wednesday late last winter. It was a chilly, windy night, but a few perspiring souls were hard at work is the men's practice gym in Archbold Stadium.

These 30 or more bits of humanity arrayed in T-shirts, sweatshirts, and pants of all lengths were struggling for the coveted piece of metal, the Church Key.

For two years, the boys from [illegible] behind the library had [illegible] it. For two bitter years, the newspaper boys had tasted defeat.

But that Wednesday night some 12-odd months ago, the DO had rallied, rallied twice, three times, before WAER was finally battered down. And all was right in the news world.

Time has passed. Wednesday is coming again. The two media will clash once more to determine the superiority of one.

The DO has proudly possessed the honored Key for that time and is not about to give it up. WAER has been suffering beneath the barbs and taunts of the non-playing members of their staff. They are bitter. They are resentful. They are greedily eyeing the shiny Key.

But to a casual observer, their hopes seem to be in vain. The DO, who showed their superiority in the clutch last winter, return to the court with many of their top men. Only one high scorer is gone.

Val "Dolly" Pinchbeck, Jr. will again officiate the contest. Val is one of the foremost experts on American basketball rules. His major qualification, however, is that he was one of the few participants in last year's game who did not receive a charley-horse.

WAER lost their No. 1 and 2 scorers and are hurting in experience. The spot vacated by big Jeff Williams who tallied 30 and 33 points for the radiomen in the last two contests is the big position that must be filled. Many observers feel, that this can't be done.

Returning for the DO will be: Ed Silverstone, Bob Breier, and Milt Joffe, all of whom hit for double figures last year. Ed was the biggest scorer but it was Joffe's three field goals in the second overtime period that won the game for the newsmen. Joffe, the old-timer in point of service, having been in all three previous games, has a lifetime total of 43 points in trophy competition. He leads all active scorers.

Other experienced players for the DO are: Bill Cronauer, Ron Roberts, Bernie MacCallum, Andy Porte, Max, and Allan Kort, sports editor.

To experience they've added height with Art Rossky, Tom Muller, Howie Schneider, Steve Speigel, Vin Zukowski, Jon Weisberg, Marv Lender, Jan Gilmore, Irq "The Shot" Bakst, Jim Dine and Bob Becker.

There is another addition that has veteran coach Dave Dean grinning from ear to ear. The announcement has been made that little Burt Holmgren has been declared eligible for the squad. Little Burt stands 6-S.

WAER is counting on former program director Mike Styer, who stands 6-2 to take over where Williams left off.

Possible starters for the radiomen include: Al Davis, Gary Davis, Dick Buff, Kent Repogle, along with Styer.

Their coach, Barry Lewis, also is counting on Tom Paterson, Mark Diamond, Robert McDermott, Dick Stokvis, and Ron Landis.

Todd Caso, Doug Webster, and Jan Galinsky are also expected to see action.

Judy Adams has been declared eligible by our screening committee, Lewis said.

"It's unfortunate that such a great coach as Dave Dean has to have questionable advisors. Coach Dean definitely is the "dean" of college newspaper basketball coaches," Lewis added.

"I only hope that they don't score more than 100 points, because if we score more than 30, we're doing great. Scholastic ineligibility, injuries, and a misunderstanding with the Dean of Men, has brought our team to skelton force. But in the true tradition of WAER, the game must, and will go on" Lewis said.

Michigan State to Oppose SU Eleven in 1968 Tilt

Syracuse Athletic Director Lew Andreas and Biggy Munn, athletic director at Michigan State University announced yesterday that the Orangemen will meet the Spartans in 1968. The game, scheduled for Sept. 21, will be the first football contest between the two schools since 1952.

In that year, the Syracusans were crushed, 48-6, by a Michigan team which eventually captured the national championship. The victory gave the Spartans a 5-3 edge over the Orangemen.

SU hasn't faced a Big Ten team in nine years. The last encounter was one the Orange would rather forget. In 1954, Illinois downed Syracuse, 34-6.

Michigan State head coach Duffy Dougherty played for Syracuse in the 1940's. At that time, Biggy Munn coached the Orange footballers.

In the not so distant future, Syracuse will play seven official home games next season. The Thanksgiving Day Notre Dame contest will be played in New York City with SU as the host team.

Six opponents, Boston College, Holy Cross, Penn State, Oregon State, West Virginia and Richmond, will appear in Archbold Stadium. Away games are slated with UCLA, Pittsburgh and Kansas.

Athletic Director Andreas has given a progress report on 1963 season tickets. Sales are running 10 percent ahead of last year with over 2000 tickets sold thus far.

BASKETBALL TICKETS

Tickets for the administration-student and freshman-varsity basketball games Friday night are on sale from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily in H. B. Crouse lobby at 50 cents for students and $1 for all others.

BASEBALLERS MEET TODAY

Freshman baseball practice starts Thursday at 3 p.m. at Manley Fieldhouse. Coach Larry Katzman requests that all candidates for the team bring sneakers and gloves to the meeting in the locker room.

Students, Faculty For Hoop Game At Fieldhouse

Faculty Forces have been holding secret practices at Manley Fieldhouse in preparation for Friday's faculty - student clash.

Head football coach, Ben Schwartzwalder, head basketball coach Fred Lewis, and frosh basketball coach Morris Osborn have consented to play in the Student Union basketball double-header at Manley Fieldhouse.

When first contacted Schwartzwalder began to limp and claimed he had a bad knee. It is reported that Coach Faigle had a high level conference with Mr. Schwartzwalder. After the meeting they were seen wearing big smiles and shaking hands.

Then they turned to the press reporters and made the announcement of Coach Schwartzwalder's willingness to play. One reporter said he heard Schwartzwalder say that if the old veterans on the administration could last out the game then a young man like himself could certainly add a little class.

He also said he would have an opportunity to get himself in shape for spring football practice.

It is only fair to warn the student leaders' team that he was recently seen throwing cross-body blocks at dummies in the middle of Archbold Stadium. Could it be that he's got the two sports mixed up?

Moments after the double victory over Colgate Lewis and Osborn made public their acceptance of the offers for spots on the administration team.

They had previously made plans for a trip to recruit ballplayers for next year. Since the varsity had just scored 100 points and Dave Bing had just tallied 38 in the preliminary, maybe they figured the trip wasn't that important.

Mr. Osborn's statement went something like this: "I've been working on Bing all year long to get him up into the high figures. Now, finally, here's my chance to show him how to break 50."

Coach Lewis claimed that he could run circles around any student that tried to come out on the same court with the administration. He also said that, since he would be kept busy feeding Osborn so the frosh mentor could keep his promise and score 50 points, the administration could only count on 20 points from him.

When notified of the new opponents, Jim Morris, the coach of the student leaders, said that he wasn't too worried about the outcome. He thought he may have to change his defensive tactics a little bit. Coach Faigle and Coach Morris were heard having harsh words over the game. This weekend they reportedly were both nursing black eyes. Any connection?

JSL MEETS

Joint Student Legislature Steering Committee will meet at 4 p.m. today at the student government office, 907 University Ave., Robert Becker, JSL speaker pro tempore, has announced.

Becker said all committee chairmen and sophomore senators-at-large must attend the meeting. No excuses will be accepted.

JSL will meet at 7:15 p.m. today in 207 Hall of Languages to vote on the Elections Act and proposed constitution.

SG Constitution, Elections Act Get JSL Approval

By JOYCE HERGENHAN
Editorial Director

A stormy, lengthy and at times unruly Joint Student Legislature session Wednesday night approved the new Student Government constitution, the new Elections Act and a constitution for the Greek-Independent Alliance political party.

The government constitution must be approved by the University Personnel Board and the student body before it goes into effect, but a discrepancy discovered after Wednesday's meeting may complicate its appearance before Personnel Board today.

The discrepancy involves a difference in qualifications for the positions of Student Legislature speaker and speaker pro tempore.

Since the speaker pro tempore stands to succeed the speaker if he leaves, or is removed from, office, some government officials feel the qualifications for the two posts should be more consistent.

In the constitution approved Wednesday night, the speaker must be a senior with a 1.5 accumulative average, and the speaker pro tempore must have a 1.2 accum but may be a member of any class.

Both the elections act and the GIA constitution were approved without discussion or disagreement. The student government constitution was, however, another story.

The main points of contention were the sections listing the requirements for student government vice president and student legislature speaker.

The constitution proposed by the JSL Government Structures Committee and passed Wednesday afternoon by JSL Steering Committee provided both offices were to be filled by seniors.

A bloc of sophomores led by Robert Stern and Carl Corallo attempted to remove the class requirement from these offices. The ensuing debate was highlighted by a roll call vote, a questionable quorum, Townsend Southard's ejection from the meeting and a walkout staged by Stern and Corallo.

US Gets DU; Psi U, Phi Go CAP in Switch

Three Greek houses Wednesday revealed they have changed their campus political party affiliation.

Delta Upsilon, fraternity formerly a member of Campus Alliance Party, was officially admitted to the United Students party at a Monday night meeting.

Delta Upsilon Wednesday night told the Daily Orange the house has not yet joined the United Students party. Logan Sallada, a DU spokesman, said the brotherhood would meet today to determine the house's political future.

Psi Upsilon fraternity, formerly unaffiliated, and Alpha Phi sorority, a US member, announced that they intend to affiliate with CAP. Ronald Brzezinski, (Phi Gamma Delta) CAP president, confirmed the two houses will be admitted at the next party meeting.

DU Reluctant

Speaking for DU, junior class President Logan (Slugs) Sallada said the house is reluctant to leave CAP, but he added he feels CAP officials are making too many premature promises for positions on the elections slate.

Sallada also hit disorganization in CAP, saying he believes

Borowitz: No Heroes? Footprints '63 Finale

Order, chance and human freedom will be discussed at 3:30 p.m. today in Hendricks Chapel by Dr. Philip Morrison, professor of physics and nuclear studies at Cornell University.

Dr. Morrison's speech is the last in the tenth annual Footprints lecture series. At 7:30 p.m. tonight, a faculty panel discussion in Maxwell Auditorium will close the series.

Dr. C. Laurence Hardin, assistant professor of philosophy, and Associate Prof. Erich M. Harth and Prof. Arnold Honig, both of the physics department, will serve on the panel.

WAER-FM

Dr. Morrison's speech, "The Ape at the Typewriter," will be broadcast by WAER-FM (88.3 mc) at 7 p.m. today.

Dr. Morrison earned his bachelor's degree at Carnegie Institute of Technology and his doctorate at the University of California at Berkeley, where he was a research fellow.

After teaching physics for two years at San Francisco State College and the University of Illinois, Dr. Morrison joined the Manhattan Project.

Laboratory

He worked in the project's metallurgical laboratory at the University of Chicago in 1943.

In 1944, he left Chicago to work for the Los Alamos laboratory in New Mexico and the first atomic test explosion.

Immediately after the armistice, he was sent to Japan.

Dr. Morrison joined the Cornell physics department in 1946 and was named a full professor in 1956.

PHILIP MORRISON

Author

Co-author of a textbook, "Elementary Nuclear Theory," Dr. Morrison has written articles for Physical Review, Nuclear Physics, Scientific American and other journals.

He and Jerome Pine, at the time a Cornell graduate student, received the first annual Boris Pregel prize in 1953.

The award, for their paper "Radiogenic Origin of Helium Isotopes in Rock," was given by the New York Academy of Science.

In 1957, Dr. Morrison shared the Babson prize, awarded by the Gravity Foundation, with Dr. Thomas Gold.

Listed in American Men of Science, he is a member of Cornell's laboratory of nuclear studies, American Physical Society and the Federation of American Scientists.

"The contemporary theater finds it difficult to write about heroes, since all the criteria for values, standard, worth and significance have disappeared," Dr. Eugene Borowitz asserted Wednesday at the second Footprints lecture.

Because Dr. Borowitz's plane had been grounded at Utica, his speech on "Heroes and Anti-Heroes in the Theater of the Absurd," was postponed until Wednesday night. A short faculty panel discussion followed the speech.

In the past, Dr. Borowitz said, heroes were the gunmen who always won or the private eyes who got the girl and discovered the "foul strategians."

Dreams Gone

"All the great dreams of mankind are gone. Religion has become too institutional; science was all right until scientists discovered the atom bomb; and intellectualism and philosophy lost importance when the nation with the greatest number of universities became the most brutalitarian," he said.

Dr. Borowitz is a rabbi and is professor of education and lecturer in Jewish religious thought at the New York school of the Hebrew Union College.

"Probably the most heroic contemporary character is Sir Thomas More in 'A Man for All Seasons,' now on Broadway," he said. "In trying to establish his religion. More had to buck all those who tried to persuade him to do King Hen-

IFC Elects Wednesday

By CLAY RICHARDS

Rushing rules revisions, a pledge InterFraternity Council, a joint Greek Week, and an improved IFC program highlighted proposals made Wednesday night by the three candidates for IFC president.

Elections are slated for 7:30 p.m. next Wednesday at Phi Delta Theta.

The three candidates George (Skip) Stanger (Sigma Chi Psi), Jeffrey Kaplowitz (Phi Sigma Delta) and Michael Steinberg (Sigma Alpha Mu), gave campaign speeches in H. B. Crouse.

Former Sig president Stanger, leading off, called for a "junior" IFC composed of a representative from every pledge class to give rushing critiques and train freshmen in IFC leadership.

