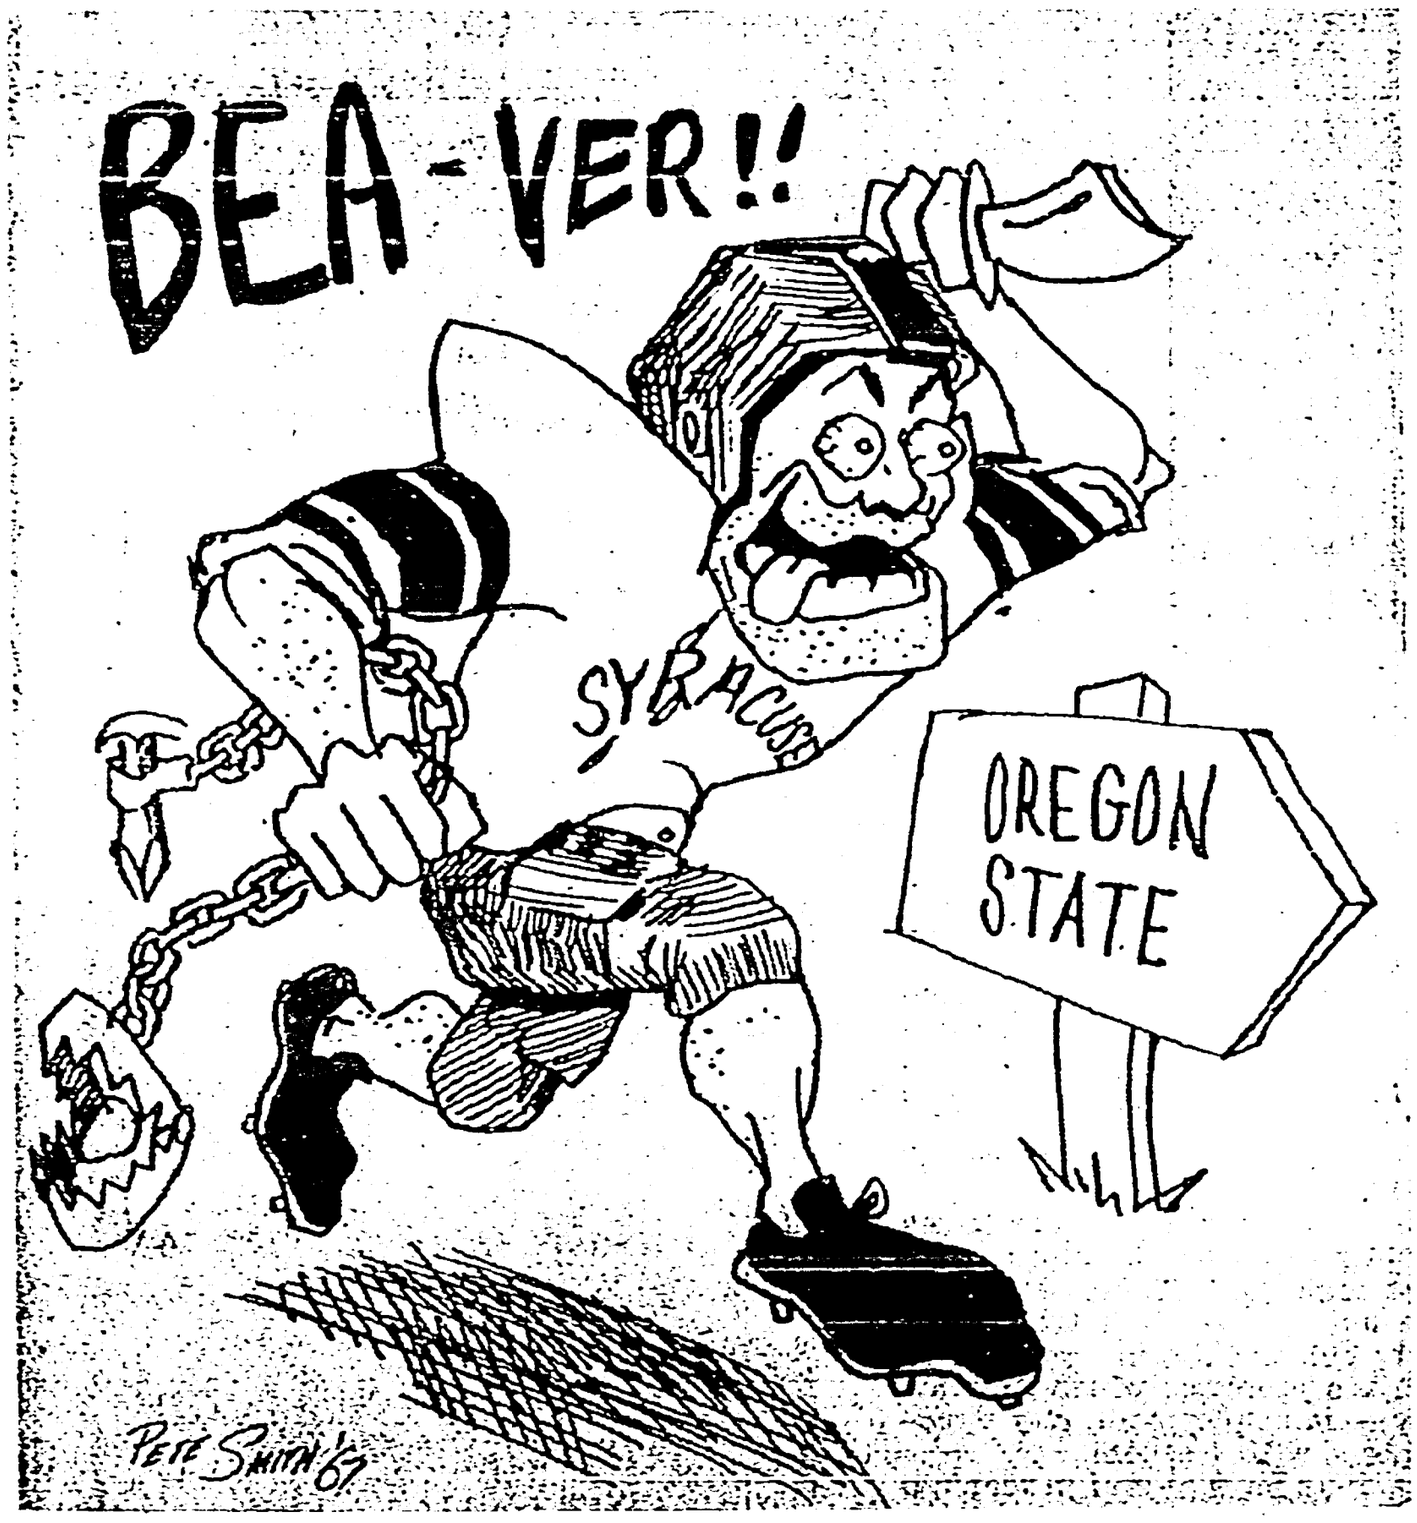
SU, Oregon State Battle on Coast



By BILL CRONAEUR
Sports Editor

Both Syracuse (4-1) and Oregon State (4-1) carry imposing defensive statistics into tomorrow's encounter at Portland, Ore. (4:30 p.m. EST). The Orangemen rank second nationally in total defense, while the Beavers have yielded only 34 points in five games.

But two of the finest sophomores in the land, quarterback Paul Brothers and halfback Floyd Little, plus a pair of bruising fullbacks, may turn the affair into a dazzling offensive display.

Brothers, who has replaced last year's starter, Gordie Queen, as State signal caller, stands 17th in total offense with 671 yards in 145 plays. He is the only rookie to occupy a spot in the top 20.

"Brothers is a real come," offers Orange Scout Joe Szombathy, "He's both a running and passing threat."

On the other side of the field will be fabulous Floyd. Little rates 15th in rushing on the basis of 284 yards in 67 attempts. He has tallied seven touchdowns and chalked up 198 yards on six punt returns.

The fullbacks are SU's Jim (Bo) Nance and OS's Charlie Shaw. Nance, named All-East last weekend, boasts 473 yards rushing and seven TDs. Shaw scored State's only six-pointer last year in Archbold when he dashed 80 yards to paydirt.

Besides Little and Nance, the Hill backfield features signal caller Walley Mahle and right half Ron Oyer. The Beavers' other backs include flanker Olvin Moreland and tailback Marv Crowston.

Defensively, Syracuse's Spiders have undergone a slight facelifting. Middle guard Gerry Everling returns to the first team, with John Krok switching to left tackle. Roger Smith, hero of the Penn State game, has taken over the right linebacker spot, pushing Murray Johnson to the middle.

Oregon State's defense relies on the strong play of linebackers Jack O'Billovich and Dick Ruhl. Safetyman Dan Espalin is the standout in the secondary.

Both SU and the Beavers dropped their openers, but have rebounded for four straight. The Piety has topped Kansas, Holy Cross, UCLA and Penn State, while OS has disposed of Colorado, Baylor, Washington and Idaho after losing to Northwestern, 7-3.

For the Orangemen, a triumph would mean five consecutive victories for the first time since the 1959-60 clubs put together a skein of 16 successive wins.

Flashback '63

By BOB KRENGEL

It is an old adage that football games can be won or lost by the bench. This was certainly proven true by the Orangemen's 31-8 demolition job on Oregon State last year in Archbold Stadium.

Coach Ben Schwartzwalder led his team into the fray with a 1-1 record, after taking three straight. But he was hampered by an injury list that included Mike Koski, Pete Colino, Bob Mitchell, Dick Bowman and Ted Holman.

Syracuse started the scoring as quarterback Wally Mahle engineered a touchdown drive. But the Piety also compounded their injuries, as Mahle did not get up after a 10-yard dash through Oregon territory.

With Mahle out, Schwartzwalder had to go with an inexperienced junior signal caller. Rich King. He answered the call.

Under King's leadership SU added two second-half TDs and set up John Paglino's 26-yard field goal that concluded the scoring.

However, the Beavers were not dead yet. In the first quarter they could do nothing, controlling the pigskin only four minutes. But during the second stanza they introduced a sophomore fullback named Charlie Shaw.

Shaw promptly ran a trap play up the middle for an 80-yard chase to paydirt, giving OSU an 8-7 lead.

Syracuse's Holman put on a thrilling but wasted exhibition of runnig in the third period. Holman got under a punt at the Oregon 48, manuvered all over the field covering 50 yards, but gained only 12 yards and the exercise.

In the final ten minutes, alert kicking specialist John Snider dropped back to punt, saw no Oregon men nearby, and romped for an 18-yard gainer.

The Hillmen intercepted three passes, recovered three fumbles and were penalized only 39 yards.

Oregon State coach Tommy Protho sadly stated: "Syracuse is without question the best team we've played all year. At least they played that way against us today."

ARMY TICKETS

Tickets for the Syracuse-Army game Nov. 7 in New York's Yankee Stadium are selling briskly, David Winter, assistant ticket manager, reported yesterday.

Regular tickets are priced at $5, with box seats selling for $7. Tix are available in the upper, lower and mezzanine sections.

There will be no student discounts for this game. Last season's SU-Army contest was officially a Syracuse home game, which resulted in $1 student tickets. The encounter this year is an Army home game.

Orange Harriers Face Alfred

By NEIL KERR

Syracuse's cross country team will go after its fifth consecutive victory tomorrow morning when it races Alfred at Drumlins Country Club.

Syracuse has outrun Buffalo, Colgate, Cornell and Army this season and needs victories over Alfred and powerful Penn State to notch its first undefeated campaign since 1956.

Alfred is now 2-1 having chalked up wins over Hartwick and Cortland while dropping a narrow 28-29 decision to Colgate.

The Alfred squad boasts a pair of talented runners, Bob Sevene and Bruce Hartzell, but is a bit short on depth. This duo ran 1-2 in the Colgate meet, but the Red Raiders took five of the next six places to win the match.

Six Syracusans form the nucleus of coach Bob Grieve's squad this year. This smooth-striding group has been led by junior Mike Spino who last week set a record of 24:57 for SU's 5.2 mile course.

Another junior, Bill Cihak, was the Orange's top runner last fall and is fast rounding into shape now after missing half the season with leg injuries.

JOHN CRAFORD

Other Syracuse varsity runners tomorrow will be Mike Shuster, Dave Daubert and Dave Hanna.

The Orange freshmen, led by undefeated Boyle, Bruce Pezzamenti, Bill Jones and Mike Schwirzer, will also run against Alfred tomorrow.

The varsity race will begin at 11 a.m. while the freshman gets off the mark at 10:15 a.m.

Tomorrow's race will be the 181st in Syracuse history. At this point, both Grieve and his predecessor, Tom Keane, have been at Syracuse's helm for been at Syracuse's helm for exactly 90 meets.

Keane served as SU's first coach when cross country got its start here in 1909. From then until 1942 he compiled a record of 65-25 in his 90 meets for a winning percentage of .722.

In 1942 Grieve, a 9.5 hundred yard dash-man and second team football All-American at Illinois, came to coach track at Syracuse. Since then his teams have posted a 72-18 record in 90 dual meets for a winning percentage of an even .800.

Syracuse's overall record during its 55 years of cross country stands at 137-43, as the Orange have won 76 per cent of their meets.

KEATING ADDRESSES RALLY ON CHAPEL STEPS

KENNETH B. KEATING

ROBERT F. KENNEDY

RFK MOBBED AS HE LEAVES FIELDHOUSE

"I'm pleased to be backed by the two leading newspapers in the United States — The New York Times and the Daily Orange," Sen. Kenneth B. Keating said Tuesday night.

Keating was addressing a crowd of Syracuse University ralliers from the steps of Hendricks Chapel, before stepping inside to lecture to about 1,100 Citizenship 1 and 104 students.

Following a tumultuous reception, Keating cited his qualifications for re-election to the senate seat for which former Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy is contending.

"As a member of the class of '65 might say to a member of the class of '68," he said, "experience counts."

Keating rebutted Kennedy's accusation that the Senator had voted against federal aid to education.

"I voted for every federal aid to education bill but one," he said. 'I voted against the 1961 bill because I thought it was unfair to New York State, Keating said.

Keating's main issue was his record.

"I am on the record in every issue. I have never ducked or dodged any issue and I never will," he said.

Keating drew a contrast between himself and his opponent who has been accused of wanting to use the New York State senate seat as a stepping-stone to higher offices:

"I have no desire except to serve," Keating said.

He cited his support of the four issues which President Lyndon B. Johnson has called most important. These were civil rights, the nuclear test ban treaty, the anti-poverty bill and the tax cut bill.

He listed the problems which America faces today — unemployment, city structure, and peace with freedom.

"America must be wise and prudent to solve these problems," he said.

A member of the audience asked Keating how he would propose to reduce the national debt.

Keating replied that he had no cure — all for the nations' financial problems. "The national debt is bad," he said, "but its not the worst thing in the world."

ALWAY'S TIME FOR ONE MORE QUESTION

THE KENNEDY GIRLS

"Hello, Bobby, well hello, Bobby — It's so nice to have you here where you belong" sang a crowd of students huddled outside Manley Fieldhouse Monday night.

The group was waiting for Robert F. Kennedy, New York's Democratic candidate for the U.S. Senate. He had been invited to speak on "The Campaign as I See It" by the Citizenship program of the Maxwell School.

When Kennedy arrived (two hours late) he was welcomed by 25 singing Kennedy girl coeds, a capacity fieldhouse audience and outside, a crowd whose spirit was not dampened by the intermittant rain and cold winds of a Syracuse autumn.

Mountaing his outdoor speaker's platform (a panel truck roof) Kennedy attacked his opponent's "good roll call" record, saying "A senator shouldn't just say 'aye' or 'nay' to someone else's bill. He must intiatite his own."

To illustrate his point, Kennedy quoted Francis Bacon: "In this theater of man's life it is left only to God and to angels to be lookers-on."

He told the rally crowd he was sorry that Syracuse lost to Boston College in football. "That just shows I'm a New Yorker," he quipped.

Inside the fieldhouse, Kennedy made a short address and then answered questions fired at him by members of the audience.

He said he was not a carpetbagger, since he spent 20 years of his earlier living in New York.

Asked his opinion on integrating schools by transporting students to various parts of the city, Kennedy replied: "We must have a heterogeneous school population, but "busing" for purely racial reasons is unconstitutional."

Kennedy emphasized the importance of the college student in today's world. "We've had advantages others have not had," he said. "We — you and I — have a responsibility."

Frosh Gridders Tangle with Army

By BOB KRENGEL

The Syracuse freshman gridders will be out to avenge their 15-12 loss to Navy when they meet the Army Plebes at West Point this afternoon. Games time is at 3:30 p.m.

The Tangerines will find no easy opponents in the Cadets, who blanked Colgate, 13-0, after losing earlier contests to Buffalo and Massachusetts frosh teams.

Although the Tangerines lost their last game, yearling coach Jim Shreve was happy with the team's performance. He said, "Our kids hit just as hard as we hoped they would, they controlled the game, but were hit by a 'Boston College' pass in the late minutes."

Shreve singled out several players for praise. Larry Csonka, a 6-3, 215 pounder, picked up 190 yards and was an outstanding defender in the tackle spot against the Midshipmen. He'll be back at fullback against Army.

Quarterback Ed Reardon's fine showing has assured him of a starting berth. Last week with Navy leading 15-12 with less than two minutes to play, he led the Tangerines to the Middie 10. His pass to Nick Kish in the end zone just missed.

Shreve will also make some changes for the Cadet contest. Drew Volz will move to left end in place of Gary Frederick. Kish will be starting at right half instead of Tom Coughlin.

The kicking of Don Bullard gave that youngster a permanent spot, as he twice boomed kicks of 60 yards into the Navy end zone, and wound up with a 45-yard-per-kick average.

Presenting: The Spiders, SU's Defense

By KEN RUDNICK

Syracuse University — as any college football buff could tell you — is the school of the glamour back. The heroics of Jim Nance and Floyd Little have done nothing to interrupt the SU tradition begun by Jimmy Brown and the late Ernie Davis.

This season, however, a group of young men who call themselves the Spiders are adding a new dimension to the Orange gridiron image—that of a defensive giant.

Statistics on defense released by the National Collegiate Athletic Association may indicate the beginning of a new era in Syracuse football. The Spiders rank second nationally to Alabama, a perennial defensive powerhouse, in total defense.

The Spiders are effective where it counts most—in the scoreboard. In five games to date, they have allowed 49 points, an average of fewer than ten per game. That kind of performance, coupled with the potency of the Orange offensive attack, usually adds up to winning football.

SU coach Ben Schwartzwalder put the Orange defensive unit together during spring practice, but the Spiders were not born until co-captain Hal Rooney's defensive cohorts noticed the small tatoo of a spider on his ankle.

Each man on the platoon sports a decal of a spider or a web on his helmut. The symbolism doesn't end there, however. Defensive backfield coach Roy Simmons hands out an award for each interception—the decal of a fly, fittingly enough.

Three of the aerial thefts have resulted in touchdowns by linebacker Murray Johnson, middle guard Gerry Everling, and defensive back Charlie Brown.

Roger Smith's interception in the waning minutes of the Penn State game set up the Orangemen's winning touchdown.

Defensive ends George Fair and Herb Stecker haven't intercepted any passes, but they are the key figures in a Syracuse rushing defense which ranks third nationally.

Fair, a junior, has twice been named to the weekly Eastern College Athletic Conference All-Star team and is a strong contender for sectional honors. Stecker is a sophomore who has given the kind of performance expected of a veteran.

John Krok, who will start at tackle against Oregon State, and linebackers Johnson, Walt Jajuga, and Jim Cheyunski are other sophomores who will be back to carry on the tradition of the Spiders for two more years.

Everling, a junior tackle who has been dogged by injuries, Smith, and defensive backs Black Widow Rooney, Brown, and Ted Holman will all be cack for one more season.

Wanted: Football Pollsters

By DAVE FLAUM

In their poorest week to date, the Fearless Four Football Forecasters failed to pick any of the weekend's major upsets.

Kansas's upset of Oklahoma, Purdue's drubbing of Michigan and Army's shocking loss to little Virginia stumped our panel of pigskin experts.

The Pitt-Miami game, which ended in a tie, did not count on the record.

The amazing Daily Orange staff led the pack for the second consecutive week and broke Sports Publicity's three-week win streak.

The DO was 6-3 and now has a seasonal mark of 27-12 (69.2 per cent) to trail overall leader Sports Publicity, 29-10 (74.4 per cent) by two games.

Meanwhile, WAER notched a tie with Spts. Pub. for second with a 5-4 slate for a 24-15 (61.5 per cent). The anonymous (and he'd better remain so) Orange Scout pulled only four of nine winners and tied WAER for last place in seasonal honors.

In the above predictions, the four attempt to improve their failing records. Anyway, how could they do worse?

Chickens, WAER Clash on Gridion

By ORANGE SCOUT

A huge crowd is expected to fill the Women's Athletic Field tomorrow as the DO Chickens and WAERwolves display their annual satire on football.

The game will start at 10:30 a.m. and there's no telling when it will be over.

Each team has an assortment of players. Some are fat, some skinny, others tall or short. None are in shape.

Dinky Danny Ritey has taken over the coaching chores from former mentor Wild Bill Cronauer, who is scouting the Chickens' next opponent (if there is one).

WAERwolf coach Jon Galinsky expects a hard fought game with his team the victor. "We're out to clip their wings." Galinsky said.

The Chickens have more depth but it has been pointed out that this could be a disadvantage because as one expert put it, "This will just increase their ineptness."

Rosey Rossky, Stu Schiffrin, Chris Viviano, Herm Card and John Wesche are the Chicken ends. Leaping Lew Prombain, Mel Allen and Bob Krengel are slated to alternate at center.

The backfield is even more helpless. Neil Kerr, Andy Porte and Jeff Lazar are quarterbacks (?).

To continue the joke Ken Auletta, Jim "Bo" Klurfeld, Howie "The Horse" Schneider, Shifty Steve Swimmer, Pat "Blockbuster" Tracey and Ken Rudnick round out the backfield.

The Wolf team sports Galinsky, Caso, White, Grief, Holl, Abelson and Bakst and numerous surprises. Positions and first names were not available for any particular reason.

The Chickens are coming!

high as $100 per school year, LaTorre said.

The second plan also is being considered seriously. The fieldhouse lot is designed for 1,300 cars and could lesson to a great degree the load now supported by lots closer to campus.

LaTorre said that a possible fee for the bus service from Manley Field House to campus would be 25 cents per round trip and that tokens might be sold.

This suggestion will involve such difficulties as tying up traffic in the Drumlins area when the cars arrive and depart and a possible inconvenience in getting to the cars in an emergency.

The third idea already has been partially discussed in as much as it would affect the parking garages. The intensity of the situation requires that surface lots may carry a charge also. LaTorre's suggested figure was $25-$50 per school year.

Limitation of student parking privileges is the most obvious solution as, even when the garages are completed, the problem will not be solved.

Included in this suggestion will be the work of the Student Senate's conduct and welfare committee headed by Steven Joffee. This group has been assigned to undertake a study of solutions and refer their conclusions to the Student Senate.

If the student body cannot agree on some method of limitation, a final proposal is to discontinue all undergraduating parking. Both the speaker for the parking committee and LaTorre said they did not know if students could have cars if they could find their own spaces off campus.

The parking committee spokesman said that if this were allowed, the problem with driving congestion would still be present with a probable number of infractions still occurring.

Complete discontinuation of undergraduate parking is considered a last resort by all university representatives.

Renovations and redesign of area streets is part of the program planned by both the University Hill Corp. and the university planning committee. Working cooperatively, the two groups will make a study and have solutions or suggestions to propose to the city for approval. When these plans are completed and the renovation is finished, a considerable difference may occur in the traffic pattern of area students.

David M. Beers, executive director of the University Hill Corp. said changes may include removal of houses to enlarge streets, relocation of streets, changing the direction of traffic on some streets, and discontinuing use of some streets as well as changing traffic signs and signals.

Because of these changes, the entire parking system may be affected with parking areas being shifted, removed or even enlarged. The final effect of these changes on the parking situation cannot even be projected, but they are likely to be considerable. When this program is complete, revision may be needed in all the other programs.

What is the best solution? Which will be used? When will action be taken? These are only a few of the many questions which remain unanswered.

In any case, cooperation and understanding is needed from all sides.

Comments on Solutions

Several solutions have been suggested to solve the parking problem. Students, administrators and various directors have commented on these solutions.

Parking Committee spokesman: "The university guarantees each student an education, not a parking space."

Robert (Robby) Stern, speaker of Student Senate: "I hope the matter is not handled in a unilateral manner where there is dialogue with the students. If this is not done, I think the university will find the students cooperative."

Arlyn Hertz, a freshman: "If no cars are allowed, students will bring them anyway. I think it will lead to more trouble than do good."

Robert D. Flaherty, director of security police: "I'd hate to see the cars taken away from the kids. It would really be an inconvenience."

'Duggie' Doing Fine

Mishap Hospitalizes Theta Chi St. Bernard

Duggie, the 165 lb. St. Bernard owned by Theta Chi fraternity, was improving yesterday at Boulevard Veterinary Hospital after being struck by a car Wednesday near the corner of Ostrom and Euclid avenues.

Unconscious and in serious condition upon arrival at the hospital, he was reported out of shock, in semi-conscious condition and showing stronger heart activity. His blood pressure had return d to normal by Thursday morning.

The two-year-old dog was in severe shock and had suffered internal injuries after he apparently stepped from between two cars into the street at 11:20 a.m. Wednesday.

He was loaded into a station wagon on a door used as a stretcher and taken to the hospital.

The thoroughbred dog was born Sept. 19, 1962, from a long line of prize show-dogs. An imperfection in his jaw bone takes him out of the show-dog category.

His breeders were working to develop as large as dog as possible, and he is reputed to be one of the largest St. Bernards in New York.

Duibar V of Riga—as the short-haired Duggie known for his antics on the quad is called—was purchased by Theta Chi March 1963 and grew to his full size by September.

DUGGIE, the mascot of Theta Chi fraternity, surveys the SU campus scene just before being injured Wednesday in an automobile accident. Theta Chi brothers say the dog is now resting comfortably and is on his way to recovery.

Freshman Officers Plan '68 Weekend Activities

By MARLENE CIMONS

Frosh officers whipped into action late Wednesday and formulated a tentative schedule of their season's activities..

Heading the list are ideas for their sponsored Freshman Weekend to be held Dec. 11-13.

Highlights of the annual event are a Friday night concert, Saturday afternoon carnival and Saturday night dance.

An innovation still in early stages of planning is the production of a show for Sunday afternoon featuring talent derived from the freshman class.

Immediate steps already have been taken to form a freshman executive council whose main purpose is coordination of the weekend.

Applications for the council are due at 5 p.m., Friday, main desk of the Women's Bldg., according to William (Todd) Wallens class president. Applicants are asked to include name, high school activities, extension number, campus address. A picture is optional.

Interviews for exec council will be held alphabetically from 7-9:45 p.m., Monday and Tuesday in room 209, Women's Bldg. Those with last names beginning A-M will be interviewed Monday; N-Z will be interviewed Tuesday.

It also was proposed to create a freshman house of representatives which will include delegates from each freshman dorm floor and cottage.

The purpose of this body will be to transfer infomation between the officers and the class as a whole, Wallens said.

Wallens; Jeffrey Lovelace, vice president; Mary Hamilton, secretary; and Peter Lee, treasurer have jointly issued a statement concerning their aims and ambitions as officers of the class of 1968 which reads:

"We feel confident that our objectives for a great freshman year can be accomplished. But time is of the essence. We must act. Yet we must act sensibly and rapidly.

"We, as officers, are pledged to move ahead with all the energy we have. We are counting on the support of the freshmen. Let us work together for the class of 1968."

Blood Drive Nets 418 Pints

Count Dracula would be ashamed of SU students!

Student participation in this year's blood donor program would make the movie vampire turn in his cape.

Approximately 245 units of blood were donated Thursday, bringing the total amount for the two-day drive to 418 units, below last year's quota of 541.

Fraternity men contributed 102 pints Thursday bringing their total to 184 pints. The 95 more pints of blood given by the ROTC cadets brought their total to 130.

Students in charge of the blood drive were Patricia McCarick, Association of Women Students representative, Stephen Springer of Alpha Phi Omega, national service fraternity and Dayton Dewey of Inter-Fraternity Council.

Mrs. Margaret Mariam, head nurse at the blood drive, termed the program a success although the turnout was less than expected.

LBJ, Goldwater Debate Set

A politician and a professor will debate national election issues at 8 p.m. Sunday in DellPlain Lounge.

Anthony Bouscaren will speak for the position "Resolved: That (Sen. Barry M.) Goldwater should be president of the United States" while William Andrews will speak for "Resolved: That Lyndon B. Johnson should continue as president of the United States."

Bouscaren is a professor of political science at LeMoyne College and is a noted conservative. Andrews is city chairman of the Syracuse Democratic Party.

The debate is being sponsored by the DellPlain dorm council. Refreshments will be served.

In regard to the control of New York by party bosses, Balbanian said that, "the Democratic party in New York State has been trying to overthrow the control of bosses. Kennedy is being supported for election by these party bosses."

"Therefore," Balbanian said, "Kennedy will play no part in the reform of New York State for which his group is striving."

"Kennedy," Lackey said, "wants to use this state as a springing board to the presidency." When questioned on this issue, he has never given a definate reply.

"Where," Lackey asked, "will this leave New York?"

For these reasons, the panel urged the support of Keating by all liberal Democrats and independants.

Panhel Plans Annual Dance: Set for Nov. 6

The fourth annual Panhellenic Council Charity Ball will be held Friday, Nov. 6 from 9 p.m.-1 a.m. in the ballroom of the Hotel Syracuse, announced Penny Cruickshank, chairman of the ball, Thursday.

The tickets, which will be sold in the sorority houses starting today will cost $3 per couple. This money will be donated to a charity yet to be decided.

The goal set for this year's dance is $1500, reported Miss Cruikshank. Last year Panhel donated $1200 to the Mental Retardation Fund from the proceeds of the ball.

A new award, the Panhellenic Recognition Award for outstanding support of the Charity Ball 1964, will be presented to the sorority which has the highest percentage of girls attending.

The Dick Kowell Orchestra and the Williamson's Parisians will provide continuous dance music. Free refreshments will be served.

Some skin cancers are caused by overexposure to direct sunlight.

Amendments, Proposition Scheduled for NYS Vote

By AMOS MOSCRIP

Nov. 3 could have important consequences for New York State voters besides the election of a President and a state senator.

New York voters will accept or reject two amendments to the state constitution. Voters also will decide the fate of a proposition.

The amendment on housing and the proposition on slum clearance could have far-reaching results, according to Dr. Alan K. Campbell, head of the Metropolitan Studies Program in the Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs.

An amendment to the State Constitution must be approved by voters after two successive legislatures have passed it.

A proposition is a question submitted to the voters by the legislature. It does not amend the constitution.

Amendment 1, the housing amendment, would make several changes in the constitution's housing article.

The most important change, Campbell said, would be the removal of urban notes from debt limitations.

At present a municipality must buy the land for urban renewal. The money spent buying the land and clearing it is included in the debt limitation.

The federal government eventually refunds two-thirds of the money spent buying and clearing the land. The state government refunds the other third to the municipality.

Most communities, however, already have reached their debt limitation before they buy and clear the land, Campbell said. The communiy cannot even begin urban renewal in this case.

With the removal of the debt limitation by amendment 1, Campbell emphasized, many communities previously hampered by the limitation could begin badly needed programs.

The second important part of amendment 1 would permit cities

Looking up, DAN LABOWITZ sees the roof, not the floor, of Prefab 7F. Renovation work was halted the same day it began when questions arose as to whether the reconstruction was financially worth-while in view of the prefab's eventual complete destruction.

The Floor Came Tumbling Down

By KAREN ZAGOREN

Two weeks ago Friday the floor of prefab 7F came tumbling down, perhaps never to be repaired again.

Daily Orange staff members, finding the sight depressing on their way to the Hellbox everyday, learned that the administration is searching for facilities to relocate the DO editorial offices.

"We are on the verge of making a decision," said James V. LaTorre, assistant to the vice president for administration and research, Friday.

This relocation would eliminate the necessity of replacing the floor, according to LaTorre.

Originally the wooden floor was removed because a physics laboratory, displaced by construction of the law school wing, was to be relocated here. Equipment for the lab needed a concrete slab base.

Relocation of the physics offices and lab was the major major concern, said LaTorre.

A vacant area in the west end of the stadium usually used by the home team was

OSU Attack Sparked By Sophomore QB; Piety's Little Shines

By BILL CRONAUER
Sports Editor

PORTLAND, Ore. — The Orangemen of Syracuse were on a winning streak early Saturday afternoon.

They had won their last four football games. They won the toss of the coin. And they won the opening touchdown.

But from that point on the Orange lost and they lost badly, 31 - 13, to an inspired Oregon State eleven in Multnomah's baseball - turned - football Stadium.

Why did Syracuse lose?

You couldn't find the answer in the statistics. SU mounted 13 first downs to 11 for State. The Piety outrushed the Beavers by nearly 2-1 and held an advantage in total offense. In fact, they even completed the same number of passes.

Coaches Ben Schwartzwalder and Tommy Prothro put it simply: "everything worked out right for State and wrong for Syracuse."

The Orangemen made several mistakes on defense, which cost touchdowns, not just yards. They were tagged with several drive-stalling penalties. They were the victims of two near - perfect

Pitt-Fall Weekend

Fall Folk Festival Featured

Pitt-Fall Weekend opens Friday night with a fall folk festival featuring Judy Collins, Ian and Sylvia, and the Irish Ramblers.

The entertainment is scheduled to start at 8:30 p.m. in Manley Field House.

Saturday afternoon will be marked with a clash on the gridiron between the Orangemen and the Pittsburgh panthers.

Couples will sway to the music of Dick Kowell and his ten-piece orchestra Saturday evening at a semi-formal dance "The Eve of all Hallows," held from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. in Sims Hall.

A Pitt-Fall queen will be selected to reign over the weekend events. Semifinalists in the contest will be announcer Thursday after the completion of a series of coffees.

Another highlight of the weekend's activities will be the house decoration contest to be judged at 10 a. m., Saturday. Entries will be judged on humor, originality, relevance to the theme of construction and good taste.

"I hope that the hard work that has been done on Pitt-Fall Weekend will be rewarded with an enthusiastic response from the student body," commented John Pear, sophomore class president.

"I am looking forward to the weekend as being one of the social highlights of the year. I especially hope that the class of 1968 will take advantage of the activites which have been planned."

Tickets and buttons are being sold this week in Huntington B. Crouse Hall lobby, according to Ralph Goldman, overall weekend chairman. Concert tickets are priced at $2 per person, and dance tickets cost $2 per couple.

Musicological Society Holds Meeting at SU

For the first time, Syracuse University played host to a meeting of the New York Chapter of the American Musicological Society.

The Newhouse Communications Center was the center of a program ranging from music of an early British period to modern day electronic processing equipment this weekend.

Panel to Discuss Race Problem

The racial crisis and its relationship to a university community will be the topic of a two-session lecture-discussion here Tuesday.

Featured speaker at the 4 p. m. session in Gifford Auditor-Hall, will be Prentiss L. Pemberton, professor of social ethics and sociology of religion at Colgate Rochester Divinity School, Rochester.

He also will be one of a five-member panel at an 8 p.m. session in Maxwell Founder's Room, Maxwell Hall. The panel will continue the day's topic, "Town, Gown, and the Racial Crisis."

The panel will consist of Robert Cohen, chairman of the Syracuse University Committee on Equality (SUCE); Dr. Howard Ham, acting director, department of religion; Dr. Charles Willie, senior research associate of the university's Youth Development Center; and David M. Beers, executive director, University Hill Corp., an organization concerned with urban renewal in the Marshall Street area.

Sponsored by the university's department of religion, these meetings will examine the relationship between university and community on current social problems. With the tensions in the northern urban centers in mind, Pemberton and the panel will discuss the ethical and religious aspects of civil rights issues.

PRENTICE L. PEMBERTON

As a member of the Rochester Planning Commission, Pemberton was active in initiating Rochester's police review board. His article about this board, "Law Enforcement in Northern Cities," appeared in Christian-

The Braves And Atlanta

The latest in professional sports' game of "moveable franchises" is the intention by team officials to move the Milwaukee Braves to Atlanta.

Whether the move is finally decided upon by club and Milwaukee city officials is really the minor point of the story. The major and tragic part is the story of Atlanta, a city which does not deserve the least bit of consideration from baseball officials.

For Atlanta, as every other major city in the South, stands for those outworn, deplorable standards of racial segregation which continue to divide our nation.

The tragedy of a possible move to Atlanta by the Braves will be the conditions under which acknowledged big leaguers such as Hank Aaron and Lee Maye will be forced to live.

The fans in Atlanta may cheer for Aaron on the field, but they may just as easily stone him or bomb his home once he leaves the ball park.

The Atlantas and the Birminghams and the Bull Connors and the George Wallaces belong to the world of the past, where man could not comprehend the humanity of his fellow man.

Today's world forbids such irrational ideas. In a world so scientifically advanced, it is appaling that the same world is so sociologically behind.

The people of Atlanta refuse to believe that black and white can live together and eat together, yet they readily will admit that black and white can play the same game together.

Atlanta's civic-minded citizens are urging the Braves to transfer their franchise. Do they also intend to enfranchise the Negro's rights at the same time?

The governments of the South continue to live and breathe the same archaic institutions. The philosophy of life seems to be geared to white supremacy.

It is no wonder that Black Muslim groups develop in the nation. They are motivated by the same beliefs as the southern White Muslims. Hatred of black for white only came because of developed hatred of the southern white for the southern black.

The people of Atlanta don't deserve major league baseball until they clean up their city -- of injustice and hate, not of crime.

All men are equal on the playing field. Why can't they be equal in the stands?

Bull by the Horns

He's Not for Me

By Rich Turner

Many things have been said about the candidates for President of the United States. I've heard emotion-filled oratory, statements of quiet dedication, and whispered remarks filled with the newest scandal. But the one remark which struck me most deeply was spoken by a Negro woman as she sat in a tenement building in New York City.

Last semester I took a leave of absence from the university. Eager to get away, I got a job with Pinkerton at the World's Fair. I found a grubby apartment on the upper west side and discovered after moving in that I was the only white person in the building.

It was a little funny at first, but after a couple of weeks I had a roommate, and he and I would go to the parties in the building together. The people were all individuals who had "moved up" from Harlem or Puerto Ricans who had never bothered to learn enough English to live anywhere else.

One night I came back from "Mallachys" on Third avenue and found my roomate was gone. I figured he was walking in Central Park and I knew the cops would throw him out soon, so I got some ale from the aging icebox and sat down. The door was open for some air, and I turned on WNEW and relaxed.

The Negro woman who lived in the front basement apartment walked out into the hall and came into my room. She was about 35, with bad teeth and ill-fitting clothes, but she was one of the nicest people I've ever met.

We talked about the superintendent, the clogged drains and the cockroaches for a while, and then she told me about the lady on the third floor.

She told me how the woman had been put in jail down in Alabama, and how they had used a milking machine on her. She told me of countless other disgusting things. We talked about police brutality and discrimination.

"You couldn't ever know what it's like to be a Negro in the South," she said. "It's like living as an inferior all the time. It's not bad in New York. Anyways, not as bad as a lot of places."

I remembered the comments in the locker room at the Swiss Sky Ride, and I asked her if she felt like a lot of guys I worked with. There was Sinclair, who lived in the Bronx and wished he was back in Harlem; Ben, who'd sung with a lot of rock 'n' roll groups and stayed drunk all day. They were all good guys — some of them very intelligent, but they had nowhere to go.

One thing they all had in common was a deep hatred for Barry Goldwater. I asked her about this, and she said:

"Goldwater won't be my President. I wouldn't live in a country he was president of."

Rightly or wrongly, Barry Goldwater is associated with all the reactionary tactics of the white majority. To these people he is the man who paints WHITE ONLY signs on rest rooms and refuses service to their southern relatives at lunch counters.

She was speaking for a lot of people when she said:

"Barry Goldwater won't be my President."

LETTERS

Defense

To the Editor:

When I began to read Dan Ritey's remarks in the Oct. 16, DO, I couldn't believe my eyes! Is this the work of a rational person or could it be the warped ideas from the warped mind of a prejudiced Democratic follower? How can this Mr. Ritey make such accusations about the two Republican candidates without giving his readers the impression that he too is as warped as he accuses Barry and Bill of being? That is the impression this reader got from the author.

I admire Mr. Ritey's initial statements which show beyond a doubt where his sympathies lie, and that is purely his perrogative. But when he launches such a vicious and unfounded attack on these two men, I find it impossible not to offer some retaliation. I feel that every reader of that article should be aware of how unjust it was.

Mr. Ritey implies that Barry's choice of Bill Miller for a running-mate was foolish by citing other prominent Republicans whom he could have chosen. Well, Bill Miller is one of the most dedicated workers in Washington today. His sincerity to the future of America cannot be disputed—just look at his performance at the Nuremberg Trials after W.W. II. Obviously Mr. Ritey, as well as many other Americans, is too blinded by his own prejudice to see this. If Bill Miller is the "sic" man Mr. Ritey says, then what must that author think of L.B.J.'s running mate whose views and past actions are far more controversial than any one else in Congress.

I might add that nobody forced Bill Miller on Barry, unlike the way in which LBJ was crammed down Kennedy's throat in the 1960 Democratic Convention. Certainly two men working together can run this great nation far better than two who couldn't even stand each other. If it was a machine that paired Bill with Barry, I wish Mr. Ritey would explain how LBJ and HHH were joined.

Mr. Ritey also comments that the worldly affairs of the nation are "sic." With this I must agree, but it was a powerful (?) Democratic machine that has made them this way. I dare Mr. Ritey, or any Democrat, to deny that the crisis in the Congo, South Viet Nam, Cuba, Berlin, or the cases of Bobby Baker, Billy Sol Estes, (and now Jenkins), or the riots in the Northern cities have not been events of the past four years —years when the Democrats were in the White House.

Does President Johnson's "sane administration" (as Mr. Ritey calls it) offer us four more years of the same? I'm afraid so. Is this "Great Society" President Johnson offers us one of four more years of mass riots and corruption? I'm afraid so.

Johnson's achievements over the past year are also cited by Mr. Ritey, but he fails to mention any—for obvious reasons! He implies that we should be thankful that in "times of crisis a strong and able man has appeared to guide our destinies—and with them those of much of the world." The truth is that in the past four years the U. S. has become just something the rest of the world can spit on.

I for one am sick of it and I think every red-blooded American feels the same. If America's policies continue unchanged from the last four years she will drown in the rest of the world's spit! Is this the "hope" President Johnson offers us? I'm afraid so.

Mr. Ritey describes the election of LBJ Nov. 3 as assuring us "social equality . . . and a true peace in our era." Can the riots in the large Democratic controlled Northern cities and the war in South Viet Nam be "peace and equality?" I think not!

I don't wish to slander LBJ or HHH as Mr. Ritey has done to Goldwater and Miller because I think that they too, are far above ordinary men. I merely felt that this gross injustice to two other equally talented men could not go unchecked.

The Sounds of Jazz

The Negro and Jazz

by Bill Newman

Much has been written and said concerning the Negro in jazz. Most of the information in circulation today is in the form of myth rather than fact. I intend to deal with this subject in two major veins. First is the claim that only the Negro has the natural capacity to play jazz. Second is the question of discrimination as it is found in the world of jazz.

Those people who feel that the Negro has an inherent talent in jazz by virtue of his race are laboring under an illusion which ignores some 60 years of jazz history.

In the period from 1890 to 1920, jazz was born. This came as a result of a synthesis between the American or British tradition and the Negro tradition in America. The first involved a melodic and harmonic tradition of a moral nature; the second a purely oral tradition of work songs and church music. At this stage Negro music and the Negro performer had an overwhelming influence on jazz.

Yet jazz as it has developed over the last 20 years has moved away from this direction. Today the negro is no more essential to jazz than his white counterpart. Jazz is an integrated music in all respects. While the roots of jazz depended on a Negro tradition, today neither white nor Negro can inherit all of the prerequisites of a competent jazz musician.

There comes the question, "Why are there so many Negroes in jazz?" The answer is obvious. Due to discrimination, the music field was one of the few areas of employment in which the Negro could attain an equal footing on the basis of ability.

The only major area in jazz where discrimination is really a problem is the deep South. Brubeck hasn't appeared there in years. Several years ago he cancelled his booking when he was told that his bassist, Gene Wright, could not room with the rest of the group in a white hotel.

Jazz is one of the few places where we find a reverse Jim Crow. In the final analysis you must make the judgment. Who is more important to jazz, John Coltrane, Miles Davis, Milt Jackson and Count Basie, or Stan Kenton, Dave Brubeck, Maynard Ferguson and Shelly Manne?

Jazz has presented a unique situation in American society. The greater discrimination is that which is directed against the white musician. Yet, I have little fears concerning the entire subject of discrimination in jazz. As jazz continues to grow as a sophisticated art form it will be clear that no mystique surrounds the Negro which makes him better suited to jazz than the white; and that he suffers from no cultural deficiencies that make him less suited to assume a role in the world of jazz.

Students Soak Up Culture

Syracuse University students spending the semester in Poitiers, France, are being steeped in culture and wisdom according to a "progress report" from Dr. C. G. Christofides.

Christofides is resident chairman of the SU semester-in-France and assistant professor in the romance languages department.

The 11 students, including two graduate students and three undergraduates from Reed College, Pennsylvania State University and are living with French families or in the dormitories at the University of Poitiers.

The course of study at the University of Poitiers includes nine hours of work in French language, French civilization and French literature with six hours of electives in history, mathematics, foreign literatures, fine arts and science.

The fine arts courses are conducted on the spot since Poitiers is in the center of the richest area of Romanesque monuments, Christofides said.

Applications for the spring semester in Poitiers are due by Nov. 30. Forms are available at the Foreign Study Programs office at 335 Comstock Ave. or the Romance Languages offices, 205 Huntington B. Crouse Hall.

Nothing There

This may look like a hole in the wall, but there's a purpose behind everything. Zeta Beta Tau fraternity is in the midst of remodeling their house to have more room for the brothers, as well as adding conveniences. Construction for the new wing should be completed by August.

Zeta Beta Tau Plans New Addition to Chapter House

A $200,000 addition to the Zeta Beta Tau fraternity house, 805 Ostrom Ave., is scheduled for construction beginning Nov. 3. Also scheduled is a renovation to the existing building estimated at $50,000.

Bids for the construction were taken last week.

Demolition was begun several weeks ago on two wooden structures on the east side of the house, facing Euclid avenue. The university has given ZBT a 50-year lease on the property.

The plans call for an addition which will house 53 brothers, a kitchen, dining room, and living room. The rooms will be panelled and furnished with built-in desks and wiring for telephones, hi-fi and an intercom system.

The entire insides of the old house will be removed and remodelled, providing quarters for a housemother, a chapter room, library, study hall and playroom.

A landscaped parking lot with space for 45 cars will be adjacent to the building. Wiring for air conditioning and plumbing for a pool will be installed for future use.

Completion is set for the middle of August.

Action Begins On Parking Problem

Ground was laid for action in the parking problem at the university parking committee last week.

Plans were made for a Nov. 2 meeting to discuss special problems and to hear the results of several surveys the university has been conducting.

From this meeting should emerge some recommendations to present to the Chancellor's office, according to Roland P. Graeber, committee chairman and assistant university marshall.

He and Robert D. Flaherty director of security police, "took the bull by the horns," Graeber said, by meeting with the senate committee on faculty welfare to promote changes in parking regulations for the faculty.

The senate makes recommendations to the university cabinet and, Graeber noted, these recommendations are usually followed.

Amendments, Proposition

and villages of under 5,000 population to share in the advantages of urban renewal financing. Financing was formerly available only to the larger communities.

The most controversial part

Campbell dismissed this charge.

"The state," he said, "is already in the business of middle-income housing. The working of the article was always of the amendment is the change in wording in the constitution's housing article.

The presently worded "low rent" housing of persons of "low income" would give way to "the housing of persons whose housing needs cannot be met by the unaided operations of private enterprise."

Opponents charge that this would permit state financing of housing programs for any in-vague. The state just wants to make clear its operations are not just for people in the low-income group."

"The biggest squeeze in housing is on the middle income group anyway," he said.

Other provisions of amendment 1 would provide for "broad urban renewal programs" and the "rehabilitation of sub-standard dwellings if this cannot be accomplished by private enterprise."

The proposition, Campbell said, "is merely the regular demand for more funds for housing and slum clearance."

The proposition would permit "an increase of $165 million in the state debt for loans to municipalities for slum clearance and low rent housing." Bonds would be sold for this purpose.

The controversy on the proposition is the supposed concealment of the fact that the funds might be used for moving low income tenants into middle-income projects a program that was rejected by voters in 1962.

Campbell admitted that this is already being done but added that this is not part of the proposition.

"This is being done by a public authority," he said, "and as far as I can see, it by-passes the proposition."

The State Housing Finance Agency already has authority to lease up to 20 per cent of the apartments in limited profit or middle-income projects and sublet them to low income families.

The tenant pays the rent he would pay in public housing and the difference is made up out of state funds. The 1961 supplimental budget appropriated $1 million for this program.

"This will go into effect whether or not voters approve the proposition," Campbell said.

"Its whole purpose is to prevent housing slums," he added. "A more heterogeneous mixing of tenants might have the low income group try to emulate the habits of their wealthier neighbors."

The proposition also would permit project tenants to stay in their housing brackets even after their incomes have gone up. The tenant would receive a proportionally decreased subsidy for his rent.

"It's not right to move a man out of a project onto an open housing market because he has an increase in pay," Campbell said. "This way he stays in his apartment and no one loses money."

Amendement 2, for a simplification of the NYS constitution, is one of the several amendments suggested by the former Temporary State Commission on the Revision and Simplification of the Constitution.

The important article of the amendment would repeal article I, section 7(b) of the constitution, which limits methods for setting fair value on the state's power of "eminent domain."

This would permit the legislature freedom in choosing any method to take private property for public use. The courts would assure just rewards.

The other articles of Amendment 2 would strike out sections in the constitution which no longer have any relevance today.

Featured topics were papers written on such subjects as early English brass music, sixteenth century studies, and the aid of electronic data processing equipment in the field of humanistic research.

Highlighting the two-day program was discussions headed by Dean Howard Boatwright, of School of Music, and Prof. William Fleming. They discussed the problems of musicology and university students, and professional music students as opposed to students registered in the College of Liberal Arts.

More than 60 teachers associated with colleges and universities throughout New York State attended the meeting.

Aubrey S. Garlington Jr., instructor in the fine arts department, was responsible for the arrangements of the program.

Brothers, Watkins Stop Hillmen

Fleet FLOYD LITTLE dazzled the crowd in Portland with a 55-yard run with a Mahle pass. The sophomore phenom caught four passes for 85 yards and picked up an additional 35 yards rushing.

JIM 'BO' NANCE scored in his sixth straight game by barreling over from the two late in the contest Saturday. He netted 69 yards rushing on 20 carries. The big fullback continues to lead the Orange ground attack.

Orange quarterback WALLEY MAHLE completed six of 12 passes for 98 yards and one touchdown in one of his better showings of the year. He picked up eight yards rushing to bring his total for the day to 106.

punts which rolled dead on the Hill seven and two yard lines.

And to top it off, they ran into a passer of few equals — sophomore Paul Brothers.

The rookie field general completely directed the Beaver attack. He connected on nine of 12 passing attempts, for a total of 176 yards, firing TD bombs of 44 and 39 yards. He also scored once himself.

"Brothers played a great game," Prothro chanted. "He sure did," moaned Ben. "He sure did," echoed the 24,236 wildly partisan Oregon State fans.

Yet Prothro typically emphasized that this was a team victory and indeed it was. The Beaver backfield, paced by speedster Cliff Watkins, continually plagued the Orange defense.

Watkins netted two touchdowns, totaling 68 yards on a pair of pass receptions and 45 more rushing.

The Oregon State line, offensively and defensively, could do no wrong.

The story for Syracuse, if there was a story, had to be the play of Floyd Little. Floyd notched the opening touchdown wiht a marvelous 54-yard run after taking a short flip from Walley Mahle.

Little alone accounted for 215 yards total offense, snatching 85 yards on four receptions, 46 yards on two kick-off returns, 35 yards on 12 rushing attempts and another nine on a punt runback.

Prothro called Little one of the best breakaway backs he had ever seen. "He's every bit as good as Southern Cal's Mike Garrett" (a pre-season All-America pick).

Every time he got the ball," Prothro noted, "I held my breath until he was on the ground."

Jim Nance, ho continued his touchdown string of six straight games with a tally early in the fourth quarter, managed 69 yards rushing. "He's a great fullback, real hard to bring down," said Prothro.

Schwartzwalder could say little about the game. "We expected them to pass," he revealed, "and they did." "They just hit well, and Brothers made the difference. That was it."

Syracuse scored first on the Mahle-Little pass play, while Roger Smith added the extra point to make it 7-0.

Oregon State, with Brothers at the helm, then marched 66 yards in nine plays, as Watkins romped around left end for the final 13. Steve Clark added his first of four conversions.

After the Orange were stalled and forced to punt, the Beaver's took over at the Hill 44. Brothers, on a fake reverse pass play newly inserted in the OSU attack, connected with Len Frketich, who romped untouched into the end zone.

In the second quarter, Clark booted a 13-yard field goal with 5:30 gone to make it 17-7. Then with less than a minute to go in the half, Brothers swept wide left for the score, and the Beavers led 24-7.

Only two TD's came in the final 30 minutes. State chalked up the first in the waning minutes of the third period on a Brothers-to-Watkins aerial covering 39 yards.

Syracuse rallied early in the fourth stanza with Nance climaxing a 55-yard drive by diving off the left side, and it was a 31-13 final.

It was just one of those games.

Frosh Halt Army 20-12; 3 Early TD's Decisive

By JEFF LAZAR

The Syracuse freshman football team proved they would win on the road as they made the Army Plebes 20-12 victims at West Point Friday.

Thanks to some aerial fireworks in the first half, the Tangerines all but salted away the game as they scored twice in the first five minutes and added a third tally in the second quarter closing out the initial 30 minutes with a 20-0 lead.

Kish Scores Twice

Halfback Nick Kish climaxed an early scoring drive of 45 yards by going the remaining 22 after receiving a few key blocks. Drew Volz's try for point after was perfect and SU led 7-0.

No sooner had the ice been broken than the Orange defense recovered a fumble on the Army 19. Quarterback Ed Reardon, who was to throw two touchdown passes, fired a strike to Kish on a look-in pattern. Volz added his second PAT, increasing the lead to 14-0.

55 Yard Drive

During the second quarter, Reardon engineered a drive of 55 yards with a combination of passes and line plunges. The six-point payoff came on a pass covering 16 yards. The receiver was end Ed Schreck, one of Reardon's favorite targets all afternoon. Volz's kick was blocked.

Army Rallies

With the score 20-0, the Plebes nearly destroyed the fine first half the Tangerines enjoyed with their first sustained drive of the afternoon and their constant pressure on the quarterback.

Dick Shipley and Carl Woessner collaberated on a seven-yard pass for the West Pointers' first touchdown as they capped a 55-yard march. The kick for the extra point was blocked.

While the resurgent Plebes were grinding out the yardage they needed to stay in the ballgame, SU surrendered the ball on mistakes. They were never able to start rolling. In addition, penalties proved costly as they wiped out sizeable gains and put pressure on the team.

The Tangerines had only two good drives during the entire second half. The first was wasted with an interception on the seven by halfback Ollie Johnson, a younger brother of John, a wingback on the Army varsity.

Moments later, the Orange had returned within striking distance but this too went for naught as Don Bullard's field goal attempt from the 30-yard line was wide to the left.

Turning Point

One of the turning points of the game came following an Army interception of a Reardon pass. This occurred after they had ruined the shutout and were on the march for a score to put them within one touchdown. However, SU's defense held and the potential drive ended.

During the closing minutes of the game, the Plebes marched 80 yards with Shipley throwing to Steve LeKamp and Chuck Remmel. Their second and last score of the game came on a two-yard flip to Remmel. Shipley's pass for a two-point conversion was knocked down.

Season Notes

The win was the Tangerines' second in three outings. Last week they lost in the final minutes to the Navy Plebes 15-12 although they had outplayed their opponent.

Army hit much harder than either Navy or Manlius. However, it was felt that the Navy backs were the fastest they'd seen thus far.

In the season's opener, the Orange pulled off a close 14-6 win over the Red Squires of Manlius.

Next Friday the freshmen play their only home game of the year when they face Colgate, hoping to avenge last year's 7-0 surprise at Hamilton.

DO Chickens Run and Pass To 18-12 Win Over WAER

The Daily Orange Chickens beat the WAERwolves Saturday morning, 18-12.

The Chickens, who had a 12 point lead at one time, managed to overcome a late wolf surge and hang on to its one touchdown lead.

Missed blocks, dropped passes and errant hikes highlighted the game.

The chickens demonstrated a solid defense holding WAER deep inside DO territory for seven third downs at one point.

But WAER displayed an offense in the last quarter that could have won hte game if it had been displayed in the first two quarters.

The Chickens scored first in the first period when Ken Auletta intercepted a pass and raced into the end zone.

They made the score 12 to nothing when quarterback Neil Kerr hit end Stu Schiffin in the end zone.

But WAER roared back as Jon Galinsky threw two touchdown passes — one as the game ended.

The Chickens tallied the final TD on another long heave from Kerr to Schriffin.

The WAER wolves were led by Galinsky, Ron Graef, Bob Eberle and Hank Kahn.

Harriers Remain Unbeaten

By NEIL KERR

Syracuse's harrier squad has been improving with every meet and last Saturday's race with Afred was no exception. The Orange won its fifth straight, 21-40.

In winning its ninth race in 10 dual meets with Alfred, SU captured five of the first seven places.

First to finish was Mike Spino, who broke the 5.2 mile Drumlins course record for the second consecutive week. Leading all the way, Mike broke his seven-day-old record by nine seconds as he finished in 24:48.

Other early Orange finishers were John Crawford (second), Marty Miller (fifth), Tom Giordano (sixth), and Bill Cihak (seventh).

"That was a real good race," said coach Bob Grieve later. "We figured we had the meet but we wanted to improve. And we wanted to beat Sevene and Hartzell."

Alfred's Bob Sevene, who had been undefeated prior to this meet, finished third. However, SU's Spino and sophomore Crawford were both pushed below the previous course record while beating him to the tape.

Syracuse's Marty Miller finished fifth but was running with the leaders until he developed a stitch in his side during the last mile.

Alfred's lack of depth became apparent Saturday when its third man to cross the finish line was 10th overall.

"All the kids have improved quite a bit," commented Grieve. He pointed out that Syracuse's Mike Shuster ran the course in 26:30—a full one and one-half minutes under his previous best—but was only able to place ninth. Grieve also noted that the harriers ran in cold, windy weather—conditions not exactly conducive to record breaking performances.

The Piety's freshman squad got on the winning trail for its third victory in four meets as it also downed Alfred 19-38.

Orangemen Dennis Boyle remained undefeated and broke the 3.3 mile course record to boot as he crossed the finish line in 17:01. This was three seconds better than his own previous record.

SU's Bruce Pezzamenti and Bill Jones took second and third as the yearling harriers also captured five of the first seven places. Mike Schwirzer and Bill Tobin finished sixth and seventh to complete the Syracuse scoring.

FIRE SEARS BUILDING

A three-alarm fire swept through a university building early Monday morning, causing an estimated $500,000 damage. Spokesmen for the food service warehouse and research center located there say that no major interruptions will be caused by the fire.

Labs, Food Warehouse Burned; Damage Estimated at $500,000

By LOIS WINEBAUM

An estimated $500,000 damage was caused early Monday morning when a three-alarm fire swept through a university building on the Collendale campus which housed a Food Service warehouse and the Microbiological and Biochemical Center.

Eleven fire companies responded to the alarm which was turned in at 4:45 a.m. by a local milkman, according to John M. Dacey, Syracuse fire marshall.

There were no people on the premises at the time when the fire broke out.

Firemen remained at the location at 1075 Comstock Ave. until approximately 2:30 p.m., Dacey said.

The fire is believed to have started in the portion of the building operated by Food Service, John H. Nair, technical director of the research center, said Monday afternoon. Major damage was caused to the canned goods, paper ware, facilities for making ice cream and baked goods which are stored there. The damage, however, will cause no interuption in food service, according to Francis A. Wingate, university vice president and treasurer. The only change will be that baked goods will have to be bought for awhile, Wingate said.

The damage to the research center in the south end of the building was caused mainly by smoke, water, and heat, Richard D. O'Neill, director of the Corp., said.

Firemen were able to save most of the projects being carried on by chopping holes in the roof of the corregated iron building, O'Neill said. A gasoline generator is being used to dry up the water.

Damage was caused only to the projects now in progress, he said, because reports on com-

Bouscaren Notes Scandals Of Administration in Debate

By KAREN ZAGOREN

The present administration has not been dormant. The new frontier has contributed Bobby Baker, Billy Sol Estes, Mat McCluskey and Walter Jenkins.

This was one position stated during a debate Sunday night in DellPlain Hall by Anthony Bouscaren arguing for the election of Sen. Barry M. Goldwater.

Bouscaren, professor of political science at LeMoyne College, had as his formal topic: Resolved that Barry M. Goldwater should be elected president of the United States.

He was opposed in the debate by William S. Andrews, city chairman of the Democrat party.. Andrews opposing argument was "resolved: that Lyndon B. Johnson should continue as President of the United States."

Continuing on the morality issues, Bouscaren said, "The public cannot tolerate markedly deviate behavior."

Andrew's opening statement was a direct attact on Bouscaren. He read portions of a letter which was signed by 18 members of the LeMoyne College faculty.

The letter pointed out Johnson's endorsements of such items as the nuclear test ban treaty, equal treatment of all citizens under the law and recognition of the physical, economic and social problems of cities.

Referring to the now controversial GOP campaign film, Andrews quoted a friend of his as saying, "pornography in defense of morality is no vice."

Bouscaren pointed out that we are using the same planes he flew in World Wat II as equipment in Viet Nam.

We have never been weaker than we are at the present time, he said.

This talk and thinking away things that never existed reminds me of '1948.' Andrews said.

Specifically he said that planes slower than jets were requested in Viet Nam and that Johnson was not against civil rights because it was he, who as majority leader, steered the 1959 civil rights bill through the Senate.

Different tactics were employ-

Judy Collins

Singer 'Lives' Recordings

By MARLENE CIMONS

Unlike the song which established her trademark, Judy Collins, once "A Maid of Constant Sorrow," is now a major contender for the feminine folk-music crown.

Miss Collins will be arriving at the Hill Friday to be one of three featured entertainers in the fall folk festival concert opening sophomore-sponsored Pitt-Fall Weekend.

Seatle-born and Denver bred, Miss Collins was first influenced by her blind father who emceed a local radio show. After studying concert piano and performing with the Denver Businessmen's Symphony, she gave up the piano for the steel guitar.

Miss Collins soon became a folk-addict and began haunting Denver folk-dens.

"Folk music became my contact with other human beings," she says, "a way of saying what I think is happening inside their souls.

"What's happening in the music now is what happened in the Germany of Weill and Brecht—this outcry, this fury, this screaming 'It's exciting- It's exciting!"

As her most famous song states, Miss Collins was once indeed a "Maid of Constant Sorrow" who was forced to face many trials in her climb to success.

She has fought bouts of infantile paralysis, tuberculosis,

SU Campus Carnival Nets $900 Profit

"The carnival brought in two-thirds of the money we need for this year's Campus Chest goal," said Stephen Kroft, treasurer of Campus Chest Carnival.

"We hope to net $900 at least. We have $1250 of the gross profit in now. We expect another $150-$200 from curfew money, queen application fees and the Association of Women students fashion show donations. But of this expected gross of $1450 a big portion will be used to pay the university for the cost setting up and cleaning up by building and grounds," Kroft explained.

This is a drop from last year when 32 booths grossed $2100 and netted $1500.

Nancy Glynn, freshman sponsored by Flint Hall, was elected Campus Chest Carnival queen by 136 in one-cent votes.

The big brown teddy bear, raffled by Beta Theta Pi, Alpha Chi Omega, Sigma Nu and Pi Beta Phi, was won by the owner of raffle 276. If the winner does not claim his prize, an alternate winner will be chosen.

Of the 38 booths the Alpha Gamma Delta and Sigma Chi's egg throwing booth was judged the most popular by Gail Rhein, booth chairman. The booth took in $162.50.

The most popular rides were the ferris wheel and bumper cars which totaled $248.

Chi Omega and Delta Tau Delta won the prize for the most unique booth with their rickshaw ride. The plaque will be awarded to them later this week.

The most profitable booth will be announced later this week by the officers of Campus Chest who judge the contests.

We Support LBJ

The Alternative That Isn't

It has become increasingly apparent in this election campaign that the election of Lyndon B. Johnson and Hubert H. Humphrey a week from today is necessary to maintain progress within our society.

The sad truth is that we are faced with an alternative which is not really an alternative. The differences in ideas of the two major candidates leave no room for decision, for the views and voting record of Sen. Barry Goldwater make him, in our judgment, unfit to serve as leader of the nation.

In the session of Congress recently completed, the the Arizona Republican took stands on six issues with which we cannot agree.

1. He voted against the tax cut bill, which provided a reduction in personal and corporate taxes.

2. He voted for an amendment to the fair employment bill which would have deleted its equal employment section.

3. He voted against cloture of debate on the civil rights bill.

4. He then proceeded to vote against the most sweeping civil rights legislation of the century.

5. He voted against the administration's anti-poverty bill, an attempt to provide partial relief to some of the nation's underprivileged.

6. He voted against the Medicare proposal, which would provide needed funds for the aged.

In the past, Sen. Goldwater has come no closer to impressing us with several of his positions on issues. His theme of "total victory" over communism may be an admirable goal, but he has yet to provide a concrete program for accomplishing his purpose through peaceful means.

The senator has at times throughout his career advocated severing relations with the Soviet Union as a threat to communist bloc nations. We feel that such a decision, and even such a threat, would be completely incongrous with the stakes of peace in today's world.

Sen. Goldwater openly denounced the nuclear test-ban treaty and voted against ratification in the Senate. We find opposition to this first step towards peace contrary to the commitment of the nation and the overwhelming desire of the people.

The Republican Party's standard-bearer has never voted for a final foreign aid bill, which we can only interpret as indicating a belief that no aid is better than too much.

And if we must quote one of the senator's many statements which we cannot accept, it would be that one given before a Wisconsin gathering in 1957. The senator commented, "Because Joe McCarthy lived, we are a safer, more vigilant nation today."

We believe in the American Dream, just as the senator believes. Our diversity lies in the differences in method by which to make the dream a reality.

There are those who are bound to be overlooked in a free enterprise economy. It is our feeling that the federal government must do all realistically possible to aid the impoverished, especially when such measures are beyond the capibilities of the states.

It is our belief that the United States has a commitment to the world which must be conscientiously met. The way to meet this commitment is not by rejecting one of the main hopes for world peace the test-ban treaty.

It is indicative of the commitment of the Chinese Communists to world violence that they, too, opposed the treaty, while it was signed by a near-unanimous number of the world's nations.

The alternative with which we are left is Lyndon Johnson, who has performed quite capably in his brief term in office.

He is not, as some Republican-oriented newspapers have claimed, the lesser of two evils. He is the only choice.

Guest Spot

Bye, Bye, Barry

by David Sosna

The bets are in, the pools have been organized and all that's left is the dull wait for the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November. For the unlucky few that possess Goldwater markers the future is grim: monetary loss.

The time has passed when Goldwater and the more repugnant Miller may be considered as prospective residents of the White House. An ill-fated effort from the start, the Goldwater cruise is sinking fast. And, as with the proverbial fleeing rats, the ship has only its inept captain to watch the helm as it slithers into ignominious defeat.

The Associated Press carried a story recently of yet another Republican leaving the ranks because of Barry's buffoonery. William R. Seward, Goldwater's administrative aide, desserted Camp Goliath because of a wide difference of opinion on national issues between himself and The Leader. He also claims that Goldwater is being pressured by a hard-core conservative group into moving "farther right." (Careful, Senator, you'll fall off the edge of the world.)

And what of the camp, the hotbed of hate, bosom to the oppressed masses? It is more oligarchy than organization with Kitchels and Burches running the store. Surrounded by Goldwater supporters and friends. Amateurs have replaced the political pros. Youthful defiance has been substituted for cold, tactical logic.

The tragedy of this shameful mockery will lie in what, and who, is destroyed next month.

Logical Republican thought?

No more. We are urged to do our gardening with nuclear arms and to let Gov. Wallace solve his racial problems on his own.

But perhaps more embarassing is the man chosen to dictate this spurious philosophy. As unpleasant as it is, an intelligent, mature support, as seen in William F. Buckley's writings, would certainly be of more value to all concerned than the careless evokes laughter where he should be getting serious consideration.

Goldwater, however, is not the pathetic character in this comic opera. Sympathize instead with Romney, Scranton, Percy, Rockefeller and the other good, capable, sincere Republicans who would be happier and accomplish more selling Landon for President buttons.

When Barry falls, so will they. But there is an element of such sheer beauty and such poetic justice that it must be mentioned.

One of Goldwater's major theses is that the federal government is too big now. Johnson has too much power, he says. However, the senator has managed to alienate so many people that he has forced what are sure to be heavy republican losses in the House and Senate.

With a Democratic president and a Democratic majority in both houses and the incumbent's great political ability, Johnson' word will soon be law.

The president is popular, but history will remember Barry as the man who made him king.

To the Editor:

Freshman elections . . . sad, sad, sad. Freshman voting procedures . . . bad, bad, bad. Freshman election outcome ? ? ?

Though the nominating convention was handled beautifully and a fine set of candidates was selected to campaign for office, there seems to be a fallacy with these plans — the public. The officers we elect are to be servants of the people and we are the people; however, the chance we were given to know our candidates was far from satisfactory. A few candidates visited the living centers, but because of homework, few people could be expected to attend.

WAER broadcast the candidates' platforms . . . at dinner time; and then, all the candidates were not there at one time. Since the freshman class had to be subjected to so many convocations the first week of school, one more couldn't have hurt.

A convocation that merely introduced all the candidates and their platforms briefly would have had far more appeal than the techniques used. I imagine all we can do now is sit back and hope for the best from our elected representatives. If there was a poor turnout at the polls, it was not our fault. Why vote for candidates you don't know?

All the class of '68 can do now is to work as hard as they can for what they want. If we are unjustly accused by the upperclassmen of disinterest or laxity, let them reexamine the issues.

Interview

Emlyn Williams

by Seth Shapiro

Following the performance of Emlyn Williams as Charles Dickens last Thursday night at the Regent Theatre, we were fortunate enough to obtain a personal interview with Williams.

The following is the text of the interview: Q. "You have done solo readings of both Dylan Thomas and Charles Dickens. Do you find any similarity in their styles of writing?"

A. "Yes. Dickens was one of Thomas's favorite writers. I find in some of Thomas's more humorous works a Dickens type of humor."

Q. "Of all your Dickens readings, which is your favorite?"

A. "I have no favorite. Many of Dickens's works are enjoyable, but some will not fit into my performance. I choose works which are both enjoyable and playable."

Q. "Mr. Williams, you have played both solo roles and parts in large cast plays. Which do you prefer?"

A. "I enjoy both. After a long time in a large cast play it's nice to do a solo role, but I enjoy working with other actors very much."

Q. "You have played both the parts of St. Thomas More in "A Man for All Seasons" and Pope Pius XII in the controversial play "The Deputy." How would you compare the two men?"

A. "Well, according to the plays, though More was only a layman, he was more religious than Pius. More gave his life for his beliefs, while, it seems Pius did everything he could to preserve his life."

Q. "What reactions did you get when you played these roles?"

A. "Very interesting ones. When I played More, there were many nuns and priests in the audience. When I was playing Pius, however, I would walk out of the stage door to taunts of 'Catholic hater'."

Q. "In your portrayal of Dickens, you use many actions and voice changes to accentuate the mood of the stories. Do you know what Dickens did at his readings?"

A. "No. There were accounts of his readings, but they were so filled with the descriptions of ladies fainting and men crying that I could not find what I wanted. So I play it my own way and trust to luck that this was the way that Dickens played it."

Q. "One final question, Mr. Williams. What, in your opinion, is the major difference between European and American theatre?"

A. "Well, with regard to Broadway, the main factor is money. Broadway shows are money-run. You don't find the same situation even in London. Off-Broadway productions, however, are quite similar to European theatre."

Before we left, Williams also discussed British politics with us and complimented us on our Johnson button. Above all, it was an enjoyable nightcap to a thoroughly exciting evening.

"Pirates" At Regent

"Pirates of Penzance," the story of a young boy apprenticed to a band of pirates, will be presented at 8:30 p.m. this Thursday, Friday and Saturday at the Regent Theatre.

The opera tells the story of Frederic, whose nurse misunderstood his mother's request to apprentice him to be a pilot, and instead, sent him to learn the trade of the pirates. His subsequent adventures and love affairs make up the plot.

The play stars Ed Roman as the Major General; Art Kucinski as the Pirate King; Lenita Chadina McCallum as Ruth, the nurse; and Ronald Burdett as Frederic.

Also featured are: Tom McKee as Samuel, the king's lieutenant; Donald Miller as the sergeant of the police; and the Major General's wards, Lorraine Bluhm, Jeanie Hammond, Jean Slentz and Bonnie McKee.

Stage direction is by Dr. Joseph Golden, professor of drama, who presented "Down in the Valley," and "Thieves Carnival." Musical direction is by Paul Dieke, whose previous efforts for Syracuse audiences have included "The Fantasticks," "The Merry Widow" and another Gilbert and Sullivan favorite, "The Mikado."

an unsuccessful attempt as a student at MacMurray College in Illinois and another year in a marriage which ended in separation.

In her art, Miss Collins has exhibited an unusual facility for dramatic phrasing and a rich, bell-clear alto voice. From today's flock of urban folk sylists she is perhaps the first to have lived the songs before learning to sing them.

The New York Times has said of her: "Judy Collins.. established herself without delay in the front rank of American balladeers...by the evening's end she had moved her large audience to cheers whistles and bravos—all heartily deserved."

"Here crystallized on a single disc, are the cross-currents—political, social moral—that have shaped the current folk song renascence, "commented High-Fidelity magazine on one of her recent album releases. "Miss Collins sings with exceptional beauty..."

Miss Collins' record album's include, "A Maid of Constant Sorrow," "Golden Apples of the Sun" and "Judy Collins No 3."

The concert will begin 8:30 p.m. in Manley Field House.

Bouscaren . . .

ed by Andrews to spark audience reaction. Posters put up before the debate advocated such things as increased military might, gross national product rises and greater industrial earnings during Democratic administrations.

Moreover, he passed out photostats of a page from a Dec. 21, 1959 issue of U.S. News and World Report with portions complimentary to the Democrates marked clearly. The article referred to nuclear war.

Finally, Andrews in his rebuttal of Bouscaren pointed out how Goldwater's attitudes would be negative towards the development of Syracuse.

Labs, Warehouse

pleted projects are on file in separate offices.

Some of the instruments being used are estimated in the vicinity of $15,000. The exact amount of the damage will not be able to be determined until this euipment can be inspected, he said.

It is possible that the quonset hut will be able to be salvaged Nair said.

"We are a laboratory operation he added. "That means that we can set up operations whereever we have benches, water and the necessary equipment."

A committee was scheduled to meet late Monday to decide on a new location for the labs according to Nair and O'Neill.

The semi-cylindrical building, originally called Quanseteria, was built in 1947 as a dining hall for students. It was subsequently used as the headquarters for a Russian languages school and as a recreation hall.

In 1956 the food service bake shop was moved there from Slocum Hall. The Microbiological and Biochemical Center was located there in 1958.

The contents of the building were previously threatened early this summer when a gas leak was reported in the research center.

There are no serious problems in food service foreseen from the fire. A new warehouse will be set up today on the first floor of the Continental Can Co. on the corner of University avenue and Erie boulevard, according to Mrs. Ursula Pettingill, director of food service.

As soon as supplies in paper goods and food arrive, they will be stored here, she said. Food service plans to use this temporary warehouse until plans are made for a new building. Mrs. Pettingill estimated that this would take six-nine months.

Low & Inside

By BILL CRONAUER
Sports Editor

"Not since the luxury liner Titanic ran into an iceberg has there been such leakage," shouted a Portland sports writer Saturday, obviously referring to SU's pass defense.

And he was right. Even Hill coach Ben Schwartzwalder couldn't believe what had happened to his supposedly impregnable defense. "Penn State gave us a few problems with their passing last week," mumbed Ben, "but we didn't have a collapse anything like this."

What actually happened? Simply, we were outsmarted.

As is a common practice, Syracuse and Oregon State traded films of the previous week's games. Orange officials knew that OSU would readily observe our defensive laxities against Penn State. In fact, the only way we averted a catastrophy at University Park was by the Lions' failure to connect on passes.

So Bill Orange would fox 'em. We'd secretly undergo a mass movement in the secondary, with Ted Holman switching from right half to safety and Dan Healey moving into Holman's slot. Charley Brown would remain at left halfback..

Then when the Beavers threw in the middle, we'd have Holman, conceded to be our best pass defender, there to meet them.

The only trouble was Oregan State wasn't sitting still either.

As expected, Beaver coach Tommy Prothro noted Orange weaknesses on pass defense. But he also realized that we know the situation, too, and would make some changes.

At this point the Beaver board of strategy figured out a few new wrinkles for soph quarterback Paul Brothers to toss at the Orange, based on SU's man-to-man type coverage in the secondary.

The new plays worked to perfection. The first was a fake reverse with Brothers keeping the ball and then passing deep to Len Frketich, who snared it at the Piety 44 and raced to paydirt.

The other key maneuver sent tailback Cliff Watkins wide and then deep into the Syracuse backfield to be on the receiving end of a Brothers' bomb. In the third quarter Watkins grabbed Brothers' toss for 39 yards and the final OSU score.

"Most new plays come when you spot a weakness in the films of the other team's games and then figure out something to take advantage of it," Prothro explained. "I wasn't surprised Frketch and Watkins were so wide open. We figured things would work out that way."

Syracuse ran into trouble when it assumed that the Beavers would use their regular pass plays. As a result, when the new patterns developed, our defenders couldn't diagnose them.

We were simply out-foxed, or out-Beavered, out West.

TV Game

Ben Sees Same Cast

"I shook the bush and theior same chickens fell out."

And with that analogy Ben Schwartzwalder indicated that there won't be many personal changes for this Saturday's game against Pittsburgh.

The Panthers will come into Archbold Stadium with a 2-2-2 record, having tied its second consecutive game last week against, Navy 14-14.

Previously they tied Miami (Fla.), beat West Virginia and William and Mary, and lost to UCLA and Oregon.

The most significant changes for the Orangemen will be on defense, where Terrell Roe, a 200-pound sophomore from Walton, will start a right linebacker and Bob Morgan, 215-pound senior, will be used more often at middle guard.

Jim Cheyunski and Murray Johnson will share the left linebacking duties.

"And we'll still have the same four deepmen," Schwartzwalder said at Monday's press conference: Teddy Holman, Charlie Brown, Dan Healey and Hal Rooney. "It wasn't so much that these boys didn't stay with their men against Oregon State, but they didn't recognize the pass plays."

Schwarzwalder also said that the Orangemen were fortunate not to suffer more injuries. Tony Scibelli and Rober Smith both have pulled leg muscles but both are expected to be ready Saturday.

BOB MORGAN
. . . at middle guard

The coach, however, expressed concern about his number one kicker, Smith, and also said Tom Wilhelm will play if Scibelli can't.

According to SU scout Roy Simmons, Pittsburgh is a solid ball club that likes to control the ball. "This is a typical Pitt club," Simmons said. "They like to grind out the yardage up the middle and off-tackle and they score on sustained drives."

"However, their line isn't as tough as it was last year," he added.

Pitt, one the top-ranked teams in the country last year, was hard hit by graduation. Its starting line from tackle to tackle graduated and first team backs Rick Leeson and Paul Martha are also gone.

