IT'S JOHNSON DAY ON PIETY HILL

President to Receive Degree, Dedicate S. I. Newhouse Center

More than 20,000 persons are expected to attend the dedication of the Newhouse Communications Center at Syracuse University by President Lyndon B. Johnson today The President will cut the traditional ribbon and will speak in ceremonies beginning at 11 a.m.

The first building in a planned three-unit complex is the $3.9 million School of Journalism. The Communications Center is made possible by gifts of $15 million from the publisher Samuel I. Newhouse and his wife, Mitzi, through the Newhouse Foundation.

Newhouse said the center aims to be the "world's largest and most advanced study center in mass communications."

Syracuse University Chancellor William P. Tolley will award an honorary doctor of laws degree to President Johnson during the ceremonies.

Between three and four thousand invited guests will see the proceedings from reserved sections at the center while others will watch from the sloping lawn of the main campus.

Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller was the main speaker at a dinner in honor of Newhouse given by Tolley last night. Several hundred distinguished guests, including publishers, editors and public officials, attended the dinner in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Syracuse.

The School of Journalism, a five-story structure with two floors below ground level, is on the eight-acre Communications Center site just north of the main campus. A spacious plaza adjoining the cross-shaped structure will blend with the two future buildings.

Classes at the new journalism school will start in September, Dean Wesley C. Clark said. The school was founded in 1934 as an outgrowth of a journalism department established in 1919. Clark has been dean since 1951.

Newhouse said: "The center will devote itself to both research and education—especially in new ideas, techniques and efectiveness of various communications media in informing readers, viewers and listeners—and help train the men and women who will have the responsibility for communications leadership in the decades to come."

Tolley, Dean Clark and other university officials including Kenneth G. Bartlett, vice president for public affairs and director of the Television and Radio Center, and Frank P. Piskor, vice president for academic affairs, outlined plans for the center.

They said objectives include professional education at both undergraduate and graduate levels; continuing education for practitioners; and fundamental and applied research in public communications. It is recognized that education and mass communications have much in common, they said, and each must learn from the other.

A mid-career study program will be one of the highlights of the journalism school program, the officials said. This will give working representatives of all mass media the opportunity for further study to advance their careers by developing more competence and broadening their knowledge of world affairs.

In its new home the journalism school will offer special programs for early identification of journalistic talent in primary and secondary schools designed to attract a higher percentage of the best young people in the field, the oficials said. It will also provide a greatly expanded scholarship program. Seminars on world issues featuring leaders in the field are also planned.

Newhouse has been a university trustee since 1959. His sons,

Rocky Addresses Tolley's Dinner Honoring Newhouse

Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller was the main speaker at a dinner honoring publisher S. I. Newhouse in Syracuse Tuesday night.

Chancellor William P. Tolley of Syracuse University gave the dinner on the eve of the dedication by President Johnson of the Newhouse Communications Center. The first unit of a planned three-unit complex will be used for the study of journalism and allied subjects.

Several hundred distinguished guests, including publishers, editors and public officials, attended the dinner in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Syracuse. They will also attend the dedication today.

Tolley said he was delighted that Rockefeller had accepted the invitation to speak on an occasion honoring Mr. and Mrs. Newhouse, particularly in view of the fact that the center is in the Empire State, which Rockefeller heads. He noted that both the governor and Newhouse are trustees of Syracuse University.

Newhouse will also speak at the dinner.

The dinner is one of a series of events surrounding the dedications of the Newhouse Center, which university oficials have said will be the largest and most comprehensive center for the study of mass communications at any university.

Dedication Guests Form Famous List

Several hundred leaders in the field of communications have accepted invitations to attend the dedication of the Newhouse Communications Center at Syracuse University today.

Among the nationally-known communications executives who have accepted invitations are:

Jack R. Howard, president and general manager, Scripps Howward Newspapers; Vincent Jones, executive editor, Gannett Newspapers; Robert E. Keyon, executive vice president, Magazine Publishers Association; Charles T. Kline, president, Metropolitan Sunday Newspapers.

Irwin Maier, publisher, Milwaukeee Journal; Paul Milier, president, Associated Press and president, Gannett Newspapers; Arthur H. Motley, president, Parade Magazine; Robert T. Pauley, president, ABC radio, Gene Robb, president, American Newspaper. Publishers Association and publisher, Albany Times-Union; Jerome H. Walker, executive editor, Editor and Publisher.

Public May Tour Building

The new School of Journalism building of the Newhouse Communications Center at Syracuse University will be open for public inspection for several hours following its dedication today.

President Lyndon B. Johnson will dedicate the Center in ceremonies beginning at 11 a.m. A tour of the building for distinguished guests is expected to start about noon.

Following that, at about 1 p.m., the building will be open to the public until 5 p.m.

A MILESTONE FOR DO, TOO

Today's edition of the Daily Orange has set two all-time DO records. It is the largest DO ever published, covering 48 news pages, in addition to a two-page Hendricks Chapel insert, for a total of 50 pages.

More copies of this edition were printed than any other in the past, with the Manlius Publishing Company press running off 16,000 copies.

A University And Three Men

Today is a day for three men and a university.

The three are Lyndon Johnson, a politician; Samuel I. Newhouse, a newspaper publisher; and Dr. William P. Tolley, an educator.

This trio will gather today, as the politician will dedicate the building constructed by the publisher, to be used by the educator.

For Lyndon Johnson, this is probably just another day in the life of an American President. one of many similar speeches, one of many universities.

For Samuel Newhouse, it will be unlike any other as his living monument is dedicated in Syracuse. It is his testimonial to his belief that "a free press must be fortified with greater knowledge of the world and skill in the arts of expression."

And for William P. Tolley, it will be a crowning touch in a brilliant career as Chancellor of Syracuse University, for Tolley, more than any man, has made the university what it is today.

Remember the name, Mr. Johnson, It's Syracuse, which Webster might define as "nearing greatness; proponent of individual growth."

And why is Syracuse where it is today? Because it has been blessed with two fine leaders like Samuel Newhouse and William P. Tolley.

The Newhouse Communications Center will be the outstanding school of communications media in the world. It is truly significant that the School of Journalism, under the leadership of Dr. Wesley C. Clark, should be the first to avail itself of the center's resources.

For Samuel Newhouse — benefactor and friend of Syracuse University — the center will always remain a symbol of the freedom of spirit he has shown in the operation of his newspapers.

For William P. Tolley — who has brought Syracuse to today's pinnacle — it will signify the growth of the individual through the university, a concept he deeply believes.

For the President — leader of the free world — it will stand as a shining light to those who ever doubt that freedom is man's most precious gift.

And for Syracuse University — and all its vast family — it will mark another stepping stone on the path to the greatness it will one day achieve.

And most of this because of three men — a politician whose job is to keep us free, a publisher whose job is to use that freedom, and an educator, whose job is to make us treasure it.

Asian Holiday

Few people in these United States have ever been to the likes of Laos, Cambodia or South Viet Nam. Most of us do not consider the region high on the list of world vacation spots.

Yet the government is making the area one of the favorite resorts for military personnel, and some of them unfortunately bury themselves during their business there.

While Saigon movie theaters are showing feature films like "Son of Viet Cong" or "What's Nhu with You?", American soldiers are getting knocked off one-by-one in the jungies.

We find it sort of incongruous that U. S. soldiers must be killed when we're not even at war with anyone. And the limited Viet strife is further complicated when you take into account that American troops are forbidden from winning over their undeclared foes.

We can't win, yet we can't lose — except American lives. And we're fighting the Red Chinese, yet the U. S. wouldn't recognize Red China if it were sitting on a yellow tablecloth.

If we're going to give up, let's get out of there right now, but if we're going to fight, let's fight to win, not battle for a stalemate, especially when the lives of soldiers are at stake.

Perhaps we should aim some of those "low yield nuclear weapons" Barry Goldwater discusses at Washington's mass of red tape and confusion. At least then we'll know what's going on in Viet Nam, and maybe even why we're there.

Summer Sessions

By Carol Tryka

Pattering pairs of feet—4,243 at last count—carry students enrolled in summer sessions at SU to laborousiy co-ordinated programs of study each day.

Robert Weiss, associate dean of summer sessions occupies the control center, room 201 of the Special Education Building. It is appropriate that his office is in said building, for the School of Education enrollment of 1,516 is the largest in session this summer.

Summer is one time when faculty members from other colleges are able to come to participants in programs. Of approximately 425 faculty members now on campus one-third are visiting.

Weiss said that faculty and student benefit by having one six-week and one five-week session, instead of one long semester. Just as the instructing staff is discharged from teaching all year round, so also are students persuaded to attend only one of the two sessions.

Cramming four years of college into three by attending school each summer causes the student to lose a year of college, despite the fact that he gains four-year credit. However, where this program of study is followed by a graduate course, the lost year can be compensated.

Students should not consider themselves merely out to get a college education," Weiss said, "but out to get many valuable experiences before they have to assume steady employment."

He made it clear that the availability of year-round study is excellent, but that "This is generally for the bright student; not for everyone."

New activities have been initiated this summer, "in an attempt to balance the total summer offerings," according to Weiss. The education television and higher education programs are examples.

The Swahili House and three programs dealing with cultural deprivation—the later for high school teachers and principals—are offered, "to keep pace with what is happening in Syracuse, the nation, and the world," Weiss said.

Also, 25 secondary school social studies teachers will be studying Russian history under Dr. Warren B. Walsh. This course is sponsored by the New York State Department of Public Instruction.

Incoming freshmen are just as important to the university as returning students. Accordingly, pre-frosh courses in liberal arts, science and journalism are sponsored by the National Science Foundation and the School Press Institute, respectively.

The School of Music is featuring special concerts this summer, and has recorded an album titled "A Festival of Winds," with emphasis on brass and woodwinds.

Weiss said, "There have not been major changes in the basic program — innovations are made to meet the graduates' demand."

He said that the object of summer sessions is "to suppiy the same high quality academic programs as over the year, plus to service the number of people who are free to pursue advanced work, with special events and programs to fit their interests and needs."

Marks Are Important

By Nancy Koplinka

The primary reason for coming to college is to increase your knowledge to the point where you are eligible for a degree in a certain field, whether you are aiming for a bachelor of arts or of science degree, or a master's degree or even a doctorate.

The only way the world knows how proficient you are in a given subject is by the grade you earn. This is frequently not a true picture of your achievement, depending upon what instructor you have and what students you are competing against.

If you work for a good mark you will be sure you are learning something, so you are fulfilling yourself as well. When you decide upon a major field and wish to enter an upper division school such as the School of Education or the journalism school, you will find that they require a certain degree of accomplishment - a cumulative average of 1.5 or 2.0 for entrance and graduation.

There is one bit of advice everyone should heed: aim for the top. Strive for A's and you'll be sure to get B's and sometimes even A's. However, if you aim ony for B's you very often are disappointed with a C at the end of your course. C is not a good grade. It is no more than minimum, for any grades lower are considered deficient and an accumulative average of lower than C is probationary at Syracuse.

For those students who are not too concerned with academic achievement, merely getting that diploma and going out into the world-another caution: don't aim for a C—ever. When you come to final examinations with a C in every course it is risky business, because a slip-up in one exam can give you D in the course, and with no other grades to pull up your average you are placed on probation.

Probation. Perhaps this is the only immediate reason for maintaining fairly high grades. So few students concern themselves with the ultimate gain from high grades. Probation is an uncomfortable state of affairs. Part of campus activities, and probacollege life is participation in tionary students are not eligible to do so.

At the end of the first semester when grades come in, the freshman with the supposed C average may discover much to his dismay that he has slipped down to D plus and is informed that he must discontinue working on the Daily Orange, or sports, or not be permitted to pledge a fraternity or sorority. The coed realizes that she will again have a 9:15 curfew unlike her friends with 10:15's.

College need not be all study—five days a week is enough to get a great deal from all your courses. But these must be a good five days of hard work. Study hard and play hard and you will be making the most of your life, using your potenial to the utmost.

So although marks mean little in themselves they represent so much that we cannot fail to realize their importance.

LETTERS

South

To the Editor:

This letter is in reference to your editorial titled "The South, By George," published in the July 9 issue of the Summer Orange. As a Southerner, I presume that the editorial was directed to me, as well as to Messrs. Barnett, Wallace et al; and I therefore take it as a personal insult. Surely you must know that the South is not entirely composed of bigots and racists, although your editorial gives the impression that you would have your readers believe that it is.

I would hope that this editorial was naively written in a moment of journalistically irresponsible indignation over some nasty incident which may have occurred recently below the Mason-Dixon Line. Admittedly, things are not perfect there, and it may be a long time before they become even tolerable to most decent people. Nonetheless, I do not think you should blatantly condemn everyone Southern because the majority of them may be showing some poor judgment at the present time. After all, there are some Southerners of whom you'd be proud. Martin Luther King, for one.

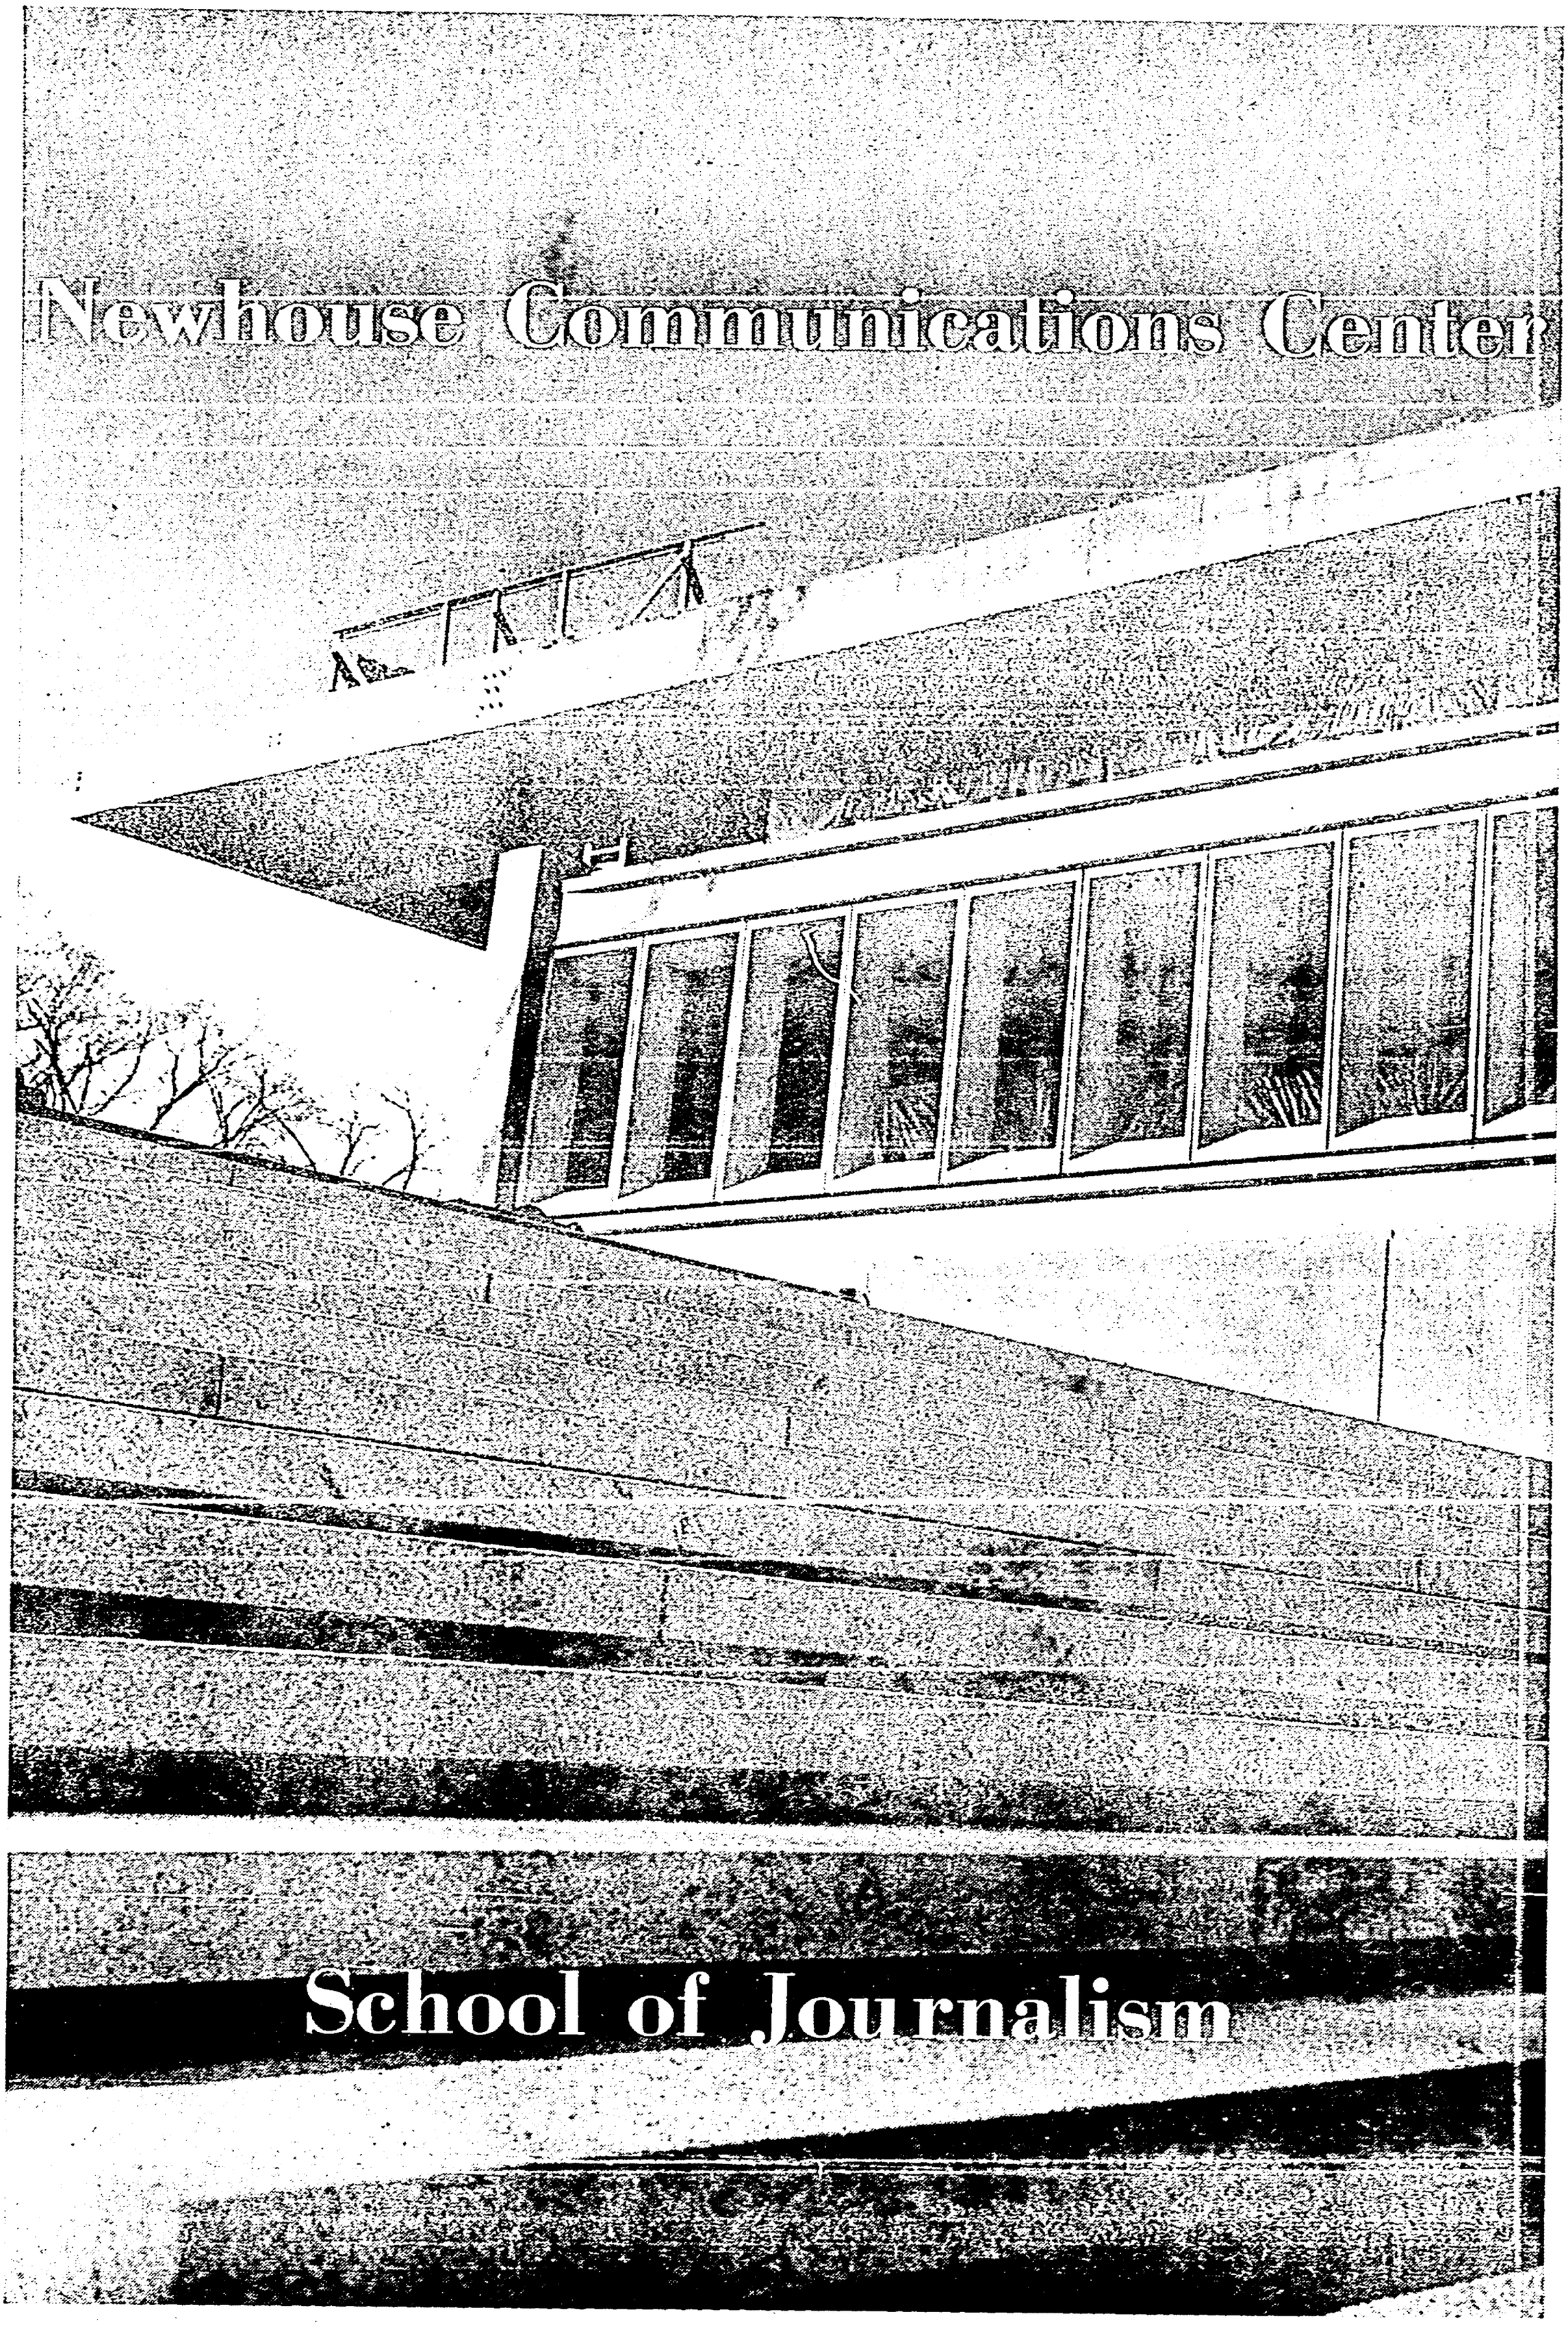
Newhouse Communications Center



School of Journalism

Center Reflects Clark's Dreams

The three key men in the School of Journalism construction discuss plans for the building. They are (from left) CHANCELLOR WILLIAM P. TOLLEY, SAMUEL I. NEWHOUSE, and WESLEY C. CLARK, dean of the journalism school.

By CAROL COHEN

The S.I. Newhouse Communications Center represents hopes and dreams that began with Dean M. Lyle Spencer, the founder and first dean of the Syracuse University School of Journalism.

It represents the hopes and dreams of Dr. Wesley C. Clark the school's present dean, today's faculty and yesterday's faculty, alumni and students.

It is the "baby" of everyone connected with it, from S. I. Newhouse, whose generosity has made it possible, to the janitor, whose care will help preserve it.

The main ingredients that went into this building were "blood, sweat, and tears," according to Dean Clark, whose face lights up whenever anyone mentions the new building.

"No one can actually name a day when the plans for the complex were started. All I can say is that the detailed plans began 4 or 5 years ago," stated the dean.

When the dean was asked how S.U. got the money for this impressive building, he gipped." Mr. Newhouse had it and the Chancellor (William P. Tolley) wanted it."

Everything that has been put into the building is the best, he said.

"I am most impressed with the fact that the architects and Chancellor Tolley saw fit to spend money and space on such an impressive lobby to be known as Dedication Hall" stated Dean Clark.

"It is a memorable building much more functional than one that doesn't have grace and beauty." Dean Clark feels this way because "the training of students involves more than a student-teacher relationship."

The functional facilities that this complex will contain when it is fully completed impresses on a student memories of a great building and a fine faculty, Clark added.

"The environment should remind a student of the opportunities and responsibilities which are concerned with the press," stated the dean.

DEAN WESLEY CLARK

Upon completion of this complex, SU will have the most complete communications center in the country, he said.

Dean Clark commented, "Please don't put the credit or blame on me. Everyone helped, but it was basically the Chancellor who made the dream a reality. All I can say is thank the Chancellor, thank Mr. Newhouse, and thank God."

Dean Clark received his A.B. from Marietta College, and his M.A. and Ph.D from the University of Pennsylvania.

His newspaper experience ranges from being a reporter for the "Marietta Times" and "The Philadelphia Evening Bulletin" to his present position as partowner of the "Skaneateles Press."

He has also been an instructor of political science at the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania, assistant to Harold L. Ickes during the Roosevelt and Truman administrations, and assistant to the Secretary of the Interior from 1943-46.

He came to SU in 1941 as an assistant professor and has worked his way up to the position of dean of the school of Journalism, which he was appointed in 1952.

New Designs Mark Rooms

By DANIEL LABOWITZ

Ever have class in a "gold fish bowl?"

That's what learning will be like in the experimental rooms in the Newhouse Communications Center.

Two classrooms employing mass media are included in the second basement of the building. These classes will be closely watched by educators across the country.

Prof. Donald Ely, head of the audio visual department, said the rooms are designed to get more "active participation" from students. The room's 92 chairs swivel and are mounted on tiers to enable each student to participate in group and class discussions.

The larger of the two rooms is equipped with a rear-screen projection apparatus, allowing the class to view slides or films in a lighted room.

The projectors and sound equipment will be controlled by the speaker from the lectern. The blackboard is replaced by either a cinemascope screen or a panel wall. The second room is equipped with normal projection apparatus.

Also, in the main room only, the seats are linked with responder units which enable the students to answer questions by pushing a button. These responses show up as percentages on meters at the lectern. This gives the speaker the ability to quick assess the effectiveness og his material.

According to Ely, this is the first time rear-screen projection and responders have been used together in this country. These units will eventually be linked to a computer to give instant result on programmed exams.

Prof. H. Daniel Smith of the religion department will teach one of three experimental courses in these rooms and has changed his course to give "stronger emphasis on written work and discussion."

Journalism School Professors Praise Newhouse Building

By SISTER M. CELINE, O.S.F.

Exit prefabs — enter the fabulous!

The Newhouse Communications Center is about to stage the Journalism School drama, act III.

At curtain call (Methuselahan) scenes: prefab rattling roofs, creaking wooden walls, seedy seats in a cubbyholed JC, summer perpetual turkish-bath feelings, and winter woolen worsteds itchings, will fade in favor of:

... up-date, closed-circuit television equipped classrooms

. . . topography projection equipment.

... on-the-spot interviews with world-famous dignitaries in newswriting classes

... the world's finest journalism library

.. the latest photo off-set and lithography equipment

Dramatis personae sentiments show varied views on the J-Schools history-making move.

Homme d' esprit, Dean Wesley C. Clark feels better facilities well afford "more research and opportunities for mid-career seminars."

World-known experts will examine international issues, and in many cases speak to people overseas. Widely known faculty members George L. Bird, Fred A. Demarest and Robert S. Laubach already have given the J-School a cosmopolitan texture.

Questioned J-professors feel that far from lessening faculty-student esprit de corps, the school's hallmark, the move will mellow and heighten it.

Recalling "Castle" days, "Venerable" Prof. Bird, as Dean Clark convivially calls him, spoke of a "paradise regained" once the present "shell" is left behind. "The faculty and 'Kastle Kids' loved it!" he reminisced. "The forced move to the 'Old Wommen's Gym' while not upsetting the camaraderie, restricted it a little. Happily, the place wasn't called the 'Ole Men's Gym,'" he injected facetiously.

In originality, the building has dramatic qualities—the best, one hopes to see in America. Moving in will make one feel "God is in His heaven and all is well with the world," smiled Bird.

Lecturer Laubach felt full of anticipation. Budding journalists he feels will be proud of their corner of the campus.

"I'm happy not only because the building is beautiful," proffered Prof. George Murphy, "but the facilities are better."

Because eventually NCC will be the world's communications center, Prof. Philip Ward Burton is glad to be part of its beginning. Curious about what he'll find there, and happy about leaving the present J-Building, he quipped, "What a relief not to have to say one was at the 'Old Women's Gym' again.'

Instructor Norman Moyes, hesitant about expressing his views because of his being on the faculty and four year succinctly said: "Faculty first, facilities second, make a school." He's thrilled about the new school, however.

In terms of utility and student-teacher relationships, the new building will be "more convenient at a more rapid pace," attested photographer Richards. "People could be talking photography without interruption over lunch in a nearby kitchenette."

More room to develop specialized programs like religious journalism will make Prof. Robert Root happy.

"I don't like moving anywhere; so much is involved," opined the assistant to the dean, Jack Weissberger. "It's not like household moving; there's coordination to be done; allocation of offices and classrooms according to specific needs.

But Jack's delighted with the new place. "Leaving the 'last of the one-room schoolhouses' will restore more Castle rapport. 'Open-Door' policy will prevail," he emphasized.

Dean Clark, in a statement issued to the Associated Press, spoke of the Newhouse Communications Center as a dream come true.

From a Castle To a Gymnasium To a Milestone

By MICHAEL CAPLAN

You're not perfect, you know. There are some things that money can't buy.

Yes—you're fabulous, magnificant, plush and utilitarian. Nor are $3 million worth of building costs to be sneezed at. Admittedly, you have a lot of class.

But no amount of expense nor architectural genius can provide you, Newhouse Communications Center, with that precious commodity you lack —tradition.

In this respect a battered old figure called the Journalism Center and a timeless ghost known as Yates Castle can laugh up personified sleeves at you, young giant.

Syracuse University journalism students of three decades past, for example, had it made. They inherited tradition.

Yates Castle, home of SU journalism from 1934 to 1953, was rich in legend and lore. T. Longstreet's Tudor Gothic showpiece was built in 1855 by architect James Renwick, designer of the first Smithsonian Institute.

Frescoed ceilings, 24-inch walls of Carrara marble and the first landscape gardening in Syracuse were but a few of the castle's luxurious features.

In addition the edifice had amassed legends of secret passages and undergound—railway intrigue by the time SU took possession.

Not content with ready-made tradition alone, the journalism classes added some coruscating vignettes of their own.

Those who were here then may recall the boisterous bedlam wreaked upon the hallowed hall by exuberant Daily Orange staffers, "almost" functioning in their corridor cubbyhole.

Or perhaps they would describe a pacifist snake dance on the circular staircase, or an after hours seminar at McCarthy's Tavern (where five cents would buy a beer).

More likely, however, they would see again (through not-quite-dry eyes) students gathered in the rotunda for Christmas carols, or the castle's tearful farewell party in '53.

Tradition? You know it!

Not that JC veterans are at a loss for memories. They've plenty!

Survivors of flooded darkrooms, for instance, still chuckle at recalled visions of a "nameless" dean, wading ankle deep in water and wondering how it all happened.

Some see negatives flapping in the breeze of a makeshift dryer.

Others picture the crucial polling of opinions on the latest photographic endeavor, while taking a breather on rickety benches outside the darkroom.

Faculty - student luncheon discussions in room 213 and "roundtables" in overheated and undercooled "prefabs" add still more to the memorabilia.

This, too, is tradition.

And what do you have to show, Newhouse? Nothing! A big, fat blank!

But don't despair. Work at it. Before the dazzling, orange rug in your library begins to fade, you'll be wearing war stories of your own.

It's traditional, you know.

Horse, Ficus Tree Greet Visitors

BY MIMI WALTER

A flying horse and a tropical tree, you say. Where? In Greek mythology or the East Indies? No— in the main entrance to the Newhouse Communications Center!

The horse is a $50,000 bronze sculpture by sculptor, Jacques Lipshitz. Entitled "The Birth of the Muses," it symbolizes the patronage of the arts. The horse appears to be bursting into flight as it adorns the wall between the two staircases.

The inscription on the sculpture reads "A free press must be fortified with greater knowledge of the world andd skill in the arts of expression," a quote from Samuel I. Newhouse.

The other entrance attraction is a ficus tree. Thus rubber tree stands 12 to 15 feet high and bears pear-shaped shells. The granite used in the round planter and the floors is a special kind from Burnet, Texas.

Another unusual feature is the king-sized teakwood panels surrounding Dedication Hall on the inside of the building. The panels were imported from South America and have been sequence-matched.

Rooms . . .

Ely said he will work directly with Smith and will attend each of the classes there to evaluate the audio-visual usage in the new program. According to Smith, 50 per cent of his classes will be normal lectures, the other half using the new aids.

The rooms will be experimental over a two-year period during which the courses will be altered to fit the facilities or the facilities molded to the courses.

Also to be used in these rooms will be closed-circuit television and telephone, but this is seen only in the future, Ely said.

Meet S. I. Newhouse, Benefactor

By MARILYN KEMENY

What Sammy makes run — a $250 million communications empire.

Donor of SU's communications center, Samuel Irving Newhouse owns 15 daily newspapers, shares in four more, five Conde Nast publications and their editions abroad, seven Street and Smith magazines, several radio and television stations and part ownership in a Parisian men's magazine and an Italian fashion magazine.

He has had a business interest in Syracuse since 1939 when he bought two local papers, the Herald-Journal and the Herald-American. Merging the two, he slashed the advertising rate and in the first year accumulated a $1 million profit.

Syracuse's other major newspaper, The Post-Standard, became a Newhouse paper five years later.

On Wednesdays, Newhouse tours his Syracuse holdings including the two major papers and radio-tv station WSYR.

Both of Newhouse's sons, S. I. Jr. and Donald, attended Syracuse.

In addition to the $15 million grant given for the communications center, Newhouse has also made the center the recipient of 90 per cent of the Newhouse foundation estimated at well over a million dollars.

The oldest of eight children, Sam Newhouse was born on May 24, 1895 to Meyer and Rose Fatt Newhouse in Bayonne, N.J.

A Russian Jewish immigrant, his father was a Talmudic scholar with rabbinical training who could only work part-time in a factory due to an asthmatic condition.

Rose Newhouse sold dry goods door to door while her son Norman peddled newspapers at the age of five.

The newspaper magnate attended grammar school P.S. 7 in Bayonne and had to go to night school to pass his Regents examinations.

When Newhouse later took a business course in Manhattan, he toted newspapers across the Hudson — both ways — to save the three cent ferry fare.

Hyman Lazarus, police-court magistrate, hired Newhouse as a clerk for nothing the first month and $2 a-month after that.

Newhouse then studied law and was admitted to the bar a week after his 21st birthday.

He tried only one case — and lost. His client had sought $80 damage in court which Newhouse gave him personally.

Giving up law, Newhouse took charge of the Bayonne Times, a faltering newspaper in which Lazarus had received 51 per cent interest as payment for a bad debt.

Samuel I. Newhouse

The boy was 16 when his employer said, "Sammy, go down and take care of the paper until we get rid of it."

Instead of a salary, the shrewd business man asked for a 25 per cent cut of the paper's intake which mounted to $30,000 annually for Newhouse, while still in his early 20's.

At 26, he bought controlling interest in his first paper, the Staten Island Advance. He raised the needed $98,000 by amalgamating family funds with a substantial sum from Lazarus. He still visits the paper weekly "out of sentiment."

Mostly as a 35th wedding anniversary present for his wife Mitzi, Newhouse purchased Conde Nast Publications, a fashion magazine syndicate including Vogue, Vogue Pattern Book, Bride's Magazine, Glamour, House and Garden and their editions abroad.

A few months later he bought the Street and Smith magazines among which are Mademoiselle and Young Homemakers.

The highest price ever paid in American journalism -- $12 million -- was paid by Newhouse for the New Orleans Times Picayune and States-Item.

Despite his great holdings, he does not interfere with the policies of his communications properties, editorially or institutionally.

His philosophy is this: "Just because I'm the owner, I don't feel in all conscience that it's right to tell people of a community what to think. I don't think I'd be right. Isn't it better for people close to a community to determine for themselves how they feel about community issues?"

Compliments from "the Boss" are never heard. Newhouse explains, "If I said something was good, the next time I didn't say anything, the editor would think I didn't like it — so it's better to say nothing."

Time magazine attributes his success to "an uncanny ability to buy up financially sick newspapers, diagnose their ills, and nurse them to a profitable health."

Perhaps it's due to Phillip Hochstein, Newhouse's right-hand man, who has been called a "newspaper doctor" by Current Biography.

News for the Newhouse papers may come from the Newhouse Washington Bureau. Editors are free to use or reject any material from this service.

According to Bureau Chief Aaron Benesch in an article in Esquire magazine in August 1959, "If they want to use it, okay, if not, okay. We file the stories. The editors decide."

On the question of newspaper owernship Newhouse commented, "It would be modesty of an obvious falseness if I were to say that I do not fancy myself as a good owner. The fact I have bought a number of newspapers would belie any disapproval of ambition. But this does not mean that my ambition is without discrimination."

Come see our new house!

Take a long, encompassing look at one building made possible through part of a $15 million grant—compliments of S. I. Newhouse.

Now that the first building in the Newhouse complex has been completed, officials can look forward to the construction of two similar structures, adjacent to the first.

The rest of the site now bordered by S. Crouse avenue, University place, University avenue and Waverly avenue must be cleared for progress.

Progress in the name of tearing down the Corner Store, numerous cottages, and the bursar's office will begin in the near future, but plans for actual construction work are still hazy.

A spokesman for King and King Architects said their original plans had been for two rectangular shaped buildings, larger, but similar in design to the first, which would provide a "background" for the recently completed structure.

One building, a sight-sound research library with a 1,000 seat underground auditorium, was planned to run parallel to Crouse avenue. The second building, a radio-television center, was to run parallel to Waverly avenue. It would include production facilities.

When completed, the Newhouse Communications quadrangle would have an underground parking garage with entrances to each of the three buildings.

Facilities in each structure would be the latest and most convenient, making for the world's largest communications center.

Mental Health Aides Selected

Two men and two women have been named the first winners of fellowships in the new mental health information program of the School of Journalism at Syracuse University.

Each will receive a $3,000 stipend and full tuition under a $150,000 grant from the National Institute of Mental Health. Aim of the three-year federal program, recently announced, is to train public information and education personnel for state and community agencies in the mental hygiene field.

The winners include two student daily editors, a health executive, and a medical reporter. All four have had reporting experience on the newspapers of four states.

They are:

James D. Boullion, executive secretary, Governor's Mental Health Advisory Committee, Madison, Wis.

Judith L. Condit, public relations writer, Century 21 Center, Seattle, Wash.

Everette E. Dennis, Jr. Toledo, Ore., August graduate of the University of Oregon and a reporter on the "Eugene Register-Guard."

Gail Ann Wallace, Daingerfield, Texas, a June graduate of Texas Woman's University at Denton, where she was editor of the student daily.

However, Boullion has indicated he will be unable to participate, and the award has gone to Boyce C. Rensberger, of Indianapolis, Ind., a 1964 graduate of the University of Miami, in Florida.

The new program in which the four will study will be housed in the first unit of the Newhouse Communications Center.

"The four recipients are outstanding," said Dean W. C. Clark of the School of Journalism. "They will set a very high level for the new training and for the other graduate students."

Dr. Robert Root, head of the program, said that 37 formal applications were received, though the announcement was made only six weeks ago, and "Completion was intense." He said that he and the assistant director, Miss Cathy Covert, prize-winning medical writer of the "Syracuse Herald-Journal," were "enthusiastic" about the quality of applicants.

Syracuse University has received two grants totaling $29,500 from the National Science Foundation for research in chemical and electrical engineering.

Hello '68

Interested in drama . . . golf . . . a new dress . . . fun?

You'll find all these around the town within easy reach of the SU student.

Marshall Street, referred to as "M"-Street and located a few minutes from the campus, is the place to buy anything from the last-minute outfit for a big date to room supplies, books, drugs, snakes, and services such as shoe repairs, laundry, and tailoring.

Downtown Syracuse, a ten-minute bus ride from campus offers many cultural activities and diversified entertainment.

The University Regent Theatre presents outstanding programs.

The Everson Museum of Art exhibits traditional and contemporary art throughout the year.

The public library offers students the use of its facilities.

You may enjoy anything from a basketball game to the circus, trade shows, the ballet, a correct, or "Ice Capades" at the Onondaga County War Memorial.

For those who enjoy outdoor recreation there are two golf courses near the Hill, as well as facilities for skiing, ice skating, and horseback riding.

Gold Scissors

President Lyndon B. Johnson will use a pair of gold-plated scissors to cut an orange ribbon here today continuing a 22-year Syracuse University tradition.

The scissors have been used in every ribbon-cutting dedication at the university, whose official color is orange, since Dr. William P. Tolley became chancellor in 1942.

The new Crouse site mural is displayed by its creator, KENNETH CALLAHAN, during the recent unveiling ceremonies in the new women's dormitory. The dorm will open in September.

Mural Adorns Crouse

Adorning one of the walls in the Crouse site women's dormitory will be a mural painted by Kenneth Callahan, visiting professor at Syracuse University.

The mural, nine feet high and 20 feet wide, is a symbolic portrayal of various aspects in the life of man including birth, family development and death. Callahan has named it "The Cycle." The work, done in oils on Belgium linen, has predominant "earth" colors, brown and yellows with touches of blue. It hangs on a large wall dominating a staircase which leads from the dormitory entrance lounge to the second floor dining room.

Work on the mural was begun late in June after Callahan was appointed a visiting professor in the university summer sessions. Other murals have been painted during past summers as part of a continuing program of mural designs for University buildings which began in 1958.

A native of Spokane, Wash., Callahan has works in the permanent collections of more than 45 U.S. museums and galleries. He is largely self-taught through years of study in Europe, Mexico and the United States.

Preparing for the President: Big Job

President Johnson's arrival in Syracuse today may well be his last non-political visit before the 1964 election campaign.

A Washington official noted that Johnson has made no trips outside Washington since the Republican National Convention last month which nominated Sen. Barry Goldwater (Ariz.) as its presidential candidate. He also said the President has scheduled only this Syracuse trip before the Democratic convention in Atlantic City starting Aug. 21, which is considered certain to nominate Johnson.

More than 20,000 people, members of the public and invited guests, are expected to attend the dedication of the Center named for publisher S. I. Newhouse, who gave $15 million to the University to build it.

Johnson will cut a traditional orange ribbon at the School of Journalism building, first in a three-unit complex, in ceremonies scheduled to start at 11 a.m. at the end of a motorcade from Hancock Airport.

Chancellor William P. Tolley, as head of the host institution, extended an invitation to Syracuse residents and others to come to the campus to hear their president. It was noted that there was room for thousands of people to stand or sit on the tree-shaded lawn rising in a gentle slope from the Newhouse Center at the corner of University place and University avenue.

Tolley, Newhouse, Mayor Walsh and their wives and Mrs. Harold Smulyan will greet the President and his wife, Lady Bird, when their plane lands from Washington at about 10 a.m.

Mrs. Smulyan is the president of the local chapter of Theta Sigma Phi, women's professional journalism society of which the first lady is a member. Mrs. Johnson received a journalism degree from the University of Texas in 1934. Mrs. Smuylan is expected to present Mrs. Johnson with a charm bracelet and a matrix, the society's symbol, on her arrival in Syracuse.

Young Democrats have prepared an airport rally for the President's arrival and confidently expect him to address them there. Radio and television people, gambling that there would be at least a few words from Johnson, have readied their equipment for a live pickup.

The President and his party, accompanied by members of his staff, secret service agents and White House and local press, will then drive into the city and to the campus. He and the first lady will be in separate cars.

Johnson will make a non-political speech expected to last between 15 and 20 minutes and then receive an honorary doctor of laws degree. He will be the first President to receive such an honor from Syracuse while in office.

John F. Kennedy received an honorary doctor of laws degree in June 1957 when he was a senator from Massachusetts, and Franklin D. Roosevelt got an honorary doctor of civil law degree in June 1930 when he was governor of New York.

Johnson will wear an extremely lightweight black silk doctoral robe, faced with black velvet and a mortar board with an unusual golden tassel when he receives his honorary degree.

Actually he will get two diplomas—one of them a sheepskin especially prepared for him by E.A. Wright Co. of Philadelphia, which makes all of Syracuse University's diplomas. A smaller version of the diploma, in a blue Moroccan leather case with the University seal embossed in gold on the cover and a burnt orange lining, will be mailed to the President later, as well as the nation's will attend the dedication ceremonies.

The state's chief executive Gov. Nelson Rockefeller and his wife flew here Tuesday night to attend a dinner at the Hotel Syracuse in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Newhouse given by Chancellor Tolley.

Maxwell Group Aids the Needy

An 80-year old woman walks six miles once a month to pick up her allotment of food surplus.

An underprivileged teen-ager needs and desires tutoring to keep up with his English class.

What can be done for them?

The student-run University Committee on Community Affairs, sponsored by Syracuse University's Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs and the Chapel Board Service Committee, helps them.

The UCCA brings the information about these and other volunteer help opportunitis to th Syracuse University students, according to its director, Richard Kuzmack.

The UCCA works in cooperation with the Volunteer Center, Inc. In Syracuse which schools, hospitals, recreation centers and service agencies. The UCCA places students directly with churches and other agencies that are not covered by the Volunteer Center.

"The volunteer participation should be a learning experience," Kuzmack said. "The individual should gain as much as he gives in the volunteer situation."

Consideration is given to the anticipated career of the students who participate, Kuzmack said. They are given the opportunity to select an agency which will give them experience in their prospective profession.

Additional information about the committee and volunteer activities can be obtained by writing: Mr. Richard Kuzmack, University Committee on Community Affairs, Dean's Office, The Maxwell School, Syracuse University, N.Y. 13210.

After arrival on campus, information can be obtauned from Room 2 in the ground floor of the Maxwell School. The office will be open from 1-5 p.m. every Tuesday and Thursday. The phone extension is 3332.

Crouse Site: Newest SU Dorm

By ROBERT P. SNOW

The still - unnamed Crouse site women's dormitory and dining hall is the first new concept in university housing to be built at Syracuse since World War II.

The basic idea was to curve the long corridor to eliminate the "tunnel effect," and to use two parallel corridors instead of one to reduce the traffic on each. The result is a slightly curved rectangular dormitory tanget to a circle with its center point in Walnut Park a block away.

Located on the inside of the curve, and connected to the dorm by a short hall, is the dormitory offices, lobby, mailroom, lounge, and control center, and on the second floor the dining hall. This appendage is circular.

The site, on the corner of Comstock avenue and Marshall treet, is steeply sloped with the inside of the curve and the dining hall on the low side.

The exterior of the dorm is made up of three types of panels set in an exposed concrete structural grid. The panels are a white aggregate concrete, an imitation slate porcelain, and glass.

The effect is a monochromatic value of whites and grays which apparently is far better than the red and blue exterior of Booth and Dellplain. The round dining hall exterior is concrete and glass with some exposed structure and balconies at both levels.

The entrances to the dormitory are quite vague now, but should be improved when the landscaping has been completed. The main entrance is through the round control center below the dining hall, and a secondary entrance is from Comstock.

The dormitory is a vertical core, corridor plan. The slight curvature of the building is reminiscent of the well-known Noyes House at Vassar designed by Eero Saarinen.

However, this dorm is a refinement in that there are double corridors. The corridors have rooms only on one side, and the traffic and noise are cut in half.

Also the remarkable use of wall to wall carpeting through out has virtually eliminated the important noise problem. The core—the area in the center—is used for the stairrooms, bathrooms, and a lounge.

The individual study rooms offered are only of two types —single and split double. The row of rooms along the interior side facing the dining hall, are all single.

The rooms on the other side are all split double—a design phenomena that is quite unusual in the United States, but has proved successful at Syracuse. It is a kind of compromise with elements of both single and double rooms inherent in the design.

The rooms are essentially the same as all the newer dorms on campus. They have built-in closets, bureaus, desks, bookcases, and bed bolsters. Any wall area that is left is painted concrete block. The challenge of arranging your room therefore been done for you.

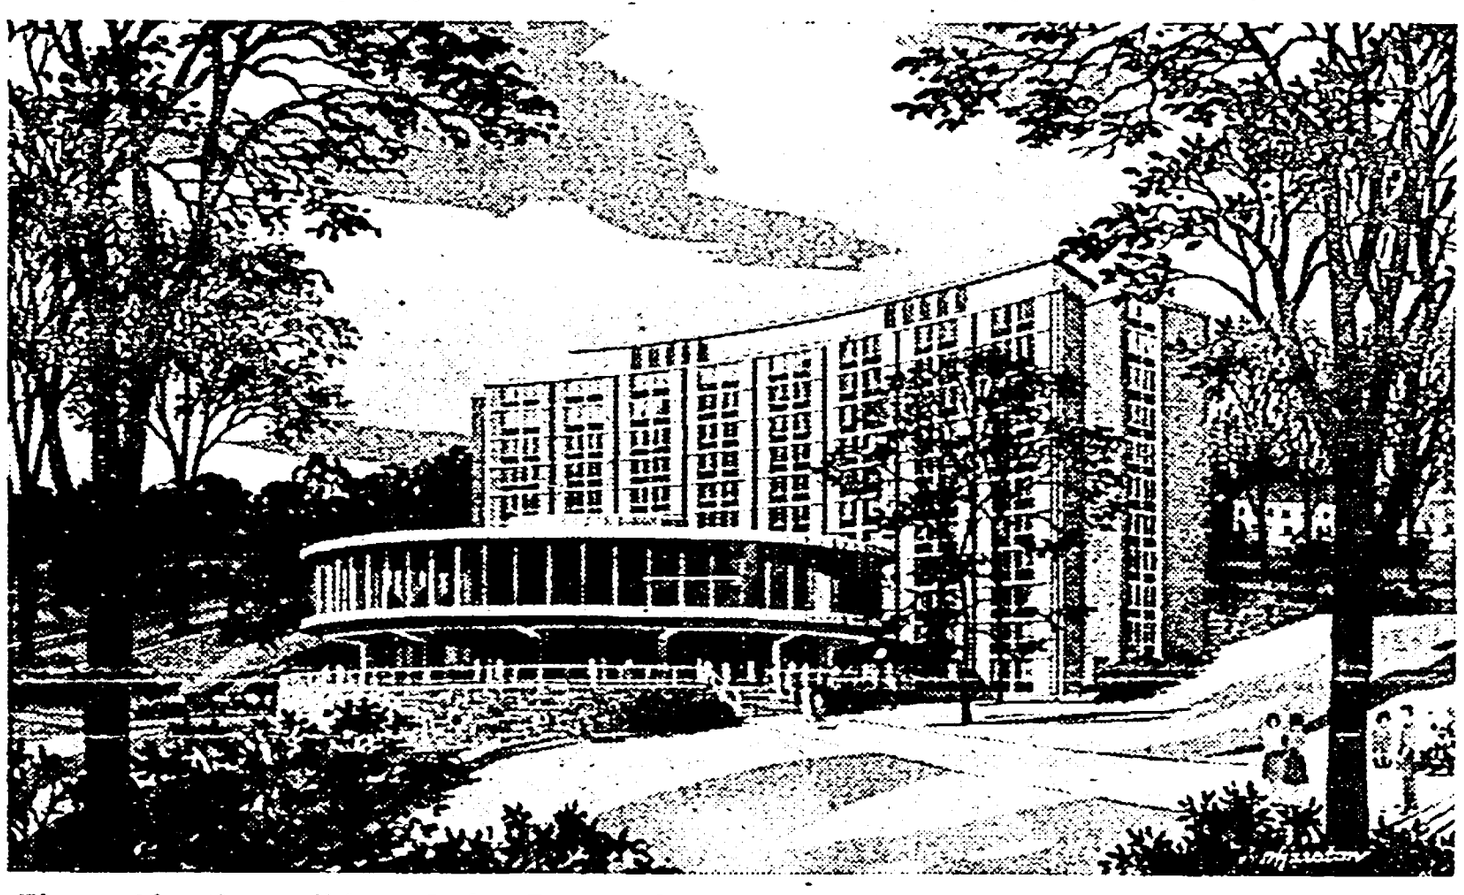
The room colors are pink, lavender, turquoise, and mustard in sequence, and keep repeating. The wall-to-wall carpeting in the rooms is black and white spatter.

The corridors are a light gray with the elevator lobby on each floor changing color so the residents know what floor they are on from the color key.

The dining hall building has the dorm's main lounge, lobby, mail room, offices, and control center on the first floor. Surrounding this is a pleasant balcony. The second floor is the dining room the kitchen. The dining area takes one half the circle with the kitchen and cafeteria the other half.

Retractable screens will be used to block off the cafeteria when the dining area is used for other purposes. The dining hall is on the same level as the branches of the large trees on the lower side of the site, so the view from the large glass area will be stopped short when the leaves are out.

The western exposure will also necessitate the use of curtains in the evening during the spring and fall.



The architect's rendition of the Crouse site dormitory, when completed, is shown above. The new women's dorm marks departures from traditional SU architecture. The round building is an adjoining dining hall. The building will house upperclass coeds.

SU Housing: Something For All

By ROBERT P. SNOW

Syracuse University assumes the responsibility for the housing of its undergraduates. The only exceptions are those living in fraternity and sorority houses or co-ops, those over twenty-five, married, veterans, or those living with blood relatives or working for their room in approved residences.

The major reason for this regulation is that the graduate students, exceptions, faculty, staff, and other miscellaneous people who want to live in the university area fill all the available off-campus housing.

To allow undergraudates to seek their own accomodations would greatly increase the rents and decrease the availability of apartments in the university section.

This would force students to seek housing further and further from the school, and the eventual result would be a non-college. The administration at Syracuse desires to establish a university community here, and students living and studying near the classrooms are necessary for this to be successful.

The university offers its undergraduates three basic types of residences from which to choose. All three, however, require the student to supply certain items. These include bed linen, blankets, bed spreads, dresser scarfs, desk blotters, and metal waste basket.

Only the large dormitories supply curtains, but as window sizes vary, if you have been assigned to another type, you can buy your curtains after you arrive.

The first type of dormitory is the large residence hall. There are 10 of these on campus, and all have been built since 1950. These have certain advantages over the other types. They are equipped with study rooms, floor lounges, a lounge, coin laundry, and a residence library.

The disadvantages include endless narrow, dimly lit corridors, undersize living-study rooms,concrete block walls, and little sense of personal loyalty towards the living center or the people in it.

The second type is the medium residence unit. They house between 40 and 115 students. Most of these are and subsequently, have an apartment scale rather than the hotel scale in the larger dormitories.

The major features of the medium size housing include the suite type housing unit and semi-private bath. While most of the suites at Syracuse do not include a living room, at least the students within the suite tend to develop an association, pride and loyalty in their suite.

The disadvantages include a lack of study and lounge facilities however.

The third type is the small residence unit. These are either converted frame houses called cottages or post-war prefab buildings. Residents of this type of housing develop ties with most of the other residents.

Because of the small size, the cottages very often act as a social unit and participate in university activities as a group. The result could be considered equivalent to a university sponsored fraternity or sorority.

The majority of room arrangements fit into three categories. First, and the most numerous is the double room. Second, and by far the least frequent is the single. The third, and a compromise of the other two is the split-double. This type of room is found in only a very few universities in the world, but has developed much popularity here at Syracuse.

The concept is two private rooms sharing the same doorway. The partition between the rooms is made up of the sets and either desk or bureau. The resulting twin room is larger than a double and smaller than two singles.

The university has traditionally been conservative in its attitudes toward housing philosophy. The basic principles include completely separate men and women, separate freshmen and upperclassmen.

Co-ed housing—men and women living in separate wings of a living center and separate floors of the same dormitory—has, however, been tried during summer semesters. The results are still being debated and no specific plans have as yet been decided about extending the experiments during the regular sessions.

On the subject of mixing freshmen and upperclassmen on the same floor of a dormitory however, experiments have been in progress during the fall and spring semesters since 1961. While this is not an unusual philosophy among the colleges of the nation, this is the first attempt at this type of housing at Syracuse since the 30's.

Kimmel and Day Halls have both had experience with this system, and Booth, Shaw, and the new women's dorm will continue the experiment this fall.

University officials were reluctant at first to try it because they felt that the upperclassmen would give the freshmen an objectionable opinion and attitude towards the principles that the administration and faculty would desire.

Since the experiment has been in effect, however, this attitude has changed as indications are that the freshmen products of mixed frosh and upperclassmen have turned out to be better students and citizens of the university community.

Ralph Malvik, the dormitory director of Kimmel Hall since it became mixed, is in the process of developing statistical proof to validate his opinions of the advantages of the mixed system. From the information he has to date, he believes that the freshmen tend to emulate the more mature attitudes of the upperclassmen.

This has shown itself in virtually no destruction in the dormitory since the experiment started, and a marked reduction in student horseplay. The upperclassmen feel their responsibility as leaders and tend to act more mature also.

The resident advisors on mixed floors find that their duties as a policeman are practically non-existent, and they can form a much closer tie with the residents in their capacity as an advisor, and older friend.

Living within the confines of university housing can be very limited or a very full experience. It can be supplimented to your academic curriculm or it can be a complete waste of time and a druggery.

It is up to you. With imagination you can develop your maturity in university living centers. Or you can fight your environment and gain nothing from it. Find the type of housing you prefer and exploit it.

Recommended Reading Stressed for Freshmen

Traditions Commission, acting with the university administration has recommended three books for freshman reading. The books are not required.

The books are: "The Irony of American History," by Reinhold Niebuhr, a paperback published by Charles Scribner and sons; "Continuing Crisis in American Politics," edited by Marian D. Irish, a Spectrum book published by Prentice-Hall Inc.; and "Public Philosophy," by Walter Lippmann, a Mentor Book.

Academics committee co-chairman Nancy Schwartz said that the head of the freshman citizenship program, Dr. Donald Meikeljohn has pledged to use these summer reading texts extensively in the course intended for th incoming freshman class.

Miss Schwartz said, "The books will not only be interesting, but the frosh will be able to use them in their classes next year."

Her co-chairman Chuck Pellock, reported that plans have been made with Dr. James Elson, chairman of the fresnman English program, to include questions and ideas from the summer reading selection in the freshman English exemption exam.

"If all goes well, we can call our summer reading program a double-barreled success. Previously the reading program hoped to stimulate discussion among the frosh; now the book they read will help them out in their classes, too," said Pellock.

Three events during Orientation Week concern the summer reading selections. On Tuesday afternoon, Sept. 15, faculty members will discuss the three books. Traditions Commission encourages all frosh to attend.

On Thursday afternoon, Sept. 17, students working closely with the academics committee will lead a discussion group intended to involve the freshman audience.

A debate concerning a topic related to the books will take place on Friday afternoon, Sept. 18. According to Pellock, "We will have a formal debate, but our debating skills are far from intercollegiate competition quality, so I'm sure the mood will be relaxed. We'll all learn something, incuding the debators."

The academics convocation on in Hendricks Chapel, will feature Dr. William Sheldon, director of the reading and study skills program. The lecture promises to present some concrete techniques to help the frosh get off on the right foot academically.

New Folk Club Opens

Unital Associates, producers of folk music and jazz concerts have announced the planned September 1 opening of "The Folk Gallery," a unique concept in entertainment. The Folk Gallery will be conviently located in the downtown area and will feature top talent from all over the folk workd.

Planned for fall appearances are Doc Watson, Jack Elliot, The Greenbriar Boys, Carolyn Hester, Rev. Gary Davis, Mitch Greenhill, Roger Sprung, The Shanty Boys, Gil Turner, Logan English, and many others.

The Folk Gallery will be set up as an amphitheater, with comfortable theater seating for more than 100 people and table seating for about fifty more. There will be an attractive menu of foods and beverages to complement the entertainment.

Present plans call for an open hootenanny on Monday nights, special programs on Tuesdays and name talent the rest of the week. There will be two shows each night at 9 p.m. and 11 p.m. and a third show at 1 a.m. on Friday and Saturday evenings.

Student President Welcomes Frosh

Dear Frosh:

Student government is interested in YOU. It became interested the day you decided to become a Syracusan. That day, your problems and your opinions, as a Syracuse undergraduate, became of great importance to me. As president of the student body, I face a very difficult task — the responsibility of representing some 8,000 Syracusce University undergraduates. That responsibility is a challenge, and it can be met only with your help.

Student government needs your opinions, your views, your gripes — and your assistance. If you are interested in working in student government, let me know, or some one already involved in it. It will take some time in the fall to get organized, but I hope that there will be an opportunity to work, for everyone who wishes to work.

I will be seeing you, I hope, in the fall at the activities convocation, and I hope to meet as many of you as possible throughout the year.

Sincerely,
Carl J. Corrallo,
President, Student Government.

Sick? Try the Infirmary

By CAROL TRYKA

Pills, pains, perennial ills—take them all to the SU Student Health Service.

The Student Health Service, located at 111 Waverly Ave., is open from the beginning of the registration period in the fall until commencement day in June. Director of the student service, Dr. F.N. Marty, said, "This is not an insurance; this is one of the services the university offers its students."

Prior to admission, all students are required to complete a health statement and have an examination by their own physicians.

A physician is on duty weekdays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday from 9 am. to 12 noon, and Sundays from 11 am to 12 noon. A doctor is on call for all emergencies, and nurses available for first aid and other treatments from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Registered students are entitled to unlimited visits to the out patients clinics. Most common drugs used in treatment charge. Special mental hygiene, are provided without psychological, and nutrition counseling services are by appointment.

Everyone Gets Aid: Carleton

By CAROL COHEN

"Everyone at Syracuse University receives a scholarship," were Dean Jim Carleton's words during recent interview.

This will sound like a lie, freshmen, when you are forced to hand over what seems like all the money you have in the world to a cashier during registration.

But it's not really a lie, because the cost of a college education cannot possibly be covered by tuition payment alone, said Carleton, dean of men and director of financial aids.

Every student at SU is subsidized in some form, he said. It may be by scholarship aid or it may be by the "unknown"—the government, state and federal; or private donors, often alumni.

Not everyone, however, is eligible for financial assistance, Carleton pointed out. The first qualification is need.

"Students seeking aid are also judged on the basis of merit, scholarship, citizenship, and potential," stated Dean Carleton.

This year there has been a 10-15 per cent increase in the number of scholarships awarded to incoming freshmen. Approximately 300 freshmen will be receiving university aid this year.

Each year SU awards 23-24 per cent of its students over 1¼ million dollars. Students also receive grants from organizations and industry.

All students securing university aid carry a responsibility. They are expected to maintain a cumulative average of 1.5 (8-12) and good citizenship standards.

"The initial award is for two years. After that, the recipient is required to re-apply for the continuance of the aid," Dean Carleton stated.

Although you may not be getting aid in the form of an actual scholarship, someone somewhere is helping you pay for your education.

SU Plans Program For Transfer Student

There has always been a feeling on the part of transfer students that they do not want to be treated like the freshmen. They have already been oriented to college and know what it is all about. In the past the transfer students have been included with freshmen during Syracuse University Orientation Week.

This year Traditions Commission has taken positive steps to separate the transfer from the freshman and give them an orientation period on their own level. The events planned for the fall exclusively for the transfers are:

Monday, Sept. 14——Transfer mixer, 8 p.m. Shaw Dormitory.

Thursday, Sept. 17——Academics and Activities convocation, 7 p.m., Gifford Auditorium.

Friday, Sept. 18——Coffee and Reception with Chancellor Tolley, 4 p.m., Hendricks Capel—Colonial Room.

In addition to these events, there are several functions during the week for transfers and freshmen. Some are the Chancellor's address on Saturday, Sept. 12; the Personnel Convocations on Sunday, Sept. 13; the picnic on Monday, Sept. 14; the Study Techniques lecture on Wednesday, Sept. 16; faculty visitations to the dorms on Thursday, Sept. 17, the Goon Show; the debate and discussion.

Also, a city convocation was planned for the transfers, but this was changed to an all-university event. It will be held after Orientation Week and should be a top event for all new students.

Transfer students usually receive much harder admission screening than the incoming frosh and as a result are a proud addition to the university.

John Yawney, transfer chairman of Traditions Commission, said "We will all be looking forward to seeing you in the fall. You are going to be in for a very interesting year fille with studies, football games, parties, and in general a keen sense of school loyalty. See you in the fall."

Campus Chatter Confusing

Whether you're from Brooklyn or Bakersfield, Malverne or Milwaukee, each freshman will be faced with the same problem upon entering SU—how to decipher the seemingly endless "campus chatter" spoken by upperclassmen.

While those phrases and abbreviations listed below are far from all the frosh will encounter, they should serve as a basic starter. See ya 'round the quad.

President Johnson is expected to arrive in Syracuse about 10 a.m. today. The dedication program at the University Place site will include music by the 98th Infantry Division Band with the academic procession beginning at 10:50 a.m.

Tolley will introduce the president at 11 a.m. after which the president will give his address and receive an honorary degree.

The ribbon-cutting ceremony, with gold scissors which have been used in the dedication of every campus building since Tolley became Chancellor in 1942, is scheduled to take place at about 11:45 a.m. on the plaza of the Newhouse Center.

Inspection of the School Journalism building by distinguished guests is scheduled for noon, with a luncheon following.

School of Journalism alumni will attend a dinner tonight at the Hotel Syracuse at which M. Lyle Spencer, 82-year-old first journalism school dean, and Tolley will be among the speakers.

SUHonorsProgram Set for Opening

The College of Liberal Arts will formally institute an Honors Program within the next year, as soon as a director can be appointed and administrative procedures developed.

The Honors Program as devised will be an integral part of the College of Liberal Arts rather than a separate entity. Many details of administrative organization remain to be worked out, but academic implementation is already on its way. Some departments have begun sections and honors courses for selected students while several departments have initiated pilot programs for junior and senior honors work.

The Honors Program will be designed to provide special educational opportunities which will fully challenge those undergraduate students who show most promise of intellectual achievement and the ambition to develop their abilities to the fullest. The program is also designed to improve the qualifications and increase the number of those who later go on to graduate school.

The administration, the faculty and an increasing number of students feel that such a program is important for the university's future development and is needed to serve able and enterprising students, many of whom have had exceptionally interesting courses for superior students in high school. Experience of many colleges has suggested that honors programs significantly stimulate the whole student body and the faculty, and improve the general intellectual climate of a university.

One of the many clubs and organizations you will see on the S.U. campus this fall is Syracuse-In-Asia.

Further information concerning membership will be given during Freshman Orientation Week.

A toast to our president,
A toast to our most beautiful and newest,

Busy Orientation Week Planned

New students will quickly become members of the "on the go" Syracuse tradition as Orientation Week promises a seemingly endless list of places to go and things to do.

Dormitories will open at 8 a.m. Saturday, Sept. 12, and frosh will spend much of their first college day unpacking, meeting new friends and receiving a first impression of college life.

On the docket for Saturday evening is an address by Dr. William P. Tolley, Chancellor of the university. Tolley will speak to all new students in the Manley Field House.

Campus tours will be conducted from noon-5 p.m., leaving from the Huntington B. Crouse Hall lobby. A convocation for parents will be held at 2 p.m. in Hendricks Chapel.

Sunday will be featured by separate men's and women's convocations held at 2 p.m. and 3:30 p.m. respectively in Hendricks Chapel. A religious convocation in the chapel at 7 p.m. will precede 9 p.m. house meetings.

Monday will be occupied by college convocations and placement testing, but social life takes the front spot Monday evening with a picnic on the quad and a pep rally in Archbold Stadium.

ROTC films will be shown Tuesday morning and registration will begin that afternoon. Student offices will be open from 2-4 p.m. each day during the week.

Registration will continue Wednesday along with the English 1 exemption examination.

The always-entertaining and informative study techniques lecture will be presented twice Tuesday evening in Hendricks Chapel.

Faculty members will visit dormitories on Thursday evening to confer with students and answer questions about the university

Friday will be highlighted by Traditional orange and blue frosh beanies will once again appear Saturday, Sept. 12, as Syracuse University greets 2,250 freshmen.

These students, selected from 9,000 applicants, compose a class that is stronger than previous ones in that it knows it's vocational goals and study program, according to Lester Dye, director of admissions.

The quality of the member of the class of '68 is "somewhat improved," stated Dye.

This is a result of the applicant facing stiffer entrance requirements. In the past, an entering student was only required to take the SAT section of the College Entrance Examinations.

This year students applying to the College of Liberal Arts were required to take the English achievement exam plus two others.

The School of Nursing now requires the English exam and either biology or chemistry; all other colleges require only the English exam.

There was a 10 per cent increase in the number of SU applicants this year. Forty per cent of the students accepted are from out of New York State. The increase in the number of private school graduates enrolling in the class of '68 is 22 per cent.

Three hundred incoming freshmen have been selected for Honors Council. This means that a qualified student will be able to take up to three honors courses during his freshmen year.

SU Weekends

By ELLEN WOLPERT

On the lighter side of our year at Syracuse are the "name" weekends. This year all undergraduate classes will be able to participate in some of the programs, as each weekend is sponsored by a different group.

First on the agenda this fall is Sophomore Weekend, formerly known as Homecoming Weekend. Its theme is a gridiron battle here at Syracuse, and Pitt will be the chailenger this year.

Besides the game, there will be a concert Friday Oct. 30, featuring Ian and Sylvia, the Irish Ramblers, and Judy Collins at the Manley Field House. Sims Dining Hall is reserved for a dance on Saturday with Dick Kowell's orchestra.

Plans for Freshman Weekend, Dec. 11-13, will be left to the officers and committees chosen

Pack Only What You Need

.. By MARY MARGARET WALTER

The trunks are open and ready to be loaded with paraphernalia, but ---------- Help! Exactly what is paraphernalia?

Well, O confused one, here are a few basic tips on what to cart to 'Cuse.

You gals will want to bring a few cotton clothes since Indian summer goes on a blazing-hot war-path for a month or two . . . Somehow, at the first football game the spirit of patriotism materializes bright, orange sweaters—bring buy or dye ! . . . When the cold blasts of winter hit our fair campus, you'll be grateful for a really warm (alpaca-lined?) coat. High boots — the higher the better — are an added blessing through the snowdrifts.

Syracuse is a casual campus. You'll need a few dressy wools and heels, but concentrate mainly on skirts and sweaters. Jumpers are always good — they can be dressy or casual, as you will. One formal dress is all that's needed for a starter . . . Though regulations forbid wearing shorts and slacks on the campus, you can soften the blow by donning a trench coat over them. Most popular this season is what we fondly call a p.g.r. (pea green raincoat) . . . You'll feel right at home in a pair of cut-off blue jeans . . . As for shoes, the ever popular loafer is still with us. Oh — bring a pair of comfortable shoes, you'll do a lot of tramping during Orientation Week! . . . An umbrella can prove a wise investment during the inclement season.

All right guys — the casual rule goes for you, too. Bring a suit or two, but a good amount of sweaters, slacks and shirts. Sports packets (one blazer tsyle perhaps?), are suave . . .Shoes for you? Loafers once again, dress shoes and heavy, lined shoes or boots for trudging icy paths.

Fine for frippery — furnishings follow; . . . Basic furnishings in all student dormitory rooms include a single bed, pillow, dresser, mirror, desk, book shelves, desk chair and lamp for each student.

Bed linens, blankets and towels are your own responsibility. You may bring your own if you wish, but you will find the linen and blanket rental of a local laundry will not only be a great convenience, but will cost less in the long run. Unless you're living in a cottage you won't need your own curtains . . . Many students use typewriters, but owning one is not essential. It is always possible to rent one . . . Certain little goodies like wastebaskets can wait till you get here. The golden rule to follow:

"Don't come burdened with tons of stuff,
A few essentials are quite enough."

Tolley Welcomes Class of 1968

Dear Future Syracusan:

On September 12th you will become a member of the Syracuse family. From that time forward no matter where you go or what you do, you will know yourself to be and will be known as a Syracusan.

This newspaper is published to help you become the best Syracusan you can be. It will tell you something of the importance of diligent study, will introduce you to the libraries and laboratories, will describe the living centers and the social activities, all of which focus on our purpose of excellence in higher education.

We are looking forward to the pleasure of meeting you and we shall do everything we can to help you Everyone on the faculty and the administration is interested in your growth and development. Each is here to assist you.

You will like Syracuse. You will find it as full of challenge as of opportunity. Your years here should be among the richest and the most rewarding of your life.

William P. Tolley
Chancellor

The Challenge Of Syracuse

The day you received your notice of acceptance to Syracuse University, you became an integral part of that teeming giant we know as the university family.

You are a Syracusan, and you will always be a Syracusan, and everything you do will reflect not only on yourself but on Syracuse University and its vast complex.

You are as much a part of the university as any member of the Board of Trustees, for a board could not govern if there were no students.

And just as Syracuse University has accepted you into its family, you must now assume the responsibilities which are inseparable with the institution.

Syracuse believes deeply that "knowledge crowns those who seek her," and seek her you must. Syracuse believes in development of the individual through the university, just as it believes in development of the university through the individual.

Your development in your years at Syracuse will not be confined to the classroom. It must be spiritual, intellectual and social, as well as mental. Syracuse believes in the well-rounded individual.

You enter Syracuse University in the midst of development paralleled by few universities in the world. The entire face of the campus has changed since 1954, and more than 20 new buildings are scheduled to be constructed before you leave.

As the caliber of the education goes up and up, the caliber of the student increases at an even swifter pace. The Class of 1968 has, without doubt, the most potential of any class ever to enter SU.

Your job is to realize that potential and convert it into development — both for yourself and the university. This is the obligation of a Syracusan.

Syracuse University awaits you, perhaps more than it has awaited any entering group in the past. The years will determine whether you will serve or fail you university, but the Syracuse byword will always remain — you must not fail yourselves.

Tipping, SU Style

"Tip it, frosh."

There's no place on campus you'll be able to escape the ever-present cry of the upperclassmen. They'll find you no matter where you try to hide.

Yes, that bright orange-and-blue beanie you buy when you arrive on campus will let the world know you're a Syracuse freshman and proud of it. Beanies are worn during the duration of Orientation Week.

The wearing of these hats began around 1893 to help upperclassmen recognize, and get to know, the new frosh. And the class of 1968 is just another freshman group in a long line.

Beanies are traditionally sold by members of Orange Key, the junior men's honorary, and should be the freshman's first purchase at Syracuse.

So wear it priudly, frosh. Let it be a symbol of a week that marked your entrance into the ranks of Syracusans.

And remember, next year it's your turn to say "Tip it."

Thanks

Today's edition of the Daily Orange marks the largest issue of the paper ever produced.

And just as with every other aspect of Syracuse University, it took the efforts of a unified whole to work the paper into completion.

A special note of thanks must go to the staff of the Summer Orange, for service beyond the call of duty; to each organization head who contributed to the issue; to the Office of Information Services, without whom the summer editors might never have survived; and to the Manlius Publishing Company, which has remained open to the wee hours of the morning to allow completion of the issue.

Trials and Tribulations

Groves of Academe

By Robert S. Phillips

Robert S. Phillips is assistant director of admissions at Syracuse University. In his undergraduate days, he served as editor of the "Syracuse 10," campus literary magazine.

The new student entering Syracuse University this fall will share the same problem as thousands of college freshmen across the nation: How to adjust -- academically and socially -- to campus life.

Many of the most brilliant scholars in the class will drop out of school due to an inability to make one or both of these adjustments, while some less brilliant contemporaries will succeed. The freshman should be aware of some of these problems of adjustment from the outset of his academic career.

College work differs so drastically from that encountered in most secondary schools that many students find themselves frustrated in their first weeks of class. Many are unprepared to tackle the vast amount of reading which is expected.

Others, who are able to budget their time and complete all reading assignments, may find they are unable to analizze significant facts and ideas in them. A typical question heard at examination timet is, "How much of the text and lectures are we responsible for?" The student must learn to distinguish that which is essential in any book and any lecture, to separate the wheat from the chaff.

Once a student acquires this insight, he must learn to organize material effectively -- in classroom notes or perhaps in chapter outlines -- to enable him to review effectively a semester's work. For some students an outline is a waste of time; for others it is an effective study device. Some students spend so much time notes that they never have time to assimilate fully their meaning.

This, of course, is foolhardy. No one can tell a student how he can best approach his studies. Study habits are an individual problem. But it seems safe to say that a great number of students fail because they did not discipline themselves to regular study hours until it was too late; their parents were not here to prod them and they did not push themselves.

The other major realm of problems is social. In a university atmosphere it is all too easy to let the social aspects of college overshadow the academic. A frequent problem is the student who is a natural "joiner;" whereas in high school a student was able to belong to several activities each year, the pattern is different to college.

It is a better idea for a student to belong to one or two activities and derive some tangible benefit from them than to belong to half the organgizations on campus and not do his share in any. Activities in college take a great deal of time, and only the est students who learn quickly can afford to join a number.

Other students are naturally gregarious; they rejoice in the new opportunities college offers for bull-sessions and parties. The student who would rather flit from dormitory room to room than study each night is headed for trouble. Many abuse their new freedoms away from home and use week-ends as the time to "break loose" from social and moral strictures formerly imposed by parents and teachers.

The other extreme is the student who feels desperately drawn back to the protection and security of home: These are the homesick students who expend all their energies in writing letters, placing phone calls, and taking week-end trips home. This student needs to feel the independence which is necessary for adjustment to college life. A good number fail to seize that responsibility. Frequently these students fear they will not be accepted in the new college environment and long for their comfortable existences back home, where they had an already established identity.

The remedy to most of the problems cited is for the student to strike a balance between the academic and the social life on campus. If a student finds he is unable to make these vital adjustments, there are people here to aid him: his faculty advisor, his resident advisor, his academic dean, the student health service, all are avaliable for the necessary counseling.

There is, however, no substitute for hard work. The motto of Syracuse University is "Knowledge Crown" those who seek her to become an educated persons, the student must first learn to help himself through discipline and intellectual inquiry.

The Developing University

Social Progress

By Marilyn Dietz

Nobody can call Syracuse University a community of ivory-tower-dwellers. No, sir. It's an active and contributing member of the larger metropolitan community of Syracuse and Onondaga County.

Actually, its "community" involvement extends well beyond the county, state and national boundaries. For now, however, let's concentrate on the working partnership which exists between "town and gown."

There are countless noteworthy examples of the community-mindedness of the separate Syracuse University colleges and their faculty members. One of the most recent projects involving Piety Hillers is a demonstration day-care program at Central Village housing on the city's lower east side.

Considerable teamwork went into planning this pilot project. The $165,000 grant awarded by the state department, financing the program's first year of operation, testifies to its excellence.

Our Graduate School of Social Work is joining forces with the United Community Chest and Council, the New York State Department of Social Welfare, Syracuse Community Nursery Centers, Inc., and several other community agencies in establishing a special day-care program for children of working parents.

Briefly the School of Social Work will be helping staff Central Village Services (a family counseling agency) and Central Village Nursery (for three to nine-year-olds). Case work and group work theories will be given practical application at these agencies by the participating graduate students. The program begins this September.

A unique feature of the demonstration program is the active participation of parents in various phases of the day-care operation. The actual incorporation of educational programs for parents and the contribution of service and counsel from parents is being attempted. It is hoped this approach will result in a valuable learning experience for both the parents and graduate students, and will bring about a more wholesome home environment for the youngsters.

That pretty well sums up the Who, Where, Why, What, and When of the story. Now, the sixth "W": What's in it for me?

Educational opportunities for University students, Central Tillage neighborhood children and their parents is the most obvious answer. On the philosophical level we might point out that the man who leads others out of the darkness of ignorance is also blessed by the warmth and light of knowledge and truth.

Beyond the obvious and philosophic lies the larger, more significant reply to "What in it for me?" It's every man's basic desire to enjoy the best life has to offer. Viewed in this light, the Central Village program could be the embryo of a larger community movement helping the culturally deprived persons living on the lower East side to realize their full potential as citizens, parents, men and women.

World peace begins with parents living peaceably together, raising their children in a wholesome, healthy, and happy home. Maybe it's reaching a bit to credit Syracuse University and the other participants in this day-care project with "World Peace" but it's not out of the realm of probability that 10 years from now J.D. will stand for juvenile decency-not juvenile deliquency—in this community. Bill Orange can justly claim a large share of credit for that social achievement.

Frosh English Courses

Freshman English is required of all freshmen in the university. The department of English believes, however, that a college English course deserves that name only when it offers every student the stimulus of understanding something new and seeing the familiar in a fresh light.

In consequence, the department offers several freshman courses and variations thereof to accommodate the varying capacities and previous training of new freshmen.

Basic Freshman English

This course will be given to freshmen whose College Borad scores indicate that they need further instructions in basic skills. Students in this course will be assigned to small sections, and the work of the course will consist of reading essays of various kinds and the writing of short themes.

In the second term, the course will include readings in modern literature. Becuase sections will be small, instructors, in both terms, will be able to give a good deal of individual attention to students' individual problems.

Advanced Freshman English

This course will be given to freshman whose College Board scores indicate that their basic skills are adequate. In addition to writing and some consideration of linguistics, the course in the first semester will include reading novels, short novels, and poetry; and in the second semester, short stories, criticism, and drama.

Honors Course

During the summer, a number of students with exceptionally high College Board verbal scores will be invited to register for English 19 H, Freshman English Honors, in the fall. Honors sections are small, have their own syllabus, and are taught by some of the most competent instructors.

More typing beautifully organized reading and writing is expected of students than in conventional sections, and the pace is faster. The success with which honors sections have been received in the past five years sugggests that students selected this year will find the experience equally rewarding.

Freshman English Exemption

Some freshmen have already achieved a more than usual competence in English. To allow students who demonstrate such competence to proceed to more advanced work, the department exempts from freshman English requirement students who pass a qualifying examination given during the orientation period. Details of time and place will be announced later.

Advanced Credit

Students who have taken the College Entrance Board Advanced Placement Examination in English composition and literature and have received a grade of 3, 4, or 5 will receive credit for six hours of freshman English and may, if they wish, register for a more advanced English course.

Despite the fact that block books, books printed from wooden blocks, were poor in workmanship, they became very popular during the period from 1440 to 1470 because of the eagerness of the people for any kind of learning.

Panhel Governs, Serves, Binds 25 Hill Sororities

By MARCELLA RAST
President, Panhellenic

There are 25 sororities on the Syracuse University campus. Each is different from any other . . . most are local chapters of national organizations, others are new organizations begun on the Hill.

Different as they are, all are bound together by the Syracuse University Panhellenic Association.

What does Panhellenic do and how does it relate to the campus? Panhel serves as the body governing all sororities and it regulates rushing through rules voted upon by all houses.

In addition, Panhel encourages group co-operation and participation in college activities to benefit each sorority girl, the university, and the community.

Panhel takes a special interest in the scholarship of all women on campus. It encourages high scholastic achievement among sororities by awarding annually a special trophy to the sorority with the highest average.

Panhel also awards two scholarships each year, open to any co-ed. One is for study on the SU campus, while the other is for study abroad.

Philanthropy is an important concern of Panhellenic as well as of individual sororities. A gala Charity Ball is held by Panhel each fall with the proceeds donated to charity. This year $1,400 was given to the Retarded Children's Fund.

Panhel encourages sororities to participate in all university cultural and social events. Sororities take part in Greek Week, fraternity-sorority exchange dinners, and the annual Panhellenic Spring Luncheon. They play an important role in stimulating campus spirit at Syracuse.

Sororities join in making floats, posters, snow sculptures, and campus chest booths, and their members are prominent in extra-curricular activities.

Perhaps Panhellenic's biggest job is the regulation of sorority rushing. Upperclass women and transfer student will rush in October, while the rush period for freshmen women will extend from February 1st to the 17th.

Rush is the period during which sororities and frosh will have an opportunity to become acquainted. Invitations to membership are extended at the end of this period. Sorority rush counselors will be assigned to each freshman living center in the early fall. Their job is to help prospective rushees and answer questions concerning sororities and rush.

The freshman rush convocation for frosh co-eds interested in sorority membership will be held on Sunday, Nov. 15th, in Hendricks Chapel. Rush rules and procedures will be explained in detail at that time.

The sorority system has long been a significant part of Syracuse University. The Panhellenic creed states in part: "We, the fraternity undergraduate members, stand for good scholarship for guarding of good health, for wholehearted co-operation with our college's ideals for student life, for the maintanence of fine social standards, for serving to the best of our ability, of our college community."

With this as its goal and motto, Panhellenic will long continue to be an important part of our university.

303 UNIVERSITY PLACE

DO: Complete Campus Coverage

By AUDREY LIPPMAN
News Editor

The Daily Orange is Syracuse University's campus newspaper, distributed to all major dormitories and classroom buildings every weekday morning.

Operated solely by undergraduate students, the newspaper gives complete campus coverage on events of organizations, speeches, debates, campus elections and any other news that affects the students of the university.

Students are needed for reporting, photography, sports coverage, book reviews and business staff. The editorial and business staffs train incoming freshmen who show the desire to be a part of this major campus function.

In the past, Daily Orange staffers have attended speeches by nationally known personalities such as James Reston, New York Times columnist; Abraham Ribicoff, Connecticut senator; author Ayn Rand, as well as artists, poets, politicians and educators.

Several members of the present staff will be on hand Wednesday for the dedication of the Newhouse Communications Center by President Lyndon B. Johnson.

Newspaper reporters on campus also get to meet leading campus and world personalities for interviews and stories. Student protests affect the dean of men and the dean of women, directors of various campus departments and often Chancellor Tolley. Staffers must report the complete story to the campus, by getting comments from all sources available.

This year, the Daily Orange will be moving from its present home in Building 7, to the basement of Winchell Hall, a girls' dormitory on the corner of University place and University avenue. The move will situate the newspaper directly across the street from the Newhouse Center.

Anyone interested in becoming a member of the staff is invited to visit Building 7, on building anytime during orientation, registration or the first weeks of the fall semester. Further information may be received now by contacting Daily Orange editor Andy Porte, Building 7, Syracuse University, Syracuse, New York 13210.

Syracuse '10': SU's Spicy Side

By MICHAEL MORGAN
Editor, Syracuse 10

The "Syracuse 10," Syracuse University's literary magazine, is a playground for its young writers and artists and an adventure for its many readers.

Published three times during the school year, it offfers the literary, artistic talents of Syracuse's students for all of us to enjoy And yet, the caliber of that talent is so superior that the "10" is always as exciting to its public as it is challenging to its contributors.

Material, solicited from a wide variety of sources connected with university, is carefully judged and the final publication reveals only the highest quality. Each year finds the "10" an excitingly new and different magazine. This year will, by no means be an exception.

Our guiding principle will always be that the "Syracuse 10" does not create an audience for itself, but rather its audience creates the '10'. Articles, fiction, poetry, artwork, all are offered for your delight and your discussion.

There is no elite audience for the 10; there is rather, a vast university community, an immeasurable potential public.

During the coming year, as in the past, the '10' will feature the work of several noted authors connected with the university. This year's select group will succeed such noted figures as John Updike and e.e. cummings.

The editorial and business staffs are made up solely of undergraduate students, although contributions are accepted from other sources also. All students interested in working on the '10' will be invited to a meeting early in the fall semester where the magazine publication will be discussed in detail. Members of all four classes are encouraged to work on the '10' staff.

Although the '10' is hardly meant to be clandestine in any way, there must always be an element of the secretive to make it exciting.

Since the '10' is a spicy magazine and you are a spicy person, take no chances in your getting together. Fill out the coupon that you will find on this page and send it with great haste to our office. This will insure your three issues for the coming year.

Quickly now—be the first on your block with a subscription to the "Syracuse 10!"

Onondagan--Book, Not Saltine Warrior

By LOMETA HUDNALL
Editor, Onondagan

If you look for an Onondagan when you come to Syracuse, you won't find any Indian. You'll find a yearbook.

Pictures of student life both serious and humorous will cover the pages of the 1965 Onondagan. By the time you're a senior you may have forgotten--or have made an effort to forget--all about that adorable orange beanie you had to wear those first confusing days of student life.

But you cannot forget the beanie because you will see its picture in the annual.

Those football victories and late study hours you don't commit to memory will appear in the book.

Syracuse students themselves write and edit the yearbook. Reporters and the editor-in-chief are students. Although two faculty advisors are available and willing to help, the students take the initiative.

The Onondagan is a student book built on student ideas and inspirations, and hopefully has a minimum of student errors. Senior editorship positions are filled by qualified writers, reporters, organizers, and photographers. Usually some experience is necessary for a senior editorship.

Putting out a yearbook takes time and patience. It takes hard work and cooperation. And it's all worth it when a book between two covers is produced.

Whether you're Greek, a senior, a member of an honorary, or active in any of the many campus organizations you will find that you, too, are a part of the 1965 Onondagan.

New offices for the yearbook will be located in the basement of Winchell Hall. Please drop in and visit if you are interested in working on the book!

Prof Studies Alaskan Crater

A study attempting to define the origin of a crater in Alaska will be conducted by a Syracuse University professor this summer. Ernest H. Muller, associate professor of geology, will investigate the origin of the Savonski Crater at Katmai National Monument in Alaska.

Muller stated that Robert Decker, professor of geology at Dartmouth University and Peter Ward, geology graduate assistant at Dartmouth, observed the rock basin containing a lake from air reconnaissance photos. Ward will work with Muller for six-weeks of field work in Alaska this June.

Syracuse Campus Rich in Tradition

By Lometa Hudnall

"Excuse me please," said the man with an amused but understanding smile on his face.

A boy and girl stood up.

The man ran his hand slowly across the pink-gray stone. It was nearly smooth—that is, the famed Kissing Bench near the Syracuse University Hall of Languages.

In 1950 the numerals had to be redrawn onto the back; continued use since 1912 had worn them away.

Legend has it that one cannot graudate from Syracuse University until he—and the necessary she—have kissed on the bench. Possible plans for engagement and marriage also accompany this often-used tradition.

Although such exciting traditions as "beanie burning" at the end of the year, salt rushes, the lantern ceremony, and Moving-Up Day have now become part of the past, Syracuse still claims customs and landmarks.

What were—and are— these traditions and landmarks, and how did they originate?

Syracuse University itself was once a dream. The dream grew into an idea. The idea became a reality, a university logically called the "Hill," as one shall see.

University Place was once known as Walnut; and Walnut was called Spruce, while Crouse was called Chestnut. Where cement sidewalks now weave between the buildings farm roads and lanes existed.

On Aug. 31, 1871, the cornerstone of the Hall of Languages was laid.

In 1889 all of the roads on campus were graded and cindered. The campus was taking shape.

If a student rode a horse to Syracuse in its early days, most likely he kept it in "Professor (janitor) Sennett's shed," a wooden structure measuring 20 feet by 60 feet.

Unwritten history has it that there may have been truth in the remark made by alumni about the dirt and filth that accumulated within the shed, especially if one accepts the tradition that Chancellor Sims' cow was kept within the frame structure. This "versatile edifice" was burned April 12, 1886.

Instituted in 1875, but dying ten years later, the "pine ceremony" was once part of graduation exercises. Each senior class member took a puff from the pipe, and then it was passed on to the junior class representative, this gesture symbolizing the responsibility of the next class to keep the spirit and tradition of Syracuse intact.

Girls be thankful. In 1912 Chancellor Day stated to the Daily Orange. "We will not allow fraternity parties to be held in downtown dance halls or any such place, and our young ladies will not be allowed to go to dances in downtown hotels."

One Syracuse tradition has literally "gone up in smoke."

Chancellor Day publicly aired his views on the subject of smoking in 1921: "If you must use this stimulant and tonic for your weak nerves, so offensive to many persons who have a right to pure and uncontaminated air, there is enough room where you can saturate yourself without offending and nauseating your neighbors and associates who abhor the odors of a doped cigaret and the stench of soaked pipes."

Yates Castle, built in 1852, was the first home of the Journalism School. It was built by Colonel T. Longstreet—in the clothing business—and named "Renwick Castle" after the architect. Alonzo Yates, another clothing merchant, then bought the structure. In 1906 the university bought it for $50,000.

Another historic landmark is the Chancellor's estate. Consisting of 15 large rooms the home and estate were "bought in 1915 before available prices in the University Hill section became prohibitive."

Holden Observatory, "the little building with the round top," is unique. The Observatory houses telescopes and radioactive isotopes. These isotopes, used in atomic experiments throughout the university, are stored in underground vaults. To finance proper care of the isotopes, the university and the Medical College maintain a joint fund.

A Deke named Douglas first sounded the chimes of Crouse College in 1889. And since that time—except 1942-46— a member of the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity has been chimemaster of the nine Belgium cast bells.

The walls and ceiling of the chime ringer's room are covered with past chimemasters' initials, according to tradition, coeds are never allowed to visit the room. Only a few girls have ever entered, and then on official business.

The main library houses two works of art which will become even more historically significant as time goes on. One, a bronze statue of Diana and her dog, is found in the lobby of the library.

In keeping with custom, a student who rubs the dog's paw and says a brief prayer will be insured success in any quizz or examination. America's most noted woman sculptor, Mrs. Archer Huntington of New York, presented the statue to the university in 1932.

Rvico Lebrun's "Crucifixion" a mural measuring 16 feet by 26 feet, claims the second title of outstanding work of art. Mounted on the east wall of the main room, the painting has been described by some critics as "one of the most significant religious paintings in contemporary American art."

This triptych, completed in 1950, was presented to Syracuse University by Michael Straght, president of the William C. Whitney Foundation of New York.

In front of Sims, "he" stands ready arm stretched, face looking upward . . .the Saltine Warrior. This bronze statue symbolizes the savage ferocity with which the Syracuse football teams traditionally attack opponents.

Louis Kaish, student of the great sculptor Ivan Mestrovic, created the Warrior, to which a more serious symbolism is given — that of "a thinker Someone has said, "A thinker must also be a warrior, for he who would dare discovery of new space, would attack the problem of the day, or chart the future, must move into the unknown by faith and his search can be in the recesses of his mind. . ."

Other students of Mestrovic have left various stone sculptures placed near the Women's Building. These are there for viewers' enjoyment even though the sculptures are unfinished, and the sculptor, unknown.

University history also notes that the present quadrangle was once the football field, the "Old Oval." In the future, another quad will connect the Newhouse Communications Center, the Special Education Department and Lowe Art Center.

Thus Syracuse University tradition is seen in the many physical aspects of the campus and in customary actions of the students.

Those who are part of the university must continue the annual attempt to "catch the golden horseshoe in the megaphone at the Homecoming game" and thus "insure victory," for when traditions die, a uniting factor of a student body dies.

Ely Discusses Latin Trip

Bids Opened On Auditorium

Bids were opened at Syracuse University last week for construction of the Arnold M. Grant Auditorium, a three-story addition to the Ernest I. White College of Law Building.

The air-conditioned structure will be connected to the south side of White Hall, which overlooks Irving avenue on the west campus quadrangle. It will extend 120 feet toward Archbold Stadium.

A 398-seat auditorium, two lecture halls each with 130-seat capacities, and 17 offices will highlight the building. Facilities will also include a law faculty library, seminar room, private study areas for graduate students, kitchen and lounge area. The basement floor will be used for general university purposes.

Grant, a New York city attorney, is a member of the university's Board of Trustees. He is a 1927 graduate of the university and received his law degree cum laude here in 1929. His gift of $800,000 will help finance the new wing.

The bids and alternates will be revivewed and contracts are expected to be awarded within a few weeks, according to Clark D. Ahlberg, university vice president for administration and research.

Weekends . . .

by you, the class of '68. You will schedule the activities, hire entertainment, and keep the profits for your class treasury.

As yet there are no specific plans for Winter Weekend, Feb. 19-21, but the tradition of skiing, snow sculpture, and a concert sponsored by the junior class will probably be continued. The customary snow sculpture contest, which every Greek house enters in keeping with the weekend theme, makes the most of the Syracuse winter.

Spring Weekend, from April 31-May 2, is sponsored as usual by Eta Pi Upsilon, senior women's honorary. The passing of the snow will be celebrated with a colorful pageant and float parade Saturday afternoon.

The big weekend at Syracuse this year are sure to be all that fond memories are made of. They are times when the whole campus can mix at its congenial best.

More students applied for financial aid this year than in previous years. Although some of them were rejected the aid, they will still be registering in September.

Although the class test scores are still being tabulated, the class of '68 is looked upon "as one of the best yet."

Also seen looking somewhat confused Sept. 12 will be 450 transfer students.

Classes begin Saturday morning and the afternoon will feature the broadcast of the SU-Boston College footbal game. A "Saturday Night Special" will be held on the quad that evening.

The orientation period ends Sunday Sept. 20 with an activities convocation at 2 p.m. in Hendricks Chapel.

Union, Minus Building, Aids SU

Among the developing aspects of Syracuse University is the University Union program, aimed at giving the campus the benefits of a student union program, although the actual union will not be built for several years.

The program is known as "university union," because the final building will serve as a center for students, administration, faculty and alumni, representing the whole of the university.

The union board recently issued a statement to all incoming students. It read:

"Welcome to Syracuse University! We of the University Union Board wish to open wide the doors of friendship and participation for you. Our program provides entertainment for all and opportunity for many. In lieu of a Student Union building facility we sponsor weekly events at the University Women's Building ranging in breadth with ,popular movies, art exhibits, dramatics and musical presentations, sports participation and many others.

"We would like to invite you to a special orientation program in your honor Friday evening, Sept. 18. It will feature a band blast, "Breakfast at Tifany's," volleyball, and an art exhibit, etc. Watch your campus mailbox for further publicity.

"In addition, the University Union Board promotes student fund raising toward the construction of a building. We re-

AWS Answers Coeds' Queries About SU Life

By JOAN MOORE
Vice President, AWS

What is it like to be a coed at Syracuse University? What is it like to live with fifty or more girls on the same corridor? These are probably two of many questions freshman girls are asking this summer.

To help give answers to these and many other queries, representatives of the Association of Women Students will be at each living center, not only for the first few days of Orientation but all through the fall. Now freshman will ask, "What is the Association of Women Students?"

Every undergraduate coed at Syracuse is a member ofAWS (as it is usually called). Through elected representatives in individual living centers and officers of the campus-wide organization, Syracuse coeds set their own curfews and determine many of the policies by which they govern themselves.

By working closely with the Dean of Women's Office, the Head Residents and through AWS guides, freshman coeds learn to meet and deal fairly and democratically with the problems which arise in day-to-day living.

AWS is more than this, however. By expanding its energies into the academic area, new ways to improve scholarship and thestudy atmosphere of living centers to plan social activities for themselves and with other living centers AWS tries to make the preparations easier.

Through close contact with AWS groups on other campuses, new ideas for better campus life are shared. In fact, Syracuse is the site of the regional AWS convention this November involving all the schools in New York State and northern Pennsylvania.

Since each freshman girl is a part of AWS, she also shares in a tradition of self-government which has been a part of Syracuse University for 57 years. As vice president of AWS I'd like to add my welcome to that of many others.

As the youngest members you should not feel the lowest; your ideas and suggestions will be given special consideration because your fresh approach to campus living is special. It is only through such change and new life that AWS can grow to adequately serve each succeeding college generation.

This year's Parents' Weekend will be better than ever, according to co-chairmen Paula Wilkins and Alan Gold.

A School for Parents, including lectures, will be held on Friday, Oct. 9, to begin the weekend's activities.

A pep rally will take place in front of Hendricks Chapel Friday evening to help the Orangemen win against UCLA at the Saturday game.

After the rally, parents will be able to see the annnual presentation of the Goon Show, a skit depicting college life which is presented to the frosh when they arrive on campus.

Chancellor William P. Tolley will address the parents at a breakfast to be held at Sims Dining Hall Saturday morning, Oct. 10.

All living centers will hold an open house after the football game.

The Parent's Weekend committee includes two seniors, four juniors, and four sophomores.

ISO--The SU International Set

By ROBERT FISHER
President, ISO

Would you like to be a member of the international set? Does spending an evening with an Ethopian prince, chatting over tea with an Indian girl in her sari, discusssing poitics with a Yugoslav, a Korean, or a Brazilian sound exciting to you? The International Student Organization offers you all of these opportunities.

The ISO is an organization for all internationally minded students-both from the United States and abroad.

World polities, the Peace Corps, visiting lecturers, and travel are bringing young people into direct contact with international problems more than ever before. Yet, the opportunity to begin to understand people in other parts of the world is being carelessly ignored by the university student.

The foreign student is a guest in the university community. As such, he anticipates being received with the interest and the courtesy he would extend to visitors to his own country. Unfortunately this is not the type of reception he receives from his classmates at SU.

Though he may be invited by outside groups to visit older families or to attend teas, the foreign student is more interested in establishing contacts and exchanging ideas with his own age group. But it is his contemporaries, his own classmates, who are the most difficult to meet.

What can be done about the situation? The foreign students themselves find it difficult to act. They are, for the most part, reserved and shy, being in a strange country with different customs and language.

The responsibility is solely on the shoulders of the SU student.

You incoming students can help solve this probelm by taking an active part in the activities of the ISO. These activities include monthly discussions on provocative issues.

Last year's discussions included topics such as "The SU Student, a Poor Host to Our Foreign Classmates" and "Education--an International Problem." Also planned are social gatherings and dances, foreign films, festival of nations week, a chance to be a big brother or sister to an incoming foreign student, and of course countless opportunities for informal meetings and new and stimulating friendships.

A great many of you will travel abroad in the very near future. The ISO provides a wonderful chance to establish contacts with friends and families all over the world. Future meetings with these persons in their own countries will make your travels immensely more rewarding. But even for those of you who do not anticipate travelling, close friendships with foreign students will open your eyes to many new and exciting ideas.

In the process of your activitiy in the ISO, you will help make the foreign student's stay here equally enjoyable and rewarding so that he may return to his country with a much more intimate and valuable impression of the United States.

Watch for our column in the Daily Orange and plan to attend our first meeting!

WAER--SU's Student FM Radio

WAER (88.3 m.c..), the radio voice of Syracuse University, begins its 18th year of broadcasting this September. Begun in 1946 as Radio House, it was the first low-powered FM station in the country .At present it is the second-most-listened-to FM station in Syracuse with a listening audience covering a 60-mile radius.

This fall the station will expand its services by broadcasting on an AM frequency. During the first semester WAER will be heard in one of the dormitories on a closed-circuit basis. By spring the service will include all living centers on campus.

Entirely run by students under the supervision of a faculty manager, WAER broadcasts nearly 70 hours a week of local programs and programs of the National Association of Educational Broadcasters.

In addition to regular shows, students broadcast election returns in Syracuse direct from both party headquarters. Many local folk concerts are carried, as well as all SU home basketball games and several "on the road" contests.

The past year the sports department also aired the NCAA Small College Tournament from Akron, Ohio at the request of Le Moyne College.

On-the-scene reporting is an integral task of the news department. Last year staff members reported from Washington, D.C. and Laconia, N.H., as well as from Syracuse and vicinity. Throughout the year the department also produces documentaries on important campus issues.

Programs produced by WAER are not heard solely in the Syracuse area. Two daily shows are carried by another station and a program is produced weekly for the Educational Radio Network. "Syra-Quiz", a weekly show originated by WAER, was the forerunner of a quiz program that is now seen on network television.

Students from all the schools and colleges of the university contribute their talents to this diversified program schedule.

The senior staff, comprised of directors of the various departments, conducts orientation classes each fall to introduce new students to all phases of broadcasting. Courses are also offered in specific areas such as writing, announcing, and engineering.

WAER's studios and executive offices are located directly behind the Main Library until the completion of new facilities in the Newhouse Communications Center.

Cit to Discuss Campaign

The Syracuse University citizenship program will lead off in 1964 by highlighting the presidential campaign.

Planned for late September or early October is a panel discussion with a prominent Republican and Democrat, as yet unnamed.

In November, Robert C. Weaver, administrator of the United States Housing and Home Finance Agency will lecture.

These speakers will be featured as part of the course in Responsible Citizenship (citizenship 1a and 1b).

Chosen from social science courses, Citizenship 1 iis usually taken in the freshman year.

It is a course in central public policy issues confronting the U. S. at home and abroad.

Under the direction of Prof. Donald Meiklejohn, the citizenship program aims to develop a broad understanding of American democracy.

Employment of significant writings in the social sciences and in social philosophy, as bearing upon central policy problems in contemporary America, is designed to help the citizen be a thoughtful and effective member of his community.

Your class will be the first to actually use the building, as Chancellor Tolley has suggested a construction date of 1966-67. Therefore, we know you will be most interested in participating in our activities.

'What Syracuse U. Means to Me'

What Syracuse University Means to Me" was answered recently in a Daily Orange survey. The question was asked of several "campus leaders."

Marcella Rast, president of Panhellenic, the all-sorority governing body, said:

"Syracuse University means to me Crouse College, the Main Library and Hendricks Chapel. It means football games and exams and snowstorms and M-Street. It means thousands of students, but close, priceless friends. It means dedicated, inspiring teachers who often go beyond the necessary to advise and encourage. It means happiness and life. And above all, it means great challenges and the opportunities to meet them.

Dan Stone, program director of WAER, campus radio station, commented:

"I come from a small town and a small high school that held almost unanimous opinions toward most topics. Syracuse has provided me with a meeting ground for new ideas, a testing area for old opinions, and an environment where I could advance or be pushed back on the strength of those ideas and opinions which I have embraced."

Diane Kessler, president of the Association of Women Students, said:

"Football games, parties and all-night bull sessions certainly are among those things which I find give meaning to Syracuse University, yet these constitute only a fraction of what SU means to me. Friendships are easily acquired among the faculty as well as the student body, and the size of the campus seems to shrink with each new acquaintenance. The SU programs offered are geared to meet the needs and wants of every student. The opportunities are there, and all you need do is take them. Thus, fun, friendships and opportunities—these three are what SU means to me."

Placard Cheering: '68 Job

Well, you'll soon be frosh at Syracuse University as members of the Class of '68. It'll be a beginning of some great years.

Part of the excitement comes when you see SU's football team rally to victory. How can you participate in this enthusiasm? Placard cheering is a 15-year-old tradition, originally in which all students participated.

Early in its history, however, Traditions Commission turned it over to each freshman class as their exclusive privilege. Ever since, the freshmen at Syracuse have carried on this single tradition of theirs at home football games.

This year the placard cheering has definite plans to take the section to the Army game in New York City during Thanksgiving vacation. The Goons will hand out laundry slips that contain the instructions that you will need.

There will be approximately 1,200 frosh cheering at each game. The cheering is done befor the game during time outs, at the first quarter break, and during half time, thus not interfering with viewing the game The half time show and placard cheering will be coordinated with the marching band.

You, the class of '68, will get your first taste of placard cheering at the pep rally during Orientation Week. There will also be a placard cheering contest, where freshmen may submit cheers that they have designed.

In the past, only a single blue and orange placard was used by each freshman. Several years ago, red, white, green, and yellow were added. this fall four colors will be used at each game, but they will vary from game to game.

Placard cheering is co-ordinated by Traditions Commission members Paul Hassell and Carol Takas, and a staff of approximately 20 Goons.

The committee said, "We urge each and every frosh to take an active and enthusiastic part in this important class tradition. With four home games and the possible trip to New York City, there will be plenty of opportunity for you to cheer your team on to victory."

NO CARS FOR FROSH

Syracuse University regulations prohibit freshman students from owning and operating automobiles on campus.

In past years, violation of this regulation has resulted in placing students on disciplinary probation, as well as several suspensions.

Students with a cumulative average of 1.6 after their freshman year are permitted to have a car on campus, as long as it complies with university regulations and is registered with Security Police.

Revisions of auto regulations are presently under discussion.

Traditions Heads Issue Welcome To Frosh Class

Dear Frosh:

Traditions Commission would like to take this opportunity to welcome you to Syracuse University. Traditions Commission is the student organization which plans all of Orientation Week, sets up academic, cultural and social programs to help acquaint you with the opportunities at Syracuse, sets up the Big Chum program, and is in charge of the Goon Squad.

The Goon Squad is a group of 270 students whose primary responsibilty is to orient you to Syracuse. A university as large and as old as Syracuse has many traditions which have evolved over the years, and the commission preserves these traditions and acquaints each new class with them so that they may be perpetuated.

This year Traditions Commission has made many significant improvements in the Orientation Week schedule. With all of these changes, the Orientation Week for the Class of 1968 promises to be the best ever.

Two events after Orientation Week which will be of interest to you are the music, art and drama show and the city convocation, which will feature prominent people from the city of Syracuse.

Orientation Week will just be the beginning of your four wonderful years at Syracuse. These years will provide you with experiences in living and learning which will prove to be invaluable to you.

Have a wonderful summer and we'll see you in September.

Turk Rose, President.
Gerri Porter, Vice President.

Registration Plans Listed

Late in August students will receive by mail a copy of the time schedule of classes for fall 1964. In addition to giving the times, buildings, rooms, and the instructors, this publication contains other valuable information pertaining to registration.

In the center-spread sections, one will find the alphabetical-final examination schedule, and registration instructions. Enclosed as a separate item will be a Student Information Sheet which must be completed and turned in at the Men's Gym on the day the student registers.

This sheet will replace the IBM cards in the registration packet come February, since the information on the sheet will be machine printed and returned to the student for approval or correction. But September students will have to fill out the sheet as well as those * @ * IBM cards.

"It can't be helped." siad university Registrar Edwin D. Smith, "the cards must be distributed immediately at the close of registration and we will not have a chance to capture this information for February any other way than with the Stu-

Chancellor William Tolley: Always Students' Friend

The warmest smile on campus belongs to Dr. William Pearson Tolley, Chancellor of Syracuse University since 1942. Concerned and interested in his students, his office door is always open.

While an undergraduate at Syracuse, the Chancellor was editor of the yearbook, president of Boar's Head, drama society, a varsity debator and a member of Phi Beta Kappa, as well as seven other honoraries. He also supported himself by working as a saxophone player in a group called the "Synful Syncopators."

Upon leaving Syracuse, Tolley became a theology instructor at Drew Seminary and was later appointed dean of the liberal arts division of Brothers College. During this time, he earned a Ph.D. from Columbia University. He also holds LL.D. and Litt.D. degrees.

At the age of 30, Tolley's elevation to the presidency of Allegheny College made him the youngest man in the country to head a four-year college.

For his assistance in making Syracuse University available for an international studies program, Tolley was elected a chevalier in the French Legion of Honor.

He holds honorary degrees from 24 American universities and colleges.

DR. WILLIAM P. TOLLEY

'Look Ma, It's a Goon'

Your first impression of a Goon will be," Who is that guy or girl with the Jiminy Cricket button and crazy hat?"

But, as these smiling characters give you a personal welcome to Syracuse, unload your car, carry your luggage, and answer your numerous questions, you will discover that a Goon is, in essence, your friend.

Behind the grin and friendliness is a person who was a freshman himself just one year ago. Since the Goon Squad is composed of 270 members of the sophomore class, they can easily remembered their recent experience of being a frosh and are prepared to help you adjust to similar experiences.

In order to be eligible for Goon Suad as freshman last spring, these sophs has to maintain at least a C (1.0) cumulative average. Many had higher grades.

Therefore they will provide you with an excellent source for study habits and also will emphasize the importance of marks.

You may ask why Jimmy Cricket appears on the Goon button. Joan Baker and Bernie Marcus, Goon co-chairman, said "No, we are not reverting to the Pinnochio era! If you recall, Jiminy Cricket was Pinnochio's constant guide and companion. This is a Goon." So when you see a Goon, hand him (or her) your luggage, smile, and you've met your first friend at Syracuse.

Lost? Here's Where We Are

Syracuse University, located in the heart of Central New York, is easily accessible from the north, south, east and west. The following are the most widely used, and least confusing, routes to the campus.

From the east: Use exit 35 of the New York State Thruway. Go half-way around trafic circle to Thompson road, and follow Thompson road to Erie boulevard East. Right on Erie to University avenue. Left on University.

From the west: Use exit 36 of the New York State Thurway. Take Interstate 81 south to its completion, and then turn left onto Erie boulevard East. Follow overhead signs to University avenue. Right on University.

From the north: Use Interstate 81 until completion. Left on Erie boulevard east to University avenue. Right on University.

From the south: Use Interstate 81 and U.S. 11, which become S. Salina street. Follow Salina to E. Colvin street. Right on Colvin to Comstock avenue, at the corner of the Manley Fieldhouse. Left on Comstock.

In all cases, the city has marked the routes with green overhead signs giving directions to the campus. Follow police directions upon arriving at the main campus. Flint and Day Halls, for freshman girls, are on Mt. Olympus Drive, off Comstock avenue.

Syracuse University Bookstore

Bookstore Serves Campus

The "bookstore" at Syracuse University is divided into three main branches — the main store at 303 University Pl., next to Lowe Art Center; the Corner Store at the corner of University place and S. Crouse avenue one block from the main store, and the new Top o' the Mount Shop in Graham Hall on Mount Olympus between the two large freshman women's dorms.

These bookstores, along with four other small branches at University College, the Medical Center, Skytop Air Force base, and the College of Law are owned and operated by Syracuse University.

The main store is student headuarters for all required text books. Each text in the book section is classified according to subject and clearly marked for each specific course and instructor.

Although text books are arranged in a seif-service fashion, students can be assured that only the proper books are offered, and a liberal return and refund system is followed for and book purchased in the store.

The store also offers a complete selection of artists' materials, a men's clothing department and a camera department. This past summer a closed-circuit television network was installed in the main store to help speed and control traffic during the book rush at the beginning of each semester when the store is at its busiest.

Included within its various departments are services including typewriter rentals, bicycle rentals, a Western Union telegram and money order service, and school ring orders.

The main store has a pen counter which handles repairs as well as a jewelry counter including a wide range of silver and gold charms, sorority and fraternity lavaliers, and Timex watches.

Cosmetics, too, are at the front counter of the main store. Hair dryers, cap and gown orders, electric razors, sweatshirts, and glassware almost complete the picture of Syracuse University's main Bookstore.

Non-required reading and a complete selection of paperbacks may be found at the Corner Bookstore, along with a large record department. There is also a stringed instrument department in the Corner Store, featuring a variety of guitars, banjos, and accessories.

If you are hungry during the day, or need a pick-up, the Corner Store is also equipped with a snack bar lunch counter.

The latest improvement in the University bookstores is the new Top o' the Mount Shop, designed to specifically fit the needs of the college coed. Top o' the Mount carries paperbacks for every taste, and a full line of school supplies including everything from notebooks to blotters and bulletin boards, and popular and classical records, too.

Top o' the Mount Shop is the first of the University bookstores to carry women's sportswear. This fall a full line of coed clothing favorites from loafers and sweaters to tured. At the Mount, too, is a complete cosmetics department for every feminine need or whim.

The new store itself will incude a 60-foot glass front display window, and will be completely carpetted. Best of all, it is located directly beneath the girls' dining hall and can be reached without ever setting foot outside of the dormitories.

The University Bookstore offers another special service —charge accounts. Any student is entitled to open a charge account with the Bookstore, that may be used in any and all its branches.

Students may receive their charge plate by applying to the Bookstore Credit Office, and card holders will be billed monthly for their purchases. Bills may be sent either to the student or to his home.

The Bookstore management looks forward to welcoming the class of 1968, and to providing it with all its needs for class and campus.

Commuting Group Plans Activities

Like most other campus organizations, the Commuting Students Association of SU lay dormant most of the summer, both figuratively and literally.

But because of its unique function it began coming to life a bit sooner than the others. About the end of July a skeleton crew began working on plans for the Fourth Annual Freshman Picnic, Sept. 6 at Green Lakes.

CSA-SU (pronounced sasoo by veteran members) is a relatively young organization. It began in 1961-62 as an attempt to integrate the student who didn't live in university housing into campus life.

Although still in its infancy, CSA-SU has already established some traditional services such as the frosh picnic. Incoming frosh from the city and surrounding towns and communities will, for the fourth year, journey to Green Lakes State Park for their first taste of orientation.

At the picnic the freshmen get a chance, perhaps their first, to talk to students already in attendance at SU. The difference between this and regular orientation is that many of the "old pros" will be from the freshman's own high school.

While eating hot dogs or playing baseball or football, the frosh can find out about the intricacies of registration, the art of frisbee, and where

According to Maria Pappalardo, current president of CSA-SU, "There's a real need for a commuters' organization on campus. For instance, no candidate for JSG has ever spoken or campaigned among commuters.

"No one from Young Dems or Young Republicans, or any other similar group has ever approached commuters as a group. Consequently, of course, not many commuters as such are in these groups."

"But this picture has been changing. A representative of commuters attended the last Sagamore conference, and we had a senator in JSL. This year we hope to get more campus representatives to our picnic, and to our meetings.

"And, of course, we'll continue having speakers like Sgt. James Longo of the police department and perhaps members of the administration concerned with our special problems."

Among the special problems Miss Pappalardo referred to were on-campus and of-street parking. Parking of any kind is a problem on the Hill, but the commuter must face it more often and more pressingly than the rest of the campus, she added.

What SU Means . . .

"Any attempt of originality on this subject is futile. What is important, however, is the sincerity behind the written word.' What has meant most to me during my first year at Syracuse has been the people that I have met and known. The value of this experience is inestimable.

"As members of the class of 1968, you have been given the opportunity of sharing in this experience. Take advantage of this opportunity as students at Syracuse, or you will be missing one of the most important experiences of your college career."

Frank "Turk" Rose, president of Traditions Commission, said:

"Syracuse is a growing business. It's in the business of giving people the opportunity of learning. You can make the four years here at Syracuse the greatest experience of your life or only a boring routine. from books, and that is only You can't learn everything why I feel Syracuse offers so much. As I hinted before, it doesn't make you, you make it."

Ann Cooney, director of the University Union, said:

"Syracuse University represents fullness of opportunity and potential, both in its academic challenge and extra-curricular responsibilities. It endows one with the varity and heterogeneity it promotes and for this reason is an exciting cultural experience. Simply Syracuse University represents for me infintite possibilities and it is these for which I am most thankful."

Dance Course Opens in Fall

Margaret Stafford, director of social activities, announced that free ballroom dance classes will be open to all students starting Sept. 30, in the recreation lounge of the Women's Building. Director of the class is Walt Medicis, a member of the university staff.

Registration will be from 7-8 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 30th, and the first class will begin the same night from 8-9:30. Medicis states that instruction will be given in most all Latin and American dances including: fox trot, bossa nova, swing, ay bo le, waltz, cha cha, merengue, and rhumba. The class will be held every Wednesday evening for seven weeks, ending on Nov. 11th.

Medicis is a member of Dance Masters of America, International Society of Dance Masters, and instructor at the Y.W.-C.A. and Y.M.C.A.

Any student with or without experience who wishes to assist as instructor are asked to meet with Medicis at 7 p.m. just prior to registration, or call ext. 2284.

The first auto license plates went into use in New York in 1902, consisting of old house numbers affixed to strips of leather.

The SU Greeks... and You

By CLAY RICHARDS

Alpha . . . Beta . . . Gamma . . . Delta . . .

Still "all Greek" to you, frosh? It won't be for long as you realize that Greek life at Syracuse contributes to the social and extra-curricular atmosphere of the university.

"Piety Hill" boasts 30 fraternities, 29 of which belong to national fraternities, that is they have chapters at other colleges and universities across the country.

Each Syracuse fraternity has its own chapter house, which houses from 60 to 100 per cent of the brotherhood, most of them containing dining facilities for the entire membership.

While fraternities are social by nature, the Hill fraternity academic average has often been above the all-men's average at Syracuse.

Parties are held on the average of every other weekend with "targets" and "TGIF's" filling in the gap. The houses also hold coffees and serenades with sororities.

Every fraternity does at least two, and often more, community service projects during the year for various charity groups in the city.

This entire program, along with the brotherhood's record on campus comprise an annual report to the dean of men's office. Every year a house is awarded the "Tolley Cup"—symbols of fraternity excellence at SU.

In short, the Greeks work hard and play hard.

The process of "going Greek" at Syracuse University is one the freshman can't experience until the second semester of the year.

During the first semester, freshman are allowed contact with fraternity men only through a series of planned open houses supervised by the Hill Inter-Fraternity Council (IFC). These open houses, held during the big football weekends, serve to give the incoming freshmen an initial picture of Greek life while not obligating them to accept.

All other contact with fraternity men during the fall and early winter months is strictly forbidden. A freshman involved in a "dirty rushing" case is liable to have his privilege of joining a house suspended for one year.

"Rushing," a term used because fraternity men rush freshmen floors with bids before formal rushing, is the formal process leading to joining a fraternity.

The second semester rush, held the second week of the new semester, is divided into two parts, informal and formal.

During the informal freshmen visit 15 fraternities, staying at each from a half hour to an hour, and getting acquainted with the brothers and the house itself.

If a freshman has found two or three houses he is interested in joining, or would like to see again, he can elect to formally rush these houses. The freshmen and the fraternities alike bid each other, and when bids match, a fraternity man rushes to the freshman's room to sign him for formal rush.

During formal rush the freshman eats dinner at the fraternity house and in a longer session begins to get a true insight into the house in which he is most interested.

Then after formal rush, freshmen and fraternities submit preference lists, freshman are bid, and upon their acceptance, become pledges of a fraternity.

The actual pledging period lasts about four months, varying with each fraternity. By late spring the freshmen are no longer freshmen but Greeks, bound by the bonds of brotherhood to one of the nation's largest and best fraternity systems.

'Orange Aid' Has Pictures

The "Orange Aid," the Syracuse University annual freshman directory will go on sale on campus in October. Photographs of all new frosh on campus will appear in the publication along with the student's name, home address, height, and university extension telephone number.

Arrangements have been made by the class of 1966, which is sponsoring the publication this year, to take each freshman's photograph at registration, during the first week of school.

The booklet is essentially designed to help the new student at SU. It is used by many freshmen to find dates on weekends. Girls are especially urged to smile for their photographs for this reason.

SU Regulations Describe Don'ts

By CYNTHIA CHIARULLI

Attention, freshmen!

Now that you're about to become members of the SU community, you should keep in mind various rules that every student upholds.

Accepted by each student in his act of voluntary registration are the traditions and principles of the university.

Requiring conduct in harmony with the standards of good society, a university publication lists the following acts as specifically prohibited.

1. a. Misuse of any intoxicating beverages, including wine and beer.

b. Possession of intoxicating beverages, including wine and beer, or their use in any campus buildings or living centers or at any university function.

c. Gambling.

d. Any conduct in violation of law.

2. Students are requested to refrain from smoking in the university buildings except in rooms provided for that purpose.

3. False Information: False or misleading statements on admission, registration, personnel, permission, or other blanks with regard to status, such as attendance at other institutions, single or married, or any other items will result in cancellation of registration. Any students who publishes or circulalates false information about the university is subject to disciplinary action.

4. Dishonesty: A student's signature on any piece of written work is assumed by the university to guarantee that the thoughts and expressions in it not expressly credited to another are literally the student's own. Dishonest work of this kind, termed "cribbing" or cheating, includes giving or receiving aid by communications or help of any kind in examinations or tests; the use, unless authorized, of books, papers, or notes of any kind in any examination; copying from any source without acknowledgment; receiving help in revision or preparation to such an extent that it destroys the original character or individual style of the paper; and any other misleading or dishonest practices. The minimum penalty includes loss of credit for the course, and such other penalties as shall be deemed proper. The usual penalty also involves indefinite suspension.

Intramurals: Wide Range

Got the sports bug? So do hundreds of other non-varsity men at SU.

Want some sports action this fall, winter, or summer? If so, let the intramural office in the men's gym know you're comin'!

The division of intramural and recreational sports sponsors a variety of athletic activity throughout the year. All male students enrolled at the university are eligible to participate in any sport.

Men may take part in team or individual competition. They must be a regular member in one of three classes in order to compete with that organization — living center, fraternity or independent.

Awards are presented to winners in all three classes. Fraternities receive trophies, while living center and independent victors are given SU watch charms.

Touch football, swimming, cross country, bowling and riflery, comprise the list of fall sports.

Winter sports include basketball, hand ball, skiing, table tennis and volleyball.

On the spring schedule are softball, tennis, golf, horseshoe pitching and track.

Both the male and female eel die after spawning.

The SU marching band is shown during one of its halftime performances in Archbold Stadium. This year the band has a new director, Edward Volz, and the squad will go on two road trips with the Orange footballers.

Marching Band Set to Go

On Sept. 26, the Syracuse University marching band will take to the field for its first performance of the 1964 season. The performance will be the pre-game and half-time show of the first home game, when the Orangemen play host to Kansas.

The marching band will make four home game appearances and will travel with the team to Penn State on Oct. 17, and to Yankee Stadium for the Army game Nov. 7.

The Syracuse football fans will see a new band operating with a sparkling new style of precision patterns and special arrangements. The band will be under the direction of Edward W. Volz, newly appointed director of the marching band and instructor in the School of Music.

Each halftime show will be specially designed by Volz and will follow a theme of music, precision drill, and elaborate formations. Volz is a graduate of Northwestern University and the University of Illinois.

The marching band will officially open its 1964 season one week before registration. The pre-season session will include music rehearsals, intensive field drill, equipment issue and general orientation for the new freshman. The university will provide housing and and meals for the pre-season "band camp."

The band department is looking forward to a large freshman class. All freshmen and old members wil receive a special buletin regarding the band camp and band registration materials. Registration in band is open to the entire university. However, the marching band is only open to men.

MarineMidlandBank To Open for Frosh

The university branch of the Marine Midland Trust Company, the only bank with a branch on campus, will remain open Saturday, Sept. 12, for freshmen who wish to open accounts.

According to a bank spokesman, the bank will remain open from 9:15 a.m.-3:30 p.m. in response to requests from the university. The bank is located at 1004 E. Adams St.

The bank will reopen at 9:15 a.m. Monday, Sept 14, for persons unable to open accounts on Saturday.

The Year in Culture: Music, Art, Drama

By MARILYN KEMENY

Syracuse University and the city of Syracuse offer a wide-ranging series of cultural events. Featured are programs of music, art and drama.

University Regent Theatre is presenting an outstanding program for the Syracuse community this year.

The SU touring company will perform "Thieves' Carnival" Sebt. 24-26 and Oct. 1-3 to open the season.

"Twelfth Night" Oct. 9 and "Hamlet" Oct. 10-11 will be presented by the National Players.

Edward Albee's "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" will be in Syracuse Oct. 20-21 as part of a national tour. Tickets will cost $3.50, $3 and $2.50.

Gilbert and Sullivan's "Pirates of Penzance," performed by the Syracuse University Civic Company, Syracuse's outstanding community group, can be seen Oct. 29-31.

"Desire Under the Elms" by Eugene O'Neill, will have its Syracuse showing Nov. 20. Actors are from the Circle in the Square touring company.

Syracuse audiences are well acquainted with these players from their past performances of "Under Milkwood" and "Six Characters In Search Of An Author."

The SU drama department will perform "Write Me A Murder" Nov. 26 - Dec. 2.

Emlyn Williams, star of Broadway's controversial hit "The Deputy," will portray "Charles Dickens" in the first of five concerts given by the SU drama department this year.

An American minstrel, Richard Dyer Bennett, tells the story of Americana as it should be told, Dec. 5.

Carlos Montoya, the world's foremost Flamenco guitarist, will perform Feb. 12.

Leon Destine's Haitian Dancers are coming to Syracuse Mar. 13.

Caledonia, the singers and dancers of Scotland, will give a Syracuse performance on April 8.

Ticket price for all concert and theater productions will be $3, $2.50 and $2 unless otherwise stated.

The World Adventure program consists of color films from the world over, accompanied by lectures by their producers.

Included in the year's program are "Norway and The Modern Vikings" (John Roberts), "A Summer in Italy" (Ted Bumiller), "Petite Belgigue" (Robert Davis), "Erploring Lands Down Under" (John M. Goddard).

Also are "Trailing Lewis and Clark to Oregon" (Thayer Soule), "Tangier to Istanbul" (Clifford Kamin), "Search For the Twisting Macone" (Quentin Keynes), and "Scotland and Wales" (Ed Lark).

Prices are $1.50 for adults, $1 for students, and $8 for the season.

Sunday afternoon concerts at Crouse College, School of Music , have been performed at Syracuse for over forty years. Recitals by faculty members are given almost every Sunday except during vacations.

The big three is the Orange drive to last year's NIT were (from left) DAVE BING, COACH FRED LEWIS and CHUCK RICHARDS. All three return this year as the Syracuse basketball renaissance continues.

Cagers Boast Talent, Depth

Take the leading nine scorers from a team that finished with a 17-7 record, add the products of a towering freshman squad, and toss in a competitive spirit that refuses to be beaten, and you've got Syracuse's basketball potential for this winter.

The rags-to-riches story of last year's team is history. From 2-22 three years ago to the NIT is the Cinderella tale of Fred Lewis SU hoop coach and his never-say-die club.

Exhibit A in the Orange corner is David Bing, the "Capital Comet" a 6-3 junior from Washington D.C. He chalked up 525 points in his first varsity year to rank second in the all-time SU annuals.

Bing master of the fast break has few peers at driving through a defense or spotting an open teammate. He led the team in almost every department.

Exhibit B is Chuck Richards, a 6-8 center from Poland N.Y. Richards ranked just behind Bing in scoring and both are among three Orangemen ever to score 500 points in a season.

Exhibit C is a talented bunch of junior and senior returnees led by starters Sam Penceal, Norm Goldsmith and Richie Duffy. Penceal makes impossible passes look routine and is superb on defense. Goldsmith is a terror off the backboards, and Duffy provides speed and an outside shot.

They are joined by Jim Boehum, Frank Nicoletti, Dick Ableman, Phil Schoff and Rex Trobridge, all of whom will see plenty of action.

Exhibit D is last year's freshman squad sparked by potential starters Rick Dean and Val Reid. Dean who looks like a refugee from the football field is a dead shot and will provide strength under the boards. Reid at 6-9 can team with Richards, Trobridge (6-9) or Dean (6-6) to form an awesome front line.

Gone is Vaughn Harper flashy playmaker of last year's frosh team. Harper was bounced from school for academic deficiencies.

Exhibit E is coach Lewis who has brought Syracuse from basketball's doldrums to the exclusive set and was named Western New York "Coach of the Year."

Highlighting the season will be a three-game Southern tour with the Orange meeting Kentucky Eastern Kentucky and Louisville.

Also on the schedule are perennial rivals Penn State Cornell Colgate Pittsburgh Niagara St. John's and Canisius.

SU Advisor System Helps All Students

Men Women

By CAROL TRYKA

One hundred and four male graduates, chosen from 300 applicants, will participate in the resident advisor's program this fall.

Selected for their interest and skill in working with students, the advisors will provide supervision, counseling, and general advice for freshman men.

Each residence unit will have one or two advisors to serve and work with the frosh males. For instance, Watson Dormitory, with nine units housing 500 students, will have 18 advisors.

The residence advisor program—unique to SU—will begin its 30th year this fall. Participants in the program come from many campuses, fulfilling the diversity SU seeks.

David Tathman, assistant to the dean of men, said of the male advisors, "they've been through the mill themselves." Indeed, past advisors include some of the university vice-presidents; some are now presidents of colleges.

Tatham himself was once a resident advisor at SU. He issued this statement to incoming freshmen:

"During your first several days at the university you'll be meeting a great many people but there is probably no one who will be more important to you in finding your place, eliminating confusion, and finding the right answer, than your resident advisor. I urge you to come to know him well!"

"What can I do with all my junk?" "Does my roommate have to lock me out all the time?" "Do you think he'll like this dress?" "Where is TBA?"

These are some of the many typical questions a woman's head resident will be answering during the first days of university life. She will be on hand as an adult friend, adviser and counselor.

Head residents live in student housing—one in each small residence and one on each floor of the larger dormitories. They work closely with the office of the dean of women and the Association of Women Students.

Helping to set up a pleasing social and cultural atmosphere within her dorm, and advising students on living center government, each head resident will be concerned with every student she meets.

There will be 60-70 head residents this fall. Many are graduate students at SU; some major in the graduate program, some in student personnel work in higher education.

Dean Elynor Erickson, assistant to the dean of women, issued this note to freshman girls:

"The head resident is someone each freshman woman should get to know immediately. She will always be interested in you, and will help you in your adjusting to life at Syracuse University."

Gals: Got A Big Chum?

Roberta "Bobbie" Zeldow and Beda Bayley, co-chairman of the Traditions Commission "Big Chum" program, recently issued a welcome to all new freshman women.

They said: "We are so happy to welcome you as our new frosh coeds. By the end of the summer, you should hear from your 'Big Chum', an upperclass girl who will be gald to help you out in any way.

If, for some reason, you don't hear from her by the time you reach campus, please notify one of us and we will make sure you get a 'Big Chum.'

"Have a great summer, and we'll see you in September."

Miss Zeldow can be reached at ext. 2691, and Miss Bayley is at ext. 2630.

Army

For more than forty years freshmen enrolling in Syracuse University have been offered the opportunity of earning commissions in the United States Army through the Reserve Officer Training Corps program.

It is an integral part of the university's curriculum but always has been on an elective basis on this campus. The program is open to all physically qualified male students and is taught by officers and non-commissioned officers of the active Army.

The basic course, which encompasses the freshman and sophomore years, earns a maximum of six credit hours. The junior and senior years (advanced course) provides up to 12 additional credit hours which may be applied toward graduation.

Substitute courses in the freshman, junior and senior years round out the essentially military instruction and are taught by non-military members of the university faculty.

Uniforms and books are furnished for all cadets and advanced course cadets receive pay and allowances totalling approximately $700. Upon completion of the program and attainment of a baccalaureate degree cadets are commissioned in one of the many branches of the Army, usually one of his choice and one in which the student's major course of study may best be used.

The acceptance of a commission in the Army does not extend the period of military obligation imposed by the Reserve Forces Act on every able-bodied American male.

A team of senior cadets, co-ed auxiliary members, and Army officers will maintain an information booth on the quadrangle starting the Saturday prior to registration and continuing until registration commences. A convocation for male freshmen will provide further details on the program.

Twenty years ago the majority of the students electing the Army ROTC program entered it to earn a commission in our essential military reserve. Today a larger and larger share choose it because of the career opportunities in the Armed Forces.

Air Force

The Syracuse University Air Force ROTC Cadet Wing which has grown steadily in recent years is looking forward to enrolling this fall its largest freshman class in the past decade.

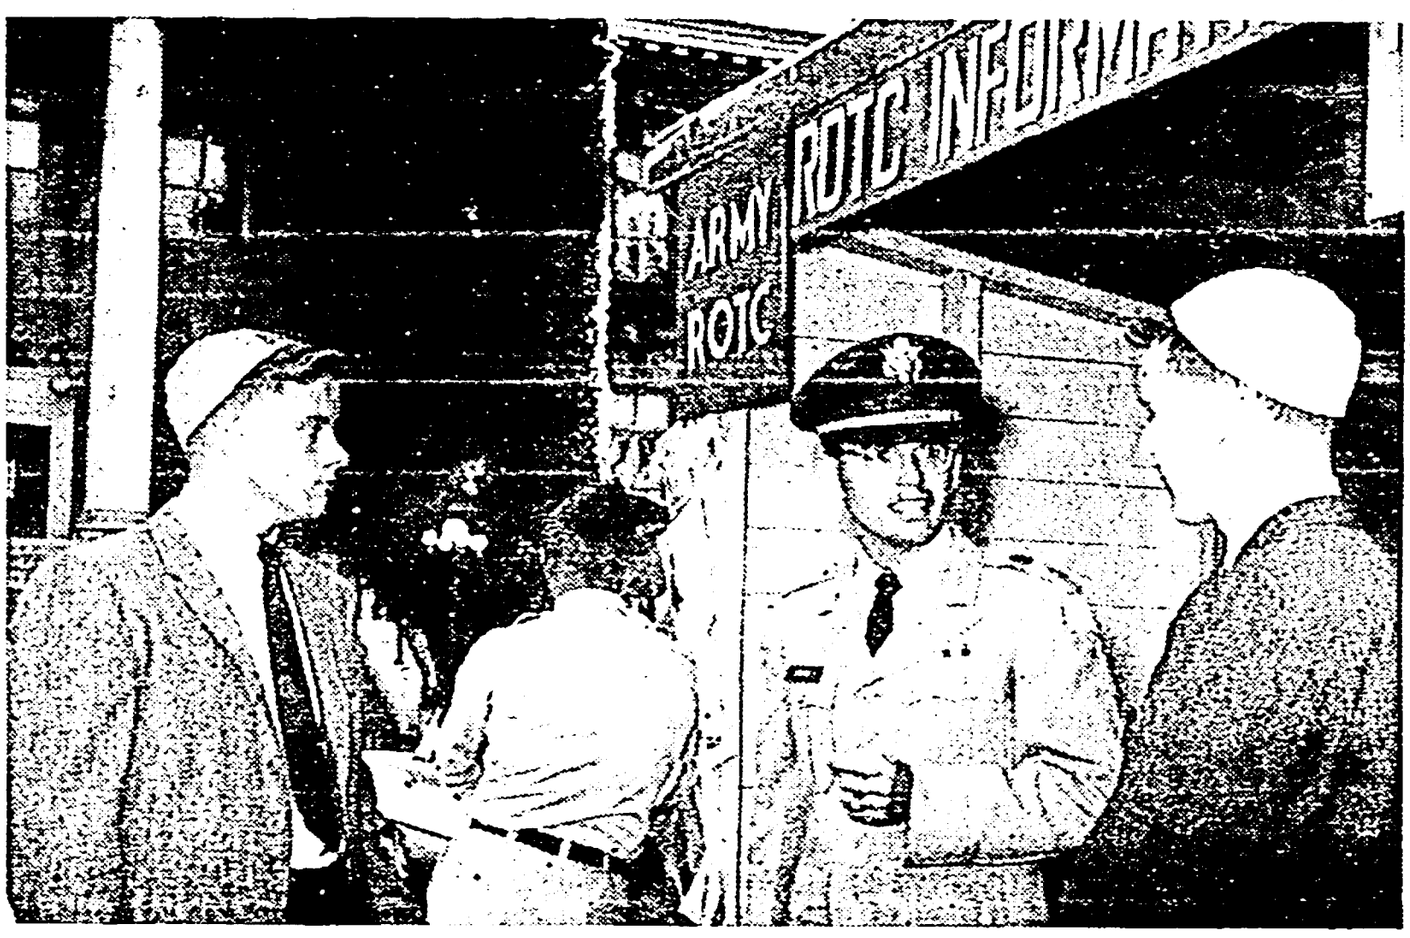
Among the current factors that contribute to this anticipated increase in enrollment include a change in the College of Liberal Arts policy regarding credit awarded for articipation in gym classes, changes in the Air Force curriculum from a strictly military and vocational program to one which fits in better with an arts and sciences education, and pending legislation which will increase pay for advanced course cadets from $27 to $50 per month.

The typical freshman entering Syracuse University has many concerns not the least of which is how well he will do in his studies. He wants to do his best. The question of whether to take ROTC is often equated as being a compromise to that end.

But on the other hand the Air Force program is complementary rather than compromising to the student's undergraduate studies.

Students may become commissioned officers in the United States Air Force through the AFROTC program at Syracuse. All male freshmen are eligible to enroll in the basic course. The program offers academic credit and can be completed in conjunction with other courses of study.

The AFROTC program is an opportunity to learn about the causes of world conflict as they affect our national security. In addition to regular class work cadets participate in such AFROTC extracurricular activities as band, drill team, base visitations, orientation flights, singing group, and various social activities.



Two frosh discuss the Syracuse ROTC program with an Army officer at the ROTC information booth on the quad. SU offers ROTC programs in both the Army and the Air Force. Either ROTC or physical education is required of all freshmen men.

dent Information Sheet."

Smith added, "We know the students will be pleased with our new computer registration in February, but they'll have to suffer the IBM cards for the last time this September."

As to registration itself, Smith said that those students who are happiest at registration and who have no problems are those who follow the printed instructions to the letter and ignore the advice of sophomores. These instructions, he added, were written by faculty staff, and seniors who have "run the gauntlet" many times and know what they are talking about.

Smith's advice? "Keep your sense of humor. The other guy is worse off than you. He's too 'sophisticated' to let you know he'd rather fight the problem than read his way out of it."

Music Box Owned And Operated by 1964 S. U. Grads

On October 7, 1963, three Business Administration seniors at Syracuse University opened the University Hill Music Box, Inc.

Bruce Wilson, Michael Barksdale, and William Taylor are very pleased with the reception they received from their fellow students during their first year of business on University Hill.

Purchasing, credit, and policy making are the chief tasks of Wilson, who heads the corporation. Barksdale, instrumental in construction of the stores, has worked chiefly in the ROBERTS stereo tape recorder department and with branch coordination. Taylor, an accounting major, devotes the majority of his time to the financial aspects of the three stores.

Unlike many students' business ventures which exist only while the participants are in college, the men at the Music Box plan to make the retail music business their future work.

