Assignment: build the "grease gun" into our cars

We went to the mountain to make 1963 Ford-built cars go 30,000 to 100,000 miles between major chassis lubrications

Quite a task faced Ford Motor Company engineers when they set out to eliminate the traditional trip to the grease rack every 1,000 miles.

Like Mohammed, they went to the mountain—Bartlett Mountain on the Continental Divide in Colorado. More molybdenite is mined there than in the rest of the world combined. And from molybdenite ore comes the amazing "moly" grease that helps extend the chassis lubrication intervals for Ford-built cars. This grease sticks tenaciously to metal, stands up under extreme pressures and resists moisture, pounding and squeezing. It is slicker than skates on ice!

New, improved seals were developed. Bushings, bearings and washers of many materials were investigated. Slippery synthetics, like nylon and teflon, were used a number of new ways.

The search for means to extend chassis lubrication also led to New Orleans—where experimental suspension ball joints tested in taxicabs in regular service went two years without relubrication.

It took time. And ingenuity. But the effort paid off when Ford-built cars were the first to build in chassis lubrication good for 30,000 miles or two years—whichever came first.

Another assignment completed—another "Ford First" and another example of how Ford Motor Company provides engineering leadership for the American Road.

History of Drinking Policy-Part VIII

THE FOLLOWING is part of the long history of the drinking policy at Syracuse University. It is the result of over a month of research, both in the archives, interviews with policy makers and outside sources. The article is written by Jan Fowler, a sophomore, who stated his purpose as an attempt to "put an end to the 'sword rattling' that has gone on in the last several decades."

By JAN FOWLER

Regardless of how we Greeks regard the independents, they outnumber us and with a small amount of organization on their part, they could control more of what there is to be controlled here than we are able. Granted? Regard and utilize them.

There has been prodding from outside sources also. Richard Case writes an article in the Herald-Journal on Jan. 24, 1963 entitled, "S. U. Student Drinking Policy Change Seen Possible". This article is actually the culmination of several articles taken from the DO written by students. The headline is overemphasized in regard to its subject matter. He makes speculative proposals sound concrete.

With my interviews with students there is actually a split in classes; the juniors and seniors by and large have an entirely different attitude than the freshmen, who think it is the thing to do. These upperclassmen realize the importance of an ordered life if one is to take the reins of life confidently and without the use of a crutch. This subject of student drinking never fails to come up at Pine Brook conferences every year. All that this accomplishes is embarrassment and hard feelings; hitting a stone wall is not pleasant exercise.

To JSL: I don't think that JSL has realized the statistical problems of taking a survey of parents and students. Will those interviewed answer truthfully or get on the bandwagon? How representative will it be? Then you invite problems of consistency, editing, evaluating and organizing, which have to be considered. All against the theory that this part of public opinion will do no good anyway. Can't it be said that JSL is wasting its limited time and limited manpower?

Hint: I suggest that the JSL check the United States Health Service in regard to drinking and non-drinking fatalities, throughout the nation, in relation to wet and dry campuses.

It has been stated in the DO on Feb. 13, 1963 that "Since the drinking policy is an administrative policy, JSL has no jurisdiction to legislate in this area. All it can do is make a recommendation, of which I think the administration is already aware, to the University Personnel Committee", where it will, of course, be read but it is hopeless.

I denote that JSL is going about this in the way they have in some of their other adventures. The DO read on Feb. 28, 1963, "18 Senators to Investigate Liquor Ruling." I feel it should have read "18 Senators Vying for Top Political Recognition;" my contention is that JSG and JSL, who are powerless except for a few fluent speakers, will accomplish no more in this investigation than to bring a few more of their fold to the limited campus spotlight. In other words, 18 is par for this investigation course.

In regard to a recent article of a Mr. Louis Flohr, who should be more concerned with his university because he is leaving, on setting up a completely free liquor policy; this may be the "ideal" situation, but the ideological are fast falling by the wayside. The program you suggest would take much time to institute and much supervision and cost; because it will be required to make over the whole complex and foundation of the university. I say this as a non-drinker also, but I feel more regard for those mentioned in your article than you seem to have.

In an earlier article Miss Cynthia Marks seems to have the feeling that a "drinking scare" at this time would lose money for the university. Could it not be possible that if the policy were changed that we might add donors to our list who favor this change, perhaps, Seagram and Sons, Inc.

Actually there are two sides to every question; all the rich certainly are not teetotalers. I don't believe that the time is, quote unripe, but I do agree with you "that nothing beneficial will result from the present deliberations and investigations (JSL) on drinking."

Anyway, I believe that I have fulfilled the first and all important phase of JSL's drinking inquiry as outlined in the DO of Feb. 14, 1963, that is, "Find out all University objections to having liquor on campus." Also, I have completed bits and parts of the other four incidental "phases."

There is one ultimate solution for those who are displeased to the point of fanticism — leave.

Reading this article will be a process of selective retention, this is, each of you will read from his own viewpoint (don't worry, this is normal), of which there are many different. In other words, you will read what you want to read; so what you get out of this is only what you want to get out of it.

So rests the facts and Syracuse University drinking policy. The why's and where-fore's are before you of why SU will remain for an infinity as a campus, DRY.

Morris-Antony on

Both Morris and Miss Antony had one opponent each for the nomination.

A member of Zeta Beta Tau fraternity, Morris campaigned on a platform for realism. "What works efficiently is good and will be followed," he said. "We must get the administration on our side by respecting them, but we must keep our ideals."

Realistic goals according to Morris are a change in the marking system and a complete dead week. He also wants to add continuity to student government by following up projects started this year.

Morris, a resident of Rochester, has served two years in student government. He was a sophomore senator - at - large, elections commissioner and presently is director of the Social, Academic and Cultural Committee.

He has a 1.35 cumulative average. Since JSG presidential candidates must have 1.5 averages, Morris had to petition the president's cabinet. His petition was approved.

A member of Pi Beta Phi sorority, Miss Antony also petitioned to run with a 1.48 cumulative average. She has worked in student government for two years as a Joint Student Legislature senator and as elections commissioner with Morris.

Residing in Sheffield, Mass., Miss Antony was chairman of the 1962 Panhellenic Charity Ball.

Brzezinski, president of CAP, ran unopposed for senior class president and was nominated by white ballot. He is a member of Phi Gamma Delta fraternity and lives in San Bernardino, Calif.

Advocating more class unity and greater participation from seniors not on class executive council, Brzezinski has a 1.51 average.

He is treasurer of traditions commission, a member of junior class executive council, was on Goon Squad and is a JSL senator.

Sigma Kappa Nan Keating took the vice presidential nomination over four opponents. From Ventnor, N.J., she has a 1.5 average and is a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon, preprofessional speech honorary.

She is also academic commissioner of JSG, and a member of junior executive council.

With a 1.8 average, Miss Sogioka belongs to Zeta Tau Alpha sorority. She is a junior class senator-at-large, a member of student opinion service committee of JSG, a member of the drinking policy committee and delegate to CAP.

She comes from New Rochelle.

bers of the freshman class directly nominate candidates for class office after winning what they say is an apparent partial victory.

At a meeting in Hendricks Chapel following Friday's citizenship lecture, group members stated their feelings that political parties deprive the right of the ir class to nominate their officers for the next year.

When the crowd of 75, far short of the group's expectation of 500, cited the problems involved because of lack of time and organization, the leaders offered an alternatice proposal.

This move called for each campus party to allow freshmen from individual houses and independent groups to have votes in the nomination of candidates for their class officers.

Two ballots were required to nominate Matlin, of Tau Delta Phi. He has a 1.8 average and resides in Brooklyn.

Matlin has been treasurer of CAP for two years. In addition, he is a member of junior executive council. He has served in Goon Squad and JSL. He also is rushing chairman of Tau Delt.

pendent Alliance slates for senior and sophomore classes respectively in spring elections.

GIA met again Sunday to pick candidates for junior officers and will convene at 7 p.m. Tuesday at Phi Mu sorority to nominate candidates for student government president and vice president and class senators-at-large.

Other '64 candidatets chosen by GIA Saturday include Patricia (Trish) Spear, vice president, Renee Bruns, secretary; and Dennis Reilly, treasurer.

Rutheny's '66 running mates are Christopher Pilloton, vice president; Joy Aquino, secretary; and Helaine (Joy) Flachner, treasurer.

Delegates

Before selection of sophomore candidates, the GIA convention unanimously approved a motion to allow delegates from the Class of '66 to vote for their class nominees.

This motion resulted from a meeting Friday of freshmen demanding to be allowed to vote for their own candidates in the party system.

Seniors

The senior slate called for four newsletters, the first to give seniors information on the coming year at the end of the summer; others would give listings of job interviews and the last would list graduating seniors and their probable future addresses.

Other ideas included the beginning of a tutoring system, and earlier announcements of float themes for Spring Weekend.

Ideas offered by the sophomore slate concerned the sophomore Homecoming weekend. Rutheny advocated special alumni activities for the weenkend. In order to raise money, he called for more class functions, suggesting a Sadie Hawkins dance or a project with another class council.

Cain

Cain, a member of Psi Upsilon fraternity, hails from Chicago, Ill. He was president of his freshman floor, a member of frosh crew, Goon Squad, and sophomore executive council. is now a member of Traditions Commissions, junior executive council and the varsity crew team.

He was co-chairman of Colgate Weekend, 1961. Enrolled in the College of Liberal Arts, Cain has three majors, advertising, English and public address and has a 1.2 cumulative average.

A resident of Valley Forge, Pa., Miss Spear is a member of Chi Omega sorority. Her house is a member of Campus Alliance Party. She was secretary of her freshman floor, secretary of Young Republicans and football seating commissioner. She

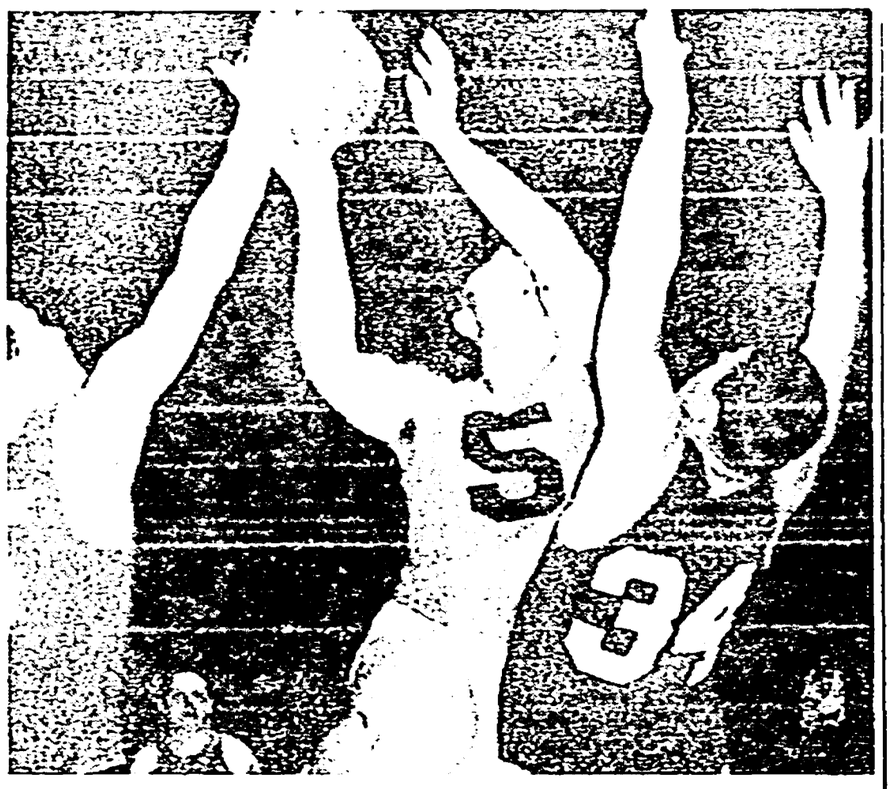
Frosh, Administration Hoop Victors

Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference officials said yesterday there was no basis to reports that referees were bribed by Administration officials in Friday night's student-faculty encounter before 1,241 at Marley Field House. The not-so-old men won, 46-43.

Faculty Coach Eric Faigle said immediately after the game that the faculty expects to retire the trophy in three years. "The students hustled," he said, "but they were no match for our playmaking and experience."



Student Coach Jim Morris said after the game, "I don't believe it happened; I never thought the referees could score 24 points."

Several foul calls were questioned by the crowd, but the referees stood on their rule books and ultimately gave the faculty a 24-13 edge at the foul line.

At the end of the first stanza, it looked as if the students were running away with the game, leading 13-7. Fast-breaking the "whitehairs," the students stretched their lead to 25-12 at halftime.

A typical Faigle locker room pep talk brought the faculty out "breathing at the mouths." To halt the fast break, they used ball control and within three minutes the students lead was cut to a single point, 25-24.

From there on, it was nip and tuck (Lewis and Osborn), as the faculty poured on the steam. The students had stretched their lead to 33-34 at the end of the third quarter, but were tiring.

HANDS UP ACTION during the student leader-administration game at the fieldhouse Friday night. The administration won on a 46-43 split decision by officials in the Student Union benefit game before 1,241 spectators.

Bing's 36 Points Lead Freshmen Over Varsity

By JUDY ADAMS

For the last time the crowd shuffled out of the fieldhouse. For the last time the scorers bent over the press table tallying up. For the last time the electricans patiently waited for the main arena to empty so they could douse the lights.

No more basketball this winter.

The student union had kindly added one more game to a season that had ended a week ago. But it was treated as an "also" game, with buses provided for those girls who wanted to "escape" to the Mount before it began. Wisely, not too many did.

Top Attraction

This was the night's most important game, though it didn't count on the records of the opposing clubs. The Syracuse varsity, who by sheer determination had piled up an 8-13 record, were pitted against their own freshmen, whose abundance of talent helped them compose a 13-4 year.

The game, as exciting as any played in the fieldhouse this year, looked like a varsity runaway for the first three quarters, that is to everyone but the frosh.

The first year men rallied in the closing minutes while the varsity could do little to stop them. Or rather, Dave Bing rallied in the closing minutes and the varsity could do nothing to stop him, as he led the frosh to a 66-59 win.

Dave had one of his best nights of the year with 36 points. From the time the scoreboard showed 3:30 in the first half, he was the entire show for the frosh.

In the first 16 minutes he had scored only five points. It wasn't his fault. "Vernick did a tremendous job guarding Bing in the first half," praised Lewis after the game.

While Vernick defensed Bing, his teammates slowly built up a ten point lead that was cut to six, 30-24, just before the half.

Midway through the second half, the varsity was still on top, 49-37. But five minutes later the score was tied, 50-50, with Bing's eight points leading the spurt.

The frosh continued their heated pace to move ahead 63-53 with three minutes remaining in the game. In these nine minutes the varsity had scored four points while the frosh had amended their total with 26. They had little trouble after that in coasting to the 66-59 win.

Bing Hits

In the last 20 minutes, Bing had scored 25 of his 36 points, for better than 50 per cent of his team's efforts.

For the varsity, Herb Foster had 13, all in the second half. Carl Vernick had 12, all in the first.

At the start of the contest many in the frosh-favoring crowd were wondering if it was a continuation of the preliminary game. For three scoreless minutes the two squads divided 12 missed shots before Finley's basket.

Lewis was pleased with the game that "put him one step ahead on next year."

"Rex is really improving," the coach said nodding his head approvement. "He is really going to be something."

It promises to be quite some year.

Hill Teams NCAA Bound

By ART ROSSKY

Syracuse University's powerful wrestling and gymnastics squads are awaiting trips to the NCAA championships March 21-23 and March 29-30, respectively. This is the first time in history that complete SU squads are making the trip. Previously only individual champs had been sent.

Paced by big Jim Nance, recent winner in the Eastern Intercollegiate Wrestling Association Championships, nine Hill grapplers will journey to Kent State in quest of further laurels to add to their Eastern championship.

Stiffest competition for the Orangemen should come from Iowa State, Oklahoma State, and Oklahoma, perennial powers in NCAA competition.

Oklahoma and Oklahoma State both boast members of the coaches' NCAA All American team.

Oklahoma's representative is 147-pounder Wayne Baughman, while State boasts heavyweight Joe James.

In addition to Nance, leading Orangemen are Terry Haise, 123-pounder, Jim Murrin, 137, Bill Slatzky, 147, and Jerry Everling, 191. Haise, Murrin, and Slatzky finished second in the Easterns while Everling, surprised by Temple's Steve Sivco in the semi-finals had been top-seeded.

Other Hill wrestlers are Sonny Greenhaugh, 130, George Pedener, 157, Gary Sirota, 167, and Lew Roberts, 177.

Army is the lone Eastern school boasting a defending NCAA champ. Mike Natvig, an Eastern winner, took 147-pound honors in last year's tourney.

Other Eastern champs were Bill Merriam, Lehigh, 123; Pat Smartt, Lehigh, 130; Mike Harman, Navy, 147; Kirk Pendleton, Lehigh, 157; Jim Harrison, Pitt, 167; Gary Franzen, Navy, 177; and Bob Rader, Rutgers, 191.

The Gymnasts paced by little Phil "Corky" Voas and captain Ray Grimaldi, journey to Pitt in quest of NCAA team honors.

Penn State and UCLA are among the teams expected to challenge for the championship.

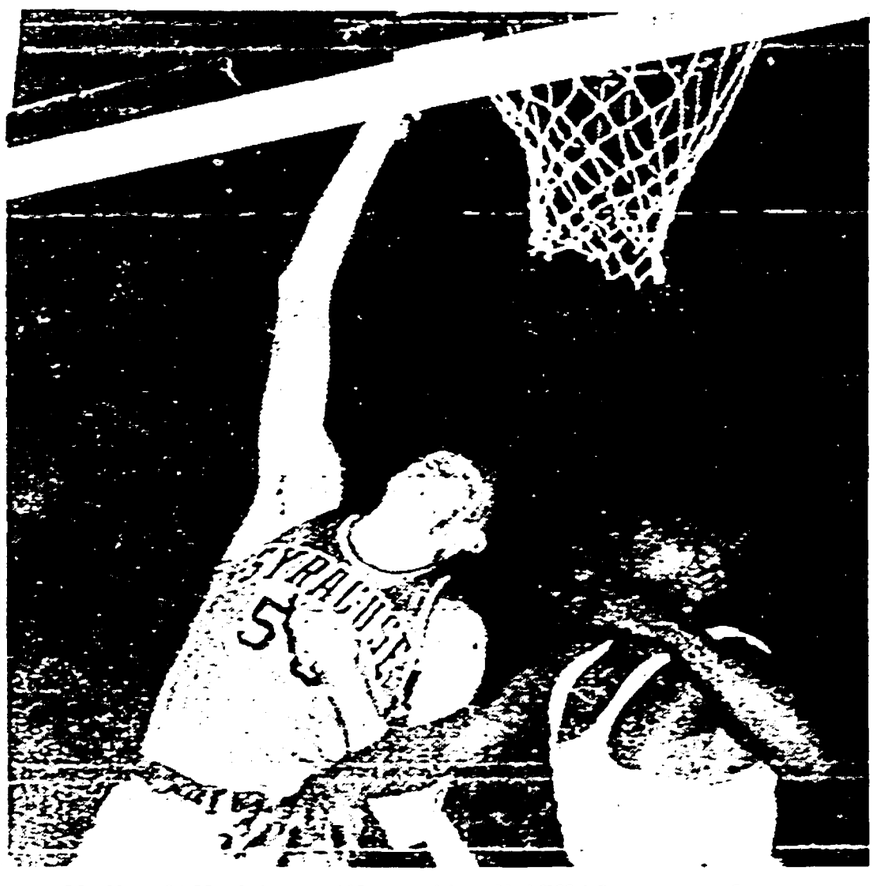
Eight events— two more than held in dual meets— will be conducted. The trampoline and tumbling have been added to the usual six (floor exercise, side horse, horizontal bar, long horse, parallel bars, and still rings).

In 1962 Voas was Eastern trampoline champ, the last year it was a part of Eastern competition.

Voas also excells in tumbling, and the still rings while Grimaldi gained Eastern championships in the side horse and still rings.

Another standout for coach Paul Romeo's forces is Ron Orlick in the parallel bars and long horse.

Soph Sid Oglesby, another Eastern champ, is outstanding in the parallel bars.



ZBT Honors Bob Cousy; NBA Playoffs Start Tuesday

A plaque presented by Zeta Beta Tau was among the many honors professional basketball star Bob Cousy was presented with, during the weekend as he closed out his regular season career.

The ZBT plaque signified that Cousy had been named "athlete-of-the-year" by the fraternities national membership. It was presented to him in a brief ceremony preceding the Nats-Celtic game in Syracuse Saturday evening.

A crowd of 14,000 fans gave Cousy a St. Patricks Day farewell in Boston Garden Sundey. Among the gifts presented "Mr. Basketball" were a Cadillac and a plaque from President Kennedy. He was honored in a 25 minute ceremony before the Boston game.

The Nats and Celtics along with Cousy may meet the Nats again this season in the playoffs which start Tuesday with Syracuse playing the Royals in the Eastern Division semi-finals.

CHUCK RICHARDS AND SAM PENCEAL go up for a rebound during Friday night's frosh-varsity game which the frosh won with a late rally. Richards did not play with the varsity during the regular season since he is a transfer student.

2 More Cases; Flaherty Meets Chiefs Today

Three police chiefs meet today in Rochester for conference on common problems including the molestings that now plague the Hill campus. Security Director Robert D. Flaherty, Syracuse Chief Patrick Murphy and Rochester Chief William Lombard had planned such a discussion before Hill cases reached their current frequency, Flaherty said Monday.

A mugging and an indecent exposure case Sunday added to Security Police's problems.

James Dovich and Ronald Fraser were attacked at 3 a.m. Sunday by a gang of six Negro youths on Cedar street. The two SU students, each weighing over 200 pounds, fought off the gang, but not before Fraser suffered a deep cut in his right forearm which required stitches.

He also was hit in the left temple by a bottle thrown by one of the attackers and suffered scratches on the left side of his face.

City police were called to investigate.

Two Hill coeds reported a man indecently exposed on the corner of University place and College place Sunday morning. The girls were waiting for a bus to go to church when a man in a pink car drove up, stopped at the corner and exposed himself. The girls identified him as a light complexioned Negro about 6 feet tall.

A walkout by four freshmen marred an otherwise orderly United Students party convention Sunday night.

The walkout came after Kenneth Wurtenberger, a Sigma Alpha Mu pledge, won the party nomination for president of the sophomore class in a close vote over Anthony (Toby) Moffett, a Delta Upsilon pledge.

The four who walked out said they will run together as independents since they could not run together under US party backing after Moffett lost.

Besides Moffett, the other three who left the convention are Patricia Ettkin (Sigma Delta Tau), Rosalind Yuen (Delta Delta Delta) and Mark Samuel (Phi Epsilon Pi). The delegates of the four houses remained at the convention.

Kenneth Harfenist, United Students party nominee for Joint Student Government president has the support of his fraternity, Tau Delta Phi, even though it is a member of the Campus Alliance party.

Tau Delt political representative David Bresler, made this announcement Monday to clarify the position of his house with respect to Harfenist and the rest of the CAP slate.

He said, "Tau Delta Phi as a member of CAP is solidly behind the CAP slate.

"However, since Ken Harfenist, a brother of this house, has independently sought and gained the nomination for president of JSG on the US slate, we will support him for that office, as Alpha Xi Delta (US party) supported Carol (Schultze) Lucha on the CAP ticket last year."

Harfenist sought the JSG residential nomination at the CAP convention Saturday and was defeated by James Morris (Zeta Beta Tau). He was suc-

Greek Independent Alliance elected Charles Carter of Tau Kappa Epsilon to lead the GIA junior class slate by a white ballot Sunday at the party convention.

A previous secret ballot had named Gary Rehm of Acacia as the presidential nominee. Rehm and Carter were the only two contestants for the candidacy.

After the first ballot, party officers and delegates met behind closed doors. A re-vote was then called with Rehm's consent.

Running with Carter and Rehm are Andrea Fastiggi of Alpha Phi, secretary; and Gary Incorrectly identified in a Daily Orange headline Monday were James Morris (Zeta Beta Tau) and Kate Antony (Pi Beta Phi). They are presidential and vice presidential nominees of Campus Alliance Party.

Phi Sig Quits US

Phi Sigma fraternity has withdrawn from the United Students party because the house says it "refuses to engage in dirty politics."

Lawrence Dana, Phi Sig political representative, said "It seems very strange to Phi Sig that a five-minute session used explicitly to make deals occurs prior to every balloting." He said that this session encourages the "dirty politics."

He hit the piety organization, saying "It would seem that certain houses can blithely set up rival candidates running openly against the party and still remain within the party."

He cited freshmen, US house pledges, pulling out of the convention and also mentioned the absentia nomination of Wendy Wriston as candidate for senior secretary. She is now in Italy.

The Striking Professionals

You should have been able to read the New York Times today. That's right. The strike was just about over, they told us last week. There's nothing left but some minor settlements.

Well, you're not going to see the Times today or tomorrow or all week. The strike is continuing because the typographers' and stereotypers' unions decided not to accept the terms of the newspapers.

So the members of the Guild will remain out of work in sympathy with the members of the union and the men of the newspaper industry will take another step back from their profession.

We purposely say profession because we feel that the newspaper business depends on writers and editors who are as justified to the title of professional as are doctors, lawyers and teachers.

But when the Guild, which had done a lot of good for the newspaper employes, functions in the same manner as a trade union, the title of profession becomes not only meaningless, but ridiculous.

The New York strike shows beyond a doubt that there must be some changes made in the Guild-union relationship as well as their relationship to the newspaper's management.

Someday the strike will be settled in New York City and maybe some of the bitterness will be forgotten. But nothing will really be settled until the reporter can approach his job with the knowledge that it is, in fact, something special and that he must not be kept in line and limited by a group that tries to keep a profession shackled in the back shop atmosphere of trade unionism.

By the way, if you want to read the Times, there are post-strike microfilms of the West Coast edition in the main library.

Mickey Mouse

Mickey Mouse, that ingenious invention of Walt Disney that led to a multi-million dollar cartoon kingdom, has become an adjective which always is appropriate this time of year.

Each year the tag gets put on the campus political system, which even now is putting the finishing touches on its respective "balanced slates."

And why Mickey Mouse? Because for each worthy candidate there are ten more worthy who were sacrificed to the balanced slate and for each sincere party worker there are ten times ten glory hounds and power seekers.

To those who bowed out of the political scene this weekend, we bid you belcome back from Disneyland. To those who were "chosen," was say, "Straighten your ears, the odds are against you."

ALTERNATIVES

A Funny Thing

By Ron Corwin

"Some Whites will say this is not really it. . . . But this is picayunish, and we no longer have time for that. We no longer have time to atomize principles and beg the question. We fill too many gutters while we argue unimportant points and confuse issues."

J. H. Griffin, in "Black Like Me"

It's a funny thing, but you never meet anyone who is prejudiced nowadays. It's just not in vogue. No sir, not even Ross Barnett or George Lincoln Rockwell is prejudiced. If you don't believe me, just ask them.

They'll tell you that they're being realistic and you're being a fool. That they're not prejudiced. They know the real score about the races. And they're one up. They've got the facts.

Their position makes us at Syracuse flaming egalitarians. Right! Sure it does. We're smart. We're sophisticated. We don't fall for any of their arguments.

Oh no. Not us!

We know, for instance, that the reason so many Negroes are poor is because we don't give them a chance. Right? We know that the argument that the white pays the most taxes and, therefore, has the right to the best facilities in the south is a phony contention.

The reasons are obvious because we've spent time thinking about them. Right? The white community makes it impossible for the Negro to earn much money so he cannot pay taxes and therefore he doesn't have the right to use "white" facilities because he's poor. The argument that the white pays more taxes and is therefore entitled to better facilities is circular.

After all you can't kick a man in the groin and then say you don't like him because he's down, can you?

Also, we know that every man is entitled to the rights guaranteed by the Constitution. That's what it says, doesn't it? No one person has any more right to facilities because he earns more money than another man. America wasn't founded on those principles, was it? That is not what democracy is, right?

We know more of all this. This is old hat to us.

We know that the Black Muslim's are a reaction to white hate of the Negro for 300 years. We are sensitive and sensible enough to understand how it must feel to be a black man in a white man's world. We know that Santa Claus is white—we can't even imagine a Negro Santa Claus. We are understanding enough of our own motives to know that the hostility the Negro feels towards the white is a product of our white hostility so long vented at the Negro. We've thought about all of this, right? We've thought about it before we pass off the Black Muslims as a "hate group."

Because we are well aware that "when Malcolm X was six his father, whom a group of whites considered 'too aggressive in racial matters,' was found under a Lansing, Michigan (the North, you know) streetcar, 'his head bashed in and his body mangled. After that (Malcolm X's family) almost starved'." We've thought about that and realize that we might wish for whites to die(particularly southern whites—but mostly all whites) if our father was killed because he asked to be treated like a human being. We've thought this thing through, of course.

In fact we even fell that it is nothing short of amazing that the Negro in the United States has not brought guns to bear on his white keeper long before this. And it's amazing that the Negro isn't shooting at the whites right now.

The fact is that just the opposite is happening.

Greenwood, Mississippi. Last week. Workers for the Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee (SNCC) are teaching Negroes how to register to vote. That means trouble. A series of Negro houses and shops are burned.

Sam Block, a SNCC worker, is distributing food to Negroes cut off from welfare funds by the Sovereign State of Mississippi because of the increased voter registration activity. Block is arrested.

His statement that the SNCC headquarters was burned to the ground as retaliation for the voter registration work SNCC has been conducting is a "Public utterance calculated to disturb the peace." Block is found guilty.

Justice. The judge will bargain. Justice. If Block is a "good boy" he can get off with a suspended sentence, promises the judge.

"Do you mean I've got to give up my voter registration activity?" asks Block.

"Yes."

"You mean I've got to stop helping the people?"

"Yes."

"Judge, do you mean that I've got to give up my work with the Student Non-violent Freedom movement?"

The Judge nods, "yes."

"Judge, I ain't going to do none of that!"

"Well you'll do six months and pay your $500 fine," answers the judge. Justice.

There's more Justice.

Midnight. Greenwood, Mississippi. Jim Travis, a Freedom Rider, field-secretary for SNCC, and one of twenty native Mississippians working on voter registration, is riding with two other voter registration workers in his car. They're followed by a Buick with three white men in it. Only the Student Non-violent group is non-violent.

Seven shots are fired into Travis' car.

Now Jim Travis is in University Hospital in Jackson, Mississippi with a shoulder wound.

And a flattened bullet near his spine at the base of his neck.

God.

GIA

To the Editor:

Sunday afternoon, the Greek-Independents Alliance Party held its junior class officer's nominating convention in the house of Tau Kappa Epsilon. The meeting was a continuation from the day before and lasted from 4:00 to 8:30 p.m.

Starting the speeches for president was the favored candidate, Charley Carter, of TKE, followed by Gary Rheim from Acacia. The speeches were well-received, but when Rheim was voted the winner, the surprised Carter backers called for a five minute break.

During the break, groups formed in the corners discussing their dissatisfaction with the vote. Many were afraid of losing Carter's pull from the "Jewish fraternities," and from his great popularity. Fred Hershey from TKE said, "Charley told me that if he didn't win the nomination for President, he would run independently." As the recess wore on to 7:00, several plans for using Carter on the slate were arranged, satisfying no one—especially Carter. Everyone realized that if Carter ran independently, it would ruin the party's chances for a presidential victory.

"This is bad—the whole thing is bad!" exclaimed the disgusted Nelson Happy. Tentatively, Carter would be nominated for vice presidential candidate.

Marty Butterfield gave the only speech for the V. P. nomination before a second break was called—again by Carter's backers. After another hour of back-room discussing, Jim Gray came out from a private meeting with the candidates and announced that the first election would be disregarded for the benefit of the party. The delegates were then told that they would use a white ballot to elect the slate of Carter, Rheim, Andrea Fastiggi, and Gary Germain. Carter, Rheim, and Fastiggi were handed their nominations, but just as a show of hands for Germain was asked, I asked to see who he was. Laughter murmured through the room. Germain was brought out and introduced for the first time. After a few words, the vote was taken, and again, no one had the courage to give a verbal nay.

So the convention was over and the GIA had elected their four candidates, all of whom were Greeks.

UP IN THE AIR

Blackout!

By Leslie Berg

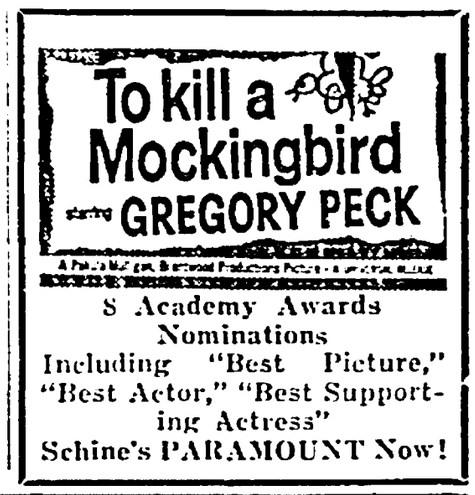
The newspaper blackout which crippled New York City is almost over. The presses will hopefully roll again and the millions who had to turn to other media for all of their information will have the dailies back again. But tv will not forget.

The broadcasting industry will probably be the most effected by the newspaper blight. Newsmen and broadcasters have long engaged in friendly competition over the news. But when the competition stopped, when the presses were silenced, the mikemen discovered they could not go it alone.

News formats on radio and tv were inadequate. Broadcasters relied heavily on newspapers to furnish the background. They skimmed the surface, threw on a few visuals and were content to call this news coverage.

Local news, specialized news and other information was ignored. It didn't matter as long as the newspapers could fill the gap. But when the newspapers stopped printing and all eyes turned to the magic box.

For the first few days television and radio made attempts to fill the information gap. These attempts were quite laughable. Newsmen could not read book reviews or movie reviews. They had no sources for local news. The wire services could not fill the added news shifts. And viewers were treated to humor with their information.



Improvement has been slow. The networks recognized their responsibility to add time to news broadcasts. But adding quality was another matter. And allowing newsmen to read their newspaper copy over the air did not help the quality sound.

The simple truth is that television has lagged behind in its news coverage. The newspaper strike only made this more obvious. Network affiliates in the New York metropolitan area had ignored local news too long. They had relied on speed and dramatic technique to gain recognition as news mediums. This is fine in a crisis.

But every day events are taking place that don't require bulletins and program interruptions but do merit coverage. A very parochial approach to news has forced New Yorkers to use tv as only a supplemental medium.

Now that the strike is over tv and radio can go back to limited coverage again. But perhaps the blackout has shown the mikemen the inadequacies in their news policies. News must be more than headlines and hoopla. Broadcasting must continue to work if it is to take its place as an information media.

MUSIC

Brass Ensemble

A sparse but responsive audience heard an unusual concert yesterday at Crouse Auditorium: The Brass Ensemble, directed by Donald E. Schmaus, presented five pieces written expressly for the usually neglected brass instruments of the orchestra.

The concert opened with Morgenmusik of Paul Hindemith, a non-melodic work for two trumpets and two trombones that was marred by faulty technique on the part of the trombonists. "Lipping" was a constant malady throughout the concert, with the trombonists not the only guilty ones.

With Quintet in B Flat by Robert Sanders the Ensemble seemed to gain confidence and present its syncopated rhythm with more assurance.

With Victor Ewald's Symphony for Brass Choir a tuba was added to the trombones, trumpets and french horn. The martial air of the symphony won a big hand from the audience. Schmaus left his chair as first trumpet and conducted, much to the detriment of the trumpet section. The smooth and even playing of the French horn almost compensated for the sloppy phrasing of the trumpets and trombones, but not totally.

Schmaus also conducted Theme and Variations by Vern Reynolds, which required three French horns, three trumpets, three trombones, a tuba, baritone and timpani. The total sound of the work was brassy, with no balance between the elements, although the French horn work was again excellent.

The last selection, a series of seven short statements called Cathedral Music by Thomas Beversdorf, brought back the original two trumpets and two trombones, this time adding the great Crouse Holtkamp organ played with Will O. Headlee's usual skill.

The statements were loud and managed to drown out the organ in most sections. I have my doubts that these works would ever be played in a catredral, or at any liturgical function, for that matter.

Perhaps the fact that none of the recital's five works were familiar to most of the audience was a detriment to the concert. But the larger fact that none of them was played with any real distinction was the greater detriment.

50th Birthday for PiKA

Pi Kappa Alpha social fraternity Friday celebrated its 50th anniversary on the Hill. The Alpha Chi chapter was founded March 15, 1913.

Prior to nationalization the house existed as a local, Zeta Rho, whose exact founding date is unknown, but is believed to be somewhere around the turn of the century.

The house, which presently boasts 35 undergraduate members, has initiated 550 members during its 50 years at SU. Several well known Pikes have graduated from the local chapter including SU Chancellor William P. Tolley, former University of California head football coach Lynn "Pappy" Waldorf, and Irving Anderson, national vice president of the Esso Refining Company.

Official celebration for the anniversary was at the Pikes founders day banquet last week. Honored at the banquet was Joseph Harry Rich, one of the five living founders of the local chapter.

An outstanding alumni award was presented to Preston D. Fogg, '09, a member of the Zeta Rho local.

Undergraduate awards were presented to Joseph Zerbey, outstanding active brother, Bruce Ducat, highest scholastic average, and James Green and Henry Safnauer, best improved averages.

National President Joseph C. C. Scott, Chancellor Tolley, Dean of Men Earle W. Clifford, Post Standard Publisher Henry Keller, Fraternity Administrator James P. McMurray, and Atty. Frank C. Love were all guests of honor.

Nearly 100 fraternity members attended the celebration held at the John Milton Motel, Carrier Circle.

The Pikes have had three houses during their stay on the Hill. The first, which no longer exists, was located between Chi Omega, and Delta Kappa Epsilon; the second at 720 Comstock is now the Sigma Chi Pi house, and the third, their present residence, is at 405 Comstock.

During the next year they plan to build an annex on their 27 man capacity plant to afford more study rooms, and improved kitchen facilities.

MERP Feeds Hungry Men

Freshman women will be given a chance to repay the men of their class for the dates they have had this year.

Freshman women will be asked to invite men out during MERP Week for coffee or snacks.

A picnic at Green Lakes State Park from 2-5:30 p.m. April 28 will end the week. Picnickers may bring their own lunches or buy food at the Green Lakes Club House.

A shuttle bus system is planned for transportation to and from Green Lakes.

Any freshmen interested in working on MERP Week should call Margaret Hickey, ext. 2203 or 2209.

Missed A.F.R.O.T.C.?

Go A.F.O.T.S!

These letters stand for Air Force Officer Training School—a three-month course for those who realize they want to become Air Force officers, but don't have enough school time left to enroll in AFROTC.

We prefer our officers to start their training as freshmen, so we can commission them directly upon graduation. But right now we're accepting applications for another fine way to become an Air Force officer—OTS. We can't guarantee that this program will still be open a year or so from now.

As an Air Force officer, you'll be a leader on the Aerospace Team, serving your country while you get a flying headstart on the technology of the future. The U.S. Air Force sponsors one of the world's most advanced research and development programs—and you can be part of it.

If you're within 210 days of graduation, get more information on OTS from the Professor of Air Science.

Germain, Beta Theta Pi, treasurer.

Alpha Phi is a member of Campus Alliance Party.

A nominating committee will convene 7 p.m. today at Phi Mu Sorority to nominate candidates for student government president and vice president and 18 senators for the student legislature.

Carter, former treasurer of the class of '65 in his freshman year, asked to have Winter Weekend officially the junior class weekend. He said he would continue the Orange Aid, freshman booklet started by the present junior class, but would have more complete information in it.

In order to raise enough money for a name band for the Stockingfoot dance, Carter plans to have a "Sadie Hawkins" or "Lil Abner" dance sponsored by the class.

Carter, who comes from Plainfield, N.J., is Teke social chairman. He has a 1.8 cumulative average and is enrolled in the College of Business Administration.

Rehm called for more social events to raise money for Winter Weekend. He advocated an executive council composed of the most qualified members of the class, regardless of Greek affiliation.

Rehm is past vice president and rushing chairman of Acacia fraternity and is presently social chairman of the house. He is senior InterFraternity Council representative of Acacia and was chosen by the IFC to represent the Syracuse group at the national IFC convention in Pittsburgh last December. He is also president of the SU Spanish Club.

Rehm, a resident of Oakdale, is enrolled in the College of Liberal Arts and has a 2.0 average.

Miss Fastiggi hails from Mt. Kisco. She was vice president of Day 6, is a member of the Goon Squad and is song chairman of her sorority.

She is a music education major and has a 1.9 cumulative average.

Germain is treasurer of Beta Theta Pi fraternity and the Empire Investment Co. A native of Syracuse, he is enrolled in the College of Business Administration and has a 1.8 cumulative average.

man house doesn't have to stoop to make political deals."

He said the house will recommend its members vote for those persons they individually feel are best qualified.

He added the house will not run any candidates independently, and will not reaffiliate with any political party this year.

Inferior

Dana closed, saying "We feel that many of the nominations this year went to candidates inferior to those who lost."

US President Robert Taylor answered the Phi Sig charges, saying "There is no doubt that the convention was run fairly." He pointed out that no house received more than one nominee, and that Phi Sig was running one candidate unopposed for a lower sophomore office when the house decided to leave the party.

Phi Sig, representing nearly 80 students, has one of the largest brotherhoods on campus. One Phi Sig ran for campus office last year, but was defeated. The previous year. Dana received the most votes in the campaign for sophomore class senator-at-large.

Harfenist called for monthly meetings of fall Pinebrook Conference delegates so enthusiasm can be maintained throughout the year. Pinebrook is the annual student government conference.

Harfenist is a member of Tau Delta Phi fraternity, which is affiliated with Campus Alliance Party. He lost the CAP presidential nomination Saturday to James Morris of Zeta Beta Tau.

Miss Wiltse Named

Miss Wiltse, a resident of LaFargeville, is majoring in international relations. She has a 2.0 cumulative average. She is a member of Lambda Sigma Sigma, junior women's honorary, and has been active in class government.

Miss Wiltse was campaign chairman of the party, and spent last semester in the Syracuse-in-Italy program. She is the president of Alpha Xi Delta sorority.

Running for senior offices on the US ticket are Douglas Long, president; Linda Menaker, vice president; Wendy Wristen, secretary; and Neil Eisner, treasurer.

Junior nominees are Edwin Shaw, president; Paul Derounian, vice president; Penny Shapiro, secretary; and Nancy Tobin, treasurer.

Long, who is majoring in international relations, is a resident of Rowayton, Conn. He has a 1.2 cumulative average, is a member of Traditions Commission and is special services director of student government. He was chairman of last year's Activities Exchange Conference.

Nu), and Alan Stolowitz (Alpha Epsilon Pi).

Two ballots were required to break the deadlock between the four vice presidential candidates. Vic Samuels Jr. (Lambda Chi Alpha), Daryl Atkins, (Iota Alpha Pi), Miss Schwartz (Alpha Epsilon Phi), and James Payne (Alpha Tau Omega), ran on the first ballot.

Two Dropped

Samuels and Payne were dropped after the first ballot leaving Miss Schwartz and Miss Atkins on the second ballot.

After Miss Schwartz received the nomination, Miss Atkins ran unopposed for secretary and was nominated by white ballot.

Originally Ellen Ruby (Alpha Epsilon Phi) had indicated she would seek the nomination for secretary. When her pledge sister won the vice presidential nomination, Miss Ruby decided not to run.

Deadlock

The three losing presidential candidates dropped to run for treasurer with Stephen Kish. Yawney won this nomination.

It took four ballots for Yawney to win. Stolowitz was dropped after the second. There was a tie between Kish and Yawney on the third which necessitated bringing each of the two candidates back for further questioning.

A resident of Rochester, Dickinson campaigned on a platform of more responsibility for the sophomore class. He is a pledge of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity and has a 2.4 average in the College of Engineering.

With a 2.6 average, Miss Schwartz is social chairman of her pledge class, Joint Student Legislature representative and member of Day Hall Standards Board. She lives in Charlotte, N. C.

Miss Atkins

Miss Atkins, residing in Wayne, N. J., is a member of Flint Hall Standards Board and is social chairman of her pledge class. She has a 1.1 average.

Corrallo, a (Phi Gamma Delta fraternity) pledge ran unopposed for the junior class president nomination. He was a member of freshman executive council, is a sophomore senator-at-large and CAP delegate. He lives in Medina.

He proposed a regular schedule of activities for the junior class including a junior class weekend such as Winter Weekend. Presently the junior class does not sponsor a weekend.

He also suggested a lecture series dealing with topics of practical value.

He was opposed by Roger Harrison (Tau Delta Phi) and Edith Van Sickle (Zeta Tau Alpha).

Late Nominations

Campus Alliance Party Monday night picked Jeanne Dana (Chi Omega), Rosalee Comer (Iota Alpha Pi), Robert Bonanno (Kappa Sigma), Elle Dickler (Gamma Phi Beta), Kenneth Krakower (Alpha Epsilon Pi) and Prescott Perkins (Independents on Campus) as candidates for senior class senators-at-large.

'CUSE JUICE

By RON ROBERTS

Not many people like the Yankees, and you can't blame them. Besides being a morally dubious occupation, it just doesn't pay.

And before the letters pour in from those Bomber fans who have acquired a small fortune wagering on the ability of their heroes, let me qualify my statement by explaining that I'm concerned only with the big time—Las Vegas.

The Vegas oddsmakers have once again released the "prices" for the wagering on the 1963 pennant. And the Yanks come off at 2-5. Where's the percentage?.

But realisticlly, the smart money has to go elsewhere. The Boston Red Sox are off at 500-1 along with the Kansas City A's and the Washington Senators. Now the Bosox are no world-beaters, but they are improved, and if the Yanks crumble they could be right in the thick of things in the not-too-strong American League.

The rest of the AL clubs are all in the same middle class. The Minnesota Twins are 15-1 along with the Detroit Tigers, the L. A. Angels 20-1, the Baltimore Orioles 20-1, the Chicago White Sox 25-1 and the Cleveland Indians 25-1.

None of these odds are outstanding, but they are all much better than putting up five to win seven. And if the Yanks falter, the next best price is 15-1. The revamped Orioles might even make it if the Yanks don't falter.

In the better balanced and classier National League, you have the usual pick-'em affair. The Vegas boys like the Dodgers at 2-1, with San Francisco next at 5-2. Then they spread out a little to the Cardinals and Redlegs at 6-1, the Pirates at 8-1, and the Braves at 10-1.

The odds on the improving Phillies and Cubs are 50-1 and 100-1, respectively. But it's still not worth the chance.

And if you want a real gamble, try liking the nonchalant Houston Colts or the dormant New York Mets. You can get 1,000-1 on either, and have as much hope as springtime in Syracuse.

You can go wrong wherever you turn in the senior circuit, but the Pirates are once again young and eager, and 8-1 isn't hard to take.

Judging by past performance charts and a knowledge of the minds of the handicappers, the Vegas board might list odds like these:

5-1 that Jim Piersall doesn't last through the first three innings of the opener.

5-1 that Warren Spahn wins eight games in August.

10-1 that the Yankees don't play .500 ball in the games that Mickey Mantle sits out.

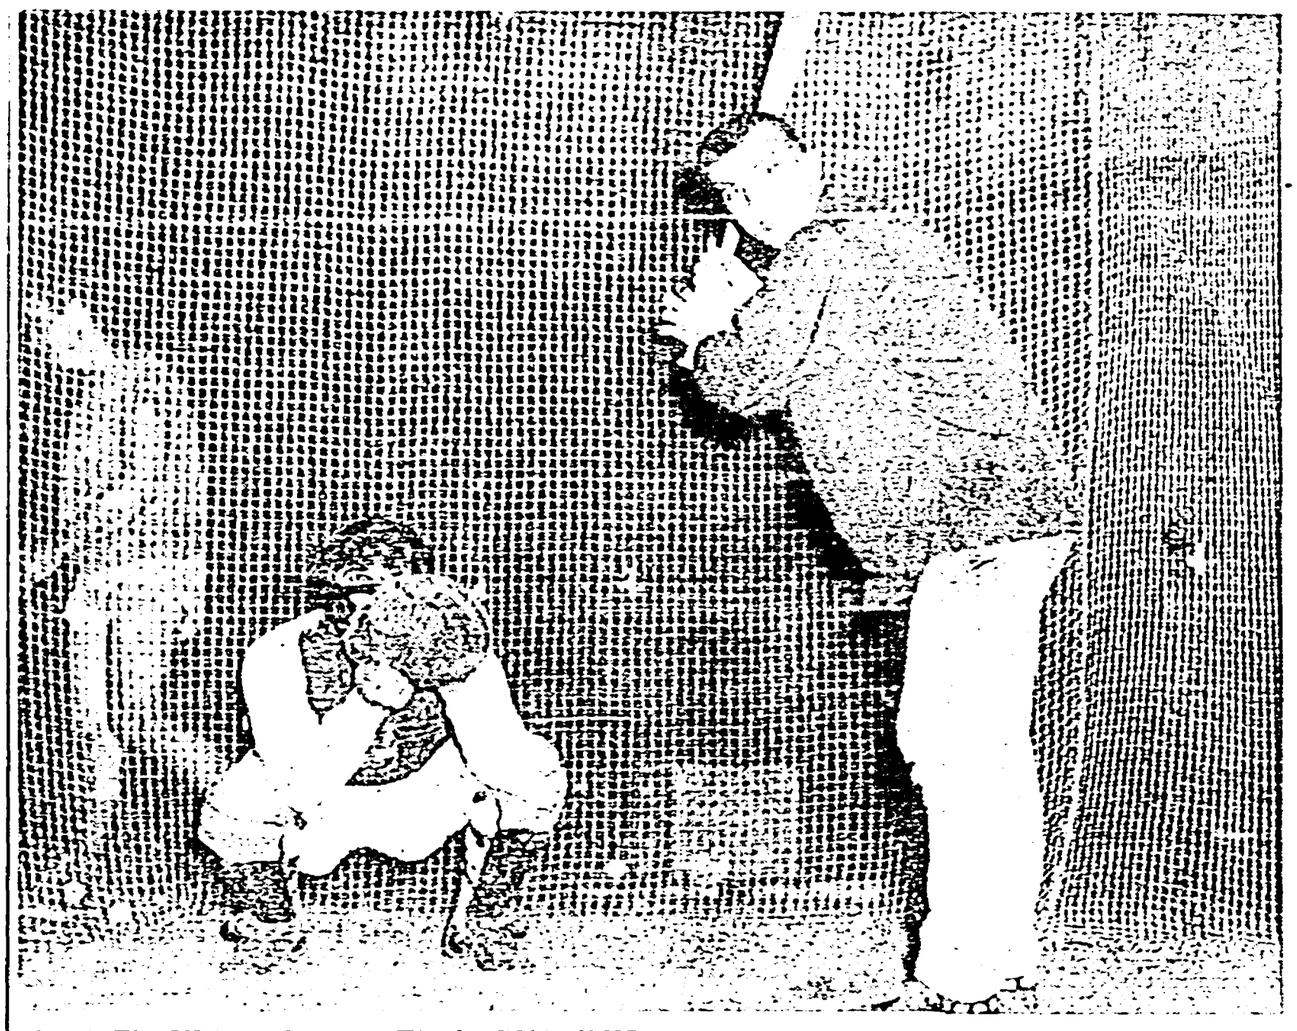
10-1 that Leo Durocher doesn't kick any umpires —more than once.

8-1 that the Mets don't win a game by the All-Star break.

7-1 that no reporter quotes Casey Stengel and understands him all season.

60-1 that Maury Wills isn't thrown out stealing until late in September.

50-1 that Bo Belinsky goes AWOL the first time Kansas City plays in L.A.



25-1 that some magazine comes out with an article entitled "Who is REALLY Better, Mantle or Mays?"

50-1 that some G.M. is quoted as saying: "He's my manager and we'll stand by him." Then the manager is fired within two weeks.

20-1 that Hector Lopez makes four errors out of his first seven chances.

Even money that White Sox' Pete Ward and Pirates' Bob Bailey walk off with Rookie-of-Year honors.

Schuman Wins Foil Title for Syracuse

Syracuse University's foil team of Harvey Schuman and Les Monostory tied for first place with Hobart in the North Atlantic Fencing Championships Saturday at Rochester.

Schuman also won the indivilual foil championship, a feat never before performed by a Syracusan in the foil class.

Other Orange teams didn't fare as well and the Piety finished fifth overall. The foilmen garnered 12 points while the sabre team had 7 and the epee team had 5.

Schuman, who went 7-1 in morning competition, was the only Orangeman eligible for an individual crown. The soph foilmen won four of five afternoon bouts in clinching the title.

Coach Alex Dako said that Syracuse will not send any fencers to the nationals.

Syracuse has had a long record of wins in the tourney winning titles 10 times in the 13-year history of the championships.

Drew College won the tourney with 32 points.

Youth Won't Help Mets; Basement Finish Definite

By JAN GILMORE

The New York Mets finished a famous 10th. This was no doubt due to the fact they were last in hitting and pitching and featured the worst fielding in the league. The "Mets" is a household word meaning futility.

Now the Mets, as does nearly every other last place club, have a youth movement. Casey Stengel now has young names to lose with instead of old ones.

In Stengel's ideal opening season lineup, ex-Dodger gold en glove man Tim Harkness is at first. Harkness has yet to prove he can hit better than average, although average is very good for a Met. He will be backed up by the aged Gil Hodges. You may ask, where is Marvelous Marv Throneberry? In Stengel's ideal plan, Marv is in the outfield where he promises to be funnier than ever.

Blistering

A number of candidates populate second. The leader is Larry Burright who has a magnificent glove but hit .205, bad even for a Met. Another chance is young Rod Kanehl, the rookie last year with the highly touted blistering bat (.248). Then there is Pumpsie Green, who couldn't even beat out Don Buddin, and two pretty good kids, Ron Hunt and Ted Schreiber. Any of these people (or all) may end up at short or third.

At short is Charlie Neal, who hit fairly well. Neal says shortstop is a challenge to him, and it looks it. Elio Chacon is also in the picture, but as Stengel says, "Chacon is deep in shortstop and shallow in RBI's.

Stengel will hand third base to Cliff Cook who, pudging from his fielding, will probably drop it. When Cook is healthy, he can hit very well.

Behind the plate for the Mets

squads a vast assortment of discards. Sam Taylor hits every other month. Chris Cannizzardo doesn't even do that. Norm Sherry, a smart place hitter with fair power could do very well in the Polo Grounds. Choo Choo Coleman can run so fast he is being moved to the outfield.

The outfield boasts Frank Thomas of the slow foot and the large bat. Thomas hit 34 homers and somehow found 94 Mets to drive in. Jim Hickman in center can cover ground and has some power. In addition to Coleman and Throneberry, there is Joe Christopher and a raft of minor leaguers and maybe Bob Cerv.

The big four on the pitching staff are Roger Craig (10-24), Al Jackson (8-20), Jay Hook (8-19) and Craig Anderson (3-17).

Combo

Craig is geing moved to the bull pen where he will join Ken MacKenzie making a good relief combo. Jackson has a nice curve and good control. Hook's hook hangs. though his fast ball is good. Anderson needs minor league experience in great quantity.

From the Indians comes Wynn Hawkins who must cure his wildness. To make the Mets pitching complete, the man who yielded Maris' 61st home run has been acquired, Tracy Stallard. Stallard had a sore arm last year, but has potential.

Johnny Kucks is back for another shot. Ray Davialt, Galen Cisco and Howard Reed could have future with the Mets, the way things are.

Damon Runyon once said "People love to laugh at Casey Stengel, and Casey loves to have people laugh at him." Now, not only is Stengel funny, but his team is too, because no matter how you look at them, they are triple-plated cellar-dwellers.

Photographer Gets Citation

Phillippe Halsman, portrait photographer with 94 Life magazine covers to his credit, will receive the Newhouse Citation at a convocation 4 p.m. Thursday in Gifford Auditorium, H. B. Crouse Hall.

The School of Journalism awards the citation every year to noted photographers and visual communicators.

Halsman was chosen this year because of his contributions to the field of portrait photography.

During the convocation, Halsman will lecture and show slides of portraits he has done.

Halsman arrived in the United States in 1940 and 23 months later has his first Life cover. By 1952, he had produced 50.

In 1958, Popular Photographer named him one of the world's 10 great photographers.

The Gallery of Fine Arts at Pittsburgh's Carnegie Institute exhibited 50 full-color prints of Russian portraits by Halsman. Halsman took the photographers on a two-month tour of Russia in 1960.

Last year, Time magazine published a portfolio of Halsman's portraits of queens and presidents' wives.

He will have a one-man show at the Smithsonian Institute in Washington later this year, and will exhibit at the International Exhibit of Photokina in Cologne, Germany, as one of the 30 greatest photographers of the century.

Dr. Galpin Dead; Hill Historian Since 1942

Dr. William Freeman Galpin, university historian since 1942 and professor emeritus of history died unexpectedly Tuesday afternoon in St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Syracuse. He was 72.

Dr. Galpin, a member of the Syracuse faculty since 1926, had completed two of three planned volumes on Hill history: "The Pioneer Days" and "The Growing Years." Two years ago he finished a history of St. Paul's.

He retired from his teaching post in 1956, after serving as history department chairman 1948-51.

Dr. Galpin received his bachelors and masters degrees from Northwestern University, was a history fellow at Yale University and at the University of Pennsylvania, where he received his doctorate in 1917.

He taught at New York University, Carnegie Institute of Technology, Hamline University, University of Michigan and the University of Oklahoma before coming to the Hill.

Dr. Galpin received the Onondaga Historical Society medal in 1948. In 1927 he received the Herbert Baxter Adams Prize of the American Historical Association for the best current work in European history—The Grain Supply of England During the Napoleonic Era.

He wrote more than a half

On the Side Of the Angels

How many angels are there in Syracuse? We don't mean the pink-faced, winged ones, but rather the thick-walleted show business kind.

"Angels" are needed to help finance an off-broadway production of Richard Harris' "The Fourth Pig". The Daily Orange doesn't usually ask its readers to back a show, but in this case we have good reason. This play is as intimately connected with Syracuse University as the basketball team, the debate society, the Fieldhouse and Dick Clark.

"The Fourth Pig" is a Syracuse University "production". Author Harris gaduated and taught at SU in the early 1950's. It's producer, Pat Latronica, graduated with the class of '61. Director Robert Scarpato is about to finish 13 years on the Hill as student and instructor. The play was premiered two seasons ago at the Drama Building.

When "The Fourth Pig" opens next fall it will be more than an off-beat comedy. It will be an expression of the theatrical talents developed at Syracuse University.

Producer Latronica is "completely overwhelmed" by the response to back the show. One coed is going without an Easter outfit. The brothers of at least one fraternity have chipped in, with the profits going back to the house. Students have banded together, in an unusual display of collegiate faith, to buy joint shares.

Those interested in supporting "The Fourth Pig" can contact Latronica, c/o Spiros, 59 Carmine St., New York City or Robert Scarpato at the Drama Department.

We urge the campus, students, faculty and administrators, to become angels and help give birth to the New York production of "The Fourth Pig." In a sense we are asking Syracuse to sponsor Syracusans.

Let's count angels.

U-Haul U.?

Maybe the university is on an economy kick. From what we chanced upon Tuesday morning it would seem so. As we passed Sims Hall, we spied a large truck backed up to one of the many entrances.

Men were in the process of loading and unloading from building to truck. So what, you say. This is normal. And indeed it would have been except for the lettering on the side of the truck.

There in large blue letters on the aluminum sides of the truck were printed the words; "Duke's Drive Yourself Trucks Inc."

'$100 Idea'

The Tau Theta Upsilon "$100 Idea" has been announced and we hope the campus response will be favorable. Judging from the early return slips, the interest seems good. We only hope that people on campus will take the time to seriously come up with an idea which can help the university in some practical way. Who knows, you might win $100 also.

"Hey, fellas! Lemme finish my midterm!"

GUEST SPOT

A Political Defense

By Townsend Southard

Reading the Daily Orange editorials which appeared March 18 and 19 I feel that I must refute the argument that entering campus politics is a waste of time. I have been in campus politics for four years working for the fraternities and independents and currently am an officer in a party. I hope that the heads of the three political parties will concur with the argument presented herein.

The editorial states "please turn your energies to a more worthwhile purpose." I ask what is more worthwhile than getting to know and work for your fellow students. The students and faculty comment that students government only represents twenty per cent of the student body and the administration states that they have to get a true indication of student opinion.

I ask where is a better place to get opinion than to obtain it from class government of which political parties nominate their candidates and put them before you.

If you are working for something that you feel is right or what your constituency deems needed, is it a waste of your time? The effort of student government this year proves that somehting can be accomplished if the student government leaders tend toward realistic ideas.

If class councils just spent there time picking which band will play at there weekends I would have to agree with the editorial but having been on exec councils and attending others I can honestly say that this is not the case. Maybe student government needs better public relations with all the campus media but this will have to be remedied in the future.

You cannot separate government and politics it is the American way of life and whether it is on a national level or on a small level of campus politics how can any one say that you are wasting your time for trying.

To the student, true, your first responsibility is in the academic realm but with this nation calling for leadership is it a waste of time to get it doesn't seem feasible to some practical experience while in college?

True there are some students in campus politics that are out for sheer publicity but isn't this the case in every realm of life. There are bad points in every system and politics is no exception.

There will be statements pro and con to time memorial about campus politics but I can honestly state that make a broad statement that politics on any level is Mickey Mouse or "Maybe a Wasting of You're Time."

I urge the student body to meet the candidates who are running to represent them and not just vote on rumors or past performance evaluate the candidates and make your choice so that THEIR EFFORTS TO DO SOMETHING FOR YOU WILL COUNT WHEN THE TOTALS ARE COUNTED ELECTION NIGHT.

LETTERS

Lucre

To the Editor:

In his Footprints talk the courageous Prof. Tussman called for the complete suppression of advertising in the service of private gain. If you need graphic support for his thesis, compare the ad under Sandy Myers' coverage, on page 4 of DO. "Publius (Hot Rock) Cato" indeed. And perhaps Socrates reaching for a filter-tip instead of the hemlock.

Our whole history is being cheapened and degraded, right at the heart of our already fumbling halls of learning. There is definitely nothing sacred in the eyes of private gain, except lucre. (And in this instance I'm overlooking the clearly established link between cigarette-smoking and cancer.) This problem may not be as striking as discrimination, but as Prof. Tussman intimates, it is just as undermining of the very foundations of moral and democratic values.

Why don't the students get after this? Oblige advertisers to stop subverting the efforts of educators—or else get off the pages of our campus newspaper. Or do we all dance to the tune of lucre—professors seeking prestigous grants, administrators seeking donations, newspapers seeking supporting advertising, and students forced to march in the same rut as their leaders? We've all gone mad, and we wonder why things don't make any sense, why all we can seem to do is to lash out or cry.

POLICY ON LETTERS

The Daily Orange invites, and even urges, the expression of opinion on the part of its readers. The editors make a sincere effort to publish as many letters as possible, but space and the illegible condition in which some letters are r e c e i v e d eliminate several from consideration.

THE CUTTING ROOM

Fine 'Arts'

by John E. Greenwald

One of the few places we will miss after graduation is the Lively Arts Coffeehouse, that bourgeoise trysting spot for lovers, theatergoers, gourmets and loquacious faculty, students and townfolk.

Quietly nestled between the 15th ward and downtown on East Genesee street the Arts has given us good conversation, exquisitely concocted ice cream sodas, while never begrudging us our right to be alone or stay as long as we liked.

At least one feminine figment of our imagination mellowed into a real live girl over mugs of steamed, spiced, honied milk. Possibly the best theatrical production ever offered by the university was staged at the arts when Jean-Paul Sartre's "No Exit" convinced the expresso drinking customers they were in Hell and not two doors down from the Regent Bar.

The Arts' tiny stage has seen folksingers, harpists, monologists, along with actors and actresses. When not used as a stage the almost coffin sized platform has seen couples meet, fall in love and out of love.

The Victorian ceiling light that hovers over the "regulars" table has listened to impassioned political debates, dirty jokes and revelations of the true faith as told by Bhuddhists, agnostics and Christian Scientists.

The long, low slug table in the "Japanese Room" has hosted high school students fresh from a basketball game, folksingers fresh from being kicked out of a laundromat and an evening of foreign students eager for a sip of home along with a sip of Turkish coffee.

Behind the hissing expresso machine stands proprietor Anchel Zucker. Three and a half years of improvising Greek cheese, Italian coffee, French pastries and American ice cream have produced a menu of over 150 perfections. But one taste, even one whiff, of Anchel's corned beef reveal his Jewish background.

Sitting at the "regulars'" table, playing Scrabble between waitressing on customers, is the attractive Mrs. Zucker, Gina. Her New England background is evident in the way she keeps the Arts as clean as the dim lighting will allow. Her Italian ancestry is obvious when she "escorts" the occasional unfriendly middle-class drunk who needs more than a cup of expresso domano to sober up.

Sitting next to her, devouring Anchel's "fountain" excuse for a meal, a schizophrenic special, is yours truly. Or maybe we're sitting in a back room admiring our date's long blonde hair while she's admiring our latest attempt to analyse Orson Welles or Alain Resnais.

For the Arts is something more than a garish "Jackson Pollick" wall, a frappe au lait, an assorted cheese plate, modern watercolors, a stuffed owl or baroque cash register. It is a place for conversation.

If you need rock 'n' roll bands, mattress parties, booze in the backroom or the latest Doris Day-Rock Hudson movie to keep you and your date from being bored to death with each other then forget the Arts. To enjoy yourself their you need a personality, a mind, a sense of self expression.

If you can't think, and talk, yourself out of a paper bag then forget the Arts. But if you can stand ideas, conversation and individual personalities you will thrive on the Arts and the way it seems to subsidize an alive and unique genre of customer.

We wish we could take the Lively Arts back to New York City with us. The Village could use a coffeehouse that prides itself on its menu and self respect and not one that relishes how many tourists it trapped Saturday night.

BOOKS

'The Underdogs'

REVIEWER DAN STONE is a political science major in the College of Liberal Arts. He is assistant news director and the news analyst for WAER, the campus radio station.

"The Underdogs" by Mariano Azuela. New American Library: New York (1963). 60c (paper) 119 pp.

"The Underdogs" was first published in 1915 and has been reprinted this year under the imprint of Signet Classics. Though this year Cuba is in the headlines, not Mexico where the novel is set, this story of a revolution gone awry still rings true.

It is a novel set in the Mexican Revolution of 1910, written by an author who was a part of the movement. For a person searching for a definitive history of the Revolution, this is not the right book. For a person looking for a deep character novel set against the Revolution, the book is not entirely satisfying.

The book is a story of people, but rather than probing beneath their surfaces, the reader catches brief glimpses of characters in a variety of situations. One gets the sensation of watching a movie in which the essential dramatic scenes have been preserved but from which the transitional scenes have been cut for the sake of brevity.

Yet the reader does not feel cheated by the resulting staccato effect.

For essentially Azuela has not attempted to create a character novel or an historical epic, but rather he has tried to present the essence of a revolution—the blindness of its leaders, the dogged faith of its followers, the greed of those who try to use it to further personal goals.

The characters and setting therefore become incidental vehicles for the moral. One gets the feeling that the lesson would be the same if the Mexico of 1911 was rather the Oriente Province of 1958, or if Demetrio Macias, the central character, and his lieutenants and camp followers were fighting in the streets of Budapest rather than the brush of the sierra.

Azuela has produced a rather short work which strikes the reader not so much as a history of a revolution but rather as an anguished cry from the foothills.

Kulski Says President Can't Tell All

By DANIEL RITEY
Junior Editor

"It would be foolish to expect the President to divulge all the information the press wants at his news conferences," said Dr. Wladyslaw Kulski Monday afternoon at Marshall Auditorium.

Speaking before the freshman citizenship sections, the Maxwell international relations professor stated, "It is sometimes in our best interests not to have all the news of international diplomacy given to the mass communications media."

Intermediate Areas

The intermediate areas of diplomatic dealings should remain secret. Kulski said. "The original, basic policies of a nation should be known to the public, as should the final results of its international dealings."

Kulski noted the desire of the mass media to inform their public and the difficulty of determining what should or should not be publicized as major pressures on the administration.

Referring to the "new" type of diplomacy as compared to the "old" diplomacy, Kulski noted "the aims are the same—promotion of external national goals by non-violent methods."

"Today, personalized diplomacy as represented by the summit meetings and the "informal" type of diplomat — the technical adviser — are prevelanf," Kulski said.

Still Important

The new-type diplomat is still an important person, as was the older, more independent ambassador, said Kulski. "Growing international problems have also brought about use of multi-lateral negotiations which are run in a more formal and less personal way than old diplomacy," he added.

"This type of "new" diplomacy is here to stay, whether it is useful or harmful. The negotiators must be free from biases, be devoted to their national interests and thoroughly knowledgeable of their problems," he said.

Brass Group To Entertain

The Brass Ensemble of the Syracuse Symphony will be featured at the fifth Spring Semester Student Convocation at 11 a.m. today in Marshall Auditorium of the State University College of Forestry.

About 500 students and faculty are expected to attend the concert demonstration sponsored by the General Education Committee of the College of Forestry.

Election Commission Names

Two freshmen have been named as elections undercommissioners to assist Elections Commissioner Arthur Perschetz in supervision of spring elections.

The two are Mary Lee Stryker and Robert Heins. Both were members of the committee which supervised the fall Class of '66 elections.

Miss Stryker is a resident of Syracuse and is a pledge of Sigma Kappa sorority. She is in the College of Liberal Arts, and a member of the staff of the Onondagan.

Heins, a pledge of Phi Delta Theta fraternity, is a resident of Bellport. He is in the School of Architecture and worked for WAER.

36 DAYS THAT CHANGED THE PERFORMANCE PICTURE IN AMERICA

In 36 days, starting with the Monte Carlo Rallye in January of this year, our products have posted a series of competition wins that have made performance history. Here's what has happened:

Three V-8 Falcon Sprints were entered in the Monte Carlo Rallye. This is not a race. It is a trial of a car's total capabilities. We did it (nervously) for the experience and with practically no sense of expectation, because we had not entered an event like this before. One Sprint ended the experiment in a snowbank. But the others finished 1-2 in their class with such authority that they moved the good, grey London Times to say: "The Falcons are part of a power and performance plan that will shake up motoring in every country in the world." That was Number One.

Number Two was a double win in the Pure Oil Performance Trials. Fords captured Class 1 and Class 2 (for high performance and large V-8's). Both of these trials were for over-all points rolled up in economy, acceleration and braking tests.

Then, at Riverside in California, in America's only long-distance stock car event that is run on a road course (as opposed to closed circuit, banked tracks such as the track at Daytona), Dan Gurney pushed a Ford to first place.

The latest news comes north from Daytona. There in the open test that tears cars apart—the Daytona 500—Ford durability conquered the field. Fords swept the first 5 places . . . something no one else had equaled in the history of the event. In a competition —which anyone can enter—designed to prove how well a car hangs together, 9 Fords finished out of 12 entered . . . a truly remarkable record considering that over 50% of all cars entered failed to finish.

Why do we keep such an interested eye on competitions such as these? Is speed important to us? Frankly, no. The speed capabilities of the leading American cars are now grouped so closely together that the differences have no real meaning. To us, who are building cars, success in this kind of competition means just one thing: the car is strong. This kind of performance capability means that the car is so well built that it can stand up to normal driving—the kind of day-in, day-out demands you put your own car through—for thousands of miles longer than less capable cars.

In tests like the Daytona 500 and Riverside, we find out in an afternoon what might take us 100,000 test-track miles to discover. We learn how to build superior strength into suspension systems, steering systems, drive train, body, tires. Anyone can build a fast car. What we're interested in is the concept of "total" performance.

We believe in this kind of total performance because the search for performance made the automobile the wonderfully efficient and pleasurable instrument it is today—and will make it better tomorrow.

America's liveliest, most care-free cars!

LIEUTENANT JERRY HOLLMAN, PH.D. IN ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING

"If I had it to do over again, would I take Army R.O.T.C.?

You bet I would, and I'll tell you why. Army officers live better than I expected. Take me. At the Army Signal Research Lab in Fort Monmouth, I get a chance to put my engineering background to good use. I keep on top of new developments. The experience is terrific, and it's going to pay off whether or not I stay in the Army. From Fort Monmouth I can go to a play in New York one weekend, and visit Washington the next. On my officer's salary I can afford it. Of course I have an active social life on post, too. Officers' club. Parties. Dances. You name it. My advice to you is this: if you have only two years to go for a commission, get it. Once on active duty, you'll be mighty glad you did."

asked for better public relations for the group. He has also called on the body to take a firm stand on discrimination, giving houses "the right to choose who we want."

Newly elected officers will assume their positions at the meeting.

Undersecretary Joseph White (Phi Kappa Psi) and undertreasurer Paul Deronnian (Phi Delta Theta) will assume the positions of secretary and treasurer, respectively along with the new officers.

The IFC constitution stipulates that an undersecretary and treasurer be appointed to the full position along with the new president and vice president.

Also on the agenda for tonight's meeting are suggested revisions for the deferred rushing system. Rule changes were submitted to the houses during the week and will be voted upon.

New Clover Club Schedules Summer Opening

Summer school Syracusans will be able to be present at the rebirth of a Hill tradtion — the opening of a new Clover Club.

The owners of the old Club, which was destroyed by fire last Oct. 11, have received permission from the city to rebuild at 601-605 Almond St., next door to the old site.

Morris Friedman, one of the three owners, told Daily Orange last week that construction plans are not completed, but the formerly popular oasis will be open this summer.

"By next fall we should be really going agani; it was nice doing business with the students and we had good relations except in a few cases," the bar owner said.

He remembers chewing the fat with students who congregated for TGIF activity. Campus election night always found office hopefuls gathered at the Club to await voting returns.

The new and sprucer Clover will contain expanded restaurant facilities and dancing space, Friedman said.

Other owners are Marvin Carlson and Edward A. Gingold

Senior Gets P-R Grant

A Syracuse University senior has been named recipient of a $?0 scholarship grant awarded by the Central New York chapter of the Public Relations Society of America.

Sandra M. Phillips, has been granted the award for doing the best term paper in a public relations course last semester in the School of Journalism, William Ehling, director of Syracuse University Office of Information Services announces.

Miss Phillips is majoring in public relations at SU and has been working part-time for James Mullaley, Syracuse public relations counselor.

Miss Phillips' award was one of three made by the PRSA chapter. Eleda Barghard, a junior at Utica College and W. Stephen Middaugh, a graduate student at Cornell University were the two other recipients.

Miss Phillips is a dean's list student and a member of Zeta Tau Alpha sorority.

All three awards will be presented formally on Wed. March 27, at a monthly meeting of the chapter in Syracuse.

A Coxswain: Little Man Among Giants

THREE COXSWAINS will be vying for first position in the Syracuse University varsity crew shell. They are from left: RICHARD HERSH, JOHN REED and JIM SEGALOFF.

Hersh, Reed, Sagaloff Seek Syracuse Shell Positions

By TOM MULLER

Dick Hersh, John Reed, and Jim Segaloff are competing for the position of coxswain in the varsity shell.

Dick, 20, is a junior from Akron, Ohio majoring in political science. He has the most experience of the group having been a coxswain in high school and college.

John, 20, a junior in business administration, hails from Babylon, Long Island. His experience includes competition as a varsity and junior varsity coxswain.

Jim, 19, was coxswain of the freshman shell last year. Although he has less experience than either Dick or John, he has the important characteristic of weighing the least of the three. Jim is a sophomore from New Haven, Conn.

Requirements

How does a coach choose the coxswain for the varsity shell? It depends on which coxswain can work best with the eight oarmen. New combinations are tried every day until the best is found.

The job of coxswain is far from simple. He must make important decisions. Although the pattern of a race is outlined with the coach before the race, the coxswain is the general in command on the water. He decides when to speed up, slow down, or have a "power ten." His decisions can win or lose a race.

He steers the boat while giving orders, counting the beat, and watching other crews and also must be able to steer a perfectly straight course.

Psychological Aid

The coxswain must be a psychologist in analyizing his own crew and other crews. In a race with two or three boats close to each other the coxswain can yell things to his own crew which will psychologically hurt other crews. For example, "They're tiring fast" or "We're getting more power per stroke."

He must be the "eyes and ears" of his crew. The oarmen must concentrate on rowing only. They depend on the coxswain to tell them where they are in relation to the other crews and in relation to distance in the race.

A Mother

The coxswain is a "mother" to his crew. Although he may be tense and nervous before a race, he must act calm and control his eight nervous "babies."

He is a middleman between the crew and the coach. He can give the coach personnal advise as to how he feels certain men are doing. Also, the coxswain can convey any feeling of the crew to the coach.

A coxswain must have the respect of his crew. Without this factor all of his other jobs are for naught. Unless the crew wants to work for its coxswain there is no purpose to a race.

Coxswain Dunking

An old tradition is for the coxswain to be "dunked" by his winning crew. All three hope to be dunked many times in the coming year.

One point was stressed by Dick, John, and Jim. Although it is a personal accomplishment to make the varsity shell, there is just as much satisfaction in being coxswain for a winning junior varsity team.

It takes just as much skill and cooperation from all men concerned.

Dick Hersh, John Reed, and Jim Segaloff. Three men, small in size, competing for a big and important job.

Hockey Club Elects Three

The Syracuse University Hockey Association will operate for another year even though its founder, goalie Dick Van Winkle will don cap and gown this year.

Still striving for university recognition, the group, which plays its Finger Lakes Hockey League games at the Coliseum, has elected officers for next year.

New officers are: Tom Borg, president; Ray Nozynski, secretary; and Bill McGruther, treasurer.

The new officers will attend a league meeting Sunday at Hobart at which schedules will be announced for next year and trophies will be awarded to this year's league winner, Brockport State.

The Syracuse entry finished in a second place tie with Rochster Institute of Technology.

Cardinals' Gigantic Guns May Fight Into First Place

By HOWIE SCHNEIDER

"In the summertime when the leaves are green, and the Redbirds sing, "watch out National League fans. For if the Redbirds can sing loud enough this summer, and Mr. Musial and Co. just could do that. St. Louis will find itself with their first pennant since 1946.

There seems to be conflicting opinions in the Cardinal training camp as to what the Redbird chances are. General Manager Branch Rickey feels the team won't finish higher than fifth. On the other hand, Manager Johnny Keane is optimistic his squad will finish in the first division. "It will be another wide-open race in our league and we must be conceded to be among the serious competitors," Keane has said.

For the first time in many a season Keane seems to have his starting lineup intact. On opening day, April 9, the Mets will face an opposing St. Louis lineup of Curt Flood, Dick Groat, Bill White, George Altman, Ken Boyer, Stan Musial, Gene Oliver, Julian Javier, and hurler Ernie Broglio.

Big Acquisition

The big news around Al Lang Field this spring has been the acquisition of Altman from the Cubs, and Groat from Pittsburgh. Altman, who wheels a mean bat, is expected to add substantially to the club's offensive attack.

If he comes through, he could team up with the middle of the Redbird batting order, White, Boyer, and Musial to form a new "fearsome foursome."

Altman, who will start in right field, while not a superb fielder, is a superb hitter. Last season, with Chicago he hit .318, belted 22 home runs, and knocked in 74 runs.

Veteran Outfield

Teaming up with Altman in the outfield are veterans Curt Flood and "the Man," Stan Musial. Last year Flood hit .296, with 12 homers, and 70 RBIs. The fact that he was injured part of the season seriously hurt the Cards chances for top honors.

Musial, who at 42 is the holder of seven National League records, will begin his 23rd season in the senior circuit. He would like nothing better than to wind up his career on a pennant winning club.

Last year Stan made a major comeback and the Cards will be counting on him more than ever this year. He finished the 1962 season with a .330 batting average, 19 round trippers and 82 RBI's.

Ex-MVP

Groat, who paced the Pirates to the 1960 World Championship (remember Yankee fans), and who was voted Most Valuable Player that year, will be the steadying influence in the Redbird infield. A "take charge guy," the veteran shortstop is expected to help second baseman Javier come into his own. Last year he batted .294, and made 193 hits.

All-star teamates Ken Boyer and Bill White round out the infield. Boyer, an excellent defensive third sacker, hit .291 with 24 homers, and 98 runs batted in last season. White turned in another fine performance at first. The ex-Giant batted .324, with 20 four-baggers, and 102 RBI's.

Big Gun

Skipper Keane looks for catcher Gene Oliver to be another one of his big guns. Oliver, who failed to perform up to expectations as a long ball hitter in the early months of 1962, came on with a rush in the latter months. He finished with 14 home runs, one of which almost shattered the San Francisco pennant hopes, and another which forced the Dodgers into the playoff with the Giants.

Most observers, in considering the Cardinal's pennant chances, disregard their offensive demolition squad, and spout a familiar phrase in baseball circles, "they don't have the pitching." This appears to be valid, especially after the club gave up ace Larry Jackson and reliefer Lindy McDaniel to get Altman's big bat.

Weak Pitching

Keane named his six probable starting pitchers: Ernie Broglio, Bob Gibson, Ray Sadecki, Ray Washburn, Curt Simmons, and newly acquired Ron Taylor. In the bullpen, Keane has little Bobby Shantz, who had an impressive 1.96 earned-run average last year, Diomedes Olivo, acquired from Pittsburgh, and Bob Duliba.

However, Keane realizes that Simmons, Shantz, and Olivo are reaching the end of their long careers, and the Card skipper is turning to some of his rookie hurlers for help. The most promising prospects are Harry Fanok, Bob Sadowski, and Alan Brice. Fanok is described by scouts as throwing the hardest ball of anybody on the squad except Gibson. Sadowski has improved steadily in his seasons in the minors, and Brice recently did a fine job in the winter league.

Another problem facing the St. Louis organization, and one which must be solved if the team is to go anywhere, is depth. The Redbirds need to strengthen their bench. They have very few infield replacements, and if Flood is injured again they will have trouble in the outfield. Their outfield subs are aging Minnie Minoso and Charley James. Infielders are Dal Maxvil, who saw some action last year, and rookie Gerry Buchek.

Stanger, receiving the backing of 17 of the 30 Hill fraternities, defeated Michael Steinberg, (Sigma Alpha Mu) and Jeffery Kaplowitz (Phi Sigma Delta).

The two officers took office immediately after the election.

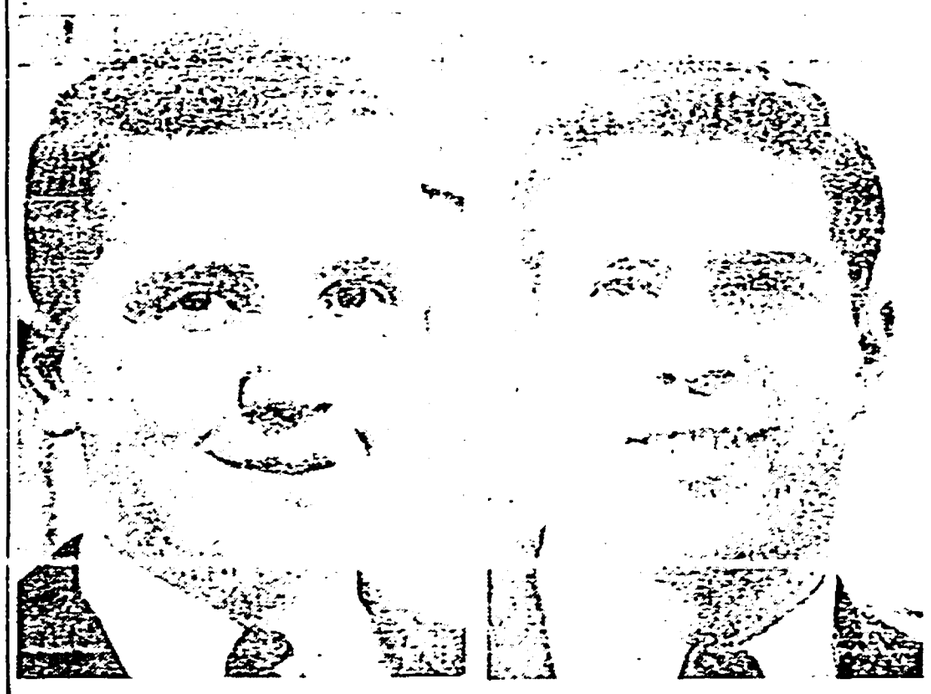
Bright Year

Stanger, in a post-election speech, forecast a bright year for the council in extendings its image in the university community. He reaffirmed his campaign promises of revised rushing rules, improved and consistent IFC public relations and a junior IFC composed of pledge class presidents.

Stanger is former president of Sigma Chi Psi, and has been active in the council for the past two years. He is a junior in business administration from Bridgeton, N.J.

He has been instrumental in Sigma Chi Psi's work to return the Sigma Chi national fraternity to the Hill.

Steinberg also has been active on the council for the past two years. He is past co-rushing chairman and figured in the installation of the new deferred rush system.



Prelaw Student

He is a junior prelaw student from Searsdale. In his campaign he called on the council to work one full year under the deferred rush system before condemning it.

Following the elections, Stanger announced committee chairman for the coming year will be selected by the IFC executive council after spring vacation. Greeks were urged to hand in applications to Stanger, Steinberg or the dean of men's office by April 11.

In the business meeting preceding the elections, revisions in the manual of procedure for the IFC judicial board were approved, and the incorporation of the Fraternity Buyers Cooperative was annuonced.

Stanger announced the next IFC meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, April 11 at Phi Epsilon Pi.

The Board of Publications will select the appointees shortly after spring vacation.

Applications should be in letter form and include cumulative average, experience on the ON or other publications, a proposed book plan and suggested staff organization.

Specific senior editors need not be listed.

Applicants may be present sophomores or juniors and must have 1.5 cumulative averages.

Staff organization will begin immediately after the two top executives are chosen by the board.

'Politics, Prestige Dominate Strike'

By SUSAN WANGERMAN

Politics and prestige are more important in the New York City paper strike than economics, commented Prof. Edmund Arnold of the School of Journalism in a panel discussion aired Tuesday night over WAER FM.

Arnold, chairman of the publishing and graphic arts departments, Dr. Robert Murphy, chairman of the newspaper department, and Gene Gilmore, news instructor, examined the causes, results, and possible solutions of the current newspaper strike on the half-hour "Maxwell Comments" program.

The personal ambition of Bertram Powers, head of the International Typographer's Union No. 6, made him call a strike which had not been properly negotiated beforehand, Arnold said.

Economic Factors

Economic reasons, such as a cut in the work week and a guarantee against automation displacement, figured in heavily, both Gilmore and Murphy noted. But according to Arnold, the supposed importance of these factors fails to explain the rank and file's recent rejection of a contract negotiated by New York City Mayor Robert F. Wagner.

The three men were divided on solutions to the present strike and to future printer-publisher friction.

Since he says public opinion is the only way to pressure the present strikers into settlement, and since the voice of that public has been cut off, Arnold offered little hope for immediate settlement.

Remedy

With an eye to the future, Arnold proposed a remedy against similar strikes in the news industry. He advocated printers buying their own linotype machines to set up independently, and thus prevent

Police Dogs to Patrol Hill in Future? Flaherty Mulls Idea After Meeting

By HOWIE GINSBURG
Junior Editor

The use of German Shepherd police dogs to protect Hill students is being investigated by Security and City police.

In a joint television appearance Tuesday, Security Police Director Robert Flaherty, City Chief Patrick Murphy and Rochester Chief William Lombard took part in a demonstration of the Rochester "K-9 Corps" city police division.

"Those dogs do wonderful things and I was very impressed," Flaherty said. He told the Daily Orange he will inquire into the use of police dogs on campus. Flaherty said he doesn't know if other universities make use of police dogs.

"They can be very dangerous," he added' "They have "Dr. Jekyll-Mr. Hyde" personalities."

Invitation

Lombard and Flaherty are "close friends," Flaherty said. "Last fall I asked him about his canines and he invited me up there. I went (Wednesday) and invited Chief Murphy to go along with me."

The K-9 force was added to the Rochester police department in 1961 and has met with overwhelming public approval, according to the police.

Many towns in the outlying areas of Rochester have made use of the dogs. Numerous cities and even foreign countries have asked the department for information on the canine force. The University of Rochester, however, has never used the dogs.

In 1961, according to Rochester reports, the K-9 Corps assisted in 922 searches. The corps has 8 dogs which are used daily.

Flaherty described his meeting at Rochester as "just the first step." He said he does not know if the Hill will purchase such dogs. "It takes almost 5 months to train a man and dog to work together," he said.

Harold Kelly, ex-chief of the Syracuse city police, has warned Flaherty that some departments have found disadvantages outweighing advantages in having police dogs.

Flaherty told the DO that no solutions to the campus molesting problem, other than the use of dogs, were discussed in his meeting Tuesday with Murphy and Lombard.

"The indecent exposure cases on campus have not been any more prevalent than at any other time, Flaherty said.

"I like to have the students forewarned so they can be prepared," he said. Publicity on such incidents is necessary to warn them, according to the security head.

Flaherty warns students not to walk in areas where recent muggings have taken place. "Students should stay clear of Adams, Harrison, Madison and Cedar streets, especially late at night and in early morning," he said.

"By being alert and observing suspicious persons, students will be better able to identify a suspect when these annoying incidents occur," Flaherty said.

Flaherty also warns students about "accepting rides with strangers." He said this can easily lead to trouble.

Keep Men On

The director told the DO added men will continue to patrol the university area. The regular force is comprised of 17 men, 14 of whom work between 8 p.m. and 8 a.m.

"With the strong right arm of the Syracuse City Police force whenever we need them, our protection to the students is more than adequate," Fla-

The Hellbox In Springtime

It first begins when a Daily Orange editor realizes he doesn't have to slide down the icy path to the Hellbox.

Before long the Editor-in-Chief notices the pile of snow that has long obscured his window has disappeared allowing for a full view of angry letter writers bounding toward the DO.

The Managing Editor is suddenly surprised when staffers walk into the newsroom, the sound of snow being stomped off shoes and boots offering no warning as there is no more snow.

That stuff falling in front of the Entertainment Editor's window is no longer white and fluffy, but cold and wet.

A coed remarks how cute the Sports Editor's knees are since he began wearing bermudas.

The Photography Editor reports spotting a girl walking down the steps of the Mount in her bare feet.

Staffers leave early Friday afternoon talking about Green Lake, Thornden Park and tennis.

News contacts are reported unavailable for comment as they are struggling to lower their convertible tops.

Coed reporters show up late for work explaining it took them longer than they thought to unpack their shorts.

The student assigned to make the 4:30 p.m. copy run arrives at 4:45 p.m.: he is playing "frisbee" in Walnut Park.

The time has arrived for an editorial about spring.

Before You Leave

And now that we have mentioned springtime at the Hellbox, we are reminded that this is our last issue until after the so-called spring vacation, which for many of you starts today.

Besides giving us a chance to catch our breaths and recover from midterms, this is always the vacation of anticipation. We think of spring already on its way and the pleasures of fun in the sun in Central New York. We put out of our minds thoughts of finals and the ever-nearing day of commencement.

But before we go too far, let us interject a word of caution and some others of advise.

Spring doesn't come too quickly or too prettily to Syracuse. It will mean rain and mud and a lot of miserable days when puddles come up to your kneecaps.

Spring also can mean an eight-inch snowstorm and freezing temperatures. So, boys and girls, don't take all those winter clothes home with you. You'll need them. And don't lug too many summer things back. You'll never get to wear them all—there are just not that many nice days in the spring here.

If you want heat and unbearable hot temperatures, wait until finals week. You'll get yours.

Tussman

To the Editor:

In view of some of the reaction to the recent visit and views of Dr. Joseph Tussman at the first Footprints lecture, I should like to make the following observations:

1. That there might be a twilight zone, worthy of consideration, between the absolute alternatives of 1) arbitrary governmental control and censorship and 2) the existing situation of private commercial control of the American society's institutions of communications (FCC notwithstanding).

2. That the mere suggestion that the present system's characteristic, familiar and well-documented propensities toward untruth, half-truth, irresponsibility and careless, commercial debasement of the public "Geist" be critically examined, is not advocating violent overthrow of the United States government, the First Amendment and the American way.

3. That such critical evaluation of these vital institutions of society (which are trusted with the maintenance of the public intelligence) need not be necessarily irrelevant just because it is not accompanied with a Lenin-type "What is to be done" plan of action, to meet negative responses of the defenders of the status quo.

4. That Dr. Tussman's advocacy of some kind of governmental agency control of public intelligence is not as radical as some would have us believe. To cite two examples among many:

a. Walter Lippmann in "Public Opinion" (1922) advocated the establishment of a national intelligence system to help inform the press and the public about complex issues and events in a new, complex world which neither the press nor the people could witness. Dr. Tussman only suggests some new, imaginative, open and critical thought on the means by which the government could administratively protect the public from misuse and distortion of facts concerning vital issues. . . .

b. There is also abundant historical data which would lead one to the conclusion that "government of communication" or even "news management" is more traditional in American government than the American press would lead us to believe.

Thomas Jefferson, whose statements on freedom of the press all pious (and nonpious) editors and publishers quote at the drop of a font of type, was rather hardnosed and dreadfully efficient at getting to the public what he thought was the right side of the major issues of the day.

He financed journalists and, as President, established the "National Intelligencer" as a semi-official mouthpiece for his administration. This became the only source of Washington information to the press for many years. Since the 1870's we have had a governmental agency, "The Congressional Record," recording Congressional proceedings.

The Record can be even more accurate yet few, if any newspapers use it. Thus, the newspapers are more inaccurate than the "National Intelligencer"—which, for all purposes, was an administrative arm of the executive office!

5. That the press today is not "free" in any sense of the term. It is controlled by the owners. The number of public relations agencies and persons employed by such agencies is constantly increasing. The number of daily newspapers is decreasing. The nature of control is the only issue at stake.

Dr. Tussman's astounding presumption is that government control need not be necessarily harmful and, given some imaginative and constructive thinking, planning and doing, it might even effectively and constructively stem the utter degregation of the public mind, or spirit—affected by the present controllers of the instruments of communication.

6. That the alternative, in Dr. Tussman's opinion, is the erosion of the intellectual and spiritual atmosphere which is necessary for the survival and function of a democratic society. That is, a democratic society is an unnatural and terribly difficult system to maintain; that in order to maintain it, there must be constant attention paid to the public intelligence — its creation (largely the function of education) and its mantenance (largely the function of the institutions of communications).

7. That rational, open discussion, not revolution, is what Dr. Tussman is advocating.

Ambassador

To the Editor:

In the beginning of the fall semester, Dean of Women Marjorie C. Smith said the reason the Ambassador Apartments were made into a women's and not a men's dorm was because "girls are subject to a different kind of attack."

Admittedly, this brilliant observation is highly perceptive and statistically reliable. Girls are different, and logically "are subject to a different kind of attack."

The reason Ambassador residents were left open to such attack, however, is as immoral as what that kind of attack entails.

University officials decided attacks on girls would be less frequent than incidents involving male students.

The rationale here was that it would be easier to protect the hardly belligerent co-eds than to restrain volatile males from making revenge forays against passing local hoodlums.

Besides, attacks on girls can be hushed quite effectively, whereas a male who has been roughed-up is apt to "call out the troops."

Resultant free-swinging melees don't make good publicity for growing universities that tell parents of prospective students they pride themselves on being a "home away from home."

Assume you can imagine such a thing as an honest university brochure. It's easy to assume what parents would think after reading under the heading of Student Activities: "At Syracuse your son can learn the manly art of self-defense at no extra charge and with practical experience, battling in the streets with local hoodlums, conveniently scattered throughout the surrounding area."

The solution? Let girls learn the manly art of self-defense. They keep their mouths shut and don't fight back. Compromise safety for public relations. Think image.

And they did.

They were wrong.

The university's anemic attempts to protect the Ambassador co-eds have proven woefully inefficient. Attacks are not numerous only because the residents have become voluntary social isolates and virtual prisoners.

A realistic solution must be found, a solution which does not divorce the student from campus activities.

Since it is unfortunately impossible for every Ambassador girl to suddenly produce a boyfriend-escort, here are some mundane, but effective suggestions:

1. Persuade some of the Walnut Place fraternities to volunteer for a shuttle service. Schedules and meeting places could be arranged easily. (Besides, name a greek who'd mind carting a carload of co-eds.)

2. The University could provide a simple, inexpensive bus shuttle service. For example, girls could meet buses at the main library at curfew time. (I think the university has enough integrity to feel the safety of its students is above petty financial considerations.)

3. Literally instruct the girls in the manly art of self-defense. (Some typically vague mention was made about some sort of instruction in the fall, but, as usual, nothing ever came of it. It went the way of all realism and good food.)

The university has handled the situation ineptly and may soon regret it.

A solution must be found before the warm weather breaks, for in Spring "a young hoodlum's fancy turns to . . . a different kind of atack."

'David and Lisa'

"David and Lisa", at the Keith's, based on a case history by Dr. Theodore Isaac Rubin, creates a story that touches more than the heart or the mind; it leads the total human to witness a rebirth.

David (Kier Dullea) and Lise (Janet Margolin) meet as patients in a home for disturbed adolescents. A brilliant boy, but afraid that any touch will kill him, David finds in Lisa an invitation to love.

But Lisa is not whole. There is the child, Lisa, who speaks only in rhymes ("A big fat cow, and how and how.") Then there is the young girl, Muriel, who can communicate only with pad and crayon.

The home's psychiatrist (Howard Da Silva) is anything but a stereotyped head shrinker. He shuns jargon preferring "human terms" to cold symbols. Through his quiet patience and his decision to permit Lisa's unschooled therapy to have its effect, David learns that it's what's inside that counts.

The brevity of the film (in itself a refreshing change) is set off by the concentration of cinematic images. The scenes succinctly illustrates the central theme — cure through human experience with very little superfluity.

Due to the unusual theme, director Frank Perry is able to use the camera itself in significant ways—giving suggestions of the theme rather than explanations.

Lisa's eyes the first time they see David; David's nightmares; the students' chanting at the backs of retreating townspeople; David's darkness as he sits before the dinner candles—all serve to unfold the bud, but never force a bloom.

Undoubtedly, the acting of Kier Dullea as David is one of the finest elements in the film. To portray an emotionally ill teenager, convincing the audience not only of complex illness, but also of humanity, is difficult enough.

To portray this boy with such subtlety and persuasion, to retain the character as changing yet remaining the same is a job for a talented actor. Dullea does the job.

David's clock dream reveals he cannot accept his human finitude. Consequently, until he is willing to live as the doctor does, by a broken clock, until he is willing to suffer life's touch, he remains a corpse fleeing from death.

Yet Lisa, as two people, cannot open David's door to light. When David accepts her as Lisa alone, and stops talking to her in rhymes, a new trust is born. Lisa writes "Murial", and "Lisa" underneath writes, "Me".

Just as Michalangelo's hands of God and Adam etched on the doctor's cigarette case, signify the creation, the film ends with a new creation as Lisa's hand closes around David's.

Strike . . .

hasty and "light" actions such as the present walkout.

According to Gilmore and Murphy, this solution was dramatic but impractical. Murphy suggested the printers, writers and publishers join together in cooperative ownership of newspapers based on their common interests.

In so doing, the two opposing forces would re-seat themselves on the same side of the bargaining table, where, Murphy stated, "they most obviously belong."

Harmful Events

The panelists agreed the events resulting from the strike are harmful to printers across the country whose pay is penalized, to the New York public, whose voice is silenced, and to the publishers, whose advertisers seek other media.

RE: Student Union Fund Raising Drive

Dear Ann,

I would like to express my appreciation to you personally, to your hard working and imaginative committee, to the student leaders, the faculty and administration players and the members of the freshman and varsity basketball teams who participated in "The Longest Game" last Friday night.

In addition I want to thank each of the many other individuals and organizations who supported this benefit basketball doubleheader which initiated our drive for a student union.

When Shultze and I ran for office last spring, one of our major promises was to support a limited student union program immediately and to launch a drive for a student union building. Thanks to your leadership, drive and planning, student government has been able to accomplish these goals.

I am confident, with student support and the enthusiastic leadership of yourself and your committee, a student union will soon become as much of a reality, and as important part of campus life, as is the Fieldhouse in which our drive, was tangibly launched.

On behalf of the student body I want to thank you for a job well done.

Sincerely,
Ted Bayer

On Campus with Max Shulman

(Author of "I Was a Teen-age Dwarf", "The Many Loves of Dobie Gillis", etc.)

AMONG MY KINFOLK

My favorite cousin, Mandolin Glebe, a sweet, unspoiled country boy, has just started college. Today I got a letter from him which I will reprint here because I know Mandolin's problems are so much like your own. Mandolin writes:

Dear Mandolin (he thinks my name is Mandolin too),

I see by the college paper that you are writing a column for Marlboro Cigarettes. I think Marlboros are jim-dandy cigarettes with real nice tobacco and a ginger-peachy filter, and I want to tell you why I don't smoke them.

It all started the very first day I arrived at college. I was walking across the campus, swinging my paper valise and singing traditional airs like Blue Tail Fly and Death and Transfiguration, when all of a sudden I ran into this here collegiate-looking fellow with a monogram on his breast pocket. He asked me was I a freshman. I said yes. He asked me did I want to be a BMOC and the envy of all the in crowd. I said yes. He said the only way to make these keen things happen was to join a fraternity. Fortunately he happened to have a pledge card with him, so he pricked my thumb and I signed. He didn't tell me the name of the fraternity or where it is located, but I suppose I'll find out when I go active.

She carried me to a chic French restaurant

Meanwhile this fellow comes around every week to collect the dues, which are $100, plus a $10 fine for missing the weekly meeting, plus a $5 assessment to buy a headstone for Spot, the late, beloved beagle who was the fraternity mascot.

I have never regretted joining the fraternity, because it is my dearest wish to be a BMOC and the envy of all the in crowd, but you can see that it is not cheap. It wouldn't be so bad if I slept at the frat house, but you must agree that I can't sleep at the house if I don't know where the house is.

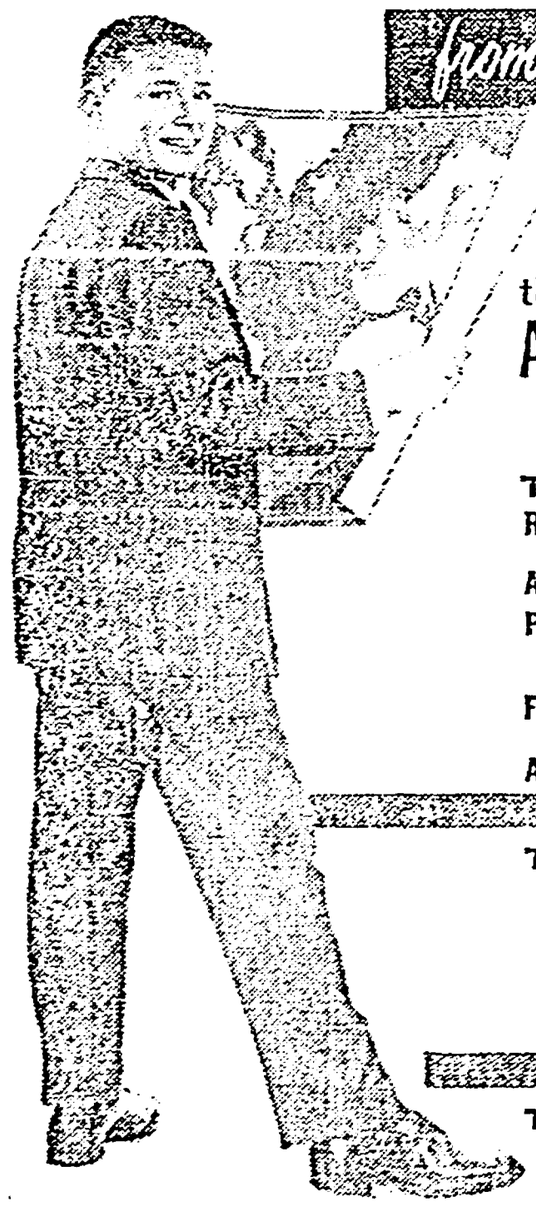
I have rented a room which is not only grotesquely expensive, but it is not at all the kind of room I was looking for. I wanted someplace reasonably priced, clean, comfortable, and within easy walking distance of classes, the shopping district, and San Francisco and New York. What I found was a bedroom in the home of a local costermonger which is dingy, expensive, and uncomfortable—and I don't even get to use the bed till 7 a.m. when my landlord goes out to mong his costers.

Well anyhow, I got settled and the next thing I did, naturally, was to look for a girl. And I found her. Harriet, her name is, a beautiful creature standing just under seven feet high and weighing 385 pounds. I first spied her leaning against the statue of the Founder, dozing lightly. I talked to her for several hours without effect. Only when I mentioned dinner did she stir. Her milky little eyes opened, she raised a brawny arm, seized my nape, and carried me to a chic French restaurant called Le Clipjoint where she consumed, according to my calculations, her own weight in chateaubriand.

After dinner she lapsed into a torpor from which I could not rouse her, no matter how I tried. I banged my glass with a fork, I pinched her great pendulous jowls, I rubbed the legs of my corduroy pants together. But nothing worked, and finally I slang her over my shoulder and carried her to the girls dorm, slipping several discs in the process.

Fortunately, medical care for students is provided free at the college infirmary. All I had to pay for were a few extras, like X-rays, anaesthesia, forceps, hemostats, scalpels, catgut, linen, towels, amortization, and nurses. They would not, however, let me keep the nurses.

So, dear cousin, it is lack of funds, not lack of enthusiasm, that is keeping me from Marlboro Cigarettes—dear, good Marlboros with their fine blend of choice tobaccos and their pure white Selectrate filter and their soft pack and their flip top box.



Well, I must close now. My pencil is wore out and I can't afford another. Keep 'em flying.

Yr. cousin Mandolin Glebe

Halsman Talk Slated Today

Portrait photographer Philippe Halsman will receive the Newhouse Citation at a 4 p.m. convocation today in Gifford Auditorium, H. B. Crouse Hall.

The award, given each year by the School of Journalism, cites Halsman for the "significant contribution he has made in the field of creative portraiture."

Halsman will deliver a lecture and display many of his portraits. Life magazine has used 94 of his photographs as cover subjects.

A Frenchman, Halsman fled France in 1940 during the Nazi invasion. In 1958 he was chosen in a Popular Photography magazine poll as one of the world's ten great photographers.

Police Dogs to Patrol Hill in Future?

herty said. No other meeting between Flaherty and Murphy is planned.

Flaherty blames some of the incidents on "the trouble area we border (the 15th ward)."

The DO received a copy of a letter sent to Chancellor William P. Tolley Tuesday from the parents of a sophomore living in the Ambassador Apartments, Madison and University.

"My wife and I have been appalled by the deplorable accounts recently published in the Daily Orange concerning instances of molestation, mugging and other acts of personal violence being committed on students, particularly girls, at your university," the letter begins.

"We were particularly upset by the apparent callousness and indifference of your Security Police Director Flaherty, who apparently places such assaults as grabbing, pinching and mugging in the category of college student hazing," the letters adds.

Denies Charge

Flaherty denied the charges, saying, "I am most concerned about this situation." Previously he told the DO "pinching" of coeds might seem just a disorderly act. "We are very concerned," he said, 'because we don't know this "pincher" won't become a violent deviant."

It is obvious, according to Flaherty, that the sex offenders at large in the Hill area are in need of psychiatric help.

Director of Women's Housing Jean Crawford declined comment on the Ambassador situation. 'From what we know the girls are happy there," she said. Dean Crawford announced coeds will be housed in the Ambassador next year also.

Two non-members are also running on US—Kenneth Harfenist, student government president nominee, whose house is a member of Campus Alliance Party, and Miss Booth, whose house is unaffiliated.

In the week which included nominations, US added two houses — Delta Upsilon fraternity and Delta Delta Delta sorority. One member of each house is running for class office under the party ticket.

Three other houses left the party. They are Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Phi Sigma Delta fraternities, and Kappa Delta sorority. SAE and KD each have one candidate running for class office.

Tolley Probes IQ Tests, Value Of Courses in Tacoma Speech

"The two most difficult things to move are a cemetery and a college curriculum," commented Chancellor William P. Tolley at the diamond anniversary of the University of Puget Sound at Tacoma, Wash. early this week.

Tolley posed some serious questions to the educators on the courses offered by universities today, the selections of university students, and the value of IQ tests.

"All too often higher education is a prisoner of its own procedures," Tolley said.

Looking to the future, Tolley commented, "the undergraduate educational experience must become increasingly unlike high school if it is to be a significant enterprise in its own right."

At the ceremony Tolley received an honorary doctor of public administration degree by the university. It was the 26th honorary degree for the SU administrator.

Tolley told the group there should be a place in higher education for the average student, "not the elite alone."

He questioned how much weight should be given Otis IQ tests and exams of the College Entrance Examination Board in selecting college students.

"Is testing now in such an advanced state of development," Tolley asked. "that we can disregard attention to achievement in high school, the critical appraisal of teachers, employers and friends, the evidence of written works, and comments of those who know the student's character; qualities of leadership, emotional stability, persistence, ambition, drive, responsibility, and creativity?"

"As far as I can find out, the Otis IQ test and the College Board Test essentially measure reasoning (generally deductive). vocal ability, number ability, memory for ideas, perceptual speed and ability to visualize spatially," he continued.

Things such as intellectual flexibility, penetration, originality, sensitivity to new problems "may exist in a high degree without relation to those measured by currently relied-upon tests," he concluded.

Tolley Adds 26th Degree

Chancellor William P. Tolley will add the 26th honorary degree to his academic trophy room today.

He will be given an honorary doctor of public administration degree by the University of Puget Sound, Tacoma, Wash.

Tolley will be the major speaker at the university's 75th anniversary convocation. The topic of his address is "Imagination and Experience."

A previously announced schedule at the Air University, Maxwell Air Force Base, Ala., has been adjusted. Tolley will arrive there March 19.

Syracuse Squads To Spend Week On Southern Tour

Syracuse University's baseball, lacrosse and tennis teams will forsake the vacation period for their annual Southern tour. The baseball and lacrosse teams have been practicing in Manley Field House the past month.

Coach Ted Kleinhans' crew will play six games, including a practice tilt. The Orange nine was 7-12 last year, after having won the Eastern title the year before. In 1961, Kleinhans' squad traveled to the NCAA Collegiate World Series and finished the season with an 18-5 record.

Kleinhans, who at 64 is the oldest active SU coach, is optimistic about his club's chances this year. He has two good hurlers in senior southpaw Bob Lelli and soph southpaw Ed Barnowski. Kleinhans feels Lelli will have his best season, since he will not be using his arm for football spring practice this year.

Veteran Power

The Hill baseballers also boast veteran power and fielding ability. Leading the powermen are senior captain Dick Taylor, who will hold the centerfield spot and Lelli. Kleinhans' troubles will be in the infield where only one veteran, third sacker Pat Antonelli remains.

The squad opens its season with a practice tilt at Delaware University March 25 and plays at American University in Washington, D. C. the following day. The next day finds the Orange playing another Washington squad, George Washington University.

The squad then moves to College Park, Md. for a game with the University of Maryland, March 28. The next two days find the Orangemen at Catholic University and the Naval Academy for games, rounding off a schedule of six games in six days.

Practice Matches

Roy Simmons' lacrosse 10 finds itself with two practice games before playing its season opener (and probably its toughest game of the season) against Johns Hopkins University, March 30, at Baltimore, Md. Practice meets for the squad will have Syracuse traveling to Lehigh and the University of Pennsylvania.

The only major loss to the lacrosse team was All-American midfieldman Dick Finley. Returning are goalie Pete Coe; attack Pete Pappas, midfielder Dick Wormuth; and defensemen Jack Salerno and Walt Reese.

Syracuse had a 7-2 record last year, losing only to co-national champion Army and Cornell.

The tennis squad, which had its best year (7-7) under Coach Gene Garrett last spring, will have five matches on the spring swing.

The squad will visit Georgetown University, George Washington, Maryland, American University and Maryland.

Rested Hill Wrestlers Seek National Title

Syracuse University's Eastern Wrestling champions seek the national limelight tonight as the NCAA Intercollegiate Wrestling Championships begin at Kent State (Ohio) University.

National wrestling authorities have ranked the Orange as one of four teams with a good chance of winning the national crown. Listed with the locals are Oklahoma, Oklahoma State and top-ranked Iowa State.

Syracuse won its first EIWA crown in 13 years this month taking 70 points in a field of 16 colleges. Second was Lehigh with 60 and Pitt with 59. The Eastern trio are expected to enter full teams while Penn State and Navy are expected to enter a few individuals.

The Orange, who won eight dual matches without a loss or a tie this year, have showed an amazing balance of strength. In the Easterns, the SU entry placed four men in the finals, taking a first, three seconds, two thirds and two fourths for the team trophy.

The nationals will have qualifying matches tonight with quarterfinal and semifinal rounds being held Friday night. The finals will be Saturday.

Coach Joe Scandura and his crew left this morning for the eight-hour automobile trek to the nationals. Practices and weighins will be held tomorrow morning.

Tickets for the event are reportedly "nearly sold out" with over 5,000 duckets already purchased.

Syracuses nine wrestlers are ready, according to Coach Scandura. "This is the most psyched up group I've ever had and we've got some great wrestlers. But we'll have to do better individually if we're to take the nationals."

Leading off for the Orange will be Terry Haise wrestling at 123 pounds. Terry finished the regular season with a 7-1 record. Haise, who was named to the NCAA first team grappled his way into the Eastern finals before forfeiting because of a twisted ankle. He has reportedly recovered from that injury.

In the 130-pound class. Sonny Greenhalgh copped the Coast Guard tourney crown and continued to a 7-1 ledger. Greenhalgh took a third in the Easterns.

At 137 is Jim Murrin, who clipped to a 7-1-1 record including a win over Lehigh's Pat Smart. Murrin gained a second in the Easterns losing a close decision, 2-1, to Mike Harman of Navy.

Dick Slutzky at 147 compiled a 5-2-1 record and was beaten by NCAA champ Mike Natvig of Army in the Easterns.

George Reidener suffered two losses at 157 while winning five. Reidener grabbed a fourth in the Easterns.

Captains Gary Sirota suffered a loss and a tie on the way to a 6-1-1 record. He won the Coast Guard Tourney and took a fourth in the Easterns.

Lee Roberts, the "stylist" of the Orange grabbed a 5-2 record and was eliminated in the Easterns.

Wrestling at 191 for Syracuse will be Gerry Everling who had a 7-0 record in dual meets before suffering his first Collegiate loss in the semi-finals of the Easterns. He came back to take an EIWA third place.

Closing the gap for the Orange will be undefeated heavyweight Jim Nance, unbeaten and untied in college competition. "Bo" won Syracuse's sole Eastern gold medal defeating defending Eastern champ, Ed Scharer of Rutgers, 5-0.

The sophomore-leaded Orange will be going through the same mill as they did in the Easterns — only there will be more blades. Added to the Smart's, Pendlton's, Natvig's, Harman's, Radar's, and Harrison's will be the top wrestlers in the Big Ten and the West.

Yankees Boast Solid Front In Hurling, Batting, Fielding

By JAN GILMORE

Last year the New York Yankees had problems and could have been beaten. Nobody beat them.

This year the Yankee problems are gone. They have more power and better defense than any team in the league and for the first time in many anums, a solid pitching staff.

In previous years the problem has been left field, now capably controlled by rookie-of-the-year Tom Tresh. Tresh switch hits at .280, 20 homer clip, and can field his position.

Reliable Mickey

Mantle in center is the toughest, most destructive hitter in the league. Defensively there are better center fielders around, but not many. The question is his note to healthy 31-year-old legs.

Maris in right came back down to earth last year, batting .256 with 33 hrs. He will probably improve, but don't bet he will hit more than 45. Maris makes it a top defensive outfield in all three spots.

Kubek and Richardson make up a keystone combination containing great skill and experience. Kubek is a solid, steady hitter with good power. About once every three years Richardson hits a streak that hauls his average over .300 like last year. He is hitting the ball harder now than he used to, and may continue last year's prowess.

Clete Boyer gets a lot of well deserved PR about his defensive capability's at third. Now Clete has discovered that baseball diamonds have a right side too, and consequently his hitting has improved.

Moose Skowron vacated first base in favor of a fourth starter over the winter, and now the bag is up for whoever can hold it. Candidates include Joe Pepitone who blasted IL pitching, a difficult thing to do, but couldn't hit as well in the majors.

John Blanchard will be tried, but he must remember how to hit better than .232. Golden glover Hector Lopez will get a shot. Hec can hit, and probably will end up with the job.

Catching Tops

The catching couldn't be better. Old man Elston Howard just keeps rolling, is still one of the top catchers in the league. Coach-player Yogi Berra will back him up with a diminishing bat and an altogether lost glove.

The bench is not as good as formerly, but it is more than adequate. Dale Long is a top pinch hitter, and will play first as often as he is able. Phil Linz is the top infield replacement in the AL. Jack Reed can cover ground in the outfield, and hit a surprising .302.

The pitching now boasts of four good men. Whitey Ford has a great curve and could hit an angstrom unit with it. Ralph Terry has extremely good control which offsets his tendacy towards yielding gopher balls. Billy Stafford is a bit better than average on everything. Stan Williams has a top fast ball, with no control. He should be worth 15-18 victorys with the increased strike zone.

Spitballers

The bull pen possesses two veteran spitballers, Skinny Brown and Bud Daley. Marshall Bridges got himself shot in the leg, but is one of the best when healthy.

Arroyo can no longer get anything on his screwball. Other fastballers in order of decreasing effectiveness: Tex Clevenger, Jim Coates and Roland Sheldon. If Bouton can get his beautiful curve over the plate, he will be tough.

It's going to take something to catch this club, and that something is one thing the American League does not have.

Cheerleading Tryouts Set

Cheerleading tryouts will begin April 2, with practice sessions from 7-9 p.m. April 2, 4 and 9 in the men's practice gym.

Semifinals will be held April 11. Finals will be judged April 18.

All sophomores and juniors are eligible to try out.

Voas, Grimaldi Lead University Gymnasts In National Tourney

By TOM MULLER

Syracuse University's Eastern gymnastics champs will travel to Pittsburgh during the approaching vacation to compete in the NCAA championships on March 29-30.

The Orange, led by seniors Phil "Corky" Voas and captain Ray Grimaldi, will send the complete squad for the first time in SU history.

Voas, who recently set a new school scoring standard, is rated as the one to beat in the tumbling. He won his third straight Eastern tumbling title earlier this month, and last year he placed fourth in the NCAA competition. His double back somersault amazed the judges in the recent Eastern championships, and earned him a score of 99.5. Corky also tied for top honors in the East in the floor exercise.

Double Winner

Grimaldi was the other double winner for coach Paul Romeo's Orangemen in the Eastern championships. Ray was victorious on the side horse and still rings. His side horse victory avenged his only dual meet loss of the season. Both of his winning totals were over 190.

Sophomore Sid Oglesby, who upset teammate and defending champ Ron Orlick on the long horse, is capable of surprising the experts and could very easily rank high in that event.

Orlick placed second on the long horse in the Easterns, and he is also a standout on the parallel bars and in the floor exercise. A break on the parallel bars cost him a lot in the championships, but he is capable of making a comeback.

Junior Carl Poplar placed second in the East on the parallel bars for the second year in a row, and his experience could prove very helpful. Other members of the all-winning squad are juniors Tom Steeves and John Bird and sophomore Jon Meury. Meury competes on the side horse, Bird on the side horse and in the tumbling, and Steeves on the long horse.

New Event

The trampoline has been added for this meet, and Voas will be among the top competitors in this event. Voas was the 1962 Eastern champ on the trampoline.

UCLA, Penn State, and the Big Ten schools appear to be Syracuse's biggest obstacles in the race for team supremacy. State's Tom Seward could prove to be one of the real standouts in the meet; he won the Eastern all-around title this year.

LAST DO TODAY

Ft. Lauderdale calls. And the Daily Orange heeds. It's time for spring recess and the recessive DO staff takes time out to recuperate from political nominations and prepare for April's elections, not to mention April's exams, midterms, and papers. This will be our last issue till the sun shines, or April 2, which ever comes first. In the meantime we'll pray the New York City papers will publish to keep our dear readers busy till we return.

Break-ins, Theft Mar Hill Recess

By HOWIE GINSBURG
Junior Editor

Intruders entered two Greek chapter houses during last week's spring vacation and a $1,000 theft spoiled the holiday of one Hill student, according to police reports.

A former SU student, now attending University College, will be tried for second degree burglary in City Court Wednesday. Thomas Hamilton, 20, pleaded innocent to the charge after he was found hiding in a closet at Alpha Gamma Delta sorority, 709 Comstock Ave., last Tuesday.

A housekeeper in the sorority called police after she heard noises on the second floor of the house.

Hamilton was involved in a "peeping tom" offense last year. However city police said they do not believe he is connected in any way with recent molestings on the Hill campus.

Information filed by police charges Hamilton with theft of five phonograph albums valued at $20. Second floor bedrooms in the AGD house were ransacked.

A second-floor bedroom window provided entrance to Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity, 111 College Pl., for another vacation prowler.

Two wallets, a wrist watch and a tape recorder have been reported missing by Teke brothers.

An accordian and amplifier valued at $1,150 were reported stolen by a Hill student on his return from vacation.

John Palmer, 19, of 211 Allis Court, married students' housing unit, reported the theft Sunday.

Police said the intruder apparently entered the prefab building through an unlocked window sometime last week.

Junior Dies In Accident Saturday

David H. Schorer, 22, a junior in the State College of Forestry, was struck and killed by a car Saturday near Marion, S.C.

Mr. Schorer, a brother of Kappa Phi Delta fraternity, had served as house president in 1961.

A resident of Valhalla, he was returning to school from Charleston, S.C., where he had visited the brother of Gail Reichenback, a junior in the College of Liberal Arts. Miss Reichenback, with Mr. Schorer at the time of the accident, was not injured.

Police said Mr. Schorer and Miss Reichenback were driving north on U.S. 301. Miss Reichenback told police Mr. Schorer had trouble with his car and pulled off the road.

He was working on the car when another car, driven by James Earl Lee of Conway, S.C., struck him and hurled his body about 50 feet.

Lee failed to stop after his car struck Mr. Schorer, police said, and was pursued by another car occupied by unidentified students driving from Florida to Massachusetts.

They forced Lee to the side of the road, police reported, and made him return to the scene of the accident.

Mr. Schorer, a graduate of Mount Hermon School, Mount Hermon, Mass., was majoring in pulp and paper technology at Syracuse.

College officials said he was working his way through school. He had dropped out of college to work for a year on the West Coast after his sophomore year.

23 Chapters Up Averages In Fall Term

Twenty-three Hill fraternities showed scholastic improvement last semester, Fraternity Administrator James P. McMurray announced Monday. Average increase was .159, he said.

Nineteen houses ranked above the all-men's average of 1.348, while 17 were above the all-fraternity average of 1.392.

Last year's all men's average was used since no average was computed for mid-year, McMurray said.

Tau Delta Phi fraternity again ranked first in the Greek grades, boasting a 1.696 average. Others in the top five were Acacia, 1.638, Phi Sigma Delta, 1.676, Delta Tau Delta, 1.613, and Pi Kappa Alpha, 1.555.

Delta Tau Delta showed the largest improvement, .329 over last year's average.

Any student who was a member of the fraternity for four weeks during the fall semester is included in the total fraternity average, McMurray explained.

In computing averages, incompletes and "no grades" were considered as marks with no quality points, if not completed by Feb. 4. These grades will be added in computing the house average for the total year.

Only one house had an average below 1.0.

Cit Conference To Hear Keating

A speech by Sen. Kenneth Keating, R-N.Y., will highlight the 18th annual Citizenship Education Conference Saturday.

Approximately 1,500 students from 250 New York State high schools will participate in the conference, which is co-sponsored by the Maxwell School and the Sears-Roebuck Foundation.

Sen. Keating will speak at 4 p.m. in Hendricks Chapel. His speech will not be open to the general campus, John Humphries, conference coordinator, said.

Delegates, selected by the individual schools, take scholastic aptitude and achievement tests before attending the conference. They are also evaluated on their school and community citizenship by their teachers and principals.

SEN. KENNETH KEATING

To these three scores are added ratings given students' three-minute speeches delivered the morning of the conference.

Each delegate will speak on "Conflicting Loyalties." He is rated by other students in his group.

In the afternoon, the delegates will participate in group discussions on "Freedoms and Security" and "Freedom of Expression."

The students with the top 16 scores are automatically admitted to the university and receive scholarships ranging from $200 yearly to full tuition.

Purpose of the conference is to promote interest in citizenship study and teaching and to identify and recognize outstanding high school juniors and seniors from throughout the state.

Alvin Davis and MaryLou Jones, both juniors in the College of Liberal Arts, are chairmen of this year's conference.

Committee heads include Richard Flannery, Edward Hull, Henry Rappaport and William Rossell, runners; Stephen Hallmark and Warren Stolusky, topics; Beverly Kaupa and Jan Leask, discussion leaders; and Joan Kemeny, scoring.

Jeanne Garrison is secretary for the conference, which is under the chairmanship of Dr. Roy A. Price, chairman of the Maxwell School's social studies department.

Election Forms Due Today; Campaign Opens Saturday

By ANDY PORTE
Junior Editor

Petitions of persons running for campus offices must be completed and returned to the student government office, 907 University Ave., by 5 p.m. today Elections Commissioner Arthur Perschetz announced Monday.

Perschetz added that any person who does not have a petition filled out by the deadline will definitely not be allowed to run.

He announced that voting machines for the elections on April 11 will be placed in H. B. Crouse, Maxwell, Slocum, Watson, Graham and Sadler Halls.

There will be five polling places for each class, with the exception of current seniors, who will vote by paper ballot in two of the locations.

Several campus party officials questioned the placing of the voting machines, asking why machines were delegated to Sadler Hall and not to Shaw Dormitory, and why no machine was put in Sims Dining Hall for the freshmen who eat there.

Perschetz said Sadler was chosen for machines because the dormitory is far enough from the campus polling places to justify the placing of machines. He also cited the Crouse-Irving cottage complex which eats in Sadler as an added factor. He added that Shaw is close enough to Slocum so that Shaw residents may vote there.

Referring to the Slocum polling place, Perschetz said a large sign will be placed in Sims so freshmen will know that a machine is in nearby Slocum.

In another action, Perschetz announced that the opening of campaigning has been changed from Sunday to noon Saturday. He said the change was made to give an extra day to Jewish students who will be unable to campaign over next week's Jewish holidays.

Campaigns will close at midnight Wednesday, April 10.

Perschetz also asked for volunteers to serve as poll watchers on election day. He pointed out that several polling places will have to be closed if enough poll watchers are not found. Signup blanks are available in the student government office.

2 Suspended For Cheating

Two students were given failing grades in Physics 4b and were suspended from school for cheating on quizzes, Alfred H. Cope, assistant dean of the College of Liberal Arts, has announced.

US Candidate Refuses to Run

Wendy Wriston, currently in Italy with the Syracuse in Italy program, had decined the United Students party nomination for secretary of the senior class.

Miss Wriston (Delta Delta Delta) in a letter to US officials, said that she had decided to apply for a position as a head resident for next year, and this position will not permit her to participate in class government in an elected position.

US President Robert Taylor (Alpha Chi Rho) said a candidate will be named as soon as the party officials can hold a meeting.

At the US convention the week previous to vacation, Miss Wriston, who was nominated in absentia, defeated Janet Semple (Alpha Xi Delta) and Marilyn Mager (Delta Phi Epsilon) for the nomination.

GOON SQUAD INTERVIEWS

JSL MEETING

Nominations will be in order for Joint Student Legislature speaker and speaker pro tempore Wednesday at the JSL meeting at 7:15 p.m. in Maxwell Auditorium, according to Speaker Ronald Mittleman.

Attendance of all senators is required. Elections will take place at the April 17 meeting.

Steering committee will meet at 4 p.m. Wednesday in the Joint Student Government office.

Humorist To Speak At Forestry Banquet

Among the Losses, One Big Winner

After 114 days of sorrow and depression, the city of New York became a jubilant island of happy people Sunday evening as the first editions of the strike-silenced newspapers roared off the presses.

The Times featured a review of the news that took place during the strike (to make it all official, apparently). The Tribune printed a special four page free edition summing things up in a light mannered way, highlighted by a back page ad, stating "You spent three months finding out what a good newspaper isn't. Now find out what a good newspaper is."

For one thing, it appears, a good newspaper is now 10 cents, as both the Times and Tribune upped their price.

Meanwhile, the News had a party and gave away refreshments and free newspapers to babbling illiterates around the city. They saturated the radios with advertisements of their return and the fact that the News still costs only 5 cents. (It still seems a little high.)

And the Journal-American blared out of its long silence while the Mirror exploded aerial bombs (their biggest news item in a long time). Soon there were newspapers in New York (and elsewhere) for every taste.

But the length and bitterness of the disputes will not soon be forgotten. The strike cost all the papers a lot of money and could lead to the death of at least two of them. In that respect nobody won in this battle of labor and management.

The newspapers certainly were the biggest losers in cold cash while the union members who struck will have to work quite some time before they realize the profits of their shutdown. And of course the reading public suffered without their favorite journals.

So the New York newspapers, like the phoenix, rise out of their own ashes. But alongside, an individual also rises and his height surpasses even the Times Building.

This is the only winner in the event, the mayor of New York. Mayor Wagner certainly profited by his leading role in settling the strike. Whatever his motives, he came out of it as a champion of the people and a man who showed he would work hard to settle a major crisis.

So among the debris of losses, there will be at least one figure who will be the better for it come election day and the race for the Senate begins.

'Bo' Nance

The Syracuse wrestling and gymnastics teams both had fourth place finishes in their respective national championships during the vacation period.

While these results reflected good team performances not many individuals stood out for the Orange squads. And only one man came back with a national championship. That was Jim "Bo" Nance, now national NCAA wrestling champion in the unlimited division.

Jim had been touted as a top fullback prospect for the Orange gridders last fall and he had his moments which could mean future stardom. But he was also talked about as the best wrestler to come here since Art Baker, a former national champ and star fullback.

But no matter how well Nance did on his way to an undefeated season there were doubters who said he could be beaten. Well, at Kent State, Bo showed them that there's no one better in this country at least.

The Daily Orange congratulates Bo Nance, our only champ.

ALTERNATIVES

"To Kill..."

By Ron Corwin

"Injustice is relatively easy to bear; what stings is justice."
H. L. Mencken in Prejudice, Third Series

"To Kill a Mockingbird" is an excellent motion picture. It takes another step for American movies which are beginning to show some signs of maturity, i.e., they have growing pains.

The movie telescopes the book by the same name and the events revolve around two summers in the life of an eight-year-old girl living in Maycomb County, Mississippi. The viewer (or reader) is allowed to share the clear perceptions of a woman as she recalls her naive life of some 25 years before.

We see Scout (Mary Bedham) as the heroine living in the South during the depression and in a larger sense living in the South today. Scout and Jem, her brother, are busy relishing the joys of summer vacation from school. They and their friend Dill are only impishly concerned with the drama within which their father, Atticus Finch (Gregory Peck) is so deeply involved.

Atticus is the defense lawyer for Tom Robinson (Brooks Peters), a Negro, accused of having raped and beaten a white woman.

Scout asks Atticus if a "compromise" means "to bend the law?"

"No," he answers, it's "an agreement reached by mutual concessions." Scout is right. Atticus is wrong.

Everyone knows that Tom Robinson is innocent of the charged crime. Atticus pulls the tired courtroom stunt of proving that Robinson couldn't hit her with his left hand (the right side of Miss Ewell's face was beaten) because his left arm had all the muscles severed by a cotton gin.

"Catch this glass, Tom." He catches it with his right hand. Couldn't have committed the crime. Mr. Ewell, the girl's father, is, of course, left handed and inferentially he is the guilty man. But Atticus Finch is an honest man. Atticus Finch is also naive.

In defense of his client, Atticus relies upon the jury's ability to judge right from wrong, justice from injustice, man's implicit concept of Truth. Atticus pleads for truth from the jury and from his client.

The truth is that Tom Robinson felt sorry for Miss Ewell. That was all the truth the jury needed. In Maycomb county, it's a sin for a Negro to feel sorry for a white woman. Much more of a sin than to kill a mockingbird which spends its life bringing song to people and make them happy.

So Tom Robinson dies, driven to self-destruction. While truth frees some, it enslaves others.

Through Atticus, the story asks, "Can we depend upon man's innate sense of what is right and what is wrong to produce Justice?" In this case, we could not. We see Southern justice, Number 1.

Robert Milligan, the director, relies on stereotypes to make his point. It is somewhat sad when a movie which could work to break down stereotypes deals in them. Most of the characters are cliches.

Tom Robinson is a magnificent man; a big, strong, handsome, black man, sweating of hard work and innocence. Miss Ewell, the girl Tom allegedly raped, is a babbling idiot.

Her father whom everyone hates is an ugly man both spiritually and physically. He is also a kind of moron. The viewer is led to believe that the injustice done to Tom Robinson is a product of "white trash." In reality this is simply not so.

Tom Robinson died and we all hate Mr. Ewell who is directly responsible for Tom's death. We hunger for revenge. It is not long in coming.

Mr. Ewell attacks Scout and Jem (whom we have grown to love) and this makes us hate Ewell even more. "Fate intervenes" we are saved by the timely appearance of Boo Radley, a spooky neighbor, who kills Mr. Ewell. We are all very happy—and relieved.

That's almost the story. There's just one more thing.

Atticus and the town sheriff decide that Boo did not kill Ewell (which, of course, is not true), but that Ewell had fallen on his own knife and killed himself.

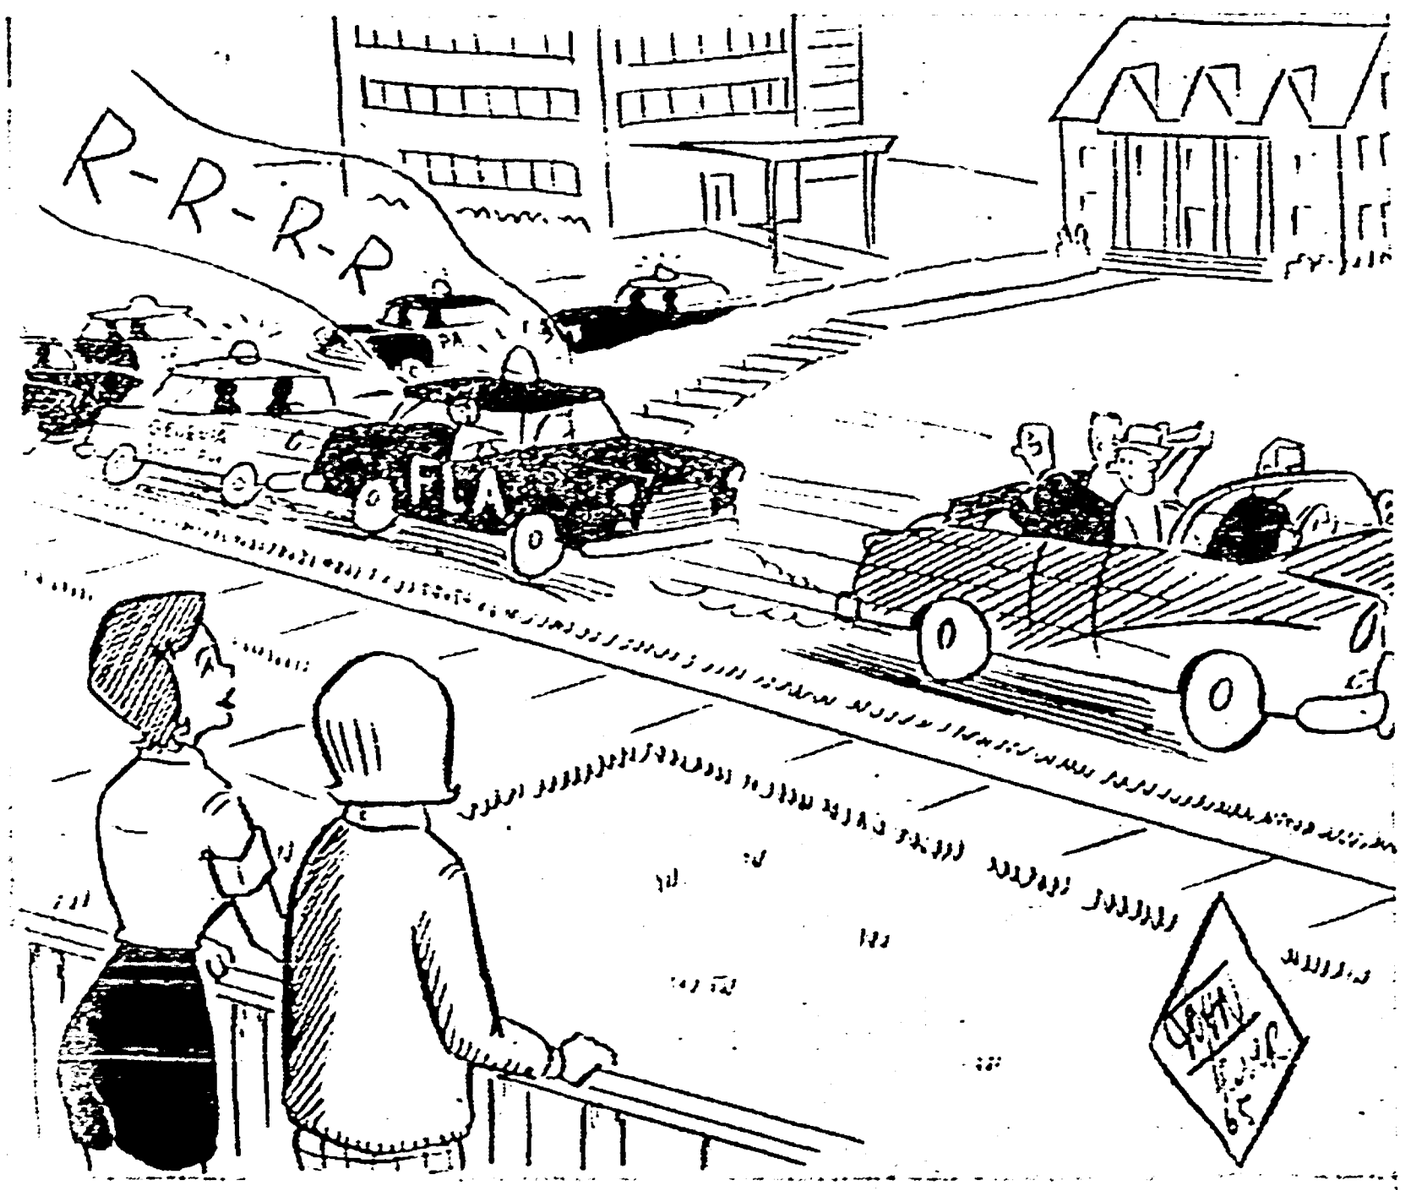
That doesn't bother us because we didn't like Ewell anyway and we leave the theater feeling that the story which we saw and heard was not a total tragedy and some kind of justice had been done.

We are right. Southern justice, Number 2. Boo Radley should be brought to trial. He has killed a man and even if it was in the defense of children (a noble act) the law says that he must be charged. But a "compromise" had been reached between Atticus and himself.

Justice had been meted out not by a jury, but by one or two men. If we allow for this we must also allow the jury to apply its own implicit norms and find an innocent man guilty. Both Atticus and the jury had taken justice into their own hands.

As difficult as it is, we must realize that the author and director have shown us Southern justice in action not once but twice. It is a point which too easily slips by our grasp for it is aided by our desire to see poetic justice done to Ewell. It is a point the movie makes. If justice is ever to be done it is a point we must not forget.

For we have no reason to believe that Maycomb County is restricted to the South.



POLICY ON LETTERS

The Daily Orange invites, and even urges, the expression of opinion on the part of its readers. The editors make a sincere effort to publish as many letters as possible, but space and the illegible condition in which some letters are received eliminate several from consideration.

Out of necessity, the editors reserve the right to edit letters for reasons of grammar, space and good taste.

Consequently, writers are urged to type their letters, preferably double-spaced, and to limit them to a maximum of 200 words.

Chekhov's Three Sisters Set

FACING THE FUTURE are the three sisters from Anton Chekhov's play of the same name, ELIZABETH LEOPOLD, Olga; LENORE CANTER, Masha; and NESSA HYAMS, Irena. The Civic Company's production opens Thursday for a three day run at University Regent Theater.

Anton Chekhov's classic of the modern theater, "Three Sisters," will run this Thursday, Friday and Saturday at the University Regent Theater.

This story of pre-revolution middle class Russia is the second production of the Civic Company, the community theater branch of the New Playhouse which is jointly sponsored by Syracuse University Drama and University College. Civic Co. producer is Robert Bergeron, program administrator of the Regent Theater.

"Three Sisters" director is SU Artist-in-Residence Ben Shaktman who directed John Gay's "Beggar's Opera" last February.

Portraying the three sisters who have to realize and accept the disillusioned web of circumstance and personal limitations that trap their lives, are Elizabeth Leopold, Lenore Cantor and Nessa Hyams.

Mrs. Leopold, a native of Stockholm, Sweden, has been an acting enthusiast since childhood. She attended a two-year drama school there, receiving the annual award as the best student. Her work in Stockholm included plays by Ibsen, Strindberg, Anouilh, Lorca and Clare Booth Luce.

Coming to the United States in 1952 with her husband, Dr. Bengt Leopold, director of the Empire State Paper Research Institute and research professor at the College of Forestry, Mrs. Leopold is continuing her studies at University College.

First presented in 1901, "Three Sisters" represents a radical break with the past traditions of theater. Ignoring the traditional characterizations of hero and villian, Chekhov developed a concept of drama founded on an awareness of human motivations which acknowledged the interdependence of personal and historical circumstances.

The purpose of the Civic Company is to create a community theater of high production standards and establish a training ground for those interested in theater art. The company can serve the interests of other local drama producing groups, and will, ultimately, it is hoped, become the basis of a resident company for the New Playhouse.

Others in the cast include Joe Lotito, Joe Dale, Al Ross, Dr. Jack Apter, Diana Hicks, Millicent Sovik, Len Allen, Andrew Godwin, Bob Scarpato and Art Kucinski.

Tickets cost $1.50 and $2 and are available at the Regent.

Violinist Burgin Solos For Chamber Group

Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will perform in two roles for this Saturday's concert of Syracuse Friends of Chamber Music at 8:30 p.m. at the Everson Museum.

As soloist, Burgin will perform the Bach Concerto in A Minor for Violin and Mozart's "Haffner Serenade." He will also conduct the chamber music group in compositions by Mozart, Wagner, Stravinsky and Copland.

Burgin was appointed Boston Symphony Orchestra concertmaster by Pierre Monteux at the age of 27 and held the post till the end of last season. Performing under such maestros as Serge Koussevitsky and Charles Munch, the violinist appeared as soloist 77 times.

Burgin, who made his debut at the age of 10 with the Warsaw Philharmonic in 1903, later studied with Joachim in Berlin and with Leopold Auer in St. Petersburg.

Soon afterward he became concertmaster of the Helsinki, Finland, Symphony and later the Oslo Symphony. In 1935 Koussevitzky appointed him assistant conductor of the Boston Symphony. Eight years later he became associate conductor.

The concert's program will include Wagner's "Siegfried Idyll," "Dumbarton Oaks Concerto" by Igor Stravinsky and "Music for The Theatre" by Aaron Copland.

Tickets cost $2.50, student tickets $1.50, and are available at Olmsted's.

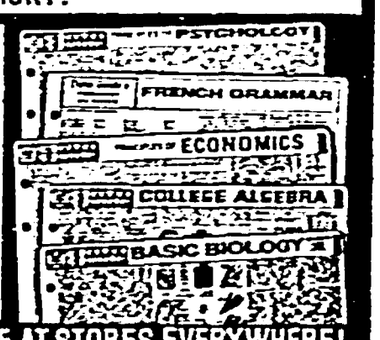
HOW'S YOUR MEMORY

"LITTLE" FACTS YOU FORGET MAKE BIG DIFFERENCES IN YOUR GRADES!

THE PROBLEM:
Few students can remember every name, date, formula, conjugation, theorem, definition, principle, demanded by a 4-year program. Educators know that through the "extinction process" you will forget many of the facts taught last week, last month, last term, last year. Thus a "Memory Gap" develops between the facts you are required to remember and the facts you do remember. The smaller you can make your "Memory Gap" the higher your grades will be.



THE SOLUTION:
Only DATA-GUIDE solid plastic loose-leaf summaries are specifically designed to close the "Memory Gap." DATA-GUIDES preserve, on solid plastic, the essential fact-core of each subject to give you a permanent, portable reference that can be used from term...to term ...to term—throughout your entire school career. Thus in spite of lost notes, surrendered texts, a difficult program, and an overburdened memory, with DATA-GUIDE solid-plastic charts, you will always have the facts you need.

Authored by leading educators, the subject matter on each DATA-GUIDE solid-plastic chart is imaginatively written and uniquely organized for rapid fact location and memory strengthening. Students throughout the U.S. are using all-plastic DATA-GUIDES to insure success in school. REMEMBER: Today's lessons are based on yesterday's facts! HOW IS YOUR MEMORY?

Osteen Views Anti-War Plans

By DANIEL RITEY
Junior Editor

More foolproof systems of preventing war are needed, but getting them now is more of a hope than a possibility, Prof. Arthur Osteen told freshman citizenship sections Monday afternoon in Marshall Auditorium.

"Currently, in our 'half-hearted' efforts to keep the peace, three systems the balance of power, collective security and world government — have been advanced, the political science professor said.

"Future problems will concern the many nations which will be nuclear powers and those that will develop so-called 'doomsday machines,'" he noted.

Theoretical solution to this problem is complete disarmament, but questions of getting and safeguarding this disarmament are stumbling blocks, he said.

"The balance of power and collective security systems rely on the existence of sovereign nations," Osteen explained. "The former is based on a number of states with equal power split into two camps, with a shifting of sides to prevent one bloc from becoming too powerful."

"The latter attempts to make it too hazardous for an aggressor to start a war and it prodides that other states will promptly come to the aid of an attacked nation."

A collective security system would need an international body to decide what is aggression and who is the aggressor, and would also assure the support of other states to the attacked nation, he said.

"The world government system would have the balance of military power in the hands of an international group thus preventing national aggression. Sovereign states would cease to exist as far as defense and military affairs would go on," Osteen said.

Accepting the premise that total disarmament is far in the future, Osteen offered several shorter range solutions for easing world tensions and promoting peace.

"Partial disarmament is possible in a few years," he said. "The United Nations can also be reformed to restrict the use of vetoes, with more representation on the Security Council for world blocs and more power to the major countries in that body."

A last chance—and maybe the most feasible—would be a big power agreement on certain issues and the avoidance of those issues that produce friction, he concluded.

SU Completes Design Film

A motion picture sequence illustrating Syracuse University's industrial design courses has been completed for showing at the June meeting of the International Council of Societies of Industrial Design.

SU is one of 12 institutions around the world which combined to produce the film. The Hill segment was directed by Prof. Arthur J. Pulos, head of the industrial design program, with the aid of Assistant Prof. Lawrence P. Feer.

Barck Leaving SU for Sacramento

By JOHN LINDEROTH
Associate Editor

"For the past three years, the department and the college have attempted to add Dr. Barck to our growing history staff. We have long been aware of Dr. Barck's excellent academic record, and it is with a great deal of pleasure that we welcome to our faculty an individual of such outstanding achievement."

Thus reads an announcement by Joseph McGowan, chairman of the history department at Sacramento State College, Sacramento, California, regarding the appointment of SU's Prof. Oscar Theodore Barck to his staff.

For Dr. Barck has accepted the position as professor of American history at Sacramento State College and will soon be leaving Syracuse, where he has been professor and advisor for 35 years.

History Chairman

His name has become synonymous with the history department. Coming to SU as an instructor in 1928, Dr. Barck was department chairman the last six years.

He has a long record of service on the SU Commencement Committee, the Academic Committee, the Liberal Arts Advisory Council, the Maxwell Executive Committee and many others.

Born in Brooklyn, Dr. Barck attended Erasmus High School, "really an academy, dating back to the eighteenth century," as he puts it. He received his bachelor's degree from Hamilton College in 1923 and his doctorate from Columbia in 1931.

As is true with most history professors, he has particular areas and periods of time which he particularly enjoys studying, as well as, of course, having an interest in history in general. Dr. Barck's forte is American colonial history, followed by the diplomatic history of the United States.

Courses

He instructs courses in these areas, and in addition takes his turn at lecturing the general American history courses at SU, history 10, 11 and 12.

He is the author of many books; among these are "A" New York City in the Revolution," "The United States — Survey of National Development," "Since 1900," "Colonial America," "The United States in its World Relations" and "America in the World." He currently is working on "Since 1945."

He has shown much interest in the development of the Syracuse University Library, as evidenced by his contribution to the library of many articles concerned with the colonial and revolutionary period in American history.

Moses DeWitt Collection

These articles include a valuable collection of letters, journals, surveying reports and maps of Moses DeWitt, surveyor and unofficial go-between for the Six Indian Nations and the United States government, and who also was in charge of laying out the New York-Pennsylvania line.

Few members of the faculty have been associated with SU for a longer period of time than has Dr. Barck.

"I have noted a great growth of SU over this time," Dr. Barck stated. "The campus, buildings, faculty and academic prestige have all enlarged and have come to make Syracuse University what it is today," he went on.

"Academic Achievement"

"In 1928, when I first came here," he said, "Syracuse was literally unknown outside this area. But," he continued, "today it is known all over the United States and other parts of the world by dint of its academic advancement."

Dr. Barck lists his extra-curricular diversions as writing, reading, sports, bridge and golf. The second of these can be borne out by noting the lengthy bibliography of any of the books he has written.

Dr. Barck has worked with and advised many history graduate students as chairman of the department.

One says of him, "We at Syracuse will indeed miss someone closely associated with all facets of life at SU, and we all wish him the best of luck and satisfaction in his new endeavors."

All CAP candidates, campaign managers, and political representatives should attend this meeting, designed to enable the candidates to know each other better, Kate Antony (Pi Phi), candidate for Joint Student Government vice president, said.

This is the first time in CAP's five-year history that a social function has been combined with the campaign meeting. "United Students party has had both social events and business at their meetings for some time," Miss Antony noted. We are hoping our first endeavor will help unify our slate."

Title to Nance; SU Takes 4th

Orange sophomore Jim Nance copped the National Intercollegiate Wrestling Association heavyweight crown and paced his team to a fourth place tie in the NCAA's last week at Kent State University.

Nance's victory boosted Syracuse's team total to 32 points, while Oklahoma University, with only one individual championship, won the team title with 48 points.

Nance won the crown in a close decision, edging Southern Illinois' Larry Kristoff, 2-1. The pair battled through a scoreless first period with Kristoff taking a 1-0 advantage on an escape in the second period. Nance, meanwhile had piled up over a minute riding time for a point, and won the match with an escape in the last 20 seconds of the final period.

The only other Orangemen to place among the top six were Gerry Everling at 191 and Dick Slutzky at 147. Slutzky finished fourth while Everling, who pulled a tendon in his knee, had to forfeit his third and fifth place matches and settled for a sixth place. Slutzky lost his third-place bout to Veryl Long of Iowa State, 4-3, on a referee's decision.

Coach Joe Scandura was pleased with Nance's individual victory, but felt that the team could have done better with some breaks.

He felt that the pairings and injuries to Everling and Terry Haise at 123 hurt the team's chances. "We probably could have beaten any of these teams in dual meet competition," he said.

Loking forward to next year, the Orange hopes looks bright with Nance, Everling, Haise, Slutzky, Roberts and Murrin returning.

Basketball Crowds Big At Manley

Fred Lewis' new look brought added revenue to the Syracuse University coffers this year.

Attendance was the best since the 1956-1957 season when the Orange's NCAA-bound squad lured 23,916 spectators into the War Memorial when the school played twin-bills with LeMoyne.

The turnout at the 13 home games was almost five times larger than last year's 5,427 turnout with 23,539 filing through the Manley turnstiles.

Two contests drew over 3,000 spectators while three more were witnessed by more than 2,000. The last 2,000-attendance at a SU basketball game was in December, 1957.

The average attendance this year was 1,810 while average students attendance was 1,076.

Teams Tie, Win, Lose; WhatElse?

Baseball, lacrosse and tennis popped their heads into competition the past week and were given a rigorous christening.

With five matches in the same total of days, Gene Garrette's tennis team got off on the winning foot with a 5½-3½ win over Georgetown, before being shut out by George Washington 9-0.

The following day, Maryland baseball crew romped over Syracuse 12-1, after Ted Kleinhan's gang had won their first three.

Johns Hopkins, after 32 years of idleness against Syracuse teams, came from behind to clip the Orange stickmen, 10-7, Saturday.

The baseball teams ended their early season jaunt with a 4-2 record, tennis managed a 2-3 log and the Roy Simmons' 32nd lacrosse contingent finished with a 1-1-1 mark.

Pitchers are ahead of the hitters, baseball scribes would write of Syracuse's first three games. The Orange nine edged Delaware 2-1, American University 4-1 and George Washington 6-2.

Maryland stormed past the Orange 12-1 on Thursday. Friday they came back with a 7-2 win over Catholic University.

Then on Saturday, Navy scored their fifth win in five years over the Orange, 1-0. The sole run was scored on a foul sacrifice fly.

While the baseball lumber took time building up momentum, the sticks of the lacrosse team burst onto the scene with a rash of goals as they smothered Lehigh, 16-1.

Penn put the brakes on the lacrossemen with a 7-7 tie.

Coach of the Year

HILL GYMNASTICS Coach PAUL ROMEO was yesterday named Eastern Gymnastics League Coach-of-the-Year by the National Association of Gymnastics Coaches. Romeo's tumblers won the Eastern Collegiate Gymnastics League title this year, compiling a perfect 7-0 record.

Orange Gymnasts Take NCAA 4th

By TOM MULLER

There's a new name emerging in Syracuse gymnastic circles. Sophomore Sid Oglesby surprised the experts at the 23rd annual NCAA gym meet last Friday and Saturday, and nearly walked away with one of the eight titles, as the Syracuse University gym squad rolled to a fourth place finish in the meet.

Sid joined with teammates Phil "Corky" Voas and captain Ray Grimaldi to give Syracuse 32 points and a fourth place finish. The meet was won by Michigan with 113 points. Second-place Southern Illinois had a point total of 73, and Iowa just edged out Syracuse for the third spot with 33½ points.

Sid appeared to be the winner on the long horse, but the last man to go, all-around winner Gil Larose of Michigan, nipped the Orange sophomore stand-out by .0125. Sid had previously won the Eastern title in that event.

Voas, Syracuse's leading scorer all year, totaled 16 points in the meet. Corky placed third in tumbling, tied for fourth on the long horse, and placed ninth in the floor exercise.

Slips on Rings

Grimaldi slipped on the still rings and was, therefore, eliminated from that event, but he came through with a fourth place finish on the side horse to round out the SU scoring.

Syracuse outclassed the other Eastern gym combines in gaining the No. 4 spot. Over 300 competitors, representing 40 schools, were in attendance at the meet.

Senior Ron Orlick was barely eliminated from the long horse jumping as he failed to hit his jumps in best form. Ron had placed second to Oglesby in the Eastern championships.

A break on the parallel bars hindered junior Carl Poplar's chances of placing high in the field in that event. Carl was second in the East in that event.

Juniors John Bird and Tom Steeves and sophomore Jon Meury all bowed out in the preliminaries despite impressive routines, but they gave SU fans a glimmer of hope for future gym squads. Their performances and the excellent showings by Poplar and Oglesby hint that SU may be able to overcome the losses of Orlick, Grimaldi and Voas.