The man who single-handedly murdered Syracuse last year, however, Fred Mazurek, is back at quarterback. He is considered the Panther's most dangerous offensive threat though he has been plagued by injuries most of the season.

And another face familiar to Hill fans willl be in the Panther starting team—Brian Generalovich. Only last year it was on the basketball court that the "General" played against SU.

This year he is a starting defensive end and also plays some offensive.

Simmons said that Pitt's two fullbacks Barry McNight and Jim Flanigan are powerful runners and good blockers. McKnight is a junior from Indiana, Pa., and played in the same backfield with SU's Jim Nance while in high school.

Eric Crabtree is another back to watch. He is the fastest man on the Panther squad and is effective inside or out.

A Orange nemesis last year, Bill Bodle, has been injured and isn't expected to appear in Pitt's backfield.

Simmons summed up his feelings about Pitt when he said, "If Mazurek has a hot hand Pitt will give us trouble."

★ ★ 'I Don't Have Any Alibis' ★ ★

The following is the sixth in a series of question and answer sessions between DO junior editor Howard Schneider and coach Ben Schwartzwalder.

Q—Why was our pass defense, both our rush and coverage, so ineffective Saturday?

A—Three times in this game our defense was fooled badly, and all three mistakes resulted in touchdowns. Once it was an end, then a linebacker and finally a defensive back. It was a matter of not recognizing what to do. As far as our rush was concerned, it wasn't very successful, to say the least. When you lose by the score we lost there isn't anything that is very successful. We played a poor football game, mentally and physically. There's not much else you can say. I don't have any alibis.

Q—Earlier in the year you stated that Floyd Little and Jim Nance fere two of your best defensive performers. Why didn't you use them on offense and defense Saturday?

A—If I had two Floyd Littles I would use them both in the offensive backfield. If I had three. . .well, maybe then I could spare one for defense. Nance and Little are fine defensive performers, but you can't split them down the middle. I have to decide where they will do the most good. I feel they can do more for us an offense.. If we had more depth in our offensive backfield, and the boys could rest more, then they might be able to go both ways. But Saturday it would have been physically impossible for them to play offense and defense.

Q—Before the game you said you were going to pass more than usual. Why did you throw only four times in the first half?

A—Football is a game you play "play by play." You throw the ball only when it is necessary and only when the opposition makes a pass attractive. This is not to say that we were satisfied with our ground game. We're only satisfied when we win and even then we make mistakes. But there were factors other than our passing that stalled the ground game. Our blocking was poor and most of the time we had poor field position.

Q—After falling behind early in the game why wasn't the team able to come back?

A—The game unfolded in a rather explosive fashion. We make three mistakes, they've got three touchowns, and we're in trouble. It's like a pitcher who's rolling along and then slips with a home run ball. All of a sudden he's in a hole. Down a couple of tuchdowns we were forced to play a different game. It just didn't work.

Specifically, if we could have changed a half a dozen plays we might have won. That's how close it might have been. On the other hand, as the score indicates, Oregon State was a fine team and they beat us bad.

Q—Previously you stated that "we played a poor football game physically and mentally." As a coach how do you expect to get your team back into shape for Pittsburgh?

A—I realy don't think that will be much of a problem. The boys felt terrible after the game. They want to improve and I think they'll be ready. One consolation will be the fact that we won't have to travel 3,000 miles to play the game.

Free Press? Board Members Speak

Administrators Say Constitution Stops Jealousies Among Editors

By CAROL RUBRIGHT
Junior Editor

"Andy's the editor—he does what he wants," John S. Hafer, chairman of the Board of Student Publications, said Monday.

Hafer was referring to Daily Orange Editor-in-Chief Andrew Porte and his editorial role as it now stands under the auspices of the new Board of Student Publications constitution.

"The board is an administrative committee which appoints editors to the DO, the Onondagan, Syracuse 10 and other campus publications. It also has the power to remove staff members as it sees fit, supervise publication budgets and may attempt "to maintain standards ...consistent with the best principles of higher education and professional journalism," according to the constitution.

Whether an editor is allowed to "do what he wants" is contingent upon one clause of the constitution which says the board has the right "to supervise the editorial administration of the student publications by reviewing general policy, examining editorial procedure

Modern Justice

New Dimensions Found for Ethics

By KAREN ZAGOREN

"Justice in modern times has become a new dimension of ethics." This was the thesis presented by Dr. Prentiss Pemberton professor of sociology and anthropology at Colgate-Rochester Divinity School in a lecture entitled "Town, Gown and Racial Crisis" Tuesday afternoon.

Pemberton said he referred to modern times as the beginning of the 17th or 18th centuries.

Tracing justice from the past to present, Pemberton defined it in the pre-modern period as "rendering every man his due on the basis of patterns and structures of society enduring from time immorial."

"At this time social change was almost synonymous with anarchy," he added.

Two characteristics emerged during the 18th and 19th centuries involving change, according to Pemberton.

First, society shifted from an ascriptive to an achieving one in that man desired to fulfill himself and not stay in a stagnant condition.

Second, "there was a gradual movement from scarcity to eco-

SS Meets Today As Controversial Matters Abound

By JESSE SMITH

Student Senate will start plunging into controversy at 7:15 p.m. today as several important matters come up for discussion.

The meeting will be held in Maxwell Auditorium.

Marshall Sneirson, speaker pro tempore, said "There's going to be a big surprise," but refused to elaborate.

The Daily Orange learned Tuesday that certain senators were planning to raise the issue of segregation at Virginia Polytechnic Institute in connection with the SU-VPI football game to be held Nov. 14 in Archbold Stadium.

Sneirson announced that the constitution of the university publications board is on the agenda for tonight. although SS has no jurisdiction over it.

Administrators, faculty members and the Student Government president sit on the board, which oversees the DO, Onondagan, and Syracuse 10. Sneirson said that infringement of academic freedom and freedom of the press is the issue SS will consider.

Also slated for possible debate are ratification of the Association of Women Students constitution and a proposal for student representation on the university housing committee.

The government structures committee voted not to approve the AWS constitution Tuesday. Committee members were dissatisfied with certain "undem-

Sorority Delegates Reject Plan to Revise Frosh Rush

By SANDY LAPIN

After a lengthy discussion, all proposals to initiate fall open houses for freshmen women and, thereby, revise spring sorority rush, were defeated at a special Panhellenic Council meeting of sorority presidents and rush chairmen Tuesday night.

A majority of sorority representatives said they felt substituting open houses in the fall for the first round of formal parties in spring rush was a good idea. But, they said, there is not enough time to arrange a workable procedure so the open houses could be held this fall. Also, representatives could not agree on a weekend when the open houses could be held.

A committee was organized, however, to investigate the possibilities of and plan for fall open houses next year.

Panhellenic executive council also plans to propose minor revisions for this year's spring rush, such as dates and amount of time spent at each house. These proposals will be voted on by the entire council at a future meeting.

DO Surveys Major Campaigns

Tuesday is not only the day for the election of a president. Political races are drawing to a close for 26 governorships, 35 seats in the Senate and 435 seats in the House of Representatives.

During the next four days the Daily Orange will give a brief run-down on some of the campaigns that have major importance for or are of special interest to the nation.

Today reporter Amos Moscrip examines the Oklahoma and California senate races.

By AMOS MOSCRIP

Personalities and the liberal-conservative leanings of the candidates have become the main issues in both the California and Oklahoma senatorial races.

In Oklahoma Republican Charles (Bud) Wilkinson is running against Democrat Fred Harris.

Wilkinson is a former University of Oklahoma football coach (record: 145 victories in 178 games) and former top advisor on the late President John F. Kennedy's physical fitness council.

Harris, only 33, already has served eight years in the state senate.

Much of the campaign has concentrated on each candidate's folksiness, but Wilkinson said he is hoping that his Goldwater Republicanism, in a state where Sen. Barry M. Goldwater backing is strong, will draw away support from the liberal Harris.

Harris emphasizes his friendship with President Lyndon B. Johnson. If elected as senator, Harris promises that he "will do more for Oklahoma."

In California Democrat Pierre Salinger, former press secretary to President Kennedy and Johnson, is running against Republican George Murphy, a 1930's song-and-dance star for Metro Goldwyn Mayer Studios.

Salinger is already the Democratic senator from California. Gov. Pat Brown appointed him three months ago to fill the vacancy left by the death of Sen. Clair Engle.

Salinger is concentrating on his record with the Kennedy administration.

Murphy questions the exact importance of Salinger under Kennedy and terms Salinger a "carpetbagger."

Salinger, away from California for nine years and a former voting resident of Virginia, filed for the Democratic primary only two days before the deadline last spring. The State Supreme Court upheld his residency.

Murphy also hopes Salinger's liberalism will hurt him. Murphy is a straight Goldwater conservative except on the Civil Rights Act and foreign aid.

One of the vital issues in the campaign is the Rumford Fair Housing Act. The act, passed late in 1963, prohibits discrimination in the sale or rental of almost all California real estate.

Opponents of the Rumford Act have put up a measure, proposition 14, to repeal it. If the proposition is approved Tuesday, any new attempts of the state, city, or county to act against any form of housing discrimination will also be blocked.

Salinger supports the Rumford Act, but a "white blacklash" vote against him could be heavy.

Murphy refuses to discuss his position on the act or the proposition, calling it "one of the more emotional issues of the campaign."

The Threat To Freedom

The new constitution of the Board of Student Publications throws around some very simple, yet quite nebulous, terminology.

Chief among these is the often-used phrase "best interests of the university." To date, no one has defined this group of words, and we expect that no one can.

For there are so many conflicting interests in the university that it would be impossible to say which are best for the university as a whole.

Certainly it is not in the best interests of the institution to have a poor administrative decision made public by the news media, as has been done in the past. Surely on the other hand, it is not in the best interests of the university with the world's outstanding journalism school to supress any organ operating within the principles of journalism, which include reporting that which is news.

We ask then for the Board of Student Publications to resolve this conflict of interests as soon as possible, by either making a feeble attempt at defining the university's best interests or by removing the ax that dangles over our heads if these interests are not fulfilled.

Our ideas concerning the best interests of the university are quite probably different from those of most administration members. The board must resolve this conflict.

In line with best interests goes the question of dismissal of an editor for not appearing before a meeting of the board to which he is called.

It was explained at the first meeting that editors are expected to be present at every board meeting. This makes them at least, in our judgment, non-voting members of the board. They could easily have included this in the constitution, but for untold reasons, such a clause was omitted.

We seriously question whether the dismissal clause (article III, section 7) is truly in line with the free press supposedly guaranteed. The clause injects in us not the feeling of fear for which it may have been intended, but rather a feeling of repugnance towards the administration's attitude.

We are also dismayed at the clause which maintains the university's guarantee of an "uncensored" publication, "in a nation in which freedom of the press is an essential of democracy."

There is more to freedom than freedom from censorship. There must be freedom from the dark cloud of dismissal which may descend if one violates those sacred, and undefined, "best interests of the university."

If no administrative answer is written into the constitution by the time of the next board meeting, then the board must act to resolve the conflicting interests.

We merely ask a few clarifications. When they come, then we will be able to comment again. Favorably, we hope.

O Say Can You See

'Go Away, Ghosts'

By Ken Auletta

The New York senatorial race began and I was as sure in my support of Sen. Keating as could be. It ends, and I am left sitting before my absentee ballot, my mind as cluttered and helpless of resolution as was Hamlet's.

I've got all sorts of ghosts up there, shouting at one another, hiding, flaunting, ripping—taunting me with their wicked little stories. "Robert Kennedy is cold and ruthless!" "Remember him humbly and tearfully standing before the Democratic National Convention?" "Robert Kennedy is no liberal!" Kenneth Keating has offered no new and dynamic leadership!" "Robert Kennedy is cynically exploiting his brother's memory!" "Save the Republican Party!" "Save Robert Kennedy!" "Reward service!" "Be bold!" "Unite the Democratic Party!" "Destroy bossism!" "Don't risk embarrassing Hubert Humphrey!" "Help pull Lyndon Johnson to the left!"

It cannot be altogether pleasing to tell a man that at the age of 61, after serving the people of one state for nearly 20 years, he alone is not enough to produce a noticeable effect upon people. But that is what this election is, a referendum on Robert Kennedy.

You struggle towards an opinion as a shout attracts one ear, while another shout invades the other.

Gore Vidal tells of "Bobby's intellectual spuriousness, of his ruthlessness and cunning. Yet this is the same Kennedy who constructed such an impressive record as attorney general, the same Kennedy who in interviews replies with the unabashed candor that in American politics is usually reserved for the rich man whose wealth has taught him to fear no one, or the naive man whose political life shall surely die at birth.

The Nation magazine warns, as do many on the left, that Robert Kennedy is insensitive to civil liberties. They cite his brief affiliation with Joseph McCarthy, his pursuit of Hoffa, and his support of a wire-tap law that would have granted the attorney general enormous discretionary powers. Yet, Anthony Lewis, the New York Times' respected constitutional law expert, in a dispatch filed Sept. 4, 1961, states in regard to his attorney generalship:

"One of Mr. Kennedy's least publicized activities was his helping to reduce Communist-hunting excesses. He fought behind the scenes for dismissal of unsupported security charges. He directed immigration authorities to end what he regarded as humiliating political interrogation of people wishing to enter this country and he helped to permit the admission of foreign artists and other notables despite communist affiliation."

It is noted, and properly, that Kennedy recommended for appointment three federal judges who now distinguish themselves for their staunchly segregationist views. He is accused of political expediency in regard to civil rights.

It is also noted that to defeat Keating is to remove from the Republican Party those who would keep it from Goldwater's reach (even here, the cruel truth is that it is not Senator Keating who is so important, but the Republican party). The argument is one whose goal it is to "save the Republican party." Yet, how stands the liberal who holds such a view when asked if he would vote for Adlai Stevenson were he the Democratic nominee? Poor Republican party.

Emotion plays with us this election year. New York's enigmatic senatorial contest is not a simple matter. Save those who are in the habit of substituting an automatic party response for the rigors of selective thought, it would be less than completely honest for any man to claim that his is a vote free of emotional considerations. Let the painful truth be told to our positivists: we are a people less in reason than our thoughts would tell.

We come, then, to a choice. And since my mind is plagued by contradictory shouts which offer no resolution, I need turn elsewhere. To my instincts.

They are willing to accept Robert Kennedy is a man of more than liberal view.

They recognize that Kenneth Keating is a good and an honest man, who can, however, be trusted not to go beyond the limitations of what we have come to expect of him—a safe man, not greatly distinguished in a politics that rests on the pillow of consensus.

But Robert Kennedy is perhaps a daring man; at least he was last week in Manley Field House when he advocated that the United State's was a policy too restrictive towards mainland China and Cuba. This is the type of visible growth in a man that John Kenneth Galbraith noted was so obvious in John Kennedy.

We shall surely be in need of daring men, for ours is a liberal society fat from laziness; a society so fearful of the threat from its right that it does not see the threat from its middle.

And so my instincts mark my ballot for Robert Kennedy, hoping that he shall stir our conservative politics, anxious that he should pull at Lyndon Johnson's large left ear.

But you note, nevertheless, that you are registering an opinion and not a conviction.

while you whisper: "Go away, ghosts!"

To the Editor:

It is curious to note the following excerpt which applies today as it did when it was written:

"No one has ever questioned his ability or his dynamic energy. But these very qualities...have in times of peace caused him to be considered dangerous, and a little uncomfortable to have around. Then, too, he has always represented the extreme viewpoint. He has never stood on middle ground—he went all out for anything he advocated." The extremist references are to Winston Churchill in the book "Why England Slept" by John F. Kennedy.

WAER 'Focus'

Senatorial candidates Robert F. Kennedy and Kenneth B. Keating will discuss the issues of the New York Senate race on the WAER "Focus" show at 6:30 p.m., today on 88.3 FM.

During their recent visits to Syracuse, both men answered identical questions for WAER news. These answers have been compiled into a 30 minute program on the issues of the campaign.

The subjects discussed include the carpetbagging issue, federal aid to education, civil rights, the test ban treaty, Cuba, and the debate question.

'ON' Info Due

Organization presidents who have not returned their Onondaga information sheets which were distributed two weeks ago are urged to do so immediately.

"Unless all information is in this week, the organization will not be included in this year's annual," said Melinda Lopin, organization and activities editor.

Any organization which has not been contacted and wants to be included in the 1965 ON should go immediately to the yearbook office in the basement of Winchell Hall or call ext. 2131 or 2132, she added.

Pogonaut Petey Appears At Regent Theatre Show

"Petey and the Pogo Stick," second production of the current Concert Series for Children will be performed 2 p.m. Sunday at the University Regent Theatre.

The musical fantasy recently completed a five-month run in New York City. Written by Dee Henoch, the play tells the story of a boy, Petey, who invents an atomic motor for his pogo stick.

When Petey returns home from a trip around the world on his pogo stick, he is given a hero's welcome and heralded as the world's first "pogonaut."

Music was written for the fantasy by Gordon Myers with choreography by Howard Girven. Revolving panel sets were created by Robert de Mora.

Tickets may be obtained in advance at the University Regent Theatre.

In early spring, visitors in Sicily can ski on the slopes of Mt. Etna in the morning and swim in the warm Mediterranean in the afternoon.

AWS to Vote on Extended Curfew Changes Tonight

Two proposals affecting curfew changes are on the Association of Women Students agenda for today's meeting at 7 p.m. in the Women's Bldg., alumni lounge.

One proposal concerns only freshmen and senior coeds. If passed it will change first semester frosh curfews from 9:15 p.m. to 10:15 p.m. Seniors would benefit from a midnight curfew during both the fall and spring semesters under the same proposal. Both portions will be voted on as a unit.

Probation curfews would be changed to conform to the new hours if the second proposal is approved.

Students on university probation would have half of their special permissions cut under this system. The assembly committee recommended this because the special permissions are used primarily for social purposes.

Present probation curfews cut one hour off week day curfews.

The proposals were voted upon by each floor and living center at their Sunday night meeting.

They were first considered at the request of Student Government.

If passed by the assembly, the proposals will go into effect Nov. 1.

Irish Ramblers

Folk Mores Influence Trio

Ireland's steeped folk tradition had a marked influence in shaping the lives and careers of three brothers who call themselves the Irish Ramblers.

The trio will be appearing 8:30 p.m., Friday in Manley Field House as a segment of the three-part folk concert kicking off Pitt-Fall Weekend.

The brothers were born in a little village, Charlemont, situated on the border of counties Armagh and Tyrone in Ireland.

The Ramblers began to take an early interest in folk music when their home became a clearing" house for singers and musicians for miles around when the singing and playing would last till the early hours of the morning.

At this time, the boys were playing in many well-known Irish Country Music bands and doing various radio broadcasts on radio.

In February 1963 they were playing in an Irish club in Dublin when spotted by an impressario who asked them if they would be interested in traveling to the United States.

At a family conference it was quickly decided to take the trip and attempt musical success in America.

Within a couple of months the boys were playing Irish clubs and dancehalls in the United States. Following this, the brothers began appearing in coffee houses and nightclubs, and to date among other places, have performed at Chicago's "Gate of Horn," New York's "Folk City," "Bitter End," Boston's "Unicorn Club" and "The Second-Fret" in Philadelphia, as well as three concerts in New York's Carnegie Hall.

They have also made appearances on the Arthur Godfrey show plus television in Boston, Philadelphia, San Francisco and Chicago.

Their current album is entitled "The Patriot Game" on the Elektra label.

A free shuttle bus service will be provided for anyone attending the Friday concert, it was announced by Ralph Goldman, overall weekend chairman.

Buses will leave Sims Hall from Manley Field House directly after the concert.

Irish Musicians

THE IRISH RAMBLERS will be a major feature of the folk festival concert which will kick off Pitt-Fall Weekend at 8:30 p.m. Friday in Manley Field House. The trio is composed of brothers from Ireland who will sing traditional and popular folk music.

Administrators Say Constitution

and investigating other aspects of reporting, editing or editorial activity deemed necessary."

The constitution, which became effective Sept. 28, differs in three major items from the previous one. It is these changes which caused one student editor to comment:

"The constitution gives 'divine right' to campus leaders."

In previous years, the editor and two staff members of each campus publication served on the 10-member board and voted on questions involving their own medium.

The 1964 constitution replaces the staff members with presidents of the three senior honoraries, Eta Pi Epsilon, Tau Theta Upsilon and Phi Kappa Alpha.

The membership ratio of five administrators and five students has been maintined, however.

The remaining seven members are Hafer, the dean of men, dean of women, dean of the journalism school, the publications' financial advisor and the president and vice president of student government.

The ousting of publications members from the board was viewed as being caused by the "many petty jealousies between publications," by Francis E. O'Brien financial advisor and board member.

"The editors often would vote strictly in the interest of his own paper," he said, "without taking a larger view of the board as a whole."

Dean of Men Jim G. Carleton said he "questions the feasibility of an editor selecting his successors or re-electing himself."

The editor will still have a say, Marjorie C. Smith, dean of women, commented. "He will serve as a consultant a resource person," she said.

The new constitution includes two sections which were entirely absent from the original. They are:

Article III, Section 7 — The editor-in-chief and business manager of each authorized student publication shall be obliged on pain of dismissal from their post to present themselves to any meeting of the Board of Student Publications to which they are called.

Article VI, Section 8 — The editor-in-chief and/or business manager shall be required to relinquish his post for the semester succeeding that in which his cumulative grade point average falls below 1.5. He will also be ineligible to continue after receiving his undergraduate degree."

IFC Convo to Introduce Fraternities to Freshmen

InterFraternity Council will hold a convocation at 8:30 p.m. today in Hendricks Chapel to introduce the fraternity system to freshmen.

Co-rushing chairmen, Robert Evanson (Sigma Phi Epsilon) and Charles Carter (Tau Kappa Epsilon) have announced that Frank J. Harrar, director of men's housing and fraternity administrator, will speak.

In addition, Evanson and Carter said Dean of Men Jim G. Carleton may also be present, the co-chairmen said.

The primary purpose of the convocation is to give freshmen the opportunity to ask questions. George Van Derven, IFC president, and representatives from all the fraternities will be present to answer queries.

Freshmen are requested to read "Meet the Greeks" before attending the meeting. The pamphlet will be distributed prior to the convocation by resident advisors.

Salt water freezes at 28.6 degrees Fahrenheit.

nomics to the beginning of abundance."

At this point a new definition of justice emerged. Pemberton explained. Justice now "renders every man his due in the light of actual and potential resources," he said.

An important key to the racial crisis of today is communications, according to Pemberton.

Jim Brown, Syracuse graduate and fullback for the Cleveland Browns, was cited as "Symbolizing a new type of achieving Negro."

Pemberton stressed that communication is necessary between white and white and Negro and Negro as well as between Negro and white.

He said that:

"We must train ourselves to work with the freedom leaders while letting the Negro maintain the dominant role."

ocratic" nomination and election procedures.

AWS President Diane Kessler claims that the committee has no right to review election procedures. The matter now goes to the steering committee, which meets today. The full senate may debate the issue tonight.

The student conduct and welfare committee has already defeated a bill for seating 86 representatives on the university housing board. The bill has been reconsidered, along with other possible housing proposals.

Speaker Robert (Robby) Stern said that SS will probably debate the issue, whether or not the committee changes its stand on the bill.

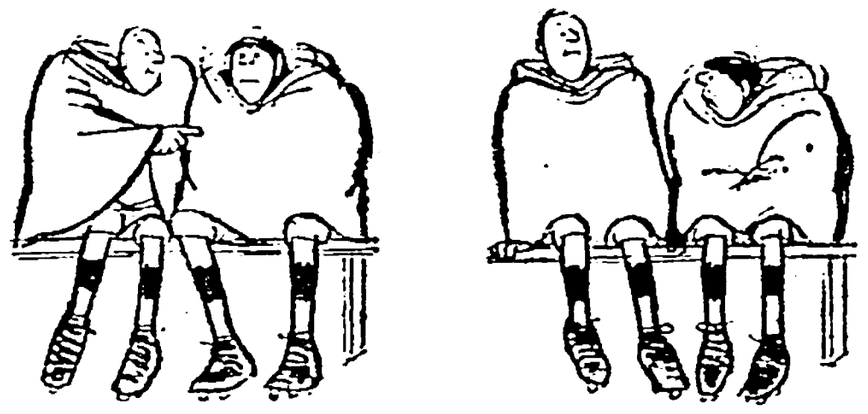
1. Now that we're 21 we have a lot more responsibility.

Now we make the decisions.

2. Right. And this year we have a big decision to make—who gets our vote for President.

I've already decided to vote for the candidate of my choice.

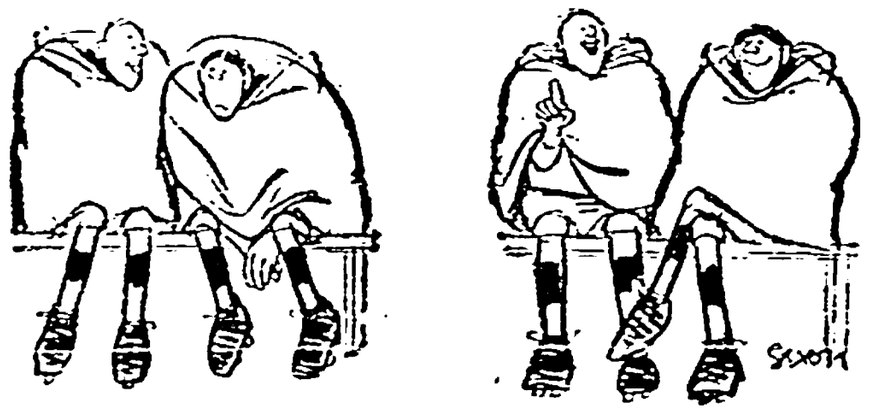


3. Your decision should be based on what the candidate stands for. For example, does your man's fiscal policy square with your philosophy on the matter?

I hope not. I never could handle money.

4. Then how do you expect to go out into the world, support a wife, raise children, and be a two-car family?

I wish I knew.



5. Let me give you a piece of advice that will help you off to a good start.

I'd sure appreciate it.

6. Soon as you get a job, put some dough into cash-value insurance, the kind they call Living Insurance at Equitable. It gives your wife and kids solid protection and it automatically builds a cash value you can use instead for retirement or whatever you like.

Say, why don't you run for President?

Hillmen Retain Lambert Lead

By BOB KRENGEL

UPI and AP pollsters shoved Syracuse clear out of sight on their weekly grid poll yesterday following Saturday's 31-13 humiliation at the hands of Oregon State.

However, there was one bright spot remianing as the Orangemen retained first place in the battle for the Lambert Trophy, symbolic of Eastern football supremacy.

SU, with a 4-2 record, clung to its lead by capturing three first place votes and has a rating of 9.0 from the committee of eight coaches, broadcasters and sportswriters.

Villanova (5-0), idle last week, held second place. Penn State (2-4), a 37-8 winner over West Virginia, is in third spot, with Boston College fourth after its 13-7 decision over Air Force.

But it was a different story as far as the national ratings were concerned. The Piety, enjoying eighth spot last week, were nowhere to be seen as Michigan, Illinois, Oregon and Georgia Tech entered the top 10.

Undefeated Ohio State ranked first on both polls for the second straight week.

Notre Dame, after its impressive 28-6 victory over Stanford, just barely squeaked into the runner-up spot by replacing the Crimson Tide of Alabama, who had a tough time holding Florida 17-14.

UPI rated Nebraska fourth by a slim margin over Arkansas, while AP saw the Razorbacks as no. 4, followed by Nebraska.

An unusual feature of this week's balloting was that only 18 teams were given votes on the UPI rating board.

The second eight (UPI) included. LSU, Duke, Florida, Oregon State, Purdue, Utah State, Florida State and Yale.

Ex-Gridder Is Nominated For Award

A former Syracuse University fullback, Dr. Walter Zimdahl, has been nominated for this year's Silver Anniversary All-America award

The award, given by Sports Illustrated, is based on a player's success in life in the 25 years since his senior collegiate gridiron days.

Dr. Zimdahl, after his three years on the Orange, worked cal School and is currently president-elect of the New York State Society of Internal Medicine

He graduated from medical school with honors and was president of his class for four consecutive years.

Dr. Zimdahl was director of the University of Buffalo Chronic Disease Research Institute where he helped develop a polio unit that was the only one of its kind in the East for respiratory cases.

He entered private practice in 1955 but has continued teaching as an associate in medicine at the University of Buffalso Schoool of Medicine and has published some 25 papers in the field of cardiovascular disease.

The final selection of the 25 will be announced in a November edition of Sports Illustrated.

Buffalo, scene of the 1963 American Bowling Congress, has been host to that event more than any other city-seven times.

—SECOND TIME—

Little: Soph of Week

A 55-yard touchdown run and a total of 215 yards total offense against Oregon State has earned SU's Floyd Little his second designation as sophomore of the week in the East.

Little, who led last year's frosh team in rushing, pass receiving, and scoring while averaging eight yards a carry, has continued his exciting play this season.

He has touchdown runs of 90, 71, 55 and 55 yards this fall and is now tied with Jim Nance for team scoring leadership with eight touchdowns.

Statistics also show that Little ranks second in rushing yardage with 419 yards on 79 attempts for a team leading 5.3 average per carry. The speedy sophomore also leads the team by a wide margin in pass receiving. He has hauled in 12 passes for 194 yards.

Both USC's Mike Garrett and Kansas' Gale Sayers were preseason All-American picks, but Little hasn't taken a back seat to either.

Against Kansas he scored five touchdowns and chalked up 254 yards in his best performance of the season. Sayers was unable to score and was held to 84 yards by the once-powerful Syracuse defense.

Though he hasn't played against Garrett, Little has been favorably compared to the USC flash by both Oregon State's Tom Prothro and UCLA's Bill Barnes.

Prothro termed Little "every bit as good as Southern Cal's Mike Garrett" and Barnes remarked that Little possessed more speed.

A number of Syracuse opponents were named to this week's All-East team. Included on the club are Penn State's Bob Riggle, a halfback; Holy Cross's Joe Lilly, a tackle; and halfback Bob Shann of Boston College.

The team:

Ends—Steve Bryan, Dartmouth; Nick Rossetti, Connecticut.

Tackles— John Breiten, Colgate; Joe Lilly, Holy Cross.

Guards—Paul Savidge, Princeton; Bob Schroeder, Rutgers.

Center—Don Downing, Navy.

Backs—Archie Roberts Columbia; Bob Riggle, Penn State; Bob Shann, Boston College; Chuck Mercein, Yale.

Regatta Highlights Rowing Sessions

By NEIL KERR

With the approach of cold weather Syracuse's crew team plans to wind up fall practice sessions this week at Onondaga Lake. The 35-man varsity team has rowed nearly 140 practice miles this fall and coach Loren Schoel is pleased with the results.

"We've made real progress this fall," he said. "We've got depth, but the squad is going to be a young one. Only Tom Prindiville, Bruce Wilson, Bill Russell and Norm Magers are back from last year's varsity. But most everybody's been out so far and I'm looking forward to this spring."

The remainder of the squad is composed of last year's frosh squad plus JV's Dick Cuillo, Tom Denver, Dennis Zutant, Bob White, Ken Hafner, Bob Jackson, Bill Todd and Keith Foreman. The captain of this year's team is Jim Segdaloff, the varsity coxswain.

Last Saturday the team held an intra-squad regatta with a total of seven varsity and frosh boats competing.

In the varsity mile race Paul Dudzick's team won by half a length over a fast finishing squad captained by Jackson. Both Jackson's boat and that of the third place finisher Bill McCusker were slowed down temporarily when individual crewmen caught "crabs" during the race.

Winning time was 6:03 with Jackson's runner-up squad finishing in 6:05. A stiff 20-mile-per-hour headwind retarded the times considerably.

Schoel pointed out that the close finish of the crews was significant. "Right now there's too many of them (crew members) that are even. The ones that really make an effort and are outstanding will make it next spring."

In coach Bill Sanford's frosh race four boatloads, designated the Animals, the Rejects, the Elite and the Maturity, took part. At the finish it was the Animals by half a length over the Elite. Time for captain Mert Hale's Animals was 6:40; for Jeff Lovelace's Elite, 6:42.

This week the crew is taking advantage of the good weather to hold final workouts and experiment with new oars. These oars have shorter, wider blades than the present oars and were first popularized by the Ratzeburg Rowing Club of Germany. In 1960 this club rowed to victory in the Rome Olympics using these unique shovel blades.

Since then many American coaches have tried these oars with varying degrees of success.

After Monday's practice session with the oars, comment was generally favorable. Coxswain Jim Seagloff noted that "the catch felt more solid with the spade blades."

Coach Schoel added, "The initial trial was very interesting," but that "I don't believe you can make a final judgment on one trial, but from the little we saw last night, I lean toward the new type of blade."

Boat One: Paul Dudzick, stroke; Ned Kerr, 7; John Campbell, 6; Alex Pregnar, 5; Dick Murray, 4; Doug Kraai, 3; John Baumann, 2; Jim Fullerton, 1; Pat Nalbone, coxswain.

Boat Two: Bob Jackson, stroke; Bill Rossell, 7; Bruce Wilson, 6; Jamie Murray, 5; Dave Tousignant, 4; Jim Gulnac, 3; Ron Coddington, 2; Chris Gram, 1; Ted Horowitz, coxswain.

Boat Three: Bill McCusker, stroke; Dick Foreman, 7; Gary MacLachlan, 6; Norm Magers, 5; Tom Denver, 4; D. J. Anderson, 3; Ed Polubinski, 2; Dick Cuillo, 1; Jim Segaloff, coxswain.

Freshman boatings—

Animals: Mert Hale, stroke; Ray Clark, 7; Pete Hofmann, 6; Pete Delaney, 5; Walt Atryzek, 4; Les Lesavoy, 3; Gary Smith, 2; Russ Drowne, 1; Larry Garber, coxswain.

Elite: Jeff Lovelace, stroke; Bob Rowe, 7; William Butler, 6; Gus Strakes, 5; Joe Driscoll, 4; Dick Yochum, 3; Paul Carlson, 2; Bill Cox, 1; Gary Basil, coxswain.

SS Acts on VPI Game, Free Press; Editors Disagree With Constitution

Publications Board--Campus: 'Too Strong' Administrators: 'OK'

By CAROL RUBRIGHT
Junior Editor

Administrators and students spoke two different languages this week in discussion censorship and the new constitution of the Board of Student Publications.

"The test is not the wording of the constitution, but how it behaves," summed up Jim G. Carleton, dean of men, echoing the comments of other administrative members of the board.

"The board's intentions are all very sound," added board member Marjorie C. Smith, dean of women.

Student board members agreed with campus publication editors-in-chief that the constitution is too wide open for interpretation.

"It sounds like the Communist Manifesto," said Michael Morgan, editor of the Syracuse 10.

"Certain parts of it disturb me," said Kathleen Kapsol president of Eta Pi Upsilon, senior women's honorary and member of the board.

"There is no provision for freedom...freedom to be able to act without a black cloud hanging over our heads," said Andrew Porte, Daily Orange editor-in-chief. "All I want to do is print the truth — even if it hurts."

One of the sections of the constitution which is under fire reads:

"It shall be a function of the Board of Student Publications to supervise the editorial administration of the student publications by reviewing general policy, examining editorial procedure and investigating other aspects of reporting, editing or editorial activity deemed necessary; at the same time entrusting matter of editorial policy, news policy,-taste and

Senate Writes Protests, Vetoes AWS By-Laws

By JESSE SMITH

Student Senate overwhelmingly defeated a move to boycott the football game with Virginia Polytechnic Institute Nov. 14 but approved a letter to the school's president condeming alleged segregation policies at VPI Wednesday.

The senate approved another letter, addressed to Chancellor William P. Tolley, expressing concern over possible threats to freedom of the press in the constitution of the university Board of Student Publications.

Vivian Shulman's motion to recommend that students boycott the VPI game was attacked by several senators as unnecessary, because Syracuse University's stand against segregation is clear. The university recently announced a policy of refusing to play teams from segregated schools, but decided to honor existing contracts.

Senators debated whether VPI is indeed a segregated school. Miss Shulman cited a report by the Southern Education Reporting Service, which showed Negro enrollment at VPI dropping from three students in 1960 to one student in 1963. Total 1963 enrollment was given as 5,987.

Speaker Robert (Robby) Stern, a North Carolina native, said the policy of Virginia's state schools is to refuse Negroes if their field of study is taught at all-Negro institutions within the state.

The Letter

The following is the text of a letter approved by the Student Senate Wednesday night. The letter will be mailed to the president of Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

President
Virginia Polytechnic Institute
Blacksburg, Va.

Dear Sir:

The Student Senate of Syracuse University has proudly and consistently registered its disapproval of any and all sorts of systematic exclusion of any person on the basis of race, color, creed or national origin in the field of higher education as well as in other areas of endeavor. Last year this Senate passed the following resolution:

"The Student Senate demands that Syracuse establish a policy of scheduling no athletc competition with segregated schools or which have segregated athletic programs. Segregation shall mean a systematic exclusion from academic endeavors, athletic programs and such areas as housing, social functions or any other activity sponsored by the university in question. This bill shall not apply to games already scheduled. This bill shall apply to all post-season tournaments and bowl games."

This resolution was supported by a student referendum and by specific support of a wide number of student and faculty organizations. We stand firm in our commitment and our statement of principles. We stand opposed to the formal and informal admissions policies of your institution. We stand appalled by the fact that an institution which propounds to stand for the best and highest standards of education would condone and, in fact, support such a system. This is our position and we stand clearly and proudly upon it.

AWS Extends Curfews

By SUE STRANDBERG

All senior women will have midnight curfews and freshmen women will have 10:15 p.m. curfews beginning Monday, the assembly of the Association of Women Students decided Wednesday night.

Students on university probation will also gain the new curfews, but next semester they will lose half of their special permissions, it was also decided. There will be no cut in permissions this semester.

Fifteen of the 86 living units voted against the extension of curfews for students on probation, while three abstained and nine living units were not represented.

The votes on extensions for seniors and freshmen were unanimous.

The AWS standards council approved a penny-a-minute charge for a 2 a.m. curfew both nights of Pitt-Fall Weekend.

The decision read:

"In the past, 2 a.m. curfews for class-sponsored weekends have been granted by AWS standards council if the class sponsoring the weekend petitioned for these curfews.

"This year, wishing to do something for the Ernie Davis Fund Committee, the sophomore class petitioned AWS that these 2 a.m. curfews be given provided that the minutes after regular weekend curfew until 2 a.m. be paid for at a rate of one cent a minute. This money will be given to the Ernie Davis Fund Committee."

Other issues that were discussed on the floor were the refusal by Student Government of the AWS constitution, the security problem on the Mount and the extension in number of special permissions to dean's list students.

IFC Alters Rush; Holds '68 Convo

By DAVID SOSNA

The InterFraternity Council's rushing hours and procedures have been revised in order to promote a "more efficient system," according to IFC rushing chairman Robert Evenson.

In an eleventh hour vote at Wednesday's IFC meeting, the schedule for the February rushing period was changed just prior to a convocation for freshmen in Hendricks Chapel.

Elaborating on the reasons for the change Evenson stated that the revised plan was "the strongest method and the most flexible one."

"We felt that the upperclassmen and the freshmen would be tired and could not give their best rush if they

Incumbents Hang on to Lead

The DAILY ORANGE continues its brief run-down of some of the state campaigns that have major importance for or are of special interest to the nation.

Today, reporter Amos Moscrip views the race for the governorships of Michigan and Arkansas.

By AMOS MOSCRIP

Tuesday's results in the Michigan and Arkansas races for governor will have major importance for Republicans in those states.

In Michigan, Republicans are trying to keep their first Republican governor in 14 years.

Incumbent George Romney, former president of American Motors, shows a good chance of beating Democrat Neil Staebler, Michigan's congressman-at-large.

Staebler's campaign has been lackluster, concentrating on Romney's supposed affiliation with Sen. Barry M. Goldwater.

"The Republican candidate for governor is Goldwater's candidate for governor," Staebler emphasizes.

Romney, who helped head a last-ditch attempt to stop Goldwater's nomination at the San Francisco Republican convention, dismisses his acceptance of all the 1964 Republican platform.

"I accept (these decisions)," Romney says, "but I don't endorse them."

Romney has not campaigned for Goldwater, but he has not spoken publically against him.

Romney bases his campaign on the unprecedented prosperity of Michigan under his governorship.

In Arkansas Winthrop Rockefeller, New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller's brother, hopes to be the first major Republican state office holder since 1873.

Rockefeller is running against five-term incumbent Democrat Orville Faubus.

Rockefeller moved to Arkansas from New York 11 years ago.

In 1955 Gov. Faubus appointed him chairman of the newly created Arkansas Industrial Development Commission (AIDC).

Rockefeller resigned from the post early this year.

Under Rockefeller's leadership the AIDC brought in for the state 600 new plants and 90,000 new jobs.

Dormant No More

All of a sudden the lid has been lifted off a dormant Student Government.

The organization which has done little but make a few meaningless proposals concerning housing, a problem not in its realm, has overnight taken a myriad of problems upon its shoulders.

We compliment the leaders for finally getting interested in something to keep their time occupied, rather than the never-to-end marking system inquiry or the futile quest for a dead week.

Whatever the outcome of all the hubbub at the legislature Wednesday evening, it is good to see students thinking about something which may result in constructive proposals.

While we cannot get overly enthused over a dispute between Student Government and the Association of Women Students, we hope such a discussion will lead to a serious evaluation of the role of Student Government and the respect it has (or doesn't have).

We will be interested in the result of that imminent clash, for it will enlighten us as to the amount of power Student Government has on this campus. The ensuing discussions should certainly stimulate SG to formulate a program for increasing its prestige, both among other organizations and the student body.

Segregation and integration are always worthwhile topics for students to concern themselves, even though we may not always agree with conclusions and recommendations of student groups. It is pleasing enough, however, just to know that the concern is present.

Surely, freedom of the press is a worthy topic for discussion, for it falls under those freedoms which must be granted if the society (the university community) is to remain (or become) democratic.

We only caution student government to think before it acts. The proposals of student leaders must be fully debated, based on facts and readily workable.

Keep caring, Student Government. Perhaps your concern will rub off on others someday.

Millstones and Milestones

The Challenge

By Dan Stone

It should come as no surprise to anyone (and should be a relief to many) the fact that next Tuesday is election day. By the time this column next appears, we will either have the moderate Republicans in firm control of their party in New York or we will have a new, young, powerful force in New York's Democratic Party.

We will have committed ourselves to a path either along a middle course behind President Johnson or to the right behind Sen. Goldwater.

By this time next week we will have partial answers (and alas they can be only partial) as to how deeply the civil rights movement has cut into the behavior of the American voter; as to just how much furor the Supreme Court reapportionment and prayer decisions have kicked up in rural areas; as to how accurate the polls were.

Most of us have made up our minds by now, whether it is the result of a reaffirmation of a traditional family vote or the product of laborious soul-searching. Those of us who voted absentee have by now mailed in our ballots (if not, I suggest speed). Those who are voting in Syracuse have made up their minds. Few votes change in the last couple of days.

To say that it has been an inept campaign is an understatement. From the conventions until now there have been mistakes and a viciousness that make 1960's race seem tame by comparison. One major candidate has attacked most of the country's major institutions without offering any practicable alternatives. He seems content to destroy one structure without bothering to build another we can find shelter under.

The other candidate, in the face of some obvious wrongdoing and more than a hint of corruption among his associates has tried to sugar coat everything in the name of unity.

On the state level the race is different but almost as vicious. Perhaps Eric Sevareid most accurately pointed out the stumbling block in this race. The traditional American conflict, be it war or a television western, calls for a good guy to be pitted against a bad guy.

But in New York we have the handsome young marshal back from fighting the good fight for individual rights representing a young, new, urban society against the silver-haired old homesteader who long ago staked his claim and has managed his land since in a way that generally pleased his neighbors. Good against good violates the American ethic.

Yet even in this "race of the goods" we have seen attempts to persuade or dissuade various minority or ethnic groups that grate against our sensibilities.

Even though all these campaigns have been waged around cries for unity, this has been a devisive year. We have found strange bedfellows on our side and unexpected protagonists on the other side, but most people have chosen and declared one way or the other.

On the college campus this is particularly true. Few have been able to remain neutral and most are deeply involved. There is an understanding of the candidates and their positions that is a refreshing change. To the freshman it must seem that he has indeed found the intellectual mecca that college is cracked up to be in "Seventeen," "Time," and "Senior Scholastic."

But elections pass. And so does campus interest in campaigns and other-world politics. Two months from now the same small group will be meeting at Young Democrats and Republicans that met eight months ago. Independents for this Democrats for that, and Republicans for something else will have turned their attentions to rush, the basketball team, and finals.

Yet not so much the elections as the next months will be critical in American politics. If Goldwater should win, there will have to be a serious reappraisal of where we and our representatives stand in relation to certain established institutions and for the Democrats there will have to be a rebuilding and a shift off the center, pro - to the left. If Johnson wins there will be a ferocious struggle for control of the Republican Party, in addition to the selection of a cabinet with an LBJ brand.

If Keating wins in New York there will have to be a rebuilding and ultimately a struggle for control of the state Democratic Party. If Kennedy wins there will be a crisis of which direction to follow for state Republicans.

These are struggles and reappraisals that should be discussed and carried on at all levels. It is not a fight that we as college students should ignore or watch passively. It is a battle whose outcome will mean much to the future of American politics.

The die for November is for all intention's purpose cast. It is the sustaining of interest and the participation in the struggles and decisions ahead that presents the challenge.

PUFF, THE MAGIC DRAGON

LETTERS

Hoover

To the Editor:

It should be noted (lest someone overlook it) that the editorial in the D.O. 'Oct. 21 on the death of Ex-President Herbert Hoover brought out something that another great American has been saying over and over again.

The editorial stated, "Herbert Hoover. . .believed in the American dream. . .the American way of government. . .the American way of life. He believed in the American individual. . .that individual men and men united together could control their destinies." It seems appropriate at this point to bring in another quote. "I seek an America. . . proud of its dreams and determined actively to proclaim them. We must assure a society here which, while never abandoning the needy or forsaking the helpless, nurtures incentives and opportunities for the creative and the productive. This nation. . .should again thrive upon the greatness of all those things which we as individual citizens can and should do. We. . .see in our constitutional form of government the great framework which assumes the orderly but dynamic fulfillment of the whole man. . ." These resolute words were those of Sen. Barry Goldwater as he accepted the Republican Presidential nomination.

It is inconceivable to me how a person can laud one individual for fine qualities and not another who espouses the same philosophy! Is it that these people have been kept from learning of these qualities by some devious means, or are there that many hypocrites in this country today?

Smash

If you enjoy pounding out creases on your car and your father doesn't like the bills, the best way to let off tension would have been to attend the Campus Chest Carnival Saturday and pound to your heart's content. One student gets rid of his frustrations in this manner and many others also took advantage of this smashing program.

IFC Court Give sReprimand; Takes Fraternity Off Pro

A Hill fraternity was released from social probation and another house was given a reprimand in a meeting before the InterFraternity Council Judicial Board Tuesday.

The probationary case dealt with violations of university social regulations, including sponsoring a campus function last spring where liquor was served.

Donald Thorn, chief justice of the board, told the Daily Orange "We took them off because they stayed out of trouble and lived up to the conditions of their penalty.

Discussing the circumstances surrounding the reprimand Thorn stated that the violation concerned rushing regulations and was due to a "clerical error."

"It was an honest mistake," he said. "They didn't try to put anything over on us so we just warned them to be careful in the future."

Placard Cheering

Frosh Featured on TV

All Syracuse University freshmen can go home this weekend while attending the SU-Pitt game at Archbold Stadium this Saturday.

How? "By placard cheering," said Jim Marshall, spokesman for Traditions Commission. "The game will be televised in color and the placard cheering section will be featured," Marshall added.

Promising a very colorful show for this game because it is televised, Marshall described the "amoeba" cheer.

"It starts with a background color of the next cheer and spreads to the sides," he added. "This is something new this season," he said.

Besides the traditional S-Y-R-A-C-U-S-E cheer, Marshall said, a special "Pen the Panthers" cheer will be featured this week.

Beginning with a picture of a panther," Marshall said, "a cage is formed around the animal and the panther is penned."

"Freshmen are urged to come out for placard cheering because many people will see these cheers and it is an indication of what SU is like," stated Marshall.

The Syracuse University placard cheering section is the largest in the East, said Marshall. It has grown from 600 cheerers in 1955, its first year, to presently over 1600, he explained.

"The winner and the winning cheer of the placard cheering contest will be announced at the game," said Marshall.

Cheers are designed by two members of Traditions Commission assisted by 10 goons during orientation week, said Marshall. "They come up two days earlier than anyone else to plot out the cheers on graph paper and to transfer them to the laundry slips," he added.

"Hopefully next year we can get plastic placards and have cheering at all home games regardless of weather," he said.

In evidence of this commitment there were several courses of action we had considered to display our concern, principally in connection with the Syracuse University - Virginia Polytechnic Institute football game to be played on Nov. 14, 1964. Anxious as we are, however, to fully support our own football team — whose actions in no way offend our commitment, and in following the decision of last spring not to protest already scheduled games — we plan to take no action at that game.

We wish to make it clear, however, that we stand firm in our commitment.

Sincerely,

Role of Campus In Race Problems Viewed By Panel

By KAREN ZAGOREN

Because "the university is often the cause of animosity, somebody else must do the negotiating," noted Dr. Charles Willie.

Referring to the racial problem itself, Willie, who's associated with the Syracuse University Youth Development Center, said:

"Our greatest problem is the inability to come to terms with the cost of integration. For others to become like you, you must give up something of what you are."

Willie was speaking at a religion panel discussion Tuesday on "Town, Gown and Racial Crisis."

Explaining further, Willie said, "It is the problem of acceptance that we're trying to come to terms with."

The panel discussed to what extent the university should play an active role in community and especially race problems.

The panel attempted to relate scholarly understanding and religion orientation to the racial crisis, according to Dr. Howard Ham, acting chairman of the religion department.

Dr. Prentiss Pemberton of the Golgate-Rochester Divinity School was the featured guest of the group.

"The university began when students organized," said David M. Beers, executive director of the University Hill Corp. The first town-gown problem was student housing costs, he related.

This was the beginning of the close ties between the university and the community, according to Beers.

Time is working for the Negro in the area of community attitudes and against the Negro in the area of economics, he said.

Because of this, Beers said he believes most help at the present time should be directed to economics and finances.

Robert Cohen, president of the Syracuse University Committee for Equality, said: "Com racial crisis is a cultural problem.

The university should follow an economic approach and the student a moralistic, ethical approach in dealing with the problem, he said.

The university has a definite role of leadership; outward to educate and guide the community and inward to help the students and faculty, he added.

In analyzing the three views presented, Pemberton noted that new vehicles are needed to confront and combat the problem.

In particular, he cited the need for greater involvement with some deep compulsion and hard-headed possibilities in terms of practical functions.

Four issues most in need of improvement are housing, jobs, education and law enforcement, according to Pemberton.

The full seating requirements of Student Court have been filled for the first time since its inception four years ago with the selection of three juniors as justices of the court.

The new members are Judith Cotey, Eric Mower and Lawrence Bashe.

Miss Cotey, a zoology major from North Lawrence, is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority.

She is secretary of the premedical honorary and has been a member of Goon Squad as well as a representative to the Student Senate for two semesters.

Mower, an English major living in Booth Hall, is from New York City. He was an SS representative in his freshman year, a Daily Orange reporter and a member of the freshman nominating convention.

Bashe, from Wheaton, Ill., is a political science major. He is vice president of Alpha Tau Omega fraternity and was a member of the Freshman Forum and Goon Squad.

The students, selected from 20 applicants, bring the total of court members to the required number of six members from both the junior and senior classes.

Each class has a representation of three men and three women. The court previously had an excess of women members.

Senate Writes Protests

The roll-call vote on Kathleen Kapsol's motion to send the letter to VPI's president was extremely close and had to be taken twice. The final count was 73 for, 69 against.

The senate amended the letter by striking a section which some considered too strong. The portion deleted read. "(We are) resolute even further in what we feel to be hypocrisy in the pairing even on the football field, of two universities — only one of which stands for the highest goals of education."

The letter to Chancellor Tolley, also Miss Kapsol's work, received unanimous approval. Referring to the publications board, which supervises the Daily Orange, Syracuse 10 and the Onondagan, the letter reads, in part:

"The constitution contains what we feel to be a series of ambivalent statements which, we are sure, unintentionally serve as a subtle threat to the freedom of student publications on the Syracuse University campus.

Specifically, the letter objects to clauses giving the board power to supervise reporting, editing and editorial policy and to remove any editor if necessary to serve the "best interests of the university."

The letter says the board's power to make recommendations concerning the publications, and the power to elect their editors-in-chief, are sufficient to protect the university's interests.

The letter to the Chancellor further questions a provision requiring heads of campus publications to appear before the board, if required, "on pain of dismissal."

It also questions the composition of the publications board which includes the dean of men, dean of women, dean of personnel, journalism dean, financial advisor of publications, the president and vice president of Student Government, and the heads of the three senior honorary societies.

The letter says, "We question the ability and relevancy of the new student members in their determination of publication policy and supervision, due to their general inexperience and lack of knowledge of publications and the necessities of their operation."

"We also refer to the consistent and as yet undefined reference to the service owed 'the best interests of the university,'" the letter continues. "It is our feeling that these provisions can be used as a threat or intimidation to student editors and the freedom of their publications."

Stern created a committee to investigate and clarify the issue. He named Miss Kapsol, his special assistant, as committee chairman.

In a separate action, the senate voted not to accept the revised constitution of the Association of Women Students.

The government structures committee voted down the constitution unanimously Tuesday and the steering committee passed on the recommendation for defeat to the senate.

Howard Keller, government structures chairman, cited nomination and election procedures in the AWS by-laws as cause for the committee's disapproval.

He said selection of senior officer candidates by outgoing senior officers narrows down nominations too much.

The whole AWS-SS wrangle will probably go before Student Court for a decision on whether the senate has the power to reject the AWS by-laws. Meanwhile, the organization is operating on its old constitution, which has identical election procedures.

Canadians to Highlight Concert

Canadian Folk Singers

IAN and SYLVIA are the Canadian representatives in the ranks of folk singing artists to be presented at the folk festival concert at 8:30 p.m. Friday in Manley Field House. The concert is the beginning of Pitt-Fall Weekend sponsored by the sophomore class.

By MARLENE CIMONS

Ian and Sylvia, a young Canadian duo, will be one of the highlights of the three-part folk concert at 8:30 p.m. Friday in Manley Field House, the opening event of Pitt-Fall Weekend.

Ian Tyson was born in 1933 in British Columbia and raised on a small farm. He supported himself in his youth as a migrant worker, lumberjack and rodeo performer, learning folk songs and singing them where they existed as a normal part of a day's work.

His ambitions first led him to the fine arts, and it was not until he graduated from the Vancouver School of Art, beginning work as a full-fledged commercial artist, that he realized there was a public which welcomed the singing he had been doing for his own pleasure. Club concerts followed by radio and television appearances establishing him as one of Canada's foremost folk song performers.

Sylvia Fricker, born in Chatham, Ontario in 1910, was raised in a musical environment, learning music from her mother, who was a music teacher, organist and choir leader. An absorbing interest in folk song led her to teach herself to play the autoharp and guitar.

Her captivating vocal style and senstive instrumentalism soon made her an admired performer wherever there was an interest in folk song.

In 1959, moving from Chatham to Toronto, she met Ian Tyson. They began singing together and in 1960 formed the present duo with its electrifying joint style.

They have made appearances at the Newport Folk Festival and the Steve Allen Show on television. The Baltimore Sun has said:

"These young artists have developed a style which is fresh and unusual. Outstanding is the sense of spontaneity. Each of the songs has about it a quality of personal identification which is immediately communicated and perceptible."

Ian and Sylvia have thus far released two record albums, "Ian and Sylvia" and "Ian and Sylvia, Four Strong Winds."

lars for schools, scholarships, and cultural facilities in Arkansas.

Rockefeller criticises the low teachers' salaries in the state, the poor condition of the state roads and the Faubus machine.

Faubus characterizes Rockefeller as a "carpetbagger." Faubus also notes Rockefeller's 1954 divorce from his wife Bobo.

The race question is also important in this campaign. Faubus, a vehement segregationist during the Little Rock integration case in 1957, has made his pro-segregation stand an issue again.

The race issue was absent from a much mollified Faubus in the 1962 race for governor.

Rockefeller, while not bringing up the race issue in his campaign, has a good record in race relations.

Rockefeller's chances of winning are slight, but he hopes his campaign will revitalize the GOP in Arkansas.

Under Rockefeller's leadership there are 172 Republicans running for local offices in Arkansas this year compared to only 7 in 1960.

Panhel Aid Stresses Need

Application forms are now available for the 1965 Panhellenic Council study abroad scholarship.

The $300 award is given annually to a junior or senior accepted for an approved Syracuse University study abroad program for spring of 1965.

The primary criterion for the scholarship is financial need although academic achievement, service to the university and citizenship are also considered.

A minimum cumulative average of 1.5 is required and both sorority and non-sorority women are eligible.

Forms and instructions for their completion may be obtained at the dean of women's office or at the Panhel office. They will be due Nov. 13.

SU Cadets Get Flight Training

Air Force pilot training is underway for 10 AFROTC cadets who applied and qualify for the flying instruction program.

FIP is an integral part of ROTC program, designed to screen out those who lack aptitude or desire for Air Force pilot training upon graduation and commissioning.

Syracuse University senior cadets currently enrolled in this program are: William Barnish, Bradlee Clark Jr., Melvin Cohen, Douglas Delaney, Bruce Fewer, Christopher Russo, David Schickel, Joseph Sullivan, James Van Blarcum and Stephen Wilde.

The flight instructor program is divided into two phases-ground school and flight training. Students will study meteorology, aerial navigation and flight rules and regulations taught by Capt. von Wolffradt.

This course, open to all students with prior approval of the professor of air science, is presented in the spring and fall semesters and must be completed before flying solo.

Actual flying is done at Nedrow Air Park, Inc., an FAA certified flight school. The instructor flies with the student in the Cessna 150's or 172's for 20 of the 36 and one-half hours of instruction. The big moment for the student is the solo, cross-country flight.

Air Training Command noted that cadets who have participated in the AFROTC flying instruction program prior to entering the Air Force, have on the average been twice as successful in completing the training as those cadets who have not been exposed to similar training.

H. D. Price Declares Current Needs Met By Today's Congress

By EDWARD KARLIN

"Congress is not the old frontier or the new frontier. It is the present."

This position was taken by H. Douglas Price, associate professor of political science, in a citizenship lecture Tuesday. His topic was "Is Congress the Old Frontier."

His answers to the question put him into the ranks of a conservative, according to his own remarks.

Price said that defenders of the present Congress were mainly conservatives. Liberal Democrats are the ones who want change, Price added.

Price listed some of the arguments used by proponents who believe Congress is the old frontier and out of date. One was that Congress slows down important legislation. Another point he brought out is that compromise is being used too much.

He also included in the opponents, argument the evils of the seniority system and negative legislation.

Congress has not been the only branch of government under attack in recent years, he noted. In the 1930's, the liberals attacked the Supreme Court. The presidency has been criticized by conservatives, he said.

The function of congressmen is threefold: to pass laws, to prevent laws from being passed, and to oversee the bureaucracy, he added.

The first two functions, Price said, have been traditional throughout American history. The third function has grown recently.

Price said the congressional role of overseer of the bureaucracy has developed because of the huge growth of government. "It helps to humanize it!" he added. Price noted that congressmen spend much time acting as a complaint and information service for their constituents.

Price backed up his view that today's Congress meets today's needs. The slowness of it to legislate is often beneficial, he said. Congress can "iron out weak points" and settle "regional discrepencies" with this extra time.

Even the filibuster can be good because it lets the minority know that the majority has heard its view, Price said.

Price viewed the coming election as ignoring many Congressional races. He suggested that the mass media put more emphasis on these contests.

Maxwell Prof's Book Views Group Administration

The ways in which people in various organizations actually behave, and the problems faced by managers at different levels of responsibility are examined by a Hill professor in a book published today.

Abraham M. Gross, professor of administration at the Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs, is the author of "The Managing of Organizations: The Administrative Struggle."

He has evaluated the tools and techniques of budgeting, accounting, human relations and personnel and production management. He presents a picture of what executives must do to get action in organizations which never stop changing, and states that "the appropriate response must start with a frank admission that administrative theory has been neither academic enough nor practical enough."

He has served as executive assistant to the President's Council of Administrative Advisers and as economic adviser to the Israeli Ministry of Finance. His book "The Legislative Struggle: A Study in Social Combat" (1953) won the Woodrow Wilson Award for excellence in the fields of government and democracy.

Senate

To the Editor:

It is with some deal of humor that I have been observing the student body's reactions to the senatorial race in this state, as reflected by the comments on the pages of the Daily Orange. It is with a sense of candor, then, that I find it desirable to comment.

Your fine editorial in the October 22 issue well sums up the Kennedy-Keating conflict with the statement: "Both men apparently have the same ideas except for apportionment of state legislatures, where the two differ to a degree." In fact, there is no "Kennedy-Keating conflict." This is precisely the observation and conclusion which motivated the New York State Conservative Party to provide New York voters with an opportunity to express their disagreement with these philosophies, and therefore to nominate Dr. Henry Paolucci as the third candidate for this senatorial seat. Because you state in an additional editorial of the same date that although... "we don't vote, sir, but we care," I believe that some of your readers may be interested in knowing of this alternative.

Henry Paolucci is associate professor of history and political science at Iona College in New Rochelle. He is a native of New York City and he received his M.A. and Ph.D. from Columbia University. He served during World War II with the U.S. Air Force in Italy. He has written several works in the field of political science, has edited and translated works of Hegel, Machiavelli and Galileo, and is a contributor to the Encyclopdeia Americana and the conservative weekly, National Review.

In brief, the platform upon which Paolucci is making his bid contains the following points: expansion of individual liberty; sharp reduction of federal controls and expenditures; revision of tax laws and reduction of personal and corporate income tax rates thereby creating more jobs; legislation to curb monopolistic and coercive practices by trade unions to protect workers and the public; victory over world communism by strong, positive world leadership which will discourage any and all armed conflict; concerted action to curb the Supreme Court's usurpation of legislative authority; strict enforcement of all laws for the preservation of peace and order and for the protection of equal rights for every citizen; strengthening of the national defense; and primary reliance upon private institutions, programs and practice of medicine.

Music

To the Editor:

I was delighted to see Karen A. Hagberg's letter in the Oct. 20 DO. I must admit that I also found Mr. Cohn's ignorance appalling. Indeed, if ever I should quit, or the hand of God comes down upon me as music critic, I will make sure to recommend Miss Hagberg for the position.

Auletta

To the Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to welcome to the Daily Orange the new Ron Corwin embodied in the form of Mr. Ken Auletta. The iconoclast has returned to the venerable pages of my favorite SU daily. We can now all look forward to the new weekly warrior every Wednesday under the banner of "O Say Can You See."

Mr. Auletta's column in Oct. 21 DO was typical of his writing. From the snows of Oswego he seems to have obtained this notion that Syracuse University is nothing more than a giant authoritarian monster. (If he would only ask around I'm sure he would find someone that enjoys going to school here). Our new crusader rabbit has this phobia about our nuiversity and he charges through every statement made by SU like Colgate attacking the invisible shield.

We do however, have one consolation, and that is we can be sure all the rugs in are clean —— because our weekly warrior checks for dirt under each and every one of them.

This week he has gone a bit too far and seems to be reaching for the bottom of the barrel. In his column about the new constitution of the Board of Student Publications and its beliefs. His analogy in my opinion, was sick and in very poor taste. His article, rather than promote discussion on the new constitution brought ridicule upon the Catholic church. His remarks concerning Martin Luther were especially bad.

As the semester goes on I will continue to follow Mr. Auletta, for as the China Shop has its bull, SU has its Ken Auletta.

Tony Felicetti '66

In defense of Tony Felicetti, who I know, I would like to testify that he is otherwise a reasonably intelligent person.

But the real issue is not his personality, nor mine, but the constitution of the Board of Student Publications. Why are so many eager to forget this?

Ken Auletta

South

To the Editor:

Your editorial, "The Braves and Atlanta," appearing in Monday's Daily Orange, is distressing, to say the least.

On the surface, the editor seems to feel that only a community that is free of prejudice and hate is to be allowed a major league baseball club. If that is the case, I would point out that no American community is thus qualified, and major league baseball should be abolished until such time that there appears on the American scene a community in which not one citizen is prejudiced.

More distressing than the surface meaning of this editorial, is what lies beneath. The editor no doubt realizes the existence of race prejudice and hatred, and that he, and all men, have the moral obligation to fight to overcome these evils. I am afraid, however that Mr. Porte feels that by calling the southerners names is a constructive way of fighting discrimination. By railing the citizens of Atlanta, he has thereby met his obligation as well as purged himself of his own evil. I call the editor's attention to these words from the New Testament: "Thou hypocrite, first cast out the beam from thine own eyes, and then thou will see clearly to cast out the speck from thy brother's eye."

Far too many good people waste far too much precious time criticizing the discriminatory actions of our southern brethren, ignoring the discrimination prevalent in their own communities. Those living in the North: it is time to wake up and realize that your own back yard is dirty! Those who damn the South for its intolerance, remember your own intolerance. When you are perfect, then criticize others.

Basketball

To the Editor:

Since it is now quite apparent that the football season has ended I would like to suggest that a problem confronting fans of our other major sport be discussed. With the basketball season still more than a month away, it would be wise to discuss a problem relevant to the success of the sport before time makes its resolution unfeasible.

I attended the last regular game of the 1963-4 season at Connecticut. The attendance was not that reached by our average attendance at home games, and the students had no more spirit than our hoop fans. But the major difference was that the spirit and enthusiasm could not only heard from all quarters, but also were definitively used to the advantage by the home team's.

This is commonly termed the "home court advantage." Our grid squad has often benefited by this asset. The problem faced in the confines of Manley is that the majority of the student spectators (obvivously the most enthusiastic viously the most enthusiastic needs field glasses to see the action and a megaphone to let the players know their approval.

I would hope that the powers that be will be able to see through their offices protected by administrative ivy, and come to the realization that the presence of a track decreases the seating capacity, (i.e. extra seats equal extra revenue,) and that a home court advantage can only be enjoyed by player and fan alike if the fans can be near enough to the court to make their presence felt. It is not yet November, thus leaving over one month for Syracuse University to make one of its most pressing decisions.

Error

To the Editor:

I wish to correct an error in my "Up in the Air" column of Oct. 13, 1964.

The idea for "G. E. College Bowl" was patented in 1939. The program went on radio in the late 1940's and then to television in the 1950's.

Therefore, "Syraquiz," which did not start until 1956, was not the basis for "G. E. College Bowl" as stated in my column.

Publications Board--

judgment to the staff as is appropriate on an uncensored student publication..."

In clarifying this passage, John S. Hafer, board chairman and university vice president said:

"The right to 'supervise' means the right to ask questions."

"I've never seen the DO censored," commented Carleton.

"Just because the board has not acted adversely in the past doesn't mean it doesn't have the power to do so," argued Porte.

In order to resolve the problems wrought by the Board of Publications constitution, Syracuse 10 Editor-in-Chief Michael Morgan proposed eliminating the board altogether.

"Why not let the administration give the students a real responsibility for a change," he said.

"It's rather absurd that a person can have nothing to do with a publication for three years, and then, after becoming president of a campus honorary, suddenly find himself a part of the publishing board," Morgan added.

(Morgan was referring to the constitution's provision which replaces members of the publications' staffs with presidents of the three senior honoraries as voting board members).

Onondagan editor Lometa Hudnall said that in choosing a publication's editor no one knows who is more dependable and well-qualified than the out-going editor."

Board member Carl Corrallo, president of Student Government criticized the constitution for its poor representation and lack of clarification.

"It is so wide open for interpretation," Corrallo said. "And a publication should know under what framework it is operating."

"You might say that the university's personnel committee is student government's 'Board of Publications," Corrallo said. "There are three student government representatives on the personnel committee."

"I think an editor-in-chief is the only one who can know what is best for his publication," said Nancy Perkins, board member and vice president of student government.

Another board member Peter Minich, president of Tau Theta Upsilon, was unable to comment, since another Tau Theta had attended its meeing Oct. 15. Robert Cohen, president of Phi Kappa Alpha was unavailable for comment.

were using the original schedule. This new system is more compact and effective," he added.

The Daily Orange will print a full list of rushing procedures and hours later in the year.

At the evening convocation, Dean of Men Jim G. Carleton told the freshmen that "fraternities serve an important role at Syracuse. It is your responsibility to find out about the system, individual houses and finances."

"Ask questions," he declared. "The brothers are there to answer them."

Following in the same vein, George Van Derven, president of IFC, told the freshmen at the convocation that rushing is a necessity.

"Rush," he said. "If you don't, you don't know what you're missing. Get around to as many houses as you can in the informal open (house) rushes."

Concluding, Van Derven said, "Rush as many houses as you can. You'll get a better picture. Have a good time and see what the houses are like."

The next IFC meeting will be at 7:30 p.m., Nov. 11, at Phi Gamma Delta.

Three Straight?

Mazurek Paces Panthers

By ART ROSSKY

For Pittsburgh Saturday's game with Syracuse is more than an ordinary game.

A Panther win would make Fred Mazurek and his fellow seniors the only class in Ben Schwartzwalder's Hill tenure to score three straight victories over the Piety.

Last year quarterback Mazurek led the Panthers to a 35-27 victory. In 1962 halfback Paul Martha paced a 24-6 Pitt victory. Both games were played in the Smokey City.

If Syracuse is to win, it must contain the explosive Mazurek. Last year Mazurek, a 5-10, 190-pounder from Republic, Pa., personally accounted for 255 yards against the Orange—136 passing and 119 rushing. He had a hand in 22 of the homester's 35 tallies.

For the year the speedy senior rolled up 1,595 yards, 946 on the ground and 649 through the airlanes.

Mazurek, with 2,674 career yards, is within striking distance of the Panther's all time yardage leader. Warren Heller, the current record holder, counted 3,191 yards in his varsity days.

Facing Mazurek is the task of gaining 517 yards in four games, an average of about 129 yards a game.

This year, because his offensive line is rather weak, the yards have come harder than in 1963. Still, Mazurek has totaled 835 yards in six games, 505 in the air and 330 on the ground.

The Panther field general's rushing yardage paces the team. Carrying the ball 74 times, Mazurek has averaged 4.5 yards per carry. Included in his total is 61 yards lost on pass attemps.

Looking back at last year's game, Hill coach Ben Schwartzwalder stated, "Mazurek was a real one-man gang. It had to be one of the finest individual performances I've seen."

"If we play against Mazurek the way we did in Portland, we'll get run out of the stadium by halftime," added the Piety skipper.

If stopping Mazurek were not enough, the Hillmen must also be wary of several other talented Pitt backs. At fullback the Panthers show 1-2 strength in Barry McKnight and Jim Flanigan. This duo has combined for 416 yards.

McKnight, a 201-pound junior, holds second place in Panther rushing tables with 276 yards gained and a creditable 4.2 average. Boasting 30 points on five scoring jaunts he leads the club in scoring. Like the Hill's Bo Nance he attended Indiana (Pa.) High School.

Flanigan, a 220-pound soph, has ground out 134 yards in 23 attempts, a fine 5.8 average. He has yet to be thrown for a yardage loss.

Top halfback is Eric Crabtree, boasting a 6.1 average. Owning breakaway speed—he is the squad's fastest man—he uncorked a 50-yard sprint against Navy last week.

Crabtree's running mate at left half is Dale Stewart, a speedy 205-pounder. He has gained 99 yards in 21 attempts, a 4.1 average.

FRED MAZUREK
. . . field general

On the line Pitt shows end strength. Leading the flankmen are Brian Generalovich and Mitchell Zalnasky.

On the Orange side several lineup changes have developed. Most notable switches came at the linebacker positions, with Terrell Roe moving in on the right side and Tom Rosia in the middle.

Frosh Cagers Boast Strong Credentials

By KEN RUDNICK

Building a representative freshman basketball team and developing players for future delivery to the varsity with only four scholarship athletes as a nucleus is the task confronting Roy Danforth, Syracuse University's frosh basketball coach.

The four scholarship players, George Hicker, Tom Ringelman, Steve Ludd and Richard Cornwall, all bring impressive credentials to SU. High-school stardom, however, has never been a sure indicator of success in college ball.

The 6-2 Hicker, playing in Franklinville, was selected to Scholastic Coach magazine's All-America squad as well as the all-Western New York team.

Ringelman, 6-2, was a member of the All-Capital Land (Albany) team in his senior season.

Ludd, 6-2 from Salem, made the All - Washington County squad and All-Capital District team.

Cornwall, 5-10, was an All-Pennsylvania selection from Penndel.

Those four will appear in Danforth's starting lineup, but the fifth spot is still up for grabs.

Tom Bednark, Bob Coe, Neil Schslinger, Ken Stillwagon, Howard Spears, Neil Funk, Ted Till, Jim Thompson and Frank Watts round out the squad, and from among their ranks will come that fifth starter.

Danforth lists lack of height as his team's major problem. One possible solution is the pressing defense which his club will feature in order to keep the opposition off balance offensively.

On offense, the frosh will use the fast break extensively in order to capitalize on their speed.

Greatest Gridiron Games

By NEIL KERR

SU VS. MANHATTAN — NOV. 5, 1904

Syracuse played Manhattan College only once in its football history and that game was played Nov. 5, 1904, during a drizzling rain and snowsquall in Syracuse.

The game was, in the words of the '04 Daily Orange, "One continuous spectacle of a series of long runs coming on nearly every play."

The final score was 144-0 in favor of the Orange and the DO added that "the score might have been even larger had not the game been called on account of darkness."

One observer noted that Syracuse players broke through Manhattan's line and circled her ends at will. The ball was in the Piety's possession during most of the game, Manhattan at no time making a first down.

The first half lasted 20 minutes and the second was to be 25. This however was cut down to 15 with the approach of darkness. Despite the abbreviated game, the score at halftime was 100-0 and SU coach Dr. Charles Hutchins substituted freely.

The Daily Orange stated afterwards that Syracuse came within two points of the existing national record for point production in a single game. As for attendance, there was a small crowd present but little interest was manifested except as to how large the final score would be.

The post game summary of Syracuse touchdowns read: Park 1, Powell 4, Curtis 2, Stimson 3, Packer 3, Farrington 2, Burrell, Lyon, Tucker, Fitzgerald Morgan, F.J. Park, Harwood 1. Total—25. Extra points: Curtis 15, Van Buyn 4. Total—19.

SU vs. Colgate, Nov. 17, 1956.

On a sunny day in Archbold, Syracuse ground out 511 yards plus 99 more through the air and defeated traditional rival Colgate 61-7. But the real story of the game was told in two words—Jim Brown.

This was Jim's final home game for the Orange and undoubtably his best. He ran for 210 yards in total offense and recorded a still-unbroken NCAA record of 43 points.

Following the opening kickoff, Jim Ridlon took a lateral from quarterback Chuck Zimmerman and passed to Dick Lasse for 41 yards and a first down on the Raider one. Brown went over on the next play and kicked the extra point as well.

When Colgate was unable to move after receiving the kickoff, SU went 69 yards in 10 plays with Brown going the last 15 for the second touchdown. Colgate then scored its lone touchdown of the game and kicked of.

After two out-of-bounds kickoffs by the Red Raiders, Brown took the ensuing kickoff on the 50 and, behind perfect blocking, went all the way for his third touchdown. Shortly before halftime he got his fourth on an eight-yard power play over the right side. The Orange led at the half 26-7.

Zimmerman broke Brown's scoring monopoly in the third quarter on a one yard sneak. On this drive, however, Jim had raced 30 yards over, around and across would-be tacklers for a score. However, the play was nullified by a clipping penalty.

Later in the game Brown tallied two more touchdowns on runs of 19 and five yards, adding three extra points to total six touchdowns and seven extra points for the day. Two other SU touchdowns near the game's close brought the final score to 61-7—the largest margin of victory over Colgate up to that time.

Later Jim Brown was to receive All-American honors and star with the Cleveland Browns, but his performance that day in Archbold turned the '56 Colgate game into one of Syracuse's best ever.

SU VS. MIAMI — DEC. 16, 1961

The '61 Orangemen had earned a 7-3 record that fall including a controversial 17-15 loss to Notre Dame. The spark of the team was the Elmira Express, Ernie Davis. It was Davis who broke Jim Brown's records in scoring, net yards gained and average per carry.

In a rousing finale to his career, the 215-pound All-American and Heisman Trophy winner put on one of his greatest performances. He rushed 30 times for 148 yards and led the two scoring drives in the second half which won the game 15-14 for SU. The Orange had gone to the locker room at halftime down by 14-0.

In the third period Davis carried three times for 17 yards as Syracuse drove 42 yards for its first score. Davis tallied on a one-yard plunge at 9:58 of the third quarter.

The Orange went 51 yards for the winning score at the five minute mark of the fourth period. Davis carried the ball four times for 24 yards on this drive.

SU quarterback Dave Sarette faked a handoff to Davis and fired the winning seven yard touchdown pass to Dick Easterly.

This was the pattern of the game. When Davis didn't carry the ball, he was an effective decoy on faked handoffs. The respect that Miami held for Davis was such that three Hurricane defenders tackled him when he faked into the line on Sarette's scoring pass to Easterly.

Sarette, Syracuse's senior quarterback had a big day, completing 13 of 26 passes for 148 yards. On these totals he surpassed Miami's brilliant sophomore passer George Mira.

Davis was voted the outstanding back of the game after carrying the ball for an SU single game record of 30 times. This effort topped Jim Brown's best by two carries.

This game marked the end of a Syracuse era in which Sarette, Davis and others helped to win 24 of 28 regular season games, including a national championship on a 10-0 record in 1959, plus two bowl games, the Cotton and the Liberty.

The Rise and Fall of 'Pitt-Fall'

By MARLENE CIMONS

Today marks both the birth and death of the theme Pitt-Fall, and still another change in a long history of fall weekends.

Tradition will be altered again next year when the annual October weekend reverts to last year's theme of "Homeing."

Last year the Alumni Assn. denied the sophomore class the right to use the name "Homecoming" in conjunction with this year's weekend. This was caused by the failure of the class of '66 to provide special activities for returning alumni during the first "Homecoming" weekend last October.

A meeting of the '67 executive council this fall, led to the creation of "Pitt-Fall," a play on words, designed to fit in with both the football match with the Pittsburgh Panthers and the season of the year.

Homecoming is itself a young institution stemming from a 62-year-old tradition of Colgate Weekend, which ended in 1961.

In the past, a fierce rivarly between Syracuse and Colgate University had been marked by pre-weekend antics instigated to generate spirit between the schools.

Starting in 1948, representatives from Syracuse and Colgate annually signed what was called a "Cazenovia Pact" — an agreement establishing a specific time for scalping and intercampus raids.

Another tradition, still vivid in the memories of SU and Colgate alums, was the Colgate bonfire held on the Red Raiders' campus.

Many of the class of '62 remember the weekend of 1958, when three Hill students rented a plane and dropped orange dye in Colgate's Taylor Lake.

At the same time, two Syracuse fraternities bombarded the Colgate campus with leaflets proclaiming the superiority of the Saltine Warriors.

The '58 incident followed one of the most daring stunts ever attempted by Hill students. In 1957, eight courageous freshmen ventured into the land the Red Raiders and disrupted the Maroon's traditional bonfire.

Betting Ends In Suspension

A freshman has been indefinitely suspended from Syracuse University for violating the university rules on gambling and falsification of information, Dean of Men Jim G. Carleton revealed Wednesday in reply to a Daily Orange query.

The suspended student was one of several freshmen accused of gambling in a dormitory in a recent incident. In the process of the investigation, the student gave false infomation to the dean's office concerning the gambling incident and other incidents in which he had been involved.

The student later admitted giving the false infomation.

The other students involved in the alleged gambling incident have been referred to Student Court, Carleton said.