Recoveries Key to Orange Grid Hopes

BULLETIN

SU halfback Mike Koski underwent a knee operation last week and will be lost to the team for the entire 1961 season.

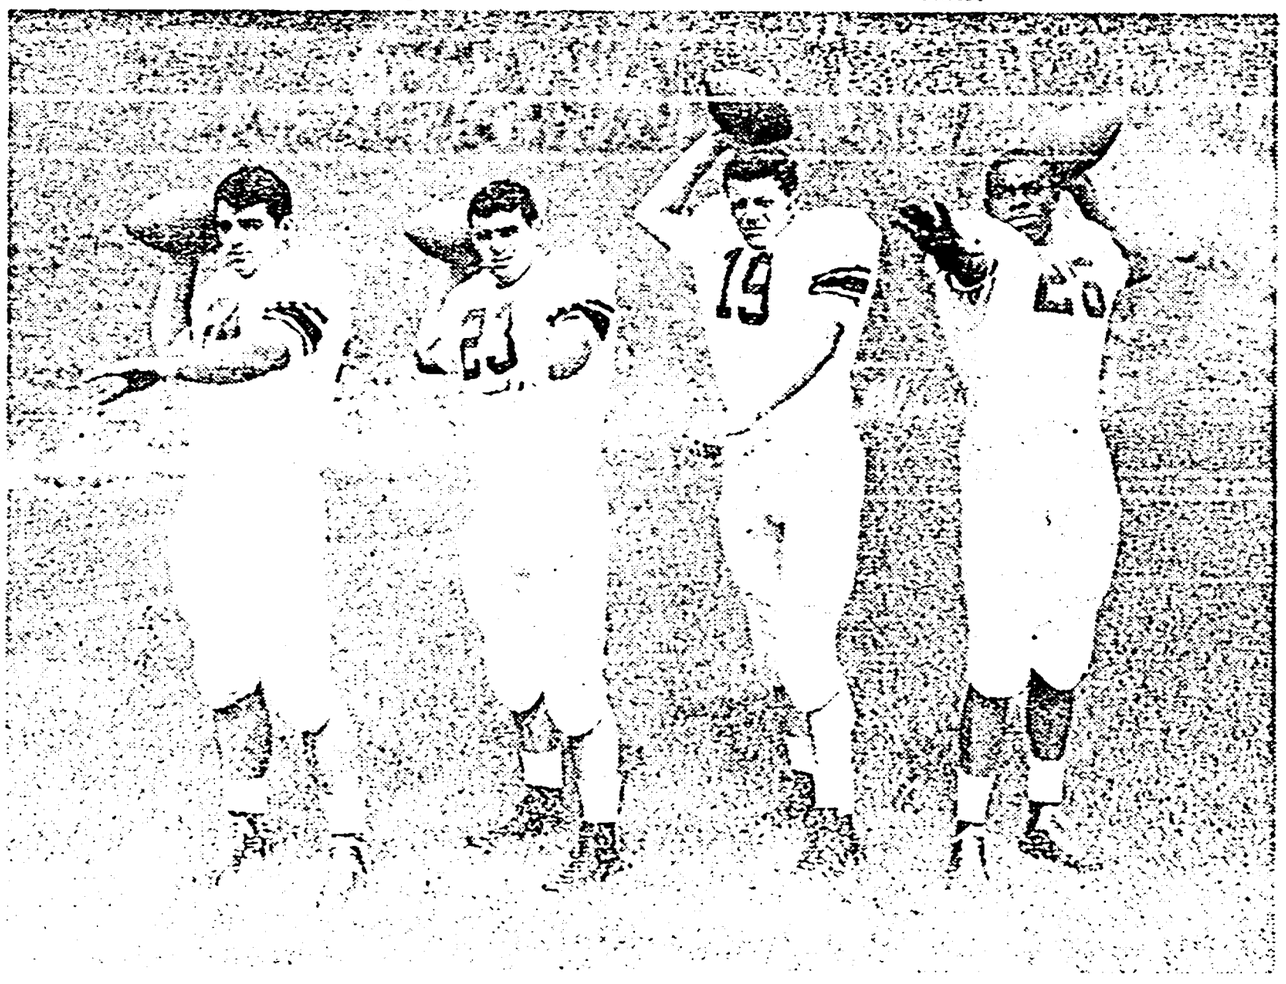
By MARY M. WALTER

A roar from the crowd . . . A flash of bright colored placards . . . a streak of orange across the green gridiron . . . and the pealing notes of victory from Crouse chimes — this is a football Saturday at Syracuse University!

"Our situation is just about the same as this time a year ago. It looks as though we have enough backs with some talent, but we have a new faces deal in the line." The man in the know? Coach Ben Schwartzwalder, if this proves true, the outlook for the Big Orange is mighty bright!

[illegible] the Saltine Warriors [illegible] with [illegible] to Dennis and Pat. [illegible] quarterbacks are [illegible], including passing [illegible] Hal Rooney and rushing champ Walley Mahle.

King, at 6-1, 190 lbs., gained 675 yards in the air and completed 37 out of 60 passes. Our boy tossed for five TDs last fall and looked real good this spring.



Shown above are the four Orange quarterbacks, all of whom will see plenty of action this year. They are HAL ROONEY (21), RICH KING (23), WALLEY MAHLE (19) and TED HOLMAN (26).

Mahle 6-3, 195, is a long strider with excellent speed in rushing with 457 yeards on 78 carries. "If every spot was as good as quarterback, we'd be sitting pretty," injects Schwartzwalder.

But a quarterback doesn't make a team and the tough Orangemen return 22 lettermen this fall. Sparking the list are end Jim Cripps, who Schwartzwalder says "could be our best all-around football player;" halfbacks Billy Hunter and Mike Koski; inside tackle Gerry Everling and powerful fullback Jim Nance.

Nat Duckett, aso a halfback, went on the shelf last season with a broken leg. With other casualties, Hunter, Everling and Koski, the versatile back missed spring drills. "If they are all sidelined this fall that pleasant backfield situation suddenly won't be pleasant at all," sighs the plagued-by-injuries coach.

Emgerging from the freshmen ranks are a number of boys who could really shape up. "Among the sophomores, halfback Floyd Little has a chance to be a great one. He has all the natural ability that a boy needs to be a great back," says Schartzwalder.

All told, the 1964 season should prove a strong one in the backfield, with more power needed in the front line. The possibility of a bowl bid a list of tough opponnts and a field of hard hitting guys can make this another year of "Orange Crush."

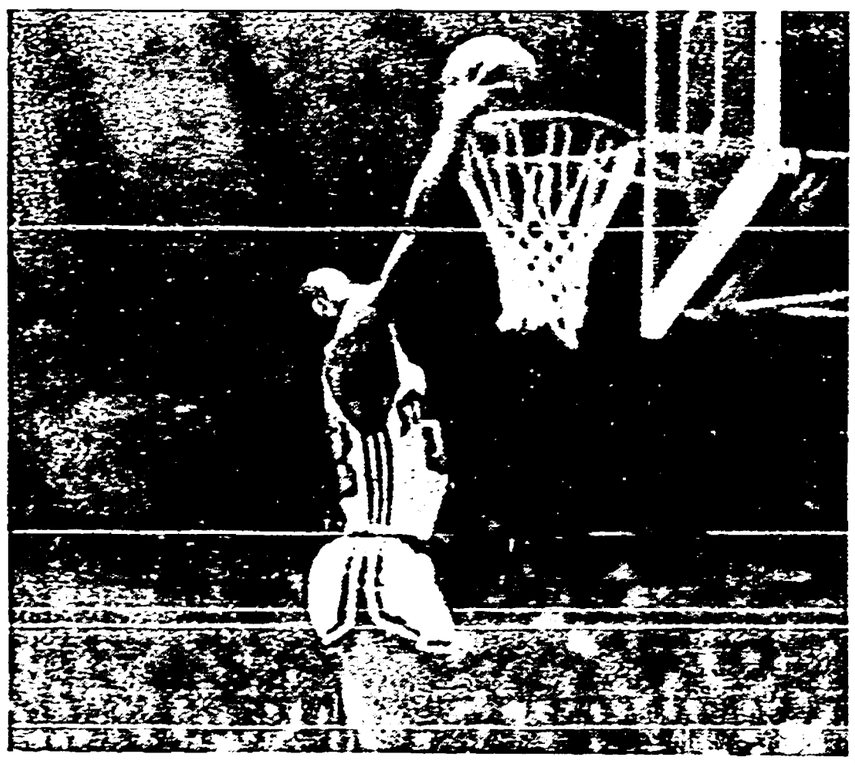
Meet Dave Bing: SU's Best Ever?

Dave Bing, a 6-3 junior from Washington, D. C., will be shooting for All-America recognition in just his second year of varsity play at Syracuse. Based upon his sophomore performance, Bing could make the grade.

The Orange basket all star scored 556 points in 25 games averaging 22.2 per game and leading Syracuse to a 17-8 season, the Hurricane Classic title and a berth in the NIT last winter. Bing was Syracuse's top scorer. He paced the team in assists and was the second best rebounder.

His 556 points established a new SU record for points scored by a sophomore, and the total was the second best in one season (Vince Cohen had 6-5 in 1956-57) in Orange history. As a rookie, Dave scored on a fine 46.7 percent of his shots (215 of 460).

Bing's best scoring effort of the season was 31 points against NYU in the NIT. He had 30 points against Canisius and 29 points four different times. His high in assists was 11 against Manhattan.



Syracuse's amazing DAVE BING dunks his 500th point last season to become SU's second-highest one season scorer. Bing, now only a junior, paced the Orange in almost every department.

Piety Foes Feature All-American Stars

A tough series of opponents will clash with the Mighty Orange this season. The four home games and six road matches will find a team striving to preserve or better its 8-2 record.

The Eagles of Boston College are sure to be rough in the road opener, Sept. 19. The home opener will see the Orangemen try to rout All-American Gale Sayers and his Kansas company for a comeback from last year's 19-0 loss. For the fans at home, NCAA-NBC regional TV will cover the Holy Cross game, Oct. 3.

Parents' Weekend, Oct. 10, presents Larry Zeno and the UCLA Bruins for the first time in Archbold Stadium. The Nittany Lions will roar Oct. 17 at Penn State, as they try to avenge last year's 9-0 trouncing.

The team treks to Portland, Oct. 24, anxious to duplicate its '63 win over the Oregon State Beavers. The Pitt game will be played on Halloween, but hopefully their Fred Mazurek won't prove a nemesis again this year. The contest is in Syracuse and will also be covered by regional TV.

The Black Knights of the Hudson are the target for revenge when the Orangemen meet Army in Yankee Stadium, Nov. 7. Syracuse has suffered two narrow losses to the Cadets in recent years.

The Saltine Warriors meet Virginia Tech for the first time Nov. 17 in Archbold Stadium. Our boys will have to contend with one of the Nation's top runners, Bob Schweickert. The Mountaineers of West Virginia will provide the road closer. In a tight game last season, the Orange triumphed over Schwartzwalder's alma mater, 15-13.

The season ticket sale is the strongest ever. Season ticket purchsers receive top priority on seats both home and away.

Support your team. Frosh! Yell, scream, shout, cheer, wail, moan or faint anything that will make this a tremendous season.

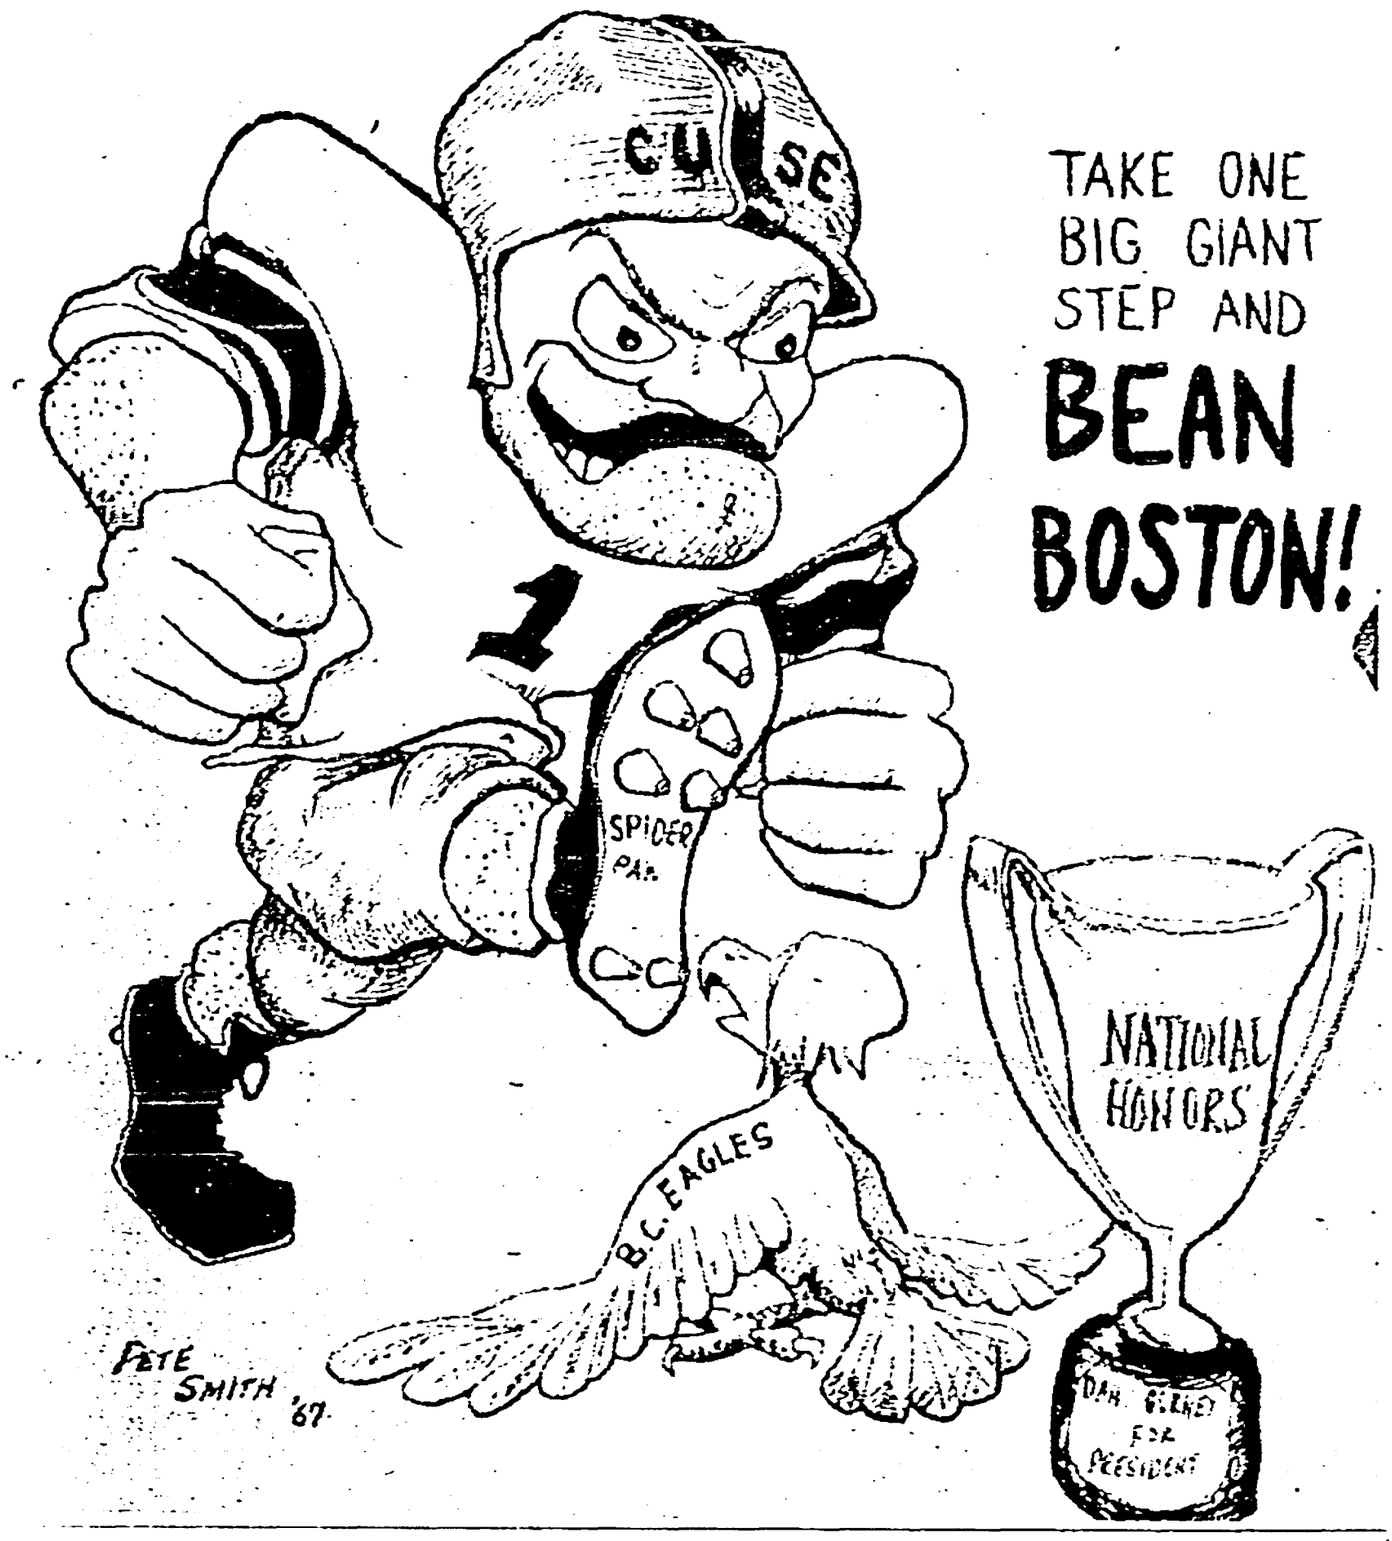
GRIDDERS OPEN SEASON



Orangemen Face BC; Ben Stresses Running

By BILL CRONAUER
Sports Editor

With a "first and ten," the Orangemen of Syracuse will initiate the 1964 grid season tomorrow in Boston amid high hopes and high ratings.

Providing the opposition at Alumni Stadium will be the Boston College Eagles, a club with a few stars but outstanding balance. Game time is 1:30 p.m.

SU Coach Ben Schwartzwalder is expected to rely mostly on his running attack, with such standouts as Walley Mahle, Jim Nance and sophomore Floyd Little on hand.

It is on the basis of their powerful backfield that the Orange are ranked among the nation's top 10 teams in pre-season forecasts.

Still, the air arms of Rich King and Mahle may get a good workout before day's end. Coach Ben could have dropped a hint recently when he recalled that a majority of the touchdowns scored in the second half of the 1963 season came via the airways.

Either way for the Hill forces, there is little doubt that BC's Jim Miller will settle on an all-out aerial bombardment. Miller, a wizard at uncovering quarterbacks, has found a pair of good ones to succeed all-everything Jack Concannon.

The two are both juniors. Larry Marzetti and Eddie Foley. The former has forged into the starting BC backfield with Bobby Shann at left half, Ron Gentili on the right side, and Don Moran at full.

Miller revealed, "We last plenty when Concannon departed, but we've got more than adequate replacements. We also have two of the best receivers in the East."

The men who will do most of the snagging are ends Jim Whalen and Bill Cronin, the Eagle captain. Whalen snared 26 tosses for 523 yards in '63. Cronin, at 6-4 and 215 pounds, is an ideal target and defensive ace.

Shann should prove the top BC back. Jim Shreve, who scouted the Eagle spring game, reports that the 6-0, 185-pound senior has "blazing speed and elusiveness. He's a breakway threat anytime, anywhere."

Up front, the opposition will display John Frechette (235) and Emil Kleiner (220) at tacklers, Dick Cremin (215) and Marty DiMezza (215) at guards, and Frank DeFelice (210) at center.

Miller concludes that overall "we should be stronger both physically and depth-wise. We should be as good as last year... we'll know better Saturday."

For the Orangemen, the contest will be a testing ground for the two-platoon system. Schwartzwalder has divided his players into offensive and defensive units, but has worked a number of them both ways—just in case.

Students Rejoice--IBM Cards Meet Their Doom

Hill Registrar Edwin D. Smith reported late Thursday that three-day registration figures totaled 7,292 students, including 5,447 undergraduates.

By MARLENE CIMONS

Hill students struggle with IBM cards for the last time, as fall registration draws to a close with a total of 5,564 students completing registration at the end of a two-day period.

"We hope to eliminate most, if not all cards, at the February registration and all all subsequent registrations," Edwin D. Smith, registrar, said. This will be accomplished with the use of the data processing sheets handed in at this registration, he added.

Statistics indicate the largest number of students registered was 1,910 in the College of Liberal Arts.

Only 21 students were recorded in the School of Journalism, 60 in the School of Music and 90 in the School of Nursing.

Other figures include: Architecture, 109; Speech, 118; Home Economics, 157; Engineering, 260; Business Administration, 327; Art, 334; Education, 478; and graduate, 940.

One hundred sixty-one students, whose advance payment was received beyond the deadline, are required to delay their registration until Monday, Smith said.

When asked if registration were going smoothly, Smith commented Thursday: "I

DO STAFF MEETS MONDAY

All freshmen and other students interested in working on the news staff of the Daily Orange should attend a meeting at 4 p.m. Monday in building 7C, the DO office. (Building 7C is located adjacent to Archbold Stadium, next to Steele Hall, which is behind Hendricks Chapel.)

Anyone who cannot attend the meeting should call Andy Porte at ext. 2127, 2128 or 2129 before 4 p.m. Monday.

Alexander Charters

New SU Vice President

By CAROL RUBRIGHT
Junior Editor

"I'm not a newcomer at Syracuse — I've been here for 15 years," said Dr. Alexander N. Charters, new vice president for continuing education.

Appointed July 1 to a new post created by Chancellor William P. Tolley and the Board of Trustees, Charters had been dean of University College since 1952.

His office in 307 Administration Building is sparsely decorated with a membership plaque, a bookcase, two academic robes and a large square desk. Sitting here Thursday, he punctuated his comments with gestures of his right hand and explained his official duties:

"This office must see that the university's resources are used most effectively in the area of continuing education. We must coordinate commitments made in several areas and see that they can be fulfilled."

"Continuing Education" is Syracuse's catch-phrase to describe adult and other part-time educational programs.

This includes University College, the military personnel training program at Skytop, semesters in Italy, Guatemala and France, and the brief training programs for businessmen, teachers and international study teams which Syracuse sponsors annually.

Charters' job is to "pull these programs together, look at them as a unit and make decision on each in relation to others."

ALEXANDER CHARTERS

Cut the Red Tape!

Tradition dictates that the first editorial of the school year be devoted to welcoming the new freshman class to Syracuse University. We cannot do that today and look at ourselves with a straight face.

For the Daily Orange this summer was caught in the massive world of university "red tape," and it is our feeling that something must be done about the situation, here and now.

At the completion of the last school year, the Daily Orange was told that its offices would probably be moved for this year. No location was given, and no attempt was made at explaining procedure for moving.

In mid-summer, rumors reached us that we would be moving to the basement of Winchell Hall, a women's dormitory across the street from the Newhouse Communication Center.

This was confirmed early in September. The first week of September was spent packing all of the Daily Orange equipment, making plans for the layout of the new offices, and writing letters to staff members and advertisers, telling them of the new location.

Late Labor Day evening we were informed that the Daily Orange would move — all but the news staff. No office was named for the news room.

No one in the university hierarchy would say who replaced the DO newsroom in Winchell Hall with an art studio, and only through the efforts of Registrar Edwin Smith was permission granted for the DO newsroom to remain in its present home.

Then came the job of unpacking all that had been packed, of arranging all that had been disarranged, and trying to make order out of the disordered. The office, which could have been cleaned anytime over the summer, had to be given an instant face-lifting.

And the situation now stands that the Daily Orange newsroom is located in its familiar Prefab 7 home, with the business office and supply room located across the campus in Winchell.

Whenever supplies are needed or consultations necessary, either a member of the news staff or a member of the business staff must make the trudge across campus. This will become increasingly inconvenient as the snow begins to fall.

To this may be added the fact that the business office has had to double its schedule of work this week, because the university was three days late in moving it to its new quarters.

The business office has also had to work this week without the convenience of telephones, which apparently are not judged essential to the operation by some member of the university family.

And through all the confusion, we never found out where the final decisions came from, for no one would tell us. Every door in the administration building was a reasonable excuse for mutual buck-passing.

What this university needs is someone who is going to make a decision, let his decision be known, and then stick by it, regardless of pressure. We are sick and tired of playing the game "musical administrators."

We are fortunate in one respect, however. The university has seen fit to give us an office. Pity poor student government, which had to operate for two months last year without so much as a single desk.

Welcome to Syracuse anyway, frosh. It's really a nice place to live, but we all have to realize that all is not sweetness and light.

Once again everyone is back on campus and things couldn't be better—that is, except for the sock companies—rumor has it the Phi Delts are going to paint their feet Weejun color and do away with shoes altogether.

All around campus you see those orange buttons—backed up by Pepsodent smiles—backed up by a visit to the Orange. Remember how great it was when you got all the sharp guys on your goon floor to go the house.

Advice Dept.—Freshman boys—show your goon that that you have "great depth" while he flirty rushes you. Wear Weejuns and park your Sting Ray off campus—tear down Barry Goldwater in Cit class.

Freshman girls carry a knife in your purse when you go to Colgate date freshman boys—someday you'll wish you had and smile at that lonely DO columnist as he walks sadly across the quad.

The campus won't be the same without Jim "the chief" Morris and Jay Litwin—no—wait a minute. It seems they are all in SU Law School along with Herb Lustig, too. Student government seems to produce more lawyers.

The junnior class's veep says she's apathetic, but everyone knows she's kidding. Is it true that Deke and Theta are brother and sister fraternities? They must have some great coffees together.

Most beautiful girl on campus—Gerri Porter with her long hair and sultry (huh) voice.

It's now time for Sig Eps to start picking Alpha Phis to vie in the competition — these boys sure work at judging—many a long night. Lambda Chi has put in two new telescopes (best view on campus) and the DU's are all studying the architecture at the Iota house.

Big question—which member of last year's Orange Key will win the heart of Diane Kessler? Is is true you have to be beautiful to be a female goon?

Big conspiracy in the Savoy—who will sneak in at night and steal the Chancellor's cane—it's a threat worse than the bomb. The Chancellor may soon get a letter from Bertrand Russell. Has everyone seen the Rogue college issue? Advice on everything.

Playboy picks us No. 3—should be a great year—on TV twice.

Haven Hall looks like a toilet seat for the Jolly Green Giant—really impressive—but when I had to tip the porter in the men's room...

The old Sammy house is now a cottage - it was either that or urban renewal. At last count Suzy Brummer had 1,487 freckles on her back alone. The Ten song..."There's a moon out tonight."

Any truth to the rumor the Zebes have bought Thornden Park for a parking lot?

Freshman girls—they're all beautiful but they look like Joan Baez. The freshman boys are all around six feet four and have 3 years in the army behind them. From what I've hard they're a lot more intelligent then we were when we came in—but we had Zoo 1 and Botany 1 on our side.

The ward is shrouded in symbolism this year—driving through the remains you are reminded of postwar Berlin and the vast wasteland of T. S. Eliot. Thinking of Gatsby, I looked at the Hub liquor store and could swear I saw an eye on top.

We may all gripe about the tough courses, curse the administration for taking good care of us and wait expectantly for vacation, but when we see Crouse College or walk across the quad after being away for a few months, we get a tight feeling in our throats and know that for us it's the only place to be.

In Monday's Daily Orange

Monday's Daily Orange will feature on-the-scene coverage of the Syracuse-Boston College clash, an interview with new home economics Dean Bernice Wright, and the return of DO columnist Dan Ritey, commenting on campus affairs.

POLICY ON LETTERS

The letters column is maintained for the expression of opinion by readers. However, the Daily Orange reserves the right to edit letters for grammar and good taste or to reject letters.

Letters should be typed and preferably no longer than 250 words. All letters must be signed with names and addressed.

Names will be withheld on request.

Doc Watson To Perform At Regent

Star of ABC TV's Hootenanny, Doc Watson, will appear at 8:30 p.m. today at the University Regent Theatre.

The solo concert marks Watson's return to the SU campus since his performance at the SU Folk Festival last March. In addition to the SU Festival, Watson has appeared at every major Folk Festival this year, including Newport, Philadelphia and the University of California.

Performing on the guitar and the banjo, Watson also includes anecdotes about the Blue Ridge Mountains, where he spent his childhood days. His style has been compared to that of the late Will Rogers.

Watson has released two major long-playing record albums and has appeared on the ABC TV Hootenanny show, this year.

Tickets for the concert will be available at the Regent Theatre box office and at the SU corner Bookstore. Prices are $2.00, $1.50, and $1.00.

Travel Films

The first film-lecture in the annual World Adventure Tour Series will be shown at 8 p.m., Sept. 21 at the University Regent Theatre.

The film, "Norway and the Modern Vikings," will be narrated by its photographer John Roberts. Roberts is a veteran of many film assignments with Lowell Thomas, TV commentator and producer of the TV show "High Adventure." The film essay describes the modern Vikings and their homeland along the rim of Europe.

Other films in the series of eight will include "Exploring the Lands Down Under," "Tangier to Istanbul" and "Scotland and Wales." Following the Norway film will be "A Summer in Italy," on Oct. 19.

Union Starts Friday Fests

The Student Union will begin its weekly Friday night entertainment schedule with an outdoor dance and an indoor movie tonight.

The Invaders, a well-known band on campus, will sing and shake from 9-11:30 p.m. in the parking lot of the Womens' Bldg.

"Cat on a Hot Tin Roof," a movie starring Elizabeth Taylor and Paul Newman, will be shown at 8 p.m. and 10 p.m. in Huntington B. Crouse Hall.

A full scale sawmill is operated by the State University College of Forestry at Syracuse for experimental purposes by the Department of Wood Products Engineering.

NEW PARKER JOTTER
STAINLESS STEEL

NOW GUARANTEED TO WRITE ONE FULL YEAR WITHOUT REFILLING!

Of all the people who make ball pens, count on Parker to offer a guarantee like this. Even if you write all day, every day, you're still guaranteed one full year of the most enjoyable writing you've ever experienced or you get a new refill. Behind this new smoothness is the stainless steel socket where Parker's famous textured T-ball rides.

Because this new socket is tough, corrosion-resistant stainless steel, there's no uneven wear to cause balks, skips or smudges. You get a clean, clear line that stays that way. No wonder Parker can guarantee you one full year of writing! Offer applies to all pens purchased before October 18, 1964.

Tolley Wants Faith In Students' Minds

Chancellor William P. Tolley made a plea for faith in students whose college board scores are not in the top rank. "It would be some help if we could get more interest in the student's mind as distinguished from his grades," Tolley said in a speech at Bowling Green State University, Ohio.

"I am concerned about the shift from an open-door policy in admissions to one that is almost sadistic in the pleasure of slamming the door on those whose college board scores are below the desired figures," Tolley said. "...I rejoice to see how greatly we have progressed in measuring both aptitude and knowledge. But I also believe in the place of personal judgment, personal interest and personal faith in students.

". . .in our advanced human society there is danger that we shall keep people from successful achievement . . . by telling them at every stage of their develmopment that they are not designed for success in school or college. Perhaps we should renew our acquaintance with ancient fables, not ance with ancient fables, not the least relevant of which is the race between the tortoise and the hare."

The Chancellor was taking part in ceremonies inaugurating Dr. William T. Jerome III as president of Bowling Green State University. Jerome is a former dean of the College of Business Administration at Syracuse University.

Jerome received his bachelor's degree from Colgate University in 1941, his master's and doctorate from Harvard and joined Syracuse in 1952 as associate professor of business administration and director of the Army Comptrollership School.

He was named dean of Syracuse's College of Business Administration in 1958. Jerome's maternal grandfather was James C. Colgate, for whom Colgate University was named.

During the ceremonies Tolley, who delivered the opening address, received an honorary Doctor of Humanities degree.

Students Rejoice — IBM

haven't heard any complaints yet. I'd very much like to put in a plug for the Goons' work at registration. The job they are doing is the best I've ever seen."

Many students, either running from one station to another, or patiently standing on lines, voiced their opinions.

Mary Wickins, '68, noted: "So far it's not as bad as I thought it would be. Everyone has been very helpful to me."

"I feel as if I'm at the Fulton Fish Market at 4 in the morning, or at Alexander's Department Store in New York City at rush hour," said Karen Steingarten, '68.

Peter Hale, '68, said: "It's not really that bad. I thought there would be longer lines and there aren't."

"What a way to spend six hours!" remarked Lynne Goldsmith, '67.

"It's really a crime what they make the freshman go through," declared Neil Abrams, '68. "In fact," he added, "It's a crime against humanity."

Joel Banowit, '67 said: "I find it just as hard as last year. Today was impossible to get a good schedule. Tomorrow should be worse."

"It's definitely easier than last year" interjected Russell Isaac, '67, 'because of experience rather than anything the school has been able to do."

Instead of streamlining registration as the move to end IBM cards suggests, administrators have added several new attractions to make the semi-annual affair a booth-hopper's delight.

A booth for the Onondagan has been set up at the entrance to the Men's Gym so seniors can make appointments for yearbook pictures.

A station also has been formed for frosh Orange Aid photographs to insure the addition of every freshman picture in the third annual freshman yearbook.

Upstairs in the practice gym which houses the cashiers, students are requested to check in at the Directory Booth. Returning upperclassmen's campus and home addresses are rechecked and new freshmen are registered.

Frosh Speak

'68 Praises Goon Squad

By SUSAN LYON
DIANE WAHL

"Goon Squad is great!," was the concensus of incoming freshman who arrived on campus Saturday.

Christine Wands made the observation that "They know the position you're in because they were frosh once too." There could not be a greater crew of helpers," said Donald Kuryla.

Also much appreciated were the services of the Association of Women Students Guides. "Without them I would have been lost more often," was Diane Conley's comment.

Perhaps the most outstanding thing observed at SU by the newcomers was the unbounded school spirit. Thomas Fitzgibbons summed this feeling by saying, 'Spirit! The whole university is bubbling over with spirit."

"I especially liked the spirit de corps of the pep rally.", said Arthur Davis. The pep rally, held Monday night in Archbold Stadium, gave the new frosh a taste of the spirit.

The frosh, perhaps contrary to preconceived opinion, found the upperclassmen very friendly and helpful. According to John Surre, "Upperclassmen are friendly, helpful, and people to look up to."

Perhaps the most interesting comment made on upperclassmen was made by Arthur Davis, who noted "Upperclassmen! generally serious-minded."

Although the frosh found many things to their liking, they did have a few gripes centered around the placement tests given Monday.

The comments ranged from "very boring," in Carolyn Eighmie's opinion to "outrageously ridiculous and impossible' as viewed by the "Beebe Cottage girls."

These girls also found it hard to schedule 11 girls in one shower.

In a more serious vein, the students have remarked the danger of the unlimited social opportunities.

Miss Wands commented, "Social life is tempting and might prove a threat to good grades to those students not strong-willed enough to reject it."

Some of the most humorous comments made include: "I like the nude statues." Surre's feeling about the placement tests; and Joseph Messina's frustrated, "I wish the (freshman) girls had a later curfew."

As the freshmen sum up their own experiences:

Thomas Fitzgibbons said, "I'm very pleased to be here and I hope I will be for a long time."

"The only place I would want to attend classes," said Donald Kuryla.

Only Game in Town

What Makes Ben Run

by Howie Schneider

"They want me to throw all the time up here. But it just doesn't work that way. We have good runners and we have to run and pass, not just pass, in order to win."

Ben Schwartzwalder-New York Times-Sept. 6

BEN SCHWARTZWALDER

Ben Schwartzwalder runs because he has to, it's that simple. He knows no other, sees no other, or speaks of no other football. Those who expect him to change might take notice of the man who consistently lost in a rigged dice game and later said, "I knew it was rigged, but it was the only game in town."

This fall Ben Schwartzwalder has once again rigged the game and he'll be playing, and playing hard, for all the marbles. His is the only game in town and here and now we must resign ourselves to the fact that Ben is not likely to change his game.

And frankly why should he? If he can win grinding it out, then grind it out he must. Paul Dietzel is a visionary, Ben Schwartzwalder a reactionary, but they both win ball games.

Many of us who dreamt of things that might have been last year were indignant over the fact that Schwartzwalder failed to pass more often, but Ben's big problem this fall will not lie in his passing game, but rather in perfecting his ground attack.

It's like sending Jimmy Brown for a first down when it's fourth and one. Everybody knows he's getting the ball and yet he's good enough to make it anyway. Ben Schwartzwalder is not a master of deception, he's not looking to fool anybody. He just wants to be good enough to make the first down anyway.

Schwartzwalder's football philosophy is basic and sound. He puts emphasis on contact and his faith in muscle. He is a conservative football strategist. He was born that way, he played that way at West Virginia, and he coaches that way. He likes to produce, but in black and white, not cinemascope.

At a time when passing has become a more and more essential ingredient in college football, Schwartzwalder has refused to give up his confidence in a basic running game. Some have accused him of being stubborn, if not downright foolish, but Ben continues to run and run well.

In Schwartzwalder football passing is employed just to keep the defense honest and is rarely used as an offensive weapon. In the Space Age and the age of Y.A. Tittle and Roger Staubach, Ben aims to prove he can still win on the ground.

It is clear that Schwartzwalder will have some major problems on his hands, his passing attack the least of them. He'll have to work quickly with an inexperienced line and hope sophs like Gary Bugenhagen and Bill Benecick can plug the holes.

He will have to hope that Floyd Little can replace Mike Koski and at the same time play under the pressure of his rave press notices. He will have to hope that Jim Nance can (See Ben, Page 8)

Sports Scope

By JIM KLURFELD

With such respected prognosticators as Look, Playboy and The New York Times predicting that Bill Orange will be a national football power, the Daily Orange feels that it is time to unwrap its own crystal ball. So relying upon fancy rather than fact, here is how we see it.

Boston College is a tougher opponent than most people expected, but Syracuse's rugged ground game proves to be the difference. Jim Nance, Floyd Little and Wally Mahle each gain over a hundred yards as SU wins 28-14. Altogether the Orangemen gain over 400 yards rushing, but none passing.

After the game the always cautious Ben Schwartzwalder says that Syracuse made too many mistakes. "We'll have to improve to beat Kansas," he says.

Schwartzwalder is almost right. Gale Sayers, Kansas' All-American halfback, runs through, around, and over Syracuse's defense, but SU wins again with a powerful running attack. This time they gain over 500 yards and win 41-33. Schwartzwalder is pleased with the win but warns that Holy Cross will be a tough foe.

Syracuse beats Holy Cross 70-0.

UCLA almost upsets Syracuse the following week, but with only seconds remaining in the game and trailing by one point, they attempt to get a new unit on the field and the gun sounds ending the game. SU is the victor, 28-27.

In successive away games the Orangemen beat both Penn State and Oregon State. Syracuse fails to throw a pass in either game and still hasn't completed one for the season. However, in two games they have gained over 1,200 yards rushing. "We will throw only when we have to," Schwartzwaider says.

The next week Pittsburgh uses an 11 man line against Syracuse, but Mahle throws a two yard pass to Little who runs the next 80 yards untouched. Syracuse beats Pittsburgh 8-0. Schwartzwalder says, "I told you we would use the forward pass when we had to."

Thrilled with its first completion of the year Syracuse fills the air with footballs against Army and wins its eighth straight 42-20. Rich King completes 17 of 21 passes and Mahle 10 of 15. Cadet coach Paul Dietzel is carried from the game in a state of shock.

Spiders: Syracuse's Defensive Unit

By BILL CRONAUER
Sports Editor

The Military Academy can keep its Bandits — Syracuse University has its Spiders.

For those of you not up to date on the latest football fad in Orangeland, the Spiders are the first-string SU defensive unit.

And here's hoping that Hill fans won't confuse the local Spiders with the Spiders we played last season, Richmond by name. The Orange 'insects" reportedly have a bit more sting than their Virginia counterparts.

Group members may be recognized by the spider and web emblems dotting the fronts of their helmets, with white streaks painted down the center.

The Spider idea orginated during spring practice and came to the fore at the start of sessions this fall.

Actual founder of the unit was Hal Rooney, a junior defensive back from Patchogue, L.I. Rooney acquired a tatooed spider on his ankle last spring and the name rose to prominence during pre-season practice.

The Spiders include seniors Dave Archer, Gerry Everling, Dennis Reiliy and Billy Hunter, juniors George Fair, Joe Dzickonski, Ron Oyer, Charlie Brown, Ted Holman and Rooney, and sophomores Herb Stecker and Paul Nettleblatt.

Rooney, known as the 'Black Widow" of the group, said the Spiders were formed merely as a way of pepping up the team. "We're trying to get our defensive squad united, to keep the fellas hustling," he revealed.

Coach Ben Schwartzwalder had nothing to do with the creation of the name-tag. "It was said. "But anything that provides the spark, that makes them work as a unit is OK with me."

So the Spiders will make their debut Saturday. Let's hope they snare some Boston College Eagles in their web.

Every morning, we too, hear Crouse Chimes, the signal to stir into activity each college day. We hear them after a winning football game as we, too, are leaving the stadium. You see, we know what you like, for we like the same things. That is why the BOOKSTALL is unique.

You'll find New York to Switzerland right inside our door. Gifts so unusual, you won't believe it. Gifts suitable for a problem child, for a nice Grandpop, for a silver anniversary, for collectors, for weddings, and best of all —gay presents for no reason at all!

You'll be too busy to notice but right now our Christmas card albums are displayed. Townsfolk come from all parts of the city to buy our greeting cards whether for birthdays, Valentines or amusing "Whyn cha' write?" We have shipped card orders to every state in the Union and Europe. We have the greatest!

Say! Any Upperclassman in the know will tell you that the BOOKSTALL is the one and only of its kind—North, East, South or West of any compass! "It's the only homey touch in the whole area," the kids say. We want to meet you right away, so we'll have your whole four years to be friends. Hurry down!

Q.

Why give your favorite student a good pen when he'll just lose it?

A.

Parker won't let him lose it.
If he does, it will be replaced*

* SPECIAL REPLACEMENT OFFER: If you buy your favorite student a Parker 45 (the $5 model) between now and October 17, 1964, he can protect it against loss for one full year at no extra cost. He registers its purchase by mailing one-half of the Parker 45 Registration Certificate to the insurance company listed on the certificate. Then if the pen is lost, the insurance company will replace it at no charge. All he has to do is mail the other half of the certificate, properly notarized before December 31, 1965 and describe how the pen was lost.

Here's why this is such a good pen for a student:

IT'S CONVERTIBLE. Load it with a cartridge or replace the cartridge with the ingenious little "converter" (95 cents extra) and fill it from an ink bottle. The 45 is the only pen that fills two ways. SOLID 14K GOLD POINT. Choice of seven widths from extra-fine to extra-broad. And we can replace points right on the spot.

Football Seating Rules Announced

Student Government Football Seating Commissioners Steven Rubell and Harold Zirkin have announced the following regulations to be followed for this year's four home games.

1. All petitions for reserve seating must be submitted in duplicate form to the commissioners on Monday before each home game in the Trophy Room of the Men's Gym from 3:30 to 4 p.m. Petitions must then be approved and group representatives must pick them up at 4:30 p.m. the same day.

2. The petitions must be the regulation SG form, and may be obtained at the SG office during office hours, 1:30 to 4:30 p.m.

3. A request — if unreasonable — does not necessarily mean that tickets will be given.

4. The number of football tickets stubs must meet the requested number of seats or a penalty of one seat for each missing stub will be inflicted at the next game for which that group petitions. Penalties acquired last season will be carried over and deducted during the first two games of the season.

5. No reserve seat will be issued without the football ticket stub or the married student ticket (which may be obtained at the Manley FieldHouse ticket window.)

6. No ID cards will be used under this system, though they will be necessary at the game, along with the student football ticket and the reserve seat ticket.

7. A limit of 1½ times membership will be used in assigning blocks. (This can be increased at the discretion of the commissioners.) If more than 1½ times the present membership is requested, the petition will not be considered until all meeting this requirement have been fullfilled.

8. The blocks will be rotated for the different games. The quanity of the block will vary with the game. If you are under penalty you will not be considered for the best seat groupings.

9. There will be no provision made for parents and guests to sit in the student seating because of the limited number of seats allotted to the student body. Tickets for these people should be obtained at the Manley ticket office.

10. Ushers have complete authority. Any student who refuses to leave a seat that doesn't belong to him can be brought before the Student Court upon recommendation of the commissioners.

GOONS Who were in last year's Spring Weekend skit will meet at 11 a.m. Saturday, recreation lounge, Women's Bldg. to rehearse for the Saturday Night Special. All goons should wear blue and orange to the dance.

Fans are calling Schwartzwalder coach of the year and students are dreaming of a trip to the Orange Bowl. Ben warns that Virginia Tech will be tough, but everybody laughs.

Virginia Tech beats Syracuse 20-13.

The rumor spreads that if SU is to make the Orange Bowl they must beat West Virginia. They don't. The Mountaineers intercept a pass as the game ends and win 25-20.

With the season over and the bowl bid lost Schwartzwalder says, "No more passing—ever."

JSL, Now Called SS, Meets Wednesday

By JESSE SMITH

Hill undergraduates have only a few days to get ready for another year of fireworks and frustration, agitation and apathy, as the time draws near for student government's official start.

Sunday night's house meetings will provide an opportunity for each living center, floor or Greek house to elect representatives for the first session of the Student Senate (formerly Joint Student Legislature.)

The reps, together with the senators-at-large elected last spring, will meet at 7:15 p.m. Wednesday, in Maxwell Auditorium.

Robert (Robby) Stern, speaker of this year's legislature, said it is very important for each unit to make sure that a representative attends every session. Poor attendance can result in loss of representation. For this reason, each rep should be backed up by an alternate.

Stern took over the speakership from Jay Litwin last spring. Marshall Sneirson is speaker pro tempore. No one knows right now what kind of year they will have, or how well they will work with Student Government President Carl Corrallo.

Last year, a fighting legislature took on the administration in a running battle over conditions in dining halls. It culminated in a JSL-sponsored boycott of food service and a split between the legislature and the more moderate executive branch. A storm also arose over demands that the administration end athletic competition with segregated schools.

And it all started with elections of representatives last fall. Another year of student representation starts next week.

ISO Guide Picnic

International Student Guides will assemble at 11:30 a.m. Saturday at Chapel House to attend a picnic at Thornden Park.

The ISO guides are active in helping international students register and find housing.

Goon Show to Parody Campus Life

An entirely new Goon Show will be presented at 7:30 p.m. and 9 p.m. today and Saturday in Crouse College auditorium.

The changes of customs and traditions over the years at Syracuse University will be illustrated through songs. The years 1874, 1924 and 1964 will be featured in skits.

The show will be narrated by John Pear, sophomore class president. A quartet will star. Lynn Jaeke, Diane Peeloff, Ericka Picker and Sorina Praeger. Rose Drill, Louise Galligan andAndrea Silver are also featured in the show.

The Goon Show is sponsored by SU Traditions Commission, under the direction of Edmund Gelgud and Susan Quinlin.

MelinatAttends State Meeting

Carl H. Melinat, professor of library science, is attending a two day conference on Federal Depository Libary Service in New York State in Albany.

At the conference which ends today Melinat moderated a panel on "Standards for Government Documents Depository Designation."

Government documents are stored in 1,000 depository libraries throughout the country to make them convenient to all citizens. The conference discussed the qualifications required for additional depository libraries in New York State and the role of the state library as a regional depository.

Crew Meeting

All freshmen interested in trying out for the crew team will meet today at 5 p.m. in the crew room at Archbold Gym.

Medical, Dental

Scholarships Open

Seniors who are planning medical or dental graduate study next year may be eligible for one of 100 scholarships awarded by the New York State. To qualify for these awards, students must be legal residents of the state one year prior to the date of the award (beginning in the 1965-66 college year); in fulltime pre-professional study; and must not have taken the examination previously.

Successful applicants will be eligible for both the $350-$1,000 a year award, plus scholar incentive assistance. The incentive consists of $200-$400 the first year and $400-$800 for each subsequent year. Anyone holding a similar state or federal scholarship will not be eligible for this program.

Every candidate for a medical or dental scholarship must file an application with the Regents Examination and Scholarship Center, State Education Department, Albany, New York. Applications which are available in 210 Hall of Languages, must be filed by Saturday, October 7 for the examination which will be held on Thursday October 19.

Fines Listed For Violators

City parking ordinances are to be "rigidly enforced immediately," declared Robert D. Flaherty, director of Safety and Security. He said Thursday that city police will fine drivers who fail to adhere to the provisions of the odd-and-even parking ordinances.

Campus police also will fine violaters of all parking areas owned and controlled by the university.

The fine for first offenders on campus is $3. Second and third violations will cost $5 and $10 respectivly. Towing charges of $10 and $2 a day storage will be effected when necessary, Flaherty said.

New SU Vice President

For example, he said, Syracuse has been sending professors and equipment to the fledgling School of Administration and Finance in Colombia, South America, for three years. "I must see that we have resources to send there at the proper time," he said.

Wearing a rumpled gray checked suitcoat and fingering a pair of tortoise shell glasses, Charters leaned back in his chair and chatted about his background.

Born in Alberta, Canada, the sandy-haired administrator attended the University of British Columbia, earned his Ph.D. from the University of Chicago and served with the Royal Canadian Navy. He lives with his wife and four children at 210 Lockwood Ave.

Charters is a round-the-clock educator. Even his extra-curricular time is spent on organizations such as the Association of University Evening Colleges, the National University Extension Association, of which he is president-elect, and the Syracuse Urban League, which studies educational in relation to civil rights.

"I originally came to University College because I was impressed with Syracuse's adult education program, Charters said. "I have great respect for Syracuse, its rules, its future, and its constantly improving intellectural stature."

"But I don't find the on-campus job much different from that at UC," he said. It's just a change of where I hang my hat."

The extension office of State University College of Forestry at Syracuse mails more than 62,000 informative bulletins annually as a public service.

The defensive unit, now known at the "Spiders," boasts George Fair and Herb Stecker at ends, Dave Archer and Joe Dziekonski at tackles, and Gerry Everling and Dennis Reilly at guards. The linebackers are Paul Nettlebladt and Ron Oyer, with Charlie Brown, Billy Hunter and Hal Rooney in the secondary.

The game will be the seventh in a series which began in 1924, with SU holding a 5-1 margin in games to date. Last year the Piety eleven won a hard-fought 32-21 victory from the Eagles in Archbold Stadium.

Group Plans Concert to Aid Drive for LBJ

A contingent of artists is ready to perform here Sunday, at a political music fest to encourage the support of President Lyndon B. Johnson in the coming election.

Ruth Slenczynska, internationally renowned pianist, will play at the event slated for 3 p.m. Sunday at the Hotel Syracuse Persian Terrace. The program is dubbed "A Sunday Salute to L.B.J."

The Duane Hitchings trio, a local group and Judi Smith and Hal Glatzer, folk singers, will also perform at the event to be staged by the local Young Citizens for Johnson group.

Julie Just, on one of her first public appearances since coming as New York State's entry in the Miss America Beauty Pageant at Atlantic City, also will be on hand.

Tickets may be obtained at the Clark Music Company, the Onondaga Music Company, YCJ Headquarters at Hotel Onondaga, Suite 814, or at the door to the Persian Terrace Sunday. Donations of $1.50 will be accepted.

Registration

A group of weary students pick up class cards and complete registration in Archbold Gym. No more IBM cards in the future, we hope. The four day registration period ended Friday.

Housing: Men Fine, But Women Cramped

By PAT TRACEY

The student housing situation is taking its usual unique twist this fall.

Some 3,30. men students have been housed with no problems, said Frank J. Harrar, housing and fraternity administrator, Friday.

"We have no problems with housing this year or with room transferring. Everyone has a bed. There are even beds left over," said Harrar.

Women students, on the other hand, have found their situation more difficult.

"We're terribly crowded," said Marjorie C. Smith, dean of women. "We're using all emergency housing but will not have a complete picture until registration is finished."

Because of confusion in advanced payments, 161 students still must register today.

In Day and Flint Hall women are sleeping in lounges and study rooms, Dean Smith said. "Every housing unit is full and every bit of space is being used for student residence."

Dean Smith said the problem is in hand and that she hopes to have the situation cleared up in a week.

To date about 2,550 women students are living in university housing. Large residence halls have about 1,750 women, cottages have 440 and medium residence halls have 400.

Large residence halls for men are housing about 2,100 students, while the remaining 3,300 men are living in cottages, apartments co-ops and prefabs.

Harrar said that he expects empty beds to be filled shortly.

Married students are being housed in a new building project to be completed in January.

"There are at present 61 student families assigned to the new Slocum Heights area," said A. B. C. Douthwaite, director of married students housing. Buildings B-28 through B-35 are now occupied.

The 35-building project is still under construction, and, said

New Faculty

59 Appointments Made to SU Staff

To date, there have been 59 new appointments to Syracuse University's faculty, according to Frank P. Piskor, vice president of academic affairs and dean of faculties.

Among these are Samuel J. Donnelly, a New York City lawyer who will teach at the College of Law, and Dr. Robert S. Pickett and James E. Moore, the first two males ever appointed to the College of Home Economics.

Three appointments have been made in the School of Architecture. Robert J. Bartels, a planning specialist who will become an assistant professor; John W. Robertson, a construction designer who will also be an associate professor, and instructor Paul H. Malo, co-author of "Architecture Worth Saving in Onondaga County."

Nine new faculty members have been named to the New York State College of Forestry at SU according to Dean Hardy L. Shirley. Arthur R. Eschner, Ray Leonard and Edward W. Littlefield have been named to the silviculture department. Robert H. Baum, assistant professor of biochemistry, will enter the forest chemistry department.

Two new members of the wood products engineering department are John A. Satkowski and Leonard A. Smith. Lawrence J. Eliers will join the forest

DO STAFF MEETS TODAY

All freshmen and other students interested in working on the news staff of the Daily Orange should attend a meeting at 4 p.m. today in building 7C, the DO office. (Building 7C is located adjacent to Archbold Stadium, next to Steele Hall, which is behind Hendricks Chapel.)

Anyone who cannot attend the meeting should call Andy Porte at ext. 2127, 2128 or 2129 before 4 p.m. Monday.

Anecdotes Mark '64 Registration

BULLETIN

SU Registrar Edwin D. Smith reported a total of 10,137 students had registered in the four day fall registration period by late Friday. This figure includes 8,085 undergraduates. The College of Law, the New York State College of Forestry at Syracuse and University College are not in this total.

By MARLENE CIMONS

"Everybody seems very pleased at the way registration has gone, "commented Registrar Edwin D. Smith, Friday. "I don't know about the students, but everyone working here is quite satisfied and happy that it's over."

As confusing and hectic as the situation appeared for students, several of the more than 400 workers did experience several incidents and problems worth noting.

One harried cashier reported that many of the checks handed him as tuition payments had been written for the wrong amount.

"I guess its one of the natural things that always happens," he said.

A majority of the difficulties presented themselves at the central information booth, where one aide relates the tale of a girl who received the wrong IBM packet.

Top Football Trainer? SU's Julie

The following article on Syracuse University's football trainer, Jules Reichel, will appear in the Oct. 6 issue of Look, a weekly magazine. The Daily Orange received special permission to print the story in advance of its publication.

Better conditioned players and improved equipment have greatly reduced modern football's physical danger. But this Spartan game is so essentially violent that injuries, occasionally serious, never can be wholly eliminated.

A football staff, therefore, includes no member more important than a first-calss trainer like veteran Jules Reichel of Syracuse University.

Seconds after he sights one of his players stretched out flat, struggling to get back on his feet or ambling about dizzily, Reichel is at his side. Reichel treats many injuries on his own.

Sometimes a whiff of smelling salts or a smear of coagulant is enough. For something serious, like a fracture or concussion, he calls in Dr. William E. Pelow, team physician.

The doctor must be the final judge of when the player is ready to suit up or scrimmage again. "Physicians realize," Reichel points out, that athletes are not ordinary patients. They can take much more pounding and recover quicker."

On game day, Reichel goes to work hours before the kickof. He tapes ankles (a preventive measure), makes a final checkout of the injured with Dr. Pelow and then advises Coach Ben Schwartzwalder what men can't play.

JULES REICHEL

"It's amazing," says Reichel, "how often both sides come out of a bruising game without serious injury. Often, a player who had to be helped off Saturday, takes a brisk Monday workout.

The main factor here is conditioning. To achieve this, two-a-day pre-season sessions are vital. They toughen up the susceptible contact points—knees, shoulders, arms, ankles."

Sunday in the football season is no day off for Reichel. By 9 a.m., his training room—the walking-wounded ward—is ready for the battered athletes. To treat them, he has the best equipment science can provide: whirlpool baths to improve circulation in bruised muscles; heat lamps for contusions and sprains; bandage wraps, perhaps lined with ice, as compresses; enzyme tablets to absorb fluids from swellings.

It has been years since he had to bring in a doctor or dentist to treat facial fractures, flattened noses, broken teeth or bloody gaps where teeth used to be. Mouthpieces and face guards have eliminated such injuries.

Reichel has to be an expert on human behavior. Some players are inclined to coddle injuries and hurry to the trainer at the first torment of a hangnail. Others foolishly try to hide a serious hurt.

"They're all different," says Reichel, "and react differently to injuries. Sometimes, a kind word and a pat on the back will do the job. A good trainer must take a personal as well as a professional interest in each of them."

New York, Si; Bobby, No!

The Daily Orange is both happy and proud to endorse Robert F. Kennedy for the United States Senate — as a senator from Massachusetts.

Unfortunately, Mr. Kennedy has no business running for the Senate from the state of New York, and it is only because of a constitutional loophole that he is in the race.

Mr. Kennedy is the second member of the New Frontier to ignore geographical limits to seek office. Chunky Pierre Salinger, whose claim to fame is as a newsman, jumped to California to vie against a former actor.

The former attorney general compiled a sparkling record as a Cabinet member, and he someday certainly deserves the opportunity to seek a seat in the Senate. Yet the Massachusetts-voting, Virginia-living, New York-running brother of the late President should pack his bags and un-rent that Glen Cove house that is not a home before he becomes too dangerously close to winning the election.

Kenneth B. Keating has been a good senator, and he deserves the chance to be judged by the people in a bid for re-election. If the people judge there is a better man, let it be. But it will be a tragedy and a travesty if they judge the better man to be Bobby Kennedy.

If the New Frontier plans to recapture the Democratic Party and then the government, its methods are openly shady and unethical, even if permissible under the law.

For Bobby and Pierre are using the wrong approach, if they ever hope to attain the level or respect earned by the late President. Perhaps brother-in-law Sargent Shriver is playing the game correctly by sticking with Lyndon Johnson, hoping to work his way up in the ranks.

It was only a few months ago that Bobby all but ruled himself out of the senatorial contest, but all of a sudden he found himself back in, when New York boss Robert Wagner found that he had no one but himself to run for the job, and he feels pretty secure where he is.

If Bobby is elected, how will he stand if the decision comes that either the Brooklyn Navy Yard or the Boston Navy Yard must be closed? Will he then truly represent New York?

If we must put Bobby in the Senate, let's put him in as a Senator from the proper state. And let's not let the residents of New York be duped by a campaign that ignores the real issue.

If Bobby ever wants to be President, we hope he goes about attaining the job in the proper manner. There are a lot of fine people in this state, and they deserve a btter shake than being used as a stepping-stone.

Finally

Hooray for the bookstore! After all these years of waiting, the bookstore has taken a giant step towards increased efficiency.

Through the installation of several new cash registers, it now takes a minimum amount of time for students to locate their books and pay for them. Compared with past semesters, this year's system is a veritable Mecca.

Kudos to Burton Fink and the bookstore staff. Now if the professors would only order their books on time. . .

Tiger at the Gates

Unchained Melody

By Dan Ritey

Much like a sidelined athlete who has been inactive too long and is consequently rusty with misuse, we're trying to reorganize our thoughts and impressions gained over a prolonged absence from the impersonal, yet highly communicative, typewriter.

There's quite a mouthful, yet it boils down to a simple statement of fact: seven months of hoarding thoughts and only speaking one's mind make it rough to get a message across in print.

This tiger has altered his stripes in some ways, but the deeper, more permanent color of his skin has remained the same.

This tiger is still very much at the gates; still very much on the outside of the university family house and still off the 'in' team. Along the unbeaten jungle trail we go.

Yes, crew, we're apart from the partying, status-quo, smooth-talking team; which, of course, leaves rise to the question: just where are we?

One place where we are NOT is in the wing of reaction and complacency which rules one major political party and the minds of too many people.

But it's neither the narrowness of a misguided Barry Goldwater nor the repugnance of a William Miller alone that leaves us wondering and somewhat apprehensive of a future imperfect; more than the attitudes of major parties and candidates are those of the much maligned, but still indispensible, students of today which deserve some scutiny.

Possibly after you've observed students for a few years--and particularly if you are a cynical bent--you'd get to thinking that what is really missing here is a sense of values.

Values, and their companion opinions, are relative--they relate to one's upbringing and environment. True. However, they should be broadened at the college level or, at least, modified somewhat in discussion with other intelligent people.

In this we've come to think that some people, somewhere, have been fumbling the ball.

We suspect that these fumblers may be members of the university 'in' team and family.

People who speak their minds freely and stand tall only when they are wearing starched clothing certainly cast shadows on the sun that shines on Piety Hill. People whose convictions are easily swayed for convenience or who are lacking same also bode an imperfect future.

God (or whatever are the powers that be) forbid that all students are lumped with the more publicized wing who think the ultimate in life is a fruging afternoon on the beach with the other sun-worshippers.

Or who refuse to exercise their grey matter as much as their mouths, arms, legs or other anatomical parts.

Or who cannot see beyond the walls of their sorority or fraternity (or dormitory, too); those whose knowledge of things around them is limited to vague generalities and vaguer ideas.

Or who are flighty as bumblebees and as shallow as mud puddles in their relations with others and the advantages around them.

Enough said. If the abovementioned are the majority and the representation of the soon-to-be voters and personalities in our country, then twilight of the gods; we're cermaybe we are witnessing the tainly in trouble somewhere.

And it isn't confined to the younger set alone. Inability to be reasoned with and a confined outlook prevail at many levels of our society--even would exist, probably, in the 'great' society as envisioned by Lyndon Johnson.

What do you do with these People who speak their minds the attitude that anyone who respects such a person should not be respected or taken seriously himself?

It's a hell of a question. And if we knew the answer we wouldn't be spending our time in front of this typewriter.

What about those who act one way--inane as it may appear to others--but who are covering up a totally different personality?

Part of the solution lies in that fact that most people are paradoxical in relation to themselves; that they profess one thing and believe or do another.

Not that we should condemn one who is ambitious and-or desirous of leading a comfortable life as he sees fit. Fine. Is it, however, too much to expect people--especially the proverbial 'leaders of tomorrow'--to be somewhat aware of important events around them to or adivsed of some lasting, worthy goals?

Time ran out for the Roman Empire circa 476 and; yet the seeds of decay and disinterest were sown generations before.

Is this to be the fate of a country or society that had "a rendezvous with destiny?"

The Sounds of Jazz

Intro to Jazz

by Bill Newman

Jazz, possibly the most ambigious word in the English language, is the subject of this weekly column. What is the essence of this is purely American music which ranges from Carnegie Hall to the Village Gate, from the haunting cries of a New Orleans street vendor to the studied sounds of the Modern Jazz Quartet, from the lyric beauty of pianist composer Dave Brubeck's work to the savage message of drummer Art Blakey?

I won't pretend that I can answer that question or that I even want to. It is my hope that eventually you will form your own opinions. I only hope to inform and stimulate that opinion.

For those of you who seek a molding acquaintance with jazz, "The Sounds of Jazz" offers you a unique experience. This column will be published weekly in conjunction with a series of the same name to be heard over the campus radio station, WAER-FM. The two hour excursion into jazz, which will be heard every Monday night at 11 p.m., should prove to be food for thought for those of you who find this column a tasty musical appetizer.

If you're looking for the meaning of such hip jargon as "bop," "gig," "out of sight" and "bridge," I'm afraid that the "Sounds of Jazz" is not for you. Some of the questions we'll kick around include; what is the meaing of jazz? How does the jazz musician convey his message? How does the jazz mucician stack up against his popular and classical counterparts? Interviews with world-known jazz men are sure to make the agenda. A report of the recent Newport Jazz Festival would seem to be a must.

I invite you to join me as I examine the The Sounds of Jazz both via the Daily Orange and WAER radio. A particularly well known quotation comes to mind. "The unexplored life is not worth living." Come let us explore The Sounds of Jazz.

"She went through her entire packet changing the social security numbers on each one to match her own," he said. "Finally, as she came to the last card she realized that the addresses were also different. It seems she had been given the packet of another upperclassman with the same name."

Pity also the student picking up a class card for a course in public administration. He was greeted with a sign that read; "Oops! We goofed! Public Administration is at station 117. Sorry!"

Perhaps the one cheerful note was the colorful contempory card perched on the front desk of the information booth. It said: "Only (fill in number) more day(s) until Friday."

"Hamlet" With Burton At Keith's

The John Gielgud production of "Hamlet," direct from the Lunt - Fontanne Theater on Broadway, will be shown at 2 p.m. and 8:15 p.m. on Sept. 23 and 24 at RKO Keith's Theater.

Starring Richard Burton, Cronyn, Alfred Drake, Eileen Hume Cronyn, Alfred Drake, field. "Hamlet" was filmed in a new electronic process called electronovision. The process used Eileen Herlie and William Redspecially constructed other equipment to film the movie as it was being acted onstage. This technique will enable audiences to see films of Broadway productions without geographic barriers.

"Hamlet" will be shown simultaneously at more than 1,000 theatres in the United States and will run for a limited two-day engagement only.

The movie marks Richard Burton's second appearance as the Danish prince. Previously, he had played the longest running "Hamlet" the Old Vic had ever known. He has also performed in other Shakespearean plays such as "The Tempest," Coriolanus," and "Twelfth Night."

Tickets for "Hamlet" are available at the RKO Keith box office. Matinees are $1.50 and the evening performances are $2.

Q.

Why give your favorite student a good pen when he'll just lose it?

A.

Parker won't let him lose it.
If he does, it will be replaced*

* SPECIAL REPLACEMENT OFFER: If you buy your favorite student a Parker 45 (the $5 model) between now and October 17, 1964, he can protect it against loss for one full year at no extra cost. He registers its purchase by mailing one-half of the Parker 45 Registration Certificate to the insurance company listed on the certificate. Then if the pen is lost, the insurance company will replace it at no charge. All he has to do is mail the other half of the certificate, properly notarized before December 31, 1965 and describe how the pen was lost.

Here's why this is such a good pen for a student:

IT'S CONVERTIBLE. Load it with a cartridge or replace the cartridge with the ingenious little "converter" (95 cents extra) and fill it from an ink bottle. The 45 is the only pen that fills two ways. SOLID 14K GOLD POINT. Choice of seven widths from extra-fine to extra-broad. And we can replace points right on the spot.

Parker 45 Convertible $5

Scholarship Continues

Alpha Lambda Phi sorority will continue selling candy this fall to raise money for the its JFK Memorial Scholarship Fund.

The fund will provide a $250 scholarship to a junior or senior girl majoring in political science at the Maxwell School of Citizenship.

The first grant will be presented this year on November 22. Similar grants will be made in following years on the same date. Each scholarship is in memory of the late president, John Fitzgerald Kennedy.

The candy campaign began last May.

DEAN BERNICE WRIGHT

Problem: Home Ec Image

By SUSAN STRANDBERG

The age-old problem of improving a school's image faces the new dean of the College of Home Economics, Dr. Bernice M. Wright.

In an interview she noted that one of the main weaknesses of the college was its image.

"Perhaps the name is too often connected with high school home ec courses," she said, "but in fact, at a college level home economics is an umbrella term that encompasses a variety of essential professional fields.

"Where else, for example, can social workers gain the technical tools in the area of nutrition, early childhood education, family economics and sewing that will make it possible for her to put her theoretical understanding in sociology and psychology into practice?

We have received a great number of letters from peace corps people who say the little training they had with us has served them better than much of the other aspects of their program," she added.

Currently Dean Wright has two projects planned which should enable the college to take "new steps in new directions and become one of the strongest assests of the university."

The first is a three-day conference in October at Minnowbrook, one of the university's three camp sites, for the entire faculty of the school.

"We want to do a complete re-evaluation of just what we in home economics have been doing and where we want to go from here," she said.

The dean also plans to take new steps in the area of foreign study. (The first overseas study program in the university was initiated by the College of Home Economics.)

"We are advising all freshmen to take a foreign language and continue with it," she said. "We are now looking into possibilities of having a semester abroad exclusively for home economics students, though we are in no position to say anything definite yet."

Dean Wright replaces Dean Barbara P. Griggs who retired last spring. She said she had no ambition to become dean and even hesitated to take the post because she thought she would have to give up teaching and counseling.

"I have to admit I'm enjoying every minute of the work so far, she said. "I've always loved Syracuse anyway, ever since I came as an undergraduate."

During her undergraduate days in the School of Speech, Dean Wright was active in campus life. She was May Queen, which has since been discontinued; and head of Women's Student Government, which five years ago joined with the men's branch to become Joint Student Government.

She also was a member of several honorary societies.

After receiving her B.A., Dean Wright stayed at SU to earn a master's degree. She then received her Ph.D. from the University of Edinburgh. Both advanced degrees were in educational psychology with special emphasis on early childhood development.

Dean Wright had her first practical experience as a child case worker and family counselor for the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

"I went into college teaching in 1955 as a special lecturer when I returned to Syracuse with my husband who is a minister," Dean Wright said, "and have taken on as much as possible because I love working with college age people...perhaps, just because my four children are away and I have to have some way to keep up with the vernacular!"

Frosh Picnic

Did you hear that going to school at Syracuse was a picnic? Sure looks that way here where freshmen are enjoying their picnic on the quad Monday preceding the pep rally. Here some members of the class of '68 are being served the first of their school spirit.

DO

Publication Dates

There are 113 more issues of the Daily Orange after today's. Four more this week are planned and then a steady five days per week printing until November 6.

One issue will be printed the following week, on Friday, Nov. 13 and all issues for the next school week (Nov. 16-20). No papers will be published from Nov. 23 -Dec. 2. Printing will be resumed on Dec. 2, and will continue on a normal schedule until Dec. 18,

During January only three issues will appear, on the 6th, 7th and 8th of that month.

Starting February 4, the DO will be printed every business day until March 12, when we break for mid-terms. Only one other issue will appear that month, on the 19th.

We resume normal publication on April 7 and continue until the last regularly scheduled issue on May 14. A special graduation issue will be printed on June 5.

ISO Launches Fall Program

The International Students Organization will launch its fall program on Friday, Oct. 3, with a mixer for American and foreign students. The location will be announced.

ISO President Robert Fisher urged American students to attend.

Fisher said that many students seem to feel that the ISO is for foreign students only, whereas "it should be considered a group in which Americans and international students can get to know each other."

Among suggested discussion topics for future meetings are the upcoming United States elections, the Negro problem in America, the African and Kashmir problems and the forms of discrimination around the world.

Other programs will include foreign speakers, films, and social evenings conducted by the various regional and national groups within ISO.

Regular meetings of the ISO will be held Tuesday nights, on dates to be announced.

The ISO executive council will meet Tuesday, Sept. 29.

New Director Set for Shaw

Dorothy Anderson has been named residence director of Shaw Dormitory, according to Dean of Women Marjorie C. Smith.

Shaw dorm houses 328 coeds.

Miss Anderson received her masters degree in June in the university's student personnel administration program and was a graduate assistant here this summer in the General Electric institute for high school guidance councelors. She has a bachelors degree from Susquehanna University, Selinsgrove, Pa.

Panhel Needs Rushing Aides; 28 Named

Panhellenic Council has announced the names of the rush counselors for the 1964-65 school year. They will meet with the freshmen on their dorm floors during the first semester.

The counselors will explain rushing procedure and make clear all rules and regulations. Any questions either freshmen or upperclassmen have will be answered at this time.

Applications are being accepted for 30 more rush counselors. Sophomores through seniors are eligible. A minimum of one girl to every living center is required by Panhel. Questions concerning eligibility will be answered by Virginia Waugh, rush counselor chairman, at ext. 2691.

All rush counselors will meet at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday, in 303 Women's Bldg. Those not able to attend must call Miss Waugh.

The new counselors are: Carroll Ann Acre, Barbara Ash, Nancy Barrett, Francine Brecher, Susan Caves, Marcia Clark and Annette Congelosi.

Also Judith Anne Cummins, Susan Eisenstein, Betsy Hacker, Maryanne Hul, Joyce Humphrey and JoAnn Jakiel.

Also Myra Lampman, Cianne Levine, Martha Minckler, Joan Moore, Hermine Muskat, Joanna Osborn, Sarah Sampson, Marjorie Saunders and Marlene Stroske.

Also Judith Tabakin, Mary Ruth Thier, Ellen Waitkins and Marti Weiss.

Architect Critic To Visit SU Campus

Professor Emeritus Louise Woodroofe will be a visiting critic in the SU School of Architecture beginning today.

D. Kenneth Sargent, dean of the School of Architecture, has announced that Prof. Woodroofe will be on campus until Oct. 9. She will instruct third and fourth year architecture students in painting, using various medroofe's fourth visit to the school. Prof. Woodroofe is on the staff of the university of Illinois and is an SU alumna.

Buttons, buttons. Everyone on campus has a button. But those coeds wearing two-toned blue buttons are not advertising their class status or political affiliation. They are members of the Association of Women Student Guides.

AWS guides are divided into three groups for new campus students, tranfer students and city students. The purpose of the guides is to help entering coeds with any questions or problems they may have with SU life.

Guides will help dormitories and cottages with their first few house meetings. They will give information to the coeds about the role of women on the Hill and the purpose of AWS.

Coeds with any questions on curfews, permissions, or other AWS regulations should see their AWS guide, according to Judith Tabakin, AWS overall guide chairman.

Rules Continued

Following is the continuation of the rules concerning home football game seating for students. The first part appeared in Friday's Daily Orange.

11. Any violation of these rules or of the university policy at the game will mean forfeit your group being able to obtain seating for the next game for which you petition. Students are expected to comply with common rules of courtesy and do as instructed by authorized persons. Any complaints should be filed with the commissioners after the game. If the commissioners find that the students do not comply with the regulations, they reserve the right to discontinue reserve seating.

12. All reserve student seats must be occupied by 1 p.m. Penalties will be inflicted upon any group that does not fill their block by 1 p.m. the day of the game. Students will enter student gates. The student gate under the steel stands will close at 1 p.m.

13. Ticket exchange for block seating will take place Wednesday at 4:30 p.m.

14. Persons not in block seating will exchange tickets as follows:

Thursday
Married Students—3:30-3:50
Seniors—3:50-4:10
Juniors—4:10-4:30

Friday
Sophomores—3:30-3:50.
Freshmen—3:50-4:10
Graduates—4:10-4:30.

15. Office hours of football seating commissioners will be by appointment only. The commissioners desire to please the students with reserve seating and will appreciate suggestions of new systems or additions to the present system.

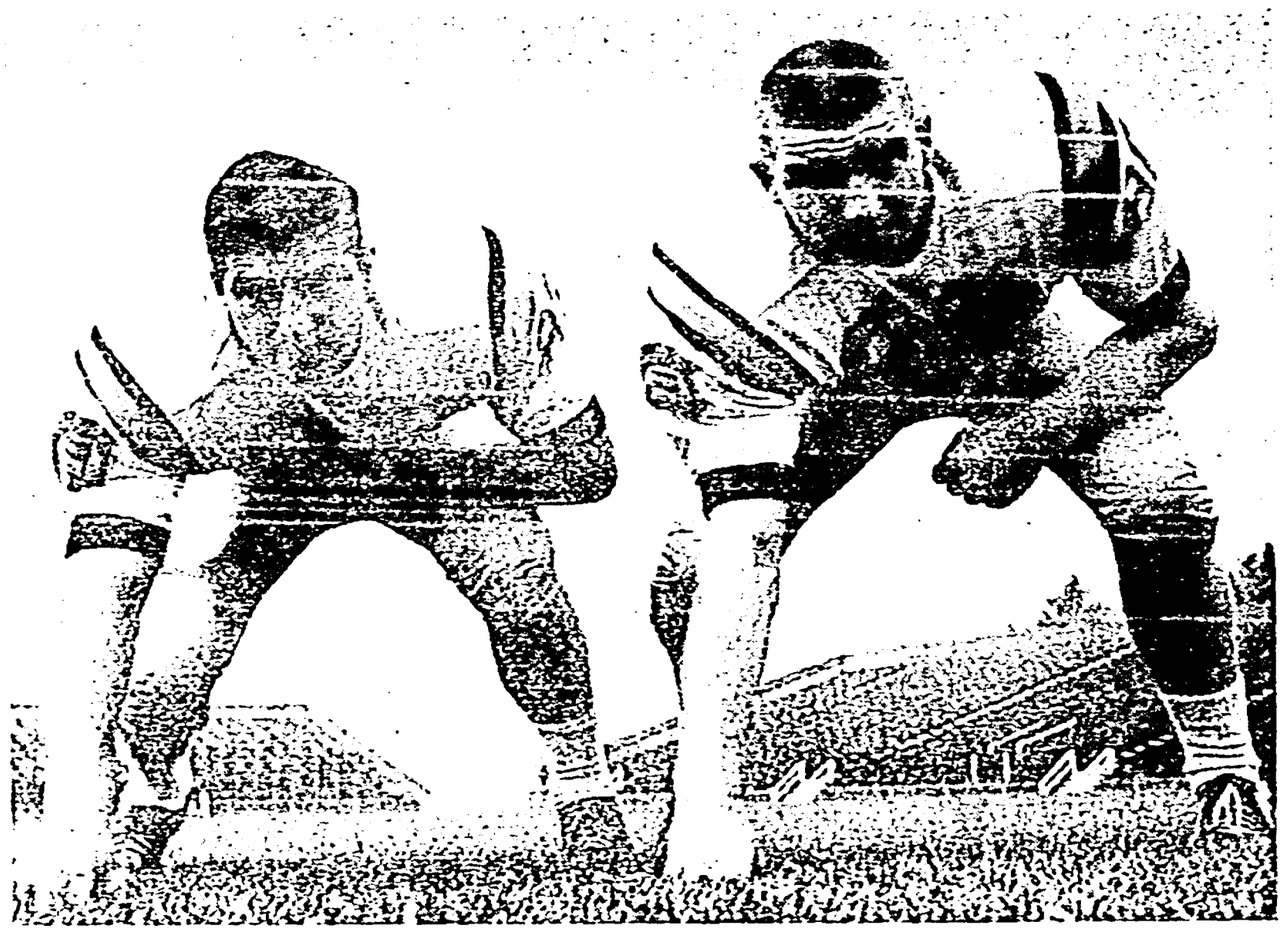
Last-Second Pass Sinks Syracuse



Powerful Eagles

Two Boston College players most responsible for their team's 21-14 victory over the Orangemen were ends JIM WHALEN (left) and BILL CRONIN. The latter crossed the Syracuse goal line for the winning score with just three seconds remaining. Whalen provided the key block leading to BC's initial touchdown and also handled the punting chores.

Orange Defenders Try for Interception

By BILL CRONAUER

BOSTON — Syracuse tried a little too hard to win. And so they lost.

That was the stunning story Saturday afternoon in Alumni Stadium as the Boston College Eagles shocked SU's highly rated Orangemen, 21-14, before 25,400 screaming fans.

The "we've got to win" feeling, evidenced on the decisive pass play with nine seconds remaining, actually caused the Piety's downfall.

Ted Holman and Charlie Brown, double-teaming Eagle captain Bill Cronin at the Syracuse 15-yard line, both envisioned intercepting the pass and returning it all the way for the score and an Orange victory.

Instead, the two collided and the 6-4, 220-pound Cronin gathered in the 55-yard toss from Larry Marzetti to provide the triumph.

Hill coach Ben Schwartzwalder summed it up: "The boys just got too excited. One defender should always stay on the ground . . . let the other try for the interception."

But one could hardly blame the defeat on individuals — it was a team loss. "Everybody was pressing a bit," said Schwartzwalder, "and therefore we made plenty of mistakes."

There was no doubt that Orangemen were out to win, regardless of how their play looked at times. They rebounded under pressure from an eight-point deficit late in the final quarter to even it at 14-14.

Time and time again the Hill forces drove into enemy territory, only to have their efforts thwarted. In the first half drives were stalled on the BC nine and 12-yard lines.

In the third quarter, the Piety was hindered by a blocked punt and another kick of only 10 yards, the latter setting up the first Eagle touchdown. Then a Rich King aerial was intercepted at the SU 19 and Boston College took the lead.

Perhaps the most unfortunate miscue came in the early moments of the final period, when halfback Dan Healey fumbled at the BC 28-yard mark, terminating a 46-yard march.

High point of the day for the Orange was its potent ground attack. With Jim Nance accounting for 84 yards and soph streak Floyd Little another 82, the Syracuse offense chalked up 262 net yards rushing.

The SU line, however, more than had its hands full of onrushing Eagles.

Just as Syracuse controlled the ball-carrying act, the winners dominated the airways. Marzetti, although completing only four heaves, notched a pair of six-pointers and totalled 104 yards.

For the Hillmen, Rich King connected on but one of eight, that being a 36-yard bomb to Little to set up the final Piety score. Walley Mahle failed in three attempts.

Both clubs played to a scoreless deadlock through the first half. SU cracked the ice at 5:50 of the third period as Nance cracked over from three yards out. The PAT boot was wide.

Aroused, Boston College crossed the Orange goal seven minutes later, with a 26-yard fling from Marzetti to Bob Budzinski doing the damage. Gordie Kutz' conversion made it 7-6, BC.

Don Moran put the home team on top after three seconds of the fourth quarter, tallying on a four-yard plunge up the middle. Kutz again added the point.

Mahle climaxed a rousing Syracuse charge late in the game by bucking over for a touchdown and then romping around left end for the all-important two-point PAT.

That set the stage for the Marzetti-Cronin heroics minutes later. . . and the white and orange were dead.

Hillmen's Upset Defeat Hard to Believe, Accept

By JIM KLERFELD

BOSTON — The locker room was quiet.

Players sat on benches or stood in corners, heads down, mouths shut. They removed their equipment and slowly walked to the showers.

The end had come suddenly and swiftly. It was hard to believe, hard to accept.

"No, no, I never lost one like that before," Ben Schwartzwalder replied.

With nine seconds left in the game Boston College quarterback Larry Marzetti had completed a desperation heave for the winning touchdown. The coach was shaken.

So were the players. Floyd Little showered and dressed quickly. He had played a magnificent game but it wasn't his idea of a successful debut. "I wish we could'a won. I wish we could'a won," he repeated.

It was the most bizarre finish since the infamous and disputed after-game field goal Notre Dame kicked in 1961.

Some of the players had left the field after the touchdown not realizing there was still an extra point and kick-off to play.

But now it was over. They dressed quietly around the hot, misty room, hair wet, uncombed.

"This is a good group of boys, "Schwartzwalder continued, "a bit wild though. Inexperience hurt them. They made too many mistakes, they got too excited."

"They did a fine job tying the game, but you saw what happened in those final few seconds. They were too anxious."

In a matter of minutes many of them had dressed and filed out of the room. There was no talk of the game, no talk of what might have been. They didn't look at each other, they just filed out.

Only a few reporters entered and those who did asked two or three questions and left. The story was in the other locker room.

"It was a heck of a game for the coaches," Schwartzwalder said. "I can't remember when we had to make so many decisions or had so much trouble controlling the boys. We had worked on who's in what platoon all week, but in the heat of the game a couple boys forgot. They were too excited."

The buses parked outside the locker room door. The players boarded. "What time is dinner?"

"Five thirty."

"Too bad we can't move it up and get out of here."

The steam was clearing from the showers, the room was emptying. It was a quick evacuation.

"No, I never lost one like that before," Schwartzwalder said to another reporter, "but I've lost them other ways. What's the difference?"

He put his jacket on and slowly left the silent locker room.

Attacks Attorney General For Weak Payment Stand

By DANIEL RITEY
Associate Editor

Senator Kenneth B. Keating (R-NY) expressed dismay over the failure of his Democratic senatorial opponent, Robert F. Kennedy, to take a stronger stand regarding payment of at least $60-million to an allegedly pro - Nazi Swiss based holding firm

Speaking Monday afternoon in the Hotel Syracuse, Keating told the Daily Orange that, as attorney general, Kennedy willingly authorized payment of large sums of money to Interhandel, a supposed "mere cloak" for I. G. Farben, a chemical concern that worked for Nazi Germany.

Keating stated that had he been attorney general he would make Interhandel contest for their money instead of giving it over to them. He asserted that although there was probably little that could be done now about the matter, he would continue to make a campaign issue of it.

The incumbent lawmaker emphasized that Kennedy himself had pointed out the Nazi sympathies and background of the holding company but had not prevented them from receiving money.

On other campaign issues, Keating charged that Kennedy, by referring to the senator's "good" voting record was actually helping his cause because, as Keating noted, 'the people will want Kennedy to discuss my good record, or, if not, they will say why replace him if his record is so good?"

Keating noted that neither he nor his staff have made overtures to the Kennedy camp concerning a debate, but that he'd be ready for one "anywhere, any with anyone from any state in the union," along the lines of the 1960 presidential talks.

The senator repeated his decision not to support the candidacy of the GOP presidential candidate Barry M. Goldwater. Keating also acknowledged the campaign support given him by fellow New York Senator Jacob Javits and said that he expected similar aid from Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller.

Senator Keating took time to detail his concern and efforts on behalf of Onondaga County while he has served in the Senate.

"I'm never satisfied with what I can do for a county I represent" he said, "however, I've noted that unemployment has fallen to 3.9 per cent and I have worked for many measures which would improve the economic climate of this county."

Keating noted that Onondaga County has benefited from defense contracts that has worked to acquire for New York State and that Syracuse will be receiving funds from the new mass transit bill, which he also supported in the Senate.

He also cited an instance when he suggested pilot projects of concern and interest to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the S U School of Engineering.

Keating plans to criss-cross the state briskly in the remaining weeks of the campaign. It is expected he will concentrate a good deal of time in New York City trying to cut into the traditionally heavy Democratic vote there.

SEN. KENNETH B. KEATING

SU Administration Eyes Living Snafu

By PAT TRACEY

"I guess we've been planning it poorly," said Lester H. Dye, director of admissions, referring to the annual housing chaos at Syracuse University.

This year the problem was increased by an unexpected 1,000 scholarship applications, a 30 per cent increase over last year.

Applications for admittance were also increased by 10 per cent. Both increases caused a larger number of acceptances than usual, Dye said.

Students are accepted after an average of previous years' acceptances is weighed against the SU standing for the year.

"We reflect on previous years' statistics to see about filling classes. This year we had a higher percentage of acceptances than expected," said Dye.

The usual university procedure is to overcommit itself 100 per cent, with withdrawals evening out the number of students accepted and the amount of housing available.

"We had fewer withdrawals. I guess we really overcommitted this class."

The university also expected that competttion with other universities would lower the number of acceptances, Dye said.

"It's very difficult to guage yourself," Dye said. "There are many, many variables your playing with. It's like reading a crystal ball."

Panhel to Discuss Upperclass Rush

A new proposal for a complete change in upperclass rushing procedure will be discussed at a Panhellenic meeting 7 p.m. today in the Women's Bldg.

Basically, the new rushing plan will be an efort to combine the formal and informal aspects of upperclass rush. In the past upperclass women rushed only one weekend with poor results. Panhellenic is striving to make rushing more relaxed, commented Marcella Rast, president.

If the proposal is passed, rushees will visit all the sorority houses for the first round of parties. They will then be invited back to the houses informally. This will completely eliminate the IBM card procedure used previously, said Miss Rast.

Bidding for upperclassmen will run Sunday October 11 at 8 p.m. to Wednesday, October 14, at 5 p.m.

Other Panhellenic plans include a regional Panhel conference to be held this weekend. Representatives from Cornell, Buffalo, Bucknell, University of ty of Massachusetts will be guests of Syracuse Panhel studying, int er-sorority relations,

Mrs. Carl Frische, area national Panhellenic Council advisor will be the keynote speaker at the first session of the conference Friday night.

The conference will be divided into small discussion groups to discuss topics such as rush-Panhellenic and the Inter-Fraternity Cluncil, and Panhel communications.

The final session will take place Saturday at a buffet brunch. Reports from each group will be discussed then.

DO BUSINESS STAFF MEETS

All freshmen interested in working on the business and advertising staff of the Daily Orange are invited to a meeting 1-2 p.m. today in the student publications office, Winchell Hall basement.

Late Registration

Lines Continue Ad Infinitum

Lines, lines, lines, how they creep along in their petty pace. Monday, the late registrants were put through more of the same ordeals which scholarship students, transfer, and re-admits are forced to endure-lines.

One of many problems in late registration concerned advance payment fee which many students did not pay, for one reason or another.

There were cases where students said they did not receive the advance payment form, and cases where students were unsure in May of their ability to meet the expense of tuition for the 1964-65 school year. A great deal of confusion was created because the state of New York discontinued its policy of sending scholarship notification to the university.

For the past two years, the state has sent these notifications to the students, themselves, instead of sending the record to the university. Because of this policy, a great many matriculants believing that there is a record of their scholarships at school — leave the original notification at home.

The bursar's office refused to comment on the problem of late

Another line and these students will think they're at the World's Fair. Oh, well, at least here, outside the Bursar's Office we get a good view of the Newhouse Communications Center. Next year, pay your advance payment on time, gang, and eliminate one of the lines.

RUSH RULES

Registration for upper class rush will take place in 312, Women's Bldg. 1-4 p.m. today; 2-4:30 p.m. Wednesday; 11-5 p.m. Thursday; and 1:30-5:00 p.m. Friday.

No girl may register for rush after this date for any reason according to Susan Sommers, Panhel rush chairman.

Raise High The Roof

Lester Dye, SU's director of admissions, asks in today's Daily Orange for suggestions on easing the problems caused by the greater number of students accepting admittance to the university.

If the university continues to underestimate the number of students who will accept admittance, then the answer is simple -- revitalize sub-standard university housing and do it now.

University students have been forced to live in wooden shacks and dormitory lounges for too long. It is time the university decided to spend a little money -- a lot if necessary -- to refurnish housing which is not adequate and to construct small, but safe and sturdy, emergency dwelling units to house its students.

The university saw fit to spend large amounts of money to ready the campus for a visit by the President, and it should be ready to spend the same or greater amounts to provide adequate housing for every student.

The university owns land which it is leaving vacant, but still students are forced to sleep and study in lounges. The answer is to build, to expand, so each student can claim he has a room and a bed.

The day is near when entering freshmen will have to pitch tents on the quad if they want any kind of privacy and security accompanying a dormitory room.

Perhaps, though, the writing on the wall cannot be seen. Maybe it is time to change an outdated, and very well antiquated, housing policy.

A Goof

A special word of thanks goes to the unidentified member of the university community who took his black grease pencil and changed that sign on the quad to read "Welcome, Class of '68."

The sign originally read "Welcome, Class of '69." We know the university's looking ahead, but we don't think this year's frosh class is planning to spend five years in college.

The Other Side of the Rainbow

Tomorrow

by Andrew Porte

Dear Aunt Grace:

Well, another crop of freshmen has arrived here at Camp 'Cuse, and, as every year, they're telling us it's the best class ever. Some day they'll have to think up a new line to impress the campus.

If it's as better as '67 was to '66, it means more studying space at TC, and just another downhill year. I wonder how many freshmen will know where Jimmy Benham's is by the end of the year.

They're even cutting down on the social aspects of Orientation Week, probably trying to get the frosh all psyched up for those stimulating first classes, featuring Syracuse's prize graduate assistants.

Why, no sooner did they get here then the Goons herded them out to the fieldhouse to hear the Chancellor. No social event till the third day, and no "collegiate" fruguing until Saturday night. Someone is devoted to the cause of turning these poor, sweet kids into academically-minded students.

This, of course, is completely incongruous with the past performance of the university. Every year the administration sees fit to trade 25 (opportunities for) educations for a football team, and now they appear to be afraid of developing a few orange-beanied, beer-guzzling frosh.

I hear they may even abolish the rule on cuts because the students may even want to go to classes. Did you ever hear of anything so ridiculous? The place may even turn into a real academic institution.

And they may legalize apartments, because someone realizes that sex is the same thing in a bed or at the water tower. Booze may be legalized, because everyone's intelligent enough not to drink too much.

They may even do away with proctors for exams because they finally trust the students. Who knows, they may even do away with gut courses, because there won't be a need for them.

I can just picture it. First we reach Cornell's level. Education goes rampant. Everyone's thirst is unquenchable. Graduate students are replaced by professors, because the students are more intelligent than the pseudo-profs.

The demand for learning reaches astronomical proportions. We surpass Cornell as the students pack Maxwell Auditorium to standing room capacity for Psych 5. Syracuse reaches Harvard-Yale proportions as football is played for football's sake. Ford Foundation grants exceed donations for a new stadium. We get a higher percentage of Fulbrights than LeMoyne.

We attain the apex in American education as all speakers are given the right to appear on campus. Student government stops worrying about the food and concentrates on improving the academic scene.

They'll do away with curfews, because all the girls will be coming in early to do their daily academic chores.

The Friday night date will be exclusively library-oriented, and student pressure will keep the new multi-million dolar library open 21 hours daily. Stacks will be open, and no books will be stolen.

And then, some insignificant freshman will ask, "Wait a minute. What about booze? What about women?" And the lofty senior will answer, "They're not needed. We're hungry for education."

But the freshman will say, "My less intelligent brother, who was cum laude at Harvard, told me Harvard has booze and women and Yale has booze and women." The disbelieving senior was astonished, and within hours the shocked campus was up in arms.

"We want booze," they chanted as they stormed the Chancellor's mansion. But the Chancellor the foremost figure in American education, told them, "You've already got it. We changed the rule in 1968." The students were stunned.

Parties abounded. Every apartment exuded wine, women, song and then some. Demands for big-time football returned. Onondaga Community College cancelled the annual big game with Syracuse.

A sophomore discovered a quaint golf course named Tecumseh Club, which had a pleasant bar adjoining. Weekend life shifted there.

Students stopped going to classes. Someone began complaining about bad food. The beginning of Spring was marked with a panty raid.

The administration cracked down. "No booze and women. We are a great university on the verge of goodness," was the byword.

And the Chancellor shook his head. "It's a tragedy. Why, this is the way it was back in the early sixties, before those intelligent classes started coming here."

Yes, that's what might happen here. Thank heaven I'm graduating soon, and I can spend my last days here persuing my education in that soon-to-be-lost tradition.

I wonder if the class of '68 realizes how much lies in its hands?

Your nephew,
Harry

Honesty

To the Editor:

A great majority of the incoming freshman class is first discovering the freedom which comes with a large university. There is, unfortunately, the lack of one very important freedom essential to the maturity of everyone, and that is freedom from suspicion.

A school which does not operate on the basis of an honor system is depriving its students of a very important facet of growing up. It seems that academic liberty should mean exactly as the term implies -- liberty. Liberty to take an examination without the pressure of a proctor and liberty to feel that you are old enough to be trusted.

If we can have locks on our doors and no limit on our hours, why then can we not have the freedom of our consciences?

A student's pledge that he has neither given nor received aid during the course of an examination should be enough for any professor. It would eliminate a great deal of tension inasmuch as being observed, and it would also free the instructor from the classroom, enabling him to do something more important than watching for dishonesty.

It creates a repressive atmosphere to question someone's integrity by being present during a test, and this can only hinder the student's development of his own character.

In Tomorrow's Daily Orange

Wednesday's Daily Orange will feature a story on Anne Forrest, an ordained minister now on the dean of women's staff. Aso in the edition will be a list of men's dormitory extention numbers.

Returning for his initial column of the year will be Ken Auletta, in his familiar "O Say Can You See."

Published Monday through Friday during the academic year by the students of Syracuse University. Offices located at 200 Brooklea Drive, Fayetteville, New York.

Peter, Paul and Mary, the folk singing trio, will perform at 8:30 p.m., September 25 at the Onondaga War Memorial. Tickets are available on campus at the Corner Store and the University Hill Music Box.

Peter, Paul and Mary to Perform At Onondaga War Memorial Concert

Folk-singing trio Peter, Paul and Mary will present a concert at 8:30 p.m., Sept. 25 at the Onondaga County War Memorial.

During the two years since the group last appeared in Syracuse, they have released four long-playing record albums and were voted the top LP recording artists for 1963 by Billboard magazine. Three of their albums have sold over a million copies while the recently released fourth record is on the best-selling lists.

Also to their credit are television and nightclub appearances, and write-ups in Life, Look, Newsweek and Playboy magazines.

Peter Yarrow, Paul Stookey and Mary Travers formed the group when Peter's agent introduced him to Mary who had already been singing with Paul.

"I had been working under the aegis of Albert Grossman and when I returned to New York he introduced me to Mary and Paul," said Peter. "I wrote the arrangement for "This Train" which was the first song we did. Then we worked out the parts to "Cruel War" and it became our second song. Gradually we all began to believe we might have something to say together."

Since their command performance at the second anniversary celebration of the inauguration of the late President Kennedy in 1963, the group has toured all fifty of the United States and every Canadian Province as well as parts of the Far East and Europe.

Peter, Paul and Mary's hit single records include "Blowin' in the Wind," "Puf the Magic Dragon," "Lemon Tree," "If I Had a Hammer," "Dont Think Twice, and "Go Tell It on the Mountain."

Tickets for the concert will be on sale at the War Memorial box office, the Onondaga Music Company, the SU Corner Bookstore, and the University Hill Music Box. Ticket prices are $4.00, $3.00, and $2.00.

Status, like happiness, is more likely to accrue if one stops thinking about it.

Anouilh Play Starts Season For Regent

The Regent Theatre will offer its first play of the season with Jean Anouilh's "Thieve's Carnival" at 8:30 p.m., Sept. 24.

Directed by Dr. Joseph Golden of the SU drama department, the play was part of the first annual summer tour of the university players.

Frank Morell, Bruce MacCurdy, and John McNeill play the comedy's trio of bumbling crooks Kathy Bindert is the nonchalant as thieves, but is so bored that as thieves, bur is so bored that she invites them to be her house guests.

Others in the cast include Sue DeCicco, Jan Aspinwall, Richard Nathan, Allen Williams, George Fidel and Tom Grasso.

The play will be performed Sept. 24, 25, and 26 and also on Oct. 1, 2, and 3. Tickets are $1.50 and $2.00.

SUCE Sets 1st Meeting

Syracuse University Committee on Equality (SUCE) will hold its first meeting of the year at 7:15 p.m. today in room 307 Hall of Languages.

SUCE projects in the past have been concerned with academic freedom, racial and religious discrimination, educational and cultural inequalities and civil liberites, said Robert Cohen, SUCE president.

The committee deals with topics on campus, municipal and national concern and provides speakers, panels and films which are open to the campus.

Today's meeting will concern new projects including an expansion of the tutoring program, institution of a voter registration drive on campus and in the city and establishment of community programs aimed at reducing cultural and educational deficits, Cohen said.

Junior Exec Council Meets

Junior class executive council will meet 7 p.m. today at Alpha Epsilon Phi, 751 Comstock Ave. All members are required to attend.

The cow might be even more reticent about giving its milk if it knew someone is getting 15 cents a glass for it.

Q.

Why give your favorite student a good pen when he'll just lose it?

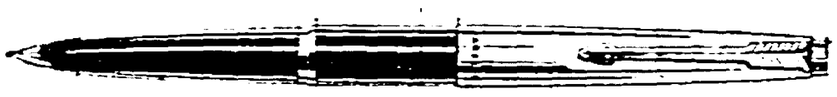
Parker won't let him lose it. If he does, it will be replaced*



* SPECIAL REPLACEMENT OFFER: If you buy your favorite student a Parker 45 (the $5 model) between now and October 17, 1964, he can protect it against loss for one full year at no extra cost. He registers its purchase by mailing one-half of the Parker 45 Registration Certificate to the insurance company listed on the certificate. Then if the pen is lost, the insurance company will replace it at no charge. All he has to do is mail the other half of the certificate, properly notarized before December 31, 1965 and describe how the pen was lost.

Here's why this is such a good pen for a student:

IT'S CONVERTIBLE. Load it with a cartridge or replace the cartridge with the ingenious little "converter" (95 cents extra) and fill it from an ink bottle. The 45 is the only pen that fills two ways. SOLID 14K GOLD POINT. Choice of seven widths from extra-fine to extra-broad. And we can replace points right on the spot.

For Studiers -- Library Hours

Syracuse University abounds with libraries, although it takes most newcomers several months if not years to become acquainted with all of them. Counting the special rooms in the Main Library and the branch libraries located in classroom buildings all over campus, there are 27 libraries containing 863,000 volumes.

For the convenience of the frosh (and those oldtimers who may have forgotten), the Daily Orange is publishing a list of all libraries, their location and hours in four installments.

Here is a list of all departments located in the main library:

SU Administration

Applications for the university are supposed to be filed by May. Even when most of the applications are on time Dye said that "the summer movement creates a problem."

During this period, late applications are accepted along with withdrawals. Because of this shuffling of applications, it is extremely difficult for the admissions office to set a figure for expected students.

Relief for the situation comes with early fall withdrawals, Dye said. After the first month of school, a balance between students and housing is reached.

Although the admissions office regrets the difficulties caused, Dye said that "no better method has been found.

"I would like to know any recommendations anyone has," said Dye.

Holland Patent

SU to Conduct Survey

The first major survey in the history of the Holland Patent Central School Disttrict will be conducted by Syracuse University's Bureau of School Service beginning this month.

The two-year cooperative survey will include all aspects of instruction in the elementary and secondary schools, Dr. James R. Manwaring, bureau director, said. The district, located eight miles north of Utica, has about 2,200 students.

Manwaring said the project is unique because most members of the Holland Patent staff will take part in the collection and analysis of data. He termed it a "major in-service professional experience" for participating staff members.

"Increasing demands for high quality educatioanl experiences coupled with major innovations in educational practice make such evaluative surveys an important process for any school," Manwaring said.

Dr. Paul M. Halverson is directing the junior-senior high school evaluation and Dr. James A. Smith is in charge of the elementary school portion. Both men have done surveys of sev- York State through the university's Bureau of School Service.

A progress report to the Holland Patent Board of Education will be made in June, 1965 on completion of the first phase of the survey, Manwaring said. When the project ends the following June, a final report will be submitted to the Board, school staff and the community.

Nearly 5,000 students have graduated from the State University College of Forestry at Syracuse since it was founded in 1911.

Housing Boss

Harrar: Greek Leader

"Discipline is only necessary until self-discipline is achieved," is the philosophy in a nutshell of newly-appointed fraternity administrator and men's housing director, Frank J. Harrar.

Harrar replaces James P. McMurray and Bruce D. Debruhl, assistants to the dean of men.

In an early change of procedure, Harrar re-instituted the yearly publication of the Fraternity President's Guidebook. It will be issued at an as yet unscheduled meeting between Harrar and members of the InterFraternity Council and fraternity presidents.

The guidebook will outline housing rules, fraternity rosters and staff listings for the dean of men's office IFC Judicial Board and Student Court.

Harrar will describe the administration's position toward fraternities, list procedural and administrative changes at the meeting and inform the house presidents of the new communications system established between the dean of men's office and fraternities.

FRANK J. HARRAR

A box for each president will be located in Harrar's office for directives and information for fraternities.

Looking to the future, Haarar said he favors a disciplinary system that "constantly strengthens itself by making an image exemplary in the eyes of the university and the general public."

"As long as fraternities move in this positive direction, they are solidifying their position," he added.

Harrar came to Syracuse in 1960 as a resident advisor working for a master's degree in English education. He received this degree in 1961 and continued to serve the university as an instructor and dormitory director for Sadler Hall.

He is a graduate of Purdue University ('55) and later served as a sergeant in the Marine Corps for four years. Harrar had no fraternity affiliations at Purdue.

WAER (Radio SU) Goes Back on Airwaves Monday

WAER, the Syracuse University FM radio station returns to the air Monday program director Dan Stone announced today.

In addition to the 12 supervisory staff members, the station expects about 150 students will work part time at the station.

WAER operates about 66 hours weekly. With the exception of the engineers who have special technical training and the faculty supervisor, Richard Averson, the student employees work without pay.

The FM station, which went on the air in 1949, was the nation's first low power boradcast facility of its type.

With an effective radiated power of 3,500 watts, the WAER signal covers a 60-mile radius. The transmitter is located in Day Hall atop Mount Olympus, the highest point in Syracuse.

A wide variety of student produced shows and programs from the National Association of Educational broadcasters network are included in the log of programs.

The major program change over last year's schedule is a stronger emphasis on popular or "good music," Stone said.

WAER is located at 88.3 megacycles on the FM dial and will be on the air from 4 p.m. - 12:45 a.m. Monday through Friday and 1:00 p.m. - 12:45 a.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Presumably the third towel would be marked: "Whose?"

WHY WE CARRY GANT

There's more than fabric superiority in Gant. In addition, "needled-into the ways and woof of every Gant shirt" — there's flair-fit-show — three vital inherents that make all the difference when a man wears a Gant.

We chose Gant because they take shirt making seriously. They're hard to please (like we are) when it comes to fit of collar, its roll, its profile—how much it shows above the suit collar. They're fastidious about the way the body of the shirt drapes and folds. All must integrate to achieve that viable ingredient which gives comfort and aplomb. In substance, Gant shirts are keyed to the discerning tastes of well groomed men who appreciate quality. These men are our customers.

Low AND Inside

By BILL CRONAUER
Sports Editor

The world didn't come to an end Saturday afternoon. Nor, for that matter, did SU football hopes.

Granted we were defeated by Boston College. Granted we lost our national prominence, at least for the moment.

Around the campus yesterday one heard comments such as "bring on the basketball season" and "cancel your trip to Miami."

Our problem here at Syracuse University is that we have become too used to winning. We can't accept defeat. We won't accept defeat.

Of course no one wants to lose. That's natural. The only trouble in most football games is that one team has to lose. . .and Saturday that team was Syracuse.

To many students, perhaps the most painful result of the opening-game setback will be our omission from the national rankings. With little doubt, it will take at least three straight wins to put us in the top 20.

This angers many grid fiends, who try weeks in advance to estimate where we'll be in the polls if we win by so many points and such another team loses.

Everyone wants to be top dog. Last year Syracuse posted an 8-2 record and finished 12th in the country. And still people complained: "We could have done better." But we could have done worse, too. Example — 1962 with a 5-5 mark.

Let's face facts. Our loss to BC ended any chance of being no. 1. But it certainly didn't eliminate the possibility of a good season or a bowl bid.

Bring on Kansas!

INTRA MEET

All intramural managers have been asked to meet at 7:15 p.m. Thursday in the Trophy Room of the Men's Gym. Fall sports under discussion will include touch football, swimming, rifle, bowling and cross country.

SU Lineup Changed

Kansas Worries Ben

By JIM FLURFELD

Listening to Ben Schwartzwalder and Kansas coach Jack Mitchell talk about Saturday's game, you get the idea that neither thinks he can win.

"Syracuse always has a lot of power," Mitchell explained over the phone at Monday's weekly press conference. "Even if they didn't have such fast backs, which they do, their line would still give ours a tough time."

But Ben has another viewpoint. "We considered Boston College a real good team and you saw what happpened. We think Kansas is even better."

Kansas, which beat Syracuse 10-0 last year, has All-American halfback Gale Sayers back for another season and, according to Orange scout Roy Simmons, "He is the most exciting back around today."

Last week Kansas beat Texas Christian, 7-3, and Sayers was held to 18 yards. "T.C.U. played its defense to the outside and took the running room away from the speed boys," Simmons explained. "That's why Sayers was held, but you can't hold that fellow too long."

Sayers isn't Schwartzwalder's only worry, though. "Our defense scares us. A couple of boys we were counting heavily on were big disappointments," he explained.

Gerry Everling, who is still having knee trouble, won't be starting on defense next week, instead sophomore John Krock will get the nod.

Line-backer was another position that disatisfied the coach. "Only Johnson (Murray) did a satisfactory job. Against Kansas we'll probably start Jim Cheyunski and Johnson. We're still looking for the third line-backer."

"And the defensive backfield is another place we'll have to make some changes. I think Hal Rooney will see a lot more action at safety."

Schwartzwalder was pleased with a few players, though, especially Herb Stecker at defensive end and tackle Dave Archer.

Summing up the defensive situation, Schwartzwalder said, "We'll be working on tackling all week. We didn't do much of it Saturday."

Offensively, the biggest chance will come at right halfback where Ron Oyer will replace Nat Duckett. Ducky is still limping from the broken leg he suffered last year and Oyer has been looking good in practice.

On the offensive line, Schwartzwalder praised Gary Bugenhagen and Harris Wienke, both sophomores. "Jim Cripps did a reasonable job, too, considering how badly his knees were hurting," Schwartzwalder continued. "Howie McCard and Pat Killorin also played fairly well."

Tom Wilhlem was hurt, but is expected to play Saturday.

Comeback—James Nance; Debut—Soph Floyd Little

Three years ago, Jim Nance came to Syracuse from Indiana (Pa.) Joint High School billed as the man to fill Ernie Davis's cleats.

He had been a high school All-American in football and a wrestling champ. He was a very solid 6-1, 225-pounder and looked to be a sure-fire All-American within two or three years.

But, at SU, Jim has flattened opponents much more successfully on the wrestling mats than on the gridiron. As a sophomore he won the NCAA heavyweight wrestling championship.

As Syracuse's first team fullback he gained 117 yards in 84 carries and scored six points.

Last year Nance was handicapped by an early season injury and totaled but 237 yards rushing, while scoring 13 points.

Now, after two somewhat disappointing seasons, he has finally begun to live up to expectations.

Against BC last weekend, Big Jo carried 18 times for 84 yards, in the process he displayed the power running characteristic of Jim Brown, as often two or three tacklers were necessary to bring him down. The exhibition brought words of praise from coach Ben Schwartzwalder.

This is Jo's year for a comeback.

JIM NANCE

FLOYD LITTLE

As in past years, one of Syracuse's most outstanding football players is again wearing number 44. This season the jersey belongs to 22-year-old sophomore speedster Floyd Little.

In his varsity debut against Boston College, Little gained 82 yards and hauled in a 36-yard pass setting up SU's second touchdown.

Coach Ben Schwartzwalder, who was understandably satisfied with the rookie's performance, has already compared Little favorably with Jim Brown and the late Ernie Davis. A glance at Floyd's previous records gives another indication of his ability.

Last year the 5-11 187-pound halfback led the frosh team in scoring, pass receiving and rushing as he averaged eight yards per carry.

Before coming to SU, Little starred at Bordentown (N. J.) Military Institute. While there, he racked up 1237 yards rushing, averaging 11.5 yards per carry and scoring 24 touchdowns. Little also broke the state record for the 100 yard dash as he clocked a :09.7.

Though he is smaller than both Brown and Davis, Little's speed, fakes and quick changes of pace make him a hard man to bring down. This year number 44 could well be Syracuse's most exciting back.

Profile in Defeat

Editor's Note — The following is the first in a series of question and answer sessions between DO sportswriter Howard Schneider and coach Ben Schwartzwalder. In the future the DO will welcome questions from the student body.

Q—Why after your ground game seemed to be working so effectively did you switch to King and the pass play deep in Boston College territory.?

A—Simply, and without philosophizing, all I can say is that any call that works is a good call and any call that fails is a bad one. When we got deep in their territory we called the pass, it failed, and therefore it was a bad call. I take full responsibility and blame no one else but myself. If it was executed properly it might have worked, but it didn't. Their defensive setup made the play attractive, but if I had itt o do again I'd have run the ball.

Q—What were the circumstances surrounding the two ineffective kicks?

A—The poor punts were due to a combination of two factors. First we didn't have any real strong protection and second Towne was a little slow in getting off the ball. On the blocked punt Duckett's man got through and Holman failed to pick him up. It's the first punt we've had blocked since 1959.

Q—Will you radically change your style of play against Kansas Saturday?

A—No, basically we'll play the same game Saturday. We'll still use two platoons. What's really worrying us is our defensive unit. We can correct our offensive play much more readily than our defensive performance. We were disappointed in our linebacking and pass defense.

Q—Do you think Boston College is really a serious contender in the East, or was the game somewhat of a fluke?

A—If we don't play better than we did Saturday we won't win a game all year. We've got a real tough schedule. As for Boston College, I'm not taking anything away from them, but I wouldn't mind playing them nine more times.

Q—What effect has the loss had on the team, and do you think they can rebound?

A—We all felt terrible after the game. Now, we'll just have to work a little harder. I don't think this one game will make or break our season. If we lose to Kansas the bottom might fall out, but I think the boys can come back.

Stern at Helm

SS Launches Year

By MARLENE CIMONS

Grading, athletic policy, housing, and voter registration will be among the issues discussed at the opening meeting of—check one please—(a) Student Senate, (b) Student Legislature or (c) Joint Student Legislature at 7:15 p.m. today in Maxwell Auditorium.

Robert Stern, speaker of "it," will deliver a short address and introduce keynote speaker Dr. George Wiley, assistant professor of chemistry. Also scheduled is a report on the Student Union.

The main purpose of the meeting is not to select a name for the organization, but to orient students to procedures and responsibilities. Students need not be elected representatives to attend, and all interested students are urged to be present.

Committee chairmen will be selected today, and committee members will be chosen at the next meeting. A backlog of legislative material also is set for discussion at the second meeting.

"I have great hopes for the legislature this year," Stern commented Tuesday. "I hope that it will be a progressive group which will work for the best interest of the student body with integrity and a willingness to work hard for what it believes to be best."

Last year, Speaker Jay Litwin called upon the administration to consider the reaction of the student body before taking any action.

He also demanded to know the role of student government in the university, enumerating what he considered 10 strikes the administration had committed.

His strikes included the university's disciplinary probation ruling for students arrested during civil rights demonstrations, the controversy which arose after football star Gerry Everling's release from probation, the College of Liberal Arts classes on the day of national mourning for late President John F. Kennedy and the basketball game seating for students.

Litwin also listed the conflict

Student Gov't Faces Unpredictable Future

By JESSE SMITH

Another unpredictable year of student government begins with tonight's Student Senate meeting.

Student government on the Hill is by nature unpredictable—and often chaotic. Despite a constitution and senate rules, the true function and power of SG and its parts remain clouded.

The newly ratified constitution, in effect since last spring, is an attempt to clarify the relationship of SG's three parts to each other and to the campus.

The 1964 constitution defines the three branches as the Executive Department, Student Senate (known until this year as Joint Student Legislature) and Student Court.

In President Carl Corrallo is vested the responsibility for executing senate laws, representing the student body on any administration or other committee where it has a voice and faculty or students any requests or demands raised by any part of SG or the student body.

The latter provision reflects a lesson learned in last semester's food service crises.

An impatient and impassioned JSL, determined to speed improvements in eating conditions, appealed directly to students for a boycott of dining halls.

This led to a bitter split between Speaker Jay Litwin and President James Morris, who was not consulted and who favored a more moderate course. Student Government found itself bogged down in bitterness and disunity.

All legislative power rests with Student Senate. Confusion and frustration arise from the fact that this power, whatever it actually is, seems rather slight.

The Senate is the forum for student representation, student complaints, student demands. But this representation can only be translated into action through the SG executive. And to make major

New Men's Dorm Continues Rising

By PAT TRACEY

Running right on schedule, the new men's residence hall being constructed near Sadler Hall is planned for a fall 1965 completion.

Robert Secor, of King and King architecture firm, said Tuesday that "as of this date, they have completed up to the 11th floor and should have half of the 12th floor poured by Friday."

The 21-floor structure is also meeting the planned financial estimate and may even run under the expected amount, Secor said.

The building will house 567 men in single and partitioned double rooms. Lounges and lobby areas with a main desk, mail boxes, a small lounge, snack bar, vending machine room and a recreation room will be located on the first floor.

The second floor will contain a T-shaped main lounge which can be reached by an open staircase from the first floor. The director's suite, a family room, library and the director's office will also be on this floor.

Three high-speed elevators will be in use to transport students to the upper floors. A special feature of the building will be a private dining hall on the 21st floor with a small kitchen and a lounge with a live fireplace.

Although Secor did not know who would have use of the private dining hall, he said that he thought it might be used to replace the private dining hall in Sadler which will probably accomodate the added new dorm students eating there.

Another feature of the structure will be an underground parking lot planned to hold 164 cars. Residents will be able to go from the new dorm to Sadler by way of the garage and an underground tunnel.

Each floor is expected to hold about 30 men, Secor said, and will have a small kitchenette, a lounge and a study room.

Laundry rooms, a hobby room and the housekeepers office will be in the basement.

A large plaza terrace will extend about 14 feet above street level on the Stadium place side of the building. It will have a pre-cast wall which will be suitable for seating. There also will be a ten-foot-wide planting area on the west side.

Although the inside color scheme has not been decided yet, the outside of the building has been envisioned as beige with a dark bronz trim. Window glass will also be bronze-colored instead of the gray used in several university buildings.

Panhel Changes Fall Upperclass Rush Procedure

By SANDY LAPIN

A proposal for new fall upperclass sorority rush procedure was passed by an overwhelming majority at the first Panhellenic council meeting Tuesday night in the Women's Bldg.

The new plan, combining formal and informal rush, begins Friday, Oct. 2. Fifteen-minute open house parties where coeds will dress informally will be held Friday night and Saturday will depend upon the number of houses opening for rush.

Both sororities and rushees will cut for the next round of parties following the Saturday affairs. IBM cards will be used.

The second round of parties will be held Sunday afternoon. Coeds should wear a dress and heels. The sororities will informal rush for the rest of the week.

In informal rushing, the sorority calls the girls to visit their house for dinner or coffee rather than for a formal party. This, in the opinion of Susan Sommers (Phi Sigma Sigma), Panhel rush chairman, "will permit upperclass girls to become more acquainted with the house before she is bid by the sorority."

Sometime after this rush houses will be able to open for open-bid rushing which will last throughout the rest of the semester.

An upperclass rush convocation will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 1, in the Alumnae Lounge of the Women's Building. All instructions and details about rush will be given.

Other questions concerning rush will be answered by Miss Sommers at ext. 2633.

Not all sororities will open for upperclass rush. Only those houses which have not yet filled their quotas will do so. The Daily Orange will print a list when they are announced later this week.

The procedure for spring freshman rush is entirely different. Several rounds of parties are held by all sororities, after each of which both sororities and rushees limit their their choices. The rushees go back to only two formal parties, which are the last round of rushing, and bidding follows immediately.

Watson Dorm Stages Raid; Goal: Dingleman, Not Silk

"Is the Dingleman on his way out?," is the question being asked in Watson Dormitory this morning after a Tuesday evening "dingle raid" succeeded in driving away one of the mobile food vendors.

Watson freshmen, annoyed by the sound of the trucks' motors as they tried to conform to the ways of college studying, began chanting "Down with the Dingleman" shortly after 9 p.m.

Within a few minutes a crowd estimated at 250 students had gathered in the Watson courtyard protesting against the trucks' noises. One student carried a sign reading, "Watson, Si; Dingleman, No."

One of the trucks, reported to be the noisiest, promptly left for the evening, and angry Watson residents were circulating a petition protesting against further "commotion" caused by the food vans.

SU's $46 Million Budget In Comptroller's Hands

By CAROL RUBRIGHT
Junior Editor

A corporation which hires the largest body of employes in the city of Syracuse is located on property with a selling value of over $100 million.

The corporation is Syracuse University, the property the campus, and the man responsible for the final form of its $46 million budget is Victor J. Colway, the comptroller, or chief accounting officer, of the university.

Lighting up a cigarette in room 7 of the business office, Colway explained that, large as the budget appears, Syracuse "has always been a boot-strap operation."

"Our endowment is only $30 million," he said. "Harvard's is $1 billion," or more than 33 times larger than ours.

Because of the relatively small endowment, Colway said, SU has developed into a go-getting concern which earns its own way by operating evening division schools and investing endowment money in bonds and real estate.

For example the university owns the Sheraton-Russell Hotel building in New York City and the University Building in downtown Syracuse.

"But after all," Colway said, "New York University owns the whole Mueller Macaroni Co."

A 1949 graduate of Syracuse, Colway points with pride to the university's building record: "We go as fast or faster than any university I know in putting up housing."

"We're planning for a new dorm every two years," he said.

Colway leafed through an inch and a half thick typescript which turned out to be this year's budget.

"Since 1960 we've increased the budget by almost $20 million," he said.

He pointed out that his office of 16 years, located in that maze of prefabs in the shadow of the Newhouse Center, will be torn down within three years to make way for the communications complex.

Colway came to Syracuse following his World War II service in the ski troops in Italy and has been here ever since. He lives with his wife and four children in Camillus and said he is already hoping that SU will be the college choice of his oldest daughter.

They're Off And Running

What we choose to call SS, what Robby Stern is calling SL and what the campus knows best as JSL, holds its first meeting of the year tonight. If Stern holds true to form, the fireworks will fly.

Student government on the campus is young, and the developing legislature is still becoming accustomed to its growing powers. As the years pass, the speakership has gradually become the most powerful position in the government for influencing student opinion.

If Stern can maintain the hypnotic hold that Jay Litwin held on the legislature, the group will certainly not remain quiescent. But we have yet to see what a man of Stern's convictions will do with power like Litwin's.

What Stern and the legislature must do this year is never forget that they represent the entire student family, and they must never act in any form that will not serve the students.

There are legitimate areas for the group to investigate. Certainly the housing problem can be investigated. Another attempt can be made at pressuring the university to cover the Mount Olympus steps. Academics can be discussed.

But the group must never betray its trust to the students. It must always act in good faith for the best interests of the students. It must conscientiously consider the feelings of every student on the campus.

The legislature must never turn into the arm of any group other than that of the student body. It must act diligently, and in accord with past actions.

The repsonsibility lies wwith the individual senators, from the freshmen to the seniors. They must continue to assure the student body that the legislature is their voice and their "weapon" if it is ever needed as such.

The status of the student in the developing university is shrinking dangerously. It is the task of both Stern and the legislature to put the student in his proper perspective with the rest of the university complex.

A Pause To Talk

Sen. Kenneth Keating took a few minutes off from his rapid campaign pace Monday to chat a few minutes with three representatives of the Daily Orange.

It became quite evident in the discussion that Sen. Keating is a man deeply concerned with the people of New York State. We unfortunately cannot say that about his primary opponent for the job of representing the people in Washington.

The white-haired Rochester Republican is apparently concerned with each and every citizen of the state. He has no future political goal; he merely wants to serve the people as he has done in the past.

Sen. Keating did not have to be briefed on what goes on in New York before he entered the race. He had served the people for 18 years and was well-acquainted with the state's problems.

Sen. Keating knows the problem of this election. He is fighting for his political life. Moreover, he is fighting for New York State and the people of New York State.

The tragedy of the campaign is that the Democratic Party couldn't find one man in this vast state worthy of opposing Keating. If the senator is that good, then he certainly deserves another chance.

And yet this man who is fighting tooth-and-nail for the state took some precious minutes of campaign time to speak with three college students, whose residences and voting status he didn't know.

Here is a fine man.

O Say Can You See

A Carpetbagger

By Ken Auletta

Sen. Kenneth B. Keating is a saddened man bravely enduring the indignity of being treated as if he were a carpethagger in his own home state. This is the due of a man who has ofered himself as a sacrifice to the Kennedy Emotion, and as a target of local Republican spite.

This man came to Syracuse on Monday, passing through city streets naked of any acknowledgement of his existence save a tiny converted store which serves, sitting across the street from the library of the John Birch Society, as this city's headquarters for his independent campaign for re-election; and a small slice of a large billboard featuring the names of Goldwater and three local candidates in bold print, and the name of Keating in fine print below.

For a United States Senator to be treated as if he were a carpethagger is only embarrassing, but to be treated as something less than Hughes, Richlman and Terry, is truly insulting.

After addressing a reasonably large and warm luncheon audience, the senator retired to a tenth floor suite at the Hotel Syracuse, where he was to hold a press conference. The door to the suite was open, the senator and his lectern embroidered by its arc, the foyer leading from the Senator to a lobby congested by visiting delegates to an insurance convention, none of whom bothered to lend either squeal or ear to his efforts. The burden for maintaining the appearance of an audience fell upon a gathering on nine, one-third of which consisted of the senator's staff.

Later, at the Yates Hotel, home of Republican headquarters in the city of Syracuse, the receptionist responded that she did not know if the senator had yet arrived. Roaming about this empty floor, another open door revealed seven men languidly conversing, while in a corner stood Sen. Kenneth Keating, free now of his smile, and posing for pictures with two other men. A youngish lady easily entered the room, and in one of this day's few genuine notes of enthusiasm, asked where the senator was. The senator was now posing alone in another corner and his aide waved and yelled for her to come over and "make the senator smile."

The senator smiled, and as he did the thought occurred that these hotels were indeed a refuge for him; protecting him not from the anxious recognition of crowds, but from the terrible realization that there weren't any.

Kenneth Keating will suffer defeat come November 3rd, reminding us once again that the weight of emotions lay heavier than those of thought. It makes little difference that this senator, even in the shadow of Sen. Javits, has compiled a good record. Nor that he is conducting an honest and intelligent campaign.

Nor, and most important, that he one of the few remaining islands of progressive thought in a Republican party which is now a sea of radical ideology. An ideology whose fervidness prevents it from that spirit of compromise despised by all who see greater morality in maintaining the purity of one's convictions than in the partial implementation of them—on which it can accurately be said this nation rests.

To remove the Kenneth Keatings from the Republican Party is to risk giving the voters a real choice in national elections, to remove the stabilizer from our governmental process, causing government to act like a seesaw, jerking suddenly up and then down; removing that spirit of "me-tooism" which allows us to build, however slowly, rather than tear apart.

The people of New York State are truly afflicted by a senatorial campaign that can be nothing but an emotional orgy; or rather, the people of New York state truly afflict themselves. For in the person of Robert Kennedy there is a spot for each of us. A comforting home to which each of us can migrate in order to do penance for a murder that we did not commit, but for which we shall pay.

The argument against Robert Kennedy does itself injustice by relying on the Babbitry of decrying a man's ambitions, even though the man has clearly demonstrable abilities, by screeching about his residency when the entire Eastern seaboard is not so much composed of separate states as of a sprawling megalopolis. The real argument against Robert Kennedy is one that is for Kenneth Keating.

But make no difference, when a United States senator is reduced to clasping the hand of the editor of the Daily Orange and pumping it again and again while thanking it for its editorial support, we are witnessing not politics but pathos.

POST TIME

Honorary Welcomes Members

Boar's Head, campus dramatic honorary, opened its first meeting of the season by tapping eleven new undergraduate members.

The new members are: Susan DeCicco, Steven Gould, Sara Kapp, Michael Krawitz, Sandra Land, Nancy LaPeter, Jean McNeil, Frank Morell, Steven Pascal, John Pear, and Jane Reback.

Also announced at the tapping were eight honorary memberships. These graduates and instructors are: David Hamilton, John Workman, Marlow Burt, Fay Golden, Ed Roman, Thomas Crasso, Art Kucinski and Carolyn Kozlowski. Mrs. Kozlowski is secretary for the drama department and was given the special honor for her involvement with the group.

Most of the present membership of Boar's Head are now working on the coming production of Jean Anouilh's "Thieves Carnival." The play will be presented at 8:30 p.m. on Sept. 24, 25, 26 and again on Oct. 1, 2, and 3. Tickets are available at the Regent Theatre box office.

The John Gielgud production of "Hamlet," direct from the Lunt-Fontanne Theatre on Broadway, will be presented at 2 p.m. and 8:15 p.m. today at RKO Keith's Theatre. Two performances will be given only. The movie stars Richard Burton, Hume Cronyn, Alfred Drake, Eileen Herlie, William Redfield, George Rose and George Voskovec. Tickets are on sale at the RKO Keith's box office and prices are $1.50 for the matinee and $2.00 for the evening performance.

Dance Lessons Offered

It may take two to tango, but for some of us a few lessons would make it easier. Any student who wants to improve his tango, bossa nova, ay bo le, cha cha, swing, or rhumba, should attend the free ballroom dance course offered on campus this fall.

Registration is 7:30-8:30 p.m. today in the recreation lounge of the Women's Bldg. The first class will immediately follow registration. Classes will meet 7:30-9 p.m. every Wednesday evening for seven weeks, ending November 11.

Students with or without experience who wish to assist as instructors should contact the director of the class, Walt Medicis at 7:30 p.m. or call ext. 2283, 2284.

Somehow the know-it-all never is burdened by the avalanche of knowledge he has on any subject.

Caught in Passing

Back to Reality

by Jeff Zients

We just got an exclusive advanced publication of the Goldwater inaugural address., It reads "10, 9, 8, 7, 6, 5...." Someone said Barry is the only man in the world who can stand in the Gaza Strip and be fired upon from both sides. Meanwhile Johnson is the first President in American history to put the country in his wife's name. As for me I'll stick with Mort Sahl who said, "Vote no! Let's keep the white house empty for four years."

Bad taste department: Strolling along the Boardwalk in Atlantic City during the convention we noticed stores selling a wooden plaque reading "Special delivery from heaven" It's some perverted poet's idea of sentiment in the form of a letter to Jackie Kennedy from J. F. K. in heaven. It reads, "Hi, I didn't mean to go so soon, Little Patrick says hi etc. We questioned a proprietor and she said "I think they are in poor taste too, sonny, but they sell like hotcakes!"

This month's Realist predicts the Warren Commission will report John F. Kennedy died of natural causes...Speaking of the commission we heard attorney Mark Lane on "Who Killed Kennedy" in the village last month.Frightening! Most obnoxious character in summer television department: Les Crane.....deeply saddened by the sudden passing of Gracie Allen....she was a fine comic and, from what we have read, a fine women...

WAER will present an exclusive interview with class disc jockey William B William of New Yorks W N E W on the first Odyssey show of the season come October third... Robert Welch livened up "Meet The Press"...response to his quote calling Eisenhower a Commie...."But I.." To those critics of this column may I remind you that extremism in the pursuit of mediocrity is no vice.....

Tearing up a nice new street is no fit job for a sentimental digger.

British Architect Visits SU

A British architect will be visiting critic at Syracuse University this fall, according to D. Kenneth Sargent, dean of the School of Architecture.

Robert Jordan, of Birmingham, England, will teach fourth year architecture design. He will be in Syracuse Oct. 1-Jan. 14. While on campus, Jordan will lecture on medieval and nineteenth century architecture. He also will speak to the Syracuse Society of Architects.

Jordan received his formal education at the King Edwards Association School in London. Later he was a studio master and taught history, landscape and design in London.

He was Hoffman Wood Professor in the University of Leeds 1960-1963. Currently he is an associate of the Royal Institute of British Architects.

A recipient of the Tite Prize, Pugin Prize Honors, and the Prix de Rome Honors, Jordan is the author of articles in many architectural journals. Among his published works are "The English House" and "The European Architect."

New Style Dorm: 'Really Flush'

By SUSAN LYON

"Life in a toilet bowl? It's really quite flush-er-plush. Seriously, I love it."

This comment coming from coed Ellen Hammond Tuesday could have been made by any one of 416 coeds who are the first occupants of Haven Hall.

The $3.48-million dormitory, located in the 400 block of Comstock avenue, is actually the second Haven Hall.

The first Haven was demolished in March, 1963, to make room for the first building of the Newhouse Communications Center.

Both dorms were named for the late Rev. Erastus O. Haven, second chancellor of Syracuse University. Chancellor William P. Tolley said the naming of the present Haven is in keeping with "the university policy to keep names of buildings in perpetuity."

Dr. Haven was noted by historians as "a scholarly gentleman of fine personality and gracious manner." Historian Frank Smalley said, "Haven brought to his office a large experience and a fine reputation for scholarship and efficiency. His influence on the community and the university was great."

Haven was known not only to this university, but to the University of Michigan and Northwestern University as well. He was president of these colleges before coming to Syracuse.

A year after leaving Syracuse, in 1881, Haven died while serving as bishop of the Methodist Church in San Francisco.

Haven would have been surprised to see the new hall named in his honor for the architecture is certainly different from that which he knew.

Designed by King & King, a Syracuse architectural firm, the building ranges from eight stories on its east side to 11 on the west, curved and tailored to the Comstock avenue hillside.

Fashioned of red brick and limestone, the building houses 416 students and their resident advisors, in double, single, and triple rooms. The plush dorm has wall-to-wall carpeting in all rooms and corridors. A lounge and kitchenette sit in the penthouse atop the structure.

Also in the building, for the convenience of the students, is a dining hall which save many a coed the unpleasant trip through the snow to another cafeteria.

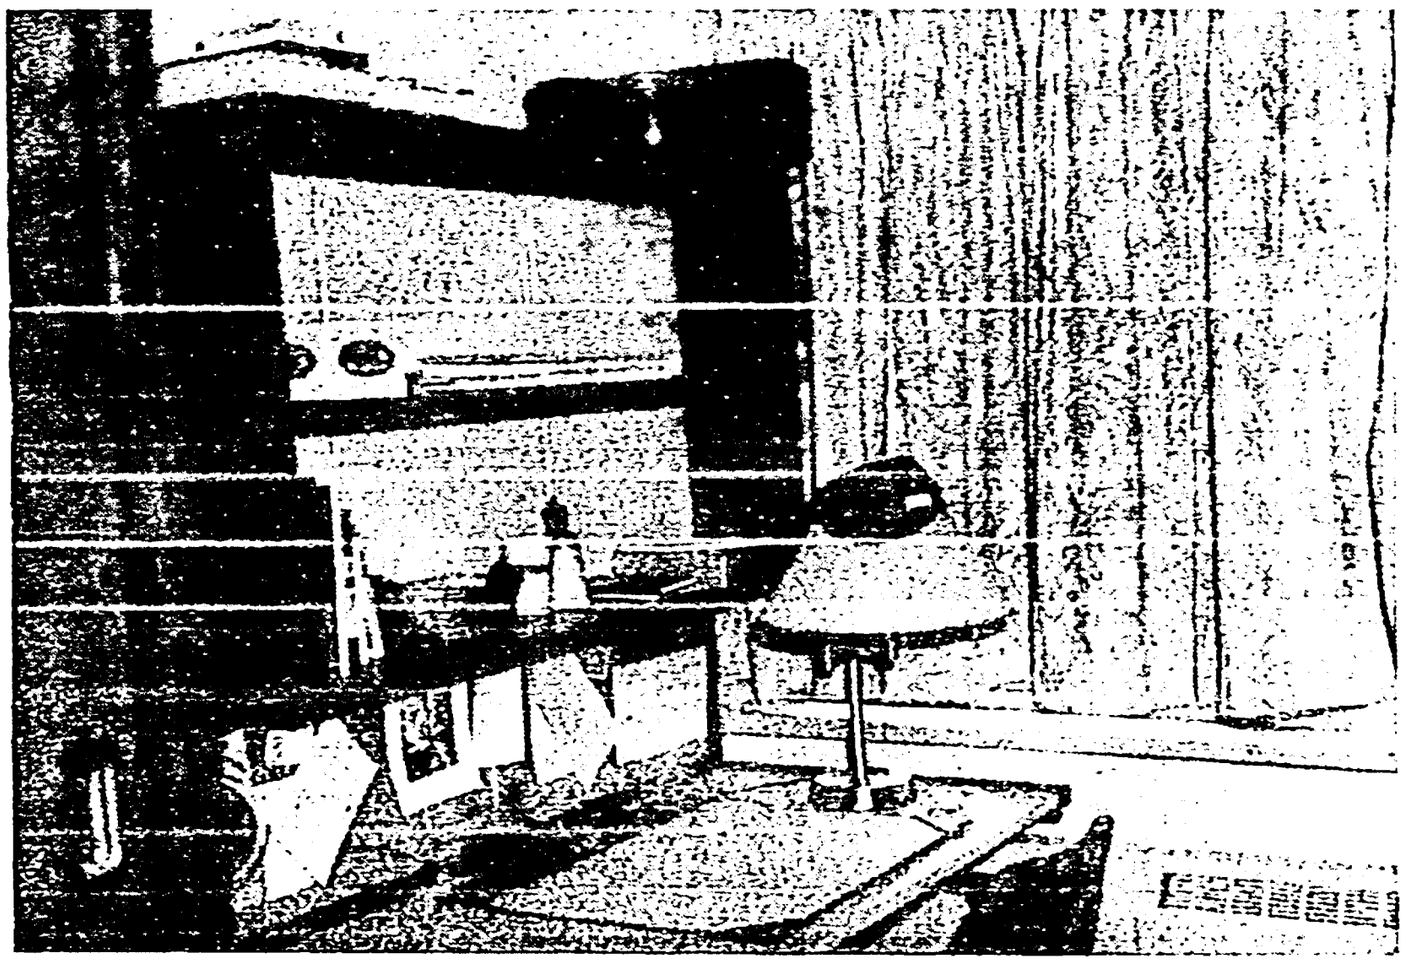
On the huge wall by a staircase leading from the entrance lounge to the dining hall hangs a mural, "The Cycle," painted by Kenneth Callahan of Seattle, who was a visiting professor on the Hill this summer.

Student comments on the new dorm were generally favorable.

"The designers have succeeded in cutting down the institutional look and feel of this dorm," said Miss Hammond, a freshman. "Living at Haven has, I think, been a real factor in helping me feel at home here at SU."

A member of the class of '66 had this to say: "Haven's location is a great—the rooms though are small and the walls between rooms are too thin. There isn't this problem on the Mount."

"Food service is much better than in Sims Hall. But the cottages have a homier atmosphere. Kissing a boy goodnight—UGH! There are to many lights and other people. But there are advantage--washing machines and no walking to the cafeteria.," said Diane Janiga, a sophomore.



Haven Hall Inside

Wall-to-wall carpeting is an appealing feature to the 416 coeds who inhabit the new Haven Hall. Modern furniture, built into the walls for convenience and utilization of all available space, make this dorm as luxurious as a new hotel. Another asset is the adjoining dining hall which spares long walks in Syracuse's cold, unpredictable weather.

Q.

Why give your favorite student a good pen when he'll just lose it?

Parker won't let him lose it. If he does, it will be replaced*

* SPECIAL REPLACEMENT OFFER: If you buy your favorite student a Parker 45 (the $5 model) between now and October 17, 1964, he can protect it against loss for one full year at no extra cost. He registers its purchase by mailing one-half of the Parker 45 Registration Certificate to the insurance company listed on the certificate. Then if the pen is lost, the insurance company will replace it at no charge. All he has to do is mail the other half of the certificate, properly notarized before December 31, 1965 and describe how the pen was lost.

Here's why this is such a good pen for a student:

IT'S CONVERTIBLE. Load it with a cartridge or replace the cartridge with the ingenious little "converter" (95 cents extra) and fill it from an ink bottle. The 45 is the only pen that fills two ways. SOLID 14K GOLD POINT. Choice of seven widths from extra-fine to extra-broad. And we can replace points right on the spot.

Parker 45 Convertible $5

Joins Women's Staff

Minister Turned Advisor

By JOAN KLEIN AND PAT TRACEY

At least one member of the Syracuse University community has been eagerly looking forward to the beginning of the academic year.

Anne Forrest, newly appointed member of the dean of women's staff as a personal administrator, said she would "welcome any coed who has questions regarding academic and vocational concerns to seek me out."

An ordained minister turned academic and vocational advisor, Miss Forrest said that her desire is "not to do something for the students, but with them."

After receiving her bachelor of music education degree from SU, she studied for the ministry, obtaining a bachelor of divinity degree form Newton Theological Seminary in Newton, Mass.

She said that her goal at the time was to work with delinquents and the mentally retarded as an institutional chaplain.

While in the seminary, she did group work and counseling with college-age youth. This experience influenced her decision to take a master's degree in education and enter college student personnel on a full time basis, she said.

ANNE FORREST

As a minister, Miss Forrest said she enjoyed working primarily with young adults.

"My experience as a college student enabled me to understand the anxieties and concerns peculiar to this group. I see the quest for self-development not simply as one stage in the growth process, but instead, as a life's work," she said.

Miss Forrest voiced a concern for students who neglect to use placement services offered by the university. She said she believes that many more coeds could benefit from the program.

Referring to SU since her undergraduate years, Miss Forrest said she noticed little difference.

"The areas of emphasis and conflict and the student experiences may be different—for example, the greater importance placed on graduate school and vocational choices — but the depth of anxiety in no greater," she said.

NYS High School Press to Attend ESSPA Convo

More than 700 New York State high school students and advisors are expected to attend the 27th annual convention of the Empire State School Press Association here Friday and Saturday.

Registration for delegates will begin Friday morning at the Newhouse Communications Center. Tours of the Center will follow.

Wesley C. Clark, dean of the School of Journalism, will welcome high schools at the opening session in Hendricks Chapel. Guest speaker will be Professor Edmund Arnold of the School of Journalism. An expert in graphic arts, he is author of The Student Journalist, a high school textbook.

Other activities scheduled for Friday are scholarship examinations in current events and news writing and talks by Journalism School faculty on various aspects of communications.

Lauriel Deutsch, Syracuse sophomore, and Carol Schneider, SU freshman, will conduct the scholarship examinations.

Two special events, a photography clinic and a yearbook workshop, headed by Fred A. Demarest and Wayne Ackermann, respectively, are scheduled for Friday afternoon. Demarest heads the photography program at SU. Ackermann is director of Yearbook Services at Intercollegiate Press, Inc.

The Syracuse Superintendent of schools, Franklyn S. Barry will speak on the importance of the school publication in the school and community at the advisers' luncheon Friday.

Concluding Friday's activities will be an awards banquet at Sims Hall. Charles W. Ferguson, senior editor of The Reader's Digest, will deliver the major address. Presentations of awards and winners of the scholarship exams and newspaper contests will end the program.