Voas, who holds the SU scoring record, will be ineligible for competition next year in all but the NCAA championships.

"The boys capped a great year with a fine showing in the championships," beamed Coach Paul Romeo. He had every right to be proud of his squad; a few "ifs" were all that kept them from nipping Iowa for third place, and Oglesby couldn't have come much closer to an NCAA title.

Cincinnati Looms Strong As NL Pennant Contender

By JAN GILMORE

The city of Cincinnati contains the National League's oldest team and possibly its best.

The Reds have power, with Frank Robinson, who is practically supernatural. He can hit, run, field, possibly the best in the league.

By Robinson's side in center is Vada Pinson. Pinson can hit almost as well as Frank when he doesn't try to pull everything, and can move like cereal shot from guns.

The loss of first baseman Gordy Coleman's bat in the latter part of last year knocked the Reds out of the race. Coleman has excellent speed and power, though his play at first is a bit odd.

Pennant Hopes

Returning Gene Freese is Manager Fred Hutchinson's prime reason for pennant hopes. Freese adds even more power to the lineup, and is the spirit behind the Reds. There is some question as to whether Freese can still play third, but Reds fans remember that he played the stick like he had a broken ankle before he broke it.

Leading the best crop of rookies in the N.L. is a third baseman-outfielder named Tommy Harper who hit .333 in Triple A. Harper could force Freese into the outfield or end up there himself. Either way there is a defensive loss.

The double play combination is average. Don Blasingame at second came back with a .281 after two terrible years, and is among the best at getting on base and running them once he is there. The only thing he can do in the field is catch a fly pretty well.

Chico Cardenas plays a good, if erratic, game of shortstop and hit .296 with fair power.

Johnny Edwards and Hank Foiles make up a catching staff that is excellent on defense but average with the bat. Jesse Gonder was MVP on the Pacific Coast and will back this combo up. Defensively Gonder is pretty good except he has trouble with high, low, inside and outside pitches and foul balls.

The Reds have the best bench in the league. Eddie Kasko plays all infield positions well and can hit. Harry Bright is also versatile and has power.

Wally Post and Jerry Lynch combined for 29 HR's and 100 RBI's in left field last year.

Neither is tops defensively. Lynch makes Hec Lopez look like a gazelle. There is Marty Keough who had a surprisingly good season and may win a berth.

Pitching Tops

The pitching is tops. Joey Jay, Bob Purkey and lefty Jim O'Toole have won 118 games in two years, the best 1-2-3 punch there is. Jay and O'Toole are overpowering and Purkey is crafty.

Three veteran and very effective middle men give depth. Johnny Klippstein, Dick Sisler and Joey Nuxhall.

Then there are two of the best short men around. Lefty Bill Henry still has his fast one for two, and author Jim Brosnan has tough breaking stuff. These eight make a rough nucleus, but there is more.

For a fourth starter, the Reds can try Jim Maloney who was good toward the end of last year and who will benefit by the increased strike zone. There is last year's semi-phenom, Ken Hunt. There is the pious Alan Worthington and carousing Jim Owens, two veteran winter acquirements. And there is Sammy Ellis and John Flavin, two of the top pitchers in the PCL.

The Reds have better hitting than the Dodgers, better pitching than the Giants. If Harper and a kid pitcher come through, Cincinnati will fly away with it.

Crossroads Head Talks In Hendricks

Leads Organization Which Inspired Peace Corps

The Rev. James H. Robinson, director of Operation Crossroads Africa, Inc., a group described by President Kennedy as "progenitor of the Peace Corps," will speak at 4 p.m. today in the Colonial Room of Hendricks Chapel.

Robinson, who has devoted much of his life to improving race relations, is pastor of the Church of the Master in Harlem, New York City, in addition to serving as Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Crossroads organization.

Robinson has preached in Hendricks Chapel and spoke once at the brotherhood service on Colgate Weekend. This will mark his fourth visit to Syracuse.

Student Project

Operation Crossroads, working in 20 African countries, is a student study-work camp project. It provides chances for meetings between American participants and African political leaders, educators, labor leaders, and village chiefs.

It offers a grant to each applicant who passes the thorough screening process to defray the expenses of the trip to Africa.

Crossroads Africa affords "an opportunity to demonstrate faith in the Africans' struggle for freedom. . .and to relate to them by building bridges of friendship between our country and Africa," according to Leo Sam, Crossroads' recruitment secretary.

Each participant must make an intensive study of Africa on his own initiative, and submit a paper on an African study in order to be included in the seminar.

Syracuse is one of the 32 universities and institutions which cooperate with the Crossroads program.

New Local ACLU to Study University Dorm Control

By CHARLES STEINBERG

A legal study of the powers of universities in operating dormitories has been called for by the newly-established Central New York Chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union in reference to last November's Day Hall room search.

The ACLU, a national nonpartisan organization devoted to "upholding the Bill of Rights" formally launched its Central New York chapter Thursday, March 21 at White Hall after the prolonged efforts of several Hill professors.

Electrical engineering Prof. Norman Balabanian was elected chairman of the new local chapter.

Balabanian, referring to the room search at the initial ACLU meeting, said the legal powers of universities in conducting dormitories are only loosely defined and subject to much examination.

National Study

The national ACLU organization is studying the problem, he said, calling for the local chapter to contribute to this study.

The chapter also has established five study committees including one on academic freedom. The other four are censorship, church - state relations, civil rights and police.

Maxwell School Prof. Julian Friedman was elected the chapter's treasurer and Prof. Robert Anderson, College of Law, was elected to the Board of Directors.

Board Members

Other members of the Board are State Sen. George Metcalf from Auburn; two Cornell University professors, Drs. Milton Konvitz and Harry Freeman; Syracuse physician Dr. Hans Hartenstein; and Jesse Epps of the International Electrical Union, an unsuccessful Democratic candidate for councilman last election.

Also, Mrs. Ralph Kharas, wife of College of Law Dean Ralph Kharas; Dr. Litt Gardner, Upstate Medical Center; the Rev. John Fuller of May Memorial Church; and Dr. Virginia Hickernell, Syracuse Psychiatric Hospital.

Gordon MacArthur, a Syracuse attorney, was elected vice-chairman of the chapter.

The officers and Board of Directors will meet monthly, according to Balabanian, to plan possible advisements or court litigation. General meetings are held at longer intervals, he said, although the five committees,

CAP Heads Pledge Action, Experience

By SUSAN WEINBERG
Junior Editor

The motto "action through experience" will guide the campaign of James Morris and Kate Antony, Campus Alliance Party candidates for Joint Student Government president and vice president.

This motto and specific proposals to follow it up were explained by Morris Tuesday at a combination coffee and business meeting of CAP at Pi Beta Phi sorority.

He told the CAP candidates, campaign managers, and political representatives that his platform would include the following points:

1. A complete reevaluation of the marking system which would allow for a greater differentiation among students through a wider range of grades.

"Dr. Frank P. Piskor, academic dean, indicated he would welcome a change in the system if it had student support," Morris said.

Meetings Set For Officials, Candidates

All candidates for campus office must attend a meeting at 10 a.m. Saturday in the student government office. 907 University Ave.

Elections Commissioner Arthur Perschetz said that the

"I'll Remember April..."

THE STRAINS of that old song seemed to be haunting junior CISSY POSSELT Tuesday as she joined other Syracusans who came out of their indoor hangouts to sun themselves. Others flocked to parks to toss a ball or ran to the parking lots to let down their convertible tops. But for others there were the trees on the quad and faraway looks for the coming of spring.

Ernie Davis: 'I'm Not Unlucky'

The sad story of Ernie Davis, which was known by most Syracusans, has been told in the March 30 issue of "The Saturday Evening Post" by Ernie himself.

In a rather short and surface-skimming piece Ernie retraces his youth, high school and college days and the more recent days of struggle and loneliness in his battle against leukemia.

It is an emotion-filled piece, yet it is simply told under the title "I'm Not Unlucky." In fact, if you didn't know Ernie Davis you might think it was kind of sentimental and overdone.

"Someplace along the line you have to come to an understanding with yourself, and I had reached mine a long time before, when I was still in the hospital. Either you fight or you give up. For a time I was so despondent I would just lie there, not even wanting to move. One day I got hold of myself. I decided I would face up to whatever I had and try to beat it. I still feel that way.

"Some people say I am unlucky. I don't believe it. And I don't want to sound as if I am particularly brave or unusual. Sometimes I still get down, and sometimes I feel sorry for myself. Nobody is just one thing all the time.

"But when I look back I can't call myself unlucky. . . . ."

"The big thing to me in football has always been the competitiveness. Sometimes when the game is close and the play is roughest you forget the crowd and the noise, and it is just you against somebody else to see who is the better man. This is what I liked and took pride in the way I could do and, after all the waiting, I want a chance to do again."

Now it's the man against a disease and if anyone can beat it, we'll put our money on Ernie.

The story of his life is one we all know and have read before but now it has a little more to it and it should be read by all those who appreciate Ernie Davis the athlete so they can know Ernie Davis the man.

Quotable Quote

Mort Sahl, the intellect's comedian, political commentator and latter-day Will Rogers, recently caused a few hundred California Democrats to choke on their $100-a-plate chickens.

Sahl, a guest on the Howard K. Smith television program last week, related his appearance at the Dem dinner as a last-minute replacement for Adlai E. Stevenson.

When he strode to the lecturn, Sahl prefaced his remarks with the following statement: "As you know, Adlai Stevenson was scheduled to speak tonight but he had a previous engagement so you'll have to settle for me. But then the Democratic party has a long history of settling for much less than Adlai Stevenson."

LETTERS

'Sword'

To the Editor:

The letter to the D.O. on the Sword of Damocles (March 15), raises several important questions. In it, Mr. McDonald deplores the so-called "muckraking" approach of the Sword, as well as the lack of poetry, and what he considers the poor quality of its fiction. While neither entirely supporting nor entirely condemning his stand, I will attempt to evaluate what in my opinion, is wrong with the status of student publications at S.U.

This year, our published material—both expository and literally—has been badly disorganized. Terry Hughes' Sword of Damocles, an independently-run magazine, is devoted primarily to the exposure of undesirable conditions and attitudes perpetuated by the Syracuse University administration. Whether this approach is most sensible may be debated. However, it is still of the utmost importance for a university to have a student voice, constantly questioning—not blindly accepting—conditions around it.

The fact that the plight of the foreign student is a universal problem indicates the vital urgency of such an approach. It is the implicit task of a college education to stimulate such a probing attitude, rather than mere conformity to one's superiors.

Syracuse 10, the official campus publication, presents a more restrained, but far more variegated approach. Combining humor, creative effort, and news of both campus and nation, this magazine, albeit far less colorful than the Sword, did represent both informative and entertaining reading. The poetry that was missing in the latter was copiously presented here. However, in my opinion, the basic problem still has not been solved.

On one hand, there is a magazine labeled "heretical" and "anti-intellectual"; on the other, one condemned as "timid" and a "mouthpiece of the Administration." In any case, literary effort is still being short-changed in both.

What this campus really needs is two magazines. Not two competing magazines (as at present) but two which supplement each other. The need is obvious for a publication that examines both campus and world issues in a responsible and forthright manner. The Administration must not be afraid of receiving criticism where it is needed, but must do its best to remedy the abuses. Of be responsible and impartial course, such criticism must —aimed against the abuses, and not the administrators. Nevertheless, criticism must not be shunned.

The other magazine is one which has been conspicuously absent on this campus in recent years. It is a work directed ostensibly at the "Chancellor's five per cent," but in reality, at the entire student body.

Any effort to combine the political and social with the literary is bound to bring complaints: of those whose work has been deleted because of limited space; of those who deplore the de-emphasis of prose and poetry; of those who revolt against the selections represented. A maximum effort must be made to have published, on this campus, a publication solely devoted to short stories, poetry ,art, and humor—one in which the best creative efforts of the student body may be most fully exploited.

Our two present magazines, while worthy in themselves, have not given such effort the attention it deserves. Individual creation deserves a consideration equal to that of any other content. While fully supporting the ever-continuing debate on the political and the social, it is my sincere hope that individual effort will soon be similarly represented.

'Boss'

To the Language Lab "Boss":

It is a very sad case to think that we must be treated as four-year olds when we come to lab. There is a guard at the door when we enter and a guard when we leave. Now it wouldn't be so terrible if he just stood there, but he believes in the rules at all cost; even the sacrifice of a student's time in order to see a professor.

There is no doubt about it —he rules with an iron hand, and he uses it like a castle would use a drawbridge. It is infuriating to thing that the university would impose such a stupid rule as this one:

"#2. No one will be permitted to enter the lab before the hour or five minutes after the lab begins." on persons who will be "on their own" in a matter of three months.

It is like a concentration camp. At 10:52, on Thursday, March 21, 1963, two girls who attempted to escape were stopped dead in their tracks upon hearing: "Wait! where do you think you're going!?" How childish, immature, and disgusting to have to be told what to do and what not to do at the age of twenty-one.

This is crazy — we get a taste of freedom from the deans, who urge us to be independent and individualistic, and then the iron hand descends again in some form or fashion.

It is a shame that the university isn't constant in its actions. Our appeal is: either spoon-feed us all the time or let us practice our sense of limitation and judgment as to whether we should remain in language lab or not. I thought that at this stage of the game, the next move was to be independent and ask for advice, not to have to take an order.

POLICY ON LETTERS

The Daily Orange invites, and even urges, the expression of opinion on the part of its readers. The editors make a sincere effort to publish as many letters as possible, but space and the illegible condition in which some letters are received eliminate several from consideration.

Out of necessity, the editors reserve the right to edit letters for reasons of grammar, space and good taste.

Consequently, writers are urged to type their letters, preferably double-spaced, and to limit them to a maximum of 200 words.

THE CUTTING ROOM

The Ballad of Blacklisting

by John E. Greenwald

Syracuse University, or no Syracuse University, ABC's "Hootenanny" will go on Saturday night at 8:30 on channel 9. But a new song, all about blacklisting, is being added to the production as "Hootenanny"becomes the center of the noisiest blacklisting dispute since John Henry Faulk collected $3 million from Aware, Inc.

The blacklisting troubles for the program began when folksinger Pete Seegar and folkgroup the Weavers were told they could not appear on the show. Whereas similar bans imposed by NBC and CBS resulted in little or no repercussions the chance of a boycott by other folk performers became a distinct possibility when:

a) Joan Baez, recently the subject of a Time magazine cover story, refused to appear on "Hootenanny' because of the ban, and

b) a group of 40 folk singers meeting in New York discussed an appeal to Federal Communications Chairman Newton N. Minow to issue a directive to the networks favoring an end to tv blacklisting.

In the meantime a dispute over "blacklisting in reverse" (should blacklistees and others blacklist blacklisters) was raging in New York's (Greenwich) Village Voice.

Seegar and the Weavers, blacklisted throughout the McCarthy era for alleged Communist affiliation, were excluded from the January CBS special from Washington, D.C. under the auspices of the Anti - Defamation League, the special celebrated President Kennedy's ". . . enrichment of our democratic heritage."

A year ago the Weavers pulled out of an NBC "Tonight" appearance when they were asked to sign a loyalty pledge. The American Legion picketed a Weavers appearance here at the University Regent Theater last Spring.

"Hootenanny's" producer Dick Lewine, issued conflicting statements regarding the alleged ban. Bob Williams in the March 21 New York Post quoted Lewine,

"The term 'Hootenanny' was virtually invented by Seegar. But all ABC tells us is they can't put him on. They never put anything in writing."

But in the March 27 Variety Lewine said, "There has been no political talk in my office or any word from the ABC management over who is or is not to appear on this show. Our only consideration has been to seek the most entertaining talent suitable for this particular show."

Many top folk singers were reported to have a strong allegiance to Seegar who is credited as being the single most important factor in folk music's currently popularity and the resultant "Hootenanny" and similar programs.

Among the 40 singers who met in Greenwich Village's Village Gate were Judy Collins, Erik Darling, Leon Bibb, Tommy Makem and Israel Young, who operates a Village folk music store. An FCC directive against blacklisting, the group felt, would "get the networks off the hook," since it's generally believed the origin of blacklisting pressure is with the advertiser and agency.

The Weavers' personal manager, Harold Leventhal said his proposal to include Seegar and the Weavers was flatly refused by the producers, who said, "the boys upstairs won't allow it."

"There's never any official statement on the blacklisting. You have to read between the lines when you don't know what they mean anyway. And it comes down to the same old passing of the buck from network top management to ad agency to client."

He says the racially mixed Tarrier were also banned by the producers who later changed their minds after considering the threat of an ugly publicity explosion over the exclusion.

Blacklisting is usually initiated by conservative businessmen, advertisers and/or irate letter-writing housewives. These people are, for one reason or another, afraid of the ideas certain performers may spread.

Blacklisters, American Legion picketers, worried "conservatives" all share the same lack of faith in democracy and the open-forum experiment of America. A folk singer or Hollywood script writer is not dangerous in the sense of a spy or a sabateur. Those who fear "wrong" political and economic theories should perhaps leave America -and go to the Soviet Union where "alien" philosophies are not permitted.

The final blame for blacklisting, though, rest with the networks themselves, who, in a passioned drive for money and public acceptance are willing to bend their programs to fit the distorted image of "Americanism' a few vociferous viewers may have.

It's enough the broadcasters mold their schedules to please the rating services' conceptions of what the American people want in entertainment. Must they mold their entertainers political philosophies as well?

Barlach Exhibit at Lowe

An exhibition of more than one hundred sculptures, prints and drawings by Ernst Barlach will open with a reception at the galleries of the Joe and Emily Lowe Art Center this Sunday from 4-6 p.m. and will continue through May 5.

Barlach, one of the martyrs of modern art, was persecuted by the Nazi regime because it rejected all personal expression in art. His simplified dramatic sculptured figures portray realistically much that is grim in life. Works from all periods of his work including his best known "Frenzy' and "Singing Boy" are in the exhibit.

The exhibition was organized by the German Barlach Society and Dr. Wolf Stubbe of the Hamburger Lunsthalle and is being circulated by the Traveling Exhibition Servive of the Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D.C.

The galleries will be opened daily Monday through Friday 9 a.m.-5 p.m.; Saturdays 9-5 and Sundays 3-6 p.m.

Segovia Plays Tonight

Andres Segovia, who has literally brought the guitar from oblivion to fame in the world of music, will hold a concert 8:15 p.m. today in Lincoln Auditorium.

When he was only fourteen, 53 years ago, Segovia gave his first public concert in Granada. Since then his recitals have brought critical acclaim.

The N.Y. Herald Tribune said after his first appearance in New York City in 1928, "One of the most extraordinary and engrossing recitals of music that has ever taken place in a New York concert hall."

Segovia ,who plays nearly 100 concerts a year in Europe, South America and the United States has bee nlargly responsible for the introduction of guitar study in several major European conservatories and in music schools throughout the world.

Since guitar was rarely studied as a classical instrument before Segovia, the artist has worked with composers, explaining the mechanics of the guitar, such as Villa-Lobos. Ibert, DeFalla, Soussel, Tansman and Castelnuovo-Tedesco.

Segovia will perform "Two Studies" and "Nondo" followed by Torroba's "Romance et Danse" and Tarrega's "Etude." The second part of the program will be devoted to composers born in the late 17th century including Johannes Sebastian Bach and Scarlatti.

LIEUTENANT JOHN MONTEFUSCO, HISTORY MAJOR, CLASS OF '61

"If I had it to do over again, would I take Army R.O.T.C.?

My wife and I are in Panama at the moment. She likes it. You know, Officers' Club, dances—that sort of thing. I like it, too. But whether I stay in the Army or not, the question is: Would I take Army R.O.T.C. if I had it to do over again? Yes, I certainly would. In spades, I didn't realize how lucky I was. At the time I figured: Okay, so I'll get my degree—get an Army commission, too, and pick up some extra money along the way! I wasn't the leadership type, I thought. I was wrong. Boy, was I wrong! Looking back on it, I wouldn't trade the leadership training I got for anything! Take my word for it, leaders are made—not born! Whether I stay in the Army or not, nobody can take away what I've learned. And let's face it, where can anybody my age step out of college and walk into a standard of living this good? Look, if you have already invested two years in college ROTC, take it from me: Stick it out! It'll be one of the smartest things you ever did. I say so."

3. Action on university bookstore "absurdities" such as high textbook prices. "If the university cannot afford to lower prices, it ought to turn the store over to a private concern," Morris added.

4. National tax relief for parents of college students. The JSG presidential candidate called for a national program to reduce the amount of income tax parents with students in college must pay.

5. Inform the students of the exact breakdown of the $100 general student fee.

6. Action to improve the poor housing facilities for women. Morris' example of housing in need of improvement was the Ambassador apartments.

7. Action on the infirmary's poor facilities and personnel. Morris would like better supervision of the infirmary.

9. Institution of a complete dead week with no activities, tests or papers, and only review classes.

9. Presentation of the plan for the student union to the alumni board at alumni weekend in June and ask them to take action. "Since the students have taken the initiative, it is now up to the alumni act," Morris explained.

11. Revision of the JSG training program.

"We want to tackle these problems in a realtistic way to get things done," Morris explained. "Communications will be important to formulating and presenting ideas to the administration."

While not part of the formal platform, Morris did mention that he would like to inform the alumni in June of student opinion on the university drinking policy.

Free ballroom dance instruction continues at 8 p.m. today in the Women's Building recreation room.

The seven-week course began March 13 under the leadership of Walt Medicis and student instructors Fred Alderman, Michael Guzman, Douglas Johnston and Melinda Sciurba.

Students may join the class tonight. Also, students with new dance steps or variations may show the class the new step.

A dance party during the seventh class meeting will culminate this semester's instruction.

'Hoot' Delayed

Don't hold your breath waiting to see yourself on television if you attended the ABC "Hootenanny" in Sims Dining Hall last November. The Syracuse segment of the series, which bows 8:30 p.m. Saturday on WNYS-TV, channel 9, won't be broadcast until June or July, according to network officials.

"No definite date" was set for the Hill "Hoot" which featured the Limeliters, Clara Ward and her Gospel Singers and 2,000 singing, clapping, screaming students an ABC spokesman said.

A "Hootenanny" taped at the University of Michigan replaced the originally scheduled Syracuse program Saturday. "Hoots" have also been recorded at Brown University.

Hill grad Gil Gates produced and directed the Syracuse "Hootenanny" as a "one-shot" special as well as a "pilot" film for the projected series. He is currently a director for NBCs "International Showtime."

Students in Italy Mix Study With La Dolce Vita

THIS FEATURE describing the joys of Italy as experienced by Syracuse-in-Italy participants, was written by a Hill junior majoring in political science and newspaper journalism. From Chicago, she is an SIA alumna herself.

By BARBARA GILBERT

"Walking down the narrow street in Italy, the young American student felt lost. He stopped before a door marked Piazza Savonarola 15. He hesitated, then knocked, and the door opened with a cheerful "buona sera".

This experience is the beginning of a new and exciting adventure — the Syracuse University Semester-in-Italy.

The purpose of the Semester - in - Italy is to permit American students to enhance their education by study in a foreign country. Under this program students spend four months in Florence, Italy.

Application

In order to become a participant in the program, students apply to the University College division of Syracuse University. After acceptance by UC, the application must be approved by the Experiment in International Living.

The semester program is a co-operative venture in which Syracuse provides the academic content and the Experiment handles the living accommodations with Italian families.

The Experiment's administrators believe that the only effective way of learning to understand and appreciate other cultures is by living as a member of a family abroad.

'Dear Family'

Each student, before leaving for Italy, must write a "Dear Family" letter telling his new family about his interests and his home life in the United States.

Although a fee covering costs is paid to these families, the students are expected to consider themselves as guests of the household.

In time Experimenters become part of the family. They help with the dishes, go shopping for their Italian "mother" and attend concerts and plays with their "brothers" and "sisters".

Middle Class

Most of the Italian families represent the middle class of Florentine life. Some are of a slightly lower class while one participant in the program is a descendant of Lorenzo di Medici, ruler of Florence during the Renaissance.

Students find their family relationship warm and friendly. Miriam Schulman, a Syracuse junior, said of her stay. "The family did everything they could to make me feel at home in Italy. I could always talk to them about what I thought and felt."

Syracuse designs the curriculum to fit the needs of juniors and second semester sophomores. All the courses except those in Italian language and literature are taught in English by Syracuse and Florentine professors.

60 Students

Political science, history and fine arts are offered. Participation in the program is limited to 60 students a semester — two-thirds from Syracuse and others from schools such as Cornell, California, Barnard, and Villanova Universities.

A typical day in the life of the programs student begins at 8:30 a.m. when school begins. Classes are held in a red brick villa six days a week until 12:30 p.m. After that the student's life is his own.

One of the more striking differences between Italian and American life is the noon meal. Lunch in Italy is usually a seven course meal.

Food

First comes the spaghetti, noodles, or ravioli. Then the diner is ready for the main course. Meat, potatoes, vegetables, salad, fruit and cheese follow, washed down by numerous glasses of chianti.

From 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. everything in Florence closes down. This is siesta time in Italy. When stores and other buildings open again, it is time to go sightseeing.

Remembering her trip, Liz Dilsizian, a Syracuse senior, declares, "Living in Florence is like walking back in time. There is so much culture to absorb and the people of Florence are just wonderful."

Student Cards

Members of the program can purchase student cards which provide for free admission into most of the famous museums and art galleries of Europe.

Russetta Madison, SU junior, compared the city of Florence to a textbook. "Our 'homework' was often to visit the famous art galleries and churches. We saw the originals of many great artists."

At 8 p.m. the Italians sit down to dinner which, fortunately, for the weight-watchers and those with small appetites, is not quite as large as lunch.

Grades

Grades tend to fall slightly when students are studying in Italy. Harold Vaughn, program administrator in the U.S., attributes this to the lure of the city of Florence.

"Florence is the most beautiful city in the world next to Paris. It is a quaint old city where the works of great men are just around every corner," he said.

Mrs. John Adams, wife of Hill Prof. John Clarke Adams, initiator of the semester program, sees several other reasons for falling grades. "Grades fall because it is harder to study in a foreign environment and because students do not always realize how hard the courses will be."

Students Agree

The students themselves agree with all of these reasons but feel that the experience itself more than makes up for a lower average.

Robert Lombardo, Villanova senior, said, "Studying in Florence was a tremendous adventure. I met people, made new friends, and saw places that I will remember all my life."

Since the Semester-in-Italy began in 1959, the ratio of participants has been overwhelmingly in favor of women. In the fall semester of 1962 there were nine men and 53 women.

Fewer Boys

Presumably, fewer men go because they attend college in order to prepare for a career. Then, too, the records show that mens grades are often not high enough. Preference in the program is given to students with a "B" average.

The Experimenters consider themselves representatives of the United States. Most of them have read about the "Ugly American" abroad and the majority make it a point to act in the opposite manner.

It is not only the students who love Florence, but the faculty as well. The wife of Dr. A. Robert Schoyen, Hill professor of history, described her Italian home in glowing terms. "I used to wake up in the morning to the sound of little cars whizzing up and down the streets.

Famous Bridge

"We lived near the famous bridge, Ponte Vecchio. In fact, I could reach out my window and touch the side of the bridge. Somehow it gave me a feeling of touching the past. From our roof we had a magnificent view of the city along the river Arno."

What does one remember most about the Semester and life in Italy?

Roz Schloss, a junior who just returned from Florence, expressed what so many of the students feel but can not say.

Combination

"It was the combination of the warmth of the people, the beauty of Florence, a school situation completely integrated with the home environment, the romantic sound of a foreign language, the aroma of baking bread, the bells of Santa Maria Novella, the crowded buses—I loved it all."

As the students who will be knocking on that door in Italy, Semester-in-Italy participants are at the start of a challenging undertaking which requires intelligence, tact, and understanding. They have only to cross the threshold.

HOW TO GET EDUCATED ALTHOUGH ATTENDING COLLEGE

In your quest for a college degree, are you becoming a narrow specialist, or are you being educated in the broad, classical sense of the word?

This question is being asked today by many serious observers—including my barber, my roofer, and my little dog Spot—and it would be well to seek an answer.

Are we becoming experts only in the confined area of our majors, or does our knowledge range far and wide? Do we, for example, know who fought in the Battle of Jenkins' Ear, or Kant's epistemology, or Planck's constant, or Valsalva's maneuver, or what Wordsworth was doing ten miles above Tintern Abbey?

If we do not, we are turning, alas, into specialists. How then can we broaden our vistas, lengthen our horizons—become, in short, educated?

Well sir, the first thing we must do is throw away our curricula. Tomorrow, instead of going to the same old classes, let us try something new. Let us not think of college as a rigid discipline, but as a kind of vast academic smorgasbord, with all kinds of tempting intellectual tidbits to savor. Let's start sampling tomorrow.

He was so moved he wrote Joyce Kilmer's immortal Trees

We will begin the day with a stimulating seminar in Hittite artifacts. Then we will go over to marine biology and spend a happy hour with the sea slugs. Then we will open our pores by drilling a spell with the ROTC. Then we'll go over to journalism and tear out the front page. Then we'll go to the medical school and autograph some casts. Then we'll go to home economics and have lunch.

And between classes we'll smoke Marlboro Cigarettes. This, let me emphasize, is not an added fillip to the broadening of our education. This is an essential. To learn to live fully and well is an important part of education, and Marlboros are an important part of living fully and well. What a sense of completeness you will get from Marlboro's fine tobaccos, from Marlboro's pure filter! What flavor Marlboro delivers! Through that immaculate filter comes flavor in full measure, flavor without stint or compromise, flavor that wrinkled care derides, flavor holding both its sides. This triumph of the tobacconist's art comes to you in soft pack or Flip-Top box and can be lighted with match, lighter, candle, Welsbach mantle, or by rubbing two small Indians together.

When we have embarked on this new regimen—or, more accurately, lack of regimen—we will soon be cultured as all get out. When strangers accost us on the street and say, "What was Wordsworth doing ten miles above Tintern Abbey, hey?" we will no longer slink away in silent abashment. We will reply loud and clear:

"As any truly educated person knows, Wordsworth, Shelley, and Keats used to go to the Widdicombe Fair every year for the poetry-writing contests and three-legged races, both of which they enjoyed lyrically. Well sir, imagine their chagrin when they arrived at the Fair in 1776 and learned that Oliver Cromwell, uneasy because Guy Fawkes had just invented the spinning jenny, had cancelled all public gatherings, including the Widdicombe Fair and Liverpool. Shelley was so upset that he drowned himself in a butt of malmsey. Keats went to London and became Charlotte Bronte. Wordsworth ran blindly into the forest until he collapsed in a heap ten miles above Tintern Abbey. There he lay for several years, sobbing and kicking his little fat legs. At length, peace returned to him. He looked around, noted the beauty of the forest, and was so moved that he wrote Joyce Kilmer's immortal Trees... And that, smart-apple, is what Wordsworth was doing ten miles above Tintern Abbey."

'Privacy Biggest Need In Coed Dormitories'

By SANDY MYERS

The students' greatest demand in co - educational housing is for privacy, Beverly Belson, director of Michigan State University residence halls, told Hill head residents and student deans Tuesday.

"Men and women want separate study, entertaining and laundry areas and even separate vending machines," she said.

Miss Belson outlined five types of co-educational housing: "brother - sister" dormitories where men's and women's dorms are adjacent but not connected; two attached dorms with common facilities; two dorms joined by a common dining area (such as SU's Flint-Graham-Day Halls complex); one building with men and women on separate floors; and two connected dorms with identical facilities in each.

1200 Students

MSU uses the last type. Each of the dorm houses 600 students, so 1,200 students—half of them men and half women—live in the same facility.

Because MSU is such a large campus, with 27,000 on-campus students, dorms are broken down into "houses" so "students can identify," Miss Belson said.

Each floor, which has 22 double rooms, is considered a house. The 44 residents have a private lounge, which can be used for either studying or social events.

"The students have always decided these rooms should be used only for intensive academic work and never for social functions unless all floor residents are involved," Miss Belson noted.

No Potato Chips

She added that some girls' houses have even outlawed potato chips in the floor lounges because the noise disturbs the silence

MSU covers 4,060 acres, of which 2,300 are used for agricultural research. The main campus covers 960 acres, with 900 set aside for future expansion, Miss Belson said.

The distance between campus buildings has made it necessary to include classrooms and faculty offices in each dorm complex, she noted.

The first complex, which includes three dormitories housing about 1800 men and 1800 women, is devoted to students in University College, the university's main unit, future dorms will be occupied by students in other colleges.

Best to Direct Parents Fund

Syracuse University's Development Office has added a former Cornell University official to its ranks.

Dr. Allen C. Best, who served in several capacities at Cornell from 1942 to 1958, has joined the SU administration as director of foundation support and director of the parents fund. His most recent position was vice president and director of development and public relations at Greensboro College, Greensboro, N. C.

At Cornell, Dr. Best was director of the Wesley Foundation where he worked in fund-raising and public relations. He also taught and counseled students.

Dr. Best's appointment was announced by Hill Vice President for Development Newell W. Rossman.

A member of the Syracuse class of 1935, Dr. Best earned M.A., S.T.B. and Ph.D. degrees in psychology and education at Boston University. He also studied at Northwestern University and Cornell.

DR. ALLAN BEST

The Cleveland, N. Y., native has done research on special education, mental health and handicapped children at Rome State School and Syracuse Psychopathic Hospital. He is a lecturer and public speaker, averaging more than 100 appearances a year.

composed of the general membership, meet separately and regularly.

Join National

Prospective members must join the national ACLU first. That group shares membership contributions with local affiliates. A number of Hill students are participating in the work of the chapter, Balabanian said.

Other areas the chapter has promised to examine are the rights of persons displaced by urban renewal projects in Syracuse, and the judicial rights of local indigent persons forced to accept counsel of a public defender or legal aid society.

The chapter embraces the counties of Onondaga, Cortland, Oswego, Cayuga, Madison, Oneida, Tompkins and Seneca, and has merged with the already established Niagara Frontier Branch of the ACLU, based in Buffalo. There are about 500 members at present, according to Balabanian.

Last November the SU dean of women's office and Security Police participated in a room search of Day Hall in an attempt to solve a series of thefts in the dorm.

Scientist Says Experience Beats Ph. D.

By CAROL RUBRIGHT

"In physics, when you get your Ph.D., you know absolutely nothing," said Dr. Jack Lietner, Syracuse University physicist.

Leitner, describing the way to become a physicist, stated, "Before you can do things on your own, you need experience. The best way to get it is to serve an apprenticeship as a research associate for several years."

Leitner is head of the Syracuse team which discovered two new atomic particles last December in collaboration with a similar team at the Brookhaven National Laboratory.

The particles, originally named the Kappa 1,2-Star and the Cascade-Star are being further examined to discover their characteristic. The Cascade-Star has kept its original name, and the Kappa 1,2-Star was officially titled the Phi-Meson.

During an interview in his steel-gray, paper-strewn office in the Archbold Stadium laboratories, Leitner mentioned that although "you don't get a Stalin medal" for a discovery, recognition comes in different ways. He indicated a bulletin board cluttered with typewritten pages. "Those are invitations to speak at various universities," he said. The return addresses read like a map of America.

Eighth Article

The team's findings were printed in "the green Bible of the industry," "Physical Review Letters," a magazine which publishes important discoveries in the world of physics. The article was Leitner's eighth in the magazine.

An enthusiastic physicist, Lietner said, "Physics is my hobby as well as my job." He specializes in high energy physics, which, as he put it, "is the most useless kind of research imaginable. It is pure physics, but it differs from pure mathematics in that it's not just imagination. The challenge is to understand what is in nature, not who could be."

Leitner, who does research under a contract with the Office of Naval Research, mentioned that about 90 per cent of the physics graduate students in the country are working under fellowships and assistantships. He also pointed out that it costs a college about $150,000 to train one graduate student in physics.

Remarkable Government

"One of the most remarkable things about our country is the exient to which we can do pure research and receive governmental support," said Leitner. "This shows the really long-range point of view which the government is now taking. It is sophisticated enough to realize that the payoff doesn't always come in the next week."

Leitner is a graduate of Columbia University, and he received his Ph.D. there in 1957. He worked as a research associate at Duke University, and the University of California at Berkeley. He is now an associate professor who, beside doing research, teaches a graduate class in high energy physics. He and his wife live near campus with their two little girls, aged 5, and 2.

Finley Coaches Manlius

Dick Finley, versatile Syracuse athlete and a former All-American lacrosse player, will coach the stick sport at the Manlius School this spring.

The announcement was made by Harold Anderson, athletic director of the military preparatory school.

Finley, who graduates from the university in June, will join the Manlius faculty next fall as a social studies teacher.

All-American

The Freeport, Long Island native was named to the United States Intercollegiate Lacrosse Association All-American first squad last season.

Orange lacrosse coach Roy Simmons calls Finley "the best lacrosse player at Syracuse since Jimmy Brown.

"Finley is a fine team player and an excellent leader," states Simmons. "He truly deserved the All-American honors given him last year."

Finley has performed as a midfielder on the SU lacrosse team for the past three seasons. He participated in the North-South collegiate lacrosse game in 1962.

Basketball Too!

The all-around sportsman was also a regular on the Piety basketball team. He averaged 5.2 points per contest in 1962-63 while standing out on defense.

In addition to his head lacrosse position at Manlius, Finley will coach the Red Squires basketball team and will assist in football.

Ben Welcomes 80 Gridders

Eighty Hill athletes started sweating into top physical condition yesterday after Coach Ben Schwartzwalder greeted returning veterans and rookies as spring football practice started at Manley Field.

Included in the squad are five returning starters. End Dick Bowman, tackle John Paglio, guard Jim Mazurek, quarterback Walley Mahle and fullback Jim Nance are the returning first stringers.

Nance, a 220-pounder from Indiana, Pa., led the Orange in ground-gaining as a rookie last fall.

Holes to Fill

Schwartzwalder's main job as he starts his 15th season as head coach, will be to patch the Orange forward wall. Four of the seven starting line positions were vacated by seniors. Walt Sweeney at end, Dave Meggysey at guard, Leon Cholakis at tackle, and Gene Stancin at center are all seniors.

"We lose our starting halfbacks, Mackey and King," Schwartzwalder pointed out. "But there are a number of experienced backs returning plus some pretty good looking sophomores."

Men to Beat

Right now, the men to beat out for the starting jobs are Bowman at left end, Gerry Everling at left guard, Len Slaby at center, Mazurek at right guard, Tom Wilhelm at inside tackle, Paglio at outside tackle, Jim Cripps at right end, Mahle at quarterback, Bill Schoonover and Mike Koski at the halfback slots and Nance at fullback.

The spring depth chart will be shuffled as the team gets into full swing in practice with sophomores to be getting a good look see by the Syracuse coaching staff.

Spring sessions will wind up with the Varsity-Alumni game Saturday May 4. NCAA rules permit a team to have 20 team workouts within 36 days.

Weak on Ends

Schwartzwalder stressed that the Orange would be weak at the ends and center. Paul Houle has been moved to end joining Cripps and Bowman and four frosh with potential. Harris Elliott, Pete Coline, George Fair and Howard McCard will see plenty of spring work at end.

Behind Slaby at center are John vonBischoffshausen and Bob Morgan along with frosh Tom Meggysey, Tom Barker and Pat Killorin.

"We're better off in the backfield than in the line," Ben said. "Mahle and King will move up in class this year and get so they can throw a pass. We've got the best quarterback depth we have had in some time," the coach said.

Schoonover Tops

Ben pointed to Bill Schoonover as one of the keys to a good season. "If he can shake the injury jinks and comes through for us we will win 3 or 4 more games than we won't without him."

An Injury-free Tiger Club Could Break Yankee Reign

By ART ROSSKY

In 1962 the Tigers were jolted by early season injuries to pitcher Frank Lary and rightfielder Al Kaline, the team's two best players. The Motor City entry never recovered as it staggered home fourth, 10½ game behind.

The Detroit Tigers, free of last year's injury jinx, should press the Yankees for the 1963 American League pennant.

Lary, who specializes in beating the Yankees, was handicapped by arm miseries as his won-lost record fell to 2-6. He is expected to win 20 games this year.

Kaline Back

Kaline was limited to 100 games by a broken collarbone. In his abbreviated season he batted .307, cracked 29 home runs and collected 94 runs batted in. He is also one of baseball's best glovemen.

In addition to the injuries, first baseman Norm Cash slumped badly.

In 1961 Cash hit .361. Last year, swinging for homers instead of singles, his average dropped to .243.

He led the team in homers with 39, although his total was below 1961 when he hit 41.

Rounding out the infield are Dick McAuliffe, second base, Chico Fernandez, shortstop, and Bubba Phillips, third base, acquired from the Indians.

Jake Wood who signed last year, may grab the shortstop berth if he regains his 1961 form.

Wood, not a great fielder, would run down more ground balls than Fernandez, who is slowing down at the age of 31.

Wood is extremely fast, as shown by his 24 stolen bases last year ,second best in the league.

Strong Outfield

Detroit's outfield is its strongest part.

In addition to Kaline other regulars are centerfielder Bill Bruton and leftfielder Rocky Colavito.

Bruton last year hit a steady .278 with 16 homers and continued to be a good gloveman.

Colavito, continued to rank among the top sluggers by walloping 37 into the seats and chasing home 112 runs.

Gus Triandos, obtained in a trade with Baltimore, should improve the Tigers' catching.

Injuries limited Triandos to 66 games and 6 homers last year. In form Triandos hits 30 homers.

Reserve catching may be a problem to the Tigers, for Mike Roarke, who hit a puny .213 last year, looks like the No. 2 catcher.

Bonus Baby

A long look will be given to Bill Freehan, a $100,000 bonus baby two years ago.

Freehan hit .283 at Denver last year while making the American Association All-Star team. He also has speed and a good arm.

The top reserves, who will see mainly pinch hitting duty, are Vic Wertz, .324 batting average, Whitey Herzog, another ex-Oriole, .266, and Bubba Morton, .262.

As Detroit last year hit 209 home runs—10 more than the Yankees—to lead the league, much of the blame for last year's poor showing must be given to the pitchers.

Pitching Hurts

Three starting pitchers—Don Mossi, Phil Regan, and Paul Foytack—all saw their earned run averages rise over the 4.00 mark. Rookies Bob Dustal, 12-8 at Denver, and Dick Egan, 17-11 at Hawaii may move into the starting rotation.

Detroit's best pitchers last year were Jim Bunning, Hank Aguirre, and Terry Fox.

Bunning led the team with 19 wins and 258 innings while Aguirre's 16-8 record include a 2.21 earned run average, best among the league's starters.

Fox was among the league's best relief pitchers while posting a 3-1 record and 1.71 earned run average.

SU Soccer Club Meets on Campus

By ALLAN KORT
Sports Editor

Two years ago the university athletic department decided to drop soccer as a varsity sport "because of a lack of interest."

The department's ultimatum stated that the sport would be discontinued as long as there was a decided lack of participator interest.

Followers of the sport on campus were dismayed by the action, and many players formed their own clubs or participated with city teams.

Help Needed

Others felt the genuine need for a soccer team under university auspices and have organized a club which they hope will eventually be recognized by the university.

The club, which has already held two meetings, will hold another organization meeting Thursday night at 8 in Gifford Auditorium. At the get-together, a film of the 1960 championship soccer game between Real Madrid of Spain and Eintracht of Germany will be shown.

The Syracuse University Soccer Club was spearheaded by Brian Stewart, supervisor of the graphic arts department of the audiovisual department.

Stewart, an Englishman, has been involved in soccer for almost two decades. He will act as coach of the club which will schedule games with clubs from Albany to Rochester.

Stewart played for several years in English soccer leagues and coached the Pratt Soccer Club in Brooklyn in 1956-57. He is an official of the Central New York Association of High School Soccer Coaches.

Stewart said he took an interest in soccer at Syracuse "because many players felt a need for a club to absorb players on campus."

The club, in addition to organizing a team and scheduling games, will also attempt to have regular meetings with films and speakers.

Equipment Sought

He said the group will try to get the use of the soccer equipment used by the university team two years ago. The team, he emphasized, will not, however, have many of the benefits of a university team. There will be no insurance against injury and players will have to pay for their own transportation to games.

Shaktman Directs 'Sisters'

By CISSY POSSELT

Only one community theatre group in the world can claim to have the man who won the first Fulbright Fellowship awarded for playwriting.

The Civic Company of the University Regent Theater at Syracuse is that company, and Ben Shaktman, artist-in-residence and instructor in Hill drama department, is that man.

Shaktman's current interest is with the Chekov play, "Three Sisters." He is directing the Civic Company, a community branch of the New Playhouse of Syracuse under the joint auspices of the SU drama department and University College, in the play.

"Three Sisters" opens at 8:30 p.m. today in the University Regent Theater and will also be performed at 8:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

With the Fulbright Shaktman studied verse plays in England under Dr. Richard Southern.

During his stay abroad Shaktman studied different areas of the theater, such as English political balads. He put these studies to good use directing the recent "Beggar's Opera," For the drama department.

Shaktman next studied classic Oriental art form under the renowned Arthur Waley and later produced a Chinese opera at the Royal Court Theater in England.

Moving to Paris, he aided in Social chairman and regional conference chairman are new positions created by Stanger after his election three weeks ago.

The social chairman will head a committee to carry out Stanger's campaign pledge to create a list of approved establishments for legal fraternity social functions. The chairmen will also work with individual houses in working out problems in their social schedules and in booking bands and halls.

The regional conference will take the place of the annual fall conference and will include fraternity systems throughout central New York.

Deadline for applications is April 11, the next IFC meeting. Applications may be handed into Stanger, Vice President Michael Steinberg (Sigma Alpha Mu) or the office of Fraternity Administrator James P. McMurray.

Stanger urged all interested Greek to apply for the positions.

Bonfire Set Wednesday

An attempted panty raid turned into a small bonfire in Thornden Park Tuesday night. Approximately 50 students trying to start a raid on the Mount were kept under control by dormitory directors.

Two Security Police cars were on the scene at 9:25 p.m. when rumblings of a panty raid began. At 10 p.m. about 50 students started down Comstock avenue but returned unsuccessful to DellPlain Hall for reinforcements, according to Security reports.

At 12:15 a.m. a revitalized group attempted to begin a panty raid starting at Watson dormitory. The effort was thwarted and a few students met in Thornden Park and started a small bonfire. The students were almost all from one Hill fraternity, according to DO sources.

The same students turned on a fire hydrant in front of 727 Comstock Ave. The Syracuse fire department extinguished the blaze and turned off the hydrant.

Rabbi Neimand Leaving Hill For Oregon This Summer

By SANDY MYERS

Jewish students on campus will have a new chaplian next semester.

Rabbi Louis Neimand, Hill Jewish chaplain for five years, will leave for Eugene, Ore., during the summer. In Eugene, he will serve as rabbi at Temple Beth Israel and counselor for Jewish students at the University of Oregon.

He will also act as Jewish counselor at Oregon State University in Corvallis.

A replacement has not yet been named.

Rabbi Neimand did not comment on his reasons for leaving the Hill.

During his stay at Syracuse, Rabbi Neimand instituted a kosher kitchen in Chapel House, which was later discontinued. He also makes provisions for students to have kosher meals during Passover, and worked on starting the present Rudolph Foundation for Jewish Studies.

He started the Hillel library in the Hendricks Chapel Board Room, and has given lectures on Judaism in religion 1.

A resident of New York City until 1937, Rabbi Neimand received a bachelor of science degree at City College and a master's in Hebrew literature at the Jewish Institute of Religion. He was ordained by the Jewish Institute.

UJA

After leaving New York, he worked as a United Jewish Appeal representative in Washington, D.C.

His Syracuse appointment was the first time he had worked directly with students and the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation.

As a chaplain for students, Rabbi Neimand serves several functions: conducting services, teaching classes, counselling, representing Jewish students to the administration and planning "limited" social programs.

Springtime Among The Subhumans

In this column recently we discussed the threat of muggings and molestings on campus in the spring. We are all aware of the dangers posed by the perpetrators of these acts against the student body of Syracuse.

We have been heartened by the apparent concern shown by Security Police and the city police in an effort to combat these threats to our welfare.

But that was all prediction—what the spring would hold in store for the Hill when spring really came. We were speaking about the future and making intelligent predictions about what would take place.

During the last two days, however we have been shocked into the reality that spring is indeed here already and we are sorry to admit that we neglected to mention another public threat that comes with springtime.

That threat is posed by the brand of individual on this campus who is known variously as the animal, the nut, the wild man or the million laughs.

Whatever his title, there is little doubt that he is subhuman, to say the least. We are referring to the last creature who comes filled with an insane urge to act impulsively and crazily, with spring fever as his excuse.

A common outlet for this type of person is the panty raid, which has been known to occur at Syracuse. However, this is the mildest form of outlet, though the university officials seem to worry the most about it.

Another outlet is the traditional water bag, which is just about collegiate enough to pass as "cute" except when some of these subhumans start tossing them at open convertibles and elderly women. Then it becomes downright rotten.

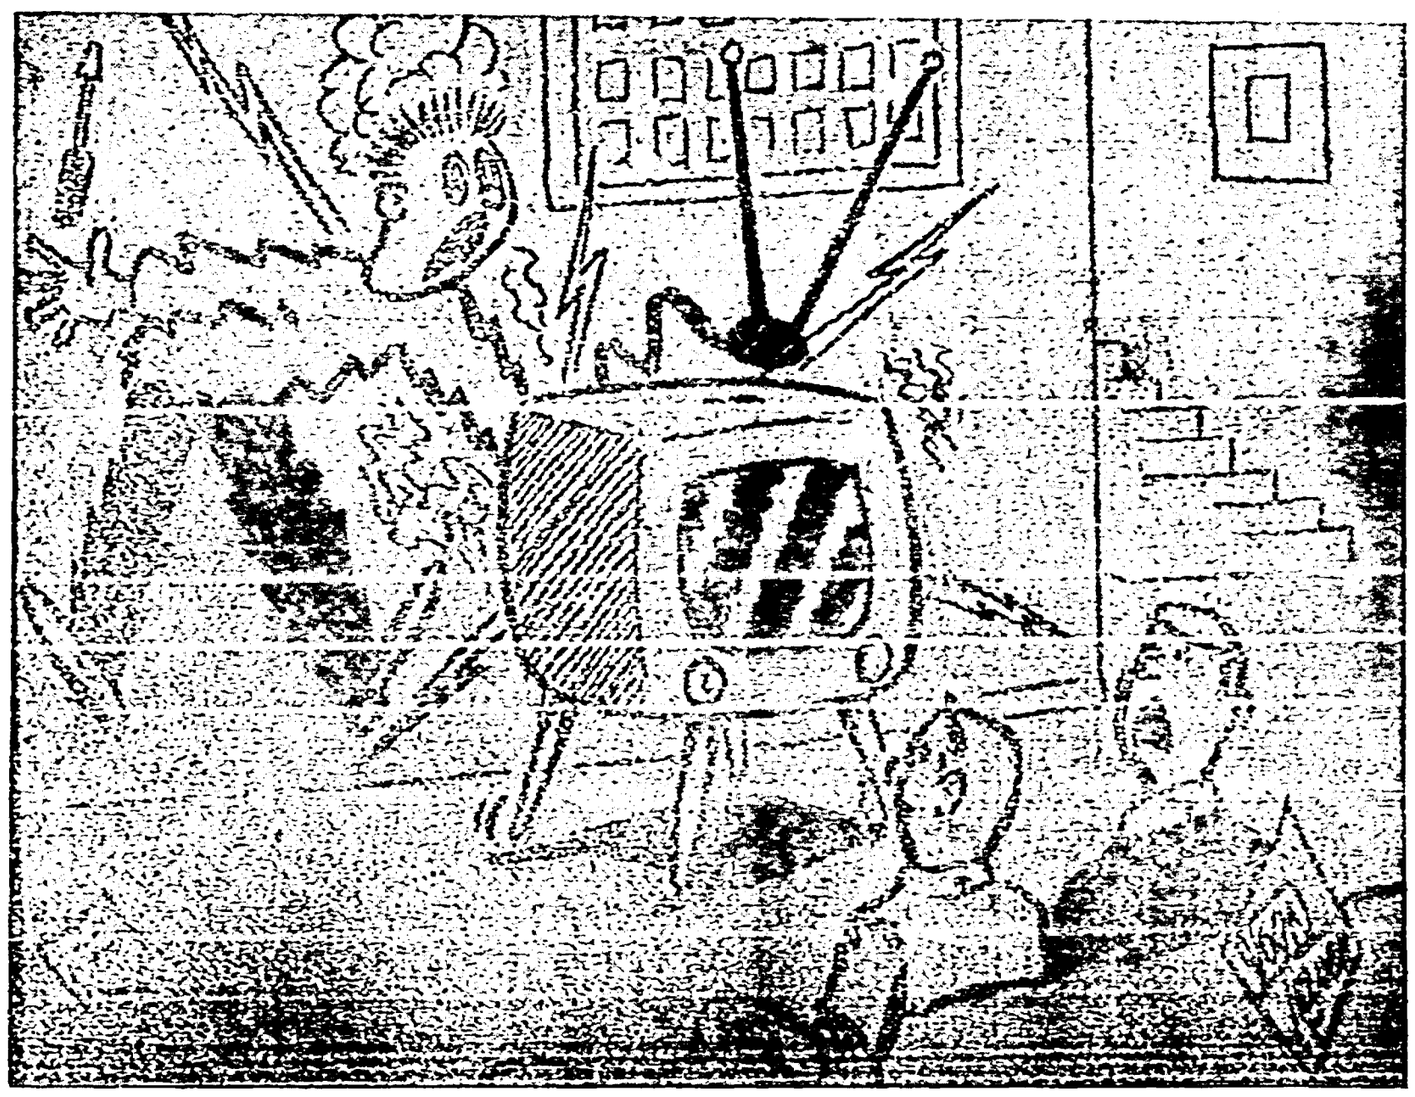
The last weapon (unless these warped minds stay up at night to come up with new devices) is the one that has burned us up. It is the firecracker.

If you want to be really frightened wander over to Comstock Avenue some day or night, preferably night, and you'll see things that will disgust you, or at least they should disgust you.

First you'll probably see firecrackers being tossed from Watson and DellPlain halls to the ground below. The danger in this practice depends upon how many persons are in the vicinity of where the firecrackers hit.

This is bad but it can be controlled by resident advisers and even higher ups.

But then journey a little farther down Comstock, if you dare, to fraternity row and you'll get sick. You'll see these subhumans hanging from windows, throwing firecrackers not just to the ground, but at specific people.



And if you think that is an accident, watch them as they sneak into a neighboring house to throw firecrackers in the halls, and if it's late enough at night and if they have been drinking enough, they may venture to sleeping quarters in these houses and laughingly toss a lit piece of gunpowder at a sleeping student.

Yes, it's a riot and it's oh so collegiate. Well if you wander over to Comstock and see some of those things you won't get pleasure out of sharing a campus with these animals.

If this is the collegiate atmosphere, give us something else. Take us away from these animals because they have nothing to offer us but the threat of distruction and personal injury.

It might even be better to share a classroom with a molester or a mugger than with a so-called college student who doesn't have enough sense of right or wrong to live with his neighbors in a civilized manner.

TREVER ON CAMPUS

LETTERS

Ribicoff

To the Editor:

"Countries pulling themselves up by their bootstraps seek a model," states Senator Abraham Ribicoff. If we are to be a model, the senator continues, we must take care of all our problems at home. "We are our brother's keepers."

The question now is: What kind of model are we to make? Sen. Ribicoff advocates a model society involved in various "social services."

If we take money from the "fortunate" to spend it on the "unfortunate," are we aiding mankind or mediocrity? If we let the "fortunate use their money to further themselves, are we shaping a wrong model and depriving the world of values in "good for the common good?" If greater and greater sums are taken from the "fortunate" for their effort, will their efforts relax or will they work harder? For what?

Are we yielding to senseless idealism?

Among certain literia, the we may well squirm. Ayn Rand, the novelist, expounds on the evils of the phrase, "the common good." According to Miss Rand in her novels, the advocates of this comfortable cliche sooner or later find themselves caught with no one around them capable enough to free them.

In the Introduction to Anthem, she comments that "Social gains," "social aims," "social objectives" have become the daily bromides of our language. The necessity of a social justification for all activities and all existence is now taken for granted. There is no proposal outrageous enough but what its author can get a respectful hearing and approbation if he claims that in some undefined way it is for "the common good."

Karel Capek, the dramatist, answers the idea of "the common good" through satire in his play "R.U.R." Talking to some robots that she has come to see, Helena says, "Brothers . . . I have come on behalf of the Humanity League . . . Its real purpose is to protect the Robots and ensure good treatment for them . . . (They are) to be dealt with like human beings." Needless to say, the outcome is a fiasco.

Husserl, the existentialist, brackets all of this, puts it aside, and concerns himself with his mind—his pure consciousness.

We have a choice of making any model we would like—a model of individualism or a model of collectivism. Perhaps in the former model, one man in those struggling countries would grasp the message, arise from the crawling, scrambling mass mess and out of the tangle start building a life—his life; whereas, in the latter model, perhaps only fighting and squabbling could ever result because no one would have an image before him to make him leave his fellowmen—to stop bickering and start building.

As Senator Ribicoff advocates "social gains," "social aims," and "social objectives," others may wonder. Have we wisely forgotten I?

Issues

To the Editor:

The campus is once again buzzing with political activities. The platforms are as usual meaningless. They avoid any of the controversial issues. JSG worries about the drinking policy and discrimination persists. Has Lambda Chi been forgotten?

The student government and its candidates for office should have the courage to speak out against the fraternity system and its discriminatory practices. To speak out against the administration's attitude of letting the fraternity issue fade so that the apathetic students and student leaders will once again worry about drinking.

The leadership to end discrimination and segregation will certainly not come from Syracuse University graduates—they don't know what the "Real Issue" is?

the direction of Bartold a Brecht play with the company of the Theater Nationale Populaire.

After spending his two and one-half years abroad, Shaktman returned to the U.S., where he went on tour to visit university and community theaters in the East for the American National Theater Association.

"Sisters" was written in 1900 and is a commentary on the inner family frustrations that result when its members find that their long-cherished hopes for the future are only dreams.

Shaktman has said of the play, "I was struck by the scattered dialogue, rapid alternation of thoughts, many deliberate pauses, and the sudden comming together of richly worded emotional climaxes."

Members of the cast include Lenore Canter, recent SU graduate, as Masha, one of the sisters; Nessa Tyams, a senior in the Hill Drama Department, as Irena, another sister; and Millicent Sovik a former instructor of the Drama Department, as the third, Natasha.

Also playing are Al Ross as Andrey, brother of the three sisters; Andrew Goodwin as Koolyghin and Len Allen, regular WQSR-radio announcer as Valdimir Rode.

Producer of "Three Sisters" is Robert D. Bergeron and producing director is G. F. Reidenbaugh, acting chairman of the Hill drama department. Barbara Tyndall is production-stage manager and Carol (Schultze) Lucia, Hill student government vice president, is stage manager.

Tickets for the play are $1.50 and $2 at the box office of the University Regent Theater 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. thru Friday and noon to 6 p.m. Saturday.

The prize winning anthem or motet on a sacred text will be written for the Chapel Choir and will be included in its repertory next season. The Chapel Choir will appear at the April 21 concert as guests of the SU Singers to give the first public performance of "Hosannah to the Son of David" by Earl George.

Over seventy original unpublished compositions for unaccompanied chorus were submitted by composers from every part of the U.S. as well as from Paris and Vienna.

Judges in the competition were School of Music faculty members Arthur Poister, Joseph McGrath and Will O. Headlee. Earl George, Chairman of the School of Music's Festival Committee, and J. Curtis Shake, assistant professor of music, assisted in the preliminary screening of the music.

Jazz Festival?

Ask Chester 'C'

Will the city of Syracuse support a jazz festival? A Syracuse disc jockey thinks so but wants to find out for sure before he attempts to promote such a venture.

Chester Whiteside, disc jockey on WQSR, thinks the city and the university, in particular, need and want a jazz festival featuring local talent.

Whiteside, who has a weekend jazz spot on WQSR, admits a festival is a big undertaking and cannot plan it until he is sure of support. Therefore, he requests anyone interested in either attending or participating in a Syracuse Jazz Festival to contact him at WQSR, 1020 Hiawatha Blvd., Solvay.

department of religion, which "indicates that students are seeking and probing."

He has also found, since he came to Syracuse, a greater interest on the part of students in kosher Passover meals, but does not feel there is any greater interest in attendance at services.

"Jewish students are no different from others. When faced with the choice of a basketball game, Student Union night, carnival or services on Friday night, their decision may not be for services," he noted.

Need Problems

"But students need to be faced with the problem of making choices and allocating their time," the rabbi continued.

Students are faced with the same decisions when they decide to take non-credit courses offered by the Chapel, he said.

Hillel offers courses in Hebrew, Bible, Jewish thought, rabbinic literature, Jewish faith in practice and basic Judaism.

The last two courses, Rabbi Neimand said, have been "very popular."

He said the weekly classes will probably be continued next year under the new rabbi.

"Classes are a natural part of the standard Hillel programs, since we're interested in education and Jewish culture," he commented.

He does not foresee any change in present arrangements for kosher students.

Other Interests

Rabbi Neimand's outside interests, notably reading and art, have helped him in setting up exhibits on campus. At present, a collection of Passover objects and literature is on display in the lobby of the main library.

During the past semester, displays of Israeli stamps, Jewish ceremonial objects and American Jewish historical objects and literature have been shown in the Chapel Colonial Room.

Rabbi Neimand has no specific plans yet for Oregon, saying any new programs "will have to be designed to meet the needs of individual situations."

Briz or Brzyzyzenski, Ron's CAP President

By a 16-14 vote of its candidates, Campus Alliance Party has a president named Ron Brzezinski.

No less than 14 of the 30 CAP candidates misspelled the Polish name on their petitions to run for office, where a space is provided for a listing of party officials.

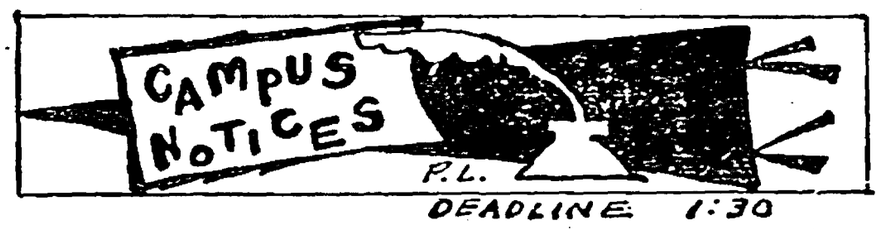
To add to the confusion, Vice President William Gedalecia's name was also misspelled 14 times. Secretary Dawn Fazzone was the victim of eight errors, but Treasurer Gerald Matlin batted 100 per cent correct with those persons who listed his name.

Variations on the president's name ranged from five spellings of the near-perfect "Brezinski" to the person who gave up and scratched out "Ron Br" and left the space blank.

Two persons made a valiant effort, listing "Ron Briz," but one long-winded candidate listed "Ron Brzyzyzenski." The other spellings were reasonable facsimiles.

The vice president had similar troubles, including two persons who wrote "Bill Gad" and one who listed "Bill G" Spellings ranged from "Gatalatia" to "Gedalechia" and "Gediliesha."

Miss Fazzone had only one major misspelling, by the candidate who listed the secretary as "Don Fazzone." Mistakes on the last name ranged from "Frison" to "Frozini" and "Frazzone."



Regardless of spellings, CAP was the only one of the three campus parties to have all its 30 candidates turn in completed petitions before the deadline.

The rate of misspelling was near zero on the names of rival party officials Taylor, Shapiro and Gray.

SU Gains Collection on Dancer

A $40,000 collection of books, manuscripts and archival materials about Adolph Bolm, choreographer and ballet dancer, has been donated to the university library by Madame Beata Bolm, Library Director Wayne S. Yenawine announced today.

Included in the collections are original ballet paintings, drawings and illustrations which will be on display in Lowe Art Center.

The 187 books, which are mainly unusual editions presented to Bolm by the authors, will be placed in the Arents Rare Book Room in the main library, the Lowe Art Center and the library stacks.

The archival material consists of letters to and from Bolm and manuscripts of various ballet arrangements presented to him during his residence in the United States.

Col. Martin Kamin, dance and theater authority and a member of Syracuse University Library Associates, is responsible for the donation. Col. Kamin has been a friend of the Bolm family for 40 years.

Kamin valued the collection sent from Hollywood to Syracuse in 12 50-pound boxes, at over $40,000.

Bolm, born in St. Petersburg, Russia, in 1884, died in Hollywood in 1951. He had lived in Hollywood since 1928.

He attended the Imperial Ballet School in Petrograd, Russia, from which he was graduated with first class honors.

After touring with Anna Pavlova, he joined the Daighileff Ballet as dancer and ballet master. In 1917, the company performed in Syracuse.

Bolm remained in the U.S. and devoted his career to American ballet.

US, GIA Candidates Set Platform

US

The two candidates made the announcements of their platform at a banquet of US officers, delegates and candidates Wednesday evening at Drumlins Country Club.

Communications

Harfenist said he agrees with Dean of Men Earle W. Clifford's statement at the Fall Pinebrook conference that student government can only be effective and take action when it has solved its major problem: communication.

Harfenist listed a seven-point program by which he and Miss Wiltse hope to eliminate the problem of communications, and thereby have student government become more effective.

The platform included:

1. A continuation of the student government column in the Daily Orange, including in each week's article what student government is doing during the week. On the day following the article's publication, he called for an open "press conference" of the president, speaker of the legislature and chief justice of the court so that any student may discuss any problems with the officers.

Closeness

2. A program to "bring the whole university together." Harfenist said this could be done by a party-hopping weekend, when Greek houses and dormitories would sponsor parties open to the entire campus. He said this event would try to bring commuting students closer to the university.

He also recommends a series of faculty and outside lectures, so that students can become more closely acquainted with university personnel.

3. Harfenist said he will investigate the possibility of attaining library stacks privileges for all students with a 2.0 cumulative average.

Mixers

5. A series of "international information mixers", where students could meet international students and inquire about the various ways of life encountered in other nations.

6. A monthly meeting of delegates to the fall Pinebrook conference. Harfenist said this group will discuss the current problems of the campus, and attempt to maintain the "spirit of Pinebrook."

7. A "State of Student Government" message delivered to the legislature by the new president soon after his election. Harfenist said the new president would point out what the past administration had accomplished, and add what he hoped to do in his term of office.

can the class as a whole show that it wants and needs representation."

Moffett said that he will, if elected, establish a committee as an outgrowth of the sophomore class executive council to investigate the problem of representation. He said the committee would "actively" seek an answer to the problem."

Slate

He is running independently, along with Patricia Ettkin, Rosliand "Rose" Yuen, and Mark Samuel. The group walked out of the pre-vacation United Students party convention after Moffett was defeated for the presidential nomination. The four said they felt they were qualified and wanted to run together.

Moffett called for an extensive sophomore weekend program, including "bigger and better" entertainment. He recommends that the semi-formal dance be dropped unless a suitable location can be obtained.

He also said that the school should "find the missing link with its alumni." He said that he would attempt to bring the alumni into closer association with the university, possibly by luncheons in large cities during vacations so that alumni may meet students and be brought up to date on their alma mater.

Incoming Frosh

He also recommended a series of luncheons so that prospective freshmen can meet with students and alumni. Moffett cited the upcoming "Boston the independents on the campus.

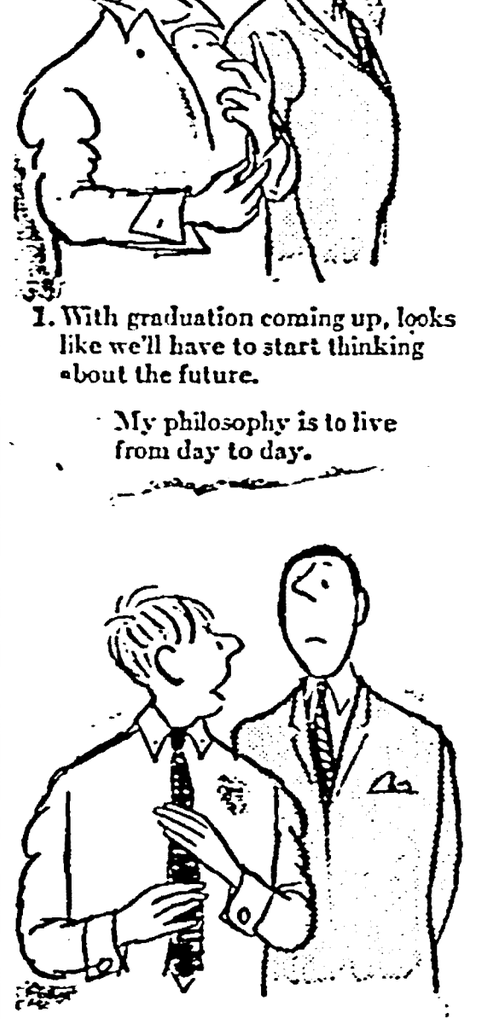
They suggested a cup or trophy, similar to those awarded to sororities and fraternities, for achievement in scholastic and extra curricular endeavors.

Better public relations between students, student government and the public is also necessary, they said. Articles in the Syracuse papers, the Alumni News and continuation of the JSG column in the Daily Orange are needed.

A regional conference of universities would not only bring recognition to SU but would acquaint this campus with student government activities and projects and ideas for the student union, from such schools as Cornell, Hamilton and Colgate, said Miss Wurthner.

Hadnagy advocated a revamping of the Student Court judicial code to clearly define procedures and penalties.



Other ideas include a frosh pamphlet to acquaint incoming students with student government and its activities. A postcard would be included so those interested could submit their names to the officers, providing a working list of freshmen at the beginning of the fall semester.

James Gray, GIA president, said the party will continue to support the new JSG constitution.

"I don't believe GIA is an underdog in this election. We intend to put on a strong campaign," he said.

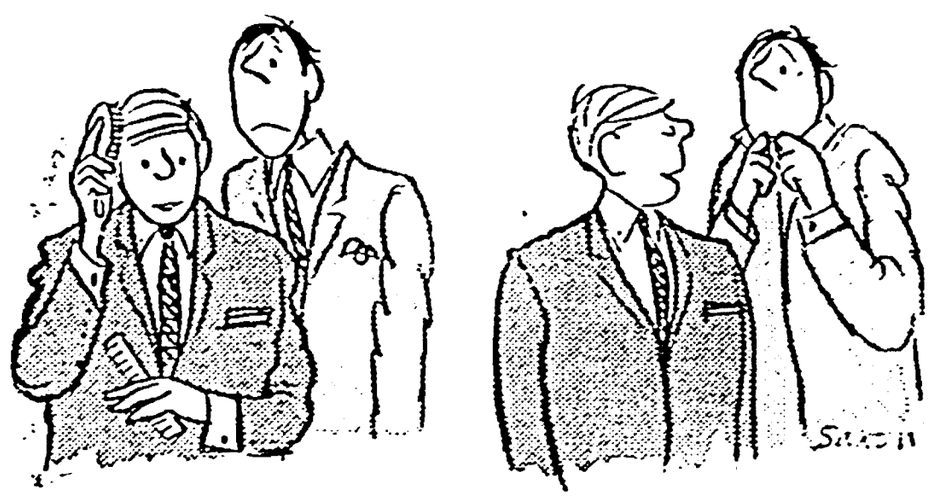
1. With graduation coming up, looks like we'll have to start thinking about the future.

My philosophy is to live from day to day.

2. That's fine when you have no responsibilities. But chances are you'll have a wife to think about soon.

I may just decide to lead the bachelor life.



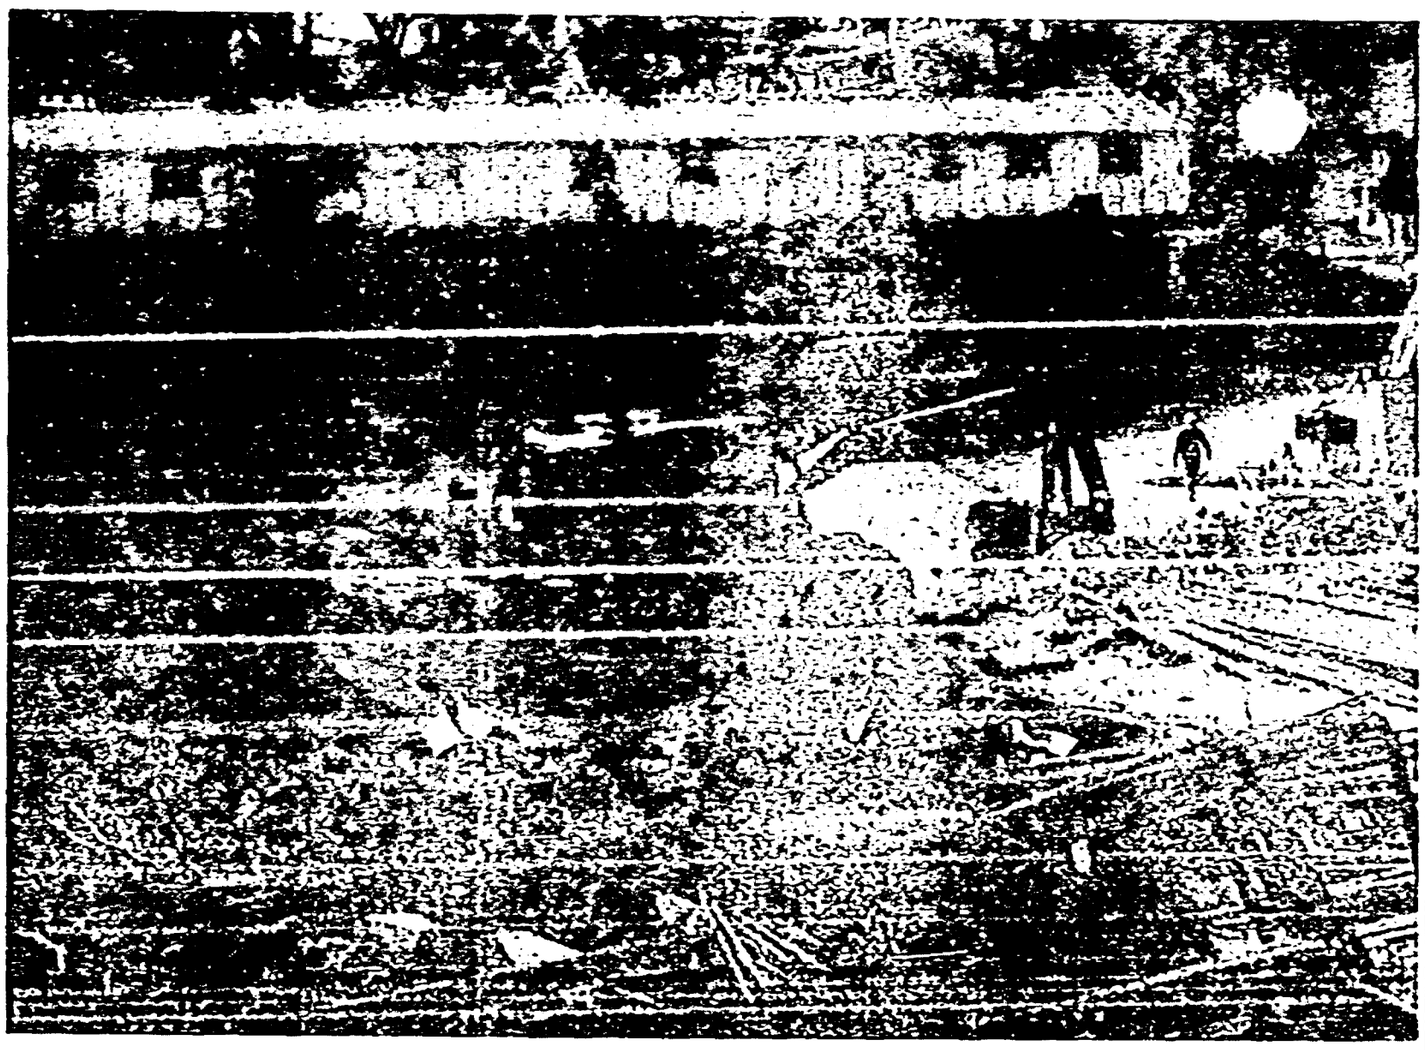
3. Hardly likely, since 93 per cent of all men and women get married.

Is that so?

4. Yes, indeed. What's more, you'll have children to consider.

Maybe we won't have any.

5. I doubt that—after all, 90 per cent of the women who get married today have children. And, on the average, they have all their children before they're 27.



All my life I've shirked responsibility. Have a ball, enjoy yourself—that's my motto. Now, in two minutes, you've given me a wife and who knows how many children to take care of. What should I do? Where do I begin?

6. First relax. Then look into some good insurance... like Living Insurance from Equitable. It gives the kind of protection every family should have. Helps you save for the future, too. And don't worry—your chances for a happy family life are very good.

I should never have roomed with a statistics major.

Phone Book Shows Hendricks

Syracuse area residents who use their telephone directory will find a sketch of Hendricks Chapel on the dark green cover.

According to Sandy Bossard, New York Telephone Co. service representative, the Chapel was chosen so "a place of significance, which people will remember, will be pictured."

Last year, the courthouse was on the cover. A university building was chosen this year, Miss Bossard said, "because SU is so important to the city."

An artist in the phone company's New York City office made the sketch from a drawing loaned by Dean Kenneth G. Bartlett. Hill vice president for public affairs.

Miss Boassard said about 225,000 copies of the directory have been distributed.

A story about the Chapel on page nine of the directory says, "Hendricks Memorial Chapel, geopraphical center of Syracuse University, was dedicated in June, 1930, exactly one year after cornerstone laying ceremonies. Donated by the late Sen. Francis Hendricks in memory of his wife, Mrs. Eliza Jane Hendricks, the chapel is patterned after Jefferson's Monticello. The Georgian colonial brick and limestone structure is on the west side of the university's main quadrangle."

The article also gives information about the chapel's facilities and the history of the university.

There will be a lecture for women at 7 p.m. and a lecture for men at 8:30 p.m. today. Friday's conferences will be at 4, 7and 8:30 p.m.

Saturday morning's lectures for women will be from 8:30-11:30 a.m. and for men from 1:30-4:30 p.m. These final conferences of the Retreat will be followed by Mass at 4:30 p.m. Each of the three day conferences will be presented by Fr. McDermott.

The Communion Breakfast at Drumlins Country Club will climax the weekend's activities. Highlight of the breakfast will be the speech by Dr. Sawyer. Toastmaster for the breakfast to follow 11 a.m. Mass Sunday will be Syracuse senior Joseph Leonard.

Catholic faculty members and their families have received special invitations.

Entertainment for the breakfast will feature the Pompeian Players in excerpts from their up-coming production of "The Music Man."

Cubs Boast Nothing New; Destined for 2nd Division

By VIN ZUKOWSKI

All Cubs and no "Papa Bear" spells for another cellar finish. That is the consensus of opinion among most baseball analysts—sports writers in the off-season—in predicting 10th place for the Chicago Cubs.

Confirming this opinion is the fact that Ernie Banks is still "untouchably" a Cub. The scribes believe that no matter how great his effort, Banks is doomed to play for a lowly club—it's purely subjective.

However, the analysts are now considering the appointment of Bob Kennedy as Chairman of the Cubs' 13-man Board of Coaches. Not only does Chairman Kennedy have his name working for him and emphasizing his leadership qualities, but also he is the same nationality as Joe McCarthy. McCarthy led the Cubs from the doldrums years before the Cubs weren't synonymous with eighth place.

Kennedy has only one year of managing experience (a second place finish in Salt Lake City) to add to his twenty years as a player.

Although the players are believed to feel "insecure" under P. K. Wrigley's rotating coaches, the Cubs may have enough individuals capable of overcoming their psychological weaknesses to lead the second division. Kennedy has sixth place as a goal, and this includes finishing above the Phillies and Braves.

Loads of Youth

Taken materially, however, the lowly Bruins through trades and a heavy youth development program have come up with one of the league's strongest pitching staffs. Leading Cub hurler in '62, Bob Buhl won 12 of 25 decisions while compiling a 3.69 ERA, which is not bad for a Milwaukee cast-off.

Splitting 20 decisions, 22-year old Cal Koonce compiled a 3.96 ERA in his first full year in the big time. Glen Hobbie, 27-year old vet, tailed off to a 5-14 record in '62. However, spring performances indicate that his early trouble is past tense and that he may be able to regain his '61 form as Cub ace.

From the Cardinals, Wrigley acquired the right arm and body thereunto attached to starter Larry Jackson. Jackson, 16-11 and ERA 3.75, came with relief-star Lindy McDaniel.

McDaniel, relatively ineffective in '62, was promptly traded by the Cards without concern of previous extinguishing proficiency.

Don Elston (57 games) and Barney Schultz, a knuckle balled with 51 appearances, were the two Cub bull-pen aces last year.

Top minor league prospect Freddie Burdette will add strength on the basis of his effective 73 reliefs in '62 at San Antonio and Chicago.

No Lefties

The pitching is pretty imposing. But all eight named are right-handed. The only two lefties are Dick Ellsworth, ace Cub starter in spite of twenty losses, and recently acquired Dick LeMay. As a starter-reliever at Tacoma in '62, LeMay was 10-4 and 3.29.

The Cubs have more than a pitching staff. They have a set infield. Ernie Banks will guard the initial sack. Ten years and 335 homers are Banks' credentials. An eye injury nearly ended his career but did succeed in reducing his effectiveness—last year only 37 round-trippers and 104 RBI's. Banks(formerly a good-fielding shortstop, should be able to handle himself around first defensively.

Doubleplay

Up the middle, Ken Hubbs from a nifty DP combination with Andre Rodgers. Rookie-of-the-Year Hubbs set the record for most chances handled consecutively without an error by a second-baseman; his 172 hits were good enough for a .260 batting average. Rodgers, former cricket phenom, finally made it a short. Speedy Andre hit .278 as Cub starter.

At the hot-corner, young Ron Santo has his position nailed down with a glove and bat. Slick-fielding Santo batted only .227 in '62 but his 17 four-masters and drove in 83 runs. In '61 Santo batted .284, and at 23 is hailed as another Frank Malzone or Clete Boyer.

Over-balanced

Once again, the Cubs are over-balanced. The four starting infielders bat right-handed. The top three catchers only exaggerate the condition. Leading candidate Dick Betrell hit .302 in 77 games batting right-handed.

Jim Schaffer hit right-handedly .242 in 66 at bats for St. Louis. Third stringer Cuno Barragan "hit" .201—righthanded of course, though it may not matter for Cuno.

Top Prospect

Mathews is considered a top prospect on the basis of his .368-with-power average at class-B Wenatchee. Mathews had failed to stick with Salt Lake at the season's start, but after his Wenatchee performance made the parent club for 15 games. He hit .306 with 13 RBI's.

Philanthropist Wrigley has the money to experiment—proven by the trading of 20-year old, $125,000 bonus baby Danny Murphy. He can afford 13 coaches an expensive youth movement, a 600,000 attendance, and a team that has finished out of the first division money for the past 17 years. And that's how expensive sixth place in 1963 will be for the Chicago Cubs.

Orange Observations

By ALLAN KORT

Sports Editor

Today the sporting world is convicting Paul Bryant of the most dastardly crimes imaginable; a sporting fix.

Radio stations and newspapers throughout the country are giving Bryant stories top rating; wire services are filling the wires with stories about the scandal; and the states of Georgia and Alabama are seeking indictment evidence.

One of the biggest controversies since the Chicago Black Sox scandal of 1919, the Bryant story has swirled up over a phone call made by former Georgia Athletic Director Wallace Butts to Alabama Coach Paul "Bear" Bryant.

A national magazine reported that Butts gave Georgia team secrets to Bryant. Both men denied the report, but Butts "resigned" from his post.

Alabama won the game, 35-0, and went out to a 9-1 record, losing only an upset contest to Georgia Tech. The 1961 National Champions were a better team than Georgia and won.

The call, on Sept. 14, 1962, at one dollar and fifteen cents, was reportedly overheard by an insurance salesman. He and the magazine are being sued for $10 million.

Butts has just about been convicted. The Georgia attorney general contends Butts made the call and has been connected with gamblers.

Butts and Bryant, in an attempt to prove their innocence took a lie detector test and passed. The salesman also took the test and passed. So, somebody's lying but why the "Bear?"

Bryant is a giant in the coaching profession, having reached his climax in 1961 when his Crimson Tide won the national championship. Newspapers, magazines and radio stations are crucifying Bryant for worse deeds than occurred in the Black Sox Scandal.

But what did Bryant do, if anything. Maybe, these two men—longtime friends as well as rival coaches—were simply exchanging chit chat before a big game hoping for the other to leak out some information.

Or maybe Butts was giving info to Bryant—but why. Alabama was already a 22-point favorite to win the game and would have trampoled mediocre Georgia without knowing Georgia plays.

Whatever happened, Bryant may have listened to Butts' supposed information, but who wouldn't? But furthermore, any information Butts could have given was probabiy found out through scouting the team.

Bryant may have acted somewhat unethically, but he has not been accused of any crime and hasn't been connected with gamblers. So why should a coach that is endeared by so many be the sole convict of a tinted system!

When the final event had been completed the score gave Michigan State the national championship with 129 points. Southern Illinois was second with 73, Iowa was third with 33½, Syracuse fourth with 32, and Penn State was fifth with 31½.

NCCA officials, however, yesterday in recounting the totals noticed that five points won by Iowa State had been credited to the University of Iowa, giving the Hawkeyes third spot.

In the recount, however, Iowa was demoted to fifth, while Syracuse moved up to third and Penn State assumed the fourth spot.

Fern Named to 'On'; Editor Waits Ruling

Robert (Ratsy) Fern has been elected business manager of the Onondagan for the year 1963-64 by the Hill Board of Publications.

Fern defeated Leslie Greenfield for the post.

Discussion and interviewing of candidates for editor-in-chief of the 'ON' were also conducted in the Thursday meeting.

Election of the editor was postponed for a week, according to dean of the School of Journalism, Dr. Wesley C. Clark, because clarification of part of the Board's new constitution is needed.

Clark, chairman of the Board of Publications, and Edmund C. Arnold, advisor to the yearbook, said it is necessary to check on the eligibility of an editor who would be a junior next year.

Kathleen Arnold and Charles Steinberg are applicants for the editorship. Miss Arnold, Prof. Arnold's daughtter, is a sophomore. Steinberg is a junior.

Fern, a junior enrolled in the College of Liberal Arts, is an English major with a 1.9 average.

A resident of Flatbush, he was copy editor of the 'ON' this year. He said he will attempt to sell "10,000 yearbooks" for the coming year.

Fern, interested in drama, played in a campus production of "Baby Doll."

Personnel Group Tables Constitution for New 'SG'

The new student government constitution will not be voted on in the April 11 campus elections.

Meeting Thursday, the university Personnel Committee withheld its approval of the new constitution, thus preventing its appearance on the ballot.

No action was taken by the committee because of disagreement on various sections of the constitution, especially on the right of candidates to petition the government cabinet to run for office if they lack requirements, said Joint Student Legislature Speaker Ronald Mittleman Thursday.

A subcommittee has been set up to iron out these differences, and it is hoped Personnel Committee will approve the revised constitution at its next meeting, the second week of May, Mittleman said.

Members of the subcommittee include: Mittleman, chairman; Jim G. Carleton, director of financial aid; Edwin D. Smith, registrar; Marjorie C. Smith, dean of women; and Earle W. Clifford, dean of men.

These members also are regular members of Personnel Committee. In addition, Mittleman will choose several representatives from the legislature to work on the subcommittee.

If there is time before dead week, a special referendum will be held for students to vote on the constitution so it can go into operation next year, Mittleman said.

In the meantime all elections Joint Student Government, class and JSL, will be run according to the old constitution, he added.

Miss Semple, currently a junior class senator-at-large in the legislature, has a 1.6 cumulative average. She headed the subcommittee which rewrote the legislative portion of the student government constitution now pending in Personnel Committee.

Campaigns Open Saturday

Campaigning opens at noon Saturday as 99 candidates begin the five-day ordeal leading to Thursday's campus elections.

Campaign chairman of the three campus political parties pledged strong campaigns featuring the traditional twisters, along with several new twists.

United Students party spokesman David Hartman said, "US pledges to campaign vigorously in order to show the qualifications and abilities of its candidates."

Greek Independent Alliance campaign chairman David Knickerbocker said GIA will put on "a very vigorous campaign." He added GIA will campaign on a room-to-room basis.

Campus Alliance Party spokesman Susan Chalkin commented, "We're going to give them everything we have."

All three parties announced plans for campaign twisters. US said it has planned twisters tentatively for 3-5 p.m. Saturday in Day Hall, as well as 3-5 p.m. Monday in Flint Hall. GIA has scheduled a twister for Tuesday afternoon in Flint, while CAP has plans for a twister from 3-5 p.m. Wednesday in Flint.

CAP also announced it is planning a car parade for Saturday to kick off its campaign. The procession will start at 2 p.m. from Slocum Hall, and move to Mount Olympus and the remainder of the campus area, ending back at Slocum. from where CAP candidates will begin distribution of campaign material.

About Change ---And Dollars

It snowed in Syracuse Thursday afternoon so we had the chance to sit in our office and contemplate change. The weather changes, the events of the world change, the names in the news change, and times change.

Then we picked up our volume of last year's Daily Orange and thumbed through it, as we often do when the weather is bad and we like to reminisce.

It was then that we came across a story that got us to thinking: "No Tuition Raise, Says Chancellor." That was the big story one day last spring, when the university decided they would stop its annual tuition raise.

The 1962-63 budget had been balanced and so only a small upward adjustment in room and board rates would have to be made to meet longer semesters and to "improve the facilities in both areas."

And then it hit us: that was last year, but what can we expect next year? Of course, we have no sure way of knowing right now but we expect that we will see another hike in tuition after last year's grace period.

So as the snow kept blowing and whirling in front of our window, we kept thinking about it and decided finally that we will see a fairly good-sized hike, maybe in the area of $1,500 per year.

Presently, the tuition rate is $685 per semester, or $1370 per year. The logical next step would be to an even $1500. Which led us to our next thought: Isn't it nice that college is a four-year proposition because the longer you stay, the weaker your financial status is apt to become.

And we said before that times do change. If you want an example, do you know how much it cost to attend Syracuse Universtiy in 1954? Tuition for undergraduates in that year was $700 per year.

But of course we have seen quite a growth in Syracuse in that short space of time: new buildings, new professors, improved student body and general boosting of the school's reputation.

Our sister institutions have been paving the way to the high cost of education and it is only natural that you get what you pay for. So get those check books ready and plan on a hike.

Good things don't happen two years in a row.

Poems by Gill

By Stephanie Brill

Smiling genially, David Gill, musician, painter and future teacher of aesthetics spoke of his poetry. Writing poetry since the fourth grade, Gill studied poetry writing in high school and then last spring with Associate Professor of English Phillip Booth.

"I work best when I have been defeated, then I rise," explained the poet who changed his style drastically with last year's poem, "History."

"I used to write a kind of metaphysical, tight poetry of private symbols — a fault found in most amateur poetry," he commented.

"In 'History' I first replaced personal symbolism with an opinionated wit in order to spoof the D.A.R." he reflected.

Apparently the key to this humor is a sort of sarcastic "juxtaposition of ideas." Thus he speaks of immense terrors like "a big bomb shot . . . off loudly in a Pacific spot" and relates it, through sarcasm, to an irrelevant detail like "athlete's foot . . . (that) grew quietly in my toes."

"It causes the kind of laughter with a lump in your throat that comes when one is at the dividing line between tragedy and comedy," he admitted.

When asked to explain further, the music student illustrated with his own experience at registration last fall. After an extremely harrowing day of lines and confusion he found himself half way between the Field House and campus.

"I had to walk the rest of the way in a madras jacket," he muttered "and then it began to rain."

Turning to his other interests, Gill explained that he is studying piano as a special graduate student in the School of Music.

"I originally applied to the School of Architecture," he laughed "but when Mr. Capurso, former director of the School of Music came to my high school, a talk with him changed that."

Although always interested in music, and having had no previous lessons, Gill, nevertheless, managed to play the first movement of Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata" by ear for the director. Two weeks later the music school accepted him and the prospective architect became a prospective music education major, with a minor in piano.

The placidly humorous young man then served as president of the Glee Club, president of the Music Education Club and was a member of Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia, the music honorary. He was also vice president of Beta Theta Pi, social fraternity.

At present he studies piano for graduate credit and works part time at the Mount Olympus book store.

If you go to the concert of the Syracuse University Singers, or of their associate Madrigal Group during the Festival of Arts and see a tall thin boy with light brown hair among them, it will probably be David Gill, for he is a member of these groups as well.

In addition to his interest in music is his interest in art, both subjects he hopes to teach on the high school or college level.

A painter as well, Gill exhibited seascape, done in oils, at the Ridgewood Art Exhibit, while his poetry and short stories appeared in his high school literary magazine.

Utilizing his artistic abilities, recently, he painted a 30' by 40' abstract for the living room wall when his family moved to Middletown, New Jersey. Although his parents "didn't like it" a musician friends did, and is now its owner.

History

Was a tree
(in Hoboken,
I think),
was a tree historic;
no abundant foliage (from age);
its thick, old trunk filled with portland cement, but,
still,
a tree with history.

And when they said a road was coming through upon its rooting spot, the award-giving ladies arose in grave patriotism, and became a fleshy phalanx of resistance to the roadmen's axes;
encircling the thick,
old trunk around:
hand in hand protecting their beloved tree;
upon whose dumb trunk a Hessian's dog historically once urinated, and below whose senseless boughs
a girl (of the great Revolution) patriotically lost her virginity.

corrupt with morning-mouth, and unfit for the bowl of Wheaties
in the breakfast nook.

I have got up into another day of witless activities:

What I need is someone with sympathies:
had you, my love,
been here,
I would be brave.

Poem From an Overcast Groundrog's Day

Still another spring and the two-billionth pride of anxious buds and birds gets critically froze in the two-billionth accidental snow:

a difficult arrival
for an easy calendar.

We Were a Pair

then,
she and I: openly loving to a vow of cosmic scope and sorts
for 2years3months
12 days
(and privately for a bonus month or so.)

And people said:
my, weren't we the keen couple, and, oh,
we obliged by being most marvey until it ended, and she went away in violation of our two-odd-leaving me with the mere consolation

Awakenings

Today is Monday, and the refrigerator turns off and on
salutation
in the hot dawn.

I snored out the night,
the Sunday sludge;
with the athlete's foot grew quietly in my toes, and a big bomb shot off loudly in a Pacific spot, but I remain inert on my hot bet: surmising

how usually my neighbors must be rising into the radioactive morning:
puffing from their pre-breakfast exercises in the hot, Monday air.

IFC Queen

To the Editor:

It has been brought to my attention that IFC Weekend will this year have a queen. This in itself is all well and good, and probably something that should have been started years ago.

However, I also noted this queen is to be chosen solely on the basis of her looks (a fact blatantly spelled out in the entry form which emphasized she need not have a brain in her head nor a pleasant personality nor an admirable character).

Also, she must be a sorority girl, said the form.

This is indeed a sad commentary on the fraternity system and the university as whole. Judging a queen contest solely on superfiical qualities is indeed a step backwards (practically all of them now incorporate it with other criteria), and, to paraphrase John Greenwald, the Greeks aren't the only (or the most) attractive girls on campus.

THIS WEEKEND

Concerts Movies

RIVIERA—Top double bill this week. First the French anthology, "The 7 Capital Sins." That's right seven—count 'em—anger, envy, gluttony, lust, laziness, pride and greed. And those are just the capital ones, the misdemeanors come later. Catch it quick though, before the censor gets to it: These are the French sins. England has some sinners of its own, and Peter Finch, aspiring politician, is one, as he tries to bind his career and his love life together. "No Love for Johnny" is the title of this top notcher. Weekend recommends it for all campus politicians, it's kind of an Anglophile version of Ellis Gaskell. "Sins" at 6:45 & 10:20 p.m. "Johnny" at 8:40 p.m.

KEITH'S — Edgar Allan Poe's probably turning over in his grave after seeing the latest filming of his works, this one being "The Raven." He won't be turning over from disgust though, rather from laughter. Vincent Price, Peter Lorre and Boris Karloff star in this outrageous mixing of slapstick and horror in hilarious gaudy color. Also on the bill is "The Amazing Transparent Man," whom we couldn't see. "Rave" at 8:20 & 11:20 p.m. "Trans" at 7:15 & 9:15 p.m.

SHOPPINGTOWN — H M S Bounty is still riding the rolling seas at DeWitt. Marlin Brando's still swishing as Trevor Howard swashes and Weekend slushes in Syracuse. "Mutiny on the Bounty" still begins at 8 p.m.

LOEW'S — Kirk Douglas attempts another action film with a message, "The Hook." As the chestnut goes, "If you got a message send a telegram." "Tunnel 28," though obstensably about Berlin, is really a documentary of how they built Shoppingtown. "Hook" at 6:19 & 9:41 p.m. "28" at 8:05 p.m.

PARAMOUNT — The birds is coming. That's right, on April 11 that Hitchcock thriller will be at the Paramount. But, at the moment, "The Lion" is here with William Holden and Trevor Howard, not to mention Capucine, which we thought was a drink. "Lots of snarls and stuff" at 7 & 9:15 p.m.

ECKEL—This is the story of a war. It is a big war. Men fight. Men die. More bad men (Germans) die than good men (Allies). This is good for democracy, because at the beginning they play the national anthem. In the German version of the film they play old Nazi drinking songs. "Oy What A Long Day" at 8:15.

Theater Radio-TV

ON STAGE

FILM SHOWING and lecture on "Contemporary Cinematographic Tendencies" by Daniel Lines, film magazine writer. Movie will be "Mexican Paintings and Murals" at 7:30 p.m. today at Chapel House.

CHAMBER RECITAL by the Syracuse Friends of Chamber Music featuring Richard Burgin associate conductor of the Boston Symphony as soloist and conductor of works by Bach, Mozart, Wagner, Stravinsky and Copland. At 8:30 p.m. Saturday at the Everson Museum.

SENIOR RECITAL by pianist Stuart Lanning playing keyboard favorites by Copland, Mozart, Bach and Chopin. At 4 p.m. in the Crouse College auditorium.

SADLER HALL, of all places, is bringing culture to the masses in the form of "The Best of Boar's Head," a bill of some of the funniest one-acts done on the Hill: "Phoenix Too Frequent," "A Maid to Marry," "The Fisherman" and "On the Harmfulness of Tobacco." That "American Dream" couple, Marion Present and Peter Maloney conclude this no-admission-charged romp with "The Lunatics," 8:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

Keating in Hendricks

Keating is up for re-election next year. He has been a persistent critic of President Kennedy's handling of the Cuban affair.

The purpose of the conference is promotion of interest in citizenship study and recognition of outstanding high school students. Schools from all parts of New York State—except New York City and Long Island—will be represented.

Keating was elected to the U.S. Senate in 1958 following 12 years in the House of Representatives. Born in Lima, New York in 1900, he graduated from the University of Rochester and the Harvard Law School.

Committees

The senator presently serves on the following Senate Committees; judiciary, aeronautical and space sciences, special committee on aging, and the Republican policy committee.

Keating serves on several subcommittees and is the holder of a number of honorary degrees, awards and citations.

He served in the House from the 80th through the 85th Congresses, working on the House Judiciary Committee and the Anti-trust and Department of Justice investigation subcommittees.

Conference delegates will be separated into small workshops most of the day for discussion of conflicting loyalties, freedom of expression and freedoms and security.

Art Show Set At St. T-More

[illegible] Marie Alexander, a junior fine arts major, will exhibit five paintings and about 50 prints in a show 2-8 p.m. Sunday in St. Thomas More Chapel.

The paintings and prints, which include etchings, lithographs and wood cuts, portray concepts of religious art.

The works depict Old and New Testament scenes.

The exhibit is open to the public.

GOON SQUAD INTERVIEWS

Applicants for Goon Squad, with names beginning T-Z, plus all who have not yet been interviewed, will be interviewed from 3 to 5:30 and 7 to 9:15 p.m. today. This is the last day of the interviews, according to Traditions Commission.

Cottage Adds Dorm Council

Reid Cottage was added to dorm council at the Association of Women Students meeting Wednesday. It is the tenth living center to be added this year.

Marilyn Burke, AWS president, said coeds who have not taken campuses for late minutes acquired before March 1 must take 8 p.m. curfews next we[illegible] and will be assigned the n[illegible] for their campuses.

The date of the next meeting, when new officers will be installed, has been changed from April 17 to 18.

Houses on dorm council have more self-governing powers than other living centers. Each house under this system has its own constitution and a board to hear cases and impose penalties on its residents.

Result: Ford-built cars demonstrate outstanding durability in competitions like the Daytona 500

Results of recent competitive events prove dramatically the durability and reliability of today's Ford-built cars. Our cars swept the first five places in the Daytona 500 for example. More important to you—Ford-built entries had the highest ratio of finishers in this grueling test of stamina! Less than half—just 23—of the 50 starters finished; 13 of them were Ford-built!

Competitions such as the Daytona 500 are car killers. Piston rings can fail, transmissions can be demolished and engines blow up under these maximum efforts. It's a grinding demand for total performance and Ford-built cars proved they could take it better than any of the others.

Quite an eye-opener for car buyers. And conclusive proof that superior engineering at Ford Motor Company has produced more rugged engines and transmissions, sturdier bodies and frames and better all-round durability for today's Ford-built automobiles.

Entering Frosh Required to Take Three CEEB Achievement Tests

By SANDY MYERS

Beginning next year applicants to three Hill colleges will be required to take College Board achievement tests as well as aptitude tests, John S. Hafer, dean of personnel aminis-tration and admissions, said Thrusday.

Candidates for the College of Liberal Arts, School of Architecture and College of Engineering will take the English composition test and any two others.

Achievement tests offered by the College Entrance Examination Board include intermediate and advanced mathematics, biology, chemistry, physics, French, German, Latin, Spanish, Greek and Italian.

Scores from the achievement tests will be used for placement, Dean Hafer said.

At present, College Board aptitude test scores are used as a basis for freshman membership in the Committee on Special Opportunities. Placement in English honors sections is based on verbal aptitude scores and high school performance.

Dean Hafer said additional honors programs are being planned for the future. The English and citizenship departments now have honors courses for freshmen.

College Board examinations are more widely used today than ever before, Dean Hafer, one of 21 CEEB trustees, said.

"College Board tests are seldom, if ever, used as sole criterion for admission to college. They are used in relation to other evidence offered in support of an application," he noted.

"If a student's ability, as measured by standard tests, is below the average of college-level ability, there is an academic risk involved in admitting him even if he has good high school grades, Dean Hafer continued.

Low Board scores do not deny a student admission to all colleges, but restrict the number of schools open to him, the dean commented.

"Without question, students are on a higher level now," Dean Hafer said. He attributes the higher caliber of students to greater selectivity, since colleges get many more applications than they can accept.

The College Board is made up of 427 colleges, 126 secondary schools and 41 educational associations as of September 1962.

Greek Week Features

dinners.

Greek Week 1963 turns social Friday with the Greek Week Ball in the Hotel Onondaga. At the ball the Greek Week queen is announced and crowned.

Chancellor William P. Tolley will present the Tolley Cup to the top Hill fraternity. Trophies will also be awarded to houses for top scholarship, help week, blood drive participation and the Greek games.

Music for the ball will be by the Dick Knowell Band.

Saturday

Saturday afternoon opens the Greek Games, held for the first time this year in Archbold Stadium. The games will be initiated by the wrestling match between NCAA wrestling champion James (Bo) Nance and past IFC president Thomas (Bo-Peep) Rigeli.

Other Greek games will be traditional chariot races, tug of war, pie eating and a greased pig race.

Another first in Greek Week 1963 will be the Mud Ball in Walnut Park Saturday night. The "Ball" in the block between Adams and Marshall will feature the "Invadores" at one end and the "Countdowns" at the other. Houses surrounding the park will use their outdoor spotlights to light the park that night.

The dance will be held regardless of the depth of the mud, Chairman Hormell commented, but if it rains too hard for the bands, it will be moved into nearby fraternity houses.

Sunday's concert finale with Nash and the Smothers Brothers will be held in Manley Fieldhouse. Nash will present music in the "Mathis mood" combined with folk songs, while the Smothers Brothers will present the comedy routine that has brought them fame in the past year.

Information about the Greek Week program can be obtained from Duff Lewis, Lambda Chi Alpha, ext. 2061.

THEATER

'Three Sisters'

The exigencies of the newspaper business prevents us fully analyzing the Civic Theater's production of Anton Chekhov's "Three Sisters." Though the production has its faults, the first half is so fastly paced it stumbles, "Three Sisters" is probably the best community theater we've seen in Syracuse.

As directed by Syracuse University Artist-in-Residence Ben Shaktman, Chekhov's characters try to understand the oppressive futility of pre-revolutionary Russia's middle class has meaning and substance for 20th century America. Some of Chekhov's characters try to understand the tomb they are sitting on; a few try in a vain, futile way to escape; some are ignorant of it, but ultimately, as the doctor who has forgotten his medicine (and much more) says, "nothing matters anymore."

The characters ask and try to answer the questions behind their boredom and futility. A few make attempts to face up to their emptiness, false hopes and "philosophies" —and yet we have the overriding feeling that nothing has really changed.

The Civic Company has done an admirable job in trying to sustain this mood. But to do so requires the talents of a professional company. They have greatly succeeded in offering fine characterizations though. Joe Dale, Vershinin; Al Ross, Prozorov, Milie Sovie, Natasha; Nessa Hyams, Irena; and Joe Lotito, Toozenbach do especially well.JEG

Stickmen Seek Second Success At State Today

The lacrosse team is the first of the Hill spring squads to return to action. They face-off with Cortland on the latter's homefield at 3:30 p.m. this afternoon. The Orangemen lost their opener 10-7 to Johns Hopkins University last week. Johns Hopkins was ranked second nationally last season.

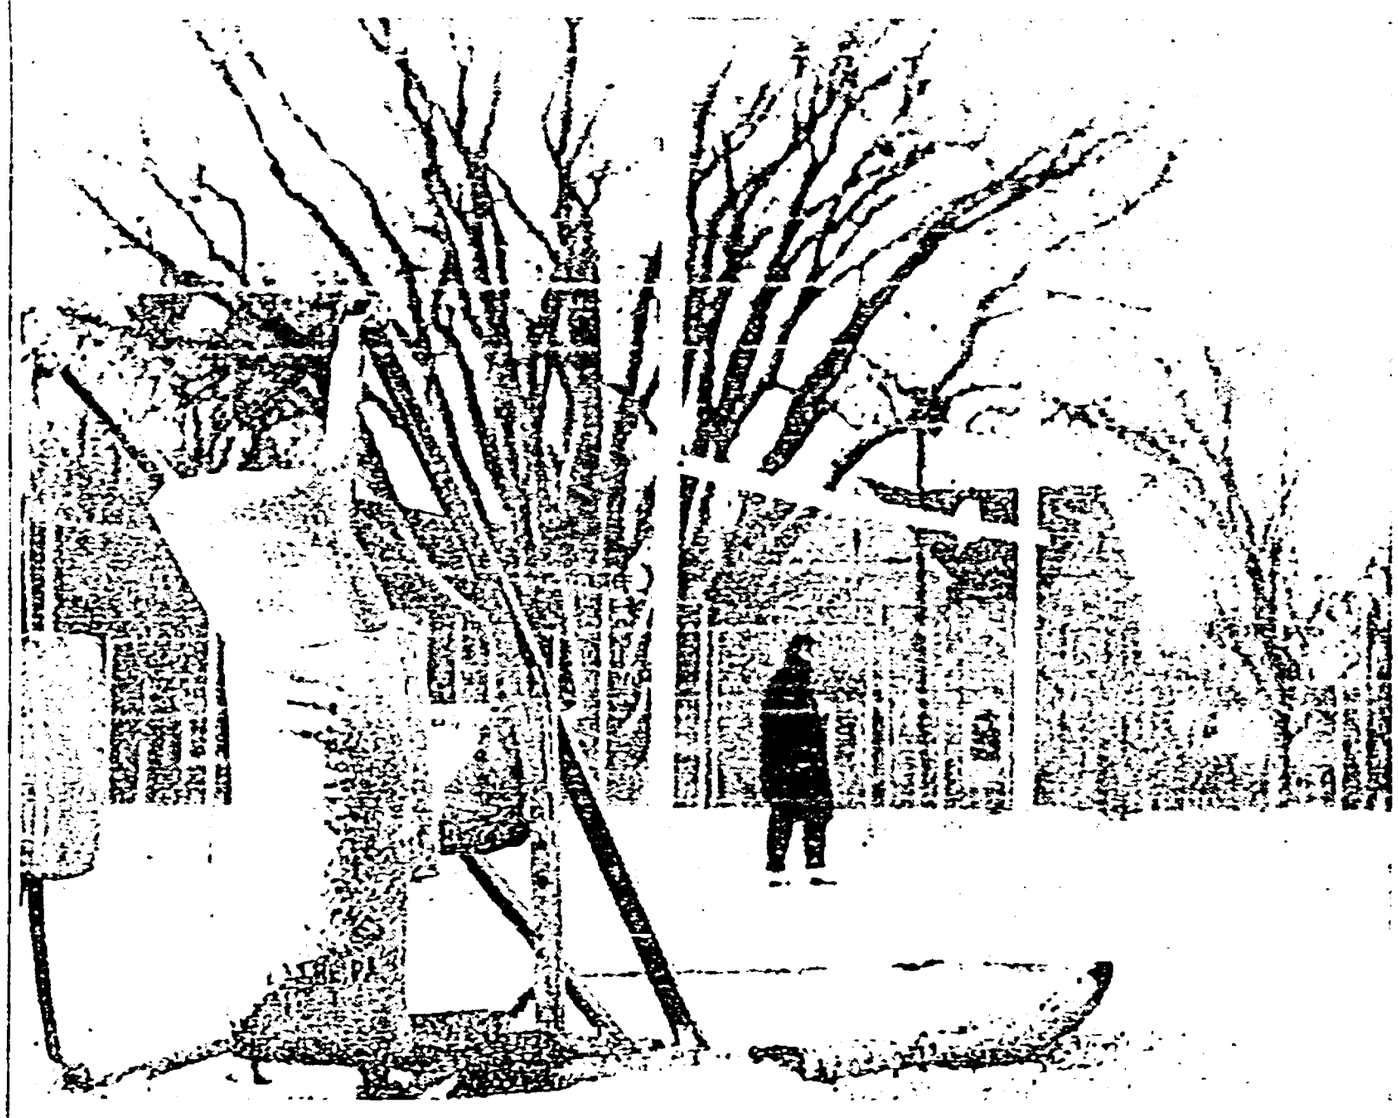
In scrimmages on the southern vacation swing, the Syracuse sticknen defeated Lehigh University 16-1, and tied the University of Pennsylanvia 7-7.

The Orangemen, 7-2 last season, are relying on their strong defense and aggressive midfield units to carry the club while an inexperienced attack group developes.

Cortland lost their opener 11-6 to Cornell.

Ron Fraser is the top Syracuse scorer with his three goals in the Syracuse opener. The game was marred by a large number of penalties and a final quarter fight envolving Syracuse goal tender Pete Coe. He had 15 saves.

The first home contest for the Orange will be April 20, against Hobart. It has not yet been decided whether home games will be played in the stadium or at Hookway Tract. Last season two home games played in Archbold Stadium attracted over 5,000 spectators each.



Syracuse has only three home games this year meeting Cornell and Colgate in addition to Hobart. On the road the Orange sticknen visit Army, Yale, Penn State and Clarkson.

Three members of the Baltimore Colts sat in on the Johns Hopkins game to see John Mackey play. Mackey was an NFL draft choice of Baltimore. This is his first collegiate try at lacrosse.

The Day That The Snows Came

Boston Takes The High Road; Cincy -- The Low, But Neither Can Win At Home

The NBA's Eastern Division playoffs between Boston and Cincinnati are tied at two games a piece. Neither team has been able to win on their home court. The fifth game will be played Saturday evening in Boston.

Bob Cousy, playing the last few games of his career, has scored a total of 56 points in the last two games.

In the West, Los Angeles leads St. Louis 2-0 in the best of seven series.

Cincinnati beat Syracuse in a best of five series to win the right to play the Celtics, the regular season Eastern Champions.

St. Louis defeated Detroit in the Western semi-finals.

Last year the Celtics won it all beating the Lakers in a seven game final series with everything looking toward another Los Angeles-Boston rematch.

Baseball coach Ted Kleinhans will be tonight's guest on Orange Sportlight. Kleinhans will discuss the past southern road trip and the upcoming games.

Powerful Giants Are Quick; Look To Win In Candlestick

By DANIEL RITEY

The fog has lifted in the San Francisco area and the chances for another N.L. pennant flag flowing merrily in the wind tunnel known as Candlestick Park appear to be good.

Alvin Dark, the S.F. manager who piloted the Giants to their first N.L. flag in eight years in 1962, is somewhat sorer: "I see no reason why we shouldn't be better this year than we were last year."

Last year they won the pennant; this season, the Giants are "better, wiser and more able," to use Dark's words.

Well, what do the ex-Polo Grounders have anyway? They have power; they have speed; they have defense; they have pitching; they have morale. What else do you need?

Power. There's all-star first baseman Orlando Cepeda who slumped at the end of last season, winding up with "only" a .306 batting average, 35 home runs and 114 RBI's. Willie McCovey, alternating between first and left field, swings a big bat, too, as do several other Giants.

Others like Felipe Alou, the right fielder, who hit .316 with 25 homers and close to 100 RBI's. And Tom Haller, the catcher, with 18 round trippers and almost half of his hits good for extra bases.

And there's more. Third sacker Jimmy Davenport batted close to .300, veteran Ed Bailey behind Haller with his long ball bat and former A.L. batting champ Harvey Kuenn in left.

Oh yes, the Giants have another good player . . . by the name of Mays. They haven't decided if Willie's the best in the game today, but his 1962 record (49 hrs—major league high—141 RBI's, .304 batting average) should aid the decision process. (In addition to stealing all those bases, Maury Wills also stole Mays' MVP award for '62).

The 'Friscans can move on the basepaths too. Singles hitters Chuck Hiller and Jose Pagan are fast; Mays and Davenport are faster; Felipe and brother Matty are still faster.

Defensively, the infield is more than adequate with Davenport, with his quick hands and rifle arm at third, speedy Pagan and Hiller as the keystone combination, and reserves like Joey Amalfitano, Ernie Bowman and —if needed—Harvey Kuenn. Cepeda is adequate at first and Haller, behind the plate deserves much of the credit for the effectiveness of the Giants' pitching corps last season.

Better-than-average fielder Felipe Alou is in right field, with brother Matty in reserve. Left field is somewhat weak with not-too-fast Kuenn and even-slower McCovey platooning there.

In center field there's Willie Mays. Enough said.

Pitching may be the 'Friscans' weak point—or their ace-in-the-hole. Manager Dark's starting five will be: Juan Marichal (18 wins last year), Jack Sanford (24-7 with 16 straight), Billy O'Dell (19 wins), Billy Pierce (16-6 and 12-0 at Candlestick) and Jack Fisher, newly acquired from Baltimore.

On the plus side of it, Marichal should win more in '63, O'Dell should equal his '62 output and Fisher should have a better time of it in the N.L. than at Memorial Stadium.

But Ol' Man River Pierce probably won't win as many (didn't they say that about Spahn though?), but will still be effective in clutch ball games. Sanford, also no younger, cannot be expected to win 24; between 15 and 20 is a better guess.

Rubber-armed Stu Miller, dean of the Giant bullpen, went to Baltimore, but Dark has Don Larsen, Bob Bolin and ex-Oriole Billy Hoeft in addition to Jim Duffalo, Gaylord Perry as firemen. $135,000 bonus baby Bob Garaboldi may see action either as a spot starter or a reliever.

The Giants have confidence and morale to go with their talent. (Recent S.F. stretch collapses show how important those intangibles can be.) The Giants are the N.L. champs and like it—they'll be out to defend with all they have.

And if they do repeat what is to stop them from hanging up a world championship flag, lost so closely last fall, next to their N.L. pennant?

Tuition Up $130; Total Hits $1600; No Raise Planned for Room, Board

SEN. KENNETH B. KEATING (R-NY) replies to questions posed by members of the press and WAER at a news conference Saturday in the Maxwell Founder's Room. The upstate lawmaker was on campus as special guest lecturer for the anual Citizenship Conference. Although his lecture was non-political, the press conference entered the sphere of partisan politics.

BY JOYCE HERGENHAN
Editorial Director

For the eighth time in nine years, Syracuse University has raised its tuition.

The increase, to go into effect in September, will raise tuition for most undergraduates from $1370 to $1500 per year. The $100 student fee brings the total cost to $1600.

The executive committee of the university Board of Trustees adopted the hike Friday on recommendation of the Chancellor's Cabinet. It was made public by university Vice President and Treasurer Francis A. Wingate at a meeting of student leaders late Friday afternoon.

Room and Board

At the same time, Wingate announced room and board costs will remain constant for at least one more year.

This in effect marks a reduction in the weekly room and board rate because the 1963 - 64 academic year will be two weeks longer than previous ones.

The lengthened academic year is required by the New York State certification code, explainedRegistrar Edwin D. Smith.

The new 34-week year will begin Sept. 6 and will include 30 full weeks of instruction, independent of examination periods, he noted.

Faculty Salaries

Vice President of Student Services Eric H. Faigle cited "rising instructional costs, including faculty salaries" as the most important reason for the tuition hike.

"Such a tuition increase reflects a general practice," he explained. "We have to increase faculty salaries to

Keating on Campus

Lecture

"Our free government is only as strong as the strength we put into it," Senator Kenneth B. Keating told the Citizenship Conference Saturday at Hendricks Chapel.

Citing the upward spiral of progress and automation as "a danger of our age," the New York republican warned that excessive reliance on automation "leads not to liberation or wisdom but to trouble and the beginning of a jail."

Keating addressed himself to the question of good citizens. "Good citizenship is not only flags and anthems," he said, "but is also a lifetime of preserving and extending the freedoms that we have fought for so long."

Perfectable World

"Ours is not a perfect world, but a perfectable one," Keating noted. He called internal 'walls' such as bias and discrimination just as dangerous to the U. S. as the external walls of Communism

The senator noted the paradox of our world whereby the smallness of it—due to scientific advances—magnifies the problems and issues of mankind.

"One great freedom saving device at our disposal is the voting machine and it is a shame that many millions of Americans do not take the opportunity to use it," he stated.

Indifference

Keating cited figures showing that slightly less than 66 per cent of the eligible voters cast their ballots in the 1960 national elections. This indicated "the staggering indifference of millions of people," he said.

"Many people regard free-

Press Conference

Senator Kenneth B. Keating (R-NY)hinted that the government of Gamal Abdel Nasser of Egypt "is vaguely reminiscent of that of Nazi Germany" at a press conference Saturday.

Speaking in the Founder's Room of Maxwell Hall. theupstate lawmaker further noted that 'the potentially explosive situation in the Middle East is a major threat to world peace."

Keating urged Washington to send "strong representations to the German Government" concerning their sending of technicians to Egypt for the purpose of arming that country with rockets and atomic weapons.

"The greatest threat to world peace is the policy of inaction." Keating said. "The U. S. should be in contact with Germany about this threat to Israel which is the one democracy and our best friend in the Middle East.

Cuba

Commenting on the Cuban situation, Keating said "it would be wishful thinking to expect Fidel Castro to embrace the U. S. and her ideals ip the near future."

Keating stated he has always "been opposed to an invasion of Cuba," but that he is in favor of using economic sanctions against the island.

The senator noted that some of his policy suggestions concerning Cuba have been incorporated into administration policy, but that "more remains to be done in the way of removing Russian material from that island."

Referring to the Common Market crisis, Keating hopes "relations between England and France improve: we should try

Noble Heads Blood Drive

Hendricks Chapel Dean Charles C. Noble has again accepted the chairmanship of the campus blood drive, which will be held from 10 a.m.-4 p.m. April 17 and 18 in the Shaw Dormitory recreation room.

Dean Noble acted as blood chairman last semester.

Co-chairmen of the drive are Ira Donenfeld, past president of service fraternity Alpha Phi Omega, and Claire Wexelblatt, representing the Women's Athletic Association.

At an organizational meeting of the Blood Drive Council, Ronald Dutton, Ronald Suprenaut, Susan Foyle and Bette Leitman were announced as living center coordinators for the drive. Thomas Muller was named public relations director.

Dean Noble commented, "The blood drives comes at a very appropriate time this year. Jewish students will have completed the celebration of Passover, and Christian students, Holy Week and Easter. Thoughts of sacrifice and renewal will be uppermost in our minds."

Joint Student Government, InterFraternity Council and Panhellenic Council have endorsed the drive.

Financial Aid Up; Deadline Extended

Believe it or not, the tuition raise has a bright spot.

The budget that raised tuition costs by 8.8 per cent also increased the university's scholarship fund by approximately 17 per cent.

This was done. explained Director of Financial Aids Jim G. Carleton, "to safeguard against the raise having a detrimental effect on academically well-qualified, but financially needy, students."

"We will make no automatic increases in scholarship aid." he cautioned, but he described how students may apply for additional funds.

"On those applications filed during the recently concluded application period. we will correct the expense column to indicate the tuition change,' he explained, "and we will consider the revised figure in assigning the stipend."

Freshmen on two - year scholarships who wish to be considered for an increase must file complete new applications, said Carleton.

Application forms for these students will be available in the Financial Aids Office, 307 Administration Building, between April 15 and May 1.

Any other student who has not yet applied for financial aid, but who now wishes to, may also apply during this time. Students must have a 1.5 accumulative average to be considered for financial aid, noted Carleton.

DO EDITORS APPLICATIONS

Applications should include newspaper experience. cumulative average. year and school and should be submitted to Norman B. Meyer at the School of Journalism.

To Judge a College

From The Toledo Blade

This is the time of year it seems, when anxious parents of anxious high school seniors move into the home stretch of a ritual known as college hunting. Where there is any choice in the matter—not always the case—parents too often make decisions, some educators contend, on the basis of campus attractions, claims by extravagent alumni or glories achieved on the playing fields.

Another approach is now provided by the columnist whose perceptive observations in the New Republic appear under the initials "T. R. B." He suggests that instead of worrying about athletic acclaim or the social amenities on the campus, parents should ask more pertinent questions. Does a professor earn more than a football coach? Is the university library well stocked? Do campus groups as a matter of policy prohibit racial and religious discrimination? Is the faculty well paid —to the extent, for example, that a professor gets a minimum of $8,000 for nine month's work?

If the answer to those questions is "No," then "to hell with Old Siwash," T. R. B. advises. To that last we might add one more: Does the school agree with sentiments expressed nearly 200 years ago by Thomas Jefferson, in outlining purposes of the University of Virginia, when he wrote:

"This institution will be based on the illimitable freedom of the human mind. For here we are not afraid to follow truth wherever it may lead, nor to tolerate error so long as reason is left free to combat it."

If the answer to that is also "No," then T. R. B.'s recommendation goes double.

Bravo for the Civic

Community theaters come and go in Syracuse, but after seeing the Civic Company's production of Anton Chekhov's "Three Sisters" last weekend this looks like the one to stay.

The Civic Company is a hybrid between local thespians, Syracuse University's Drama Department and its adult evening branch, University College. Its combination of students, semi-professionals and Hill faculty members has produced two fine productions in this, its first year: "The Lark" and "Three Sisters."

As thus organized the Company is in a position to become the nucleus of Syracuse and Onondaga County dramatic activities. It offers opportunities for the inexperienced as well as the experienced to develop their theatrical abilities while offering high caliber productions. With the university serving as a foundation the Company's productions should become a staple of cultural life in central New York.

As the Daily Orange critic said Friday, "Three Sisters' is probably the best community theater we've seen in Syracuse." With shows of this calibre the Company's future looks bright. Under producer Robert D. Bergeron and producing-director G.F. Reidenbaugh the Company has talented technicians to create not only fine theater but an excellent classroom for developing dramatic skills in Syracuse.

The Daily Orange congratulates the Civic Company and its staff for their production of "Three Sisters." We look forward to many other excellent plays in the future. We also look forward to the Civic Company giving Syracuse an increasing awareness of the great wealth of local talent available and the great enjoyment that local productions can offer.

Independents

To the members of the class of '66:

In view of the recent developments in campus politics, namely the emergence of a new slate outside of the existing political system, we the undersigned feel it necessary to clarify our stand concerning the issue of class representation.

We contend that the Syracuse University political system should be improved upon and expanded, but we also object to Mr. Moffett and his slate's statement that "60% of our class is not represented" under the present system at political conventions.

Admittedly, there is a need for a drive to get more representation for our class. But should we discard the present system entirely? Aren't the Independent students represented at all? We contend that a movement for Independents does exist under the present system and that it has been available for all students during the nominations. We also point out that there has been a break-through for the Independents in the past two years in the Campus Alliance Party.

At the CAP political convention this past fall two independent groups were in attendance, Day 5 and Independents on Campus. These groups, although comprising only one-fourteenth of the convention were successful in obtaining nomiations for four candidates.

This is a great stride in the right direction, and does demonstrate that CAP recognizes the importance of the Independents in campus politics, and wants to create a party with representation for Greeks and non - affiliates alike.

If the past performance of CAP party is any indication, are becoming more inclusive we feel that campus politics in respect to representation. Moreover, our class was well represented at the convention and from a large field of hopefuls, a qualified slate was nominated.

We feel that we are as representative of our class as the "Independent" slate for the following reasons:

(a) Those who propose to be representative of Independents did seek a nomination within an existing party before forming their own slate.

(a) All candidates realize the importance of a representative slate. If they did not feel that they could represent their class, they would not be running.

(c) It is common knowledge that the "independents" are Greek affiliated and are backed by Greek houses.

What we are trying to emphasize is that we are backed by independents working for independents as well as Greeks. We do feel that the area of representations should be widened even more. We feel that we are qualified and hope that before the campaign is over we will be able to meet you and deem ourselves worthy of your support.

Bryant

To the Editor:

I have read ridiculous columns in the D.O. before (not to disparage the paper in general) but I have never gazed at anything as Ludicrous as Allan Kort's column in defense of Alabama's football coach, Paul "Bear" Bryant. Passing over Mr. Bryant's actions as only "somewhat" unethical shows a total lack of any kind of insight whatsoever. It is just this lack of ethics that does make his crime so "dastardly." After all, it is only a lack of ethics when one cheats on a test, and to use Mr. Kort's lunatic logic, if you go into a test and don't know the material, you will walk out of the test still not knowing the material, so you might as well cheat and at least get a passing mark, rather than a failing mark.

Another of the arguments presented by the sports editor is that Mr. Bryant is a football great, so maybe he should be excused from all this proletariat bantering about unethical practices. To coin an analogy from Mr. Kort, in the 1919 Black Sox baseball scandal, one of the most infamous figures was the great Chicago outfielder, Shoeless Joe Jackson (most assuredly a greater figure in his profession than Bryant could ever dream of being in his). Jackson hit .375 in that series for the Sox, and set a record which still stands today, 12 base hits in a single world series.

Yet Jackson was immediately retired from baseball and all his records stricken from the official books when it was found that he was cognizant of the fix. Obviously no more of a "fixer" than is Bryant, Jackson was handed his decision by Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, an excellent judiciary who was brought into baseball for the express purpose of adjudicating the scandals.

It was acknowledged by Judge Landis that neither Jackson nor his teammate, third baseman Bucky Weaver took any money nor in any other way, abetted the fix, yet their mere knowledge of the fix (as Mr. Bryant knew of Mr. Butts actions) was enough to have them kicked out of baseball, even though they did perform so ably that Jackson would have been a shoo-in for the Hall of Fame and Weaver was the best third baseman ever, according to Ty Cobb.

Yes, just a case of lack of ethics. And we all know that football and its recruiting system is unethical. Mr. Kort does make a very correct point when he mentions the "system" and it does have, as is implied by the editor, more than one patron. But Mr. Bryant must be reprimaned, even if as the sole convict. He must be reprimanded because if this system is ever acknowledged as satisfactory, why then it will snowball and become even more repugnant to ethics. A man in the position of dealing with the character of over a hundred boys is obligated to be ethical, and the boys should realize that unethical practices are to be frowned upon, not congratulated.

POLICY ON LETTERS

The Daily Orange invites, and even urges, the expression of opinion on the part of its readers. The editors make a sincere effort to publish as many letters as possible, but space and the illegible condition in which some letters are received eliminate several from consideration.

Canada's Election on WAER

The eyes of the United States are on Canada this week and so will the "ears" of WAER-FM as they broadcast up-to-the-minute results of Canada's national election tonight.

Beginning at 7 p.m. the campus station will air returns direct from the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation via the Educational Radio Network till 8:30 p.m. and then from 10 p.m. to 12 midnight.

The first 20 minutes of each half hour will be direct CBC coverage. For the last ten minutes WGBH-FM, Cambridge, Mass., will cut away from the CBC to present an analysis by Canadian experts in the U.S. who will interpret results for American listeners.

The most ambitious single project in the history of Canadian broadcasting, CBC coverage will include live reports from all ten provinces, plus on the spot statements by the four major party leaders. European reaction to the election will be broadcast live, via the National Areonautics and Space Administration's communication satellite, Relay.

Originating from CBC Central, Toronto, the Canadian portion of the WAER coverage will feature CBC national reporter Ken Mason and national announcer Lamont Tilden, with commentary provided by a panel of Canadian political experts led by Kaowlton Nash, CBC Washington correspondent and Paul Fox, assistant professor of political science at the University of Toronto.

Since Canada does not elect her Prime Minister directly only men seeking seats in the Parliament are up for election. Whether the country remains split between Liberal and Conservative elements is of vital interest to the U.S.

When Prime Minister, John Diefenbaker, refused to consider arming Canadian missiles with nuclear war heads—as requested by the U.S.—the opposition Liberal Party demanded a vote of confidence in Parliament was dissolved and general elections were called.

Whether Lester B. Pearson's Liberal's will gain supremacy or whether Diefenbaker's Conservatives will continue in office is of prime importance in continuing American and Canadian cooperation.

Disarmament On 'Daedalus'

WAER's program, "Daedalus" will present a discussion tonight at 8:30 on "Is Disarmament Now Possible?" Produced jointly with "Daedalus," the quarterly journal of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences for the Education Radio Network, the list of participants includes:

Host Gerald Holton, professor of physics at Harvard University; moderator, Bernard T. Feld, professor of physics at MIT; Franklin A. Long, assistant director of the UeSe Arms Control and Disarmament Agency; Emile Benoit, professor of internal business, Columbia University; Henry Kissinger, professor of political science and member of the Center for International Affairs, Harvard, and Tristram Coffin, author and Washington journalist.

MUSIC

Richard Burgin

On Saturday evening, Richard Burgin came to Syracuse, and with the strength of his enormous talent and inspiration produced one of the most musically evenings within our recent memory.

Burgin appeared as both conductor and solo violinist with the Syracuse Friends of Chamber Music at the Everson Museum. From the Bach's Concerto in A minor which began the concert, he captivated with his shimmering tone and passionate phrasing. In spite of a few lapses of pitch, this was a Bach to be remembered.

Next on the program were three movements from Mozart's "Haffner Serenade." Burgin was again soloist, and dazzled in the flashy cadenzas. After the intermission, the contemplative mood was broken with Stravinsky's "Dumbarton Oaks Concerto." This was a rather diffuse work with little of Stravinsky's usual force or color, but the Chamber Orchestra under Burgin played with skill and precision.

Perhaps the highlight of the evening however, was a lush presentation of Wagner's "Siegfried Idyll" in its original chamber orchestration. Here, both Burgin's skill and the orchestra's fine playing merged into a near - perfect performance. The concert concluded with excerpts from Copland's "Music for the Theater."

It will be hard indeed to forget the noble figure of this great musician nod retired from his post as concertmaster of the Boston Symphony as he lost himself completely while playing the Bach. JG

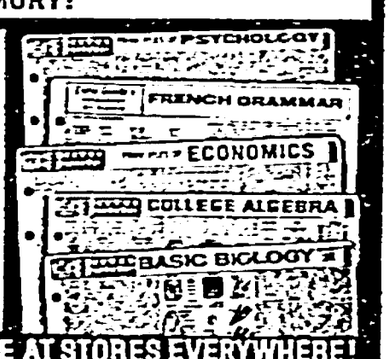
HOW'S YOUR MEMORY



"LITTLE" FACTS YOU FORGET MAKE BIG DIFFERENCES IN YOUR GRADES!

THE PROBLEM:
Few students can remember every name, date, formula, conjugation, theorem, definition, principle, demanded by a 4-year program. Educators know that through the "extinction process" you will forget many of the facts taught last week, last month, last term, last year. Thus a "Memory Gap" develops between the facts you are required to remember and the facts you do remember. The smaller you can make your "Memory Gap" the higher your grades will be.

THE SOLUTION:
Only DATA-GUIDE solid plastic loose-leaf summaries are specifically designed to close the "Memory Gap." DATA-GUIDES preserve, on solid plastic, the essential facts core of each subject to give you a permanent, portable reference that can be used from term...to term ...to term—throughout your entire school career. Thus in spite of lost notes, surrendered texts, a difficult program, and an overburdened memory, with DATA-GUIDE solid-plastic charts, you will always have the facts you need.

Authored by leading educators, the subject matter on each DATA-GUIDE solid-plastic chart is imaginatively written and uniquely organized for rapid fact location and memory strengthening. Students throughout the U.S. are using all-plastic DATA-GUIDES to insure success in school. REMEMBER: Today's lessons are based on yesterday's facts! HOW IS YOUR MEMORY?

Tuition Increased By $130

held our best faculty members."

Broken down, the tuition raise reflects an increase of $4 per undergraduate credit hour and will bring the cost per hour to $47.

For Comparison

Wingate compared SU's tuition with the rates at other northeastern universities.

First citing schools that have already announced tuition for 1963-64, Wingate noted students at Colgate and Cornell will pay $1700; those at Columbia, $1710; the University of Rochester, $1550, and Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, $1665.

Princeton and Yale Universities have not announced next year's tuition cost, so Wingate cited the current rate. According to the treasurer, students at these schools pay $1600 and $1550, respectively.

Graduate Students

The tuition charge for SU graduate students has been increased $5 per credit hour.

Graduate tition for most students will jump from $40 to $45 per credit hour. Those students taking graduate courses in mathematics, engineering, chemistry and physics will pay $55 per hour, an increase from $50.

Three other changes were also announced:

1. Tuition for students in the College of Law will be increased from the present $650 to $700 a semester.

2. Tuition for undergraduates in the School of Nursing for first and second year students has been increased from $685 to $$750 a semester—the same change applied to other undergraduates .

Tuition for third and fourth year nursing students will be increased from the present $350 to $400 per semester. Tuition for fifth year students was increased from $685 to $750.

3. Tuition for graduate courses offered through University College will increase $5 a semester—the same rate as campus graduate courses.

This year's summer school tuition will not be affected by the hike. The cost for most undergraduate credit hours will remain at $43, the current rate.

The last Syracuse University tuition raise occurred in May, 1961, when it jumped from $1230 to $1370 per year. That increase climaxed seven straight years of rising tuition costs.

Discussing the current hike, Treasurer Wingate noted he thinks it will suffice for two years.

Passover Starts Today

Passover, the Jewish festival of freedom, begins at sundown today and continues for seven days.

Orthodox Jews will celebrate the holiday for eight days.

Passover is the oldest of the Jewish holidays. It began as a feast of springtime, and gradually evolved into an agricultural holiday to celebrate the cutting of grain.

Today, Passover is observed to commemorate the Jews' exodus from Egypt and the Pharoahs. The Passover commentary, the Haggadah, is read at the traditional seder meal.

Highlight of the Haggadah reading is the asking of the "Four Questions" by the youngest child.

The question, "Why is this night different from all other nights?" is answered, "On all other nights we eat leavened bread, but tonight only unleavened bread; on all other nights we eat any type of herb, but this night only bitter herbs; on all other nights we do not dip even once, but on this night twice; on all other nights we eat and drink either sitting or reclining, but on this night we all recline."

The ceremonial seder plate includes a roasted egg, a lamb's shank, an apple-nut-wine mixture called charoses, salt water for dipping, bitter herbs, parsley and the unleavened bread, matzoh.

Before and during the meal, the Haggadah is read, and the story of Moses' leading the Jews from Egypt is told.

The name Passover comes from the tenth plague against the Egyptians, when the Angel of Death passed over the homes of the Jews and did not kill the first born Jewish children. The Jews had marked their door posts with the blood of a lamb.

Thus, Passover is a holiday of freedom not only for the Jews, but also for the liberation of nature and the coming of spring.

Booth Holds Book Drive

"Book South," a drive to collect books and magazines for Negro colleges in the South, is being sponsored by the Booth Hall program committee.

Booth is holding the drive in conjunction with People, Inc. and the Realist magazine.

Books, magazines and paperbacks should be taken to the Booth Hall control office before May 10.

David Getter, a Booth resident adviser, emphasized that the drive is not to support "separate but equal" facilities for Negro students, but to protest against them.

dom as theirs by virtue of being in a club," the Senator said. "Freedom will, however, be lost to those who continue to think this way."

Keating praised the students at the lecture for their interest in citizenship and concern for the future.

"Our society has the capacity to destroy humanity as well as the capacity to greatly enhance it," he said. "The choice must not be blind, but determined by those willing to play a part and take an interest in the government," he concluded.

Press Conference

to make Gen. Charles DeGaulle less intransigent concerning Britain's entry."

Keating noted this would not be an easy task, and that upcoming British elections may have a bearing on possible Common Market status for England.

Foreign Aid

"I support the idea of limited foreign aid to those nations that refuse to help themselves and their own people," Keating said in reference to the Clay Report on the U. S.'s foreign program.

"I have always supported the foreign aid program," he continued, but with selectivity. Furthermore, those against aid are entitled to their views and must not be labelled as disloyal to the country," he added with reference to Secretary of State Dean Rusk's recent remarks in support of the Kennedy aid program.

Keating said that the U. S.'s ultimate goal in space "is to land a man on the moon, but if the Russians get there firs all is not lost for the U. S."

Citing huge expenditures for space programs, the senator commented, "we must watch these figures closely because it is easy to be wasteful in this area."

Keating noted "mixed reactions" in New York concerning Kennedy's proposed tax cut and reforms. "Some of these reforms just will not get through the Congress," he said, "but, in general, I favor a tax cut to stimulate and better our economy."

Keating declined comment on his preference for the GOP national ticket in the 1964 elections. "It is too early to decide who would be best," he said, "there are a number of good candidates but things change too quickly to allow for a decision at this early time."

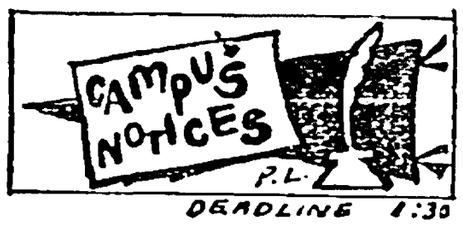
'Interested' Frosh to Run

A freshman "interested in government" who wants "more experience in government" has filed a petition to run independently for senator-at-large.



Richard Gould, a resident of DellPlain 5 and Rochester, listed three points among his ideas for office:

1. Syracuse as the center of a nationwide program to investigate the possibility of obtaining income tax deductions for the cost of a college education. A similar plan has been approved by James Morris, candidate for student government president.

2. A program to keep the sophomore class informed of student government activities. Gould recommends a bulletin to be distributed through mailboxes.

3. Student government take the leadership in orientation of international students to the university. Gould said several students had complained to him about the deficiencies in the orientation program sponsored by the International Students Organization.

Gould, who holds a 1.9 average in the College of Liberal Arts, is a senator in the legislature, and was a member of Freshman Footprints. A pledge of Beta Sigma Rho fraternity, he is on the sports staff of the Daily Orange.

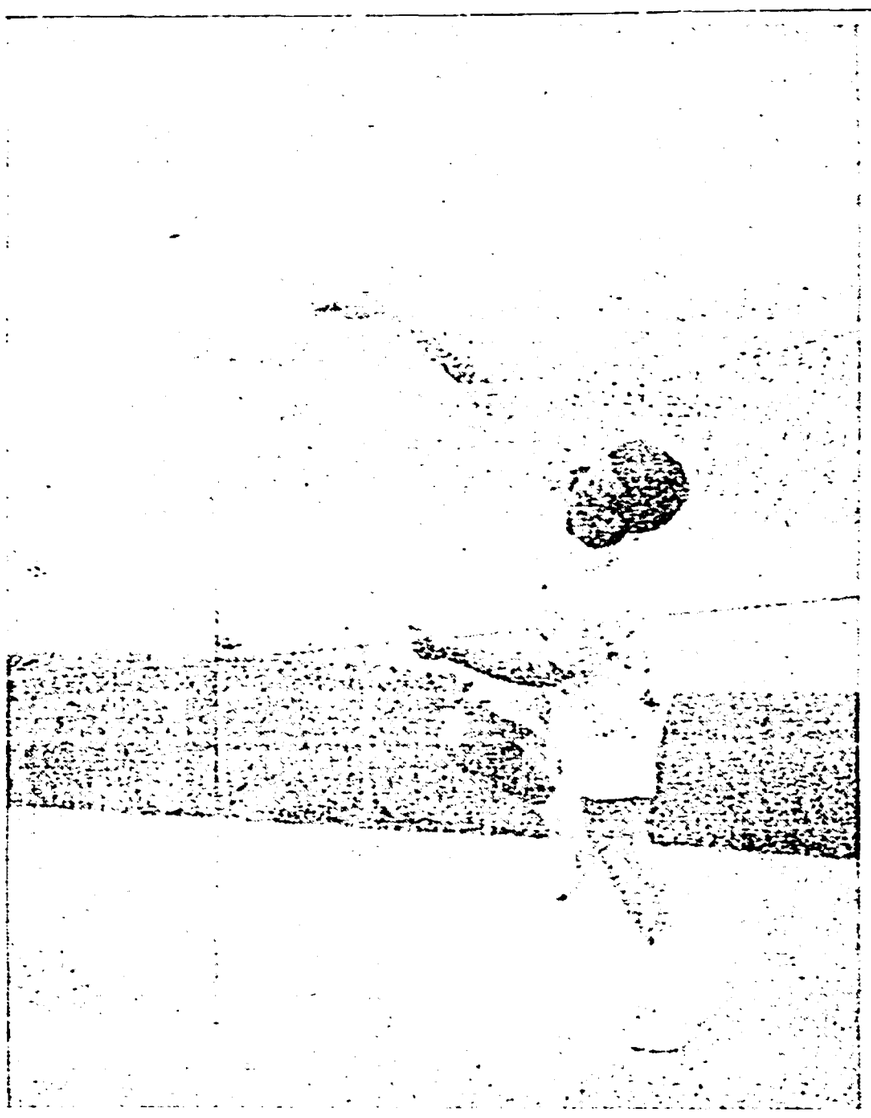
Stickmen Beat Cortland St.; Fraser Stars in 12-4 Romp

Sophomore Ron Fraser scored seven times to pace the SU lacrosse squad to a 12-4 romp over Cortland State, Friday, at Cortland. The goals increased Fraser's two game total to 10 and evened the season at 1-1 for the Orangemen.

In order to avenge last week's loss to powerhouse John Hopkins, 10-7, the team launched a vicious first-half offensive attackk. A Senior attackman from Freeport, John Pappas, and Duncan Crowther, scored three and two goals respectively.

The end of the first half found the stickmen clearly in control, 8-2. At this point coach Roy Simmons began to substitute freely for the remainder of the game.



A well - balanced club, the team was also outstanding on defense. Defensemen Jack Salerno played a superb game, as did goalies Pete Coe and Lindy Lynnholm.

The statistics at the end of two contests show Fraser leading the team in scoring, averaging five goals a game. Many feel if Ron can keep his hot hand he will have a shot at an All-American spot. The team as a whole has averaged 9½ goals a game, and has allowed the opposite six scores per meeting.

Earlier in the season the team walloped Lehigh, 16-1, and tied their second practice match with the University of Pennsylvania, 7-7.

April 20 the squad will face Hobart, at Syracuse. April 23, the team will journey to Clarkson, then meet Colgate at home April 27, Yale away May 1. Penn State away May 4, RPI away May 11, Cornell home May 15, the West Point cadets away May 18, in the season's finale.

It has not been decided whether home games will be played at the stadium or at Hookway Tract. Last season the two games at Archbold were witnessed before over 5,000 enthusiastic spectators.

ROSS KAPLAN, number two man on the Syracuse Tennis Team, perfects his serve during a recent practice session. One of the two seniors on the squad, Kaplan will be aiming to improve last season's 7-7 team record.

Tennis Team Has 2-3 Mark With Georgetown, AU Wins

The University varsity tennis team returned from its Southern swing with a 2-3 record.

The squad, which went South without its number one man Steve Rubell, won its first match 5½-3½ with Georgetown. The netmen were shoutout 9-0 by George Washington and Navy. Their second win was a 9-0 victory over American University. Syracuse dropped a match at Maryland 3-6.

Behind Rubell are seniors Ross Kaplan and Bruce Gordon. Juniors Al Davis, Lew Katcher and Bill Gadalechia also played in the matches. Sophomores on the squad are Rubell, Dave Barrie and Al Napper.

The next match for Gene Garrett's team is at Hamilton April 20. The first home is with Union April 24.

Garrett, in his seventh year as coach, feels that he has a club which is stronger than the squad that split 14 matches last season.

Penn State and Cornell are among some of the tougher teams the Orange netmen will face.

WAA Record Due Today

A record of the participation of all Women's Athletic Association members is due today in Room 202 of the Women's Building.

The living center achieving the highest percentage of participation among its members will receive a trophy to be presented at the Spring Banquet.

Sign-up sheets for WAA participants may be obtained in the Women's Building. Sheets should include the name of the living center. the names of participants, and all activities in which each girl took part.

For WAA clubs which meet weekly, credit is given only to girls present at two-thirds of the meetings.

Opening Day

The primary sign of spring for sports hounds is at hand. The Birds of Baltimore will help usher in the baseball season today at Washington. President John F. Kennedy (no relation to the head coach of the Chicago Cubs Bob Kennedy), will toss the first pitch of the season and become the year's first sore arm hurler.

Tuesday afternoon the rest of the teams start play with nine games scheduled.

After shuffling baseball cards and tossing them to the wind, we have come up with the Yankees again top choice in the American League with a handful of clubs capable of taking over in the event of a Bronx collapse. Minnesota, Detroit, Los Angeles, Baltimore and even Boston could sneak in in the event of a national disaster.

A West Coast fight looms in the National League between the Dodgers and the Giants. The Reds and Cardinals are darkhorses in the senior circuit.

In examining how the other half lives, you find the New York Mets, capable of nailing down last place by Memorial Day, indeed an appropriate date.

There will be new heroes, new stars, and come mid-season new predictions. Its not as windy in mid-season anway.

Pitching Carries Orange Varsity

By BILL CRONAUER

Weak hitting and strong [illegible] — the story of the 1963 Syracuse University baseball team.

The Orange baseballers stand 3-2 on the season following the annual Southern tour. SU defeated American University, George Washington and Catholic U, while bowing to Maryland and Navy.

Although the Piety has over a week of prior to the April 17 home opener against Seton Hall, Coach Ted Kleinhans has his charges working energetically.

He expressed disappointment over the squad's hitting in the Southland.

"We played five games and got [illegible] than one base hit in [illegible] only twice," Kleinhans noted. The team batting [illegible] is a mere .196.

[illegible] the other hand, [illegible] Bonowski [illegible] Chuck [illegible] Larry [illegible] Lelli won [illegible] start.

[illegible] feels that [illegible] Bill Jeffers [illegible] develop [illegible] The coach has helped us on the Southern tour," Kleinhans said.

A rundown on the 1963 Syracuse baseball starters:

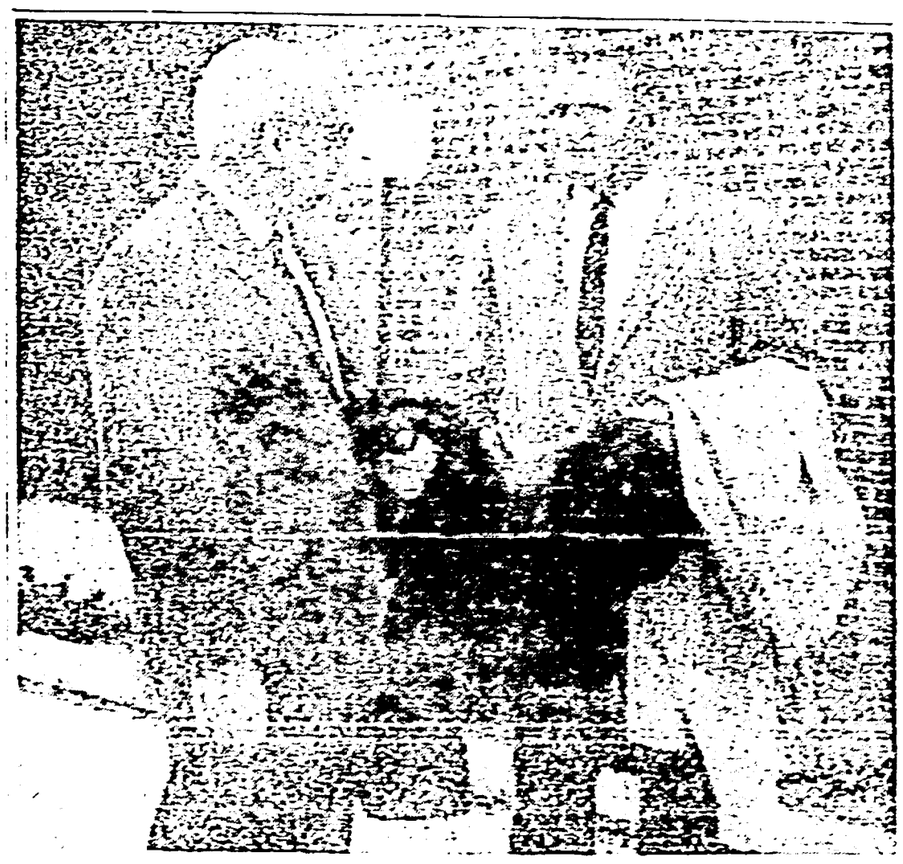
BOB JACUK — (R-R) Top receiver on squad and good with the stick. Had 1B, 3B, HR against American University, averaging .211. Senior from Syracuse.

ED MACNER — (L-L) Power hitting senior first sacker from New York City. Did nice job down South, batting .267 with a home run.

BOB COHEN — (R-R) Rookie second baseman out of Washington, D.C. Hit ball hard on Southern tour but only averaged .176. Ranks high defensively.

PAT LUTZ — (L-R) Utility infielder turned shortstop. Reliable ballplayer who leads team in hitting with .300. Stole four bases in five attempts on trip. A junior from Utica.

PAT ANTONELLI — (R-R) Looked good with the stick on tour — .364 average. Only sees defensive third baseman but can make big play. Another senior, a native of Belleville, N.J.



DAVE ROUNDS — (L-L) Sophomore leftfielder from Safern. Good all-around ballplayer. Hasn't shown must at bat so far (.111). Third-string end on the varsity football team.

BOB LELLI — (L-L) Top returnee who is equally at home on the mound, at first base, or in the outfield. The Roselle Park senior played centerfield and pitched down South. Hit .215, struck out 15 vs. American U. (1-0 pitching ledger).

DICK TAYLOR — (R-R) Senior right-fielder from Youngstown. Not Phenomenal, but steady and very aggressive. Only hit .158 on tour. Average should come around.

ED BARNOWSKI — (R-R) Strong right - handed pitcher with tremendous poise. Eager, willing to learn. Has picked up an effective curve since last year. Owns a pair of victories one a three-hitter. A sophomore from Schenectady.

LARRY CRAYBAS — (R-R) Local senior hurler who did fine only three hits. Should become [illegible] against Catholic U., yielding only three hits. Should become third starter behind Lelli and Barnowski.

Students Sour On Fee Raise, Feel 'Cheated'

By SUSAN WEINBERG
Junior Editor

"If Syracuse University can charge as much tuition as Harvard or Yale, why can't I get an education comparable to those schools?"

This was the typical reaction of Hill students to the $130 tuition hike announced in Monday's Daily Orange. A cross section of students were interviewed Monday and while many viewed the raise as inevitable, the response was bitter and questioning.

Elizabeth "Scotty" Jackson, a freshman, said',"I don't think the pecuniary part of an education should be given so much importance, but if we are going to pay so much ,we ought to be getting more out of it-"

"I don't think graduate students should be forced upon the freshman," she added. "We have teachers with higher degrees in high school."

No Interested

She hastened to say that the educational level of Syracuse also is caused by disinterested students. "However, for those students interested in graduate school, like me, the cost of education becomes overwhelming," she pointed out.

Calling the tuition increase "absurd," Jeffrey Kaplowitz, a junior, charged Syracuse with being more interested in fund raising than in learning.

He referred to Cornell and its tuition rates: "Syracuse is just trying to keep up with the Jones' (Cornell) so that it can retain almost the same image as Cornell."

Detroit vs. SU

Larry Kuperman, a freshman, said that a University of Detroit student told him of the increase before the DO announcement and implied that SU students do not get as much for their money as those as the less expensive Detroit.

Kuperman said an explanation of how the university will improve its education with the added funds should accompany the tuition announcement.

Roger Hechs, a freshman, rejected the administration's ex-

TOLLEY CUP

All Tolley Cup reports must be in the dean of men's office by 5 p.m. today, Fraternity Administrator James P. McMurray announced Monday. The extension was made because several houses did not hand in the reports Monday.

Panhel Elects Monday

Juniors Joline Johnson and Geraldine LaDue are campaigning for leadership of Hill sorority women next year.

One will be elected Panhellenic Council president at a special all - sorority convocation slated for 7 p.m. Monday in Hendricks Chapel.

Vying for Panhel vice president at that time will be Joan Hackanson, a junior, and Ellen Steinberg, a sophomore.

Additional nominations for both offices will be taken from the floor at the convocation, according to a Panhel spokesman.

Miss Johnson (Kappa Delta) is currently Panhel secretary. A German-education student, she has a 2.5 cumulative average and is from Syracuse.

Miss LaDue (Zeta Tau Alpha) is now Panhel treasurer, and is a resident of Wrentham, Mass. Majoring in business education, she has a 2.0 average.

Miss Hackanson (Delta Delta Delta) has a 2.0 average in elementary education, and is a Syracuse resident. She is the current Panhel activities chairman.

Miss Steinberg (Alpha Lambda Phi) is from Lynbrook, L.I. an dhas a 1.5 average in home economics study. Council representative from her sorority, she has served on Panhel's rushing and constitution committees.

Asking coeds not to vote according to house affiliation, Panhellenic has noted that it "acts as one body, not as individual houses."

Notre Dame Editors Quit

Three student editors and a faculty adviser resigned from a University of Notre Dame (South Bend, Ind.) campus magazine two weeks ago in a dispute over articles the administration considered offensive.

One of the articles deleted from the magazine urged more liberal dormitory rules. The other was a satire about campus spring riots.

US Class Office Platforms

Class of '64

"We'll do more for '64" is the motto guiding the United Students party senior class slate.

The slate cites experience in government, Panhellenic, Inter-Fraternity Council, class executive councils, and extended contact with the administration as their key qualifications.

The four are Douglas Long, presidential nominee; Linda Menaker, vice president; Janet Semple, secretary; and Neil Eisner, treasurer.

The group calls for class work

Class of '65

"We will strive not only for class unity, but also class recognition from the university as the best class in the way of achievements," states Edwin Shaw, United Students party candidate for president of the junior class.

The US slate lists a six-point program for the Class of '65. Shaw, along with running mates Paul Derounian, vice president; Penny Shapiro, secretary; and Nancy Tobin, treasurer, proposes:

1. A class assembly which would take the place of a newsletter. The assembly would be open to everyone in the class and would meet twice during the year.