Stanger called for improved public relations, suggesting a committee composed of the IFC president and public relations director, the fraternity administrator, the Daily Orange Council reporter and, as a guest for important stories, the DO editor-in-chief.

Stanger called on the council to "direct our efforts toward betterment of the rushing rules in order to more fully utilize the advantages of a deferred rushing system."

Kaplowitz, Phi Sig social chairman, called for a joint Greek Week between IFC and Panhellenic Council. This would afford a larger budget for name entertainment and would improve Hill Greek relations, he said.

He called for immediate operation of the cooperative food buying program now nearly completed by the Council.

Kaplowitz concluded with suggestions for more community service projects and complete revision of rushing procedure.

Scarp Leaving; Hopes to Do Play

The Past

Pat Latronica needs angels. Not the head of a pin kind but the Broadway genre. Latronica, '61, will be on campus this weekend shelling shares for an Off Broadway production of Dick Harris' "The Fourth Pig."

Latronica is currently trying to sign tv star Darin McGavin to play the lead role of a poet he set by his muse. Robert Scarpato, who directed "The Fourth Pig" has been signed to direct the play, which hopefully will open this September in the Jan Hus Theater in Sheriden Square.

Scarpato also is part of a local

ROBERT SCARPATO

And The Present

By JOHN E. GREENWALD

Scarp is quitting the Hill.

Robert Scarpato, '54 popular Boar's Head director and drama department instructor is leaving Syracuse University this semester after almost thirteen as undergraduate, graduate student and instructor in the drama department.

Thirteen years of being embarrassed by the physical inadequacies of the Drama Building.

Thirteen years of "learning the craft of directing."

Thirteen years of "the university rat race."

Thirteen years of drinking in the Orange Bar.

"I'm leaving," the thin, energetic man said, "because I want to be in a rat race where I can make more money." After some seven years teaching at SU "I still need only half of the short income tax form."

"It's also about time," Scarp added," that I do some professional theater."

The first show Scarp directed on the Hill was "Two by Ionesco: The Lesson and Bald So-

A Frightened Hill Awaits Springtime

Everybody talks about it but nobody does anything about it.

Syracuse coeds are attacked and molested, Syracuse males are jumped and beaten, and spring is coming to the Hill.

We think the three events are related beause with the coming of spring comes more daylight hours, nicer weather and more occasion to walk on campus at night.

We hate to think what will happen this spring as the threat of attack and injury hangs heavy in the minds of all Syracusans. The stories still appear in the Daily Orange and will continue to appear. People keep talking about it and worrying about it. Still little is done.

True, the university is just beginning a campus lighting program which theoretically will make the campus brighter and presumably safer at night. This is surely a step in the right direction.

But more must be done. The problem is increasing rather than decreasing in intensity. Each week more incidents occur and are reported in the Daily Orange.

The unusual thing is that the university officials, particularly Security Police, have been made actually aware of the problem in the past months yet the problem continues to grow.

We say this is unusual because it would seem that the attacks and muggings should have prompted the Security Police to add more men, increase prowl activities in the area and generally step up the protective function they should perform.

But the protection should go beyond that. The university has a lot of influence in this community and in a lot of ways is the leading force in the community.

Cannot the university urge police protection from the city for the areas around campus which are the scenes of the most frequent attacks? Cannot the city police prowl the area more frequently to spot marauding bands of attackers and break them up before they strike?

We think this can be done. But beyond that, we know it must be done.

Syracuse University is fast becoming a frightened community. Girls won't walk from Comstock Ave. to the library at night. Boys even hesitate to walk from Watson to Marshall St, especially late at night.

As we said, with spring on the way, the fear will increase along with the desire to get out of the dorm and just walk at night. This won't be done if conditions stay the way they are.

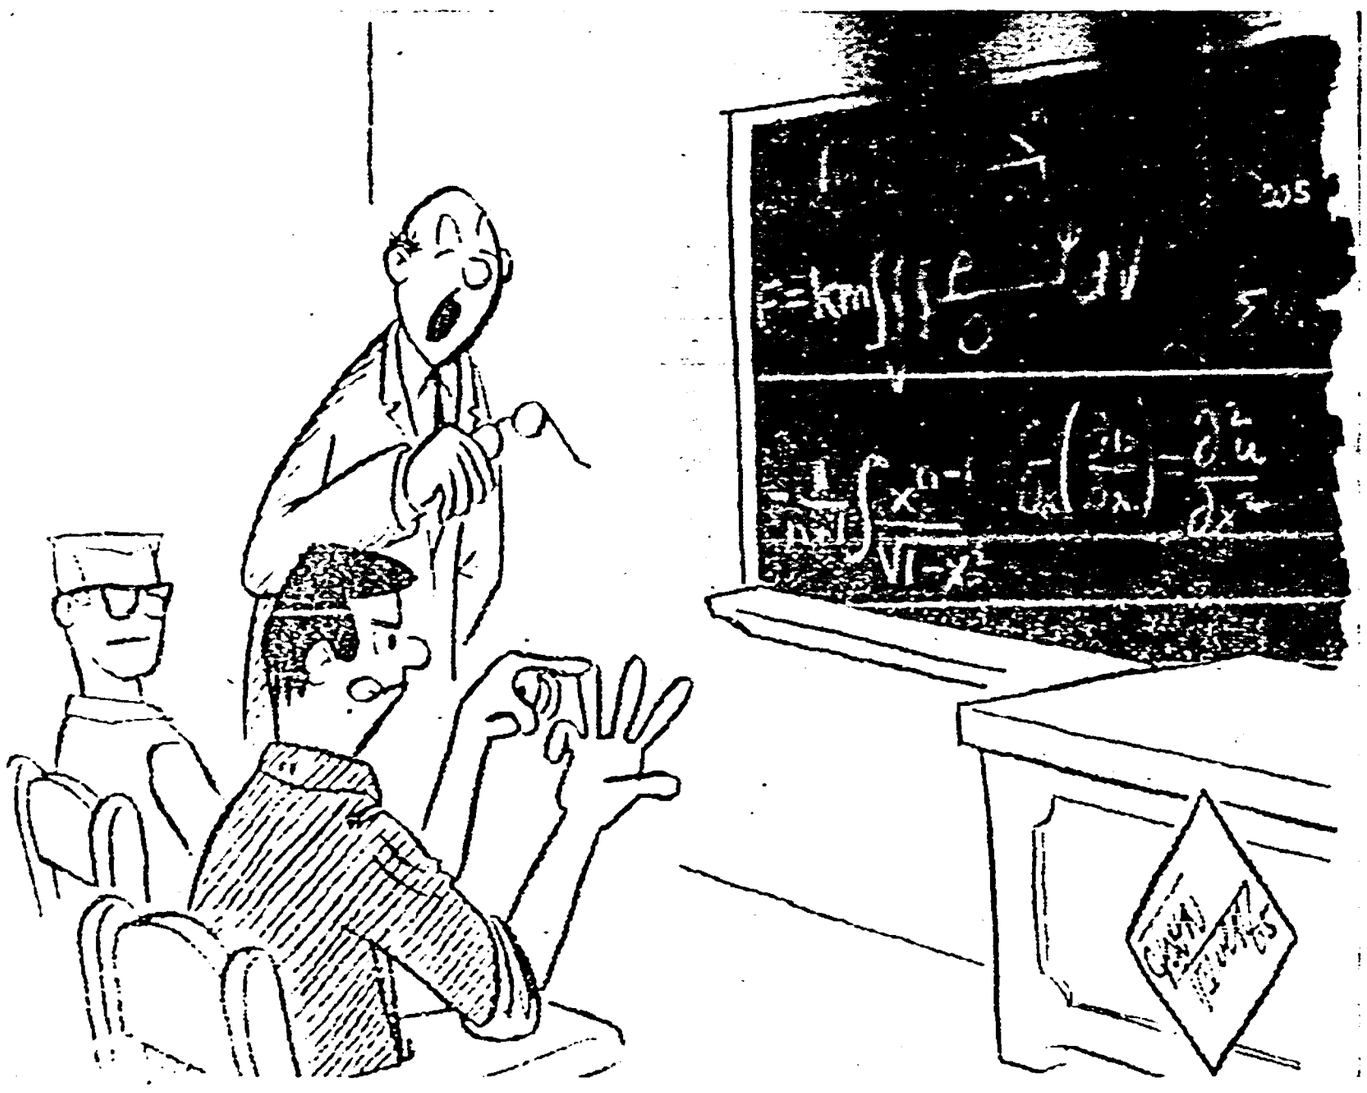
We expect the university to act. We expect security to be strengthened and to tighten its hold on its campus protection obligation. And we expect the university to urge city aid in the outlying areas of campus.

The reason is simple and was made even more striking to us this week in a phone call from a local alumnus who has two daughters at Syracuse.

What he said, and what we had already begun to believe anyway, was that if things keep up the way they are now, the transfer rate at Syracuse will soar while persons aware of the climate now existing on campus will see to it that their children will seek their higher education elsewhere.

This may seem a little far-fetched but it can happen. Its relevance will increase directly with the increase in the number of attacks and muggings.

That is why we say the university will act. The Syracuse Plan sets forth some exciting hopes for Syracuse University—new classrooms, new programs of study, higher calibre teaching. It does not provide for police protection.



Unless the action is taken now, and unless that action has positive results, we're going to lose a lot of wouldbe students who will choose not to pursue their learning in an atmosphere of terror.

Peace

To the Editor:

The basic, fact remains, damaging though it may be to idealistic notions, that only American power preserves the non-curtained countries in freedom. Within this era of escalated change, it follows that an instrument or policy which maintains this power is beneficial to the national interest.

In view of these considerations, I find it extremely difficult to comprehend how the shenanigans described in the February "Collegiate Digest" under the title, 'Battle for?', contribute to the "peace movement." The advocation of policies that would strip this country of the materiel necessary to its defense commitments seems to me, at the least, to be the height of naivete. As for those ultra-pacifists, disruptive of the public order in their attempting to board Polaris subs, I believe that their unsophisticated approach to "peace" is highly offensive to the majority of their fellow citizenry.

Finally, it might be mentioned that, if, as Sarah Lawrence President Taylor insists, the "peace demonstrations last February . . . were not an emotional outburst of unsophisticated activities," it is no credit to the man himself that they were not. For at the time, in addressing 1500 anti-arms demonstrators blocking the public highways opposite the UN headquarters, he proposed that his audience demand immediate unilateral disarmament.

I close trusting that God will continue to protect that SAC protecting US.

Drinking

To the Editor:

I should like to thank the Daily Orange for running Mr. Fowler's series on the history of university drinking. I have found it a most interesting exposition of how the university's Methodist tradition has become an evil "dogma" dominating policies and regulations.

For too long the administration has denied the strength of our ties with the Methodists. The Methodists consider the university one of their own. Why does SU hedge? Are we or aren't we? Only our minister knows for sure?

Mr. Fowler has superbly depicted out ties to the Methodists, and how SU's drinking policy is so ingrown, chances are it will never be changed.

I think though, Mr. Fowler has been taken in by the weight of the information he has collected when he begins to support the policy mainly because it's so inevitable on this campus.

Eating

To the Editor:

"Girls—no slacks or shorts permitted at dinner." This is a familiar sign to girls eating in university dining halls—and we approve of it. However, if we girls dress to please the eyes of our dinner companions, have we no right to expect the same courtesy?

It is a little discouraging to don a clean skirt and sweater for dinner and find some young men dressed in bermuda shorts, ripped sweatshirts or undershirts, and shower clogs!!!

Not only is the dress uncomplementary, but the language is abominable! It's rather disgusting to eat your meal to the tune of unbelievably obscene phrases.

We appreciate those young men who appear clean, well-dressed, and courteous. However, their good impression is overridden by the simple lack of manners on the part of a certain few.

We have been told that the problem is under investigation. But when is the investigating going to stop and the action begin?

'Wire'

To the Editor:

"Malcolm X, leader of the Black Muslims, shocked even sympathetic negroes with a statement last June after receiving a message that 121 white civic and cultural leaders from Atlanta had been killed in the crash of a chartered airliner outside Paris.

"I would like to announce a very beautiful thing that has just happened;" he told his audience. "I got a wire from God today. . . . Somebody came and told me that he really had answered our prayers in France. He dropped an airplane out of the sky with over 120 white people on it . . . we will continue to pray and we hope that every day another plane falls out of the sky."

—From "Black Merchants of Hate"
Saturday Evening Post
January 26, 1963

Please, if there are any "searchers of truth" among your readers, avail yourselves of the aforementioned issue of the Saturday Evening Post. Read the complete article "Black Merchants of Hate." Then if you will obtain a copy of the February 25, 1963 Daily Orange and read the article "Another Shine Mister." About half way down column three starting "Now some guy up at the University Hill, Mister . . .

Please read very carefully and as you go along you will find that the word "constructive" is used 4 times in referring to Malcolm X, this in slightly more than 3 paragraphs.

Letter

To the Editor:

Not a reply, just a letter to the editor. On February 22 I submitted a letter to the Daily Orange. On March 1, my letter appeared in the Daily Orange as an official fraternity "reply."

Considering that since January, I have not been actively affiliated with any fraternity at Syracuse it is obvious that I would not be the official spokesman for any particular house. However, as a student on this campus, I offered my personal opinion.