Scheduled for Saturday morning are a business meeting for advisers and two one-hour discussion sessions with representative from the Syracuse Herald-Journal, the SU School of Journalism faculty and students of communications. Jerry Evarts, columnist for the Buffalo Courier-Express, will discuss writing techniques at these sessions.

Delegates to the ESSPA Convention will attend the Saturday afternoon Syracuse-Kansas football game.

Syracuse 10 Staff to Meet

Syracuse 10, the Hill literary magazine, begins the 1964-65 season with its first meeting at 3 p.m. today in 200 Newhouse Communications Center.

All students interested in joining either the editorial or business staff are urged to attend, announced Editor-In-Chief Michael Morgan.

Any students unable to attend the meeting should leave numbers in the student publications office in the basement of Winchell Hall.

changes is a slow, sometimes discouraging process.

Finally, SG consists of Student Court, which also exercises a rather limited power. Consisting of six men and six women, and headed by Chief Justice Frank Richmond it decides cases involving SG constitution or elections. It handles those disciplinary matters referred to it by the personnel deans, deciding what sentence is to be imposed.

Crisis and dissension could strike student government during the 1964-65 school year. But leaders of the two branches seem determined to avoid another feud between the radical legislature and more conservative executive. When Robby Stern pounds his gavel tonight, the story—for better or for worse—will begin to unfold.

It is more important to know where you are going than to get there quickly. Do not mistake activity for achievement.

The Orange Poll

Daily Orange staff members will be covering the campus in the next few weeks, asking questions of significance to the university, as well at the state and nation.

Tuesday's questions were asked by Marilyn Kemeny and Linda Heffner on the Maxwell Hall steps and the patio of the Newhouse Communications Center.

1. If you could vote in the New York senatorial election, for whom would you vote?
   - Kenneth B. Keating 26
   - Robert F. Kennedy 21
2. If you could vote in the national election this year, for whom would you vote?
   - Lyndon B. Johnson 15
   - Barry M. Goldwater 1
   - Henry Cabot Lodge 1
3. In your opinion, were this year's registration procedures improved over last year?
   - Yes 26
   - No 18
   - Same 6
4. What do you feel is the most important problem facing the students on campus today?
   - Housing 7
   - Administration 3
   - Curfews 3
   - Academic freedom 3
   - Apathy 2
   - Bigotry 2
   - National election 2
5. Who do you think will win the Syracuse-Kansas game?

SS DORM REPS

Over one-third of the SU students will still be contemplating the nominations of dorm representatives after the meeting.

Strangely enough, the lack of voting voice comes from the women's dorms.

Most men's housing units, except those living in prefabs selected their representatives last Sunday. Greeks selected their choice in the spring of last weekend.

As of Tuesday, several women's living centers or floor units in large dorms announced they were waiting until Sunday to elect their officers. Frosh dorm Winchell Hall is sending a temporary representative.

GALE SAYERS

Gale Warnings Up in Archbold

By BOB KRENGEL

This Saturday when the Orangemen take on Kansas, all eyes will be on a 6-0, 191-pound right halfback named Gale Sayers.

This is the 21-year-old streak of lightning who ran all over Syracuse last season and made possible the Jayhawkers' 10-0 whitewash.

One sportswriter summed up all the Kansas hopes for Sayers this year when he said, "If Gale doesn't make All-American, it should cause more furor than a topless swimsuit at a church picnic." Based on past performances, this seems a sure thing.

The son of an Omaha car polisher, Sayers gained national recognition as a sophomore when he gained 1,125 net yards. He carried the pigskin for a tremendous 7.12 average yards per carry, placing him No. 1 nationally.

As a junior, the "Omaha Phantom" achieved even greater feats of perfection in breakway running. His 1963 average of 6.5 yards per carry made him top man in the Big Eight Conference.

In three years, Sayers holds more records than the best of players have in four campaigns. He was the first underclassman in the history of his conference to gain more than 200 yards in one game.

Within three years time, Gale has ground out a total of 2,042 yards, which ranks him ninth on the all-time conference career list. He is within easy reach of the Big Eight career record of 2,562 yards.

This season, the speedy Jayhawker will also be shooting for an unprecedented third consecutive individual rushing crown.

Perhaps the best description of Sayers' style comes from SU lacrosse coach Roy Simmons, reminded him of a college lacrosse player.

"He dodges his opponents instead of going through them like most runners," Simmie said. "He's the most exciting back in college football."

Finally, from Gale's own coach, Jack Mitchell, comes high praise. "Sayers is a fine, dedicated boy who can go either way, offensively or defensively."

SIA Holds 1st Meeting

A tape about the late Dr. Thomas Dooley will be the feature of the first meeting of Syracuse-in-Asia.

The meeting will be held 7 p.m. today in the Chapel House, 711 Comstock Ave.

Mary Ann Franzino, president, will present the objectives of the SIA and suggestions for future plans will be discussed.

Refreshments will be served after the meeting. All students are welcome.

When the husbaand is directed to hang up his coat, he believes he is a victim of the age of acceleration.

LATE GRID TIX

Late issue football tickets and ID cards may be picked up this weekend in the Trophy Room of Archbold Gymnasium. The items will be available from 6-9 p.m. Friday and 9-12 a.m. Saturday prior to the Kansas game. Tickets and IDs can also be obtained the weekend of Oct. 2-3 at the same times.

Frosh Prep For Opener At Manlius

Head up! Keep low! Drive, drive! These are the sounds ringing out at Manley Field House, as coach Jim Shreve instructs his freshmen hopefuls in the art of tackling.

Since Sept. 1, Shreve has been drilling the squad. "It's not easy to make guys fresh out of high school into a college team," he said. "But they work hard."

Although the positions are not yet set, the first and second string men are now chosen. With a small smile on his face, Shreve stated that "they look reasonably good. I'm very pleased with them. The backfield promises plenty of fireworks."

At quarterback, Don Bullard and Ed Reardon pose a big scoring punch. At left halfback, Bill Zanieski and Ed Mantie are ready.

The right halfback slot is up for grabs between Frank Parrish, Tom Coughlin and Nick Kish. Vying for fullback starting honors are Arnie Frieman, Drew Volz and Duke Tijbbe.

But the quality of this team can be found on the line. The boys up front are big, fast and very strong. Gary Fredericks and Jack Jones will snare the passes at left end, while Gary Torte, Ed Sshreck and Nick Marchionne hope to do the same on the right side.

At left guard are Dave Casmay and Greg Connor. With sure hands, Chris Stecker and Jim Murphy will snap the ball back from center.

Dennis Fitzgibbons and Gerald Chiari hold down the ight guard slots.

Inside tackles Jim Le Messeurier and Rick Hurd and outside tackles Vinnie Bruett and Larry Csonka will try to make their opponents go elsewhere than up the middle for gains.

The Tangerines will make their debut on Friday against Manlius School. Afte that they take on the Navy Plebes at Annapolis Oct. 17 and the Army Plebes at West Point Oct. 23.

The frosh come home on Oct. 30 to take their revenge on Colgate. It was this team which last year dealt the Tangerines the only loss of their four-game season. The final encounter will be Nov. 13 against Buffalo.

Orange Harriers Challenge Buffalo

By NEIL KERR

Syracuse University's 1964 varsity cross-country team will take on an expanded schedule that lists six dual meets and an annual appearance in the IC4A festival in New York City.

With four of last year's top runners returning, vete an coach Bob Grieve is looking for an improvement on last year's 3-2 dual and tri-meet record.

BOB GRIEVE

"We were pretty much a sophomore team a year ago," said Grieve. "Now we have a little experience." Syracuse's top returnee is Bill Cihak, a junior from Buffalo.

Last year as a sophomore, Cihak finished 18th at the IC4A's, with a creditable time of 26:25 for the five-mile course Other SU veterans are senior Mike Shuster and juniors Mike Spino and Marty Miller.

In addition, Grieve is counting on a talented group of sophomores — Tom Giordano, Bill Ramsdell, John Crawford, Dave Hannah and Dave Daubert — to adequately replace graduated seniors Mouncey Ferguson and Jack Dailey.

"We should be much better than last year," said Grieve. "If we had a healthy team I wouldn't worry at all." He pointed out that the squad has been troubled by an assortment of injuries this fall and that Cihak, who has a bad left knee, will most likely be unable to run in the opening meet against Buffalo.

The varsity match against Buffalo Saturday will be run at 11 a.m. at Drumlins. Despite the probable loss of Cihak, the SU harriers remain pre-race favorites.

Last year, Buffalo's speedy Stu Katz finished first, but the Orange runners took the next four places. Katz returns this season, though UB is still plagued with a lack of depth.

At 10:30 a.m. Saturday, a companion freshman meet will be held. Members of the frosh squad include Dennis Boyle of Pittsburgh, Pa., Bruce Pizzamenti of Valley Stream, L.I., Kirk Woodbury of Wayne, Pa., and Bill Jones of Buffalo.

Other frosh harriers are Mike Schwirzer, Sherwin Freeman and Tom Patrick. Any other freshfor track or cross country should see freshman coach Jerry McCann or Grieve at Manley Field House this week.

Sat., Sept. 26, Buffalo.
Sat., Oct. 3, at Colgate.
Sat., Oct. 17, Army.
Sat., Oct. 10, at Cornell.
The Varsity Schedule:
Sat., Oct. 31, Penn State.
Sat., Oct. 24, Alfred.
Mon., Nov. 16, IC4A's in New York City.

Crew Starts Rowing

Syracuse's varsity crew coach, Loren Schoel, has initiated a very active fall rowing schedule for the '64-'65 season. His varsity crew, with 10 veterans returning from the '63 varsity and JV eights, will take to Onondaga Lake Monday for a full month of practice.

At the end of October Coach Schoel is hoping to schedule a couple of practice races with Eastern boat clubs.

Returning from last spring's varsity eight are Tom Prindiville, Bruce Wilson and the combination football player-crew member Norm Magers. Up from the JV boat is this year's captain, coxwain Jim Segaloff, plus Bob Whyte, Ken Hafner, Bob Jackson, Dennis Zutant, Bill Rossell and Tom Denver.

Bill Sanford, the freshman crew coach, has also planned an intensive program following Monday's tryout of 66 freshmen crew candidates. His conditioning schedule calls for rowing in the tanks and on the lake in addition to running and work with isometrics.

Anyone interested in going out for crew is welcome and both coaches have specified that experience is not a pre-requisite in signing up for the crew team. "In fact," said Coach Schoel, "on the three championship freshman crews that I've had anything to do with—two at Cornell and one at Syracuse —there was not an experienced man in any one of the three boats."

By land of promise we mean the land where everybody promises to pay.

PARENTS' TICKETS

Tickets for the Parent's Weekend UCLA football game are now on sale from 9 a.m.-7:30 p.m. daily except Saturday at Manley Field House. Tickets are being sold for the special parent's section at $5 apiece. Students will not be allowed to sit in this section unless they purchase regular tickets.

Hill Fencers

Anyone interested in learning fencing techniques for an opportunity to become a member of the SU fencing team should report to the Archbold practice gym from 4-5 p.m. today or Thursday. Those with previous experience are urged to attend. For further information call Gary Damast or Harvey Schulman at Ext. 2031-2.

Hill to Halt Segregated Team Play

Wiley Applauds SU Actions In Civil Rights Demonstrations

By JESSE SMITH

The keynote speaker, a man from Rhode Island, called for involvement in the great social issues of the day.

The scene was not Atlantic City, but Maxwell Auditorium, as Dr. George Wiley addressed Student Senate's first meeting.

The end of the meeting saw Speaker Robert (Robby) Stern announce — finally and definitely — the university's decision not to play segregated schools.

Wiley spoke on racial problems in the North particularly Syracuse and the role of Hill students, praising their "very important contribution in last fall's civil rights demonstrations.

Outlining problems of housing and job discrimination, unemployment and lagging education in the Negro slums, the associate professor of chemistry viewed conditions in Syracuse as similar to those in Rochester, where riots broke out this summer.

Later, he declared that "I wouldn't be at all surprised" if riots took place in Syracuse.

Relaying the word from Chancellor William P. Tolley, Stern said the University Athletic Board "will schedule no more games with segregated schools or Southern schools where there is a question of systematic exclusion."

ROBERT STERN

But present contracts, he pointed out, will be honored. Stern called this a "victory for the legislature."

He also reported the Chancellor's recognition of the right of the students to redress their greivances.

Later, Stern hinted to the Daily Orange that this right would include picketing within the limits of safety.

Stern made clear his determination to enforce the Senate's attendance policy. More than three unexcused absences, he announced, will result in loss of a living center's representation, thus depriving it of a voice in Student Government.

Kathleen Kapsol described plans for a voter registration drive aimed at students. Manned by volunteers from the SG executive and legislative branches and the Syracuse University Committee on Equality, a booth will be operated from 9:30 a.m.-1:30 p.m. daily in the lobby of H. B. Crouse Classroom Building.

Students will be given information on registration dates, absentee ballots and voting qualifications in New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Connecticut and Massachusetts.

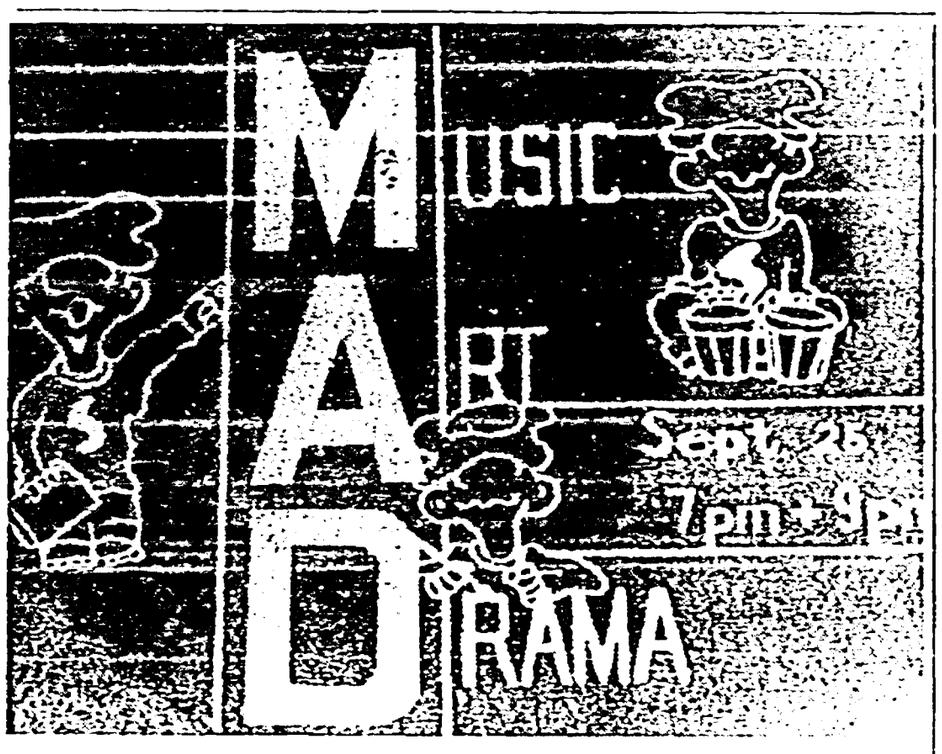
The volunteers will also try to arrange rides home for registration and a babysitting service for married students.

Senate members interested in the drive will attend an orientation meeting 2 p.m. Sunday at Kappa Alpha Theta.

Marshall Sneirson, speaker pro tempore, has been put in charge of an investigation of the housing problems. The housing signup situation, prefabs and cottages and overcrowding of large dorms will come under his scrutiny, according to Stern.

The legislature is also involved in a "Books South" project, to help needy Southern Negro schools.

Stern made a definite commitment on a question which has caused some confusion. He declared "We are, from now on, the Student Senate."



MAD, MAD, World

Shown above is one of the signs which mysteriously appeared on campus Wednesday morning. The mystery was quickly solved as Traditions Commission admitted guilt.

"Study"

Signs Invade Hill

Talk about signs of the time!

Hill students have been noticing assorted posters scattered around campus with such deep messages as "MAD" and "Study."

Credit for these posters goes to Traditions Commission which has been busily advertising its music - arts - drama program (MAD) and which is always interested in furthering education and the academic atmosphere (Study).

One freshman student said, "I thought it was all a part of the academic atmosphere of the university." Her first contact with the signs came when she walked over a study sign, taped to the sidewalk at the east end of the quad.

Traditions Commission has started something of a precedent in using the sidewalk method of exposure.

Timothy Meizel, a junior said that he thought the study signs were the work of fraternities trying to encourage early academic endeavors.

A senior said that the study signs struck him as not really being in line with the true atmosphere of SU.

Other students expressed the opinion that the Study signs needed further explanation and that there was no need for them.

The MAD signs were received with little question because of the other explanatory information on them. Designed by junior Holly Wilson, the eye-catching MAD posters were described by one coed as "unintentionally heralding the atmosphere of SU during the first week of fall semester classes."

Navy Photogs Honored

By SUSAN STRANDBERG and JOAN KRAMER

Fifteen photojournalism trainees and their families were the honored guests at the first reception held in the Newhouse Communications Center Wednesday night.

The 13 Navy servicemen and two Marines are the second group to enroll in a program designed by the School of Journalism to train photojournalists for the Department of Navy.

This program - the only one of its kind in the country-was initiated last fall when the Navy granted a contract to the School of Journalism.

"The Pentagon was very pleased with our first group," said Demarest. "We have heard from a few of them. One is covering the Viet Nam crisis. Another is on an experimental NATO ship —the first to be manned by military of all NATO member countries."

The program transforms experienced photographers and journalists into professional photo journalists.

The curriculum prepared by Prof. Fred A. Demarest, director of the program, will include two new courses this year—a course in sociology taught by Dr. Paul Meadows on the sociological effects of imagry in communication and a course in the School of Art in basic design.

The servicemen will attend two academic semesters, carrying a full load of 15 hours each session. Their course schedule will include photography, newswriting, and reporting, graphic arts, publishing, and communications theory.

"We are training men for a completely new Navy carrer—communication specialists. Formerly photographers and journalists worked separately. These men will be able to write, photograph and communicate effectively by combining the two media," said Demarest.

The trainees are graded as regular students. The transcript and an evaluation of each man

'Is the World Safe for Dinglemen?'

-Administration-

By L. WHITTINGTON

The dean of men's office does not plan to discipline those students i dentified during the disturbance in front of Watson Dormitory Tuesday night.

Assistant dean of men David Tatham said Wednesday no action is planned "at this time"

Tatham also stated the complaints by Watson freshman against the noise created by the "Dingleman" (food trucks and traveling lunch counters) will not go unnoticed by the administration.

"The administration," he said, "is not ignoring the annoyance caused by these trucks or the fact thay they are parked illegally."

Offer Safety

The "Dingleman," contrary to the impression left by protests by Watson residents Tuesday, is wanted.

Though they are shunned at the freshman dormitory, "Dinglemen" of all varities may find a haven at Roosevelt Apartments, if they can find it.

Roosevelt Apartments, the dorm opened to undergraduates

(See Offer Safety, page 6)

-Tradition-

By JOSEPH BALCH

The "Dingleman," who has been traditionally welcomed on campus by hungry students, was jeered at Tuesday night for the first time in 20 years.

Actually, there are presently three "Dinglemen" who travel to the various living centers in Ralph James trucks selling assorted foods and beverages. This small fleet of traveling snack bars is owned by Vincent Claps, who has been selling food to Syracuse University students by wagon since 1945.

The term "Dinglemen," although applied to all soliciting food trucks on the hill, was originated by girls of Mills cottage, who used to yell for Claps to stop as he drove by ringing the dingle bell.

(See Tradition, page 7)

Dinglemen Beware

While one disgruntled food vendor has appealed for Daily Orange help to "make the world safe for Dinglemen," we must heartily commend the residents of Watson Dormitory who stormed the mobile food wagons in protest Tuesday.

The actions of the freshmen in an attempt to make their dorm safe for studying is a refreshing sign in the once-barren sea of academic despair.

It would not be unreasonable to ask a freshman to endure the ringing of a bell twice a night, but to ask him to suffer through the constant drone of six truck motors is incongruous with the supposed creation of an academic atmosphere.

In past years when only one or two wagons haunted Watson, the sound was often bearable. But this year Ralph James and Celia have been joined by Carroll's burgers, the Wimpy Wagon, Mr. Softee and occassional one-shot food salesmen.

The series of Dinglemen repeatedly have violated city "no parking" laws, possibly because they happened to run into a series of hungry policemen. Campus police have done nothing to aid the cause of the studious, rather than the hungry, individual.

However don't blame the campus cops, for they, as we, must be shocked and pleasantly amazed at such a display of academic leanings.

The administration should take prompt action, with whatever power they have with city authorities, to keep the Dinglemen away from Watson "no parking" zones and put them in their proper place, so an academic atmosphere is not disturbed.

If a student happens to be hungry sometime during the evening, he can walk a few blocks for his cheese jaw or potato knish. Education must reign supreme, even to a hot pastrami.

Keep up the good work, '68. You're doing fine.

Millstones and Milestones

In this Corner

By Dan Stone

Last year I had this column on an irregular basis. This year I will be appearing weekly, and considering that I was called left-wing by a couple of people and regarded as an arch-conservative by at least one group, I would like to begin this first column by sketching out where I stand on several issues that are bound to crop up in the course of the year and give my feelings on writing a column in general.

Too often DO columnists incline to be anti-something—in some cases anti-everything—presumably in the hope of starting an argument. I can get along without any extra arguments and I am not passionately anti-anything. I am an independent but hardly regard myself as anti-Greek. I consider a couple of the policies of this university terribly outdated but regard the administration as a competent and occasionally creative group. Seeing an occasional animal in a huddle does not make me anti-athlete.

The purpose of this column as I see it is not to get my name whispered on campus as somebody-who-said-something-to make-someone-mad. I am more interested in sparking a reasonably intelligent discussion of how out-of-date some idea is than denouncing food service. I would rather congratulate than desecrate.

This does not mean I am aiming for blandness or avoiding controversy. I intend to face every issue that comes up on campus this year, but I will attempt to do it constructively through this column. I am impervious to nasty letters to the editor, challenges to debate, anonymous phone calls, or challenges to duel behind the forestry building at dawn. But if that kind of thing gives you a kick, write your letter or make your call—who am I to take away a security blanket?

Each year a number of issues dominate campus news and in so doing tend to dominate these columns. Last year the primary issue was that of civil rights and I imagine it will gain more than cursory attention in this year of "the backlash." My position here is unchanged. The civil rights battle is not over. Conditions in many parts of the country are still deplorable. I stand in an admiration approaching awe when I regard the work of the students in Mississippi this summer. And I will be chuckling again this year when the beards begin to bounce around the Administration Building in picket lines demanding the redress of imaginary ills.

I would hope that a major issue in these columns at least until November would be the coming elections. An intelligent discussion of issues and candidates it seems to me would be a service to the campus community. In my already proclaimed spirit of not being anti-anything for the time being I will limit my discussion of Barry Goldwater here, but I am licking my lips in the anticipation that the chance may come. This is no time to launch into new and uncharted waters with a man who doesn't even have a chart he can call his own.

If the editorial in Monday's DO was an indication, the New York Senate race will be a topic, perhaps the major topic of discussion. There is more to be discussed here than the issue of carpetbagging. As a point of fact, Robert Kennedy is not running in the editorial's words "through a legal loophole." There will hopefully be issues and apparently controversial charges which should be examined more carefully than the curt dismissal of the Attorney General's candidacy.

Whatever the issues, the year promises to be an exciting one and, without malice or without pulling punches, I'll be in this corner.

Trever On Campus

"I want to drop English 139a and add Zoo 22band instead of adding Darts 101a in place of Pos 216. I want to drop Psych 92 and add Stargazing 199aG in place of Suntan 3, which I wanted to change sections in anyway . . ."

LETTERS

Keating

To the Editor:

Concerning your editorial of September the 21st.

In 11 paragraphs fraught with the cliches now current in this election year only once did you state precisely your reason for supporting Mr. Keating. This glorious event occurred in the fifth paragraph where in notably Dirksenesque third person plural you claim that the incumbent is the better man.

The carpetbagger issue is the one that seems to be about the most relevant support of your better man concept, since you consider it unethical to be this sort of fellow and in your view Robert Kennedy is most certainly one: he is a priori the lesser man.

However, as you grudgingly concede, the federal constitution holds that this pretender to that throne in the Senate is doing so legally. I frankly do not see the problem.

It is indeeed traditional for a native of a particular state to seek and hold the office of Senator. I invite you though, to take but one peek at the break up of party affiliations in the "number of Enrolled Voters Onondaga County 1963." Herein lies the reason that the Democratic Party of the State of New York rejected Samuel Stratton.

I am afraid that the basic rule of any political party is to pick a winner. The Democrats had no other choice than to appease the New York City registrants and turn down their numerically insignificant up-state brethren.

Now, at long last, we come to the real issue: the American two party system.

When Senator Thurmond said that he would join the "Goldwater Republican Party," he said a mouth full. If the polls are even vaguely correct this party will receive the worst thrashing administered on any first Tuesday in November since 1936. The Democratic organization might well control more congressional seats and state-houses (in both of these they now hold comfortable majorities) than ever before.

The Republicans will face a terrific rebuilding job, this to regain the status of the other major party. For this purpose 'old boys' of the GOP will be required. Men like Clifford Case, Milton Eisenhower, Henry Cabot Lodge, and Kenneth Keating.

This is perhaps the only cogent reason for the incumbent's re-election.

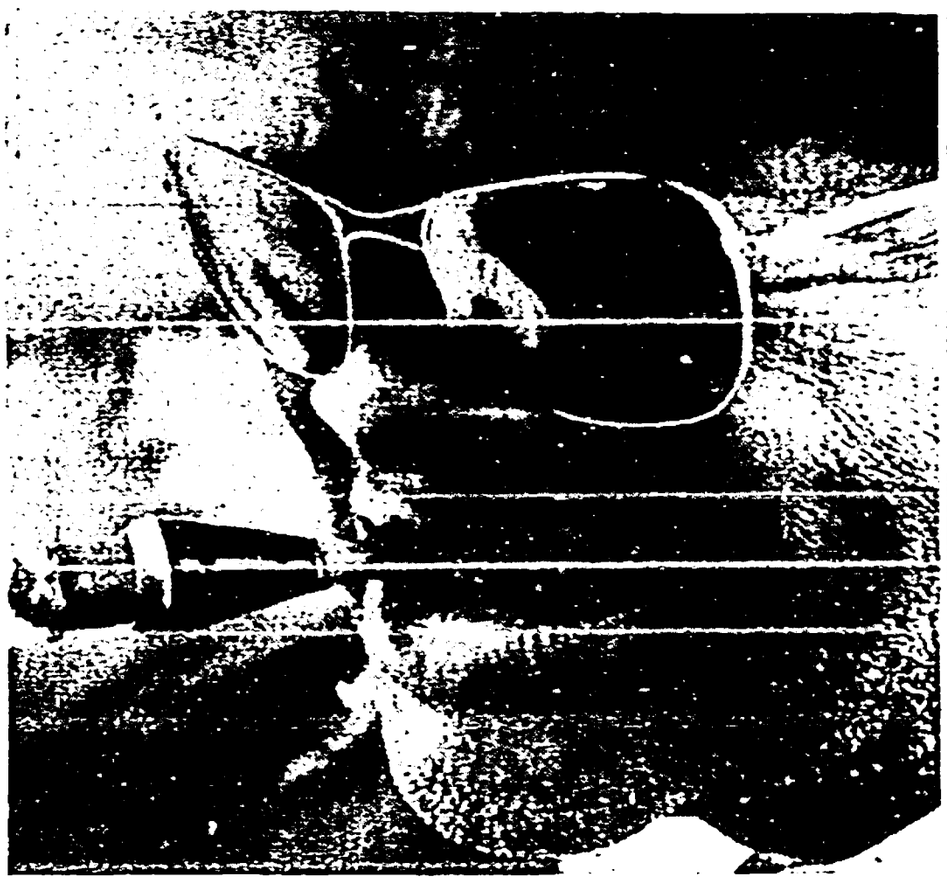
Folk Guitarist Rev. Gary Davis To Appear At Folk Gallery

Rev. Gary Davis, folk singer and guitarist, will appear at 8:30 p.m. and 10:30 p.m. today and Friday at the Folk Gallery.

A former blues singer, he was ordained a minister in North Carolina in 1933 and has since refused to perform any material other than religious songs, although examples of his blues performances are available on rare jazz recordings.

Blinded when he was a young man, Rev. Davis has recorded two LP albums and has appeared on radio shows and folk music concerts. For the past 16 years he has been living in New York City where he is a part of the street singer tradition and has catered to the religious needs of storefront congregations.

Rev. Davis will also perform at 9 p.m., 10:30 p.m. and 12 a.m. on Saturday and Sunday. Tickets are available at the Folk Gallery, 124 McBride St., and the admission charge is $1.



REV. GARY DAVIS

Up in the Air

A New Year

by Carol Thorp

Next week WAER-FM, the radio voice of Syracuse University, returns to the air. Another year of professional broadcasting for the radio bugs in pre-fab 16 begins.

Major programming emphasis for the year will be on popular music such as folk and show tunes, perennial favorit-discussions, documentaries of the campus audience.

WAER, however, stretches beyond the Syracuse campus to serve the whole of Onondaga county, so a varied program schedule is necessary.

Thus the station presents shows featuring news, panel discussions, documentaries, and "Syraquiz," the only live quiz show in Central New York.

A main ingredient for the success of any radio station is the enthusiasm of its staff. WAER has a staff with just that quality. Organization within the station is tighter and the urge to publicize its programs greater than ever before.

Already an orientation program has been set up to recruit those interested in broadcasting.

At orientation meetings students meet the members of WAER's senior staff. This staff consists of 12 students who form the governing body of the radio station and decide its policy.

Staff members describe their duties as department heads and hold informal discussions where newcomers learn that broadcasting consists of far more than announcing on the air.

Senior staffers emphasize that WAER wants people with ideas as creativity is an increasingly important word in radio.

Producers are needed to create new shows to hold audience interest and then carry their ideas into reality.

Writers are always needed as radio is primarily an exchange of ideas. Whether it be news or live drama writers put life into ideas and never stop searching for fresh, original ways of presenting programs.

The above are only a portion of the radio world. Before a program can go on the air continuity writers, traffic directors and public relations people must all play a part.

Anyone who steps inside WAER must realize the complexity of radio programming and the talent needed to keep any radio station going at a strong pace.

New faces are always welcome at WAER for it is these people who will someday make up the senior staff and insure the continuation of radio broadcasting at Syracuse University.

"Beyond the Fringe" Satire Given By Touring Company

Syracuse will be the scene of the National Touring Company's "Beyond the Fringe" at 8:15 p.m. on October 10th at the Lincoln Auditorium. "Beyond the Fringe," one of the most successful shows Broadway has seen in the last two years, will be on the road this season, for one-night visits to the major cities and colleges all over the United States.

"Fringe," a popular British import, is a topical satire cutting and spearing all those institutions held sacred in politics, government, theater, and business. In booking the show, the producer has aimed it directly at the college audience, and has slated it for appearances in more than 200 cities to which the college crowd is exposed.

The show consists of blackout sketches and comic music interludes. "Beyond the Fringe" has been awarded the Drama Critics Award, and a "Tony" for Best Show of the Year.

Tickets for the show, under the sponsorship of Famous Artist Series, are available at the Clark Music Building.

Were there any doubt about it, the parking meter would prove that time passes quickly.

Law School Addition Progresses

Work began in early September on a new law building scheduled for a fall 1965 opening.

The three story structure has been following the construction schedule so far, said James LaTorre, assistant to the vice president for Administration and research.

A $1,137,895 contract has been signed for construction of the building and LaTorre estimated that the total cost may be $1.3 or $1.4 million.

The top story of the building will be about level with the quadrangle and will contain an auditorium for 400 people, a lobby and lounges. The other two stories will be similiar to each other, LaTorre said, and will contain a large classroom for 130 students and a suite of offices. These levels will also house seminar rooms and a faculty reference library.

The entire building will be air conditioned. Bottom levels will be reached by grade levels, with the lower floor opening on the stadium side of the building.

LaTorre said that one problem during construction will be a restricted passageway along Archbold Stadium. He said that solutions are being discussed to alleviate this condition.

Mount Bookstore

Freshman ANN-MARIE KARR surveys some of the books available in the newly-expanded Mt. Olympus bookstore. The bookstore on the mount is a branch of the main office on University place.

Gets Guys, Too

Mount Bookstore Expands

The newly expanded Mt. Olympus bookstore is attracting attention from males at almost the same rate as freshman girls.

Even co-eds living in campus housing other than Flint and Day Halls have been enticed to climb the infamous steps to the Mount bookstore, employes noted.

But Mrs. Ruth Levine, director of the University Bookstore branch said: "Boys don't buy like the girls do."

Girls who come in to browse will make purchases, but boys are not impluse buyers, she explained. They do, however, purchase gifts, prints and paperbacks.

Because the paperbacks are now displayed against a wall instead of in stacks the selection appears increased but Mrs. Levine denied this. However, about 1,000 titles are offered.

In addition to records, cards, stuffed animals, cosmetics, supplies and other merchandise, the store now offers a complete women's sport shop. Sleepwear, loafers and undergarments are new attractions along with sweaters, slacks, and skirts. Quantities of former stock have also been increased.

But some former favorites of the girls have been eliminated. "There is no more bubble gum or Tootsie pops," Mrs. Levine reported.

An additional cash register is an added convenience and wall to wall carpeting provides a touch of luxury in the now 1,200 square-foot area.

Previously tables and chairs from the Graham Hall snack bar occupied the area which workmen transformed during the summer vacation.

Mrs. Levine said she regretted that due to a late start in the renovation "the store was not ready to greet the freshmen." Even now, she added, some lighting and card and record racks are yet to be installed and all merchandise has not arrived.

"I urged them to do it," she said in reference to the expansion.

Because of the expansion, store personnel was increased by four. Presently there are six part-time employes. The store is open Monday through Friday from 11 a.m.—7 p.m. and Saturday from 10 a.m.—4 p.m.

'Operation Volunteer' Offers Service Positions

A new program is opening up "unlimited opportunities for rewarding service to all SU students," according to Mrs. Carol Bullard.

Mrs. Bullard is the new administrative assistant to Charles C. Noble, dean of Hendricks Chapel.

Working with her on Operation Volunteer program are Kingsley Stanard, student chairman of the organization and Mark Stein, coordinator of the Syracuse University Commission on Community Affairs.

They said the unique aspect of this program is that it is one of the few extra-curricular activities open to all students. Student interviews for those interested will be held Oct. 6 and 7.

Kingsley will be recruiting students for a staff in his office located in room R of the Chapel House. The organization will be for "all students who wish to work in their adopted community of Syracuse," Kingsley said.

THE

National Security Agency

is a totally unique organization

... and offers creative research opportunities in the art and science of sophisticated communications

There is absolutely no other organization like it . . . no other organization doing the same important work, or offering the same wealth of opportunity for imaginative thinkers in the Liberal Arts, as well as the Physical and Engineering Sciences.

The National Security Agency is a major research arm of the Department of Defense, but its influence and responsibilities are far broader. It works closely with many industrial and research institutions; it has special access to scientific information at universities and other Government laboratories; and it enjoys close consulting arrangements with scientists of commanding stature. NSA staff members enjoy all the benefits of Federal employment without the requirements imposed by the Civil Service system.

What does NSA do that warrants this unique stature?

NSA approaches the subject of sophisticated communications from these original standpoints:

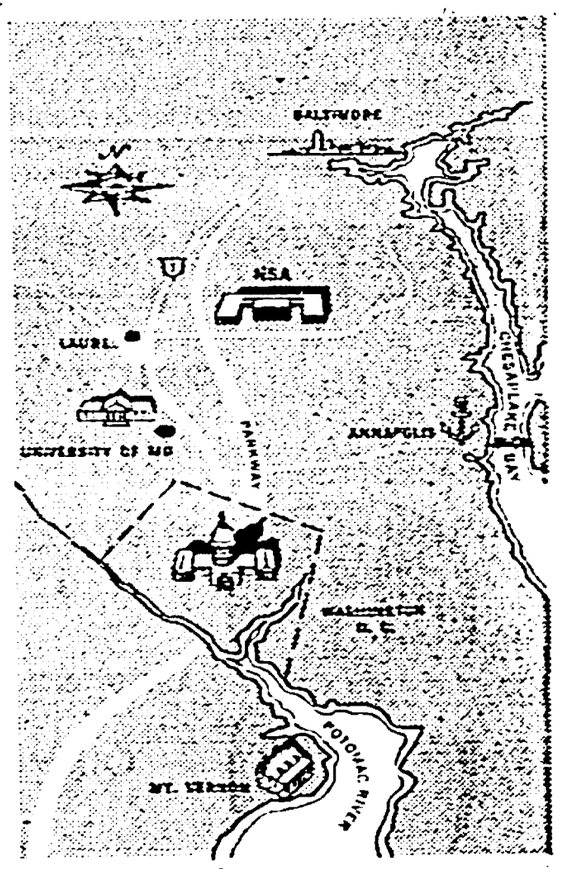
1. Creating secure communications systems and equipments unknown anywhere else, and devising special refinements for computers & edp systems that will increase our handling capabilities. This means that Communications Engineers, Computer Design Specialists, Mathematicians, Programmers, and Systems Analysts, all contribute to the design of antennas, transmitters, receivers, and terminal equipment . . . to experiments using new semiconductors, magnetic film, superconductive devices, etc., resulting in new logic circuits and memory units, better high-gain arrays for UHF radio systems, higher-capacity data handling terminal equipment, more effective speech band-width compression . . . and scores of similar advances.

2. By the very nature of "secure" communications, assuring the continuing invulnerability of U.S. communications through cryptologic procedures and techniques. Because cryptology and its cryptographic counterpart are not taught elsewhere, mathematicians, scientists—and all others with appropriate intellectual curiosity will be taught this challenging new discipline right at NSA. Work in this field may involve specially-designed computers, television, computer-to-computer data links, and edp programming. (Even music, philosophy, or the classics may be useful prerequisites for cryptology!)

3. Translating written data, and presenting the crux of the material in meaningful form. This is the home of the linguistics expert and the languages graduate—enabling the talented graduate to make the most of his or her particular gift, and quickly expand familiarity with other tongues.

In all that NSA does, there is seldom any existing precedent. Only NSA pioneers in secure communications on this broad a scale, so only NSA offers the college graduate the best chance to make immediate use of his disciplined thinking . . . without years of post-graduate experience. All these features—together with its well-instrumented laboratories, libraries, and professional staff of specialists in amazingly varied fields—provide a stimulating academic atmosphere for individual accomplishment.

On-Campus Interviews for Mathematicians and Engineers will be held later. Consult your Placement Office for dates.



NSA is located in expanding facilities at Fort George G. Meade, Maryland—halfway between Washington and Baltimore. It is handy to transportation facilities, the University of Maryland and Johns Hopkins, suburban or rural living (in-town living, too, now that the new circumferential highways are completed) . . . and the Chesapeake Bay resort region.

LIBERAL ARTS SENIORS: Your PQT Application must be mailed before October 14th

This is most important: To apply for an NSA position, all students EXCEPT Mathematicians, Engineers, and Physicists must take the PROFESSIONAL QUALIFICATION TEST scheduled for Saturday, October 24th. Stop in at your Placement Office and ask for the NSA Professional Qualification Test brochure . . . fill out and mail in the application card enclosed inside . . . and bring to the test the ticket you will receive by mail.

Even if you are not sure of your career interests yet, get the facts on NSA opportunities now.

Poet Teaching Again

Booth Returns from NYC

After a semester in a strange house in New York City, Prof. Philip Booth has returned to Syracuse to teach and continue work on his third book of poetry.

Booth, an associate professor in the English department, took his family to New York last spring, where he participated in a housing switch with a professor from the city.

With a semester of university writing leave coming to him, Booth found a notice on a bulletin board suggesting the switch. Following it up, he decided to trade his house for the apartment in New York.

The professor from New York came up to live in Booth's house in Fayetteville, and Booth and his family went to live in the professor's apartment on the Lower West Side.

Booth, who said he thoroughly enjoyed the switch, spent the semester writing and talking to other authors in New York.

Although he did not lecture at any local universities, he attended many poetry readings at the Guggenheim Museum and other literary gatherings.

He spent the major portion of his time working on his book, which he hopes to publish in the fall of 1965, He also wrote a number of essays and criticisms, most of which have already been published.

Some of the poems written while he was in New York won a portion of the second-place honors in the Balch Poetry Award, a contest sponsored this year by the "Virginia Quarterly Review."

PHILIP BOOTH

Booth, who this fall begins his fourth year at Syracuse, will teach three courses—a freshman English honors class, a poetry workshop for undergraduate students and a poet-part of the masters creative writing program.

Before coming to Syracuse, Booth taught at Dartmouth, Bowdoin and Wellesley. He has published two collections of poetry, "Letter From A Distant Land," in 1957, and "The Islanders," in 1961.

The first collection received the Lamount Prize of the Academy of American Poets. He was awarded a Guggenheim Fellowship while teaching at Wellesley in 1958.

Explaining his feelings about Syracuse, Booth said, "The best students here are equal to the best students anywhere in the country." He said he feels that Syracuse University has and will continue to improve.

A lot of the better young teachers who are here," he commented, "are here on the assumption that the university is committed to becoming no less than first-rate.

"And, except for the library, the evidence has been all in that direction since I've been here," he said.

An estimated 250 students participated in a demonstration against the trucks Tuesday night and reportedly succeeded in driving one of the trucks away.

According to Watson Dorm Director Patrick Antonelli, a number of students who took part in the disturbance were identified by members of the dean of men's staff.

Tatham indicated that his office has no plans to bring any students for taking part disciplinary action against in this demonstration. However, he added, "If anything happened that was out of line which I do not know about yet, action will be taken.

According to him, a couple of students who were reportedly using loudspeakers as a means of protest and another student who was alledgedly dressed in an indecent manner will be warned by the dorm authorities.

Antonelli confirmed a report that a freshman in Watson was circulating a petition against the presence of the trucks. Dean Tatham said that his office had not received a petition of this nature but would be "happy to see it."

Dean Tatham also mentioned that his office would be happy to talk to anyone concerned with the problem.

Antonelli said that the use of a petition was unnecessary "If any student has a gripe," he commented, "he should take it to his resident advisor, who will take it to the dorm director if the situation warrants such action."

"A student with a complaint should use the direct approach, through the chain of command, instead of hiding behind a roster," he noted.

Home Ec Forms

Applications for transfer and home economics students who wish to be on the home economics student board are now available in 300 Slocum Hall.

Deadline is 5 p.m. Monday and applicants must sign up in the home ec. office.

The popularity of the "Dingleman," until Tuesday night, has never been questioned. Even when a campus-wide water fight student feeling toward the broke out in 1949, students swarmed around the "Dingleman" for protection. The 1954-55 Orange Guide stated general Dingleman quite well.

"Late at night, when you're studying hard, and suddenly feel the pangs of hunger it's the Dingleman to the rescue."

Late studiers and those dissatisfied with meals from the university Food Service could always rely on the Ralph James wagons.

It now seems that Claps, who has been quoted as saying, "Our aim is to make friends not customers," will have to get a quieter muffler for his truck in order to keep the freshmen friendly or the frosh of Watson will have to find some other way.

Jayhawks Boast Speed, Muscle

By JEFF LAZAR

The Kansas backfield which ran through and around the Syracuse line during the 10-0 fiasco at Lawrence last year will be in to visit the Orangemen at Archbold Stadium this Saturday.

Contrary to the average football fan's belief, Gale Sayers is not the only Jayhawker back SU will have to worry about.

One reason for concern is Mike Johnson, a 5-10, 186-pound left halfback who gained 195 yards in only 24 carries for an unbelievable average of 8.1 per rush as a sophomore.

One reason for the modest success is his quickness, and his ability to hit fast and hard into a hole. Mix this with an abundance of natural cutting ability and more than adequate blocking and tackling talent and you have the makings of a terrific headache.

There is still more than running, blocking, and tackling to the game of football as far as Mr. Johnson is concerned. The great speed he has would indicate that his services aren't limited to the afore mentioned talents. Because he is always a breakaway threat, Coach Jack Mitchell employed Johnson's services as a pass catcher. The result was two receptions and 39 yards. In addition, he returned three kickoffs for 66 yards.

Assistant football coach Roy Simmons says that Johnson is just as fast as Sayers. All Mitchell has to say is, "he's the finest all-around player I've got. He plays offense, defense and kicks."

Steve Renko

Steve Renko is another junior SU will have to watch out for Saturday. He is the Jayhawk quarterback who more than lived up to expectations at Lawrence last year. His 6-4, 210-pound frame is far from a hindrance when he turns the end on a keeper similar to that of Wally Mahle.

Mike Johnson

Dick Pratt

"Kansas used to have a small line and had to stunt and move fast to beat our bigger, stronger linemen. But not this year. He recovered a fumble against TCU last Saturday on the Jayhawk's one-foot line with less than half a minute to play and Kansas leading 7-3."

INTRA REPS

Intramural managers of all fraternities, dormitories and independent living centers will meet at 7:15 p.m. today in the Trophy Room of the Men's Gym. Plans for the fall sports slate will be discussed.

SOCCER CLUB

A meeting of the SU Soccer Club will be held at 8:15 p.m. today in the Trophy Room of the Men's Gym. Anyone interested in joining the team is invited to atend. For further information cortact Walt Couser at Ext. 2022 or 2023.

Intramural Meeting To Begin Program

By BOBBIE MARX

This season's intramural program gets underway tonight at a 7:15 meeting in the Trophy Room of Archbold Gym.

Milt Howard, director of the intramural program on the Hill, will meet with representatives of fraternities, living centers and independents (commuting students) to discuss the coming fall activities.

The season is scheduled to begin the week of Oct. 5. Swimming, bowling, riflery and touch football will be the first sports offered.

Touch football, which is completed by Thanksgiving vacation, will be played every evening at Lew Carr Field at Manley Field House on an elimination basis. There will be three games played nightly, (each game consisting of two fifteen minute periods), regardless of the weather.

Touch football, a team sport, will be divided into league competition, with the team possessing the greatest number of points at the end of the season declared the league champion.

Swimming events covered will be the 50-yard freestyle, 50-yard breast stroke, 50-yard backstroke and 200-yard relay.

Riflery will be under the supervision of the ROTC Military Department and will be completed before the varsity season opens. Bowling, which starts in the fall season, is conducted on the alleys of the Women's Building.

Cross country also to be offered as a fall sport, has been slated for the beginning of November.

Next week Howard and representatives of the three divisions (fraternities, living centers and independents) will meet to plan the playing schedules. Announcements of the games will appear regularly in the DO.

Don't be too critical of the wedding parties that tour the streets making a racket with their autos. It may be the guy's last chance to blow his own horn.

Jayhawkers Strive To Square Series

By TOM MULLER

Gale Sayers and Co. will be out to even its short but explosive series with Syracuse at two wins apiece when the two teams clash at 2 p.m. Saturday in Archbold Stadium.

Kansas surprised the Orange with a 10-0 shutout at Lawrence last year as 35,000 fans watched Syracuse go down to its first shutout defeat in 18 games.

Kansas scored on a 28-yard field goal by Gary Duff and a 26-yard cutback by left halfback Sayers. Syracuse managed a 61-yard drive late in the second half but a fumble by Bill Scheonover on the Jayhawker two-yard line ended the drive with a dull thud.

The Kansas-Syracuse series first began in 1959 when the Jayhawkers were the first team to meet the eventual National Champions. That game saw Ben Schwartzwalder start Ger Schwedes at quarterback for the Orange signal caller, Dave Sarette, was as yet untried. It also marked the varsity debut of a young halfback by the name of Ernie Davis.

Before the game ended in a 35-21 Orange win, Davis had run all over Kansas and Sarette had moved into the top quarterback slot to give Schwartzwalder a definite starting backfield for the rest of the campaign.

Kansas also had its share of glory in that game as it set many school records for offense despite its defeat.

The next season saw a much closer game, but it was another Syracuse victory as Ernie Davis led the Orange to a 14-7 win over the Jayhawkers.

Then last year it was a much different story. Sayers netted 94 yards from scrimmage in addition to his touchdown burst and added another 23 yards on a screen pass to set up the field goal by Duff. Sayers' sensational performance was aided by the light but quick Kansas line which continually outfought the heavy Orange forwards.

Sayers, Renko Aim For Repeat Victory In Archbold Tussle

By BILL CRONAUER
Sports Editor

Tomorrow's Syracuse-Kansas clash in ancient Archbold Stadium has all the earmarks of a fine track and field meet.

You've got half a dozen under-10 second 100-yard dash men. And you'll also have fellas like Kansas' 264-pound Dick Pratt and SU's 255-pound Steve Chomyszak vying in the weight events.

Game time is 1:30 p.m., with a crowd of 25,000 expected for the competition.

Kansas boasts All-American Gale Sayers, but a pair of other Jayhawks — Mike Johnson and Willie Ray Smith — seem just as rapid. Providing the Orange speed will be sophomore flyer Floyd Little, Billy Hunter and Charley Brown.

The visiting Jayhawks loom as one of the most explosive outfits in the country. "They're a fast team that can score anytime," warns Hill coach Roy Simmons. "I'm surprised they weren't considered higher in the preseason polls."

Frosh Gripe Over Closing Of Ostrom Ave. Cottage

By CAROL RUBRIGHT
Junior Editor

The evacution of Cornell Cottage was protested Thursday by its 14 resident Freshmen.

They were informed Wednesday that their small men's residence, 712-714 Ostrom Ave., will be evacuated in order to ease the crowded women's housing situation.

The frosh will be placed Sunday in various dormitories and cottages and will have to pay an increase in room fees of up to $101 for those moved to larger quarters.

Dean of Men Jim G. Carleton explained to the Daily Orange that the men will be given their choice of several dorm locations, including cottages, medium-priced dorms and large dorms such as DellPlain and Sadler Halls.

"The majority of these students asked for large dorms in their original room requests," according to Frank J. Harrar, director of men's housing.

"There are tentative plans to evacuate other cottages," he added.

Trucks will be provided Sunday afternoon by dorm maintenance service to transport the men and their equipment to the new housing.

All men's cottages are considered temporary housing, Carleton told the Daily Orange, and cottage residents' housing assignments were designated as such.

Cottage President George Wyner said that this notation was absent from Cornell residents' assignment slips.

Morton, Poletti and University Cottages, also frosh men's dorms, reported that many of their residents were not informed of their temporary situation.

Carleton informed the Daily Orange that if the room assignment slips were not marked temporary, it was an oversight on the dean of men's office.

(See Frosh, Page 9)

Root and Hurst cottage upperclassmen were notified late Thursday afternoon that they will be transferred Sunday to larger dorms DellPlain, Dadler, Grover Cleveland Apartments and Marshal Apartments.

Regent Theatre

Comedy to Open Season

By MICHELE SOBEL
Arts Editor

A summer experiment plus drama department direction will provide SU theatregoers with their first Regent Theatre play of the season, "Thieves' Carnival."

First presented this summer, "Thieves Carnival" was part of the summer repetoire given by the SU Dramatic Touring Company. The group of students toured northeastern campuses, giving plays for the month of July.

This performance will be directed by Dr. Joseph Golden of the drama department and performances will start at 8:30 p.m. today and Saturday.

Starring Frank Morell, Bruce MacCurdy and John McNeill, the Jean Anouilh comedy describes what happens when a bored aristocrat invites three thieves to be her house-guest.

Kathy Bindert portrays the hostess and Sue DeCicco and Jan Aspinwall play her nieces who become romantically entangled with the burglars. Richard Nathan and Allen Williams are a father-and-son pair of fortune hunters who keep failing to attract the heiresses they pursue.

Others in the cast are Tom Grasso, George Fidel, Robert D'Angelo, Sandra Land, Gail Byrnes, David Hamilton and Kathy Woods.

Tickets for the play may be purchased at the Regent Theatre box office or at a traveling campus box office set up for the convenience of SU students.

At the traveling box office, students will be able to reserve tickets for any of the performances. The box office will be open from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. daily. Today, the box office will be located in the Huntington B. Crouse Hall lobby.

"Thieves' Carnival" also will be presented on Oct. 1, 2, and 3. The campus box office will be in operation next week to sell tickets for these performances. Locations will be announced.

Commission Set On Urban Affairs

By JONATHON RUSSELL

Student participation in community activity has received a shot in the arm with the recent organization of the Syracuse University Commission on Community Affairs.

Prof. Stephen K. Bailey, dean of the Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs, suggested the formation of the commission last year. It was organized as a cooperative venture by the Hendricks Chapel Board and the citizenship department of the Maxwell School.

The commission was formed as a "tent" organization to house a variety of student volunteer work on campus.

Two of the programs that are sponsored by the commission are "Operation Volunteers" and "Election Volunteers," said Jerome T. Van der Water, personal assistant to Dean Bailey, Thursday.

"Operation Volunteers" falls under the jurisdiction of the Hendricks Chapel Board and provides students with opportunities to work with schools, hospitals, recreation centers, and other services agencies on a volunteer basis.

"Election Volunteers" is sponsored by the citizenship department and is designed to place volunteer workers with the political party of their choice to assist in this year's election campaign.

Representatives from the Maxwell School are presently engaged in recruiting interested students through announcements made in political science and citizenship classes.

SU Law Professor Selected For State Advisory Committee

By SERENA NEGRIN

Richard B. Lillich, associate professor of law and director of international legal studies at Syracuse University has been designated a member of the New York State Advisory Committee for the nationwide Republicans and Independents for Johnson.

He is the organizing secretary for a local Syracuse chapter supporting President Lyndon B. Johnson for re-election.

An independent himself, Lillich stated that about 75 per cent of the national organization is Republican. However in the local area a more accurate account would be 50 per cent Republicans and 50 per cent independents. In a recent Gallup Poll it was shown that 41 per cent of the Republicans and 57 per cent of the independents in the East will be voting for Johnson.

Lillich said his primary interest is in the national welfare. He said he felt that "Goldwater is a tax on the Supreme Court." Lillich explained, "Our group will offer an outlet for the many lifelong Republicans and the independents in Syracuse who believe Sen. Goldwater is not qualified to be President of the United States."

The reasons for his support of Johnson are the President's stands on civil rights, extremeist groups, and nuclear weapons. Lillich said he felt that Goldwater is irresponsible and inexperienced on the foreign front. He said Goldwater is unfamiliar with domestic matters and has no sympathy for a vast section of the population.

In the past Lillich has supported both parties. In 1958 he campaigned for Gov. Rockefeller and in 1961 for the Democratic candidate for mayor of Syracuse.

The organization will announce its faculty advisor and student chairman in the near future. Supporters will be working in coordination with the Democratic Party.

Information and materials for 15-member "triangle units," have been announced. Additional "triangles" are being formed as the nucleus of a local chapter in the national and state Republicans and Independents for Johnson movement.

RICHARD B. LILLICH

Plans for the organization of organizing secretaries of new "triangles" may be obtained by writing P.O. Box 564, Syracuse.

Lillich said he is pleased to see the avid student political activity on campus and hopes it continues. Any students interested should call him at ext. 2529.

Ralph-James Truck Boss Denies Noise

"There is no such thing as a noisy generator on a Ralph-James truck," stated Anthony Claps, son of the owner and operator of the Ralph-James Traveling Lunch Cars.

Each of these trucks is equipped with two generators in case of a mishap in the machinery, Claps said.

A newscast on WSYR radio allegedly accused the "dingleman" of excessive noise. In response to this statement, Vincent Claps, owner of James Lunch Cars, wrote a letter which was read over the air. In this response, he stated that "the commotion was caused due to a faulty generator on an 'ice cream truck,' not operated by the dingle man."

In his letter to WSYR, Claps attempted to clarify the position of the Ralph-James vending truck. He said that "having this service at their (students) convenience has prevented many students from having to walk 6 or 8 blocks for food."

He also stated that he didn't relish the idea of being blamed for anything caused by someone else. I have been constantly on the pan for other people's doings."

Since these food vendors park on a city street, the university police have no jurisdiction in relation to their alleged illegal parking.

Finally, Finally

While we applaud Chancellor Tolley's latest revelation concerning the university's athletic scheduling policy, we are indeed puzzled at the circumstances surrounding the decision.

The Chancellor's decision not to schedule games with segregated schools, which was revealed by Robert Stern at Wednesday's legislature meeting, comes almost four months following the issue's campus limelight.

The situation which developed last November is now a closed case as far as the legislature is concerned, but we wonder why the channels of decision took so long in formulating a stand.

As of last word, the Chancellor had issued a somewhat vague statement which backed up the university's athletic board policy of hesitating before scheduling segregated schools.

This is far from the definitive "no" to segregation that Stern presented to the legislature on Wednesday. Why this definitive "no" could not have been issued in May is puzzling. Much unneeded labor and timeless aggravation could have been avoided.

The method used by the Chancellor in presenting the decision also leaves us disturbed, for it was through a middle man that the decision was made public. No statement was issued; all contact was verbal.

It is a shame that in a decision of this nature we do not have a written document stating, in effect, that "Syracuse University wishes to go on record as stating it will not schedule further athletic contests with segregated schools."

The circumstances surrounding the decision draw to several possible conclusions. Stern may have misstated the Chancellor's decision and position, which we doubt in a matter of this significance.

Secondly, the revelation may mean that the world of university red tape has grown to immense proportions, delaying decisions until they become relatively unimportant.

Or thirdly, the decision may mean that the administration is finally beginning to realize the importance of the student in the university family. Perhaps it is an indication that student opinion will count more heavily in the future.

Let's start off the year on the right foot, and assume that the third alternative is the right one. The administration is waking up.

Tiger at the Gates

Twilight of Honor

—By Dan Ritey

If, as they say, all good things must come to an end and Ken Keating is defeated in his reelection bid this November, some of us may be able to comprehend, then, a three-fold lesson in Americana.

First we will have been witness to a profound and, to those who are sympathetic, a moving tragedy.

Second we will have been witness to a political tragedy, the results and effects of which may come back to haunt us at some futureindefinite.

Third we will have been witness to a too-often occurring and demoralizing phenomenon of our times: pressure, isolation and eventual ostracization of a person; the relegating of a former teammate and comrade to the fringes and sidelines of a group in which he used to be a central figure.

The tragedy of this key senatorial contest lies in the irony of events which proceeded it.

Groping around for a new power base to recoup his deflated national political fortunes after an abrupt slap by Lyndon Johnson, former U.S. Attorney General Kennedy elected to parley his magic name, his vast machine and vaster monetary resources and the prize plum of the Empire State's 45 electoral votes into a new spring-base for either 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue or the No. 1 seat in Foggy Bottom.

Against this, New York's Ken Keating could only hope to campaign on a senatorial voting record so liberal that it forced him away from the national G.O.P. standard bearer and created for him a justifiable and well-merited reputation as one of the most liberal and progressive men in the Senate.

However, this legislative crown pales before the radient Kennedy name and organization. That it does is part of the tragedy of Ken Keating.

That Kennedy decided to grace New York with his new residency and candidacy is axiomatic politically; this is the greatest of all states to call your own as far as national politics is concerned.

To call your own even if it is not.

We're fairly sure that Kennedy will adapt his thoughts and loyalties to those of the Empire State in due time. However, forget not that he could have been expected to do the same had he elected to alight in any other sufficiently inviting state for this year's election.

And forget not that whatever adapting and readjusting Kennedy will have to do in order to even remember which state he is representing, would not have to be done by Rochester's (and New York's) Ken Keating; You don't have to add water and stir with Ken Keating; he comes all ready to be of service to his state of residence and birth.

And besides the hard-nosed realities of politics lie a few choice morsels for the idealist to chew upon.

Our late and still very much missed President, John F. Kennedy, once authored a masterly account on courage and politics in which he outlined the lives and crucial decisions which made ordinary politicians rise to heights of greatness and integrity such as few men ever have.

A future historian writing a revised, up-to-the-moment edition of "Profiles in Courage" would probably include the story of Ken Keating.

For it was Keating and precious few other Republicans of responsibility who sounded the alarm against the radical right of Goldwaterism; for it was Keating who continually defied Goldwater even as the Arizonan's strength increased prior to the San Francisco debacle; for it was Keating who agonized through the right-wing triumph and finally stalked out of the Cow Palace head still high, but dejected in heart and mind; and it was Keating who finally announced simultaneously his campaign for reelection and his official defection from the incredulous platform of B. Morris Goldwater.

Ken Keating would fit well into a gallery of profiles in courage. That he won't; that his individuality and honesty and conscience willl be repudiated by the voters as they almost repudiated John F. Kennedy is another part of the tragedy of Ken Keating.

Our late young President once asked of his countrymen: "ask not what America can do for you, but what you can do for America." All Ken Keating seems to be asking is the chance to do just exactly that to the best of his ability. All Robert Kennedy seems to be asking is the reverse—except substitute New York State for America.

And, finally, the feeling of being on the outside looking in. It has happened to all of us at some time or another; friends and confidants of yesterday become the acquaintences and passing-the-time-of-day people of today.

At a national or statewide level, this is, to put it kindly, a hell of a rottenway to treat someone. Someone, especially, who has served with distinction and a sense of he future and of liberalism.

That Ken Keating must fight for his political life against another liberal—and he is, everything notwithstanding—one might almost laugh (or cry) at the irony. That voters, having to choose between two equally liberal senatorial choices, may decide to discard one who has proven by his voting record that he backs up his liberal talk is another part of the tragedy of Ken Keating.

And the supreme slap in the face is the fact that, through a glamourous name ond machine, a native New Yorker and a long time representative of his state too, is being forced to the outside of his state's power circles. The pressure is being applied, the isolation is probably setting in and the resulting ostracization may soon be a grim fact.

We see buttons and stickers advertising preference for a senatorial candidate, yet we'd hope that the percentage that is still undecided (and there must be some who haven't fallen under the Kennedy hypnosis yet) will reason the issues and records carefully. That they will remember a distinguished-looking figure in the Senate that New Yorkers can point with pride to; that they will remember a voting record more liberal than nearly all Republican's and many Democrat's; that they will attempt to check what may become a frightening political weapon; the glamorous name tag upon a well-stocked carpet bag.

And, above all, that the record and political courage of Ken Keating deserves the support at the pols of any citizen who prides efficiency and respects valor.

Weep no tears for Robert Kennedy should the people of New York rally to the cause of their senator and derservedly reelect him; the former attorney general is young and will doubtless soon again be at the game of parleying name fame and fortune into a political office.

Weep, however, tears for those who spurn the incumbent because of his nominal G.O.P. label or his lack of glamour. Weep for those who reject courage and are content to see a man squeezed out of of his own state just as they themselves may have been squeezed out of an organization or group in their own dim past.

If Kennedy is victorious, New York may still have a liberal senator for itself, but it will have had lost too much pride and honor for itself to really appreciate the solid spokesman it rejected. That would be the final part of the tragedy of Ken Keating.

WEEKEND

CROUSE AUDITORIUM - SU's annual MAD show, (music, art and drama) stars with a new theme.."Culture of our Time." Featuring an all student cast, the show will run at 7 p.m. and 9 p.m. today. The show includes "The Salt City Singers," a poetry reading by Greg Kuzma, a prize-winning Cannes film, "The Goldfish Bowl" and "The Moonshine Mountain Boys." Admission is free.

REGENT THEATRE-The S U Touring Company is back from its summer tour at northeastern colleges and is presenting a play from that repetoire. Jean Anouilh's "Thieves' Carnival", a comedy farce, will be given at 8:30 p.m. today and Saturday. Tickets are available at the Regent Theatre box office.

WAR MEMORIAL - Folk trio Peter, Paul and Mary are back after a two year - absence. Their concert, given at 8:30 p.m. today, wil probably include such hits as "Blowin in the Wind," "If I Had a Hammer," and "Don't Think Twice." Tickets are available at the War Memorial box office, the SU Corner Store, and the University Hill Music Box.

CROUSE AUDITORIUM-Crouse Concerts opens the season with a flute recital at 4 p.m. on Sunday. John Oberbrunner, associate of the School of Music, will give the recital, assisted by his wife on the piano and Eleanor Boot on the flute. The program will contain the Bach Sonata in E Minor," Schubert's "Introduction and Variations on 'Ihr Blumlein Alle'," 'la Flute de Pan' by Jules Monquet, and a duet for two flutes by Khhlav. Free admission.

RKO KEITH'S-"I'd Rather Be Rich" is the first film of this double feature and Robert Goulet, Sandra Dee and Andy Williams 'all should know! Sandra plays a young girl who needs a fiancee for father to approve of. Goulet volunteers for the job while boyfriend Andy is out of town...Unfortunately, even though the characters may be puzzled, the plot is pretty predictable. Oh, well, the things one must do for money. "Sing and Swing" or Sammy Kaye returns, is the co-feature. No times available.

KALLET-GENESEE—If you're in the mood for a light double feature, try sitting through "Mail Order Bride" with Buddy Ebsen at 8 p.m., followed by a swinging sing-down in the gambling capital of the country. That's 'Viva Las Vegas" with Ann-Margaret and Elvis Presley at 9:30. True to the Elvis image and the "Birdie" reputation of sex-bomb Ann-Margaret, you can count on a stimulating combination of poker chips, moving hips, and mad passionate love all bursting into a very musical and possibly amusing flick.

SHOPPINGTOWN — "Becket" with Peter O'Toole and Richard Burton traces the relationship between a king and his rebellious subject. O'Toole as the king has a warm friendship with Becket Burton until Burbecomes archbishop and defies his king. The movie is worthwhile entertainment even for those who aren't Burton or O'Toole fans. Becket at 7 p.m. and 9:30 p.m.

ECKEL—True to the Syracuse Tradition of dragging skeltons out of musty closets, we are being graced with the slightly tarnished but nevertheless "spectacular," "Quo Vadis" this weekend. Perhaps the theatre is going along with the current political gimmick of returning to the Good Ol' Days. "Quo Vadis," meaning Whither Thou Goest, (or poossibly "Where the heck are you going?") and starring Deborah Kerr and Robert Taylor, will be shown at 6 p.m. and 9 p.m.

Action is the proper fruit of knowledge. — Thomas Fuller

Coffee Corner

SU's Warm, Friendly Spot

By JOAN FOHRMAN
PAT IACURTO

Looking for a warm friendly place to relax between classes without having to go back to the dorm — a place to play cards or chess or just sit and gab with friends, drinking coffee?

Open from 9 a.m.-4 p.m. daily, Coffee Corner is such a place. Coffee Corner is a room in the basement of Hendricks Chapel marked by a sign telling all that this is the chapel lounge. Students seem to think it is a good place for an hour break between classes.

This is especially evident in the morning when the lounge is jammed with faculty members as well as students.

An array of mulit-colored cups is prominently displayed hanging on a rack on one wall of the lounge. Next to these on a table is a coffee urn, boxes of doughnuts and a container full of change. Coffee is available for five cents when students use their own cups and ten cents when paper cups supplied by the chapel are used.

Coffee Corner is on the honor system. Students put their money into the box, make their own change and serve themselves.

Large round tables and comfortable chairs are scattered throughout the room. At lunch time, Coffee Corner is usually filled to capacity.

Graduate students and commuters are frequent users of Coffee Corner between classes and for lunch. Undergrads who live on campus and staff members in the chapel also make the lounge a second home.

Last year students were accused by the chapel staff of being careless and of leaving their empty cups and papers on the tables.

This year, however, there is not much of a problem, according to Mrs. Marjorie Thomas, secretary to the dean of the chapel, Charles C. Noble.

Several "regulars" at the Coffee Corner gave their comments about the room.

Vince Andriello and Dave Gormon, sophomores from Liverpool, said they come to the Coffee Corner everyday for lunch or between classes. They said that the commuters generally use the lobby of the Men's Gym or Coffee Corner for lunch.

"We have gotten to know many of the students who use Coffee Corner regularly," they said. They also said they feel the students are keeping the room neater this year than in the past.

Andre Rode, a sophomore from Syracuse, said he likes to come to the Coffee Corner to play chess. Rode said he believed about 50 per cent of the regular users of the Coffee Corner were commuters.

A mass of color and design is featured in the useful wall rack of cups found in the Coffee Corner of Hendricks Chapel. Students who regularly stop for a cup of coffee and a chat or that game of chess keep coffee mugs here and pay only a nickel a cup.

Tina Thomas, a senior from Syracuse, noted that the Colonial Room, down the hall form the Coffee Corner, is a "quiet and comfortable place to study."

Panhel Plans Inter-School Conference

Syracuse University Panhellenic Council will host its first fall regional planning conference this weekend with several universities attending.

Jeannette Danielain, vice president of Panhel and chairman of the conference, announced that presidents, vice presidents and rush chairmen of the Panhellenic Councils from Bucknell, Cornell University of Massachusetts, University of Pennsylvania and University of Buffalo will attend. These representatives will be weekend guests of various sororities on campus.

This regional conference "should establish better sorority and, through various discussions, benefit other Panhellinics," said Wendy Rhine, public relations chairman of Panhel.

The first session will be 7 p.m. today in the Newhouse Communications Center. Carl Frische, national Panhellenic Council area advisor, will be the keynote speaker.

Officers will hold group discussions, using the rotation system to assure coverage of all problems, Miss Danielain said.

You and your funny friends...

will get a warm welcome if your family knows what to expect. So warn the folks when you invite friends home for the weekend — with a telephone call.

This is the average man.
The men studying him aren't.

Putting together thousands of measurements, Air Force scientists designed this "typical" head. Its purpose? To help provide better protective equipment for Air Force flying personnel.

But the young men working on this project are far from average. As Air Force officers, they are working in a field that requires a high degree of technological insight.

The fact is, most Air Force jobs today call for advanced, specialized know-how. And they give young officers the opportunity to undertake vital missions of great responsibility.

For instance, an Air Force scientist may be exploring the complex field of aerodynamics. Another may be engaged in bioenvironmental engineering. A third may be studying the technology of nuclear weapons.

How many other professions give a young man such important work to do right from the start?

You can get started on an Air Force officer career by enrolling in Air Force ROTC. For information, see the Professor of Air Science.

SU Defensive Spiders Eye Explosive Jayhawker Backs

Sayers, a 6-0, 191-pound right halfback from Omaha, Neb., is the Kansans' star attraction. He is a two-time Big Eight rushing champion, netting 1,125 yards as a sophomore and another 917 last fall. Both figures ranked no. 3 in the country.

The slippery cyclone paced Kansas in rushing, scoring, pass receiving and punt and kickoff returns during the 1963 campaign.

Against the Hill eleven last season, Sayers chalked up 122 yards on 17 carries. He romped 26 yards for the lone touchdown in the 10-0 Jayhawk victory over the Orangemen.

Experts base Sayers' success on his natural cutting and dodging talents — plus his added ability as a pass receiver. Simmons calls him "the most exciting back in college football today."

Johnson, a 5-10, 186 pounder, notched an 8.1 yard per carry mark last season. He is a standout at defensive halfback and also handles the kickoffs and punts.

Renko, like Johnson a junior, is a more gifted runner than passer. He directed the 1963 Kansas win over SU. Gerhards provides the necessary blocking for the other backs and adds up-the-middle punch.

But out to prove they stand in no one's shadow are a host of Orange backs.

Little, at 5-11, 187 pounds, rushed for 82 yards on 17 carries in last weekend's losing effort to Boston College, besides snaring a 36-yard pass to set up an SU touchdown.

The other top Piety threat, Jim "Bo" Nance, lacks the speed of Sayers, Little, et al, but he has power to burn. In the BC setback, Nance blasted for 84 yards in 18 attempts and added 42 yards on a pair of kickoff returns.

Walley Mahle will direct the Orange attack, with Ron Oyer taking over at right halfback. The latter will try his hand at the punting chores.

Both the Kansas and Syracuse lines are of the "monster" variety. Anchoring coach Jack Mitchell's crew up front will be Pratt at guard, 240-pound tackle Brain Schweda and 223-pound center Larry Fairchild.

The Jayhawkers will be missing all-conference end Mike Shinn, sidelined for most of the season.

For the Hillmen, the offensive seven reads the same as in the opener, with the exception of right guard Tom Wilhelm, hobbled by a leg injury. Wilhelm should play, but 235-pound Tony Scibelli, shifted from defensive tackle, probably will start.

The "Spiders" defensive unit, however, has undergone a thorough face lifting. Soph John Krok replaces Gerry Everling at left guard, while Chomyszak will fill Scibelli's spot.

New linebackers include senior Bob Morgan in the middle and rookie Jim Cheyunski at the left corner. "Black Widow" Hal Rooney will team with Brown and Ted Holman in the secondary.

SU Runners Open Season

By NEIL KERR

Syracuse University's cross country team will host Buffalo tomorrow morning in the first of four home appearances during the '64 season. The varsity race is scheduled to begin at 11 a.m. at Drumlins.

SU's harriers captured last year's Buffalo meet mainly on the strength of greater team balance. Buffalo's fast-moving Stu Katz finished first, but SU runners took the next five places, winning 20-35. This season four of the Orange's top six men return and prospects for another victory are good.

During practice sessions Coach Bob Grieve's squad has logged nearly 200 miles in three weeks and is anxious for competition. This year's varsity roster includes senior Mike Shuster, juniors Bill Chiak, Mike Spino and Marty Miller plus sophs Tom Giordano, Bill Ramsdell, John Crawford, Dave Hannah and Dave Daubert.

However, Bill Cihak, last year's outstanding runner, has a sore leg and may be forced to withdraw from this Saturday's five-mile contest.

At 10:15 a.m. a freshman meet will be run off over a shorter three-mile course. Top rookies on SU's freshman roster include Dennis Boyle, Bruce Freeman, Kirk Woodbury, Ed Jones, Mike Schwirzer and John Tobin.

SU BOWLING

Any persons interested in bowling in the Syracuse University Classic League at 7 p.m. Thursdays should phone Women's Building ext. 2512.

Freshmen Set For Manlius

By KEN RUDNICK

The Syracuse freshman football team takes to the road today for the opening clash of its 1964 season. Orange coach Jim Shreve is looking forward optimistically to his squad's encounter with Manlius School, despite a series of injuries to some of his key performers.

Shreve's starting backfield includes quarterback Ed Reardon; Frank Parrish, Tom Coughlin, or Nicholas Kish at right half; Ed Mantie or Bill Zanieski at left half; and Larry Csonka at fullback. Csonka replaces injured first-stringer Drew Volz, who may be available for kickoff and place-kicking duties.

The Orange forward wall, with slightly more weight than the Manlius line, will feature Ed Schreck and Gary Fredericks at the tanks; Vince Bruettat outside tackle and Jim LeMessurier at inside tackle; Dennis Fitzgibbons and Dave Casmay at guard; and Jim Murphy at center. Murphy's brother, Joe, will open at tackle for Manlius.

The loss of guards Gerald Chiari and Garry Forte and fullback Arnold Frieman, all of whom were injured in last Monday's scrimmage, has cut seriously into the squad's depth.

The key offensive threat for Manlius are halfbacks Leon Angebine and Tony Kyasky and 6-4 end Gary Steele.

Schedule

1964 Orangemen of Syr

Left End

Left end GEORGE FAIR has shifted to defense this season after starring on offense in 1953. The 6-1, 195-pound junior from Woodbridge, N. J., has blazing speed, which enables him to fly downfield on punts and kickoffs.

Left Tackle

A top performer against BC last weekend was DAVE ARCHER, a 6-2, 220-pound local lad. The left tackle is is the lone senior on the Orange defensive line. Archer was drafted as a "future" by the Cleveland Browns in 1963.

Middle Guard

JOHN KROK, a 6-1, 205-pounder from Niles, Ohio, will open at middle guard against Kansas. Latest sophomore to earn a starting slot, he jumped to first team on basis of fine showing in initial BC contest.

Right Tackle

A 6-4, 255 pounder, STEVE CHOMYSZAK, will hold down the right tackle spot. Chomyszak, from Johnson City, replaces Tony Scibelli, who was moved to offense in a late position switch.

Right End

Another starting soph is HERB STECKER, a 6-0, 190-pound right end from Phillipsburg, N.J. Herb was one big reason BC gained only six first downs last week. He earned All-State honors in high school.

Left Linebacker

JIM CHEYUNSKI, a soph from West Bridgewater, Mass., has come from nowhere to gain starting nod against Kansas as left linebacker. Standing 6-1, 190-pounds, he played fullback for the 1953 Hill frosh.

Middle Linebacker

Joining Krok and Cheyunski as new defensive starters is middle linebacker BOB MORGAN. He shows good size at 6-2, 215 pounds. The Kenvil, N.J., boy rose from fourth string during spring practice to present spot.

Right Linebacker

Right linebacker for the second straight week will be MURRAY JOHNSON, a 5-11, 205-pound soph from Amesbury, Mass. Impressed more on offense for '63 Tangerine eleven, notching 123 yards rushing and 7.0 average.

Left Half

Safety

Another junior, HAL ROONEY, will hold down the safety slot. He serves as the leader of the Spiders, is known as the "Black Widow." The 6-2, 190-pound athlete from Patchoque played baseball last spring.

Right Half

CHARLIE BROWN looms as top-notch speed demon for Orange club. He will open at defensive right half and also handle punt returns. The junior from Massillon, Ohio, boasts good combination of speed, size at 6-1, 195-pounds.

cuse-Defense, Offense

Left Guard

The left guard, HOWIE cCARD, is a former end. 6-2, 205-pound junior om Jordon, he moved to is new position during pring practice.

Center

Anchoring the line is PAT KILLORIN, a 6-2, 220-pound junior from Watertown. He is a strong blocker, using his weight to advantage. Killorin performed with the alternate unit in 1963.

Right Guard

Right guard TONY SCIBELLI, from Springfield, Mass., tips the scales at 235 pounds. He's capable of playing both ways, has taken over the spot vacated by an injury to Tom Wilhelm.

Inside Tackle

Inside tackle belongs to another newcomer, HARRIS WIENKE, a 19-year-old from Niagara Falls. The 6-2, 210-pounder jumped from nowhere to gain a starting nod against Boston College. He missed all frosh action with an injury.

Outside Tackle

GARY BUGENHAGEN, the Orange outside tackle, stands 6-2, 230-pounds and is only a sophomore. The lad from Clarence Center was the top rookie lineman last spring and was shifted to tackle from a guard spot.

Left End

At left end is JIM RIPPS, a 6-1, 210pound enior from Webster. The ugged blocker could be in ine for national recognition. Ie snagged nine passes for 07 yards during the '63 ampaign.

Quarterback

Our quarterback is WALLEY MAHLE, a lanky senior from Waterford, Pa. He led the 1963 squad in rushing by a large margin, gaining 457 yards on 78 carries. Walley, at 6-3, 195 boasts good speed, is difficult to tackle.

Right End

HARRIS ELLIOTT, who comes in at 6-2, 210 pounds, will open on the right flank. The steady junior from Rumsford, Me., improved rapidly last season. Elliott also has shown prowess as a defensive end.

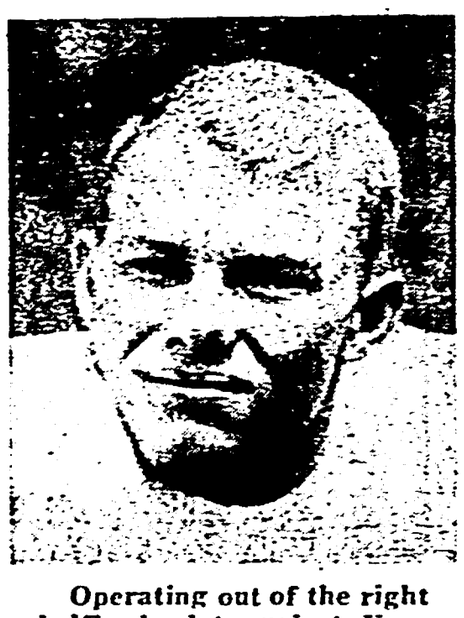
Left Half

Rookie FLOYD LITTLE, a 5-11, 190-pounder from New Haven, Conn., leads the pack at left half. He runs the hundred in 9.7 seconds. Floyd paced the frosh with 295 yards for 8.0 average last season.

Fullback

Hill fullback JIM NANCE needs little introduction. The husky 6-1, 225-pound senior from Indiana, Pa., netted 81 yards against BC last weekend and promises to do the same in Archbold Stadium Saturday.

Right Half



Operating out of the right halfback slot against Kansas will be 5-11, 195-pound junior RON OYER. He played on defense at Boston, but has been inserted into the offensive lineup for more blocking power.

Men's Sign-up Date Set Oct. 1

Registration for men's upperclass rush has been postponed until October 1-2, the dean of men's office announced Thursday.

Registration will take place in the lobby of H.B. Crouse Classroom Building. Information pertaining to rush may be obtained at the registration table in the lobby.

Drop, Add Procedures Scheduled by Registrar

Drop and add procedures for undergraduates have been announced by Registrar Edwin D. Smith.

To drop or add a course, a student must obtain the proper form from his academic dean's office. After filling out the form and having the dean sign it, the student should take the card to the Administration Bldg.

Juniors and seniors dropping courses in their major field must have the form signed by their advisor as well as their dean.

Great is the self-control of those who paint the white lines on the highway. Never do they yield to the temptation to draw pictures or write their initials.

Wednesday is the last day to add a course.

Courses may be dropped through the regular procedure up until one week after mid-semester. Students must petition their academic deans to drop a course after this date.

LATE GRID TIX

Late issue football tickets and ID cards may be picked up this weekend in the Trophy Room of Archbold Gymnasium. The items will be available from 6-9 p.m. Friday and 9-12 a.m. Saturday prior to the Kansas game. Tickets and IDs can also be obtained the weekend of Oct. 2-3 at the same times.

ESSPA Starts 27th Convention

High school editors and advisors from 80 New York schools will be on hand to attend the opening session of the 27th annual convention of the Empire State School Press Association today.

Syracuse University vice-president Frank P. Piskor will welcome more than 500 delegates to the first meeting of the two day convention at 11 a.m. in Hendricks Chapel. Dean of the Journalism School, Wesley C. Clark will introduce the guest speaker, Prof. Edmund C. Arnold.

Included in the events scheduled for today are scholarship examinations in newswriting (based on Prof. Arnold's speech) and current events and an advisors' luncheon at Sadler Hall.

Franklyn S. Barry, superintendent of schools at Syracuse will speak at the luncheon on the importance of the school publication in the school and the community.

Several sessions for delegates and advisors will follow in the afternoon.

Among the speakers who will conduct the meetings are Prof. John Rider, whose topic is Broadcast Journalism, and Prof. Robert Murphy, chairman of the Newspaper Department, at SU who will deliver an introduction to good writing.

Andrew Porte, editor-in-chief of the Daily Orange, will speak on the world of college publication.

A photography clinic for pre-registered students will be presented by Prof. Fred A. Demarest and Photography Instructor Thomas A. Richards. William Ward, executive secretary of ESSPA, will discuss humorous writing.

Charles W. Ferguson, senior editor of the Reader's Diget, will be the guest speaker of the awards banquet, 7:45 p.m. in Sims Dining Hall. Winners of the scholarship contests and newspaper and yearboook competition will be presented at the banquet. Saturday's seminars will be held at the Hotel Syracuse.

Former high school editors, presently students at SU, Patricia Tracey, Charles Barney, Laurel Deutsch and Clayton Richards will speak as a panel looking back at their publications.

The Syracuse-Kansas football game concludes the convention.

In a three-page-protest letter to Carleton, Cornell residents lamented the confusion, broken friendships "unfavorable study conditions" and IBM card address changes which the uprooting will precipitate.

"It appears completely incongruous with common sense that we be forced to break ties and be forced to readjust," the letter read.

Carleton will speak to the Cornellians at 9:30 p.m. tonight on the reasons for the move.

ROBERT H. KETCHUM

SU's Student-Administrator

A student administrator? Sounds like the answer to a Syracusan's plea.

Robert H. Ketchum, appointed assistant to Chancellor William P. Tolley June 5, is a part-time philosophy student and a full-time administrator.

"You really can't know what the students are think- unless you're sitting with them in the classroom," Ketchum said in his book-lined Administration Bldg. office.

Ketchum, registered in an undergraduate logic class and a graduate course on Plato, is working toward his Ph.D. His role as the Chancellor's assistant is to handle the overflow of problems and correspondences from the Chancellor's desk.

"In my three months at Syracuse," he said, "my assignments have ranged from the mundane to the spectacular.

"I've got a file og papers two feet deep, and so far, hardly any of the problems can be filed under the same heading" the tall (6' 2") administrator added.

Wearing a typically collegiate tie (madras plaid) with his typically executive suit (dark),

ROBERT H. KETCHUM

Ketchum mentioned that student administration antagonism is common in colleges.

"The Harvard Crimson used to say things about President Nathan Pusey that would curl your hair," he said.

Ketchum came to Syracuse directly from Harvard, following his graduation from the school of divinity.

A 1950 graduate of Union College, he has been a physicist, a salesman, a student at the Sorbonne in Paris and the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton Graduate School of Finance and has served a term in the United States Army.

Ketchum replaces John F. Olson former vice president and executive assistant to the Chancellor, who is now president of Oklahoma City University.

In discussing his classes, Ketchum said he reacts toward his professors in much the same way he did as a junior at Union.

Playing the dual role of student and administrator, Ketchum said, merely proves that: "You are primarily what you are, not what you do."

ORGANIZATIONS MUST REGISTER

The parade will ascend to Mount Olympus and circulate around the campus, ending on the quad.

Plans originally called for the rally to be held on the steps of Hendricks Chapel. Permission to use the chapel steps was denied, however, because the rally would disrupt with religious services held in the sanctuary by the Sl' B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation.

A spokesman for Traditions Commission said that all Goon floor representatives should pick up their freshman floors on the way to the rally.

Frosh Can Mix With Elders

Contrary to rumors which have been circulating among students, freshmen are permitted to socialize with upperclassmen at all religious or social functions according to Susan Sommers, Panhellenic Council rush chairman.

Miss Sommers made this statement clarify a question raised by Rabbi Melton Elefant, in regard to freshman attendance at a dance sponsored by the Hillel Foundation, 8 p.m. Saturday. She said this would hold true as well as at all ensuing social activities involving upperclassmen. Miss Sommers noted that freshmen are allowed to participate with upperclassmen as members of various organizations on campus.

New Dean

Business Plans Revealed By Cox

By DONALD J. LAWLESS

Robert G. Cox, new dean of the College of Business Administration, has planned improvements to the business program which, in his description, already "have many strengths."

Cox spoke softly and quietly but with a certain amount of pride about his planned innovations.

"One is in the area of an expanded business administration master's degree program," he said.

Leaning back into his desk chair, his hands in his pockets, he noted, "We have the outstanding faculty for it."

The beginnings of a doctoral program is another of the dean's plans for the business school.

"I would like to see a board of advisors made up of prominert industrialists from upstate New York to help improve the business curriculum at Syracuse," he said, pausing momentarily to swat a buzzing fly.

"They could inform us of current trends or changes in business," he added.

The dark-haired father of three is also interested in working with University College to develop an inter-university system of transferring adult education credits. This kind of system would enable young management personnel, working for a master's degree in business at adult education centers, to continue such a program even if their company moves them to another community.

A Phi O Begins First Service Project

Alpha Phi Omega will launch its first service project of the year with a Sunday night meeting for the semi-annual campus blood drive.

The 26 members of the service fraternity are well known at the campus infirmary. Everyday, fraternity members run errands to Marshall Street and deliver food to any students in the infirmary. In past years, the organization has donated both money and assistance in keeping the morale of the infirmary patients high.

The organization was established at Syracuse in 1931.

Any member of Alpha Phi Omega may also belong to a social fraternity.

Information concerning the fraternity's fall rush will be issued soon. Pledges work on a pledge project of their choice.

SU Prof Conducts Work On Spaceship Structure

Spaceships may travel farther and with bigger loads because of research being conducted at Syracuse University.

Dr. R. M. Evan-Iwanowski, professor of mechanical engineering, is working with two undergraduate students and five graduate students on five different projects for basic research for U.S. government agencies, including the one that plans to put the two-man Gemini capsule into orbit later this year.

Also aiding in the project is an associate professor at the University of Tokyo, Japan.

The first project, recently completed, resulted in four publications and the awarding of a doctorate and two masters' degrees.

The primary research now being conducted deals with the configuration of existing materials or thin-walled structures.

Evan-Iwanowski compared the problems that he faces with those of building a house of cards. The project is trying to discover the best way to construct space equipment.

Most of the work being done is academic, with the emphasis on ideas. The procedure used is analysis, theory, and explanation through experimentation.

The research is being financed by a $47,000 grant from the National Science Foundation; the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, and other smaller grants.

The project began last April in an empty basement of the drama building. After the current problems have been solved Evan-Iwanowski said he plans to experiment on the material that will best fit the type of structure chosen.

SU SUSPENDS EIGHT IN MORALITY CASE

Men Evacuate Root, Hurst In Latest Housing Change

The university's housing shuffle became more confused over the weekend as Hurst and Root cottages, housing upperclass men students, were vacated to relieve an overcrowding of women in other university housing.

The two cottages brought the number of men's living centers relocated to three, as Cornell cottage had earlier been informed of a move.

Residents of all three cottages were to be moved Sunday.

David H. Tatham, assistant to the dean of men, explained the reasoning behind the move to the Hurst and Root residents Friday night.

Tatham told the residents of the S. Crouse avenue cottages that the moves were made in order to provide maximum utilization of dormitory facilities, as well as to relieve women's overcrowding.

Dean of Men Jim G. Carleton said earlier last week that all cottage assignments had been designated as temporary housing. However, Cornell residents claimed an oversight had been made in their assignments.

However, Hurst resident Jesse Smith, a Daily Orange reporter, said, "We chose this cottage last year; we weren't just placed. We like the homey atmosphere and don't wish to move to a 'big dorm.'"

Another objection to the move was raised by head residents of four S. Crouse avenue women's cottages. One said the men were needed as a "defense," citing a series of minor attacks in the area recently.

The head resident of one cottage said that boys heard screams and aided in the protection of the girls. Mott, Lund, Genesee and Wilson cottages ni the area house a total of 81 girls.

Some of the residents of currently-overcrowded Winchell Hall are slated to move into Hurst, but several Winchell residents slated for relocation indicated to the Daily Orange they would rather remain in Winchell.

Hurst residents reported that Winchell women were unanimously opposed to the move.

The Winchell residents told them they were comfortable in the "crowed" conditions. Also stated was a desire not to separate newly-formed friendships.

Alcohol, Sex Involves Seven Men, One Girl

By ANDREW PORTE
Editor-in-Chief
and
DAVID SOSNA

Eight Syracuse University students have been suspended by university personnel deans in a case involving violations of university rules on drinking and morality, the Daily Orange learned Friday.

The eight included seven freshman men and one upperclass woman, who were involved in the incident in a university cottage Saturday, Sept. 19.

According to Daily Orange sources, at least three of the men had been drinking in the cottage during the broadcast of the Boston College football game. Following the broadcast, the group met the others and the girl, presumably in the Orange, local S. Crouse avenue bar.

From the bar, the group returned to the cottage, where one of the group reportedly had relations with the girl. Sources claimed the other six were in the room at the time.

The seven men and the girl left soon after, due to pressure from other members of the cottage.

Three of the seven lived in the cottage, while the other four lived in larger university dormitories, according to sources.

Deans Evade Confirmation

Dean of Men Jim G. Carleton, speaking to the Daily Orange earlier Friday, said seven freshmen had been suspended in a disciplinary case for "violations of regulations including the rule in regard to the possession and consumption of alcoholic beverages."

Carleton stated that further violations were involved, but would not elaborate.

Carleton at no time indicated that the seven were suspended in the circumstances described above.

Dean of Women Marjorie C. Smith confirmed that one girl had been suspended in a recent case but would not elaborate.

The most severe penalty issued by the dean of men's office was one indefinite suspension. The minimum penalty was a one-semester suspension. Carleton explained the penalty for each student depended on the degree of involvement in the incident.

Student Court did not have any part in the case, it was revealed by Franklin Richmond, chief justice of the court. Carleton explained that the case was not within the court's jurisdiction.

Richmond explained that the court has no jurisdiction in cases involving "psychological disturbances as deemed by the dean of men or dean of women, occurences when school is not in session, moral conduct, academic dishonesty and women's curfews."

The suspensions mark one of the most sweeping disciplinary actions in recent years by the university. Student Court suspended a student for three years in December for numerous violations of university rules. A year previously a student received a two-year suspension for violations of university and civil codes.

Bookstore Thefts Start Once More; Called 'Inevitable'

By LYNN KAGAN

What has been termed an "inevitable" amount of shoplifting does not have the Syracuse University Bookstore worried.

The Daily Orange discovered Friday that from six to eight thefts were attempted during the first week of the semester.

All the students involved were apprehended and reported to the dean of men's office for disciplinary action, said Burton L. Fink, bookstore director.

He noted a certain amount of "inevitable stealing" is to be expected each year.

About five dollars worth of merchandise, consisting of small items like pens and cigarette lighters, was taken, he said.

According to Fink, there has been less shoplifting this year than in the past. This problem comes up every semester, he said, but "when people realize they are getting caught, it falls off."

Closed circuit television, warning signs and plain-clothes employes stationed around the store keep incidents of theft down to a minimum, he said.

One freshman has already been put on disciplinary probation until January, 1965 for a theft which occurred during orientation week, according to David A. Tatham, assistant dean of men.

Another early case was a misunderstanding between a special student and the bookstore. No disciplinary action was taken, he said.

Later cases of theft will be referred to Student Court, which meets Thursday.

Sid Waldman, manager of the main bookstore, said the students are given a chance to pay for any items they pick up. If they try to avoid paying, they are apprehended, he said. There is no way of catching anyone who is not seen in the act, he noted.

No women students have

Regional Conference

Panhels Review Their Problems

By SANDY LAPIN

Syracuse Panhellenic and guests were urged to know what Panhel is, how it operates and their responsibility to it, by Mrs. Carl Frische, National Panhellenic Council area advisor and keynote speaker of Friday evening's session of the Fall Regional Planning Conference at the Newhouse Communications Center.

Rushing, inter-sorority relations, communication and promotion of Panhel, Panhel on campus and Panhel training were the five topics discussed by the groups consisting of guests of the Panhellenics from Middlebury College, Cornell University, University of Pennsylvania, University of Buffalo, Bucknell University, Brooklyn College and members of Syracuse Panhel. The guests were welcomed by Dean Marjorie Smith.

The guests explained how these facets of Panhel are carried on in their schools. There was a tremendous amount of exchange of ideas, commented Marcella Rast, president of Syracuse Panhel.

The rushing procedure on the various campuses, and how they differed from the procedure Syracuse follows was the main topic of the rushing discussion group. Suggestions were made for simplifying rush and making it more informal and relaxed.

A Black Mark For Syracuse

When it happened at Cornell, we scoffed and said it couldn't happen here. But Friday the Daily Orange learned of Syracuse's own shocking tale of abuse and misuse of alcohol and sex.

Today eight of our fellow students are not with us, because they decided they were not mature enough for the responsibilities of college life. They decided the rules of society and the university were for other people — not for them.

Seven of the eight were freshman men. Because of a few seemingly harmless drinks, some may never return to college. Others will go through school with a black mark on their record.

The other was a girl. We can comment no further on the tragedy of this seemingly-educated human life.

The Daily Orange has decided to withhold the names of the persons involved, although sources have revealed the names of every person in the case.

Our object is to print the news, and tragically enough, this incident is news. It is not good news; it will put a black mark on the university's name.

But let us not judge the university too harshly, for the seven were freshmen, away from home for the first time, overly eager to attempt something new and daring. They have learned that university and moral codes are not something to be regarded lightly.

Indeed, the university must be commended in its prompt actions in suspending the students. It is to be further commended for giving minimal penalties to those involved as followers rather than leaders.

Some may say this incident is collegiate; we say it is disgraceful.

Bull by the Horns

Education

By Rich Turner

Last night I was fortunate to have an interview with Roscoe "Half Moon" Mudflap, Syracuse '47, one of the truly great campus leaders of all time. He walked in wearing a very natty sharkskin suit and a hand painted tie embellished with a nude chorus girl. After commenting on his "I'm Particular" button, we proceeded with the interview.

"Say Half Moon, what are you doing now—stocks, insurance?"

"No, Rich, I'm in another line of work. I'm a Senior Track Driver in New Jersey."

(After Mr. Mudflap's remarks I realized what America really needs a good five cent breath mint.)

"I think some of the people would like to know how you got your knickname."

"Well, you see, being in student government you have to straddle the fence and when the guys in the house would go down and moon a sorority I'd preserve my dignity by wearing my specially designed underwear."

"Could you tell us which of your courses helped you the most?"

"Yes first aid came in handy, and then there was rhythm and dance—very handy at truck stops."

"Anything else?"

"Yeah, I drive up north a lot so Canadian Geography was very helpful too."

"Do you have any comments to make on what you've seen up here?"

"Yes, I don't like that big concrete bunker down next to the bursar's office—with all this war talk it gives me the creeps."

"Uh, Half Moon, that's not a bunker. It's the Newhouse Center."

"Newhouse Center—Oh, Expanding the Home Ec School. Great, great!"

"I understand you were very big in student government when you were in college."

Half Moon suddenly jumped up on the chair he was sitting on, and with all his old spirit, gave the sis, boom, bah cheer).

"Yeah (pant) I was. I remember the big highlight of student government was the annual inter-organizational taffy pull. My senior year somebody threw some vodka in the butternut flavoring and they had to carry half the Phi Eps home completely smashed."

"Oh, student government was doing important things even then."

"That's right-say, do they still do boondoggle at legislature meetings?"

"Well (cough) in closing, do you have anything to say to today's college student?"

"Yeah, get into student government and learn how to double clutch. It may come in handy after graduation."

LETTERS

Watson

To the Editor:

The social fairness of the event which happened Tuesday evening in front of Watson Dormitory deserves our immediate and serious consideration.

It was an issue of majority rights. In a modern democracy we all know the majority should have its way at any costs. Thus, it was mandatory (by natural law and the U.S. constitution!) that the food-vending trucks whose motors so irritated the majority of nearby residents should leave.

We are sure the vendors must have heard the initial polite requests issued. The always civil young men in Watson shouted their supplications more or less simultaneously from their dorm windows.

The vendors, however, ignored these requests. So, it was only right that the residents of Watson (displaying, by the way, a soul-uplifting kind of freshman spirit) should, as a unified body, approach three of the noisiest vendors and force their departure.

Let us praise those especially courageous boys who climbed atop the hated food trucks and beat on the roofs; let us also laud those who attempted to push the trucks down the street.

Furthermore, may we let this be a warning to those three fortunate vendors whom the freshmen eventually frightened away — this time unharmed.

Some might object saying that the action taken by Watson's residents was dangerous and uncivil and that peaceful petitions should have been emphasized before the more violent approach.

However, we all know moderation is no virtue and extremism is no vice. To have simply initiated legal techniques, petitions, and so forth, obviously would have been too slow and ineffective.

We must, furthermore, condemn those few apathetic students in Watson who preferred to sit and study about majority-rule rather than actively and immediately participate in its execution.

An occasional incident of mob rule never hurt any democracy, did it?

John Dunham '68

Gripe

To the Editor:

Monday's editorial is on a par with its title, "New York, Si, Bobby, No" — puerile, parochial, super-natjonalistic, mob psychology — the same kind of sloganeering Castro used on the peasants.

The DO staff and many others in New York have made a fetish of the carpetbagger issue which they use to ward off the realities of twentieth century politics and the really important issues of the election.

On one hand Kennedy is criticised for using New York as a stepping-stone, while on the other hand it is intimated that he will not serve New York's interests if elected. Clearly any stepping-stone Kennedy uses will be the record he has made, and if this record depends on New York's interests being served, then surely he will serve them to the best of his ability.

It is said that Kennedy cannot serve because he does not know the state's problems. At a time when New York's interests mirror the interests of the whole nation and when almost all congressional problems are of national concern, who can deny that a man of national scope could serve at least as well as a provincial?

The real issue is whether Kennedy can do more for New York than Keating. Why don't you go back and write an editorial on that issue and forget the slogans?

Esley Hamilton '67

Zients

To the Editor:

As I remember, one of the first rules with which an incoming freshman is indoctrinated at Syracuse University is the rule which prohibits plagarism. Therefore I have become quite disturbed since I read Jeff Zients' column in the DO of September 23rd. It annoyed me to see Zients stealing the 10, 9, 8, etc. Goldwater gag from the Second City company in New York and if you will from: The Third Ear which is now using the line.

Although it also annoyed me that Zients relied solely on the wit of others for the content of his column, his failure to footnote this admittedly poor effort was particularly insulting to this reader. If Zients has nothing original to say about the vast world of entertainment then he should say nothing and his column should be made available to a more aware and certainly a more responsible person.

My chagrin over the appearance of this column was heightened by its inclusion in the same issue with the sensitive and perceptive piece written by Ken Auletta. It is heartening to see the Daily Orange concern itself with an issue of some lasting importance in addition to the teapot tempests we have all grown so bored with.

Perhaps the same admonition can be applied to Syracuse University as I am addressing to you. Keep up the good work; erase the mediocre.

The Sounds of Jazz

Newport: Part One

by Bill Newman

The Newport Jazz Festival is the world's oldest, biggest and most important event of its kind. Each year, for the past ten years, on the fourth of July weekend, thousands of spectators have joined some of the best musical talents of our time in, what has become the world series of jazz, The Newport Jazz Festival.

This year I had the pleasure of attending the Saturday evening concert at Newport. It would be impossible to discuss the entire evening's performances in just one column. For this reason I have decided to dedicate several columns to this concert. In this way I hope to make the performances more meaningful in relation to the essentials of jazz which I mentioned in my last column.

It is impossible to assign a specific meaning to every piece or solo in jazz. The same holds true for classical music. Some music is programmed and some is not. The second half of the Saturday night concert at Newport opened with one of the most important pieces of program music in recent jazz history, "The Freedom Now Suite." It was performed by composer, drummer, leader Max Roach and his wife, vocalist Abby Lincoln.

The suite, which was performed brilliantly by Roach and group, depicts musically the history of the American Negro. Each movement includes a melodic line, a lyric, sung agonizingly by Abby Lincoln, and forceful drum solo by Roach.

One movement, based on a chain gang rhythm was an excellent example of how the jazz musician, here drummer Roach, employes a device to convey a message. Roach's solo merely consisted of the same simple rhythm which he had played all through the piece. The bombastic technical display, often rendered in drum solos was completely absent. For close to two minutes Roach merely pounded out this simple, steady rhythm, simulating the pounding of the chain gang on the rocks in the prison yard.

This device reached and quieted a crowd of over 50,000 people. When Abby Lincoln and the Roach group resumed, a sigh of relief was audible. A crisis had passed on this Negro chain gang. It was a simple but penatrating device. Roach and group had communicated with thousands, and put them in a setting 100 years removed from the American scene.

On the performance of this group in general, I found little fault. In later movements of the suite Roach proved why he is a living legend. The technical ability and musical taste of the seasoned drummer is beyond question. The caliber of the musicians in his group is the finest and Abby Lincoln remains one of the most expressive and talented vocalists in today's musical secene.

Max Roach remains deeply embedded in the hard bop school of jazz yet the variety of tonal and rhythmic effects that this group uses shows a constant awarness of musical change in both the classical and jazz fields.

Next week we'll look at Newport Part Two, The Dave Brubeck Quartet. Just a brief reminder; tonight at 11 p.m. "The Sounds of Jazz" begins a new year on WAER radio.

Poor Man's Review

By JONATHAN RUSSELL

"I'd Rather be Rich" is not, as the title might well suggest, a screen adaptation of Adam Smith's "Wealth of Nations." Instead, it is an ostentatious Hollywood situation comedy which stars Sandra Dee, those two warblers, Andy Williams and Robert Goulet, and those two wonderful old timers, Maurice Chevalier and Hermione Gingold.

The plot revolves around the daughter (Sandra Dee) of a French industrial magnate (Maurice Chevalier, mais naturellement) who suddenly suffers from an acute heart attack.

His daughter, who is out of town watching her fiance (Andy Williams) perform in his nightclub act jets back to the mansion to see her father, whom she is informed of his illness.

She rushes to her father's bedside, thinking his death is imminent, to find out that her father's last wish is to meet her fiance. Unfortunately, she left her heart in Chicago so she snatches the first elegible male in sight. Chance would have it that it is Robert Goulet, a bright, young, handsome, aspiring chemical engineer?

The movie then becomes a case of mistaken identities as the affluent Frenchman, who seems to have recuperated from his attack, thinks that the engineer is his daughter's true love. And after about 95 minutes of mish-mash, it turns out he really is.

There are, however, some amusing scenes in the picture but they are but isolated incidences. Perhaps the best performances are those turned in by Chevalier and Gingold who plays his delightful nurse. Chevalier's propensity for smoking cigars while not in the best interests of public health is an amusing incident, as he has unsuccessfully managed to plant them in inconspicuous places in his room.

Unfortunately, the movie bears the unmistakable stamp of Hollywood. Intended for entertainment purposes, it is unreal in action. There are a series of minor tragedies and major successes throughout the picture. Still the movie is good for a laugh or two.

ROTC Selects Cadet Head

A senior Army ROTC cadet has been chosen to lead the Army ROTC Corp for the following year.

Cadet Major David C. Boysen has been selected as the Joint Army-Air Force cadet commander for the coming year. Boysen was chosen for this honor because of his high academic standing, his knowledge of ROTC and his superior performance while attending the ROTC six-week summer camp at Indiantown Gap Military Reservation, Pa. Boysen is a senior enrolled in the six-year liberal arts-law program.

Regent Theatre

New Cultural Program

After a brief respite from professional summer repertory, the Regent Theatre, opens its new season of cultural programs.

Jean Anouilh's "Thieves Carnival" will have its final performances at 8:30 p.m., Oct. 1, 2, and 3. Recently performed on campuses in three states by the SU Dramatic Touring Company, the comedy describes what happens when a bored aristocrat invites three thieves to be her house guests.

Other programs slated for the Regent Theatre this season are broad in scope. National as well as local presentations will embrace the arts of film, dance, concert and drama in an attempt to appeal to all age groups.

For the very young, the Children's Theatre, is sponsoring a series of New York Traveling Playhouse productions, including "Pinocchio" and "The Secret Treasure Room." "Pinocchio" will be presented at 2 p.m., Sunday, Oct. 25, while "The Secret Treasure Room" will be given at the same time on Sunday, April 11.

Eight film lectures have been scheduled for the annual World Adventure Tour. The film-lectures will feature most of the world's continents and will all start at 8 p.m.

Scheduled movies are: "A Summer in Italy" with Ted Bumiller, Oct. 19; "Petite Belgique" and Robert Davis, Nov. 16; "Exploring the Lands Down Under" with John M. Goddard, Dec. 14; "Trailing Lewis and Clark to Oregon," by Thayer Soule, Jan. 13; "Tangier to Istanbul" with Clifford Kamin, Feb. 8; and "Search for the Twisting Makone" with Quentin Keynes, March 10.

This season's Celebrity Series wil bring to the Regent Theatre stage The National Players in two Shakespearean productions: "Twelfth Night" and "Hamlet." "Twelfth Night" will be given at 4 p.m. on Oct. 9 and 11. "Hamlet" will be seen at 8:30 p.m. on Oct. 10.

From a selection of modern playwrites, Edward Albee and Eugene O'Neil will have their works staged. Albee's "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" will be presented at 8 p.m., Oct. 20 and 21. The Circle in the Square Touring Company will give O'Neill's "Desire Under the Elms" at 8:30 p.m. on Nov. 20.

Emlyn Williams, star of Broadway's controversial hit "The Deputy," will be featured as Charles Dickens in a night of readings of Dickens' work.

Another feature of the Regent's cultural program will be the Tuesday film Series. Presenting a program of classic foreign and domestic films, the series will range from "Don Quixote" to "Our Man in Havana."

Tickets for any of these events are available at the Regent Theatre box office.

Faruqi Says

College Easier For Foreigners

By DAVE WARD

Foreign students "sweat" less in college because they are better prepared with basic facts than American students.

This comment was made by Dr. Ismail R. Faruqi, a Moslem and native of Lebanon.

Faruqi, new professor of religion at Syracuse, said after the sixth grade schools in the United States tend to put more emphasis on thinking than on basic facts.

Foreign schools work just the other way, he said, and, for example, their students can usually write and speak three languages other than their own when they leave secondary school.

After they enter college, however, Faruqi said he felt U.S. and foreign students become more alike.

Faruqi's main fields of study are history of religions and Islamics.

Faruqi lived in Pakistan from 1961-63 where he worked with the Institute of Islamic Research. One of the main purposes of the institute, he said, was to advise the Pakistani government on the "Islamisity" of legislation and administration.

Islamisity is the concern of the religion of Islam with matters of state. Islam is the Pakistani state religion.

Other uses of the institute were to "interpret Islamic traditions in light of modern developments" and to train Pakistanis for future work at the institute, he said.

Foreign and U.S. students are equally religious, Faruqi noted. He said most students are religious but that they needed to have "the surface scratched" in order to bring their religious attitudes to light.

The purpose of his courses, Religion I and Religion III, is to scratch this surface of religious thought in his students, he explained.

While teaching at McGill University before working in Pakistan, Faruqi began writing a book about Christianity from the Moslem point of view, under a fellowship from the Rockefeller Foundation.

Faruqi said his book should help set up a dialogue between Moslems and Christians. It will at least give Moslems a clearer picture of Christianity, he said.

The book will be published in the near future by McGill University Press.

Faruqi studied at the American University of Beirut, Lebanon. In 1948, he came to the U.S. to study reigion at Indiana University, where he met his wife. He also has done work at Harvard and McGill Universities.

On his return to the U.S. a year ago he was a resident scholar at the University of Chicago Divinity School.

Panhels Review Problems

group suggested setting up a committee consisting of all the social or activities chairmen of the various houses which would meet with the Panhel chairman. They also suggested continuing exchange dinners and get-togethers.

The main point of the Panhel communications discussion group was to make Panhellenic known as a unit rather than an organization comprising of representatives of the individual houses on campus.

A Panhel newsletter was suggested to include topics to be written on by the sorority women themselves. Panhellenic on Parade, which consisted of an exhibit by each SU sorority was discussed and evaluated. Some members felt that a greater emphasis should be given to a Panhellenic theme rather than to the individual sororities.

The group discussing Panhel on campus put forth three major suggestions. The first was a need for closer relations between the InterFraternity Council and Panhel. They termed it a "joint Greek image."

They also felt that the administration should be included in activities such as exchange dinners, and that there should be a greater understanding and exchange of ideas between the administration and Panhel.

The major point of the discussion of Panhel training was that all sorority women need to be informed about Panhel rather than just the house presidents and one delegate. Different procedures for Panhel representation will be discussed at future Panhel meetings.

Miss Rast evaluated the conference at the Saturday morning session in the Alumnae Lounge of the Women's Building by saying, "I don't think this conference can be evaluated now. Only time will reveal its true significance and success." She challenged the sorority women to end their talks and discussions and begin to act.

HBC Lobby Serves Many Organizations

By SALLY BANKS

That modern building situated on our main campus, known as "HBC" to all who live at Syracuse University, is used for something besides classes and offices.

The lobby of Huntington B. Crouse Classroom Building is used by organizations and clubs for selling tickets and for membership and registration drives.

Already several organizations have used the lobby this semester. The Young Republicans club has had representatives and a table there since last Monday. Joel Rosenberg, president, said Friday the lobby was a good place because students stop by between classes, just to talk.

They even ask for help in their citizenship assignments, he said. Students also have the chance to debate and argue different viewpoints, he noted.

Rosenberg stated that his main objective was "to have people read our material and basically make up their own minds." HBC has served this purpose, he said.

Members of Boar's Head were also using HBC lobby last week, selling tickets to "Thieves Carnival," the first major production of the year. Holly Hink, apprentice chairman of Boar's Head, said "sales haven't been too good but they should be picking up soon. If anyone wants tickets, the HBC lobby is the best place to get them."

The lobby will be used this week and next by students. The Young Democrats and Young Republicans will be in the lobby until Tuesday. Student Senate will be there from today-Oct. 5. for voter registration. Thursday and Friday InterFraternity Council will set up a table for upperclass fraternity rush. The senior class will be selling mums and buttons for Parents' Weekend from Monday-Friday, Oct. 9, according to the registrar's office.

To reserve the tabes students must get in touch with Registrar Edwin D. Smith. Mrs. Miriam Peggs, secretary to the Registrar Edwin D. Smith.

Mrs. Miriam Peggs, secretary to the registrar, said that any club or organization that is registered with the university may use the lobby for one week. This is to give everyone a chance, she said.

The only priority given for times and dates is for the Chancellor and vice presidents, she said. An application form must be filled out by club representatives for use of the lobby. This can be done in the registrar's office in 204 Administration Bldg.

Tables

Tables are constantly in sight in Huntington B. Crouse Classroom Building. HBC serves as a temporary office and meeting place for those organizations needing a centrally located area to publicize their events. Students find the building convenient as a lounge.

Registration Voter Booths Set for HBC

A voter registration booth staffed by volunteers from Student Senate and the Syracuse University Committee on Equality will be open this week in the lobby of Huntington B. Crouse Hall.

The booth will be open 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday - Friday. It will have pamphets on voting qualifications, registration dates and procedure, and absentee ballots, in New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Connecticut, and Massachusetts, said Kathleen Kapsol, chairman of the registration drive.

The organization will offer baby sitting services to married students during the registration period.

Bookstore . . .

been involved in shopfifting this semester. Waldman said it was more difficult to catch women because of their purses, which they are not required to put in lockers as in most other college stores.

University Receives Study Grant

The National Science Foundation has granted Syracuse University $27,800 for support of research in the field of sociology and anthropology.

The three-year research program entitled "The Evolution of Ecological Adjustment" is being directed by Dr. Lawrence Krader, professor of sociology and anthropology.

Krader said that he and a graduate assistant, to be selected, will set up a center for the study.

"The study will be concentrated upon the African and Asian continents and the Middle East," Dr. Krader said.

It will also involve the study of arid zones of the world since the majority of the nomadic population dwells in these zones. Field trips to the areas involved in the study will be indicated.

LBJ Group to Meet

The second meeting of the Young Citizens for Johnson will be held at 4 p.m. today in Maxwell Auditorium. Voter registration work and office work in the downtown headquarters will be assigned. Since this is the last meeting before the registration dates of Oct. 1, 2, and 3, everyone is urged to attend.

Trial Balloon

Traditions Commission, experimenting in all types of advertising this fall, blew up some balloons and waited to see if they would pop. They did. These balloons, put up to advertise last Friday night's MAD (Music-Art-Drama) Show, numbered close to 200 when Traditions member Michael Maginn tied them to trees and bushes on the quad late Thursday night. By Friday afternoon, students had popped all but a handful of them.

SU ROTC Drafts Coed Aid Corps

SU ROTC is now drafting and recruiting females. La Belle Corps, wearing green uniforms, is the ROTC women's auxiliary.

The group was organized last spring semester by Syracuse coeds Soule Gregory, Terry Okolowich, and Donna Prosser. They acted under the guidance of Major Richard L. Ryan and Captain Franklin C. Haskins with the assistance of the army cadre.

The present members were chosen from a group of candidates by the governing board of cadet officers. From these members, LaBelle Corps selected as officers: Soule Gregory, Commander, Terry Okolowich, Executive Officer, Gloria Morales, Training Officer, Sue Ellen Wilson, Treasurer, Donna Prosser, Secretary.

The auxiliary offers services to the cadets by hostessing at coffees, doing office work for the army cadet officers, keeping a monthly scrapbook and sending a monthly newsletter to graduate cadets.

The organization is similiar in purpose to two national groups, the Brigadettes and The Gurdons. La Belle Corps uniforms, consisting of a green loden dress with matching hat trimmed with gold braid, were designed by Gloria Morales. The uniforms are purchased for the girls out of the personal funds of the army cadre officers whom they assist, and are worn at all scheduled auxiliary functions on campus.

At present the group is very small, consisting of 10 coeds. The members plan to visit all freshman living centers Sunday evening, at which time they will answer questions concerning their group.

Recruiting will begin officially 7 p.m. Tuesday at an informal coffee held in the alumnae lounge of the Women's Bldg. According to Donna Prosser, pledge program chairman, the auxiliary is looking forward to a successful recruiting year.

Applications will be available at the coffee and at ROTC headquarters on the main floor of the men's gym starting Monday. Interested coeds with questions may call Soule Gregory, ext. 2185.

SU Starts Grade School Academic Test Program

By MAUREEN ANN MARTIN

For the past few weeks, SU emphasis on the Hill has been on freshmen.

However, a test program for elementary school children will be going into effect shortly, under the direction of Dr. Marvin J. Gold, assistant professor of education for the gifted at Syracuse University.

The pilot program will get underway at the George Washington Elementary School in Syracuse for the present academic year.

Dr. Gold's objective is to investigate the effects of "self-directed learning" on a group of children in the fourth, fifth and sixth grades.

He plans to devote careful attention to the students' growth in academic areas and study skills, in divergent thinking ability and in personal and social adjustment to their situation.

About 90 children of above average intelligence have been selected for this study. The children will be taught together under the direction of certified teachers in all areas except reading, social studies and science, Gold said.

For these classes, some will remain under the study of the regular teacher; others will be chosen at random for an experiment.

Those students participating in the experiment will be removed to a resource room where they will be permitted to study as they themselves see fit, Gold continued.

A wide variety of books and materials, among which may be found reference books may be found in the resource room along with maps, globes, film strips projectors and film strips, a lab table and equipment for experimentation.

These materials will range from first grade simplicity to more complex tenth grade level, Gold said. The children will be encouraged not only to use the materials, but also to seek information from each other, he added.

A resource person will be available to the children, but unlike the regular teacher in the classroom, this person will be a non-professional with minimal or no teaching experience.

He will be instructed not to begin group activities or direct interests in any direction and will be present only for the convenience of the students, Gold said.

Gold described this set-up as being "not an abolition of teaching, but rather a reappraisal of the teacher's role."

In the past, gifted children have often been ignored or gone unnoticed by teachers, he noted.

Gold formed this program to see "what these children can do if the key to their education is in their own hands," he said. If the children seem to progress more rapidly under this system, it is hoped that resource rooms of this type will be made available in many elementary schools.

The experiment will be accompanied by a pre-test on academic achievement this September and post-tests in February and June of next year. A final report on this pilot program will be completed in August, 1965.

Gold's professional background includes eight years of elementary school teaching, with experience with gifted children at different grade levels. He obtained his doctorate from George Peabody College for Teachers, where his major course of study concerned the gifted child.

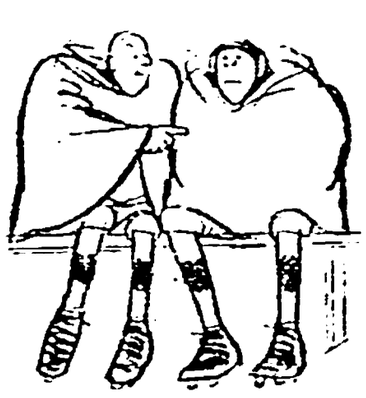
1. Now that we're 21 we have a lot more responsibility.

Now we make the decisions.

2. Right. And this year we have a big decision to make – who gets our vote for President.

I've already decided to vote for the candidate of my choice.

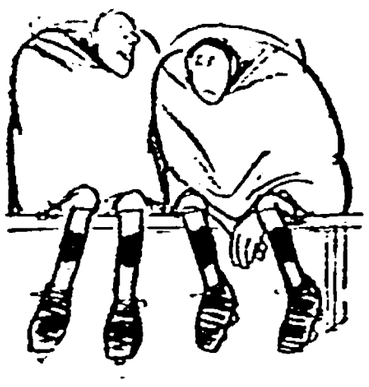


3. Your decision should be based on what the candidate stands for. For example, does your man's fiscal policy square with your philosophy on the matter?

I hope not. I never could handle money.

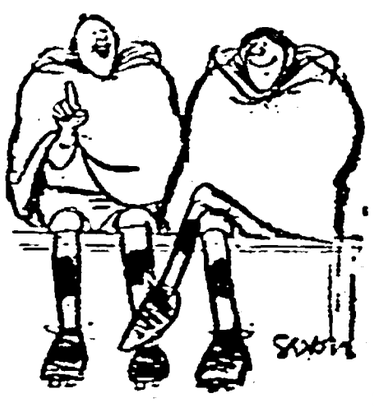
4. Then how do you expect to go out into the world, support a wife, raise children, and be a two-car family?

I wish I knew.



5. Let me give you a piece of advice that will help you off to a good start.

I'd sure appreciate it.



6. Soon as you get a job, put some dough into cash-value insurance, the kind they call Living Insurance at Equitable. It gives your wife and kids solid protection and it automatically builds a cash value you can use instead for retirement or whatever you like.

Say, why don't you run for President?

To Head Hillel

'Cuse Welcomes Rabbi

By CHARLIE RUSSO

"Students have done more for me than they realize," commented Rabbi Milton H. Elefant on his work as a university chaplain.

Rabbi Elefant added in a recent interview: "If students are reading materials that are the best in the religious field—something different or controversial — they make me want to rethink, to re-evaluate and to see their method out."

A B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation chaplain at Syracuse since August, Rabbi Elefant came here from Colorado University.

"No one ever leaves an area so picturesque, so beautiful in climate as Colorado without a good reason," he said.

Syracuse had three "good reasons" for Rabbi Elefant. First, his family would be closer to its relatives, many of whom live in New York City and Pennsylvania. Second, he said he believes this area is a center of Jewish thought and activities. Finally, the challenge of Syracuse University itself interested the rabbi.

"The Jewish community on this campus is about five times the size as the one at Colorado," Rabbi Elefant explained. "This was a challenging thing, as there are more opportunities do do better work."

But, Rabbi Elefant admits, "I don't know Syracuse Univeristy well, yet. The beginning weeks have been more hectic, busier, then my previous 17 years on campuses.

"It was a phenomenal experience on my part during the opening week to see the response of the students to the religious offering and conference."

More work is yet to come. Rabbi Elefant has plans for special cultural programs, discussion groups, forums and lectures, on throughout the SU year. These activities are designed "to present the student with an intellectual approach to his faith and inheritance," which Rabbi Elefant describes as the purpose of Hillel.

Rabbi Elefant said he was determined to stress the Hillel program more than his personal characteristics.

The National B'nai B'rith Hillel Fellowship supplies chaplains to various colleges in the country. The name, Hillel, comes from a great sage and scholar who lived in the time of Christ. Hillel's characterisities of religious scholarship and personal conduct and humility are the goals and aims of the work here on campus, he explained.

The Hillel Foundation started 40 years ago at the University of Illinois, through the efforts of a non-Jewish professor teaching English literature.

By teaching the Bible, this teacher found that Jewish youth were coming to class "without a knowledge of their own sacred literature of the Bible," the rabbi said.

A Jewish rabbi was sent to the campus of Illinois as a result of the professors' efforts. There are now over 240 campuses in this country which belong to the Hillel Foundation, with calls for Hillel coming from England, Holland, South Africa, Austrailia and Israel, he said.

Rabbi Elefant received his bachelor of arts degree at Yeshiva College in New York City, and his master of arts in psychology at the University of Maine. He has credits for his doctorate at the University of Colorado, and said he is considering completing his studies at Syracuse.

In the last four years, Rabbi Elefant has presented three papers at the National Conference of Hillel. His latest talk, given at the 40th anniversary of the organization last year, explained reasons why religion is presently unacceptable on the campus. In this paper he attempted to show how to make it acceptable.

Student Mobs

Crowds of students surge through the gates of Archbold Stadium at the Syracuse - Kansas football game. As usual everyone had to wait in lines outside the gates. Freshmen who were placard cheering and other students with reserve seating tickets were allowed into the stadium before 1 p.m. The rest waited until 1 p.m. to be admitted.

Onondagan Views SUPast

The history of a college career will be recorded in this year's edition of the university yearbook, the Onondagan.

In the 1965 400-page edition, entitled "Footsteps of Syracusans," the yearbook staff hopes to assemble a permanent record of the years spent at Syracuse, according to Lometa Hudnall, editor-in-chief.

The activities and special events which are a part of every student will be assembled to show how each student helps to create the history of which he is a part.

Also included will be a history of the university, which Miss Hudnall said would emphasize the influence which the past has on the future.

Orders for "Footsteps of Syracusans" will be taken for the next few months. The staff, in attempts to top the record sales of last year, has already begun work in its new offices, located in the basement of Winchell Hall.

Leave the table a little bit hungry, as the dieters advise, and one is likely to be back for a snack.

Students Offered Semester Abroad

Students interested in spending a semester of their junior year at a university abroad can be assisted by the Foreign Study Programs office, recently relocated on Comstock avenue.

Under the direction of Harold Vaughn, the university-sponsored organization places qualified juniors in the University of Poitiers, France, University of Florence, Italy, and University of Guatemala. Not only do students take courses in the native language of the country, but also in fine arts, history, and political science.

At the present time, 49 Syracusans are involved in study abroad, while numerous other students, interested in travel and study on their own throughout the world, have also been assisted by the for- office.

Prerequisites for participation in the program are three personal recommendations, including one from the deans of students and for those interested in study in France or Guatemala, a speaking knowledge of the country's language. There is no specific grade average requirement.

Syracuse students are not the only participants in this program. Others come from Oberlin College, Colgate University, Connecticut College for Women, Sarah Lawrence College, the University of California at Berkeley, Reed College, and Pennsylvania State University.

The Foreign Study Programs have been enthusiastically received by the students and faculty of the various universities and interest in the organization is rapidly growing, Vaughn said.

Applications for the spring semester programs are being accepted now. Interested students should visit the Foreign Study office, 335 Comstock avenue.

Syracuse University football coach Floyd (Ben) Schwartzwalder is the 8th most successful active college grid mentor, according to an annual survey that lists those with 80 or more wins. Ben has a 119-51-2 log for 18 seasons and a winning percentage of 69.8.

Little Paces Piety to 38-6 Win

SU Frosh Gridmen Squeeze by Manlius

By ART ROSSKY

Friday the script of the varsity's Boston College game was nearly repeated as the Hill frosh eked out a 14-6 victory over Manlius in a road tilt. The contest was the opener for both squads.

Victory was not assured until the host's Tony Kyasky, with a clear path to TD territory, dropped a strike thrown by Larry Walt in the closing seconds.

Like their varsity brethren the yearlings displayed a potent ground attack, but showed a punchless air attack.

Syracuse, though outplaying their slightly lighter opponents by a wide margin, did not enter the scoring column until the second quarter. Tom Coughlin, a 6-0, 185-pound halfback, hit paydirt from the two to climax a 95-yard drive.

Interference Call

A key play in the march was a 26-yard pass interference penalty (the Tangerines completed no passes) against Manlius' Walt, who tripped the Hill's Ed Shreck.

Drew Volz, perhaps the kicker that the varsity has been sorely missing in recent years, booted the first of his two extra points.

As soon as the Tangerines got the ball in the second half, they marched 68 yards to paydirt in 10 plays. Not a pass was flipped in the drive.

Coughlin circled left end from the three for the tally, his second score of the game.

Driving Fullback

Larry Csonka, a 215-pound fullback, paced the drive with 33 yards rushing. He constantly battered his way to big gains, being particularly hard to stop on draw plays. Csonka also was a defensive stalwart.

The score was set up as Ed Mantie powered 15 yards to the Red Knights' three. Mantie, another standout back, earlier had uncorked a 46-yard punt return.

Following the second score Manlius retaliated as Steve Lindell sped 99 yards with the kickoff.

Though he failed to complete a pass, quarterback Ed Reardon displayed skill at handling the ball and constantly had the homesters off balance with his tricky moves.

Reardon also had the misfortune to see several on-target tosses dropped by receivers.

Defensive Aces

Among the defensive standouts were end Ed Shreck and linebacker Jim Murphy.

Shreck, a 6-2, 210-pound lad, constantly pressured the Red Knight signal caller into hurrying his tosses, as well as proving to be a hard, sure tackler on running plays.

Murphy, a 6-2, 220-pound linebacker, recovered a fumble, as well as taking part in several tackles.

The Piety's secondary had considerable difficulty containing the opposing receivers. The thorniest problem was 6-4 end Gary Steele, a 203-pounder who broke loose for five catches, good for 92 yards.

The Tangerines next see action Oct. 17, when they clash with Navy's powerful plebes at Annapolis, Md.

Fleet Orange Halfback Tallies Five Touchdowns

By HOWIE SCHNEIDER

It was supposed to be close, but it wasn't. Floyd Little saw to that.

Not since the days of the mighty James Brown had any Orange back done so much to befuddle an opponent, and never in Kansas history had the Jayhawkers seen anyone quite like the small, fleeting No. 44.

Little, in pacing Ben Schwartzwalder's squad to a 38-6 romp over intersectional rival Kansas, tallied an impressive offense of 254 yards. Five out of the last nine times the speedy sophomore had his hands on the ball he scored.

The 5-11, 190-pound halfback rushed for 159 yards in 16 carries, which included touchdown sprints of 15, 1, 55, 3 and 19 yards. He ran two kickoffs back for 48 yards and caught two Rich King passes for 47 yards.

"Not bad for a rookie," was Schwartzwalder's comment after the game. Later, a bit more serious, he remarked, "That Little is really a great one."

FLOYD LITTLE

High Point Figure

Little's 30-point total is second in SU history only to Brown's 43 points against Colgate and marks the most points a single man has scored against any Kansas team in the record books.

An even greater tribute to Little, however, was the fact that for a good part of the afternoon he made the 28,000 fans in Archbold Stadium forget a player by the name of Gale Sayers.

The Kansas two-time All-American had gained only 18 yards in the first half, largely due to a fine defensive effort by the Orangemen. But even when he was well on his way to his solid total of 84 yards, Sayers played in the shadow of a rather big Mr. Little.

Tough Defense

The SU defensive unit, led by linebacker Jim Cheyunski, and ends George Fair and Herb Stecker, held the explosive Kansas backfield to a relatively quiet afternoon. The Jayhawkers rushed for 149 yards and in the air were 3 for 11 and 23 yards.

Cheyunski, a sophomore, was in on 11 tackles and Fair and Stecker eight apiece.

Ben's boys rushed for a total of 305 yards with Jim Nance second to Little with 51 yards. To the amazement of some, the Orangemen even completed 3 of 7 in the air for 56 yards. (Rumor has it they even made two conversion attempts.)

Initial Score

The Orangemen took the opening kickoff and marched 77 yards in 13 plays for a touchdown. On the first play from scrimmage Walley Mahle rolled left, and after a key block from Pat Killorin, raced for 15 yards. Nance ended the drive with a three-yard plunge at 6:44.

Early in the second period quarterback Rich King completed a 37-yard bomb to Little and the Orange were again threatening. Three plays later Floyd scampered 15 yards for the score.

The home team added another touchdown on a one-yard run by Little and the Orangemen led 18-0 at the half. At this point the visitors had only two first downs to SU's 12.

Kansas Tallies

The Jayhawkers wasted no time in trying to get backinto th e game and scored at 4:38 of the third period on a quarterback sneak by Steve Renko.

Two minutes later, however, Little ended any Kansas hopes, streaking 55 yards through, over, and around six tacklers. For all practical purposes the game was over and the Orangemen had done to Kansas what many experts had expected them to do against Boston College a week ago.

"This was not the same team that lost to Boston," Schwartzwalder said.

All Kansas coach Jack Mitchell was able to say was, "I didn't think anybody could do this to us."

'A Complete Surprise'—Ben

By JIM KLURFELD

"The victory was a complete surprise to us. We never thought we would win so easily or with so much poise."

And so Ben Schwartzwalder summed up his feelings about Syracuse's surprisingly easy victory over Kansas.

But Ben wasn't the only one who thought the game would be closer. Kansas coach Jack Mitchell said, "I just didn't think anybody could do that to us. I was more surprised than disappointed."

Mitchell went on to say that this was the "best Syracuse team he has played against" and that includes the undefeated 1959 team.

Of course the big story was the running of sophomire Floyd Little. With five touchdowns and over 250 yards in total offense he drew raves from everybody watching the game.

"He's better than any Syracuse back from any season," Mitchell said. "It was the best single game performance by any back that I've ever seen."

Schwartzwalder had this to say to Little: "Pretty good day for a rookie, son. You were a lot of football player today."

The Orange coach went on to say that if some people consider Gale Sayers the best back in the country, Little "would have to be the best in Onondaga County."

But Schwartzwalder had praise for the entire team. He was extremely pleased with the performance of Billy Hunter, who had played poorly against Boston College.

"Overall," Schwartzwalder said, "we think there was a lot of growing up done on the field today. We are playing a lot of sophomores and they certainly showed more poise today than last week."

In analyzing the game Mitchell felt his defense was particularly weak. "Syracuse split our defense," he explained. "We just couldn't attack their offense."

Schwartzwalder confirmed Mitchell's statement when he said, "we knew their defense, especially their ends, was a weak point. We worked hard all week and we were able to take advantage of that weakness."

Grand Prix Scheduled Oct. 4 at Watkins Glen

WATKINS GLEN — A wide open, three-way race for the world championship of drivers moves from Europe to Watkins Glen Oct. 4 for the Formula I Grand Prix of the United States.

Ninth of the 10 world title races this season, the Glen GP is considered a "must" victory for the yet-to-be-crowned 1964 champion. The Grand Prix of Mexico at Mexico City will see the final round Oct. 25.

On even odds during the home stretch are '63 world title holder Jim Clark of Scotland in a Lotus, '62 champion Graham Hill of England in a BRM and John Surtees of England in a hard-pressing Ferrari.

Hill leads the 170 m.p.h. chase for the title with 32 points. Clark is a close runner-only four points off the leading up with 30, while Surtees is pace with 28. However, with the Glen GP victor gaining nine points, the three front-runners could very easily change positions.

GP title points are awarded on a 9-6-4-3-2-1 basis for the first six finishers in each race. However, a driver may use points from only his best six finishes of the 10 title runs.

Still given mathematical chances for the crown are Richie Ginther of America, BRM team driver with 20 points, and Lorenzo Bandini of Italy, Ferrari driver with 19.

Several experts pick Clark based on his past triumps. The high-flying Scot is the only three-time GP winner this season, taking triumphs in the British, Dutch and Belgian events.

The champion picked up three points in a fourth place finish through the streets of Monaco last May which give him 30 pointes from only four finishes. Any points he collects at the U.S. GP at Watkins may be added to increase his 30 point total.

Other experts are relying on Surtees, the ex-motorcycle world champion, and his fiery red Ferrari from Maranello, Italy.

Surtees, off to a slow start with only 10 early - season points, added a nine-point German GP triumph, saw Ferrari teammate Lorenzo Bandini sweep to win the Austrian GP, and came back himself to win a must for Ferrari, the Italian round, the last event before Watkins.

The third challenger is front-running Hill, considered the most consistently reliable driver on the circuit today. Hill is the only driver who was able to avoid trouble and gain points in all of the first six world title rounds this season.

INTRA OFFICIALS

A meeting for all men who signed up as intramural touch football officials will be held in the lounge of Archbold Gymnasium at 7 p.m. Tuesday.

Soccer Practice

The SU Soccer Club will hold its first practice of the season today at 3:45 on Hendricks Field, behind Sadler Dorm. Anyone interested in joining the team is invited to attend.

Hill Reacts to Morality Issue

Amusement, Surprise, Shock

By CINDY DEGNAN

Students were vocal in expressing surprise, amusement, and the attitude that "It happens every day; too bad these people got caught," in the recent stir caused by the violations of campus morality rulings by seven freshman boys and an upperclass coed.

The underlying reaction was one of disbelief that anyone knowing the policy of Syracuse University on such cases could have been so "stupid" (a word that occurred over and over again in conversations with students) to have violated the regulations concerned.

Coupled with this reaction was the attitude that this was behavior thought of as "typical" of the American College student, not just at SU, but at other colleges as well.

Students were overwhelmingly in agreement that the action of the administration in suspending the students concerned was justified.

Many felt that this action would serve as an example to deter further violations, and that it would make an especially deep impression on freshmen. Those who did oppose the suspension said that the incident would not prevent future violations; but might prove damaging out of proportion to the importance of the incident.

James Collins, a sophomore, said that the freshmen concerned "didn't belong in college. They should have been better prepared for the responsibilities they face here."

Alvin Robinson, a senior, agreed that "They acted like high school kids. They didn't know how to handle their freedom."

Susan Pearlman, a senior, called the incident "disgraceful," as did others who expres-

The Rules Say

To clarify the morality and drinking case, quoted below is a section of the publication Syracuse University Dates and Data, listed under general academic and social regulations

"Policies governing student conduct: Like any other community the University has rules that every student agrees to observe when he registers. It would be wise to keep in mind the following:

A. The traditions and principles of the University, accepted by each student in his act of voluntary registration, require conduct in harmony with the standards of good society. The following acts are specifically prohibited:

(a) Misuse of intoxicating beverages, including wine and beer.

(b) Possession of intoxicating beverages, including wine and beer, or their use in any campus buildings or living centers or at any University function."

Hurst Cottage Men Drag Feet in Vacating Their 'Campus Home'

Men no longer live in Cornell and Root Cottages, but the exodus from Hurst has hardly begun.

The overflow of students from women's housing can now start moving into the two evacuated cottages, but Hurst is still very much occupied. At least one dozen upperclassmen were clinging to what they call their "campus home" as late as Monday evening.

A university truck will be available today for any Hurst residents needing transportation for their belongings. It has already assisted Cornell and Root men to their new quarters around campus, but the men in Hurst, except for a handful who moved themselves, have stayed.

Tension ran high in Hurst Sunday night as a last, desperate attempt was made to escape eviction.

"We felt like an embattled garrison," said Jesse Smith, a sophomore. "Defeat was almost impossible to avoid, but we burned up the phone lines and mobilized all the help we could."

Basing their fight on several issues, the men said they felt they had a good case. "But we had almost no recourse through university channels," Smith said. "So we turned to the news media."

Fourteen Hurst residents, all who remained at the time, signed a statement protesting the eviction and the fact that their new housing is more expensive than the cottage.

According to the dean of men's office, the upperclassmen in Hurst have a chance to move into an unspecified number of vacancies in freshmen cottages at no extra cost. Otherwise, the announcement said, they must pay for more expensive housing.

The dean's office also offered to help individual students placed in financial straits by the relocation, but did not specify what criteria would be used in granting aid.

Frank J. Harrar, who as men's housing director issued the order to move, visited Hurst Monday

Sword Staff Sets Meeting

The off-campus muckraking magazine, "The Sword of Damocles' has been told that it cannot have a floor of the new journalism center for its use as a suite of offices.

Of this, Editor Richard Kram commented Monday, "Well, you know what they say about the best laid plans of mice and men."

Despite this surprise set-back, the "Sword" shall hang again over the rulers of Syracuse University.

For the past two years the "Sword" has concentrated on documentary exposes of campus problems, for example "The Pregnancy Crisis," "Athletics versus Athleticism," but has not been scoring very highly on popularity polls with the Administration Bldg. This year the magazine plans a satirical approach to campus and general issues.

At 4:00 p.m. today in Hendricks Chapel, Colonial Room, the "Sword wil hold a meeting for all those interested in writing, cartooning, or any other phase of magazine work.

Leaders Believe Event Tragic

By PAT TRACEY

The morality and drinking incident affected campus leaders and administrators with opinions ranging from "unfortunate" to "human."

Carl Corrallo, president of Student Government said "I think it was unfortunate but I wouldn't call it a complete breakdown on campus. I hardly think it will prove to be the beginning of a series of incidents."