2. An annual supplement to the Orange Guide, including a calendar of events for the year, as well as a listing of faculty telephone extensions and offices.

3. In addition to a continuation of the Orange Aid, the US slate recommends candid shots of university life, as well as a practice including the key events of the year.

4. An attempt to make Win-

The United Students party sophomore slate Friday revealed its platform for the Thursday elections. The four frosh on the ticket are Kenneth Wurtenberger, president; Lamont "Monty" Kaiser, vice president; Jean Baker, secretary; and Ellen Sigal, treasurer.

The slate also recommends a

Gilmore Scores Bill Giving Jury Death Penalty Powers

By DANIEL RITEY
Junior Editor

The death penalty "can be challenged morally, but concrete facts also are needed to support a case against it." Gene Gilmore remarked in an interview Monday.

The School of Journalism instructor, chairman of the Syracuse chapter of the New York Committee to Abolish Capital Punishment, cites "error, racial and social prejudice and lack of deterrent" as major factual arguements against the death penalty.

"New York is the only state that has the mandatory death penalty — electrocution — for first degree, premeditated murder," Gilmore said, "but if Gov. Rockefeller signs a bill which is a variation of a California plan, a jury will be allowed to decide whether to use the chair."

Gilmore explained that "this would be no real solution even if passed because problems fo error and social pressure will continue."

Errors

"There are cases of sending the wrong people to the chair," Gilmore went on, "and sometimes investigation after the death showed the victim to be innocent." Usually,

Study in Green:

Let the Daily Orange be the first to offer condolences to our fellow students who must face the burden of paying an Ivy League tuition for a Big Ten education.

For, as the university officials announced at Friday's brieing session, the $1,500 tuition which goes into effect here in September will still be less than such schools as Colgate, Cornell, RPI, University of Rochester and Columbia.

Of course, those schools are expensive and they are also excellent schools. They are not schools on the way up or schools on the way down. They are among the outstanding universities in the country and their tuition reflects the price that one must pay for high caliber education.

If the university wanted to add to the list they could have pointed out that the Big Ten schools of the midwest charge very low tuition even for out-of-state students because they are state schools, with a couple of exceptions. These exceptions are also expensive and highly rated.

But wouldn't it seem that Syracuse compares more with the Big Ten schools than with the Ivy league entries? We might add that the University of Miami charges $1,000 per year.

The fact is that Syracuse is asking for a lot of money from its students to attend a university that is on the rise, but is far from the pinnacle of academic excellence. The price is the same; the name has been changed to mislead the ignorant.

But there are reasons which necessitate Syracuse hiking their fees with such regularity. To become better the school needs more facilities and better faculty members. Both of these key ingredients are best produced with that good, green common denominator, money.

Without money a school cannot hope to attract top faculty members to in turn attract top high school sudents to the hallowed walls of its particular institution.

But then the university has the next step to face —where to get the money. For the universities with outstanding reputations and leading alumni are able to add to their caliber by the time-honored endowment.

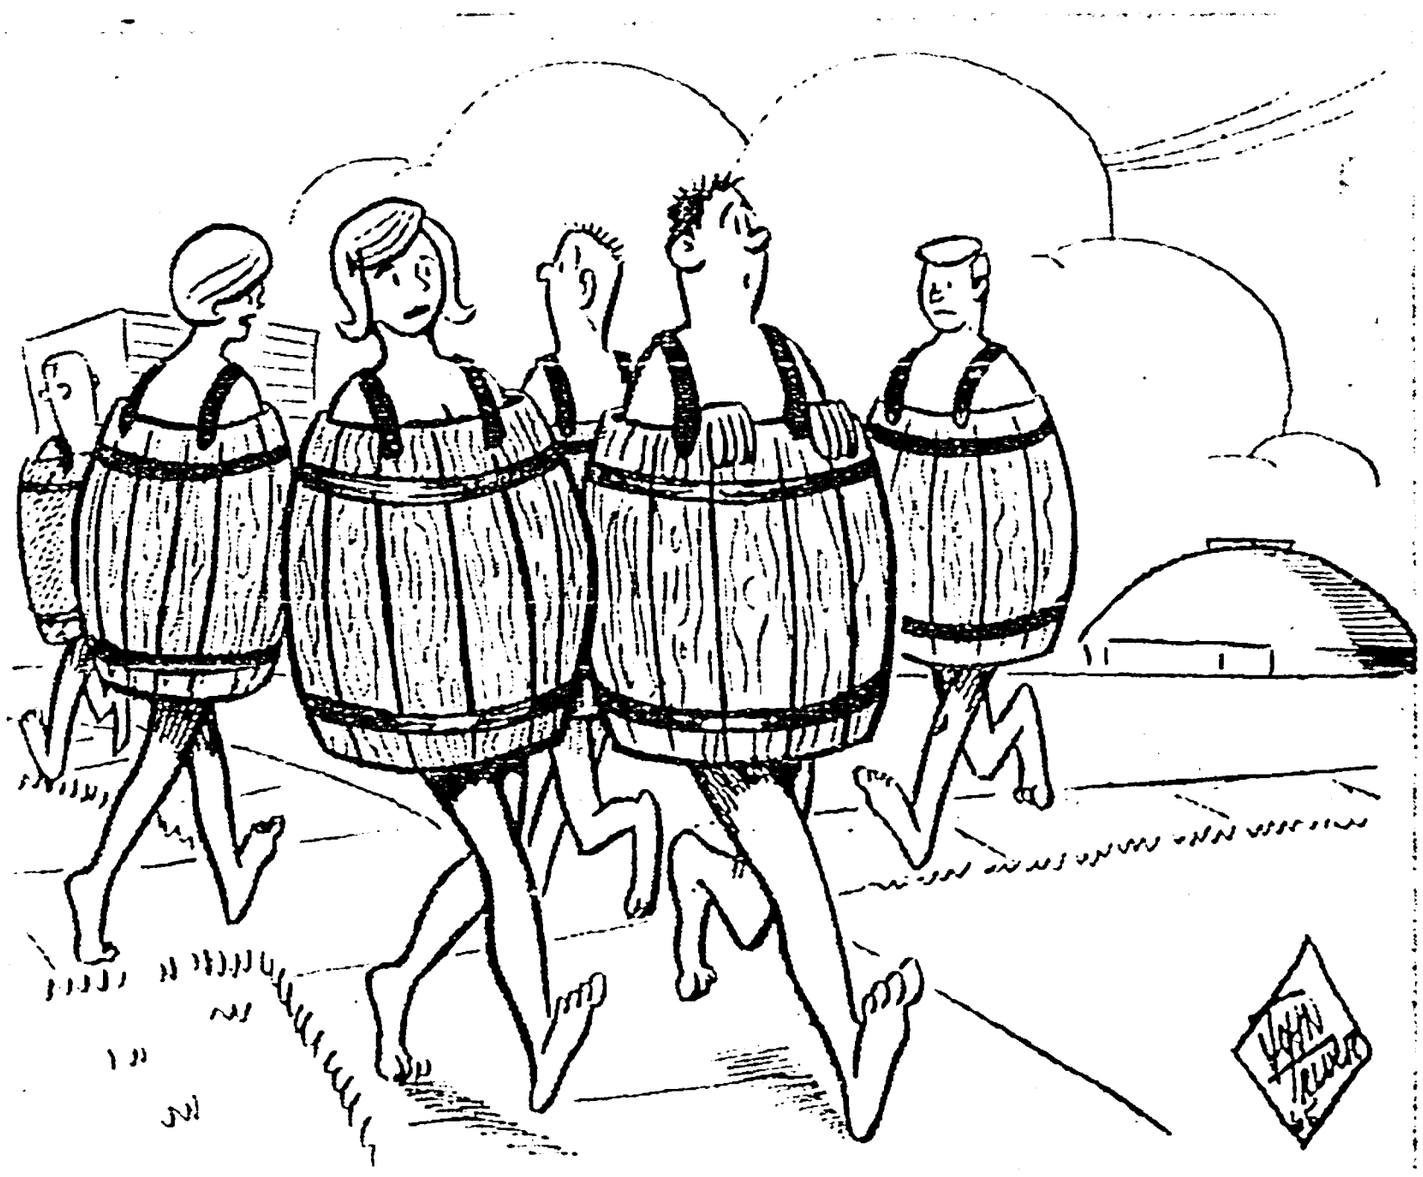
The endowment is the life-blood of the university. The tuition and other fees only cover the bare essentials along with the money obtained from government grants and stipends from private foundations.

And where does the endowment money come from? Usually from loyal alumni who have enough good memories of the old alma mater to put it on the list of worthwhile charities when the time for income tax deductions comes around.

Now we are getting closer to the problem. Syracuse is notorious for its relatively low endowment. This seems to result from a vicious circle. Yes, students, while you are being tied to the rack with only your wallet exposed, the university is hopelessly spinning in a vicious circle.

The construction of that circle is somewhat like this: The university turns out many disgruntled alumni who for some reason or other harbor unpleasant memories or hold some kind of grudge against the university. Hence, any excess funds in the family till go to the United Fund or some other charitable organization with nothing left over for old SU.

So the university must raise the tuition still higher to meet expenses and as a result alienate even more disgruntled future alumni.



There seems to be no way out and if so that is frightening because the university cannot hope to better itself by counting on contributions by alumni who were faced by the threat of a large tuition hike each year they were in school.

There seems but one solution and even that is doubtful. Couldn't there be some plan to fix the fees for each student when his class enters the university? That is, once a person enrolls in the university and maintains a full schedule he will pay only that tuition which he was charged during his first year.

Then each new class can be faced with a higher charge than the class before, but they will only have to pay that increase once and it won't seem like a real increase to them.

This may not work either but the university must find its way out of the vicious circle which forces it to charge Ivy League prices to the students who are helping lay the foundations of greatness rather than being able to enjoy all the fruits of that greatness.

Digest

To the Editor:

I can't understand a policy whereby topics of national sport's interest have priority over the sports of our own University. Pictures of Syracuse athletes in action and a few guild-up articles on golf and tennis should be sought instead of a detailed analysis of how the Giants will do in Candlestick Park in '63.

And this for two reasons. One, D.O. readers should know about our golf and tennis teams and the team members should be honored with an occasional picture and a public description of their talents. In the second place, the writers would learn how to write sports, based on evidence directly obtained through observation and interview.

How did the writer gain his information for Friday's article that began "The fog has lifted in the San Francisco area and the chances for another N.L. pennant flag blowing merrily in the wind tunnel known as Candlestick Park appear to be good."?

The article was actually good, but it was based entirely on the work of other sports writers who got their material through observation and interview. And I believe the latter is the proper school for sports journalism, not digesting the direct work of others.

Interest

To the Editor:

Last Saturday evening, we were stranded in downtown Syracuse with no money for bus fare. Because of the prevalency of crimes and assaults between downtown and this campus, we did not feel that it would be safe to walk home alone. Knowing of no other place to go, we went to the Syracuse Police Department and told them of our situation. The officers and reporters on duty were more than willing to help us. We were safely and promptly driven to the door of our cottage.

We wish to thank the entire Syracuse Police force, especially Richard Hendrickson, a police reporter, who gladly took the time to bring us home to the Hill. We believe this shows that the city police are interested in the safety of university students and are willing to help us whenever possible: a thought all coeds should remember.

Paragon

To the Editor:

It's so wonderful to know that on our campus we poor misguided undergrads have a paragon of virtue toward which we can direct our bright little hearts and minds in order to learn how to live in a "civilized manner." It is not the faculty I refer to, nor even the graduate student body. For some reason which escapes me, the Daily Orange editors seem to feel that they have learned it all and now it is their job to teach. I guess they just aren't "collegiate" anymore now that they're seniors and have an editorial post to hold down.

It is realized that the editorial column offers an excellent opportunity to exercise critical expression which is part of the college learning experience. However, it seems a bit out of character to publish an editorial such as the one in the April 4th D.O. A little less of the "high and mighty" and more of the truly salient campus issues might be in order.

To the Editor:

Congratulations to the "Disillusioned Second-Semester Senior" in Wednesday's D.O. The petty pedantics he indicts helped to make French Ia unpalatable, despite the fact (or perhaps because of the fact) that I am a language major and elected the course as a seventh foreign language.

Ouch

To the Editor:

Congratulations on your fine prediction concerning the tuition raise. You prepared us for the shock although there has been some talk that perhaps the university decided on the raise after reading your editorial Friday.

Whatever the reasons assuming there are some, have not yet gotten over the shock and even today the only words I can get out of my mouth are "Ouch, $U, ouch."

POLICY ON LETTERS

The Daily Orange invites, and even urges, the expression of opinion on the part of its readers. The editors make a sincere effort to publish as many letters as possible, but space and the illegible condition in which some letters are received eliminate several from consideration.

Out of necessity, the editors reserve the right to edit letters for reasons of grammar, space and good taste.

Consequently, writers are urged to type their letters, preferably double-spaced, and to limit them to a maximum of 200 words.

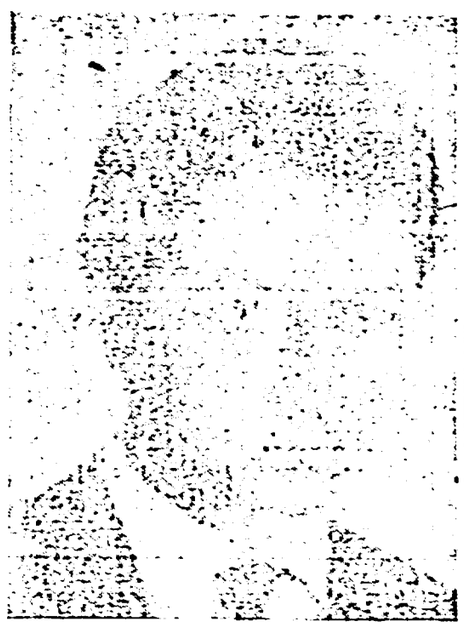
'2 Masters' and Manfred

Turkey...Italy...America...

This is the dramatic combination as Turkish graduate student Manfred Bormann directs the classical Italian farce of Carlo Goldoni, "A Servant for Two Masters," opening April 24 at the Coronet Theater



Bormann comes to Syracuse with literally a "world" of experience. His German parents fled to Istanbul at the outbreak of World War II where he was born. He received his B.A. at Robert College, Istanbul, and directed, there, Brecht's "Mother Courage," Lorca's "The Tragi-Comedy of Don Cristobita and Dona Rosita," and Betti's "Summertime."

At Robert, Bormann met the late Dr. Sawyer Falk, chairman of the Drama Department. Falk encouraged Bormann to apply to Syracuse for graduate work.

Shortly after, the Bormanns returned to Germany and later Switzerland where he worked in amateur theater groups and attended drama classes. Bormann came to Syracuse last semester on a fellowship.

In "A Servant of Two Masters" the quiet, soft spoken director is using a broad style employing the frivolous costumes of the early 1700's, masks and a touch of slapstick.

During his year here Bormann has performed in Harris'

MANFRED BORMAN

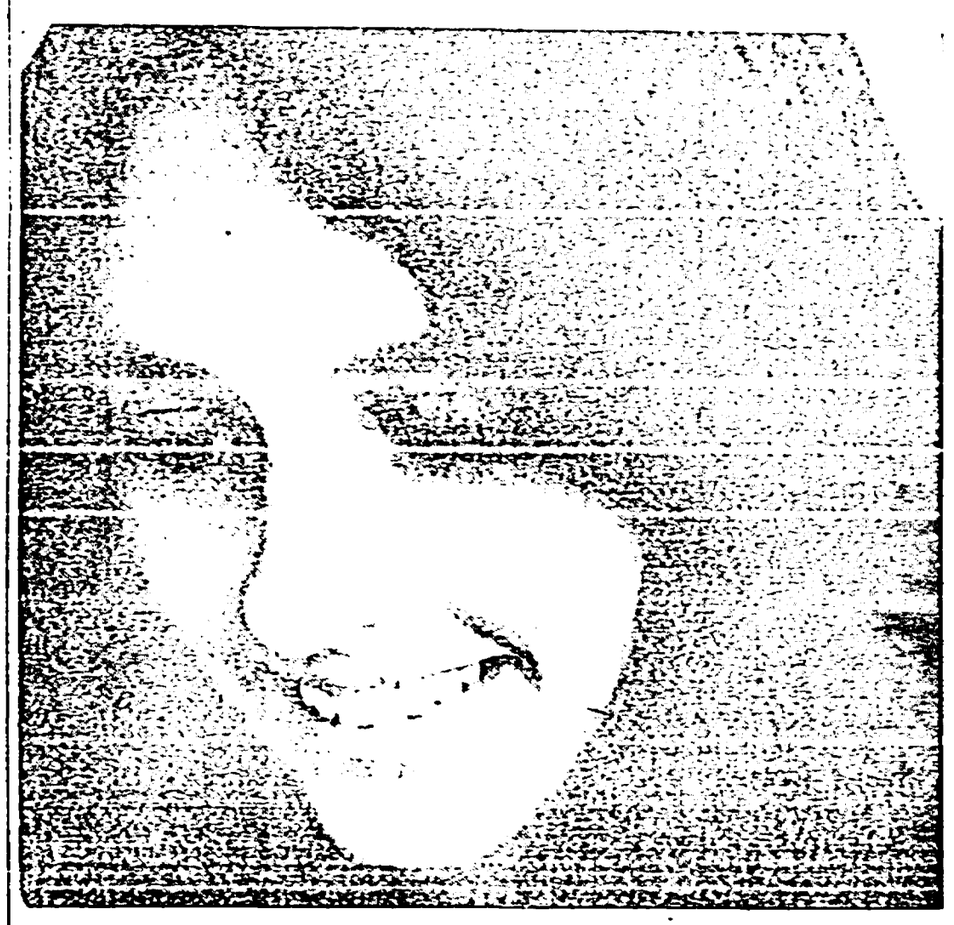
"The Fisherman" and Chekhov's "On the Harmfulness of Tobacco" which he has played at the Lively Arts coffeehouse and in the current "Best of Boar's Head" series at Sadler Hall.

He also served as the assistant director of last month's production of "Romeo and Juliet."

George Szell, TheCleveland

The 45-year old Cleveland Orchetra, George Szell conducting, will appear Wednesday, April 24 at Lincoln Auditorium under the sponsorship of Civic Morning Musicals.

The orchestra, hailed as one of the best in the world will open its concert with the Overture to Verdi's opera "La Forza Del Destino."



Next work on the program will be Mozart's Divertimento in D Major for the flute, oboe, bassoon, four horns and strings.

The major piece of the evening will be Tschaikovsky's Symphony No. 4 in F minor, opus 36.

Since its founding, the Cleveland has played more than 1,700 concerts. In 1957 the orchestra toured 10 European countries.

Conductor Szell has been with the Cleveland 14 years and is noting, this year, his 50th anniversary as a conductor. He began his career at the age of 16, five years before the orchestra was founded.

Baez!

THE NEWPORT Jazz Festival in 1959-a Time magazine cover story in 1963. Between these two events JOAN BAEZ has become one of the nation's most popular folk singers. Syracuse audiences will hear this soft spoken, warm toned artist for the first time in War Memorial concert circle, Wednesday, April 24.

BOOKS

'A Sudden Silence'

REVIEWER Valerie Eisen is a sophomore English major, a staffer of "The Sword of Damocles" and advertising manager of the Onondagan.

A SUDDEN SILENCE by John Minahan. New York: William Morrow and Co., 1963. 191 pp. $3.95.

John Minahan's new novel, "A Sudden Silence," treats the controversial subject of illegal abortion in a mature and non-sensational fashion. The story concerns Kristi Bradford, a Cornell coed whose mother's illness combines with social pressures to force her to seek an abortion she does not want.

The author does not dwell upon the moral and political aspects of Kristi's decision except as they affect her way of thinking. He concentrates instead on a sympathetic yet factual description of Kristi's view of her tragedy as seen through her eyes and those of a close friend.

Minahan's remarkable powers of description elicit from his audience the strong emotional response usually reserved for more strongly biased authors. He writes with an intricacy of detail that in less skillful hands would serve to hopelessly bog down the story.

In the case of "A Sudden Silence," however, the minute descriptions of characters, places and events serve to clarify situations and make the characters thoroughly believable as human beings. The book unfolds with the vividness of a motion picture, and the reader feels he is being swept down a tumble of verbage to an inevitable conclusion.

John Minahen is not merely telling a dramatic story in "A Sudden Silence." He is questioning the mores of a society which will drive girls, such as Kristi Bradford, mercilessly toward self-destruction when they break its rules.

The author does not moralize or give any explicit opinions, but you cannot read this book without thinking beyond the immediate tragedy of its protagonist to the tragedies of thousands of girls like her.

The novel is the good first effort of a promising writer. It is not a great book. You may not remember the story line a week after finishing it but you won't forget the feeling of hopeless tragedy engendered by reading it.

'Science Needs Cooperation'

By DANIEL RITEY
Junior Editor

Scientific work and research "cost too much in money and manpower to be attempted by a single nation," Prof. Warren B. Walsh told freshman citizenship sections Monday afternoon in Marshall Auditorium.

"Furthermore," he said, "no country has a monopoly on scientific genius, technicians and technology. Few nations can afford the costs involved with nuclear and space research."

Support of international science projects and multilateral efforts are less than century old, Walsh said. "Early examples were the Bureau of Weights and Measurements and the Council for Exploration of the Sea."

Military

"During the last war, multilateral cooperation and development were militarily slanted, but in post-war times the trends have been toward global and regional organizations and enormous costs."

Prof. Walsh outlined the development of two such international cooperation groups. The European Space Research Organization (ESRO) and the EuropeanLauncher Development Organization (ELDO).

"Both groups are very young and have a lot of unfinished business facing them," Walsh noted.

ESRO is the brain-child of an Italian professor of physics, Walsh said. He suggested that European nations pool their resources and efforts in space research because "it is so costly in money and men that single European countries could not keep pace with the U.S. and the U.S.S.R."

planation of "increased operating expenses." "I like to know why and where my money is going," he said.

Federal Aid

Stephen Lipsig, a sophomore medical student, said, "I think more pressure will be put on legislators to secure federal support for private colleges in order to decrease the financial load on each student."

"This increase indicates that the higher expenses colleges are forced to meet cannot be met in the long run by the student," he added. "A genuine reappraisal of the economic burden of college costs is in order."

A faculty member who asked to remain anonymous fears that Syracuse "will price it-self right out of the market.

"Syracuse has depended heavily on Regents scholarships to defray partially the expenses," he said. "Now there is talk of allowing these scholarships to be used out of state which will decrease the number of students attending schools within the state."

Alison Gordinier, a junior, commented, "If tuition goes too much higher, Syracuse will have to become a state school. People cannot afford these prices and the university is not endowed enough to subsidize rising costs."

Effects

The effect of the hike on individual students varied.

Mary Louise Argyle, a junior, pointed out that now women will have a chance to live off campus "away from the university parental yoke."

"I will not be able to afford university housing because of this increase and will have to live off campus next year or else take a loan which I don't want to do," she said.

Stephen Meyerson, a freshman, said the raise was "uncalled for and puts a lot of strain on everyone."

"The university could have done without the change because it gets a lot of money from other sources," he noted.

'Not Worried'

Another freshman, Carol Yaffee, said she isn't worrying about the increase. "I'm on complete scholarship aid and as long as it covers all my expenses, I don't have to worry about the hike."

"If my scholarship does not cover all expenses, I will have to dro pout of school," she said.

While this increase is unfair to most students, said Freshman Gail Halstead, most applicants to Syracuse expect to pay high prices.

Gilmore Scores Bill

however, interest in a case dies down after an excution, he added.

Gilmore noted examples of prejudice against poorer people and minority groups. "Ustain the best legal counsel ualy these people cannot ob- for their defense, because lawyers are unwilling to pay for trials out of their own pockets."

This racial and social prejudice would tend to be prevalent even if the truth penalty was abolished, he said.

"Thirdly, the death penalty does not have use as a deterrent to further crime as had been originally hoped," Gilmore said. Executions in the U.S. have been delcining since World War Two; New York State executives six or seven people a year on the average, he added.

Shocked Reaction

"The public is getting to the point where it is a little shocked at executions even though it may not say abolish it outright. Some governors opposed to executitions have tried to commute death sentences whenever possible," he remarked.

"Our Committee has gotten a fair amount of publicity, but now we are waiting for recommendations from the New York Commission to Study the Penal Code before acting further," Gilmore noted. Once into action, the Committee will employ lobbying, pamphlets, radio speeches and talks by members, he added.

Gilmore noted that most people who argue for the death penalty "do not think their arguments through and also lack a bady of facts for their position."

The earliest a bill abolishing capital punishment in New York could reach the Assembly would be early 1964, and since that is an election year, assemblymen would be wary of dealing with such a touchy topic, Gilmore said.

Referendum

"The state of Oregon had a referendam abolishing the death penalty but it was defeated by 10,000 votes. This action has made other states reluctant to propose such legislation," he said.

"Most of my work with the Committee is done on weekends and in evenings." Gilmore explained, "also, we have been aided by psychiatrists, ministers and the City Democratic Party Chairman."

"Gov. Rockefeller is to be commended for his fairness to our Committee and number of commuted instences he has given. It should be further noted that the death penalty—far from deterring crime — actually makes for harsher actions by criminals," he concluded.

sophomore senate, serving as a continuation of this year's Freshman Forum, to promote "unity within the class through the senate."

US suggests an inter-class executive council, composed of representatives from all four classes to centralize student government operation.

Wurtenberger also plans a newsletter, adding that he will attempt to have minutes of executive council and senate meetings printed in the Daily Orange.

He says that through the smaller executive council, along with the senate, he hopes to obtain ideas for a better homecoming as well as class projects.

Tradewinds Capture Title in Battle of Bands

The Tradewinds, SU's newest rock-and-roll twist band, captured first place in Sunday's "Battle of the Bands." At least 1,000 students crowded into Kimmel Dining Hall to listen to fice campus bands battle for a $100 first prize.

Resident advisor Mike Rosenthal and the Kimmel-Marion Dorm Council sponsored the contest. In addition to the Tradewinds, the Elites, winners of the $50 second prize, the Darquiries, the Countdowns, and the Escorts performed for the listening and dancing audience.

Ballots were distributed to each student at the entrance to the dining hall. They were collected and tabulated at the end of the contest.

A 50-cent admission was charged to defray the cost of the prize money, but the exceptional turnout allowed the dorm council to make an unanticipated profit, according to Rosenthal.

Organized only two months ago, the predominately freshman Tradewinds defeated the Elites by only 18 votes. The six members of the winning band are Howie Wyeth, drums, Bill Goldman, vocal, Lymie Wickwire, bass, Ralph Stockmayer, rhythm, and Dan Abbott and Denny Masik lead guitars.

on an "intelligent level" and listed a program for the Class of '64.

Long recommends a "pertinent lecture series." featuring guests from graduate schools. He also suggests talks on the 1964 presidential campaign, and other "controversial topics."

He suggests a monthly meeting between officers of each class and student government officials to "avoid a duplication of ideas and efforts."

The slate proposes a senior class magazine, "In Retrospect," which would be a summation of the class history from orientation to the senior year, featuring pictures and articles on the class.

Long points out that a basic responsibility of the class is obtaining a commencement speaker, and he says he will begin work on the project immediately, so that the best available speaker may be obtained.

He notes the slate favors a "forward fiscal policy," including a weekend where coeds will treat men one night, and the usual routine the second night. He said the class will also sell "Pop" buttons on Parents' Weekend, as well as the traditional mums.

Washington To Start First And End Last in Pennant

By JON GILMORE

George (Twinkletoes) Selkirk once had the task of replacing Babe Ruth in right field. Now, as General Manager of the Washington Senators, he has an even tougher job. That of rounding up personnel capable of keeping the Senators out of t nth.

Here is what he has to start with:

At the start of the spring there was only one first baseman on the roster, a fine prospect named Rogelio Alvarez who hit .318 at San Diego. But Alvarez is in Cuba and they can't get him out.

So they picked up Bobo Osborne from Detroit where he had been shouldering on the bench for two years after leading the minors in hitting in 1960. And they got Tom Brown, a large switch hitter who has assured himself of a job with his hitting and fielding this spring. Osborne, if he is not at first, will literally make a blind stab at third.

Chuck Cottier is the best in a league of good fielding second baseman. At the plate he is the worst.

Kennedy Out

Manager Mickey Vernon shipped a shortstop with the unlikely name of John F. Kennedy off to the minors and conceded the job to Ed Brinkman (.165) which does not say too much for Kennedy.

Joe Schaffernoth is himself the club's third baseman. "Anybody who wants to beat me out will have to hit better than me which I doubt they can do it," says Schaf (.238, 6HRs) with a straight face. He sprained his ankle in training and said, "There goes the pennant."

Fill-ins behind this crew include Marv Breeding, who can play all infield positions badly and also can't hit, and minor league handy men Lew Klimchock and Dick Phillips.

Minnie Minoso

From the Cardinals comes Minne Minoso, aged 40 (?). Minoso, upon arrival at the Senators camp, claimed he could play "at least 130 games" and people scoffed. But the old man promptly belted a homer which is something special for the Senators, and Vernon named him as starting left fielder.

Jim Piersall didn't hit last year and didn't hit even more this spring. The Senators remember that once he could hit, but their memories are being stretched. James can still catch more flys than any outfielder anywhere, but catching flys doesn't score runs.

Hinton Star

There is one man on the team that does, believe it or not. Right fielder Chuck Hinton not only can field, but he hit .310 with 17 home runs and 28 steals. This man does not belong.

Before Minoso's arrival, the left fielder was Don Lock who had spent many years in the minor leagues on the under side of a .250. He has power, though and can field. Jim King also has power but can't field. That is they have power relative to the standard of Washington hitting.

Behind the plate Ken Retzer hit .285, and Bob Schmidt hit 10 homers.

Pitching Good

One thing the Senators hae is pitching. Tom Cheney and Dave Stenhouse were among the top pitchers in the league last year, and could probably win 15-20 games with any kind of offensive aid. Claude Osteen and Don Rudolph were almost as good rounding out the starting corps, and have looked even better in the spring.

Mickey Vernon says he is happy to have a lot of personnal to shuffle around this year, more than in previous years. All it means though, is the Senators are going to loose with more people.

Sports Shorts

The National Hockey League finals in the Stanley Cup Playoffs begin tonight with Toronto meeting Detroit in the best of seven series. The Red Wing defeated the Black Hawks four games to two to gain a berth in the finals. Toronto beat Montreal in a five game series.

The profession basketball playoffs enter into finals Wednesday night at Boston with the Celtics meeting the winner of the Los Angeles-St. Louis series.

One time pitching great Herb Score quit his comeback attempt Sunday, leaving the Chicago White Sox training camp. Score, once valued at one million dollars in the baseball trading market, was struck down by a line drive six years ago virtually ending then what could have been a great career in baseball.

The Syracuse Stars ended the local hockey season Sunday with a season mark of 41-3.

Scrimmages Start In Spring Drills

Syracuse gridders got in some hard hitting Saturday for the first time in spring scrimmage. with an intersquad scrimmage.

Coach Ben Schwartzwalder mentioned Jim Nance, Walley Mahle and the offensive line as impressing him out of the group he worked with. "Nance hit in there pretty good," Ben said. "Mahle was also sharp."

Offensive Line

"The offensive line worked real good in there as a unit," according to Schwartzwalder. Dick Bowman, Jim Cripps, John Salerno, Len Slaby, Jim Mazurek, Tom Wilhelm and John Paglio are working on the offensive forward wall.

Ben singled out a few frosh as having looked good Saturday. "Oyer is going to be a good boy for us," he said in reference to Ron Oyer, a 195-pound rookie halfback.

Bob Mitchell gained some attention from coaches as a defensive linebacker Saturday. "Harry Elliott also worked good at end," Ben said. Dave Archer, Nat Duckett and Rich King and Mike Koski before he hurt his ankkle, all were impressive.

Injuries

"There is a big drop off between our first and second units right now. We've got a few boys out leaving us a little depth shy," the Hill coach said. Jerry Everling is out with an injury suffered while wrestling at the nationals. Koski is hurt with Ed Allen also banged up. Bill Schoonover can't hit yet as a result of a bad arm. Halfback Jim Gaskims is also sidelined.

Ben plans to work on defense this week with another hitting scrimmage Wednesday.

A protest against unaffiliated candidates for sophomore class office was rejected Thursday by Elections Commissioner Arthur Perschetz.

The protest, signed by Ronald Brezezinski, Campus Alliance Party president and CAP candidate for senior class president, as well as by Robert Taylor, United Students party head, reportedly dealt with use of the word "independent" in campaigning by the candidates in question.

Campaigning enters its final day today with 99 candidates continuing to round up support for Thursday's trip to the polls in general campus elections.

Only 32 of the candidates will emerge victorious after ballots are counted, and barring complications, the university will have new student government heads, class officers and legislature senators-at-large.

Three parties will appear on the ballot. They are the Greek Independent Alliance, which will occupy the first row on the voting machines; Campus Alliance Party, in the second row; and United Students party, with candidates listed in the third row.

Also appearing on the machines will be five independent candidates for sophomore class positions. Four are running for class offices, and one is an entrant for senators-at-large.

Dr. Christofides To Speak on Art

Dr. C. G. Christofides, associate professor of romance languages, will speak on "The Three Faces of Art" and show slides of Egyptian temples at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in Gifford Auditorium, H. B. Crouse Hall.

The lecture, sponsored by Freshman Footprints, is open to the campus.

Dr. Christofides will discuss architectural statuary in Egyptian, Greek and Gothic art forms.

The slides, taken on a between-semesters trip to the Upper Nile River area, show temples at Abu Simbel that may be flooded upon completion of the Aswan Dam.

Dr. Christofides joined the Hill faculty in 1959, after teaching at the State University of Iowa and the University of Michigan, where he received his doctorate in comparative literature.

He is a visiting member of the department of fine arts, coordinator of the Summer Humanities Reading Program and review editor of Symposium, a periodical in modern literatures published by the romance languages department and the Syracuse University Press.

Specializing in 17th century French prose writers, Dr. Christofides is preparing a book on Pascal.

His published work includes studies on Camus, theories of imagination and the aesthetics of photography.

Last year Lowe Art Center sponsored an exhibit of Dr. Christofides' photographs. He has also exhibited in Ann Arbor, Mich., the Detroit Institute of Art and the Toledo Museum.

His photographs have appeared in national and international publications.

2 Fraternities Burglarized; Vacant Cottages Ransacked

By HOWIE GINSBURG
Junior Editor

The trouble that always accompanies spring on the Hill campus has begun. This week two fraternities were robbed, two recently vacated cottages stripped to the walls, a sorority door taken off its hinges in the middle of the night and personal property stolen from two students.

Insult was added to injury when Theta Chi fraternity, 127 College Pl., was robbed twice in two days. Sunday Theta Chi reported a plaque with a brass crest worth $85 missing. Also reported stolen was a leather crest worth $100, according to Security Police reports.

Monday, thieves entered the fraternity a second time and took $25 worth of kitchen utenthrough unlocked doors. Syracuse City Police are investigating the case with Security Posils. Both entrances were made lice.

TKE Robbed Again

Brothers of Tau Kappa Epsilon, 111 College Pl., also reported kitchen utensils missing. Security Police believes thieves entered the house between 1 and 3 a.m. Monday. The doors were left unlocked by the fraternity. TKE brothers reported a Hobart mixer worth $155 among the missing items. City Police are investigating the robbery.

TKE was also robbed during spring vacation when thieves broke a window on the second floor and entered the house. Two wallets, a wrist watch and a tape recorder were stolen at that time.

Cottages Ransacked

White Cottage, 783 Irving Ave., vacated at the beginning of this semester, was completely ransacked during the past weekend. Three beds were taken with two mattresses, according to Security Police. Also reported missing are five desk lamps, two study desks, a desk chair, three regular chairs, three mirrors, two dressers, two bookcases, three tables and a hall clock. There are no leads to the theft.

Roosevelt Cottage, 777 Irving Ave., was also entered Security Police report two rugs, two chairs, a couch, one table, a piano bench and a tool box filled with tools were missing. City Police have been called in on both cases.

Missing Door

A screen door was taken off its hinges at Alpha Xi Delta sorority, 125 Euclid Ave., late Sunday night. Two or three boys were seen tampering with the door and were chased from the premises. Security Police discovered the tools used to pry the door loose and are investigating the case.

A brown wallet was stolen from Kingsley Stannard, a freshman at DellPlain Hall, Sunday afternoon. Stannard left his coat in DellPlain's main lounge for a few minutes. When he returned his wallet had been stolen.

On Friday a coed reported her coat missing. She reportedly left it in the ladies lounge of Crouse College; when she returned a few minutes later it was gone. The coat is valued at $20.

"Immediate action" is the motto of Campus Alliance Party candidates for class of 1964 officers.

Nominees Ronald Brzezinski, president; Nan Keating, vice president; Cecile 'Ceci" Sogioka, secretary; and Gerald Matlin, treasurer, named a 10 point platform including class-government relations, commencement and the senior executive councils.

Specifically they urge:

1. Dichotomy between class and Joint Student Government.

"We would like to strengthen ties between the two governments—in order to have a better chance to accomplish our plans.

"We would like to break the thin white line between the two thus establishing a sound stu-

Class of '65

Campus Alliance Party junior class officer candidates have offered an eight point platform of improvements for their class.

Nominees running in the April 11 campus elections are Carl Corrallo, president; Walley Mahle, vice president; Sussan Rowland , secretary and Jane Talcott, treasurer.

The four advocate:

1. Winter Weekend: "The junior class is presently without a social function. We would like to get Winter Weekend assigned to the junior class or have at least one day or night assigned to us permanently."

2. Class and student government: "Student government is making a move to incorporate class government in its sphere of influence. This is good but we would like to see the action

SU Applications Up 10 Percent

By CHARLES STEINBERG

"Syracuse is moving," says Lester H. Dye, Syracuse University director of admissions.

Winding up this year's selection of the freshman class, Dye notes a 10 percent increase in number of applications and a noticeable rise in quality.

"As an admissions officer I have to be most impressed with the applications we have received this year," he told the Daily Orange. "Of course we are competing with other colleges," he reminded, "and it is not yet known how many successful applicants will choose to attend Syracuse."

"But we aren't seeing so wide a range in the quality of applications as previously," Dye said. Many obviously unqualified applicants no longer even bother to apply here, he noted.

The size of the entering freshman class will continue to remain at 2,100 students, Director Dye said. SU plans no increase in student enrollment without a proportionate increase in faculty members since the student: faculty ratio, now about 12 to 1 is considered "extremely important" by the university, says Dye.

LESTER DYE

Dye gives much credit to a newly instituted program of high school visits by Admissions Office officials and faculty members for improving the stream of applications to Syracuse. He notes that visits this year to relatively distant places as Denver and San Francisco have resulted in applications for admission to Syracuse from these areas. The visiting schedule will be further expanded in coming years, Dye noted.

Population growth is also coming to play an important part in the admissions picture: over the 1964-66 period applications to colleges are expected to almost double, he said.

While Syracuse is committed to serving a "spectrum of abilities," Dye noted that this does not mean a full spectrum. "We'll always admit the most qualified applicants," he said, "but if you mean will we have an established cut-off point on College Board scores, etc. the answer is no. "We try to select the candidates we feel will be successful," he said.

"We have instances of students with rather undistinguished secondary school records or test scores who have gone on to do outstanding work here and in later life," Dye noted. Syracuse always hope to have some room for these types of people, he said.

Wanted: Mensches

In keeping with the tradition of the Jewish holiday of Passover, we reproduced this editorial from the Michigan Daily entitled "On Becoming a 'Mensch'".

"German and Yiddish offer a concept Grecian in its beauty and profundity: the concept of a 'Mensch'.

"A mensch is, literally, a'real human being'. Colloquially he would be 'neat' or 'regular'. To him we may attribute the vertu of a Renaissance man, and the endearing human qualities which spring from a great heart.

"The point is that we face a shortage of mensche and the university should see about turning out some more.

"We cannot just transform a motley group of 27,000 students into mensches. We need a pilot group to begin with and the Honors College seems a likely guinea pig. Honors students, having passed a rigid screening, should be capable of the metamorphis to menschlichkeit. . . . .

"But admission to honors does not automatically bestow menschlichkeit. Attaining such a character requires much sweat, which at present is not forthcoming—or at least not in the right direction.

"How, then, can we channel sweat into a mensch machine?

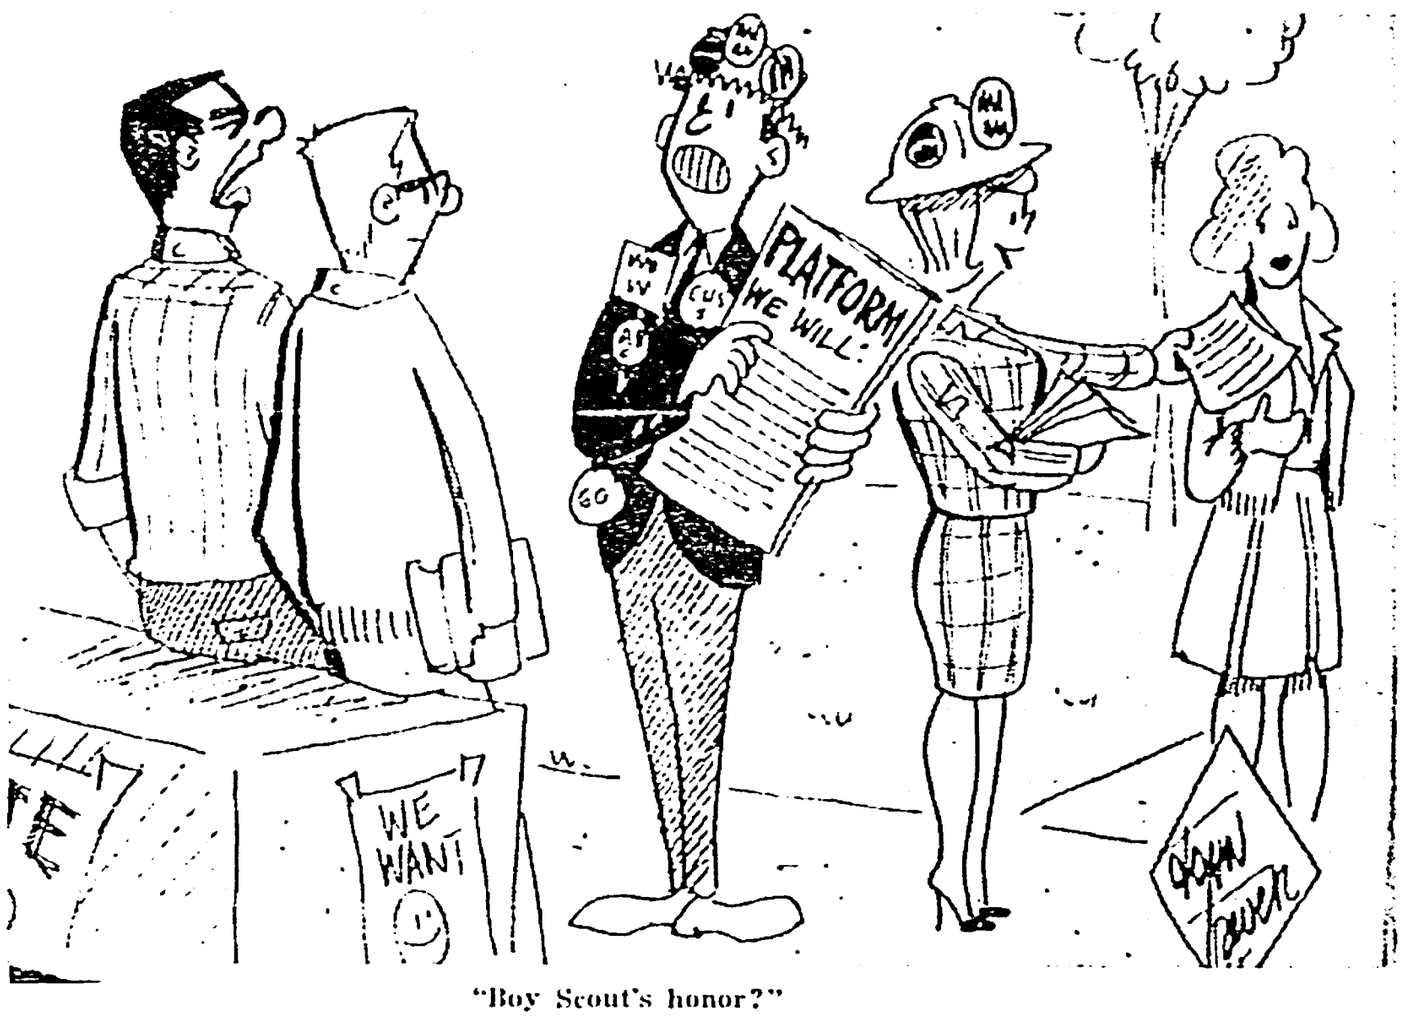
"The university offers the greatest potential mensch machine conceivable. Its lecture series daily presents glimpses into every field of human endeavor. Its concerts and professional theater programs render art a living practicality to those who take advantage of them, as we do the multitudinous student productions. Even a serious stroll through the university museums broadens the student, making him more of a mensch.

"Participating in educational student activities is even more menschable. The nation's best glee club, marching and symphony bands, musical comedy group, college newspaper are all available . . . . In addition to the skills the mensch's vertu, gained through these activities, the participant gains the mensch's human qualities by working cooperatively with people of different opinions and backgrounds, with superiors of wider experience, with the most stimulating minds of our generation.

"But our mensch material in Honors with the 3.0 average and the super-abundance of work demanded of it hanging over its head rarely finds time to delve into these activities to explore new realms of thought.

"And delve the mensch candidate must. Delve not drown. The honors work load or grade requirement should not be drastically reduced to allow students to throw themselves hog-wild into free-lance education; but they could be liberalized to permit more mensch-producing experience. . . . . .

"The problem lies more in the general nature of formal education than in any particular course. Studying four or five courses a semester hardly develops the wide range of a mensch. The English major is rarely free to attend lectures on, say, paleontology, a fascinating subject which should be at least mildly familiar to every mensch.



"Similarly, few chemistry majors get to sing and few political science majors can cultivate an interest in horticulture. Liberalized work loads and grade requirements would enable people to improve themselves with such diversity.

"Enable. True, less work would enable students to mensch it. But some system of seeing that they do seems necessary. Conferences between students and teachers, such as those held in English universities, suggest themselves. Evaluation of a student's progress would be informal. Instructors, with fewer formal assignments to grade, would have the time for such conferences.

"At an honors assembly early this semester, honors students were advised not to let classes interfere with their education. Hopefully the advisers will make their advice feasible; will, in effect, allow for more mensching it."

Now, in using this basically Yiddish theme, the author has pointed to some universals that apply as much to Syracuse students as to Michigan students. While Syracuse doesn't offer all the things that Michigan does, but offers others that the Big Ten school doesn't, we hope there are some facts here that can help lead to more mensches at SU.

LETTERS

Queens

To the Editor:

I have become exceedingly sick of the trend toward hypocritical, holier-than-thou sniping at the Greek system that has appeared in the Daily Orange recently, both in columns and letters to the editor. The proverbial last straw, which compelled me to write this letter, was the letter in last Friday's DO from courageously outspoken "Name Withheld."

This sad, tedious, and ridiculously unnecessary diatribe protested the IFC Queen Contest's stipulation that contestants must be sorority girls and that they are to be judged on the basis of physical beauty exclusively. Its author eagerly siezes the opportunity to cry discrimination on one hand, and to bemoan on the other what he or she apparently feels to be the blatant disregard of the higher aesthetics of feminine appeal.

Physical beauty is one of the most compelling and enjoyable attrtibutes a woman can possess, and it is gratifying to note that the Greeks have the honesty to admit their appreciation for this side of feminine appeal. Too often this honesty is proved absent by the disproportionate value placed on "sparkling personality," "talent," and "girlish sweetness" in such contests.

The Puritan Influence still stalks the quad, and physical beauty and its unspoken concomitant, sex, have a rough time fighting for equal consideration with those ethereal virtues of the mentality and the personality. Congratulations to the Greeks and IFC for recognizing and celebrating this elemental appeal of the woman.

But is it really necessary to point out that the fraternity system is not attempting to compel universal acclamation of the glamour girl as the ideal woman? It is only the neurotic and the blindly prejudiced who would accuse the Greeks as a group of advocating a queen who ". . . need not have a brain in her head nor a pleasant personality nor an admirable character," as Name Withheld finds it necessary to do.

Beauty somewhat logically does not exclude any of the characteristics the letter's author seems to feel it must. It may be assumed that the contestants have some semblance of a brain in their heads, since they are college students. In regard to "admirable character," it would seem rather presumptuously righteous to require of each of the contestants a series of character references, complete with certificate of virginity, etc.

Why does the Unknown Author feel it his duty to condemn the IFC and the fraternity system for choosing a girl from a particular group of girls to represent a particular ideal? Perhaps he or she also feels that the concept of a beauty contest discriminates against ugly girls? That the Admissions Office discriminates against unintelligent applicants? Limitations by no means indicate discrimination, and the distinction has been made very seldom in arguments over the Greek system.

The IFC makes no presumption to the effect that their queen will be prettier than any independent girl, as the letter infers. Name Withheld's inferiority complex is showing, as well as a faulty and hypocritical sense of values in calling physical beauty a "superficial" component of feminine appeal.

Why is the queen contest a sad appeal on the fraternity system and on Syracuse University? Why is it not the prerogative of the IFC to select a queen on the basis of the criteria it chooses? What gives Name Withheld the right to dogmatically determine the absolutes of a girl's attractiveness and to try to impose his personal standards on a group entirely within the bounds of propriety in acting as it is? The letter, rather than gaining the objective it apparently tries for, achieves no more than a revealing condemnation of its author and of the entire type of thinking it represents. I have seen too much of it.

Sincerely,
John Bachers

Israel

To the Editor:

The basic fact is that the Egyptian government is undeniably employing German scientists in the development of war material, specifically, high-speed aircraft. Undeniably since, a) the government of Egypt as so constituted could have easily "managed" to suppress such a fact and, b) the government of Egypt has not chosen to deny this basic fact.

Corollary facts are: a) Israel was the first Middle East nation to fire rocket-missles, which feat was greeted by American news media as a fine showing of muscle for a 13-year old democracy; a democracy, incidentally, whose internal policy actively seeks to make second-class citizens out of its Christian and Moslem constituents; b) Israel, all U.N. records, has been the aggressor in the Middle East political upheavals which directly involve the land of Exodus; c) Israel occupies more than 1.5 times the area ceded to it by the U.N. resolution of 1947, which resolution is readily adhered to by the state of Israel as a proof of legitimate nationhood.

From this factual array, the oracle of the Cuban Crisis, Senator K. Keating sadly concludes that "the government of Egypt is vaguely reminiscent of that of Nazi Germany." In view of the deafening silence in the wake of this gross smear several questions I believe are in order.

First, is a government which employs the talents of a Werner Von Braun in its space program also "vaguely reminiscent of that of Nazi Germany?"

Second, are not such senatorial airipgs extremist, a stark display of the enigmatic mentality which sees a Nazi menace in every adverse polititcal instance?

Third, where is our department of justice in this affair? Surely the man who ended the sybaritic reign of Farouk, who payed his international debts in full deserves a better hearing than that given him, namely, none.

Finally, how much longer can the U.N. afford to give only gruel to the bodies of those million Arab refugees? How much longer can mankind refuse to give any hope to their souls?

Joining the SU Singers will be the choruses of Sigma Alpha Iota music honorary for women, the Phi Mu Alpha men's honorary chorus and a special male chorus of faculty members in the School of Music.

Dancer Lorraine Havercroft, tenor Paul Dieke, soprano Ellen Slingerland, pianists George Pappa-Stavrou, Donald Sutherland, Stuart Raleigh and Stuart Lanning and Ray Irwin, who will do a spoken commentary, will participate. Advisor for staging is Ben Shaktman of the Drama Department.

Guess who offered me an executive position with a leading organization, where I'll get good pay, further my education, and enjoy world travel?

My uncle.

In this case, nepotism's a pretty good idea. And the best way to get it is through Air Force ROTC—because the Air Force prefers to commission its officers directly upon graduation. But if you couldn't fit AFROTC into your schedule, you can still apply for Air Force Officer Training School.

OTS offers college men and women an opportunity to assume great responsibility. When you complete the three-month course, you'll be commissioned a second lieutenant, and become a part of a vital aspect of our defense effort. As an Air Force officer, you'll be a leader on the Aerospace Team.

We welcome your application for OTS now—but the same may not be true next year. So if you're within 210 days of graduation, get full information from the Professor of Air Science.

CAP Nominees Set Planks

"H" is for Homecoming Weekend. The CAP nominees wish to establish the weekend as a three-day affair, with a jazz concert Sunday afternoon on the Quad.

A business meeting one month before the weekend, to promote student participation in the weekend, is also being sponsored by the CAP candidates.

initiated on the class level rather than have SG sweep us in with little consideration for the class as such.

"The president would attend legislature meetings to give the class officers a better idea of what is going on and will meet with the senators-at-large."

3. Orange Aid: "The last government of the class of 1964 accomplished a great deal with the completion of the Orange Aid for the class of 1966. We plan to continue this and hope the tradition will carry on."

4. Frosh night: "We would like to have a junior class sponsored "Frosh Nite." This would give the freshmen a chance to meet the junior class as a whole and not just the goons and traditions commission members.

5. Notre Dame - Syracuse game: "We would like to have a party held in New York City after this game for the Syracuse students."

6. Public Relations: "By the appointment of a class information assistant, we could have an area of class government which, under the supervision of the vice president, would be devoted entirely to class communications and publicity.

7. Executive council: "Executive council meetings would be open to anyone who contacts one of the officers beforehand. This would allow people to come and present their ideas and complaints to their class government.

"Representatives from Interfraternity Council and Panhellenic council would be recognized as voting members on executive council."

8. Lectures on Life: "We would like to see a series of lectures given from a practical point of view. Lectures on contemporary ethics in the world of entertainment, sports etc. would be part of this series."

dent government."

2. Commencement exercises: "We would like to advocate our plan of immediate action in organizing various committees for the functions of commencement so that our exercises will be successful."

Committees would include: speaker, gift, ball and senior weekend.

3. Calendar: "We would like to inaugurate a calendar which would list the events of each day with room for notes."

4. Syracuse Club: "We would like to start an alumni club in New York City which could be later expanded to other parts of the country. This would be similar to the Harvard or Yale alumni clubs."

5. Foreign films: "We would like to sponsor a foreign film series in Huntington B. Crouse building.

6. Joint weekend: "We would like to unite with the junior class in holding a joint weekend with both classes supplying funds and splitting the profits.

"Thus we would be able to afford big name talent for our weekends."

7. Mock campaign: "We would like to organize a mock political convention as as done in 1959 since it will be an election year."

8. Executive council: "We would like to form an executive council of diversified people such as greeks, independents and students from different colleges on campus.

"This would represent a greater variety of opinions on student government."

9. Regional Pinebrook: "We would like to have a conference with various schools in the region to discuss common problems.

10. Speakers: "We would like to sponsor prominent speakers in practical fields for the senior class."

$100 Idea Deadline Monday

Tau Theta Upsilon reminds the campus that the deadline for its "$100 Idea" contest is Monday. A Tau Theta spokesman said that since the university has raised tuition $130, this contest enables someone on campus to win $100 back and at the same time help to better the university.

Statements proposing ideas must be typed double-spaced and presented in 500 words or less. Entries will be judged on practicality, originality and neatness of presentation. The winning idea will be implemented as soon as possible.

The deadline Monday is at 5 p.m. and entries should be sent to $100 Idea, Box 103, Syracuse 10, N.Y.

GIA '64 Platform

"We plan to give seniors a year they'll always remember," states Burr Cain, Greek Independent Alliance party candidate for president of the senior class.

Running with Cain are Trish Spear, vice president; Renee Bruns, secretary; and Dennis Reilly, treasurer.

Citing experience and ability in all phases of student government, the four GIA candidates plan to accomplish the following:

1. Sustain class interest as alumni officers through class reunions and timely newsletters.

2. After graduation periodically distribute a current address list of all of all members of the "class of '64."

3. Build a class executive council based on interest and quality of ideas and not on affiliation.

4. Establish a commencement weekend committee which will plan graduation activities, including Senior Ball, Kum Bak Show, picnic and commencement speaker, far in advance.

5. Gain class support for senior activities through a dynamic publicity program and open executive meetings.

6. Have big-name entertainment on the campus by combining the efforts of the four class governments.

7. Plan a Senior Day in the spring, including a picnic, dancing, and sports activities.

8. Establish lists of qualified undergraduate and graduate student tutors in every university department at a reduced rate to the student.

Student government presidential candidates James Morris, Kenneth Harfenist and James Hadnagy are continuing to line up support for the election, as are vice presidential nominees Kate Antony, Lois Wiltse and Carol Wurthner.

Class candidates continue to tour dormitories and Greek houses, and close races are seen in each of the three classes.

Senators-at-large nominees are putting in appearances at the daily twisters, all hoping for one of the six seats each class is allotted.

Bands, Soc--- Don't Mix

An irate professor and a band taught a sociology class a lesson in functional integration Tuesday.

Sixty students in a Maxwell Community Organization class conducted by Dr. Warner Bloomberg found their discussion harmonized with a practice session of the Army-Air Force ROTC band, marching past Crouse College.

The noise made teaching impossible, so Bloomberg hustled down to a phone a complaint to Liberal Arts Dean Eric Faigle, who sympathized and promised action.

Back in class, with the band still tootling, Bloomberg lost patience, threw up the window and shouted imprecations to the startled drum - and - trumpet wielders, to the effect that the university is more interested in things academic than in music man histrionics.

Turning back to his amused pupils, Bloomberg mused that "hopefully this university is a functionally integrated organization."

Which concept, for the uninitiated deals with cooperation to attain goals.

Like checking that band practice doesn't conflict with classroom practice.

Veto

Yuen, up for secretary; and Mark Samuel, running for treasurer.

Perschetz declined to reveal the reason he vetoed the protest, which according to CAP, asked for clarification on the meaning of "independent:" a non-Greek, or a person campaign independently of a party.

Moffett and his running mates bolted the US convention after he failed to receive the US presidential nod. The four are all pledges of US member houses.

Perschetz said any further explanation of the issue might be detrimental to all 16 candidates for sophomore class office.

Moffett said Tuesday, "In our visits to living centers, we have clarified the term 'independent' to everyone with whom we have spoken. We are running independently of the political party system."

James Gray, Greek Independent Alliance president, refused to sign the protest when it was presentd him by the CAP and US leaders. He stated, "We (GIA) feel that the independents are sincere in wanting to work for their class and it is up to the class as a whole to decide who can do the best job for them, be it our candidates or theirs."

BATON PASSING in Archbold Stadium practice track session as Orange runners prepare for Penn Relay opener in Philadelphia April 26-27. Coach Bob Grieve's trackmen then go to Pittsburgh May 11th for a triangular meet with West Virginia and Pitt.

Runners Have Head Start With Winter Fieldhouse Use

The Syracuse University varsity track team opens its season at the Penn Relays in Philadelphia April 26-27. The squad has been working out daily on the Archbold Stadium track under coach Bob Grieve.

The Orange runners will go to Pitt May 4 for a triangular meet with Pitt and West Virginia. The Orangemen won this meet last season at West Virginia.

The lone home track and field meet of the season will be a May 11 meet with Colgate. Syracuse runners have had traditionally little trouble with the Red Raiders until last season.

Last year Syracuse was represented by six relay teams in the Penn meet. Each Orange foursome placed in the top ten in the finals with the two mile team taking a fifth.

The Syracuse squad should be in better shape with indoor work this winter on the fieldhouse track.

The spring outdoor season ends May 31-June 1 with the IC4A Championships in New York City.

Crew

In other spring action the crew team, is preping for its opener against Dartmouth at Hanover, N. H. The Orange opened last season with a four length win over Dartmouth. The Syracuse junior varsity and frosh shells also whipped the Big Green last year making prospects look good for their defense of the Packard Cup.

The Orange crews have been working out at Lake Onondaga where they spent spring vacation.

The first home race of the season will be for the Goes Cup Trophy against Navy and Cornell.

The Orangemen will also be represented in the Eastern Sprints at Worcester, Mass.

The Syracuse IRA Regatta will be June 15.

The golf team opens April 13 at Rensselaer. The first home match is with Clarkson May 1 at Tecumseh Country Club.

The Orangemen have five home matches with Cornell, Penn State, Colgate and Hamilton in addition to Clarkson.

On the road they meet Colgate and St. Lawrence.

Lacrosse

The lacrosse team meets Hobart April 20 in the club's first home meet. Other home action has the stickmen hosting Colgate and Cornell.

Hill Baseball Teams Prep For April Home Openers

By HOWIE SCHNEIDER

"I'm usually not optimistic, but I must say after watching this year's crop of freshman ballplayers that I am very impressed," remarked frosh baseball coach Larry Katzman. Katzman's squad will culminate their preseason practice sessions April 27, when they meet Cornell here, in the season's opener.

To the delight of Katzman, forty candidates turned out for the team three weeks ago. Now, the team numbers eighteen. "We've got a real good bunch of kids, strong in almost every department, and real enthusiastic," noted the ex-Buffalo State athletic director.

A number of prospects are expected to give outstanding performances this year. On the mound Katzman looks for Glen Barkhaus to be his number one hurler. The coach is also pleased with two battery mates, catchers Dave O'Neil and Bill Burnett. Burnett is also a pitcher.

Two local ballplayers also figure prominently in Katzman's plans. "Two Syracuse boys, shortstop Terry Maris, and centerfielder Dick Knapt, have looked strong in practice, stated Katzman.

In the infield third sacker Luis Sierra,and first baseman Dick Haight are probable starters. Haight, 6-4, 230-pounds, was originally a catcher, but Katzman, wanting to get his bat in the lineup, has switched him to first.

"We should have a pretty good year. If we are weak anywhere it will be in the infield, where we lack a little experience," commented the former SU undergraduate.

The squad has a six game schedule against Cornell, Colgate, Rochester, and Ithaca. According to Katzman, Ithaca, whose varsity went pretty far in the NCAA Championships last season, will provide the stiffest competition for the Orangemen.

The freshmen's varsity counterparts are also in daily practice sessions. After a 3-2 Southern tour, coach Ted Kleinhans is preparing his squad for four upcoming April contests. April 17 the team will meet Seton Hall at Lew Carr Field, then journey to Pittsburgh April 20, Cornell April 24, and Lafayette April 27.

Kleinhans has been disappointed in the squad's hitting. In the South the team hit a lowly .186. On the other hand, the pitching situation has been exceptionally good. Sophomore Ed Barnowski, a strong righthander is 1-1, as is senior hurler Larry Craybas, Lefty Bob Lelli, assistant grid coach, won his only start.

Kleinhans, a seventeen year veteran of Syracuse baseball seasons, also awaits the return of Phil Schoff to the mound staff. Schoff, a member of the Orange basketball squad, missed the Southern trip.

Seventh Place Phillies Look to First Division

By ART ROSSKY

The Philadelphia Phillies, boasting a nice combination of youth and experience, appear ready to break into the first division.

Last year the Phils surprised the majors by finishing seventh, after the experts had given them a solid chance at tenth place.

They broke .500 for the first time in nine years and improved over their 1961 performance by 30½ games.

Strong Outfield

Philly's outfield, perhaps the strongest trio in the league, is its strongest point.

Best of the threesome is Don Demeter, who led the club last season with a .307 batting average, 29 homers and 107 runs batted in.

This year he should do even better, for he will be playing the outfield a full season.

Last year he was forced to play third base much of the time, a position at which he often had trouble finding the handle of the ball.

His fielding difficulties may have hampered his hitting.

Close behind are centerfielder Tony Gonzalez and rightfielder Johnny Callison. Both swing from the left side of the plate.

Gonzalez All-Round

Gonzalez clubbed at a .302 pace and slammed 20 round-trippers.

Gonzalez was the best fielding outfielder in the circuit, playing 111 games without an error.

Callison batted .300, clubbed 23 four baggers, and plated 83 runs.

Callsion demonstrated his defensive ability by collecting 24 assists, tops among the circuit's flychasers.

Two more good outfielders, Wes Covington and rookike John Herrnstein, back them up.

Covington, a good clutch hitter, knocked in 44 runs and slammed nine homers, while going to bat only about 300 times.

Ex-Fullback

Herrnstein, a former Michigan fullback, played at Buffalo, where he swatted 30 doubles and 23 homers enroute to a .293 average.

Don Hoak, acquired in a trade with Pittsburgh, gives the Phils their first solid third baseman since 1959.

Hoak, batted a lowly .241; led the league in fielding percentage.

A real "holler guy", his presence should help the play of the other infielders.

Shortstop is Ruben Amaro, in the service part of last season. A steady fielder, but a weak hitter (.243), his play should improve with a full season's stay on the roster.

Holding second is Tony Taylor, who led the team in stolen bases (20) and hitting (.259).

Old Man Sievers

At first base Roy Sievers, a 21-homer man, holds the fort.

Infield reserves are Frank Torre (.310) and Bobby Wine (.244).

Catching is in the capable hands of Clay Dalrymple, a .276 hitter.

Backing him up are Bob Oldis (.263), a defensive ace, and Earl Averill, acquired from the Los Angeles Angels. Averill is expected to slug the longball in pinch-hitting assignments.

Only Sievers and Hoak of the regulars are over 30. Most of the present regulars have several good years ahead of them.

Pitching Problems

Except for Art Mahaffey and Jack Baldshun, pitching appears a bit thin.

Mahaffey led the club in victories as he posted a 19-14 log and 3.94 ERA.

He was credited with 20 complete games, second best in the league.

If he can curb his gopher ball tendency (his 36 led the league), he may grab a spot among the league's top righties.

Rubber-armed Baldshun appeared in 67 games, winning 12 for runnerup to Mahaffey, and posted a fine 2.95 ERA.

Other starters will be Chris Short, Cal McLish and Dennis Bennett.

High ERA's

Southpaw Short, in the bullpen most of the season, finished fast for an 11-9 log and 3.42 ERA.

McLish, whose 37-year-old arm was used sparingly last year, won 11 of 16; his ERA was a poor 4.24.

Bennett, another lefty, started slowly but recovered nicely to finish 9-9 with a 3.81 ERA.

No one is in sight to help Baldshun with late-inning relief chores, except maybe a bespeckled fireballer who has leaped the Yankee Stadium bullpen fence several times in his career—a guy by the name of Ryne Duren.

32 Posts Open in Hill Voting

By ANDY PORTE
Junior Editor

Syracuse University goes to the polls today.

After the ballots are counted this evening, the Hill will have elected its third joint student government president and vice president, as well as 12 class officers and 18 senators-at-large.

The only requirement for voting will be a university ID card. All classes, including the current senior class, will be permitted to vote in the election.

Freshmen, sophomores, and juniors may vote for two student government offices, four class offices, and six legislature senators-at-large. Seniors may vote for student government president and vice president.

(See candidates' pictures, pages 3, 4, 5, 6 and 8.)

For the first time in at least five years, three parties are actively competing in the election. In addition to the five-year-old duo of United Students party and Campus Alliance party, the Greek Independent Alliance will be appearing on the machines for the first time.

Three persons are vying for the post currently held by Theodore Bayer, student government president. They are James Hadnagy, candidate of GIA; James Morris, CAP nominee; and Kenneth Harfenist, who is running on US.

Their running mates for the vice-presidential post now held by Carol "Schultze" Lucha are Carol Wurthner, GIA; Kate Antony, CAP; and Lois Wiltse, US.

Close races are forecast in all of the 12 class office contests, especially in the Class of '66 races, where four candidates are seeking each office.

Each of the three parties has a slate running for sophomore offices, as well as a group of four "independents" who have been actively seeking the favor of the class at the polls.

Representatives of each of the parties urge a strong turnout at the polls. In last year's election, 1,974 students cast ballots. There are over 7,000 students eligible to vote.

CAMPAIGNING ALL OVER

Arthur Perchetz, elections commissioner, reminds candidates that campaigning ceased at midnight Wednesday and that candidates will not be allowed to urge persons to vote today. He said that all encouragement for voting should be left to friends of the candidates.

Sidewalk Art Show, Sale Coming Up For SU Festival

By SANDY MYERS

The Festival of the Arts, April 18-28, will encompass all visual and performing arts, but a major portion of the program will be devoted to art itself.

Scheduled are several exhibitions, a lecture and a sidewalk display and sale of art students' work.

"Teacher as Artist" will be the topic of a lecture by Prof. Robert Iglehart at 8:30 p.m. Friday, April 26 in Gifford Auditorium, H.B. Crouse Hall.

Prof. Iglehart, director of the University of Michigan School of Art, is former chairman of the department of art education at New York University.

Columbia

A former instructor at Columbia University and the University of Washington at Seattle, Iglehart studied at Maryland Institute of Art, Johns Hopkins University, Columbia and the New School for Research in New York City.

The New York State Art Teachers Association has timed its annual convention to coincide with the Festival. At the conference, held for the first time since 1928 in Syracuse, about 500 of the organization's 1500 members will be guests at Iglehart's lecture.

Children

The Art Advisory Council will sponsor a student exhibit and sale from 9 a.m.-5 p.m. April 27 on the Lowe Art Center patio.

The show, representing 50 to 75 students, will include drawings, paintings, prints and sculpture. Students will determine the prices for the works and will receive all profits.

Festival exhibits will represent the works of children from the age of three through high school seniors, as well as college undergraduates and graduates.

Featured is a display of drawings and sculpture by Ernst Barlash, German sculptor. The exhibition, which opened April 4, will continue in Lowe Art Center until May 5.

All other exhibits will be open April 21-28.

Displayed on the third floor of Smith Hall will be a retrospective exhibition of works from the children's creative art clinic.

The children, taught on Saturday mornings by junior art education majors, will display two and three-dimensional works.

Art Ed Majors

Juniors and seniors majoring in art education will display their work in the lower gallery of Lowe.

Two one-man graduate student exhibitions will be held in Hill dormitories.

Paintings by William Brant, a graduate of Massachusetts College of Art, will be exhibited in Booth lounge, with sculpture by Brenda Bullion, a University of Arkansas graduate, in Shaw lounge.

Maxwell's Cool Million

By DANIEL RITEY
Junior Editor

The Maxwell School is now busy spending happily and constructively the $1 million Ford Foundation grant it received last winter.

Given by the Board of Trustees of the Foundation, the grant is "indeed timely and extraordinarily important to the Maxwell School at this juncture," comments Maxwell Dean Stephen K. Bailey.

The money "will enable us to put various experiments on a sounder basis," he says.

There are four principle areas benefiting from the Foundation grant.

International Work

"About $240,000 is going for the development of work in international law and organizations," Bailey notes. The former will be operated in conjunction with the College of Law and the latter deals with the set up of those organizations that attempt to resolve world problems.

Another quarter of a million dollars will finance a new masters degree program—the Maxwell International Public Administration program.

"MIPA combines experience from the Overseas Training Program and the academic Public Administration program," explains Bailey. "This two year program will include two semesters of graduate work here—financed by Foundation money—and a year of work with American agencies in India."

Prospective members will work in U. S. embassies, consulates, informaiton bureaus and other agencies while acquiring knowledge and experience in international public administration.

DEAN BAILEY

Professorship

An additional $150,000 will be used toward the establishment of a chair (professorship) in hsitory of the Southern Asia (the Indian subcontinent area) region. The professor will be brought in from outside the Maxwell school according to Bailey.

The final $350,000 is going toward the development of interest in the East Africa and Southern Asia regions.

"This money will be used to finance fellowships and set up a staff, research facilities and funds for interested students. There will be a concentration on development problems and cooperation between the Maxwell school and the School of Education," the dean notes.

Bailey cites the importance of these areas and the fact that little is still known about them as reasons for concentrating there..

The Ford grant resulted from previous discussions and grants to the Maxwell school. It applied to the foundation for funds needed to support the programs and facilities.

NBC Slates SU Show

Will Chet Huntley treat Syracuse University nice, or won't he? That is the question which will hopefully be answered Tuesday, May 21 when "Chet Huntley Reports" will broadcast a show filmed on campus last November.

"Tentatively scheduled" to be shown at 10:30 p.m. by WSYR-TV the NBC crew caused a storm of controversy during their week long stay. Various student leaders reported attempts by the crew to "stage" a panty raid and "juice up" a fraternity party.

Mort Heilig, who headed the location crew, noted the program was "an attempt to give a view of life at an American university."

University Vice President Kenneth G. Bartlett said he met with the crew at the request of the students. The crew agreed to "observe the responsibilities of a free press." He said he asked only that they present an "honest and balanced picture of the university."

Producer Gerald Green denied campus rumors that the uncut footage had been permanently canned. "The material has not been shelved," he pointed out.

Your Chance For Improvement

Today is the day when the frenzy of campus politics reaches its peak and dies quickly with the results of the election. New persons will take the reins of student government and the old faces will soon be forgotten. Such is the fleeting fame of the campus politician.

You might expect, from the things we have had to say about campus politics in the past, that the Daily Orange will tell you to picket the polls or write in votes for Judge Crater. But that is not the case.

We urge you to vote, but beyond that we urge you to vote intelligently. Your failure to vote will defeat the system of campus politics but your failure to vote intelligently and in an adult manner will degrade you and the campus in general.

Let's face it. Some of the names appearing on the ballot today should not be there if we were dealing with politics on a high level. There are many persons who have meager qualifications (if indeed you can have any substantial qualification to be an officer of your class or in student government's higher reaches) and there are some who have shown they have been able to do everything at Syracuse but maintain a respectable scholastic average.

But there are others who could make an honest attempt at improving our student government, persons who have shown in the past that they can perform their tasks well without forgetting why they are here in the first place—to obtain an education.

Not all the bright faces and big names are the best choices. Some who have been out of the limelight but who have done honest work for the university deserve the right to hold the positions for which they run.

So you see you have an obligation to yourself and your fellow students to vote. Your intelligent vote added to other intelligent votes will combine to get the best men (and women) in office and at the same time defeat the votes that are cast purely on superficial bases.

Never again will you have such an easy opportunity to do something positive for the university.

LETTERS

Education

To the Editor:

In your editorial of April 9 you say that Syracuse students pay an "Ivy league tuition for a Big Ten education." Either you are misinformed or you are expressing a wish.

When you compare the "education" a student receives at this school with one he receives at academic institutions like Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota, Northwestern, Ohio State, and Wisconsin you can't be serious.

Syracuse can't begin to match the facilities, the faculty, the academic stature or reputation of these schools. Nor for that matter can it match the football teams which is what you were probably using as a criteria for judging the merits of these schools.

Anyone who has been at a Big Ten school will tell you that football is a big thing there. That is certainly true. But it is only a secondary aspect of the education at best.

They would never even consider closing the library for football games in the Big Ten as is the practice at Syracuse. In the Big Ten they have too much respect for education to do that.

I would also inform you that an "education" at Syracuse costs $4000 dollars more for tuition alone than at any of the state schools in the Big Ten. That means all of the Big Ten except for Northwestern, Purdue and (possibly) Michigan State.

You, sir, are a senior. Soon you will be hunting for a job. All things being equal you had better hope that you are not in competition with someone with a degree from Michigan or Minnesota or Wisconsin. If you're an engineer you'll be lucky if no one from Purdue shows. You'll end up eating your words about a Big Ten education unless someone in your family has pull.

Actually, sir, Syracuse students pay an Ivy League tuition for a Syracuse education which is certainly bad enough. Why say more.

Closer Look

To the Editor:

I feel that I must question the process of nomination of students by political parties for various student government positions. It has been emphasized and restated by the political parties that they have the best interest of the student body foremost in their minds when they nominate a candidate.

These candidates are obligated by accepting this nomination, an honor in itself, to fulfill the responsibilities required of their office. The ultimate benefit of the university and the constant welfare of their class are the top listings of their obligations.

Thus, I would like to pose the following questions:

1. A nominee for senior class secretary expressed surprise, via the Atlantic Ocean, on finding she had another chance to hold a class office. She had been an officer who was voluntarily delegated by her fellow students to serve for two terms, and only remained to fulfill these responsibilities for one term. No wonder her surprise! This implies she was the best candidate the party could put up for office.

2. When will political parties cease nominating a football player for a class officer? Tall, good looking, and intelligent: all the ingredients of a fine class officer. Great "campaignability" but he plays football. He has a football scholarship, practices, skull sessions and least of all his academics.

When will there be time to devote to working for the class and the student body? In the last four years six football players have been elected to a class office. Not one of them has fulfilled his obligations.

3. JSG president and vice president are campus leader positions to be respected. It is not becoming to the candidates for these positions to slander their opposition. If a candidate must win an election by knocking another instead of selling himself, perhaps he has nothing.

Look carefully at their qualifications and their average. These offices require a great deal of time and effort in order to work to the maximum benefit of the student body.

To each of you that read this letter, it is of utmost importance that you search in your mind and in others to find who will do the best job in his position. You have been express your choice. Those given the right to vote and whom you elect will be working for you. This is your opportunity to prove your interest in student government.

Qualification

To the Editor:

I am a transfer student from George Washington University in Washington, D. C., where the student government was an absolute farce, powerless and a laughingstock among most students. I suppose there is a natural bent among students such as I, who are attending college mainly to acquire an education, to consider any Student Government to be somewhat ludicrous, but since my arrival at S.U. last September I have been very favorably impressed with the JSL.

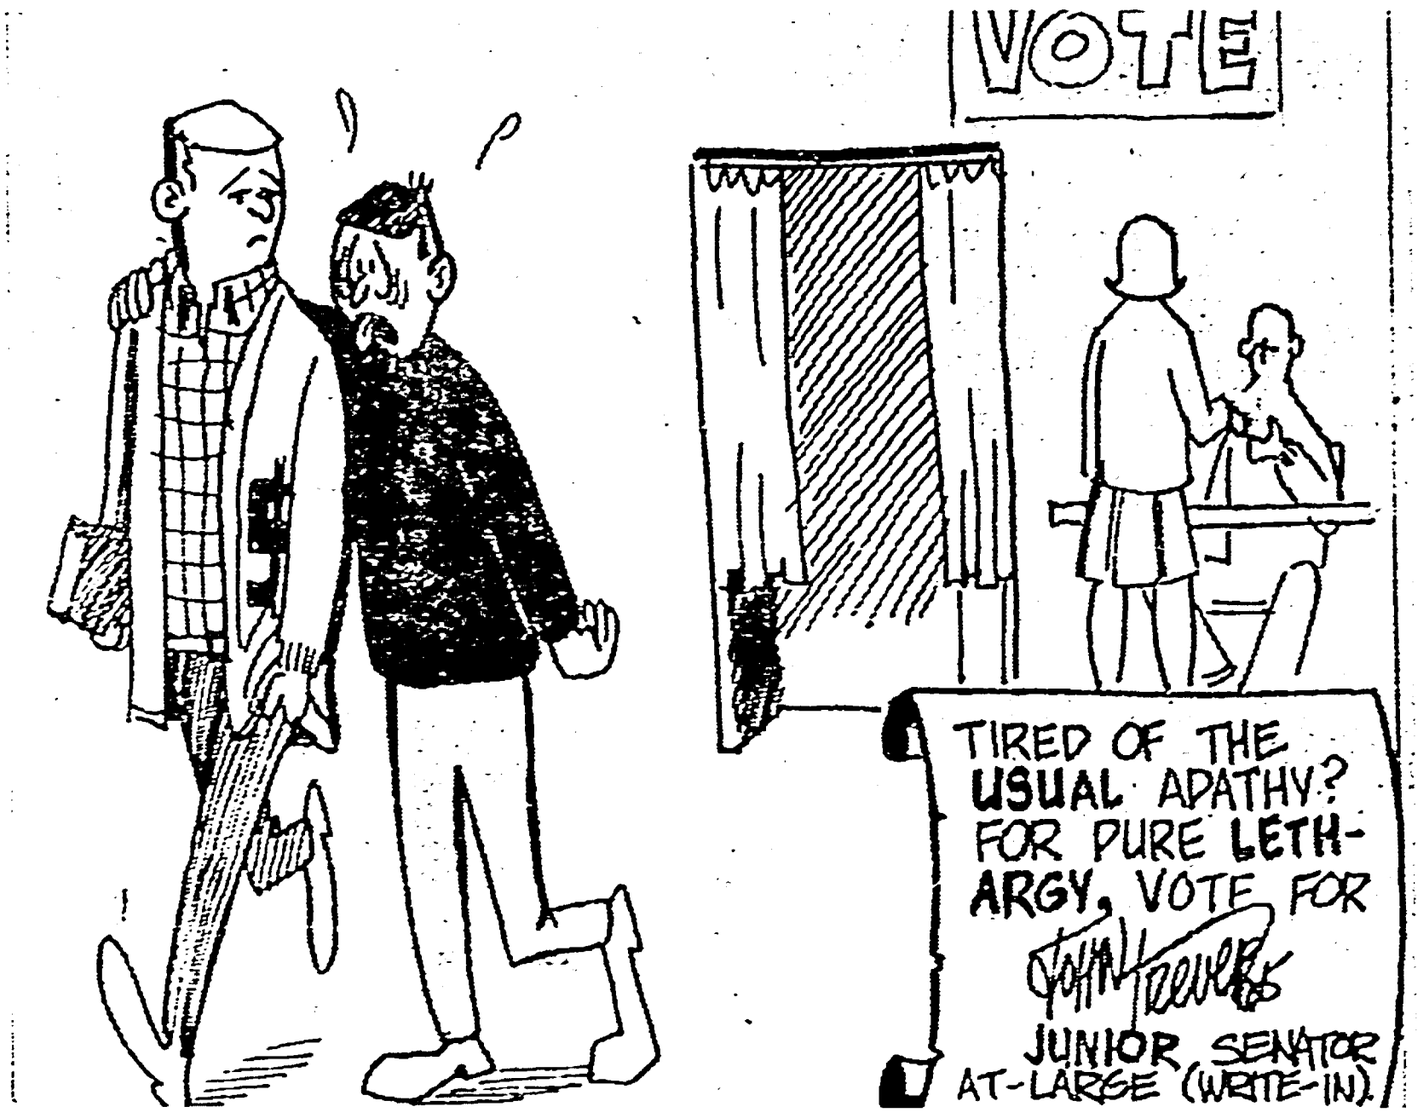
It was instrumental in securing driving privileges for Sophomores with 1.6 averages, it has a court authorized to try and, if necessary, penalize students who break rules and it has been active in its efforts to otherwise improve student standing and participation in University affairs. In view of this, I was shocked and disappointed when I read in the last two issues of the DO of the "qualifications" of those candidates running for office—at least most of them.

In my view the most important qualification for a candidate should be his scholastic average. Universities select (and bounce) students largely on the basis of scholastic performance. Graduate schools do too. And so do committees that award scholarships and fellowships. Personnel officers, when they interview job applicants, are likely to inquire into scholastic achievement.

Even the U.S. Government provides sizeable starting salary benefits to persons with B averages. Naturally other qualifications are taken into consideration, but one would naturally assume that a person with a good average has demonstrated that he has the inherent mental ability and the perseverance to succeed at his work, whatever it may be. I think we ought to apply similar standards to those whom we select to represent our collective interests on campus. But it is obvious—this year, at least—that we have not.

From the list of 92 candidates for class officers and JSL senators, published in the April 8, 9 DO's I find that only 16 of the 92 have averages of 2.0 or better. 37, on the other hand, don't even have 1.5 averages Broken down, the figures are as follows: of 40 candidates for class office 8 are 2.0 or above and 12 are less than 1.5; of 52 candidates for JSL senator, 8 are above 2.0 (and four of these eight have exactly 2.0 averages) and 25, or almost HALF of them, don't even have 1.5 averages! Not a single officer of next year's Senior class will be able to boast a B average, and only 3 of 15 candidates for JSL senator can. The classes of '65 and '66 fare somewhat better—but not too much. These figures are probably slightly distorted by transfer students (I found only two) all of whose transfer credit must, by University regulations, be counted as 1.0.

As a group the candidates appear to me to be a very pathetic lot. It may sound pedantic or dogmatic of me to insist that I be represented by students whose performance is better than merely average, or even a little above average, but I feel that a person who is incapable of doing superior work in his studies is incapable of doing a good job in government. I said incapable.



I honestly feel that most of the people campaigning this spring do not deserve to be elected. Student Government is an extracurricular activity. A person who obviously cannot find the time to excel in his studies cannot afford the time needed to do a capable job in government. An article in Monday's DO stated that 93 of 101 candidates are Greeks. Many candidates participate in other activities (Goon Squad, WAER, the DO, the "On") all of which require time to be spent on them.

Only topflight people can handle such activity loads in addition to regular academic loads. Those who neglect their studies in order to become Big People On Campus don't belong here at all. Those whose studies suffer because they take on too many activities should cut back rather than campaign for even more responsibility. Those who are inherently unable to maintain even a ghost of a B average aren't, in my opinion, qualified to hold Student Government office.

This leaves a handful of candidates. They are the ones who will receive my votes.

WELLS & COVERLY

Does a man really take unfair advantage of women when he uses Mennen Skin Bracer?

All depends on why he uses it.

Most men simply think Menthol-Iced Skin Bracer is the best after-shave lotion around. Because it cools rather than burns. Because it helps heal shaving nicks and scrapes. Because it helps prevent blemishes.

So who can blame them if Bracer's crisp, long-lasting aroma just happens to affect women so remarkably?

Of course, some men may use Mennen Skin Bracer because of this effect.

How intelligent!

NOW YOU CAN BE YOUNGER THAN SHE IS

It is a scientific fact that girls reach emotional maturity earlier than boys. For this reason freshman girls are reluctant to make romantic alliances with freshman boys, but instead choose men from the upper classes.

Thus the freshman boys are left dateless, and many is the night the entire freshman dorm sobs itself to sleep. An equally moist situation exists among upper-class girls. With upper-class men being snapped up by freshman girls, the poor ladies of the upper class are reduced to dreary, manless evenings of Monopoly and home permanents.

It pleasures me to report there is a solution for this morbid situation—indeed, a very simple solution. Why don't the two great have-not groups—the freshman boys and the upper-class girls—find solace with each other?

True, there is something of an age differential, but that need not matter. Take, for example, the case of Albert Payson Sigafoos and Eustacia Vye.

Albert Payson, a freshman in sand and gravel at Vanderbilt University, was walking across the campus one day, weeping softly in his loneliness. Blinded by tears, he stumbled upon the supine form of Eustacia Vye, a senior in wicker and raffia, who was collapsed in a wretched heap on the turf.

"Why don't you watch where you're going, you minor youth?" said Eustacia peevishly.

"I'm sorry, lady," said Albert Payson and started to move on. But suddenly he stopped, struck by an inspiration. "Lady," he said, tugging his forelock, "don't think me forward, but I know why you're miserable. It's because you can't get a date. Well, neither can I. So why don't we date each other?"

"Surely you jest!" cried Eustacia, looking with scorn upon his tiny head and body.

"Oh, I know I'm younger than you are," said Albert Payson, "but that doesn't mean we can't find lots of fun things to do together."

"Like what?" she asked.

"Well," said Albert Payson, "we could build a Snowman."

"Bah!" said Eustacia, grinding her teeth.

"All right then," said Albert Payson, "we could go down to the pond and catch some frogs."

"Ugh!" said Eustacia, shuddering her entire length.

"How about some Run-Sheep-Run?" suggested Albert Payson.

"You are callow, green, and immature," said Eustacia, "and I will thank you to remove your underaged presence from mine eyes."

Sighing, Albert Payson lighted a cigarette and started away.

"Stay!" cried Eustacia.

He stayed.

"Was that a Marlboro Cigarette you just lighted?" she asked.

"What else?" said Albert Payson.

"Then you are not immature!" she exclaimed, clasping him to her clavicle. "For to smoke Marlboros is the very essence of wisdom, the height of American know-how, the incontrovertible proof that you can tell gold from dross, right from wrong, fine aged tobaccos from pale, pathetic substitutes. Albert Payson, if you will still have me, I am yours!"

"I will," he said, and did, and today they are married and run the second biggest wicker and raffia establishment in Duluth, Minnesota.

Harfenist Out by 395, Miss Wiltse Lacks 62

By ANDY PORTE
Junior Editor

James Morris and Kate Antony led a Campus Alliance Party romp in Thursday's campus elections.

Morris walked away with the presidency of Joint Student Government, totaling 1,284 votes to United Students' Kenneth Harfenist's 889 and James Hadnagy's (Greek Independent Alliance) 416.

Miss Antony squeaked by Lois Wiltse of US, being named on 973 ballots compared with Miss Wiltse's 911. GIA's Carol Wurtzner polled 599.

Big Vote

The vote total was an impressive 2,909, over 600 more than were cast in last year's elections.

CAP captured 21 campus positions, including a tie for the sixth junior class senator-at-large spot. US won nine posts, and independent candidates were victorious in two class of '65 races. The Greek Independent Alliance failed to win a single position.

Morris scored his largest victories in H. B. Crouse and Graham halls, polling 379 in HBC as opposed to Harfenist's 229, and 221 in Graham against Harfenist's 130.

He trailed at only one of the 17 polling places, losing the class of '64 vote in Sadler to Harfenist.

Miss Antony received her strongest support in Watson, scoring 172 votes against 101 for Miss Wiltse. Voting was fairly even at all other polling places.

CAP's 21 conquests included the JSG posts, six class officers, and 13 senatorships. US managed four class officers and five senator posts. Independents were elected president and vice president of the class of '66.

Freshmen again supplied the strongest turnout, with 1,166 casting ballots. There were 896 sophomores voting, along with 667 juniors and 180 seniors.

Voting was heaviest in HBC, falling to its lowest total in Sadler.

Write-in ballots were again common, with seven students casting votes for Bill Russell for JSG president. There were write-ins for Chancellor William P. Tolley, Miss Lucha and Jay Arkin.

The Challenge Of Victory

The campus has elected a new president of student government and we feel the campus has made a good choice. Jim Morris has shown in the past that he is a hard worker and a devoted one.

He now must step into the top spot in student government. Ahead lie many moments when he will feel the physical and mental strains that such an office holds in store. But there will also be the moments of accomplishment and personal satisfaction which somehow make the long hours of sacrifice worthwhile.

This is still a relatively new office, the powers and responsibilities of which are being learned and practiced gradually. We hope that our new president will pick up the pace started by Ted Bayer and will act in his fullest capacity to give the students a strong and positive voice in the affairs of this campus.

But for now, Jim, you've received the support of a majority of the voters and you have gone through a rough campaign which has tried your health and well-being. The victory was worth the struggle, we are sure.

We now offer congratulations and good luck to you and your vice president.

To this we add congratulations to the winners of the various class offices.

In the past student government has been attacked as ineffective and a waste of time. You new officers are now in a position to change this attitude. Please don't fall into the rut of complacency in your new jobs.

There is a place for intelligent student leadership and we are counting on all of you to make strides toward such a goal. As we have said before, qualifications for such positions are hard to pin point so we cannot tell you right now how wise the choices have been.

Only by your performances next year will the campus know how good the choices were. Don't let your constituency down by keeping student government open to ridicule and attack.

Grow into your new positions and show us that student government is a worthwhile activity. You have a responsibility to all of us. Good luck.

Citizen Churchill

England's greatest native son has become an adopted child of this country in an unprecedented ceremony. Sir Winston Churchill, Great Britain's heart, voice and soul during World War II, has been made an honorary citizen of the United States through a proclamation issued by President Kennedy and approved by Congress.

The 88-year-old Sir Winston, unable to make the long voyage to Washington for the ceremony because of his prolonged recovery from a broken hip, expressed his appreciation by letter.

The written words of the great statesman and historian were typically elegant and emotional in their simplicity. He was touched by the honor and said so in his brilliant manner.

And although the President had words worthy of Churchill himself to express the country's love for the man who saved England, we couldn't help feeling that the honor was really ours in gaining a giant of history as one of our sons during his own lifetime.

'Invisible Man'

By Ron Corwin

"Human history is in essence the history of ideas . . ."
—H. G. Wells

Societies have always found a way of handling people with ideas. Modern man is no exception. Today we make people with ideas invisible (cf. Ralph Ellison).

The ancient Athenians used hemlock for the same end. Burning at the stake was the rage in medeival times. Later exiling was added.

Press smashing has been popular. Now we are too sophisticated to commit such a gross act. We couldn't resort to the literal smashing of the presses.

Instead we tamper with freedom of the press. The Daily Orange can't print names of individuals or groups actively practicing discrimination. Editors who have too much to say are not rehired, e.g., last's year's D.O. editor, Sam Girgus; last year's 'Syracuse 10' editor, T. Lee Hughes.

Of course, this amounts to the same thing as press smashing. It is still a popular and effective way of dealing with ideas particularly on this campus.

Another method for killing thoughts was to burn books. Again, our culture has advanced beyond that stage of this sheer honesty. We ban the books instead.

In Russia and America certain books are absent from classrooms, public libraries and book stores. Books can be very very dangerous — they contain ideas. Apparently the most effective weapon against them is to ignore them.

When people have ideas, people, too, are dangerous. So we make them invisible. Actually the method to be described is very simple. Any child can (and is) taught to use it whenever necessary.

It becomes necessary when we are confronted by a person who has an idea we are incapable of dealing with. When this occurs an emotional and intellectual crisis can be averted if we label the person.

It is as simple as that.

We give the person a label. Man has created hundreds of labels for just such a crisis. Once labeled a person becomes invisible. We are relieved of the responsibility of meeting his ideas.

We've heard this conversation many times.

"Did you hear what Malcom X said?"

"Oh. Don't bother me. He's a Black Muslim."

"Well did you hear what Norman Thomas said?"

"Of course not. He's a socialist."

"How about Barry Goldwater? He said . . ."

"Be serious. Don't you know what Goldwater is? He's a conservative."

"What about the Pope?"

"A Catholic."

"James Baldwin?"

"Negro."

"David Ben-Gurion?"

"Jew."

"Gus Hall?"

"Communist."

(I trust the reader can continue this dialogue by himself. My point has I hope, been made.)

Once we pin a label on a man it is exceeding easy to avoid hearing what the person says. In this manner we never confront his ideas. He becomes invisible.

More precisely, we are blinded. In either case we are safe. Life is so simple. So easy.

We see people as we have to see them. Often not as they really are.

Gus Hall gave a speech. Three times during the speech he said that he was not for, nor does he advocate a revolution in America. Three times. The first question after his speech was "How do you plan to bring about a revolution in America?" Gus Hall just shook his head. He is an invisible man.

I have purposely used Hall as an example. Gus Hall is a "known" Communist. I have intentionally excited those who would already have labeled me as a Communist or a crackpot.

I will not stoop to answer the charge. Label if you must. By doing so—if you haven't already done so—you only prove my point.

Sometimes it is very painful to be proven right.

LETTERS

Offer What?

To the Editor:

In the last line of your editorial on April 10 you were correct in your assertion that Syracuse has some things that the Big Ten (e.g. Michigan) doesn't. At last someone has been brave enough to admit it.

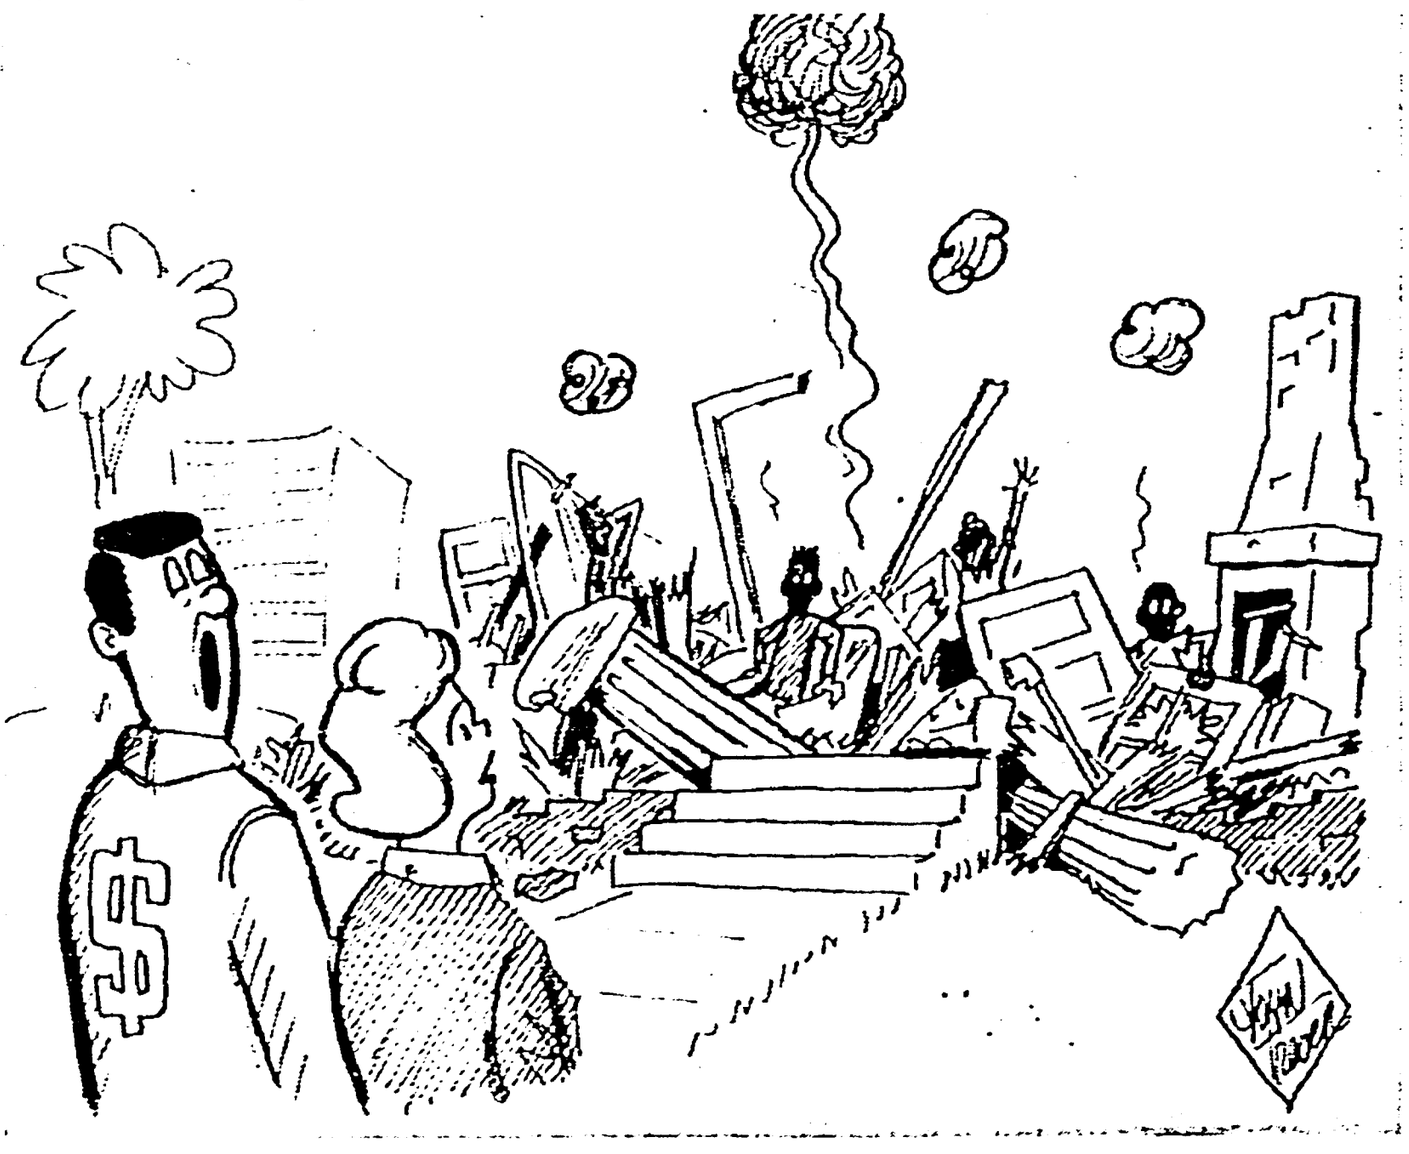
Syracuse has poorer facilities, a lower academic standing, fewer volumes in its library, an apathetic student body, no student union, a striking lack of cultural programs, an overwhelming tuition, with few exceptions weaker academic departments and an administration which has an absolute strangle hold on the university.

Having spent one year at Michigan and two at Syracuse I think I know of what I speak. I'm glad that you indicated that Syracuse has at least some things a Big Ten school doesn't. Or have you been misunderstood again?

Rudy Lombard

Education?

To the Editor:



Congratulations to "An Ivy League Graduate" who has said much of what we are all thinking. It is indeed unfortunate that the university is following a policy of tuition charges better known as "all the traffic will bear."

Perhaps the best comparison of all would be with the University of Miami. For only $1000 tuition per year the administration there has attracted a contented student body to their campus. They feel that they are getting their academic dollar's worth. And after attending a few classes there a week ago, we think so too.

In the wake of the recent tuition raise we find it very difficult to sit back with our usual apathy. This feeling generally pervades the student body. If only schools were rated on a tuition basis! Who would you hire first, Mr. Employer, a Syracuse or a Miami graduate?

RIVIERA-CINEMA — Double bill Italian Style as the Riv presents "Divorce Italian Style" and "Nights of Cabiria." In the first Marcello Mastroianni greases his way to true love by killing his voluptuous wife for a skinny (in the right places) cousin. Broad, ironic, sexy, sarcastic, with subtitles too. A little social satire for the intellectuals. Co-featured is Fellini's classic of neo-realism (and fine cinema too) "Nights of Cabiria." All about a pixie of a prostitute. Love that neo-realism. "Divorce Non Popa" at 6:45 and 10:25 p.m. "Cabiria" at 8:30 p.m.

LOEW'S—Ohmygosh. Elvis is back in town. And as the poster says he's rocking, socking, twisting and loving. How's that for a night's work. This masterpiece is entitled "It Happened at the World's Fair." Hear Elvis sing "One Broken Heart for Sale" and "They Remind Me Too Much of You." Hoo hah. Also on the bill is "Swordsman of Sienna" the biography of the captain of the fencing team from a small Catholic college in New York State. "Love" at 6:13 and 9:43 p.m. "Fence" at 8 p.m.

KEITH'S — Just because they take a mediocre Broadway play about critics and make a movie "Critics Choice," from it they shouldn't think the critics will flock to the Keith's door like its was a new mousetrap. Which reminds us about the mouse on the 8th floor in Sadler that has been living on rat bait for a week now. He didn't show up this morning. Perhaps he's watching Bob Hope and Lucille Ball, and figures he can wake up the sleeping people. "No Critic's Choice" at 7 and 10:30 p.m. Also on bill is "Mystery Submarine." "No cracks please" at 8:45

PARAMOUNT — "The Birds" is here. That's right, Alfred Hitchcock's chiller is in town, with seating only in the orchestra. The balcony is reserved by the pigeons, sparrows, robins, etc., etc, etc. We know one poor soul who saw the film and was scared walking home that every time he saw a flock of birds fly overhead, he ducked into an alley. Of course, he was mugged, beaten up and robbed by hoodlums. The birds, it seems were just flying north for the summer. Which just goes to prove, don't go looking for trouble from new sources, there's enough around any way. "Feathered Fear" at 7:16 and 9:44 p.m.

ON STAGE

SADLER HALL shutins can catch the bill of comedies that packed El's Edifice last week again this Friday and Saturday, "The Best of Boar's Head." Pete Maloney, Marion Present and a host of other Drama Department talents (and lovelies) star in "The Fisherman," "On the Harmfulness of Tobacco," "Phoenix Too Frequent" and "The Lunatics" at 8:30 p.m.

SENIOR RECITAL by Lorelei Trenge, French horn, and William Harris, trombone, 8:30 p.m. Saturday at Crouse College auditorium. (It would be two for the price of one except it's free.)

'Divorce Italian Style'

With a twitch of the lip, Marcello Mastroianni deftly blends some delicious ribaldry and a generous amount of cynicism: just the ingredients for "Divorce Italian Style," which opened Wednesday night at the Riviera in the original Italian.

The law in Italy says no divorce. But no law says director Pietro Germi can't serve up some satire on a country that bans divorce and permits murder instead—as long as honor is involved, of course.

Bored by his silly, love-hungry wife, Rosalia (Daniela Rocca), and in love with his 16-year old cousin, Angela (Stefania Sandrelli), Mastroianni finds himself imagining bizarre ways of killing his despised spouse.

Once he pictures her boiling alive in a cauldron of lye. Another time, as he watches her buried in sand at the beach, he imagines her drowning in quick-mire: a portrait of joy.

Using his college-education, Mastroianni plans and executes a really devilish scheme. Impressed by a sensational murder in which a betrayed woman kills her unfaithful lover, he maneuvers his wife into an affair with an old flame.

When Mastroianni "discovers" Rosalia in a compromising situation he kills her. After three years in jail he is free to marry Angela.

Mastroianni's skillful mugging and his wife's hideous laughter and boring conversation make the film a well-acted, if slightly uneven, comedy.

As a satire on Italian divorce law, the film is too involved with Mastroianni's antics and intrigues to make a convincing point. A spoof on the divorce law naturally involves jabs at the Church.

But this irony, although obvious enough, also loses its pungency since the emphasis on Mastroianni's acting creates a scrappy effect rather than a coherent impression.

Peppery family fights and shots of emotional faces at Mastroianni's trial keep the broad Italian flavor pungent. But it is in depicting life's fateful humor that "Divorce Italian Style" savors most strongly of Latin insight.

As the honeymoon couple, happily at sea, locked in an embrace, we see Angela's foot reaching out for the yacht captain's. The Italians have done it again.

Easter Significance

In the words of the Rev. Robert Ayers, Episcopalian chaplain, "Easter is the Queen of Feasts. It is more important to Christians than Christmas or any of the other church holidays."

"Faith in what happened then is what 'makes' Christians," Fathers Ayers said.

Christians believe that the Resurrection of Christ from the dead meant to the first Christians that what Jesus had said and done had God's power behind it.

At Easter time, there is a connection between the Exodus, Passover and the Resurrection.

FR. ROBERT AYERS celebrates the solemn Mass.

1. According to the Department of Labor, you're worth over $350,000 as soon as you get your sheepskin. That's theoretical, of course.

I didn't even know the Department was thinking about me.

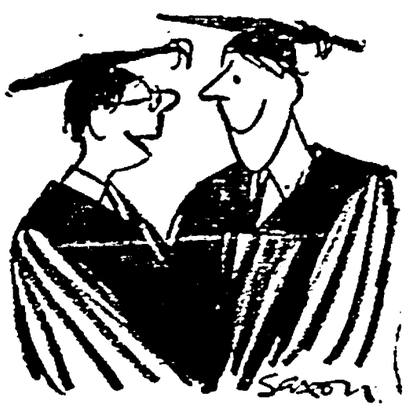
2. The way they figure it, that $350,000 is how much the average college graduate will earn by the time he retires.

I'll take it right now in a lump sum. Would I live! Penthouse. Yacht. Homburg. The works.

3. As an Eco major, I feel obliged to tell you what would happen to that bundle. First, Uncle Sam would help himself to about 290 Gs. With the going rate for penthouses, your life's earnings would disappear in one year.

You've ruined my day.

4. Since you'd be only 22, you couldn't qualify for Social Security. You'd have to go back to your dad for an allowance.



I never could handle money.

5. Fortunately, there's a way out for you.

Tell me—tell me.

Well, you won't be getting all that money in one year. You'll be getting some of it each year, at a much lower tax rate. What you should do is put aside a certain amount of it.

6. Put some money into cash-value insurance, the kind they call Living Insurance at Equitable. It gives your wife and kids solid protection and it saves for you automatically—builds a cash fund you can use for retirement or any other purpose.

Student Union Continues Plans Despite Low Support of Twister

The Student Union committee is discussing an expanded program for next year.

The Student Union continues tonight with a showing of "Sabrina," starring Audrey Hepburn and Humphrey Bogart at 7:30 p.m. today in the Women's Building reception lounge.

Yet the Student Union may be faced with the problem of student support.

James Palcic, committee publicity chairman, said Thursday that poor support of the Union program's free twister last Friday night may not be indicative of student disinterest.

He said approximately 400 students attended last week's showing of "High Society." Some students drifted up to the twister in Gym A, but left when they saw no one was there.

Another factor contributing to the poor attendance, Palcic said, was the fact that two political parties sponsored twisters Saturday and two dormitories had twisters Sunday.

He also blamed poor publicity, saying that many Joint Student Legislature representatives who received flyers at the JSL meeting did not post them.

Next year's Student Union program, to be built around a movie series, will tentatively include speakers, hootenannies and a square dance.

Dances may follow the movie showings and include singing.

A larger Student Union committee may permit the showing of films in Gym A or a room larger than the recreation room. Palcic said.

Members are needed to prevent students from smoking during the movies. University regulations prohibit smoking in campus buildings and especially in gymnasiums.

At present, five students form the Student Union program committee, with 10 on the working committee.

"While we're disappointed that more people didn't take advantage of the dance, we don't feel it was a failure, because the Student Union is available if they want it," Palcic noted.

U. S. gas utility companies now serve 33½ million residential, commercial and industrial customers, according to the American Gas Association.

Running Specialists

Syracuse Relay Teams Prep for Queens - Iona

By ART ROSSKY

The Syracuse track team will face a stiff season-opening test when it answers the gun for the Queens-Iona Relays April 20 at Randall's Island Stadium, New York City.

Coach Bob Grieve, beginning his 18th Hill season, has entered teams in the 440,880, mile distance medley and frosh distance medley events.

Being an early season event the Queens track carnival generally has no clear cut favorite.

Morgan St., a perennial cinder power, is considered the team to beat, though several other Eastern powers could make good showings.

No team championship is awarded.

Top Units

Top units for the Orangemen are the 440 and 880-yard teams, who Grieve feels have a good chance of placing among the top five finishers.

Sprinting the quarter - mile distance will be Gary Sherman, Dave Snipe, Charlie Gaston and Cal Evans.

The 880 unit will be the same as the 440 unit, although Bob Brown may take Snipe's place in this event.

Running the mile will probably be Sherman, Gaston, Evans and Brown.

Distance Medley

On the distance medley (440,-880,1320, mile) quartet are Tom Higgins, John McAuley, Mike Guzman and Mouncey Ferguson.

Ferguson last year was credited with a fine 4:15 mile clocking.

Grieve said Syracuse will enter the four-mile relay "if we can find four 4:30 milers."

Field Event

Other Varsity entrants are sophs Chan Rudd in the pole vault and Dick Radune in the 120-yard high hurdles.

Rudd cleared 13'9" last season as a member of the frosh track team.

Running the frosh medley event will be cross country stars Mike Spino, Ron Bukow, Marty Miller and Bill Chiak.

Chiak, undefeated as a harrier, set a yearling record of 16:19 in the three-mile hill-and-dale event.

April 27, the thinclads will journey to Franklin Field, Philadelphia, for the Penn Relays, where they will run against many of the nation's top college track squads.

The Orangemen will travel to Pitt May 4 for a triangular meet with the Panthers and West Virginia. The Hill squad won the event last year at the Mountaineers lair.

Go-Go Chisox Pennant Hopes Are Gone-Gone

By JAN GILMORE

Al Lopez is a pretty good manager. But still the prediction-makers are thrusting his club well down in the American League standings.

The Sox have only two solid regulars. One of these is first baseman Joe Cunningham. Cunningham has little skill afield, but still does better than most. He has little skill at the plate, but still hit .295, has a lifetime average of .302 and was the best in the league at getting on base last year.

Nelson Fox commences his 14th season at second for the White Sox, and it is beginning to show. Old Foxy appears to be playing second base from memory. At bat he remains tough to fool, but does very little destruction.

Ron Hansen was All-Star shortstop in 1960. He is a smooth fielder, as good as Aparicio, but a non-hitter for two years. When he does hit, it's long ball hits that are long outs in Comiskey.

The number two hitter in the International League last year was Pete Ward, .328—22 hrs. Ward is fast and sure defensively, and is likely to be a success at third base as any rookie in the league.

The other solid regular the White Sox have is Floyd Robinson who hit .312, drove in 109 runs and led the A.L. in doubles. Robinson, with 11 homers, is the Chicago idea of a power hitter.

Once the prime weapon of the Go-Go Sox was the steal. Now the only accomplished stealer on the team is Centerfielder Jim Landis who isn't apt to steal too many if he hits .228 again.

Dave Nicholson was signed by Baltimore for $100,000, and impressed everyone by turning a faucet off so hard nobody could turn it back on. But that's about all. Now the White Sox have him and are going to start him in right because he stroked some baseballs that went 500 feet this spring. But Nicholson has done that before and ended the regular season hitting .170 with many strikeouts and a light sprinkling of homers.

If he should fail, the job will go to Mike Hershberger who can run very fast and can hit singles at a .260 clip.

Landis is the best center fielder in the league. Hershberger and Robinson are good too, though Robinson will drop a fly every now and then. Old Charlie Maxwell backs up this collection.

Proficient veteran Sammy Esposito and young Casey Wise (.296 at Indianapolis) deepen the infield.

If there is one thing the White Sox have, it is pitching. Ray Herbert threw in some curves and change-ups last year, and they came out with 20 victories.

Juan Pizarro, who throws screwballs left-handed, is nearly as good. Ed Fischer has a tough knuckleball, and John Buzhardt is surprisingly effective when his arm feels good, though that is not too often.

Ex-ERA champ Frank Baumann came close to getting back in form last year. Youngsters Dom Zanni and Joel Horlen complete the middle men.

Two pretty good kids, Dave Debusschere and Mike Joyce are deep men, but the man to look for coming out of that pen is Hoyt Wilhelm, 39, now in his twelfth season as top relief man in both leagues.

Wilhelm's ERA was 1.96 last year, but his flutter ball bothered Baltimore catchers. Now he has some better mitt men to throw to, Sherm Lollar and Camilio Carreon. Neither hits.

A Lopez team is never worse than it looks. But that should be a small comfort to White Sox fans because if this team is worse than it looks, the Senators can beat it.

Injuries Hamper Line; Ben Uses More Frosh

By ELLEN HALPRIN

Injuries have hampered Ben Schwartzwalder's gridders during spring practice. Seven men are on the inactive list.

Gerry Everling, a possible starting tackle is still sidelined with an injury he suffered during the wrestling championships. Bob Meehan, the only player hurt in practice, is out with a bruised shoulder.

Bill Schoonover and Mike Koski, two of Schwartzwalder's experienced men are also on the sidelines. Jim Gaskins, senior halfback is inactivated by a calcium deposit in his thigh.

Frosh Injured

Freshmen out with injuries are George Kontra ecki and Ed Allen.

"The boys are working good this spring," the coach commented, but the team is hurt because so many backfield players are out.

Lack of experience is another major problem faced by Schwartzwalder. He said that "the first line is looking good, but the second unit leaves much to be desired."

He blamed a good deal of the weakness on the large injury list. "If these men can play the team will really perk up," he said.

"One team just isn't good enough nowadays," he added.

With Meehan out, Ray Paglio has moved into the outside tackle spot. "We're hurting at center," stated Schwartzwalder. There is no one to back up Len Sluby at starting center.

Schwartzwalder said "Bo" Nance, Walley Mahle, Ron Oyer, Nat Duckett, and Ed Conti all looked good during scrimmage.

He noted that it is fortunate that Mahle is backed up by a good quarterback, Don King.

When asked about prospects for the coming season the coach commented, "After six days it's a little early to project into the future. We'll have to wait and see what freshmen can grow into the line."

Internal Net Matches

Gene Garrett's tennis team has a three week lay-off between its spring trip and its next contest. But it's not waiting until then to get in some action.

Tomorrow the boys square off against themselves in what Garrett terms "challenge matches." He expects that tomorrow's contests may change the current line-ups.

Right now Garrett rates Steve Rubell in the top slot. The 19-year-old sophomore made the largest advancement of anyone this spring, from last year's freshman squad to the number one varsity position this year.

Rated behind him is Ross Kaplan, who held the top position for most of last year. Kaplan, in his third year on the squad, is the team captain.

Following Kaplan are Bill Gadalecia, in the third position, and Al Napper in the fourth. Gadalecia is a junior. Napper is another sophomore who made the jump to one of the leading spots on the squad.

Senior Bruce Gordon is fifth, junior Al Davis, sixth, Lew Katcher, also a junior is seventh. Sophomores fill out the rest of the roster with Dave Barrie eighth, Bob Dorne ninth and Bob Henry tenth.

In doubles ratings, Kaplan and Rubell pair off for the first opening; Gadalecia and Napper for the second; Katcher and Davis for the third; and Gordon and Berrie in the fourth.

In tomorrow's action, Rubell will be defending his position against Kaplan. In their one meeting last year, Rubell defeated Kaplan in a close match, 7-5 in the third set.

Al Davis will meet Dave Barrie, trying to hold onto his sixth position. Bob Dorne will face off with Bob Henry for the ninth position.

Garrett is holding these first three matches at the Women's Building at 10 a.m.

At Skytop in the afternoon, Al Napper will fight off Bruce Gordon for the fourth spot. Garrett had praise for the two players in this 2 p.m. match:

"Napper is coming up fast. He started at seventh, and now has moved up to fourth or fifth.

"Gordon on the other hand is and has been one of our consistent winners. He has always come through in the clutch, so I'd have to consider him one of our top notch players.

"This will be a very interesting match with each having a different style of play yet both playing fairly even games."

Two other matches, based on the outcome of those earlier in the day, will be held at 2 p.m.

At 4 p.m., the Skytop courts will be taken over by the top two doubles teams. Kaplan and Rubell defend their top position against Gadalecia and Napper.

Then based on the new rankings, if any, the squad will travel to Hamilton a week from tomorrow in an attempt to even their record. On the spring trip completed last week, the squad won two, lost three.

Board Selects Miss Arnold As 'On' Editor

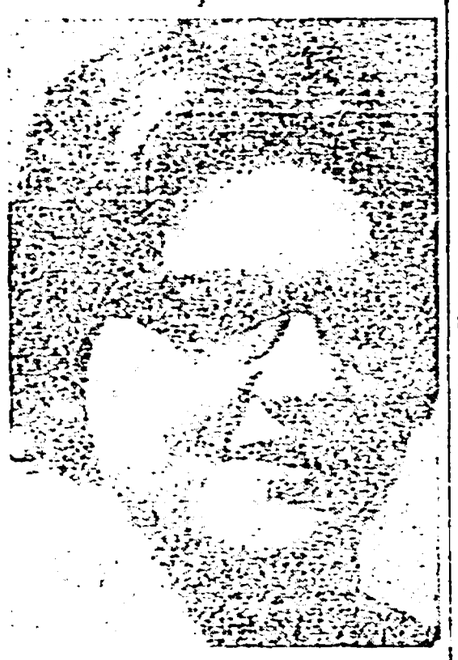
Kathleen Arnold, a 17-year-old sophomore in the College of Liberal Arts, was elected editor-in-chief of the 1964 Onondagan Friday.

The official vote in the Board of Publications was six to four favoring Miss Arnold over Charles S. Steinberg.

The board met previously April 4 but tabled the vote until a clarification of the eligibility of juniors as senior editors could be given. The vote was carried from the previous meeting and no call was made for a revote.

In other business, Dean of the Journalism School Wesley C. Clark, chairman of the board, announced that monthly meetings of the board will be held starting next fall.

The monthly meetings will consist of the five faculty and administration members plus all the editors that are on the boards for the three publications. If a vote concerning a specific publication is necessary, Clark said only those who are concerned with that publication will vote.



Miss Arnold, who was a senior editor of this year's 'ON', is the daughter of Edmund C. Arnold, professor of graphic arts in the School of Journalism. Arnold is faculty advisor to the yearbook and has a seat on the board.

A member of Sigma Lambda Delta, freshmen's women honorary, she has a 2.67 average. She has worked on the yearbook for one year.

Miss Arnold says she plans to write the book in continuous copy which would join the book together by sections instead of individual copy on each page.

The Book will also include better coverage of campus academics with all academic honoraries included, she said.

Staff positions will be presented to the board for confirmation within the next month, she said. For the coming year the editorial staff will be working more closely with the business staff, she said, so that "they can help us make a better book and we can help them sell 10,000 'ON's'."

Summer School Sign-ups Set

Liberal Arts student in good standing must file petitions in the Liberal Arts office before the end of spring semester, preferably by May 10, to take summer courses at other schools.

Individuals on probation may not take summer work at other colleges because grades received are not transferred at higher than "C."

The petition must include the courses and course numbers, credits, department and college, and reasons and consent of the advisor and SU department offering similar courses.

According to LA Asst. Dean Alfred H. Cope, petitions may be denied for various reasons. Most are acted upon promptly unless review of grades in June is needed.

To obtain petition approval a student should have good grades in his major courses, and should ask to take courses appropriate to his major study field.

Panhel Council Meets Today For Elections

Hill sorority women will vote for the president and vice president of Panhellenic Council at 7 p. m. in Hendricks Chapel.

Joline Johnson and Geraldine LaDue will vie for the presidency, with Joan Hakanson and Ellen Steinberg running for the vice president post.

The loser of the president race will be able to run for the vice presidency is she so desires.

Miss Johnson, a liberal arts - education major with a 2.5 average, is campaigning on a platform of better communication in all phases of Panhellenic. Specific proposals include a policies and procedures booklet, and having freshman rush counselors start work during orientation week.

Photographs of candidates for Panhellenic offices appear on Page 7.

From Syracuse, Miss Johnson is secretary of Panhel, Association of Women Students executive council secretary, a sorority officer and a member of the Panhel judiciary board and Delta Phi Alpha German honorary. She has received the Luella Bothwell award.

Beauty Queen ContestOpens Greek Week

By CLAY RICHARDS
Junior Editor

Greek Week 1963 opens officially tonight with the "Miss Aphrodite" beauty contest. Contestants sponsored by the 30 Hill fraternities will compete in the elimination.

A queen and a court of four will be chosen by judges Dean of Men Earle W. Clifford, Fraternity Administrator James P. McMurray, IFC President George (Skip) Stanger (Sigma Chi Psi), past president Thomas Rigoli (Phi Delta Theta) and Greek Week chairman James Hormell (Sigma Nu).

The queen will be judged on the basis of beauty only, and will be crowned at the Greek Ball Friday night.

Tuesday is officially an open day for the Greeks, but IFC officials are encouraging each individual house to foster better alumni-local relations by asking local alumns to dinner.

Wednesday, the first annual Carl Bye memorial lecture, featuring CBS correspondent Marvin Kalb, will be held at 8 p.m. in Hendricks Chapel.

Kalb will discuss the precarious Russian-Chinese Alliance. He has been CBS's Russian correspondent the past two years and is currently CBS news diplomatic correspondent.

Following the lecture a reception for Kalb will be held for faculty members and two representatives from each fraternity and their dates.

Thursday is social actions day for the Greek world. Each fraternity campus will team up with a sorority and work on an assigned service project.

Mug Frosh In Thornden

A DellPlain Hall freshman Friday night received a black eye and face cuts when he was attacked by a group of teenagers in Thornden Park.

The student, Lawrence Rubin, 18, of Pittsburgh, Pa., was walking with a coed near the park's tennis courts at about 11 p.m. Friday.

As the group of boys, aged 17-19, passed the couple, Rubin told police he turned to look at the gang and one of them shouted, "You looking for trouble?"

Rubin said the youths pushed and punched him. The coed was unharmed, police said. The attackers had vanished when police arrived at the scene.

Coloring Book Goes on Sale

A Greek coloring book has been published by a group of independent students and will go on sale today. The magazine cannot be bought on campus.

It is being sold at the Corner Book Store and at the new Syracuse Book Store, Manny's and the Savoy on Marshall Street. The price for the magazine is 25 cents.

The coloring book dedication reads to "Deans Faigle, Smith, Clifford, Hafer and Chancellor Tolley whose interest and enlightened policies have made this book both necessary and possible."

Crayons are being sent to each person in the dedication.

A spokesman for the students who published the coloring book stated that they did not print very many copies because they could not afford it. However, the reactions of students who have already seen the book have indicated that "we should have borrowed some money to print more copies."

All profits from the sale of the coloring book will go to the Student Union Building Fund.

In addition to the actual performances of the arts, the drama department will sponsor a Festival display of Gothic color awards in scene design, Thursday to Saturday in the Drama Building.

Lesson in Living, Guatemala Style

One of the valuable educational opportunities offered Syracuse University students is the chance to study in foreign lands. We have all heard quite a bit about the Semester-in-Italy program, including a recent Daily Orange story on the program.

A little less publicized but equally rewarding program is the Semester-in-Guatemala program. We recently were sent a copy of a letter sent by a student studying in Guatemala this semester to Hendricks Chapel Dean Charles C. Noble.

Dean Noble thought it might be of interest to our readers and we agree that this letter from senior Valdmyra Micpovil is not only interesting but is also a hardy testimonial for the international study program.

In this time when all Syracusans are questioning the benefits that can be derived from the university, we offer this example under the heading: Lesson in Living.

". . .Our semester in Guatemala is a rare opportunity and more students at S.U. should be made aware of its existence. Today, I'd like to tell you about the "Reign of Students" in this country. Indeed, politics and university students are synonymous here.

"At the moment, most of the 'faculties' (like our School of Journalism, Liberal Arts and so forth) are on strike. This in no way affects our classes as they are being held apart from the regular courses of the university.

"However, our building, faculty of the Humanities, is the center of all student organized activities, and many of the professors are known to be communists—at least at heart if not in mind. When we go to classes, there are lines and crowds of students standing around silently watching us walk into a boycotted building.

"It give one a strange apprehension about why democracy cannot make a go of it here. Each student feels personally responsible for the political situation and feels his method of strike and violence will solve things.

"Yesterday was the anniversary of the death of several students a year ago, during a student riot against the congress. The reason for all the strikes and demonstrations is that the government will not admit it was army bullets that killed these students and instead claim it was either accidential or suicidal.

"There is a large monument that has been erected by the same students who are rioting because of a proposed tuition raise, on the spot where the students died. It happens to be in the middle of some stairs of the law school and creates a lovely obstacle for girls in high heels. To me it seems illogical that the very students who don't want to pay high tuition are waisting their class time in riots instead of taking advantage of the classes offered.

"Quite often I have found it to my advantage to allow Guatemalans to assume I am German instead of (from the) United States. In general, we are not liked here but the Germans, who suffered terrible economic lossed here during the war but remained loyal to Guatemalam are a special case, and are considered first-class citizens.

"The students talk much more freely to a German. I guess if I had to choose between lack of order here and the over-regulated life at S.U., I'll take S.U. Yet I wish that the students at Syracuse did take their existence a little more seriously. I guess I have now seen both extremes and am hoping to encounter a happy medium at the University of Mexico, where I am applying to study for my masters next year."

So you can see that being a student isn't so easy everywhere in the world nor is it something to be taken lightly. It took a semester in Guatemala for this writer to find it out. Therein lies the worth of the program.

Israel

To the Editor:

In the article last Wednesday concerning Egypt and Israel, a viewpoint was given that definitely favored Egypt. Since there are two sides to every story and seldom can a real "right" or "wrong" for any situation be found, I feel that there should be some more light shed upon Israel's position.

First of all, in the former article there seems to be an attempt to remove any repugnance to Egypt's growth in the field of war time rocketry under the direction of German scientists. The effort to justify this is very poorly done and is accompanied by some undocumented and unillustrated accusations about Israel. In the limited space of this letter, I would like to show how one of the major charges, that of Israel's aggression is greatly misrepresented.

To begin with, I would like to say that no country is always completely in the right. In most instances of violence, though, Israel was either striking back in self defense or trying to remove the hindrance and danger of the continual Arab commando attacks. The only instance in which the Israelis actually gained any territory was when they first obtained independence. At that time the United Nations had tried fairly to split up Palestine, actually leaving the country in a state of interwoven patches of land, some under Israeli and other under Arab control. This situation was supposedly mutually endorsed by both sides involved. Shortly after the partition, however, in 1948, the surrounding Arab states combined forces to attack the small segment of land in Israeli hands.

The Israelis, then, in self defense, had no practical choice but to consolidate the Arab territories mixed in with their own to fight off the invaders. The inhabitants of Israel, though, did not take complete advantage of the situation, later ceding land like the Gaz astrip in compromise with the Arabs. This particular area later proved to be a trouble spot for both sides.

Finally, when the author of the article bemoans the American treatment of Nasser; he seems to lack care in overlooking the fact that this dictator once strongly sided with the Communists and has kept his people under tight public control. In reference to the fact that he ended King Farouk's "sybaritic reign." Castro ended Batista's despotic rule. Should we thus respect Castro?

In conclusion, since there is no definite answer for any situation, let us be a little more cautious in condemning or praising any nation. Especially, let us reserve judgment until after close scrutinization has been made of the Middle East where the fairly strong pro-democratic government of Israel is fighting for its survival against a hostile group of mostly autocratic neighboring governments.

Fee

To the Editor:

I realize what I have to say will cause nothing but a laugh among the administration, but nonetheless I feel it needs be said.

First, I protest not being able to get a deferment in the $100 fee due May 1. I plainly don't have the money, yet was turned down cold when I petitioned the dean of men's office for a deferment, which, by the way, has been readily given me for the past two years.

Second, I protest the absurd $100 per year "Student Fee' of Syrauese University, which I deem as nothing but an added source of income for the university. For one like myself who rarely attends any university function, this "fee" ought at least be lower, if not entirely waived on an individual basis.

Third, I protest the newly-instituted payment of one per cent for charges held over one month at the book store. Someone said this, along with higher prices, was coming when the university bought out the corner store.

It's a very funny situation when one goes in to any of the several university offices and gets nothing but the run-around. One clerk says he knows nothing of a given problem, while another clerk gives the wrong answer, while still another clerk gives a curt reply. This happens at almost any university office I go into.

Some services the students get for paying for this school!

To the Editor:

The DO should be credited for an outstanding job of presenting campus elections this spring. Opinions may vary on political situations and their worth, but the activities do exist and it makes no sense to ignore them. The constructive attitude shown by the presentation of all candidates and platforms, and expressed in Thursday's editorial can do more to improve the campus than a constant stream of abuse.

Eh What?

To the Editor:

Spring hit the Syracuse University campus two weeks ago with a real bang. The temperature was up in the 70's and it just seemed as though we really had seen the last of that bad old man winter.

Students enjoyed lounging on the grass before, between and even through classes. They also were attired in Bermuda shorts, madras shirts and shower shoes(?).

The robins and cardinals were returning from their long stay in the south and were singing their heads off. The robins were nailing their favorite food, the worm, left and right.

All traces of the coldest of winters in years had disappeared and it was believed by all that it had met its demise. "But hold on, it's snowing outside," "What? you're kidding." "No I'm not, take a look." Yes siree, Syracuse was blessed with at least two inches of snow this past week and those wonderful, but short, days of spring seemed to have been all part of a dream.

Take off your Bermudas gals, and your shower shoes guys, I guess weve already had our spring, summer and fall all in one short week. This is the only place in the world where you can play golf one day and ski the next. Eh what?

POLICY ON LETTERS

The Daily Orange invites, and even urges, the expression of opinion on the part of its readers. The editors make a sincere effort to publish as many letters as possible, but space and the illegible condition in which some letters are received eliminate several from consideration.

Out of necessity, the editors reserve the right to edit letters for reasons of grammar, space and good taste.

Consequently, writers are urged to type their letters, preferably double-spaced, and to limit them to a maximum of 200 words.

THE CUTTING ROOM

Arts and Ends

by John E. Greenwald

You can hardly turn a cultural corner in Syracuse these days, it seems, without bumping into the Syracuse University Drama Department.

From Sadler Hall with the "Best of Boar's Head" to New Haven and the Yale Drama Festival with the Ensemble Theatre's production of Beckett's "Endgame," from one-acts at the Lively Arts to children's projects at the Madison School, Acting Chairman G. F. Reidenbaugh and his department are becoming almost as ubiquitious as David Merrick.

And last weekend, what appears to be the heart of the department's "drama from gown to town" program concluded a fairly successful run of Chekhov's "Three Sisters"; the Civic Company.

The late Sawyer Falk, chairman of the department, had the idea to bring SU theater to the city at large when he began programming short plays at the Lively Arts coffee house. He died before he could enlarge upon his design.

But Reidenbaugh took up the hint and in two years seems to have blanketed the town with theater. More productions are being done on the Hill, with "road shoes" being sent to Sadler, the Arts, the Madison School, and even Yale, than ever before in recent memory.

Reidenbaugh is stage directing Ernst Bacon's opera "Tree on the Plains" which involves not only the university but the whole city as well, what with a full orchestra, children's chorus, etc.

We don't know if the city of Syracuse wants the department to become its dramatic headquarters. We do know that it can and indeed has done worse than the Civic Company for local productions.

We don't know if the department could be both a county-wide production com- don't have one on good looks.

It's too bad the PiKA's pany as well as an educational operation. But we do know the most valuable lessons learned in the department occur on stage and not in the classroom.

We notice that the boys of Pi Kappa Alpha are planning to put out a little dirty rush under the guise of their nationally famous "Dream Girl" calendar. We have nothing against a little cheesecake, but just hope the fellas do a better job of presenting SU's ladies than last year.

They've gotten off to a rather poor start, though, by having only sorority girls as candidates for the twelve positions on the calendar. Greeks may have a monopoly on "gracious living" but they can't recoginze there may be some independent beauty on Day 3, or Haft, or Reid. At any rate we hope the boys pick some ladies who don't resemble a cross between last year's Miss America and this year's Miss Reingold. Their must be nothing as boring as trying to photograph a "cute" or "pretty" girl.

And speaking of pictures, let those who believe — pray that PiKA uses better photogs than last year. There are many eager, if not talented, lensers stained with hypo in the basement of the J-School.

If the exhibitions there and in the Drama Department are any indication of their talent then perhaps PiKA should employ those students to shoot their "Dream Girls" with taste and imagination.

Lastly we hope the ladies chosen have the good sense their predecessors didn't have to insist on seeing the finished pictures before they are printed.

All the above will probably save a lot of embarrassment on all sides, will offer little "meat" for a DO columnist, and will contribute to a better Pi Kappa Alpha dirty rush.

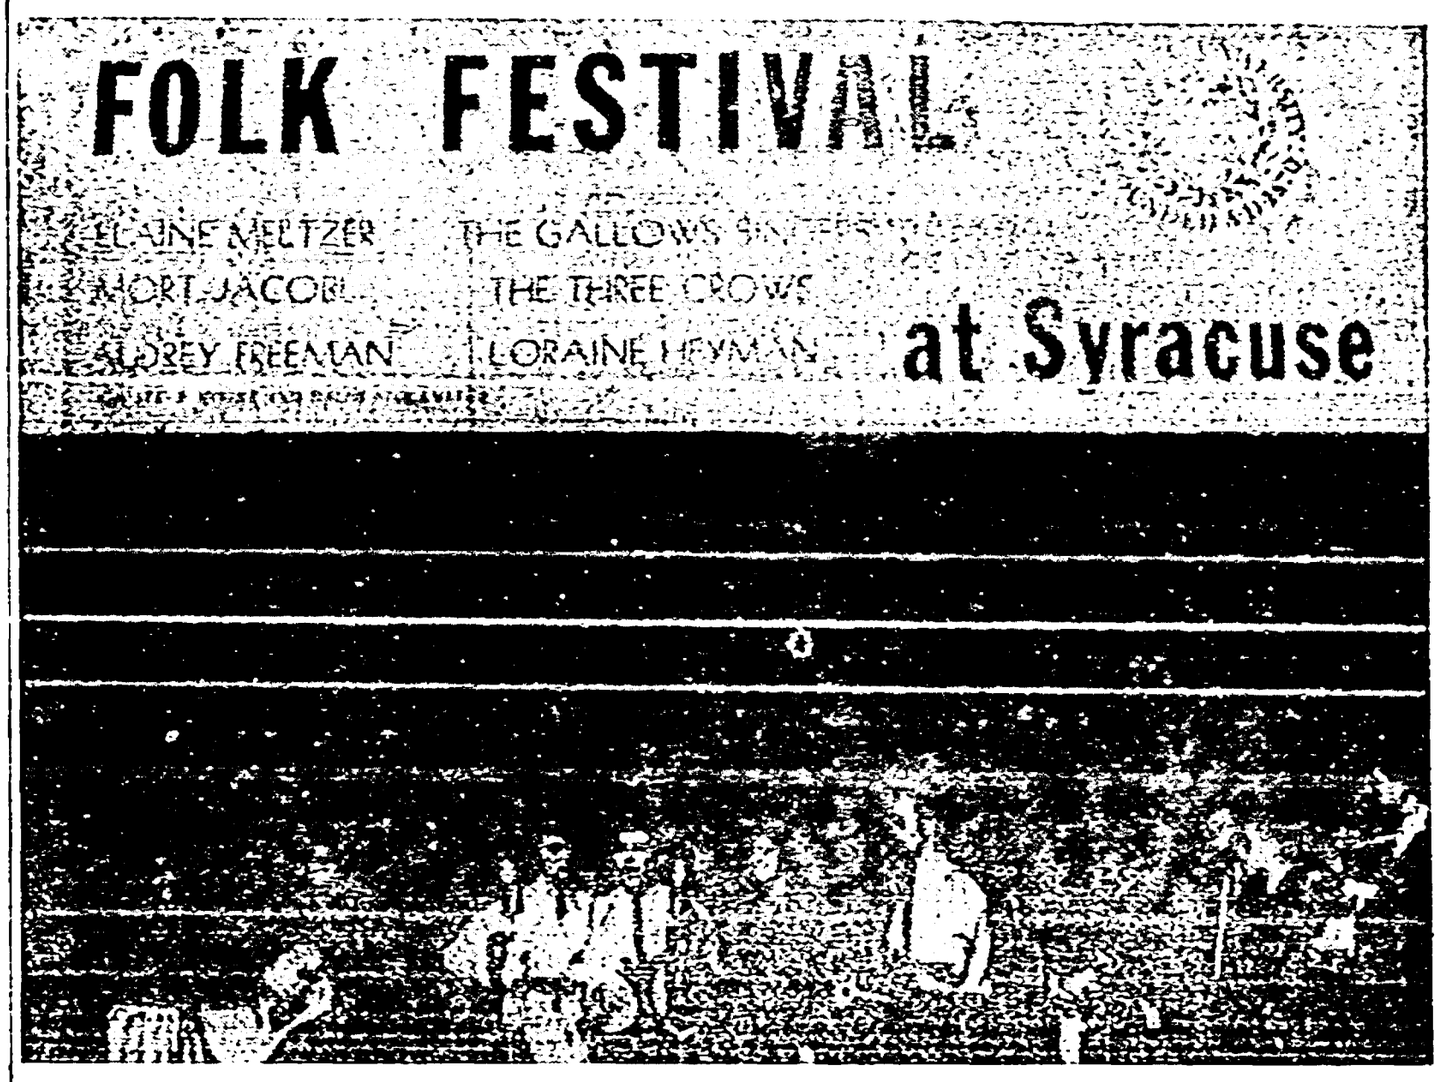
Montreal Hails Gutnikov

Russian violinist Boris Gutnikov who will appear with the Syracuse Symphony Orchestra under Maestro Karl Kritz on April 18 and 19 won applauds from critics at his North American debut with the Montreal Symphony on March 19.

The violinst, who has won the highest award his country has to offer, the 1962 International Tchaikovsky Competition, played Tchaikovsky's Violin Concerto in D Major in Montreal. His performance was described by the Montreal Gazette as "the greatest single performance of the work by a solo violinist I can recall for many a year".

"La Presse" called him "a violinist of no common order. . .an artist from his mind to his fingertips, every inch musician and virtuoso." They went on to say "He has the gift of making the complex simple and of subordinating a formidible virtuosity to what the music in itself demands."

Gutnikov's tour in the United States will include recitals in Boston Symphony Hall and Lincoln Center.



In addition to his appearance with the Syracuse Symphony he will perform with the Toronto Symphony and in Carnegie Hall with the Symphony of the Air. The tour is booked under the Cultural Exchange Agreement between the United States and Russia.

How to Succeed in TV By Really Trying

By SUSAN WANGERMAN

After only three years in professional television, Fred Silverman, SU '58, has been appointed director of daytime programs for the CBS television network.

"Without judging whether Mr. Silverman's rise can be called phenomenal, it certainly is unusual", commented Val Adams in the April 12 New York Times.

Except for a summer spent in the American Broadcasting Company mail room, Silverman had had no network experience prior to his CBS appointment two weeks ago.

WGN-TV

But Silverman felt three years at Chicago's WGN-TV was enough to give him valubale knowledge. Apparently CBS thought so too.

Last year he submitted to CBS executives a detailed analysis of the announced 1962-63 program schedule, and favorably impressed CBS men Michael H. Dann and Oscar Katz.

Leaving Chicago early this year, the 25-year old Silverman took a position with New York station WPIX, where as supervisor of live programming, he worked for eight weeks before accepting the CBS offer.

WNDR Too

According to Gary Van Veght (Syracuse WNDR's "Gary Van") it was obvious to all who knew Silverman as an undergraduate he was destined to "go a long way" in television. Van Veght was Silverman's roommate their freshman year, and worked with him at WAER-FM, the campus station.

"He was talented and he knew it," Van Veght said. Silverman's ability in programming and directing radio drama was only superceded by his determination to develop and practice his technical skills, the announcer noted.

"He had a whole library of radio scripts from old ABC dramas, including sound effects, and he would practice on those darn things day and night," Van Veght recalled. "He worked hard for his goal, even in school."

Flair

Dr. Lawrence Myers, associate radio-tv professor remembers Silverman as a "good student—highly motivated, with a flair for creativity in the arts."

Mr. Silverman received his B. A. degree in radio-tv. When he applied to the school, in 1957, admission was based on scholastic average, quality of outside work and impression made in interviews with faculty.

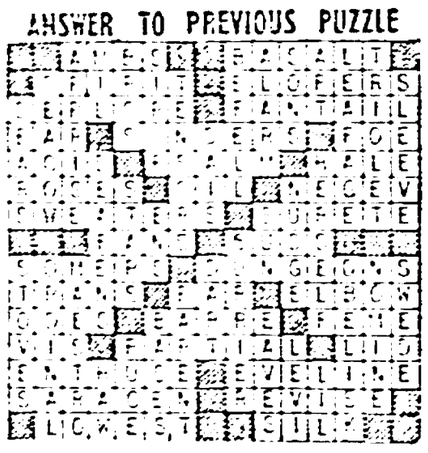
Looking over his comments made during his interview with Silverman, Dr. Myers noted Silverman's interest in television directing in the major tv centers. Myers had written, "Likes kind of job—good."

"Serious"

In recommending him for [illegible] to study, Dr. Myers, who was his faculty adisor, wrote that Silverman was a "serious and conscientious student with artistic talent and technical skill of a high order."

While an undergraduate at Syracuse the New Yorker served on the announcing and production staffs for WAER. He was social chairman of Alpha Epsilon Pi fraternity and was also a member of Sigma Tau Rho, national speech honorary.

Besides working for WAER, Silverman was employed for by Syracuse Radio Station WOLF.



109 Pages

After graduation from SU in 1958, Silverman studied at Ohio State University and obtained a master's intelevision programming and theater in 1959. His thesis ran 406 type written pages, double spaced, and dealt with American Broadcasting Company television programs from 1953 to 1959.

In his new office at 485 Madison Avenue, Silverman's tv set remains on all day, the New York Times noted, as he studies the shows of all the major networks.

"I hope to have a role, in a small way, in helping to plan the nighttime schedule for the fall of 1965," the Times quoted the forward looking Silverman.

Assignment: build a sports car to rank with the world's best!

Result: The experimental Ford Mustang, lively 2-seater loaded with significant engineering features

Just under 13 feet long—weight, 1544 pounds, 400 to 700 pounds less than comparable models of popular imported sports jobs—the Mustang is representative of the interesting design challenges at Ford Motor Company. Unique ways of reducing weight without sacrificing strength, to improve performance and economy, may stem from its design.

For example, seats are an integral part of the Mustang's body, adding structural rigidity. Brake, clutch and accelerator are mounted on a movable cluster which can be adjusted fore and aft (as can the steering wheel) to suit varying sizes of drivers.

Other important features: low-drag, aerodynamic shape proven in the wind tunnel; independent front and rear suspension; disc front brakes; roll bar built as an integral part of the body/frame structure; hot V-4 engine mounted forward of the rear axle in unit with a 4-speed manual transmission.

The Mustang is another example of how challenging assignments met by our engineers and stylists help Ford Motor Company maintain engineering leadership and provide new ideas for the American Road.

Early in 1961, President John F. Kennedy decreed that the week in which April 14 falls be observed in the United States as Pan-American Week.

He chose this date to commemorate the founding, in 1890, of the Commercial Bureau of the American Republics. Established after the first official Pan-American conference in 1889-90, the Bureau's name was changed in 1910 to the Pan-American Union.

FILLING A WELL-NEEDED GAP

Although my son is a college freshman, I am glad to say that he is still not too old to climb up on my lap and have a heart-to-heart talk when things are troubling him. My boy is enrolled at Harvard where he is studying to be a fireman. From the time he was a little tiny baby he always said he wanted to be a fireman. Of course, my wife and I believed that he would eventually grow out of it, but no sir, the little chap never wavered in his ambition for one minute!

So here he is at Harvard today taking courses in net holding, mouth-to-mouth breathing, carbon tetrachloride, and Dalmatian dogs. It is a full schedule for the young man, and that, in fact, is exactly what we talked about when last he climbed upon my lap.

He complained that every bit of his time is taken up with his major requirements. He doesn't have so much as one hour a week to sample any of the fascinating courses outside his major —history, literature, language, science, or any of the thousand and one things that appeal to his keen young mind.

I am sure that many of you find yourselves in the same scholastic bind; you are taking so many requirements that you can't find time for some appealing electives. Therefore, in today's column I will forego levity and give you a brief survey in a subject that is probably not included in your curriculum.

He's Still not too Old

I have asked the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes whether I might employ this column—normally a vehicle for innocent merriment—to pursue this serious end. "Of course you may, crazy kid," they replied kindlily, their grey eyes crinkling at the corners, their manly mouths twisted in funny little grins. If you are a Marlboro smoker—and what intelligent human person is not?—you would expect the makers of Marlboro to be fine men. And so they are—wonderful guys, every-man-jack of them—good, generous, understanding, wise. They are each tipped with a pure white filter and come in soft pack or Flip-Top box.

But I digress. We were going to take up a topic you are probably unable to cover in your busy academic life. Let us start with the most basic topic of all—anthropology, the study of man himself.

Man is usually defined as a tool-making animal, but I personally do not find this definition entirely satisfactory. Man is not the only species which makes tools. The simians, for example, make monkey wrenches.

Still, when you come to a really complicated tool—like a linotype, for instance—you can be fairly sure it was made by Homo sapiens—or else a very intelligent tiger. The question one should ask, therefore, is not who made the tool, but what did he do with it.

For example, in a recent excavation in the Olduvai Gorge a large assortment of hominoid fossils was found, all dating back to the Middle Pleistocene Age. Buried with the fossils was a number of their artifacts, the most interesting being a black metal box which emitted a steady beeping sound. Now, of course, zoologists will tell you that tree frogs make such boxes which they employ in their mating activities (I can't go into detail about it in this family newspaper) but the eminent anthropological team, Mr. and Mrs. Walther Sigafoos (both he and she are named Walther) were convinced that this particular box was made not by tree frogs but by Neanderthal men. To prove their point, they switched on the box and out came television, which, as everyone knows, was the forerunner of fire.

If there is anything more you need to know about anthropology, just climb up on my lap as soon as my son leaves.

© 1963 Max Shulman

The makers of Marlboro Cigarettes who sponsor this column, often with trepidation, are not anthropologists. They are tobacconists—good ones, I think—and I think you'll think so too when you sample their wares—available wherever cigarettes are sold in all fifty states.

Progress in Madison Project

By AUDREY LIPPMAN
Junior Editor

"There has been a significant breakthrough in the education of 'culturally disadvantaged' children."

Mario Fantini, director of the educational experimental program Madison Area Project, said this breakthrough is a is an encouraging sign for the projec which was put into full effect last Septem

The project, started in Croton and Washington Irving elementary schools and Madison Junior High School in the fifteenth ward, was first conceived by the SU Youth Development Center.

Further Expansion

If the program is successful, plans will be continued for expansion in other areas of the city.

Fantini believes this attempt to provide educational opportunities for children in these areas will soon show good effects throughout the school system. The program should find its way to other children regardless of their classification as culturally disadvantaged.

This should work for all children, he said, because it is educationally sound. Everyone is culturally disadvantaged to a certain extent, Fantini added.

Experiences

The experiences of these children are not the kind the schools expect, he said. If the schools expected other experiences, they might not be classified in this way.

The danger signals of high drop-outs in the schools, behavior problems and lack of interest in subject matter show the present school system structure does not provide the needs and opportunities for these children, he added.

Fantini, who classified himself as a former culturally disadvantaged student, has worked with many groups before organizing this program. In his work with retarded, emotionally disturbed, gifted and culturally disadvantaged children, he has been able to see the gaps in the system for each type of student.

He received his B.A. and M.A. from Temple University. At Harvard University he received a certificate of advance study and a doctor of education. Before beginning work on the Madison Project, he was chairman of two programs in teacher education at Temple University.

On the project, Fantini works with a special staff, redefining their rules in the school situation, attempting to increase the motivation and academic achievement to stimulate the learning processes and trying to give the students saleable skills for the future through the help of guidance and "interdisciplinary approach."

The family plays a significant role, calling for a partnership of the family and the school to strengthen these institutions, he said. Mobilization of community effort through partnership with the school holds the most promise for an effective change. They meet the broader problem of providing increasing opportunities for children and youth, he continued.

Schools should assume a leadership role in this mobilization, he added.

Motivation

Since one of the keys to effective teaching is the ability to motivate, emphasis is placed on a continuous in-service program with the teachers. This is achieved mainly with an instructional co-ordinator and team teaching.

Parternships with other agencies such as the SU School of Education, School of Social Work, the Mayor's Commission for Youth, church groups and others are also being planned.

Fantini wants to work with community agencies to start a program for the pre-school child and the family. If cultural experiences are provided early enough, he said, the children will be more able to compete successfully in today's society.

Hearing Climate

Fantini noted the climate of the experimental schools are more conductive to learning than before. This has been achieved through physical changes such as large bulletin boards to display children's work.

Comprehensive trip programs provide "cultural enrichment experiences" which become a "basis for concept development," he said.

Other changes such as a school theme, "Wings for the Future," which helps give students goals incentives, and a shift in the schedule that allows team teaching.

Team Teaching

Team teaching requires that all teachers of one grade do the planning for the grade allowing for flexibility in the use of teaching strength of the instructors and their capacity for teaching more or less than a set amount of classes or students.

The program is now trying a new pattern of classes according to personality grouping. The students are then regrouped according to their performance in subject matter.

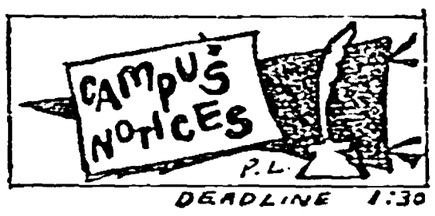
Believing in ungraded team teaching, Fantini said artificial barriers are created by the grade system. By grouping according to the levels of need of the student, children feel more challenged.

Teachers

The school administration in the experimental schools have created a climate which fosters fullest utilization and participation of teachers. The teachers response to this has been one of the important considerations to the success of the project thus far.

Programs of this sort give students whose potential has never been fully developed a chance for good education, gain skills, and continue in schools of higher education of they desire it.

The purpose of the program is the fullest development of human resources, he continued. "Unless we do this, we are not keeping pace with the greatest need in our century."



Main Function

If a person's self concept improves, there is reason to believe he will want to go out and learn, which is the main function of our educational system, he said.

Thus, the fostering of the love to learn, really is what the Madison area project hopes to accomplish.

Now a clean-filling, smooth-writing, money-saving Parker cartridge pen...only $3.95

New PARKER ARROW

This pen can save you important money on cartridges. Ours are BIGGER and last longer (each is good for 8 or 9 thousand words). But, even if you didn't save a dime, this pen would be worth the extra price. It's a Parker.

And only Parker gives you a solid 14K gold point tipped with plathenium—one of the hardest, smoothest alloys ever developed. It should last you for years no matter how much you use it.

The pen won't leak the way the cheap ones do. It has a built-in safety reservoir, and it must meet most of the tough specifications we set for our $10 pens.

If you have trouble saying it, say it with a Parker. If you're a little shy and have difficulty saying "I love you" or even "I like you very much"—say it with a Parker.

The new Parker Arrow makes a beautifully expressive gift and looks as if you paid a small fortune for it.

The new Parker Arrow comes in black, dark blue, light blue, light gray, and bright red, with a choice of four instantly replaceable solid 14K gold points. Gift-boxed with five free cartridges.

DAILY ORANGE PINCH - HITTER

THERE WAS ONCE A BOY in Omaha, Nebraska by the name of Serge Flortz. Unless you are one of the most faithful of Daily Orange readers, this name will mean nothing at all to you. If, however, you have been on campus before this year and read the column "View from Archbold" last year, you might have a glimmer of remembrance for this fine young American boy.

For the unitiated and the forgetful, let us trace back the strands of the past. Serge Flortz first came into our hearts as the boy who wrote an indignant, if naive, letter to the Federal Trade Commission last year when the FTC was carrying on an investigation on baseball bubble gum cards manufactured by the Topps Bubble Gum Co.

At that time the New York Times carried a story about the investigation into the monopolistic practices of the company. The letter, which appeared only in this column, was written in defense of that grand old childhood pasttime known as saving bubble gum cards.

Young Serge related the thrill of winning a Mickey Mantle in a skimming contest with his friend. And he told how it is to get a whole set but how helpful the man in the candy store is as the boys spend ten dollars a week trying to get the last card—a Clay Dalrymple—to complete the set.

Through the clean clear eyes of a child were made to see the silliness of a world in which a government agency must look into the practices of a company which deals in a part of boyhood. Yet while he pointed out the good of these cards he seemed to be indicting the company further.

Then we heard from him later in the year when he wrote a letter to Casey Stengel advising him not to try to make a comeback in baseball with the New York Mets. With stirring logic and sentimental memories of Casey's great past, Serge warned of nothing but misery and frustration for Casey as manager of the Mets.

The baseball season proved him a wise prophet and with each of the Mets' 120 losses, it seemed that Serge's words of advice must be surely ringing in Casey's ears.

So what becomes of a boy who has shown so much spark and brilliance, so much insight and candor, so much intelligence and understanding of the mixed up adult world? We wondered the same thing also until, two days ago, we received a letter from Serge Flortz.

...."Since you were the only newspaper in the country that would print my letters last year I thought you would be interested to know what I am doing now. And since you are interested I shall tell you.

"After finding a Clay Dalrymple card on July 17 of last year, I decided that I had indeed reached manhood (for what else marks a man but that he has a complete set of Topps cards) and I set out for college (for where else is there for a man to go).

"That is where I am now—Des Moines School of Precocious Fingerpainters—and I am the sports editor of our paper, 'The D.M.S.P.F. Dmspf.'

"I simply wanted to tell you about a new plan worked out at our school. As you know we are athletically inclined and are not much in academics although we have a wonderful fingerpainting department. We also have just had our tuition raised.

"Because our athletes attend school for nothing and because most of the regular students are paupers, the administration (obviously bubble gum card collectors) decided that classes would be discontinued so all athletes could become more proficient and so that students could pursue their activities free of the mental strain of school work.

"We are now all very happy and number one in the country in squash racquets. But we do have a good finger painting department."

Hill Stickmen Get Prepared For Hobart

The Hill lacrossemen of Coach Roy Simmons are working into top shape for one of their season's high spots when they host a strong Hobart squad Saturday.