Two French Plays Slated For Regent

Works by Cocteau, Giraudoux Featured

Une troupe francaise presentera deux pieces francaises en un acte en francais a 8:30 du soir samedi au Theatre Regent de l'Universite.

For those students not too well versed in French, but interested in attending Saturday's presentations a translation and detail follow "en anglais."

A French troupe will present two one-act French plays "en francais," 8:30 p.m. Saturday at the University Regent Theater.

"L'Apollon de Bellac," a comedy by Jean Giraudox and "Orphee" a tragedy by Jean Cocteau will be produced by Jean de Rigault, head of Le Treteau de Paris theater company.

Bernard Verley, star of "Orphee," plays the title role in this ancient legend transposed to a modern setting. In its portrayal of the poet's role and his relationship to creation and death, the play illustrates Cocteau's universe of danger and his perception of the traps devised by invisible forces.

On the lighter side is Jean Giradoux's "L'Apollon de Bellac," a story of a young girl, Agnee, who learns that the surest way to win men is by telling them they are handsome.

Starring as Agnee is Nicole Desurmont, who toured the U.S. with De Rigault's 1961 production of Molier's "L'Ecole des Femmes."

Verley, star of "Orphee" has been compared with the late, famed French film actor Gerard Philipe, star of "Les Liaisons Dangereuses." With the death of Philipe, Jean Vilar, director of Le Treteau de Paris, starred Verley in roles left vacant by the theater's loss of Philipe.

Two famous French couturiers, Balenciaga and Pierre Cardin designed the costumes for "Orphee" and "L'Apollon de Bellac" respectively.

Attendance is required for all French students taking French 10 and above.

As long as we are lucky we attribute it to our smartness; our bad luck we give the gods credit for. — Josh Billings.

From a Balcony

A PENCHANT Romeo broods by Juliet's balcony after a hasty wedding night in a scene from the Boar's Head production of Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet." Theatergoers can see RICHARD MILLER as the famous lover, and Bonnie Cousins as the tragic heroine today through Saturday and next Wednesday through Saturday at the Boar's Head theater.

Organ Recital Sunday

Paul Comnick, organist, will give his graduate recital 8:30 p.m. Saturday in Crouse College Auditorium.

Given in partial fulfillment for a Master of Music degree Comnick will play works by Walther, J. S. Bach, Langlais, Dupre and Duruflé.

Studying under Arthur Poister, Comnick has played recitals in Lakefield, Minneapolis and New York City. He has served as organist and choir director in churches in Fayetteville and Minneapolis.

Mrs. Fitzmorris Sings Friday

A Syracuse University voice student, Mrs. Terry Fitzmorris, will present her senior voice recital at 8:30 p.m. Friday in Crouse College Auditorium.

Mrs. Fitzmorris has studied piano, organ, and voice. She attended the University of Colorado before coming to Syracuse. She has been soloist in several churches and has directed the East Genesee Presbyterian Church choirs.

The featured work of her recital is Modest Mussorgsky's "Songs and Dances of Death."

Physics Talks Scheduled

Physics colloquia have been set for 4 p.m. today and Friday in 106 Steele Hall.

Prof. P. A. Dirac, of the University of Cambridge Institute for Advanced Study, will speak on "The Hamiltonian Method in Relativistic Quantum Mechanics" today.

Friday, Dr. Robert E. Pugh of the University of Iowa will lecture on "Quantum Field Theory."

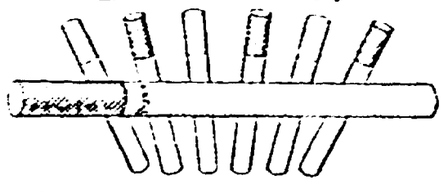
Does a man really take unfair advantage of women when he uses Mennen Skin Bracer?

All depends on why he uses it.

Most men simply think Menthol-Iced Skin Bracer is the best after-shave lotion around. Because it cools rather than burns. Because it helps heal shaving nicks and scrapes. Because it helps prevent blemishes.

So who can blame them if Bracer's crisp, long-lasting aroma just happens to affect women so remarkably?

Of course, some men may use Mennen Skin Bracer because of this effect.



How intelligent!

JSL Approves Constitution

ges based their arguments "on the large numbers of exceptional sophomores interested in student government."

Their opponents argued that if these sophomores were "so exceptional" they could petition to run through an appeals mechanism provided for in the constitution.

The appeals clauses specifies, that any student lacking one of the qualifications for president, vice president or speaker may petition the student government cabinet for permission to run.

Neither of the proposed amendments received the necessary two-thirds vote, so the class qualifications remained in the constitution.

JSG President Theodore Bayer praised the document "as an excellent compromise between varying points of view," and noted some senators "should have placed more faith in the experience and insight of the Government Structures Committee and the JSG cadinet."

If the constitution is approved Personnel Board, it will be offered as a referendum to the campus on April 11.

Tubbs Receives Military Award

Cadet David N. Tubbs, a history major in the College of Liberal Arts, has received the Association of the United States award for outstanding achievement in military history.

The award was presented by Maj. Richard Ryan, assistant professor of military science.

film producing company that hopes to produce a short subject of three "very, very, very short films" using local talent.

The film, running about 35 minutes, would be distributed to "art" houses.

"The Fourth Pig," directed by author Harris, was presented last month at the University of Hartford where some $3,000 was colected. Scarpato estimates it would take about $20,000 to mount the comedy, with the show paying profits after a month's run.

ry VIII's bidding."

"But the hero should be in our time and situation," he continued.

Nature

According to Dr. Borowitz, the contemporary hero should create his own standards and reality, and bend nature to his own will.

"The theater of the absurd came about after existentialists like Albert Camus and Jean-Paul Sartre," Dr. Borowitz said.

In the existentialist theater, the playwright attempts to expose the failure of the old values and standards, he said.

"It never occurred to them to give up the form in which they were presenting illusions. Thus, the viewer continued to live in the theatrical illusory world, Dr. Borowitz added.

Goes Beyond

The theater of the absurd goes beyond this to provide no illusions, not even theatrical ones, he asserted.

"The premise of their examination of life is that we don't want to live a life of illusions unless we so desire. We want to be honest to our own freedom, to know we're choosing to escape." Dr. Borowitz said.

Eugene Ionesco's "Rhinoceros" illustrates how men have turned into brutes, he said.

Newman Club Starts on Hill

Catholic chaplain, the Rev. Charles Borgognoni has announced the establishment of a Syracuse branch of the national Newman Club.

Membership in the organization provides spiritual and social programs for Catholic students. It will provide Syracuse University with a voice in the national policies and programs of Newman Clubs.

Seniors Denis Rettew and Frances Sliney will act as co-presidents of the club, and the present executive council of the Chapel will assume leadership until spring elections.

The Chapel Executive Council has announced a St. Patrick's Day dance will be held Saturday evening at the chapel.

A trip to LeMoyne College, on Tuesday is also on the agenda. The cost for the trip is $1 which will cover dinner in the LeMoyne College dining room and transportation. Included will be a tour of the campus, a discussion with the Jesuit Fathers and a social with LeMoyne students.

The executive committee has planned a Lenten Retreat to be held Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, before Palm Sunday. The retreat will feature lectures and meditation, a Communion breakfast at Drumlins after the Sunday 11 a.m. Mass.

US Gets DU; Psi U, Phi Go

DU will be better represented by US.

Burr Cain, speaking for Psi U, said his house wanted to join a "progressive" party. He said politics are an important part of campus affairs, and his house wants the chance to be represented.

Jane Dalara, political representative from Alpha Phi, said she attended a CAP Meeting and "liked what I saw." She said there is stronger "fellowship" among CAP members.

The realignment brings CAP membership to 22, including the Independents on Campus group. US maintains its total of 16 houses.

The addition of DU is observed as a shot in the arm for US, as the house has consistently supplied candidates for campus office. Two brothers of DU are currently serving as class presidents — Sallada in the junior class, and Charles Stackhouse in the sophomore class. The house has a membership of over 80, one of the largest brotherhoods on campus.

Psi U, which has remained politically independent for the past few years, also has several potential candidates for campus office. Psi U Jack Miner was senior class president in 1961-62. There are over 50 students in the house.

Alpha Phi, which numbers over 60 sisters, supplied two candidates in last year's spring elections. Both were defeated.

US President Robert Taylor (Alpha Chi Rho) announced the US nominating convention will be held starting 1:30 p.m. Sunday at Phi Delta Theta fraternity, 703 Walnut Ave.

History of Drinking Policy-Part VI

THE FOLLOWING is part of the long history of the drinking policy at Syracuse University. It is the result of over a month of research, both in the archives, interviews with policy makers and outside sources. The article is written by Jan Fowler, a sophomore, who stated his purpose as an attempt to "put an end to the 'sword rattling' that has gone on in the last several decades."

By JAN FOWLER

The Cornell dean of men is unofficially unhappy with their present situation. I think that when JSL leaders write to these men that they will be much enlightened by what they have to say. Colgate University is all male, non - residential, a smaller college and in a small town location; we're not too much alike are we, even though, their dean of students says in effect:

"I think our policy is realistic and effective, and that the students are responding to it in a mature and wholesome way.

"Students admitted to Colgate are expected to possess the character and demonstrate the maturity required of responsible citizens in a college community. We assume that our undergradates understand what constitutes gentlemanly behavior and that they will consistently maintain it.

"While we believe in a maximum of self - government and a minimum of administrative regulations, we do enforce standards of gentlemanly conduct through our Student Judiciary Board which is responsible to the university committee on discipline and ultimately to the president of the university.

"We do not say that a man cannot use alcoholic beverages in our fraternities or in our residence halls. We do say that any man who does, must do so as a gentleman and that he is held accountable for his personal conduct at all times. Any man who drinks to excess and discredits himself or embarrasses the university will be subject to the discipline of the university administered through the Student Judiciary Board. Unfortunately there have been, on occasion, men dismissed from college for ungentlemanly conduct resulting from the excessive use of alcoholic beverages."

All well and good but again there are unlikes involved. He continues: "It is quite obvious that the demands and requirements of one university are necessarily quite different from those of another. The rules and regulations of a large university are of necessity quite different from those of a smaller residential college."

Now, turning back to Cornell University, I have already mentioned the wide gap in student policy attitudes, but also there are differences of a larger campus area where the fraternities and sororities are pretty much separated, no where nearly as close to each other as here; this actually is a consideration. Also, the town of Ithaca is definitely a "college town," where the town caters to students, not so at Syracuse.

The following is taken from the Cornell student code; these rules apply to all students in all circumstances at Cornell University:

1. The use of alcohol is left to the discretion of each student. Harmful or offensive behavior which is the result of drinking will not be tolerated." (Again harmful or offensive are defined by the university.) "Violation of any rules of conduct will subject the student to disciplinary action and may result in dismissal from the University.

2. Conditions for events not requiring registration:

a No alcoholic beverages shall be served or consumed in mixed company.

b Activities are to be limited to the commons areas.

ing chairman, suggested the Council complete a full year under the deferred rush system before condemning it.

Steinberg asked for a balance of power in the Greek system between large and small houses, strengthening the system through cooperation on rushing rules and a stronger Judicial Board.

He concluded with a call to make the Hill system "the most efficient fraternity system in this country."

The three vice presidential candidates, William Christie (Theta Chi), David Barrie (Tau Kappa Epsilon) and Benson Hubbard (Delta Upsilon) also made campaign proposals.

Christie condemned IFC as "merely a regulatory body." Before IFC can be anything else it "must be based on regulations, but devoted to service," he said.

Barrie supported the deferred rushing system and called for improved public relations. He stated IFC should "take a positive stand on discrimination, stating we have a defined right to choose our own members."

Hubbard proposed the IFC vice president be made a member of all standing committees, and also serve as chairman of the IFC executive council to relieve the president's burden. He asked the Council to form a public relations committee to give out "correct and approved" news to the DO.

Giving brief speeches Wednesday were IFC Under-secretary Joseph White (Phi Kappa Psi) and Under-treasurer Paul Derounian (Phi Delta Theta). The two will assume the offices of secretary and treasurer upon approval of IFC's executive committee.

Mercer to Speak

Donald J. Mercer, director of station relations for the National Broadcasting Co., will be guest professor next week at a series of seminars in the television and radio center. Mercer, the fourth of 10 guest lecturers this semester, will be on the Hill Monday and Tuesday.

Scarp Leaving; Hopes to Do Play

prano" in the 1957. "Bald Soprano" is still Scarp's favorite production.

Other plays he directed include "Two More by Ionesco: Victims of Duty and Jack, "The Boy Friend," "Play It Cool," "The Fourth Pig," "Sketchbook 61," "Anything Goes," "The American Dream," "The Death of Bessie Smith," and his last Hill production, "Little Mary Sunshine."

Had it not been for Chancellor and Mrs. Tolley visiting a Philadelphia art theater Scarp may not have directed a single one of those campus hits.

After a series of disagreements Falk asked Scarp to leave the department early in his graduate career.

"I was a pretty opinionated fellow in those days. Hell, I still am."

He ended up manager of the World Theatre in Philadelphia welcoming patrons in a tuxedo decorated with his Boar's Head pin.

One evening Chancellor and Mrs. Tolley entered the theater. After the show Scarp went up to the Chancellor saying, "You are Chancellor Tolley?"