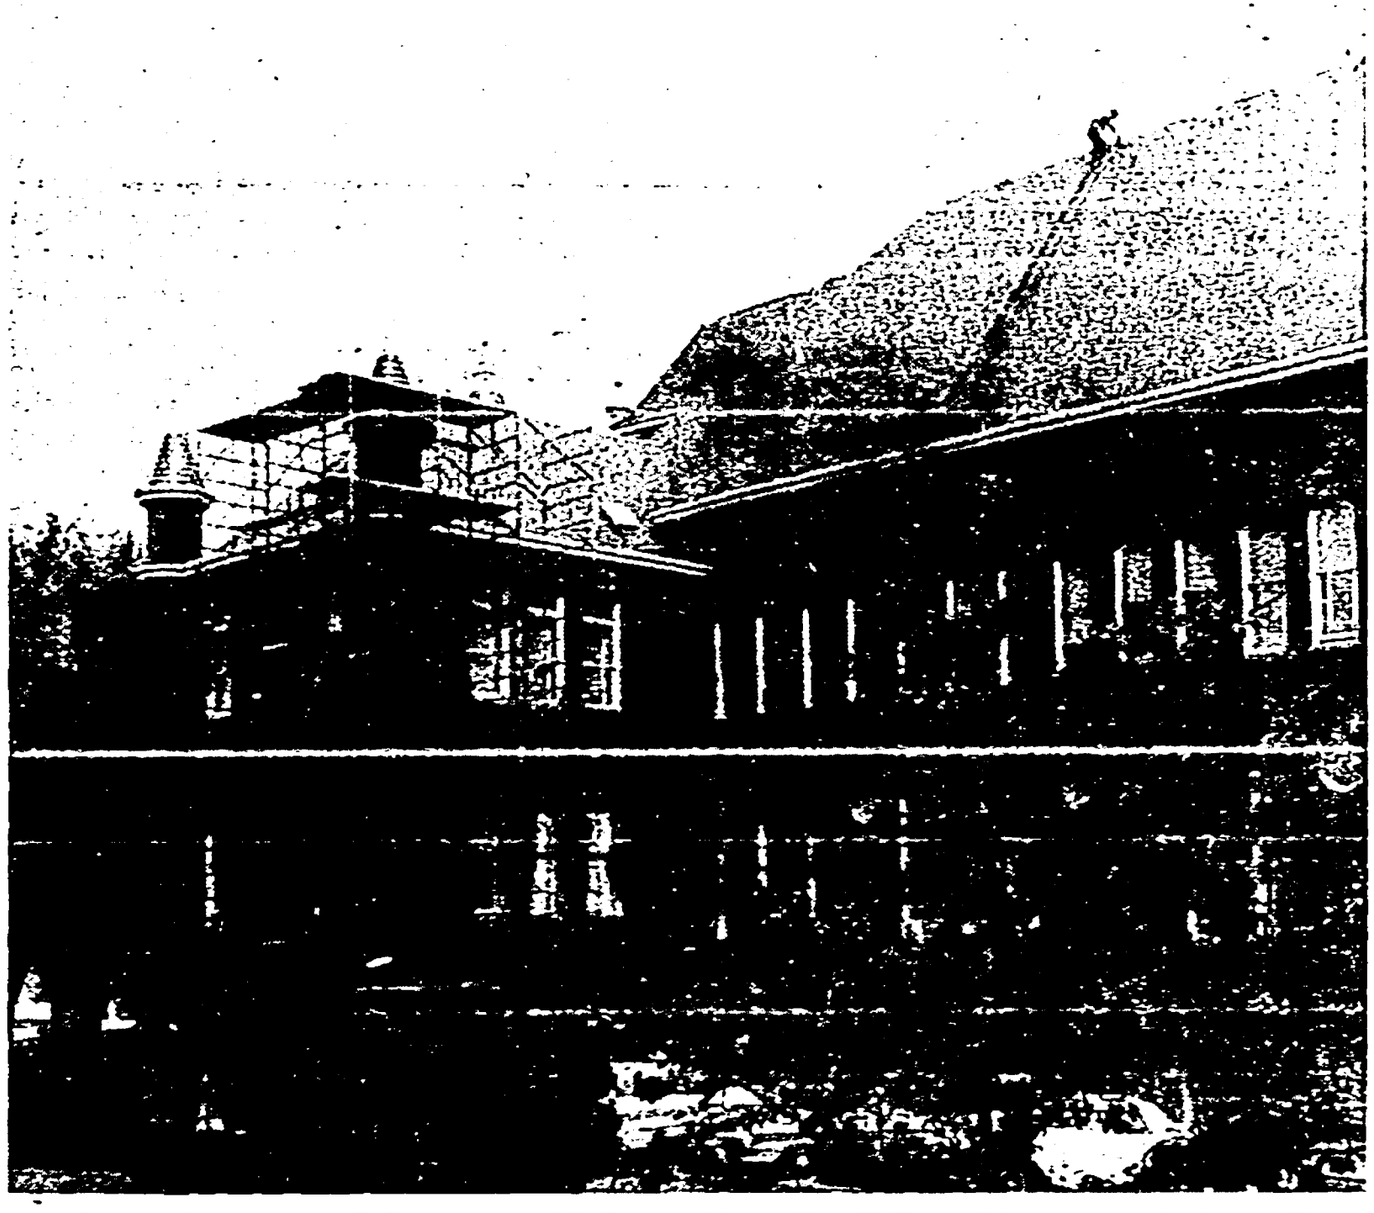
Frank Richmond, chief justice of Student Court, said "I only feel ashamed that this had to happen at my university. It is unfortunate that eight students had to learn so early in their college careers that the rules exist in more forms than just the rule book. I only hope that this will serve as an example to the student body and that we'll all realize our obligation to the university."

Robert (Robby) Stern, speaker of Student Senate, called the incident very human.

"For anyone who has any perspective, this is something that goes on every day. I accept is as a very human act. Anyone who felt strongly towards the university at the outset could condemn it for this incident. I think the action taken was just."

"The case was unfortunate although these things must be expected. A big university encompasses a lot of people; there are bound to be incidents," said William Weller, president of the junior class.

(See Leaders, page 7)



Are they building an addition to the Administration Building? No, it's only a scaffold to fix the roof. Hope it doesn't rain again until they finish. At least we know that Chancellor Tolley will keep dry in his office this winter. Did you say the roof in your prefab leaks? Well, those are the breaks.

To Stop Leak in Office

Tolley's Roof Gets Mending

Falling autumn leaves may be pretty, but when winter snow starts falling, Chancellor William P. Tolley doesn't want to watch it fall into his office.

Last winter the Chancellor discovered leaks in the ceiling of his office in the Administration Building, according to Olgean S. Ohab, superintendent of the buildings and grounds department.

So, the J.G.A. Construction Co. of Syracuse was hired to repair the damage before the cold weather sets in.

Now the Administration Building looks like a cross between an ivy-covered castle and a jungle gym.

Scaffolding has been erected on two sides of the building in order to reach the roof. When these areas are completed, the construction will be moved for easier access to the other sides, Richard Parolin, one of the workers said.

After completion of the slate roof, carpenters will be called in to perform necessary repairs on the cupolas according to Parolin.

Such repairs are usually required about once every twenty years, Ohab noted.

The work, which began Sept. 24, is scheduled for completion around Oct. 7.

The Sound Of Fury

In our first issue of the year, we discussed the new Syracuse University game of "musical administrators." Today we find a new game — "musical cottages."

The situation has grown to the complexity that it is difficult to separate all the issues from the gripes and claims.

In a nutshell, the dean of men has housing vacancies in dormitories; the dean of women has too many girls for her dorms, but can't move them into the men's dorms naturally.

What has been done is to vacate men's units and move the residents to the dorms and other vacancies, and relieve women's overcrowding by moving them into the cottages.

Yet side factors are clouding the issue, but they are side factors which prove to be the real issue. Head residents of women's cottages in the area say the men are needed as protection against muggings. Winchell Hall girls say they're content with overcrowding.

If the women head residents are adamant in their belief a male factor is needed in the area, they must make this clearly and directly known, for the safety of students surpasses all other considerations.

If girls who have been accosted in the area would speak up, the safety of the students will be assured, for the university would dare not let such an unsafe situation exist, if it has any face at all.

And if the double rooms in Hurst and Root are really that much smaller than a currently-triple room in Winchell, speak up and make your views known.

The university has a solemn obligation to every one of its students to maintain their safety, and if men in the Crouse complex are the answer, they must remain.

But of the real issue, as it seems to be, is merely that there are more women than places, and fewer men than places, then about all that can and should be done is to go through the motions of a protest.

It is certainly unfortunate that this situation ever had to develop, but fortunately, the dean men's office has taken the best way out.

American Tragedy

By Robert Lubetsky

After a summer of Ghetto riots and Southern terror, the disaster that was the Republican convention has become the great American tragedy. The tragedy is not so much Goldwater and Miller's fault, but the whole Republican convention is an indication of the moral and social degradation and corruption of the fabric of American society. This catastrophe has come at a time when the needs of the country demand new, exciting, and radical ideas.

The right wing has sought to play upon the fears of this country, and to answer complex and difficult questions with simple and easy answers. The moderate has talked about equality for over 100 years, but that's about all he's done. The white liberal and most Negro leaders have failed also.

Their guilt ridden unconscious has propelled them into viewing the world as a white-black dichotomy. This is why the white liberal doesn't understand that Negro ghettos exploded in spite of the historic Civil Rights bill, and because, as David McReynolds said "there was an end to hope." There may be some Jackie Robinson's, Ralph Bunche's, etc., but the Black Bourgeoisie is not open to the masses of discontented, poor Negroes.

The Presidential campaign must not become a white-black fight. The white has as much to lose as the black. Although unemployment among Negroes in slum areas is over 15 per cent and as high as 25 per cent, total white employment is still several times Negro unemployment. There are more poor whites than poor Negroes.

This is the decade of alienation and the automation of some 40,000-50,000 jobs per week out of existence. Goldwater has tried to play upon the fears workers have of automation. In South Bend, Indiana he told a crowd of workers, the second day of his campaign, that the Johnson administration immigration proposals whould "open the floodgates for any and all who wish to come and find work in this country..."

This is one of the reasons the newspapers invented the term "White-Blacklash." The wide spread use of this term would seem to imply that white people hate Negroes so much that they would barter our country off on the political auction block just to keep Negroes in their place. I would hope that this is not the case.

Our country is beseiged by a group of people who have literally been automated out of existence. We live at a time when the worth of individuals is judged by the kind of job he holds. When man can not identify with the society he helped build he turns to crime, drugs, alcohol and tranquilizers. Thus our generation is now enjoying the highest rate of crime, drug addiction, and alcoholism. Historically only the poor suffer the pains of these problems, but time has proven that the once quiet middle and upper classes are now showing the signs.

The turn to a policitian for security and identity has propelled Goldwater and Miller into the Presidential election. And with the Goldwater nomination has come a whole host of characters of the lunatic fringe enjoying a once very-much sought-after respectability.

Indeed the success of the right wing will depend upon the outcome of the election. It seems apparent, however, that it will take more than a Johnson victory to save Johnson from the right and far more to lead him to the left.

Back Again

By Jay Litwin

It's like we were never gone. We've been back a week and the summer has faded into blissful oblivion. Everything is the same as it was, whether it's your second year or your fifth.

The freshmen are here. Young, innocent, idealistic, and for the most part ready to face and meet any challenge that might be tossed at them. Their exuberance and spirit even rubs off on some upperclassmen, but for the remainder of the year, it will be the freshman class that stamps that indelible mark upon the character of Syracuse University. Good luck.

The scholars are here. Few in number but nevertheless present. They lend to the university that academic atmosphere forlorn and forgotten in the brew of T.C. May they find in their books what they so fervently search for, and may we find in them the inspiration to have a grasp always slightly greater than our reach.

The "studs" are here. The "cool guys" of the 20th century, whose philosophy on life is what can I do you for, instead of what can I do for you. The guys who consider a friend who can be counted on to do them a favor as a "fool" instead of a friend. May they some day put on their socks and walk in the real world they are missing, instead of flooring their Corvettes and aimlessly riding by all that meaningful in life.

The "scorners" are here. An eight o'clock class? You can't be serious! If he takes attendance and gives homework I can't possibly take the course! Wait 'till the snows come and you have to walk to the Mount! If I was coaching our material, we'd have been number one the last five years!—May all courses be guts, may the snows not come , and may we never lose another game.

The average student is here —the one that everyone calls apathetic, but who simply cannot identify. If only the university community at large would actively reach out and befriend those people they consider spiritless. If only someone would make an independent feel like an integral part of a flourishing, dynamic community working for the good of all. If only . .

Pocket Guide to Culture

by Michele Sobel

Pick a freshman. Any freshman. Ask him this question: "Why did you choose to come to Syracuse?

The answers are often vague and varied: "Well, uh, my aunt went here" or "I wanted a university with a good School of Journalism" (he later transfers to the Business School) or perhaps most bluntly "I wanted a good social life."

Rarely, however, do we hear this reason: "SU is associated with a big city and I wanted the cultural advantages this can provide."

It is this omission that we are concerned with and not only on the part of the freshman. Coincidentally, (or maybe not so) we made the same point that we plan to make now in last year's commencement issue.

Freshman may have the excuse that so far they have seen nothing but Marshall Street, the SU Bookstore and Archbold Stadium. The University, however, is not a little island. And, for the adventurous, T.C., F.I., etc. are not the only escape. Here is a short and by no means complete list of cultural events and places.

Movies: The downtown recitals or concerts and adgood films and the Riveria theatre even shows art flicks.

Music: The Syracuse Symphony Orchestra, a community sponsored organization, presents excellent concerts at Lincoln Auditorium. For chamber music fans the Syracuse Friends of Chamber Music gives monthly concerts.

Art: The Everson Museum of Art has interesting art exhibits and also presents other cultural events.

Theatre: The Famous Artist series presents excellent touring companies of Broadway hits and also offers special performances such as concerts, and readings.

These downtown cultural offerings are augmented by campus programs. The Regent Theatre, for instance, combines the best of both features. It showcases student productions and also professional performances. It also sponsors film series and folk music concerts.

As a matter of fact student drama productions are plentiful at SU. Boar's Head Theatre presents them and the Nickel Theatre Series, which will resume in Oct., gives student directors a chance to stage their own or famous plays.

Every Sunday, Crouse College sponsors classical music recitalts or concerts and admission is always free.

The Lowe Art Center, (sans Aphrodite) has interesting art exhibits, ranging from faculty and student work to professional shows.

As the year progresses, campus guest speakers will be more and more abundant. The Citizenship School and the English department of the Liberal Arts School sponsor many fine lectures.

In the coming months, this column and this page will focus on these events in depth. But, we can only describe and appraise these events. We can not give you the incentive to go out and experience or see them.

Too often the SU student looks longingly toward the big city of his dreams. For example, New York City often becomes the pattern for everything that he experiences at Syracuse, especially culturally. He declines to accept anything this city has to offer. But, even if the cultural offerings at Syracuse were bad which they are not, it would still be worthwhile to see them. Stagnation doesn't help anyone.

And, after all, there must be more to college than beer.

Touring Company to Give Anouilh Play at Regent

After a month-long tour of northeastern colleges, and the initial performances of the season here in Syracuse, a group of actors and actresses from SU are presenting "Thieve's Carnival," the first Regent Theater play of the season.

This summer experiment, a part of the repertoire given by the SU Dramatic Touring Company, will be directed by Dr. Joseph Golden of the drama department here. The play is a nonsense-filled comedy by French playwright, Jean Anouilh.

This summer, sixteen students from the University Drama Department devoted six weeks of their summer touring two plays to colleges in New York, Connecticut, and Pennsylvania. The company began on June 14, when they assembled at the University College for two weeks of rehearsal. From there, the students travelled 3,000 miles through the three states. During the following four weeks, the company of students was the guest of Utica College, Brockport University, Cortland University, Trinity College, Adelphi University, Oswego University, Cornell University, Clairon University, Gannon College and the University of Buffalo.

The cast applied their own make-up and attended to their own costumes, younger members learning from the more experienced ones. Not only did the sixteen perform everynight, but they also did their own technical work. Putting up lights and changing sets became a part of experience, which was one of learning, sharing, and working, as well as acting.

"Thieve's Carnival" stars Frank Morell, Bruce MacCurdy, and John McNeill, who lead the play's flock of fools and pickpockets as three bumbling crooks. Aware of their thieving nature, Kathy Bindert, as a nonchalant aristocrat, nonetheless invites them to be her houseguests to relieve her boredom. While her nieces, portrayed by Sue De Cicco and Jan Aspinwall, become romantically involved with the crooked trio, Richard Nathan and Allen Wiliams are a father-and-son pair of fortune hunters who keep failing to attract the heiresses they pursue. George Fidel is the wealthy old gentleman.

Also in the cast are Tom Grasso, Robert D'Angelo, Sandra Land, Gail Byrnes, David Hamilton, and Kathy Woods.

The performances will be presented at 8:30 p.m. on October 1, 2, and 3, at the Regent. Tickets are available at the Regent Theatre Box Office, at $2.00 and $1.50.

Hurst Cottage Men

evening and expressed surprise at the fact that the men were attached to the cottage and to each other, and thought the girls of Winchell had the same feeling.

Daniel Strum of Hurst talking to the Daily Orange later, exclaimed "Why couldn't they have found out how we felt before they took any action? What good does it do us now? They won't change their minds."

All the girls scheduled to move into Hurst are freshmen in triple rooms in Winchell Hall. Their present setup is considered emergency housing.

Smith, a Daily Orange reporter, went to Winchell Sunday and spoke to residents. "I was mobbed by 20-30 girls," he declared, "all expressing the same sentiment—they liked it there and definitely didn't want to move to Hurst." The following are quotations he compiled.

"Nobody wants to leave—no one's unhappy," said Joanne Hubbard. "Everyone has room enough. There are no study problems. Not only do the emergencies want to stay, but the others don't want to see them leave."

"They've given us new dressers and desks, moved in two days ago," Sandy Holden exclaimed. "Now they're telling us to move out. With three in a room, we have more space than doubles in Flint or Day."

Shirley Powell commented, "I think we have made our relationships, made our friends. Everyone is very unhappy. Nobody wants to see them leave."

"I really hate to see them leave. Our floor has become an extremely close group," said Valerie Gustafson.

Judy Pernat said "We heard that Dean Carleton (Dean of Men Jim G. Carleton) was telling you guys how inconvenienced we are." There was a chorus of "It's not true." She continued, "If we had decided your fate, you'd stay."

The women were notified of the move by Jean Crawford, assistant to the dean of women, and director of women's housing. Anne Ollendick, Winchell head resident, said "they all wanted to stay—this was the general feeling—but I felt that they accepted it when Dean Crawford spoke to them."

But resident Marion Gail complained, "Why can't she (Crawford) come around and ask—doesn't anything we say mean anything?" She added, "This is unanimous; noboby has complained about Winchell."

Root Cottage's men were not happy about leaving either. James Collins, a junior, said "I was against the move. I applied for the cottage because I like cottage life."

Collins also complained about paying more for new housing in a large dorm and about lack of notice on the move.

"The resident advisor knew nothing about the move. Nobody even mentioned it to us until a few days before we had to get out," Collins said.

According to Collins, a girl from Mount Olympus called Root to ask about laundering facilities and food machines. "She was pretty disgusted," he said, to find it had none.

Miss Griffin Wins Class of '66 Award

The first class of 1966 scholarship award has been presented to Margaret "Peg" Griffin of Schenectady. William Weller, class president announced Thursday.

Miss Griffin, a junior who is spending this semester in Italy, has maintained a 2.6 cumulative average.

The scholarship fund was established last year with the proceeds from Homecoming Weekend which the sophomore class traditionally sponsors. The award is made on the basis of three criteria: scholarship, (a 1.6 average is a pre-requisite), leadership and financial need.

It originally was intended to be a prize awarded to an outstanding member of the class of '66. However, the class has decided to award the scholarship annually.

In the near future the class will hold a fund-raising drive for the scholarship fund. The university has agreed to match the amount raised by the class, Weller said. If enough money is raised, the award may be given to more than one member of the class.

This year's winner is a sister of Delta Delta Delta sorority.

Junior Executive Council members and SU administrators will meet 7:30 p.m. today in Kittredge Auditorium to discuss the scholarship. The meeting is open to the campus.

sed concern for the good name of the university.

Senior Joan Stern said the students involved deserved "a stronger punishment. I have a frosh sister," she said. "They better stay away from her."

Several girls reacted as Joan Gesikin, freshman, said she felt, "The girl should have known better."

Step-Sing Competition Planned for Coed Dorms

Once again this year the female warblers of Syracuse University are invited to demonstrate their vocal prowess in the annual Step-Singing Competition. The contest is sponsored by Sigma Iota Chapter of Sigma Alpha Iota, professional women's music fraternity.

Preliminary competition will be held on Nov. 2 and 4; semi-finals, Nov. 16 and 18; and finals on Dec. 9. The winners of both large and small divisions will perform on Dec. 13 at a Crouse College Concert, given by Sigma Alpha Iota.

Any questions concerning the event may be answered by Miss Jospe, ext. 3412, or Syliva Hess, ext. 2758.

Party Politics Discussion Set For Students

The Syracuse University Commission on Community Affairs is sponsoring an orientation meeting in conjunction with its election volunteer drive.

The meeting will be held 7:30 p.m. today in Maxwell Auditorium.

Roger Knapp, an instructor in the citizenship department, will introduce speakers from the Republican and Democratic parties, according to Mark S. Stein, coordinator of the program.

John F. K. Cassidy, chairman of the Board of Directors for the Onondaga County Young Republicans and William Andrews, city Democratic Party chairman, will speak on the importance and value of political participation.

Small group meetings with representatives from the two major political parties will follow the general session. The objective of the small group meetings is to orientate the students to their work assignments and party contacts, Stein said.

Leaders Believe

George Van Derven, president of InterFraternity Council, said, "The incident shocks me. It is probably a gross infraction of so many rules." He said that he couldn't "believe how people can be so stupid" and that it is "too bad the incident must hit headlines and give the university a bad name."

"As I see it," said Donald Thorn, chief justice of Inter-Fraternity Council judicial board, "drink and sex go together on a college campus. To go so far wrong at the beginning of a college career is unfortunate. Perhaps they didn't belong here in the first place."

Administration opinion was difficult to obtain. Chancellor William P. Tolley was unavailable for comment as was his assistant, Robert H. Ketchum.

John S. Hafer, dean of personnel administration and admissions, said that his staff had already commented and that he did not care to add anything.

The Rev. Robert C. Ayers, Episcopal chaplain, said the incident could be placed in the "shocking category."

"I feel some sense of sorrow for the people involved. They were new on the scene and got carried away. It was a matter that was dealt with adequately."

Rev. Ayers also said "it was obvious on the face of it—no one could condone it. And life goes on."

A director of a large women's residence hall said, "It was one of those unfortunate incidents that happen. It's hard to know what to say."

Among the sweeter pleasures is meeting somebody who agrees with our opinions.

✦ ✦ 'We Knew What to Do' ✦ ✦

The following is the second in a series of question and answer sessions between DO sportswriter Howard Schneider and Ben Schwartzwalder.

Q—Specifically, what were the differences between the way the team played Saturday and the way they played against BC?

A—Everything that every player does we on the coaching staff analyze. As the game unfolds we try to to correct any mistake we see. Football is both a simple and complex sort of game. You have to know what to do and then, of course, you have to do it. Against Boston College we made so many mistakes we couldn't plug the dike. I worked harder in that game than in any other, and the results weren't too encouraging. Against Kansas the boys knew what to do, and they did it. It was a different team and a different game. Any mistakes in blocking or execution were corrected quickly.

Q—Were you disappointed with the team in any way?

A—No team plays perfect ball, but no one is going to argue with the results we got Saturday. I can't help forgetting one thing though. On the very first play of the game if Little had gone inside of tackle, instead of outside, I'm convinced he would have gone all the way. Of course, he didn't make any mistakes after that, did he?

Q—Will you continue to use Billy Hunter on offense, and in general will you begin to use players both ways?

—Yes, we've found that our best offensive backs are also our best defensive backs. Accordingly, fellas like Nance, Little, Brown, Hunter, and Oyer will go both ways. On the line we'll have Tony Scibelli going two ways and we'll probably use George Fair a little more on offense. The rest of the boys on the line will try to specialize.

Q—Why don't you use more screen passes and swing passes in your offensive attack?

A—Kansas gave us the off tackle play and so we hit them where it hurt with what we could do best. In the future, however, we'll use more screen and swing passes if the opportunity arises. Looking back, we might have used the screen effectively Saturday. In general we're still trying to improve on our passing game as well as our punting.

Q—Who is your top quarterback prospect behind Mahle and King?

A—Right now I would have to say it was Hal Rooney. Of the three boys we've got he's the most poised and experienced. Teddy Holman will never be a good offensive quarterback as long as he breaks the play pattern. He's got to learn to hit that No. 1 receiver. Soph John Chernovitz is green, but he's coming along.

Low AND Inside

By BILL CRONAUER
Sports Editor

Sensational Floyd Little ruled at Archbold Stadium Saturday.

"He looked like a million dollars," remarked Kansas coach Jack Mitchell. "A pretty good day for a rookie," chimed Orange coach Ben Schwartzwalder. "I don't believe it," echoed the fans.

Yet one Hill student insisted. "You know who should get back of the week? Jim Nance. What a job of blocking he did out there today!"

BIG BO

Big Bo stood in the background, but he did his job.

"Jim was a blocker today," noted Ben, "and that helped. Maybe next week he'll be our ball carrier again because I'm sure somebody will defend against Floyd."

In the opener at Boston College, Nance rushed for 84 yards. He was a runner, not a blocker. The Kansas game proved that he could do both.

Schwartzwalder lists several reasons for Bo's improved blocking: "First of all he's matured. He has a new attitude toward the game. Also, he's gained experience. And above all he hustles."

After viewing films of Saturday's game, Ben announced that Bo was now his no. 1 linebacker. "He'll probably go both ways against Holy Cross," the Hill coach revealed. "Especially if things get tight."

Nance's running, blocking and linebacking talents have made him a top-notch professional prospect.

"He's definitely pro material," beams Ben. "At least the scouts must think so, the way they've been visiting us. Of all the seniors on the club, he has to be our top pro prospect."

Saturday Bo took a big stride toward the big leagues.

SU Foes Falter

By BOBBIE MARX

Last weekend's games across the country showed interesting consequences for future Orange opponents.

Of these unexpected events Holy Cross, which Syracuse faces this week in Worcester, was soundly squelched, 32-0 in their opening crusade against Villanova.

The Panthers of Pittsburgh, who meet Syracuse Oct. 31, had some of their power turned off when they were topped by Oregon, 22-14.

Another coast team showed strong colors this weekend when UCLA trounced Penn State.

Boston College, which upset Syracuse two weeks ago, was defeated by Army, 19-13, with the help of Fred Barossiky's 93-yard punt return and Larry Parcell's running. The Orange meets the entire West Point blockade Nov. 7.

TV Contest

Ben Shuffles Deck

By JIM KLURFELD

Holy Cross coach, Dr. Eddie Anderson, might only have been half-joking when he said "Syracuse will have to use its fourth team if we are going to have a chance" over the phone at Monday's weekly press conference.

Because with the Orangemen after their 38-6 win over Kansas and Villanova easily downing Holy Cross 32-0, this does not look like the most evenly matched game of the year.

However, Orange coach Ben Schwartzwalder isn't ready to accept Anderson's words. "They'll give us a game," Ben said. "We usually have trouble with them at Worchester."

In preparation for Saturday's game Ben has made a few changes which include:

Modifying the platoon system so that only the interior linemen and quarterbacks alternate.

Elevating Billy Hunter to starting halfback on both defense and offense.

In explaining his moves the coach said, "We now feel that our best halfbacks are our best halfbacks on both defense and offense. And the same goes for the ends."

Schwartzwalder also said that Jim Nance is probably his best linebacker and that he should see a lot of action at that position.

The coach had priaise for his offensive line, especially Pat Killorin. "He did an excellent job blocking."

Also speaking at the luncheon was Joe Szombathy, SU end coach who scouted Holy Cross. "This was Holy Cross' first game of the year," he said, "and they had no spring practice. I expect them to be a hundred-per cent better next week."

Szombathy pointed out that Jim Marcellino was an excellent halfback who could give the Orange trouble.

"Quarterback is their weakest position," Szombathy continued. "Against Villanova they alternated three boys. Of course, don't forget that they lost their first string quarterback, Fran Coughlin, when he severely cut his wrist this summer.

Hill Harriers Drop Buffalo At Drumlins

By NEIL KERR

Syracuse's varsity cross country squad opened its season impressively Saturday morning by "running over" Buffalo, 16-46, at Drumlins.

The SU harriers took five of the first six places as the Orange's Mike Spino finished first. Spino led all the way and covered the 5.3 mile course in 26:15.5.

SU's Marty Miller, Tom Giordano and John Crawford finished in a gentlemanly three-way tie for second. Rounding out the scoring for Syracuse was sophomore Bill Ramsdell, who finished sixth. Buffalo's Dave Genau took fifth, preventing an SU sweep.

"Those were pretty good times," commented Hill coach Bob Grieve afterwards. "Spino did an excellent job. Ramsdell too. That's the first time he's run five miles."

Syracuse's freshman team also took five of the first six places from their UB counterparts, winning 18-47. The Orange's speedy Dennis Boyle led from start to finish and recorded a winning time of 17:07.5 for the 3.3 mile course. Bill Jones (second), Bruce Pizzamenti (fourth), Dave Wood (fifth) and Bill Tobin (sixth) completed the SU scoring.

Boyle took individual honors easily, but a real battle for second place developed between SU's Bill Jones and Buffalo's Bob Stephenson.

Both boys are from the Buffalo area and had raced many times in high school, with Stephenson always winning. But this time Jones dogged Stephenson's footsteps most of the way, then sprinted past his old rival in the last half mile to finish nine seconds ahead.

Flyin' Floyd

Orange halfback FLOYD LITTLE scampers past would-be tackler GARY DUFF in Saturday's encouter at Archbold Stadium. Little tallied five touchdowns in leading Syracuse to a 38-6 victory.

Hurst Closes; Carleton Comments

Dean Claims Cottage Space Still Available

Men's housing spaces in cottages are still available, Dean of Men Jim G. Carleton told the Daily Orange Tuesday.

Carleton said that five spaces were available in upperclass cottages, with other spaces available in freshman cottages. The spaces were available for residents of Hurst and Root cottages, but had not been claimed.

He added, "no student shall suffer a financial hardship because of these moves." Carleton explained that arrangements could be made in hardship cases, if higher rates were necessitated.

Carleton also pointed out that students requesting higher-priced housing were expected to pay the higher rates. If no cottage spaces are available, financial arrangements in hardship cases will be made.

Explaining the relocation of the men students, Carleton said a major reason was to make effective use of facilities, by consolidating housing to leave cottages free for other purposes, such as faculty offices.

He added that the moves were also made to make maximum use of the university dormitories, which he said he felt have an "educational contribution" lacking in the cottages. He pointed out that the university dormitory system was constructed at a cost of several million dollars.

Hurst and Root will be used to relieve crowding in women's residence halls, but the future of Cornell cottage has not been determined. No future relocations are planned in the next few weeks, Carleton said.

Grief

Three students carry a trunk from Hurst Cottage Tuesday as students move from the small dorm after fighting administrative pressure for a week. The trunk is draped like a coffin as the mock funeral procession symbolized the "grief" felt by cottage residents at the order to move.

Cottage Shuts Amidst 'Taps,' Black Crepe

By PAT TRACEY

At 4:37 p.m. Tuesday the doors of Hurst Cottage opened and four men dressed in dark suits with black armbands emerged carrying a black trunk.

The group descended the front step of the cottage past several men similarly dressed who were lining both sides of the porch steps and walk. A bugler standing on the lawn began playing "Taps."

The procession moved slowly to the sidewalk, turned right and continued to the driveway where a hearse was parked. The trunk was lowered into the back of the hearse and the poker-faced group stood silently.

Thus the four pallbearers—Jesse Smith, Edward Beadel, Daniel Strum and Richard Klumpa—and the other former-residents of Hurst Cottage had completed the final stages of what they termed a "dramatization" of their situation.

At 3 p.m., the group had already begun preparation for their move. Signs in the cottage window read "We'd Rather Fight than Switch," "This is our Home," "It Hurst us to move," and "Rooms for rent here: By the hour only, Hurst Rent-a-Cottage."

Inside the cottage, men dressed in their best dark suits decorated three large

For Parents

A Weekend of Activity

In just eleven days moms and dads of all sizes and shapes will flock to the Syracuse campus for that annual festivity known as Parent's Weekend—and an activity-packed weekend it will be.

More than 1,100 parents of freshmen and transfer students already have accepted the invitation to attend the annual School for Parents.

The many sessions, open to parents of all students, will give the folks a chance to experience classroom life and to further understand the aims of the university.

On the lighter side, an all new Goon Show filled with laughs will take parents on a tour of life at "good old S.U."

Parents will see how things have changed on campus since 1874.

Or have they? They'll find out at 9 p.m., Oct. 9.

It'll be rah-rah time on the quad Friday night where the folks can get into the mood for the big game with UCLA at a pep rally.

Chancellor William P. Tolley will speak to parents at a breakfast convocation in Sims Hall Saturday morning. Then it's off to watch Syracuse battle the Bruins at Archbold Stadium.

Students who haven't purchased tickets for their folks yet may find that mom and dad will be watching the game through the goal posts.

Seats that were reserved for parents have now gone on sale to the general public, but a trip to the fieldhouse right away might save the day.

After the game, there will be open houses in all living centers.

4 Positions Open On Student Court

Student Court, a 13-member judicial board which is run by and for Syracuse University enrollees, has positions open for four juniors.

Not a court in the legal sense of the term, SC receives cases (about 50 per year) in which guilt is already admitted, from the dean of men's or dean of women's office.

The job of the court is "to determine the extent of the guilt and to prescribe corrective as well as punitive measures," according to Chief Justice Frank Richmond.

SC does not judge cases based on moral or psychological involvements. Richmond said that such problems "receive professional psychological handling."

Student applications are due at 5 p.m. Monday in the dean of men's office in the Administration Bldg. for men, or the dean of women's office in the Women's Bldg. for coeds.

Applicants must have a minimum 1.6 cumulative average and should submit their names, addresses, extention numbers, activities, ideas and criticisms of the court. They will be chosen on a basis of their applications,

IFC to Discuss House Averages

A committee requiring all fraternities on campus to maintain a specified cumulative average will be put into operation at tonight's InterFraternity Council meeting, George Van Derven, president of IFC revealed to the Daily Orange Tuesday.

Van Derven said that six men will be named to the committee after tonight's meeting. Their first function, he declared, would be to establish the average levels. He said he felt that it would be "about a 1.2."

Fraternities not making this average two semesters in a row would be suspended from IFC and their national organization notified, most likely causing a national suspension also. He did not state

SU Campus Chest Sets $3,000 Target

Syracuse University Campus Chest has set a target goal of $3,000 for the coming year, according to co-chairmen Linda Stevens and William Newman.

Campus Chest is a student fund raising body which donates money to non-profit, educational institutions and organizations. It also acts as a coordinator for other subsidiary fund raising groups on the campus.

The main program for the group will be the Campus Chest Carnival, Oct. 21, on the main quad. Other activities include a dollar drive, slated for the weeks between Thanksgiving and Christmas vacations and a button sale for Spring Weekend.

Greek and independent living centers will compete in the traditional contest to raise the most money through individual events such as car washes, dances, etc.

Among the organizations receiving funds from Campus Chest are Syracuse-in-Asia, National Scholarship Fund for Negro Students, World University Service and the Onondaga County Community Chest.

The student executive board of Campus Chest accepts applications from groups which want to be included in this year's donations, Newman said. Groups must be student oriented, non-profit and willing to participate in the Campus Chest program. Applications should be sent with a profile, to Newman, 423 Euclid Ave.

Living center representatives for Campus Chest will meet 7:30 p.m. Thursday in Gifford Auditorium, Huntington B. Crouse Hall.

Our Man In Brockport

We read in the Brockport State University "Stylus" early this week about a man named Don Clifford and his efforts in behalf of the memory of one of our own — the late Ernie Davis.

ERNIE DAVIS

Clifford and the students at Brockport State last year aided in formation of the Ernie Davis Leukemia Fund with a centribution of $300. This year Clifford and the students at Brockport State hope to spread their work to the national scene.

Clifford was here Saturday in the athletic department, but as of yet we have heard of no student group volunteering to take charge of the drive here, at Ernie's alma mater.

Brockport has pledged $1,000 to aid the cause this year, a total of fifty cents a student. If Syracuse can meet this goal, a total of $4,000 should be raised here.

And this is a task for a student group to assume. It is not the job of the athletic department or any administrative agency. It is a worthwhile goal for some student group, many of which do little to aid anything, to take upon its shoulders.

A picture of Ernie adorns the Manley Field House, and his Heisman Trophy stands nearby. Syracuse was the place Ernie could call his, and those of us who knew him fully realized his love for the school and its people.

Ernie was a guy who was always a credit to his university, his football and his friends. Today the students at Brockport, who probably never saw Ernie play, have dedicated themselves to doing something for his ideals.

Just as Ernie did countless times in Archbold Stadium, let's pick up the ball, and make sure that Syracuse, among all others, stands out among the supporters of the fund in Ernie's name.

O Say Can You See
The Squeeze
By Ken Auletta

On November 3, 1964 Sen. Barry Goldwater will be elected President of the United States. The truly astounding thing about such a statement is that no one can prove it false.

Political campaigns are often excuses for personal ambition, with issues owing more to one's imagination than to one's reason. But this presidential election year the differences between the two candidates are real. Barry Goldwater is more than just opposed to most of the domestic and foreign policies of the last 32 years; he questions the very premises on which these have been erected.

But instead of a meaningful dialogue we have witnessed the drone of a near monologue—and the left is largely to blame. Liberals, rudely shocked by the Goldwater candidacy into a realization that theirs is a liberal society—which should teach us that liberialism is nearly destitute—have attacked Goldwater with the passion and absence of thought that is the wound of any man whose self-interest is threatened. Illustrating once again that political campaigns are wonderful exercises in democracy: with leaders and led reduced to the same common gabble.

Barry Morris Goldwater is no more a "ranting, raving demagogue" or a "racist" than the House Un-American Activities Committee is a Communist front organization. No. Barry Goldwater is merely the unfortunate spokesman for an ideology that is served well by his sincerity, but slandered by his mental deficiencies An ideology that boasts William Buckley as a protagonist cannot, as any liberal debater can testify, be curtly dismissed.

One hesitates to join with William Miller in anything less than a solemn lenten promise to abstain from one another's notice, but surely the man has returned to truth when he charges that both Goldwater and he have been victimized by smear. A recent editorial in the "Saturday Evening Post" is a case in point; as are the automatic responses of we silly people who dismiss Barry Goldwater in emotional capsule form.

We live in a society in which, no matter our political prejudices, the force of our passion often serves as a substitute for the tenacity of our convictions. This is how stupid people are excused their ignorance. This is why stupid liberals who operate on no other fuel save passion and memory, are allowed to drown reason in a pool of vulgarizations.

And these shrill screams which invade our ears condition us. We begin to pay ourselves the supreme insult of taking ourselves seriously. The Press we read is mostly pro-Johnson (or anti-Goldwater). The Northeast in which most of us reside is predominantly the same. Thus those who would work for President Johnson's election labor on a diet that is more conducive to overconfident smuggness than to hungry skepticism.

The Sept. 5 issue of "The New Republic" concludes its lead editorial entitled "Johnson vs. Goldwater," with the soothing admonition to the Johnson administration that "it is after November that the real tasks will begin." The September 24 issue of "The Reporter" magazine is no less painless, addressing its editorial to the days following, not preceding, Nov. 3, after Goldwater "is soundly defeated."

Then "Newsweek," in its Sept. 28 issue, had a short blurb which should have graduated from its Periscope section to its columned pages. It read: "Polls taken for Massachusetts Gov. Endicott Peabody before the state's Democratic primary showed him winning—by margins comparable to those polls are giving LBJ over Barry Goldwater. Peabody lost the nomination to rival Francis X. Bellotti by 27,000 votes."

We who make our home on the democratic left in American politics now embrace Lyndon Johnson either through design or habit. As we squeeze, a little something is drained from us; but if we loosen our grip the cry come election day might well be one not of victory, but of self-pity.

LETTERS

Illogical

To the Editor:

When the DO began publishing last Friday, I had hopes that summer events had enlightened the stagnant minds of last year's editorial writers. Monday's Kennedy article, however, displayed the same crude intellectual impoverishment that suffocated the 1963-64 DO. The entire editorial was based on some vague, intangible complaint against Mr. Kennedy's candidacy: the same kind of illogical rambling used throughout the state by worried Republicans and so-called reform Democrats.

Whoever is responsible for the article (and it escapes me why anyone would want to claim it) apparently feels he is more adept than the founding fathers at framing a democracy. He naively states that Bob Kennedy is in the race only because of a "constitutional loophole." After reading the editorial, it is obvious that the author's logic is little more than one big loophole itself. He fails to recognize that the questions we must ask in this election must not concern length of residency or some sort of false state of pride, but the broad perspective of national goals and progress.

Being from Sen. Keating's home town, I have had more than a passing interest in his record. Sadly, there is not much to speak of. For six years, he has sat back and endorsed bills authored by the active Senator Javits. Keating's cry is not advancement but acquiescence, not improvement but non-improvement. He has never sponsored one piece of major legislation which has benefited New York. Keating's own record destroys the myth that long-term residency provides magical comprehension of issues unknown to people of neighboring states.

Indeed, his only claim to fame is that he let the cat out of the bag in the 1962 Cuban missile crisis. To some misguided souls, he became the modern Paul Revere for this action. Yet it seems to me that his horse stumbled somewhere along the line and rather than warn the government, he merely exposed their hands.

Keating's record may be adequate, but it is by no means superior. Robert Kennedy is not only capable, but vigorous. Perhaps the complacent residents may not like it, but New York needs more Bob Kennedys and Jacob Javits'.

"Hamlet"

by David Sosna

"Hamlet" done in the "Miracle of Electronovision" left much to be desired; so much, in fact, that this column sees no success in the process.

A play is not a movie, nor a movie a play. Because of this, the miracle becomes only another bad carnival illusion, only another ill-fated "technical breakthrough," only another PR man's piece of high-polished chicanery.

For the inherent differences of the stage and the screen are too opposite to be worked into a satisfactory compromise.

One of a motion picture's director's prime concerns is composition, i. e., where actors are at any given moment in relation to the edges of the screen. He trys to keep things reasonably symmetrical unless he has a specific reason for asymmetry. He does not allow an entrance from downstage right when the bulk of the action is at center stage. (Again,unless there is a reason otherwise.) He keeps his players on their marks and frowns on improvised stage movement to save him the effort, and ineptness, of moving his camera to keep composition.

A play, by its very nature, ignores these things. A movie that ignores them is something that one wastes on his neighbors and certainly not on a paying audience.

And yet Hamlet ignored them like a celebrate ignoring a hooker. It had to, for the whole process is nothing more than staging a play with movie cameras recording the action, and to alter the staging to suit the cameras is to stop making a play and start making a movie.

The staging differences are the problems that E.V. will never be able to over come; but with a little more care and better film and lighting, the process could at least produce fair results. It is said that these simple items were not attended to in the debut of the idea and that they damaged badly the truly great preformance of a very adept actor.

What Richard Burton did with Hamlet displayed a skill bordering on that of the Bards. He ignored the classic portrayal of the melancholy Dane who was weak with his own indecision. Instead he portrayed a princely figure with kingly grandeur. The melancholy became maniac and what was weak became wit. The prince was in control of the situation as a prince should be. Burton's interpretation was alive. It sparkled and yet it accomplished all that Shakespeare had wanted to. He was strong in a strong role.

Discussion On Housing For WAER

Syracuse University's housing shortage will be the topic of a special documentary at 6:30 p.m. today on campus radio station WAER.

Frank Harrar and Jean Crawford, directors of student housing on campus, will discuss the nature of this problem, its causes, and proposed solutions. Students directly affected by the shortage were contacted, and their recations will also be aired.

The administration will explain the relocation process and the steps now being taken to avoid recurrence of the housing problem.

This program is the first in a series of special reports on issues directly involving the students of Syracuse University.

Student Senate to Hear Housing Recommendations

Student Senate, launching its 1964-65 voyage through the stormy waters of student-administration conflict, will hear the "preliminary recommendations" of the housing committee captained by chairman Marshall Sneirson at its meeting 7:15 p.m. today in Maxwell Auditorium.

"We want to have a student voice in housing incidents which arise from now on," Sneirson told the Daily Orange. His committee report, will concern Hurst Cottage and cases of overcrowded housing, he said.

His recommendations will include the problem of representation on the university housing committee which, as of now, has no student members, Sneirson said.

Student Senate speaker Robert (Bobby) Stern said that this meeting will "lay the ground work" for the year's work.

Stern will announce the chairmen appointed to the following committees: student conduct and welfare, grading system, books south, government structure, local and national affairs and basketball seating.

The newly-appointed chairmen will report on their plans for committee activities this semester.

The steering committee, composed of the committee chairmen and senators-at-large, will convene prior to the meeting at 6:30 p.m. today in Maxwell Auditorium.

Senate representatives will be requested to list their choices for committee membership.

A delegate seating system will be established and representatives will be checked to determine whether or not their membership is valid in case of conflicting claims for seats, Stern said. The meeting is open to all interested students and alternate delegates are urged to attend.

Campbell Views 1964 Election As 'Big Choice'

By EDWARD KARLIN

"The most interesting election of this century." With this summary Prof Alan K. Campbell concluded a citizenship lecture Tuesday on the forthcoming presidential election.

Campbell said the coming election would give the American people "the biggest choice since the William Jennings Bryan campaign."

An avowed Democrat, Campbell often took opportunities in his lecture to slap the Re-Republican Party and its presidential candidate, Barry M. Goldwater.

He quoted a statement made by a Republican, saying the party "offered a choice rather than an echo." Then Campbell added a partisan note: "It seems to change from day to day."

Campbell told the students that a Goldwater victory in November would necessitate a victory in every state in the South including Texas. He said victories in California, Ohio, Illinois and one other large state would also be necessary.

Polls showed that Goldwater was losing in California, and in some Southern states, he said. According to Campbell, Ohio and Illinois are very close races at the present.

Campbell said he viewed 1928 as the "beginning of the modern history of political parties." In that election Alfred E. Smith, Democratic presidential candidate, built the majority coalition that meant victory for Franklin D. Roosevelt.

This Democratic strength, according to Campbell, was situated in the big cities of the north and is still with us today.

Much of Goldwater's hope in the election rests in the South, he explained. In recent years, the big Southern cities have gone Republican, while smaller towns have remained Democratic. Thus, if Goldwater can keep the city vote and split the Democratic vote he could conceivably win the South, he said.

Campbell declared the mountain states were divided, according to recent polls. These polls say Arizona, Goldwater's home state, is going for President Lyndon B. Johnson. Campbell commented, "There they know him best."

Campbell predicted the 1964 presidential election might be the biggest landslide since 1936 when Alfred M. Landon lost to Franklin D. Roosevelt, receiving less than 30 per cent of the vote.

He said polls now indicate Johnson will receive 65 per cent of the vote. However Campbell acknowledged that "traditional voting records of some groups may have changed."

specifically granted in the Student Government constitution, while the others have evolved during the four years the court has been in existence.

They are:

1.) Disputes involving interpretation or legality in regard to the Student Government constitution.

2.) Actions against regulations which apply only to the campus community, such as the car bill.

3.) Actions against national state or local laws which are outside the control of university personnel but which may bring discredit upon the university.

4.) Actions against the customs, ways and traditions of student life.

Last year SC suspended about 10 students.

Although the administration must give its approval to SC decisions involving suspension or "separation of the student from the university," Richmond said "no decisions have been reversed since the court's inception."

Members of the court, seven men and six women, are under oath to keep all information received under strictest confidence.

Meeting Tonight

AWS to Discuss Curfew Hours

By SUSAN STRANDBERG

Curfews may be changed early this fall, according to Diane Kessler, president of the Association of Women Students.

Committees to re-examine curfew hours will be set up today at the first AWS assembly meeting attended by AWS representatives and floor presidents.

"We are hoping to get more realistic curfews," said Miss Kessler. "We are especially concerned about curfews for freshmen and probation students, but the whole system will be under review."

Women, through their government — AWS — ultimately decide their own curfews. The committees appointed today will bring their proposals to the second assembly, and these proposals will be voted on at the following meetings, Miss Kessler said.

New curfews are not the only innovations planned by AWS for this year. A new sophomore commission has been formed to give sophomore women a chance to participate actively in the organization of AWS. These women, chosen through interviews last spring, will work this year on committees as chairmen, in cooperation with officers, and in connection with the extended dorm council program, Miss Kessler noted.

"In the past there was no place for underclassmen to actively participate in AWS," explained Miss Kessler. "This had to be changed. The officers cannot be a clique in an ivory tower. We want girls to realize that AWS is here to help them get what they want...things they don't like can be changed. The activities and programs they are interested in can be started. That is why we formed the sophomore commission - to involve more women in their government."

AWS office hours will be changed to those more convenient to most women, said Kessler. The new hours are 2-5 p.m. Mondays, 3-5 p.m. Tuesdays-Thursdays and 1-2 p.m. and 3-5 p.m. Fridays. "We hope the new hours will encourage more girls to come in with problems, suggestions, complaints and ideas," said Miss Kessler.

"We hope to broaden the concept of AWS, from that of an association which decides curfews and reviews late minutes to that of a government concerned with the interests of all women...academic and social," she continued.

One activity that was organized last spring is a fashion show sponsored by Engel's Dress Shop that will be held Oct. 21 just before the opening of the annual Campus Chest Carnival. The models will be SU coeds.

The Orange Poll

Daily Orange staff members will be covering the campus in the next few weeks, asking questions of significance to the university, as well as the state and nation.

1. If you could vote in the New York senatorial election, for whom would you vote?

	TUESDAY	TOTAL
Kenneth B. Keating	28	155
Robert F. Kennedy	18	90

2. If you could vote in the national election this year, for whom would you vote?

BUNKS, NO LADDERS

Housing Gripes: SU Not Alone

Syracuse University is not alone in its housing difficulties.

Of the numerous college newspapers the Daily Orange has received so far this year in exchange four report that their universities have encountered the same problem, and their situations make the housing problem here look a little less desperate.

The four universities—Louisiana State, University of Florida, Kansas State, and Kent State—have found themselves, as has Syracuse, with a larger freshman class than was expected.

Co-eds here may be crowded, but at least they're not sleeping in bunk beds, as are girls at Louisiana State. At the Baton Rouge, La., school, 300 rooms in eight women's dormitories have been converted from two to three-student rooms by adding bunk beds and removing one single bed.

Not only are these girls sleeping in bunk beds, but those who are assigned to the top bunk do not have any way of getting up there, and once there, may not stay there long. The university neglected to supply ladders and railings for these rooms.

In addition, 60 men at Louisiana are living in what amounts to a barracks, with bunk beds and foot lockers.

At Kansas State the housing shortage has forced the university to move freshmen sorority pledges into the Greek houses, contrary to the general practice, for the fall semester. Some co-eds there are also living in social rooms in dormitories.

While some freshmen men at Syracuse are protesting possible transfer to modern dormitories, 40 men at Kansas State are living out of suitcases in the basement of a dormitory.

At the University of Florida, where undergraduates may live off campus in apartments, housing is "the scarcest in years," according to one official.

Some 3,200 off-campus apartments there are reportedly filled. This situation arose even though Florida turned down many applicants because of a lack of housing space.

Kent State, which admitted 24 per cent more freshmen than last year, also faces a housing shortage.

trunks with black crepe paper. Others busily decorated the outside of the cottage along the porch railings and down the walk with crepe paper. Suitcases were arranged on the porch along with such other such items as typewriters, waste baskets and boxes of books, duffle and laundry

At about 3:30 p.m. a university truck arrived to move the men's possessions. The driver said that he could only work until 4:30 p.m. and that he would only make one trip—to Sadler Hall. The men loaded what they could into the truck and at 4 p.m. it pulled away, leaving many trunks and suitcases behind.

While the men awaited the time for their move, they spoke of their annoyance with the situation. "We do not like paying for the privilege of being dragged around like dirt," said one of the pallbearers.

Meanwhile, a crowd was beginning to assemble in front of the cottage. Television stations were represented by cameramen taking pictures of the proceedings. SU's WAER sent two staff members who spoke to Jesse Smith, one of the pallbearers. A Post-Standard photographer called to say he would arrive shortly.

Beneath a darkening sky, the men readied for the final moment. The bugler, Steve Gould took his position on the lawn. Others assembled on the sides of the walk and porch steps. A group of about 12 girls from a nearby cottage began to sing "Bye bye Hurst," "We love you, Hurst" and other songs.

Finally the moment arrived 37 minutes late and amid laughter and cheers from the spectators and with the buzzing of cameras in front of them, the former residents of Hurst Cottage fulfilled the claim of a black-rimmed sign on the porch railing which read, "Funeral Services, 4 p.m. Today."

the length of suspension.

In addition to discussion of the new body, to be called the InterFraternity Standards Commission, Van Derven told the Daily Orange that he will talk on the fraternity's growing role in the Syracuse community and the coming open house rush.

Expanding on the subject, Van Derven told the Daily Orange that "If we can get over the hump of fall upperclass and open house rush, things will go very well in the spring."

He said he felt that the addition of the new rush book will be a "great help."

The book, supplied by Frank J. Harrar, new fraternity and men's housing administrator, serves as a guide to fraternity houses in the rush period.

Van Derven also said that he would discuss the year's budget at the meeting and introduce Harrar and Melvin C. Mounts, another fraternity administrator. The meeting is scheduled for 7:30 p.m., today at Tau Delta Phi fraternity.

Puzzle Lost in Mail Mixup

Due to a mail mix up, the Daily Crossword Puzzle is not being received by the Daily Orange office. Consequently this feature will be missing from this and the next few issues of the DO.

Sports Scope

By JIM KLURFELD

You're Floyd Little and right now you're the toast of Syracuse football fans. Saturday you led your team to victory gaining over 250 yards in the process. Only a fellow by the name of Jimmy Brown has done better and that was in his senior year.

But it hasn't always been this good for you. As a skinny country boy in Waterbury, Conn., you didn't know what a football was. "I was a baseball player in those days, a heck-of-a baseball player," you say.

That was in fifth grade and you played for the seventh and eighth grade teams—first string to boot. They thought you were going to be another Jackie Robinson.

But the next year you moved to New Haven, a big city, and they played football there. "They hood-winked me into playing," you tell. "One town against the other. I didn't have any equipment, but I liked to tackle. I liked to run, too, but I liked to tackle best."

That was the beginning. You didn't know much about the game, but you didn't have to. It's really a simple game. All you have to do is hit hard and you did.

In the ninth grade the coach said that you were too light to play. You only weighed 135. The other guys were giants. But you made it your business to gain weight.

That year you ran track — the quarter mile. It might have been the turning point. By the end of the season you weighed 165. Oh yes, you also ran the quarter in 50 seconds flat, not bad for a frosh.

"I learned to run fast from my sister," is how you tell it. "She was five years older than me and when I was small I used to follow her around where-ever she went. I used to hold the tail of her skirt and she moved pretty fast. I just had to make up my mind to move as fast as she did. That's how I became fast."

The following year was different. You made the team and wore number 44. Maybe somebody knew something. After that they couldn't contain you.

You were the first Negro athlete at Bordentown Military Academy. It was an experiment. You hit it off real well. You broke the barrier and now a lot of Negroes go there. You set an example on and off the field.

Though you were captain of the football, basketball and track teams you might be remembered there more for how you did things than for what you did. Maybe that comparison with Jackie Robinson isn't that far off.

All your life you wanted to go to Notre Dame. After seeing that Knute Rockne picture and all what kid doesn't? But after visiting the campus you weren't too impressed. Neither did West Point excite you. They weren't coed schools.

And there was another factor—Ernie Davis. "He was my idol. I wanted to be like him. He never told me to come here, but just said he saw a lot of him in me and wanted to see if I would make the same choice he did."

Your coach paid you a high tribute when he said that if anybody had the Ernie Davis spirit it was you.

You're Floyd Little, the toast of Syracuse football fans this week and probably for years to come.

Little, Fair Honored

By HOWIE SCHNEIDER

Trying to keep a straight face, Val Pinchbeck, Syracuse University publicity director, picked up the microphone in the press box following the Kansas game and announced, "Gentlemen, we will now vote for the outstanding sophomore in the game."

Pinchbeck's comment brought an understandable roar of laughter from the gallery of writers, who had just seen Mr. Floyd Little scamper for five touchdowns.

Yesterday, however, in a similar, but more serious vote, the Eastern College Athletic Association named Little the East's outstanding sophomore of the week.

Little, who rushed for 159 yards against the Jayhawkers, was a unanimous choice. In the game Little also caught two passes for 47 yards, ran back two kickoffs for 48 yards and scored 30 points.

Little, surprisingly, was not named to the ECAC All-East starting lineup.

Defensive end George Fair was the only member of the Orange squad named to the All-East team. Fair turned in an outstanding performance against Kansas and participated in eight tackles.

Joining Fair on the line are end Jim Whalen (Boston College), tackles Al Atkinson (Villanova) and Jim Freeman (Navy), guards Tom Connelly (Rutgers) and Gene Skowronski (Harvard) and center Bernie Dallas (U. of Mass.).

The All-East backfield consisted of quarterback Archie Roberts (Columbia), halfbacks Don Parcells (Army) Don Kunit (Penn State), and fullback Chuck Mercein (Yale).

Roberts accunted for all three Columbia scores as his club topped Colgate, 21-14.

Parcells caught a pass which set up Army's first touchdown and then swept around his end scoring the second TD.

Kunit ran for one score and then set up Penn State's other marker with a series of end sweeps and line plunges. Mercein gained 166 yards in powering Yale to a 21-6 victory over Connecticut.

Orangemen FLOYD LITTLE (below) and GEORGE FAIR (right) were awarded Eastern football honors Tuesday. Little, who scored five TDs against Kansas, was named ECAC sophomore of the week. Fair was selected for the ECAC All-East team for his fine defensive play.

Cihak, Spino, Miller-A Strong Trio

By NEIL KERR

Referring to his 1964 cross country squad, SU coach Bob Grieve said, "We were pretty much of a sophomore team a year ago. Now we have a little experience."

By "experience" Grieve is referring to a trio of talented juniors, Bill Cihak, Mike Spino and Marty Miller. These three form the nucleus of the Piety's '64 cross country team.

Perhaps the best of SU's distance men is Cihak (Chee-ak), a 19-year-old Liberal Arts student from Buffalo. At 16 Cihak won his first big race — a junior olympic mile run — in the time of 4:28. Since then he's competed at distances ranging from 440 yards to five miles and has recorded a career best of 4:16.5 in the mile.

Cihak, a 5-8, 130 pounder, possesses an unusual amount of stamina according to Grieve. Running in a dual track meet during his freshman year, Bill proved that. He ran the two mile in 9:57, the mile in 4:30, the half mile in 1:59 and finished with a 51 second quarter mile for the relay team.

Last year Cihak led SU's sophomore dominated cross country team to a 3-2 dual meet record. In the season's finale he finished a creditable 18th at the IC4A championships in New York City.

Though Cihak has clocked times of 1:56 for the 880 and 9:35 for the two mile in addition to his 4:16.5 mile, he is perhaps more adept at cross country running because he has the ability to carry his speed over great distances.

"My finishing kick usually isn't so hot," said Bill. "To compensate for my poor kick, I like to set a fairly rapid pace all the way."

Cihak, a zoology major, is planning to apply to the Pensacola Flight School next year. He hopes to someday work as a commercial airlines pilot.

Mike Spino

Mike Spino, from Lindhurst, N. J., also recorded some impressive times while in high school. After finishing at the state cross country meet and later clocking a 4:22 mile, Spino received 15 scholarship offers before choosing Syracuse.

Since coming to SU, Spino has consistently been among the top three finishers in Syracuse's cross country meets and has lowered his track times as well. Last season Mike clocked a 4:15.8 mile and a 1:56.5 half. In direct contrast to Cihak, Spino prefers to hang back during much of a race, then sprint at the end, though he added that "I've lost some big races cause I've gone out too slowly."

This past summer Mike ran 40 to 50 miles a week in preparation for this year's cross country campaign. And it paid off as Spino took first place against Buffalo last Saturday by running SU's 5.3 mile course in 26:15.5.

Spino is majoring in history in the college of Liberal Arts and is planning a career as a history teacher.

Marty Miller

SU's third talented junior, Marty Miller, was forced to run his first race. When he entered high school at the age of 14, his gym class at Stuyvesant High in New York City was required to run a half mile for time. Marty ran it in 2:13.

From then on Marty took an active interest in running and improving rapidly. During his senior year he ran a 4:29 mile. Also that year Miller finished fourth in a field of 600 at the 2.5 mile eastern cross country championships.

At SU Marty has improved on his previous track times, recording a 4:24 mile and a 1:58 880. He has consistently been among the front runners on the Hill harrier squad and last weekend was one of the Piety runners who finished in a three way tie for second against Buffalo.

"During a race I like to set a real fast pace all he way," said Miller. "I don't like to wait for a kick."

Marty is also in Liberal Arts and is a political science major. He is planning to apply to grad school to study law after graduation.

Diane Kessler

SU Coed Invited To LBJ Buffet

By CAROL RUBRIGHT
Junior Editor

A Syracuse University coed will be a guest of the Lyndon B. Johnson family in the White House Saturday.

Diane Kessler, president of the Association of Women Students, was notified Wednesday by Dean of Women Marjorie C. Smith, of the honor.

The occasion is a receiption for student leaders from 200 representative colleges and universities throughout the country.

In a letter to Chancellor William P. Tolley, Sept. 24, President Johnson said:

"I have great interest in the young leaders who are emerging in our colleges and would like to get to know them and their thinking as much as I can.

"The young person I would like to invite is the college student . . who, while maintaining a good academic record, has also shown special qualities of character, leadership, and interst in college and public affairs," the letter contined.

Miss Kessler, a senior from Holland Patent majoring in elementary education, has a 1.9 cumulative average and has been a finalist in the Miss Syracuse beauty contest for the past two years.

It's Election Time For Class of '68

Election Commissioners S. Richard Fischman and Michael Kronley disclosed Wednesday that Sunday, each large freshman living center should elect three representatives and each cottage should elect two representatives to attend the freshman nominating convention, Thursday, Oct. 15.

Frosh elections will take place on Thursday, Oct. 22.

Applications for the freshman committee should include name, campus address, extension, high school activities, and ideas. The committee will be made up of five women and five men.

Applications are due by 5 p.m. at the Women's Bldg. Friday. If there are any problems call Fischman, ext. 2640 or Kronley ext. 2648. Interviews will be held early next week," Fischman said.

Election rules for this year will be decided by a committee consisting of 8-10 freshmen who will make applications and be interviewed to obtain positions on the election board. This board will run the freshman nominating convention, decide when the campaign is to start and place restrictions on campaign procedures.

The committee system was set up three years ago to allow freshmen to run their own election. All Syracuse University elections had previously been held between the upperclass-dominated Campus Alliance and United Student Parties.

Traditions gave way, however, when the class of 1965, as freshmen, threatened to break with CAP and US on the grounds that the policies and candidates of both parties were unknown to freshmen and might not be those the freshmen themselves would choose.

Herbert Stone, president of a floor in DellPlain Hall, said at the time, "...we just want a free election with freshmen voting for candidates selected by the freshmen class and not by the upperclassmen who run CAP and US."

Meetings were attended by representatives of CAP, US, and the freshman class at which the frosh emphasized that they did not advocate a complete break with CAP and US.

In October, a meeting of freshmen floor and cottage representatives was sponsored by the newly-formed 'Freshmen for Free Elections." It resulted in the proposal that candidates for freshmen offices be chosen at a freshman convention, at which all frosh dormitory floors and living centers would be represented.

The freshman class decided to vote within the framework of the existing two-party system, each freshman living center sending two representatives with nominating and voting powers to the US and CAP nominating conventions.

Dissatisfied with this arrangement, some freshmen presented an ultimatum to CAP and US demanding that only freshmen be allowed to vote for freshmen candidates.

They also requested that freshmen candidates be allowed to choose their own campaign managers and that the upperclassmen act only in an advisory capacity in all frosh election matters.

When these demands were not met, freshmen delegates walked out of both CAP and US nominating conventions and proceeded to draw up a constitution. This was approved by the Student Senate (Formerly Student Government) as the Re-

Students, Administrators To Debate at Pinebrook

For three days students, faculty and administration members will meet to discuss and re-evaluate their roles and progress toward meeting the demands of a changing university at the annual Pinebrook Conference.

The conference, which starts Friday, will be held at the university-owned Pinebrook Lodge, Tupper Lake.

The relationship of Student Government to the students will be the prime topic of discussion, according to Michael Lieberman, co-chairman of the conference.

Under this topic, the participants will discuss whether SG and other campus organizations should be financially dependent upon the administration.

The Student Finance Bill, which was passed by the Student Senate (then the Joint Student Legislature), provided for the view of student organization budgets by a student finance board. This bill and a possible substitute will be discussed.

IFC Show Marks UCLA Weekend

By DAVID SOSNA

A pre-football game interFraternity Council show will be held for the first time in university history.

GEORGE VAN DERVEN

Block marching by the SU band and a speech by George Van Derven, president of IFC, will highlight the demonstration, scheduled to precede the UCLA game Oct. 10 in Archbold Stadium.

Revealed in Wednesday's IFC meeting, the plan was hailed by Van Derven as a "terrific idea that could do great things for the school." He told the representatives his speech will inform the freshmen and their parents atending the Parents' Weekend game that all 30 fraternity houses will be open for inspection after the game until 6 p.m.

A more formal open house is planned for Sunday Oct. 18. Van Derven explained that this increase in the amount of contact will enable the freshmen to get a better understanding of the fraternity system at Syracuse.

Upperclass rush was also discussed at the session. It was announced that registration will be held from 9 a.m.—3 p.m. today and Friday in Huntington B. Crouse Hall. On Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, all registered upperclassmen will be able to visit fraternity houses.

Houses will be open to rush for at least two of the three days, and some will be open for all three sessions. Friday's Daily Orange will publish a list of houses and times they plan to be open.

SS Tables Housing Motion

A motion that the Student Senate recommend that two students be appointed to the university's housing committee was tabled Wednesday night at the second meeting of the SS.

The group, after lengthy discussion, tabled the motion to await the result of a discussion of the housing question at this weekend's Pinebrook Conference. The motion had been approved earlier 12-1 by the SS steering committee.

The motion recommended that one student selected by the president of Student Government and one selected by the speaker of the legislature be appointed to the committee, which deals with university housing problems.

Speaker Robert (Robby) Stern announced the appointof Kathleen Kapsol as special assistant to the speaker. The appointment was approved unanimously by the legislature.

Committee chairmen were also announced. Appointed were Stephen Jaffey and Nan Bishko, student conduct and welfare; Donald Novack, local and national affairs; Howard Keller, government structures; Taunya Lovell, "Books South;" Gary Damast and Stuart Herrick, marking system; and James Thweatt, athletic seating.

Committee assignments for senate members will be listed in the Daily Orange previous to the next legislature meeting. Copies of the senate rules were distributed.

PARENTS' TIX TIME FADING

Students who plan on having parents attend the UCLA football game during Parents' Weekend, Oct. 9-10, must reserve tickets immediately at the ticket office in the Manley Field House.

Because of the demand for tickets, a sellout is expected. A limited number are being held exclusively for parents, but will only be held for a few days.

Voting Info

Assistance in voter registration is continuing to be offered to students by members of Student Senate and Syracuse University Committee on Equality.

Students operating the registration booth report that there have been many inquiries about registration in other states, including Massachusetts, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Connecticut.

Questions will be answered at the booth in the lobby of Huntington B. Crouse Hall from 9:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m. today and Friday.

Although students may vote by absentee ballot, they must register in person, according to Kathleen Kapsol, a member of SS. Some difficulty has been encountered in matching rides and riders for those who wish to go home and register, but they are trying to provide as much transportation as possible.

Most professors will probably excuse students who must cut class in order to register, provided that they explain their absence before the class meets, Susan Urban, a SUCE member said.

To Freshmen, With Hope

Among the pile of letters in our morning mail Wednesday was one from a resident of the cottage from which three freshman men were suspended last week. Because we feel it is especially newsworthy, we would like to reprint part of it here. It reads:

"In walking to classes the other morning, I noticed a trash can full of beer cans in front of one of the fraternity houses. I know that the punishment given to the eight people involved in the incident of September 19 was a proper one, but how could your articles take such a self-righteous view of the whole situation? I do not speak ignorantly, for the entire incident took place in my residence.

"For these eight people there are at least hundreds more doing the same thing. But we know nothing about them. Undoubtedly the national press will blow this whole thing out of proportion . . . and we will be stomped on just as Brandeis and Harvard were last year.

"I am only a freshman. I am influenced greatly by what the upperclassmen do. Is there any local law that gives fraternity men the right to drink? I think your treatment of the whole situation was entirely unfair. Let's have some construction. You have challenged the freshman class. Let us now throw the challenge back at you."

No, Mr. Freshman, there is no law that gives upperclassmen in general and fraternity men in particular the right to drink. As we both know, there are rules prohibiting such action.

But these rules are puzzling in the context of a university which cannot actively enforce them and a prevailing student attitude which actively encourages violation.

We have challenged the freshman class not in the feeling of self-righteousness of which you speak, but in a feeling of hope that maybe this is the class that can change the shape of the times.

The only difference between the former members of your cottage and the rest of the campus is that your friends were caught. The university is powerless to catch any others without the creation of a police-like state.

Don't throw the question back at us, Mr. Freshman, for the upperclassmen of today have failed. Take it upon yourself to do what you can, and perhaps someday we may smile together.

Congratulations

Well-deserved recognition was bestowed upon Syracuse University's Floyd Little yesterday when The Associated Press named him its Back-of-the-Week.

The honor was the highest received by an Orange football player since the late Ernie Davis earned the Heisman Trophy in 1961.

Floyd's play against Kansas Saturday offered indications of future stardom. Keep up the good work!

Millstones and Milestones

A Vote for Bob

By Dan Stone

As a person voting for the first time this year, I am taking the choice of the right candidate seriously. In all but the Presidential race I have yet to come to a decision, rather waiting, perhaps idealistically, for some issue to develop in any of several races.

And yet, though I am undecided, I am disturbed by the curt dismissal that Robert Kennedy's candidacy has received. Without bringing an issue to the fore, Ken Keating, by public pronouncement and lack of public enthusiasm, has been turned into a martyr-symbol being crushed under the wheels of a ruthless machine. And indeed the elements of the classic power play are evident in Kennedy's nomination.

But in allowing the election to revolve around this emotional consideration solely, one is ignoring certain facts.

First, of course, is the question of legality. Regardless of how much fun editorial cartoonists can have drawing a carpetbag, the Constitution sets out three qualifications a person must meet to be a Senator and Robert Kennedy meets all three.

Tradition and precedent indeed have dictated that the candidate be an aged fixture in his state, but the Kennedy spirit has long been one of precedent shattering and in a mobile society when the Senate is being called upon to take an increasingly more national and less parochial viewpoint perhaps this precedent is a barrier which should have been felled long ago. The point of the matter is that Bob Kennedy is a legally qualified candidate and deserves to be considered on his merit.

It is said that Robert Kennedy is ambitious; that he is using New York as a stepping stone and that New Yorkers should resent it. These of course are the same New Yorkers who have seen Al Smith and Franklin Roosevelt rise from the Governor's mansion to the Presidential nomination. These are the New Yorkers that continued to elect Tom Dewey when is was obvious where his interest was centered.

More recently, this is the state that reacquaints itself with Nelson Rockefeller each time an election rolls around. And rather than resent it, New Yorkers seem to bask in the reflected glory of a national figure.

Of course Robert Kennedy is ambitious. He feels a calling to unfinished business—"miles to go" perhaps—but to dismiss him as simply an ambitious rich young man with an attractive face and name is to make the same mistake many made with his brother in 1960.

The question as to whether he could adequately represent New York seems to me ill-conceived. Above all Bob Kennedy is a master tactician. Even if he is "using" the state as a springboard, the only way he can do it is to give New York a fine job as its Senator. His ability to produce is his key to the future and New York can only benefit. He has given his all in the past three years to easing many of the complex problems of the District of Columbia (where he has never lived or voted). He can do the same for New York.

On the other side of the ledger Ken Keating is not the Perfect Liberal he is being portrayed as. As the "New Republic" recently pointed out, in 1962 he voted to cut US loans to developing countries (Senator Javits voted against the measure); he sought to block a Presidential request for executive authority to waive a Congressional prohibition against US aid to countries exporting strategic goods to communist nations (Javits for). In 1961 he was recorded against a three-year program for federal grants to help local school district. There are other examples.

The senator is in an untenable position in refusing to endorse his party's nominees, and the people of New York are in a similar position. If by tragic accident Sen. Goldwater should be elected, Keating is a man alone without influence in his party. If Goldwater loses by the margin the polls indicate, Keating, Republican, would be one of a handful in a hostile Congress. Kennedy on the other hand would continue to be a powerful voice in his party's councils.

The argument is advanced that we need a Keating to rebuild the Republican party from shambles. The people of New York need a Robert Kennedy to keep the Democratic party from becoming a shambles.

In Murray Kempton's phrase, in Robert Kennedy the Democratics have offered the people of New York an echo, not a choice.

But it is not an echo of his opponent.

It is an echo of what might have been. It is an echo of promises still unfilfilled and a spirit which has not been snuffed out but which cries for a forceful re-embodiement.

And, more importantly, it is an echo which could well still be reverberating in the halls of history when Ken Keating is just a sentimental memory.

Bob Kennedy deserves more than a curt dismissal.

Policy

To the Editor:

It is common knowledge that the university policy toward "lost" articles states that: "any article of university property which is found missing from its designated place should be brought to the immediate attention of the resident advisors. They should then take up a search for the "lost" item and if it is not found, he should require the members of the floor involved to forfeit the money to pay for the replacement of the missing item."

If this is the standing policy with the university, how are we, the undersigned residents of Watson Dormitory East, Second Floor, supposed to protect ourselves and our wallets from thieves and robbers who have already stripped our floor of two rather expensive pieces of university property—a fire extinguisher and the other more important item, our university extension telephone which was ripped off of its walls in the phone booth Friday night, September 25, while everyone was at the movie.

Are we to go on permitting these outragious crimes to happen — with our backs to the wall — unable to help or defend ourselves? There ought to be someone who can help us; there ought to be . . . . What can we do?

The residents of
Watson East 2

Shadows

To the Editor:

The South Crouse head residents who want male students around for protection are not being frightened by shadows. As two of the girls who were "accosted" and beat up by tough female delinquents from the 15th Ward, we can testify that the situation would have been much worse if a man from the university hadn't come to the rescue.

We were involved in just one of a half a dozen incidents that put at least one girl in the infirmary and badly upset a number of others. Obviously, such attacks are a very bad advertisement for Syracuse University; the administration should be glad to do something that both protects coeds and leaves students where they want to live.

Start

To the Editor:

T.A.G. says:

There is something about going to class the first day that makes it look inevitable that great things happen between you and the people there. It is such a good start.

But you know of that girl you see sitting in front of you the first day, that someday there will be a last day. They'll be passing out the final exam booklets and she'll still be there, and probably nothing will have ever advanced. You will have watched her wear maybe a dozen sets of clothes, a different one each succeeding day, and perhaps wondered when a given outfit would come out of the closet again. And by this, fancied yourself projected into her person and her life.

Thomas A. Gusterson, '65

Gross

To the Editor:

As an old graduate student (26), and one of provincial background, I would like to ask a question. Wasn't the banner reading, Klobber the Krap out of Kansas, just a little bit gross?

A. Craig

Sims

To the Editor:

Kudos to the Sims Dining Hall for the consistent quality of their cuisine. This Friday night's assorted meat conglomeration upheld these standards to the letter, or should I say leather?

Frank Chestnut '68

Parking

To the Editor:

While it is regrettable that the Syracuse Police Department has seen fit to run parking meters up the final block of University place, at least they are two-hour meters. For this I, and many other commuters are grateful. The advantages over one-hour meters are obvious—no more racing out of a class or lab to feed the meter, no more wasted hours spent timing the police rounds so you can avoid tickets.

As I said, the march of meters is a regrettable as it is inevitable. But, being thankful for small favors, next to no meters at all, the two-hour meters are more tolerable.

Singer-Composer Paxton Brings Village Style To Folk Gallery Concert

TOM PAXTON

Tom Paxton, folk guitarist and composer, will appear at 8:30 p.m. and 10:30 p.m. today at the Folk Gallery.

Born in Chicago in 1937, Paxton moved to Oklahoma and was graduated from the University of Oklahoma in 1959 with a degree in drama. After his graduation, a six-month term in the Army brought Paxton to the New York City area, where on weekend passes, he spent his time at such Greenwich Village folk clubs as The Gaslight. Here he met noted city singers Dave Van Ronk, Paul Stookey, and Ed McCurdy and began to learn from each of them. Before long he was sending his weekends working at the Gaslight and other village clubs.

After his Army discharge, Paxton began a regular engagement at the Gaslight and also played various other folk clubs in the country.

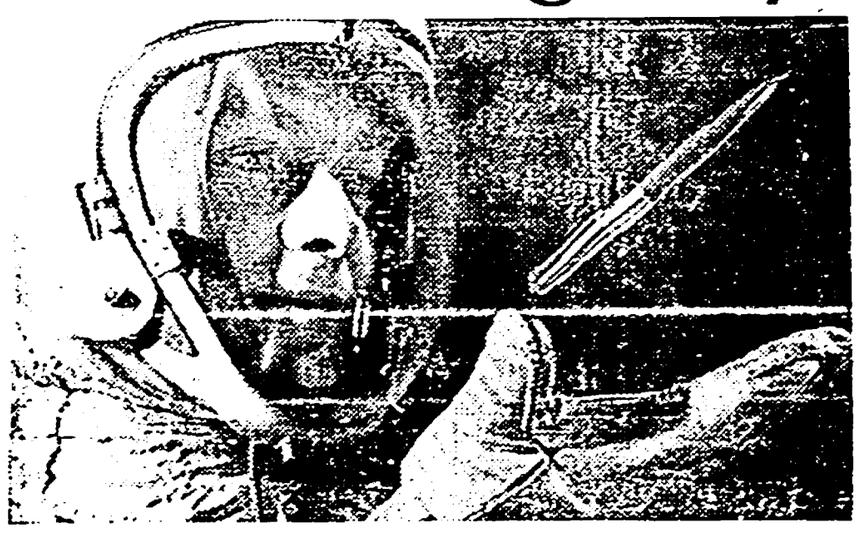
The only pen that defies gravity



An ordinary pen would draw a blank without gravity to release the ink. The remarkable Parker 61 is designed to write without gravity, which makes it virtually leakproof. The reason: capillary action defies gravity and suspends the ink in tiny cells in the barrel. Capillary action also fills this remarkable pen. Dip the filling end in ink and in ten seconds your 61 will be set for up to 6 hours of steady writing. Beautiful writing.

SG Conference

and a secretary appointed to the board, would review proposed budgets of these groups, according to the bill.

The reviewed budget would then be sent to the administration for approval. A bill of this sort must be passed by the university personnel committee.

This committee suggested a two-year trial of the bill before it was approved. As such, the bill went into effect in December 1963.

The bill was then scrapped by dean of Personnel Administration and Admissions John S. Hafer in the spring of 1964.

According to Kathleen Kapsol, who orginiated the bill and was chairman of the committee which formulated it in 1962, the bill was operable as it was and could have worked if given a chance.

"We were stopped before we had a chance to do anything," she said.

Miss Kapsol said she could not see how one member of the personnel committee could stop the functioning of the bill when the whole committee had agreed to a two-year trial period.

Under the same topic, the conference will discuss how a student leader should effectively represent his constituents and how SG can equitably protect the rights of student groups with conflicting interests. The marking system, housing and orientation week also will be discussed.

The relationship of SG to other student organizations, including the improvement of communications will be a topic for the conference.

Here participants will also discuss the possiblity of a need to reorganize student government, Lieberman said.

How SG can gain the respect of students and administrators and how much self determination an organization can enjoy within the university community will be other areas of debate at the conference.

The Orange Poll

Daily Orange staff members will be covering the campus in the next few weeks, asking questions of significance to the university, as well as the state and nation.

1. If you could vote in the New York senatorial election, for whom would you vote?

WAER Discussion Airs Housing Views

Focus, WAER's news analysis program, Wednesday night presented interviews with several students and administration officials on the current housing controversy.

Allan Parachina, a former resident of Hurst Cottage, termed the administration's handling of the housing situation as "wrong!"

The residents of Hurst Cottage were informed that they would have to move Thursday afternoon with no explanation given until Sunday night, he said. Assistant Dean of Men David Tatham, said there was a great need for women's housing, Parachina said.

Freshman Walter Ritch, formerly of Cornell Cottage, called the idea of being separated from their "only friends on campus, a shock to everyone." He said he did not expect temporary living quarters to be for two weeks only, he said. He explained his opinion of temporary housing to be at least one semester.

Jesse Smith, a sophomore from Hurst Cottage, said he thought the reason for the move to be the administration's desire to fill vacancies in the larger, more expensive dorms.

According to Helene Marcott, a representative of the women students from Winchell Hall involved in the move, said the girls were satisfied with present conditions and did not wish to move.

Frank J. Harrar, director of men's housing, said the reason for the housing move was the need for women's housing. The students involved were moved to their original dorm choice of housing (large dorm, cottage) and there was no specific time limit set for them to move out of the temporary housing, he said.

The current housing would not entirely alleviate the women's housing shortage, according to Jean Crawford, director of women's housing. Some girls are still being housed in emergency guest rooms and "very nice" basement apartments in Day Hall, she noted.

The measure of a man's real character is what he would do if he knew he would never be found out. — Macaulay

Rare Books

Bender Named To Library Post

By EDWARD KARLIN

Syracuse University has a spirit of "cordiality and interest in the collection of rare books at all levels." These were the words of the university's new rare book room librarian.

J. Terry Bender, formerly chief librarian of rare books at Stanford University and director of the world famous Grolier Club, was named to replace David A. Fraser Jr. in the Arents Rare Book Room of the Main Library during Orientation Week.

Bender, an avid reader, discovered at an early age that he was more interested in the history of a book itself, than its actual content.

A veteran of World War II, Bender received his bachelor's degree from Williams College.

He then studied medieval history at Princeton University and decided definitely to choose rare books as his profession. Bender received his masters degree from the School of Library Science at Columbia University in 1953.

While serving as director of the Grolier Club, Bender said he missed the academic atmosphere that existed at Stanford University. So in 1953 he joined the staff at Stanford.

When asked of his purpose in coming here, Bender said it is "to build, organize, house, preserve and exploit collections of original and basic source materials that are in nature pertinent to present and future aims and activities of the community."

He also said he believes that whenever possible, the rare book room's greatest attribute is that it is made available to everyone. He said he finds that the staff there goes out of its way to inform interested students and teachers of the room's content.

J. TERRY BENDER

The most important immediate duty of the rare book room, according to Bender, is to catalogue many assorted books and manuscripts. He also plans to try to enlarge the collection in fragments. Bound into a leather volume, the page is one of 185 copies of the 15th century Bible, the first major work printed from moveable type in the Western world.

Gabriel Wells of New York, one of the dealers selling the fragments, commissioned a collector, A. Edward Newton, to write an essay about the Bible.

This volume, printed in folio format and bound with the original Gutenburg leaves, is what Chancellor Tolley presented to SU.

Entitled "A Noble Fragment," the volume was purchased from the rare book firm of James F. Drake Inc., New York City. It had been in the Drake family's possession for about 40 years.

Bender said that the gift is now on display in the Lena R. Arents Rare Book Room of the main Library and will remain there for at least a few weeks.

Psalm XXXIII, beginning "The Lord is my shepherd," takes up 17 lines on the ancient paper page. With black body type and blue and red initial letters, the volume is being kept in a special case, Bender said.

Chancellor Tolley's other donations to SU have included a facsimile copy of the complete Gutenberg Bible, a picture census of the Bible with records of the existing copies and several first editions of 19th century novels including works by Rudyard Kipling.

A page from the original Gutenberg Bible was presented to Syracuse University by Chancellor William P. Tolley Tuesday.

The presentation was made at 10:30 a.m. in the Chancellor's office, with J. Terry Bender, SU rare book librarian, receiving the gift.

The 12 by 16-inch Latin page is from one of two imperfect copies of the Bible which were broken up by dealers and sold

Back to Politics

Campus Alliance Party (CAP) will hold its first meeting at 7 p.m. today at Kappa Sigma fraternity.

Elections of a new second vice president and a campaign manager will take place. Plans for future campaigns will also be discussed according to George Hanlon, president.

CAP is one of two political parties on the Syracuse University campus. The other party is known as United Students party (US).

The parties were formed in order to replace the Greek Independence Alliance (GIA) and the Fraternity and Independents Together Equally (FIFE) parties. GIA then had control of the student government. CAP and US were opposed to rearrange the balance of political parties.

The first three years US dominated the scene by sweeping almost every office in every election. In 1962 several Greek houses switched to CAP to improve the balance of campus politics. The election reflected more equal strength as CAP captured 12 of the 32 offices.

Last spring both parties showed equal strength with each capturing 16 of the 32 offices. The split was so even that US and CAP, for the first time in the history of the parties, each captured one one of the two highest offices.

Carl Corrallo, a member of CAP, gained the office of Student Government president and Nancy Perkins, a member of US, gained the position of vice president.

Each party nominates a candidate for SG president and vice president as well as class officers and senators. After a week campaigning, the student body votes for the various candidates.

POLL

Students React to Housing Stir

By JOAN FOHRMAN

"Terrible" is the general opinion about the administration's moving male students out of Cornell, Hurst and Root cottages.

Thomas Windt, a freshman, said he didn't think the situation was handled in the right way.

He said he was worried in case other mistakes which might affect him personally, such as being given the wrong marks, were made. "It makes me wonder what is happening in the administration," he said.

Sophomore George Ranta said he felt that this was a big blunder on the university's part. He said he did not think the administration should force anyone to move.

The university should develop a system to be sure it knows how many students it will have beforehand, said Betsy Wickwire, a freshman. Now, she said, there is no other way than to do what is being don e by the administration.

Miss Wickwire was one of few students to agree with the actions of the university.

Darlene Feldman, a sophomore, said she does not understand why this wasn't taken care of before. She said she felt that it cannot be "that hard to arrange housing beforehand."

Junior Jacqueline Flansburg agreed and said the situation is very confusing and bad for the students involved.

"I think it's awful," said freshman Donna Margolies. She said the girls that live in the lounges become attached to their living center and the girls there. "It is a shame to uproot them," she said, since they have so many other adjustments to make also.

Eileen Ryss, a freshman, expressed what appeared to be a general student feeling, that the administration should have planned more carefully beforehand and not accepted so many new and transfer students.

Another student said the boys in the cottages have a right to fight. He said he felt a situation like this should never have come about.

Freshman John Favalo said, "If the administration is going to force the kids out, the kids should force them (the administration) out."

Patty Rogers, a sophomore, said she didn't think anyone should have been moved like this. Students form close friendships after living just two weeks in a dorm or cottage and it is a sad situation when they have to be moved, she noted.

During the year the gradual shuffling and moving around of the students would improve living conditions and the university should let the problem be solved slowly, she said.

It's . . .

formed Independent Party, an all-freshmen political organization which swept the '61-'62 election.

Since that time, freshmen elections, run by the freshmen election committee, have been sponsord by Student Government and kept from involvement with the upperclass political parties.

The committee, aided by the Student Government election commissioner, has set limits on the amount of time to be spent in campaigning and the amount of funds used, and has regulated other campaign procedures as well.

Candidates, after filing petitions, are nominated at a convention attended by representatives from each freshman living center. In past years, these representatives have been chosen on the basis of the population of each floor. Every potential candidate is expected to speak at the convention where three nominees are selectd for office.

Votes will be cast by secret ballot with the ballot boxes located in the large living centers as well as centrally located campus buidings.

The freshmen committee will handle election returns. Ballots will be counted by Fischman, Kronley and their commission.

'Boogie' and Wienke Unsung Sophomores

By MEL ALLEN

There is a crunching of bodies, a thudding of pads, as the swift orange jersey wedges through the hole made by the mass of sprawling linemen. Five, 10, 15 yards is chewed up before two men haul elusive "44" down.

He gets up quickly and walks back into the huddle as Archbold Stadium rocks with appreciation. The play is called and the backs get set. Up front, oblivious to all but the knowledgable, two sweaty tackles, both sophomores, both tough, dig in.

With the snap of the ball number 78 submarines the big tackle opposite him and knocks him off balance. A flash of orange goes by and cuts towards the middle. The linebacker has moved with the play and is waiting. Suddenly a big "59" belts him low, leaving the wide open spaces to the swivel hips of Floyd Little.

Once again the crowd goes wild over this great runner and deservedly so. Once again the men up front put their hands in the dirt and wait.

Yes, these two sophomore linemen, Gary Bugenhagen and Harris Wienke, can be termed "unsung heroes" on a team famous for its mighty ground game. But they do not expect newsprint. They expect to do their job and let the copy space fall where it may.

"We're out there doing a job and as long as we win I feel that we did a good job," said Bugenhagen.

It is unusual to find two sophomore tackles in the starting lineup. But "Boogie" and Wienke aren't the usual soph linemen.

Gary, at 230 pounds, is the product of Clarence Center. He was rated the top rookie lineman last spring and has been a starter since. An outside tackle, he plays on the strong or right side. He is responsible for the opposing tackle.

Wienke, on the other hand, has found it a little tougher going, sitting out his first year with an injury. As inside tackle the lighter Wienke keys on the opposing linebackers.

Here they are then—unsung but vital. The next time you stand for Little or Nance or Hunter, remember the guys with their hands in the dirt, digging in.

Tough Task

HC Seeks Upset

By ART ROSSKY

Holy Cross coach Dr. Eddie Anderson faces a king-size job as he attempts to engineer a victory over the Orange Saturday at Worcester, Mass.

But the Crusader mentor has a knack for getting milege from his charges. The 1963 campaign, which ended in a mediocre 2-6-1, was only Anderson's third losing season in 20 years on the Worcester campus.

Though Syracuse holds a commanding 16-5 edge in the series, several of the Crusader wins have come at critical times.

Their last win over the Piety came in 1958, the Orange's only blemish on an 8-1 slate.

In 1962, Syracuse's last visit to Fitton Field, the Orange earned a hard fought 30-20 decision. That game marked probably the poorest performance of Crusader signal caller Pat McCarthy, a member of the All-East team that year, who completed only four of 17 passes.

Though the Cross lost an All-East performer when center Jon Morris graduated, the Crusaders boast another candidate for the elite suad in halfback Jim Marcellino, a 5-11, 198-pounder from Milton, Mass.

Hill coach Joe Szombathy, who scouted the HC-BC contest, called Marcellino "a real bread-and-butter player. He is a terriffic pass receiver and can do everything well."

Last year Marcellino ground out 406 yards, at 3.9 per carry, and grabbed 21 passes, good for 277 yards.

His finest performance came against arch rival Boston College, when he carried the ball an unbelievable 30 times to gain 128 yards in leading his mates to a 9-0 upset win.

Teaming with Marcellino in the backfield will be quarterback Mike Cunnion, right half Earl Kirmser and fullback Pete Meehan, if he can hold off the challenge of rising soph John Bachini.

Cunnion, a promising rookie, earned the starting nod with an impressive second half performance against Villanova in the squad's opening contest.As a frosh he engineered twe wins over BC's rugged yearlings.

Kirmser should be vastly improved with a year of experience under his belt. Injuries limited him to 49 yards in 1963 action.

Meehan, a 190-pounder, moved into the starting lineup late last season and averaged a creditable 3.6 yards per carry. He possesses good speed and tremendous determination. Bachini would add power to the HC attack with his 215-pound frame.

Anchoring the Crusader line are huge tackles John Dugan and Joe Lilly. Dugan, the squad's captain, is noted for his excellent blocking, though he is a two-way performer. Lilly, a 220-pound junior, is a defensive stalwart.

SU's Little Big Scorer

For a fellow with only two college football games under his belt, Orange sophomore Floyd Little is having quite an effect on the national grid statistics.

Little is tied with Alabama's Joe Namath and Brian Piccolo of Wake Forest for the national scoring lead, all with 30 points.

In addition, the rookie sensation stands no. 3 in the country in rushing offense, piling up a total of 241 yards. Ray Handley of Stanford paces the nation with 252 yards, while Piccolo has notched 247.

A future Hill foe, quarterback Larry Zeno of UCLA, ranks second in total offense with 449 yards. Pitt's Fred Mazurek is sixth in rushing offense and seventh in total offense.

Grid Coaches: Key to Hill Success

By BOB KRENGEL

It takes more than a team and a smart coach to make a winner. Syracuse University is lucky to have the extra ingredients, six assistant football coaches who are dedicated and hard-working men.

Bill Bell, offensive backfield coach, makes a habit of working under Ben Schwartzwalder. At Parkersburg, W. Va., he played high school football under the veteran mentor. Bill was a navigator in the Air Corps during the war before moving to Muhlenburg.

He was the quarterback and star passer for Schwartzwalder at Muhlenburg. Bill, who joined the Orange staff in 1950, married and the father of three children.

Ted Dailey, defensive line coach, is a native of Phillipsburg, N.J., and was an All-American end at Pitt. After one year in professional football, Dailey coached at Boston College and at Lafayette. From 1940-48 he coached a high school eleven, winning 90 per cent of his games.

Rocky Pirro, offensive line coach, is no stranger to big-time football. At Catholic University he starred and in 1940 signed with the Pittsburgh Steelers. There he played blocking back for two seasons before entering the service.

Upon discharge, he played guard for three years with the old Buffalo Bills. He later coached with the S.U. staff in 1952. He is married and has two children.

The newest member of the Orange coaching staff is Jim Shreve, a freshman grid coach. He joined Ben's boys in 1959. A halfback, Shreve lettered at Syracuse in football for three campaigns prior to his 1951 graduation.

Jim immediately started coaching, tutoring the Moravian College gridders at Bethlehem, Pa. for four years.

Coach Shreve moved to George Washington and then Lehigh until 1958.

The white-haired Roy Simmons is a familiar face to Hill sprots fans. One of Syracuse's star athletes, "Simmie" quarterbacked the powerful Orange squad of 1924. He was signed by his alma mater as the backfield coach upon graduation and has been here ever since.

As an undergraduate, Simmons was also a crack lacrosse player and a boxer. He has been head coach of lacrosse at S.U. since 1932. He operates a Day Camp during the summer. Roy is president of the Common Council of the City of Syracuse.

Joe Szombathy, end coach, has the distinction of being the youngest member of the Orange coaching staff. The leading Syracuse passer of all time, Joe returned to his alma mater in 1957. During his three years on the Hill, Joe hauled down 52 aerials for 658 yards. Szombathy set a one-season record with the 1952 Syracuse Eastern championship team, by nabbing 21 passes.

Joe returned to his alma mater after teaching and coaching on the high school level.

Syracuse coaches (L-R): TED DAILEY, BILL BELL, ROCKY PIRRO, BEN SCHWARTZWALDER, ROY SIMMONS, JOE SZOMBATHY and JIM SHREVE.

Tolley Names Two Associate Deans

Hill Leaders Debate Aims At Pinebrook

Today marks an exodus of campus leaders and administrative officials from the Hill to the 15th annual three-day Pinebrook Conference, where the roles and responsibilities of student government will be the main issue in the exchange of ideas.

Chancellor William P. Tolley heads the list of participating faculty and administrators. Others who also will be present include: Charles C. Noble, dean of Hendricks Chapel; Jim G. Carleton, dean of men; John S. Hafer, dean of personnel administration; Marjorie C. Smith, dean of women; Frank P. Piskor, vice president for academic affairs; Elynor Erickson, assistant dean of women; and Fred Lewis, varsity basketball coach.

The bus for the Pinebrook Conference will depart at 1 p.m. today from the Main Library.

The student body will be represented by Robert Harrison, senior class president; William Weller, junior class president; and John Pear, sophomore class president.

Other campus leaders expected to be present include: Carl Corrallo and Nancy Perkins, president and vice president of student government respectively; Robert (Robby) Stern, student senate speaker; Franklin Richmond, chief justice of student court. Also, Andrew Porte, Daily Orange editor-in-chief; Jesse Smith, Daily Orange student government reporter; Joan Moore, Association of Women Students vice president; David Finnegan of WAER; George Van Derven, InterFraternity Council president; and Marcella Rast, Panhellenic Council president.

Grading system, orientation, housing and campus care are among the topics expected to be brought up for debate.

In the same vein, the forum will discuss the responsibility of a student leader to his constituents and an effective means of improving the relationship of student organizations to a progressing university.

The 1963 Pinebrook Conference was highlighted by a number of proposals designed to draw campus heads and uni-

Mangone, Swerdlow Promoted To Aid Maxwell School's Bailey

Two Maxwell professors have been named to fill newly-created associate deanship posts in the Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs, Chancellor William P. Tolley announced Thursday.

GERARD J. MANGONE

Dr. Gerard J. Mangone, professor of political science, has been appointed associate dean for academic program, while Dr. Irving Swerdlow, professor of economics, is the new associate dean for research and operations.

They will assist Dean Stephen K. Bailey in administering the Maxwell School which is "far larger in faculty, student body and research commitments than many independent colleges in America," according to Chancellor Tolley.

These (Maxwell School's) expanding programs can no longer be administered effectively under an academic structure developed years ago and designed for more limited and traditional functions, Chancellor Tolley added.

As deputy to Bailey, Mangone will continue as director of the International Organization Research program and assist in preparing new courses and teaching programs, recruiting new staff and developing financial assistance for faculty leaves, student fellowships and research grants.

Swerdlow will be in charge of all research and operations not related to classroom teaching and will continue directing the Center for Overseas Operation and Research.

Mangone, whose doctoral dissertation at Harvard University earned the Charles Sumner Prize, has authored or

Panhel Opens Upperclass Rush

By LOIS WINEBAUM

Upperclass sorority rush begins tonight under new procedures. Approximately 220 upperclasswomen have registered for the first round of fall rush—the formal parties, said Susan Sommers, Panhellenic Council rushing chairman, Thursday.

Under the new procedures, rushees will be required to attend parties at all of the 14 houses which are open.

The final list of sororities opening are: Alpha Chi Omega, Alpha Delta Pi, Alpha Gamma Delta, Alpha Lambda Phi, Alpha Sigma Tau, Alpha Xi Delta, Delta Delta Delta.

Also, Delta Pi, Iota Alpha Pi, Kappa Delta, Alpha Sigma Alpha, Phi Mu, Sigma Delta Tau, Sigma Kappa, and Zeta Tau Alpha.

Today's will last from 6-9:20 p.m. All rushees will meet at 5:30 p.m. at the Women's Building.

Blood Drive Starts Soon

The first forum for this fall's campus blood drive will be held 7:30 p.m., Tuesday in Gifford Auditorium, Huntington B. Crouse Hall.

Floor residents should see that their living centers are represented by someone chosen at Sunday's dorm meeting, according to Steven Springer, student director of the blood drive. Information and permission slips will be distributed at the meeting to dorm representatives.

Senate Race

Carpetbagging Key Issue

By WILLIAM WILSON

Residency and qualifications ranked first among Hill students as the issues they thought would most affect the Nov. 3 senatorial elections in New York State.

This information was revealed in a random survey taken on campus. Most persons interviewed said they thought Robert F. Kennedy would fail in his bid for office because the people of the state consider him an outsider.

When asked what she felt would be the decisive issue of the election, a history exchange student from the Philippines said the fact that the former attorney general is an out-of-stater will greatly hinder his chances of winning.

Bill Strong, '67, said, "Robert Kennedy has no right whatsoever to be running."

While his classmate, Stuart Ross, was not so strong in his objection to Kenndy's residence qualifications, Ross said he felt there was no need to elect Kennedy when an experienced man, already a long time New York State resident, was holding the office.

Not all students who think Keating is going to win feel it will be solely because he has nedy. Senior Terry Farrel noted, "Keating's past record speaks for itself."

A few of those interviewed said neither the residency issue nor qualifications will decide the election.

Those polled who said they believed Kennedy will win think his image and youth as well as his qualifications will swing it. As Joe Cesaro, a graduate student put it, "I know my mother will vote for Kennedy and so will a lot of other mothers."

Still others who said Kennedy probably will not win concede he might win on his name. Clinton Farnsworth, '65 falls into this category.

He added, "The Kennedy name will help."

IFC Announces Rushing Plans

Plans for InterFraternity Council upperclass rush were announced Thursday by Robert Evenson, IFC spokesman.

Houses will be open for two or three rush sessions, depending on each house's preference. Rush times are 2-5 p.m. Sunday, 7-9 p.m. Monday and Tuesday.

Houses open all three days are Acacia, Alpha Chi Rho, Alpha Tau Omega, Beta Sigma Rho, Beta Theta Pi, Delta Tau Delta, Delta Upsilon, Kappa Sigma, Phi Alpha, Phi Gamma Delta, Phi Kappa Psi, Phi Sigma Delta, Pi Kappa Alpha, Sigma Chi, Sigma Nu, Sigma Phi Epsilon, Theta Chi and Zeta Psi.

Open Monday and Tuesday are Delta Kappa Epsilon, Phi Epsilon Pi, Psi Upsilon, Sigma Alpha Mu, Tau Epsilon Phi and Zeta Beta Tau.

Houses open Sunday and Tuesday are Alpha Epsilon Pi, Kappa Phi Delta and Tau Delta Phi.

Open Sunday and Monday are Lambda Chi Alpha, Phi Delta Theta and Tau Kappa Epsilon.

Weekend Tix Going Fast

The word is that the frosh have not been getting out to Manley Field House for Parent's Weekend football tickets.

Well frosh, and upperclassmen, too, if you don't get out there by Monday there is going to be a Parent's Weekend with no seats at the football game for parents.

(See Weekend, page 5)

The Challenge Of Pinebrook

Another Pinebrook Conference begins this afternoon with a lengthy bus ride to Tupper Lake, and much is at stake, for both student government and the campus.

For this conference is the one which must succeed in accomplishing whatever its purpose is, or the need for student-faculty-administration conferences of the Pinebrook nature will be at an end.

In each of the past three years, seemingly energetic groups have journeyed to Pinebrook and Sagamore, only to return full of spirit which fades by the next morning.

And the prospects for this student government-oriented meeting are no different. In fact, this year's roster boasts an unusually high number of first-time conference participants, while the number of returnees is similarly low.

The emphasis seems to be on taking every possible Student Government official, while de-emphasizing the participation of other students more interested in the university community.

If the conference for once will remain exclusively SG-oriented, then the choices may be wise, but if it broadens into the scope of other past conferences, the choices will be reflected in meager results, sounding the death knell for Pinebrook.

If the conference is to be aimed at government, it must bring results aimed at government, and if it turns elsewhere, it must produce or else . . .

Worthy, But...

The voter registration drive sponsored by the Student Senate and the Syracuse University Committee on Equality enters its fifth day today.

Certainly this worthy cause is to be commended, for it is those of us who are turning 21 today who will be running the nation in the tomorrows to come.

An active voice in today's youth is the key to efficient leadership in the future. An informed youth means capable leadership. SS and SUCE are aiding towards that goal.

Yet we wonder how ignorant some seemingly-educated students are that they need a drive of this sort to get them to the polls.

Tiger at the Gates

In Which They Serve

By Dan Ritey

It's not that we are all immature, unknowing pseudo-collegiates who should know better than to allow ourselves to be caught messing around with willing upperclassmen while under the influence of Black and White, (or, at least, a Black Label.

It's just that we tend to be treated in said way by the university's elite (sic) corps of (w)Raunchy Altrusties. And by the stalag luftkommanders, too.

God, it gives one a truly warm feeling (somewhere in the general area of one's cracked posterior) to know that there are those of the university's everloving family who so care and dote on you that they'll go out of their way (for example, into your peaceful room around midnight) to caution and counsel you on the sins and grave connotations of playing WNDR so softly that you can hardly hear it yourself.

Yeah, a real comforting feeling it is to know that the (w) Raunchy Altruistics must either be psychic (then, you ask, what the hell are they doing wasting time here) or that they must be practicing for bit parts in a production of 1984 (then, you don't have to ask anymore. You KNOW that the walls, doors and probably the termites in your room all have supersensitive hearing).

Either inanimate objects have developed hearing abilities undreamed of, or animate objects are extending theirs.

Another thing that really gets you is their individuality (sic, again) and 'esprit de cooperation.' Picture some poor frosh slob wandering down to the dorm control office and, upon spying a (w)Raunchy Altruistic—from now on referred to herein as R.A.—inside, asking if he can pick up something there that belongs to him.

"Uh, I have this notice slip and I'd like to pick up my package of ex-lax."

"I see. Well, what's your ch? Have any sort of identification? Communist Party card? Mets' fan-club certificate? John Birch Blue Book listing?"

"Hmmmm, none of those, but I do have a university ID card and a driver's license."

"Well, I guess we'll have to make do with that."

Pause while R.A. spends half an hour looking for the package.

Then: "Yes, we have it. I definitely saw it back there."

"Yeah, but why didn't you bring it out with you—I want it now."

"Oh," replies the voice of wisdom (aged and broadened by at least one more year of schooling and worldliness than the graduating seniors), "you can't have it now. The control office is closed—don't you people ever read the clearly posted signs in the lower left-hand corner of the bulletin board in the boiler room?"

"Ah, I guess I missed THAT one. But look, I can't make it..."

"Sorry. Tough on you. You should know better than to try to get anything done around here—especially when it's not during office hours."

"Prithee tell, when are office hours?"

"Sunday through Friday from 1:00 to 6:00—in the morning, you know. Saturdays it's from 2:00 to 6:30—don't want any of those dalliers after curfew sneaking around."

"I see. Actually, that's quite decent of all of you."

"Damn 'tootin'."

"Yeah, but how about letting me have the ex-lax now so I can sleep tonight—I mean you're here now anyway."

"You lose, gringo. That would violate dorm council rules, the dean of men's office statues, university family policy (after all, we ARE still standing there on the threshold of greatness), NATO defense strategy, Robert's rules of order and the precepts of HUAC."

"Thanks anyway for the lesson in the individual mind over matter."

"Sure. Glad to help. In fact, I'll give you a good tip: When you toss and turn all night, be quiet about it so you don't disturb the guys on your floor and the sleeping guys downstairs. You have to be considerate when you're at school and living with other guys, y'know."

"Thanks again. By the way, what are you doing here if the office is closed for the day now?"

"Me? I'm IT in our special P.C. (privileged character to you, Jack) game of hide-and-go-seek a la telephone. See, my aim is to tie up the lines by calling the other R.A.'s and seeing who I can wake up as he sleeps it off in his room. Get it . . . .?"

Take heart all ye Syracusans of the dorms, cottages (what's left of them) and other outposts of R.A. land! Thine fearless dorm directors ceaselessly sally forth to check iniquity and abuse.

Really.

As one of the sages of the shower once remarked: "Y'know? those dorm directors must have SOMETHING on the ball—after all they have brains enough—or have been sufficiently trained—to get people like the (w)Raunchy Altruistics to do the inspiring and logical work that they themselves do not have the brains to do alone."

Now then, leave us not allow our glorious fuhrers of the living centers to dwell alone in infamy. Surely the one, big, happy family of 'Cuse U. can send other delegates.

Almost as heartening as EEE (elite efficiency and effectiveness) is the simply divine service, attitude and cuisine of Cafe Syracuse—or, as we denizens know and love it, The Forum of the Twelve Dolers.

What gets you—in the gut, man, the gut—about this whole ing faces and demeanor of the help around the cafe.

Like that of the superior, or head doler, or chief cook and bottle washer (if they are washed). Now there's an attitude to make you glad that King Kong and Count Dracula are members of the human family.

Make such a shattering and uncollegiate mistake to think that you can take two—count 'em, two—glasses of milk at a time or that you might want to fill yourself on more than one measly dessert (it is assumed that few fill themselves adequately on what is passed off as the main meal), and boy you've got one ticked off maitre d' who thinks you're out to revolutionize the world in the name of Marx.

He'll come up to you and, in a voice dripping with sweetness and light, will say (real friendly-like now; sort of like the friendly, local drill sergeant) "no seconds on this; no two gasses of that; watch that excessive use of the university's water..."

Him we need. Real badly.

Second only to HIS smiling puss is the benign geniality and warmth with which the ticket-checker and the 'dolers of the realm' greet you. Rumor has it that Warden Duffy at San Quentin radiates more charm and warmth then do some of these Indian Chiefs.

Be as it may, all one's gripes about the personnel are soon forgotten as you approach the moment of ecstacy: that blessed moment when you sit down at your jammed table amid the rush-hour mobs in the dining center and thoughtfully, and with feeling, much into the ONE piece of meat which has been so lovingly slopped onto your plate.

Fortunate is the student who (a) doesn't gnash too many teeth in searching for the meat and (b) survives long enough on this fare to make it to the dingleman or Marshall Street.

And what else in our humble world can match the feeling of spending one's entire mealtime on either the firsts or seconds line.

Nothing, that's what. And perhaps the only reason that many of us repeat this grim ritual daily is for the opportunity it affords us of seeing the (w)Raunchy Altruistics suffer the same misery as us.

If it isn't that misery loves company, certainly it is a case of how the mighty have fallen.

Published Monday through Friday during the academic year by the students of Syracuse University. Offices located at 200 Brooklea Drive, Fayetteville, New York.

—WEEKEND—

LINCOLN AUDITORIUM— The Syracuse Symphony Orchestra opens its fourth season under conductor Karl Kritz with Piston's "Toccata," Strauss's "Der Rosenkavalier" Suite and Brahms's "Symphony No. 2, in D." The concert will start at 8:40 p.m. today and Saturday at Lincoln Auditorium. Tickets are available at the Lincoln Auditorium box office.

CROUSE AUDITORIUM— Louis Krasner, violinist, will present a concert at 4 p.m., Sunday in Crouse Auditorium. Mr. Krasner will be assisted by his wife, Adrienne Galimir, pianist.

The Concert will open with Mozart's "Adiago in E Major" and "Rondo in C Major," followed by Bach's "Concerto in E Major." "Sonata for Violin" and "Piano Opus 94" by Prokofiev will also be performed. The program will conclude with the "Havanaise" by Saint-Saens. All Crouse concerts offer free admission and campus parking.

REGENT THEATRE — The second weekend performances of "Thieve's Carnival' will start at 8:30 p.m., today and Saturday at the Regent Theatre. Directed by Dr. Joseph Golden, the play stars John McNeill, Frank Morell and Bruce MacCurdy. Tickets are available at the Regent Theatre box office or at the campus traveling box office in the lobby of Huntington B. Crouse Hall.

RKO KEITH'S—That girl next door, Sandra Dee, stars in the holdover from last week "I'd Rather Be Rich." Robert Goulet and Andy Williams help worship the Great God Mammon. Goulet plays a poor, deserving young man and we all know what happens to poor, deserving young men, at least those that are poor and deserving Hollywood style. They conquer the rich, undeserving hero, Williams, marry rich, equally deserving Sandra, and live happily ever after on Grandpa Maurice Chevalier's money. And all because Sandra's toes curl when she kisses Goulet. (A family trait denoting true love according to Chevalier,) Best part of this flick: The title song. Co-feature "Sing and Swing." "Deserving?" at 9:50 p.m., "Sing" at 8:30 p.m.

STUDENT UNION — Academy Award-winning motion picture "Gigi" will be shown. Starring Leslie Caron, Louis Jordan, Maurice Chevalier and Hermione Gingold, the film will have showings at 6 p.m., 8 p.m. and 10 p.m. today and at 8 p.m. and 10 p.m. Saturday. All in HBC.

Up in the Air

Oases in the Desert

by Todd Caso

In the spring of 1961, newly appointed chairman of the Federal Communications Commission Newton F. Minow stood before a meeting of broadcasters and declared that television was little more than a "vast wasteland." Minow's remark has since become the battle cry for those who wish to criticize television. Television, as the most massive of the mass media, is a daily target for critics, both professional and non-professional. A number of professional critics, such as Jack Gould of the New York Times, are intelligent, sensitive people who weigh the merits of individual programs they have seen. There are, however, many outspoken critics of television whom I shall refer to as the "intellectuals," in quotation marks. These are the people who proclaim long and lud that television is worthless, a waste of time, and extremely unstimulating. Are these people justified in their criticisms?

To resolve the answer we have to look at the medium. Television reaches a truly mass audience, 93 per cent of American homes at last count. American commercial television is dependent on the advertising dollar to put programs on the air. These programs stay on the air only if people watch them and buy the sponsor's product. The mass public is a working public (50 per cent of all the people in the U.S. have an IQ of 100 or less) whose tastes run to light entertainment.

These are the people who buy products, thus many highly rated shows have little or no intellectual value. For purely economic reasons, this public must have its tastes fulfilled. But television in the past few years has consistantly attempted to produce shows of very high quality for people of higher cultural tastes. CBS loses thousands of dollars every time "CBS REPORTS" goes on the air, but these are often excellent and informative shows. Fairfax M. Cone, an advertising executive, made a study of television for a one month period and reported his findings in the summer 1963 issue of "Television Quarterly." He found 53.5 hours of quality programming in that month, including shows with persons like Bruce Catton, Carl Sandburg, and Archibald MacLeish.

This list is only a small example, but it points out that television is far from a medium that dotes on mediocrity. I am sure the roster listed above can compare favorably in intelligence and culture to our "intellectual" critics. There is much on television today that is worth watching.

While the desert still exists, and it must by economic standards, there are enough oases along the way so that no traveler may ever be thirsty.

Chancellor Tolley Announces Ten Additions to Hill Faculty

Chancellor William B. Tolley has announced the appointment of 10 new members to the faculty of Syracuse University.

Donald G. Miller, Jr. has been appointed to the School of Music faculty. Miller, whose specialty is voice, received his bachelor of arts and master of music at Yale University. He was a singer at the Renaissance theater in Berlin, Germany and at the Wiener Kammeroper in Vienna, Austria. He also taught English at the Oxford School in Milan, Italy.

Ruth Ann Strebe has been appointed an instructor on SU's School of Nursing faculty. Miss Strebe, former instructor at Western Reserve University, received her bachelor of science degree at the University of Buffalo and her master of arts degree at the Columbia University Teachers College. She will be teaching medical, surgical nursing.

Three persons have joined the Hill's School of Education faculty. They are Harry Edward Randles, George W. Bradley and Louis H. Hill. Randles, an assistant professor in educational administration, received his doctorate at Ohio State University where he had taught during summer sessions. He had been principal at Vandalia Junior High School in Ohio.

An assistant professor in psychology and education, Bradley will also be a member of the liberal arts faculty. He received his doctorate at the University of Virginia. He was assistant professor at the East Tennessee State University and served as director of guidance for Spotsylvania County, Va.

A graduate of Syracuse University, Hill was named a lecturer in teacher preparation. He has held a dual position as junior high school principal and acting district principal at Byram Hills Central School in Armonk.

Five persons have also been appointed to SU's College of Liberal Arts faculty. They are Walter Schneider, assistant professor, mathematics department; Philip Edward Chartrand, lecturer, political science department; and Roy Danforth, instrutor, men's physical education department.

Also Lawrence Kader, sociology and anthropology; and L. Winston Cone, history.

Schneider, a specialist in function theory, received his doctorate at Tulane University where he was also a research assistant.

Chartrand, who had been a lecturer in law and public administration at the Institute of Public Administration, received his master's degree in public administration and a bachelor of laws degree from Harvard University.

Danforth is a graduate of the University of Southern Mississippi and was head basketball coach at Pearl River College.

versity officials closer together.

A monthly "press conference" between Chancellor Tolley and members of campus organizations was proposed to help the campus become more informed as to the administration's feelings on various issues.

The conference also suggested that an all-student board of publications be created to replace the faculty-student board.

As a stimulus to entering freshmen, the conference proposed an increased student government training program to further participation in student organizations.

The committee also offered what they tagged a "moral contract" for elected officers so that they would be obligated to remain in office for a full term.

In concluding the report, the conference was challenged to develop a system of "ideal representation" by which the Pinebrook participants succeed in representing the entire student body, rather than themselves.

The 1962 convention yielded the theory that student government must serve in order to be served, and commit itself to freedom and authority to in-

Pinebrook 1961 resulted in 19 proposals, the most important being the resolution for student representation on the university personnel committee. The purpose of the move was to establish a bridge between the university policy-making machinery and the students through their elected officials.

Swerdlow was economic advisor to the government of Burma before coming to Syracuse in 1957. He has worked for the United Nations, the U. S. National Youth Administration and the U.S. Economic Cooperation Administration.

He graduated from the University of North Dakota and received his doctorate in Economics from the University of Wisconsin.

Weekend . . .

The entire section reserved for parents has been sold out, and those who buy tickets now must take, in the words of the athletic department, "pot luck."

The few remaining tickets are going fast. However, the athletic department, at the request of the Parent's Weekend committee, has agreed to withhold a large portion of the remaining tickets from public sale until Monday.

After that it will be virtually impossible to get seats for parents.

The Parent's Weekend committee has requested that students do not bring their parents into the student seating section.

Council Sets Program

The Honors Council of the College of Liberal Arts will meet for all seniors who are considering graduate study.

The meeting will be held 7 p.m., Thursday, in Maxwell Auditorium.

Problems to be covered include choice of graduate schools, application dates and necessary qualifications. Also included will be discussion of the Graduate Record Examination, letters of recommendation and financing graduate education.

In addition to members of the Honors Council, faculty members in the various areas will be available to answer specific questions on advanced work in their field.

Football Picks Leave Room To Improve

Observant football fans, after comparing last week's college scores wwith Daily Orange predictions, may have come to the conclusion that the DO staff selected their "winners" by drawing names from a hat. In fact, they are right!

The DO picked five of ten games incorrectly, indicating a cloudy crystal ball, rather than haphazard guessing.

Using their football insight and immense knowledge (or possibly an inside tip or two), the sports publicity department won the "Swami-of-the-Week" award by choosing seven winners, including Notre Dame's upset of Wisconsin.

WAER radio, aided by a brilliant upset choice of Villanova over Holy Cross, tied with the "mysterious expert," the Orange Scout, for runnerup honors in the first weekly football poll. The DO tries again, along with the other "soothsayers," with their feeble stabs listed above.

Dress for the parties will be skirts and flats or loafers. Each girl is asked to make her own name tag. Each girl will visit seven houses.

Saturday parties are scheduled from 1:30-4:50 p.m., with each girl visiting the remaining seven houses they did not visit Friday. Dress will again be casual.

The group will meet at 1 p.m. at Women's Building.

Rushees may pick up their invitations to the Sunday parties from 1-2:15 p.m. Sunday in the recreation lounge of the Women's Bldg.

Each girl will be permitted to visit six houses from 3-6:50 p.m. Sunday afternoon. Parties will last 30 minutes. A dress and heels is required dress.

Informal rush will follow Monday-Friday where the sororities have the option to invite back as many girls as they wish to informal gatherings.

Final bids will be received in mailboxes between Sunday, Oct. 11 - Wednesday, Oct. 14, Miss Sommers said.

Syracuse Boasts Talented Athletes

Most of Syracuse's gridiron team earned all-league, all-city or all-state football honors while in high school. However, many of these performed impressively in other sports as well.

Jim Nance, for example. At his high school in Indiana, Pa., Jim was also a member of the wrestling and track teams. As a heavyweight wrestler, he won a state championship during both his junior and senior years and compiled a 40-0 record.

For the track team, "Bo" went undefeated in dual meet competition as a 100-yard dash man and a shot putter. His best performances included a surprisingly fast 10.1 hundred and an effort of 51 feet in the shot put.

Wally Mahle, the Piety quarterback from Waterford, Pa. is another all-around athlete. At Fort Le Boeuf High School, Wailey posted an 8-0 pitching record for the baseball team during his senior year. Also, he captained the basketball team for two years and averaged 20 points per game. The 6-3 center earned all-county honors in basketball for three straight years.

Sophomore halfback Floyd Little has recorded some brilliant performances on the track and basketball court as well as on the gridiron. Competing for the Bordentown (N.J.) Military Institute track team, Little ran a 9.7 hundred and a 21.6 220-yard dash. In addition, he cleared a career high of 6-3 in the high jump.

As a member of the institute's basketball team, Floyd averaged 14 points per game as the team finished second in the prep school division of the state championships.

Little's football teammate, both at Bordentown and Syracuse, has been defensive end Herb Stecker. At Bordentown Herb was also an outstanding member of the wrestling team. In fact he won a state championship in the 167-pound weight class.

Three of SU's junior football players faced each other in track competition before coming to 'Cuse. The trio—fullback Ron Oyer, guard Steve Chomyszak and center Pat Killorin—represented their respective high schools in the shot put competition at the 1962 New York State track championships.

Oyer, from Schenectady's Linton High, won the event with a heave of 59-3¼. Chomyszak of Johnson City finished second at 56-3¼, while Watertown High's Killorin wound up third with a toss of 55-11.

Besides his near state record throw in the shot put, Oyer spun the discus 157 feet to place fourth in the state.

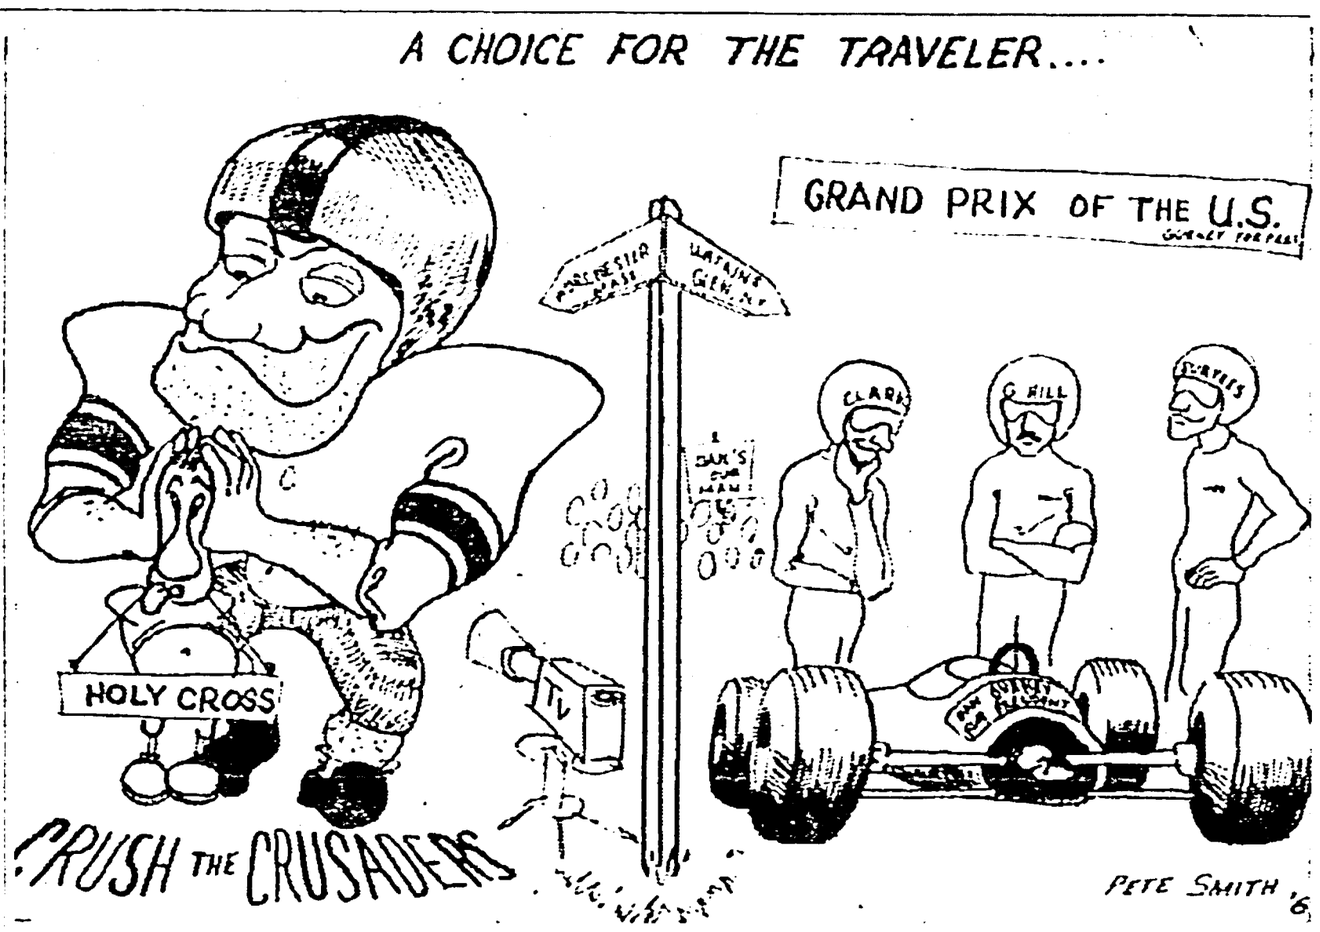
Hal Rooney, leader of Syracuse's defensive unit, has one ambition—to play pro baseball. Hal was an outstanding baseball player at Patchogue, L.I. He lettered every year and played in a summer league as well. Rooney attended a Yankee tryout session held at Yankee Stadium two years ago.

Two schoolboy wrestling stars who now double as SU grapplers are senior tackle Gerry Everling and sophomore guard Joe Radivoy.

Everling wrestled in the 165 and 180-pound weight classes at Chenango Forks High School. Competing in section four—upper New York State's hotbed of wrestling—Gerry compiled a record of 49 straight wins and two sectional championships.

Radivoy, wrestling in the heavyweight class for Middletown High, won a section nine crown and went on to place third at the 1963 state meet.

A pair of good high school track men were senior fullback Nat Duckett and junior halfback Charley Brown.



Televised Tilt

'Cuse-Cross' Kick Off

By JIM KLURFELD

With little more than a prayer, Holy Cross meets heavily favored Syracuse tomorrow in a regionally televised football game at Worcester, Mass.

The game will begin at 1:30 p.m.

Syracuse will be after its second win in three tries while Holy Cross lost its only decision to Villanova, 32-0, last week.

This will be coach Dr. Eddie Anderson's last coaching appearance against Syracuse after 20 seasons with the Crusaders.

In those 20 years Anderson has seen some illustrious Syracuse halfbacks and tomorrow he'll be watching another in the person of Floyd Little.

Little was named AP Back-of-the-Week, is the third leading ground gainer in the country, and is tied for the national scoring lead.

The Crusaders will pit a heavy line against Syracuse with team weighting 240-pounds or over—guards Bill Marcellino and Joe Costantini and tackle John Dugan.

Their best lineman, however, is Joe Lilli, a 220-pound junior tackle.

In the backfield Jim Marcellino, Bill's brother, is a strong runner, good receiver, and is considered Holy Cross' top all-around player.

Quarterback, though, is another story. Anderson lost his first string signal-caller, Fran Coughlin, when he severly cut his wrist this fall and still hasn't found an adequate repacement to lead his passing attack.

Though Syracuse overpowered Kansas, Ben Schwartzwalder still has made changes in this week's lineup.

Billy Hunter will replace Ron Oyer at right halfback and Gerry Everling is again starting on the defensive line. If the going gets rough, Schwartzwalder has indicated that he will use Little and Jim Nance on defense as well as offense.

Though statistics point to this being a lopsided game, Schwartzwalder reminds reporters of 1958 when Holy Cross gave Syracuse its only defeat of the season, and 1960 when the Orangemen just did beat Holy Cross 30-20.

But Andeerson isn't too optimistic about his changes. "Syracuse will have to give us a lot of help if we are going to keep the game close," he said.

COACH FOR A DAY

The Daily Orange sports staff is now accepting stories entitled, "If I Were Coach for a Day." The story should deal with your strategy plans and personnel changes if you could run the Orangemen. Best entries will be published.

SU Harriers' Race Colgate At Hamilton

Syracuse's cross country team journeys to Hamilton Saturday to race Colgate's Red Raiders.

Colgate, in its two appearances to date, has defeated Cornell, 24-32, and finished second behind Army in a triangular meet. The top runners for the Maroon are Gale Lundquist and Sandy Bower.

Syracuse will be going after win number two after last week's solid 16-46 win over Buffalo.

"We're hurting a little," said coach Bob Grieve.He explained that Bill Cihak, SU's number one man, is still nursing a sore leg and will have to pass up this meet. "Colgate's always been a problem," added Grieve.

Against Colgate, SU will be counting heavily on Mike Spino, Marty Miller, John Crawford, Tom Giordano and Bill Ramsdell to repeat their fine performances of last week. Other SU runners include Dave Daubert, Dave Hanna and Mike Schuster.

Syracuse's freshman team, led by Dennis Boyle and Bill Jones, will also be running at Colgate Saturday.

Hill Students Trek to Glen

Nearly 2,000 SU students begin their annual exodus to Watkins Glen today to attend the world-famed United States Grand Prix.

The chhampionship race will start at 2 p.m. Sunday, with practice sessions and time trials slated for 1-5 p.m. today and 11 a.m.-3 p.m. Saturday.

The 2.3 mile Glen race course is located 80 miles southwest of Syracuse. Fastest route is by way of route 81 south from Syracuse and on route 13 to Ithaca. Remain on route 13 to Alpine Junction, then turn right onto route 224, which leads into the Glen.

Over 60,000 racing fans, including 20,000 college students, are expected to witness the duel between Graham Hill, Jim Clark, John Surtee and other Prix drivers.

Hill, currently ranking no. 1 in the point standings, will pilot a BRM. Clark drives a Lotus, while Surtess favors a Ferrari.

Challenging the leaders will be Cooper driver Phil Hill; Australian Jack Brabham in a Brabham factory car; Richie Ginther in a BRM; Californian Dan Gurney in a Brabham; and Bruce McLaren in a Cooper.

Others in the Prix lineup include Mike Spence and Walt Hansgen in Lotuses; Lorenzo Bandini in a Ferrari; Innes Ireland and Trevor Taylor in BRP-BRMs; Mike Hailwood and Chris Amon in the Parnell Team Lotus BRMs; and Jo Bonnier and Jo Siffert in the RRC Walker Team Brabham BRMs.

SG ROLE DISCUSSED

Javits to Speak For Sen. Keating On Chapel Steps

By JONATHAN RUSSELL

U. S. Sen. Jacob K. Javits, liberal New York Republican, will augment the political activity on campus with a speech at 12:20 p. m. today on the steps of Hendricks Chapel.

Sponsored by the local Keating-for-Senator organization Javits will presumably encourage the support of the liberal Republican colleague, Sen. Kenneth B. Keating, who is running for re-election.

Javits and his incumbent associate gained national recognition this summer when they bolted the Republican national ticket and refused to publicly endorse the Republican presidential candidate, Sen. Barry M. Goldwater. Meanwhile, Goldwater came out in support of Keating last week in Albany.

Javits' visit will be the third time in the last four years that the New York lawmaker has spoken at Syracuse University. Both in 1961 and 1963 he spoke to freshman citizenship sections.

Sen. JACOB JAVITS

The 62-year-old senator was born on New York's lower East Side, the son of immigrant parents. Javits attended night classes at Columbia University and was graduated from New York University Law School in 1926. He was admitted to the Bar in 1927.

During the World War II, he served in both the Pacific and European theatres of war. He is now a colonel in the New York State National Guard.

Javits was elected to his first political office in 1945, as representative from the strongly Democratic 21st district in New York City, re-

Pinebrook Resolves Goals and Limitations For Student Leaders

By JESSE SMITH

A bus load of student leaders journeyed Friday to the shores of Upper Saranac Lake for a weekend of discussion with half a dozen top administrators.

Their topic was the role of student Government in the university community, as the 1964 Pinebrook Conference took place amid wooded surroundings and in atmosphere of amiable informality.

Many fundamental questions were raised about the relation of Student Government to the student body and to the administration. There were few concrete proposals to take back to campus. But there seemed to be an acceptance of certain goals and certain limitations for student government during the coming year.

The conference fostered a spirit of cooperation among SG leaders, notably between President Carl Corrallo and the heads of Student Senate, Speaker Robert (Robby) Stern and Speaker Pro Tempore Marshall Sneirson.

Stern expressed a determination to avoid conflict by sticking to certain areas of operation in the senate and not crusading. Sneirson gave up any part in a housing inquiry, leaving the job to Bruce Rosenstein of the executive branch's special services committee.

(See Pinebrook, page 7)

Students May Enter Field Before 1 PM

All students are allowed in the student gate before 1 p. m. at home footaball games whether they have reserve tickets or not, according to Stephen Rubell, football seating commission co-chairman.

"All students are urged to exchange their reserve stubs for reserve seating tickets during the specified times," he said.

Reserve tickets may be obtained on the Thursday before home games in the Trophy Room of the Men's Gym, according to the following schedule:

Married students, 3:15 p.m.; seniors, 3:15-3:30 p.m.; juniors, 3:30-3:45 p.m.; sophmores, 3:45-4 p.m.; freshmen, 4-4:15 p.m.; graduates, 4:15-4:30 p.m.

All petitions for block seating must be obtained, filled out and submitted in the Trophy Room of the Men's Gym from 3:30-4 p.m. on the Monday before the home game.

At the Syracuse-Kansas game, many seats in the steel sections A and B were left unreserved for students not requesting block seating, Rubell said. Since the students did not make use of their right to exchange tickets, fraternities and sororities took over these sections, leaving "less desirable seats" for the remainder of the student body, he said.

At the last game, according to Rubell, there were approximatly 8,000 students attending with only 6,600 student seats available. The problem was further complicated by non-students and entering illegally, using student identification cards.

At this game, according to Rubell, ID cards will be checked, and those people with falsified cards wil not be admitted. Furthermore, those using other students ID cards will have these cards confiscated.

No parents will be allowed to sit in the student section, Rubell said. Students who wish to sit with their parents are advised to buy tickets at Manley Field House.

Tolley to Speak Parents Weekend

Thousands of parents are expected to invade the Hill this Friday for the fun and festivities of Parents' Weekend.

One of the highlights of the weekend will be the Saturday Morning Breakfast Convocation for Parents at which Chancellor William P. Tolley will speak.

After the breakfast, parents will be entertained outside the dining hall by the music of the Syracuse University marching band.

Students will be able to purchase tickets for the Breakfast Convo, to be held in Sims Dining Hall, today through Friday in the lobby of Huntington B. Crouse Hall. The price is $1.25.

Tickets will be sold today 2-5 p.m., Tuesday 1-5 p.m., Wednesday 3-5 p.m., Thursday 11:30 a.m. -5 p.m, and Friday 9 am 5 p.m.

Chrysanthemums and "I am a Father" buttons will be sold by the senior class executive council for Parent's Weekend, Oct 9-11.

A desk will be open for sales from 9 a.m. - 4 p.m. Mnoday-Friday in the lobby of Huntington B. Crouse Hall. Orders also will be taken in all living centers by council members.

Pick-up stations for the mums, which are sold on order only, will be annonnced later. Mums will be sold for $1. while buttons cost 25 cents.

More than 1600 parents of freshmen and transfer students will be attending the SU School for Parents Friday.

To aid parents, a general information desk will be set up in HBC lobby all day Friday. There will also be two desks in Hendricks Chapel to direct parents to the various School for Parents Classes.

Among the host of desks in HBC lobby next week will be one where students and parents can get information and tickets for the performances of the National Players, which will be at the Regent Theater Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Greenhouse Requiem

Progress Eliminates Plant

By EILEEN MANION and PAT TRACEY

The end may be near for both the SU greenhouse and its prize exhibit, a century plant.

Hill students would probably not even notice the structure behind Slocum Hall if it were not for the flower stalk of the century plant which protrudes through the roof.

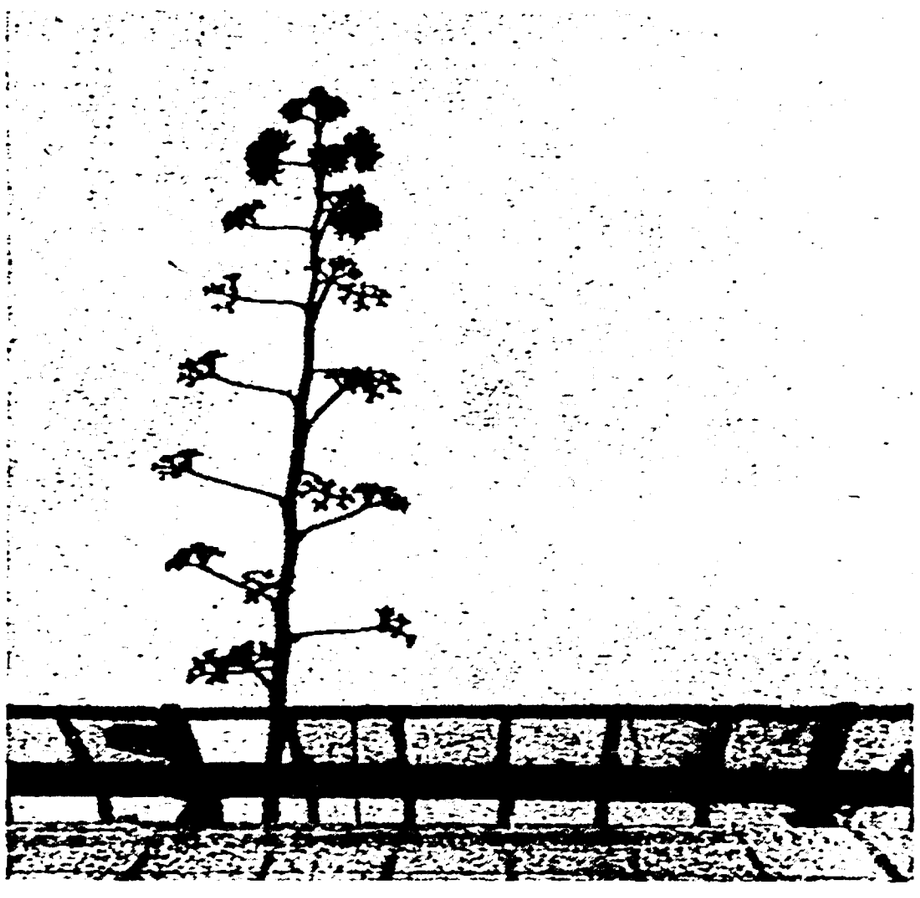
The century plant has long been one of the greenhouse's valued possessions. Robert Sobek, one of thre graduate students who maintain the greenhouse, said the plant may be the only flowering century in the East.

Century plants are indigenous to southwest United States and Mexico. Contrary to poplar opinion, the plant does not bloom once every hundred years, blooms usually occur every 10 - 20 years, Sobek said.

This plant, however, was almost 40 years old before it began growing its flower stalk. Once it began to grow, it progressed at a rate of four-six inches a day.

If a pane of glass had not been removed from the foof to accomodate the stalk, Sobek

(See Progress, page 7)



Up, up, up...

Up it goes. No, friend, it is not a bird, a plane or Superman. This is the century plant growing from the top of the SU greenhouse and reaching for the sky. The plant is one of the few in the nation and probably the only flowering century in the east. When SU loses the greenhouse, in the near future, the plant will go with it.

Maturity, At Last

If the weekend Pinebrook Conference resulted in nothing else, the critical self evaluation of student government which took place is a significant step forward.

At the age of four, the "baby" of campus organizations has seen that it cannot solve the problems of the world, but must direct itself to the problems of the campus. This is an early and heart - warming maturing.

Realized was a failure of responsibility, to both students and administration, and ground work was laid for a truly responsible, working student government. Its success, of course, depends on the machinery which now must be developed by the conference participants.

Problems and proposals were discussed on sound, reasonable levels, and for the first time, the prevailing sentiment was to leave to the administration the problems only it can solve. The realization that students and student government can't solve everything is another striking step forward.

Discussion on the possibility of having Student Government approve student organization budgets was primarily negative, with a mature understanding that students do not know enough about budgeting as yet to risk such a venture.

Communication was discussed again, as always, and a theoretically-working Presidents' Council was re-affirmed, with its first meeting to be held within a week.

Such mature discussion on the part of students must make a few members of the administration smile, for if the maturity spreads on the campus, much needless criticism will cease, and some construction may begin.

Perhaps student government on the campus may one day soon be able to call itself "developed," rather than "developing." Only through the mature outlook can the former ever be obtained.

By keeping discussion within generalities, a philosophy rather than a program has been developed. Within the next weeks on the campus, a program developed from the philosophy will likewise be devised.

If the maturity, more so than the spirit, of Pinebrook returns to the campus with the leaders, then it may truly be said that student government will some day soon attain its rightful, responsible position.

But if maturity breeds immaturity, then student government, and therefore the student body, can have at best a hazy and limited future in the developing university complex.

Bull by the Horns

That Was the Week

By Rich Turner

One night last week I happened to hear a news interview on WAER. It was with an individual named Jesse Smith who seems to be the spokesman for the Hurst Cottage crowd.

During the interview Mr. Smith, in replying to a question about the now famous coffin, said that the administration is trying to bury them.

It's hard to believe that college students who are supposedly mature could feel that the dean of men's office is aiming a personal vendetta at them. The fact that they are offering financial help should help to make this idea look ridiculous.

Now I sympathize with the fact that they will have to pay an extra $100, and I know that everyone on this campus isn't from Westchester County but the image of Dean Carleton pouring dirt on the graves of those poor cottage residents is roughly parallel to that of Moses drowning cats in the bullrushes.

Orange journalism: Last week the Daily Orange discovered sex and alcohol - next week it'll discover penicillin.

I opened last Tuesday's D.O. expecting to see "I Ate My Baby" in big headlines--but I was disappointed. It was like taking a DG to Schrafft's for watercress sandwiches.

Syracuse is rapidly changing--the climate's getting better all the time. Last Sunday there were almost 40 people sitting on the steps of the library waiting for it to open.

It's no longer square to really enjoy some of your classes, and you find people panting to get into a class like Con Law where you have to do something like fifty briefs.

There are new courses like Professor Owen's "The Negro in American Literature," and you have all the other great English courses whose lectures give you a deeper insight into yourself and your society.

The party boys may be flunking out, but they're being replaced by a student who may not be a complete intellectual, but who has at least opened his mind to the chance that some man in an old tweed sport coat will give him something to think about.

Syracuse University is turning into a great university--and the student body is changing along with it.

Can you imagine..a Psi U in a doublebreasted suit, Barry Goldwater using nuclear bombs to defoliate Thornden Park, a bald Zebe, a Theta without a circle pin, Student Government doing something important?

A word of encouragement--to those girls who fell in love with those handsome DU pledges last week. Now that they're brothers they'll loosen their ties and give you the chance you've been waiting for.

Student Government can take an active mature role. It has a lot of intelligent people in its leadership and a student body which, if approached correctly, would support it in anything it wanted to do.

But after you've been around here for a few years, you begin to lose hope. There are a lot of pitfalls for the leadership in Student Government, and after a while you really can't help getting cynical--but maybe and it's a slim hope) the student leaders really didn't play pattycake at Pinebrook.

LETTERS

Rebutted

To the Editor:

It was quite an experience for this Daily Orange columnist to pick up yesterday's paper and find he has been called a plagerist and a thief. When Mr. Krawitz's letter appeared I was caught between anger and bellows of laughter. I guess one must be serious, however, when he is told he has been "stealing" and has "annoyed" and "quite disturbed" a fellow student.

In only one place in my column did I not give a source for the remark given and that was because I had heard it from another student and he couldn't remember who told it to him. I could have spent the week tracking it down for Mr. Krawitz but alas joke "borrowing" is an old established art. Was it not Milton Berle who said to Bob Hope "I laughed so hard at your show last night I kept dropping my pad and pencil?"

I might also point out to Mr. Krawitz's "chagrin" that only a small portion of this column was not my own and clearly labeled as such. I can assume he read past the first paragraph. Perhaps the nature of the political humor offended him, I don't know.

He was also obviously upset because I was funny while Auletta was serious. The two I trust may never appear together in the same newspaper. Finally I might remind Mr. Krawitz that he might think he knows something about "plagarism" but in the area of libel he might take a course or two. But don't get me wrong, Mike, I like to get people stirred up even if its over some petty, insignificant and meaningless points like you raised. Look for more next week.

Senate

To the Editor:

A few days ago, your newspaper took a stand on the current senatorial race in New York; a stand which I feel was excellent.