The varsity stickmen have a one-and-one record going into this first home match and will be making their first of only three appearances at Hookway Tract in the Collendale area.

The frosh have yet to play this year but they have been working out with the varsity players for freshman games later in the season. Last year's frosh graduated two stand-outs to the varsity, high scoring Ron Fraser and Tom Rennie.

Coach Simmons has been watching the yearlings to find other possible stars for the future. He is also hoping football star John Mackey can make the grade as a stickman. One calls to mind the All-America efforts of Jim Brown on the lacrosse field whenever football players turn to lacrosse. Tom Gilburg, a varsity lineman, was also a stand-out lacrosseman, playing defense for the Orange.

Orange Crew Abounds With Strong, Lean Juniors

The winter snows have melted and the water on Lake Onondaga and Seneca River is high and cold. This doesn't stop a group of devoted athletes who have been laboring all winter long in the simulated waters of the Archbold Gymnasium crew tank.

The Syracuse crew, which doesn't enter into competition until the end of this month, works hard at conditioning and by the time of year that the ice breaks up on the lake and the first signs of spring come to the vale of Onondaga, these hardy men take to the waters in excellent condition.

The men of the crew are tall and strong, with the average height being 6' 3" and the average weight 185 pounds. Nevertheless, the key to the crew is a small man who calls the stroke, the coxswain.

Coach's Job

Right now the job of Coach Loren Schoel is to find the right combiation of men for each of the boats — varsity, junior varsity and frosh — and find coxswains who can get the men working together in that precision and smoothness required of a winning combination.

Coach Schoel, in his eighth year at Syracuse, must replace five letter men from last year's crew which won two of its three dual and triangular meets and finished sixth in the Eastern Sprints and eleventh in the IRA regatta.

Twelve returning letter men hold the key to this year's success. Among them are only two seniors, which makes Coach Schoel happy about the future. Ten juniors return from last year's sophomore-laden team.

Twelve Letter Men

The letter men are: Seniors Walt Barber and Bill Sanford; juniors Don Dick, Steve Gladstone, Dick Hersch, Dan Hogan, Ted Kakas, Dave Norris, Carl Parlato, John Reed, Scott Sanford and Giles Van der Bogert.

Hersh and Reed are coxswains and Bill Sanford is team captain.

The crew opens at Hanover, N. H., April 27, against Dartmouth in the annual Packard Cup race, which Syracuse won last year as all three boats took first place.

Goes Cup

On May 4 Syracuse hosts the Goes Cup race against Cornell and Navy. Last year the varsity and JV boats placed second with the frosh coming in last.

May 11 Columbia and Rutgers battle Syracuse in New York City. Last year the varsity won this race with the JV's taking a second and the frosh again trailing.

The Eastern Sprints will be held on Lake Quinsigamond, Worcester, Mass., May 18, and the IRA regatta will be on Lake Onondaga June 15.

On the frosh level, Coach Gene Perry has a large squad that he calls "very eager." However, at the end of March Perry was still a long way from deciding on a first boat.

Seton Hall Nine Invades Wednesday

The SU baseball team will open its home schedule Wednesday with a game against Seton Hall. The Syracuse team sports a 4-2 record, established during the recent spring tour of the South.

Syracuse, which tailed off to a 7-12 season last year after winning the District 2 NCAA crown in 1961, looked like an improved team during the spring drills although the hitting was behind the pitching, a typical spring time phenomenon.

A Syracuse pitcher and football player, Bob Lelli, showed good form in his one start, striking out 15. He will be the ace of the mound staff as well as being a fine hitter.

Speedy Pat Lutz, First Baseman Ed Macner, Outfielder Bob Taylor and Catcher Bob Jacuk are the keys to the Syracuse attack.

The rest of the squad is mostly composed of sophomores who could prove to be the needed ingredient for another top season. Right now, Coach Ted Kleinhans isn't making predictions.

Hilton Cup-Sigma Kappa; Miss LaDue to Lead Panhel

By ANN CUTLER
Junior Editor

Sigma Kappa was awarded the Hilton Cup as the outstanding sorority at Syracuse University by Dean of Women Marjorie C. Smith at Monday night's annual Panhellenic convocation.

Dean Smith also gave honorable mention certificates to Chi Omega, last year's winner of the cup, and Kappa Alpha Theta.

Geraldine LaDue (Zeta Tau Alpha) was elected Panhel president for the coming year by a margin of 167 votes over Joline Johnson.

Miss Johnson (Kappa Delta) went on to win the Panhel vice presidency by 117 votes over her nearest competitor. She became eligible to run for vice president under a recent amendment to the Panhel constitution which permits losing presidential candidate to try for the vice presidency.

Virginia Fryckman, retiring Panhel president, also stated at the convention that plans are being discussed to eliminate the three plan system of rushing now being used in sorority rushing (Christian, Jewish, cross rush).

Losing candidates for the vice presidential position were Joan Hakanson, with 240 votes, and Ellen Steinberg, with 198 votes.

Miss LaDue is retiring from the office of Panhel treasurer to assume her new duties. Her other activities include clerk of Association of Womens' Student Governgent Standards Council, Panhel Judiciary Board and Lambda Sigma Sigma (junior womens' honorary). In addition she has maintained a 2.0 cumulative average in her three years at Syracuse.

Political Historian Burns to Address Cit Group Today

An author who has been described as "the unofficial biographer of the Kennedy administration" will be the final speaker today in the Syracuse University 1963 Citizenship and Public Affairs Lecture Series.

Political writer James MacGregor Burns is scheduled to deliver the fourth address of the series at 8 p.m. today, in Hendricks Chapel. He will discuss "Political Leadership in the United States."

Burns first won literary acclaim as author of "Roosevelt: The Lion and the Fox," a biography chronicling the career and presidential terms of the late Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The book won the Tamiment Institute Prize for the best biography of 1956. Burns was awarded the Woodrow Wilson prize the following year.

Kennedy Profile

His second biography of note was "John Kennedy — A Polical Profile" published in 1960. It was this volume that earned him the title of "unofficial biographer."

His latest book, "The Deadlock of Democracy — a commentary on the political party system—appeared early this year and has evoked highly controversial comments in political circles.

A Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Williams College, Burns is a professor of poltical science at his alma mater. He was a candidate for Congress from the First Massachusetts District in 1958 and three times has been a delegate to the Democratic national convention.

Burns was a combat historian with the Army in the South Pacific during World War Two and studied at the National Institute of Public Affairs and the London School of Economics. He received his master's degree and doctorate from Harvard University.

Bookstore, Student Union Fund Snub New Greek Coloring Book

By JEANNIE RANOV
Managing Editor

The just out "Greek Coloring Book," put together by a group of Hill students, got two slaps in the face Monday from separate SU organizations.

University Bookstore Manager Burton Fink swept copies of the book off his shelves and carted them down to Manny's bookstore on Marshall Street.

Fink said the book, which tears into many aspects of Greek life, "is too controversial to get involved in now."

He raised doubts as to whether the mimeographed effort was copyrighted correctly, and noted that no publisher is listed in the book.

Also Monday the Student Union Building Fund turned its back on the "Coloring Book's" printed offer to donate sale profits to the fund.

A statement from the Building Fund's student committee said "the content of the book is not synonymous with our standards," but made no further explanation.

Fink told the Daily Orange that continuing to sell the "Coloring Book" in his store "would look as if we were endorsing a direct attack by an anonymous party on the fraternity system."

Libel?

He said he suspects "there may be some things in this little book that may be libelous. . . we don't know what kind of a stink this thing is going to stir up."

He contrasted the "Coloring Book" with Hill senior Terrence Hughes' off-campus publication "Sword of Damocles," new this year and sold by Fink.

The Bookstore manager said Hughes' magazine has an announced publisher and is "published legitimately" (though it is not an official university publication).

Fink also said he disliked seeing such a one-sided attack on the fraternity system and would like a contradictory viewpoint expressed also.

Sells Fast

Sixty-five copies of the "Coloring Book" had been sold by 2 p.m. Monday at the Corner Store branch of the university bookstore, before Fink sent remaining copies to Manny's, where they were selling out fast.

About 750 copies were printed, according to Ron Corwin, one of the sponsoring students.

The "Coloring Book" is now on sale at 25 cents a copy at Manny's, the Savoy and the new Syracuse Bookstore on Marshall Street.

Tolley Boosts Blood Drive

SU Chancellor William P. Tolley has officially endorsed the campus blood drive, which will be held from 11 a. m. to 5 p. m. Wednesday and Thursday, in the Shaw Dormitory recreation lounge.

"We are very proud of the record of our students and faculty in the American Red Cross Blood Program," the Chancellor said.

"The opportunity to donate to the regional program is a chance for a personal expression of human concern, of identification with one's fellow men in dire need, and consequently for a meaningful act of commitment.. We are glad for the opportunity to support a service so essential," he continued.

Ed Program Head to Speak

William Cragg, director of education at Oneonta State University College, will be at Syracuse Thursday to discuss the Intensive Teacher Training Program.

ITTP is a plan for placing college graduates in elementary school teaching jobs after one year of study.

Students interested in talking to Cragg should see Mrs. Grace Vicary, 106 Hall of Languages. or call ext. 2780, for an appointment.

Arts Festival: Architecture Pavilion Goes Up

UP SHE GOES — architecture students put their backs into it as they put together the jungle gym-like frame for a pavilion between Hendricks Chapel and H. B. Crouse Classroom Building.

By SANDY MYERS

Nearly 2,500 square feet of canvas and 1,188 feet of galvanized steel tubing are being made into a pavilion to display students' architectural works, as part of the fifth annual Festival of Arts, Thursday through April 28.

The Pavilion, designed in the shape of two crosses, is being constructed on the quadrangle between Hendricks Chapel and Huntington B. Crouse Hall.

The design, by Edward D'Andrea, a sophomore in the School of Architecture, was selected from 50 designs submitted in a competition last week.

Invited guests for the pavilion opening at 1 p.m. Thursday include Chancellor William P. Tolley, School of Architecture Dean D. Kenneth Sargent, School of Speech and Dramatic Art Dean Eric H. Faigle, School of Art Director Laurence E. Schmeckebier, and School of Music Director Kirk Ridge.

The pavilion will open to the public at 2 p.m. Thursday.

150 Works

About 150 works by School of Architecture fifth-year students will be shown in the pavilion.

David Jones, a sophomore in architecture, is clerk of the works (general supervisor) for the construction, with Louis Skoler, associate professor of architecture, and a member of the American Institute of Architects, as consultant.

Tubing, canvas and scaffolding for the pavilion were loaned to the university.

Architecture by Syracuse alumni George Rockrise, of San Francisco, and Celestyn Wisniewski, New York, will be exhibited throughout the Festival on the fourth floor of Slocum Hall.

Two Lectures

The Festival schedule includes two architecture lectures.

At 4 p.m. Friday, James W. Fitzgibbons will speak on "Systems in Architecture" in Gifford Auditorium, H. B. Crouse Hall.

Fitzgibbons, an AIA member and visiting critic in architecture, is president of Synergetics, Inc., an association of architects and engineers.

He received his bachelor's degree in architecture from SU and his master's at the University of Pennsylvania. He has taught at Pennsylvania, the University of Oklahoma and North Carolina State College.

Student Union Selects Its Donors

"The Student Union Fund Raising Committee would like to thank the publishers of the Greek Coloring Book for their thought in suggesting that their profits would be donated to the Fund. However, we feel that we cannot accept this money as the content of the book is not synonomous with our standards. We are thankful for groups donating toward the needed Student Union Building but we hope in the future that ideas of this nature will be submitted to our Board first."

—Ann Cooney, chairman, Student Union Board

That letter passed our desk Monday and was received with shock. To paraphrase a bit from the Greek Coloring Book, which appeared at local bookstores Monday, "All money is equal but some money is more equal."

The editors of this coloring book, which satirically criticizes fraternity and sorority ideals and living, printed on the back cover their intention to contribute all proceeds to the fund. But now it seems the fund, which is always in search of contributions, has become selective in its choice of donors.

Let us hope that by the time the Student Union is built there are more enlightened people running its affairs. For if attitudes as narrow and childish as this prevail the Student Union will not be a place for all students with all points of view or for persons who dare to speak out against the mob.

We would like a clarification from the Student Union Board as to why satire and social comment is "not synonymous with our standards." The answer could be worth another coloring book.

A Pint of Life

The Red Cross Blood Drive sets up its cots in Shaw Dormitory Wednesday and Thursday in hopes that the campus will respond as well to the call as it did last fall. At that time the university students and faculty surpassed all past donations.

We urge all those who donated blood the last time to return to Shaw dorm and make the giving of blood a habit. It is certainly easy and harmless and after one pint it's a routine affair.

But in addition to the previous donors we urge those who for some reason missed out on their chance to give blood during the last drive. If you're in good health (and the medical people there will make sure you are) you will not endanger yourself and you will have no ill effects.

All you have to lose is a pint of blood which probably will help to save the life of someone you don't even know but who will be indebted to you for the rest of his life. The knowledge that you were able to sustain life should be reason enough for you to roll up your sleeve and give.

And since this is Greek Week we hope that the IFC and its member houses will see fit to include the blood drive as one of the key events of the week. Here the Greeks can show their willingness to perform service functions.

We therefore urge all Greeks who are interested in their fraternity system to support the blood drive through IFC.

And this will be the chance for the independents to show the Greeks that underneath the flesh, all blood is the same.

The Daily Orange hopes members of all campus groups will make it a point to stop at Shaw Wednesday or Thursday to deposit a little life in a bottle.

Calendar

To the Editor:

I honestly felt that Mr. Greenwald had sufficiently embarrassed himself last fall in connection with the Pi Kappa Alpha "Dreamgirl Calendar." Obviously he has not. Instead of realizing that his previous comments about the calendar were in poor taste and dropping the issue, he has returned with the spring to once again heap unfair and unjust abuses upon the calendar, and upon the many people who have worked very hard to make it a success.

Mr. Greenwald has repeatedly distorted the truth in matters concerning the calendar. The reason for these distortions is that he does not understand what the true purposes of the calendar are. I wish to clearly explain to you, Mr. Greenwald, exactly what the purposes of the calendar are:

1. The first basic reason that the calendar was instituted was to give publicity to our annual Dreamgirl Weekend. Pi Kappa Alpha has always held a "Dreamgirl" contest in connection with the weekend, and it was felt that the chance of having one of their girls seen on a campus calendar would stimulate more sororities to enter the contest.

2. The second basic reason for the origination of the Calendar was to increase Pi K A's sorority relations which, the brotherhood felt, should be an important objective for a social fraternity. This is the reason that sorority women are featured on the Calendar.

3. The third, and final major reason for putting out the calendar centered around the belief of the brotherhood that, because it was something new and different for Syracuse University, the calendar would be a tremendous rushing aid. When the IFC Judicial Board ruled that we could not distribute the calendar to freshman men before rushing, we sincerely felt that we were being penalized for our ingenuity. But, we abided by the IFC decision and did not yield to the overwhelming temptation to scream "sour grapes." This year's calendar will not be distributed to frosh men until during next year's rush. So, Mr. Greenwald, your charges of "dirty rush" tactics are not only false, but also libelous.

I have attempted to set the record straight in order to prevent any further misconceptions about our "Dreamgirl Calendar." I might add that plans for a professional photographer to take all of this year's calendar pictures were made last December, and that each one of this year's Calendar Girls will be shown her final picture before the calendar goes to press. You see, Mr. Greenwald, we at Pi Kappa Alpha appreciate and make full use of constructive criticism. It is only your repeated unjust and immature criticism which turn our stomachs.

Invisible Man

To the Editor:

The university is fortunate in having the services of an "Invisible Man" willing to be the arbiter of its morality. Like most social critics, this one focuses attention on problems, though not necessarily on their solutions.

His latest journalistic adventure, however, clarifies his limitations which are both numerous and serious. Space, unfortunately, restricts us to quality alone.

History is often cited by those who are ignorant of it, and the information of our albatross is faulty indeed. Exile (in various degrees) long preceded hemlock and the stake as a means of "handling people with ideas." In itself, this error is insignificant, but it indicates a predisposition to ride roughshod over facts—an ultimately dangerous pastime, especially for those who pose as authorities.

More serious, however, is his belief that he can malign others and then forestall payment in kind by officiously declaring that he will not "stoop" to answer the charges of those whom he obviously considers to be his inferiors. The anti-democratic implications of this pseudo-liberal onslaught are both obvious and significant. A democratic system functions on the assumption that views freely debated will result in good policies. Therefore, in order to prove their worth, charges made must withstand the countercharges they evoke. By withdrawing his charges from this arena, our Invisible Man subverts the system he purports to defend.

Finally, regardless of how many times Gus Hall denies that he advocates the violent overthrow of the government, the fact remains that the violent seizure of power by a revolutionary minority is the basic tenet of the Communist Party. Gus Hall cannot be a Communist without accepting this as his goal. While our Invisible Man may be neither "crackpot" nor "Communist," he is undeniably a dupe.

He reserves the right to label to himself exclusively, and in addition he expects us to pity him. But we give no more than we receive: we reply to scorn with scorn. Our Invisible Man is not invisible after all—merely transparent.

Ivy Education

To the Editor:

During my four years at an "Ivy League" college I often heard about, but seldom met, the universal geniuses which reputedly populate those sacrosanct grounds. Judging from the DO mail, one of these 'supermen' has been orphaned here in Syracuse. He has given us the benefit of his perception of comparative university teaching performance, based I would wager upon only casual observation and hearsay.

How he gathered such authoritative information to make those amazing judgements about Syracuse University I would like to know. It seems to me that the only weight in the argument was an ungentlemanly appeal to prestige by association (evidently unwarranted) with authority (his signature as an Ivy League Grad).

I guess I missed out on the Ivy League course which doles out this ability of instantaneous righteous, undocumented judgement. I only learned never to open my mouth on academic subjects unless I was backed by FACTS and KNOWLEDGE, which, I believe is the philosophy which gave those schools a decent reputation because it made most of its graduates (who don't have anything significant to say) be quiet and let the few geniuses make the noise.

Too bad this self-styled genius didn't learn that simple fact, coupled with another: that wherever books, competent instructors and facilities not with the party of the many of the school, there is ample opportunity for the most sufficient of educations. Given these, the thoroughness of education, I maintain, increases in direct proportion to personal ability and incentive.

Syracuse, I maintain, is such a place. If primitive Sangamon County was sufficient to produce Abe Lincoln, surely no one should beef over access to the myriad facilities and numerous brilliant professors of this fine institution.

An Ivy League Diogenes

Peter Maloney as Arlequin

Fans of red faced, red haired, bug-eyed Peter Maloney won't be able to see that agile visage known for splitting audiences' sides during university drama productions. For in the forthcoming "A Servant of Two Masters," opening April 24, Maloney will be wearing a mask.

Presented in the broad, stylized form of the Comedia Del Arte, Maloney will be forced to get laughs by using his equally agile body. He'll have to use it a lot since, as Arlequin, he will be on the Coronet stage most of the time.

"This is one of the most exhausting roles I've done," Maloney explained. As a servant for two masters who are living across the hall Maloney is involved in scene after scene of strenuous action.

PETER MALONEY

But Maloney's talents go beyond breaking up audiences. In his four year at Syracuse University he has achieved a 2.6 average (3.0 last semester); is president of Boar's Head, the drama honorary; is a member of Phi Kappa Phi, the national senior honorary; is on the Festival of Fine Arts students committee; has had his poems published by Syracuse 10; and will read his poetry in the festival's student poetry reading.

The past few summers he has performed in summer stock including the Fayetteville Playhouse where he worked with Joan Fontaine, Guy Madison, Darren McGavin and Martha Raye.

Maloney is also an artist and wanted to make a living from art till he decided to be a professional actor his sophomore year in high school.

Born 22 years ago in Honeoye Falls, N. Y. Maloney's father was the director of a community theater where Maloney attended rehearsals, worked as an apprentice and performed his magic act since the age of seven.

Maloney enjoys the theater because it offers communication with other people. While the other arts are solitary there are real people in human predicaments on the stage, he says.

Syracuse Symphony Set

Karel Husa, composer at Cornell University, will conduct a performance of the Syracuse University Symphony Orchestra on Sunday, April 28, as a part of this year's festival of the arts.

Born in Czechoslovakia, Mr. Husa studied at the Prague Conservatory, the Paris Conservatory, and the Ecole Normale. His works have been performed at many important European music festivals, and in the the United States, South America, and Australia.

As a conductor, he has led many Europeans orchestras and has recorded such works as Brahms First Symphony and Bartok's Miraculous Mandarin.

Presently on the music faculty of Cornell, where he teaches conducting and composition, Husa has been invited to guest-conduct the Rochester Philharmonic Orchestra several times this season and recently returned from Europe where he conducted orchestras such as The Grand Orchestra Symphonique de Brussels, Zurich and Lausanne Radio Orchestras and the Oslo Philharmonic.

Mr. Husa will be represented at his concert here by his Concertina for Piano and Orchestra and his Fresque for Orchestra. The concert will be held on at 4 p.m. in Crouse College auditorium.

Theta Chi Beta Applications Due

All students interested in applying for membership in Theta Chi Beta, religion honorary, are asked to contact Prof. A. Leland Jamison, 319 H. B. Crouse Hall.

The honorary fraternity will initiate new members in May. Upperclassmen with a B average in 15 hours of work in the department are eligible.

Louis Krasner Music Makes History

By STEPHANIE BRILL

A man who has inspired violin concertos whose name has always been linked with avant-garde compositions, many of them now considered classics, is Dr. Louis Krasner, professor of violin and chamber music in the School of Music.

Alban Berg wrote his 12 tone concerto for Krasner in 1935 after the violinist had suggested it to him. Krasner premiered it in Vienna under the baton of Serge Koussevitzky and toured Europe and the United States with it.

It was to Krasner that Schoenberg sent the manuscript for his Violin Concerto, another controversial 12 tone piece which is now one of the classics of modern repertoire. Krasner premiered the work in 1911, playing with the Philadelphia Orchestra under Leopold Stokowski.

Other first performances by Krasner included works by Sessions, Casella and Achron.

"All my life has been devoted to music", the short, bright-eyed violinist said quietly.

"In my work I get most of my fun", he smiled. "When people ask me what my interest is I tell them music is my hobby and I am even surprised sometimes that I am paid for doing what I want to do and what I must do."

When asked how he became involved with avant garde music, Krasner explained as a student he brought pieces by new composers to his music lessons. Hearing about composer Alban Berg, while in Vienna, asked friends how he could hear some of Berg's music. Because of the difficulty of his string quartet, only one group, the Galimir Quartet, could play it. Krasner heard the quartet and then decided to meet Berg.

"There was a pretty little girl playing second violin," he said, as the laugh lines formed around his blue eyes.

"I guess I broke up the quartet", he admitted,, "because I married her."

Adrienne Galimir now plays second violin in her husband's chamber music quartet, formed in Syracuse 13 years ago.

In the spring of 1935 Krasner suggested to Berg that he write a violin concerto. The idea did not materialize until the death of Berg's dear friend, Manon Gropius.

This moved him to write the piece as a memorial to her.

The girl, who was the daughter of Gustav Mahler's wife, had suffered torturing pain before death and it was this realization that drove the composer to work furiously, finishing the piece in a phenomenal six weeks. Completing the last details of the orchestration. Berg contracted a blood infection which caused his death before the first performance.

Of Krasner's interpretation the New York Times music critic, Olin Downes said:

"The performance was a tribute alike to soloist, conductor and orchestra. This is immensly difficult music. It was interpreted with astonishing eloquence and precision in execution."

In Vienna, at its first performances Neue Frie Presse commented:

"Louis Krasner whose mission it is to carry the Alban Berg Violin Concerto to the world, played it with stirring warmth of tone and with virtuosity which hardly allowed one to suspect the many difficulties of the solo part."

Critics of Boston, Paris, London, Rome, Copenhagen, New York, Boston and other places it came to echoed their praise.

Krasner's recordings of the Berg Concerto and the Schoenberg Concerto for Columbia Records were listed under Time Magazine's "Records of the "Year in 1954.

Recently, after two years of searching, Krasner assembled a collection of 5 Stradivari instruments for the Library of Congress and played at the opening ceremony.

Krasner, who has been professor of violin and chamber music since 1949, conducts the Syracuse University Symphony orchestra, "one of the oldest University orchestras in the country." He also plays first violin for the Syracuse Symphony.

How he first started playing is reminiscent of the Gershwin brothers' story. One of several children in his family was taking violin lessons when Krasner, aged nine, attended a lesson.

He picked up the violin and began to play so well the teacher stopped the other child's lessons to teach the future virtuoso. Study followed at the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston, where he had a scholarship. He did graduate work in Berlin under Carl Flesch, in Paris under Lucien Capet, and in Vienna under professors Winkler and Sevcik.

After his debut in the early 30's he concertized extensively in Europe and the United States. He has been soloist with the Boston Symphony (under Koussevitzky), the Philadelphia Orchestra (Stokowski), Chicago Orchestra (Stock), Cleveland Symphony (Rodzinski) and was concertmaster for the Minneapolis Symphony from 194348 under Dimitri Mitropoulos.

In addition he has been a sololist with the Vienna Philharmonic; Berlin Philharmonic; B. B. C. Orchestra in London; the Rotterdam, Paris, Stockholm and Rome Symphony orchestras with Klemper, Sir Henry Wood, Molinari, Muench and others.

Two of his three daughters have gone into the musical profession but the youngest one is "doing everything she can to stay away from it."

LOUIS KRASNER

DR. LOUIS KRASNER and the university's Festival of the Arts have had a long and fruitful relationship together since he was the first festival's faculty advisor in 1958. Several students suggested the festival after Krasner appeared at one in Illinois.

AARON CORLAND, pictured above with Krasner was one of the first guest artists brought to the Festival. He conducted the Syracuse University Symphony in the 1959 festival.

Space Legal Controls Vital for Civilization

By DANIEL RITEY
Junior Editor

Legal controls of space are more important than legal controls of land and the sea, Dr. Gerard J. Mangone told the freshman citizenship sections Monday at Marshall Auditorium.

"The major powers are seeking defenses against ICBM's, and space may provide the next major military breakthrough," he said.

"More important," he went on, "what happens in space will affect everyone; space now has become a part of the neighborhood like the sea and land."

Dr. Mangone noted "technical changes cause trouble and destruction, because society is slow in bringing about social adjustments to them."

In 1949, he noted, a U.S. rocket soared to the edge of outer space, but it wasn't until much later that offers of bilateral cooperation and controls were submitted.

Space Age

"We're in the sixth year of the space age and the effects of missiles and technology lag behind their development," Dr. Mangone said.

Plans to regulate space matters include registration of space shots by payload, orbit, duration and information gathered.

International cooperation in the fields of communications and weather passed by the United Nations General Assembly.

"Joint control of weather and communications could only be possible through international cooperation in the pooling of scientific resources and regulations," said Dr. Mangone.

Technical problems concerning space are more easily handled by U.N. subcommittees then are the legal aspects, he continued. "The U.S. has aimed to ban nuclear weapons and tests in outer space, but the Russians still resort to their veto of U.N. plans."

The two major powers have agreed to a bilateral study of outer space in the fields of weather, communications and geomagnitism. "This is a start toward cooperation between the major powers in space," he concluded.

Coed Burned In Chem Lab

A Syracuse University coed was reported in "fairly good condition" by University Hospital officials after burning her left hand, face and neck with acid Thursday afternoon in chemistry lab.

The coed was rushed to the emergency room of University Hospital after a vial of alcohol, which got too close to the flame, spilled on her.

The hospital officials would not comment on when the coed will be released or how serious the burns were.

'Togetherness' Motto in U. S. College Dorm Life

By SANDI EHRLICH

Co-educational dormitories are a reality. "Togetherness" is a new theme on college campuses.

There are five types of co-educational dormitory living, according to Beverly Belson, director of residence halls at Michigan State University. She spoke here recently to head residents and members of the Hill Dean of Women's staff.

One type is the "brother-sister" dormitory where men's and women's dorms are adjacent but not connected. Another is two attached dorms sharing common facilities (lounges, libraries).

Two dorms joined by a common dining area, and two connected dorms with identical facilities in each, are two other types. One building with men and women on separate floors is another type.

Co-educational housing has a number of adantages, according to a 1961 study by the Educational Facilities Laboratories called "College Students Live Here."

The book says, "Sharing of public areas eliminates duplication of facilities and contributes savings in construction costs.

"With proper design, there is greater flexibility in re-allocating space to meet changing demands. Joint participation in educational programs and social activities seem to lead to more mature relationships between men and women."

UCLA

Three of UCLA's newest residence halls (as of 1961) are co-educational. One has separate six-story wings for men and women with common facilities, including a dining room.

One dorm has women on the top three or four of the building's ten stories, and both sexes share lounges, recreation areas and dining room.

At Michigan State, co-educational living has been successful. A new unit including teaching facilities will open in September for about 1,200 students.

Cortland State has a student union between its men's and women's dorms to create "a more natural kind of living situation," according to Dr. Ellen Fairchild, assistant professor of education at Syracuse.

Flexibility is a keynote at the University of Oregon, where ten small residential units are assigned to men or women, freshmen or upperclassmen, depending on shifts in enrollment.

Problem

Housing is a definite problem at all campuses where there are limited funds and/or space.

According to the Educational Facilities Laboratories report, housing is now available for one-fourth of a college population of just under four million.

By 1970, the campus population will have grown to more than six million. As much as 40 percent will have to be housed on campus.

The survey estimates that during the current decade, schools will add to their existing residential facilities about one and one-half million new units, which will cost about six billion dollars.

Financial Aid

A new "pay-as-you-go" plan that will permit colleges to construct dormitories without capital outlays was announced in the April 4 New York Times.

Sponsored by the C.I.T. Financial Corporation, the program is aimed at helping colleges meet the increasing demand for housing. The plan has already been adopted by two small colleges, Ricker College in Houlton, Me., and Salem College, Salem, W. Va.

This strong trend toward co-education can be seen in even men's schools. Yale, Colgate and Fordham, to name a few, are contemplating the admission of women.

Women's schools are being hurt by today's tendecy toward early marriages as dropout rates increase significantly. Also, the changing sociological role of women in society has affected the status o fthe woman's school.

Thing of Past

All of this, says Mabel Newcomer of Vassar in her 1959 book "A Century of Higher Education for American Women" will make women's schools a thing of the past within the next 20 years.

Even the fraternity and sorority system will be affected by this growing trend. Why live apart when men and women can be together in the same dorm?

EdSchoolSets TalkforFrosh

The School of Education will hold a second discussion session for freshmen interested in education as a career from 3:30 to 5 p.m. Tuesday, April 23 in the alumnae lounge of the Women's Building.

The session will feature a series of short introductions to various fields in education.

All freshmen interested in the program should contact Dr. Milner, room 200A, Slocum Hall or call ext. 2489.

PAGEANT AUDITIONS

Auditions for roles in the Spring Weekend pageant will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday in Studio C of WAER, behind the main library.

The pageant, "The Battle of the Sexes," will be held Friday night of Spring Weekend under the lights in the Thornden Park amphitheatre.

Committee chairman are appointed by Stanger with the approval of the IFC executive council. Appointments will be announced at the Greek Ball Friday night.

The following time schedule will be followed: Meet the Greek, 7-7:50 p.m.; social chairman, 7:50-8:10; rushing chairman, 8:10-9; Greek Week chairman, 9-9:30; publicity chairman, 9:30-10; blood drive chairman, 10-10:15; intramurals, 10:15-10:45; undertreasurer, 10:45-11, and undersecretary, 11 p.m.

Comment

Thomas Rigoli, past InterFraternity Council president, commented, "Independents are using the book to take much out of context and accentuate the bad."

Rigoli said the material in the book "could have been more clearly presented."

Fraternity Administrator James P. MacMurray, IFC President George Stanger and Panhellenic Council President Virginia Frykman had not read the book at the time they were contacted by the Daily Orange Monday.

The five Hill admiistrators to whom the book is dedicated — Chancellor William P. Tolley, Dean of Men Earle W. Clifford, Dean of Marjorie C. Smith, Liberal Arts College Dean Eric H. Faigle and Personnel Administration Dean John S. Hafer — could not be reached for comment.

Corwin, controversial Daily Orange columnist, debated with IFC President Rigoli in February on Greek discrimination issues.

FORECAST—Clear skies and bright sunshine will continue over the next few days with a noticeable warming trend. The supply of cool Canadian winds is shortly to be replaced by tropical southerlies. which will likely bring 70 degree weather to Syracuse one again, probably by tomorrow. Under a gentle variable breeze, temperatures today should stay below 60. We look for clear chilly weather tonight.

The long spell of dry weather could be broken by a few scattered showers late in the week, but even this is uncertain.

Weak Sox Pitching Helped By Added Batting Strength

By ALLAN KORT
Sports Editor

The Boston Red Sox have added a lot of new faces to the lineup this year, but the squad's brand of ball has little chance of changing.

Destined to the second division for the second consecutive year, the BoSox (recently renamed the BooSox) boast new pitching and no power, but it's all a boast.

Major Red Sox problem is consistency. Since the retirement of Ted Williams, three managers ago, the Sox have never played with consistency, seven times being the longest winning streak and nine the longest losing streak.

New Faces

The Red Sox are new this year — but the Phillies had been boasting newness since 1951. Piloting the club is an old Wenway favorite, Johnny Pesky, who has coached the club's Pacific Coast League farm club, Seattle, for three years.

Pesky has come up with a host of innovations. More training for pitchers — such as daily recording of opposition batters. He has also persuaded Tom Yawkey, millionnaire boss of the Sox to invest a little money and receive a little "interest," if any, from the fans and the press. But interest takes time to accumulate. The Red Sox have the same problems they have had ever since they have been a loss.

Rule changes should help the Boston boys since they were known as the one-bat boys from Boomtown. The added strike zone should help the old standards and the substandards.

Batting Better

Batting is one of the Red Sox lesser problems, except that in the past decade, the batters have been lefties (right field is 380 feet) while no power hitters were available to challenge Fenway's Shortwall (315 feet).

A few shifts in the outfield have added power and speed. Fielding is stronger with Carl Yastremski moving to the center spot, flanked by Mejias at left (he'll have to learn the left wall) and improving Lou Clintin in right. On the batting side, Mejias, who had a good half-year last season should hit several out of the park, but he isn't consistent.

Lou Clinton had a poor first half last year and then hit .388 the second half of the year, posting a respectable average. He too, is not consistent. Ted Williams' protege, Yastremski, will roam center field and appears to be heading for a good Sox career this year, with 25 homers, .300 average and 100 runs batted in.

Batting Up

With the batting up a notch, one must remember that the pitching staff has changed. Pesky has been trying combinations all spring to find four starters.

He decided on "Monbo" as No. 1. The tall righty lost his opener. In the No. 2 spot is the irrational Gene Conley, who had brilliant spots last year, but who also "ran away" from the club for two weeks. The squad could wake up any morning minus a pitcher.

In the third spot was an old-time reliefer, turned starter, turned reliefer, turned starter in the person of Ike Delock. Experience should help but speed is waning.

Impressive Rookie

A rookie, 19-year-old Dick Morehead is fighting for a spot with Earl Wilson (not the columnist). Both have won contests for the Sox this year. Morehead impressed with 10 strikeouts, five hits and four walks in going the route.

Pesky has hopes for a big year at the plate. He looks into the record books and realizes that Bill Monbouquette would have won 25 games with hitting support; that Schwall had a great rookie year for the Sox two years ago because the club hit behind him.

Added Power

Well, the Sox should have new batting power with Roman Mejias, acquired from Houston, and Dick Stuart, acquired from the Pirates. But they have lost big faces too, in a potentially great pitcher, Don Shwall and a consistent hitter, Pete Runnells.

All in all, batting seems on the up. Stuart controls the first bag and although not a swifty around the right side, he should be able to reach the left wall as many times as he errors. An old standby is at second. Chuck Schilling, one of the better fielders in the league, should provide the spin at second for the doubleplay, but he hasn't shown batting prowess. Although off to a .308 start this season, "singles" Schilling figures as a .240 stalwart.

Doubleplays

Moving to the left side, we find Eddie Bressoud starting the doubleplays at short, and wielding a better-than-average shortstop bat. He surprised the 2,850 season ticket holders last year with a .278 finish.

Completing the infield is up-and-down Frank Malzone, who can hit consistently in the high 200's, but who has dipped to the lower echelon in previous years. Frankie has been famous for his hot glove at third, which has cooled off in the past two years.

Catching for the BoSox is last year's fillin backstop, Bob Tillman. The hefty catcher can hit the long ball, but usually swings three times, and misses.

The Red Sox have changed their appearance, but they will again fin dthe old problems and the older second division.

Freshmen Nine Preps for Debut Under New Head

By JAN GILMORE

It was chilly out and the diamond was like Okeefenokee so the freshmen baseball team was working out in the Fieldhouse.

Frosh were scampering around chucking baseballs at one another and raising clouds of dust. Over in the corner was a batting cage entirely enclosed with netting so baseballs would not wander around scratching the woodwork. Within the cage batters attempted to spot baseballs coming out of the netting and bash them.

Ex-Syracuse Chief and sometime major league catcher Dutch Dotterer leaned on a bat holding his stomach in and watched the hitters.

"Why don't you give some of the boys a few pointers on hitting?" said freshmen coach Larry Katzman with a straight face.

.200 Hitter

"Al right, I will teach them how to hit .200," said Dutch with chuckle.

"Which is .200 points more than I hit," said Mr. Katzman much to everyone's surprise.

Dotterer observed that some guys were lunging at the ball, and that others showed a willingness to get out of the way of some nice curves a sidearmer named Clint Newby was breaking across the inside.

A 6' 3", 235 pound mountain named Richard Haight stepped in and began hitting baseballs like he Haighted them. "I think I will use him at first base," mused the coach as Haight shot the net out seven feet with a line drive.

Cepeda?

Luis Sierra, a third baseman from Puerto Rico, began hitting. He looks and swings a bit like Orlando Cepeda except he isn't as big and he doesn't go after bad pitches. He also sometimes doesn't go after good pitches. But its tough to hit in that net.

"Defense," said Katzman. "Really haven't had the time or the field conditions to tell. The infield has looked good so far, and we have speed in center field."

"This fellow Borkhuis could be good for us on the mound."

There is no spring at Syracuse. There are just alternate blurps of summer and winter from March to June. Katzman hopes they can get in some outside work before the opener on April 27. Its tough to hit in that net.

Five in JSL Race For Speaker Post; Mittleman to Talk

By SUSAN WEINBERG
Junior Editor

A long night awaits Joint Student Legislature as six candidates battle for the position of speaker for the coming year.

The six who will seek this post at 7 p.m. today in Maxwell Auditorium are: J. Nelson Happy, Jay Litwin, Kathleen Kapsol, Harvey Nathan and Robert Stern.

Happy, Miss Kapsol, Litwin and Nathan were nominated at the last JSL meeting April 3. Stern announced his candidacy Monday.

Stern said he declined to run because, "I think I'm the most capable person who has indicated his desire for the office."

He said he did not wish to be nominated at the April 3 meeting because there was a chance then that Mittleman might run for a second term.

"If Ron had decided to run again, I would not have opposed him for I feel he is the most

Burns: JFK Must Act For Big '64 Dem Win

By DANIEL RITEY
Junior Editor

"Deliberate action by President Kennedy to make the 1964 election a Democratic party triumph, as well as a personal one, is imperative," stated political writer James MacGregor Burns Tuesday night.

Speaking to freshman citizenship sections in Hendricks Chapel, Burns noted that "the elections must unite the wings of the party as well as result in the election to Congress of pro-Kennedy men who will work to enact his policies."

JAMES M. BURNS

Burns siad alternate solutions to the problem of the arrangement and effectiveness of public leadership in the U.S. are: 1) the acquisition by the president of extra powers in times of crises and 2) a constitutional crises "where collisions of great demands and forces" might prove chaotic.

"We can avoid excessive presidential powers and constitutional crisis only if we initiate congressional and institutional changes," said Burns.

Intellectual Leadership

"But before we can change these institutions, we must change our minds and basis premises. We need creative, democratic and intellectual leadership," he added.

Disregarding Congress as the sole reason for a lack of results in policy, even with an activist president, Burns cited intellectual and constitutional reasons for this discrepency.

"Intellectually, we are bound by the dualism of John Locke who advocated majority rule, but also strove for a capacity to check the majority and maintain the rights of the minority," he noted.

Newsman to Give First Bye Lecture

CBS news diplomatic correspondent Marvin Kalb will speak at 8 p.m. today, in Hendricks Chapel in the first annual Carl Bye Memorial Lecture. He will speak on "The Precarious Russian-Chinese Alliance."

The lecture, sponsored by the Hill InterFraternity Council as part of the current Greek Week is open to the public.

Following the lecture a reception for Kalb will be held in the Colonial Room of the Chapel.

Kalb, CBS's Russian correspondent for two years, this week started a special five part television series exploring what it's like to live in the Soviet Union today.

His recent introduction to the controversial novel "One Day in the Life of Ivan Denisovich" received official censorship from the Kremlin. The novel, now a Book-of-the-Month-Club selection is a current best seller.

Kalb is the author of two books: "Eastern Exposure," and "Dragon in the Kremlin." He frequently contributes articles to the New York Times Magazine, The Reporter and The Saturday Review, and is a special correspondent for the Sunday Times of London.

He received a bachelor of science degree from City College of New York in 1951 and a master of arts from Harvard in 1953. After finishing the two-year master's program at the Russian Research Center he completed his generals for a history doctorate at Harvard and shortly will complete his thesis for the degree.

The Carl Bye lecture is held in the memory of the late dean of the Maxwell School. Mrs. Bye will be a guest of honor at the lecture.

Hill Grind: Basketweaving 112

By CHARLES M. STEINBERG

Looking for a snap course? The time-honored collegiate favorite "basketweaving" is available at Syracuse University.

The course is recreation 112, "Arts and Crafts for Recreation," and it carries two full liberal arts credits.

"While it is a required course for SU recreation majors anybody can enroll," states Dr. Richard Stultz, who teaches the course this semester. It can benefit anyone in developing hobby skills for future use," Stultz said.

A political science major taking the course for graduation credit told the Daily Orange no reading is involved. "I'm making a guitar strap," he said.

A Course?

Asked if, in spite of the content of the course, grading is tough, or if non-recreation majors received stiffer treatment, another liberal arts student said "Naw. got an A in the fall semester course" (organized camping and camperaft, recreation 111).

"I wouldn't say it's a difficult course," commented Stultz. "We don't get into ceramics. It's an elementary general introductory course," he said.

Unlike many physical education courses which count only towards fulfilling a graduation requirement, this and similar recreation courses count toward the 120 hours necessary for graduation, according to the liberal arts office.

Defense

Dean of the College of Liberal Arts Eric H. Faigle was staunch in defending the programs.

"The university is a complex," Faigle said. "The president wouldn't want to eliminate them," he said referring to Kennedy's concern for physical fitness.

Assistant Dean Alfred Cope said the programs are subject to review by the faculty and must meet the approval of the State Board of Regents.

Panel Today Fetes Pan-American Day

A panel of Maxwell School professors will examine "Progress for Latin America — Through Alliance or Revolution?" at 7:30 p.m. today in Gifford Auditorium, H. B. Crouse Hall. The discussion is part of the Hill's observance of Pan-American Week and was prepared by the Hispanic-American Student Association.

The panel is made up of Dr. Preston James, Dr. Paul Meadows and Dr. Robert Shafer.

Dr. James, chairman of the geography department, is an internationally known authority on Latin American affairs. He recently returned from a London seminar of economic experts who are planning improvements in the Alliance for Progress.

Dr. Meadows, chairman of the sociology and anthropology department, is known for his work on the theory of human move-

Festival Stars Student Poets

By SANDY MYERS

A poetry reading by student authors will highlight the literature-humanities segment of the Hill's annual Festival of the Arts, which begins Thursday and runs through April 28.

"Poetry on Campus" will be presented at 4 p.m. Tuesday in Kittredge Auditorium, H. B. Crouse Hall.

In the visiting writers series, Pulitzer prize-winning poet Richard Wilbur will read and speak on his poetry at 4 p.m. Monday in Gifford Auditorium, HBC.

His poetry collection, "Things of This World," published in 1956, received the Pulitzer Prize, the National Book Award and the Edna St. Vincent Millay Memorial Prize the following year.

Cane Award

"Advice to a Prophet and Other Poems," his fourth poetry collection, won the first Melville Cane award presented by the Poetry Society of America in 1962.

A graduate of Amherst College, Wilbur received his master's degree from Harvard University and taught at Harvard, Wellesley College and Wesleyan University.

"The Beautiful Changes and Other Poems" was published in 1947, followed by "Ceremony" in 1950. This volume won the Harriet Monroe and Oscar Blumenthal prizes for poetry, awarded by Poetry magazine.

Guggenheim

A Guggenheim Fellow in 1952, he has also won a Prix de Rome Fellowship of the American Academy of Arts and Letters, a 1959 Boston Arts Festival award and, in 1960, a Ford Foundation award.

Dr. Frederick Hartt, chairman of the University of Pennsylvania department of art, will speak on "Problems of a Valid Religious Art" as part of the humanities lecture series.

His talk is scheduled for 4 p.m. April 24 in Gifford Auditorium.

Renaissance Art

Specializing in art of the Italian Renaissance, Dr. Hartt received his bachelor's degree at Columbia University and his master's and doctorate at New York University.

He has held two Guggenheim Fellowships and a Fulbright Fellowship.

Dr. Hartt has taught at Smith College, NYU and Washington University of St. Louis, and has written several books, among them the two-volume "Giulio Romano," published in 1958.

Blood Drive Today

The Hill's annual Red Cross Blood Drive kicks off today in Shaw Dormitory, 775 Comstock Ave.

Red Cross staff will be on hand to take donations from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. today and Thursday in the Shaw recreation lounge.

The drive is included in current Greek Week activities.

Unmarried students under 21 must have written parents' permission before donating.

Prospective donors are asked not to eat fatty foods for at least four hours before they donate.

SU Chancellor William P. Tolley has urged support for for the drive, as have Hendricks Chapel Dean Charles C. Noble, honorary chairman of the affair, and many student groups.

ROTC cadets are urged by their commanders to donate, and will receive credits for doing so.

Carl Bye Lecture: A Good Start

The Daily Orange would like to congratulate the Inter Fraternity Council on its inauguration of the Carl Bye Memorial Lecture Series. The series, which will debut tonight with Marvin Kalb as guest speaker, is a positive contribution to the campus.

We feel that the choice of such a fine news commentator as CBS News' Mr. Kalb is a good starting point for the series, which is planned as an annual event during succeeding Greek Weeks.

Although a relatively young man, Mr. Kalb has already gained acclaim for his work as a commentator from Moscow. His youthful appearence and rich voice are quite familiar to television viewers and radio listeners.

It is fortunate that the IFC had the good sense to open this part of Greek Week to the campus in general rather than restricting it to fraternity men. For the Greeks have started on a program of great worth and the campus as a whole will benefit. Color it constructive.

'$100 Idea'

The deadline for the "$100 Idea" has been extended to Monday by Tau Theta Upsilon, the sponsoring senior men's honorary. The extension has been made necessary because of the paucity of entries submitted thus far.

It seems unusual that a student body that complained so bitterly about the tuition raise and runs a continuous attack on the faults of the university, has failed to take advantage of this contest.

Here is a chance to win $100 by suggesting ideas that would lead to the improvement of the campus. The rules of the contest have been stated previously. Now we only ask students to expend a little effort to help their own finances and their university.

It appears easier to complain than to take a little effort to work for improvement.

Give Blood

There are only so many ways to say it but the message is so important that we shall try it one more time. The Red Cross Blood Drive revisits Shaw Dormitory today and tomorrow in hopes of topping last fall's total of donations.

Once again the Daily Orange urges all who are physically able to attempt to stop at Shaw either today or tomorrow. We also remind Hill fraternities to make an extra effort to donate blood during this period. You fraternity men can add to the success of Greek Week and to the prestige of young IFC system by rolling up your sleeves.

Green Spring

Just a word about the latest coed fashion fad—namely, green poncho raincoats. We suppose they are meant to keep off the rain but it hasn't been raining much lately. And besides, we always thought girls like to be original in their choice of clothes. But in those pullovers every Joan, Gail and Edna looks like any Tom, Dick and Harry.

LETTERS

Middle East

To the Editor:

Mr. Osofsky stated in his letter Monday that he wanted "more light to be shed upon Israel's position . . since there are two sides to every story and seldom can a real 'right' or 'wrong' for any situation be found". I feel, however, that instead of throwing more light on a complex situation, he has helped to compound the confused situation. First of all, he confused the situation by attacking Mr. Houlihan's justification of U.A.R. rockets.

Certainly armed weapons of great destructive capacity are repugnant in this ad any age. Mr. Houlihan, however, was attempting to show that U.A.R. rockets can be equally well "justified" as American rockets. It is undeniable that Israel was the first Middle Eastern nation to fire such weapons. This was just as much a threat to the security of the U.A.R. as the presence of Soviet rockets in Cuba was to the U.S. What the avowed purpose of these weapons was, was to no significance to the U.A.R. considering the fact that the two nations are technically still at war.

Mr. Osofsky also stated that "in most instances of violence, though, Israel was either striking back in selfdefense or trying to remove the hindrance of the continual Arab commando attacks". I have no doubt that he believes this, but facts show that this is only the Israeli government's point of view. If before you start looking at the Arab-Israeli dispute, you decide to accept the one side's statements as true, and the other's as false, you will have gotten nowhere. You can believe what you want, but I feel that it would be wise to go to the UN record of the situation.

One fact which you will uncover is that from June 1949 to October 15, 1954, Israel was condemned for 95 violations of the truce along the Jordanian border while Jordan was condemned for 60 violations (these figures are given by Comdr. E. H. Hutchinson, who was a UN observer from 1949 to 1955, in his book "Violent Truce," which I'm sure Mr. Osofsky would find very interesting).

Another fact which many sympatinizers with Israel overlook is the fact that UN survey of Palestine in 1947 revealed that Jews owed 7% of the country's 10,000 square miles and yet the partition provided that the Jewish state take in 55% of the country. This may help some people to understand why the Arabs feel so strongly that a great injustice was committed in 1947.

As for the respect we give to Nasser, I feel that it should be a great deal more than now. Anyone who denies the improvement in the average Egyptian's life is denying reality and has not talked to an Egyptian. As for democracy in the U.A.R., it is non-existent. It can be argued, however, that a nation which is facing the stupendous problems of population growth, and low economic and educational levels, is not ready for Western democracy which would bring only chaos at this time.

It can be hoped, however, that with the support of the western nations, the U.A.R. may progress from an autocratic regime to a democracy as the conditions which would enable it to flourish, develop. Such a thing did happen in Turkey, now our strongest ally in this region, under the leadership of Kemal Ataturk.

I do, therefore, agree with Mr. Osofsky when he says, "let us reserve judgment until after close scrutinization has been made of the Middle East."

Additions

To the Editor:

Some additional "corollaries" not mentioned by Mr. Houlihan.

1. Israel has never stated that part of its foreign policy includes the physical destruction of any other state and its peoples. Egypt, and other Middle Eastern states, have stated that the destruction of Israel is (and always will be) a primary objective.

2. Israel has kept open its long standing offer to discuss common problems with Egypt and the other Middle Eastern states. The "refugee question" is one such problem that Israel has offered to discuss. Thus far, Egypt and the others have refused to come to the council table.

3. At least half of the "Arab refugees" do not satisfy the UN's definition of that term. An Arab refugee is defined by the UN as a person "whose normal residence was Palestine for a minimum period of two years preceding the outbreak of the conflict in 1948 and who, as a result of this conflict, has lost both his home and his means of livelihood."

4. Egypt and the others never accepted the UN Partition. When the resolution went into effect, various national armies invaded Palestine. A bitter war ensued. Through Arab disunity and desperate fighting, the Israelis not only drove the invading armies out but succeeded in establishing military control over large areas not granted to Israel by the UN. The cease-fire (still technically temporary) froze the situation. It is doubtful if any nation would feel bound by an agreement which it had signed but which was not signed by the other party to the agreement.

5. Werner von Braun is a US citizen; the German scientists working in Egypt are not Egyptian subjects. In any case, the factor which disturbs people who have ample reasons to fear Fascism is not the common nationality, i.e., German, but the common aims, i.e., the destruction of Jews, of the scientists in Egypt and the Egyptian government.

Coed Self-Defense

To the Editor:

It has been brought to my attention that two students, who have had extensive training in Judo and therefore capable of organizing and teaching a basic course in self-defense, have volunteered their services for the instruction of coed volunteers.

I understand Dean Clifford and Security Police Chief Flaherty believed this type of instruction would be beneficial, due to the current situation concerning coeds and campus night prowlers. Dean Smith wouldn't commit herself one way or the other, but the director of women's physical education said no to this plan for reasons which seem ridiculous.

She seems to think self-defense is unbecoming of a woman since it is related to Judo which isn't recognized as a sport for women, especially when it is taught by male instructors.

Why does one woman think she has the right to speak for all coeds on campus particularily when this instruction would be conducted on a completely voluntary basis? Why doesn't she offer an alternative solution to the problem?

Dirty Money

To the Editor:

Syracuse University has pangs of conscience about taking money from the sponsors of the Greek Coloring Book, but it graciously accepts the hard-earned money of John D. Archbold, noted "robber baron" of Standard Oil which was guilty of violating anti-trust legislation. Three cheers for morality!

FILMS

'The Birds'

If you're taking a date to the Paramount to see Alfred Hitchcock's "The Birds" better bring gloves or else you will tear each other's hands to pieces.

But don't bring any credulity since the usually responsible Hitchcock makes no attempt to test it. He simply forgets it while plying an impossible plot with all the terror he can imagine.

What made the Hitchcock of the past so brilliant was his ability to offer terror and suspense in such a realistic and believable context that fear of the audience was hightened by their belief in and acceptance of the validity of characters and situations.

Hitchcock's plots were almost air tight leaving the audience with nowhere to turn but the excrutiating terror of "39 Steps," "Rear Window" and "Psycho." But in "The Birds" Hitchcock has weaved the thinest of plots that barely hold the scenes of terror together.

Out of nowhere, for the barest of reasons, the world's birds begin attacking humans. Characters ask why the birds have now decided to wreck vengence upon man, but neither they nor the film offer any answers.

Hitchcock doesn't even explain why such people as Rod Taylor, Jessica Tandy, Suzanne Pleshette or Tippi' Hedren are "worthy" of the birds' furies.

These people are neither especially likeable nor unpleasant. The intricate windings of the plot are quite boring in themselves ('Tippi' ex-playgirl, enjoys playing practical jokes on handsome and single Taylor), and seem contrived only to bring the four under one bird-attacked roof, so to speak.

Hitchcock, though, is probable quite proud of the way he has handled the bird sequences. With his typical mastery of cinema technique he has the audience as frightened as his stereotyped characters. He builds up to birds' assault slowly, quietly noticing their increasing numbers on telephone poles or jungle gyms.

He relaxes the tension to offer the humans an escape, only to have them viciously pecked away at moments later. He is most effective when he does not allow the audience to see the birds, letting the viewers only hear their cackles while their minds' eyes conjure up horror upon horror.

When you leave the theater, though, still shaking, afraid of that nearby pigeon, a feeling of being cheated manages to creep in, between shakes. It is a shame that "The Birds" sharp beaks had to be motivated by the feathery story line.

Folk Dancers

The Syracuse University Hungarian Students' Association will sponsor a program of native folk dances 8 p.m. this Saturday at the University Regent Theater.

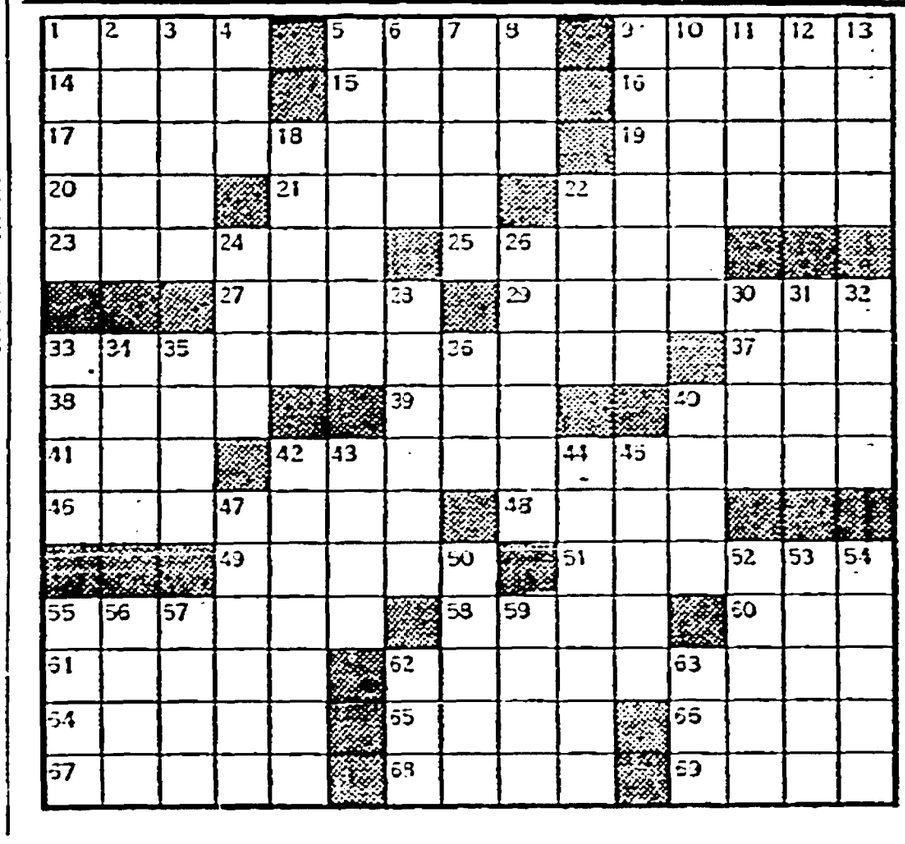
Performing will be the Hungarian Rhapsody Folk Dance Ensemble from New York City, a group of young students and workers who fled Hungary in 1956, as well as several associates who previously lived in the U.S.

The group, which is under the direction of Maria Molnar, will present a selection of characteristic native dances from the different regions of Hungary's tradition rich "paraszt" (peasant) dance and song folk lore.

Musicial selections from Bartok and Kodaly will be featured, the dancers appearing in original Hungarian folk costumes.

Since it was formed five years ago, the Ensemble has traveled throughout the country, presenting their dances at many universities, at the Washington International Folk Dance Festival, at Carnegie Hall, and for various national programs and organizations.

Last month the Ensemble had a preview for the Ed Sullivan Show and will present their entire performance on tv later this year.



Tickets are available at the Regent Theater.

qualified," he noted. "If someone more qualified than I is nominated at tonight's meeting, I will drop out of the race."

Stern is the second sophomore seeking the position of speaker in this election. Miss Kapsol is the other. Under the old Joint Student Government constitution which will be followed in this election, sophomores are eligible to run for speaker without petitioning the Joint Student Government president's cabinet.

The other three candidates are juniors.

Election of speaker pro tempore will follow the election of the speaker. So far sophomore Louise Bal is the only nominee for this post.

She was nominated at the last JSL meeting and no new candidates have since announced their intention of running. "It is expected that some of the losing candidates for speaker may drop down to compete with Miss Bal," Mittleman said.

Nominations for both positions are open until each elections.

hampered by a system of checks and balances which Congress elaborates upon to produce a stalemated government in action," Burns said.

"The founding fathers did not want a deadlocked Congress;" he wen on, "rather they wanted an active body to aid the president's programs.

External arrangements also hamper Congressional work, said Burns, and their relation with the internal cocerns, like filibuster, seniority and the Rules Committee is important.

Malapportionment

"Vital as malapportionment in the House is, it not as important as the number of one-party districts to be found in the states where competition is expetced," said the lecturer.

A good number of House seats are from such districts, and this combined with the internal troubles make "for an almost unmanagable situation."

These main reasons for governmental disharmony also produce a "four-party" system, "whereby each major party has a congressional and presidential group," Burns noted.

"In a simpler two-party system, Burns continued, a leader can be sure of his majority and thus can act more boldly and forcefully than can our President who has to continually bicker and deal with factions in the parties," he said.

Dr. Shafer, a professor of history, is Syracuse's historian on Latin America. He will appraise America's policy toward Latin America.

The discussion is in compliance with President Kennedy's request that "all United States citizens and interested organizations . . . contribute enthusiastically, by words and works, toward making Pan-American Day and Pan-American Week occasion for rejoicing that our free Republics during the past year have strongly reaffirmed the will for freedom and the determination to stand together . . ."

Pan-American Week this year marks the 73 anniversary of the Organization of American States.

Prize Honors Physicist Lost at Sea

By ERIC BENDERSON

Dr. Niel F. Beardsley, government research physicist who worked at Syracuse University was lost at sea June 7, 1959, on a special project for Rayteon of Santa Barbara, California.

This summer under the leadership of SU physics professor Dr. Henry Leinstein, the Niel F. Beardsley Memorial Award fund was initiated. This prize, to be awarded to the outstanding junior or senior physics major, will be paid from interest collected on the principal of the donations to the fund. The prize will be awarded annually beginning next year.

It is a growing fund, to develop into a scholarship for physics majors when the endowment reaches 5,000 dollars.

Now $1500

The total endowment so far has reached about $1,500. The money has been donated by friends of Dr. Beardsley, the SU physics faculty and many grad students who worked with him.

Dr. Beardsley was connected with the Aerial Reconnasance Laboratory at Wright Patterson Air Force Base, first as a research physical, then as a section chief and finally as a consultant. In that capacity he initiated and supported research contracts in infra-red technology at various universities and industrial laboratories.

Under his leadership and experience this field grew rapidly and many advances were made. Contracts for SU initiated by him totaled more than $1 million.

Pioneer

Dr. Levinstein, who still directs the research under the project, says "It is my feeling that Niel Beardsley, more than any other person in the U.S., was responsible for the rapid infra-red detector development in the period between 1948 and 1958."

Dr. Beardsley visited SU frequently, maintaing a close liason between the requirements of the Air Force and the work on the infra-red research project.

Dr. Beardsley was born in Wadsworth, Ohio, Feb. 23, 1892. He obtained his bachelors degree from Hiram College in 1913 and taught in elementary schools for four years. He earned his master's from Northwestern University and for the next nine years was on the faculty of Georgia Tech. He left to teach at the University of Chicago where he received his doctorate.

Weather Watch

FORECASTERS
Stuart Soroka
Henry Adams

FORECAST — Warm moist air flowing this way from the Gulf will mean even warmer weather here, today. The increase in moisture will be seen in increasing clouds and felt as the air becomes sticky. Bright sunshine during the morning will disappear as the clouds develop. A few showers may fall late in the day.

A weather front passing the area late in the day will mean drier and slightly cooler air Thursday, but the overall trend will continue fair and mild.

Final Dance Class

Hill Hosts Seton Hall in Home Debut

Barnowski Faces Pirate Invaders At Lew Carr Field

By BILL CRONAUER

It will be a battle of fastballers at Lew Carr Field this afternoon when Syracuse hosts Seton Hall in the diamond home opener.

Ace Orange rgiht-hander Ed Barnowski will take the mound for the locals, opposing lefty Ed Henry of the Pirates.

The Hillmen stand 3-2 on the year while Seton Hall has a 4-3 record. The visitors own victories over Dartmouth, NYU, Rutgers and Upsala.

Barnowski, a sophomore from Schenectady, boasts a 1.50 earned run average and a 1-1 pitching ledger. He defeated George Washington in his first start on the Southern tour before dropping a 1-0 heartbreaker to Navy.

Radio station WAER-FM, 88.3 mg, will broadcast today's games at 3:00 p.m.

Barnowski Strong

The SU hurler has allowed a mere six hits in 18 innings this year. He has struck out 27 opponents while walking seven.

Henry, the Seton Hall star, possesses a 2-0 record, including a one-hit shutout over Rutgers. He is backed up by Ed Kennedy, a rookie who threw a 7-3 win over NYU in his varsity debut.

Top batters on the Pirate squad are catcher Paul Mueller and rightfielder Jim Queli.

Mueller has slugged the ball at a .352 clip in 1963. Queli, a sophomore, slammed out four hits in the NYU contest.

The Seton Hall infield is sparked by Jimmy Ippolito, John Monteleane and Jack Tracy. Ippolito hit a fantastic .458 last season, but has slumped this year.

Monteleane and Tracy batted .354 and .388 respectively in 1962. However, they are both under .200 this season.

In the outfield, veterans Bill Lennon and Dan Waraska will perfrom with Queli.

Same Lineup

Syracuse coach Ted Kleinhans plans to go with essentially the same starting lineup he employed on the Southern tour.

The infield will consist of Ed Macner at first, Bob Cohen and Pat Lutz at the keystone, and Pat Antonelli at third. Lutz and Antonelli lead the Orangemen at bat with .300 plus averages.

Seniors Bob Lelli and Dick Taylor combine with rookie Dave Rounds in the Hill outfield. Down South, Rounds hit only .111; Taylor, .158; and Lelli, .214; but Kleinhans feels that they will come around.

Senior Bob Jacuk handles the catching chores, backed by Art Waugh.

Stickmen Prepare For Hobart Clash

By VIN ZUKOWSKI

How strong is Hobart? Saturday Coach Simmon's stickmen face-off against a 3-1 Hobart squad. The 3-1 record includes 15-1. 15-2, and 18-5 victories over Bucknell, Dickinson, and Franklin and Marshall, respectively. The loss was to Hofstra, 7-2.

Although the caliber of Hobart's opponents may not be in Syracuse's class. Coach Simmons said, "They'll be tough; they've always been tough." However the game may come down to a duel between Hobart's Slattery and SU's John Mackey.

Slattery, 225-lbs., forms a strong offensive threat with attackman Ferris whose father was All-American at Hobart. Simmons, forecasting a duel said, "John's the only middie big enough to handle Slattery. It will be Mackey on Slattery the whole game."

Mackey Improving

Commenting on Mackey's progress Simmons said that Mackey is still slow on stickwork, but he is coming fast. By the season's end, Mackey "Should be something."

In early performances, Ron Fraser, sophomore, has led the team offensively, averaging five goals in the first two games.

Last year, Fraser was on the frosh midfield but this year is playing 60 minutes a game at close attack. Simmons added, "Fraser is a real prospect. He's new to the position but is a real good one."

Strong Defense

Simmons has been especially pleased with the defense. Reese, Ramsdell, and Salerno with substitute Taylor have been "good and tough, hustling the opponents shots."

At goalie, Simmons has Pete Coe. Behind Coe is next year's probable goalie Dick Lindholm who plays when Coe is off or when SU has a comfortable lead.

Simmons is now employing specialists when the team has the man edge or is a man down. The six for the power play consists of Pappas. Crowther, Fraser, Warmuth, Kennedy, and Renny. The midfield of Brooks, Davis, and Stranger is used when the squad is a man down.

Ben Changes Line Around

For the past two weeks General Schwartzwalder has been playing the Casey Stengel game with his 80-man grid army. The veteran coach has been flipping, switching, and shaking-up his lineup faster than the old Met professor Changes his pitchers.

It is unfair to Schwartzwalder and his squad, however, to judge this day-to-day scramble as any indication of the team's ability. According to Ben, "We have to keep changing our lineup: boys get banged up: others show a little more hustle from one practice to another. It's really too early to go with a set lineup."

On Schwartzwalder's casualty list this spring are Linemen Gerry Everling and Bob Meehan, and backs Bill Schoonover, Ted Allen, Mike Koski, Jim Gaskins, and George Kontrabecki. It appears that Everling and Allen will see no action this spring.

The week spot in the team's attack is the center spot. "We've got Slaby but no one else has enough experience to back him up. It's a critical spot," Schwartzwalder said.

On the whole Ben is pleased with the precarious quarterback spot. Walley Mahle, Rich King, Hal Rooney, and Ted Holman are working out behind center. Schwartzwalder feels he will go with Mahle, who according to the coach, has improved tremendously.

Baltimore Pitching Strong; Batting, Fielding Average

By JAN GILMORE

Without disciplinarian Paul Richards around last year, the Oriole good-time-charlies frolicked to a seventh place finish. Over the winter they pulled off some trades and now have more potential than before.

Take for instance the infield which contains the league's best at three positions, first, short and third.

James Gentile slumped to .251 and hit 33 homers, but was elected all-star first baseman. He can do considerably better than that, and probably will.

Recently Acquired

Luis Aparicio didn't get along with the White Sox management last year, and he hit even less than he usually hits. But now with the Orioles he has indicated he is back in form. At short, Aparicio has slowed down so that he is only a little better than everyone else.

Brooks Robinson last year hit .303 with 23 homers, his best season. He is improving. In the field he needs no improvement: he is the best.

The second baseman in this bunch is not the league's best, but he is very close. Jerry Adair has good power, hit .284 and competently completes a good fielding infield.

Strongest Staff

This infield may be strong, but it is not Baltimore's strongest point. The pitching staff has led the major leagues in ERA for the last three years. And it promises to get better.

Steve Barber was one of the best left-handers in the A.L. in 1961 and returns after a year with the Army and other diseases.

Milt Pappas and Chuck Estrada combined a bad infield with some good night life and came out with a joint 21-27 won-lost record. Each has that big overhand curve which only one other right-hander in the league, Pascual, can throw.

For a fourth starter manager Billy Hitchcock has one time Giant star lefty Mike McCormick. Mike says that he got his rhythm back this spring.

If McCormick is mistaken, Baltimore will fall back on Robin Roberts (2.78) and Dick Hall (2.29), which is a rough combo to have in reserve. Pete Burnside joins these two as an early inning reliefer.

Deep Men

The deep men are fastballing Wes Stock and slower-than-slow Stu Miller. Stock has been in Hoyt Wilhelm's shadow for two years and Miller has long been among the best while with the Giants.

Two kids, Buster Narum and Dave McNally will try to make the staff, McNally has an excellent chance.

There is the best part of the Orioles. The outfield and the catching are only average.

Right-handers

For right-handed hitters in the outfield there are Al Smith and Jackie Brandt, both can hit. The 35 year-old Smith gives the Orioles the hiting they need from the side of the plate they need it. He shows no sign of slowing up. Brandt is a proven hitter and can field.

For lefty swingers there is Boog Powell who weighs 240 and hit just slightly more. Russ Snyder is a whiz in the field and hit .305 with some power.

Dick Brown is a solid catcher, a novelty with his team. He is among the best defensively, and throws in an occasional homer.

Week Bench

Johnny Orsino, Hobie Landrith and Charlie Lau back him up, and combine with infielders Bob Johnson and Bob Saverine to make an unspectacular bench.

The new top flight infield will make the Oriole pitching even tighter. Discipline from new coach Hank Bauer will mike it tighter than that. And if McCormick comes through, the Orioles will provide the Yankees with someone to toy around with come September.

Litwin Selected Speaker of JSL On Second Ballot

By SUSAN WEINBERG
Junior Editor

Jay Litwin is the new speaker of Joint Student Legislature for the coming year.

The dimpled 20-year-old junior defeated four other candidates on two ballots by a final vote of 106 to 49 Wednesday at the last JSL meeting under the administration of Ronald Mittleman, former speaker.

Opposing Litwin on the first ballot were Kathleen Kapsol, Harvey Nathan and Robert Stern. Miss Kapsol and Nathan were dropped after this ballot when each failed to receive 20 percent of the 155 ballots cast (necessary according to legislature rules).

Results of the first ballot were: Litwin, 63, Stern 38, Happy 21, Kapsol 19 and Nathan 15.

Litwin picked up 43 votes on the second ballot against Stern's added 11 to win by over twice as many votes. There were three abstentions.

"Worthy Job"

In his campaign speech Litwin, a non-Greek discarded his prepared text to promise "to do a job worthy of the JSL speaker."

He urged that JSL become "an active, energetic and lively place." and also pledged to get

Meadows Cautions on Siding With Wrong Wing in Cuba

By CHARLES BARNEY

A Hill sociology professor said Wednesday night that the more the United States hated Fidel Castro, the more she created Latin love for him.

Dr. Paul Meadows, participating in a panel discussion sponsored by the SU Hispanic-American Association, said the danger exists that the U.S. will align itself with the old conservative Latin American tradition.

This tradition is opposed to a major eruption of social forces which has no respect for the old revolution tradition, which merely wants to "change the guard," not the system.

This major shift in social power, Dr. Meadows said, is far beyond the financial attempt of the Alliance for Progress to stabilize inherent problems.

Other professors on the panel in Gifford Auditorium, H. B. Crouse Hall were Dr. Preston

Sino-Soviet Split Irrevocable-Kalb

By CLAY RICHARDS
Junior Editor

The Soviet-Chinese dispute is irrevocable, CBS Diplomatic Correspondent Marvin Kalb declared at the first annual Carl Bye lecture Wednesday night.

While their argument is rooted in ideology, this is only the smoke screen for a conflict of national interest between the two nations, Kalb said.

The former CBS Russian correspondent spoke at the part of Greek Week dedicated to the late Dr. Carl Bye, former Dean of the Maxwell Graduate School and member of Theta Chi fraternity.

Favor Russia

In discussing the position of the United States in this dispute, Kalb commented that there exists a feeling, while not a policy, to favor Russia in an alliance against China.

"If we have to choose sides we instinctively side with the Russians because Russia is a white, Christian, and western-orfented nation while China is a yellow-skinned, considered a barbarian, non-Christian and non-western nation," he said.

"What makes Russia the better of the two nations since both are dedicated to Communism and destruction?" he challenged.

No Union

"I cannot imagine any possible union in the romantic and

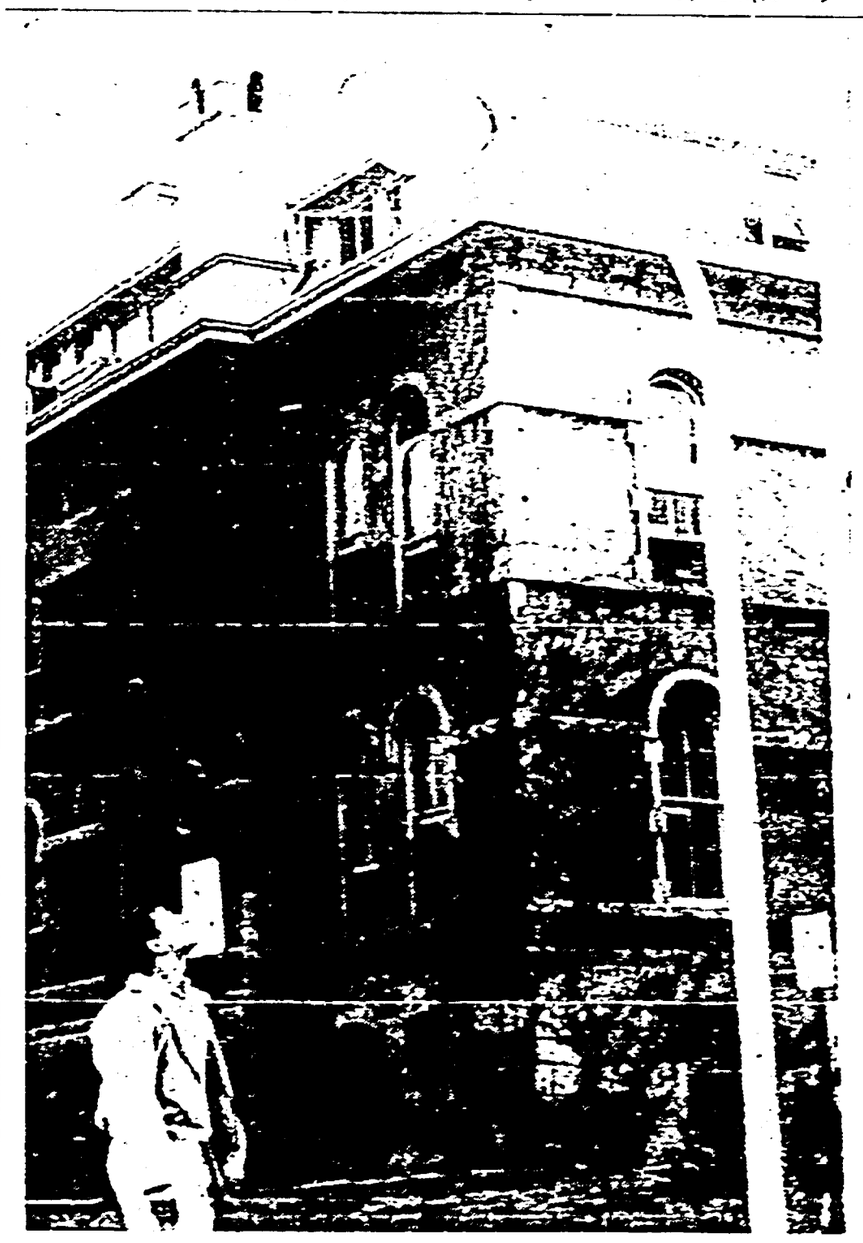
Blood Drive Ends Today



The hill's annual Red Cross Blood Drive continues today in Shaw Dormitory, 775 Comstock Ave.

Red Cross staff will be on hand to take donations from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. today in the Shaw recreation lounge.

The drive is included in current Greek Week activities.

Unmarried students under 21 must have written permission from their parents before donating.

Prospective donors are asked not to eat fatty foods for at least four hours before they donate.

LIGHT ON A VITAL SUBJECT — this streetlight near the Hall of Languages is one of many being placed around the campus in hopes that better lighting will discourage molesting problems that plague the Hill in springtime. Duplications of this specimen, viewed by GERALD DIRECTOR, were placed Wednesday on the drive past Maxwell Hall and the walk from HL to University and University.

The Dangerous Pedestrians

Now that warmer weather is again making its debut in the Syracuse area, it is time to call attention to one of the university's perennial springtime problems—that of the pedestrian vs. the motorist.

Like any large university, Syracuse has limited the number of vehicles allowed to drive on campus roads. Yet this select group of faculty, personnel and students provides a steady flow of traffic throughout campus.

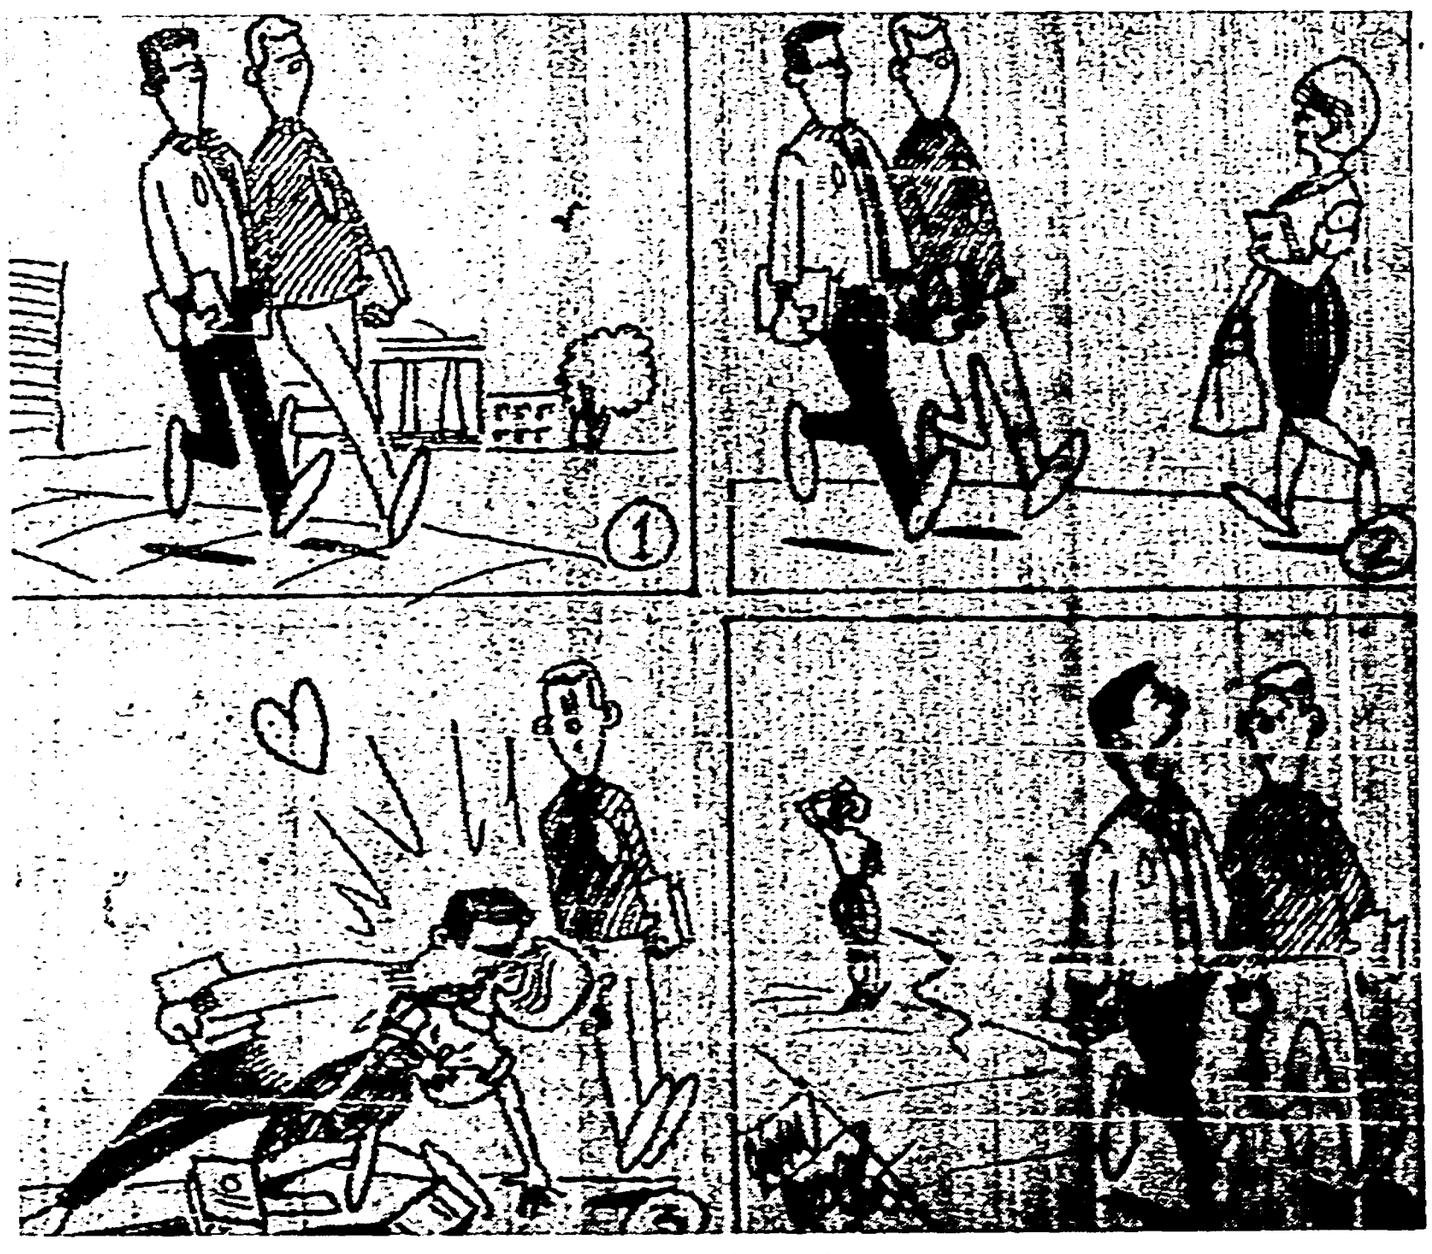
During the winter months, students are forced to walk on these roads because of unplowed paths. In doing this, a student is endangering his life as well as that of the driver. Drivers on campus have complained to us of students darting in front of their cars in the snowy season and of the skids that resulted.

In the warmer months, however, there is no excuse for students endangering their lives and those of others.

A common sight on campus is that of a group of students walking in the middle of a road holding up a line of automobiles.

Yes, motorists drive slowly on campus and the students realize this. But do they realize it is a lot more difficult for the mechanical machine to stop than the human machine?

Whenever a pedestrian is hit by an automobile, society puts the driver at blame. But how can it blame a driver who has tooted his horn at a pedestrian when the pedestrian snarls at the vehicle and steps in its path, forcing the car to come to a halt.



Even though no students have been struck by cars in the past few years, we feel it is up to the university and students to prevent the possibility of such accidents. The students could help, giving way to vehicles, while the university could enforce rules restricting pedestrians to sidewalks.

One professor told us recently that he has been afraid to drive on campus since he brushed a student years ago. According to the prof, the student "was tooted at. He sneered at me and then walked into the side of my car."

How would you feel, being a motorist who has just struck a student who darted in front of your vehicle?

Or how would you feel if you were the student?

LETTERS

Arab-Israel

To the Editor:

The Arab-Israeli question has been tossed around, I believe, long enough. It has been tossed around since 1917. Lately three articles appeared in the D.O. about the question. The first article dealt with the lecture by Mr. Keating, the second was by a gentleman defending the Arabs in general and Nasser's Egypt in particular. But the third one is the most fascinating of all.

Mr. Osofsky opens up by stating the fact that the article of Wednesday April 10 concerning the question was strongly pro-Arab and that nobody presented the opposition (Israeli) point of view.

He said: ". . . I feel that there should be some more light shed upon the Israeli's position." I completely back him up with his suggestion, but that was all he did. Where are the dates, facts and figures upon which the article was based? This is indeed ". . . unillustrated debate . . ."

Let us now look further into the article. It says: "The only instance in which the Israelis actually gained any territory was when they first obtained independence." Then the article went on telling about the partition of Palestine and said, ". . . This situation was supposedly endorsed by both sides involved."

Here I really gave up because this is neither intellectual journalism writing nor does it show any kind of understanding of the history of the question.

Now to illustrate, I would like to mention a very brief history of the situation and then leave it to the student body to evaluate.

In 1912 Great Britain promised the Arabs that if they (the Arabs) would help Great Britain in the war, Britain would give independence to "all Arab speaking countries."

In 1917 Dr. Weitzman, the chief of the Zionist movement at the time, obtained what is called the Balfour Declaration, which stated the fact that if Britain won the war by Zionist help, Britain would give Palestine to the Jews as a home Jewish territory.

Two rash and conflicting promises, because Palestine was an Arab country.

In 1920 Palestine was placed under mandate, with Britain as the mandatory power. From the late twenties up to 1947 there had been conflict between the two parties.

In 1947 the Jews started the war by bringing down to the ground the ten-story Hotel Samiramis killing 431 people. The Arabs in return blew up the eastern section of the seven-story King David office building in Jerusalem. (sic).

In 1948 Britain by the aid of the UN wanted to divide Palestine between the two and the Arabs refused the proposal so Britain suddenly decided to withdraw her forces from Palestine and declared it independent to whoever won the war.

Throughout the years when Britain was a mandatory power over Palestine, it favored the Jews. She enforced a law that every Arab caught with the possession of any kind of fire arm would be hanged in front of his house. On the other hand the Arabs picked up British fire arms and ammunition during the war.

Nasser should not by any means be compared with Castro just because he too received help from Russia. On the contrary, he should be compared with England's Churchill. This may be a shock to lot of people but when they asked Churchill during the war as to how come he was working with Russia, he replied, "I'll side with the devil to win the war." Is Churchill a Communist? I really do not think so.

In conclusion, I would like to stress what the author of our article said: ". . . let us be more cautious in condemning or praising any nation . . ." And I would further say let us not call Israel a "strong pro-democratic government' nor the Arabs "autocratic." Apparently we judge things before really digging deep into them and before understanding their circumstances.

To the Editor:

"The Greek Coloring Book" is the greatest thing to arrive on the scene since I left.

John Oliver

More Color

To the Editor:

The authors of the controversial Greek Coloring Book earmarked the profits for the wrong fund.

Money from the sale of such a "sick" publication should go to a likewise sick institution, the SU Student Health Service.

Name Withheld

Student Union

To the Editor:

I am at odds to understand the Daily Orange's editorial condemning the Student Union Building Fund's action rejecting the profits from the "Greek Coloring Book." In rejecting these profits Miss Ann Cooney, chairman of the Student Union Board, is apparently making an example of any group who would use the name of the Student Union as a means of promoting an idea or a product.

To accept these funds or to allow any group to use the name of the Student Union is to indirectly grant endorsement of that group or its uct. Miss Cooney's action is a justifiable attempt to stop any future unauthorized use of the name "Student Union" as a promotion.

In your editorial it is stated that the Student Union has become selective in its choice of donors. I should hope the Student Union is selective. No one would expect the Student Union to accept funds from a donor who had swindled or stolen them, and no one should expect the board to accept money from an unauthorized, unrecognized group with an unknown background.

The "Greek Coloring Book" should serve as an example to stop any future action of this type. Instead of condemning Miss Cooney the editorial should have congratulated her for her fine action in looking out for the best interests of the Student Union.

Gary C. Rehm

Bookstore

To the Editor:

Larry Eiler's letter of protest published under the heading of "Fee" did not cause laughter among the administration as he anticipated. At least the area of the administration with which we are in contact is concerned about the university "image".

In specific reply to Mr. Eiler's comments about the Bookstore, let me say first that there have been no price increases since we took over the Corner Store operation except those increases initiated by our various manufacturers.

More important is the matter of one percent charges being added to overdue charge accounts. We must emphasize the word overdue in this case because there will be no charges made against any account which is paid within thirty days of the close of the month in which the charge is made. This arrangement is quite liberal in view of existing trade practices in the business world.

This charge was made necessary by the general tardiness in making payments by a large number of our customers. Unfortunately, it costs money to borrow money, and the substantial amount of University cash which is frozen constantly in Bookstore charge balances costs the University money. We sincerely hope that every customer pays his bills within the specified time and no service charge is applied to anyone's account.

We know this can never be, but we hope that the charge will provide incentive to our customers to keep their balances on a current basis. The alternative to this procedure is to deny charge account privileges to students and staff members who do not pay within thirty days. I might also remind Mr. Eiler that no one is required to charge purchases at the Bookstore; we love to accept cash.

Baez: Boston to Fame

Joan Baez has come a long way from her Harvard Square days three years ago when her boy friend would arrive at the coffeeshop she was singing at with a retinue of motorcycles.

Today she has four record albums plus a Jaguar, a cover story in Time, and packed college auditoriums from coast to coast. Equipped only with a guitar and her untutored but strong, vibrant soprano voice Joan enchants her audiences without the aid of jokes, annoying "showmanship" or contempt of congress citations.

The small, dark complexioned girl will sing Thursday, April 24 at the War Memorial Concert Circle.

Amidst the ballyhoo of folk "entertainers" such as the Kingston Trio and the Limeliters Joan has managed great popularity and critical acclaim via the simplicity and directness of her singing. She sings what she wants to, her songs usually moody, emotional ones to which she adds almost an actress's qualities.

"When I started singing," Time quoted her as saying, "I felt as though we had just so long to live, and I still feel that way. It's looming over your head. The kids who sing feel they really don't have a future—so they pick up a guitar and play. It's a desperate sort of thing, and there's a whole lost bunch of them."

Joan's first "break" came when she was invited to sing at the First Newport Folk Festival in 1959. She later appeared on a CBS-TV network folk music and since then has toured campuses, spurning nightclubs. She has cut three Vanguard records and the company's recording engineers will tape her Syracuse concert.

Born in Staten Island 22 years ago of English and Mexican parentage, she roamed the nation with them, her physicist father moving from New York to Buffalo to Baghdad to Boston. It was there that Miss Baez began singing, picking up guitar techniques and songs.

No folksong historian or anthologist, she believes only in singing. "I don't care very much about where a song came from or why—or even what it says. All I care about is how it sounds and the feeling in it."

Miss Baez leaves her California home for no more than a short concert tour. She has lived there for more than a year spending eight months once in a cabin on the Big Sur with her five cats and five dogs. "Living," she says, "is my religion."

Tickets for the concert are available at the Famous Artist Series office, Clark Music Building or at Olmsteds on Marshall street.

'Lonely Woman' Returns

After a year's hiatus The Lonely Woman Quarterly, that off-campus, independent, uninhibited collection of stories, poems and illustrations, will go on sale Friday at Marshal street's newest bookstore, the Syracuse Book Center.

Priced at 35 cents the Quarterly is the combined efforts of local talent that do not want to be printed in the official university literary publication, Syracuse 10. Last spring two issues of the quarterly were published, each one a sellout.

This year's pressrun of 200 copies will feature works by Lewis Reed, who co-edited last year's issues, Karl Stoecker, Steve Kehoe, Peter Locke, Joseph McDonald Peter Maloney and James Stafford.

The name of the magazine was taken from a line of poetry by Henry Strindler "the lonely woman has a big nose and satin sheets."

In last year's first issue the editors' introduction said "The time has come the walrus said and assuming the prices of paper doesn't go up too strenuously, and the madman in the cellar can keep stamping out ink, this forlorn, dog earred periodical (sic) will occasionally take its place among the field of its fellow man."

Arts Festival: Bouncing Infant

From an initial budget of $100 in 1958 to "several thousand dollars" this year, the Syracuse University Festival of the Arts has expanded in all fields.

From an initial budget of $100 in 1958 to "several thousand dollars" this year, the Syracuse University Festival of the Arts has expanded in all fields.

This year's Festival, which begins today and continues until April 28. is the fifth in a series initiated by students.

A group of students, led by Peninah Blaustein, then a sophomore in the College of Liberal Arts, campaigned to start a tribute to the fine arts and humanities.

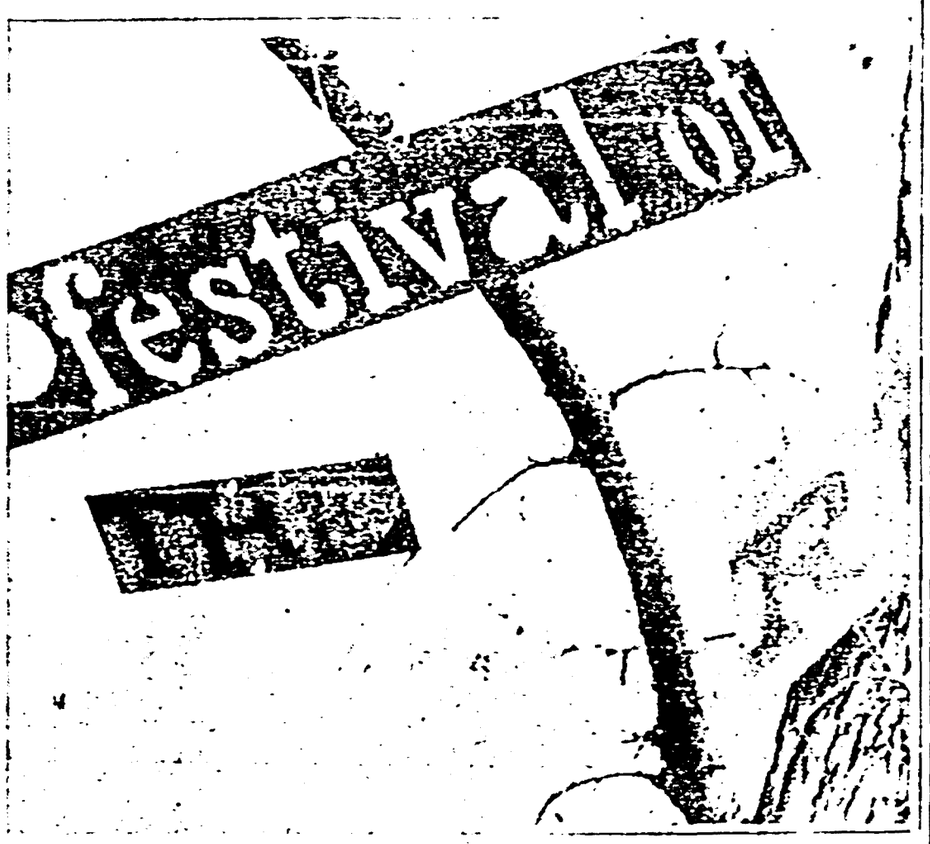
The students became interested after hearing of a a festival in Illinois at which SU Music Prof. Louis Krasner played.

With Prof. Krasner as their adviser, the students spoke to Dr. Frank Piskor, Hill vice president for academic affairs, who gave them a $100 budget.

A book and print sale opened the frist Festival, with books donated by publishing houses and prints given by Miss Blaustein's father.

Profits from the sale covered the cost of the first Festival, with some set aside for the next year.

As a highlight of the second Festival, Robert Frost and Frederick Melcher were honored at the Scholastic convention. Also featured in the 10-day Festival was conductor-composer Aaron Copland.



Last year. Dr. Arthur J. Pulos, professor in charge of industrial design, headed the Festival without a student committee.

Under the direction of Dr. Pulos, the student group was added again this year.

The committee includes Gordon Anderson, architecture; Gail Blizzard, art; James Gorney, literature; Jean Joly, pho- and Carol Lucha, 'Schultze' tography; Joanne Leiser, art education; Peter Maloney, drama; Leslie Nickel. humanities; Sandra Porter, dance; Jeanne Ranov, public relations; John Spanganberg, audio-visual; Michael Styer, radio and television; Parnel Wickham, music; student government.

Student co-chairman are Carol Chor, a freshman in the College of Liberal Arts, and James Morris, a junior in liberal arts. and new Joint Student Government President.

Litwin Selected

the university off its "merry-go-round" of discontent and lack of action.

Litwin took immediate charge after new Joint Student Court Chief Justice Herbert Lustig inaugurated him as well as James Morris, new Joint Student Government president, and Kate Antony, new JSG vice president. Litwin thanked the legislature and expressed hope that "the candidates who didn't win would continue to work in student government."

3 Nominees

Upon the election of Litwin, three candidates for speaker pro tempore were nominated in addition to the previously nominated Louise Bal.

Nathan dropped down to accept this nomination. Robert Cohen, a sophomore senator at large, and Townsend Southard, a junior, also were nominated.

At this point in the almost three hour meeting, a motion to adjourn until May 1 was passed. Election of the speaker pro tempore will take place at this time.

Before he handed the gavel over to Litwin, former Speaker Mittleman addressed the legislature formally for the last time.

He noted Joint Student Government survived the "almost disasterous" first year of its life in 1961-62.

"This year ('62-'63) was the year of challenge, the year that JSG would either prove itself as a necessary part of the university community or fall into the graveyards of similar experiments.

"The challenge . . . has been conquered," Mittleman reported.

Quoting the Athenian Oath inscribed on the walls of Maxwell, Mittleman closed, "We transmit this government to you not only less but greater, better and more beautiful than is was transmitted to us."

Robert Becker, outgoing speaker pro tempore, added. "I feel proud to work with a body which has made such great strides this past year."

Dean Ralph A. Galbraith will address the engineers on "Engineering and Education for Industry in a Research Age."

Sino-Soviet Split

mystic future banding the two nations together." Kalb said.

He discussed the Russo-Chinese split as the most crucial aspect of what he considers the weakening power of Khrushchev during the past year. Another example of this weakness is shown in the Cuban crisis, he said.

"There was no fear of war in Moscow in October, 1962," Kalb stated. Everyone in the Soviet Union knew Khrushchev would have to pull the missiles out of Cuba, he said.

On Cuba, Khrushchev was "humiliated by an extraordinary backdown," Kalb stated.

Fails in Berlin

On Berlin also Khrushchev has failed, he said. The Kremlin's six-month deadline to leave Berlin in 1958 has turned into a shelved Russian program.

"In short, Khrushchevism hasn't accomplished anything in Russia," Kalb said.

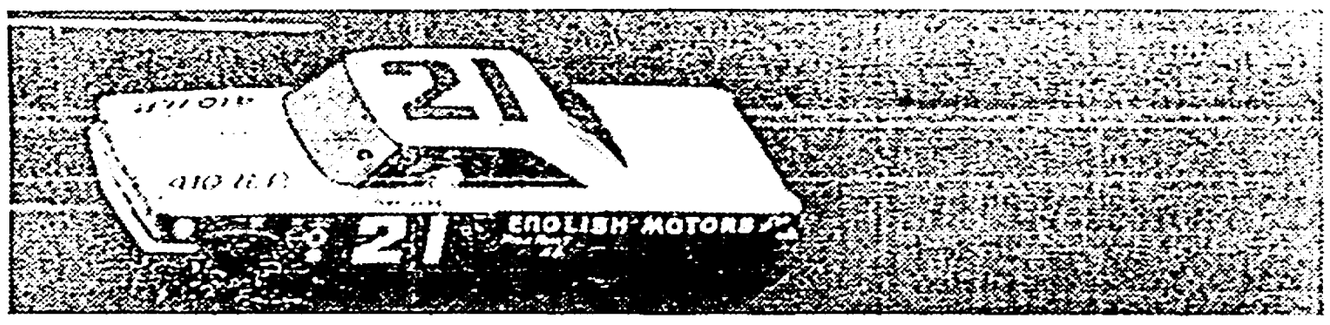
Kalb discussed the two worlds of the Russian; one in the advances of Communism through the technical and military advances, and the other, the world of the individual "where nothing is really happening."

Turning to the Cuban situation, Kalb backed Kennedy's policy of isolation of the island from the rest of the Western Hemisphere. This will increase the economic burden on Russia in the hope that they will abandon the Cubans, he explained.

The United States cannot box itself in with this policy, however, and totally prevent the possible return of a democracy under the Castro government, Kalb stated. This is especially significant in view of the evidence recently of Castro's becoming disillusioned with the Russian government, he said.

Foresters Host

"Plastics in Electronics" will be the theme for the Society of Plastics Engineers regional technical conference, today on the College of Forestry campus.



The conference will consist of 11 technical papers on new developments plus military and commercial applications.

Dr. Edward H. Lang, director of the Syracuse School of Technology, will present the luncheon address.

How Ford economy won for Tiny Lund at Daytona

The Daytona 500 is one of America's toughest stock car events. It measures the toughness, stability, over-all performance and economy characteristics of the cars that take up its challenge—in a way that compresses years of driving punishment into 500 blazing miles. This year mechanical failures claimed over 50 per cent of the cars that entered. That's why Tiny Lund's victory in a Ford (with four other Fords right behind him) is a remarkable testimony to sheer engineering excellence.

Lund attributed his victory in part to the "missing pit stop." He made one less pit stop for fuel than his competition—proving that Ford economy can pay off in some fairly unlikely situations!

Economy and the winner of the Daytona 500 might sound like odd bedfellows at first. Yet economy is basic in every car we make . . . yes, even the Thunderbird is an economy car in its own way. Here's what we mean . . .

Economy is the measure of service and satisfaction the customer receives in relation to the price he pays for it. It does not mean, however, austerity . . . you have taught us this. Americans want—and we try hard to give them—cars that are comfortable to ride in, fun to drive, and powerful enough to get out of their own way. Not many Americans want to settle for basic transportation. You see this in our sales figures—more than half of our 1963 sales are coming from the top of each model line. We're selling convertibles, hardtops, the jazzy cars . . . the bucket-seat, high-performance, luxury editions are going like hot cakes.

Yet for all the fun that people are demanding in their cars, they still are very conscious of the element of thrift—of avoiding unnecessary expense. This is the kind of economy we build into every car from the compact Falcon to the luxurious Thunderbird.

There's a special economy, for instance, in Ford's freedom from service. Every car and virtually every wagon can travel 36,000 miles before it needs a major chassis lubrication. Other routine service has been reduced, too—because these Fords are simply built better—and of better materials—than ever before.

In its own elegant way, even the Thunderbird gives you economy. It will travel 100,000 miles or 3 years before you have to lubricate the chassis. Thunderbirds have a way of becoming classics—as a look at their remarkably high resale value will quickly tell you. This, too, is economy.

Once, long ago—before the arrival of the Income Tax—a wealthy lady was asked to comment on the solid gold plumbing of her latest villa at Newport. "So thrifty, my dear," said the dowager . . . "it will never, ever rust."

Economy then, is many things to many people. Whatever economy means to you, you're pretty sure to find it in a Ford.

America's liveliest, most care-free cars!

Bailey: Africans Laud SU-Peace Corps Work

By DANIEL RITEY
Junior Editor

Globe-trotting Maxwell School Dean Stephen K. Bailey has returned recently from another world junket.

Bailey's six-week tour included visits to a number of African nations and the presentation of a paper at Geneva as a United States delegate to the United Nations Conference of Science and Technology in Relation to the Developing World.

His African tour included stopovers at Maxwell School outposts.

"A number of African governments are very grateful for the Peace Corps training work done at Syracuse University," noted Bailey. Particular effectiveness was cited in the operations of the Peace Corps units in Nyasaland and Kenya.

Dean Bailey reports conditions in Kenya "quiet, while I was there," as that land prepares for its independence in early 1961. "Kenya should handle its new freedom in a better manner than did the Congo," he added.

The Maxwell School is assisting the Kabate Administration Institute in training Africans for administrative positions in free Kenya, Bailey said.

More Violence

Commenting on a visit to South Africa, the dean said, "violence is beginning again, continuing the years of unbroken tension that has resulted in killings and acts of sabotage."

Governmental offers to help the black people in South Africa are fruitless, Bailey went on; "not only are they not helpful, but the natives are organizing an anti-white terrorist group."

Bailey, making his fourth trip to the Dark Continent, noted "Africa changes every year. Each year I go there to set positions for Americans in the local governments."

This showing by Americans—working with Africans in the latter's governments—"is desperately needed by the United States," he continued.

Geneva Paper

The dean's paper focused upon the topic of constructive planning methods in developing countries of the world.

"In essence, the central problem of central planning is one of national political power and of coordinating the energies of the key politicans and administrators," Bailey said.

"Ultimately, planning is not something that political leaders do to a society. Successful planning is cooperative action. . .this implies leadership and the mobilization of political power; but it also imples restraints upon that leadership and that political power," Bailey's paper noted in part.

A world-wide representation of 1,200 delegates attended the conference East and West were represented but, "cooperation between East and West seems unlikely in this area for now," the dean said.

Meadows Cautions on Siding

James, chairman of the geography department, and Dr. Robert Shafer, professor of history. Meadows is sociology and anthropology department head.

Dr. James noted that the national flag of Brazil has the motto "Order and Progress." But, said James, it should be order or progress.

Dr. James noted that the controlling interest in Latin America is a five per cent minority of landowners, priests, militarits and bureaucrats. This is the pre-industrial tradition inherited from Spain.

As the industrial and democratic revolutions spread to Latin America, Dr. James noted, they run into this pre-industrial, pre-democracy group, which "doesn't want the Alliance for Progress to succeed."

This type of democratic revolutionist, Dr. James warned, must, however, be distinguished from the Communist.

"All of these problems," Shafer concluded, "that affect the Alliance for Progress so seriously, fundamentally have to be solved by the Latin American countries themselves."

The panel was held in compliance with President Kennedy's request that "all United States citizens and interested organizations. . .contribute enthusiastically to Pan-American Day and the current Pan-American Week. . ."

Saturday in Shaw Dormitory the Hispanic-American Student Association will hold a Latin American carnival.

PAGEANT AUDITIONS

old age homes will anticipate visiting fraternity - sorority teams who have signed up to participate in social actions day. Nearly all houses on the campus are taking part in the team project. chairman Jeanne Dana (Chi Omega) reports.

Most of the projects begin at 3 p.m., while a few extend into the early evening.

Tonight's exchange dinners will see half the members of each house travel to other fraternities and sororities for dinner.

Following the dinner program each house will provide a speaker to discuss controversial campus topics.

Social action has been extended this year to include a special clean-up campaign Saturday morning. This project, in conjunction with a special city clean-up project, is voluntary. Individaul sororities and fraternities will clean up the area surrounding their houses.

Rain Halts Hill Nine's Home Debut

At The Plate

BALL FIRST SACKER ED MACNEN leads off first base during the second inning of the SU-Seton Hall game at Lew Carr field.

Fans Six Men In 3 Innings

By ALLAN KORT
Sports Editor

Rain washed away a three-run Syracuse rally in the third inning of yesterday's home opener with Seton Hall at Lew Carr Field.

Umpires were forced to cancel the contest with the Hill nine leading, 3-1, with one out in the home half of the third frame. The sudden downpour lasted only 15 minutes but left the field in unplayable condition.

The Orange, a squad that had batting problems on the Southern trip, appeared to be following the pattern, going scoreless in the first two frames.

Hill Rally

Trailing 1-0, the Syracuse club looked as though it were praying for rain, but after four batters had braved the sprinkles, the Hill held a 3-1 lead and was still threatening when the game was called with a man on first and Ed Jacke awaiting a 3-2 pitch at the plate.

Ed Barnowski, soph righty, lived up to promises, fanning six batters in the first three frames. Barnowski started off in good shape, striking out the first two Pirates he faced, but then lost his stuff and went wild, hitting two batters in succession. He then walked a third loading the bases and allowed a run on a wild pitch, before striking out the sides.

"I told Eddie he was throwing too hard and was aiming the ball, "Coach Ted Kleinhans said. "When he came off the bench to start the second inning, he was calmer and threw slow breaking stuff until he settled down and then started with his fast ball."

Retires Sides

Settling down, Eddie retired the sides in order in the second and third frames. He struck out six, hit two, walked one and didn't allow a hit.

Syracuse's record stands at 3-2 on the year, while Seton Hall has a 4-3 record. The Orange travel to Pittsburgh Saturday for a doubleheader with the University of Pittsburgh. Next home game is against Rensselaer May 1 at Lew Carr Field.

Bill Henry, The Pirates' lefty who came into the contest with a 2-0 record, including a one-hit shutout over Rutgers, appeared to have the Orange under control retiring the side in order in the first.

Wild Streak

The speedy lefty showed a streak of wildness in the second, walking Capt. Dick Taylor and giving up a single to first baseman Ed Macner, but he came out of the inning without any damage.

Henry's luck wasn't to last as he entered the field for the third (and final) frame. After walking leadoff batter Pat Antonelli, 'Cuse third sacker, he let a bunt by Barnowski get by him. Third baseman Dick Tracy handled the ball but Antonelli was safe at second.

Bobby Cohen, SU second baseman, then hit a grounder down the third base line; Tracy handled it, stepped on the bag forcing Antonelli. Then, trying for the doubleplay, Tracy overthrew first base, allowing Barnowski to score and Cohen to move to third.

Long Triple

Pat Lutz broke the 1-1 deadlock with a long triple over the centerfielder's head, scoring Cohen. After Bob Lelli took three strikes, Taylor singled over second, scoring Lutz. Jacek worked Henry to a 3-2 count before the game was called.

CATCHER BOB JACEK at the plate for the Hill nine. Action occurred during abbreviated game between SU and Seton Hall, called at the end of three innings by rain.

Los Angeles Relies On Speed, Hurlers

By DANIEL RITEY

The odds-makers say that the Los Angeles Dodgers are the ones to beat this year in the National League, but last year, with the same prediction riding, they bowed to the Giants.

The outlook, however, does seem pretty bright for the transplanted Bums — if and when they recover from a current early-season slump.

The Dodgers' pitching corps — seriously crippled by the loss of Sandy Koufax last mid-season — appears to be more than adequate for this season.

Strike-out artist Koufax has pronounced his finger as good as new and seems a good bet to reach the 20-game winners' circle while leading the Majors in strike-outs.

Big Don Drysdale, a 25-game winner last year, should win at least 20 and rank high in strike-outs too. With Koufax, Drysdale forms what is probably the best 1-2 pitching punch in baseball.

Aging Johnny Podres is set as the third starter with the fourth spot probably going to ex-Met Bob Miller who should improve upon his miserable 1-12 record with N. Y.

Good Bullpen

The Dodgers' bullpen — one of the best in the Majors — boasts Ed Roebuck, Larry Sherry and Ron Perranoski as the chief firemen. This trio should save many games for L.A.

In giving up last year's fourth starter, Stan Williams, the Dodgers obtained first-baseman Bill Skowron from the Yankees. Skowron's big bat will add more punch to a lineup already laden with blinding speed and good power.

Rookie Nate Oliver, from Spokane, is Maury Wills' new keystone partner at second. He's supposed to be faster than Wills—which is swift moving—and a crackerjack fielder.

Last year's MVP, Maury Wills holds down the short-stop spot in the Dodgers' infield. His value as a lead-off hitter should again be proven with 200 hits and another banner year on the basepaths.

Slugger Tommy Davis may yet be the L. A. third baseman this year. Reasonably fast and agile in the field, his bat (.346 average and 153 RBI's) should produce many runs for the Angelenos. Davis, though, can and does play outfield.

The outfield has Willis Davis, massive Frank Howard and Ron Fairly as the regulars. Howard, in right, is no twinkle-toes fielder, but his power is staggering. He's primed as the new home run king of the big leagues.

Willis Davis is the fastest Dodger of them all. A consistent hitter and above average fielder, Davis, with Wills and Oliver, gave the Dodgers three jackrabbits up front before the sluggers come to bat.

Catching looms as the only problem for the boys from Chavez. Failing to obtain a top-flight receiver over the winter may have hurt, but the Dodgers are going with Johnny Roseboro who was adequate behind the plate in 1962.

Potential trouble-spots that may halt the Dodgers in their bid to dethrone the Giants are: shaky catching, failure of Tommy Davis to adjust to the hot-corner, reliance on a rookie at second base and pitching.

The mound presents problems only if Koufax develops further trouble with his finger and if the Dodgers cannot develop a fourth starter in time.

Chances are, however, that O'Malley's boys will make a strong—and possibly successful—bid for the National League flag. They may "steal" it from another team.

Net Frosh Called; Match Changed

Tennis coach Gene Garrett announced yesterday that all frosh tennis hopefuls should assemble Saturday morning at Skytop. Assembly will be sounded at 11 a.m. on the lower six composition courts. This is the first call issued to prospective freshmen players.

Garrett also named his two doubles teams. After a bit of juggling, Ross Kaplan and Al Napper have been named as the No. 1 pair; Bill Gadalecia and Steve Rubell are No. 2.

As a result of this Saturday's challenge matches the fourth, fifth and sixth positions are still in a "fluid state," according to Garrett.

After the one, two, and three of Rubell, Kaplan and Gadalecia; Napper, Al Davis, Lew Katcher and Bruce Gordon are vying for the second three spots.

They are readying for this weekend's match with Hamilton, changed from Saturday to Friday.

Hamilton is hosting the Hill squad in what Garrett calls the key match of the season. Hamilton has their entire team returning.

"If we can beat them, I think we'll have a winning season says Garrett. But if we don't, then the season will be a question mark."

The Boys From Syracuse

TO THE SHOWERS? Well, not quite. These four university professors, IAN HENDERSON, FRANK HANANSON, J. CURTIS SHAKE and WILL O. Headlee, all of the School of Music, are appearing in Sunday night's performance of Carl Orff's opera "Catulli Carmina." In this story of Roman poet Catullus' passion for the beautiful and wayward Partician, Lesbia will be "played" by an "orchestra" of combined music school choruses, and danced by a special group lead by choreographer Lorraine Havercroft. These, and other costumes, were designed and executed by Lee Gillespie.

A Latin Festival Comes to Shaw

Greek Week comes to a flourishing close this weekend while the Festival of the Arts just begins to get rolling. The events of those two special occasions have left the campus many opportunities for cultural and social outlets this week.

But another festival has been going on this week and it, too, comes to a close with the weekend. We refer to Pan-American Week, which climaxes Saturday evening with a Latin American carnival and fiesta in Shaw Dormitory.

Often in the past the Daily Orange has written about the position of the international student on this campus. We have pointed out the lack of intercourse among American and foreign students.

Also we have cited instances when the opportunity for closer acquaintances have been made readily available. Such an instance confronts us tomorrow. The carnival at Shaw is open to all students on campus.

It is run by the Latin American students with the co-operation of the International Student Organization. These groups have a large investment in the affair and it won't succeed unless we cooperate.

We realize that many other events will be going on Saturday night and we do not want to detract from them. But wouldn't it be possible to at least stop for a short time at this Latin American festival?

Even a brief visit will provide yet another opportunity to take advantage of the lessons that can be learned on this campus from the foreign students.

By attending such a function you will be aiding the cause of friendship as well as adding to your own knowledge and understanding of others. Furthermore, you will be showing the international students that we can exert a little effort to see that what they present to the campus will be a success in attendance and financially.

3 More With Vigah

The good news from the stork (we assume he still handles those things) is that the Kennedy clan will increase three-fold by autumn. At the top of the list will be a new delivery to the White House, the first since the Grover Cleveland administration. And at the Justice Department and the Senate something new will be added. Thus another scrap for the Kennedy scrapbook of togetherness.

Poems by McDonald

By Stephanie Brill

"Poetry is my interest. It's almost my religion. I'm fascinated by it", Joseph McDonald explained.

"I find it a way of reproducing my enthusiasm in things", he added, motioning with his hands.

McDonald has not decided exactly which one of his many interests he'll pursue as a career but wants to find his "academic niche".

"I'd like to go on to graduate school," he commented, "and then probably teach English in high school or college."

Writing poetry will be a definite part of his future though.

"I look on writing as sort of an attempt to work out something," he reflected. "Hopefully, I may be able to achieve "good" writing. By "good," he interjected. "I mean being able to write what I want to express with facility."

"At least time is on my side," he smiled. "If it takes me fifteen years," he shrugged, "It'll take me fifteen years."

The writer attributed much of his knowledge of poetry to the encouragement and help of his high school English teacher, Mrs. Doris Vicary, and of Dr. Thornton Parsons, Dr. Robert Durr and poet-in-residence Philip Booth, whose poetry workshops he has taken while at Syracuse.

Winning a Citizenship Scholarship, McDonald attended the University for three semesters but left school this fall. He is a specially enrolled student this semester. During the interum he worked in a book store and did construction work which he alludes to in "The Times." His other poem "Relatives in TinType" refers to a family photograph printed on tin, as many old photographs were.

Last year, as a sophomore, McDonald worked with Lorry Fuchs editing poetry for the "Syracuse 10". His own work has appeared in past issues and three of his poems are scheduled for the 10's next edition. The writer has also contributed several poems to a new poetry publication which will be sold on Marshal Street in the near future.

"My childhood ambition was to be a doctor," he reminisced. The student, whose home is in Baldwinsville, is interested in art, music and philosophy.

"I'm proud of the diverse friends I've made here," he added enthusiastically.

"I enjoy discussing these fields with them," he laughed, "though I think I gain more from their knowledge than they do from me."

Coming from a religious background McDonald has found this subject personally important since he first questioned religion when he was "about eight."

Referring to his interest in philosophy McDonald continued,

"If I had the knowledge I would like to write about philosophical problems drawing corollaries with personal experiences. As it is I try to write what is specifically meaningful for me while, I hope, giving the poem a meaning for someone else as well."

Explaining his full time interest in poetry he added, "I very consciously try to think of ideas for poems and relate experiences (as they happen) to put into writing."

"I love to read too," he pointed out.

At present he is making a personal study of the Epics, including the Iliad, the Odyssey, the Aeneid and Dante's Divine Comedy.

"In learning to write poetry," he noted, "I've found the best thing, aside from studying the actual mechanics of it, is to read as much poetry, good and bad, as possible,—as long as you read things carefully."

His favorite authors include Yeats, Hopkins, Conrad, Henry James and William Carlos Williams.

The Bed

The goldenrod was Breast-high when I came over
The top of the knoll.

The doe was gone
Before I noticed her there,
Leaving her bed of grass

Rising in the sun.
On fall mornings, the cow
Would roll to her feet

And the children would lie back on her warmth
Steaming from the clover.

Early last winter,
My dear one went
To a city where buildings

Drop their debris
Like needles in a shade
As deep as a pine wood.

Each day, for eight hours,
In a milk-white room,
Mother: dustfree and patient,

Makes with her microscope
The tiny transistors
They pack in the nose-cones

Of love-killing rockets.
With this new spring,
The beasts in the forest,

Alive to their bones,
Wake as the snow melts
To something happening.

Raindrops explode
On my window
And the pigeons scatter

To their eave-nests.
Down on the street
Women, dressed in clear plastic,

Stand in doorways, looking up,
As the street
Darkens with the falling water.

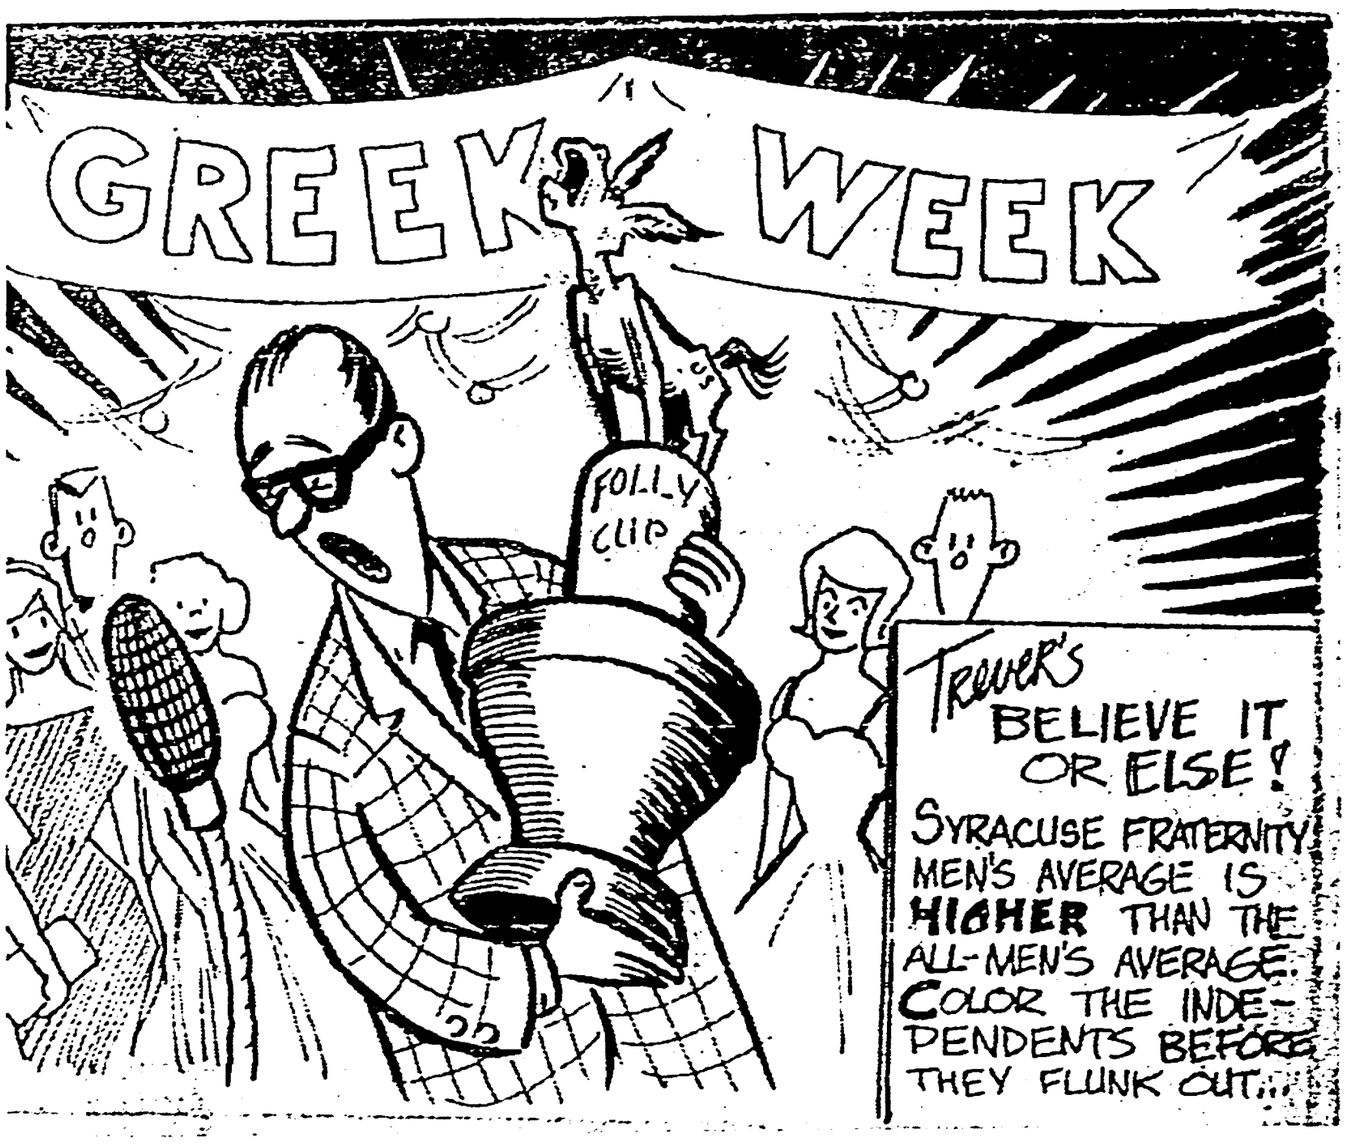
Relatives in Tintype

Grandfather in his uniform of trade.
Stern eye, black tie, stiff collar, waxed mustache.
Grandmother: a mother by the Proverbs.
White dress, firm jaw, laced up, with calloused hands.

Children scrubbed white surround these double gods,
With backs held taut, an enormity in eyes.
Caught in solemn propriety they show
Obvious virtues to progenity.

Only Uncle Alvin: caught, combed, in short pants—
Ignores, yet sees their foolishness and grins.
Later, he carved huge toys of love
From his kindness. Now on thin, tarnished tin,
Only the silence of his smile seemed real.

The Times



My work too far to walk
I watch the negroes talk
On the steps of the slums.
They squint as my bus comes
To watch the white men pass.
Later, through pool hall glass,
As I ride home they stand
By tables, cues in hand.

I know that being just me
I cannot render them free
From what I have not lost:
Freezing that is not frost.
Now, like each man, I wash
Away their annoying flesh
Clothed in both flesh and hate,
And let my sorrows wait
To soothe with little lies
Pain in my loved-one's eyes.

We cannot see the stark
Chinese starving in the dark
Or Russians, waiting staid
Through a hungry decade.
Gently, gloriously falling,
Now we receive no forestalling
But begin heaving slow
To where all empires go.

From shadows, a savage stalks
A secretary as she walks.
Dark eyes stare from alley lairs
As policemen pass in pairs,
Flip their clubs and click their heels.
While upstairs, the black meat squeals
That a few years ago was seen,
Kinkleheaded, by the tar machine
In a pink dress and rubbish shoes
With little knowledge of the news.

THIS WEEKEND

Concerts
Movies

Today Weekend just covers some of the leading films presented on and off campus. For those events of a musical or theatrical nature Weekend usually covers see the DO's Festival of the Arts coverage.

RIVIERA-CINEMA—Sitting on our grandmother's granite knee, we'd hear the story of the mashuga ex-pilot who used to date a good looking 11-year old girl. There's was an idyllic and innocent affair, grandmother would say, her hands moving up into panning shots of trees diffusing arty sunlight. But society, being what it is, grandmother continued, tears forming in her eyes, condemned their love for society had seen "Lolita." "Sundays and Cybelle" is no "Lo," but rather a tender film of purity and love and things that make grandmothers with granite knees cry. Also on the bill is DeBroca's nutty first comedy, "The Love Game." "Sunday" at 6:45 and 10:05 p.m. "Lovely" at 8:40 p.m.

SHOPPINGTOWN — Marlon (The Ugly American) Brando tried so hard to win an Oscar in "Mutiny on the Bounty" that he had to re-write the book to do it. He didn't win the Oscar and neither did the screenplay. But Trevor Howard and his nibs do an honorable job amidst the fine photography and rolling hips. The former is quite widescreen and technicolorish while the latter belong to Tahitian maidens who make the Twist look Puritan in its confinement. All in all a good movie and some swinging hips. Also good previews of "Lawrence of Arabia." Bounty at 8:07 p.m. previews at about 8:03.

ECKEL—Left, right, left, right. Fall in at the Eckel. "The Longest Day" continues to unravel on the giant screen telling the story of those valiant men who battled through the first twenty-four hours of the Normandy invasion so that twenty years later the veterans who fought the battle of Camp Roberts could march in with their American Legion platoons in their poorly-fitting sportscoats and shaggy heads of hair. Feel the thrill of watching the movie with men who actually lived in those days and are now proud to watch the sands of France well up with the bodies of their comrades. This then is the drama and the excitement, the blood, sweat and tears of war at its wide screen best. Yessir, Uncle Sam wants you. Enlist at 8:15 or during intermission.

LOEW'S — "It's Judy singing," blares the advertisement. What else would she be doing? The film is "I Could Go on Singing" starring Judy Garland and Dirk Bogarde. Apparently the ad is used to clear up any doubts as to whether Miss Garland or Mr. Bogarde would do the vocalizing. Judy brings her chubby little voice to the film sans the Carnegie Hall applause track which made her concert such a big selling album. Cofeature is "The Story of Joseph and His Brethren," which doesn't have much to do with Judy but it probably doesn't do much justice to the Bible either. "Judy" at 9:51 p.m. "Joe" at 8 p.m.

KEITH'S—It finally has happened. The many unhappy years of Eddie Fisher's life have been chronicled into one all-inclusive film, so it would seem. The film is "My Six Loves," which rather suggests Elizabeth Taylor and the star is Debbie Reynolds, which suggests Debbie Reynolds. That's about as suggestive as Weekend ever gets. This is the funniest film since the newsreel shots of Richard Burton's 12th wedding anniversary. Cofeature is "Alakazan the Great!" a feature cartoon featuring the voices of Jonathan Winters, Dodie Stevens and Frankie Avalon. Wouldn't it be wild if Dodie Stevens won an Oscar for this and her voice had to accept the award? "Love, Love, Love, Love, Love, Love" at 7:15 and 10:30. "Alky" at 9:00.

PARAMOUNT — If your date has long finger nails then wear steel gloves or you'll find your hand as bloody as if a bunch of bluejays attacked it. That's the problem with Alfred Hitchcock's latest horror, "The Birds." It's so terrifying couples will clutch themselves to pieces. "Boids" at 7:16 and 9:44.

CORONET THEATER — Gil Cates' "The Painting," an award winning short by the SU grad who produced and directed the "Hootenanny" at Syracuse and is currently directing International Showtime (he certainly gets around) will be shown 3 p.m. Friday. Cates will then answer questions such as "How cum such a talented drama student like you is in television (ugh)," and "Howcum you like Syracuse University (ugh!) so much."

GIFFORD AUDITORIUM in pretty H. B. Crouse Hall will be the scene of the not so pretty, in fact pretty terrifying "Viridiana" 7 p.m. Sunday. The All-Campus Religious Fellowship is sponsoring this anti-religious (to say the least) film by Luis Brunel. Banned in Spain, decried in church, debated in coffeehouses and penthouses, we hope this story of an innocent novitiate and a not so innocent world doesn't spoil any of the All Campus Religious Fellowship.

Princeton Hosts Talented Group

Over 3,000 college students from throughout the East are scheduled to descend on Princeton University this weekend for that school's third annual "Response Symposium."

For the entirely student-run production, a highly distinguished group of speakers has been gathered to discuss the theme: "The Pursuit of Excelence in the Creative Arts: A Problem of the Industrial Society."

Soviet poet Yevgeny Yevtushenko was to have visited the United States for this symposium and a similar appearance at Cornell University. His declination this week in confusion-surrounded circumstances has become an international incident.

Search For Excellence

The purpose of the symposium will be to examine the problem of the search for excellence in the creative arts from two points of view: that of the artist and that of society.

On Friday night a panel of writers Robert Penn Warren, Bernard Malamud, Edward Albee and Arthur Miller will discuss the "problems facing the artist in a society characterized by a high degree of organizational and governmental control." Moderator will be Arnold Gingrich, publisher of Esquire Magazine.

The Saturday morning panel includes Federal Communications Commission chairman Newton Minow, journalist Alistair Cooke, producer Robert Whitehead and August Heckscher, presidential consultant of the arts who will examine the point of view of society.

During the afternoon students will participate in seminars in any of 6 fields. Leading seminars in architecture will be Philip Johnson, I.M. Pei, Paul Rudolph, and Aline Saarinen.

In prose, James Baldwin, John Cheever, Elizabeth Janeway, Philip Roth and William Styron. Also Warren, Malamud and Albee.

In painting, Tom Hess, Harold Rosenberg, Cleve Gray, Philip Guston, Barnett Newman, David Smith, Lawrence Alloway.

Music—Roger Sessions, Virgil Thompson, Albert Frankenstein; theatre, Artrur Miller and Vladimir Zavatsky; poetry, Muriel Rukeyser, Richard Eberhart, Howard Nemerov, Jack Gilbert; A concluding session will be held Sunday afternoon where Yevtushenko was to have appeared.

Saturday afternoon.

Saturday afternoon, Greeks complete with chariots will pack Archbold Stadium for Greek games at 2 p.m.

Special attraction of the games this year is the all star wrestling match between NCAA champion James (Bo) Nance and IFC international champion Thomas (BoPeep) Rigoli (Phi Delta Theta).

Contenders

Rigoli is in top shape for the event, having spent the spring vacation working out in his training camp in the Mountains of Northern Pennsylvania, and is expected to give Nance considerable trouble. Nance has not worked out since claiming the championship last month.

"I'm not worried," commented Nance confidently. "I figure I should be able to pin him at least six inches in the ground in about five seconds."

Following the Rigoli slaughter 30 fraternity chariots will take the field in the elimination race.

Design

Chariots have been designed by the houses, and must have rubber wheels of some type.

Other contests are the Tug of War, the sorority obstacle race, the three legged run, the "raunch" relays, and a pie eating contest.

Fraternity-sorority teams will compete in each event. Trophies will be awarded to the fraternity champion.

The normally academic atmosphere of the library will explode with twist music Saturday night as "The Countdowns" and "The Invaders" battle away at both ends of the library parking lot.

Switch Location

The university social committee has extended its normal 10 p.m. curfew for outdoor parties to midnight for the affair. The twister was moved from Walnut Park to the library in order to let sleeping non-Greeks in the Walnut area go undisturbed, according to chairman James Hornel.

Music by singer Johnny Nash and entertainment by the Smothers Brothers will conclude the weekend at a concert at 2:30 p.m. Sunday in Manley Fieldhouse.

The Brothers, two comedians in their early 20's, have gained national attention in the past year as one of the top nightclub comedy attractions. They have appeared on the new Jack Paar show, the Danny Thomas Show, the Merv Griffin Show and a Bing Crosby special.

Johnny Nash, an established popular singer will present music in the Mathis mood mixed with a number of popular folk songs.

FORECASTERS
Stuart Soroka
Henry Adams

The unusually sunny bright spring of 1963 will be temporarily interrupted by a brief period of showers today but the long range pattern favors a clear beautiful weekend.

High clouds will be spreading over this morning as stormy weather to the west closes in. Any sunshine we get this morning will be hidden this afternoon by a dull grey overcast. The showers should be ending by tonight followed by a fair dry and cool weekend high in the 50's.

Syracuse Nine Plays Pittsburgh In Doubleheader

Ed Barnowski and either Bob Lelli or Phil Schoff are slated to be the starting pitchers for Syracuse in tomorrow's double header at the University of Pittsburgh.

In their last outing Wednesday against Seton Hall the Orangemen were leading 3-1 in the third inning when the game was washed out. Barnowski had fanned six in three innings giving up a run on two hit batsmen, a walk and a wild pitch. The big sophomore right hander has a 1-1 record with a 1.50 earned run average.

Lelli is 1-0 on the season while Schoff has yet to have a starting assignment.

Coach Ted Kleinhans will go with the same lineup that he used against Seton Hall. Ed Macner at first, Bob Cohen at second, Pat Lutz at short and Pat Antonelli at third round out the infield. Lelli, Dick Taylor and Dave Rounds will be in the outfield with Bob Jacuk behind the plate.

Batting Slump

The Orangemen will be hoping that their abreviated three run rally Wednesday is a sign that the club is out of the batting slump that plagued the team on the Southern tour. The team had a .150 batting average.

Pitching has been the team's mainstay with Barnowski in 18 innings giving up only six hits, striking out 27 and issuing seven passes. He was the winning hurler in the George Washington game and on the short end of a 1-0 loss to Navy.

Next Game

The next game for the Hill nine will be Wednesday at Cornell. The next home game is May 3 against the University of Rochester.

Kleinhans look to his outfield trio for hitting improvement. Lelli is now hitting .214, Taylor .158 and Rounds .111. Statistics from Wednesday's three innings are not included.

Net Call

All frosh tennis hopefuls should report to the Skptop courts Saturday morning at 11 a.m., tennis coach Gene Garrett announced. Players should report to the lower six composition courts. This is the first call issued to frosh prospects.

Netmen at Hamilton; RubellHoldsTopSpot

The tennis team travels to Hamilton College today for their first match since the spring tour. Coach Gene Garrett's squad will be trying to improve their 2-3 record in what Garrett terms "a key match."

"If we can beat them I think we'll have a winning season," Garrett said.

Sophomore Steve Rubell will be playing number one man with Ross Kaplan second and Bill Golaleia third man. Al Napper, Al Davis, Lew Katcher and Bruce Gordon are competing for the second three spots.

The Orange doubles teams are Kaplan and Napper playing as the number one pair and Rubell and Golaleia the number two combination.

Syracuse has defeated Georgetown and American University with losses to George Washington, Navy and Maryland.

The first home match of the season will be Wednesday at the Skytop courts against Union College.

The Orangemen host Cornell May 1.

The tennis team was 7-7 last season with Garrett feeling that he has a better squad now than he coached last year. The team might have a rough time improving on last season's record with only five home matches in their 15 match schedule.

In addition to Cornell matches are scheduled with Penn State, Colgate, Bucknell, Buffalo, the University of Rochester and St. Lawrence.

Rubell has been a surprise on the squad moving up from the frosh to number one varsity man. The Brooklyn, N. Y. native replaced Kaplan who played in the top slot most of last season.

Hill Stickmen Host Hobart at Manley

By ALLAN KORT
Sports Editor

Syracuse University's lacrosse ten go for their second win in a row, meeting Hobart College Saturday afternoon at 2:30 at Manley Field.

The Orange stickmen lost their opener, 11-7, to top-ranked Johns Hopkins and then rebounded, 12-4, at the expense of Cortland State.

Hobart won its first three contests, then lost a 8-5 decision to Hofstra last week. Leading the Statesmen in scoring is Larry Slattery, who has accumulated 16 goals and two assists. Slattery had four markers in a losing effort against the Orange last year.

Top Scorer

Leading the Syracuse attack will be rookie attack Ron Fraser. The sophomore sensation has scored 10 goals in two games and is the eighth ranking scorer in the country.

Coach Roy Simmons expects "a tough contest from Hobart" and will attempt to stop Hobart's scoring punch by putting John Mackey on Slattery for the duration of the game.

Simmons will go with his regular lineup for the Hobart meeting. On the attack for the Orangemen will be Fraser, Doug Cruthers and Tom Rennie. Cruthers, recovering from a shoulder injury suffered in the Cortland clash, may miss Saturday's game.

On the midfield for Syracuse will be John Pappas, stalwart of the attack line last year, newcomer John Mackey, and Capt. Mel Davis.

Hill Defense

Simmons relates his team's strength to its experienced defense. Returning for a second year at the backup positions are Walt Reese, Jack Salerno and Bob Ramsdell.

Roy Simmons will be interviewed tonight on Orange Spotlight on WAER, 88.3 mg.

In the goal is Senior Pete Coe, rated last year as one of the top goals in the country. Backing up Coe is junior goalie Dick Lindholm.

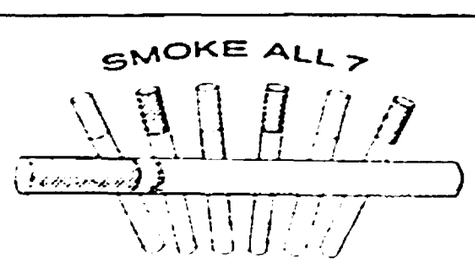
Simmons will go with three midfield lines and plans rotation.

"Hobart does not have the depth we do and we hope to tire them by having fresh lines in the game at all times.

Veteran Hobart Coach Francis Kraus will shift his lineups for Saturday's game. Starting at attack are Bill Ferris, Vin DiGregorio and Si Pierson. Ferris has had nine assists and five goals in three games. Pierson has scored 14 goals without an assist.

Two newcomers will appear in the midfield line, while the defense will remain the same.

A big vacuum in the Statesmen's defense is the absence of Jack McDonald, who stopped a shot with his Adam's apple in a practice game last week. Ironically, the shot was made by former Syracuse University Dick Finley. Finley, a senior on the Hill, is playing with the Syracuse Lacross club.



"We are starting to shape up with new men such as Mackey and Fraser helping out a lot. Besides our defensive trio of Salerno, Reese and Ramsdell will be tough for Hobart to score on."

Day Hall Experiments In Class Togetherness

BY SANDI EHRLICH

Day Hall will be integrated in September.

The intergration has nothing to do with race, creed, color or sex; it will be an integration of classes. Freshmen, sophomore, junior and senior girls will live together on two floors of Day next year.

Day 4 and 5 will each have 35 upperclassmen and 30 freshmen on the floor. Of the 35 upperclassmen, 12 will be either juniors or seniors and 23 will be sophomores.

The Day Hall "experiment," as it is known, is expected to strengthen the continuity from year to year in the dorm, and to encourage traditions and lasting enthusiasm, according to Shirley Uplinger, Day Hall director.

Because plans for the "experiment" were developed only recently, it was not publicized until this weekend. Day residents are being given priority in participating in the program. Because of the time limit, "we are working with the girls we know," said Miss Uplinger.

Met Thursday

After a meeting in Day Thursday night, 60 freshmen coeds signed up for next year's living "experiment." About 10 sophomores and juniors indicated interest. It is expected that more "upperclassmen from the campus will commit themselves to the experiment at room selection time.

The idea was developed during this semester by students and head residents. It was mentioned at floor meetings several weeks ago.

(See Day Hall, Page 4)

Room Selection Begins Today

Room selection will begin tonight for upperclass women in the Shaw recreation room, announced Jean Crawford, director of women's housing.

All future seniors must be at Shaw at 7 p.m. Future juniors with numbers 1 through 200 will select rooms from 8:30 p.m.

Future juniors with numbers 201 through 550 and all late numbers will select rooms at 7 p.m. Wednesday in the Shaw Recreation Room. That same night, future sophomores with numbers 1 through 200 will choose from 8:30 p.m. Coeds of the class of 1966 holding numbers from 201 through 600 will choose rooms from 7 p.m. Thursday.

Priority

Students who lived in the following houses during fall semester may select their rooms prior to other members of their class: Haven, Hughes, Lima, Roosevelt, Schultze.

Complete details of room selection procedure are posted in all living centers.

The residence units available to upperclass coeds have also been announced.

Flint Hall's A wing will again be for upperclassmen. Day Hall will have two floors of sophomores, four floors of freshmen, and two floors mixed with freshmen, sophomores, juniors and seniors.

More Upperclass

Other upperclass housing will include Shaw Dormitory, Washington Arms, Barclay Apartments, Mott, Scott, Hurst.

Also, Sperry, Huey Ten Eyck, French Smalley Hefron, Beebe and Smith.

Ehling Quits Post For Fall Teaching

The Hill's public relations director will quit his post to become chairman of the School of Journalism's public relations program.

Dr. William P. Ehling, director of the Office of Information Services since 1954 will teach full-time this fall.

The appointment will be effective Sept. 1. It is expected a public relations replacement will be found by fall.

However, Dr. Frank P. Piskor, vice president for acedemic affairs, said such a transfer of responsibilities "is tied to the university's budget preparation process."

"It would be premature to comment on plans which have not fully developed." he added.

Syracuse Picket

Inside the Syracuse Woolworth's Saturday, three Negro high school students sat at the lunch counter, while another Negro boy, about eight years old, tore up a CORE leaflet as he played on the floor near a doorway.

Outside the store, 35 or 40 representatives of the Congress of Racial Equality, (CORE) the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and the Civil Rights Committee of local 326, International Union of Electrical Workers were picketing.

The afternoon march was part of a nationwide sympathy picket against Woolworth, Kress,

Lovers' Lane Closes at 11

The Hill's lover's lane, Thornden Park, has been declared off limits by the Syracuse city police department.

In an effort to avoid a recurrence of the mugging in Thornden Park on April 12, a directive has been issued to police officers to enforce a city ordinance ordering people to stay out of parks and playgrounds between 11 p. m. and 5 a. m.

Security Police Chief Robert Flaherty is sending bulletins to living centers informing them about the directive.

Rite of Spring

In case you noticed a lot of strange faces on the quad this weekend let us remind you that those were probably prospective students and their parents who came here to look the place over.

True, we have had a lot of give-and-take over tuition figures and academic atmosphere in the past month but there is another aspect to campus life that comes most directly to campus visitors.

That is, the condition of the campus itself is an important consideration for prospective students and for their parents, who usually exert quite a strong influence over the final choices of the young ones.

Therefore, if we cannot do anything about the high cost of academic living or the low spots of academic opportunity on the Syracuse campus, we can at least be careful not enter the category of litter-bug or property-defacer.

These two types are prevalent in the spring especially. They toss trash in front of Slocum and clutter HBC to such an extent that the lounge has been closed. These people, who probably don't contribute to the campus in any other way, can't even take the trouble to keep the campus looking presentable.

Then there are those who have no regard for university property and wantonly destroy furnishings in living centers. This needless action can do no good for any party concerned. Certainly high costs of room and board don't get any lower when the repair bill is enormous.

And we also have the slob on campus this time of year. Perhaps there are better words but slob will have to suffice. He walks around the quad looking like he just fell out of bed and then perhaps he plops under a tree.

It's a wonder people aren't frightened right off campus by some of these sights.

To sum all this up, there is a rite of spring at Syracuse which involves keeping the welfare of the school at least in the back of your mind.

Remember part of the road to improvement is paved by incoming students. Let's not scare any away because we look more like a disaster area than a college campus.

TREVER ON CAMPUS

"So drink! Chug-a-lug, chug-a-lug, chug-a-lug . . . "

LETTERS

Coloring Book

To the Editor:

The Student Union Board feels unanimously that the ideas expressed in "The Greek Coloring Book" publication are definitely "not synonomous with our standards."

Although we recognize and support their right to constructively criticize, we cannot go along with them to the extent that libel possibly may result. The reason lies within the name of the building, a Student UNION. A building such as we are trying to establish and which, we feel, is sorely needed on the Syracuse campus should serve to unite the student body.

Thus the Student Union Board will not accept money which has been raised at the expense of a segment of the University, in this case, the Greek population. To unite — not alienate — is our aim.

We feel that the printing of the words "Profits from the sale of this magazine will go to the Student Union Building Fund" on the back cover implies intentionally or unintentionally that the Student Union advocates the views of the publication.

The Board was never contacted about the donation or about the printing of its name on the back cover. We appreciate the thought of the donation but woud request in the future that we be consulted before our name is used as the recipient of funds.

The Student Union Board does not intend to alienate any portion of this campus and therefore cannot accept the profits from this publication.

The Student Union Board

Ivy League

To the Editor:

With all the complaining about Ivy League tuition rates and non-Ivy League standards of teaching, many students still fail to recognize the only true Ivy League aspect of the university: The Syracuse University Crew.

I do not condone the tuition hike; it hurts me more than many others. But it shows the students' ignroance when they fail to support the only Ivy League sport at Syracuse.

Every man on the crew works hard to get a winning beat on the water. From 4 until 8 every week day they are practicing on the lake or the Seneca River. Many give up meals.

If the Students want Syracuse to become Ivy League, they should start supporting what Ivy League aspects already exist here instead of trying to get new things totally unfamiliar to the students (Ivy League rates) and to the adminisration (Ivy League teaching standards).

GUEST SPOT

Syracusan in Guatemala

By Bruce C. Daniels

The following are excerpts from a letter received from Bruce C. Daniels, S. U. junior studying in Guatemala under the Hill Semester-in-Guatemala program. He has been in Guatemala since February 1, and has written some first hand accounts of the recent bloodless coup which ousted President Idigoras Fuentes.

I can best describe the political situation down here in a few words. Otherwise you wouldn't buy the book I'm going to write on it.

It started out with Idigoras declaring the country in a state of siege which is an emergency situation giving him extra powers, something like our president's war powers, as I understand it. Anyway, it was due to a number of things. First, the return of ex-president Arevalo to Guatemala to run for president.

Arevola is at least a socialist whose "Arevalismo" has spread fear and terror among all good rightist, anti-communist, and militarist elements. His return had to be prevented and this was a constitutional way to do it. Second, there was some guerrilla warfare in the mountains of the northeast, led by communist sympathizers, apparently more of a front or excuse rather than anything really dangerous. Third, a series of terrorist bombings averaging 3 or 4 nightly throughout the city of Guatemala. Idigoras inflicted an 8:00 p.m.-6:00 a.m. curfew on Guatemala which lasted for almost a week, but then was lifted to 12:00 midnight to 5:00 a.m.

Bombings continued and Arevalo was believed to have landed in Guatemala secretly. However, Sunday was the announced arrival of the ex-president and demonstrations of arevalistas and anto-arevalistas were planned to greet him with cheers and boos. Bloodshed, possible revolution, was certain.

With Idigoras' announced state of siege, all political demonstrations were outlawed because of a law which was in effect that prohibited a crowd of more than three to accumulate with penalty being a bullet or jail.

Tension was really in the air. Even I, an "Ugly American", could feel the mounting crisis.

Sunday came, and it was announced that the army under Col. Enrique Leralta Azuidia had taken over the government, canceled the validity of the constitution, dismissed the congress, and sent patrols of soldiers all over the town in full combat gear, rifles, machine guns, etc.

Idigoras took his stolen millions of quetzales (dollars) and fled to Nicaragua at the request of the army. He seemed to be fairly pleased with the whole new arrangement. I would, too, if I were he with all those millions, and retired to boot.

Right now the curfew has been lifted, tension seemingly eased, bombings stopped (for a while), and patrols still wandering through the city. I'm no longer searched when I mail my letters although guards are still standing by. Well, enough of this, Buy my book.

The food down here is good and nourishing. I love it. Consisting mostly of beans (black) and rice, with a hard French bread served at every meal. Water is purified and drinkable throughout most parts of the city. Outside, watch your step. Beef and chicken are common, but little fresh fish is served. All kinds of fruits. You-name-it, we-got-it, and more!

There's tremendous contrast in this country in everything. The richest rich are here in the city along with the poorest poor. There's an in-between too, but tends more towards poor.

I've traveled to the ancient Mayan city of Tikal in the jungles of the Peten region, accesible only by air, it was fantastic.

I've made it to Quetzaltenango, second largest city, and watched religious processions there during Semana Santa, as well as in G.C. (Guatemala City)

I've climbed a volcano that erupted just two years ago and is still smaking at the top (a bad habit). It was the most exhausting hike I ever took. I sat in the vent where millions of tons of lava just two years ago poured over the valley below for miles and miles. I climbed down the mountain only for sheer desire to taste some cherry soda, or anything wet. But it was great and I'm going to do it again this week.

I could go on for days but I'm going to close with this last item of news. The frisbee has been introduced to Guatemala—(by me). I bought one down here after scouring the whole city for one. They found a few in the attic of a store and I started to show them all how. Now, there must be at least 15 in my neighborhood and others have been sold. They love it. While it's not the national sport as of yet, it's certainly the fastest growing unofficially (from 0 to about 25 in two weeks) not bad?

I can now say I speak Spanish although not well. However, adequately. Of this I'm grateful. Adios viejo.

MUSIC

Gutnikov

On Sunday night, a small segment of the Syracuse population was introduced to the winner of the 1962 International Tchaikovsky Competition. Lincoln Auditorium was the scene as Boris Gutnikov demonstrated incredible virutosity and just as incredible artistry in his rendition of Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto in E minor.

The man's self-assurance was apparent from the movement he came on stage. When he began playing, his involvement with the music was highly emotional and unashamedly so. This is no doubt characteristic of the Russian temperament, and though as Americans we are often inclined to be cynical and clinical, one would not have been aware of emotional or political bondaries while listening to the reaction of the audience.

Standing ovation was accorded the artist after he had played his single encore, a piece requiring tremendous skill which was performed with a clearness of articulation and accuracy of intonation which belied the breakneck speed and profusion of multiple stops.

Gutnikov's delicate treatment of phrasing and dynamics brought the concerto to its rightful place in the romantic era, ranking in intensity of emotion and with the more obviously dramatic works under that classification.

The rest of the concert could not help but be an anticlimax to a performance of such depth and polish. Though in terms of what the orchestra has done to date, this was probably one of the Syracuse Symphony better efforts.

In the opening "Invocation and Dance" by Paul Creston, the brass, for which Mr. Creston has a special affinity, showed a brilliant and organized sound, a marked improvement over earlier efforts. With this as a basis, the composition was performed very excitingly and with great rhythmic intensity.

After intermission, the orchestra performed the "Nocturnes" by Debussy and Brahm's Third Symphony. The latter was a little muddy in its entrances and choppy in its phrasing.

It is shameful that the attendance of a concert centering about as fine an artist as Mr. Gutnikov, appeared to be well under half the capacity of the hall.

UP IN THE AIR

Femmes On the Air

By Peter Moller

Mary Jane Smith could type, and when necessary she wrote good continuity. Mary Jane had a pleasant personality. She knew more about the Cuban crisis than any of the newsmen, and could say Camargo Guarnieri without faltering. But they wouldn't let Miss Smith announce, read news, or do anything but type on occasional business letters to the FCC. Why?

"The female voice does not command authority and respect," argued one broadcaster; "Our listeners would be shocked to hear a female voice,' 'argued another. And so Mary Jane Smith got tired of writing and typing and being pleasant, and she gave up broadcasting and got married.

Surely its enough to turn any young lady away from broadcasting in dismay. American radio and television, fearful of two anachronisms—"the female voice does not command authority and resped; our listeners would be shocked to hear a female voice" — stand against the use of female voices for general broadcast time.

But other nations have taken chances with their female talent. Listen to the BBC, the CBC, Radio Moscow, or more regional services such as Radio Rome or the Voice of Israel. Foreign tv puts women to work in front of the camera to introduce and preview the programs of the next hour, and even give news headlines.

How strange that in some of these countries, the woman's position is less sound, less influential than in America And yet the female voice succeeds, if continued use is any indication. There surely must be some pioneers in the American wasteland who will venture into the forests of the female voice.

Yes, there is someone unafraid. Just recently I heard a snappy, refreshing young lady reading a program promotion and station identification for Boston's WGBH.

So girls, don't give up, there may be someway out of the back office yet. Look at Betty Furness and Pauline Frederick; they never gave up Look at Mary Jane Smith . . .who's she? You see, you don't know, because she gave up.

Wait Till Fall For SU 'Hoot,' Producer Says

By JOHN E. GREENWALD
Entertainment Editor

There are only two ways Syracuse Univerity will be able to see themselves on TV via the ABC "Hootenanny at Syracuse."

See the program as part of the "Hootenanny" series next fall when producer Richard Lewine indicated it would be shown; or hope the producer of the Syracuse "hoot", SU grad Gil Cates, can get a film of the show, which was taped here last November, sent to SU.

In either case the chances are we won't see the program till next fall, Cates confined in an interview after showing his award winning short, "The Painting" Friday.

Cates is currently executive producer of NBC's "International Showtime." He spoke to students at the Coronet Theater.

Cates discussed the "hoot", the current producer's decision to ban alleged left wing singers Pete Seeger and the Weavers; and TV producing and movie making. Cates was invited to Syracuse by G F Reidenbaugh, acting chairman of the drama department.

"If I was running the show," Cates said sarcastically, "I'd put the Weavers on the last program, in the unsponsored quarter hour. This way I could say I had them on and the advertisers wouldn't get upset."

Cates felt that advertiser pressure was the reason performers were banned from programs. "The producers should decide who he wants on," Cates asserted.

He termed advertiser and agency fear of audience reprisals "unfortunate."