Ohio, Pennsylvania Races: Close

In Pennsylvania and Ohio Republican candidates for the United States Senate, normally sure-fire winners, stand a good chance of losing this year because Sen. Barry M. Goldwater heads the national ticket.

Both Sen. Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania and Ohio's former congressman-at-large, Robert M. Taft Jr., are under heavy attack not only from Democrats, but from Goldwater Republicans.

Scott, a vetern congressman, is running against Democrat Genevieve Blatt, former Pennsylvania state secretary of internal affairs.

Scott was GOP national committee chairman from 1948-49. His senate victory in 1958 was upset over Democratic Gov. George Leader.

Miss Blatt, squeezed by in April's Democratic primary with only a 491-vote margin out of more than one million votes cast.

Her nomination over Pennsylvania Supreme Court Justice Michael Musmanno's machine-backed organization is still being contested in the courts.

Miss Blatt has concentrated on Scott's endorsement of Goldwater and Goldwater's supposed "trigger-happy" stand on the nuclear issue.

Scott is an outspoken moderate. He floor-managed Pennsylvania Gov. William W. Scranton's bid to stop Goldwater at the Republican convention.

Pressure from Scranton and conservative businessmen, large contributors to the GOP, forced Scott to give a lukewarm endorsement to Goldwater.

Scott is content to stand on his record, only mentioning Goldwater in conservative western Pennsylvania.

Scott has a slight edge over Miss Blatt at the close of the campaign, but a Johnson sweep and a large Negro vote could hurt.

In Ohio Robert Taft Jr., son of the late conservative Sen.

Tolley States Press Is Free; Will Stay Free

By CAROL RUBRIGHT

"If a chancellor wanted to curb or curtail the freedom of the press, he wouldn't do it through the Board of Student Publications, Chancellor William P. Tolley told the Daily Orange Thursday.

When asked why a board was needed at all, Tolley replied: "We don't need a publications board.

"But someone has to elect the editors," he added.

In a written protest to the Chancellor Wednesday, Student Government expressed concern over possible threats to freedom of the press contained in the Board of Student Publications constitution.

At the time of the interview, Tolley had not yet received the letter.

"There is no threat to freedom of the press," Tolley said. "At Syracuse the press has been free for a long time and it will be free for a long time."

"The constitution hasn't anything to do with free press," Tolley said. "So far as I know there has not been any censorship of the Daily Orange."

"There may have been problems in the day of Chancellor Charles Wesley Flint, but there have been none under William P. Tolley," he said.

Tolley commented that dis-

Progress On Campus

The Student Senate Wednesday came all too close to defeating a proposal that will go down as one of the hightlights of its brief life.

What the SS did at that meeting was to affirm the right to protest that which is wrong. By registering its protest against a practice it felt was wrong, the legislature took a sizeable forward step towards affirming the basic freedoms it has more than once previously overlooked.

We can understand a few of the arguments against sending the letter, but we cannot agree with those who say it is either out of the senate's range or not conducive to good relations between the schools.

In our opinion, systematic exclusion of persons of one race from institutions of higher learning is not conducive to man's basic right to live as he chooses, equal to all others.

Hopefully the actions of the senate are a sign that students are becoming increasingly concerned about the battle for equality among men.

The SS must not be fearful to tread in any area which it deems of worthy concern. If, upon investigation, actions are not within its realm, then, as with housing, it should not act.

But when the call for action is clear, the SS must affirm its responsibility to the campus to make its voice heard.

Colgate?

They're calling it Pitt-Fall Weekend, but to some of us who worked on bringing a homecoming to Syracuse, it'll be Homecoming Weekend, and to others who remember the gay tussles with Colgate, it'll be Colgate Weekend.

Someone, somewhere, vetoed a third successive homecoming, and the only semblance to Colgate will be a freshman football game with the Raiders today.

The days of the scalpings and the bonfires are a thing of the past, and no adventurous Syracusan will ever again rent a plane to drop Orange dye into Colgate's lake.

No Piety Hill resident will ever be spared the cost of a haircut by visiting Colgate men eager to leave only a block 'C' on Syracuse scalps.

The sophomore class has brought an impressive schedule of events to the campus, including three folksinging acts tonight, but somehow it won't be the same.

Colgate's just a place to go to drink, not a weekend.

Tiger at the Gates

The Wet Nurse

By Dan Ritey

A spectre is haunting the students of Syracuse University. The spectre of the Big Nurse (a la Ken Kesey), the wet nurse who, in the absence of our parents, attempts to perform upon us their identical shielding and coddling functions.

The university likes to look upon itself as a family. One big happy family. A family of benign administrative patriarchs and matriarchs whose task is the maintenence of enough of an academic atmosphere here—spiced with suitable diversions and kind words and double talk—to keep us children protected from the truths of life and society.

And, my, how they go about doing it. Last year, for example, when the civil rights movement was sweeping the country like few movements ever have, our clan leaders decided that their mission was to protect us naive, unknowing students from the realities of the Negro's plight.

So we were told, on pain of disciplinary probation, to shy away from the freedom struggle and to remain in our sleek, modern ivory towers high atop Piety Hill.

In loco parentis—in the place of our parents. This philosophy guides the university administrators in their actions toward us, their wards. It's like we're here for four years of advanced parental guidance before being allowed to face the world on our own.

We think that SU should educate and leave the guidance to our natural parents.

Students come here to learn and to broaden themselves. Some decide to work on the university's student publications. But even here, the admonishing finger of a Big Brother warns us not to soil the sacred cow of the university image else we may find ourselves sent to bed without any food.

In loco parentis.

A Nobel Prize-winning scientist is in Syracuse to lecture, but when the chance to address the student body at this progressive university is offered, our clan chieftains prevent his speaking here—after all, Virginia, Linus Pauling was an out-and-out radical.

So we couldn't hear him here. That might have opened our eyes, ears and minds to heresy. More in loco parentis.

A group of students, unable to work within the university's stifling regulations, decide that there's a lot to be said about this place that isn't being allowed to be said. So they organize a magazine dedicated to publishing the facts about our happy household—whether or not the caretakers deem them worthy of the glass-window university image.

In retaliation for the violently outrageous attempt to act under first amendment liberties, our family forces the pubication off campus, threatens legal action against its editor and sends one of its prized administrative trouble-shooters to harass and squelch any further advertisers for the magazine.

Again, in loco parentis.

After a while you become sick enough of this coddling and spoon-feeding to want to do something about it. (Of course, it's certainly fortunate for the defenders of our chastity that only a select number of students wish to rebel against the hands that feed us the opium of non-awareness and passivity).

In the formal student-administration relationships, the latter invariably ends up with a stacked deck in its favor. Partly because of its own conniving and partly because the student body elects to hand them the leverage any time it can.

Consider the unbroken chain of student leaders (mostly, we note, in class and JSG cliques) who aim to be such fixtures in the university machine that, as Orwell once suggested, you couldn't tell if they were more like their constituents or their masters.

More like the gentlest of lambs then like the shepherds who should be leading them.

A few exceptions (mostly in the Student Senate) do stand out—and to them we are grateful for the break in the monotony. And yet the efforts of these few students who actually deserve to be called leaders can just as easily be derailed by a hedging or obstinate family hierarchy as can the throat of an outspoken editor be slit by these same guardians.

Furthermore, when do students, either in influence or in actual numbers, ever dominate on any joint committee with the administration? Certainly not in the newest 'cause celebre,' the publications board.

On this bastion of free journalism and the progressive press, the students at best have a blocking coalition—and we'd doubt that that would appear too often given the ignorance of these students toward the subject they're supposed to deal with and the doubtless slavish attitude that most of them must have toward our precious image.

After all, if that particular devotion wasn't there it's a safe bet that they wouldn't be there either.

But above all it's our semi-divine clan chancellor who has the final say. He's really our Big Brother; the others who shepherd our minds being just his messengers.

And his is the final say - any constitutional changes must be personally approved. If he doesn't like certain moves being made toward a free press, toward a newspaper that can honestly call itself that and not a propaganda sheet, then we simply stand still.

And if the publication has the audacity, the utter gall and nerve to continue its quest for truth and unlimited opinion then (to quote one of the chief messanger boys) "that publication just may not be published again."

The king is dead. Long live the king. Awareness is dead. Long live in loco parentis.

As long as we're content to be lulled to sleep by our new wet nurse, need we ever care?

LETTERS

Army

To the Editor:

The biggest football weekend of the year is the annual Army-Syracuse clash at Yankee Stadium. The enthusiasm which is built up for this game is well-known by students and faculty alike. However, for some perverted reason, the administration of the biology department had dampened the spirits of several hundred Biology 1 students who will be confronted with their mid-term examination the day after they return from New York City.

If the class of '68 is to fully appreciate the overwhelming spirit which is heapupon them the second they arrive on campus, then they will be certainly disillusioned by this event. Very definite arrangements have been made by the students who had planned to go to the city, and with this new occurrance, radical changes will have to be made in their plans, or cancellation of the trip altogether.

We feel that it is up to the university officials to judge the merits of this situation, and perhaps find a solution to the problem.

Carlisle Pierce of A special repeat of the interview with the former personal bodyguard of the King of Iraq will also be heard. At 1:30 p.m., Saturday.

RKO KEITH'S-"Kisses for My President" is playing this weekend. This novel idea of cinematic disaster proves, if anything else, that there was a positive side to the battle against woman suffrage.

Polly Bergen is cast as an overactive den mother type who has gained the office of President of the U.S.A. Her husband, portrayed by Fred McMurray, combines the charm of an inebriate with the cunning of the proverbial fox in turning the White House into a non-political farce.

"Kisses for My Presidnet" has all the makings of a typical situation comedy save for its unique. Washington setting. No times available.

RIVIERA-"Mondo Cane" or "Lassie Come Home" is back for another run around the strange circuit. Featuring film clips from around the world, the film uses a newsreel technique to prove that it's a dog's world.

Co-featured is "Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow" an Italian flick about love and life (what else?) featuring Sophia Loren and Marcello Mastroiani. "Speak, Lassie, Speak" at 8:45 p.m., "What Next, Moravia?" at 10:30 p.m.

ECKEL-The fascinating city of Istanbul coupled with the obvious charms of femme fatale Melina Mercouri greatly aid the otherwise overadventurour plot of "Topkapi."

This Asian version of cops and robbers utilizes a highly prized jewelled dagger as the bait, and a very excellent Peter Ustinov as the lovable fall guy. Ustinov uses all of his portrayed humbling to thrown the Turkish Security off course, and make the movie a box-office success.

"Topkapi" while having its high points of chilling excitement, is little more than a bad takeoff of "The Great Train Robbery" minurs Marshall Dillon. 'Elementary, my dear Chester" at 7:15 p.m. and 9:30 p.m.

SHOPPINGTOWN-"Send Me No Flowers" or Alan Millstein revisited is playing this weekend. Starring that inseparable trio Rock Hudson, Doris Day and Tony Randall, the casting of the film brings to mind the question of whether any of them can act alone? Another chic comedy from Ross Hunter's inexhaustible file. "Where are you, Alan?" at 7:30 p.m. and 9:30 p.m.

PARAMOUNT-"Fate is the Hunter" is the main attraction starring Glen Ford, Nancy Kwan, Rod Taylor and Suzanne Pleshette. Even this all-star cast, however, couldn't save this one. The plot concerns an airlines pilot who is forced to make a landing. The movie opens with an overly dramatic shot of this. From the opening sequence on, you can fill in your own cliches. "It's Fate, Glen" at 9:44 p.m.

WESCOTT-Ian Fleming's "From Russia with Love," a good cinema adaptation of the book, stars Sean Connery as 007. Complete with Turkish dancing girls, Russian blondes, a chess champion and Rosa Kleb, dread officer of SMERSH, the movie zips along to the conclusion that James Bond can do no wrong.

Co-featured is "The Best Man" or it couldn't have happened to a nicer guy, Lyndon. Starring Henry Fonda and Cliff Robertson, the movie produces a half-naked satire of the political scene a few years and GOP's ago.

"From Russia" at 9:10 p.m., "Best" at 7:30 p.m.

Union Board Expands

The Student Union Board has enlarged its number to include two new members. The positions are open now for secretary and research coordinator.

The position of secretary was opened after the resignation of Cheryl Council earlier this year.

The research coordinator will gather information from other colleges concerning facilities in other student unions. This is an attempt to meet the needs of the Student Union building which will be constructed by 1967.

The program committee, responsible for Friday night functions, publicity, art work etc., is also open for applications. All students with a 1.0 cumulative average are eligible to apply.

Application should include residence, phone extension, accumulative average if an upperclassman, position desired, and ideas. All applications must be turned into the main desk of the Women's Bldg. by 5 p.m. Friday, Nov. 6.

Pirates of Penzance

by Seth Shapiro

Tonight and Saturday, the Civic Company production of Gilbert and Sullivan's "Pirates of Penzance" will be performed at the Regent.

This playful operetta tells the story of Frederic, the hapless, apprentice pirate and his hilarious encounters with buccaneers, major generals and beautiful maidens.

Frederic, mistakenly apprenticed to the pirates instead of the pilots reaches his 21st year and decides to "go straight."

He is given a police platoon to command in a fight against his old masters, when it is discovered that he was born on February 29 and that he is legally only five years old and is still responsible to the pirates. What follows is as improbable as it is funny and the expected happy ending is not without the satire which is a basic part of the play's motif.

Five singers and dancers play major roles.

Ronald Burdett, as the young Frederic, is both an expressive actor and an excellent singer.

Lorraine Bluhm as Mable does an exceedingly good job with the semi-operatic music. She has a beautiful voice and makes fine use of it.

Ed Roman, though not a singer, shows his versatility in the role of the Major General.

Art Kucinski, as the Pirate King, played the part with a feeling which is rare in the amateur theatre.

Terry-Thomas fans will enjoy Donald Miller's portrayal of the Sergeant of Police. He gives a twist to what could be a "typed" part.

Lenita McCallums, as the pirates' maid of all work was especially appealing.

John Workman's sets were both pleasing and workable.

cussion was irrelevant adding:

"Give it (the constitution) a trial."

Tolley elaborated on the question of the publications board's necessity. He said:

"The only reason for having the board is that we need some kind of machinery to minimize political electioneering."

The board this year replaced publications staff members with presidents of the three senior honoraries as voting members. Tolley defended this decision:

"We want to base the choice be his own prosecutor and ties," he said. "Representatives of non-vested groups like the honoraries can make an objective choice."

"We shouldn't let the editor be his own prosecutor and judge," Tolley said. "But decisions will be based on the editors' recommendations."

Tolley added that a 1.5 cumulative average is not "an unreasonable expectation" for editors of campus publications. (He was referring to the clause in the constitution giving the board the right to remove editors the semester after their average dropped below 1.5.)

The Board of Student Publications is a 10-member administrative committee which appoints editors for campus publications and has the power to "supervise the editorial administration of the student publications..."

Regional IFC

SU to Host Conference

An InterFraternity Council Regional Conference will be held on the Hill today and Saturday.

The purpose of the conference is the discussion and possible solution of several problems common to the IFC at eastern universities. The meeting is sponsored by the Syracuse University IFC, whose officers will participate.

Representing the university will be Jim. G. Carleton, dean of men, and Frank Harrar and Melvin C. Mounts, fraternity administrators.

Representatives from the State University College at Buffalo, Cornell University, St. Lawrence and Alfred Universities and Hobart College will attend the conference according to Robert Osofsky, chairman.

The conference will begin with a dinner at 7 p.m. today in Sadler Hall. Saturday, the representatives will breakfast together and discuss rushing, disciplinary systems and other topics until noon.

The group is scheduled to watch the SU-Pittsburgh football game and then have dinner at 5 p.m. Reports on group discussions, comments, closing remarks and evaluations will be made from 6-9 p.m.

This is the 2nd annual conference of its kind. Osofsky said that this one will probably establish future conference procedures and plans.

The Rise and Fall

Two of the students distracted the guards, and the other six slipped up to the structure which Colgate had planned to ignite, doused it with gasoline and lit the immense structure.

Unfortunately, five of the eight were captured and scalped by the Raiders. For the group's daring efforts, other Hill frosh presented them with a plaque commemorating the event.

Eleven years ago, a group of Red Raiders attacked the Syracuse campus and made away with 32 fraternity trophies, the Alpha Tau Omega cannon and left the campus gaily decorated with splotches of red and bright pink paint.

In the fall of 1961, Syracuse witnessed its final Colgate Weekend, "The Last Hurrah," no longer sparked by intercampus hi jinks, a blazing bonfire or shaven heads. Both schools ruled such activities illegal and set up measures by which to punish violators.

Frosh Footballers Host Red Raiders

By KEN RUDNICK

Syracuse University's freshman football team makes its only home appearance of the season at 2 p.m. today when it battles the upset-minded Colgate frosh at Manley Field.

Coach Jim Shreve's Orange frosh will take the field with a 2-1 record against winless (0-3) Colgate, but Shreve still remembers last year's game.

Syracuse had rolled up more than 130 points in winning its first three games before meeting the seemingly out-classed Red Raiders. Colgate walked off the field with a 7-0 victory, handing Shreve his second defeat in five years.

Accordingly, Shreve isn't taking this year's assignment lightly: "Colgate has always been an aggressive, hard-hitting team. As last year's game proves, the records won't mean anything."

The Tangerines will field their regular starting lineup with the exception of left guard Dave Cazmay, who was injured in practice Monday. Greg Connors will replace Cazmay on offense and Charles Stecker, brother of varsity end Herb Stecker, will fill in on defense.

Shreve lists center Jim Murphy and right guard Dennis Fitzgibbons as his most outstanding varsity prospects on the forward wall.

The Tangerines' outstanding kicking game is designed to fill varsity head coach Ben Schwartzwalder with the anticipation of things to come.

Volz has been putting kickoffs into the end zone with consistency as well as kicking conversions. Don Bullard, the Tangerines' punting specialist, has averaged more than 40 yards a boot.

Say Cheese! On Color TV

Students attending the Syracuse home game against Pittsburgh tomorrow in Archbold Stadium will be seen in color on NBC television by an Eastern seaboard audience.

Commentators Linsey Nelson and Terry Brennan, former head coach at Notre Dame, will describe the action for the home viewers.

Inside the stadium itself, three temporary wooden platforms have already been erected so the massive 450-pound color television cameras could be installed.

Warren Phillips, engineering supervisor for the project, explained that there would be five television cameras placed in the stadium.

Boxing Club Plans Bouts At Memorial

Syracuse University fight fans get a special treat tonight when the Canastota Boxing Club presents a six-bout card at the War Memorial.

Hill students will be admitted to the fights at a special rate of $1, plus tax. First bout begins at 8:30 p.m.

Students should enter the War Memorial at the South State St. entrance.

The main event features Canastota's Billy Backus and Billy Anderson of Philadelphia. Both are 140 pounders on their way up.

Syracusan Hal Carroll, former 160-pound Adirondack AAU champ, will oppose Tony Romano of Rochester in the six-round semifinal. Romano, undefeated in three fights, was a three-time Niagara District AAU middleweight champ.

There are four other bouts on the card—a six-rounder and three four-rounders.

Varsity riflemen include Bill Gold, Tony Jeric, Don Hadyk, Rick Rider, Roger Rubrecht, Walt Sall and Clint Wigren. Others are Tom Rohr, Joe Weiler, Rich Lexington and Dave Bradford.

Six Remington model 10-Xs and four Winchester 52-Ds have been added to the team's equipment.

Senate Races

Robert M. Taft, is running against Democratic incumbent Stephen M. Young.

Young's opponent in May's Ohio Democratic primary was astronaut John Glenn. Young seemed certain to lose until Glenn's bathtub fall in February forced the astronaut to officially resign from the primary.

Taft has served four terms in the state legislature, his last term as majority leader. In 1962 he won 60 per cent of the vote for congressman-at-large. His victory in the May Republican primary was overwhelming.

But despite his immense popularity, Taft has lost support with Goldwater backers because of his tendency to support moderate positions.

"I am," Taft has said, "a thinking conservative."

Young has been concentrating on Taft's party affiliation with Goldwater.

Taft is still leading, but loss of Goldwater Republican votes, added to a heavy Democratic anti - Goldwater vote, could lose him the election.

Dugan to Read Modern Poetry Today

Syracuse University students will have the opportunity to hear one of America's modern poets read his work.

Pulitzer Prize winner Alan Dugan will read his poetry at 8 p.m. today, in Kittredge Auditorium, Huntington B. Crouse Hall.

Besides the Pulitzer Prize for poetry in 1962, Dugan also won the National Book Award. His first book, "Poems," was hailed as one of the finest first volumes of verse to appear in years.

"Poems 2," a collection of 52 new poems written in Europe and America, drew similar raves.

Dugan comes to the campus under the sponsorship of the Humanistic Studies Center of University College. The center is the downtown educational division of Syracuse University. Director of the center is Dr. Ray Ingham.

New Plans for Greek Week

Contrary to previous announcement, only one Greek Week will be held during the 1964-1965 academic year.

The decision is a complete reversal of an earlier plan to hold two Greek Weeks — one in the fall and one in the spring.

Nancy Bishko, chairman of the InterFraternity-Panhellenic Councils Greek Week Committee, said Greek Week is now scheduled for the week of May 2-9.

"This will give the committee more time to plan a better Greek Week," she said.

Orangemen Stalk Pitt Panthers

SU Defense Seeks To Cage Mazurek

By BILL CRONAUER
Sports Editor

Sweet revenge and a sense of injured pride will loom deep in the minds of the Syracuse Orangemen tomorrow when they battle Pittsburgh's Panthers in friendly Archbold Stadium.

Game time is 1:30 p.m., with NBC televising the clash for Eastern viewers.

The long sought revenge stems from last year's 35-27 heartbreaking loss to the Panthers in snow-covered Pitt Stadium.

The injured pride results from last week's 31-13 shellacking at the hands of Oregon State. Especially eager to make amends are the Spiders, SU's once-proud defensive unit.

With the Pittsburgh offensive powerhouse, paced by Fred Mazurek, coming to town, coach Ben Schwartzwalder has been busy pepping up his defenders.

"It scares you," Ben noted, "when you stop to think that Oregon State scored 31 points against our defense after only averaging a touchdown a game for the first five games of the season."

"And here comes Pitt," he continued, "a team that was able to score 35 points against us a year ago."

Greatest task for the Spiders will be to contain Mazurek. The 5-10, 190-pound senior, who almost singlehandedly destroyed the Orange last fall, ranks as Pitt's no. 1 passer and runner.

Mazurek has carried 74 times for 330 yards, a 4.5 average. He has passed for 505 yards, connecting on 38 of 68 tosses.

Other Panther stars include fullback Barry McKnight, their top scorer; linebacker Marty Schottenheimer; guard Ray Popp, and defensive end Brian Generalovich.

Syracuse counters with fullback Jim Nance (542 yards rushing), left half Floyd Little (419) and quarterback Walley Mahle (226).

Flashback '63: Chilling Defeat

By HOWIE SCHNEIDER
Junior Editor

Ben Schwartzwalder still lies awake at night thinking of a cloud of dust, a black jersey and a hardy no. 16——not to mention a lost trip to Miami.

The fact that the hardy no. 16, Mr. Fred Mazurek, will be back this weekend will not do wonders for Ben's equilibrium. For the 3,000 SU fans who braved the dangers of Pitt Stadium last year Mazurek conjures up memories of a snowstorm and a heartbreaking 35-27 defeat.

The two squads met before 45,000 fans in what experts agreed would choose at least one of the Orange Bowl participants. (it never did—so much for the experts).

Amidst snow and lightening the Orangemen rolled to a 21-8 halftime lead over the undefeated Panthers. Little Gus Giardi and Nat Duckett paced the Orange ground machine. SU fans were laughing in the snow and remarking, "It won't be like this in Miami." (It wasn't).

In the second half, however, Mazurek took over. With the help of halfback Paul Martha and fullback Rick Leeson, the Panthers exploded for three touchdowns in the third period. Mazurek was instrumental in scoring drives of 85 and 62 yards.

The Orangemen weren't dead yet. In the fourth quarter Rich King hit on a 53-yard touchdown pass to Mike Koski and SU trailed 28-27. Schwartzwalder elected to go for two, but King's quarterback sneak fell short by inches and with it went Miami and national ranking.

After Pitt had scored again King took to the air in a desperate effort. With five minutes left, however, the Panthers intercepted one of his tosses and the ball game was over.

Mazurek amassed a total yardage of 255. He was 13 for 21 in the air for 136 yards and rushed 22 times for 119 yards.

Harriers Seek Unbeaten Season

By NEIL KERR

"Everything up to this meet is just practice. It's just like the Army-Navy football game," said SU cross country coach Bob Grieve. "This Penn State team will be tough. We want this one real bad."

If past performances mean anything, Syracuse should do well against the Nittany Lions. The Orange harriers are 5-0 and will be shooting for their first undefeated season in eight years tomorrow at Drumlins.

They have outrun Buffalo, Colgate, Cornell, Army and Alfred so far this year.

But the annual get-together with the Penn State harriers has seldom meant an easy victory for the Orange. In fact, the Lions are the only opponents to hold an overall edge on SU in past meets. The two squads have met 21 times in the past and State holds an 11-10 lead in the series.

Last year, in a typically close race, the Penn State squad won, 27-30, at home. As for this season's PS squad, Grieve commented that "they're on a caliber with Army teamwise." Earlier this year Syracuse narrowly downed Army 26-29.

The Lions will bring a 2-3 record to Syracuse tomorrow including losses to a pair of good teams—Navy and Georgetown. The top five State runners are captain Dick Lampman, sophomore Art Morris, Fred Swanson, Chuck Leuthold and Steve Hyden.

Against the Nittany Lions, SU will be relying on its nucleus of six—Mike Spino, John Crawford, Marty Miller, Bill Cihak, Tom Giordano and Bill Ramsdell—to provide the edge. Two of the six, Spino and Crawford, ran the previous course record last Saturday against Alfred. Spino holds the 5.2-mile record with a 24:48 clocking.

GIORDANO

Crawford, in his first varsity season, could be the most improved member of the team. Grieve has tabbed him as a definite threat to take the individual championship at the IC4A's withing two years.

Another sophomore, Tom Giordano, will have added incentive going for him tomorrow. He and Morris, Penn State's soph whiz, are both from the Keystone State, and have raced many times before.

Morris, from Lancaster, beat Mt. Lebanon's Girordano in the mile race at the state championships two years ago. It was close, though, with Morris finishing in 4:20.3 to Giordano's 4:20.6.

In the 880 that day, Tom reversed the decision as he beat Morris by a second with a 1:59 clocking.

Last year, as freshmen, Morris finished ahead of Giordano in two races and Tom would like to partially even the score tomorrow morning.

Syracuse's Bill Cihak, who was bothered by a sore leg during the early stages of the season, has been running long and hard lately now that he is healthy again. Last year Bill was SU's number one runner.

The harriers, in their final home meet of the season, will get underway at 11 a.m. tomorrow. On Nov. 16, the Syracuse team will participate in IC4A's at New York City.

VPI President to Answer Charges

AWS Requests Court Decision On Constitution

By SUSAN STRANDBERG

Diane Kessler, president of the Association of Women Students, filed a formal appeal to Student Court Friday contesting Student Senate's decision to reject the revised AWS constitution.

The hearing of this appeal has been tentatively scheduled for Thursday by Frank Richmond, SC chief justice.

"I have checked the Student Government constitution to see if this case falls within the jurisdiction of Student Court. It is clear that it does," said Richmond.

Both sides will present their case before 12 student justices, who will then adjourn to make a decision. According to SC's constitution they have 72 hours to come to an agreement.

The Student Senate vetoed the AWS constitution Wednesday on the grounds that it did not include democratic nomination procedures, according to Robert (Robby) Stern, Senate speaker. He described these procedures, which were spelled out in the by-laws, as an "in group set up" and "undemocratic."

On the point of nominations the revised constitution and by-laws are nearly the same as under the old constitution which was approved by Joint Student Government in 1961, according to Joan Moore, AWS president.

Miss Kessler contends that: 1) the Student Senate has no right to review the by-laws of any organization and 2) if the senate is accepting Robert's Rules of Order as its

Court Action Disciplines Four Frosh

Disciplinary action has been taken against three freshmen for showing an intent to gamble and against another freshman for activities "unfitting to a university student."

The action was taken Thursday by Student Court.

The three men in the first case were placed on university disciplinary probation for a period of six months. They were discovered playing cards with money on the table in their floor lounge by their resident advisor.

The students claimed that no money had exchanged hands at the time and that the change on the table amounted to less than one dollar.

University regulations, however, specifically prohibit gambling, and the court felt that the students' actions showed a definite intent to gamble.

The student in the second case was involved with the proprietor of a campus restaurant in a fight provoked by the student's use of "obscene" language. In the ensuing fight, several customers were hit with

Frosh Class Picks Council

Twenty-eight members of the class of 1968 have beeen named to freshman executive council, Todd Wallens, class president, announced Thursday.

Those appointed were, Jeffrey Lovelace, Peter Jeffries, Betty Lou Blumenthal, Joni Walker, Marjorie Glatter, Mimi Bernstein, Paul Simon, Carol Schnieder, Peter Klein, Kermit Frazier and Betsy Withers.

Also, Pamela Pellock, William Waldorf, Linda Lipitz, Jeffrey and Barbara Farrar.

Also, Peter Hale, Ann Horowitz, Edward Lieberman, Judy Huggard, John Britz, Susan Low, Stephen Berlin and Ross Drowne.

"The officers were extremely pleased with the response," Wallens said. "We had a very difficult job choosing 28 members from 122 applications which we received."

Official Says Reply on Way To Syracuse

The president of Virginia Polytechnic Institute has replied to charges by the Syracuse University Student Senate in a letter expected to arrive on campus today or Tuesday.

Dr. Warren Brandt, vice president and dean of the graduate school at VPI, Friday told the Daily Orange that Dr. T. Marshall Hahn, VPI's president, had received the letter from the SS and had written the reply.

Brandt would not divulge the contents of the letter, but said that the SS statement was "based on false infomation."

"We're proud of our situation here, and we'll stack it up against Syracuse any day," Brandt stated.

Brandt termed the Syracuse

2 Coeds Accosted On Mount Steps By Main Library

By DONALD LAWLESS

At least two and perhaps more Syracuse University coeds have been accosted by a possible rapist on the steps leading to Mount Olympus recently.

The attacks, two of which ochours of Oct. 24 took place on the pinetree enclosed staircase behind the main library.

In both attacks the girls escaped unharmed.

The coeds, both upperclass women and both residents of Flint Hall, searched the Campus Chest Carnival that night in hopes of spotting their attacker but to no avail, one of the girls told the Daily Orange Friday.

"I am afraid to walk down those steps by myself," said another Flint resident. "There is not telling what may happen," she added.

Another resident on the mount in a letter to the Daily Orange lack of adequate police protection invites trouble of this sort to the campus.

With all the duties the security police have to perform, "when in the world do they have time to patrol the mount steps for a lecherous attacker?" asked the worried coed.

Assistant Director's of Security police Leo J. Graszler, called the attacks a "hit and run affair."

The attacks all happened on the same day and "there have

Scandals Spice Campaign

The Daily Orange continues its bird's-eye view of major political races which could affect the nation as a whole. Several of the campaigns are indicative of how the national party tickets may fare in individual states. Today, reporter Amos Moscrip looks at the contests for the governorships of Illinois and Massachusetts.

By AMOS MOSCRIP

Two recently revealed scandals may just push Republican challengers for governor over the top in Massachusetts and Ohio.

In Illinois Republican Charles(Chuck) Percy, former president of Bell and Howell, has been having trouble finding issues against Democratic incumbent Otto Kerner.

Kerner, handpicked by Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley's Democtatic machine, has been called a "Daley stooge" by Percy. But Kerner has been credited with running Illinois' first scandal free administration.

Recently Theodore J. Issacs, Kerner's campaign manager, was accused of manipulating a state contract for envelopes. Issacs was attorney for an envelope firm that received a $1 million contract from the state. He collected $12,000 in legal fees and later became a stockholder in the firm.

Issacs resigned after the disclosure.

Percy is playing up this issue as part of his theme of state responsibility.

"The federal balance is in jeopardy," Percy has said, 'because of the inability and unwillingness of states to assume their proper duty."

Percy has concentrated on the failure of Kerner's administration to cope with Chicago's crime rate, its inefficiency in government and its shortsightedness in planning aid to schools.

Kerner has accused Percy of letting his ambition overrule his conscience in his support of Sen. Barry M. Goldwater.

Percy, a moderate, ruined the Republican State primary bid of Goldwater backer William Scott, Illinois state treasurer, by agreeing to pledge himself to Goldwater at the Republican convention.

Percy's lukewarm support of Goldwater could cost him Chicago's 96,000-vote Negro block.

Kerner also has made advances in Illinois' mental health institutions. Percy is a Christian Scientist and doubts have been raised concerning his future decisions on state health programs.

"There's nothing that would prevent me from making any decision to public health that would not be in the best in-

Pumpkin Time

Three SU coeds remind us that Halloween, that wonderful children's holiday of "Give me a treat or I'll break your window," has just been celebrated on the Hill with true Fall spirit. Honoring the Great Pumpkin are (left to right) CAROLYN PERSKY, NANCY SCHWARTZ and JUDY ROSENFELT.

A Purpose For AWS

The case of Association of Women Students vs. Student Government as yet stands unresolved. The case will come before Student Court on Thursday.

One point is clear. It is apparent that AWS has failed in informing coeds, primarily freshmen, about the organization's operation and purpose.

All we ever hear from AWS are proposals for lengthening curfews, with an occasional reminder about proper dress on campus, possibly the most ineffective function of any campus organization.

The utilization of the senior and junior officers, as well as the seemingly countless other positions which win coeds points for service to the campus, also puzzle us.

How can an organization which on the surface does so little use so many people in its operation? Hopefully it is not a home for wayward coeds who have little else to do but look important.

We do not doubt the sincerity of the AWS officials. But, like the Student Senate, we cannot approve of the method AWS uses for choosing its officials. The role of the average coed is at a minimum.

We are puzzled why AWS stubbornly refuses to adopt a more democratic method of choosing officers, when reason clearly points the way.

Or perhaps it's because AWS is surprised, as are we, that Student Government is finally beginning to exert the authority which will put it in its proper place at the head of student organizations.

Ivy

Dear Aunt Grace:

A few weeks ago I saw several men who looked like they were working on the Administration Building from some scaffolding. Upon speaking to one of them, however, I found out the truth.

Did you know that Syracuse University is the only school in the East where the ivy has to be glued onto the building?

Yours,
Harry.

The Hoover Tradition

By Rich Turner

"What ruined Hoover's public career was not a sudden failure of personal capacity but the collapse of the world that had produced him and shaped his philosophy"—"The American Political Tradition" by Richard Hofstadter.

The death of Herbert Hoover was a great loss to the American people. He was a man you could admire and trust. His dedication to the people of the United States is unassailable.

Barry Goldwater identified himself with the principles of Herbert Hoover. His real grief at Hoover's passing is an accepted fact. That Goldwater thinks the way Herbert Hoover did is probably true. And, herein lies the whole problem of the Goldwater philosophy.

Herbert Hoover's ideas of government proved inadequate to handle the depression. America had become complicated and needed governmental help in handling the new problems. Hoover's belief in the free enterprise system without government assistance proved to be a belief in a god that failed.

The American values of industry, honesty and keen competition are still viable. You can still live in a tin shack in the "ward" and become President. But nowadays you need a college education. Your widowed mother can buy you clothes and books with the social security allotment. A colored preson faces less discrimination with the civil rights bill.

Barry Goldwater lives with his values and ideals in a world that is a lot more complicated than he would like to admit. His reactionary attitude is shared by many affluent self-made individuals.

You can raise your flag with a photo-electric cell, think clean and take your guns to town, but you, if you are President, have to help a lot of people who can't make it on their own. The only way you can do this is through the governmental institutions which Goldwater constantly assails.

"In your heart you know he's right." It's about time many Americans used their heads and saw that America needs more than outmoded principles and dreams of the past.

How many generations will go by before these people realize that America has changed?

LETTERS

Parking

To the Editor:

When will parking facilities improve at Syracuse University? Last year, loaded down with books, I huffed and puffed my way up to my car parked on the Mount, braving icy steps enroute.

This year I had to park four blocks away — the spot nearest to the Newhouse Communications Center. Everyone says new parking facilities are in the planning stage, but WHEN will these plans become a reality? Five years from now won't do present students any good.

I drive 14 miles to the university and live in the country, so taking a bus is impossible. Complaints, it seems, over lack of university parking space have accomplished little, and the situation remains the same.

Does anyone have further news of this problem? I would welcome some action and so would other commuting students.

Some constructive, definite progress in this area should take place, and construction for garage facilities, so often mentioned, should begin. But right now I'll settle for any old place somewhere near the university.

I must finish this letter pronto so I can get to my current parking place by 8:30 a.m., because if I don't get there by then, I'll be out of luck again.

Tests

To the Editor:

Once upon a time professors were though of as kindly old gentlemen of some import on campus. It seems that this high regard has gone to some of their heads.

One particularly benighted type scheduled an exam a month ago for Friday causing many students to make plans and reservations for the weekend. At the last minute he, in his infinite wisdom, rescheduled the exam for 9 a.m. the following Monday. Thus he has ruined the carefully made plans of many mere students.

Thank you, professor.

Commuters

To the Editor:

May I first of all commend Pat Tracey on her fine series covering the parking problem. She covered the subject adequately, but not completely.

Patiently I waited for a few paragraphs, at least, about the one segment of undergraduates most directly concerned with parking and operating cars — the commuters. But I'm afraid only another commuter could know the extent to which the situation affects us. So, if I may, I'd like to present our point of view.

Most residents at SU don't realize how large, geographically, Syracuse and Onondaga County are. Certainly it is no New York or Los Angeles, but it is large enough to offer problems of time and distance when you have to be at a certain place at a certain time.

Consider, if you will, that a 15 minute car ride equals, approximately, a half hour bus ride. This would cover about everyone within city limits. But some of us come from Camillus or Manlius or Liverpool. From these areas it's about a half-hour car ride. Take away cars, and we're left with over an hour bus ride. This is not counting, of course, time spent making bus connections. Take away cars and many of us couldn't come to SU.

Commuters, perhaps more than most, realize the university's problems regarding space for parking, traffic snarls, etc. But cars aren't luxuries or mere conveniences for us. We need cars to get to classes, libraries, and all university functions.

Of course, we don't expect or want campus stickers. We would like to continue as SU students. To do this we need our cars.

Thank you for this space to present our views. I'm sure the university will work out an equitable solution. And I trust they will keep us in mind as they do so.

Maria Pappalardo
President — Commuting Students Assn.

The Sounds of Jazz

The Limits of Freedom

by Bill Newman

Freedom is an essential ingredient in all art forms and jazz is no exception. Yet, a crucial problem arises; How much freedom is desirable?

In the forties when jazz went through the important metamorphosis from swing to bop, freedom of expression was the issue. A significant core of jazz men had come to the conclusion that jazz had stagnated in the stench of popular acclaim called swing. Charlie "Bird" Parker was thrown out of many groups because of his undisciplined approach to jazz improvization. Yet, in the long run, Bird, Dizzy, Miles and the others triumphed along with their music. Their ideas still exist in every form of jazz being played today from hard bop to traditional dixieland.

While bop won out in the artistic sense, it won a hard battle. It did nothing to solve the problem of freedom in jazz. We still have the task of deciding what is significant each time a new departure arrives on the jazz scene. Ornette Coleman is a primary case in point.

A few years ago Ornette Coleman arrived complete with a plastic alto sax, and a theory of complete freedom in jazz improvisation. His quartet would state the melody together in traditional manner, in spite of the fact that his plastic sax made some pretty raunchy sounds. Then all four musicians would begin improvising with no set pattern. No melodic or rhythmic relationship would exist between the four. It sounded like premeditated chaos.

As Coleman explained it, the fact that all four musicians had the same emotional message in mind justified this complete freedom. The listener was expected to discover an intrinsic beauty in this mess.

The reaction of the critiques was mixed. Some proclaimed that a new Bird had arrived while others held that Coleman's erotic music was the product of a neurotic musician.

The outcome of all this was quite suprising for while Coleman found little success as a performer, other groups in jazz began using his compositions. His tune "Lonely Women" has been played by almost all of the top flight groups in jazz today. So, while the idea of complete freedom of improvization in performance never proved valuable, the intense introspective quality of Coleman's music found great success in his compositions.

This case is illustrated to a lesser degree by many other men in jazz. Early Kenton was pretty far out and very much put down, but today his name is a hall mark of quality in jazz. Roland Kirk's music has mellowed a great deal in the past two years. Today he is a power voice in jazz rather than a freak in a musical circus. John Coltrane's vertical improvization was slow in gaining popular acceptance and understanding but now there are few new men who don't show influence of Coltrane in the way they play.

In my conclusion on the question of the value of freedom I find myself in good company. I feel that without such freedom jazz and all western culture would die.

In this respect I feel that we must view the extreme experimenter much like the martyr in Christianity. They both sacrifice to allow that which they believe in to grow and survive. Fortunately not all of the experimenters are doomed to failure. I dare you to name just one jazz musician who has gone out on a limb to no avail. Actually these men have challenged the listener to look just a little deeper into the music called jazz and for this we owe them a vote of thanks.

Few people can tolerate the music of Ornette Coleman but few would deny his right to exist. Let me transpose a political axiom. I can't stand what your playing but I'll defend to the death your right to play it. Freedom is absolute by definition and anything less is no longer freedom. That's why "Bird Lives."

Female Foresters Enjoy Their Minority

Despite popular misconceptions about the gender of the student body of the College of Forestry here at the Hill, there are female foresters enrolled in the school.

However, the boy-girl ratio is 96 to 1 with 15 coeds, making the girls about as sparse as sequoias in Syracuse. But, even though they are in the minority they seem to be all the better off for it.

Ricky Waller, a freshman enrolled in the College, commented, "I have no problem finding a seat in any of my classes and the doors seem to mysteriously open." She stated her reasons for going into forestry because, "I just love trees."

Linda Kurgan, a sophomore who has transferred to the College of Forestry, finds that she enjoys studying at the university and New York University, are living with French families or in the dormitories at hte University of Poitiers.

Also concurring was Lorelei Jordal who referred to the freshman coeds as "the Ten." "It is very different and interesting to be the only girl in a classroom full of boys. Some people think that it is rough but I manage," said Miss Jordal, a landscape major.

According to the terms of university disciplinary probation, the student is ineligible for any activities requiring personnel clearance. This includes fraternity rush, elected office and athletic activities. The decision remains on the student's permanent record.

Court probation differs in that the decision does not limit the student's activities and does not go on his permanent record after graduation. This means that it is struck from the record when the student applies for graduate study or employment.

Barry, Bill Blasted on Hill

"The heart and soul of the Republican Party is not represented by Barry Goldwater. His actions and those of his followers clearly demonstrate necessity for his defeat.

"We urge you to join with Republicans voting for Johnson and against Goldwater . . . The man with the tongue like quicksilver and a mind like quicksand"

The message was clear and it was from the Republicans and Independents for Johnson. Printed in the form of a "RIJ-o-gram, it found its way onto automobile windshields parked in campus lots Friday.

Another of the many anti-Bill and Barry signs to reach the campus, the blue and white additional messages in the upper-left and upper right hand corners:

"I didn't mean it that way."—Goldwater.

charges "obviously the report of the misinformed." He alleged the SS had "failed to check its facts."

He claimed VPI has been integrated for more than a decade.

A student reaction to the SS charges was given by Paul Tilson, editor for the "Virginia Tech."

"We're an integrated school; Negroes just don't come here," said Tilson, editor of the weekly newspaper.

Tilson confirmed that only one Negro is currently enrolled at VPI, but added that the school had no limitations on registration.

He pointed out that there are several good Negro schools in Virginia, all of which cost considerably less to attend than VPI. "This school is rough for anyone to get into and stay in," Tilson said.

Tilson added that one Negro was graduated from VPI last year with a second lieutenant's commission in the corps of cadets. He said a conflict had developed several years ago over the presence of Negro students at school social functions, but the issue had been resolved, with all Negro students permitted to attend all functions.

Tilson said he felt there were no Negroes in the VPI athletic program because of poor athletic facilities in predominantly Negro high schools in the state.

"We do most of our recruiting in Virginia," Tilson commented, "and the athletic programs in mostly Negro high schools just don't develop athletes."

He added he felt VPI could not offer the advantages to Negroes of most northern schools.

In regard to the letter sent by the Student Senate to VPI's president, Tilson urged that "some of your (SU's) fuzziness in thinking be cleared up."

terests of the public," Percy has answered.

At the close of the election, with help from the Issacs' scandal, Percy has a slight lead.

In Massachusetts former Republican Gov. John A. Volpe is running against Democratic Lt. Gov. Francis X. Bellotti.

Bellotti's nomination over Democratic incumbent Gov. Endicott (Chub) Peabody was something of a surprise. Peabody, a former All-American guard from Harvard University worked hard to beat a complacent Volpe campaign in 1962.

But Peabody made several mistakes in office, including an attempted purge of state House Speaker John (Iron Duke) Thompson. He also urged abolition of the death penalty during the reign of the "Boston Strangler."

Volpe is concentrating on the recent indictment of former Democratic Gov. Foster Furcolo (1956-60). Furcolo was indicted by a Boston grand jury for conspiring to arrange a bribe whilea governor.

Bellotti takes a folksy line in praising the virtues of the Democratic party.

Boasting of an impoverished boyhood, Bellotti says:

"My college education, my home, my car, everything that I am and have, came as a result of Democratic sponsored social legislation"

The race is even at this time.

Tangerine Eleven Outlasts Stubborn Colgate Freshmen

By NEIL KERR

In what coach Jim Shreve termed as "our poorest game of the season," Syracuse's frosh footballers downed Colgate 30-14 at Manley Field Friday afternoon.

The victory hiked Syracuse's record to 3-1 this season and left Shreve with a 22-3-1 log during his six year tenure at the SU freshman helm. Colgate is now 0-4.

But the Red Raiders gave the Tangerines a stiff tussle for three quarters before a pair of fourth period touchdowns by SU put the game out of reach. In fact, they dominated play in the first half and led 14-7 at intermission.

Syracuse had scored first when Greg Conner blocked an attempted Colgate punt. Syracuse defensive lineman Jim Chapalia fell on the ball in the end zone for six points and when Drew Volz added the extra point, Syracuse enjoyed a short-lived 7-0 lead.

The fired up Raiders then drove 63 yards in six plays to get back in the game. Quarterback Don Mooradian climaxed the drive with a 26 yard scoring pass to halfback Marv Hubbard. Hubbard added the extra point as well.

In the second stanza, SU halfback Nick Kish gathered in a Colgate punt on his own eight and was tackled on the 15 . . . fumbling the ball in the process. Colgate promptly went for a score as Hubbard again tallied for the Raiders, this time on a three-yard run.

His extra point gave Colgate its 14th point and the Red Raiders were through scoring for the afternoon.

But, on the last play of the first half, Colgate blew a chance to grab a more substantial lead. The Raiders' Hubbard eluded all pass defenders on the Orange 15, but somehow managed to drop quarterback Ron Canterna's perfectly thrown pass.

In the second half Syracuse took over. With a cool operator, Rick Cassata, at quarterback, SU drove 46 yards for a touchdown. A Cassata to Kish pass ate up the final 15 yards.

When Cassata rolled around right end for a two-point conversion, the Tangerines led, 15-14.

The Orange lead grew to 21-14 when, in the fourth quarter, Don Bullard passed eight yards to Larry Csonka to climax a 63-yard drive. Tom Coughlin gained much yardage during the advance as he carried the ball six times. Volz' second placement made it 22-14.

The final Orange TD was tallied when Cassata connected on a 13-yard pass to end Nick Marchionne. The two points were added on a pass play, Cassanta to Frank Parrish.

Though the Orange were bothered by fumbling, bad punts and a hard-charging Colgate line, there were some good performances by the Orange squad.

The passing arm of Cassata plus the running of backs Csonka, Kish, Coughlin and Arnie Frieman were vital factors in the come-from-behind victory.

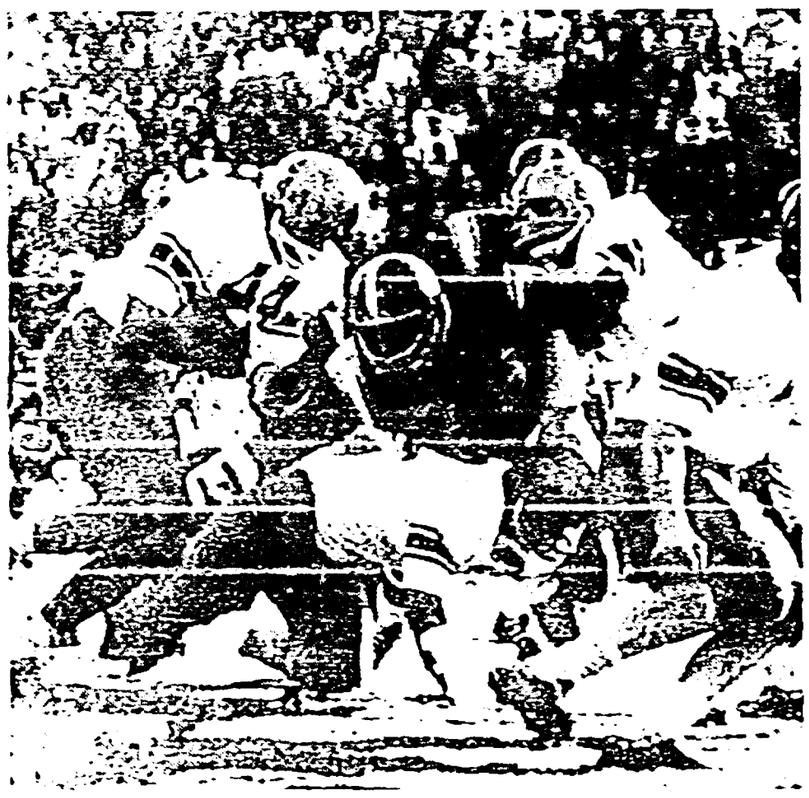
King Paces Piety Over Panthers



Off and Running

FLOYD LITTLE (44) scoots off tackle in Saturday's football tussle with the University of Pittsburgh. Leading the blocking are WALLEY MAHLE (19) and HOWIE McCARD (62), on ground. Little picked up 100 yards rushing and was voted the outstanding back in the game for the third time this season.

By HOWIE SCHNEIDER
Junior Editor

For three years quarterback Rich King had been playing in the shadow of Wally Mahle. As of late he hadn't been playing period.

But Saturday King found a new home in the Schwartzwalder family and in doing so he sparked the Orangemen to a 21-6 victory over Pitsburgh.

The senior co-captain had been having his share of problems all year. It was understandably discouraging when he found his biggest responsibility was calling the toss of the coin. Therefore, when Schwartzwalder inserted him ito the defensive lineup, he was about ready to try anything.

Safetyman King tried so hard Saturday he intercepted a pass and jaunted 30 yards for the key touchdown, recovered a fumble, was instrumental in 10 tackles, punted five times for a 43.8 average and in general made life miserable for John Michelosen's visiting Panthers.

None in the homecoming crowd of 35,000 was more enthusiastic about King than his coach. "Rich King made all the difference in the world. He sure did a job for us on defense," Schwartzwalder said. "He really gives the team a lift when he's in there."

King and the revamped Syracuse Spiders did a good job of containing Pitt's explosive Fred Mazurek. Mazurek rushed 15 times for only 10 yards. He looked like Jimmy Brown, however, compared to second string quarterback Kenny Lucas, who rushed eight times for a minus seven yards.

In the air the Pitt quarterbacks hit on four of 13 for 49 yards. Time and time again the Spider forward wall gave Mazurek a guided tour of the Archbold Stadium turf a la Larry Zeno.

A large part of the Panthers' 143 total yardage came through the efforts of Barry McKnight. The fullback carried 16 times for 78 yards.

For the Spiders Herb Stecker, who was voted SU's outstanding lineman, was in on 10 tackles. Linebackers Jim Cheyunski and Bob Morgan were in on 14 and nine stops; respectively.

In an otherwise unimpressive Syracuse offensive attack, fleet Floyd Little turned in an outstanding performance. The sophomore halfback carried 15 times for 100 yards. He also teamed up with Walley Mahle on a 16-yard pass completion, setting up the last SU score.

Little was chosen as the outstanding Orange back for the third time this season.

After the game Pitt Coach Michelosen joined the growing list of Little admirers: "Little has to be one of the best backs we've seen or will see all year. He's got speed to go to the outside and power to run the middle. You can bet we'll remember him."

Jim Nance had only 27 yards in 13 carries. Mahle had nine yards in 10 carries and completed three for 11 for 36 yards. The Orangemen had a total rushing yardage of 151.

After a scoreless first period the Panthers marched 57 yards in 16 plays to score their first and last touchdown. The point after attempt was no good.

The Orangement came right back, however, to go ahead 7 - 6. After taking the kickoff they went 69 yards in seven quick plays with Little skirting right end for the tally. After an SU penalty, Roger Smith kicked the extra point from the 26 - yard line.

On the next series of downs King made his aggressive interception of a Lucas pass and ran it home to give SU a 14 - 6 half time lead.

In the second half the Panthers couldn't get rolling. Even their "spread" offensive formation was not enough to rattle the Spiders. Schwartzwalder countered with what he called "our garbage defense."

The Orangemen added their final score in the fourth period when Jim Nance capped an 80-yard drive.

Following Saturday's 21 - 6 Archbold loss to the Orange, Pitt Coach John Michelosen had nothing but praise for the Hill eleven.

Starting with the backfield, the Panthers' skipper exclaimed, "Mahle, Nance and Little all are good runners."

Fullback Jim Nance's strength and power especially impresed the Pitt mentor. "He's a real fine charger," stated Michelosen.

Turning to the other half of the Hill's 1 - 2 backfield punch, Michelosen declared, "Floyd Little has real good potential. He's very strong and very fast."

The Panthers' skipper said he did not make any special defensive preparations in an attempt to contain the Hill's explosive backfield.

In a rather surprising comment, Michelosen remarked, "Syracuse is tough to defend against because it can both run and pass."

Explaining the unusual spread formation that Pitt displayed, Michelosen stated, "We were running out of halfbacks, so we devided to give Mazurek a chance (at halfback)." Mazurek had never before played halfback, according to the Pitt mentor.

In the unusual formation, a big gainer in the visitors' lone scoring drive, the center and two guards were the only linemen in their usual places. About ten yards across the field the other four linemen took their positions.

Behind the three spread linemen was regular signal caller Fred Mazurek, in a flanker position.

Several individual performances of his own Panthers were especially pleasing to the Pitt coach.

Halfback Eric Crabtree, who uncorked several nifty sprints, was one standout. The speedy junior ran well in spite of injuring his leg early in the contest, noted Michelosen.

"The fullback (Barry McKnight) also did some fine running," declared the Panther skipper.

McKnight gave school boy buddy Jim Nance spirited competition in the ground gaining race. Both fullbacks are alumni of Indiana (Pa.) High School.

Standout linemen, according to Michelosen, were middle linebacker Marty Schottenheimer, making tackles all over the field, and Ray Popp, a guard whose blocking and tackling were superb.

Lone injured Panther was guard Bernie LaQuinta, who was shaken up. Michelosen expects him to be ready for next week's Notre Dame contest.

Ben Schwartzwalder entered the locker room, asked for quiet and said, "Fellows you played a real good game today, and we're proud of you, but next week Army."

And with that statement the Syracuse coach set the tone of the post-game Orange locker room. They had played well, they had earned the victory, but Army would be even tougher next week.

"This was a real good victory to have," Schwartzwalder said. "Don't sell that Pitt team short, it's a good team, and they'll give Notre Dame a tough time next week."

But there was a major dfference about this locker room. The reporters were talking to Floyd Little and Walley Mahle, but they were primarily interested in Rich King.

King, who plays behind Mahle at quarterback, is co-captain of the Orange and the team recognizes him as a fine leader. However, until Saturday King had done most of his leading from the bench.

It probably won't be that way any more, though, because Schwwartzwalder installed King in the defensive secondary that had looked so leaky against Oregon State, and King plugged the hole. He intercepted one pass for a touchdown, recovered a key fumble, and, in another department, punted for a 43.8 average.

"This is the first time I've really played defense this year," King said. "I had been working on defense this week but it wasn't until Wednesday that the coach told me I'd start at safety. It was a complete surprise I wanted to play."

King described the inerception that put SU ahead, 14 - 6. "I didn't want anybody to beat me deep; the short pass was OK, but not deep. On the interception I saw the ball coming my way and went for it. I'm not sure but I think we both had our hands on it, but then I had it, bobbled it, and held on. I think that was the way it happened: all I could think of was getting into the end zone."

Schwartzwalder praised King's performance and noted how valuable his punt had been. "This boy gave us a real lift out there and he holds the kids together," Schwartzwalder said.

When asked if Pitt's spread offensive which worked so effectively against the Orangemen in the second half, had caught his team by surprise, the coach answered, "Well you see we have a special defense designed to cover any unorthodox formation an opponent may use. We call this our garbage defense and practice it each week."

Harriers Toppled By Lions

By NEIL KERR

Though Syracuse's harriers turned in one of their best performances of the season timewise, Penn State edged the Orange squad 28-29 Saturday morning at Drumlins. It was the first loss for Syracuse and left them with a 5-1 record.

With the victory Penn State hiked its log to 3-3 and recorded its 12th win over SU as compared to 10 losses in the series.

Finishing in first place was State's Chuck Leuthold with a time of 24:28. His time broke Mike Spino's week old course record by 20 seconds. Spino finished second this time, though he too bested his own record running the course in 24:37.

Completing the scoring for Penn State were Art Morris, third; Dick Lampman, fourth; Steve Hyden, eighth; and Bill Peiffer, twelfth.

The fight for first place was contested throughout the entire 5.2 mile race. Leuthold, Spino and Morris ran together until the last 300 yards when Leuthold put on a strong finishing kick and pulled away.

Besides Spino, the Orange placewinners were John Crawford, fifth; Marty Miller, sixth; Bill Cihak, seventh; and Tom Giordano, ninth.

Remaining action for Syracuse is scheduled on Nov. 14 when the Orange are scheduled to run in the IC4A's in New York City.

The Nation Goes to the Polls Today; Pollsters Predict Johnson Landslide

Candidates Campaigned Differently Than Expected

By JESSE SMITH

Today an election takes place, an election which has been heralded as an historic choice between liberalism and conservatism.

It has also been heralded as possibly the greatest electoral landslides in history, with experts and pollsters predicting that President Lyndon B. Johnson will bury Sen. Barry M. Goldwater.

But the voters who are looking for a choice between a liberal and a conservative have been offered instead a choice between an incumbent president who embraces the broad middle of the American political spectrum, and a minority party nominee within his own party.

And they have been bombarded by a campaign which obscured issues and focused on personalities. Rather than asking for approval of the liberal stands it has taken during the last 30 years, the Democratic Party has called for defeat of what it calls extremism and irresponsibility in the Republican candidate.

Besides the presidency and 435 House seats, there are 35 senate seats up for election and 25 governorships at stake. Of the Senate seats, 26 are presently Democratic and nine are Republican. Democrats head 18 states, while Republicans hold seven governorships.

And instead of asking for endorsement of conservative principles, the Republican campaign has sought to discredit a "corrupt' and "power-mad" Democratic regime in Washington.

But a voter need not give up. There is a historic choice to be made. Barry Goldwater stands for rejection of expanding Federal government role, and the belief that the past 30 years have seen American principles debased by welfarism.

Lyndon Johnson, a man of compromise, has supported strongly the liberal programs of his Democratic predecessors but has added a touch of budget-balancing and moderation.

The basic choice is whether the New Deal and all economic programs which followed were wrong, or whether they represented progress in solving pressing problems.

During the campsign, Goldwater has backed away from many of his strongly conservative stands, as the "extremist" label caught on and he alienated many moderates of his own party.

Johnson, seeking as broad a base of support as possible, avoided the "liberal" tag and took a stance which could attract the moderates away from Goldwater.

City Information May List Dorm Phone Numbers

By KAREN ZAGOREN

As a result of Daily Orange effort, students may be able to get the telephone number of pay telephones and outside lines in dormitories and fraternity and sorority houses from the city information operator.

Because the numbers have been unlisted, city information operators could not give them. University operators, according to Mrs. Muriel Day, switchboard supervisor, were not allowed to give out the numbers either.

"This policy was handed down by the administration, she related. Mrs. Day said the numbers could be obtained from the Syracuse (city) information operators.

Donald Sill, communications consultant for the New York Telephone Co. pinpointed Dr. Francis A. Wingate, Syracuse University vice president and treasurer, as the administrator who made the decision.

In 1960 we made all the numbers unlisted, Sill said. This was done because people were constantly calling the first few numbers listed instead of the central university number, he explained.

Sill commented that as recently as 1958 university listings filled three pages of the local phone directory.

Before the DO contacted Sill Wingate said he did not remember making any decisions concerning either the operators' procedure or the unlisted numbers. He mentioned that his

Dugan Decries AmericanIdeals

By AMOS MOSCRIP

Alan Dugan is almost at the top of a career for an American poet.

Dugan only has two volumes of poetry out, "Poems 1" and "Poems 2," "but he has won the Pulitzer Prize for Poetry (1962) and the National Book Award.

Dugan's poetry is hard and masculine, and it can be bitter and angry beneath a grotesque wit.

He doesn't like to see people stepped on, from punchy fighters to ex-soldiers to men out of work. He made that clear in an interview before his poetry reading Friday night in Kittredge Auditorium, Huntington B. Crouse Hall.

"Yeah, most people are cowards and won't stand up for their rights, and the brave take over," Dugan said.

Dugan means brave in quotes. He said he doesn't have much use for and "establishment" in writing or politics.

"Guys like (John) Cheever and (John) Updike, those New Yorker-type writers, they're slick writers for money and a middle-class audience. Their sympathies are antipathetic to mine. I prefer (Nelson) Algren, to any of those guys," he said.

Dugan paused. He spoke slowly in a baritone voice that has a slight Bronx accent. He liked to condense his replies so just a few words would cover the whole question. He didn't like to get involved in a lot of language.

"It's a shame for a writer to write to justify the ruling class," he added. "It's selling out."

What about the American dream, and the way it's presented in full-color magazine advertisements?"

(See Dugan, page 7)

Third SU Coed Accosted

A third Syracuse University coed has been the victim of an assault. This "grabbing" took place at approximately 5:45 p.m. Saturday on the west stairs to Mount Olympus, according to Leo J. Graszler, assistant director of safety and security.

The coed was walking up he stairs when a boy jumped out of the bushes and grabbed her, Graszler said. When the girl screamed, the boy fled up the stairs.

Graszler said this attack followed the pattern of two others which took place Oct. 24 on the same staircase. In all three cases the girls escaped unharmed.

Graszler also said that descriptions of the attacker have been identical.

Dean of Women Marjorie C. Smith said that she had a report of the incident and that "I'm very much concerned. We're doing everything possible to trace down the offender."

All women residents of SU have been warned by the Association of Women Students and security police never to walk alone on campus after dark and to walk in pairs during the day whenever possible.

Any further incidents are to be reported immediately to security police building 19.

DO COVERS ELECTIONS

Through the combined efforts of Daily Orange staff members, Syracuse University will be provided with complete election coverage in Wednesday's edition. The paper will feature stories and totals on the presidential, senatorial, and gubenatorial elections across the nation.

The Day Of Choice

Today is a day of choices. On the national scene, a decision must be made between the confident politician-statesman-President and the vigorous, but unappealing senator.

In the state, the handsome dignified senator finds himself challenged by the young and even more handsome outsider. Many other similar positions are being contested across the country.

If this campaign is to be remembered, we will remember it as the campaign of filth, when real issues were buried by campaigns of personality, smothered by mud.

This is the year that Jews were urged to vote against President Johnson by a full-page advertisement in the New York Times saying how he was aiding the foes of Israel.

This is the year that James Roosevelt urged the people of New York to vote for Sen. Kenneth Keating because Robert Kennedy said a nasty thing to his mother, the late Eleanor Roosevelt.

This is the year the Democrats forgot about Sen. Goldwater's views and aimed their attacks on those of some of the people supporting him.

This is the year that two candidates for office wanted to debate, (or said they did) and both blamed the other for not making such a debate possible.

This is the year that will be resolved when the polls close this evening, and the nation and the states will have chartered their courses for the next few, but possibly long, years.

We hope that today's votes are free of emotion and filth. We hope each voter knows for what he is marking his ballot.

The real issue never developed this year. In our heart, we know that's wrong.

Letters

We received three letters Monday which disturb us. Two of the letters were newsworthy, and might well have been printed in the adjoining column, but they were both unsigned and were promptly filed in our wastebasket.

The third was filled with anti-Negro trash, filled with hate, and obviously written by someone of fourth grade mentality. It too was unsigned.

We are puzzled why people with worthwhile views will not sign letters. We have guaranteed that no names will be printed if so requested. Our policy stands.

Debate

To the Editor:

Mr. Lillich, who needed help from Mr. Bennett in the recent International Students Organization debate (liberal fair play -- two against one), tries to continue the debate without my even being there. Quite by accident I heard of his letter to the editor (Oct. 19), in which he repeats his inaccuracies of the 13th.

The "New York Times" (Dec. 9, 1960) prints only a few excerpts from Sen. Goldwater's address, (which I heard). Yet even these show clearly that Lillich's interpretation falls flat. First, Goldwater criticized economic aid to certain allies and neutralists; second, he expressed concern about the outflow of gold; third, he proposed a moratorium on unearned wage and price increases, and fourth, he discussed lower U.S. prestige abroad, and declared that the U.S. "should begin acting like a world power and quit groveling on its knees to inferior people who like to come to New York." Goldwater was referring to the recent visit to New York of dictators Khrushchev and Castro.

Mr. Lillich, who expressed such admiration for a similar dictatorship in Zanzibar ("people's replublic"), fails to distinguish between the people behind the Iron Curtain (94 per cent of the population) and their communist masters (6 per cent). Goldwater wants to help the former; he hopes the latter will go the way of Hitler.

Senate

To the Editor:

Student Senate should be recognized for registering disapproval of any and all sorts of systematic exclusion of any person on the basis of race, color, creed or national origin in the field of higher education as well as in other areas of endeavor." This stand was taken recently with respect to scheduling of athletic contests with institutions practicing restrictive admissions polices based on race.

I submit that the primary responsibility of the students and of Student Government resides with their own activities. I challenge Student Government to assess the extent to which racial and other prejudicial discriminatory practices pervade student life at Syracuse. Of primary concern should be institutionalized pratices. I challenge Student Government to take a stand on admissions policies of the social fraternities and sororities.

The Daily Orange commended the Student Senate for "...thinking about something which may result in constructive proposals." Discriminatory policies of campus social organizations should be an area of concern for Student Government. This problem is certainly one about which constructive proposals could be made and action taken if the Senate is sincere in its stand. I think it is even possible to achieve results.

Computers Go Home

By Bruce Eaton

For winning candidates it's a night of fulfillment.

For the losers it's the crushing of a dream.

For the people in mass communications and particularly radio and television it's the combination of hell and paradise and a goal they've been working toward for over a year.

It's election night in the United States.

For the last year the three major networks have been programing their computers and early in the evening they will declare the winners and the rest of the evening will be spent reaffirming the network's wisdom.

Smaller operations cannot program computers and in fact they cannot compete on a national level with the multi-million dollar expenditures of the networks, and so they will have to look for the unique.

WAER this year may have found just that.

On the national level election night, WAER will be a part of the IVY Network which includes all the Ivy League schools, most of the other major colleges and universities in the east, and a number of midwestern schools going as far west as the University of Illinois at Chicago.

This network, operating out of Radio City, will offer WAER a number of advantages. First there will be commentary by the leading political scientists of the Ivy League who in addition to spotting trends (which a computer can do) will be explaining these trends and their importance in the future elections (which a computer can't).

For humor (sorely needed on election night—not available from the RCA 301) WAER will have Monocle magazine's candidate for president, Marvin Kitman, with election sidebars.

On-campus anchor man John Spare will be giving political notes and he will have with him a presidential desk manned by Dan Stone, a gubernatorial desk with Pete Moller and a congressional desk manned by Robert Babcock that will keep you informed of all the latest figures in the various races.

But elections are fought at various levels and WAER gives a great deal of attention to the local races. At nine o'clock a team led by News Director Hak Kahn will be reporting all the local returns from Syracuse election headquarters in the Post Standard.

WAER realizes of course that even with the accent on computers this year, politics is till primarily people and so will feature from all downtown headquarters as well as the Post Standard a number of interviews with winning candidates and other significant political figures in the Syracuse area.

Intellectuals have the most trouble filling out their income tax returns, according to John McGuire of the Internal Revenue Service.

Victory and Color Keyn

The 1964 Pitt-Fall weekend proved a colorful victory for Syracuse University.

The weather was a burst of fall colors and spring temperatures. The football game was a tremendous victory, and on color television. Many SU lawns were decorated with the colorful products of design and production. Other events just plain displayed the workings of some colorful imaginations.

Reigning over the event was queen Sandra Olsen, a senior in the College of Home Economics with a 1.8 average. Sponsored by Alpha Phi sorority, Miss Olsen is from Huntington.

Winners among living center decorators were Haven Hall in the large dormitory class, Sigma Alpha Mu and Sigma Delta Tau for the most original, and Sig-

The trophy for the placard cheering contest went to Robert Jarvik with a design for a "Split Pitt" cheer. Although the cheer could not be used at the Pitt game, it will be used in the future.

Unique to this year's weekend was a piano breaking contest held Saturday morning in Walnut Park. Sponsored by Sigma Nu and Kappa Phi Delta Fraternities, the event was open to anyone with a piano.

Saturday's events also included a medley of post-game bands on various Greek lawns and sundry Pitt-Fall and Halloween costume parties at night.

City Information May List

lack of memory did not discount the possibility.

Confronted with Sill's statement, Wingate, who meanwhile had conferred with Dean of Personnel Administration and Admissions John S. Hafer on the matter, said that he was willing to have the numbers published in the city of Syracuse phone directory or any other publication if approved by the dean of men and dean of women.

However, because of the limited staff and the large amount of calls which they handle, he would not approve of the switchboard operators giving this information.

"I have no objection to a listing in the city directory," said Dean of Men Jim G. Carleton when contacted by the Daily orange.

Dean of Women Marjorie C. Smith also approved the change.

"I think it is a real service to the students and the phone company," she said.

It still remains to be seen whether the administration will actually request that these numbers be listed in the city directory.

Dugan . . .

"I detest it," Dugan said.

"People will shut themselves off in a room with a TV and go crazy."
said.

"Part of the problem of our society is it's changing so fast and it's so mobile. People get alienated that way. TV and autos make for perfect alienation."

Dugan sees the college generation today as running scared.

"The main reason is that any real left-wing activity has been outlawed. We haven't had any real left-wing since the Communist Party was outlawed. And if you outlaw the left, people run to the right and center."

"That's why I admire the bravery of the "beats." They weren't afraid to be out—spoken in what they believed in or in their politics."

How does this stress on politics affect his poetry?

"Political views aren't necessary for writing," Dugan said. "There's a lot of good writing that isn't political. But that's my general esthete, just my own personal one, to be engaged in the existentialist sense."

'68 Sponsors Idea Contest

The class of '68 is sponsoring a contest to determine a theme for Freshman Weekend set for Dec. 11-13. The winner will be presented with two sets of complimentary tickets for all weekend events, reports Todd Wallens, freshman class president.

Suggestions will be accepted until 5 p.m. today at the Women's Bldg. Students must include name and university extension with application.

Features of the weekend were decided at the first meeting of the freshman executive council Thursday. They include a jazz or folk concert Friday evening, Dec. 11, a Saturday afternoon talent show and an informal dance scheduled for Saturday.

Spend the big football weekend at The Waldorf.

you may never go back to school.

We'll clean your clothes. Turn down your bed. Even lay out your pajamas. The way we spoil you, your mother would kill us. Would she serve you breakfast in bed? Or a banana split at midnight? We do. (Other hotels may do the same thing but not in the grand Waldorf manner.) What does it cost to stay in a hotel that's practically become legend? Astonishingly little. Just take a gander at our student rates.

$10.00 per person, 1 in a room ■ $8.00 per person, 2 in a room ■ $7.00 per person, 3 in a room.

Is that a bargain or is that a bargain?

M. Lewis Hall Jr., chairman of the Orange Bowl committee last night confirmed that Syracuse had been readmitted to the Orange Bowl list. Speaking by phone from Miami, Fla., Hall noted that SU is one of the ten teams under consideration. The conversation will be featured in Wednesday's Daily Orange.

* * * *

The following is a telephone converation yesterday with Conrad Gunti, head of the Gator Bowl selection committee, in Jacksonville, Fla.

* * * *

Q—Is Syracuse still on the Gator Bowl list?

A—Yes.

Q—What other teams are on the list?

A—We are currently considering Florida, Florida State, Duke, Alabama, Arkansas, Boston College, Georgia Tech, Georgia, LSU, Oregon, Nebraska and Texas, in addition to Syracuse.

Q—When will the first team, or both teams, be selected?

A—Due to circumstances, this is very difficult to say. We are at a disadvantage in that there are a number of bowls ahead of us (prestige-wise). In other words, we have to wai until the other bowls are partially filled up before we can make any decisions. We just follow things week to week.

Q—Did the Gator Bowl committee have a representative at the Syracuse-Pitt game and will there be a scout at the Syracuse-Army contest this weekend?

A—No to both questions. So far we have done no official scouting of any teams. We will probably start scouting one week from Saturday.

Q—Is it true, as rumored, that a Florida team, presumably the winner of the Florida-Florida State game, will receive a Gator Bowl bid?

A—Not necessarily. It is entirely conceivable that the winner of that game could go to another bowl. This thing is highly competitive. We'll just have to wait and see what develops.

Q—What is the probabiilty of a northern school competing against a southern school in the Gator Bowl?

A—Traditionally this has been the way we've handled it. Of course it depends to a large extent on a team's record and performance. As you probably know, we have no arrangements with any conferences. For example, we won't necessarily select the winner of the Atlantic Coast Conference if that team's credentials are not acceptable.

BULLETIN

The Orangemen of Syracuse, after dropping Pitt 21-6 Saturday, have climbed to 13th position on the weekly UPI grid poll.

In the Lambert, SU posted a 9.6 rating, earning five of eight place votes, to rank as the top Eastern team for the fourth consecutive week.

'No Cakewalk'

Army Provides Test

After Saturday's crucial win over Pitt, you'd think that Syracuse's coaches would be somewhat optimistic concerning the Army game this week. But they aren't.

"I'm sorry that it's too late to cancel the game," commented Ben Schwartzwalder. "This isn't gonna be any cakewalk. It will be another game like Penn State and Pitt. We'll need an all-out effort to win."

Orange scout Joe Szombathy added that "there's no doubt about it—Army's the best football team with a 3-4 record in the United States. They're better than Penn State. We're afraid this Army team is going to explode and we hope it isn't this week."

And the Cadets are about due for a big day offensively. In each of their last five games, Army has been held to two touchdowns or less.

This season Army is 3-4 with victories over The Citadel, Boston College and Iowa State. They have been beaten by Texas, Penn State, Virginia and Duke.

"We've had a very unusual season," said Army coach Paul Dietzel. "I think we have a better team than our record would indicate.." He pointed out that three of Army's losses came in the final minutes of play.

"Our biggest problem has been to keep our backfield together and intact. A lot of guys have been hurt. That's put a tremendous burden on Rollie (Stichweh). But he's a very durable quarterback."

As for Stichweh, Szombathy emphasized that "he's the key to the Army offense. He stops on a dime, changes direction fast and has real good speed. He's got a real good arm and if you give him time he'll peck your eyes out. We've gotta stop him if we're gonna get by Army."

Besides Stichweh, Army's outstanding personnel include defensive linemen Townsend Clarke and Charley Stowers. Clarke has recorded a team leading total of 54 tackles this year. Stowers has downed 40 enemy ballcarriers.

The huge duet of Bill Zadel and Bill Sherrill occupy offensive tackle positions for the Cadets. Zadel, at 6-4 235 pounds, has been called "the best tackle I've had since I've been here," by Paul Dietzel. The other tackle, Sherrill, goes 6-5, and 230.

Sam Champi, a 6-4 offensive end is Stichweh's favorite passing target. He's a good receiver. "If you throw the ball anywhere near him, he'll catch it," said Szombathy.

At present Schwartzwalder plans to stay with the same lineup that did the job against Pitt last weekend. Early indications are that there no major injuries versus Pitt.

"I'm real pleased with Dick King's work as a field general," he said. "Somebody's got to call the shots back there and Dick does the job." Ben also lauded the play of defensive ends Herb Stecker and George Fair as well as the work done by middle linebackers John Krok and Gerry Everling.

On offense Schwartzwalder noted, "Floyd Little's getting better every week. He's a great football player."

The backfield combination of Little and Jim Nance are well on their way toward establishing themselves as the top one-two punch in Syracuse history. To date, they have 1,101 of the 1,602 yards SU has gained rushing. Nance has 582; Little, 519. Both have nine touchdowns.

At their current pace, Nance and Little will top the Orange two-man record of 1,267 yards established by halfback Ernie Davis and fullback Art Baker in 1960.

✦ ✦ Of Garbage and Men ✦ ✦

The following is the seventh in a series of question and answer sessions between DO junior editor Howard Schneider and coach Ben Schwartzwalder. Substituting for Schwartzwalder, who was in New York City, are assistant coaches Roy Simmons (backfield), Rocco Pirro (offensive line) and Ted Daily (defensive line).

Q—When did the coaching staff decide to switch Rich King to the defensive team?

SIMMONS—Practically everybody on the squad works on both offense and defense in practice. Each afternoon we divide up practice into three periods. The offensive team works two on offense and one on defense and the defensive team vice-versa. Now King had been looking mighty good in practice in the safety position. We knew he had played defense last year. It was not an altogether sudden change. We had been talking about it sometime before. He wasn't seeing too much action at quarterback because Walley (Mahle) was doing such a fine job. It's a shame to have somebody as good as King sit on the bench.

Q—Coach Schwartzwalder stated that he used "our garbage defense" to counter Pitt's spread formation. Can you elaborate?

DAILEY—At the beginning of the year we set up this "garbage" defense to use against any unfamiliar offense formation we ran up against. In the defensive formation we have three interior linemen over center, the two ends split wide, the three linebackers nose to nose with the offensive backs, and the three deep backs in centerfield. The first time Pitt ran the play Stecker was the only man out wide and consequently the play was effective. The next time we had someone help out Stecker and we stopped them pretty good.

Q—There are few statistics that indicate the quality of performance of an offensive line. Would you comment on this year's line?

PIRRO—In general I have been very satisfied with the play of the offensive line. If I had to pick one individual who was doing our best job I would have to say it was our center, Pat Killorin. Tony Scibelli and Howie McCard have been doing a good job and sophomores Harris Wienke and Gary Bugenhagen have been pleasant surprises.. And don't forget, except for our ends, all the kids will be back next year. They should be even better with a year of experience under their belts.

Q—At least statistically Jim Nance has appeared to be playing under his potential for the past two games. Is this criticism valid?

SIMMONS—No, absolutely not. I thought Jim blocked very well Saturday. Fans just don't realize what defensive tactics the opposition is using and how this in turn affects our offense. Pitt was just not giving Nance any ground up the middle and I think it was a tribute to Jim. Now, of course, by watching Jim so closely they let Little get outside. In this case statistics mean very little.

JOHNSON TRIUMPHS IN LANDSLIDE

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Dems Retain Senate; RFK Tops Keating

By JONATHAN RUSSELL

Robert F. Kennedy rode in on a sea of votes Tuesday night to defeat his Republican opponent, incumbent Sen. Kenneth B. Keating, for the U. S. Senate seat from New York.

The Democratic senator-elect received about 3,158,000 votes to Keating's 2,658,000 as of 2:13 a.m. when just about all of the votes were tallied.

Climaxing a closely contested and bitterly fought campaign, Kennedy received about 54 per cent of the popular vote while Keating carried 43 per cent of the vote. Henry Paolucci, running on the Conservative Party ticket, did not cut deeply into Keating's share of the popular vote. He totaled less than 100,000 votes or three per cent of the total.