Not long ago, I was in New York City and as I passed the Press Club, the incumbent Sen. Keating emerged from within followed by a crew of newsmen, reporters, and photographers. When asked to make a statement for the press, Keating exhorted, "I am NOT planning to run for the United States Senate".....and then as the crowd stood quietly by, obviously puzzled, he chortled ..."from the state of Massachusetts!" Through this remark we see exactly how absurd the situation really is. Robert Kennedy is an intelligent and energetic man. If he waits and becomes just a little more intelligent and energetic, and in the proper state, then his opportunity will come soon enough.

Once again, my thanks for a well organized and sensible editorial.

The Sounds of Jazz

Newport: Part Two

by Bill Newman

The name Dave Brubeck should by familiar to most of you. I was much delighted and little surprised to find that the Brubeck Quartet was slated to open the Saturday night bill at this year's Newport Jazz Festival.

A packed huose cheered enthusiastically following the Brubeck performance and groaned disappointedly as emcee Father Norman O'Connor (Boston's famed jazz priest) informed them that time did not allow for an encore by the Brubeck group. The significance of this warm reception for Brubeck by the Newport audience cannot be fully understood without some knowledge of Brubeck's career.

In the late forties, when Dave Brubeck drifted from the secure surroundings of the world of classical music to the insecure settings of jazz, popular acceptance and understanding of jazz was at a low ebb. Yet, Dave Brubeck, a constant experimenter, has never let his musical integrity and originality yield to the demands of popular sucesss. His current success is as much a tribute to his own musical genius as it is to the fact that today's jazz audience is more educated than ever before. In this sense, I feel that jazz has caused an important change in America's musical habits and cultural patterns (I'll say more on this at another time.)

The success of Dave Brubeck was no overnight affair. I remember a particular album of his on the Fantasy label, in which the bassist doubles on oboe. The idea of an oboe in jazz never really caught on for the obvious reasons but one must remember that man's first attempt at flight was a sad spectacle too.

Many of the later Brubeck experiments have become hallmarks in today's medium. In the early fifties Dave and his alto saxophonist, Paul Desmond hit upon the idea of improvised counterpoint, sort of an ad lib Bach approach to jazz. This style did much to make people realize that the jazz musician needs the same technical competence of his instrument and intellectual ability as his classical counterpart. Improvised counterpoint bagan the uphill spiral of the Brubeck career.

A popular approach in jazz today, which was originated by Brubeck, is that of playing jazz in time signatures besides the regular 4-4 and 2-4 meters. The Dave Brubeck Quartet proved that jazz can swing in 3-4 time.

They also demonstrated that polyrhythmic patterns could be used in jazz. An example is that of 3-4 over 4-4. The rhythm section remains in 3-4 while the soloist moves into 44. Since 3x4 equals 12 and 4x3 equals 12, every 12 beats both musicians are back on the same beat.

The two LP albums "Time Out" and "Time Further Out" marked an extreme in this type of experimentation. While not all the time signatures used really swing, some have seen great sucess, 5-4 as in Desmond's "Take Five," 7-4 as in "Unsquare Dance" and others.

Many of Brubeck's most beautiful compositions fall strictly into the American ballad form, yet he constantly tries to fuse the musical modes of other lands with that of American jazz. Notable success have been "Brandenburg Gate" (Germany), "Nomad" (Egypt) and "Bosa Nova U. S. A." (Brasil).

As part of their Newport performance the group played some new Japanese influenced music, written by Dave on the group's recent overseas concert tour. The acceptance of this music at the Festival was not as warm as that to the overall Brubeck performance. Yet the fact remains that Brubeck, his ideas and experiments, have been accepted very well by the jazz audience. For the above reasons and many more I salute Dave Brubeck's Newport performance and his important role in the world of American Music.

When the temperature gets to be 98, everyone feels that old.

Of Nature, of Man

BY CHARLES BARNEY

The essences of objects are approached philosophically by stripping away less vital characteristics. Accordingly, an artist pondering man and nature needs but a few strokes of the brush to record what he sees. In lithography, such condensation is used by the artist for special effect.

An exhibit of lithographson display at the Everson Museum consists of such line drawing. Appropriately artist Peter Takal has philosophically named the folio "Of Nature, Of Man."

At times, Takal takes a close-up view such as "Wood." The artist sees the bark of a tree and depicts this rough, irregular texture.

At other times, he stands back. "City Window" is a window frame embracing the horizontals and verticals of a large city.

Two lithographs — "Landscape" and "Head of a Woman" (view from behind) suggest a close relation between man and nature. The flow of the woman's hair resembles the flow of the landscape.

Similarly Queen Anne's Lace and "Wave" are related. "Wave" is a close-up of the curliness of water foam, and "Queen Anne's Lace" is a contained area (the flower) of frilliness.

Always a few lines carefully selected suffice. "Winter Woods" is but a few stalks of barren shrubs on a white ground. "Dead Birds" is just the outline of pigeons or crows lying on newspaper reproduced in detail.

Takal is concerned with the concept that is alone a winter wood or is solely a dead bird.

The lithographs were handprinted at the Tamarind Lithography Workshop, Los Angeles, during December 1963 and January 1964.

Accompanying the Takal group is another display, "Suggestions for the New Collector." This exhibit consists of graphs, drawings and small paintings for the beginning collector.

Included are several works by Ruth Kerkouvis of flower types.

Both exhibits run through October 18. Admission is free.

Dr. Golden To Direct Light Opera

The Gilbert and Sullivan light opera "Pirates of Penzance" will be given at 8:30 p.m., Oct. 29, 30, and 31 at the Regent Theatre.

"Pirates of Penzance" will be produced by the Civic Company, a community-wide dramatic organization, and will be directed by Dr. Joseph Golden of the SU Drama Department.

Since his arrival last year at SU, Golden has directed "Ten Nights in a Bar Room" and "Down in the Valley." He aso directed the summer touring production, "Thieve's Carnival," which just recently closed a Syracuse engagement at the Regent.

Tickets for the Gilbert and Sullivan opera are available at the Regent Theatre box office.

Cycle to Ease Parking Patrol

By CHARLIE RUSSO

At least one SU security Policeman finds his job easier now, as a motorcycle has been added to the division's vehicle collection.

Given to the university by Joseph Spector of Spector Motors, the cycle will be used for the patroling of parking lots. Earlier, the 31 university parking lots, covering an area of three miles, were patrolled by one man on foot. The re-painted cycle will hasten and moderate the job.

Besides the patroling of parking lots, the Security Police carry on the same taskes as a city police force. Thirteen patrolmen and four sargeants are on active duty with two partrol cars and the new cycle being used during the three, eight-hour shifts.

Director of Security Police is Robert D. Flaherty, a member of the force for four years. Flaherty has been assisted by Leo J. Graszler during the past year and a half. Serving as Fire Marshal in security is Thaddeus (Ted) Otis.

"Our purpose is to carry on a program of safty and security for the university," Flaherty explained. Graszler said "every little operation on the campus seems to include us -- even the pep rallies."

All buildings, bookstores and dormitories affilliated with the university are checked at least three times a night, some as many as six times an evening. Security is also responsible for any university-owned buildings that are off campus, such as the Regent Theatre.

Presently plans are being made for Parents' Weekend, October 9-10. Parking information has been mailed out to parents who will be attending, and assignments for patrolmen during that period are being figured out by security.

The Orange Poll

Daily Orange staff members will be covering the campus in the next few weeks, asking questions of significance to the university, as well as the state and nation.

1. If you could vote in the New York senatorial election, for whom would you vote?

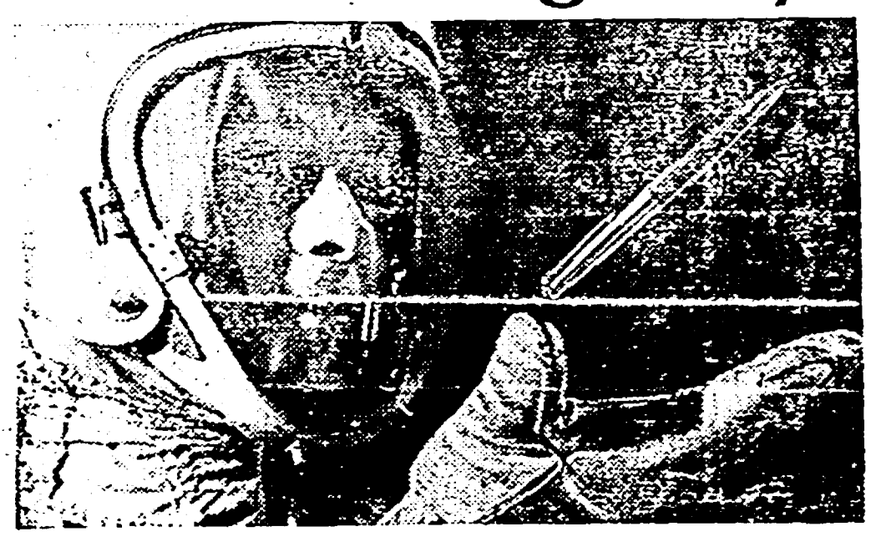
The only pen that defies gravity



An ordinary pen would draw a blank without gravity to release the ink. The remarkable Parker 61 is designed to write without gravity, which makes it virtually leak-proof. The reason: capillary action defies gravity and suspends the ink in tiny cells in the barrel. Capillary action also fills this remarkable pen. Dip the filling end in ink and in ten seconds your 61 will be set for up to 6 hours of steady writing. Beautiful writing.

Foreign Grants Open to Students

Some of the scholarships and exchange programs open to Syracuse University students are presented here.

Fellowships of $2500 for one year are available to women graduate students from the United Kingdom. Applications should be addressed to the British Federation of University Women, Crosby Hall, Cheyne Walk, London, S.W.3.

The Association Internationale des Etudiants en Sciences Economiques et Commerciales administer a world-wide program of seminars, study tours and "working traineeships." Students of business administration and economics are selected by the association. More information can be obtained by writing AIESEKE, 51 East 42nd Street, New York, 10017.

Individuals wishing to work in United Kingdom institutes should look into the fellowships and scholar grants offered annually by the American Cancer Society, 219 East 42nd Street, New York, New York, 10017.

Minimum awards of 100 pounds are available to members of the American Association of University Women for study in Britain. For information, write A.A.U.W., 2401 Virginia Avenue, N.W., Washington 7, D.C.

A six-week summer program primarily for graduate students is conducted at four universities, Oxford, Stratford-upon-Avon, London and Edinburgh. One free place is available for every 30 American students accepted. Applicants are screened by a Committee at the Institute of International Education, 809 United Nations Plaze, New York, 10017.

Ten scholarships are offered to male graduates of designated universities wishing to continue studies in science or engineering at Churchill College, Cambridge. Interested students should write Roger C. Fenn, Secretary for the Scholarships, United States Churchill Foundation, 15 Gillette Park, Boston, Mass., 02106.

The Fulbright-Hays Program is a two-way exchange program between the United States and the United Kingdom. Awards to U.S. citizens are available to graduate students who would like to undertake a year of graduate research in the United Kingdom. Grants made include transportation, maintenance and tuition. Students should apply to Jim G. Carleton, SU dean of men and director of financial aids, Administration Bldg.

Unmarried American men and women interested in study at Oxford or Cambridge may be eligible for Henry Fellowships. Each year about four awards of about 800 pounds are availaole. Applications should be directed to the Office of the Secretary of Yale University or to the Office of the Secretary of the Corporation of Harvard.

The International Association for the Exchange of Students for Technical Experience conducts training programs in 31 countries. Trainees receive an allowance for living expenses while training, and IAESTE arranges visas, work permits and lodgings. Students pay their own travel costs. Interested students may contact IAESTE-U.S., c-o Engineers Joint Council, 345 East 47th Street, New York, 10017.

Marshall Scholarships, available for two years with an option to be extended for a third year, are available to graduating seniors and graduate students for study leading to a degree at a British university. Each scholarship is worth 800 pounds a year; a married man's award may be increased 200 pounds per year. Inquiries should be addressed to the British Consulate-General, 845 Third Avenue, New York, 10022.

The Noel Buxton Trust offers a studentship every other year for research in international problems at the London School of Economics and Political Science. The award is open to graduates and is normally for not less than two years. Applications giving full particulars of the applicant's career and field of study together with the names of two references must be received by the Secretary of the Graduate School, London School of Economics and Political Science, Houghton Street, London, W.C.2. early in 1965.

Rhodes Scholarships are open to male citizens of at least junior standing at a recognized degree-granting university. Each scholarship consists of 900 pounds a year for two years at the University of Oxford. Enquiries may be sent to President Courtney Smith, American Secretary of the Rhodes Scholarships, Swarthmore College, Swarthmore, Pa.

Rotary Foundation Fellowships are open to candidates holding a bachelor of arts degree with a high scholastic standing and a thorough knowledge of the language of the country in which they wish to study. The value of the awards varies according to the country of study and covers transportation, maintenance, tuition fees and books. Applicants must be backed by their local rotary club. Inquiries should be addressed to the club.

said, the glass would have been broken by the force of the plant's growth.

After a century plant finishes blooming, it gradually withers and dies. And, so it seems, the SU plant may soon go to its final reward.

At the same time the campus loses its century plant, it must prepare to lose its greenhouse. The building is about to be demolished to make way for the new engineering building.

The present greenhouse started 40 years ago as a complex of three units in which different soil and climatic conditions had been maintained. Ten years ago, two of the sections were torn down and all of the plants were moved into the present building.

Maintained by Sobek, Frank Hoffman and Haven Sweet, botany department graduate students working under Dr. John Miller, the greenhouse has been used chiefly for demonstration and some research, Sobek said.

A new experimental chemical called B 995 is being tested on sunflowers and geraniums to determine its effects. Sobek said that the sunflower leaves have been remarkably inhibited so far, while the flowers remain the same size.

Although many varieties of plants have grown in the green house, both Sobek and Sweet mentioned the difficulty of maintaining in one building plants requiring different climatic conditions.

Among these varieties, also to be lost with the destruction of the building, have been Japanese rubber plants, banana plants, hibiscus, papyrus, elephant ears, aloe plants and countless varieties of cacti.

Included are some plants more familiar to residents of the Northeast such as morning glories geraniums, sunflowers dwarf iris, coleus, begonias, oleander, carnations, liver wort and ferns.

Pinebrook Resolves

A major goal set by SG was an exploration of possible changes in the grading system, with coordination between Corallo and Stern. Committees in both legislative and executive branches are to study other marking systems of other schools.

Corrallo said he planned to work with the University Senate, Stern with the student body and both with the administration, seeking a concensus on what would be feasible and beneficial.

There was recognition among students some areas of university operation are beyond the competence of SG. When the subject of a student finance bill arose, it was learned that John S. Hafer, dean of personnel administration and admissions, had rejected the bill passed two years ago.

Hafer explained that students do not have the needed skill and experience in accounting and budgeting, and his argument met general acceptance.

Seen as a possible first step toward eventual SG control of student finances was a proposal to train treasurers of organizations in the handling of budgets.

Similarly, a plan to seek students on the university housing committee drew little backing. The conference discussed the virtues of mixed floors versus separate freshman housing and the men's system of waiting in line for housing sign-up versus the women's system of drawing numbers.

Dean of Men Jim G. Carleton revealed that freshmen this year will sign up for rooms on the women's "chance" system for the first time.

A committee under Frank Richmond, chief justice of Student Court, considered possible ways of reducing the number of student cars to ease the Hill parking squeeze. Richmond asserted that strict enforcement of existing legislation would only be a "drop in the bucket," and suggested such plans as raising sophomore driving requirements or extending them to juniors.

Carleton's idea of abolishing all undergraduate driving privileges met with little favor from the students.

Communications was another major theme at Pinebrook. Plans were made for regular reports by the various students activities to a central SG public relations office, which would use them as a basis for a column in the Daily Orange.

David Finnegan of WAER disclosed plans to bring hte university's FM radio station to the mass of students who own AM sets by use of a special cable to dormitories. The administrators present at the conference, however, said they did not know these were the plans now stood in the university scheme.

Orangemen Blast Holy Cross, 34-8

TV Quarterbacks

As They Saw It

By JIM KLURFELD

"Ah, heck, we'll murder them by at least 27. They don't belong on the same field as us."

"Yeah, Yeah, but the guys could get too cocky. Everybody said we should have rolled B. C."

"Hey, shut up you guys, they're ready to kick off."

And so the crowd in the musty television room is hushed. Seats are scarce, many sit on a shuffle board, soda case or floor.

Syracuse wins the toss, receives the ball, but fails to make a first down.

"Great, that's really great. What's the matter with Ben, he has to pass against these guys."

There is a roar of approval.

"Ahh, don't worr . . ." Syracuse pants. "Hit him, come on, hey he's breaking away, there's nobody near him."

A few plays later Holy Cross scores and leads 8-0.

"Last week we looked great, now THEY'RE losing to Holy Cross. I don't believe it."

The Orangemen lose the ball again as a Walley Mahle pass is dropped on third down.

"——— ! When he throws it right we can't catch it."

"He oughta start going outside."

"Naw, he oughta start going inside."

"What? He better start passing."

They only agree on one thing, "What kinda of coach is he, anyway?"

Mel Allen says something about on upset in the making. Somebody else says something about Mel Allen. Everybody laughs.

Syracuse fumbles, somebody gets up and leaves.

"What's the matter with these guys. Didn't they ever hear of a team winning on the road?"

"That defensive secondary looks like Swiss cheese."

The half ends, SU trailing 8-0.

"He ought to be passing more."

"He should have four defensive halfbacks."

"He's not rushing their passer enough."

"Holy Cross, I don't believe it."

"Way to go guys, great, just great. They probably couldn't beat a midget team."

"Ah, take it easy, there's still another half."

The second half starts and SU's defense begins to gain yardage.

George Fair breaks through the Holy Cross line, hits the quarterback jarring the ball loose and Gerry Everling grabs it and stumbles into the end zone.

"Yeeeeaaaahhh. O.K., now we roll. Now we . . . he missed the extra point, we're still losing."

"Holy Cross, I don't believe it."

"That was a great call by Ben."

A few minutes later Teddy Holman intercepts a pass.

"All right, baby. Come on, no not there, there, no, yes, oh my gosh . . . great, great run. Boy that guy is elusive."

Mahle completes passes, Nance runs with battering power. Syracuse scores again, and again, and again.

"Why do we play these guys, anyway?"

"Beats me."

"Hey let's turn it to the ball game."

Piety Tallies 5 TDs During Second Half

By BERNIE MacCALLUM
DO Sports Correspondent

WORCESTER, Mass. — Holy Cross coach Dr. Eddie Anderson must have felt like General Custer during the general's last military engagement as he watched the Saltine Warriors explode for 34 points in the second half — after hope had been injected into the Cross who led, 8 - 0, at the half.

The Crusaders charged into Fitton Field, scored the first time they got the ball, and kept the lid on the Orange for two quarters. But SU roared back during the final 30 minutes to notch a 34-8 victory.

Syracuse fumbled once, had a pass intercepted, coughed up the ball on downs twice and punted twice before swapping places with the band on the field at intermission.

The contest, in which Holy Cross players must have been more concerned with coming out of in one piece rather than victorious, was anyone's game after 30 minutes. The hometown fans wore "We Try Harder" buttons as they watched their highly spirited ball club fired up on the field.

A good-sized group of Orange rooters sat back and enjoyed the Massachusetts sunshine with confidence unshaken, waiting for Little and Co. to explode. Most Syracusan TV fans had anticipated that the score would be closest at the playing of the national anthem.

The expected came about one-half way, with the Hillmen tallying 14 points in the third and 20 in the final quarter. A sign reading "Syracuse Has Little, Very Little" was slowly folded up by those sporting Crusader purple.

The hysteria in the first half turned into subdued quiet in the final 30 minutes.

Piety tackle Gerry Everling struck first from 11 yards out when he picked off a short pass, as quarterback Mike Cunnion was hit with his arm in motion.

Hal Rooney then intercepted a pass on the Holy Cross 35 and executed an exciting run-back before stepping out of bounds on the eight. After three Jim Nance carries, it was 14-8.

Then Schwartzwalder's team was putting on an awesome display of power.

Walley Mahle capped a 10-play, 50-yard drive with a touchdown pass to end Jim Cripps as the Orange were moving their opponents' forward wall around at will.

With Nance bulling his way upfield, Mahle twisting and turning through the line, and Billy Hunter and Floyd Little running off the scissors play, SU moved the ball and ran it up to 34-8. Nance and Duckett scored the final Hill TDs.

At no time in the second half did Holy Cross have the ball for more than four plays in succession. They were held to eight yards rushing overall and 64 in the air.

The Orangemen via the air had Mahle and Rich King combining for 84 yards in completing seven of 15, mostly in the second half. They piled up 254 yards on the ground.

Nance was the top rusher with 18 carries for 86 yards. Little carried eight times for 48 yards and a six-yard average. Everling was the Hill mainstay in the line, while tackle Joe Lilly paced the HC defense up front.

Crusader halfback Jim Marcellino topped his club in the offensive department with 15 yards rushing on five attempts, while snagging an aerial for seven yards.

SU Runners Dump Colgate

By NEIL KERR

Syracuse University's cross-country team outran Colgate's harriers Saturday morning at Colgate's five mile course. By winning 22-34, the Orange widened their all-time series lead over the Red Raiders to 37-4.

Syracuse University's cross-country team outran Colgate's harriers Saturday morning at Colgate's five mile course. By winning 22-34, the Orange widened their all-time series lead over the Red Raiders to 37-4.

Saturday's meet was the 41st in a series that began in 1909. In the varsity feature, Mike Spino, Marty Miller and John Crawford finished in a three way tie for first place as they recorded a time of 27:45. Other SU finishers were Bill Ramsdell, Tom Giordano, Dave Daubert, Dave Hanna and Mike Schuster.

Coach Bob Grieve's Orange harriers have now won two in a row this season, having dumped Buffalo last weekend at Drumlins. Colgate evened its record at 2-2.

Earlier Saturday morning, Colgate's frosh defeated SU's yearling team 26-32. However, Syracuse's Dennis Boyle was the individual winner. Boyle broke the old course record in the process as he toured the three miles in 16:04.2.

Next week the Syracuse cross country teams will journey to Ithaca for a dual meet with the winless Cornell squad.

The following week SU will take on Army at home. Then comes another home meet with Alfred before the concluding dual meet of the season at Penn State.

Syracuse's chances of improving on last season's 3-2 record look good with Army and Penn State expected to provide the stiffest competition this year.

Clubs Set For Action

Intramural football signups for the 1964 fall season have totalled 91 teams, 19 more than last year.

The grid playing season will be extended possibly after the Thanksgiving vacation to accomodate the vast increase in competitors.

Swimming and riflery, also fall sports, will be scheduled next week. A cross country event has been set Nov. 14 on a two-mile course at Drumlins.

Intramural managers will meet within a week to elect a council to handle intra program rules and direct activities.

Sen. Javits Cites 'Fine' GOP Record

Pinebrook Follow-up

Conference Plans Move into Action

By JESSE SMITH

Student Government's executive branch has served irons in the fire following the weekend Pinebrook Conference.

The president's council, organized under former JSG President James Morris, has been expanded to include the four class presidents and the heads of InterFraternity Council, Panhellenic Council, Traditions Commission, Association of Woman Students and Commuting Students Assn.

Scheduled to meet for the first time with SG president Carl Corrallo Saturday, the council's purpose is to bring together large campus organizations which are not included within Student Government.

The council is an advisory group only. Corrallo said at Pinebrook that SG "will not delve into their activities but help them turn outward to the campus."

Another newly formed unit will be Bruce Rosenstein's special committee to work on housing problems. Although part of executive branch operations, it will recruit its members from the campus at large.

The Daily Orange makes a proposal. See editorial, page 2.

Rosenstein's main aim is to come up with an improved system for men's housing signups. Working with the full cooperation of the dean of men's office, committee members will go directly to the living centers seeking ideas and opinions from students.

"I feel the administration is doing everything possible," Rosenstein said, "and I want to help them."

He indicated that Dean of Men Jim G. Carleton's office is "being more than generous—they want a solution, but they want it to come from the students."

Another new idea discussed at Pinebrook appears to be in suspended animation. Plans to transmit WAER, the university's FM radio station, to AM radios in dormitories must await relocation of WAER studios.

According to Dan Stone, program director, the plan to link dorms to WAER by special cable has been studied and found feasible. But the station's prefab is scheduled for demolition this year, and nothing can be done until a new location is announced, Stone said.

Student Dies In Accident

Donald P. Stevens, 26, a graduate student at Syracuse University, died in a drowning accident Saturday as his small boat apparently capsized in a gust of wind.

Stevens, his wife Lynn, and their 10-month-old son resided in Slocum Heights in the married students' housing.

Admitted as a full-standing student on August 20, Stevens was an assistant in the chemistry department at SU. He received his undergraduate degree in chemistry at Syracuse in September.

Sees NYS Progressive Stands As Main Issue of Senate Race

By AUDREY LIPPMAN
News Editor

The "fine, progressive record" of the New York State Republican Party is at stake in the Keating-Kennedy senatorial race, Sen. Jacob K. Javits said Monday.

Javits, who appealed to the members of the Syracuse University community to support incumbent Kenneth B. Keating, said the New York GOP has been the state progress for the past 20 years.

Javits was introduced to a crowd of approximately 700 students, faculty and administration members by Kenneth G. Bartlett, university vice president and dean of public affairs. The senator spoke on the steps of Hendricks Chapel.

If the voters let Keating down, the Republican Party will be jeopardized in New York State, Javits said. He gave several other reasons why he felt voters should support Keating in this election.

Keating is such a "good senator" that his opponent, former Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy, has "had a hard time finding flaws" in the senator's record, Javits said.

In this respect, Javits also noted that there was "no vacuum or special need" for a new senator in the state.

Kennedy "cynically entered the race, siezing an opportunity without regard for this need," Javits noted. He suggested that if Kennedy were looking for a "real call or mission" to serve in the Senate, he should try to "beat the Byrd machine in Virginia."

Javits noted a liberal view at SU which he said was the "prevailing sentiment" in such institutions and questioned Kennedy's "liberal label."

Moreover he said he did not believe Kennedy was as respectful of civil libertes as he was quoted to be. To illustrate this, Javits cited Federal lack of regard for wire tapping laws under Kennedy's leadership when he was attorney general.

(See NYS, page 7)

SEN. JACOB JAVITS

★ ★ Senator: Cannot, Do Not Support Goldwater Ticket

Sen. Jacob K. Javits asserted again for a Syracuse University audience that "I connot and do not support the Sen. Barry M. Goldwater ticket" in the 1964 Presidential election.

Javits made this statement Monday in response to a question concerning how he would resolve his dilemma in the Nov. 3 elections for whom he would vote. The question came from one of the 700 persons who first listened to a speech Javits gave on the steps of Hendricks Chapel.

He said he expects to announce for whom he will vote within the next few weeks of the campaign. Javits also said he was "not prepared to support President Lyndon B. Johnson," since he had "grave doubts about the Johnson administration." He did not further elaborate on this point.

Javits claimed to be loyal to the Republican Party but said he would not "actively support" either side.

He announced that he intended to vote in the Nov. 3 election and that he would cast a ballot for a presidential nominee rather than abstain.

Later, the senator told the Daily Orange that he would not leave the Republican Party if Goldwater were elected. He said he believed in the party, noting that he had been in the minority before and "could do it again."

Freshman Class Elections Rescheduled for Oct. 15th

By CAROL RUBRIGHT
Junior Editor

The class of '68 will elect officers a week earlier than previously scheduled, frosh elections commissioner S. Richard Fishman announced Monday.

"We felt the freshmen needed a lot more time to work on their weekend (Frosh Weekend, Dec. 11-13)," Student Government President Carl Corrallo explained, "so we moved the elections from Oct. 22 to Oct. 15 to give now slated for Thursday at a them an extra week."

The nominating convention is location to be announced, and balloting for frosh president, vice president, secretary and treasurer is scheduled one week later at campus polling places.

All freshmen are entitled to run for class office. Anyone who is interested must procure a petition between 2-5 p.m. today in the Student Government office in the basement of Marion Hall.

Petitions should include the signatures of 50 freshmen plus the candidate's name and the office he is seeking. Petitions are due at 5 p.m. Thursday at the main desk of the Women's Building.

Petitioners will be presented to the nominating convention which is composed of three representatives from each

Escapes Blast In Mississippi

A former Syracuse University student was among those persons sleeping in a Mississippi "freedom school" when a bomb ripped the building Sunday morning. She was not harmed.

Elaine Singer, 20, of Endicott, N.J., who was a junior at Syracuse last year, was upstairs in the two-story Vicksburg building at the time of the blast. Two persons were slightly injured in the explosion.

Fourteen persons were in the building at the time. It was the 16th racial bombing in southwest Mississippi since June.

SU Blood Drive Meeting Today

Charles C. Noble, dean of Hendricks Chapel, will speak at the blood drive forum, 7:30 p.m. today in Kittridge Auditorium, Huntington B. Crouse Hall. The forum will be attended by dormitory representatives and interested students.

The bloodmobile will return to campus Oct. 21, 22 for the 32nd blood drive at Syracuse University. All students wishing to donate must have permission slips signed by their parents if they are under 21.

Last fall more than 700 pints of blood were donated by students. The 82 hospitals in Onondaga County which are recipients of the blood each use an average of 250 pints each day. Student support for the drive is necessary to replenish the reserve.

Dayton Dewey of InterFraternity Council, Patricia McCarrich of the Women's Athletic Association and Stephen Springer of Alpha Phi Omega, national service fraternity, are co-chairmen of the drive. The sponsoring organization of the drive is the Syracuse chapter of the Red Cross.

Representatives will collect the necessary information to give to their living centers at the meeting. Committee members will visit all living centers later this week to answer questions about the drive.

County Group For Johnson Opens Offices

Republicans and independents will be able to work together for the election of Lyndon B. Johnson and Hubert H. Humphrey according to James K. Weeks, assistant professor of law at Syracuse.

An Onondaga County Chapter of Republicans and Independents for Johnson will open its headuarters at noon today at 132 W. Jefferson St.

Weeks, vice chairman of public affairs for the county chapter said at a recent meeting that the group "is a forum which permits the members to work without committing themselves to the entire slate of the party."

Richard B. Lillich, chairman of the chapter, cited a recent Gallup poll showing that 41 per cent of New York Republicans will vote for Johnson.

"Our intention is to surpass this figure locally and help the President carry Onondaga County," Lillich said.

Vice president in charge will be announced at today's opening meeting. Persons interested in working or contributing to the organization should write headquarters or call 471-4473. Contributions may be sent to P.O. Box 564, Syracuse.

A Job For SG

Unfortunately, the interchange of ideas and opinions between students and administrators which took place over the weekend at Pinebrook happens but once a year.

Also, perhaps more unfortunately, the number of students who can attend such a conference and participate in such an interchange is limited. Often interested students are passed up in favor of the disinterested who are invited because of a nebulous, do-nothing campus position.

Well, as someone once said, this has got to stop.

Therefore the Daily Orange proposes that student government, in conjunction with the university administration, take steps to establish as soon as possible a regularly-scheduled "press conference" where members of the administration, as well as student government, could be asked questions by any member of the university family.

The purposes and advantages of such a conference are obvious. Students could bring problems, gripes, and questions directly to both student government and the administration. Both could more readily obtain a sampling of students' views on situations.

We are sure that one of the members of the university hierarchy has time to take a half-hour once every week or two to discuss problems with students on a "no holds barred" level. We are also certain that student government will see the need for such a situation.

This proposal originally came out of the 1963 Pinebrook Conference, but was never carried through. The time for prompt implementation is now.

If the administration hopes to obtain the views of interested students, we feel this is the best way yet conceived. The same rationale may be applied to student government.

If the conference series proves nothing else, at least it will be a start to establishing a meaningful rapport between students, student government and administration.

Compromise

To the Editor:

Ken Auletta topped even himself with his column in Wednesday's DO. Seemingly sober, he actually damned those "who see greater morality in maintaining the purity of one's convictions," while praising the "progressive thought" of those who will settle for any compromise of their ideals.

Since when has it become "radical" to believe in one's own convictions and to strive for their implementation, yet "progressive" to be half-hearted in your ideas—in other words, morally, loose?

According to this premise, those who advocate capitalism, when confronted by Communist opposition, should compromise and accept socialism. Those who want to keep freedom, when confronted by dictatorial opposition, should accept freedom to live under dictatorship.

Those who advocate maintaining urban law and order, when confronted by thugs rioting under false pretenses, should settle for rioting only on even days of the week.

Certainly, the above are not the issues Mr. Auletta is thinking of in praise of "compromise," but it could conceivably reach that point. His type of reasoning brands every thinking person as "extremist" if they dare to uphold their convictions. This moral decay is more dangerous than any external threat to our nation.

Let's hope that all those who back Sen. Keating, the candidate who indeed deserves election, do not back him simply as the great compromiser.

Frank J. Piason '67

Dear Mr. Piason:

Your letter is both informative and enjoyable. But may I be so radical as to suggest that it is really a compromise of what I actually said. A slight printing ommision only compounds our communication gap.

Speaking of Goldwater's ideology, I said: "An ideology whose fervidness prevents it from that spirit of compromise (at this point the printer omitted a dash) — despised by all who see greater morality in maintaining the purity of one's convictions than in the partial implementation of them—on which it can accurately be said this nation rests."

I neither damned purists nor praised compromisers. I simply was trying to describe, not prescribe.

Thieve's Carnival

by Seth Shapiro

For the past two week-ends, the S.U. Touring Company has presented Thieve's Carnival, a play by Jean Anouilh. Although it is too late to see this fine performance of a tremendous play, I felt that a review should be written.

Thieve's Carnival is one of the few comedies written by the author of Becket. Along with its comedy, however, is the basic tone which underlies all of Anouilh's plays: the futility and boredom inherent in even the most successful life.

The characters at the core of this play each represent a different universal personality. There is Lady Hurf, a dowager, whose boredom of life leads her to playing hair-brained and futile games; Lord Edgard, an eccentric old man whose actual sanity comes through under only the most absurd conditions; Gustave, Peterbuono, and Hector, three common who find themselves dupes at their own game; the two Dupont Dufords, father and son, whose lack of charm is matched only by their stupidity; and Eva and Juliette, one aware and cynical, the other innocent and optimistic, whose lives are changed, if only for the moment, by the turn of events depicted in the play.

The central theme revolves around the three thieve's attempts to rob Lady Hurf's villa. They do not realize that Lady Hurf knows their plans and is merely stringing them along in order to relieve her boredom. They scheme, they plan, they discuss many ways to commit the robbery, but are always held back by complacency stimulated by acceptance into Lady Hurf's household.

The major sub-plot concerns the love between Gustave, the young thief, and Juliette, the young innocent. Gustave's love leads to uneasiness; his uneasiness forces him to commit a lone robbery, only to find that Juliette is aware of his true identity and loves him all the same. They run away together, but Gustave, convinced that she would not be happy as a thief, brings her back.

The members of the Syracuse Touring Company played their roles to perfection. Kathy Bindert did an excellent job as the giddy, yet bored, Lady Hurf. Frank Morrell, as Peterbuono, the head of the thieves, was both comical and yet tragic in his black purpose. Richard Folmar showed once again his complete versatility as the mad Lord Edgard. Richard Nathan and Allen Williams portrayed the two Dupont Dufords. Nathan was in his usual supurb form, and Williams' completely pliable body movements stole many scenes. Jan Aspenwald's portrayal of Eva, cynical older sister, was a credit to Anouilh's first-class script. Bruce McCurdy and Susan De Cicco, as the young lovers, added a touch of nostalgia which greatly increased the mood of the play. Rounding out the cast were Jane Reback, Sandra Land, Robert D'Angelo, George Fidel, Kathy Woods, and Thomas Grosso.

Music Group To Offer Bach Work

The Syracuse Friends of Chamber Music will perform Bach's "Musical Offering" at 8:30 p.m., Oct. 12 at Crouse Auditorium.

The chamber work, often called "an eighteenth century jam session," will be performed under the direction of Prof. Louis Krasner, who is celebrating his 15th year as musical director for the organization.

The jam session description of the Bach works arises out of the fact that nearly the whole "Musical Offering" was improvised by Bach on a theme set for him by Frederick the Great on the occasion of the composer's visit to the king in May, 1747. The King was an amateur musician and sent for Bach, who performed his improvisation. Later Bach wrote down what he had improvised.

The "Musical Offering" was included in the first concert offered by the music group 15 years ago. Also scheduled for Oct. 12 is a performance of Bach's "Overture (Suite) No. 1, C Major."

The Syracuse Friends of Chamber Music will also offer five other concerts in their series for this year. Visiting guests of the ensemble will include the Julliard String Quartet, the Marlboro Trio, Karl Kritz, Gloria Kritz, Helen Boatwright and Vincent Persichetti, as performers.

Edward Albee Comedy-Drama To Have Student Performances

Broadway hit "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" will be presented in Syracuse with the road tour company at 8:30 p.m. on Oct. 20 and 21 at the Regent Theatre.

The Oct. 20 performance is especially for students and special rates will apply according to a statement made by Marlow Burt, program administrator at University College, the downtown adult education division which operates the theatre for SU. The Oct. 21 performance is open to the general public.

During the 1962-63 theatrical season, the comedy-drama and its author, Edward Albee, were voted the following awards: The New York Drama Critics' Award five American Theatre Wing "Tonys"), the Annual ANTA and the Foreign Press Awards. The Saturday Review and the Poll of the New York Drama Critics also singled out Albee for special awards.

Albee is also the author of other hits, 'The Zoo Story," "The Death of Bessie Smith," "The Sandbox," "The Ballad of the Sad Cafe" and "The American Dream." He attracted international attention with his first play, "The Zoo Story," which had its premiere at the Schiller Theatre Workstatt in West Berlin, where it is still being performed in repertory.

"Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" explores the universally controversial subject of a man's relationship to a woman. Specifically, it is the story of two married couples who work and live in a small university town. It exposes the smoldering resentments of the twenty-year married life of a college professor, his wife, and the daughter of the dean.

Fourteen foreign productions of the New York play have performed in the four continents of Europe, Asia, South America and Africa.

Playing the leading roles in the Syracuse Production will be Vicki Cummings and Kendall Clark. Bryarby Lee and Donald Briscoe are also featured. Director Alan Schneider, whose direction won a "Tony" award on Broadway, also directed the national touring company for Clinton Wilder.

Tickets for "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" are available at the Regent box office. Tickets for the student performance are $2.00. Tickets for the Oct. 21 performance are $2.50, $3.00 and $3.50.

Grand Prix

Race Fans Cavort at Glen

By LES WHITTINGTON

One of the reported 2,000 Syracuse University students who went to Watkins Glen for the Grand Prix last weekend struggled up to the fence near the track and propped himself up for the start.

The cars roared by and the big race was underway. The student stumbled back from the fence and went to sleep.

For him, as for thousands of others, the phenomenon of Watkins Glen ended sometime in early hours of the morning of race day.

Like a good many of the 65,000-odd people—one third of whom were supposedly college students—who streamed into the little town over a four-day period, he had come for the festival.

The Grand Prix was much more than a race. It was a carnival outing, a great outdoor party the proportions of which are seldom matched anywhere.

The campers, who sleep in tents, on sleeping bags, in their cars or on the ground in blankets, began arriving Thursday for the Sunday race.

Probably about half of the race-day crowd was there by Saturday night. That night the carnival hit its peak. The campers in the infield of the track gathered in small groups, and campfires dotted the land.

People sat and sang around the fires, wandered from group to group or descended up on the town, which by now was overflowing with cars and jammed with roaring people.

The townspeople were friendly, the campers were friendly and the police bothered almost no one. Watkins Glen, beyond else, might be considered a great argument for some sort of anarchy.

Out of this mass of people, the majority of whom were—to say the least—happily fortified with some sort of spirits few fights, little turmoil and no rioting or looting.

By Sunday morning some were too tired to watch the 110-lap race. Some people probably forgot about it.

The Orange Poll

Daily Orange staff members will be covering the campus in the next few weeks, asking questions of significance to the university, as well as the state and nation.

1. If you could vote in the New York senatorial election, for whom would you vote?

Pep Rally Heralds Weekend

A pep rally entitled "Orange March" will be held on the main quad Friday. The rally will start at 6:15 p.m. with a car parade from Sims Hall.

Featured at the rally will be the Syracuse University Orange Girl, Gail Fuchs. Miss Fuchs will present a fire-baton twirling show.

Other participants in the rally will include Dean of Hendricks Chapel Charles C. Noble, head football coach Ben Schwartzwalder, the first string football team and both freshmen and varsity cheerleaders.

The SU marching band will entertain and lead the singing of school songs.

Goon Squad dorm representatives will bring their freshman floors and parents to the rally.

Booth Seeks Chair's Return

The residents of Booth 6 wish to inform the student who stole a lounge chair from the floor about 10 days ago that he will have until Monday to return it to its proper place before his name is turned in to the dean of men's office, announced Scott Loll, floor president.

Booth 6 residents will be charged for the chair if it is not returned within the week.

Javits asserted he would fight within the GOP ranks for his beliefs rather than remove himself from the party.

Javits and Republican Sen. Kenneth B. Keating, (NY), both have refused to support Goldwater in his presidential campaign. Javits was at the university to encourage voters to support Keating in his re-election bid.

In response to another question from the crowd, Javits said he believed Goldwater's showing at the polls would be very important to his future control of the party.

He said there would be a great effort by the moderates of the party (in which Javits included Keating and himself) to bring back the political ideas of the party since World War II. These ideas would be "modernized and dynamized" to fit the more modern needs of the nation, he said.

On the civil rights question, Javits said Kennedy only worked on the issue in his role as attorney general after his brother, the late President John F. Kennedy, had issued orders clarifying the administration's stand.

Before this, he noted that he (Javits) and Keating had for "30 months been working our hearts out" to get things dont on this issue. Javits said he and Keating marshaled the Republican forces in Congress to pass the Civil Rights Act.

From May 1961 when the first drafts on the bill were presented, Javits said he and Keating tried to get the administration or the attorney general to take action based on these drafts.

"Only when the Negro demonstrations broke out all over the nation did Kennedy become a great advocate of this bill," Javits said.

In still another instance, Javits recalled that Kennedy, as attorney general, had testified in Senate hearings on the proposed Civil Rights act against a clause which would allow the federal government to intervene in cases of police brutality. When this passage became Title III of the present Civil Rights Act and was enacted as law, Javits said Kennedy then turned and supported this clause.

In this instance, Javits noted that he personally had fought for this clause and suggested that he was one of its originators.

In commenting about himself and the national Republican Party, Javits said he was not elected by the people of New York State as a "blind partisan" but that he represented "the country and its interests first," and joined with other "similarly minded," persons.

He noted here that he had worked with Democrats as well as Republicans when these interests were at stake.

Javits said he felt the Republican Party was "in a transient phase." He commented on those whom he said served as Republicans in many great struggles and those who were the "illustrious sons" of the Republican Party. He said the GOP would someday again reach these points of high honor.

Javits was in Syracuse for a private meeting with Dr. Harry Marley, a Syracuse physician and a member of the SU Athletic Board. He is presently on a campaign drive for Keating and will continue with a full campaign schedule for the next four weeks, according to his aide, Richard Aurelio.

'Footprints' Meets Today

The Footprints committee will hold an open meeting to choose a topic for this year's conference at 4:15 p.m. today, in the Colonial Room of Hendricks Chapel.

The committee, which is responsible for picking a topic and inviting speakers for the annual spring conference, has invited all interested students to attend the meeting.

The purpose of the conference is to "explore ideas, values and problems of man in the contemporary world."

This year's conference will be held March 16-18.

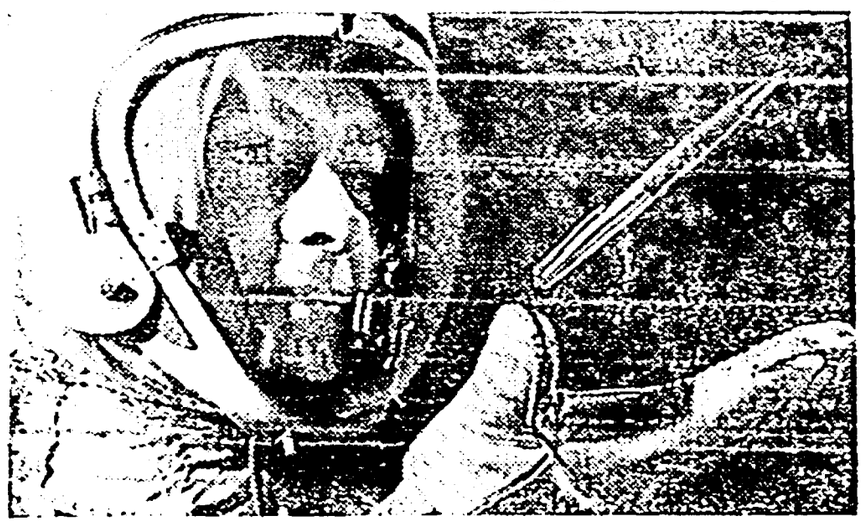
The only pen that defies gravity.



An ordinary pen would draw a blank without gravity to release the ink. The remarkable Parker 61 is designed to write without gravity, which makes it virtually leak-proof. The reason: capillary action defies gravity and suspends the ink in tiny cells in the barrel. Capillary action also fills this remarkable pen. Dip the filling end in ink and in ten seconds your 61 will be set for up to 6 hours of steady writing. Beautiful writing.

Graham Hill Captures Prix Race

WATKINS GLEN — Veteran racer Graham Hill, driving a BRM, V-8, snared U.S. Grand Prix honors here Sunday with a 30-second victory over fellow Englishman John Surtees.

The win strengthened Hill's hold on first place in the world championship points standings. He now boasts 41 points, compared to Surtees' 34, with only the Mexican Grand Prix remaining on the 1964 schedule.

A near record crowd of 65,000 racing enthusiasts, including 2,000 plus from Piety Hill, witnessed the event.

Hill covered the 253-mile track in a record time of 2 hours, 16 minutes, 38 seconds.

Finishing behind Surtees, no. 2 man in a Ferrari V-8, were Jo Siffert of Switzerland, third; America's Richie Ginther, fourth; Walt Hansgen of the U.S.A., fifth; and England's Trevor Taylor, sixth.

Jimmy Clark of England, defending world champ, ran into mechanical difficulty on the 44th lap of the 110-lap race. Clark then switched cars with his Lotus teammate, Mike Spence. The Clark-Spence car finished seventh, completing only 102 laps.

Surtees grabbed the lead at the offset, but was overtaken by Clark the 13th time around. Surtees and Graham Hill battled for second and third spots, with Dan Gurney hot on the leaders in fourth.

Early dropouts included Inne Ireland, with a broken gear selector; Phil Hill, with ignition trouble; and Jack Brabham and Bruce McLaren with engine problems.

After Clark retired to the pits for two laps, Hill took the advantage and led the rest of the way home. Surtees kept the pressure on, but couldn't overtake the mustached Briton, who also won the event last year.

Mechanical difficulties left only six cars running at the finish. Jo Bonnier, Chris Amon, Ron Bucknum, Spence, Lorenzo Bandini, Gurney Clark, Mike Hailwood and Hap Sharp departed one after another.

Of special interest to many fans was the introduction of the Japanese Honda, piloted by Bucknum, in prix competition. The Honda, in its initial season, has met numerous mechanical difficulties on the circuit. Overheating limited Honda's activity to 50 laps Sunday.

Hill, besides earning championship points, also emerged well-off in the money department, collecting the $5,000 first prize. Surtees earned $2,500, while Siffert received $1,250.

In 1965, the prix will return to Watkins Glen the first weekend in October.

UCLA 3-0

'Go East Young Man'

By JIM KLURFELD

The Lambert Trophy, symbolic of Eastern College football supremacy, might wind up on the West Coast this year if Syracuse doesn't beat UCLA Saturday. Because of the Bruins' three wins this year, two have been over eastern powers, Pitt and Penn State.

And, according to SU coach Ben Schwartzwalder, "We'll have to play our best game of the year to win. If we play like we did in the first half of the Holy Cross game, there might not be a second half."

Besides beating Pitt and Penn State, UCLA downed Stanford, 27-20, Saturday night and will invade Archbold Stadium undefeated.

"This UCLA team has jelled real fast." Syracuse scout Roy Simmons explained at Monday's press conference. "And this boy Larry Zeno has a real hot hand. He's got to be considered one of the best quarterbacks we've ever faced."

Zeno, in three games, has gained 646 yards in total offensive and will probably lead the nation in that category this week. He is an accurate passer and shifty runner.

However, the Bruins top lineman, tackle Kent Francisco, was injuried Saturday and UCLA coach Bill Barnes is not sure he will be ready for the Orangemen.

Speaking to the press conference by phone Barnes said, "Each game we've played this year has been a cliff-hanger (UCLA has not won by more than a touchdown) and we've had to scramble to win. But I feel the team has shown steady improvement."

Aside from Zeno, Simmons warned that UCLA has a great pass receiver in Kurt Altenberg. "This boy can break up a ball game," Simmie said.

In planning his early strategy for UCLA Schwartzwalder indicated that Ron Oyer might return to starting right halfback, replacing Billy Hunter.

"We are worried about the defensive left tackle position," the coach explained. "If Everling can go we are o.k., but right now we are not sure how badly he has reinjured his knee. If he can't play Mr. Krock (John) will probably start. He's only a soph but he's coming along."

Low AND Inside

By BILL CRONAUER
Sports Editor

Most Hill grid fans were less than overjoyed with the Piety's first-half performance Saturday at Worcester. And, for that matter, few Orange followers kicked their heels two weeks earlier in Boston.

The Boston College and Holy Cross games were supposedly two of the easier contests on the Syracuse schedule. What with such national powers as UCLA, Pitt and Army staring a club in the face, two New England schools don't make much of an impression.

Why not?

Maybe you can blame it on the players themselves. They're supposed to know that you can't lie down on the job for a minute. They know that you can't look ahead to next week's game, but twice they've done it. Still, it's pretty tough to get "psyched" for Holy Cross.

Or maybe the coaches are to blame. After all keeping the boys keyed up is part of their job. Just saying a team is tough isn't enough. . .coaches have to instill the belief in their players. Granted, sometimes this isn't easy.

Possibly it's the students fault. The big question on campus is not whether we'll win, but by how many points. "We ought to beat them by five touchdowns. . .more than that. . .I'll give you 40 points." It's pretty rough for a player to be up for a game when everyone is predicting a slaughter.

Then there are the newspapers and magazines, spilling out tales of how easy a game this should be. And besides, Sports Illustrated picked us over BC and Cross — which put us in the hole right from the start.

Whoever's fault it is, the Orangemen won't have to worry for a few weeks. But beware VPI!

In Retrospect...

Editor's Note — The following is the third in a series of question and answer sessions between DO sportswriter Howard Schneider and coach Ben Schwartzwalder.

Q—Why was your ground game so ineffective in the first half?

A—Well, the ground game was ineffective for a number of reasons. First, Holy Cross kept changing their defense at the line of scrimmage and in trying to outguess them we made a lot of mistakes. Because of the noise the boys couldn't hear Mahle check-off (change the play at the line) and a good part of the time the fellas weren't sure of just who they were supposed to block. Two of our fumbles were due to the fact that the backs didn't realize they were getting the ball.

Even when we knew what we were supposed to do, however, we didn't do it right. The backs weren't hitting the holes. On the first play of the game, if Hunter goes inside he might go all the way. Then again those Holy Cross players were really fired up and they were hitting pretty good. In the early stages of the game it looked like our fellas were just not interested in hitting.

Q—Why didn't Floyd Little carry the ball more?

A—After Floyd's performance against B.C. Holy Cross was keeping a big eye on Mr. Little. They were giving him far more attention than Jim Nance got. When we used him as a flanker, they pulled their linebackers out with him. We decided that we could get better results with Nance and we did. Even though he picked up six yards a carry, Little wasn't running nearly as hard or sharp as Nance. One game doesn't make a season.

Q—Did the game convince you that in order to win the rest of our games will have to pass more?

A—No, once again one game doesn't make a season. Old Ben has been around along time and I have always realized that a good football team has to run and pass. But that doesn't mean pass because fans want it, or pass indiscriminantly for the sake of passing. The last time one of my teams passed indiscriminantly we played a school by the name of Alabama (1952 Orange Bowl — SU-6, Albama-61). I try to pass enough to win, no more, no less.

Q—Why did you have so much trouble containing the early Holy Cross passing attack?

A—First, we didn't rush. Second, we covered the deep men pretty good, but the ends cutting over the middle killed us. Don't forget we've go three sophomore linebackers and while they're improving with every game, they've got a long way to go. They're learning quickly and we held them pretty good in the second half.

BALLANTINE BEER AND ALE

Art Prof Produces Famous Trademarks

By KAREN ZAGOREN

Everyday the trademarks designed by a Syracuse professor of art are visually absorbed into American minds.

Since 1934 M. Peter Piening, director of the Syracuse University Design Center, has developed more than 60 symbols and trademarks for such well-known firms as Squibb pharmaceuticals, Syracuse China, and the SU Regent Theatre, among others.

Perhaps the most familiar of these designs is the Ballantine beer interlocking pretzel.

Other designs include college seals. Many of his symbols feature circles and squares.

"I think it is unimportant," Piening said in reference to the amount of time necessary to encorporate a design. This may vary anywhere from hours to 10 minutes.

According to Keith J. Kennedy, director of SU publications, Piening has brought consistency to Syracuse University publications. Piening does the design and layout for all official university booklets, pamphlets and newsletters

Kennedy attributes most of Piening's success to his "tremendous imagination." This imagination has buried the designer with anywhere from 20-40 universty jobs to do at a single time.

In trying to work closely with his students and in order to give them practical experience, Kennedy said that Piening tries to run his class like an advertising agency.

Before the construction of the Newhouse Communications Center, Piening's studio was in the basement of Winchell Hall. His studio now is located in the first basement of the center.

Mrs. Kennedy Campaigns For Her Son

By DANIEL RITEY

Mrs. Rose Kennedy, mother of the Democratic hopeful in the New York senatorial race Tuesday night declared that her son, Robert F. Kennedy, would "be an asset to New York State" as its next senator.

Addressing an overflow crowd in the lobby of the Hotel Syracuse, Mrs. Kennedy described her son Robert as "a useful man with zest and zeal" who could work hard for the Empire State.

Speaking softly, almost inaudibly to those in the rear of the crowd, Mrs. Kennedy explained that her family "has always considered government as one of the noblest and greatest of professions."

Mrs. Kennedy remembered her son, the late President John F. Kennedy, as a president who "worked hard for the benefit of the world" and said that Robert would add to his own "courageous" record as attorney general by being a senator who could improve the social, economic and industrial fortunes of New York.

Never mentioning Kennedy's GOP opponent, incombent Kenneth B. Keating, by name, Mrs. Kennedy stressed that her son would bring "advantages to New York and to the United States too."

The mother of three national figures went on to praise the

Sawyer Discusses Presidential Election

By EDWARD KARLIN

"Fellow Repubicans, both in and out of the party. Fellow Democrats, both north and south of the Mason-Dixon line." With this introduction, Michael O. Sawyer, a staunch Republican and associate professor of political science began a citizenship lecture Tuesday on the 1964 presidential election.

Sawyer took a poll of the audience and used the results to furnish the basis for the rest of his lecture. He found most students felt President Lyndon B. Johnson would be elected.

Half of the group thought Sen. Barry M. Goldwater would be defeated by a landslide. About two-thirds of the students believed most voters saw their candidate as the "lesser of two evils." The audience was split in their opinion that intellectuals favored Goldwater.

Before the election, Sawyer said people were predicting that a real choice between the candidates in a presidential election would be good for the country. He asked: "Has this proven to be such a good idea?"

MICHAEL O. SAWYER

Sawyer said that if the election proves to be a landslide, the two-party system might be a thing of the past. He said he believes the Republican Party will become a minority party if the election is lopsided. "Young people should become members of the Republican Party" to prevent this from happening, he said.

Sen. Kenneth B. Keating (R-NY) and his Democratic opponent in the senatorial race, Robert F. Kennedy, will address two citizenship lectures the week of Oct. 19. Kennedy will speak Monday, Oct. 19 while Keating will speak the following night.

The presidential race, according to Sawyer, should be more like the New York senatorial race. He said the voters in this state are voting for a candidate, not against one.

Sawyer said Goldwater has certain virtues that were included in the Puritan ideal. These include "manly courage, hard work, strong conviction in religion, and a serious attitude toward life," he said.

Goldwater also has qualities contained in Jacksonian democracy, Sawyer noted. He listed these as 'faith in the common man, an attempt at Utopia on earth, and fear of a strong central government."

Sawyer told the students that Jackson's final speech in the White House could have been

SU Coed's Day With LBJ

Destination: 1600 Pennsylvania Ave., Washington, D.C.: Hostess: Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson; mode of travel: plane; date leaving: Oct. 3; date returning: Oct. 4.

Housemothers seldom receive such a coed signout card, but Diane Kessler, Association of Women Student president and Syracuse University delegate to President Johnson's school leader buffet and conference, checked out of Chi Omega sorority Saturday in this way.

Her evening with the President began at 5 p.m. Saturday when Miss Kessler and 199 college leaders from across the United States were given security clearance at the White House southwest gate.

New York State had a large collegiate representation, with students from Hamilton College, Colgate University, SU, Harpur College, Russell Sage, College, Skidmore College and Cornell University attending the buffet.

"Walking up to the door, I passed a group of men on the South Lawn," Miss Kessler told the Daily Orange. "It turned out that the President was there."

Following brief talks in the East Room by Secretary of State Dean Rusk, Secretary of Labor Williard Wirtz and Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, President and Mrs. Johnson were introduced to the group.

"This is my real message to you," President Johnson said, 'that a genuinely free society cannot be a spectator society."

DAVIS FUND MEETS TODAY

All organizations interested in working for a campus drive for the Errie Davis Leukemia Fund are asked to send a representative to a meeting at 9 p.m. today in the Chapel House, it was announced by Arthur Schaefer, sophomore class coordinator for the drive.

Another Word To Freshmen

The freshman class meets Thursday to nominate candidates for its class offices. If it is to live up to its vaunted reputation as Syracuse's best class yet, it must produce when it meets Thursday.

It must find leaders who will be content to do more than run a class weekend and make money. It must find leaders who will lead, who will actively take part in the university, who will try to make Syracuse a better place than it is.

It must look for more than personality. It must look for ability — to stand up for one's rights, but to realize one's place; to lead, but also to follow.

In all the freshman class there must be at least one person embodying these qualities. Hopefully there are many more than one.

This freshman class is faced with the task of righting the wrong. This is the class which must cause the university to take a long look at itself and decide which of several courses it will take.

This is the class which will see the most massive development of the university to date, and it is the class which will have the most crucial role in determining the role and position of the student in that university of the not-too-distant future.

It is the leaders of this class who are elected next week who will have the most profound effect on the class' years here, for they will set the tempo for the future. If they act, the class will act. If they are quiescent, the class will follow suit.

The delegates and the candidates who gather Thursday are the selected top representatives of the class. It is they who must think, choose and speak wisely. If freshman class government is to be reduced to a popularity battle, then it is the class of '68 and the entire university who will suffer.

The university, with all its profound sincerity, often overlooks something of direct interest to students. There must be an active check on such oversights. That is the least we can ask of the freshmen.

O Say Can You See

A Reminder

By Ken Auletta

"Any student who publishes or circulates false information about the university is subject to disciplinary action." (Syracuse University General Regulations, number 8, page 9)

Syracuse University is a middled-aged business, related to other middle-aged businesses, which has grown to that point of affluence where it becomes socially respectible to teach underlings proper modes of etiquette. Not all underlings are taught in the same manner. Many learn common courtesies on their own. Some, just some, escape from learning any at all.

Against this subdued melody it need come as something of a surprise when the university's daily blares the bold headline, "SU SUSPENDS EIGHT IN MORALITY CASE." Or last year, when the same Daily Orange lugged the picture of our Chancellor striking an ROTC picketer with his cane on its front page. One can suppose, I suppose, that these temporary lapses are excusable on the grounds that occasional notoriety in the performance of one's true function is of greater virtue than courtesy in the pursuit of another's.

If the producers of the Daily Orange sometimes teach us of the sadness that absence of memory can bring, student leaders constantly remind use of the joy that habit does bring. The name of the university was deemed to have been harmed by both the picture and the caning. For the picture, over 2,000 students signed a petition sympathizing with our Chancellor's act. For the story, student leaders responded with the compassion sons usually reserve for dying fathers.

Said President of Student Government, Carl Corrallo: "it was unfortunate but I wouldn't call it a complete breakdown on campus." Said Chief Justice of Student Court, Frank Richmond: "I only feel ashamed that this had to happen at my university. I only hope that this will serve as an example to the student body and that we'll all realize our obligation to the university." Said President of the Inter-Fraternity Council, George Van Derven: it is "too bad the incident must hit headlines and give the university a bad name." Said Chief Justice of the Inter-Fraternity Council Judicial Board, Donald Thorn: "Perhaps they didn't belong here in the first place."

Responsible student leaders were seeking to lick the wounds of their university, as they did last year—when their university declared that any students arrested for civil disobedience would be placed on automatic disciplinary probation—and student government almost immediately issued a statement in support of their university's new policy. A policy later embarrassingly retracted by the university after sustained threats from the academic community, including one to withdraw the university's accreditation.

The affliction of in loco parentis that is the common burden of all Syracuse University undergraduates, is rarely questioned. From student leaders, resident advisors and head residents to plain students the prevailing view seems that of Pangloss, not Martin.

And like Pangloss one can see them leaning to Candide and exclaiming:

"There is a chain of events in this best of all possible worlds; for if you had not been turned out of a beautiful mansion at the point of a jackboot for the love of Lady Cunegonde, and if you had not been involved in the Inquisition, and had not wandered over America on foot, and had not struck the Baron with your sword, and lost all those sheep you brought from Eldorado, you would not be eating candied fruit and pistachio nuts."

But this is largely diatribe, made to appear the more so by the relative quiet which now visits our campus. And yet words of outrage need not be outrageous...

For those who are new, the coffee will soon perk. For those who are old, memory should suffice to remind you that ours is a university outstanding in its faculty but blemished in its administration.

A university at which a popular Dean casually tosses one of his Geography books to a desperate athlete or friend who discovers that they are short three hours to graduate or near dismissal from school, and tells them to return in a few days with a book report and they need not worry. A university at which a prominent member of the athletic department, when approached last year by the Syracuse University Committee on Equality concerning the scheduling of athletic contests with segregated schools, offered the following serious suggestion: "If you're really interested in equality you'll go out and call the New York Giants—they won by a big score last week."

A university at which now departed Vice President Olson, in reply to a letter I sent to the Chancellor asking him to apologize and disassociate himself from the rather frightening supporters of his caning action, not only returned my original letter with the comment that I should reconsider its contents before it was passed on to the Chancellor, but in a lengthy reply offered the following stunning justification for the caning and the heavy silence which followed: "He had an obligation to the university's guests. One does not apologize to those who bring a 'skunk to a garden party,' to use what seems to me a relevant figure of speech."

Obscenity consists of more than four-letter words and vulgar acts performed in university cottages. Syracuse University rapes her underlings with a persistence that dulls the primary justification for youth: idealism. And yet no Daily Orange headlines scream the chant of immorality; nor do student leaders cry foul. Opinion molders learn to get terribly agitated about many of the wrong things; indeed, the derivation of the word "moral" is from the word "mores," which means "customs."

Might one be so bold as to suggest that this university's yesterday contains material to make Franz Kafka's tomorrow blush. And might a law-abiding citizen insist that those who would play sheriff round-up a posse and discipline all those "responsible" student leaders and other underlings who circulate "false information about the university" in clear disregard of General Regulation number 8, page 9.

Music

Syracuse Symphony

by Martin Cohn

Last Friday night, the Syracuse Symphony inaugurated its fourth season with a concert of music by Piston R. Strauss, and Brahms. And if the first concert of the season is in any way indicative of what is to come, then we can anticipate a year of fine music.

This critic first heard the orchestra three years ago, and the improvement over this space of time has been remarkable. Four years ago, Maestro Kritz was given a group of instrumentalists, many of whom had never played in an orchestra before.

Today, he has transformed them into an orchestra, a job much harder than might be supposed.

The most noticeable improvement heard last Friday was a new, more rich and steady tone quality throughout almost all of the orchestra. The 'cellos produced a beautiful, homogeneous sound that was not often found before this year. The doublebasses provided a firmer support, and while the woodwinds were excellent as in the past, the horns not only avoided mistakes but played with a genuinely smooth and rounded tone that compensated for all memories of raucous noise often heard in former years.

The only section of the orchestra that left something to be desired was the violins, where quality of sound and good intonation were occasionally lost in louder and faster passages. But this is only a minor fault, and one that can and should be corrected.

What is important is that the Syracuse Symphony is a fully professional orchestra capable of playing all types of music well. The credit for this accomplishment goes to the orchestra's players, its manager Ben Snyder, and its conducaor, Karl Kritz. Yet ultimately it is Maestro Kritz who is responsible for what the orchestra can do, and he gave us a good sample on Friday and Saturday nights.

Of all the music played, it was the Brahms second symphony that was most impressive. Karl Kritz confirmed his place among the elite of the world's conductors by giving a beautiful performance that caught the long line of the music. Instead of muddy "Brahmsian" texture, almost perfect clarity was achieved, and in spite of some sloppy ensemble in the first three movements, in the last movement everything welded together, making the music seem even better than it is.

Richard Strauss' suite from "Der Rosenkavalier" showed Maestro Kritz, a Viennese by birth, as a master of the waltz, and it is only neccessary to say that the whole audience was tapping its feet in time to the music. Kritz was not afraid to bring out the vulgarity as well as the sweetness in the music, and there is a lot of both in the suite.

The program opened with Walter Piston's "Toccata" for orchestra, a good curtain raiser. It is certainly the finest piece of music I have ever heard from this composer's hand, and was played with its festive nature kept in mind.

Cakes and Ale

Ham on Wry

by David Sosna

"Anyone Got a Match" is at the University Corner Store.

Max Schulman once again has produced another thouroughly entertaining effort. Blending sex, Negroes, cigarettes and t.v. into a highly skillful potpourri, he molds "Anyone Got a Match." (Harper, Row, $4.95) into a mature and satirical work, much more so than his older rambling pieces.

Jefferson Tatum, lord of the Owens Mill manor and emperor of the smoke-filled Tatum cigarette dynasty, distraught because of falling sales, sets out to remove the ever-present cancer scare.

Revamping his university, Acanthus College, known for its high football ability and low faculty I.Q., he buys (1) the best biologists in the world to prove that food can kill and (2) sixty minutes of the best network t.v. time to tell anyone who will listen.

Like everything he does, there are no dead spots, no doldrums full of bad, one-line gags to fill a page, no inept attempts at "serious writing."

When Shulman decides it's time for some sober commentary he does it well. One of his people on progress: "The world moves in little steps, that's the cadence. Tiny steps. Sometimes imperceptible steps. But forward steps: there's the encouraging thing."

Elsewhere, when the irrepressible Jefferson gets an award for community relations, Shulman explains how the white man feels about his Negro quarter-brother:

J.T. smiles and declares: "I never set no store by the color of a man's skin; it's what's inside that counts. I'm real proud of this award and the first thing tomorrow morning I am sending one million Tatum Cigarettes, absolutely free of charge, to the NAACP."

At times, Shulman tends to get overly concerned with the world's ills but he still keeps it a fast-moving, witty and well-made ham on wry.

Chilean Wins Fellowship

Helwin Gert Peters of Santiago, Chile has been awarded a Panagara (Pan American-Grace Airways) travel fellowship for post graduate work in the field of education at Syracuse University.

The fellowship program, begun in 1937, has helped over 400 students pursue advanced work in their specialized fields in the United States.

Peters is one of 33 students from Argentina, Bolivia, Chile, Ecuador and Peru receiving grants for the 1964-65 academic year.

Special Review Of Pinebrook On WAER

WAER's man at Pinebrook, Dave Finnigan, will present an evaluation of the conference at 6:30 p.m. today. The program on 88.3 FM, will also include background on Student Government.

Interviews with students and administrators at the conference, as well as portions of the main addresses will highlight the special report.

The President's Council, a new organization composed of all university activities, will be discussed and explained. Other subjects to be included are: the parking problem, and new regulations regarding vehicle registration.

Junior Class Launches Drive For Funds to Continue Award

A Class of 1966 scholarship fund drive will be launched Sunday by the junior class..

The drive will aim towards raising funds to award outstanding members of the class of 1966 as determined by their leadership, scholarship and financial need.

"This program has been recognized as a genuinely constructive class endeavor perhaps the most constructive in the history of class government," said William Weller, junior class president.

Because of the nature of the program, the Syracuse University financial aids committee has agreed to match the awards granted this year by the junior class.

The program was initiated after a financial prize given last year by the class of 1966 was enthusiastically received, Weller said. Using the proceeds from the 1963 Homecoming Weekend, the sophomore executive council, working with the financial aids committee, gave the prize to a member of the class of 1966, Margaret (Peg) Griffin.

This prize led to the present establishment of a permanent scholarship in the class name which, if successful, will continue after the class of 1966 graduates, Weller said.

The drive this years depends upon class response, Weller said. Each member of the class is requested to donate at least $1 through a class representative. Living centers will be visited by these representatives for a week starting Sunday.

An overall general drive may then be established and will include parents of all class members.

"As a member of the Student Government who has often heard criticism from students that Student Government never undertakes a worthwhile project, I challenge all of the members of the class of 1966 to prove, now that such a step has been taken, that they are not guilty of apathy," said Weller.

"This drive will benefit only the students. The class executive council is trying to serve them, but they will have to probe their willingness to serve themselves by making the drive a success.

"Never before has a class had such an opportunity for achievement. Should the students fail to achieve, they are only failing themselves," Weller said.

Everling Is All-East Pick

Orange tackle Gerry Everling, who intercepted a Holy Cross pass last weekend and raced 20 yards for a touchdown, yesterday was named to the weekly Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference All-East eleven.

Everling was the third Hillman to earn Eastern honors. Soph halfback Floyd Little was selected ECAC back-of-the-week after the Kansas victory, while end George Fair was given an All-East spot the same week.

Joining Everling on the squad were future Hill opponents Glen Ressler, Penn State guard; Ron Butterfield, Army center; and Pitt quarterback Freddy Mazurek.

Johnson explained his newly-established White House fellowship program which will fill job openings in the offices of the vice president, the cabinet officers and White House staff with outstanding young people "who have high moral character and show future promise."

Heading the White House Fellow Commission, which will be supported by funds from the Carnegie Foundation, is David Rockefeller.

Following his speech, the President, with his wife and daughter Lynda Bird, met and spoke to each student.

The group was then ushered into the Green Room where a buffet table stretched the length of the room. A stand-up dinner consisting mainly of a rice dish with beef and shrimp, ginger ale, coke, coffee and pecan or cherry pie was served, Miss Kessler said.

Lynda Bird read a welcome to the guests and invited them to an hour of entertainment by the Chad Mitchell Trio, comedian Bob Newhart and the Stan Getz Quartet in the East Room.

The students were allowed relatively free run of the lower level of the White House.

"We visited the downstaires library and several other rooms and were hardly aware that there were security (Secret Service) men around," Miss Kessler said.

"I was very impressed with the reception and the White House itself," Miss Kessler said, adding: "I couldn't help but think of the man who lives there and the history of the men who had stayed there before."

Parents Special: Goon Spectacular

Traditions Commission has really been working hard for this Parents' Weekend, and one of the items they've come up with is a must for the "don't miss" column.

An all-new Goon Show offers a special treat -a masical version of the changing campus life at Syracuse.

Show directors, Susan Quinlan and Edmund Gelgud, promise a lot of fun as John Pear as the professor, and Robert Chisholm as the bewildered student romp through their antics.

And there'll be additional entertainment in solos by Rose Drill, Louise Galligan and Andrea Silver.

The script for the show was written by several members of th Traditions Commission with music by Donald Zimmerman and Patrick Hagerty. Bruce Hart wrote the lyrics, and Howard Wyeth, a junior music major arranged the music.

Tradition Commission invites all parents and students to attend. Showtime is 9 p.m. Fri-

Dance Class Registration

Final registration for Syracuse University ballroom dance class will be held 7:15 p.m. today in the recreation lounge of the Women's Bldg.

Approximately 75 students have enrolled for the free class which will be held from 7:30-9 p.m. every Wednesday.

More girls are urgently needed to assist as dance partners. Walt Medicis, director of the class, said. He asked that all students who wish to assist as instructors whether they've had experience or not, sign up with Miss Steubing during registration.

SG Reviews Bookstore Theft Cases

No action was taken against two students at Student Court last week for removing merchandise from the bookstore, according to Frank Richmond, chief justice.

The two students, a freshman and a sophomore, admitted guilt, but explained that they had unintentionally removed the merchandise.

The court felt that the students were telling the truth, and consequently no punitive measures were taken, Richmond said.

The two cases were not related.

UCLA'S LARRY ZENO

Bruin Larry Zeno: Colorblind Passer

By BILL CRONAUER
Sports Editor

UCLA quarterback Larry Zeno likes to throw passes. And he does a pretty good job of it, too, as witnessed by his No. 1 national ranking in total offense, a category where passing yardage predominates.

But there is more to Zeno's passing than meets the eye.

You see Larry Zeno is colorblind . . he has trouble telling blue jerseys from gold jerseys from orange jerseys, etc.

Then how does he throw to his own receivers instead of the defenders, one might ask. The answer is simple — spray their jerseys with a chemical substance.

Zeno's colorblindness was first detected during the latter stages of his sophomore year. That season he completed 36 passes, but only 25 of those went to his own teammates.

It was then that Bruin coaches discovered the problem, though they waited until the opening of the 1964 campaign to correct it.

This year UCLA officials have sprayed the uniforms of their pass catchers with a secret chemical solution, thereby making them distinguishable to Mr. Zeno.

"We oughta find out what he's using," Orange coach Ben Schwartzwalder jokingly remarked.

With his colorblindness remedied on the gridiron, Zeno ranks as one of the top quarterbacks in the land.

"He's as good a quarterback as we've played in my time here," Ben declared. "He's better than Jack Concannon and Roger Staubach and he outplayed Pitt's Fred Mazurek earlier this year."

Orange scout Roy Simmons says Zeno has "a wonderful arm — a better arm than Mazurek. He's top-notch."

If Zeno himself isn't enough, he has a horde of pass receivers to depend on. Foremost of the group is 6-2, 194-pound Kurt Altenberg, a junior left flanker.

Zeno, who checks in at 6-0, 185, limits his service to the offense. The only trouble is that he does everything on offense — run, pass and kick. During his two varsity seasons, Zeno has collected 12 field goals and 11 points after touchdown conversions.

SU Second In Eastern Grid Ranks

Syracuse bolted into the national football rankings yesterday, earning the No. 10 spot on the United Press International weekly grid poll.

The Orangemen rank second in the Lambert Trophy race to the Cadets of Army.

SU jumped from 17th to 10th on UPI with its 34-8 victory over Holy Cross last weekend. The Hill forces were given honorable mention status by the Associated Press.

UCLA, this week's Archbold Stadium opponent, climbed to ninth on the UPI slate after dropping Stanford, 27-20. The Uclans also rated honorable mention on AP.

In the Eastern ratings, SU snared four first place votes to three for Army, but finished with an 8.3 average to 9.0 for Army. Other Eastern clubs, in order, were Boston College, Navy, Pitt, Villanova, Dartmouth, Yale, Princeton and Brown.

SU'S PAUL HOULE

Paul Houle Earns Starting Tackle Nod

Orange coach Ben Schwartzwalder will add a new starter to his line this week, with senior tackle Paul Houle starting on the defensive unit. Hopes are that Houle can hold to a minimum the UCLA Bruins when they meet this Saturday in Archbold Stadium.

Houle, a 210-pounder from Manchester, N.H., will replace Steve Chomyszak at right tackle, after seeing some action against Holy Cross last week.

The veteran New Englander comes off the sick list after missing the first two games on the Piety schedule. Paul had been recovering from an appendectomy since August.

"Houle should be able to do the job for us," said Schwartzwalder at his weekly press conference. "He has some experience. Paul isn't a 240-pounder, but he moves around pretty well."

In keying his defenses for Bruin quarterback Larry Zeno, Schwartzwalder commented that "Our tackles must have some real pursuit. Houle will help at one side....but we're not sure about the other."

Other shifts in the defensive platoon were also announced. The left tackle spot will be manned by Dave Archer, local boy. However, the 220-pound senior has been slowed by injuries this season. Schwartzwalder indicated that Joe Dziekonski and big Chuck Scott may also get some work at the strong side tackle post this week.

Ben expressed his determination to go along with his linebackers. "Our linebackers will make some mistakes because they are young, but we'll stick with them," he said.

Offensively Ron Oyer will probably replace Billy Hunter at the right halfback slot. Hunter is slowed by injuries and played below par at Holy Cross.

Also set for backfield activity are a pair of rookies, Dan Healey and Terry Roe.

Meet Freshman QBs

The end of this football season will signal the departure of senior quarterbacks Walley Mahle and Rich King. Thus, it is not strange Orange coaches are casting anxious glances at this year's freshman crop of team commanders.

The looks fall upon Ed Reardon, Don Bullard and Larry Csonka, who are doing the quarterbacking for the Tangerines.

Reardon, at 6-2, 195 pounds, hails from Holbrook, Mass. At his high school, Reardon won many awards for his outstanding achievements. These included making All-State quarterback.

In addition, the coaches of all the high schools in his area choose him for their league's All-Star team. On his own squad, Ed served as captain and garnered the Most Valuable Player prize.

Football was not his only sport, however, as he competed in basketball for two years as a center and forward and baseball for four years as a pitcher, shortstop and first baseman. Here at S.U. he plans to major in business administration.

Bullard, from Westfield, Mass., is another impressive Syracuse prospect. tA 6-2, 190 pounds, he can do the job. In high school he placed on his all-conference team. Coach Jim Shreve singles him out for another important quality: "Don has an excellent gift for leadership that the others have not yet developed."

For those fans who groan with every [illegible] sees reports that Bullard is "a very fine punter."

Rounding out the trio is Larry Csonka, 6-3, 215 pounds. Csonka also was an excellent performer at Tonawanda, where he made all-conference back.

In the Tangerine opener at Manlius, Csonka played fullback on offense and tackle on defense. And now he's a quarterback.

Shreve showed cautious optimism in commenting on these boys. He said, "They are all making equal progress. Their ball handling is good, but they are having difficulty throwing under pressure."

However, Shreve emphasized that although they are coming along, it is at a "low level" and that they are far from ready for anything resembling varsity grid action.

Still, there's nearly a year left to prep for the big time.

Freshman Nominating Convention To Choose Candidates Tonight

The class of 1968 is getting in the swing of campus politics slowly but surely. After electing floor officers in the past few weeks, they will now meet to select candidates for class offices.

Delegates from each floor and cottage will represent their constituents of the freshman nominating convention, 7 p.m., today in 207 Hall of Languages.

Cottages are asked to send two delegates each. Floors should send three delegates.

Freshmen will elect their officers Thursday, Oct. 15 after four days of campaigning by the candidates selected at the convention.

Election rules will be decided by a committee of 11 freshmen who were named Wednesday by Student Government Election Commissioners S. Richard Fischman and Michael Kromley.

See story on election procedures, page 7.

The committee system was instituted three years ago after the present senior class rebelled. They refused to hold their frosh elections under the upperclass-dominated Campus Alliance and United Students Parties.

The delegates will select three candidates for each office to

Hill Receives HEW Grant

A $249,120 grant from the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare has been awarded to Syracuse University for the purpose of setting up a model information center for adult education.

The award was announced by Alexander N. Charters, vice-president for continuing education, and Wayne Yenawine, director of libraries.

The center is expected to be developed without delay, according to Charters. Literature in the field which has accumulated over the years will be readily available to researchers and administrators.

This prototype system for a National Adult Education Library might also become a model for use in other parts of the world, he added.

Roger DeCrow of Chicago and Diana J. Ironside of Canada have been named director and assistant director respectively.

DeCrow, former head of the Clearing House for Adult Education of the Center for the Study of Liberal Education for Adults, has had extensive experience in the library field.

Miss Ironside formerly was information officer for the Canadian Association for Adult Education in Toronto.

The bulk of the program will be SU's library of professional materials gathered over the past 15 years and including the former adult education library of the Fund for Adult Education, Charters said.

The combined library has more than 1,700 books, 500 doctoral dissertations on microfilm, 575 tapes, 250 recordings of adult education subjects, 155 journal files and 350,000 pamphlets and other unbound source material. "In no field has there been proper analysis and classification of such peripheral materials," Charters noted.

Yenawine said that DeCrow and Miss Ironside would seek the advice and suggestions of people both in the library and adult education fields.

"They wil be devising ways to catalogue this important material to make their system meaningful not only at Syracuse University but in libraries and to administrators of adult educational programs throughout the world," he added.

Laubach Marks Eightieth Birthday

Dr. Frank C. Laubach internationally known teacher of the illiterate, will be honored Thursday, at a dinner marking his 80th birthday.

Laubach, founder of the Laubach Literacy Fund whose headquarters have been in Syracuse since 1950, developed the 'Each One Teach One" program which has taught an estimated 60 million people in 103 countries to read.

The dinner will be the fourth in a series of national celebrations honoring Laubach, according to Dr. David Mason, assistant director of the fund. It is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. at Sims Dining Hall and is open to the public, Mason said. Mrs. James Bangs, 430 Nottingham Rd., Syracuse is ticket chairman.

Laubach's son Robert, executive director of the fund, is a lecturer in the Syracuse University School of Journalism.

The Laubach Fund helps train teachers and writers for new literates, teaches adults to read and write their own language and provides teaching materials and follow-up reading material.

Still active on the eve of his 80th birthday, the elder Laubach travels widely, describing his program and generating interest among humanitarian and church groups. During the past year he visited India and Mexico to inspect Laubach Fund projects

Mum Pick-up Booths Set

Chrysanthemums and "I am a Father" buttons for Parents' Weekend will continue to be sold by the senior class executive council for the remainder of the week.

Orders will be taken 9 a.m.-1 p.m. today and Friday in the lobby of Huntington B. Crouse Hall.

Pre-paid orders may be picked up in front of Flint, Day, Dell-Plain, Shaw, and in Walnut Park 9-11 a.m. Saturday. They will also be distributed 9 a.m.-1 p.m. on the quad. Students are requested to bring receipts to the station closest to their living centers.

Mums and buttons will also be on sale at these times.

SENIOR 'ON' PIX

All seniors who have not yet had pictures taken for the Onondagan must keep their scheduled appointments if pictures are to appear in the yearbook. Any who have missed appointments should report to 105 Journalism Center for new appointments.

Geraniums Rule In NCC Library

Everything may not be coming up roses, but quite a few geraniums seem to be coming up, according to librarians at the Newhouse Communications Center.

Not only geraniums, but laughter—and sometimes tempers—seem to be on the rise also. Tempers, that is of students using the Newhouse library.

Some students, when entering the library, have pondered over piles of dark brown dirt which they find in striking contrast to the bright orange rug.

Others have found their studying distrubed by the rustling of curtains and not-too-distant noises.

Noises, coming perhaps from the other side of those rustling curtains.

If they waited patiently—or impatiently—for a few minutes, many of them saw huge cartons overflowing with bright red flowers emerge from the curtains.

Somewhere beneath those boxes were usually a pair—sometimes even two pairs—of legs.

The culprits weren't really hijackers. Most were students saving the flowers from the autumn frost.

Realizing that geraniums only live one year and will not survive the winter, the office of Wesley C. Clark, dean of the School of Journalism, granted permission to several students to remove the flowers, Shirley E. Christian, Clark's secretary said.

Unfortunately, the only means of access to the patio where the flowers are planted is a door which leads into the library.

Afraid that too many students were being distrubed by the would-be botanist, permission has been temporarily discontinued, according to Evelyn E. Smith, head librarian.

Further arrangements may be made in the future during hours when the library is not open, Miss Smith said.

Political Researchers

Bailey, Campbell Work for Dems

ALAN K. CAMPBELL

Maxwell School professors do not only theorize about politics — they also become deeply involved in local, state and national political campaigns.

Two of them currently are engaged in research for the Democratic Party. They are Stephen K. Bailey, dean of the school, and Dr. Alan K. Campbell, political science porfessor.

Bailey and Prof. Richard Neustadt of Columbia University are co-chairmen of the Educators-for-Kennedy organization.

It is composed of professors from colleges and universities in New York who feel that Kennedy "can do most for the state," Bailey said.

Bailey has also offered his assistance to the organization backing Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey for vice president. He is attempting to identify "positive themes" rather than "whistle-stop" material.

Bailey has recently completed a memorandum for the Humphrey organization in which he sought to "overcome the foreign and domestic image that the only thing we care about is having three electric toothbrushes in every bathroom."

In the memorandum, Bailey cited the vast amounts of money being spent on education and cultural pursuits, including figures on museum attendance and the sums spent on the purchases of classical records.

Campbell has been co-chairman of the platform of resolutions sub-committee of the New York State Democratic Committee. He testified be-

STEPHEN K. BAILEY

Ken, Bobby And SU

The announcement that Sen. Kenneth B. Keating and Robert F. Kennedy will deliver citizenship lectures to SU students next week is another feather in the hat of the Maxwell School and the citizenship program.

The citizenship program on the campus has constantly brought top national figures to campus with an emphasis on education rather than controversy — and there can be no better education to the issues in this year's Senate race than by listening to both major candidates next week.

Hopefully the former attorney general will be able to tell first-hand why he is running in New York and why he feels he can do a better job than Keating. Hopefully Keating will attempt to show why his record merits re-election.

In any case, the mere appearances and speeches of the two men will be a wonderful opportunity for any student — whether a student of government or a student of university education.

Fifty Years

Fifty years ago today, on Thursday, Oct. 8, 1914, 1,200 Syracuse University students mobbed a university building for a massive display of spirit to urge their team over Princeton in the year's big game.

The Daily Orange called it "one of the best meetings in the history of the university." The spirit and enthusiasm described in the story would never happen today, but it is comforting to know that institutions such as big-time athletics aren't just a thing of today.

Much of what happened fifty years ago today makes it possible for us to live in peace and comfort. Some of us forget, every so often, exactly how much has been given to us by the events of days such as Oct. 8, 1914.

It was just one day out of countless days that have marked our past and will mark our future, but we know that here and elsewhere someone will look back to a day like Oct. 8, 1914 or the spirit of that day and realize how much of what is couldn't have been possible except for what was.

Millstones and Milestones

Comments

By Dan Stone

This week, for variety's sake, I'd like to switch from fact to fancy (though some would suggest I'd done that months ago) to take a look at the upcoming weekend. For those of you who have to stay in your rooms and study this is a capsule review of what you'll be missing and I hope that those of you who are out to watch can use this summary of sights and quotes as a guide.

This, of course, is Parents' Weekend which, like Christmas, comes but once a year. The vast majority of parents visiting campus are the parents of freshmen—upperclass parents have sworn in most cases they will never suffer through another one. As a result this is the first time since their offspring began their college careers that parents have had a chance to see them.

Perhaps having lived through three of these affairs has made me cynical but here are some of the things you can expect:

Students of photography who are looking for a study in pure pathos should be prepared to snap a father standing on the front porch of a cottage looking at DellPlain, Booth, or what in terms other than the campus vernacular, is called Haven Hall.

Parents' comment: "Irving, why don't you live there? Should we have sent that payment in before August?"

This, of course, is the first chance that parents have had to spend anytime with their son's or daughter's new roommate. However, by this time the "first week blues" letters have gone out and by letter they have been thoroughly introduced to the roommate.

Comment: "Could that fellow really be the one that drinks, stays out to all hours, refuses to study or wash?" And of course the roommates parents are saying "could that fellow really..."

Knowing full well that some parents in an attempt to get that old college spirit will insist on eating in university dining halls, food service goes into a special emergency plan known as Parents' Weekend Special.

Comment: "I don't know why you complain about the food. Why, these nice tablecloths and this big steak..."

When parents first brought their children to Syracuse, Marshall street was covered with "Welcome Frosh" signs, orange and blue bunting and the like and a cursory examination revealed little more than that. But since that first week a strange transformation has taken place. The regulars have returned. Sandals and sneaks have reappeared. The folk-ethic has again established itself. On opening day there was little comment. Today,

Comment: "You eat there on Sunday night?"

Activity on opening day centers around the dorms. But by now students have joined extracurricular activities. After carefully briefing their parents on the vital role they play in the organization they have chosen, they take them to where they work.

Comment: "In that dirty little metal shack?"

But food service, dirty shacks, and roommates are the body of the university. It is possible to look deeper, to find what makes a university's heart beat. Perhaps the most accurate reflection of the spirit with which a big university views its members is found, oddly enough, in the price of football tickets.

Syracuse has a good football team. It is rated by United Press International this week as the tenth best eleven in the country. In preseason polls it was rated a bit higher than that. It is a team that can always be counted on to give at least an exciting half of football. UCLA is rated ninth in that same poll and all indications point to the fact that this should be the top home game of the year.

We are often reminded most acridly by the scheduling of major games in New York, that Archbold is too small a stadium for a major power. UCLA will be a sell-out.

At this game will be the parents. These are the same parents who a month ago were asked to foot one of the largest tuition bills in the East. These are the same parents who just that morning were asked to contribute to a new infirmary. Tuition bills will come again. Book-Store bills will be regular. These will be paid. Other requests will come for donations. These will be considered.

Large donators to the university get to see the game from the Chancellor's box.

And yet the one weekend when parents are the guests of the university, the one weekend when they are shown what they are getting for their money, they are asked to pay the full $5 for a seat to see a football game.

That goes without comment.

Conference

To The Editor:

The big day has arrived, the press conference issue is out in the open at last, and I am glad to see it.

Last year's Pinebrook Conference was not the first to suggest this procedure, and neither doubtless, was I. But my suggestion for exactly the same type of much needed communications channel did preceed the 1963 conference by a considerable margin.

It was made in a letter to the DO dated I believe, Sept. 21, of last year. Using some of the same phrasing of Tuesday's editorial, it laid down the scheme for the press conference between the administration and students, suggesting weekly meetings with heavy publicity, so that both interests could stop misunderstanding and fooling each other as to their responsibilities and intentions.

This letter was not published despite my utmost efforts to persuade the then current DO staff to do so. No truly meaningful reason was ever given.

Then the subject was mentioned in the 1963 Pinebrook, but little notice was ever paid to it.

Later in the year, I advanced the same proposal to the Sword of Damocles. It was similarly rejected. The then operator of the Sword seemed to believe that the idea reflected immature and naive thinking, and that it would take more than discussion to affect the campus in any way.

So now this is a new year, and suddenly the idea is fashionable. No longer is it "too hot" for the DO to handle. No longer is it "too immature" to merit respected consideration.

I believe that this says something we can all be proud of about the increasing maturity, perception and responsiblity of our student government, our administration and our newspaper.

Published Monday through Friday during the academic year by the students of Syracuse University. Offices located at 200 Brooklea Drive, Fayetteville, New York.

THE NEW LOST CITY RAMBLERS, shown above, will perform at 8:30 p.m. and 10:30 p.m. today and this weekend at The Folk Gallery. Tickets are available at the Folk Gallery box office, 121 McBride St.

Folk Trio To Appear In Syracuse

The New Lost City Ramblers, folk music trio, will appear at 8:30 p.m. and 10:30 p.m. today and this weekend at The Folk Gallery.

Formed in 1958, the folk trio is composed of Mike Seeger, John Cohen and Tracy Schwartz. Their music, abounding in high spirits and good humor, is in the tradition of the old-time string bands of the southern mountains.

The New Lost City Ramblers have recorded many albums on the Folkways label and Mike Seeger, half-brother of folk singer Pete Seeger, has recorded a number of solo albums.

The group has recently made appearances at UCLA, University of California, Swarthmore College, the University of Chicago and the Newport Folk Festivals.

In describing their performances, Down Beat Magazine wrote: "The New Lost City Ramblers are an exciting, accomplished and thoroughly professional group. They let the music itself convert you. And it's hard to resist its appeal, it's so virile, exciting and unabashedly happy."

Tour Group To Present Shakespeare

National Players will present two Shakespearean plays this weekend at the University Regent Theatre. "Twelfth Night" will be performed at 8:30 p.m. Friday and 4 p.m. Sunday and "Hamlet," 8:30 p.m. Sunday.

From Washington, D.C., the group is now in its 16th year of presenting classics. Last year the players performed "The Taming of the Shrew" and "Electra" at the Regent.

Tickets are available at the University Regent box office for the evening performance at $3, $2.50 and $2. Special Sunday matinee rates are $2.50, $2 and $1.50.

Caught in Passing

And So Good-Nite

by Jeff Zients

If you are alone on a Saturday evening or Friday evening for that matter here is the campus' best entertainment value. Many laughs, a touch of pathos, gross vicarious pleasure, if you are so inclined, and the cost is a walk up to the Mount at curfew.

As the lights blink on and off it signals the end and the beginning. The end of what you will never find out but don't let it bother you. It is now that the true spectacle begins, the drama is there, the irony is there and, if you are smart, you are there, alone. You aren't perverted and you aren't an outcast. If you can't resist the physical just grab a convenient girl, she will never know the difference anyway. But for more stimulation of a healthier nature just observe. You might bring a camera.

For those of you who can't or won't give up a nite on the social whirl for science let me take you there in a brief description.

As you approach Flint or Day (take your pick but Day is more civilized) it begins on the sidewalks, along the road and even on the stairs.

Inside the dorm it looks like 350 consecutive auditions for beach scenes in "From Here to Eternity." Every conceivable position, every piece of furniture used to its ultimate advantage, every section of floor space used up, everyone very quiet. It's easy to see the blind dates. They are talking or the guy is smoking nervously, counting seconds. Then its time for everyone out. One last peck and the guys en masse pile into their cars or start on foot for the dingle and home. The girls go upstairs and alledgedly to sleep.

Take 600 college students, have them forced by tradition and example to exhibit themselves, make them wait until the last possible second to say that final goodnite, and mix well with the fact that all women must be in by 10 p.m. on Sunday and you have the Mount on Saturday night at curfew time. All privacy in affection is gone and all importance in a wonderfully meaningful gesture is lost.

Hill Seal Engraved On Checkbook

A new use of the Syracuse University seal has been devised by the Marine Midland Bank, an old friend to the SU students who have taken advantage of the savings and checking account services this bank offers.

In its effort to be friendly and helpful, the bank has added a bit of flair and come up with personalized checkbook covers for SU students. So far, student reaction to the checkbooks has been one of pleased surprise.

The checkbook cases, just issued two weeks ago, are either blue or orange, depending upon the student's choice, with a white seal of the university on the front.

Acording to Michael Greci, manager of the University Office of Marine Midland, the idea originated in the advertising department.

Although issued too late to present to the new students opening accounts immediately upon their arrival here, the check covers are readily available at the office on South Crouse avenue to all who care to come in and switch, he said. No fight is necessary.

Mrs. Rose Kennedy campaigned in Syracuse Tuesday for her son, Robert F. Kennedy, a candidate for the Senate from New York State. Mrs. Kennedy spoke in the Hotel Syracuse on one of three stops. The other cities in which she campaigned were Utica and Newburgh.

SU to Hold Police Graduation

New York State Lieutenant Governor Malcolm Wilson will be the principal speaker at the annual commencement of the New York State Police Academy. The commencement will be held at 1 p.m. today in Hendricks Chapel.

A total of 130 candidates will receive their commissions in the ceremony.

When asked the reason why the ceremony would take place at Syracuse University, Lt. R.J. Cummings, county chairman for this ceremony, said the Chapel was a most appropriate place for such a function. He noted that two previous commencements had taken place at the chapel in 1962.

Other speakers, for the commencement, will be Arthur Cornelius Jr., superintendent of the New York State Police; Walter F. Waring, chief of police of Lynbrook and president of the State Association of Chiefs of Police; and Sheriff B. John Tutuska of Erie County.

Dean of Hendricks Chapel Charles C. Noble, will give the invocation and benediction.

Heat Fails In Prefabs

Prefabs in the area next to Archbold Stadium were without heat Monday night from a break in nearby steam pipes.

The pipes, set under the road running parallel to the stadium, "experienced unusual corrosion" according to Building and Grounds Superintendent Olgean S. Ohab.

The break started as a small leak last week and developed into a more serious condition. The area is currently under excavation and new pipes with standard insulating material are being installed, Ohab said.

The area will be accessible for normal traffic by Saturday, just in time for Parents' Weekend and the UCLA football game, he added.

Traffic Tuesday morning was rerouted from that section because it would have interfered with trucks delivering construction materials to the site of the law school addition, according to Leo J. Graszler, assistant director of Syracuse University safety and security.

SIA Education Plan Set for Hill Students

Foreign interchange programs will set the theme of Syracuse-in-Asia's plans for the coming year.

SIA's President MaryAnn Franzino said, "SIA is vital to the campus because of the increased political awareness in Asia and its problems."

SIA will try to give the Syracuse student a better idea of Asia, she said. A series of Asian speakers will discuss problems confronting their country.

This informative program will present speakers from Ceylon, the Phillippines, Korea, Indonesia and India, she noted.

SIA will have a meeting at 7 p.m., today, in the living room of the Chapel House, 711 Comstock Ave. This meeting is open to all students and those interested in joining the group. A film will be shown, titled "People to People."

Now on display in the library is a collection of Asian books. Peter Osgood, SIA advisor, described this display as "informative and interesting."

The books on display and other products of manufactured in Asia will be on sale Dec. 7-18 in the Koffee Korner of Hendricks Chapel.

The proceeds from this sale will go toward supporting a student from Asia who will come to Syracuse or a Syracuse student who will go to Asia. Lloyd Mowry the current student benefiting from this program, is studying and teaching in Formosa, Osgood said.

Next year a student from Asia will come to the U.S. as Lowry completes the two years of the program. Miss Franzino said, "SIA brings American and Asian students together so they can bridge the gap between the two groups."

Convo to Hear Home Ec Prof

Ruth Hall, director of the University of Arizona School of Home Economics, will address Home Economic students on "The Opportunities and Obligations of Home Economics" at 4 p.m. today in Gifford Auditorium, Huntington B. Crouse Hall.

Dr. Hall received her bachelor of science degree from Ohio State University. Both her master of science degree and doctorate were achieved at Purdue University where her major field of study was family economics-home management.

Before going to the University of Arizona, Mrs. Hall held posts at Ohio State University, University of Tennessee, Michigan State University, Oklahoma State University, Purdue University and the University of Colorado.

Presently Mrs. Hall is president of the American Home Economics Association and the Arizona Home Economics Association.

OUR FUTURE IN COLOR TV LOOKS ROSY

The Color TV market is in full bloom—and GT&E along with it.

The reason? Our Sylvania subsidiary has made dramatic advancements in the performance standards of color TV sets.

In developing these new receivers, Sylvania drew upon the vast research facilities of GT&E. One result: the Sylvania "Color Bright 85" picture tube using a revolutionary new red phosphor that increases brightness on the average of 43 percent over the industry standard.

Our Sylvania Electronic Components Group is one of the two largest suppliers of receiving tubes and picture tubes . . . used by 7 out of 10 TV set makers.

As a major factor in all phases of communication through sight and sound, it is small wonder that GT&E has become one of America's foremost corporations.

If you're looking for a young, aggressive company with no limit to its growth, you may wish to view GT&E in the light of your own future.

Frosh Convention Opens

campaign for election from Sunday to Thursday.

The convention held in 1963 lasted five hours. The keynote speaker at the time was Alfred H. Cope, assistant dean of the College of Liberal Arts.

As in other campaigns on the SU campus, this class will be expected to hold its share of coffees and mixers. The class of '67 held a twister on the night before their election last fall.

Posters and pins, nametags, and meetings to discuss their candidacy in the cottages and on the floors are other customs the nominees will have to quickly accustom themselves to for this campaign.

"Being an officer of the class is a big responsibility," Carl Corrallo, Student Government president noted. "The freshman class is the most active class on campus."

Corrallo noted that the '68 president would sit on the SG Presidents' Council and represent his class in any matters SG brings up.

The biggest undertaking of the class and its officers will be Freshman Weekend, Dec. 11-13, Corrallo said. He added that the president of the class will become a member of the Syracuse University Social Committee which reviews all budgets and social programs.

At the convention, presidential candidates will be allowed to speak for five minutes. The vice presidential candidates will be allowed four minutes each and the secretary and treasurer candidates three minutes.

Freshmen serving on the committee are Audrey Berman, Barbara Farrar, Kermit Frazier, Hannah Gedalecia, Harriet Himoff and Paul Jacoby.

Also Leslie Lesavoy, Edward Lieberman, Lynne NewHouse, Paul Simon and Marcia Meinstein.

Miss Berman is a resident of Day 1, enrolled in the College of Liberal Arts and comes from Newton, Mass.

Miss Farrar, a resident of Day 5, comes from New York City. She is also enrolled in the College of Liberal Arts.

Frazier is enrolled in the School of Engineering and comes from Washington, D.C. He is a resident of Watson West 3.

Miss Gedalecia comes from New Rochelle and is in the College of Liberal Arts. She lives on Flint 2C.

Miss Himoff, a student in the College of Liberal Arts, comes from White Plains and is a resident of Flint 2C.

Another resident of Watson West 3, Jacoby comes from Paterson, N. J. and is in the College of Liberal Arts.

A resident of Allentown, Pa. Lesavoy is enrolled in the College of Liberal Arts and lives on Watson West 3.

Lieberman, still another resident of Watson West 3, comes from Massapequa. He is enrolled in the College of Liberal Arts.

Living in Mott Cottage, Miss Newhouse hails from West Orange, N.J. and is in the College of Liberal Arts.

Simon, a resident of Watson 4, comes from Springville and is also in the College of Liberal Arts.

Miss Weinstein, who comes from Charlotte, N.C., is a resident of Day 4. She is in the College of Liberal Arts.

Frosh Plan Procedures

The newly organized Freshman Elections Commission moved into action Wednesday to set up nominating convention procedures and campaign limitations for frosh candidates.

The convention, to be held 7 p.m. today, in 207 Hall of Languages, will select three candidates for each freshman office. Each delegate will be allowed a maximum of three votes for a position.

The commission chose Paul Simon and Lynn Newhouse as chairman and co-chairman of the convention respectively. Simon and Miss Newhouse, with the other members of the commission, will coordinate the speeches and voting procedures.

A question period will follow the talks of the office-seekers. The presidential and vice presidential hopefuls will be allowed three questions; secretary and treasurer, two.

Campaigning will open noon Sunday and close Wednesday at midnight. Campaigners will be permitted a budget of $10 each and must submit itemized expense accounts to the commission by noon Wednesday.

Elections will be held October 15.

Low AND Inside

By BILL CRONAUER
Sports Editor

Any college football coach will tell you that experience wins ball games. This season UCLA has experience. . .and they're winning ball games.

A possible key to the Bruin success is a process known as "redshirting," whereby players are held out of varsity competition for one year.

"Redshirting" is most popular on the West Coast and in the Southeastern Conference. This is partially due to the complex feeder system of junior colleges in these areas.

Why do schools "redshirt"?

One reason is to allow a boy to gain maturity. A player sketch in the UCLA press book sums up the purpose: "Winslow Gaines will probably be redshirted this season so that he can gain needed experience and physical maturity."

During this "redshirt" perod, players participate in junior varsity scrimmages, adding vital experience. "You wouldn't believe how much an extra year helps players," Hill coach Roy Simmons commented.

Another reason is to save boys for the following year at positions capably filled at present. Players who would get little chance to perform, and lose a year of eligibility besides, are put on junior varsity squads with everything to gain.

In 1961, Syracuse joined with Eastern powers Pitt, Penn State and West Virginia in outlawing "redshirting" among themselves. Last year, the Southern Conference, of which West Virginia is a member, decided to ban the practice, effective with players of sophomore status this season.

However, these schools are the exception rather than the rule. SU's Ben Schwartzwalder has remarked, "The idea is fine. The only trouble is we're 10 years ahead of the rest of the country."

The Syracuse Athletic Department contends that "redshirting" can often be a detrimental practice. In its worst form, it calls for the purposeful lengthening of a boy's educational level over five years.

A special provision under the Eastern agreement provides an added year of eligibility to players injured before the opening of the season, or in the first game, and who sit out the remainder of the campaign. Orange halfback Mike Koski fits into this category.

UCLA has three former "redshirts" on its starting offensive line. These include ace pass receiver Kurt Altenberg (redshirted in 1962), top-notch center Prentice O'Leary (in 1961) and guard Barry Leventhal (in 1962). In addition, over a dozen other Bruins have at one time or another been placed in the "redshirt" category.

Saturday UCLA's experience tangles with SU's newcomers. May the best man win.

Tough Linemen

Bruins Boast Stars

Quarterback Larry Zeno might run the UCLA show, but he's far from being the only standout performer.

For the Bruins boast a wealth of outstanding linemen — and plenty of other charging backs.

Big man on the interior line is 6-2, 233-pound right tackle Kent Francisco. The two-year letterman was the lone Bruin player to start each game last season.

In 1963, Francisco garnered All-AAWU and All-Coast honors while standing out on offense. He is expected to put in a strong bid for All-America laurels this time around.

No. 1 Uclan receiver is end Kurt Altenberg, a 6-2 194 pounder. The left flanker rates among the top pass catchers in Bruin history.

Altenberg set a school record in 1963 by totaling 166 yards on eight receptions against Southern Cal. He won honorable mention West Coast honors.

Other staters up front UCLA will include right end Dick Witcher, left tackle Mitch Johnson, guards Dick Peterson and Barry Leventhal and center Prentice O'Leary.

Supporting Zeno in the backfield are halfbacks Steve Durbin and Mike Haffner and fullback Jim Colletto. But off the injury list and ready to roll is fleet Cornell Champion, a 188 pounder.

Champion reportedly has all the moves. "He's a reliable receiver and is tough to catch when he takes off," states Bruin coach Bill Barnes.

Defensively, UCLA boasts tough linebackers in Russ Banducci and Jim Miller, along with tackle John Pentecost and halfback Bobby Richardson.

A Soccer Plea

To the Editor:

The view that I'm about to express is one which needs immediate attention. I think it should be brought to light and exposed to the entire sudent body.

The situation is this. Last Saturday, the Soccer Club had a game against Albany State. The game was scheduled well in advance. The equipment necessary was asked for about a week and a half before the game. The coach was told to call the athletic department again on Tuesday at which time they'd consider getting the equipment out if they weren't busy packing for the Holy Cross game.

Well, the coach called back on Tuesday and the phone rang and rang...He called again each day until the last day, but to no avail. The game was played in T-shirts, bermudas, and low cut sneakers. No uniforms or cleated shoes. The cleats in question are worn, second-rate ones and the uniforms number only 20 at the most.

The conditions under which soccer is played are inadequate also. The field is 80 yards long—only 80 yards because a new building is currently being constructed on the adjacent lot and the other 20 yards of the soccer field.

Many attempts have been made to procure a regulation-size field. But the school isn' about to let one of its precious plots go to soccer. Not even next spring's lacrosse field could be considered to be reconditioned between this fall and next spring.

Presently soccer is played on an undersized, garbage-strewn lot. Some days they have to work around those individuals who see it fit to start a small-sized football game while the scrimmage is going on.

At a day's end, the participants are often faced with the dilemma of getting any dinner at all. This is true for other sports also. Can't dinner be adjusted just 15 minutes later so that the full practice time can be taken advantage of?

It is also difficult for a soccer player to get a schedule adjustment. Many of the players are missing valuable practice time by having classes at 4 p.m. and on Saturday mornings. Particularity on Saturday since that is the only day of the week available for the games since players can't be excused for a weekday match. It isn't allowed.

For a game, personal cars must be used. The players are fairly reimbursed for the gas expended. No school vehicle could provide the boys with any sort of aid.

Is this school so inclined toward football that other sports are completely neglected with their pleas and existence practically unheard of? Is soccer dead at a college that is so famous for its football team?

Soccern eeds your support to become a varsity sport at SU and get just some of the attention that its derivative gets. Will you help?

David Sheehan '68

Syracuse Soccer Rides Again

Perhaps you've been wondering what happened to Syracuse's soccer team. But more likely, you never knew that there ever was such an organization at this university.

To set the record straight, Syracuse did have a varsity soccer team from 1920-1960, there being no team in 1957 and during the war years of 1943-1945. Surprised?

But it seems that 1953 was the Orangemen's last winning campaign, when they posted a 4-2-1 record.

From this year on it was all downhill for the Hill forces. The Syracuse team was only able to salvage four games from 1953-1960.

They finished the 1960 season with an 0-8-1 mark-impressive to say the least. The next year the sport was discontinued due to lack of interest.

Anyone who has had the occasion to pass near Hendricks Field in the late afternoon between four and six knows that soccer is far from dead on this campus.

This daily bustling of activity behind Sadler Hall is the result of the Syracuse University Soccer Club. You say you've never heard of such a club! I'll explain a little.

Under the leadership of Brian Stewart, a group of university men organized a soccer club in the spring of 1963. The university has been furnishing uniforms since last spring and has provided the use of Hendricks Field, where nets have been set up.

According to coach Stewart, "The purpose of our club is to generate enough interest to form a varsity team once more at Syracuse University."

Last season the team compiled a 4-1 record against varsity teams of such schools as Le Moyne, Rochester Institute of Technology and Cornell, losing only once to Cornell.

This year Stewart's players are slated to meet Albany State, Utica, Cornell, Colgate, the University of Rochester and the Rochester Institute of Technology.

But the team is playing under the handicaps of paying its own expenses, playing without insurance, and providing its own transportation.

Stewart describes his biggest problem as that of providing a home field on which to play. Says Stewart, "If we could show the university students what kind of team we have, then we might be able to win their support."

Does anyone have a field for the soccer club?

HELLO, MOM AND DAD

Parents' Weekend

10th Birthday

By PAT TRACEY

Parents Weekend celebrates its 10th anniversary this year with a traditional schedule of events to give parents a glimpse of campus life and a chance to re-live their own college days.

Inaugurated in 1954, the one-day event held Saturday, Oct. 30, featured the Syracuse-Holy Cross football game.

About 1,000 parents and relatives came to campus for the day and participated in such activities as a welcome by Chancellor William P. Tolley, presentation of the heads of men's and women's government and a brunch.

In the evening, parents were entertained in the Women's Bldg. by members of Boar's Head.

By 1956, the affair had been lengthened to conver an entire weekend and was highlighted by the Syracuse-Penn State football game. Parents were invited to attend classes with their children as had been done since the first Parents Day.

Activities for the 1956 weekend included coffees, the foot-

Hill Offers School for Parents, Open Houses, Social Activities To Highlight Campus Welcome

Annually, crowded hotels, a School for Parents, mums and hastily - cleaned dorm rooms herald the Hill's Parents' Weekend.

This year, in addition to the traditional activities, 5,000 mothers and dads will be treated to a record 150 dorm and organizational social events and will get a chance to question university officials about campus life and policies in a "no students allowed" forum.

Parents' Weekend starts today with the School for Parents. More than 1700 parents have signed up to sample the academic atmosphere here by attending classes in physics, geography, fine arts, zoology, sociology or philosophy.

The question and answer forum will feature three university vice presidents, the dean of men and women and five other officials answering queries submitted by students' parents through the mail and in person in Gifford Auditorium, Huntington B. Crouse Hall.

A special repeat performance of the Goon Show has been rescheduled for 8 p.m. today in

Frosh Nominate 12 Candidates For Class Offices

By MARLENE CIMONS

Twelve freshmen were selected as candidates for four class offices Thursday night in a four-hour nominating session as delegates from frosh floors and living centers gathered in the Hall of Languages.

The presidential candidates chosen by the convention were Robert Bagnall, John Subbiondo and William Wallens. The three were chosen from among nine candidates.

Bagnall, a resident of Hungerford cottage, is in the College of Liberal Arts. He is a resident of Poughkeepsie. Subbiondo, a resident of Sims I, is from Port Washington. He is in the College of Business Administration.

Wallens, from Niagara Falls, is in the College of Liberal Arts. He is a resident of Watson West 4.

Vice presidential candidates chosen were Jeffrey Lovelace, Michael Villari and Miriam Bernstein.

Lovelace, a resident of Watson West 3, is from Greenwich, Conn. Villari, from Canastota, lives on Watson West 4. Miss Bernstein, who resides in Rochester, lives on Day 4.

All three vice presidential candidates are enrolled in the College of Liberal Arts.

DO TO PRINT SPECIAL ISSUE

The Daily Orange will issue a special two-page, two-color edition Saturday to commemorate Parents' Weekend. Only a limited number of copies will be available, however, due to costs of putting out a special edition. The paper will be available at various locations on campus.

Hill Police List Parking Rules

By CHARLIE RUSSO

"University parking during the academic year is a problem, and during Parents' Weekend parking becomes a headache," said Leo J. Graszler, assistant director of security police.

"However," Graszler added, "the security office has made preparations to help parents find parking space with a minimum of trouble this weekend."

New construction on campus has reduced the number of parking spaces available to visitors.

Robert D. Flaherty, director of security, recommended that "parents staying in downtown hotels and motels use taxis and buses for transportation to the campus" to alleviate the problem.

"Street parking is regulated by the city of Syracuse," Flaherty explained. "In most instances, the odd-and-even system is used. This means that on odd days of the month 24-hour parking, starting at 8:30 a.m. is permitted on that side of the street where houses have odd numbers."

Flaherty said that "parking will be permitted in Thornden Park today. A uniformed patrolman will be on duty at the park to assist parents.

"Free shuttle buses will operate between Manley Field House and the main campus from 9:30 a.m.-5:30 p.m. to accommodate those attending the SU School for Parents.

Parking areas at the fieldhouse will hold approximately 700 cars and street parking on Comstock avenue at the fieldhouse will be permitted."

For the Parents' Breakfast and convocation Saturday in Sims Hall, free parking will be

Pep Rallies

The Wild Times of the Past

By LOIS WINEBAUM

The pajama-clad boy grabbed his orange beanie from the floor and ran to the Corner Store.

The time was 8 p.m.

There he met several hundred other men, all dressed in pajamas.

Forming lines, they marched to the Medical School. They gave an S-Y-R cheer. The medics responded from their windows. Most of them joined the group.

Next, they marched to the Law School. Several hundred men were already outside waiting for them.

Together the men, now numbering about a thousand, marched down South Salina street to the New York Central Railroad station.

The Orange eleven was boarding the train for Princeton. It was going to be a big football game, and the men wanted the team to know they were rooting for them.

They sang "Bill Orange."

They tried out the new cheers they had been practicing for weeks in daily chapel services, songs that had been printed in the Daily Orange for weeks.

It was 1914.

Pep rallies, or mass meetings as they were then called, were not new to Syracuse University.

A mass meeting of all colleges was called in the Liberal Arts building at chapel time in 1903. Prominent alumnae addressed a standing room only crowd. Saturday's game with Colgate would be the first of the season.

Plans for the game were announced. Every student would have an orange ribbon on his coat, or upperclass men could carry canes with orange colors on them.

Mass meetings of this type were held before every football game for the next few years. If the game was away from Syracuse, hundreds of men saw the team off at the station.

Then, in 1905, the grandstand on the old oval, which is now the quad, became the site for an evening pep rally. After cheers and songs were practiced, the freshmen were sent into the surrounding woods to collect wood for a bonfire. Enthusiasm was high.

Pep rallies were in for a big change in 1919.

Throngs of men followed the ROTC band to the old Yates Castle on Irving avenue for a rally. There they were met by a group of 200 coeds.

But women still hadn't gained full equality on the Syracuse campus.

Finally, at a mass meeting in John Crouse College in 1907, the women voted to attend the Syracuse-Carlisle contest en masse. Records were broken. Over 40 women signed up for seats in the reserved section of the grandstand.

As late as 1921 the Daily Orange reported a women's pep rally. Meeting at chapel time on the library steps, a new song, "The Women's Alma Mater," was taught to coeds. They were instructed that women might cheer when the men's cheerleaders led them. The women's cheerleaders would direct only the singing.

Records are not clear as to when women were finally accepted into the ranks of loyal Syracuse supporters, but a 1933 copy of the Daily Orange reported that men and women met on Crouse College hill for a rally.

The university band, which had now replaced the ROTC band and the Turnball Drum Corps, led the group to the Eckel Theater for a rally.

They sang Orange grid anthems and campus songs for the varsity team. Enthusiasm was high.

Enthusiasm will rise again when a pep rally entitled "Orange March" is held on the main quad today. The rally will start at 6:15 p.m. with a car parade from Sims Hall.

Gail Fuchs, the Syracuse University Orange Girl, will present a fire-baton twirling show.

Also on hand will be Dean of Hendricks Chapel Charles C. Noble, head football coach Ben Schwartzwalder, the first string football team and both

Welcome, Parents

The campus will be alive this weekend with the once again youthful faces of moms and dads. The university has been hard at work to get 'Cuse into tip-top shape.

No doubt the parents will be impressed by the delicious dining hall cuisine, the spirit of pep rally and a football game and the carefree antics of the Goon Show.

No doubt the parents will be unimpressed by another call for funds for that when-is-it-to-be-built infirmary, to replace today's sub-standard shack. Also to be reckoned with are the gripes of the students, many away from home for the first time.

Parents will be impressed by the figure to be presented at today's School for Parents. Similiar disenchantment will come with the sight of 1,000 "fruging" Syracusans after the football game.

But all the moms and dads and aunts, uncles and cousins who are here this weekend have to remember they were once young, too. And young in heart this weekend they must be.

For this is a young school, with young ideas, ideally suited to young people who wish development as the school develops. And it is a school for young-thinking parents, wh remember the often-carefree days of their youth, and who realize that today's youth has to have some fun along with its studies.

Let's forget about the troubles of life for a few days or hours and just enjoy the weekend.

That's the way it should be.

Sidewalks

Among the administration gripes at the recent Pinebrook Conference was the large numbers of students who use any excuse to walk across the university lawns.

In one case in particular, we have a solution — put in a sidewalk.

The case in point is the stretch of grass between the Newhouse Communications Center and Maxwell Hall. A student must detour to the Corner Store or the Hall of Languages if he is to remain cement-based.

This is incongrous with the mathematics department's theory that the shortest (and easiest) distance between Maxwell and Newhouse is a straight sidewalk.

Once the winter comes, it will certainly be a great convenience, or a lot of students are going to have wet feet. Or maybe in the winter we can't really tell where the sidewalks are anyway.

Tiger at the Gates

Double Reverse

By Dan Ritey

We were struck recently by a curious fact; namely, a proportion with two very unbalanced sides. One holds that advantages and prestige are DIRECTLY proportional to the success that queer duck known as the campus leader attains at this university.

The other holds that while prestige may increase, advantages are INVERSELY proportional to the success that a good number of off-campus people bring to this same university.

By off-campus people, we don't intend reference to non-students. Indeed, these boys face the same classrooms as we do; it's just that their primary contributions to SU occur somewhat off the campus proper: on gridirons, wooden courts, mats, cinder tracks and other sporting locations.

At one time, we criticized the university administration for exhibnting a double standard with reference to disciplinary actions involving several athletes. However, this time we think that some people—doubtless high up in SU's family, above the dean of men's office and the financial aids department — are employing a double standard of sorts AGAINST these same athletes.

Namely that, with precious few exceptions, athletes are denied the privilege of owning and operating cars while at SU, despite the fact that their academic records warrant such rights.

This ns no easy problem and one which merits careful attention.

At one end of the SU automotive spectrum is a view expressed by Dean of Men Carleton at the Pinebrook get-together. It is, simply, that inorder to solely pursue an education here, one has no need for a car.

The dean further cited (not at Pinebrook) more facts:one physical and the other dealing with policy.

The physical fact is easily noted: there just isn't enough parking space for all those who academically qualify to have cars here.

The policy issue is another matter. Briefly, prospective athletes are lured to SU by offers of financial assistance —the university's grants-in-aid. They are told, however, that upon signing this particular contract they willingly renounce their rights to own and drive cars here.

The dean of men does, however, allow athletes with proper averages to have cars for 1) reasons of health and of family sickness 2) practice teaching at nearby schools and 3) bona-fide jobs whereby the athletes work at least 10 hours a week. Any athlete falling into one of these catagories may have a car; may have it all the time—even when not on the job or teaching, etc.

Okay, the ground rules. We think, though, that certain appeals can be made based upon them.

One could consult varsity basketoall coach Fred Lewis on some of these points. "We have to have transportation for the players when they leave practice all sweated up to go through cold, wintry weather in order to get back to their dorms in time to eat." Quite right, we'd say. To leave a warm gym in a sweaty state and go out in sub-freezing weather is to invite disaster; yet to break up practice early in order to allow the boys time to hitch or walk back to their dining halls courts poor team play and morale.

Coach Lewis also cited instances last winter when, during vacation while the team was here for practice, the guys had to eat at Skytop and that all they could rely on for transportation through the snows was the 'buddy system' whereby those players with cars waited for the others and gave them lifts in return for splitting gas costs.

While agreeing in essence with Dean Carleton's stand concerning cars and the pursuit of an education, coach Lewis is quick to note that his boys must have some transportation to and from practice.

Cars for driving's sake alone may not be needed, but until the SU family organizes some shuttle-bus system, things will remain in an acute state.

And the busses apparently will not adeqaately relieve the situation, according to SU Athletic Director Jim Decker.

"The problem of transportation is vital, yet a proposed shuttle-bus system would cost about $3,000 each academic year (this would not include spring practice) for the football and basketball teams along," he noted.

Decker further pointed out that these buses would be run on a one-round-trip-a-day basis only. This, however, would appear to be a futile effort in that athletes with staggered afternoon classes would not all be ready to go to practice en masse—thus forcing some to hitch or walk anyway.

The athletic head also concurs with coach Lewis on the bind in which the tight dormitory eating schedule places the teams. "Last year when the 'buddy system' was used to make meal and practice deadlines, it worked well and no complaints were heard," he said.

Beyond these reasons lie other, more fundamental ones. The grants-in-aid are given with the underlying assumption of financial need on the part of the athlete. Yet, some simply do not need money; still others note that if their parents are poor and need the money to send them to school, why should they be barred from having cars here if they decide to go out and work over the summer, say, to earn enough to buy a car on their own?

Good question. And this columnist would like a better answer than "it's a university policy concerning financial aid to students; when they agree to it, they forfeit driving rights."

It seems that SU is promoting a fallacy, namely that their athletes cannot afford to own cars or that they should be barred from even receiving them as gifts. This isn't the case, so why should we kid ourselves into believing that SU isn't in actuality promoting semi-pro teams in major sports?

After all, no one will deny that (a) these athletes contribute to the glory and prestige of the university and (b) that they must complete academic requirements like anyone else to maintain their grants-in-aid.

As coach Lewis put it: "these boys on grant-in-aid assistance must maintain a passing average to keep their scholarships. Whether or not they are currently playing on varsity teams has nothing at all to do with keeping the aid."

And further implied by Lewis is this: these athletes devote 3-4 hours a day to practice and skill sessions, yet they must get the same 1.0 as other students. It would follow, we think, that any aids which would help them meet this schedule should be condoned by the university—especially a university that so emphasizes major inter-collegiate sports.

One of these aids would be administration permission for athletes to own and operate cars—just like any other students.

Certainly the few added cars which would appear through this policy would not effect the university's parking scheme.

Clearly, a group that brings glory—and, face it, money—to the university, deserves some recognition and leeway from the family heads.

It is as inane to discriminate in favor of athletes on disciplinary matters as it is to discriminate against them when it comes to their well-being and the perpetuation of a long-standing myth.

We'd think that any scholarship holders who positively contribute to the university's fortunes should be allowed this grace; likewise, should SU crack down on the current number of cars here, consideration should go first to those students whose activities on behalf of the university require the use of everything.

Published Monday through Friday during the academic year by the students of Syracuse University. Offices located at 200 Brooklea Drive, Fayetteville, New York.

WEEKEND

STUDENT UNION-For students only, the feature is 'Can-Can" with Shirley MacLaine, Frank Sinatra, Louis Jordan and Maurice Chevalier. The movie will be whown at 7:30 p.m. and 9:45 p.m. at Gifford Auditorium in Huntington B. Crouse Hall. "Can-Can" will be shown at 8 p.m. on Saturday.

REGENT THEATRE-The National Players of Washington, D.C. will present "Hamlet" and "Twelfth Night" this weekend at the Regent Theatre. "Twelfth Night" will be performed twice, at 8:30 p.m. today and at 4 p.m. on Sunday. "Hamlet" will be performed at 8:30 p.m. Saturday. Tickets for the performances are available at the Regent Theatre box office.

CROUSE AUDITORIUM - Donald Miller, baritone, and Douglas Williams, harpsichordist and pianist, will present a concert at 4 p.m. Sunday. They will be assisted by Frederick Miller on the violoncello. The concert will open with a group of songs by Henry Purcell. Following intermission, Miller will sing "An die ferne Geliebte" by Beethoven and Mahler's "Kindertotenlieder." All Crouse concerts offer free admission and campus parking.

BLOCK PARTY-A block party sponsored by Delta Upsilon, Sigma Alpha Mu, Delta Gamma, Alpha Epsilon Pi and Iota Alpha Pi, will be held behind these houses after the UCLA game. Featured artists will be the Marvelettes of "Please Mr. Postman" fame and the Headliners. The Marvellettes will replace the Orlons, as previously secheduled. Admission is free.

LINCOLN AUDITORIUM-"Beyond the Fringe," British satire, will be presented at 8:15 p.m. on Saturday. Featuring sketches and blackouts, the Broadway show will be given by a touring company. Tickets for "Fringe" are available at the Clark Music Building and at the Lincoln Auditorium box office.

FOLK GALLERY-The New Lost City Ramblers is the featured folk group this weekend. They will appear at 8:30 p.m., 10:30 p.m. and midnight today and Saturday, while the midnight show will be eliminated on Sunday. Tickets for the concerts are available at the Folk Gallery, 124 N. McBride St.

WESTCOTT — Kicking off the double-feature on the bill is Bob Hope and his side-kicks (or line backers, as the case may be), the Global Girls, in a comical flick, "A Global Affair." The score at the second half is "The Unsinkable Molly Brown," a movie version of the Broadway version. With Debbie Reynolds as Molly, and Harve Presnell as her wealthy and accomodating husband, the product is a story-and-song. Molly is charming as the country girl doomed and determined to become a part of society, and in so doing she becomes a heroine and scores a touchdown with the Jet Set. Light and tender, the final score is definietly a victory. At 7:30 p.m. and 8:55 p.m.

PARAMOUNT—A simple story of a boy and his horse, "So Dear To My Heart" shows how true luck can be found in a three-leaved clover field. Featuring Burl Ives as the understanding grandfather, naturally, the Walt Disney opus projects in Technicolor. No times available.

SHOPPINTOWN—Richard Burton is still chasing Peter O'Toole (or is it the other way around) all over 12th century England. And if you did not know that "Becket" was playing, then you are either anti-Burton, anti-clerical, or you haven't read the D.O. in three weeks. Based on Jean Anouilh's play, the movie is a spectacular (as in "Ben Hur" and "How the West was Won") clash of church and state, with O'Toole playing State and Burton portraying Church. Very timely, n'est ce pas? At 7:00 p.m. and 9:30 p.m.

RKO KEITH'S - "Where Love Has Gone" or another Harold Robbins' Sensational Shocker, features those two old pros of melodrama, Susan Hayward and Bette Davis. A fictionalized account of the movie star's daughter who stabbed her mother's love, the movie picks up where the Carpetbaggers" left off...in the gutter. Co-featured is "Crimson Blade" or "Whatever Happened to The Son of Captain Blood?" "Robbins Slings Again" at 9:50 p.m., "Gore" at 8:20 p.m.

RIVIERA CINEMA — Starring Stefania Sandrelli and Sara Urzi (which is a very subtle way of mentioning that it is an Italian flick) is "Seduced and Abandoned." And as one might expect, it is all about a girl who is seduced and abandoned; putting it my way, but nicely. So as not to crush an images (visiting parents please note), dad pulls through as any father would: with a shotgun. And, of course, a shotgun marriage. Smoothing it all over is a short, "Rembrandt," at 6:45 p.m. and 9:10 p.m. The feature is at 7:10 p.m. and 9:40 p.m.

ECKEL-"Circus World" starring John Wayne and Rita Hayworth shows what can happen to an ex-cowboy star. He runs away and joins the circus world, in Cinerama, yet. Wayne is the circus owner with a flop on his hands so he takes off to look for his ex-love, a trapeze artist, who, by some chance, left her daughter with him. This plot should have been left in the wastebasket. A nice family type flick for the parents. At 8 p.m.

Phone Cable Out of Order

A defective telephone cable put several university telephones temporarily out of operation Friday.

Mrs. Muriel Day, chief telephone operator for Syracuse University, said that the cable will be inoperative while it is being replaced and that several university dormitory and office extension lines will not function while the work is being done.

Although she did not know when the repairs would be complete, Mrs. Day said she hoped the telephones will be functioning properly in "a couple of days."

Union Offers 'Can-Can' Film

"Can-Can" starring Shirley MacLaine, Frank Sinatra, Maurice Chevalier and Louis Jordan will be shown this weekend in Gifford Auditorium, Huntington B. Crouse Hall.

The showings, sponsored by the Student Union, will be held 7:30 p.m. and 9:45 p.m. on Friday and 8 p.m. Saturday. A spokesman for the Student Union said parents are invited to the films.

Student Union volleyball will start at 8 p.m. in the Women's Building.

Last week's showing of "Gigi" were seen by about 1,700 people.

Hill Home Ec School Hires 2 Men Profs For the First Time

By LES WHITTINGTON

The College of Home Economics broadened its program this fall with the addition of its first two full-time male professors.

Dr. Robert Pickett and Dr. James E. Moore, teaching in the division of family relations and child development, said they hope to aid in the application of the humanities and social sciences to the field of home economics.

Pickett, trained in history and social science, is teaching Family Relations and Child Development 130. Moore, in addition to teaching a section of the 130 course, is handling FRCD 136, the development of the young child in the family.

Moore, who is trained in psychology, explained his role as a teacher of home economics. "The purpose of home economics is to interpret the knowledge of the science and humanities to everyday living," he said.

"Home economics," he continued, "does a great job of communicating the information of science to the student—such as nutrition and chemistry. Our aim is to apply the knowledge of the humanities and the social sciences to this field."

Neither Pickett nor Moore expressed much concern over their position as the first full-time male teachers in the college.

Pickett, who taught family relations as a lecturer here three years ago, said it was only a matter of co-incidence that the college did not appoint any full-time male teachers in the past.

"Having men in the College of Home Economics," Moore commented, "is not the anomaly across the country that it is here."

Pickett, who also teaches an upper-division course entitled Critical Incidents in Family Development, received his bachelor of arts degree at Gorham State Teachers College in Maine, his masters at Harvard University and his doctorate at Syracuse. Prior to coming here, he taught at Clarkson College of Technology.

Moore did undergraduate and graduate work at the University of Illinois and received his doctorate from Purdue University.

Explaining the purpose of his and Pickett's courses, he said, "These courses concentrate on theoretical knowledge, giving the prospective parent an idea of how best to evaluate advice on marriage and child development in the future.

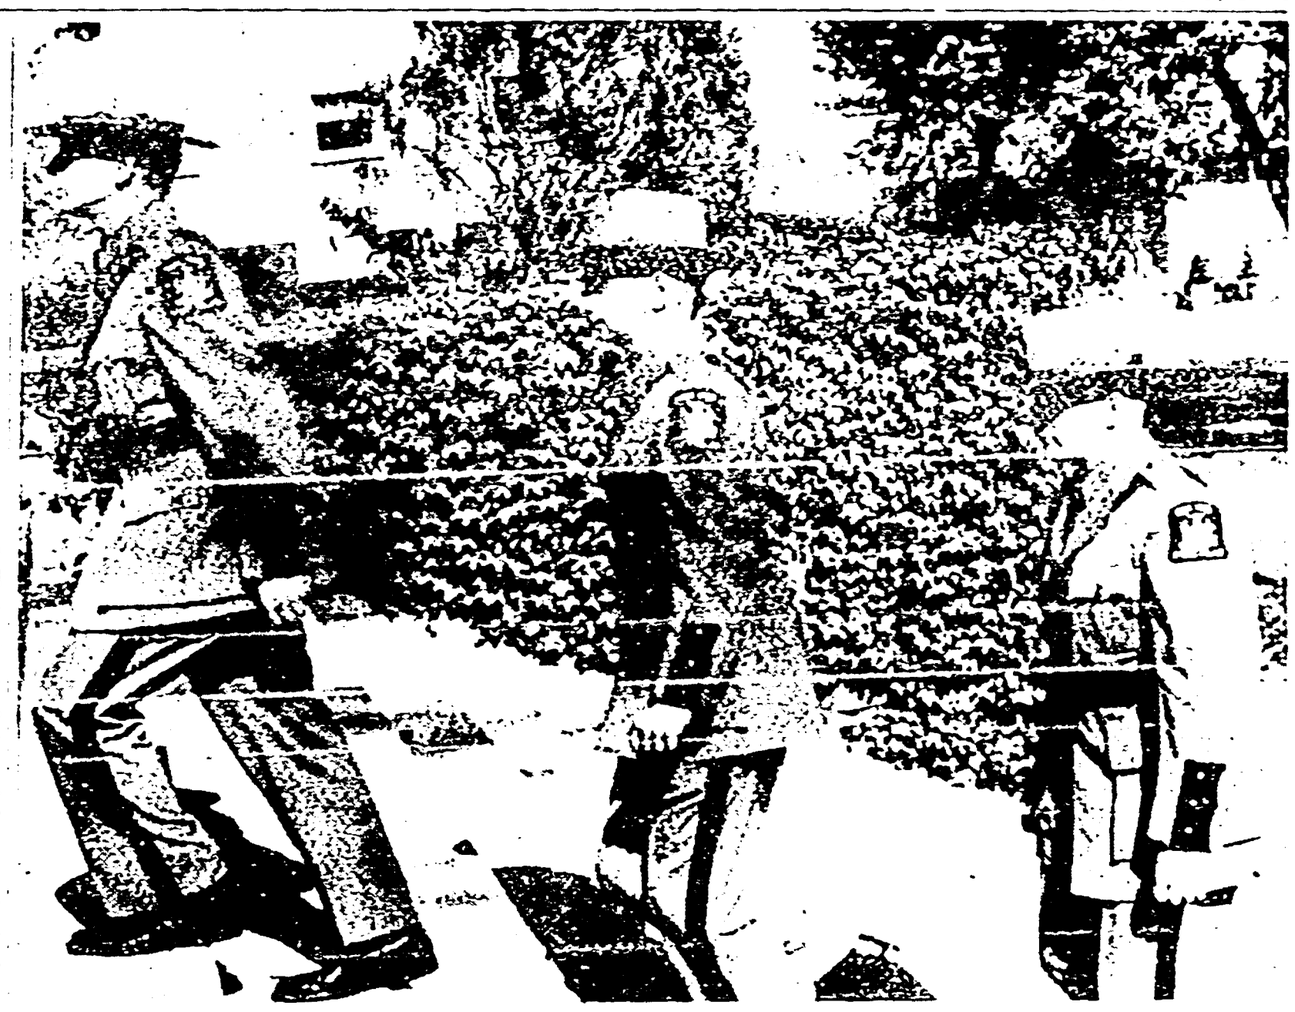
TIME CHANGES

Several changes have been made in the Parents' Weekend schedule which was previously sent to parents.

The Goon Show will be held at 8 p.m. in Crouse College Auditorium.

The time and place for the University Union's showing of "Can-Can" have both been changed. The film will now be shown at 7 and 9:30 p.m. Friday, and 8 p.m. Saturday in Gifford Auditorium, Huntington B. Crouse Hall.

The Episcopal services will be held at 10 a.m. Sunday in Gifford Auditorium.



State Police Graduation

Candidates from the New York State Police Academy arrive at Hendricks Chapel to participate in their commencement. The graduation for 130 men, has been held twice before on the Syracuse University campus. Several state police cars were stationed at various points on the quad, the entrance to campus and on University place as an honor guard.

Maxwell Prof Aids Sen. Keating

By KERMIT FRAZIER

"I'm principally dedicated to a strengthening of the moderate wing of the Republican Party," commented Ronald H. McDonald as he spoke of his association with the political campaign of Sen. Kenneth B. Keating.

The assistant professor of political science told the Daily Orange he will be working in an advisory capacity in the incumbent senator's speakers' bureau.

According to McDonald, candidates usually establish a group of people to speak to different organizations. He said that office seekers generally "choose individuals who will be most persuasive to various groups."

The professor intimated he might be speaking to universities in the area. "What we at the speaker's bureau are particularly concerned with is to make ourselves available," said McDonald.

McDonald, in his second year at Syracuse, remarked that his actual work in the campaign would begin about two or three weeks before election day.

Commenting on his political background, the third generation Californian noted that he had a "persistent interest in politics" and that both his and his wife's family are in politics. Robert Finch, his wife's brother-in-law, was head of the 1960 Nixon campaign.

McDonald previous experience includes campaign work with Sen. Thomas Kuchel, liberal Republican from California, and Congressman Peter Frelinhuysen of New Jersey. He has also worked in broadcasting in Los Angeles.

In answering a question concerning the New York State Senate race, McDonald replied that it is "very highly competitive" and "pretty close and equal!" However, he also noted that there is "beginning to be a swelling tide of support for Sen. Keating."

McDonald attributed this rising support to the large number of non-political independent and Democratic leaders who have come out for Keating in New York.

The key issues as the profesor sees them, are "acceptance or rejection of Keating's record" and "whether New York should be represented by one one of its citizens or by someone from the outside."

RONALD H. McDONALD

Near the end of the interview McDonald termed the Daily Orange's endorsement of Sen. Keating a "very responsible act!" He remarked that "support by the Daily Orange of Sen. Keating is a reflection of a growing recognition of his accomplishments."

Automation Topic Of Home Ec Talk

Mrs. Ruth Hall, director of the School of Home Economics at the University of Arizona, discussed the opportunities and obligations of home economists Thursday.

She discussed the relationship of automation and home economists and the role of women in society in a convocation with future home economists.

"The more complex we become, the greater will be the need for the integrating force of home economics," Dr. Hall stated.

The role which the home economists will play in the future will involve mainly around ways of showing family members how to remain creative and productive, she predicted. She gave as an example the fact that woman in the home used to be productive in baking. Automation takes this production away and the home economists will have the task of replacing it with something else.

Other tasks in which, according to Mrs. Hall, home economists will be invoved in the future will be information on consumer economics, child guidance and continued research in nutrition and food study.

Discussing the role of women in modern society, she said that women are "disadvantaged." She illustrated this by saying that women are frequently paid less than men for the same job.

The home economist has a "great future in helping to strengthen family life and the role of women," she noted.

Casual Miss to Feature Free Photos of Parents

Something new has been added to this year's Parents' Weekend-free souvenir pictures of students and their parents courtesy of Casual Miss.

All students, male and female, can bring their parents to Casual Miss, 167 Marshall St. on Saturday and have a free picture taken.

The 5-x-7 photograph will be framed and mailed directly to parents at no charge.

"The object is not to sell something, but to let students and parents know that there is a store on the campus that takes an active part in the university and university activities," Alvin Blumberg, Casual Miss Inc. owner, said, emphasizing there is absolutely no obligation involved in having the pictures taken.

Unbeaten UCLA Invades Archbold

Bruin Backfield

UCLA quarterback Larry Zeno makes the handoff to right halfback Mike Haffner 11) as teammates fullback Jim Colletto (36) and left half Steve Durbin (45) provide the interference. This backfield may be one of the most versatile UCLA has had since the 1961 conference championship team.

Larry Zeno Paces Bruins Against SU

By BILL CRONAUER
Sports Editor

Syracuse and UCLA, powerful, confident and nationally ranked, bump heads at Archbold Stadium tomorrow in the East's top gridiron clash.

A near-capacity crowd of 40,000 Hill students, parents and rooters should be on hand for the 1:30 p.m. Parents' Weekend fray.

SU (2-1) is ranked 10th on the current UPI poll, while the Bruins (3-0) rate a spot higher.

The contest has no lack of stars.

UCLA boasts quarterback Larry Zeno, the national leader in total offense with 646 yards gained rushing and passing in three weeks.

Zeno, in his last outing against Stanford, pitched for three touchdowns and sneaked over for his club's fourth tally. Overall he has completed 36 of 64 passes for 445 yards and seven TDs.

Orange scout Roy Simmons noted, "In Zeno, UCLA has a real triple-threat athlete. He can run, throw and kick. He'll be one of the finest all-around players to appear in Archbold this fall."

SU counters with its "Spider" defense and fabulous 1-2 punch of speedy Floyd Little and Big Bo Nance.

The "Spiders," led by end George Fair and safetyman Hal (Black Widow) Rooney, flattened Holy Cross last weekend, holding the Crusaders to 67 total yards and six points.

The Little-Nance duo has accounted for 510 of Syracuse's 810 rushing yards and nine of the 13 touchdowns. Little owns 289 yards and five scores, Nance 221 yards and four TDs.

Joining the pair in the Piety backfield are quarterback Walley Mahle and right half Ron Oyer.

Two Platoons

Focus: Substitution Rule

By KEN RUDNICK

Once again this year, the Football Rules Committee of the National Collegiate Athletic Association has not disappointed those who have come to expect a change in the substitution rule as certainly as death and taxes.

The 1964 version continues the trend which many observers believe will result in the eventual return, possibly in the near future, of unlimited substitution to college football.

Basically, the rule allows free substitution at any time when the game clock is stopped. Stoppage for an incomplete pass, an out-of-bounds play, or a timeout permits a coach to insert an entirely new platoon without penalty.

The new standard also provides for unlimited substitution during intermissions between periods.

At all other times during the ball game, while the clock is moving, each team may enter two substitutes at a time. If all its timeouts have been exhausted and the clock is moving, a team may insert more than two players while incurring a five-yard penalty.

As early as the opening week of the college season, UCLA, playing in a nationally-televised contest against the University of Pittsburgh, demonstrated a basic weakness in the new rule.