Cates expressed general satisfaction with his SU education. The "intrigues" of the drama department gave him great experience in handling similiar problems in television.

The drama students in the audience laughed knowingly when Cates mentioned rivalries over actor and director assignments. "Those minor intrigues prepared me more than anything else I might have learned," he said.

Cates alse expressed appreciation for the classical and arts background he received from the drama department he would not have gotten had he concentrated in the radio-television department.

A drama major, radio - TV minor Cates said that department's "business training was without peer." But he hoped it would lay "more stress on dramatic literature and English" as the drama department did.

He decried any rivalry between the departments and their students, noting how much each group can learn from the other.

Summer Reading Course Continues Without Grant

Syracuse University will be the only sponsor for this year's Summer Humanities Reading Program, since the Ford Foundation grant expired last year.

Applications for the program, available in 205 H.B. Crouse Hall, are due May 10. A 1.5 cumulative average is usually required.

Despite the cost of program, the administration will not discontinue it.

The reading program is designed to introduce basic documents of Western thought to social and natural science majors.

Although the course is also open to humanities majors, some of the work covered may be a repetition of work in other courses.

Between the two sessions, one in early June and the other in early September, students must read approximately 30 books and write a 20-page paper.

This summer's program will treat books and articles by Samuel Johnson, Karl Marx, Albert Camus and others.

To supplement the readings there will be two films, "Picasso" and Moliere's "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme" and recordings of music by Beethoven, Dvork and Stravinski.

Tuition for the seven-credit hour course is $250.

Students participating in the campus live and eat in the same dormitory. Professors also eat lunch with the students.

Although program administrators realize the course cannot possibly cover all important Western books, they hope to develop enough interest in the humanities so that students will do more outside reading.

Last year's summer reading programs in the social sciences and physical sciences were discontinued because of lack of student interest.

Since then, several petitions circulated around Day. One stated that the girls were against the innovation and could not see its value. Day 5 began a petition requesting that Day residents wishing to participate in the program should receive priority over the rest of the campus. This plan has been accepted.

Originally, it was hoped that all eight floors of Day Hall would be integrated next semester. On the basis of the uppercass interest shown, it was decided to limit it to two floors at first to test the program.

Proximity

Advantages and disadvantages of the plan were discussed at Day's Thursday night meeting. It was mentioned that upperclassmen by being in such close proximity could provide leadership and good exampes for frosh coeds.

One of the possibe probems caused by integrated floors is dirty sorority rushing. It was suggested that Panhellenic Council might revise rushing rules which include a silence period between Greeks women and freshmen.

Jean Crawford, director of women's housing, said," I think this is a beginning.. I feel that it's important for all the classes to live together. Because of the past tradition at Syracuse, we are not going to accomplish this overnight."

More in Future

She added that she hoped in the future, integration would be possible on more floors and in more dormitories on campus..

Dean Marjorie C. Smith said, "I think it's an excellent idea. I'd like to see the whole building (Day Hall) integrated by 1964.."

She described the experiment as "trying to build a nucleus that cares." She said that upperclass loyalty and devotion to a dormitory could be strengthened with each incoming class. "You build tradition that way," she stated.

Lund and Cornelie will be available to women for the first time in several years.

The Ambassador will again be open to sophomore, junior, and senior women, Miss Crawford announced.

Sherbrooke Apartments across from the Ambassador, will also house sophomores, juniors and seniors. Miss Crawford said that a group may apply for an apartment and the girl with the lowest number can bring in the whole group.

Graduate students have occupied the Sherbrooke for several years. They will be given other housing opportunities, Miss Crawford said.

There were 60 applications for women's co-ops Haft and Peck for next semester, according to Miss Crawford. She was pleased that the staff could be "more selective" in choosing the 45 occupants. Residents are chosen on the basis of financial need, academic average and citizenship.

Infirmary Plans Include 90 Beds

Facilities for 90 bed patients, an out-patient clinic, hospital dietary equipment and consultative and examining rooms will me included in the proposed Student Health Service.

The SU Parents' Association has been riasing funds for the infirmary since 1958. According to Dr. Allan C. Best, advisor to the Parents' Fund, gifts from that organization are expected to be matched two to one by a single donor.

At present, the donor's name cannot be released.

Goal for the Parents' Fund is $350,000. Theodore Pierson, national chairman of the parents' drive, said that $125,000 had been raised by last fall.

Since then. 1,075 contributions and pledges, totaling nearly $30,000, have been received. Pierson hopes that the remaining $195,000 will be raised this year.

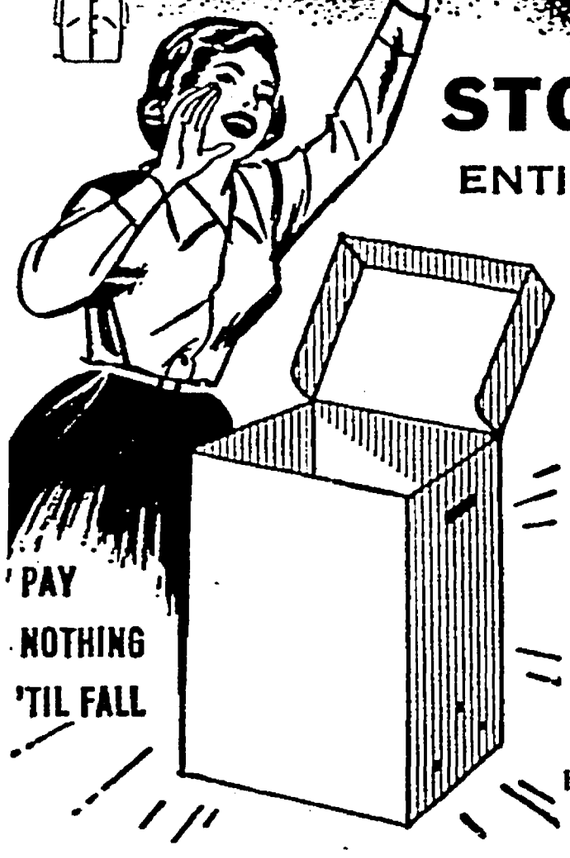
Area fund campaigns have been organized throughout New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New England.

Total cost of the infirmary will be about one million dollars.

The present infirmary, quartered in three houses built in the 1880's, was converted to a health center in 1923. Designed to provide for student enrollments of the 1920's, it is termed "inadequate" for the present 12,000 university population.

Student Health Service now treats 40,000 out-patients and 1,600 bed patients yearly.

Present plans call for a two story center, possibly at the present location on Waverly Avenue. The infirmary may be included in a wing of the Rehabilitation Center, part of University Hospital on University Avenue.



Included will be x-ray facilities, a pharmacy, clinical laboratory, an emergency room for minor surgery and orhtopedics, and multi-purpose rooms for classes. conferences and staff meetings.

A U.S. Department of Agriculture study stated: "Newspapers are the best medium for food advertising and for marketing information on food. The printed word can be read, reread, clipped and filed."

Students Picket Downtown Saturday

Green and Newberry Stores, Birmingham, Ala., branches of these chains refuse to serve Negroes at lunch counters.

Everett Makinen, Syracuse CORE president and a Hill graduate student, estimated 60 or 70 per cent of the Saturday marchers were students..

Dr. George Wiley, assistant professor of chemistry on the Hill, distributed CORE leaflets in front of the store.

He said the picketers had told the manager of the local Woolworth's they would not carry signs directly urging people to boycott the store if he would "urge the national chain to pressure the Southern store."

The manager refused. He told the Daily Orange he "did not want to get involved."

As a result, some signs urged bypassers, "Do Not Buy in Woolworth's." Others said simply," Barger-Bias Cannot be Tolerated" or "North - South: One Nation, One Citizenship."

Comments of passers-by on the picketing varied:

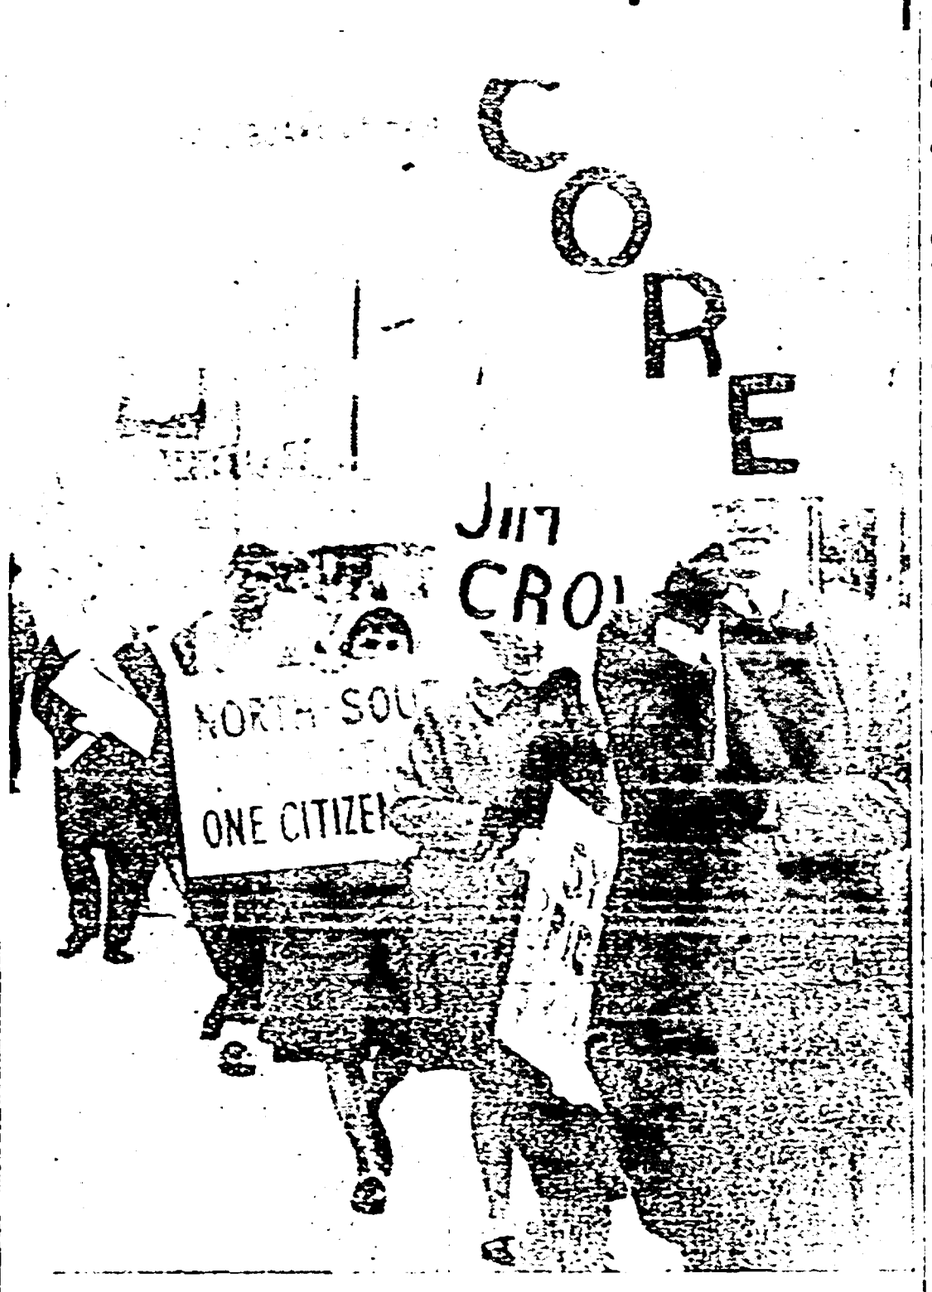
"I eat here because I like the lemonade" — A Negro boy at the Woolworth's lunch counter.

"More people are going into store because the picketing attracts a crowd."—a high school freshman.

"There's enough people on the sidewalk. Pickets never accomplish anything." — a Hill freshman in forestry.

"This is a far cry from Birmingham."—an elderly woman going into the store.

"What I want to know is who Jim Crow is."—a teenage boy.



The picketers were a mixed group. An IUE trustee passed out leaflets, saying "Won't you have one of our leaflets, please," to everyone who passed.

A Hill graduate student in social work wheeled his son in a baby carriage. On the stroller was a sign which read "Equal Opportunity for All Citizens."

Another SU graduate student commented, "It feels great to be in a picket line again."

Hill students have not been involved in picketing since the march against the Savoy Apartments in November.

While saiesladies in Woolworth's reported business as usual, Dr. Wiley noted, "This does have a significant effect on the national chain. We're not trying to hurt this branch, but sympathy pickets were effective before, we're renewing our effort."

SIDEWALK PROTEST—about half of the Woolworth's picketers Saturdayy, some of whom are seen here, were Hill students.

He will also be in charge of doctoral candidates in the new area of information science and communication management.

We designed two new cars—and built a lot of our record-setting Avanti into them: supercharged R2 engines... heavy duty springs and shock absorbers, plus anti-sway bars, front and rear ...trac rods, rear...racing type disc brakes, the safest known and ours alone.

We named them R2 Super Lark and R2 Super Hawk and had Andy Granatelli take them out to the infamous Bonneville Salt Flats for final performance and endurance tests.

We could scarcely believe the results, but the official U.S. Auto Club timers confirmed them: R2 Super Lark—132 mph! R2 Super Hawk—140 mph! Two-way averages—under the most punishing weather and surface conditions. That kind of performance, combined with their gentle 'round-town manners, told us these cars were ready. R2 Super Lark and R2 Super Hawk are now available on special order at your Studebaker dealer's.

Flash: front seat safety belts now come factory-installed on every car—another advance from Studebaker.

Pledge Prank Debate: Amusing or Destructive?

By MARILYN GREENE

Fraternity pledge pranks are controversial campus activities. Even brothers and pledges do not agree on their meaning.

The mischief pledges traditionally create often appears as the manifestation of pent-up revenge for fraternity brothers.

Occasionally the pranks are actually destructive; while at other times they are original and amusing. It all depends on whom you ask.

4 a.m. Prank

Douglas Grant, a Pi Kappa Alpha pledge, said that he and his pledge brothers at 4 a.m., piled kitchen furniture, pots and pans, canned goods and dishes on the stairway to the basement. Then they assembled at the foot of the stairs and loudly sang a song they had been told to learn.

When the brothers awoke and came downstairs they found a "wall of green chairs in front of the main door," Grant said, and the living room furniture turned upside down.

Before they could reach the basement and the pledges, the brothers had to remove a layer of plates from each step. "They told us later we should have filled them with water," said Grant, "But we didn't think of that."

Retaliation

The main idea was to inflict as many annoyances as possible at one time, Grant said.

PiKA brothers retaliated by firing questions at the pledges in a "lineup" for 90 minutes. If a pledge was unable to answer a question, he had to do pushups.

The Sigma Alpha Mu house became a temporary habitat for roosters, said Jerry Rehard, a pledge.

Five roosters were placed in each of the two dormitories. When some flew to top bunks and refused to come down, displaced brothers slept elsewhere.

Staircase Down

The 16 Sammy pedges entered the house in the midde of the night, took down an entire staircase and moved the dismantled sections into the living room. After the brothers used a ladder to get downstairs, the pledges reconstructed the steps and had to sleep on them the following night.

Another Sammy returned to Syracuse one Sunday from his home in Missouri with two unexpected riders. The two were brothers who had been kidnaped Friday by pledges, and sent to Missouri with one-way tickets. As punishment the brothers sent 12 pledges, in pairs, to unspecified destinations.

Unlicensed Cars

Beta Sigma Rho pledges went to their house on a weekend and removed the license plates from the cars parked outside.

Another time the pledges succeeded in switching the salt and sugar without getting caught. The prank was not discovered until the fraternity's cook had ruined an entire meal.

They also carried mattresses from the upper floor to the lawn, where they went to work on the bedding with pickle juice, mayonnaise and other condiments.

Without Clothes

Pledges do not often go without punishment for pranks, and some of Beta Sigma Rho's received theirs when they were left in the men's room of a supermarket—without clothes.

The pledge master at Phi Kappa Psi said that pledges there collected the lightbulbs from throughout the house and strung them up with the brothers' shoelaces.

Their only penalty for this and for freezing the house silverware in buckets of water was a session of calisthenics.

"We've had some wild pranks," said a Zeta Beta Tau, "but I'd prefer not to tell you about them."

Caught

The pledges of Sigma Nu chose the wrong night to try their pranks. They were caught by two brothers who were staying up all night. They finally succeeded in stealing silverware and kidnapping brothers.

"We'll go along with them," said a Sigma Nu brothers, "as long as they aren't destructive."

Psi Upsilon's pledge class planned some pranks, but never carried them through. "We don't see any reason to do that sort of thing," commended one of the pledges.

Explosions

The Tau Epsilon Phi pledge class bore firecrackers, sulphur bombs, molasses and bags of flour to their house and caused mass confusion with them. "Everything went off," reported a pledge, "and we almost killed the whole brotherhood."

The sulphur bombs were set off in the sacks of flour, while the pledges dribbled a trail of molasses down the staircase as they left.

The brothers climbed a barricade of furniture and were drenched with water before they found the pledges. However, said one pledge, the brothers encourage pranks "to promote unity within the pledge class."

Bernie Buettner, Phi Delta Theta pledgemaster, suggested the serious aspects of such performances. It reminds the pledges that they are not yet brothers, he said, and the pledges become better acquainted and more unified in planning and executing them.

Wilbur's poetry collection, "Things of this World," published in 1956, received the Pultizer Prize, the National Book Award and the Edna St. Vincent Millay Memorial Prize the following year.

"Advice to a Prophet and Other Poems," his fourth poetry collection, won the first Melville Cane award presented by the Poetry Society of America in 1962.

A graduate of Amherst College, Wilbur received his master's from Harvard University and taught at Harvard, Wellesley College and Wesleyan University.

"The Beautiful Changes and Other Poems" was published in 1947, followed by "Ceremony" in 1950. This volume won the Harriet Monroe and Oscar Blumenthal poetry prizes awarded by Poetry magazine.

A Guggenheim Fellow in 1952, he has also won a Prix de Rome Fellowship of the American Academy of Arts and Letters, a 1959 Boston Arts Festival award and, in 1960, a Ford Foundation award.

Winner of the Cannes Film Festival and San Francisco Film Festival awards, "Ballad of a Soldier" will be shown at 8 p.m. today, also in Gifford.

Fred Demarest, newly named head of the photography department, will introduce the movie.

"Ballad of a Soldier," produced in 1960 and directed by Greigori Chaukhari, was photographed by Vladimir Nikolayev and Era Saveleva.

On display in conjunction with the Festival are architecture exhibits in the campus open-air pavilion and on the fourth floor of Slocum Hall; art, Lowe Art Center, third floor of Smith Hall and Booth, Shaw and Sadler Dormitory Lounges; and student photography in the Journalism Center.

Lacrosse Team Wins Home Debut

JOHN MACKEY CHARGES DOWN FIELD cradling the ball with Hobart men in close pursuit.. John scored his first goal Saturday as Syracuse routed Hobart 15-7 in a game played at Manley Field. Big number 88 held Hobart scoring gun Larry Slattery well below his four goal a game average. Slattery did not score until late in the final quarter. Syracuse's record now stands at 2-1, with wins over Hobart and Cortland and a loss to Johns Hopkins.

BY HOWIE SCHNEIDER

Neither a flimsy Hobart defense nor chilly 50-mile an hour winds could cool Ron (boom-boom) Fraser's hot hand Saturday. The sophomore sensation pumped in seven goals, and had seven assists, to pace coach Roy Simmons' lacrosse squad to a lopsided 15-7 victory over Hobart, before 1000 fans, at a muddy Manley Field.

The victory was the second in a row for the Orange, and boosted their season mark to 2-1. Previously the squad lost to highly ranked John Hopkins, and trounced Cortland State. The Statesmen were not to break into the win column for the twelfth consecutive year against SU. They stand at 3-2 on the year.

Pappas, Rennie Score

Rookie Tom Rennie and junior Joohn Pappas adequately helped Fraser in the Orange 15 goal offensive blitz. Rennie, a sophomore attackman from Brooklyn, scored four goals. Pappas, with two tallies and four important assists, also played an outstanding game.

Another key factor in the Syracuse victory was a sparkling defensive effort. Goalie Pete Coe was superb in the net. John Mackey (still number 88 for you football fans) proved he could throw his weight around pretty well even without shoulder pads. Big John did a good job in checking Hobart's one man demolition squad, Larry Slattery. Slattery, who came into the contest averaging four scores a game, was held scoreless until late in the final period.

Syracuse scored first, and never lost the lead. Dave Stringer chucked in the initial tally. However, Statesman Bill Ferris evened the score after 5:45 in the first quarter.

Fraser Stars

Fraser found the mark midway in the first period and threw in two quick goals to give the Orange a 3-1 lead. After Ferris scored again, Pappas and Fraser added one a piece to give coach Simmons' forces a comfortable 5-2 lead at the end of the first quarter.

The stickmen took the aggressive in the second quarter, while the defensive unit held the opposition scoreless. Rennie broke loose for three consecutive goals, and at the half it was Syracuse 8, Hobart 2.

Buzz DeFelice opened the second half scoring for the visitors. The home team quickly counter attacked and outscored the Statesmen 6-2 in the third quarter. Mackey, playing midfield, scored his first goal of the year from 25 feet out. Pappas scored his second tally, Rennie his fourth, and Fraser his fourth, fifth, and sixth in the period.

In the last fifteen minutes of play, Simmons substituted freely. Slattery broke loose for two goals, and DeFelice scored his second mark o fthe game. Fraser netted his seventh goal of the contest.

Top Scorer

Fraser's seven tallies gives him the team scoring lead, with 17 goals in three games. The squad, as a whole, has scored 34 times and has allowed the opposition 21 scores.

The Orangemen have two games coming up this week. Tuesday the squad visit's Clarkson Tech, and next Saturday afternoon they host Colgate at Manley Field.

Grid Injuries Beset Hill

Four Orange gridders were hurt, some played as sloppily as the field was and a few were impressive, as Coach Ben Schwartzwalder put the team through a two hour scrimmage at Collendale Saturday..

Quarterback Walley Mahle was forced to the sidelines with a minor back injury early in the drill.

Rookie safety-man Hal Ronney suffered a possible thumb fracture. Mike Koski also suffered a slight back injury. Koski has been replacing Bill Schoonover who has not been taking part in spring drills.

"Little" Gus Giardi was also shaken up in the rugged drill after bowling over the likes of Jim Nance and Nat Duckett.

Billy Hunter impressed observers while running with both the first and second units at left half.. Jim Nance as usual was very impressive at the fullback slot. Ed Conti also looked good on defense.

Missing yesterdays drill in addition to Schoonover were Jerry Everling, Jim Gaskins, Ted Allen and Charles Brown all out with injuries.

Orangemen Drop Doubleheader At Pittsburgh by 9-4, 2-1 Scores

The Syracuse University baseball team dropped a doubleheader to the University of Pittsburgh by 9-4 and 2-1 scores at Pittsburgh Saturday.

The Panthers jumped on starting pitching Bob Lelli for three runs in the first inning and exploded for five in the third to take an 8-0 lead and coast home for the victory.

Phil Schoff relieved Lelli in the fatal third frame after the damage had been done. Schoff held Pitt to one run in going the rest of the way while registering eight strikeouts.

One Run Loss

In the second game Syracuse pitcher Ed Barnowski lost another one run decision while going the route and striking out ten. Barnowski gave up a base loaded single to Fred Mazurek in the fourth inning..

Syracuse scored once in the sixth and had the bases loaded in the seventh and final frame, but was unable to score as Pitt hurler John Carlisle fanned the next two Orange batters. Carlsile had 11 strikeouts in winning the pitching duel with Barnowski.

In he opener Jim Sylvis was the winning pitcher for Pittsburgh going the nine inning route. Lelli was the loser to give him a 1-1 record. Barnowski is 1-2 with his otner loss 1-0 to Navy.

Sylvis' two run triple in the big Pitt third was the big blow for the Panthers along with a threerun triple by Corky Cuthbert.

The Orangemen outhit Pitt in the opener with ten hits to nine for Pitt. Syracuse tallied single runs in the fourth, fifth, seventh and nineth innings.

Both clubs had four hits in the 2-1 second game. The two Pitt runs came in the fourth frame.

The next game for the Orangemen is Wednesday at Cornell. They play at Clarkson Saturday and return home April 27 at to host Colgate at Lew Carr Field.

Syracuse has a 3-4 season record. The doubleheader opened the season for Pittsburgh.

Honors Convo to Hear 'What Can We Do?'

A woman who has attained national prominence for work in public education and problems of youth will deliver the main address at Syracuse University's 1963 Honors Convocation beginning at 8 p.m. today in Hendricks Chapel.

The speaker is author and lecturer Mrs. Agnes E. Meyer, wife of the late Eugene Meyer who was owner and publisher of the Washington Post and Times Herald newspapers. Her topic is "What Can We Do?"

All students are welcome to attend the convocation, including those who did not receive invitations. For the first time, parents of area dean's list students have been invited to the convocation, according to Keith J. Kennedy, public affairs associate.

The occasion honors the academic excellence of the top two men and women in each of the four undergraduate classes at SU, including the 1963 valedictorian and salutatorian, whose names will be announced by Chancellor William P. Tolley.

MRS. AGNES E. MEYER

Also to be honored are three students who have achieved academic excellence in architecture, art and music, and a freshman, a sophomore, a junior and a senior selected for library awards.

Mrs. Meyer has received nationwide publicity in recent weeks for her work as organizer and chairman of the newly formed National Committee for Support of the Public Schools which held its initial meeting in Washington, D.C., April 7-9.

Financial Aid

The new non-partisan group seeks to stimulate financial support for the public schools at all levels of government — local, state and federal. Membership includes two former college presidents, Dr. James Bryant Conant of Harvard and Dr. Harold Taylor of Sarah Lawrence. Conference speakers included governors of three states and two members of the cabinet.

A graduate of Barnard College, Mrs. Meyer also studied at the Sorbonne in Paris and at Columbia University. She was awarded a doctor of laws degree by Syracuse University in 1954 and holds honoraries from a dozen other institutions including Columbia, Russell Sage, Oberlin, Mills and the University of Rochester.

Mrs. Meyer has written many books and articles in the fields of education and human rights and is author of a volume on Chinese painting for which she studied the Chinese language.

Hill's Student Poets Take Stage Today

POET RICHARD WILBUR, left, greets THOMAS JOHN CARLISLE, minister and amateur poet of Watertown, who came to Syracuse Monday to hear the award-winning poet recite some of his works. PHILIP BOOTH of the English department looks on with MRS. CARLISLE.

Four young student poets and a jazz workshop band contribute their talents today to the Hill's current Festival of the Arts.

Reading their own works at 4 p.m. in Kittredge Auditorium, Huntington B. Crouse Hall, will be Peter Maloney, senior drama major; Joe McDonald, junior English major; Jay Zelermyer, junior creative writing major; and James Gorney, senior philosophy major.

All four have studied with SU's Poet-in-Residence Philip Booth. Maloney is a campus favorite in drama department productions. Gorney is editor of the Syracuse '10', Hill literary magazine.

At noon today the main quadrangle will be enlivened with the School of Music's Jazz Workshop "Big Band," directed by George Andrews on the HBC patio.

Passers-by were treated to a similar concert Monday, by the School's woodwind ensemble.

'Tartuffe' In Couplets

A packed Gifford Auditorium heard the tall, mellow-voiced Pulitzer Prize winning poet Richard Wilbur read from his works Monday afternoon.

Co-sponsored by the Festival of the Arts and the Visiting Writers Series, Wilbur read for as "long as man is meant to listen to peotry" about an hour.

About a third of that time was devoted to Wilbur's translation of Moliere's "Tartuffe." The translation is a bit ususual as it is in rhymed couplets.

Wilbur's poems evidence a sense of humor and inclination towards the pun. In "For the New Railway Station in Rome" Wilbur expressed satisfaction in putting "cantilever" and "reinforced concrete" in the same line of poetry.

He described his poem "She" as covering the "aspects of

Photographer to Talk On Amazon Indians

Dan Owen, professional commercial photographer, will speak on "Primitive Indians of the Amazon River Basin" at 8 p.m. today in Sadler Hall main lounge.

He will also give a showing of his color slides of South America. Relics and artifacts of the Amazon will also be on display.

The University Honors Honors

Tonight the university turns in tribute to the raison d'etre of higher education—the students who have attained honors in academic achievement.

For, although the football team brings glory and press clippings and the faculty brings government grants, it is, in the final analysis, the achievement of the student that determines the value of the university.

So once a year the wheels stop turning and the administration focuses its attention on the small core of students who have given back something to the university. These are the students who have worked for excellence and have attained the heights of collegiate activity.

They will be recognized for the efforts tonight by a relatively small number (the chapel won't be filled) but though they may be forgotten by most of their colleagues in a day, these students are the cream of the crop at Syracuse.

Some may laugh and others may shrug their shoulders when you tell them that the 16 persons who were tapped by Phi Beta Kappa are really more outstanding than an all star halfback. But it is true and if people laugh, the laugh is little more than an indictment on the system that permits such a statement to sound so ridiculous.

The Repairmen

That mysterious crew which appears on campus each year at this time is back. We refer to the men with the jack hammers and tar who are presently busy tearing up the road near the main entrance to campus.

Each year this multitude of workers descends on the quad and every year they tear holes in seemingly good pavement. While this is suspicious enough, we may note that there are other roads on campus that really need fixing but never get touched.

Anyone who parks in the area of the prefabs behind the chapel will tell you the crew that digs up the smooth parts of the campus roads would seem more necessary if they worked where the work was needed.

We hope that within five years someone will question the yearly coming of these men. At least they should use faulty material so that it would deteriorate in the course of a year and they wouldn't look so conspicuous digging holes in smooth pavement.

ALTERNATIVES

Procrustus & the Picket Line

By Ron Corwin

"You know and I know that the country is celebrating one hundred years of freedom one hundred years too soon."

James Baldwin in A Letter to My Nephew

Procrustus was a Greek mythological character who tied people to an iron couch. To make them fit his couch he lopped off the legs of those who were too tall and stretched the legs of those who were too short. In the end everyone fit the couch.

Hence the concept of a Procrustean argument: one which tailors the facts to fit the theory rather than altering the theory to account for the facts.

Newspaper stories are often Procrustean. They do not rely on the reader's ability to handle the facts as they are. Instead they reflect a certain reporter's or editor's point of view about what occurred at a particular time in a particular location.

The danger of this kind of reporting is that most people assume what they read in a news story is fact.

They hope that points of view are confined to editorials and columns. That is what editorials and columns are for.

Yesterday's Daily Orange NEWS story on the picket in downtown Syracuse is an example of Procrustean reporting, not because what was said was untrue but because what was reported was, at best, half of the story.

What follows is perhaps the other half. No attempt is being made to present the whole picture of what occurred. It is hoped that between this column (which is understood to be a point of view) and yesterday's DO story, a more inclusive and comprehensive picture of what occurred can be shown.

By definition the combination of the two, this column and yesterday's story, is closer to reality than either one taken separately.

Q. Where were you between the hours of 1 and 4 p.m. Saturday, April 20, 1963?

A. On Salina Street, picketing Woolworth's.

Q. Why picket on this particular Saturday?

A. In response to a call by Martin Luther King recently jailed in Birmingham, Alabama, for his desegregation efforts there.

Q. Why Woolworth's?

A. Woolworth's in Syracuse is one store in a nationwide chain which has segregated facilities in the south.

Q. Were there pickets in other cities?

A. Yes. People all over the country were picketing.

Q. So your picket was a sympathy protest for what is going on in Birmingham.

A. It is more than that. We contacted the local manager here in Syracuse and hoped that he would contact his national office and express his concern for the plight of the Negroes in Birmingham.

Q. In other words you planned on support from the local Woolworth's.

A. Yes. We were going to issue a statement in our handout which read: "We are pleased to report that the management of Syracuse Woolworth's has given his moral support to this cause by wiring his national office asking that pressure be exerted on the Birmingham store to desegregate its facilities. We, therefore, do not discourage patronage at this store."

Q. Did you get that support?

A. No.

Q. Why not?

A. The store manager didn't want to "get involved."

Q. Was he acting on his own?

A. Not exactly. He had checked with his superiors in New York City who apparently told him to keep quiet.

Q. What happened then?

A. Syracuse Congress on Racial Equality checked with our office in New York City. They informed us that profits from all Woolworth's stores go into a common pot and that local managers have practically no local autonomy. This means that while they tell Syracuse Woolworth's to keep quiet they can also tell Birmingham Woolworth's to desegregate.

Q. Wait a minute. Are you trying to tell me that this common pool concept means that when I buy a coke at Woolworth's in Syracuse I support segregation in the south?

A. Exactly.

Q. I didn't know that.

A. Most people don't. That's another reason for having the picket. To let people know. The trouble is that you can't picket for everything. A few weeks ago when the shooting, home burnings, and arrest of Negroes was going on in Greenwood, Miss., the story made the front pages of newspapers all over the country. The newspapers in Syracuse handled it casually by burying the story in the back of the paper when they did carry it.

Q. So the picket provides information. Does it help solve the problem?

A. That's a difficult question. I think the answer is yes. First of all, people become informed.

On a more immediate level since the sit-ins and boycotts some Woolworth's have desegregated although not all of them. In 1961, Woolworth's suffered a net loss on a national basis. The boycott's were thought to be an important contributing cause.

Q. Did anything unusual occur on the picket line?

A. No, just the usual.

Q. What's that?

A. Oh, one girl was on the picket line for the first time. She learned something on Saturday. It doesn't take long to get a lot of insight into yourself and the people around you when you're on a picket line.

Another man, a Negro, came up and said that he'd like to help. He was short, had on a gray overcoat, a broad tie, wrinkled trousers and scuffed black shoes. He carried a sign which said, "Your five-and-ten cent in Syracuse supports segregation in Burmingham."

For two hours he marched around the circle, not turning his head and not smiling, just staring ahead of him. He was perhaps the most dignified person on the line. I think he knew better than any of us why we had to march.

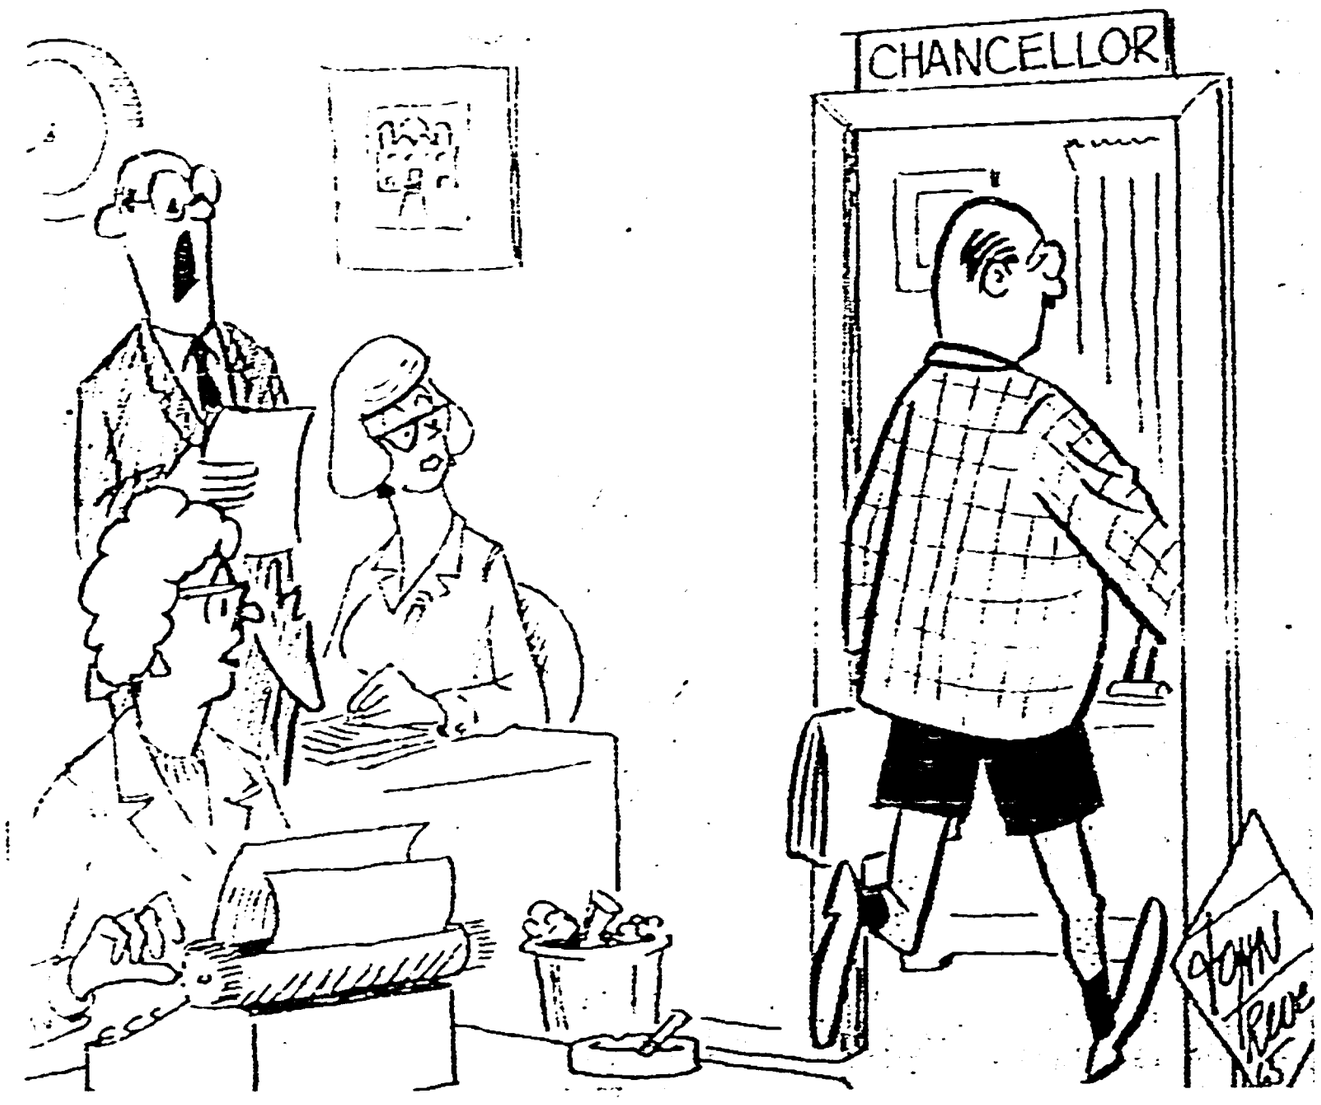
Another man, neatly dressed, with white hair and black glasses saw one of the picketers carrying two signs. He said that he couldn't walk too well (he limped) but he'd like to do his part.

You meet some magnificent people on a picket line.

Two high school boys were the only ones who had any trouble.

Q. Trouble?

A. They got upset when they were called "communists." But they'll get used to it.



Q. Used to it?

A. After you've been on enough picket lines—usually one is enough—you realize that people have to call you something or else they can't avoid what you say. Then you know that there's a lot of work to be done.

Q. Well all-in-all it must make you feel good fighting for equality for all men and stuff like that.

A. Not really. The Emancipation Proclamation was issued in 1863, not 1963, you know.

MUSIC

University Singers

The Syracuse Festival of the Arts certainly got off on the right foot Sunday night with a performance of Carl Orff's "Catulli Carmina" along with a short choral concert.

"Catulli Carmina" comprised the second half of the program and was a most ambitious production in terms of scope. The work is scored for four pianos, xylophones and percussion, not to mention a large chorus. To add to this, the Festival production included a narration by Ray Irwin and choreography by Lorraine Havercroft who danced the part of Catullus.

From a musical standpoint, the addition of a dance performance to the original work is certainly justified. The music is primitive in its repetition and rhythmic intensity, to the point of being ritualistic.

Its success as a musical work of art was correspondingly primitive. Performed well by the chorus as a whole and the two soloists, Paul Dieke and Ellen Slingerland, the feeling created was one of power and drive for the most part.

In contrast to this mood was the sophistication and refinement of the first half of the program. Two newly formed groups, The Syracuse University Singers and The Madrigal Singers, shared honors in this portion with the Hendricks Chapel Choir. These groups were conducted by Earl George who also directed the second half of the concert.

Several things distinguish the two new groups. First they are composed of good voices. Second, due to this, they may number only thirty and still be able to attain a feeling of strength when needed. Finally, they were under the most capable direction of Dr. Earl George, who has the groups thoroughly responsive to his gestures.

The result was artful and artistic as the singers ran the gamut between Lassus and Hindemith, with an "Hosannah to the Son of David" by Dr. George, sung by the Chapel Choir. The first half of the program closed with Arthur Poister leading this same group in a piece by Georg Schumann.

This part of the program in particular, suggested that there is not much better choral music to be heard than there is at Syracuse University.

Indian Dancers Here

Two of India's foremost theatrical artists will visit the campus as part of a national tour on behalf of 20th Century-Fox's new suspense film, "Nine Hours to Rama," which opens at the Paramount Theater May 2.

The two performers are Miss Surya Kumari, star of 20 Indian films and Bali Ram, former court dancer for the king of Nepal, who danced for President Kennedy and for a command performance before the United Nations last year.

The two will appear 4 p.m. Thursday at the Coronet Theater, Drama Building.

Miss Kumari, who served as a special research consultant on "Nine Hours to Rama" started her career in Indian films at the age of nine. She received an "Obie" Award for her off-Broadway appearance in "King of the Dark Chamber."

Miss Kumari and Ram will present authentic Indian music and dances as presented in the film. They will also discuss why the motion picture, which depicts the murder of Mahatma Ghandi, has been banned by the Indian government.

Fox Urges SovietCoexistence

By DANIEL RITEY
Junior Editor

"Our system may fail if we expend huge sums on space at the expense of two-thirds of the unrepresented people of the world," Prof. Byron L. Fox told freshman citizenship sections Monday afternoon in Marshall Auditorium.

"We must resolve the cold war—not try to win it;" Fox went on. "We must coexist and cooperate with the Soviet Union in a reconciliation of all mankind."

The unrepresented people in the space race are the countries that are not active in space exploration, said Fox. "We have a choice in terms of world development verses space development."

It wouldn't be easy to finance both operations, he continued, but unrepresented nations must be attended to "by rechanneling arms money to living condition aims to cut down on the population explosion."

Models

Prof. Fox noted the need for "models" to plan the requirements for the future.

One model is the present nation-state system where the big powers compete in space. "This system emphasizes the powerful stimulus of military developments in space," he noted.

The second model system is the universal system with its world government and UN emphasis. This would be a warless society with weapons for internal security only.

Fox added that in ancient times, world states—those that included all the people and territory known at the time—had existed but had collapsed when resisting changes.

"History is a succession of social systems," the sociology professor went on, "our problem is how to get a universal system from our present one."

"We are definitely at the end of an epoch and not to recognize this unrealistic." People are reluctant to realize this ending, but it should also be noted that projections on the future must be made on the basis of a new system net from the old one, he concluded.

women, from Eve to the present, in just a few lines."

Besides writing the lyrics for Leonard Bernstein's music for "Candide," Wilbur has written four volumes of poetry that have won the National Book Award, the Edna St. Vincent Millay Memorial Prize, in addition to the Pulitzer Prize.

Much of Wilbur's poetry involves descriptions of everyday objects as laundry, trash cans, and commuters on suburban trains.

"Let there be nothing on Earth but laundry," Wilbur says in his poem "Love Calls Us to the Things of This World." "In the Smoking Car" describes a sleepy commuter dreaming about dancing girls and faraway islands. "Poor sweet, he did his best," Wilbur read, later reciting, "failure, the longed for valley, takes him in."

Only once did Wilbur explicity offer any of his personal philosophy. In talking about his poem "The Ceremony," Wilbur said he feels it is "natural for man to be artificial." When man tries to be natural, he continued, he becomes artificial.

Stickmen Seek Third

New Injuries Plague Hill; Switches Seen

Syracuse University's varsity lacrosse team, minus two starters, will seek its third win in a row this afternoon against Clarkson at Potsdam.

Attackman Tom Rennie and midfielder Bill Woramuth will miss the Clarkson contest. Rennie suffered a kidney injury in the first half of the Hobart game and will be out indefinitely. Woramuth injured his Achilles Tendon and will probably be available for the Yale game.

These two join attackmen Bill Crathers who has been out for more than a week. Coach Roy Simmons said he will try several men at the attack position to fill the void caused by Rennie and Crathers.

Star midfielder John Pappas, who was an attackman last year, will move into the front line along with midman Tom Kennedy.

Syracuse now has a 2-1 record, losing a 10-7 opener to Johns Hopkins, before defeating Cortland State 12-4, and Hobart, 15-7. Clarkson will be making its first debut. Coach John Hantz's lacrosse men have held three opponents scoreless, dropping two while winning one.

Simmons will rely on defense against Clarkson. "With Coe in the goal, and Sabetto, Reese and Ringsdorf on defense, we should be in fair shape.

"John Mackey's improving in the midfield and we have a couple of young lad we will try out in the attack position."

Simmons said he will keep injured men out of action today and "some show for the Yale game."

SYRACUSE'S LEADING lacrosse scorer RON FRASER works out before today's tilt with Clarkson Tech. The soph attackman has tallied 17 goals in the first three Orange contests.

DAILY ORANGE PINCH-HITTER

Break up the Mets. That's what they're saying in the National League cities after the heroic weekend in which the patsies of the Senior Circuit turned tiger and erupted to shatter a club record.

That's right. The scattered refuge of ancient glory and scared high school kids who are taking post graduate courses with the Ole Perfessor, Sir Casey Stengel, swept a four-game series from the Milwaukee Braves, coming from behind in three of the games to win.

The heroes were symbolic of the Mets ball club. One game it was 18-year-old Ed Kranepool, so green he was switched to first base because he was blending with the grass in the outfield. The hero of game number four was none other than the Duke of Destruction (in his younger days) Edwin Snider. Then there were Hunt and Hickman.

Now the skies are blue, the grass is green and birds sing sweet songs of happiness and optimism in the sun-drenched warmth of Coogan's Bluff. The Polo Grounds has found out once more that the home team can win and New Yorkers look forward to a subway series.

There is really no fitting climax to this story because the season has just begun. The Mets have broken a record (for them) and all the sky is filled with pie.

We can only close by guessing what Casey must have said to his club in the dressing room Sunday. It probably sounded something like this:

"Well, kids and older players, we finally showed the pencil men that we can be more mathematical than just two or three in a row except if it is in the loss column. I know the young feller at first must be happy since it was a good showing by all of us in getting where we could have been before if the breaks were with us and some of the other clubs with their young players. Old feller, you hit a nice one. Take a shower. Tomorrow we try for a handful."

IFC Mulls Chaperone Elimination

The Hill InterFraternity council will meet 7:30 p.m. today at Kappa Sigma to vote on a resolution to eliminate chaperones from all house social functions.

The recommended policy change, presented by Stephen McClellan (Sigma Nu) places each house "on its honor to uphold the university rules and regulations concerning social functions."

Security Police or the administration would have the authority to spot check these registered parties in order to enforce regulations.

The proposed change would affect weekend house parties, coffees and all other functions held within the fraternity house.

The proposals also suggest that married graduate assistants be added to the list of eligible chaperones to expand the number of people suitable to chaperone. Present policy states that only instructors, assistant, associate and full professors may chaperone.

The chaperone committee has also suggested that a list of all the names, addresses, and phone numbers of those qualified to chaperone be drawn up.

A special meeting of all IFC committee chairmen, and officers is slated at 7 p.m. Thursday in 214 Hall of Languages, President George (Skip) Stanger (Sigma Chi Psi) announced.

IFC judicial board applications for one senior and three junior positions are due Monday to the office of the fraternity administrator or IFC Chief justice Alfred (Win) Whittaker (Lambda Chi Alpha).

Government Applications Thursday

Applications for 15 Joint Student Government positions for 1963-1964 will be accepted through this Thursday according to JSG president, James Morris.

The 15 open positions include: public relations director, student opinion service commissioner, intercollegiate communications commissioner, social - academic - cultural director, social commissioner, academic commissioner, cultural commissioner.

Also: special services director, elections commissioner, Pinebrook Conference chairman, activities, commissioner, adviser to the freshman class, budget director, treasurer and secretary.

Applications should include the applicant's name, campus address, average, activities and ideas concerning the position.

"For the directorship posts previous experience is required," Morris stressed. "Previous experience is preferred for those applying for commissioners."

Interviews of those submitting applications will take place Monday and Tuesday, April 29 and 30.

Morris will announce the appointments at the Joint Student Legislature meeting Wednesday, May 1.

Michael Loos Valedictorian

MRS. AGNES E. MEYER, honors convocation speaker, talks with '63 valedictorian MICHAEL PAUL LOOS.

By CHARLES M. STEINBERG

Michael Paul Loos, a mechanical engineering major, and Nancy Elizabeth Erwin of the College of Home Economics were named valedictorian and salutatorian respectively of the Hill's Class of 1963 Monday night at the ninth annual Honors Convocation.

Vice President for Academic Affairs Frank P. Piskor, who presided, noted that Loos has received only two B grades in an otherwise straight-A four year career.

Loos, originally from Switzerland will actually be completing his course in three years of having taken summer school work.

Miss Erwin, who hails from Bethayres. Pa., graduated in January. She is currently in Seattle, Wash. where she is preparing to enter the Peace Corps.

Mrs. Agnes E. Meyer, noted journalist and liberal spokeswoman, delivered the principal address at the convocation which recognizes student academic achievement.

Mrs. Meyer warned honor students that "achievement is one thing, creativity is different. You musn't let the rat race for marks hide the true love of learning," "You are more tempted to conformity if you let high marks become status symbols."

She warned of a sweeping trend in society towards conformity, bureaucracy and the "organization man." "This trend cannot be reversed," she said. "Technology compels us to become efficient."

Other internal threats to individual liberty, she noted, are discrimination against minority groups, especially the Negro, and the "racial conservative" movement.

"The radical conservatives are a greater threat to freedom than one realizes," Mrs. Meyer said. "They are well-heeled with money and there is no strong liberal movement opposing them. They

Maloney Stars in Goldoni's 'Servant'

Peter Maloney will star in his final major university production, Carlo Goldoni's "A Servant of Two Masters," which opens 8:30 p.m. today at the Coronet Theater, Drama Building.

Directed by Manfred Bormann, this gaily costumed, broadly played, Comedia Del L'Arte comedy features masks, swordfights, three love stories and improvisations.

Maloney a senior, plays Arleccino, a crafty and agile servant who gets intangled with two masters, a number of romantic triangles, waiters, cooks and a charming little maid-servant.

Maloney has a difficult job cut out for him as he is on stage most of time and wears a mask that covers all but his mouth.

Maloney's two masters are Tom McKee and Leslie Meek who, in an effort to find her lover McKee, disguises herself as a man for most of the play.

Also featured in the cast are Ellenjoy Schindler as the maid who falls in love with Arleccino; Esen Wiegand, her lovesick mistress, Stuart Dillon, a crafty merchant; Bruce MacCurdy, Esen's distraught suitor; Richard Folmer, MacCurdy's hot-tempered father; Ken Pearlman, the excitable cook; and Ernest Harada as the confused waiter.

The sets, which will be changed on stage by the cast, were designed by Ann Gibson, while Ruth Meek created all but four of the period costumes. Those four were specially ordered authentic Comedia Del L'Arte costumes.

WILL SHE or won't she marry her handsome young suitor? Only ESEN WIEGAND (center) knows for sure, but BRUCE MACCURDY (right) still keeps on trying. ELLENJOY SCHINDLER (left) and STUART DILLON wait expectantly in this scene from Carlo Goldoni's comedy, "A Servant of Two Masters," which opens tonight for a four day run, as part of the Festival of the Arts, at the Coronet Theater.

You Shouldn't Miss Maloney's Last

There will be a few dry eyes back stage at the Coronet Theater Saturday night. For when the curtain comes down on an evening of fast-paced, slapstick comedy Peter Maloney will have his drama building farewell performance.

Squeezed between the many other events of a busy Festival of the Arts program, Carlo Goldoni's "A Servant for Two Masters" is certainly one of the highlights. Anyone who thinks the 18th century comedy, which opens tonight and runs through Saturday, will be obscure and stodgy, had best think again.

For this is a play which is fast-moving, slapstick and chocked full of pretty girls, handsome men and, of course, Maloney as the clown who has to contend with two masters.

This is a tour de force for Pete, who is on stage almost constantly throughout the performance. That in itself makes the production a must.

For even without the other fine performances by an outstanding cast, the show would be worth three times the price of admission just to see Maloney.

There are few people about whom one can say he has all the talent needed for success. Pete is one of them. All he needs is luck for that one big break.

But now after four years of enchanting and amusing audiences, Pete Maloney takes his final bow. This weekend's production is his last major work at Syracuse.

So if you've never had the pleasure to see Maloney in action, this last chance will be one of the best yet to witness the polished performance of so young an artist.

And if, like us, you have lived through the four years of Maloney at Syracuse, you must go to the Coronet Theater for one final belly laugh, one more night of glee, one last performance of enchantment.

Thanks for everything, Pete. You've brightened our past. For your success in the future, we say to you: "Break a leg."

Lovers' Lane

They tell us the Water Tower, that pinnacle of love, has been populated by more policemen than lovers lately. It seems the bushes crawl with suspicious characters while the parked cars abound with blushing lovers.

With the latest police directive to close Thornden Park at 11 p.m. the problem of muggings may be reduced or else the molesters and baby sitters will have to go on a different work schedule.

LETTERS

Initiations

To the Editor:

Since the Greek Coloring Book and that fine old adolescent tradition, Greek Week, has once again turned our attention to the dismal topic of sororities and fraternities, it seems appropriate in this rather heated atmosphere of debate to examine briefly a heretofore neglected aspect of the Greek system—the sacred, secret, nonsensical institution of initiation.

The fact that the Greek ritual of initiation is such a deep, dark secret, shrouded with mystery and mysticism, is indeed unfortunate. To open these primeval goings on to the general public would undoubtedly provide the campus with the greatest source of humor in collegiate history. On the more serious side, disclosure of the Greek initiation rituals would provide valuable material for many a PhD thesis in the fields of mass psychology and primitive anthropology.

For the readers who have never had the dubious pleasure of witnessing this fantastic spectacle, the initiation takes place annually or semi-annually after pledge training and hell week. (Which is, incidently, the most asinine aspect of the entire Greek System.) At this time the fraternity house is closed off to the public and all sense of reason and proportion and a small band of super mystics (the ritual team) takes over.

They bring forth from hiding a truly incredible collection of sacred lamps, owls, swords, dogs, coffins, snakes, rugs, apes, blankets, rocks, books, pictures, and all of the paraphernalia necessary for the practice of modern collegiate voodoo. The members (those tweedy, sophisticated fellows from last night's cocktail party) then come forth attired in tailor-made sheets, hooded robes, animal skins, etc. and carry on for the next eight or ten hours a carefully arranged and rehearsed candle light spectacle of chanting, moaning, dancing, screaming, and secret door knocking that could only be duplicated in the back country of Haiti.

The poor tired initiate, who is bound, beaten, gagged, blindfolded, stood on his head, shoved from room to room, and stuffed into a phone booth, with or without his clothes, of course thinks he is reliving an Edgar Allen Poe novel. The sororities are no less spectacular

One Syracuse University sorority requires the girls to walks semi-nude around a white rock chanting "It's a good thing! It's a good thing!" It's a good thing the Dean of Women's office doesn't know about such behavior.

After willingly submitting to such an insane ritual, it is indeed difficult to see how the Greeks can sneer, as they often do, at the emotionalism of southern negro Christianity.

Is the fraternity ritual viewed as vaguely ridiculous by most of the veterans of this outlandish orgy? Not by a long shot. James Skillen, for example, sees the fraternity initiation as an experience not unlike the Crucifixion of Christ on the 'Cross. Win Whittaker sees Lambda Chi Alpha and the fraternity as some sort of a cross between a country club and the Catholic Church in which the "sacred" initiation makes all men permanent brothers in the bond. (Rather like a whiskey add, isn't it?)

And permanent it is! Becoming officially detached from this international conspiracy of bigotry and nonsense is, if I may be permitted to speak from experience, no easy matter. My periodic official and unofficial attempts to secure an official statement of expulsion have, to date, all ended in failure.

Perhaps Win Whittaker, that is, "Brother" Win Whittaker, and some of the other more influential members of Lambda Chi Alpha will take the time to contact the Grand High Maharaja on my behalf. At the present rate of progress, I will be eligible for the twenty-five year membership pin before I am officially drummed out.

Goon Squad

To the Editor:

Much credit is deserved by the Goon Squad examiners in their selection of the illustrious future Goons. Those who sat in judgment succeeded in carrying out the age-old tradition of . . . equality?

Yes sir, it's this sort of thing that makes me proud to be a Syracusan. You might say I'm a sorehead of the first degree, but it's odd to note, however, that the same persons are selected time after time. My resentment is shared by many who believe this is not quite compatible with true equality. I'm sure, of course, that the individuals chosen were the "coolest" kids on campus. I'm also sure that no one was picked because of Greek "connections" or by having influential friends!

Yes, it's gratifying to see that the traditional policy of "It's who you know, not what you know" doesn't exist in this the most truly democratic of all institutions—the university!

Once again let me express my sincere gratitude to the "non-partisan" committee in their "non-discriminating" selections.

Pledges

To the Editor:

Before our neighbors start accusing us of subhumanism, I would like to correct some blatant errors in Monday's story about pledge pranks. I am at a loss to understand how Miss Green came up with this information. The only prank that can be truthfully attributed to our pledges is the removing of license plates.

The rest that was attributed to us was certainly not the work of our pledges. Perhaps the name of another house was left out in the transitional paragraphs.

But certainly we never dropped our pledges off in the men's room of a supermarket without their pants. We are offended by the implications of such an erroneous article.

Coloring Book

To the Editor:

Birchers got coloring books. Sexy old Mother Goose got a coloring book. Wal, shore nuff, just to stay in the game, Syracuse U. got a coloring book.

Only ours is different. Yessirree, folks. Ours has a cause. Why, I'd bet we've got the most crusading coloring book in the world.

It's about discrimination in the Greek system. Which is natural, looking at the list of sponsors. CORE members and dissatisifed collegians.

Bit by bit; incident by incident, this book gashes the Greeks. There's one problem, though. Instead of stinging with razor-sharp satire, it hacks away like a machete.

Sponsors say that's the only way to get through to the people on this campus. I guess we just wouldn't be smart enough to understand anything more subtle. After all, we are only college people.

We've all got such short memories, too. Why just as soon as we finish reading Ron Corwin's column and the articles about Kappa Delta and Lambda Chi, we forget 'em. We even have to be reminded constantly so that we don't forget our heads.

So maybe we're supposed to be impressed by the art work. No, that can't be right. It shore isn't any too prettily drawn, and the mimeographings's bad too. The cover's a pretty color, but that's about all.

The really impressive part comes where they dedicate all the profits to the Student Union. Student Union is an important thing around here. Eventually it should be one place where Greeks and Independents can all go. So wasn't that a smart move to put the chairman of the Student Union Board on the spot. They just gave her all the profits for Student Union, and let her worry about alienating the Greeks and ruining the whole thing.

No. You can't help being impressed by it. Anybody would be impressed by that kind of verbal bludgeoning.

Question is, will it get anywhere? Can closed minds really be opened by a hatchet thrower?

Or will it take a little more subtlety and more adult, intelligent tactics to eliminate discrimination on this campus?

Josh White, A 'Conscience of his Time'

By HENRY LEFCORT

The Negro stood before a large crowd. He faced a bench behind which sat some of this country's greatest men. Slowly, he began to speak:

"Better than most people in this room I know the blemishes on American civilization. But a folksinger, it seems to me, is the voice and conscience of his time and audience. He tries to put into words and music what those around him feel.

"This I shall continue to do, with God's help, as long as there is suffering and discrimination around me and freedom and equality to be won."

The man who spoke was Josh White, one of the most distinguished folksingers in the world. He spoke before the House Un-American Activities Committee when it began to suspect the loyalties of folksingers.

JOSH WHITE

Josh White will appear 8:30 p.m. Saturday at the University Regent Theater, singing and playing the type of song he defended before the HUAC a few years ago.

Born in Greenville, S. C. White learned at the age of nine, how to play the songs of blind Negro street singers whom he had guided through Southern cities to help support his family.

By that time he had seen 21 lynchings, and he had seen the South. Along those Southern roads — the Glory Road he called it later — White saw life in all its nakedness, met the characters and heard the stories out of which he was to compose his songs.

At 14, a record scout offered White $100 to go to a New York recording session. His mother said he could go if he promised to sing only spirituals and no blues as they are considered "sinful" to religious Southern Negroes.

White agreed, but in New York, after cutting 16 sides, he ran out of spirituals. So he adopted the name Pine Wood Tom and recorded a few blues. Church groups praised the spirituals, but the blues recordings established "Pine Wood" as a singer.

Shortly after White cut his right hand on a milk bottle. Doctors wanted to amputate three fingers but White refused. He took a job as an elevator operator and slowly nursed his nearly paralyzed hand back to health. Four years later, he landed a part in a Broadway show, "John Henry," and found himself in the public eye.

Nightclub dates won for White a following of intellectuals, because his ballads of the Black South gave musical expression to the fear, squalor and desperation that have found a literary outlet in the works of Faulkner, Caldwell and Williams.

In 1950, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt took White on a concert tour of England, Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Scotland. In an ambassador's party in Copenhagen, even the King of Denmark sat on the floor and joined in singing.

Tickets for his concert are priced from $2 to $3 and are available at the Regent Theater boxoffice.

THE CUTTING ROOM

'D & L' A Dud

—by John E. Greenwald

"David and Lisa" is a lousy movie.

It is a most unoriginal filming of an interesting story that, nonetheless, completely ignores the camera. Director Perry proves his theatrical background by having the most effective scenes "staged" rather than "filmed" (e.g. David's father's "confession" in David's bedroom).

The film relies on the acting and the plot giving the cameraman and editor nothing more to do than follow the actors and have too many fade outs and fade ins. (We've always wondered whether those playing the mentally ill demand the most or the least credulity from the audience).

Everything of any import happens in front of the camera. There, we see talent and ability. Behind the camera though, "David and Lisa" has only an unemployed stage director and an ex-tv commercial photographer. The result is fine acting and nice photography, little else.

The story developed through nine episodes, each one inartistically related by the ordinary device of a fade. On the second or third viewing these fades become annoying and make one wonder if the transition between these unfolding elements could have been handled more creatively.

But creativity is one thing director Perry, his script writer wife, and crew don't have. All they can do is get down on film their story and hope the film is put together to accurately present what they've just filmed. There is no effort to use any footage to create something apart from what was staged before the camera.

"David and Lisa" is a motion picture in the best Hollywood tradition. Despite claims to the contrary the only artistic difference between "D & L" and, say "Ben Hur" is the plot. They are both filmed the same way, emphasizing the story and characters, sublimating cinema technique so it doesn't protrude.

Despite artistic and literary revolutions in the last 60 years in which a brush stroke or phrase can have a beauty all its own, the movies are still subserviant to plot. Critics can acclaim an abstract painting or praise an author's writing style but Bosley Crowther never notices a pan or cut.

It has been Hollywood that buried the art of the cinema under plots and stars. Its unimaginative ego was destroyed when "Citizen Kane" proved "arty photography" can add to a movie.

So what happens? A collection of amateurs make their first feature relying on all the old Hollywood techniques that were designed to make an audience forget they were seeing a movie. And the critics call "David and Lisa" Art.

"David and Lisa" illustrates all we feel is wrong with motion picture making today. We want to see a movie and know it is a movie, not a play or "life" or something. We want more of "The Connection", "Zazie dans le Metro," "The Trial," the final montage from "L'Eclipse," etc.

We don't want the cinema subserviant to plot and acting. We want to see it flourish, to shout and yell, "This is what I can do. I can cut and plan and track and have compositions, and high and low angles, and don't need actors to move audiences! I don't need sets or lights or reflectors, a well thought out script, set ups and master shots! I want to be created by one person who can see what is on the screen and not what happens, who creates his film in the cutting room!"

Peace Corps to Give New Test Saturday

A new, and much shorter Peace Corps Placement Test will be administered for the first time this Saturday in more than 800 communities across the nation.

Questionnaires and the location of the exam site may be obtained from campus Peace Corps liaison officer, Dean John S. Hafer.

The new test, to be given on an experimental basis, consists of half - hour sections on general aptitude and modern language aptitude. All applicants who have any knowledge of French or Spanish must remain to take the appropriate one hour language achievement test.

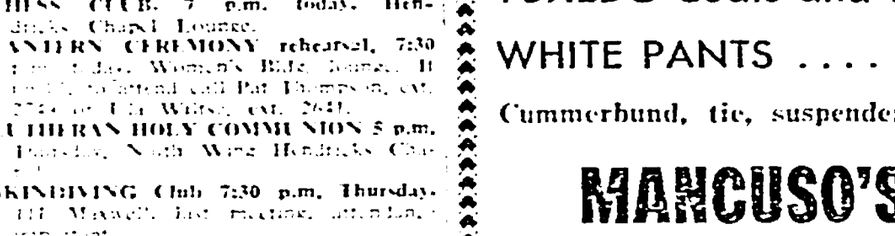
By contrast, the former examination took four to eight hours, depending on optional sections. Both tests are non-competitive. Applicants who took the longer test do not need to take the new one.

Dr. Edward R. Henry, director of the Peace Corps' selection division, said the new test has been designed on the basis of information gained after two years experience with the longer examination.

"Some tests in the former battery have been found to be of low validity in relation to the success of volunteers in training and overseas. Other sections were more useful for proper class placement in training than they were for selection," Dr. Henry said.

He added that college transcripts provide much of the information obtained from sections of the former test and that the Peace Corps now requires transcripts from every candidate.

Increasing emphasis on aptitude for a foreign language has greatly increased the need for the language aptitude and achievement tests, Dr. Henry said.



The new test will be given at 8:30 a.m. and should be taken by all new Peace Corps applicants for one of the 4,000 openings in 41 countries. Training begins in June, July and August.

To be eligible to take the exam, candidates must either have submitted a questionnaire to the Peace Corps or must bring a completed questionnaire to the test site with them.

HOW TO SEE EUROPE FOR ONLY $300 A DAY: NO. 1

Summer vacation is just around the corner, and naturally all of you are going to Europe. Perhaps I can offer a handy tip or two. (I must confess that I myself have never been to Europe, but I do have a French poodle and a German shepherd, so I am not entirely unqualified.)

First let me say that no trip to Europe is complete without a visit to England, Scotland, Wales, Ireland, France, Germany, Spain, Portugal, Italy, Liechtenstein, Holland, Belgium, Luxembourg, Switzerland, Denmark, Sweden, Norway, Finland, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Latvia, Lithuania, Estonia, Russia, Greece, Yugoslavia, Albania, Crete, Sardinia, Sicily, Hungary, Rumania, Bulgaria, Lapland, and Andorra.

Let us take up these countries in order. First, England.

The old ones are thrown away

The capital of England is London—or Liverpool, as it is sometimes called. There are many interesting things to see in London—chiefly the changing of the guards. The guards are changed daily. The old ones are thrown away.

Another "must" while in London is a visit to the palace of the Duke of Marlborough. Marlborough is spelled Marlborough, but pronounced Marlboro. English spelling is very quaint, but terribly disorganized. The late George Bernard Shaw, author of Little Women, fought all his life to simplify English spelling. They tell a story about Shaw once asking a friend, "What does g-h-o-t-i spell?"

The friend pondered a bit and replied, "Goatee."

Shaw sniggered. "Pshaw," said Shaw. "G-h-o-t-i does not spell goatee. It spells fish."

"How is that?" said the friend.

Shaw answered, "Gh as in enough, o as in women, ti as in motion. Put them all together, you get fish."

This was very clever of Shaw when you consider that he was a vegetarian. And a good thing he was. As Disraeli once remarked to Guy Fawkes, "If Shaw were not a vegetarian, no lamb chop in London would be safe."

But I digress. We were speaking of the palace of the Duke of Marlborough—or Marlboro, as it is called in the United States. It is called Marlboro by every smoker who enjoys a fine, rich breed of tobaccos, who appreciates a pure white filter, who likes a soft pack that is really soft, a Flip-Top box that really flips. Be sure you are well supplied with Marlboros when you make your trip abroad. After a long, tiring day of sightseeing there is nothing so welcome as a good flavorful Marlboro and a foot-bath with hot Epsom salts.

Epsom salts can be obtained in England at Epsom Downs. Kensington salts can be obtained at Kensington Gardens, Albert salts can be obtained at Albert Hall, Hyde salts can be obtained at Hyde Park, and the crown jewels can be obtained at the Tower of London.

The guards at the Tower of London are called Beefeaters because they are always beefing about what they get to eat. This is also known as "cricket" or "petrol."

Well, I guess that about covers England. In next week's column we will visit the Land of the Midnight Sun—France.

©1963 Max Shulman

Wherever you may roam in Europe and in all fifty states of the Union, you'll find Marlboro ever-present and ever-pleasant—filter, flavor, pack or box.

try to escape from the frightening dissaray of modern society instead of attempting to guide change to constructive aims," she said.

Mrs. Meyer in 1954 was one of the earliest writers to condemn the late Sen. Joseph McCarthy. She was bitterly criticized then and even physically attacked for her stand. In the same year, however, she was awarded an honorary degree by Syracuse University.

"Pay no attendtion to the radical right," she warned. "Both they and Communism claim they know absolute truth."

"You can rise to the demands of this historic period." she said. "You are much better educated, much more eager than my generation," Mrs. Meyers declared. "Don't surrender to the totalitarian threats that confront us."

Vice President Piskor presented the top two men and women students in each class to Chancellor William P. Tolley.

Following Loos and Miss Erwin as the number two ranking seniors were Gail Mary Blizzard, School of Art, and Bruce B. Roswig, Liberal Arts.

Top junior man and woman are Wayne Elmer Ely, engineering and Susan Gail Horrocks, nursing. Second place—Edward P. Hoppe and Nancy Alice Thomson, both liberal arts.

Tied for leading sophomore coed with 3.0 averages are Dale A. Brabant, Jan Leask and Deborah Neimand all liberal arts. Leading male student is Arthur Philip Molella, liberal arts.

Holding second positions are John Paul Trever, liberal arts and Nancy Margaret Weig, nursing.

Leading freshmen men and women, all with 3.0 averages are Jeanne Isabelle Rader, Frances Louise Lankton, Jill Stultz, Richard F. Flannery, Jr., Harold Jay Reuben and Manoutchehr Senehi, liberal arts; Judith Elaine Nonnenmocher, home economics; Paul Edward Menge, forestry; and Jurij Sawyckyj, Utica College.

Second place men and women are Walter Sall, and Susan Lee Pennoyer, both in forestry.

Special awards were also presented. They are architecture, Alan Scouten; art, Gail Mary Blizzard; music, Sharon Alice Ham; chemistry, Jeffrey A. Greenhouse, bible, Paul E. Rowley; English, Ulrike Genschow.

Meeting On Graduate Aid

By ERIC S. BENDERSON

Three meetings concerning financial aid on the graduate level will be announced shortly by Director of Financial Aids Jim G. Carleton.

The meetings will involve students interested in scholarships, fellowships, assistantships and other financial opportunities for 1964-65.

"The sessions will be brief but informative," Carleton said. "At the first meeting registration forms will be passed out, to be turned into the dean's office where opportunities for individual students will be found."

"Since these meetings concern 1964-65," said Carleton, "I am interested in talking to juniors and anyone else thinking of graduate school for that period."

"The first session," said Carleton. "will be a general description of how to apply to graduate school. It will give the how, where and when of applying, what tests to take, what are the best references and the financial situation. We will even recommend a few books."

The second session will pertain solely to national and regional scholarships and fellowships. It will include review of such well known programs as the Woodrow Wilson and Ford Foundation Awards.

"The third session is devoted to opportunities for studying abroad," said Carleton. "Special emphasis will be given to the Fulbright-Hayes program, since it is the broadest and offers the widest range of opportunity. Half a dozen others will be discussed including the Rhodes and Marshall Scholarships." Summer study programs abroad will be included.

Lacrosse Ten Whitewashes Clarkson Team

Special to the Daily Orange

POTSDAM — Syracuse University's lacrosse ten scored its most impressive win of the season Tuesday, whitewashing a green Clarkson College squad, 19-0, on a rain-swept Snell Field.

The win, third in a row for Bill Orange gives Roy Simmons' sticknen a 3-1 record. The Hill had downed Hobart and Cortland State. Its sole loss was at the hands of nationally-ranked John Hopkins.

Facing the Orange win were attackmen Johnny Pappas and Ron Fraser. Pappas, who is filling the void caused by the injury to soph Tom Rennie in the Hobart clash, tallied five goals and was also credited with seven assists.

Fraser, soph sensation at left attack, also tallied five times. He now leads Syracuse in scoring with 22 goals in four games.

Bob Ramsdell, a key on defense for the Orange this year, was switched to an attack spot to fill in for another SU injury. Bill Crothers. Ramsdell had four scores.

Also missing from the Syracuse lineup was star defenseman "Happy Jack" Salerno. Salerno remained in Syracuse for spring football practice. The Orange defense, led by Walt Reese allowed only 11 shots.

The Orangemen scored nine times in the first quarter, four each in the second and third quarters and two in the final as Simmons unloaded his bench.

The loss was Clarkson's first game of the season. Goalie Toby Wightman, a soph, turned back 12 shots. The hosts had six sophs in the starting rotation.

Syracuse returns to Manley Field Saturday afternoon for a 2:30 p.m. contest with traditional rival Colgate.

21 Receive Awards At Athletic Banquet

Last night was honors night at Drumlins as 21 awards were passed out among the athletes.

Five athletes had chances to repeat, but only one did, and for the first time in several years, there were no dual winners.

Bill Dalton, received the Alumni Ski Award as the most outstanding skier for the second year in a row.

As usual, Ben Schwartzwalder did the most awarding, and likewise his help did the most receiving; although not all of it was due to their extracurricular activities on the football field.

A boy by the name of James S. Nance received the Bill Davidson Wrestling Trophy as the most valuable wrestler, to the surprise of very few.

To the surprise of exactly no one, John Mackey was named the most valuable football player and recipient of the Bill Horr Football Trophy. But John didn't take it because John and the rest of the lacrosse team had not returned from yesterday's visit to Clarkson Tech.

Gene Stancin was given the Pat Miller Football Award as the outstanding athlete, student and citizen.

Devil's Own

The Devil's Own Trophy for the outstanding sophomore student-athlete went to Walley Mahle, Ben's scoring leader and No. 1 man in total offense.

Dave Meggysey, a recipient of the Devil's Own, was awarded the Dr. Joe Alexander Football Award for the outstanding senior student-athlete.

For the second consecutive year, an old footballer took the Lew Carr Baseball Trophy as the most valuable player. Bob Lelli followed Dave Sarette as recipient.

Paul Romeo awarded Ray Grimaldi the Phi Epsilon Kappa Gymnastics Award as the outstanding gymnast. Jim Seaman received the Phi Kappa Alpha Basketball Trophy as the most improved player on the basketball squad.

Wrestler Dick Slutzky was named the outstanding student-athlete and received the Orange Key Award.

Tip Goes

The Tip Goes Crew Award for the most outstanding junior went to Bill Sanford. Mike Guzman received the Tom Keane Memorial Award as the outstanding runner.

The William P. Tolley Trophy for the outstanding tennis player was presented to soph Steve Rubell. The WAER Golf Trophy for the outstanding golfer went to Bill Banazek.

Jim Myerberg won the Anoymous Swimming Award for the most valuable merman improvement. Joe Morrison, who won the Anonymous Award last year, was given the Alumni Swimming Award for outstanding performance.

The Cox Lacrosse Trophy was awarded to goalie Pete Coe as the most valuable Lacrosser. Coe, along with his coach Roy Simmons who was to present the award were absent.

All-America

Dick Finley was awarded a special All-America Presentation from the U.S. Intercollegiate Lacrosse Association.

The Dean Dellis Fencing Award went to the outstanding fencer, Duane Harrington. Dick Taylor was named the outstanding senior as recipient of the Physical Education Major Award.

The final award of the evening was the presentation of the Finla G. Crawford Cup for team achievement. The fencing team, who seem to be making it a practice, captured it again.

Orange Netmen Face Union In Home Opener at Skytop

By BILL CRONAUER

The Syracuse University tennis team faces its first home opposition of the season today when Union College invades the Skytop courts. Match time is 2 p.m.

The Hill record stands at 2-3 this year with wins over Georgetown and American University. The Piety netters have dropped matches to George Washington, Maryland and Navy.

Coach Gene Garrett appears optimistic over his squad's chances against Union. "We should win this one," he said. "The boys are all set physically."

Big Loss

Last season, the Orange netmen defeated Union, 6-3. The Dutchmen from Schenectady are weakened by the loss of three of their top four players.

Syracuse, on the other hand, should have a more powerful team than the one which split 14 matches a year ago.

"We are stronger at each position this season," Garrett revealed. The Piety has five returning lettermen combined with a pair of top sophomores. Only Bob Raphaelson is missing from the 1962 starting squad.

Rubell Tops

Soph Steve Rubell will handle the No. 1 spot against Union. Rubell gained experience on the Southern tour and now appears ready to come into his own.

The second slot goes to Ross Kaplan, the senior captain from Utica. Kaplan played in the top position during 1962.

Junior Bill Gedalecia, last year's No. 2 man, will hold down the third singles spot.

Improves

Alvin Davis has moved up to the fourth position on the basis of his fine practice showings. The 20-year-old junior from Rome played sixth man down South.

The fifth-ranking singles performer is junior Lew Katcher, with sophomore Al Napper in the final slot.

The No. 1 doubles team is composed of Kaplan and Napper. Gedalecia and Rubell combine for the second squad while Davis and Katcher will play in the third spot.

Following today's contest, the Orange netters travel to Hamilton Friday and to Buffalo Saturday. The Hamilton-Syracuse match was rained out last Saturday and rescheduled.

Schoff Given Nod as Starter In Cornell Tilt

Attempting to halt a three game losing streak before it becomes Mets-size, Coach Ted Kleinhans named reliefer Phil Schoff for the start against Cornell at the Ithaca diamond today.

The 6-3, 185-pounder has appeared only once during the regular season. Schoff, a rightie, hurled against Pittsburgh in relief of Lelli. Over the last six innings Phil held Pitt to one run while striking out eight Panthers.

Schoff averaged double-figures for the varsity basketball team and may be joined by another courtman. Coach Kleinhans has indicated that Dick Duffy may start at third against the Cornell nine.

Second baseman Bob Cohen is unable to travel to Ithaca due to classes and may be replaced by letterman Pat Antonelli or Norb Graybas.

Last year's Cornell-Syracuse games were tight slug-fests. The Orange copped the first, 12-11, and Cornell won the second, 9-8.

Frosh Crew Opens Season Against High School Shells

The Syracuse University Freshman crew team gained its first win and first loss Saturday on the three-quarter mile Seneca River course.

High winds caused a two-hour delay in the start of the race. The wind gave the rowers additional trouble in the first race. Coxswain Doug Penfield of Syracuse had trouble maneuvering his men to avoid a strong port drift. At one point, the oars of Syracuse and the oars of Canisius High School of Buffalo almost touched. Canisius won the race in four minutes, three seconds, beating Syracuse by three-quarters of a length.

The second race among Syracuse, Bishop Timon of Buffalo, Liverpool High School teams was won by the Hill. Stroker, Chuck Pellock, set a high pace of 44 strokes per minute, one of the fastest stroking times that the frosh have experienced this year. They averaged 36 strokes per minute to give them a time of three mintues, 38 seconds for the three-quarter mile course. Liverpool High school had a time of three minutes, 42 seconds, losing to the Orange one length and beating Timon by a one-half length. Timon's time was three minutes, 44 seconds.

Syracuse varsity, JV. and frosh crews will travel to Hanover. New Hampshire Saturday for the Dartmouth Regatta, and will race on Lake Onondaga Spring Weekend, against Cornell and Navy for the Goes Cup.

University Bowlers Win Intercollegiate Tourney

Syracuse's first championship of the spring was captured Saturday as a Hill bowling team won the first annual New York State Intercollegiate Bowling Tournament team event at Rome, N. Y.

Scoring 2882 pins, Syracuse easily beat Canisius, 2791, and Utica College, 2775, its closest challengers in the 22-team field.

Freshman Joe Pietro led the charge with a three-game total of 641 (214-221-206).

Other scores were frosh Mark Breslerman, 591; juniors Artie Feldman, 579, and Paul Janik, 544; and soph Larry Eisenberg, 527.

Feldman rolled a 232 to take single game team honors.

Pietro also grabbed fourth place in the all events tables by scoring 1,711 in nine games, a 190 average per game.

First place in the all events category was awarded to Cortland's Bob Shedlock, who totaled 1763 in his nine games, a 196 average.

Eisenberg and Breslerman finished sixth in the doubles event with an 1108 three-game set.

Noting the other schools have organized teams for intercollegiate competition, Janik expressed the hope that the team's fine showing would lead to similar recognition on campus.

Janik and Feldman were members of last year's team which finished second in the all events race, only five pins behind the winning entrant.

Though Saturday's win was the first Hill win in team competition, the 1961 squad captured doubles honors.

Other teams competing were Canisius, Utica College, Buffalo, Ithaca, Hamilton, Rochester Tech, Rensselaer Poly, Hobart and Cortland.

Most of the schools entered more than one team.

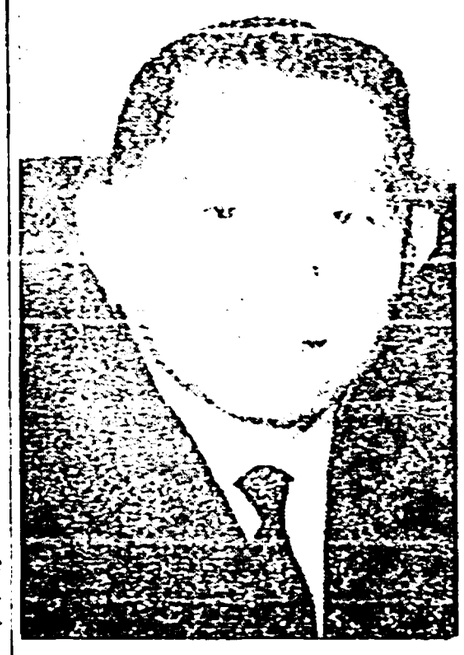
STU May Affiliate Soon With National

By ANN CUTLER
Junior Editor

Sigma Tau Upsilon, a Syracuse University local sorority, is currently negotiating for affiliation with a national sorority.



A representative of the national organization met last week with STU members and Marjorie C. Smith, dean of women.

Both STU and the dean of women's office have refused to reveal the name of the national.

There are several requirements which must be met by both sides before affiliation can take place officially.

The most important of these steps is STU's acceptance as a full member in the Hill Panhellenic Council.

IFC Bill Cuts Chaperones

By CLAY RICHARDS
Junior Editor

InterFraternity Council Wednesday night approved a series of recommendations that would eliminate all present requirements for chaperones for house parties and coffees.

The proposals now must go to university Social and Personnel Committees before going into effect.

The recommendations ask that chaperones be eliminated from registered social functions held within the fraternity house. Chaperones would still be needed for all off-campus social affairs.

Under the proposed regulation, Security Police and administration officials could check house parties at any time to insure maintenance of university policy concerning drinking and behavior.

The proposal further requests that married graduate students be added to the approved chaperone list. Presently only instructors and professors are allowed to chaperone fraternity parties.

In other business, plans for a bi-weekly IFC newsletter were announced by Public Relations Director Gary Rehm (Acacia). He also announced plans for a Greek pamphlet to be mailed to all freshmen during the summer. A Greek information booth will be set up at registration to answer freshman questions, he said.

A special meeting of all new IFC committee chairmen and officers will be held at 7 p.m. today in 214 Hall of Languages, President George (Skip) Stanger (Sigma Chi Psi) said.

The year's last regular IFC meeting will be at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, May 8 at Phi Kappa Psi.

Canaveral to Welcome Syracusan

By DANIEL RITEY
Junior Editor

President Kennedy and the Pentagon higher-ups soon won't have to wait for the Huntley-Brinkley show to catch the day's doings at Cape Canaveral.

Not with a Syracusan at the ready line to set up an "instantaneous visual communications system" at the Cape.

Frederick Breitenfeld, currently assistant dean of summer sessions, is leaving the Hill in June to assume the post of director of Communicative Media and Assistant Chief of Television at the Cape, the U.S. missile testing range.

"We'll be setting up a television cable link between the Cape and the brass in Washington so that Kennedy and the others won't get information as late as the public," Breitenfeld said.

Eventually, the hope is to link the Cape, Washington and other system's command headquarters in a cross-country briefing set-up for "visual, live" meetings of military chiefs.

"One aspect of my job will be training tv production crews and improving methods for direct and security-tight connections between the Cape and Washington," he noted.

Air Force Authority

Breitenfeld's camera units—under authority and security clearance from the Air Force—will record activities at Canaveral from two vantage points: at the commercial media distance and from classified areas like the launching-site blockhouse.

"President Kennedy and the others will be in instant touch with the Cape at all times and will receive immediate data on launchings—successful ones and 'limited successes'—which is a euphemism for a failure," he quipped.

Bretienfeld is enthusiastic about the equipment to be at his disposal. "I saw brand new color tv units and other communications material that impressed me and the fellows from ABC and NBC."

This project eventually will cost in the millions but will repay the investment in saved time for important transmissions and saved broadcasting time.

This second saving arises from the second aspect of Breitenfeld's new position.

Intra-departmental

Noting an Air Force need to transmit intra-departmental messages and briefings more effectively, he says "I will have the job of teaching speaking and writing skills to officers for use in non-technical sendings."

This will serve to cut down on the costs of broadcasting through a saving of the time needed by these officers to get messages

The End Comes For Some of Us

About a year ago a new staff of would-be newspaper giants stormed into the upper echelon of the Daily Orange masthead to assume their roles as senior editors.

During that first week the new editors thought that surely they would never survive the year. The confusion and the consternation of putting out a daily newspaper seemed to be a little more than it appeared from positions lower on the staff.

But now the remains of that senior staff waiver precariously on the edge of their existence. Today we enter into conference with the Board of Publications and the result will be another group of editors to take up the task of spreading news across the campus.

In Friday's newspaper, which will be the last one for the current senior editors, we will delve a little into the problems and dangers that await the new editors. But that will be tomorrow.

For now we simply prepare ourselves for departure by packing up our meager belongings: an old typewriter ribbon, some memos from the Board of Publications, deficiency slips, cans of Metrecal, by-lined clippings, fan mail and crank mail, autographs and epithets, our first class honor rating award and a withered appendix.

Now as we prepare to finish up our little portion of the long institution known as the Daily Orange, we thank those who have been helpful and considerate of our problems during this year. We also thank those who have not hesitated to criticize and comment when we failed in our task. We hope we have learned from our mistakes and have been able to pass the lessons on to our successors.

As you probably know, after the newspaper is printed each day, the type is dumped back into the kettle of molten lead and melted down.

So now we too leave the hellbox to lose our identity in the fires until we are molded again into other shapes and forms.

THE GADFLY

The Board

By T. Lee Hughes

Editor's Note: THIS COLUMN is not meant to cast aspersions on the ability of Kathy Arnold. Its intent is to call to question methods of the Board of Publications.

They're up to their antics again.

Members of the Board of Publications set up shop again three weeks ago to select a new editor for the yearbook, Onondagan.

The result was a travesty of the Board's supposedly impartial function of appointing editors for campus publications.

Candidates for the top Onondagan position were junior Charles Steinberg and sophomore Kathy Arnold. Both boasted a wealth of experience on this year's publication. But Kathy was one up on Charlie.

Her father is adviser to the yearbook and sits on the Board of Pub.

Edmund Arnold is one of the outstanding figures in the world of graphic arts. He designed the typography for the new National Observer and is a strong-willed figure with a satchel of ideas.

Sandra Joy, editor of this year's yearbook, however, possessed ideas of her own. And there has been no notable harmony between the editor and her adviser since January.

Reportedly, one university vice president last year expressed outspoken dissatisfaction over the quality of the yearbook during recent years. He threatened that in the absence of marked improvement, the university might dump the entire job into the hands of a professional.

Two weeks ago, Kathy Arnold was selected editor of the Syracuse University Onondagan.

And there was enough hanky-panky surrounding the selection to appall even veteran participants of Board of Publication frays.

Step by step, this is how the debacle unfolded:

1) Arnold took copies of qualifications submitted by both his daughter and Steinberg, and revising them, sent thumbnail sketches of the candidates to members of the Board.

Since his daughter was a candidate, Arnold's move was itself highly irregular. But what emerged from his typewriter was a comparative resume which emphasized the qualifications of his own daughter while underplaying those of Steinberg.

For example, Steinberg had written—"I was a Senior Editor (traditions editor) on the Onondagan . . . I worked on all other sections of the book."

Arnold wrote only "traditions editor of '63 Onondagan." Of his own daughter, however, Arnold wrote "Editor of 120 page senior section in '63 ON, wrote most of 40 page introductory essay in the book, has worked on all sections."

Steinberg indicated that he was editor-in-chief of his high school paper, and had published a summer camp newspaper which received the highest possible rating from the Columbia Scholastic Press Association.

Arnold condensed this to "has high school and summer camp experience."

Arnold's daughter has had four semester's experience on the Daily Orange business staff, including a current term as co-circulation manager.

Arnold elevated her position to that of "circulation manager of DO" and indicated that she has had "four terms on the Daily Orange" failing to stress that this was business, not editorial experience.

Thus administrators were primed for a decision I believe they had made before the Board of Pub ever convened.

2) During the Board meeting three weeks ago, however, the point was raised that Miss Arnold would have to be elected by a 2/3 vote of the Board because she is a sophomore.

According to the Board of Publications constitution dated January 18, 1962, "students eligible for the position of editor-in-chief must . . . (expect) to be a senior during the year he would be serving in that office." The Board may elect a candidate of lower than senior standing "provided that such a candidate receives the votes of not less than two-thirds of the Board members present at the meeting."

At the meeting, however, administrators, spearheaded by Arnold, claimed that the constitution had been "revised" to eliminate the 2/3 clause. Coincidentally, no copy of the "revised" constitution could be found to substantiate the claim.

Board Chairman Wesley C. Clark called for a vote nevertheless. The result was 6 to 4 in favor of Miss Arnold. Steinberg had earned the votes of yearbook editors Joy and Stern, and two student government officers. Miss Arnold had gleaned the ballots of administrators Clifford, Hafer, a representative of the dean of women's office, faculty advisers O'Brien and Arnold (her father), and business manager Carol Stein.

She had earned a majority vote, but had fallen short of the two thirds requirement. Arnold called on Clark to make a ruling. Clark refused, saying he needed time to clarify the constitution.

Three members of the Board say that Arnold then appeared miffed at Clark's refusal to reach a decision on the spot.

The fact is however, that Clark had illegally called for a vote when interpretation of the constitution was in doubt, and now was stuck in reaching a decision.

3) The Board reconvened a week later. In the interim, Clark had come up with a "revised" edition of the constitution from which the 2/3 clause had been eliminated. According to Bayer the revised constitution was dated Jan. 18, 1962, the same date as the original constitution.

I have, however, a verifax copy of minutes of a Board of Publications meeting held on January 18, 1962 for the purpose of revising the constitution. Though the minutes detail several revisions, NO WHERE IS THERE ANY MENTION OF DELETING THE 2/3 VOTING CLAUSE REQUIRED OF CANDIDATES WHO ARE NOT SENIORS.

Furthermore, at a Board meeting held earlier this academic year, concerning the editorship of this year's Syracuse 10, Clark had in fact UPHELD the 2/3 requirement. The occasion was the application of Jeff Radford, a junior, and member of last year's rabble rousing 10 staff, who was trying to slip into the editorship of this year's 10. AT THAT TIME CLARK RULED THAT RADFORD WOULD HAVE TO BE ELECTED BY A 2/3 VOTE OF THE BOARD.

Nevertheless, Clark reversed himself two weeks ago and ruled that Miss Arnold had been elected editor of the Onondaga BY THE PREVIOUS VOTE OF 6 to 4.

At worst, the constitutionality of the outcome of both meetings may be seriously questioned. At best, the result was besmirched by the fact that a) Arnold's resume for both candidates appeared highly prejudicial b) Arnold himself sat on the Board when he should have removed himself in view of his daughter's candidacy c) Clark called for a vote without proper clarification of the constitution d) twice in the same year, the constitution was interpreted differently, each time to match the desires of administrators on the Board.

The entire debacle again called attention to the inability of administrators on the Board to deal fairly with student publications.

During earlier meetings this year, Dean of Men Earle Clifford suggested to JSG Prexy Teddy Bayer that he would be "heading down the road to impeachment" if he did not withdraw a motion for making Board meetings public.

Dean of Personnel John Hafer attempted to have three student members of the Board disqualified on a ridiculous technicality which was eventually squashed.

And Clark raked DO editor Joffe over the coals for a news story he had published on a previous Board meeting.

Ironically, Clark himself suggested earlier this year a revision in the membership of the Board which would have reduced the present administrative dominance.

Last week, the Board tabled definitive discussion of the proposal until next year. There was every indication that while non-voting membership would be increased, the present administrative-student balance of votes would remain the same.

The one concrete suggestion agreed upon was that the Board of Publications would now meet MONTHLY to "review" student publications problems. Experienced observers commented that this would only increase the frequency with which administrators could get student editors "under their thumbs."

For enshrouded in imposed secrecy, the Board is dominated by administrators who interpret the rules and constitution to their own ends (as in the Arnold case), and wield their positions on the

TREVER ON CAMPUS

"Well, we'll admit YOU, Mr. Bunyan, but that blue ox has got to go..."

THEATER

'Servant of Two Masters'

"Thank heaven," you say as the Coronet's house lights come on for intermission. You rise out of your seat, your knees weak from too much slapping.. You clutch your ribs hoping they are not cracked by the sudden guffaws you exploded. As you stand you listen carefully to your breath, hoping the wheezing will go away.

For once in a theater critic's career the intermission is looked forward to so as to relieve the strain one encounters after laughing too much at something that was just too funny. the Boar's Head production of Carlo Goldoni's 18th century comedy "A Servant of Two Masters.."

As directed by Manfred Bormann, this broadly acted, exquisitely costumed (a special bouquet to Ruth Meek), ingeniously improvised play is almost overflowing with laughs, chuckles and shouts of joy. It is the funniest and most entertaining play to hit campus since "Little Mary Sunshine."

Peter Maloney plays Arlecchino, a sly servant who finds himself employed by two masters. Leslie Meek, who disguised as her dead brother searches for her lover Tom McKee, and McKee. Confusing isn't it?

The fun comes when Maloney, aided by the ridiculously funny Ken Pearlman and the sublimely funny Ernest Harada, has to serve dinner for his two masters. This scene, partly skillfully staged by Bormann who knows just were to put the right actor in the right place. and partly improvised by the cast, that closes the first act.

Though the second act never reaches the side-splitting peak of the first, it more than makes up for it by a delicious love scene between Maloney and maidservant Ellenjoy Schindler. Miss Schindler is employed by merchant Stuart Dillon and his daughter, scrumptiously played by Esen Wiegand. (Bormann, incidently, does the impossible by having Dillon play the character instead of himself: he does a fine job, too.)

Miss Wiegand is courted by the overly romantic Bruce MacCurdy and his excitable father Richard Folmer, both of whom give strong but very amusing performances.

The show, of course, is Maloney's. Despitethe c'naractured masked designed by Ed Fricke and Mary Beth Van Eenwk (who did three other fascinating masks) that covers most of his face. Maloney dances and pratfalls, mugs and pantomimes with a skill and grace that brings both laughter and applause from the audience. His every move, whether hearty athletics or a coy smile, is timed with precision calculated to bring joy to the viewers.

And yet Bormann has so staged "Servant" that all of this well - cast and talented troop have opportunities to display their skills. Whether posed in an over dramatic style against Anne Gibson's fine sets, or improvising the on-stage scene changes, the cast is versatile and effective in this fact-paced comedy.

"A Servant for Two Masters' runs only through Saturday and quite frankly, we can't think of a more hilarious way to spend an evening.

No Coeds Pinched But Automobile Is

With added Security Police on patrol no co-eds have been pinched in the past month, however, Tuesday night an automobile apparently was.

A 1955 or '56 Chevrolet was found in the upper Sadler parking lot, without license plates or registration.

The car had a smashed door, windows and fender. It was found with a half a tank of gas in it. There are no leads to identification of the owner.

City police were called and the auto was towed away.

STU May Affiliate

Panhel's executive council has already recommended the membership. The other 24 sororities on campus were asked to vote on the move this week.

Panhel representatives will report their individual house decisions at next Tuesday's regular Panhel meeting. It is expected STU will be given full membership at this time.

"The dean of women's office is working closely with STU on this project and I hope that affiliation can be accomplished this spring," said Dean Smith.

Brandy German, STU chapter president, refused to comment on the situation.

Dean Smith also said the usual inquiries were being made by both her office and STU into the standards, purposes and activities of the national group.

The members of STU are currently living in Charles Cottage, 400 Walnut Pl., now classified as university housing rather than as a sorority house.

In this situation the members pay board to the university and are under the supervision of the dean of women's office.

In this case the university does not have to pay taxes on the cottage since it is used for "educational purposes," said William T. Burch, director of university real estate.

If the members decide to rent the cottage from the university or buy their own house and land, they will have to pay taxes as commercial housing as do other sororities on campus, he added.

MERP Picnic Tops Weekend

Women's equality takes another step forward this weekend. The Freshman class council is sponsoring a "Men's Economic Recovery Program" (MERP) starting Friday night and concluding with the MERP picnic on Sunday.

Coeds will have a chance to experience the "other side" of dating. During the weekend, girls will be able to ask boys for dates, and the lucky ladies have even been awarded the privilege of incurring all financial responsibilities.

The picnic will be held Sunday, from 1 to 5:30, at Skytop. Free buses will operate from the Women's Building at half hour intervals starting at 1:00. There will be no admission charge, and freshmen can tetend with or without dates.

Music for dancing will be provided by the Elites in the ski lodge. For those who prefer the great outdoors, there will be equipment for softball, tennis, volleyball, football, and horseshoes.

Food will be on sale in the ski lodge snack bar, but more energetic people are welcome to bring their own.

The picnic will be held regardless of weather conditions. In case of rain (or snow) the dance will still be held in the lodge.

curate portrayal of the tremendous hostility between Pakistan and India."

Pakistanis take the view that India is the enemy, and feel "any enemy of my enemy is a friend of mine," he said, referring to China.

The Chinese are studiously pursuing a policy of wooing the Pakistanis, he said.

Prof. Oliver Clubb, assistant professor of political science, said he feels there is a tough roa dahead in the Sino-Indian border dispute. and doubts it can be settled peacefully.

"India and China are historical competitors," Clubb noted.. China has long regarded herself as the foremost country in Asia and hopes to restore herself to her "proper position" (held at the height of the old Manchu dynasty) Clubb said.

He said this is a view held not only by the Chinese Communists but by the Nationalists as well.

Dr. Rajendra Nanavati, assistant professor of electrical engineering, and a participant in the Indian independence movemet, called for peaceful method's in settling the dispate. "The violent approach is not necessarily successful," he said, noting the success of Ghandi.

Hill economics graduate student Arun Shouri also from India and fourth panelist in the International Students Organization sponsored debate. declared that China has no legal basis for her claims.

The present hostilities, Clubb said, were brought about by India's sympathizing with the Dalai Lama and other refugees during the Tibetan revolt of 1959. At this worst possible time, Nehru pressed for Chinese evacuation of disputed border areas.

Chermayeff Deplores 'Squeeze'

By CISSY POSSELT

"We're all going to die with a nasty whimper because we're going to be squeezed to death very shortly," prophesies Prof. Serge Chermayeff.

Chermayeff, speaking at Wednesday's Festival of the Arts evening lecture, was introduced to the audience of 200 in Gifford Auditorium as a Yale professor, painter, industrial designer and city planner.

"Enemy number one," the Russian-born architect stated, "is the automobile, which is clogging up our natural resources."

Chermayeff named noise the second enemy. "Ever since electricity has moved into the modern world, we have had an infinity of sounds in the world. and there is no escaping these sounds."

A close third is the overpopulation problem. "We have a dilemma of great quantities, and the problem of how to survive the 'human cancer', which is likely to destroy the human habitat by uncontrolled growth," he noted.

"There is nothing more obscene," he continued "than a vehicle that is not moving. Nothing must stop until it reaches the inner core, where the car stops and the pedestrian is king."

Applying his "noise theory" to house design, Chermayeff said. "One must ask himself how to produce homes where people can keep moving and, at the same time, stop making unnecessary noise."

"I shun galleries of art and never talk about art. There are a good many more bad artists than there are good artists," Chermayeff noted.

In closing, the visiting professor urged that "Tomorrow's architects be rigidly concerned with the production and integration of programs for actions which will contribute to the human habitat, instead of making nature a man - made place to live.."

Orange Trackmen In Penn Relays

By BERNIE MacCALLUM

An 11-man Syracuse University track squad will compete in four relays and two individual events in the annual Penn Relays Friday and Saturday in Philadelphia.

The Orangemen are entered in the distance medley, two mile, 440-yard and 880-yard relays as well as the pole vault and 400-meter low hurdles.

Coach Bob Grieve rates his quarter mile relay team as having the best shot at a first place finish. Last week at the Queens-Iona Relays, the quartet placed third in a close finish behind Maryland and Manhattan.

Gary Sherman, Charles Gaston, Cal Evans and Dave Snipe will run again on the 440-yard team.

The same foursome will be entered in the half-mile relay. The 880-yard team placed fourth at the Queens-Iona meet. In the Penn Relays last season, the Syracuse 880-yard team finished fourth with the quarter mile squad third.

Grieve expects that Maryland and Manhattan will again be the teams to beat in the quarter-mile field.

Bob Brown, Tom Higgins, Mike Guzman and Moncey Ferguson will run in the distance medley Friday and the 2-mile relay Saturday afternoon.

In the distance medley, Brown will run the 880-yard leg. Higgins the 440, Guzman the three quarter-mile and Ferguson the mile anchor leg.

Dick Radune will run in the 400-meter hurdles for Syracuse.

Athletics In Peace Corps

June graduates with degrees in physican education or recreation will find ample opportunities to use their skills and training in Peace Corps service. Requests for volunteers with experience in these fields have doubled for 1963 as emerging nations look to the Peace Corps to supply persons with this specialized knowledge.

Ten countries, India, Sierra Leone, Morocco, Guatemala, Venezuela, Colombia, Ecuador, Cameroon, Ethiopia and Barbados have appealed to the Peace Corps for sports educators. They will serve as teachers and coaches in elementary and secondary schools, on the university level and some will also work in general athletic programs.

Specifically, the volunteers will be assigned to develop physical education curricula, supervise and administer sports programs and organize teams to participate in local, regional or international competitions.

A total of 200 men and women with the necessary backgrounds and qualifications will go into training this summer for these projects.

At present, the Peace Corps has nearly 100 volunteers actively engaged in physical education and recreation projects in seven countries. Coaches are involved in athletic training in Thailand, the Ivory Coast and Senegal; teachers of physical education are giving classroom instruction in Tunisia and Colombia; recreation workers are organizing youth groups in Venezuela and a new group of volunteers are now in training for assignment to Indonesia.

"These projects will enable teachers and recreation leaders to gain invaluable experience overseas," Jules Pagano, director of the Peace Corps' Professional and Technical Division, has stated. "The opportunities are both unusual and challenging and provide a real training ground for dedicated Americans who wish to share their skills while learning from others."

Pagano listed these opportunities for potential volunteers:

Opportunities to develop physical education and recreation programs from fundamentals to highly detailed programs.

Opportunities to work with people who are eager for instruction and want to be helped and guided.

Opportunities to do research that may lead to a masters degree in the chosen field.

Opportunities to demonstrate the principles and philosophy of American sports through the establishment of well-rounded, well-organized and well-administered physical education or recreation programs.

Opportunities to learn about other countries, the people, the language and culture and to show them how Americans think, work and learn.

Opportunities to work with Olympic teams in some of these countries.

Al Kort Named DO Editor; Moss Business Head

By AUDREY LIPPMAN
Junior Editor

The third student from Massachusetts in four years became editor-in-chief of the Daily Orange Thursday, as the Board of Publications unanimously picked Allan Kort to succeed Milton Joffe in the post.

Joffe is from Ware, Mass. Sidney Hurlburt, editor in 1960-61 was a native of the state also.

In another unanimous vote, Stephen Moss was elected DO business manager, succeeding Edwin Silverstone.

Kort was elected over Adair DuFine, a junior now studying in Italy.

Moss was the sole applicant for his post.

A 20-year-old junior from Haverhill, Mass., Kort is majoring in history and newspaper. He has a 1.6 cumulative average, and is an independent.

Sports editor of the DO for the past year, he has worked part time for the Haverhill Gazette and the Haverhill Journal.

He proposed an editorial policy to "cover news adequately, but not make the news," and promised better coverage of all departments on campus.

To eliminate "needless typographical errors," he plans to add to the DO's night proofreading staff. Kort also plans two new columns, a forum on administration and student government activities and a column of news from Greek and independent groups.

Moss, a 21-year old junior majoring in advertising and psychology, is a resident of Brooklyn. He has a 1.9 average.

A member of Tau Delta Phi social fraternity, and Sigma Delta Chi, journalism fraternity, he has had experience on the DO business staf for three years as a salesman. layout manager and ,this year, as assistant business manager.

Moss also has worked for the advertising department of Me-

AECSagamoreParley To EyeStudent Union

By ANDY PORTE
Junior Editor

The relationship of campus activities and a student union heads the agenda for the Hill's sixth annual Activities Exchange Conference, beginning this afternoon at Sagamore Conference Center, Raquette Lake.

Also slated for analysis at the weekend meeting are the relationship of activities and the arts, as well as activities and academics.

Discussing the issues will be 38 students and 11 faculty and administration members. The students represent both student government and a cross-section of campus activity groups. Delegates will leave by bus at noon today from the main library.

Keynoting the meeting will be Ben Shaktman, drama department artist-in-residence. Shaktman participated in a previous activities conference as an SU undergraduate, and was instrumental in formation of the campus literary magazine Syracuse '10'.

Student Union

The group will examine the issue of the proposed student union building. Among the problems involved are a lack of a unified effort to obtain the building, as well as the continuing lack of funds.

The group will also examine the possibility of sending representatives to the summer fund

Piety Wrestling Coach Scandura Resigns Post

By BERNIE MacCALLUM
Junior Editor

Syracuse University wrestling coach Joseph M. Scandura resigned Thursday after one of the most successful wrestling seasons in Syracuse history.

Scandura, varsity coach at Syracuse since 1956, leaves to take an academic position at the University of Buffalo, according to Athletic Director Lewis P. Andreas.

Scandura's teams have compiled a 39-25-2 record in his seven seasons at Syracuse.

This past winter the wrestling team was 9-0, won the Eastern Intercollegiate Championships and placed fourth in the NCAA-Championships.

According to Scandura, he will soon accept a post as assistant professor of mathema-

Arts Festival in Last Days

By SANDRA MYERS

The Hill's fifth annual Festival of the Arts moves into its closing days with a busy weekend schedule.

The chorus of Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia, men's music honorary, will present the last in a series of outdoor concerts at noon today on the Huntington B. Crouse Hall patio.

At 8:30 p.m. today Prof. Robert Iglehart, director of the University of Michigan School of Art, will lecture on "Teacher as Artist" in Gifford Auditorium, HBC.

Iglehart is former chairman of the New York University department of art education.

A former instructor at Columbia University and the University of Washington at Seattle, he studied at Maryland Institute of Art, Johns Hopkins University, Columbia and the New School for Research in New York City.

Convention

The New York State Art Teachers Association has timed its annual convention to coincide with the Festival. At the conference, held for the first time since 1928 in Syracuse, about 500 of the organization's 1500 members are scheduled to attend Iglehart's lecture.

They will also be guests at a special reception for Iglehart at 7:30 p.m. in Lowe Art Center.

Carlo Goldoni's "A Servant of Two Masters" continues today

Hughes' Sword Probes Hill Abortions

By J.C. PETERSEN

The second issue of the Sword of Damocles, due on sale at the end of next week, will feature an article on pregnancies and abortions among Hill coeds.

Written by Sword senior editors Jeffrey Radford and Susan Dreher, the article details the causes and extent of pregnancies on the Syracuse University campus, according to publisher Terrence Hughes. He said much of the article deals with the plight of the pregnant coed in search of an abortion.

"We were amazed at the extent of the problem when we began research," said Radford. "During two week's research alone we uncovered 35 verifiable cases of pregnancy."

Radford said that a figure revealed by a local social worker places the number of SU pregnancies in the neighborhood of 400 annually.

Pathetic

"More pathetic are the limited recourses open to the pregnant coed," Radford said. "Increasingly popular among these is the abortion."

Radford said his investigation has uncovered several local and regional centers for abortions, named in the article.

"Unfortunately, there is an excellent chance that any abortion will end in a fatality," Radford added. "The article cites the case of one coed who had a narrow escape from a most gruesome death in seeking an abortion."

Radford said material for the article has been gathered from local social workers, hill counselors and interviews with nearly one hundred university coeds.

Verified

"We cited cases only where we could verify them through two or more separate sources," Radford said. "Even then we were swamped with material."

Hughes said the magazine had used a girl as a plant in an attempt to make "contact" with both a suspected campus and suspected local abortionist.

"For a while it appeared as if we would make a definite connection," the publisher said, "but at the last minute it fell through."

Hughes said that abortions must usually be arranged through a coed who has had previous contact with the abortionist. He said that because abortions are illegal, coeds willing to discuss them anonymously were hesitant about helping the magazine stage a phony pregnancy.

Used Phone

"So we were forced to use the telephone," he said, "and of course no abortionist is going to even give an inkling of his trade over the phone."

Radford said the article treats pregnancies as a social rather than a moral problem.

"There is no doubt that morals, or the lack of them, are a significat factor in the rise in pregnancies," he said. "but since we felt there was a dualism between so-called morals and what is actually being done, we decided to deal with the latter."

Hughes said the purpose of the article is to awaken the university community to the extent of the problem and to make coeds aware of the danger of abortions.

Solutions?

"We offer some preliminary suggestions for an attempt to solve the problem," Hughes said. "Undoubtedly they will be disagreeable to some. But I don't think anyone can claim to have a pat solution."

Radford said the magazine has been planning the article for nearly a year.

"One version of it was finished early in September," he said. "But because of the sensational topic, its publication was delayed."

Hughes said further investigation at the beginning of this semester revealed "that the problem had become more critical rather than lessening."

This led to a decision to publish the article in this final issue.

A Letter To the Editor

The Board of Publication selected a new Editor-in-Chief of the Daily Orange Thursday. Today that editor, Allan Kort, takes over the reins of the DO. Today's newspaper is our last. After a year in the editor's chair we must now step down.

We are confident that the Board's choice was a wise one and that Allan will keep up the long tradition of the Daily Orange as editor, which we feel is an honored and most important post on this campus.

Al becomes the third native of Massachusetts to assume the role in the last four years. While this isn't really a qualification, we like to think that after Sid Hurlburt and ourselves, Kort should have an easier time in having people understand that good old accent.

As the old editor steps down each year, it has become a Daily Orange tradition for him to write a lengthy letter of advice to his successor. We also will follow this practice, but here we would like to write a shorter piece of advice for the new editor and for the campus at large, in hopes that both may profit from some of the lessons we have learned during the course of a year.

The following, then, is our letter to the editor:

Today you are probably the most important person among the students on this campus. Your position gives you a first line of communications to all offices and organizations on campus.

Everyone on campus will want to talk to you at one time or other, usually to request a front page story or to complain when what they thought was a front page story turned up in the campus notice column or not at all.

You'll make friends among administrators and student leaders and you'll make enemies. There is no way to judge an editor's success by this criteria, but I would say that you're in some kind of trouble if you have nothing but friends or nothing but enemies.

Remember that you are the head man of a newspaper which appears on campus five days a week and, like it or not, you're responsible for every word that appears in it. You'll be embarrassed some morning when you go to HL and pick up the paper to find the lead headline misspelled.

I realize you won't be able to see every bit of copy that goes into the paper every day but remember your ultimate responsibility and see to it that your editors do the kind of job you want done.

When you start rolling in your job you'll find not everything is roses down at the Hellbox. There are people on this campus who are really opposed to a free press. Maybe they think that students are incompetent as journalists, maybe they want to create an atmosphere for their own betterment.

But if stories are there you have a right and a duty to get them. Be careful and be accurate (so you won't be open to the incompetency charge) and when you have the facts print them. It's your duty.

Be open to advice but remember that the final decisions are yours.

Don't let your personal grudges or gripes find their way into your paper. This is childish and irresponsible. You have an obligation to the campus to serve it in many ways. When you praise, you praise for the university; when you criticize, you criticize for the good of the university. The Daily Orange is a newspaper and not a toy or a lab experiment. Use it as a newspaper and it will be respected as a newspaper.

I mentioned criticism. This is important because you will find much of the university life open to criticism. Don't criticize for criticism's sake but rather to gnaw away at the weak spots so they will be strengthened or till they tumble.

Above all, don't lose confidence in yourself or your newspaper but remain doubtful about everything else on this campus. Check facts carefully and when you have those facts use them.

Remember this, the first editor of the Daily Orange is still alive and is an avid reader. Everything in your paper thus has a tangible tie with the 60 years of DO history.

Good luck and best wishes for the Daily Orange and Syracuse University.

Re: Repairmen

To the Editor:

The short editorial printed Tuesday concerning the inconsistencies of the road repairmen on this campus reminds me of the following short-short story by Lord Dunsany which may be of some interest to your readers:

Going down Piccadilly one day and nearing Grosvenor Place I saw, if my memory is not at fault, some workmen with their coats off—or so they seemed. They had pick-axes in their hands and wore corduroy trousers and that little leather band below the knee that goes by the astonishing named of "York-to-London."

They seemed to be working with peculiar vehemence, so that I stopped and asked one what they were doing.

"We are taking up Piccadilly," he said to me.

"But at this time of year?" I said. "Is it usual in June?"

"We are not what we seem," said he.

"Oh, I see," I said, "you are doing it for a joke."

"Well not exactly that," he answered me.

"For a bet?" I said.

"Not precisely," said he.

And then I looked at the bit that they had already picked, and though it was broad daylight over my head it was darkness down there, all full of the southern stars.

"It was noisy and bad and we grew aweary of it," said he that wore corduroy trousers. "We are not what we appear."

They were taking up Piccadilly altogether.

Goon Squad

To the editor:

Upon considering the letter written by Miss Quinn regarding the choice of Goon Squad members, I find myself to be in total agreement with her. The choice of the Goons for 1963 seemed to be a bit lop-sided in relation to the proportion of Greeks picked for this position with the number of independents chosen.

It seems to me that the Goon Squad will be composed of more than 60% Greeks. That is, the Greek population on campus is roughly 60% of the population whereas the independent population is roughly 40% of the population.

Miss Quinn seems to be terribly hurt by the fact that the criteria for choosing members of the Goon Squad was unfair and although I agree with her I wish to enlighten her (as well as others) with a matter of definition that her letter ignored.

Webster defines tradition as the "act of delivering into the hands of another." So by definition we can see that the Traditions Commission which picks the Goon Squad is not unjust in its ways. For as one can plainly see the tradition of being a Goon is "delivered from one fraternity man or sorority woman into the hands of another." And by the mere recognition of definition I find both myself and Miss Quinn to be at fault.

To conclude I can only reaffirm the fact that this is a fraternity run school whether it be for better or for worse. But as a consolation Miss Quinn I can only say, "To err is human, to forgive divine."

Invisible

To the Editor:

An open letter to Patrick Rollins and Martha Gettinger

Your criticism of Syracuse's "Invisible Man"—4/16—clearly bears out the thesis of his most recent article: that labels, stereotypes, and other such subterfuge are the most consistently used contemporary devices for avoiding meaningful confrontation with controversial ideas.

First, dwelling on the exact chronological order of hemlock and exile only serves to disregard the serious moral and intellectual implications of their use in squashing ideas whenever (and wherever) they are used.

Secondly, by refusing to "stoop" to answer the charge of Communist or "dupe," our "Invisible Man," means, I think, that once you label him as such you automatically dismiss the merit and "truths" of anything he says.

Thirdly, are you sure that "the violent seizure of power by a revolutionary minority is the basic tenet of the communist party?" An examination of Marx's writings and the Communist party in Italy, France, England and America would suggest that there are more basic tenets than violent overthrow of existing governments.

Many present day Marxists and Communists, including Gus Hall, have held that the single most common stereotype in connection with revolution is to equate it with violence. The latter stereotype often ignores Marx's observation that "force is the midwife of every old society which is pregnant with the new."

In fact we have seen that in the south violence has been employed by those who seek to defend the status quo. Are they, therefore, revolutionaries?

But whether Marx, Hall or the American Communist Party observes or advocates the use of violence is secondary to the desirability of listening to those who criticize the shortcomings of American Democracy so that we may empirically test, predict, understand, and change our behavior and, therefore, the behavior of the other fellow (i.e., the communists or the birches, etc.).

When Communists or Marxists point to social, political and economic inequalities in our system, it is important that we consider, whenever possible, all the basic tenets of their philosophy; listen to all of their criticisms; observe their behavior; and examine our responses to them or we will in fact "dupe" ourselves.

I dare say that you proved quite predictable to our "Invisible Man." By making men and their ideas invisible we make it easy to dodge intellectual integrity and moral responsibility. Under such circumstances we see, hear, read, and feel only those things which enhance our preconceived biases.

THE CUTTING ROOM

SU: Fadeout

by John E. Greenwald

The Cutting Room closes up shop with this issue. In a few weeks we'll take our movieola and film cement back to New York City.

In Hollywood's cutting room the film editor picks and chooses the footage he wants and discards the film he doesn't need to create desired effect.

After four years on the Hill, including two on the Daily Orange, we've reached the conclusion that what goes on in high university places isn't far different from what goes on in a motion picture cutting room.

"Image" seems the driving force of Syracuse University. Let's cut and splice the facts and present the lie, big or white, to the outside world. In movies "editing" is part of the art form. In higher education "editing" is a self deceptive sham.

During our two years in the Hellbox we've seen and heard about a good deal of "footage" that has eventually ended on the administration's cutting room floor.

There have been the deans and chairmen who have sat on their best faculty members letting them rot away as Instructors only to look surprised when those admired teachers leave. The more students admire a faculty member the greater his chances of leaving, it seems.

Terry Hughes has pointed how some highly placed people think the Board of Publications, if not the publications themselves, are their own private fiefdom. Deans try to "slap the hands" of seniors who were told by the Chancellor, their freshman year, of the advantages of individuality. Deans have lied to students' faces. Vice presidents talk about "good" Daily Orange editors and "bad" Daily Orange editors, the implication of the amount of favorable and unfavorable stories not going unnoticed.

The collected stories of Elliot Stamler, Sam Girgus, Alan Millstein and Sid Hurlburt would probably read like a spy thriller with intrigue, knives in backs, and deception galore. Who knows how many student leaders have been paid off with promises of graduate recommendations?

All of which is done to maintain the image.

Take the intellectual atmosphere of Syracuse University. There isn't any, despite excellent departments, Festivals of Art and thriving cultural presentations. The student body seems as intellectually dull now as four years ago when freshman bull sessions seemed equally divided between philosophy and football.

Sure SU publishes "Syracuse 10" so it can give the lie to fact there isn't enough good writing on campus to fill a decent quarterly. And the aura of "professionalism" so engulfs the Hill that those students who would like to publish their works do it with a mimeograph machine borrowed from a university department that doesn't want its name mentioned.

For the university's attempt to be "slick" scared away these students as it now upsets many more.

Slickness and image. A beautiful new fieldhouse that shouldn't have been built. Twenty years of the New York Times not in microfilm in the main library. A dry campus but a wet stadium soused with flasked alumni. Deans and chairmen who let their petty egos override education.

A journalism school people with pedants but not journalists. A communications center that no one has been able to figure out: will it be a great experiment and educator in mass communications or a four acre tombstone? University reports that seem more concerned with new buildings than what kind of professor and student will fill them.

The red brick and green glass of SU's buildings are its image. But how close is that image to the reality inside them? After four years we seem able only to see how far apart they are, especially among the students.

Perhaps our years on the DO have altered our perspective. Perhaps if we didn't hang around the Hellbox we wouldn't have heard about the vice president who pressured Marshall street merchants not to advertise in "The Sword of Damocles." Or of the other vice president who was out of town recruiting basketball players.

But the DO deans like to read, the "Syracuse 10" vice presidents show to trustees, the alumni magazines we'll get next fall won't have any of that. Only the grape vine picks up the undesired footage from the university's cutting room.

We can't decry the education we received here or how the Daily Orange saved our last two years from becoming the ultimate of boredom. Syracuse University is so large that we will never know what it's all about. But the image it is trying to create is certainly far from whatever truths we have discovered our four years here.

The university tells us these are our salad days: green lettuce and Italian dressing. They forget to tell us about the vinegar.

All we can hope is that next year's DO and future DOs report some of that vinegar and aren't satisfied with Information Service's version of SU.

For us our salad days are over. Onward to the meat and potatoes.

MUSIC

Baez

Although Joan Baez sings with what is probably the best voice in the field of folk music today, and although she plays guitar as well as any folk performer, she has neither the appeal of the more commercial groups typified by Peter, Paul and Mary, nor that of the more ethnic performers, such as Oscar Brand.

Her material consists of unsophisticated folk songs for the most part. Many require an explanation which she never gives. Her renditions are far more subtle and pretty than most of the songs.

Her lack of affectation may be appealing or annoying depending on the listener's temperament, but it never makes for a feeling of rapport between her and the audience. (Unless the audience is also besmocked, besandaled, and belligerent towards defenseless spotlight men.)

At one point during Wednesday night's concert at the War Memorial, Joan Baez stepped completely out of character and did a well received rock and roll impression. From this point on, she could have had the audience in the palm of her hand. But apparently, she does not really want them there. The rest of the concert droned on in a monotony of exquisite sweetness and boredom.

Miss Baez has the potential of real greatness if she ever learns to care at all for the people to whom she sings.

MUSIC

Student Music

Works by four student composers were featured Thursday morning at a Crouse College concert as part of the Festival of Arts.

The program opened with the "Prelude and Prologue" from the "Bridge of San Luis Rey." The composer, Frank Digiacomo was at the piano to accompany baritone, William Black. Unfortunately, the singer did not seem to be the featured performer, but rather took a somewhat secondary role. The composition seemed to be extended because of the text's length. Due to this some dramatic ideas lost their effect.

"Sinfonia Sacra" by Stuart Raleigh was composed of musical impressions for organ of paintings by Bosch, Dali, Brueghel and Dore. To a certain extent, Mr. Raleigh was successful. The representation of Bosch's work was harsh and angular, while a sterile, austere kind of beauty fell Dali's lot.

Mr. Raleigh's "Sarabande" which followed was by far the most appealing of his works played during the concert. Martha Kolota sang the text which was written by William Archibald. The melodic line was beautiful and delicate with wispish accompaniment provided by Mr. Raleigh.

Michael Spitz's composition was in many ways the most encouraging of the concert. Mr. Spitz directed a small chorus in his "Pastorale." Its lack of pretentiousness and sweet melody was something of a shock coming from a young composer.

Finally, Gaspare Mangione (more commonly known as Gap Mangione of the "Jazz Brothers"), showed how you can take a brass ensemble, turn it into a jazz band and back in one easy movement. The audience enjoyed it. What more can a composer ask?

RIVIERA-CINEMA — The Riv holds over "Sundays and Cybelle" so all you lovers of little girls, amnesia men, foggy sunlight and raindrop refraction can cry at the tragic end. It's all society's fault. It caused the pilot to kill a girl in the war and loose his memory. It caused the father to leave his own girl alone at the convent. It caused the brutal end to their "affair." Such unhappiness, such tears, such anguish. It's enough to make one become an anarchist. Co-featured is Jean-Pierre Cassel romping through one of Philip DeBroca's charming new wave comedies, "The Love Game." The best double bill in town, hey Mr. Bruce. "Sundays" at 6:45 and 10:05 p.m. "Love" at 8:40 p.m.

PARAMOUNT — If you were at the IFC concert last Sunday you were brought in on a frightening secret, which the university has been trying to hide from you. The Fieldhouse has been converted into a giant aviary where the administration is training birds to teach classes. They figured if Alfred Hitchcock could get such a crowd into the Paramount by training "The Birds" to attack people, why not train some birds of your own to teach classes. Birdseed is cheaper than money, although the crow some of the teachers are made to eat here has shooed many away. "Birdbrains" at 7:15 and 9:40 p.m.

ECKEL — We're indebted to Walt Disney, who has helped make our cinema life unbearable and our weekend copy bulky, for bringing in a double feature for us this week. "The Miracle of the White Stallions" stars Robert Taylor, Lilli Palmer, Curt Jergens and Eddie Albert. This touching story follows "The Longest Day," which filed out this week, leaving busy ushers sweeping up rusty combat medals. Anyone who lost his Order of the Green Fern medal in row C should contact the Eckel management — you've been drafted. "Woof Your Cookies" at 7 and 9:35.

SHOPPINGTOWN — Last 14 days for "Mutiny on the Bounty." If you've missed this one, don't. Run out now. So what if you're in the midst of an exam. Run, do you hear, run. Now look, we've got better things to do with our time than stand here waiting for you. Run . . . . Come on, run. OK, we'll turn our back, then you run. Right. Here we go. Ready. Now run. Now we're turning around. Oh, no, you're still here but the teacher has left. Maybe you can still catch him and take the exam at Shoppingtown at 8 p.m.

KEITH'S — Hey, gang, remember when you were in high school and all the world was rosy? There was nothing but milk shakes and dates and football games and swimming? Well, we don't know how you survived a date while swimming at a football game drinking a milk shake. But we digress. One of the high points of your puberty has returned. No, not awareness of the opposite sex — "Giant" has returned, silly. That masterpiece of the screen is back again with Elizabeth Taylor, Rock Hudson and the late James Dean. The co-feature is "Philbert" which shouldn't be confused with puberty unless you're very confused. "Regression" at 8:40.

LOEW'S — Joseph E. Levine has brought the screen world such excitement as "Hercules" with that great actor Steve Reeves. Now he presents Sophia Loren in "Madame," based on the old knock-knock joke: "Knock, knock. Who's there? Madame. Madame who? Madame foot's caught in the door." We don't know where Sophia's foot is caught but this is the same team that won an Oscar for "Two Women." Any bets on this one? Co-feature is "Face in the Rain," the story of an old degenerate who wanders the streets of Madras during the monsoon season without an umbrella. "Your Bet" at 6:20 and 9:35 p.m. "You're Wet" at 8:10 p.m.

ON STAGE

CORONET THEATER — Peter Maloney gives his farewell campus performances as he romps through Carlo Goldoni's "A Servant of Two Masters," the funniest Boar's Head show since "Little Mary Sunshine," 8:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

Bacon's Opera Premiere Set

The world premiere of the revised version of the opera, "A Tree on the Plains," will be presented at the University Regent Theatre at 8:30 p.m. May 2, 3 and 4.

The music for the opera was written by Ernst Bacon, composer-in-residence at Syracuse University. Text is by Paul Horgan, nationally known Catholic author of novels, history works and magazine articles. Both have won Pulitzer Prizes for their works.

Commissioned originally by The League of Composers in 1940, the work had its premiere at the Spartanburg, S. C. festival. Later it was played on many campuses including Denver, Syracuse, Columbia, North Carolina, Harvard, Stanford and many other colleges and universities.

Award

It received the David Bispham award for contemporary opera in 1946 in Chicago.

This year marks the first performance of the composition, after revision.

The opera concerns the lives of Southwest plains dwellers and its action is planned in four phases: God and Death, The Earth, The Lovers and Daylight.

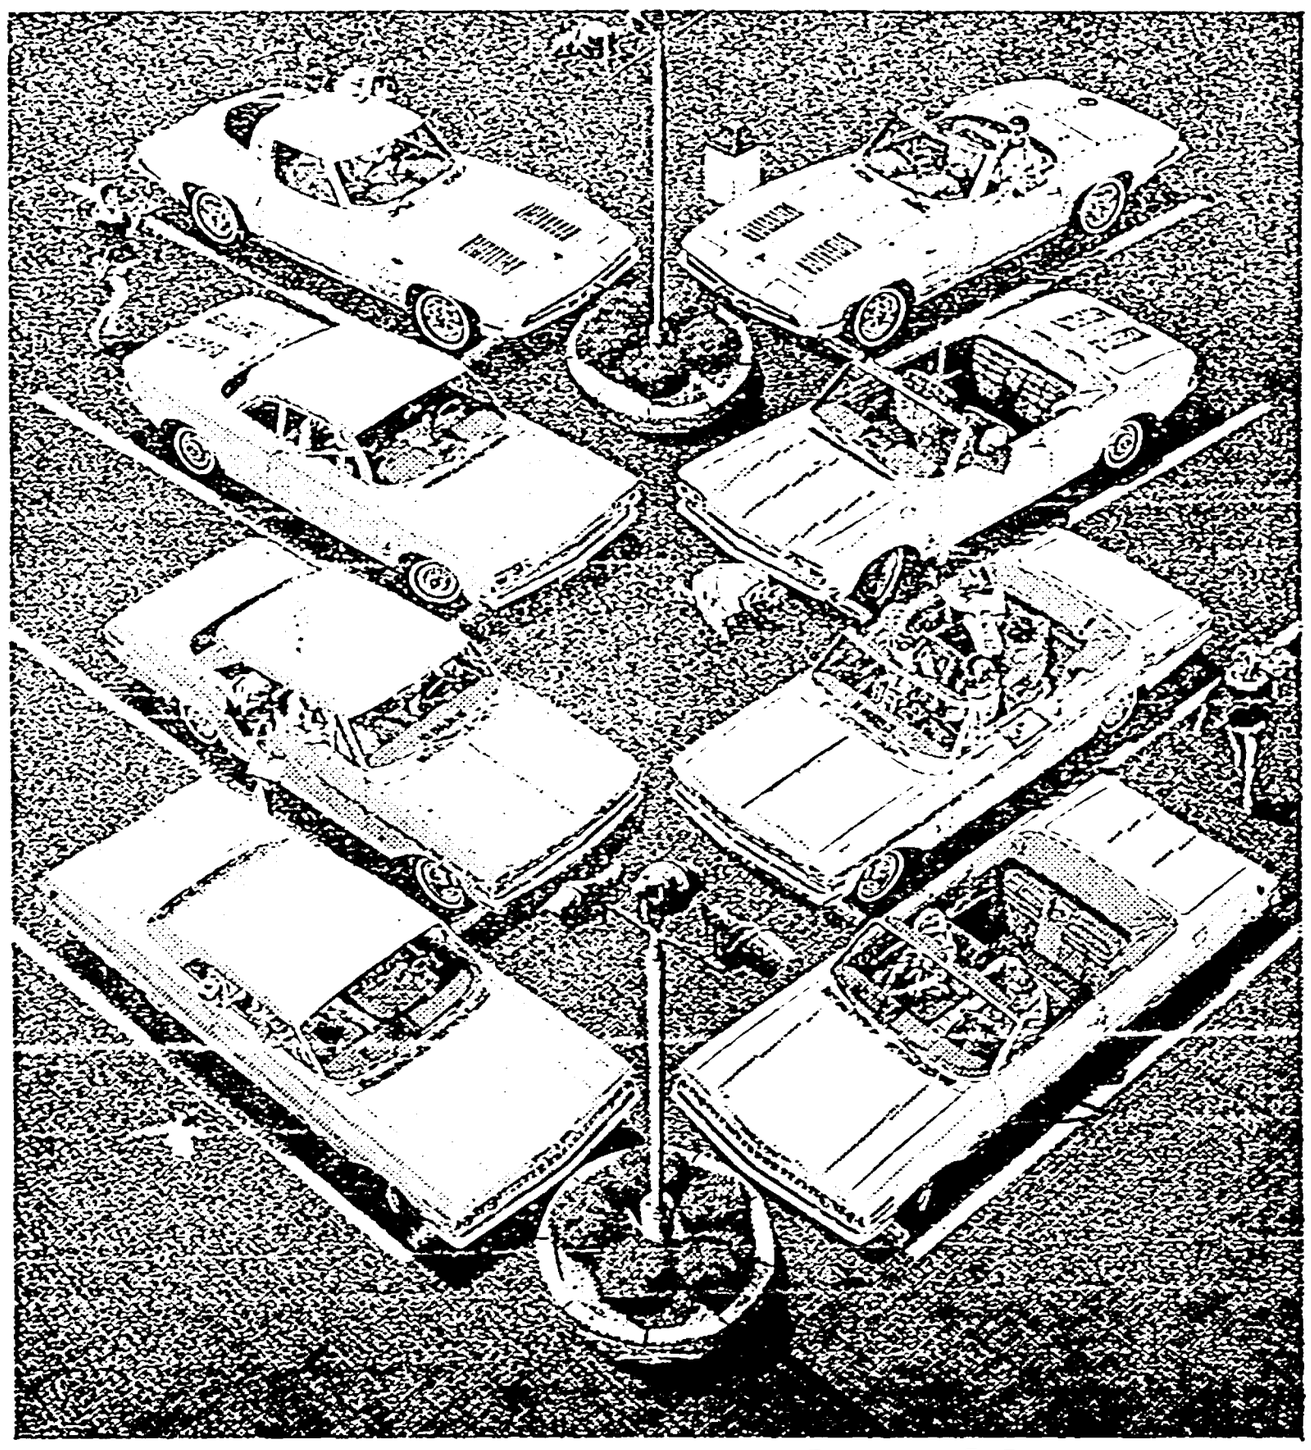
Actors

Actors speak their lines to music, supported by choral groups and orchestration. A strong religious undercurrent is the form of commentary in "A Tree on the Plains." However, the basis of the religious meaning is broad enough to be significant to anyone.

Residents of Syracuse and the surrounding communities will star in the production, which will be staged by Syracuse University drama head G. F. Reidenbaugh.

Ernst Bacon, the composer, will be musical director. He has served on the faculties of The Eastman School, Hamilton and Converse Colleges. After receiving his M.A. from the University of California in 1935 he studied under Alexander Raab, Glenn D. Gunn, Ernest Block and Karl Weigl.

Founder of the Bach Festival of Carmel, Calif., Bacon has appeared in United States and European concerts.



Winner of a Pulitzer prize in 1932 and a Guggenheim fellowship in 1939, he has been director of the School of Music at Syracuse University and is now the University's producing composer.

Written by Horgan

Paul Horgan, who wrote the text, received his literary degree at Wesleyan University and then studied at Southern Methodist University, Notre Dame University and Boston College. A member of the production staff at the Eastman Theatre from 1923 to 1926, he later became librarian and assistant to the president at New Mexico Institute in Roswell, N. M. At this time he received a Guggenheim fellowship.

Horgan was winner of the Harper Prize in novel competition in 1933. He also won the Bancroft prize, the Collins prize and the Champion award of the Catholic Book Club in 1957. His book, "Rio Grande in American History" won the Pulitzer Prize in 1954.

'Do You Really See Color?'

Do you know what color the chairs are in Huntington B. Crouse Hall lobby?

If you don't, you're a victim of looking at color but not seeing it, Fred Demarest, head of the School of Journalism photography program, said in a Festival of the Arts lecture Thursday.

Demarest noted that many photographers using color film face the same problem—not seeing the colors when they take the picture.

Demarest opened his slide lecture with photographs of campus—red maple leaves against the gray background of Hendricks Chapel, football games, cheerleaders.

"Bright colors look even brighter in the rain," he said, showing a slide of two women in dark coats holding pink and green umbrellas on a gray, rainy day.

Even snow can be colorful, he commented. Wintertime photographs of Smith Hall and other campus areas proved this.

Orange oars against a gray Lake Onondaga showed the color of the crew team, while two SU runners in orange, edging out white-clad Cornell runners illustrated color in track.

The water in the men's gym pool during a swimming meet, Demarest said, leads to "interesting color and reflection patterns."

From the campus, Demarest's slides showed Maine and then went west across the country, through the wheat fields of the midwest, the Rocky Mountains, the West Coast and Hawaii.

Ex-Student Held in Theft

Former Syracuse University student Robert B. Chappell, 22, of Jamesville was arraigned last weekend in city court on a third degree burglary charge.

Chappell is alleged to have broken into two Hill cottages and stolen items of furniture valued at $567.

Another former student, John Board of Stamford, Conn., is being held for questioning for the burglaries.

The alleged thefts took place in White and Roosevelt Cottages on Irving Ave. The cottages were completely ransacked.

Taken were three beds, two mattresses, five desk lamps, two study desks, a desk chair, five regular chairs, three mirrors, two dressers, two book cases, four tables, a hall clock, two rugs, a couch, a piano bench, and a tool box filled with tools.

Bail for Chappell was set at $500 by judge Francis R. Moran.

'Event' Grows To Quarterly

Event, a magazine published by University College, is changing its format and will become a public affairs quarterly.

The first issue of the revised publication is expected July 1.

The magazine was started four years ago as a listing of cultural and civic events with a first printing of 1,200 copies. Present circulation is 8,000.

Event is mailed without charge to community residents on request. Robert D. Bergeron, one of three new editors named, said the present mailing list will be continued for the time being.

Harold Vaughn and Douglas Kerr of the UC staff will also edit the new publication.

Bergeron said one reason for the change was that Event was duplicating a cultural calendar published by the local Council of Arts and Sciences.

He said the July issue will include a calendar of public affairs meetings and events, a profile of government organizations in the community, an article on urban planning and a book review section.

He said listings of progams of the Syracuse University FM station, WAER, will be carried in a separate publication printed more frequently than the present schedule.

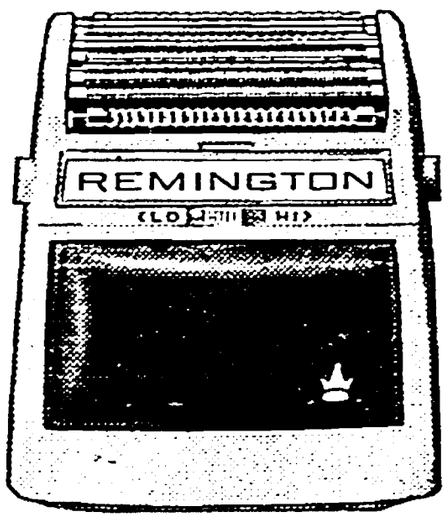
Q: Dear Answer Lady: My boyfriend rubs me the wrong way. Please help me!



A: Dear Irritated Frosh.

Yours may be an emotional problem. I don't think so.

I feel you're suffering from simple "Whisker Rub." Most girls have come up against this same trouble.

My advice: Go to the bookstore and buy him a REMINGTON® 25. (Use any excuse for the gift. A birthday, Groundhog Day or the eve of Bacon's Rebellion.) You'll be surprised how much closer you two will be. You see, Dear Irritated, the REMINGTON 25 is a powerful shaver. Powerful enough to shave closer... faster...smoother. Sports a man-size shaver head. It has roller combs, too. They roll skin down, comb whiskers up. Push them in the path of six rows of diamond-honed cutters. (And other jazz like that.)

You may wonder how the Answer Lady knows so much about shavers? Well, you see, my dear, I am really a man. I live on fraternity row. I use a REMINGTON shaver myself. Maybe you should give up this guy. I'll call you Saturday.

DemarestGetsJ-School Post

Fred A. Demarest, assistant professor in the School of Journalism, has been named head of the photography program of the school's graphic arts department.

Dean Wesley C. Clark and graphic arts department chairman Edmund C. Arnold made the announcement Sunday.

Prof. Demarest came to Syracuse in 1956 and developed the photography program. With bachelor's and master's degrees in fine arts from Iowa State University, he served as an Air Force photography officer and in civilian life did photography for such publications as American Home Magazine.

He has also started a series of seminars that bring outstanding photographers to campus.

Law Prof to Speak

George A. Alexander, SU professor of law, will speak on "School Segregation in the North — the Constitutional Question" at 11 a.m., May 2 in the Congdon Room of the Law School.

Pink "ride wanted" and blue "rider wanted" cards are available.

Eye Tests Set For Motorists

Get out your contact lenses and eye-glasses. If you are going blind, you may be in danger of losing your New York State drivers license.

Gov. Nelson Rockefeller has signed into law a bill passed by the state legislature which requires all licensed drivers to have their eyes examined at least once every nine years.

The law takes effect July 1, 1964. Details have not yet been worked out, but plans call for all state motorists to be examined within a reasonable period after the program is enacted.

Current laws require eye tests only when drivers are applying for new licenses or when they are involved in serious accidents.

Law College Addition Gets Going in August

By CHARLES BARNEY

A new addition to the Ernest I. White College of Law, made possible by an $800,000 gift, will be started in August.

The gift was made possible by Arnold M. Grant, an attorney in New York City and alumnus of the SU College of Law.

The addition, designed by university architects King and King, will house an auditorium, classrooms, seminar room, mock court room and a lounge. The lounge will be used by both student and faculty as a more formal meeting place than the existing student lounge.

The auditorium will seat approximately 400 people, and by use of a partition will be divided into two classrooms.

Civic Aid

The auditorium, described by the law school's publicity office as the most valuable feature of the addition, will be used for student and civic activities.

All the plans for the addition call for expansion of existing facilities. The addition will be constructed on the stadium side of White Hall.

Grant was graduated from Syracuse University in 1927 and received his degree from the College of Law cum laude in 1929.

He was elected to a six year term as trustee of the University in June 1961.

He is also chairman of the executive committee of the 20th Century Fox board of directors and a member of the executive committees of the Hertz corporation and the Kayser Roth corporation.

Formal announcement of Grant's gift was made last June by Chancellor William P. Tolley. Grant explained the gift as repayment "in part of my debt to the university which directed my thinking and provided the foundation for my future."

Construction company and detailed figures of the cost for the addition have not been released by the university.

ties and education at Buffalo.

Scandura graduated from Michigan in 1953. In addition to his coaching duties on the Hill, Scandura is a mathematics instructor.

He succeeded Gil McDaniel, who left the coaching field to enter business in 1956.

Scandura's successor will inherit a team with an excellent shot at the national championship in 1964, and with very few wrestlers being lost through graduation.

Only an injury rash kept the Orangemen from finishing higher than fourth in this year's national championships.

Andreas said Syracuse will screen applicants carefully before appointing a successor to Scandura. With the announced resignation, a rash of applications are expected.

The announcement confirms current rumors on the Hill that the wrestling team would have a new coach next season.

ID's Busy Little Corner

By CAROL RUBRIGHT

Archbold Gymnasium harbours more than athletes.

A short safari on the first floor of the Men's Gym takes you to the many-faceted world of the Hill's industrial design department.

It's headed by Prof. Arthur Pulos, currently chairman of the spring Festival of the Arts.

The department was first in the nation to offer a bachelor of industrial design degree. It is a branch of the Hill School of Art, and all students must have one year in that school before entering the four-year industrial design program.

As the visitor heads through the entrance to the department, he passes into short royal blue hall with a lowered black and orange ceiling.

The main room, airily divided into five sections, is centered with a huge Leonardo da Vinci sketch of a man with four arms and four legs, representing human engineering.

Each door has a stylized "exit" sign above it — the result of a project in fourth year design. One wall consists of old barn shingles.

Industrial designing is a relatively young field, which "endeavors to take anything which uses production facilities and make it better, more appealing and more competitive." Work is done in plastics, metals, wood, ceramics and paper.

ID courses have no textbooks and no final exams. Marks are determined by an "jury" which passes judgement on individual projects. The department, now numbering of 50 undergraduates, requires physics, mathematics, psychology and marketing courses be taken.

Dr. Pulos, department head, came to Syracuse in 1955 from the University of Illinois. He is one of a small elite of master silversmiths in the country, and has had his work exhibited internationally.

Presently several of his silver pieces, property of the US. Department of State, are touring Europe. One of his industrial designs will be shown in Paris' Louvre this June as part of an international design exhibit.

Dr. Pulos once assigned his students to observe a junk yard, and from its contents reconstruct today's society as an archeologist might.

The unusual task utters his belief that "products reflect the temper of a particular society. What we know about the acients is derived from their artifacts.

"You can tell more about contemporary America by visiting a junk heap than an art gallery."

His office, a startling blue, black and white cubicle, is decorated with an alabaster Greek statute — to remind him of the past; a bronze bowl — made in his home workshop; odds and ends of student projects and Arts Festival miscellania.

"The most exciting thing about the Festival," says Chairman Pulos, "is that the students involved are working in their own professional capacities.

Too often students, in their search for creative expression, have to turn to fraternities, sororities or dormitory life. Pulos noted. The Festival allows them to prove their creative abilities in their chosen fields.

"I hope that someday we won't have to have 'canned' exhibitions at the Festival.

"We ought to hold a real Festival, where all the exhibits are student work, not imported talent."

Abby and Cugie at 3 Rivers

By Jeff Zients

Owner Dom Bruno adds another all plus show to his smash season with the engagement of Xavier Cugat and Abby Lane who opened at his Three Rivers Inn last Friday evening. The charming Latin musician and his beautiful songstress wife head a very strong bill which features comedian Tony Valo and dancers Bracia and Tybee.

Valo is a fairly hip young man who scores with digs at his wife, suburbia and the city of Syracuse itself. Working a very likeable George Burnsish voice into song, Mr. Valo throws out one liners on Khruschev, marriage, and general Americans.

Mr. Cugat comes out next to introduce the exciting dance team of Bracia and Tybee. They do three numbers in styles varying from slow interpretative to a modern jazz orientated treat. Miss Tybee is beautifully costumed and this serves to add just a final touch to an act that is magnificently graceful and a thrill to watch.

After a very clever "credits" song in which Cugat mentions the people responsible for Abby's clothes, furs, and jewelry, Miss Lane comes on with a rousing "Got a Lot of Livin' to Do." She segues into some Italian songs climaxing with "Volare." Cugie is watching her and his movements are overwhelmingly comical. Although Miss Lane complained of laringitis, her voice sounded as smooth and as enthralling as ever. But then we are a little prejudiced. In our opinion all Miss Lane really has to do is stand there, for what a stunning and entrancing young woman she is! Her singing is a delightful "extra."

After a medley of Cugie's hit including his theme "My Shawl" Abby swings a powerful rendition of "Mack the Knife." Here she exhibits an amazing vocal power and control. Next comes a dance with Abby, Bracia and Tybee doing a Bossa Nova. All three demonstrate their fine terping ability with this Latin beat.

While Abby is off to change, Cugie tells some amusing stories and his skill as a jokester is outstanding. He is hilarious and quite endearing at the same time.

When Abby comes out again she asks for volunteers to dance to Cugie's music. Highlight of this portion must be a wild cha-cha session with Leon Woods. Quipped Cugie "Not so close, my name isn't Eddie Fisher!"

After a very friendly and modest goodnight the due gets off to rousing applause. The show was a full ninety minutes of fun, beauty, strong vocals and, of course the dynamic sounds of the world famous Cugat musicianship.

Anti-Discrimination Work Continues

By AUDREY LIPPMAN
Junior Editor

A campus fraternity was interviewed Wednesday by the Hill Anti-Discriminatory Clause Board in connection with membership clauses in terms of restriction by race, religion or origin.

The fraternity is one of three on campus that indicated restrictive clauses in response to an InterFraternity Council survey and a follow-up survey by the board, according to Dean of Men Earle W. Clifford.

In order to conduct interviews before the end of the semester with the two other fraternities involved, Clifford said the board will meet weekly instead of every other week as formerly scheduled.

At the third meeting of this group, the board will decide how to proceed with interviews of other sororities and fraternities on campus, he said.

The board has come to the no decisions but rather focuses on the elaboration of written statements to clarify discrimination on campus, he said. All Hill sororities and fraternities will be interviewed, he added.

Besides clarifying the situation on discrimination, Clifford said this survey will update files on present membership statements as they appear in national constitutions and local bylaws.

Appreciates Help

He said he appreciates the response and cooperation received from all fraternity and sorority groups. 'The local chapters have been especially helpful and the attitude of the first group interviewed was a constructive one," he said.

"It is safe to predict if we can continue in the same climate, the board will be in a position to both effectively and quickly meet its responsibilities," Clifford said.

Three student members, James Morris, Joint Student Government president, Kate Antony, JSG vice president and George (Skip) Stanger, IFC president, were present for the first time as newly elected officials.

Other members of the board include Clifford, Dean of Women Marjorie C. Smith, Joline Johnson, Panhellenic vice president, John Broule, of the College of Engineering and Dr. Irwin Deutscher, a representative of the sociology honorary, Alpha Kappa Delta.

Peace Corps Test Slated Saturday Morning Downtown

Syracuse University students available for summer training programs for Peace Corps service in 44 countries must take a placement test at 8:30 a.m. Saturday, Room 360 Federal Building in downtown Syracuse.

Peace Corps Director Sargent Shriver reminds students there are 4,000 new opportunities in the Peace Corps, with training slated to begin in June, July and August.

A new test consisting of a half-hour section on general aptitude and another section of the same length on modern language aptitude will be given for the first time Saturday. Candidates who have any background in French or Spanish must take an additional one-hour proficiency test. The former Peace Corps test took four to eight hours to complete.

Teacher Trainee Office Opened

The Inter-University Program, Project I—a five-year secondary teacher training experiment — opened its new building formally Tuesday at 406 University Pl. The structure formerly was a Syracuse University men's living center.

Among other facilities in the new building is a closed circuit television studio for experimental use.

Combining talents of Syracuse, Rochester, Buffalo and Cornell Universities, the program is concerned with teachers of social studies and English. It is sponsored by the Ford Foundation.

Architects Get Tuition Awards

Two school of architecture students will have part of next year's tuition paid by the American Institute of Architects.

Robert Greenberg of the Bronx and Frank Warr of Clifton, N.J., recently received grants from the AIA. Greenberg's is for $1,000 and Warr's totals $600. Both students presently are fourth-year undergraduates.

Art Ed Honorary Elects Officers

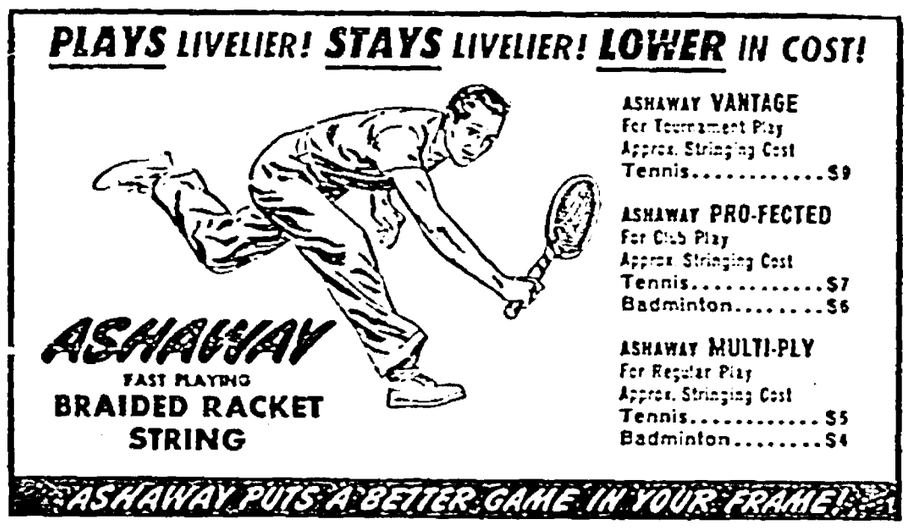
Sigma Chi Alpha, art education honorary, has elected Sandra Podolin is its new president. Other officers are Pat Birnbaum, vice president; Sandra Trionfi, secretary; and Marsha Heinbaugh, treasurer.

New initiates of the honorary are Tammy Katz, Dianne Johnson, Marsha Heinbaugh, Nancy Polster, Beatrice Shelly, Jenifer Wyman, Carol Framke, Anne Warshaw, Sandra Trionfi and Hartha Minkler.

Also Sharon Townshend, Margie Westrick, Linda Colten, Louise Bauman and Kish Matoba. Luke Oscuro and Katie Wylie, pledges to the honorary, will be initiated shortly.

Nite to Address Nursing Alums

Miss Gladys Nite, nursing research artist, will be guest speaker at the Alumni Homecoming Day and twentieth anniversary celebration of the SU School of Nursing.



Miss Nite's speech is scheduled for 10 a.m. Saturday at Marshall Auditorium at the College of Forestry.

Presently associated with Community Studies, a non-profit research organization, Miss Nite has titled her speech "The Role of Nursing in the Recovery of the Patient with a Myocardial Infraction."

The lecture is sponsored by Omicron Nu, national nursing honorary.

The University of Buffalo hosts the team Saturday.

Oarmen Open Season In Packard Cup Meet

The Syracuse University crew opens its season Saturday at Dartmouth when coach Loren Schoel's shell will try for its fifth Packard Cup win.

Syracuse was a three length victor over Dartmouth in last season's race at Hanover, N.H. The Orange has won the trophy every year since it was established in 1959.

In the first varsity shell against the "Big Green" will be Steve Gladstone, No. 7; Ted Kakas, No. 6; Tom Prindiville, No. 5; Don Dick, No. 4; Capt. Bill Sanford, No. 3; Gerry Haslach, No. 2; Walt Barber bow and Giles Vander Bogert stroke. Dick Hersh will be coxwain in the varsity shell.

The jayvee shell will have Dan Hogan at stroke; Paul Eckhardt, No. 7; Scott Sanford, No. 6; Bruce Buckley, No. 5; Bob Jackson, No. 4; Dave Norris, No. 3; Phil Pond, No. 2; Frank Benson at bow and John Reed at coxswin.

According to frosh coach Gene Perry, the freshman shell will probably include Bob Whyte at stroke, John Murray at No. 5; Chuck Pellock at No. 6; Stan Johnson at No. 5; Bruce Wilson at No. 4; Bill Rossell at No. 3; Dennis Zutant at No. 2; Charles Gray at bow and John Barnum at coxswain.

Dartmouth opened its season last week with a loss to Boston University.

May 4 at Lake Onondaga the Orangemen will row against Cornell and Navy for the Goes Trophy in their first home race.

The IRA Regatta will be at Syracuse June 15. Fifteen colleges and universities will compete in the regatta for national championships.

At Dartmouth last year it was an Orange clean sweep with the junior varsity and frosh shells winning over the two mile course.

Varsity Nine at Lafayette; Frosh Bow In At Home

The Orange baseballers will attempt to return to winning ways tomorrow when they invade Easton, Pa., for an encounter with Lafayette.

Last Saturday, Syracuse dropped both ends of a doubleheader to Pittsburgh, 9-4 and 2-1. The twin loss left the Hill record at three wins and four defeats.

Coach Ten Kleinhans will tap either Phil Schoff or Ed Barnowski as his starting hurler for tomorrow's contest.

Schoff, a tall right-hander, was scheduled to pitch Wednesday's postponed game at Cornell.

In a relief appearance against Pitt, Schoff limited the Panthers to one run in six innings.

Barnowski, also a right-hander, was a hard-luck pitcher for the third time on Saturday. He gave up only four hits to Pitt, but wound up on the short end of the 2-1 score.

The sophomore sensation has yielded a mere 10 hits in three complete games this season. However, his record stands at 1-2 due to his teammates hitting lapses.

Kleinhans expects to field a nine composed of Ed Macner, Bob Cohen, Pat Lutz and Pat Antonelli in the infield, with Dave Rounds, Bob Lelli, and Dick Taylor patrolling the outfield, and Bob Jacuk behind the plate.

For the yearling baseballers, Saturday is opening day. First-year coach Larry Katzman takes his crew of 18 to Lew Carr Field in a 2:30 contest with the Cornell Frosh.