"Yes, I am," Tolley replied, "You're in Boar's Head aren't you?"

The Chancellor soon discovered the whole story. "I told the Chancellor," Scarp relates, "that I wanted to teach and direct. I like working in college. There's more freedom in college, I said, especially Syracuse."

"Bill," Mrs. Tolley said, "this is a terrible situation. Instructors are so difficult to get."

The Chancellor said he would mention the issue to Falk and within the week he had a letter from "The Professor" asking him back.

"Sawyer Falk was one of the best drama teachers the country could have offered," Scarp noted.

"I would also match our drama students against those in any other school, such as Yale or Carnegie Teach," he commented.

He admitted that the drama department at Syracuse was a somewhat "ingrown." But, he noted, a department where the faculty members know each other has unity and can formulate policy. This can be good, he said, as long as the staff doesn't neglect the outside world.

"I like being around youth," he noted. Being on a college campus, Scarp said, helps one retain one's youth.

"I enjoy being mistaken for a student," he said. After 13 years of being at Syracuse, no wonder.

ElectionForm Due April 2

Petitions to run in campus elections are due April 2. Elections Commissioner Arthur Perschetz announced Tuesday. Petition blanks are available in the student government office, 907 University Ave.

Perschetz added students do not have to fill out petitions to seek a nomination from a political party. They need only fill out petitions if they have received party nominations or if they wish to run independently.

After you're married awhile, they say, you begin to look alike. Why wait?

WAER Outlasts DO In Church Key Game

JUDY ADAMS

Defeat case as it must to all teams last night. In one of the longest games ever played, the boys from WAER surprised the sparse but enthusiastic crowd in the Men's Practice Gym by defeating the Daily Orange, 80-76.

It was a hard-fought, serious game. In spite of all the joking that preceded the contest, both teams were out for blood. The DO was out to defend the cherished Church Key. It was a saddened Milt Joffe that placed the Key in the hands of WAER's new program director. Bob Feldman last night in the post-game ceremonies.

For the radio boys, dressed in Syracuse Nats' uniforms, the big men were Kent Repogle and Gary Davis. Kent pumped 32 points through the nets while Gary was right behind him with 30. The two combined to score more than 75 percent of their teams total scoring.

Ed Silverstone led the Daily Orange in scoring for the second year in a row. He tallied 17 in the first half, added nine in the second for a 26 point total.

Marv Lender and Bill Cronauer both had 15 points for the DO. Bill had all of his hits in the second half.

Rules were a bit out of the ordinary with 25 minute halves and seven personal fouls allowed.

The two most exhausted men in the gym were the giant referees, Val Pinchbeck and Hank Greenwald, who raced up and down the court for 50 minutes, minutes.

For most of the game, the score see-sawed. Silverstone and Lender pushed the Orange out in front in the opening minutes, 9-2. WAER was unable to score a basket from the floor until nearly eight minutes were gone in the first half.

But when they did, they began to move. They scored seven points, while the DO suddenly went cold. The news boys managed to hold onto their lead for more than 15 minutes before a field goal by Repogle put them in the lead for the first time that night.

Bob Brier came right back with another two-pointer and the DO was back in the lead for the rest of the half. WAER spurted twice from four and five point deficiencies to tie the score 33-33 at the half.

The two squads exchanged baskets for most of the early second half, until with seven and a half minutes remaining in the game, the DO was leading, 64-61.

Al Davis sank two free throws to cut the margin to one. It was the last time that the DO was to lead.

The game was tied twice thereafter before Gary Davis put WAER ahead for good, 70-68 with four and a half minutes left.

Referee Hank Greenwald had little to say about the game, "I didn't see it."

The classic comment for the night came from one of the janitors who told ref Val Pinchbeck to "hurry up and get these kids out of here."

Roy Simmons Expects Rebuilding Season

By VIN ZUKOWSKI

Snow is on the ground outside, so "stick" is on the dust inside. The past three weeks, 48 varsity lacrosse players—the product of a rebuilding year—have prepped at Manley Field House for the season's opener against John Hopkins, rated second nationally in 1962.

Coach Roy Simmons, in his 38th year as varsity mentor, stated, "they're working like the dickens — under pretty tough circumstances with that dust in the field house."

He added that the team would not be in top shape without "the running up and down" only outdoor practice allows. Condition is important especially during the last period when each step means ball-possession

"Given the opportunity to get in shape, this team could be a real fine lacrosse squad. However, we're not going to be out-of-doors before the trip to Baltimore. We're working together but need some good scrimmages."

Coach Simmons will have his scrimmages during the spring vacation "swing south." SU practices March 6 against Lehigh and with a day's rest scrimmages Penn at Philadelphia—then the opener March 30, in Baltimore.

ROY SIMMONS

"Last year was a rebuilding year," Simmons said. But the record shows 1962 as an unusual rebuilding year. Led by All-American Dick Finley, ineligible this season, the team ran up a 9-2 record, being ranked 7th nationally. From that team, Simmons has six starters. He also stated, "sophomores from last year's undefeated frosh are developing rapidly" and are pushing lettermen at positions.

Mel Davis, midfield, will captain the 1963 squad. "Davis never played lacrosse before he came to Syracuse." Simmons said, "Now, he's a terrific leader and has come a long way. An excellent competitor, Davis has improved his stick-handling and has become particularly strong on defense."

Doubling as backfield football coach, Simmons has three gridders on the squad. Second team guard Jack Salerno plays defense, and Bob Ramsdell is in the first midfield unit. Ramsdell is noted for his "stick and speed." Completing the midfield unit is end, halfback John Mackey.

"Sensational" is the word Simmons used describing 220-pound Mackey. Mackey's name brought Jim Brown to Simmon's mind. "Jim was a first team All-American in lacrose, and Mackey has everything Jim had except stickhandling. It's John's first year out, and he handles the stick well right or left. He has real high potential. He's big and fast."

Returning at attack, John Pappas forms a unit with Ron Fraser and Tom Rennie, both sophomores, or Roy Ettinger and Rich Snowdon. Pappas, "one of the team's most seasoned players," received honorable mention All-American last year.

"Our defense has always been strong, and this year is no exception." In the nets, Pete Coe and Dick Lindholm are one, two.

"Making strong bids on defense are Taylor, Wellmen, Morrison, Hutton Hancock, and DeVoli. Also Walt Reese rated Coach Simmon's praise at defense.

At midfield, Bill Wormuth, Tom Kennedy, and Duncan Crowther are running together and look like the second unit as of now. Dick Gray, Vinnie Brooks, and Dave Stringer are also "looking good" as a unit.

Coach Simmons himself played for two SU national championship teams. He became varsity coach in 1932 and is a member of lacrosse's "Century Club" for coaches with 100 or more wins.

Recently, he coached an undefeated team, in Jimmy Brown's senior year, that ranked second nationally behind John Hopkins.

Last year, the Orange won the Northwest Division championship over teams as Penn State, Hobart, RPI, Colgate, and Hofstra.

Teams to give SU trouble this year besides Hopkins, are Army, victorious over Syracuse in 1962, Yale, and Cornell, the second loss on SU's mark.

Although facing a rugged schedule, Coach Simmons is high on the team, and said "the morale is fine."

The freshmen lacrosse team held its first practice yesterday under the direction of Coach Roy Simmons Jr. Simmons extended an invitation to other freshmen, especially those who were high school athletes to come out for lacrosse.

Security Ups Force, Asks City Aid After ThreeMoreMolested

By HOWIE GINSBERG
Junior Editor

Three more cases of molesting on campus Wednesday night have caused Security Police Director Robert Flaherty to add more footmen to his night force and to ask Syracuse city police for help in patrolling the Hill.

One coed was "grabbed" and another "pinched" by an unknown attacker. The third was approached by an indecently exposed man.

One victim was walking in front of Crouse College at 8:30 p.m. when the suspect walked up behind her and grabbed her, according to Security Police reports. She turned and ran while her attacker ran in the opposite direction.

The coed approached on the north steps of Maxwell Hall by an indecently exposed man ran and phoned Security Police from the South Crouse avenue crafts studio.

At 10 p.m. another coed was "pinched", according to Security Police, on Crouse Dr. near Maxwell Hall. "I was going to hit him," the coed told Security Police. The coed reportedly warned the attacker, "Look buddy. I got a good left hand."

Flaherty described recent attacks of this nature as "more of an annoyance than anything else. Nobody has been really injured," he said.

In announcing that the city police force has been called Flaherty said, "We feel that if this sit-

Sen. Ribicoff Speaks On Foreign Policy

Abraham Ribicoff, Democratic Senator from Connecticut, will address freshman citizenship sections at 3:30 p.m. today in Hendricks Chapel.

The former secretary of health, education and welfare in the Kennedy administration will speak on "U.S. Growth as the Base for Foreign Policy."

Following his lecture at Syracuse University Senator Ribicoff will be the featured speaker at the 'Annual March of Democrats" fund-raising dinner. This is a county-wide affair to be held at the Three Rivers Inn and sponsored by the Onondaga County Democratic Committee.

Ribicoff was elected to the Senate last November, climaxing a 25-year career of public service. Previously, he was governor of Connecticut, U.S. congressman, representative in the Connecticut General Assembly and municipal judge in Hartford.

HEW Secretary

As secretary of HEW, Ribicoff was responsible for some of the most far reaching innovations in the history of the nation's health, education and welfare programs.

SEN. ABRAHAM RIBICOFF

Ribicoff, an attorney by profession, had practiced law in Connecticut prior to entering public life. He was born in New Britain, Conn., in 1910, son of an immigrant family.

The lawmaker attended the public schools of New Britain, and worked his way through the University of Chicago Law School, graduating cum laude.

Honorary Degrees

Ribicoff has been awared honorary degrees from 17 colleges and universities throughout the country in recognition of his distinguished record of public service.

In 1948, he was elected to the U.S. Congress from Connecticut's First Congression District. He served two terms in the lower house.

In 1954, Ribicoff was elected Governor of Connecticut by the slim margin of 3,115 votes. Running for re-election in 1958, he was victorious by the history-making plurality of 246,348.

Efficient Action

As governor, Ribicoff gained nation-wide attention for the swift and efficient action he took to combat the floods of 1955, and for his highly successful program of traffic safety.

As HEW secretary since January, 1961, Ribicoff initiated legislation to curb juvenile delinquency, to promote educational television, shelter Cuban refugees and crack down on drugs.

Ribicoff is married and has a son and daughter.

Personnel Board Delays SG Action

The university Personnel Committee postponed to April 3 action on the revised student government constitution at its monthly meeting Thursday.

According to government President Theodore Bayer, the action was postponed because several members of the committee were unable to attend the meeting. Bayer added the delay will give the student government ample time to improve grammar in several parts of the constitution.

If the constitution is approved, it will appear on the ballot in the Apr. 11 general elections as a referendum for approval or rejection by students.

In other action Personnel Committee referred to the student government cabinet the right to decide eligibility for candidates who do not meet the stated requirements for campus office (academic and otherwise).

The cabinet will meet this afternoon to decide the eligibility of four persons who have petitioned for eligibility because they lack one academic requirements stated in the present government constituion.

Bayer stressed the cabinet will not approve the petitions simply because it is a student group. "It must be shown by each of the persons that there is a definite reason for the lack of a requirement."

Bulletin

Dissatisfaction with the campus political party system was expressed last night by twenty members of the freshman class at a gathering in the lounge of Watson Dormitory.

The freshmen said they felt that the political party system deprived the freshman class of the right to nominate their class officers for the sophomore year.

The group said that nominations were decided by the upperclassmen and that the class itself in essence had no voice in selecting the persons who would be contending for offices.

A spokesman for the group said that they would like to express its feelings to the entire class immediately following today's citizenship lecture in Hendrick's Chapel.

The spokesman said, "Because of the seriousness and immediacy of the situation it is imperative that every member of the class of 1966 attend today's meeting.

'Ape Hits 'Gut' on 38th Try'

By SANDY MYERS

After pecking 38 typewriter keys, an ape might write the world "gut."

But the ape would be lucky. The average number of tries to get any three-letter English word is 45, Dr. Philip Morrison said Thursday in the final Footprints lecture of the 1963 series.

Dr. Morrison, professor of physics and nuclear studies at Cornell University, drew cards at random from a pile. After drawing 38 letters, g, u and t finally came up in succession.

It was the first intelligible combination of letters.

Failure

"There is no question that eventually apes could get meaningful words by the brute method. But this is almost doomed to failure," Dr. Morrison said, in his speech on "The Ape at the Typewriter."

A random method of producing knowledge must necessarily be "poverty stricken," he asserted.

"Random processes can in no way produce the ordered world around us. The world operates on undirected, not random, principles," he said.

The main problem with randomness, Dr. Morrison said, is that so much excess energy is expended before any order is achieved.

Individual Structures

"We know the world is atomic. What may come into existence as a result of random process is a large number of indivdual structures, which are not meaningful in the world, he noted.

"For example, if several magnets were placed in a bag and shaken, the red ends would always attach to the black ends," he explained.

Stanford Research

Dr. Morrison cited the work of K. R. Shoulders, at Stanford Research Institute.

Shoulders is working on creating vacuum tubes so small that a billion or ten billion would fill a water glass Dr. Morrison said.

"This shows the degree of complexity possibly in our world, he added.

"Only through the expenditure of energy can living beings make the choice to exist," Dr. Morrison asserted. "Our problem lies in not wasting any more energy than is necessary."