In a television appearance at 12:40 a.m., Keating conceded defeat to Kennedy. In a telegram sent to the Democratic victor, Keating said:

"I wish you every success in carrying out your senatorial duties."

In a close senatorial race in Ohio, Republican Robert A. Taft, Jr. apparently defeated the Democratic incumbent, Sen. Stephen M. Young by a plurality of about 97,000 votes at 2:10 a.m. Taft received about 51 per cent of the popular vote.

Taft, a moderate Republican, refused to support the policies advocated by the Republican presidential candidate, Sen. Barry M. Goldwater.

In a key Senate election in the West, George Murphy was shown to be leading in the race against Democratic incumbent Pierre Salinger, former press secretary to the late President John F. Kennedy. Figures taken 1:13 a.m. gave Murphy 2,005,000 votes and Salinger 1,846,000.

In the Pennsylvania Senate race, the vote count at 1:13 a.m. showed Hugh D. Scott, the Republican incumbent, to have 2,024,214 votes to 1,989,822 for Genevieve Blatt, the Democratic challenger.

The vote in these two states at 2:30 a.m. remained close and the CBS Vote Profile Analysis and NBC's Election Vote Analysis refused to grant a potential victory to either of the candidates.

President Conquers All But Six States; Gains Huge Plurality

By JESSE SMITH

President Lyndon B. Johnson scored the biggest popular vote landslide in history last night as he triumphed over Sen. Barry M. Goldwater in all areas of the nation.

The Democratic ticket of Johnson and Minnesota Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey piled up 486 electoral votes, 216 more than needed for victory.

Goldwater and his Republican running mate, Rep. William E. Miller, of Lockport, captured five states of the deep South and Goldwater's home state of Arizona for a total of 52 electoral votes.

THE POPULAR VOTE

Johnson (D)	36,635,598
Goldwater (R)	23,143,619

Johnson won about 62 per cent of the popular vote, breaking President Franklin D. Roosevelt's record of 60.8 per cent in 1936. The Johnson showing measured up to predictions of leading polls.

Even in the South, Johnson led in popular votes and won 98 electoral votes to Goldwater's 47. The Democratic ticket swept the East and the normally Republican Midwest by huge popular majorities.

ELECTORAL COLLEGE

Johnson (D)	486
Goldwater (R)	52

Goldwater went to bed at 10:15 p.m. Arizona time, without conceding victory to Johnson. He is scheduled to make a statement at noon EST.

Johnson and Humphrey each made victory speeches at about 3 a.m. from their home states of Texas and Minnesota.

Shortly after 2 a.m., with 81 per cent of the vote counted, Johnson had nearly 35 million votes to Goldwater's 21.5 million.

Before going to bed, Goldwater said if he loses by a landslide he will retire from politics. Having resigned his Senate seat, Goldwater has no political base for a comeback try.

Analysis of the landslide Johnson vote showed him running ahead of President Kennedy's 1960 race among minority groups. Johnson received almost all of the Negro vote. He also ran well ahead of Kennedy in suburbs and small towns.

History was shattered as Johnson swept New England and Goldwater took Alabama, Mississippi, Georgia, South Carolina and Louisiana.

Democrats Grab 17 Governorships

By AMOS MOSCRIP

If there is any hope for moderate Republicans it will come most likely from George Romney.

Romney won the governorship of Michigan Tuesday in a battle that was at first bitterly close against Democrat Neil Staebler.

Republican Charles H. Percy's defeat for the governorship of Illinois puts even more emphasis on Romney for moderate leadership in the Republican Party.

Percy, considered an up-coming figure among the moderates, lost to Democratic incumbent Otto J. Kerner.

Romney's victory was all the more impressive in a state that voted more than 2-1 for President Lyndon B. Johnson.

Michigan's unprecedented prosperity under Romney was among the factors that finally gave him a comfortable plurality of 55 per cent of the popular vote at 1:30 a.m.

Percy found Johnson's lead in Illinois too much to fight. Percy was leading Kerner in a close race until 9:40 p.m. Tuesday. Percy fell behind after that and never reclaimed his lead.

In gubernatorial races as a whole Democrats kept their strong majority over Republicans.

Out of 11 Democratic incumbents, nine retained hold of their governorships.

As of 2:30 a.m. Wednesday, two of the three Republican incumbents were re-elected, with the race between Montana Gov. Tim M. Babcock and Democrat Roland Renne undecided.

GOVERNOR TOTALS

	Elected	Lead	Total
Democratic	17	2	35
Republican	3	3	15

(Democrats gain one)

The races between Massachusetts candidates, Democrat Francis X. Bellotti and John A. Volpe, and Kansas candidates, Republican William H. Avery and Democrat Harry G. Wiles, were also undecided at this time, although Bellotti had a slight edge.

Democrats had a total of 17 definite governorships out of 25 up for election.

Don't Blame The Cops

The university security police is one of the easiest organizations on the campus to criticize. Much of this criticism is undeserved and misdirected.

For most of the problems concerning the small force are the direct result of the limited number of men and equipment with which the security police have to work. The gripes should be directed over the heads of the police to the administration, which allots the money to operate the security operation.

In the recent series of incidents on the steps leading from the Main Library to Mount Olympus, we have been assured that security police is doing all within its power to both end the "grabbings" and apprehend the attacker.

Just as with any police operation, much of its methodology must remain confidential, for to reveal it would lessen the effectiveness of such measures.

Elsewhere in today's edition a story tells of several methods being taken to eliminate the attacks. Lighting, trimming shrubbery and additional officers will certainly aid in attaining the goal of maintainng peace and tranquility.

If there is any negligence involved, it is the negligence of whoever allots the money to security police which forces the police to remain undermanned and underequipped year after year.

If and when another coed is accosted on the mount steps, perhaps equal blame should be placed on the men who allow the security police to operate understaffed and underequipped, as well as blaming the attacker.

Goof

We goofed. Somewhere in translation we missed the boat. In Tuesday's editorial, we referred to the son of Franklin D. Roosevelt who defended his mother's memory as James.

We stand corrected. The proper son to refer to would have been John. James Roosevelt, a California Republican, has little to do with New York politics.

O Say Can You See

The Day After

By Ken Auletta

This vulgar campaign has seen its end and the American people have clearly registered what they are against; it remains now for them to tell what they are for. They have crowned a king not for love, but from fear.

It was an easy campaign for most of us for we were not tested to find our souls before announcing who we were against. Barry Goldwater was a target whose unconventionalness shook our very conventional souls. America's truly conservative political tradition asserted itself once again, and we who are its pallbearers cast our opinion and votes with the only safe candidate offered us.

We have a king whose education is the best that our political tradition could afford. And who, naturally, graduates leaving his subjects not a little unsure as to what be his convictions.

For instance, our nation's leading business entrepreneurs contracted a full page ad in the "New York Times" announcing that:

"At this crucial time, it is the conservative course to follow a man who is a leader—and who is leading well."

While Americans for Democratic Action announce their love and "enthusiastic" support of the liberal Lyndon Johnson, where sits our leader? Is he a conservative or a liberal? Is he both? Is there a meaningful distinction between the two?

It is this talent to confuse which distinguishes our most successful politicians. For our politics is a game whose outstanding trick is a shifty opportunism that allows its master to await a consensus before announcing his convictions.

This is how our politics works. It is to the man who follows at least as much as he leads that we pay tribute. Our ethics are more a private than a public responsibility. Ours is a politics so inverted that what is ethical is usually impossible, and what is possible is usually unethical. And which of the two is is more ethical?

So we crown a king whose victory is a triumph of necessity. Whose awkard leadership shall be a test of our emotional endurance. Who shall not be loved, trusted, or inspire; but who can, surely, pass his programs.

That last part lingers; for John Kennedy, whose shadow Lyndon Johnson cannot escape, could be loved, trusted, and inspire as Johnson cannot—but he could not lead his Congress as Johnson can. At his death John Kennedy's legislative program was so stuck in the alleys of our legislative process that our political scientists were speaking ominously of the deadlock of the democratic process.

Whereas Johnson, on June 23, sent to Congress 30 legislative proposals, 21 of which were enacted into law by the time Congress adjourned. Today many of our political scientists warn not of deadlock but of the need to conserve the Republican party.

Lyndon Johnson's wish that he be President of all of the people has very nearly been gratified. What remains for him to tell us how this preposterous idea is to be granted. For it is soothing monarchs and not strong Presidents who are beloved by all of the people.

We have in our White House a multiple man: With the optimistic temperament of Harding, the populism of Bryan, the ego of the first Roosevelt, and the cunning of the second. Each pleasing to some segment of our society.

Each of these personalities will spread its arms and gather a consensus of Americans to finally agree to support tomorrow's problems.

History shall probably fondly remember Lyndon Baines Johnson as the President who maneuvered all of the old bills through all of the old committees in all of the old ways.

Our emotions may rebel; our minds may argue ethics. But the sad fact is that our collective political tradition does not leave us many reasons to be thankless.

THE ALL-NIGHTER

LETTERS

Freedom

To the Editor:

The DO did an excellent job in pointing to the basis of many university problems when it talked of "those freedoms which must be granted if the university community is to become democratic." Certain institutions, good in themselves, e.g. our armed forces, have found that democracy is not feasible in their situation. The question is: is the university situation a situation in which democracy can work.

Ideally the university is a community in which seekers after knowledge (students) come into contact with those who are more experienced in that search (faculty). A third group (administration) attempts to create an atmosphere in which these contacts can be carried on most fruitfully. The situation is inherently hierarchic and therefore undemocratic. It is as ridiculous for the students to attempt to create the rules under which the university operates as it is for them to attempt to teach a class. In either case, "democracy" leads only to utter chaos. No amount of talk about "free press", "integration" or any other issue will hide the fact that it not only is but should be the administration who sets up the rules for the university.

Board

The administrators have done it again, they have credited the student body with complete gullibility, naivete and credulity. "Andy's the editor—he does what he wants," as long as his wants are tolerated by the administration. Let us not make the mistake of assuming that "the best interests of the university" are identical to the best interests of the administration because I suspect there is a discernable difference. Life is never so simple as to have us believe that what appears to be always is. Please Mr. Hafer, don't insult us so.

Criticism of the administration is fully justified when it can help to bring about a change in some undesirable situation, of which there are many here on campus. When an individual or group begins to fear truth then something is wrong. This is where freedom begins to get trampled on.

I am eagerly anticipating a clarification of and changes to the Board of Student Publications constitution. However, after the drivel offered us by the administrative members of the board in Wednesday's D.O., I shall not hold my breath.

Judy Collins

The Once and Future Queen

by Marlene Cimons

They've been calling Joan Baez queen of the folk singers for many years and in one sense she may be; a brilliant artist but as remote and distant as her royal title implies.

From the recent crop of new folk artists another girl has been occasionally termed as a successor to Miss Baez; a girl as warm and outgoing as the former is cool and introverted.

She is Judy Collins; and a few of us got the first inkling last Friday afternoon that this transition to warmth may be happening.

I don't know what the four of us expected as we waited for the plane to arrive. Perhaps the stereotype of nonconformity.

Instead of "beat" clothed, mannered and acting, we met a charming, smiling girl, nice enough to be the girl next door, and talented enough to easily cop the folk music crown.

Driving back from the airport, she plied us with questions about the university and the city of Syracuse, and told us about the courses she was taking in New York.

"It must be really great attending a large school," she remarked, "I spent one terrible year at a horrible little college in Illinois and hated it. Now I'm taking political science and Russian at the New School in the city and am so glad to be studying again."

She held up a Russian grammar book, groaned about the homework she had, and recited a few phrases with translations.

"I'm afraid that's the extent of my knowledge right now!" she laughed.

We swung onto campus and proceeded to give her the red carpet tour, at her request. She insisted upon inspecting Newhouse and commented on the beauty of old Crouse.

Meanwhile, she freely chatted with us and told us more about herself, her career and her future plans.

"I've been involved with music since the age of six," she said, "and have been performing professionally for six years.

"My father gave me the most awful guitar made by anyone," she continued, "and lessons to go along with it. I stopped the lessons when my teacher started playing jazz chords!"

"I had been studying concert piano," she remarked, "when all of a sudden there was this great big gap. That's when I became involved with the addicts of folk music in Denver—all of them characters!"

Miss Collins told us that she has performed at Town Hall, Carnegie Hall, the Hollywood Bowl, the Newport Folk Festival, and has made several television appearances.

"I prefer a live concert to a taped performance," she stated, "How can you develop anything in the communication sense with an audience, when there is no audience.

Curious as to her feelings about other forms of music, we asked her opinion of rock and roll.

"I used to be a terrible snob," she smiled, "and thought that anyone who didn't like classical music or folk music was a complete lowbrow.

"Then the Beatles came along. I love them!"

One of our last stops that afternoon was the Corner Store, where Miss Collins purchased guitar strings for the evening's performance. We spent about a half an hour browsing around through the book and record departments. She suddenly grabbed an album and asked one of my friends if he had ever heard it.

"It's an amazing record," she told him, and spoke for a few minutes, praising it.

"Is your player stereo?" she asked him, and he nodded, a little confused.

"This too," she told the clerk, handing him the disc, "in stereo, please."

She gave my friend the record, while he stood, unbelieving.

"It's nice," one of my other companions said softly, "to meet people who are nice."

He was so right.

Peter Maloney In City Revue

Peter Maloney, Syracuse '63, is now performing in "The Populace," a new satirical revue.

Starring Vaughn Meader and Renee Taylor, "The Populace" opened on Nov. 27 at the Cafe Au Go Go, 152 Bleeker St., in Greenwich Village, New York.

Maloney, a magna cum laude graduate of S.U., arrived in New York after his fourth season at the Famous Artists Playhouse in Fayetteville. He began work three days after his arrival in New York as Production Stage Manager for "Mr. Johnson," the first production of the Equity Library Theatre.

Immediately following that limited run, he stagemanaged "Telemachus Clay," which ran for six months as one of the biggest hits of the 1963-64 off-Broadway season.

As a result of his appearance in "Talent '64" at the Booth Theatre on Broadway, Maloney was offered a part in "The Populace."

Syracuse audiences will remember his portrayal of Dr. Moon in "Anything Goes," Daddy in "The American Dream" and Fleetfoot in "Little Mary Sunshine."

SU Leads Lambert Race, Cracks AP, UPI Top 20

Syracuse continued to lead in the Lambert Trophy race as it earned five of eight first place votes for a 9.6 rating. Villanova remained secure in the No. 2 spot in the East by virtue of its 31-13 victory over Xavier.

Other top teams in the East were Penn State, Princeton, Boston College, Army, Pitt, Yale, Navy and Rutgers.

There was other good news from the pollsters as the Orangemen crashed back into the nation's top 20 placing 14 with UPI and honorable mention with the AP judges.

A big noise was heard across the land from South Bend, Ind. as the Fighting Irish of Notre Dame took over first position on both polls after their 40-0 emaciation of Navy last Saturday.

Ohio State slid to second after its 21-19 squeaker, followed by Alabama, Arkansas and Nebraska. AP gave the nod to Texas (6-1) for sixth place, followed by Georgia Tech (7-0). UPI, however, saw the situation in reverse with Georgia Tech in no. 6.

The AP first 10 was rounded out by LSU, Florida and Purdue, while UPI saw it as Michigan, LSU and Florida and Purdue tied for 10th.

The Piety was surrounded on the UPI ratings by Oregon State and Oregon in front, and with Duke, Florida State and Michigan (tied), Princeton, Villanova and Georgia to the rear of Syracuse.

On the other hand, the AP polls placed the second ten as Duke, Florida State, Michigan, Michigan State, Oregon, Oregon State, Syracuse, Tulsa and Washington.

By BILL CRONAUER

"Syracuse has a very great team. . .we feel the best in the East," said M. Lewis Hall, Jr., chairman of the Orange Bowl committee, by phone from Miami, Fla., Monday night.

Following are his answers to questions concerning Syracuse as a possible Orange Bowl participant.

* * * *

Q—What is Syracuse's Orange Bowl status at present?

A—Syracuse is back on our list after coming through handsomely last weekend. I frankly think the committee made a mistake in taking SU off in the first place.

Q—What other schools are mentioned on the Orange Bowl list?

A—Along with Syracuse we're considering Notre Dame, Nebraska, Georgia Tech, Florida, Florida State, Alabama, LSU, Texas and Arkansas. And we're considering them all equally — they're all fine teams.

Q—What games are your representatives scouting?

A—We try to cover three games each week. Last Saturday our reps watched Notre Dame-Navy, Georgia Tech-Duke and Florida-Auburn. We haven't decided yet who we'll scout this week. It's entirely possible we'll send a person to view Syracuse-Army.

Q—What does the Orange Bowl committee think of Syracuse?

A—Syracuse is a consistently fine team. We think very highly of coach Ben Schwartzwalder and his entire staff. As you know, Syracuse has been to the Orange Bowl a couple of times in recent years. We've enjoyed our association with Syracuse very much.

Q—When will the Orange Bowl teams be selected?

A—We probably won't choose any schools before Nov. 21. (Note: The Orangemen's last game is Nov. 21 at West Virginia).

Q—Will geographic area affect selection of schools?

A—Of course we'd like to match two of the top teams in the country. Probably it'll be a northern or eastern school versus a member of the Southeastern or Southwestern Conference.

Syracuse has also been included on the preliminary list released yesterday by the Sun Bowl. Other teams on the list include six unbeatens — Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia Tech, LSU, Nebraska and Notre Dame. Twenty-three clubs are included on the preliminary selection.

Syracuse Rifle Squad Splits Opening Matches

The Syracuse varsity rifle team split its first two matches of the season by defeating St. Lawrence University Friday 1230-1186, then losing to Clarkson College 1282-1224 on Saturday.

Bill Gold of Syracuse and Andrews of St. Lawrence were high scorers in the initial match. Gold shot a 268 while Andrews fired a 266.

The top five scores from each team of 10 count toward the total points in the contest. Membrs of the Syracuse team who figured in the 1230 total were Don Hadyk, 256; Joe Weiler, 238; Walt Sall, 235; Tony Jeric, 233.

Syracuse scored higher in the prone position and St. Lawrence gained more points in the standing position. Each shooter fires from the prone, offhand and standing positions and can score a total of 100 points in each.

Gold was top man again for Syracuse against Clarkson on Saturday, this time shooting a 256.

Clarkson was led by three men who all tied with a score of 265. Syracuse lost almost half its points in the prone and the rest in the offhand position.

Other scorers for the Orange were Jeric, 250; Hadyk, 243; Tom Rohr, 238; and Sall, 237.

Two new rules made in the New York State Intercollegiate Rifle League were used in the match. Fifteen minutes are now allowed for each position instead of 10 and trigger pulls are allowed to be one pound instead of three pounds.

The rifle team will have its next match Nov. 20, on the road, against Alfred.

The fall firing schedule:

Nov. 20—at Alfred.
Nov. 21—at St. Bonaventure.
Dec. 4—at St. Lawrence.
Dec. 5—at Clarkson.
Dec. 11—at Alfred.
Dec. 12—at Cornell.

Little Snares East Honors For 3rd Time

Syracuse's Floyd Little and Villanova's Al Atkinson, two reasons why their teams are 1-2 in the East, have been named to this week's major college All-East football team.

Little, a halfback, and Atkinson, a tackle, were both selected for the third time this season.

Syracuse's sophmore halfback was named to the team for piling up 153 yards total offense and scoring a touchdown in Syracuse's 21-6 win over Pittsburgh.

On the season Little has now picked up more than 1000 yards in all departments. He has gained 519 yards rushing, 210 on pass receptions, 229 on punt returns and 72 on kickoff returns.

Atkinson gained a tackle spot for his outstanding blocking in Villanova's sixth straight victory, a 31-13 battering of Xavier.

Joining Little in the All-East backfield are quarterback Jack Lentz of Holy Cross; halfback Wally Grant of Harvard; and fullback Cosmo Iacavazzi of Princeton.

Sophomore of the week is Dan Sella of Buffalo, a halfback who intercepted three Delaware passes and made three long punt returns.

City Problems Discussed

By EDWARD KARLIN

What can be done to the metropolis? What should be done? How can it be made into a better place to live?

These questions, brought forth in a Citizenship 1A lecture Tuesday by Donald Meiklejohn director of the Citizenship Program, form the second topic of the course, "The Modern City."

Meiklejohn said people have always disliked the cities. He pointed out they believe "the metropolis is an accident, sometimes a hideous accident."

Corruption, lack of independence, degradation of man, unimportance of human life, slums, and routine were listed as evils of the city by Meiklejohn. He said New York City would be the prime example.

Turning to the pamphlet "The Case of the Blighted City" by Edward C. Banfield, Meiklejohn listed four groups that are involved in the reformation of a city.

The first group includes economists who have certain ideas about why New York City is the hub of the East. They believe it is the chief port of exchange and the most important industrial and financial center of the world.

The pamphlet calls the second group, which includes the city planner, all "dreamers, who often do not act for the majority, Meiklejohn noted.

The city politicians who compose the third group was given rough treatment by Banfield, Meiklejohn said. It depicted him as a man willing to talk about improvement, but always keeping an eye out for political advancement.

The last group consists of sociologists. Meiklejohn pointed to Jane Addams as an example. She believed the most important function of a city was to enable people of different cultures to form social relationships, Meiklejohn added.

Summer Positions in Europe Set for American Students

Every student in America can get a summer job in Europe and a travel grant by applying directly to the European headquarters of the American Student Information Service in Luxembourg.

Jobs are similar to student summer work in the U.S. with work periods from three weeks and up.

Lifeguarding, office work, resort-hotel jobs, and farm work are only a few categories to be found among the 10,000 jobs ASIS has on file.

Wages can be as high as $400 a month, and in most cases neither previous experience nor knowledge of a foreign language is required.

ASIS, in its seventh year of operation, will place more American students in summer jobs in Europe this summer than ever before.

Students interested in work may write directly to Dept. H, ASIS, 22 Ave. de la Liberte, Luxembourg City, Grand Duchy of Luxembourg, enclosing $2 for the ASIS 36-page boooklet which contains all jobs, wages and working conditions.

Foresters Receive Grants

Seven forestry studeots have received educational grants from the State University College of Forestry's Alumni Assn.

Association president, Samuel Perry of Syracuse, and Dr. Hardy L. Shirley, dean of the college of forestry, announced the awards.

Totalling $2,800, the grants vary from $200-$500 each, Perry said. They come from a fund established by the association last year.

The awards went to three sophomores, two juniors and two seniors.

Mount Gets Extra Police

The university security police have taken several steps in an attempt to end the series of "grabbings" of coeds on the Mount Olympus steps, it was revealed Tuesday by Leo J. Graszler, assistant director of security and safety.

Graszler said that permission has been given by Francis A. Wingate, university vice president and treasurer, to trim the shrubbery lining the mount steps.

Authorization has been given for hiring additional policemen to patrol the area, Graszler added. Additional lighting for the mount steps area will also be provided.

One Panther 'Roams' Hill

One large black panther wih a four-leaf clover in its paw is at large on the campus.

The cat sat in front of Hinds Hall of Engineering for the last two weeks, advertising the Engineer's Ball to be held Friday, Nov. 13. Then this Halloween weekend, the cat disappeared.

The 3 by 12 foot sign, worth $30 was designed by Lima Sans, senior advertising art major, with the assistance of Theta Tau, national professional engineering fraternity, which is sponsoring the dance.

Anone who has information which would lead to the whereabouts and successful capture of the cat will be given a free ticket to the dance, according to Allan Kopp, chairman of the ball.

"Anyone who doesn't find the panther is welcome to buy a ticket at Hinds Hall," said Kopp. "The dance is an all-campus event, not just for engineering students."

GOP Defeat Extends To Congress, States

By DANIEL RITEY
Associate Editor

The tumult and the shouting are over; the votes are in, and the conservative-run Republican party has gone down to one of the most smashing political defeats on record.

And their beating ends not at 1600 Pennsylvania Ave. It continues on Capitol Hill (the House and Senate) and in many State executive mansions. Everywhere the Democrats and Liberals are triumphant.

Maybe you could tell it from the huge Connecticut landslide which gave that state to Lyndon B. Johnson by about 65 per cent.

Maybe you could tell it from the lopsided count of votes for LBJ in Republican-oriented Eastern Kentucky.

Maybe it was the unanimous Eastern sweep for the President which yielded him a perfect score of 142 electoral votes.

At any rate it is evident that the American people have rejected the stand of Sen. Barry M. Goldwater by better than a 60-40 per cent margin.

Also rejected was the notion of a 'backlash' effect upon the election. It simply did not appear in the industrial North or East. Only in the South, where it was expected, did this phenomenon show itself.

Only in the once-Democratic South did Goldwater manage to avert a complete electoral shut-out. Here he won in Louisiana, Georgia, Mississippi, Alabama and South Carolina. Also, he captured his home state of Arizona.

Racially, religiously and economically, Goldwater's loss was complete. Negroes, Italians and Spanish - Americans turned thumbs down on the Arizona senator as did a high number of Catholics (only one per cent fewer Catholic voted for LBJ than for JFK) and Protestants. Oddly enough, many in the higher economic classes, who are traditionally Republican deserted Goldwater and backed LBJ.

In a word, Goldwater's impact on minority groups was poor.

The Johnson-Democrat-Liberal sweep ran rampant everywhere. The traditionally GOP Midwest went solidly for LBJ. So did the Far West, the North and the Southwest, too.

And from these staggering figures, the startling significance of this election is made clear: Democrats will have a commanding majority in the state houses and in the legislative bodies of the United States. The U.S. borders upon one-party dominance.

LYNDON B. JOHNSON

The U.S. Senate apparently will be run by a Northern Democratic-Liberal coalition. It now appears that the once-mighty Southern Democratic - Republican bloc has been broken beyond repair.

From a base of 40 senators, the Democrats have added at least another 20 — mostly from the industrial North and East, and the expanding West.

The Democratic state leadership has extended itself to almost three-fourths of the state houses. The magnitude of the LBJ sweep probably will make itself seen in a more workable 89th Congress through more approved presidential legislation and acts.

And what of the GOP? Apparently, it will remain in the grip of Dean Burch (GOP national chairman) and his conservatives until at least 1968. Many of its moderates have been defeated — Kenneth B. Keating and Charles Percy, lead a parade of Who's Who in the GOP who will now be retired from public life. Michigan's Gov. George Romney appears to be one of the few survivors of the Goldwater debacle.

Some Democrats rode Johnson's coattails to victory — a relatively smooth ride in this election. Certainly, Kennedy in New York and Otto Kerner in Illinois, can thank their political stars for an anti-Goldwater vote and the resulting LBJ sweep.

VPI President Assails SS Charges

A Reply to Syracuse

The following is the text of a letter sent by Dr. T. Marshall Hahn, Jr., president of Virginia Polytechnic Institute; to Robert (Robby) Stern speaker of the SU Student Senate and Kathleen Kapsol, special assistant to the speaker. Copies were sent to various people at VPI and to Hill Chancellor William P. Tolley, Student Government President Carl Corrallo and Daily Orange Editor-in-Chief Andrew Porte.

"I am writing in response to your letter of Oct. 28 concerning admission policies at this university. It was not possible to reply earlier since prior to receiving your letter today I had only seen newspaper accounts of the action by the Student Senate of Syracuse University.

"May I express regret that before making public pronouncement on the admissions and student life policies of this institution you did not first make an accurate determination of these policies. Such a determination would have revealed that Virginia Polytechnic Institute, first desegregated in 1952, admits stu-

Hahn Claims School Doesn't Discriminate In Admission Process

By JESSE SMITH

Virginia Polytechnic Institute's president has countered Student Senate's changes of discrimination in a letter in which he asserts VPI is fully desegrated and does not practice racial discrimination in admissions.

The Senate letter, approved and sent last Wednesday, was based on a report by the Southern Education Reporting Service. SERS figures showed three Negroes enrolled in 1960 and only one in 1963.

The Senate-VPI exchange is the latest in a series of letters between the two schools on the question of racial policies at VPI. Syracuse plays VPI in a football game Nov. 14.

Carl Corrallo, president of Student Government, wrote to Frank Nolen, president of VPI's student body, early in September asking about segregation at VPI.

Nolen wrote back Sept. 25 saying:

"There are a number of Negro students enrolled here at the present time as well as students of other races from all over the world.

"At the present time, there are no Negroes on our football team, but all our sports are open to all the students and team members are picked according to their ability to play a particular sport," the letter continued.

Hahn also replied to Corrallo's inquiry in a letter dated Sept. 28. He made statements similar to Nolen's, adding:

"Admission to VPI is without regard to race or color, and is based entirely on academic ability and preparation as demonstrated by College Board scores and high school rank.

"It is unfortunately true that the number of Negro students applying here has not been large because of the inadequacy of many of the high schools in Virginia, but in fact VPI has been working with the teachers in numbers of the predominantly Negro high schools to improve the quality of instructional programs."

Corrallo showed the Nolan letter to Senate Speaker Robert (Robby) Stern. Stern said he ac-

AWS Fights Senate In Student Court Case

By SUSAN STRANDBERG

The case of the Association of Women Students vs. Student Senate will be heard in Student Court at 7 p.m., today in 306 White Hall.

AWS represented by President Diane Kessler, is contesting the recent Student Senate decision to reject its revised constitution. Student Senate voted against the constitution Oct. 28 becuase 1.) the nomination procedures were not included in the constitution, and 2.) the nomination procedures in the by-laws were "undemocratic."

Student Court justices will meet at 7 p.m., today in 306 White Hall. All briefs for the case must be submitted at this time. Students involved in the case and those interested in attending should be present at 8 p.m., according to Frank Richmond, chief justice.

Last Friday Miss Kessler filed a formal appeal to Student Court contesting this decission and was granted a hearing. AWS challanges the right of Student Government to review the by-laws of any organization and to refuse a constitution that does not include nomination procedures.

The issues are:

Does the Student Senate have the power to reject the constitutions and by-laws of organizations?

Assuming SS has the power, must constitutions include nomination procedures?

Can SS review by-laws and name procedures "undemocratic" which the whole organization (all coeds on campus) has accepted by referendum?

"Basically, we will contend that Student Senate has the jurisdiction to review the constitutions and by-laws of student organizations," said Kathleen Kapsol Wednesday who will represent SS.

"Our defense will be based on precedent and implied constitutional powers. We have no specific case in point to use," said Miss Kapsol.

There is a provision in the Student Government Constitution which states that SS has the power to oversee student activities, according to Robert (Robby) Stern, SS speaker.

Whether or not the power to review constitutions is implied or necessary under this provision raised a constitutional question.

"One way to interpret a provision in a constitution is to look at the preamble," said Michael O. Sawyer, assoates professor of political science and citizenship in the Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs.

The preamble of the SG constitution defines as one purpose of student government to exer-

DO PAUSES FOR MIDTERMS

Leaves fall off trees, the football season nears its completion, and it's once again time for midterm exams. With the advent of midterms, it'll be time for the Daily Orange staff to take a break to put in some long-overdue studying.

Hence, with Friday's edition, the Daily Orange will cease publication for one week, returning to campus Friday, Nov. 13. That's good luck for crossword puzzle fans.

On Campus Parking

Need to Replace Seniority

By PAT TRACEY
Junior Editor

Need rather than seniority will be a guiding factor in the distribution of on-campus parking stickers from now on, the university parking committee decided Tuesday.

This change will necessitate a re-definition of the priority schedule, said James V. LaTorre, assistant to the vice president for administration and research.

Such a revision should ease traffic congestion somewhat on the main campus.

Other ideas suggested by the committee to eliminate the parking problem included the possible use of a shuttle bus system to the Manley Field House lot.

Because this system will have to be self-liquidating, two proposed methods of charging are under consideration.

The first is to charge a fee for the bus service and none for the parking space. The second is to charge for the parking and not the bus. The first solution was considered the better idea since extra revenue might be obtained by transients using the bus system.

Other proposals for putting the shuttle bus system into operation include a three to 10 minute frequency of pick-up and a possible route start-

Late returns in many key elections ended the celebrations of several predicted congressional and gubernatorial winners Wednesday.

Among the winners in late returns was aging Democratic Sen. Stephen M. Young, who won another term by defeating Robert A. Taft Jr. in Ohio. Sen. Young did not pull into the lead until late Wednesday morning.

Also an apparent winner was Pennsylvania Republican Sen. Hugh D. Scott, who narrowly edged Genevieve Blatt in a contest expected to be recounted.

George Murphy, former song-and-dance man, won the California senate seat of Democrat Pierre Salinger in another close contest. Salinger had been the pre-election choice.

John A. Volpe won two more years in the Massachusetts governor's chair after a two-year respite by edging Francis X. Bellotti in the late returns. The Republican Volpe had been an underdog in the heavily Johnson state.

Other winners in late returns were Paul Fannin, who won the Arizona Senate seat by defeating Democrat Roy Elson; William H. Avery, Republican, for Kansas governor over Harry G. Wiles; incumbent Republican Gov. Tim Babcock in Montana

NICKI ZARO

Hill students in general were not surprised by the outcome of the presidential election. The results of the Robert F. Kennedy-Kenneth B. Keating senatorial race. however, generated mixed feelings.

A majority of the persons polled Wednesday by the Daily Orange, even the staunch supporters of Sen. Barry M. Goldwater, thought beforehand that President Lyndon B. Johnson would win the election. Many expected a better showing from Goldwater.

Students said they expected the New York State senatorial race to be much closer than it was, although in the closing days of the campaign they said they felt Kennedy gained a slight edge.

Kennedy's victory was due to his deceased brother, many said. His alleged carpetbagging was not mentioned as of much importance here; judgement was made on the basis of his qualifications.

A few students expressed sympathy for Keating, saying he also was highly qualified for the job.

The Democratic landslide was generally attributed to the lack of unity in the Republican Party. Disappointed with the "dirty, muck-raking campaign" was expressed by several students.

Goldwater fans said they felt newspaper distortion and the fact that the people didn't get a chance to know the "real" Goldwater were detrimental to his election results

Most of those persons questioned said they felt that Goldwater's political carrer is finished. One Goldwater supporter expressed hope that he would try again, and this time suc-

The Once And Future

The tidal wave of votes that swept Lyndon Johnson into office Tuesday has left much of the Republican fleet battered at sea.

In sinking the flagship of Barry Goldwater, the wave of destruction also swamped the efforts of Charles Percy, Kenneth Keating, Robert Taft Jr. and other ships of Goldwater's navy, including those fighting on different fronts than the Arizona admiral.

What the nearly-depleted Republican arsenal was left with were George Romney, ham actor George Murphy and Hugh Scott, whose future is still uncertain.

To those who call themselves Democrats and fully agree with the principles and programs of Lyndon Johnson as exemplified and proposed, the mandate given the President should be a sign of four very happy years ahead.

But to those who also call themselves Democrats and who also believe there must be a potent voice of opposition to present the other side of the issues, there is cause to worry.

If absolute power does truly corrupt absolutely, then there is surely reason for concern, for Lyndon Johnson has been given a two-thirds majority in both houses, as well as a smashing popular vote victory, to carry out his programs.

We endorsed Johnson and continue to feel that he is far the better of the two men who vied for the office, but we cannot see how the times demanded such a feeling of confidence, if the figures are to be taken at face value.

Perhaps there is some significance in that while record numbers turned out at the polls, the vote in the presidential contest may well be less than in 1960, indicating a sizeable portion of the voters who either did not care or who opposed both candidates.

This distaste for both, if it existed, did not stretch to the lesser offices, for the Democrats' smashing success cannot be denied.

What the Republican Party must realize is that its fleet is only as strong as its admiral, and a weak admiral sinks more ships in his own fleet than in that of the enemy.

The Letters

By Anne L. Gregory

It is 1984. You get a letter in the mail. It looks like an ordinary letter, it has "Syracuse University" in the upper left hand corner—an ominous feeling goes through you. You say to yourself, "Is Jack OK? Is he ill? His marks down?" Anxiously you tear the letter open. "Your son, John Doe," it begins, "has been suspended from this university"...The letter goes on to say there was a morals charge against your son, a "situation" involving a girl and several other boys...there had been drinking and sexual promiscuity - - your mind feels frozen.

Suddenly all you've ever tried to teach your kids, all the hopes and dreams you've had, the pride, the faith - -the words blur before your eyes and now you know the taste of futility. "Where," you say, "did I fail?"

But its not really 1984, you say. It's 1964. This doesn't apply to me. I'm young, full of life, I want to experience everything, I want to have my own ideals, my own code of behavior, all the really intelligent, mature kids I know believe this; they believe in themselves, they say. . . .

But 1984 came so swiftly. Where did the years go? You sit down. You write to your son. Maybe you should have had more talks with him, been less busy, less irritable. How can you say it?

"Dear Jack:

"Today I received a letter from Syracuse University. I know you know what it's all about. There seems to be very little to say. Perhaps I never said enough, or may I didn't set a good example for you - - parents can be weak, too.

"One thing, though, that the years teach, that I apparently didn't teach you, and now it's too late. If only I could have gotten this through to you. So simple, yet it seems to encompass all. Let me say it . .

"During the entire lifetime of everyone on earth, we learn (and sometimes it takes longer for some than for others) that we are never responsible only unto ourselves alone. Even the primitive tribes in the so-called "carefree" parts of the world have their own rigid codes of behavior.

"And so here in America we want to 'try our wings.' These codes give a kind of order to our lives. We may fight them in childish rebellion; like all young things, we want to "try our wings." But the code is there for all to see. Its existence can't be argued away.

"Apart from religion, ethics, and all the rules you feel that you have had drummed into you all your life, there is the one ultimate code of all. It may seem hackneyed and oversentimental to say it; I hesitate writing it down.

"If I were to write to you that a tree is beautiful, you would think, how trite, how corny—"I think that I may never see, a poem lovely as a tree." But a tree is beautiful and that fact can't be denied, can it?

"You may be 18, 25, 35, or 85, but some things never change in your life. That one thing is responsibility to others. You have hurt your parents, your school name, your classmates, all those who had faith in you, and most of all, yourself. This is not a condemnation of you, son. All mothers forgive, if they love their children.

"But I am only one person, and there are others involved—others who have been affected by your actions. What about them? For your freedom of behavior you have paid a bitter price. This situation, the one in which you were involved, obtained nationwide news coverage.

"Whether it should have or not is beside the point. The point is that everything we do, whether we learn it late or early, affects the lives of others. We are never really 'free,' as long as we live in a world with others. I'm sure none of us can picture living happily in complete isolation.

"There is a kind of freedom, however, that we all have. This freedom is the freedom to be able to choose, responsibly, the right thing to do or say. There can be a greater freedom, for instance, in saying 'no' than in saying 'yes.' For in saying 'no' we become masters of ourselves. We have made our own responsible decision.

"That decision, the decision of whether to say yes or no, is largely determined by deciding beforehand if that action will hurt others, and even ourselves. Whether we hurt ourselves through public disgrace or even through bouts with our own consciences, the hurt is there. We can't escape ourselves. Life has a peculiar way of boomeranging on us, and the freedom that we thought so exhilerating today has the bitter dregs of the cup of Judas, tomorrow.

"I'm telling you all this too late, son, too late...But maybe the rest of the kids will listen, even if just one reads this..."

Columns

To the Editor:

Nobody asked us, but...

It's about time that the Daily Orange editorial page had a column that aroused the delight and interest of the majority of its readers.

We have been subjected for too long to nothing more than a constant repartee of trivia among a handful of DO columnists. Jay Litwin's column and Rich Turner's column, at times, provide the average undergraduate with reading that is both lively and entertaining.

There is no rule that a column must present a point. Some of the most widely read columns in America are written for the entertainment and enjoyment of the reader.

It is about time for the editoral aristocracy to write for the reader rather than at him.

Paper

To the Editor:

In two years on "the Hill" I have heard many things concerning the Daily Orange most of which I agree with. According to the Fog Index (p. 98, Interpretative Reporting) the DO's lead article on Thursday, Oct. 22 gives a reading of 10.2 or just above the reading ability of a high school sophomore.

Since most of your readers are, hopefully, above this intelligence, I suggest that your reporters upgrade their standards to at least high school senior or possibly a college freshman.

People have said that the DO is one of the freest publications ever produced on any college campus. With this I am in total agreement.

People have also said that the DO is the worst college newspaper ever produced also. Unfortunately, I also agree with this.

I have been puzzled why a college newspaper is so downgraded and I believe I have come up with the answer.

TV Creeps Forward

by Carol Jantz

It sits there so peacefully, the little box in the corner... its gray screen vacant and stilled. Yet this contraption has spawned large corporations which do battle for supremacy, has stirred up sociologists and psychologists, and has invaded almost every home in the country.

Television is a man-made miracle. But it is also a magnet for criticism as traces of the old "wasteland" belittlement linger on. Stations all struggling to corral a majority of the viewing audience schedule programs that curb intellectual tastes. "The Munsters" and "Gomer Pyle" are two examples.

The average viewer is in a rut and doesn't seem to care. According to Broadcasting magazine, networks make their bids for audiences before their habits are formed each new season. For the week of October 15-21, shows listed among the ten most popular include "Bonanza," "Peyton Place," and "Lucy Show." Each of these shows revolves about a basically well used plot which people spend their time looking at week after dreary week.

Which brings us to another point. We've all been through the corridors of at least twenty hospitals; we've also learned the "Principles of Law" thanks to Perry Mason and hundreds like him. Once a network hits upon a winning combination, it uses it until the subject has become thoroughly exhausted. From westerns to courtrooms to hospitals...the cycle usually lasts for an average of three years before the lemmings have jumped into the sea. It's a pity that with so much creative talent and equipment television is mostly concerned with crazes and ratings.

But television isn't a complete failure. A healthy sign is the research by the National Association of Broadcasters into such topics as commercials which irritate viewers; the public impact of television and radio; and how the public uses radio and television.

There are some impressive shows...it's just that one must hunt to find them. "Hallmark Hall of Fame" and "Meet the Press" are both quality programs.

The industry also is expanding the area of educational TV; making color TV more available to consumers, and increasing cable TV in rural communities. All television sets are now required by FCC law to receive UHF. Ultra high frequency makes 70 new channels available for imaginative broadcasting.

Telstar and Syncom—two new names—two new satellites used to relay impulses around the world. Last year "Town Meeting of the World" linked men in Rome, London, and the U.S. with an international audience. More programs in this series are being planned for this year.

Small closed-circuit telehospitals, industry, and schoolrooms. Within a few years people using telephones will be able to see who they are speaking to on miniature TV screens.

The latest development comes with the testing of large color projectors that present closed-circuit color television productions to big audiences.

All this indicates a desire for self-improvement within the broadcasting industry . . . and this means progress.

Enrollment in the nation's college and universities this year may approach five million students, up one-half million from last, according to University of Cincinnati registrar Garland G. Parker. Parker based his prediction on reports from approximately 600 institutions asked to indicate increases, no change, or decreases in enrollment.

Drama Group To Present 'The Firebugs' At Regent

SU drama students are getting into the arsonist and old lace mood with their latest production, "The Firebugs" which will be presented at 8:30 p.m. Nov. 12, 13, 14, and 15 at the Regent Theatre.

Written by Max Frish, the play will star Richard Nathan as Beiderman, Donna Nunn as his wife, Babette, Sam Winters as Willi Eisenring, and Frank Morell as Sepp Schmitz.

David Hamilton, instructor in the drama department, will direct the play and sets will be designed by Richard Miller.

Tickets for "The Firebugs" are on sale at the traveling box office which will be at the Hall of Languages lounge today and at Slocum Hall opposite the Commons, on Friday.

The number of student suicides has risen alarmingly in the United States during the past few years, according to a report in the November issue of the NEA Journal, official magazine of the National Education Association.

"The development of management is essential to our goal of great growth"

At the 1964 stockholders' meeting, Arjay Miller, President of Ford Motor Company, emphasized the Company's far-sighted recruitment program and its accent on developing management talent:

"One aspect of our planning is crucial to the success of everything else we do. It engages the best thoughts and efforts of our whole management team, from top to bottom, throughout the world. I am speaking of the development of management. The immediate future of our Company depends heavily upon the abilities of the people who are now key members of our management team.

"In the longer run, our future depends on what we are doing at the present time to attract and develop the people who will be making the major decisions 10 to 20 years from now. We are developing management competence in depth in order to attack the problems that will confront a company of great growth—and great growth (both in profits and sales) is exactly the goal we have established for Ford Motor Company.

"We are continuing to emphasize recruiting. Last spring, 180 of our management people devoted part of their time to recruiting outstanding graduates from colleges and universities throughout the U.S. Last year, these efforts resulted in our hiring over 1,000 graduates, 220 more than the year before.

"We are seeking and we are finding young men—and young women, too—with brains and backbone—people who have the ability and the desire to make room for themselves at the top. We give our trainees challenging assignments with as much responsibility as they can carry. We promote them as fast as they are ready. Those who are interested in easy security soon drop out. Those who have what we want stay with us, and move up quickly to increased responsibility and the pay that goes with it. Thanks to the quality of the people we are recruiting and developing, I am firmly convinced that our outlook is most promising."

SUCE to Consider VPI Today

The Syracuse University Committee on Equality will hold a meeting open to all students at 6:45 p.m. today in 301 Hall of Languages.

Among the issues to be brought up at the meeting will be the possibility of a SUCE sponsored student boycott of the Syracuse football game Saturday, Nov. 14, according to president Robert Lubetski. The Board of Student Publications constitution will also be discussed.

Future symposiums, including panel discussions and guest lecturers will be planned at the meeting. Invitations have been extended to several outstanding writers in such areas as urban renewal and poverty problems.

Letters have gone out to Paul Goodman, author of "Metropolis," Michael Harrington, author of "The Other America," and to New York Times columnist James Reston.

"We hope to sponsor panel discussions with students, faculty and administration on topics related to the campus and to the outside lecturers' talks," Lubetski stated.

cepted Nolen's word until shown a report by the Southern Education Reporting Service, which convinced him that VPI is segregated.

It was Stern's special assistant, Kathleen Kapsol who drafted the Senate letter to Hahn.

Southern Education Reporting Service describes itself as "an impartial, fact finding agency directed by a board of southern newspaper editors and educators under grant from the Ford Foundation."

In its report for the 1960-61 school year, SERS figures show 5,250 white students at VPI and three Negroes.

In a letter to Richard Trilling of Syracuse University Committee on Equality, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People cited a 1963-64 SERS report showing 5,987 white students and one Negro.

The NAACP letter said, "It's quite obvious, then, that the extent of desegregation at Virginia Polytechnic Institute is a little less than token."

dents to all academic programs without regard to race, creed or color. All activities and facilities at VPI are fully desegregated. I so advised Carl J. Corrallo, president of the Student Government at Syracuse University, in my letter of Sept. 28.

"As the land-grant university of Virginia and a prime contractor with the federal government, we must have no discrimination in any area, including employment. Reviews by federal agencies have revealed no informal or formal segregation practices of any type.

"We are looking forward to the football game on Nov. 14 between our two universities."

AWS Challanges

cise authority over student organizations.

"We understand the right of SS to review constitutions," said Joan Moore, AWS vice president. "What we want clarified is their right to review by-laws."

AWS is going to base its defense on various laws passed by Joint Student Legislature in 1956 and 1957, concerning the registration of organizations.

In the old AWS constitution the nomination procedures were included. When the constitution was revised last spring under the direction of Miss Moore, Jean Abbott and Jill Moss, the nominations were removed from the constitution and put in the by-laws.

"Our goal in revising the constitution was to make it simpler and easier for everyone to understand," said Miss Moore. "We tried to eliminate details that might be subject to change such as the duties of officers and the functions of executive programs. The old constitution had no by-laws."

If SS loses the case, there will probably be moves to specifically define the senate's power in "overseeing student organizations," according to Miss Kapsol.

The court meeting will be open to all interested students until the seats are filled.

These are big stripes. Bold stripes. The kind you'll never get lost with in a crowd. This is Arrow Cum Laude: a bold new breed of sport shirt that asserts itself, but always in good taste. Has long swooping collar points and a tapered body line to match. Made to your exact sleeve length, like a dress shirt. In red and gray, or red and black combinations. Pure, soft, "Sanforized" labeled cotton. All for a timid price of $5.00. A bold new breed of shirt for a bold new breed of guy. ARROW cepted Nolen's word until shown a report by the Southern Education Reporting Service, which convinced him that VPI is segregated.

It was Stern's special assistant, Kathleen Kapsol who drafted the Senate letter to Hahn.

Southern Education Reporting Service describes itself as "an impartial, fact finding agency directed by a board of southern newspaper editors and educators under grant from the Ford Foundation."

In its report for the 1960-61 school year, SERS figures show 5,250 white students at VPI and three Negroes.

In a letter to Richard Trilling of Syracuse University Committee on Equality, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People cited a 1963-64 SERS report showing 5,987 white students and one Negro.

The NAACP letter said, "It's quite obvious, then, that the extent of desegregation at Virginia Polytechnic Institute is a little less than token."

dents to all academic programs without regard to race, creed or color. All activities and facilities at VPI are fully desegregated. I so advised Carl J. Corrallo, president of the Student Government at Syracuse University, in my letter of Sept. 28.

"As the land-grant university of Virginia and a prime contractor with the federal government, we must have no discrimination in any area, including employment. Reviews by federal agencies have revealed no informal or formal segregation practices of any type.

"We are looking forward to the football game on Nov. 14 between our two universities."

cise authority over student organizations.

"We understand the right of SS to review constitutions," said Joan Moore, AWS vice president. "What we want clarified is their right to review by-laws."

AWS is going to base its defense on various laws passed by Joint Student Legislature in 1956 and 1957, concerning the registration of organizations.

In the old AWS constitution the nomination procedures were included. When the constitution was revised last spring under the direction of Miss Moore, Jean Abbott and Jill Moss, the nominations were removed from the constitution and put in the by-laws.

"Our goal in revising the constitution was to make it simpler and easier for everyone to understand," said Miss Moore. "We tried to eliminate details that might be subject to change such as the duties of officers and the functions of executive programs. The old constitution had no by-laws."

If SS loses the case, there will probably be moves to specifically define the senate's power in "overseeing student organizations," according to Miss Kapsol.

The court meeting will be open to all interested students until the seats are filled.

Political Buttons Added to Display

Buttons from the Johnson-Goldwater campaign have been added to a Syracuse University collection dating from the time of George Washington.

The buttons and other memorabilia of the 1964 Presidential campaign went into the Carl E. and Amelia Morgan Dorr Collection, on display this month in the lobby of the Main Library.

It will go on display today.

The collection was a gift to the university of Mr. and Mrs. Carl E. Dorr, both members of the class of 1900 and residents of Fayetteville. It was augmented by the purchase of the Monroe Ray collection and gifts of individual doners, including Syracuse University Chancellor William P. Tolley who gave, among other items, a rare Lincoln inauguration ribbon. Other donors were William Higginbotham of Syracuse and John Mayfield, curator of manuscripts of the library.

Some of the earlier buttons had moving parts. In the 1896 McKinley-Bryan campaign a lapel pin in the shape of an insect called "the Gold Bug" was used. When its tail was pressed, the wings popped out revealing pictures of McKinley and his running mate, Garret A. Hobart.

The entire staff of the student newspaper of the University of Western Ontario quit last week after the editor of the paper refused to publish a story satirizing fraternity life.

A Book of Hours

By John S. Mayfield

John S. Mayfield is curator of manuscripts and rare books in the Syracuse University main library. The following is the second of a series of articles describing the function and main features of the library system on the Hill.

The original "Horae," or "Books of Hours," were manuscript collections of approved daily prayers designed for the private devotional use of the religious laity, and were very popular and in fairly general use by the non-clerical members of the Catholic Church throughout the more important cities of Europe during the fourteenth, fifteenth and sixteenth centuries.

Great personages and prominent wealthy families were fond of having these collections handmade to order especially for themselves, and often the manuscripts were exquisitely illuminated with decorations and illustrations of an individual appeal.

Between 1490 and 1520 "Books of Hours" came to be produced in printed form, with Paris the center of this activity, but nothing ever came from any press which surpassed or even equalled the originally and artistic beauty of the "Horae" so skillfully executed by hand by the gifted monks, priests, scribes, artists and others who engaged in this type of work.

It goes without saying that examples of manuscript "Book of Hours" are today greatly prized and constantly sought after by the most discriminating collectors and bibliophiles.

Recently the library received one of the most beautiful "Book of Hours" ever seen in this part of the world as a gift from John M. Crawford Jr., who is a member of the Syracuse University Library Associates.

It is indeed a masterpiece of craftsmanship, and SU appreciates the thoughtfulness which prompted Crawford to make this valuable addition to the ever-increasing collections of rare books and manuscripts housed on the third and fourth floors of the main library.

This 444-page volume of "The Hours of the Blessed Virgin Mary" is written in a bold gothic hand in Latin and French on splendidly preserved leaves of vellum, with the calendar of months and days for certain prayers occupying the first 28 pages.

The intricate initial letters, which appear on every page, are in brilliant red and blue colors, and there are four full-page religious scenes depicted in illuminated minatures within wide decorative borders of flowers, fruits, birds, arabesque patterns of great variety in all the colors of the rainbow.

The four large miniatures represent the Crucifixion, the Virgin and Infant, the Last Judgment and Saint Francis of Assisi receiving the Stigmata. Each has extremely well-executed backgrounds of contemporary scenery. Fifteen pages of the text have elegant full-border decorations similar to those surrounding the miniatures, and the one on page fifty contains the coat-of-arms of the family for which the manuscript was made.

The last 12 pages of the manuscript contain entries in French of births and deaths in the Du Quesnoy family for the period 1521-1595, along with a list of names of previous owners of this work. An unsigned entry at the top of the first page of this section written by an early owner, states that this manuscript book was given him in the year 1410, which of course is evidence only that the book was completed either that year or sometime before that date.

Unfortunately, the gifted person who manufactured this manuscript did not include his name with the dates of commencement and completion, as is sometimes found to be the case in "Books of Hours". It would be interesting to know how long this labor required, since it all seems to have been the work of only an industrious, determined, and talented individual.

Those who have been priviledged to see this "Book of Hours" since its recent arrival at Syracuse University Library have marveled in awe at its unusual beauty. "It is exquisite and magnificent in every way" said M. Peter Piening, professor in the School of Art and director of the Design Center "and Syracuse University has every right to be proud of such an extraordinary gift."

A man not connected with Syracuse University, but who is a recognized expert on the period of French art and history during which the manuscript was written, declared that "These miniatures are of the finest quality and could only have been done by a great master. I have seen, examined and studied masterpieces of the miniaturist's art from California to New York to London, Paris, Rome, Vienna and dozens of places in between, and I have never seen any better miniatures.

ceed, in unifying the Republican Party.

Students agreed that the Republican Party will have to reorganize and to recognize new leaders before it can hope to regain the "power that was lost" in this election.

Many students concurred with junior Joseph Phillips' comment that Johnson was the "better of the worst."

They expressed uneasiness over Johnson winning by such a large majority since they said it might weaken the two party system.

An executive from the Empire State School of the Air said he had expected Goldwater to carry states other than in the South.

David Borthwick, a junior and a Keating supporter, said he expected Keating to win until the last few days when Kennedy gained a definite edge.

Freshman Barbara Farrar said she had expected Johnson to win but by much less. She said she felt his large plurality weakened the two party system.

She also said she expects it to be at least 10 years before the Republican Party can regain its status. Many of the old guard Republicans are now out of their jobs so new leaders must be reorganized, she added.

A large group of students agreed with freshman Thomas Jordan who said he thinks Michigan Gov. George Romney will be the new leader of the party.

Few students thought that the two-party system was going to fall but they agreed with freshman Peter Willis that the party will have to reorganize.

Unless the Democrats accomplish great things during this administration with the large majority they have, they stand to lose much power in the future, junior Carol Thorp noted.

Maureen Martin, a freshman, said she thought that if the Republicans go out, they will be replaced by another party since the two party system is "a part of our heritage." She said she does not think there is now a party that is well known enough to take its place.

Peace Corps to Hold Exams

Special on-campus placement testing for the Peace Corps will be administered at 1 p.m. Saturday in Gifford Auditorium, Huntington B. Crouse Hall.

Applicants must be American citizens of at least 18 years of age. Married couples may apply if they have no dependents under 18.

Applicants should bring with them a completed Peace Corps questionnaire if it has not previously been mailed to the Peace Corps headquarters in Washington, D.C.

The exam, which should last from one and one-half hours to two and one-half hours is non-competitive and is used only in assisting in the placement of potential volunteers.

More than 8,600 persons are expected to go into training in 1965, in addition to 1,000 college juniors who will enter Summer 1965 training to begin preparing for overseas assignments in 1966 after college graduation.

over Roland Renne; Nils Boe, Republican for the South Dakota governorship over John F. Lindley; and Republican Warren P. Knowles, who defeated incumbent Gov. John W. Reynolds in Wisconsin.

One election remained undecided. Incumbent Sen. Howard W. Cannon maintained a narrow margin over Republican challenger Paul Laxalt in a Nevada contest. Some of the election districts had not yet reported.

The revised lineup in the Senate finds 67 Democrats and 32 Republicans, with the Nevada seat still to be decided. If Cannon wins the seat, it will make a net gain of two seats for the Democrats with 28 wins, compared with seven for the GOP.

Thirty-three governorships remained in Democratic hands, with 17 going to Republicans, a net gain of one for the GOP. Seventeen Democrats were elected, compared with eight Republicans.

The projected balance in the House of Representatives was 294 Democrats and 141 Republicans.

Panhel Sets '64 Charity

Panhellenic Council will donate proceeds from Friday's Panhellenic Charity Ball to the Association for Retarded Children for the second year.

Tickets for the ball, to be held from 9 p.m.-1 a.m. in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Syracuse, have been going very fast, reported Penny Cruickshank, chairman of the ball.

Approximately 200 tickets have been sold already, and several sororities are tied currently for the Panhellenic Award for 1964. This will be the first year this award will be presented. Miss Cruickshank would not release the names of the sororities.

New safety on icy roads this winter will be provided by "tires with built-in chains." These tires each have from 72-150 tungsten-carbide studs imbedded in their treds, reports the November "Reader's Digest." Their stopping power is up to 500 per cent greater on moist ice than that of conventional snow tires.

ried student housing, to the fieldhouse, up Mt. Olympus and to the main campus. All such proposals are still in the planning stage.

Also considered was a charge for parking at the field house lot during athletic meets. However, full time use of the field house lot would mean extra cost to the university for cleaning and repairs. As it is now, the lot is cleaned and repaired only before athletic meets or whenever excessive use is expected.

Still under consideration is the idea of charging for parking privileges in university lots.

At present the university is subsidizing the parking cost which is about $25 per year for each surface space. If the plan for charging goes into effect, persons wishing to use university spaces will have to prove priority and pay the fee.

Special attention will be given to commuting students and others whose need is important. A study of the commuting students problem will be undertaken by the committee.

A new ruling of the committee will obligate those parking on campus to go anywhere else on campus on foot. That is, except in extreme cases, those parking cars on campus will not be allowed to move the car around the campus area during the day.

Another meeting is planned for Nov. 17 at which time the committee will discuss the priority list and further plans for the shuttle bus system and parking fees.

SU's Ben Seeks Win Number 100

By JIM KLURFELD

Ninety-nine victories ago Floyd "Ben" Schwartzwalder arrived on the Syracuse campus.

The year was 1949 and only the season before Syracuse had staggered to a one and eight record, beating Niagara — a team that was to give up football the following year.

But today in addition to his 99 victories (124 in 18 years of coaching), Schwartzwalder has also led the Orangemen to three Lambert Trophies, symbolic of Eastern college football supremacy ('52, '56, '59), a natioal championship ('59), and five post season bowl appearances.

When his team meets Army in Yankee Stadium Saturday, Ben will be on the verge of victory 100. However, it's not the numeral 100 he's interested in, but rather six.

"It's the game not the number," Ben said. "We're not interested in past seasons, we're only interest in this season. The least significant thing in football is what happened last year."

But Ben's success wasn't immediate. It was three years before he had a winning season. In his first year he was 4-5, then 5-5, and then 5-4.

In 1952 he put Syracuse back on the football map with a 7-2 record and a trip to the Orange Bowl.

Ben still cringes when you mention that Orange Bowl. though. Alabama humiliated Syracuse, 61-6. "We passed a lot that day," he said. He hasn't ever since.

Four years later Ben's boys were in another bowl. It was 1956, in the Cotton Bowl with Jimmy Brown. Big Jim led Syracuse to a 7-1 record but couldn't prevent a 28-27 loss to Texas Christian on New Year's Day.

"And then there was the 1959 team," Schwartzwalder said with a slight smile. That was quite a group of boys, because, except for Ernie Davis, none of them had fantastic natural ability. But they jelled."

What Schwartzie meant by jelled is that they won 10 straight plus the Cotton Bowl. The team won the national championship, Ben was coach of the year, and Ernie Davis was the most talked about back in the country.

"I'd have to say that was one of my biggest thrills," the coach said. "Especially winning the last game of the season against UCLA. If we lost it would have just been another season."

From 1958 through 1960 Syracuse teams won 22 of 23 games, the only loss coming against Oklahoma in the '58 Orange Bowl.

When Schwartzwalder talks, he reminds you of a college professor with greying hair and eyes peering over his falling glasses.

But he's in a tough profession where it "takes a tough hide" to absorb the abuse a big-time college football coach must absorb. When Ben wins it's expected. When he loses fans talk of firing him.

"You've got to realize that's the type of job you've got. In this game, as in all other fields, you must do the best job you can. A successful coach is a coach who manages to stay in coaching."

And by his own standards Ben must be considered a successful coach now in his 15th year on Piety Hill.

The only way to describe Ben's character is as an intense competitor and this probably stems from the fact that he was a 150-pound center at West Virginia University.

When he graduated it was only natural for him to go into coaching. His college football coach had had a temendous influence on him and he never wanted to be anything else.

After earning his master's degree, Ben coached high school football until 1941 when he enlisted in the paratroopers. During the war Schwartzie jumped three times in combat, gained the silver star, the Bronze Star, the Purple Heart, four battle stars plus a Presidential Unit citation.

BEN SCHWARTZWALDER
. . . strives for century mark

Three years at Muhlenburg (25-5 record) followed the war and in 1949 Ben arrived on the Hill.

"They wanted a big name coach," Schwartzwalder said, "and they got a long name coach."

But today there are few football fans who don't know that long name.

At 55 Ben Schwartzwalder is as intensive as ever. Attending press luncheons to promote the team, watching films, diagraming new plays and running practice sessions doesn't leave him much free time.

"You don't coach for the money," Ben said. "You've got to love football and working with kids. When you begin wondering if its all worth it, that's the time to get out."

And Schwartzwalder has no plans about getting out. Possible win no. 100 is just another football game to Ben.

All-American?

Army QB Poses Problems

By BOB KRENGEL

West Point quarterback Carl "Rollie" Stichweh is blocking the road to the Lambert Trophy for Syracuse University. At 6-0, 186 pounds, the 20-year-old signal caller presents a double-threat obstacle to the Orange. A possible All-America selection, he could break Saturday's Yankee Stadium clash wide open.

Last week's encounter with Iowa State is a good case in point. Stichweh led the way to a 9-7 Army victory, netting 41 yards rushing and 147 passing, for a total of 189 yards for the game. These figures boosted his season's record to 612 yards rushing and 543 yards passing on 46 completions in 85 attempts.

Stichweh turned in an even more convincing performance against Duke. In this contest he showed his talents as a double threat to run or pass. He picked up 54 yards rushing and 147 passing, accounting for 201 of Army's 277 yards.

Showings such as these have led Orange scout Joe Szombathy to say: "Stichweh is a master of the pass-run option. He's a hard runner, and had a 50 per cent passing average last year. He was second on his squad in rushing and racked up 537 yards."

This season the West Point quarterback is bigger and better than ever. After seven games he has gained 612 yards in 89 attempts for a 5.8 average. This surpasses both Orange standout backs — Jim Nance and Floyd Little.

After last week, Stichweh leads his own team in four departments — rushing, passing, punt returns and scoring. In kickoff returns he ranks second with 62 yards in six carries.

In six games this fall the cadet has been voted Army's outstanding back. This puts him in strong contention for possible All-America honors.

In his sophomore year with the Black Knights, Stichweh played defense with coach Paul Dietzel's "Bandits." Last fall he emerged as a tremondous double-threat quarterback and has been improving ever since.

Stichweh comes from Williston Park and lettered in five sports at Mineola High, and was all-scholastic in football, basketball and lacrosse. He stands first in his class in physical education and counts his biggest sports thrill as playing in the 1963 Army-Navy game.

Little, Nance Aim At Rushing Mark

By ART ROSSKY

All year the Hill's Floyd Little and Jim Nance have been picking up yards by the bushel. Yet they are especially looking forward to Saturday's clash with Army at New York.

Having a combined season total of 1,100 yards rushing, Syracuse's Mr. Inside and Mr. Outside need just 167 yards Saturday to set a new record for twosomes.

Art Baker and the late Ernie Davis hold the present record for backfield mates with 1,267 yards, set in 1960.

Skipper Ben Schwartzwalder also is looking forward to Saturday, for a win would be his 100th on the Hill, if the Orange can halt the soldiers. Under his direction the Piety have lost just 48 contests in his 15-year tenure.

Though Army has captured only three of seven decisions, the coach is not taking his foe lightly. "I don't like the idea of playing a team that is good as Army with as poor a record," moaned the Hill pilot.

Schwartzwalder pointed out that the Cadets have been up for the Hillmen, especially the defensive units, in recent years. In the last two Army-Syracuse tilts the Orange was able to squeeze out a combined total of just eight points.

In 1960 the West Pointers eeked out a 9-6 decision. Again in 1962 the soldiers marched away with a 9-2 victory.

Once again Syracuse's pass defense will face a stern test, for the Cadet's Rollie Stichweh has been filling the air with pigskins in recent games.

After throwing just 44 aerials in his club's first five contests (completing 23), the Army signal caller has lofted 41 in the last two tilts, boasting another 23 strikes. Overall, the Knight's senior has clicked on 54.1 per cent of his throws for 543 yards.

Rich King, the new black widow of the Spiders, will play a key role in the secondary after excelling against Pitt. Against the Panthers he intercepted a pass, recovered a fumble and made 10 tackles.

Billy Hunter, his injured ankle mended, returns to the defensive backfield for a spot duty. He had been shelved since the Holy Cross fray a month ago.

On the offense Schwartzwalter's forces will be led by his "accordion" boys, Little and Nance. "If the defense gangs up inside, Little takes off for the outside. Consequently the defense moves inside and outside, but the opposition hasn't been too successful," explained the Hill skipper.

All hands are expected to be ready for Saturday's clash. Little has recovered from a mild case of the flu after missing two days of practice. Tackle Dave Archer is also ready after suffering a charley horse in the Pitt victory.

In national statistics Syracuse has the third best total defense in the nation behind Nebraska and Auburn. In rushing defense the Orangemen are also third while in rushing offense they are fifth and ninth in scoring.

Maxwell Profs Say GOP Will Disavow Right-Wing Leaders

By DAVID SOSNA and JESSE SMITH

Barry Goldwater's conservative leadership of the Republican Party is in trouble, according to two professors in the Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs.

The future for conservatives and the Republican Party look grim in the eyes of Dr. H. Douglas Price, associate professor of political science.

In an interview with the Daily Orange Thursday, Price said, "Goldwater's philosophy may sound nice in a college debate, but when the man loses an election by more than anyone else in modern history, the hell with him.

"The pros can't afford to deal in ideological moonshine anymore," Price continued. "Politics is big business and the Republicans will be concerned with the problem of winning in 1968."

When asked why he though Johnson's victory was so decisive, Price, who teaches a course in political parties and politics, replied:

"The people in the Goldwater camp were amateurs. They had a chance to get Ray Bliss (professional party worker from Ohio, conceded by experts to be one of the best in the business) and instead Goldwater put in Burch (Dean Burch, present GOP national chairman, seen as being relatively inexperienced).

"The campaign was handled slopily," Price stated. It was like declaring political bankruptcy."

Alan K. Campbell, professor of political science and past chairman of the state Democratic platform committee saw good prospects for rebuilding the Republican Party, and a

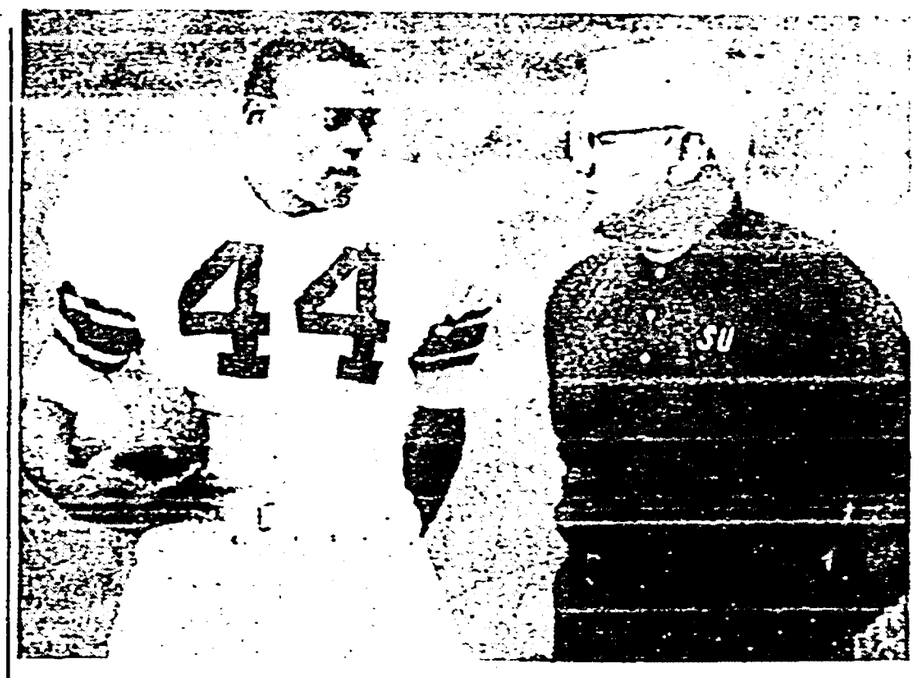
DO PAUSES FOR MIDTERMS

Leaves fall off trees, the football season nears its completion, and it's once again time for midterm exams. With the advent of midterms, it'll be time for the Daily Orange staff to take a break to put in some long-overdue studying.

Hence, with today's edition, the Daily Orange will cease publication for one week, returning to campus Friday, Nov. 13. That's good luck for crossword puzzle fans.



Floyd and Floyd

Orange Favored In NYC

By HOWIE SCHNEIDER
Junior Editor

If nothing else, the past week has demonstrated that Paul Dietzel and Ben Schwartzwalder can at least talk a good football game. But tomorrow the talking stops and the playing starts as the Orangemen face the Cadets before 45,000 at Yankee Stadium.

Game time is 1:30 p.m. WSYR will begin broadcasting at 1:15 p.m.

For the past five days the friendly (?) rivals have been telling anyone who wants to listen how afraid of each other they are. Both coaches are looking for a tough, hard-hitting contest and both have been drilling their squads intensely.

Army, with a disappointing 3-4 record, would like nothing better than a Syracuse scalp to boost its waning prestige. Schwartzwalder, on the other hand, seeking his 100th victory as a Syracuse coach, knows a win is a must if the Orangemen are to remain on top in the East.

The fact that his squad is a 13-point favorite has not impressed Ben. "Well, there's the tradition behind this game. The last two times we met Army we didn't do so well (Army won 9-6 in '60 and 9-2 in '62). I don't like to play a team that is as good as Army is with as poor a record."

Schwartzwalder will be counting heavily on perhaps the finest one-two offensive punch in Syracuse history. Together 226-pound Jim Nance and speedy Floyd Little have accounted for 1,101 yards in seven games.

Peru Seminar To Host SU Dean

By CAROL RUBRIGHT
Junior Editor

Peru, the land of llamas and high peaks, will host Robert G. Cox, new dean of the College of Business Administration next week.

Cox will leave Monday to speak before 1,200 businessmen from the Western Hemisphere at the Inter-American Conference of Business Executives, which is meeting in Lima. He will be the first Syracuse University faculty member to attend this conference, which meets every few years.

As a panel member, Cox will speak on the education and training of business executives.

In conjunction with the trip to Peru, Cox will also visit Bogota, Colombia and the team of six SU professors working in Medellin, Colombia, for the Escuela de Administracion y Finanzas.

Cox will report to the American ambassador to Colombia, Covey Oliver, on the progress of the school.

The school in Medellin was founded in 1960 with the help of the Alliance for Progress and the SU College of Business Administration. It is one of the few four-year colleges in Colombia created by private enterprise.

Cox, recently appointed dean of the SU Business School, will familiarize himself with the Colombia school and evaluate the program.

Syracuse professors can teach in Medellin for two-years. They aid in curriculum development teacher training.

Cox noted that he was invited to attend the Lima conference because of Syracuse's ties the school in Medellin and the International Management Development Department here in Syracuse.

Carey to Get SU Salzberg Medal

Walter F. Carey, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, will receive Syracuse University's Salzberg medal and citation and will deliver the 16th annual Harry E. Salzberg memorial lecture, 6:30 p.m. Monday at the Hotel Syracuse.

The lecture was established in 1949 as part of an SU fund by Murray M. Salzberg, class of 1937. The fund is in memory of his father and is awarded "in the interest of education, transportation and engineering."

While at Syracuse University, Carey will participate in the Syracuse Transportation Conference held in conjunction with the Salzberg Lecture.

WALTER F. CAREY

Speakers at the day-long event will include Dr. E. Grosvenor Plowman, retired vice president of United States Steel Corp. and recently deputy under secretary of commerce for transportation; and Dr. Gayton E. Germane, professor of logistics, Stanford University.

Also Robert D. Brooks, general solicitor, New York Central System; Albert C. Ingersoll, Jr., president of Federal Barge Lines,

Czech to Discuss Physics Problems

Dr. Vladimir Synecek, of the Institute of Solid State Physics of the Czechoslavak Academy of Science at Prague, will serve as a visiting lecturer at Syracuse University, Monday and Tuesday.

Synecek will visit under the auspices of the American Association of Physics Teachers and the American Institute of Physics as part of a broad, nationwide program to stimulate interest in physics. The program is supported by the National Science Foundation.

Lectures, informal discussion, assistance to faculty members concerning curriculum reseach problems in physics and talks with students will feature Dr. Synecek's visit. Prof. H. Brumberger, of the SU departmen of chemistry, is in charge of arrangements for Synecek's visit.

Since 1957 Synecek has worked in the department of metal physics of the academy, leading a group that deals with the structure and physical properties of metallic solid solutions. His main interest is in the investigation of heterogeneities in supersaturated al-solids solu-

VPI Football Seating

All organizations desiring block seating for the Virginia Polytechnic Institute football game Saturday, Nov. 14, may pick up their petitions 3:30 p.m. Monday in the trophy room of the Men's Gym.

Organizations are asked to only request the amount of tickets for which they are able to provide stubs, said Steven Rubell football seating co-chairman, Thursday.

When tickets are picked up, he said, twice the amount of reserved tickets will be deducted for the number of stubs short.

No penalties will be carried over into next year, he added.

All other students may pick up reserved tickets Thursday according to the following schedule: married students 3 p.m.-3:15 p.m.; seniors, 3:15 p.m.-3:30 p.m.; juniors, 3:30 p.m.-3:45 p.m.; sophomores, 3:45 p.m.-4 p.m.; freshmen, 4 p.m.-4:15 4:15 p.m.-4:30 p.m.

A Step Into the Past

An item in the paper recently said that Panhellenic, the sororities' answer to the AFL-CIO, is voting on whether to return to 'plan' rushing.

The basic purpose of this seems to be that, in order to make rushing easier for sororities, freshman girls will have the opportunity to rush only Christian tradition houses, only Jewish tradition houses, or for the few who so venture, both.

The problem must have come from last year's rush, not on the plan system, which caused too much confusion for too many sorority girls, not to mention freshmen. So someone proposed that Panhel go back to sectarian rush.

But this isn't right. Why should the houses be labelled as Christian tradition or Jewish tradition. Haven't we progressed far enough to realize that religion shouldn't be considered in choosing one's living companions?

Wasn't this one of the reasons for establishing the university anti-discrimination board, which has worked so well with fraternities? Now the sororities are again slipping into showing discrimination on its face.

Just because a girl is Christian or Jewish is no reason to exclude her from membership in an organization. By proposing a return to plan rushing, Panhel is taking a backward step to rekindling the fires of prejudice that have plagued the past.

Panhellenic has a vital role in helping to eliminate prejudice and discrimination in both the system and the community. Yet this proposal seems to be directly contrary to that purpose..

Maybe Panhellenic had best re-examine its entire rushing system and adopt a system similar to the InterFraternity Council, which requires a freshman to visit at least half the fraternities, choosing the ones to visit at his own discretion.

Rushing should be an objective evaluation — not a menu from a Chinese restaurant.

Midnight in Moscow

By Rich Turner

The following is a conversation recorded at Moscow University during my trip to the semester in Vladivostok.

It is late evening and all that is audible is the swich of brooms and the happy voices of the Russian peasant woman as she sweeps the street.

Two students stand outside on the street in their PRG's (Pretty Grungy Raincoats).

"Well Nikki, how's your fern?"

"Fine, Ivan. What's new?"

"I just got back from the Peter, Paul and Natasha concert—they were great."

"I really like their song 'Don't think twice—you'll get shot."

"Don't be funny, Ivan. Did you hear what happened to the editor of the Daily Tomato?"

"No, King, I didn't."

"Watch those capitalist terms, comrade. They threw him out of school."

"What for?"

"We don't know for sure—but it wasn't a question of literary style."

"But what about the Board of Publications?"

"Get serious."

"Wasn't there some talk about that before?"

"Yeah, but nobody cared, you know as long as they have their vodka."

"I guess you get what you deserve."

"Say, what about the professors in the People's School of Journalism?"

"Oh, they were busy collaborating on a book called 'The Free Press in Society.'"

Can you imagine—a Deke in a tux, the Pi Kappa Alpha calendar, an art student in a skirt, Jay Litwin's column, The Board of Publications.

A letter:

The other night the sisters of Kappa Alpha Theta restored my faith in the campus's ability to laugh. I had been afraid that academic presure and student apathy had turned the campus into a nervous, self-protective island.

The Theta's, dressed as beautiful vestal virgins, serenaded the campus and turned an otherwise boring night into an extremely enjoyable one.

It's nice to know that the girls on this campus have a sense of humor as well as being good looking an intelligent.

Atlanta

To the Editor:

After careful perusal of your editorial (re: Oct. 26, "The Braves and Atlanta"), I, as an Atlantan, can't help being amazed by your blatant remarks concerning my "native" city. Witnout a sinigle fact to back up your claims you methodically proceeded to degrade one of the trailblazers of the "new" South.

Atlanta was the first city in the South to pull down the bars that socialogically separated the Negro and the White man. I know for at least two years before the Civil Rights Bill was passed that the governments of Atlanta and Georgia began a process for integration of schools, restaurants, hotels, and every other aspect of life in that city.

Of course, we had a few who protested this move, but show me where there hasn't been racial unrest (on both sides) anywhere in this country. Look at Rochester, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Trenton; and I could go on.

The problem isn't one which will be solved by unthinking and narrow-minded persons. By stating that Hank Aaron and Lee Maye and the other Negro players on the Braves' team would be subjected to abuses, such as "they may just as easily stone him or bomb his home once he leaves the ball park (sic)" is purely a sign that you simply don't know Atlanta. Do you base your assumptions on actual experiences in Atlanta or do you print what you gather from Northern newspapers?

Having lived in Atlanta I can tell you that in presenting this dissertation on Atlanta, you have given your readers a dangerously bigoted view of that city. If you want to degrade a city or any other thing, get your facts straight, for it is journalists like you who give the people in the North such a distorted view of actual conditions as they are in the South today.

One would think that you, being in the journalistic profession, should show some responsibility in presenting the views of the newspaper of such a renowned insititution as Syracuse University. In the future, it might be to your advantage to investiage the facts before you so blatantly present opinions to your readers.