He is expected to go with either Biff Longfield or Al Lasurdo, both righthanders. In the infield, Luis Sierra will be at third, Terry Maris at short, Boy Coyne at second, and Dick Haight at first. From left to right in the outfield will be "Bunky" Rutherford, Dick Knapp and Dave O'Neill. Bill Burnett will be behind the plate.

Katzman and his squad are anxious to get in some playing time. "After all those weeks of practice inside, we're really anxious to let loose," says Katzman.

"They've shown me a lot of hustle and desire, and we should play some fine basbeall if the weather allows."

Colgate Stickmen Invade Syracuse

The high-flying Orange lacrosse team will gun for its fourth consecutive win tomorrow when Colgate's Red Raiders invade Manley Field. Game time is 2:30 p.m.

Syracuse is bolstered by a 19-0 shutout over Clarkson Tuesday, but will be lacking three starters against Colgate.

Sophomore attackman Tom Rennie is out indefinitely with a kidney injury. Duncan Crowther, a midfielder, has been sidelined for two weeks and probably won't see action.

Midfielder Bill Wormuth injured his Achilles tendon in the Hobart tilt and isn't mended.

Coach Roy Simmons will depend upon attackers Ron Fraser, John Pappas and Bob Ramsdell to provide the scoring punch tomorrow.

Both Fraser and Pappas tallied five goals against Clarkson. Fraser leads Bill Orange in scoring with 22 goals in four games.

Defensemen Bob Ramsdell moved to an attack spot in the Clarkson encounter and surprised with four goals.

The No. 1 midfield boasts captain Mel Davis, footballer John Mackey and a 200-pound sophomore Dave Stringer.

On defense, Walt Reese holds forth along with big Jack Salerno and Jim Taylor.

Goalie Pete Coe has allowed only 18 goals in four contests and is pushing for All-America mention.

Syracuse stands 3-1 on the year. The sole Piety loss was at the hands of Johns Hopkins, 10-7 in the season lid-lifter.

The frosh stickmen open their schedule tomorrow, journeying to Ithaca for a game with the Cornell frosh.

In recent years the Big Red frosh have dominated the series. Syracuse's undefeated '62 squad was the first Orange squad to beat the Red freshmen in three years.

Two Gymnasts Make All-America Squads

The Collegiate All-America Gymnastic teams were officially announced this week. Syracuse placed two men on the three squads that were dominated by NCAA Champions of Michigan.

Sid Oglesby, the Syracuse star who edged out teammate Ron Orlick in the Easterns on the long horse, was given the second-team nod by the selection committee.

Senior Corky Voas, who waltzed away with the EIGA tumbling championship, was awarded a third team birth in that division.

The two Syracuse representatives along with Penn State's Tom Seward, who placed twice, and Russ Mills of Yale, were the only eastern representatives on the 27 position squad.

Michigan's mighty Wolverines, who walked away with the nation honors in Gymnastics, similarly dominated the squads. They placed men in 10 of the 27 positions, six receiving first team honors.

Southern Illinois continued in the mid-West power with five men on the squads.

Tom Seward tied with Michigan's Mike Henderson for the first team spot in the floor exercise. It was his second tie. The Orange's Corky Voas matched his score in the same event in the Easterns.

Yale's Russ Mills was named first team on the side horse.

Gil Laros of Michigan was the honors grabber of the squad. He is first-team All-America on the high bar and long horse vaulting. He was named to the third team on the parallel bars. He had little trouble in getting the nod as the No. 1 all-around gymnast.

The squads were chosen by the selection committee based on the performances in the NCAA championships held at the end of March. The committee consists of past presidents of the National Association of Gymnastic Coaches.

Deans Question Abortion Story

By AUDREY LIPPMAN
Junior Editor

Administrative comment followed rapidly Friday on the heels of the Daily Orange preview of the abortion article in the next issue of the Sword Of Damocles.

In a statement issued by Dean of Women Marjorie C. Smith, Dean of Men Earle W. Clifford and University Vice President and Dean of Liberal Arts Eric H. Faigle said:

"It is premature to comment very extensively without an opportunity to read the article. However, assuming that the DO article is accurate and not a publicity stunt by the Sword of Damocles to encourage the sale of its last issue, we have the following reactions:

"We anticipated a need to study the article carefully with the advice of legal counsel in order to meet our responsibility to the Syracuse University coeds whose character and reputation may be under attack."

The statement here refers to Publisher Terrence Hughes statement that "35 verifiable pregnancies were uncovered in two weeks research" and to the statement by Senior Editor Jeffrey Radford that "abortions are increasingly popular among the recourses open to pregnant coeds." The article also implies the moral standards of SU coeds are not up to the level of society.

The statement continues: "We anticipate with interest the reaction of both medical and social work authorities in Syracuse regarding the truth and accuracy of the article as well as any action they may take as a result."

Hughes claimed that his writers consulted local social workers, hill counselors and nearly one hundred university coeds, to background the article.

The third point of the administration statement reads: "We are particularly interested in the latter (the action to be taken and reaction by medical and social work authorities) because the confusing DO story indicates a statistic of 400 pregnancies, but is unclear regarding the number that is the result of Syracuse University having 284 married undergraduate students and an undetermined but signficant number of married graduate students.

"The DO is also hazy in reference to the apparent identification of 400 pregnancies through interviews with fewer than 100 coeds."

The DO story quoted Radford as saying "a figure revealed by a local social worker places the number of SU pregnancies in the neighborhood of 400 annually."

GOON SQUAD MEETS TODAY

The new Goon Squad will meet 2:30 p.m. today in Gifford Auditorium of H. B. Crouse. All members should attend.

Student Union by '66 Tolley Tells Parley

BY ALLAN KORT
Editor-in-Chief

A "University Union" on the Hill came one step closer to reality over the weekend when students, faculty and administrators attending the annual Activities Exchange Conference at Sagamore Lodge drafted eight resolutions to promote the union.

Chancellor William P. Tolley told the 39 delegates that the union is tentatively set for 1966-67 construction. Tolley said that the "university union" is definitely in SU's building program and "is a reality, but the construction cannot be realized until other aspects of the building program, such as the library, are completed."

The delegates, after attending workshops Friday and Saturday, also drafted resolutions concerning "activities and the arts." and "activities and academics" at the university.

Drafted by the conference on the union question were:

1) A DUD (Discuss Union Day) tentatively proposed for May 6, at which time all groups and individuals on campus will be urged to discuss a "university union" at meetings, dinners, and talks,

The DUD suggestion highlights a three-point program using campus communication media to advance the student and faculty interest in a union.

2) That there is a critical ned for a "university union" to serve students, faculty, alumni and administrators.

3) That the dual function of the "university union" board is fund raising and program coordination.

4) That the fund raising committee will enlist the aid of organizations and try to maintain close contact with all committees.

5) That each activity on campus put forth an effort to make a substantial financial contribution to the union.

6) That student government be directed to see if proceeds from the 1964 varsity-alumni football game can be earmarked for the union.

7) That the "university union" board be recognized for its past work and continue as chief agent for the new union.

8) That the name "student union" be changed to "university union."

The group also reviewed and praised a written report by university union director Ann Cooney and public relations director James Palsic which outlined the present union program and needs for a union.

Resolutions for academics and activities which were accepted by the conference Sunday morning were:

1) That an academic board shared by the academic chairmen of the social academic culture commission investigate possible awards for independent academic achievement and to investigate the changing emphasis to academics, not grades.

2) That an evaluation program be initiated to study faculty, methods, and courses

Peace Pilgrim...Walking, Praying

By SUSAN WEINBERG
Junior Editor

Nameless and ageless . . .walking and praying . . .also talking. . .for 25,000 miles. . .back and forth across the United States,

A silver-haired women clad in navy slacks and shirt with a light blue tunic, blue socks and walking shoes is making her way across the country for the third time on a pilgrimage for peace.

The "Peace Pilgrim" as she calls herself has been in Syracuse since Wednesday and is spending the spring walking throughout New York State. Her next stop is Utica and from there all other towns over 25,000 population.

All she carries with her are the clothes on her back and a comb, collapsable tooth brush, ball-point pen, map and leaflets explaining her mission which she keeps in the pockets of her tunic.

"I am walking as a prayer for world peace and as a chance to talk with people along the way to inspire them to do something in their own way for peace," the "Pilgrim" explained in an interview Thursday.

World peace has two aspects, the tanned walker said. "Ultimately I seek outer peace among nations. However, I am actively promoting inner peace — peace within the individual — as a prerequiste for any last peace."

Walking for the last 10 years, the "Peace Pilgrim" believes that the chaotic condition of the world today reflects the "out-of-harmoniousness" and immaturity of the people in every country.

Exchange Student To Study on Hill

By SANDI EHRLICH

Italy will be represented by something more substantial than pizza next year in Syracuse.

An Italian female exchange student will take courses on the Hill in the fall.

Dean Marjorie C. Smith interviewed a number of Italian college students interested in studying in the states during her recent European visit. She said that the university hopes to interest a sorority in providing a portion of the exchange student's room and board. The Italian girl will most likely live in the sorority house, Dean Smith said.

The exchange students will take nine or 10 hours of classes on the Hill, according to Dean Smith. She will have to register at University College, however, because she will not be matriculating for a degree.

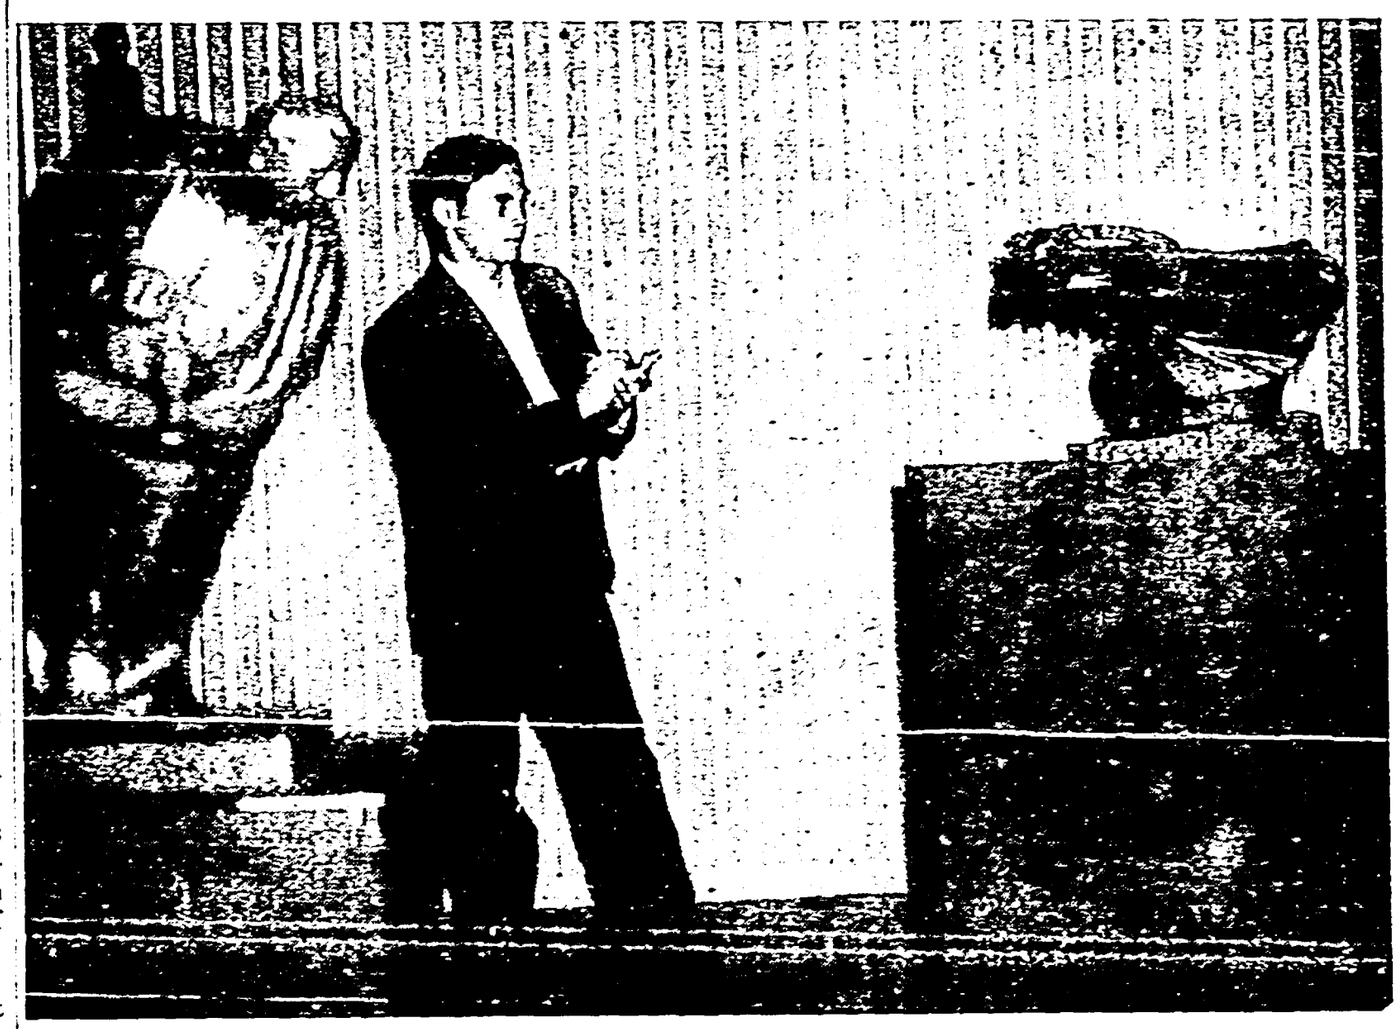
A University College committee will choose the Italian student to study here next year.

Semester Program

Dean Smith sailed to Italy with the Semester-in-Italy group on the SS Constitution in late February. She studied Italian on the boat with the 60 students.

The group made brief stops at Madiera and Gibraltar. Although Dean Smith has been abroad before, these spots were new to her.

They then spent a day in Naples and two days in Genoa.



Dean Smith stayed two weeks in Florence. She attended classes with the Semester program students, and spoke to many of the students individually.

Florence

She visited places of interest around Florence, including art galleries, churches, and concerts. The dean of women described Florence as having "a wealth of

The Editors Speak Out

The Daily Orange, as the campus' only newspaper, has as its major purpose the dissemination of news which affects the university and the students it represents.

Since it is representative of two groups, which traditionally have basic differences, it is the duty of this newspaper to daily give information with exactness and truth; not omitting anything its readers have a right to know; and always using an impersonal and correct form without prejudice and forceful critical thought.

The editors of this paper feel that a student editor is above all, a newspaperman who gives a fair and objective account of all news happenings, but before writing, remembers how powerful the instrument that he is using is and that harm caused to an official or private person can never be completely repaired by an explanation or a rectification.

Since the Daily Orange is a representative of both the university and the students, it must constantly weigh every issue that arises before commenting editorially. As a newspaper it has the duty, once a stand has been made, to support its point of view despite pressures which may arise.

It is not the function of this newspaper, however, to create issues, controversy and the news. It is the purpose of a newspaper to objectively cover the news and give fair comment which would benefit its readers.

Syracuse University is a large complex which consistently reveals good and bad points. We, as editors, intend to inform readers of the goods of this university as often as possible, and criticize bad points when they arise.

We, furthermore, intend to cover the news on a positive, not a negative basis. Editorially, we will take definite stands and not attempt to appease either side in a controversy.

We realize that, as students, we are far from perfect, both in our news coverage and our editorial policy. Because of this weakness, we ask for criticisms of our policies and stands which would receive recognition in our letters column.

As a newspaper representative of a university, we must never overlook the fact that the Daily Orange must be a center for intellectual stimulation for the responsible and mature students on campus.

As newspapermen we have a dogmatic belief in freedom of the press and, therefore, must guarantee the right of all our readers to know what is going on at Syracuse University.

We believe it is the responsibility of this newspaper to examine all areas of this university's life that are vital to its readers.

In fulfilling our pledge of fair, accurate and complete news coverage, we must never forget that the Daily Orange is a newspaper, not a public relations organ.

Color Again

To the Editor:

You want to color me "Sour Grapes." Fine; You've done almost everything else. You've thrown me in your jails for requesting service. You've kept your foot on my neck in the name of peace and tranquility. You've kept me from voting. In fact, you even had me defined by the American Constitution as "three-fifths" of a man, and according to the Dred Scott Decision, I had no rights that you were bound to respect.

But then you were accommodating. You gave me technical emancipation in 1863. In some cases your laws even made me your equal, but you never did. "And, after all, the last analysis is, what has man done?. . .and not what has the law done?"

Yes, I am a "hatchet thrower" also. As a matter of documented fact, if not publicized record, I've been throwing hatchets, in one way or another, for the past one hundred years. Expect more hatchets, pickets, sit-ins, jail-ins, coloring books and whatever else it takes to open your eyes.

You see, we don't intend to wait placidly for those rights of equal citizenship and treatment to be meted out to us one at a time. In fact, the "hatchets," sit-ins. . .etc., are clearly and unequivocally stating that we cannot tolerate, in a nation professing democracy and among people professing equality, the proscriptions placed upon us because of race or color.

It is unfortunate that the Negro is being forced to fight, in any way, for what is due him and is freely accorded other Americans. It is also unfortunate that even today some people should hold to the erroneous idea of racial superiority, despite the fact that the world is fast moving toward an integrated humanity.

Too many have been silent far too long. This university has been silent. And while a moral tone might be found in messages of national leaders, the moral leadership so long needed is still lacking. The saga has been one of hollow legislative enactments and empty electoral campaign oratory. The hindrance is not that Senator James O. Eastland and Alabama Governor George Wallace are staunch segregationist. The problem is that Kennedy is timid.

Maybe they don't know about this "American problem." Yes, "American problem" and not "Negro problem." The sooner we realize the nature of it, the better off we'll all be.

"I hear the chorus of the innocents screaming, 'No, this is not true. How bitter you are,'" I suggest that the innocents ask James Travis, a field secretary for the Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee, who was shot and seriously wounded because of his activities in getting Negroes registered to vote in Greenwood, Mississippi. Or ask the numerous Negroes who have been driven from their plantation homes simply because they registered to vote. You might even inquire in the 15th Ward.

I returned from the South two weeks ago. I wish everyone could visit the Southern section of our country. My reason for going was to attend the Third Annual Conference of the Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee. I met and talked with several field secretaries from the Mississippi Delta. The stories were indeed harsh. That is, of you've never visited Mississippi, and sat in a cold sharecroppers' cabin, seen the hunger, and the children out of school because they had no adequate clothes; seen the bullet holes in the homes of voter registration workers; heard of a young women shot who lay unattended for two hours in a white hospital. It's probably hard to comprehend.

As inconsistent, as it may seem, the lives and persons of voter registration workers cannot be protected, nor can the children of Negro sharecroppers be fed, in the most powerful and wealthy nation in the world.

What has happened in the past cannot be changed. Those events are history. The time has come for men of goodwill to take a good look at what is really happening in this country, and to stop believing those who tell us that everything is fine and equal, and that the Negro is happy and satisfied.

The situation at the university may be a little better than that described, but just because the evil is a little less evil than the other man's, let's not make it holy. And finally, you don't have to color me "sour grapes.." Why don't you ask why?

Greeks

To the Editor:

Although his antagonists are hard-put to defend their antiquated system, the Gordon Beadle Anti-Greek Campaign is delightfully ludicrous to bystanders.

Having renounced the Greek affiliations of a rash youth, Mr. Beadle seems now to have arrived at a point somewhere beyond good and evil, so to speak. His development offers hope that current Greeks will also rise one day to the level of Crusader, for a system is best destroyed from the inside. Perhaps they too will become flagellants and exorcise their possible guilt-feelings which attacks on immaturity.

On the other hand, to criticize others for mistakes that one also made at their level of development seems somewhat unfair. But this could be an injustice only if Mr. Beadle's righteousness were directed toward more serious matters.

As it is now, the image of a horde of Greeks defending their Thermopylae against the crayon-wielding Beadle is too priceless to lose. One hopes that the Greeks will continue to amuse us by not letting the issue lag. Perhaps Panhel and IFC can form a committee to picket Mr. Beadle and the meetings of his little band of kindergarteners.

Pledge Skits

To the Editor:

Numerous malicious and vulgar pledge productions have entertained both brothers and their dates this spring.

Sarcastic skits done in jest in front of those who attend are fun for all, but when pledges and brothers slander coeds who are not members, this, I consider malicious and vulgar.

Certain fraternities, if they do not watch themselves could find themselves slapped with a libel suit. The perverse humor displayed by these houses is enough to make one lose faith in the Greek system. A fraternity brother should adhere to the principles of honor and human dignity.

When a person's reputation is destroyed as if it were a pile of rubbish, then, the odious air of barbarity replaces the sweet smell of spring formals.

SU Bookstore Folksing Features Gallows Four

The Gallows Singers and Elaine Meltzer, featured artists on the newly released LP record, "Folk Festival at Syracuse," will appear at a hootenanny Sunday, May 12, at the Regent Theatre.

The program is rounded out by John Gaines, a local favorite, and Joe Dubey, a resident at the State Medical College who has appeared professionally on the west coast.

Gallows

The Gallows Singers are a group of four Utica College Students who since their initial appearance last November have been lauded by New York State audiences. In addition to entertaining college, service and other groups they recently appeared at New York City's famous Greenwich Village night spot, "The Bitter End."

The quartet was formed after Lynn Jones, lone female member of the group, advertised in the U. C. newspaper for students, interested in folk singing.

Their main interest lies in presenting original interpretations of traditional folk songs. Although they have been together for just a short while, their acceptance has been that usually reserved for more established groups.

The folk singers last appeared in Syracuse at the Regent Theatre with Oscar Brand in April. They have been offered several contracts by major agents. However, they decided to restrict their activities to campuses as much as possible for the next year while they complete their educations.

The folk concert will be under the sponsorship of the Syracuse University Bookstore. There will be a number of representatives from other colleges attending this concert to observe these performers. It is hoped that this presentation will be only the first one in a campus circuit for these acts.

Elaine Meltzer, a senior at Syracuse, has proven to be a popular amateur entertainer in Central New York, having appeared at Harpur College, the S. U. Folk Festival, and various community concerts.

She hopes that this, her first professional appearance will be the start of a career as a folk singer after she graduates.

Tickets for the hoot may be purchased at the Corner Store, Olmsted's, the University College Bookstore and the Regent Theater.

SU Project in Trade Fair

A Syracuse University display will be part of the Poznan Trade Fair when it opens this fall in Poland.

The exhibit, which shows analysis and development of a highly-specialized vehicle, is the product of three industrial design students. It will be part of an American display on the importance of industrial design in this country.

Prof. Arthur J. Pulos, head of the SU School of Art's industrial design program, is in charge of the project.

He quotes the Office of International Trade Promotion as expressing keen interest in this exhibit and indicating that if the Hill show is successful at Poznan it may become a permanent part of international American trade displays.

Russian Music

On Wednesday, the male chorus of students of the Air Force Russian Language program at SU will present a concert in Gifford Auditorium.

The program, scheduled for 8 p. m., will include Russian Church songs, Russian Folk songs and American songs with solos, trios and quartets.

Modern warm-water laundering methods frequently fail to remove bacteria that are the cause of any number of serious infections, ranging from boils to pneumonia.

UP IN THE AIR

TV Ratings

By Dan Stone

TODAY'S BROADCASTING columnist is WAER-FM's news director, Dan Stone.

If Huckleberry Hound's television ratings outdraw the President's press conferences, should the networks drop the President?

Of course not, you say. But then this is just a hypothetical case.

Should one of America's most penetrating news analysts be dropped because viewers would rather watch four "personalities" try to guess the occupation of a Tacoma, Washington reindeer breeder?

This is a real case and the answer ABC came up with is yes. The controversial Howard K. Smith will not be back in the fall, a victim of the controversy he created and of a rating battle he lost with CBS's "What's My Line."

And if ratings tell the story, Smith's show may not be the only public affairs fatality of the current season. "The National Observer" recently printed a rating-based list of America's ten least popular tv shows. Seven on the list were news shows of the caliber of "Eyewitness," "David Brinkley's Journal," and "CBS Reports."

The most popular shows are, of course, "The Beverly Hillbillies" and "Bonanza."

These facts create a frightening picture of the television audience. To the newspaper editor these are people who skip the editorials, or even worse, the advertisements, to get to the comics. To the politician, it seems the electorate that could be pondering the merits of the Kennedy tax program is instead worrying about the effect of a drought on the Ponderosa.

But to the creative person interested in television, especially television news, these facts present a barrier as impregnable as a Berlin Wall or an iron curtain. The networks keep some weakly controversial depth news shows on (they must have something to answer that "vast wasteland" prattle with), but the creator is given to know that both his audience and his budget will be small.

Television, in the area of public affairs has great, relatively untapped, resources to inform. But before television can be used to educate, people must be educated to the uses of television.

This is the challenge—television, the networks, or the viewer have not yet fully met it.

Peace Pilgrim...

Thus she has turnned her attention to "inner" peace of the people in the United States as her aim in the larger international issue.

"Inner peace is non-denominational," the anonymous hiker noted. "It involves only the application of moral laws to the physcial and psychological realm of human conduct."

In other words, by acting through love rather than hate and by wanting to give to others rather than take, inner peace can be achieved.

The "Pilgrim" first took to the road 15 years ago after meditating for ten years to achieve her own inner peace.

"As a student 25 years ago all I thought of was money as the measure of success," she remarked. "Then I discovered that money-making is easy if you have half a brain but also meaningless."

With this realization the "Pilgrim" renounced all wordly possessions and permanent home. "They were unnecessary to my new-found purpose," she said.

"Now I have no wants. My wants are my desires," the wanderer added.

Moreover, as proof of the worth of her mission, "Pilgrim" pointed out that in the last 15 years she has been in perfect physical condition.

As further proof of the value of her walking, she observed that three of the steps she advocated ten years ago for peace have since been taken.

"I called for the people-to-people approach to world peace. Now there are many exchanges between students and people all over the world," she said.

"I also urged extensive research in pease now being carried on in universities and war prevention now implemented by the Peace Corps," the "Pilgrim" continued.

More modern steps are needed today such as a world language in addition to national languages, and a peace department in the government, she went on.

Speaking to all who stop her on her journey, the dedicated walker plans to keep hiking until "the tide of world affairs goes as strongly toward peace as it is now going towards war."

She relies only on offered food and shelter and the protection of God for her survival.

Two Stitches for Hill Frosh Knifed 'Fooling Around'

A Hill freshman was stabbed Friday night while "fooling around" in Watson Dormitory.

The student, Alan Stallowitz, 19, required two stitches in his left shoulder at University Hospital where he was taken by Eastern Ambulance following the incident.

City police said Stallowitz was stabbed by John C. Moore, 19, also a freshman living in Watson West.

Witnesses said Stallowitz had been chasing Moore with a can of shaving cream when the latter pulled a knife and jokingly threatened Stallowitz. The two then accidently collided, resulting in the wound.

Stallowitz was kept overnight in University Hospital for observation, and released Saturday.

Watson director Frank Harrar told the Daily Orange Saturday that he believed the incident was "entirely an accident". The matter will come before the dean of men's office Monday morning for consideration of action, Harrar said.

'Hard to Cope'- Dean

As Assistant Dean of the College of Liberal Arts, Alfred H. Cope is liked, despised and generally misunderstood at various times by Syracuse University students.

Each day Cope must face a steady stream of students who come with their academic, disciplinary and personal problems.

Many aspects of his job he admits are "not pleasant" and "create a great deal of pain." He must sign the letters when students are put on probation or dropped from school and then meet with the parents of these students. As head of the all-university disciplinary committee, he has dealt with over 100 cases during the past three years.

"A dean is a necessary evil in a bureaucratic state, of which the university is a part," Cope confided to the Daily Orange.

A Professor of Political Science and Citizenship, Cope says he nevertheless enjoys his work as Dean "because you feel you have leverage to help people out, even when you have to talk rough to a person. It may be a turning point for them."

"You sometimes lose, however," Cope confessed. You always wonder whether you're right or wrong in the way you handle a particular person's case."

Cope says he also enjoys his job because he can contribute to the rise of Syracuse University. "Syracuse is an exciting university," he says, "there isn't the stuffiness which characterizes longer - established schools. Syracuse still has yet to reach its zenith."

A Ph.D. from the University of Pennsylvania where he also taught for two years, Cope says Syracuse is beginning to challenge the Ivy League.

ALFRED H. COPE

"Syracuse is on the verge of an intellectual flip," he said. In three years the pressure for admissions is going to be so great that the student body is going to be vastly superior. "It will be like a wind from the Northwest," Cope prophesied.

Cope is an administrator fully committed to academic excellence. As head of the university curriculum committee, he says he wants to see all programs, including recreation and physical education, to be "intellectually defensible."

He has assured the Daily Orange that "athletes receive no breaks academically." Cope says "athletes must compete on the same basis as other students." "The university would not hesitate to drop even a star athlete if he didn't meet the same academic requirements as other students." "To suggest otherwise would be to question the integrity of the academic committee," he said, "and the committee has integrity."

Does a man really take unfair advantage of women when he uses Mennen Skin Bracer?

All depends on why he uses it.

Most men simply think Menthol-Iced Skin Bracer is the best after-shave lotion around. Because it cools rather than burns. Because it helps heal shaving nicks and scrapes. Because it helps prevent blemishes.

So who can blame them if Bracer's crisp, long-lasting aroma just happens to affect women so remarkably?

Of course, some men may use Mennen Skin Bracer because of this effect.

How intelligent!

Price Heads DSS Program

By JOHN LINDEROTH
Associate Editor

In 1935, a Harvard University doctorate holder accepted a Syracuse University offer to become chairman of a new department created in the Maxwell School, which offered "a new kind of degree."

Dr. Roy A. Price came to SU that year at the invitation of vice chancellor and acting dean of the Maxwell School, Finla G. Crawford, and headed the Social Science Department, offering a doctor of social science degree.

"The DSS degree was first announced by SU, and even today there are only several schools in the nation offering the opportunity to obtain it." Prof. Price said.

"Research Degree"

"The traditional Ph.D., given by most graduate schools," said Dr. Price in an interview in his fourth floor Maxwell office, "is essentially a research degree, earned by research scholars. Candidates must usually perform original research in some area.

"However, the DSS program has as its aim the training of college teachers," he continued. The development of the abiilty to teach at the college level, rather than the completion of research for its own sake, was the aim of the program.

Price mentioned that research carried out in DSS preparation served the purpose of adding to one's scope of knowledge so as to effectively communicate at the higher educational level.

No Neat Categories

Dr. Price stressed that the program was interdepartmental in scope, as "the topics and areas associated with the course of study for the DSS are not found within nice neat categories, but rather overlap from history and economics into sociology and political science."

He used the phrase of another SU administrator when he said that his department's aims and objectives must be observed "through a wide-angled lens."

Where does the completion of DSS requirements lead?

The great majority of graduates hold college teaching positions at universities throughout the United States. A few hold positions for which their DSS training was particularly beneficial.

"One recipient is now economic advisor to the government of Nigeria, another is curator of the anthropological section of Smithsonian Institute, and still another is at the Social Science Research Institute of the University of Minnesota," stated Dr. Price.

Staff Director

"Another is a research associate at Yale, editing the writings and papers of James Madison," he continued, "And still another presently is staff director of the House of Representatives Republican Policy Committee."

Dr. Price mentioned that Chancellor Tolley said the record to date justified the original assumptions upon which the program was based and that its graduates are found all across the United States.

He saw the need to perform some sort of induction into the teaching profession upon receipt of the DSS, to encourage more study in this direction.

Undergraduate Program

The SU Social Science Program also works with undergraduates, training in conjunction with the School of Education, secondary school social studies teachers.

Like the graduate program, this program employs resources of several departments and offers several courses of its own, together with the School of Education.

Prof. Price instructs courses entitled "Methods and Materials in the Social Studies," "Workshop in Social Studies Education," and other courses in the School of Education offerings.

In addition to the departmental offices, there is, on the fourth floor of Maxwell Hall, a social studies laboratory, containing material supplementing that found in the School of Education Curriculum Laboratory in Slocum Hall.

Chose Field of Teaching

Dr. Price earned his PhB from the University of Chicago, where in his junior year decided to enter the teaching field. "I wouldn't give it up for the world," he stated.

He then went on to Harvard University and obtained a PhD, and was approached by both Syracuse and Colgate Universities. He chose Syracuse, and thus another department was added to the list of social sciences, Prof. Price serving as its chairman since that time.

Dr. Price, refering to undergraduate education, said that he has "great faith in a liberal arts education," and advises that "before any vocational training, don't specialize too much."

A GENUINE FORMAL BUTTON-DOWN?

Oh yes, and genuine even without this [EAGLE SHIRTMAKERS SINCE 1867] label

MANY of you like our button-downs so much that you can hardly bear to wear anything else even on special evenings; now there is no reason why you should. And since we already make button-downs in 386 fabrics, patterns, and colors it would have been unthoughtful of us not to make it an even 387 with this button-cuff button-down of fine broadcloth.* You can find it at the best men's shops although not always under our label (many stores like our shirts so much they sell them under their own names). If you'd like to know which in your vicinity please write us: Eagle Shirtmakers, Quakertown, Pennsylvania.

*Notice it bulges gracefully at the collar just like the other 386. One time a man, new to our button-downs, wrote to say that the collar didn't lie flat. When we told Helen Mohr, in Collars, about it she said that she was relieved.

Kennedy Dynasty Threatened; Morris Family Is On The Way

By SUSAN WEINBERG
Junior Editor

A new threat to the Kennedy dynasty has appeared on the S.U. scene. James Morris, elected Joint Student Government president, is the third son in his family to be interested in law, but the first to be interested in politics.

"The day I was elected JSG president, I received a long distance phone call," he reminisced in a recent interview, "it was my brother Steve calling to ask whether I had won."

"When I told him I had, another voice broke in and said 'now that you're president Jimmy. Stevie would like to be JSL senator," Morris added, "Then Steve broke in saying,' and Dicky would like to be a justice.'"

This banter marks only the surface similarities of the Morris' to the Kennedys.. Like the first family and its relations, the Morris' are extremely close, according to Theodore Bayer's successor.

"My father and two brothers are both lawyers so I've been exposed to law since I was knee high to a grasshopper," Morris explained.

"But more than that, we have always been fantastically close, kind of like the Ozzie and Harriet family," he observed.

Morris' two brothers are five and seven years older than him. Both attended Syracuse but neither attained the prominence that Morris has. "They just weren't interested in politics," Morris said.

Interested in law since the age of nine, Morris has more recently become become involved with politics because. "I enjoy working with people and get satisfaction from helping them solve their problems."

While this will be his future vocation, he had no intention of becoming active in Syracuse student government.

"I was president of my pledge class and when election time came, the brothers wanted to run someone from my class. I was their choice," Morris explained.

He ran for sophomore senator-at-large and was elected.. "I was the only one on the Campus Alliance Party ticket who won that year," he pointed out.

Last year when the sophomore class elections were voided, Morris was appointed elections commissioner. From there he was named JSG social academic cultural director.

"I still had no thought of ever becoming president," he injected.

In January William Gedalacia, CAP vice president, approached Morris about the presidency and the idea snow-balled from there.

Although many predicted the sweeping victory that Morris had, he was not so confident.

"I thought the vote would be close and if I won, it would not be by more than 50 votes," he revealed.

"I also was scared because I was the favorite before election day and funny things can happen in elections."

Morris had planned to save his hardest campaigning for the last two days of the campaign. "Monday I became sick and passed out in the barber's chair," he continued.

"It was probably from nerves, but I got scared. I also began to doubt my chances of winning. From then on I campaigned vigorously from room to room until election day," Morris went on.

This nervousness is not a normal Morris characteristic. "I'm easy going and usually don't get rattled," he admitted, "but I don't like to pull punches, I like to tell people exactly what I think."

From now until the end of the semester the new chief executive plans to concentrate on changing the marking system and working on dead week.

The first two and one - half weeks of vacation he will attend the Washington Seminar in the Capitol. He hopes to apply the knowledge he obtains there to his duties here next year.

Romanticism Title of Last Footprints

Dr. Earl George, chairman of the romance language department, will speak at the last Freshman Footprints meeting of the semester at 7:30 p. m. today in Kimmel Hall.

Dr. George will discuss French romanticism in the modern novel.

The meeting is open to the campus. Freshmen who have participated in earlier Footprints discussions are especially urged to attend, chairman Howard Messing said.

art and culture and a tremendous heritage of medieval history."

During the second week in Florence. Dean Smith stayed in a Pensione where only Italian was spoken. She found that she had learned just enough of the language "to make my wants known."

Dean Smith found the daily schedule quite different in Italy. She said that the stores are closed from 12 to 4 p.m. The Italian people enjoy long, leisurely meals with good conversation, she noted. The exchange of ideas and interest in culture in Florence was "one of the joys" of her experience in that city.

She visited Rome and attended the opera at Milan. At a performance of "La Boheme" in La Scala, she was thrilled to meet a former SU music student, seated nearby.

Dean Smith stopped in Paris long enough to see the opera "Cosi Fan Tutte," and then took the SS Queen Mary from Cherbourg.

She returned to her desk at Syracuse on March 18.

and the forwarding of the findings of this board to the administration.

3) That a university union would help academic groups at Syracuse.

4) That an effort will be made to establish a regional intercollegiate conference at Syracuse to study academics.

5) Resolved that AEC endorse and encourage present programs to foster the academic atmosphere.

To further the arts at Syracuse the group moved:

1) That a program be established by student government to bring the arts to the students.

2) To encourage student participation in arts and cultural programs.

3) Improvement of the arts through the use of WAER. (It was suggested that student government sell FM radios to the students at cost.)

The conference's keynote address was delivered by Ben Shaktman, instructor in the drama department, first editor of Syracuse 10 and writer of the Goon show.

Shaktman outlined to the conference a basic university philosophy of shared loyalties, responsibilities and beliefs. He said that students at Syracuse today are lacking something that previous student bodies had.

"There was a time," he said, "when activities did things for the general university philosophy. and not things for their own selfish needs."

He challenged the conference to overcome and uncover these problems and use them as stepping stones, not stumbling blocks, to further the university's philosophy.

Colgate Blitz

OVERTIME ACTION in Saturday's lacrosse game as Red Raiders swarm around the Syracuse goal and goal tender PETE COE. The Orangge stickmen lost 13-11 after leading through most of the contest..

Colgate Downs Piety In Overtime Contest

By HOWIE SCHNEIDER

Who said patience does not pay off? Certainly not the Colgate lacrosse squad for Saturday, at Manley Field, they learned just how valuable an asset it can be.

The Red Raiders' deliberate wait and see offense, after being held to only three goals in the first half, found a opening in the Orange defense, and exploded for eight goals in the second half and one in each of the two overtime periods, to outlast the Syracuse stickmen, 13-11.

The Colgate victory checked a three game Orange winning streak, and leveled the squad's record to 3-2. The men from Hamilton stand 2-1 on the season.

Chester McClean and Sandy Conde, with three and two scores in the second half. respectively, led the visitors come-from-behind win. Down by as many as four, the Raiders refused to quit, and relied on a well-balanced offensive attack, which placed seven men in the scoring column, to overcome the defecit.

Ron (Boom - Boom) Fraser once again led coach Roy Simmons' scorers with six goals. However, Ron's failure to find the mark early in the contest accounted for a Colgate 2-1 lead at the end of the first quarter.

John Mackey opened the second quarter by rushing around the left side of the Colgate goal like Andy Robustelli, and tying the score at two all. Fraser on his fifth attempt of the day finally hit. and followed it up with another goal minutes late. Dick Gray then netted another goal for the Orange, but was hit in the head in the process (he was not seriously injured). After trading tallies the half time score was Syracuse 6, Colgate 3.

Fraser scored his third, fourth, and fifth goals in the third quarter, and it almost looked like a Syracuse runaway. However, Colgate's Petrie, McLean, Davis, and Conde chucked in a combined total of six scores to tie the contest at 9-9.

In the fourth quarter, Mackey, once again reminiscent of Robustelli, scored his second goal, and Fraser netted his sixth. Colgate hung on and tallies by Nichols and Conde ended the regulation play 11-11. Mackey was ejected from the game with seven seconds left in the contest.

The Red Raiders dominated the two overtime periods. At 1:32 in the first five minute period they broke the tie. and then scored the clincher midway in the second period. The Orangemen couldn't get an attack going, and played inconsistent ball, due to a sloppy defense and poor stick handling, which plaqued them throughout the afternoon.

Lafayette Nudges Hill, Barnowski

"Lafayette, we are here," was the friendly greeting from the Syracuse baseball squad.

"So what" was the return from the LaFayette team as they clobbered the Orangemen 7-1.

Saturday Ted Kleinhan's crew was in Easton, Pa. hoping to get into some winning ways. The sun was shining and the grass was green and when the day was over the Orange had lost their fourth in a row.

Soph Ed Barnowski was again the loser. The young right-hander tossed his fourth complete game of the year for his third defeat.

In the four games that he's appeared. he's allowed only eight runs not all of them earned.

However his teammates have only been able to insure him with six.. Hence the 1-3 record.

Saturday Syracuse took a quick 1-0 lead in the second inning. After Bob Lelli had doubled. Richie Duffy followed with a long fly ball for a double.

But Lelli had to hold up as the outfielders played. Alphonse-Oose-Gaston, and only made it to third. Dave Rounds hit another long fly that brought Lelli home.

Barnowski's lead didn't last three outs. In the bottom of the second Lafayette's Don Jordon singled and came home easily on a triple by teammate "Red" Hogan.

In the third Lafayeytte tallied again. Nick Cullen walked. Two singles filled the bases. Joe Giggs then worked Barnowski for another free pass that forced in what was to be the winning run.

The Pennsylvanians added two more in the last of the sixth on three singles, where Ron Barnowski's opposite number Hughes took a turn.

The Orangemen fell upon Hughes for seven hits. Lafayette touched Barnowski for nine. But this weekend he had allowed only ten hits all season. Syracuse played errorless ball. Lafayette made one miscue.

Their loss dropped the Orangemen's record to 3-5. The Lafayettemen won their seventh of the year.

Wednesday the Orange open a six game homestead. RPI visits May 1 Rochester on Friday followed by Hobart, Bucknell and a doubleheader with Penn State.

The Syracuse heavyweight shell overtook Dartmouth at the quarter-mile mark and then held a slight lead until the final 200-yards when Syracuse pulled away for the three-quarter length victory.

Orange Netters Defeat Hamilton, UB Squads

An impreving Syracuse University tennis team upped its record to 5-3 with a pair of weekend victories.

Friday, the Orange netmen defeated Hamilton, 7-2. before toppling the University of Buffalo, 6-3, on Saturday.

Pacing the Hill attack were juniors Alvin Davis and Lew Katcher and sophomore Al Napper. All three merged from the weekend competition with a pair of singles wins.

The Katcher - Davis doubles team won both its matches, while Napper teamed with senior captain Ross Kaplan for two conquests.

Sophomore Steve Rubell, who last week won the William P. Tolleyy Trophy as the outstanding Piety tennis player, had trouble in the number one spot.

Rubell lost to Reilly of Hamilton, 6-3, 5-7, 7-5 and to Saturos of Buffalo, 6-2 6-1.

Kaplan, playing the second singles won his Hamilton match, but dropped a decision to Buffalo's Feldman, 6-4, 6-3.

Number three man Bill Gedalecia split his two singles matches, bowing to Kass (Hamilton) 6-0, 6-3. but rebounding with a 6-1, 9-7, win over his Buffalo opponent Taylor.

Davis, the fourth singles, edged Sweet of Hamilton 3-6, 8-6. 6-4, and Barnett of Buffalo, 6-2, 6-4. Katcher conquered Hamilton's Unger by a 6-0, 6-1 count and followed with a 6-3 win over McLain (Buffalo).

Napper took straight set-victories over Drewd of Hamilton and White of UB.

Against Hamilton, the doubles teams of Kaplan-Napper, Gedalecia-Rubel and Katcher-Davis all came through with easy wins.

Saturday, the number one combination of Kaplan-Napper lost to Saturos-McLain of Buffalo. However the second and third duos posted wins.

Fire Closes 4 M-Street Shops

SYRACUSE FIREMAN helps fight multi-alarm blaze which tore through four establishments on Marshal Street Monday afternoon. There were no casualties, but damage was extensive in some stores.

By CISSY POSSELT

Four Marshall Street businesses have closed indefinitely as the result of a fire at the new Cosmo Pizza Shop, 143 Marshall St. Monday afternoon.

No estimate is available on the damage.

The fire, suspected to have started in an overheated ventilator at the rear of Cosmos Pizza Shop, caused extensive smoke and water damage to four other Marshall Street businesses.

Damaged were Leon's Tailoring Shop, the Hill Bookstall, Lowe's One Stop Laundry and Cleaners, Manny's and Cosmos, Lowe's remained open, while the other four were forced to close.

Assistant Fire Marshall Fred A. Patuna attributed an overheated grease duct and grease-covered beams at the rear of the restaurant as the cause of the fire.

Petuna said, "There were no fire stops whatsoever between the stores." Smoke damage resulted when the ventilator melted away and the smoke spread to the rear portions of the other four stores.

The roof and ceiling at the rear of Cosmos were chopped out and watered down after the fire as a safety precaution. The new Cosmos, which had been in business at this location for two weeks, is owned by Hugh Cregg.

All five Hill merchants complimented the attending fire departments on their quick response to the call. Vince Giordano, who was working at Cosmos when the blaze started sent in the alarm.

Leon Zeeberg, owner of Leon's Tailoring Shop, first noted smoke pouring out of the Pizza shop door at 1 p.m. Running to the street, he saw a blaze along the ceiling at the rear of Cosmos.

Zeeberg, who said that damage was confined to

Muggings, PiKA Theft Plague Hill

Another in a series of muggings took place Saturday morning shortly after midnight.

Roger Schram and Earl Scherrod, both residents of Sadler Hall, were attacked and beaten in the 700 block of Harrison street.

The two Hill students were returning from the Greyhound Bus terminal when they were accosted by four Negro boys who asked them if they had any money. The four boys then beat Schram and Scherrod with clubs.

Schram was beaten about the head and face and required six stitches. He lost his glasses, valued at $20 and a watch worth $50. Schram said the boys were between the ages of 11 and 15.

Scherrod was also beaten about the head and face and had his wallet taken.

Work continued for the Hill's Security Police Sunday when Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity, 405 Comstock Ave., was entered and seven students robbed.

The burglar entered the house through an unlocked rear window, according to Security Police. While the brothers of the fraternity slept, the thief lifted money from seven wallets. Brothers reported $61 missing and notified city police.

"Wanton disregard for rules and order" will not be tolerated in state parks, according to a letter recently received by the dean of men's office.

Dean of Men Earle W. Gifford said he received a letter from Howard Stowell, general manager of the Central New York District Five of the State Conservation Department.

Stowell said students from local universities were welcome to use the state recreational facilities as long as excessive drinking and destructsion of property were not part of the student activities.

Clifford also noted the recent announcement of the Syracuse police that city parks and playgrounds are closed from 11 p. m. to 5 a. m.

Students are affected in their use of the Thornden Park area near the university. State facilities usually used by SU students include Green Lakes State Park and Verona Beach State Park.

Editors Named for DO Staff

The news editor is responsible for inside news pages and feature stories and works closely with the managing editor.

Richards, newly appointed managing editor, replaces senior Jeannie Ranov. A sociology and magazine major with a 1.7 average, the 19-year-old sophomore is a resident of Watkins Glen.

Sagamore Challenge

The "student leaders" who have come back from last weekend's Sagamore Conference are full of spirit.

Claiming to have the "university spirit," they have made a commitment to spread this spirit to apathetic students.

Challenge these leaders. Question their ideas, motives, and plans of attack. Ask these students if they are being realistic; if they believe in the practicality of their resolutions.

When a "student leader" says Syracuse needs a university union, an academic reevaluation and more stress on the arts, ask him why and how.

Then ask, "Do I want these ideas to become realities?" If not, give your suggestions and pledge your support to something you want. Too many students consider the university in a parent role, therefore, expecting to get undeserved loving kindness from the father image.

The university philosophy, as stated by Sagamore keynoter Ben Shaktman, is shared loyalties, responsibilities and beliefs.

The "shared" part of the philosophy means working together with others for a common goal. Sagamore has goals. Every student, to be a functional part of the institution, should understand these goals, so that he may help in their revision, fermentation and execution.

Sagamore had spirit. And that spirit has been transferred by the members of the conference to the campus. But the spirit of this conference, as that of other meetings, will not last, will not be spread and will not help the university if it is accepted too easily.

The ideas presented at Sagamore were for the benefit of the entire student body and not just the participants. They were conceived by members of campus-wide organizations and were designed to take into consideration what the students on campus want and are willing to work for.

Ideas are ideas. Some are good—some are bad. But to test the values of these ideas and to further their principles, a closer look must be taken into the resolutions made at this conference.

Unless these ideas are challenged, criticized, implemented and supported, the student at Syracuse University will not have a knowledge of the forces which affect him, nor will he become a part of a university spirit which highlighted college life in the post-war years.

Good ideas are easily forgotten unless they are worked upon by the whole; Sagamore's ideas, many of them good, will join this trial to oblivion unless the ideas become active.

LETTERS

H B C

To the Editor:

For over a month now, the machines in H. B. Crouse have been inaccessable to students. No explanation of this situation has been offered. From conversations with the women who work in the building, some of us habituees of the Lounge have learned that we are being punished for messiness.

This situation might have been avoided, I think, if students knew what was going on. First, most of us didn't know that no one is assigned to clean up the lounge area. We just assumed that whoever cleaned the building, cleaned the lounge. Second, a very small minority realize why the area is closed. This certainly won't help clear up messiness.

With warm weather upon us, accompanied by thirst, I would like to see the machine area of Crouse open again. At least one suggestion has been made which I think the administration should consider. Why doesn't the administration assign students on disciplinary probation to clean up the area. Some sort of schedule could be worked out.

One last point. The women in the basement of H B C were not responsible for the closing. So stop giving them dirty looks.

Academic Lack

To the Editor:

A visiting Cornell friend showed some surprise on reading last Friday's Daily Orange. He read that "the normally academic atmosphere of the library (would) explode with twist music Saturday night.."

The idea of closing a library for football games also seemed strange to him for some reason.

While showing him Dell-Plain he mentioned something about academic atmosphere. But I didn't quite catch what he was implying—a radio was blaring at the end of the hall; someone was playing the drums three floors below us. I'm glad I didn't hear whatever he was saying about our academic atmopshere; I didn't understand, and neither, apparently, does the administration.

Hell Week

To the Editor:

I've survived. My Hellweek is at an end. I've eaten cold dried up spaghetti, I've wallowed around the floor in an edible mud-like substance and I roamed the grave yard all hours of the night searching for names. Did I feel ridiculous? Of course not.

I enjoyed every horror-filled minute of it. I felt humble and lowly, just like they said I would. I was Moses in bondage, I was Uncle Tom picking cotton, I was Ben Hur chained to an oar. Most of all, I was a dimwitted pledge enduring the atrocities of a tradition-happy Greek funhouse. Vomit was release and sleep was the prize. I was a captive freshman caught up in the seaweed of ritual.

I spent a week in Hell and followed the path of all pledges before me. When I protested, I was told that the brothers went through the same thing, and if the tradition was practiced in the past, it was perfectly all right to continue it.

Unfortunately, I happened to come equipped with the mind of a realistic college student. You must endure the bad to reach the good. If the brothers want to scamper around in a sandbox of foolishness, then you supply the shovel. If they want to play the games of an unbalanced childhood, then you follow their rules.

I am now a brother. I played the games, and helped them build their sand castles. I wonder though, what the next year will bring. How will I react on the other side of the fence?

Will I meet the next pledge class with a sadistic grin? Will I enforce Hell's laws on these poor servile victims of Greek dominance? Will I stir the pot of "drek" that will cover their humble bodies? Will I laugh while they languish in the pit of traditions and rituals? Will I guide these miserable souls along the path of narrow-mindedness? . . . Of course!

It is too easy to forget one's own plight, and remember only that it was endured. Catastrophe is passed on from year to year. After all, why should the next pledge class be any different than those of the past! I suffered, and by God, so should they. Why should I be the one to protest my fellow brothers' actions? What's good enough for them is good enough for me and everyone after me. . . . I can't wait till I get my hands on those lowly rotten pledges. I'll murder 'em, that's what I'll do!

Spirit

To the Editor:

And today everyone complains about school spirit, about the administration, about paying Ivy League tuition and getting very little "Ivy" for our "green stuff," about lack of interest in Big Weekends, and about athletic "scholarships" for seemingly all-brawn members of the team.

Today is filled with complaints and tomorrow will be filled with more complaints unless something is done about it now. To quote William Butler Yeats, "What does it all mean? What are we going to do?"

There's no use raising a shout, if nothing can be done.

But something is being done. And it's being done by the most Ivy, least recognized team on this campus. Unfortunately, for many the crew team doesn't even exist!

Why?

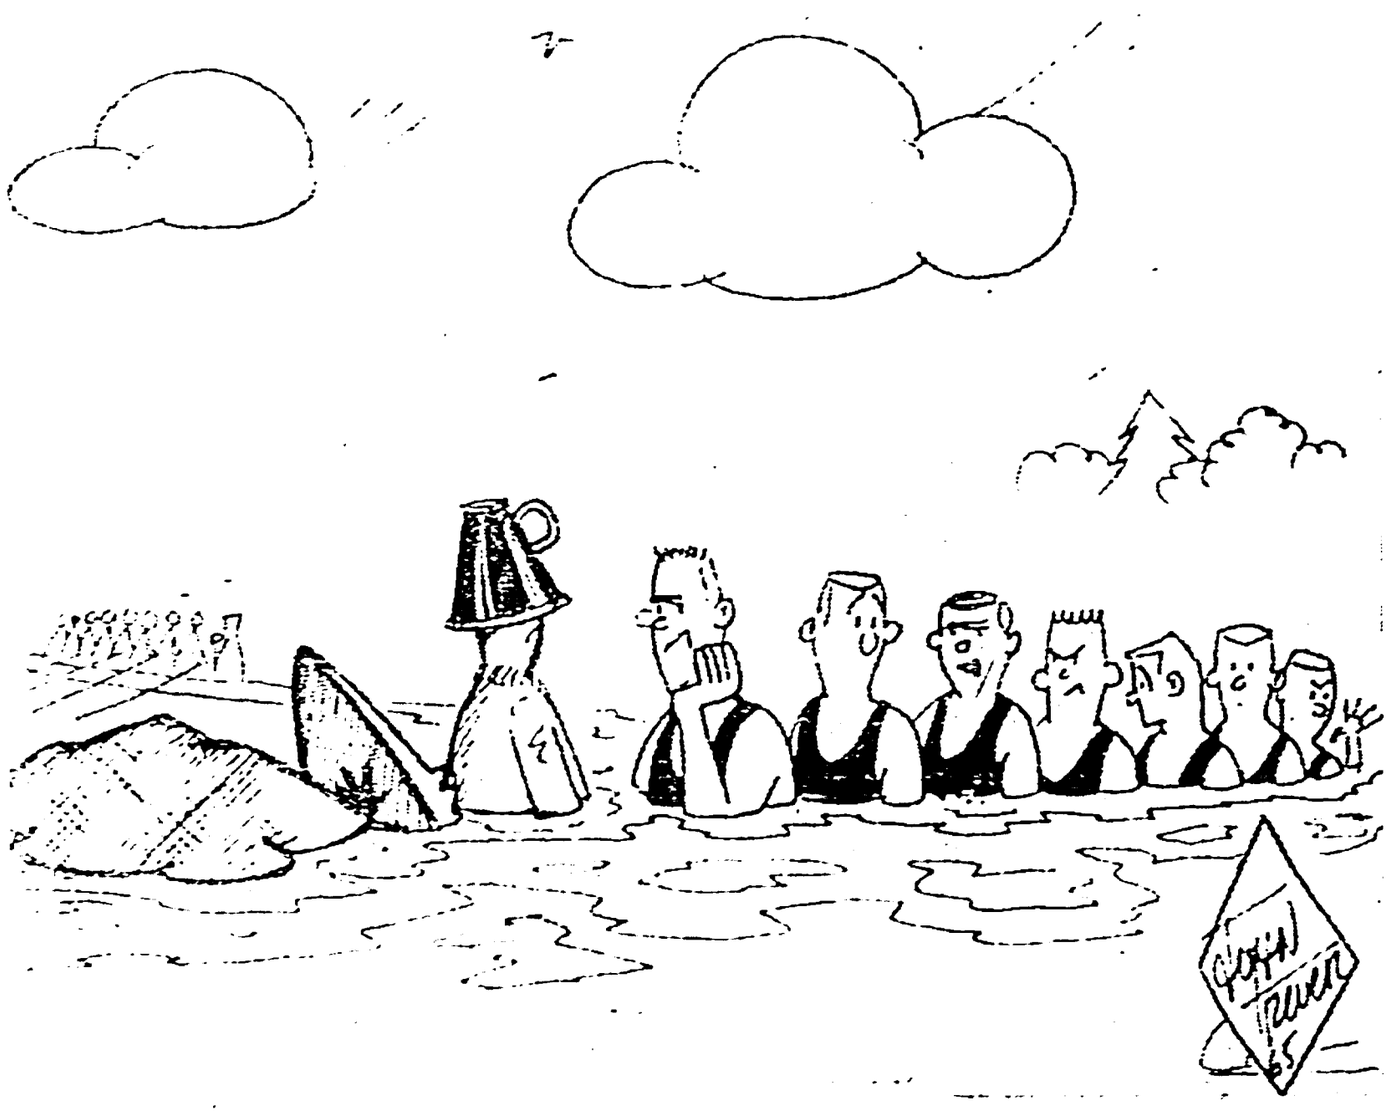
Is it the fault of the crew? Hardly. Four hours a day, six days a week, shortened vacations, extra hours of practice on Sundays before big meets, and minimum financial aid go into making this September through June sport. Minimum average for the crew, like all other teams on campus, is 1.0. Still, many crewmen have much better averages than the onlookers.

Can we blame the administration for the lack of scholarships and the shortage of new equipment? Not really.

The fault lies with the student body. We, the students, are to blame. Sheer love of the sport encourages the crew to continue without major recognition. Sheer lack of interest on the students' part discourages the administration from helping the sport to become a major one.

Cornell crew stirs interest all over the East. Why can't Syracuse? We can. We can also have an Ivy League school. But all beginnings are difficult. The point already established is the best place to start. It is the only place. In our case, we only have one real Ivy League sport — or anything for that matter! The place to start is with the crew team.

Spring Weekend is coming, and so are Navy and Cornell. That weekend the Goes Trophy Crew Meet will be held on Lake Onondaga. Usually the meet is held at Cornell, because it is one of the biggest trophy meets of the collegiate crew season. This year precedent is being broken, and it will be held on the Syracuse lake.



What does it all mean?

It is our chance to show school spirit. It is our chance to prove to the administration that we are trying to be an Ivy League school and encourage cooperation from them. To go to the meet is the "Ivy" thing to do. It will give some the chance just to get out and soak up some sun, to do something on the Saturday afternoon of the Big Weekend, to see what real athletes—those who compete for the sake of the sport, without promise of monetary reward—can really do.

What are we going to do?

Goldoni Play Offered Free

Boar's head will add performances of Carlo Goldoni's "A Servant of Two Masters" on May 7, 8, and 9 at the Coronet Theater, Drama Building.

Students may obtain free tickets on a first come first serve basis if they show their I.D. cards. Tickets will sell at the regular $1.50 price for non-university students.

Hanfred Bormann directs this Comedia Del L'Arte comedy which features masks, sword-fights, three love stories and improvisations.

Boar's head president Peter Maloney plays the lead role of Arleccino the crafty servant who works for two masters. Wearing a mask throughout the play he becomes involved in a series of romantic triangles and confusion with Tom McKee and Leslie Meek (disguised as a man) as his two masters, Ellenjoy Schindler, the maid who falls in love with him and Esen Wiegan as her love-sick mistress.

Also featured in the cast are Stuart Dillon, Bruce MacCurdy, Richard Folmer, Ken Pearlman and Ernest Harada.

Ann Gibson designed the sets while Ruth Meek created all but four of the period costumes. Those four were specially ordered authentic Comedia Del L'Arte costumes.

Ray Charles

RAY CHARLES, who has been called the most exciting jazz singer of his generation, will appear 8:30 p.m. Wednesday at the RKO Keith's Theater. This concert features his own orchestra and the Raelets singing group. Choice tickets are still available at the Keith's box office.

Sidewalk Art Show

Groups of curious people, many of them holding matted drawings and prints under their arm, poked through piles of artwork lying on tables and inspected that which was posted against the easels on the patio of Lowe Art Center. This was the response to the Art Student's Association side walk sale Sunday.

The show seemed to be quite successful in two aspects: it provided a fine opportunity to show both interested residents of Syracuse and University students to see what the art students were doing, and it also seemed successful as a sale.

Although the top grade student work was probably stashed away in some dark corner to be saved for portfolios and final showings, the majority of the work presented was quite competent.

Especially outstanding were the drawings and prints exhibited by Jan L. Miller, Pat Ferrero. Carol Levy, and Rosemarie Alexander. They seemed to show the most mature development of artistic expression and understanding of their media.

DO Founder Gets Citation

Irving R. Templeton, first editor and founder of the Daily Orange, has received a citation from the City of Buffalo for his civic services.

The award was made by Buffalo Mayor Chester Kowal on the 28th anniversary of the birthday of Grover Cleveland.

Templeton was cited for service to the people of Buffalo, citizenship, inspiration and leadership to his fellow citizens and contributions to the Buffalo Torch Club, Boy Scouts and the University of Buffalo College of Law.

Slides Tell Story

Peter Kinney, Syracuse sophomore, illustrates by his pictures the principle of showmanship in a new book. "To make a slide show interesting," advises the author of the new book, How to Tell a Living Story With Home Slides, "build picture sequences out of three or four slides that tell a little story."

To illustrate, the book presents two sequences — each one built around the interests of a boy. The first boy has changing interests. At two, he liked a ball; at four, a wagon; at 15, a book; at 18 a girl.

Second boy whose story is told is Peter Kinney. He has an unchanging interest all through life. At four months, he liked food; at one year, he still liked it; and at eight, and at 18.

"A sequence like this is a happy surprise in a show," the book says.

The Rat Trap

Drivers' Liz

By Robert E. Fern

Abbe Lane, an entertainer who is well calculated to excite the passions, said that college men were the "wildest" men she's ever seen. She commented that when she first started touring with her husband, Xavier Cugat, they played at the University of Florida.

The entertainers were invited to a fraternity party after the show. She remarked, "Let me tell you those college boys make show people look like saints."

The sizzling readhead, did not find life too exciting in Syracuse. "The only thing I had to do while at Three Rivers was watch the cars and trucks. Why, standing there on the road I became the truck drivers Elizabeth Taylor."

There were five or six people in her dressing room. A man that looked like Jose Greco was making a phone call. Mr. Cugat was talking in Spanish to his brother. And Abbe was caressing a little white poodle.

She mentioned the word "taxes" and her face assumed a tragic expression something akin to Hamlet as he learned about the true condition in the state of Denmark. "With taxes what they are, all of us entertainers will have to live abroad. It just doesn't pay us to work."

Miss Lane aside from her numerous night club appearances and guest spots on television shows has, also made 22 Italian movies. She has worked with such noted directors as Fellini and De Sica.

When I was in high school I sat next to a tall thin boy with long blonde hair. The teacher called him an "impenetrable idiot" who will never amount to anything. Gregory Rozakis left school to go into show business. For two years he didn't amount to anything. But today, he is a co-star in Elia Kazan's "America, America."

And Martin Gotfries said that "Gregory Rozakis, making his broadway debut, is an actor whom you will never forget."

Editors Honored

Allan Kort was officially introduced as new editor-in-chief of the Daily Orange at the publications banquet Sunday at Drumlins Country Club.

Kort presented staff gifts to graduating senior editors Milton Joffe, Jeannie Ranov, John Greenwald and Joyce Hergenhan.

Keys for five semesters of DO service were presented to Kort, Miss Hergenhan and Alan Milstein, associate editor and former columnist.

Newly appointed editors were introduced by their predecessors. They include Clay Richards, managing editor; Ann Cutler, news editor; Bernie MacCallum, sports editor; and Steve Schwimmer, photography editor.

Sandy Myers, a sophomore, received the "best new staffer of the newsroom" award. She has worked for the DO since September.

Also honored at the banquet was Gene Gilmore, an instructor in the school of Journalism who will accept an assistant professorship at the University of Illinois in September.

Dr. Michael O. Sawyer, departing chairman of the citizenship department, congratulated DO staffers on publishing a "great and responsible newspaper."

Comparing the DO to other newspapers, Dr. Sawyer commented, "I think the DO is great."

"You probably teach students more than any faculty member," he said, adding "you act as fellow teachers and fellow professors."

He said he believes the DO and the Chancellor to be "the institutions that represent the whole university."

Sawyer told the members of the campus press he relies on the DO to tell him what's happening on the Hill and to serve as a university historian.

He commended outgoing editors for providing a "responsible" newspaper, saying "to provide freedom is easy today, but to provide a responsible press takes great skill."

Fire Closes...

LEON'S TAILOR SHOP suffered damage to its interior facilities in Monday's Marshal Street blaze. Clothing in the store received smoke and water damage and will have to be re-cleaned elsewhere.

smoke and water damage of clothes in the shop, plans to re-open today. "The back of the store is completely ruined and will have to be rebuilt," he said.

Zeeberg assured students whose clothes were at the shop that no clothing was damaged but must be sent out for re-cleaning.

Bookstall owner Mrs. Abby Paine Bigelo said that the store suffered mostly water and smoke damages. "There was no fire," she said. She stated the fire was in a flue and damage resulted when smoke seeped through to the Bookstall between the ceiling and roof.

The rear portion of the Bookstall was destroyed when firemen chopped through the roof and wetted it down to prevent the fire from spreading. Stock damage was limited to stuffed toys, paper goods and stock stored in the basement of the store.

Lowe's Cleaners, according to Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Lowe, will remain open until the extent of damage to cleaning equipment can be established. By 6 p.m. Monday electricity had not been restored to the damaged stores, and the Lowes were not able to estimate damage.

Mrs. Lowe noted "It seemed like no time at all 'till the firemen came." Firemen covered up clothing in the store before anything was destroyed. Water and smoke damaged clothes are presently being re-cleaned, she said.

The rear of the cleaning shop was also destroyed by firemen who chopped through the roof.

A Manny's employee stated that unestimated smoke and water damage had hit all store stock. He noted that firemen had arrived and covered most of the stock before water flooded the store.

After firemen chopped through and wetted down the roof, the unidentified employee stated that six inches of water covered the floor of the store's basement.

Manny's will remain closed until estimates of the damages and necessary repairs can be made.

District Chief Thomas Hiscock with engines 1, 7, and 10 and trucks 4 and 5 answered the first alarm.

District Chief Taylor answered the second alarm with a rescue company, a first aid company, engines 6 and 8 and truck 1.

Approximately 35 Syracuse firemen fought the blaze.

COSMO'S PIZZA SHOP, newly located campus eating place, suffered damage to its kitchen facilities in the blaze. It is believed the Monday afternoon fire started here.

President Must Be Politician Too

By DANIEL RITEY
Junior Editor

The President must not only be a skillful statesman but a skillful politician too, Stuart Gerry Brown told the freshman citizenship sections Monday afternoon in Marshall Auditorium.

Noting that without the latter skill "one is not qualified to be president" the Maxwell professor offered several reasons for the focus of attention upon the US President.

"He has more power than any other person in the free world, he has great prestige as the symbol of US freedom and democracy and he is first among the leaders of the free world," he said.

"He is one of the two great protagonists on the world stage, the other being Chairman Khrushchev," Brown stated.

Brown set the date of President William McKinley's assassination as a turning point in the growth of the international prestige and influence of the President.

Before Theodore Roosevelt, the President was little known and respected outside the country, after Roosevelt the Presidency "became one of the major institutions of modern times."

Brown outlined the tremendous growth in the power and influence of the Presidency from Washington to Kennedy, noting "many gifted men" have held this position.

James Madison, noted Brown, "led the country through the War of 1812 and his representatives negotiated the lasting and vital friendship pact with England."

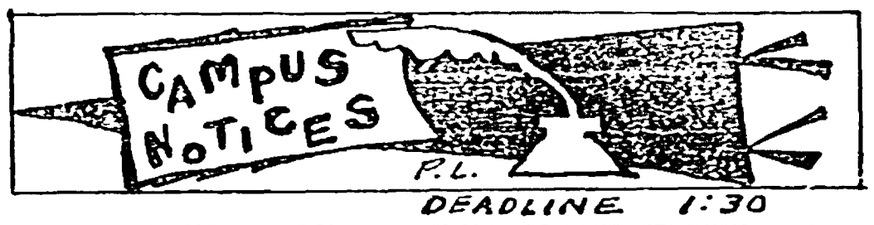
Successful Politician

"James Monroe was the most successful politician to serve as President with his unanimous reelection and James Polk was the most successful President because his entire program was carried through," he continued.

Brown referred to Andrew Jackson as the President of the people and to Abraham Lincoln who "anticipated the strong Presidency of the twentieth century." However, he noted, the Presidents after Lincoln failed to meet this standard until Roosevelt.

The lecturer noted that the Presidents after Roosevelt have tended to alternate between strong and weak ones.

Brown referred to the "incomparable Franklin Roosevelt" and to Harry Truman whose Presidency surprised many people because they didn't really understand the Presidency.



Changes a Person

The Presidential term of office often changes a person as in the case of Dwight Eisenhower, said Brown. Eisenhower went from one who was wary of Presidential power to one who was forced to use it.

The Maxwell Professor noted that four years wasn't long enough for a President to enact all his policies and that he should think of reelection as soon as he takes office for the first time.

Furthermore, he went on, the President faces a paradox in that he must curry popular favor sometimes at the expense of his program.

The President of the US is the representative of all the people and must act in their behalf, he concluded.

Dean 'Framed' At Meeting

By SANDY MYERS

If a photograph of Dean of Men Earle W. Clifford betting on a pool game is circulated on campus, don't panic. He's not breaking any university regulations.

Dean Clifford was legitimately playing a game of pool—with no money involved — at the Activities Exchange Conference held this weekend at the Sagamore Conference Center.

In a planned photograph, Joint Student Legislature speaker Jay Litwin and past Joint Student Government president Theodore Bayer sneaked behind the dean of men.

As Dean Clifford lined up a cue stick, the two students flashed a roll of bills before his face. The photographer snapped the picture.

However, the photographer assured the Daily Orange the negative will be destroyed and said he will offer the only copy of the photograph to Dean Clifford.

Clifford was playing pool with Onondagan editor Kathleen Arnold against WAER chief announcer Henry Kahn and class of '65 president Carl Corrallo.

The pool game and the posed photograph were only part of the friendly student-administrator-faculty atmosphere at Sagamore.

It was apparent in the speeches, as when drama instructor Ben Shaktman delivered the keynote address Friday night and cited the unviversity policy of "shared beliefs, loyalties and responsibilities."

Inter-activity rivalries were forgotten. Each representative openly discussed the failings, as well as the good points, of his organization.

While discussions and workshops occupied a large part of the weekend schedule, they left time for other activities.

During free times, no canoes and rowboats were left at the Sagamore Lake dock. They were on the lake, often with occupants who had never before rowed or canoed.

Loud cracking noises greeted Sagamore participants early Sunday morning. Shaktman was rowing on the lake—breaking the crust of ice that had formed during the night.

Happy birthday, Steve, from the DO staff.

Dean's Office RuleStabbing 'Accidental'

No action will be taken in the accidental stabbing in Watson Dormitory according to David F. Tatham, assistant dean of men.

"The stabbing was clearly an accident," said Tatham.

The two freshmen involved, Alan Stallowitz and John C. Moore said they were "fooling around" when the incident occurred.

Stallowitz required two stitches in his left shoulder at University Hospital.

He was chasing Moore with a can of shaving cream when Moore pulled a knife and jokingly threatened Stallowitz, according to witnesses. The two accidentally collided causing the resulting wound.

Speech Convo Slated Today

The School of Speech and Dramatic Arts will hold an awards convocation at 7 p.m. today in the Women's Building Alumnae Lounge. The convocation will honor students and observe the golden anniversary of the school.

Founded in 1913, the school was the first of its kind in the United States. To commemorate the occasion, a large anniversary cake will provide the background setting for the convocation.

The highlight of the program will be an award to the outstanding student in the School of Speech. This award has been presented to a student in the department of speech education for the past four years.

Thief Placed On Probation

Thomas E. Hamilton received two suspended sentences in city court Friday stemming from willful trespassing and petty larceny charges in a sorority theft April 13.

Hamilton, who was caught in a closet of Alpha Gamma Delta sorority by a housekeeper last month, was given a suspended sentence on each count and placed on probation for three years by Judge Francis Moran.

A charge of second degree burglary, lodged originally, was dismissed on the motion of Asst. Dist. Atty. J. Richard Sardino because of insufficient evidence.

Hamilton was accused of taking $19.90 worth of phonograph records from the Comstock Avenue sorority.

Blocking Drill

HITTING HARD are these Syracuse gridders with coach AL GERLICK looking on in a workout at Manley Field. The Orangemen will wind-up spring drills next week after 20 workouts. Gerlick will change sides and coach the Alumni squad in Saturday's Varsity-Alumni game.

Lutz Leads Hill Batters; Barnowski Has Top ERA

Shortstop Pat Lutz is leading the Orange hitters with a .355 batting average. Lutz has 11 hits in 28 at bats in eight games.

Ed Barnowski has the top pitching earned run average with a 2.25 percentage. The big right hander has a 1-3 record with two one run losses. In 31 innings pitched he has given up 9 runs and 20 hits.

Larry Craybas, 1-1, has a 2.89 ERA. Lefty Bob Lelli, 1-1, has yielded 8 runs in 11 innings.

Complete Games

Barnowski also is the team leader in complete games with two. Craybas and Lelli have completed one game each.

Ed Macner and Pat Antonelli are the other team .300 hitters. Macner is hitting at a .393 clip with eight hits in 26 at bats. Four were for extra bases with one home run and three triples.

Antonelli is 3 for 10 for an even .300 average. Richie Duffy is batting .222. Dave Rounds .171, Lelli .200, Jacuk .240, Taylor .133 and Cohen .175.

Among the hurlers, whom they claim are not supposed to hit, Barnowski is 0 for 12 and Schoff 1 for 3.

Team Average

The team has scored 22 runs and banged out 49 hits while compiling a .226 team batting mark.

The Hill nine has a 3-5 record after Saturday's loss to Lafayette.

The statistics are recorded on the basis of eight games. Wednesday the team plays RPI. Saturday they host the University of Rochester at Lew Carr Field to open a six game home stand.

Hobart plays here May 8, Bucknell May 10 and Penn State comes in for a doubleheader May 11.

In Saturday's loss to Lafayette, Barnowski was again the loser in going the distance. The sophomore gave up nine hits.

Hitting has been the Orange weakness all season with Piety hurlers getting little plate support. Before the Lafayette loss the Piety had dropped a twinbill at the University of Pittsburgh.

Coach Ted Kleinhans has stuck with essentially the same lineup hoping for a break in the hit drought.

Frosh Action

Baseball

The Cornell yearlings edged the Syracuse frosh 7-6 at Lew Carr Field Saturday.

A double play ended a ninth inning Syracuse rally after the Orange had scored twice. Back to back singles by Rick Knapp and Mike Mikolay, and two walks in the final frame made it 7-5.

A throwing error after an out at the plate allowed the final Syracuse tally.

A third walk then loaded the bases again before Bob Coyne rapped into a double play.

The Hill freshmen play the Colgate frosh at Hamilton Friday. The next home game will be May 7 against the Ithaca frosh. Last season the Ithaca College varsity placed fourth in NCAA competition.

The Syracuse freshmen then meet the University of Rochester, Colgate again, and end the season with a second game against Cornell at Ithaca.

Lacrosse

A strong freshman attack, a very experienced midfield, and an inexperienced defense faced-off against the Cornell frosh Saturday. The pressure of the Cornell attack and midfield control prevailed. For the first time in nearly two years, the Tangerines Lacrosse team lost, 14-10.

In the early minutes, the Orange frosh sprinted to a 3-1 lead. However, Cornell tied the score only to find themselves down 5-3 minutes later. Once again the Big Red bounced back and iced the score at halftime.

A seemingly fired-up Red squad scored early in the second half and gaining momentum, commanded as much as a four goal lead by the third quarter's end.

The Orange offense came to life after eight minutes of even play and got within two goals of the Cornell team. But Cornell bore the pressure and scored two quick goals to ice the game at the final 14-10 score.

Alumni Squad Starts Drills

By BERNIE MacCALLUM
Sports Editor

The old men of Hill gridiron wars—the Alums—open practice today in preparation for the Varsity-Alumni game Saturday in Archbold Stadium.

The Alumni coaching staff of Al "Cannonball" Gerlick and John Seketa will call the opening session together at 3 p.m. at Manley Field.

Two All-Americans, Fred Mautino and Bob Yates will be in the Alumni line. Both were members of the 1959 National Championship team and "Sizable Seven" forward wall. Yates, who now plays for the Boston Patriots, will be doing most of the kicking for the Alums. Mautino will be at end.

Returning Pros

Jim Ridlon of the San Francisco 49ers, and Dick Lasse of the New York Giants, have also indicated that they are in the Alumni fold for the game.

At quarterback the Alumni will field Mert Ranor and Dick Easterly. Easterly is now with the Hamilton Tigercats.

John Brown, Gary Fallon, Pete Brokow, and Tommy Stephens will all be returning for this spring's contest. Dave Applehof, center Al Bemillar, halfback John Howell, linebacker Charlie Wink and back Vinnie Vergara are also under contract.

Seniors

Graduating seniors who have indicated that they would play are John Mackey, Walt Sweeney, Dave Meggyesy, and Don King, all of whom will give pro ball a try in the fall—Mackey with Baltimore, Sweeney with San Diego, King with Detroit.

"Big" Leon Cholakis, 1962 Orange captain, will be in the Alumni line along with Gene Stancin, Roger Pieto and Charles Patkochis will be in the backfield.

Mackey's Last

Mackey is passing up the lacrosse trip to Penn State for a final appearance in Archbold Stadium before graduation.

Last year's Alum coach, Jim Ringo of the Green Bay Packers, will not return to the coaching line for this season's clash.

Game time is 1:30 p.m. Saturday. The crew races at Lake Onondaga will begin at 4:30 p.m. so that fans will be able to take in both attractions.

Varsity Win

In last spring's game the Varsity was a one touchdown victor.

Coach Ben Schwartzwalder will use the game to get a good look at some of the up and coming frish players, giving them their first shot under fire.

Other former Syracuse gridders in the area interested in playing should contact the Athletic Department. No weight loss requirements will be necessary.

Death Car

Did You See This Car?

The murderer of Agnes Pensabene ditched the above car, a white 1959 Impala sedan in the upper Sadler Hall parking lot sometime after 2:30 a.m. Tuesday morning.

According to police it is possible that someone in the university might have seen the killer as he entered or left the Sadler lot Capt. Samuel Nappi has asked that students with any information contact police headquarters at HA 2-8151.

The car was owned by the victim, police determined. She was last seen leaving Sue's Restaurant, 1121 S. Salina St. with Ernest Wells, around 2:20 a.m.

Police were able to swiftly trace the car because the killer in his haste to leave the Thornden Park death scene, stripped a piece of chrome from the car's right. side. Laboratory analysts were able to immediately identify the strip as coming from either a 1959 Impala or Chevrolet Nomad Station Wagon.

The car was discovered at Sadler by Sgt. John Dzielak of the Syracuse police during a city-wide alarm around 11:45 a.m.

The death car was parked next to the automobile of Alvin Robinson, a Sadler resident. He told police that the white Impala was not there when he returned to Sadler at 2 a.m.

For several hours Sadler residents, reporters and other bystanders gathered at the scene as police laboratory technicians checked the auto for fingerprints and other evidence. The car was visibly bloodstained. both inside and outside.

Victim's Car Discovered In Sadler Lot

By AUDREY LIPPMAN, CHARLES M. STEINBERG and TOWNSEND SOUTHARD

The recent series of muggings in the university area reached a climax Tuesday morning with the murder of a 31-year-old woman in Thornden Park.

The car of the victim, a 1959 Chevrolet Impala was found by police in Sadler Hall's upper parking lot about 11:45 a.m.

Agnes Pensabene, the victim, was found near the park amphitheatre about 7 a.m. Tuesday by an unidentified woman crossing through the park on her way to University Hospital.

Syracuse police said Miss Pensabene was found semi-nude with her head battered by a sharp instrument. They believe the murder weapon was a tire iron found inside the car.

Police took fingerprints from the car and searched it at the Sadler lot. Students whose cars were parked near the victim's auto were questioned by city police.

Wells

Syracuse police last night booked Ernest Wells, on a parole violation.

Capt. Nappi said Wells allegedly admitted he met Miss Pensabene at Sue's Restaurant. 1121 S. Salina St. He also allegedly admitted to arguing with the victim in a car parked near the home of his brother, William Wells, 15 Albert Terrace.

Wells then claimed he left her in the car about 2:30 a.m. on Albert Terrace and did not see her again, Nappi said.

Capt. Nappi said Wells had scratches under his eyes, on chin and on his hands. Police are checking clothing found at the Albert Terrarce residence, where Wells' supposedly resides with a brother and sister-in-law.

Stains

The clothing supposedly has stains which are being checked in the police laboratory.

Police said Wells refused to sign any statement.

Wells has been out on parole about one month, according o Capt. Nappi. He had served time on a burglary charge.

Police said the victim's car (See Car Discovered, Page 5)

Panhel Gives STU Sorority Membership

Sigma Tau Upsilon sorority, an affiliate member of Syracuse University Panhellenic Association, was voted into full membership of the association at the Panhel meeting Monday night.

Ratification of the new Panhel constitution was held up due to the inclusion of a new post. Greek-week co-chairman will be included as a member of the executive council.

Panhel rush chairman Barbara Epstein introduced a plan to be considered for the elimination of "planned rushing" on the Hill.

The new plan, which will be voted on by sorority women this week, calls for all freshmen women to visit each sorority on campus durin gthe fall semester for one open house party.

This system, if approved. will give rushees a chance to visit houses of Christian, Jewish and non-sectarian traditions.

Miss Epstein stressed that it would benefit the sororities by keeping houses from losing possible members because of religious preferences.

Dean of Women Marjorie C. Smith has advised Panhel that if such a system is not adopted sororities will find freshmen women losing interest in the system within five years.

Miss Epstein also introduced a new system for upperclass sorority rush in the fall. This plan, which will also be voted on by sororities next week, calls for an open upperclass rush.

Under the existing plan, a (See Panhel, Page 4)

Lantern Ceremony, Pageant Friday Night

The rites of spring" will take place in the "garden of the gods" Friday night.

This it not something out of Margaret Mead, but a lantern ceremony and a spring pageant that will be presented in the Thornden Park amphitheater at 7:30 p.m. Friday.

This is the first time in recent years that the ceremonies will be held on Friday evening of Spring Weekend. They were formerly held in the afternoon.

The traditional Lantern Ceremony will begin the festivities of the evening. As seniors hand junior coeds the lanterns, it symbolizes the passing down of responsibility to the next class.

There will be a procession to the stage of the amphitheater with members of Eta Pi Upsilon, senior women's honorary and coordinator of Spring Weekend, and their faculty escorts.

The Queen of Spring Weekend will be crowned by last year's queen, Martha Gallagher, now a head resident on Day 5. The candidates are Ula Wiltse, Marilyn Burke, Pat Thompson, Monica Polozie, and Joan Wheeler.

Awards will then be presented to the outstanding sophomore and junior coed, and outstanding transfer student.

The Spring Pageant will follow the theme of the 'battle of the sexes." It will view and revise the battle" as the gods and godesses saw it. The skit will star junior Lloyd Baskin, and Susan Tanenbaum, a freshman. Michael Styer, former program director of WAER, will be moderator of the pageant.

Eta Pi Upsilon has been the senior women's honorary at SU since 1897. They have sponsored and coordinated Spring Weekend annually since 1914.

PARENTS' WEEKEND POSTS

Applications for Parents' Weekend chairmanships are due 5 p.m. Monday, at Sigma Alpha Mu fraternity, 712 Comstock Ave. according to James Morris, Joint Student Government president.

Morris said applications to be turned in to Fred Klein at SAM should include name, address, average, experience with university weekends and ideas for Parents' Weekend, 1963.

Two seniors will be chosen for overall chairmen. Six under chairmanships, open to underclassmen, will be given to three men and three women, he said.

3 M-Street Stores Shut

By CISSY POSSELT

"We have a hole in our roof (and our heads, now!) Firemen chopped away our roof, the water roared, the floors are getting mopped."

That's what a hastily-lettered sign on the door of the Hill Bookstall on Marshall Street said Tuesday. It explained why the Bookstall, Manny's and Cosmo's are closed until the damages can be repaired.

Monday's fire started in Cosmo's Pizza Shop, 143 Marshall Street, at 12:45 p.m., and smoke and water damage was reported at Lowe's Clainers. Leon's Tailor Shop, the Bookstall and Manny's.

If you were all set to buy that pair of Madras bermudas in Manny's, you'll have to wait a couple of days. Manny plans to remain closed until the extent of the damage can be estimated.

"I don't know if we are going to have a fire sale," Manny said. "We want to start with fresh merchandise, but that depends on the insurance."

"Most of the students have been so nice. They have come in just to see how we're getting along," Mrs. A. L. Lowe, of Lowe's Cleaners, said.

It was Mr. Lowe who was second at the scene of Monday's fire. He ran to the pizza shop as soon as he heard the commotion and offered his fire extinguisher.

"The man at the pizza shop seemed to have the whole thing under control when I got there," he said. Lowe left his extinguisher at the restaurant and returned to his own store just as fire apparatus arrived.

Lowe noted some of the debris he cleaned up after firemen had chopped through the ceiling was blackened. "I think it was only from the smoke," he said.

Leon Zeeberg. owner of Leon's Tailor Shop, said he was happy with many student offers to help after the fire. "Nice students came in.I wanted to pay them. but they wouldn't accept anything," he said.

Zeeberg plans to have all smoke and water damaged clothes re-cleaned and deodorized by Friday.

Workmen were cleaning out charred beams and burned machinery from Cosmo's Pizza Shop Tuesday afternoon. The restaurant is scheduled for reopening in two weeks.

A University In a Jungle

A word to the wise is sufficient—or is it?

Geographically, Syracuse University has always been in a situation where it is bounded on the North and the West by the most intense delinquent crime area in the county.

Therefore, there has always been a perennial problem of Syracuse University students being victims of muggings, robberies and molestings.

Population records show that although this area, the Fifteenth Ward, comprises only three per cent of the county population, it was responsible for 30 per cent of the 1962 Youth Bureau cases.

Records also show that this rate of crime is not decreasing. In 1959, 1960 and 1961, the area was responsible for more than 25 per cent of new juvenile crimes.

Police officials have warned that juvenile crimes in the university area are increasing, not decreasing.

Yet, the Syracuse University student appears unaware of these developments. He has been warned time and time again that the area surrounding the university is a dangerous neighborhood. He still persists, however, in walking to the movies or to nearby bars and nightclubs.

After being attacked the student then blames the Syracuse Police Department for the incident. Although the blame for lack of protection cannot be shifted from the Department, Police Chief Patrick V. Murphy has warned residents of this area that the department has 46 vacanies and cannot give the area concentrated policing.

Protection is lacking—and the student has been warned. He has been told not to walk through the Fifteenth Ward at night. He has been told that Thornden Park is perilous at night. He has been warned that police protection is lacking in the area.

Recently, two students were mugged on Harrison St.; another was mugged while walking at night with a friend in Thornden Park. As a result all city parks have been ordered closed in late evening hours.

Forgetting these incidents and warnings, the Syracuse student continues to walk through the Fifteenth Ward and in Thornden Park at night.

The area surrounding the university is city property and is not off limits to the student—but this area is also not off limits to the mugger and the murderer.

LETTERS

City Students

To the Editor:

We think it's about time that the girls that live on campus stop attaching a stigma to "city students". They should be made to realize that so-called city students pay the same tuition as anyone else—probably more than a lot of the girls from out of town who are here on scholarships—and that perhaps these "city students" prefer to live at home for a few more years before leaving for whatever fate has in store for them.

They shouldn't be made to feel like poor relations. For one thing, probably a large percentage of these imported gals come from little hick towns that would fit into a small corner of Syracuse. They come to Syracuse from these small towns and immediately push a button or something and become real sophisticates (bleached hair and everything) and just look down their noses at the girls who live in the surrounding area and for one reason or another, commute to school from their home.

To them, "city students" are just beneath contempt. I'm quite sure that a look at the Dean's List will prove that "city students" get just as good marks and probably better than the ones living in dorms and sorority houses, and that they have just as many "sharps", too.

Religion

To the Editor:

A thought occurred to me this morning as I sat in a Religion lecture and heard Dr. Jamison introduce a Jewish rabbi who had been invited to speak to the Religion classes because he was better informed about Judaism and could provide the students with a better understanding of the Jewish religion than any of the Protestant members of the Religion Department could do.

A few weeks ago Roman Catholicism was taught in this class, but the lecture was given by a "slightly" biased Protestant professor in the Department who presented some quite inaccurate pictures of the Catholic faith.

In a "non-sectarian" university, such as Syracuse claims to be in its official catalog, does this not seem a bit unfair? It cannot be argued that no Catholic lecturer was available, for there is a Jesuit college in the city and a very well-informed Catholic chaplain on campus, neither of whom were contacted.

At a time when the Administration is severely criticizing the Greek houses for discrimination, is it not appropriate that it should first examine its own discriminatory practices?

If the University does not hesitate to invite Protestant, Jewish and atheistic speakers, does it seem very likely that one Catholic lecturer would corrupt the entire student body?

Carolyn Connors

Library

To the Editor:

I would like your readers to know that I was compelled to waste an hour and a half of precious study time thanks to the unbelievable inefficiency of the S.U. library.

Will someone somewhere please explain why there were only two pages on duty behind the lending desk this evening? Next, can someone account for the fact that there was no reference libarian on the job tonight?

Finally, why was the telephone permitted to ring incessantly during those exasperating 90 minutes? Fellow students, why are we treated like dirt on this campus?

Festival

To the Editor:

The numerous cultural activities occasioned by the week-long Festival of the Arts were of the highest and most satisfying order. Whereas Princeton University saw fit to import a host of celebrities to make a go of their recent Symposium, we at Syracuse had the fortune to witness a series of programs created by a seemingly inexhaustible source of indigenous talent. There are times when I'm proud to be associated with S.U.

Crew

To the Editor:

I have always looked to John Trever's cartoon quip in the D.O. for a midday chuckle. However, one glance at yesterday's work of art pointed out a great misconception of crew on Mr. Trever's part. To have put themselves in the predicament Mr. Trever so humorously depicted, the oarsmen of that sunken shell would have been rowing backwards! The coxswain of a shell sits in the stern, facing the direction of the finish line.

May I suggest that your Mr. Trever leave his drafting board Saturday to see in person a functioning crew and shell as Syracuse hosts Cornell and Navy at Lake Onondaga. Perhaps others may wish to accompany Mr. Trever and get a first hand look at a little known but great sport. That is Saturday at 4:30 p.m. at Lake Onondaga—hope to see you all there.

Middle East

To the Editor:

In writing my article of a week ago, I was obviously not trying to find the answers to the momentous problem of the Middle East. The reason for submitting my comments to the Daily Orange was that I was disconcerted by Mr. Houlihan's superficial treatment of the subject. What I wanted to see was if some real spirit could be aroused on campus to search for the underlying facts, causes, and true issues which make up the essence of this or any political affair.

My sincere appreciation is extended to Mr. Borthwick, Mr. Land, and Mr. Zarub for their efforts in attacking the problem. The only one, however, who actually seemed to be focusing on the base of the issue was Mr. Land. His article was a good attempt to find the real "why's" of the issue. It would have been nice, too, if some additional motivations and underlying circumstances favoring the Arabs had been uncovered by someone else. Also, I would like to apologize for an error of mine concerning the Arab attitude toward the U. N. Partition.

In regard to the articles of Mr. Borthwick and of Mr. Zarub, though, it is a shame that much of their effort was spent in attacking me. Taking the assumption that they were both trying to deal with the Israeli-Arab problem, they would probably have been much more successful if their articles had concerned only the issue, as was true in Mr. Land's case.

It seems that Mr. Borthwick got lost in relating some interesting facts while Mr. Zarub only succeeded in innumerating some important background information.

However, I am certainly not trying to criticize the authors of the article on their use of facts; I am only expressing disappointment in their failure to reach the crux of the matter. I also feel badly about their unsuccessful attempts to defend Nasser, whose only "favorable" attribute is his economic development of Egypt through the use of dictatorial and undemocratic political control.

I am pleased, though, that my article, which merely dealt with the two sidedness of most political situations, helped precipitate interest concerning a major world crisis. I was dissatisfied with the misinterpretations of my efforts but fairly pleased with my article's results. I only hope that in the future, letters to the editor concerning major issues are generally forthcoming, attempting only to expose the roots of the situations involved.

Bacon Discusses Opera

By STEPHANIE BRILL

"I couldn't want a better cast nor a better chorus," said composer Ernst Bacon while speaking of his opera "A Tree on the Plains" which opens at the Regent Theatre tomorrow .

Leaning back comfortably he continued, "Most of the cast is comprised of local people including housewives, two psychiatrists and students."

Ken Bowles, a well known Syracuse actor, will play the principle speaking role while William Covington, a professional singer from New York City, Rosalyn Goldberg and Americo Di Pietro will perform the singing leads.

Twenty-eight musicians from the Syracuse Symphony will also participate. Author Paul Horgan wrote the text.

"I'm suffering the hazards of an author conducting his own work," he mused.

"I'm tempted to change the piece if parts of it don't go well," he frowned thoughtfully, "it's not like Bethoven or Bach, whose works have been edited thoroughly or with another composer's works where you can't change it.

"Sometimes," he confessed sheepishly, "we've worked on the piece so much, and I worked so long composing it that I don't want to hear it any more, but I can't let on to that."

ERNEST BACON

Bacon has composed 3 symphonies, among them his recently performed "Riolama" in addition to other music for orchestra and piano.

The composer's many honors include a Pulitzer Prize in 1932, a Guggenheim fellowship in 1939, MacDowell and Huntington-Hartford fellowships.

The composer was the founder and director of the Bach Festival in Carmel, California and of the New Spartanburg Festival in South Carolina. During the depression he was Supervisor and Orchestral Director for the WPA Federal Music Project. Formerly of the Syracuse School of Music, he has performed concerts throughout Europe and the United States and has also been a visiting professor at Stanford, Denver and Wyoming Universities.

Walking past the two baby grand pianos in his spacious office, Bacon showed his second book "Notes on the Piano" which appeared three days ago.

"I'm not essentially a theater man" said Bacon who composed a musical comedy, music for the Stratford, Connecticut production of "The Tempest" and incidental music for the theater.

Sage Concert

Veronica Rohan Sage will feature the fifteen two part inventions of Bach on her recital 5 p.m. Sunday in Crouse Auditorium. Her program will open with the Sonata No. 49 in E major by Hadyn. Her closing selection will be three of Shubert's Opus 90 Impromtus.

Mrs. Sage is very active in Syracuse musical circles. She is a member of Morning Musicals and Pro-Art, organist-choir master at St. Charles Borromeo Church and a member of the School of Music piano staff.

This will be her fourth appearance on Crouse Concerts this season. Miss Sage has formerly appeared with the Syracuse Orchestra as soloist.

University Alumnus Named Company VP

Melvin G. Edwards, 43, has been appointed to the recently established position of Assistant Vice President for Community Affairs for the Riverside Cement Co. a Division of the American Cement Corporation.

Edwards took advantage of the Air Force's "Operation Bootstrap" program to obtain his Bachelors Degree in Liberal Arts at Syracuse in 1958.

PP&M in Utica

Peter, Paul and Mary, one of the most popular folk-singing groups today, will appear 3 p.m. Sunday at the Utica Memorial Auditorium in Utica.

The singing trio last appeared in Syracuse at Winter Weekend where their performance was lauded. Peter, Paul and Mary boast that they have "an honest way to sing folk songs."

Their most popular renditions have been "The Lemon Tree", "Five Hundred Miles", "The Hammer Song", and "Puff, the Magic Dragon."

"We are a cosmopolitan group," says Peter. "We can present in a modern musical form the feelings of many ethnic groups and do it with integrity."

Tickets in Syracuse can be purchased at the Clark Music Building or Famous Artists Inc.

Thornden:PerliousParadise

By SANDY MYERS

Groups played baseball, basketball and tennis in Thornden Park Tuesday afternoon. At the water tower, cars were lined up.

Couples strolled hand in hand through the park. Lying on the grass, others tried to study.

Youngsters rode through on their tricycles and bicycles.

From the water tower, the view of lights flashing on at twilight could be seen. In the distance Lake Onondaga reflected the colors of the setting sun.

Flowers were beginning to bloom, and buds were coming out on the trees The ground was slightly muddy, but the grass was green.

It was a spring afternoon in Thornden Park. In the swimming pool parking lot, a lone city police car was parked.

The body of a murdered woman was found in Thornden Park Monday night.

The murder was the culmination of a long series of attacks, muggings and assaults in Thornden Park. City police recently began enforcing a city ordinance closing the park at 11 p.m.

On April 12, two days after the order went into effect, a gang attacked a male freshman walking with a coed in the park.

Police statistics reveal that nearly every type of attack or assault has increased in Thornden Park this year.

The worst incident in recent years was the mugging of a Hill student in the 500 block of Ostrom Avenue April 14, 1962.

At the time, Booth Dormitory, now at the location, was under construction. At about 12:30 a.m. that Saturday morning, a youth approached the student and asked if he had a match.

The boy then whistled. Four other thugs ran from Thornden Park, knocked the student to the ground and rifled his pockets.

While the student was on the ground, one of the youths slashed him across the face several times with a razor, commenting, "Let's see how long you can take this."

The tempo of university area incidents, including thefts and pinchings as well as attacks, has increased steadily over the past two years.

During October and November 1961 a series of purse snatchings and assaults kept Security Police busy.

A woman was attacked in the 300 block of Marshall Street, while a coed was grabbed near the WAER prefab behind the main library.

Last spring, a gang of Negro youths wearing black bandanas roamed the university area and molested several coeds.

Not until this year did attacks reach their peak.

Lighting has been improved in the area, and Security Police director Robert Flaherty last month attended a meeting in Rochester at which the use of police dogs was discussed.

But the molestings continued.

Early in March, several coeds were pinched on the main campus. The incidents took place early in the evening on the main campus.

Two male students were attacked March 17 on Cedar Street. The two students, each weighing over 200 pounds, fought off the gang, but one suffered a deep cut on his right forearm.

The same day, two coeds reported a man indecently exposed at University Place and College Place.

A gang of 20-30 youths attacked a Hill student and two companions, this time at Madison Street and South Crouse Avenue.

And to close — at least temporarily — the long series, two Sadler Hall residents were mugged last Sunday in the 700 block of Harrison Street.

The two students were called to city police headquarters Tuesday to identify a suspect.

Spring recreational activities continue in Thornden Park despite the recent murder.

Car Discovered

keys. purse and shoes had not been found as of 8 p.m. Tuesday. She had not been criminally assaulted, according to medical examiners.

Dr. Harry Gilmore county medical examiner, and Dr. Roy Rohner, pathologist from the Upstate Medical Center, examined the body at the County Morgue. They said the woman was a virgin. "She put up a terrific fight against the attacker," they said.

Daily Orange reporters were not allowed to see the victim after positive identification was made by her brother. Joseph Pensabene.

The official cause of death was listed as brain lacerations and a fractured skull. Her head was split open "as if she were hit with an axe," according to a morgue attendant.

He also said there were marks on her throat and general abrasions of the body, including broken ribs.

The examiner said she had been dead five or six hours when she had been found at 7 a.m., placing the time of death around 2 a.m.

Impounded Car

The victim's car is now impounded at the police station with barricades around it. A pair of shoes, an article of clothing. and a tire iron with stains on it were found inside the car. Witnesses to the police search said a pair of glasses and spare tire rim were found in the trunk.

Police also said stains had been found in the car and on the car door.

Police took plaster casts of tire prints in the park. These will be compared with the tires on the woman's car, Capt. Nappi said.

Tiens, regarde donc le prof! Ce qu'il a l'air en forme! En forme, bien sûr, grâce à son REMINGTON 25 qui lui permet enfin de se raser de près; les poils longs et courts sont coupés net. Rasage impeccable, doux et rapide, puisque les fameux rouleaux-supports Remington protègent sa peau. C'est peut-être bien pourquoi les professeurs ne portent plus la barbe!

Miren el profesor. ¡Qué contento está! Contento con la afeitada al ras y tan suave que consigue con la REMINGTON 25. Afeitada al ras porque la REMINGTON 25 es más potente para rasurar que ninguna otra máquina de afeitar. Suave porque los rodillos-peine de Remington le protegen la piel. Tal vez por eso ya no se ven más profesores con barbas.

Hier ist der Professor. Der Professor ist glücklich. Er ist glücklich, weil er sich mit seinem REMINGTON 25 so glatt und angenehm rasieren kann. So glatt, weil sein REMINGTON 25 grösseres Schnittvermögen hat als jeder andere Rasierapparat. Angenehm weil die Rillenwalzen beim Remington die Haut schützen. Vielleicht haben deswegen die Professoren keine Bärte mehr.

* If you have to turn this page upside down for the translation you're wasting your father's money.

See the professor. The professor is happy. He is happy because of the close comfortable shave his REMINGTON® 25 is giving him. Close because the REMINGTON 25 shaver has more whisker-cutting power than any other shaver. Comfortable because Remington roller combs protect his skin. Maybe that's why professors don't wear beards any more.

Rare Okinawan Code Acquired by University

By DAVID BORTHWICK

To the average American, the word "Okinawa" vaguely recalls a brutal World War II battle and perhaps a charming Broadway comedy named "The Teahouse of the August Moon."

Okinawa is an obscure island in Ryukyu chain of the Japanese coast. Yet this island currently is administrated by the United States and will remain under our control as a military base for the forseeable future.

In an attempt to fill the information gap on Okinawa, Syracuse University is assemblying the largest collection of writing about the island in the continental United States. Two hundred items make up the rapidly expanding library.

Many Languages

Included are books and articles in many languages, chiefly in Japanese, on every aspect of Okinawa, history and culture. From these publications it is possible to reconstruct much of Okinawa's past and to understand its modern society.

The collection is the result of a Ford Foundation-sponsored project under the direction of Douglas Haring, emeritus professor of anthropology. His chief aid in the operation is Miss Monoyo Ise, a graduate assistant.

Most prized item in the new collection is a copy of an extraordinarly important but rare document on Okinawa called "Ryuktu Karitsu". The karitsu, or criminal code, was compiled between 1775 and 1786.

Prof Haring and Miss Ise have obtained a facsimile version of one of the only two copies of the code known to exist.

Few Duplications

Relatively few duplicates were made of the hand-written original. Of these many deteriorated because of the humid Okinawa climate. And those which survived nature were destroyed during World War II. As a result the Syracuse copy is of particular historic and scholarly importance.

The copy, laboriously reproduced page-by-page, was done at the Yokohama National University. Miss Ise visited Japan last summer to make arrangements for sending the 537 page document here.

From an anthoropological point of view, the code is of major significance since it is a combination of Chinese-Confucian ideals with precedents in Okinawa customs and laws.

Sets Up Institutions

Among other things, the code sets up institutions similar to our own jury system, right of appeal, fines, punishments and definitions of legal terms. Courtroom procedures are listed along with qualifications for judges.

Like Angle-Saxon jurisprudence, the ancient Okinawan law was based on precedent.

The Okinawans, however, were wary of printing exact laws for fear that judges would narrowly interpret written injunctions rather than rule on broad, general principles.

Scholars Interested

Scholars are concerned with the Karitsu because it helps piece together bits of Okinawa's long history. The island's modern inhabitants are descendants of Polynesians, Japanese and Chinese immigrants. From the legal code anthropologists can trace the ingluences which make up present-day Okinawan culture.

Back in 1393, Chinese began coming to the island. Two centuries later a feudal Japanese lord took control of Okinawa. By the late nineteenth century the island had become a prefecture of Japan under a relationship similar to that between the United States and Puerto Rico.

The U.S. occupied Okinawa in 1945 and expects eventully to return the area to Japan.

Final Change

It is in anticipation of the final change to Japanese rule that scholars are working on Okinawan historic documents. The object is to lay a proper basis for stable government, combining past cultural strains into a workable modern society.

Prof. Haring taught sociology and anthropology on the Hill for 34 years before his retirement from classroom instruction last June. Much of his research has been done in Japan and the Ryukyus. Results of his ethnographic surveys influenced the U.S. Army to return the Amani Islands to Japan in 1953.

Upon leaving the active SU faculty, he received an honorary degree from the university.

Miss Ise, a graduate of Keio University in Tolyo, has been on the Hill since 1959. She already holds a master's degree in sociology and is working on her Ph.D. Eventually she would like to study the role ow men in Okinawan government.

The Japanese-born graduate assistant started working with Prof. Haring in the fall of last year. On campus she catalogs the books and articles which make up the Okinawa collection. She also is assisting the professor in preparation of introductory material for sections of the Karitsu code.

Syracuse has obtained numerous books and other publications on Okinawa is a result of Miss Ise's efforts last summer in Japan. She arranged with Tokyo booksellers to watch for copies of needed Rukyuan articles in Asian periodicals.

In the project, SU is cooperating with libraries at Harvard, Columbia, Cornell, Stanford and Yale Universities plus the Library of Congress and the New York Public Library.

The study which spawned the SU collection is now in its second year. It is administered by the Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs. Several friends of the university, including the widow of the late philosopher John Dewey—sponsor the book collection.

Profs Named Knights

Dr. Albert J. George, romance language department chairman, and Dr. Antonio Pace, professor of Italian, have been named Knights in the Order of Merit by the Republic of Italy.

They were recognized for their contributions towards strengthening friendly relations between the United States and Italy through culture.

The presentation took place at the Italian consulate in New York City, where Italy's Minister Plenipotentiary Ruggero Farace di Villaforesta awarded the medals.

Dr. George was recognized for his accomplishments in developing at Syracuse one of the largest enrollments in Italian studies of any American university.

Singled out for particular honor was Dr. Pace's work as president of the American Association of Teachers of Italian.

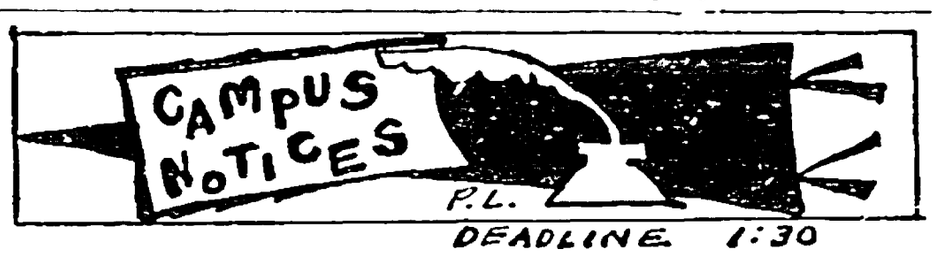
A Semester In France Program Set For Fall

Final arrangements have been made and completed with the University of Poitiers for the Syracuse Semester-in-France program which will begin in the fall.

Applications are available in the office of Prof. George, 205 H. B. Crouse.

With this program, the university now offers students an opportunity to spend an academic semester in Italy, Guatemala or France, while completing the normal requirements for an undergraduate degree in four years.



Students selected for the Semester in France will do part of their work at the University of Poitiers and part under the direction of a visiting faculty member from Syracuse. The visiting professor and resident director of the program for this year is Albert George, romance language department head.

The Semester in Italy program was initiated in fall, 1959. The Guatemalan program was launched in spring, 1961, in cooperation with the University of San Carlos in Guatemala City.

The Italian program has no language prerequisite, although students are required to study for seven semester hours credit in Italian. for the Guatemala program, students must have sufficient competence to benefit from courses entirely in Spanish. The new program in France requires sufficient background in French.

Lacrosse Team Plays at Yale

By HOWIE SCHNEIDER

This could be a critical week for coach Roy Simmons and his lacrosse squad. The stickmen will bang heads with two of their remaining five opponents within the next three days. Today the team faces off against Yale, at New Haven, and Saturday they meet Penn State, at University Park. Standing at 3-2 on the season, a double victory could insure a .500 season.

In an attempt to bounce back after Saturday's disappointing 13-11 overtime loss to Colgate, the Orangemen left early yesterday to meet the Ivy Leaguers this afternoon.

Sophomore attackman Ron Fraser, who showed his first sign of inconsistency Saturday, and still managed to throw in six goals, will be relied on to carry the bunt of the Orange offensive punch. Fraser, the team scoring leader, has scored 23 tallies in four games.

Other probably starters this afternoon are defensemen Reese and Saberro, midfielders Mackey, Davis, and Brooks, teaming up with "Boom-Boom" Fraser at attack Pappas and Ramsdell, and in goal Pete Coe. Coe turned in an outstanding 22 save performance Saturday.

Simmons, who needs more injuries like Jimmy Hoffa needs Robert Kennedy, has lost the services of attackman Tom Rennie and Duncan Crowther. Rennie was hurt in the Hobart contest, and Crowther has been missing since the Cortland tilt. It has not been reported whether the boys will return to action this season or not.

Previously this year the team beat Cortland State, 12-4, Clarkson, 19-0, and Hobart, 15-7. In the loss column the squad dropped their first meeting of the year to highly-ranked Johns Hopkins, 10-7, and broke their three game winning streak with a second defeat in the Colgate contest.

Orangemen Host RPI; Try Home Debut Again

Syracuse uncaps its home season a little belatedly today in a 3 p.m. game with R.P.I. Ted Kleinhan's group had a chance to bow in two weeks ago today against Seton Hall, but the weather man had other plans.

Seton Hall had just stepped up for its third turn at the plate when the skies opened up and turned Lew Carr field into a swamp.

Today the sky looks a little brighter, but the Hill's record is a lot gloomier. Two weeks ago they were 3-2. Today they are 3-5.

In the time that's passed, the Orange have dropped a double header to Pittsburgh before adding another notch to Lafayette's record. All three losses were on the road.

So far this young season, soph Ed Barnowski has been the workhorse of the team. He's pitched one inning less than the rest of the squad combined. His 32 innings far outdistance the No. 2 man, Bob Lelli with 10 2 3.

Coach Ted Kleinhans probably won't go with Ed today simply because he went with Ed Saturday; in fact he has gone with Ed in the past two games played, and in half of the games this season.

And Ed has completed every start, winning one and losing three.

It is likely that Lelli will get the nod. Bob has started twice, finished once, and split two decisions. He's averaged a walk an inning and a sky-high (5.90) E.R.A.

If Lelli needs help, Larry Craybas, twice a starter, will be ready to finish up as he has in four other games. He owns the other third of the team's wins and an E.R.A. just below Barnowski's 2.25.

The rest of the line-up will be the same.

After today's contest, there remains a game with Rochester on Friday, Hobart on Wednesday, Bucknell on Friday, and a doubleheader with Penn State Saturday.

Piety Tennis Team Hosts Cornell

By BILL CRONAUER

Get out and root for the underdog. You never know what a little student support will do.

At 3 p.m. today on the Skytop courts, the Syracuse University tennis team meets Cornell in its toughest match of the season.

The odds are against the Orangemen. Cornell comes to town with the same squad that trounced the Piety, 9-0, just a year ago. In fact, Syracuse has never beaten the Big Red in tennis.

Yet veteran coach Gene Garrett feels that this is the year. "All our boys have improved greatly since 1962," he said. "We only need a spark of student support to set us loose."

The Hill netmen are pushing for their finest record in recent years. Syracuse has won three victories in a row.

Garrett credits senior captain Ross Kaplan with instilling the winning spirit in the Orangemen.

"Kaplan has given the whole team a big lift," Garrett stated. "He is a very dedicated player. We are extremely lucky to have him for three years."

Garrett continued that "Kaplan has been playing the best tennis on the Syracuse team."

Last season, Kaplan played in the no. 1 singles spot. However, this year he is no.2 behind sophomore Steve Rubell. "Kaplan is playing much better tennis in the second position," Garrett revealed.

The senior captain dropped four of five matches on the Southern tour, but has rebounded with impressive victories over Hamilton and Union.

In 1963 doubles action, Kaplan stands 4-4 with a 2-1 record since the trip down South. "Kaplan and Al Napper form the best first doubles team I've ever had on the Hill," Garrett said.

Yet Kaplan is not the only Orange netter who has shown improvement. Garrett believes that junior Al Davis has profited greatly from added experience.

Davis has won three consecutive singles matches and has teamed with Lew Katcher to form a strong third doubles team. The pair have taken four of seven matches, including three staight.

Katcher and sophomore Al Napper also drew praise from their coach. Katcher owns the best record on the Piety squad with a 5-3 singles mark and a 6-2 doubles record.

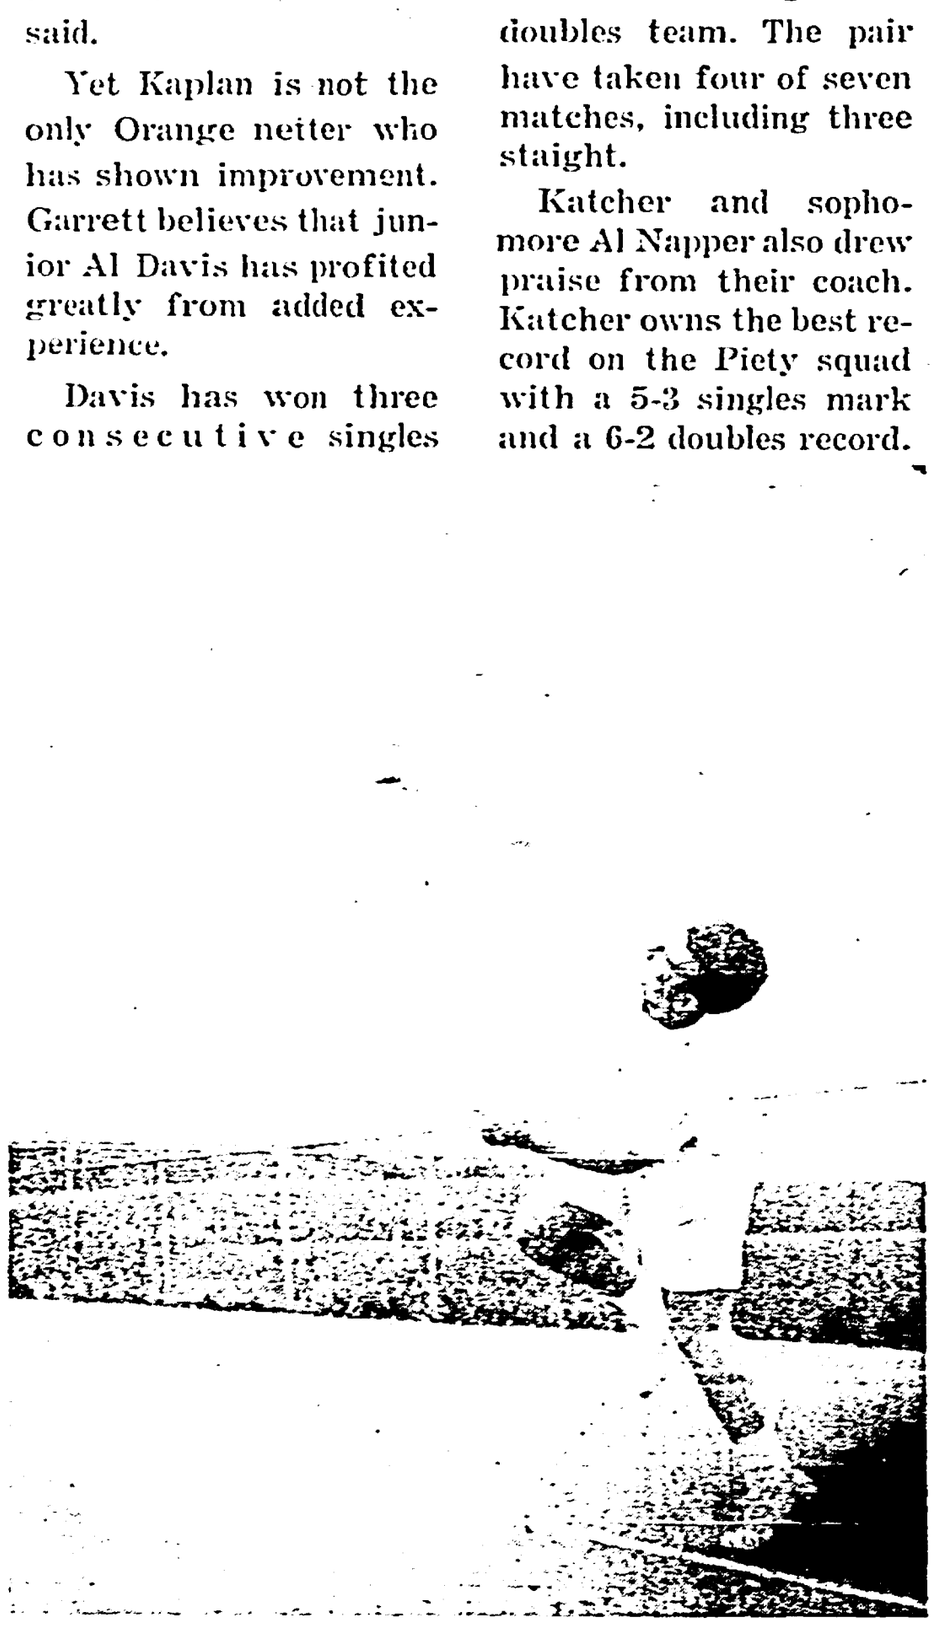
Napper has proved a dependable no. 6 man, posting a 5-3 ledger in both singles and doubles.

Junior Bill Gedalecia, the third-ranking player, has performed well all season. He stands 4-3 in singles and 5-2 in doubles action, teaming with Steve Rubell.

According to Garrett, Rubell, as the squad's best player, "has found himself in the unenviable no. 1 position."

"He has met a lot of experienced boys and has suffered a lot of bad breaks," the coach explained. Rubell has won only one of three singles, but all three doubles with Kaplan.

Today, Rubell faces another stiff test when he meets Cornell captain Jerry Levin. Last year, Levin downed Syracuse's Kaplan by a 6-2, 6-2 count.



The Big Red senior ranks among the top players in the East, having defeated Yale's Mike Neely. He has also met nationally-ranked Rodney Mandelstam of Miami.

Pete Kortman, the 1962 second singles performer, will again hold down that spot for Cornell, opposing Kaplan.

The remaining singles matches line up like this: no. 3, Gedalecia sv. Stan Wolfe; no. 4, Napper vs. Bill Taylor; no. 5, Davis vs. Joel Pashcow; no. 6, Katcher vs. Pete Marx or Ted Richards.

In doubles, Syracuse will go with its pairings of Kaplan-Napper, Rubell-Gedalecia, and Katcher-Davis. Cornell is still experimenting to determine its best doubles combinations.

Garrett sums it up: "We're the underdog, but not by much. We'll battle them all the way."

IFC Toughens Policy On Fraternity Pranks

By CLAY RICHARDS
Managing Editor

The traditional fraternity "hell week" moved a step closer to death Wednesday night as the Hill InterFraternity Council, in a special meeting, voted to oppose all hazing practices and refer all hazing cases to the IFC judicial board for action.

The IFC defined hazing as "any action taken or situation created by a fraternity intentionally, on or off the fraternity premises, to produce bodily injury, public embarrassment, morally degrading or illegal action.

According to the IFC resolution, any hazing as defined will "not be tolerated" and will be referred to the judicial board. The board has the power to reprimand, fine, place on probation or recommend the suspension of a fraternity's charter.

Wednesday's IFC meeting followed on the heels of a statement by Dean of Men Earle W. Clifford expressing concern over the large number of "incidents" during the past two or three weeks involving fraternity pledge classes going through initiation weeks.

The "incidents" climaxed Tuesday night when 11 pledges of one fraternity, dressed in hoods and robes, stopped a Syracuse Department of Public Works truck at 4 a.m. at Comstock Avenue and Colvin Street.

The 11 formed a human roadblock and "gave the driver a hard time," according to Security Police reports. Because of the recent rash of crimes in the area, the driver radioed from his truck and five city police patrol cars responded to the call.

The pledges refused to give their names and were taken by Snow on Spring Weekend!" It's not part of the crowded schedule, and hopefully won't interfere with the weekend.

Friday night events have been changed from the Thornden Park Amphitheater to the main library steps "to avoid incidents," after Monday's murder in the park.

Worker Arrested In ADPi Breakin

A Negro laborer entered a bedroom at Alpha Delta Pi sorority, at 4:45 a.m. Wednesday, questioned the four ADPi coeds on the Thornden Park murder, left, and was quickly arrested by Syracuse police.

The intruder, William McLendon, was arrested on charges of willful trespass, later altered to second degree burglary. The Sorority's housemother reported two wallets and the key to the front door missing.

McLendon telephoned the police earlier in the day offering leads to the murder case. He often gives the police "tips", accepted reliable sources.

The ADPi coeds telephoned Securityy Police after McLendon left the house, at 304 Walnut Pl., and security informed city police. McLendon was picked up and the sorority's house key was found among his possessions.

The four coeds, Kathy Hallen of Rochester, Marlyce Loveland of Mayland, Elizabeth deZeeuw of Fayetteville and Pat McGovern of Manville, N.J., said they were awakened by the man as he entered their room.

"He walked in very calmly, said hello and began questioningg us about the murder," one of the coeds said.

McLendon asked the girls how many of them were in the room. He turned the light on and continued questioning them for six or seven minutes, according to one of the coeds.

McLendon was charged with wilfull trespass at 8:30 a.m. after the girls identified him as the intruder. At 1:10 p.m. the chage was changed to second degree robbery.

New Bacon Opera Premieres Tonight

By SUE WANGERMAN

"Musical history was made by the premiere of 'A Tree on the Plains', not so much on account of its production as because it contains elements of great ness." The New York Times found Ernst Bacon's experiment in folk opera, after its first performances in the '40's, an exciting promise of Americana in the serious music of this country.

TWO LOCAL performers sing during a performance of Hill composer-in-residence Ernst Bacons opera, "A Tree on the Plain," which opens tonight at University Regent Theater.

But in the opinion of its creators, Pulitzer prizewinners Ernst Bacon and Paul Horgan, the opera needed revising and after years of work, the revised version of the work premieres at 8:30 p.m. today in the University Regent Theatre.

According to Time Magazine, "A Tree on the Plains" is "a signpost that opera is turning from an exotic plant into a wayside flower, part of the American scene."

Both musical and theatrical in its form, the opera compares with neo-French-American attempts at unifying pathos, tragedy and humor. The play is a commentary on the lives of those living on the Southwest Plains. Action is planned in

Local Police Arrest Three For Mugging

Three youths were booked by Syracuse police Tuesday for the mugging of two Hill students early Saturday morning.

Lieut. John Esselstyn, of the detective division, said the boys, aged 13, 16 and 17, were arrested on charges of burglary and assault. All are 15th ward residents.

The three are being held in jail.

Attacked were Sadler residents by Roger Schram and Earl Sherrod, while walking in the 700 block of Harrison Street.

Schram, beaten on the face and head, required six stitches. He lost his glasses, valued at $20, and a watch worth $50.

Sherrod's wallet was taken. He was also beaten about the head and face.

From Thornden To the Library

Wednesday's decision by Eta Pi Upsilon, senior women's honorary, to hold the Lantern Pageant and its rehearsals in front of the Library rather than in the Thornden Park amphitheater demonstrated a kind of responsibility not often associated with campus student groups.

After a three-hour meeting Tuesday, the group decided to forsake tradition and canceled Friday night's events in the park.

Thornden Park has been the scene of several muggins and a murder in the past few months, and several university officials questioned the advisability of staging the program in the park, because coeds and their dates would have to walk along dark, dangerous roads from "civilization" to the amphitheater.

But the ultimate decision to change tradition was up to the honorary, not university officials. Many students criticized this decision, however. Rationalizations have been uttered that "tradition is foremost," and "that with such a large group in the park, there will be no attacks."

These are only rationalizations. Thornden Park is a jungle at night with danger hiding behind every stone and tree. Certainly, chances of an attack at this event would be minimized because of the large crowds, but what about the isolated cases who would have walked their dates home before and way after the ending of the program.

The Library steps cannot compare with the esthetic beauty of the amphitheater and Thornden Park, but they are 99 per cent safer.

We are sure that the entertainment at the pageant will be sufficient to make up for any loss of beauty and we can see no reason for students uttering complaints about an unquestionable decision.

Bombs Away

The spirit of Cape Canaveral is again upon us.

From Watson's windows to Sadler's sills, we hear such astronomical sounds as "bombs away" and "look out below." In the upper floors the "bombardiers" have again picked out such strategic targets as dormitory windows, passing coeds and an occasional resident advisor.

The destruction caused by this year's bombardment hasn't as yet reached its peak as the "enemy" has made several sneak attacks, resulting in the grounding of many of our heroes by the dean of men.

But the university's radar system has not been able to detect all attackers. Many remain causing destruction and panic. Fortunately, bombs haven't been dropped on any innocent bystanders, but we can only rely on the bombers' recognition of the "Rules of Fair War."

We wonder when this foolishness will stop...10...9 ..8..7..6

ALTERNATIVES

'The Collapse of the Poet'

By Ron Corwin

Contrary to popular opinion, I do not feel that my columns this year have been either controversial or extreme.

For instance, the behavior of the white man towards the Negro during the last 400 years (which includes this morning to be sure) has generated a vast amount of hostility toward the white on the part of the Negro. One of the manifestations of this hostility (and despair) is the Black Muslims.

There is nothing controversial about that. It is true. Controversy means, "concerning a matter of opinion". The presence of the Muslims in America is not a matter of opinion. It is a matter of fact.

This should have raised questions. Why are the Muslims here? What has contributed to their recent rise in popularity? What can we do to rectify the situation?

But our dialogue never got that far.

Instead too many chose to call the Muslims names instead of dealing with the problem. We never got to the stage of posing "alternatives."

Perhaps it was the way I said things and not what I said.

Prejudice has been the main concern of these columns because I believe it "is not without interest to you, Gentle Reader; for the problem of the Twentieth Century is the problem of the color-line." (W.E.B. Du Bois, The Souls of Black Folk).

"Appearances to the contrary, no one in America escapes its effects and everyone in America bears some responsibility for it." (James Baldwin in Notes of a Native (Son).

I indicated that one way for the Negro to become "integrated" was to become white—to become like "us". Antoine de Saint-Exupery fears the same implication when he tells of us of HIS friend in The Little Prince.

"I have serious reason to believe that the planet from which the little prince came is the asteroid known as B-612.

"This asteroid has only once been seen through the telescope. That was by a Turkish astronomer, in 1909.

"On making his discovery, the astronomer had presented it to the International Astronomical Congress, in a great demonstration. But he was in Turkish costume, and so nobody would believe what he said.

"Grown-ups are like that . .

"Fortunately, however, for the reputation of Asteroid B-612, a Turkish dictator made a law that his subjects, under pain of death, should change to European costume. So in 1920 the astronomer gave his demonstration all over again, dressed with impressive style and elegance. And this time everybody accepted his report."

I scored the Greeks as being one area where "different" people were categorically rejected. This brought on a storm of protests and a debate. The Greeks defended their "right to be bigots", thereby only proving what was charged. Again, the charges were not controversial by the Greeks' own admission, the charges were true.

The Greek Coloring Book was called names. It was hostile or bitter or sarcastic or sour grapes. These things may have been so. Did that make the coloring book any less true? Again people called it names (labeled it, if you will) instead of dealing with what was said.

The Greek Coloring Book was the work of many. The same evasive maneuvers were used to avoid the ideas in Coloring Book as were used to avoid some of my columns. If the justification for being "hostile, bitter, sarcastic or hatchet throwers, etc . . ." must be offered before you will deal with the ideas in the Book, or these columns, for that matter, than I will attempt to offer it.

James Baldwin writes of the Negro soldier returning being told to 'wait.'"

"And who . . . is far freer in a strange land (Europe) than he has ever been at home. HOME! The very word begins to have a dispairing and diabolical ring.

"You must consider what happens to this citizen, after all he has endured, when he returns—home: search, in his shoes, for a job, for a place to live; ride, in his skin, on segregated buses; see, with his eyes, the signs saying 'White' and 'Colored', and especially the signs that say 'White Ladies' and 'Colored Women'; look into the eyes of his wife; look into the eyes of his son; listen, with his ears,

In other words, with Harper Lee in To Kill A Mockingbird, walk around in someone else's shoes if you want to feel what he feels.

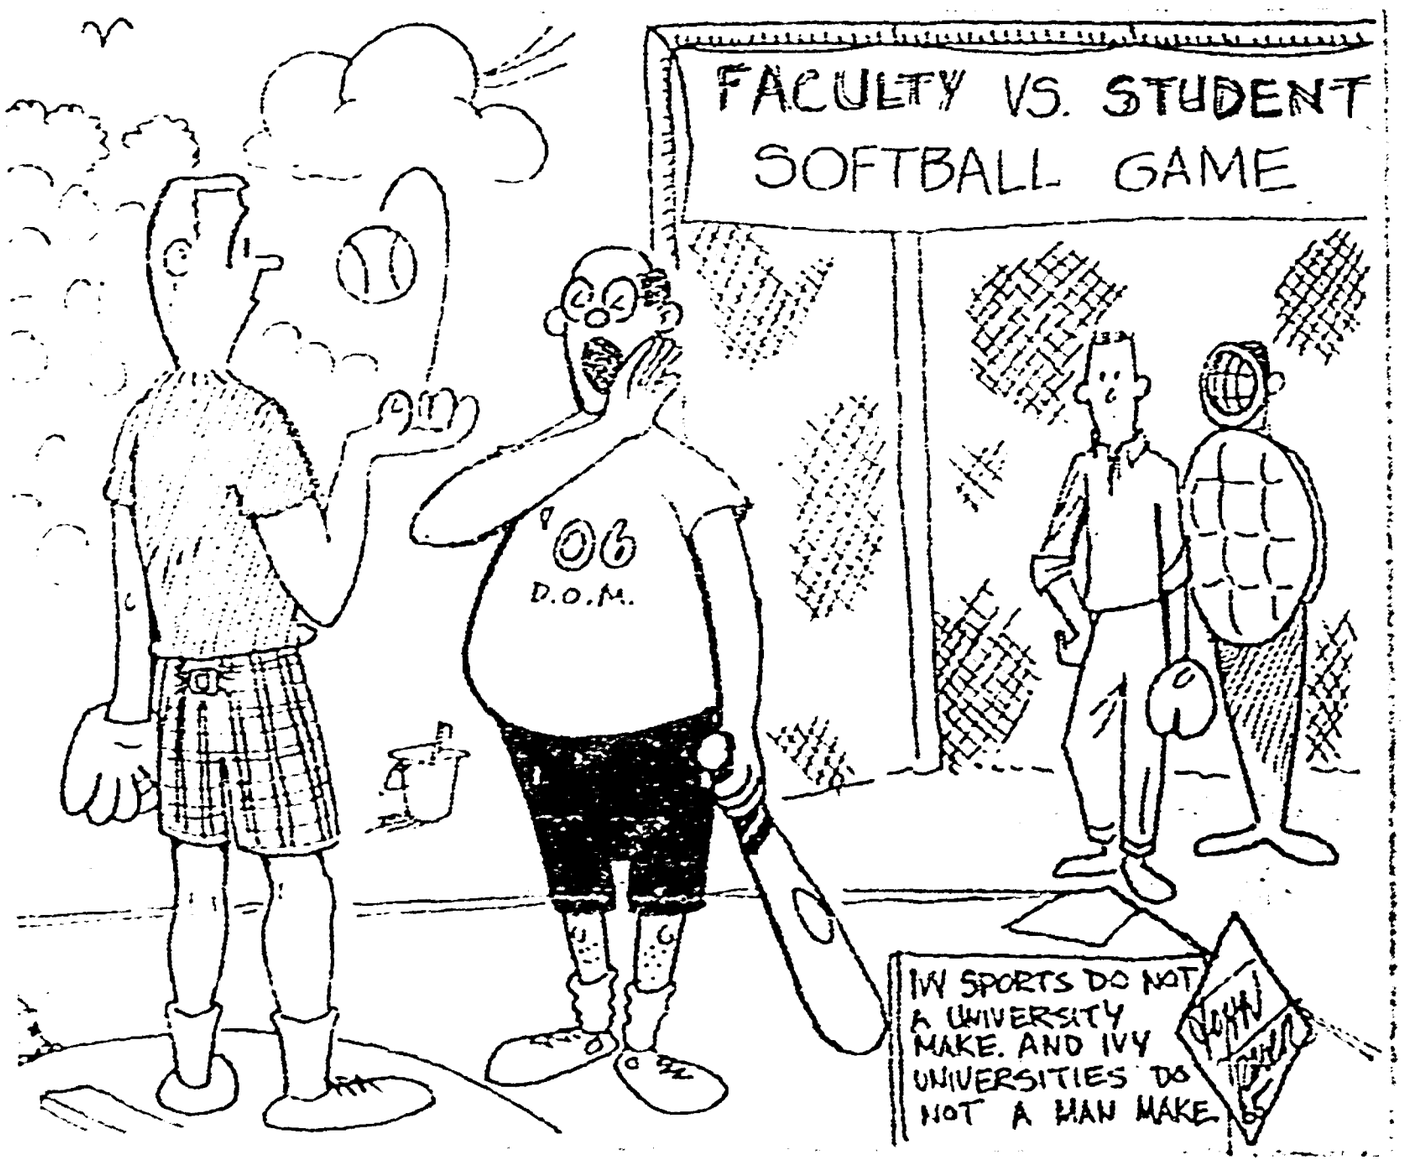
Finally, on a very immediate (mundane?) level, I have been turned away from too many apartments because of the color of my roommate's skin. I do not mean to imply that I have suffered. His friendship is worth more than any apartment.

But he suffers—everyday, in some subtle and some overt ways. And that makes me angry.

So, Lillian Smith writes "reviewers sneer (not only in the South but in the North, too), saying, 'This writer is angry; he is excited; too disturbed.' I say in reply, 'How under God's heaven could a sane, observant, sensitive human being be less than disturbed over a region that has sacrificed its children to a white Moloch?

"How could a deeply religious person feel anything but anguish at the springing up of idolatries not only in this South of ours but throughout the country and the world? How can we, with gentlemanly decorum, accept for one minute the philosophical implications of 'gradualism' and the caution of the racial 'moderates'.

"And yet, many do. Many others are so glazed over, so frozen by fear, so toughened by this third skin of ours that they obey the demagogues and run from ghosts, or chase them, as ordered.



"Otherwise, how could we have had Little Rock? Or those jeering women persecuting children in New Orleans? Or those students mobbing one lone girl at the University of Georgia? Or those deaths at Oxford, Mississippi? And worst of all, the dreadful silence of the good, the respectable, the prominent: the collapse of the poet in each of us."

That's right. I get angry. William Moore was killed. He got two bullets in his head. He tried to walk through Alabama with a sign: "Eat at Joe's, Black or White." So I'm angry. I'm hostile. I'm sarcastic.

If it also makes me controversial it says much worse things about this campus than it does about me.

And we're all in trouble. Deep trouble.

Prize Stories 1963

By SUSAN DREHER

Miss Dreher is a sophomore planning to major in journalism and English. Her home is in Allentown, Pa.

Prize Stories 1963—The O. Henry Awards. Doubleday & Co., Inc. Garden City, New York, 1963. Edited with an Introduction by Richard Poirier. $3.95. 260 pages.

Sampling American fiction for 1963, the 14 stories in the new anthology of O. Henry Awards represent the major trends of this period. Editor Richard Poirier points this out as a possible explanation for the choice of stories to be included.

Much of the work harkens rather surprisingly to the earlier periods of American Fiction. Something of a provincialism is expressed in the author's personal involvement in and often affection for, his people.

This kind of personal involvement gives these stories a particular force and vivacity not possible in a more objective view. The first prize award story, Flannery O'Connor's "Everything That Rises Must Converge," uses a stereotyped set of images for the American South, manipulating the types so that they take on a very special significance.

To the empsasis on segments of society, however, the authors have found it necessary, in some cases, to sacrifice originality of language and idea.

Beyond the dependence on societal segments, some of the stories utilize symbolic references to deepen their meaning. Thalia Selz, in her third prize winning story, "The Education of a Queen," employs a psychoanalytic approach in which the main character, almost trance-like, reveals her emotional state and its background in her childhood.

Few of the works included, however, are taken from the most widely-read magazines today. Esquire and the Atlantic Monthly are included, but the great majority of the stories were originally printed in little known publications such as the Kenyon Review, Prairie Schooner, and the Northwest Review.

Editor Richard Poirier, a member of the English department at Harvard, supplies an insightful and critical introduction to the stories: This is his third consecutive year in the editorship of the O. Henry Award anthology.

For the reader who takes pleasure in language for itself, and appreciates the shorter and necessarily much less involved form, this book offers much.

Arab-Israeli Dispute: Part I

Editor's Note

The following is the first of three articles by Max Lowenstein, Susan Lowenstein and Tovie Rome on the background of the current Arab-Israeli situation.

On May 14, 1948, the State of Israel proclaimed its independence in accordance with the United Nations' Resolution on Palestine and in fulfillment of Jewish efforts to re-establish a national homeland. Within several hours the regular armies of Egypt, Jordan, Syria, Iraq, and Lebanon invaded the newly formed state.

The action of this invasion by the member states of the Arab League was made clear at the time by the League's Secretary General, Azzam Pasha: "This will be a war of extermination and a momentous massacre which will be spoken of like the Mongolian massacres and the Crusades." (U.S.C., May 15, 1948)

The course of events before and after the Arab-Israeli war of 1948 has been a complex one involving many controversial factors. Evaluation of present policy decisions, therefore, demands some knowledge of the history of the situation.

Balfour Declaration

Violence and hostility toward Jewish communities in Europe in the latter part of the Nineteenth Century gave impetus to the traditional aspirations of Jews to return to Palestine, their historical and religious home. Events such as the organized massacre of Russian Jews and the infamous Dreyfus Case in France led to the formation, in 1897, of the Zionist Organization which defined its policy as the reestablishment of a Jewish State in the historic Jewish homeland, Palestine. By the start of the First World War approximately 80,000 Jews resided in Palestine.

In recognition of Jewish national efforts, Great Britain issued the Balfour Declaration in 1917: "His Majesty's Government view with favour the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people."

Endorsement of the establishment of a Jewish homeland in Palestine by the British was in part motivated by a desire to gain the support of European Jewry for the Allied cause, to secure a position on the Mediterranean coast as a route to British India and to stem possible domination of the MidEast by the French after the war.

McMahon Correspondence

Arab aspirations toward statehood were also recognized by the British in the 1915-16 correspondence between Sir Henry McMahon, the British High Commissioner in Egypt, and King Hussein. In return for Arab support in the struggle against Turkey, Great Britain was ". . . prepared to recognize and support the independence of the Arabs . . ." and the establishment of an Arab state. Future claims by the Arab states that the McMahon negotiations promised Palestine to the Arabs caused McMahon to explain in a letter to the London Times of July 23, 1947, ". . . that it was not intended by me in giving this pledge to King Hussein to include Palestine in the area in which Arab independence was promised. I had also every reason to believe at the time that the fact that Palestine was not included in my pledge was well understood by King Hussein." (In 1939, the British White Paper on Palestine confirmed, after careful study of the original documents, that McMahon's pledge of a unified Arab nation excluded the territory of Palestine.)

Arab support of the creation of a Jewish State in Palestine was attested to by the January 1919 agreement between Emir Feisal, Hussein's son and chief Arab delegate to the Paris Peace Conference, and Chaim Weizmann, representative of the World Zionist Organization. This Treaty of Friendship endorsed the Balfour Declaration and agreed that "The Arab State and Palestine in all their relations and undertakings shall be controlled by the most cordial good will and understanding."

Article IV of the Treaty supported large-scale immigration of Jews into Palestine with concommitant protection of the rights of Arab peasants and tenant farmers. Upon signing the Treaty, Feisal added a reservation making the pact obligations dependent upon British fulfillment of the Arab demands for unified statehood.

Only one year later Arab hopes for a united independent nation were dashed when Britain and France partitioned the former Turkish-controlled area into several units.
to political speeches, North and South! imagine yourself being told to 'wait.'

. By the mid-twenties, resentment of Western imperialist control and rivalry among local leaders characterized Arab nationalist attiudes. European frustration of Arab aims to create a unified state had served also to nullify the former friendly attitude of Arabs toward the establishment of a Jewish homeland in Palestine.

Meanwhile Jewish efforts toward statehood were recognized by the League of Nation's endorsement of the Balfour Declaration. Great Britain, as executor of the Palestine mandate, was deemed "responsible for placing the country under such political, adiministrative and economic conditions as will secure the establishment of the Jewish national home . . . and the development of self-governing institutions, and also for safeguarding the civil and religious rights of all the inhabitants of Palestine . . ." (Art. 2, Mandate for Palestine, July 24, 1922.) The League of Nations also directed Britain to "facilitate Jewish immigration" and to encourage "close settlement by Jews on the land."

Parking Opposed

Residents of the Manley Fieldhouse area are putting up unexpected opposition to the University's plan of utilizing a lot opposite the Fieldhouse for overflow parking.

A spokesman for the group said that, "Our main concern is for our children and our property."

George B. Peluso, attorney for the developers of Empire State Park, complained that they would be sandwiched in between two commercial areas, the University's Ainsley Drive warehouse and and the proposed parking lot.

"If parking is need put it on other pieces of land the University owns," he said.

William B. Johnson, attorney for the University, stated that the area would not be needed more than 10 or 15 times a year and would be screened with shrubs. The area would accommodate just about 300 cars.

About 35 residents were present to oppose the plan and 250 names were presented on the petition. Although the University is not seeking a zone change, merely a special permit, it was asserted that the effect would be to downgrade the area from Residential A-1 to Residential.

DUD Day is coming Monday.

Where the Car Was

THE ARROW points to the spot in Sadler lot where police Tuesday found a '59 Chevrolet belonging to Miss AGNES PENSABENE, who was murdered early Tuesday. In background is Bray Hall, on the College of Forestry campus.

Student Witnesses Parking of Chevy

By SANDY MYERS

A Sadler Hall resident told Syracuse police Wednesday he followed the Chevrolet belonging to the murdered Miss Agnes F. Pensabene into the Sadler parking lot early Tuesday morning.

The student told police there was one person in the car. While the student went into the dorm, the other person remained in the car.

Also questioned by police were Alvin Robinson and Martin Huff, whose cars were parked next to the Chevy. Robinson was driving a rented car.

Huff returned at 8 p.m. Monday. Robinson, who came into the lot at 2 a.m. Tuesday, told police the Chevrolet was not there at the time.

In other developments Wednesday, police were analysing blood stains on a man's white pullover sweater found in the apartment of Ernest Wells, 15 Albert Terrace, who was booked Tuesday night on a parole violation.

The booking was for drinking in a cafe.

Police said Wells admitted he was with Miss Pensabene Monday night, but insisted he left her in her car in front of his apartment at about 2 a.m. Tuesday.

He admitted having an argument with Miss Pensabene.

When police found the car in in the Sadler lot, there were blood stains both inside and out. Inside was a lug wrench, which police believe was the murder weapon.

Paul Libby, a bartender at Sue's Restaurant, 1121 S. Salina St., identified Wells as the man who was with Miss Pensabene early Tuesday, police reported.

Dets. John O'Malley and Harold Seib picked up Wells at the auto repair shop where he is employed.

Police said he had several scratches on his face and hands. Det. Samuel Nappi said police are checking leads and working on further investigation and analysis.

Nappi emphasized that Wells is being held on a parole violation, not in conjunction with the murder.

Wells was questioned for nearly four hours after police booked him at 8:25 p.m. Tuesday.

On the Hill, the murder has had several ramifications.

The Spring Weekend lantern ceremony, pageant and crowning of the queen were originally scheduled for 8 p.m. Friday at the Thornden Park Amphitheater, near where Miss Pensabene's body was found.

The events will be held at 7:30 p.m. Friday in front of the main library.

IFC Toughens Policy

city police to the Security Police office on campus. The president and pledge master of the fraternity were called to settle the incident.

"The city police have made it clear they will not live with a continuation of this kind of problem," Dean Clifford said. "The dean of men's office is both in agreement with and supports this position."

"Because this incident was only one of a series in the last two or two weeks, we contacted IFC president George (Skip) Stanger (Sigma Chi Psi) to call a special IFC meeting to determine if the council is willing to undertake the resolution of this problem," Clifford continued.

This action was taken "as an expression of the dean of men's office's confidence in IFC and a continuation of our policy of delegating responsibility for self-management through the IFC and its member fraternities," Clifford said.

Stanger called the emergency meeting at 8 p.m. Wednesday night at Delta Upsilon to "consider the rash of unfavorable hazing incidents.

"The legislation passed is the first step in making the pledge period assume a more mature and realistic atmosphere," Stanger commented after the meeting.

Under the legislation, the actual extent of punishment is left up to the judicial board under the provision of its manual of procedure.

The case involving the DPW truck has already been referred to the board by the dean of men's office under a provision for cases of "conduct unbecoming a fraternity," Clifford explained.

No charges were placed by city police against the 11 pledges involved. Clifford praised the city police in the case.

"If this had been any other kind of situation, this effective and prompt action certainly would have been appreciated," he said.

The IFC is expected to take further action on the hazing question at its next regular meeting, 8 p.m. Wednesday at Phi Kappa Psi.

"If he can shake the injury jinx and come through for us we could win three of four more ball games than we could without him. He is the key to a good season," Ben Schwartzwalder said in reference to Bill Schoonover as spring practice opened three weeks ago.

Last week personal problems forced Schoonover to withdraw from the university, casting a shadow of doubt and speculation about Orange football success in the fall, and about Schoonover's possible return.

Ben said yesterday that he had talked to Bill by phone. "I tried to point out to him the importance of a college education and remaining in school. He said that he was not ready to come back." Schwartzwalder, although hopeful of Schoonover's return to school and his backfield, has received no indication from Bill about his readmission in the summer or fall.

SCHOONOVER

Eligibility wise, Bill would meet the NCAA requirements if he did not enroll in another school. He has a year of football eligibility remaining at Syracuse.

Dean of Men Earle W. Clifford said that Bill met with him last week before he left and indicated that he would definitely return to school in the fall. "He has too many personal problems to lick at the present time to be able to also meet his academic responsibilities." Clifford said. "I think he made a wise decision and can accomplish both objectives.

"Bill wanted to make sure that he would be able to return in the fall. I explained to him what obligations would have to be met." Clifford said.

"No one has ever left us like this on their own accord." said Schwartzwalder. "Bill's situation is unprecedented."

Ben pointed out that if his halfback does return, his attitude will be a significant part of the picture as far as football is concerned. "We'd be happy to have him back." he said. "We're hopeful."

Mike Koski, seemingly Schoonover's successor, is out for the rest of spring drills, hobbling around on crutches. "We only hope that he will be healthy in the fall." the grid coach said, which amounts to a lot of hoping at left halfback. Billy Hunter will be at that position in the Alumni game.

Schoonover, the number 44 in the Syracuse backfield the past season, has continually been plagued by injuries. Last year he missed the last six games. Yet he carried 39 times for 195 yards and a 5.0 average.

Bill, who is from Stroudsburd, Pa., missed three games in 1961 when he was a member of the broken hand brigade. As Ernie Davis' successor in '61, he gained 137 yards for a 5.5 yard-per-carry average.

A healthy Schoonover in the number 44 jersey come fall, who wants to play football, would make a tremendous difference in Hill football fortunes.

Remember Notre Dame.

SPRING SNOWOUTS

Yesterday's snow, rain, slush, hail and muck forced the cancellation of the Syracuse-RPI baseball game at Low Carr Field. The game will not be rescheduled.

The Cornell tennis match was postponed until May 7.

5 Of The 'Sizable 7' Meet With Varsity 11

By JUDY ADAMS

They're bringing 'em back alive!

Yes sir, alive and snarling, a little greyer than when they left, and maybe a bit bigger.

Saturday is old timers day at Archbold, where the ghosts of football past will play the ghosts of football present and future.

For the later-day phantoms, Saturday is merely another step in a shapening-up process that began a month ago.

But for the oldsters . . . well, time will tell.

For some it already has, and the not-too-trim waistlines may need some trimming down. But for the majority, this week's workouts will merely be a brushing up on the old plays.

For the fans, Saturday's game may be a slight review of the old crow called the Sizable Seven. Five of the illustrious line will take the grid in the first test for Ben's Boys of 1961.

Ton Line

The two fill-ins, give the alumni line a poundage as powerful as any the varsity squad is likely to meet next year. In fact if they ever pull an eight-man line, say bring up little 5-10, 185-lb. Dick Easterly, the varsity will be running against a mountain that weighs in at more than 2,000 lbs.

This tank force averages 215 pounds, 11 ounces per machine.

The "best end I ever coached," according to Schwartzwalder, Fred Mautine, will take up his old position at right end. It should be a bit familiar spot for the 230-pound Chief who held it during the 1959 and 1960 seasons for the Hill, and received some All-American honors in the process.

Brown of the Browns

Falling in beside him at outside tackle will be John Brown at 250 pounds. John, now with the Browns, was the No. 1 alternate in the '59 squad.

Another Sizable Sevener, 250-pound Bob Yates, will be at inside tackle. Still another, Tom Gilberg, the largest man on the squad at 265, will hold the right guard slot.

The fourth 225-pound Al Bemiller will be back at center. The fifth, Bruce Tarbox who tips the scales at 240, has exchanged his old right guard spot for the left one.

And at the left end, young Walt Sweeney will be making his debut as an oldster.

Dick Easterly, now working for the Hamilton Tiger Cats, will use his newly acquired knowledge at quarterback.

Co-coach Al Gerlick, promises that Dick will be doing a "lot of passing."

DICK EASTERLY

"We're not going to run because we're not deep in offensive backs. But if they can hold out, with Dick passing on rollouts, we'll be okay."

The "not-too deep" backfield headlines John Mackey and Don King at the halves with Gary Fallon at full. They'll be mixed and matched in a variety of slot formations.

That Ol' Gang

There are a few others of the old '59 gang that are certain to see action on the defensive side.

Defensive end John Howell, tackles Leon Cholakis and Gerlick himself, to name a few.

To name a few more, there's co-coach John Seketa; Al Benecick; New York Giant's Dick Lasse, a '58 grad; Dave Meggysey; Brian Howard; Gene Stancin; Pete Brokaw; Tom Stephens, the left-half between Brown and Davisenas; and Jim Ridlon, formerly of the 49'er's but a Dallas Cowboy as yesterday.

"If the weather is clear," says Gerlick," the game will be wide open."

But casting an eye at yesterday's weather, he adds "But if it's this bad, it'll be a low score."

JOHN BROWN

Big John Returns

BIG JOHN BROWN will be a giant among giants in Saturday's Varsity-Alumni game. Brown, whose weight estimates fluxuate between 240 and 260, will be at outside tackle.

He will be between the two All-Americans on the Alum offensive line in Bob Yates and Fred Mautino, Bob "The Toe" Yates stands 6-2, 250-pounds and plays for the American Football League Boston Patriots. Mautino is 6-3, 230-pounds.

Brown received All-American honorable mention as a Hill sophomore in 1959.

The 6-3 tackle signed a contract with the Cleveland Browns after graduating in 1962. Injuries kept him on the sidelines most of last season. His knee is holding all right this spring indicating that he should be able to put in a full season.

Nathan Wins JSL Post

By ANDY PORTE
Junior Editor

Harvey Nathan was elected speaker pro tempore of Joint Student Legislature last night in a meeting delayed 45 minutes for lack of a quorum.

Nathan defeated Robert Cohen, 52-31, after Louise Bal and Townsend Southard declined nominations for the position. The four were nominated at the last legislature meeting.

Nathan, a junior majoring in history, succeeds Robert Becker in the legislature post. A member of Tau Delta Phi fraternity, he is 20 years old and has a 1.85 average. This year he was legislative commissioner of JSL.

The meeting, scheduled to begin at 7 p.m., was finally called to order at 7:15. A preliminary count by Speaker Jay Litwin showed the group was three short of the number needed for a quorum.

After a short delay, the roll was called and a quorum was present.

Retiring JSG President Theodore (Teddy) Bayer, delivering the traditional farewell address, said, "Looking around this room shows why student government has not achieved even one-hundredth of its potential." There were 87 persons present, with over 200 eligible at the beginning of the year.

Bayer challenged the new student government officers to adequately disperse information and create an understanding among the students of why student government, as well as other campus groups, exists.

He also urged that opinion be gathered from the students as to what they want student government and the university to accomplish.

He requoted a statement from the Sagamore conference of last weekend, saying the university is founded on "shared loyalties, responsibilities and beliefs."

NEW SPEAKER PRO TEM, HARVEY NATHAN (center), is congratulated by JAY LITWIN (left), newly elected JSL Speaker, and ROBERT BECKER (right), outgoing Speaker Pro Tem.

"DUD" Is Coming

"DUD" is coming to the Hill.

Discuss Union Day arrives full force Monday, giving SU students a chance to voice their opinions on a more complete University Union.

Student Union co-chairman Jim Palcic has announced that "DUD" will feature fliers and questionnaires to be distributed among students.

The purpose of the discussion day is to determine the extent of student interest in a fund-raising drive for a new University Union building.

"The University Union is here to help the students and the University as a whole," Palcic said.

"The Sagamore Conference stressed the need for Hill students to become more interested in the University as a whole, rather than just its activities," Palcic noted.

Questionnaires and fliers will be available at university dining halls, Commons, sorority and fraternity houses.

Members of the Student Union committee will be available all day Monday to answer students' questions on Student Union plans.

Spring Weekend: Alumni Are Born

Spring at Syracuse University officially makes its debut at 7:30 tonight with the traditional Lantern Ceremony on the Library steps.

Although some of the T in tradition has been lost because of a last minute switch of the Ceremony from mugging-ridden Thornden Park to the Library, the opening phase of "The Rites of Spring" promises to bring tears and laughter from naive freshmen and graduating seniors.

Sentimental highlight of the ceremony is the handing down of the lanterns from the senior women to juniors. Following this sentimentality is the crowning of the weekend's queen.

As the evening progresses, lightness begins to prevail with the presentation of this year's skit, which will review the battle of the sexes as the Greek gods and goddesses saw it.

One of the happiest and saddest weekends of the year, Spring Weekend continues Saturday morning in Sims Hall with that old-fashioned Strawberry breakfast. Following the meal comes the most significant part of the weekend, moving up day ceremonies, where those who have bravely battled through four anums at Syracuse are officially recognized as alumni.

And it's also that long awaited time when the simpleton of the campus—the frosh—burns his beanie and takes an equal place among the other members of the student body.

The morning moves along rapidly with the float contest following Moving Up. With the afternoon shadows comes the last significant phase of the weekend, the varsity-alumni football game in Archbold Stadium.

The sadness has already parted from the seniors (pardon, alumni) and they are no longer rooting for their alma mater, as they moved to the West side of the stadium to take their earned place among the alumni.

DUD

A week ago today 39 students and administrators boarded a bus in front of the Library and started a four-hour trek to Sagamore Lodge for the annual Activities Conference.

Two days later this group returned to the campus with resolutions and ideas for promoting a university union, spreading academics and stimulating the arts at Syracuse University.