On fourth down in punting situations, the Bruins accepted a relatively meaningless five-yard penalty for delay of game in order to stop the clock and put its defensive unit on the field. The tactic has since been repeated by UCLA and other teams countless times.

The liberalized substitution rule has made it possible for Syracuse's Ben Schwartzwalder, as well as many other major-college coaches, to employ the same two-platoon system which revolutionized professional football.

Some coaches, Army's Paul Dietzel most prominent among them, now use a three-platoon system in which one unit plays strictly on offense, another only on defense, and a third which can play both ways.

According to Orange line coach Rocco Pirro, the initial reaction to the new rule of the SU coaching staff was, "It's here, so we've got to live with it."

Schwartzwalder and his aides knew that the Orange had to adopt the two-platoon system in order to avoid being at a serious disadvantage against teams which employed the system. Other things being equal, tired two-way players cannot combat fresh one-way operators on even terms for 60 minutes.

Before the current season began, there was much speculation as to what type of team the new rule would help most—the team with good material or the team with poorer material.

Pirro believes the rule has fattened the football Goliaths at the expense of the Davids. The stronger team can still put more quality players on the field.

At any rate, the two-platoon system is here—for the time being at least—and "we've got to live with it."

Former Trackman Carries Torch

A former Orange track star was one of hundreds of runners recently carrying the Olympic Torch from New York City to San Francisco.

Lt. Commander Clyde O. Johnson, USNR, of Springfield, Mo., carried the torch through his home area.

The SU graduate is a development engineer in the V Belt Division of Dayton Industrial Products.

Harriers Face Cornell

By NEIL KERR

Syracuse University's cross country runners will travel to Ithaca tomorrow to race Cornell's Big Red harriers. It will be the 26th dual meet since 1933. SU now leads in the series with Cornell 17-9.

This season the Orange are 2-0 having defeated Colgate and Buffalo. Cornell is 0-2 with losses to Colgate and powerful Penn State.

Cornell has suffered severe graduation losses and few veterans return from last season's squad which went undefeated in dual meets and caputred the Heptagonal cross country championship. Syracuse, on the other hand, is stronger this year though the team is composed primarily of junior and sophomore runners.

Running for SU will be three juniors—Bill Cihak, Mike Spino and Marty Miller. Coach Bob Grieve is also counting on senior Mike Shuster plus sophomores Tom Giordano, John Crawford, Bill Ramsdell, Dave Hanna and Dave Daubert to score for the Orange.

Coach Jerry McCann's freshman team will be out to improve on its 1-1 record at Cornell following last week's 26-32 loss to Colgate's yearlings. His top performers so far are Dennis Boyle of Pittsburgh, Pa., and Bruce Pezzamenti of Valley Stream, L.I.

Last week Boyle broke the Raider's three-mile course record by 18 seconds by running the distance in 16:01.2. Pezzamenti took second 24 seconds behind Boyle.

SU-UCLA: '63 Flashback

By HOWIE SCHNEIDER

Everyone was still talking about that new Syracuse look which included the forward pass, a look which had humbled Holy Cross the week before, when Ben Schwartzwalder and his 39-man squad boarded their chartered plane and headed for the welcome shores of California.

After losing to Kansas 10-0 and then wallowing in self-pity for a week, the Orangemen had come to life against the Crusaders. Going to the air effectively for the first time they romped to a 48-0 victory.

But as the DC jet liner spanned the continent, Schwartzwalder and his staff wondered if their new attack could hold up against a good UCLA squad.

Schwartzwalder once again reviewed his pre-game strategy. He knew he would have to contend with triple threat Larry Zeno, 6-4, 220-pound end Mel Profit, and an offensive circus that featured flanker backs a-la-roll-outs.

The week before the Bruiins had beaten Stanford, 10-9.

In his favor, Schwartzwalder knew that his squad was second in the nation in rushing and that his junior quarterback, Walley Mahle, was fourth nationally in that department.

Schwartzwalder's speculation came to nothing, however, as the Orange defensive team stole the show. The unit held the Bruins to a mere minus two yards on the ground as Syracuse eased to a 29-7 win under the lights.

Last year's victory was the third consecutive SU win. The Bruins have yet to beat the Orange.

After it was all over Uclan coach Bill Barnes said, "Syracuse was just too big and strong for us."

It was Schwartzwalder's installation of a new gap defense at half time which turned the tide. Little middle linebacker Ed Conti and guard Jack Salerno were the standouts on the defensive side.

The offensive team, while not exactly generating the enthusiasm expected, did score four touchdowns. Halfback Gus Giardi scored twice and Nat Duckett and Mike Koski once.

Want to Be a Corporation President Someday?

A new booklet, published by a non-profit educational foundation, tells how the chief executive officers of many large corporations got their start. Regular price, 25¢. Sent free to college students.

A survey by a Chicago consulting firm shows that men whose major experience has been in marketing are most likely to climb to the top of the corporate ladder. "Marketing" includes all forms of selling a company's products or services. Said an official of U.S. Steel: "I would rather own a market than a mill." Here are a few of the thousands of presidents who started as salesmen:

RAY EPPERT, President
Burroughs Corporation
LEWIS GRUBER, President
P. Lorillard Company
FRANK R. ARMOUR, JR., Pres.
H. J. Heinz Company
ROY J. SUND, President
American Can Company
COURTLAND S. GROSS, Pres.
Lockheed Aircraft Corporation
J. WARD KEENER, President
B. F. Goodrich Company

Orange Stand 11-0

1959: Grid Season to Remember

By JEFF LAZAR

On New Year's Day, 1959, Syracuse University ended it's 1958 campaign on a dismal note, bowing to the highly rated Sooners from Oklahoma, 21-6, in Miami's Orange Bowl. At the same time, it wasn't quite the game football coaches make resolutions about before the season begins.

Nevertheless, with the black mark of a defeat on their '59 record, Coach Ben Schwartzwalder and his team had no choice but to wait until September when they would open the new campaign and attempt to make amends for their poor showing.

Sept. 26 would provide the first opportunity to show the home town fans their wares when Kansas arrived. For a period of 96 days following the SU opener, many events would take place turning the normally wild campus into sheer chaos and pandemonium.

Within that space of time the Orangemen would win 11 games without a defeat and attain the status of the best college football team in the nation. Climaxing the dream season would be a 23-14 win over Texas in the Cotton Bowl.

Ernie Davis would make his varsity debut during that season with an already impressive freshman record behind him. He had led the Tangerines to an unbeaten, but tied season in establishing himself as a breakway threat. If this was a portent of things to come, the astrologists would have a ball during those 97 days.

The Saturdays can make or break a football coach's future. As far as Ben Schwartzwalder was concerned, Thursday, Sept. 24 would probably be another source of aggravation. The reason was the loss of two key players for the season, quarterback Bob Thomas and end Dave Baker.

In addition, end and punter Tom Gilburg, fullback Art Baker, halfback Mark Weber, and tackle Bob Yates would be used sparingly at the outset because of an assortment of injuries.

By the end of the first half, the outlook was not too bright, with three Kansas quick kicks averaging 69 yards. The net result of this strategy was consistently poor field position and a 7-6 deficit.

Two fumbles by future Kansas All-American John Hadl contributed to a strong second-half surge by Syracuse as they scored four touchdowns to the Jayhawkers' two and walked off the field with a 35-21 decision in their back pockets. Dave Sarette completed nine of 13 passes good for 117 yards and a touchdown.

The invasion by Maryland was one of the worst misadventures the Terrapins had ever experienced as they submitted to a 29-0 whitewash. The once-proud I-formation was completely ruined as SU permitted them a total offense of just 29 yards, eight coming overland.

As a matter of fact, the Terps were held to minus two yards in the second half. Ernie Davis carried 13 times for 77 yards and his first varsity touchdown on a 26-yard run.

The Orangemen journeyed to Norfolk, Va., in quest of no. 3. Their opponent was Navy. Although it rained throughout most of the game, Syracuse put on a smashing display of power and ground out a 32-6 desision, going 59 yards for a touchdown the first time they had the ball.

The impressive win didn't go for naught as the Piety climbed to eighth place in both the AP and UPI polls and remained in first place in the Lambert Trophy race.

The next hurdle they had to clear was unbeaten Holy Cross, which had dealt SU a pair of one-point defeats during the 1957 and 1958 seasons.

But there was no indecision in the minds of the players and the fans as to the outcome of the game once Syracuse got possession of the ball.

The only question was how lopsided it would be. When the final gun sounded, the scoreboard read: Syracuse 42, Holy Cross 6. Ger Schwedes stood out, accumulating close to 200 yards in total offense and scoring two touchdowns.

The polls, which came out two days after the Crusader rout, showed a marked advance as the Orangemen moved from eighth to sixth place in the AP and UPI ratings, while retaining the No. 1 spot in tthe Lambert Trophy race with a perfect 10 point score.

Beating West Virginia the following Saturday proved to be a mere formality. Soph flash Ernie Davis carried the ball nine times for 141 yards, breaking the yards-per-carry standard set by Jimmy Brown. The final score was a crushing 44-0 win for the Orangemen as they nailed down their fifth straight triumph.

The polls came out the following Tuesday and gave the Hill fans a rise in spirits. SU had crashed into the top five in the UPI ratings and for the second consecutive week been the unanimous choice for first place for the Lambert Trophy.

On Thursday of that week the nation-wide statistics revealed that the Piety were No. 1 in the country in offense and defense.

Pitt became Syracuse's sixth victum of the season as they were humbled 35-0 at Pitt Stadium. Five different men scored touchdowns, the last coming on a 100-yard interception by Dan Rackiewicz with 19 seconds remaining.

The game of the year in the East and possibly in the country was to take place the following Saturday at Penn State's Beaver Field. Bowl Berths and national rankings hinged on the outcome of the game with SU's 6-0 record pitted against State's 7-0 mark.

A record crowd of 32,800 packed the stands and roared their approval when Roger Kochman capped a 55-yard drive going 17 yards into the end zone. The try for point after was wide and the boys from State led, 6-0.

Early in the second period, the Piety had a drive halted on the Lion eight by Dick Hoak's interception. But moments later following a punt, Ger Schwedes cut sharpely and went into the end zone from seven yards out to boost the Orangemen into a tie. Bob Yate's conversion was perfect and U took the lead 7-6.

Syracuse came out strong in the second half scoring a touchdown on a Sarette-to-Art Baker pass. Early in the fourth quarter Ernie Davis broke loose and made the score 20-6. At this point it looked as if the game of the year in the East was going to turn into a rout.

Kochman had other ideas. On the ensuing kickoff he ran it back 100 yards to make it 20-12. The two-point conversion failed.

With time running out on the Penn State express and the Lions trailing by eight, SU was forced to punt. Andy Stynchula broke through the line and blocked Bob Yates' punt with State recovering on the one-yard line.

On the next play, they rammed it over, needing a two-point conversion to tie the score. Kochman never got past the line of scrimmage as he was hit by five men. The gun sounded.

As the players headed into the locker room, the news of the victory was on the ticker tapes throughout the country. Within moments of the conclusion of the SU-Penn State thriller news of the losses suffered by top-rated LSU and second ranked Northwestern reached the Orangemen.

The general feeling was that of elation and accomplishment compounded with the unanimous opinion that they were no. 1 football team in the nation.

The polls released the following Tuesday didn't disappoint a soul at SU. The Piety were ranked first with a total of 319 points, nine ahead of second place Texas.

The schedule that remained promised nothing short of a perfect season: Colgate on Nov. 14, Boston University the following week, and UCLA Dec. 5.

Colgate and BU wished they had never taken the field against the Hill forces as they became steamroler victims eight and nine by 71-0 and 46-0 counts, as both Ernie Davis and Ger Schwedes scored three touchdowns against the Terriers. Schwedes' final tally of the day tied Jimmy Brown's season TD record of 14.

BEN SCHWARTZWALDER

Schwedes broke the mark two weeks later in the Los Angeles Coliseum with a couple of scores en route to a 36-8 shellacking of the Bruins and the first unbeaten season in the school's 71 years of competition.

The statistics, when released, showed the Orangemen in possession of natioanl titles in rushing offense, total offense, rushing defense, scoring and touchdown passes. They had scored 390 points and had allowed the opposition just 59.

Never before had a team so dominated NCAA figures. Along with the no. 1 ranking came Coach-of-the-Year honors for Ben Schwartzwalder.

The only remaining task for Ben's boys was to dispose of Texas in the Cotton Bowl on New Year's Day, while destroying the general feeling in the Lone Star State that the Longhorns deserved the no. 1 rating.

In a hard-fought game, SU retained its prestige by outhustling Texas, 23-14. It was a game which produced conduct becoming an athlete in the form of racial insults on the part of the hosts.

The important points to remember are that the Piety accomplished two things with the Bowl win. They performed in such a manner as to avenge their defeat in the Cotton Bowl in 1957 when they bowed to TCU, 28-27.

But most important, they made amends for their Orange Bowl loss of the previous year and started out the new one on the right foot.

Weather Aids Crew

In his effort to get Syracuse's crew moving, varsity coach Loren Schoel has received help from another source lately. Mother nature.

With temperatures in the 40s and icy winds blowing, the SU crew has been rowing with enthusiasm. In its first week and a half on Lake Onondaga, the varsity has recorded 60 practice miles.

Despite the fact that SU has a young crew this season—the roster lists four seniors, 10 juniors and 14 sophomores—Schoel is anticipating a successful season. "The attitude is great, spirit is terrific," he said. "We've been making noticeable improvement."

So far the varsity has been taking out three boatloads each day concentrating on distance work to build endurance. Schoel emphasized that he has no set varsity lineup as yet.

Meanwhile frosh coach Bill Sanford has a squad of 40 yearling candidates "pulling" for a big year. "We want to stay out till the end of October weather permitting," said Sanford. "We're planning to have intrasquad races at the end of the month with medals for the winners."

"Physically we have a bigger squad than last year," said Sanford. "Last spring we lost four races by a total of eight seconds. We were just too light. This year we've got size to go with oarsmanship. It's going to make the difference."

"This team's got the right attitude" he added. "In fact, the spirit's the best it's been in my six years at Syracuse."

Unbeaten UCLA

Up front, SU's offense features ends Jim Cripps and Harris Elliott, just off the injured list; tackles Gary Bugenhagen and Harris Wienke; guards Howie McCard and Tony Scibelli; and center Pat Killorin.

The Uclans are also well set on the forward wall. Left end Kurt Altenberg is rated an outstanding pass catcher and right tackle Kent Francisco looms as an All-American candidate. Other line stars are center Prentice O'Leary and linebacker Jim Miller.

The game marks the third of the campaign for the West Coast Bruins against Eastern opponents. They dropped Pitt, 17-12, and Penn State, 21-14.

"It looks like it's our job to uphold the prestige of the East," offered Orange coach Ben Schwartzwalder.

And the prestige of Piety Hill as well.

"what can my job be at IBM?"

In IBM Data Processing, your job can be full of variety. Especially when you consider all the ways computers are used.

As an IBM Data Processing Systems Engineer, you would be helping customers get the most from their computers. They could be customers in science, government, education, defense, industry, or business. You might even specialize in one field.

Or, as an IBM Data Processing Representative, you would present to customer executives your ideas for doing their work better with computers. Your own imagination and initiative are the limits of what you can accomplish in marketing IBM products.

If you are working toward a degree—in Liberal Arts, Engineering, the Sciences, or Business Administration—find out what IBM can offer you in the way of achievement. Thorough training at special IBM schools will prepare you for work in either Systems Engineering or Marketing.

Girls and Football Mix in Orangeland

By BOBBIE MARX

What doess a girl know about football? If you asked this question of the majority of boys on the campus, the answer would be a certain "nothing." But since almost half of the viewing crowd at Ardhbold this Saturday will be girls, the DO seriously questions the accuracy of such a generalization.

For example, to a certain, although admittedly small, percentage of females, football is almost a way of life. On this campus not only are they personally acquainted with members of the team, but might be overheard to discuss the game in such technical terms that even the most enthusiastic male fan would be overawed.

Drafting, punting and penalties are as clear to them as is cooking to most others of the female species. Carrying on a continual pursuit of scouts, these girls are so essential to football, that coaches have been known to contact them before the news wires.

Next under scrutiny is the collegiate-type girl, who has followed football from the time she was first subjected to it at her father's knee. These girls, who loyaly followed their teams through high school may be assumed to possess as certain knowledge of the sport.

And then consider the cheerleaders and boosters, who can be expected to know something judging by their screaming every time a touchdown is made.

And now, the average girl viewer, who unfortunately has a limited knowledged but on whom the game is still not wasted. Her voice adds volumes to the cheering, even is she is not sure what's she is cheering for. Her outfit, carefully selected lends color to the stands. If by chance her team loses, she is a pleanst distraction from after game blues.

Girls do enjoy footbali, even if be only an opportunity to soak up the sun for a few hours, or to have a date. Even if "nothing" is all she knows about the play no one can disagree that she is an addition to any man's game.

Weekend Exhibits Show Library Books, Hill Work

By RENEE BRAUN

Paintings, books and a model of the proposed campus will enhance the campus during Parents Weekend.

The main library will feature two exhibits. Syracuse-in-Asia will exhibit "Paperbacks on China" in the foyer from 7:50 a.m. to 11 p.m. today and Saturday and from 2-10 p.m. Sunday.

In addition to the paperbacks on China, all of which are on sale at the main branch of the Syracuse University Bookstore, there are various Chinese art objects. The brocades, ivory carvings and ceramics were loaned by the Lowe Art Museum and two private lenders.

The other library exhibit will be located in the Rare Book Room. It will be a collection of rare editions of Oriental classics in English. Illustrated copies of "The Rubaiyat of Omar Kihayyam" and Arabian Nights" will be featured. This exhibit will be open from 9 a.m.-4:40 p.m. today and Saturday and 2-5 p.m. Sunday.

Two new members of the School of Art faculty, Gerda Peterich and Tetsuo Ochikubo, currently have their work on exhibit in the Lowe Art Center.

Miss Peterich, who teaches art history, has a group of photographs on exhibit which show various elements of Victorian cities in New England. Included in the exhibit are pictures of churches, schools and government buildings.

Ochakubo, a native of Hawaii, is showing a group of his water colors and oils as well as some prints. He is currently teaching drawing and callegrathy, the art of writing.

Both art exhibits will be open from 9 a.m.-5 p.m. and 7-10 pm. today, 9 a.m.-10 p.m. Saturday and 9 a.m.-6 p.m. Sunday.

In addition to the art exhibit at Lowe, there will be a student art exhibit in the basement of Slocum Hall. This showing will contain representive work of classes in every media from figure drawing to advertising. Hours for the exhibit are from 8 a.m.-10 p.m. today, 8 a.m.-7:30 p.m. Saturday and 8 a.m.-5 p.m Sunday

A model of the projected Syracuse University campus built a number of years ago by Noreda Rotunno, a professor of landscape archetecture in the School of Archeticture, will be exhibited this weekend in the lobby of Huntington B Crouse Hall from 8 a.m.-6 p.m. today, 8 a.m.-7:30 p.m. Saturday and 8 a.m.-5 p.m Sunday

Rotunno said most of the buildings shown in the exhibit have now been completed. The model pictures only the main quad and does not include such structures as Haven Hall.

The model has been used many times at such functions at this Parents' Weekend.

The student photography exhibit scheduled for the Newhouse Communications Center will not be held because the exhibition area in the building has not been installed yet.

Frederick Demarest, head of the photography department of the School of Journalism, said as soon as the facilities are installed photography exhibits will be shown

The work of a senior in the School of Art, Thomas Black, is being exhibited in the Comstock Lounge of Shaw dormitory.

Included in the exhibit are six large encaustic which are a wax and resin solution paintings and 37 smaller works in ink, charcoal, oil and pastel.

The basic theme in his work is the human figure and his chief interest is color. In addition to his works in Shaw, Black has a mural in the lounge of the Lowe Art Center.

The Shaw showing will run for the entire month of October.

Faculty Starts Pro-Keating Organization

As the Nov. 3 elections draw nearer, political activity on the Hill is fast approaching its peak.

Wednesday a group of faculty members and administrators announced the formation of Onondaga County's Scholars for Keating organization.

The organization whose membership boasts such persons as Vice President and Dean of Public Affairs Kenneth G. Bartlett and Dr. Michael O. Sawyer political science associate professor who just returned to campus after one year's leave of absence to work for the Federal Government, will actively work for the re-election of Sen. Kenneth B. Keating.

The group hopes to include faculty members from other local colleges and will provide speakers and researchers for the remainder of Keating's campaign, Sawyer said.

Other charter members of the group are: Ronald H. McDonald, assistant professor of political science; and Dr. Ralph L. Ketcham, professor of American studies and citizenship.

Happiness, to some elation, is to others, mere stagnation. —Amy Lowell.

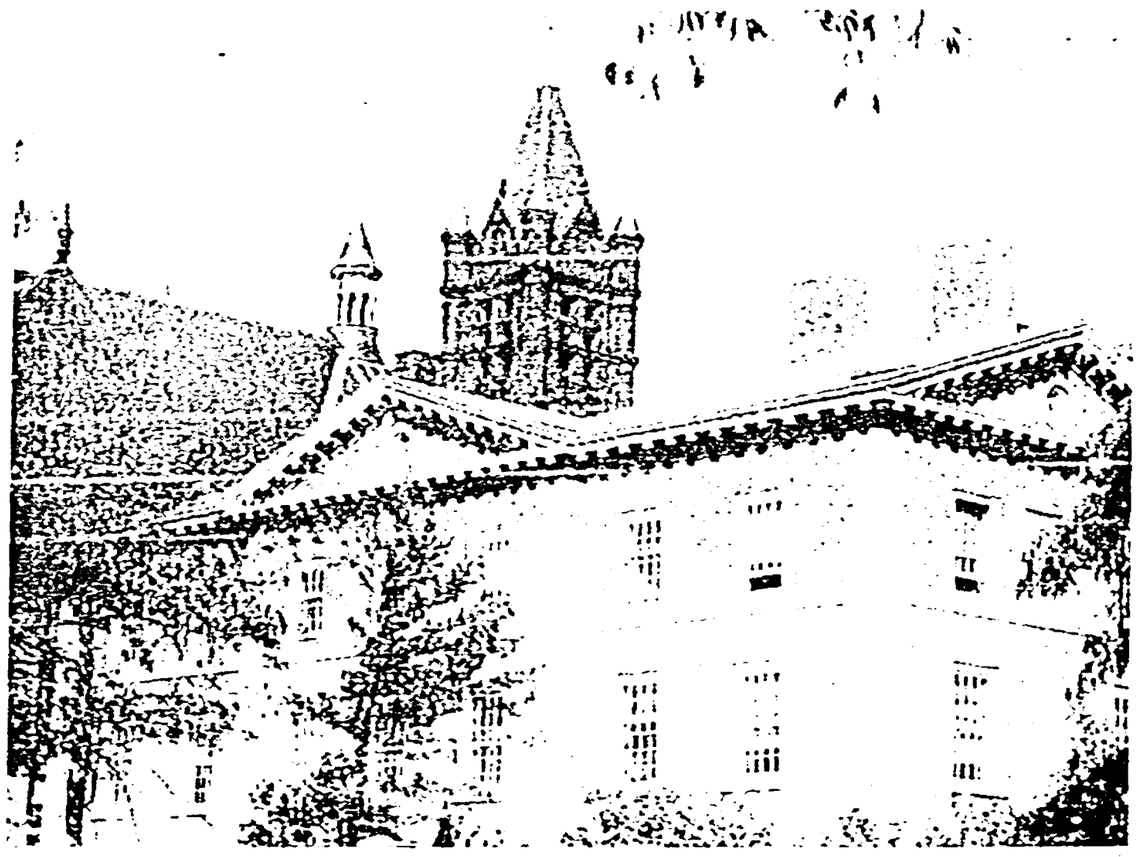
SU Welcomes Parents



Maxwell Hall (front) and Crouse College

Main Library

Various activities for the 1964 Parents' Weekend are centered around campus buildings.

Mums and "I am a Father" buttons are being sold in the lobby of Huntington B. Crouse Hall. Mums and buttons will be worn to the Saturday football game.

The famous School for Parents will be held in Hendricks Chapel. In this school parents will study courses similar to those being taught to their offspring in SU classrooms.

Crouse College, which is often referred to as the Hill's medieval castle, is shown here behind Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs. The Goon Show will be revived in the auditorium of Crouse for the benefit of all parents and students who have not yet seen the revised show.

The steps of the Main Library will be the scene of today's pep rally which will urge the Syracuse Orangemen to victory over the UCLA Bruins.

The map pictured here shows all the spots parents might want to go in order to see what their children have (or have not) been writing home about.

Maxwell to Print Graduate Review

Plans for publication of the first research graduate review have been disclosed by the Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs.

The review will be supported be supported by pledges collected from students. So far, 25 graduate students already have pledged an average of $5 per person for a total of $125.

The publication of the first issue of the review is scheduled for the week of Oct. 19-23. The second edition will be published late in November.

Articles for the review, either scholarly research articles, five to 15 double-spaced typewritten pages, or scholarly articles on social and academic issues, two to 10 double-spaced, typewritten pages must be submitted before Wednesday, to be considered for publication.

All work should include the author's name, address, phone number, department and academic degrees.

Already chosen as the editorial board for the first issue are James D. Carroll, John K. Gargan and Stuart K. Witt.

Letters to the editor should be deposited in the social science review box in the mail room on the second floor of Maxwell Hall. All letters must be signed, giving address and telephone number.

Subscriptions which will include at least the first issue, free of charge, are being offered to all Maxwell graduate students and faculty members.

Contributions and payments on outstanding pledges may be sent to Stuart Will at the office of Metropolitan Studies Center or to Johhn Gargan, 504 Maxwell.

Folks, Don't Sit in Student Seats at Game

A plea has been made to all students by the Parents' Weekend Committee and student leaders not to bring their parents or other visitors into the students seating section at the football game.

Many students will be deprived of seats if unauthorized people are brought into the student section.

In an attempt to avoid this, the student seating will be chained off, and identification cards will be confiscated at the gate if used by anyone other than their owners, according to Steven Rubell, football seating commissioner.

Rubell emphasized that identification cards will be very closely checked and urged the cooperation of all students, parents and visitors.

Happiness is rarely absent; it is we that know not of its presence. —Maeterlinck.

Campus Rage

Cycles Help Hill Parking

The campus parking dilemma has forced many students to seek transportation by the fast but loud motorcycles.

These two-wheeled vehicles along with their sisters, the motorscooter and the motorbike, have appeared in increasing numbers around Syracuse University this year.

A poll of motorcycle owners taken at their parking spot at Sims Hall indicated that the machines were primarily purchased for their ease in parking.

Subsequent reasons given were gasoline economy, up to 100 miles per gallon, and speed. The cycle's sportiness ran fourth as a reason for purchase.

Cycling is becoming respectable and this may be another reason for the increased appearances of this specie. The days of the black leather-jacketed motorcycle gangs of the thirties appear to be over.

Motorcycles do not have to be registered with security police as do the more than 6,000 automobiles on campus. However, according to security police, cycles are not allowed on the campus proper. They must be left at the Sims parking area which faces College Place.

Attesting to the manueverability and usefulness of the cycle is the security police itself which recently has acquired a three-wheeler of its own.

City Asks for Posters to Stop

A plea for the removal of posters from trees and utility poles has gone out to Syracuse University students from the Four Seasons' Clean-up Committee.

Mrs. Maria H. Farr, who is chairman of the city committee and a councilwoman in Syracuse, said, "This committee feels that the use of utility poles for posting is a hindrance to the beautification of our community. Also, it is a violation of state and local law."

According to Mrs. Farr, there are many posters which have been put up by Hill students on telephone poles along Euclid avenue and Marshall street.

Olegan S. Ohab, superintendent of SU's Buildings and Grounds is a member of the committee.

OLD J-SCHOOL

The Absent-Minded Professor

By JOAN KLEIN

The recently vacated old journalism center exemplifies the absent minded professor of the past gazing bewilderedly at his updated counterpart.

There is a feeling of abandonment in the ivy-covered building which contained so much literary activity last fall.

The building has served many purposes since its construction in 1929. The stained glass windows now marked "To be sent to Lowe Art Center. Dr. Dibble." are remnants of its days as a chapel.

When Hendricks Chapel was built, the two-story red brick building became a women's gymnasium. The School of Journalism occupied the building next after the Women's Bldg. was built in 1953.

This summer, after 11 years of residence, the journalists left in the name of progress.

The Newhouse Communications Center represents the latest architectural and technical innovations. Its horizontal marble slabs replace the domed brick roof of the chapel turned gymnasium turned journalism building.

Instead of stained glass windows, wooden doors and fall-out shelter signs, it has an abundance of clean lines, plate glass, and venetian blinds.

In contrast to the feeling of reverence the old building communicates, the NCC creates a sense of mission of things to be accomplished, and obstacles to be overcome.

The old building represents history and tradition. Newhouse Communications Center is an indication of man's endless attempt to become self-sufficient to overcome the limitations confronting him.

The quote by Samuel I. Newhouse inscribed in the marble walls in the lobby of NCC—"A free press must be fortified with greater knowledge of the world and skill in the arts of expression" instills in student and teachers alike a determination.

Various comments by teachers and personnel of the journalism school indicate there are problems that need to be ironed out, but the general consensus is that the latest electronic facilities will provide the students with the greatest opportunities for success.

ball game, and open house in living centers and Greek houses. Dedication of the Mt. Olymous dormitory, Day Hall, took place Sunday afternoon with a ribbon-cutting ceremony. About 5,000 parents traveled to SU for the event.

The School for Parents was initiated officially in 1959 and was set for Friday of the weekend.

Oct. 28-30 were the dates of the 1961 weekend, attended by 6,000 parents. Following the SU-Holy Cross game, parents were invited to a program by the Syrafins and the modern dance group, a discussion in Maxwell Hall and a presentation by Players Inc.

Last year's Parents Weekend included dedication of Willis H. Booth Hall and the SU-West Virginia game. "Pow-wow for Parents" was the theme of the three-day program and, for the first time, "I am a Father" buttons were proudly displayed.

Held Nov. 8-10, about 5,000 parents were entertained with a repeat of the Goon show, A pep rally, and a play, "The Guns of Carrar.".

"The football game scheduled for Saturday alters the parking situation," according to Flaherty. "The athletic department charges a 50-cent fee for parking at the fieldhouse and at St. Mary's lot on Van Buren street starting at 11:15 a.m.

"For those who pay to park at the fieldhouse, free buses will provide shuttle service to the Women's Bldg. after 11:15 a.m."

Security has prepared and mailed a special map for parents bearing complete information on the parking situation during the weekend. A limited supply of maps are still available at the security office, prefab 19.

Campus Traditions Date Back To Birth of University in 1870

By EDWARD VINCENT

Since the founding of Syracuse University in 1870, tradition has been as much a part of its history as the ivy-covered walls of its oldest building on campus, Hall of Languages.

Much of the tradition of the university can be located geographically. A brass sculpture of the Greek godess Diana in the front foyer of the Main Library has been a good luck guardian for hundreds of Hill students. By rubbing the paw of Diana's dog and reciting a prayer, students are supposedly assured of success on any quiz or examination.

The Saltine Warrior, now symbol of the university, stands at the entrance to the guard. Its live counterpart provides part of the color at Hill football games.

The carillon, nestled in the tower of Crouse College, has been rung daily at 7:50 a.m. and 1 p .m., by the brothers of Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity since 1894.

A stone bench next to Hall of Languages should not be avoided by freshman girls.

If a freshman is kissed while sitting there, she will be assured of happiness.

Rivalry between classes has been responsible for much tradition at Syracuse. The placard cheering section at football games evolved from a feud between the sophomores and freshmen.

Freshman "lids", or beanies first used in 1874, have remained a means of distinguishing the freshmen from the upperclassmen.

Class rituals also have left their mark on the Hill. The "lantern ceremony," conducted by Eta Pi Upsilon, senior women's honorary, and the "pipe ceremony" established by senior men in 1875, are both symbolic of the passing of responsibility from the seniors to the hands of the juniors.

In June 1872, rose pink and pea green were chosen as the school colors. The next year azure was chosen to replace pea green. The colors were again changed in 1890 and in that year orange was chosen as the color to represent the whole university. To this day Syracuse remains the only school to boast a single school color.

Attempts to find a school song were begun in 1871, and eventually led to the adoption of the "Alma Mater", written by Junios W. Stevens in 1893.

After a series of unsuccessful efforts to establish a university newspaper, the Daily Orange was founded Sept. 15, 1903, by Irving R. Templeton, Lloyd L. Cheney and Clement T. Robertson.

Academically, Syracuse University is the holder of still more tradition. The College of Fine Arts was the first degree granting school of its kind, as was Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs. The College of Forestry was the first school of its kind to offer specialized degrees.

Syracuse University is one of the few schools in the country to include student participation on majority administrative policy boards. So the tradition of close relationship between students and administration is also a part of the university's heritage.

In a speech given to the keepers of Syracuse tradition, Goon Squad and Traditions Commission, Chancellor William P. Tolley said:

"Concern for students, interest in students and faith in students are all hallmarks of Syracuse. . .We are tremendously proud of our students. We are impressed by their talent, their enthusiasm, their ambition, their sense of responsibility and their loyalty.."

SU HUMBLES BRUINS

Defensive Spiders, Nance, Little Shine In 39-0 Hill Victory

By BILL CRONAUER
Sports Editor

Judging from the way comparisons flew around the UCLA dressing room late Saturday afternoon, one might think Syracuse boasted the entire All-America team.

And, after glancing at the scoreboard which read SU 39. UCLA 0, few people could argue.

Bruin coach Bill Barnes noted, "Jim Nance and Junior Coffey of Washington are the two finest fullbacks I've seen."

He continued, "Floyd Little is a great back. He's almost as good as Mike Garrett of Southern Cal, but with a little more speed."

Coffey and Garrett rank as the top backs on the West Coast.

If someone had asked him about defensive ends George Fair and Herb Stecker, chances are he would have come up with some additional examples.

As things turned out, Barnes and his star-studded Uclans probably wished they had stayed at home and faced their Coast foes.

With Nance and Little handling the offensive chores and the spectacular Spiders the defense, Syracuse completely humiliated the UCLA eleven before 35,000 chilled onlookers.

Nance, a tiger all day with his running and blocking, notched two six-pointers of his own and drew a big assist on Little's 90-yard punt return touchdown.

Bruiser Bo pounded for 148 yards rushing on 22 carries. His crunching downfield block of a would-be Uclan tackler enabled Little to scamper home with the second Orange score of the afternoon.

Floyd's punt-return jaunt established a Hill record, being 14 yards longer than one by Bunky Morris in 1941. Other-

Davis Fund Catches Fire At Syracuse

The Ernie Davis Leukemia Fund, established last year at Brockport State University, received enthusiastic Hill support Wednesday.

The senior, junior and sophomore classes, the InterFraternity Council, Traditions Commission, Newman Club, Syracuse University Commission of Community Affairs and other groups offered to head the Syracuse drive to raise funds in memory of the late Ernie Davis, in conjunction with a Sept. 30 Daily Orange editorial.

Representatives from each of the major groups have formed an administrative committee to organize the fund drive.

Other interested organizations are urged to send an official representative to the fund drive meeting 7 p.m., Thursday at Chapel House, 711 Comstock Ave.

Happy Talk

From Tuition to Food -- Officials Answer Queries

By CAROL RUBRIGHT
Junior Editor

University officials put on a happy face Friday afternoon and good-naturedly discussed campus questions and problems with about 150 parents in Gifford Auditorium of Huntington B. Crouse Hall.

Queries ranged from; "Will tuition be raised?" to "Are entering freshmen emotionally and mentally mature enough to make the commitments needed in college life?" Questions were mailed in by parents earlier.

The question "Why is the food so bad?" was raised at dinner time. It drew laughter from the parents and this reply from Vice President and Treasurere Francis A. Wingate:

"Well, the gustatory horizons of the students are limited." Wingate added that there has been poor communication between food service and the students but that a dietary menu committee has been formed which has proved to be quite constructive.

In response to the question on tuition, Wingate said:

"We don't know for sure what will happen next year, but it wouldn't surprise me if there was an increase."

Dean of Women Marjorie C. Smith spoke on student maturity.

"The situation today is no different than at any other times," she said.

"However, students are faced with more decisions today and our responsibility is one of helping them discover the answers."

A member of the audience asked if students "stayed away in droves" from professors who were known to be hard markers.

Professors who grade too easily too long do not stay long at Syracuse," replied Alfred H. Cope, assistant dean of the College of Liberal Arts.

Although we wanted only 2,100 freshmen," John S. Hafer, dean of personnel administration, said, "we got 2,535." This was no one's fault — but one of the pitfalls of the guesswork involved in admissions, he said.

Because of this, many freshmen were closed out of classes such as Geology 1 which also admitted upperclassmen. Registrar Edwin D. Smith said:

"These people just happened to pick rocks, and they got shoals."

'68 Candidates Go Stumping

By MARLENE CIMONS

Nominees for freshman class officers kicked off a four-day period of vigorus campaign activity at noon Sunday.

The candidates for president are: John Subbiondo of Sims I and Port Washington; William (Todd) Wallens of Watson West 4 and Niagara Falls; and Robert Bagnall of Hungerford Cottage and Poughkeepsie.

In a speech delivered at the nominating convention Thursday, Subbiondo stressed leadership as the key to all progress, and named housing and freshman women's curfews as two of the most important problems facing the student body.

Wallens offered a challenge to the class of '68 to strengthen its unity and work for a common goal.

He also declared that he would work to attain a "dynamic and successful freshman weekend."

Bagnall called for a platform based on two words: "act now" and promised to promote fast action in areas which he believed deserved the most attention.

Among those which he listed were: housing, communications, the Greek system, freshman weekend, food service and the creation of a student union.

Vice Presidential hopefuls include: Miriam (Mimi) Bernstein of Day 4 and Rochester; Michael Villari of Watson West 4 and Canastota; and Jeffrey Lovelace of Watson West 3 and Greenwich, Conn.

Miss Bernstein proposed that a freshman bulletin board be set up on campus for the sole use of the class, and a frosh flyer be mailed to all members.

"In this way," she said, "every freshman should and will feel a part of his class."

Villari called for an increased effort on the part of the freshman class to push the building of a student union.

"Twenty-five hundred students can do a lot for this university, and it is up to the class administration to instigate this goal," he said.

He also suggested that a better working understanding should evolve among the students, the bookstore, and the administration.

Lovelace stressed the need for a closer student-teacher relationship and proposed this could be achieved by the realization of the class's in-

Off and Running

PAUL SIMON, a member of the freshman committee which directed the frosh nominating convention Thursday, discusses procedures with three candidates for '68 president, ROBERT BAGNALL, JOHN SUBBIONDO and WILLIAM (TODD) WALLENS.

'Tis Better To Build

The impression we received from our few moments at the freshman nominating convention last week, as well as comments from several others who attended the meeting, makes us wonder once again about the direction of the class of '68.

Never before can be remember so many speeches of condemnation for so many various facets of the campus, including ourselves, which is merely routine.

But the gall with which some of the freshman candidates attacked the university, obviously without checking either facts or possible methods of solution for problems, leaves us wondering if the class as a whole will fall for such campaigning tactics.

The way to make an impression seems to be to condemn, to call for food boycotts, to attack curfews, the administration and the Daily Orange. It is truly amazing how many freshmen think they know so much (and really know very little) after being here less than a month.

Apparently a segment of the freshman class has fallen in with a popular segment of the campus, thinking it is easier to destroy than to build, easier to condemn than to compliment.

The class of '68 is too smart to be duped by such destructive campaign tactics. If it is truly the class most of the candidates seem to think it is, then it will repulse condemnation in favor of construction.

Yet most of the candidates seemed to have at least a twinkling of the right idea — they are an integral part of the university and in tearing it down they are bringing about their own downfall.

But congratulations are in order, too. A hearty pat on the back must go to chairman Paul Simon and the rest of the freshman elections commission for taking charge when leadership was needed. Simon will surely attest that chairing a convention of restless frosh is not among the world's most desired tasks.

Freshmen are young, happy people. It is heartwarming to see exuberance on the campus. Hopefully the exuberance will be aimed at bettering the university, not belittling it.

Keep your spirit, frosh. Just be a trifle careful in where you aim it. Syracuse isn't really such a bad place. Just relax and enjoy everything the school has to offer.

And remember your first lesson in campus politics — don't speak without checking your facts, especially when upperclassmen are listening.

Bull by the Horns

From Here to Absurdity

By Rich Turner

I was sitting in the Varsity the other day watching those tight-slacked lovelies as they put the make on the med students. I had just begun to immerse myself in an unexpurgated copy of Plato's Republic when someone sat down across from me. It was Clyde Grandison, sometime campus leader, part-time student, and full-time rallier.

"Hey Babes," I said with profound delight.

"Hello, Rich. How's your bod?"

"Fine, Clyde. I haven't seen you around lately. What have you been doing?"

"Finding my identity."

"Good. Anything else?"

"Rich, I'm being serious. It's time I stopped moving with the masses, wearing my pea green rain coat, and singing frat songs."

"But everyone wants their place on the quad."

"Yes, but I've sold my soul to T.C."

"Well, what is it you want to do?"

"I'd like to go to the library and study for two hours straight, take a girl to a concert, and after the concert take her to some nice place and discuss something besides rush, her oriental art course, and the Colgate guy she's going out with next week."

"Anything else?"

Yeah, I want to chain myself to a tractor in the 15th ward, sing freedom songs on the chapel steps, and switch out of poli. sci."

"Well, what's stopping you?"

"What's stopping me, Are you kidding? How could I face my fraternity brothers or stand on the HBC patio and gape at the girls? Not only that, but I could never date another...."

(Did you hear about the guy who sold his Sting Ray and lost his girl?)

"I don't know about that. The campus can't be that cliquey and shallow."

"Come on—be serious. You just wrote a funny article and a sorority girl tried to knife you at T.C."

"No—that's just a rumor. She just tried to stick me with her circle pin."

"But you weren't being malicious, I can't understand why people can't take it in the spirit it was intended."

"Look, there are just a few people on this campus who are going to dump on you no matter what you do—but for the most part the kids you hang around with have a lot more than they want to show."

"Well, Rich, maybe you're right but I'm awfully afraid I'll wake up one morning, walk across the quad all alone, and have nobody to sit with in Fine Arts 40."

I finished my sandwich and closed the book.

"You going up towards the library?"

"No, Rich, I think I'll head out to T.C. for a quickie. I'll see you in the library later..."

Frosh

To the Editor:

Re your article "To Freshman With Hope."

Regarding intoxicating beverage rules, it is not that the administration cannot enforce these rules, it is not that the administration is physically incapable of enforcing these rules, rather it is that the administration will not enforce them in conjunction with violations in the fraternity houses. The policy appears to be look the other way.

The abuses of the drinking rules are not done under such secretive circumstances such as to require police state methods to discover their presence. All that the supersleuths need do is walk in the general area of the fraternity houses on Walnut during a Friday or Saturday night and the fact will become apparent.

Make no mistake, I am not directing this against the fraternities. The point is that if we have to have such a rule the administration should enforce it impartially or not at all. An unenforceable law is worse than no law, it breeds defiance.

Conform

T.A.G. Says:

In trying to conform in this quite conformist of universities, one works very hard on extinguishing all activities that are disapproved of. I did this once, and finally a day came when I was unable to do anything, because my entire existence had piecemeal been frozen into immobility. I realized then that my being had fallen to intersect conformity at any point, and that like it or not, I could not become faceless, however dreamy it might seem at the time.

In this world, true nonconformity is not usually—voluntary.

Thomas A. Gusterson

Outside

To the Editor:

Speaking as an outsider, a Goldwater supporter, (you may laugh now, but wait until November), it seems to me that the issue of "carpetbagging" can be carried just so far. If Aristotle or even God were presently seeking the Senate seat from the state of New York, Keating supporters would dub him a "carpetbagger." Not to say that Bob Kennedy is capable, but if New York cannot have a good senator, she can at least have one with an impressive sounding name in Washington.

Richard A. Morgan '68

Housing

To the Editor:

The human compassion of our director of men's housing is overwhelming. Maybe next year to remove all vestiges of this unexecutive trait, we should use a real machine.

Esley Hamilton

Beer

To the Editor:

Come now, let's not be so shocked and enraged about this scandal thing. Loose morals and drinking are accepted on this campus by a good deal of the students. It is not strictly an off-campus activity. Witness the number of empty beer cans in Archbold Stadium after a game.

The recent episode was only one of many. Exposure forced the campus population to throw up its hands in surprise and indignation. An incident is like bad weather; everybody talks about it but the only people who do anything are those who participate in it. Let those who participate beware, for some day the rest of the students and the administration will stop looking the other way.

The Sounds of Jazz

Am I a Fake?

by Bill Newman

Last Monday night during my weekly radio show (heard on WAER-FM at 11 p.m.), I received a unique telephone call. At about 12:30 a.m., an unidentified caller accused me of being a fake and a fraud. He claimed that my radio style is a direct line for line copy of one Al Jazzbo Collins, one of the original late night jazz disc jockies. He asked if I "had anything between my ears," implying that I have no originality or intellectual capacity.

This mysterious caller, who refused to give his name, then dared me to put our conversation over the air via the use of a beeper phone, an electronic phone hook-up which allows the conversation to be broadcast without any prior tape recording. While I accepted his challenge, time did not allow for the needed electrical and engineering preparations. He agreed to call and make his accusations again. While I could not get him to come to our studios to do so, I have agreed to put him on the air live via a beeper phone.

The Sounds of Jazz, both in its written and spoken form is my own personal creation. I therefore accept all responsibility for its contents, and welcome this challenge and criticism of my ideas, opinions and production methods.

Since I will also be responsible for what passes between us on the air tonight, I feel that I must outline a few important ground rules for our proposed live conversation.

1) In accordance with F.C.C. regulations you must give your name and express full permission over the air for the conversation to be broadcast. This is no invention of mine, but the law of our land.

2) In further accordance with the F.C.C. broadcasting code; you must refrain from the use of any improper or "foul" language, whoever you are.

3) I reserve the right to interrupt our conversation at any time for the purpose of playing jazz records. This is not an evasion tactic. I merely wish to insure my regular listeners that their weekly diet of jazz will be provided. I intend to honestly answer all of your questions.

4) I feel that my listeners have the right to know the standpoint from which you accuse and insult me. I demand the right to question you on points relevant to our discussion.

I shall not defend myself in this column, as I feel that it would be an ethical violation of the right of free speech since the Daily Orange has granted you no space in this publication.

Let me conclude by saying that this freedom of exchange of intellectual viewpoints is as essential to the creation of jazz as it is for democracy. Jazz, its ideas and the people that surround it can only exist in a free atmosphere.

It is with pleasure that I accept your challenge. To my listeners and readers I heartly extend an invitation on behalf of myself and this mysterious caller, to join us on the Sounds of Jazz over WAER-FM at 11 p.m. today, as we dig the sounds of jazz and investigate the question, "Is Bill Newman a Fake?"

Music Review

by Martin Cohn

The Warsaw Philharmonic, making its second tour of the United States, stopped in Syracuse Wednesday night and gave a very respectable concert. The real highlight of the program was the violin concerto by Mieczyslaw Karlowicz, not by virtue of the music, however, but by the truly outstanding playing of the solosist, Wanda Wilkomirska. To my pleasant surprise, Miss Wilkomirska proved to be one of the best violinists, male or female, that I have ever heard. She combined passionate playing and a beautiful big tone with almost perfect intonation. Violin playing of this quality is rarely encountered, and makes one hope for the pleasure of hearing her again, especially in music of more intrinsic value than Karlowicz' cliche-ridden, lack of inspiration.

The orchestra itself was quite impressive. While not the greatest ensemble in the world, it certainly is a very good one. It is also fairly large; from my perch in the balcony, I counted thirty violins, thirteen violas, nine cellos, and eight double basses, giving it a string sound of depth and richness, one just right for the majority of the pieces it played.

The program opened with Cherubini's "Anacreon Overture," which showed us the precision of the orchestra and introduced us to the conducting of Witold Rowicki.

Maestro Rowicki cut a fine figure on the podium, with erect stature and elegant gestures somewhat reminiscent of Stokowski in his younger years. Rowicki seemed to be primarily concerned with phrasing; tension and overall conception were somewhat sacrificed to the finesse of the moment. This was not a great failing, however, because the orchestra seemed thoroughly conversant with the music, most probably having played the same pieces every night of their tour.

Perhaps it was the tour that was responsible for that something lacking in the main piece on the program, Tchaichowski's fourth symphony. This performance had everything that should have produced a good and exciting rendition, yet there was something eminently bloodless about the whole thing. In the end there was a dullness that suggested that the orchestra had played this piece just too many times in the course of their tour. It was more recitation than recreation.

One could not find fault with the playing of the symphony, though; the woodwinds were mellow and precise; the horns and trumpets rang out majestically, and the violins, though a bit dry, were well immersed in the style of the music.

These same qualities of playing made a good show of Prokofieff's "Classical Symphony." Maestro Rowicki's graceful performance was also not obvious to the pervasive humor of the score.

Not even good playing, however, could save the violin concerto of Karlowicz. Miss Wilkomirska, the soloist, told me that the composer died as a young man in 1909, and one could not help think that perhaps he died too early to develop some original ideas. Though his concerto did contain some beautiful melodies, its primary virtue was in introducing to us the violin artistry of Miss Wilkomirska.

Drama Group Initiates 11

At 5 p.m. last Sunday, Boar's Head Dramatic Society, in a traditional ceremony, initiated 11 members who were tapped recently for permanent membership. The new initiates are: Susan DeCico, Steven Gould, Sara Kapp, Michael Krawitz, Sandra Land, Nancy La Peter, Jean McNeill, Frank Morell, Steven Pascal, John Pear, and Jane Rieback.

Sitar Player To Perform At Regent

A new world of rhythm and melody will be unfolded in a concert with Ravi Shankar and his assisting musicians. The group is currently on a coast-to-coast tour which will hit Syracuse at 8:30 p.m. Friday, at the Regent Theatre as a part of the Syracuse University Celebrity Series.

Ravi Shankar, India's "Man of Music," is a virtuoso of the sitar, a stirring and decorative instrument which dates back 700 years. It has a fig-shaped resonator at one end and a hollow gourd at the other. Actually, it is a fretted and stringed instrument usually with seven main strings—five of steel and two of brass. Some sitars, including Ravi Shankar's, are furnished with a large number of sympathetic understrings, 17 to 19 of them, which vibrate when the principal strings are played.

Ravi Shankar, who is also a composer, leads the ensemble which employs other instruments including the tabla for counter-rhythm, and the tamboura which supplies hypnotic drone.

Tickets are available at the Regent Theatre box office.

Bach Concert

An all Bach program has been scheduled by the Syracuse Friends of Chamber Music for the opening concert of their 1964-1965 series of six musical events. Slated for 8:30 p.m. today in the Crouse College Auditorium, the program will include Bach's Overture (Suite) No. 1, C Major for two oboes, bassoon, strings and harpsichord, the "Musical Offering" which involves string and wind ensembles plus the harpsichord.

Performing the selections will be the Krasner Chamber Music Ensemble plus outstanding guest artists. Members of the Krasner Chamber Music Ensemble are Louis Krasner, violin; Adrienne Krasner, violin; Claude Bortel, viola and Frederick Miller, cello. Guest performers for tonight's concert will be George Pappastavrou, harpsichord; Anthony DeAngelis, basoon; Danial Carno, oboe and Philip MacArthur, oboe.

Schedule Stated For Graduate Record Exams at Syracuse

Applicants for admission to certain graduate and professional schools are required to take the Graduate Record Examinations given by the Educational Testing Service, Princeton, N. J.

These examinations are designed to give the graduate schools information concerning a senior's educational background and general scholastic ability. They are similar to the College Boards.

The Aptitude Test, a two and one-half hour test given in the morning, provides a measure of general scholastic ability at the graduate level. The Advanced Tests, each of which is three hours long, are given in the afternoon.

They are designed to measure comprehension of the materials basic to success in the field of the intended graduate major. The Aptitude Test is required for admission to graduate schools. The advanced tests are required by some departments, but not all.

The cost of the Aptitude Test is $7 and the cost of the Aptitude Test and one Advanced Test is $12.

The 1961-65 examination dates are Nov. 21, Jan. 16, March 6 and April 24. Registration closes 15 days before each examination.

Since it takes the Educational Testing Service six to eight weeks to report the scores, the Honors Council in the College of Liberal Arts advises students to take the Aptitude Test on Nov. 21. If Advanced Tests are required, they should be taken at the time suggested by the department to which you are applying or by a Syracuse University faculty advisor in that field, according to the council.

Application blanks for the Graduate Record Examination are available in 108 Hall of Languages.

International Students Aim At Strengthening U. S. Ties

By SUSAN STRANDBERG

The Hill's 500 foreign students are taking unprecedented steps to strengthen their tie with American students this year.

The International Student Organization, which has been trying to promote more interaction between American and foreign students has planned programs to interest to the entire campus.

"The goal of the ISO this year is to encourage an exchange between American and foreign students on an intellectual and social level," said Robert N. Fisher, president of ISO.

Fisher, a graduate teaching assistant in the School of Art, is the first American president of the organization. Two other Americans on the executive council are Terry Bullitt, social chairman, and Gloria Gordon.

"I think that the fact that Americans were elected to executive offices seems to indicate that foreign students want Americans to feel ISO does not belong to foreigners alone," Fisher said.

ISO is a loosely-structured organization for students of all nationalities which sponsors programs designed to promote international understanding.

For example, every December they hold an International Week.

Apart from ISO, geared to general interests, are the regional groups—Indian group, European group, and others—which assist members in orienting themselves to Syracuse in trying to promote a better understanding of their particular country or region.

These groups, open to all interested Syracuse students, meet weekly or bimonthly and discuss topics pertaining to that particular group. At a recent European students meeting, for example, a girl showed slides on her tour of the United States and commented on our country from her point of view.

"In planning our program for this year, we felt that the ISO had to look outward to broaden its persepective by looking at new problems and topics of discussion," said Fisher.

Students can look forward to a visit from the French Consulate or Embassy to discuss the Viet Nam crisis, to a program on discrimination as an international problem, to a discussion of the Kashmir crisis, to an evening on the Olympics in Japan, to a presentation of Soviet life by the two Russian students on campus, and to a program on the race problem in the United States.

The first meeting, scheduled for mid-October, will have a number of speakers interpreting the implications of the international policies of President Lyndon Johnson and Sen. Barry Goldwater.

DO CHICKENS SET PRACTICE

The Daily Orange Chickens football team will hold its initial public practice session at 5:45 today on the Women's Building Field. All Chickens are required to attend the rigorous last-minute drills in preparation for the game at Penn State Saturday.

Maxwell Pioneers New FAA Course

The Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs, in conjunction with the Federal Aviation Agency, began a pioneer program in the training of government officials for FFA work, this fall.

The objective of the program is to "help the participants to prepare themselves for more effective performance and more responsible positions in the public service," Gross said.

Out of 500 applicants to this series of courses, only the top 20 were selected for the program according to Bertram M. Gross, director of the Midcareer Executive Development Program.

These FFA personnel are enrolled in a 15-hour program of which 80 per cent of their time

The function of the Maxwell School is to help the participants "prepare" themselves, not to prepare the participants, he said. Gross described the program as a very difficult one, with high standards. The major assignments will be related to oral presentations, team work, and field work.

The "core" faculty from the the FAA program lists Sidney C. Sufrin, Victor A. Thompson and Gross. In addition to this staff, several others from the Maxwell faculty and various government officials will work together for the expected success of the program, Gross said.

The long days are no happier than the short ones.—Philip J. Bailey.

SU Vice President

Dean Piskor: 'Lord of Lords'

By CAROL RUBRIGHT
Junior Editor

"Why should we be in such desperate haste to succeed, and in such desperate enterprises? If a man does not keep pace with his companions perhaps it is because he hears a different drummer. Let him step to the music which he hears, however measured and far away."
Henry David Thoreau
"On Individuality"

This quotation, matted and framed, hangs on the wall of Frank P. Piskor's office, 303 Administration Bldg. It has become a symbol, through Piskor's 27 years at Syracuse University, of a hard-working man who is devoted to the university and is an individual in his own right.

Piskor, who started his career as a resident advisor in 1937 is now vice president for academic affairs and dean of faculties.

With a grin, Piskor told the Daily Orange: "Some of my colleagues call me 'Dean of Deans and Lord of Lords.'"

"The title dean of faculties means that I am dean of each SU school and college faculty," Piskor said, "but since I can't be in 16 places at once I have a staff of deans working for me."

As vice president for academic affairs, Piskor (pronounced Peace Corps) is responsible for all the educational programs of the university. He plans, budgets, recruits, promotes and hires new faculty for them.

"At least 50 per cent of my time is spent looking for and prospecting new staff," Piskor said.

In addition, the busy dean keeps track of the budgets and goings-on in each school and college of the university, chairs the University Senate committee on appointments and promotions, assists in planning new buildings for the campus and teaches a graduate seminar in public personnel.

"When we have time left, we plan—think about the university's future and new academic programs," Piskor said.

"And we never have as much time to devote to things as we'd like," he added.

For example, Piskor has been intensively studying plans for the new library and hopes to submit a report on it to the university Design Board within several months.

A man with diverse interests, Piskor serves the university as both administrator and professor of political science. His office book collection bumps the lighting fixtures in the high-ceilinged room, and he speaks proudly of his extensive home collection of 20th century poetry.

Piskor graduated from Middlebury College in 1937, came to Syracuse the following fall to work for his master's degree and has been here ever since. He earned his doctorate in political science here in 1950.

In spaking of his devotion to Syracuse University, Piskor said:

"There's no point in working for a place you don't believe in."

Syracuse Starts Elementary Math Education Class

A program to upgrade mathematics education in the elementary grades of Schenectady Public Schools has begun under the direction of the Bureau of School Service of Syracuse University's School of Education.

The program was jointly developed by five men—Dr. John W. Wilson and Dr. Vincent Glennon, both of the SU Arithmetic Studies Center; Dr. James R. Manwaring, director of the Bureau of School Service; Wendell Andrews, director of elementary education in Schenectady; and Douglas Vonie, principal of the Brandywine Avenue School in Schenectady.

Wilson described the program as too prolonged.

"Elementary school teachers will receive a basic course in mathematics education and a core group of teachers will receive additional training to carry on the program after the Syracuse University group withdraws," he said.

One of the first steps in the new program will involve testing of intermediate pupils (grades four, five and six) in the elementary schools. About 3,000 students are involved. Similar tests will be given to the students as the program progresses to assess the effect of the teacher training program on the children's learning, Wilson said.

"Besides testing mathematics abilities of the students," he said, "the program will also provide training for the 300 teachers giving the test."

The research division of the Schenectady public school system will administer and grade the tests. An advanced data processing system is employed by the Schenectady schools.

Results of the tests will establish a base from which to measure progress in the new program.

The basic mathematics course will be offered to 50 teachers at a time until all 300 have received the training. From these 300 teachers a group of teachers leaders will be selected to receive additional training. They will in turn provide continuing leadership for teachers in the Schenectady schools, Wilson said.

Some of the teacher-leaders have already been selected and are currently reviewing new teaching materials in mathematics, he noted. Teacher-leaders will also select text materials for 1965-66 city-wide adoption in Schenectady elementary schools.

Each Thursday Wilson travels to Schenectady to conduct the teacher training program.

The SU portion of the program is expected to be completed in two to three years, Wilson said.

Racial Crises Spark 'Event'

An evaluation of the Syracuse racial demonstrations in which many Syracuse University students took part last fall is featured in the latest issue of "Event."

"Syracuse: How Far from Rochester?" was written by Dr. George A. Wiley, professor of chemistry and an active member of Congress on Racial Equality. He was one of those arrested in the demonstrations here.

Published and distributed by University College, adult education branch of SU, the quarterly magazine is distributed free to all who request a copy.

Changed to a public affairs format when taken over last year by the Metropolitan Council for the Arts and Sciences, "Events" previously was a calendar of cultural activities.

Also included in the magazine is a calendar of public events and a listing of public officials and public affairs organizations.

The tallest Syracuse University football player is Brad Clarke, a 6-6 end from Harwichport, Mass. The little Orangeman is Nat Duckett of Fountainville, Pa., who has to stretch hard to make 5-9.

Foreign Reporter Speaks to Frosh

By GARY DIVIS

"I'll amuse you," promised Michael Stern as he addressed a freshman journalism class Friday. Stern is a foreign correspondent, turned novelist, who wrote "An American in Rome," currently a best seller.

Introduced by Dean Wesley C. Clark of the School of Journalism as a former student of Syracuse University, Stern was called, "one of the great reporters of our generation." Expecting to graduate in 1932, Stern took a job with the New York Journal American, three months before his commencement.

"To Score a Scoop" was the theme of his lecture to the journalism class. "To score a scoop wou must be there firstest with the mostest," commented Stern.

Three topics were involved in Stern's definition of getting a scoop. "You must create it. If you wait, the scoop might find you once in a lifetime. You have to have enterprise. The manner in which you approach a story is a story itself."

Stern illustrated these points with his own experience in getting stories in Italy and Greece.

MICHAEL STERN

The last point in Stern's theory for finding a scoop was that a reporter must be creative. He warned though:

"Never try to sensationalize anything."

To be successful journalist, Stern said a reporter must be an expert in a specific field. He must know a certain subject better than anyone else to succeed, and how to evaluate the information that he receives. "There is a great need for good journalists," Stern noted.

Architects Exhibit Photos

An exhibit of 28 buildings selected by the Federal Housing Administration to receive awards for design excellence will be on view in the School of Slocum Hall until Friday.

The photographic exhibit features single family dwellings, multi-family housing and living facilities for the elderly, D. Kenneth Sargent, dean of the school, said.

All buildings shown in the exhibit received awards during 1963.

Young GOP Hears Wortley

Sen. Barry M. Goldwater's basic policy was outlined for the Syracuse University Young Republicans Club Thursday by George C. Wortley III, a member of the Executive Committee of Citizens for Goldwater-Miller.

Wortley quoted Goldwater as saying: "The United States must lead the free world, not retreat from the hard obligations of that leadership," and explained that this means U. S. policy should be to win through a position of strength, not weakness or vacillation.

Goldwater never advocated the use of nuclear defoliants in Viet Nam, as suggested by the Pentagon, Wortley said.

Wortley is president of the Manlius Publishing Company which publishes the Daily Orange.

New Queen

Miss Syracuse Crowned

BARBARA MICSKI

Barbara E. Micski, a Syracuse University graduate student in mathematics, has been crowned the new Miss Syracuse when the reigning queen, Gretchen Ehle, relinquished her crown to get married.

This is the first time in the history of the contest, which is sponsored by the Syracuse Junior Chamber of Commerce, that a contest winner has married during her reign, thus forfeiting her title.

Miss Micski, the new queen, tied with Miss Ehle for first place in the Miss Syracuse Pageant which was held last spring. The pageant is held annually, and is a Miss America preliminary competition.

Miss Micski, who plans to teach advanced mathematics, is a 21-year-old blue-eyed blond.

A native of Schenectady, Miss Micski is the first Miss Syracuse to be a member of Phi Beta Kappa, national liberal arts honorary. She is a member of Sigma Kappa sorority and was chosen Junior Miss New York State in 1960.

The former queen, now Mrs. Timothy Sharlow, hails from Massena. No longer a student at Syracuse University, Mrs. Sharlow was a finalist for queen of the 1963-64 SU Winter Weekend.

She has light brown hair, blue eyes and is an avid swimmer and skier.

His whole life is an epigram smart, smooth and neatly penned, plaited quite neat to catch applause, with a hangnoose at the end.—Blake.

ADI to Hear Visiting Dane

A Danish graphic designer will speak to ADI, advertising design and illustration honorary, at 7 p.m. Tuesday.

Arne Andersen is a visiting professor of advertising design in the School of Art this year.

Augmenting his talk with slides, Andersen will compare his label and package designs for a Danish medical factory with those of the twenties and thirties.

Andersen has handled package designing, magazine advertising, posters and other advertising work for his clients.

Hendricks Chapel Makes Two Staff Appointments

Two new members have been appointed to the staff at Hendricks Chapel, according to Dean Charles C. Noble.

Mrs. Carol Ballard and the Rev. Harvey Harlan Bates are the two additions to the chapel staff.

Mrs. Ballard will serve as administrative assistant to the dean and will be directing activities at Hendricks Chapel. A 1961 graduate of Connecticut College for Women, she will replace Mark B. Sullivan, newly appointed director of Chapel House.

She said she is very "enthusiastic about the freedom of work and close cooperation" between the faculty and students with whom she will work.

A major portion of Mrs. Ballard's work will be serving as adisor to the Chapel Board, a group which organizes all non-denominational activities at the chapel. I foresee acting as a liaison between students and this board," she said.

Coming to the SU campus from the University of Maine is Rev. Bates. He will join the Rev. Norman O. Keim as a chaplain serving the United Campus Christian Fellowship. Rev. Bates has worked with students for the past eight years as coordinator of religious activities at the University of Maine.

Registration Forms Due For NSA Exam Oct. 24

Registration forms are now available for the National Security Agency's Professional Qualification Test, which is to be administered Oct. 24, at Syracuse University.

Deadline for receipt of registration forms is Wednesday.

The wide variety of NSA duties and the changing needs for projects require specialists who are well-trained but possess a "high degree" of flexibility and ingenuity.

The Professional Qualification Test provides data to supplement other available information, such as college records, recommendations, and interviews.

College graduates with majors from liberal arts fields can be utilized by NSA. Any United States citizen and holder of or candidate for at least a bachelor's degree by September, 1965 is eligible to take the test.

Engineering, mathematics, and physics applicants do not need to take the PQT, but should contact the placement director of their school for an appointment with a visiting NSA representative.

Because of the classified nature of NSA operations, all applicants for employment are subject to a thorough background investigation.

Interested students should complete the registration form contained in the Professional Qualification Test Bulletin of Information, which is available from placement directors or deans of the College of Liberal Arts, 210 Hall of Languages; College of Business Administration, 105 Slocum Hall; School of Journalism, 100 Newhouse Communications Center; School of Education, 200 Slocum Hall and School of Library Science, Main Library.

itative and maturity.

"We must have a genuine interest in life at Syracuse University," he stated, "Remember that seniors can now gaze back upon the past, but we can forge ahead for the future."

Nominees for the position of secretary are: Linda Lipitz of Lund Cottage and Kew Gardens Hill; Mary Hamilton of Mott Cottage and Albany; and Steven Berlin of Syracuse.

Miss Lipitz called for a new and novel freshman weekend, which might center around the theme of "Freshman Follies."

She also emphasized the importance of the relationship between privilege and responsibility. "One cannot have one without the other," she said, "and we can't have either without equality for all."

Miss Hamilton termed the freshmen as "the gr eatest class this campus has ever seen" and stressed the responsiblities of the individual class member as well as the class administration.

Berlin noted what he termed "a definite lack of communication between the freshmen and the administration."

He suggested the creation of a freshman newsletter which would be designed to reach faculty members as well as the entire class.

Those running for freshman class treasurer are: Alan Abrahamson of Watson West I and West Hartford, Conn.; Peter Lee of Watson Dormitory and Honolulu, Hawaii; and William Waldorf of Seymour Cottage and Port Washington.

Abrahamson asked for the response of all class members in stimulating interest, spirit and enthusiasm in freshman activities.

He also suggested sponsoring an event, such as a dance or show, in order to raise funds for the class needs.

Lee stresssd the importance of remaining out of debt and urged the students to be ever-eager to rally for something new and different.

"The treasurer has to know how to make money, as well as handle it," he said.

Waldorf stated the necessity of backing the ideas and wishes of the students, rather than bending to the wiles of the university administration.

"We must back liberal issues which the students want," he declared, "and not have do-nothing officers leading to a do-nothing administration."

Urban Renewal Lecture Today

The urban renewal plan for the city of Syracuse will be the topic of a lecture by Henry Wilhelmi, principal city planner of the Syracuse department of urban improvement.

The program will be held 7:30 p.m., today in Maxwell Auditorium. He will show slides to illustrate his discussion.

John R. Searles Jr., executive vice president of the Metropolitan Development Association will discuss community development and the role of the private association at 8:30 p.m., today, also in Maxwell Auditorium.

The lectures are sponsored jointly by the sociology and anthropology department, Metropolitan Studies Program and was initiated by Dr. Charles V. Willie's community organization course. Both are open to students and the Syracuse public.

Bad times have a scientific value. These are occasions a good learner would not miss—Emerson.

Blood Drive Training Set

Giving blood is not the only way to help the Blood Drive coming to the campus on Oct. 21-22.

Students may assist the regular bloodmobile staff as blood aides. The volunteers can choose any convenient time to work.

A six-hour training course must be completed to qualify as an aide. Two classes will be held from 2:30-5:30 p.m., on Tuesday and Thursday in the recreation room of Shaw Dormitory.

Attendance is mandatory. Mrs. Ladd of the Red Cross office in Syracuse, will conduct the sessions.

Each person completing the course will be awarded a certificate allowing the person to work at any bloodmobile in any community.

Students who have been aides in the past (e.g., last spring) do not have to attend the sessions. All questions should be directed to Miss Deborah Slade, dorm director, Haven Hall, ext. 3282.

One of the indictments of civilization is that happiness and intelligence are so rarely found in the same person.

Classes Crowded

Many students have found themselves in overcrowded classrooms situations, the Daily Orange has learned. Reports have been received that students are sitting on the floor or standing because of a lack of seating in some classes.

Registrar Edwin D. Smith said he has no knowledge of the problem. He asked to be notified if there are any student or faculty complaints on scheduling of classes in overcrowded spaces.

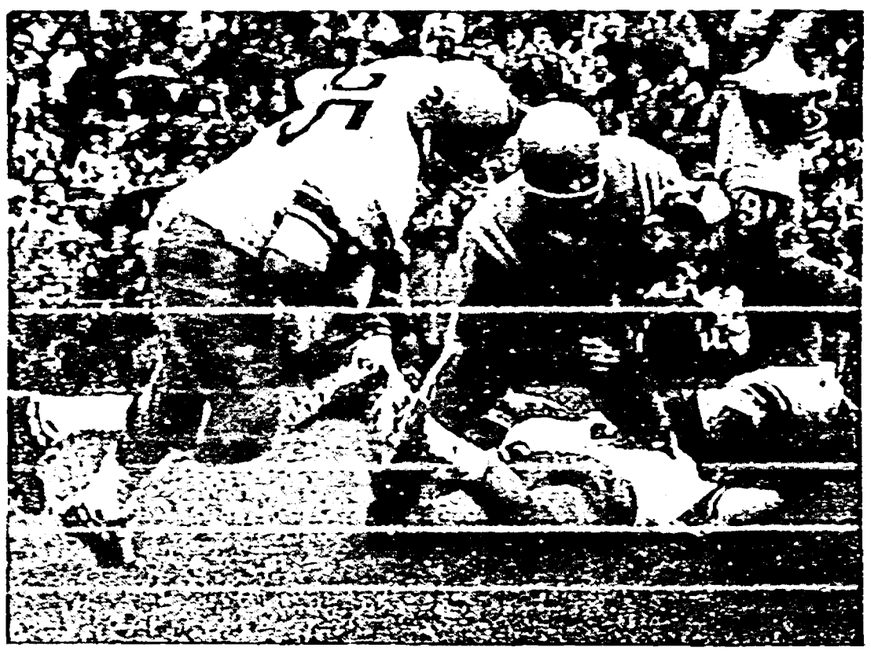
UCLA Bows to Powerful Orange



The 'Bo' Smash

wise, he totaled 53 yards on the ground and 14 more in the air.

Deserving the most praise, however, were the defensive Spiders. They took note of Bruin quarterback Larry Zeno, who entered the game as the national total offense leader with 646 yards, and held him to only nine.

Zeno chalked up but 24 yards through the airways, while being thrown for 15 yards in rushing losses.

The UCLA field general failed to blame his poor showing on the cold weather. "I just had a bad day," he explained. "Syracuse covered our receivers real well and it was my fault I didn't run more.'

The Spiders were nothing short of sensational. Fair and Stecker combined for 10 tackles and a pair of fumble recoveries, and safetyman Hal Rooney chalked up five tackles, intercepted a pass and pounced on a fumble.

In addition, the Orange defense directly produced a pair of touchdowns. Linebacker Murray Johnson picked off a Uclan toss early in the third quarter and romped 35 yards to paydirt. Charley Brown galloped 54 yards with an interception for the final Hill score.

"Our defense really did it today," beamed Ben Schwartzwalder. "I never saw the boys look better. We really confused UCLA with our stunting. They'd change a play at the line of scrimmage and we'd change our defense. That's why they took so long to run off some of their plays."

Barnes praised the Orange defense, but took most of his ire out on his club's offensive laxities. "Our offense was horrible," he stated. "We didn't block, we handed them the ball time after time. And to top it off, Zeno had a terrible day."

As an obvious footnote, he added, "We made a lot of mistakes which we will have to correct."

Syracuse scored the second time it had its hands on the ball. After taking over on the UCLA 35, Nance blasted for 20 yards. Four plays later quarterback Walley Mahle sneaked over from the one.

The Orange jumped the margin to 14-0 in the second period on Little's return and Mahle's two-point conversion.

Two quick TDs after halftime put the game on ice. Johnson tallied the first one, with Nance capping a seven-play, 58-yard drive with an 18-yard dash for the second. Nance and Brown scored the final pair in the last quarter.

Piety Players: Wild and Happy

By JIM KLURFELD

This was a different type of locker room.

After Boston College there was silence, after Kansas a quiet satisfaction, and after Holy Cross a subdued relief. But now it was noisy, happy and wild. They had won, they had won easily and impressively.

Players pounded each other on the back and shook hands with vigor. There were jokes and shouts of what would happen that evening.

Reporters surrounded players and they talked easily. Even Old Zak couldn't think of a nasty thing to say.

Bo Nance, who had just played his greatest game in three years at Syracuse, was one of the quieter ones. He sat on a bench and talked.

"I think I'm coming along now," he explained. "Each game I think I have improved some. Against Boston College I played only as an average ball player. But with each game my concentration is improving."

But some might equate concentration with blocking. Though he gained 148 yards rushing, people are going to remember that snowy, rainy, bitterly cold Saturday as the day Nance threw a block that resounded through Archbold Stadium.

It came midway through Floyd Little's spectacular 90-yard punt return. A UCLA defender was about to knock Floyd out of bounds when out of nowhere Bo hit him head on and the UCLA defender thein fell to the ground and disappeared like one of the snow flakes that was falling on the field.

"I was afraid that boy wasn't going to get up," Coach Ben Schwartzwalder said. "I have never seen a more vicious block in all my days."

"I didn't see it, but man I heard it," was the way Floyd described Bo's bone-breaker.

And there was plenty of noise in other parts of the locker room. The Spiders, SU's defensive unit, limited the Bruins to minus yards rushing and scored two touchdowns on their own.

Murray Johnson, a sophomore linebacker, was one of the happiest. He intercepted one pass for a score and just missed another. "I should have had the second," Johnson happily demonstrated, "but it was in a bad place — on my hands."

Schwartzwalder had praise for the entire team. "We did one heck-of-a-job out there. Our defense was tremendous. Little Teddy (Holman) did quite a job on their end, but then again everybody did quite a job."

Bruins Prefer California Sun

By BOB KRENGEL

Everybody came away happy from Saturday's gridiron clash in Archbold Stadium exept a small group of mud-caked men who had left California in 92 degree weather.

That tells the story behind the dismal showing of the UCLA Bruins — they were cold. Coming off the field, huddled together in the shock of their first defeat, they just wanted to go home and get warm again.

In the dressing room they showered and dressed quickly. Coach Bill Barnes silently walked around, checking the packed equipment.

"We made a lot of mistakes," he said. "I think the weather bothered Syracuse just as much as it did us. We have no excuses."

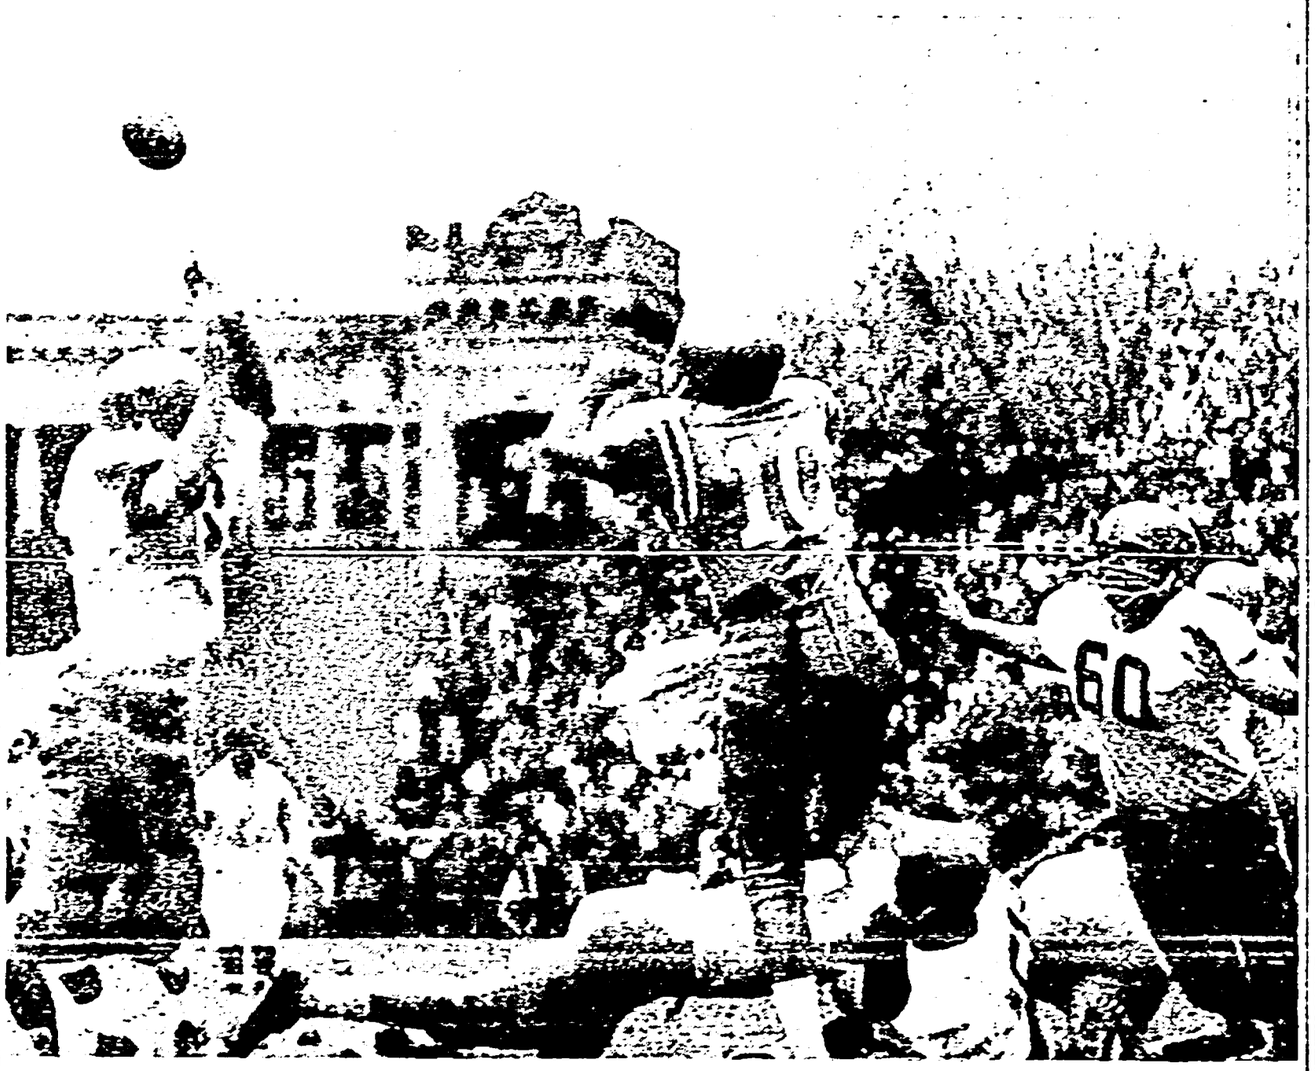
Barnes praised the Orange backs. "Jim Nance is the best college fullback I ever saw. And that Little will be terrific. They ran all over us and we couldn't stop them. But our defense played well, stopping Syracuse marches several times. We never stopped trying."

According to the Bruin coach, the turning point of the game was when the Piety forces scored the two quick touchdowns in the third quarter.

The UCLA players were dressed now. They stood around waiting to leave. Quarterback Larry Zeno was talking to some friends who had driven all the way from his home town, Waltham, Mass., just to see him play.

Zeno stated the reason why the vaunted Bruin air attack sputtered: "I wasn't rushed too hard, but I couldn't find any receivers open."

In comparison with the other teams UCLA has played thus far in the season, including Pitt and Penn State, the consensus in the dressing room was that Syracuse was the strongest team they had yet faced.



Spiders' Web

One of the reasons for the poor showing of UCLA's offense Saturday is evident in this picture as STEVE SINDELL (10), UCLA quarterback, is just able to throw the pass before two of the Orange's Spiders (the defensive unit) close in on him. On the right is JOE DZIEKONSKI (60) and to the left HERB STECKER (82).

Hill Receives 32 Separate Grants

$152,000 Supports Tanganyika Program

Eight Syracuse University graduate students will cooperate with the government of Tanganyika in a $152,000 project for "support of research and evaluation of Tanganyika's large-scale village-resettlement program."

The project, financed by the Ford Foundation, originated from a discussion between Tanganyikan President Julius Nyerere and Fred G. Burke, director of the university's East African Studies program.

The program will include the construction of 150 villages, tying up about 21 per cent of the African country's national budget, according to the SU Center for Overseas Operations and Research.

Tanganyika's settlement plan, begun two years ago, was "based on a redistribution of arable lands and peasant population," Burke said. Centralizing the villagers in settlements also helped them deal with such problems as sanitation and schooling.

Underlying the government program was the need to transform Tanganyika's rural areas from a subsistence to a cash economy, Burk added.

The graduate students—among them an economist, a political scientist and a public aministration speciaist — will spend up to 18 months in Tanganyika.

"The material gathered and observations made will be used as a basis for the individual dissertations and in formulating specific recommendations or suggestions to be transmitted to the Tanganyika government for the purpose of making any necessary adjustments in the program," Burke said.

Forestry: $275,000 In Awards

Thirty grants, totalling more than $275,000, have been awarded to the State University College of Forestry at Syracuse University, announced the college's Board of Trustees at its annual fall meeting Saturday.

The majority are for research fellowships, and for research programs that will investigate the chemical and physical properties of wood, pulping and papermaking, and silviculture. Others range throughout the broad field of forestry, including work in botany, entomology, wildlife, and soils.

These grants were awarded deans, department heads and

Maxwell Profs Help Allocate Ford Funds

Two faculty members of Syracuse University's Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs will help set up procedures for allocating a $400,000 inter-university Ford Foundation grant.

The three year project, to study ways in which institutions essential to modernization are introduced into energing nations, involves Syracuse, Indiana and Michigan State Universities and the University of Pittsburgh.

Syracuse's representatives on the program's executive board are Irving Swerdlow, Maxwell associate dean for research and operations and Dr. Julian Friedman, an associate professor in political science.

The meeting will be held Friday and Saturday in Pittsburgh.

The amount of each school's allocation will be proportional to the number and degree of potential importance of the individual projects suggested by participating researchers. It is expected that each university will be allowed approximately one-fourth of the entire grant, Swerdlow said.

To supplement its share of the grant, Syracuse University hopes to be awarded additional monies. Currently a United States fund grant of $150,000 is being considered, Swerdlow said.

Frosh Elections

Nominees Not Issues Vary

By MARLENE CIMONS

Frosh nominees gallop down the campaign trail this week — a path much trampled by their predecessors.

Although officers and candidates change from year to year a recap shows that campus issues affecting students and their campaigns have not varied.

The basic undercurrents of this year's campaign seem to be the lacw of class unity, freshman weekend, curfews, communications, housing and bookstore prices.

Presidential nominee Robert Bagnall, in a speech last week, called for a platform based on two words: "Act now" and emphasized the need for a student union.

John Subbiondo, also a candidate, stressed leadership as the key to all progress and said that freshman women's curfews and housing were the two most important problems facing the student body.

The third nominee, William (Todd) Wallens offered a challenge to the class of '68 to strengthen its unity and work for a common goal.

Last year, candidate Paul Frederick offered as a solution to the lack of class unity the creation of a council which would serve as a coordination body.

Presidential hopeful Andrew Konstandt suggested a 32-member executive council and a frosh "house of representatives."

Jim Richard, who emerged victorious from the campaign, pledged to make a personal effort to investigate all complaints and inquiries from freshmen.

The 1962 election also found candidates clamoring for class unity, a new and novel freshman weekend, and different activities for the class.

WAER's "Focus" program will present the candidates and their views at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Jonathon Bernstein stressed the necessity of a freshman assembly composed of representatives from each frosh floor and living center. He recommended a class newsletter and listed plans for a freshman weekend including a twister carnival and dance.

Nominee Dennis Green suggested a winter scene for freshman weekend, including a ski party at Skytop.

Candidate Richard Griffin called for the class's participation in other activities, such as working for a charitable organization. He also proposed that a trophy be awarded to the freshman floor with the highest academic average.

In 1961, United Students party nominee David Bailey advocated making the executive council an advisory body and the freshman assembly a representative body.

Douglas Milbury, Reformed Independent Party presidential candidate, suggested having an executive council composed of 10-15 members chosen at large

Work Halted

Prefab 7F Has No Floor

The floor of prefab 7F that was being razed in order to be lowered will remain just as it is — bottomless.

Workmen began tearing up the floor Monday in order to provide "quarters for members of the physics staff and faculty," according to James V. LaTorre.

LaTorre, assistant to the vice president for administration and research, called off the work late Monday, to see if a solution can be worked out which would eliminate prefabs as soon as possible.

The Syracuse University administration has been under "considerable pressure to get rid of the prefabs," LaTorre said.

Rather than try to renovate the buildings which were built during World War II, he said the university would rather relocate the physics department in a more permanent location.

LaTorre said other alternatives would be looked into but he gave no deaadline for the decision.

Originally, a small laboratory was planned to occupy one half of the prefab section with office space for some of the physics staff in the other half.

"Temporary"?

Workmen busily tear apart prefab 7F in an attenmpt to lower the floor for physics equipment. Attempts to relocate this equipment in the prefab were halted late Monday. The university said it would seek alternatives which would eliminate renovation of the World War II "temporary" structures.

Opportunity To Learn

The Syracuse University community has a rare educational opportunity tonight to hear a Goldwater Republican, a Johnson Republican and a Democrat discuss the possible effect of the Presidential election on United States foreign policy.

Sponsoring the discussion is the International Students Organization, a group which apparently has emerged from its once self-centered cell into an organization with a program actively and sincerely aimed at all students.

Representing the Goldwater (i.e., conservative) Republican point of view is Prof. Anthony Bouscaren of LeMoyne College, no stranger to SU students. He was active in the development of a campus branch of the Young Americans for Freedom, a conservative-thinking group roughly the counterpart of the Americans for Democratic Action.

Bouscaren is an excellent speaker and will surely represent his point of view well. The possible effect of a Goldwater victory on foreign policy is certainly worth learning.

Richard Lillich, an associate professor in the SU College of Law, will explain the viewpoints of a Johnson Republican, that breed which seems to be multi--plying by leaps and bounds.

The Democratic position, often overlooked in the pro-and anti-Goldwater Republican campaign, will be discussed by the Maxwell School's David Bennett, an old hand at Presidential politics, as his Citizenship 101 students can attest.

Three learned men, who know what they're talking about, will present the issues tonight. The discussion and interchange of ideas is certainly worth listenign to.

Marching

Take away the majorettes from last year's marching band and you wouldn't have much. But Edward Volz, the new director of the SU marching band, has done just that and has produced a first-class operation.

Last year's confusion has been changed into precision, and all eyes can now be focused on one "Orange Girl" instead of a row of marching majorettes who obviously kept the band's eyes on them instead of the field.

The two home game productions have been quite impressive, especially the display last weekend against both the elements and the usually unsympathetic crowd.

The music is pleasant, the formations are interesting, and the total end product is highly commendable with the relative unfamiliarity of Volz and the band members until a pre-school band camp in September.

The band members have mastered the new look very well and are certainly a credit to the university. They are no longer a laughing stock, but a reflection of pride.

Coach

To the Editor:

Saturday's game with UCLA was great. We can be proud of the performance of the team. Not so the display put on by our head coach. He marred a magnificent football game. During the second quarter, a Syracuse player made a mistake. Even the sportwriters had the humanity to suggest that it was a human error—probably a result of a misunderstanding between two Syracuse players. Not so our coach.

He threw a temper tantrum. The fans were submitted to the disgusting spectacle of our head coach enthusiastically berating one of his players. There was frantic clutchings of his hat, stamping of his feet, vigorous head movements, rapid pacings, the works. Our coach.

The player, I guess didn't feel bad enough. He needed the head coach to show him how aduits behave. Hope all the moms and dads enjoyed the spectacle; except, of course, the parents of the player who made the mistake.

Well, it was Parents' Weekend at SU. One thing that can be said is that in the stadium on Saturday we did not put up any false fronts. The team, of course. And especially our head coach.

Name withheld

Litwin

To the Editor:

"The freshmen are here. Young, innocent, idealistic, and for the most part ready to face and meet any challenge that might be tossed at them." I quote from Jay Litwin's column of Sept. 29, and it is my contention that this statement is patently absurd. Most freshmen (and many upperclassmen) think of Syracuse in terms of the reputedly good social life offered here.

SU is considered to be something less than an excellent academic institution, as a reflection of our reputation as a social and athletic academy. Consequently, many freshmen expect to ease through Syracuse with only slightly more effort than they exerted in high school.

Most freshmen, the majority of upperclassmen can tell Mr. Litwin, are far too immature, then, for the freedom and responsibility of the university. They fritter away their time in pointless pursuits and foolishness rather than study. Chances are good that any given freshman will do poorly his first year. Many, in fact, will not be back for a second.

There is no purpose served by hiding the challenge of the university behind a mirage of improved high school records. Freshmen should be made aware of their immaturity, where it exists, so that they can fight it. Time is working with them. Hopefully, students will lose their youth at college, and pick up some idealism and innocence. In this process, perhaps they will learn to meet the challenges of life.

Bernie

To the Editor:

This past Saturday while Syracuse demolished Kansas, one of the best individual performances of the year took place not on the field, but on the sidelines.

For the past three years I've been attending the university, the same boyish looking young man has been leading the Goons, placard cheering, and pep rallies. At times our team might have fallen below our expectations; yet this "Goon" always seemed to stand out above the rest, building up our morale.

This past Saturday down on the field directing the freshmen stood this young man sporting a big cast around his leg. Having seen him on campus at a rally the day before without the cast, I soon found out that he had broken his ankle early that morning. The spirit he showed at the game should not go unnoticed.

I want to say for myself and everyone who saw you, get well and thank you, Bernie.

"Virginia Woolf" Slated For Two Performances

"Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf," the Broadway play, will be presented in Syracuse by the road tour company, at 8:30 p.m., Oct. 20 and 21 at the Regent Theatre.

The Tuesday, Oct. 20 performance is especially for students and special rates will apply, according to a statement made by Marlow Burt, program administrator at University College.

The Wednesday, Oct. 21 performance will be open to the general public.

During the 1962-63 theatrical season the comedy-drama and its author, Edward Albee, were voted the following awards: The New York Drama Critics' Award; five American Theatre Wing Antoinette Perry Awards ("Tonys"), and the Annual ANTA and the Foreign Press Awards.

Albee is also the author of other hits: "The Zoo Story," "The Death of Bessie Smith," and "The Sandbox."

"Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" explores the controversial subject of man's relationship to woman. Specifically, it is the story of two married couples who live and work in a small university town. The play dramatically exposes the resentments of the twenty-year married life of a college professor and his wife.

Monthly Film-Lecture Series Spans the Globe at Regent

Seven film-lectures have been scheduled for the annual World Adventure Tour for the 1964-65 season at the Regent Theatre, according to an announcement by Marlow Burt, program administator for the theatre which is operated by University College, adult education division of Syracuse University.

From Italy in October to Scotland and Wales in April, the film-lectures will feature most of the world's continents.

"The series is designed for those interested in the cultures of the many exciting countries throughout the world," Burt said.

"The presentations consist of the finest quality color film, and a delightful lecture by its producer."

Oct. 19, "A Summer in Italy," with Ted Bumiller; Nov. 16, "Petite Belgique," by Robert Davis; Dec. 14, "Exploring the Lands Down Under" with John M. Goddard; Jan. 13, "Trailing Lewis and Clark to Oregon," by Thayer Soule; Feb. 8, "Tangier to Istanbul" with Clifford Kamin; March 10, "Search for the Twisting Makone" through Africa with Quentin Keynes; and April 5, "Scotland and Wales," with Ed Lark.

Up in the Air

Syraquiz

by Carol Thorp

Syracuse University, questions and answers.....they just seem to go together.

Perhaps that is why WAER's "Syraquiz" has become a campus favorite.

"Syraquiz," was started in 1957 to bring WAER closer to students. Living centers from all over campus matched wits in fields of general knowledge, each trying to prove itself the home of S.U.'s smartest.

A graduate assistant in the Radio-Television Center was so impressed by the liveliness of the program that he took the idea to CBS.

CBS liked the idea and began to work on it to adapt it for television use.

Thus "G.E. College Bowl" was born. Each week teams from colleges across the nation compete for monetary gifts for their schools on this still popular program.

As "College Bowl" increasee in popularity, "Syraquiz" decreased. In 1959 the program was taken off the air because campus participation and interest in the show had faded.

The idea for a quiz show on WAER was revived in 1962 by Ann Burnat who thought students would welcome a chance to show off their knowledge.

"Syraquiz" went back on the air as the only live quiz show in Central New York and won back its campus popularity.

Each week the "Syraquiz" staff prepares thirty sets of questions covering subjects ranging from the humanities to science to comic strips for use on the show.

Two teams from various living centers compete every Thursday at 9 p.m., the winner returning the next week to face a new opponent.

PARENT'S WEEKEND

SCHOOL FOR PARENTS

Hill Brightened By Moms, Dads

Life on the Hill has returned to normal; the parents are back home and the students are up to their old ways.

For three days things were noticeably different. Fellow students were friendlier, more helpful, extremely neat and unrecognizably polite.

But perhaps the best part of Parents' Weekend was: watching the parents parade around the university, boasting "I am a Father" buttons and "Mums;" lecturing on the importance of studies and joking over incidents "back home;" watching a Goon Show in complete comfort, and attending a pep rally in cold rain; walking around the campus — "Get that picture;" cheering the team onto victory, sitting in two inches of water, singing the alma mater, "May I borrow your cardboard?," 39-0, and snow; climbing up "those steps after all the hills" for church services; participating in a School for Parents, just like the "good old days," and even eating cafeteria cooking.

Finally: "Dress warm, it's going to be a hard winter, and if there is anything you need, just write. See you at Thanksgiving."

ISO Presents Panel Debate

by Anthony Bouscaren, professor of political science at LeMoyne College. David Bennett, assistant professor of citizenship and American studies at the Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs, will present the views of the Democratic Party.

Republicans and Independents for Johnson will be represented on the panel by Richard Lillich, associate professor of international law at the College of Law. Moderating the panel will be Michael Thomas, instructor in international marketing.

Each member of the panel will be allotted five to seven minutes to express the opinion of his group in this controversial arena of opposing ideologies.

Specializing in Russian studies, Bouscaren joined the faculty of LeMoyne College in 1959 as an associate professor. He received a bachelor of arts from Yale and a master of arts and a doctorate from the University of California at Berkeley.

A professor since 1961, Bouscaren has contributed to and authored many books, particularly on the subject of communism.

He served as a consultant for two years to the House Committee on Un-American Activities, as well as a consultant to Young Americans for Freedom.

Among the honors which he has received are an award from the Wisconsin Daughters of the American Revolution and the Freedom Foundation's Award.

Bennett, a graduate of Syracuse University, received his doctorate in history from the University of Chicago. Politically active, he is presently serving as a district committeeman for the Democratic Party.

Extremism in American politics is the field which he will relate to the November election in the debate.

A graduate of Oberlin College, Cornell University and New York University, Lillich will concentrate on the personalities and foreign relations policies of the candidates. As well as being a specialist in international law, he spent 1963 in England as a Ford Foundation Fellow.

Lillich was recently elected chairman of the Onondaga County Chapter of Republicans and Independents for Johnson. He is also the coordinator for the group in upstate New York.

Thomas, the moderator of the panel, is a native of England. Although he is interested in politics, he said he feels that his British citizenship will make him a "harmless moderator."

Thomas received his education in both England and the United States. A graduate of the Lohdon School of Economics, he received his master of arts from the University of Indian. He was also a Fulbright scholar in 1956.

After the views of the various groups have been aired, the audience will be invited to direct questions to the panel, according to Robert Fisher, ISO president.

"All over the world we are watching problems of how countries are trying to modernize themselves," he noted.

"This research project will study the processes of setting up institutions that get things done." These institutions will include educational, governmental and planning agencies, he said.

The program, with headquarters at the University of Pittsburgh, will involve a number of analytical studies, field studies and domestically-based research projects, Swerdlow said. He said he hopes that 10-15 Maxwell personnel will become involved during the program.

faculty members, who will organize individual projects involving graduate students. All the awards were made from April 1 - Sept. 1, according to Hardy L. Shirley, dean of the college.

Some of the fellowships, grants and scholarships are continuations of awards from previous years, while others have been presented for the first time at Syracuse, he said.

Following is a list of grants, the donors and a brief description of the programs:

$3,635 — from Texaco, a forestry chemistry grant for work in polymer research.

$4,440 — from the U. S. Public Health Service, to study the effect of moisture on insect blood proteins.

$8,625 — from the Council for Tobacco Research, to research compounds closely related to chlorogenic acid.

$15,960 — from the U. S. Public Health Service for work in the forest chemistry department on addition polmyerization of anhydro sugars to dextrans.

The concluding 26 grants will be published in tomorrow's DAILY ORANGE.

Two of the graduate students, Anthony Rweyamau, the first African to be appointed a lecturer at University College in Tanganyika, and Rodger Yeager of Pittsburgh, are already there. Nicholas Georgulas, a Tanganyikan citizen of Greek extraction, is due to arrive in Africa at the end of October.

John R. Nellis, Frederick Robinson and Robert Meyers are scheduled to leave for Africa in January. The last two, Gary Thomas and British-born James Brain, are to leave in the spring.

Burke, who is director of the project, will be based in Syracuse but plans to make several trips to Tanganyika. A field coordinator, who will make his headuarters at Dar es Salaam, Tanganyika, has not yet been selected.

'U.S. Way of Life Different,' Declare Spanish Students

By LYNN KAGAN

The American way of life is not only completely different from the Spanish way, it is "geometrically opposed to it."

This was the consensus of seven student leaders from the University of Barcelona, Spain, who were on campus over the weekend.

The students, were invited to this country by the U.S. State Department as participants in the Educational Travel Program. They attended a five-day instructional program here which ended Sunday.

One of the main objectives of the trip was to acquaint the Spaniards with American student life, home life, and politics. As a result of their observations in New York City, Boston, Mass. and at Harvard and Syracuse Universities, they cited a numerous customs opposed to the Spanish way of life.

They included: dancing in churches, meals served buffet style, early marriages, and wives putting their husbands through school.

They noted Spanish life is more rigid and formal. Comparing Spanish and American Universities, they said through an interpreter, the student government in Spain operates on a system which parallels the Spanish government.

There is one national student government called the Student Syndicate. Each university elects class officers, school officers, and university officers, but the Spanish government appoints the national officers, who do not have to be picked from those elected.

Forms Due for Italy Semester

Applications for the spring 1965 semester in Italy program are due before Thursday in the office of Foreign Study Programs, 335 Comstock Ave.

Late applications will be considered only as possible alternate candidates.

Located in Florence, Syracuse University's Italian branch offers courses in Italian, fine arts, political science and history. All students are expected to register for 16 credit hours including seven hours of Italian. There is no language prerequisite.

The opportunity to study abroad, taking a full semester of academic work without requiring previous language study, is a unique characteristic of this program.

Classes meet in the Villa Gigliucci which Syracuse University purchased a year ago. The building has housed the program since its beginning in 1959.

Additional information and application forms can be obtained in the Foreign Study Programs office.

The record for most points scored in football at Syracuse University is held by the late two-time All-America, Ernie Davis. The great halfback totaled 220 points in three seasons.

Westinghouse Scholar

Barrie Does Physics Work

As One passes through Stele Hall during the week, he is likely to see a team of men huddled in a laboratory busily interpreting various scientific data.

Among this group of men is Stephen Barrie, a junior pre-medical student at Syracuse.

Barrie is a Westinghouse scholar and due to his concentrated effort and experimentation he was accepted by Dr. C. H. Bachman to work along with an interdisciplinary team from the Upstate Medical Center and Veterans' Administration Hospital at Syracuse.

The team's purpose is to discover the effects of positive and negative ions on the behavior pattern of the rat through observation of the brain waves, respiration, and heartbeat.

The original experiment that qualified Barrie for his Westinghouse scholarship was his study of the effects of magnetism on guppies.

"Through a New York State grant, I was able to pursue this experimentation in my freshman year at Syracuse by studying the electrostatic potentials of fish," Barrie explained.

Throughout the summer of his first year and through his sophomore year he continued his work and then applied to Bachman to become a member of the group working on the behavior pattern project.

Among this group is John Lorenz, research assistant to Bachman. The team also includes bio-physicists, surgeons and psychiatrists.

The group is presently working with approximately 175 rats. In some cases the animals are subjected to anesthesia and controlled ion beams are directed through their noses while in other cases they are free to move in a tube-like chamber.

In each case their behavior patterns are compared and studied in detail. The lab is fully equipped to handle all experiments.

Although this experimentation takes up much of Barrie's time, he is continuing his study of the electrosatic potentials of fish.

He has developed a way to keep the fish out of water for approximately a two-hour period and is able to direct electrostatic charges through the entire body or parts of it in order to measure the potential.

"I hope to have a few papers published before entering medical school on the results and significant events of my experimentation," he said.

During the academic year, Barrie devotes approximately 20 hours per week to his lab work and during the summer this time is doubled.

Although much of his time is spent in the lab, Barrie has participated in many extra-curricular activities, among them the InterFraternity Council, the freshman swimming team, and the lacrosse team.

ROAD TRIP

The Big Question: Which SU Team?

By JIM KLURFELD

Which team will Syracuse take to University Park Saturday?

This is the question that most Syracuse fans are asking today. Will it be the world-beaters who easily defeated such powers as Kansas and UCLA? Or will be the lackluster unit that lost to Boston College and had to surge to beat Holy Cross?

Coach Ben Schwartzwalder summed up his feelings this way, "Is it possible to get those kids up for an away game?"

And Syracuse will have to be up for Penn State, according to Schwartzwalder. The Nittany Lions recorded their first win of the year last week, upsetting Army, and many believe they may be ready to roll after losses to Navy, Oregon and UCLA.

"They have out-played everybody they've faced. Syracuse scout Joe Szombathy explained at Monday's press luncheon. "but they have beaten themselves with fumbles. Physically they can beat anybody."

Penn State's forward wall is definitely one of formidable Ressler (230 pounds), and Sandy Buchan (225), its line will probably outweigh Syracuse's. And in the backfield they have an improving quarterback, Gary Wydman. According to Szombathy, Wydman has a good throwing arm and can scramble real well.

But the man to watch on offensive will be fullback Ed Stuckrath, a tremendous blocker and powerful runner who is considered coach Rip Engle's best all-around football player.

Speaking by phone to the conference, Engle said he was thrilled with his team's performance at West Point and hopes they can continue to improve.

However, Engle's team has been hit by injuries this year, the latest being the loss of defensive right end Jock West.

Schwartzwalder doesn't plan too many shifts in his personal this week. He mentioned that Dan Healy, a sophomore halfback, will start playing more at right halfback behind Ron Oyer.

Defensively, the coach indicated he might start Soph John Krok over Gerry Everling at tackle if Everling's injuries continue to hamper him.

Ben Praises Defense

The following is the fourth in a series of question and answer sessions between DO sportswriters Howard Schneider and coach Ben Schwartzwalder.

Q—How would you compare our overall performance Saturday with those of our previous three games?

A—We made a lot of mistakes. But then football is a game of errors. The team with the fewer mistakes usually wins the game. On offense we expect 100 per cent blocking and on defense we don't expect anyone to get blocked out. Saturday, our defense was more successful. In fact, defensively we played better than we have all year. Offensively, we fumbled too often, but other than that I was satisfied.

Q—What was the turning point in the game?

A—I would have to say that Little's punt return tilted the game our way. Combine the run with Murray Johnson's interception and you've got the two key plays.

Q—What were the circumstances surrounding Ron Oyer's fumble on the punt return?

A—Simply, Oyer went to block out the UCLA defender figuring Little might get a shot at a runback. The referee ruled that he hit the ball and therefore it was a fumble.

Q—Who was the oustanding Orange lineman in the game?

A—Well, this is a difficult question. I would have to chose both Pat Killorin and Tony Scibelli. Both boys played real well.

Q—Are there any tentative lineup changes because of injuries?

A—First, Billy Hunter, who didn't play Saturday, will probably be out for the reminder of the year. Houle might not be able to make it against Penn State and Gerry Everling's knee is bothering him again. If Everling can't start, we will use John Krok.

Q—At one point in the game assistant coach Rocco Pirro had an argument with one of the officials. What was the problem?

A—Rocco was objecting to the fact that a new UCLA unit was sent onto the field before our substitutes, yet the official charged the timeout to Syracuse.

FROSH HOOP

Freshmen basketball candidates should report to Room 215, Men's Gym, at 4 p.m. today. Attendance is required for all wishing to play on the frosh squad.

Legutko Sparks Soccer Club

By CHRIS VIVIANO

The Syracuse University soccer club, sparked by the three goals of center-forward Mike Legutko, defeated Utica College 4-2, on a cold, overcast Hendricks Field Saturday, in a game played in both rain and sleet.

Dressed in their orange and blue sweatshirts and shorts, the Syracuse players went through their warm-up exercises in chilly 40-degree temperatures.

The Orange got the ball on the kickoff and pressed the attack, dominating the play as they kept the ball in Utica territory most of the first quarter.

About half way through the quarter, Zolten Ball, playing the outside right position, scored the first goal for the Syracuse club.

Legutko followed with his first point of the day and the Orangemen led 2-0, after one period of play.

Early in the second quarter Utica finally mounted an attack but was held off by Syracuse. Legutko scored for the second time, putting his team ahead 3-0 at halftime.

A Syracuse mistake led to a Utica score early in the third quarter when an Orange player put the ball across his own goal.

Legutko made his third score for the Orangemen in the closing minutes of the third quarter to give Syracuse a 4-1 lead.

Hill goalie John Olmstead made repeated saves during the second half of play as Utica pressed the attack and finally scored the last goal of the game.

The Syracuse club evened its record at 1-1, after having lost 2-1, last weekend to Albany State on a penalty kick.

Coach Brian Stewart had praise for his victorious players. "We've improved 100 per cent from last week," said Stewart.

Harriers Down Cornell in Snow

By NEIL KERR

Led by Mike Spino, Syracuse's cross country team outran Cornell, 15-47, at Ithaca Saturday. The victory was SU's third straight this season and its 18th win in 27 dual meets with Cornell.

Earlier, Syracuse's frosh squad recorded its second win this season by downing the Big Red yearling team, 18-45.

In the varsity match Spino toured the 5.1 mile course in 27:19 and remained undefeated this year. Taking the other four scoring positions in order were Syracusans John Crawford, Marty Miller, Bill Cihak and Tom Giordano. Cihak ran for the first time this year after missing the first two meets with a sore leg.

Weather conditions Saturday were miserable as the teams had to contend with snow, rain and bone chilling cold. In fact Cornell's number one man, Jim Straub, went down at the two-mile mark and was unable to continue.

In the freshman race, SU's Dennis Boyle won easily for the third consecutive time as he ran the 3.1-mile course in 16:43. Syracuse's Bruce Pezzamenti took second with Bill Jones fourth, Dave Wood fifth and Bill Tobin sixth.

Next weekend Syracuse will take on the Cadets of Army at Drumlins. This race will be the 90th cross country dual meet in Syracuse history and the Orange will be after its 72nd victory.

The summaries:

1. Mike Spino (S) 27:19.
2. John Crawford (S) 27: 32.
3. Marty Miller (S) 28:04.
4. Bill Cihak (S) 28:09.
5. Tom Giordano (S) 28:37.
6. Cory Byard (C) 28:50.
7. Bill Ramsdell (S) 29:00.
8. Roger Ingraham (C) 29:06.

HOCKEY MEET

The Syracuse University Hockey Association will hold a meeting at 7 p.m. today in room 205 HL. All interested persons including graduate students are invited to attend.

Hill Golf Squad Tops Field

Battling wind, rain and snow, the Syracuse University golf team snared top honors in the upstate regional qualifying round for the ECAC golf championship at Hamilton Saturday.

The Orangemen boasted an 18-hole team total of 340 on the par-72 Seven Oaks course. Colgate rated second with a 343.

SU and Colgate will now compete in the ECAC finals this weekend at the Bethpage Park course in Farmingdale, L.I.

Medalist at Hamilton was Kearon Whalen of the University of Buffalo, with Syracuse's Bill Seaman second at 82, one stroke back.

The Hill's Harry Kowadla and Steve Kreglow of Colgate tied for third with 83's.

Top 10 players, along with the two teams, will participate in the finals.

Other Syracuse players and their scores: Jim Olps with an 87 and Bill Chisholm with an 88. Neither qualified for the finals individually.

Noble to Address Senate; Housing Motion Vote Set

Charles C. Noble, dean of Hendricks Chapel, will be the keynote speaker at the Student Senate meeting at 7:15 p.m. today in Maxwell Auditorium.

Noble will address the assembly on "Have You a High Opinion of Yourself and Your Job?"

The fate of the student housing bill will also be determined at this time. The bill proposes that two students be appointed to the university housing committee, now composed entirely of administrators.

The student conduct and welfare committee has defeated this motion, but depending on action by the steering committee, it can be overruled by a two-thirds majority of the senate.

"I hope that the legislature does not let this housing motion die," commented Robert (Robby) Stern, speaker of Student Senate, Tuesday, "as I believe the students should have some voice in the situation."

"If this bill does not pass through the legislature," he added, "perhaps another recommendation could be made. It is the responsibility of the senate to be sensitive to the problems confronting the students."

Reports from all committee chairmen on their programs for the semester are also set for today's convention. Representatives who have not yet been assigned to committees will be appointed, a parlia-

Profs Debate Foreign Views of LBJ, Barry

By SUSAN STRANDBERG

What if Lyndon B. Johnson is re-elected president this fall?

What if Barry M. Goldwater is the next president?

What will this mean to United States foreign policy?

These questions were raised Tuesday night by the International Students Organization. Three authorities on international affairs responded with different answers.

"I'm for Sen. Goldwater because the New Frontier which is continuing policies Franklin D. Roosevelt and Harry S. Truman still has the illusion about Soviet behavior that Neville Chamberlain (former British prime minister) had about the Nazis.

"But Nikita S. Khrushchev is not mellowing," said Anthony Bouscaren, professor of political science at LeMoyne College.

"One out of four Republicans in the nation will vote for Johnson next fall because Goldwater is advocating total victory over communism," noted Richard B. Lillich, associate professor of international law at Syracuse University and chairman of Onondaga chapter of Republicans and Independents for Johnson.

"It is unsafe to throw aside 20 years of experience in foreign policy and replace it with a blank check of total victory," he added.

"Lyndon Johnson is a prudent man. He understands that there can be no true security and realizes war is still possible.

"The test-ban treaty is an essential first step down the road to security," said David Bennett, assistant professor of citizenship and American studies in the Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs.

As the speeches continued, the students, filling three quarters of Marshall Auditorium, soon learned that professors could be politicians.

This was not an academic debate, but rather a campaign to win the voting students' support.

Each professor had seven minutes to present his views. Bouscaren spoke first and at-

Times for picture taking this week are from 9 a.m.-2:30 p.m. today and Wednesday, 9 a.m.-4 p.m. Thursday and Friday, and 9 a..m., noon Saturday.

Frosh Candidates Offer Opinions

The Daily Orange has invited freshmen candidates for class office to voice their platforms and opinions on issues affecting the campus and student body.

Following are the statements of nominees for secretary of the class of '68.

STEVEN BERLIN

STEVEN BERLIN — The proof is in the pudding. Several members of the upper classes as well as several of the candidates have criticized my suggestion for the creation of a freshman newsletter to be put out weekly.

Tuesday I produced a copy of the proposed newsletter, in an abbreviated edition and was pleased to hear the response, mostly positive, which I received.

The cost was low—less than $5. When expanded to its full 4-5 page format, the Frosh Frenzy, as we choose to call it, may be expected to contribute greatly to a better understanding between the class of 1968 and the faculty and administration by presenting a sounding board for freshmen issues and ideas.

By presenting such a service, we can look forward to a better informed and more interested class.

MARY HAMILTON — After talking to most of the freshmen girls at Flint Hall, I realized how terrible the communications are in our class. No one really knows what is going on in the class elections or what the purpose of Freshman Weekend is.

If I am elected secretary of this class, I will personally see to it that the communications are greatly improved (by newspaper at least once every other week), and my motto will be "Organization, Efficiency, and above all, Unity."

WAER (88.3 f.m.) will interview the candidates at 6:30 p.m. today. A complete list of polling places and times may be found on page 7.

My activities in high school included being: president of the senior class, law club, and my choral group.

At Syracuse I am the freshman representative to the Home Economics board, Student Senate representative, and a member of the WAER personnel staff.

If elected, I promise you that our class will always come first to me regardless of my commitments to any other activities.

LINDA LIPITZ — One of the main duties of the freshmen officers is to plan the Freshman Weekend Dec. 11-13. I suggest a theme such as "Freshman Follies." The name itself involves many people.

The more people we have involved and actively planning this weekend the better the ideas will be. Although ideas are very important for a good weekend, publicity is certainly as important, if not more important.

We not only have to plaster-

The SS And Housing

A bill that borders on the label "controversial" is slated to come up for discussion a second time in the Student Senate tonight. It proposes that two students be appointed to the university housing committee, now solely an administration group.

The measure passed the SS steering committee two weeks ago by a near-unanimous vote, but was tabled at the last legislature meeting. In the two weeks since the senate last met, the Pinebrook Conference has informally recommended the bill be defeated and the appropriate SS committee has defeated it.

However, if the steering committee remains true to its showing of two weeks ago, the bill will again be brought to the floor tonight.

If the bill does come off the table, the Daily Orange recommends the bill be promptly defeated, for the reasons cited at the Pinebrook Conference, which we imagine were echoed at the student conduct and welfare committee meeting.

The rationale is obvious. There is simply no need for students on such a committee, whose major purpose is deciding housing assignments and juggling when juggling is necessary.

We feel the presence of students on such a committee would hinder, rather than help, the university's work. For the administrators are professionals, who have had to deal with the problems repeatedly. Students know little about the administrative problems involved in mass housing..

As an added factor, it can be cited that most of the committee's work is carried on during the summer months, when those students most capable of sitting on such a committee are probably not in Syracuse. The student body might have to settle for second-class representation, which might set student-administration relations back a decade.

Everything that students possibly can do in the housing situation is being handled by Bruce Rosenstein through Student Government's executive branch. There is no need to disturb the status quo.

The housing problem has no solution. Only administrators are capable of dealing with the many aspects of mass living and mass housing. The best path for the students would be to stay out of the way.

We will be interested in seeing how the SS steering committee treats the bill now, in the light of Pinebrook as well as the conduct committee's decision on the bill.

The SS some day will have to learn that its existence is not the solution to all the university's problems. There are those areas which are better left to others. Housing is one.

O Say Can You See

Red, White and Blues

By Ken Auletta

America is in such a state that the date that is the anniversary of its discovery is not considered by the local John Birch Society to be cause for vacation from their lonely vigil. America is going to hell, and even though much of America pauses for Columbus Day, these people cannot.

The Syracuse home of the John Birch Society's library is a tiny cell which sits in a corner of the lobby of the Onondaga Hotel. Red, white and blue flags, drapes, books, cards, handkerchiefs—everywhere confront the eye.

Behind the large desk and below a bush of blue hair, works an old and sweet lady. Infrequently, visitors come to browse among the thicket of books that will one day be corpses on the terrain of our foul literature.

One enters this cell strong in mind, and departs weak in heart. There is a certain meanness in me that wishes that these were people ugly in every way, but they are not. I stood and unsuspectingly watched a man who was obviously of some importance in the local affairs of this society, sympathetically dictate a letter to the blue-haired lady whose better secretarial days were surely reserved for the pleasure of her memory.

I watched as she accidentally spilled coffee upon all of his papers, his ten dollar bill, and his clothing. And I watched as he gently calmed her of her concern for him.

It is difficult to allow that from such people could come the twisted and profane pamphlets which this election year clutters our mail. It is difficult to believe that that blue-haired lady or that gentleman could subscribe to the four-page pamphlet of their society entitled, "Stop and Listen," which rests upon the desk of their library; and which, in reference to communism and their country simply declares:

"Our complete surrender, already plotted in detail by agencies of our own government.."

A pamphlet that paints the world not in black and white, but red and pink; for an enclosed map tells us that as a "cautious and conservative" estimate, 50 to 70 per cent of the economic and political life of the United States is under the "influence and control" of communism. If History teaches, it teaches that good sense need not prevail; but a map that also claims that 20 to 40 per cent of the Union of South Africa and Spain labor under similar Communist handicap affronts even bad sense.

It is something painful to look into the face of another man and watch it wrinkle and softly shout that there are now "273 Communists in the state department." And then to see him funble into the covering lies that persistent questions need lead him to.

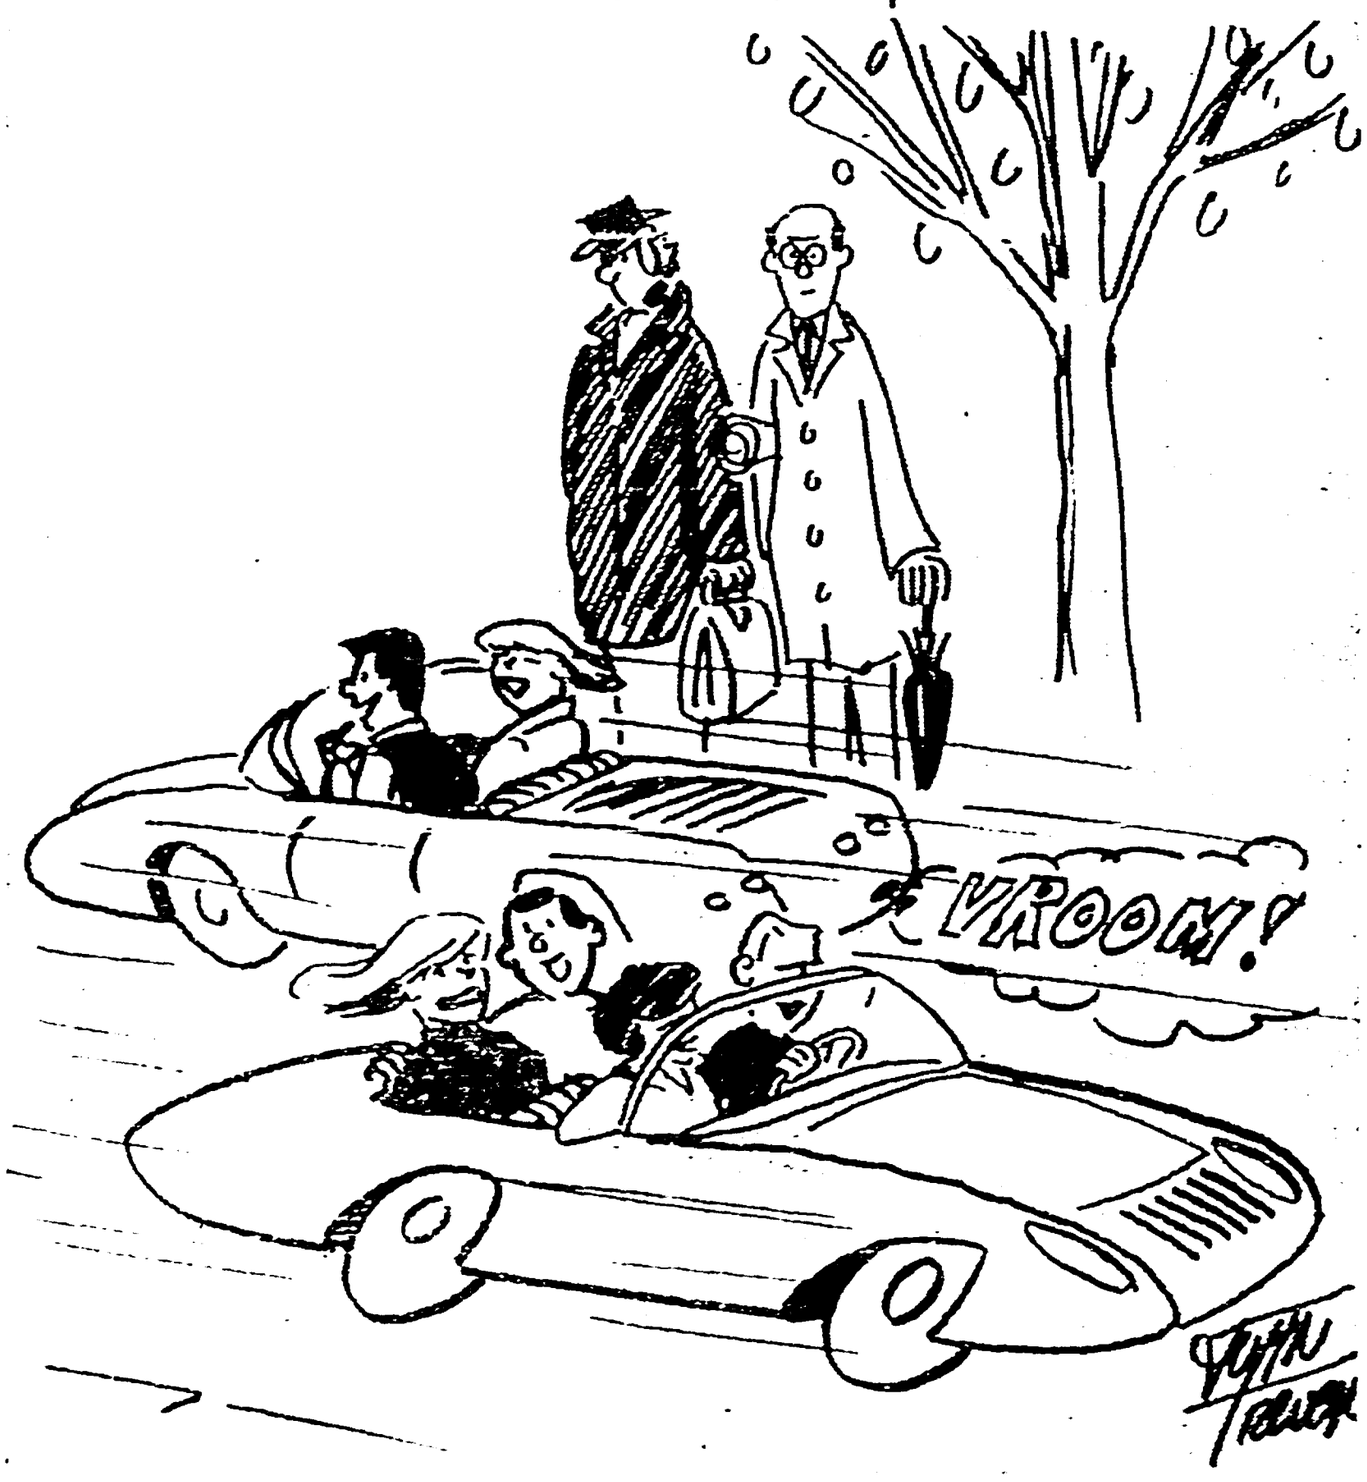
It must be more than just sad to hear a person proclaim that "I read all views and then I make-up my mind." The very same person who earlier, when asked if his library contained books of a liberal persuasion, responded in a pleased manner, "Oh sure, we have William Z. Foster's book, 'Toward Soviet America.' " Such is the state of this person's mind that William Z. Foster, who in life was a prominent leader od the American Communist Party, has in death become a liberal.

These are a people who, like other people, would rarely do another conscious harm, but who in their religion that "we are something new in history: a body of truly good men and women.." excuse their actions because of a vanity that would teach them that in regard to politics, they are no less than a Pope.

Different, only in degree, from the spirit that must have moved the men who fired bullets into the beaten bodies of Goodman, Chaney, and Schwerner; or the spirit that immersed Stalin, and blots Franco. A spirit that must surely touch many of us whose names are hidden from history.

One departs, then, from the home of the John Birch Society and is immediately plunged into an inner battle between what one feels and what one thinks: for the flow of emotion and a sanguine view of man's nature dictates that one should excuse these people their excesses; but reason and experience does not permit such a luxury. That sweet blue-haired lady would see me as her cursed Mephistopheles, even though I would never refer to her as my Faust.

Trever On Campus



"This university will go places if they equip the new library with drive-in bookshelves . . ."

LETTERS

Senate

To the Editor:

I should like to direct this letter as a reply to the letter of Richard A. Morgan concerning the New York State senatorial race:

Mr. Morgan:

To your list of labels as an outsider ("speaking as an outsider, a Goldwater supporter,...."), we may add (1) resident of the state of Connecticut, and (2) one who knows little of either Kenneth Keating or Robert Kennedy.

It is, however, a good thing for your sake that the statement, "not to say that Bob Kennedy is capable, but if New York cannot have a good senator, she can at least have one with an impressive sounding name in Washington" was made in a letter to the DO, for even if it were made in a high school cit. class I'm sure you would once agin find yourself an outsider.

Robert Seidenstein '68

Morals

The activity of the eight students suspended in the morals case of two weeks ago, if reported correctly, is raw and foolish in its childishness and something best outgrown fast. It is incomprehensible to me that a matter of this nature should have been carried out in such a public location. It seems that by some fantastic miscalculation the perpetrators made inevitable a disaster for themselves and a deeply unnecessary embarassment for the university.

But the incident, with the excitement it has generated, stands as an example of the overwhelming effectiveness of authoritative publicity, for as far as containing any new feature, or even a reasonably rare one goes, the story is far behind.

Conclusive information reaching me during the summer from people who now have no reason to lie, has told of cozy scenes and much connivance in the large women's residence along Walnut avenue. Screens being pried off and windows opened in the night to admit men; parties in the dark and drinking from regularly replenished bottles. Hundreds of pounds of china and silver being stolen piecemeal from dining halls for use later in life. One of the boys was eventually seen from the outside, entering a girl's window, but got away before he could be captured, and was sucessfully misrepresented to the dean of women as an unknown rapist, a ploy which got the entire group off the hook.

In other areas, occasional pregnancies conceived, detected and aborted sucessfully, if expensively. Similar situations can occur in the off-campus apartments of the few undergraduates who manage to obtain them. All real, all true, all part of our lives here, and all ignored.

But with the unfortunate blunder told of in this story, it is a case of everybody having to say now that they don't like it, because others know that they know it, and are thereby forcing them into taking a shocked, prim, public stand.

Concert

RAVI SHANKAR, right, and ALIA RAKHA, will appear in a concert at 8:30 p.m., Oct. 16 at the Regent Theatre. Shankar will play the sitar with Rakha accompanying on the Indian drums. They will be assisted by Nodu Mollick on the tamboura. Tickets for the concert are available at the Regent Theatre box office.

Girl Singers from England To Debut at Folk Gallery

Jacqueline and Bridie, British folk duo, will debut at 8:30 and 10:30 p.m. today, Thursday, and this weekend at the Folk Gallery.

Jacqueline McDonald was born on Tyneside and brought up in Yorkshire. Bridie O'Donnell was born in Wrexham, North Wales.

Miss McDonald's mother was a music hall stage star and her parents keep a pub in Yorkshire. For three years, Miss McDonald was the female lead with the Spinners, a folk group. She moved to Liverpool to join the group and met Miss O'Donnell.

In January, 1963, Miss McDonald decided to go solo and later teamed up with Miss O'Donnell.

During the summer of 1963, the girls toured refugee camps in Austria. The United Nations authorized the tour.

During the summer of 1964, they were booked for the Mariposa Festival in Canada followed by a course for the American Country Music Society in Pinewoods, Cape Cod. They are scheduled for U.S. T.V. appearances on the Tonight show and on Oscar Brand's radio show.

Tickets for the concert are available at the Folk Gallery.

Boar's Head Schedules New Revue

An original musical revue, "Out on a Limb," will be given at 8:30 p.m., Oct. 16 and 17 at the Boar's Head Theatre.

Al Ross, who was active with the University of Pennsylvania's "Mask and Wig" shows while in college, and Pat Lotito, local pianist, have combined efforts to write the revue.

Sketches, ballads, and production numbers in the show range from the sweet and highly romantic to the bitingly satirical, including commentaries on current mores, a look at the phases of city politics and an examination of civil rights.

The cast includes: Bonnie Bradt McKee, Ruth Fenster, Gail Schuldt, Tom McKee, Joe Lotito and Art Kucinski. Tickets for the revue are available at the Boar's Head Theatre in Machinery Hall.

Campus Chest Queen Info

The first coffee for the campus queen contest will be held 7-9 p.m. Sunday at Phi Epsilon Pi, 423 Euclid Ave. The dress for this occasion will be sweaters and skirts.

Applications for the contest should be sent, along with $1.50, to either Robert Dorne at Tau Epsilon Phi, 320 Euclid Ave., or Sandra Hafer, Shaw Dormitory, 775 Comstock Ave. Anyone needing further information should call Dorne at 2048 or 2049 or Miss Hafer at 2970.

Bennett Discusses Debate Over Election's 'Best Man'

By EDWIN KARLIN

"Never has the question of who is the best been as insistent or as important." With this viewpoint, David Bennett discussed the topic "The Best Man" at the Tuesday citizenship lecture.

Bennett is an assistant professor in the Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs.

Before referring to the upcoming election, Bennett discussed the office of the presidency as viewed in former years. He said "success has been the exception, not the rule." This is true because "the job is the most diverse, demanding, and frustrating of any on earth."

The consensus of leading historians, according to Bennett, has provided a list of only seven presidents who are considered great. These he gave as George Washington, Andrew Jackson, Thomas Jefferson, Abraham Lincoln Theodore Roosevelt, Woodrow Wilson and Franklin Roosevelt.

Bennett also listed the ideals that he said made these men rise above mediocrity. He said they understood the setting and needs of the people. They had "the ability to articulate needs and notions at the time," Bennett added.

Perhaps the most important characteristic present in the seven men, Bennett pointed out, was that they understood that power must be used in the White House. Bennett called these presidents "political geniuses" because they could "manipulate power" to strengthen the country.

Another asset common to the seven was their courage. Bennett noted that some of their decisions were perilous, but they were carried out.

Turning to current specific characteristics, Bennett explained the policies of the two presidential candidates.

Bennett said President Lyndon B. Johnson's main theme is to "continue policies started in the Kennedy-Johnson administration. He added that Johnson would try to take advantage of the communist split and increase non-military foreign aid.

He said Johnson feels strengthening the poor countries is a moral obligation that, in the long run, will serve the national interests of the United States.

Viewing the Republican side, Bennett said Johnson's policies are "almost totally rejected by Sen. Barry M. Goldwater." He said Goldwater believed trade with Eastern European countries will help the Communists.

Bennett added that senator believes "the key word is victory," and that "compromise is another word for appeasement."

The difference between Goldwater and Johnson in domestic affairs is even more striking, according to Bennett. Goldwater believes the continuation of the New Deal is leading America into a welfare state. Bennett said the Republican candidate sees federal control such as the Tennessee Valley Authority (TVA) as both "unfair and unhealthy."

Bennett added that Goldwater said "it would rob America of war on poverty on the principle also opposes medicare and the its inititive."

Bennett told the students, "Don't confuse the 1960 election with this one." He said the 1960 election emphasized personalities. In 1961, Bennett said, it will be won on issues.

Frosh Candidates Offer Opinions

the campus with posters but gimmicks, such as a small follies show before the weekend would certainly add to the student enthusiasm and excitement.

Any office of this type certainly offers privileges, but it also carries responsibility with it. I am willing to accept this privilige and responsibility and hope that the class of '68 will give me that chance.

Nominees for the position of frosh treasurer have issued these statements:

ALAN ABRAHAMSON—The position of treasurer entails more than just control of the finances of the class. At a university of this size, the treasurer, as do all of the officers, has to instill in the student body a spirit of unity.

No endeavor proposed by the executive branch can be successful without dynamic student support. I feel that as one of the four class leaders the treasurer must be as instrumental in these goals as the president.

Experience is, of course, necessary also. As business manager of the school publications, for 2 years and a student representative, I have had experience in the administrative field.

PETER LEE — Freshmen! Vote for Peter Lee as your class treasurer. He is willing and able to serve you.

WILLIAM WALDORF — To become treasurer, one needs the necessary experience, I believe I have ample qualifications, both in school and working two years for a certified public accountant.

I have heard many students say that student government doesn't have much in the way of power. This may be so, but this situation can only be blamed on its officers.

Most students want officers who will correct or at least modify their grievances. This can only be accomplished if they have someone who will voice and act upon their wants.

What I will do is introduce and, more importantly, back liberal ideas which the students and not necessarily the administration want. Anyone who is more specific with his promises or who boasts endless deeds can only be hoping that the success of his campaign is based upon the gullibility of the freshman class.

In my opinion the most important single factor is for the officer to be willing to spend all the time and effort necessary to make successful the activities planned and the duties required. This I am more than willing to do.

Thursday's Daily Orange will contain statements released by presidential and vice presidential hopefuls.

Another freshman tossed his hat into the political ring late Tuesday and announced his candidacy for the office of freshman class president.

Robert Cottle, of Norwell, Mass., and Seymour cottage, told the Daily Orange he decided to run for office because he was "dissatisfied with the other people running."

He said the other candidates were unrealistic in their approach. His own views will be published in Thursday's Daily Orange.

A spokeman for the elections commission said the new candidate would have to submit a petition with 250 signatures before his name could be placed on the ballot.

Syracuse Ranked 7th Nationally

Low AND Inside

By BILL CRONAUER
Sports Editor

The naming of Orange defensive end George Fair to the Eastern College Athletic Conference All-East team yesterday marks the third consecutive week that a Syracuse player has been so honored.

For Fair, it was the second time this fall, with his initial recognition coming after the Kansas game. Last week Gerry Everling captured Eastern laurels.

No one will deny that George Fair played a fine game Saturday. Still, another Piety defensive end, sophomore Herb Stecker, performed pretty well, too.

Let's look at the facts:

(1) Fair was credited with three tackles, all assisted. Period.

(2) Stecker received credit for seven tackies, including two unassisted, two fumble recoveries and a deflected pass. In addition, he intercepted the first attempted UCLA pass and raced into the end zone for a TD, only to have it nullified by a penalty.

Said coach Ben Schwartzwalder afterwards, "That interception by Stecker the first time they had the ball was one of the big plays of the game even though it was nullified. They got cautious after that and never could get rolling."

As the saying goes, figures never lie, at least to that extent. Sure, Fair put constant pressure on the Bruin quarterback, a fact invisible in the statistics, but so did Stecker.

Why did George Fair, not Herb Stecker, get the All-East nod? One can only guess.

Perhaps it was because ECAC officials couldn't read the statistics sheets, upon which they base most of their decisions.

Perhaps it was because ECAC officials like to see repeat performers on their squads.

Or perhaps it was because Syracuse University wants an All-American candidate and is employing all its publicity resources toward this goal.

Whatever the reason, let's hope that in the future Hill players receive such honors as are rightfully theirs.

Orangemen Climb on Polls; Stand No. 1 in Lambert Race

Teams eliminated from last week's top 10 include Illinois, upended by Ohio State, 26-0; Kentucky, bombed by Florida State to the tune of 48-6; and UCLA.

Ranking behind the Orangemen in the Lambert are Army (2-2) and Villanova (4-0), tied for second at 6.5. Penn State, this week's Hill foe, although showing only a 1-3 record, earned the fourth spot.

Following in order Pittsburgh, Princeton, Navy, Yale, Boston College and Massachusetts.

Here is how the high-ranking teams pair up Saturday:

—Texas vs. Arkansas, a battle of the undefeateds.

—Ohio State vs. Southern Cal, no breather for the Buckeyes.

—Alabama vs. Tennessee, forget it.

—Notre Dame vs. UCLA, go get 'em Bruins.

—Michigan vs. Purdue, an upset?

—Nebraska vs. Kansas State, Cornhuskers should remain undefeated.

—Syracuse vs. Penn State, . .

—Louisiana State vs. Kentucky, SEC battle.

—Florida State vs. Georgia, no trouble here.

—Georgia Tech vs. Auburn, you pick the winner.

—Florida vs. South Carolina, Gators stay in top 10.

The Orangemen of Syracuse, impressive with a 39-0 pasting of previously undefeated UCLA Saturday, have vaulted into the no. 7 slot on both the Associated Press and United Press International football polls this week.

SU captured 89 votes in the AP rankings and 79 in UPI.

In the Lambert Trophy competition, the Hill forces snared all but one of the first place votes and topped the Eastern grid field with a 9.9 rating.

Nationally, Texas stands first on both polls, followed in order by Ohio State, Alabama, Notre Dame, Michigan and Nebraska, all undefeated.

In fact, Syracuse is the only team in either top 10 which has suffered a loss.

AP views Arkansas, LSU and Florida State as its eighth, ninth and 10th clubs. UPI offers the same positions to Georgia Tech, Florida and Arkansas.

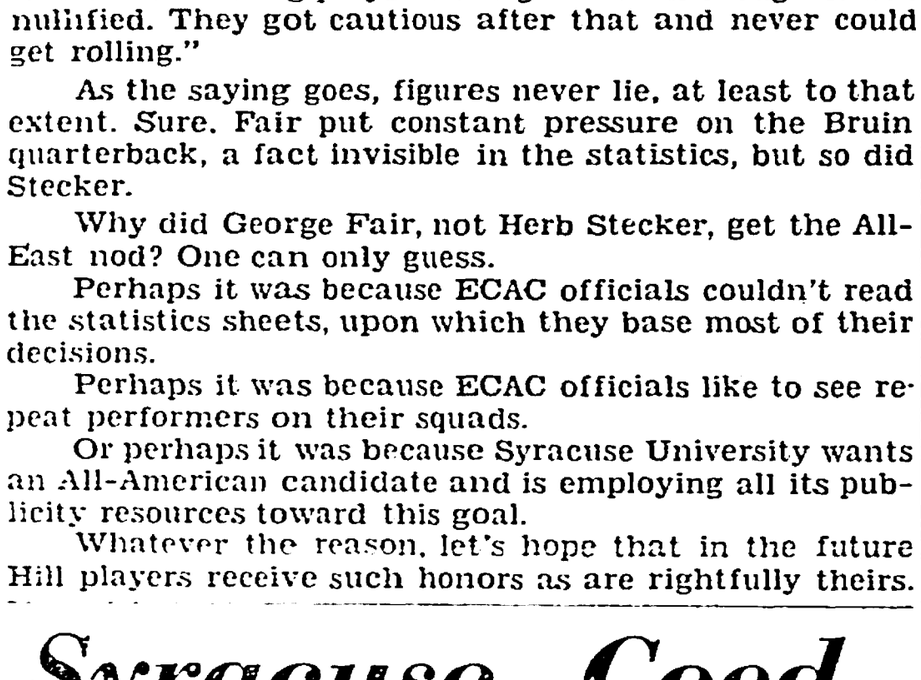
Syracuse Coed Bows In Tennis Semifinals



PAT McCARRICK

Playing amid cold and wind, a Syracuse University coed finished in the semifinals of the Eastern Collegiate Tennis Tournament for Women last weekend.

Pat McCarrick, seeded third for the tournament, played up to expectations in her attempt to clinch the championship.

The tournament, sponsored by the Eastern Lawn Tennis Association and the State University College at Oneonta, was held at the West Side Tennis Club in Forest Hills Oct. 9 - 11.

Miss McCarrick, a junior majoring in physical education, lost in the semifinals to Roberta Zimmans of Bouve University. She played two matches on Friday and Saturday and her final match Sunday.

This is the second year that Miss McCarrick has finished in the semifinals. Last June she also attended the National Collegiate Tennis Tournament for Women.

George Fair Gains Spot On All-East

SU's George Fair has been named to an end spot on the weekly All-East major college football team selected by the Eastern College Athletic Conference.

Orange opponents also ranked well. Quarterback Eddie Foley of Boston College, who failed to see action against Syracuse, made the squad.

Tackle John Carber of Army, halfback Bob Riggle of Penn State and Marty Shottenheimer, Pitt center, were choices who promise to spell trouble for the Piety forces in the future.

Other players chosen were Yale fullback Chuck Mercein, halfback Don McKay of Princeton, Rutgers tackle Ron Kenny, and guards George Arrangio of Cornell and Eddie Meixler of Boston University.

Colgate's Ray Ilg, who played linebacker against Holy Cross, was picked sophomore of the week.

RKF, Keating to Speak on Campus

Kenneth B. Keating and Robert F. Kennedy will miss the pleasure of each other's company by just 24 hours.

The Democratic and Republican candidates for United States senator from New York will speak here early next week, the citizenship department of the Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs has announced.

Kennedy will speak at 7:30 p.m., Monday at Manley Field House. The building will open at 6:45 p.m. for a rally under the direction of Students-for-Kennedy.

Kennedy's speech is open to the general student body and public.

Keating will address students of citizenship 1 and 104 at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday in Hendricks Chapel at his request.

The Keating Girls and folk singer Ted Brown will be featured in a political rally at 7 p.m. on the chapel steps under the auspices of Students-for-Keating.

Both candidates have been asked by the citizenship department to speak on the theme of "The Campaign As I See It."