Degradation

To the Editor:

It was a beautiful, sunny day for the Pitt-Fall game. The stadium was crowded to capacity, and I proudly sat in the placard cheering section trying to belong in part to the mass which enveloped me.

What I witnessed in the stands was not a pretty sight. I was mortified with the treatment bestowed upon the numerous venders who were working to earn a few pieces of change that afternoon.

Whatever unfortunate circumstance that requires a man to shout the name of his product over the din of a boisterous crowd, to be answered with "Go home, dirty old man," is to be pitied.

There was nothing more disheartening than seeing the defeated face at a vender after having crawled under the stands to retrieve a mis-tossed quarter without success. After being confronted with the scoffs and applause of a few insensitive people, he made his way on, only to have repeated many more times the same deject experience.

These men have become, through some thoughtless inurbanity, the targets for dirty food containers and rolls of streaming toilet papaer. Why must they have indignities leaped upon them and be affronted with the taunts and jeers of mass intolerance?

Why must a human being face this utter degradation in the course of earning an honest livelihood? A man is a man, equal to all others regardless of his station in life. It was grievous to witness this lack of human compassion in its overwhelming absurdity.

Litwin

To the Editor:

Mr. Jay Litwin would do well to heed the hidden message in his "Nobody Asked Me But" columns. There is, apparently, very good reason why nobody asked him: he seethes with inanities and vacuous dribble. If he can find nothing of importance to write about on this campus then he is not only inane but myopic and deaf as well.

More truth is written on one wall of the men's room of the Orange than in all his columns—past, present, and likely, future.

Co-feature is "Four for Texas" with Frank, Dean, and Anita. A different setting for the same old brand of corn. No times available.

ECKEL-Take Peter Ustinov, a gang of jewel theives, Melina Mercouri and a jeweled dagger and you've got "Topkapi." It's a romp around old Turkey with Ustinov outwitting the secret police and various belly dancers. Maxmillian Schell of "Judgement at Nuremberg" fame is the fall-guy. KALLET-GENESEE - "Good Neighbor Sam" or "I Wed Three Wives," playing this weekend. Starring the comic archetype of the 20th century Jack Lemmon, the film also features Romy Schneider in clean-living color. It's all about a bumbling PR man who decides to help out a neighbor by switching wives. A new switch to the Kinsey tale. Co-feature is "By Bye Birdie" with Ann-Margaret, Dick Van Dyke and Janet Leigh. It all takes place in the pre-Beatle era with the arrival of Conrad Birdie, the newest teenage instrument of emotional release. Birdie turns out to be a beer-burping idol and his manager, Van Dyke tries to cover up for him while he disrupts the house of typical teenager, Ann-Margret. Meanwhile, Van Dyke has troubles of his own with an over-protective mother who won't let him marry Jamet Leigh. And it's all in color. No times available.

Ritey

To the Editor:

When a student chooses to become a member of a university community, he should do so with the awareness of the problems awaiting him him there. He should decide if the rewards of scholarship (hopefully) compenstate for, in the words of Dan Ritey, "the shielding and coddling functions" of the administration. By his crybaby attitude, the author of "The Wet Nurse" proves that he has not been able to rise above the need for an in loco parentis agent at SU.

One reality of life in our society (which Ritey has failed to see in his supposed quest for enlightenment) is the fact of extrnal authority. In every organized society there is always a more powerful agent than the individual. This in itself is a direct confrontation with life, not only at SU, but to experienced minds, the world at large. By his blubbering, the ostentatiously rebel student shows himself to be far from capable of handling the problem. In fact, he shows no inner concern for his relation to authority aside from his gripe that it's cramping his style.

Dan Ritey deplores the "ivory towers high atop Piety Hill." How many babies fresh from the cradle has he seen capable to manage the problems of the present day? One hallmark of maturity is to quietly collect the facts, recognize their strengths and weaknesses in relation to a purpose (how about a statement of purpose, Ritey), then present a cogent plan of attack to people capable of carrying it out. Rest assured that Prof. Lang, for example, did not deliver one of iis fascinating lectures on the British novel the day he graduated from secondary school; nor would a roughneck from the neighborhood gang be entrusted with the red button for a neclear war.

Please understand that I am not advocating blind acceptance of authority, nor am I suggesting that the "leaders" shut up. Rather, be aware that to create a meaninful existence in this university community, which the student has chosen to take part in, one must thoughtfully consider all the angles before casting one's soul on the bonfire of condemnation. It's much more difficult to reform from within than to become to become involved in the glamourous, fell-swoop reform at which Dan Ritey hints.

As a final point, let me ask, "Why did you come here?" Why not go out and face "The World" on your own? You'll come back to school, dragging your tail behind you, a chagrined smile on your face, and say, humbly, "Well, uh, I guess I didn't know the answers after all. Perhaps with a little less yakking and a little more listening, I'll be better able to manage affairs as I see them."

To the Editor:

And when will Food Service improve? Or at least take the wishes of the students into consideration? Last year after a food boycott the students of the university were given a questionnaire to fill out on which they stated what meals they liked, which ones they would eat if served and which ones were definitely unappealing (and we certainly had enough choices of those.)

If we remember correctly, liver was one of those dishes that was removed from our menue. Suddenly this dish has reappeared on the university for Nov. 6. Does Food Service feel that the students will just overlook this and continue to eat whatever it feels like serving? We also realize that there is not as great a variety of dishes being served since some were removed from the menue last year. However, isn't tuna fish on Monday and Friday of the same week overdoing it a bit?

It would be a thoughtful gesture on the part of Food Service if the students' likes and dislikes were considered. Other choices we are not permitted. The idea of a compulsory food contract is beyond our comprehension . . . but we realize that the money for such things as a new headquarters for Food Service (after a fire) must come from somewhere.

Our only consolation is in thinking that millions of people throughout the world are worse off than we, and don't even have meat and cheese slices to eat.

Board

To the Editor:

Voila, our problems are solved! Since the staff and outgoing editor of the D.O. would obviously be incapable os selecting a new editor when the time came, we really do need a board to select our editor to make sure that he is courteous, honest, loyal, kind, reverent, oh yes and above all, obedient.

Some may accuse me a traitor but, alas, I have decided to align myself with the administration in this great hour of crisis. The hallowed words of William P. Tolley still ring in my ears, "We don't need a publications board. But someone has to elect the editors." Well then, since the Chancellor has the right (?) to ammend the constitution, why does he not eliminate all the controversial clauses in it which give the board powers it really (in the Chancellors own words) doesn't need? We could save much trouble and confusion by eliminating the disputed clauses and retaining a portion of Article III, Sec. 1: "It shall be the function of the Board of Student Publications to elect the editor - in - chief..."

In view of the facts it would seem that for the Chancellor to act otherwise than outlined here would be quite inconsistent, in view of his previously mentioned statement. Unless, of course, he claims to have been misquoted. But then again, I suppose inconsistency in the pursuit of suppression is no vice.

chance of a moderate-wing takeover by 1968.

"Both major parties in the past have shown tremendous resiliency following major defeats," Campbell said. But it will unusually hard for the Republicans to come back, he added, because of their severe ideological split.

"Parties are essentially state institutions," Campbell said. "The real rebuilding will have to be done on the state and local level."

A move by moderates to recapture the party will probably come from Ohio, Michigan or Illinois, Campbell predicted.

A request from 16 states can force calling a national committee meeting, he said, and an attempt can then be made to unseat Burch.

"That wing of the party is not going to give up without a fight, which will of course prolong the reorganization process," Campbell declared.

Campbell who was active in Robert F. Kennedy's successful senatorial campaign, said he couldn't judge the outlook for President Johnson's legislation in the upcoming Congress because no program has been for ulated yet.

"One of the more unfortunate aspects of this campaign is that the majority party was not forced to present a program," Campbell commented.

He said that the program is to include Medicare, rehabilitation for the Apalachian region and expanded anti-poverty measures. Campbell predicted passage of these bills.

"The House is a much more liberal body than before in terms of membership," Campbell said, citing the defeat of The Senate, which has been many conservative Republicans. more liberal than the House recently, remains largely unchanged, according to Campbell.

Few places in the world are as sharply conscious of business as Beirut, Lebanon, according to October 'Reader's Digest." The Beiruti psychology is summed up by a story of a schoolboy who was asked in class how much is two and two. "Am I buying or selling?" was his reply. The Beginning of '68 Memories

The world of the freshman is a constant round of new and unforgettable sights and experiences.

For the first time frosh feel the frustrations of curfews, of doing their own laundry and struggling out of bed for an 8 a.m. class.

They experience the fun and pitfalls of dorm life, eye-closing all-nighters, mid-term exams and food service.

Remember Parent's Weekend, placard cheering, and the Goons?

Football games, shopping on "M" Street, monkeying on the lawn, early morning (or late night) discussions with roommates and mail from home are still more of the many joys.

How good is your memory?

A Big Mistake

To the Editor:

Once again, righteous indignation has buried itself in the murky gloom of confusion. Once again, patriotic do-gooders have been rendered blind by the glow of what appears to them to be a wonderously grand and impressive act. In truth however our castigation of segregated colleges, while well intentioned, is simply fatuity.

Admittedly, one should not criticize a stand opposing the evil called segregation, for it is proper that such a position be taken. I suspect, however, that we at Syracuse are attempting to make a distinct, noteworthy impression in this troublesome area.

And realizing the uselessness of a mere verbal scolding, we have traveled a step further, initiating a boycott of segregated universities, a refusal to schedule these teams in the future.

Unfortunately, we have failed to discern that this boycott, instead of attaining any desired goal, will actually be a factor in destroying any little bit we at Syracuse could have done to improve the terrible situation down there. In fact, the entire state of affairs will probably worsen.

Pursuing this point, let us analyze a segregated southern school. Usually, they remaining true to their creed would not even consider playing a racially mixed group. But suddenly one decides that Syracuse would fit nicely into an open date on their schedule.

Syracuse means money of course; but then so does their frolicking with any big southern neighbor. Why meet with this nothern integrated team when the southern school could remain "lily white" and just as profited from a contest with its neighbors.

I do not think it illogical to assume that they desire to compete in terms of sportsmanship and the furtherance of athletics. And assuming that thus is their wish, it is most certainly reasonable to believe that the race problem entered their minds.

Forced to decide whether or not to play an atheletic contest, with a racial issue as the controlling factor, and having resolved to participate, can it possibly be that the southern school is entering into a noble experiment, testing the behavior of all concerned in what may be a unique undertaking for them.

This may be their intention; and yet they might wish to play us just for the sole reason of filling a gap in their schedule But in either case, they know that they are to be confronted with a racially mixed group. Naturally, they realize there is a delicate situation.

And now this delicate situation turns to us. And with it, a question from the south: "What are you really like, Syracuse?" It is for us to show then how an integrated group can operate.

But then, there are questions presented from our side. Is the gridiron battlefield, a place of battered bodies and bruised egos, the right setting for a meeting of these opposing view points? Is it right to subject ourselves to the undue stress and humiliation which might be encountered during the confrontation? Is it all worth while?

It is for us to show them the American way. And even though the gridiron is not so conducive an area for such a difficult state of affairs, it is the only one being provided and the only one which will be provided.

It is for us to make use of this opportunity no matter how short the period provided and in the best possible way. This means that our representatives, the football players, whould have to exemplify the highest degree of intelligence, seriousness, and maturity.

And above all, in the face of any humiliating, disparaging acts (I'm not saying that these already haven't been encountered from fellow Eastern groups) our representatives must maintain dignity. Yes, the team would have a task; but would they be man enough to meet it. And would they be capable?

And what if our endeavor would fail? We should not feel it was all utter futility, for this is an enormous challenge. We should be proud of ourselves, for it was with nobility that we attempted the task.

Yes, the South emerging from the shadows of ignorance, is hesitantly extending its hand, asking "What is your group like, Syracuse?" And what do we do? We turn our backs and destroy everything.

Sports Publicity Paces Football Pollsters

Sports Publicity, apparently aided by inside crooks and tipsters again snagged top honors in the weekly Daily Orange football poll.

Surprising WAER pooled its latent talent to pick eight of 10 winners, one less than the Publicityites, for runner-up.

Meanwhile, the recently surging DO faltered in predicting only six games correctly. The slumping Orange Scout, not living up to preseason expectations, slipped to a dank 5-5 mark.

With three weeks left in the chase for the "Head Swami Turban and Crystal Ball" trophy, Publicity leads the pack with a 45-12 ,78.9 per cent) rally.

In second position the DO has scored 39-18 (68.4 per cent) to best third place WAER 38-19 (66.7 per cent) by one game.

The hopeless Orange Scout, predicted by many to sweep grid poll honors, needs a tremendous rally to improve its 35-22 (61.4 per cent) record enough to challenge the leaders.

JUST FOR YOU

That's why the DO advertisers advertise. They want you to know what you get, for what price and where. Patronize these people. You're going to spend the money somewhere. That's the way life is. You've got to. You don't want to be a complete nebbish and horde it in your room, under your mattress. Keep the national economy booming. In the words of FDR "SPEND!" Get yourself out of that depression. Buy a new sweater, a candy bar, a new stereo. That's all that money is good for anyway. It only lasts for a little while, so while you're running around, cashing your allowance check anyway, you might just as well stock up on things. Save yourself a trip. Patronize the DO advertisers. They advertise just for you.

Discrimination

By BOBBIE MARX

Last year we complained about the discrimination policies of Richmond. This year we are attacking those of Virginia Tech.

We argue that we do not like the attitude of white players on these teams who use derogatory terms against our Negro players.

We examine all this in respect to outside campuses—yet discrimination of this sort, or worse, is evident at Syracuse University, judging from our intramural activities.

During the intramural seasons, the comments are not limited to racial lines, but cross religious ones as well. It is not one-sided. The comments are directed against both sides in a game between houses of different religious traditions.

It does seem unfortunate that such poor sportsmanship should exist in intramural games, the purpose of which are for university men to enjoy themselves athletically.

Ugly name-calling does not enhance the winning possibilities of the team. The winning, undeniably important in terms of the individuals' efforts and the house record, is better won without having to belittle another player by reference to his creed or color.

The hypocritical, inconsistent point is that we are willing to argue and act indignant when this sort of injustice occurs on other campuses.

We refuse to play the schools and scream against discrimination — yet we had better examine our own situation before we start calling the kettle nasty names.

Foreign Nations Represented In 26 State Broadcast Tour

Nineteen broadcasters from 16 foreign nations will begin a month's visit of television and radio stations throughout the United States on Nov. 12.

The tour is part of the fourth International Broadcast Seminar administered by Syracuse University and sponsored by the U.S. State Department.

Each participant will observe activities at three or four of 64 cooperating broadcasting outlets in 26 states, said George Mastroianni, seminar administrator.

When the three-month seminar ends in mid-December, the foreign broadcasters also will have visited broadcasting and advertising facilities in Washington, New York, Syracuse, Boston and Hagerstown, Md.

During a three-week stay in Syracuse, ending Friday, the broadcasters will learn about the American system of broadcasting in lecture, discussion sessions and personal study at the Syracuse Universiy Television-Radio Center.

Mermen Prep for Debut

By BOB KRENGEL

While King Football enjoys the spotlight on Piety Hill during the fall, the Syracuse swimming team has been working hard.

The Orangemen are hoping to improve upon last season's 5-4 record and are pointing for their opening debut on Dec. 5 at the Upper New York State Relays.

Coach Ted Webster, a veteran coach of many years, has his staring berths up for grabs. "It's still a mess," he said. "We can't tell very much yet, but considering the time of year we're looking very good."

The Webfoot squad lost five men to that old athletic nemesis-graduation. Robert Duthie, Dwayne Lehigh, Jeffrey Meyer and Alan Roth were all fine performers who will be sorely missed during the campaign.

Fortunately for the mermen, there is a nucleus of returning lettermen, supplemented by some outstanding boys up from the freshman squad.

Junior Pete Hickman promises some fine showings this season. His specialty is the 200-yard backstroke. Last year against the Big Red of Cornell, Hickman toppled an old Piety record by turning in a time of 2:12.0. This marked him as a swimmer to watch in the future.

Other returning varsity swimmers include junior captain Rick Bauschard, Steve Beaudry, Robert DeWolfe, Hugh Duseath, Steve Hoesche, Jim Marshall and Larry Stevens.

New varsity webfoots up from the freshman teams are John De Young, Jim Barlow and Frank Comfort. De Young and Barlow won their events last year at the Upper New York State Championships at Buffalo State.

Last week the swimmers had their first time trials. Although the times did not burn up any records, Webster was satisfied with them for this time of the training season. Webster indicated that in about three weeks he will have his starting team all picked out and ready.

The Orange schedule includes key contests with Buffalo, Columbia, N.Y.U., Bucknell, Pittsburgh, and Colgate. During the weekend of March 5-6 the team will also compete in the New York State Championships.

'62 Flashback: Army-Syracuse

By KEN RUDNICK

On Sept. 29, 1962, Syracuse and Army met at the Polo Grounds in New York City with little more than pride at stake. Both teams were en route to mediocre seasons—with the Orangemen winding up 5-5 and the Cadets 6-4.

The crowd of 29,500 in the ill-fated, antique ballpark saw the Black Knights triumph, 9-2, in a game played mostly around midfield. The defeat left SU with an 0-2 mark.

It was the second straight week in which the Orange offense had failed to register a touchdown. Fumbles stalled what menacing offensive gestures Syracuse made.

Army recovered an Orange fumble early in the second period and marched to the SU three-yard line before being halted. Dick Heydt's 20-yard field goal gave the Cadets a 3-0 edge.

After the ensuing kickoff, SU's Billy Hunter fumbled the ball away on the Syracuse 32 and the Black Knights struck quickly. On the first play, quarterback Cammy Lewis fired a scoring strike to Bob Bedell in the end zone. Heydt missed the extra point, leaving Army with a 9-0 advantage.

The Orangemen drove to the Cadets' 19, but an interception of a Bob Lelli aerial in the end zone ended the first half.

Syracuse picked up its two points in the second half when Gene Stancin, covering a punt, dropped Army's Ken Waldrop in the end zone.

The game ended with the Black Knights threatening on the Orange eight-yard line.

Halfback Mike Koski and fullback Bill Schoonover led the meager Syracuse attack, with each rushing for 29 yards. Schoonover also caught three passes for 51 yards.

The players from that '62 team who will be playing at Yankee Stadium tomorrow, knowing a bowl bid may be in the balance, will have something more than pride at stake.

Army's Stichweh Threatens Piety

Low AND Inside

By BILL CRONAUER
Sports Editor

The pressure will be on at Yankee Stadium Saturday afternoon. Two and one half hours will decide the 1964 fate of veteran Ben Schwartzwalder and his powerful Orangemen.

Post-season bowls are the talk of the town. And the facts are plain and clear — we must strike out to have a shot at a trip South.

Grid fans eagerly calculate who should win the Alabama-LSU and Nebraska-Kansas games so as to most benefit Syracuse.

But the simple fact is that if we lose tomorrow we're through, no matter what anybody else does. We're finished, washed up. The two remaining games will be only leftovers, not frosting on the cake.

The players deny they're thinking about bowl bids, but they're not fooling anybody. It's pretty difficult to remain unconcerned when everybody is talking and writing about them.

For the seniors, the Army game is do or die. It's their last chance for a bowl. . .and they're not going to give up that chance without a fight.

Army won't be lying down either. The West Pointers boast a solid football team and if that's not enough to worry about, the entire Cadet corps will be on hand, too.

Ben calls this just another game, but he's not fooling anyone either. With the possible exception of Notre Dame, Schwartzwalder would probably like to earn his 100th Hill victory against no other team.

And even the Fighting Irish are our friends these days. Yesterday, ND Athletic Director Ed (Moose) Krause confirmed that his school would not accept a bowl bid this winter.

"Notre Dame's policy will remain the same as it has been since 1925," he said. "We're not going to any bowl game. There's not a one in a million chance, none," he repeated.

So it's up to us tomorrow. Go Orange? Go Orange!

They have scored 18 touchdowns, six more than the entire Army team.

And if there is one thing that the two coaches agree on, it's the potency of the Orange offensive attack.

"Little is the best back in the country," said Dietzel. All Ben could add was, "Thank goodness for Floyd."

Dietzel expanded, "Little has great balance, along with his speed, and he has so much strength that he can run through trouble."

The Army coach also holds Nance and quarterback Walley Mahle in high regard. He describes Mahle as SU's "unsung hero" and remarked that Nance "keeps you awful honest to the inside and makes it all the more difficult to contain Little going wide."

The Orangemen are fifth in the nation in rushing, with an average of 229 yards a game, and ninth in scoring, with an average of 25.7 points.

Commenting on Mahle's performance, Ben said, "Walley is not the best passer in America, but many folks forget his ability to bootleg outside as a runner."

At Monday's press conference Schwartzwalder told Dietzel. "Please Paul keep one man back just to make it look like you fear Syracuse passing."

But Dietzel wasn't fooled. "Our defense has been rugged but it is going to be put to a real test Saturday. Syracuse is a sound, mauling team that plays aggressive football."

The Army defense has been consistently strong and Dietzel is counting on them to stop Little and Nance.

Sonny Stowers and Townsend Clarke, linebackers, and Pete Braun, middle guard, have been bulwarks in the defense. Other standouts have been Ed Noble, Tony Pyrz, Don Dietz and Sam Zartholomew and sophomores Dave Rivers and Tom Schwartz.

HERB STECKER
. . . defensive stalwart

Anchoring the offensive line will be All-Sectional candidates Ron Butterfield and Bill Zadel.

Dietzel's answer to a modified Little - Mahle combination will be Rollie Stichweh. The Cadet quarterback has 612 yards rushing and 543 yards passing.

Schwartzwalder in turn will be hoping his Spiders can contain the explosive Stichweh. Pacing the Orange defensive unit up front will be ends George Fair and Herb Stecker, middle guard John Krok, and tackles Paul Houle and Dave Archer. The linebackers will be Murray Johnson, Bob Morgan and Jim Cheyunski and the backs will be Charley Brown, Ted Holman and co-captain Rich King.

Billy Hunter, out with an injury since the Holy Cross game, will also be available for limited action.

Schwartzwalder will start Harris Elliott and Brad Clarke at the ends, Howie McCard and Tony Scibelli at guards, Pat Killorin at center, and Gary Bugenhagen and Harris Wienke at tackles. In the backfield he will go with Mahle, Nance, Little and Nat Duckett.

Dietzel will start Sam Champi and Bill Sherrell at the ends, Butterfield and Charles Stowers at the guards, Mike O'Grady at center and Zadel and John Carber at tackles.

Stichweh will run the backfield from his quarterback slot with Don Parcells at fullback, Fred Barofsky at tailback and John Johnson at wingback.

Is it Sugar Bowl for Syracuse?

BULLETIN

If Syracuse wins Saturday, it could be off to the Sugar Bowl.

According to reliable sources, the Sugar Bowl Committee Thursday informed Hill coach Ben Schwartzwalder that if the Orange defeat Virginia Tech Saturday, even by one point, SU would receive a Sugar Bowl bid immediately.

Schwartzwalder reportedly revealed the developments to a number of SU players at the Varsity Club dinner at Drumlins Thursday night.

Schwartzwalder was not available for comment. Athletic Director James Decker said Thursday night he had not been contacted by anyone on the Sugar Bowl Committee.

Court Rebukes Senate in AWS Case

Decision Says SS Can't Rule On By-Laws

By SUSAN STRANDBERG

The Association of Women Students convinced Student Court last Friday in a precedent-setting case that Student Senate was overstepping its powers when it refused the revised AWS constitution three weeks ago.

AWS and SS fought over three major constitutional points:

1. Does SS have the right to require nominating procedures and officer eleigibility requirements to appear in the consitituion of a student organization?

2. Does the Senate have the right to review by-laws of an organization?

3. Does SS have the right to review the essential structure of a student organization?

The court answered no to all these questions and based its reasoning on a strict interpretation of Robert's Rules of Order and the Men's Student Government Act of Dec. 1, 1953.

This act gives SG the power to approve the constitutions of all student organizations at Syracuse University.

SS Appeals

KATHLEEN KAPSOL, special assistant to the speaker of Student Senate, presents the senate case to the Student Court. The senate contended the by-laws of the Association of Women Students were not democratic in election procedures.

AWS Listens

JOAN MOORE, AWS vice president, and DIANE KESSLER, president, listen to the arguments presented by the Student Senate before the Student Court Nov. 5. The case before the court was based on whether or not SS had the right to rule on the constitutionality of the AWS by-laws.

"We didn't feel that we, Student Court, were in a position to reinterpret Robert's Rules of Order, so we favored a strict interpretation," explained Walter Beardslee, SC justice who is writing the opinion. "Since nominations and nomination procedures are not required specifically to be included in the constitution, we find no way SS can require them to be included."

The court chose not to interpret the MSG act as giving the Senate the broad power to approve or refuse whatever it considered the basic structure of an organization—regardless of where it was described (whether in the constitution or by-laws). It decided instead to hold strictly to the word "constitution."

"What Student Government considered a precedent making decision, Student Court apparently did not," said Howard Keller, chairman of the SS government structures committee which originally refused the AWS constitution, Thursday.

SC Scoreboard: One Suspended, Three on 'Pro'

By LOIS WINEBAUM

One student has been suspended from the university, two placed on disciplinary probation and one placed on court probation as a result of action taken recently by Student Court.

Two of the cases involved theft from the University Bookstore, according to chief justice Frank Richmond.

In the first case, a freshman boy was caught stealing a pen valued at $1.95. He admitted picking up the pen and walking to the rear of the store where he placed it beneath a t-shirt which he was buying. He then put it in his pocket.

It was the decision of the court that these actions constituted a case of "well-planned and pre-meditated theft," Richmond said. The court therefore recommended immediate suspension to Dean of Men Jim G. Carleton, who approved the decision. The suspension will be in effect until February.

The other case of theft from the bookstore involved a senior in the College of Liberal Arts who admitted leaving the store with a $1 book for which he had not paid. When confronted outside the store, the student gave a false name and address and claimed that he had taken the item unintentionally.

As he had shown no intent to steal, he was placed on disciplinary probation for the

SUCE to 'Morally Withdraw' Support from V P I Game

A decision to "morally withdraw" support from Saturday's football game with Virginia Polytechnic Institute was announced Thursday by the Syracuse University Committee on Equality.

The withdrawal is not called a boycott, however, according to Robert Lubetsky, president of SUCE. "The members, as individuals, are simply not supporting the game," he said.

"If we were to go to the game, we'd be lending our moral and financial support to Virginia Polytechnic Institute's token segregation," Lubetsky said.

SUCE is a university recognized organization with approximately 35 members. Its purpose is the eradication of inequalities in all cultural, social and faculty-student relationships, he said.

In an open letter to the campus, SUCE explained the reasons for its decision:

"We take such action because we sincerely believe that scheduling games with segregated schools provides moral and financial support to a repugnant system.

"We applaud Chancellor William P. Tolley's revision of the university's athletic policy and hope that this policy will extend beyond the field of athletic competition."

(Chancellor Tolley announced early this semester that the university would refrain from scheduling further games with segregated schools.)

The text of SUCE letter to VPI president T. Marshall Hahn can be found on page 7.

SU's Student Government sent a letter to the president of VPI on Oct. 29 censuring the school for its policy of token segregation.

In a letter to Student Government, VPI president T. Marshall Hahn replied that the school was not segregated.

According to Lubetsky, there is only one Negro student enrolled in VPI and less than a dozen Negroes have been graduated in the 13 years since the school was officially desegregated.'

"VPI is a school that represents a calculated tokensim

Board of Trustees Meets

The Syracuse University Board of Trustees will convene at 10 a.m. today in the East Room of the Hotel Syracuse for its semi-annual meeting.

Chancellor William P. Tolley is expected to report to the board on major university developments, with emphasis on the growth of Utica College and Syracuse University Press. Two new trustees are expected to be proposed for board membership.

Four trustees elected at last June's meeting will attend for the first time. They are:

Paul C. Baldwin (SU '36), executive vice president of the Scott Paper Co. of Philadelphia; George S. Dillon (SU '36), president of the Air-Reduction Corp., New York; Paul C. Gouldin (SU School of Law '38), a Binghamton lawyer and lay religious leader; and George H. Lesch, chairman of the board and president of Colgate-Palmolive Co., who received an honorary doctor of laws degree from SU last June.

The trustees are scheduled to preview a color film made at ceremonies opening the Samuel I. Newhouse Communications Center Aug. 5.

Later, the trustees will attend the public dedication of Haven Hall, the $3.18 million women's dorm which opened in September.

The traditional orange ribbon will be cut by Mrs. Huntington B. Crouse (SU '99), for whose late husband the Huntington B. Crouse Hall on campus is named.

The Question Shifts

Student Court has settled the issue in the controversy between the Student Senate and the Association of Women Students, and the legal question must now be replaced with a "moral" question.

We do not deny the right of AWS to formulate its own rules for election of officers; nor do we dispute the now-accepted fact that the Student Senate is powerless to act in this situation.

What we object to now is merely the elections provisions in the AWS by-laws, which we feel are not representative of the best ideals of a democratic society.

This is a job for AWS, and only AWS, and nothing we or the Student Senate says can make them do it. We can only recommend that such changes as envisioned by the Student Senate be made.

The elections provisions as standing, we feel, depend too heavily on screening and nominating commitees, which can lead to domination of the organization by members of the same sororities or interest groups.

While the resort to petitioning to run for office is always open, we still are of the opinion that too much in the process has the potential to be arbitrary and dependent on factors other than competence.

Finale

If our count off the roster is correct, 18 young men will be playing their last football game before a nome crowd in Archbold Stadium Saturday. And for the class of 1965, it will be its last home football game, too.

With few, if any, exceptions, the men playing their last home game Saturday are fine young gentlemen, from co-captains Rich King and Billy Hunter to soft-spoken Walley Mahle to awesome-on-the-field, modest-off-the-field Jim Nance.

To all, we can say "thank you" for giving us three exciting years of football, winning 19 games and losing only nine. It may be the least we can do to afford them some recognition, but the names of the seniors are listed here as tokens of our appreciation:

Tiger at the Gates

Pollster's Delight

By Dan Ritey

As any Syracusan could tell you, the weekly grid polls which rate the variou major collegiate football teams are pretty important. They are barometers that forecast either a cold winter up north or a fair, warm vacation in the sunny southland.

We'd wonder what would happen, though, if our semi-pro administration had to subject itself to a periodic poll based upon its competency and relationship with those it is charged to have at least some interest in.

Not too well, we think. Certainly not as well as several Orange teams of the past (and, we hope, the present) have done for themselves.

We'll start the red-brick building team off in the spring of 1961 and see where things lead us. At that time, the then-and-now dean of women, Marjoire Smith, saw fit to inform the parents of a that their daughters were committing the grossly unpardonable sin of going out with Negro boys.

How the stewardship powers of the dean of women, or even the university's regrettable "inloco parentis' policy could, even by a stretch of the imagination, think that who someone dated -- much less their skin color--could be any of their business or within their jurisdiction is quite beyond belief.

Never-the-less, Dean Smith fearlessly sallied forth in defense of the Caucasian race. With this, we drop the administration team several notches off the top.

Then in the fall of that same glorious year, this city surprisingly enough received a visit from Nobel Prize winner Linus Pauling. Apparently, the distinguished scientist had a spare moment and it was thought that this would hod a spare moment and it be a marvelous opportunity for SU students: a renowned scientist on our campus.

But no, cried the defenders of America-first, apple pie and motherhood. No pinko is speaking at our hallowed institution.

Chop off another few rankings for the missed educational break for us; watch that thinning academic atmosphere.

The next dubious move occurred that spring (1962). A group of students who literally believed that the right to speak and write what one pleased applied even at SU found out how wrong they were. To avoid, then, university pressure and the threat of censorship and or reprisals, they were forced to organize an off-campus magazine.

Since then, the "Sword" has sought to print the truth about the paradise here, and has, for its efforts, been hounded by administrators seeking law suits and seeking to cut off financial aid through pressure on their advertisers.

This display of respect for freedom of expression drops the team even lower.

Our next scene takes place during the spring, summer and fall of 1963. The question of double standards for athletes with reference to discipline arose. A top lineman, whose violation of accepted norms was so gross that any non-athlete doing the same would have long since departed SU, was eased onto a form of disciplinary probation.

Said probation lasted only long enough to see that Piety had an Orange Bowl shot that fall. Off went our hero in a sudden "general amnesty" and the matter was finished.

Our grid ratings fell that weekend when Pitt beat us; falling even faster, though, is the administrator's rating—particularly after its tacit approval of a double standard at SU.

During this unfortunate incident, Dean and SU Vice President Eric Faigle decided to really outdo himself. Reacting to the number of students who actively participated in civil rights demonstrations because they cared, the head of the liberal arts college declared that any further demonstrators would find themselves on disciplinary probation, if arrested.

For this equating of thoughtful students who care about what happends around them with a flagrant violator of any sane code of conduct, we watch Piety's administration team drop even lower.

Not to be outdone by his erstwhile collegue, Dean Charles Holmes raised a stint of his own. In sending around questionnaires to honor students concerning cheating, he managed to code the envelopes so that the student who answered honestly, because he believed the face-value statement that this was an anonymous poll, was actually known to the liberal arts office.

The university's integrity had hit an all-time low at that point; not that one would know from reading the campus newspaper. For not a comment appeared in it save a news story for one day. Down goes the team again.

Somewhat after SU's abortive attempt to play Gestapo, the student government—represented as usual by the legislature—took a stand against the slop passed off to us in the name of food service and bloated profits. Thus was born Litwin's proposed boycott, a daring first if nothing else.

And it was just about nothing else too. Food service and administrative buddy-boys decided to ignore a 42 per cent turnout. And since then we've been witness to what appears to be steady decline in food quality, general service and efficiency; however, we were comforted and cheered with rising board and tuition costs.

This costs the administration team a few more rungs on the ladder of self-respect; look out below.

The end of the spring semester of 1964 saw probably the grimmest of all violations against our rights as students and as people. Deciding that peaceful protest against military training at a liberal arts school was definitely un-American, our revered Chancellor took matters into his own hands—literally.

Striking at the defenseless picketers with an uncommon valor, Chancellor Tolley elected to make the force of his cane overrule and speak louder than the logic of reason and the toleration of views different than one's own.

Since this brilliant stroke was engineered by our team captain, we must demote the whole team quite a few positions toward the bottom of the pile.

And finally we're brought up to the present with the near-unanimous team effort known as the Board of Student Publications constitution. The epistle of creativity and individuality ranks along side the burning of the books and the Inquisition as milestones in the development of freedom of thought.

Summing up this rather unpleasant chain of incidents perpetrated by our enlightened university leadership, we sadly note a lack of student response to these gems. Student leaders, both the governmental and editorial type, have rarely, if ever, let the administration really know how they feel.

Some leaders.

And the university's administration football team? Well, according to our calculations they've slipped completely off all the charts—and into the obscurity which they so well deserve but will not see soon enough for our benefit.

How long can they go?

While this was being written, a frosh friend of ours was reading over our shoulders. About half-way through he asked in an unbelieving voice, "Is this all really true?"

Unfortunately, pal, it is.

WEEKEND

REGENT THEATRE-An allegorical German play, "The Firebugs" will be presented at 8 p.m., today, Saturday and Sunday at the Regent Theatre. Starring Richard Nathan, Donna Nunn, Sam Winters and Frank Morrell, the play's theme relates the passiveness of the German people to World War II. Tickets for the play are available at the Regent Theatre box office for $2 and $1.50.

RKO KIETH'S — They're trying to promote Ann-Margaret as a serious actress. "Kitten with a Whip" shows what she can do in a melodrama. Nothing. She stalks around threatening John Forsythe who merely looks foolish. He should have stayed with "Bachelor Father" and she should keep making remarks of "Bye-Bye Birdie." Co-featured is "Blood on the Arrow," an Indian remake of "Son of Captain Blood." One disappointment. The flick stars Dale Robertson instead of Audie Murphy.

RIVIERA — That man from "Breathless," Jean-Paul Belmondo, stars in "That Man From Rio," this weekend's feature. Belmondo does the Great Chase act in a clever spoof on American chase thrillers. Co-featured is "The Ceremony" starring Lawrence Harvey, Robert Walker, Sarah Miles and John Ireland. "Jean-Rau, sigh" at 10 p.m., "Ceremony" at 8:40 p.m.

"The Firebugs"

by Seth Shapiro

Pyromaniacs of Syracuse, arise! Last night, at the Regent Theatre, a fire was set off. The fire was, however, not a physical one. The flame was that of "The Firebugs" by Max Frisch.

There is great symbolism in this dramatic work, which is an allegory on Hitler's rise. The plot is concerned with a man who gives lodging to two beggers, and then finds that they are firebugs. Though he is frightened, he cannot find the nerve to thrown them out. He is warned of empending doom by a chorus of citizens, but fails to heed. In a final desperate act of "trust' he gives the two men matches.

The characters were well cast and well played.

Richard Nathan and Donna Dunn play the Biedermanns in whose house the firebugs take lodging. Nathan as usual, does a fine job, and Miss Nunn, though only a freshman, does a remarkably fine job.

The two actors who portrayed the firebugs deserve special credit. Frank Morell, as the hulking wrestler, and Sam Winters, as the obnoxious waiter, make their roles credulous and play them with feeling.

Gail Brynes, as the Biedermann's maid played her part with a lot of comedy; this did not, however, detract from the subconscious fright inherent in the role.

The chorus of citizens, infrequent in modern plays, is used to best advantage in "Firebugs." It makes for continuity in places where otherwise the play might falter. Some notables in this chorus are:

Neal Tonkin, who plays the fire chief with a complacency that is frightening and effective.

Allen Williams, as the Ph.D. who helps the firebugs, plays the part in a style that cannot be rivaled.

Florence Dunn and Joel Diamond, as two children who grow up as the play progresses, do much to make evident the changes in time.

The minister, played by Douglas Homer, adds a further touch of realism when he doffs his robes and leaves the town, symbolizing the anti-clerical movement during Hitler's rise.

The firemen, Joe Rassulo, Tom O'Connor and Bob Amsel, were both comic and tragic in their attempts to save the town.

Richard Miller's set is both artistic and functional. The shapes and colors are striking and strangely beautiful.

Audio and aural effects are used to the best advantage. Music, sound effects, smoke bombs and an ingenious "billboard" on which slides documenting the Nazi movement are shown, add further flavor to the production.

One must not forget to give a great deal of credit to the director, David Hamilton. His skill in coordinating all the above factors is what is responsible for the ultimate success of this play.

1st Bar Mitzvah in Chapel

Rabbi's Son Chants Service

By AUDREY LIPPMAN
News Editor

It's a long way to travel from Colorado to Syracuse for a boy to become a man. But this is exactly what Jonathan Eliot Elefant has done.

He will begin his initiation into the manhood of Judaism with the chanting of the Friday evening service at 7 p.m. today in Hendricks Chapel. The occasion is his bar Mitzvah. The event is the first of its kind for the Syracuse University campus in the history of the chapel.

Jonathan, better known as Yankie, a derivation from his Hebrew name Yankle, to his family and friends is the son of the SU Jewish chaplain and director of the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation at Syracuse, Rabbi Milton H. Elefant.

Until August, the Elefant family lived in Boulder, Colo. where the rabbi was Hillel director for the University of Colorado.

The bar mitzvah, which translated from Hebrew means "the son of the commandments," is considered one of the most important steps in the life of a Jewish male. From the day of his bar mitzvah, he will be counted as a part of the necessary quorum (10 men) to hold a religious service.

He will sing the regular Friday Sabbath service today along with the Hillel choir. On Saturday, he will chant the entire Sabbath morning service as well as read his portion of the handwriten scrolls of Jewish Law, known as the Torah.

JONATHAN ELEFANT

He also will read a portion of the book of Prophets. All of the reading and chanting will be done in Hebrew.

During the Saturday service, which will be held at Israel of Syracuse, an orthodox Jewish synagogue on E. Genesee Street, Yankie also will deliver a speech which will relate to an analysis of a problem of Jewish law.

This speech, according to the rabbi, indicates the boy's competence in the Torah and shows his acceptance of the Jewish law. This makes the bar mitzvah a joyous occasion, since an understanding of the Torah is a reason for feasting.

The bar mitzvah traditionally takes place on the first Sabbath of the fourteenth year of a male raised in the Jewish religion. Yankie's birthday according to the Roman calendar is Dec. 4, but his Hebrew birthday is the fourth day of the Jewish month of Kislev, which came this year on Nov. 9. This weekend marks the first Sabbath after his thirteenth birthday, according to the Jewish calendar.

In commenting on this celebration which will begin in Hendricks Chapel, Dean of the chapel Charles C. Noble noted that this was an historic occasion.

"The chapel has been used for all kinds of worship and programming by religious counselors, including office counseling, since it opened in 1930," the dean said.

Many times, the chapel also has served as a meeting place for academic functions, since it is the largest auditorium, seating 1,100, on the campus except Manley Field House, Noble said.

Citizenship classes are itsll being held there because of their large enrollment, while a variety of speakers such as Eleanor Roosevelt, theologian Paul Tillich, and Ross Barnett, governor of Mississippi also have presented lectures in the chapel, the dean said.

Noble said he welcomed the bar mitzvah as another first for the chapel.

The eldest of four boys, Yankie is a seventh grade student in H. W. Smith Junior High School in Syracuse.

The Elefant family is filled with a long tradition of Judaism. There are eight other rabbis in their immediate family, including the fathers of both rabbi and Mrs. Elefant and three brothers on each side.

Mrs. Elefant's youngest brother is now in rabbinical school. All of the rabbis are expected to come to the bar mitzvah. Rabbi Morris Pickholz, president of the Philadelphia Board of Rabbis and Yankie's uncle, will speak at today's service.

The family has extended an open invitation to all Hill students to the bar mitzvah. Mrs. Elefant said since theirs is a campus family, she felt students should certainly be invited to join the family for this event.

Other members of the family include Mayer, 11, Daniel, 9 and David, 7. These boys are looking forward to their bar mitzvah, which they said they hope will also be part of the SU activities.

Rabbi Elefant has been a Hillel director for 17 years. He received his bachelor of arts degree from Yeshiva College in New York City; his masters in psychology was received from the University of Maine, where he was a Hillel director for 11 years. He has credits for a doctorate from the University of Colorado and said he hopes to complete his studies at SU.

Peace Corps Exam Slated

Upperclass Skeptics Need Members; Attendance Low

Upperclass Skeptics Corner, a weekly discussion group, is in danger of dissolution due to falling attendance rates, a spokesman of the organization told the Daily Orange Thursday.

The group meets at 8:30 p.m. on Wednesdays, at 315 Berkeley Dr., and discusses topics such as religion, politics and sex, featuring faculty and administrative speakers.

Guests in the past have included Dr. Warren Walsh, chairman of the history department; Lawrence Schmeckebier, dean of the School of Art; and Dr. Michael O. Sawyer, associate professor of citizenship and political science in the Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs.

Planned for this season are: Dr. David Owen of the English department, the Rev. Charles L. Borgognoni, Roman Catholic chaplain, and Dr. Ralph Galbraith, dean of the College of Engineering.

"There are only a few discussion groups on campus," commented Robert Schuldenfrei. "Losing this one would be losing a big one," he said. Schuldenfrei is a member of Skeptics.

The meetings are open to all students.

The Court Meditates

Student Court justices show their opinion of the case by their expressions while listening to the controversy between the Association of Women Students and the Student Senate over the AWS by-laws. Chief Justice FRANK RICHMOND sits on a podium above the 11 other justices while hearing the case Thursday, Nov. 5.

AWS Wins Court's Favor

"Certain limitations of Student Government, particularly in the legisalture branch, were clarified. It will be our job to remedy these limitations towards a broadening of the goals of Student Government at Syracuse University," he said.

Kathleen Kapsol, special assistant to the senate speaker, argued during the hearing that "in this case, the right to review the constitution of the Association of Women Students also gives to the Student Senate the right to review the by-laws of the association."

The Senate contended that the question of the case was whether or not SS had the power to review the principal body of governing rules of AWS. They said they felt that what these rules were called — constitution or by-laws—was a question of semantics.

"We contend, therefore, that in this case, the by-laws are of such a substantive and critical consequence to the essential structure, organization and administration of the association that they serve as an instrumental part of the principal body of governing rules of the association."

SS argued for the liberal interpretation of article 67 of Robert's Rules of Order, which stated that the constitution should contain only the following: "Name of society, object, qualification of members, officers and their election, meetings of the society, and methods of amending the constitution.'

AWS held that the question of the case was whether SS had the right to review nominating procedures which were part of the by-laws and not the constitution.

"It is our opinion that Student Government must be concerned with the purposes of any student activity and should be able to review the constitution with this in mind," said Diane Kessler, AWS president, who defended the organization.

"However, SG cannot, and should not, have authority over the internal workings of an organization of which it has only superficial knowledge."

AWS argued for strict intrepretation of Robert's Rules of Order which does not specify where nomination procedures are to be written by an organization.

"I feel this was simply a clarification of Student Senates rights at the present time. It cleared up a misunderstanding and established the powers of Student Senate for other organizations who must present their constitutions in the future under the existing legislation," said Miss Kessler.

"As far as nominating procedures go we will be more than glad to do anything to clarify them to women students. If the assembly or any women on campus indicate dissatisfaction over these procedures we will most certainly consider a change," she said.

The five-part SC decision to appear in Monday's Daily Orange also maintained that the senate has the power to approve student organization constitutions and the court had jurisdiction in this case. These two points were not disputed by SS and AWS.

Letter to the Editor

'A Moral Conviction?'

The letter printed below is an expression of opinion by a Syracuse University student who attended the meeting of the Student Senate which approved a letter objecting to alleged racial discrimination policies at Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Saturday's football opponent.

Being a Richmond resident who has a brother who has taken courses from VPI, I cannot be indifferrent to its claim of improved race relations. But having also observed the particular method of exclusion still practiced there, I am sure VPI's president will admit that even futher policy changes must be effected before those Negroes who do not bother to apply will believe that application could result in admittance. But that is in Richmond—what I have to say relates to Syracuse.

Last week at Student Senate it was voted, by slim margin, that a letter explaining SU's policy on athletic competition in regard to segregation be sent to VPI. After listening to discussion of the issue, not all unemotional, I could not avoid wondering about the motivations of some senate members. Did some feel they were doing Negroes her a favor? Was this for some a grand gesture to alleviate a guilt-ridden conscience? Or was this act by SS just an affirmation of a moral conviction of the majority present? What disturbed me most were the representatives who left rather than vote on the issue. Perhaps the Negro committee chairman who left felt that his whole thing did not concern her.

Let me point out some other observations that occured at SU. Last Saturday as I stood watching the Coasters I heard a student end a remark with "..bunch of niggers." When he realized my presence he gave me a smile and a look (of, "oh, there's one here") that I have seen often enough at Syracuse. At times like this I sometimes think of how often I am told to go through rush just to make the sorority girls uncomfortable; or about the white girls who go out with Negores and are stigmatized by some; or the white fellow who dates a Negro girl who must contend with a remark like, "When you're through with that tan chick, how about letting me have her," or the necessity of "member" parties to give SU's Negro population an occasional social outlet.

But I remember, also, the men and women here who are sincere and honest about their feelings and relationships with Negroes; or the head resident who tried diligently not to let her personal prejudice interfere with her job responsibility; or the people who are learning about Negroes from the ones they meet at Syracuse.

So, I have four reasons for being at Syracuse. First, to become competent in my field of study; second, to broaden my knowledge of people, specifically white people; third, to help Syracusans learn about the Negro; and fourth, to develop into a better individual—that entails standing up for myself and my causes, deciding my own values, and looking out for my own welfare.

Some here at Syracuse may feel that the Negro's quest for equality does not affect them. The inevitable rise of truly black nations abroad and the self assertion of the Negro population within the United States will mean a new role for the Negro of the future. If the fact that tomorrow's events are being initiated today means anything to Sue and Joe Syracuse, they may see the relationship of that new role in their future.

Forestry Prof Gives Course

Professor Michael Szwarc of State University of New York College of Forestry is teaching a course in "Free Radicals," in Humble Oil and Refining Company's lectures in science and engineering program, at Baytown, Texas.

A resident professor at the College of Forestry, Szwarc is a graduate of Warsaw Polytechnic and holds a Ph. D. degree in organic chemistry from Hebrew University.

He also holds Ph.D. and D. Sc. degrees in physical chemistry from University of Manchester.

He joined the State University of New York College of Forestry in 1952 as professor of physical and polymer chemistry.

SUCE Sends Note To VPI President

The following is the text of a letter sent to Dr. T. Marshall Hahn, president of Virginia Polytechnic Institute, from Robert Lubetsky, president of the Syracuse University Committee on Equality.

We here at Syracuse University have no absolute standard to determine what constitutes a segregated university. However, because southern states have a higher percentage of Negroes than states elsewhere in the country, one should reasonably expect to find a higher ratio of Negro students to white students at southern universities, such as VPI, unless there is systematic exclusion.

For instance, we feel that the number of Negroes attending Mississippi State University, which is greater than the number attending VPI, is still indicative of either overt or covert segregation.

We applaud the work you say that you have been doing with teachers in segregated Negro high schools. It seems that it would have been equally as commendable for the educators in Virginia, especially those in higher education, to have created an atmosphere such that the Supreme Court decision of 1954 could have been implemented.

The fact that there was no public outcry from the educators in Virginia when the Prince Edward schools were closed several years ago was rather damning. What was perhaps even more damning was the lack of public support received by those who helped to open the schools this past summer.

We are puzzled that after thirteen years of open admissions fewer than a dozen Negroes have attended VPI. This is particularly difficult to understand in light of the fact that there are over 5,000 Negro college students in the state of Virginia and in the past thirteen years there have been well over 25,000 Negro students in Virginia.

Would it not be reasonable to expect that the upper 5% of the Negro students in Virginia would be qualified applicants? Since VPI has such high standards, would it not also be reasonable to evpect at least 200 or 300 students would want to attend VPI, unless, of course, they were unable to? What has happened to all the work that VPI has been putting into improving the segregated Negro high schools? Is one Negro student out of thousands of white students at VPI the answer?

Your open athletic policy seems to be quite peculiar. We assume that VPI, like other universities, participates in some form of athletic recruitment. In a country where hundreds of Negro athletes are produced, are there no qualified Negro athletes in Virginia that you can recruit?

We know that there are qualified Negro athletes in Virginia. When you come here on Saturday you will meet one in an orange and white jersey, a defensive back, Ted Holman.

SUCE to Withdraw

that has characterized southern institutions — academic and non-academic," SUCE's open letter read.

"For them, their one Negro ...insulates them from cries of segregation," the letter reads. "For us, one Negro out of approximately 5,000 Negro students of college age in Virginia represents something that is at best tokenism."

The letter closed with an invitation to all persons "of good will" to join SUCE and refrain from attending the VPI game.

SUCE also sent a letter by registered mail Monday to VPI's president explaining its stand.

New officers of the Liberal Arts Advisory Council for 1964-65 are: Burton Cohen, chairman; Susan Wisan, vice chairman; Rene Rose, secretary; Ted Mysliborski, treasurer.

The Council consists of 16 honor students in the College of Liberal Arts, who act as a liaison between the students and the college administration. Its overall goal is the improvement and strengthening of the Liberal Arts program, according to Cohen.

Tolley Dedicates Haven; New Home of 405 Coeds

Haven Hall, Syracuse University's newest coed residence hall, will be formally dedicated at 3:45 p.m. today.

The $3.18 million structure, occupied in September, houses 405 women students including 160 freshmen, nine head residents and a director. It is tailored to its hillside location on Comstock avenue between Marshall and E. Adams streets.

Chancellor William P. Tolley has invited the general public, alumni and neighbors of the dormitory as well as university personnel and students to attend the ceremonies.

The dormitory was named in honor of the late Rev. Erastus O. Haven, second chancellor of Syracuse, who served from 1874-1890. Tolley has said the naming of the women's dormitory after Haven carries on "the university policy to keep the names of buildings in perpetuity."

The original Haven Hall at University place and University avenue, also a women's dormitory, was demolished in 1963 to make way for the first unit of the Samuel I. Newhouse Communications Center.

The dedication ceremony, to be held at the Marshall street entrance, will include the traditional ribbon-cutting, introduction of guests and music by the Syracuse University Marching Band. A tour of the building and reception will follow. The Rev. Charles C. Noble, dean of Hendricks Chapel, will give the invocation and benediction.

King and King of Syracuse were architects for Haven Hall. Dygert Construction Co., Inc., was general contractor. Prof. Noreda A. Rotunno was landscape architect and Prof. Ralph R. Laidlaw was in charge of interior decoration.

The curved dormitory with attached circular wing, for which ground was broken in March, 1963, is a departure from other dormitory designs at Syracuse. The shape reduces the visual length of double corridors, helping to eliminate "institutional" aspects. All rooms, hallways, and public lounges are carpeted and have acoustical tile ceilings.

The Comstock avenue side has eight floors above ground while the west side has eleven floors. In front of the west side is the two-story circular wing which includes a 400-seat dining hall.

The main entrance is on the first floor of this wing which includes a large lobby, main lounge and recreation room, registration desk, a family room and a reading room. A twelfth-floor penthouse has a lounge-social room with adjacent kitchenette.

A typical floor contains 16 single rooms, 13 divided double rooms, a triple room and a room for the head resident. In the double rooms, a floor-to-ceiling divider with built-in wardrobes provides two semi-private areas. Desks and dressers.

Haven Hall is the fifth new residence hall for women opened in the last 12 years. The others are Robert H. Shaw Dormitory (1952), Haft Cooperative Dormitory (1955), Flint Hall (1956) and Day Hall (1958).

Two of the blind students scholarships by the American Foundation for the Blind this year plan to become professors of mathematics when they've earned their degree.

Methodist Leader To Visit Campus

A widely-known spokesman for the Protestant movement for Christian unity will come to Syracuse University when Dean Joseph W. Matthews of the Ecumenical Institute in Evanston, Ill., speaks Sunday and Monday on the Hill.

He will speak here at 5:30 p.m. Sunday in Hendrick's Chapel. His topis for the dinner program will be "Signs of Life."

Matthews will speak at a luncheon for faculty and ministers on Monday when students will have an opportunity to meet him in small groups, according to the Methodist student Fellowship chaplin, the Rev. Vernon Bigler.

The Ecumenical Institute in Evanston is a center for study and fellowship by laymen and ministers who wish to overcome denominational barriers. It is sponsored by the Church Federation of Greater Chicago.

Matthews, a Methodist clergyman, has served as a pastor military chaplain, educator and lecturer. He founded the Christian Faith-and-Life Community in Austin, Tex., a research and training center for laymen.

The Austin center provides theological education for a series of inter-denominational programs. In-residence studies for university students and courses in the Christian faith for adult laymen, parish ministers and campus chaplains, are given at the community.

Matthews received his bachelor of divinity degree from Drew son, N.J., and studied at Union Theological Seminary, and New York and Yale Universities. He has taught at Perkins School of Theology, Austin, Tex., and Colgate University, in Hamilton.

In his role as leader of the Austin Project, Dr. Matthews has developed new methods of study procedures, and materials for laymen and originated a fresh approach to clergy-laymen cooperation in the local church, Bigler said.

The American Foundation for the Blind has awarded ten social work fellowships of $2,000 to qualified professionals who plan to make their careers in the field of work for the blind.

Publications Board

Porte Requests Revisions

The Board of Student Publications moved into committee Thursday three proposals recommending revisions of the board's constitution.

The proposals, submitted by Andrew Porte, Daily Orange editor-in-chief, concerned clauses in the constitution on removal of editors and staff members, obligatory attendance at board meetings, and academic requirements for editors and business managers.

The first proposal asked for an addition to Article III, section 1 of the document, which allows the board "to remove from office, at any time, any student so elected (and/or) any staff member appointed by any student so elected) when it seemed such action to be necessary to serve the best interests of the university or the publication involved.

Porte proposed an addition to assure that printing of the truth and issuing of fair comment would not be subject to dismissal proceedings. Porte said he felt the only causes for removal should be publication of libel or negligence in office.

The second proposal called for deletion of article III, section 7, which provides the editor or business manager of any publication must appear at a board meeting if requested "on pain of dismissal from their post."

The final proposal recommended elimination of the first sentence of Article VI, section 8, which requires the editor-in-chief and the business manager to maintain a 1.5 cumulative average while in office.

The proposals will be sent to a board committee, to be appointed by board chairman John S. Hafer, dean of personnel administration.

A Scrambler

Tech QB Spells Trouble

As if defending against three outstanding quarterbacks in one season isn't enough, Syracuse University's Spiders will have to contend with a fourth tomorrow—Virginia Tech's Bob Schweickert.

The Orange defense has done a fine job in containing UCLA's Larry Zeno, Pitt's Fred Mazurek, and Army's Rollie Stichweh, but Schweickert poses another problem.

In fact, SU assistant coach Jim Shreve rates the VPI triple-threat star ahead of both Zeno and Mazurek. According to Shreve, "He is at his best on the broken-down play. He scrambles all over the field and has the speed to run away from you."

BOB SCHWEICKERT

The 6-1, 190-pounder led the Gobblers to the Southern Conference title last year and set two SC records in the process, with 839 yards rushing and 1526 yards total offense for the season.

Schweickert was hampered earlier in the 1964 season by a charley horse, a sprained ankle and a sore shoulder, and his sub-standard performance was clearly reflected in Tech's 1-2 mark after its first three games. He had gained only 293 yards on total offense and scored only eight points.

With a healthier Schweickert, the Gobblers have rolled to four remainder of his college career. This means that he will be unable to operate a car or participate in any activities which require personnel clearance. He will not be required to disaffiliate from his fraternity, Richmond said. He noted that the court had to take a student's word on whether or not he intended to steal.

The differences in the penalties imposed were a result of the students' intentions, the court said. The student who was suspended had shown an intent to steal, while the student in the second case claimed that the theft was unintentional.

The other cases handled by Student Court involved two freshmen boys who were charged with "actions unbefitting university students." The action came as the result of a complaint from a motorist who said he had to swerve in the road to prevent being hit by automobile tires which were being hurled from the third floor of a freshman cottage.

The students claimed no intention of disrupting traffic or hurting anyone. They had the tires in their room and dropped them out of the window because they said they were afraid that their resident advisor might discover them.

The student who had rolled the tires out the window was tion for five months. During this time he will be unable to participate in activities requiring personnel clearance, including fraternity rush. He has also been given a 9 p.m. curfew Sunday-Thursday for three months.

The other student, who assisted him in bringing the tires upstairs, was placed on court probation for two and one-half months and given a curfew for the entire period.

It was the belief of the court that the action could have resulted in a serious accident, Richmond said.

Future, Past and Present

The following is the eighth in a series of question and answer sessions between DO junior editor Howard Schneider and coach Ben Schwartzwalder.

Q--What do you think our chances are of going to a post-season bowl and winding up in the top 10?

A—Well, if we beat these next two teams (VPI and West Virginia) bad, and some other folks lose, we've got a fighting chance in both categories. Put it this way: the bowl committees know we're around. Last Saturday several representatives from the Orange Bowl committee watched the game. This week a representative of the Sugar Bowl committee will be in Archbold.

Now it's up to us to look good. Many of these choices are based on relative scores. Unfortunately we've lost one too many. That Oregon State defeat hurt. I'll tell you we'd like to get a crack at Alabama or Texas. That's why we're in this football business.

Q—What play or series of plays was the turning point in Saturday's win over Army?

A—I would have to say the most important factor was our ability to score again in the first half. That scoring drive, with a little more than two minutes. remaining, really gave the boys a lift. In the particular sequence of downs Rich King's two completed passes made the difference. This of course is on the plus side. . .a fumble and a number of penalties were on the minus side. Both of Army's touchdowns were results of our mistakes. You can't forget that there are two teams on a football field.

VITAL DRIVE

Nickerson kicked off to Little at 15, returned 23 yards.
S-1-10(S38)—Nance over left tackle. 11 yards.
S-1-10(S49)—Little pass complete to Clarke, 8 yards.
S-2-2(A43)—Mahle pass incomplete, over Oyer's head at Army 10.
S-3-2(A43)—Nance up middle, 3 yards PENALTY, 5 yards against Army, offsides.
S-2-10(A39)—Mahle pass incomplete, almost intercepted by Seymour. Intended, Oyer.
S-3-10(A39)—Mahle pass intended Elliot, incomplete.
S-4-10(A39)—King pass completed to Clarke, 10 yards. (:47 left)
S1-10(A29)—King pass completed to Oyer over middle, 19 yards. (:37)
S-1-10(A10)—Mahle on keeper around right end, 7 yards. (:28)
S-2-3(A3)—Little pass to Clarke in left end complete. TOUCHDOWN. TIME :22. Smith kicked extra point.

Q—Why did you accept the penalty which gave Army a third and eight situation, rather than a fourth and three?

A—This is just simple mathematics. It's much easier to stop a team for eight yards on two downs than for three in one down. We knew they weren't in a kicking frame of mind. If there was the slightest possibility that they would have kicked we would have obviously refused the penalty. The fact that they did make the yardage, and in one play, does not prove our logic was wrong.

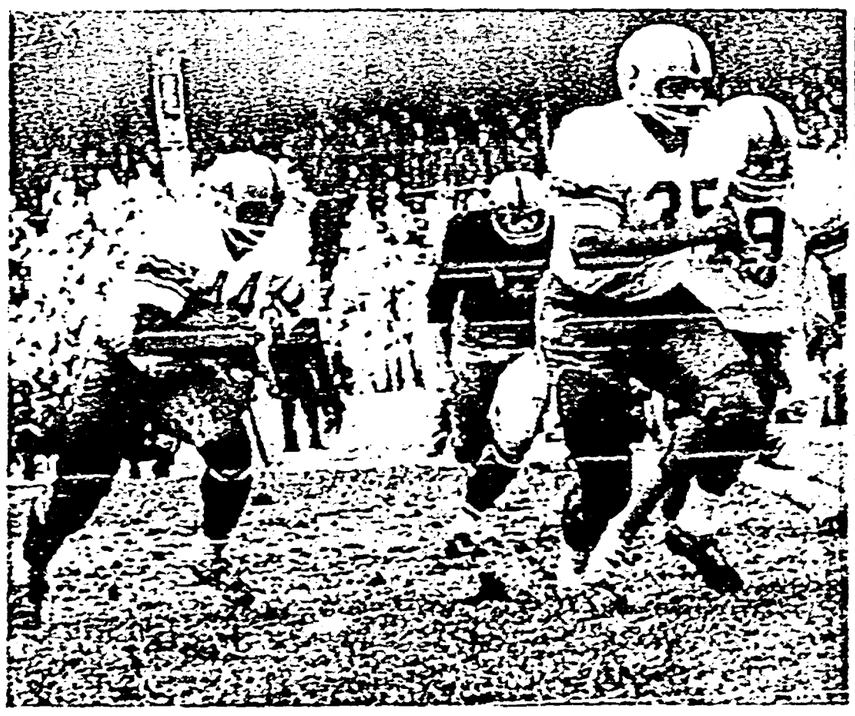
Q—What were the circumstances surrounding Rich King's fumble of a pass from center which resulted in a poor punt and consequently an Army touchdown?

A—The hike was about shoulder high. Normally Rich would have no trouble. However, he was looking directly into the sun and this created the difficulty. If the hike was low he wouldn't have had to look up. We like to keep our hikes low. Sometimes, though, when you try to get the ball back fast it tends to rise too high. Now, you may ask why we didn't consider the sun when we chose to defend the goal. The point is, it works both ways. If we chose the other goal the sun would have been in the eyes of our receivers and punt return men.

Q—When did you decide to use Little's option (run or pass) play more often?

A—We had the play on the books a long time, but we just didn't get around to using it. We didn't have a real good opportunity before the Army game. You don't plan five plays in advance. I've said many times before that you have to take what the defense gives you.

We used more new stuff against Army, although it might not have been apparent, than we did in any other game. For the first time we used a three-way option. In this case Mahle would put the ball in Nance's stomach and have the option of letting Jim keep it, or pulling it out and keeping it, or pulling it out and pitching. I would say, however, that we didn't have the opportunity to use one-third of the new plays we had planned.



Floyd and Blockers

Hill whiz kid FLOYD LITTLE rambles to the outside against Army, with JIM NANCE (35) and WALLEY MAHLE (19) providing the interference. Trailing the play is Cadet defensive end TOM SCHWARTZ (84). Little gained 58 yards rushing, scored a touchdown and threw a pass for another score.

SU Prominent in Statistics

Syracuse might be having trouble making the top ten teamwise but when it comes to statistics they are ranked with the leaders.

The Orangemen's total defense is the third best in the country allowing 162.4 yards per game while its rushing defense is fifth best in the country with a 74.8 average.

The first team in total defense is undefeated and fourth ranked Nebraska while Notre Dame, the nation's top ranked team, has the best rushing defense.

Individually Jim "Bo" Nance is the fifth best rusher in the country with 692 yards to his credit. His running mate Floyd Little is 20th with 577 yards.

Brien Piccolo, Wake Forest's big fullback, is the top running back in the country. He is also Nance's chief competition for All-American honors.

Piccolo is also the highest collegiate scorer in the nation leading both Nance and Little who are fifth with 60 points each. Piccolo has raked up 77 points.

In offensive rushing the Orangemen are fifth in the country averaging 235 yards a game.

Scoring-wise Syracuse is ninth in the country with a 25.9 point average per game.

LACROSSE GAME AT ARCHBOLD

Syracuse University will be the site of the 24th annual North-South Intercollegiate Lacrosse game, it was announced yesterday by George Shiebler, president of the Intercollegiate Lacrosse Association. The game will be played in Archbold Stadium June 12, 1965.

Scholarship Goes to Forester

Plenty of Cadets

Orange fullback JIM NANCE encounters a corps of Cadets in Saturday's game at Yankee Stadium. But Bo eluded the would-be tacklers and romped for another eight yards before being hauled down. Trying for the tackle are DON DIETZ (37) and PETE BRAUN (50), among others. SU won, 27-15.

Schweickert Stars

victories in their last five outings, including a 20-11 upset of previously unbeaten Florida State. In those games the Tech quarterback has accounted for 804 yards, run for five touchdowns and passed for seven.

The threat which Schweickert, who also does the VPI punting, poses is recognized by coach Ben Schwartzwalder. With Murray Johnson out with a broken collarbone, Ben's efforts to find a third linebacker to spell Jim Cheyunski and Terry Roe have been spurred.

"We can't go against a rollout guy like Schweickert with just Cheyunski and Roe," says Schwartzwalder.

Schweickert has not been overlooked by professional scouts, either. There's a good chance he'll make it with the pros, but not necessarily as quarterback."He's quick enough to play in a pro defensive backfield, and he also has strong enough hands to try a flanker position," says one scout.

The Spiders would do best, however, to heed the warning of Jim Camp, coach at George Washington: "It's easy to stop Tech. All you have to do is contain Schweickert's sprintouts, stop Schweickert's passes and keep Schweickert from punting deep into your territory."

Orange Scout Tops Pickers

The disappointing Orange Scout redeemed himself by capturing last week's Daily Orange grid poll, picking seven of 10 games. The Scout remained in last place in the overall standings, though, with two weeks remaining.

Meanwhile, Sports Publicity, heading for "head soothsayer" honors for the season, tabbed six winners to cement its hold on first place.

The DO and WAER radio, battling for second in seasonal standings, deadlocked for last with 5-5 marks.

For the years, Publicity boas a 51-16 (76.1 per cent) ticket. They lead second place DO, 44-23 (65.6 per cent) by seven games. Still fighting for second, WAER has tallied 43-24 (64.0 per cent) and the Orange Scout stands 42-25 (62.6 per cent.).

Orangemen, VPI Ready to Tangle

All-America Bob Schweickert Seeks to Spoil Bowl Hopes

By JIM KLURFELD

Virginia Tech travels North to Archbold Stadium tomorrow afternoon with hopes of preventing Syracuse from going South.

The game, the last home appearance for the 1964 Orangemen, will start at 1:30 p.m.

It will mark the last time such stars as Jim Nance, Walley Mahle, Billy Hunter, Gerry Everling, Paul Houle, Brad Clarke, Jim Cripps, Rich King and a host of other seniors will wear the Orange in Archbold Stadium.

VPI, 5-3, has won its last three games, including a major upset over then 10th ranked Florida State. With All-America quarterback Bob Schweickert running, throwing and kicking, the Gobblers would like nothing better than to ruin Syracuse's hopes for a New Year's Day bowl bid.

Ben Schwartzwalder's Orangemen, 6-2, after a victory over Army last week, have been mentioned by the Orange Bowl, Sugar Bowl and Gator Bowl selection committees.

But Schwartzwalder is more worried about VPI than any bowl bids at this stage. "This is no rinky-dink outfit," the Hill coach warned. "They have a well-coached football team that doesn't make many errors."

VPI is a small team, averaging 188 pounds on the offensive line, but it moves the ball well and Schweickert is particulary effective on third down situations.

Defensively, though, the Gobblers are not as powerful. Their line averages only 191 pounds and Syracuse scout Jim Shreve has indicated that "they will give you a few yards."

The game is likely to turn into a battle between SU's Mr. Inside-Outside, Jim Nance and Floyd Little, and Schweickert.

Between them, Nance and Little have gained 1,269 yards, a new Syracuse record. The old mark was 1,267 set by Art Baker and the late Ernie Davis in 1960.

Evaluating VPI, Shreve said that though they were small they were hard-nosed. "Injuries and bad breaks," Shreve explained, "have hurt this team. They easily could be 7-1."

Last Saturday the Gobblers beat North Carolina State, 28-19.

Schwartzwalder, who gained his 100th victory since arriving on The Hill against Army, felt the Orangemen played their best game of the season in Yankee Stadium.

But this week he has had to find a replacement for sophomore linebacker Murray Johnson, who broke his collarbone against the Cadets.

The coach will probably start Jim Cheyunski and Terry Roe at corner linebackers and Bob Morgan at middle linebacker.

MURRAY JOHNSON
. . . out for season

Schweickert expressed concern about the left tackle spot. Dave Archer has been bothered by a charley horse and is not slated to start. Instead Joe Dziekonski will open the game at left tackle, John Kronk at right tackle, and Gerry Everling at middle guard.

Aside from Schweickert, VPI has an explosive running fullback in Sonny Utz, a 5-11, 225-pound senior who, Gobbler coach Jerry Claiborne said, "has cracked four helmets this season."

Schweickert's favorite target, Tommy Marvin, a 6-0 senior, should give the Orange secondary a real test. Claiborne said that he has fine hands and good moves. Marvin has been Virginia Tech's leading pass receiver for the past two years.

Much like UCLA, VPI uses a wide open offensive giving Schweickert room to operate. On occasion they employ the shot-gun formatiin.

Schwartzwalder said the he had added many new offensive wrinkles for the Army game that were never used, but indicated they would be used against VPI.

In the past two years, Syracuse has played two teams from the Southern Conference—George Washington and Richmond, and neither scored a point. George Washington lost, 35-0 and Richmond, 50-0.

But Virginia Tech is considered a much stronger team than the other two and they have overcome superior sized teams many times this season.

This is an optimistic team," Shreve said, "You can't make a mistake against them because they will capitalize on it. And they don't make mistakes."

LITTLE NAMED SOPH-OF-WEEK

Incredible Orange halfback Floyd Little again was tapped as Eastern College Athletic Conference soph-of-the-week for his play against Army Saturday. This marked the fourth time this season that Little had been selected All-East.

VPI Defensive Ace

Junior linebacker KEN WHITLEY, a compact 5-8, 206 pounder, will make running up the middle plenty tough for the Orangemen Saturday. The Gobbler defender has turned in several sparkling performances this season. Whitley is also a champion wrestler and baseball star.

Low AND Inside

By BILL CRONAUER

All-American candidate Bobby Schweickert will enter ancient Archbold Stadium tomorrow for the first time. He may not realize just what he's getting into.

Schweickert will be the third top-notch quarterback to appear on Archbold sod this fall.

The first was UCLA's Larry Zeno, who at that time stood as the national leader in total offense with 646 yards gained rushing and passing in three weeks.

In Archbold he wound up with a sum total of nine. Zeno could throw for a mere 24 yards, while being dropped for 15 yards in rushing losses.

Next on the local scene was one Fred Mazurek, a Panther who had torn the Orangemen apart down in Pitt Stadium the year before, completing 13 of 21 passes for 136 yards and rushing for 119 more.

But this time out Mr. Mazurek was as tame as a kitten. He rushed 15 times. . .and gained all of 10 yards. He passed seven times. . .and ended up with two short completions and an interception.

The third visiting general this season was Kansas' Steve Renko, who didn't fare much better than the others. He managed on five of 11 tosses — the only trouble was that a pair of them were nabbed by the Orange men.

And many Hill upperclassmen will recall Jolly Roger Staubach's experiences in Archbold a couple of years back. The Heisman Trophy winner-to-be sat on the field most of the afternoon as his Middies bowed to the powerful Orangemen, 34-6.

Of course, Schweickert isn't Zeno, Mazurek, Renko or Staubach. He's Bob Schweickert, all-America candidate from Virginia Tech.

"Schweickert's as good as Mazurek and Zeno," states Hill coach Jim Shreve. "He's a better passer than either and just as good a runner. Then, of course, he can kick, too."

It's pretty obvious that battle-scarred Archbold no place for big-name quarterbacks.

But Bob Schweickert probably isn't too worried. Of course, he's never been there. . .yet.

Off and Running

Syracuse's JIM (BO) NANCE seeks running room in Saturday's game against Virginia Tech at Archbold Stadium. Attempting an ankle tackle is Tech halfback DARRELL PAGE. Nance contributed 96 yards rushing to the Orange attack, while catching a pair of passes for another 23 yards. SU won, 20-15.

King-to-Elliott Pass Produces Victory; Bowl Bid Probable

By BILL CRONAUER

Nothing seemed to be going right for the Orangemen of Syracuse.

Virginia Tech's supposedly passive Gobblers were on the warpath. Overeager game officials were having a field day with their whistles. Sugar Bowl representatives glared from the press box. Precious seconds ticked off the clock.

The battle was almost over. The enemy had almost won.

So former paratrooper Ben Schwartzwalder decided to call on his air reserves and senior signal caller Rich King, playing his final game in Archbold Stadium, took command.

With 1:26 remaining and the ball resting on the Orange 47, King fired an eight-yard completion to end Harris Elliott, who up to that point boasted a sum total of one catch for the season.

The waiting game continues at Syracuse in regard to a possible Sugar Bowl bid. With Alabama and Texas set for the Orange Bowl and Arkansas and Nebraska the probable Cotton Bowl selections, the door is open for a New Year's Day game at New Orleans between SU and Louisiana State.

Monk Simon, president of the Sugar Bowl selection commitee, said Sunday morning that "we're very much interested in Syracuse. Saturday's game was extremely exciting."

King threw again and Elliott received again, this time for 16 yards and a first down on the Tech 29. The Hill quarterback then hit lanky Brad Clarke for

IFC Thumps ZBT Hazing

By DAVID SOSNA

The stiff arm of the InterFraternity Council Judicial Board reached out last week and struck Zeta Beta Tau fraternity with social and disciplinary probation, $250 in fines, and the near loss of rushing and pledging privileges.

The court declared the fraternity had subjected an upperclass pledge to "extreme physical harrassment," according to Donald Thorn, chief justice, and sentenced it to:

1. Social probation until fall, 1965, defined by the court as complete exclusion from social activities with the exception of one spring formal dance and participation in Greek Week;

2. Indefinite disciplinary probation with a spring review before the board, defined by the court as a warning that would require removal of the house's national affiliation if any other violation occurs within the probation period;

3. Rushing probation, defined by the court as a denial of the house's right to take a pledge class in the spring (suspended in a 4-3 decision);

4. Denial of the house's right to initiate its spring pledge class until fall, 1965;

5. A $200 fine, the maximum fine the court can levy, as an additional punitive measure;

6. A $50 fine for perjury, considered by the court as a separate case, arising out of the house's lack of cooperation in the original trial;

7. A letter from the dean of men, Jim G. Carleton, to the fraternity's national organization stating that the house's pledging procedures "leave much to be desired;"

8. Unlimited campus and community service, defined by the court as an obligation by the fraternity to perform whatever services the dean of men's office deems desirable.

It was revealed in the testimony before the court that a pledge had been subjected to beatings with broom handles and, according to the pledge and testimony from the dean of men's office, a wire brush.

The boy's injuries were discovered by his resident advisor

Tolley Announces Grants, Gift at Trustee Meeting

Two grants, totaling $1 million, and a collection of rare books and manuscripts valued at $1.25 million, have been donated to Syracuse University, Chancellor William P. Tolley anounced at the semi-annual meeting of the Board of Trustees Friday.

In his report, Tolley also stressed the cooperative efforts of the city of Syracuse, Syracuse University and private groups and individuals in developing plans to improve the university city neighborhood.

In addition, he cited the growth of Utica College and the Syracuse University Press as "truly remarkable."

One of the grants included a gift for $600,000 for a chair in engineering, scholarships for pre-medical students and special assistance for engineering students working for their doctorates.

The remaining $400,000, in the form of a "gift of paintings and estate" was earmarked to provide scholarships in the field of music.

The million dollar donation brings the Syracuse Plan for $33,000,000 in gifts and pledges, according to Newell W. Rossman, vice president for development.

The donors, both from the New York metropolitan area, expressed a wish to remain anonymous.

The book collection, totaling some 48,000 items, belonged to John S. Mayfield, curator of rare books and manuscripts at SU.

Upn the completion of the new university library the Mayfield collection will have a special place, the Chancellor said.

Highlights of the collection include 48,000 first editions, privately printed works, autographed works, manuscripts, letters, and documents, original oil paintings and books with unusual bindings.

Among them are the works of Swinburne, O. Henry, Sidney Lanier, Lord Byron, George Bernard Shaw, Robert Browning, Walt Whitman, F. Scott Fitzgerald and others.

Frosh to 'Rock' At Weekend Fest

Del Shannon, the Tymes and the Headliners will highlight "Fructus," the freshman class sponsored weekend Dec. 11-13 in the kick-off concert, Jeffery Lovelace and Peter Jeffer, chairmen of the weekend, have announed.

"Fructus," the Latin term for good time and pleasure is the title of the weekend, which will be celebrated in Roman terms and style.

The concert, scheduled for Friday, Dec. 11, will be held in the Women's Bldg.

A freshman class show, entitled "A Funny Thing Happened...," will be held Saturday in Crouse College Auditorium. Peter Lee, head of the show committee, has said that auditions for all freshman will be announced soon.

Immediately following the freshman show a slave sale will be held. Students and members of the faculty and administration will be auctioned off for a few hours of the afternoon to the highest bidders.

The feature of Saturday evening wil be an informal dance, to be held in Graham dining hall on the Mount. Queen of the weekend, selected from freshman applicants, will be named at the dance.

Only freshman may be entered in the competition, but living centers of all classes may nominate coeds, according to John Britz, queen committee chairman. Applications are due at 5 p.m. Wednesday at the Women's Bldg.

Tickets for all events will be available at Huntington B. Crouse Hall beginning next week.

Prices of tickets and definite times of all activities will be announced at a later date.

Weaver to Speak On City Problems

Robert C. Weaver will be the guest speaker at a freshman citizenship lecture at 8 p.m. Tuesday in Hendricks Chapel.

Appointed by the late John F. Kennedy in 1960 as administrator of the federal Housing and Home Finance Agency, Weaver will speak on "Problems of the American City."

He had been scheduled to be the first of last year's speakers for the spring lecture series but was unable to come to Syracuse at the time.

Graduated from Harvard in 1921, Weaver received his masters degree in 1931 and doctorate in 1934 from the same institution.

Weaver served as advisor of Negro affairs to the Department of the Interior from 1933-37.

He is the author of "Negro Labor," "The Negro Ghetto" and "A National Problem." The lecture is open to the public.

The Other Wasteland

Perhaps the floods in Viet Nam will take the peoples' minds off fighting and on to the more important purpose of draining the land.

And perhaps that will also mean an end to American soldiers being needlessly sacrificed in the war-that-is-not-a-war.

This is the conflict Americans are fighting for the South Vietnamese, but it is also the fight that cannot be won, for it is a fight of sheer defense and not of intended victory.