Monday, the first test of the value of that conference begins. An idea will be put on trial and the success or failure of this idea could mean the success or failure of all resolutions formulated at Sagamore.

At stake is a student's dream—a university union. Most students confess that presently they have little knowledge of a union or little interest in securing one.

But a union is not on trial here—the students are, because DUD has been created to give the student body a chance to promote a student ideal. Yes, you heard right—DUD (Discuss Union Day). During this first test of Sagamore, students throughout the campus will be urged to take part in discussions about a university union to create campus support.

The student's task in this test is easy. Literature will be spread all over campus. All the student has to do is to weigh the good points and bad points of a union at meals, in the dorm and at house meetings. A better knowledge of the what's and how's of a union may fulfill a dream.

Poems By Yesse

By Stephanie Brill

Dion (Craig) Yesse never had any formal training in poetry writing but both "The New Yorker" and "Saturday Evening Post" published his poems while he was still in high school.

"I showed several poems to my high school English teacher," explained the freckled red-haired writer, "and she suggested I send them to the magazines."

While Yesse was a sophomore, in 1958-1959 "The Saturday Evening Post" published "Memories."

"Everybody and his uncle got 'Saturday Evening Post'," he laughed, "and the day after it appeared on the news stands all my friends kidded me about it. They were surprised because they didn't know I wrote poetry."

"My parents were very proud," he commented.

Later, in his senior year, "The New Yorker" offered to pay him for "And There Comes A Time."

"I didn't care about the money," he added, grinning, "I told them that if they wanted to use it, to go right ahead."

"The New Yorker" published Yesse's poem in the fall of 1960.

An athlete also, the soft-spoken poet likes football, baseball, boating and got his high school letter in soccer. A member of the freshman ski team last year, Yesse has been skiing since he was "4 or 5."

"Everybody in my family skis," he added enthusiastically.

"When we lived in Washington we used to go up to Mount Ranier, Saint Helen, Mount Hood and Mamouth to ski."

Longview, Wash., was one of nine different homes for Yesse. Because his father, a chemical engineer, who is now assistant general manager at General Electric has been stationed in Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York and elsewhere.

"I've been in almost every state in the Union and I've got pen pals all over the country," he laughed.

After moving to Fayetteville a few years ago Yesse attended Fayetteville-Manlius High School and saw several of his poems published in the school magazine. As a senior he was news editor of the school's monthly newspaper.

Nicknamed "Craig," he signs all his creative work "Dioncraig."

"I always dreamed of being a writer as a child," he reminisced, "and if anything of mine is published, that will be my signature."

"For years, whenever anything especially funny or momentous happened I've written it down. Now I've got three notebooks, about 'that' thick," he said, demonstrating with a two-inch space between his fingers, "and they're filled with incidents that would be a real reservoir of ideas for any stories I'd want to write."

Yesse has read poetry extensively on his own, including Shakespeare, Mathew Arnold, Keats, Byron and all the Romantics. After his high school English teacher recommended a list of 100 books for him to read before entering college, he answered the challenge by finishing them in one summer.

Though not sure of what his career will be the liberal arts sophomore thinks he will major in English.

"I'm seriously considering leaving school for a year to work and to travel in Europe," he reflected.

Although he felt this was doubtful, Yesse is optimistic about the job he applied for at General Electric this summer.

"I also became interested in public relations and advertising," he added, "when I did that type of work at Barlow-Johnson Inc. two summers ago."

Pursuing his literary career further the athlete and ex-news editor ended the interview by going to the Hellbox to sign up for next year's DO staff.

And There Comes A Time...

And there comes, in time.
A hiatus between the Child and the Adult.
The soul seems to stretch,
Out, beyond itself, toward some infinity;
But the heart is filled
With uncertainty, fear, pain, despair.
Tremulously, the weaving of the chrysalis begins.

But the spirit, flagging,
Attempts to cloak itself in pretence;
Desperately holding off the blows,
The blunderings, the pointed harshness of the world,
Masking itself in cliches;
But alone, falling again, then climbing,
Weeping, aching, seeking only identity, seclusion, or refuge.

There comes a hardness, a core of ice
Freezing the spirit,
Numbing the sences,
Paling the cheek.....dulling
the eye;
Until, a sudden flood of warmth or pain
Causes tears to gush forth;
And the bitterness to subside and die away, in emptiness.

Yet, slowly, the links of wisdom build
The bridge and, gently, close the gap,
Leaving strength, patience,
tolerance, pity, love,
In its wake.
A braver heart,
A truer soul;
a Man.

Memories

I have a passion for jewels.
Long have I hoarded them,
greedily, warily,
Choosing this of softened texture,
That of mightiest fire, and Locking them eternally in a hallowed crevice, deep.

Sometimes, when the old, old pain
With its claws of clutching eagerness
Creeps upon me,
I reach for a handful of these stones,
Snatched from my days of happiness,
And soft peace enters my soul, as I let them trickle through my fingers,
Musing on the wistful sparkle of them.

The Coming of the Hun

There's a steadfast black shadow hangs over the wall;
The pure, drooping rose
trembles, ready to fall.
Joy lies there, dying; air's frozen with fright;

'Freud'

By Robert E. Fern

Although John Huston's FREUD fails as cinematic art it nevertheless, provides interesting and absorbing entertainment.

The motion picture attempts three difficult tasks: to account for the birth of psychoanalysis; to provide a test run psychoanalysis and portray the great man, who as much as a writer as a scientist, turns language into a set of vivid metaphors.

The accomplishment of these tasks pictorially is practically impossible. Historical foots, psychological theories and the necessities of drama keep bumping into each other.

The realm of the intellect, internal thinking, is the hardest to put into visual images. The Freudian theories are made up of metaphors, yhich are ambiguous as words, and to adopt these into visual images is absurd. (For instance' the motion picture shows the ID as a "hell-like cave" that Freud descends and meets his mother.)

Some sequences of the movie present melodramatic excitement at its height. The scenes concerning the young pretty patient, competently played by Susannah York, on whom Freud bases his theory of infantile sexuality, becomes a powerful and taut intellectual thriller.

Aided by good angle shots, surrealistic photography and music it provides exciting story. But that is all it is. The motion picture does not communicate the complex ideas of Freud with profundity or anything better than a laymanic approach.

Montgomery Clift attempts an extremely difficult task in portraying the enlightened Viennese doctor. However, despite beard and fancy dress, Clift is a boyish yankee who would have been mare at ease, in the role of the patient.

Susan Kohner as Frau Freud and Larry Parks as Freud's spiritual father and colleague are both convincing in their portrayals.

Montgomery Clift does have a singular ability in making his eyes light up. Thinking does not lend itself to visual representation and it would have been excessive for Huston to draw a light bulb over Clift's head.

Clift gets a generalized cue then his eyes light up. (Freud's mother calls her son, Siggy, tells him: "Memory plays queer tricks."—his eyes light up). Thus, through sparkling eyes, we see Freud's conception of infantile sexuality, the theory of repression and the theory of dreams.

The only thing madder, wilder and stranger for Huston and Clift to have done would have been EINSTEIN. Clift sits down and writes E-Mq squared, he crosses it out and writes E-Mc squared as his eyes light up.

Poetry...

There's an evil black breeze blowing by here tonight.

I feel it advancing from horizons afar;
Through waste lands it's coming, lands stricken with war.
It's swirling and dipping, filled with furies of spite.
Ah, pity poor souls when the breeze comes tonight.

From low rumbles it's risen to death shrieks from Hell;
(Look, flames spring up on the road past the hill!)
Haunting eyes swirl around me...men's feverish delight,
Frail girls, wide eyes, peering for the evil tonight.

The green skies grow yellow and sicken to lead;
Cold steel is lashing mid forms of the dead,
And white bodies are tarnished in the evil half light
For the breeze black and deadly blows by here tonight.

Towards Avalon

On a cold, gray morn, one man alone
Crept from his sanctum on a lofty hill.
He gazed down at piles of shatter stone,
Stared at a scene that was dead and still.

Bodies were piled heap on
Where cities stood short days ago;
The whole world lay as if asleep—
The sleep that only corpses know.
No life, no sound, no movement there;
The refugee gazed sad and long.
No fish in the seas, no birds in the air,
No word, no breath, no song.

He turned his head away and sighed
At what the warring world had done—
"Since everybody else has died,
My side must have won."

FIRST RUN THEATERS

RIVIERA — See Montgomery Clift's eyes light up as he learns he loves his mother, hates his father because he stands in the way, has subconscious repressions and was sexually active at four. See your eyes light up when you watch Barb . . . (oops, Freudian slip) Susannah York on the couch. Don't bring your mother! Sparkling eyes at 6:45 and 9:35 p.m.

SHOPPINGTOWN — Marlon Brando is still grunting, scratching and loving his way through the South Sea Islands. "Mutiny On the Bounty" has a cast of thousands but only five can be understood. See the dirty captain yell at pure sweet Marlon who mumbles his way through in an English accent. The English Stanley Kowalski at 8 p.m.

PARAMOUNT — "Nine Hours to Rama" is a picture with white men against Indians but this does not take place in the west. Thus, it is an eastern western. But here the Indians are the good guys. The blood comes out very realistically in technicolor as Horst Bucholz (a young German-Indian with an inferiority complex) and Jose Ferrer (who has big legs in this picture) wade through blood. Mahatma at 6:43 and 9:57. "Thirty Years of Fun," the story of a dean of men, at 8:28 p.m.

LOEWS — "Love is a Ball" (see Freud) is the story of a girl who is beautiful, intelligent and worth $40 million. It was not filmed at Syracuse University. Glenn Ford goes through another situation comedy which doesn't have funny situations. "Murder On the Campus" was filmed at Syracuse University. Ball at 6:30 and 9:35. Thornden Park at 5:30 and 8:30.

KEITHS — Did you ever have Triffids after you? I don't know what a Triffid is but I think I might have seen one in the main library. The blood and horror is, of course, in technicolor. If you are a sweet little girl then stay away from the Triffids. "Day of the Triffids" at 9:50 p.m. "Confess Dr. Cordas," inspired by a "Sword" expose at 8:15.

ECKEL — The happiest land of them all for Walt Disney is Moneyland, so he came out with another picture. This one is for pure little blonde girls. Little blonde girls ride white stallions and Robert Taylor comes to their rescue. But they don't want to be rescued because the stallions are more appealing than Robert Taylor. Little girls at 7:04 and 9:33 p.m.

OTHER FILMS OF INTEREST

HOLLYWOOD—Natalie Wood, who is a little girl and would feel more comfortable working with Walt Disney, plays big Gypsy Rose Lee, who doesn't even know he exists. Rosalind Russell is not Ethel Merman and somebody should tell her that so she doesn't take any more of these parts. Stripping at 8:20. The World by Night, filmed at the Watertower as a pledge prank at 7.

WESTCOTT — See Don Murray escape over the East Berlin Wall to get to Christine Kaufmann. However, once he got there he was dissatisfied and he sneaked back again. Christine was so unhappy she quit acting and joined a convent. The picture, thus, has a happy ending. Sneakers at 7:30. "The Courtship of Eddie's Father," inspired by Freud, at 9 p.m.

KALLET-GENESEE — See a little boy show up Glenn Ford as an actor. See Shirley Jones as the girl next store (she was also the girl next store in Elmer Gantry but that was a bad neighborhood). But if you want good entertainment don't see The Courtship of Eddie's Father at 6:30. Also Escape From East Berlin at 8:30.

Theater Radio-TV

REGENT — Ernest Bacon's "Tree on the Plains" tonight at 8:30. Saturday night the same time.

CONCERT — Veronica Sage will feature Haydn and Shubert in her recital Sunday at 5 p.m. Crouse College.

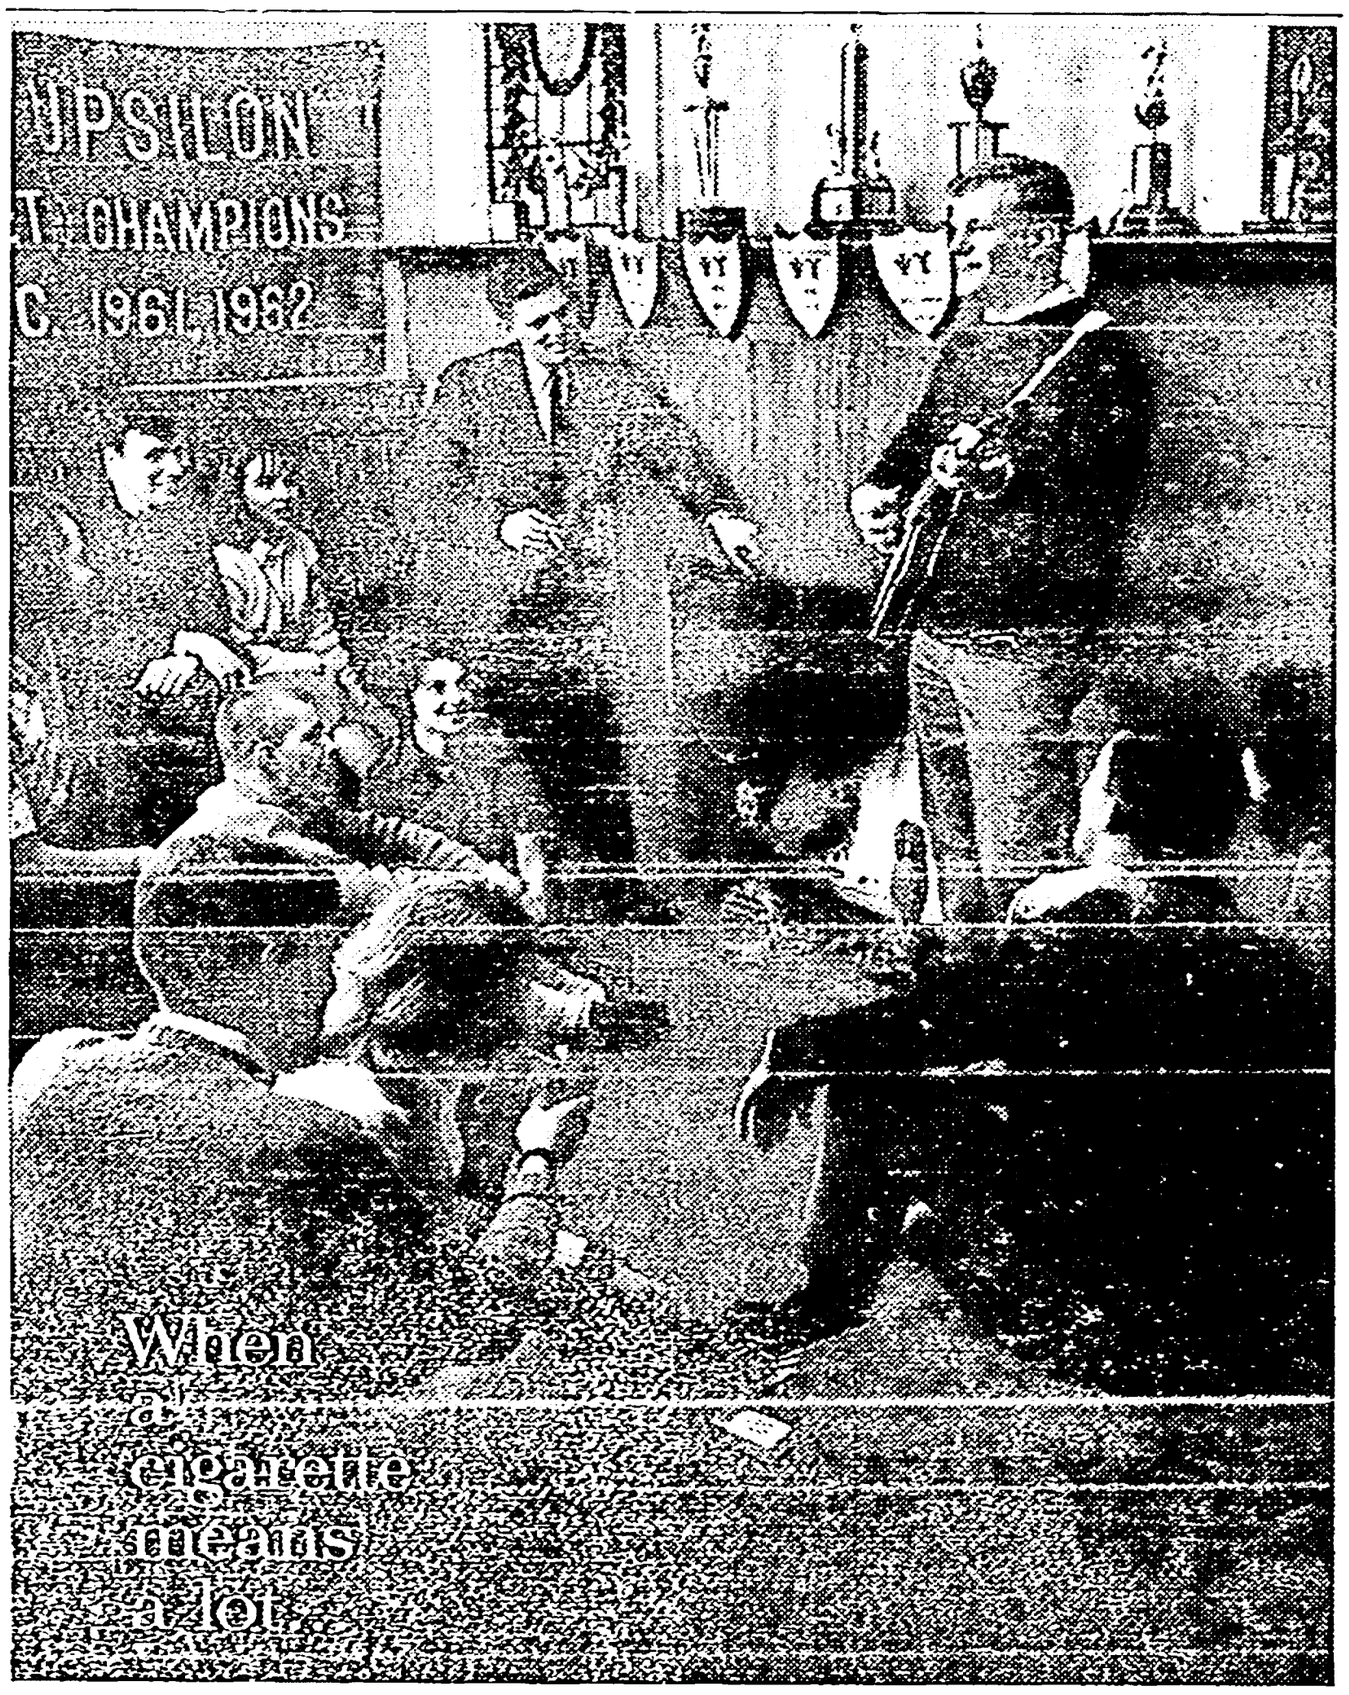
COULD THIS BE WHY THE FOUR FRESHMEN CAN'T FINISH SCHOOL?

Yes. But there's nothing wrong with their addition. Four master vocalists, plus four swinging instrumentalists, plus four on stage-off the cuff comedians total Four Freshmen. Honest. And this fantastic triple threat versatility is why college audiences refuse to let the Freshmen finish school.

In "The Four Freshmen in Person • Volume 2" on Capitol, you'll hear them at their versatile best, in a recording made during an unforgettable performance at Long Beach City College. The packed house called it great, and so will you.



Look for "The Four Freshmen in Person • Volume 2" on Capitol, and look for the Four Freshmen in concert on your campus.

Professors Attend Education Seminar

The School of Education and Maxwell School of Citizenship will be joint hosts next week to nearly 100 education professors and administrators from throughout the country at a seminar on economics and politics of public education.

The educators will visit under auspices of the University Council for Education Administration. The four-day conference opens Sunday at the Hotel Syracuse Country house.

Several SU faculty members will participate in panel discussions along with off-campus education authorities. The meeting is a report on a three-year Hill study of educational finances.

A group of Central New York public school administrators has been invited as special seminar guests.

Among outside educators attending the conference is James A. Perkins, Carnegie Corporation vice president and Cornell University president-elect. He will discuss "The Public Interest in Education" at a session Tuesday.

Bayer added, "If the students do not choose to improve the university, it is no one's fault but their own."

Incoming President James Morris accepted Bayer's challenge, but added that he felt the communications problem could never be solved.

"We must support all activities on the campus," he said, "including social, academic and cultural events."

He also threw a challenge to the students, saying "If you want something, come to us and tell us about it." He said he will hold open meetings next year, where anyone may air gripes.

He also said he planned to address the legislature monthly next year, so that the legislature can be kept up to date on the executive branch.

California Architect to Speak

Craig Ellwood, a Los Angeles architect, will speak today at the annual awards banquet of the School of Architecture.

He will give an analytical critique of stylistic trends and nonstructural forms currently prevalent in architecture.

Ellwood will also conduct an interior design project with fourth year architecture students here.

HOW TO SEE EUROPE FOR ONLY $300 A DAY: NO. 2

Last week we discussed England, the first stop on the tour of Europe that every American college student is going to make this summer. Today we will take up your next stop—France, or the Pearl of the Pacific, as it is generally called.

To get from England to France, one greases one's body and swims the English Channel. Similarly, to get from France to Spain, one greases one's body and slides down the Pyrenees. And, of course, to get from France to Switzerland, one greases one's body and wriggles through the Simplon Tunnel. Thus, as you can see, the most important single item to take to Europe is a valise full of grease.

No, I am wrong. The most important thing to take to Europe is a valise full of Marlboro Cigarettes—or at least as many as the customs regulations will allow. And if by chance you should run out of Marlboros in Europe, do not despair. That familiar red and white Marlboro package is as omnipresent in Europe as it is in all fifty of the United States. And it is the same superb cigarette you find at home—the same pure white filter, the same zestful, mellow blend of tobaccos preceding the filter. This gem of the tobacconist's art, this prodigy of cigarette engineering, was achieved by Marlboro's well-known research team—Fred Softpack and Walter Fliptop—and I, for one, am grateful.

He introduced shortness to France

But I digress. We were speaking of France—or the Serpent of the Nile, as it is popularly termed.

Let us first briefly sum up the history of France. The nation was discovered in 1066 by Madame Guillotine. There followed a series of costly wars with Schleswig-Holstein, the Cleveland Indians, and Jean Jacques Rousseau. Stability finally came to this troubled land with the coronation of Marshal Foch, who married Lorraine Alsace and had three children: Flopsy, Mopsy, and Charlemagne. This later became known as the Petit Trianon.

Marshal Foch—or the Boy Orator of the Platte, as he was affectionately called—was succeeded by Napoleon, who introduced shortness to France. Until Napoleon the French were the tallest nation in Europe. After Napoleon most Frenchmen were able to walk comfortably under card tables. This later became known as the Hunchback of Notre Dame.

Napoleon, after his defeat by Credit Mobilier, was exiled to Elba, where he made the famous statement, "Able was I ere I saw Elba." This sentence reads the same whether you spell it forward or backward. You can also spell Marlboro backward—Oroblram. Do not, however, try to smoke Marlboro backward because that undoes all the pleasure of the finest cigarette made.

After Napoleon's death the French people fell into a great fit of melancholy, known as the Louisiana Purchase. For over a century everyone sat around moping and refusing his food. This torpor was not lifted until Eiffel built his famous tower, which made everybody giggle so hard that today France is the gayest country in Europe.

Each night the colorful natives gather at sidewalk cafes and shout "Oo-la-la!" as Maurice Chevalier promenades down the Champs Elysees swinging his malacca cane. Then, tired but happy, everyone goes to the Louvre for bowls of onion soup.

The principal industry of France is cashing travellers checks.

Well sir, I guess that's all you need to know about France. Next week we will visit the Land of the Midnight Sun—Spain.

Arab-Israeli Dispute: Part II

Editor's Note

The following is the second of three articles by Max Loewenstein, Susan Loewenstein and Tovie Rome on the background of the current Arab-Israeli situation.

Zionists welcomed the Mandate, expecting fulfillment of its objectives in the near future. In line with the terms of the Mandate, Jewish immigration continued, and by 1939 the Jewish population of Palestine numbered some 450,000. Land occupied by the Jews was purchased legitimately from the former Arab owners.

A doubling of the non-Jewish population in Palestine between 1919 and 1939 shows that land acquisition by Jews was not forcing the Arabs out of Palestine. However, Arab hostility toward the Jews was expressed by sporadic attacks on Jewish communities, developing into full scale riots by 1936.

Appeasement

Vacillation and appeasement of Arab elements hostile to Jewish settlement marked the British methods of maintaining imperial control over the area. With an eye toward the oil riches of neighboring Arab lands, British praticee in Palestine had ofttimes diverged from the aims made explicit by the League of Nations. A complete policy reversal occurred in 1939, when Britain issued a White Paper on Palestine which substantially negated the provisions of the Mandate:

"His Majesty's Government . . . now declare unequivocally that it is not part of their policy that Palestine should become a Jewish State." (British Policy on Palestine, May 17, 1939) Britain announced a new policy of permitting "further expansion of the Jewish National Home only if the Arabs are prepared to acquiesce in it." To enforce this decision, an entry quota severely restricting the immigration of Jews into Palestine was established. After five years, no further Jewish immigration was to be permitted without Arab approval. Great Britain also declared herself "determined to check illegal immigration."

Limitations on the transfer of land to Palestinian Jews set forth in the White Paper were made even more stringent in the Land Registry Acts of 1940 which effectively forbade Jewish land purchases in 95 per cent of Palestine.

These policies prevailed throughout World War II when millions of Jews sought to escape Nazi terror and were not allowed permanent refuge in most parts of the world.

Survivors

With the termination of the war, many Jewish survivors of the Nazi atrocities turned to Palestine as their only hope for the future. Despite urgent appeals from various international sources (e.g., the Anglo-American Committee), Britain was unrelenting in her immigration policy. Jewish antagonism toward Britain's stand increased; harassment of the British by Jewish underground forces was met with military countermeasures, the imprisonment of Jewish leaders, and the interception of boats "smuggling" refugees into the country. "Illegal" immigrants were deported.

Meanwhile, Arab attacks upon the Jewish population of Palestine continued. Anti-Zionist efforts provided a common rallying point for the internally strife-ridden Arab factions. The League of Arab States, formed March 22, 1945, considered Palestine to be a legally independent Arab country. The Arab Higher Committee in Palestine announced that an Arab army would drive the Jews "into the sea" as soon as the British Mandate was terminated.

U.N. Partition

Unable to effect a workable solution to the increasingly unmanageable situation, Britain submitted the Palestine problem to the United Nations in August 1947. By a 33-13 vote, the U.N. General Assembly on November 29, 1947 decreed that Palestine be divided into two politically independent states.

The immediate Arab reaction was rejection of the decision and avowal to nullify it by armed force.

The only dissenter was Transjordan's King Abdullah who at first, December 8, 1947, favored accepting the U.N. decision. The Jews accepted the decision with celebration.

The U.N. made no effort to enforce its decision. Immediately Arab assaults on Jewish persons and property occurred throughout the country. As these attacks continued and were intensified the "official" Jewish underground army, the Haganah, warned on December 10, 1947 that it would not remain inactive. Thus, until the end of March 1948 there was continual guerrilla warfare between Arabs and Jews —warfare in which there were no battle lines.

The following is the second of three articles outlining the history of the Arab-Israeli conflict.)

Orange Crew Hosts Navy, Cornell

By BERNIE MacCALLUM
Sports Editor

Syracuse rows against Navy and Cornell in the Goes Cup races on Lake Onondaga Saturday at 4:30 p.m. The Orange varsity shell will be seeking its second win of the season. On the Connecticut River last Saturday the Hill oarsmen defeated Dartmouth.

Cornell will be defending the Goes Cup in their season opener. The 1962 Cornell crew was the IRA Regatta champions.

Navy lost their opener last week to Columbia and Princeton. "You can't sell Navy short." Syracuse coach Loren Schoel said. "They have a boat load of veterans and are a big heavy outfit." Schoel also pointed out that the Midshipmen had a championship frosh crew in 1960 and were IRA junior varsity winners last season.

Schoel lists the following as his varsity shell:

STEVE GLADSTONE — No. 7, 6-1, 195-pound junior.

TED KAKAS — No. 6, 6-4, 190-pound junior.

BRUCE BUCKLEY — No. 5, 6-2, 200-pound senior.

RON DICK — No. 4, 6-4, 193-pound junior.

BILL SANFORD — captain, No. 3, 6-2, 190-pound senior.

GERRY HASLACH — No. 2, 6-3, 193-pound junior.

GILES VAN der BOGERT — stroke, 6-3, 175-pound junior.

WALT BARBER — bow, 6-3, 185-pound senior.

JOHN REED —coxswain, junior.

Gerry Haslach is returning to the varsity shell this week after injuries kept him sidelined against Dartmouth.

Dick Hersh, coxswain in the varsity shell last week, has a blood infection in his leg which will most likely have him land bound Saturday.

JV Shell

The junior varsity boat will have Paul Eckhardt at no. 7 oar, Bob Jackson at no. 6, Tom Prindiville at no. 5, Roland Pond no. 4. Dave Norris no. 3, Scott Sanford no. 2, Dick Foreman bow, Dan Hogan stroke and Jim Segaloaf coxswain.

WAER Broadcast

The races will be broadcast over WAER starting at 4:00 p.m. after the football broadcast.

A description of the races will be broadcast to the finish line for the benefit of spectators.

Starting times are set so fans will be able to see both the football game and the crew races.

Centering the Alumni line will be big AL BEMILLER, '61 Grange grad. A junior on the "Sizeable Seven" of 1959 vintage, will be back to haunt his old school tomorrow. Right now, he's a member of the Buffalo Bills of American Football League.

Alumni-Varsity Clash Tomorrow

Varsity and Alumni football squads clash in Archbold Stadium at 1:30 p.m. Saturday in the annual Hill spring classic.

Coach Ben Schwartzwalder's backfield will have a new look with quarterback Walley Mable sidelined with a muscular back injury and Mike Koski also out.

Rich King will quarterback the varsity with Bill Hunter replacing Koski at left halfback.

The Alumni squad has been bolstered by the addition of Jim Anderson and Dick Feidler. Feidler played on the McGill University National Canadian Collegiate Championship team last fall.

Dick Easterly is offensive Alumni captain with Jim Ridlon heading the defensive unit.

Offensive lineups will be:

Lineup

VARSITY		ALUMNI
Len Slaby	C	Al Bemiller
Jim Mazurek	RG	Tom Gilburg
John Salerno	LG	Bruce Tarbox
Tom Wilhelm	RT	Bob Yates
Bob Hnat	OT	John Brown
Jim Cripps	LE	Walt Sweeney
Dick Bowman	RE	Fred Mautino
Rich King	QB	Dick Easterly
Bill Hunter	LH	John Mackey
Nat Buckett	RH	Don King
Jim Nance	FB	Gary Fallon

The Alumni line averages 45 pounds and is studded with members of the 1959 "sizeable seven" forward wall.

The two Alum coaches Al Gerlick and John Seketa, plan to have their team do a lot of passing to take advantage of quarterback Easterly. Dick will be tossing to a pair of top offensive ends in Sweeney and All-American Mautino.

WAER

The game will be broadcast over campus radio station WAER (88.3 mc).

Stickers at State After Yale Loss

By HOWIE SCHNEIDER

Two goals in the last minute of play still was not enough to overcome a Yale eight-tally, second-quarter barrage, and the Syracuse stickmen dropped their second consecutive game, 11-9, Wednesday at New Haven. Coach Roy Simmons' squad now stands 3-3.

Saturday, Simmon's squad, now 3-3, takes his team to University Park where they face off with Penn State.

The Ivy Leaguers clearly dominated the first half. After a tightly played first quarter with neither team exceptionally impressive offensively, the home team broke loose and unlashed an eight-goal blitz on the bewildered Orangemen. The half ended, 9-3.

The Orange defense held the Ivy Leaguers to only two goals in the second half, but it proved to be two too many. With one minute left in the game Yale owned an 11-7 lead. Mackey and Kennedy closed the gap to 11-9 with two quick goals, but time ran out before Syracuse could regain possession.

Yale was paced by their three "big G's," Gwin, Gibson, and Grose. Gibson and Gwin netted three scores each, and Grose threw in two.

For the Orangemen "Boom-Boom" Fraser had one of his worse days of the season. The team scoring leader chucked in two goals, three under his average.

Kennedy, a substitute midfielder led the team with three goals. Mackey, Pappas, and Stringer also scored. Big John pumped in two, while Pappas and Stringer added on each. Pappas led the squad in assists wtih three.

Once . . . twice . . . three times . . .

For the third time, the Syracuse University baseball team will attempt to open the home season. The Hill nine is scheduled to oppose the University of Rochester at 3:00 p.m. today on Lew Carr Field.

Rain, snow and frigid weather wiped out previous "openers" against Seton Hall and R. P. I.

Today's game will be broadcast over radio station WAER, 88.3 mc, at 2:55.

Coach Ted Kleinhans has tapped rookie right-hander Phil Schoff to hurl against Rochester in an attempt to break a three-game losing string. Syracuse has a season record of three wins and five defeats.

Schoff was scheduled to pitch Wednesday's postponed contest with R.P.I. The tall sophomore will be starting his first game of 1963. He has relieved once this year, allowing four runs and five hits in 5 1/3 innnigs.

Track Team Faces Pitt, WVa In Triangular Meet

By IRA BAKST

The Syracuse trackmen will meet strong competition Saturday when they travel to Pittsburgh and meet Pitt. and West Virginia in their only triangular meet of the year.

The piety forces, winners of this meet last year in Archbold Stadium, except both opposing teams to be a lot stronger. Coach Robert Grieve feels that opposition has greatly improved in the field event, and hopes the Orange can offset this with their running strength.

"This will be an extremely close contest." Grieve stated, "I think the winning margin will be only one or two points."

Moncey Ferguson (4:11.8 mile) and Mike Guzman (4:19) are set to run in the mile, with Mike Schuster (9:43-2-mile) and Steve Killorin (9:45) ready for the two-mile competition.

Orange hopes, which rest in the running events, will depend greatly on the performance of Cal Evans (48.6 quarter-mile), John McCauly (49.2 quarter), Charlie Gaston (9.8 100-yd. dash), and Gary Sherman (9.8-100 yd. dash).

Gaston, Sherman and Dave Snipe, a sophomore, are to race the 100-yard-dash and the 220, while Cal Evans is also scheduled for the 220.

Sophomore Dick Radune, who runs the high hurdles in 15.7 will run in that event, while Ferguson (1:52.8), Bob Brown (1:53.5) and Tom Higgons will race in the 880 yd run.

Sophomore Chan Rudd will compete in the pole vault, broad-jump and the high jump. Rudd has recorded jumps of 13'6" in the pole vault, 21'10" in the broad jump and 6' in the high jump.

Gaston, Bob Maum and Ron Brzezinski each have jumped 22' in the broad jump and are slated to compete Saturday.

Sophomore Bob Maum is also slated to throw in the javelin, with Dave Browner (175'). Grieve reports that the Orange are weak in this event, and must hope to make up for lack of depth with the running events.

All-Around Float

ALPHA CHI RHO'S "Promised Returned" entry in Saturday's Spring Weekend float parade on the main quad won the all-around prize in the small house division.

Moving Up, Floats Spark Weekend

By SANDI EHRLICH

There are no freshmen at Syracuse University today.

In traditional Moving-up Day ceremonies Saturday morning, Chancellor William P. Tolley officially declared every member of the freshman class a sophomore. Sophomores officially became juniors and juniors became seniors. Members of the class of 1963 were declared in a "state of limbo" until graduation on June 1.

The ceremony was symbolized by the burning of a freshman beanie by the class of '66 president Dennis Green and the burning of a bluebook by senior class president Henry Lee.

With the theme "Promise of Persephone" the float parade featured humorous, beautiful and unusual floats.

Alpha Chi Omega sorority won the best-all-around float in the large house division for "The Sting of Spring." The float showed a nine-foot tall dog sniffing a huge daffodil while a bee stung him on the nose.

Alpha Xi Delta sorority won second prize for best-all-around float in this division.

Alpha Chi Rho fraternity won the best-all-around float award for the small house division with "Promise Returned". The float depicted Persephone watching a revolving platform, half of which showed a winter scene and the other half a spring scene.

Alpha Delta Pi won second place in the small living center best-all-around division.

The most beautiful floats were entered by Chi Omega and Delta Upsilon in the large house division and by Tau Kappa Epsilon and Alpha Sigma Tau in the small house division.

Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority won the most humorous float prize for "Happy Pappy Weekend's Dream" in the large house division. Phi Gamma Delta fraternity placed second.

For the third year in a row Acacia fraternity won the most humorous float in the small house division. Called "Spring Bugs Me" the float featured an oversized functioning can of insect repellent and a coed holding a fly swatter. Theta Chi fraternity won second place in this division.

DUD Day at Piety; Student Support For Union Urged

By DANIEL RITEY
Junior Editor

Today is DUD Day on Piety Hill.

Discuss Union Day has been created to stimulate conversation about a University Union at SU.

Resolution coming out of the Activities and Exchange Conference at Sagamore cite a number of reasons in favor of a University Union.

Critical Need

There is a "critical need for a University Union to serve students, faculty, administrators and alumni" according to the AEC.

Further Sagamore proposals include efforts on the part of campus activities to give financial support to the Union and efforts to secure proceeds from the 1964 Varsity-Alumni football game for the Union.

A University Union at SU would serve the following purposes:

1) Stimulation of unity between faculty, students, administrators and alumni.

2) Provision of group and individual facilities.

3) A center of university activities and an integral part of the university educational program.

4) An increase in the attractiveness and status of SU.

5) To meet problems created by the expansion of the uni-

Hill Professor de Waard Wins Guggenheim Award

By CHARLES STEINBERG
Associate Editor

Hill Geology Prof. Dirk deWaard has been awarded a John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Foundaiton fellowship.

DeWaard is the only Syracuse professor this year to win the fellowship, considered a high distinction in the academic world.

A total of 269 fellowship, valued at $1.38 million, were awarded by the foundation this year "to assist research and artistic creation." Eight Cornell University faculty members received fellowships as did two from the University of Rochester.

Prof. deWaard will use his fellowship to continne a study of the formation of the Precambrien mountain terraines which are over one billion years old.

National Science Foundation

For the past several summers deWaard has been engaged, under National Science Foundation support, in a study of the Adirondack terraine.

His Guggenheim fellowship will enable him to investigate other Precambrien terraining in Norway, Finland, India and Australia, he said.

"Over a billion years ago," deWaard explained, "these mountains were over 30 kilometers below the earth's surface."

A native and citizen of Holland, Prof. deWaard came to

Letters, Letters And More Letters

"Please don't print my name—I want to graduate."

"Please don't print my name—my fraternity brothers will kill me."

"Please don't print my name—it's too close to exams."

"Please don't print my name—the Gestapo will find me."

These statements symbolize the explanations used on "letters to the editor" when an author wants to remain anonymous. And these statements accompany a majority of the daily letters, not just a few.

What sort of cowardness has come over the students at Syracuse University that they can not bear to stand up for their convictions? What causes "An Arab Student" to write a very intellectual rebutal letter on the Arab-Israeli problem, and then forget to sign his name?

What gives "One Who Doesn't Concede the Right" the nerve to write a letter condemning university policies when he won't stand up for his rights in print?

Day after day after day, letters flow into our office which either have no name on them, or have a phony signature.

Realizing that occasionally there may be a valid reason why a person would request that a name not be published, we usually print such a letter without the name.

But this paper will maintain its policy of refusing to print any letter which comes into our office unsigned or with a pseudonym.

Why such a policy? Many of the letters coming into our office are libelous, prejudious and often in poor taste. Among the letters have recently passed through this office are one from a person who thought Mr. X was a crook, one who thought a Daily Orange columnist was a card-carrying member of the Communist Party, one who thought fraternities should have the right to discriminate, and one who thought this newspaper's editorial pages lacked "guts."

Many of these letters amuse us—others leave us with an empty feeling. Is it possible that students at Syracuse University are of such a weak fiber that they haven't the strength to sign a letter?

Hill Conduct

Hill students finally answered the call of the crew team Saturday afternoon and poured into Onondaga Lake Park by the hundreds to view the annual Goes Cup Race with Syracuse, Cornell and Navy.

Cars, four deep, lined along the bank for a mile way Hill students cheered wildly. Syracuse lost and near the finish line and as the first race got under the cheering was not as strong for the second race.

The Hill lost that one, too, and maddened Hill students began littering the grounds and the lake with beer cans, liquor bottles, and other debris.

Syracuse also lost the last two races, and many students left with the feeling, "I'll never go back there for another race."

If a ruined park is the price that has to be paid for the crew team's new-found popularity, it might be better if the sport reverted to its colony status.

LETTERS

Friendly SU

To the Editor:

Last week, while attending one of the University Art Festival functions, I found it necessary to borrow a chair from another part of the building so that my wife, at least, could have a seat in the crowded auditorium. The janitor respectfully took me at my word to return the chair at the completion of the performance. His pleasant manner was gratifying and made me instinctively feel that I was among friends.

At the conclusion of the performance, I was making my way out of the auditorium, chair in hand. One of our students, whom I scarcely recognized, (we were both in civilian clothes), approached me from one side and said, "I have it, Colonel," and before I could say a word he had the chair half way back to its proper place.

A big thing? Not so big perhaps, but for newcomers like my wife and I, it served as a heartwarming example of courtesy and concern for others that makes S. U. . . . a large university . . . a friendlier place than most large universities.

Administration

To the Editor:

As a student at Syracuse University, I have seen things done by the administration, faculty, student groups, and individual students, that I have not condoned.

When a student or group of students goes out of their way to harm another students academic status, the end has definitely been reached.

A Psychology 5 examination was given in 307 Hall of Languages on May 2. Some person or group of people posted the following notice on either door of the room.

Psychology 5 will not meet
Thursday, May 2
307 Hall of Languages
1:00

As a result of this action, thirty-five students were not in attendance for the examination.

This examination was the third in a three part series, given before the final exam. Assuming that these students earned grades of 90% on the first two, these grades, when averaged in with a zero give them a 60% average going into the final. No make up exams are given in Psych 5 under any conditions.

The professor administering the exam alluded to the standard of academic excellence at S.U. When a professor is subjected to this type of treatment by students, he has every right to make a statement such as this.

I certainly hope that the person or group of people who instigated this malicious prank feel suitably smug. Just think, you have affected the final grade of thirty-five people, some of whom may have to repeat the course.

Fortunately, I did not take these signs at face value.

Murder

To the Editor:

I'm a freshman and thus far have reacted to my observations of S.U. by exchanging my opinions only with friends. Until the murder in Thornden Park, embroiling the University by its very proximity and student usage, no event has so roused me to voice my feelings about students than their reaction to this crime.

More shocking than this death is the manner in which many students converse about it. The epitome of their mocking and derisively sarcastic joking hit me in HBC when several lounging students laughingly lashed out almost sacreligeous remarks like: "She deserved it." "Hey, I'm going to Thornden, wanna come!" "Wait till I get my tire iron." "Has anybody seen my white Impala!" I won't detail their more gruesome renditions of the murder act itself that they freely and proudly almost competed to gaily describe, but one concerned the possibility of the blood and flesh under the criminal's fingernails.

My first reaction was a sickening horror that these students could only be immature, narrow-minded, apathetic robots, shallowly and selfishly deriving pleasure out of what is a serious and sobering affair. Granted, sorrow for the death of an unknown woman is not expected. But has murder now become the butt of laughter?

Perhaps these students have not had occasion to know, or have been sheltered from, crime, sorrow or death. Perhaps, if that is the case, they were unknowingly blinded from seeing the seriousness of the murder which, at least, demands mere respect for the victim. Perhaps there are no justifications for their sickening display. And perhaps no blame is due them if they are unaware.

That is what frightens me: if they are unaware. I criticize that—not them as individuals. It also frightens me to think that if they and others like them were aware and spread this attitude, that its rotten basis in putting on a flippant front for the sake of the crowd (for I hate to think they'd be the same alone with themselves) would be indicative of Syracusans. I hope they have become aware.

Frosh English

To the Editor:

I am one of the many confused freshmen attending this institution, and the English Department is not helping to clarify matters. The pieces of this giant puzzle are slowly drawing together and I have to to some conclusions about the course entitled Freshman English 1a & 1b.

I wandered helplessly through English 1a trying to believe you as you said all that was taught to us previously was superfluous and wouldn't help us anyway. I don't believe that the entire course was worth the 25c that the bookstore will now pay for our texts (all three of them!) But do not despair, I have found an answer and a purpose for English 1a. It is a comparative purpose. English 1a served the function of a scapegoat, so that one may point to English 1b and say: "Well, it's better than something!"

English 1b isn't inferior so much as it is misleading and disappointing. For example, the titles of novels which we are assigned are prone to be quite suggestive of an action-packed story when in reality the works are as stagnant as a piece of fiction can be. This can be readily shown by "The Dead", "The Fox", "Death in Venice", "Howards End", and others.

In addition, I feel I am not learning anything because I am not being taught anything. We are assigned a story, we read it, and then we 'discuss' it in class. That is, we listen to the instructor's interpretation of the assignment which is usually a symbolic one where he has 'read in' almost anything that he wishes to make a point about.

Then perhaps he assigns "a paper" to be written on the work. What one is supposed to write about no one knows and usually it results in a few thousand words of padding for which the student has spent innumerable hours trying to think of something better. Unfortunately he doesn't come up with anything and makes a last ditch effort to do his project with the above results, and usually a mediocre grade.

This is unfair! A student is penalized because he wants to take a story at its face value and not read in 'hidden' meanings which I believe in many cases, the author had no intention of conveying anyway.

There it is; I have spoken my piece. Perhaps there are those who sincerely value and are benefiting from your course, but as for me, I honestly wish there was a creative writing course open for freshmen.

Opera

'Tree on the Plain'

By S. Aletti and F. Digiacomo

In the accompanying program notes of "A Tree on the Plains" it was stated that the work, after its premiere in 1940, was withdrawn despite the popularity of the work and its success in the profession because the authors felt it needed revision. It was obvious last night that neither of the authors, Ernest Bacon or writer Horgan revised enough.

Though the enthusiasm of the participants in the presentation almost made the time spent worth while, the work was certainly overlong. The second act proved dramatically and musically unexciting, and unfortunately, even the abundance of pretty tunes did not compensate for this.

The libretto is undoubtedly the main cause of the many inadequacies of this "music-play." (It should be stressed as in the notes that this is not an opera.) Horgan has tried to simulate the humor of Hammerstein and the profundity of Steinbeck and unfortunately, the result is a mixture of the humor of Steinbeck and the profundity of Hammerstein.

Music and libretto are combined to make a collection of cliches about life, death and the hardships of existence on the Western Plains. A singularly spectacular example of the many weaknesses of the libretto, occurred when after "Granddad" is in his coffin and a distant train whistle blows, a sage of the old West pithily comments: "He's takin' his last train," and this leads to a spiritual-like ensemble built up on that choice phrase.

Bacon's music, while well orchestrated and cleverly manipulated, suffers from an unoriginal, rather dull approach to an over-used folk style of writing.

Probably the most successful part of the production was the excellent set and lighting. However, one seldom noticed this because the acting was abysmally poor. The cast vocally was more than adequate. Bill Covington was excellent as Lou, and Eileen Goewey was competent as Corey, though their acting left a great deal to be desired.

The highlight of the evening was Ken Bowles in the all-to-brief role of "the Reverend." The chorus talent often did not match its enthusiasm, but they had some superb moments.

In general there were a few fine moments in the production of the work, but one had the feeling that Dr. Bacon was not working in a medium to which he is especially at ease.

Endgame

Samuel Beckett's play, "Endgame" will be presented at 4 p.m. today in Gifford Auditorium H.B. Crouse. A "theatre of the absurd"—play, it centers around a dying man, Hamm, his servant, Clov, and his parents, Nagg and Nell who sit in ash cans throughout the performance. DAVID HAMILTON directs and CATHY BINDET is stage manager. The cast includes RICHARD MILLER, EDITH COMINS and BRUCE MacCURDY.

Goldoni Set

PETER MALONEY

Most of us wish to be recognized on the stage, to play different kinds of parts with skill and ease. To use gestures, facial expresions and timing in reading lines which will incite the audience into uproarious laughter. In other words, we wish to have the talent of Peter Maloney.

The popular red headed comedian from Honeoye Falls, N. Y., will be seen the last time on the Coronet Stage of the Drama Building on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, May 7, 8 and 9th. He will star in a repeat of Goldoni's "A Servant and Two Masters."

Maloney has been active in drama production since his freshman year. He is remembered for his roles as "Moonface Martin" in "Anything Goes," "Daddy" in "The American Dream," "Fleetfoot" in Little Mary Sunshine and "Peachum" in "The Beggars Opera."

However, the rubber faced actor whose eyes come out and talk to you, is also an honor student.

He has worked as stage manager of Fayetteville Playhouse and in September will be stage manager of Richard Harris' "The Fourth Pig."

In "The Servant of Two Masters," a broadly played Comedia Del L'arte, Maloney plays a crafty and agile servant who gets entangled with two masters.

This role gives the versatile Maloney a chance to display most of his comic talents. Even though he wears a mask, every one, including the actor whose scenes he steals, knows that Peter Maloney is on stage.

Little Theater Slates 'Harvey'

The Syracuse Little Theater presents "Harvey" Friday and Saturday, May 10 and 11, at the University Regent Theater.

Mary Chase's comedy was awarded the Pulitzer Prize. The cast is made up of local talent.

"Harvey" concerns the gentle "Elwood P. Dowd" whose best friend is a six foot white rabbit. All seats for "Harvey" are reserved. Tickets are $1.50, $2.00, and $2.50, and may be purchased at the Regent boxoffice.

Realistic Date

Chancellor William P. Tolley has stated that "1966-67 could be a realistic date for a Universtiy Union building at SU."

To the present University Union Board falls the major task of making the Union building a reality.

The two leading services of the Board are the provision of a program for all students on campus and the student drive toward the acquisition of a University Union.

To these ends the Board has set up four committees: Student Union service, special programming, research and fund raising.

To get people aware of the Union and to get their ideas on it, the following questionnaire should be answered. Poll boxes are located in dining halls, the Women's Building, Slocum and Huntington B. Crouse.

1) Does SU need a University Union, and if so, why?

2) Could a Union provide a home for groups like ISO, commuting and graduate students?

3) How can the current Friday night programs at the Women's Bldg. be improved?

4) Should the Union Board hold week-night functions? If so, what kind?

5) Is there a need for better coordination of campus activities?

6) What can the current Student Union and the proposed University Union do for organizations you're connected with?

7) Would you support a fund raising drive?

8) What fund raising suggestions do you have?

9) Can the University Union goal and activity coordination correct the apparent apathy on campus?

10) What facilities would you like in a University Union building?

Hill Professor de Waard

Syracuse University in 1959. He previously taught at the University of Indonesia for six years. He came ot the United States in 1958 as a visiting professor at the University of California at Berkeley.

Summer Study

"The Syracuse area is a very good place for a geologist to study," deWaard commented.

During the summers he is able to take advanatge of the nearby Adirondack terraine.

His summer home at Blue Mountain Lake is used throughout the season by Hill graduate geology students and colleagues.

A devoted scientist, deWaard was hard put to explain any other major interests. "Geology is my life's work," he said.

Child Interest

Prof. deWaard recalls that he has been interested in geology since he was twelve years old. As a youngster, he said, he would discover rocks and pebbles transported from Scandanavia to Holland by ice. He had a collection and started reading about geology.

"There was never any doubt that I wanted to become a geologist," he said.

In 1947 he received a doctor of science degree cum laude from the University of Utrecht.

Now an associate porfessor at Syracuse, deWaard says he plans to remain here permanently.

Accompanied by his wife, he will make his world-wide study during the 1964-65 academic year. Included also will be an appearance at the International Geophysical Congress in New Delhi.

Previous S. U. Winners

Previous winners of the Guggenheim fellowship at Syracuse include Dr. Antonio Pace, Romance languages; Dr. David Cheng, electrical engineering, and Antje Lemke, library science.

The fellowships were established by the late U. S. Senator Simon Guggenheim and his wife in 1922 as a memorial to a deceased son.

The purpose of the fellowship is to "further the development of scholars and artists by assisting them to engage in research in any field of knowldege and artistic creation in any of the fine arts including music, under the freest possible conditions."

Winners are men and women "who have already demonstrated unsuual capacity for productive scholarshp or unusual creative ability in the fine arts."

In his research, Dr. Rosen has studied possible effects of cultural development on certain ear ailments. He discovered the Mabaan tribe in the Sudan to have superior hearing to persons living in urban areas.

The Newsweek article describes his research and discusses a report he made last week to a professional society.

Born in 1897, Dr. Rosen graduated from SU in 1918 and the Syracuse College of Medicine three years later. He presently lives in New York City.

He is a consulting otologist at Mount Sinai Hospital and is an associate clinical professor at Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Arab-Israeli Dispute: Part III

Editor's Note:
The following is the last of three articles by Max Loewenstein, Susan Loewenstein and Tovie Rome on the background of the current Arab-Israeli situation.

Arab Legion

The Transjordanian Arab Legion was stationed in Palestine and was officially part of the British peace-keeping force. However as early as December 14, 1947 it participated in assaults on Jews and before the end of the Mandate had captured some Jewish villages.

At this time the U.S. and Britain maintained an arms embargo of Palestine which continued beyond the establishment of Israel on May 14, 1948. However, Britain continued supplying arms to Transjordan, Egypt and Iraq under previous treaty arrangements.

It can hardly be said (as some have) that British policy in this interim period was pro-Jewish. The Arabs found infrequent cause to complain; in fact on January 24, 1948 the various Arab leaders hailed British activity in Palestine. Britain was disengaging herself—the Mandate was to end on May 15, 1948—and she was increasingly lax in peacekeeping.

At the beginning of April 1948 the tempo of fighting increased to full scale warfare.

On May 14, 1948 of the State of Israel was proclaimed in accordance with the U.N. partition; the Arab League declared war on Israel; Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Yemen, Iraq, Transjordan, Lebanon and Syria launched their promised invasion.

The outcome was that the Israeli-held territory totalled 8,000 square miles. The independent Arab state envisaged in the U.N. partition was never realized—some of this area was taken by Israel; the Gaza strip was taken by Egypt (later to become a base for terrorist raids on Israeli civilians); Transjordan gobbled up a large region west of the Jordan River, splitting Jerusalem in two.

The U.S., USSR and other countries quickly recognized Israel. Britain did not. The fighting ended in 1949 when Egypt, Lebanon, Transjordan and Syria signed armistice agreements with Israel. Although the U.N. viewed these agreements as initial steps towards overall peace, no further progress has been made to date. On May, 11, 1949 Israel was voted to U.N. membership.

The Arab position from 1949 to date has been refusal to recognize Israel's existence and determination to exterminate her. To this end the Arabs have been waging political, propaganda, economic, guerrilla and border warfare. In defiance of the Security Resolution of Sept. 1, 1951, Egypt has maintained a blockade of the Suez Canal, denying passage of ships, cargo or mail bound to or from Israel. Until the Sinai Campaign in 1956 Egypt also maintained a blockade of the Red Sea. Ships of any nationality handling Israeli cargoes are blacklisted, harrassed and denied services in Suez and Arab ports.

Companies dealing with Israel are threatened with boycott. International agreements, such as for air travel and weather, are considered nonapplicable to Israel. The Arab League has also refused to participate side-by-side with Israel in the specialized agencies of the U.N., and international conferences. Israel has not attempted to reciprocate in any form.

Border skirmishes continued throughout the early fifties. From 1955 until the Sinai Campaign in Oct. 1956, the Egyptian - trained and equipped Fedayeen commandos dominted the scene with their almost nightly infiltrations, ambushes and sabotage against nonmilitary objectives in Israel. Israel's answer to these assaults was for the most part calculated reprisal raids against the various military installations which controlled and dispatched the raiders. After the Jordanians, Syrians and Egyptians formed a unified command, repeated their intention of destroying Israel, and the Egyptian Army had massed on Israel's border, Israel launched the Sinai Campaign in October 1956.

Israel has maintained from its inception that it wishes peace with its Arab neighbors. "We extend our hand in peace and neighborliness to all the neighboring states and their peoples. . ." is found in the May 14, 1948 Proclamation of Independence. Since then, in the U.N. debates, in her own parliament and in statements by her leaders, Israel has expressed her wish for peace and/or peace negotations.

The Arab answer was and is that given by Radio Damascus on June 13, 1955, "This desire to hold a meeting with the Arab States is tantamount to recognition of Israel's existence. This trick is transparent to the Egyption Revolutionary Government which rejected the Jewish proposal." On August 31 Radio Cairo while boasting of Fedayeen incursions promised ". . .your day of extermination draws near. . ."

At present, the German scientists in Egypt are accused of developing atomic, biological and chemical weapons. The questions of how, who and to what extent are insignificant when placed besides "why?." The frightening and distressing aspect is the coupling of these weapons with the open war threats and intentions of the Egyptian government.

Israel states she possesses neither nuclear weapons nor a delivery system. At present Egypt has a choice of two delivery systems: ballistic rockets and jet bombers. If in spite of this the Arabs honestly feel Israel threatens them we submit that the first and maybe best defense would be to test Israel's sincerity in peace negotiations.

As for the one-half million Arab refugees we make the following points:

1. They are refugees as a result of a war initiated by their own leaders.

2. They remain refugees as a result of the refusal of the Arab leaders to permit their absorption into the countries where they now are. They are being used by their own leaders as political pawns.

3. Israel has always maintained that as part of a peace agreement the refugees would be fully compensated for nonliquid assets left behind. Israel has already returned their abandoned liquid assets.

5. Israel has absorbed as many, if not more, dispossessed Jewish refugees from Arab countries as there are Arab refugees. A population exchange has occurred.

6. It was not Jewish policy that the Arabs leave in the first place:

"In the midst of wanton aggression we yet call upon the Arab inhabitants of the State of Israel to preserve the ways of peace and play their part in the development of the State on the basis of full and equal citizenship. . ." urged the Israel Proclamation of Independence of May 14, 1948.

"Every effort is being made by the Jews to persuade the Arab populace to stay and carry on their normal lives . . ."; ". . .Arab leaders reiterated their determination to evacuate the entire Arab population and they have been given the loan of. . .military trucks. . .to assist the evacuation." The last two quotations are from the April 26 and 28, 1948 reports of A.J. Bidmead. British District Superintendent of Police with headquarters in Haifa.

Finally, in Israel today all minorities enjoy political freedom (8 of 120 parliamentary deputes are Israel Arabs), which extends beyond voting to education, minority newspapers (e.g Arabic language papers), and free political forum. Israel's active policy is, as Fr. Drinan, Dean of the Boston College Law School said in the April 6, 1963 issue of the Jesuit magazine "America," "to grant full freedom to the religion, conscience, language, education and culture' of all non-Jewish groups in Israel."

Nance Shines In Grid Holocaust

By BILL CRONAUER

It was a sloppy exhibition. That's the only way to describe the annual Spring football game at Archbold Stadium Saturday.

Nearly 6000 spectators witnessed the Syracuse varsity's 19-2 win over the Alumni, but few were impressed.

The first two scores, an Alumni field goal and a Varsity touchdown, were set up by fumbles. The other TD came on an intercepted pass. In fact, there were nine intercepted passes.

The Orange undergraduates netted a grand total of 83 yards rushing and 55 through the air-ways. Varsity passers pinpointed their receivers four of 17 times for an eye-catching 24% completion record.

Bigger Varsity linemen earned 54 yards in penalties. The blocking on the forward wall and in the backfield was not up to par.

Yet one man stood out. "The only player I remember out there was that big fullback," said Dick Lasse after the game.

That big fullback" happens to be no one but Jim "Bo" Nance. Lasse, a defensive end for the New York Giants and a 1957 Syracuse alumnus, should know - he banged heads with him all afternoon.

Defensive halfback Tom Stephens of the Alumni echoed Lasse's sentiments. "Nance is big and strong and runs real well." he said. "What impressed me most was his tremendous power."

Nance was the top ground-gainer for the varsity with 56 yards in 11 carries. The rest of the team chalked up only 27 yards on the ground.

The big 225-pounder ran back the opening kickoff for 23 yards. On the first play from scrimmage, quarterback Rich King attempted a handoff to Nance; result, one fumble.

But Bo surprised the fans who remembered last season.

Outside of the opening carry, he never came close to fumbling throughout the entire game.

The Alumni opened the scoring early in the first quarter when Bob Yates kicked a 31-yard field goal.

The S.U. Varsity had to wait until seven minutes had elapsed in the second period before Rich King unleashed a short TD toss to end Dick Bowman.

Both squads fought to a standstill until Varsity halfback John Snider picked off a Dick Easterly aerial with eight seconds to go and raced 38 yards into the end zone.

Alumni defensive halfback Jim Ridlon suffered a foot injury in the first half and may have to undergo an operation which could sideline him for the 1963 pro season.

Cornell Crews Sweep Goes Cup Regatta

By BERNIE MacCALLUM
Sports Editor

Cornell walked off with orange jerseys and showed that they were one of the crews to beat in the East as the Big Red completely dominated the Goes Cup Trophy Regatta on Lake Onondaga Saturday.

It is traditional for the members of the winning crew to take the shirts of their counterparts in the losing shell.

An overcast windy afternoon turned calm and sunny after the start of the races had been delayed for an hour and a half. The sun, which broke through the overcast just as the varsity shells were making contact with the stakeout boats, shown red rather than orange.

Cornell crews were victors in frosh and junior varsity races with Navy always runnerup and Syracuse third.

The Syracuse Varsity boat fell behind quickly as Cornell and Navy matched strokes for the first ¼ mile of the two mile race, with the Big Red always hanging on to the lead.

Cornell lead by a length at the ½ mile post with Syracuse third. "We're chopping up the water," Hill coach Loren Schoel said between glances at his watch and his crew. Navy coach Paul Quinn stood up and leaned of the bow of the coaches boat as the Midshipmen were falling behind.

Red, yellow and orange were evenly spaced on the lake at the half way mark with two lengths between each crew. Cornell had settled at a 29 stroke pace with Navy at 32 and Syracuse 33.

It was Cornell by three lengths with a ½ mile to go and Syracuse two lengths back of Navy.

The feature of the afternoon for Syracuse supporters was the spring finish with the Syracuse eight falling a ¼ of a length sort of catching Navy who finished four lengths behind Cornell.

Syracuse was still gaining on the Navy shell at the finish as coxswain John Reed had stepped the stroke beat to 39.

The Big Red winning time was 10:35.2. Navy was timed in 10:49 with Syracuse one second back with 10:50.

The 3,000 spectators who lined the shore heard a ship to shore description of the race broadcast to the finish area.

The Cornell junior varsity shell was a four length winner over Navy with Syracuse two lengths back of the Midshipmen.

Cornell freshmen were seven length vistors over Navy with Syracuse way back.

The Goes Cup competition was the first outing of the season for Cornell. The Big Red coach "Stork" Sanford, figures his crew to get better as the season progresses.

Rochester Victimized, 19-2 As Orange Bats Unload

By JUDY ADAMS

The season wes more than half over before the home folks got a look at Ted Kleinhans 17th edition of the Syracuse baseball club.

And the players had obviously been saving up for it. In the eight previous games, the Orangemen had won three, lost five and scored a total of 26 runs.

Friday, they exploded for 19 runs in eight innings and trounced Rochester, 19-2.

Kleihans gave soph Phil Schoff his first start. Phil, who'd worked once in relief, gave up six hits in six innings, allowed the two Rochester runs and won his first of the year.

Ed Barnowski, who made his fifth appearance, finished up.

Rochester jumped on Schoff quickly in the first. The first two batters singled to left and advanced a base when Schoff wild-pitched over catcher Bob Jacuk's glove. John Denison, the third batter, looped a ball to the opposite field that scored the first run. An infield out by Terry Giles brought in the second.

Syracuse turned it into a rout, in the first inning, sending 11 men to the plate.

An infield error and some snappy base running got leadoff hitter Cohen on second. Pat Lutz and Ed Macner singled. After Dick Taylor struck out, Bob Lelli got on via a fielder's choice that didn't get anybody out.

Jacuk singled. The third baseman's error left Richie Duffy aboard. Dave Rounds singled. Schoff doubled on the first pitch. Cohen in his second at bat popped up, but Lutz singled again.

The second Rochester pitcher, Bob Jennings might never have retired the side if Cohen hadn't been caught stealing.

The Orangemen followed their seven-run first with a five-run second, capped by Dave Round's three-run home run.

It was a long rise to spacious center field that outfielder Dick Rice seemed a little hesitant pursuing. When he finally turned to catch it, the ball was beyond his glove. He had just enough trouble picking it up to let Rounds beat the race with the ball home.

Rice had the same trouble again in Syracuse's four-run fifth. Richie Duffy hit an identical drive that dropped just beyond the centerfielder. He picked it up cleanly and threw it home, but the speedy Duffy beat the throw with a bellyflop across the plate.

Schoff wasn't in trouble again until the fifth, when two singles and a walk filled the bases with two out. He got clean-up hitter Jack Bishop to pop up. Second baseman Bobby Cohen circled under it for a while before he finally grabbed it.

The Orange scored one in the sixth and two more in the seventh.

The last runs came when, after two were out, Rounds tripled to center. Barnowski, who'd been hitless all year, promptly lined the ball into the right-centerfield alley and scored standing up.

Sword Hits Snag In Bookstores

By SANDY MYERS

The Sword of Damocles, after a controversial first issue, has run into a problem with university bookstores, according to Sword publisher T. Lee Hughes.

Burton Fink, bookstore director, reportedly told Hughes that in the wake of an April 26 Daily Orange article on the Sword, which said the lead story would deal with abortions, he had called vice president and treasurer Francis Wingate.

Hughes said after Fink told Wingate he planned to sell the magazine, "Wingate said it could not be sold in university stores because of the controversial nature of the article."

Fink would not comment Monday on the issue, saying, "The matter is out of my hands." Wingate could not be reached for comment.

Earle Clifford, dean of men, reportedly told Hughes he believed the bookstore was wary of the magazine because "the article might be libelous."

Hughes said the magazine is properly constituted, with a publisher, and as such involves no risk to distributors.

He also said a lawyer had checked the abortion article.

"Convinced as we are of its accuracy, we have decided to go ahead with publication," Hughes commented.

Dean Clifford allegedly told Hughes there was a possibility the magazine could be sold in university bookstores if the abortion article were deleted.

Dean Clifford emphasized, however, that the Sword could not be sold in university living centers, since university regulations prohibit sales or solicitation of any publication in dormitories.

Hughes told the DO Monday, "It appears to me as if there is another attempt on the part of the university to hinder sales of this magazine."

"There was a similar previous question when a few of our advertisers reported a university vice president had contacted them in an effort to discourage them from placing advertising in the Sword," Hughes continued.

He said Dean Clifford had suggested the article not be published in order to give the agencies involved, including the university, an opportunity to attempt a solution to the pregnancy-abortion problem.

"However, there are administrators who have known for a year that we were in possession of such material and yet made no attempt to approach us for information," Hughes noted.

2 Houses Sentenced For Hazing

The InterFraternity Council Judicial Board last weekend handed down decisions of severe reprimand and warning probation to two houses involved in pledge hazing violations.

The reprimand was given to the house whose 11 pledges stopped a department of public works truck at 4 a.m. by forming a human road block across Comstock Ave. at Colvin St.

Conflicting testimony and lack of intent of malice on the part of the fraternity were given as explanations of the light sentence, Fraternity Administrator James P. McMurray explained.

In the second case a house was given a warning probation for forcing its pledges to pull the fraternity's president around campus in a chariot.

Also involved in the case was a single pledge who was sent to the second floor of a sorority to find a pair of clamdiggers required for a scavenger hunt. The student was sent a letter of reprimand.

Graduation Events Set

Dr. Michael O. Sawyer, who leaves the Hill in June to spend a year in Italy, told graduating seniors at the senior convocation Monday night, "I'm sorry to see you go."

He commented on the mutual effect of four years at Syracuse, saying, "Students have a great effect on faculty members. We hope the faculty also has an effect on students."

Dr. Sawyer extended an invitation to all seniors to visit him on the French Riviera next year, "when you're in the area."

After Dr. Alan Martin, director of alumni affairs, explained the purposes of the alumni association, Frederick Brizzee, treasurer of the national alumni organization, inducted class of '63 members. They now join the ranks of 70,000 Hill alumni.

Peter Cataldi, university undergraduate marshal, emphasized punctuality for commencement exercises.

Class of '63 commencement events include:

GRADUATE AID MEETING

National and regional fellowships for 1964-65 graduate study will be discussed at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in 110 Maxwell Hall.

The meeting is the second in a three-meeting series on graduate aid.

Tolley Fetes Retiring Profs

Chancellor William P. Tolley cited 13 retiring faculty members at a banquet Sunday night in Sims Dining Hall. Six other faculty members were also honored for 25 years of service at Syracuse University.

Cited faculty members are: Dr. Reginald D. Manwell and Dr. Elizabeth Moore Manwell. He is a professor of zoology in the College of Liberal Arts and she is associate professor of family relations and child development in the College of Home Economics.

Dr. Tolley cited Mr. Manwell for his books and numerous scholarly articles, and his research on avianmalaria. The husband and wife team came to SU in 1930.

Also the Misses Alpha Mary Kelsey, a cataloger in the main library, and Martha Townesend Kelsey, librarian in the College of Engineering Library, were cited. The two sisters joined the library staff in 1943.

Tolley singled Martha Kelsey out for her guidance of the engineering library for the past eight years during which time the book collection doubled in size.

Other faculty members cited were Vladimir G. Korolenko, assistant professor in the College of Engineering and Graham Ireland, instructor in the College of Forestry. Tolley referred to Ireland's work with Episcopal students and the Boy Scouts.

Also mentioned were: Dr. Anne Bourquin, professor and chairman of foods and nutrition in the College of Home Economics; Lester G. Wells, librarian in the Lena R. Arents Rare Book Room and Florence Ruth Van Hoesen, associate professor in the School of Library Science.

Tolley gave a special citation to Dr. Aden J. King, professor of chemistry in the College of Liberal Arts, and president of

A 'Servant of Two Masters' Reopens

Students showing their I.D. cards may obtain free tickets for Carlo Goldoni's "A Servant of Two Masters" during its extended run Tuesday. Wednesday and Thursday nights. Tickets will be $1.50 for the general public.

The Comedia Del L'Arte comedy features masks, swordfights, three love stories and improvisations. It deals with Arleccino, a crafty and astute servant. played by Peter Maloney who serves two masters, played by Tom McKee and Leslie Meek. Miss Meek disguises herself as a man through most of the play to find her lost lover. Arleccino's other master.

In the tradition of the Comedia Del L'Arte, Arleccino wears a mask throughout the performance. He becomes entangled in various stitutions when Ellenjoy Schindler, cast as the maid, falls in love with him. He encounters other members of the cast including Esen Wiegan, Stuart Dillon, and Bruce MacCurdy who is Esen's suitor.

Ann Gibson designed the sets, Ruth Meek is responsible for all but four of the costumes and Manfred Bormann directs.

Will they find out or won't they. PETER MALONEY (right) plays the crafty servant. STU DILLON and BRUCE McCURDY watch him, in this scene from Carlo Goldoni's comedy reopening at the Coronet Stage.

Wanted: More Magazines

Last fall, T. Lee Hughes, the former editor of the the Syracuse '10', organized an independent magazine to deal with the problems of the university "not touched by the Daily Orange or the Syracuse '10."

University administrators were at first skeptical about the contents of the publication, but allowed the "Sword of Damocles" to be sold in university dining halls, in university dorms and in the University bookstores.

After the magazine was printed and distributed, however, administrators began to label the work as a piece of yellow journalism. And the existence of the magazine became more difficult.

The problem reached a climax April 26 when the DO ran an article telling of a story on abortions which would appear in the next edition of the magazine. Hughes complained that administrators had put pressure on advertisers and that the existence of his creation was now in doubt.

The pressure on the Sword mounted, and yesterday it was learned that the Syracuse University bookstores would not sell the magazine. Also reiterated was the ruling that the magazine could not be distributed in university dormitories.

In logical terms university officials answered that the reason for stopping the sale of the magazine on university property, was to protect the university from any libel actions which would result from allowing distribution of "possible libel" when the university had prior knowledge of the contents.

Mr. Hughes made a definite strategy mistake when he revealed the contents of his magazine in the DO. We also feel he made a mistake when he used his publication primarily as a critical review of university problems.

But the Sword must live on. Its present format may not appeal to journalism idealists, but its presence has accentuated the need at Syracuse University of a "comment" as well as an "idea" magazine.

This is a large university and it should support not only one or two, but several magazines which expound upon ideas, both academic and social.

Hazing

The University has moved one step closer to civilized living with the recent ban on fraternity hazing.

A long-time tradition among the 74 national fraternities and hundreds of local fraternities, hazing has always been the chief weapon used by the houses to develop a feeling of brotherhood among pledge classes.

The campus as a whole will miss many of the forms of hazing. But the absence of physical hazing, although long in coming, should pave the way for new forms of this universal phase of fraternity life which can be more mature and constructive.

Non-Greeks may think that such requirements have no place on a modern campus where the students are deemed to be mature and serious, and where they supposedly pursue rigorous and entirely adult courses. But within the system, it is generally accepted that there has to be some procedure to test the worhiness of pledges.

We leave the problem of developing some new and and ingenious, as well as constructive, forms of hazing up to the fraternities here at Syracuse, hoping that they can set standards for other colleges to follow.

Good Side

To the Editor:

Everybody has been complaining about every facet of S.U. lately, and before we all get so disgusted that we are driven to a mass exodus from campus, may I be permitted to try to balance the cons of the picture with a few timid pros?

Granted, the tuition is painfully ridiculous and I think the administration has a nerve to charge so much. They have a nerve in general, in fact.

But now to examine the academic picture with what I hope will be some fairness. On the debit side, the Psychology department is very poor . . . the introductory courses in Sociology and Anthropology are farces, and some of the beginning science courses are not much liked. The English department is a source of general controversy, and while I do not think it is top-notch, it has some outstanding professors; without mentioning any names, I am confident most of you will know whom I mean. Freshman English is an ordeal we all have to go through, but let us not forget that the same goes for nearly all American colleges . . . including the Ivy League and the Big Ten!

The Germanic, Romance, and Slavic Language departments are superb, except for some weaknesses in the Spanish program. The Journalism School and Maxwell's Political Science and History departments are probably among the best in the nation. Once one gets beyond the beginning courses, the Philosophy department is excellent; the department of Bible and Religion has some highly recommended courses, as does that of Fine Arts. The Chemistry sequence is evidently very good. And I have heard high praise of the School of Speech and Dramatic Art, and of the Special Education division of the School of Education. To just touch on the technical aspect, the Art School has many faults, but is nevertheless versatile and demanding, and Engineering, to judge by the profusion of slide rules and strained faces around campus, is a grueling course.

This is a very general survey, but I hope it serves to remind us of the good points which Syracuse still possesses. I, as a language major, prefer to study here than take a chance on Michigan or any other. And as for the cultural program . . . I suggest that Mr. Rudy Lombard read the papers once in a while instead of just writing letters to them. Almost every week I have to choose between attending some good cultural event and homework. To name a very few . . . the Sunday concerts at Crouse, the Cleveland Orchestra, Carlos Montoya, Romeo and Juliet . . . need I say more? Anyone feel any better?

Arab-Israeli

To the Editor:

I feel rather out of place on this part of the page, but the recent series of articles on the Arab-Israeli dispute has prompted me to make a few quick remarks. This article read like a term paper using solely Zionist propaganda for sources.

As a matter of interest, let me point out the fact that most of the territory occupied by modern Israel is not the same as that occupied by Biblical Israel and Judah. The Jews have very little of their "homeland."

The Arab Legion was deployed along the partition border for purposes of defense. This Legion was commanded by a British soldier interested in maintaining the partition. Admittedly the partition was a very poor plan. The Jews especially were dissatisfied, for they proceeded to invade Jordanian territory and now hold a considerably greater area than that allotted them by partition.

It is true that many civilian border atrocities were committed by both sides, but the preponderance of them were instigated by the Jews along the largest border, that facing Jordan. The Jewish underground terrorist armies in several cases gave ultimatums of death or emigration to whole villages occupied by Palestinian Arabs. A personal friend of my father happens to have been ruined by this.

May I recommend to the authors of the article a book by John Glubb, A Soldier With The Arabs, which gives an extremely dynamic and factual account of this Middle Eastern dispute through the eyes of a non-Arab, non-Jew British soldier. This book may be rather difficult to find, however, in this country which has been flooded and unduly influenced by Zionist propaganda to the extent that our relations with the rest of the Middle East are rather strained.

Frosh English

To the Editor:

Certainly Mr. Kreisberg has every right to detest freshman English, and I am sure nobody would question it. But what strikes me as funny is the standards by which he attempts to judge literature and its teaching.

The major evil of the course seems to be that the titles are misleading. Maybe Mr. Kreisberg would be happier if the English department rewrote the titles so as not to deceive the freshmen. Instead of "The Dead," we could have "The Dull, Stagnant, Uninteresting Dead." But in any case I don't see the point of the objection. I trust the freshmen read a little beyond the title when they are trying to write those awful papers.

But that's not all. The novels are chosen badly. The department has conspired against the freshmen and refused to give them "action-packed stories." There's one solution to that. Petition for permission to substitute "Tom Swift and His Flying Machine" for "Howard's End." Or if you want a more adult book, try a Mike Hammer mayhem story.

And then, oh horrors, the instructors try to lead the innocent freshmen into the primrose paths of symbolism! What Mr. Kreisberg doesn't seem to realize is that in a novel an author is trying to convey a message in a more subtle form than by printing a sheaf of wall mottoes. To do this requires symbols. Novelists assume that their readers enjoy this form of communication; most adults do, because they feel it is a tribute and a challenge to their intelligence to be spoken to rather than preached at.

It is stupid to state petulantly that the author didn't mean symbolism to be read into his work. Of course he did. Every intelligent author since the time of Isaiah has. It is possible to overdo this, of course, but in my experience it has been the students who try to put Freud into everything and the instructor who has restrained them. But if the students are not experienced in getting meaning out of (not reading meaning into) a novel, then the instructor has to show them. That's what he's there for.

Now to the last objection: the students have to write papers! How brutal. And the teachers doesn't even assign a topic. When Mr. Kreisberg confesses that he has trouble finding a subject, he is only confessing his own ineptitude, because a topic is half the battle. There is no need for anybody to turn in "a few thousand words of padding" because he can't "think of something better." If freshmen have trouble writing papers for English 1b, they'd better go home, because the next three years are going to be some drag.

But still Mr. Kreisberg wants creative writing. If he can't think of anything to say about an assigned novel, how can he ever say anything "creative?" Before you can write creatively you have to know how to write period. This he says he has trouble doing. And before you are qualified to write anything, including a letter to the editor, I might suggest you learn some grammar, such as why you shouldn't say "I wish there was a course."

NIGHTLIFE

Jimmy Durante

By Jeff Zients

When the chorus girls missed cues and came on late during his opening moments, Jimmy Durante encouragingly told them "don't worry girls' this is just a rehearsal. Let Bruno worry!" After seeafter seeing the night show Friday it would appear that Owner Bruno has little to worry about with the talent and fun packed show he has booked into his Three Rivers Inn.

In the hour and ten minutes he is on stage, Durante does all the things we have come to see. He sings, dances, throws piano tops, sheet music and gives us a strong sample of the tomfoolery that has made him a show business institution for thirty years. The "Schnoz" comes on with "Gotta Start Off Each Day with a Song" and then brings on the chorus girls for some hilarious moments to celebrate "the nose's birthday." Sidekick Sonny King joins him next for some comical "opera lessons" and a medley which includes "Melody Man" and, a number that is quickly becoming a Durante-King classic, "I Love You, I Do."

Eddie Jackson, Durante's high strutting "Bill Bailey" belter, is next with a song travelog of favorite cities. Jackson adds a touch of nostalgic old show biz to the evening and it is most well received.

Jimmy, now alone on stage, sits at the piano and sings "Young at Heart." It's a sock rendition in the inevitable Durante style and brings a strong ovation from the large opening night crowd. This song is probably the crux of Durante's appeal. This seventy year old trouper sets a fantastic pace that never lets up and he is an energetically dynamic showman to watch and enjoy.

Peter Lawford is next with Comden and Green's "The French Lesson" done with the chorus line. Clowning with Durante in a hilarious Beatnic skit, Lawford adds a bit of class to the proceedings. Jimmy, in long yellow sweater and goatee, and Lawford, in loud black leather motorcycle jacket, romp through songs and eventually wind up with a twist. When Jimmy asks Peter to fix him up with a date for the evening the result is Miss Jerry Jackson. The session between Miss Jackson and Durante must be seen and any more description on our part would merely spoil this show stopping surprise.

Eddie Jackson, Sonny King and Peter Lawford join Jimmy for "Inka Dinka Doo" and the final "Goodnight." As the group left the stage the opening night audience saluted their efforts with a standing ovation. It was an evening of great fun, excitement and an inspirational rememberance of a type of performance rarely seen today. Call it corn, call it old vaudeville, it was a wonderful night and a full explanation as to why Jimmy Durante is still one of the top names in show business today.

As this is the final time this season we will be reviewing the opening nights at the Three Rivers Inn we would like to take this opportunity to thank Mr. Bruno for his warm hospitality in letting us share the excitement of his showplace for the Daily Orange. show business today.

WHAT'S HAPPENED TO FALCON

EVERYTHING! AND YET...

Early this year we put a 164-hp V-8 in a new kind of Falcon called the Sprint, and entered the stiffest winter road test we could find . . . the 2,500-mile Monte Carlo Rallye. We didn't know what would happen . . . but happen it did.

First, no one dreamed all the Rallye cars would have to experience the worst winter in decades. Snow, below zero temperatures, and the most demanding terrain in Europe took their toll. Two thirds of the 296 cars that started, failed to reach Monaco.

A lot of experts told us that the Falcon V-8's, untried as they were, could not hope to finish the Rallye with the best of weather. But not only did two Falcon Sprints finish, they placed first and second in their class. But there were more surprises (for everyone) in store. Against all competition, regardless of class, the lead Sprint went on to take first in the final six performance legs.

We honestly didn't know the Falcon Sprint would do this well. But it showed us a Falcon with our new 164-hp V-8 is a car that can perform with the best of them. So a lot has happened to Falcon, and yet . . .

A six-cylinder Falcon has just finished the Mobil Economy Run and finished first in its class. It had to take a lot of punishment, too . . . 2,500 miles from Los Angeles to Detroit over mountains, deserts, and long stretches of superhighways. But the nickel-nursing ways of the all-time Economy Champ took all comers in its class.

So you see something has happened to the Falcon. It can be what you want it to be . . . a V-8 that travels in the same circle as Europe's performance kings . . . or a Six that can travel cross-country on a budget. There's something to put into your compact.

Gifts will be invested in either a mutual investment company or in a closed end fund, which does not charge administrative cost taxes on profits incurred through investments, Carlson said.

Special Screenings Offered

Special screenings of Richard Cawston's "Television and the World" will be shown at 3 and 7:30 p.m. Friday in Gifford Auditorium, H. B. Crouse Hall.

The documentary film was produced for the British Broadcasting Corp. and was first shown in America on WNDT, New York City's educational television outlet, as part of its opening night program.

The WNDT showing was introduced by Newton Minow, Federal Communications Commission chairman, and Edward R. Murrow, director of the United States Information Agency.

The film depicts the growth and influence of television throughout the world. Its unfavorable treatment of American tv and the image it creates in other nations has brought sharp reaction from American networks and stations.

'Do It Yourself' Piano Reduction

Editor's Note:

The following is published for those interested in discovering new intramural sports in which to participate.

The art of reducing an upright piano to pieces not larger than approximately eight inches in diameter is a fine one and the rules for such a competition as set up by the Reduction Study Group are strict.

According to this group the record is held by a team from California Institute of Technology who turned in an official time of 10 minutes, 44 and four tenths seconds.

According to the official rules the piano to be smashed must be a full sized upright with the frame and sounding board intact before the start of the contest.

The piano must also have all 88 keys of which 66 should produce approximately standard notes. The exterior paneling of the piano must also be in place. Necessary repairs may be made before the competition with inferior materials within reasonable limits as determined by the judges.

Each team in the contest should have six members, a coach or action man, a pianist or ax man, a leader and an office man. Each team member must be an undergraduate working for a degree at an accredited college or university.

According to the national rules each contest should be judged by one faculty member, preferably from the same institution as the competing teams.

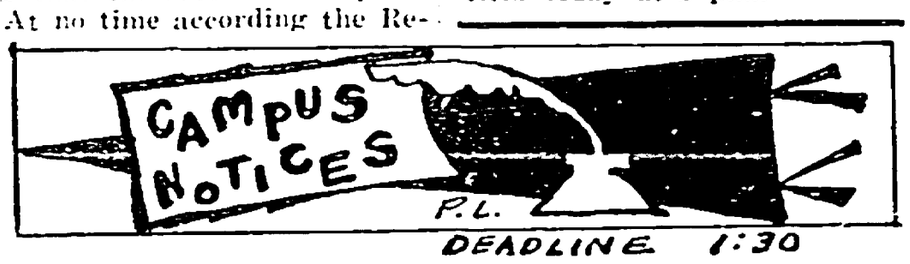
There should also be three student observers, appointed by the judge, who are responsible for timing the event and seeing that the rules are obeyed.

At no time according the Reduction Study Group should any unattached part of the body of any team member be allowed outside the official enclosure, except in the case of an accident when the judge may decide to let the injured team member leave.

The contest should begin with the firing of a gun by which observers should start their stopwatches.

The captain should signal that his team is finished by passing a prespecified piece through the official appeture.

Traditionally this is one of the end keys of the piano.



The Group rules specify that the contest should take place in an enclosed area, one side of which should have a circular opening 7.87 inches in diameter through which the remains of the piano must be passed. Any team which attempts to get the pieces out another way will be disqualified.

In determining the winner the judge should take into consideration not only the times of the competing teams but also such matters as style and elegance of method.

Any group interested in participating or sponsoring such a contest should contact the IDO for the official set of rules and entry blanks.

Congress Must Think Along National Lines

By DANIEL RITEY
Junior Editor

Congress must think of the national interest, but this must not be separated from local interests, Prof. Donald Meiklejohn told the freshman citizenship sections Monday in Marshall Auditorium.

Speaking on the responsibilities of Congress, Dr. Meiklejohn cited as "an important development of this century" the emergence of Congress as a body interested in national and international affairs and cooperative with the President.

Prof. Meiklejohn noted that the traditional theory of Congress held each representative completely devoted and bound to the wishes and needs of his local constituents.

This tends to create a conflict of interests and loyalty for a congressman, in that he must set off the American ideal of individuality against the social undertakings of today.

Tension

Dr. Meiklejohn called this conflict of loyalties "a perennial tension" between individual assertion and combined cooperation.

The political area is the ground where these conflicts are resolved, he continued, and here the congressman turns to the political parties for decision.

Parties help to resolve conflicts and arrange the priority of issues and interests for congressmen. The congressman must "ask the public question" every time on all issues, he said.

The congressman is obliged to consider all issues in light of the entire US and its goals, not in the light of political considerations (right wing vs. left wing).

Congressional Duties

Dr. Meiklejohn outlined briefly some of the duties and obligations of a congressman by noting experts from a diary kept by Estes Kefauver when he was a representative.

Kefauver's activities were split into three main areas: those as a congressman, those as a Washington representative of the local constittuents and those designated as personal.

"The day of the congressman and senator is impossibly filled," said Meiklejohn, "and requests from constituents alone could easily fill up the entire day."

Lacrosse Victory Lets Coach Sleep

By HOWIE SCHNEIDER

Last fall grid coach Ben Schwartzwalder probably laid awake at night thinking of slippery fingers and slipprier footballs. This spring lacrosse coach Roy Simmons probably lies awake also, but he thinks of a collapsible defense which does just that, collpase. However, after his team's 10-5 victory over Penn State Saturday, Simmons should be getting a better night's sleep.

Simmons witnessed his team blow a four goal lead to Colgate, and then unflinchingly watched his squad's defensive effort crumble as Yale scored eight times in the second quarter to down the Orange. Leading 4-1 against the Staters, it looked as if Simmons would be up yet another night, as the home team came back to tie the score. However, the stickmen put up a brilliant and determined defensive screen and held Penn scoreless in the last quarter, while an aggressive Orange offense clinched the well-deserved victory.

Orange goalie Pete Coe turned in an outstanding performance. Coe, like defensemen Jack Salerno and Walter Reese, has been a bright spot throughout the year in the defensive picture. Saturday Coe had 32 saves, including 20 in the first half.

Ron Fraser scored under his five goal per game average, but still threw in three key tallies. Fraser, who has cooled off the last two contests, now has 33 goals in seven games.

Duncan Crowther, who has been injured since the Cortland tilt, returned to the lineup. Crowther replaced Mackey, who was having his own troubles in Archbold Saturday, and scored three times. John Pappas also aided in the offensive attack, pumping in two scores. John also had four assists.

The Staters jumped off to an early lead, but the Orangemen quickly evened the score and went ahead. Goals by Crowther, Fraser, Pappas, and Fraser again gave the visitors a 4-1 lead early in the third quarter. The defense which had held Penn from 1:10 in the first quarter up until the third period, now began to give way. At the end of the disastrous period it was 5-5.

In the fourth quarter the defensive regression which had struck earlier was gone, and the defensive play was brilliant. Two goals by Crowther, and one each for Pappas, Fraser, and Stringer in the period gave the Orange their fourth win of the season, they have three losses.

Orangemen Host Cornell in Tennis

The Syracuse University tennis team inaugurates a busy week today when the Cornell Big Reds arrive on the Skytop courts for a 3 p.m. match.

Following the Cornell contest, the Orange netters host St. Lawrence Wednesday before taking to the road against Bucknell on Friday and Penn State Saturday.

Last weekend, the Hill squad dropped a tight 5-4 match at Colgate. Syracuse captured three of the six singles, but garnered only one doubles victory.

Sophomore Steve Rubell (no. 1), junior Bill Gedalecia (no. 3), and junior Lew Katcher (no. 6) chalked up singles wins. Only the duo of Katcher-Alvin Davis could come up with a conquest in the crucial doubles matches.

Today, the Piety net team faces its strongest test of the 1963 season. Last year, Cornell routed the Orangemen, 9-0.

The Big Red are powered by Jerry Levin and Pete Kortman, the top two returnees from 1962. Levin will oppose Rubell in the top spot while Kortman is paired with Syracuse captain Ross Kaplan at no. 2.

In the remaining four singles, Gedalecia will challenge Stan Wolfe, Al Napper battles Bill Taylor, Davis meets Joel Pashcow, and Katcher tackles Pete Marx or Ted Richards.

Syracuse will go with its pairings of Kaplan-Napper, Rubell-Gedalecia and Katcher-Davis in doubles. The latter team has won four consecutive matches.

Hill Second At W Va; Ferguson Wins Two

Syracuse's track team scored 54 points to finish second in a triangular meet held Saturday at Morgantown, W.Va.

Pitt captured first place honors with a 69-point total. Host West Virginia trailed with 39 points.

Mouncey Ferguson paced the Orangemen with firsts in the mile and 880 events.

Ferguson, who ran a 4:11 mile last season, ran a 4:19.2 Saturday.

He nipped teammate Tom Higgins in the 880 with a slow 1:58 clocking.

Another standout Orangeman was Cal Evans, who paced the mile relay win and finished second in the 440.

In the quarter mile event Evans ran a fine 48.3 although Pitt's Vance Carter, runnerup in the indoor IC4A 600 event, was credited with a torrid 48.1.

In the baton event Evans ran a blistering 48.0 leg to nail down the win.

Other Hill winners were Charlie Gaston, capturing the 100-yard event in 9.8, and Dave Browner, scoring a surprise win in the javelin by heaving the spear 171'6".

Pitt's triumph was paced by multi-winners Bob Friend and Bill Thomassey.

Friend entered the victory column three times by capturing the broad jump, 120 high hurdles and 400-meter hurdles.

Thomassey scored a double triumph by grabbing honors in the shot put and discus.

Arch rival Colgate invades Archbold Saturday. Last weekend the Red Raiders crushed Alfred by a 118-22 count. Among Colgate's standouts was Ugandan Sam Amukun, who sprinted the quarter in 48.2.

I'm Ready, Eager to Play --Ernie

By JUDY ADAMS

Much of the scenery on the practice field Friday was clad in navy blue football shirts, so much in fact that the one who wasn't, stood out among the broad blue backs.

The civilian walked with his hands in his pockets, laughing and joking with some of the blue shirts as they wandered out to practice. There he stood around watching his old teammates run through a few light drills. After an hour or so, practice began to break up, and the shirts started back toward the fieldhouse.

As they approached Lew Carr Field, another fell in inconspicuously with the group that contained John Brown, John Mackey, and among others . . . Ernie Davis.

It was nearly 6 p.m., but the baseball game was still going on.

"Wonder what's the score?" mused Brown.

"It's 19-2," volunteered the newcomer. Five heads turned simultaneously and looked curiously at the intruder.

"Who's winning?" asked Davis.

"Syracuse"

"Really?" said Mackey. "Syracuse?"

"They must have a good team," observed Davis.

"Well, they were only three runs behind before today."

The group paused outside the mesh fence and watched PJ Barnowski throw a couple of pitches as the game entered the top of the ninth. Satisfied with what they saw, they moved on.

Davis slackened his pace to talk with the newcomer. His first words were:

"I'm fine, really fine. Right now I'm looking forward to July." July because the Cleveland Browns begin their football practice in July.

Then he expect to play this year?

"Yes." His answer was firm.

"If everything goes alright, I'll be playing," he repeated. The "everything" is the continuation of the go-ahead sign from his doctors.

"I'm in good shape," he emphasized. "I feel great . . . and I'm eager to play."

Ernie had worked out last year and had gotten himself into what he considered top condition. But he never practiced as a part of the team. It is generally conceded that the decision of his playing was left up to then-coach Paul Brown who, in spite of the doctors' okay and Davis' eagerness, kept him on the sidelines.

"Since the end of the season, I've been playing some basketball," Davis continued. "And I've done a lot of traveling.

"You see, I work for Pepsi in Cleveland where I have an apartment with John Brown. Cleveland is a branch office of the New York home office and I do a lot of traveling between the two. But I visit a lot of other offices too."

Doing public relations and promotion work?

"No, I'm learning everything about the business."

The couple came to the fence gate in Manley Field. The questioner passed through the gate and under the bleachers without ducking. But the taller Davis had to fold his then these pros (indicating the players on the field) look pretty good."
trim frame to avoid the overhead bracings.

"I haven't been back since November," he said as they stepped onto the field. "It was the Navy game. How long ago was that? Almost five months I guess," answering his own question.

"You know, I like coming back, and I like to do it whenever I can . . . I may not be able to later on.

"Syracuse has been good to me—it's a wonderful school. I loved my college days. It's a lot different once you're out of school. It's kind of hard to explain, but I'd guess you'd call it being out in the world. It's tougher. But my best memories are here."

They continued across the soft field, toward the fieldhouse, passing through a group of blue shirts running through some plays.

Don King took a handoff, ran a semi circle, then stopped and grinned when he saw Davis.

Ernie grinned back.

"I don't get back to Elmira much either," he went on. "My mother of course is still there. And when I do get back, I know most everybody." Which is true no matter where he goes.

It was observed that the alumni were throwing a line against the varsity that averages 245 pounds.

"That's nothing compared to the pros," he said. "But

All he could say about the varsity was that "they seem to be getting bigger every year."

At this point a baby-blue T-Bird convertable pulled along side.

"Hey Ern," yelled the driver, as footballers piled out. "Where's your 'Bird'?" (the Thunder Bird presented to Ernie on the "Day" they held for him in Elmira last year.)

"My 'Bird's in Cleveland," laughed the Elmira Express.

"What's you been doing to John," persisted the driver. "He hasn't been losing any weight."

"Well, John eats good," observed Davis with a twinkle in his eye. "And John's gotta have that weight."

The driver shook his head, waved an drove off.

By now, Davis and his companion had recahed the doors that led to the locker room, long off limits to the latter, who turned toward campus as Davis disappeared inside.

The ex-Orange star made his second appearance on the Syracuse campus Saturday before the game.

He was busy before its start signing autographs, posing for pictures and chatting pleasantly with well-wishers.

Then came his introduction to the crowd.

"And now ladies and gentlemen, last but CERTAINLY not least . . . the Heisman Trophy winner and two-time All-America. . . ." The thunderous ovation that started with the word Heisman and continued long after Ernie had returned to the sidelines, drowned out his name.

For most of the contest, he knelt beside Maury Yeomans with a towel folded neatly below his right knee, and watched intently the action on the field. Occasionally he'd get up and offer a few words of advice to Dick Easterly and Mert Raner who were quarterbacking the alums.

For the last 10 minutes of play he was surrounded by boys asking for his autograph. He didn't turn any away.

When the game was over and his signing apparently complete, he started to follow his old teammates to the locker room.

But he never made more than a few yards at a time, stopping for an autograph or a picture or to thank an admirer for his kind words.

It was obvious to everyone watching that Ernie Davis was still the Biggest Man on the Syracuse campus.

University Chorus

UNIVERSITY CHORUS practices in the Crouse College Auditorium for its concerts. Here they are rehearsing a work by Bach in the Tuesday rehearsal.

Adlai Stevenson May Give Talk At Graduation

Adlai Stevenson, United States ambassador to the United Nations and twice-defeated presidential candidate, will be asked by the senior class to speak at commencement exercises June 2.

Stevenson will be awarded an honorary doctor of laws degree at graduation exercises.

Henry Lee, senior class president, said Tuesday he will speak to Keith Kennedy, commencement committee chairman, about the possibility of Stevenson's speaking at the exercises.

Snow

Stevenson's speech will be in addition to the main address by C.P. Snow, British novelist and physicist.

Former governor of Illinois, Stevenson ran as Democratic candidate for the presidency in 1952 and 1956. In both elections he was defeated by Republican Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Lee emphasized that plans for Stevenson's speech are as yet tentative.

Snow, the main speaker, is also a lecturer, essayist and playwright.

Author

He is author of "The Affair," "The Masters" and "Strangers and Brothers" and has lectured throughout the world.

Snow was knighted by Queen Elizabeth II in 1957 and at the same time was named commander of the Order of the British Empire.

He will receive an honorary doctor of letters degree from Syracuse.

Commencement

Commencement will be held this year at 11 a.m. Sunday, June 2, in Archbold Stadium. In case of rain, exercises will be moved to Manley Fieldhouse.

ADLAI STEVENSON

Rehearsal is scheduled for 9:45 a.m. May 31, when seniors will assemble on the forestry campus.

At 9 a.m. the day of graduation, baccalaureate services will be held in the stadium. After the service, seniors will meet on the forestry campus to form the processional. The march begins at 10:20 a.m., after which time no seniors will be allowed on the field.

Panhel Changes Rushing

After a heated discussion, Syracuse University Panhellenic voted Tuesday night to end planned rushing on the Hill.

It was argued that the alternate plan, proposed by rush chairman Barbara Epstein, was unfair to the freshman girls. The plan, which called for open houses in the fall to be followed by the rest of formal freshman rush after intercession.

One delegate argued that the plan was unfair to the freshmen women by calling for them to begin making decisions on sororities during the first term. This, she felt, was in opposition to the university's purpose in calling for a deferred rush.

Other delegates felt that the new schedule would put a great strain on sorority women. If the plan were adopted, sorority women would be required to rush during both terms.

It was decided to delay a final decision on any specific plan at this date, since this is the final Panhel meeting of the year, and complete sorority votes could not be taken.

A new rushing schedule, which will be formulated by a committee on rushing, will be presented to the sororities in September.

In a second vote, calling for an open informal upperclass rush held in the fall, it was decided to give this plan also to the committee for further revision.

Panhellenic members also unanimously voted their full support of the University Union.

Lambda Psi sorority, which has been an affiliate member of Panhellenic, was unanimously voted into full membership of Panhellenic.

Sue Egan, class of '65, was elected new Panhel constitution chairman over Nita Kamm. Miss Egan, from Merrick, L. I., was treasurer of her freshman floor, a member of Day Hall Dorm Council, on Goon Squad.

David Skier Named Traffic Court Head

David Skier, a sociology major from Honesdale, Pa., has been selected head of the Syracuse University traffic court. He is a member of Alpha Epsilon Delta pre-medical honorary, Zeta Beta Tau fraternity and Joint Student Court.

Skier has announced the new traffic court procedures. Underclassmen who neglect to pay traffic fines will not be allowed to register for the next semester; seniors who do not pay cannot graduate. Presently, there are over 100 outstanding fines.

Violators who feel their fines are unjustified will be given the opportunity to appeal their cases at the bi-weekly hearings of the traffic court, said Skier.

The court will be in session from 4 to 5 p.m. Thursday in the security police office. Fines must be paid before appeals can be heard by the court. Appropriate refunds will be issued.

First violation fines are now $3; second offense, $5; third offense, $10. An additional $5 will be charged for fines not paid within three days.

Skier announced that fines are not charged to place a financial burden on the student, but to insure traffic control in the university area.

Traffic court wishes to hear all justified appeals so that students are treated fairly and given the opportunity to present their complaints.

Syracuse '10' Goes on Sale

Featuring a 20-page section on "Creativity on the Campus," Syracuse '10' will go on sale today on campus, on Marshall Street and in the university book stores.

The 48-page magazine is the largest ever published, according to editor James Gorney.

The magazine has been completely redesigned and includes new format, paper and type faces.

The issue, the second this year, also includes articles on novelist James Baldwin and existentialism.

The creativity section discusses student work in art, architecture, poetry, music, drama and graphic arts. Poetry is featured in a special color section.

Syracuse '10' also includes fiction and other articles.

It costs 35 cents per issue.

Union Discussed At Post-Sagamore

University Union topics dominated discussion at the post-Sagamore meeting Tuesday night.

Ann Cooney, chairman of the University Union board, commented, "DUD seemed to have worked. The campus now knows we're talking in terms of a union."

She reported that some questionnaires had been returned and urge all students with questionnaires to return them to the student government office by 5 p.m. Friday.

A union fund-raising board, to be composed of one representative from each campus group, will be organized to coordinate fund raising activities, Miss Cooney said. She requested each organization to turn in the name of a representative to her at Genesee Cottage, 914 S. Crouse Ave., by Sunday.

Joline Johnson, Panhellenic vice president, said Panhel had unanimously voted Tuesday to support a university union, both as member houses and as a group.

Because rulings prohibit freshman - varsity basketball games, next year's University Union game will again pit students against administration, but this game may be teamed with a regularly scheduled game.

Chancellor William P. Tolley suggested at the Sagamore conference two weeks ago that admission, to be donated to the union building fund, be charged for one major game next year.

The possibility of donating Joint Student Court fines to the fund was suggested by Herbert Lustig, JSG justice. The court annually collects approximately $200, exclusive of traffic fines, Lustig said.

In other business at the meeting, Jay Litwin, Joint Student Legislature speaker, said an academics board will be created under the social, academic and cultural commission as soon as a SAC commissioner is named. He also said JSL and Joint Student Government will begin work in September on an evaluation of faculty, courses and teaching methods.

James Morris, JSG president, said a report on the evaluation would be compiled by the end of first semester.

Three Sagamore discussions are scheduled for next year, in the fall and spring and at the close of the year.

Syracuse '10': Arts and Ideas

One of the basic functions of a university is to promote culture and arts among its students.

As a means to this end, Syracuse University officially subsidizes a literary magazine, the Syracuse '10'.

The popularity of this type of a publication has always been questioned on campus by professors and students, primarily "because it doesn't touch university problems and because its contributions are not of a high enough quality to warrant such a magazine."

There is a need for a learned publication on campus, but fortunately the Syracuse '10', instead of promoting culture and the arts has illustrated the need for a comment magazine on campus and has thus defeated its own purpose.

James Gorney's Syracuse '10' goes on sale later this week, as does T. Lee Hughes' 'Sword of Damocles.' Because of the success of the first Sword and the weaknesses of the first '10', it is probable that many students have begun to attribute to the 'Sword' the functions which should be performed by Gorney's magazine.

The new '10' was reorganized this year because of a change in editorial policy and had its problems with its first issue, but has now published a magazine which is representative of the academic atmosphere at an institute of higher learning.

The scope of the magazine has been expanded to cover academics, culture and the arts at Syracuse and the quality of contributions have been improved.

The Syracuse '10', in its revised form, is providing a service to the students and the university. Students may not support this publication, however, because it lacks sensationalism and controversy—But it is not lacking in quality.

Unwanted

Cornell University, having had problems with wholesale immigration during major weekends last year, has asked Syracuse University and other upstate universities to inform its students that Cornell is limiting its spring weekend, May 10-May 12, to Big Red students and their guests.

Gone is the traditional migration to Cornell weekends of vagrant groups from Syracuse, Colgate, Rochester, Union and Hobart.

A Cornell dean justified the "closed weekend" action, saying that Ithaca hasn't enough accommodations for invited guests.

Outside View

To the Editor:

Syracuse University was new to me, I had never heard of it before—nor even cared to again after I had observed the truth in it. Located in a town named Syracuse, it is situated on the east side, adjoining the slums to my great surprise. I stayed in Syracuse a short while, and it just so happened I picked good weeks in which I could form my opinion of it— and I say "it" instead of university because this university was certainly not a university, according to Mr. Webster. I found three ideals missing: freedom, freedom, and freedom.

Elections were being held the first week, and I shared in their corruption. They were hurried, such as high school elections; one-sided—social, of course, and a duplicate of all past ones. The candidates were similar—good, but handtied by apathy; the platforms were remarkable in that they talked of things, and not of ideals; and the voting of the student body was similar to every one in the past. I happened to walk by one candidate, and he gave me a statement of his or his party's (what is the difference!) platform.

He listed a number of things: a decent infirmary, the tuition problem, tax relief, revision of the marking system, and a few other incidentals that added up to—well, in my estimate, they were worthless, for it was a try in a wrong direction. A student union, another "all talk and no action" ideal, was also proposed. Let me use this as my example of the former statement. . . . One of the main problems of Syracuse was that it missed a student union.

Perhaps people had tried and tried to get one, but it all turned out in vain, for, instead, they got a field house (virtue but certainly not valor), poorer library facilities, a beaten and worn out supposed infirmary, more muggings on Harrison street, poorer housing, trouble on the way to the mount, better football players, lower standards, inferior teachers, professors leaving, creepy stairs in HL, a change of pace drink, segregation in fraternities, a dry campus, student apathy, a rating as a play-boy school, a straight and strict chancellor, fear of communist speakers, no atmosphere for learning, small attendance at chapel, more student apathy, promises, more promises, poor food and service for your money, demonstration laws (not only not enforced, but shouldn't be there at all), log rolling in conventions, suicide of professors, more and more social events, intelligent students (a majority) leaving S.U. because of standards, troubles in the administration, . . . all and all, I see a pretty good trend toward S.U. becoming, not a university, but a high school.

All of the students look up into the heavens and see a speck or cloud of dirt fly by, and, they within it, say, "We are your masters, you do not talk, you do not express yourself, do not even think different, for this is Syracuse and you follow the rules." A few students rise to the top, they publish a coloring book and what is the result? They are thrust down, not only by the administration, but by the STUDENTS. Their money is refused, their words are anarchy, and they sink into a hole, still, perhaps, able to see a speck of truth.

Well, I do not see truth at Syracuse, I do not see a friendly relationship between students and administration; I do not see freedom of thought; I do not see a well-informed student body; I do not see many guys and girls at night studying; I do not see a 10% drop out rate; I do not see any help, intellectually, from the university.

Yet I would hate to list the things I do see—students afraid to walk streets at night; students sneaking liquor into their rooms; too many disciplinary pros; guys with corvettes that think they are learning something; a government that is ineffective; a majority of grad students who teach to get a degree, not to teach; a stable administration that fails to ride with time; a majority of apathetic students . . . and I could go on and on.

And yet I have shown a list of problems, but where, you may ask, are your solutions. Look at the university as I have just done, find the pitfalls, unite in a thinking process—there is the solution—the students, ALL of THEM, must think about these things, and then, I am sure the problems will be met.

Asia

To the Editor:

I have just returned from a wonderful trip through Southeast Asia. Hong Kong is a marvelous place, but of course overcrowded, with refugees pouring in every day. Many of them sneak across the border or are hidden in ships for a large fee. There are many new building projects to help take care of the increasing population. These buildings may seem overcrowded with a family of five in a room ten feet by 10 feet, but still a vast improvement over the squatter shacks and sampans which can be seen most everywhere.

From the moment I arrived in the Saigon airport, the feeling of war could be felt. The Communist pressure from the north is swelling the population of Saigon. I asked several people about the situation, and most of them seemed not worried because "the American's are here." This apathy was very frightening. Foreign investments are being pulled out as fast as possible, because of the situation, which is similar also to Cambodia.

The two parts of Bankok are divided by a river, one modern city side on reclaimed river delta, and the other still a muddy delta where people live in houses on stilts and carry out life in boats on the river. The market comes to them in small dugout canoes, on a system of canals. The river is used for bathing, drinking and garbage disposal. The difference between both sides of the river is like night and day. I prefer the modern side with its screens and bottles of 6-12.

The wooden peaked-roof buildings of the palace compound in Bangkok were truly magnificent with art work depicting Thai legends covering them. The legends of the battles between the monkey king and his opponents can be seen everywhere in art and dancing.

And what wonderfully happy people the Thais are. I met one chap from England who claimed that the Thais have made him laugh again—something he said the Europeans had forgotten.

Singapore of the ideal climate of sea cooled winds is both a lovely city and a tremendous port. The city of Singapore on the island is very businesslike in British tradition, but across the causeway to the mainland where Johore is, the vast jungle and rubber plantations begin. Singapore is 75 per cent Chinese, and 24 per cent a mixture of European, Maylayan and Indian. The peninsula of Maylaya mainly Maylayan, but employing many of the Indian minority on the rubber plantations. With the new federation of Malaysia, there are high hopes for increasing economic development.

Book Review

To the Editor,

In her cursory review of Prize Stories 1963: The O. Henry Awards (Doubleday, 1963), Miss Susan Dreher fails to mention that one of the stories selected for the volume is "The Fine White Mist of Winter," by Syracusan Joyce Carol Oates. Miss Oates was valedictorian of the Class of 1960 at SU, and has been publishing fiction and criticism widely. This story alone should make the collection of interest to readers of your paper.

The Rat Trap

The Movie Critic

By Robert E. Fern

Many times a person will go to a movie and find it thorously taut and engrossing. He will think it is one of the most enjoyable he has seen. Then he picks up a newspaper and finds that the movie critic has "cut it" because of it not being cinematic art.

Before we can understand the film critic we must first understand that the motion picture should not be viewed just as entertainment. James E. Davis, former sculpture and painter, remarked that the only medium in which an artist can express the ideas of our time is in the motion picture.

The motion picture can achieve artistic merit; films such as "Sundays and Cybelle," "Viridiana" and "He Who Must Die," illustrate this. Directors such as Ingnar Bergman, John Ford, Orson Welles and Akira Kurosawa are all artists in their own right.

The motion picture integrates all the arts. The critic's task is not only to interpret and review the film's style but understand the film's use of visual images (all the facets of photography), editing (cutting from one scene to another), acting, dialogue and sound effects (music).

The most important thing for him to consider are the visual images, the moving pictures. It is the camera as an instrument for recording imaginative and factual material which must be first considered and criticized. Music, dialogue and sound must only add to the cinema, they should not supercede the visual images in importance.

The critic must view the motion picture as a whole and not just dabble with little faults, blowing them completely out of proportion.

Dudley Nichols, screen writer of "Stagecoach" and "Informer," said that film criticism was the most difficult career a man could chose.

Hamlet lends itself to various interpretations, even the interpretation that it is not art (T. S. Eliot). A good motion picture also presents controversy as to its meaning and artistic merit. We have only to look at the case of Roberto Rosellini's "The Miracle" to see the difference of opinion about a film.

Bosley Crowther, film critic of the New York Times, called "The Miracle," the "most overpowering and provacative film of the year." He called an end to pressure groups who didn't view motion pictures as art and seek to abolish them.

Cardinal Spellman summarized "The Miracle" as "a vile and harmful picture" that "artlessly and unjustly casts blasphemous darts of ridicule on the Christian faith."

ARMTOG, the firm which buys American movies for exhibition in the Soviet Union refused to distribute "The Miracle" on the grounds that it was pro-Catholic propaganda.

Besides all of his other problems the film critic must reckon with the fact that very few films are worth criticizing and films are made primarily to make money. Film makers actually fear criticism.

I am not saying that motion pictures should be snobby. On the contrary the very nature of the movies is to be for the many, not the few. Films should be better so people can better enjoy them.

As Dudley Nichols said, "It is the job of the film critic to show Hollywood how to make good movies because the movie industry just doesn't know; they lack penetrating criticism."

Mckee In Servant

Twenty-four year old, six foot, TOM McKEE is again a romantic figure on the Coronet Stage. Sporting a beard that made its preview in "Romeo and Juliet," Tom appears as Florindo in "The Servant of Two Masters."

This handsome graduate came to Syracuse from Northwestern University where his talents were recognized, and he was president of Silver Masque Dramatic Club, a member of the Honorary Dramatic Fraternity, and was voted the Best Actor of the Year in 1960 and 1961.

While at Northwestern, Tom had major roles in nine plays; including Father, in "Life With Father," and Mr. Oshira in "Teahouse of the August Moon." Also a singing star, Tom's achievements include the roles of Curley in "Oklahoma," Billy Bigelow in "Carousel," Cesar in "Fanny," and Emil DeBecque in "South Pacific."

Working Summer Stock at the "Weston Playhouse," Weston, Vermont, Tom appeared as Roger Henderson in "The Pleasure of His Company," The American in "The Deadly Game," Bert Jefferson in "The Man Who Came to Dinner," Dr. Sanderson in "Harvey," and the salesman in "Summer Smoke."

Syracuse audiences recently saw Tom as Mercutio in "Romeo and Juliet." Earlier he first appeared as Little Mary Sunshine's beau, Captain Jim. In "The Servant of Two Masters," McKee is involved in comic situations while searching out his lover, played by Leslie Meek.

J-Instructor Leaves Hill

By SANDY MYERS

A Hill journalism instructor who spent the last two summers living in a tent will leave this year for the University of Illinois.

Gene Gilmore, J-School instructor for six years, has accepted an assistant professorship at the Illinois School of Journalism and Communication.

Gilmore, an ardent camper, lived in the tent while he was working for the Rochester Times-Union.

Also a tennis, swimming, touch football and baseball enthusiast, Gilmore became interested in newspapers "because I found the work fascinating."

His first experience came in writing sports articles, at 50 cents each, for his hometown weekly while he was in high school. Since then, he has worked on several weeklies and semi-weeklies and as telegraph editor for the York (Pa.) Gazette and Daily.

Since coming to Syracuse Gilmore has worked summers in Rochester and part-time during the school year for the Syracuse Post-Standard.

Although fascinated by the "thrill of doing something and immediately seeing the result in print," Gilmore decided to try teaching, "since I'd always had it in the back of my mind."

"I tried it and liked it," he commented.

At Illinois, he will carry a nine-hour teaching load. Here, he teaches nine credit hours, plus three hours teaching credit for his work as executive secretary of the Empire State School Press Association.

ESSPA is an organization for high school newspaper staffs.

GENE GILMORE

Gilmore's "ideal" newspaper would include the thoroughness of the New York Times, the courage of the old St. Louis Post-Dispatch and the makeup of the New York Herald Tribune.

"But teachers tend to stand back more than people in the profession. They have more time to examine newspapers," he said.

Changes in newspapers over the past decade, Gilmore said, include printing less "trivia" and concentrating more on world and social problems.

Attributing this to a higher intellectual and cultutral level, he noted, "newspapers realize the magazines were stealing much of their thunder." Newspapers then began doing more depth and interpretive stories on social issues."

More fellowships and scholarships would help contribute to a better school, Gilmore believes.

Gilmore, who is president of the Syracuse chapter of the New York State committee to abolish capital punishment, has three children, aged 6, 9 and 13.

Work Starts On IBM Floor

Work started yesterday on refurbishing the first floor of Machinery Hall for the new Syracuse University Computor center.

The center is currently in Hinds Hall. It will replace ROTC headquarters which has relocated in Archbold Gymnasium. The move will be made July 1.

In its new home the center will occupy 6,000 square feet as opposed to its current 1,600 square feet.

Two new IBM machines, a 7070 system and a 1401, will replace the current computor equipment.

The following is the Arab side of the Arab-Israeli dispute. It is written by Ahmed El-Dersh, a SU graduate student, in reply to the recently published article, by three Jewish students, in the Jan.

To the Editor:

In discussing the claims of the Zionist to Israel as their homeland, one can argue that if all claims by ancient peoples were to be enforced now (nearly two thousands years in this case) "there would be no end of distribution of territories and uprooting of people around the world" as Prof. Toynbe the leading historian stated when addressing McGill University students in Canada two years ago.

However, I will, for the sake of argument, accept the point taken by the group who wrote the article published May 2, namely, the Balfour Declaration of Nov. 2, 1917 as my starting point. I would not discuss the legality of the British Government Declaration or whether Britain had the right to distribute what territories among whom and for what goals. Let us proceed by stating the so-called Balfour Declaration. It had been included in a letter sent by A. W. James Balfour, a British Statesman, to a British Zionist, Lord Roteshild.

Foreign Office
Nov. 2, 1917

Dear Lord Rotschild,

I have much pleasure in conveying to you, on behalf of His Majesty's Government, the following "Declaration of sympathy with Jewish Zionist aspirations" which has been submitted to, and approved by, the cabinet.

"His Majesty's Government views with favour the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people, and will use their best endeavors to facilitate the achievement of this subject, it being clearly understood that nothing shall be done which may prejudice the civil and religious rights of existing non-Jewish communities in Palestine, or the rights and political status enjoyed by Jews in any other country."

I should be grateful if you would bring this declaration to the knowledge of the Zionist Federation,

Yours,
(signed)
A. W. James Balfour

This letter had been written during World War I shortly after the Turkish forces had been driven out of Arabia, and shortly before the British forces entered Jerusalem. Two factors led the British government to take such a position:

1—The desire of the British government and the people to express their very deep and sincere sympathy for the Jewish refugees in their hour of bitter suffering.

2—Britain's goal, at that time, was to secure active Jewish support in winning the war.

This statement, known today as the Balfour Declaration, had been written with great care, after weighing every word and phrase. The present question is: What does this Declaration declare?

(1) It is just a "Declaration of sympathy with Jewish Zionist aspiration", and it is not by any means a pledge to support any specific policy or any particular procedure. Nevertheless, Zionists all over the world persistently claim it to be of this nature. This led the British Government in June, 1922 to issue the following white paper:

"Unauthorized statements have been made to the effect that the purpose in view is to create a wholly Jewish Palestine. Phrases have been used such as that Palestine is to become 'as Jewish as England is English'. His Majesty's Government regards any such expectation is impracticable, and have no such aim in view" (see the British Government White Paper of June, 1922, cmd. 1700, His Majesty's stationary office, London).

(2) Another fact in this respect, is that the world Zionist organization, in presenting their request to the British Government, through their leader Dr. Weismann, had attached the specific wording for such proposed statement. The wording of that statement was:

"His Majesty's Government views with favour the re-establishment of Palestine as the National Home of the Jewish people."

Three significant changes had been made by the British Government in the proposed Statement:

1—Re - establishment had been changed to establishment. In this way the British government denied the existence of an historic Jewish right or claim in Palestine.

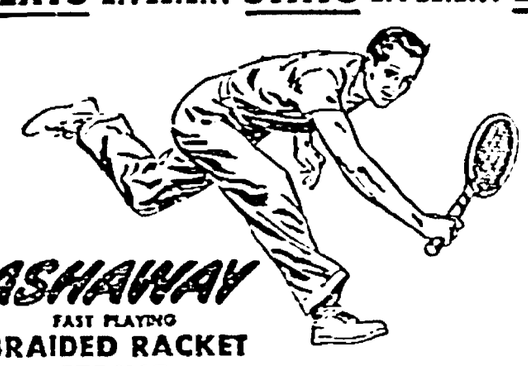
2—Of Palestine was changed to in Palestine. In this way the British Government denounced the possible claim that the whole of Palestine as a unit was included, rather than a portion within Palestine.

3—As the National Home was changed to of a national home, thus the erection of a Jewish national state rather than the provision, by the British Government, of a national home was repudiated.

However, Zionists all over the world have been persistently repeating their wording of the statement. Such persistence from the side of the Zionist circles have left the illusion that their statement is the correct one. This led the British government in her white paper referred to above to deny this interpretation:

"When it is asked what is meant by the development of the Jewish National Home in Palestine, it may be answered that it is not the imposition of a Jewish nationality upon the inhabitants of Palestine as a whole, but the further development of the existing Jewish community, with the assistance of Jews in parts of the world, in order that it may become a centre in which the Jewish people as a whole may take, on grounds of religion and race, an interest and a pride . . ." (British Government white paper, op. cit.)

A third point is that the Balfour Declaration has safeguarded the rights of Arab people then living in Palestine, The fulfillment of the promise, was in fact, conditioned by this stipulation.



If the Balfour Declaration is to be referred to as the back document controlling the organization and conduct of the so called "Israel", am I not fair in judging her on the basis of her charter?

If this is not the legal cause behind the existence of the so-called "Israel", there is but one cause: war and sheer force, and technically, there is still a state of war.

SU Grad Survey

How graduate students pay for their education is the topic for a survey now being conducted by the University of Chicago National Opinion Research Center.

James McIntosh, a Hill graduate assistant in sociology, will send questionnaires to more than 300 Syracuse graduate students later this week as part of the survey.

Sponsored by the National Science Foundation, the study attempts to find how future engineers, scientists and other professional workers are supported during graduate study.

More than 25,000 graduate students in 37 fields at 130 institutions will be questioned about sources and amounts of study stipends, academic workload and degree programs, how much they earn from outside employment and career plans.

Questionnaires will be sent to students in most major fields except education, law, medicine and the humanities other than English. It will include agriculture, biology and physical sciences, engineering, English, forestry, geography, mathematics, history, psychology and the social sciences.

Students will be asked to report their academic and non-academic expenditures, savings and debts.

The research will also show how wives contribute to their husband's education, said Peter Rossi, NORC director.

Rossi continued, "If we are losing valuable individuals because of financial pressures, we should obtain a clear picture of how these stresses operate."

"The results of this survey will be helpful in the formation of a national policy on graduate fellowships and scholarships," he said.

This will be the first study on the subject to combine large-scale coverage with depth.

A preliminary report will be issued in the fall, followed by a detailed report.

Rossi said however, effects of the study will not be felt through legislaltive measures for several years.

Harvard Prof Speaks Today

Dr. Jerome Bruner, phychology professor at Harvard University, will speak on "Word and Thought" 4 p.m. today in Gifford Auditorium.

Bruner received his B.A. degree from Duke, and his masters and doctorate degrees from Harvard. His major field of interest is human thought processes, including perception, memory, thinking and atitude formations.

Currently chairman of the curriculum study group of the National Academy of Sciences, Bruner has been a Guggenheim fellow and has acted as consultant on psychological problems to the Departments of State, Navy and Defense.

Piety Starter

SOPHOMORE RIGHTHANDER PHIL SCHOFF, shown here pitching against the University of Rochester, will start for the Orange this afternoon against Hobart at Lew Carr Field. Game time is 3 p.m.

Schoff Faces Hobart

If at first you succeed, try it again.

When they finally got the chance, Syracuse's baseball team made its first appearance at home—a more than mildly successful appearance with their 19-2 victory over visiting Rochester.

Soph Phil Schoff was given his first starting role and in the six innings he pitched, he scattered six hits and pitched scoreless ball after the first inning.

Today at Lew Carr Field, they are trying it again. Syracuse is making its second appearance at home. Phil Schoff is scheduled to make his second start.

The contest, against the visitors from Hobart, will begin at 3 p.m.

For the hosting Orangemen, today's game will be their 11th of the year. Before yesterday's rescheduled game with Cornell, they owned a 4-5 record.

Until Friday's outbreak in the hitting department, the lack of wood support had been the major problem of Kleinhan's crew. They had been held to little more than three runs per game.

But the 19 hits unloaded against Rochester, were spread evenly among the batting order, for 19 runs. And nearly everyone finished with some padding added to his batting average.

The squad has a total of two home runs all year. Saturday, they powered three. Most of the power came from the bottom of the batting order.

The last four batters accounted for more than half of the hits and all of the home runs, and were a large factor in getting on base. Of the 24 outs the team made, the last four positions made but five.

HILL ACTION

Baseball

Syracuse meets Hobart at Lew Carr Field at 3 p.m.

Golf

The Hill varsity golf squad plays Colgate at T.C. at 3 p.m. this afternoon. The frosh play at 1:30 p.m.

Tennis

St. Lawrence plays the Hill varsity on the Skytop courts at 2 p.m.

Hoop Tourney

The Syracuse University basketball team will compete in the Hurricane Classic at Miami Beach Dec. 27-28.

Army, Princeton and Miami are the other participants in the 1963 classic.

It will be Syracuse's first appearance in the tournament which is hosted by the University of Miami.

With Hill basketball fortunes on the rise and a good frosh group joining the varsity next season, coach Fred Lewis feels that his varsity will be strong enough to hit the tournament trail.

Cub Lacrossemen In Weekend Win

Following the losing opener at Cornell, the frosh stickmen managed a split in two more away games—a 13-9 victory over Penn State and a 14-9 loss to Hobart.

Against Penn State, SU dominated the first half of play and led the Nittany Lions 8-3. However, the Lions came back during SU's third period lapse to within two goals of the Orange. Goals by attackman Al Starling and middie Jim Bond crushed the State rally.

However, the Orange caught fire and gained a 7-4 half-time lead. The Hobart frosh got hot and rattled off seven consecutive goals in the third quarter before SU could score. Hogart added another goal during the quarter.

The fourth quarter showed Hobart adding three more for the final 15-9 count.

The starting lineup for the Tangerines features Dick Bliss, Dick Wightman and Steve Beaudry on attack. Midfield is S.U.'s strongest position, with captain Al Starling, Jim Bond and Dave Stolp on the first team.

The defense is the source of inexperience. Of the first seven defenders, only Dick Zimmerman has handled a stick before.

In the nets, converted attackman Ken Paul was given credit by Simmons for his fine first performance as a goalie.

Runners Prep For Only Home Meet

DOUBLE WINNER MOUNCEY FERGUSON jogs around the Archbold track. Ferguson won the mile and half mile against West Virginia and Pitt. He will be entered in those events against Colgate.

The full Syracuse track and field team is being put through its paces this week in the stadium between the squads only dual and triangular meets of the season.

Syracuse was second in a meet at West Virginia Saturday with Pitt the winner and West Virginia third.

Saturday in Archbold Stadium the Orangemen host Colgate in the only home meet of the spring season.

The rest of the schedule involves relay teams with only a few individual events.

Last season Colgate tied Syracuse in a meet at Hamilton. The Red Raiders crushed Alfred University Saturday 118-22.

Saturday's meet shapes up to have some close personal duels. Colgate sprint sensation Sammy Amukun was kept under wraps with coach Jack Warner entering the Ugandan in only one event, the 440-yard run.

In the event Amukun set a new track record of 48.2 in winning the event.

Syracuse's quarter miler Cal Evans was second at West Virginia with a 48.3 time.

Colgate valuter Bill Terry cleared 13-6 against Alfred. Chan Rudd of Syracuse has also cleared that height.

Syracuse figures to be strong in the running events with Colgate strong in the field events.

Library Adds Rare Collections

If it is true that something rare or hard-to-get is always more desirable than the ordinary, students should be flocking to the rare book room of the main library.

Nestled on the third floor of the library, the Lena R. Arents Rare Book Room has recently acquired manuscripts and books of unusual interest, ranging in topics from the letters of "Lawrence of Arabia" to an early German work on the possibilities of space travel.

The library has acquired an original letter dated Aug. 26, no year, from Henrire Balzac to M. Saint-Julien. Three original letters from Sir Winston Churchill to Frank Harris, dated 1905, are other additions.

Three original letters of Thomas E. Lawrence ("Lawrence of Arabia") are dated 1925-26, and 1935.

Additions to the library manuscripts also include an original letter by Benjamin Franklin dated July 2, 1787. He signed it as "President of the Supreme Executive Council of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania."

A recent gift by "an anonymous group of friends" of the library is an inscribed copy of Robert Frost's "North of Boston."

Dean and Mrs. Frank Piskor donated four books to the library collection. They are by Alfred Noyes, Ezra Pound, John Cowper Powys and Carl Sandburg.

Chancellor William P. Tolley has donated six books from his collection to the Rare Book Room. Three of the novels are by Joseph Conrad, "Admiralty Papers," "Mirror of the Sea" and "Typhoon."

Two volumes of Rudyard Kipling's "Le livre de la jungle et Le deuxieme livre de la jungle" are also Tolley's donations.

The library also made a selection of purchases with funds provided by Nancy Woodson Spire. One of these purchases is a copy of "Laws of Her Majestie's Colony of New York" from the colony in 1710.

There is also a charter granted by His Majesty Charles II to the Colony of Rhode Island, dated 1767. Other historical books, manuscripts, and constitutions were purchased for this collection.

All requests will be filed by class, and action will be taken on them in the order of the numbers originally drawn.

All requests for room reassignment will be considered during the summer. Students will be notified by Sept. 1.

'Ons' Feature Elegance

By SANDI EHRLICH
Junior Editor

The large, plain white covered book students are carrying is the 1963 Onondagan. Its 386 pages are crammed with "the symbols of college life," as the book's editor-in-chief Sandra Joy worded it in her acknowledgements.

HENRY LEE, senior class president glances over an issue of the Onondagan, which is being distributed this week.

Elegance and simplicity are the keynotes of the book from the gold seal on the cover to the last white page.

The seal and motto of the university are the theme of the book. While this is overplayed, particularly on the inside covers, the book is well coordinated and has good continuity.

Photography and layout are excellent throughout the "On." Candids are clever, and most of the group pictures do not look stiffly posed. Informal pictures of the administration members capture their personalities rather than merely their office poses.

A 44-page introduction including the history of the class of '63, is the highlight of the book. Although the copy becomes trite at times, the words convey a comprehensive picture of SU and cover many events.

This introduction gives the editors a chance to be "arty" and the results are good. The photographs are outstanding in this section, and layout especially attractive.

The Greeks section features the fraternity and sorority pictures combined in alphabetical order, which makes the section attractive. The candids enliven this normally dull section of the book.

The 1963 Onondagan presents an attractive and sophisticated picture of Syracuse University. It will surely recall many memories when the class of 1963 is long gone from the Hill.

UAR Ambassador Speaks on Unity

Salah El Abd, Minister of the Embassy of the United Arab Republic, will lecture on "Arab Unity and Nationalism" tonight at 8 p.m. in Maxwell Auditorium.

The United Arab Republic has received much attention lately as a result of developments in Syria, Iraq, Yemen and Jordan. Syria, Iraq and the United Arab Republic announced plans recently to join their nations in one large federation which would eventually include all the Arab states.

A graduate of the University of Cairo, El Abd has been a member of the Foreign Service since 1948. Diplomatic missions have taken him to New Delhi, the Sudan and now Washington.

After presenting his address, which is open to the public, Mr. El Abd will answer questions.

SALAH EL ABD

Willful Irresponsibility

Once again segments of the Syracuse University family have demonstrated a lack of responsibility, and as is always the case, the entire university is suffering.

Conditions in the H.B. Crouse snack room became so filthy recently, that the College Vending Corporation has closed this meeting place. Major complaint of the supply house was that cups, wrappers, cigarettes and food were being disposed on the floors and chair rather than in receptacles provided.

These actions are inexcusable and should be dealt with. It seems reasonable that such "destruction" of university property is a misdemeanor and should be dealt with by the dean of men or women or by student courts.

Inconsiderate acts such as grinding lighted cigarettes into a classroom floor must be stopped. And the only solution is penalties.

The university cannot, forever, cling to the juvenile procedure of penalizing the whole for acts of the part, hoping that "the word will get spread around and the situation will be corrected."

This doesn't work. Did the shutting down of elevators in Dell Plain accomplish anything other than making 400 innocent students climb stairs?

Does a shutting of a dorm library or the closing of a recreation room actually punish the guilty student. It does not—it only punishes innocent bystanders.

Something has to be done to correct this situation, but penalizing the whole university will not stop these will malicious acts.

The only way to stop "crimes" is through a judicial system, which levies penalties for illegal acts.

Faculty Decision

Initial plans for a faculty building, which would reportedly cost $100,000 are now being considered by members of the faculty club.

In a suggestion that came out of the Sagamore Conference, student leaders urged that the faculty members have their own private club within a university union.

We urge that the faculty members, before going ahead with plans for their own building, consider the possibility of being a part of a university union.

Putting the faculty in the same building would at least pacify one of the main student objections to the teaching staff — that the staff doesn't attempt, or doesn't have time to socially and intellectually mix with the students. Living in the same edifice, the two groups couldn't avoid "unwanted contact."

ALTERNATIVES

For Whites Only

By Ron Corwin

"With liberty and justice for all."

* * *

Well, it was quiet in Birmingham yeserday. It might be quiet there this morning. Reverend Martin Luther King, leader of the protest, announced that there would be a halt to demonstrations since it appeared that the business community of Birmingham was ready to talk seriously about civil rights.

City officials, however, are still amusing themselves. Soon after Dr. King issued his statement, he was picked up by police and jailed on a month-old charge. He received the maximum penalty for marching without a permit — a $100 fine and 108 days in jail.

So for a while it will be quiet in Birmingham. During the lull it may be worthwhile to reflect on all those little phrases we learn as children and we regurgitate as adults.

Like, "With liberty and justice for all."

High pressure fire hoses are turned on people demonstrating for their "guaranteed" rights as citizens. High pressure fire hoses. The stream from one of the hoses picked up a man and flipped him over and then sent him "skittering along the grass."

We memorize, "All men are created equal and endowed by their creator with certain inalienable rights."

Dogs are used to turn back men . . . and women . . . and children who are struggling for their freedom. Dogs. We learn about the "right to assemble."

We sing, "God bless America, land that I love." Dogs—especially trained to chase Negroes.

Comissioner of Health Education and Welfare, Eugene Conner, calls for the dogs. A crowd of white onlookers strains to watch. An officer of the law is holding them back. "Let those people come to the corner, sergeant, I want them to see the dogs work. Watch the niggers run," says Conner.

We sing, "What so proudly we hail."

Reverend Shuttlesworth, head of the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights stands in front of a church. "Don't turn the hoses on our church," ask the Negroes. The church is drenched by the water.

Shuttlesworth is hurled against a wall—a church wall. And then is taken to the hospital in an ambulance. Conners arrives too late.

"I waited a week to see Shuttlesworth get hit with a hose. I'm sorry I missed it." But, Mr. Conners, you're a city official. You're in charge of everyone's welfare. You're in charge of the police action. Reverend Shuttlesworth was taken off in an ambulance, sir. "I wish they'd carried him away in a hearse," replies Conner.

We learn, "to establish justice . . . and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity."

A woman wouldn't get off the sidewalk. Five policemen drop her to the ground. One pins her there—with his knee on her neck. What a brave, brave man.

We sing, "O'er the land of the free, and the home of the brave."

Electric probes used for herding cattle are used to move the "Freedom walkers" to jail by giving them electric shocks. Their crime: disturbing the peace.

We read about the "right of assembly." We are taught about Amendment VIII to the Constitution, ". . . nor cruel and unusual punishments inflicted."

Electric shock for students who thought that they could walk from Georgia to Mississippi with 1 sign: "Eat at Joe's; White or Black."

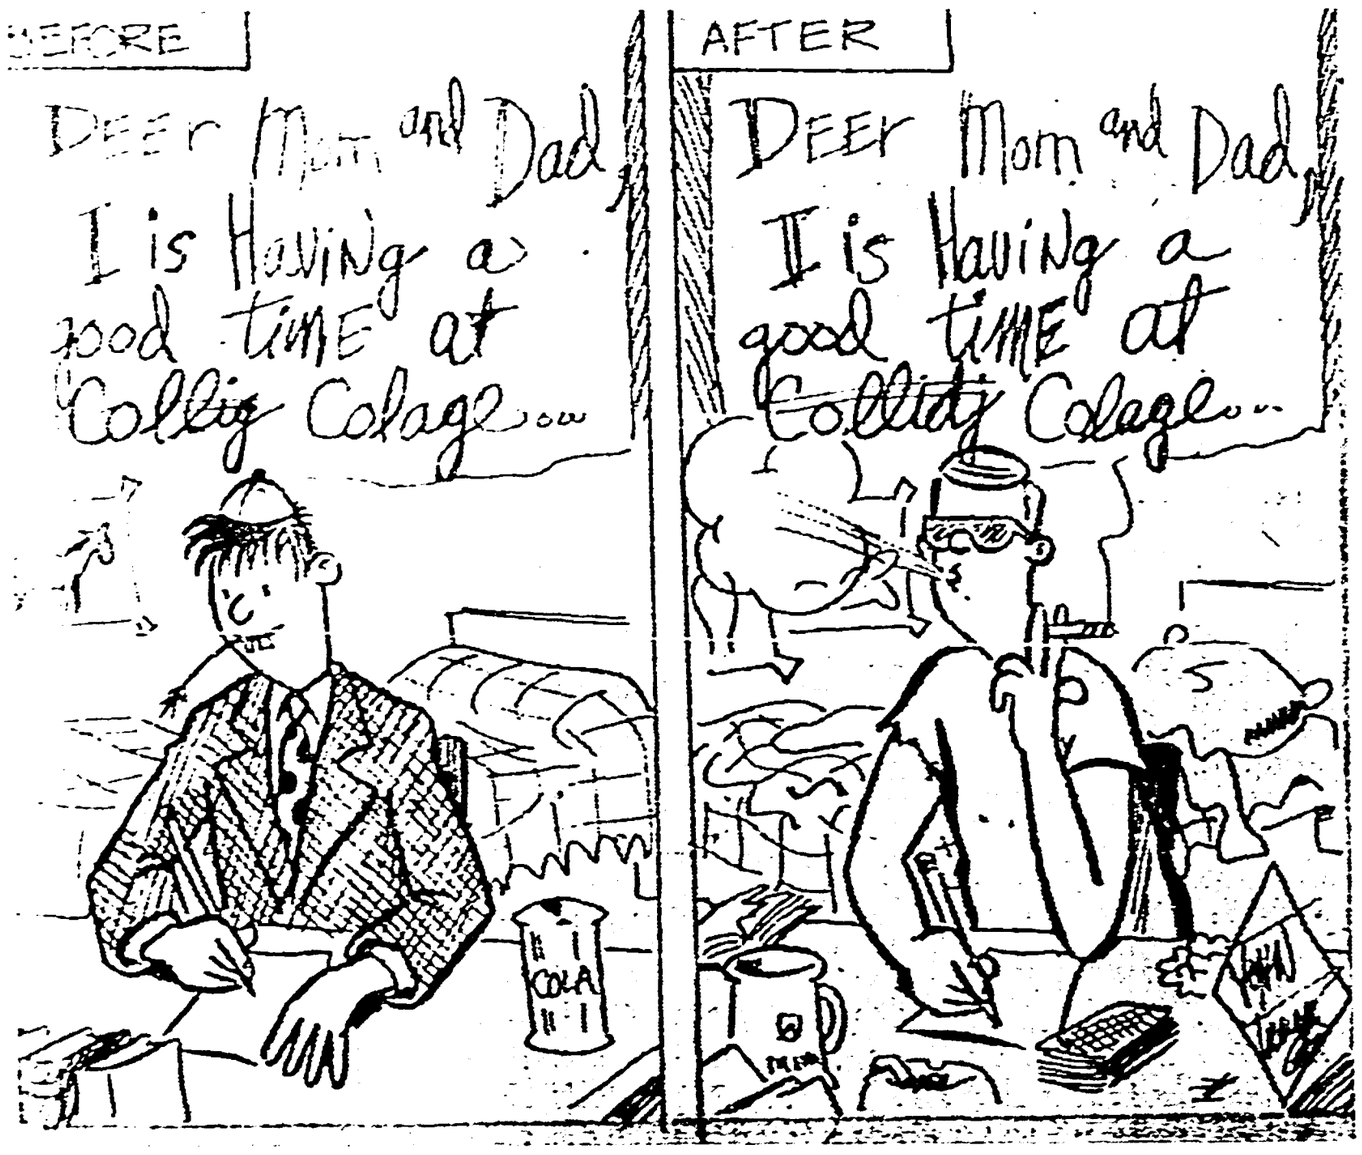
We learn, "conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal."

Mississippi voter registration. Four Negroes are attempting to register. The town sheriff and two friends enter the office.

Without warning the Sheriff strikes one of the Negroes with a "blunt instrument" several times. The other men with the Sheriff also strike. They hit the other two Negroes attempting to register.

We study Amendment XV. "The right of the citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or any state, on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude."

We learn little phrases. We memorize eloquent statements. We sing songs. We say, "Give me your huddled masses . . . yearning to breathe free." We pledge our allegiance.



If Americans can stop patting each other on the back long enough to look around we can see that we've created Birmingham. Its our handiwork.

But this morning in Syracuse it will be quiet. For Syracuse is a subtle Birmingham. the defacto school segregation and the Negro ghetto (politely called the 15th Ward) are only slightly more sophisticated than the Birmingham sign, "For Whites Only."

Rev. King says, "Some will go to jail. Some will die. But if that is the price some must pay so that other's san enjoy their freedom than it will be paid."

In America, in 1963, people are going to jail, are being bitten by dogs, beaten with sticks, drenched by hoses and are dying. All of this so that "liberty and justice for all" will someday really mean something — something more than liberty and justice for whites only.

LETTERS

Letters

To the Editor:

Your editorial on unsigned letters points out the symptom, but does not deal with the disease. You claim that the fiber of these letter writers is weak and then you stop. Surely, calling these people names will accomplish little. It would be more constructive (though perhaps frightening) to examine the causes and implications of this fear.

In the majority of cases the fear does not have a physical, economic or legal base. The germ is social pressure and its carrier is society. Vestiges of the childhood axiom about speaking only when spoken to, remain with us. The guy who says what he feels is a loud-mouth trouble maker and the dissatisified person has something wrong with him. Don't get involved, it will only lead to problems; the well travelled road is safest. These cliches are representative of the atmosphere which produces anonymous letter writers.

The implications of this "silence is golden" attitude are vast. For instance, look at freedom of speech. What good is a constitutional amendment guaranteeing free speech, when one person is afraid to claim personal responsibility for a statement regarding the lack of spirit at crew races, and another is reluctant to admit that he or she is against prejudice? This is not to imply that freedom of speech is nonexistent—it only means that glowing phrases on a parched document are not enough, and perhaps we should start worrying about how free we really are. History may show that the word is more powerful than the sword, but it also teaches that silence is deadly.

Last Day For 'Servant'

LAST SHOWING of "The Servant of Two Masters," will be at 8:30 p.m. today at Boar's Head Theater in the Drama Building.

An irate and blundering father, Richard Folmer, appears as Doctordi in the current dramatic production of "The Servant of Two Masters." While majoring in English, Folmer plans for a career in the theater.

Folmer, who calls himself a method actor, has proven to be talented in both serious and comic roles. Recently, as Lord Capulet, in "Romeo and Juliet" his furious cry of "I will not be foresworn!" caused a chill in the spines of the audience. This week, his jovial jaunce and inpenetrable density create shakes of laughter.

Folmer's greatest achievement to date must certainly be said to be his performance as Hamm in "Endgame." "Endgame," an example of Theater of the Absurb, may be said to be a continuous spiraling of the emotional gamut. The play which was presented last night was also in the Yale Drama Competition. Folmer was acclaimed as having given the best performance at the competition.

While at Syracuse, Folmer has appeared as Garcia in "No Exit," the lieutenant in "The Fisherman," the husband in "Hello Out There," and the captain in "Anything Goes."

Now he brings his exceptional ability into a lighter vein, and may be seen on the Coronet Stage in the closing performance of "The Servant of Two Masters," directed by Manfred Bormann.

Krasner at RI Festival

Prof. Louis Krasner of the Syracuse University School of Music, will be soloist at the University of Rhode Island Festival of Contemporary Arts on May 14. Krasner plays the Berg Violin Concerto, a score written for him by the late composer.

He will also meet along with other violinists at Tanglewood on August 18 and 19 with Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony and the chief coordinator of the meeting.

Writing Contest

Ramparts, the National Catholic Journal, announces awards totaling $4,000 for original poetry and short stories.

Manuscripts for the short story contest must be received by Ramparts at 1132 Chestnut St., Menlo Park, California by October 1, 1963. The deadline for poetry manuscripts is January 1, 1964.

There are "no restrictions" on topics. Poetry manuscripts must be at least 500 lines—of one poem or a group of poems. Short stories must be from 3,000 to 7,000 words.

Awards in both categories are $1,000 for the first prize, $500 for the second prize, $200 for the third prize and three honorable mentions of $100 each.

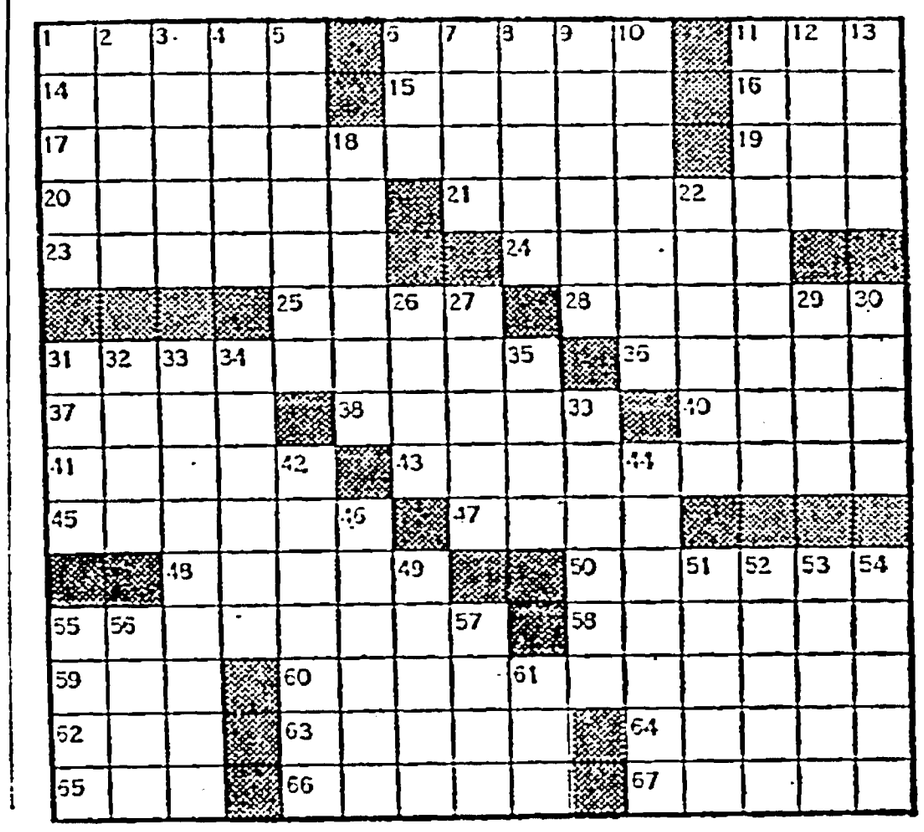
For further instructions write to Ramparts.

JSL Chooses New Officers

Joint Student Legislature has chosen new officers for the next semester, announced Jay Litwin, JSL speaker.

Freshman Ruth Jelline, is the new secretary. Sophomore Marshall Snierson, is legislative commissioner.

Chairmen of standing committees were also named. They are: Student Conduct and Welfare, Kathy Kapsol, sophomore; Local and National Affairs, Robert Osofsky, freshman; Government Structures, William Christie, sophomore; Organizations, J. Nelson Happy, junior.



Two senators-at-large were named to the Steering Committee, Litwin said. They are Norman Begun, a junior, and Bruce Rosenstein, a sophomore.

Arab-Israeli Reply: Part II

Editor's Note:

The following is the second of a series of articles replying to the recently published article by three Jewish students on the history of the Arab-Israeli situation. This part of the reply is written by Omar Khatib, an Arab graduate student at Syracuse.

In the last four decades, Zionists have succeeded in shaping world opinion about the status of, and situation in, Palestine. Moreover, the sufferings of Jews in Nazi Germany have aided the Zionist efforts to fulfill the political attempt to establish a Jewish state in a country belonging to another people.

Public opinion in the West, while still sympathetic and concerned over the fate of world Jewry, has begun to doubt the morality and justice of the Zionist claim to Palestine and the wisdom of continuing the hitherto unqualified moral, financial, and military support of Israel. The Americans have been intentionally kept in the dark and presented with distorted facts. The Zionists are disturbed by this American awakening and have intensified their pressure to stem change of attitude towards Israel.

The following is intended to serve as a guide to all those who are in search of the truth: The basic issue involved in the Palestine question is the uprooting and dispossession of an entire nation in order to make room for alien Jews, from all parts of the world.

They have been herded into Palestine in order to fulfill the political aspiration of a major ideological movement —Zionism.

World opinion has been led to believe that the Palestinian dispute is a conflict between Israel and the Arab states over the sovereignity of territory which the Arab states regard as part of their domain, while the Israelis claim it to be theirs by reason of the Balfour Declaration of 1917, the U.N. Partition Resolution of 1947, and what is commonly referred to as the "Biblical Promise."

The truth of the matter is, the Palestinian conflict is first and foremost a dispute between Israel and the Palestine Arabs, the legal owners of the country.

The right of the Palestine Arabs rests on three distinct foundations: First, the natural right of a people to remain in possession of the land of their birth; second, that the Palestine Arabs have had uninterrupted occupation of this land for over 1300 years, and third, that they are still the legal owners of the homes and lands in which the Israelis now live and work.

Political conquest has never been known to abolish private property. The position that the Arab States take on this dispute, on the other hand, is one that supports the Palestine Arabs; no solution can be complete if it is not accepted by the Palestine Arabs.

The "Balfour Declaration" was both vague and contradictory. On the one hand, it "viewed with favor the establishment in Palestine of a national home the Jewish people" without making clear what a national home really meant; on the other hand, it stipulated that it was to be "clearly understood that nothing shall be done which may prejuidice the civil and religious rights of existing non-Jewish communities in Palestine."

In other words, if the promise was sincere, the safeguarding clause would be sufficient to nullify the rest of the undertaking.

The British Government was deliberately vague because it wanted Zionist support for the Western Alliance during a vary dark hour of World War I and it had no desire to tie its hands in the future. At no time did the British Government intend the "national home" to mean a Jewish State.

Even in November 1947, when the question of the partition of Palestine come to the vote in the U.N. the British delegate abstained, which proves conclusively that the authors of the Balfour Declaration consistently opposed the idea of the creation of Israel against the wishes of the Arab majority.

The Zionist slogans about the "biblical and historical rights" of the Jews to Palestine are, to say the least, unfounded. The Divine Promise, even if taken literally, must be viewed in its entirety and not merely those parts which are favorable to the Jews.

The Promise was made to "Abraham and his seed." It therefore applied equally to the Arabs, Moslems and Christians, who are all the descendants of Abraham's eldest son Ishamel, and not only the Jews, who are reputedly the descendants of his second son Isaac. Moreover, there is nothing in the Holy Bible which limits the promise to those who today describe themselves as "Jews", whether or not they are the actual descendants of the early Hebrews.

It is sheer irony to talk of Jewish aliens from all the corners of the world "coming home" to a land they had never seen to live in the homes of the uprooted Moslem and Christian inhabitants of the Holy Land.

Is it true that the Palestine Arabs were urged to stay? I need only mention one of the outstanding incidents which played a crucial role in the creation of the refugee problem. This incident shocked the world because of the intensity of its brutality.

On April 9 1948, the village of Deir Yasin, to the west of the city of Jerusalem, was attacked by strong Zionist forces. During the attack 250 men, women, and children were massacred.

"Just as they claim credit for the British decision to leave Palestine as being the result of the terrorist attacks on British troops, so later, they justified the massacre at Deir Yason because it led to the panic of the remaining Arabs and so lessened the Jewish casualties."

Jon Kimche, in his book "The Seven Fallen Pillars; The Middle East 1912-1952", describes the attack as, "the darkest stain on the Jewish record," then he continues, "it is historically important because it was to become the beginning of the second legend with which the terrorists sought to save their cause and justify their deeds."

Dov Joseph, Israeli Governor of Jerusalem, called this tragedy a "deliberate and unprovoked attack"; while British historian Arnold Toynbee describes it as "an evil deed . . comparable to crimes committed against the Jews by the Nazis." He added: "The Arab blood of April 9th at Deir Yasin was on the head of Irgun; the explosions after May 1948 were on the head of Israel."

The story of the Palestine tragedy can best be concluded with the statement of Nathan Chofshi, a member of the first Zionist group which emigrated from Russia to Palestine in 1908, and incidently included David Ben-Gurion.

Chofshi, who still lives in Palestine, said:

"In the last analysis, these are the bare facts which strike our eyes: Here was a people who lived on its own land for 1300 years. We came and turned the native Arabs into tragic refugees. And still we dare to slander and malign them, to besmirch their name. Instead of being deeply ashamed of what we did and of trying to undo some of the evil we committed by helping these unfortunate refugees, we justify our terrible acts and even attempt to glorify them."

LIBERAL - CONSERVATIVE DEBATE!
"CAN MORE BE DONE ABOUT CUBA?"
Dr. Bouscaren of LeMoyne vs. Dr. Bennett of Maxwell
TODAY - 4:30 p.m. - Maxwell Aud.
Sponsored by Young Americans for Freedom

Does a man really take unfair advantage of women when he uses Mennen Skin Bracer?

All depends on why he uses it.

Most men simply think Menthol-Iced Skin Bracer is the best after-shave lotion around. Because it cools rather than burns. Because it helps heal shaving nicks and scrapes. Because it helps prevent blemishes.

So who can blame them if Bracer's crisp, long-lasting aroma just happens to affect women so remarkably?

Of course, some men may use Mennen Skin Bracer because of this effect.

How intelligent!

Our PHOENIX is rising from the ashes tho' she still has damp feet.

are intact and fresh

Our parcel post deliveries have been safe from smoke or water damage. The firemen's tarpaulin efficiently saved all our open stock from potential harm. Water loss was confined to rear stock and cellar, which sure got sloshed around. The moppers have been doing thoro drying, the smoke fumigators have sprayed and the window cleaners have our glass shining.

Spring Study

ON MAY 1 it snowed, and yesterday, on May 8, it poured. But between, temperatures soared to 80 degrees, and MARTHA JOHANEK, a freshman in the college of Liberal Arts, was among the many Hill students who took advantage of the sun and high temperatures to study on the quad.

SCE Will Meet Today

The newly formed Syracuse Committee on Equality will meet for the first time at 4:15 p.m. today in 209 Women's Bldg.

The group's constitution was approved by Joint Student Legislature last week. The committee was formed, a spokesman said, to fill a need "sorely lacking on this campus."

At the meeting, disposal of profits from the Greek Coloring Book will be discussed. The Student Union Building Fund, for which profits were originally earmarked, refused the money after the book was published.

How Syracusans can help in the Birmingham, Ala., crisis and a possible demonstration on May 17 will also be discussed.

May 17 is the ninth anniversary of the Supreme Court desegregation law.

Elections will be held and an adviser appointed.

All students and faculty members are invited to attend the meeting.

Road Builders Tap Goodman

Dr. Louis J. Goodman, associate professor of civil engineering, has been reelected vice president of the northeastern district of the education division of the American Road Builders Association.

The national group is composed of state highway department officials, road building contractors and educators concerned with the need for more highways.