Party Conventions This Weekend

By ANDY PORTE
Junior Editor

Pre - convention campaigning moved into its final stages Thursday night, with the affiliation of Delta Upsilon fraternity still in doubt.

The three campus political parties announced final plans for nominating conventions. Whether DU will appear at the Campus Alliance Party convention or at the United Students party meeting remains a puzzle.

Also in doubt is the status of four persons who have petitioned the university Personnel Committee for permission to run because they lack necessary academic requirements for office. The committee referred action to the student government cabinet, which will act today.

Lack Average

The four who petitioned all lack the necessary 1.5 cumulative average for student government president and vice president.

They are James Morris, likely presidential nominee of CAP; Douglas Long, a US party member who has not announced whether he will seek the student government presidency or the senior class presidency; Logan "Slugs" Sallada, a DU and president of the junior class, who has also not announced which office he is seeking.

The fourth is Ellen Dickler, (Gamma Phi Beta) a member of CAP, who apparently will seek the vice presidential nomination. No other persons have given official notification that they are running.

CAP

CAP will hold its nominating convention in two parts, the first beginning at 1 p.m. Saturday at Phi Kappa Psi. The convention will resume at 2 p.m. Sunday at Phi Gamma Delta.

The Greek Independent Alliance party will hold its convention beginning at 1 p.m. Sun. at Tau Kappa Epsilon. It will resume at 7 p.m. Tuesday at Phi Mu. James Gray, GIA president, said his convention will be "completely open."

Gray urged both independents and Greeks to "come and seek nominations." He said all Greeks will be welcome, regardless of party affiliation.

US

The US convention will meet at 1:30 p.m. Sunday at Phi Delta Theta. The site and time of the second session will be announced at the Sunday meeting.

Campaigning will begin at 2 p.m. Sunday, April 7. Elections are scheduled for Thursday, April 11.

Two Games, One Winner

Two basketball games are being played at Manley Fieldhouse this evening but no matter what the outcome of those games may be, there will only be one real winner—the student union fund.

It is mainly for this reason that the Daily Orange urges all its readers to attend the game and pay the nominal 50 cents fee. Each person attending the game will be showing his or her interest in a student union for Syracuse University.

Since this topic has been a concern of many students in recent years and has become a major project this year, we expect good student and faculty support tonight.

We might add that the price of admission will be well worth every cent. The two ball games shape up to be quite a pair of contests.

It seems the 7:30 preliminary game is arousing the most attention on campus with its prospect of student-administration combat. Many of the fans will be out to see some well-known names on campus take a turn at the hardwoods.

Both squads have been working hard all week to round into shape but both coaches are still faced with mainly round shapes. Nevertheless, there are some good ballplayers on both squads and there should be a combination of good fun and good basketball.

The main event at 9 should place the emphasis on good basketball as the varsity team squares off with the freshmen. Opinion is fairly evenly split on which squad will come out on top. So in this contest, too, excitement should be generated.

So come out to Manley tonight. You'll have some laughs, some thrills and an opportunity to help a most worthy cause.

Sen. Ribicoff

As the climax to an outstanding week of speakers on campus, we welcome Sen. Abraham Ribicoff to Syracuse.

The senator will speak this afternoon at 3:30 in Hendricks Chapel as part of the citizenship lecture series. His appearance ends a week which has seen three outstanding speakers appear at the 10th Annual Footprints.

Sen. Ribicoff is a leading figure in Democratic politics and played a leading role in the Kennedy campaign of 1960.

As Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, and as governor and senator from Connecticut, he has played a leading role among the younger generation of politicians.

His victories in his home state have been by some of the largest pluralities ever recorded there. In addition to his political talent, Sen. Ribicoff is a forceful and intelligent speaker.

His lecture today should be of interest to any persons at all interested in American politics of today and the future for he is a man with a future.

We say welcome, Senator.

We Goofed

The Daily Oaily Orange will no longer deal with predictions as to the outcome of games involving its personnel. Wednesday night we were shocked into defeat by a superior WAER five. We congratulate them and apologize to our readers for the bum steer.

LETTERS

'Sword'

To the Editor:

Last year I helped edit the poetry of the "Syracuse 10." For the last issue, we took the poems submitted and tried to choose the best for publication in the magazine. By best, I don't mean the poems we liked the best, but those of the most literary value in whatever objectivity of criticism exists, or what we possessed. Each poem received consideration and suggestions for possible improvement.

However, these were not the poems picked for publication by Mr. Hughes, then editor. He chose a new selection of those we submitted and some others, unseen by us before the issue appeared. This was, admittedly, his prerogative as editor-in-chief. Those he chose were obvious, inconsistently ambiguous, obscure, or of such poor quality that they were unprintable.

Not only did they fail to take advantage of the techniques of poetry, but misused them. I honestly thought, at first reading, that the poems operated in a new logic, an awesome exercise, but if that was so, they could not substantiate the formulas they innovated. The publication of these inferior poems was an insult to their writers, those who submitted better poems, and the readers.

A new magazine, edited by Mr. Hughes, the "Sword of Damocles," has no space for poetry, even as "filler." If none were submitted, none were solicited; for printable poetry is abundant. Like the unfortunate poems selected by Mr. Hughes for last year's "Syracuse 10," the "Sword" has as its one thread of consistency its topical nature. These criticisms of university conditions could have been expressed succinctly in a few paragraphs without undirected muckraking.

That these parochial problems will continue to exist is insufficient to perpetuate a magazine. But a balance of creative work, one short story, was present. In a sense, this story took the tone of the entire periodical; it exploited a rather morbid sensationalism which did not cooperate with the mawkish and sentimental prose in which it was written.

These campus controversies are tempests in a teapot, but Mr. Hughes' omission of creative material, once again, is not. In his head editorial, Mr. Hughes states "The press must be the representative of the individual in the organization." Mr. Hughes wishes to represent students in an educational institution as individals in a state. Students should be represented as students. An individual is his own representative.

One aspect of the responsible journalism Mr. Hughes demands is the presentation of the work of creative students. Accomplishments of learning and art, not dissatisfactions of political hiatus. A magazine is a medium of expression, not an editorial detective agency. It has no reason for existence when such individual creation and communication ceases.

POLICY ON LETTERS

The Daily Orange invites, and even urges, the expression of opinion on the part of its readers. The editors make a sincere effort to publish as many letters as possible, but space and the illegible condition in which some letters are received eliminate several from consideration.

Out of necessity, the editors reserve the right to edit letters for reasons of grammar, space and good taste.

It had to happen! HOFSTRA COLLEGE has a course in Pool 69, and women are flocking to learn the game. This is the one with billiard balls and cue sticks, and has nothing to do with swimming.

Hofstra also has been chosen as one of the six schools in the nation to receive a $500 grant to help initiate an Experimental Student Ambassador program. Sponsored by the Experiment in International Living, the program will enable a student from Hofstra to visit a foreign country this summer. The "ambassador" will live in the foreign country for one month, and will spend the second month traveling. Upon his return, the "ambassador" will be expected to share his experience with his school through informal talks and slides.

In a humorous vein, LEHIGH UNIVERSITY featured a column in the newspaper called "Aid to Falling Students." The author proposes a Campus Committee for the Promotion of Skiing at Lehigh (CCPSL). He recommended that all stairways on campus be removed and converted into downhill slopes and trails, the installation of a rope tow, a double chair lift, and an aerial tramway. Syracuse might challenge another statement made: "Now everybody knows that as far as treacherous campuses go, we've got 'em licked by a long shot. Not only are we on the steepest slope this side of the Catskills, but we have the most confusing and hazardous maze of roads and steps in the East. "Ever been to Syracuse?

FIRST-RUN THEATERS

RIVIERA-CINEMA — If your date giggles, be careful of taking her to the Riv, this week. "Trial and Error" features Richard Attenborough who kills his giggly wife. Peter Sellers attempts to defend him and attempts to amuse the audience. Another in the Riv's revolving series of British comedies. Watch those revolve around Sellers. Jean Gabin and Martine Carol, both in their younger days, star in a French potboiler, "The Counterfeiters of Paris." Chances are, though, after N. Y. State's censors got through with it, you just see the pot, the boiling's on the cutting room floor. "Trial" at 6:45 & 9:50 p.m. "Pot" at 8:10 p.m.

PARAMOUNT — It's Oscar nominee time again, "To Kill a Mockingbird" got eight. Fortunately, it has more to recommend it than that. Based on Harpur Lee's Pulitzer winning novel of the Deep South it stars four-eyed Gregory Peck. "Bird" at 7:20 & 9:45 p.m.

KEITH'S—Folks certainly must like booze, or at least films about it. "Days of Wine and Roses," Four Roses that is, has been held over for another soused week. This well made pic got five Oscar nominations though the American Distillers Association is withholding comment. It has a nice theme song: keep on hearing it in bars. Quoth Gus at the Regent Bar, "We have no alcoholics here, just heavy drinkers "Strongroom's" no chaser though. "Wino" at 7:10 & 10:40 p.m. "Roomo" at 9:20 p.m.

SHOPPINGTOWN — Remember "Gypsy?" It had quite a run out here at Shoppingtown. But from the way things look, Mr. Christian and Captain Bligh may stay out in DeWitt forever. Everybody has to see Brando, the darling: they either love him or hate him. The latter faction has been polling better thus far. The scenery is like "Hawaiian Eye" in wide screen and color. The film, if you haven't guessed, is "Mutiny on the Bounty." "Run, Christian, Run" at 8 p.m.

ECKEL — We're supposed to write a short piece on the "Longest Day" so here goes. After three hours and 42 stars, we won. If you have any doubts, see it at 8:15 p.m. Student tickets at morning show only. Have war with breakfast.

LOEW'S—It's island week at the theater with the built-in parking lot. "Diamond Head" delves ever so thinly into the problems of race and love in Hawaii. That reminds us of a friend of ours who almost had the same problem, except he loved races. All winter long he watched the ponies run at Hialeah and Gulfstream. Finally, penniless and alone, he swam to Hawaii. By the strangest coincidence he had a ticket in his shirt when he dove in the water at Santa Monica. It fell out and was found by an itinerant beachcomber named Cwobny or Swide.

He happened to know this friend of ours and forwarded the ticket to him at Hawaii. When he reached the island he was greeted by a large crowd who had heard of his fate. They also had the tote ticket waiting for him. As he fell to the sand they took out the ticket and slid it into his palm. On it was written: Shirts: 25c apiece, Diamondhead Laundry, Honolulu. At 6:20 & 9:45 p.m.

Co-feature, "Hero's Island" from the play "Hero Sandwich" by Felix Frankfurter. "Island on Island" at 8:05 p.m.

ON STAGE

VOICE RECITAL—Mrs. Terry Fitzmorris sings her senior recital, featuring Mussorgsky's "Songs and Dances of Death," 8:30 p.m. Friday at Crouse College Auditorium.

ORGAN CONCERT—Paul Connick plays works by Bach, Dupre and other keyboard favorites on the Crouse Auditorium organ Saturday at 8:30 p.m.

FRENCH PLAYS—Une troupe francaise presentera deux pieces francaises en un acte en francais a 8.30 du soir samedi au Theatre Regent de l'Universite: "L'Apoolon de Bellac" par Jean Giraudox et "Orphee" par Jean Cocteau."

CHAMBER MUSIC — A free concert by the Krasner Chamber Music Ensemble featuring works by Mozart, Bartok and DeBussy. Sponsored by the College of Forestry of all people from a grant by Music Local #78. 8 p.m. Sunday, Marshall Auditorium.

CROUSE CONCERT—The regular Sunday Crouse Concert features the SU Brass Ensemble. Crouse certainly is busy this weekend. Bring food. At 4 p.m. as usual. Free, too.

Security Ups Force, Asks City Aid

uation is going to occur every few nights we need their help. They are always more than glad to provide it," he added.

Flaherty said the general description of the atta keys matches the description given last week by two other coeds who were attacked. The man is described as being medium height, dark complexioned, in his middle 20's with short dark brown hair. Wednesday night he wore a dark jacket with a Navy-type cap.

One coed said the man wore "owl-type" glasses and had a long nose.

City Police

Security Police were informed of one of the incidents by the city police, who were called originally.

This is the first time city police officially have been told of the recent campus molestings.

"We had no identification before this," Flaherty said. "They would have laughed if we told them a man is pinching girls and couldn't give them any more information," he added.

"This campus is not an easy place to find one man running around," Flaherty said. He added that eventually such persons like this are usually caught. Earlier in the year a man exhibiting himself in woman's undergarments was arrested by Security Police.

Seven youths, allegedly involved in the mugging of three Syracuse students last Friday night, were picked up by Youth Division members of the police department Wednesday.

Police said the boys admitted beating and robbing the three students last Friday night on South Crouse Ave. and attacking a young boy and a man in the 100 block of Midland Ave. on Thursday.

Arrested

One boy, 17, was arrested on charges of second degree assault. Two others were taken to Hillbrook Detention Center. All the youths will appear in Family Court.

The boys said that they made the assults "for kicks" following parties, police reported.

Flaherty told the Daily Orange plans are being made to add more lighting to campus In the fall Flaherty ordered the installation of lights around dormitories and the cutting of shrubs blocking the lighting.