Only Citizenship 1a and 104 students will be given tickets to hear Keating in the Chapel. They are expected to fill all available seats.

An appeal to Sen. Keating. See editorial, page 2.

The general student body may listen to a relay of Keating's address in Kittredge Auditorium, Huntington B. Crouse Hall. These students will be admitted on a first-come first-served basis.

WAER (88.3 f.m.) is scheduled to broadcast both the Kennedy and Keating lectures live.

According to a recent survey by the New York Times, the 38-year-old Democratic candidate and the 64-year-old Republican incumbent agree on a wide range of issues in their campaigns.

However, the two candidates disagree over such state issues as tax relief for commuters and the method of reapportioning the state legislature.

Both candidates have said that the state's voting age should be lowered from 21 to 18 for national elections.

The Times reported Keating as saying, "I have long been interested in measures to expand the franchise and have proposed a constitutional amendment lowering the voting age to 18 in national elections."

Replying to the same question, Kennedy pointed out that the argument saying that "if 18-year-olds are eligible for compulsory military service, they should be

Bursar Labels Musts For Casting Ballots

By DONALD LAWLESS

Syracuse freshmen get their first taste of campus politics today as they go to the polls to elect their class officers.

Voting booths are located in Crouse Hall, Graham Hall, Sims Hall, and Watson Dormitory. The booth in HBC will be open from 9 a.m. 4 p.m. All others will be open 15 minutes before lunch and dinner to 15 minutes after each meal.

All freshmen must have their bursar's label in order to cast their vote. The labels will be stamped as a sign of having voted and aso to prevent repeat votes.

Freshmen elections have steadily risen in importance as evidenced by the increasing percentage of freshmen who vote.

Back in 1949 when the voting was over, only 603 votes were cast out of a class of over

'68 Nominees Present Programs

The Daily Orange has invited freshmen candidates for class office to voice their platforms and opinions on issues affecting the campus and student body.

Today's statements are from nominees for president and vice president of the class of '68. The first set of comments are from the four candidates for president.

ROBERT BAGNALL—"Bob Bagnall, candidate for the office of president of the freshman class, is a most capable aspirant for this position.

"His home is in Poughkeepsie, and he is now living in Hungerford cottage where he holds the office of president of the dorm. In addition to the office which he now holds, Bagnall was president of his home town high school for four years, and a leader in many community activities.

"His platform is based on the two words: "Act Now." The problems to which he is prepared to give his fullest attention are those concerning housing, communications within the freshman class, the Greek system, food service, and the creation of a student union. He hopes to make Freshman Weekend one which will surpass those of previous years in all respects.

"Bagnall is definitely a willing and qualified candidate for the office which he is seeking —president of the class of '68."

ROBERT COTTLE— "Drafted at almost the last possible moment by desperate students, Bob Cottle won't bore you with a long list of his qualifications, won't pretend to be a politician nor will he effect any booming and boisterous personality.

"What he offers Syracuse is sincerity in his intent, uncompromising effort in fulfillment of his intent, and unwavering commitment to the intent, this

DAVIS DRIVE MEETS TODAY

An organizational meeting for the Ernie Davis Leukemia Fund drive on campus will be held at 7 p.m. today in the Chapel House, 711 Comstock Ave.

All organizations interested in working on the drive should send a representative to the meeting.

Music Dean Opens Humanities Series

The Humanities Lecture Series for 1964-65 will begin at 4 p.m. today in Gifford Auditorium in Huntington B. Crouse Hall with Howard Boatwright, dean of the School of Music delivering the first address.

"Charles Ives; Composer, Businessman, and Transcendentalist," will be the subject of his talk. Ives (1874-1954) was an American musical experimentalist whose compositions include five symphonies and choral works.

Boatwright, who received both a bachelor and a master of music from Yale University, is also a composer. Among his more than 50 compositions are both chamber works and church music.

A former professor at the University of Texas and Yale University, Boatwright served as concertmaster of the New Haven Symphony for 12 years and as conductor of the Yale University Orchestra for nine.

He was appointed dean of the Syracuse University School of Music on July 1, 1964.

The Humanities Lecture Series is designed to bring to Syracuse speakers in the humanities, fine arts, religion, philosophy, literature and languages.

Dr. Clayton L. Dawson, chairman of the Slavic language department, is in charge of the series.

October 15, 1964

Sen. Kenneth B. Keating
The Campaign Trail
New York State

Dear Sen. Keating:

We are happy to hear that you will be in Syracuse Tuesday to address the student body. We consider your appearance a great honor in these times of busy campaigning.

However, we are disturbed by the decision of your staff that your speech be presented in Hendricks Chapel, rather than Manley Field House.

For the chapel is hopelessly small for the great numbers of people who would like to hear you speak, and all chapel seats have been reserved for freshman citizenship students, which is necessary because your speech is requisite for the citizenship course.

What this means, Mr. Keating, is that many of us of voting age who are the most interested in hearing you present your views are being deprived the opportunity of hearing you first-hand, not to mention the opportunity to ask questions we feel are important.

A live broadcast to an auditorium is no more effective than a radio or television spot, and the opportunity to feel that we are participating is lost.

We are interested in hearing you and seeing you, Senator, for we, as you, feel there is much at stake in this election.

Also overlooked in a chapel speech would be the opportunity for members of the faculty and administration to attend the speech. The community is also being deprived.

We urge you and your staff to reconsider your decision about the location for your speech. We cannot consider ourselves fully capable of voting if we are able to see and hear only one candidate, when there was clearly an opportunity for us to see and hear two.

Today's college students are sincerely interested in this election. We urge you not to aim our thirst for knowledge into a desert.

Sincerely,
Andrew Porte

The Other Election

Syracuse's freshman class goes to the polls today, and the result will have very little significance to the world.

Great Britain also votes today, and the outcome will certainly have bearing on each of our lives, for it involves a need for decision on the part of the United States' closest ally.

Britain today will decide whether it will continue under the Conservative leadership that has predominated the fifties and sixties, or whether it will swing into the control of the Laborites, who can remember little but loyal opposition.

If they lose, and the polls seem to indicate a defeat, Britain's Conservatives have no one but themselves to blame. Sir Alec Douglas-Home, surprise choice to succeed Harold Macmillan as prime minister, has proved lack-luster at best.

Sir Alec is a statesman, rather than a politician, and Britain is looking for a politician to lead the nation. He apparently will be Harold Wilson, Britain's Laborite leader.

Home "emerged" from the ranks of the Conservatives in the often-confusing process the party uses to choose its leader. What is not so confusing is that the choice will probably cost the Conservatives the election.

Millstones and Milestones

Questions

By Dan Stone

Sen. Kenneth Keating and would-be senator Robert Kennedy will both be speaking on campus this coming week. The game of musical chairs over who speaks where is still going on. ("...well, if I fill the chapel and have two hundred kids hollering outside it will look better than a hundred empty seats in the fieldhouse. But if he fills the...") All that is confirmed right now is that Mr. Kennedy will be here sometime Monday night and Mr. Keating will be here Tuesday.

In itself getting these two candidates at this stage of the campaign is a credit to the Maxwell citizenship lectures. Year after year they have provided the campus with outstanding lecturers and this semester they have outdone themselves.

But these speeches are not being held in a lecture atmosphere. Rather the two men are coming into Syracuse for what will in effect be political rallies. There is talk of having bands, cheerleaders, folk singers, and anything else that comes to mind.

Campaign rallies in Syracuse unfortunately bring out more than enthusiastic listeners and watchers. They also produce a proliferation of sign carriers. Now I am certain that both Kennedy and Keating are aware that one Barry Goldwater is running on the Republican ticket for President. Neither indeed has exhibited much enthusiasm over the fact. Yet just as sure as the two are going to appear, someone will be marching back and forth in front of the fieldhouse or the chapel jiggling a sign that tells us what we know deep in our hearts (or the pit of your stomach as the case may be).

And just as surely as that sign carrier appears, there will be another inside blocking the view of at least three people with the sign that proclaims Zippy Tie Upsala is for Kennedy or Keating depending on the house straw vote.

Rather than marching, it seems to me these stalwarts of the political wars should be inside asking questions. I assume a question and answer period will be provided. It's customary for a citizenship lecturer to submit to questioning and especially in this instance there are a number of questions that need to be answered. From the former attorney general I think the people of this state deserve to know if he is seriously interested in serving a full six-year term or if he feels there could be a higher calling than senator from New York. If for instance (though improbably) the President called on him for some special assignment, where does his loyalty lie?

Should the Republicans of New York decide to ride again in '66 with Nelson Rockefeller, does the governor's mansion beckon? And if he should win there, does that mean the people of New York would be asked to settle for Robert Wagner, a man they once rejected for the Senate, as their Senator?

And finally, by what means is Robert Kennedy, who is at best vaguely familiar with the state, proposing to keep in contact with the people of New York? Is he relying on Stephen Smith and a personal organization? Is he counting on the various county chairmen (about half of whom were opposed to his nomination)? Or is he solely working through Robert Wagner?

The other side of the ledger is not question-free.

The junior senator from New York is running a campaign not without its contradictions.

For instance, why is Sen. Keating coming before us in 1964 with the claim that Kennedy is an outsider (and outsiders are patently unfit to serve the state) when in 1958 candidate Keating stumped throughout the state urging the election of Nelson Rockefeller? Until that time Rockefeller had been spending as much time in Venezuela and other parts of the country as he had in New York.

Sen. Keating has come out in favor of a constitutional amendment to overturn the Supreme Court's "one man, one vote" reapportionment decision. This is disturbing to me. It would seem that every major Supreme Court decision of the last two or three years has met with a cry for a constitutional amendment. It would be interesting to know if Sen. Keating feels this should be frequently used as a form of redressing the court (as Goldwater seems to) and if not where the line should be drawn.

There are other questions.

As for the students the Kennedy-Keating addresses will be political appearances. In the words of a folk song, "some come to dance, some come to sing." Others will come to show their fellow students their clever signs. Some will just come to watch.

Hopefully, some will come to question.

Indian Musician Shankar To Play Sitar At Regent

The music of the exotic East comes to Syracuse at 8:30 p.m. Friday, when Ravi Shankar, Indian musician appears at the Regent Theatre.

Shankar, who was born in Benares, plays the sitar, a seven-stringed instrument. The sitar is fashioned from a seasoned gourd and teakwood and is a popular instrument in India.

Accompanying Shankar will be Alla Rakha on the double-drums or Tabla and Nodu Mullick on the Tamboura, a drone instrument.

Chosen to celebrate the 10th anniversary of the United Nations for the International Broadcast, Shankar has also played for some of the most important International Music Congresses of Paris and other European capitals. In 1958, he was invited to participate in UNESCO's Music Festival in Paris.

As virtuoso of the sitar, Shankar is a traditionalist adhering to one of the most ancient musical traditions in the world. He is also, however, active in radio, television, and as a composer for ballet, opera and films.

Shankar's latest ballet composition was for Tagore's "Samanya Kshati" and he has written scores for films that won the President's Award: "Pather Panchali," "Apur Sansar," "Kabuliwallah" and "Anuradha."

He has made regular tours of every country in Europe and most of those in Asia. This is his second tour of the U.S.

The system of Indian music which Shankar plays is known as "Raga Sangreet." It can be traced back nearly 2,000 years. Neither a scale nor a mode, "Raga Sangreet" is a scientific form with its own descending and ascending movement, which consists of either a full octave, or a series of six or five notes. There are 72 parent scales on which the "Raga" is based.

Tickets for the Shankar concert are available at the Regent Theatre box office.

Music Review

by Martin Cohn

Monday night, the Krasner Chamber Music Ensemble opened its fifteenth anniversary season with an all Bach program, and it was the kind of concert we have come to expect from this group in the last few years: adventurous programming, and good, though not very imaginative, performances.

The first of the two items on the program was Bach's Overture (Suite) No. 1 in C major. This work is a suite of dances meant for instrumental performance only, yet its spirit is not far removed from seventeenth century ballroom. In this piece which is scored for strings, two oboes and bassoon, with harpsichord continuo, the Krasner ensemble, though playing with buoyancy and clarity, did not properly emphasize the difference in tempo between the dances. By using a small ensemble, the Krasner group achieved clarity, but failed to make the necessary distinction in tempo between the various dances that comprise the suite.

The instrumental execution was very good, with the sole exception of Mr. Krasner's bad violin playing, and mention should go to the winds for their buoyant and colorful playing.

Bach's "Musical Offering," the final piece on the concert, had a shaky beginning. Pappastavrou's playing of the opening three part Ricercare was the kind a reviewer does not like to write about. It was erratic, disorganized, and sprinkled with mistakes, and certainly not the kind of performance one expects from this very fine artist.

It was in the trio sonata and the final Ricercare that we heard the best performances of the night.

The trio sonata was played with the fluency that this music deserves, and there were noticible signs of improvement in both Mr. Krasner and Mr. Pappastavrou.

Everyone, however, performed beautifully in the final six part Ricercare, one of Bach's greatest inspirations.

Partos Concert at Crouse

Oedoen Partos, violinist, composer and music educator, will give a concert at 10 a.m. today in Crouse Auditorium.

Partos is director of the Rubin Academy of Music, a part of Tel-Aviv University in Israel. He was one of the founders of the International Society for Contemporary Music, devoting himself to the performance of new works for violin, viola and chamber-music ensembles.

His compositions have won such important awards as the American Music Critics Award.

Calamity is the perfect glass wherein we truly see and know ourselves. — Sir William D'Avenant.

school, and the class he will serve.

"Believing that it is foolish to fabricate eye-catching but unrealistic issues, that it is foolish to say what is good or bad for SU, as a chancellor isn't made in five weeks, what Bob is promising in effect is that he will find out what has to be done, and then do it.

"The problem is not to begin on issues before they can be handled, but to settle Bob Cottle in office, then leave the problems with him."

JOHN SUBBIONBO — "I, as a presidential candidate, firmly believe in the great potentials of this freshman class and reject vigorously the accusations of immaturity and irresponsibility directed towards it.

"I take my candidacy very seriously. I wish to emphasize that the president of this class will be in a position to accomplish a great deal of good or a great deal of harm, depending on his attitude towards the office.

"I would dedicate myself to building a dynamic executive body which will be truly representative of its constituency.

"But most of all, I realize the great need for informed action rather than impulsive action, and would apply this principle with long range dedication in the weeks and months ahead and never yield to complacency."

WILLIAM " TODD" WALLENS—"The challenge of the future has always been an ominous one. The tremendous tasks facing us in today's world present no exception to this rule.

"I feel, however, that any worthwhile accomplishments in the past, have always been achieved through hard work and cooperation. It is very evident to us all, that our class will soon be called on to produce this labor.

"No one person or no small group of people can possibly hope to shatter the barriers that lie ahead for us. This is why I so strongly feel that we must organize, we must shape our class into one powerful body, we must achieve unity.

I can offer no promises—only this challenge. Let us meet the threat of the future as a united class of 1968. Help me to begin to form this unity now, by giving me your support today.

Vice presidential candidates and their views are:

MIRIAM (MIMI) BERNSTEIN— "I want to make the vice presidency a real office. I feel the candidates should stop talking in generalities and start talking in specifics.

"If I am elected, I will have a freshman bulletin board where all freshmen can find pertinent notices. I also will publish a frosh flyer to keep the freshmen informed.

"Freshman Weekend will be a success. I've found that publicity is the vital factor in running a weekend. I would have a publicity chairman from each living center in charge of each phase of publicity.

"Let's face it, the more people who know about the weekend the more people who will go.

"I have been active in high school serving on student government, weekends, and various committees. I am now the vice president of Day 4.

"Again I stress that I will work hard for the class of '68 and make it really rate!"

JEFFREY LOVELACE— "I am running on the "Realist But - Do - Something" platform. Disregard the unrealistic promises of others for better housing which is poor but little can can be done, for better food which is the best possible, and for more lenient women's curfews which are controlled by the Association of Women Students.

The bookstore prices are a necessary evil. I stand for a socially rewarding Freshman Week end with the theme of the World's Fair, on a financial par with last year's and not $600 less as is now allotted.

"I stand for an enthusiastic student union with its own building which is necessary to the campus and is beneficial to all students as a gathering place.

"We can raise money and support our endeavors through social activities and a student food concession. I want to see a closer student-teacher relationship. Women should be allowed in men's dormitory rooms on Saturday afternoons. With maturity and realism, we as a class should be able to attain these points and more. At this point, I would like to thank those who have worked so hard for me.

MICHAEL VILLARI — "Because of limited space, I will not be able to explain my platform. I ask each voter instead, to talk to his or her delegate and from them obtain the facts about each candidate.

"I am sure that if this is done, then only one conclusion can be reached: that I am the best man.

MIRIAM BERNSTEIN

JEFFREY LOVELACE

MICHAEL VILLARI

"I assure you that if I am elected, I will use whatever powers I have to make our first year as successful as possible."

2800 students. In 1948, only 458 voted out of an even larger freshman class.

More recently, in 1962, the class of '66 cast 1,152 votes for their freshmen officers. With a class of 2,229, 51 per cent of the class voted in the election.

Last fall, the class of '67 sent 55 per cent of its members to the polls to elect class officers. 1,119 votes were tallied at the end of the balloting.

Today the class of '68 chooses its officers from among the following.

Presidential candidates are Robert Bagnall, John Subbiondo and William Wallens.

A fourth president candidate, Robert Cottle will appear as a write-in ballot because he was not nominated at the convention.

"His name won't appear on the ballot but persons wishing to vote for him can write his name in," said Election Commissioner Michael Kronley. Ballots were printed before Cottle entered the race late Tuesday.

Running for vice president of the class of '68 are Jeffrey Lovelace, Michael Villari and Miriam (Mimi) Bernstein.

Secretarial candidates are Linda Lipitz, Steven Berlin and Mary Hamilton.

Running for treasurer are Alan Abrahamson, Peter Lee and William Waldorf.

SU Hosts International Broadcasting Conference

Syracuse University will host the International Broadcast Seminar for the fourth consecutive year when 20 participants from 16 countries will be on campus from Sunday Nov. 6.

The broadcasters will participate in a three week course to familiarize them with American skills.

George Mastroianni, instructor in the university Television and Radio Center and administrator of the International Broadcast Seminar, said visitors will stay with American families while in Syracuse.

After the course the participants will visit Washington D.C., New York, Boston, and then return to SU for summaries and reviews.

The broadcasters were nominated by the American embassies in their respective countries. They are considered influential broadcasters who could benefit from first hand knowledge of American broadcasting by the embassies.

Syracuse University's football coach, Ben Schwartzwalder, is the winningest coach in the university's history. In 15 years at SU, he has complied a 94-46-2 record his 100th victory this season.

IFC Budget Increases

By DAVID SOSNA

A $14,000 budget, more than $4,000 over last year's allowance, was passed in Wednesday's InterFraternity Council meeting. Three hundred new fraternity men and additional alumni contributions are responsible for the increase, according to George Van Derven, IFC president.

The money will be used, Van Derven said, to finance a bigger Greek Week than those in the past and to allow greater IFC publicity. The budget for Meet the Greeks, the annual fraternity rushing information booklet for freshmen, has also been expanded.

Discussing last weekend's open house and fraternity pre-game show, Van Derven declared that "the weather put a real damper on it. If it hadn't been so bad, the show would have been a real success."

Alumni and parents also caused difficulties, he said. "Many of the houses were very crowded and with all the bands playing inside, no one was sure who was visiting and who was rushing. We have no accurate statistics." He did say, however, that the open house was planned for next year.

Plans for this Sunday's open house were also discussed at the meeting and Van Derven recommended that all freshmen attending wear coats and ties. He stressed the fact that there will be no IFC supervision during this informal reception, scheduled for 2-5 p.m.

The next IFC meeting is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Oct. 28 at Phi Delta Theta

DU Elects Officers

Douglas Morey, social chairman; James Marshall, head of public relations; Jefrey Cotten, assistant head of public relations; Kerry Quinn, scholarship; George Geiger, intramural representative; Richard Wightman, house manager.

Senate's Housing Bill Stays in Committee; Keating Wires Praise

By JESSE SMITH

Student Senate defeated Wednesday night a motion to bring up for debate proposed student representation on the university housing committee.

Speaker Robert (Robby) Stern sent the bill back to the student conduct and welfare committee for reconsideration.

Stern has been backing the bill, but lauded the vote which kept it in committee. After the 7:15 session in Maxwell Auditorium, Stern admitted that the senate committee, which has already defeated the bill, may come up with "something better."

During the sessions Stern said, "Unlike the DO editor, I don't believe we should not disturb the status quo."

He was referring to Wednesday's Daily Orange editorial against seating students on the housing board.

Stern read to the Hill senators a telegram from U.S. senator Kenneth B. Keating, conveying Keating's best wishes to them.

"I would like to commend you for your active participation in Student Government which will provide valuable experience, and I urge you to continue to work for good government," it read. "My warmest greetings."

Reverend Charles C. Noble, dean of Hendricks Chapel, opened the senate session with a talk on the importance and power of the individual.

Even in our "stereotyped society," Noble said, "there's something in us that won't be submerged." Students are not taught by the university, he declared. "You're taught by the impact of individuals on you."

Various senate committees are working on a number of projects. Student conduct and welfare committee is asking other student governments whether their campuses have a "dead week," and how it works.

Another committee is contacting other schools about their marking systems, and conducting a poll among Hill students, with an eye toward possible revision of Syracuse University's grading policies.

The local and national affairs committee will meet at 4 p.m. today in the Student Government office, Marion Hall basement.

eligible to vote," is trite, but valid.

The two candidates were found to be concurrent in their views of the legality of some federal aid to certain programs in parochial and private schools. But both said they felt that a provision of Federal funds for the operation of non-public schools would raise some serious constitutional questions.

On the question of reapportionment, Kennedy and Keating disagreed sharply.

Keating said he advocated "a Federal constitutional amendment to permit the people within a state to approve a state legislative system modeled on the Federal pattern as long as one house is apportioned strictly on the basis of population."

Kennedy said that he did not favor a Federal constitutional amendment restricting the districting of legislative seats on a population basis to one house.

Referring to the Supreme Court decision on reapportionment of the state legislatures, Kennedy has said:

"In my judgement, it is a fair decision and will make both state and Federal legislatures more responsive to the people. I do not favor repeal of the decision nor do I favor a constitutional amendment restricting it to one house."

SU-Penn State: Defensive Duel

Ressler Is Key Lion

By ART ROSSKY

Penn State's defense faces a stiff challenge this week as it seeks to contain the Hill's one-two punch of Floyd Little and Bo Nance. However, many explosive backs have found rocky going against Lions in earlier games.

Last week Army's highly touted Rollie Stichweh was limited to 67 yards rushing. In the season opener Navy's Roger Staubach, the 1963 Heisman winner, was limited to 25 yards total offense.

Heading State's line is middle guard Glenn Ressler, All American candidate, a 6-2, 235-pounder from Dornsife, Pa. Last year he earned first team All-East honors after taking part in 83 tackles, 53 of them solo performances.

High Draft Pick

Following spring practice, pro scouts declared, "Ressler is a cinch to go in the first round of the draft because he's exactly what they are looking for in a lineman."

His top game was the Ohio State tilt, in which State captured a 10-7 verdict. Against the Buckeyes he personally dumped 14 ball carriers.

Veteran Lion coach Rip Engle calls Ressler "the finest interior lineman I've coached."

"He's big, strong, quick, a fine blocker, a fine tackler, has the perfect temperment to be great," and, asks the State mentor, "what else do you need?"

HERSHEY

Following last week's Army tilt, Engle exclaimed "Ressler batted down one pass, made tackles all over the place and was something of a one-man gang in stopping Army's inside running game."

"He sure knows how to discourage an opposing offense," added Engle.

In the other locker room Cadet mentor Paul Dietzel called Ressler "as fine a middle guard as I've seen in a long time."

Another standout against the West Pointers was right linebacker Bob Kane, who barely missed being named top line man in the Army fray.

Late in the Army game the soldiers marched down the field to the two-yard stripe with three cracks at the goal. On the first attempt Army back Mark Hamilton was given the assignment.Kane responded by slamming Hamilton down a yard behind the line of scrimmage.

Powerful Line

On the next two plays Kane led a fiercely-charging line that forced Stichweh to throw two incomplete passes and end the Cadet threat.

An important factor in State's victory was the play of the defensive backs. "They stuck like glue" noted Coach Engle. As a result Stichweh clicked on only six of 16 heaves.

Heading the secondary is senior Frank Hershey, a 6-1, 190-pounder from Lancaster, Pa.

The other linebacker is rookie John Runnels, a 6-0, 205-pounder from Scotch Plains, N.J.

Flanking Ressler on the interior are tackles Sandy Buchan, 225, and John Diebert, 240.

Flankers on the defensive unit are senior Gerry Sandusky, 200, and Bud Yost, 205.

Defensive backs Dick Gingrich Mike Irwin, Hershey and Joe Vargo all were praised by the State mentor after the Cadets' clash. Hershey also handles the Lions' punting duties.

Offensive Tackles

On the offensive unit tackles Joe Bellas and John Simko stood out Saturday. "They made our ground game go," said Engle.

Handling the guard slots are Chuck Ehinger, State's most improved player in spring drills, and Steve Schreckengaust, a 205-pounder. Centering the line is junior Bob Andromnici, a 205-pounder who has shown rapid development.

Flankers are Bill Huber and captain Bill Bowes. Huber paces pass receivers with 11 grabs for 194 yards.

Calling signals is senior Gary Wydman. Last year Wydman was giving the now-graduated Pete Liske a hot battle for the starting berth before illness forced him out of action.

Top-Notch Passer

This year Wydman has provide State with sharp passing, clicking on 32 of 63 attempts for 452 yards. Only four have fallen into enemy hands.

Sharing the fullback duties are Ed Stuckrath and Tom Urbanik. Stuckrath has gained 189 yards for an amazing 7.5 average, while Urbanik has been credited with 121 yards, for 4.8.

Halfbacks are Bob Riggle and Dirk Nye. Riggle was the hero of the Army game as he scored the lone touchdown.

Coach and Prize Pupil

Veteran Penn State coach CHARLES (RIP) ENGLE poses with ace linebacker GLENN RESSLER. Engle, in his 15th season at the Lion helm, calls Ressler "the finest interior linemen I've ever coached."

AERIAL ACT

Hill Spiders Stingy With Grid Yardage

Syracuse's powerful Spiders currently stand as the top defensive outfit in the country, according to figures released Wednesday by the NCAA statistical bureau.

The Orange defensive eleven, captained by safetyman Hal (Black Widow) Rooney, has yielded just 473 yards to its opening four opponents, an average of 118.3 yards per game.

Last weekend, SU limited the UCLA Bruins to 45 yards passing and a minus-four yards rushing.

The Spiders will get little time to rest on their laurels, however, as they face a severe test at Penn State Saturday. Lion quaterback Gary Wydman has completed over 50 per cent of his passes and also excels on rollouts.

Yielding 236 yards overhead, the Spiders pass defense ranks seventh nationally. Opponents have rushed for 237 yards.

In 1959, Syracuse's national champions offered their 10 foes a mere 962 yards, leading the country. At the present rate, the Spiders remain 81 yards behind that unit.

Second to the Orange at present is Rutgers, which has granted an average of 126 yards per game.

Offensively, the Hill forces stand second in rushing offense, thanks to its one-two punch of fullback Jim Nance and left half Floyd Little.

Individually, Nance ranks no. 8 in the NCAA rushing race, while Little occupies the 11th position.

HAL ROONEY

In scoring, SU owns the no. 1 spot nationally with a 31.3 points per game average.

Passing-wise, the Piety has chalked up a minute total of 203 yards.

KHRUSHCHEV OUSTED AS SOVIET BOSS

USSR Taps Brezhnev, Kosygin For Top Party, Government Posts

History claimed the Nikita Khrushchev era Thursday, as the 70-year-old Soviet leader was "released" from his posts as premier and first secretary of the Soviet Communist Party.

Leonid Brezhnev, 57, was named to assume the key party post, while Alexei Kosygin has been designated as premier.

The official announcement from the Soviet news agency, Tass, said the decision to dismiss Khrushchev had been made "in view of his advanced age and deterioration of his health."

There was no indication from Tass that Khrushchev had attended the party Central Committee meeting Thursday where he was dismissed. His release as first secretary had been decided Wednesday and his dismissal as premier came Thursday, the report said.

Khrushchev had not been mentioned publicly for two days. He was at his Black Sea vacation home Tuesday where he met with a French official.

Maxwell School specialists on the Soviet Union and Russian exchange students comment on the shake-up in the USSR, see page 12.

Speculation ended early this morning in Moscow with the official announcement. Khrushchev's picture, which had been hanging near the Kremlin, disappeared from view in the early morning hours.

Cleveland Gives His Viewpoints On 'K' Dismissal

By CAROL RUBRIGHT
Junior Editor

"There's no way of telling what kind of political turn the Soviet Union will now take," Harlan Cleveland, of the State Department told the Daily Orange Thursday.

Cleveland, assistant secretary of state for international organizational affairs, was speaking from Washington D.C. of the then unconfirmed report that Nikita S. Khrushchev had been relieved of his posts as premier of the USSR and Secretary of the Soviet Communist Party by the party's Central Committee.

Cleveland is a former dean of the Syracuse University Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs.

Adlai E. Stevenson, United States ambassador to the United Nations, was unavailable for comment. A press officer of Stevenson's official U.S. mission delegation to the U.N. said he doubted that the the reason for Khrushchev's removal was old age.

"There are other officials older than 70," the press secretary said, "and Khrushchev was as healthy as ever a few days ago."

"Kosygin and Brezhnev (the new acting premier and party secretary, respectively) are assumed to have been Khrushchev's boys," he said.

"Alexei Kosygin has been a member of the premier's hierarchy for some time, and Leonid Brezhnev was put into office by Khrushchev about two years ago," the press man added.

"We've been hearing rumors around the U.N. about this for two or three days," he said.

1,181 Frosh Vote

Wallens Elected '68 Prexy

By MARLENE CIMONS

William (Todd) Wallens copped the frosh presidency Thursday as 1,181 members of the class of 68 went to the polls in the fall class elections.

Jeffrey Lovelace was elected vice president, secretary is Mary Hamilton and Peter Lee is the new class treasurer.

Wallens won with a sum of 488 votes, defeating Robert Bagnall with 255, John Subbiondo with 236, and independent Robert Cottle with 182.

Lovelace totalled 574 votes, compared to Miriam (Mimi) Bernstein with 355 and Michael Villari with 248.

Miss Hamilton was named on 408 ballots. Losing candidates were Linda Lipitz with 378 votes and Stephen Berlin with 363.

Lee was named on 421 votes in the treasurer's race, leaving Alan Abrahamson with 372 and William Waldorf with 333.

The new president, a resident of Watson West 4, comes from Niagara Falls.

Lovelace, whose home town is Greenwich, Conn., is a resident of Watson West 3.

PETER LEE | MARY HAMILTON | JEFF LOVELACE | WM. WALLENS

Miss Hamilton, resident of Mott cottage, hails from Albany.

The new treasurer is from Watson Dormitory and Honolulu, Hawaii.

Wallens received his strongest support in H. B. Crouse Hall with 164 votes, compared to Bagnall with 89, Subbiondo with 77 and Cottle with 71. He also topped the list in Graham Hall, Watson West and Watson East. He lost Sims Hall with 27 votes compared to Subbiondo with 69, Cottle with 64, and Bagnall with 12.

Lovelace carried all the polling places with the exception of Watson West, where he totalled 37 votes to Villari with 77 and Miss Bernstein with 54.

Miss Hamilton showed strength in Sims, HBC and Graham. Her setbacks came in Watson West and Watson East.

Lee headed the polls at HBC, Graham Hall, and Watson West.

The largest tally of voters recorded was in HBC, where 401 freshmen voted, compared to Watson West with 271, Graham with 181, Sims with 172 and Watson East with 156.

Today's voting drew to a close three days of campaigning and nominating procedures in the third election run and organized by freshmen. An 11-member elections committee, under the direction of election commissioners S. Richard Fischman and Michael Kronley, set up the rules and restrictions for campaigning and nominations.

No Tears For Nikita

We won't shed any tears for Nikita Khrushchev, and we can't make ourselves emotionally sad that he's gone, for there's an undefined something in each one of us that forbids us to sympathize with a communist leader and the communist way of life.

But we can say, quite frankly, that we're sincerely worried and distressed over the sudden change in leadership of the Soviet Union. Of Soviet politics, we know only what we read and what Dr. Donald Bishop has taught us, and it will take much interpretation before we can understand all the ramifications of the shift.

We do not know as of this writing who will emerge as the successor to Khrushchev. Perhaps it will take years, as it did for Khrushchev to become "king-of-the-hill" after Stalin.

Our main hope and our only prayer is for peace on Earth. We know that we must live with communism. We pray that the battle between democracy and communism will be fought for men's minds and not for men's blood.

We hope that the Soviet leadership rests in the hands of a man who realizes the destructive capacity of nations and not a man who realizes only destruction. We hope for a man committed to sustaining world peace.

The entire complexion of world leadership has changed radically in the past three years. Britain has undergone two leadership changes in less than a year. Germany has changed hands. So has the United States, and now Russia joins the group.

Under Nikita Khrushchev, the world has seen cooperation in an International Geophysical Year and a nuclear test ban; it has also seen Hungary and the Berlin Wall.

If the new Soviet leader must fight, we beseech him to fight with words and not with swords. The prize men have fought for is too precious to contest in today's world conditions. That prize is mankind.

Tiger at the Gates

In Which They Hope to Serve

By Dan Ritey

In only two-and-a-half weeks, an estimated 70 million Americans will decide the political fate of four men; decide whether or not the incumbent Texan shall remain so; decide whether or not a Minnesotan will become president of the Senate or remain as one of its members.

They'll also decide whether or not an Arizonan shall have to retire from public life—at least for a couple of years, and they'll decide whether or not an upstate New Yorker should be given a position which (as we so powerfully learned last fall) is only a heartbeat from the most powerful and influential office on earth.

While some automobiles advertise that they have tigers in their tanks, we regretfully note that the voting booth will not, this election, have this particular tiger in it.

Which is unfortunate in a way, depending, of course, on one's personal outlook on politics, because we would have liked to have had the chance to cast a fist against the threatening skies of Goldwaterism.

Actually, more loathsome to us on all counts, is Davy Crockett's running mate, one Bill (kill) Miller. The political logic which dictated his selection at the G.O.P. comedy hours last summer is simple enough (so that supporters of this ticket can, no doubt, understand it).

As Republican national chairman, Miller epitomized the grass roots political worker—the bell ringers and envelope lickers who are the base of any political organization. Having worked his way up through his party's ranks (apparently, hatchets seek their own level), Miller reached the highest plateau of the party faithful: the national chairmanship.

Thus, in rewarding the countless gress rooters and cogs who make up their machine, the G.O.P. saw fit to place this worldly (sic) man of affairs (sic, again) into the second slot on the national ticket.

Unfortunately for the G.O.P.'s extreme wing (and very fortunately for those of us who desire a sane administration in D.C. that might let us live in peace a while longer), Bill Miller has as much chance of carrying his home state of New York (or any state for that matter) as SU students do of seeing an efficient food service.

It would appear that a more moderate candidate like Kentucky's Morton or Cooper, or Illinois' Dirksen might have given the Arizona whiz a better running mate and, with it, a slightly better chance to avoid the landslide defeat that will be his this November.

Particularly the bull-toned Dirksen who might have swung some votes to the ticket (and possibly might have carried the Land of Lincoln) because of still unexplained—and surprising, but appreciated—efforts on behalf of the Civil Rights Bill of 1964.

But no—Barry Morris had to have another man whose views were as warped as his own. And he certainly outdid himself here; many a person we chatted with fears Wild Bill more than they do Peggy's husband. It's hard to blame them either; as foreboding a prospect it is of having Barry in the White House, we'd be the first to wish him health and longevity there should that nightmare result—anything to keep Ol' Bill forming policies; or having to think on his own.

We tend to like Lyndon Johnson and his notion of a "Great Society" and we're even more attached to his running mate from Minnesota. America has been fortunate in that during times of crisis (world, national or presidential sucession) a strong, able man has appeared to guide our destinies—and with them those of much of the world.

Lyndon Johnson fits this pattern as witnessed by his actions and achievements in one short year. A little of all of us died that November day in Dallas when a man of our generation—one whose appeal and symbolism was to a new America and a young, active populace—was killed by a sniper.

John Kennedy is gone, and it is with the new Johnson-Humphrey administration that our hopes must lie; hopes of social equality for everyone; undreamed of scientific and technological advances and a true peace in our era.

That the dynamic duo of Bill and Barry can even approach the White House is at once proof that anyone can campaign for the highest office in the land, but also is a warning—hopefully one on which we will look back upon in future years and reflect how dangerously close we came to electing a misguided idealist and an unsophisticated bully boy to offices of power and responsibility.

The sorry state of the G.O.P. candidates leads us to wonder whether or not different types of people might not be more desirable as presidential timber.

Personally, we'd go all out in our efforts to see some well-known and respected journalist, news commentator or even scholar-writer elected. A novel (no intended pun) idea it certainly would be, and one that would surely refresh those who are tired of the same candidates from the same political molds.

This probably will never come to pass in our lifetime, but then we never expected to see a Catholic in there either, we'd bet. A non-politico would certainly be different and, who knows, maybe even an improvement.

Conceivably, what we're suggesting could be the summation of some of our current political trends today—e.g., more liberal feelings on candidates and the entrance of more 'non-professional' politicians into D.C. and state governments.

Clearly, the summation of political trends which would be inaugurated by the reactionary right should it perpetrate itself upon us are quite less than apppealing. Take your pick from World War three, anti-intellectualism or 'America First' isolationism.

LETTERS

Ben

To the Editor:

I feel that it is time for someone to come to the aid of our coach, Ben Schwartzwalder. Tuesday, some poor soul, who declined to give his name, realy hauled our coach over the coals. He stated that Schwartzwalder "marred a magnificent football game." Isn't that ridiclous? I would like to know how long Mr. Noname has played ball. If my suspicions are correct, he has never gotten any closer than the stands.

I have played football for four years. I know what it means to win and what it means to lose. I also realize that all humans make mistakes. However, in the game of football, these mistakes should not go unnoticed, nor should the player be allowed to forget that he has committed a grave error. It is mistakes that lose football games. A good coach is often a harsh one. If he is feared, then and only then is he respected.

Ben Schwartzwalder is much like my high school coach. They both play this game to win. If it wasn't for the "frantic clutching of his hat, vigorous head movements, rapid pacing, and the works," Syracuse University wouldn't even know what it means to win a football game.

Paul Yesersky

Fair

To the Editor:

Mr. Cronauer's editorial—whether or not George Fair deserved the honor bestowed upon him—is unnecessarily vicious. The statistics might tend to indicate that there was a person more worthy of selection to the squad; however, this is no reason to cast doubt on the competence of the ECAC committee, and on the integrity of Syracuse University. After all, Mr. Cronauer, couldn't you forgive a human error, when, "as the saying goes," to err is human?

WEEKEND

REGENT THEATER — Ravi Shankar, Indian sitar player, will appear in a concert 8:30 p.m. today at the Regent Theatre. He will be accompanied by Alla Rakha on the double-drums and by Nodu Mullick on the Tamboura. Tickets for the concert are available at the Regent Theater box office.

BOAR'S HEAD THEATRE-An original musical revue, "Out on a Limb" written by Al Ross and Pat Lotito will be presented at 8:30 p.m. today and Saturday at the Boar's Head Theater. Featuring sketches on current mores, city politics, the mass media, and civil rights, the show also includes ballads and production numbers. Tickets for the show are available at the Boar's Head Theater box office.

FOLK GALLERY-Jaqueline and Bridie, British folk singers, will make their American night club debut at 8:30 p.m., 10:30 p.m. and 12 a.m. this weekend at the Folk Gallery. Tickets for the concert are available at the Folk Gallery box office.

CROUSE AUDITORIUM - Eugene Coghill, French hornist, assisted by Alice G. McNaught, pianist, will present a concert at 4 p.m. Sunday. Coghill and Miss McNaught will be joined by Leroy Strickland on the trumpet and John Ianotta, on the trombone in one work.

The concert will open with Purcell's "Andante" and Handel's "I See a Huntsman." These pieces will be followed by Mozart's "Adiago" and "Allergro" from the "Horn Quintet, K. 407." Strickland and Iannotta will assist Coghill in Francis Poulenc's "Sonata for Horn, Trumpet, and Trombone." Following intermission Coghill will perform Gliere's "Nocturne" and Reynold's "Partita," a contemporary work. All Crouse concerts offer free parking and admission.

ODYSSEY — WAER Hosts Jon Merdin, Jeff Zients and David Scott present the news. Interviews include talks with Raven Wild, burlesque queen, and The Animals, rock and roll group. The question of the week: "If you had the opportunity to spend an hour with any person living or dead, whom would you choose and why?" will be answered in taped interviews with residents of Day and Flint Halls. Show begins at 1:30 p.m. Saturday.

RIVIERA-The widely-acclaimed film, "One Potato, Two Potato" will be shown this weekend. Starring Barbara Barrie and Bernie Hamilton, the film presents sympathetically the troubles present in a mixed racial marriage. Co-featured is British comedy "Dentist in the Chair" with most of the cast from "Carry on Nurse" still prevalent. 'One' at 9:45 p.m., "Carry On and On and Oon" at 8:20 p.m.

KALLET-GENESEE-The sparkling double-bill presents "The Lively Set" with Pamela Tiffin and James Darren as the main feature. Using props left over from "Gidget" and unused numbers from "State Fair," the movie ends up as another surfboard promotional. The co-feature gives us a chance to see Tony Curtis and his bride, Christine Kaufman, in something called "Wild and Wonderful." It's not.

"Lively Set" at 9:35 p.m., "Wild" at 8:10 p.m.

Hoot, Grid Match, Dance to Highlight Pitt-Fall Weekend

BY MARLENE CIMONS

Witches and goblins will find the competition keen on Halloween when the sophomore class presents Pitt-Fall Weekend.

Heading the slate of activities for Oct. 30-Nov. 1 will be a Friday night concert featuring folk singers Ian and Sylvia, Judy Collins and the Irish Ramblers.

"Ian and Sylvia are of the new wave of young folk singers whose love for and reverential treatment of folk song have vitalized and given the music new direction," critic Pete Welding has said about the young Canadian duo. Their albums include: "Ian and Sylvia" and "Ian and Sylvia Four Strong Winds."

Miss Collins also is well known for her uniqueness of style. In her approach to her material as well as to her public, she has shunned old or new musical cliches and has not tried to project her own personality so much as to demonstrate a mature understanding of her songs and their creators.

Miss Collins' albums include: "A Maid of Constant Sorrow," "Golden Apples of the Sun" and "Judy Collins No. 3."

February 1963 saw the arrival of the Irish Ramblers, a trio of brothers, to the United States. Following their appearances in Irish clubs and dancehalls, they began to play the coffee house and nightclub circuit. Their record album is entitled "The Patriot Game."

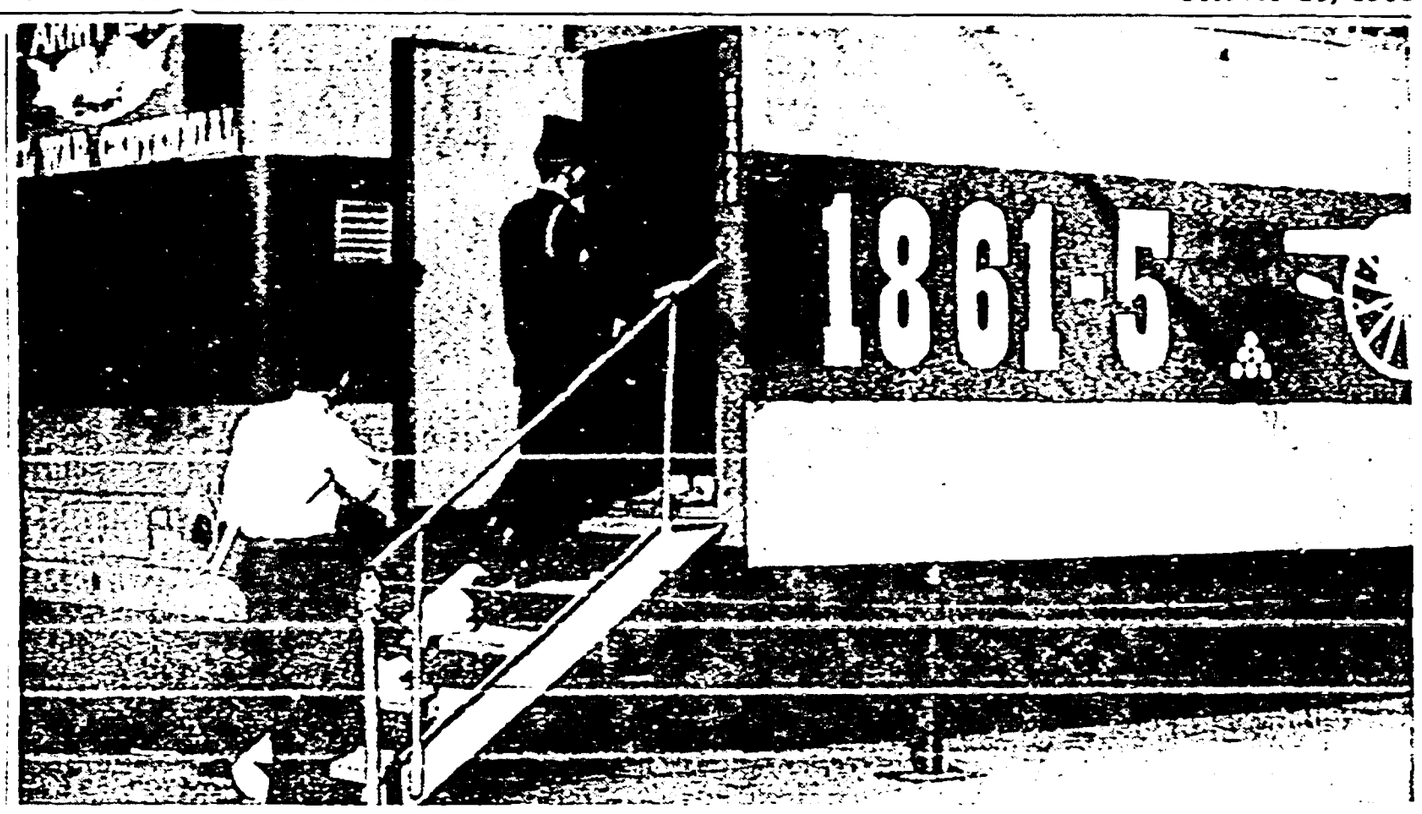
The concert will begin at 8:30 p.m. in Manley Field House.

Also highlighting the weekend festivities will be the Saturday afternoon gridiron match with the Pittsburgh Panthers and an evening semi-formal dance with music supplied by Dick Kowell and his orchestra.

The dance will be held from 9 p.m.-1 a.m. in Sims Hall.

Tickets will be sold from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday in Huntington B. Crouse Hall lobby. Concert tickets are $2 each, and dance tickets will sell for $2 per couple.

An automobile driven by Eddie Rickenbacker in a 1915 race was equiped with four wheel brakes.



Civil War Display

If you want to add some knowledge to your bureau of useless information, stop in at the mobile Civil War display located in front of the Men's Gym. Besides facts, there also are visual exhibits to see. The display, sponsored by the Army ROTC, will be here until Saturday.

ROTC Exhibit

Civil War Past Displayed

Syracuse students, professors and administrators passing in the vicinity of the Men's Gym should take a few minutes out to stop and look at the Army ROTC's Civil War display.

The van in which the exhibit is being displayed is being used as an adjunct to the portion of instruction on military history, particulary the Civil War era, according to Col. Raymond C. Wittmayer, professor of military science.

The exhibit is open to the public from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and will be here through Saturday.

Visitors are serenaded by Civil War songs as they stroll through the van and treated to formation, such as the fact that both the Union and the Confederate armies had but one woman officer each and that the Union Army's female officer won the U.S. Medal of Honor.

There are visual exhibits including scenes from the war which if viewed long enough mysteriously change.

There is also a map of the major battles of the war and if the viewer is brave enough to press a button, the battles light up in their chronological order.

Finally, there is a short commentary given by way of four earphones including colored pictures on the major battles of the war.

Students to Stage Mock Congress

Syracuse University students are invited to observe Onondaga County high school pupils participate in a student legislature from 9:30-4 p.m. today in the Onondaga War Memorial.

The high school students will participate actively in the legislature as imitators of New York State assemblymen and senators.

The first day of the legislature was Thursday.

The mock legislature is being sponsored by the Onondaga County incumbent legislators Sen. John Hughes, Sen. Lawrence Rulison, Assemblyman John Terry and Assemblyman Phillip Chase.

A joint session opened the legislature with former Lt. Gov. Frank Moore, now chairman of the board of the State University of New York, and State Senate majority leader Walter J. Mahoney addressing the group.

Assembly leaders will address today's noon luncheons in the main auditorium of the War Memorial. Spectator seats for SU students will be available at the luncheon.

The mock legislature will hold public hearings at 1:30 p.m. today. Professional lobbyists will testify as in regular state legislature hearings.

Hearing will be held on five bills including welfare residency, eliminating the death penalty, and off-track betting.

The parental responsibility bill which was passed by the legislature and vetoed by Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller will also have a hearing. The bill called for parents being liable for up to $250 damage to public property by their children.

Wolseley to Judge Awards

Professor Roland E. Wolseley, of the Syracuse school of journalism faculty, will serve as judge in the 11th annual 1964 Neal Editorial Achievement Awards sponsored by the Association Business Publications.

Among other judges are S. Neil Fujita, president of Ruder, Finn & McGraw-Hill, chemical publications and now a business publication consultant; and Dr. Jay R. Gould, director of Technical Writers' Institute, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute. Chairman of the judges is Prof. Floyd G. Arpan, journalism department, Indiana University.

Judging sessions will be in New York in early December. Awards to the winners in four categories will be made Jan. 28 at the ABP annual winter conference in New York.

HUMANITIES LECTURE

Boatwright Discusses Musician

By EDWIN KARLIN

"He was as American as a hot dog."

These were the words School of Music Dean Howard Boatwright used Thursday to describe American musical experimentalist, Charles Ives, during the first of the annual Humanities Lecture Series.

Boatwright said Ives was one of the few composers of the early 19th century to still have interest in the post World War II period. Accoring to Boatwright, his popularity is still growing.

In describing his works, Boatwright observed that Ives used practically all devices used by later 20th century composers. He stated Ives view that "substance is the more important part of art."

Boatwright said Ives' life was greatly influenced by his father. An example of his unusual upbringing was shown when young Ives was made to sing a song in one tone while playing in another. This was his father's way of training his ear.

The death of his father, according to Boatwright was both "an emotional and financial" shock to Ives. This was one of the reasons he went into the insurance business. Boatwright said Ives wanted to spare other families the grief of such an event.

His venture into the insurance business proved to be very successful, Boatwright noted. Ives and a partner formed the Mutual Life Insurance Co. of America which is operating today.

Most of Ives' works were done between 1898 and 1918. Boatwright explained this was because illness then struck.

Although he did not compose as much in his later years, Ives did write economic and political theories. Boatwright noted that he offered to Congress a "20th amendment" that would have called for national referendum.

Frosh Hurt in Auto Mishap

Freshman Frederick Rivenson, was hit by a car late Wednesday night near the intersection of Waverly and Comstock Avenues while returning from a "dingle-truck."

After purchasing a snack from the food truck, Rivenson reportedly came around the front end of the truck when he was struck by a car driven by Richard Talmodge, a 20-year old junior. The accident took place about 11:55 p.m.

According to witnesses Barry Esrig and Eliot Schaeffer, Talmodge's car was traveling at a "moderate" rate of speed. Rivenson did not look as he crossed the street, they said.

The freshman never lost consciousness. He was admitted to the Hospital of the Good Shepard.

SU Orangemen Invade Lions' Den

Flashback: 1963

By BOB KRENGEL

The Nittany Lions of Penn State will be out to avenge last year's 9-0 drubbing at the hands of Syracuse, when the two Eastern giants clash tomorrow at College Park, Pa.

Last season before a crowd of 39,687 in Archbold Stadium, these two teams bashed heads in a ferocious game of defensive blood and guts tackling. The Orangemen were penalized 102 yards and men from both squads were carried off the field.

Although the game was a defensive battle, it was broken wide open by a pair of SU breakaway runs. At the close of the second quarter, Billy Hunter sprang loose for a 53-yard touchdown dash.

In the second half Orange halfback Mike Koski found daylight and carried the pigskin to the Penn State 11 in a spectacular 45-yard chase. From there John Paglio kicked a field goal.

Coach Ben Schwartzwalder later explained the reasons for this maneuver: "The reason that we tried for a field goal is that Paglio always seems to kick to his left and we had the ball on the right side of the field."

In the raging fight between the opposing lines, two Piety men stood out. Ed Conte, at 5-10 and 185 pounds, made five unassisted tackles and was in on 13 others. End George Fair was voted the game's outstanding sophomore.

In statistics Syracuse emerged clearly superior to the Nittany Lions, who rushed for 141 yards, while quarterback Pete Liske completed all six of his team's passes.

In comparison, the Orange gained 287 yards, 233 on the ground and 54 in the air. Hunter led the attack with 81 yards in 11 carries.

By HOWIE SCHNEIDER

Ben Schwartzwalder and the seventh-ranked college team in the nation are on their way to Penn State. Before they return all concerned will have a better idea of just how good the 1964 Orangemen really are.

Exactly five years to the day since the two teams clashed in their 1959 thriller (SU-20, PS-18), the squads will battle before an expectant Homecoming crowd of 46,000. Game time is 1:30 p.m.

Schwartzwalder's squad will be seeking its fourth win in five attempts, and will be determined to hang on to their precarious first-place standing in the run for the Lambert Trophy.

Coach Rip Engle and his Nittany Lions, however, have other ideas. The squad emerged from virtually nowhere to become a strong Eastern challenger after upsetting Army last week, 6-2. A win tomorrow would put them close to the top of the heap.

Schwartzwalder called the Lions "physically, the toughest team we have met all year." He noted, "This is the Penn State team that got untracked against Army last weekend. Playing on their home field Engle will have his boys sky high for us. It will be a football game."

In order for the Orangemen to prove they belong in the top 10 for keeps, they will have to win on the road. In the past they have looked sloppy, if not downright poor away from home. Tomorrow's game will be their toughest road contest thus far.

Besides this "psychological stumbling block," the Orangemen will have to contend with the physical reality of State quarterback Gary Wydman.

After last week's game Army coach Paul Dietzel said, "I was impressed with Wydman. He gives State the greatest threat on the rollout than they've had since Richie Lucas."

Wydman has completed 32 of 63 passes (50.7) for 452 yards. The 190-pound senior runs an offensive attack that features a tight line and wing-T formation and fullback Ed Stuckrath. Last Saturday Stuckrath carried 13 times for 40 yards and took the team rushing lead with 189 yards and a 7.5 average.

Schwartzwalder will rely heavily on his one-two tandem of Jim Nance and Floyd Little to keep things rolling. Nance currently holds the no. 8 spot in the NCAA rushing race, while Little is 11th. In scoring the Orange offensive unit is fourth with a 31.3 points per game average.

Joining with Nance and Little in the offensive lineup will be ends Brad Clarke and Jim Cripps, tackles Harris Wienke and Gary Bugenhagen, guards Howie McCard and Tony Scibelli, center Pat Killorin, quarterback Walley Mahle and halfback Ron Oyer.

On the defensive side, the Spiders will try to keep their no. 1 defensive standing in the nation. Schwartzwalder will go with a forward wall of Dave Archer, John Krok, Paul Houle or Steve Chomyszak and ends George Fair and Herb Stecker.

In the linebacking department, the coach will start sophomores Jim Cheyunski and Murray Johnson, with halfbacks Charlie Brown and Ted Holman and safetyman Hal (Black Widow) Rooney in the secondary.

Tomorrow's game will be the 15th for Engle against Syracuse, and the record shows seven for the Lions and seven for the Orange.

Like Schwartzwalder, Engle will go with a two-platoon system. The offensive unit includes ends Bill Huber and Bill Bowes, tackles Joe Bellas and John Simko, guards Chuck Ehinger and Steve Schreckengaust, center Bob Andronici, quarterback Wydman, halfbacks Bob Riggle and Dirk Nye and fullback Stuckrath.

The Penn State-Syracuse series started in 1922 and stands 19-17-5 in favor of Penn State. Last year the Orangemen won, 9-0.

Penn State Halfback

Promising to test Syracuse's Spider defense tomorrow is Penn State halfback GARY KLINGENSMITH. The 5-11, 190-pound senior from Uniontown, Pa., ranked as the top Lion ball carrier in 1963 with 450 yards rushing and stood second in scoring. Off to a slow start this season, he has totaled 61 yards on 21 carries.

Piety Hosts Army In Cross Country

By NEIL KERR

A pair of undefeated cross country teams, Syracuse and Army, are expected to provide a close race tomorrow at Drumlins in the 20th renewal of their series. Syracuse leads in the rivalry 15-4.

Syracuse is 3-0 this season, having defeated Buffalo, Colgate and Cornell.

MIKE SPINO

Army, too, has raced to an impressive early season record. The Cadets are 4-0, including victories over Manhattan, St. John's, Colgate, LeMoyne, Providence and Fairleigh Dickinson, in their schedule of dual and triangular meets.

Coach Bob Grieve will be counting on Mike Spino, Marty Miller, John Crawford, Tom Giordano and Bill Ramsdell to repeat their good performance in last week's SU victory over Cornell. Spino has loped through the first three meets undefeated.

Orange chances tomorrow have been bolstered by the return of Bill Cihak, SU's outstanding runner last year. After missing the first two meets with a leg injury, Cihak placed fourth against Cornell last Saturday.

Grieve commented last week that "having Cihak out of action is like taking Nance and Little of the football team."

Syracuse's harrier squad also includes Mike Shuster, Dave Hanna and Dave Daubert.

The varsity match will get under way at 11 a.m. tomorrow. There will be no freshman meet.

Frosh Gridders Challenge Navy

By DAVE FLAUM

Making their second start of the season, the Orange frosh gridders invade Annapolis tomorrow to challenge the Navy Plebes. The game is at Navy Marine Stadium at 1:30 p.m.

The Plebes, boasting a 33-0 victory over the Bainbridge Nats in their opener, display a 28-2-1 record over the past four years under coach Dick Duden (lifetime 41-8-1 mark).

Meanwhile, coach Jim Shreve's charges ecked out a 1-6 win over Manlius in their only start of 1964. Shreve-commanded squads have amassed a 20-2-1 slate in four years.

Of the two Middie losses in the last four seasons, the Orange yearlings inflicted a 27-14 defeat on the Cadets.

The following campaign Navy's frosh, under Heisman Trophy winner Roger Staubach, edged the Tangerines, led by Wally Mahle and Rich King, 8-0. The Cadets and Orange deadlocked at 6-6 in 1962.

With two weeks of scrimmage against the varsity, the Little Orange shows several lineup changes. According to Shreve, there will be no platooning, but several players will be used in specialty roles.

Key man in mentor Shreve's personel changes is 6-3, 215 pounder, Larry Csonka. The Stow, Ohio, fullback will move to the tackle slot on defense.

Defensive ace Charlie Stecker, brother of varsity defensive end Herb Stecker, steps in for fullback Tom Coughlin as a linebacker. In addition, Greg Connors replaces Jim LeMessurier at offensive tackle.

In other offensive changes, according to Shreve, Rick Cassata takes the helm at quarterback, while Bill Zanieski shifts from fullback to blocking back and Ed Mantie along with Coughlin switch to the halfback slots.

Rounding out the starting lineup are offensive ends Gary Fredericks and Ed Schreck, tackles LeMessurier and Bruett, guards Dave Casmay and Dennis Fitzgibbons, and center Jim Murphy. The Tangerine offensive wall averages 6-2, 216 pounds, Casmay being the smallest at 5-11, 190 pounds.

Next Friday, the Hill frosh travel to West Point to collide with the Army Plebes. In their lone home game, the yearlings host the Colgate frosh on Oct. 30, and they close at Buffalo on Nov. 13.

Piety Wrestlers Rely on Depth

By JOHN WESCHE

Depth promises to be the biggest asset of the 1964-65 Syracuse University wrestling team.

There are 18 boys on the squad which recently greeted coach Ed Carlin for the start of practice sessions.

This year's club will be lead by captain Jim Murrin in the 137-pound class.

Sophomores will occupy the 123 and 130-pound categories. There is a scramble in the 123 between Kerin Raferty, Lou Manns and Alan Strell. At 130, Terry Haise looms as the top dog.

Returnee Joan Dussling will handle the 147-pound division, backed by another soph, Chuck Masterpaul.

Kurt Kuppinger wrestles in the 157 and is rated the top rookie prospect. He was undefeated as a freshman. George Rogers provides veteran support.

Dropping down a class from last season is Lew Roberts, who will assist Orley in the 167 weight field.

At 177 Tom Schlendoff, who was also undefeated in 1963-64 for the frosh grapplers.

Football players fill the upper weight divisions. Gerry Everling, a grid guard, returns in the 191 class after a year's absence. Everling was undefeated as a sophomore during the regular season. Stichert willl battle for the 191-pound spot also.

Footballers Jim Nance, Joe Radivoy and Denny Meggyesy should capably handle the heavyweight action, with Big Bo bearing the brunt of the attack. He is the defending Eastern Intercollegiate champ and was NCAA heavyweight titlist in 1962-63.

Tapping off the schedule is a match with always-tough Lehigh, defending Eastern champions. Lehigh lost only one starter from that outfit.

Last season Syracuse boasted a 5-3-1 record. Gone from that squad are Ron Pritts, George Reidner and Dick Slutzky, runner-up in the NCAAs.

Soccer Info

To the Editor:

In this letter I am supplying some additional information in regard to my previous letter on soccer which appeared Oct. 8.

Soccer at SU isn't affiliated with the athletic department. However, they are most helpful in every way they can be. The department doesn't have to loan anything to the club—not uniforms, or transportation or even a field. But they are very willing to give what they have.

The shoes were recently renovated making them look practically new. The uniforms were repaired and also appear quite new. If it wasn't for this aid, the club would have to furnish all of its own equipment, which, to say the least, would be very expensive.

The field, used by the Peace Corps, is also loaned. Otherwise, the club might have to travel a great distance just to practice.

The club's subsistence is partly due to the efforts of the Athletic department. For the past two playing seasons, the soccer club has maintained a 5-1-1 record. Just this last fall, there were 32 freshmen alone who turned out for the team.

At each game, there have been enough players for two teams. The athletic department is waiting for us to prove ourselves before becoming a varsity sport at SU once again. I thing we have.

If you do too, now about coming to some of our club games this year and hopefully our varsity games thereafter. We have the team support, so let's have the student support.

ARMY TICKETS

Tickets for the Syracuse-Army game Nov. 7 in New York's Yankee Stadium are selling briskly, David Winter, assistant ticket manager, reported yesterday.

Regular tickets are priced at $5, with box seats selling for $7. Tix are available in the upper, lower and mezzanine sections.

There will be no student discounts for this game. Last season's SU-Army contest was officially a Syracuse home game, which resulted in $1 student tickets. The encounter this year is an Army home game.

Intra Group Elect Reps For Season

The members of the intramural council have been elected for the 1964-65 season. These members represent all fraternities, living centers and independents.

The members representing fraternities are: Phil Cook (Phi Kappa Psi); Tony Lena (Sigma Nu); Roy Lerman (Tau Epsilon Phi); Roger Blankstein (Zeta Beta Tau).

The representatives from the living centers are: Chris Viviano (Sadler 4); Pete Whitlock (Marion 2); Ed Lutz (Sims 3); Pete Stoughton (Sibley); Don Britz (Watson W 4); Herb Korthoff (DellPlain 4); Chuck Steubert (Horace White); Bob Wheeler (Marshall Apts.).

Suggestions regarding this year's intramural program will be welcomed by the council. Regular council meetings will be held the first Tuesday of each month.

Sports Publicity Top Pollster

The magic crystal ball of Sports Publicity and the magnificient guessing hat of the Daily Orange led the fearless four pigskin prognosticators last week. Both Publicity and the DO hit eight of 10 winners.

Trailing the pace setters were the Orange Scout at 7-3 and hapless WAER with a putrid 5-5 count. In addition to leading the pack for the third week in a row, Sports Publicity was the only contestant to predict Oregon State's upset of Washington.

The DO's upset pick of Penn State over Army helped earn them a share of "Head Swami" honors.

In the previous week's action, Sports Publicity forsaw nine of 10 winners, while the DO, WAER, and the Orange Scout tabbed eight winners apiece.

For the season, Sports Publicity is the leading mastermind with 24 correct predictions in 36 tries. The hard-charging Daily Orange is knotted for the runnerup spot with the Orange Scout both with 21-9 seasonal marks for a 70 per cent count. The bad-guessing WAER staff shows a dismal 19-11, 63.3 per cent season's record.

Sports Publicity's crystal ball attempts to preserve its grid forcasting mastery with its predictions above. The DO, using its "magic hat method," along with the mysterious Orange Scout and faltering WAER, also try again.

Happiness sneaks in through the door you didn't know you left open—John Barrymore.

Meet Roy Danforth· Frosh Hoop Coach

By KEN RUDNICK

Roy Danforth, a protege of Syracuse University basketball coach Fred Lewis, rejoins Lewis this season when he takes over as freshman basketball coach.

Danforth assumes the position as the result of the resignation of Morris Osborne. Osborne, who guided the Orange frosh for two years, left SU to teach at the New Orleans branch of Louisiana State University.

Danforth, 28, was born in Anderson, Ind. He played college basketball at Southern Mississippi under Lewis in the days when the school had not yet attained its present major-college status.

Under rules existing at that time, Danforth played four years of varsity ball at guard.

In his sophomore year, Southern Mississippi was the No. 1 small-college team in the nation. The next year SM finished second nationally and its record for the two seasons was 45-5.

After graduation, Danforth served as Lewis's assistant at SM for several years. He then accepted the head coaching job at Pearl River (Miss.) Junior College.

The new coach's ability to bring top-flight basketball material to Syracuse will be reinforced by SU's steadily increasing stature in big-time college basketball.

Allowed 16 Points

SU's 1915 Grid Squad Impressive

By NEIL KERR

It is generally conceded that the greatest of all Syracuse's football teams was the 1959 national championship squad.

Other great teams in Bill Orange's illustrious history have been the high scoring 1904 squad the powerful 1923 eleven and the 1956 team, led by the incomparable Jimmy Brown.

But aside from the 1959 outfit, perhaps the best of the rest was coach Frank "Buck" O'Neill's 1915 team.

Consider these statistics: The '15 team posted a 9-1-2 record for the season. It scored 331 points while allowing only 16. And perhaps the most impressive fact of all—in the course of a 12-game schedule, the Orangemen gave up only 16 first downs.

The season, beginning Sept. 25 and ending the second week of December, was a long one, but during that campaign only three teams managed to cross Syracuse's goal line.

In its opening game, the Orange whipped East Syracuse, 43-0. A post-game account observed that the East Syracusans were unable to muster one first down and that Syracuse displayed unusual early season form.

The following Saturday the team gave a disappointing performance in the eyes of the fans and the Daily Orange as they beat Bucknell 6-0.

Bucknell had a very stubborn defense in the pinches and kept the varsity from scoring until within three minutes before the close of the game. This contest was played in a sea of mud in Archbold.

On Oct. 9 Syracuse played Princeton in New Jersey. The game turned out to be a defensive contest under clear blue skies. A third quarter field goal by Princeton from the Orange 16 yard line was the only score of the contest.

Syracuse, in the third quarter, had the ball on the Princeton 18 yard line but chose to go for a touchdown. A pass interception killed the only Orange scoring threat of the game.

The next weekend, SU's varsity was determined to make amends for the Princeton loss and it did so with a vengeance. Tiny Rochester was the victim.

Playing in Archbold, Syracuse scored in the first minute of play and went on to wrack up 35 points in the first quarter. After that Coach O'Neill went to his bench—using 31 different men during the game—but the score continued to rise. The final count was 82-0.

On Oct. 23 Syracuse defeated Brown 6-0 at Providence. That season Brown was chosen to play in the first Rose Bowl game on New Year's Day.

A week later Syracuse traveled to Ann Arbor to play Michigan. The Orange won 14-7. SU's two scores came in the second period on a pair of runs by Captain Walt Rose and "Chick" Meehan. Michigan scored a fluke touchdown in the final two minutes.

Syracuse tried a double lateral pass play and the ball was dropped. A Michigan man promptly scooped up the ball and ran 42 yards for a score.

Mt. Union of Ohio became the Orange's next victim, 73-0. Meehan scored five touchdowns before SU's second and third units replaced the first team.

Next came the big game of the season. Syracuse versus Colgate before 25,000 screaming fans in Archbold. Colgate possessed a 5-0 record and had scored 223 points to none for the opposiiton. However, this winning streak was decisively broken as Syracuse won 38-0 and rolled up 487 yards in the process.

Both the umpire and referee of the game agreed afterwards that "no team in the United States could defeat Syracuse, playing as they did today."

After the game Syracuse students, in an ecstacy of enthusiasm, ripped up the board walks leading to the women's gym, the steps to the mount and all detachable woodwork within 400 yards of the stadium.

Then they made a 20 foot pile, doused it with kerosene and put a match to it. Then, like mad indians, the joy-crazed students sang, yelled and snake danced around the fire.

On Sunday Chancellor Day announced at Chapel services that there would be two extra days of Thanksgiving vacation. Classes were to be suspended on Friday and Saturday following Thanksgiving.

On Nov. 20 Syracuse journeyed to Hanover, N.H., to play Dartmouth. With water in puddles all over the field four to five inches deep and a frozen crust on the surface, both teams had trouble moving the ball. Post game statistics showed that SU fumbled four times, Dartmouth 10.

During the game Syracuse had the ball six times inside Dartmouth's 10 yard line — twice within the one—but was unable to push it over. The Green was also unable to score in the miserable wather conditions as the game ended in a tie.

A long western trip closed out the 1915 campaign. SU played Montana in Missoula on Nov. 27 in a blizzard. The game ended in a 6-6 tie. The team then moved westward, defeating Oregon, 28-0, in Portland and Occidental, 33-0, on a boiling hot day in Los Angeles.

Outstanding players in 1915 were Captain Walter Rose and Chris Schlacter, who was named to Walter Camp's All-American team. SU also had Bill Rafter who, at 152 pounds, was the smallest fullback in the country that season.

Harold White, Chick Meehan, Red Wilkinson and Al Cobb received All-American honorable mention in 1915.

Orange Cagers, Dave Bing Cited For Hoop Honors

The football season isn't half over and already basketball honors are starting to pile up on Piety Hill.

Basketball Yearbook, the first hoop magazine to hit the news stands, last week named sensational Dave Bing to its first team All-America squad and views the Orange of Fred Lewis number six in the country.

In addition, the Hill cagers are picked first in the East and sophomore Val Reid ranks among the top 50 newcomers in collegiate circles.

And Lewis has put together this powerhouse in just two years.

Bing, a 6-3 junior, pumped in 22.2 points per game as a rookie last year, tying him with three others for the 46th spot in the country.

However, the scoring stats don't show Bing's value as a playmaker, ball handler and rebounder. "He's the finest player I've ever coached," is an oft-repeated statement by Lewis.

Joining Bing on the magazine's first club are Bill Bradley of Princeton, Cazzie Russell of Michigan, Wichita's Dave Stallworth and Fred Hetzel of Davidson.

As a team, SU is rated behind Michigan, defending national champ UCLA, Davidson, wichita and Vanderbilt. Eastern foes expected to give the Orange a rough time include Villanova and St. John's.

DAVE BING

Reid, a 6-9 youngster from New York's LaSalle Academy, promises to add rebounding and defensive prowess to the Hill attack.

Figuring to vie for starting spots with Bing are returnees Chuck Richards, Norm Goldsmith, Frank Nicoletti and Dick Duffy and sophs Reid and Rick Dean.

The magazine comments, "The Orange may have built a powerhouse so strong they'll make football the off season." Only time will tell.

Hill Golfers To Compete InECCA Meet

Five Syracuse University golfers will compete in the annual Eastern Collegiate Conference Association fall links tourney Saturday at Bethpage, L.I.

Bill Seaman, Harry Kowadla, Jim Olp and Bill Chisholm will play for the team title, while Seaman and Kowadla also vie for individual honors.

Seaman finished second in the qualifiers last weekend at Utica, with Kowadla tying for third.

Orange Bowl Views Hillmen

Syracuse stood as the lone Eastern team named by the Orange Bowl Committee in its first release of possible competitors.

Only two other non-Southern schools, Notre Dame and Nebraska, were listed as possibilities for the Jan. 1, clash in Miami.

Others named were Florida, Florida State, Louisiana State, Texas, Duke, Georgia Tech, Alabama and Auburn.

New Official Appointed At SU Overseas Center

Robert F. Stephens, formerly of the United States Department of State, has been named assistant chairman for East African projects in the Syracuse University Overseas Center, Chancellor William P. Tolley has announced.

In his new post Stephens will help administer the first formal African studies program in the United States under the direction of Fred G. Burke.

Stephens, 39, was with the state department's Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs, most recently as chief of eastern and southern African programs.

As such, he supervised all of the department's educational and cultural exchange programs from Kenya south to Cape of Good Hope. Before that he served as an African specialist in other sections of the department.

For two years until the end of 1959 he was cultural affairs officer of the U.S. Information Service for all of East Africa. Based in Nairobi, Kenya, he handled all educational exchange matters between Kenya, Uganda, Tanganyika and Zanzibar and the United States.

Stephens, who has traveled widely in Europe as well as Africa, said he had to come to Syracuse because he was challenged by the university's East African study program and by the fact that it is being asked to take part in pioneering projects in Africa.

Established by the Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs in 1962, the East Africa program is a center for graduate studies, research and publications concerned with East Africa.

The program serves as a base for special overseas developmental projects and cooperative scholarly enterprises between American and East Africa educational and governmental institutions.

One such project is the Kenya Institute of Administration where Dr. Burke's personnel train Kenya civil servants in public administration, office management, local government and related fields.

AWS Proposal

Living Units to Vote On Hours Changes

By LOIS WINEBAUM

Women students will be voting in their living centers Sunday night on curfew changes proposed by the Association of Women Students.

If adopted, freshmen curfews will be extended to 10:15 p.m. both semesters, sophomore and junior curfews will remain at would be advanced to midnight both semesters. Weekend curfews will remain unchanged because of the Friday night change which was adopted last year.

All coeds on university probation will keep the normal curfew for their class, in order to use the time for study purposes at university study centers such as libraries. However, these coeds will have their special 12 and 2 o'clock permissions cut in half since permissions are used primarily for social purposes. This ruling would not apply to women on college probation.

Each proposal will be voted on separately. If passed in the assembly Oct. 28, the changes will go into effect Nov. 1.

Also discussed at Wednesday's AWS meeting was a proposal to change the policy of giving campuses for an accumulation of late minutes. The new policy would give cuts instead. This method was used successfuly last year in Shaw Dormitory.

Under this method 10 late minutes equal a one hour curfew cut. Offenders will be assigned the day which they must take the cut on the following weekend. The student must report dressed to the main desk at the time of her assigned curfew, whether or not she has left the dorm that evening.

Continual offenders will be given more severe penalties, such as earlier curfews.

The proposal will be discussed again at the next assembly meeting.

SU Library

New Call Cards

By S. Sreenivas Rao

Syracuse University's Main Library and its branch libraries have replaced the old call cards with IBM cards this fall.

The new cards are designed to: improve the present circulation service; plan for the mechanization of the circulation system, and collect information about borrower patterns for the planning of the new library.

By relieving the circulation department staff of the drudgery of sorting and counting thousands of cards a day, Betsy Knapp, circulation librarian, said, the library will be able to give more time to patron service.

"The tabular card system has been designed to minimize patron discomfort and at the same time provide sufficient information to get fairly powerful analysis," noted Edward B. Montgomery, university research consultant in information systems. "This has been done," he added, "changing as little as possible the way patrons borrow books."

The principal new feature of the card is that the borrower is asked to include his Social Security number in addition to his name and address. Montgomery explained that the Social Security number enables the librarian to sort the cards on the machine quickly.

For each figure in the number the cards have to be sorted once. As there are only nine figures in the Social Security number, the cards have to be sorted nine times. But if the cards are sorted by name, they have to be sorted twice for each letter.

In a name of 12 letters, for instance, the cards have to be sorted 24 times. Besides, there is no uniformity in the length of the names as in Social Security numbers.

Another advantage in using the Social Security number is that a borrower can be identified more accurately, Montgomery said. Going through last year's student directory, he pointed out that there were 20 Adamses and 75 Smiths on the campus.

Now with a separate number on each card, he said, John Smith will not get overdue notices and accumulate fines when Jane Smith borrowed the book and did not return it.

As part of the new program, Miss Knapp said, two key punch machines, one sorting machine, and one printer will be rented. The sorter and the key punch machine, she said, were installed at the end of September.

The operational cost of the the new experiment, Montgomery said, will be approximately the same as that of the old system.

"In fact Syracuse University is paving the way for research in the dynamics of its library on an extremely low cost and disruption basis," he said. "In this way Syracuse University will be able to achieve new levels of service in a relatively short time, bypassing much of the normal interim work associated with a change of this magnitude."

Regarding employment a spokesman said the new system will not affect the number of persons hired. "As the library is growing bigger and bigger and we want to improve the service," he said, "we'll need more help. The machines rented now only help us to increase the productivity of each individual member of the staff."

By starting this experiment, the SU library becomes the first library in Syracuse to launch a research project leading to automation. Although some libraries are mechanized in the country, Montgomery said, there are very few libraries having the goals in mechanization that the Hill library has.

KHRUSHCHEV OUSTED

Faculty, Russian-born Students Speculate on Nikita's Removal

Speculation on the motives behind Khrushchev's removal and the possible policy changes which will result, differed sharply between professors and two USSR-born students on the Hill Thursday.

"If past performance and closeness to Khrushchev are any indication of Kosygin and Breshnev's policies, there should be no radical changes," said Warren W. Eason, chairman of the Board of Russian Studies on the Hill.

Eason, who spent the 1961-62 academic year in the USSR added that there will be changes to some degree in Soviet policies.

"Khrushchev had called a world meeting of all communist parties for December," Eason said. "It seems odd that he would step down because of age or health in view of the importance of this December meeting."

Communist Party organizations had not responded to this meeting in the way Khrushchev wanted, Eason said

"Some communists think Khrushchev has gone too far in favor of co-existence," Eason said. "This leads to crises among all the communist parties of the world."

Irving Swerdlow, associate dean of the Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs said:

"Khrushchev's announced retirement may be a severe defeat or just a stepping back move to eliminate minor administrative chores in view of his declining health.

"Whatever the motives, it still shows that our foreign policy over the past few years has been having good results. Obviously they (Soviet Russia) have been having troubles."

According to Swerdlow, who has spent some time in Russia, "It is possible that some of the changes he (Khrushchev) has made are unacceptable to the powers that be.

"At this point, it's hard to say just exactly what happened. We'll know more later," he said.

"I hadn't until now heard that the statements had been confirmed. At this point I do not think it is possible without knowing all the facts to determine the reasons behind Khrushchev's resignation," said Dr. Donald Bishop, chairman of the Maxwell School's international relations department.

"One might also guess that some sort of physical ailment forced him to resign.

"Of the greatest significance, however, is the fact that there has long been a split in the top of party leadership and Khrushchev may have been voted out of power. This is the first time there has been such a change in the Soviet government.

"In a way, this could be compared to the United States government where a person can be voted out of power—the direct opposite of the principles of a totalitavian dictatorship. This might very well bring changes to their government and our relations with them," he pointed out.

"President Johnson has made known his plans, if elected, to meet with Khrushchev. Today's news alters this completely," Bishop said. "The Soviet government will probably put off such a meeting in order that their new leader adjust to his job, as Johnson did after President Kennedy's assassination.

Soviet policy is not apt to change because of any switch in internal politics, according to Russian students and faculty on the Hill.

Two Russian journalism students, hearing unconfirmed reports on television Thursday afternoon associated Khrushchev's age as the most likely reason for the surprise switch.

Valadimir N. Yulin said that it would probably be a "good thing for our nation, country and people.

Alexander G. Piroshin said, (Alexi) Kosygin is a good communist and leader. He has worked with Khrushchev." Kosygin, now acting premier, was the first deputy under Khrushchev.

Because Piroshin is not a member of the communist party, he said that it is difficult for him to comment on the situation.

"Things won't change but will carry on as before," Piroshin predicted. "The main line of the party is clean," he added.

Brezhnev Named Party Secretary

munist and native of the Ukraine, has taken over the party post from which both Joseph Stalin and Khrushchev dominated Soviet affairs. The premier's position was secondary for many years, and both Stalin and Khrushchev took over the post after first working as party secretary.

Earlier this year, Brezhnev was transferred from the ceremonial post of president to a job with more responsibility with the Communist Party framework.

Khrushchev said last year at one point, "I am already 69 and I have the right to say so. Everyone understands I cannot hold for all the time the position I now have in the party and state."

The Soviet leader had apparently lost much of his support in his struggle with the Chinese Communists. Several European Communist parties indicated recently they intended to act independently rather than follow Khrushchev's lead.

In Washington, D.C., Cleveland said: "Two days ago Khrushchev was hale and hearty. I doubt that health was the reason for his removal."

Both Cleveland and Stevenson's press secretary refused to speculate on the cause of Khrushchev's retirement.

But Cleveland pointed out that the timing of the stepdown is close to the date of American elections and the Nov. 10 U.N. General Assembly meeting where the Soviets will have to pay their back dues or be ousted from the group.

Campus Chest Considers Applications for Funds

The Syracuse University campus Chest is considering applications for funds from the proceeds of its annual carnival.

The carnival scheduled for Saturday, Oct. 24, is working towards a goal of $3,000, according to William Newman, chairman.

Campus chest donates money only to non-profit, student-oriented and educational organizations, Newman said.

Those organizations which have already applied for funds from the carnival are Onondaga Community Chest, National Scholarship Fund for Negro Students, Syracuse University Student Union Building Fund and Syracuse-in-Asia.

Also to be considered are CORE Mississippi project (COFO) and World University Services, Newman said

Newman said that the comtotalitarian dictatorship. This mittee would consider giving funds to the SU Ernie Davis Scholarship Fund, although they have not yet applied.

It is not the policy of Campus Chest to give funds to health organizations such as the Cancer Drive, Newman said.

He asked that all other organizations wishing to apply for funds from the carnival send their requests to him at 423 Euclid Ave.

Parking Problem Plagues Campus

The university parking committee is scheduled to meet this week to continue its investigation into the parking problem at Syracuse University.

The Daily Orange today begins a series of articles analyzing the parking problem and its ramifications. The research and the writing have been done by Pat Tracey, a Daily Orange junior editor.

Today Miss Tracey discusses the history of the parking situation and tells of the problems involved in on-campus parking.

By PAT TRACEY
Junior Editor

Henry Ford and many others worked hard to give a cheap, operative means of transportation to the general public.

In doing so, they created a problem that has cost every city, town and burg a fortune in time, money and headaches.

Syracuse University knows well the difficulty of finding a place to put cars, coping with a heavy flow of traffic and meeting the expenses of operating lots and policing the area.

The problem has faced SU for at least the last 20 years when the freqency of cars increased and college students found both a need and the funds to support a car.

The original few buildings that composed the campus had a great deal of surrounding grounds — empty space — that could be used for parking accommoations.

As the university expanded, with buildings hugging each other for breathing room, so did the need for parking space.

Space decreased and staff, faculty and students, all with cars, increased. Vehicles were forced to move farther away from the main grounds. Slowly the parking area on campus and surrounding streets filled up daily with university cars.

These same city streets also were used as a main artery to the Drumlins area and saw a heavy flow of traffic from city residents. Cars parked on the streets added to general disruption and congestion.

The new ouslaught of cars and traffic from the university created an extra problem and annoyance for the city department of traffic and police who had to patrol the area. Cost of sending added policemen and installing traffic signs rose.

ALAN K. CAMPBELL

K Ouster, China Blast Bring Varied Views

MICHAEL O. SAWYER

By CAROL RUBRIGHT
Junior Editor

Will the American political campaign be affected by Friday's nuclear blast in Communist China, coupled with Thursday's ousting of Nikita S. Khrushchev as premier of the USSR?

Three Hill professors differed in their opinions Friday as to the degree and direction of change the presidential campaign will take as a result of these international shake-ups.

Alan K. Campbell, political science professor, told the Daily Orange that he thought these crises would help President Lyndon B. Johnson's campaign; Director of International Legal Studies Richard B. Lillich said the effects would not be 'significant,' while Michael O. Sawyer, associate professor of political science, said there would be no political effects because the problem is not a political one.

"The testing of a nuclear device by the Red Chinese makes it all the more imperative," Campbell said, "that we have an experienced hand in the White House."

"This action, combined with the hierarchical changes in the Soviet Union makes it clear that the world is in for a period of new uncertainty," he added.

Campbell, who is co-chairman of the New York State Democratic platform and resolutions committee, praised Johnson's "ability to respond to critical situations with firmness and restraint."

He expressed certainty that the Russian and Chinese episcies would make the American voter favor Johnson and "respond even more favorably than polls have already indicated."

It is reported that Johnson has tried to use the replacement of Khrushchev as a reason for the voters to return him to the White House.

Lillich explained that the affects of the Red Chinese nuclear blast would "cut (into party politics) both ways."

Goldwater may say "I told you so" and reassert his original treatise that the limited nuclear test ban treaty (which he voted against) was useless since it didn't hold for nonsigners, Lillich said.

On the other hand Red China's entrance into the ranks of world atomic powers may work against the senator, Lillich continued, since Goldwater "has a reputation for being trigger-happy" and the voters are now reminded of the danger of nuclear fallout.

"But I doubt if Goldwater will come out against the test ban treaty," Lillich said. "He won't

RFK to Speak At Fieldhouse

Robert F. Kennedy, in a political jaunt of upstate New York, will find SU students ready and waiting for his presence on campus.

The former attorney general will address the general student body and public at 7:30 p. m. today at Manley Field House.

Kennedy has been asked by the citizenship department of the Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs, which is sponsoring his visit, to speak on the theme of "The Campaign As I See It."

The 38-year-old senatorial aspirant was graduated from Harvard University in 1948, where he received his bachelor of arts degree.

In 1951, he earned his bachelor of law degree and was admitted to the Massachusetts Bar. From 1951 to 1952, Kennedy was an attorney for the criminal division of the Department of Justice.

He became chief counsel for a U. S. Senate permanent subcommittee on labor and management affairs in 1957 and held that position until 1960 when he became campaign manager for

(See Kennedy, page 5)

Robert Kennedy may be a much-photographed man, but there isn't one glossy print to be had in Syracuse. The county branch of Citizens for Kennedy, the university office of Information Services and the Maxwell School office all found themselves without RFK pictures Friday.

Freedomites Wants Aides For the South

The Freedom Democratic Party of Mississippi is calling for volunteers to come to Mississippi today - Nov. 3. Plans call for work toward "giving the Negroes an opportunity to express their preference in the coming presidential election, according to a spokesman.

The party will hold an election paralleling the regular state election — called a Freedom Vote — during the dates mentioned. This is intended to give Negroes in Mississippi the opportunity to decide between Goldwater and Johnson for President, in a state where

Election Day Nears

Parties Active on Campus

By DONALD LAWLESS

As election day draws nearer, Syracuse University students are being bombarded by student political organizations asking for support of their candidates.

This two-part series is an effort to explain to students the purposes, goals and future plans of these groups.

Republicans and Independents for Johnson is a national organization which recntly organized a Syracuse Chapter.

Richard B. Lillich, associate professor in the College of Law and director of international legal studies at Syracuse University is now the upstate coordinator of the group.

With the slogan "Split your ticket, not your country," Lillich's group advocates election of President Lyndon B. Johnson and the defeat of Sen. Barry M. Goldwater.

Republicans and Independents for Johnson operate in 36 states under the principles that "Goldwaterism does not represent Republicanism," that the Republican National convention "did not represent the will of the majority of Republicans," and that Goldwater is temperamentally unfit for the awesome duties of the president of the United States," according to the group.

In Syracuse the organization has about 50 working members. They are presently engaged in a telephone canvass of every independent voter in the city, seeking his vote for Johnson in November. A downtown office is maintained at 132 W. Jefferson St. where persons interested in the organization may get information.

Hello, Bobby

Robert F. Kennedy arrives on campus today in a political swing through upstate New York. He will speak at the Manley Field House tonight, for all persons who want to hear his views personally.

While we admire the youthful zeal and spirit of the former attorney general, we must hestitate in endorsing his candidacy for two reasons. First, and foremost, he has yet to convince us of his sincerity and capability to represent the people of New York.

Secondly, he is running against Sen. Kenneth B. Keating, an 18-year Congressional veteran, who compensates for what may appear to be a lack of zest with a sincere feeling for his fellow New Yorkers.

Sen. Keating is a man who should not be turned aside lightly, even though his opponent is the brother of the late President. He has served the people well and deserves a lengthening of his stay in Washington.

We will be there to hear Kennedy tonight, for his views must be heard if the voters of the state are to vote responsibly. We hope that his talk will be a presentation of issues, rather than a political circus.

Albee and SU

Perhaps Sen. Kenneth B. Keating's staff was correct in having the senator's speech Tuseday night presented in the chapel rather than the field house.

For this will give some of us who have heard the senator and will not be permitted to see him present his speech because of space limitations in the chapel an excellent opportunity to go to the Regent Theatre to see Edward Albee's "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?," in a special student showing.

A national touring company will be presenting the show, and it promises to be the theater highlight of the year for the campus, if not the city.

The fact that one of the two showings is especially for students serves to emphasize the deermination of the university and the Regent Theatre staff to bring the best in the world of the arts to the city and the campus.

Hopefully their efforts will not go for naught.

Bull by the Horns

Nada, Nada, Nada

By Rich Turner

"Gatsby believed in the green light, the orgiastic future that year by year recedes before us." -- "THE GREAT GATSBY" by F. Scott Fitzgerald.

Jay Gatsby was a dreamer, and he believed in and trusted something that wasn't worth it. But at least Jay Gatsby believed in something, felt there was something which merited his respect. In our generation a Jay Gatsby seems strangely out of place —he's been replaced by (at the best) Holden Caulfield and the legions of individuals unable to take a stand or feel anything.

Because things disappoint us, because the pot of gold is filled with empty bottles of Black Label, we turn our backs and walk away. We wander through college and through life as faceless, emotionless automatons.

When was the last time someone made a completely sacreligious, iconoclastic comment and someone took offense? It's not the point of taking a joke — important as that is — it's the point that someone — anyone — should say, "I don't know, I kind of believe that."

Barry Goldwater — that foolish, but character-filled man, stands for our parents' generation. He stands for something; he becomes morally indignant and he's out of place. No one really wants to grab a gun and follow him into the woods to fight commies, but a lot of us wish we were naive enough and cared enough to.

For good or bad our generation is caught up in the tide of anonymity which washes onto the barren sand where Dale Carnegie stands instead of John Wayne.

We are like the old man in Hemingway's short story "A Clean Well Lighted Place." A few of us may get on the bus to Alabama or grow a beard in a vain attempt to be different but the rest of us, realizing that won't work, simply exist. In the short story the man repeats the prayer of our generation using "nada" the spanish word for nothing. "Our nada who art in nada, nada be thy name, thy kingdom nada thy will be nada." Nada, nada, nada.

Defense

To the Editor:

In regards to the recent series of articles by such well-knowns, as J. Litwin and R. Turner, we would like to express the reactions of many Syracuse coeds (and especially the residents of Flint Hall). Although these opinions may have deeply-footed psychological origins, we feel that they are merely being voiced by men who are oblivious to the appearance of their own sex.

We, too, look with distaste upon the "accepted" mode of dress on our campus. When we glance downward and see a pair of bare ankles making their way over to the Flint extension phones, we can be sure that tight dungarees, long shaggy hair, and general grubby attire willl complete this "collegiate image."

A "bubbling girl" can not be half as bad as a bedraggled boy who looks as if someone just lifted him up out of the gutter. We all belong to some specific group—whether it is the Varsity flirters, the "gaping" HBC court crowd, or the Greek conformists—and, to each his own.

However, we are looking forward to seeing the Syracuse student section at the Penn State game Saturday. Rumor has it that the Pennsylvanians will be dressed to the teeth for their Homecoming Weekend -- will the Syracusans be a direct contrast when they show up in their typical campus uniforms?!

Names withheld

Noble

To the Editor:

For the first time, I heard Dean Charles Noble at the Student Senate meeting this past Wednesday and the dean was as timely as he was great. Although he was not speaking only to freshmen, it is a shame that not all frosh, particularly those involved with the class campaign, were there to benefit. Essentially the point seemed to be that there must always be someone willing to lead, or there will be no accomplishments. If the Student Senate were not to pull teeth, if frosh do not, as their candidates warned they should not, "stick their necks out," where will the fight begin? Where will the apathy end?

There's a union song that grew out of the '30's that says you've got to go down and join the union — you've got to join it by yoruself. "Ain't nobody here gonna join it for ya . . . you gotta go down and join that union by yourself." I'm not advocating open rebellion if you are satisfied with the status quo. But until we have sought answers to valid questions, then how can we, who have been here one month, hope to know even what that status quo around here is?

More than to become familiar with the ideas presented, I'd like to suggest all the frosh get to know or hear Dean Noble. The man is definitely great. Or so it seems to a naive frosh.

Liz Gaynes '68.

To the Editor:

In a debate on foreign policy last week before the International Students Organization, I quoted Sen. Goldwater's remarks that "I don't give a tinker's dam what the rest of the world thinks about the United States as long as we keep strong militarily," and that "the United States should begin acting like a world power and quit groveling on its knees to inferior people who like to come to New York." I concluded that these remarks, at the very least, showed a lamentable lack of concern for the views of peoples in hte African - Asian states, views which must be taken into account in formulating a responsible foreign policy.

Prof. Bouscaren challenged me repeatedly for quoting the Senator out of context. Goldwater, he stated, was only referring to the peoples of communist countries when he made his "inferior people" remark. In order to nip this typical Goldwaterite obfuscation in the bud, I offered to exchange photocopies of the Senator's remarks with Prof. Bouscaren by noon Wednesday. Although I have not been able to have the actual photocopy made yet, may I refer Prof. Bouscaren and your readers to the Senator's address of December 8, 1960, before the National Association of Manufacturers, reported on the first two pages of the N. Y. Times for the following day, in which the context of the Senator's remarks — foreign economic aid to undedeveoped countries, with no reference made to communist states — clearly substantiates the conclusion which I drew from them.

The Sounds of Jazz

The Syracuse Jazz Scene

by Bill Newman

Jazz in the great "Salt City" has become little more than a legend in recent years. Stories drift back to me about the days when Duke Ellington played the Persian Room of the Hotel Syracuse and Stan Getz could be found eating left-over chicken in the kitchen of the old Brass Rail bar and grill. Even the Casablanca was a jazz hub in its day, but all of that is gone from Syracuse now.

Yet things on the Syracuse jazz scene are not as bad as they might appear to the casual observer. Jazz can be found here, but you have to look for it. I hope that some of the following will be useful to those of you who are still looking.

At present Syracuse has just one night spot that I would classify as a bonafide jazz club. The Clef, located on Wolf street, features live jazz on weekends. The owner, a local jazz drummer, seems to have arrived at the conclusion that the only way to hear live jazz here is to open your own club.

Since cost prevents importing big name jazz men from New York, The Clef features the best in local musicians and occasionally draws on well known up-state talent like the Jazz Brothers. Even on weekday nights, when no live music is heard, the Clef seems to have become the hitching post for local musicians and listeners.

Musical talent in Syracuse is quite abundant but the jazz audience seems to be far below par. The well known Salt City Six, led by Syracusan Nick Polumbo, makes its home base in Syracuse between road trips, but there are no clubs for them to play here.

As for new jazz talent, many names come to mind. The Jazz Brothers made Syracuse their home while Gap Mangione went to SU. Sal Nestico, now playing lead tenor with the new Woody Herman big band, is a local resident. Dave Will, now writing and playing baritone sax for the Les Elgart group, spent the last three years studying here at the university.

He finally realized that Syracuse was not equipped to allow him to try out his new material. He split for New York. George Andrews, former leader of the Syracuse University Jazz Workshop, went the same route.

When one turns to the air waves it is encouraging to find that Syracuse University's WAER-FM is presently making the major contribution.

Its program schedule includes three jazz shows — Down Beat (Sunday 11 p.m. to 1 a.m.), Jazz Spectrum (Wednesday and Thursday 7:30 - 8:30 p.m.), and my own Sounds of Jazz (Monday 11 p.m. to 1 a.m.). Prior to this, the only other recent jazz show was a nightly presentation over WONO-FM. When the station switched to a classical music policy, the jazz was dropped.

Again I must note that jazz is like democracy — if you don't participate you lose the privilege. Last year's performances by Herbie Mann and The Modern Jazz Quartet at the Regent Theatre were played to almost empty houses in both cases. No wonder they don't plan to return.

Probably the biggest jazz fiasco came last spring when the IFC presented Maynard Ferguson in the Manley Field House. There is still a running debate as to which was better — the concert or the echo, echo, echo.

You will only continue to hear jazz in Syracuse as long as you encourage and support it whyere and when you find it. This column is not a plea for assistance, but a warning for those of you who value what jazz there is in Syracuse.

The Syracuse jazz scene is what you make it . . . so do make it, man. . .

Seminar to Discuss Elections

"Tomorrow In Africa and Asia: Implications of the British and American Elections," is the subject of a seminar offered by the Humanistic Studies Center of University College Nov. 4-Dec. 16.

Dr. Julian Friedman, associate professor of political science at Syracuse University, will conduct the seminar. His experience in world affairs includes an assignment at the United Nations Conference on Internaand a two-year stay in China as United States Labor Attache in the office of the American Consultate General.

The seminar will be given at 8-10 p.m., on Wednesday.

The social and political forces which have "far-reaching implications for the future development of sections of Asia" will be examined and discussed according to a University College spokesman. Vietnam as an American election issue and Southern Rhodesia as a British election issue are among main points to be emphasized in the seminar.

Specific situations on these two continents will be used to illustrate underlying trends. Topics will include African personality in the Congo, ordeal of the Vietnamese, Communist China's outlook on the world, and Southern Africa in rebellion.

The Tree Pest Information Service at the State University College of Forestry at Syracuse offers free advice to forest landowners and people interested in their ornamental trees.

SG Constitution

'Correct, New and Genuine'

By JESSE SMITH

The mystery of the lost Student Government constitution has been solved, and all that remains is to print up copies.

Although most students did not know it, not a single SG official has had a correct copy of the new constitution until late last week, when President Carl Corallo borrowed one from Dean of Men Jim G. Carleton.

The confusion started on the bus carrying student leaders back from the Pinebrook Conference two weeks ago.

Someone discovered that the copy handed out at the conference differed in one clause from the one distributed in Joint Student Legislature last year.

And Corrallo began wondering what had happened to a major revision approved in last year's spring elections, giving him authority to sign or veto student senate bills.

Both copies available said:

"He (the SG president) shall review all laws of the legislature in accordance with the senate rules." The subject is not mentioned in the senate rules.

Frank Richmond, chief justice of Student Court, was unable to tell the Daily Orange exactly what this meant, and whether it implied the power to sign or veto legislation.

The confusion — but not the embarrassment ended when Corrallo saw Carleton's copy. It turned out that the other two versions were taken from the old constitution on file in the SG office.

The correct, new, genuine constitution provides that all acts passed by the senate are to be either signed by the president or returned to SS with his reasons for veto.

The senate can override the veto by a two-thirds vote.

Composition of the senate steering committee is outlined for the first time in the new document. Chairmen of all standing or temporary committees and two senators-at-large from each of the three upper classes are members.

The new constitution also allows the senate, by a two-thirds majority, to bring bills directly to the floor for action, by-passing committees.

Another provision in the new constitution modifies the requirement for a 1.5 cumulative average for SG president and vice president and SS speaker. It allows those with only a 1.3 to hold office if they have had a 1.5 average the past two semesters.

This change is left out of the Pinebrook version. The other incorrect copy included it, but not in regard to the speaker's qualifications.

Students Speak On Changeover Of Soviet Leaders

By CAROL SCHNEIDER

Student opinions concerning the shake-up in the Soviet Union ranged in intensity Friday from "I'm frightened" to "It's a good thing."

In interviews conducted by the Daily Orange, students reacted to the replacement of Nikita S. Khrushchev as premier and first secretary of the Soviet Communist Party.

"I'm frightened," commented Karen Stephenson, a sophomore. "But it's out of ignorance. I don't know anything about the two men, Leonid Brezhnev and Alexei Kosygin, or about their ideas or policies."

"I see this transfer of power at the demand of subordinates without a death in the family as a step forward," stated Henrik N. Dullea, graduate assistant in political science at Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs.

"It is a good thing, as in the past 100 years the only changeovers have involved the death of at least one person.

"Khrushchev was replaced by strict, high ability party professionals. The course of government will probably become less erratic," Dullea said.

"Goldwater will have a field day," noted Esta Ackerhalt, a senior. "Barry has been stressing communism, and I think he will take advantage of this to try to make Americans aware that communism is descending quickly."

"Will this be a peaceful transition or simply a facade to cover an intense power struggle?" wondered Randy Casey, a senior.

Craig Douglas, a freshman, said: "Khrushchev was too lenient in his relations with the western world. He was definitely ousted. Now that Red China has use of the atomic bomb, I believe the new policy toward this country will be more cooperative, while attitude with the United States will be less friendly."

Applications Due For School of Ed

Applications for the School of Education are being accepted beginning today in 200A Slocum Hall, according to Dr. Ernest J. Milner, chairman of the committee on admissions.

Students who have transferred from other institutions and are expecting to enroll in a program of teacher preparation must apply during this period, Milner said.

Sophomores studying in the majors of art, business, English, home economics, child development, languages, mathematics, music, physical education, health, recreation, science, speech and social studies education are eligible to apply for dual enrollment in the School of Education and their college of initial enrollment

Sophomores in the fields of early childhood education and elementary education can apply for single admission to the school of Education.

Students wishing to prepare for teaching in special education fields are also singly enrolled.

Students are asked to pick up application folders from today, Oct. 30, and complete the enclosed forms returning them to room 200A Slocum.

Interviews should be arranged with prospective advisors before Nov. 16, and health clearance should be obtained by the Student Health Service.

Decisions for late-applying juniors and seniors and sophomores admitted to programs requiring education courses in second sophomore semester will be notified of decisions by Jan. 1. Others will be contacted April 1.

Parties Active on Campus

The Republicans and Independents for Johnson is the largest organization of its type in the country, according to Lillich.

"Nationally the organization is about 75 per cent Republican but in Syracuse it is about half Republican and half Independent," noted Lillich.

Prof. Malcolm Schlusberg, vice-chairman in charge of student activites for the group characterized the Republicans and Independents for Johnson as "primarily a working organization."

"Student volunteers help man our office downtown. They have passed out literature at football games and at shopping centers and have helped in the canvassing," he added.

An entirely student organization is the Young Republicans for Goldwater. Joel Rosenberg, the group's president, said a reason for their support of the Arizona senator is that "Goldwater believes in Republican principles that would benefit the nation if elected.'

The Young Republicans for Goldwater had desks set up in the lobby of Huntington B. Crouse and Slocum Hall where its members gave out information and answered questions about their candidate.

The group will again set up an information desk in HBC beginning this week, according to Rosenberg.

Among other plans, its 20 active members plan to give pamphlets and buttons at the Pittsburgh football game in Archbold Stadium as well as in the downtown area.

Tentatively planned is a debate with the Young Democrats for Johnson at Flint Lounge on Oct. 29.

Concerning Goldwater's possibility of election, Rosenberg said, "polls vastly underestimate his chance of election and are very misleading."

"The polls now say that Johnson will win by carrying 47 states with Goldwater only carrying Mississippi, Alabama, and one other state. Any poll that doesn't even expect him to carry his own state cannot be too accurate," noted Rosenberg.

"I expect quite a close election," he added.

One of the newest groups on campus is the Young Citizens for Kennedy who are supporting Robert F. Kennedy in his bid for senator of New York State. Kennedy is running against incumbent Sen. Kenneth B. Keating for the position.

Susan Heilbron, president of the Young Citizens for Kennedy, called Kennedy "the most qualified of the two men."

"Kennedy represents young blood — which is what is needed in the Senate," she added.

"We should be proud to have Kennedy running in our state for senator. This carpetbagging issue is ridiculous," Miss Heilbron said.

The Young Citizens for Kennedy is an all-student organization which has a large membership on campus. Plans of the organization include running a desk at HBC this week where information about Kennedy will given out.

Literature and buttons also will be distributed at the Pittsburgh game. Some of the group members are working in the downtown office as volunteers.

When Kennedy visits the campus this evening, the group has organized a special welcoming committee called the Kennedy Girls. They will act as an honor guard for the former attorney general.

The 50 ushers for Kennedy's speech in Manley Field House will all be members of the Young Citizens for Kennedy.

Freedom Party Wants Aides

regular Democratic Party apparatus is overwhelmingly pro-Goldwater, the party noted.

The vote is expected to prove that not "only would Negroes in Mississippi vote if they were allowed to, but the state's political structure and social climate would be fundamently different," he said.

The Freedom Democratic Party was officially established at a meeting in Jackson, Miss. on April 26. More than 200 delegates met to form a party open to all Democrats in Mississippi of voting age, regardless of race, creed, or color. Every effort was made to follow political party laws regulated by the state, he said.

On Aug. 6, 240 delegates assembled at the Freedom Democratic Party state convention in Jackson to elect officers, choose delegates to be sent to the National Convention and adopt a platform. Efforts that were made to register the party with the Secretary of State of Mississippi were rebuffed.

There was no case in which the attempt to deal with issues besides states rights and white supremacy was accepted. On all levels, there was an exclusion of Negroes; this being a violation of the 14th and 15th amendments to the Constitution, the party claimed.

The Freedom Vote will be used in an attempt to nullify the election of the regular Democratic Party on the grounds that they were elected by a discriminatory voting procedure, the party spokesman claimed.

The vote will be a mixture of all civil rights activities in the state of Mississippi this year. Volunteers for the coming project may get applications in prefab 7C. Those who have not been in Mississippi before will be interviewed. At least 250-500 volunteers are needed to work either this week or Oct. 26-Nov. 3.

Parking Problem Plagues Campus

As difficulties increased, a tightening of the rules regulating use of cars was needed.

From the original set of rules has developed a complex system of seniority, priority and parking rights.

And so we have the present scramble falling under the general heading of The Parking Problem -- Syracuse University.

Last year, more than 6,000 cars registered for permission to par in the campus area. The university has about 3,000 spaces available. 1,300 of which are at Manley Field House, 500 at the main campus and the remainder at various lots.

What to do with the other 3000 cars?

James V. LaTorre, assistant to the vice president for administration, said that university property is now worth $4 to $4.50 per square foot. Cost of building one parking space is approximately $300 for surface lots, LaTorre said, and single spaces in a garage would rise to nearly $2,000 for building and operation.

Where to get the needed land and money?

Specific regulations have been developed in hopes of alleviating or at least decreasing the problem. Sophomores with a 1.6 accumulative average, juniors and seniors, faculty staff and workmen are permitted to drive cars and park them somewhere in the university area.

Priority schedules have been arranged to permit those with the greatest need to park on the main campus. Difficulties continue as staff and faculty increased and special problems developed trying to park some 4,200 instructors and full-time employe's cars in 502 on-campus spaces.

Rules continues to grow with stickers being required, registration of vehicles, and fines distributed for those who would not comply.

The university established a parking committee to help solve the problem. Student Government established a committee for dealing with student gripes and a court for dealing with offenders.

How to establish rules? How to enforce them?

The problem is multiple in nature and grows with each new class entering SU. Many questions arise but the answers are not easy to find. Students, administration, city police and security police each face the problem from a different point of view.

Each must be heard.

(Tuesday: Spokesmen for the Syracuse Police Department and the university security police discuss the problems involved with parking in the university area).

The New York State Ranger School at Wanakena has 2,300 acres of forest land for training its students.

Hill Security Police Rules Regulate Cars in the Area

As a point of clarification, below are listed the parking rules and regulations of the university as given by the security police:

Any car parked on university property must bear a current, properly issued sticker which must be firmly placed on ventilator window driver's side.

Cars parked on university property without proper stickers will be towed away at owner's expense.

Campus parking will be limited to deans, directors, department chairmen, full associate and assistant professors. Others are eligible after 15 years of service to the university. All special cases must be approved by the respective dean and the Parking Committee.

Stickers are issued to individuals only and are not transferable. Illegal use will result in the withdrawal of all parking privileges or Student Court action.

Parking in drive-ways alongside or between living centers is forbidden by order of the city fire marshal. An additional penalty of $5 for failure to pay the appropriate fine within three school days from date of ticket will be levied. Additional penalties or disciplinary action may be made by the Student Traffic Court and/or the appropriate personnel dean.

Violations to be appealed to Student Traffic Court must be paid within the three days' time limit or all appeal rights are forfeited.

Violation successfully appealed will be cancelled and fines refunded. Non-student appeals must be made to security police within three day limit. Appeals to Joint Student Traffic Court must be filed with the same by the second successive court session following date of violation.

PENALTIES

First offense	$ 3
Second offense	5
Additional offenses	10

Who Abducted UCLA Effigy?

Marshall Cottage, a freshman women's residence, was the scene of a rather unusual kidnapping last week. The crime involved the spiriting away of "Ucla," the cottage's effigy prepared for the football game Saturday. "Ucla" was put on display early Saturday morning to decorate the cottage and add to the football game spirit. He was stolen from his station, hanging from a second floor window, less than 24 hours after his initiation into SU campus life, according to cottage residents.

Coeds claim that they miss his "manly" presence, especially those girls who contributed their jeans, sweatshirts, and other paraphrenalia for the creation of "Ucla."

Anyone having any pertinent information as to "Ucla's" whereabouts is asked to contact Marshall Cottage, ext. 2774. If no results in 48 hours, the dean of women's office will be notified of the crime, according to Linda Gray, president.

Fraternity Appeal Denied

A campus social fraternity has been denied its appeal to be taken off disciplinary probation as a result of a recent Inter-Fraternity Council Judicial Board review.

Declaring that "the board did not feel that they (the fraternity) had shown enough improvement to warrant being taken off probation," Chief Justice Donald Thorn added that the case is not scheduled for review again until Dec. 17.

The fraternity was originally charged with violation of university social rules when, on April 13, 1964, a pledge and his friend were indecently exposed at a window of the fraternity house.

The two allegedly climbed to a balcony on the house and "mooned" the brothers standing below. The fraternity accepted full responsibility for the action and was placed on disciplinary probation on April 29 when the board stated that any more infractions could result in either suspension from the IFC, suspension of the national charter or both.

The house is still allowed to participate in university functions, IFC functions and its own private parties.

Orange Rally Tops Lions, 21-14

Mahle Runs For Deciding TD; SU's Nance Outstanding Back

By BILL CRONAUER
Sports Editor

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. — Football is often referred to as a game of inches. Saturday afternoon the masterful Orangemen of Syracuse controlled the yardstick.

Few of the 46,900 Homecoming Day fans who witnessed SU's 21 - 14 win over Penn State in overcast Beaver Stadium could recall a more evenly-played contest. But Syracuse had the advantage of several vital inches.

With the score knotted at 14 - 14 early in the fourth period, the Lions initiated a drive from their own 20 - yard line. Tom Urbanik did the running, Gary Wydman the passing and Bob Riggle the catching as State moved the ball to the Hill 43.

Riggle carried to the 39 . . . Gary Klingensmith added two more . . . Urbanik drove for three to the 23, making it fourth and one.

Quarterback Jack White barked the signals, took the snap and plunged into the pack. But he never made the yard, as a pair of Orange defenders, 6-6, 240-pound tackle Chuck Scott and middle guard Walt Jajuga, wrapped him up one inch short.

"If we'd have gotten that first down," sighed Lion Coach Rip Engle, "there's no telling what could have happened."

Still Penn State was far from out of it. After the stout Lion defense held the Orange to five yards in three plays, Ron Oyer punted to the State 15.

With a second and five at the 20, Wydman fired a long bomb toward end Bill Bowes, barely overthrowing him.

"Bowes had his man beat, and the pass missed by a couple of inches," Engle recollected. "It was just one of those games that was as close as an inch."

Four plays later, Wydman's air attempt to Riggle fell short and into the hands of defender Roger Smith, who promptly galloped 38 yards to the PS 22.

Smith, a little-used halfback who was playing linebacker for the first time, entered the game as a substitute for the injured Murray Johnson.

With only 3:20 now remaining, Jim Nance and Walley Mahle took command. Nance romped 11 yards on three carries for a first. After Oyer chalked up five, "Bo" added another two, setting up Mahle's four-yard sprint around right end.

And the Orange had sewed it up.

Hill coach Ben Schwwartzwalder, obviously delighted with the outcome, heaped praise on ace fullback Nance. "He was a great player out there today," Ben exclaimed. "He gets better every week."

Nance, limited to 26 yards on six carries in the first half, broke loose in the final 30 minutes and ended up with 104 on 23 attempts.

But the most exciting play of the game was reserved for fabulous Floyd Little, who raced 71 yards to paydirt with a punt for the day's opening score.

The speedy Little grabbed Frank Hershey's boot on the SU 29 and slid through half-a-dozen would-be tacklers before breaking into daylight at midfield.

"Floyd didn't have any blocking to speak of," said Ben afterwards. "It was a solo effort."

Little racked up 42 yards rushing on ten tries. Mahle totaled 46, including four of the biggest yards of his career.

The Piety eleven tallied first at 14:17 on Little's punt return, fourth longest in Hill history. Smith added the PAT.

The home team rebounded for its two scores in the second quarter. White employed a quarterback sneak for the ice breaker at 8:36, with Urbanik capping a 56-yard march four minutes later by barreling off right tackle for ten yards and a TD.

SU evened the count after 8:29 of the third quarter on Nance's five-yard trot around right end. Smith again connected.

Thus the stage was set for Smith's interception and Mahle's touchdown. The Hillmen, not the Lions, slept Saturday night.

Happy Talk

By BOB KRENGEL

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. — Football dressing rooms are always the same after a game. One is happy, while the other is permeated by a silent sadness.

Saturday was no exception under Penn State's Beaver Stadium, and the Orangemen were very happy following their last-minute 21 - 14 victory over the Nittany Lions.

Coach Ben Schwartzwalder calmly sat back in his seat and described his feelings after the grid battle royal: "We knew it would be tough. We had a fired-up team against us, so we just did the best thing we could and ran. It was a real hittin' ball game."

The veteran Hill mentor had several comments on individual performances, especially the one of Mr. James Nance. "Ol' Jim is getting better every week," he said. "Today he was a good football player out there and against the strongest team we've played all year."

Flaws

Schwartzwalder, of course, found some flaws in the Orange game, too. "We threw the ball away three times," he said. "And on that touchdown run of Floyd Little's, there was no blocking at all."

The coach also pointed out that SU tried to exploit a Lion weakness in pass defense, but this attack failed. He added that during the second half, Syracuse was a little more "judicious" in passing.

"By the end of the first half, we had a better idea of what we were doing," Ben continued. "During the half time break, we set up our blocking assignments and we were o. k."

However, Ben Schwartzwalder was not the only happy person in the locker room. The joyous players let out hoots of triumph as they savored the fruits of victory.

Nance

Big Bo, voted the best SU back of the game, luxuriated in a hot shower. "They gave us a real struggle," he said. "It was a hard-hitting affair all the way, and their quarterback, Wydman, played a real good game. Our plays worked very well on the inside, but it got rough outside."

There was a new hero in the dressing room, linebacker Roger Smith. In addition to kicking three conversions, he made the key interception of the Penn State pass that led to the Piety touchdown.

Explaining his reaction on catching that pass, Smith noted, "I just tried to pick up some blockers and then get as far as I could."

Floyd

Last, but definitely not least, was amazing Floyd Little. He was quietly dressing after his 71-yard punt return that defied description.

"I ran straight through them before they could do anything," Little said. "If I busted into the clear, I figured that I could pick up some blockers." Floyd really didn't need them at all.

Schwartzwalder summed the game up: "It's a satisfying win any time you beat a Penn State team."

Hillmen 10th In Golf Meet

The Syracuse University golf team placed tenth in a field of 21 in the ECAC golf championships at Bethpage Park Saturday. The team finished with a total of 345 strokes, 40 strokes more than pacesetting Penn State.

Syracuse's Jim Olp finished in a tie for fourth. Olp's 18 hole score was 43-37-80.

DO Chickens Start Practice

"As go the Chickens, so goes the team." The foretelling Daily Orange team were missing from the football picture this weekend, as Piety faced Penn State alone at the University Park.

The Chickens, whose wins or losses usually predict the outcome of Ben's team, have been known to often lead them on to victory. However, they will be curtailed from activities in this away match as a result of several mishaps.

Those still interested in the activities of the Chicken team will be comforted to know that they will continue to practice at the Women's Bldg. field, regardless of their rather late start.

SU Harriers Edge Army

By NEIL KERR

Syracuse's cross country team remained undefeated by outrunning Army Saturday morning 26-29 at Drumlins Country Club. It was an extremely hard fought race as the first 11 finishers were all under the course record of 26:07.

The victory brought Syracuse's record to 4-0 and marked the 16th SU win in 20 dual meets with Army since 1936. The Cadets' log dipped to 4-1.

In something of an oddity, Army's Jim Warner was the individual race winner but did not receive credit for a course record. Coach Bob Grieve said, "Warner won the race but he took a short cut of about 105 yards. He didn't see one of the markers."

"He could have been disqualified," continued Grieve, but when we found out what the score was, we gave him the place."

SU's Mike Spino, who stayed with Warner most of the way, took second and established an official record of 24:57 for the 5.3 mile course.

"My plan was to tire him (Warner) in the beginning," said Mike later. "I wanted to run the first loop of the course (1.8 miles) in 8:35 and leave him behind. But I ran it in 8:15 and Warner was right beside me. He passed me with about two miles left."

"When I saw him go the 'wrong way I hollered but he didn't hear me," said Spino.

In a deadlock for third place were SU's Marty Miller and John Crawford. Other place winners for the Orange were sophomore Bill Ramsdell (eighth) and Bill Cihak (ninth).

"Cihak ran with only two days practice," commented Grieve. "If he was in shape, he'd have been first."

But Grieve added that he was satisfied with the showing of both Ramsdell and Cihak. In the last few hundred yards this pair put on a blistering kick and passed several Army runners to finish eighth and ninth. "We didn't win the meet till the last half mile," emphasized Grieve.

"I thought we were going to lose," added Marty Miller. "Mike and John and I were running 2-3-4 but I looked around and there was a big bunch of Army guys behind us. That was a great race . . . a great finish."

"Army has a good team," said Grieve, "but our guys looked REAL good."

Next Saturday morning the Orange will take on Alfred at Drumlins.

Hill Grid Foes Fare Poorly

The bigger they were the harder they fell as Texas joined the ranks of the beaten Saturday and the death toll in the East left the Orangemen with sole possession of first place in the run for the Lambert Trophy.

In the biggest upset in the East, a fired-up Virginia team defeated future opponent Army 35-14. Navy didn't do much better, dropping its game to California 27-13.

In other games, next week's opponent Oregon State beat Idaho 10-7, Pittsburgh tied Miami (Fla.) 20-20, West Virginia dumped Virginia Tech 23-10, Boston College beat Cincinnatti 10-0. Holy Cross shutout Quantico 16-0, Kansas upset Oklahoma 15-14, and Notre Dame trounced UCLA 24-0.

Kennedy Stresses Responsible Attitude To Current Problems

By MARLENE SIMONS and JONATHAN RUSSELL

He came, he was seen, and from the audience reaction, he conquered.

Robert F. Kennedy, the New York Democratic senatorial hopeful, spoke to a packed Manley Field House Monday in a speech delayed two hours by transportation problems.

The state of New York faces many problems, he said, which every citizen has a responsibility to face.

"We meet in an hour of change and challenge," Kennedy declared. "The events of this week in the Soviet Union, Great Britain and Red China all remind us that we live in a changing world.

"Unless we are alert," he continued, "change is not always our friend."

Among the issues facing New York are those of housing, unemployment and education, according to Kennedy.

"Within the next 40 years we must build homes and housing —virtually another America," he noted. "I propose a 15-point program designed to alleviate the situation and increase housing progress."

Sen. Kenneth B. Keating, (Kennedy's Republican opponent) has repeatedly attempted to defeat or cut measures which would help the jobless, the Democratic candidate stated.

"I believe our futures depend upon the quality of the schools in the nation," he said in reference to the topic of education, "and more certainly in our state."

When queried as to whether he would use the position of senator as a stepping stone to the presidency, Kennedy replied:

"I would like to be a good United States Senator from the state of New York."

Kennedy offered a plea to New York's citizens to face the issues confronting them.

ROBERT F. KENNEDY

"This can either be the best generation in the history of mankind or the last," he said. "I believe we can make it the best."

Keating to Present Republican Side

Sen. Kenneth B. Keating has chosen more of a monastic atmosphere than his Democratic opponent in which to deliver his campus speech at 7:30 p.m., today, in Hendricks Chapel.

Prior to Keating's arrival, a rally will be held on the steps of the chapel with the Keating Girls and Tedd Browne, a folk singer who has appeared at the Purple Onion and the Blue Angel.

Before his formal speech, Sen. Keating will speak outside the chapel and spend some time mingling with students.

Arriving on campus between the library and Hendricks Chapel at 7:15 p.m., Sen. Keating will be greeted by vice-president Kenneth G. Bartlett, director of the television and radio center, Kenneth G. Bartlett, director of the television and radio center, associate professor of political fairs.

KENNETH B. KEATING

Also welcoming Sen. Keating will be Dr. Donald Meiklejohn, professor of philosophy and director of public affairs and citizenship of the Maxwell Schoool of Citizenship and Public Affiars.

Dr. Ronald H. McDonald, assistant professor of political science and John W. Collins, instructor in business law and coordinator for the Onondaga County Citizens for Keating, will form the other party.

Sen. Keating was elected to the 80th through 85th Congresses as a member of the House of Representatives and served

Parking Situation

Security Works on Problem

The university parking committee is scheduled to meet today to continue its investigation into the parking problem at Syracuse University.

The Daily Orange today prints the second in a series of articles analyzing the parking problem and its ramifications. The research and the writing have been done by Pat Tracey, a Daily Orange junior editor.

Today Miss Tracey discusses the problems faced by city and university police.

By PAT TRACEY
Junior Editor

The university security police, under the direction of Robert D. Flaherty, operates a 17-man staff on a 24-hour basis.

Three shifts (midnight-8 a.m., 8 a.m.-4 p.m., 4 p.m.-midnight) include a team of three men who must patrol parking lots, answer complaints, make routine investigations, check buildings and surveil the campus.

Two of the 17 men are on gate duty during the day, checking cars for proper registration and stickers. Four men are in a supervisory capacity, and one is on a motorcycle cruising the area.

It would be extremely costly and almost impossible for the university to staff patrolmen to cope only with traffic and parking violators, said Flaherty.

Because of the limited staff, it is impossible to record the violators apprehended. The offenses are gauged through figures of the revenue collected. According to Flaherty, last year

Leaders Urge Group Support Of Blood Drive

Blood units donated by Syracuse students in the past have supplied the city of Syracuse for only two days.

Consequently, the campus planning and arrangements committee has set a quota of 400 pints a day during the drive 10:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday in the Shaw Dormitory Recreation room. This is 65 units higher than the quota set by the Red Cross. Many campus groups are offering inducements for donors.

The InterFraternity Council will award a trophy to the house that donates the most blood on a percentage basis,

Albee Drama At Regent

Albee Play

VICKI CUMMINGS and KENDALL CLARK star as Martha and George in Edward Albee's prize winning play, "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" which will be seen in a special showing for students only at 8 p.m., today at the University Regent Theatre. Another performance will be held Wednesday.

By MICHELE SOBEL

Syracuse University students will have a chance to see the Broadway hit, "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" at a special price.

The play will be given by the National Touring Company at 8 p.m. today and Wednesday at the Regent Theatre, 820 E. Genesee St. Student tickets will be $2 for today's performance only.

Written by Edward Albee, the comedy drama and its author won these prizes during the 1962-63 theatrical season: The New York Drama Critics' Award; five American Theatre Wing Antoinette Perry Awards ("Tonys"), the Annual ANTA and the Foreign Press Awards.

Albee is also the author of other hits, "The Zoo Story," "The Death of Bessie Smith," "The Sandbox," "The American Dream" and "The Ballad of the Sad Cafe."

He attracted international attention with his first play, "The Zoo Story," which had its premiere at the Schiller Theatre Workstatt in West Berlin, where it is still being performed in repertory.

Students Support Johnson, Keating

As election day draws nearer, Syracuse University students are being bombarded by student political organizations asking for support of their candidates.

This three-part series is an effort to explain to students the purposes, goals and future plans of these groups.

By DONALD LAWLESS

The Young Citizens for Johnson organized earlier this fall, now has an active membership of over 300.

As one of the contributions to the support of their candidate, the group has helped to staff the downtown office of the Democratic Party with student volunteers.

Young Citizens for Johnson canvassed daily for their part in the voter registration drive of Onondaga County.

A rally for senatorial hopeful Robert F. Kennedy was staged last night by the Young Citizens for Kennedy.

A second rally for vice presidential candidate Hubert H. Humphrey is planned for Humphrey's visit to Syracuse later in the month, said Kenneth Satlin, president of the group.

A tentative debate between the Young Citizens for Johnson and the Young Republicans for Goldwater is scheduled for Flint Hall Lounge on Oct. 29.

The group is presently engaged in research for Earl Boyle, candidate for the New York State Senate.

"On election day, the Young Citizens will act as poll watch-

A Guy Named Hutch

It wasn't unexpectedly that a guy named Hutch resigned Monday.

For Hutch, who goes by the name Fred Hutchinson, had been stricken with cancer nearly a year ago and couldn't devote the time and the energy needed to manage a major league baseball team.

It's ironic that, of all the managers and coaches in the game, the disease had to strike Hutch. He is the one who stands above all the rest as a fighter, committed to the never-say-die attitude, determined to play the game and play it well.

In his years at Cincinnati's helm, as well as those years with other teams, Hutch proved his love for the sport and the physical and mental battles involved in trying to win.

And when he finally won that pennant a few years back — the one he had so long sought but never attained — he never let up. He continued his drive and his dedication.

If anyone can beat cancer at its game, it will be Hutch, for in his world he has few equals. We hope the day is not far when he is back on the playing field, where he belongs.

Parking

Today the Daily Orange continues a series on the parking problem on the Syracuse campus. The articles should be of interest to every member of the university community.

Students should be especially cognizant and concerned, for if the university concludes that some cars must go, it is likely that student cars will be high on the list, if not at the peak.

The university parking committee is meeting today to more fully discuss the problem. If an equitable solution is to be found, it is this group which must find it.

No one can dispute that it is often extremely difficult to find a parking space on Marshall street these days. Dormitory parking lots are filled to capacity. Street parking near the campus is scarce.

This is a problem to which there must be a solution. We hope our articles in the next few days will bring that solution a bit closer.

Nuclear Nonsense

By C. Anthony Love

During the present campaign, the Democratic Party has been playing a ludicrous game called nuclear nonsense. First, they charge Sen. Goldwater of wanting to drop atomic devices to defoliate trees in Vietnam when actually Sen. Goldwater only mentioned this tactic in denouncesidering this idea as a viable alternative.

Next they charge Sen. Goldwater as a radical for wanting to give selected field commanders some say in the use of nuclear weapons when this was the policy of the Eisenhower and Kennedy administrations In short, the basic aim of this game seems to be an attempt to blame the opposition for some unpopular position that your administration has taken and would like to forget.

I must point out that this is not a new game by any means. When Hitler wanted to denounce the Jews, he said they were tricky and ruthless characters that were alien to the true aspirations of the German people. Actually, it was Hitler who was the tricky and ruthless character who was alien to the true aspirations of the people.

However, Hitler hoped that if he could pin this label on the Jews the people of Germany would not accuse Hitler of these things, for whatever else Hitler might have been, he was not Jewish.

In psychology this simple technique is called transference and is one of the symptons of a neurotic who wants to protect his ego ideal by projecting unto others those qualities he possesses and wishes he didn't. In politics, this is simply brushed off as doubletalk and a perfectly good campaign technique. The trouble in both cases is that it only confuses the issues and does not get to the real heart of the problem.

The problem is very simple. Either the President has delegated some authority to the field commanders in this area or he has not. Either the field commanders or at least the head of NATO do have some authority to exercise independent judgement over the use of some nuclear devices or thy do not.

If the President has continued the policy of his predecessors in delegating some authorty in this area then his assertions that this is a dangerous idea proposed by a "trigger happy" are simply nuclear nonsense at best and a gross prevarication in the hopes of deceiving the electorate at worst.

If, on the other hand, he has abrogated this authority granted by his predecessors then he is the dangerous radical. Radical because it is he that has radically changed the precedent established by his predecessors and dangerous because he has taken a position that endangers our basic security. If Russia were to attack the United States with nuclear weapons, Washington D.C. would be their first target.

With Washington destroyed it would probably take days to find out whether or not the President was alive, let alone who was the next person alive who could legally assume this office. With the President indisposed there would be no chance to avoid total destruction through the use of prompt retaliation.

You might say that this situation is far-fetched, but a similar situation allowed the Allies to win the second World War. Adolf Hitler had a special division of Panzer Troops that could only move on his personal order. On the morning of June 2, 1944 these troops were within striking distance of the Normandy beaches but Hitler was asleep and had left strict orders not to be awakened. Consequently, there was nobody to give the order that could have repelled our invasion and turned the course of the war. Ever since this fiasco in military history, the idea of a single man having sole control over such a crucial decision has been denounced as insane.

In short, either the Democratic candidate is not telling the truth or hei s the dangerous radical that has changed the well justified policy of his predecessors in direct contradiction to all military advice. Either way it is the Republican nominee, Sen. Goldwater, who advocates the sane and consistent policy and does not refrain from telling the American people how he really stands on the issue.

LETTERS

Symphony

To the Editor:

Martin Cohn's review of The Syracuse Symphony concert on October 2 was a grossly incompetent piece of reporting. If Mr. Cohn really believes that the Syracuse Symphony is a first-rate organization, then he's never heard a good orchestra perform. And if he believes that the Syracuse Symphony produced a first-rate performance that night, then he's not aware of anything that that organization may have done in the past, for that performance was quite sub-standard compared with older programs.

That review did not annoy me, however, as much as did his review of the Syracuse Friends of Chamber Music concert printed in the DO on October 15. At least the review of the symphony did no great injustice to the people who had worked to present it. On the contrary, it was so overly generous that Mr. Cohn was doing them a service, whether they deserved it, or whether he knew it, or not. But the review of the "Friends" concert was an entirely different story.

Their performance was, above all, authentic and refreshingly so. It is not often we can hear a program of Bach's music which is devoid of present-day sensationalism such as the unnecessary augmentation of the string sections or the gross exaggeration of the tempi in order to satisfy the modern listener's craving for rhythmic contrast. But this sensationalism is obviously what Mr. Cohn couldn't seem to do without.

He also couldn't seem to appreciate the fine points involved in performing either of the Bach works. Had he understood them, there were several things he could have said concerning the superb interpretation of each of the works by every member of the ensemble. Instead, he filed his review with all but meaningless phrases and, having nothing else to say, decided to blatantly criticize two of the most distinguished members of the faculty of the School of Music.

I found Mr. Cohn's ignorance appalling.

A shocking realization has just dawned upon my roommate and me. Our administration has done it again. What kind of foresight, what unusual planning it has taken to have Homecoming Weekend the weekend before our midterm exams. Let's send for our girls back home, let's have a ball, let's flunk our exams!

JUDY RODERICK, blues and folk singer, will perform at 8:30 p.m. Wednesday, Thursday and this weekend at the Folk Gallery. The 22 year-old has released one LP, "Ain't Nothing But the Blues."

Blues Singer Judy Roderick To Perform At Folk Gallery

Judy Roderick, blues and folk singer, will make her upstate New York debut at 8:30 p.m., Wednesday at the Folk Gallery.

The 22 year-old singer has appeared at both the Newport and the Philadelphia folk festivals and has released a Columbia LP album, "Ain't Nothin But The Blues."

Her repertoire includes such revivals as: "Brother, Can You Spare A Dime," "Miss Brown To You" and Hoagy Carmichael's "Baltimore Oriole."

The New York Times wrote of her style: "Her phrasing, drive and vocal control take her on a frequently soaring exploration of sophisticated blues."

Miss Roderick will also appear at the Folk Gallery on Thursday and this weekend. Other times for her appearances will be at 10:30 p.m. with added midnight shows on the weekend.

versial subject of man's relationship to woman. Specifically, it is the story of two married couples who live and work in a small university town.

The play exposes the resentments of the twenty-year married life of a college professor and his wife, the daughter of the dean.

Playing the leading roles in the Syracuse production will be Vicki Cummings and Kendall Clark, both of whom have a long list of credits on Broadway, off-Broadway, and in national touring companies.

Featured are Bryarly Lee and Donald Briscoe. Director Alan Schneider, who won a "Tony" award on Broadway, also directed the national touring company for Producers Richard Barr and Clinton Wilder.

The Wednesday performance of "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" will be open to the general public. Tickets will be $2.50, $3 and $3.50. Tickets are available at the Regent Theatre box office.

E. Williams To Read Dickens

Emlyn Williams will appear in a Charles Dickens' reading at 8:30 p.m., Thursday at the Regent Theatre.

Costumed as Dickens, Williams will read selections from the novelist's work. This will be William's second tour while impersonating the English writer.

Syracuse is one of the early stops on this tour which will include performances at 80 North American cities.

Tickets are $2.00, $2.50 and $3.00. Tickets are available at the Regent Theatre box office.

ers and work at the polls in any way they are needed," added Satlin.

The organization's members will have a desk set up in the lobby of Huntington B. Crouse Hall answering questions about their candidate and his platforms.

"Johnson represents effective leadership and he can handle any crisis that we might encounter in the future," commented Satlin.

Asked about the purpose for the formation of his group, Satlin answered, "Johnson has asked and needs the support of young people throughout the country. I'm sure he has it on this campus."

Students for Kenneth B. Keating held its first meeting following Senator Jacob K. Javits' Oct. 6 speech on Hendricks Chapel steps.

The president of the organization, Bruce Kirchenbaum, outlined the tentative plans for Keating's visit this evening.

Tedd Browne, a folksinger who has been travelling with the senator, will be featured in a hootenanny scheduled to precede Keating's speech in Hendricks Chapel today.

Printed information will be distributed on the Saturday of the Syracuse University- Pittsburg football game in Archbold Stadium, said Kirschenbaum.

The organization's 12 active members are working in conjunction with the Onondaga County's Scholars for Keating who will provide speakers and researchers for the encumbent Republican.

The Keating Girls, of whom four of the six are SU coeds, travel with Keating and form a sort of feminine honor guard at rallies and speeches for him.

Martha Watt, spokeman for the group, said they planned to have a "big poster for the Pitt game" for Keating.

"We girls are also helping out at Keating's downtown office," added Miss Watt.

Keating has "done a good job, has a good record and can do more for the state then Kennedy," noted Kirschenbaum.

"Kennedy came into this state where there was no need for him," he added.

When asked about Kennedy's popularity, Kirschenbaum replied that "Kennedy may have the crowds but Keating will have the votes."

Writers Series

Irish Poet Murphy to Lecture

Irish poet Richard Murphy will open the Syracuse University Visiting Writers Series for the current school year with a public reading of his poetry 4 p.m., today in Gifford Auditorium, Huntingdon B. Crouse Hall.

Born in County Galway, Ireland, Murphy spent the first seven years of his life in Ceylon. He was educated in Irish and English schools and was graduated from Magdalen College, Oxford, in 1948.

RICHARD MURPHY

His poetry has won several prizes, including the Guinness Award in 1962.

Murphy lives on the west coast of Ireland and owns and works the boat celebrated in his book, "The Last Galway Hooker."

He will meet Wednesday morning with Prof. Arthur W. Hoffman's "Form and Art of Poetry" class and with Prof. Philip Booth's poetry writing class that afternoon. Thursday morning he will be available to confer with individual students.

STEP FORWARD WITH FORD MOTOR COMPANY

An Open Letter to the 1965 College Graduate from Donald N. Frey, Assistant General Manager, Ford Division of Ford Motor Company

Donald N. Frey was awarded a bachelor's degree in metallurgical engineering by the University of Michigan in 1947 and a doctorate in 1950. One year later, he joined Ford Motor Company as manager of the Metallurgical Department in the Scientific Laboratory. In 1962, Dr. Frey was appointed assistant general manager of the Ford Division with responsibility for all engineering, product planning and purchasing activities. He is 41 years old.

America's automobile industry is in the midst of a challenging era, with prospects of an even more exciting and demanding tempo in the years to come. Ford Motor Company is determined to achieve leadership in all phases of its operation. This leadership promises to bring lasting success to the company, its employes and its stockholders.

It will take people to accomplish this objective. Engineering, finance, styling, marketing, product planning, sales—all require people with the knowledge, judgment and personal drive to avail themselves of the unprecedented opportunities offered by a great industry.

The automobile business is growing. More cars are being bought now than ever before. With increases in population and consumer buying power, even more will be bought in the future. Realizing this, Ford Motor Company seeks to attract college graduates who have the capacity to grow with the company and the market.

Right now, our plans call for employing about a thousand of the best 1965 graduates we can find, with all types of educational backgrounds. We need specialists, but we also need persons with broad liberal-arts training who can handle a wide variety of assignments. Actually, in our company, many graduates grow into jobs totally unrelated to their degrees. They have discovered that Ford offers intellectually challenging opportunities for those with the ability to seize them. We invite you to make the same discovery.

Contact your Placement Office and arrange to see our representative.

Levinstein to Address First Physics Institute

Physics and You is the topic of a talk to be given by Dr. Harry Levinstein at the first meeting of the student chapter of the American Institute of Physics.

The meeting is scheduled for 7:15 p.m., today, 206 Steele Hall.

Levinstein, professor of physics and faculty adviser to the group, received his doctor of philosophy from the University of Michigan in 1947. In addition to his teaching duties, Levinstein serves as solid state physicist and as consultant to the jet propulsion laboratory at the California Institute of Technology.

The purpose of the organization is to introduce incoming undergraduates to the field of physics. In future lectures physics will be discussed in relation to other fields such as zoology, biology and philosophy. All talks will be geared to the scientific minded layman.

All members and interested undergraduates are invited to attend.

Junior colleges employ nearly 28,000 teachers and administrators.

as a member of the House Judiciary Committee from 1946 to 1958.

On November 4, 1958, Keating was elected to the United States Senate. He is presently a member of the Committee of Rules and Administration, and the Republican Policy Committee.

Senator Keating recently described his Democratic opponent as "temperamentally and intellectually unfit to be a candidate for senator from New York."

Admittance to the lecture will be by ticket only, as seating space in the chapel is limited.

WAER (88.3 f.m.) will carry Keating's speech live.

Slocum Scene Of Closet Fire

Minor damage resulted yesterday when a fire broke out at 5:50 p.m. in the basement of Slocum Hall. The fire was extinguished in approximately 15 minutes.

Damage was confined to a supply closet. A classroom adjoining the fire area was undamaged.

Large quantities of paper cups, paper plates and other cafeteria supplies were destroyed by the blaze.

The Syracuse Fire Dept. estimated damage at "a couple of hundred dollars."

Six pieces of equipment, three trucks and three engines, fought the flames, according to fire officials.

Firemen noted that a much more serious blaze could have developed if the fire had occurred at a time when classes were not held in the building. Night classes are held at Slocum.

Classes continued on schedule in Slocum after the blaze, according to Security Police.