The educational division currently is engaged in a study of how young men can prepare better for careers in the subprofessional aspects of highway engineering.

Facing Off

PRACTICE is being held daily for the Syracuse lacrosse squad. Two "aggressors" face off in a recent session.

With Injuries and Ifs, Spring Football Drills End

By BERNIE MacCALLUM and BILL CRONAUER

A very hard hitting team with excellent potential, a flock of "ifs" and a top frosh back are the product of Hill spring grid practice which ended Tuesday.

The trail between Manley Field and the infirmary was well worn. Crutches, casts and bandages will be discarded and concealed Friday when the squad assembles for team pictures.

Hit Hard

"We hit real good and hard this spring. There is a lot of potential there," Coach Schwartzwalder said yesterday. "We've still got some teaching to do you saw from Saturday's game. There were mistakes in wholesale quantities out there," Ben said. "We need more finesse and know how and have to fit the pieces together."

Sophomore to be Ron Oyer is Schwartzwalders number one right halfback. "He was real impressive," the coach said. "He can step right in there and play ball for us."

Depth Chart

The final depth chart which will be in effect when practice starts in the fall has Mike Koski, Walley Mahle, and a guy by the name of Nance in the backfield with Oyer.

In position shuffling Gerry Everling was moved from left guard to inside tackle behind Wilhelm. John Paglio has been switched to left guard.

The chart shows the Orangemen with good depth on the second unit. The second backfield unit has Rich King, Billy Hunter, Nat Duckett and Charlie Brown.

Injuries

Spring drill filled the infirmary with banged gridders. In the backfield Mahle, Koski and Brown missed a good part of the off season practice sessions.

In the line Everling, Meehan, Waxman, Allen and Jim Marchak suffered bruises of one kind or another.

Koski's is the only injury that might carry over into the fall.

"We're hopeful that Mike's and the other injuries will heal up over the summer," Ben said.

Koski is one in a series of "ifs" along with Bill Schoonover that will carry into the 1963 season.

Syracuse Soccer Club Meets Cornell Today

The Syracuse University Soccer Club travels to Ithaca today for a game against the Cornell varsity.

Last weekend, the Hill squad defeated the Latin American students, 4-0, at Skytop Field.

The club is pushing for varsity recognition of soccer at Syracuse. At a recent meeting, 30 students showed an interest in reviving the sport in intercollegiate competition.

About 125 students turned out for a professional soccer film shown at the meeting.

Director of Athletics Lewis P. Andreas stated that before varsity status will be considered, the club must demonstrate that it can compete against teams on a local level.

Need Interest

He also revealed the necessity of greater student interest in soccer.

In Saturday's win over the Latin Americans, Syracuse combined a powerful offensive punch with the defensive work of goalie John Button.

Mike Legutko scored the first goal for the locals with nine minutes gone in the opening half.

Orange center forward Art Levy upped the count to 2-0 with a lob shot past the Latin goalkeeper. Syracuse held onto the two goal lead at halftime.

In the second period, Levy scored again for the Orangemen when he sent a hard 20-yard ground shot into the goal. Levy received a fine pass from Honore Likilumbi on the tally.

Al Zeca made it 4-0 when he shot the ball over the goalkeeper's head from 30 yards out on the right wing.

Lineup

The Syracuse starting lineup against Cornell is expected to feature Button in the goal, Walt Couser and Mike Bello at the fullback spots, and Doug Perry and Lynn and Lee Donaldson at the halfbacks.

Up front, the Hillmen will go with a first line of Zeca, Legutko, Levy, Likilumbi and Tony Boustcha.

RedTops Hill, Hobart Off

By JUDY ADAMS
Associate Editor

The baseball team is still undefeated at home.

But you can't attribute their perfect record as much to their ability as to the weatherman who rained out their third home game this year.

Yesterday's contest with Hobart was cancelled when the rains began just 15 minutes before the teams were to take the field. It won't be rescheduled.

Tuesday the Orangemen were at Cornell making up the one road rainout of the season. But ask Coach Ted Kleinhans and he'll tell you that he'd just as soon have let that one go by the boards.

His Orange bats, quiet earlier in the season, unloaded for 11 hits, nearly twice the Big Red's total.

His pitcher Ed Baronwski pitched a complete game, allowed only six hits, struck out eight and allowed no earned runs.

But the Cornell nine still handed the Orangemen their sixth loss of the season, 5-3.

Syracuse scored all its runs in the top of the sixth after Cornell had managed unearned runs in the third and fourth innings. The Big Red followed with three more unwarranted tallies in the last of the seventh to gain the win.

In the third, Schuyler Grant scored without a hit being made. He drew a base on balls from Barnowski and stole second. When catcher Bob Jacuk's throw went into centerfield, Grant got up and moved over to third and scored on a passed ball.

In the fourth, Larry Hrebiniak scored after getting on via one of the five Orange errors. The Cornell starting pitcher, El Jerome, singled him home.

But Jerome didn't stick around long enough to be the winning pitcher. He got in trouble in the top of the fifth and was yanked in favor of sophomore Mike Lynch. Lynch set down the side without a score.

But in the sixth he wasn't as lucky. The big man in Friday's Rochester contest, Dave Rounds, started the Orange rally with a sharp single through the box. Barnowski was nipped by a pitch.

Bobby Cohen's single scored Rounds. A double by Pat Lutz brought in Barnowski and Cohen.

Barnowski held his slim lead for an inning. Then in the last of the seventh Cornell scored three more.

A fielder's choice let Lee Wells get aboard. Wells promptly stole second. Third baseman Terry Blumer then beat out a dribbler down the first baseline.

Big firstbaseman Ed Macner scooped the ball, and threw it away, letting Wells, who had gone to third on the play, score. Blumer went to third. Two singles followed and the Big Red had their three runs.

The win for Cornell breaks a four-game losing streak, and gives them a 3-8 record. The Orangemen, now 4-6, will play at home Friday against Bucknell and Saturday with a double header with Penn State.

Golfers Hold 3-1 Record

The recent break in the Syracuse monsoon season has had the University golf team out on the TC fairways in full force. "We got a late start because of the weather but have now started to play some good," golf mentor Andy Mogish said.

The squad has a 3-1 record with wins over RPI, Clarkson and Cornell and a loss to Penn State.

In Tuesday's 4-3 victory over Cornell, the team's number one man Dick Bates shot a par 72 at TC.

Jim Olp has ben playing number 2, Ken Lebow number 3, Clyde Cawley number 4 and Lindley Wood number 5. "Wood has been playing some terrific golf for us as of late," Mogish said.

Dean Togis has been playing as number 6 man and Gary Wolf number 7.

Mogish, who replaced Marc Guley as golf coach this season, has a squad of all sophomores and juniors with only two letter men from last year's team.

The Orangemen will play in the Easterns Friday and Saturday at Penn State.

Other schools left on the schedule are St. Lawrence, Colgate and Hamilton.

Library Budget Tops $1 Million For 1963-64

By DANIEL RITEY
Junior Editor

Syracuse University's library budget has broken $1 million for fiscal 1963-64.

"This is the first time that the SU library budget has gone over $1 million," declared SU Vice President for Academic Affairs Frank P. Piskor Thursday afternoon.

Each year the library budget has been an increasing component of the University budget, Piskor noted. "It will never again dip under $1 million," he asserted, "the question is by what rate will it increase, because the only way for the library budget to go is up."

SU's estimated budget for fiscal 1963-64 (July to July) is about $40 million according to Vice President for Administration and Research Clark D. Ahlberg.

Certain uncompleted costs make a final library budget figure unavailable, but "it is slightly over $1 million," said Piskor.

Dean Piskor expressed pleasure with the budget's size. "The future of a great university is the heart of that university — it's library system," he said, noting the increased facilities in all of SU's libraries would aid students and faculty members.

"The money will be used to provide not only more book resources, but also better services and help for library users," he continued.

SU has set a goal of one million volumes in all its libraries by the centennial year of 1970;

Southern Drive Gets Book Profit

By SANDY MYERS
Junior Editor

Profits from the sale of the Greek Coloring Book will go to aid in the southern voter registration drive.

This decision was made at the first meeting of the Syracuse Committee on Equality Thursday.

Other possibilities considered for disposal of the funds were the Congress of Racial Equality and the Southern Christian Leadership Conference to aid in Birmingham, Ala., or a campus organization such as the library.

Group members decided to send the $20 collected in dues to Birmingham.

Profits from the sale of the controversial coloring book totalled $66.44, Ronald Corwin reported.

Andreas Retiring

Tolley Names Decker New Athletic Director

JAMES DECKER

LEWIS P. ANDREAS

By ALLAN T. KORT
Editor-in-Chief

Director of Athletics Lewis P. Andreas will retire from Syracuse University at the close of the first semester next year, and will be succeeded by Assistant Athletic Director James H. Decker, Chancellor William P. Tolley told the Daily Orange.

Andreas will also retire as Director of Physical Education, but no successor has been selected, Tolley said. Professor Lucille H. Verhulst will remain Director of Physical Education for Women.

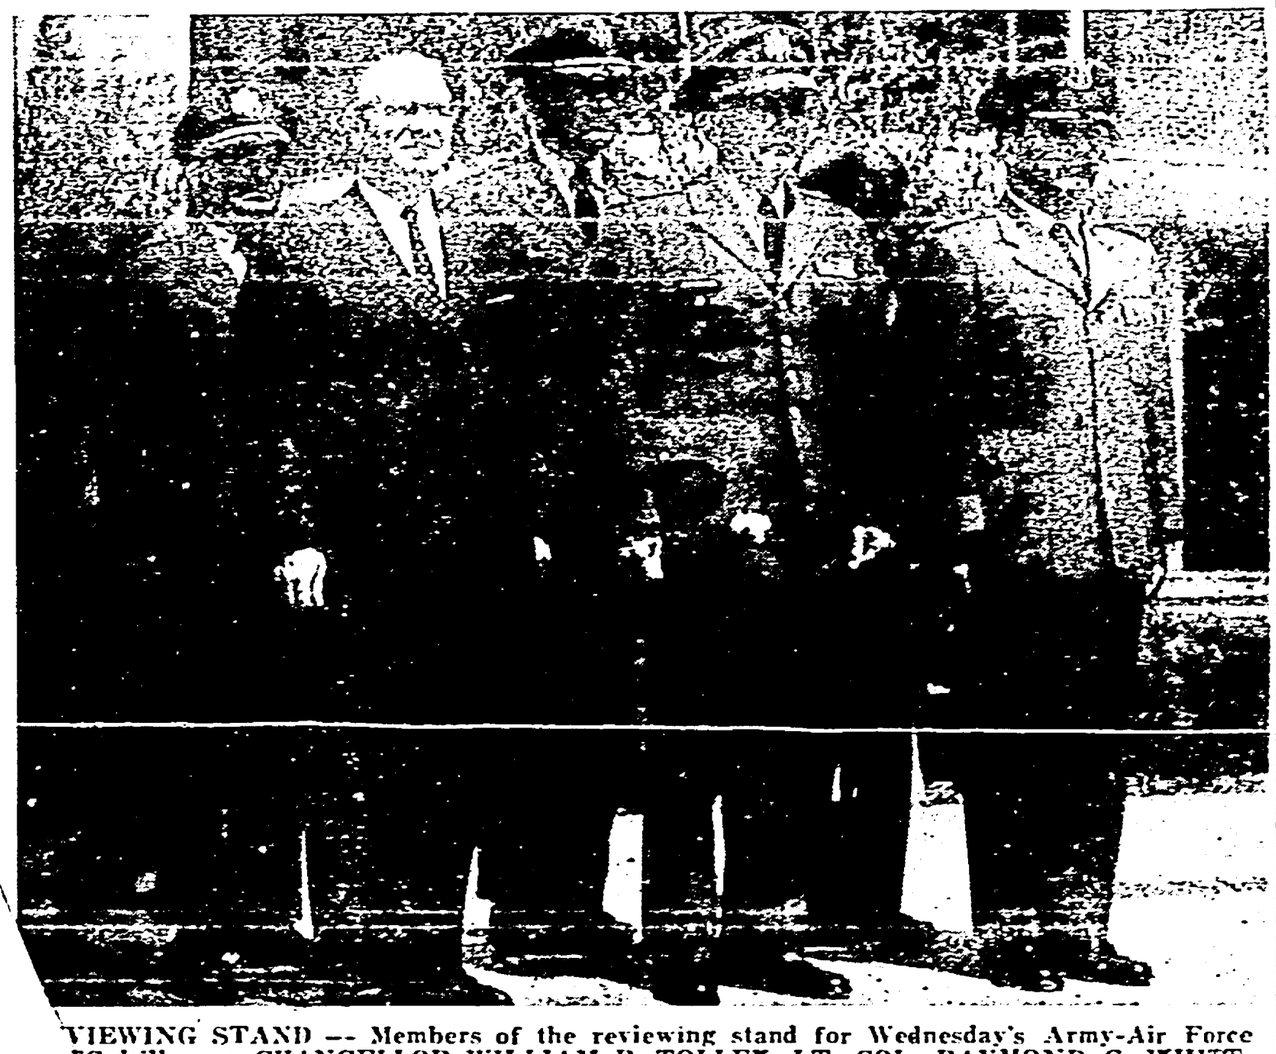
Tolley said that the duties of the new athletic director "haven't been completely defined at the present time." He also said that no replacement for Decker has been named.

Andreas, 68, a member of the faculty since 1924 had been scheduled for retirement last year by the university's 65-year retirement rule, but was asked by Chancellor Tolley to remain in his post until a proper replacement was found.

Fine Coach

Chancellor Tolley said the university will miss Andreas. "He was one of the finest basketball coaches in the history of the sport, a very successful football coach and a remarkable teacher and administrator in the field of physical education.

"As dean of college and university athletic directors he is widely regarded as the finest athletic director in the nation." Tolley said.



Decker, 51, was graduated from Syracuse in 1932 and served three years as a reporter on the staff of the Elmira Advertiser. He joined the Syracuse staff in 1935 as a public relations writer and has been a member of the athletic department since that time except for four years of military service when he enlisted in the Navy and rose through the ranks to Lieutenant Commander at the close of World War II.

While at Syracuse as an undergraduate, Decker was a member of Psi Upsilon fraternity and

Bouscaren Calls For Cuba Action

By CHARLES STEINBERG
Associate Editor

LeMoyne College political science prof. Anthony T. Bouscaren presented a five-step plan to solve the Cuban Problem, culminating with a U.S. sponsored invasion if necessary, in a debate with Hill Citizenship instructor David Bennett Thursday afternoon in Maxwell Auditorium.

The debate sponsored by the Young Americans for Freedom, campus political conservative organization, drew over 150 persons.

Bouscaren advocated first diplomatic and economic sanctions against Castro; 2. aerial surveilance of Cuba; 3. a naval quarantine and blockade; 4. promotion of guerilla warfare; and 5. a U.S. supported invasion, if necessary.

"The longer we delay the more difficult it will be for the Cuban people to regain their freedom," Bouscaren said. Quoting James Reston, Bouscaren declared "President Kennedy talks like Churchill but acts like Chamberlain."

"Castro masked his political affiliation as a Communist in order to gain power," he said. "We must help the Cuban people to regain control of their government."

Bennet charged that "liberation, based on a desire for the Cuban people, is not really an issue." Only "hard national interest" is, he said.

Cuba poses no military or subversive threat to the United States or Latin America, Bennett said. The military stockpile in Cuba he said "is meaningless in face of U. S. armaments. There is more striking power at the Guantanamo naval base alone than in the rest of Cuba."

"We mustn't let our fears and frustrations lead us to believe that we can simply wipe out all our problems," Bennett said.

Bouscaren's platform, he said, "attempts to win the fruits of war without a war, and a war will end in the destruction of both sides."

"Our real fear," Bennett stressed "is the idea of Castroism which expressed independence from the U. S. and Yankee imperialism." Military action will not solve the real problem, but only raise the old fears of imperialism.

The Castro revolution will

Soapboxing At Syracuse

The recent Sagamore Conference emphasized the need for expansion of the academic and cultural foundations at Syracuse University.

Soapboxing, although a crude form of intellectual discussion, is a definite element of academics and should at least be considered by the student.

A common fear of soapboxers has been exhibited by the American public, because this form of expression is often attributed to the Communist, the Socialist and the Nazi, ideological groups which question American theories.

But soapboxing is not merely a platform for an action group; it is rather a convention at which ideas, both pro and con, are tossed around.

There has been a lack of this political art in the Syracuse University complex, but this year moves have been made towards developing an interest in political discussions at Syracuse.

A small group of Syracusans will take the soapbox tomorrow at noon on the chapel steps to discuss polities and problems.

The academically-endowed student owes it to himself to broaden his mind by participating in such discussions.

Congratulations

Congratulations, Jim Decker!

We hope that with your appointment as athletic director will come a new era at athletic excellence at Syracuse.

Your successor, Lewis Andreas, has cut the paths to national recognition, having established Syracuse as major component in the collegiate sporting world.

The job of athletic director bears a heavy burden and we hope that you will always remember that you represent many groups—the university, alumni, students and fans. Each of these groups is important to Hill athletics. Your department also represents American athletics and the ideals set forth by such groups as the NCAA and the ECAC.

We hope that your actions will be representative of all the aforementioned groups and not just the Bigwigs of the Athletic Department. GOOD LUCK!

The Negro

To the Editor:

A Frankenstein monster stalks the streets of Syracuse. He strikes cold, sweaty fear into the hearts of the self-righteous, law-abiding citizens and outright terror into the otherwise smug, carefree and complacent college campus-trotters.

This monster is composed of the dusky, fierce-faced and barbarously attired active element of the 15th Ward's young adults. In paternal and superficial sorrow and not a little plain terror, holders of the highlands shake their heads at the mention of these strange inhabitants of the dismal adjacent swamp.

And indignant mothers write the University to curb the maraudings of these nocturnal beings. Police suggest unleashing vicious beasts as if only animalistic vengeance can adequately deal with these "molesters."

The saddest aspect of the situation, as in the story of Frankenstein, is that the victims have created the monster they now so fear. The infuriating aspect of the problem is that they either do not realize this or refuse to admit it. The enraging and intolerable portion is that they seek to remedy the situation only by striking back savagely and in primitive brute fear at the monster, vainly hoping to keep him in the swamps, away from the "good' 'people in a romance.

Why isn't more effort spent in draining the swamp, helping the strange swamp dwellers and eliminating the creators of swamps?

Do you wonder why curious apparitions emerge from the 15th Ward? How many of the complainers have taken a walk through that jungle in day or night? How many look at the crazily leaning, ancient, overcrowded buildings without a sickly feeling of filth creeping into their minds?

How many could spend even a few or even one night in their dank interiors without some loss of that attitude that the world is a playground? How many can even furtively sneak through the dangerous streets one time without the feeling that to walk this side of town you've either got to be well-armed and ferocious, or live an existence similar to a mouse at a cat's convention.

Now multiply these few feelings—and hundreds more like them—all by 5,000 hopeless days and fantastic nights, and the only thing to marvel at is the tremendous stability and strength of character of the vast majority of swamp dwellers, who yet cling to an ethic of acquiescence and justice which are a caustic mockery of their every action and emotion.

Yet for all too many of the highlanders the only fact of significance is the fact of those horrible monsters who keep shoving into our otherwise comfortable, merry, callous existences, the crude nasty fact that they have created a horrible monstrous situation and are reluctant to deal with it.

We denounce the intentional perpetuation of prejudice and falsehood. There was an editorial in the D.O. telling people not to walk through the 15th Ward. We denounce this editorial. It stands for the erroneous, superstitious, despicable apartheid philosophy which for 300 years has characterized the white American attitude towards Negro Americans.

You will not solve this problem by creating a wall around the Negro national eyesore. It will continue to fester and infect you. We realize that no one likes to roll around in the mud of self-created sin, but this is exactly what must be done. How can you sit up here in callous complacency, listening to Negro music, dancing Negro dances—and shunning Negro people? You love their music—you must love their souls.

Let me suggest that students pilgrimage down into that abysmal swamp, the 15th Ward. Yes, even you up there in DellPlain who shriek your vile language of hate down uopn tattered Negro children.

"Come out of the dark you little savages so we can see you. We can't see nothin' but eyeballs." Is it any wonder they whip your whimpering behinds whenever possible?

Yet we have faith in human nature. We believe meeting the Ward people will cause even you to want to work with these people. You will not find most of them ogres. In the rickety old shacks you will find warmth, laughter, gaity, friendship and beauty. In the shabby storefront churches, you will find, in real life, the swelling strength, and strange beauty of the Negro spirituals to which you now timidly listen on cold, intricately mechanical, but expensive Hi-Fi's. You will find a vital, undeniably American part of our culture. Then you won't have so many fears or so many reasons to fear. Or would you rather continue smug, callous . . . and afraid?

Defense

To the Editor:

As an alumna of four terms of physical education at Syracuse, I would like to propose an addition to the curriculum which might be more useful to coeds.

The course would be entitled "Self-Defense 1" and would be required of all first-term girls. In the interests of all concerned, the customary term of WPE 1 could be deferred in order to provide the freshmen with this vital course.

It would include judo, impromptu weapons (e.g. selecting stones to heave at attackers), and diaphragm control for more efficient screaming. Written work would include studying campus maps to find out where the nearest security policeman is stationed. Required equipment for the course could easily be covered by the usual $5 service fee—a police whistle and a chain to hang it around your neck, a hatpin to stick in your sleeve.

(A more advanced course, Self-Defense 2, would be required of all girls living in the Ambassador. It would extend to karate and small weapons.)

The final would be the most interesting part of the course. The class would set out some dark night from the Women's Building, walk down to Erie Boulevard, and return. Grades would be assigned as follows:

A: return intact

B: return bleeding, but retain purse and clothing

C: able to return under own power

D: return alive, with outside assistance (stretcher)

F: never come back

If by some strange coincidence you are not jumped, you receive an incomplete and take the final again the next night. Only a small percentage, if any, of the students are expected to receive incompletes.

A Coed

Hell Week

To the Editor:

It's raining and I hate my desk lamp. It's shining into my eyes and I hate it. I hate lots of things, now that I think of it. I hate Roger Maris, the Graham Brothers, Pinochio, Pinky Lee, and Flint 2c. I hate my box number. I hate the old 4c Lincoln postage stamp.

I hate "The Birds," "The Lion," and Captain Video. I hate toad's intestines, ant's hair, and Mission Orange soda. I hate dumb Recreation 112 students, and I hate burnt pizza. I hate spiked paddles, and I hate prune juice with Ex-Lax in it.

Although I really hate my desk lamp more than the rest, I have refrained from crushing this evil beacon of sadistic blindness into the ground. I just stare at its glass-covered flame of glowing drek, and pray to God that its destruction is soon in coming . . . It's watching me now, I can feel its hot breath on my eyelashes. I hate it and it knows I hate it.

It's funny that I didn't start hating my desk lamp until about a week ago, just before they took me away. As a matter of fact I really didn't care much either way about it.

They kept me there a week, but I didn't crack. I showed them. I took whatever they gave me, and I never cracked once . . . not once during the entire Hell Week.

It's staring at me again. If I could only reach that little brown button, I'd kill it forever. But the hot bulb is guarding it. Imagine that, they thought they could really make me crack . . . ha, ha, ha ha, ha, ha, haaaaaa . . .

LOEWS: "The Man From the Diner's Club" is a political allegory on American Capitalists as it is perceived by some of the greatest minds of the time. In other words Danny Kaye's (the immortal ten year old) new film is what the good Sarkhanese call "American propaganda." It was written by Charlie Wilson, formerly of Eisenhower's cabinet. "Fun of the Pagans," filmed at the Watertower before it was closed down, is also a sequel of what happens to people who get their father's diner cards.

'Ugly American'

—By Robert E. Fern

A revolt has just become violence; men are frightened. Ten Sarkhanese soldiers going off to the horror of war are crossing a bridge with heavy guns, however it seems Director Englund missed directing one of the soldiers crossing for he is smiling. The soldier isn't taking "The Ugly American" seriously and I don't think anyone else should.

"The Ugly American" makes no pretensions about being cinematic art; it tries to tell the story of the 1958 bestseller in which Eugene Burdick and William Lederer angrily showed the indifference, arrogance and ignorance of Americans stationed abroad. Any actual relation between this book and the movie namesake is purely coincidental.

U. S. Ambassador Marlon Brando equipped with a slender moustache, pipe and moderately refined speech arrives in the Southeast Asian country of Sarkhan. The picture elementarily points out two propositions: that not necessarily proof of a Communist is a foreigner who disagrees violently with American foreign policy and the inadequacy of the American foreign office.

Marlon Brando is disappointing in this motion picture because we realize that Brando is an actor of undeniable talent and strong personality. He is one of the most important actors of our generation and we are waiting for him to do something great. When we see the "Ugly American," all we can say is "not yet." We expect more of Brando in more profound roles and better scripts.

HOW TO SEE EUROPE
FOR ONLY $300 A DAY: NO. 3

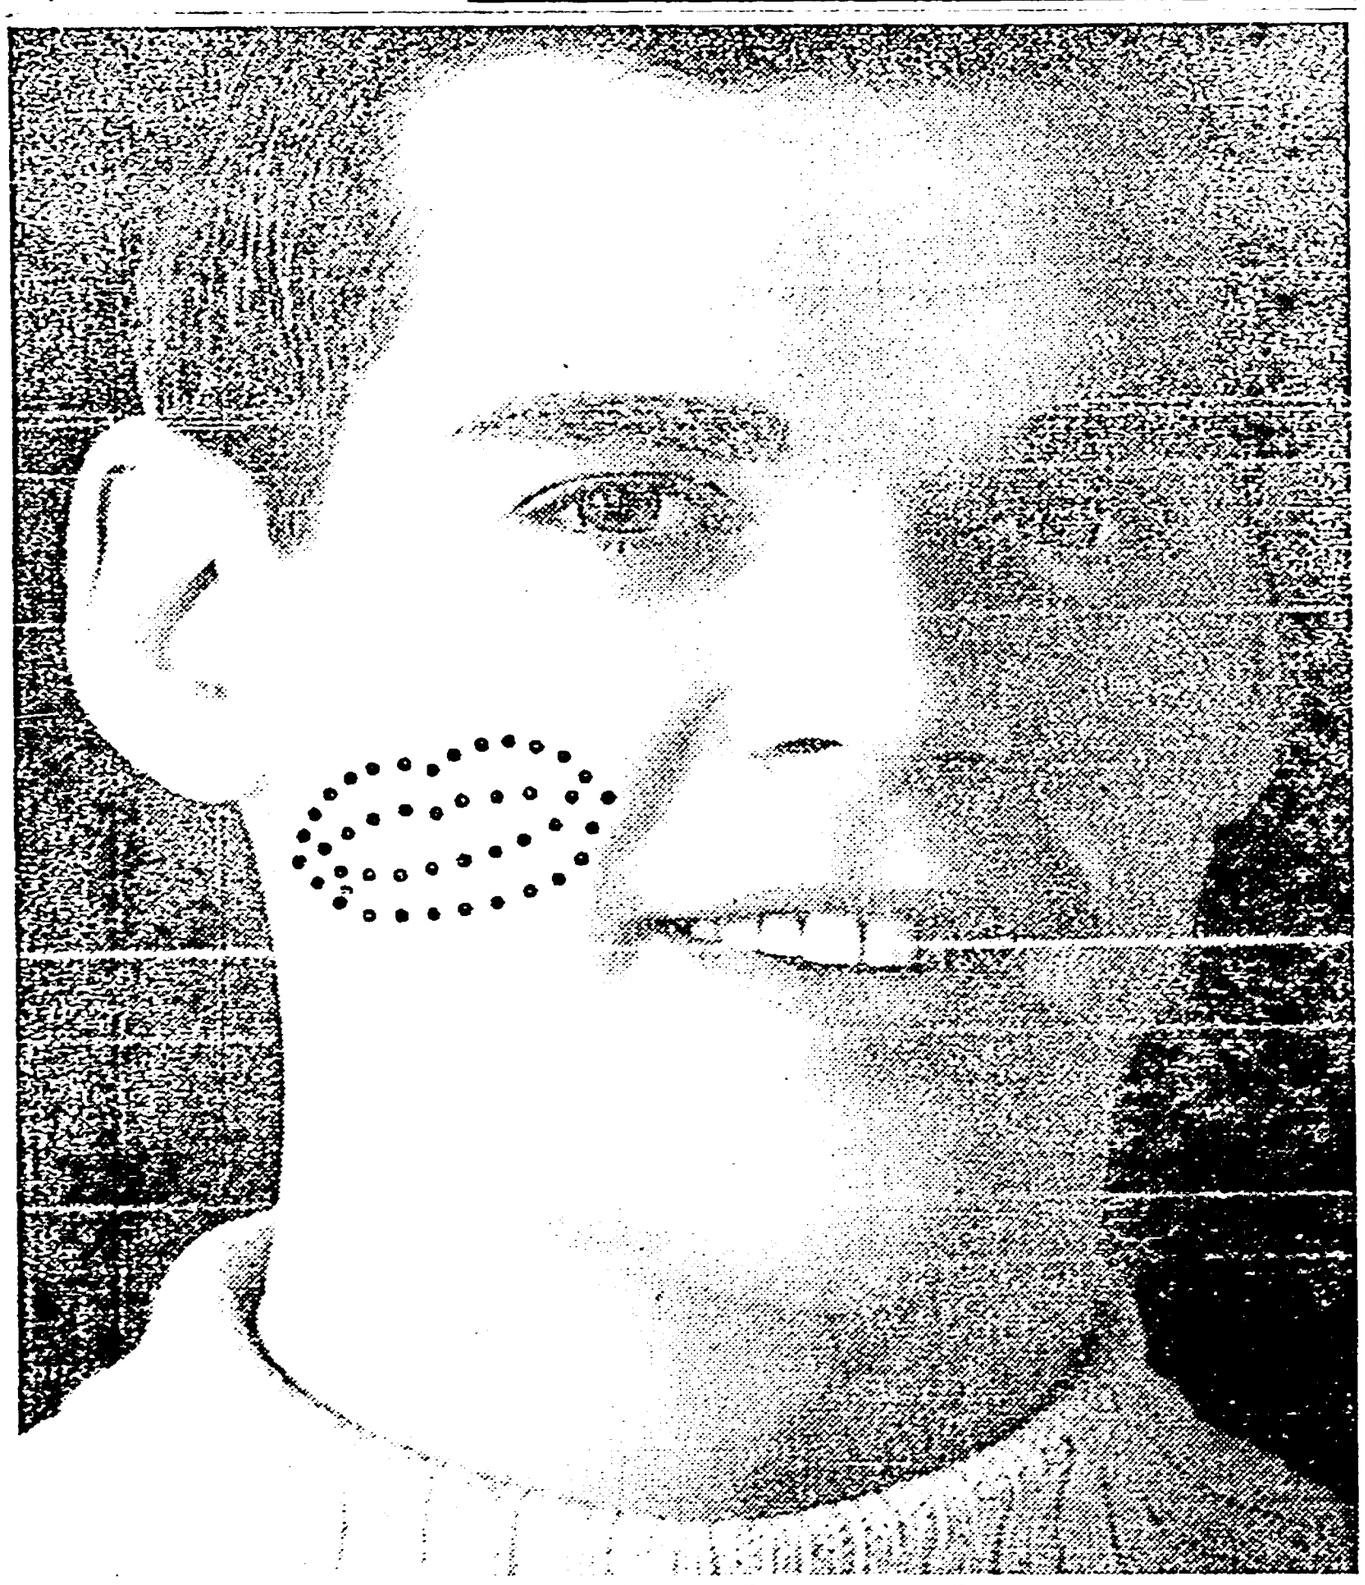
When all of you go to Europe during your summer vacation, you will certainly want to visit Spain, where the tall corn grows,

The first thing you will notice upon entering Spain is the absence of sibilants. In Spain "s" is pronounced "th" and thereby hangs a tale. Until the reign of Philip IV—or Guy Fawkes, as he was sometimes called—Spaniards said "s" just like everybody else. Philip IV, however, lisped, and Spaniards, having an ingrained sense of propriety and not wishing to embarrass their monarch, decided that everybody should lisp. This did indeed put Philip IV very much at his ease, but in the end it turned out to be a very bad thing for Spain. It wrecked the sassafras industry—Spain's principal source of revenue—and reduced the nation to a second-class power.

As a result, Spaniards were all forced to turn to bull fighting in order to keep body and soul together. Today, wherever you go in Spain—in Madrid, in Barcelona, in Toledo, in Cleveland—you will see bulls being fought. For many years the bulls have sought to arbitrate this long-standing dispute, but the Spaniards, a proud people who use nothing but Castile soap, have rejected all overtures.

It is therefore necessary for me to explain bull fighting to anyone who is going to Spain. It is also necessary for me to say a few words about Marlboro Cigarettes because they pay me for writing this column, and they are inclined to pout if I ignore their product. In truth, it is no chore for me to sing the praises of Marlboro Cigarettes, for I am one who fairly swoons with delight when I come upon a cigarette which gives you the full, rich taste of good tobaccos plus the pure white Selectrate filter, and Marlboro is the only smoke I have found that fulfills both requirements. Oh, what a piece of work is Marlboro! The flavor reaches you without stint or diminution. You, even as I, will find these statements to be happily true when once you light a Marlboro. Marlboros come to you in soft pack or Flip-Top box, and are made only by the makers of Marlboro.

But I digress. Let us return to bull fighting. Bulls are by nature bellicose creatures who will keep fighting till the cows come home. Then they like to put on pipe and slippers and listen to the "Farm and Home Hour." However, the Spaniards will not allow the bulls any surcease. They keep attacking the bull and making veronicas—a corn meal pancake filled with ground meat. Bulls, being vegetarians, reject the veronicas and then, believe you me, the fur starts to fly!



To be perfectly honest, many Spaniards have grown weary of this incessant struggle and have left their homeland. Columbus, for example, took off in three little ships—the Patti, the Maxene, and the Laverne—and discovered Ohio. Magellan later discovered Columbus. Balboa also sailed to the New World, but he was silent on a peak in Darien, so it is difficult to know what he discovered.

Well sir, I guess that's all you need to know about Spain. So now, as the setting sun casts its rosy fingers over El Greco, let us take our reluctant leave of Spain—or Perfidious Albion, as it is jocularly called. Aloha, Spain or Perfidious Albion, aloha!

©1963 Max Shulman

* * *

Let us not, however, take our leave of smoking pleasure. Let us keep enjoying those fine Marlboro Cigarettes—rich, golden tobacco—pure white Selectrate filter—soft pack or Flip-Top box—available in all fifty States of the Union.

Arab-Israeli Reply: Part III

The following is the last of three articles replying to the recent Arab-Israeli history. This part of the series was written by Mahmoud Fahmy, an Arab graduate student.

The best comment to the series of articles on the Arab-Israeli dispute by Max Loewenstein, Susan Loenstein and Tovie Rome, was expressed in a letter to the editor on May 7, 1963 in which the writer said "These articles read like a term paper using solely Zionist propaganda for sources." To this I would like to add that this series is but a collection of arguments based on either unacceptable assumptions or irrelevant facts and half-truths.

The arguments presented by the three writers are not new to the American public which has been tuned to the Israeli side of the story for more than fifteen years.

This fact was accurately spelled out by the British politician Richard Crossman, a close friend of Mr. David Ben Gurion, during his 1946 visit to the U.S., "the American press in reporting the Middle East, is strongly pro-Jewish."

During the first World War, it was the aim of the Arabs to achieve their political freedom and independence. In 1916, when the Arabs revolted against the Turkish rule, Britain promised through the Hussein-MacMahon correspondence to support the Arab fight for freedom and to establish an independent Arab State including Palestine.

But, while Britain was supporting the Arab goal, it entered into the Sykes-Picot accord with France to divide the Arab land.

In addition, the hard pressed British Government issued the Balfour Declaration in 1917 as a war measure against the Central Powers.

At the time of the Declaration the population of Palestine was 93% Moslem and Christian, 7% Jewish. Surprisingly enough, when Balfour made his Declaration the British government has not yet secured a foothold in Palestine.

The Zionists maintain that the agreement between Faisal and Weismann to create a Jewish national home in Palestine proves that the Arabs consented to the establishment of a Jewish State.

However, they neglect to mention that neither Faisal nor Weizmann "represented a body sovereign in Palestine." Furthermore, the reservation made by Faisal to the effect that if the Arab demand for independence was not fulfilled, the agreement with Weizmann would be deemed void and of no account or validity.

The Arab demand was not fulfilled and the Arab land was divided under British and French mandate.

Hence, the Faisal-Weizmann accord, which had no validity in the first place, had its invalidity compounded because of this reservation.

Concerning the argument that the Jews in Palestine bought the land, I would like to mention that this fact is 7% correct and 93% wrong. The Jews did indeed purchase some of the land and much was given to them as grant-in-aid by the British authorities.

According to the "Survey of Palestine" published by the British government in 1946, the Jews owned, by 1920, 2.5% of the land. By 1945, they had bought and acquired 3.56% of the land. This made the total of Jewish land ownership 6.06%.

From 1945 to 1948 the Jews bought, according to the most generous estimate, 1% making the total, by 1948, no more than 7% of Palestine. Considering the fact that 13% of the land in Israel belongs to the 180,000 Arabs who are still in Israel, it follows that some 80% of the land under Israeli control was acquired by brute force from its rightful owners, the Palestinian refugees. This point has been confirmed by the U.N. Conciliation Commission for Palestine.

Another fact, the writers failed to mention is the condition under which the Resolution was adopted. The pressure practiced by the active Zionist Organization backed by the U.S. government on the member nations to accept the Partition Plan was obvious.

A leading Zionist leader wrote, "every clue was meticulously checked and pursued, not the smallest or the remotest of nations, but was contacted and wooed. Nothing was left to chance."

Let me ask the writers which U.N. they talk about? Is it the U.N. whose resolutions are favorable to the Zionists' argument, or the U.N. whose resolutions were frequently defied by Israel? Until 1960, out of 90 resolutions dealing with Palestine more than 85 had been refused by Israel. In addition to this the government of Israel was unanimously condemned by the U.N. on several conditions.

ginning of next semester were elected. They are Robert Cohen, a graduate psychology student, president; David Borthwick, vice president; Erin Clermont, corresponding secretary; Carol Strauss, recording secretary; and Kingsley Stanard, treasurer.

A faculty adviser for the committee will be chosen within a week.

Next Friday, the ninth anniversary of the Supreme Court school desegregation decision, the equality committee will sponsor a speech and possibly a downtown march.

Dr. Michael O. Sawyer, departing head of the citizenship department, will speak. A definite time and place for his talk have not yet been determined.

Decision

After Dr. Sawyer's speech on the historical meaning of the Supreme Court decision and personal responsibiilties in civil rights, a member of the equality committee will speak on recent, local and national events.

At the speech, signatures will be gathered for letters to be sent to Birmingham.

A letter of support will be sent to the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., who is jailed in the city for "marching without a permit" on Good Friday.

Another letter will be sent urging that King's four-point program be put into effect.

Program

The program calls for dropping charges against the jailed Negro leaders, establishing a bi - racial council, integrating schools and integrating lunch counters and employment.

The committee may give the letters to Syracuse Mayor William Walsh for his signature.

A march downtown after the campus speeches was discussed. No definite decision was made because of the proximity of exams.

Everett Makinen, Hill graduate student and president of the local CORE chapter, chaired the meeting, which 18 students attended.

an increase of 250,000 over the current total.

The money spent in fiscal 1963-64 on books and periodicals alone "will be more than was the entire SU budget for the whole library system for 1955-56," Piskor said.

Not Inevitable

The SU administrator regarded the million-plus budget as "not inevitable but rather as a sign of the growing vitality of SU's faculty and student body which demands more library resources and services."

Piskor cited expanding SU library projects and a "demand for newer and more varied resources to cope with increased honors work and individual study" as other reasons for the continuing increase and new high for SU's library expenditures.

Colgate-Syracuse In Stadium Meet

Track is the Archbold Stadium feature Saturday as the Hill cindermen duel arch rival Colgate at 2 p.m.

Among the competitions will be Jim Cripps, who spends his winters as an end on the football team. He is entered in the high jump.

Big Jim's best effort in this event is 6'4".

Other gridders may enter the shotput, where they add badly needed depth.

In the pole vault Chan Rudd, who cleared 13'6" last weekend at W. Virginia, faces a formidable opponent in the Red Raiders' Terry Wren, who also has cleared the 13'6" height.

Another interesting duel is shaping up in the quarter mile where Orangemen's Cal Evans, a :48.3 performer last weekend, races Ugandan Sam Amukun of Colgate, who stopped the watches in 0:48.2 last week.

Mouncey Ferguson, a double winner last week, is entered in the half-mile and mile events. He toured the mile distance in 4:19.2 at W. Virginia.

Last year Colgate and the Orangemen tied in a meet held at Hamilton.

Last weekend the Hill team finished second to a rugged Pitt in a W. Virginia triangular meet while the Raiders warmed up with a 118-22 rout of Alfred.

Friday the Hill yearling debut with a 3 p.m. duel with the Raider subs at Archbold.

Highlight of the meet will be the mile event, in which Bill Chiak, Mike Spino, and Marty Miller, all of Syracuse, should push each other hard for first-place honors.

Oarsman Row Saturday

The Orange oarsmen go against Columbia and Rutgers in New York City tomorrow hoping to return to their winning way.

Coach Loren Schoel has moved Tom Prindiville into the varsity shell replacing Bruce Buckley. Prindiville will row number 7 with Steve Gladstone moving from number 7 to 5, replacing Buckley at that spot.

Syracuse lost to Cornell and Navy on Lake Onondaga last week and beat Dartmouth two weeks ago.

Hill Nine Play Three

Syracuse opens its busiest weekend on the baseball diamond today in a 3 p.m. contest with Bucknell. Today's meeting is scheduled to be followed by a Sat. twin bill with Penn State. The first game kicks off at 1:30 p.m. All games are at Lew Carr Field.

Kleinhans plans to throw either Larry Crabas or Bill Lelli in today's contest. Phil Schoff, who was scheduled to pitch Wednesday's rainout, and Ed Barnowski will be on the hill Saturday.

The Orange will be going after their fifth win today against their southern visitors. Whether the pitcher be Crabas or Lelli, he will be working with, a goodly amount of rest. Neither has worked in the last two weeks.

But the same can't be said for Saturday's workers, both sophomores. Schoof, who made his first appearance in relief at Pitt, started and won the only game that the Orangemen have played at home.

Barnowski, who finished up for Schoff, has started five and finished same. He leads the team in strikeouts and earned run average. But so far his teammates have furnished him enough support to win but once. He's lost four, the last time in Tuesday's 5-3 loss to Cornell.

The first of Saturday's games will run the regular nine innings. The second will be limited to seven.

WEEKEND SCHEDULE

BASEBALL — Today at Lew Carr Field at 3 p.m. the varsity plays Bucknell. The Hill frosh are at the University of Rochester. Saturday Syracuse hosts Penn State in doubleheader starting at 1:30 p.m.

TRACK — The Colgate and Syracuse frosh go at it this afternoon in Archbold Stadium at 3 p.m. The varsities tangle tomorrow in the stadium at 2 p.m.

LACROSSE — The frosh and varsity stickmen follow this weekend's Colgate trend when they journey to Hamilton Saturday for games with the Red Raiders.

CREW — Columbia and Rutgers are the Orange opposition in New York City Saturday.

TENNIS — The varsity is at Bucknell today and Penn State Saturday.

GOLF — The golf squad is competing in the EIGA Eastern Championships today and tomorrow.

Student vs. Teacher In RPI Stick Clash

Student faces off against teacher when lacrosse coach Roy Simmons brings his squad's 4-3 record to Troy tomorrow to meet RPI. The Engineers are coached by Ed Juntos, ex-All American footballer and stick performer under Simmons at Syracuse.

Simmons hopes to follow-up the teams 10-5 victory over Penn State last week, and insure at least a 5-5 season. The squad has two remaining contests after the RPI tilt.

With the season almost three-quarters over Simmons noted, "we've been hampered by injury after injury, and that's been a big factor. We just got Crowther back and we lost Rennie (Tom Rennie suffered a kidney injury in the Hobart game) for the remainder of the year."

Teacher and student will join forces when Juntos becomes Simmons' assistant coach in the North-South All-Star lacrosse clash.

Married Student Housing Planned

Syracuse University has announced plans for a massive 35 building Married Students housing development to be constructed in the Collendale area this Fall.

Twenty-eight of the two story garden-type apartment buildings will contain two bed room units while the other seven buildigs will house single bed room apartments. In all 305 units will become avaliable at a total cost of over $3 million.

While married students will receive priority for the new housing, single graduate students will also be able to rent the apartments, Vice President Clark Ahlberg said.

Ford Foundation

The project will embody many new construction and design techniques said Ahlberg. The plans were developed in a study made by the Educational Facilities Laboratory, a branch of the Ford Foundation, under former S. U. Dean of Men Carlton Krathwohl, he noted.

Arrangements are being made with the New York State Dormitory Authority for financing and constructing the project, Ahlberg said. This will be the first time Syracuse University will be using a New York state program for financing a dormitory project, he said. Previous S. U. dormitories were constructed with federal government loans.

According to Ahlberg the state plan may prove to be more advantageous since furnishings for the project may also be financed.

Britton

Architects for the project will be James Britton of Greenfield, Mass., and L. M. Slingerland of New York City. Both are alumni of the Syracuse University School of Architecture. Slingerland is currently doing

54 New Professors

Writer George Elliott Joins Hill Faculty

By CHARLES M. STEINBERG
Associate Editor

George P. Elliott, major American novelist and poet, highlights a host of distinguished scholars joining the Hill faculty in the fall.

Fifty-four new faculty appointments have been made, Vice President Frank P. Piskor has announced. Six new members will be added to the history department alone, and four to the department of bacteriology and botany. Otherwise the appointments are fairly evenly distrbuted throughout the university.

Elliott, who has won fame for his novels "Tilden Park Village" and "David Knudsen" will join the department of English as a full professor.

His addition, along with those of writer Delmore Schwartz and poet Phillip Booth over the past two years, brings to Syracuse one of the "distinguished" creative writing programs in the country, English department head Sanford B. Meech said.

Elliott will leave the University of California to teach at Syracuse. He is a former Guggenheim fellow and Ford fellow. Also widely regarded as an educator, he was associated with the creative writing program at the University of Iowa.

Another addition to the faculty will be Dr. Donald Meiklejohn who leaves his post as Chairman of the Social Science Concentration at the University of Chicago.

He will be a dual professor of citizenship and philosophy at Syracuse and the new director of the citizenship program.

'Sword' on Sale Today

The Sword of Damocles is being drawn from its sheath for the final time this year as it goes on sale today.

Containing an article on Hill pregnancies and abortions, the off-campus magazine is being sold at the two Seigel's Drug Stores, the Varsity Camera Shop, the Savoy, the Hill Bookstall, the Economy Book Store and the new Marshall Street book store.

Other articles in the Sword deal with the controversy developing in the French Department following the shift from the old grammatical teaching method to the modern linguistic approach. The academic clamps on an Upstate Medical Center professor, barrnig his radical views on mental illness from the classroom, constitutes another article.

The Sword's first issue, featuring the problems of foreign students, infirmary inadequacies and bookstore prices, was an immediate sell-out, according to publisher Terrence Hughes.

The last issue had an international circulation, reaching as far as Italy and the Soviet Union, according to John Sneed, staff nurse at the SU Infirmary. Traveling to Europe last March, Sneed showed the magazine to former Hill professors, including those with the Syracuse-in-Italy program.

Ralph Cooper, formerly a teacher on the Maxwell staff, carried the Sword behind the Iron Curtain, according to Sneed. Students in East Germany and the Soviet Union commented that they had always considered American university students complacent.

They saw the Sword as a healthy sign of student interest in things other than panty raids and sports cars.

According to Sneed, Cooper said that he was glad to see that SU students were finally becoming interested in more important issues on campus. He said that the Sword was a healthy and needed instrument.

Ivy Tuition: Big Ten Riots

Complaints have been circulated around campus recently by students who resent paying "Ivy League tuition for a Big Ten education."

Many of these complaints were in forms of letters to the editor of the Daily Orange. They inferred that it is time for Syracuse University to elevate itself to the standards of an Ivy education, "since Syracuse tuition warrants it."

Some felt the Piety student should condition himself to the academic life led by an Ivy and that the Syracuse atmosphere life led by an Ivy and that the ic atmosphere always prevalent at Ivy schools.

The Ivy League has always been set as a standard for other schools to follow, but recent developments question the right of Ivy schools to be called "the pinnacle of education and academic ventures."

For the students at these Eastern Giants are now paying Ivy tuition for Big Ten riots. The unwarranted brackouts last week at Princeton, Brown and Yale do the "excellence" of these institutions little justice.

For at Syracuse the student is not forced to pay $1,500 a year for he privilege of rioting throughout the city, bringing both destruction and panic to university areas.

Syracuse can not match the "academic" endeavors of those brilliant American students at Yale, Princeton and Brown, for within its boundaries are being discussed solutions to academic lacks—not academic outlets.

End of a Year

This is the final Daily Orange of the academic year. Orange writers, like the rest of the university are badly in need of "dead week" the extra time available to catch up in classroom studies and examination preparations.

We wish to thank both our supporters and critics as well as our judges for the lessons they have taught us the past two weeks.

Before we make our exit we wish to thank all those who made the DO possible. Special thanks go to those faithful staffers who sacrificed study time night after night to work on the paper.

It is unfortunate we have to end the year on a sad note, but we cannot say "Thirty" without giving our best wishes to two close friends who will be removed from their proximity to the paper next year—Dr. William P. Ehling, who leaves his post as Information Services Director for a teaching post in the School of Journalism, and Gene Gilmore, Journalism School instructor who is leaving Piety Hill for the University of Illinois.

THE GADFLY

A Moral Decision

By T. Lee Hughes

This week will undoubtedly see an eruption over an article on coed pregnancies and abortions appearing today in the Sword of Damocles.

Unfortunately, lost amid volleying charges of supression, sensationalism, coercion, and irresponsibility will be the basic issue: what to do about the problem.

Syracuse University is not alone in its dilemma. Hundreds of thousands of unwed American women become pregnant each year.

More alarming is the fact that between 750,000 and 2,000,000 American women seek and receive illegal abortions yearly according to the Saturday Evening Post. An estimated 5,000 of these are killed annually by incompetent amateur abortionists who ply their trade in the hope of making a fast buck.

Yet as a recent article in Esquire indicated campuses in particular are feeling the sting of the pregnancy crisis.

Seven thousand men and women at the height of their sexual potency are tossed together on a half mile plot with the usually stabilizing influence of the home shattered by a new freedom. The remnants of naturalism and intense dating pressures go hand in hand.

And pregnancies result.

Coed concern over the moral issue was dramatically illustrated at a panel discussion on love, life and sex at Day Hall two months ago. Seven hapless males faced a room full of coeds, mostly freshmen, who were tossing questions on the subject with the vigor that Whitey Ford hurls baseballs.

Though discussion was ostensibly to run the gamut of love and sex, in three hours it never strayed from one topic: premarital intercourse.

These coeds were experiencing the pressure. And they were seeking a pat answer.

Their genuine concern was glossed by the remnants of a victorian morality which lables virginity as "good" and the loss of it before marriage as "bad."

But there was a pathetic silence when they were asked WHY it is "good" to be a virgin. The fact is, there are a number of societies in which mores dictate that a woman need be faithful to her husband only AFTER her marriage. There are no pre-marriage restrictions.

Our society suffers from a duality—it seems to me that a large segment of it has no de facto restrictions either before or after marriage.

Yet the ideal requires a pretense that it has.

When one panelist stoutly defended virginity, every girl in the room applauded. Yet no one can tell me that a number of those girls were not virgins even before they set foot on Syracuse University soil.

This duality presents a major stumbling block in coping with the pregnancy problem realistically.

A university such as Syracuse, for example, must present an image of its coeds as nothing less than chaste maidens. It tackles the pregnancy problem within this framework, and tends to regard cases which arise as isolated instances.

The nearly unanimous reaction of Hill counselors to this effect in a DO series on "Syracuse morality" sometime ago was illustrative of this attitude. One counselor quoted in the article is as fully aware of the extent of the problem as the Sword editors who co-authored the article. Yet he pointed a picture of roses marred by only an occasional thorn.

For nearly a year, some administrators knew the Sword was in possession of information on the pregnancy situation at Syracuse. Yet they chose to ignore rather than seek out. The only contact the Sword had with administrators was last week when Dean of Men Earle W. Clifford issued a belated plea to "postpone" the article while the university quietly set about looking into the problem. The request was garnished by an offer of possible permission to sell the magazine in the university bookstore and dining halls if the article was pulled.

The fact is, pregnancies and resulting abortions are reaching an alarming rate here as they are elsewhere.

Yet a university faces a dilemma. It cannot legislate morality. When Cornell recently dumped a graduate student who was reportedly sleeping with a female undergraduate last summer, students justly raised the roof. A coed's sexual affairs when not under university jurisdiction are her own business.

This is reflected in the laws of society. While nearly every state has laws forbidding indiscriminate fornication, they are rarely enforced except in cases which create a public scandal.

Conversely, both society and the university feel a measure of responsibility for coeds who wind up "in trouble" because of their actions.

Saving students into marriage

By far the easiest response is quite literally "you made your bed, now lie in it." Pressis unfortunately the most common solution to the problem.

Yet as one social worker said, high pressure marriage between individuals who have known each other perhaps only one night can be the ruination of two lives. It solves no problems. It creates many.

In part it is fear of condemantion which causes a coed to shun a dean of women's office in favor of other recourses. One social worker reported that girls she has known run away rather than approach the Dean of Women.

Sympathy, information on homes for unwed mothers, counseling of girls likely to "get into trouble" are all steps which may be taken in solving the problem.

A slow but inevitable change in the social climate may permit even greater possibilities.

Contraceptives are still a stumbling block. The contraceptive revolution is in part responsible for the "moral disarmament". Yet there are indications that uninformed use of contraceptives is responsible in some measure for pregnancies.

It is inevitable that religious and social leaders opposing contraceptives will eventually recognize their necessity, if only to combat what will be a stifling population problem in the next half century.

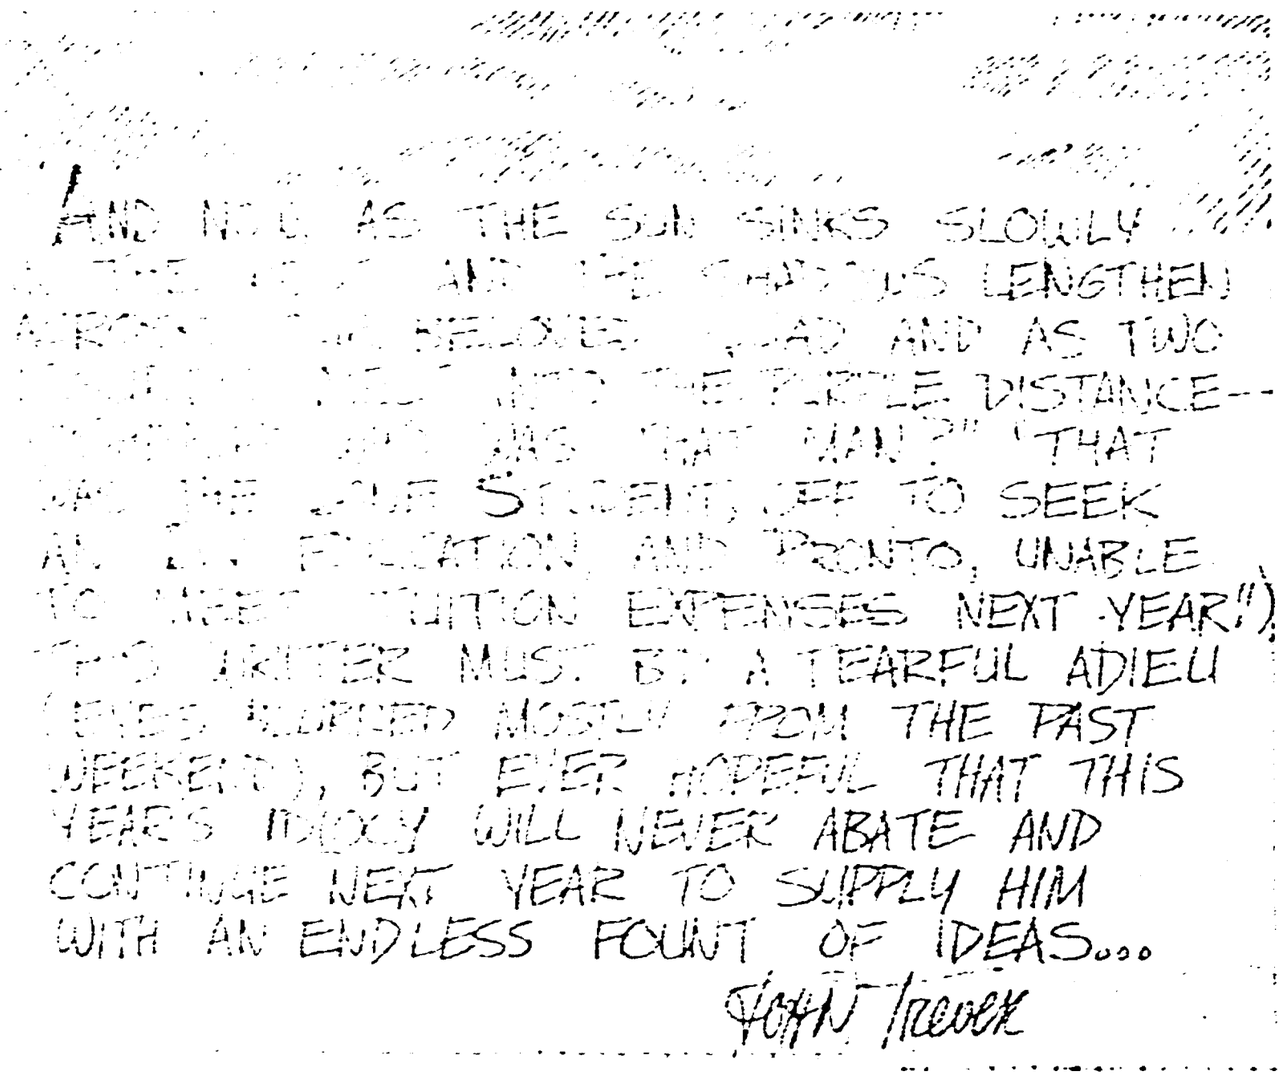
This will permit the free dissemination of contraceptive information.

The issue of legalized abortion will take longer to resolve. It is primarly religious. The question is when a human being becomes a human being. For many status is divinely bestowed upon conception.

But more pressing is the fact that abortions will continue, legal or not. With the wrong persons performing them. For the wrong reasons. And the Divine has ignored many a girl who died on the abortionist's table.

Existing laws could in fact permit a revision in abortion practices. In some states an abortion is permitted if the health or welfare of the mother is endangered.

However, these laws are currently subject to strict interpretation. A thalidomide baby born with no arms or legs is still legally deemed no threat to his own or his mother's welfare.



The fact is, progressive changes may be decades in becoming a reality.

A university will be forced to deal with the present moral framework.

However, it must look ahead and not backwards.

And the first step is recognizing the problem.

"Problems in the Filming Industry," will be the topic discussed by Norman Pater, an executive from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer at 4 p.m. Thursday in Kittredge Auditorium, HBC.

Pater is the first of many speakers that Boar's Head will present to the campus. The drama honorary will attempt to bring speakers from all aspects of the drama and the cinema.

Also to discuss the film industry is actress Nancy White, who is a "stand in" for Debbie Reynolds. Miss White is a native of Paducah, Kentucky and now makes her home in Hollywood.

Pater was last at Syracuse to see the Boar's Head production of "Romeo and Juliet." He was very impressed and will speak to some of the people involved in that production.

Pater will show a trailer film of the new MGM cinerama production of "How the West Was Won" which will be opening at the Eckel Theater later this week.

He will comment about cinerama as a process and explain the problems involved in filming with this new medium. An invitation is extended to all students who are interested.

Review

Syracuse '10'

By David A. Pravda

David A. Pravda, our guest reviewer, is a member of the freshman law class. He has entered various poetry contests and has written several short stories. He is a member of the D. G. Literary Society.

If you are the type of person who, at each meal, eats his favorite food last, you are going to be ecstatic over the current issue of Syracuse 10. For in the final issue of this year's 10, the most outstanding contribution, found on the last page, is a villanelle by Carla Steinberg. The poem, entitled "Song," won first prize in this year's Upstate New York Poetry Contest.

James Gorney, editor of the 10, has introduced a refreshingly new format, that, coupled with the many and varied articles, has finally raised the magazine out of the morass that last year's editors left it in. Syracuse now has a high level forum for intelligent comment, articles and creative expression that maintains its campus appeal throughout. The magazine is high level, but it certainly is not merely for the top five per cent.

There is an article on the S. U. Philosophy Department telling about the wide range of specialties that the philosophy faculty has and the difficulty of maintaining its excellence. Also, under the heading of "Creativity on the Campus" are short pieces about several Hill programs with examples of student work.

The student poetry section, with only a few exceptions (notably Maloney's "After the Carnival") is unfortunately not as excellent as in past issues. More editorial judgment in choosing the poems, especially as regards Gorney's own selections, would have been appropriate.

The James Baldwin article, while good as far as content is concerned, reads as if it were a rewrite of class lecture notes, complete with the big words the teacher used, spelled incorrectly, e.g., paradime (sic).

In a very fine and clearly written article Michael Kogan explains Sartre's concept of death. This should be of great interest to those who would like to know something about existentialism, but find most writings on the subject confused and imposing.

The fiction in the 10 is of mixed quality. "Between Stations," a story fragment by Ed James, details the feelings of an insecure college student. It should be the prelude to a more ambitious work. Randolph Grotzinger's story should have been submited to the Sword's eye-eating department.

Yet even with its obvious faults, this current issue of Syracuse 10 is of genuine merit and deserves the student body's support. The outlook for next year is quite properly bright.

Yearend Letters to the Editor

Ivy League

To the Editor:

Following the tuition hike of a couple of weeks ago, there were a number of complaints that Syracuse was charging Ivy League tuition, while offering little in the way of Ivy League advantages.

In the past several days, another of these wonderful advantages was displayed to the world by the 'Ivy Leaguers,' in the form of 'Spring Riots.'

Ah, to have the opportunity to express oneself so strongly! Princeton began this display of superiority with a magnificently destructive riot early in the week, followed yesterday by Yale and Brown.

If Syracuse continues to elevate tuition, and its students continue to strive for an Ivy League standard of university life and education, perhaps, one day, we too will have the privilege of rioting through the campus and creating havoc all over our fair city.

I can only hope that Syracuse reaches this pinnacle of success before I and my colleagues must leave this tranquil, harmless, panty-raiding, campus!

Dispute

To the Editor:

It is disturbing that the articles written in recent months concerning the Arab-Israeli dispute have expressed a preference for one side of the other, or have condemned one or the other party, purely for personal reasons.

I write this letter because I am dissatisified with the procrustean argumentation that has been rampant in your paper.

Mr. Trever's comments on the three articles concerning the Arab-Israeli dispute are indeed critical (DO, 7 May 1963). Unfortunately, since he has committed his ideas to paper, he must realize that he, in turn, must give to others the opportunity to weigh and evaluate his comments.

I take exception with Mr. Trever on several items. He points out in his second paragraph that "most of the territory occupied by Israel is not the same as that occupied by Biblical Israel and Judea." That is only partially correct. Indeed, if present-day Israel were to occupy the full area the Bible alludes to, clearly one-half of the Mesopotamian peninsula would now be part of Israel. Is this what Mr. Trever meant and would like to see?

The Arab legion, created by and staffed with British officers, became the crack Arab military machine in the late 40's. Its activities in those years are well known, especially in the May of 1948. Its activities could not exactly be termed defensive in nature.

In referring to the Israeli invasion of Jordan, Mr. Trever presents no other documentation to illuminate this particular fact. I would certainly like to know more about this as well as know his sources of information. The same holds true for the blatant statement that "the preponderance of them (atrocities) were instigated by the Jews along the largest border, that facing Jordan." If Mr. Trever is to convince us, he must support his thesis more fully.

Aapparently the author believes that there is a book "which gives an extremely dynamic and factual account of the Middle-Eastern dispute through the eyes of a non-Arab, non-Jew British soldier." A book written by one John Glubb—or, as he is better known in Mid-Eastern circles, Glubb Pasha—the British commander of the Arab Legion in the Forties.

His being British is no indication of the correctness of the facts. Facts, like truth, may be relative. One sees what one wants to see. British actions in the Middle East have been of a sordid nature, as well. No other Western country did more to harm Israel's interest than Britain. I hope that Glubb Pasha's book is not a very British interpretation.

I will not refer to Mr. Trever's brief tirade at the end of his letter. It was undoubtedly due to some emotional rather than intellectual stimulant.

What does concern me most is the manner in which Mr. Trever presented his criticisms. They were not fully worked out and his assertions were unsubstantiated; his vagueness was equalled only by his partiality. Although I lodge this criticism at Mr. Trever, too many students appear to be guilty of this selfsame error.

Greek Ideas

To the Editor:

In this somewhat turbulant age of moral subjectivism and ethical anxiety, I should be comforted, if not downright overjoyed, by a D.O. editorial (May 6), in a catalogue of reasons for not publishing letters-to-the-editor, casually includes the statement that one such wastebasketed letter was written by a person "who thought that fraternities should have the right to discriminate."

I should be overjoyed, for here is a concrete standard on which I may hang my proverbial hat; but this flippant reference to a problem which has been gnawing at the insides of thousands of students, everywhere, for more than several years, seems to me to be the climax of the absurdity which has characterized the situation at this particular university.

Briefly, my position is this: discrimination sits at the very core of any fraternity system, and any attempt to do away with discrimination without radically changing the system itself is absurd, and can only lead to argument, bitterness, and perhaps furtive attempts at reprisal.

The word "fraternity" means brotherliness, and certainly the system as it exists today has provided its own irony in changing this definition from one of inclusion to one of exclusion.

I am not defending the system as it exists on this and other campuses: I firmly believe that the system should be removed from the campus and allowed to exist on its own terms. But I have as little use for those who can only see the superficial aspects of the discrimination problem, as I have for those who, know it or not, are active discriminators, and are either blind enough, or hypocritical enough, to deny their practice.

Dig into the marrow yourselves, gentlemen; see the world as more than a few classes and a student newspaper with some toy drums to beat. Perhaps you too will be left with somewhat more than an "empty feeling."

Crew

To the Editor:

paltry thing

A stick in a madras coat. . .

Dedicated to Name Withheld, in hopes that he withholds more quotes.

This is no campus for Ivy boys. The crew
On one another's oars, cars on the shore
—These sighing emanations—at their pew
The Solvay-sludge, the lager-laden roar:
Bock, bourbon, burgandy, extend their stomach's song
Whatever is savored or swilled, then spewed.
Their quote is right, but their author is wrong.
What sins have one-point
averages accrued!
O crew men, leaning in Sid's hoary pyre
As in the browning slats of a

Burning Ivy fire, swing Ivy

Who gave Yeats' name for Caught in your senseless music you erect Monuments of un-Ivy intellect.

Middle East

To the Editor:

I would like to comment on the recent letters and articles which have apeared in the DO concerning the Arab-Israeli dispute

The gravity of the situation in the Middle East is only aggravated, not mitigated, by these interpretations and reinterpretations of the intent of the Balfour Declaration, the further intent of His Majesty's government, and which seed of Abraham takes precedence. This is like spending one's time investigating which one of Mrs. O'Leary's cows kicked over the bucket while the city of Chicago is being consumed with fire. I fail to see any useful purpose served by such self-deluding discourses, which are notable for their apparent lack of interest in proposing ways and means of arriving at a mutually acceptable solution.

It is quite obvious that such sterile regurgitations have totally failed to come to grips with the current state of affairs: (1) There does exist in fact a State called Israel; (2) There exist Palestinian Arab refugees who are in fact homeless, since there are no nations now willing to accept them permanently, and who are living at the subsistence level; (3) The Arab States are still technically at war with Israel, whose existence they refuse to recognize; and (4) Conditions are such that full scale war between Israel and the Arab States could resume at any time.

The question I pose is what can be done short of war to ameliorate existing conditions in the Middle East? Just what can be done to bring about a mutually acceptable solution? Perhaps the recent contributors to the DO, on both sides, who have devoted their time and energy to battling phantoms of past history have some suggestions to offer. I assume that since they are so concerned with the situation in the Middle East they have given considerable thought to constructive approaches to the existing problems. Hopefully, they haven't spent all their efforts on conjuring up excuses for their respective sides' intransigeance.

An Insider

To the Editor:

Let me speak in a still, small voice to the booming outsider(s), however absurd, who must criticize our school. I have never been "outside" Syracuse University for two weeks. I have only been "inside" for four years.

Therefore it is unintelligent sentiment I express. But I am thinking of the professors who make Milton or Latin elegies more exciting than any football game.

I refer to the grad student who would "teach to get a degree" and happen to be a brilliant instructor. I am thinking of other people, a floor maid, a girl across the hall, a head resident, an academic dean, who have been inexcusably kind, friendly, and indeed, concerned, even when the knock on the door came at three in the morning.

And I think also of the feeling I have often known in many inky classrooms, when a line of ancient poetry has become the most important thing in the world. These things, and the "creepy stairs" in H.L., are among the dearest "truths" I know.

Forgive me, but it's been exciting. And I guess I'm rather sorry to be leaving this "corrupt" old place.

Black Again

To the Editor:

At first glance "The Negro" impressed me as no more than degenerate humor. But after reflecting, I wonder if the letter (1) makes sense; and (2) if it does, are its solutions at all a tribute to men sporting university degrees?

It seems obvious to me that all our university students know of "today's culture issue." And some have even come to comment on "integration vs segregation." etc. Probably most thinking people recognize potential in a suppressed group, be it white or black.

But sadly, problems exist on many fronts: how to convince certain whites to accept the Negro as he would the White, whether talented or lazy; how to educate the Negro so there can be no excuse for non-acceptance; and how to integrate, i.e., physical methods to make grey communities from white and black.

At the onset I suggested the "Marshall St. integrationists" made little logic in their swamp. They structure their generalities of Negro nobility on: (1) a DO statement suggesting the 15th Ward could be dangerous. (2) General rumors, possibly true, that some University Whites are emotional segregationists.

Surely it is deplorable that we have a poor man's ghetto in the 15th Ward. And that most of those occupying it are Negro, does point to the discrimination problem we know so well. But the fact remains that Bruises talk, especially when received through no fault of the pedestrian.

If the "rickety old shacks" contain only "warmth, laughter, gaity, friendship, and beauty", why is it that the Bruise problem centers here? (Actually if these characteristics are true, maybe we had better leave them alone, before they develop the shabby spirt of our Savoy Ambassadors.

Once over lightly, or "notes on the integrationist." The integrationist asserts himself as such because he recognizes his opposite, the segregationist. Both consider themselves the ultimate in servitude; both have monopolized all the final answers; and in general, anyone outside the clan is an idiot. Seeing the fanatics in motion is to observe a steaming hatred, one for the other.

We should, of course, inwardly smile at any man who proves himself, and open doors to give equal opportunity; but should we like Negroes for blackness, as the segregationist hates them for it? Furthermore, the Friday integrationists paint the words, "Our Idealism", between each written line. If they are so perfect and understandingly logical, why do they use language smug with righteousness and as emotional as a Southern Congressman on election eve?

Why is their sense so questionable? And as they cry for the unfortunate Negro, why do they stimultaneously attribute to him "in real life," "swelling strength" and "Strange beauty?" How can idealists refuse to recognize that others may believe differently, let alone, be right?

This is no idealism, but merely fanaticism. And why is it that, after so many words, they make no mention of constructive programs, as the Madison St. Project, the Dunbar Center, the Boys' Club, through which some positive gains may be made?

Apparently the Friday Troika needs martyrdom to assure their self-importance. May I suggest a midnight walk down Harrison St.? And later, when the social complexities of our Negro - White problem become more obvious, try the Boys' Club.

Hinds View

To the Editor:

The moon is a Janus, whose dual face
Is light or dark
And often in between.
So, too, my room is dual faced
In light, in dark, or in between,

Reflected sun from window glass across the drive
Bathes my north-facing room in pale, lukewarm light:
Brilliant, yet afterglowlike;
And darkness, unsubdued, hangs ominously in the corners:
Withdrawn, brooding, cobweblike.

My room's illumination is full-moon-bright
All day long
Yet I gaze out upon the sun-flooded building wall
Just north across the drive
Quite as the moon gazes impassively sunward.

My room and I, Janus-faced,
appear and disappear,
Our lunar season but a day,
Our brother moon's, a month,
Our brother sun's an eon not yet passed,
The open sky's beyond, barely born:
A Janus yet unknown.

Book Review

'Sissie'

By Robert S. Phillips

Editor's Note, Phillips is former editor of Syracuse 10 and is now Asst. Director of Admissions at SU.

Among the young writers graduated from Syracuse who currently are making literary headlines is the novelist John A. Williams.

A native Syracusan, Williams grew up in the University's shadow, and was an undergraduate on the Hill from 1946 to 1950, and a graduate student from 1950 to 1951. After working for one of the Syracuse dailies, and trying his hand at public relations and advertising both on the West Coast and in New York City, Williams has become a man of letters and devotes full time to his writing. Last year he was honored with a $2,000. grant by the National Institute of Arts and Letters. The author has published three novels — "The Angry Ones," "Night Song" and the recent "Sissie" (Farrar, Straus and Cudahy, 1963). It is this latest novel which is of especial interest to readers of the DO.

"Sissie" is for the most part set in Syracuse's Fifteenth Ward, and the action centers about that familiar neighborhood and the campus adjacent to it. In the novel, Williams evokes local scene after scene which is nostalgic and perceptively accurate. With marked brilliance he portrays the dichotemy between the "haves" and the "have nots" which even today is apparent within this particular area of the city. Williams labels two neighborhoods east of downtown Syracuse as "Bloodfield" — the Negro district, and "Jewtown." His novel is, among other things, a documentation of what it means to grow up in a neighborhood like Syracuse's Fifteenth Ward.

In "Sissie," Williams has not written a tract for urban renewal in Syracuse; he has created a work of literature, and the book speaks eloquently for all human beings whose environment prevents them from realizing their individual potentialities.

Syracuse University is more than local color in Williams' novel. The university stands as an emblem of aspiration to those who live in the Ward:

"High above on a hill stood the university. A clumsy shaft of sandstone, one of its sooty Gothic towers was visible from Jewtown. From that tower came the majestic sound of the chimes played by the Delta Kappa Epsilon boys. Perhaps the chimes were responsible for the odd bond that joined the university and Jewtown . . .

"It was with the commoners' amused tolerance that the residents of Jewtown lined the streets to watch the students snake-dance down from the hill in their annual 'Beat Colgate' parade. torches flared, the streets abounded with clean-looking, block-lettered youth . . ."

"Warily, sometimes "Sissie rummaged through her dreams and thought what all the other Jewtowners were thinking. One day, perhaps, that rare black face in the crowd of students might be her daughter or son . . ." (pp. 217-218)

These paragraphs state Williams' theme as well as demonstrate his use of the city and university as locale. The reader follows Ralph and Sissie and their children through familiar cobbled streets of an earlier Syracuse. The Thornden Park is included (p. 20); the offices of the "Post-Standard (p. 115), the Continental Can plant (p. 190), Crouse tower (217, 226), Zeta Beta Tau fraternity (p. 195, 216), the State Fair (221) and other famliiar local institutions. When Sissie's family falls upon hard times and moves to a less expensive flat, the absence of a view of the university has a profound psychological effect upon them:

"They were only a single block away from the old flat, but it seemed miles. They could not see the university, and though they heard the chimes, the bells no longer held any special meaning for them . . ." (p. 226)

"Sissie" is a novel which should be read not only for its background, but for the magnitude of its achievement — which has been recognized by leading critics in major periodicals (cf. "Atlantic," "Saturday Review," "Time," "New York Review of Books"). Within 277 pages of technical virtuosity — incorporating flash - backs, dream sequences, interior monologues — the younger writer comes to terms with some of the most urgent problems facing the nation today. Williams at no point becomes shrill or didactic; he has come the road, and the reader assimilates these experiences with the realization: This is the way it is.

Senior Class Nets $550 This Year

Henry Lee, senior class president, has announced that the Class of '63 has a balance of $400 in its treasury. The class earned $550 this year.

Lee listed the projects of the class executive council in a class newsletter distributed last week.

Kum-Bak show tickets have been procured for seniors for the first time. The alumni-sponsored show, featuring Louise O'Brien and the Four Lads, will be held at 8:15 p. m. June 1 in the men's gym.

Through commencement committee, Lee and executive council member Scott Carlson made arrangements for the first luncheon for graduating seniors and guests. Seniors can receive three free tickets for the June 1 luncheon from 10 a. m. to 2 p.m. today through Friday in Huntington B. Crouse Hall.

The senior ball will be held 9 p. m. to 1 a. m. May 31 at Randolph House. Dawn Fazzone is chairman of the event.

The executive council chose Leland Peterson and Monica Polozie as class marshals from the 20 applicants for the position.

A newsletter listing all senior class events was sent to all seniors at home during spring vacation.

For the first time, a class sponsored lecture series, which included informal talks by Dr. Agehananda Bharati, Dr. Michael O. Sawyer and Dr. Ray Irwin. The speeches were broadcast by WAER.

A total of 400 votes were received in the commencement speaker poll taken by the senior class through the Daily Orange. Adlai Stevenson, U. S. ambassador to the United Nations, received the most votes.

Stevenson, who will receive an honorary doctor of laws degree at commencement, may give a short speech.

A $250 profit was made on the sale of 500 "mums" during Parents' Weekend. The sale was sponsored by the senior class.

The class also sponsored the sale of "Scalp Army" buttons for the Syracuse - Army football game. Approximately 800 were sold, resulting in a $250 profit.

Robert M. Morgenthau, Democratic gubernatorial candidate last fall, spoke in Maxwell Auditorium and received a certificate from Lee naming him an honorary member of the Class of 1963.

A fall semester newsletter was sent to all seniors three weeks before the semester began. The newsletter listed the executive council's plans for the year.

Patricia Lassen represented the senior class for Association of Women Students, Dawn Fazzone for the university social committee and Susan Silber, Joyce Hergenhan and Rebecca Harris on the Joint Student Government social, academic and cultural committee.

DRAFT DEFERMENTS

Students interested in obtaining university certification to support a Selective Service deferment for 1963-1964 should file a request card in the dean of men's office.

Beginning today, cards will be available in each men's residence halls. Completed cards should be returned to the dormitory control office.

This service — provided annually by the office of the dean of men — is available to male undergraduates enrolled as full-time students.

Upon receipt of a request card, the dean of men's office will forward a Selective Service Form 109 to the registrant's local Selective Service board, which will certify the students' attendance and class standing for 1962-63.

Students enrolled in the graduate division, College of Law or the College of Forestry may obtain similar certification by request through their respective schools.

UP IN THE AIR

WAER Spotlights

By Robert Feldman

I'd like to take this opportunity to outline some of the exciting cmapus - oriented programs WAER intends to spotlight for next year.

With our return to the air on September 23, regular listeners will find many program changes. We will be moving our afternoon music block, jazz, folk music, Broadway, etc., from 4-5 p. m. up to 11 p. m. - midnight. We feel that with this change we can attract a student audience which may like to listen to light music but not to the pace radio style of the AM stations. By utilizing 11-midnight for music, we then move our late night news to 10:45 in order to capture the city's news audience a full fifteen minutes before any other radio or TV station in the area.

Over the weekend, we intend to make the biggest programming step by beginning our Saturday schedule at 1 p. m. and presenting a four hour program service called "Odyssey." We are all very excited about this new porgram because it has the potential of NBC's "Monitor" in covering local news, sports, lectures and university news, along with special live drama and live music segments. It will also utilize some of the latent freshmen talent much sooner than has previously been possible.

Another special series we hope to bring to Syracuse next year will be the weekly Friday evening concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra live from Boston through the facilities of the Educational Radio Network.

In conclusion, a recently completed survey of Syracuse radio potential shows that 33.4 per cent of the homes in Syracuse have FM receivers — more than ten per cent increase from the Pulse Survey of 1960. WAER, the radio voice of Syracuse University, has a great responsibility in serving this audience well. We pledge to continue the high standards we have upheld for the last 17 years.

Architects Get Awards

The American Institute of Architects has awarded scholarships totaling $1,600 to two School of Architecture students.

Robert Greenberg will receive a $1,000 award from the Edward Langley Fund, established by Langley and awarded by AIA.

Frank Martin Warr will receive a $100 Langley Scholarship and a $500 Ruberoid Scholarship, one of 20 given annually by the Ruberoid Company through AIA.

Greenberg and Warr were selected as recipients by AIA's committee on academic training. The committee this year awarded a total of $51,850 in scholarships for advancement of architectural education.

Fabian Rep to Speak

The secretary of the Fabian Society of London, Mrs. Shirley Williams will lead a discussion at 4 p.m. Thrusday in the Founders Room of Maxwell Hall.

The discussion is sponsored by the Maxwell School.

Rush Plans Eliminated

The Panhellenic Council presidents' vote, taken at Tuesday's Panhel meeting, resulted in the necessary two-thirds vote to change rushing rules.

The after-intersession rush period next year will be extended to enable every rushee to visit all houses.

Plan A, B and C rushing will be completely eliminated.

Geraldine LaDue, Panhel president, said the move was "the first step in eliminating discrimination."

Syracuse University on the Way Up

WORK ON the dorm on the Crouse site is continuing. The foundation has been set and work on the building itself will begin shortly.

LANDSCAPING between the Kimmel-Marion complex is almost complete with flowers expected to be added this week.

CONSTRUCTION on the first building of the Samuel I. Newhouse Communications Center is progressing at the site on University Place.

Construction moves on at Syracuse University as plans were announced Friday for a $3 million married students housing project in the Collendale area.

Presently under construction is the Crouse site women's dorm in the 400 block of Comstock Avenue. Construction began on the new dorm this spring (top picture) and is slated for completion next year.

Construction and landscaping was completed only last week on the new Marion-Kimmell complex (center). Construction began on the new men's dorm last spring. The building has been in use since fall, with dining facilities opening up later in the semester.

September, 1964 is the target date for the opening of the first building of the $15 million Newhouse Communications Center (bottom picture). Foundations are now being laid for the S. I. Newhouse School of Journalism.

To Interview

Capt. Gladys M. Masterpool, Women's Army Corps selection officer for this area, will visit the Hill from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., today.

"SHE WAS ONLY THE DEAN OF MEN'S DAUGHTER"

(But oh what a record she made)

The only trouble is, it's been banned. From the radio at least. In fact, the whole darn Capitol album, "Campus Confidential" by the Four Preps, has been banned. "She Was Only the Dean of Men's Daughter" and the other numbers, like "Princess Poo-poo-ly Has Plenty Papaya," are just a little too... well, colorful for air play.

This album was recorded during a Four Preps Concert at UCLA. Their performance was wildly appreciated by the students, and we strongly suspect it will be wildly appreciated by everyone who hears it on this new Capitol release. (With the sole exception of radio station owners who want to keep their stations on the air.)

So slip into your nearest record store for "Campus Confidential" on Capitol. (In plain brown wrapper, of course.)

(P.S. Look for the Four Preps in concert on your campus.)

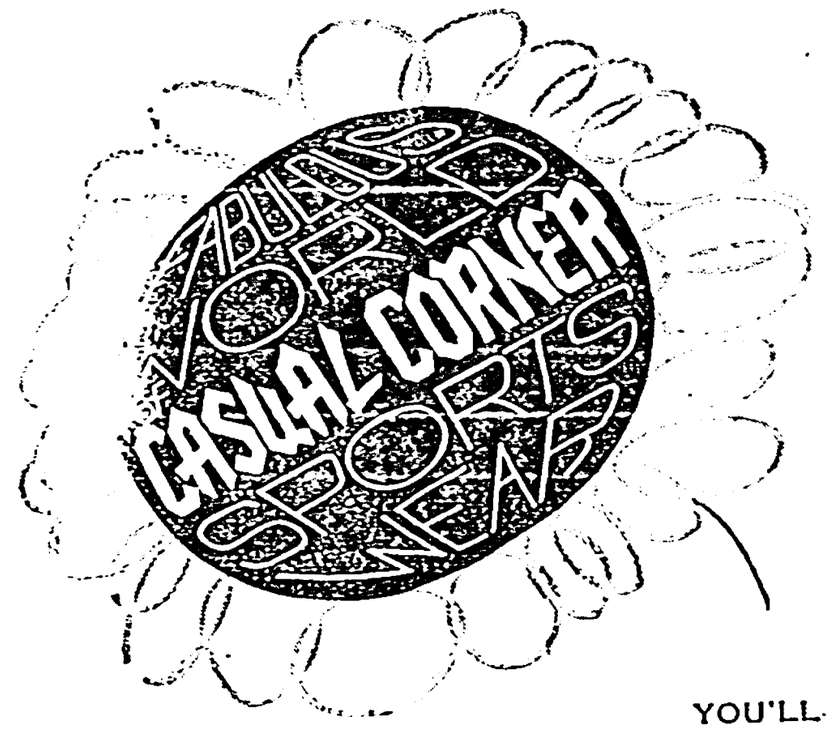
PERMANENT ID CARDS

Permanent identification cards will become a reality during fall semester, Registrar Edwin Smith has announced.

Students should keep their present ID cards over the summer, Smith said, and use them until the new cards are processed in the fall.

Current ID cards will be validated at registration.



Students who enter in September will receive permanent cards first, Smith said, because they do not have any means of university identification.

If current plans are accepted, the ID cards will replace monthly meal tickets.

Parsons Named Top ID Student

Anthony Parsons, a fifth year industrial design student, was honored Friday night as one of the top 25 ID students in the nation.

Freshman English Program Changed

The Hill English department has announced a reorganization of its freshman courses effective the fall semester 1963-64.

Citing a need to change the uniformity of the regular freshman sections, the English department has divided the English 1a sections into two groups, based on CEEB scores.

The present English honors sections and English 9 course (for slow developers) will continue.

About a third of the 2,200 freshmen taking regular English will be in sections which will stress instruction in the basic skills, based on CEEB results.

The remainder will take 1a courses stressing more writing since their CEEB scores will presumably show an adequate knowledge of basic skills.

English 1a Honors offers special instruction to those students with CEEB verbal scores of approximately 700 and better.

Neither regular English course will be considered as remedial, but as a separation of students into sections which do work more to their particular needs.

The English 1b courses for the spring term will be split along the same lines. Those students taking the regular English which stressed instruction in basic skills, will take the 1b course which will be basically similar to the 1a course not stressing basics.

The other 1b section will be slightly more difficult than the present freshman English course. Students will read extensively and be asked to write critically on their readings.

Director Named

The university commission on community service, a project sponsored by the Maxwell School of Citizenship, will have as its next director John Strong of the Maxwell staff.

Prof. Joseph Julian has served as the commission's first director since December, when it began.

The project was suggested last fall by Dean Stephen Bailey.

The main goal is to have students who volunteer their services think of the Syracuse area as their "second home" in their efforts to "establish a relationship between the inidvidual and the community, which is basic to the concept of citizenship," according to Julian.

Student volunteers started with research, checking needs of local welfare agencies, churches, hospitals and youth centers. Approximately 40 students were placed on the staffs of various city organizations.

Two student coordinators who have done "outstanding work," Julian said, are Patricia Meek and Peter Osgood, both freshmen. "Most of them (student volunteers) are freshmen and sophomores," Prof. Julian said, "who are growing right along with the project."

Tentative plans for next year, as outlined by Strong, are calling a meeting of student leaders over the summer to plan setting up registration booths where students interested in volunteering may sign up; sending information about the project to incoming freshmen and expanding the kinds of services offered.

Possibilities include working with teaching assistants in public schools and helping foreign students find housing and combatting any discrimination they might encounter.

JSL Approves Constitution

Joint Student Legislature approved at its last meeting a constitution for Students for Free Expression.

The group, organized by freshmen Howard Brickman, John King and David Borthwick, intends to bring to campus next year speakers whose point of view would be considered by most of the student body to be "controversial."

The constitution states that "a democracy rests upon the free interchange of ideas," including those which are controversial."

A proposed list of speakers includes Malcolm X of the Black Muslim movement; a speaker from the White Citizens Council of the South; James Hoffa of the Teamsters Union; George Lincoln Rockwell of the American Nazi Party; a speaker from Moral Rearmament; and a speaker from a pacifist movement.

The main problem to be overcome will be finances, but it is hoped that student interest will sustain the organization.

The group will hold a meeting in early fall.

Meadows Named Advisor

Dr. Paul Meadows, chairman of the department of sociology and anthropology, has been named advisor to the newly formed Syracuse Committee on Equality.

On Friday, the group will sponsor a talk by Dr. Michael O. Sawyer, departing head of the citizenship program.

Dr. Sawyer will speak at 11:45 a. m. on the quad to commemorate the ninth anniversary of the Supreme Court school desegregation decision.

He will discuss the historical meaning of the decision and personal responsibliities in civil rights.

A member of the equality group will also speak.

After the speeches, committee members and other interested students will march downtown to mail letters to Birmingham, Ala.

During the walk, they plan to stop at Mayor William Walsh's offices to get his signature on the letters.

A letter of support will be sent to the Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr., now jailed in Birmingham, and another sent urging desegregation in the city.

Students interested in joining the committee on Equality should contact president Robert Cohen, ext. 2891.

Alumni Gets R-TV Award

A Syracuse University alumnus who worked as a reporter for the Syracuse Herald-Journal during his student days has been cited for "significant achievement in the field of television sales" by the television-radio center and Alpha Epsilon Rho, TV-radio honorary.

The citation was presnted at the Hill's 15th annual radio-TV awards luncheon Saturday at Drumlins Country Club to Edward Bleier, a member of the Class of 1950.

He is now vice presdient and national sales manager for the ABC television network.

Other jobs held by the television executive during his undergraduate days at SU included sports announcer for WSYR-FM when that station was the exclusive outlet for broadcasting professional basketball games, time salesman for WNDR, writer for WFBL and announcer for campus station WAER-FM.

Griffin Gets Shaw Award

Janet Griffin was named the Shaw dormitory senior who has contributed the most to the campus at the Shaw banquet Wednesday night.

Bonnie Krienson was named the senior who has contributed most to the dorm, while Elaine Solin received an award for the senior with the highest cumulative average.

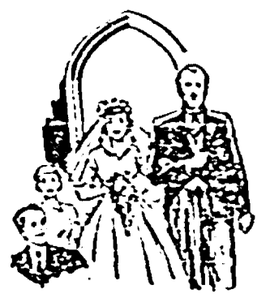
Miss Griffin, production manager of WAER-FM, has served as president of the Speech Advisory Council and a Daily Orange columnist. She is a member of Sigma Lambda Delta, freshman women's honorary; Lambda Sigma Sigma, junior women's honorary; Alpha Epsilon Rho, radio-tv honorary; and Rho Delta Pi, English honorary.

Miss Solin has a 2.64 average for 3½ years, and is an English major.

Shaw Profits Go to Union

Cynthia Davis, chairman of Shaw Weekend, announced that the contributions raised at the weekend's twister amounted to $29.38. This money will be donated to the University Union Building Fund.

This was the first attempt by an outside group to raise money for the proposed building.



Fern Gets DO Position

Student Placed On Probation

A sophomore in the college of liberal arts has been placed on disciplinary probation until February for dropping a bowling ball from his seventh story dormitory window. Dean of Men Earle W. Clifford announced Friday.

The student's scholarship aid will be taken away and he will not be allowed to participate in campus activities until February.

The decision was made by the dean of men's office because it was a "dormitory situation" according to Clifford.

Clifford said there were people in the area when the ball was dropped, but that no one was hurt.

Following the decision the student was instructed to move to a room on the first floor.

Graduate Magazine Planned For Campus Distribution

By SANDY MYERS
Junior Editor

Thoth was the Egyptian sun-god who was scribe of the gods.

It is also the name of a semi-yearly journal published by graduate students in the English department.

The magazine, which began in 1958 as a mimeographed paper, has evolved into a 50-page professional journal which the editors hope will eventually become a quarterly.

The spring 1963 issue will be distributed Wednesday. Copies, at 75 cents each, will be available in the English office, 203 Hall of Languages.

The issue will feature articles by Hill graduate students Robert Hastings, Robert Hudspeth, Margaret Nelson and Donald Stoddard. Two articles deal with William Butler Yeats, while the others discuss Dorothy Brooke and Ellen Glasgow.

Dr. Barry Targan, editorial advisor to Thoth, said the concentration on Yeats is unusual. The magazine, he said, tries to reflect a chronological scope, covering writers from the 17th to 20th centuries, as well as English and American writers.

Thoth, which is subsidized by the university, is sent to 130 colleges and universities throughout the United States and Canada.

It is bibliographed by Publications of the Modern Language Association, abstracted in Abstracts of English Studies of the National Council of Teachers of English and is included in the Bulletin of Biography and Magazine Notes.

Now printing only articles by Hill English's graduate students, the magazine may expand to include articles by other scholars of English and American literature, Dr. Targan said.

The magazine was originated to provide an outlet for research done by graduate students.

Although some students have had their work published in professional journals, Dr. Targan said Thoth fills a need for more places to present the research results.

Columbia Whips Hill

An improved but still not winning performance by the Syracuse crew saw them finish behind a winning Columbia eight and a second place Rutgers shell, in a triangular meet on the Harlem River Saturday.

"We improved about two lengths during the course of the past week and this is the best race we have rowed so far, Hill coach Loren Schoff said.

Columbia finished a half length ahead of Rutgers with the Orange boat two and a half lengths back.

Syracuse was behind from the beginning with a 29 to 30 beat pace through most of the race. The Rutgers boat stayed with the Columbia crew all the way until they faded enough over the last quarter mile for Columbia's half length victory.

VARSITY COXSWAIN JOHN REED beats out the stroke in the varsity shell as the Orangemen heave ho.

The Syracuse junior varsity oarsmen were second to Rutgers with Columbia third. Rutgers also won the frosh race with Syracuse third.

All the crews in the east will meet head on this weekend in the Eastern Sprint Championships in Worcester, Mass.

The nation's top collegiate crews go at it in the IRA Regatta on Lake Onondaga June 15.

He will enroll as a pre-law student. Dean selected Syracuse over 28 other universities, including several Ivy League colleges which had offered him scholarships.

Tennis Wins at Bucknell And Penn State For SU

By BILL CRONAUER

Syracuse University's tennis team took two giant steps toward a winning season last weekend by overpowering Bucknell 7-2 and Penn State 8-1 in road matches.

The pair of victories upped the Orange record to 7-5 with only three contests remaining. Syracuse hosts Colgate Wednesday, seeking revenge for a 5-4 defeat suffered at Hamilton a week ago.

Other matches are scheduled with St. Lawrence and Rochester, both on the Skytop courts.

Against Penn State, the Piety swept all six singles and two of the three doubles. In the Bucknell match,, the Hill netmen dropped one singles and a doubles.

Syracuse played without the services of no. 5 man Al Napper for both matches. Senior captain Ross Kaplan missed the Bucknell encounter, but rejoined the team at Penn State.

Double Win

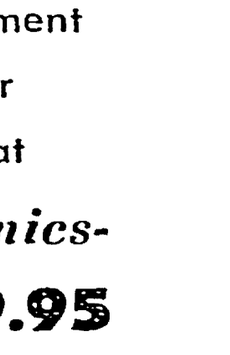
Top-ranking sophomore Steve Rubell put on his finest tennis show of the season by smothering Isaacman of Penn State and Nemerov of Bucknell by identical 6-0, 6-1 scores.

Rubell also teamed with junior Bill Gedalecia for two doubles wins. The duo moved up to the first doubles position with the absence of Kaplan and Napper.

In singles, Gedalecia downed Bucknell's Warren, 8-6, 6-2, before tripping Brandwene of the Nittany Lions. 6-1, 6-1, on Saturday.

Improving juniors Alvin Davis and Lew Katcher swept both their singles matches. The Davis - Katcher doubles team rolled to its third consecutive win by defeating Simonetta-Bickmore of Penn State, 6-2, 6-4.

The pair took an easy two-set victory over their Bucknell opponents Friday.



Senior Bruce Gordon returned to starting singles action and emerged with two wins. He battled a marathon duel with Bucknell's Beardslee, finally winning 6-3, 5-7, 6-3. Saturday, he conquered State's no. 6 man in straight sets.

In other singles matches, Ross Kaplan edged Seitchik of Penn State, 7-5, 9-7, and soph Dave Barrie, in his first varsity performance, bowed to Brandes of Bucknell.

'Cuse Juice

By RON ROBERTS

Sam Huff, the controversial linebacker of the always-a-bridesmaid New York Giants, likes to entertain banquet audiences with this story about Cleveland's great Jim Brown:

"The first time we faced Brown, "says Sam, "the idea was for me to 'get on his back' and irritate him enough to get his mind off the game.

"The first time he came through the line I nailed him cold and said 'You stink Brown.' Jim said nothing and trotted back to the huddle.

JIM BROWN

"Next time through I stopped him again, and commented 'You stink. Brown.' Again Jim said nothing.

"The next time he got the ball he cracked through the line, barrelled right over me, burst past our secondary, and went some 60 yards for a touchdown.

"Jim nonchalantly dropped the ball in the end zone, then turned and yelled back downfield: 'How do I smell from here, Huff?'"

The story is an old one. Only the names have been changed to protect the bankrolls. Or, as Brown explained it on his recent trip to Syracuse:

"Sam and I make a lot of money for each other. I say he's tough; he says I'm tough." And 65,000 fans come out to see who's lying. The Huff-Brown "feud" is second only to the Sword vs. Administration.

Speaking seriously about Huff, Brown believes that Sam's reputation has been completely molded and changed at will by publicity.

"When the Giants had the toughest defense in the league a few years ago," said Jim, "Huff got all the attention. This is natural, because as a center-linebacker he can plug, go right or left, or drop back for the pass. So he's in on a lot of plays.

"But at that time he was overrated. Now it is the other way around. Someone started saying that he piles on after the whistle, and his reputation has been changed so that now he might be underrated."

In his personal rating system, Brown would rank Huff second. The Detroit Lion's Joe Schmidt gets Brown's vote as the toughest.

"If I have a one-on-one situation with Huff," said Jim. "I figure I have a 50-50 chance of getting lose. I'd have to spot Schmidt five yards away to have that good a chance.

Jim couldn't bring the Green Bay Packer's great Ray Nitschke into the anaivsis because he has never had the "pleasure" of playing against him.

Moving away from opponent linebackers and speaking about his own line at Cleveland, Jim had good news for Syracuse fans when he noted that "Ol" John Brown might just earn himself a place on that line."

Brown was the top alternate lineman on the 1959 National Championship team at S.U.

"Huff's rougher when he tackles, but Schmidt is sure. He just wraps up those legs and drops you. Sam often tackles high."

John came into practice a little ragged and more than a little heavy, according to Jim. But he was straightened out quickly.

"They scrimmaged John opposite big Bill Glass" (Cleveland's All-Pro giant.) said Jim. "John has kind of a funny way of coming out of his crouch, and Glass really pounded him.

"They got into a couple of swinging duels, but it looks like it did John good. He just might make that club."

With John Brown and Paul Brown all with the Cleveland Browns, it would have been one Brown too many. They got rid of the right one when they axed Paul.

Syracuse Stickmen Whip RPI, 16-7

By VIN ZUKOWSKI

For the entire first quarter and 2:47 of the second, Rensselaer Polytech's defense checkedSU's attack scoreless. Then, at 2:48 of the second quarter, Ron Fraser found an opening and scored. The stiff defense sagged, and the Orange went on to a 16-7 victory.

RPI drew first blood early in the game. At 2:30 the Engineer's Charlie Harpur hurled one past goalie Pete Coe. Rensselaer added another score and took a 2-0 lead into the second quarter before a Parent's Weekend crowd at Troy, N. Y.

After Fraser's first score, "Boom Boom" added four more goals and one assist. However, John Pappas coped the scoring with five-and-four. John Crowther scored four times, and Bill Wormuth and Tom Kennedy each added single tallies.

The Syracuse win insures the varsity of a .500 season. Wednesday the Syracuse stickmen play Cornell at Manley Field at 3 p.m.

Frosh Loss

While the varsity was turning the tables on RPI the frosh stickmen were being overwhelmed by the undefeated Colgate squad at Hamilton.

On the opening face-off, Colgate needed only two passes for a fast-break and the first score. By half-time the Raiders had a 8-1 lead, and a added eleven more during the second half to increase the margin to 19-2.

For the frosh, Captain Al Starling and Dave Stolp succeeded in scoring the only two Orange goals. This brings the frosh mark to 1-3.

This week the yearlings get a chance to avenge two defeats on the road. Coming to Syracuse, the Cornell frosh meet SU Tuesday at 3 p.m. and Thursday at 3:30 p.m. Colgate brings in its undefeated squad.

Nine Upset Again By Weatherman

Yes, Virginia, there is a Syracuse baseball team.

And you might get a chance to watch them when the weatherman stops playing games with them.

This past weekend was just another chapter in the whole rediculous affair. Friday Bucknell sent up a group to entertain the folks at Lew Carr field. Friday Syracuse returned the same group to Bucknell, unused.

Penn State brought in their forces Saturday, hoping to play the Orangemen twice. Foolish boys. They went home idle, as have Seton Hall, R. P. I., Hobart and Bucknell before them.

Only one team has gotten past the weatherman, and they wish they hadn't. Syracuse greeted Rochester in their only home game this year with a brutal 19-2 beating.

The Orangemen are 4-6 on the season with five games remaining on the schedule, four of them this week.

Today they are visiting St. Lawrence, tomorrow they move on the Clarkson, before trying it again at home Wednesday against Cornell.

Friday they are back on the road against Colgate. June 1, Colgate returns the call.

Coach Ted Kleinhans will probably go with sophs Ed Barnowski 1-4 and Phil Schoff 1-0 and either Bob Lelli 1-1 or Larry Craybas 1-1 this week, although not necessarily in that order.

Archbold Meet Victim of Rain

Syracuse's track team set a record Saturday, although they did not enter the starting blocks for their scheduled home meet with Colgate.

For the first time in Orange history a cinder duel was washed out by weather.

Coach Bob Grieve disclosed that the meet may be held Monday or Tuesday in Archbold Stadium. If those days are unacceptable to Colgate, the meet will be cancelled, added Grieve.

Next action for the Orangemen will be the IC4A championships, May 24-25, at New York City's Randall's Island Stadium.

Hill athletes entered include Mouncey Ferguson, mile; Cal Evans, quarter mile, and Charlie Gaston, broad jump, 100 yard dash and 220 yard dash.

Ferguson placed fifth in this meet last year by stopping the clocks at 4:11 in the mile event.

Evans has a 48.3 quarter to ihs credit this year while Gaston has sprinted the 100 yard distance in 9.8 seconds.

Washout

HILL ATHLETES never got out of the starting blocks Saturday as sub freezing temperatures and monsoon rain storms wiped out action. This could cause one to question the practicality of spring sports at Syracuse. Track coach Bob Grieve found the Archbold Stadium oval under water and ice Saturday morning. The baseball double bill was also frozen out.

Shown here are runners GARY SHERMAN, CHARLIE GASTON, CAL EVANS and DAVE SNIPE.

Snow, Stevenson Speakers At 109th Commencement

The strains of the graduation processional echo through Archbold Stadium Sunday as 2011 students receive degrees in the 109th commencement exercises.

Flags and bunting adorn the stadium as the soon-to-be alumni follow the color guard, at 10:20 a.m., in the traditional academic procession.

Commencement begins at 10 a.m., when degree candidates assemble on the Marshall Hall lawn, on the College of Forestry campus. After the procession begins, no late- arriving seniors will be allowed to join.

Procession

The Reserve Officers Training Corps color guard, leading the procession, will carry the American and university flags. Following them will be the candidates.

The mace bearer, faculty members, academic deans, board of trustee members and senior officers, alumni of the class of 1913, directors, administrative staff and the Chancellor's group follow.

Arents Pioneers: Three Hill Alumni

Three outstanding Syracuse University alumni will be presented the George Arents Pioneer Medal tonight at the Kum Bak Show.

The citations — the university's highest award to former students — will be presented by Chancellor William P. Tolley to Lewis P. Andreas, retiring Hill athletic director; Miss Mary Caroline Egan, chief nutritionist in the Children's Bureau of the U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare; and Frederick Vosburgh, associate editor of National Geographic Magazine and vice president of the National Geographic Society.

Arents Medals are given for "excellence in the individual's field of endeavor and outstanding service to alma mater." Recipients are selected by a special committee of the board of trustees with a maximum of three being presented each year.

Andreas, a member of the class of 1921, will complete 40 years of service with the university when he retires in January. An athletic in his undergraduate days, he joined the Hill Athletic Department in 1924 and coached football and basketball. His Arents citation is for "excellence in physical education."

Miss Egan will be presented a medal for "excellence in nutrition and government service." Following her graduation from Syracuse, she taught high school and was employed by the State Department of Health. She joined the Department of Health, Education and Welfare in 1953 and two years ago was named to her present position.

Vosburgh, a Phi Beta Kappa of the Class of 1925, will be honored for "excellence in magazine journalism." A former editor of the Daily Orange and the Onondagan, his articles have won both a Freedoms Foundation Award and a Westinghouse Science Writing Award. He is a former Post-Standard reporter and served with the Associated Press in New York and Washington.

Previous winners of the award include the late Dorothy Thompson, Dewitt Mackenzie, Evelyn Millis Duvall, Carl Rausch, and Drew Middleton who returns to campus again this year to receive a degree of honorary doctor of letters during commencement exercises.

The distinguished alumnus award was established in 1939 by the late George Arents who was then vice chairman of the university board of trustees.

Sir C. P. Snow Addresses Graduation Exercises

The honorary doctor of humane letters degree conferred Sunday on Sir Charles Percy Snow is just one of the many degrees held by the British author and physicist.

Snow, 57, also holds honorary degrees in law from Leicester and Liverpool Universities, in literature from Dartmouth College and St. Andrew's University and in humane letters from Kenyon College, Washington University and St. Louis University.

A graduate of Leicester University College, where he played cricket and was graduated with first class honors in chemistry in 1927, Sir Charles received his master's degree from the same school.

He received his doctorate at Christ's College Cambridge University, in 1930 and from then until 1950 was a Fellow there.

After teaching in residence at Cambridge until 1940, Sir Charles tutored from 1940-45. While doing research in molecular structure, he also edited Discovery and the Cambridge Library of Modern Science series.

But he is best known for the nine books which are part of a projected 11-volume set about stresses in contemporary British life.

The main character of the series, Lewis Eliot, is largely autobiographical. Eliot is a typical Britisher, confronted with the problems of automation and science and their relation to the arts and humanities.

Writing at first was for Snow only a relaxation in the midst of his scientific studies. His first story, "Death Under Sail," (1932) was a detective story, while "The Search" (1934) and "New Lives for Old" (1935) showed his deep interest in science.

In 1935, however, he began considering the Lewis Eliot series, which he entitled "Strangers and Brothers." The first novel, whose title was the same as that of the series, was published in 1940.

A steady stream of novels followed, including "The Light and the Dark," "Time of Hope," "The Masters," "The New Men," "Homecomings," "The Conscience of the Rich," "The Affair" and "The Corridors of Power."

Known as a traditionalist writer, Dr. Snow also writes articles on literacy and other subjects for a variety of periodicals, among them the London Sunday Times.

Indebtedness To Syracuse

Nearly 2,000 seniors will receive degrees tomorrow in Archbold Stadium, marking another milestone for these young men and women and for Syracuse University.

For the many hundreds who will not continue their education, the world and its pitfalls await. It has been the function of this university, in the past four years, to offer to the students some foundations that will allow them to pursue intellectual endeavors.

It is hoped that graduates of the Class of 1963 will use their four years at Syracuse, not only as a ticket to a profession, but also an incentive towards perfection.

Syracuse University, as should its graduates, is aiming towards perfection. It is, according to Chancellor William P. Tolley, "a good university on the verge of greatness." Segments of this educational building program have taken place during the past four years and many will occur as each new class enrolls in the future.

Syracuse University is a good university moving ahead and it should not be allowed to stand still: For the graduates of this institution have a debt to pay to the university. The few thousand dollars spent by the students toward his education is worth much more than was spent. For as Syracuse advances, so do its graduates and its alumni.

The Class of 1963 has recognized this debt in establishing a goal of a $150,000 endowment fund to be raised within the next 25 years. This would cost each student only $40 a year.

The pledge has been made. The responsibility now rests upon the shoulders of the members of the class. They must do their part in the continuing struggle to maintain and improve Syracuse University.

Ernie

Just four weeks ago today Ernie Davis was in town for a visit. We didn't know then it would be his last.

Ernie was fast on his way to becoming a football legend. But he had only begun when leukemia struck him. Instead he became a legend for his courage and indomitable spirit.

And long after his football records are broken and forgotten, he'll be remembered for the courageous life he led—right until the end.

"Either you fight or give up," he said. "I decided I would face up to whatever I had to and try to beat it."

He tried—how he tried. No one, not even his closest friends, ever knew the inner struggle he fought as death crept upon him.

We knew he would someday lose his battle with the blood disease, but when he died it was as if we hadn't known he was ill at all. He had almost made us believe he could beat it.

Not everybody knew him, but he never met a stranger. His kind doesn't pass our way often.

He was indeed a great athlete, but he was even a greater man.

And he had only begun.

Congratulations

Through the leadership of its officers the Class of 1963 has shown spirit, responsibility and academic prowess. Spirit was exemplified through class buttons, such as "Beat Army" and through trips to athletic events at other colleges. The class exhibited responsibility when it cast the highest senior vote ever recorded in Joint Student Government elections and set up a lecture series. And, finally, nearly 100 more seniors will graduate this year than in 1962.

The class has shown its potential and a special note of congratulations must be penned to the senior class officers:

Henry Lee, president; John Mackey, vice-president; Pat Healy, secretary; and Susan Sibler, treasurer.

THE CUTTING ROOM

Culture at Syracuse

by John E. Greenwald

EDITOR'S NOTE: Mr. Greenwald, a graduating senior dually enrolled in the School of Journalism and American Studies, reflects upon the Arts at Syracuse, a field which he studied as Daily Orange Entertainment Editor this past year.

"Syracuse is a cultural desert!"

Along with frosh beanies and orange shakers, this statement represents the attitude of the unsophsiticated and uninitiated underclassman. But, as the beanies become straw hats and the shakers are replaced by beer mugs, the myth of Syracuse's cultural wasteland persists with too many of the Hill's now sophisticated and initiated undergraduates.

Syracuse University and the surrounding country are cultural deserts only for the intellectual snobs who can't tell a good concert without a name orchestra playing. But for those willing to look for intellectual excitement with a little more effort than spinning a radio dial and expecting Beethoven to pour forth, Syracuse offers a wealth of good music, enjoyable theater and stimulating art.

We have just finished a year as the Daily Orange Entertainment Editor, of covering the local amusements and arts. Frankly, there was more news than we could handle, and all too often we had to give a local play or touring musician less space in the DO than was deserved since there were so many others equally fine.

One Wednesday night last April, for instance, folk singer Joan Baez gave a recital, the Cleveland Orchestra offered a concert and the university Drama Department premiered a new production of a classic Italian comedy. While all Wednesdays weren't as fierce as this one in presenting problems of choice for the theater or concert goer, it is an example of both the wealth and the depth of culture for the student, profesor and housewife.

The University itself, has one of the finest arts progarms of any school in the country. It has a music school that sponsors free weekly concerts plus special seasonal events such as this Spring's choral concert featuring a combined orchestral, choral and ballet rendition of Carl Orff's "Carmina Catulli."

The Drama Department has three groups bringing live theater to the campus and city. First is Boar's Head, one of the Hill's oldest organizations. Each year it presents student actors, directors and crews in often excellent productions.

New to the department is the Civic Company, run in conjunction with SU's evening adult branch, University College. It combines student, faculty and local talent in a community theater that comes close, in some respects, to rivaling profesional productions.

Also new is a student group, the Ensemble Theatre, that hopes to continue as a repertoire company serving central New York. In addition, the department has expanded its productions to the Lively Arts coffee house on E. Genesee Street and free dormitory performances.

The School of Art's galleries at the Loew Art Center hold month long touring exhibitions of famous painters and sculptors plus faculty and student showings.

The radio and television department guides the student run, community oriented, radio station, WAER-FM. A new addition to the national Education Radio Network WAER combines its own program of classical music, jazz and discussion with ERN's shows and reports.

The Reader's Theatre, staffed by members of the Interpretation Department, is one of the first and few such groups in the nation. This past year it presented stimulating readings of Shaw and "Antigone."

The English Department brings famous novelists and poets to speak on campus. The Journalism School has continuing exhibitions of student and profesional photographers.

The University Regent Theater, besides offering its stage to local organizations, brings touring artists, such as Helen Hayes, Josh White and Carlos Montoya to town while sponsoring its own year long film festival.

Hill personal participation in many community cultural efforts. Violin Professor Murray Bernthal doubles as Syracuse's Sol Hurok with his Famous Artists Series.

Another School of Music faaculty member, Dr. Louis Krasner, has his own chamber music ensemble that performs locally, often with famous imported musicians.

Hill students are currently maning WONO-FM which broadcasts classical music 18 hours a day. Others participate in the growing Syracuse Symphony Orchestra, as do faculty memebrs. Syracuse's two additional community theaters, the Syracuse Little Theatre and the Ken Bowles Company draw upon SU talent, as do the local art galeries, radio and TV stations and publications.

And, each Spring, the university sponsors its Festival of the Arts, an intense two weks of packed lectures, concerts, plays and exhibits. One man can't see them all.

The list could jump onto the next page but our point is as obvious as the sea of orange beannies in the placard cheering section of Archbold:

Syracuse is no cultural desert but a literal soda fountain spilling forth the many flavors of man's artistic efforts. The only "jerk" is the one who does not take advantage of the varieties and, out of snobbery or ignorance, drinks plain water instead.

TREVER ON CAMPUS

Kum Back Show Features Four Lads, Louise O'Brien

The annual Kum Back dinner will be held at 6 tonight in Sims Cafeteria with the President of the Alumni Association Charles Chappel presiding. The classes will then march over to the gym for the Kum Back Show where entertainment will be provided by The Four Lads and Louise O'Brien.

Elections of four new alumni association directors for three year terms will be held at the dinner. The following were for those nominated: W. Paul Eddy, '20; Donald Davison, '27; Mrs. Gloria Kennedy Roberts, '43, and Mrs. Jane Cady Ruggles, '33.

Allen H. Poole was nominated for a four-year term on the administrative board of athletics.

Allen Martin, Jr., alumni secretary, will present certificates of merit to the following retiring alumni association directors: Lawrence S. Casazza, '36; Mrs. Grace Tumbridge Fowler, '38; Carl D. Meachum, '41, and Donald F. Davison, currently fillling out a term as director.

Speeches will be made on behalf of the alumni by Henry Lee of the graduates '63 W. Robert Dixon '38 and Robert P. McDowell '13. A speech by Chancellor William P. Tolley will follow.

The classes will go to Archbold Gymnasium at 8:15 where they will be entertained by The Four Lads and songstress Louise O'Brien.

The Four Lads have made appearances throughout the world and at many times have been voted one of America's favorite vocal groups. Some of their gold records include "Standing on the Corner," "Moments to Remember" and "No, Not Much."

The quartet is composed of Frankie Busseri, baritone; Jimmie Arnold, tenor; Bernie Toorish, leading tenor, and Johnnie D'Arc, baritone-bass.

Also on the program is Louise O'Brien who has won wide acclaim as a regular on the Mitch Miller Show. She has appeared on such programs as Today, Gary Moore, Arthur Godfrey, Jimmy Dean, Gaelen Drake and the Jack Paar shows.

Louise, voted one of the five outstanding new talents in the annual radio - television daily poll, will sing alone and there will be some singing along with Mitch — Louise O'Brien style.

1,000 Alumns Head for Hill

A "conservative estimate" by Director of Alumni Affairs Allen F. Martin shows that the campus will be crowded with at least 1,000 returning alumni this weekend.

Martin explained that for last years Kum Bak dinner 400 reservations were made "and we served 1,100 meals." This years reservations number 913.

The reunions will be held by 17 classes, dating as far back as the class of 1888. Honored will be the class of '38 holding its twenty-fifth reunion, and the class of '13 celebrating its fiftieth reunion.

Special bus tours of the campus will be a feature for the alumni, and will be held from 2-6 p.m. Friday, and 9-11:30 a.m. Saturday. All the campus buildings will be open and faculty members will be free for discussion.

SU Valedictorian Has2.944Average

Many college students are pleased when their professors give them B's for class work.

But at least one Syracuse University senior, valedictorian Michael P. Loos, is upset when a B appears on his grade transcript. That has happened only twice, though; all his other college marks have been A's.

Loos, 21-year-old son of Dr. and Mrs. Ernest W. Loos, 100 Haddonfield Dr., DeWitt, graduates Sunday with a phenomenal 2.944 average out of a possible 3.0. The mechanical engineering major admits his near perfect record was difficult to maintain.

"The first semester at Syracuse I worked pretty hard," he says, "and I found I earned all A's. After that I went into a little prison surrounded by books to keep up that high average."

He emerges from his self-imposed exile this spring with one of the best academic records in SU history.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration gave him a fellowship to MIT and the valedictorian hopes eventually to work in space science. His major field, when he starts graduate studies this fall, will be thermodynamics.

Michael is not sure of going on for a doctorate as he feels some scientists become overspecialized and spend their careers in narrow fields.

"I am concerned," he says, "about the race toward specialization. Too many engineers live in a closed world without other interests. I don't want to sit behind a test tube and simply shake that test tube in research for the rest of my life."

Michael is interested in art, literature and music. In fact, he almost became a concert pianist before turning to science. As a child he studied with several leading European keyboard artists and is sorry that his school work keeps him away from the piano now.

Perhaps the most difficult part of Michael's college career comes its last day, Sunday at commencement. He is scheduled to deliver a brief address and seems more nervous about the speech than about final exams.

Flick Papers Given to Hill

The collected papers of Alexander C. Flick, former Hill professor of European history, will be donated to the university today by his widow.

Mrs. Laura P. Flick, on campus for her 65th class reunion, will present the paper to Library Dean Wayne S. Yenawine.

Flick, who owned the apartment house on the site on which Booth Dormitory was built this year, was New York State historian and archivist from 1923-1939.

Joining the Hill faculty in 1896 as a history instructor, Flick was named professor in 1900. He taught at Syracuse until 1923.

The collection includes 39 archival boxes of manuscripts, including 2700 letters, mostly about his work as state historian.

Also included are lecture notes, book manuscripts and primary documents about medieval history and the American Revolution.

Flick edited and wrote 29 books.

Born in 1869 in Galion, Ohio, Flick earned his bachelor's and master's degrees at Otterbein (Ohio) College and his doctorate at Columbia University. In 1935, he received an honorary doctor of humane letters from Syracuse.

He died in 1942.

Tolley Praises Building Plans; 2 Deans Named

Syracuse University's Board of Trustees at its regular spring meeting at Hotel Syracuse Friday approved the promotion of two academic directors to deans.

They are Dr. Laurence E. Schmeckebier who becomes dean of the School of Art and Dr. Howard B. Gundy who will be dean of the School of Social Work. The appointments are effective July 1.

Dr. Schmeckebier, an art historian and critic, came to Syracuse nine years ago as director of the School of Art and professor of fine arts. He previously was director of the Cleveland (Ohio) Institute of Art. A former Fulbright scholar, Schmeckebier has taught at the Universities of Wisconsin and Minnesota and is considered an authority on wood carving.

Dr. Gundy hs been on the SU faculty since 1948. He reorganized and staffed the preprofessional social work courses at Syracuse and has been director of the School of Social Work since its founding in 1956. He is a former Onondaga County child welfare case worker and currently is a member of the executive committee of the Mayor's Commission on Delinquency.

Dr. William P. Tolley in his Chancellor's Report reviewed for trustees the state of the university including progress and achievements of various schools and colleges, admission activities, enrollment, new building construction and the annual giving program.

He said the university plans to keep the freshman class at its current level of 2,100 students but will increase the number of transfer students accepted from junior and community colleges to approximately 400.

"This will provide for a continued increase of about 200 undergraduate students per year," Dr. Tolley added.

Total undergraduate enrollment of the four classes for the spring semester was 7,905 students, while the graduate enrollment was 5,294. Dr. Tolley reported the Graduate School will continue its steady growth, adding that "it is clear we shall be increasingly a center of graduate and post-doctoral studies."

The Chancellor also reported the annual giving program as of Wednesday hard 13,023 contributors for a total of $982,222, an increase of 1,595 donors over last year's figure. Meanwhile, the number of donors to the university's corporate annual program has increased to 151 with a total of $228,932 contributed.

"Gifts and pledges from 1,251 parents this year totaled $75,000 for the best single year to date," he said. "By June 30 we should have more than $200,000 pledged or paid for the Health Center toward the goal of $350,000."

Traditional comencement weekend activities are under way on the SU campus with at least one new feature event added for graduating seniors. Chancellor Tolley will be host to members of the Class of 1963 and their parents at 12:30 p.m. today at Luncheon-on-the-Quad. A tent has been set up on the central lawn as a central point for returning alumni.

Hill Electrical Engineering Gains National Recognition

By CHARLES M. STEINBERG
Associate Editor

Electrical Engineering, a field commonly associated with the giant technological institutes, is gaining national prominence at Syracuse University.

The Engineering Council for Professional Development in conferring reaccreditation last year cited the Hill electrical engineering department as "one of the most distinguished in the nation.

Currently based on the second floor of Hinds Hall of Engineering, the department is comprised of 32 professors and 14 instructors who teach close to 200 advanced degree candidates and 80 upper division undergraduates.

While the department has carried on a significant program of research much of the recognition received by the department has been for its achievements in engineering education.

Eighteen electrical engineering textbooks have been written by the faculty, a number "second only to M.I.T.," according to Department Chairman Wilbur Le Page.

Since 1958, the department has sponsored an annual Conference on Electrical Engineering Education. Held at S.U.'s Sagamore Conference Center, the meeting is attended by engineering educators throughout the country and is supported financially by the National Science Foundation.

The department has also endeavored to bring graduate education to practicing engineers through the establishment of three off-campus centers. Located at Rome, Endicott and Poughkeepsie, 230 professional engineers are currently participating in these programs.

Two Hill faculty members are the Consulting Editors of leading electrical engineering textbook series, according to Le Page. Professor Norman Balabanian, who is consulting editor of the Allyn and Bacon series, is also a senior member of the AIEE-IRE and editor of its professional journal "Transactions on Circuit Theory." Professor David Cheng, Addison-Wesley's consulting editor, is also a former Guggenheim fellow and noted specialist on microwave antennas.

One member of the hill department was offered the chairmanship of the electrical engineering department at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, a high distinction. (But he turned the offer down.)

Among the current research projects, at $400,000 in terms their financial support, are work on transistors, microwave antennas, electrocardiography (in cooperation with the Medical Center) and sensory communication. Another project under Associate Prof. Ming K. Hu in the field of "pattern recognition" seeks to develop a device to translate written material directly into another language. In the future the department looks forward to further expansion, in faculty and facilities, and hopes to increase the graduating senior class to about 75 students per year Le Page said.

On top of the sub-basement structure on the east end of the Quad is slated to rise, as a part of the Syracuse plan, a new Engineering building. The structure will house electrical and one other engineering department, Le Page said.

It should also be added to the story of electrical engineering at Syracuse that when Chancellor William P. Tolley came to the Hill in 1942, there was no electrical engineering department at all.

Parking Set For Collendale

Before the era of DellPlain and Booth Dormitories, Collendale was the home for many male students.

Today, the northwestern section of the prefab-invested area is parking space for Manley Fieldhouse.

N. A. Rotunno, university landscape architect, said demolition of D-2, a former dormitory, earlier this semester ends clearance in the area for the time being.

Within a few years, the plot running east between Comstock and Lancaster Avenues will be cleared for the university athletic complex, he noted.

At one time 2,700 students lived at Collendale, built up during 1947 and 1948 to house returning veterans.

Since last summer, nearly 25 buildings have been razed and a pond has been filled in and practice and football fields developed.

Eventually, Rotunno said, all temporary buildings will be torn down to make room for a track, a second football field and two more practice fields.

German Society Cites SU Profs

Three members of the German department at Syracuse University have been singled out for honor in their field.

Professor Henry J. Groen has been elected president of the Central New York Chapter of the American Association of Teachers of German for the next two years and also will be a visiting professor in the NDEA 1963 Summer Institute in German at Southern Illinois University.

Also serving at the Illinois Institute will be Hill Professor A. D. Weinberger. Both men will teach German to secondary school teachers from June 21 to August 9.

Pershings Honor Four

A graduating senior in electrical engineering has been presented with the highest citation awarded by Army ROTC's Pershing Rifles national society.

Lee C. Scamp, a resident of Syracuse, recently received the Gold Achievement Award in a special ceremony conducted by Lt. Col. Raymond C. Wittmayer, professor of military science for Army ROTC.

The citation was given in recognition of Scamp's "outstanding efforts and achievement on behalf of Pershing Rifles." The 21 year-old alumnus of Marcellus High School served as commanding officer of the society's local company during the past academic year.

Scamp was presented with the Armed Forces Communications and Electronics Association Award at the recent Chancellor's review. He is a holder of the Kiwanis Club award and was named superior cadet in his junior year. The future Army officer acted as First Lieutenant in Scabbord and Blade, Army ROTC honorary, and is a member of the Society of American Military Engineers.

He will be commissioned a Second Lieutenant in the Army Reserve this morning (Sat.), receiving his bachelor of science degree at commencement exercises Sunday.

The organization, with companies at 135 schools and universities, stresses proficiency in military subjects through an extensive program in drill and tactical procedures. The group's trick drill team has performed locally and in New York City on several occasions, while the tactics platoon exercises frequently at Green Lakes State Park.

Other Pershing Rifles awards were recently presented to Joseph T. O'Neill, a junior majoring in Journalism-Fine Arts; Bruce R. Eaton, a sophomore in the School of Speech and Dramatic Arts; and Rostyslaw Smyk, a sophomore forestry major.

Boxboard Stipend Awarded to Supka

The Boxboard Research and Development Association Scholarship for 1962-63 has been awarded to a senior specializing in pulp and paper technology at the State University College of Forestry at Syracuse University.

The $250 scholarship was presented to Supka by Syracuse Forestry College Dean Hardy L. Shirley on behalf of the Boxboard Research and Development Association at special ceremonies held at the Syracuse Forestry College campus here.

Established in 1956 by the Boxboard Research and Development Association, the scholarship is given annually to stimulate undergraduate interest in boxboard. The award is made to a senior in the upper quarter of his class, of good moral character and with indicated interest in the paperboard field.

Rogers Named Project Head

Virgil M. Rogers, dean of Syracuse University School of Education, has been named head of the Project on the Educational Implications of Automation, according to Dr. William G. Carr, executive secretary of the National Education Association, sponsor of the project.

Dr. Rogers, who has been with Syracuse University since 1953, will take an indefinite leave of absence to head the project in Washington, D. C. He succeeds Dr. Luther H. Evans, former librarian of Congress and former director-general of UNESCO, who resigned last fall.

Dr. Evans had directed the project from its inception in June 1961, with an $83.000 grant from International Business Machines Corporation. Two additional IBM grants — $75,000 in 1962 and $70,000 this year — have continued the project which seeks to formulate guidelines for schools in dealing with the impact of the current technological revolution.

In announceing the appointment of Dr. Rogers, Dr. Carr spoke of the accomplishments to date of the NEA Automation Project, and plans for further advances under Dr. Rogers' leadership. "We are delighted," Dr. Carr added, "to have Dean Rogers join the professional staff of the NEA, which long has benefited from his counsel and leadership and will now enjoy his full-time services. His knowledge and experience will enhance the impact of the ongoing studies of automation in our society today so that teachers and school administrators will be in a position to better cope with the social consequences of technological change."

VIRGIL M. ROGERS

Dr. Rogers, who is expected to assume his post in late August, will be heading an organization which already has taken a long look at what automation can mean to education. Since Dr. Evars' department, the project reins have been held by Dr. George E. Arnstein. assistant director.

Born in Moore, South Carolina. Dr. Rogers received his B.A. from Wofford College, Spartanburg, South Carolina; his M.A. in educational administration from Western State College of Colorado, Gunnison, Colorado; and his Ed.D. from Teachers College, Columbia University, New York City.

He served as a teacher and principal at Delta, Colorado, and served successively as superintendent of schools in Gunnison, Colorado. Boulder, Colorado, River Forest, Illinois and from 1945 to 1953 in Battle Creek, Michigan.

Too young to be drafted in World War I, he enlisted. The shocking illiteracy of his Army buddies, for whom he wrote letters home, influenced his decision to go into education.

Dr. Rogers was president in 1952-53 of the American Association of School Administrators. He is also a former president of the Colorado Education Association, former chairman of the NEA'S Ethics Committee; and a former member of the AASA board of directors, the NEA Defense Commission and the Educational Policies Commission. For the last seven years he has represented New York on the NEA board of directors.

His service to professional education has given Dr. Rogers an outstanding reputation; he is in great demand as a consultant and public speaker.

In 1947 he was educational consultant with the United States Army surveying the German school system; in 1950 he was group leader of the White House Conference on Children and Youth; in 1959 he was assistant leader of an educational group studying Russian schools and was co-author in 1960 of Firsthand Report on Soviet Schools; in 1962 he surveyed the educational needs of Nyasaland, Africa, for the Peace Corps; and this year did an assignment in Colombia for the U. S. Agency for International Development.

Laubach Fund Gives Grant

The Laubach Literary Fund has established a third $2,000 assistantship to the Syracuse University School of Journalism, Dean Wesley C. Clark announced.

The grant will permit a graduate student in religious journalism to study in the School of Journalism. Syracuse University provides nine hours of free tuition to the candidate selected.

The first Laubach assistant, Miss Shirley Funnel of London, Ont., began her studies at the School in 1960 and after receiving her master's degree this month, will teach journalism at London, Ont. Bible College.

The second student to be awarded the grant, The Rev. James Imler of Lancaster, Pa. will continue his studies this year and will work with the Episcopal Church following graduation.

The Laubach assistants must spend 16 hours a week in journalism research projects dedicated to the reduction of adult illiteracy.

UpstateMedCenter Gives 99 Degrees

A total of 99 persons were awarded degrees during State University Medical Center's commencement exercises last Sunday at Nottingham Auditorium.

This included 78 doctors of medicine, 17 associates applied science (School of Nursing), three doctors of philosophy and one master of science.

Forestry Board Plans Projects

Long-range plans for the future development of State University College of Forestry at Syracuse University were among the main topics at the 1963 annual meeting of the college's board of trustees last week at The New York State Ranger School at Wanakena.

Among actions taken by the college's board of trustees at the meeting were the following:

Dr. Charles C. Larson, former leader of the college's Agency for International Development project in the Philippines, will direct the second summer session in tropical forestry this summer at Rio Piedras, Puerto Rico, under National Science Foundation sponsorship in cooperation with The Institute of Tropical Forestry, U. S. Forest Service. the University of Puerto Rico and the Syracuse Forestry College.

The College of Forestry plans to continue to offer specifically-tailored seminar programs for industrial and governmental foresters. The seminars provide two major functions: in-service training and post-graduate study or continuing education after college.

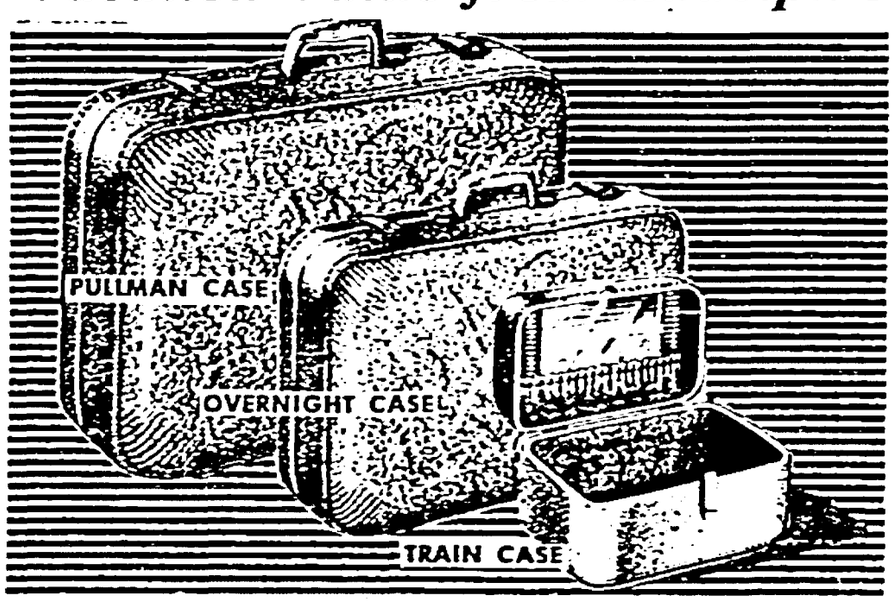
This summer, the College of Forestry plans to launch a special study of problems presently confronting forest owners, loggers, sawmill operators and wood-processing industries in New York State. Purpose of the project is to explore, to the fullest extent possible, the potentials that exist and to come up with possible solutions to present problems.

Associate Dean for Graduate Studies Svend O. Heiberg reported that graduate student enrollment for the spring (1963) semester totals 167 — second highest in college history.

Thirty of the candidates for advanced degrees came from foreign countries. Altogether, 21 different nations are represented, with India and Taiwan (Formosa) leading with eight each, Canada and the Philippines six each, Japan five, and other countries represented by one or two students.

Associate Dean for Research Edwin C. Jahn reported to trustees that 75 sponsored research projects totaling close to $1½ million are presently in progress at the college. The National Science Foundation and private industry are the two major sources of grants and sponsored research monies, followed by the U. S. Defense Department. the Public Health Service and the Atomic Energy Commission. The individual with the greatest grant support for his research is Dr. Michael M. Szware. During the past two months, he was awarded four grants amounting close to $150,000 — National Science Foundation, $83,200; U. S. Air Force, $37,000; U. S. Public Health Service, $16,000; and U. S. Army, $11,580. Among the research projects to be continued in 1963-64 are studies of: the Allegheny Plateau region; improved paper products; ash-dieback and other tree diseases; watershed management; ways to bring about improvement of New York State's forest industry; etc.

Among faculty members singled out for commendation at the trustees meeting were the following:



Associate Dean Svend O. Heiberg, first American and first professional forester awarded an honorary doctoral degree by The Royal College of Denmark for his outstanding contributions to world silviculture.

Dr. Eric A. Anderson. chairman. Wood Products Engineering Department, recently cited by "Wood and Wood Products" magazine.

Dr. Christen Skaar, who has been designated Visiting Scientist in the Visiting Scientist program of the Society for Wood Science and Technology supported by the National Science Foundation. He has visited the University of New Brunswick and also will visit Pennsylvania State University.

ERNIE

In four years at Syracuse University, Ernie Davis established seven all-time records on the football field including the largest number of points scored by one player, 220.

Syracuse fans remember Ernie on the basketball court as well, as Elmira Free Academy's All - American basketball star spent three years with Piety cagers before devoting full time to football.

His awards were many, including the John W. Heisman trophy for college football's outstanding player in 1961.

Ernie had many brilliant days off the football field as well. Last year his adopted home town of Elmira held Ernie Davis Day. On hand for the ceremonies was New York's Governor Nelson Rockerfeller, former Syracuse star Jimmy Brown and his coach, Ben Schwartzwalder.

Hundreds from Piety Hill flocked to Elmira for Ernie Davis Day to congratulate their favorite player. Two weeks ago thousands flocked there to pay their final respects.

Salutatorian in Absentia

Syracuse University's Class of 1963 will have no salutatorian marching in this year's Commencement procession.

Miss Nancy Erwin who completed a four year academic program in three and one-half years with no summer sessions included is already too involved in the next phase of her education to return to campus for graduation weekend activities.

Completing her SU studies in January with a record of 2.904 — less than one-tenth of a point away from a perfect straight-A average — Nancy currently is at home with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William G. Erwin, in Bethayres, Pa.

She is working and concentrating on Spanish lessons in preparation for entering the University of Florida in the fall. She has been awarded a $2,000 graduate fellowship at the southern university to work toward a master's degree in Latin American studies.

Enrolling as a freshman at SU in the College of Home Economics with a major in foods and nutrition, this year's salutatorian's interests branched to the field of the social sciences and, during her final semester on the Hill, her entire program was devoted to Latin American studies.

Nancy hopes some day to study at one of the Latin American universities and eventually to combine her home economics training and her graduate work in a job involving research or a community development program in South or Central America.

The pledge class of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority recently received a trophy for the best pledge class of 1963.

Dean of Women Marjorie Smith awarded the trophy.

Sigma Kappa sorority pledge class, with a 2.2 average, placed highest in pledge scholarship.

He was also a Club Fellow at Yale University.

Since 1957, Snow has been physicist-director of the English Electric Co., Ltd.

Named to the Order of Companion of the British Empire in 1943 for his work in recruiting and placing Britain's scientific manpower, Sir Charles was knighted by Queen Elizabeth II in 1957 for "civil and public service."

President of the Library Association of England in 1951, Dr. Snow is also a member of the Societe Europeene de Culture, a Fellow of the Royal Society of Literature and a foreign honorary member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Cornell Meets West In Crew Regatta

The National Championships of Intercollegiate crew racing will take place June 15 on Lake Onondaga when fifteen schools compete in the annual IRA Regatta.

Varsity race time will be 4:15 p.m.

Cornell, the top eight in the East this season, will lead Eastern Schools in doing battle with a pair of powerful Western crews, California and Washington.

Defending champs, Cornell is 4-0 this season with a first place finish among college crews in the Eastern Sprint Championships, while finishing second to a German rowing club.

Washington won the Western Sprints with a ½ length margin of victory over California.

In a duel race the two teams tied over a 2¾ mile course, close to the 3 mile IRA distance.

Other teams entered in the IRA are host Syracuse along with Navy Columbia, Pennsylvania, Boston University, Brown, Dartmouth, M I T, Princeton, Rutgers, Stanford and Wisconsin.

The Hill Crew started its season with a victory over Dartmouth.

The Orangemen finished third behind Cornell and Navy in the Goes Cup Regatta.

The following week Syracuse lost to Columbia and Rutgers.

In the Eastern Sprints Syracuse made the finals but finished last among finalists.

Scandura Resigns

Syracuse University wrestling coach Joseph M. Scandura resigned recently after one of the most successful wrestling seasons in Syracuse University history.

Scandura, varsity coach at Syracuse since 1956, leaves to take an academic position at the University of Buffalo according to Athletic Director Lewis P. Andreas.

This past winter the wrestling team was 9-0 won the Eastern Intercollegiate Championships, and placed fourth in the NCAA Championships.

Injuries and "Ifs" From Spring Drill

By BERNIE MacCALLUM
Sports Editor

A hard-hitting, injury-ridden team with a flock of "ifs," a lot of potential and a top frosh back were the products of spring drills at Syracuse.

The Orangemen roughed it up for 20 days in the shadow of the fieldhouse with sophomore to be Ron Oyer becoming Ben Schwartzwalder's number one right halfback.

"He was real impressive," Ben said. "He can step right in there now and play for us." Oyer was the leading ground-gainer on the Hill's sunbeaten frosh team last fall.

Hit Hard

"We hit real good and hard out there this spring," Ben said. "There is a lot of potential there. We've still got some teaching to do as you saw from the game." The Varsity-Alumni game was a comedy of errors with the Alumnus losing 14-3.

The final spring depth chart has Mike Koski, Walley Mahle and Jim Nance joining Oyer in the starting Syracuse backfield.

Banged Up

Spring drills filled the infirmary with banged up gridders. In the backfield Mahle Koski and Brown missed a good part of the off season drills.

In the line Jerry Everling, Bob Meehan, Mike Waxman, Ed Allen and Jim Marchak suffered bruises of one kind or another. Koski's is the only injury that might carry over into the fall.

Koski is one of a series of its along with Bill Schoonover who left school early in the semester and is indefinate about returning in the fall.

Henry Huettner, a 230-pound lineman, is also a possible returnee to the university. Everling will be lost to the team because of disciplinary reasons.

Winter Fever?

Hoping to be master of all the surveys after the release of the Syracuse basketball shcedule for the 1963-64 season is Fred Lewis, the Hill hoop coach.

The sport is climbing up ward in Orangeland and from the looks of the new schedule should do a lot of climbing. With a fast start Syracuse might even poke up into a few polls with poll fever becoming contagious if it can be caught from football season.

With a new field house, new coach and a team that had to be imporved, the record 27 game losing streak was made a bad memory left in the War Memorial and barred from the fieldhouse.

The new slate has the Orange eagers with three new home opponents in Toronto, Eastern Kentucky and Valparaiso.

Syracuse will play in the Hurricane Classic in Miami during the Christmas holidays.

Coach Lewis last week was named coach of the year in the East by Coach and Athlete Magazine.

TILL WE MEET AGAIN

With today's installment I complete my ninth year of writing columns in your college newspaper for the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes. In view of the occasion, I hope I may be forgiven if I get a little misty.

These nine years have passed like nine minutes. In fact, I would not believe that so much time has gone by except that I have my wife nearby as a handy reference. When I started columning for Marlboros, she was a slip of a girl—supple as a reed and fair as the sunrise. Today she is gnarled, lumpy, and given to biting the postman. Still, I count myself lucky. Most of my friends who were married at the same time have wives who chase cars all day. I myself have never had this trouble and I attribute my good fortune to the fact that I have never struck my wife with my hand. I have always used a folded newspaper—even throughout the prolonged newspaper strike in New York. During this period I had the airmail edition of the Manchester Guardian flown in daily from England. I must confess, however, that it was not entirely satisfactory. The airmail edition of the Guardian is printed on paper so light and flimsy that it makes little or no impression when one slaps one's wife. Mine, in fact, thought it was some kind of game, and tore several pairs of my trousers.

It's a rare and lucky columnist

But I digress. I was saying what a pleasure it has been to write this column for the last nine years for the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes—a fine group of men, as anyone who has sampled their wares would suspect. They are as mellow as the aged tobaccos they blend. They are as pure as the white cellulose filter they have devised. They are loyal, true, companionable, and constant, and I have never for an instant wavered in my belief that some day they will pay me for these last nine years.

But working for the makers of Marlboro has not been the greatest of my pleasures over the last nine years. The chief satisfaction has been writing for you—the college population of America. It is a rare and lucky columnist who can find an audience so full of intelligence and verve. I would like very much to show my appreciation by asking you all over to my house for tea and oatmeal cookies, but there is no telling how many of you my wife would bite.

For many of you this is the last year of college. This is especially true for seniors. To those I extend my heartfelt wishes that you will find the world outside a happy valley. To juniors I extend my heartfelt wishes that you will become seniors. To sophomores I extend my heartfelt wishes that you will become juniors. To freshmen I extend my heartfelt wishes that you will become sophomores. To those of you going on into graduate school I extend my heartfelt wishes that you will marry money.

To all of you let me say one thing: during the year I have been frivolous and funny during the past year—possibly less often than I have imagined—but the time has now come for some serious talk. Whatever your status, whatever your plans, I hope that success will attend your ventures.

Stay happy. Stay loose. © 1963 Max Shulman

We, the makers of Marlboro Cigarettes, confess to more than a few nervous moments during the nine years we have sponsored this uninhibited and uncensored column. But in the main, we have had fun and so, we hope, have you. Let us add our good wishes to Old Max's: stay happy; stay loose.

Does a man really take unfair advantage of women when he uses Mennen Skin Bracer?

All depends on why he uses it.

Most men simply think Menthol-Iced Skin Bracer is the best after-shave lotion around. Because it cools rather than burns. Because it helps heal shaving nicks and scrapes. Because it helps prevent blemishes.

So who can blame them if Bracer's crisp, long-lasting aroma just happens to affect women so remarkably?

Of course, some men may use Mennen Skin Bracer because of this effect.

How intelligent!

Honorary Degrees

Dr. Snow, who will give the major address at commencement, had distinguished himself in both science and literature. His work on molecular structure ranks him as a foremost physicist and his novels have been compared to those of Proust and Galswortay.

The 58-year-old scholar also is a lecturer, essayist and playwrite.

Stevenson was thrust into national prominence at the 1952 Democratic convention which drafted him to run against Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower for the presidency. A former newspaperman and lawyer, he was elected Illinois governor four year earlier by the largest plurality in the state's history.

In addition to heading the American U. N. delegation since January, 1964, Stevenson laid the groundwork for the Kennedy Alliance for Progress program. The former governor is a distinguished speaker and author.

Dr. Tuve, a member of a famous family which includes two scientist brothers, has taught 29 years at Connecticut. She is considered a leading authority on English Renaissance writers.

Weisberg is a Syracuse business executive and community leader. He founded Onondaga Supply at the end of World War I and since has served as its president. He also is president of Chapin-Owen Company, Inc., and is a director of the Marine Midland Trust Company of Central New York.

109th Commencement Sidelights

Among the persons receiving degrees at Syracuse University tomorrow and those returning to their alma mater for class reunions are these interesting individuals:

Fifty-three year old Stuart John Bohacek, 15 Wexford Rd., DeWitt, is receiving a B. A. from the College of Liberal Arts. It's been a long academic road for the foreign service officer who started his advanced education in 1928 at Doane College in Crete, Neb.

The depression forced him out of school and he did not return to college until World War II when the army sent him for six months' Russian study at Yale University. He attended Northwestern University night school after the war and joined the SU East European language program last August.

Bohacek leaves Syracuse tomorrow for the U. S. embassy in Prague where he will be a cultural and press attache.

A local set of twins is among College of Business Administration seniors. They are Raymond Merton and Ronald Myron Pendergast, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Francis L. Pendergast, 201 Clarence Ave. Both boys are Onondaga Valley Academy graduates.

The first rabbi to enroll in Syracuse University's School of Journalism religious writing sequence receives his degree today.

He is Rabbi Harvey Rosenfeld, Yeshiva University publications editor, who wrote his master's thesis on "How Christian Publications Dealt with the Religious Issue in the 1960 Presidential Campaign." For this study he used 80 Protestant, Catholic and interdenominational publications.

A Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Brooklyn College, Rabbi Rosenfeld was ordained at Mesifta Talmudical Seminary.

Mrs. Laura P. Flick, widow of Prof. Alexander C. Flick, was guest of honor yesterday at her 65th class reunion. She formally presented her husband's papers to the university in a special ceremony. Prof. Flick taught European history at Syracuse for 27 years before serving as New York state historian and archivist from 1923 to 1939.

Four husband-and-wife teams are participating in commencement. They are Robert and Sally Cornelius, 207 Allis Ct.; Lewis and Phyllis Fineberg, 2027 E.Genesee St.; James and Christine Manwaring, 259 Delray Ave., and Ronald and Meryle Margolis, 2012 Onondaga Creek Blvd.

Cornelius is in the College of Liberal Arts and will continue his education at Lutheran Theological Seminary. His wife is receiving a dual liberal arts education degree. Cornelius is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Cornelius, 141 Culbert St. The elder Cornelius is the Syracuse Police Department's finger print expert.

Fineberg will be graduating from the College of Law while his spouse receives a B.S. in fashion merchandising from the College of Home Economics. He attended Nottingham High School and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Manuel Fineberg, 216 Scott Ave.

Manwaring, who is receiving his doctorate in education, is director of the SU Bureau of School Service and an assistant professor. His wife has earned a B.S. in education.

Margolis, who was 1960 Colgate Weekend chairman, graduates from the College of Liberal Arts. His wife will receive a dual liberal arts - education degree.

More than one-third of the original class of 1913 returned to the Hill. Of 352 members, 125 made reservations to attend their 50th reunion. One loyal classmate, Clarence G. Axtmann of Los Angeles, interrupted a world-wide trip to fly in from Paris.

Miss Anne Houghton, a graduating liberal arts senior from Bernardsville, N. J., is the latest in a long line of Syracuse students which includes her mother, father, brother, grandfather, great-grandmother and great-grandfather. In all, the Houghtons — including Anne — have received 12 degrees on the Hill.

At Lew Carr Field

FINAL BASEBALL action of the year will pit the Orange nine against Colgate this afternoon at Lew Carr Field.

Piety Hosts Colgate

By BILL CRONAUER

A lingering baseball season comes to a close today as the Syracuse Orangemen host Colgate at Lew Carr field at 2 p.m.

Battered by miserable weather all spring, the Hill squad has been limited to 14 games, posting an unimpressive 5-8-1 record.

Six of eight scheduled home contests were cancelled due to bad weather. Coach Ted Kleinhan's team won both of the home games it was able to play, a 19-2 rout of Rochester and a 7-2 victory over Cornell.

Colgate Loss

Today's encounter with the Red Raiders won't mean much on the record books, but revenge lurks in the minds of Kleinhans and his Orange nine.

Two weeks ago Colgate dropped the Piety at Hamilton in a 13-12 slugfest.

Ace right-hander Ed Barnowski will take the mound against the Red Raiders. Barnowski, a 6-3, 190-pound sophomore from Schenectady, has started seven games this season and finished all seven.

Top Hurler

In addition, he has posted an earned-run average below 2.00 and leads the Hill hurlers in strikeouts. Barnowski fanned 27 batters in his first two starts.

However, the young fastballer has emerged with a lowly 2-5 log. His lack of success is due in part to hitting deficiencies by his teammates. In nine appearances this spring, his fellow Orangemen have provided him with a mere 17 runs.

Junior shortstop Pat Lutz paces Syracuse with a .330 average. The speedy Lutz also leads in stolen bases, having swiped four on the Southern trip alone.

Kleinhans plans to go with his usual starting lineup for the Colgate game. The infield will consist of Macner, Lutz and a pair of sophomores, second baseman Bobby Cohen and third-sacker Richie Duffy.

Senior captain Dick Taylor and rookie Dave Rounds flank Lelli in the outfield. Taylor was recently named the most valuable player on the 1963 Syracuse team.

Syracusan Bob Jacuk handles the catching chores, backed by junior Art Waugh who missed most of the 1963 campaign with an injury.

Seven local players will compete in their final collegiate game today. Lelli, Craybas, Jacuk, Macner and Taylor will be missing in 1964, along with infielders Pat Antonelli and Pete Palumb.

Decker Is Named To Replace Andreas

Lewis P. Andreas will retire as Director of Athletics at Syracuse University at the close of the first semester next year and will be replaced by Assistant Athletic Director James H. Decker, Chancellor William P. Tolley announced recently.

Andreas will also retire as Director of Physical Education. No replacement has been selected for that post or as a successor to Decker.

JIM DECKER

Andreas, 68, has been a member of the Syracuse faculty since 1924. He had been scheduled for retirement last year by the university's 65-year retirement rule, but was asked by Chancellor Tolley to remain in his post until a proper replacement could be found.

Andreas received his bachelors and masters degrees from Syracuse in 1921 and 1933 respectively. He was a physical education instructor at Syracuse before becoming head basketball coach. He was head football coach from 1927 to 1929.

He retired from coaching in 1950 with a 355 victories and 133 losses for a 73 lifetime percentage. In 1940 he was named to the Helms Collegiate Basketball Hall of Fame.

Decker, 51, graduated from Syracuse in 1932. He served three years as a reporter before returning to Syracuse as sports publicity writer and then as assistant to Andreas.

Grid Slate

The Orangemen will play six home games in Archbold Stadium this fall in addition to the Notre Dame game in Yankee Stadium in which Syracuse is the home team.

Tickets for all these games are on sale at the fieldhouse ticket office.

No Syracuse games will be televised next season.

At home Bill Orange meets Boston College, Holy Cross, Penn State, Oregon, West Virginia and Richmond.

Syracuse travels to Kansas, UCLA, Pittsburgh and New York City Thanksgiving Day for the Notre Dame game.

The homecoming game is October 5 against Holy Cross. The season's opener is September 21 when the Orange host Boston College.

Showers Drown Spring Sports

The tennis, golf and lacrosse teams proved to be the mudders as they came through the Syracuse monsoon season with winning records.

Matches, games and meets were continually postponed and cancelled with six of eight home baseball games washed out.

The lacrosse team posted a 6-4 mark while being plagued more by injuries than the weather. Led by Ron "Boom Boom" Fraser the squad defeated Cortland, Hobart, Clarkson, Penn State, RPI and Cornell. Johns Hopkins, Colgate, Yale and Army won over Syracuse.

Coach Gene Garrett's tennis team stayed out of the rain enough to have one of the best records (8-6) by a Syracuse net team in recent years.

Andy Mogish bowed in as varsity golf coach with a successful 5-2 campaign.

The track and field team had its only home meet of the season frozen out when the Colgate meet was cancelled. In a triangular meet the Orange runners were second to the University of Pittsburgh with West Virginia third. Today Syracuse is competing in the IC4A championships in New York City.

Ernie Davis

Editor's Note: Miss Adams has the unique experience of being the opposite sex member of the Daily Orange sports staff. She was the last writer to interview Ernie when he returned to the Hill for the last time for the Alumni game.

By JUDY ADAMS
Associate Editor

Twenty-three years ago a dying man stood with a solitary four on his back and told his teary - eyed audience, "I consider myself the luckiest man on the face of the earth."

That was the year Ernie Davis was born.

Twenty-three years after Lou Gehrig's courageous words, a similar set was spoken:

"Some people say I'm unlucky. I don't believe it . . . when I look back I can't call myself unlucky."

The man talking was also used to having a four on his uniform — in fact a couple of them. And like Gehrig, Ernie Davis was dying.

Two great men. Two very great men. Gehrig had made his mark on the professional sports world, but Ernie never got the chance.

His last opponent was one that no one's ever licked.

Ernie's gone and his loss leaves us with a gnawing loneliness. Yet our memory will always be as green as the turfs he pounded across as he played his greatest love — football.

How do we remember him?

We see a broad white jersey with an orange 44 twisting and turning, churning out a mile and a half of yardage in seven - yard gulps.

We see a basketball player whose mere presence turned a lack-lustre squad into a scrappy, exciting team.

We see a high school boy — a polished performer on the baseball diamond and the basketball court; a young colt on a football field. in every sense of the word,

We see an All-American, accepting every honor graciously and with shy, humble words of thanks.

We see the best football player in the nation. We hear his courageous words:

"Set your goals high and strive hard to achieve them," he told one group of boys.

"You don't cry if you lose," he told another. "You just go out and do better."

And a listening Heisman Trophy dinner audience heard him say, "Ever since I was a little boy, I dreamed of being an All-American. Now, I hope to play pro football. I only hope that I'll be able to live up to the faith that you've placed in me."

There was never any doubt there. He always did.

And we remember him with the kids. They were always there, tagging along, taking in his every movement so they could imitate him later. Or standing around in that wide-eyed silent awe that goes with being a ten-year-old.

And the kids that couldn't tag along. The kids in the crippled children's hospital in San Francisco. He visited them and was deeply moved by their smiling pluckiness.

We see a man fighting leukemia . . . A man fighting with such determination that no one could believe he was losing. He wouldn't give up. He didn't know how. And we were deeply moved by his smiling pluckiness.

Most of all, we remember his grin — that bubbling, contagious, indomitable grin that was his trade mark. It was sometimes shy and embarrassed, but it was always genuine and cheerful.

We remember it and we catch ourselves smiling too. That's the way he was.

He had a lot of names, this smiling idol. They called him the Perfect Powerhouse, Number 44, the Elmira Express. They tried to call him another Jimmy Brown, a Jackie Robinson. He knew he was neither, and he squirmed at the mention of their names.

To us he was simply Ernie, and that was quite enough.

We remember him with a smile. That's the way he was.