"We provide transportation for students who must be out after hours for academic reasons," Flaherty said. "This is done mainly to prevent muggings," he said.

No Names

Flaherty requested names of coeds involved be omitted from the Daily Orange story. According to DO policy, names in incidents of this type are never used.

Thursday evening a Herald-Journal story reported the names of the coeds involved in Wednesday's molestings. Flaherty expressed his thanks to the DO saying "I'm glad that one publication has respect for its fellow man."

"I don't know what this fellow Case (the H-J reporter) is trying to prove," Flaherty said. He charged the city newspaper with exagerating the recent incidents.

Richard Case reported Thursday that Flaherty faced "a blistering student editorial" from Thursdays DO. Flaherty does not consider the editorial "blistering"; "It was an accurate report of the campus situation," he said.

Two coeds were molested March 4 and another was similarly attacked Feb. 28 on the steps leading to Mount Olympus. Two weeks before, an indecent exposure case was reported from the Maxwell Library. On Feb. 15 a coed was attacked, but unhurt, on College Place.

Commenting on these incidents Flaherty said, "I'm very limited normally and my staff is very limited."

The Security Police Force comprises 17 men, 4 of whom are on duty between 4 p.m. and 8 a.m. These men are responsible for patrolling the entire university area.

Two Security Police cars operate 24 hours a day to patrol the entire campus area.

Flaherty explained the men on his force have police powers of arrest throughout the entire city; these powers, however, are exercised only when an incident occurs concerning the university.

INFORMAL RUSHING

Nine Hill Fraternities will hold an informal open rush from 2 to 4 p.m. Sunday, according to chairman James Hadnagy (Theta Chi). Participating in the rush are Delta Tau Delta, Beta Theta Pi, Sigma Chi Psi, Phi Kappa Psi, Acacia, Beta Sigma Rho and Theta Chi.

The rush is open to all eligible freshmen. Freshmen may visit as many houses as they wish without any restrictions.

Play "Crazy Questions"

(Based on the hilarious book "The Question Man.")

50 CASH AWARDS A MONTH. ENTER NOW. HERE'S HOW:

First, think of an answer. Any answer. Then come up with a nutty, surprising question for it, and you've done a "Crazy Question." It's the easy new way for students to make loot. Study the examples below; then do your own. Send them, with your name, address, college and class, to GET LUCKY, Box 64F, Mt. Vernon 10, N. Y. Winning entries will be awarded $25.00. Winning entries submitted on the inside of a Lucky Strike wrapper will get a $25.00 bonus. Enter as often as you like. Start right now!

RULES: The Reuben H. Donnelley Corp. will judge entries on the basis of humor (up to ⅓), clarity and freshness (up to ⅓), and appropriateness (up to ⅓), and their decisions will be final. Duplicate prizes will be awarded in the event of ties. Entries must be the original works of the entrants and must be submitted in the entrant's own name. There will be 50 awards every month, October through April. Entries received during each month will be considered for that month's awards. Any entry received after April 30, 1963, will not be eligible, and all become the property of The American Tobacco Company. Any college student may enter the contest, except employees of The American Tobacco Company, its advertising agencies and Reuben H. Donnelley, and relatives of the said employees. Winners will be notified by mail. Contest subject to all federal, state, and local regulations.

History of Drinking Policy-Part VII

THE FOLLOWING is part of the long history of the drinking policy at Syracuse University. It is the result of over a month of research, both in the archives, interviews with policy makers and outside sources. The article is written by Jan Fowler, a sophomore, who stated his purpose as an attempt to "put an end to the 'sword rattling' that has gone on in the last several decades."

By JAN FOWLER

3 There shall be no consumption of alcohol in the freshmen men's dormitories, except during a properly registered social event, held in the dormitory social lounge, and under the direction of the dormitory staff.

4 Consumption of alcohol is permitted in upper class men's dormitories.

THE EXECUTIVE BOARD OF CORNELL STUDENT GOVERNMENT ASSUMES FINAL STUDENT RESPONSIBILITY AND JURISDICTION FOR THE ENFORCEMENT OF ALL RULES AND REGULATIONS CONTAINED IN THIS CODE."

You will notice that their student government carries quite a bit more weight there than ours does here; this is another consideration.

Also, we have some pertinent information from the Cornell Interfraternity Council social code (adopted 1960).

1. All events at which alcoholic beverages are served or consumed must be registered with the office of the dean of students by the Monday immediately preceding the event.

2. "At all events requiring registration, soft drinks shall be made available through the duration of the event.

3. "Excessive drinking or unacceptable behavior by individuals or fraternities will not be tolerated and will result in the imposition of penalties upon the fraternity or fraternities with which these individuals or the offenses are identified.

"THE IFC STEERING COMMITTEE IS EMPOWERED TO HAVE ORIGINAL JURISDICTION OVER ALL ASPECTS OF FRATERNITY LIFE, AND TO IMPOSE PENALTIES COMMENSURATE WITH ANY VIOLATIONS OF PROPERLY ESTABLISHED IFC RULES."

Again, their IFC has unlimited power while ours is limited.

Now, you know their situation and ours so in light of the differences of BASE make your own conclusions.

The fraternities would receive the most advantages if the policy were changed in regard to functions. To give the fraternities this privilege of special dispensation for drinking at parties would leave the independents in the cold more than they are now. Since both independents and Greek pay the same fees to the university, this exacts that equal treatment must be given.

Speech School Hosts Convention

The only visitors at the School of Speech and Dramatic Art's 50th birthday party will be members of the New York State Speech Association.

The School will host the associations' 21st annual convention today and Saturday. It opened Thursday.

A formal university celebration to commemorate the school's anniversary year was not scheduled because of a too-crowded campus calendar.

WHEN-TV will interview several speech and drama faculty members on its "One O'clock Scholar" program, 1 p.m. Saturday.

On the show will be School Dean Eric H. Faigle; Asst. Prof. G. F. Reidenbaugh, Associate Prof. Ray Irwin, Asst. Prof. J. Edward McEvoy, Prof. Louis M. DeCarlo, Associate Prof. Eugene S. Foster and Asst. Prof. Charles D. Smith, all of the School of Speech and Dramatic Arts.

Brief excerpts from "Don Juan in Hell" and "Romeo and Juliet" will also be presented on the show, with a teaching demonstration by Linda Strauss, an SU student teacher at Eastwood High School.

Hill faculty members will take part in the Speech Association convention's programs, which will center in the Hotel Syracuse.

Participating in Friday's discussions are Dr. Foster; Dr. W. Scott Harris, coordinator of the speech and hearing program; Associate Prof. E. Harris Nober; and Dora Lee Dauma and Harold Hogstrom, instructors.

Profs. Smith and Reidenbaugh will participate in a discussion of "An American Style of Acting" Saturday.

At the same time, Dr. Sumner Ives, English professor in the College of Liberal Arts, will discuss "The Speech Teacher and Webster's Third New International Dictionary."

Dr. Foster is acting as a member of the advisory committee on the convention program.

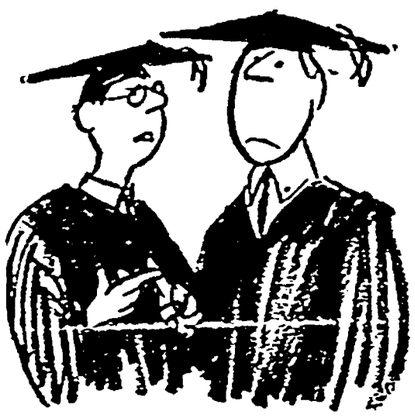
COLLEGE STUDENTS

Graduate students, teachers. Full time work June, July and August. Part time work available rest of year. Prefer men majoring in business, advertising or psychology. Transportation necessary. For personal interview call HY 2-1701.



1. According to the Department of Labor, you're worth over $350,000 as soon as you get your sheepskin. That's theoretical, of course.

I didn't even know the Department was thinking about me.

2. The way they figure it, that $350,000 is how much the average college graduate will earn by the time he retires.

I'll take it right now in a lump sum. Would I live! Penthouse. Yacht. Homburg. The works.

3. As an Eco major, I feel obliged to tell you what would happen to that bundle. First, Uncle Sam would help himself to about 290 Gs. With the going rate for penthouses, your life's earnings would disappear in one year.

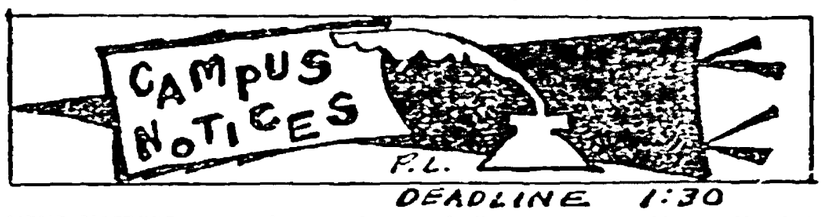
You've ruined my day.

4. Since you'd be only 22, you couldn't qualify for Social Security. You'd have to go back to your dad for an allowance.

I never could handle money.

5. Fortunately, there's a way out for you.

Tell me—tell me.



Well, you won't be getting all that money in one year. You'll be getting some of it each year, at a much lower tax rate. What you should do is put aside a certain amount of it.

6. Put some money into cash-value insurance, the kind they call Living Insurance at Equitable. It gives your wife and kids solid protection and it saves for you automatically—builds a cash fund you can use for retirement or any other purpose.

You Eco guys have all the answers.

Theta Sig Gives 3 Awards

Three women in the School of Journalism received awards Thursday night at the annual Matrix Table banquet sponsored by the professional chapter of Theta Sigma Phi, women's journalism honorary.

Andrea Nissen, who has worked for the Onondagan, received the Mary Zoretski award for the outstanding senior woman in the J-School.

Susan Crumbaker and Beverly Greatorex split a $100 scholarship given to the most deserving junior woman in the school.

The university board of prizes and awards was unable to make a decision as to which coed should win the award.