Where there is no offense, there can be no victory. When the aim is not victory, there is no purpose in fighting. The result of Viet Nam's useless battles has been the loss of American lives as the Communists press down still further.

The American policy is clearly not one of victory, for no offense has been launched. It is merely one of aiding the South Vietnamese contain the North Vietnamese, a tactic which has failed to work elsewhere in the world and seems doomed to failure there.

The question remains if Viet Nam is worth the battle. The answer is yes. Any and all people are worth saving from the throes of communism, but the action to save these people must be positive and not passive.

If Korea was desolate, then Viet Nam is void. These battles for the lives of others must not continue to take their toll in American lives if there is really no positive approach to resolving the conflict, be it militarily or over the bargaining table.

Something must change. The United States must alter its policy to aim it towards victory, if it is to remain a military encounter. If no policy is changed, then Uncle Sam should pack up his bags and leave, for Viet Nam is not worth that many American lives.

There won't be anyone left to live in Lyndon Johnson's "Great Society" if American soldiers continue to be easy prey for snipers in a jungle wasteland.

Bull by the Horns

Existence

By Rich Turner

At leaast once in your life you push back the gilded curtain which enshrouds your world and look straight into the darkness that really surrounds you.

Last year I went to New York City with two suitcases, my "duffer" coat and a plane ticket to Germany. For the first two weeks I stayed at the Sloan House, and after getting tired of the screaming at night and the drunks with the d.t.'s being carried out of the room next door, I decided to move.

For the next three days I slept on a couch at Fordham. A friend told the cleaning woman I was Father Turner on vacation. She didn't believe me, but I told her I was Irish, so she let me stay.

But that couldn't go on forever. So while I looked for an apartment (I'd cashed in my plane ticket), I decided to stay at a student hospice.

This hospice is between Avenue C and D on the lower East Side. Compared to this area, the Ward looks like Scarsdale.

The first night I got picked up by a would-be actress in the village. She took me to an after hours place up on 73rd and Lexington, and after two drinks turned around and butted her cigarette out in my face. That took care of the first night.

The next night I'd come back early and was sitting around reading "A Separate Peace," when the Danish kid who slept across the room started talking.

"Don't you think this place is funny?" he said in a high-pitched voice.

"Yeah, it seemed to be." (with all those guys who say they go to Princeton and Yale and are writing movie scripts, I had begun to wonder).

"The man wants me to go to 42nd Street and make some money."

I felt like puking, but I told him he didn't want to go there. I said I'd help him find another place to stay.

Just then the character who ran the place stepped through the door and told us to leave immediately.

We were walking around the lower East Side looking for a cab at 2:30 in the morning (that's about as profitable as sending letters to VPI) when I asked him a question which had been bothering me for the last few minutes.

"You aren't queer, are you?"

"Well, I don't know. I like boys and I like girls."

I hastily excused myself and started walking in the opposite direction. Being alone was bad, but there are a lot of things much worse.

How far away was Cosmo's Pizza Shop, the mount at curfew and HBC. It seemed like a million miles.

Life had become more than a date for Saturday night or a C in Fine Arts. It had become a struggle for mere existence.

LETTERS

Panhellenic

To the Editor:

Your editorial of November 6th, "A Step Into the Past," is a masterpiece of distortion, mis-information, and journalistic irresponsibility. It is disturbing that you would make such accusations and outrageously false statements without first being fully certain of your information.

I do not know what "item in the paper" recently said that Panhellenic is voting on whether to return to plan rush. You have been seriously misinformed. You have unjustly accused Panhellenic of a proposal that was never made. The record must be cleared!

Panhellenic did not propose a return to plan rush, and there is no intention of doing so! Panhellenic indeed has a "vital role in helping to eliminate prejudice in the system and the community." We recognize this responsibility!

As for your suggestion to re-examine our rush system, we have been doing just that. Many members of Panhellenic feel there is room for changes and improvements in our present rush procedures. We have examined the fraternity rush system. We have decided that it is not applicable to our sorority structure, as we feel it should be.

The "proposal" Panhellenic made to revise rush was to have some form of sorority open house in the fall semester. A meeting of sorority rush chairmen was held to discuss this proposal. During that meeting someone did mention plan rushing, much to the astonishment of myself and several other Panhel Exec Council members who were present. Although plan rush is definitely a thing of the past and was abolished last year, discussion about it did follow. However, I reiterate, plan rush was not proposed, no motion to that effect was made, and no vote will be taken. The Panhellenic Rush Chairman who was chairing this meeting asked the girls present to take back to their chapters the many points discussed that night, that a consensus of sorority opinion might be reached. Plan rushing thus may have been discussed in some chapter meetings, but it had never been proposed.

A meeting of chapter presidents and rush chairmen was held the following week. The Panhellenic proposal to have sorority open houses this fall was rejected. Seven houses voted in favor of revising our present rush system to include fall open houses; seventeen houses voted to keep rush as it was last year.

Although many of us were disappointed at the reluctance to make major revisions in our rush now, we nevertheless realize that change is slow. Some have accused Panhellenic this year of trying to move too fast, of changing and moving forward too quickly. That the rush revisions were not passed by the chapter delegates would perhaps give you reason to say that Panhellenic is not progressive enough right now. But to say that Panhellenic is taking a backward step into the past and is rekindling the fires of prejudice that have plagued the past is a wholly false and unjust accusation.

I can only reiterate the recent suggestion of another reader: "In the future it might be to your advantage to investigate the facts before you so blatantly present opinions to your readers!"

Seeing as how Miss Rast has chosen to interpret the editorial in question as directed as a slap the Panhellenic Association rather than advice to the individual women composing the organization, we would also like to further suggest that Panhellenic take sincere strides to improve its internal communications system, which, apparently failed here, as girls in a number of sororities thought they were voting on whether to return to plan rush.—Editor

Narcotics: Need a Fix, Man?

by Bill Newman

Last week, as I sat at my desk attempting to pound out a column worth reading, my radio beamed out some sad news, for those of us who follow jazz. Jazz singer, pianist, saxophonist, Ray Charles has been arrested for the umpteenth time, on the charge of illegal possession of narcotics.

Is Ray Charles guilty of a crime? In our legal system yes, but our legal system has been far from just in many notable cases. For those of you with narrow provincial minds, I present the shocking fact that narcotics is not a crime but a disease, and should be treated as such. America is far behind in this field. Our governmental progenitor, England uses a system in which the drug addict, after medical examination and supervision, is allowed to use narcotics.

As a social phenomena, the British system has definite advantages. The vast amounts of murders, muggings and theft done by the addict who cannot financially afford his habit it is eliminated. In California, a group, primarily concerned with this problem as it exists in the musician population, tried an out-patient clinic approach. "Synanon' was highly successful. Many patients were cured while those who weren't cured were known to the proper authorities. The crime element was eliminated. Synanon seems to have fallen on deaf governmental ears in the United States.

Narcotics is a problem in every social group in this country because no group is immune to such illness. Musicians are no exception.

Nothing burns me more than to hear the remark "he can really play, he must have a monkey on his back to get such inspiration." Most musicians do not use dope. Fact it that our doctors (that great dignified, educated, status group in American society) show the highest percentage of dope addicts than any other single segement of our society. Obviously their access and exposure to dope is the greatest.

Outstanding in the record of injustice done the jazz musician concerning the narcotics question, is the policy of the New York City Police Dept. No musician can play a club in that fair city without a Cabaret Card. Any offence on one's record of any type prevents the issuance of this permit to work. Why should jazz musicians have to be fingerprinted in order to work. Why not fingerprint plumbers, salesmen and lawyers too?

Who can forget the night Miles Davis was clubbed by some prejudiced, stupid New York cop as he tried to enter a club to work. The rationale was that he was Negro and a jazz musician (he was carrying his trumpet). How about the harrasment given J. J. Johnson on the dope bit by New York's finest? Jay is probably the cleanest family man in the jazz field.

Jazz has lost several good men to the injustice of the American system and unfortunately the press and mass media have supported the idea that these men are the rule in jazz. These cats can't play from behind bars nor can they be cured by being thrown in a tank for life.

I'll make my case clear. The present system is nothing but an expensive social malfactor. Narcotics addiction is an illness not a crime. It is the American approach to this problem which constitutes a criminal act against society.

The jazz musician is not the prime or major user of drugs nor does he need drugs for inspiration. I suggest that you look into the man and his music before you look for his needle marks.

Loew's State To Present Fledermaus

Lowe's State Theatre will be Syracuse's answer to the New York Met (opera, not baseball) at 8:30 p.m. on Tuesday, November 17, when it will present "Die Fledermaus" by Johann Strauss. The New York City Center Opera Company is being imported with its full symphony, costumes, soloists and Broadway staging.

For the role of Rosalinda, the City Center has selected Beverly Sills, their leading soprano. Miss Sills appeared in Syracuse four years ago, in the opera, "The Ballad of Baby Doe." Since that date she has sung leading roles in most of the City Central productions.

John Stamford, baritone at Lincoln Philharmonic Center this season, after touring Rome and Lisbon in his roles in "Faust" and "La Traviata," will play the part of Eisenstein. Also cast have been Spira Malas, Enzo Litarelli, William Ledbetter, and Coley Worth.

Tickets for the opera, available at the Famous Artists Office in the Clark Music Building, are priced at $4.80, $4.00, $3.60, and $3.00.

Nickel Theatre

The fourth production of Nickel Theatre will present two one-acters by Tennessee Williams and William Inge.

The plays will be given at 4 p.m. today in the Boar's Head Theatre.

Judy DiRienzo will direct William's "This Property is Condemned." The play concerns the struggle of a young boy and girl who strive to create a make-believe world for themselves amid the realities of a harsh society.

Inge's "Glory in the Flower," a character portrait, will be directed by Joan Artsis.

Nickel Theatre is under the supervision of Dr. Joseph Golden, professor of drama. Admission price for the Williams and Inge plays are a nickel. Coffee is an additional five cents.

Crossroads

African Projects Planned

Graduates and undergraduates may have the chance not only to see Africa this summer, but also to share in its development.

Operations Crossroads Africa is a summer program which allows students to participate in a work project in one of 20 African countries.

The projects are in the northeast, central and western parts of Africa.

The students spend the majority of their time living, studying and working in rural areas, giving them an opportunity to study the ways of the people.

Each project is joined by an equal number of African students. The projects center on building schools and hospitals. The program is financed by private and voluntary organizations. Students pay approximately 25 per cent of their expenses.

The next meeting of Operations Crossroads will be at 4 p.m. Tuesday, in the Colonial Room of Hendricks Chapel. Ways and means to finance students will be discussed.

Students interested but unable to come, should contact Mrs. Carol Bullard, Hendricks Chapel, ext. 3237, for further information.

Largest county farm bureau in New York State is Long Island with 721 members, closely followed by Erie with 659 members.

Apple Polishing

With midterm exams around us what better time to do a little apple polishing than right now. So that's just what the sisters of Phi Sigma Sigma sorority did.

About 30 faculty members gathered at the chapter house Thursday for the annual Phi Sig "Apple Polishing" festivities. Halfway through the informal get-together, they were treated to "The Phi Sig Follies," a musical review of student traumas.

Refreshments topped off the evening. The favorite dish?—brownies, of course.

and letters of Mayfield's late father, Earle B. Mayfield, United States Senator. The political career of President Lyndon B. Johnson is traced in letters between Sen. Mayfield and the President.

Tolley also devoted a major protion of his report to a General Neighborhood Renewal Plan grant from the federal government. The grant, to the city of Syracuse, is for $223,175 for the development of the plan.

In addition, $8,645,000 has been reserved for the first of four urban renewal projects in the univerity city neighborhood near the campus.

Tolley noted the expansion of Utica College and the SU Press in his address. Since its founding in 1946, he said, Utica College, a branch of the university, has grown to a student population of nearly 3,000 and a physical plant of more than $5 million.

The Chancellor paid particular tribute to the Syracuse University Press which he said has had "an excellent year" under its director, Richard Underwood.

In the past year, he added, the number of titles increased from 37 to 47 and that books it published were sold in all 50 states and 42 countries, carrying the name of the university throughout the world.

Students: Dial GR6-5571

A Syracuse resident whose telephone number is similar to that of a university extension has complained of receiving calls for a Hill dormitory, according to Mrs. Muriel Day, switchboard supervisor.

Mrs. Day requested that students dialing a university extension from an outside telephone call GR 6-5571, the university exchange, and then ask for the extension.

Students calling from a university extension may dial the extension directly.

Wants Protection in South

SUCE Writes President

The Syracuse University Committee on Equality recently sent a letter to President Lyndon B. Johnson urging more active "federal police protection and preventative action" in Mississippi, the scene of much racial violence this past summer.

The committee, some of whose members have been actively involved in Southern civil rights activity wrote the President:

"We feel that it is imperative that you use your executive power to halt the terroristic situation in McComb, Miss., and the surrounding area.'

The committee, which now has two members in Mississippi, continued, "From our own experience and reports, we believe more federal police protection and preventive action is needed if senseless deaths are to be averted."

The SUCE letter pointed out that the national publicity focused on Mississippi during the Summer project has lessened considerably, and that it is even more necessary that proteection be provided for the pro-civil rights residents of the state.

SUCE stated, "We feel that it would be a great indictment of democracy if further deaths result from a peaceful struggle to gain equlity and freedom. We do not think the price of liberty is martyrdom.

"Our hope," said the letter, "is that you will consider our plea for action, along with other warnings of the present danger which you have received, as the earnest appeal of citizens who wish that all, without favor or prejudice, may share in he basic rights guaranteed in the Constitution of the United States."

Hill Department Changes Name

The mechanical engineering department of the Syracuse University College of Engineering has changed its name to the Department of Mechanical and Aerospace Engineering.

Ralph A. Galbraith, dean of the college and acting chairman of the department, said the engineering college has offered an aeronautical engineering option to students in mechanical engineering for some time, but a modified and changed curriculum in the department has now put more emphasis on the "aero" sequence.

Students in the department may take courses in design and propulsion of space vehicles and in other areas directly involved with manned and unmanned spacecraft, he said.

Sodium restricted (low salt) diets, sometimes prescribed for people with high blood pressure, can be tastier if the cook learns to use spices, herbs and lemon juice with a flourish, says your Heart Association of Onondaga County.

Seniors Designate Committee Heads

Activities for the senior class executive council have been set into motion by the selection of committee heads.

Fresh ideas have sparked the initiation of several new committees. Susan Bender and Sandra Peworchik will guide the formation of class day, tentatively planned for spring, which will be one day devoted entirely to the senior class.

The senior magazine, to be published by Susan Wilkes and Judith Danz, will sum up, in pamphlet form highlights of the past four years.

A newsletter which will be distributed at various points on campus will inform the rest of the university about the activities of the senior executive council. It will be wirtten by Marjorie Giegold.

Joan Silberfeld and Lawrence Williams will be in charge of awarding a class gift while Anne Shuart and Alan Heifetz will handle alumni contact for the seniors.

Details for the annual Senior Ball will be coordinated by Taunya Lovell, Merrill Post and Paul Derounian. Jane DeLara and Edward Vincent are publicity chairmen for the class.

The senior exec council has already launched several fund raising campaigns including the sale of freshman beanies and buttons in conjunction with Orange Key during orientation week. They also sold Mums and "I am a Father" buttons on Parents' Weekend.

According to President Robert Harrison, "The sale of mums and buttons was a huge success. The Class of '65 sold more mums than any other class in history."

Plans have already started for the Senior Ball.

Wallace Given Forestry Aid

The Harold L. Austin Memorial Scholarsip has been awarded to Barclay W. Wallace, 21, a junior studying pulp and paper technology in the College of Forestry.

Wallace was awarded the $500 scholarship by Dr. Hardy L. Shirley, dean of the college, at a special presentation ceremony.

The Harold L. Austin Memorial Scholarship, sponsored by the Empire State Paper Assn., is made possible by an annual gift by Arthur C. Austin, whose father was president of the association.

AWS vs. SS Majority Opinion

The following is the text of the majority opinion in the case of the Association of Women Students v. Student Senate, heard and decided by Student Court in favor of AWS. The opinion was written by justices Walter Beardslee and Douglas Bryman. Two dissenting opinions in the case will be published later this week.

Questions and decisions:

1. Is question justiciable? 10 yes, 1 abstention.
2. Can Student Senate review constitutions? 9 yes, 2 no.
3. Can Student Senate require inclusion of nominating procedures and officer eligibility requirements in constitutions? 6 no, 3 yes, 2 abstentions.
4. Can Student Senate review the by-laws of organizations? 6 no, 3 yes, 2 abstentions.
5. Can Student Senate review the essential structure of organizations? 6 no, 3 yes, 2 abstentions.

The case in point arose when the government structures committee of Student Senate of Syracuse University formally recommended that the Senate refuse to approve the revised constitution of the Association of Women Students (hereinafter referred to as AWS) and its by-laws. The AWS filed suit in Student Court to determine whether the Senate had the power to review the by-laws of its organization, and whether the Senate had the power to require the inclusion of nominating procedures in its constitution.

The Court decided, that in addition to the two questions specifically raised by AWS there were three additional questions which were contiguous to the case in point. These questions necessitated answering in order to fully decide the questions raised by AWS and the Senate.

At the out-set, the court felt it necessary to establish the justiciability of this case by Student Court.

In article VI, section I, of the constitution of Student Government of Syracuse University, the jurisdiction of Student Court is set forth. Paragraph B states that "Student Court shall have original jurisdiction in all cases involving constitutional questions . . ." This paragraph goes on to state, "(Student Court's) original jurisdiction shall also include . . . all cases involving Student Government." Paragraph C states, "The Court may hear any cases submitted to it by students or student organizations . . ."

With the jurisdiction thus affirmed, the court then considered the question of whether the Senate had the basic power to review the constitutions of student organizations at Syracuse University. It was the opinion of the court that the Senate definitely has this power.

In the preamble to the Student Government Constitution it is stated, "The purpose of this government shall be . . . to have authority over all other student affairs and organizations . . ."

In article V, section 6, paragraph J, the power to enact laws governing students in keeping with the charter, by-laws and regulations of Syracuse University is granted to Student Government. Thus, the MSA act W2 53-54 of Dec. 1, 1953, is valid: "Whereas, (the constitution of Student Government) requires the approval of the constitutions of all student organizations at Syracuse University."

At this point the Court dealt with the question of whether the Senate had the power to require nominating procedures to appear in the constitutions of Syracuse University student organizations. It was the Court's feeling that Robert's Rules of Order, Revised, is the authority on what should be included in a constitution of a student organization considering that the Student Government constitution makes no specific stipulations. Section 67 of Robert's Rules of Order, Revised, states. ". . . the constitution should contain only the following articles:

I. Name of the society.
II. Object.
III. Qualifications of members.
IV. Officers and their elections.
V. Meetings of the society.
VI. Method of amending the consittution."

The Court held that point IV, officers and their elections, does not necessarily include the nominating procedures of an organization.

The same position is asserted in the case of whether eligibility requirements of officers should be included in the constitution of an organization. Again, section 67 of Robert's Rules of Order, Revised, point IV, officers and their elections, does not specifically require eligibility requirements of officers to appear in the constitution of an organization.

In the same vein, the court decided whether or not the Senate had the power to review the by-laws of student organizations. Robert's Rules of Order, Revised, make a distinct delineation between the constitution and the by-laws of organizations.

The MSA act W2 53-54 of Dec. 1, 1953, states that Student Government has the power to require that the constitutions of student organizations be submitted for approval. Nowhere, either in this act, or in the constitution of Student Government, is the power to review by-laws of student organizations granted to Student Government.

The final question on which the Court decided was whether the Senate had the power to review the essential structure of Syracuse University student organizations. Again, a strict interpretation of the word "constitution" should be applied.

This interpretation of the word "constitution" does not allow the inclusion of the essential structure of an organization in its meaning. By the term "essential structure" is meant all the structure of organizations exclusive of the constitution itself and the by-laws.

In general it is significant to note the main theme of the court's reasoning. That is, considering past laws, Robert's Rules of Order, Revised, and the present Student Government constitution, the Senate does not legally have the power to oversee the internal structure and operation of Syracuse University student organizations, other than that which should rightfully be included in their constitutions.

in his dormitory and reported to the dean of men.

Carleton brought the matter to the attention of the court and the fraternity.

A house official attempted to convince the court that "this hazing was nothing," Thorn said. Thorn and Carleton told the representatives that they must cooperate or be subject to more stringent action.

Thorn also fined the house $50 for perjury because, as he put it, "while they did not directly lie, they told enough half-truths to fuzz up the case."

This was the first case tried by the court under the hazing clause created late last March Thorn said "our action has made the hazing code a real piece of legislation. I hope it will push the fraternity system in a more mature direction."

He also said new legislation would probably come as a result of the findings of this case. It is expected that he will ask for an increase in the fining power of the court and change the rushing probation rules to deny violators pledge classes in the following spring semester regardless of when the violation was committed.

In accord with IFC Judicial Board policy, Thorn did not reveal the name of the house to the Daily Orange. Sources not associated with the board identified the house as Zeta Beta Tau.

Gobblers Battle Syracuse to Wire

VPI: Valiant Effort

By BOB KRENGEL

VPI, the team that was to be a "breather," had just missed scoring a tremendous upset victory over Syracuse. They came off the field in tears, many fighting hard to control themselves.

Inside the dressing room coach Jerry Claiborne was quietly talking to the sportswriters. "Just one first down in that fourth quarter was all we needed," he moaned. "In that last kick-off return there was only one lone man between us and the touchdown."

The Virginia Tech mentor also complained bitterly about the penalty against VPI for allegedly having five men in the backfield. "I'll be interested in seeing the game films of that play," he said. "That was one of the crucial penalties that cost us the victory."

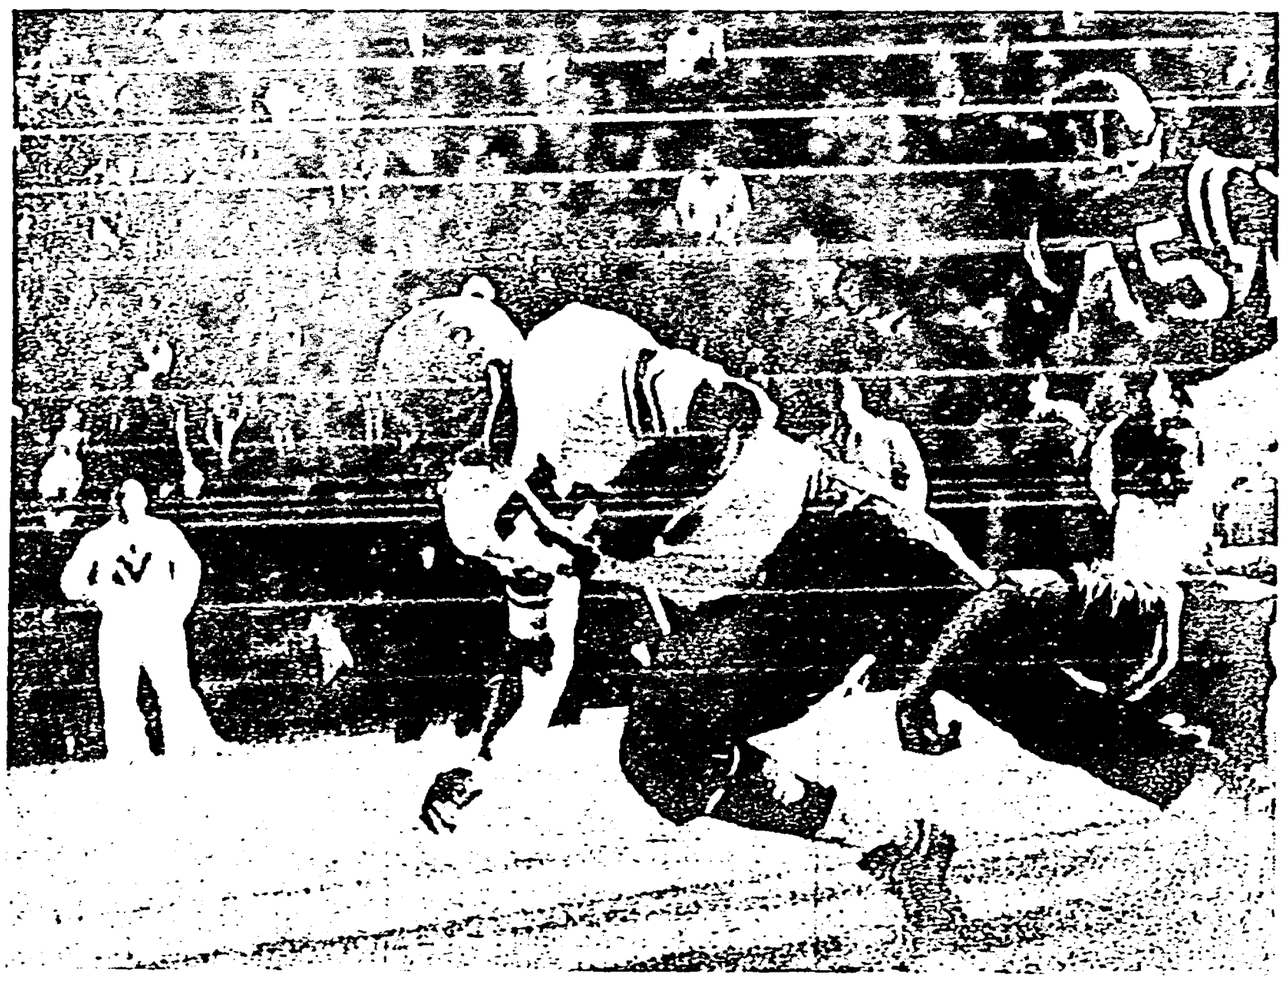
Claiborne had praise for both teams. "We were scrambling all the time, fighting for our lives. I was proud of our boys and really pleased with their effort.

"Syracuse did a fine job of coming back. Nance and Little were terrific, but so was Bob Schweickert and Sonny Utz.

The Gobbler coach said that the most potent plays for VPI were the fullback trap and fullback off tackle. On the other hand, the power offense of SU and its passing in the last quarter did the most damage to VPI.

"That injury to Schweickert really hurt us," Claiborne added. "With only 30 men on the squad we were just too thin in reserve strength. It was a game of benches."

As the players left the locker room, a curious phenomenon happened. The team that didn't have a chance held up their heads like winners. They had nothing to be ashamed of.



Go, Bo, Go

Powerful JIM NANCE nearly breaks into the clear in Saturday's encounter with VPI. Safetyman JOHN RAIBLE makes the tackle, with halfback DICK KELLY (45) standing by. It was the final Archbold appearance for Nance and 17 other Hill seniors.

Piety: Pretty Close

By ART ROSSKY

"All I could think of was that we needed a touchdown to win the game. And I was worried."

With this thought in mind Rich King calmly completed four of five passes for 53 yards to pull out a 20-15 victory over Virginia Tech.

The call on the play that turned out to be the winning six-pointer was for a screen pass. But King broke the pattern when he saw Harris Elliott in good position on the goal line.

And what went through the mind of Elliott, the lad who caught the winning heave?

"I was sort of suprised to see the ball coming to me," said the local end. "But for a while I was open and Rich spotted me." "He (King) threw it and all of a sudden the defensive back was right on top of me. We fought for the ball and it wound up in my hands."

For Elliott the hero's role is a new experience. In his first eight games the junior end had snagged just one aerial. Against the Gobblers he hauled in three, all in the last ditch drive.

"Schweickert is quite a boy," noted Ben.

"Our boys knew that he was fast, but they did not realize just how quick he really was.

"With him on the bench our job was much easier," said the Hill coach, "since Owens, (Bobby, the reserve quarterback) didn't pose the running threat of Schweickert. Still, Owens did not do too badly. He led them to a touchdown."

Little, Nance Rush for 251 Yards

12 more yards, moving the ball down to the 17-yard stripe.

After failing to connect with Floyd Little at the seven, King faded back, intending to throw a screen pass to one of his halfbacks. But he spotted Elliott in the end zone and fired a perfect bullet . . . and SU was out of the woods with a narrow 20-15 decision.

The end came hard to the spirited boys from Virginia.

"It was a real heartbreaker to lose," moaned Gobbler coach Jerry Claiborne. "But we were pleased with our boys. They put up a good effort, especially on that goal line stand."

Ben Schwartzwalder agreed: "They were a fine, well-drilled club out there. That Bob Schweickert is some ball player. He was faster than our kids gave him credit for."

But Ben reserved much praise for his own outfit. "I'm really proud of the team," he said. "It was a great comeback. Mr. King did a great job at the end. You have to give him credit. And Harry Elliott, too."

Both coaches voiced disfavor with the officiating. The Orangemen were tagged with 119 yards in penalties, with one of them erasing a 40-yard touchdown run by Little.

VPI also had a TD called back. It came on a tackle eligible play, which was nulified by an official who claimed that Tech had five men in the backfield.

Claiborne also was enraged when end Tommy Marvin appeared to be tripped on a pass patern by SU's Teddy Holman, while King intercepted the toss at the Hill goal line.

Although the passing of King produced the vital score, it was the rushing of Little and Jim Nance which enabled SU to stay alive.

Little gained 155 yards in 20 carries, while Nance added another 96 on 18 attempts. Floyd snared one pass for 17 yards and Nance two more for 23.

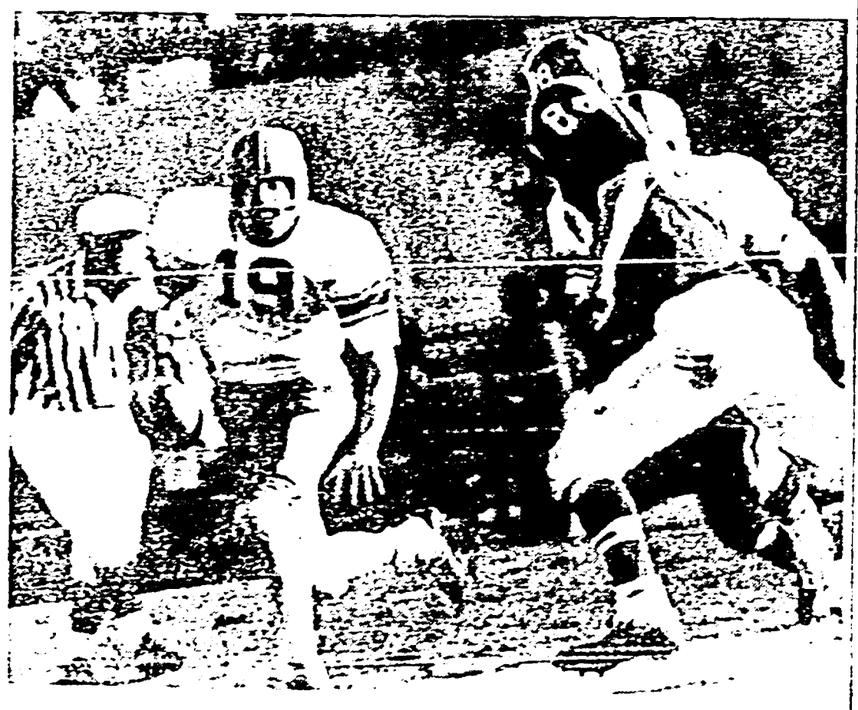
Still, the Orange 1-2 punch was offered a stout battle by the Tech duo of Schweickert-Sonny Utz.

The Gobbler quarterback, who sat out the entire second half with an injured eye, notched 59 yards rushing in the opening two periods on just six carries. Utz, a smashing fullback, emerged from the contest with 115 yards for 20 tries.

"Nance and Little are real fine backs," admitted Claiborne, "but Schweickert and Utz were every bit as good out there today."

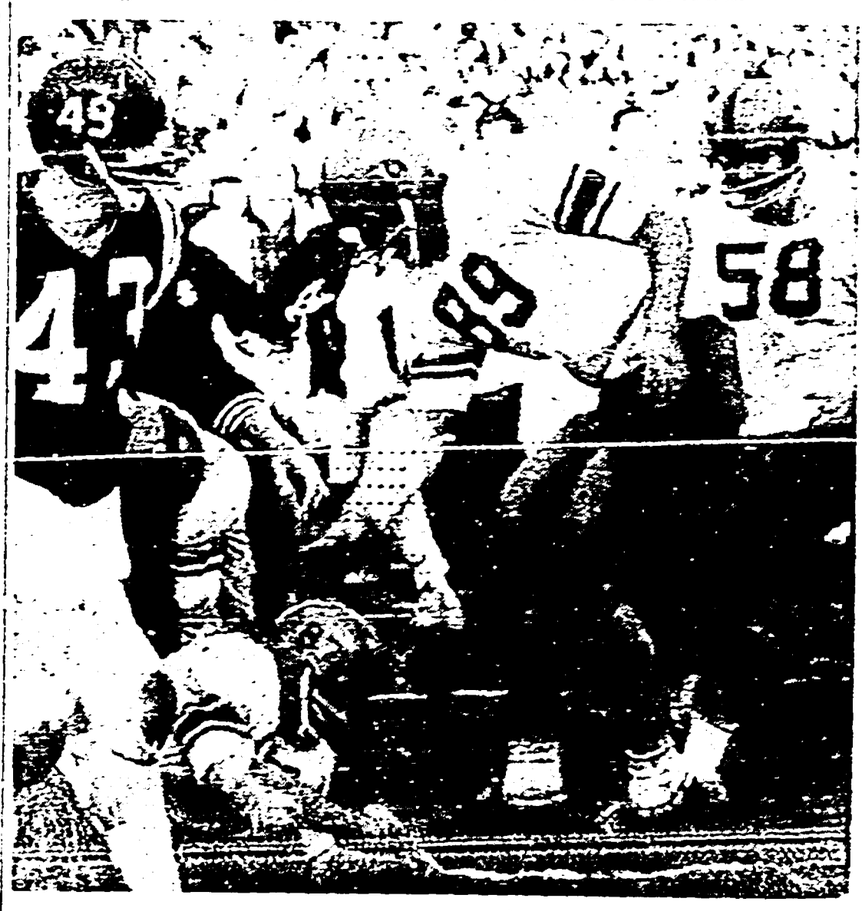
He continued, "The loss of Schweickert really hurt. It virtually killed our kicking game. And it also took away our outside threat."

Defensive standouts for Syracuse were middle guard Gerry Everling (nine tackles) and linebackers Jim Cheyunski (10), Bob Morgan (11) and Terry Roe (7). Linebacker Ken Whitely notched 19 tackles for the losers, including 7 unassisted.



Rolling Out

WALLEY MAHLE, Piety quarterback, rolls right in search of a receiver during the first half of Saturday's SU-VPI game. Gobbler defender is end JOHN SHIPLEY (88). Mahle tossed four passes for 48 yards and netted another 51 on the ground.



Vital Catch

Orange teammates congratulate HARRIS ELLIOTT after he grabbed a 17-yard touchdown pass from RICH KING to beat Virginia Tech, 20-15, with only 50 seconds remaining. Number 89 is fellow end BRAD CLARKE, and number 58 center PAT KILLORIN. VPI's JOHN RAIBLE (43) is at left.

Szwarc Appointed Distinguished Prof By New York State

A scientist at the College of Forestry has received an honor from the State University of New York for his research work in the field of polymer chemistry.

Appointed Distinguished Professor of Chemistry is Dr. Michael M. Szwarc, announced Dr. Hardy L. Shirley, dean of the College of Forestry, Monday.

The action was taken by the Board of Trustees of State University, making Szwarc the third professor so honored in its 58 units.

Having just returned from the University of Liverpool after serving as the Royal Society Visiting Professor for a year while on sabbatic leave, Szwarc is internationally known as a physical and polymer chemist. He has published widely in these fields and has directed the work of a number of graduate students.

He first called attention to the possibility of producing vinyl polymers under non-terminating conditions by the use of an electron transfer process. Also, he suggested application of the method to the formation of polymers of very narrow molecular weight distribution and the production of block copolymers.

Szwarc coined the descriptive expressions "methyl affinity" and "living polymers," that have attracted attention to important concepts which he has emphasized and these phrases have gained acceptance in the field.

Szwarc was born in Poland, and attended school in Warsaw. He received a degree in chemical engineering from Warsaw Polytechnic College in 1932, and went to The Hebrew University in Jerusalem in 1935, to teach and conduct research.

After 10 years, during which he earned a doctorate degree, he went to the University of Manchester, Manchester, England, to work in the field of physical chemistry. He served as special lecturer and researcher there until 1952, when he came to the College of Forestry.

Three Maxwell Profs To Assist Democrats

By KAREN ZAGOREN

Syracuse University has three representatives sitting on a ten member New York State Democratic task force to formulate policy for the legislature.

Vice President of Administration Research Clark D. Ahlberg, political science Associate Prof. Howard F. Miller and Dr. Alan K. Campbell, director of metropolitan financial research, will be meeting in the near future with the other political appointees in New York City, Miller said.

HOWARD F. MILLER

The force has been designed to propose legislative priorities for the Democratic controlled 1965 session of the state legislature, State Democratic Chairman William H. McKeon said.

Miller said he was unclear about the details of the committee but explained his interpretation as "to try and devise a series of alternatives to Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller's proposals."

Reapportionment was not discussed at the earlier meeting last week, Miller related. There has been some discussion that the task force has intentions of blocking any reapportionment legislation which Rockefeller's last minute GOP session means to pass.

Primarily the task force is concerned with fiscal and budgetry policies, Miller explained, adding that he doubted if the subject of reapportionment would come up.

Reappportionment was therefore not a reason for the quick action connected with the formation and establishment of the policy making team, he said.

Ahlberg said he assumed the

Bennett College

SU Trades Coeds With N. C. School

BY CAROL RUBRIGHT
Junior Editor

What does a 600-woman all-Negro college in North Carolina have in common with Syracuse's sprawling 21,440-student complex?

A lot--according to the two Bennett College coeds who are visiting Syracuse as part of a new one-year exchange program with the southern school.

They say that the greatest difference which they have discovered between Syracuse and Bennett is in the variety of courses offered.

The exchange program between Bennett and Syracuse originated this year through the influence of the Rev. Charles Bollinger, a trustee of both institutions.

Presently, Syracuse has only one coed, attending the North Carolina college. Virginia Loomis, a Syracuse junior from Rushfield is enrolled at Bennett; while the second coed who was to participate in the exchange dropped out because of scholarship ties.

"We hope to make this exchange program an annual one," Dean of Women Marjorie C. Smith told the Daily Orange.

Bennett's representatives to SU are Patricia D. Greene, a junior liberal arts major from Baltimore, living in Haven Hall and Patricia Mixon, Shaw 2E, a sophomore in political science from Greenwood, Miss.

To Miss Mixon who has never spent longer than a month in the North before, "Syracuse is a very friendly school.

"I had expected a very impersonal attitude, since the school is so big," Miss Mixon said, "but the kids are friendly and the professors are very willing to help."

Both girls commented that Syracuse had a greater variety of courses from which to choose.

"I've found that I'm a bit

Not Without Maturity

The InterFraternity Council Judicial Board has shown it is not to be dealt with lightly. The board means business and the 30 Greek islands on campus had better heed the writing on the wall apparent in last week's decision.

The almost always futile efforts of the IFC body to strive for development other than physical in the Greek system are giving way to the only recourse left for the IFC — punishing where punishing is due.

It is indeed upsetting that it may take a series of harsh penalties to make the Greeks aware their traditions of hazing and unity through mutual suffering are just a trifle archaic.

A succession of deans of men. IFC presidents and others interested in the university and its component parts have repeatedly attempted to make the individual fraternities aware of their shortcomings.

Unfortunately, these efforts, for the most part, have not been successful. Academic portions of Greek Week have met with limited success, charity measures are often Tolley Cup altruism and Greek grades continually slip below the all-men's and all-university average.

Some day the Greeks will have to awaken. The IFC is doing all it can, but even its most fervent efforts have been unable to make little more than a dent into the steel walls surrounding the Greeks' ivory towers.

When the Greeks begin to show they can use alcoholic beverages properly at their social functions, then perhaps they will merit a change in rules. When the Greeks show that they can live by today's standards, then the need for discipline will be removed.

But until the Greeks wake up, more punishment will be deservedly delegated, for there is, fortunately, that enlightened few among the IFC who have seen the light.

As soon as the Greeks unify behind the belief in ideals such as those shown to be held by the judicial board, the adolescence in the system will give way to maturity. But not until then.

All-American

By Jay Litwin

Oftentimes it is the un-noticed act done in the shadows of the grandstand, rather than on the playing field that distinguishes one human being from the rest of the flock.

That act is usually the outward manifestation of that inner quality that few people possess.

That quality is heart, and for the past two-and-one-half months I've watched two boys demonstrate again and again the inner drives of desire, perseverance, courage and fortitude. I've watched the demonstrations along with everybody else while these boys were on the playing field, but it was the demonstrations in the shadows that make these boys All-American.

This summer I visited Syracuse for 10 days. While I was soaking up some rays at Green Lakes under sunny skies with the temperaaure near 90 degrees each day, I had to go past the Women's Building every day. On the field was a solitary figure in sweat clothes — running. He ran, he ran and he ran. People passed by, looked and went about their business. Some people said, "What a nut."

"He's gotta be losin' his mind, doin' that on a day like this."

"God, there's absolutely no reason why anybody should be runnin' in weather like this."

Ah, but there was a reason. And if Syracuse beats West Virginia Saturday and accepts a bid to play in the Sugar Bowl, that's one reason. Floyd Little knew that outstanding ability alone does not make a great ballplayer. And because of this, 8,000 Syracuse students might have the chance to stand tall during the Christmas vacation and brag!

"See that team trouncing LSU, well that's my school."

How many students, bragging about "my school" would have been willing to sweat with Floyd Little all summer long? How many of those "proud" students will learn the lesson that Floyd Little knows so well—that greatness is not measured by ability and that man is distinguished from all other animals by his inner feelings; and people like Floyd Little are truly men. How many students and, yes, how many other ball players?

There's one other boy I must mention. Completing six out of seven passes for nearly 100 yards in less than four minutes of two different games is quite an impressive statistic. But what makes Rich King truly a great ballplayer is not the statistic alone. It is the inward desire emanating from the heart that makes Rich King, as Floyd Little, great.

His ability to maintain his fierce competitive spirit while being relegated to the bench; his ability to instill the spirit and respect in a team that truly needs it; and his understanding that you must fight hard and fairly to achieve what you want to achieve are characteristics that make Rich King an All-American.

Within the next few weeks people will be selecting their various All-American teams. Rich King will not be selected, and Floyd Little by virtue of his being a sophomore will also be a doubtful 1st team All-American. But, regardless of whether Rich King or Floyd Little make or don't make All-American team, the members of Syracuse community can be extremely proud of two boys who have more than a title of All-American. They are All-Heart.

LETTERS

Phones

To the Editor:

Miss Karen Zagoren is to be commended for doing a vigorous job of reporting in connection with the dormitory telephone story which appeared November 3rd. She failed, however, to mention my suggestion.

The university will be glad to make available to the DO all the dormitory pay telephone numbers for publication in the DO. I suspect that the fraternities and sororities will be glad to cooperate in a like manner.

A change in the university's policy with respect to the listing of dormitory pay telephone numbers cannot be of much assistance this year, since the next city directory does not appear until the spring of 1965.

F. A. Wingate

Court

To the Editor:

I would like to commend the Student Court on its recent actions concerning the thefts from the SU Bookstore.

One offender was suspended and one put on probation. The difference between them, says the Student Court, was in their intention to steal. The first boy was caught stealing a $1.95 pen. A case of "well-planned and pre-meditated theft," says the Student Court.

Yes—we know the type. He probably had shifty, close-set eyes, a raspy voice, and a nervous twitch. They're all alike. He probably wore a yellow-checked suit with a wide hat and brown and white saddle-shoes. I can just see him whistling at the girls and swinging a watch fob as he stood in front of a drugstore. Go away from here, you sewer-dweller! You wart on the nose of society! Let's keep SU a good place for our children to grow up in!

The other boy stopped outside of the Bookstore holding a book that he didn't pay for. He said that he had taken the item unintentionally. Well, I can understand this. I often forget where I put a pencil or something. This boy just forgot where he put the book. And, after all, he said he didn't mean it, and an SU student would never lie! Of course, he gave a false name and address when he was stopped, but that's not important. What does one statement have to do with the one that follows it? If the first was a lie, then the second was necessarily true.

Ah! The wisdom of Solomon! The first boy confessed and the second denied. Snap the gavel and raise the gallows!

Uh—sleep well and pleasant dreams, Thou Pillar of Justice.

SUCE

To the Editor:

SUCE has joined the Student Senate is damning VPI for its discriminatory practices. These eloquent letters sent to VPI by these two organizations serve only to hide the North's persistent reluctance to admit to itself and the rest of the country that it, too, discriminates against the Negro. And, as this fact is ignored, it remains uncorrected.

In this light, the printing of Audrey Freman's letter opposite SUCE's letter to VPI (Daily Orange, Nov. 13, pp. 6-7) is especially poignant. Audrey reminds us that we fall short of that ideal picture projected to the president of VPI and the country as a whole. SUCE, the Student Senate, Chancellor Tolley, and the entire community of Northern whites reply: the South is much worse.

We know the South is worse—does that free us from our obligation to make ourselves better?

Hoffman to Give Concert

S.U. audiences will have a chance to see a rare instrument used, when Bruno Hoffman, "Master of the Glass Harp" presents a concert at 8:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Regent Theatre.

The glass harp is an instrument which was highly popular in the late 18th century. Mozart and Beethoven wrote special music for it. Hoffman will play some of this music as well as modern pieces which have been adapted for the instrument.

Basically, the instrument uses glass bulbs as a sound mechanism. These are manipulated to vibrate and produce a tinkling sound. The glass harp is table-like in appearance.

Hoffman, who has conducted concerts on both sides of the Atlantic, is one of the few exponents of this lost art.

The program is another in the Celebrity Series, sponsored by the Regent Theatre which is operated by University College, the downtown division of Syracuse University.

Tickets for the Hoffman concert are available at the Regent box office for $2 and $1.50.

Five S.U. students won a total of eight awards last Friday at the second annual broadcasting conference of the State College at Geneseo.

Miss Greene said that she had not found her courses any more difficult than those in Bennett.

Similar as campus life might be, the girls agreed that the political attitude and atmosphere of New York State differs greatly from hat of Norah Carolina.

selection of the members was based on people who have had approval of the state chairman, probably Mayor Robert Wagner (of New York City) and the state comptroller.

This view concurred with a statement made by Miller. Miller proposed that major politicians probably had a role in the group's selection and therefore a representative on the task force.

Ahlberg said that formation of such a group was unusual in that this is the first time since 1936 that the Democrats have had control of the legislature.

He pointed out that in this case there is a Republican governor whereas the state head and party were unified under Gov. Herbert H. Lehmman.

A disadvantage of the force is that decisions do not necessarily coincide with present matters, Miller said. As an example he forecast that policies made in the near future might not be at all feasible when the governor's new budget is presented.

Concerning dissension within the Democratic Party because of policies made which cannot be carried out, Miller commented that a rift "can occur but that it shouldn't if the task force goes about its role properly in terms of developing proposals with back up data."

It is wrong for the assumption to be made that any devised plans must be carried out, he explained.

All three men have been active in state politics. Ahlberg was deputy director of the state budget before Gov. Averell W. Harriman appointed him as full director in 1957.

He received his bachelor degree from the University of Wichita in 1939 and both masters and doctorate from the Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs in 1942 and 1951 respectively. In 1951 Ahlberg became assistant dean of the College of Engineering. He is the author of three books on administrative research and is also a professor in the Maxwell School.

Miller is also a former state budget director. In 1962 he was consultant on fiscal afairs to the Democratic Members of the State Assembly. He received his bachelors from the SU School of Journalism in 1942 and a masters in public administration from Harvard in 1946.

Campbell served as a New York City research consultant and as Deputy Comptroller for the New York State administration in 1960-61. He has written numerous books and articles.

Campbell received a bachelors degree from Whitman College in 1947, a masters in public administration from Wayne University and Harvard in 1949 and a doctoral degree from Harvard in 1952.

He was out of town and could not be reached for comment.

FORD MOTOR COMPANY'S EXPERIMENTAL GAS TURBINE SUPERHIGHWAY TRUCK ANTICIPATES THE NATIONAL HIGHWAY NETWORK OF THE 1970's!

A new era in trucking is almost here. When the 41,000-mile national highway network is completed it will be possible for the first time to schedule coast to coast, big payload hauling. Ford Motor Company's answer to the challenge is this experimental tractor-trailer combination. A tandem axle drive tractor, powered by a 600 hp gas turbine engine permits a cruising speed of 70 miles per hour, a non-stop range of 600 miles. Designed for long-distance, non-stop operation, the two-man cab includes sleeping facilities, fold-away table, lavatory, toilet, oven, refrigerator and TV for the co-driver—with over 6'3" of headroom. Because of its cruising speed, the truck will be compatible with the normal passenger car flowrate of traffic. Other unique features are its odorless exhaust and extremely quiet operation.

Anticipating the opportunities and needs of the future is standard practice at Ford Motor Company. That's why it's such an exciting place to work. Look to Ford Motor Company for a career with growth potential and satisfaction—from pure science to manufacturing . . . marketing to labor relations.

Minority Opinion No. 1: AWS vs. SS

The following is the text of one of the two minority opinions in the case of the Association of Women Students vs. Student Senate, heard and decided by Student Court in favor of AWS.

The opinion was written by Joan Kenney and Kathleen Arnold. The second dissenting opinion will appear in Wednesday's Daily Orange.

Questions and decision:

1. Is question justiciable? 10 yes, 1 abstention. 2. Can Student Senate review constitutions? 9 yes, 2 no. 3. Can Student Senate require inclusion of nominating procedures and officer eligibility requirements in constitutions? 6 no, 3 yes, 2 abstentions.

4. Can Student Senate review the by-laws of organizations? 6 no, 3 yes, 2 abstentions.

5. Can Student Senate review the essential structure of organizations? 6 no, 3 yes, 2 abstentions.

The first question must be answered affirmatively because the Student Government constitution expressly grants the following powers to the Court:

Art. VI, Sec. IB, "The Student Court shall have original jurisdiction in all cases involving constitutional questions...Its original jurisdiction shall also include all violations or rules passed by the legislature, and all cases involving SG."

Art. VI, Sec. IC. "The Court may hear any cases submitted to it by students or student organizations providing such cases fall within those outlined in the judicial code of the Student Court. In such cases, the decisions of the court shall be binding."

The second question, however, must be answered in the negative, again based on the Student Government constitution.

Art. V., Sec. I. "There shall be a legislative branch known as the Student Senate establish-ed on the representation principle with all the legislative powers of the Student Government of Syracuse University vested in said Senate."

Hence, the function of the Student Senate, as defined clearly in the constitution, is to serve as a legislative or law-making body. Reviewing, judging, evaluating and approving constitutions are not legislative duties, but rather judicial obligations. Therefore, MSA Proposed Act W2 53-54, passed Dec. 1, 1953, granting the legislative power to approve student organizations' constitutions is unconstitutional.

In Marbury V. Madison, 1 Cranch 137; 2 L.Ed. 60 (1803), Mr. Chief Justice Marshall delivered the opinion of the court saying in part:

"The original and Supreme will organizes the government, and assigns to different departments their respective powers. It may either stop here, or establish certain limits not to be transcended by those departments. The government of the United States is of the latter description. The powers of the legislature are defined and limited; and that those limits may not be mistaken, or forgotten, the constitution is written...If the former alternative be true, then a legislative act contrary to the constitution is not law; if the latter part be true, then written constitutions are absurd attempts, on the part of the people, to limit a power in its own nature illimitable."

Under the present Student Government constitution, Student Senate is granted powers under art. V, sec. VI, paragraph J, reads as follows:

"The Senate shall have the power to enact laws governing students in keeping with the charter, by-laws and regulations of Syracuse University."

It is repugnant to students of a university in the United States of America to find a legislative body conjuring a power and then legitimatizing it by merely passing its own act to that effect.

Further, this sweeping regulatory and investigative power is both extraneous to the duties of the Senate and contrary to the preamble "to promote the general welfare of the student body."

Therefore, the 1953 act is unconstitutional not on one count, but on two separate counts.

After this conclusion was reached, the only logical and consistent position on questions three, four and five was that of abstention, which, was duly recorded.

In regard to the majority decision of the court, it seems apparent that the Senate now has blanket responsibilities for all student organizations on campus and only token power i.e., to investigate only the constitutions of these organizations.

Robert's Rules of Order, Revised, makes the following stipulations regarding constitutions:

Sec. 57 "If, in organizations which require elaborate rules, both constitutions and by-laws and retained, the constitution should contain only the following articles: I. Name of Society II. Object III. Qualifications of members IV. Officers and their elections V. Meetings of the society VI. Method of amending the constitution."

If the Senate rightfully assumed this regulatory power of campus organizations, it is obvious that by examining the six factors necessary for a constitution the Senate could not adequately approve or withhold approval from an organization. Thus, the majority decision is inconsistent with its holding that the approval power ought to be vested in the Senate.

In summary, the Senate may not vote itself judicial powers, nor may it act contrary to the constitution. Hence, in our opinion, the 1953 Act must be held unconstitutional, and the Senate ought not to approve constitutions.

The act should be declared null and void. The Association of Women Students requires approval of its constitution only from its own membership.

SUCE to Discuss Bowl Bid

Possible action by the university in response to an anticipated bid to the Sugar Bowl will be discussed by the Syracuse University Committee on Equality (SUCE) at 6:45 p.m. today, in 301 Hall of Languages.

"Last year and the beginning of this year Chancellor William P. Tolley stated that we would not schedule any more games with segregated schools," said Robert Cohen, chairman of SUCE. "We have information on the status of LSU (Louisiana State University, Syracuse's expected opponent) and would like to discuss it," Cohen said.

Also to be discussed at the meeting is a "Fast for Freedom," a program being supported nationally by 128 colleges and universities, as well as many prominent persons such as Ralph Bunche, Cohen said.

Under this program, the participating schools agree to permit students to skip one meal, with the funds saved being converted to food for impoverished areas in need of food.

SUCE is trying to get university support for the project. They will also discuss alternatives which will be taken if they cannot obtain this support, Cohen said.

All members and other interested person are invited to the meeting.

Syracuse's first gridiron with Oregon State came as a part of a unique intersectional football trip. At the close of the 1915, the Orangemen made a three-game trip west and played Montana, Oregon State and Occidental.

Watson W2 Wins

Watson West 2 became the first freshman team in many years to capture the Intramural Living Center Football Championship, as it defeated Roosevelt Apartments by a score of 12-0 at Lew Carr Field last night. The game was played on a rain-soaked field with players sliding for first downs.

Watson West 2 quickly took the initiative as quarterback Tex Zimdahl shot a long pass to flanker back Dick Taylor for a touchdown. The 45-yard bomb was one of the first plays from scrimmage for the Watson boys.

The second stanza was a defensive battle as both squads could do little in the wet and mud. Midway through the half the freshmen got moving, taking the ball to the Roosevelt one-yard line.

The losers held, but a down was played over because of a Roosevelt offside penalty. With fourth and one, the combination of Zimdahl to Taylor worked again for another TD to again for anoth er TD tomake the score 12-0 Watson as the game ended.

Hill Cagers Drop Scrimmage to BC

Syracuse's basketball squad, with one scrimmage game behind it, is now preparing for its opening game of the season with American University on Dec. 2.

The Orange cagers have been practicing their running game lately — a fast breaking offense with a man-to-man defense and competition for starting berths has been intense. Dave Bing, a 6-3 All American prospect, and the 6-8 center, Chuck Richards, are assured of starting positions. 12 players are currently vying for the other three spots.

Saturday the Orangemen scrimmaged Boston College in an effort to test their offensive plays and defensive patterns under game conditions. The Orange dropped an 88-86 decision to the Eagles as Dave Bing netted 33 points and Richards added 21. BC's John Austin scored 41.

The "game" was not a true indication of the relative merits of the two teams however. SU coach Fred Lewis substituted freely and used all 14 players as he experimented with different combinations. The fired-up BC team chose to go all the way with its top six players.

"Scott Loll, Bing and Richards did well," said Lewis. "The rest of the team didn't look too good. They were rather lethargic. Now they know they can get beat.

Lewis was also disappointed that Boston College outrebounded Syracuse, though they were smaller squad physically.

"Our team defense is very weak," he noted. "We need lots of improvement. This will go a long way toward deciding who's going to play for us."

In addition to returnees Bing (a junior) and senior Richards, Lewis' squad lists seniors Phil Schoff and Dick Duffy; juniors Jim Boeheim, Norm Goldsmith, Sam Penceal, Frank Nicoletti, Rex Trobridge and, Rick Ableman; and sophomores Rick Dean Scott Loll, Val Reid and Marty Goldstein.

During Thanksgiving vacation the Orange will hold its second pre-season tuneup when it scrimmages Holy Cross in the field-house.

Low AND Inside

By BILL CRONAUER
Sports Editor

No, sports fans, we haven't received a Sugar Bowl bid. . .yet.

Of course you read it in the newspapers. Of course you heard it on the radio. And besides, everybody says so.

But the plain and simple fact is that as of last night Syracuse University had not received a bid from the Sugar Bowl and thus had not accepted any such bid.

SU Athletic Director James H. Decker repeated Monday that he had received no word from the Sugar Bowl committee since its two representatives, Monk Simons and Dr. Fred Wolfe Sr., left for New Orleans Sunday after witnessing the Syracuse-VPI game.

At that time Simons said: "We are very much interested in Syracuse. Saturday's game was the most thrilling I've seen all season. Syracuse is a solid football team, one that wouldn't be overmatched against any team in the country." Period.

Most of the disillusion seems to stem from an Associated Press release sent out Sunday night, which stated that the Orange and Louisiana State will play in the Sugar Bowl.

However, no oficial sources were offered to the AP statement. It was in all probability a good guess. . .a guess that has a 99 per cent chance of becoming true. If it was a fact, nobody has informed Syracuse University.

General consensus is that the Sugar Bowl bids will not be handed out until after this weekend's games. SU meets West Virginia and LSU challenges Tulane Saturday.

LSU Athletic Director James Corbett said Monday that his school had been offered a bowl bid. LSU, according to conference rules, may be given a bid before the season ends, but cannot accept it until that time. LSU concludes its season Dec. 5 against Florida.

So what all this boils down to is the fact that everybody wants to be the first to pop the balloon. The balloon is still up in the air.

Syracuse University smashed back into the UPI list of the nation's top 10 yesterday after a close 20-15 win over Virginia Tech on Saturday.

The Orangemen moved into ninth spot on the poll, rising from their 12th place rating last week.

Once again the Orangemen retained the lead in the Lambert Trophy race, symbolic of Eastern football supremacy.

In the national polls, Notre Dame remained in first place after its 34-7 triumph over Michigan State. The Irish added 10 first place votes to their point totals.

The next six spots were unchanged from last week. No. 2 team was Alabama after its 24-7 defeat of Georgia Tech. They were followed by Arkansas, Nebraska, Texas, Michigan, Ohio State and LSU. Syracuse and Oregon entered into the ninth and 10th positions following Stanford's 16-7 liquidation of OSU.

Other teams mentioned in the UPI second 10 were: Georgia Tech, Florida State, Princeton, Florida, Penn State, New Mexico, Tulsa, Illinois, and Mississippi. Ties account for number of teams.

In the Lambert race, conducted by the Eastern College Athletic Association, The Piety received all but one first-place vote in the weekly balloting, for a near perfect 9.9 rating. Penn State anchored itself to the runner-up place with a 7.8 tally after a 24-7 victory over Houston.

UPI

1. Notre Dame (8-0)
2. Alabama (9-0)
3. Arkansas (9-0)
4. Nebraska (9-0)
5. Texas (8-1)
6. Michigan (7-1)
7. Ohio State (7-1)
8. LSU (6-1-1)
9. Syracuse (7-2)
10. Oregon (7-1-1)

SUGAR BOWL?

Syracuse University is conspicuously missing from the list of possible Gator Bowl participants announced Monday night in Jacksonville, Fla.

Up to this time, the Orangemen had been viewed a prime prospect, thus leading to speculation that SU was now considered 'in' the Sugar Bowl by the Gator Bowl officials.

Orangemen Wary Of West Virginia

By JIM KLURFELD

Once again Ben Schwartzwalder's Orangemen will have to stop a top-notch quarterback, this time from West Virginia, when Syracuse travels to Morgantown to close its regular season Saturday.

The Mountaineers, 6-3, have won their last three games and it is no coincidence that in those three games Al McCune has been the starting quarterback.

Last week, against William and Mary, he completed 16 of 26 passes for 216 yards. Overall this season he has thrown 82 passes and been successful 47 times.

"West Virginia scares us," Schwartzwalder said at Monday's press conference. "Especially with this new quarterback. And don't forget they beat VPI 23-10."

And SU scout Roy Simmons warned that West Virginia was physically and numerically superior to the Orangemen.

"They are not as quick as VPI," Simmons said, "but they are more powerful. I would say that this is the most impressive offensive West Virginia team we have seen in years."

Aside from McCune, the Mountaineers have a Jim Nance type fullback in Dick Leftridge a 240-pound junior. In the right frame of mind, according to West Virginia coach Gene Corum, Leftridge can be a devasting runner. It seems, though, that he hasn't been in the right frame of mind too often this season.

And in Roger Alford, a 230-pound junior, the Mountaineers have one of the finest guards in the country.

ALFORD

But Corum spent most of his time talking to the press conference by phone about Floyd Little and Jim Nance.

"We consider Syracuse the best team we've played this year," Corum said, "and the man who makes your team move is Little. Trying to stop both of them (Little and Nance) is quite a job."

Statisically, Little passed Ernie Davis' sophomore rushing record of 686 yards set in 1959 when he brought his total to 732 Saturday.

Nance became number three rusher in Orange history with 1,442 yards. Ernie Davis and Jim Brown rank ahead of him.

The Orange, with a bowl bid apparently coming next week, are not standing pat. Schwartzwalder indicated that there will bee a number of changes on both offense and defense, but was not specific.

He also said that he would be using Rich King more often on offense, but also explained that King would play full time on defense.

'Any Win Is Gratifying'

This is the ninth in a series of questions and answer sessions between DO junior editor Howard Schneider and coach Ben Schwartzwalder.

Q—Before Saturday's game we were a 17-point favorite. Does the fact that we won only by five, and in the last minute at that, indicate that VPI played over their heads or that we played under our potential.

A—I don't know who said this was going to be an easy game. I certainly didn't. The DO said it was going to be easy and now they want to know how come it wasn't. No game we play is easy. They were a good football team. Everybody was saying poor little VPI. Well poor little VPI has 45 men on scholarship to our 25.

Poor little VPI beat North Carolina State and Florida State (they were 10th in the country at the time). Poor little VPI won its conference championship last year. Poor little VPI has Schweickert and Utz, two real good football players. The poor little boys were not poor at all.

Then, of course, the entire racial controversy was an added factor. They were angry over the fact that we had insulted their school and they were all riled up. While the fans in the stands were having a good time Nance and Little were getting beaten up down on the field.

As far as the point spread is concerned this is another matter. Personally, I think you have to be really foolish to bet on football games. People just bet on emotion. The way fans bet in Syracuse if the Baltimore Colts came up to Archbold next week there would be enough fooolish bets to make us the favorite.

Q—Then in general you were satisfied with the team's performance?

A—For a coach any game you win by one point is gratifying. When you're not satisfied with a one point victory it's time to get out of the football business. We made mistakes, but we make mistakes every game.

Q—What are your comments on the officiating of Saturday's game?

A—One of the players was shocked to hear a refree call the VPI players by their first names. As far as the actual calling went our films show that there were five men in the VPI backfield on the nullified touchdown.

The films also indicate that Ted Holman did not trip the VPI receiver, that they were both going for the ball and there was no interference as the VPI coach claimed. According to our films, however, Little's nullified touchdown run and Oyer's nullified first down catch were calls that still could be debated.

Q—What were the circumstances surrounding the fourth and 40 situation when it appeared that we were going to go for it, but then punted at the last minute?

A—I sent in a play assuming we had made the first down on Oyer's catch. I naturally figured the team would punt. However, it appeared that they were going to run the play, a bootleg no less. When I saw what they were going to do I grabbed Walley Mahle) and pushed him on the field.

I would rather have had a penalty. Somehow one of the boys got the message and we called a time out. I still shudder about the play. If we hada't of punted the game would have been all over right then.

Tangerines Bow to UB

The University of Buffalo frosh football team took advantage of loose play by the Syracuse Tangerines to score a 13-0 win Saturday in the season's finale for both squads.

It was the second loss of the season for coach Jim Shreve's outfit against three wins. It marked the first time in a six-year tenure that a Shreve-coached frosh team had lost twice in one season.

Each team gave up the ball five times during the game on fumbles and interceptions, but it was Buffalo that capitalized.

In the second period the home team's Tom Hurd intercepted a Rick Cassata pass and sprinted 85 yards for a touchdown. In the final quarter Baby Bulls converted an unsuccessful fake punt attempt by the Tangerines into a 25-yard three-play touchdown drive.

HHFA Head Clarifies City Problems

Syracuse U. Assets Climb to $100 Million

By CAROL RUBRIGHT
Junior Editor

The assets of Syracuse University Inc. reached the $100 million mark for the first time in 94 years at the close of the financial year last June.

Statistics revealing the university's financial status were released Tuesday in a financial summary for the year ending June 30, 1964.

They "represent a healthy growth," Victor J. Colway, universisty comptroller, told the Daily Orange.

The assets of $108,406,990-i.e. the value of everything the SU corporation owns—represents a $10 million increase over the previous year's funds.

"Even though it has taken 91 years to achieve the first hundred million dollar mark, one does not have to be excessively optimistic to predict that the second hundred million level will be achieved in less than a decade," noted Francis A. Wingate, university treasurer, in introducing the summary.

However, the university's profit ("Retained earnings' is the appropriate title," according to Colway.) was only $4,387—about $1,000 less than in the previous year.

Addition of the Newhouse Communications Center and Haven Hall added to the value of the university's real estate and accounted for about $7 million of the increase in assets.

Syracuse's endowment fund, which has always been comparatively small, increased about five per cent to $26 million. Dartmouth, a smaller school than Syracuse, has an endowment of about $56 million.

It is misleading, however, to consider only the assets. Syracuse spent about $39 million to operate last year, and this figure is not included in the listings of assets or liabilities.

Since SU is a private university, it relies on student tuition payments for the bulk of its operating expenses. The rest comes from gifts, grants, sale of land, income from investments and "auxiliary activities."

These "auxiliary activities" bring in $10 million. They include the bookstore, food ser-

Urbanization Reflects Agricultural Level, Robert Weaver Says

By JONATHAN RUSSELL

Robert C. Weaver did not extol the virtues of the American city Tuesday night but endeavored to clarify some of the multifarious problems which confront urban areas.

Speaking in Hendricks Chapel to citizenship students, Weaver noted the universality of urbanization which exists "in capitalistic, socialistic and developed and underdeveloped countries."

The degree of urbanization in any given country reflects its level of agricultural production. Thus, the growth of urban areas must be measured in terms of people who are leaving an agrarian path to enter urban society, he further noted.

The director of the federal Housing and Home Finance Agency bemoaned the difficulty of the transition of rural to urban thought with respect to urban problems. He referred to the "rural hangover of rural thinking, rural institutions and rural ideas" in metropolitan life.

It is a "carryover of the past regardless of its nature," Weaver said, in stressing the need for adaptation to urban life from rural existence.

He mentioned the necessity for the specialization of special services in the city—something that is unnecessary in the country.

"In rural areas the individual performs a multitude of functions. This is not so in the city. As we become urbanized, we are forced to become more dependent on public services and public spending," he explained.

Weaver cited some of the great problems faced by urban areas. There are financial difficulties, such as the increasing costs of schools in the suburbs and "the increasing costs of welfare in the city."

There is the traffic problem or the "difficulty of communication" that slows the movements of goods and people.

Weaver discussed the problem of ugliness that "knows no

SUCE to Support Sugar Bowl Bid Involving LSU

By AMOS MOSCRIP

The Syracuse University Committee on Equality (SUCE) won't take action on an anticipated bid to the Sugar Bowl.

The vote against a possible condemnation of Louisiana State University (LSU) was unanimous Tuesday night.

SUCE planned to take action if the results of a study showed segregation in the Louisiana university.

But the study showed a definite effort by LSU to integrate.

In the past six years the enrollment of Negroes at LSU has increased, Richard Trilling, chairman of SUCE's athletic committee, said.

At present there are 100 Negroes in the Baton Rouge branch to 15,131 whites. The New Orleans branch of the university has 518 Negroes to 5,764 whites.

A court order this year to admit Negro undergraduates was not conteested, Trilling said.

A haircut also helped the decision.

A Negro student, refused a haircut in a campus-run barbershop, was personally escorted back by the chancellor of the New Orleans branch. When the barbers still refused to cut his hair, the chancellor fired them on the spot. New ones were hired.

"We're glad that LSU is integrated," Robert Lubetsky, president of SUCE, said. "We weren't looking for them to be segregated, but integrated. And now we're glad we can play the game."

Editor's note: Syracuse has not as yet received a Sugar Bowl bid.)

This didn't happen in a vacuum," Lubetsky added. "It happened through the actions of interested people."

More Houses Penalized By IFC Court

The InterFraternity Council Judicial Board cracked down on two more violators of university and IFC regulations Monday, resulting in social probation for one house and a $50 contempt fine for another house.

The house was placed on social probation until June 1965, for what the board ruled was an unregistered social function. The house funds were used to buy beer, which was then served to the brothers, Donald Thorn, chief justice, said.

The board ruled the actions did constitute a social function, even though there were other persons present at the location, because the brothers did have "dominance" at the bar, Thorn said.

In the second case, a house was fined $50 for contempt by the board for failing to obey a previous board ruling to submit regular progress reports to the board. This disobeyed ruling stemmed from previous rules infractions.

Proposed Amendment

SS to Give Itself Power

The recent furor between Student Senate and the Association of Woman Students has resulted in a proposed amendment to the senate constitution giving SS the right to review by-laws of all organizations. The amendment excludes those by-laws of social fraternities and sororities.

If passed by steering committee, the amendment is scheduled for discussion when the senate meets at 7:15 p.m. today in Maxwell Auditorium.

"The issue will probably be tabled after limited discussion and brought up at the following meeting," Robert (Robby) Stern, speaker of senate said.

Frank Richmond, chief justice of Student Court, will speak in regard to the court's decision in the AWS-SS controversy.

Also set for today's legislature is a report by Stern on his meeting Tuesday with Chancellor William P. Tolley concerning the Board of Publications constitution

Student Senate will also accept suggestions from the delegation as to the most effective project for the use of Sugar Bowl funds, should the Orangemen receive and accept an official bid.

"The senate does not have jurisdiction in the matter," Stern said, "but will be open to suggestions and will offer these recommendations to the university."

Carl Corrallo, president of Student Government, is scheduled to deliver a State of the Campus address at the meeting.

"Spectrum," an all-university undergraduate journal, will be distributed at the legislature meeting. The book's creation evolved at the fall 1963 Pinebrook Conference as a suggestion to recognize and encourage academic achievement.

The experimental publication is a collection of student papers gathered from various departments within the university.

Volunteers for the editorial staff of the next issue will be called for today, according to Virginia Lederer, editor.

Theta Chi Leaves Senate In Protest of Recent Acts

Theta Chi fraternity is with drawing its representative from Student Senate in protest against recent SS actions.

William Christie, house president, told the Daily Orange Tuesday he is "disenchanted" with senate operations.

Christie attacked the SS rejection of the Association of Women Students's constitution and the letter sent to Virginia Polytechnic Institute's president condemning alleged segregation at VPI.

"I resent their audacity in sending that letter to the president of VPI," Christie said.

Christie said he was active in Joint Student Legislature last year as chairman of the government structures committee and member of the steering committee.

Student Government was always involved in wrangling, Christie said. and he got the impression that the steering committee controlled the legislature. Thus he doesn't think Theta Chi has much chance to effectively oppose the actions it is against.

"We want them to know," Christie said, "that someone has become disenchanted with the whole idea of Student Senate—enough so that our purposes would be best served by remaining outside."

The Greeks: Part 2

The InterFraternity Council, just as Student Government, suffers a striking lack of prestige among its component members.

As most students would be hard-pressed to name more than one Student Government official, the individual male Greek on the campus would be similarly distressed if asked to name an IFC officer or to state the purpose of the organization.

And just as Student Government suffers because the lack of interest on the students makes it so, the IFC suffers because the individual Greeks simply do not want a strong all-fraternity organization dictating their affairs.

This attitude has consistently been faulty, and it can only lead to the further breakdown of the Greek system as evidenced by decreasing numbers of pledges each year, decreasing grades among fraternities and increasing need for the judicial board to issue stricter and stricter penalties.

Friday's edition carried the story of a sweeping punishment for violations of hazing regulations. Today's paper carries the story of two more flagrant violations of rules. There seems no end.

It is time for the Greeks to take a sincere look at themselves and decide that the time for action is now.

The Greeks must refurbish their feeble attempts at academic and intellectual betterment. They must do more than building files of examinations. Social growth is all the more swift and all the more rewarding when it is accompanied with intellectual growth.

The all-fraternity average has again slipped below the all-men's average, and several houses barely cling to an average above 1.0 — for the entire brotherhood. Certainly the Greeks are not building an impressive academic reputation.

The judicial board has indicated in its recent decision that it might need the threat of greater penalties to have punishment equal the crime. One such punishment would be to take away the immunity from houses appearing before the board. A little public embarrassment goes a long way.

Only through enforcement of the rules today will the Greeks learn to abide by the rules. Only by abiding by the rules will the Greeks show they have the maturity to merit the change in the rules their actions show them to favor.

The Greek tragedy has been written. Now is time for a sequel.

O Say Can You See

None Dare Call it Liberty

By Ken Auletta

The American Legion is to Syracuse government what Cardinal Spellman is to New York City's. The Cardinal labors to scrub our literature of its four letter words. The Legion labors to purge our society of its communists. Both bring federalism to our city governments by serving as checks on the powers of the people's representatives.

On Thursday, Nov. 12, John K. Dungey, who is chairman of the Americanism committee, American Legion post 41, offered as his private property a resolution condemning the appearance of Pete Seeger in the War Memorial this Saturday. It was the monthly county meeting of this 1,000 membership organization, and the 27 posts of our American Legions swiftly and unanimously expropriated Mr. Dungey's property.

Pete Seeger happens to be an American who has given to America its very own folk music; and now he was condemned by a crowd of men whose collective lifetimes shall not, in honesty, amount to nearly as much.

He is a criminal because he refuses to allow the compassion of his youth to be bullied by the pretenses of adulthood. He is a man who feels, not just as an artist, but as a man.

But Pete Seeger was once called before our House Un-American Activities Committee and quickly cited for contempt of Congress for invoking the first amendment of our constitution which tells that Congress shall make no law abridging free speech. A federal court overruled this charge, but this makes little difference to our Legion.

Everyone has their own God, and "None Dare Call It Treason" is a pocket-book bible better suited to convenience than the hard-covered volumes of the Supreme Court Reports.

What our Legions wanted that Thursday was that all performers who appear in the War Memorial be required to sign or have signed for them a loyalty oath which acknowledges their reliance on American democracy.

On Friday, the manager of the War Memorial, who along with his arena is city owned, received a letter from John H. Mulroy, Onondaga County Executive, dated Nov. 12, asking that a loyalty oath be included in all future contracts.

This was a carbon of the letter sent to Eli Gingold, county attorney, and a man who seemed unburdened of any particular manners save those of the judges who sat on his book shelves.

Yet Mr. Gingold this Monday angrily denied that there was ever any intention of placing a loyalty oath in the contracts of the War Memorial. "We are not a court of law, we have no right to convict. What we want is the right to cancel a contract if we later find that the performer has been convicted of subversion," said he.

Back at the building which contains post 41, you sit at the bar and stare in disbelief at the packaged copies of "None Dare Call It Treason" which are dispensed in place of Polish Kolbasi. Both are things to be quickly chewed and painfully forgotten.

At a table in the lounge sits F. W. Judkins, former county commander, and a short and portly man whose thick, white mustache and pink skin seem equally suited for a British white pith helmet, white shirt, shorts, long socks and an elephant gun, as for a vested suit.

Mr. Judkins, even without the uniform, is a hunter. But unlike most hunters he uses a shotgun: "We object to Pete Seeger because of his established record. We feel that his presence there, representing the very things his record indicates, is in our opinion a desecration of the purpose for which the War Memorial was erected.'

Mr. Dungey, who looks like a kindly waiter whose persistent service to humankind has left him eager to escape to the chairmanship of the Americanism committee, sat nearby. It is on him that the documentation of the case against Pete Seeger falls; "Have you ever heard some of his records?' he asks. "His 'Hammer'—'If I Had A Hammer' son, and the one about 'Marble Banks'—both tell right-out of his communism!"

These two hunters will probably succeed in their loyalty oath plans, offering some damning proof that American politics repeats its mistakes with the simple certainty of a Marxian conclusion.

In the meantime, the ticket-agent at the War Memorial leans the weight of his bored body on the bend of his arm and reports that "tickets are not going well for Saturday night.' Reports filter that the Legions will descend upon the War Memorial this Saturday, with pickets in hand. While the county attorney and the county executive presumably scramble to mix law and public relations.

One wants to believe that American politics is more than the success of the pressure group that is closest to its community's standards.

To the Editor:

I am writing in regard to the letter to the editor of Nov. 13, 1964 entitled, "A Moral Conviction?" Since I am the only female Negro committee chairman in the Student Senate, I assume that Miss Freeman was referring to me when she said, "What disturbed me most were the representatives who left rather than vote on the issue. Perhaps the Negro committee chairman who left felt this whole thing did not concern her." She made this statement in reference to my stand on the racial discrimination policies at Virginia Polytechnic Institution.

I charge that Miss Freeman has made a gross error. If she will look at the senate voting record for that night, she will be informed that I left after I had voted. My departure was due to a prior commitment and only after all of the senate business was completed (just before adjournment). Not only did I vote, but I had voiced an opinion on the subject stating that my race had made this an issue of the utmost importance to me.

I can only say that in the future Miss Freeman should carefully weigh her comments and make them in the light of what actually happened and not on a rash judgment.

To the Editor:

Before I graduate in June, I would like to share with the freshman class the most profound piece of information I have gained since September, 1961. This piece of information involves blue books and examinations. When a professor draws up an exam that requires a good deal of writing (10, 12 or 16 pages), one can be sure that said professor will provide him with an eight-page blue book. However—when a professor draws up a short answer quiz that requires little writing (two or three pages), one can also be sure that said professor willl provide him with a 16-page blue book. Blue books or life?

Caught in Passing

Turkey Days in New York

by Jeff Zients

As Thanksgiving leave approaches it's time once again for Zients' handy guide to fun and games and entertainment in the big town. After seeing "Fail-Safe" I don't know if I will join you but here are my suggestions.

On Broadway: For musicals your best bet is still Carol Channing in "Hello Dolly!" This is truly the greatest entertainment package on the big street at this time. For the best in comedy get over to the Golden Theatre and spend an evening with Victor Borge. For more serious musical theatre buffs you might test the Sammy Davis version of Odets' "Golden Boy" for straight comedy Neil Simon's "Barefoot in the Park" is a delight as is "Never Too Late." Streisand's "Funny Girl" and Zero Mostel's "Fidler on the roof" are two examples of great talent in fairly successful productions. For drama try Arthur Miller's "After the Fall" (Bring dinner and a change of clothes.) Wrap up — First try "Hello Dolly" then Borge then Sammy Davis.

Niteclubbing in New York can be expensive and boring. Not so at the Rat Fink Room atop the Roundtable. Jackie Kannon is the host and many celebs drop in nitely to adlib with him. A favorite here is Jack E. Leonard. For those who aren't used to New York niteclubs a suggestion: stay out of the village. You will be charged over five dollars for what you could get at the Savoy for under two and the atmosphere is the same. The talent presented here is at best "unusual." The best club in New York where you can see the best floor shows in the city for about seven bucks a head is still the Copa.