WAER Slates Drug Report

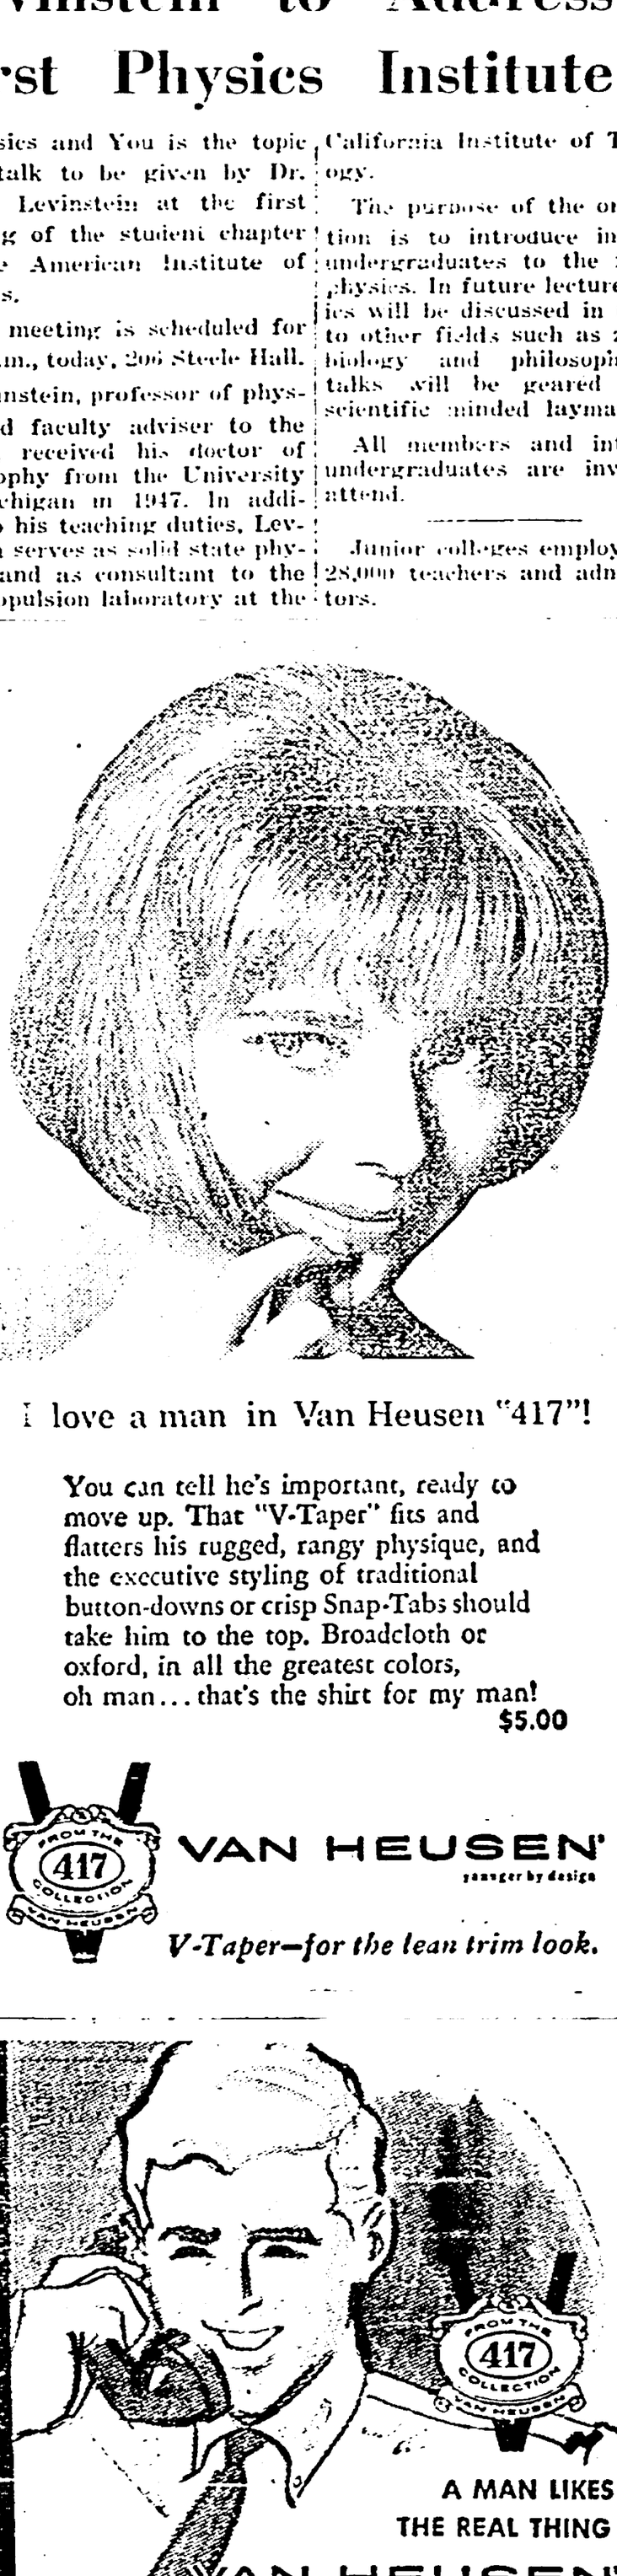
The program will examine the extent of the problem on the national level and investigate its scope in New York State and the Syracuse area.

Included in the report are confidential interviews with Syracuse University students directly involved, as well as comments from Dean of Men Jim G. Carleton, Assistant Dean of Men David Tatham and Mar- Also scheduled to appear are Arch Thaler, district attorney of Ithaca, and police officials jorie Smith, Dean of Women. and psychologists in Syracuse.



I love a man in Van Heusen "417"!

You can tell he's important, ready to move up. That "V-Taper" fits and flatters his rugged, rangy physique, and the executive styling of traditional button-downs or crisp Snap-Tabs should take him to the top. Broadcloth or oxford, in all the greatest colors, oh man... that's the shirt for my man!

TABBED FOR SUCCESS IN A VAN HEUSEN SNAP-TAB

VAN HEUSEN younger by design

Big things begin for the man who shows his know-how. He chooses shirts with the authentic styling of the Van Heusen Snap-Tab, for instance. There's no mistaking the crisp, neat cut of the collar, the smooth, business-like fit of "V-Taper" tailoring. It's the look most likely to succeed in executive circles. And with pretty girls.

And the button-down from the Van Heusen "417" collection is as authentic as you can get in traditional styling. The back box pleat and back collar button sold me, but it's the back hanger loop that really gets me. Add the softest collar roll going, the easy comfort of "V-Taper" fit and you've got my style. My price, too.

Security Works on Problem

about $6,800 was collected and 225 vehicles were towed away.

The students and faculty, it would seem, have found that their only solution to the situation is to park illegally.

Flaherty finds his staff is greatly affected by the parking problem at SU. "The university is expanding at a tremendous rate," he said. "The most difficult period is now and will be for the next six or seven years until the building progress has leveled off."

The problem is increased, Flaherty said, because of some 6,000 SU graduate students, many of whom are commuters, who need cars. People come from Watertown, Utica, Ithaca and other surrounding towns to attend the university.

These people, Flaherty said, must have a car to get here. They must find places for them along with about 6,000 staff and students who have registered cars.

"We can't go to street parking with the load of traffic these streets handle," Flaherty said.

Another problem to security police comes with football and visiting speakers. With about 40,000 added people on campus for each football game, security police must increase its staff to 50 men.

Guest speakers cause even further complications for security, both with parking and with safety of the speaker. Many city residents who would like to attend—and should be able to attend—cannot do so because of limited parking facilities.

The parking problem, Flaherty said, is causing a further threat to the university in that employees are becoming increasingly difficult to find. Many people do not want university employment because there simply is no place for them to park.

Security police will face an added problem when construction of the new physics building is begun. Flaherty said that relocation of faculty and staff parking will be needed to compensate for a loss of nearly 200 spaces. With relocation of these persons, changes will need to be made throughout the priority list.

These are but a few of the difficulties faced daily, weekly and seasonally by the security police. City police face much the same problems and more.

"The university area ranks next in coverage to the downtown business area," said Sgt. Francis Tysco of the city community relatons office.

St. Tysco said that police realize many years ago that the parking situation was becoming critical and looked for a way to improve it. He said, that the streets in the university area had not been meant for the type of use now demanded.

One suggestion was to discontinue parking, but it was decided that this should not be done because of the business district and the hospital. Instead, the system of alternate parking came into effect. This system also facilitates cleaning of the streets in the winter, while still allowing some cars to make use of on-street parking spaces.

Sgt. Tysco said that meters were installed to insure a turnover of parking spaces for the hospital, permitting visitors a chance to find spaces.

These systems were added to the other norms of legal driving in an effort to keep traffic flow and infractions in order.

"Unfortunately, posted rules were not always followed. As a last resort, police had to tow cars away. Parking tickets were not enough," said Sgt. Tysco.

Infractions and violations of rules are not the city police's only problem, although, according to Lt. William Webb of the traffic department, it is their biggest. Being on hand for football games, other sports events and when guest speakers come in not only an inconvenience for the city police, but Lt. Webb said, just shouldn't be at all.

"Our main purpose is to keep through traffic," Lt. Webb said. This task is only complicated by the other services the police must provide.

Although the city traffic bureau has been conducting a survey of the traffic situation, nothing definite has yet been decided.

So far, the bureau has done such things as assign more ing some signs and traffic silgnals and experiment with changing the use of some streets.

Blood . . .

according to Dayton Dewey, IFC blood drive chairman, medical and athletic excuses will be accepted and counted as donations from that house. Pledges are included in the counting.

Volunteers are needed by fraternity men sign in. For IFC to man the table where those houses that have members who do not wish to donate blood for reasons other than medical or athletic, the chairman will accept up to two volunteers from a house to man the table for one hour. This will count towards an actual donation.

ROTC members will be given merits for donations. Major Richard L. Ryan of the Army ROTC announced that the cadets will receive 10 merits, while Capt. Gustav S. von Wolffradt said that the Air Force ROTC detachment will give five merits.

Points for the Bill Orange Trophy will also be given for blood donation. Eacs freshman record of donations which may be included on the trophy application in the spring.

Students under the age of 21 must bring permission slips to Shaw at the time of donation. The entire process takes about an hour.

Kennedy Stresses

crowd estimated at 3,000 persons, the Democratic candidate cited the inroads started by the Kennedy-Johnson administration in 1961 into various problems and approaches to these problems.

Kennedy mentioned the Peace Corps as evidence of the positive approach to world situations. The organization, begun under his brother's administration, "indicated to the people of the world what we believe in and disprove their false theories of the American people," said Kennedy.

The senatorial aspirant devoted a major part of his outside speech to a castigation of his Republican opponent.

Kennedy questioned the incumbent's voting record on such issues as federal aid to education, public housing and the manpower retraining program. Keating voted against these programs, Kennedy said.

Kennedy concluded his outside speech with an affirmation of the existence of complex and diverse problems in New York similar to those of the nation.

"We have a responsibility to try to find the answers and a responsibility to help those who cannot help themselves," he noted.

✦ ✦ 'Right Down to the Wire' ✦ ✦

The following is the fifth in a series of questions and answer sessions between junior editor Howard Schneider and coach Ben Schwartzwalder.

Q—Behind 14-7 at the half, what did you tell the boys in the locker room to get them rolling again?

A—Well, the Penn State defense was pretty well established by the half, so we tried to reorganize and reinforce our blocking assignments. There was a lot of tension and pressure out on the field and we were calling some of our blocks wrong. We knew we couldn't let Penn State get out in front. When we're playing them every play is a big play. Records don't mean a thing when you're in the middle of a real good hitting game. You have to play right down to the wire.

Now momentum is a big part of football. They definitely had it as the half ended and it was our job to get it back. Fortunately for us we got the second half kickoff. Those two offside penalties and that holding penalty, however, put us in a hole again. If Smith didn't make that interception we would have been hurting.

Q—Why was our passing defense and offense so ineffective?

A—Simply, of course, we didn't throw well or catch well. On every pass pattern someone is open, but it doesn't make much difference if you can't execute the play. Our pass defense, particularly our rush, was a little late. If we were a step quicker we could have put the heat on Mr. Wydman. Penn State was throwing well, protecting well and their timing was excellent. We were having particular trouble with the end-over play, where the quaterback rolled-out and then hit their end over the middle. Also, often our halfbacks were picking up their ends when they should have been covering the first men coming out.

Q—Were you completely taken by surprise when Penn State faked the punt and threw the pass for a first down?

A—There are three ways to defense a punt. You can play it safe and send only one man deep and have your linebackers back. You can play it moderately safe or you can blitz in full force. Unfortunately at that moment I decided on the blizt and they in turn called the fake. With the score that close we should have played safe.

Q—Why isn't Floyd Little carrying the ball more, particularly why isn't he running outside?

A—Floyd is not carrying more because the defense won't let him. Saturday they were willing to give us short gain but they weren't giving Little the outside. We have to take what they give us.

Q—Will you continue to use Roger Smith at linebacker?

A—Yes, Roger will play right linebacker and we will use Murray Johnson in the middle. Smith has come a long way. He proved himself on kickoffs. When you make tackles on a kickoff or punt returns you're a football player.

Frosh Eleven Beaten

By NEIL KERR

Extra points provided the final margin Saturday as Syracuse's freshman squad dropped a 15-12 decision to the Navy Plebes at Annapolis. Though SU led most of the way, Navy drove 87 yards in the final two minutes of play for the winning score.

The loss was only the third in six years for frosh coach Jim Shreve and two of these losses have been administered by Navy. His overall record now stands at 20-3-1.

The Tangerines outgained the Plebes 269-218 in total yardage and held a 15-8 lead in first downs. But the passing arm of Plebe quarterback John Cartwright proved the difference. Throwing in a light rain, he manuvered his team 80 yards in three plays before halfback John McIntosh bulled over from the four yard line.

Prior to this score the two teams had taken turns scoring. SU got the first six points in the opening period on a six-yard run by halfback Ed Mantie.

Navy then went ahead two minutes later. Following a Cartwright pass play that covered 18 yards, Nick Metrokatsas booted the extra point.

Early in the fourth period Orange quarterback Rick Cassata passed 11 yards to Tom Coughlin for the Tangerines' final score. Syracuse then tried to pass for two extra points, but it fell incomplete. The Middies scored the winning touchdown play later in the period.

— ON UPI POLL —

Orange Drop to 8th

Apparently unimpressed with Syracuse's last-second 21-14 victory over Penn State Saturday, United Press International pollsters yesterday dropped the Orangemen to eighth spot on their weekly grid poll.

SU, ranked seventh last week, had to make way for Arkansas and Louisiana State, while moving ahead of Michigan.

With Texas bowing to Southwest Conference foe Arkansas, 14-13, Ohio State took control of first place, garnering 330 votes. OSU toppled Southern California Saturday, 17-0.

Advancing to second spot were the Crimson Tide of Alabama, who scored a hard-fought 19-8 win over Tennessee. Alabama earned 287 points.

Notre Dame jumped to third on the basis of its 24-0 blanking of UCLA. Arkansas bolted into fourth, folllowed by Nebraska, which posted a 47-0 triumph over Big Eight rival Kansas State.

Texas fell back to no. 6, followed by Louisiana State, Syracuse, Georgia Tech and Florida.

LSU conquered Kentucky, 27-7; Georgia Tech topped Auburn, 7-3; and Florida battered South Carolina, 37-0.

Syracuse and Texas ranked as the only once-defeated teams in the top 10.

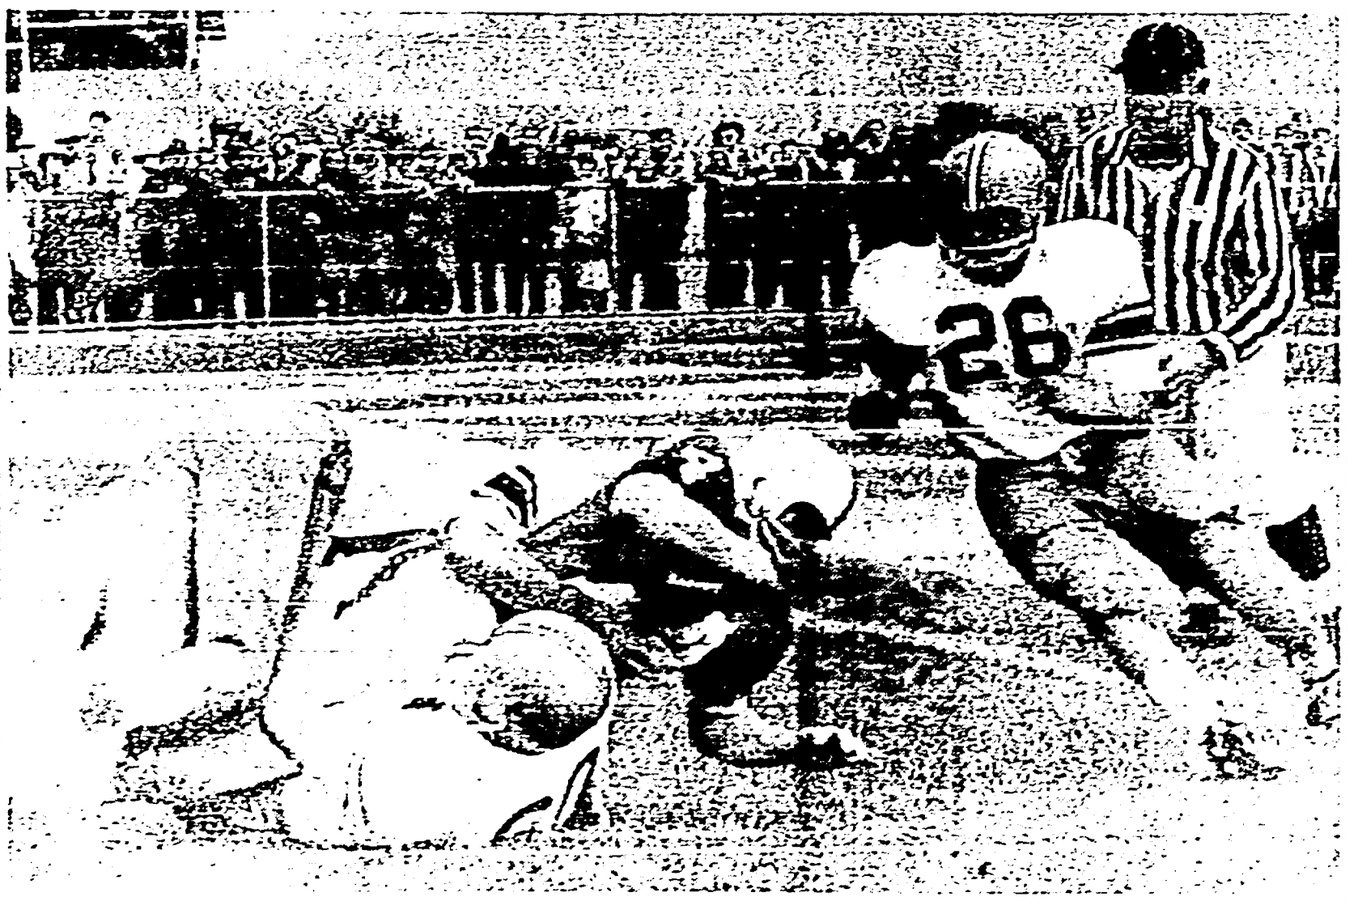
The second 10 lined up as follows: Florida State, Michigan, Illinois, Oregon, Duke, Arizona State, Purdue, Wyoming, Utah State and Oregon State.

Games involving the top 10 this weekend:

-Alabama vs. Florida.
-Notre Dame vs. Stanford.
-Arkansas vs. Wichita.
-Nebraska vs. Colorado.
-Texas vs. Rice.
-LSU vs. Tennessee.
-Syracuse vs. Oregon State.
-Geogia Tech vs. Tulane.
-Florida vs. Alabama.

UPI Poll

1. Ohio State (4-0)
2. Alabama (5-0)
3. Notre Dame (4-0)
4. Arkansas (5-0)
5. Nebraska (5-0)
6. Texas (4-1)
7. LSU (4-0)
8. Syracuse (4-1)
9. Georgia Tech (5-0)
10. Florida (4-0)



Stop That Lion

Hill guard JOE DZIEKONSKI (60) gets help from an unidentified teammate in halting Penn State's BOB RIGGLE (14) two yards short of paydirt during the second quarter of Saturday's game at University Park, Pa. Moving in at right is SU's TEDDY HOLMAN. The Nittany Lions scored their initial TD two plays later, but the Orangemen emerged victorious, 21-14.

Beaver Defense Rugged

By JIM KLURFELD

In five games this season no team has scored more than one touchdown against Oregon State, while no team has held Syracuse to less than three. But the chances are that one of those statesments be disaproved after the Orangemen battle State at Portland Saturday.

Joe Szombathy, SU scout and end coach, described the Beaver defense this way at Monday's press conference: "Their linemen and linebackers compose the toughest eight we'll have to face this year."

Tommy Prothro, OS coach, speaking by phone to the conference, agreed that his defense has been consistently strong, but also noted that his offensive hasn't been a world beater.

"Jack O'Billovoch, our right linebacker, is an outstanding ballplayer," Prothro explained. "He moves real well, diagnoses plays well and is a sure tackler, plus the fact that he has made a number of important interceptions this year."

Oregon State has a four and one record, losing only to Big 10 member Northwestern, and beating Colorado, Baylor, Washington, and Idaho.

In past years Beaver teams have had outstanding offensive stars such as Heisman Trophy winner Terry Baker in 1961 and All-American end Vern Burke last year. But this season they don't have the outstanding players and place kickers. Steve er and place kicker Steve Clark has done a lot of State's scoring.

Hill coach Ben Schwartzwalder, after a last second victory over Penn State, doesn't plan many changes. The personnel most significant one is that John Krok, a 205-pound sophomore, will move to starting right tackle.

The coach also indicated he might make a few switches in his defensive backfield, but didn't elaborate.

Replies to Allegations RFK Made Regarding Stands in Congress

By JONATHAN RUSSELL

Sen. Kenneth B. Keating took up his position at the speakers podium Tuesday night.

Responding indirectly to changes levelled against him by his Democratic opponent the night before, he said:

"I am on the record in every issue. I have never ducked or dodged any issue and I never will."

SEN. KENNETH KEATING

The incumbent New York Senator spoke to a crowd of about 1,100 students in Hendricks Chapel. He said he felt that the real issue in the election was "my record in this campaign."

Keating made an analogy between a college student of the class of '65 and student of the class of '68, saying that "experience does count."

The Republican senator stated his qualifications were the record he established during his 12 years in the House of Representatives and six years in the U.S. Senate.

Keating cited his voting record on four issues that he said were deemed the most important bills by President Lyndon B. Johnson and Senate Majority

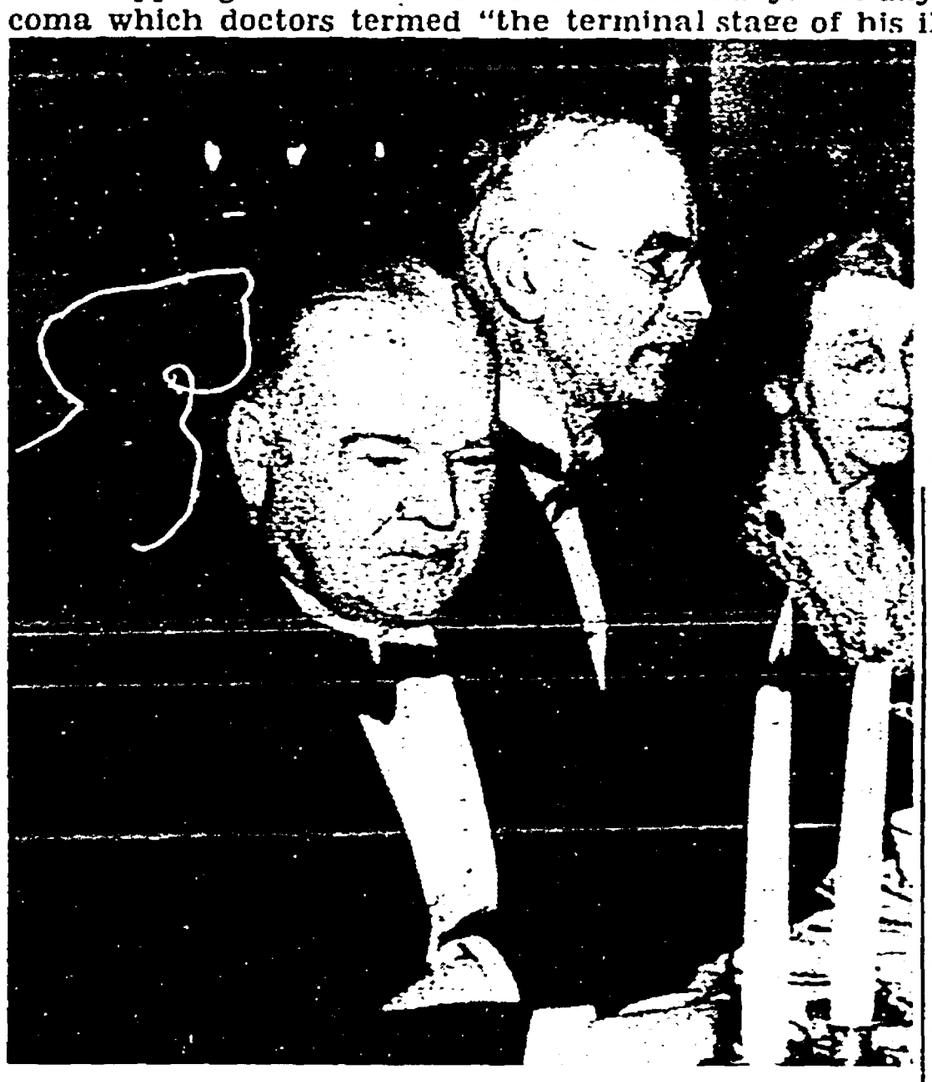
Hoover Dead at 90; Dedicated Maxwell

The Grand Old Man of the Grand Old Party is dead.

Herbert Hoover, 31st President of the United States, died Tuesday morning at the age of 90.

His death came as the result of massive bleeding which began in the statesman's upper gastro-intestinal tract on Saturday. Monday night he lapsed into a deep coma which doctors termed "the terminal stage of his illness."



At his side in the Waldorf Towers apartment where he had lived for 30 years were his two sons, Herbert Hoover, Jr., former undersecretary of state, and Allan Hoover. His wife, Lou Henry Hoover, died in 1944.

Mr. Hoover was not hospitalized at any time during his illness.

Mr. Hoover visited Syracuse University as the guest

Parking Series-III

Committees Seek Solution

This is the third in a five-part series by DAILY ORANGE junior editor Pat Tracey investigating the parking situation on the Syracuse University campus. Today Miss Tracey outlines the roles played by the University Hill Corp. and the university parking committee in solving the parking problem.

By PAT TRACEY
Junior Editor

The administration of Syracuse University is perhaps most closely touched by the parking situation. Like a bone in a pack of dogs, it is torn from every direction — trying to fulfill the needs of everyone and answer the complaints of all awhile still doing what is best for most.

To combat what seemed an inevitable problem, the university established a parking committee. This seven-man organization includes director Roland P. Graeber, assistant university marshall; James V. LaTorre, assistant to the vice president for administration and research, Milton R. Howard, assistant professor of athletics and physical education; Noreda A. Rotunno professor of landscape architecture department; Leo J. Graszler, assistant director of safety and security police; and one student.

Trying to solve day-to-day problems, make best use of available space and plan ahead are the main concerns of the committee, according to a spokesman.

The committee cannot issue orders but rather must make recommendations to the various university departments including the University Senate. It also hears complaints and attempts to resolve them through proper channels.

Through complaints and infractions recorded by the security police, the committee is able to keep abreast of the changes needed to improve the parking situation. Such plans and ideas are discussed at their meetings, held about every two weeks.

The parking committee is not the only group interested in the improvement of the campus and area parking situation. About two years ago a group of interested persons formed a private, non-profit corporation to study and possibly improve the university hill area. This is the University Hill Corp.

KBK Supporters To Give Reasons

A Hill professor, a TV correspondent and a Democratic mayor will discuss "Why we're for Keating" at 8 p.m. Thursday in Kittredge Auditorium, Huntington B. Crouse Hall.

Democrats and Independents for Keating will present a panel including Dr. Norman Balabanian, professor of electrical engineering, Lisa Howard, American Broadcasting Company correspondent, and E. Dent Lackey, mayor of Niagara Falls.

Sen. Kenneth B. Keating is the Republican junior senator from New York State seeking re-election.

Balabanian is a former Democratic committeeman and co-chairman of Onondaga County Democrats for Keating.

Miss Howard is co-chairman of the state Democrats for Keating. Famous for getting an exclusive interview with Cuban leader Fidel Castro, she was suspended by ABC for announcing support of Keating on the air.

Lackey, also a Democrats-for-Keating leader, narrowly lost a 1962 Congressional race to William E. Miller, Republican vice presidential candidate.

SUCE Symposium

NY Senate Race

The basic issues of the New York State senatorial campaign will be the topic of debate at 7:30 p.m. today in Maxwell Auditorium.

The debate, sponsored by the Syracuse University Committee on Equality, will feature Dr. Ralph Ketcham and Dr. Klaus Heberle, both of the Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs.

Speeches Monday and Tuesday on the SU campus by Sen. Kenneth B. Keating and Robert F. Kennedy will be the basis of discussion.

Ketcham, chairman of the American Studies program, taught at the University of Chicago and Yale University before coming to SU.

He received his masters from Colgate University and his doctorate at Syracuse.

Heberle teaches in the citizenship and political science departments. Teaching on the Hill since 1960, he received his doctorate from the University of Chicago.

Visiting Irish Prof Reads Own Work

By CAROL SCHNEIDER

"One of the few contemporary poets whose awareness takes a narrative form, he is really concerned with what goes on," noted Prof. Donald A. Dike in introducing Irish poet Richard Murphy.

Murphy's public reading of his poetry opened the 1964-65 school year season of the Syracuse University Visiting Writers Series Tuesday.

The series, now in its fifth year, brings writers of poetry and fiction to read from their works and to confer informally with students of writing and all others interested, said Dike, associate professor in the English department.

Recipient of the 1962 Guinness poetry Award, Murphy read five selections from his book, "Sailing to an Island," including the title poem, "The Cleggan Disaster," "The Poet on the Island," "Connemara Marble," and "The Women of the House."

"The Poet on the Island" was written as a tribute to the post Theodore Retkey, who visited me five years ago before a long illness during which time he was hospitalized, commented Murphy.

"Connemara Marble" is a short lyric attacking the antique manufacturer and the business in general, Murphy noted.

Murphy prefaced each poem with a short history of the work, acknowledging his inspiration and explaining his reason for writing.

The visiting writer will meet today with Prof. Arthur W. Hoffman's "Form and Art of Poetry" class and with Prof. Philip Booth's poetry writing class. Thursday morning he will be available to confer with individual students. Arrangements may be made through the En-

A Free Press And the Board

Ken Auletta, one column over to the right, says the Daily Orange has failed to comment on the new constitution of the Board of Student Publications. He is right, only because we felt more pressing matters needed discussion first.

We are not overjoyed with the new constitution, as we imagine no one is thrilled about being kicked out of a position he once held. Someone, somewhere, apparently feels the board will perform its functions more capably if representatives of the publications are not included on the board.

We agree with Mr. Auletta, for the most part, that the spirit of the language in the new constitution is not encouraging to a free press, even though one clause specifically states the university's committment to such.

Of parallel interest to us are some other points not touched on by Mr. Auletta. For example, the constitution requires the editor-in-chief maintain a 1.5 cumulative average, a standard stricter than that imposed on the president of the student body.

We are flattered if the university considers us of more importance and necessarily more academically-oriented than the president of the student body, but this is incongruous with a university philosophy which includes the students (and their leader) as an integral part, and thereby of great importance. In any complex such as the university, the press must necessarily remain a trifle detatched, if it is to perform its functions capably.

Upsetting us also is the lack of any provision for the editors to have a voice in the selection of their successors. No one is best qualified to know the capabilities of a potential editor than his peers or immediate superiors.

Yes, we agree with Mr. Auletta that the wording involved in sections of the constitution are not conducive to a free press, but we must also point out to him that other sections of the constitution firmly guarantee such a free press.

We are not ecstatic that we may be replaced at a moment's notice and we question the interpretation of the phrase "best interests of the university."

We have always felt, and will continue to feel, that the best interests of the university will be served by a guarantee of the right to print the truth, presenting the news objectively and reserving comment and personal opinion for this page.

The Daily Orange operates under complete editorial freedom. Nothing in this newspaper is read by members of the faculty or administration before it is printed. There is no possible way to operate more freely.

Infringements on the free press of the Daily Orange in the past have been few and far between. If the new constitution lacks any one factor, it is the definition of a free press in the university.

We cannot share Mr. Auletta's views that the constitution borders on the definition of "encyclical." We would rather call it a paradox.

To Believe In a Dream

Today's generation of college students knew Herbert Hoover only as an inactive former President. They associate with him the depression and poor times. They often fail to refer to his writings and his deeds.

For Herbert Hoover, if he made no other contribution to the American society, believed in the American dream. He believed in the American way of government and the American way of life.

He believed in the American individual. He believed that individual men and men united together could control their destinies.

He was the "Great Engineer," the veritable savior of Belgium, the Secretary of Commerce who won his name through clean government and good government.

But events beyond his control threw the nation and the world into despair. By the time he had resolved how to cope with the problems, he was voted out of office. And only because he thought the American system had the capacity to bounce back.

Many men will go down in history as being greater men than Herbert Hoover, but few will be remembered as having more of a committment to the American ideal.

O Say Can You See

The Church

By Ken Auletta

Archbishop John S. Hafer slowly read the papal bull which was squeezed between his fingers to a congregation of bishops and deacons eager to hear the content of Pope William Pearson Tolley s latest edict.

It's subject was the new constitution of the Board of Student Publications and those in the church were not a little curious to be told what their duties were to be.

This was Thursday past, and Dean Hafer was reciting from the rules of that board, which lays on top of all student publications, whose announced function it is to "maintain standards for Syracuse University undergraduate student publications consistent with the best principles of higher education and professional journalism."

There was, beneath the cordiality, a mood of suspense; as there is whenever one is on the brink of learning what he is soon to believe. There were nearly 20 people attendance, but only 10 of these would be privileged to serve on the board. Who would they be?

Five members of the administration's hierarchy were ordained: Dean Hafer, the dean of men, the dean of women, the dean of the School of Journalism, and the faculty advisor to student publications. Five student leaders were baptized: the president and vice president of Student Government, and the presidents of the three senior honoraries. In all, not an assemblage that would inspire even a man of mild ecumenical views.

Also seated were thee dietors and or representatives from the staffs of each of the undergraduate publications. In previous years, the editor and the business manager and a member of the staff were voting members of this board which sits in judgment of their affairs.

Now, they were removed; being left only with an admonishment (Article 3, Section 7): "The editor-in-chief and business manager of each authorized student publication shall be obliged on pain of dismissal (boldface is mine) from their post to present themselves to any meeting of the Board of Stident Publications to which they are called."

Ours is a church that does not allow confusion as to who is boss.

Archbishop Hafer granted that during the course of his reading questions would be accepted—reminding the congregation that "this board does not regard itself as a censoring organization." But, reportedly, he was quick to note that "if there is anything in the publication that is embarrassing to the university, there may just not be another issue."

Like most large corporations, Syracuse University doesn't believe in private enterprise; only its enterprise.

Before adjournment, only one question was asked of the chairman. This maudlin flock of student leaders prefers privacy efore undressing; not to mention that theirs is a faith in church that is not shaken by mere experience.

This was Thursday. On Friday, one can excuse the absence of Daily Orange editorial comment by blaming Mr. Khrushchev. But the only excuse for Monday's absence of comment were two editorials entitled: "Hello, Bobby" and "Albee and SU." Tuesday's excuse was "A Guy Named Hutch" and "Parking."

And so the constitution of the Board of Publications slips into the canons of law that are the clamps of every member of the university church. It, like Dean Holme's questionaire of a year ago, shall be a private matter between the university and itself. This is the world of Yossarian.

The Daily Orange like the Daily News is interested in pictures. But were it interested in all news, it would have followed the light of the New York Times and printed at least a partial text of what, if it were less arrogant, could be called an encyclical. The partial text of this remarkable constitutional document would read (the boldface is mine):

Article III, Section 1: "It shall be a function of the Board of Student Publications to elect the editor-in-chief... and to remove from office, at any time, any student so elected (and/or any staff member appointed by any student so elected) when it deems such action to be necessary to serve the best interests of the university or of the publications involved."

Article III, Section 3: "It shall be a function of the Board of Student Publications to supervise the editorial administration of the student publications by reviewing general policy, examining editorial procedure and investigating other aspects of reporting, editing or editorial activity deemed necessary; at the same time entrusting matter of editorial policy, news policy, taste and judgment to the staff, as in appropriate on an uncensored student publication operating in a nation in which freedom of the press is an esssential of democracy."

Article III, Section 6: "It shall be a function of the Board of Student Publications to grant or deny petitions for the establishment at Syracuse University of new undergraduate student publications not previously authorized...and to withdraw such authorization from any student publication, at any time, whenever the board deems such action to be necessary to serve the best interests of the university."

Article VI, Section 2: The prospective editor's application should include "Suggestions for changes of policy or procedure and names of persons the candidate intends appointing as senior managers and editors."

Article VI, Section 7: "The winning candidate shall not choose his managers until his personnel proposals have been approved by the chairman, the student publications advisors, and if so requested, by the Board of Student Publications."

Article VII, Section 2: Applications for those desiring to initiate a new publication "shall include an outline of the proposed editorial policy, the proposed staff, the prospective operating budget, and a detailed dummy of the first issue."

Article VIII, Section 1: "This constitution may be amended at the discretion of the Chancellor, or by a two thirds majority vote of the members, provided that no amendment shall become effective until approved by the Chancellor of Syracuse University."

We have, then, the policy of our church towards protestants. Sam Girgus, three years back, was an editor who dared to play Martin Luther. Our church was more successful than was the Catholic church, promptly beheading Sam at the close of one semester before his terrible disease could spread.

For the university church, like other authoritarian strutures, is less concerned about ends than it is about means; what is truly important in our church is not the quality of the work one does for publications, but that fact that he is working at all. Our first allegiance is owed our church, and not its principles.

Our Pope, and our Cardinals and our Bishops, have so long been allowed to believe their own voices that they now sincerely confuse their words with God's. For this presumption no educator should be lightly excused, least of all — ours.

LETTERS

Keating

To the Editor:

The editorial in Oct. 15th's DO omits certain pertinent facts about Senator Keating's visit and lecture on the campus Tuesday. The original invitation stated that each candidate would address the citizenship classes in Hendrick's Chapel. The lectures were supposed to be of an academic nature. The entire visit to campus was planned as an educational and academic experience, not a political circus.

We felt that the field house is too far for many students to attend and would therefore discourage participation. Also Senator Keating's tight schedule prevented us from changing any plans at this time.

Originally we did not think and were not informed that the chapel would be completely filled by citizenship students. We thought the public would have ample room. We arranged to have Gifford and Kittredge for the overflow attendance. If there were students who were anxious to attend but are reluctant to do so because of not having a seat, we urged them to attend the rally on the chapel steps at 6:45. We had Tedd Browne, a folksinger, provide entertainment and Sen. Keating purposely arrived early to personally meet and speak to the rally outside.

We would also like to thank the individual dormitories for extending their invitations to the senator. However, his schedule prohibited him accepting any additional engagements. Those students extending invitations to the senator were encouraged to come to the rally to meet him personally.

We would like to re-emphasize that this was visit primarily for educational purposes, not for a political extravaganza. In order to give the general public a chance to question and hear Senator Keating, he held a press forum at the Syracuse Press Club after his campus visit..

Co-chairman, Students for Keating

POLICY ON LETTERS

The letters column is maintained for the expression of opinion by readers. However, the Daily Orange reserves the right to edit letters for grammar and good taste or to reject letters.

Letters should be typed and preferably no longer than 250 words. All letters must be signed with names and addresses.

Names will be withheld on request.

One-Man Show

EMLYN WILLIAMS, English actor, author and playright, will be in Syracuse at 8:30 p.m. Thursday at the Regent Theatre. Williams will perform in a one-man show of selections from the English author of another century, Charles Dickens. Tickets are available at the Regent Theatre box office for $2.50, $3.00 and $3.50.

New Teams To Compete On Syraquiz

The Pi Kappa Alpha team, consisting of Robert Farrar, John L. Ruth, Anthony Felicetti and Walter Carey, defeated Phi Alpha with Bud Titsworth, Richard DeRosa, Stephen Fox and William Starr in the Syraquiz match on WAER last Thursday. The score was 140 to 130. This third victory retired Pi Kappa Alpha until the finals at the end of the semester, at which time they will compete with other three-week champions.

This Thursday two new living centers will face each other. Shaw 1 East with Carolyn Spiegel, Marsha Gilman, Jane Reback and Dorothy Rosenbaum will compete against Elyse Gershman, Mary Jo Putney, Alice Gross and Susan Corey of the Ambassador. Syraquiz is presented every Thursday night at 9 p.m., 88.3 on your FM dial.

Two SU Coeds Chosen For Science Symposium

Two Syracuse University undergraduate women have been chosen to attend the Massachusetts Institute of Technology Symposium on American Women in Science and Engineering on Friday and Saturday.

The two—Jeanne Rader and Thea Benzelewski—were selected from lists submitted by chairmen of departments in engineering and the sciences.

The conference is being sponsored by the MIT Association of Women Students.

Miss Rader is a junior majoring in biology, while Miss Benzelewski is a senior majoring in mathematics.

Among the purposes of the conference will be to describe the opportunities and problems confronting young women planning professional careers in science and engineering. The conference also will attempt to stimulate the interest of young women in the science and engineering fields.

A third purpose will be to review and publicize the present potential of women in science and engineering.

Opinion Poll

Students Present Views: Vehicles Definitely Needed

By BONNIE GENTILE

"A car is not a necessity; it is a convenience," according to Frederick Diener, '67. Various students interviewed recently on the question of the necessity of a car on campus agreed with Diener.

Diener also said, "For commuting or working students a car is necessary; socially, it is a convenience. If the city were eliminated of its bad elements, and a stronger student union provided a more complete social life for the undergraduate, there would be no necessity for a car."

Many of the students expressed the feeling that a car is not necessary on campus because everything is centrally located within walking distance. Furthermore, the campus parking problem discouraged many in thinking about owning a car in the future.

Frederick DuBois, a senior and commuting student, said, "a car is a necessity for all commuting students. A car is not necessary to those living on campus, because everything is close at hand."

"It is not necessary for a girl. It is more of an inconvenience in view of parking facilities," said Juliette Milutinovic, '67.

Karen Johnson, '68, said "No, a car is not a necessity, but the university should provide transportation."

Arthur Lawrence, a freshman, spontaneously answered, "darn right it is a necessity." He said he intends to drive a car next year.

Some of the students said they feel strongly that a car is necessary for every day living on campus. Jack Burr, '67, said emphatically, "Yes—a fellow can impress a girl with a flashy car; also the nicer places are in (down) town."

Bill Cox, '68, deems a car an "absolute necessity," even in the freshman year. He suggested that, "car owners pay an initial fee for parking and that the university should try to increase parking facilities."

Nelda Miller, resident advisor for Washington Arms freshmen, holds that a car is not necessary to the undergraduate. "Everything is at hand including bus service downtown," she said.

Miss Miller, a graduate student, operates a car on campus and considers it a convenience. She said "I am not sure a car is a necessity to a graduate either, but I am lucky to have one."

William Higins, '67, said "a car is not necessary because living centers are within walking distance of the classrooms."

Bernard Lafurgue, '68 commented, "New York motor insurance is too high to afford a car and besides a car would take time away from studies." He also said "It would be convenient because it's a long walk from the College of Forestry to Kimmel Dining Hall.

Judith Nonnenmocker, '66, said "No, after three years of walking to so many places, I don't think it is necessary to own a car on campus. If you have a car you are more apt to take time away from academics."

AWS to Hold Fashion Show

"Fashion Fling" sponsored by the Association of Women Students, will initiate Campus Chest Carnival festivities from 2-3:30 p.m., Saturday in Gifford Auditorium, Huntington B. Crouse Hall.

Casual and formal styles from Engel's Dress Shop will be modeled by university coeds. Engel's will give a 10 per cent discount card to all members of the audience. Admission is $.25.

Contests Top Forestry Fete

All forestry students will be excused from classes today to attend the annual barbecue sponsored by the State University College of Forestry.

The students will gather at 9:30 a.m. at Green Lakes State Park for the event.

Contests included in the activity of the day include canoeing, rope-climbing, 100-yard dash, tug-o-war, baseball throwing and wood chopping. Cider and barbecued chicken will be served at noon.

Douglas Kapple, David Hulse and Michael Storey arranged the barbecue. Dr. Edwin H. Ketchledge, associate professor of forest botany, is faculty advisor.

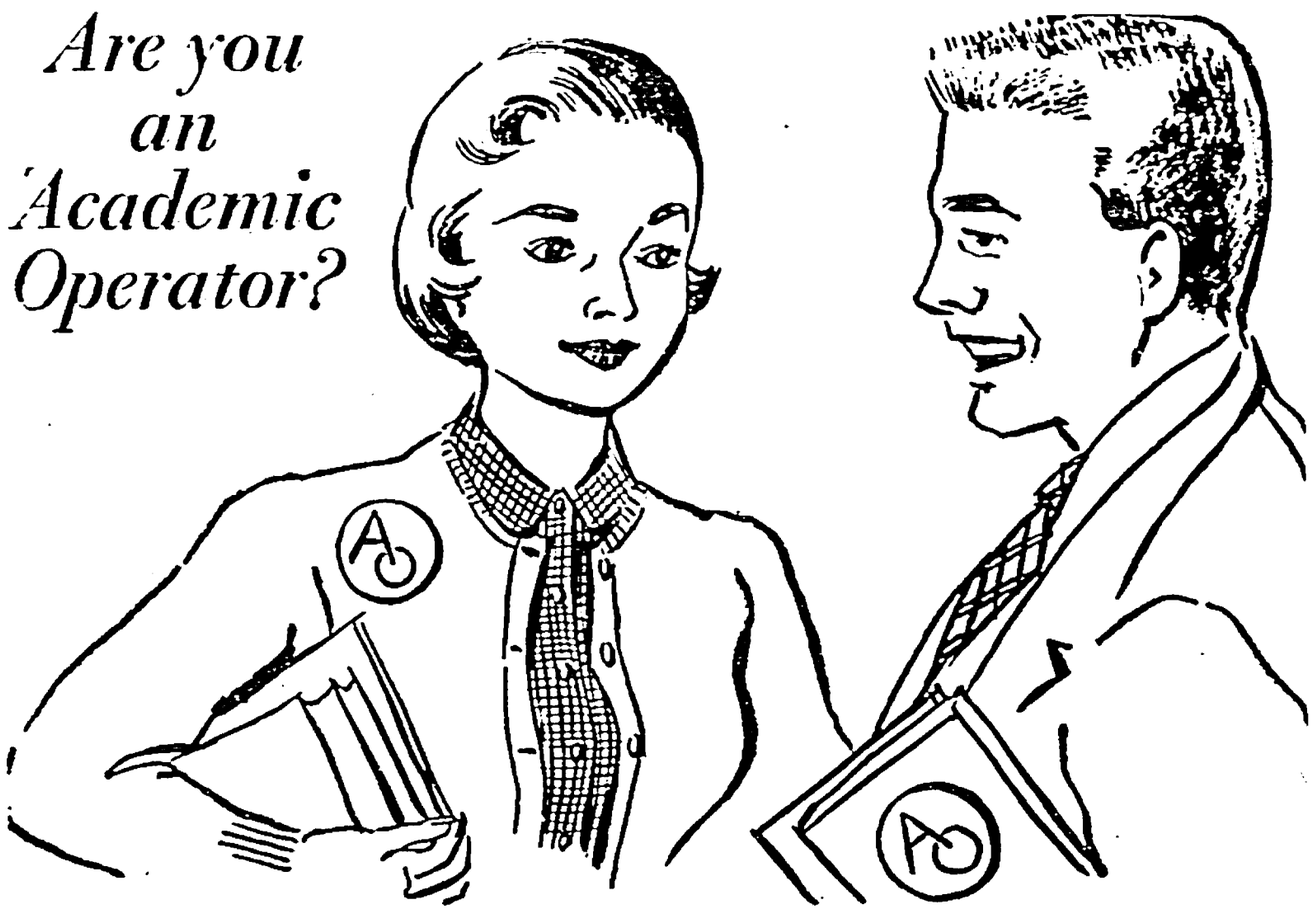
Are you an Academic Operator?



As a student, do you know the do's and dont's of suave academic behavior?

Check your savvy with this little quiz:

1—Do you find it hard to carry on an intelligent conversation with your professors?

2—Can you find your way around the college library without groping?

3—Do you hesitate to ask questions in class?

4—Do you pooh-pooh the free lectures, speeches and programs that are offered?

5—Are you constantly having to borrow filler paper, ink . . . all the supplies you need for efficient work?

If you answered yes to any question but #2, you're lacking in student savoir-faire. An easy start on being a smoothie, though, is to make sure you're always stocked with supplies that help keep your work smooth and productive. We carry stacks and stocks of notebooks, filler paper, ring binders . . . everything you need to make your course work easier. Come and stock up today.

Committees Seek Solution

Members include neighborhood residents and property owners, the Thorden Park Neighborhood Council, University Methodist Church, Temple Society of Concord, the Crouse-Marshall Businessmen's Assn., Temple Adalh Yeshurun and Grace Episcopal Church.

Also included are Crouse-Irving Hospital, Syracuse Memorial Hospital, Hospital of the Good Shepherd and Syracuse University.

One of the corporation's subdivisions is the traffic and parking committee.

This past year, the committee initiated a vast study of the parking situation in the university hill area. Presentations were made by persons representing the different groups affected by the problem including LaTorre.

Among the many things discussed at the meetings were:

1. The one-way traffic experiment conducted last year on College place.

2. Problems of access to the U.S. Post Office branch on S. Crouse avenue.

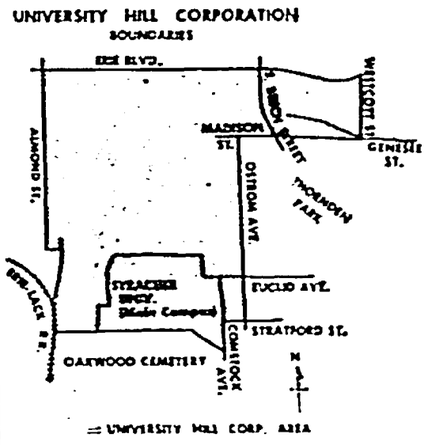
3. Area security problems.

In its annual report, the committee noted that "its (the committee's) primary function is informational and coordinative in nature. The traffic and parking committee makes no attempt to propose or formulate "solutions" to the complex matters of traffic movement in the University Hill area."

As part of this informational nature, the committee is now preparing to begin an 18-month study of the problem under a General Neighborhoood Renewal Plan (GNRP).

David Beers, executive director of University Hill Corp. said "GNRP is a prelude to urban renewal. All forms of government levels will be involved."

When plans are completed, they must be submitted to the city for approval, Beers said. If passed, the city will be obligated to undertake urban renewal projects in 10 per cent of the planning area on a geographical basis, Beers said. This area will most probably include some property owned by the university.



Herbert Hoover

of Chancellor William Pratt Graham on Nov. 12, 1937 when he gave the main address at the dedication of the Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs.

President Johnson has ordered an official mourning period and has issued a proclamation that flags be flown at half staff from all government buildings for 30 days.

Mr. Hoover's body will be flown to Washington where it will lie in state under the rotunda of the Capitol building. Burial will take place on the top of a small hill in West Branch, Iowa, overlooking the cottage where he was born. There will be no formal ceremony at the burial.

Born Aug. 10, 1874 the son of a blacksmith, Mr. Hoover earned his fame and fortune as a mining engineer. Before being elected to succeed Calvin Coolidge in 1928, he served in the cabinets of Presidents Warren G. Harding and Coolidge.

Mr. Hoover served only one term as President. The Democrats blamed him for the Wall Street crash and depression which took place during his presidency. In 1932 he was defeated by Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

Embittered at FDR, Mr. Hoover did not enter the White House again until after his successor's death in 1945. This next visit was at the invitation of President Harry S. Truman.

At this time he returned to public life. After the war he conducted a world survey on post-war food needs. He later headed several organizations on the organization of the executive branch of the federal government.

"The training of men and women in right understanding of politics of high purpose is not beneath our universities," Mr. Hoover said at the dedication of the Maxwell School.

"Intelligent discussion and debate of issues, the constructive criticism of government wrongs, the search for truth and workable method, is the only road to progress."

Mr. Hoover's final farewell to the GOP came in 1960 at the Chicago convention. "Unless some miracle comes to me from the good Lord, this is it."

He never attended another convention. His failing health prevented him from attending the 1964 Republican convention in San Fransisco. Sen. Everett Dirksen read the last address which the former President made to the public.

Harry S. Truman and Dwight D. Eisenhower are the only former chief executives still living.

Placard Design Contest Held

A placard cheering design contest is being held for freshmen with a prize being offered for the winning entry.

The design, to be used at the Pitt-Fall Weekend football game with the University of Pittsburgh, should cover an area of 62 by 18 rows. The available colors are red, white, blue, orange, yellow and green.

Entries should be submitted to Stan Rubin, box 36, Dell-Plain Hall by Sunday. For additional information, contact Rubin at ext. 2028, 2029.

J-Honorary Plans Rush

Junior, senior and graduate women who intend to enter journalism on a professional basis are invited to attend the Theta Sigma Phi annual rush tea at 7:30 p.m., today in the Newhouse Communications Center lounge.

Dr. Frank Munger, chairman of the political science department of the Maxwell School of Citizenship, will speak on the "role of the press in the 1964 election."

Theta Sigma Phi, national journalism fraternity for women, welcomes those women who have about a B average in the School of Journalism and about a C plus average in the College of Liberal Arts. It is not necessary to be a member of the School of Journalism to be a member of Theta Sigma Phi.

SCHOLARS FOR KEATING

'An Informal Organization'

As election day draws nearer, Syracuse University students the being bombarded by student political organizations asking for support of their candidates.

By DONALD LAWLESS

This is the final part of a three-part series explaining the purposes, goals and future plans of these groups.

An all-faculty organization formed recently is the Onondaga County's Scholars for Keating. Dr. Michael O. Sawyer, associate professor of political science, described the group as "an informal organization."

"It was formed mostly as a matter of convenience for us. We do not hold regular meetings as do the other organizations on campus," he said.

"We provide workers and researchers and now and then give speeches," added Sawyer.

SU Vice President and Dean of Public Affairs Kenneth G. Bartlett holds membership in this group.

Other charter members of the faculty include: Ronald H. McDonald, assistant professor of political science; and Dr. Ralph L. Ketcham, professor of American studies and citizenship.

The newest group on campus, the Democrats and Independents for Keating was formally launched at a luncheon last Friday at the Mayfair Inn.

Dr. Norman Balabanian, professor of electrical engineering, was named the county co-ordinator for the organization.

Democrats and Independents for Keating is a county organization affiliated with the statewide Democrats for Keating.

"It was organized to appeal to a special group of voters—mostly Democrats, said Balabanian.

A rally for Keating Thursday at Kittredge Auditorium, Huntington B. Crouse Hall, is the main project planned for the near future, according to Balabanian.

"The reasons I support Keating fall into two categories," said Balabanian. "Since their personal views on issues have very little difference, we must take into account other considerations," he added.

Arguing that Kennedy can do more for the state because the administration will be Democratic, holds no merit within our two party system, said Balabanian.

"A second consideration is the salvaging of the Republican Party after Goldwater and his crew are out. We need moderate Republicans like Keating to do this," Balabanian noted.

"The election of Keating will help "to overthrow the political domination of Democratic bosses in New York State," noted Balabanian.

Balabanian added that he was "uneasy with Kennedy's handling of the justice department when he was attorney general.

Political Figures Flood Syracuse

The issues of the national and state election campaigns will continue to be brought into Syracuse during the next few days by more top-ranking politicians from both parties.

Today Mayor Robert F. Wagner of New York City is scheduled to speak at 7 p.m. at the Camillus Democratic dinner at Three Rivers Inn.

Arthur Schlesinger Jr., head advisor to the late President John F. Kennedy and to President Lyndon B. Johnson, will debate with John Roosevelt, son of late President Franklin D. Roosevelt, on the merits of the candidates for the U.S. Senate, at 8:30 p.m. at the Jewish Community Center, 223 E. Genesee St.

Barry Goldwater Jr., son of the GOP presidential candidate, is slated to speak Thursday at a Town of Clay Republican dinner at Three Rivers Inn.

The Democratic candidate for the vice presidency, Hubert H. Humphrey, has a tentative date in Syracuse on Thursday.

Rep. William E. Miller, Republican candidate for the vice presidency, will visit Syracuse on a whistle stop appearance at 12:25 p.m., Saturday. The train will pull into the East Syracuse terminal of the New York Central system.

Saturday night, F. Clinton White, national director of the Citizens for Goldwater-Miller, will speak at a Goldwater dinner at LeMoyne Manor.

Undersecretary of Commerce Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr., will address a Democratic First Voters rally from 5-7 p.m., Tuesday, in the Hotel Onondaga.

Sister of senatorial candidate, Robert F. Kennedy, Mrs. Jean Kennedy Smith, is scheduled to speak at a Women's Democratic breakfast Tuesday at the Hotel Syracuse.

Lib Convo To Heat Sills

Dr. David Sills, editor of the University School of Library the Social Sciences, will speak Science colloquim at 11 a.m. at the fourth weekly Syracuse Thursday at E. I. White Hall.

The Frosh-'Mature Lot'

This year's group of freshman appear to be "a more mature lot," to Director of Admissions Lester H. Dye. He said in an interview recently with the Daily Orange he was pleased with the class of '68.

Students are looking for more challenging things in college, he noted. In general, the College board scores and class rank were somewhat higher in this freshman class than in previous years, he said.

In speaking of the criteria for admitting students, Dye said, "We, as a committee, placed the emphasis on the extracurricular pattern." Academic foundations of the students admitted were stronger than ever before. Dye estimated that about 90 per cent of the freshmen have had at least three years of one language or two years of two languages.

"We never established minimums in admitting students," commented the admissions director. "The applicants do this." The well-rounded student was sought by SU this year more than in previous years, he said.

Leader Mike Mansfield (D-Mont.) in the last session of the Senate.

The bills mentioned were on the questions of civil rights, the nuclear test ban treaty, the anti-poverty bill and the tax cut.

Referring to the problems of civil rights, Keating pointed out his long record in this field. He said he first introduced a bill on civil rights for Negroes in the Rochester area in the House of Representatives in 1947.

He gave his views on the reasons for his support of the nuclear test-ban treaty.

"I believe that our country must consider every avenue for preserving the peace of the world," he said.

Stating his opinions on the anti-poverty bill for which he voted, Keating said that "a nation as wealthy and as resourceful as ours should put money in the hands of those

He also mentioned his positive stand on the tax cut bill but voiced regret that a measure he supported which would alleviate the tax burden placed on parents who were paying for college tuition was not passed.

Before his speech in Hendricks Chapel, Keating spoke briefly on the chapel steps to a crowd of about 900.

Brothers, Shaw

OS Backfield OK

Syracuse has faced many tough backs this grid campaign, including such notables as Gale Sayers and Larry Zeno.

But it's doubtful that any Hill opponent so far boasts the overall backfield strength of upcoming foe Oregon State.

The powerful Beavers rated 20th in the country, are directed by sophomore quarterback Paul Brothers, a sensation in his initial season.

Brothers ranked as a prep All-American and has stolen the starting job from last year's incumbent, Gordie Queen.

Piety scout Joe Szombathy likened Brothers to SU's Walley Mahle. "He has good speed, shiftness and is dangerous on roll outs and options," Szombathy noted.

At least one member of the OS backfield needs no introduction—he introduced himself last year in Archbold Sadium by racing 60-odd yards for a touchdown.

The player, of course, is junior fullback Charlie Shaw.

In the flanker-back spot will be Olvin Moreland, a 179-pound sprinter from Los Angeles. He caught seven passes for 81 yards in 1963.

In his first three contests this season, he gobbled up 12 aerials for 186 yards and a touchdown.

But with all the talk about offensive backs, one should not fail to mention the defensive secondary.

Safetyman Danny Espalin has picked off five enemy tosses in five games so far. He is credited with 16 interceptions throughout his three-year varsity acreer.

Other defensive backs of note are Dan Sieg, a two-time letterman, Tim Osmer, Jim Smith and Grim.

6-0, 202-pounder was named PAC back-of-the-week for his efforts in Oregon State's upset win over Washington.

Szombathy called Shaw "one of the best fullbacks in the country." The Beaver star has been ailing with a sprained ankle, but should be ready for the Orange.

Backing up Shaw is another breakaway threat, Booker Washington, who netted 269 yards rushing last season. Cliff Watkins, another top-notch ball carrier, is currently sidelined with a knee injury.

Offensive tailback responsibility for the Beavers will probably fall on the swift legs of Marv Crowston, a converted quarterback.

He is supported by rookie Bobby Grim.

Chickens Prepare For Gridiron Clash

By BOBBIE MARX

The Daily Orange Chickens, gladiators of the gridiron, swing into action this weekend as they face radio station WAER in the season's lidlifter.

Halfback, end and coach of the WAERwolves, Jon Galinsky, issued the challenge to the DO today.

Action is scheduled for 10:30 a.m. Saturday on Lew Carr Field. Coach Galinsky is seeking revenge for last year's triumph by the scratching fowl over the wolves.

"Our members are howling in their dens and confident that they will devour the Chickens," he said.

DO personnel, however, expect a repeat of the 1963 game WAERwolves, 8-7.

The newsmen have been brilliantly organized for this weekend's game, what with bed checks and special training sessions and feedings.

The Chickens will operate in three units—Whites (offense), Bandits (defense) and Go team (a two-way wonder).

Although the players have not been fitted into their spots, position sizeups leaked out today during a special conference.

They are as follows: ends—Cronauer, Schiffrin, Rossky, Viviano, Card and Wesche; centers, Leaping Lew Prombain, Jacoby, Allen and Krengel; quarterbacks—Kerr, Lazar ard Porte; halfbacks—Schneider, Auletta, Klurfeld, Rudnick and Schwimmer.

The wolf team, boasting less depth but more talent, shows Galinsky, Caso, White, Graef, Holl, Abelson, Eberle and Bakst as its standouts. Positions have been withheld for security and poll release reasons.

Scout Cronauer has handed over the coaching reins to King Dan Ritey, since he is visiting Oregon State this weekend to check up on the paper squad there (possible bowl opponent).

A lack of communication last week saw the Penn State Cowards journey to Syracuse, while the Chickens flew south to University Park. Therefore, no game was played between the two clubs.

Cautious preparations have been undertaken to avoid a similar occurrence this weekend.

The Chickens are coming!

Soccer

World Sport

To the Editor:

With the possible exception of the Olympics, the final round of the Jules Rimet Cup soccer tuornament is the most important sports event in the world.

With the exception of the United States, I venture to say that the popular appeal of soccer is superior to that of any other sport or athletic event.

The writer of this letter was disheartened by the administration's decision to drop soccer from Syracuse inter-varsity competition three years ago.

It meant for him an unfortunate regression towards parochialism, certainly nothing that would have suggested that Syracuse University, at least the Maxwell School, is a diffusion center for the attitude of overseasmanship.

The point is this — the growth of soccer in the United States is apt to increase the contact of Americans with soccer-loving foreigners and is apt to increase the appreciation of Americans for things foreign.

American football is a great game and so is baseball. But to the ears of the foreigner to hear that the New York Yankees are baseball's world champions would not make much sense at all. He would ask: When was the world baseball championship held? Where?

He, on the other hand, would apt to say that the Brazilian national team is the the world's soccer champion and that it won the championship in Santiago, Chile, in 1962.

The foreigner may be able to speak to great lengths about soccer teams the world over — Tottenham-Hotspur, England; Real Madrid, Spain; Torino, Italy; Dynamo, Russia; Fluminense, Brazil; etc.

Soccer should certainly be played by a large university in the United States. It should be a part of the educational curriculum not simply because it is a great sport but because it is an international sport. Universities should aim at expanding horizons rather than at narrowing them.

Last year the Syracuse University Soccer Club, with several foreign students in its ranks, beat by a wide margin a team made up of experienced Latin American students.

Neither talent nor interest is lacking at Syracuse University. I think that the time is ripe for this university to be represented again officially by a varsity soccer team.

Soccer may then not be big business for the university, but education and a lot of fun.

Nance Tabbed for All-East

JIM NANCE

Syracuse fullback Jim (Bo) Nance yesterday was named to the Eastern College Athletic Conference weekly All-East team.

Nance racked up 104 yards on 23 carries in pacing the Orangemen to a 21-14 victory over Penn State Saturday. Bo now boasts 473 yards in 95 attempts, a 5.0 average, for five games.

Others named to the grid eleven were opponents Bill Huber, Penn State end; Brian Generalovich, Pitt end; Jack Lentz, Holy Cross quarterback; and John Leone, Boston College guard.

Joining Nance and Lentz in the backfield were halfbacks Ralf Stegmann of Rutgers and John Dockery of Harvard.

Additional linemen included Navy's Don Downing at center; guard Stan Maliszewski of Hagberg (Massachusetts) and John Nossal (Columbia).

Nance joins Hill defensive aces George Fair and Gerry Everling as all-East recipients. Rookie Floyd Little was named the East's soph-of-the-week earlier this year.

Blood Drive Totals Drop Below Quota

By SUSAN STRANDBERG

"You're given before? Does it hurt? Is it bad?" a pale freshman girl asked a six-foot male donor who stood in front of her in line.

"No. It is nothing at all," he said with cool assurance.

The scene of this conversation was Shaw Dormitory recreation lounge. The time—any time between 10:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Wednesday or today.

The blood mobile set up operation at Syracuse University again this fall staffed by 21 Red Cross volunteers, 25 Syracuse coed aides, and 14 paid Red Cross staff.

"It is much slower than a year ago this time," said Mrs. E. Marion, assistant chief nurse in charge of the operation, Wednesday.

A quota of 400 pints a day was set by the campus planning and arrangements committee. Wednesday only 173 pint were given. Fraternity men accounted for 82 pints, ROTC accounted for 35 pints. Twenty-four potential donors did not qualify.

Last fall 235 pints were donated on the first day and 306 the second day.

Prospective donors should avoid eating eggs, fried food and fats, such as butter, ice cream and mayonnaise, during the four hour period before donation.

Regular meals should be eaten It is desirable that donors eat something three hours before donating.

Students under 21 must bring official yellow permission slips at the time of donation. The entire process takes less than one hour.

Ketcham, Heberle Debate Personalities and Issues

By AMOS MOSCRIP

Personalities as well as issues in the New York State senatorial race were argued Wednesday night in a debate between two professors from the Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs.

Dr. Ralph Ketcham, chairman of the American studies program, spoke for Sen. Kenneth B. Keating while Dr. Klaus Heberle defended hopeful Robert F. Kennedy.

The senator's record "is a good one," Ketcham said. "And the people of New York State are assured he is an effective legislator. If Keating has been criticised for not being a leader, it is the result of his being a freshman senator.

"Keating's election is also necessary for the "health of the Republican Party." The greatest way to refute Goldwater Republicanism," Ketcham said, "is for widest possible split in the New York State vote given Goldwater and Keating."

A third reason Ketcham gave for Keating's re-election is "to refute the Kennedy machine." Ketcham said he felt a "qualified Democrat" from New York might have had a good chance to carry the state in this year's senate race.

Heberle summed up his reason for backing Kennedy in the question, "Which of the two can do the best job in the U.S. Senate?" Heberle said he felt Kennedy was better qualified "on his past record and on his utterances during the campaign."

"Kennedy is more vigorous, more dynamic, and even more ambitious," Heberle said. "And I consider ambition in the public service laudable."

Heberle dismissed the charges that Kennedy is running on his late brother's name.

"If it is proper for Keating to run on his record of past achievements," Heberle said, "then it is also proper for Bobby Kennedy to run on his record. The last three years were not only John Kennedy's record, but also Robert Kennedy's record."

The debate was based on the campaign as it stands at the present, including the speeches made by Keating and Kennedy on the Hill Monday and Tuesday. Personalities were also a major part of these speeches as well as the issues both candidates see as the questions of this race.

Police Require Snow Tires

Syracuse University motorists, be sure your car has snow tires this winter or get ready to tangle with the law.

A new Syracuse ordinance requires that during the months of November-March a motorist may be charged with an offense if his car becomes stalled on an emergency snow route artery. This applies only if the car is not equipped with snow tires or tire chains.

Such a stalled vehicle "may be caused to be removed by any policeman," according to the Syracuse City Council.

The expense of the car's removal will be paid by the owner.

Parking Series-IV

Students Eye Problem

This is the fourth in a five-part series by DAILY ORANGE junior editor Pat Tracey investigating the parking situation on the Syracuse University campus. Today Miss Tracey presents the opinions of Hill students on the parking problem and its solution.

By PAT TRACEY
Junior Editor

Some students don't always see a problem with university parking. For them, it's a matter of first-come, first-served and the meek will inherit an unparked car. Rules and Regulations to the wind!

They are not concerned with the cost and disturbance involved in putting 6,000 cars in 3,000 spaces as long as their cars are one of the ones in the first 3,000.

Others are concerned. These students can comprehend the ramificiations of allowing such a situation to exist and are willing to voice an intelligent opinion and, perhaps, act to lessen the problem.

Both opinions stem from the fundamental question of whether students really need a car.

The main train of thought seems to be that, although cars are not essential, they are a desired part of the academic-social atmosphere present at a university. Because of this, many students do not abide by reasoning that suggests students could do without cars.

"Cars are definitely necessary," said junior Stephanie Nicholson who does not have a car. Their function, she said, is to permit students "just to get out of here. Also, they are a convenience to get downtown."

Miss Nicholson said she feels "cars should be allowed to park within the university area." As for where the cars would go, she suggested that "the university ought to provide more parking spaces. I'm sure there is space around here that could be used."

Arlyn Hertz, a freshman, said "I think cars are more important for boys than for girls. If a girl has a car, it's a great convenience, but guys really need them more."

As for accomodating parking facilities, Miss Hertz said:"If they must cut down on the number of cars, they should devise a fair way with limitations depending on the student's academic average."

Lucille McLean, another freshman, said that "in some circumstances, if a student can afford to have a car, he should be able to have one." Although she did not suggest any specific method she said "unless the university can think of some other way, there is nothing to do but limit the cars."

A sophomore coed voiced a surprising opinion.

"I don't think cars are necessary and I don't want one. I don't think sophomores should have cars."

She did agree that some students might have better cause for a car than others and said that if any limitation is done, "handicapped, commuters, those working out of campus and guys should have first rights."

She also mentioned that limitation would not only help the parking problem but also "make walking a lot less hazardous."

A junior non-owner said that "although cars may not be a necessity, they are certainly a convenient luxury at Syracuse."

He suggested that improvement of the situation would call for "a first change of eliminating all sophomore driving."

Douglas Long, a senior with a car, said "If you're at a university, an institution of higher learning, you take a lot of re-

Festivities Slated By Campus Chest

By DIANE DEVEINES

For the first time Campus Chest is providing an entire weekend of fun to raise money for local charities.

Festivities begin with a movie Friday night and end with 2 a.m. curfew extensions Sunday morning.

Student Union is sponsoring a movie, "Operation Madball", starring Jack Lemmon, with donations going to Campus Chest. The film will be shown at 6, 8 and 10 p.m. Friday, at Gifford Auditorium, Huntington B. Crouse Hall.

Nearly 30 booths sponsored by fraternities, sororities and living centers will open at 7 p.m. Saturday on the quad. The booths include games of chance, a kissing booth and a car destruction booth.

One living center is sponsoring a rickshaw ride, according to Gail Rhein, booth chairman.

Refreshments will be available at the coffee house booth. A band will play on the steps of Hinds Hall. Three rides will be available. Bumper cars and an airplane ride provide thrills, while the ferris wheel offers a view of the entire campus.

Ronald Spyer, carnival chairman, has announced that the carnival will run until 1:30 a.m. Coeds will have curfews extended until 2 a.m. by paying one cent for each minute of the extension.

Saturday night's activities will

A Cloud Of Dust

Syracuse University got a first-hand view of practical politics earlier this week, and those of us who listened to both Sen. Kenneth Keating and Robert Kennedy today stand a bit confused as to what the issues are.

For Kennedy, who had first crack at the students, repeatedly made accusations directed at Keating and the senator's voting record, which Keating then refuted the next night.

The question we ask is who is telling the truth, or are both shading it a bit and are there no real issues in the campaign save the problem of which of the two can better serve New York State.

Both men seem perfectly willing to debate, but both accuse the other of backing out. Both want face-to-face debates, they said, but Kennedy claimed Keating vetoed such a plan.

Both men apparently have the same ideas, except for apportionment of state legislatures, where the two differ to a degree. Yet that is scarcely the issue here.

After hearing both men, our feeling is unchanged. Kenneth Keating is the better man for New York, for he understands and is familiar with New York's problems, and does not have to be continually briefed by aides.

Sen. Keating knows the problems of the state intimately, for he has served his state in Washington for 18 years. As he explained Tuesday, he once voted against an aid to education bill because New York was not getting its fair share of the funds and he favored a more equitable alternative proposal.

He is responsible, conscientious and dedicated, and he deserves a return trip to Washington.

Those Who Care

If a primary goal of politicians is making friends, then we know why upstate Democrats fare so poorly.

The exhibition put on by local Democratic Party leaders, candidates and workers at the fieldhouse Monday night was appalling at best.

Apparently through a misunderstanding on the part of the party, someone in the machinery had printed 1,500 "tickets" to Monday's speech. When the 1,500 ticketholders and the 2,000 citizenship students tried to fill the 2,200 seat fieldhouse a shortage of seats necessarily ensued.

When they were refused admittance, party officials screamed bloody murder.

One told a Daily Orange reporter, "These kids don't vote. Why are they here?" Another was overheard to say, "We were doublecrossed."

So most of the party workers left. Some remained to brave the cold with the multitude of students who had waited several hours for a pre-speech rally for the late-arriving candidate.

We feel sorry for the man who asked why these "kids" were there even when they didn't vote. We don't vote, sir, but we care.

Ours Is . . .

By Jay Litwin

Ours is the generation that the future of mankind must depend upon. The fate of over four billion people rests within the minds of those chosen to make the crucial decisions of the coming times; a time that will necessitate decisions that were beyond the realm of human comprehension a generation ago. And the practice field for those decisions are the classrooms, quads, lounges, etc. of today's universities. On the practice field of Syracuse University, how well does the student prepare for the monumental decisions facing him in the coming years? How is he practicing to shape the thought of the world?

"Jay, I think I'm gonna get my ears pinned back in my poli. sci. course."

"How come?"

"Cause, 50 per cent of our mark is based on class participation, and I haven't said a word all year."

"But isn't poli. sci. one of your favorite courses? Why don't you speak up?"

"Well, you see, I sort of like Goldwater, but if I say it I'll be like ostracized from the kids in the class. I can't afford that!"

"But, John, this is something you believe in, isn't it? Regardless of the mark in question, don't you owe it to yourself as a person to support what you believe in?"

"Yeah, Jay, but you don't understand. The kids won't like me."

* * *

"Timmy, why don't you put socks on?"

"Hey, man, this is the bit."

"But aren't your feet cold?"

"Sure, baby, but it's cool. It's cool. All cool guys do it!"

* * *

"Jay, let's hit T.C. and down a few."

"Nah, I think I'll waive it today. I don't feel well."

"So whattaya gonna do?"

"I dunno. I'll find something."

"Well, I dunno. Everybody's gonna be there. You know, like it always is. You just gotta be there. See ya."

"Jeez, Jay, it took the guys in the house longer than we expected, but we finally "molded" last year's freshmen. Now we're really brothers. Can't even tell us apart anymore. Great, huh?"

* * *

"Andy, what are you grinning about?"

"Aw, I just moved into the dorm and did I find a real ghoul. The kid's unbelievble."

"Why, what's goin on?"

"Well, you know, he's just unbelieveable! You know last night we're all sittin around, and some guys get hungry and you know what this guy does? He volunteers to go down to the dingleman to get stuff for everybody. And then today, one of the guys has to go downtown, so he asks this ghoul, and of course the ghoul takes him. We're gonna tool this guy something fierce. God, is it funny. Hey, why don't you come over and like play with his mind awhile, you know."

"No thanks Andy. I'd rather hang around HBC with cool guys like you instead of talking to a no-mind like that."

"Look man, don't get facetious about it. You know how it is. You gotta tool this guy. Anyhow, if I didn't the other guys would think I was a ghoul, too. You know."

Ours is the generation that the future of mankind must depend upon.

Buses

To the Editor:

On October 20, a question was put to Sen. Keating regarding the problems of the busing of school children out of their immediate neighborhoods, and the stand which his opponent, Robert Kennedy, had taken the night before. The senator clarified his views on the subject by stating that both he and his opponent were against long-distance busing. However, the question itself was received poorly by the audience in Hendrick Chapel because they believed that a gross error had been made by the student asking the question.

I would like to take this opportunity to say that the question was misconstrued both by the students present and by Sen. Keating himself. On Oct. 19, in his address at Manley Field House, Mr. Kennedy stated that while he was opposed to long distance busing, he did favor a heterogenous school population and short distance busing in certain cases.

Normally, the transfer of students to a near-by school makes little difference but in a place like New York City, with its diverse racial and ethnic sections; the transfer of a student to a school only a few blocks away might make the difference between a white or a mixed school, for example, and a school in Harlem, with educational facilities generally regarded to be inferior.

Thus the senator was asked, in effect, to comment on this fine, yet significant point and on the stand taken by his opponent — not whether he was against long distance bussing, solely, but busing of any distance where a child might be taken out of his immediate neighborhood and placed in a markedly different and inferior environment for the purpose of "mixing" only.

Library

To the Editor:

The administration claims that the only thing standing in the way of longer library hours is a lack of librarians. It seems to me that a simple solution can be found for this problem. Certainly, the number of students that would like to use the libraries at the times at which they are now closed is limited.

I suggest that, if just one library could be kept open at these hours (to include, perhaps, Saturday night, Sunday morning, and weekdays from 11-1), this would probably be sufficient to meet the needs of most of these students. Further, a large increase in manpower would not be necessary.

Traffic

To the Editor:

As students of Watson East, we would like to write an open letter to the Syracuse traffic department. We are very much concerned over the traffic light which is installed at the corner of University place and College place on the Syracuse University campus. The way this light is arranged, with a right turn arrow, there is always a steady flow of autos on the corner. Hence, it is next to impossible to cross the street without jay-walking. Further, all the moving cars make it rather dangerous, especially at night, to cross the road.

We are sure we speak for many other people in this area who also must face the menace of this corner. Plus, we hope action will be taken to remedy this situation as soon as possible. Personally, we would recommend a standard light with a walk button device.

Thank you for space in the Daily Orange.

Emlyn Williams To Present One-Man Show

A one-man show of selections from the works of Charles Dickens will be given by Emlyn Williams at 8:30 p.m. today at the Regent Theatre.

Williams, one of England's most successful actors and a playwright and author himself, has adapted Dickens' words making each vignette a complete piece. Adaptations from such novels and stories as "Our Mutual Friend", "Pickwick Papers" "A Tale of Two Cities" and "Christmas Stories" will be heard.

The evening with Dickens is the second such tour that Williams has made. The first one occurred 10 years ago.

Last seen as Pope Pius XII in the controversial Broadway play "The Deputy", Williams also published his autobiography "George" which was a best seller of last season.

His plays, "The Corn is Green" and "Night Must Fall" have been staged and filmed on both sides of the Atlantic. The new film version of "Night Must Fall" stars Albert Finney.

Last season Williams appeared on Broadway as Sir Thomas More in "A Man for All Seasons." His motion picture credits range from "Ivanhoe" to "Dolwyn".

Tickets for the performance are available at the Regent Theatre box office for $2.50, $3.00 and $3.50.

Drama Review

by Seth Shapiro

On Tuesday and Wednesday night "Who's afraid of Virginia Woolf?" was presented at the Regent Theatre by a national touring company.

This play is concerned with the malaise inherent in modern life. Despite its comical lines and actions, however "Virginia Woolf" is not a comedy, but a tragedy in the truest sense.

The plot is concerned with the moral and emotional disintegration of two couples on a small college campus. The principal couple is a professor of long-standing and his wife.

They are constantly at odds with each other, sometimes to the point of violence. The other couple is a young biologist and his spouse.

The play opens at 2:30 a.m. Sunday. George and Martha, the older couple are entertaining Nick and Honey, the biologist and his wife. From the beginning the strain in George's marriage shows, and shortly explodes into full-scale war.

The play is well-written and moves rather quickly although at times there was an excess of extraneous action which hindered its message.

The seeming comedy which ran through most of the play was merely a vehicle which helped to bring the tragedy in the lives of the characters to the surface. One laughs at the play when performed but upon reflection wonders what there was to laugh at.

The acting for the most part was very fine. Vicki Cumming as Martha, the middle - aged daughter of the dean and wife of George played the role very well.

Kendall Clark as George although stiff at times gave an admirable performance.

Briarly Lee as Honey came the closest to living the part that we have ever seen. Her portrayal of a young, immature girl was sheer stage magic.

Donald Briscoe although good in action played the part of the biologist with a certain inflexibility which stunted the plays growth.

There was some problem in the acting of the fight scenes. The actors seemed unreal and this feeling hampered the effectiveness.

Despite these small problems, the over-all efect of the play is excellent. "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" is a fine play performed by a competent cast.

'Odyssey' Interviews RFK

Robert F. Kennedy, Democratic candidate for New York state senator, will be interviewed by "Odyssey" hosts Jon Merdin and Jeff Zients on this Saturday's show.

The extension division of the State University College of Forestry at Syracuse offers more than 100 free films and slide sets for use by New York State groups.

Other features will be: an interview with Bud Ballew, WNDR disc jockey, and an interview with an SU student who used to be personal bodyguard to the Shah of Iran. Jeff Zients will sing a duet with Bobby Darin on "Artificial Flowers." "Odyssey" is on every Saturday afternoon at 1:30 p.m.

Turner

To the Editor:

Mr. Turner's observation that "We wander through college and through life as faceless, emotionless automatons" may be an accurate, though shabby, description of himself and his associates, but his temerity in publishing such a fustian essay fraught with other distortions and halting generalities which concern his limited view of the campus population for which, as I infer from his choice of pronoun, he presumes to be spokesman, tries my tolerance.

The results of this election might possibly indicate that Barry Goldwater, "that foolish, but character filled man," (would that I had the space to impeach this self-contradiction!) does not stand for our parents' generation.

And I am not certain any one man ever stood for any generation. However, I would prefer to think that people such as Albert Schweitzer, Jonas Salk, Louis Armstrong, Hemingway, Faulkner, Clarence Darrow, and Robert Frost might recommend their generation.

Moreover, the most naive romantic would not, I should suppose, endorse the beginning of another war simply because the instigator set out to destroy the world with zeal and conviction. Pilate had it, as did Napoleon, the Nazis and the Ku Klux Klan. Perhaps the columnist views respectfully those who were "interested" enough to kill each other in the Civil War, an enterprise whose cause, in spite of the animation and bloodshed, still remains in dispute, and a millstone about the neck of the American consciousness.

Those people were able to "take a stand." Mr. Turner's idealized ardor is usually the natural ally to imprudent and responsible judgement which, in turn, engenders headlong and disasterous consequences.

Apathy exists in this age, but other generations had it. Is it not reasonable to expect that history is unable to record its incidence by dint of its nature? No era will ever be galvanized by any one issue or ideology.

History indicates this to be true almost a priori. Some will fight for civil rights, while others would have us believe they are fighting for peace.

In all fairness, I must confess that the article "Nada, Nada, Nada" reflects remarkable assiduous and candid self-examination, and self-ef facing humility, but my obdurate self-dignity does not permit me to concur with Mr. Turner's appraisal of the campus, in toto, as apathetic and "simply existing." It is also notable that the hours spent by the columnist in a freshman English class were not totally wasted. His facile ability to make literary allusions to this material can be compared with the Devil's proverbial talent in citing scripture to prove his argument.

The columnist's distinction between college life might suggest that he himself lacks the spirit or emotional commitment to his present occupation whose universal absence he laments. But I hopefully suspect that this distinction is the result of a literary indiscretion.

In conclusion, I would heartily suggest that the columnist give his views more rigorous thought before he endows this campus with them. I am certain that while Mr. Turner reads this essay there are others on this campus who are privately, but no less actively, thinking, writing, reading, and working in an attempt to improve themselves before they begin to pan society. These people will be remembered.

Rationale

To the Editor

I would like to congratulate Dan Ritey in his article "In Which They Hope So Serve" on his poor rationalization of why he would note vote for Sen. Goldwater.

Mr. Ritey believes that Goldwater's ideas are "warped" and that he is a "misguided idealist and an unsophisticated bully boy." And let us not forget about the frontier ideas of Sen. Goldwater. Mr. Ritey falsely accuses Goldwater of these ideas, and of many other ideas and believes without any justifica- of many other ideas and betion for doing so. He also builds up Johnson as a big man, but still he does not give any reasons.

It seems to me that if it weren't for the Davey Crockett's and Wild Bill's, and everybody was like Mr. Ritey we might still be living in the original thirteen states, if they were still here.

Now let us admit to our self that many people are afraid of having a strong country, and that's why they're voting against Sen. Goldwater. It is not the fact that they want to vote for Johnson: it's just because he is the only other man in the race.

I sincerely hope that the next time he writes an article for the DO that he first sit down and put some reason behind his words, instead of hopping to a typewriter and blindly pushing some keys.

Flag

Walking across the quad Monday, I realized that my previous letter to the Daily Orange last spring, on the proper display of the United States flag, had been a futile effort. Not only is the flag being constantly displayed during rainy weather, but also the appearance of the flag at the present time is even more disgusting than it was last spring.

Monday the flag was obviously sopping wet, but even worse, it was clearly torn and ragged. I was not the only one to notice its condition. A fellow student in my living center commented on the situation saying, "I would be willing to have the university spend some of my tuition money to purchase a new flag."

As soon as possible, the organization which displays the National Ensign in front of Hendricks Chapel should invest in a new flag, and furthermore should be more conscious about its proper display.

Bookstore

To the Editor:

I think it ironic that the university bookstore provides the student with a locker so that his books won't be stolen while he is supposedly lifting articles inside the the store. What is wrong with these students who help themselves to books belonging to others? An honest student can not safely leave his books on the floor at the entrance for fear they won't be there when he returns after struggling through the crowded store to buy his supplies. This is the height of frustration!

Syracuse Receives African Manuscripts From Noted Historian

Rom Landau, historian and authority on North African affairs, has given Syracuse University his collection of manuscripts, notes, correspondence and other source material.

Landau's papers will be preserved in the manuscript room of the university's main library, according to Chancellor William P. Tolley, who made the announcement.

Biographer of kings and author of books dealing primarily with Moroccan affairs, Landau is professor of Islamic and North African studies at the University of the Pacific, Stockton Calif.

The Rom Landau collection will be available to persons working toward advanced degrees or researching North African culture, government and history, Tolley said.

The collection should also be valuable to the Peace Corps training program at Syracuse University and to the many African students on campus, he said.

Landau, who has traveled extensively in North Africa and the Middle East, wrote the international best seller, "God is My Adventure" (1935), which won him wide acclaim.

Correspondence between Landau, and the late King George of Greece concerning "Search for Tomorrow," another of his works, is part of the collection, as are papers relating to Landau's experiences as unofficial adviser to and biographer of the late King Mohammed V of Moracco and the original manuscripts of his "Hassan II, King of Moracco."

Correspondence with other world figures such as Eleanor Roosevelt, the late President Kennedy, J. B. Priestly, C. Day Lewis, Sir Stafford Cripps and Noel Coward also are included.

A complete shelf of Landau's 42 published works plus translations into Arabic, Danish, Dutch and French are in the library at Syracuse. The collection also contains notes for an unpublished book, "A summer in North Africa" written in 1961.

Born in Sussex, England, Landau lived under the British flag almost all of his life. He first came to the United States in 1952 to help Morocco seek independence from French rule.

Landau served as the director for area studies for the Peace Corps in a Moroccan project from 1962 to 1963 and has helped teach Peace Corps volunteers assigned to Morocco.

Pader to Discuss Motion Pictures

Students with theatrical ambitions will have a chance to learn about how to succeed on Broadway when Norman Pader, area representative of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, speaks at 10:30 a.m. today at the Regent Theatre.

Pader's talk, "A Behind the Scenes View of Motion Picture Production", will analyze the opportunities in the motion picture business, show how movies are different from the Broadway theatre and explain how an actor can succeed in the Broadway theatre.

A 12 minute movie will be shown following Pader's talk. A sequence from the picture "The Young Lovers", the film will show the evolution of a love scene from an actor's point of view.

A former director of radio and television for the American Heritage Foundation, Pader previously was connected with the NBC network. He has also written several radio network dramas.

Vuo Praises African Project

The vice president of the Syracuse University African Students' Assn., has expressed his thanks for the $152,000 project to be started by the Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs.

The grant was intended for the "support of research and evaluation of Tanganyika's large-scale village-resettlement program."

Frank Vuo, a native of Tanganyika, directed his appreciation toward Dr. Fred G. Burke, director of SU East African Studies.

Vuo said he thought the project would be a "new experience for the graduate students. . .and also a great benefit to them." The material the students accumulate "will be used as a basis for individual dissertations," said Burke.

The project will be a stimulus to the citizens of Tanganyika in that the idea of other people from foreign countries showing interest in their conditions — social, economic and political— will augment the natives concern for their government, Vuo added.

Parents Elect New Officers

The research director of Bristol Laboratories and his wife have been elected secretary of the Syracuse University Parents Assn.

Dr. and Mrs. Amel R. Menotti, Fayetteville, were named to the joint position succeeding Mr. and Mrs. J. Frederic Hillegas.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Wallace Ely of Rochester were re-elected president at the meeting in Graham Dining Hall. He is president of Security Trust Co. of Rochester.

Other officers re-elected were Mr. and Mrs. James S. Hudnall of Tyler, Tex., vice president, and Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Peterson of Garden City, L.I., treasurer. Hudnall is a geologist. Peterson is comptroller of R.C.-A. Communications.

The meeting was held in conjunction with Parents Weekend.

New Art Faculty Holds Exhibition

Exhibitions of work by two new members of the faculty of the School of Art will be display in the gallaries of the Joe and Emily Lowe Art Center through October 29.

Recent paintings of Tetsuo Ochikubo and photographs by Gerda Peterich may be seen daily 9 a.m. - 5 p.m., Monday-Saturday and 7-10 p.m. Monday-Friday. The gallery is also open Sunday 2-6 p.m.

Ochikubo, a native of Hawaii, was educated at the University of Hawaii, the Chicago Art Institute, the Art Students League in New York and with the famous Takehiko in Tokyo.

He was awarded the John Hay Whitney Foundation fellowship in 1957 and a Guggenheim fellowship in 1958. His work is represented in the permanent collections of many museums throughout the country.

Before his appointment to the permanent staff of Syracuse University, Ochikubo was visiting professor of the University of Mississippi and Mary Washington College.

Miss Peterich was born and educated in Germany. She served for many years as research associate for the photographic collection of George Eastman House in Rochester. She previously taught at Ohio University and New England College.

This exhibition is a collection of photographs of historic buildings in Manchester, N. H. It is the result of a special project commissioned in 1961 by the Currier Gallery of Art and was first shown there last spring.

The number of foreign students and faculty members at U.S. colleges, universities, and hospitals has more than doubled in the past decade.

Africans Elect New Officers

The election of officers for the Syracuse University African Student's Association was held recently.

The new officers are: President Sam Gina Tucker from West Africa; Vice President Frank Vuo from Tanganyika; Secretary Hadiatou Balde from Guinea; Assistant Secretary Honere Likulumbi from Congo; Treasurer Zachary Onyonka from Kenya; Social Secretary Clement Wright from Liberia; and Publicity Chairman Shibabaw Yimenu.

Elected ex-offico members were Antonio Boustcha and Brian Bassingthwaighte.

There are 62 African students on campus this year.

sponsibility on yourself by having a car.

"In many cases having a car diverts the interests of a student away from his academic work. I don't believe that students of lower academic averages should have car be given the opportunity to drive at all."

As for suggesting a solution, Long said: "As far as I'm concerned, a car has too many good points to be taken away altogether. I feel the policy should be organized a little better.

"The sophomore rule of 1.6 is reasonable and this should not be eliminated. I think the problem should be given to Student Senate to mull over."

Another of Long's ideas was to "consult other major universities who have had the problem. Their solution may not be our solution but this might bring forth some equitable place where the line can be drawn between those who can have cars and those who cannot."

The idea of finding a cutting off place is very difficult. Long said that "many students use cars to get to work, to save money on trips home and to make money by taking passengers on trips.

"The money they make or save from this means a lot to them. I feel that only about ten per cent of the students really need a car, about 30 per cent use them to a good advantage and about 60 per cent use them for fun and the right 60 per cent would be the grades suffer for it."

Unfortunately, weeding out the right 60 percent would be impossible.

Discussing the situation with many students reveals two major problems. First, most of them are unaware of the presence of any real problem. Second, if there is a problem, most of them say the university ought to do able to solve it.

Conversations are filled with "build more parking spaces," "make garages" and so forth. Explaining why this cannot be so easily done is extremely difficult.

Those students who do see the problem hope for some sort of half-way point where all might be satisfied. Robert (Robby) Stern, speaker of Student Senate, said: "Students are willing to take action. There is no need to blatently take away all students' privileges. There should be some solution whereby students are willing to restrict themselves."

Stern said that a university cannot be solely an academic atmosphere and that cars help maintain a climate of normal existence for many students.

WHAT A WAY TO LIVE

Roosevelt Roughing It

By LES WHITTINGTON

Not many people really wanted to live in the Roosevelt Apartments. Even fewer people had probably ever heard of it. Now, despite all the drawbacks, close to half of the 119 residents have decided to stay.

This is the surprising story of Roosevelt, the outpost of the campus living centers at 1301 E. Genesee St., the building which has never before been used as an undergraduate dormitory.

The aging, 65-year-old apartment house became home this fall for a portion of the overflow caused by the crowded housing situation.

In the midst of general amazement, a group composed mostly of transfer and readmitted students moved into the dormitory that is a 20-minute walk from campus—and only a couple of minutes from Jimmy Benham's.

For many of these students, Roosevelt was a blessing. Had the university not opened the dorm, the housing problem might have precluded their admission.

And, if isolation is an inducement to study, then Roosevelt is the place to be.

Except for disadvantages such as the distance from campus and a location in the midst of a bad neighborhood hastening towards real slum conditions and a lack of facilities like adequate vending machines or mailboxes or, at the beginning, enough telephones or, for some, closet space and a dangerous parking lot which has already been the scene of one looting and the all-night din of trucks and cars on Genesee street, Roosevelt is not a bad living center.

Roosevelt also has its interesting touches. For instance, the elevator, which looks as though it was second-hand when they built the place somewhere around the turn of the century, is a quaint piece of apparattus that has been working a lot better than anyone probably expected.

There are also such features as Tuesday night gospel singing by the nearby Macedonia Church of God in Christ and the freight trains which crash in about 150 yards behind the dorm every night at 1:05 a.m. much to the delight of those on the back end of the building.

Yet Roosevelt has its advantages. The 60-odd students who did not sign up to move when offered the chance two weeks ago are testimony to the desirability of the place, despite the disadvantages.

That the dorm is desirable is a credit to resident advisors Patrick Chambers and Peter Caporossi, who have worked hard to make Roosevelt a good place to be.

They have talked to each resident individually in an effort to find out just what could be done to improve the conditions. Due to their efforts, another pay telephone has been installed and more vending machines should be put in soon.

Chambers has tried to talk the "Dinglemen" into visiting Roosevelt, and the truck finally came Early in Oct., after avoiding the Genesee street dorm for almost two weeks, which is surprising, in view of the "Dingleman's" popularity elsewhere.

These efforts have been successful, for, as Chambers said, "morale here is as good as in any other dormitory on campus." It is not difficult to see how the individuality of living in Roosevelt would be a binding force. Indeed, as one administrator put it, safety alone sometimes necessitates sticking together.

There are other reasons why residents like Roosevelt, the most obvious of which is eating in Haven Hall, where girls are occasionally more plentiful than food.

The dormitory is about $100 cheaper than most; many people have formed friendships there; the rooms—built for use as family apartments and now housing from four to seven students - offer the maximum of space for the money and a private bath, and some people just like living away from the pulse of the campus.

Some students reportedly will begin moving up to campus living centers this month. The university, which bought the building only two years ago and allocated it for foreign student housing last year, has offered everyone a chance to leave, although it may be some time before all those who want out can do so.

It would not be surprising to see some, after tasting life in the "big, modern" dormitories, going back down the long hill to Roosevelt.

ROTC Programs Offer Higher Pay

An extensive federal scholarship program for ROTC studdents will be launched next fall as a result of recent congressional act.

A total of 8,000 Army and Air Force cadets will receive fifty dollars per month plus payment of tuition, book costs and laboratory fees. After four years. the total will rise to 11,000 scholarships.

Scholarships will be available only to students in four-year ROTC programs. Recipients must commit themselves to a minimum of four years of active duty service.

In addition, the act provides for payment of up to fifty dollars per month to non-scholarship advanced students, and raising of summer training pay from $78-$111 per month.

The act represents an attempt to remedy the failure of ROTC programs to attract and retain adequate numbers of students in the advanced, or third or fourth year course according to congressional investigations. Completion of the advanced course plus receipt of a degree are necessary to receive a commission.

Lichtblau Speaks on Mexico

Dr. Myron Lichtblau will present a public program of slides with comments on Mexico and Guatemala at 7:30 p.m. today in the Koffee Korner of Hendricks Chapel.

Lichtblau spent much of 1963 in Mexico and for the first five months of this year was director of the Syracuse University Semester-in-Guatemala. He is the author of the book "The Argentine Novel in the Nineteenth Century" and has written several articles for Latin American magazines.

Lichtblau is an associate professor in the Syracuse University romance language department.

The program is sponsored by Phi Sigma Iota, romance language honorary society.

Urban Design Talk Slated

William L. Slayton, federal commissioner of urban renewal, will speak at a public forum sponsored by the Syracuse University School of Architecture at 3:15 p.m. Friday in Kittredge Auditorium, Huntington B. Crouse Hall.

He will speak about "Progress in Urban Design Through Renewal."

Slayton, appointed to his post in 1961, had worked on several major urban redevelopment projects in cities such as Milwaukee, Chicago and Washington.

He received his bachelor and master of arts degrees from the University of Chicago.

Carlson Receives Forestry Position

Floyd E. Carlson has been named acting director for extension and public relations at the State University College of Forestry at Syracuse University, by Dr. Hardy L. Shirley, dean of the college.

Carlson replaces Ralph G. Unger, who retired from the post on Oct. 1.

A native of the state of Washington, Carlson has been doing extension work at the college since 1930. Prior to that he did similar work in Washington. He is a graduate of the University of Washington, holding bachelor of science and master of forestry degrees.

Carlson is best known in forestry circles for his pioneering efforts in using radio and TV to reach the public with forestry information. He has done extensive work lecturing and with exhibits.

He produced the first television series on forestry in North America, a total of 60 programs that were aired from 1949-1951. His voice is familiar to thousands of New York State students who have listened to the Empire State FM School of the Air over the years.

He is also well known for his regular programs on WGY Farm Paper of the Air.

From 1960-1962, Carlson was appointed visiting professor for forestry information at the University of the Philippines, Los Banos, where he participated in the College of Forestry's technical assistance program in the Philippines.

In his new position, Carlson said he will expand the college's program of bringing forestry information to the public.

do in a season. They're a damn good team.

Case in point three — Navy has already beaten its only Eastern opponent, Penn State. They still must play Pittsburgh (this Saturday) and Army. They have suffered three straight losses but according to Simmie "they're one hell of a team with or without Staubach and they'll surprise a lot of people."

Case in point no. four —Villanova (yes, V-i-l-l-a-n-o-v-a) is currently second in the standings. People ask me how a "small-time" football team like Villanova (5-0) can win the Lambert Trophy. This is just nonsense." Simmie continued, "They don't beat their opponents, they annihilate them.

And don't underestimate the teams they've played. They trounced VMI. VMI lost to Virginia, 20-19, and then Virginia beat Army. They beat Detroit 31-0, Detroit lost to Kentucky, 13-6, and Kentucky beat Auburn and Mississippi."

If the big Eastern powers knock each other off Villanova will find itself in the top spot. "How do you think it will look if Villanova romps Boston College in the last game of the season. I'll tell you this," Simmie emphasized, "it won't look good."

The only team that Simmie counts out of the race is Penn State. But the Staters could be a big factor anyway. They beat Army and they gave us quite a fight. They still have to play Navy and Pittsburgh. They may not be a winner, but they could be a spoiler.

At the halfway mark we may be the favorite, but the race isn't over. The race goes to the strong, not the swift. It will be a great stretch drive.

be highlighted by the announcement of the Campus Chest queen at 11 p.m. Students may vote for their favorite candidate by buying votes at the carnival. The Daily Orange will run pictures of the candidates in Friday's issue.

The queen contest replaces slave auctions which were held until 1962. Important members of the administration such as the Chancellor and the dean of men used to be sold to the highest bidder for his personal use.

The Campus Chest fund raising drive began in 1942 on the first anniversary of the attack on Pearl Harbor.

By obtaining pledges from living centers and members of the faculty more than $7,500 was raised. The money was contributed to the World Student Service Fund, the United War Union, the University Student Emergency Loan Fund and Syracuse in China.

After the war Campus Chest began sponsoring annual carnivals which have been held each fall.

In 1947 $17,000 in carnival proceeds and pledges was raised. In recent years the proceeds have decreased and hit a new low in 1962, when only $750 was raised.

91 Coeds Pledge Houses In Fall Rush

The new fall upperclass rushing procedure combining the formal and informal rush of previous years has resulted in a greater number of upperclass women pledging sororities, Susan Sommers, rush chairman of Panhellenic Council has reported.

A total of 235 women signed up for rush this year in comparison to 174 and 186 women in 1962 and 1963 respectively.

The total pledging number this year was 91 for this one rush period as compared to the total of 65 and 73 for the two rushing periods in the years mentioned above.

This number also will increase somewhat during the open bidding procedure which will continue during the rest of this semesteer. Sororities which have not yet filled their quotas will have an opportunity during this time to do so, Miss Sommers said.

"The new system is more effective than the old. It was definitely more casual and informal. The rushees got to only on a party basis but in a more relaxed and normal atmosphere," she noted.

Shortening the rush period and combining the formal and informal rushing procedure will bring more women into the sorority system in the future thus strengthening Panhellenic on the whole, Miss Sommers said.

Your life at Du Pont | one of a series for technical graduates

Would you make a good catalyst?

With us, creative technical employees are natural catalysts. They cause reactions. Good ones.

For example, they helped us double our sales to $2.4 billion in the past 12 years. In the past 28 years alone, their research efforts helped us develop new products that created 40,000 new career positions. At this writing they're ironing the wrinkles out of 200 completely new products, with more on the way.

Technical men and women are happy at Du Pont, too. They get a chance to move around—to actually change jobs without changing companies and without losing their accrued benefits. Their future bursts with promise, because they know we fill important positions from within.

Would you make a good catalyst at Du Pont? Learn all the facts by letting us send you more information. Write us a letter now (or clip and mail our coupon).

SU Given Grants of $675,000

Physicists Get $461,600

Syracuse University physicists have received four grants totaling $461,600 to be used for atomic research.

The biggest single grant of the sum of nearly half a million dollars in federal funds is $200,000 from the Office of Naval Research to Dr. Jack Leitner, associate physics professor.

Running to June 30, 1965, it is a renewal of a previous grant to Leitner, who with Dr. Nahmin Horwitz, also an associate professor, was part of the team that discovered the Omega Minus particle this year. The discovery was crucial in establishing what has been called the new symmetry principle of nature.

A National Science Foundation grant of $124,000 is for 18 months of similar research under the direction of Horwitz, Frich M. Harth and Theodore F. Kalogeropoulos.

A $92,000 grant from the Atomic Energy Commission has gone to E. C. George Sudershan, a theoretical physicist whose group works closely with the experimentalists.

Finally, a grant of $15,000 from the NSF will buy a piece of equipment called a bubble chamber film measuring unit. Its purpose is to measure the film which records atomic particle collisions in the bubble chamber to an accuracy of .0005 centimeters.

SU physicists are studying the strongest known force in the universe — the one that holds nuclei together.

By comparison, it is a billion billion billion billion billion billion (approximately 10 to the 39th power) times more powerful than gravity, the weakest known force.

Sudershan and his group of theoreticians use the facts developed by the experimentalists in an attempt to understand relationships among the particles. "In a wider sense," Leitner said, "they hope to understand the relationship of the new particles, and the forces which act between them, to more familiar phenomena in physics, such as electromagnetism and radioactivity."

So rapid is the advance of knowledge among physics that it is no longer big news when a new particle is discovered. "Physicists discover new particles every day," Leitner said. Four have been discovered at Syracuse, of which the third was the celebrated Omega Minus.

What counts now is not the discovery of new particles but their interrelationship in what physicists call the "particle jungle,' he noted.

J-School Lists Smoking Rules

The School of Journalism has announced the policy concerning smoking in the Newhouse Communications Center.

A memorandum, sent to all members of the staff of the journalism school, agrees with the university policy prohibiting smoking in classrooms.. Smoking is also prohibited in the auditoriums, the library, the library lounge and all areas involved with photography or typography.

However, smoking is permitted in the dedication hall, the student lounge areas, and the restrooms.

Dean of the School of Journalism, Wesley C. Clark, urged students to use the ash urns provided in these places and not to litter the floors or furnishings of the new building.

These regulations will be rigorously enforced, but the cooperation of every student is needed to make these rules a success, Clark said.

State Univresity College of Forestry at Syracuse University owns more than 23,000 acres of forest proeperty for research use.

Training Awards Presented For Social Work Programs

Syracuse University's School of Social Work has received $213,556 in training grants for programs and student stipends during the 1964-65 school year.

The grants were announced by John R. Hartnett, acting dean of the school. The total is $84,128 more than last year and represents an increase of 14 stipends.

The grants have made possible five new appointments to the faculty of the Syracuse University School of Social Work.

The new faculty members, announced by Chancellor William P. Tolley, are John P. Szulgit, Mrs. Eugene A. Kaplan, Mrs. Olive T. Irwin, Warren A. Augins and Stanley P. Gluck. All five are clinical instructors and all but Augins will work as field work instructors in student unit programs.

Student unit programs are part of the requirements for a master's degree from the School of Social Work. The student is placed in a social agency for a part of each week. He carries a small number of cases or works with groups under the supervision of a field work instructor and is graded on the work.

The units under Irwin and Gluck are new at SU this year.

Irwin will direct a student unit in the field of corrections in the Onondaga County probation department. Irwin is a former probation officer with the department. The program is under a grant from the National Institution of Mental Health.

Gluck is responsible for a student unit in social action. He was formerly associated with the Protestant Childrens Home in San Antonio, Tex.

The units under Szulgit and Kaplan are continuing under on-going grants.

Szulgit will be a clinical field instructor with the rehabilitation unit in the Onondaga County of Social Welfare, under a grant from the Vocational Rehabilitation Center. Szlugit is a former case supervisor in Syracuse for Catholic Charities Inc.

Kaplan, a psychiatric social worker from 1961-64 with the Syracuse school district, will head a student unit in the Rehabilitation Center of University Hospital. The program receives its grant from the Vocational Rehabilitation Center.

Augins, associated with the SU School of Social Work since 1960, will be a group work consultant under a grant in mental retardation. This program is also under a grant from the Vocational Rehabilitation Center.

Twenty-five graduate students will also receive funds from the National Institute of Mental Health and 10 more graduate students will receive stipends from the Vocational Rehabilitation Center.

The Hill students who received grants are:

Ija Pozdnjakoff, Virginia W. Kramer, Ranita Watson, William McPeak, Jean Davis, Joan Desser and James Magee.

Also Donald Evans, Lois Olkin, Carolyn Migdal, Rhoda Linton, Belle Drew, Leslie H. Leighninger, Roy Laurent, William Bois, Faye L. Kahn, Judith S. Lewis, Josephine D'Alessandro and Carol Head.

Also Norma Keith, Leslie D. Anderson, Clifford Whitman, Maxine Pride and Edward Wold.

Other students receiving grants are Thomas Prostack, Garry DeCasta, Richard Gotti, Claire Stratford, John P. Mayer, Robert O'Connell, John Clapp and John Haverlick.

Foreign Profs Work at SU

Three visiting foreign scientists are collaborating in research with faculty members in the department of bacteriology and botany at Syracuse University during the current academic year.

Marshall W. Jennison, department chairman, said the visitors are Dr. Hideo Tamaki, Kyoto, Japan; Dr. Ichire Kaneke, Tokyo, and Dr. Vladimir Vinter of the Czechoslovak Academy of Sciences.

Tamaki is working with Dr. E. Balbinder in microbial geneefforts with Dr. Roy Doi on biochemistry of the genetic material, dioxyribonucleic acid (DNA), and Vinter is collaborating with Dr. Ralph Slepecky on investigations of spore production by bacteria.

The Panhellenic Council has chosen rush counselors for the coming year.

Rush counselors will be visiting freshmen coed living centers during the semester to impartially discuss questions concerning Syracuse University sororities in general, rush rules and procedures.

Selected as counselors were Bonnie Cochran, Mary Jane Compter, Virginia Davis, Sylvia Dodson, Katherine Eddy, Patricia Elkind, Sally Evans, Cheryl Fauth and Lynn Fischoff.

Also selected were Norma Gerkins, Sara Hand, Kay Levine, Joanne Liddell, Milli Lorman, Karen McKinney, Kathleen Nolan and Suzette Peck.

Others selected were Susan Pennoyer, Harriette Peters, Elaine Rogers, Judy Rowinski, Susan Strong and Michele Landis.

Venezuela's farm program has increased agricultural production 30 per cent since 1959.

SU, Nance Little Shine On Statistical Scene

Jim Nance, Floyd Little and the Syracuse Orangemen continue to dominate the college football statistical scene, according to figures released yesterday by the National Collegiate Athletic Bureau.

Nance ranks fourth nationally in rushing with 473 yards on 95 carries, trailing Ray Handley (Stanford), Brian Piccolo (Wake Forest) and Junior Coffey (Washington). Handley boasts 530 yards.

Little stands 15th in the rushing department on the basis of 384 yards in 67 attempts.

The Orange duo of Nance-Little has also made its mark in the scoring race. Both Hillman are tied with Texas' Ernie Koy for the number three spot in the country with 42 points.

Tulsa end Howard Twilley and Nebraska halfback Kent Mc Cloughan occupy the top two spots with 52 and 48 points respectively.

In punt returns, Mr. Little rates behind Steve Bramwell (Washington), Ken Hatfield (Arkansas) and Wayne Swinford (Georgia). Floyd has totaled 198 yards on six runbacks, good for a 33.0 average. Bramwell has chalked up 270 yards, but only offers a 15.0 average.

Teamwise, the Piety forces also rate highly.

In total defense, SU slipped to second behind Alabama after giving up 218 yards to Penn State Saturday. Alabama has allowed 134.6 yards per game, while the Orangemen stand at 138.2.

Syracuse, limiting its opponents to 66.4 yards per game, rate third in rushing defense behind Notre Dame (33.5) and Alabama (58.8).

SU is third in rushing offense, gaining 1,316 yards on 288 carries in five games. The Orange show a 263.2 yard per game average.

Nebraska paces the country with a 280.6 mark, six yards per game better than Bowling Green.

Syracuse holds onto the eighth slot in scoring, tallying 29.2 points per contest. Air-minded Tulsa is the national leader with a 43.5 figure.

Following are Hill opponents and how they rank:

—— Pittsburgh, 12th in rushing offense.

—— Larry Zeno of UCLA, seventh in total offense with 795 yards.

—— Fred Mazurek of Pitt, ninth in total offense with 757 yards.

—— Paul Brothers of Oregon State, 17th in total offense with 671 yards.

—— Rollie Stichweh of Army, 19th in total offense with 668 yards.

—— Stichweh, 11th in rushing with 419 yards.

—— Gale Sayers of Kansas, 14th in rushing with 386 yards.

— —Sonny Utz of Virginia Tech, 16th in rushing with 372 yards.

—— Zeno, 16th in forward passing with 49 completions in 95 attempts, good for 627 yards and seven touchdowns.

—— Gary Wydman of Penn State, 20th in forward passing with 43 completions in 87 attempts, good for 529 yards but no TDs.

—— Len Frketich of Oregon State, 11th in punting with an average of 40.9 yards per kick.

—— Olvin Moreland of Oregon State, 11th in punting with an average of 40.9 yards per kick.

—— Utz, tied for eighth in scoring with 36 points.

—— Steve Clark of Oregon State, tied for 12th among kicking (scoring by kicks) with 19 points.

Piety Crews Plan Inter-Squad Races

By NEIL KERR

Syracuse's crew team, which has rowed nearly 100 practice miles in three weeks, has scheduled a fall regatta this weekend at Onondaga Lake.

Both the varsity and freshman teams will hold intro-squad mile races at 2:30 p.m. Saturday with the winning eight to receive medals from the Syracuse Alumni Association.

Coach Loren Schoel's 35-man varsity will choose up among itself tonight in practice to form three teams for Saturday's competition.

Frosh coach Bill Sanford will also split up his 40-man team and the squads will hold two more practice sessions prior to Saturday's contest.

"We've had a good fall practice-we've made a lot of progress," said Schoel. "The sophomores especially have improved a great deal."

The veteran coach added that he was "amazed" with the time turned in by the varsity last week in a time trial on the lake. Schoel is hoping to get in one more week of practice before closing down outdoor operations for the winter.

Sanford's freshman team has made rapid improvement this fall also. Last Tuesday night the team viewed films of themselves in practice and mistakes were pointed out and corrected. Films of Syracuse's Pan American Championship team of 1959 were also shown at the practice.

The SU crew team received a 17-foot outboard coach boat this fall - a gift from William Burch, an associate professor in journalism and the university's director of real estate. "The crew is very grateful to him," said Schoel. "We've been putting the boat to good use."

Princeton Is SU Cage Foe In Tourney

Asa Bushnell, commissioner of the Eastern College Athletic Conference, has announced first-round pairings for the 13th annual basketball Holiday Festival Dec. 28-Jan. 2 in Madison Square Garden.

Syracuse will challenge defending Ivy League champion Princeton, paced by All-American Bill Bradley, Monday afternoon, Dec. 28.

Other first-round contests will pit LaSalle against St. John's, Manhattan versus Michigan, and Cincinnati against Temple.

The semifinals will be played Wednesday, Dec. 30. Finals are set for Jan. 2.

Sports Scope

By JIM KLURFELD

It's been a long time since the lights have burned late at Archbold Gym.

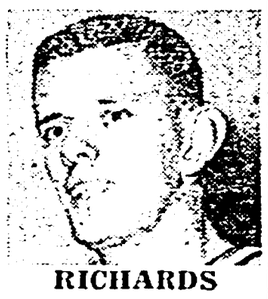
But once again the floor resounds from the sound of bouncing spheres and thumping feet and the room is filled with a sweaty odor that can mean only one thing.

It's the middle of October, the football season is only half finished and mid-terms have yet to be taken, but the basketball training season has begun.

Figures dart around the court. One lad dribbles the ball, stops and shoots. Another stands on the foul line. A rope jumper skips the length of the court and a tall lanky boy flexes his legs. The rims ring out and backboards clatter from errant shots.

A man watches.

"I think we can have a good season, but we already have a lot of boys injured." He points at the rope-jumper. "Rich Duffy had a knee operation and we won't know about him until he's had a good chance to test that knee."



RICHARDS

He points to another corner—at the boy who was loosening his legs. "Chuck Richards hurt some ligaments in his knee at a summer recreation program. You can never tell about these knee injuries.

"And Norm Goldsmith, over there at the basket, has a chipped bone in his ankle."

If you listen to the prognosticators you know they are saying that this is a team that should go places. Evevrybody is back from last year and last year was the renaissance.

If someone had told you the season would end at Madison Square Garden in the National Invitational Tournament last year, you would have thought they were crazy. It was like saying Barry Goldwater is going to win the presidential election.

But now it's different. One magazine has them sixth in the country. More than just a winning season is expected. Last year they finished with a flourish. This year they are expected to pick up where they left off.

"No, no. I don't think the high rating or all the talk will effect the team one way or the other. These boys have matured a lot since last year and I don't think they'll start believeing it when people say how easy it will be."

BING

The coach is optimistic but far from confident. "The schedule is horrible. Six of our first eight games are on the road. Five of those in a row. Five. "He shakes his head slowly.

The players continue to warm up. Two spectators walk in. "Hey, see over there—that's Dave Bing.

They point at a slender Negro youth. He moves quickly and smoothly as his shots hiss through the net. One mag picks him first team All-American, another second. Forget trying to say how good he is—you'll run out of words.

"I don't know if I'll use Dave in the frontcourt or backcourt this year. Last season he seemed more comfortable in the backcourt, but it all depends on how the other boys show. If we can get the ball to Dave he could be just as effective in the front. That's what practice is about, though. We'll find out."

Val Reid is another question. The coach isn't sure if he'll play the 6-10 sophomore with the starting five when the season opens or if he'll work him in gradually.

It's a long way to March. This is the football season but the wooden floor is already in use. At this point there are only a lot of unanswered questions that Fred Lewis would like to have answered. The same goes for the rest of us.

Tough Defense

Beaver Line Rugged

By ART ROSSKY

Something will have to give Saturday as Syracuse's powerful ground game clashes with Oregon State's rugged rushing defense. In an effort to open up the Beaver defense the Orange have been drilling hard on pass plays.

Though their forte is holding enemy ground attacks, the Staters have been just as stingy in allowing opponents points. Only 34 points have been scored against the Beavers in their first five games, in which State has posted four victories.

No one has scored more than one TD against the Beavers.

Lone loss was administered by potent Northwestern in a 7-3 road contest. Highlights of the season have been victories over Washington, a Rose Bowl participant last year, and Baylor, which ranks among the nation's leaders in yards gained.

Heading the OS defensive platoon is linebacker Jack O' Billovich, a 6-0, 207-pound junior from Eugene, Ore. He was the finest Beaver in spring drills.

O'Billovich, is tough, quick, and has the knack of being in the right place at the right time. He is considered a top prospect for "All" honors.

Handling the other linebacking post is Dick Ruhl, a 6-1, 212-pound senior, another standout. Coach Tommy Prothro calls his linebacking duo a pair of "mad dogs."

Heading the secondary is safetyman Dan Espalin, a specialist in stealing passes. So far this year he has grabbed five enemy aerials.

Espolin ranks among State's all-time top interceptors with 16 thefts in three years.

Handling the line chores on defense are guards Wayne Valley, 243, and Doug John, 235, tackles George Carr, 198, and Dennis Rozario, 206, and ends Greg Hartman, 184, and Al East, 183.

Joining Espalin in the secondary are left half Don Sieg, 176, and right half Jim Smith, 175.

On the Orange side, injury-prone Gerry Everling moves back into the starting lineup at middle guard after sitting out the Penn State fray. To make room for Everling on the starting unit, John Krok has shifted from middle guard to left tackle.

Everling, a 205-pound senior from Binghamton, has the potential to be the top Hill interior lineman when he can shake off injuries.

After the Holy Cross game, Everling was awarded All-East honors. In the Crusader contest he scored the Piety's first TD after grabbing an errant Holy Cross pitch.

Another defensive change finds Roger Smith, hero of the Penn State game moving into the right linebacker post and Murray Johnson shifting from right linebacker to middle linebacker.

On the offensive unit Brad Clarke replaces Harris Elliott at end. Elliott was injured against Penn State and is not yet able to run at full speed.

Part I

Lambert Stakes

By Howie Schneider

On Monday afternnon Syracuse University received a unanimous vote from the Lambert Board as the no. 1 major college football team in the East.

For many the selection was a gratifying poke at "the senile, anti-Syracuse newspapermen" who dropped us to eighth in the country.

To some however, like Orange coach, scout and confidant Roy Simmons, the vote was relatively unimportant.

Simmons has been involved in college football since long before Victor and Henry Lam-1877) began giving away their trophies in 1936.

Last Saturday, as the horses approached the clubhouse turn in the 28th running of the Lamments on the race were rather disconcerting, to say the least. Hold on to your beanies.

"Are you kidding? Are we a sure bet to win the Lambert Trophy? Hell, the horses haven't even left the starting gate yet. The race for the Lambert Trophy hasn't even begun."

And so it looks like we won't be able to cash in our two-dollar tickets just yet. It appears that much of what has happened in the last five weeks has been nothing more than a warmup.

"The next five weeks will tell the tale," Simmie snapped," and I'll tell you write now it will be a race down to the wire."

Simmie and most astute observers agree that the Lambert Board will play particular interest to how the Eastern powers do against each other. If this is the case the fireworks have yet to begin (although we got a nice preview last week at Penn State).

There are still four teams besides mighty Syracuse that will be in the race all the way around.

Case in point no. one — Pittsburgh has yet to play an Eastern power. In the weeks remaining they'll face Navy, Syracuse, Army and Penn State. Although the Panthers have already dropped two (UCLA and Oregon), wins in the next four weeks would make them undisputable heirs to the Lambert crown.

Case in point no. two — the Cadets also have yet to face Syracuse, Army and Pittsburgh. While their loss to Penn State will be a big factor no one can rule them out.

According to Simmie, who scouted last week's Army Virginia clash, "Army losing to Virginia was not an indication of how good the Cadets really are. They caught more bad breaks in that game than teams

Five Finalists To Seek Title Of SU Queen

Five coeds have been chosen as finalists in the Campus Chest Queen contest, part of Saturday's Campus Chest Carnical.

They are:

Susan Grover and Nancy Glynn, both freshmen from Syracuse; Betsy Larsen, a junior from Lima O.; Renee Warnock, a sophomore from Bay Head, N.J.; and Andrea Silver, a sophomore from South Orange, N.J.

Students may cast votes for their favorite candidate by contributing pennies to Campus Chest, according to contest chairman Robert Dorn. The money is used for student-oriented charities.

The winner will be announced at 11 p.m. Saturday at the Campus Chest Carnival, which starts at 7 p.m. on the quad.

This year's carnival will feature a ferris wheel, an airplane ride and bumper cars. Over 40 booths will be operated by Greek houses and independent living centers.

InterFraternity Council and Association of Women Students will sponsor booths for the first time. Syracuse-in-Asia and will sponsor booths for the first time. Syracuse-in-Asia and Commuting Students Assn. will also be represented.

Curfew for coeds attending the carnival have been extended to 2 a.m. by the Association of Women Students. Coeds may obtain the 30 extra minutes by paying one cent

Parking Series-V

Solutions to the Problem

This the last in a five-part series by DAILY ORANGE junior editor Pat Tracey investigating the parking situation on the Syracuse University campus. Today Miss Tracey studies suggestions of various groups involved for the solution of the problem.

By PAT TRACEY
Junior Editor

The French say "que faire." What to do?

Many minds are now contemplating the various areas of the parking problem and making plans to do something.

Those included are the university parking committee, Student Senate, University Hill Foundation and the city police.

Suggested programs and long range plans include:

1. Construction of two parking garages.
2. Shuttle bus service to the Manley Field House lot.
3. Charging students for use of campus surface lots.
4. Limitation of student parking privileges.
5. Discontinuation of all parking for student vehicles.
6. Renovation and redesign of the area streets.

Each of these plans offers advantages as well as obvious difficulties, but together they are a step forward.

The first, construction of parking garages, is among the university's long range plans. Preliminary ideas include construction of one building near Booth Hall and the other behind the Main Library.

However, such plans need to be authorized and money must be allocated. James V. LaTorre, assistant to the vice president for administration and research, said negotiations are still underway for obtaining money.

A spokesman for the parking committee said that the process is moving such plans from the drawing board to construction involves: 1) making plans, 2) having the plans authorized by the university Board of Trustees and 3) getting money.

University administrators, student leaders and interested students offer their views on the solution of the parking problem, see page 11.

Such funds are obtained from state and federal agencies who specialize in loaning money to universities for construction.

These two garages are fluctuating among these stages. Definite descriptions of the building, how many cars they will hold and who will be eligible is not yet known.

But because of the initial cost of the buildings, they will have to be at least partially self-liquidating. Fees for using the buildings may run as

African Club To Celebrate Zambia Birth

Tonight at midnight, in a floodlit ceremony, the British Union Jack will be lowered in Northern Rhodesia. A new independent nation, Zambia, will come into existence.

Meanwhile, back in Syracuse, the African Students' Organization will hold a ceremony to celebrate. American friends of the association are invited to join them at 8:30 p.m. today, at the Elks Club, 1220 E. Fayette St.

Zambia, the 35th independent African country, gets its name from an empire which flourished in the area before colonialism.

Northern Rhodesia was part of the extinct Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland, a British protectorate. Northern Rhodesia gained home rule a year ago when the federation was disolved.

Kenneth Kaunda, who led the home rule fight and became premier, is expected to become Zambia's leader.

The African Students Organization issued a statement saying, "As we rejoice, we will also remember the other countries that have not been so fortunate....

"As we rejoice, we also call upon the United States government and people to refrain from being unwittingly drawn into being accomplices in efforts that will delay the independence of the more unfortunate lands."

Hill Coeds to Participate In AWS Fashion Show

Velvet dancing frocks, Crepe de Chine dresses, and grey opossum sets may have been the rage in 1914, but Association of Women Students fashion show will feature today's look in styles.

The show, "Fashion Fling," will be held at 2-3:30 p.m. Saturday in Gifford Auditorium, Huntington B. Crouse Hall.

The clothes are from Engles, admission is 25 cents, and all campus women are invited.

Styles will range from casual to formal.

An extra attraction for those attending the show will be a 10 per cent discount on the clothes they buy. But the discount is only for those who attend.

Models are: Donna Spada, Andrea Silver, Susan Dawland, Carol Lehan, Sherrill Barnes, Beda Bailey, Diane Kessler, Diane Vare, MaryAnn Gonsa, Barbara Mischi, Caroll Murray, and Jeanne Schultz.

Part of the Campus Chest festivities, the "fling" is the AWS's first fashion show.

Supporters Back Keating During Panel Discussion

By LOIS WINEBAUM

"Bobby Kennedy's views are not much different than Goldwater's," Miss Lisa Howard, American Broadcasting Co. correspondent, said in a panel discussion Thursday night in Kittridge Auditorium, Hunting B. Crouse Hall.

"He sees things in black and white, good and bad. He has a very simplistic view of people," she said.

This is one of the reasons why she, a liberal Democrat, has chosen to support Sen. Kenneth B. Keating for re-election, she said.

Speaking about "Why we're for Keating," Miss Howard was a member of a panel sponsored by Democrats and Independents for Keating.

Also participating in the debate were Dr. Norman Balbanian, professor of electrical engineering and E. Dent Lackey, Democratic mayor of Niagara Falls. Moderating the panel was Michael Thomas, instructor in the school of business.

The primary issues on which the panel opposed Kennedy's election were his record as attorney general, his alleged control by party bosses and his alleged use of New York as a stepping stone for higher office.

"No attorney general," Miss Howard said, "has ever used the office as an instrument of personal vengence. Robert Kennedy did not respect the Bill of Rights or the laws of due process," she said.

Frosh Coed Dies

A Syracuse University coed died early Thursday morning in Flint Hall of apparently natural causes.

Laurie E. Zuckerman, 18, of Atlantic City, N.J., was a freshman enrolled in the College of Liberal Arts.

A resident of Flint 3C, Miss Zuckerman was taken by ambulance to University Hospital after her roomate was unable to wake her.

She died of natural causes according to Dr. Martin F. Hilfinger Jr., county medical examiner. An autopsy has been performed, but results will not be available for several days.

A Comment On Man

We received a letter from the mother of a Syracuse University student Wednesday, and because of the thoughts involved, we thought it appropriate to reprint it here.

"Saturday the 17th — the afternoon was beautiful, a perfect welcome to a visiting parent and little sister. 'Let's go for a walk. I want to show you how beautiful the coloring is now in the (Walnut) Park,' said our daughter to us.

"Yes, it was beautiful, we felt happy and peaceful, and so did many other young people sitting on the grass. And what could be more inviting for a little "tomboy-girl" than seeing a perfect tree to climb.

"Standing down, watching her climb, reach up, up, I felt how much closer she is to the tree and, perhaps unconsciously, this might be part of the need to climb a tree.

"We were in peaceful and thoughtful anticipation watching Elizabeth reaching the top. Coming down she must have made one 'bad slip,' and trying to catch herself, too suddenly grabbed a branch too forcefully and injured her hand — a pretty deep cut.

"She wasn't quite down, when one young man came over to us (apparently having watched her) offering his assistance, and taking us across to a fraternity house for first aid and having immediately two other young men help us efficiently, calmly and above all, making us feel that it's man's natural instinct to help his fellow man.

"This act of communication one human has with another, the reassurance that it is a first thought for man to want to help another man show us the goodness in man is still his dominant part.

"If only all these thousands of incidents happening daily to people all over — proving that one helps the other — would be as publicized as the tragic happenings of man's brutality to another.

"Again, thanks to the boys of the fraternity with the white corner house with a white and light blue flag outside. You cheered my little girl, you taught a youngster and you convinced her older sister and mother that man is good."

We can only say amen.

Tiger at the Gates

The Ministry of Fear

By Dan Ritey

After three-and-a-half years here we've come to expect just about anything from our dearly beloved university family in the way of deception and clever maneuvering. Even so, we were more than mildly shocked after we had been exposed to a copy of the new student board of publications constitution.

Then we were more than mildly disappointed with the delay and apparent hesitation of the Daily Orange to comment editorially upon this Magna Carta of free journalism.

Then we were more than mildly pleased with the stand taken last Wednesday by DO columnist Auletta — at least someone thought enough of this situation to comment upon it.

Then, however, we were more mildly appalled with the editoral response which was finally tacked onto the coattails of Auletta's column. While acknowledging that there were a few disagreeable parts in the new dictum of the board, the DO apparently decided that this framework of rules still allowed for a free campus press.

We'd suspect that it's a free press like Pravda is a free publication—free to print what goes along with the party (in our case, university) line and free to praise at will the right leaders and free to close its eyes to any dirty wash on the party (or university, again) clothes—line.

Yes, it's a free press here. Free to reflect, not refract. Free to be a supposed major collegiate newspaper at a university where supposedly is an outstanding School of Journalism and where, in harsh actuality, a Ministry of Fear dominates the press and chokes off spirit and any spark of defiance.

True, if one goes by the strict letter of the new publications constitution there is surely a guarantee of a free press. Evidently this was assurance enough for the editor of the Daily Orange.

It isn't, however, for us. We'd suspect that at any opportune moment of its choosing, the board would renege on its guarantee in a quick and sure manner. Then, (to paraphrase the fallacy of non-censorship that appears to be prevalent on this campus) the board would probably see fit to pass on its verdict to the affected publications.

But only then.

While the written word may guarantee editorial freedom, there is, in actuality, an atmosphere of suspicion and hesitance which is in very large part the result of the past actions and present views of this virtual Ministry of Fear which the new board and its gospel have set themselves up to be.

They proved it three years ago by chopping off Girgus' head for his grave crime of trying to publish a newspaper worthy of the name—a paper that said something. Even if it wasn't the desired liturgy.

This mind you, was done in the name of the "best principles of higher education and professional journalism." (Article I, section II of the constitution).

If this is the caliber of journalism that the supposed famed SU journalism school and the "university on the threshold of greatness" elects to throw away in favor of the drivel and inanities that dominated last year's editorials, than all of Sammy Newhouse's horses and all of Sammy Newhouse's men could never give this university—or it's j-school—any self-respect.

Maybe that's the way these esteemed board members want it. Given their dictatorial control over university publications (and it's there, if not in the form of an official censor, then in the form of the pressure of the new constitution), these people would rather stifle creativity and initiative to save their precious image.

An image (of SU) which is so important to these thinkers that they include in their gospel, provisions to oust any staffer or editor who dares to soil it with the truth.

An image which is so impoetant to these liberals that they include in their manifesto provisions to have the editorial representatives of the afected publications at board meetings only as 'advisors' —non-voting members; and on pain of losing their jobs at that.

Before this university worries about polishing up the window of its image, it should first think about removing from power and influence some of the hypocrites and mental question-marks who are on display to the outside world, where we've told, there is a free press.

We cannot in truth blame the current DO editor for the predicament he finds himself in either. We do, however, deem it unfortunate that he thinks that editorial freedom at SU is a reality rather than a myth which can be exploded at any convenient moment. (Consult with former Syracuse 10 Editor Terry Hughes, or the current editor of the off-campus Sword of Damocles on this point.).

Worse than this is the fact that of the five voting students, none have any journalistic experience or training and therefore, of course, fall easy prey to the designs of the five representatives of the Ministry of Fear.

And the qualified journalists around here don't vote.

But of course they don't; recalling the credo of any self-respecting journalist to print the truth and to allow his publication to be a forum for opinions of all types and minds, the guardians of the university image cannot allow such heresy to take place at Piety.

The best thing to do with the board of publications would be to abolish it and keep its members as far away from controlling editorial policy as possible. That it will never happen allows these image-watchers to relax knowing that the pattern of mediocrity will continue here ad infinitum

Faced with the knowledge that there would always be politics in determining editors for major publications here whether it was done by the board or by the publication's members alone, we'd strongly urge the latter. At least talent, ideas and competence may have something to do with the choice of editors in this method of election.

Talent and competence, not university image and safety.

But as long as the disciples from the Ministry of Fear continue to loom over the campus publications, we needn't trouble ourselves—if indeed many of us even care here—about such trivia in editorial considerations.

Sure there's a free press at SU. The constitution says so. Hitler also said there wouldn't be war following the Pact of Munich.

To the Editor:

After reading the two Litwin columns we have had so far, and the girls' answers of Monday, I get a feeling like I want to take the whole mess and push it off the desk into the wastebasket. What could possibly be less to any point?

WEEKEND

CROUSE AUDITORIUM—George Pappastavrou, pianist, will present a concert at 4 p.m. Sunday in Crouse Auditorium. The concert will consist of the Bach "Partita in D Major" and the complete Chopin "Preludes, Opus 28."

Pappastavrou, a native of Syracuse, studied locally with Veronica Rohan Sage and Harrie Southwick. He is a graduate of the Julliard School of Music. He made his Town Hall debut in 1960 and since then has appeared in a number of major concerts. In 1962, Pappastavrou received considerable acclaim for his recording of the very difficult "Concord Sonata" by Charles Ives. Crouse concerts offer free admission and parking.

FOLK GALLERY-Judy Roderick, blues and folk singer, will star this weekend in appearances at 8:30 p.m., 10:30 p.m. and midnight at the Folk Gallery.

Miss Roderick has released one LP album, "Ain't Nothing But the Blues" and has appeared at both the Newport and Philadelphia folk festivals. The Fok Gallery is located at 124 N. McBride St.

Lowe Art

By CHARLES BARNEY

During the reign of England's Queen Victoria, the scientific industrial age came to town. The result was the Victorian era.

Characterized by gingerbread and dodads, the Victorian architecture in Manchester, N.H., has been captured on film by Gerda Peterich. A collection of Miss Peterich's photographs is now on display at Lowe Art Center.

A typical subject in the collection is the home of Colonel Benjamin F. Martin. A small home with several gables, the house has gingerbread woodwork adorning cornices, doorways and windows. Constructed in 1865, the building was designed by George M. Harding of Boston.

England and the United States ran a parellel course architecturally as they passed from the previous orderly effect of the Georgian style. Often a railroad or a waterway gave birth to a new town.

These forms of limited-access transportation led to population concentration. And not only were the people who were living closer together morally strict, but they were conscious of prestige.

Future home owners wanted extra rooms in less space. The carpenter had to build up, down and out.

By the 1880's the Victorian style was in full swing. While Colonel Martin built an ornate house, the building maintained lateral symmetry. In 1881, however, Colonel Charles E. Balch built an ornate house—with towers and turrets asymmetrically arranged. The house was designed by John T. Fanning of Boston.

Syracusans can see the same flourish of architecture in Crouse College or baby brother, Mott Cottage, down South Crouse Ave.

Typically, Colonel Balch's house is decorated with filiform iron work. Victorian houses in one building may combine brick, stone, shingles, wood, colored glass and other materials.

Like afterthoughts, gables and dormer windows appear here and there. Rooms are unrelated surrounded by awkward spaces.

Yet Victorian builders provided sound construction. Massonry and woodwork were of excellent quality.

Miss Peterich's photography—all black and white—is excellent. She makes fine use of perspective and angle and continues interest with detail shots and non-rectangular printing.

Manchester typically began growing after the 1840's with the appearance of the Amoskeag Mills on the Merrimac River. Today the automobile has led to dispersion to the suburban. As elsewhere, Manchester faces the loss of its Victorian architectural examples.

Fortunately, Miss Peterich's photography preserves the best examples.

The cultural process of thought runs counter to Victorian thought. Consequently Victorian mansions make way for gas stations and supermarkets.

Typical criticism of the Victorian era comes from British art critic John Gloag: "No previous civilization had ever had so many citizens who combined high moral standards with deplorable taste."

Tucked among Miss Peterich's pictures are an example of the Greek revival and an octagon house. The latter was inspired by Orson Squire Fowler, phrenologist of the late 1800's. Phrenologists study bumps on the head as an indication of mental faculties, and illogically enough octagonal houses were supposedly favorable for Fowlers theories.

Popularly, Greek revival is much admired, and octagonal structures are preserved as oddities. Yet critics attack the Victorian—a style as illogical as phrenology and as strong and stately as Greek architecture.

As Miss Peterich successfully illustrated, the Victorian—while of debatable esthetic beauty—like the Rococo of the 18th century is a refined style—definable, decent, and often delightful.

Accompanying the collection is an exhibit of prints and oils by Tetsuo Ochikubo. Worth a walk through Lowe, both displays close October 29.

STUDENT UNION The movie this weekend will be "Operation Madball" with Jack Lemmon at 6 p.m., 8 p.m. and 10 p.m. today at Huntington B. Crouse Hall. There will be a 10 cent donation fee for the Campus Chest.

ECKEL-"Circus World" with John Wayne just goes around and around and around. The last installment showed the UAW of tent workers on strike for better cables. But John Wayne never flinched.

He just abandoned the whole mess to look for lost-love trapeze artist Rita Hayworth. When last seen, Wayne was wandering through the jungles of Ireland with boon companion John Ford in search of Rita. If luck holds out, "Circus World" will be with us next time for the fourth straight week and the next installment. "Same Time, Same Station" at 8 p.m.

RKO KEITH'S-Cinema adaptations of plays never seem to make the grade, or so "The Visit" would appear to prove.

Adapted from Frederick Durenmatt's play of the same name, the movie version proves that a rose by the same name is not as sweet or successful.

The plot concerns an older woman's revenge on her former lover, Ingrid Bergman who plays the older woman wants her townspeople to murder Anthony Quinn because he refused to accept their illegitimate child and caused her to be run out of town. She attempts to bribe the townspeople and the influence of greed is a major theme of the play.

Miss Bergman, however, has translated the role of the still-attractive women into a sinister assasin. Quinn has little scope for his acting talents beyond looking vulnerable, which is pretty hard for Quinn to look. The movie has developed into a sterotype situation with pat philosophies. No times available.

PARAMOUNT-A stage play, "Pajama Tops," will be presented here this weekend by a touring company. A French bedroom farce, it will start at 8:30 p.m. on Sunday, and at 7:15 p.m. and 9:45 p.m. today and tomorrow. Tickets are available at the box office for $2.90, $3.90, $4.90 and $5.90. $5.90.

APO Rushes; Lists Activities, History

Approaching its 35th birthday on the hill, Alpha Phi Omego, national service fraternity, will conduct an informal rush at 8 p.m. Sunday in Booth Hall lounge.

APO with 350 chapters and over 80,000 members has grown into the largest men's fraternity in the world. Founded at Lafayette College in Pennsylvania in 1925, it now has chapters spread over the globe.

Perhaps the best known of APO's service to Syracuse University is its daily visit to the infirmary. Each night, a brother visits the infirmary and makes small purchases from local stores for patients who are unable to leave their sick beds.

The annual "Ugly Man" contest run each spring is sponsored by APO. Students cast their votes in the form of pennies donated to the Campus Chest.

Students wishing to buy or sell books may do so through APO facilities. For this service, the fraternity charges 10 cents which is placed in a fund for needy students to buy books. Over the past eight years, more than $3,000 has been collected in this manner.

In the present campus blood drive, Alpha Phi Omega is representing all independent men. Last spring's APO-sponsored blood drive yielded over 700 pints.

A new project this year for APO brothers is a tutorial program to aid troubled high school students in economically deprived areas.

APO's ride board in the basement of Hall of Languages brings students who need rides and those who want riders together.

Putting up the Christmas tree on the quad each December is another service performed by the brothers.

Any additional information on the service fraternity may be obtained by calling Alpha Phi Omega at ext. 2019.

The booths do not accept cash. Two ticket booths will be necessary because of the large response, according to Campus Chest co-chairman William Newman.

Booth registration for the carnival has broken all records, publicity chairman Susan Banta said.

Contest finalist Susan Grover is sponsored by Haven Hall 1, 2 and 3; Nancy Glynn by Flint Hall 4C; and Betsy Larsen by Sigma Phi Epsilon.

DellPlain 3 is sponsoring Renee Warnock, and Tau Delta Phi is Andrea Silver's sponsor.

Foreign Students' Advisors To Attend Hill Conference

Syracuse University will host a regional conference of the National Association of Foreign Student Affairs for the first time this weekend.

Advisors of organizations dealing with foreign students from the New York-New Jersey area will participate in the conference.

S.K. Singh, first secretary of the permanent mission of India to the United Nations, will speak at a dinner at 6:30 p.m., today at Drumlins Country Club.

Dr. Gerard J. Mangone, associate dean for the academic program of the Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs; Dean Harley Shirley of the New York State College of Forestry at Syracuse University; Harold Vaughn, program administrator, international programs, University College; and Paul Miwa, project director of the Peace Corps, will speak at a closing luncheon.

Bargain Set at Bookstore

A "fantastic deal" awaits Syracuse University students at the university bookstore.

Cosmetic firms such as Shulton, Squibb and Lavin have donated supplies of their products to a national charity. The charity has put out an item called a "Guest Pac," one for men and one for women, which would cost from $14 - $17 if purchased piecemeal.

The bookstore will sell them for $2.99.

According to Sidney Waldman, manager of the main bookstore, the items in the pack would cost $10 even if purchased wholesale. Most of the $2.99 goes to the charity, which, Waldman states, must go unnamed.

The packs contain cologne, permanents, deodorants, shampoo and other cosmetic.

Two Receive Writing Prizes

The Atlantic Monthly magazine has recognized the writing of two Syracuse University students. Senior Sandra Altner, of Heffron Cottage received an honorable mention for her poem "Decision in Reflection," in the Atlantic's 43rd Annual Creative Writing Contest for college undergraduates.

Benjamin Zelermeyer, who graduated in June, won a certificate of merit for a poem called "Distance."

Both were enrolled last year in a poetry workshop taught by Associate Prof. Philip Booth, who submitted their work to the contest.

Zelermeyer is now living and writing in New York City. Miss Altner has just returned to complete her senior year here after a semester in Italy.

School of Art Gets Grant

The industrial design department of the Syracuse University School of Art has received a $1,000 grant from the Alcoa Foundation.

Laurence Schmeckebier, dean of the School of Art, received the award from George V. Craighead, district sales manager for Alcoa.