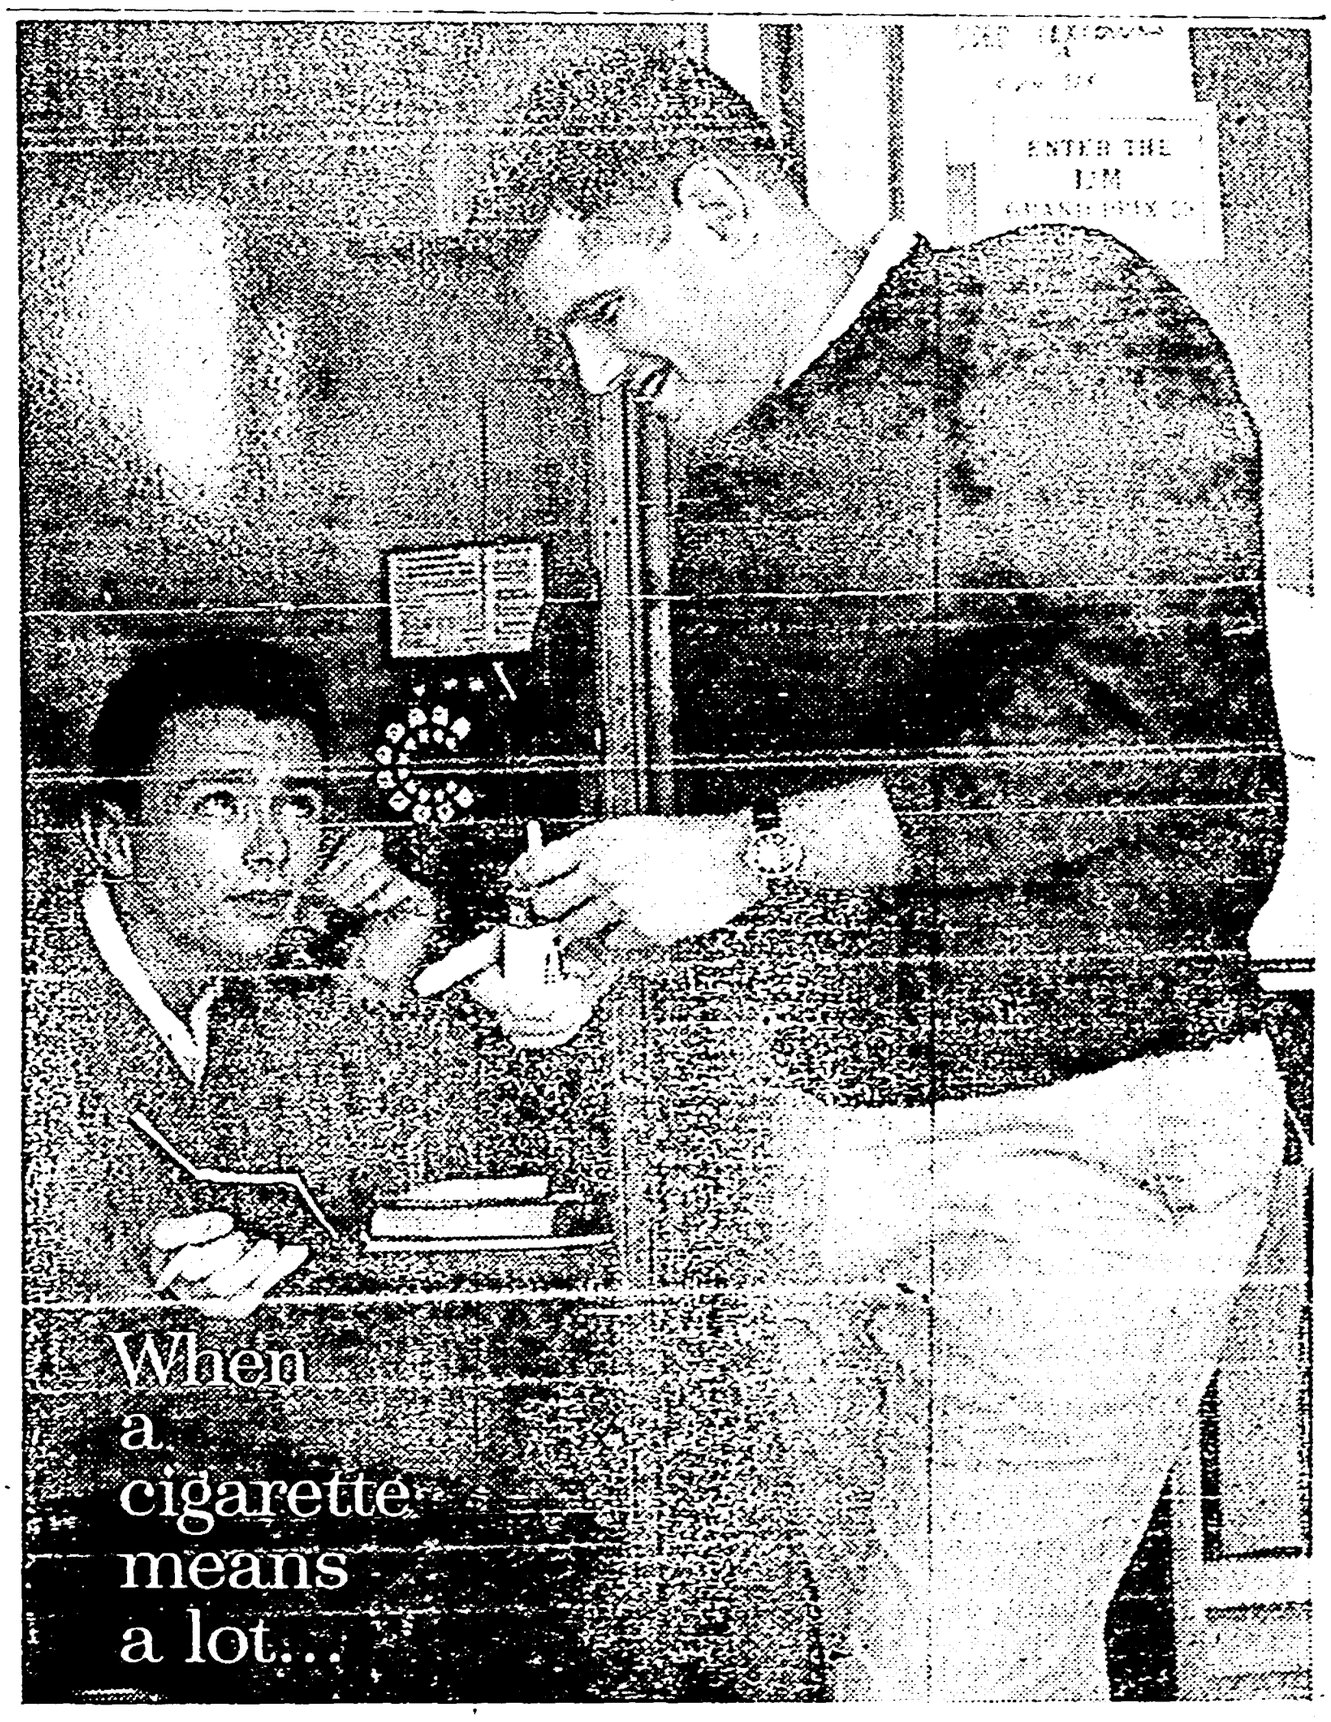
Miss Nissen, who also studied at Ohio University, has a 2.4 cumulative average at Syracuse. She has been a member of the Liberal Arts Advisory Council and a justice on the Association of Women Students judicial review board.

Also a campus guide, she is a member of Theta Sig.

Miss Crumbaker, who has a 2.2 average, is a staff member of the Sword of Damocles magazine.

She has served on the DO staff, and is a member of Theta Sig and Lambda Sigma Sigma, junior women's honorary.

She is also secretary of Panhellenic.



Miss Greatorex, a member of Chapel Choir and the women's gymnastic and fencing clubs, has a 2.2 average. She is a marching band majorette and was co-chairman of the winter weekend ice pageant.

Mrs. John Kohl, president of the professional chapter of Theta Sig, presented the awards

Frosh To Test Varsity At Manley Fieldhouse

For the past several years the varsity basketball coach has confided that his freshman squad was better than the varsity. He had always testified that they could and had beaten the varsity in practice.

But this season with the school boasting perhaps one of their best frosh teams in basketball history, the new coach has taken a different attitude.

The frosh are still playing the varsity, but this time the game is a public contest tonight at 9 p.m. at Manley and Coach Fred Lewis is retaining a wait-and-see attitude.

And with good reason. The varsity has been one of the most pleasant surprises this winter. With basically the same material as last year, when the Orange lost their first 22 games before winning the final two, they scrapped their way to an 8-13 record.

No one expected them to be four times better than last year. But there are a lot of reasons for the improvement: experience, hustle, a determined style of play and the new coach.

The frosh on the other hand, have totaled their 13 wins with a fast-breaking, exciting style. Dave Bing has gotten the headlines for his stylish play.

Tonight the two styles clash. The varsity is risking its reputation. After all, being the varsity, you have a certain position to maintain. The frosh would like nothing better than to beat them.

Forestry Dance

The Junior Forestry Class will sponsor the annual Woodchoppers Brawl from 8 to midnight today in Marshall Lounge. Music for the casual dance will be provided by the Dionysians.

Members of the planning committee include chairman Robert Batarick, Bruce Braun and Dieter Gruenwolet.

DEAN OF MEN EARLE W. CLIFFORD, who will take the court tonight in the student - administration game, smiles confidently after another rough workout. Clifford is one of the players the administration counts on in its effort to "run up a big score against the students." The game begins at 7:30 p.m. at Manley Field House.

Students Meet Faculty In Preliminary Game

That noise you have heard coming from Manley Fieldhouse this week has not been thunder, nor fire and brimstone, but some very out-of-shape persons trying to condition themselves for tonight's student-administration basketball game, which starts at 7:30 in Manley.

Coach Eric Faigle has been working into the wee hours with his squad as they work up their offense which will center around the talents of a varsity basketball coach, a freshman basketball coach and a former basketball coach: Fred Lewis, Morris Osburne and Andy Mogish, respectively.

Meanwhile, amidst constitution debates, IFC elections and the DO-WAER basketball game, the student squad under coach Jim Morris has been laboring to offset the experience of the administration five.

The Student Union Committee, which sponsors the game, give the scouting report on some of the players as follows:

"Val Pinchbeck, publicity director of sports, will show instead of tell how it's done . . .

"Dean Jerome and his assistant Dean Vogt represent the Business Administration staff."

Others on the squad are Bob Leiberman, Lester Dye, Clark Ahlberg, Burton Fink, El Roarke, and Ben Schwartzwalder.

Students feature John Mackey, Bob Dick, Ted Baer, Ron Mittleman, Tom Rigoli, Lee Petersen, Gene Bonstein, Henry Lee, Doug Long, Slugs Sallada, Win Whittaker, Dick Cost, Ed Silverstone, Jim Gray, Clyde Cawley, Ron Brzezinski, Robby Stern, Bobby Cohen, Charles Stackhouse, Dennis Greem, Ed Galgud, Bob Taylor, and Bill Gedalecia and Milt Joffe.

Halftime entertainment will be by the "Crows," folksingers from Alpha Chi Rho, the University pep band and Judy Delp.

Buses will leave Sadler Hall, making all stops at 6:50 and 7:10 and will return after the game.

Six Syracuse Fencers In NA Tourney

Six Syracuse fencers will be gunning for team and individual honors at Rochester tomorrow in the North Atlantic Championship Tournament.

Captain Stu Hollander and Mike Conte will represent the Hill sabre team; Harvey Schuman and Les Monostory will fence foil; and Duane Harrington and Marv Stone will fence epee.

Despite the Orangemen's 4-5 record, Coach Dako is optimistic about his team's chances in the tourney. After losing three consecutive meets by only 1 point, the fencers rallied to win their final two meets. SU defeated Buffalo, the North Atlantic defending champions, three weeks ago by a score of 16-11, and Coach Dako feels that chances are good for another victory.

Last year Syracuse took first place in the epee division, and third place out of 11 teams in the overall team standings.

Captain Stu Hollander took fifth place in last year's North Atlantics, and was second highest Orange point producer. Hollander is expected to score heavily this year.

Undefeated in his last two meets, Epeeman Duane Harrington compiled the best record on the team this year, 10-1, a .730 average and won the SU Dean Dellis trophy for his effort.

Among the other tourney-bound fencers, Hollander was second with an average of .695; Schuman was .692 and teammate Monestory had .558. Sabreman Conte turned in .533, and epeeman Stone fenced an even .500.

Aid Sick World, Ribicoff Tells U.S.

By DANIEL RITEY
Junior Editor

"The crying of the sick is heard over the talk at the conference table; the world is sick," Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., told freshman citizenship sections Friday afternoon at Hendricks Chapel.

"We must aid nations which need medical and social help, but, as of now, we're short of doctors and teachers at home and the Russians are turning out more of them than we are," the former secretary of health, education and welfare noted.

"This type of cultural and medical help knows no language and surmounts any barriers," Ribicoff went on; "we must deliver this type of aid, because it is this assistance that influences foreign nations."

The Connecticut law maker stressed "what we do on the domestic scene plays a very important role in our foreign policy," adding, "our actions on civil rights and old age care show the world that we do care and are able to help our people."

"Ours is not a problem of selling the U. S. and her achievements," Ribicoff said, "but, rather, having the U. S. people themselves understand what the U. S. is and stands for."

Ribicoff cited foreign students as a major concern to the faculties, students and communities because "they come to the U. S. to study and return to their countries critical of us."

"We must treat them as we would native Americans; on a day-to-day basis with equality like every one," he stressed.

The senator noted most people "emphasize the international problems while tending to ignore the important domestic issues like unemployment and poverty."

"We must realize that all people are in the same boat and that together they will sink or sail," Ribicoff said.

James Morris and Kate Antony as Joint Student Government presidential and vice presidential nominees will lead the Campus Alliance Party ticket in the April 11 elections.

At the CAP convention Saturday at Phi Kappa Psi fraternity senior class officers also were nominated.

They are: Ronald Brzezinski, president; Nan Keating, vice president; Cecile (Ceci) Sogioka; secretary; and Gerald Matlin, treasurer.

Junior and sophomore class officers and senators-at-large were scheduled to be nominated Sunday at Phi Gamma Delta fraternity.

At the Saturday convention the 26 CAP members voted against having their freshmen pledges vote in addition to house votes for sophomore class officers.

This procedure has been accepted by both United Students Party and Greek Independents Alliance to satisfy the group of freshmen who met Friday seeking a greater freshman voice in nomination of sophomore candidates.

Sorority Clauses Found Nil on Hill

By CLAY RICHARDS
Junior Editor

No Hill sororities have written discrimination clauses, according to a report received by the Syracuse University Anti-Discrimination Clause Board. Only four fraternities remain on the Hill with clauses, chairman Dean of Men Earle W. Clifford said Friday.

Required statements from three of the four fraternities were received at the meeting. The fourth was not handed in until after the meeting had adjourned, Clifford said.

The board was "concerned with the lack of cooperation in the failure of the fourth fraternity to hand in its report on time," Clifford commented. The officer of the house responsible for the report stated he was "too busy" according to Clifford, "despite the fact he had plenty of time to get the report in on time."

To follow up the report action, the Board has moved to require submission of constitutions and local by-laws of all Greek nationals and locals on campus. The Board will review each constitution and local by-laws to insure that there are no other houses with any kind of written discrimination clause.

Some decision is expected at 10 Get WAER Staff Positions

Ten Hill students have been named to senior staff positions on radio station WAER-FM (88.3), faculty director Ruane B. Hill announced Friday.

Taking over management on April 2 are Myra Lampman, public relations director; Daniel Stone, news director; Hank Kahn, chief announcer; Nita Kamm, continuity director; Barbara Epstein, traffic director; Bruce Eaton, special events director; Barry Lewis, sports director; Bernard Quinn, music director; Carolyn Conners, staff secretary, and Judith Ports, personnel director.

Heading the entire operation are Robert Feldman, program director, and Peter Moller, production director.

Miss Lampman, a native of Binghamton, is a sophomore liberal arts student and has worked on the station for three semesters. She is producer of Maxwell Comments and is a Chi Omega sister.

Stone is a sophomore in the School of Speech and Dramatic Art, from Watkins Glen. He produces "News of the Week in Depth" and has served as assistant news director this year.

A freshman in the School of Speech, Kahn is from Milwaukee, and has worked on commercial radio stations for two summers. He is president of his floor and a member of the Dell-Plain Hall executive council.

Miss Kamm is a School of Journalism junior from Huntington Station and has served as news editor this year. She is Sigma Tau Upsilon sorority social chairman and produces "University Reports" on WAER each week.