Other things to do in New York must include a midnight ride on the Staten Island Ferry, a visit to a street revival meeting usually on B'way and 45th and a trip around China Town. Places to avoid must include the crowded and grotesque Playboy Club, the overpriced and snobbish Top of the Sixes and being any place near Central Park after the sun goes down.

But let us think positively. To those of you used to the prices at the Music Box an economic thrill is yours at Goody's or one of the large record stores that line Broadway.

Finally to those of you with a bit of capital to invest in dindin may we suggest either the Sunday breakfast celebration at La Fonda Del Sol in the Time and Life Building or, to me, what is probably one of the finest restaurants in New York, Charlie Brown's in the Pan Am Building. In the latter you can order a literal yard of ale served in a three foot glass.

So gang, have a boff Turkey vacation but remember alas all the term papers and exams due right before Christmas. You will probably spend the four days like me, working on papers and dreaming about Christmas vacation. Then after our "Christmas In New York" Column we can spend Christmas studying for finals. "Intersession in New York" anyone?

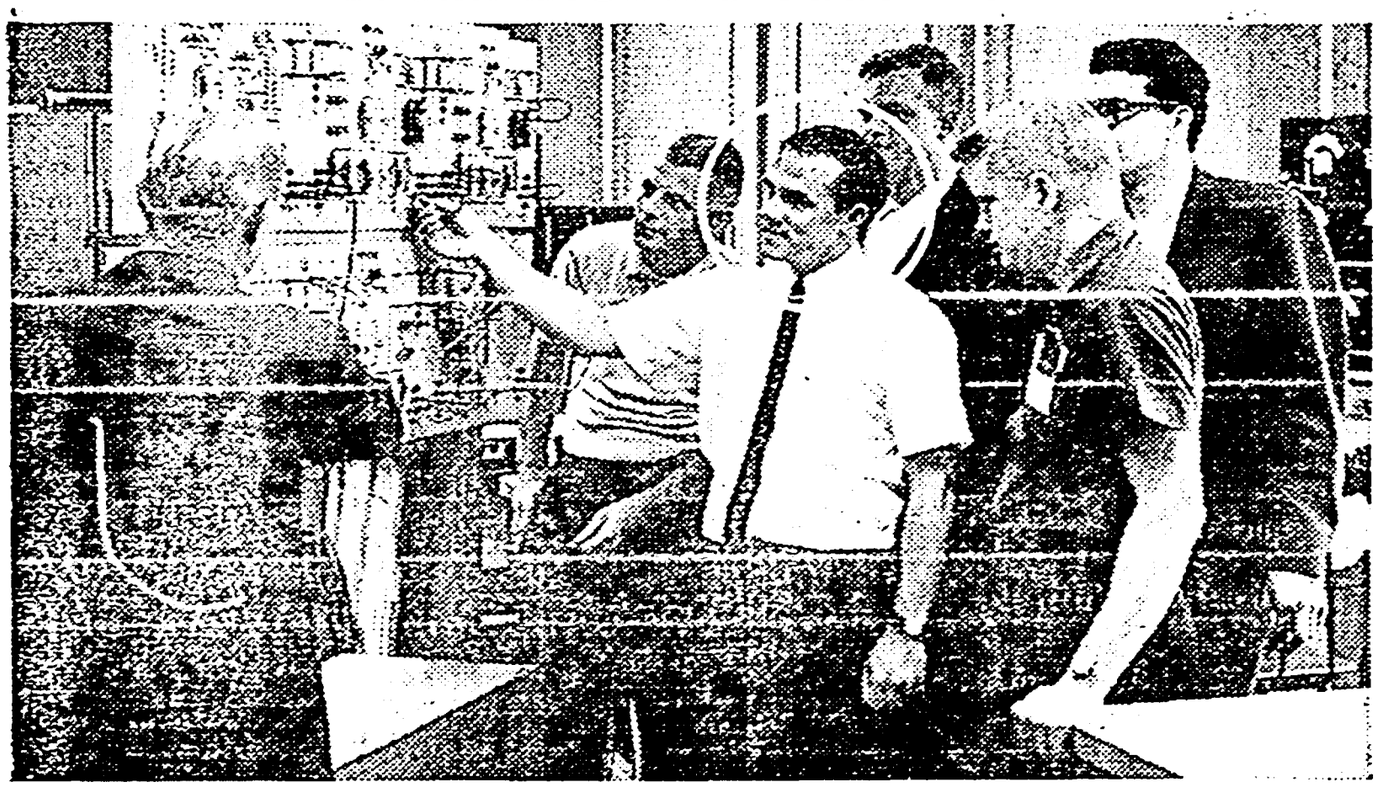
Graduation was only the beginning of Jim Brown's education



Because he joined Western Electric

Jim Brown, Northwestern University, '62, came with Western Electric because he had heard about the Company's concern for the continued development of its engineers after college graduation.

Jim has his degree in industrial engineering and is continuing to learn and grow in professional stature through Western Electric's Graduate Engineering Training Program. The objectives and educational philosophy of this Program are in the best of academic traditions, designed for both experienced and new engineers.

Like other Western Electric engineers, Jim started out in this Program with a six-week course to help in the transition from the classroom to industry. Since then, Jim Brown has continued to take courses that will help him keep up with the newest engineering techniques in communications.

This training, together with formal college engineering studies, has given Jim the ability to develop his talents to the fullest extent. His present responsibilities include the solution of engineering problems in the manufacture of moly-permalloy core rings, a component used to improve the quality of voice transmission.

If you set the highest standards for yourself, enjoy a challenge, and have the qualifications we're looking for — we want to talk to you! The Second Dissent: AWS vs. SS

The following is the text of the second of two minority opinions in the case of the Association of Women Students vs. Student Senate, heard and decided by Student Court in favor of AWS.

The opinion was written by Nancy Illich and Eric Mower.

Questions and decision:

1. Is question justiciable? 10 yes, 1 abstention.

2. Can Student Senate review constitutions? 9 yes, 2 no.

3. Can Student Senate require inclusion of nominating procedures and officer eligibility requirements in constitutions? 6 no, 3 yes, 2 abstentions.

4. Can Student Senate review the by-laws of organizations? 6 no, 3 yes, 2 abstentions.

5. Can Student Senate review the essential structure of organizations? 6 no, 3 yes, 2 abstentions

In recognizing the validity of the act of Dec. 1, 1953, passed concurrently by both Men's and Women's Student Governments, Student Court has upheld in this present case of Association of Women Students vs. Student Senate, the power of Student Senate to review the constitutions of all student organizations at Syracuse University. It was the opinion of the court however, that a constitution need not contain anything more than is explicitly prescribed in Robert's Rules of Order, Revised, article 67, specifically:

1. Name of the society
2. Object
3. Qualification of members
4. Officers and their election
5. Meetings of the society
6. Method of amending the constitution

Our initial dissent arises in reference to this, as we can no longer hold with the opinion of the court.

Upon cursory examination, these articles may appear quite adequate in requiring much of the essential structure of the organization to be contained within the constitution. However, the appearance of adequacy is—to a great extent—illusory. And the illusion stems from the simple fact that these requirements remain both vague and highly discretionary in their content. In the particular case at hand, we are extremely concerned with article 67, title IV, of Robert's Rules, which deals with "officers and their elections."

It was the opinion of the court that the Senate could require neither nominating procedures, nor eligibility requirements to be contained within title IV, and in our opinion thus rendered a rather sterile interpretation of the term "elections." In effect then, this quartering of a primary governing rule left little but the hollow frame of what was once considered important election machinery. Thus in dissenting, we indicate that election procedures are of little worth when they contain neither substantial nominating procedures, nor explicit eligibility requirements.

Further, we contend that the recognition of the Senate's expressed power to review the constitutions of all student organizations is merely token, and especially so when the right to review by-laws and other essential structure is denied.

The obvious purpose of the power of legislative review was, and is, to insure that campus organizations not only contain democratic procedures, but also those crucial structural elements necessary for the success of the organization.

Therefore, we must further dissent upon seeing the destructive emasculation of senatorial review, and the subsequent procedural inequities arising within the Association of Women Students. It is the very curtailing of the review power which makes it possible for questionable nominations procedures to elude such senatorial review, and ultimately remain immune to this threat by containment within the association's by-laws.

We therefore dissent on the basis that Student Senate's ability to review the various constitutions of campus organizations is contingent upon its power to not only require the inclusion of nominations procedures and eligibility requirements within the constitations, but also upon the power to review by-laws and all other essential structural elements, and that without these powers senatorial review will be so critically enfeebled as to render it virtually ineffectual.

geographical boundaries." This ugliness may refer to a certain period of architecture or the "sameness" of architecture in suburban communities.

He said he felt the federal government should encourage good design and a "concern for design and utilization of it."

Weaver mentioned social and financial problems facing the city.

"There is the poverty of families and individuals who don't have sufficient means to maintain a standard of living when we are the most affluent nation in the world," he said.

The city must also meet its great financial burdens but the property tax is the main source of income to city governments and is insufficient to meet the burgeoning needs demanded of municipal governments.

Decrying the lack of efficiency planning, Weaver referred to the "scatterization of the slurb," a conglomeration of suburbs spread all over, and the destruction of the beauty of the suburbs by people whose original intent was to beautify the countryside.

He concluded by saying the ultimate question to be answered was "what sort of society do we wish in the future?"

Sounding a utilitarian note Weaver said that the role of the federal government is "not to decide where the individual should live or work but to afford to the maximum degree the maximum number of choices to the American people."

Passing Threat

McCune Star QB

"He's a better passer than Bob Schweickert," offered Joe Szombathy.

And the Orange grid scout wasn't talking about Navy's Roger Staubach or Tulsa's Jerry Rhome.

The fellow who received the praise was one Allen McCune, West Virginia's starting quarterback who figures to give the Hillmen fits with his passing Saturday at Morgantown

McCune has only directed the Mountaineer attack for the past three weeks. Since that time West Virginia has won three straight and McCune has tossed eight touchdown passes.

The 6-2, 180-pound junior from East Bank, W. Va., didn't exactly break any passing records last season, throwing eight times and completing none.

It looked like McCune would sit the bench most of this season, too. But after the proud Mountaineers dropped three of their first six games, climaxed by a 37-8 shellacking at the hands of arch-rival Penn State, coach Gene Corum made a switch.

McCune took over against Kentucky and fired a scoring pass the first time he put the ball in the air, as West Virginia went on to upset the Wildcats, 26-21.

SU coach Ben Schwartzwalder added, "This boy McCune sure scares us. Apparently he put on quite a show last week."

That he did.

Against William & Mary, McCune completed 16 of 26 passes for 216 yards and two touchdowns. The young field general now boasts 47 completitions in 82 attempts, a 57.3 average

CLEGG

He then directed his club to a pair of 10 - point victories over conference foes foes George Washington and William & Mary.

"McCune's not impressive to look at, but he gets the job done," said Corum. "He really made our team jive."

He leads the Southern Conference in passing percentage and TD tosses and is second only to VPI's Schweickert in average yards gained per completion.

A drop-back thrower, McCune has a new West Virginia passing record almost in his grasp. His 57.3 percentage of passes completed is four points higher than the mark set by Gerald McInerney in 1951.

All of which empowers Hill coach Roy Simmons to say "He'll be the best passer we've faced all year."

One of the reasons McCune has been so effective is the presence of 6-1, 218-pound tight end Milt Clegg.

Clegg, a stellar performer as a sophomore who dropped to third team last season, has rebounded to rank second in receiving for the Mountaineers.

14-6 TRIUMPH

Club 800 Scores

By BOBBIE MARX

In a late-night thriller under the lights of Lew Carr Field, Club 800 captured the living center independent intramural football championship from Watson West 2, 14-6.

Watson West 2, who last night became the first freshman team in many years to conquer the living center championship, lost to the independent team composed mainly of boys from the city of Syracuse.

Club 800 started on its winning path by scoring a two-point safety within minutes of the game's opening. Al Sylvia scored the safety to put his team ahead.

Amidst the flying mud, Club 800 came forward again, this time for the touchdown. Quarterback Sorbello passed to left halfback Dibello, who went over the line for the six points. The extra point failed and the score stood at 8-0.

West 2 rallied with Ken Ritzenberg catching a long pass for a first down, but the freshmen couldn't muster a sustained drive.

The winning combination of Sorbello and Dibello came back to score the second touchdown for the 800ers.

The second half saw Watson rebound and score. Zimbahl passed to Kaufman for a spectacular 45-yard gain which set up the losers' touchdown. Dick Taylor caught a pass in the end zone to make the score 14-6.

Floyd Little Named All-East — Again

By NEIL KERR

By turning in still another outstanding performance, this time against Virginia Tech, SU sophomore Floyd Little was again named to the All-East team of the Eastern College Athletic Conference.

Little has now been named to the squad five times — once as a halfback and four times as sophomore-of-the-week.

Floyd earned the outstanding sophomore award this week by gaining 222 yards and scoring once in Syracuse's 20-15 defeat of VPI.

With last Saturday's totals, Little became the no. 1 sophomore ball carrier in Syracuse history as he surpassed Ernie Davis' 1959 record of 686 yards. He gained 155 yards against the Gobblers for a total of 732 yards this season. Floyd has now carried the ball 128 times for a team leading 5.6 average per carry.

The talented sophomore ranks as Syracuse's number one pass receiver this year, too. His total of 228 yards on 15 catches surpasses the total yardage of all his teammates in that department.

Little is also the individual team leader in both kick off returns and punt returns. He has carried ten kickoffs for 301 yards — a 30.1 average.. Statistics show that he has returned 11 punts 270 yards for a 24.5 average per carry.

The elusive Little has 1540 yards via all ways of attack, an average of 171 yards per game.

In addition, both Little and his running mate, Jim Nance, have scored 11 touchdowns and rank among the nation's best in point totals.

✦ ✦ Dual Role for SU's Jim Brown ✦ ✦

By JIM BROWN

When I reported to the training camp of the Cleveland Browns this fall, I was in the finest physical condition of my career, despite the worries I'd had about the effect of my first film role on keeping in shape.

Although I consider my off-season conditioning program to be fairly simple, I was concerned about getting "soft" during production of "Rio Conchos" on location in Moab, Utah. Basically, my program involves keeping active mostly through sports and saying "no" to second helpings and desserts.

JIM BROWN
. . . grid fullback

But I had heard a lot about the "easy living" of movie actors and I was surprised to find that keeping in shape seemed to be the least of my problems when I arrived in Moab to start the picture.

Stars Stuart Whitman, Richard Boone and Tony Franciosa and director Gordon Douglas made me feel at ease and I felt almost as though I was reporting to the Browns' training camp instead of a movie location.

But any illusions I had about "easy living" were shattered after the first day of shooting. I was so physically exhausted from riding horses, driving mules and being attacked by Indians — just a few of the physical demands I had to face in "Rio Conchos" — I felt as if I had just played all four quarters of the Pro Bowl.

"Rio Conchos," starring former SU All-American fullback Jim Brown, opens today at Loew's Theatre.

In the picture, I portray a cavalry trooper who joins Boone and Whitman in a search for renegades who have been running guns to the Apaches. I get shot at, attacked, beaten up, tortured and dragged by my heels behind an Apache horse.

At the end of each day, I felt like I had been carrying the entire New York Giant defensive unit on my back.

And what was most discouraging was seeing Boone, Whitman and Franciosa undergo the same physical demands and seeming never to tire.

While all three of these gentlemen present an image of ruggedness on the screen, I was surprised to find that off-camera they are just as robust. Boone, who has always been one of my favorite actors, was an outstanding amateur boxer and he is still in fine physical shape.

Whitman works out daily in a gymnasium in his home and he also swims, skin dives, rides horseback and plays tennis and golf to keep in trim for his film roles. And Franciosa works out daily with weights — even on location — and plays tennis. In addition, after being introduced to horseback riding in "Rio Conchos," he has become a first-rate enthusiast.

In addition, Tony, Stu and I and a few of the other fellows from the cast and crew played basketball against local teams on Sundays. Even our leading lady, Wende Wagner, is athletically inclined. She is a former stunt girl and a champion swimmer and diver.

A lot of young fellows from the Moab area were used as extras in "Rio Conchos" and they were as impressed as I was with the strength and stamina of the cast and crew. "Rio Conchos" is a rugged film made by rugged individuals.

Easy living? I think I'd rather face Sam Huff daily than take on the Apaches again, even in make-believe.

Legislature Puts Court Members On New Investigation Committee

Senate Passes Board Proposal; Debates Withdrawal, Funds

Student Senate dealt with proposals about the Student Board of Publications constitution, the withdrawal from the senate of Theta Chi fraternity and suggestions for the use of the possible funds that Syracuse University would receive from a Sugar Bowl game at its meeting Wednesday night in Maxwell Auditorium.

Chief Justice of the Student Court Frank Richmond addressed the meeting, explaining the court's rationale in striking down the senate's bid to exert control over constitutional matters in the Association of Women Student's constitution.

Stern told the senate that a meeting with himself, Student Government President Carl Corrallo and Kathleen Kapsol, special assistant to the speaker, has been scheduled with Chancellor William P. Tolley concerning the new publications board constitution.

By a unanimous voice vote, a motion was passed for SS to request a constitutional amendment making a unanimous vote of the publications board mandatory to oust any editor or staff member of a publication.

Commenting on the departure of Theta Chi from the Senate, Stern noted the house's "secession" from the senate barred it from participating in any Student Government activity for

Commission To Review SS Procedural Actions

By MARLENE CIMONS

Student Court members were appointed to lead an investigation into Speakers Robert (Robby) Stearn's actions in conducting the Oct. 28 Student Senate meeting, the SS decided Wednesday.

The decision was made, after a heated debate among delegates, to investigate the procedure in proposing and passing a letter to the president of Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

In order to remain within the senate rules, the senate appointed the members of the court as individuals to consider the situation.

The matter is not within the jurisdiction of Student Court as a whole according to the delegation of power in the Student Government constitution.

Edward Luft, representing Acacia fraternity, charged that Stern committed four errors in regard to the situation. He challenged the judgment of the speaker in the manner in which he allowed the letter to come before the senate.

"Surely such a matter should have received more publicity and thought and should have been kept in committee for study," Luft said.

Luft also accused Stern of open violation of the rules of procedure, as cited in Robert's Rules of Order.

"The speaker, having relinquished his chair to take a position on the legislation, resumed his chair of authority to conduct a vote on which his position was then known," he declared.

In addition, Luft claimed senators were deceived because two roll call votes were taken.

"Many senators who cast their votes the first time left Maxwell thinking the first vote was conclusive," he said.

A roll call is necessary to determine if a quorum is present, Luft alleged. An inspection by the speaker is not sufficient, he said.

Luft's motion read:

"I and my constituency with the knowledge and support of others, demand that a special investigation commission be appointed without prejudice of position to look into these charges and ascertain what

IFC Penalties

Increase Motion Tabled

By DAVID SOSNA

A $200 maximum penalty for perjury and a $500 maximum general penalty was requested by Donald Thorn, chief justice of the InterFraternity Council Judicial Board in Wednesday's IFC meeting.

Thorn's motion for the two penalty increases was tabled until the next IFC meeting. George Van Derven, IFC president, instructed the representatives to explain the motions to their fraternities and be prepared to consider it again after the Thanksgiving vacation.

Thorn said that the court's powers must be increased if the hazy regulations are to mean anything. He also said he felt this would strengthen the entire fraternity system because of the increased powers that would apply to all the cases that come before the court, not just hazing cases.

The requests were made after the chief justice, for the first time in recent IFC history, explained the details of some previous findings by the board. While omitting names in most cases, Thorn referred to one as the "ZBT hazing case." (The fraternity had been identified in Monday's Daily Orange).

He discussed the $50 perjury fine that the court levied and told the representatives "the type of half truths and fuzzy information the board has to listen to make it extremely difficult to try a case."

He said that stronger penalties for perjury must be legislated or the court would be forced to refuse cases. "If this is what is going to happen, then the board will have to turn cases over to the dean of men's office," he said. "We can't operate without the truth."

Discussing the requested $500 maximum, Thorn said, "The board is there to strengthen the fraternity system." We must be self-regulating but we must be effective in our self-regulation."

Speaking of hazing, he said, "We can't let this continue. Unless hazing is cut out, the board will be swamped with similar cases. It's about time we stopped direct physical paddling."

Information Booklet

Directory Ready for Sale

By KAREN ZAGOREN

In case you have been short on dates and your buzzer hasn't awakened you lately, have faith for the Syracuse University telephone directory will go on sale this week.

Included in the directory are various types of information about administration, faculty and students.

Extension numbers as well as office locations and campus addresses are given with home addresses under the individual listings.

In addition, the titles of members and the college and class of students are in the listings.

A separate listing provides telephone numbers for all university living centers and sorority and fraternity houses.

Also included are the traditional orange pages which consist of advertisements, bus schedules and maps of the university and city.

In the administrative and academic offices section information provided ranges from Chancellor William P. Tolley to zoology, amidst which can be found such varied and controversial subjects as football, food service and publications.

Commenting on why the directory has not appeared before this date, Mrs. Dorothy Powers, who is in charge of the publication, said Tuesday, "students don't realize what a heartbreaking, backbreaking, dreadful job it is to check every name and try to get 100 per cent accuracy."

Even so the directory is not completely accurate, she added. The Manhattan directory is 1500 listings off when it comes out, Mrs. Powers offered as a comparison.

As soon as the mail room receives and is able to distribute the directories to the bookstores they will go on sale, said Sid Waldman, general manager of the main bookstore.

The long awaited volumes of information will be on sale no later than Friday at the main bookstore and the Corner Store and Mt. Olympus branches, he said.

Everything in the directory is the same as last year's including the price, related Mrs. Powers. The orange-bound book sells for $2.25.

AWS to Sponsor Area Conference For 35 Colleges

This weekend 125 women representing 35 colleges and universities will arrive on the Syracuse University campus for a conference supported by the Intercollegiate Association of Women Students.

The conference will discuss the role of educated women.

The girls, from a region extending as far north as Maine, as far south as West Virginia, and as far west as Michigan, will be at Syracuse Friday and Saturday. They will attend discussion groups led by Syracuse faculty on Saturday morning. In the afternoon they will hold workshops to discuss the problems of AWS.

Two-thirds of the delegates will stay at Haven Hall, one-third in Flint and Day. To make room in the dorms for these delegates 125 coeds have volunteered the use of their beds.

At two banquets the delegates will be entertained by the Salt City Singers, and hear speeches by Dean of Women Marjorie C. Smith and Assistant Dean of Women Elynor Erickson.

The burden of preparations has been carried by the A W S sophomore commissioners Barbara Twyford, Patricia Edwards Paula Bartolini, Linda Sedlak, Patricia Yellen, Marilyn Castaldi and Bette Barnes. The commissioners worked under chairman Susan Goldin.

Visiting Critic To Give Talk

Robert Furneaux Jordan, of London, visiting critic at the Syracuse University School of Architecture, will give a lecture at 4 p.m. today in Gifford Auditorium, Huntington B. Crouse Hall. His topic will be medieval architecture.

A native of Birmingham, England, Jordan has won several prizes for architecture and is the author of several books. He is currently writing a book on Victorian architecture.

At the School of Architecture Jordan is working on projects with fourth year students in architectural design. He is scheduled to give a second lecture Dec. 10 on 19th century architecture.

The lecture is open to the public.

The County And Seeger

Pete Seeger will sing in Syracuse Saturday, and the American Legion may picket to its heart's content, but it will never win its right to regulate what man may hear and not hear, think and not think.

Seeger's scheduled appearance has set off a flury of local Legion activity, resulting in a proposal that all persons who appear in the War Memorial be required to sign a loyalty oath.

The appearance of Seeger personifies the struggle for free speech, unfettered by any ultra-American, anti-communist organizations who would keep our minds so clean as to not know what communism is or entails.

The proposal to include a loyalty oath in War Memorial contracts clearly presents the backward attitude of much of the Onondaga County administration, who in their minds know they're right.

No man should have to proclaim his loyalty to anything, for every man has a right to be heard, regardless of his beliefs.

We wonder if County Executive Mulroy would have requested Dolph Schayes and the rest of the Nats to sign such oaths if they were still playing basketball here. Perhaps it is this very attitude on the part of the county that forced the Nats to flee to Philadelphia.

The American Legion should take heed — we'd probably all still be British citizens if a few men didn't have the guts to speak their mind when others told them they couldn't.

Action

One of the campus groups which takes the brunt of much undeserved criticism Tuesday made a lot of its critics look pretty silly.

The group is the Syracuse University Committee on Equality, which is the main, if not the only, spokesman on the campus for the cause of civil rights and individual liberties.

Tuesday this group voted unanimously not to take direct action against a Sugar Bowl football game with Louisiana State University, much to the surprise and pleasant shock of those who were so certain the group's only purpose was to protest.

By some standards, LSU may indeed be "segregated," but SUCE realizes the progress made by that university in tearing down the age-old walls of prejudice that have separated white and Negroes.

Indeed, LSU may soon even have more Negroes than our own Syracuse University.

We may not always agree with SUCE's actions, but we wholeheartedly endorse the group's purpose and direction, for the battle for equality is one which must be won.

As long as groups like SUCE continue to think before they act, and then act with the power of their convictions, they certainly merit a worthy place on the campus of any university.

Millstones and Milestones

Chewing Gum

By Dan Stone

"It's about time that the DAILY ORANGE editorial page had a column that aroused the delight and interest of the majority of its readers."

—Letter to the DO editor

I rarely bother to answer letters to the editor. Once I sent a handwritten reply but this is the first time I have bothered to reply by column. There is a very sound reason for this.

It is my feeling that the average person who writes a letter to any editor short of the "New York Times," with the exception of the president of an editorially-wronged organization, is just seeking attention. He is not too interested in what he is saying but is rather being goaded by the guys on the floor or the guys in the house to say something cute and get his name in the paper.

I'd like to make it clear that I don't think this massive five-paragraph letter that took two people to compose is any exception. On the contrary I think it's typical of the average letter to the editor.

But it is also typical of what too many outsiders choose to think of as "the Syracuse mentality" and for this reason I jump at the chance to answer that charge rather than the letter itself.

This particular letter goes on: "There is no rule that a column must present a point. Some of the most widely read columns in America are written for the entertainment and enjoyment of the reader."

Now I don't know whether these two avid "students of the newspaper in America" are referring to Dorothy Kilgallen and Dear Abby (both of whom I could get along admirably without) or whether they're referring to Art Buchwald and Hal Boyle (who I would rather not try to get along without); but I assume they're talking in this area.

I agree. These people all write columns that don't have (except for Buchwald) a very strong and telling point. But it is also interesting to note that it is a rare newspaper that runs any of these columns on the editorial page. Most are on the entertainment or women's page or are in a special position of their own.

Editorial pages are inclined to confine themselves to thinkers such as Roscoe Drummond, Scotty Reston, and Walter Lippmann. Russell Baker is the notable exception that proves the rule. As much as I would like to agree with this letter, and you know sometimes even I find a kernel of enjoyment in Jay Litwin's column, I am hard pressed to imagine Walter Lippmann telling me who he thinks the cutest or the smartest girls are in the sororities around Washington or I can't imagine Joe Alsop remarking briefly on his favorite political science teacher.

It is my feeling and I don't know how many share it, that these columns should indeed have a point.

Too many students are in fact too apathetic here. Too many feel the situation in South Vietnam is nothing more than an idle play war in an exotic land. Too many criticize the university administration with no attempt at balance or no attempt at understanding what they're criticizing. Too many are content to lead the soft little lives they've led so far and grow up into soft little people without a concern for anyone other than themselves.

It is these people that an editorial page should try to shake, gentlemen. If it could find one person who looked at things a little differently when he had finished reading, it would have more than accomplished its purpose. If it could strike one spark in this apathetic tinderbox it would be worth reprinting.

There are people on this campus on the other hand whose delight and interest can be aroused by an idea or a cleverly turned phrase and it is these people, quite frankly, that I would rather serve than two students looking for chewing gum for the eyes.

Find your chewing gum where you will, gentlemen, but I hope it continues to be somewhere other than the editorial page.

LETTERS

IFC

To the Editor:

The philosophy of discipline found at a particular college depends upon the general aims of the institution, its organization, the educational philosophy of the administration and the attitude of the institution toward fraternities. The concepts of discipline vary, but can be put into four basic categories.

1. The Paternalistic.

Fraternities are regarded as groups of children inclined to mischief, subject to scolding, but never are the groups permitted to assume real responsibility. The paternalistic - minded administration naively assumes that fraternity members through repeating the initiation vows are somehow miraculously changed into responsible individuals.

2. The Authoritarian Philosophy.

The so-called "best interests" of the institution are the constant concern. Get rid of those not interested in securing an education. To paraphrase this explanation — get rid of those not conforming to his standards of conduct. Discipline under this concept is punitive in nature. The theory is that through fear people will conform to externally imposed standards. Under this concept of discipline, the observance of regulations often generates or rather degenerates into a game between the administrative "cat" and the student "mouse". Usually in this contest the dean becomes a "rat."

3. The Laissez-faire Philosophy.

The administration in this case refuses to recognize potential dangers and therefore makes no attempt to anticipate them. When an explosion comes, punishment is meted out haphazardly, then back to the pleasant doze we go. In fractured French, "laissez-faire," as applied to discipline, should be translated as both "fairly lazy" and "fairly lousy."

4. The Positive Philosophy of Personalism.

a. An institution concerned for the maturing of its students must consider discipline to be an integral part of its educational program. It must by recognized as a process of learning. Ideally, this "personalism" philosophy discipline permits the college and its fraternities to work together toward the substitution of internal group responsibility for external authority. The ideal toward which we strive is the achievement of self-responsibility the characteristic of the mature adult. Personalism discipline becomes an obligation of the college, of the campus fraternity, its officers, its alumni and its national office.

b. Personalism requires consistency in the administration of discipline, in the interpretation of the code of conduct and in the means of control.

c. Care must be exercised to maintain a balance between the integrity of the fraternity and the integrity of the campus community.

d. The college must be willing to grant fraternities increasing self-control in accordance with increasing maturity.

IFC Rush Chairman

Parking

To the Editor:

The lead sentence of the article in the November 5th Daily Orange is decidedly misleading.

The parking committee is wrestling with the idea of need rather than seniority, but it still is a long way from having such rules adopted, as the committee can only propose and the University Senate and Cabinet will dispose. Just in the nature of things, a full professor has a higher need and priority than say a graduate assistant.

Lest the hopes of your readers will not be raised to a great extent by the article, may I state that the proposal that every resident undergraduate student will be personally responsible for finding parking space for his car on areas other than university parking lots has been mulled by the parking committee. The reason for this proposal is that in order to function this university needs a large staff which comes here from a widely dispersed area and it will become imperative to find adequate parking for faculty and staff.

Chairman of the Parking Committee

O'Neil Play

The Circle in the Square, New York drama company, will present Eugene O'Neill's "Desire Under the Elms" at 8:30 p.m., this Friday at the Regent Theatre.

The play is another in the annual Celebrity Series of performances scheduled by the University Regent. The Circle in the Square company has previously produced "Six Characters in Search of an Author" by Pirandello and Dylan Thomas' "Under Milk Wood" in Syracuse.

"Desire Under the Elms" employs a cast of 11 and this performance is part of a 30-city tour. The play uses the New England coast as its setting. It explores the emotions of hatred, greed and lust and recounts the conflict between an old, tyrannical father, his three sons and the young woman he marries.

In 1924, "Desire Under the Elms" was first produced in New York. Three years ago it was made into a motion picture. It has had several revivals but none has received the critical acclaim of this production.

The Circle in the Square company has received many top theatrical awards for its productions, including the Newspaper Guild's Page One Award, the Antoinette Perry and Variety Awards, and the Vernon Rice Memorial Award.

Tickets for "Desire Under the Elms" are available at the Regent Theatre box office for $3, $2.50, and $2.

Syracuse Symphony

by Martin Cohn

Within the space of a month, Syracuse has had the privilege of hearing two magnificent Soviet pianists. A few weeks ago, it was Emil Gilels, who gave a great performance of Lizt's B minor sonata. Last Saturday night, it was Lev Oborin, performing Prokofiev's third piano converto in conjunction with an all-Russian program by the Syracuse Symphony.

In spite of the fact that Oborin is not quite as famous as Gilels, his artistry is on the same high level; it combines beautiful tone and exemplary technique with a perfect sense of rhythm. And it was this last named quality that helped him sustain the nervous energy that pervades all of Prokofiev's glittering concert. The performance was, however, basically a lyrical one.

The collaboration between Oborin and Conductor Kritz was very productive; they obviously agreed about the way the concerto should sound. As for the orchestra they played the concerto well, but, more important, all sections of the orchestra blended together for a homogeneous sound of a kind that I have not often heard before in Syracuse. Indeed, everything was well integrated, and the overall result was a masterful performance.

Tchaikovsky's "Pathetique" symphony that ended the program was something that is hard to describe. Much of the orchestral playing was just plain bad. The only section that did not make a flawed contribution was the woodwinds who played beautifully throughout the whole concert. Yet in spite of all these faults, Maestro Kritz led a truly alive and flexible performance. It did not sound as if the orchestra was playing the work for the hundreth time, but as if they had just discovered the work and were enjoying themselves to the full. This festive atmosphere communicated itself to the audience, and I for one went home singing the third movement.

SG Initiates Freshman Program

In an effort to "make the student at Syracuse University feel like a member of the university community" Student Government has initiated a freshman program, according to SG spokesmen.

Every freshman living center will be addressed by members of SG, who will explain the methods of entering into student government activity. The program, first of its kind at SU, includes discussions of the role of the students in the university community.

Students will have an opportunity to ask questions about student government, and how they can improve their community through this organization.

SU Teaches Speech Ed In Madison Area Project

A speech education program for first and seventh-graders and junior high school students has recently been initiated through the Madison Area Project, according to Paul Ried, professor at Syracuse University's School of Speech and Dramatic Art.

Washington Irving and Croton elementary schools and Madison Junior High School are presently participating in weekly exercises designed to teach children the techniques of story telling, sentence building, listening for ideas and forming health attitudes for verbal self-expres- a week.

The program is staffed by three part-time instructors of the School of Speech: Mrs. Charles H. Holmes, Mrs. Beula Rohrlick and Barbara Dennis. Eighteen volunteer workers are repeating and reinforcing the teachers' exercises at least once a wek.

"By establishing correlations between words and imagination, these children are learning to stimulate their minds while using speech fully and effectively," Ried said.

United Fund Tops Goal

The United Fund drive for staff and faculty members at Syracuse University has topped 102 per cent and may go to 105 per cent, Lucille H. Verhulst, director of women's physical education and UF campus chairman, has announced.

The goal for the university drive, which includes the State College of Forestry, Syracuse University Research Corp. and the regular university employes, was $42,500. A total of $43,164.20 was received by the end of October, reporting day for UF chairmen.

Miss Verhulst said she has received late contributions of nearly $400 and more is expected. "I will not be surprised if we climb to at least 105 per cent before all pledges are received," she said.

Working with Miss Verhulst were Ralph Unger, College of Forestry; Martin Goff, SU Research Corp.; and Walter F. Medicis, SU. Eleven assistant chairmen and 87 team captains helped in the fund drive.

Coeds Begin AWS Program For Future Officer Training

Formerly known as Through the Keyhole (TTK), the Association of Women Students education program begins this week with two evening sessions — one Tuesday and one at 7 p.m. today.

Providing information about AWS, the training program is designed especially for those who want to be AWS sophomore commissioners, executive officers, guides, clerks or reviewers, but anyone who wants to be better acquainted with AWS may attend.

This year the material is presented in a discussion session format by the executive officers themselves, under the direction of Kathleen Taylor, an AWS senior officer.

The Tuesday night session held in the recreation lounge of the Women's Bldg. was attended by 75 girls. Make-up sessions will be held for those who are not able to attend both consecutive sessions. The program will be repeated in its entirety this spring.

Those who are interested in positions in the AWS organization may take the examination and be interviewed by AWS officers for the positions.

In the spring the 12 sophomores who did the best in the program will be nominated to run for the six junior executive positions, except for president, vice president and general guide chairman who are elected by campus women from AWS nominees.

"The purpose of the interviews," explained Miss Taylor, "is to give us a chance to get to know each girl personally. And, they give the girls a chance to ask us questions and offer suggestions and criticisms of AWS."

SIA Program Set on Ceylon

A Syracuse-in-Asia sponsored program on the cultural geography of Ceylon will be presented by Laksman Yapa, a graduate student in geography at 7 p.m. today at the Chapel House.

The purpose of Syracuse-in-Asia is to promote interest in and understanding of Asian cultures. The organization is composed mainly of Asian international students, but is open to all.

Previous meetings have included Philippino dances under the direction of Rene Valesquez and a "Festivals of India" program by J. C. Jayasanker.

Senate Passes Board Proposal

as long as it remains out of the senate.

Stating that some may be "discontented with the channels SS is taking," Stern asserted that whatever one's views were, it had to be admitted that SS was certainly an active body.

Richmond explained the legal reasoning behind the court's decision in the recent AWS case. He said, "The power sought by the senate was an implied power and we were of the opinion that it was out of the senate's jurisdiction.'

Commission. . .

corrective action shall be taken against any and all offenders of the rights, privileges and dignity of the senate and report such findings directly to the senate."

The number of junior colleges in the United States has risen above 725 this fall. Over one million students are enrolled in these colleges.

Richmond further noted the court did not necessarily agree with the AWS nominating procedures, but it did feel SS actions were unconstitutional.

Stern cited three proposals for the use of Sugar Bowl funds, should SU receive a bid. They were the Student Union Fund, in the name of the late Ernie Davis; the proposed new student health center and a scholarship fund for the culturally deprived.

Chuck says he paid 300 bucks less for his Coronet than you did for that turtle of yours

You really know how to hurt a guy.

"Chuck's a swinger," says she. "His Coronet is quick and clean, with a lean and hungry look. It's equipped with a 426 cubic inch mill that will mock your turtle at the strip or on the street. He's got four-on-the-floor, buckets, belts, carpets, console, spinners, and a padded dash. And he said that everything but the four-speed stick and the 426 was standard." Then she broke his back by asking, "Didn't you pay extra for some of that jazz?"

Don't let the truth hurt you. Better see the all-new, hot new Dodge Coronet before you buy a (cuckoo), a (cuckoo-cuckoo), or even a (cuckoo-cuckoo-cuckoo).

POSTS 9-7 WIN

'800' Grid King

By BOBBIE MARX

It was the boys from Syracuse—Club 800—who captured the All-University intramural football championship last night at Lew Carr Field. The commuting Independent team defeated Phi Delta Theta, 9-7.

Phi Delt grabbed an early lead as Dunc Crowther passed to Mike Murphy for 45 yards and a touchdown. Crowther reappeared, this time catching the pass for the extra point and the fraternity team led, 7-0.

Club 800 rebounded with a pass to Bombardo and the city boys advanced to the Phi Delt 3-yard line where they were stopped.

Late in the half Dave Comardo scored a two point safety to make it 7-2.

Club 800 kept its scoring streak alive by tallying the first time it had its hands on the ball in the second period. Sorbello passed to Bombardo for the touchdown on a fourth and one situation.

Sorbello connected with Comrado for the point after and the score read 9-7, Club 800, and remained that way for the rest of the game.

Phi Delt rallied midway in the second half as it drove deep into Club 800 territory, but a 15-yard offensive pass interference penalty killed the drive.

With 1:25 left to play, Club 800 intercepted a fraternity pass in the end zone to preserve the victory.

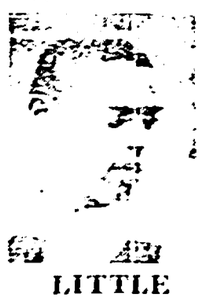
Club 800 may challenge LeMoyne's championship intramural team for the all-city college crown.

NEA Tabs Little For All-America

By KEN RUDNICK

Syracuse University's supersoph, halfback Floyd Little, has been named to the All-America third team on offense by Newspaper Enterprise Association, the first such group to throw its hat into an ever-growing ring.

Hill defensive end George Fair received honorable mention status.



LITTLE

Little found himself in the company of such luminaries as Alphonse Dotson, first - team defensive end from Grambling (La.) and Arnie Chonko, first - team defensive back from Ohio State.

The coaches, writers and professional scouts who participated in the NEA poll did not neglect some of the big names, however. They put Glenn Ressler of Penn State, one of the nation's finest defensive performers, on their first team — at offensive center.

And Dick Butkus, the Illinois linebacker whom the men with the money in the AFL and NFL can't wait to spend it on, managed to make the second team on defense.

In addition to Ressler, seven Orange opponents appeared on the 66-man All-America roster: Len Frketich (third-team offensive end) and Jack O'Billovich (first-team linebacker) of Oregon State; Gale Sayers (first-team offensive halfback) of Kansas; and Marty Schottenheimer (second-team linebacker) of Pitt. Also, Kent Francisco (second-team offensive tackle) of UCLA; Jim Whalen (third-team offensive end) of Boston College; and Bill Zadel (third-team offensive tackle) of Army.

SU's projected Sugar Bowl foe, Louisiana State University, placed Remi Prudhomme, a tackle, on NEA's first defensive squad.

With the return of most major schools to the two-platoon system under the new substitution rule, this marks the first time in many years that All-America selections are being made for both offense and defense by the NEA. Most of the other All-America lists will probably follow the trend.

Little is just another face on the NEA encyclopedic listing, but this is hardly the last chance he'll have to prove that the same impression he's made on SU's adversaries has spread to further precincts.

Listed below are the first-team offensive and defensive units:

Offense

E —Jack Snow (Notre Dame)
E —Fred Biletnikoff (Fla.S.)
T —Jim Wilson (Georgia)
T —Larry Kramer (Neb.)
G —Tommy Nobis (Texas)

MOUNTAINEERS West Virginia coach GENE CORUM chats with a pair of standouts, guard ROGER ALFORD (center) and fullback DICK LEFTRIDGE. Alford, a 5-10, 220-pound junior, looms as the outstanding offensive interior lineman for the Mountaineers. Leftridge, at 6-2, 240, has collected 405 yards rushing, tops on the club.

Orangemen Face Final Hurdle

By BOB KRENGEL

All signs are pointing to a humdinger of a football game this Saturday, when Ben Schwartzwalder celebrates homecoming weekend at West Virginia.

The Orangemen will find the Mountaineers capable of blasting post-season hopes. The West Virginia team has been improving steadily and has a record of six victories against three defeats. It captured the Southern Conference title.

The reason for the unsuspected Mountaineer success this season has been the fine performances of passing quarterback Allen McCune, fullback Dick Leftridge, tailback John Piscorik and ends Dick Madison and Milt Clegg.

If the Mountaineers are to win, they must step the hard charging Piety. Syracuse is second in rushing this week according to NCAA statistics released Tuesday. In eight games Michigan leads the country with an average of 253.3 yards a game on the ground. Syracuse has rolled out 243.3 yards a game.

The West Virginia defenses must stop the Orange scoring, a habit that has put them into the eighth spot in the nation's scoring with a 25.2 average. The Orange 1-2 punch of Floyd Little and Jim Nance is eighth in the country in scoring with 11 TDs. Equally rugged on the defensive side, the Piety are ranked eighth in rushing defense, allowing 85.0 yards per game.

But the Mountaineers can toss around statistics, too. McCune leads the Southern Conference with a 57.3 pass completion average, and has connected for eight touchdown passes.

His success is largely due to the fact that two fine ends, Milt Clegg and Dick Madison, can haul in his tosses. Madison has snared 14 for 238 yards, while Clegg leads in that dtpartment with 16 catches for 206 yards.

The strength of the team does not diminish as it moves to the line. With Don Vail and Stan Lysick at the tackle positions, guards Roger Alford and Steve Kush, and center Gary Barnette, the forward wall is a formidable obstacle.

The Mountaineers will attempt to stop the deadly Orange duo of Little and Nance by a strong defense featuring guard Don Young and end Bill Sullivan. Young has scored 46 main tackles and has 35 assists to lead the squad. Sullivan tops the ends with 28 and 20.

In the rushing department, fullback Dick Leftridge leads with 405 yards. His sub, Ron Colaw has 219, while tailbacks Piscorik and Doug Stanley have 214 and 167 respectiveiy. Madison paced the club with 7.1 average yards per carry.

Changes in the Orange lineup for the game include switching halfback Billy Hunter to replace Ted Holman at defensive halfback. Holman will shift to second team safety in order to give Rich King more time for offensive quarterbacking. Bill Wosilius should see action at defensive end.

Senior Bowl Invites Bo

Jim (Bo) Nance, charging Orange fullback, has been invited to play in the Senior Bowl football game Jan. 9 in Mobile, Ala.

Nance and Kansas halfback Gale Sayers both were offered spots yesterday by bowl chairman Rea Schuessler, thereby becoming the first Negroes to break the Senior Bowl color line.

Big Bo said he plans to accept the bid if the Hillmen go to the Sugar Bowl, since there is doubt that he will then defend his Eastern wrestling title due to a lack of time for conditioning.

Nance, the nation's seventh leading rusher, displays 788 yards on 162 carries, a 4.8 average. He also has scored 11 touchdowns.

Sugar and SU

New Orleans sports columnist Buddy DiLiberto has declared that the Syracuse Orangemen are definitely a Sugar Bowl choice, whether they win or lose against West Virginia Saturday.

"Syracuse would say 'yes' officially now," DiLiberto stated, "but coach Ben Schwartzwalder doesn't want to give West Virginia added 'fuel' and probably will remain quiet until after Saturday's game."

In DiLiberto's words, it's "unofficially official" that SU will play LSU in the Sugar Bowl.

The Times-Picayune writer lists three reasons why Syracuse is the logical Sugar choice:

(1) "Syracuse is a solid football team — one capable of giving any team in America a good game. The record indicates as much.

(2) "In Floyd Little and Jim Nance, Syracuse has the greatest 1-2 punch to come out of the East since the Army days of Doc Blanchard and Glenn Davis. Dynamic runs — the type which Little obviously could supply — are the life-blood of bowl games. In post-season attractions, the emphasis should be more on offense than defense.

(3) "With the heavy concentration of the nation's press in the East, Syracuse would afford the Sugar Bowl tremendous national exposure."

Orange Could Finish In Nation's Top 10; 1st Time Since '59

By JIM KLURFELD

As the man said, "Just one more time."

That's all Ben Schwartzwalder's men have to do to accomplish a trip south of the Mason-Dixon line New Year's Day, finish in the nation's top 10 for the first time since 1959, and compile an 8-2 record for the second successive year.

That's all Bill Orange has to do—beat West Virginia at Morgantown tomorrow.

But Schwartzwalder insists it will be no mean feat to beat his old alma mater.

The Mountaineers are 6-3, winning their last three games since installing junior quarterback Al McCune on the starting eleven.

Rumor has it that even if Syracuse loses Saturday,

Coeds Aid Freedom Cause

Two Syracuse coeds have exchanged a semester of campus life for the dangers and trials of civil rights work in Vicksburg, Miss.

Elaine Singer and Mary Jo Cronin are presently working for the Vickburg Freedom House teaching school and helping with voter registration.

Their headquarters, Freedom House, was bombed several weeks ago but neither girl was hurt.

In a letter to the vice president of the Syracuse University Committee on Equality Nov. 12, Miss Singer commented on the freedom workers' difficulty in finding headquarters since the bombing of Freedom House.

"The Negro owner (of the building in which they had set up) was threatened by some white men that they'd burn the place down if he didn't have the freedom workers out by Sunday," the letter read.

"No one will rent to us at all...and no one will sell to us either," Miss Singer wrote.

Salvaged from the demolished Freedom House were 200 of its 9,000 books, a filing cabinet, typewriter, mimeograph machine, two desks and seven folding chairs, according to Miss Singer.

The girls, both members of SUCE, volunteered and were accepted by the freedom project last May. In September both decided to remain in Mississippi and continue their work for a semester.

They will be seniors in the

Frosh Orange Aid Rolls off Presses

The Orange Aid is coming Monday!

After nine weeks of assembly, nine days at the lithographer and two weeks on the presses, the freshman directory has been completed by the junior class executive council—and in record time. For the first time the publication will be available before Thanksgiving.

Other "firsts" for the directory include a list of phone extensions for all residences and pictures of all freshman living centers, according to William Weller, junior class president.

The information given about the freshmen includes name, home address, university extension and height. The pictures are divided with coeds at the front of the book.

The book will be available Nov. 23, 24, 30 and Dec. 1-4 in the Syracuse University Bookstore and in the cloak room of Huntington B. Crouse Hall. The price of the 96-page directory is $2.

Freshman who placed their orders at registration must pick up their books in HBC. Receipts are necessary. Others may buy them in either sale location.

"I think the class has made an admirable achievement in producing the book," Weller said. "It's completeness (96 per cent of the freshmen are included) is perhaps its most outstanding quality. Hopefully we have set a precedent for the junior classes which follow."

The profits from the book, which has already been paid for from registration sales, will be used for the junior class scholarship fund.

Court Members Refuse To Conduct SS Inquiry

BULLETIN

The members of Student Court voted unanimously Thursday night not to conduct an investigation into charges against Student Senate Speaker Robert (Robby) Stern, even though the group had been requested to do so by SS.

Chief Justice Frank Richmond, explaining the court's decision, said the members felt they did not have the facilities to run an investigation; the investigation was clearly a legislative function; and the court would be unable to handle an impeachment case due to prior prejudice, should the results of the investigation lead to such action.

Richmond said the court recommended that an executive committee investigate the charges.

IAWS Reps Arrive on Hill For Meeting

By SUSAN STRANDBERG

Today 125 college women from 35 colleges and universities will arrive at Syracuse University "to hold the torch of women's rights on high."

This is the theme of the 24-hour sub-regional conference of the Intercollegiate Association of Women Students to be held here this weekend.

Saturday morning the delegates will attend any one of four discussion groups. Dr. Michael O. Sawyer, associate professor of citizenship and political science will lead one discussion on "The Role of Women in Government." "Morals and the Woman" will be examined by Charles C. Noble, dean of Hendricks Chapel.

Dr. Mary H. Marshall, professor of English, Dr. Miriam Swift, practicing physician, and Mrs. Faith Seidenberg, a lawyer, will look at "The Role of Women in the Professions." The former dean of the College of Home Economics, Barbara P. Griggs, will speak on "The Dual Role of Women."

Among the 35 schools represented are Boston University, Cornell University, Douglass College, Kent State University, Pennsylvania State University, Rochester Institute of Technology, Skidmore College, University of Connecticut, University of Delaware, University of Maryland and University of Rochester.

The work of the conference begins at 10 p.m. today with a general meeting at which Assistant Dean of Women Elynor Erickson will speak. The keynote speech will be given by Dean of Women Marjorie C. Smith Saturday morning.

After the discussion groups have met the delegates will break up into workshops and study women's role on campus and the problems of AWS. Jean Crawford, assistant to the dean in charge of women's residences, will conduct a special workshop for the visiting advisors.

Also on Saturday the delegates will be treated to two coffee hours and a banquet in the alumnae lounge of the Women's Building which is the center of the conference's activities.

The Salt City Singers, a campus folk singing group, will sing at the evening banquet. Members of the group are: Marc Gold, Bill Rivkin.

MONEY LOST

A Syracuse University student recently lost a large sum of money in the university area. According to the student, the money was lost either at Lew Carr Field or near the business library in Slocum Hall.

Anyone with information about the money is asked to call Mel at HO-3-6011.

The Passing Of a Year

It's hard to believe a year has passed.

For its seems like only yesterday we were sitting in the basement of our fraternity house, trying to balance some bills, when we first heard of the shot that began the four-day nightmare.

JOHN F. KENNEDY

We found it so hard to believe then, for John F. Kennedy was so much a part of every one of us. Today the shock is gone, but grim reminders still plague us.

And plague us they must, for we must not forget.

We must not forget every time we hear "Hail to the Chief" that somehow it was his song. And when we sing the national anthem, we must not forget that he gave himself so the beliefs could continue to live.

We must not forget his spirit when we read his words, for they were words of life, injected with life, written and spoken so life could be better for every man.

Nothing is quite so binding as sorrow, and never was sorrow so abundant as in those four days one short year ago.

And sorrow must be turned into hope — a hope for America, a hope for freedom, and a hope for mankind. The world cannot operate on ideals, but the ideals for which to strive must always be present.

Let us strive for the John F. Kennedy ideal of life, living every minute to its utmost, daring anything and anymone to remove the youth and zest from us.

Where he began, we must continue. The torch he lit must be passed from hand to hand, never slowing.

In life he gave us much, yet the irony is that in death he may give us even more.

Tiger at the Gates

Never Again

By Dan Ritey

It's been a year now; a year since a little of each of us died that day in Dallas.

Three shots from a sniper's rifle and the torch-bearer of a new generation, a young generation, our generation, was no more; snuffed out along with his priceless flame at the peak of their brilliance.

And we who mourn the loss of John Fitzgerald Kennedy are faced with a realization of this multiple aspect of this loss. Too, we realize the void this loss has created in us and the length of time which may well elapse before we are granted another like him.

We mourn the vitality of the man; an energy and enthusiasm which led him to attempt new methods of solving chronic problems.

We mourn the loss of a youthful idealism and adult astuteness and awareness.

We mourn, too, his infusion into the American scene of a vital dose of young blood and fresh ideas; of a new generation of leaders whose aim was to emphasize the modern in modern America.

And above all, we mourn the irreplacable loss of dignity: not the dignity which resides in the White House because of the nature of the office held there—that still remains with us.

No, it's the pride that we took in a young American family with whom we could so easily identify; an attractive wife, charming children, a wit and lore about them, a worldliness which belied their years, an elevation of culture and intellect to their proper levels: these are the components of dignity that were snatched from us just a year ago.

And if we move for a moment from the pride which was instilled in us by Kennedy, his family and actions, our emotions are further wrenched when we, as college students nearing adulthood, mull over the special impact his passing has had upon us.

For it was a youthful man —in many cases, a man younger than our fathers—whom we lost. A man with whom, unlike any other leader of our era, our generation could identify; a man whose actions, thoughts and words could hardly fail to move us or help bridge the previously impossible gap between the generation of tomorrow and the leaders and events of today.

John Fitzgerald Kennedy linked us, with our budding idealism and hesitant realism, to the realities and issues of the world around us.

He extended our minds and hearts through the Peace Corps; he stiffened our backbone and pride with his stand in Cuba; he guided our thinking towards disarmament and international peace and goodwill.

And he could — and did — make many of us proud to be Americans. He made us proud that a hairline margin in the 1960 elections proved true an adage that says, "democracy is the suspicion that more than half the people are right more than half the time."

It was only 49.7 per cent of the electorate—but they surely have been proven right.

Concurrent with the notions of class and dignity which he gave to America and his chronological and mental closeness to our generation, is the glimpse he afforded us of a new type of leader, hopefully a type that will multiply rather than become extinct because of the outrageous and untimely death of its protoype.

We regarded, and can now only remember, John Fitzgerald Kennedy not as a dyed-in-the-wool politician, but more as a symbol, a visionary and vision combined who challenged us with new ideas and frontiers and sought from us superlative efforts at all times.

Excellence . . . .imagination . . . .inventiveness. . . .pursuance of quality goals . . . . yes, we could characterize those months of his leadership in these terms. But we'll always cherish and cling to in our hearts his call to the future; a changing times; a new breed of leaders, thinkers and achievers.

He was the first and, understandably, was received with hostility or, at best, skepticism, in many quarters; he was the first and, accordingly, faced overwhelming tasks with which he could not always cope as he wanted to; he was the first and thus on occasion made errors of eagerness and inexperience tinged with idealism.

But he was the first and he tried; tried to alter his country's values and, by doing this, set an international trend, a new wave of living and thinking.

He was the first and maybe the world at its present point in development and time was not ready for him. On other occasions, too, men have rejected these whose changes and ideas have then since become basic for us all . . . .

We mourn, finally, our deprivation of such a leader and the opportunities lost maybe forever with him. But never can we allow this mourning to lull us into a shocked stupor; the efforts of thoughtful people must be channeled towards finding another bold and refreshing spirit.

The torch which has been passed to our generation cannot be allowed to flicker out in self-pity, apathy and a return to older ways and outlooks.

Doing this would repudiate and negate the hopes and accomplishments of an American of distinction; of a phenomenon it had been our great privilege to have observed and felt.

"Death be not proud . . . ." runs the opening of Donne's immortal poem. Surely, death must be as unproud and a bashed at its deed as we are proud and triumphant in the memory of its victim.

LETTERS

Value

To the Editor:

One function of a newspaper, it seems to me, is to stimulate thought through provacatively written editorials. A student newspaper is supposedly representative of its student body; it also possesses a public relations value.

The D.O. impresses me as a daily with unrealized potenaial. In the interest of making students aware of issues, it has, in the course of one month, been anti-administration, anti-intellectual, anti-large dormitory; anti-football coach (twice); anti-Parents' Weekend (the day before parents arrived); and conspicuously lacking in self-criticism and reflection.

It is good to be critical of one's education and the institution through which one receives that education. There is a vast difference, however, between being critical and being cynical. In the former case, one has reasons and, very often, alternative suggestions. One also has, if he possesses any degree of maturity, an attitude which makes inevitable an objective, positive, respectful, and aactful approach. In cynicism, one scorns what he does not fully understand — often defensively and never creatively.

To have any real and lasting impact, to stir up, to lead —as any good newspaper does —the Daily Orange must, it seems to me, modify its attitude and do a great deal more thining about the scope and values of education and about the role of a student newspaper in an educational setting.

Seeger: Elder Spokesman

by Michele Sobel

Which came first: the chicken or the egg? Debatable. Not debatable, but sometimes forgotten is that Pete Seeger was one of the men responsible for the current folk music craze.

Seeger will give a concert at 8:30 p.m. this Saturday at the War Memorial. In an interview with Seeger, we asked him how he got started in his career:

"In 1940, I would have been graduated from Harvard. Instead, after two years at college, I took my banjo and traveled around the United States. I wasn't sorry I chose to leave," he said. "It was a tremendous thing to leave the cloistered halls and enter real life. I'd never been West before until Woody Gurthie showed me it was possible to make a living singing in saloons. It was a real education."

Seeger is a man of strong opinions ranging from commercialism in folk music to the rights of an entertainer.

On commercialism: "I'm commercial myself. Artists must eat. Unfortunately, some are in such a hurry about the eating that they forget about the art," he said.

We also asked him about the use of folk music to introduce protest songs:

"There is a great increase in the writing and singing of protest songs, but I would caution you that all good art is protesting in one way or another. Even bawdy songs are protesting against sanctimoniousness. In its day, 'The Ballad of Jesse James' was just as much of a protest song as Bob Dylan's 'With God on Our Side,'" he said.

In 1957, Seeger was cited by the House Un-American Activities Committee for contempt of court. He was investigated, along with other artists, as to Communists tendencies or beliefs. Seeger, instead of invoking the Fifth Amendment, used the First Amendment as the basis for his case.

"I felt that the committee had no right to ask any American citizen such questions," he said. "I though that this case was a challenge and I felt that it was easier for me to test this principle than for anyone else. There was no job I could be fired from. I had, however, no desire to be a notorious case. I was just there."

Since then, Seeger has appealed his case before the New York Supreme Court and won. He has not, however, been invited to appear on television since the case.

Seeger takes a placid view of all this: "I have more jobs than are possible for me to accept," he said.

About anti-Communist groups protesting his public performances Seeger says: "I feel that most of them have never heard the songs I sing."

Now, at the age of 45, Seeger has become one of the elders of folk music. We asked his feelings about the younger folk artists who've recently appeared and whether he feels that his day is over.

"I don't know. I've always been happy to sing whether it was to five people or 5,000 I'm happy to see a whole batch of young singers. If I've been any kind of link, I've been glad to help," he said.

SU Orchestra to Perform

The Syracuse University Orchestra will present a concert at 4 p.m., this Sunday in Crouse Auditorium.

The program will begin with the "Mauerische Trauermusik" by Mozart and the "New England Triptych" by Wililam Schman. Stuart Lanning will perform Mozart's "Concerto (K. 435) for Piano and Orchestra." Following the intermission, "The Symphony No. 5 in C Minor" by Beethoven.

The Syracuse University Orchestra is an all-university organization of seventy musicians. Its membership is comprised of students of the School of Music and of other colleges of the university.

The purpose of the organization is to provide musical experience for its participants and to broaden students' knowledge and understanding of music. The repertoire studied and performed includes the standard music of all periods as well as noteworthy contemporary music.

The next Crouse concert will be given by the University Chorus at 8:30 p.m., December 8. All Crouse concerts are free and offer campus parking.

ROTC Names Outstanding Cadets

ROTC Award

One of 24 cadets receiving Army ROTC awards was Cadet DAVID MARCHAK, a senior in the College of Engineering. Presenting the award for the outstanding cadet from Syracuse University while attending the 1964 ROTC Summer Camp was CAPTAIN GORDON STOCKHAMMER, advisor to Scabbard and Blade.

The crimson ribbon for service and the cadet of the month award were among the presentations made to 24 Army ROTC cadets at ceremonies Wednesday and Thursday.

Cadet Thomas Barry, a senior in the College of Liberal Arts, received the crimson ribbon as outstanding Army ROTC cadet of the preceding year, according to Capt. Franklin C. Haskins.

Barry was selected from among eight candidates on the basis of his superior military knowledge and outstanding appearance.

The cadet of the month award for October went to Cadet Ronald Jordon, a junior in the College of Liberal Arts.

David Marchak, a College of Engineering senior, won the annual Scabbard and Blade award. This is presented to the outstanding cadet from the university who attended the 1964 ROTC summer camp at Indiantown Gap Military Reservation, Pa.

Twenty-three cadets were designated as Distinguished Military Students, a title given to those who demonstrated outstanding leadership ability.

Those seniors who maintain the same high standards throughout their senior year will be designated Distinguished Military Graduates. They are offered regular Army commissions instead of the normal commission in the United States Army Reserve upon graduation.

Cadets who received this award are Gerald Barsky, Thomas Barry, William Bently, David Boysen, Gary Heinmiller, Thor Hapij, Joseph Lesiuk, Thomas Sands and Richard Snowdon.

Also Thomas Behuniak, Steven Bellow, Mark Bobry, Raymond Cardillo and Bruce Eaton.

Years of Presidential Campaigns

By John S. Mayfield

The following is the third of a series describing the functions and main features of the library system on the Hill. John S. Mayfield is the curator of manuscripts and rare books in the Syracuse University Main Library. The collection described will be on display in the lobby of the Main Library until the end of November when it will be moved to the Rare Book Room.

What is perhaps the most interesting, and equally informative and enlightening collection of historical material of its kind in the United States was presented to Syracuse University Library not long ago and now a selection from this collection is on temporary exhibition in the lobby of the Main Library.

The donors of this remarkable gift to Americana are Mr. and Mrs. Carl E. Dorr, Fayetteville. Both were members of the Class of 1900. Dorr was captain of the Syracuse University football team of 1899, and graduated from the Law College in 1902.

Known as the Carl E. and Amelia Morgan Dorr Collection of Presidential Campaign Memorabilia, the exhibition contains more than 3,000 political items, collected by the Dorrs over a period of more than fifty years, and consists of campaign paraphernalia comprising: ballots bandannas, china plates and pitchers, helmets, lanterns, wooden muskets, parasols, ribbons, sheet music and song books, torches, umbrellas and an unassorted number of other miscellaneous material associated with presidential election campaigns from the time of George Washington on down to the present.

The first president had no announced opponent but buttons and pins distributed and worn in his advocacy are in the collections; the numerous items pertaining to each presidential campaign since the beginning of the federal government constitute an illustrated index of the foremost issues and problems presented to the American electorate during all those exciting days and times.

Every presidential election is represented in this collection by numerous items, some of them simple, uncomplicated, run-of-the-mill materials, while others are evidence of the ingenuity of campaign managers or the inventiveness of insignia manufacturers interested in selling a bill of goods.

For instance, in the 1896 McKinley-Bryan contest, when the issues were a protective tariff and sound money based on a gold standard, one of the gadgets was a little metal yellow-colored bee, sometimes referred to as the "Gold Bug," made to be worn on the lapel; when its protruding tail was pressed or flicked, a spring was released, and the wings sprang out, revealing on each top surface small but brilliant photograhps of the confident candidates, McKinley and his running mate, Garrett A. Hobart.

The Democrats, supporting free silver, had the "Silver Bug" the same sort of contraption except it was of a different color, in line with the party's stand on the money question, and with pictures of its nominees on the wings: Bryan and Sewell.

In the Dorr collection are rare specimens of several of the macabre and funereal types of political novelties. In the 1896 campaign one pin was designed as a coffin, which when the lid was opened showed McKinley inside printed on the coffin itself were the date of the election and the words: "The tool of Trusts and British Gold." This sort of low campaign propaganda, it has been said, undoubtedly was at least an indirect cause of the assassination of President McKinley in September, 1901.

Another device, circulated by the Republicans during the same campaign and quite likely produced by the same manufacturer who was playing both sides, was a brass lapel button also in the shape of a coffin: on the lower lid was "Billy Bryan, Nov. 3, 1896," and when the cover hinged open, there inside was a picture of the Democratic nominee, looking down on the legend: "Free Silver Knocked Him Out."

Grusome also was a little gilded metal skeleton with a pin attached at the back of the skull; on the front was a panel with a hinge and clasp, and on it appeared in gold lettering the words: "Death to Trusts"; when this opened there was revealed inside a photograph of the handsome William Jennings Bryan, who was to live on to become a three-time loser.

The variety of materials which ingenious people have used for campaign devices in this country is amazing and astounding; and it may be noted that since about the turn of this century, the pins and buttons made of celluloid far outnumber any other kind, perhaps because of the low cost for high quantity.

A few celluloid items appeared for the first time in 1892 campaign, for the manufacturers were just then becoming acquainted with the substance and learning they could produce things other than men's collars out of it.

Before the advent of celluloid, the principal materials for the manufacture of campaign emblems were mostly brass, silver, white metal, lead, bone, rubber, and cloth, and in singular instances, even gold was used. Cloth served for a large variety of things, and from a study of the Dorr collection, one learns with interest that at a big political meeting at Urbana, Illinois, on the 15th of September 1840, there was suspended between two poles an immense cloth banner bearing the crude inscription: "The People is Oll Korrect."

Following installation of the collection in the library, Dorr said "Mrs. Dorr and I are both ardent advocates of the subject of the need to intensify a more wide spread knowledge of American history, and we have the feeling that this collection, now readily available at our Syracuse University, will contribute much to the learning of that knowledge which is so vital to good citizenship.'

Students in Rutgers University biology classes will learn their discipline through the use of closed circuit television beginning next September.

Although they are unsalaried, their room and board is provided by the Council of Federated Oragnizations (COFO), a national group which ties together the efforts the Congress on Racial Equality (CORE), Martin Luther King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference and other civil rights organizations.

Miss Cronin and Miss Singer received freedom work training in June at Western College for Women, a mid-western school which donated its facilities to COFO for the summer.

There they were taught canvassing methods for voter registration, subjects (such as Negro history) to be taught in the freedom schools, as well as methods of self-protection and non-violence.

THE BUTTON-DOWN AT ITS BEST!

Return to the traditional for comfort, quality and good looks. The back hanger loop, pleat and back button make this shirt the authentic traditional style. The soft, graceful collar roll and "417" V-Taper fit are Van Heusen's own. They make this shirt as hallowed as the Ivy halls.

Law Students To Compete In Moot Court

Syracuse University College of Law is sending a three-man team to Bufalo, Saturday, to compete with similar teams in a regional appellate moot court competition.

Cornell, Albany and Buffalo Universities law schools will also be attending this regional round of the National Moot Court Competition sponsored each year by the Young Lawyer's Committee of the New York State Bar Assn.

Moot Court deals with imaginary cases presented by law students. Saturday the SU team will plead for the appeal of a court decision.

The team is composed of the winners of last year's intermural competition. They are Edward Luton, a senior from Queens; William R. Morgan, a senior from Camillus, and Peter H. Searl, a senior, Honolulu.

If the Syracuse team wins in Buffalo, it will go on to the national competition in New York City in December.

Education for women — both at the college level and below — has recently received increased attention. Whether for enjoyment of further learning or preparation for a career, efforts to make the educational menu more attractive are under way in many parts of the nation.

I love a man in Van Heusen "417"!

This fall I've fallen for the "V-Taper" fit that accents his slim and limber good looks. Van Heusen did it! Their authentic traditional styling, softly rolled button-downs and trim Snap-Tabs make his the face I can't forget. The new-season patterns, fabrics and colors are only enhanced by his smile!

LETTERS

SUCE

To the Editor:

I would like to answer Mr. William Lindeman's letter of Nov. 17.

I agree with you that Audrey Freeman's letter was "especially poignant." I only hope that people really gave some serious thought to her lucid comments. However, as a member of SUCE, I wish to differ with your contention that SUCE is ignorant of discriminatory pratices in the North.

Many SUCE members are quite active in working toward the elimination of discrimination within the city of Syracuse. I also feel confident that SUCE would be one of the first groups on campus to act upon any facts made known to it about the unequal treatment, because of race, religion, creed or national origin of members of the Syracuse University community and its environs.

Because SUCE has criticized the policies of VPI does not mean it is unresponsive to or inactive about any policies existing in the North that it believes to be immoral. A look at some of last year's activities from participation in the March on Albany to the changing of SU's athletic policy will show SUCE to be as critical of the North as it is of the South. I think we must agree, however, that the problems of the South and the North are somewhat different in kind. Let us not use the existence of Northern problems to rationalize our silence about the goings-on in the South.

To the Editor:

The story of Monday, Nov. 16 concerning the Zeta Beta Tau hazing case states the following: "It was revealed in the testimony before the court that a pledge had been subjected to beatings with broom handles. . ." Not only was this completely erroneous and outrageous statement printed, but it was printed in heavier type than the rest of the story for emphasis.

Nowhere in Dean Carleton's testimony, the pledge's testimony to the dean, or in the house president's testimony did any mention of "beatings with broom handles" appear. The writer of the story confessed to me that he had extracted this pearl of information not from official judicial board sources, but from "private sources."

The penalties imposed upon the fraternity by judicial board were harsh; is it necessary that these penalties be further compounded by the publication of untrue statements as fact? Not only was undeserved damage incurred on campus, but a Syracuse daily newspaper, presupposing the repertorial integrity of the Daily Orange, quoted the damaging portion of the D.O. story. The readers of the D.O. have a right to be able to take the printed word as factual reporting. Where is the newspaper that publishes such slander as the above?

It seems to me that the D.O. should be as thorough in verifying their "private sources" as they are quick to print sensational items.

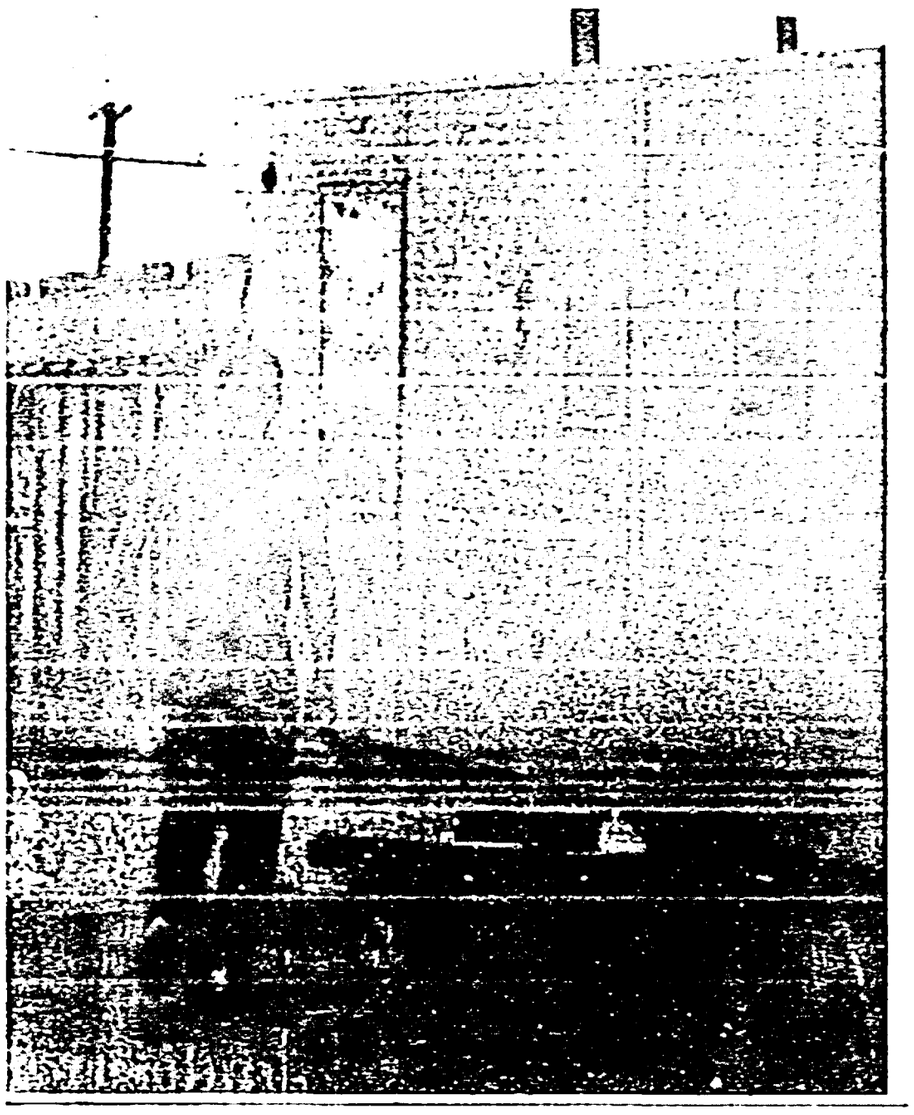
Trailer Headquarters

Law Addition Progressing



Students venturing near the Crouse College area may have noticed a small green trailer, conspicuously stationed behind prefab 8.

The trailer is headquarters for R.A. Culotti, Inc., contractors for the Arnold M. Grant addition to the Ernest I. White College of Law.

The three-story addition, begun in early September, is scheduled for an Oct. 1, 1965 completion.

The trailer is being used for coordinating, planning and architectual design for the addition, according to F.E. Crosby, acting liaison for the university and the contractors.

Grant was a cum laude graduate from the Syracuse University college of Law in 1929. Presently, he has a private law practice.

Kerns Appointed Instructor Of Photography in J-School

Robert L. Kerns has been named an instructor at the Communications Center, Chancellor William P. Tolley announced.

Kerns is the former chief public relations photographer for Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., Akron, Ohio.

Co-author of "Creative News Photography," Kerns was picture editor and photographer on several midwestern newspapers. He has won a number of national and international photographic awards.

"Kerns was added to the faculty at Syracuse because of the expanded photographic facilities in the Newhouse Communications Center, and to aid with the Navy photographic program conducted here," said Wesley C. Clark, dean of the School of Journalism.

Representatives Meet

Election Plank Fulfilled

Participation at the freshman class House of Representatives meeting Thursday was nearly 100 per cent, said Todd Wallens, class president.

The formation of the freshman House of Representatives was one of the planks in Wallen's election platform, It replaces the Freshman Forum, which was composed of representatives from each freshman floor.

This year's group is different, Wallens reported. The house will have a real legislative power. The method of passing recommendations will be somewhat like that used in state legislatures.

Representation is proportional, based on the amount of students in the living center. One representative will be allotted for every 30 students in a house or on a floor.

Bills will be introduced into the house, where they must be approved by a majority of members. If a majority of the executive council approves it, the bill becomes law.

The president will have a veto power, but his objection may be overridden by a two-thirds majority of the house and council.

This is the first year such power will be delegated to the freshman class student body, Wallens reported. The house will decide the class project and will have a hand in planning Freshman Weekend, scheduled for Dec. 11-13.

The initiation of any other class projects will be handled through this governing body.

"The officers are depending upon the meetings as a major source of communication between them and the entire class," commented the president. "Better communication will lead to class unity, and that was one of our election promises," he added.

Duzer to Address ISO-ESO

Roger Duzer, consular for the French Embassy in Washington, will be the special guest speaker in a program co-sponsored by the Interantional Students Organization and the European Student Organization, at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 1, in Maxwell Auditorium.

Duzer will discuss French foreign policy and is expected to concentrate on such topics as, the French in Viet Nam, NATO, the Franco-German Pact, the French in the Common Market and France and the Nuclear Bomb, according to Robert Fisher, ISO president.

Prof. Donald Meiklejohn, chairman of the citizenship department, will moderate the program, said Francois Mathevet, president of the European Student Organization.

The talk is open to the public.

Hill Harriers Finish Season With 10th Place Finish in IC4As

By NEIL KERR

In its final competition of the season, Syracuse's cross-country squad finished 10th at the IC44 meet in New York City Monday.

The race was run over the hilly five-mile Van Cortlandt Park course.

SU's top finisher, Marty Miller, came in 32nd with a time of 26:25. The other SU scorer were Tom Giordano, Bill Cihak, John Crawford and Mike Schuster. The Orange's number one runner, Mike Spino, failed to finish.

Syracuse's 10th place finish in a field of 23 colleges, was termed "very disappointing" by coach Bob Grieve. During the season the Orange had run up a 5-1 record losing only to Penn State by a score of 28-29.

The individual winner of the race was Georgetown's Joe Lynch. The skinny Hoya senior beat Harvard's Heptagonal champion, Walter Hewlett, by 30 yards and broke the course record in the process.

His time of 24:41.8 was five seconds under the time recorded by Villanova's Vic Zwolak last year.

Georgetown also took the team title as they scored a total of 52 points. Trailing the Hoyas were Notre Dame (60), Villanova (128) and Michigan State (149).

Syracuse's harriers will most likely be among the favorites at the IC4A's next fall. "We're looking forward to a pretty good season next year," said Bob Grieve.

He explained that the squad only loses one man via graduation this spring.

Furthermore, the nucleus of this year's team—Syracuse's six top runners—all return. These lettermen include three juniors — Spino, Cihak and Miller — are at least two talented freshmen, Dennis Boyle and Bruce Pezzamenti.

Other varsity returnees will be sophomores Dave Daubert and Dave Hanna. Mike Shuster, a three year letterman and an SU point winner at the IC4A's, is the lone departing senior.

Expected to bolster the team's depth considerably next season are at least two talented fsesh-man, Dennis Boyle and Bruce

Boyle went undefeated in dual meets this season and set three different course records.

Publicity Claims 'Swami Award'

By DAVE FLAUM

Denying the use of inside handicappers, Sports Publicity clinched "The 1964 Head Swami Award" in the Daily Orange grid poll. Publicity tabbed nine of 10 in leading the pack for the seventh time in nine tries.

Meanwhile, the three-way dog-fight for second place continued as the DO and the Orange Scout tied for weekly runnerup honors, picking seven winners. WAER was dead last with 6-4.

Last week's predictions, wrought with many toss-ups, found the DO and WAER forseeing Pittsburgh over Army, while Publicity and the Scout notched Navy over Duke and Princeton topping Yale.

No contestant predicted Stanford's upset of Oregon State.

For the season, first-place Sports Publicity possessess a 59-18(76.6 per cent) mark. In the second slot, the DO reads a 51-26(66.2 per cent) record.

The disappointing Orange Scout and slumping WAER, fighting for third, are deadlocked with a 49-28(63.5 per cent) log.

Flashback '63

By HOWIE SCHNEIDER
Junior Editor

Ben Schwartzwalder walked toward the locker room very slowly, his baseball cap pulled down almost over his eyes. Someone would have thought he had been the losing coach. All he could manage to mumble was, "Another one like this and I'll be an old man."

It had been a very frustrating afternoon for Old Ben and for the 22,000 fans who had come to Archbold to see the Orangemen destroy West Virginia. "We were lucky to win, we were lucky," Schwartzwalder said almost in pain. And to think all this aggravation from his alma mater.

The week before Syracuse had suffered, and really suffered, a 35-28 loss to Pittsburgh. Hopes for a bowl bid had been destroyed. Someone had to be the whipping boy and the Mountaineers filled the bill. But it didn't exactly work out that way.

The visitors took an early 7-6 lead and held it. They held it a long time. Everyone was waiting for the Orangemen to do what they were supposed to do. For 40 minutes the Virginians out-battled their favored rivals.