Miss Epstein, a Syracuse resident, is a School of Speech junior. She has worked in the traffic and continuity departments on the station for two years.

Acting special events director for the past semester, Eaton will now hold the post in full for the next year. He is a School of Speech junior from Troy, and has worked in the special events department of radio station WAST in Albany for the past two summers.

Maybe You're Wasting Your Time

A feeling of the continuity of life struck us Friday as we watched the freshmen, flushed and eager, plunge into campus politics.

It made us feel our 21 years to remember the other three classes of freshmen we have known, our own included, and to recall their inevitable similarities. They are all so energetic, so enthusiastic, so idealistic. They are all so taken up with the great plans they are promoting, so serious as they mouth the phrase that sickens in its triteness "class unity."

We admire the patience of the administrators who must deal with these freshmen, who must take time from academic problems vital to the entire campus to coddle junior grade flag-wavers.

Your stuffy elders would like to offer you an unwanted commodity, freshmen. Advice.

Do you realize what you are fighting for? You want the right to waste your precious college days squabbling over trivia. You want the right to back candidates who will, if elected, waste their precious college days discussing which band will play for the sophomore's weekend.

Please listen to us. Turn your energies to a more worthwhile purpose. Don't get caught up in the rat race of campus politics. It is not among the most valuable experiences that you can have at a university.

Apply your enthusiasms where they will be most useful: to the courses you are studying, to university projects such as the Citizenship Conference and the Festival of Arts, both coming up next month.

Poems By Zelermyer

By Stephanie Brill

"I'd been pre-med for eighteen years," wryly explained Benjamin (Jay) Zelermyer, "before I decided that writing was the most challenging, fascinating field."

The long-limbed junior smiled and looked up from behind the glasses that offset his thin face.

"I wrote my first poem in April, 1962", he said. Since then he has had one poem, "And Yet Again Wonderful" published in Syracuse '10' and expects to see another in the "10's" next issue.

Zelermyer has studied with poet - in - residence Phillip Booth the past two semesters. At present he is working on a series of poems about the seven deadly sins.

"They will probably be done with an allegorical style or with a dream sequence", he commented.

Experimenting with different poetic devices, he relies chiefly on sound in his "Sound of the Drummer" and used the French villanelle form for his poem based on the Samuel Beckett play, "Endgame". Hypnatism, something, he picked up "on the side" provides the subject matter of "Wish".

Poetry, however, is not the only literary medium he utilizes. An English composition major, he is taking honors in drama, studying with G.F. Reidenbaugh, acting chairman of the drama department. After graduation Zelermyer hopes to pursue his playwriting interests in graduate school.

At present he is writing a verse play which will be a modern treatment of the Oedipus myth. The play, whose working title is "My Journey Now Be Through" will be written in iambic trimeter verse.

"I chose this poetic form because it enables me to make everything a little bigger than life, to stress particular emotions. The play is based on a classical subject", he added, "and should have a classical sense of tragedy."

Relaxing a little he continued, "I believe that form and subject are inherently related. Each subject requires its own particular literary media."

In the realm of prose, a few years ago Zelermyer wrote science fiction stories and completed four chapters of a science fiction novel.

Another play, "Pray To Me For Mercy", started last fall, deals with a man who creates characters within his own imagination and subsequently governs their lives. It awaits the two final acts.

A serious writer, Zelermyer has also collaborated with a music writer to produce an original musical comedy at a summer camp.

Last summer he taught dramatics there and directed three plays, among them "West Side Story" and Edward Albee's "The Sandbox." He plans to return this summer to do drama work with eight to 16 year olds.

Zelermyer, who lives in Syracuse, played a leading role in Walter Kerr's "Stardust" while a senior in high school. He plans to do more acting this summer with The New Playhouse, under the direction of Reidenbaugh, at the Regent Theatre.

"They'll be pit parts", he casually added, "but I want the acting experience."

never can:
My shining teeth and hair
aglow with pride
Are merely superficial parts

I have my doubts, and yet
I'll never grieve
When I'm alone, and watching love parade.
I know all this; I've sung
these words before;
And I continue, knowing all the while
That lying to myself, though so much more

Be used in search of end.
They watch, and save
Me to play, upon the stage

Why my servant chooses to remain
With me, I wonder. But he cannot rove,
Like those who'd die,
escaping from life's pain.

He cannot leave: his mind
(like mine) is lame:
He knows no other way. He needs to have
Me (to play) upon the stage
again.

My parents are here too.
They feel the strain
Between us, now that we no

Like those who'd die, escaping from life's pain.

The four of us, waiting, playing the game
For theorems, and only death can move
Me to play, upon the stage
again,
Like those who'd die,
escaping from life's pain.

Sound of the Drummer
The beats slide in and grab
Heads falling, catching them
From necks which bend and shake
With every nerve. The pulse
Of even thuds marks time
Not counted, only felt
In lagging bass, a knife-
Like horn, a wheezing reed.
All march in sound, in step
By step progression, out-
Side brushes scratching heads,
Until a final cue.
And then crescendo, build
A tower, pyramid
To peak, and break, and hold,
As cymbals's echoes breathe.

Wish
The swinging ball moves back and forth,
Suspended from his steady hand
By string, long and white.
His mouth
Speaks softly, pressing hard a brand,
An image. Listen. Take a breath
Deep, full, easy. Relax.

inside
She hears only him: his voice
Calm and slow, she tries to hide
Within it, feeling for some space
That may, of all, last. Those who've tried

With him before must, by now, know
The answer that she seeks.
Her quest
Has brought her here, and now to go
The final step, perhaps she must Be pushed. She watches, hears, to grow
Into the light. The light is rest.

'To Kill a Mockingbird'

It's a sin to kill a mockingbird in Maykam County, Alabama. Some people, like Atticus Finch (Gregory Peck) must be the ever vigilant game wardens. Other, like his daughter, Scout (Mary Badham), and his son, Jem (Phillip Alford), listen for the mockingbird song. And a few are sinners.

With it's theme of Southern injustice and racial hate, "To Kill a Mockingbird," based on Harper Lee's Pulitzer Prize Winning novel, handles a different job through strong drama rather than heavy preaching.

Atticus is a crack lawyer, an honest man and a firm believer in the justice of the law. But these virtues are of little help when he is chosen to defend Negro Tom Robinson, falsely accused of raping a sexually frustrated white girl. Robinson, whose only real crime was feeling sorry for the white woman, is one mockingbird Maykam County kills.

But there is another story woven into the sordid stands of ignorance and guilt: the mysterious and beautiful world of children. It constantly hovers around its adult counterpart.

Jem, Scout and their summer playmate, Dill (John Megna), dream through the days in childlike adventures making up the film's most enjoyable parts. There is, for instance, Boo Radly a horrible, chained monster who eats raw squirrels and howls at night from his next loft window,

The Southern dialect is a bit thick in places for this snow-bound Yankee; the film really belongs to the script writer and cast.

Gregory Peck is believable as the strong minded, small town lawyer with big principles. But director Robert Mulligan must have had more fun with the kids: the audience surely does.

Mary Badham and Phillip Alford run through the movie with enough intensity and ingenuous humor to make the viewer remember his own childhood as the best time of his life.

It is unfortunate that Mulligan's unimaginative camera could not mirror the bright joys of Scout, Jem and Dill. After the opening credit shots that artfully survey the "effects" of childhood; broken pocket watch; marbles; pen knife; etc. the rest of the film is often a visual letdown.

But "To Kill a Mockingbird," at the Paramount, comes off in its attempt to intergrate its two worlds. The final scenes bring the children, Boo Radly, and even Maykam County into a composite that both the South and North will have a hard time forgetting.

Atticus and 'Friends'

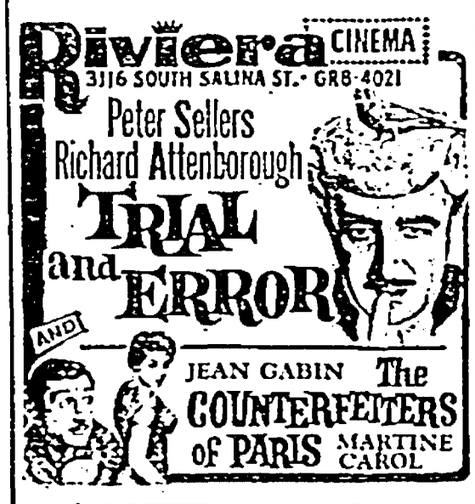
DEFENDING A NEGRO accused of raping a white girl from an angry lynch mob is lawyer Atticus Finch, and his three aids, (from left) son Jem, daughter Scout and summer friend Dill in a scene from "To Kill a Mockingbird," now playing at the Paramount. GREGORY PECK stars as the small town lawyer, with PHILLIP ALFORD, MARY BADHAM and JOHN MEGNA as the children in this filmed version of Harper Lee's award winning novel.

'Mary, Mary,' Slated

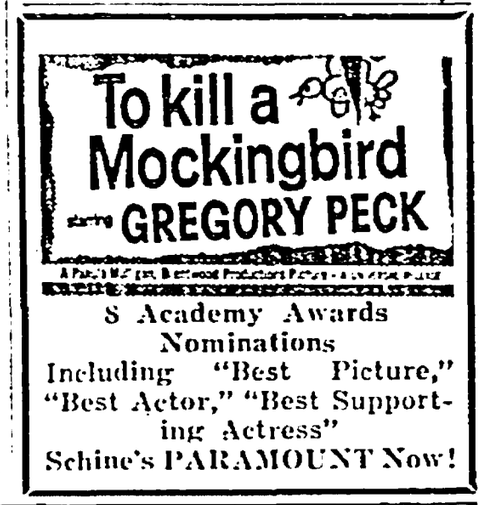
The hit Broadway comedy, "Mary, Mary" will be seen 8:30 p.m. Tuesday at Keith's Theater under the sponsorship of the Famous Artists Series.

Written by Jean Kerr, author of such best sellers as "Please Don't Eat the Daises" and "The Snake Has All The Lines," 'Mary, Mary" is now in its second White Way year.

Patricia Smith and John Lasall play the roles of Bob and Mary Kellaway, a young separated couple who meet unexpectedly on the eve of their divorce.



Taking place in their former apartment, the play recounts their memories of marriage. A combination a movie idol, tax department and snow storm brings a turning point to the comedy.



Patricia Smith who plays the title role began her acting training at the Neighborhood Playhouse in New York City. She appeared with Burgess Meredith in on the New England Summer circuit in "The Silver Whistle."

Her television appearance include roles on Studio One, Kraft Theater, Playwrights 56, Lux Video Theater and Philco Playhouse.

John Lasell has been seen in Maxwell Anderson's "The Golden Six," Clifford Odets' "The Big Knife" and John Dos Passos' "USA.." His roles include performances on "The Nurses," "Ben Casey" and Wagon Train." He has also appeared with the Stradford, Conn. and San Diego Shakespeare's festivals.

Tickets cost $4.80, 4, 3.60 and 3.

Tap Dance Concerto Set

Morton Gould will appear as pianist, composer and conductor with the Syracuse Symphony Orchestra in Lincoln Auditorium on the evenings of Thursday March 21 and Friday the 22.

Symphony Director Karl Kritz will turn over the podium to Gould when he conducts the orchestra in the "Tap Dance Concerto". The concerto is unique in that it utilizes the tap-dancing feet of Danny Daniels as a sole instrument.

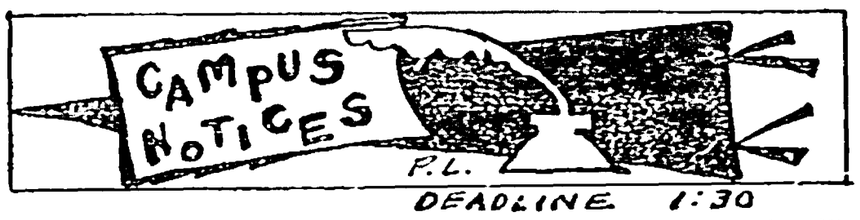
Gould is soloist for another of his compositions, "Dialogues for Piano and String Orchestra." Also on the program are Mozart's "Jupiter" Symphony, "An American in Paris" and the Bach Toccato and Fugue in D Minor.

Probably the busiest guest conductor in the United States, Gould recently returned from engagements in Mexico and Honolulu to work on a clarinet concerto commissioned by Benny Goodman. He is also collaborating on a full-length ballet with New York City Center Choreographer George Balanchine.

Gould, who began to compose at the age of six and was a child prodigy at the piano, has experimented with almost every form of composition, in both classical and popular idioms.

In addition to three symphonies, he has composed "Latin American Symphonette," "Interplay" and "Jeckyll and Hyde Variations" which had its world premiere in Carnegie Hall with Dimitri Metropoulos and the New York Philharmonic.

Gould's interest in folk and jazz media is reflected in his "Chorale and Fuge in Jazz," "Swing Sinfonetta" and "Cowboy Rhapsody". He also wrote the music for the Broadway show, "Billion Dollar Baby" and the movies scores for "Cinerama Holiday" and "Windjammer."



Dancer Danny Daniels was the dancing lead "Kiss Me Kate" and won an "Emmy" for his television choreography.

Tickets are priced at $1.50, 2., 2.75, and 3.50. They may be obtained at the Symphony office, 218 Harrison Street.