Some over-zealous fan yelled, "Do something, do something." From the look on Ben's face it was apparent he was thinking the same thing.

Halfback Mike Koski answered the call returning a punt return 66 yards for the score. Several moments later senior John Paglio kicked a field goal. Syracuse led 15-7.

But Ben's troubles had just begun. On the next series of downs Mountaineer quarterback Jerry Yost picked apart the Orange defensive secondary. With less than five minutes remaining a Yost pass connected for six points. The visitors failed, however, in their attempt for two extra points and a tie.

After two more series of down the Orangemen took possession with 90 seconds remaining. Mr. Koski, however, fumbled on the first play from scrimmage and the visitors had one more chance.

But as fate had it safetyman Hal Rooney intercepted a Yost pass and the gods gave Old Ben a 15-13 victory.

Here's hoping it comes a little easier tomorrow.

Orange Fencers Prep for Opener

The Syracuse University Fencing team has been practicing for the last seven weeks in preparation for its first match of the season Dec. 12.

The fencers will meet Hobart College.

Harvey Schuman has been selected team captain. Also starting on the varsity slots are: Sabre—Gary Damast, Richard Beyer and Bruno Schmidt, all sophomores.

Foil—Harvey Schuman, Les Monostory, both seniors, Dennis Lampert, a junior and Jack Barman, a sophomore.

Epee — Stu Peskin, Peter Kraus and Clint Wigrin, all junirs.

Most of the varsity squad of the 1963-64 season has been depleted, returning only five men. As a result, a few promising sophomores have moved up into the varsity rank.

Last season the Syracuse squad finished second to Drew College in a field of 13 at the North Atlantic regional tournament.

At the North Atlantics, the Syracuse foil team finished first. Schuman and Marty Dako both finished third in their respective events in the individual competition.

There are about 25 freshmen who are now preparing for their forthcoming meets.

There are three different weapons used in modern fencing the foil, the sabre and the epee. Three men are assigned to fence in each weapon.

The foil is a light weapon with a flexible, tapered quadrangular blade theoretically capable of inflicting a puncture wound only. Touches are therefore scored with the point of the weapon only and must land on a limited target. In men's foil, the contestant who first scores five valid touches against his opponent is declared the winner.

The sabre has a large guard that curves around the hand to protect the knuckles. Its blade is triangular and flexiable.

The sabre target includes all portions of the body above a horizontal line drawn through the highest points of intersection of the thighs and the trunk of the fencer when in the "on guard" position. Five valid touches and a winner is declared.

The epee is a heavy weapon with a large bell guard and a rather rigid, heavy triangular blade. Touches are scored with point only, but the valid target includes every portion of the body. As in foil and sabre, five touches are required for victory.

By BILL CRONAUER
Sports Editor

"Orange Goes South for Holidays" blared the Daily Orange of Nov. 23, 1958

Bands played, chimes rang, cannons boomed and students cheered. Piety Hill was astir — we were going to the Orange Bowl!

The setting that sunny fall day differed little from the one this weekend. It was the final football game of the season, with Syracuse battling West Virginia at Morgantown. A post-season bowl bid hung in the balance.

Of course, the names have changed. Instead of Art Baker, Roger Davis and Tommy Stephens, there's Floyd Little and Jim Nance and Walley Mahle. Then, too, sugar is sweeter than oranges this year.

But basically it boils down to the same situation: SU has to win tomorrow. Oh, maybe we'll get the bid whether we win or lose. Yet the fact is, if we don't beat West Virginia, we don't deserve the trip South.

That day in November we did win and we did deserve the bid. But tomorrow is another day.

Following the 15-12 Orange victory in '58, Coach Ben Schwartzwalder, who earned fame as a 152-pound Mountaineer center in the early thirties said: "Today West Virginia was the best team we've played all season."

Nobody knows what Ben will be saying late tomorrow afternoon.

"Let's hope it won't be 1958 all over again," sighed Schwartzwalder earlier this week. But a three-point victory sounds pretty good to most of us now, and I'm sure Ben's included.

For didn't he just say something about any game you win by one point being gratifying?

CAMPUS CLOTHING CARE

Here's a list of practical clothing care tips from Joel Toth (1960) of Seven Hour Cleaning and Laundering, Inc.

SHOPPING TIPS

- Be sure a garment or material has been pre-shrunk or stabilized.
- Take a good look at the belt when buying dresses. Some expensive garments may have inexpensive paper-backed belts that are not durable.
- After you have purchased a garment, keep the hang tags. They contain important cleaning information that will help you and Seven Hour.

MEANWHILE, BACK AT THE DORM

- Don't leave stains in any fabric too long. They will "set" and become permanent. Moths like stains.
- Do not touch any stain. You may well "set" it or damage fabric and dye. Spot removal is for trained experts.
- Have your clothes cleaned regularly. Abrasion from wear and dirt damage clothes . . . Dry cleaning doesn't. Dry cleaning solvents are chemically neutral.
- Avoid pressing a garment in which there are spots or perspiration salts or body oils.
- Rotate your wardrobe. Clothing, like people, need a rest.

Frosh Gridmen

Tangerines to Oranges

By KEN RUDNICK

Syracuse University's varsity football team, even while compiling a 7-2 record and earning an almost cerbid to the Sugar Bowl, has displayed several flaws.

The winning touchdown drive against Virginia Tech not withstanding, the Orangemen were hurt by their failure to establish a consistent passing threat.

The pass defense was erratic and Paul Brothers, the Oregon State quarterback, took advantage of it to help his team hand Syracuse its second defeat of the year.

SU's place-kicking left much to be desired in the early games of the season until junior Roger Smith took over the job.

Syracuse freshman coach Jim Shreve feels that some of the members of his Tangerines, who finished with a 3-2 mark this season, may strengthen the Orange in those departments, as well as others, in 1965.

As Shreve points out, however, "The biggest transition a football player has to make is from freshman to sophomore. What they do as freshmen doesn't necessarily indicate how they'll perform as sophs."

The kicking game, which improved so much when Smith took over, should be further strengthened next year with Don Bullard and Drew Volz advancing to the varsity.

Bullard was an exceptional punter for the Tangerines, averaging nearly 40 yards a kick. Volz, who might also figure at offensive end, handled the kickoff and extra point chores and should be good insurance for Smith.

Rick Cassata and Ed Reardon shared the quarterback spot for Shreve this season. "They were erratic and lacked poise," said Shreve, "but that's to be expected from any freshman player. They made good progress and each has a good, strong arm."

Frank Parrish, whom the frosh mentor lists as his best possibility, and Ed Mantie could bolster the defensive secondary.

Shreve feels that 230-pound Dennis Fitzgibbon and 235-pound Larry Csonka both have excellent potential as defensive tackles. "They're both only 17 years old, and each of them," says Shreve, "has exceptional size, strength and speed."

Jim Murphy, who saw action at center on offense and guard and linebacker on defense, could make it playing either way with the Orange.

Shreve expressed disappointment over the play of end Ed Schreck, who was hampered by a broken hand, but he still expects a lot from him in the future, either offensively or defensively.

Nick Kish and Tom Coughlin seem to have the best chances to figure as running backs in a backfield which will have to fill the gap which will be left by senior Jim Nance.

The Tangerines' best linebackers, Dave Cazmay and Charles Stecker, the brother of Orange defensive end Herb, and Greg Conners may fit in defensively.

Shreve's starting tackles this season, Vince Bruett and Jim Lemessurier, should bolster the offensive line.

676 Foreign Students at SU

This year 676 students from 79 foreign countries are attending Syracuse University and its branch campuses. This total is an increase of 51 students and four countries over last semester.

The main campus has 433 international students, the State College of Forestry at Syracuse University has 87, while University College has 84 and the University College Poughkeepsie Center has 56.

The University College Endicott Center has eight international students and Utica College has seven.

Canada is represented by the most students, 55, followed by Nationalist China with 53 and India with 42. Fourth hits he is Indonesia with 21. Nine other countries have more than ten students.

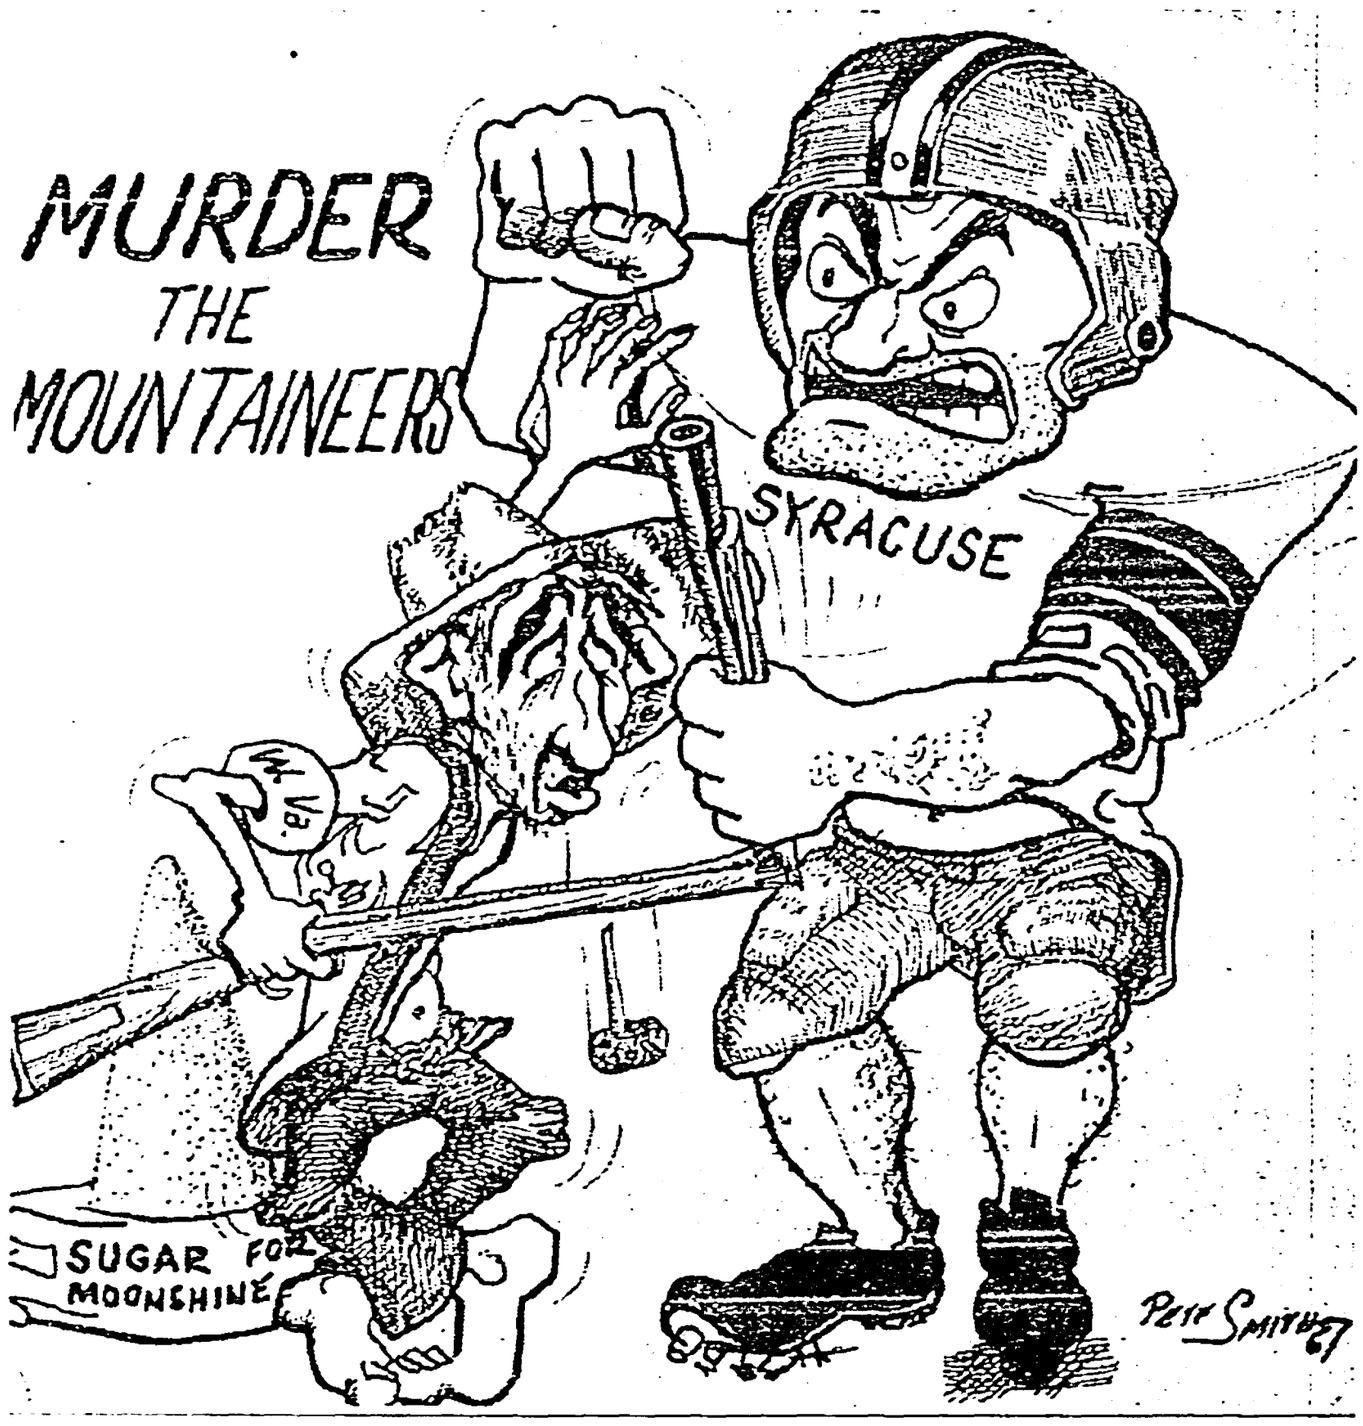
Mountaineers Challenge Hillmen



McCune to Test Syracuse Defense With Aerial Circus

it will still receive a Sugar Bowl bid and meet Louisiana State in New Orleans Jan. 1.

Still Schwartzwalder, a belt and suspenders man, isn't taking anything for granted. He points out that there aren't too many teams with a 7-3 record who are invited to a major bowl game.

Called the "greatest 1-2 punch to come out of the East since the Army days of Doc Blanchard and Glenn Davis," by New Orleans sports columnist Buddy DiLiberto, Floyd Little and Jim Nance will have a last chance to increase the records they have set this season.

Little passed Ernie Davis' sophomore rushing mark of 686 yards (set in 1959) when he brought his total to 732 against VPI last week.

And Nance, already the third best rusher in SU history behind Davis and Jim Brown, will be out to add to his 1,442 yards.

West Virginia has won the Southern Conference title and had no trouble beating Virginia Tech, 23-10. McCune has the highest passing completion average in the conference (57.3) and has thrown the most touchdown passes (eight).

He has a sure-handed receive in Milt Clegg, a 220-pound senior who has caught 16 passes this season.

Schwartzwalder said of the Mountaineers, "This team scares us. McCune is a fine throwing quarterback who can make the big play and their fullback will be tough to stop."

Their fullback is Dick Leftridge, a bruising 240-pound junior who has gained 405 yards this season. West Virginia coach Gene Corum said that in the right frame of mind, Leftridge can be as good a runner as anybody in the country.

West Virginia will use an offense similar to Penn State's. They ran a lot of power plays off tackle and use a split end to establish a passing attack.

Last year the Orangemen just barely beat Corum's team, 15-13, and the year before, in Archbold Stadium the Mountaineers won, 17-6. That was the last game the Orange lost at home.

Overall, in a series that started in 1945, Syracuse has won eight, West Virginia three.

Walley Mahle, Little, Ron Oyer, and Nance once again will be in SU's starting backfield. Oyer, the most under-rated member of that potent rushing group, was called "the best college back blocker I've seen" by Schwartzwalder.

On the line Harris Elliot, last week's pass catching star, and Brad Clarke are at ends, Gary Bugenhagen and Harris Wienke at tackles, Tony Scibelli and Howie McCard, guards, and "our top offensive lineman" according to Ben, center Pat Killorin.

Floyd Little, the exciting Orange rookie from New Haven, Conn. has now accomplished the feat in successive games. Floyd set an all-time record by racing 90 yards for a score against UCLA. He followed up with a 71-yard jaunt against Penn State last Saturday.

CAGERS OPEN SEASON IN MANLEY TONIGHT

FRED LEWIS

Bing, Richards Lead Piety Hoop Forces; AP Rates Orange 7th

By BILL CRONAUER
Sports Editor

Gridiron tales of All-Americans and bowl games will surrender to the cheers of the crowd at Manley Field House tonight when Syracuse's highly rated Orange cagers initiate the 1964-65 basketball season.

Game time is 8:30 p.m., with SU hosting American University of Washington, D.C. The Hill frosh swing into action at 6:30 p.m. against Albany State.

WAER (88.3 fm) will broadcast the contest direct from Manley beginning at 8:15 p.m. Jon Galinsky and Todd Caso will handle the play-by-play.

Paced by co-captains Dave Bing and Chuck Richards, the Piety forces rank a solid favorite.

Bing, sensational as a sophomore last season, has been named to several pre-season All-American teams. The 6-3 junior scored 556 points in 1963-64 and appears ready for another banner campaign.

Richards, a 6-8 senior center, nearly matched Bing in scoring with 528 points. He led the

Vacation Extended

Bowl Funds Go To Student Union

Syracuse University's net receipts from the Sugar Bowl game to be played in New Orleans on New Year's Day will be credited toward the eventual construction of a new Student Union, and the reopening of the university after the Christmas holidays will be postponed 24 hours to Tuesday, Jan. 5.

Eric H. Faigle dean of the College of Liberal Arts and vice president for student affairs made the announcement Tuesday following a conference with Chancellor William P. Tolley and student leaders.

Faigle said the Christmas holidays are to be extended one day as a safety measure so that students and faculty driving from New Orleans after the game with Louisana State University will have more time for the return trip. Classes were originally scheduled to resume on Monday, Jan. 4.

The assignment of the net receipts from the game was described by Faigle as part of a general policy of creating a fund for construction of a much-needed Student Union, a project that has a high priority on the list of new facilities to be provided for in the university's current $76 million campaign for capital funds.

WAER will discuss the Student Union at Syracuse, on Focus, 6:30 p.m., today. The 15 minute documentary on the proposed Student Union will host union co-chairman Ann Cooney and James Palcic.

He said: "It seems particularly appropriate that the funds acquired in this manner be assigned to a project that will benefit all students and one in which students have indicated such a lively interest."

Among the students consulted in this decision were Carl Corrallo and Nancy Perkins, president and vice president of Stu-

Hope Diminishes Rapidly For Missing Researcher

By DAVID SOSNA

Hope steadily diminished Tuesday for Melvin Weiss, senior research associate at Syracuse University's Youth Development Center, and his lifelong friend Aaron Edelman as more than 250 volunteers and state troopers failed to find clues to the missing hunters' whereabouts.

The search was called off for the day at about 7:00 p.m. due to inclement weather and nightfall. It was scheduled to be resumed during the daylight hours today.

Lt. Donald W. Ambler Jr., the state trooper in charge of the searching operations, told the Daily Orange he "did not think that it would be possible" to recover the men alive.

He blamed the dim hope for success on the weather, water temperature and the clothing the men were wearing.

The men, who had gone duck hunting, were reported missing off Oneida Lake late Saturday night, according to Kenneth W. Ferris, another state trooper on the scene Tuesday.

Weiss' car was found Sunday near the launching site where the two duck hunters are believed to have started their trip.

Search officials believe that they were planning to hunt in the Dutchman's Island area, 200 yards from the site and about 35 miles northeast of Syracuse.

Searchers were able to find only a decoy and a piece of a tarpulin Monday. The decoy was identified by Mei Ling Weiss, the researcher's wife, as being his.

Tuesday's efforts resulted in the finding of the hunters' boat, intact and with its oars and motor, about 100 yards offshore in the Sylvan Beach area. There were, however, still no traces of the men's location at that time or their condition.

Searching has been hampered by cold winds and from four to six inch ice floes near the shore.

The 250 volunteers included Syracuse and Lake Oneida area residents and university stu—

An Unorthodox 'Cat'

By AMOS MOSCRIP

"What we think is the real world today is the view the government holds," author Nelson Algren said Tuesday in a lecture in Marshall Auditorium, Marshall Hall.

"And their view is that the world by which man survives is the real world. Everything else is unreal. But there are some cats who can't accept this."

Algren, author of "The Man With the Golden Arm" and "A Walk on the Wild Side," is one of the cats who can't accept this safe, cloying view of life.

"The writer who lives as if life is nice," Algren said, "dies as a writer." There's nothing more inhuman than a human being. We think we live at a perpetual 4-H Club picnic with bluebirds. That's pretty far off from how men live, and literature's job is to report the lives of men.

"There's' an awful lot of cats running around with bent frames, looking around for someone to straighten them up," he added.

As far as the literary "establishment," Algren didn't see much use in it.

"Young people think that literature should be more than what Norman Fedora said to Mary McCarthy about John Updike, and vice-versa," he said. "With a clique like that literature becomes kind of an exclusive barbershop."

Algren also said he felt critics have failed literature.

"I think what their trouble is," he said, "is they don't like the way we've lived for 20 years. But they attack the literature and not the life."

"Besides," Algren added, "they wonder why Hemingway should be waiting at a waterhole at night to shoot an elk when he could be home annotating Henry James."

DO STAFF MEETS

The Daily Orange news staff will meet at 4:30 p.m. Thursday in the "Hellbox," building 7C. All staff members should attempt to attend the meeting.

The Long Vacation?

Most persons occasionally feel a twinge of love for their alma mater, and every so often the alma mater feels such a twinge for its students.

We hope it was a benevolent love for its students that Syracuse University felt when it planned this year's Christmas vacation. Apparently the university can't bear to part with us.

Although the re-opening of school has been delayed one day, the departure day of Dec. 23 still stands, and as long as it does, it will mean a very rushed Christmas Eve and Christmas Day for many of us, especially those who choose to journey further than New York City.

Instead of two weeks, vacation was scheduled for seven class days, now lengthened to eight, but with two weekends instead of the three received by most other schools.

We question the effectiveness of any professor or student during those last three days before vacation, for both may be filled with the thoughts of excursions, sunshine and home cooking, not to mention the usual number of students who will ignore schedules and go home early anyway.

Academics has its place, but these three days in December will lead to nothing more than apathetic attempts at academicia.

If the purpose of the three days is to fulfill state requirements, then little can be done. If not, we sincerely wonder if three days of surface academics are really necessary.

Fred & Co.

Three years ago Syracuse University lost a lot of basketball games — enough to set an intercollegiate record for consecutive losses.

Last year SU cagers lost only one game at home, won the Hurricane Classic and topped off the season with a bid to the National Invitational Tournament.

The credit for the renaissance must go to coach Fred Lewis and his crew of ballplayers, numbering 14 strong this year.

Lewis has brought to the campus a team of which every member of the Syracuse University community may be duly proud, both as basketball players and gentlemen.

In his short span on the campus, Lewis has become one of the most popular men around, and has twice been invited to participate in student-faculty-administration conferences.

The team that takes the floor tonight will be a tribute to the principles of the university as exemplified in a coach and 14 individuals.

The ugly sore that is the Congo has again captured the attention of the world. Moise Tshombe and his cruel band of mercenaries have been made to appear timid compared to Christophe Gbenye and his thousands of murderous, seemingly white-hating, barbarians.

Thus serving to remind us that the world is endangered not so much from big bombs as from the little people who make them; not just from stereotyped generals and the powerful few, but from the tired and the poor and the huddled masses as well.

It was Marx who best taught us of the evils of the few, but he was too religious to tell us of the evils of the many. Millions of marching Nazi Germans tried. Thousands of poor and not so poor racists in Mississippi and elsewhere try. And now a horde of cannibals in the Congo subject to torturous deaths people whose outstanding sin is their white skin—demonstrating again that man is, with different gradations, merely an animal after all.

Yet the victims (and the pretenders) of the liberal religion—I speak primarily of the leaders of the emerging nations of Africa and Asia—who lay their faith on the masses, scream at the Belgian paratroopers and American planes which reportedly saved 1,650 lives, while rarely mentioning the rebel atrocities which precipitated this rescue operation.

Now I am not so young nor so uneducated as to believe in the virtue of any government, even my own, whose operation is dependent upon nothing more than men; but neither am I prepared to say that men are not capable of a certain wisdom, that the United States and Belgium are always automatically wrong.

I may be from that part of my generation which strains to find fault with its country, which measures its deeds against its promises and naturally concludes harshly, which is more comfortable condemning the bad than praising the good. But I have long since lost faith in the paranoic miasma of those on the left who condemn every move of the West with a rigidity that approaches fixation, while largely ignoring the sins of the East, as well as their own.

Listen to the ritualistic cries of "Imperialism." To L'Action, the government newspaper of Tunisia: "The Anglo-American intervention in the Congo was a brutal interference in the internal affairs of another country."

Said Al Massa, a Cairo newspaper: "The latest military intervention by American and Belgian troops, mercenaries and Britian has been undertaken under the smokescreen of protecting the lives of whites."

This is not to imply that much of the history of the west in relation to less developed nations should not inspire suspicion, but if reason were as important as emotional palliatives, suspicions would not so easily become hardened poses. To fiercely condemn on mass genocide committed by Africans, bespeaks a cruel hypocrisy whose nudity is not dressed by otherwise virtuous causes.

There are at least a couple of lessons here: the first being that the measurement of virtue is to be found not in the cause but in its people. The second being that hypocrisy is a relative thing—each nation's being related to one another's except for the words

George Babbit, who is not an unrepresented man, though prompted by his selfish opposition to labor unions, told the larger story of hypocrisy quite well:

"A good labor union is of value because it keeps out radical unions, which would destroy property. No one ought to be forced to belong to a union, however. All labor agitators who try to force men to join a union should be hanged. In fact, just between ourselves there oughtn't to be any unions allowed at all; as it's the best way of fighting the unions, every business man ought to belong to an employers'-association and to the Chamber of Commerce. In union there is strength, so any selfish hog who doesn't join the Chamber of Commerce ought to be forced to."

Murder is, after all, still murder.

LETTERS

Vacation

To the Editor:

Back in 1957, America, or more precisely, her educational system, was jolted out of its placid existence by the launching of the first Russian Sputnik. Educational reform became rampant. But like so many noble crusades, it began to wane as the years slipped by.

I'm afraid Syracuse's administration is guilty of this unpardonable sin. During a spare moment, I happened to glance through the school calendar. Horrifying is the only word!

Without any regard to our national defense, the John Birch Society, the D.A.R., and students, the administration has set aside 19½ days. I repeat - 19½ days of vacation. This does not include 52 wasted Sundays, 90 days for summer vacation, 22 days for wasted hours each day set aside for sleep, meals, and the time between classes. But the is still some hope yet. Do not despair.

First, I have to give my congratulations to the administration for cutting Thanskgiving to the bare minimum. One half day before the actual holiday is doubtless enough for students to get home. But Christmas was not as well planned.

Since the religious ceremonies of Christmas do not start until the evening of 24th classes could be profitably held through the day of the 23rd thus saving five hours of classes and still allowing enough time to get home, buy your presents, trim the tree and decorate the house. The timing for New Years was very well planned. It is tragic that Saturday classes are wasted, but the administration should not be too harshly dealt with in their moment of frivolity.

Interim recess should, of course, be eliminated. Since so much time has been allowed (wasted) for exams, due to the difficulty of scheduling, the remaining Friday and Saturday could be most profitably used for review and summary classes.

The elimination of Spring recess should also be obvious. Youthful minds are awakening anew and become more and more eager for knowledge as the Spring progresses. But the summer vacation offers the most intriguing possibilities. In Russia the educators have adopted a policy, and may I add quite successfully, of continuing classes throughout the summer. By doing so, they have utilized the 90 wasted days of the summer vacation.

There are some other very interesting possibilities. By running, one can cut the time between classes upto five minutes. That means 75 extra minutes a week or about 37½ extra hours a year. Sundays have been set aside as religious days, but not all is lost. Time could be allowed during the afternoon for religious courses, and possibly even philosophy lectures (with religious overtones of course). Bible study is another possibility.

Students—unite. These ideas can be more than just dreams. Together we can get our sleeping administration to enact our dreams. It can be done!

Up in the Air

Happy Birthday, Shakespeare

by Carolyn Connors

Yes, this is the 400th birthday of England's favorite literary son. And WAER, Syracuse University radio, is celebrating in a unique way; in fact, in two unique ways.

The first is a new program series written especially for the occasion and produced by the National Association of Educational Broadcasters. The world's most famous Shakespearean scholars, teachers, and artists are taking part in this salute—people like B. Iden Payne, former director of the Festival Theater, Stratford-on-the-Avon; Tyrone Guthrie, the world's most famous Shakespearean director; and C. L. Barber, author of Shakespeare's Festive Comedy.

Each of these weekly shows hails the English poet in a different way. The series features performances of some of his best-known plays. Other programs deal with diverse subjects such as Shakespeare's view of music, his influence on modern politics, contemporary criticism of his works, and Shakespearean texts of today and tomorrow.

Shakespeare's writings reflect a man of many moods—joyful, tense, dramatic—and the producers of "Shakespeare 400" have incorporated these traits in their salute. Each week they give the audience an insight into one phase of the author's personality. Through interpretation of his works, discussions of his Renaissance world, and commentary on the significance of his thought for his own age as well as ours, the listener travels for an hour to a theater-in-the-round in Stratford-on-the-Avon, England. Departure time is 5 p.m. each Saturday.

Traveling through literature birthday celebration. Although more general in its scope, our weekly journey "To the Bookshelf" is devoted to Shaketure. Hosts Peter Moller and John Mayfield, curator of rare books and manuscripts for Syracuse University, explore a new dimension in the world of books each Thursday evening at 7 p.m.

Thus far, the trip has included a tour of the Syracuse University Press, a look at "A Vanished World" and a visit with its author, and a pause to examine the automated libraries of tomorrow where books, newspapers, and periodicals can be sent around the world in a matter of minutes.

Future excursions promise to be as diverse. On the agenda for the next few weeks is a jaunt into "The Wonderful Wonderland of Lewis Carroll." Along the route each week the hosts speak with the author under discussion.

We invite you to help us commemorte Shakespear's birthday. From yesterday's Stratford-on-the-Avon to tomorrow's automated library WAER presents literature the world has loved "as you like it."

Tolley Flies to Oklahoma For Olson's Inauguration

The paths of two men who worked together at Syracuse University will cross once again when SU Chancellor William P. Tolley delivers the main address at the inauguration of Dr. John F. Olson as president of Oklahoma City University.

After inaguaration ceremonies, which will be held 10 a.m. today at the OCU campus, Olson takes charge officially of the position he has held since June 1.

For the past 16 years Olson and Tolley were associates on the SU faculty and staff. Most recently the new president of OCU served as vice-president and executive assistant to the Chancellor. He retired from the post last May.

The Chancellor flew to Oklahoma late Tuesday afternoon for the ceremonies.

Olson also served on the SU faculty, progressing from instructor in 1948 to professor of the department of religion at the time he left Syracuse. He served as Navy Methodist Chaplain in the Pacific theater during World War II.

The official delegate for Syracuse is Huntington Harris, a trustee from Leesburg, Va.

Several events will precede and follow the inaguaral convocation. Dr. Albert J. George, chairman of the department of romance languages at SU, will deliver a lecture on the French Novel, as part of the program.

John S. Hafer, dean of personnel administration, said: "The Student Union has been operating without adequate facilities for the past four years. The money collected at the Sugar Bowl will really be a big step forward toward a new building."

The union holds regular Friday night entertainment for the students with free movies, volleyball, bowling and dances offered during the year.

Syracuse and Louisiana State University will share in the net receipts of the game, which will be televised by the National Broadcasting Company.

Gross receipts are expected to total $200,000. After expenses, the two schools will divide an estimated $100-$125,000.

Search officials said that dragging operations on the lake would be conducted and that the search would continue for "at least another week."

Weiss is a skilled hunter and is reported to have known the lake well. A veteran of the U.S. Army, he was a graduate of a military survival school.

Weiss, who has been at the development center since 1963 has worked with the Street Corner Offense Reduction Experiment (SCORE) project a rehabilitation effort to help juvenile delinquents termed "hopeless cases" by many.

The program, sponsored by the Syracuse Junior Chamber of Commerce, is successful with about 75 per cent of the youths returning to school or jobs.

Weiss married the former Miss Mei Ling Wong in 1958. They have two children, David and Aaron.

He was graduated from Syracuse University in 1954 and has completed much of the work necessary for a doctorate in social science.

Panhel Picks Auxiliary Officers; Proposes Spring Rush Changes

By SANDY LAPIN

Panhellenic Council elected six assisting officers to its present executive council at its meeting Tuesday night in the Women's Bldg.

Elected to the new under-rush committee were Paula Bartolini, Maryanne Hull, Susan Port and Sharon Rush. Midge Patrick was named under-secretary while Ann Larson was named under-treasurer.

The under-rush committee replaces a single under-rush chairman.

In addition to the elections, two proposals were made to change spring rush for freshmen coeds. Both are designed to give a wider range of choice.

The first suggestion would allow coeds greater discretion during the second round of parties.

Instead of having the freshmen go to 15 sororities during the second round of rush or to those houses to which they receive invitations if this number is less than 15, (as is traditional), it was proposed that they go to no less than 10 and no more than 15 houses. The rushees would be able to select the houses they wish to revise within the prescribed limits.

It also was proposed to have three formal parties for the fourth and final round instead of two as in previous years. Panhel executive council argued that this change would be beneficial to the rushees because it would give them a greater final choice and to the sororities because it would insure greater success in pledging by giving them more girls from which to choose after the final parties.

It also was noted that this proposal would help eliminate suiciding which occurs when rushees put down only one house on their preference cards at the end of rush. In the past rushees have been encouraged to list both sororities whose formal parties they attended. With the new proposal they would have the option to list three houses, thereby increasing their chances of being pledged.

These proposals will be brought to each sorority for discussion and a chapter vote and then will be voted on by the entire council at the next meeting of Panhel.

Miss Bartolini, from Waterbury, Conn., is a sister of Chi Omega sorority.

Miss Hull is a member of Alpha Chi Omega sorority. She is from Durham, N.C.

A member of Phi Sigma Sigma sorority, Miss Port is a commuting student.

Miss Rush, is a member of Alpha Epsilon Phi sorority. She is from Herkimer.

Miss Patrick, the under-secretary-elect, is a member of Alpha Sigma Alpha sorority. She is from Belford, N.J.

Miss Larson, under-treasurer-elect, is a sophomore in Chi Omega sorority. She is from Corning.

Commission Gives Report On SU Political Parties

Charges of "corruption, log-rolling, and fraud" leveled at campus politics from time to time stem from the majority of the student body not being represented in the two existing parties, said John Trever in a Student Government Presidential Commission report released recently.

The Special Commission on Political Parties, an outgrowth of a committee appointed by former Joint Student Government president James Morris, noted a "wider involvement" of the student body will improve both the party system and the candidates on campus.

The commission recomends that the two parties, the United Students party and the Campus Alliance Party, enlarge their membership.

Suggestions for doing this put forth by the commission include relaying membership requirements to encourage applicants and recruiting floors, cottages, and Greek houses not yet affiliated.

A third suggestion concerns the formation of new parties. Third parties are more practical on a college campus than nationally because issues are not as finely divided as they are in a national campaign, the report said.

Also under consideration by the commission was the idea of instituting party primaries. This was considered not feasible because of the added time candidates would spend campaigning, the added expense both to candidates and parties and the "fact that results would be much the same as in the convention anyway," said Trever, chairman of the commission.

To alleviate question of the quality of candidates for student offices, the commission recommended a party screening board to check the qualifications of candidates appearing at the convention.

The commission said that while certain changes are necessary, the "most productive change can come from within the parties themselves by their looking outward and taking into consideration the welfare of the whole student body," the report said, "rather than by imposing rules and regulations from the outside."

Louisiana State, SU's Sugar Bowl foe, had six players on the draft list. Quarterback Pat Screen went to Cleveland (NFL) while halfback White Graves was named by Boston (AFL).

The other four—backs Billy Ezell and Beau Colle and tackles Dave McCormack and Mickey Cox — were all futures. Ezell, Colle and McCormack were selected by Boston (AFL) and Cox by Oakland (AFL).

UPI Rates SU 12th

Both AP and UPI agreed on the top 10 clubs in the country.

Alabama, unbeaten in 10 games, edged out Arkansas (10-0) for the national title.

Notre Dame, upset 20-17 by Southern Cal last weekend, dropped to third place, followed in order by Rose Bowl-bound Michigan, Texas and Nebraska.

Louisiana State, SU's Sugar Bowl opponent on New Year's Day, ranks seventh, with Orange conqueror Oregon State eighth, Ohio State ninth and Southern Cal 10th.

UPI's second 10 features: Florida State, Syracuse, Princeton, Penn State, Utah, Illinois, New Mexico, Tulsa, Missouri, Mississippi and Michigan State

PAT KILLORIN

FLOYD LITTLE

CHARLIE BROWN

By JEFF LAZAR

The 1964 edition of the Syracuse Orangemen placed four players on the Associated Press All-East dream team and put three others in the honorable mention category.

Named to the starting offensive squad were the backfield duo of Jim Nance and Floyd Little and center Pat Killorin, Charley Brown was awarded a spot in the defensive backfield.

Defensive ends George Fair and Herb Stecker received honorable mention status, along with offensive tackle Gary Bugenhagen.

Numerous Orange opponents were included on the team. Boston College's pass-catching twins, Jim Whalen and Bill Cronin, topped the end candidates, Whalen on offense and Cronin on defense.

Penn State's Bud Yost (defense) and Milt Morin of Massachusetts were selected to fill the other end positions.

John Simko of the Nittany Lions and Jim Freeman of Navy, both seniors, were named as tackles on the offensive team. Rounding out the offensive line are Tom Nissi of Holy Cross and Ray Popp of Pitt at the guards and Killorin at center.

The backfield is just as impressive. Last year's Heisman Trophy winner, Roger Staubach of the Midshipmen, and Columbia's Archie Roberts were named as quarterbacks.

Since Navy didn't play Columbia, the writer's couldn't accurately determine which man deserved the honor of All-East quarterback. Hence, there is a five-man backfield for the first time in history.

The Army's Rollie Stichweh

fills the flanker back spot because the majority of his total offense came on end sweeps while playing out of the shotgun formation.

Nance and Little, who combined for 25 TD's, 1779 yards rushing, and other valuable yardage via pass reception are the starting fullback and halfback respectively.

Brown and Princeton's Cosmo Iacavazzi head a star-studded defensive backfield. Brown's timely interceptions and Iacavazzi's power running were all the credentials the sports writers needed in making their selections. Penn State's Frank Hershey and BC's Jim McGowan complete the backfield.

Al Atkinson of Villanova, a frequent member of the weekly All-East team for the last three years, and Abbott Lawrence of Yale were picked for the tackles.

Completing the defensive unit are three of the finest linbackers in the country: Glen Ressler of Penn State, everybody's All-American, Marty Schottenheimer of Pitt, and Stas Maliszewski of Princeton.

Syracuse halfback Floyd Little earned his most impressive honors to date when he was selected to the 22-man Look Magazine All-America team for 1964.

Little was the only sophomore selected to the squad which also includes four juniors and 17 seniors.

Three of the seniors, Penn State guard Glenn Ressler, VPI quarterback Bob Schweickert and Kansas halfback Gale Sayers made appearances against the Orange this season.

The fleet halfback, who broke the Orange sophomore rushing mark set by the late Ernie Davis with 828 yards, was also named to the 33-player All-American team chosen by The Football News, another national publication.

It is the selection by Look, however, with the nationwide publicity that goes with it, of which Little was justifiably proud. "I hope," said Floyd, 'that I can thank everyone on New Year's Day by playing a real good game in the Sugar Bowl. It's just a great thrill."

In an article which accompanied Look's announcement of its All-American team, Tim Cohane, the magazines sports editor, said of Little: "Little may rate, before he is through, with such past Orange heroes as Jim Brown and the late Ernie Davis.

"Floyd can hit inside, sweep the end, or thread his way through an open field. He is a threat to go all the way on any play."

Another laurel was added to Little's growing arsenal when the National Broadcasting Company made him a co-holder of sophomore-of-the-year honors with Notre Dame halfback Nick Eddy.

Others named to the Look squad, selected by a seven man board representing the Football Writers Association of America, are:

Ends—Donny Anderson (Texas Tech), Fred Biletnikoff (Florida State), Larry Elkins (Baylor), Jack Snow (Notre Dame).

Tackles—Steve DeLong (Tennessee), Larry Kramer (Nebraska), Jim Wilson (Georgia).

Guards—Ronnie Caveness (Arkansas), Tommy Nobis (Texas), Rick Redman (Washington), Stan Maliszewski (Princeton).

Centers—Dick Butkus (Illinois), Dwight Kelley (Ohio State).

Backs—Tucker Frederickson (Auburn), Craig Morton (California), Jerry Rhome (Tulsa), Bob Timberlake (Michigan), Clarence Williams (Washington State).

Progress. That's the important product that coach Fred Lewis and his Syracuse basketball squad will be after this season.

In just two short years, Lewis has raised the level of SU basketball from an all-time low (2-22 in 1961) to 8-13 in '62 and 17-8 last season. A bid to the National Invitational Tournament last spring highlighted Syracuse's return to the national basketball scene.

Now, 10 veterans are returning from last year's squad including the entire starting unit. With this in mind, pre-season polisters have picked the Orange as the best team in the East and as high as fifth in the nation.

Back from last year's team are seniors Chuck Richards, Phil Schoff, Rich Duffy and juniors Dave Bing, Norm Goldsmith, Sam Penceal, Jim Boeheim, Frank Nicoletti, Rex Trobridge and Dick Ableman. Four talented sophomores — Rick Dean, Val Reid, Scott Loll and Marty Goldstein — round out the '64-'65 basketball roster.

Team co-captains are the record breaking duo of Dave Bing and Chuck Richards. Last year this pair set an SU record for the number of points scored in one season by two men—1,084.

Bing's total of 556 points made him the top sophomore scorer in SU history. Also, Richards' 528 markers established a new all-time high for a junior.

Bing earned a second team All-East spot and All-American honorable mention for last year's play and he's anxious to improve. For that reason, Dave went home to Washington, D.C., last summer and practiced with other college stars including John Austin, Ollie Johnson, Fred Hetzel and Princeton's Bill Bradley.

Commenting on the possibilities of a good season, Dave said. "We've got more team spirit. . .better rebounding. . .and we've worked together for a couple of years now. We should be around 18-5 or 19-4 this year."

This might sound a bit too optimistic but last season Bing predicted that the team—which had won only eight games in '62—would take "about 18" games. Then Dave led Syracuse to a 17-8 record.

Chuck Richards, the 6-8 center, pointed out that SU has more depth this season, especially under the boards. "We won't lose any great punch in scoring by substituting some of our big men up front," he said. "They'll all be seeing a lot of action this year."

In addition to Richards, the Orange's big men include Dean, 6-6; Loll, 6-8; Trobridge, 6-9; and Reid, 6-9.

But the Orange do face a few problems. For instance, the squad has lost its top sophomore prospect, Vaughn Harper, through scholastic ineligibility. SU will be taking on bigger, better teams this year too, especially during the Kentucky trip and at the Holiday Festival.

The failure to win on the road must be overcome this year if the season is to be successful. In '63, the Orange were 10-1 at home and 7-7 on foreign courts.

But all obstacles aside Bing, Richards and Co. play an electrifying style of basketball. They should be well worth watching this winter.

Orange in rebounds and was 10th nationally in field goal percentage.

Coach Fred Lewis has tabbed three juniors—Norm Goldsmith, Sam Penceal and Jim Boeheim—to complete his starting lineup.

Goldsmith will pair with Bing at forward, while Penceal and Boeheim will handle the backcourt roles. Richards is at center.

"We'll use eight or nine men frequently throughout the season," said Lewis. "The starting unit will change, with the exception of Bing and Richards, depending upon the opposition. For this one we'll go with Goldsmith, Penceal and Boeheim."

Backing up the starting contingent are a pair of seniors, Phil Schoff and Richie Duffy; three juniors, Dick Ableman, Frank Nicoletti and Rex Trobridge; and four sophomores, Rick Dean, Scott Loll, Val Reid and Marty Goldstein.

Bing, Richards and Schoff were the stars in Saturday's 103-84 scrimmage victory over Holy Cross at the fieldhouse. In an earlier scrimmage, Boston College edged out the Orangemen.

Pre-season hoop polls rate the locals highly. The Associated Press places Syracuse seventh in the country, while UPI ranks SU no. 12.

However, Lewis won't be overly optimistic. "I won't predict what our season will be," he stated. "If the kids hustle, we'll field a respectable team. We've been practicing diligently for the past few weeks. Tonight we'll find out the results."

American U. promises to give the Orange a battle. The visitors have two standouts in 6-3 forward Ben Still and 6-0 guard Jim Buffer.

Co-captain Still, hampered by an ankle injury in recent weeks, posted a 11.2 scoring average last year and shows marked improvement.

Buffer, the other Eagle co-captain, has two seasons of varsity experience and is off to a fast start in 1964-65. Buffer turned in a 19-point performance against Utah State last year while averageing 7.1 for the season.

Bob Farrer, a 6-4 junior, will hold down the other forward spot. He looms as the outstanding AU shooter, inside or outside.

The second guard will be Tony Jiorle (6-0), who averaged nearly 10 points per game last year.

A 6-6 junior, Jack Townsend, opens in the pivot. American coach Jimmy Williams claims Townsend is his most improved player. "He's learned to use his height and large frame to full advantage," Williams said.

Robby Calls Special Senate Meeting

Fourth SU Coed Accosted

By DON LAWLESS

The pine tree-enclosed staircase behind the main library was the scene of another possible attack upon a Syracuse University coed Sunday night.

The coed, an upperclassman, told Security Police that she encountered a man wielding a knife on the steps and that he made obscene remarks at her.

She said she ran and escaped unharmed and then reported the incident to Security Police. City police were also notified.

The girl's description of the man matched the descriptions given by girls involved in similar incidents in the same area earlier this year.

Two Flint Hall residents were "grabbed" by a man Oct. 24 and a similar attack took place on Oct. 29. All three attacks took place on the steps.

The girls described the man

Stern to Name Panel to Probe His Conduct

Speaker Robert (Robby) Stern has called Student Senate into special session at 7:15 p.m. tonight in Maxwell Auditorium.

The emergency meeting is being held to organize a committee to investigate Stern's conduct as speaker. Stern plans to select the group himself, choosing members at random.

SS voted at its last session, Nov. 18, to set up a committee to investigate Stern's conduct of the Oct. 28 meeting. At that meeting, SS approved a letter to Virginia Polytechnic Institute's president condemning alleged discrimination aganst Negroes.

Edward Luft of Acacia fraternity has since charged Stern with four errors. Luft attacked the lack of time and publicity given the VPI motion, the taking of two roll-call votes, and the lack of a

Poetry, Art, Short Stories Featured in 48-Page '10'

Syracuse University students were treated to a 48-page sprinkling of art, photography, short stories and poetry when the first issue of the 1964-65 Syracuse 10 appeared Wednesday.

Although student work is still the major emphasis in the magazine, this issue of the '10' has also solicited outside material. Dr. David Owen, professor of English at SU, has contibuted a review of Terry Southern's controversial novel Candy.

From even farther away, comes Rudolph Bultmann's article on Christian education, written especially for the Syracuse 10. Bultmann is a German theologian and former guest lecturer at SU.

Senior C.H. Combs and graduate student John Allman head of the list of student contributors as the authors of this issue's two short stories.

Poetry under the editorship of Joseph McDonald, includes his own two-part poem "The Spectral Spectator," as well as contributions from other undergraduate poets. Heading this section is the contribution of Denise Levertov, nationally-known poetess, written especially for the Syracuse 10.

Added this year is a special photography section filling the central pages of the magazine. The photographic essay, entitled "Scenes in Solitude", is made up of contributions from student photographers.

The cover of the fall issue, a symmetrical arrangement in magenta, orange and blue, is the original design of Chan Rudd, a senior in advertising design. Rudd is also responsible for the '10' layout, art and graphics.

DO STAFF MEETS

The Daily Orange news staff will meet at 4:30 p.m. today in the "Hellbox," building 7C. All staff members should attempt to attend the meeting.

A Do-Nothing Senate?

Student Court has wisely refused to handle the Student Senate's dirty work in investigating the actions of Speaker Robert (Robby) Stern, and the SS must meet in special session to find someone else to conduct the investigation.

There are only two solutions, as we see it. The first, the less acceptable of the two would be to give the chore of investigating to the executive branch. The other alternative would be for the senate to wash its own dirty laundry.

If the senate really feels something is wrong, it shouldn't back down and ask someone else to solve its problems. It must have the courage of its convictions to face and to attempt to free itself from its own dilemmas.

The real issue here is the procedure that Stern uses in running meetings. Most of the points to be considered are flaws in the parliamentary process. The other point is a question of publicity.

Yet people are talking about impeaching Stern, on grounds that what the legislature has been doing this year is not its business.

We ask: If what the legislature has been doing is not its business, then whose is it? Will every student continue to remain quiet when something disturbs him?

If students feel something is wrong, then the legislature is the place to air views and reach a decision. It should not be merely an extension of the Daily Orange "Campus Notices" column.

In the past two years the legislature has developed into a potent force capable of action. Now is not the time to reverse that trend.

And...

If someone doesn't rule it out of order, perhaps the legislature will begin to question the purposes of holding classes until Dec. 23.

A lot of students may miss Christmas at home or at least a chance to do some Christmas shopping, because of the late-starting vacation.

A little hell-raising never hurt anybody, especially when the cause is sincere.

Millstones and Milestones

Ho, Ho, Ho--The 23rd

By Dan Stone

December 23?

This contest is not anti- anything.

If it must be labeled, label it pro-vacation.

What it actually is is a request — for anyone in the administration — be he high or low — to explain the reasoning behind setting the date on which Christmas vacation officially begins at Dec. 23.

Most of the area schools are out earlier.

The state schools are out the Friday before Christmas. At least one community college is out the sixteenth. These schools did not start earlier than Syracuse nor are they out later. The thought that we are being short changed now so that we can launch on some massive Bacchanalia in the spring that will again reduce Fort Lauderdale to shambles is merely a sweet dream.

In a publication called "Calendar of Events — Syracuse University" on page 30, tucked between Alice McNaught at the piano and a Lowe Pop Art Competitive, Spring recess is listed at March 27 to April 5, which means it will be cold and short.

And yet we are here until the twenty-third.

It's not that I'm ungrateful for the extra day extension at the end of the vacation. Not a bit. I admit it seems like more of a bow to the Great God of Football than a bow to the students, and I bet a campus poll would show a vast majority would rather have that day on the other end of vacation but never look a gift horse in the mouth, and I am grateful.

But before someone jumps to give the explanation I asked for earlier I would like to give a few reasons why the twenty-third seems to me a wee bit ridiculous.

In the first place there are some students here that just either won't make it home for Christmas or will have to drive all night under hazardous conditions at best.

But of course this is assuming that there are enough of those students or any students left on the campus after about the nineteenth to worry about. I admire the fortitude and patience of a professor who will give a full lecture before a third of a class. And this is the story before a vacation. There is no adequate solution for it (except perhaps dismissing on a weekend rather than the middle of a week).

Double cuts or triple cuts aren't the answer. It accomplishes nothing to in effect threaten to lower the entire university's average a grade point. Even in cutting there is a certain safety in numbers.

The twenty-third is of course the time when the highways and the commercial transportation lines are the most congested as plants and offices disgorge their working forces for the holidays.

There are of course some at this university who take a holiday job to buy a couple of extra presents. And there are even those who would like to spend a little time with their families before migrating toward New Orleans.

It is for these groups I would like the explanation.

In the absence of such an explanation dark, sinister stories circulate. You hear that the university is at the mercy of a cabal of fund-raising merchants who want the students here to Christmas shop. Maybe the Chancellor wants to give his Christmas party nearer Christmas.

Whatever the reason, we would like to know it.

I assume the date won't change.

I'm not fooled into thinking the power of the press will change it. A strong editorial stand by this paper probably won't help that date anymore than it helped Ken Keating.

Without explanation, we seem stuck with the twenty-third.

Ho, ho, ho.

Profs

To the Editor:

T.A.G. meets the literature professor:

"Ah yes, sit down" says the professor. "Now let's see young man — here we have the book. A book that is part of literature. And in this book we will play, you and I, play a game of understanding. Of understanding the right order of things.

"These books, and now particularly this book are my whole life. Oh, don't look askance, it wasn't always so. Though I did have a strict upbringing, I admit to that. I was young once, I too chased after sensuous experience. But I have forgotten your world now. All the complexities and reflections of my nature, and the time I have had available to spend, have gone into mastering the intricacies of these books, and the worship of these, my gods, the authors — whom none may touch, and none may suggest to me that they be equaled by me or anyone else.

"Your world is informal, young man. I have not accepted it. But I am used to it. I draw my strength from the formal land of the white printed page, and the order my reading of the words has put down upon it.

"So, you see, the nature of the ice you ventured out upon when you entered my course. I trust you do see that now.

"What's that, you say? Writing a story yourself is worth as much as reading one of these? An evening along a beach with a girl may stick more in your mind than my interpretation of literature? You say good literature inspires different interpretations in people according to their life experience? What jargon you speak lad? You say that passing a literature course doesn't require fancying another's dream,but only an understanding, an approach to the material in your own terms? That there is no one answer to writing, but that all must take account of the reader?

"How rude you are, how preciously rude you are.Hey! snap to, boy! I have three tests for you in this semester, three blue books, and in them you'll tell me what I want to hear. Enough of this foolishness. After all, you're only an undergrad, and no matter how I pretend otherwise, it is an affront for your dirty feet to stumble against the professor's white shoes.

So you go and echo my life in those exam books, boy. You hear? And I won't give yours an ounce of dignity. And that way we will trade, you and I. Sixty dollars a credit hour, and an F to an A."

Magazine Review

First and '10'

There is much that is good about this issue of the 'Syracuse 10.' From the bold cover executed by Chan Rudd to the last page listing contributors, the magazine is thoroughly professional and interesting.

One criticism of the '10' that may be made is that a good portion of the material is not by students. It is the student contributions, however, that are most outstanding in this issue.

Graduate student John Allman and senior C.H. Combs have written excellent short stories. Allman, in particular, has a fine ear for dialogue and the structure of "The Girl in the Pink Dress" is intrigueing.

The interpolation of past and present episodes and the lack of identification or distinction between the two, results in a stream-of-consiciousness technique that is not confusing and which unifies the whole.

Combs' "The Last Analysis" uses his basic theme of conflict between the sexes that was evident in last year's "The Catharsis." The story describes the mental struggle between a highly intelligent, beautiful woman and the man whom she attracts.

Perhaps the only devise that one could question is the use of the long, conversation-description at the beginning of the story. While heightening the surrealistic quality of of "The Last Analysis" it is essentially distracting and obstructs the narrative flow.

Poetry editor Joseph McDonald should be commended on his fine choices for this issue. Graduate Robert Phillips' poems are particularly outstanding with his occasional use of Hopkins-like adjectives and moralistic endings.

Some talented undergraduates are represented, also. Carla Steinberg's two poems are noteworthy: "Autumn Perpetual" and Diversion and a Song," the one descriptively sensual, the other playful. James Tucker has used an old poetic theme to create a meaningful statement in "Three A.M. and Jealous of Shakespeare."

Of the several non-undergraduate plums the '10' has picked, Denise Levertov's poem "A Look at the Night" ranks high. Chann Rudd has designed and executed a good background for the poem also.

Rudolph Bultmann's "Reflections on Christian Education" is an important addition to the theologian's statements. His goal is that love and faith are the only methods of Christian instruction and he proves his point in a series of Socratian steps of reasoning.

One of the most singularly disappointing features of this '10' is David Owen's critique "Lemon Drops Are Peppermint Candy. The first paragraph is lost in pedantic underbrush, and as a critical review, of Southern and Hoffenberg's "Candy," Owen's piece seems to be an author's statement of purpose rather than an analytical attempt at criticism.

The photography section is one of the most interesting of the 10's innovations. The photographs are inclosed between two woodcuts and the effect is that of a magazine within a magazine without interrupting the continuity.

This section is entitled "Scenes in Solitude" and features some excellent shots of brooding students. It is hard to understand, however, why the Duncan stillife was included. It is neither solitary, nor is it "an intolerable waiting," "a longing for another place and time," as is stated in the cover quote from Roethke. It is good to note that this often forgotten art has been included in an artistic magazine.

The illustrations for the short stories by Chan Rudd carry out their respective moods and themes and the only trouble with the poetry section is this lack of illustration.

The Caslon Antique lettering for both the Gypsy legends (which are highly interesting) and the poetry leaves much to be desired. The type face is hard to read and is incongruous especially in the poetry section.

The article illustrations are exceptionally fine with reference to Rudd's illustration of Owen's "Candy" critique.

As a whole, this issue of the Syracuse 10 is a fine piece of work by Editor Michael Morgan. Not only is it a good issue by itself; it shows the promise of the future issues.

razor. Thieves according to Graszler, broke a window pane on the rear door and then reached in and opened the door.

A soda machine at Men's Co-Op II, 1017 Harrison St., was rifled and about $28 in cash stolen. Thieves apparently entered through an unlocked door, said Graszler.

A freshman resident of Winchell Hall was robbed of about $150 worth of clothing as she made plans to leave the campus. The clothing was stolen from an unlocked automobile parked outside Winchell, said Graszler.

"For vacations, security is relieved of a lot of its normal duties and therefore increases patroling of the campus," noted Graszler. "But it is the old story of a lot of buildings and few security police," he added.

Because of these robberies, special steps will be taken over Christmas vacation to protect the campus, he said.

"We hope," Graszler said, "to arrest the burgular responsible for this before Christmas."

Last year after the Christmas vacation eight fraternities had been broken into and robbed of various items including television sets, jewelry, radios and clothing. Many of the houses suffered damage from the thieves who broke windows, smashed doors and rifled vending machines.

roll-call to establish a quorum. He said Stern conducted the vote after voicing his position on the motion.

The Senate appointed members of Student Court to the committee, and asked them to report their findings and recommendations at the Senate's next meeting.

But Student Court refused to take part in the investigation, saying it would prejudice their handling of an impeachment case if one arose from the charges. Chief Justice Frank Richmond said the investigation was a Senate matter.

Stern plans to appoint committee members on a random basis and put the Senate's assistant parliamentarian in charge temporarily.

"I hope that the Senate will approve of my procedure of appointment," Stern said Wednesday.

Stern plans to keep tonight's meeting short, and put the committee to work as soon as it ends. The group will have until next Wednesday's regular meeting to investigate the charges against Stern.

Stern said he wants to get the matter over with so the Senate can get on to other business.

Tolley Discusses U. S. Educational Priority

Education in the United States must have a priority previously given only to nation defense, Chancellor William P. Tolley said Wednesday.

The Chancellor noted the need for education as the greatest problem of our time in an address Wednesday. The speech was made at the inauguration of Dr. John F. Olson as president of Oklahoma City University.

Olson was associated with SU for the past 16 years, most recently as vice-president and executive secretary to the Chancellor. He resigned last May to take the position at OCU.

His induction as president was conducted by Bishop W. Angie Smith, chairman of OCU's board of trustees and bishop of the Oklahoma-New Mexico Conference of the Methodist Church. His official inauguration was attended by 300 delegates from universities, colleges and learned societies across the nation.

In his speech, Tolley said, "Education is the only sure road to freedom and responsibility."

"If we are seriously interested in the President's war against poverty or in his desire to achieve the Great Society, we must put our faith and our dollars in improving schools and colleges and universities. Education must have a priority we have previously given only to national defense."

Tolley said that in any long range regional plan, urban universities are the key to the future.

ELECTRONIC ENGINEERS
MATHEMATICIANS

Let's discuss tomorrow

In science and technology, the accomplishments of today are but direction for tomorrow. Why? Simply because resting on the accomplishments of today is a luxury we cannot afford.

In Communications Engineering, where others are content to modify, our mandate is to CREATE.

In Electronic Data Processing Systems, where others are content to innovate, our mandate is to CREATE.

This, then, is the philosophy . . . the crux of intellectual thought . . . at the National Security Agency—where the concepts of tomorrow are the problems of today.

So let's discuss the future . . . yours and ours

If you are a gifted and interested Engineer or Mathematician, we have much in common—including A COMPULSION TO SUCCEED.

Our future is contingent upon a constant input of new . . . and creative . . . scientific talent . . . the lifeline of any institution. Our success is embodied in the technical capabilities of our professional staff. To assure this, scientific employees are encouraged to pursue graduate studies at local universities under Agency sponsorship. Your future with NSA will entail education . . . early responsibility . . . and unusually challenging assignments. Why? Because . . .

- We MUST create completely new kinds of communications equipments and systems embodying concepts and techniques THAT HAVE NO PRECEDENT . . . antennas, transmitters, receivers and terminal hardware of a most advanced design.
- We MUST assure the complete invulnerability of message content through the novel . . . but never static . . . science of cryptology.
- We MUST develop special refinements for computers and electronic data processing systems . . . experimenting with the latest semiconductors, magnetic film and superconductive devices to provide new logic circuits and memory units for increased speed and capacity.

Interested? . . . If so, then LET'S DISCUSS TOMORROW. Representatives of the National Security Agency will be on campus in the near future. Check with your Placement Office for details and dates, or write to:

It's just as necessary during the summer. When I'm on my boat, the hot sun is rough on my lips—burns them up, dries them out. 'Chap Stick' helps soothe and heal them fast!"

NOVELIST VIEWS

Algren Calls U. S. Barbaric

BY AMOS MOSCRIP

Novelist Nelson Algren isn't too happy with the way America has been going in the past 20 years.

"We're basically a savage civilization," Algren said in an interview to the Daily Orange, Wednesday. "I don't know if all these technological advances have any meaning if we remain a barbaric people."

Algren visited Syracuse University this week as the second writer in the 1964-65 Visiting Writers Series sponsored by the English department. He writes about the human jungles in big cities like Chicago and New York or the jungles in the South.

The Man With The Golden Arm, the story of Frankie Machine, a drug addict, won the First National Book Award in 1949.

"We're as far behind in human problems as we're ahead of Siam." Algren said. "Like the drug addiction problem. We leave it up to policemen and it's like putting epilepsy in their hands. Addiction isn't a crime, it's a sickness."

Algren isn't too happy about the "Playboy" view of sex either. "What we do is kind of play it safe," Algren said. You don't take any risks in sex today. You don't have to commit yourself. So sex becomes a personal game, with how high a score you can make."

"This is really a violation of a very human relationship," Algren added.

As far as suburbia, "yeah, we're becoming a nation of people who occupy land without feeling for it. I doubt that anybody in suburbia is devoted to it. There's not the personal attachment you used to get with a guy in a neighborhood bar or with the next door neighbors.

As far as the differences between the writing in the 30's when Algren came up, and the writing today, "there was a direct sort of sympathy then. Nobody's writing that today. But we aren't living in such a time. Today isn't a compassionate time."

Algren paused.

"But maybe we need that right now. Yeah, maybe it would be good to have a compassionate novel now."

Dispute: Lambert Trophy

By HOWIE SCHNEIDER
Junior Editor

Not since Notre Dame's post-game victory over the Orangemen have so many cried foul.

Even after the Lambert Board had made the misorder of finish official many found it hard to accept the fact that Penn State had finished first.

Syracuse had led in the voting since the fourth week of the season. A week previous to the final tally the Orangemen had a 9.9 rating. Suddenly after a two-point loss Schwartzwalder and crew found themselves third behind the Lions and Princeton.

You could chew on it a long time, but it was mighty hard to digest.

From the hallowed halls of Princeton came cries of disenchantment. "What do we have to do to win the damn thing anyhow?"

The boys from New Jersey had gone 10-0. No one could ask for anything more. In a year that saw no outstanding Eastern Independent (at least record wise) the Ivy League squad deserved strong consideration.

The fact that Princeton finished second seemed to indicate that an Ivy League squad could only hope for second best. Once again the big bad Independents were downgrading Ivy League football.

From Army's Paul Dietzel came a response. Dietzel couldn't see how the Ivy League hoped to be rated on equal terms with the Big Five when they continue to schedule their games among themselves. Clashes between the Ivies and Independents ended several years back with the formation of the Ivy Conference.

From Orange scout Roy Simmons came a possible solution. "In general the Ivy League doesn't produce the quantity of rough and tough ball players that the Major Independents do. On the whole schools like Syracuse and Penn State play much tougher competition.

I would be in favor of forming a league and championship for the big five or six Eastern schools. It could be like the Ivy Conference or Big Ten. Any type of division where there is reasonable balance, where on a given Saturday any team could beat another, is good for football."

From stately Syracuse came the word from coach Ben that the selection of Penn State was understandable.

But many questions remained unanswered. Hadn't the Orangemen beaten the Lions on their own home field? Hadn't they had best record of Independents in the East? Hadn't they beaten Pitt and Army? Hadn't Penn State lost four games, including one to UCLA and one to Navy? Hadn't UPI rated SU 12th, Princeton 13th and Penn State 14th? Hadn't . . . ?

From Rip Engle came word that he wasn't giving it back. He was convinced his squad was easily the best team in the East through the last half of the season. They had beaten Ohio State, Pittsburgh, West Virginia and Army.

The final voting really depended upon what value the members of the Board put on the various phases of football. "Their attitude at the time of voting is extremely important," said Simmie.

It appeared, therefore, that the Board agreed that the caliber of Ivy League football was not equal to that of Penn State. Further, in picking Penn State over Syracuse they appeared to give the last half of the season greater weight than the first.

It is obvious, however, that strong and convincing argument can be given for any of the three teams. The basic, underlying issue is whether the Lambert Trophy really is emblamatic of Eastern football supremacy.

The controversy has clearly shown that other alternatives must be considered. They might include an independent Eastern Conference or an All-America Conference, which would include Independents from all over the nation. Then at least, we would get a shot at our friends the Fighting Irish once a year. Now, wouldn't that be interesting?

"Reader's Digest" notes that the Russians seem to be changing their minds about the capitalistic practice of advertising. It quotes an article from Izvestia which asks, "Why is there so much indifference to advertising here in Russia?" The item laments the fact that despite rising abundance of consumer goods, consumers are kept in the dark about their availability.

Little-Nance Combo Shines in Statistics

By JEFF LAZAR

If awards were given in the categories of "Sophomore of the Year" and "Comeback of the Year," Syracuse's 1-2 punch of Floyd Little and Jim Nance would probably get a majority of the votes.

At any rate, the statistics at season's end (not including the Sugar Bowl, of course) reveal sizeable contributions to the 1961 football story on Piety Hill by these two individuals.

Little, a member of the 22-man squad picked by Look Magazine as the best football talent in the country, led the way with a phenomenal total offense of 1,690 yards via every conceivable route.

For example, the New Haven flash surpassed the late Ernie Davis' sophomore rushing mark with a total of 828 yards gained in 149 carries for a 5.6 average gain.

In the passing department he completed two of two for nine yards and a touchdown. He was the leading pass receiver with 16 catches, good for 248 yards and one touchdown.

Of the total 389 yards SU accumulated in punt returns, Mr. Little was responsible for 270 of them. He also ran back kickoffs for 335 yards.

Not to be forgotten is Nance, or Mr. Inside as he is known to SU football fans. "Bo" accounted for nearly two-thirds of his total rushing yardage in his three-year stay at the Hill, with a whopping 951 and a five-yard per carry norm.

He was one of the most explosive backs in the country all year as he was thrown for a loss just once. In addition, he nosed out Little for the scoring honors, 13 TD's to 12.

Walley Mahle, who kept the defense honest throughout the season, and Ron Oyer contributed 390 and 184 yards respectively. Brad Clarke and Jim Cripps snagged 17 passes, good for two touchdowns.

The Spiders led by Charlie Brown, Rich King, Hal Rooney and Ted Holman picked off nine enemy passes and ran them back for two scores.

The Orangemen led the nation in rushing with 2,510 yards while holding their opponents to a mere 861. This was indicative of the power football the Piety employed while rolling to a 7-3 record and an invitation to the Sugar Bowl.

FLOYD ON TV

Floyd Little, recently named to the 1961 Look All-America, will appear on the Tonight Show, starring Johnny Carson, this evening. Floyd and the other 21 Look grid stars will receive specially designed watches at the All-America Awards Banquet Friday in New York.

Football Practice Planned at Pensacola

The Orange grid forces will depart Dec. 20 for Pensacola, Fla., and practice sessions prior to the Sugar Bowl Game Jan. 1 in New Orleans.

According to Hill officials, the squad will remain in Pensacola for ten days, flying the 200 miles to New Orleans on Dec. 30.

SU Athletic Director James Decker and coach Ben Schwartzwalder inspected facilities at the Pensacola Naval Air Station Tuesday and gave the OK.

Featuring SU's New All-American

By JIM KLURFELD

"You've got to put yourself where there is nobody.

"When you get the ball you have to head straight for the hole and then look for running room. Sometimes I look to my left and see guys so I say 'better go the other way' and then go the other way and see other fellows so I say, 'better go the other way again' and I cut again and head for the flag.

"That's all there is to it — head for the open space."

And that, sport fans, is Floyd Little's directions on how to become an All-America halfback.

If you doubt its validity just ask the Football Writers Association of America which named Floyd to its All-America team in Look magazine Monday.

"It's like a dream, I still think I'm dreaming. When a kid is first introduced to football that is the ultimate goal — an All-American — but it's so far off it doesn't seem real."

Sitting at his desk in Sadler Hall, Floyd leans forward and talks about his accomplishment quietly — almost in a whisper.

"At the start of the season I was just hoping I would play. I never thought I would be on the first team, they have so many good backs here. I fitted myself in and figured I would be second team this year and next year also."

It's fortunate that Floyd isn't the coach because if he had placed himself on the second team he wouldn't have scored 12 touchdowns and gained 828 yards rushing — a mark that broke Ernie Davis' sophomore record of 686.

"In the fall the coaches put me on the starting team which surprised me. But then I had a bad scrimmage and the next day I was back with the defensive team— I felt more at home, too."

But Ben Schwartzwaldeer wasn't about to let his hottest halfback prospect decorate the bench. Floyd was in the starting line-up against Boston College.

"I wasn't satisfied at all with that BC game. I was probably trying too hard. I felt sure that after that game I would be back with the second team."

Wrong again.

"When they didn't drop me I made a deal with myself (I do that quite often, I'm not crazy or anything, I just like to make up my mind to do something). I decide to hustle and hit harder the next week."

It was probably the best deal in Syracuse since Ralph James decided to sell cheese jaws.

All Floyd did against Kansas was score five touchdowns and gain 159 yards rushing. No Orange sophomore ever had a day like that before.

"No, no, I don't feel that was my best day this year. I felt I was improving each game, especially my blocking."

Now his face lit up.

"Blocking is a new wrinkle in football for me. I never did much of it in high school. But when I saw how Jim Nance and Ron Oyer were blocking for me, I figured I better do the same for them.

"At first I would get knocked down or completely miss the block. But after a while I learned to come at the defensive end in different ways and began to clear that end out more consistently. It's a terrific sense of accomplishment for an athlete to improve at something like this.

"In the Pitt game I could go low and knock that man down, or cross-body him, or hook around and crab block him, or straighten him out and then lower him. I didn't miss too many that day."

Listening to Floyd talk about his blocking is like listening to a knockout puncher talk about his jab, but the expression on his face and tone of his voice left no doubt about how he felt.

Between blocking assignments Floyd gained 100 yards rushing against Pitt.

But, though Floyd is proud and slightly dazzled by his selection, his head isn't in the clouds. And when you ask him about Jim "Bo" Nance he is quick to reply.

"Without Bo, . . whew. Let me tell you this guy is terrific. He earned all the things I've been getting. I got the breaks, but he's the back of the year. Without his blocking and bursts up the middle. . . we're going to miss the big guy next year."

Besides football practice and studies Floyd's time is occupied by something new — letters.

"I get 10 or 20 a day. Most of them are from little kids and I try to answer as many as I can, but it's impossible.

I got one from my old club in New Haven (his home town). But the biggest kick I get out of the letters are from the little guys — the chicken scratchers. Sometimes they write upside-down or backward. You gotta answer them."

With one season behind him and a bowl game ahead, Floyd is already being compared to the other great 44's—Jim Brown and Ernie Davis.

But Floyd is a unique personality in himself and his spirit and sense of fun is indicative of a statement he made when someone asked him how he felt about having a spectacular touchdown called back.

"Yes, man, that was a good run. One of my best. But listen, they can't keep a good man down."

And that is exactly the problem opposing coaches are going to have for the next two seasons, "keeping a good man down."

Words of Praise

Jack Mitchell (Kansas) — "Little's performance was the greatest show by a back that I have ever seen."

Bill Barnes (UCLA) — "Little is a great back. He ran right over us and we couldn't stop him. He's about as good as Southern Cal's Mike Garrett, but with a little more speed."

Tommy Prothro (Oregon State) — "He's the most explosive back I've seen this season. Everytime he got the ball, I held my breath until he was on the ground. Little's every bit as good as Mike Garrett of USC."

John Micheloson (Pitt) — "Little has to be one of the best backs we've seen or will see all year. He's got the speed to go to the outside and the power to run up the middle. You can bet we'll remember him."

Paul Dietzel (Army) — "He's the best back in America."

Jerry Claiborne (Virginia Tech) — "Little is a fine running back."

Lone sour spot in the win was a possible foot fracture suffered by Hicker. The Olean native limped out of action early in the second half.

Pacing the visitors' attack was Laurie Peckham, who tallied 13.

At 4 p.m. he saw two men in a boat at the duck blind in the windy bay. The resident could not say, however, whether the men in the car and the men in the boat were the same.

State Police said that the search may be halted today because the ice is rapidly freezing solid over the shoreline of the lake.

in prying off the scoring lid. Richards, Bing and Boeheim collaborated for the first five Piety points before American U. broke the ice. SU proceeded to build up a 31-10 advantage with Boeheim repeatedly breaking through for easy layups.

Schoff came off the bench with about eight minutes to go in the half and hit on five straight attempts.

Boasting a 66-31 halftime lead, the locals breezed to victory the rest of the way, with Lewis substituting at will.

The SU coach expects to employ the same starting lineup of Bing, Richards, Norm Goldsmith, Sam Penceal and Boeheim against Penn State this weekend, although the bench should again receive plenty of calls.

Shooters Win Pair

The Syracuse University rifle team recently added two wins to its record when the Orange riflemen scored a 1264-1260 triumph over Alfred and a 1217-1150 victory over St. Bonaventure.

The victory over the Bonnies gave the Orange a 3-1 record.

The tense win against Alfred gave the SU shooters revenge for the one-point loss suffered at the hands of the Saxons in 1963.

Alfred's Stuart Boysen was the individual high scorer with a total of 275 points from the prone, kneeling and offhand angle followed with 267 points.

The other Syracuse scorers were: Klint Wigren, 254; Don Hadyk, 253; Tom Rohr, 246; and Tony Jerie, 244.

St. Bonaventure proved a lesser obstacle than Alfred, but the performance of the Orangemen, as reflected in the comparative point totals was generally poorer.

Hadyk was the leading scorer for both squads with 251 points. He was followed for SU by Larry Novak, 250; Gold, 241; Dave Jones, 239; and Roger Rubrecht, 236.

The riflemen will face undefeated Clarkson for the second time Saturday on Clarkson's home range. In their first meeting the Orangemen were handed their only setback of the season, 1282-1284.

Tangerines Squeeze Albany Cubs, 111-52

By ART ROSSKY

Wednesday night the Hill frosh introduced themselves to the Manley Field House crowd. It looks like a long, happy friendship following the Tangerines' 111-52 romp over Albany State's cubs.

This year's frosh are the physical opposite of the 1964 edition which featured such performers as 6-6 Rich Dean and 6-9 Val Reid. "Big" man in the current crop is 6-4 Jim Ringleman.

"This year we recruited only little men because next year's varsity will need guards while being adequately supplied with big men. Actually this year we are playing four guards," explained frosh coach Roy Danforth who was making his Hill debut.

But the current Tangerines make up in speed and agressiveness for their lack of height. Most of the night the hosts were stealing the ball and fast-breaking their way to the basket.

"They never stopped hustling," declared the mentor. "Most teams start to play ragged after rolling up a big lead. But our boys kept their poise and stayed in their patterns."

All five starters hit double figures in coach Danforth 's evenly balanced attack.

High scorer was Rich Cornwall, a 5-11 lad from Trenton, N.J., dunking 24 points on an assortment of shots. In addition to his prolific scoring, Cornwall displayed sharp passing and masterful dribbling.

Steve Ludd, a scrappy rebounder despite his 6-3 stature, collected 21 points.

Other starters in double figures were Tom Bednark, 22, George Hicker, and Ringleman, 14.

Points and praise flowed freely Wednesday night as Syracuse's red-hot cagers mauled American University, 127-67, in the season opener at Manley Field House.

An enthusiastic crowd of 3,952 roared approval of the record-breaking performance.

The 127 points scored by the Orangemen shattered the old SU mark of 117 set last season against Colgate. Also broken was the halftime record of 59 (versus Colgate), as the Hill five netted 66 points in the first 20 minutes.

BOEHEIM

"We looked real good out there," beamed a happy Fred Lewis. "I was real pleased. Our offensive patterns came off very well. And we only lost the ball six times in the first half."

"We had a few glaring weaknesses on defense, mainly because a number of our fellas were out of position. In addition we substituted freely. This was the perfect time to give the boys experience under game pressure."

Pacing the Hill attack were co-captains Dave Bing and Chuck Richards, along with junior guard Jim Boeheim.

Bing put on a dazzling passing and rebounding display, combined with his 20 points. He notched 11 assists to tie the SU record he established last winter. The 6-3 jumping jack snared 15 rebounds, four more than Richards.

Big Chuck clicked on six of nine field goal attempts and eight of 10 from the foul strip for 20 points.

But the most fantastic shooting of the evening came from Boeheim, who tossed the ball up eight times, hitting on all eight. He finished with 17 markers.

Other Orangemen in the double figure column were 6-9 soph Val Reid with 11 points, forward Phil Schoff with 12 and playmaker Richie Duffy with 10.

Lewis expressed satisfaction with the play of his rookies. Rick Dean popped in three buckets and tore off eight rebounds. Loll chipped in with six points, hitting well from the corners.

For the losing Eagles, forwards Bob Farrer and Ben Still each tallied 13 points.

Gridiron Picks

★ OSU Heads All-Opponent Team ★

By BILL CRONAUER
Sports Editor

Oregon State, with four first-team selections, paces the 1964 Daily Orange all-opponent grid eleven.

The Rose Bowl-bound Beavers, who handed SU its most severe beating of the campaign, 31-13, landed quarterback Paul Brothers, halfback Cliff Watkins, end Len Frketich and linebacker Dick Ruhl.

West Virginia and Virginia Tech placed three players each on the team, with UCLA receiving the final spot.

The all-opponent squad was chosen according to the player's performance against Syracuse only. Thus such standouts as Gale Sayers, Glenn Ressler and Jim Whalen missed first-team honors.

FIRST TEAM

End -- Milt Clegg (West Virginia, 6-1, 220 senior) -- Caught eight passes for 139 yards against Syracuse including nine-yard touchdown toss from Allen McCune.

End -- Len Frketich (Oregon State, 6-3, 215 senior) -- Terrorized Orange all day with fine punting and receiving. Snared 11-yard TD pass from Paul Brothers, punted three times for 46.0 average.

Tackle -- Kent Francisco (UCLA, 6-2, 220 senior) -- Outstanding two-way performer for Bruins, voted top Uclan lineman versus SU. Chipped in with four tackles and fumble recovery on defense.

Tackle -- Andy Bowling (VPI, 6-3, 216 sophomore) -- Unsung member of first team, but Hill players won't forget him. Accounted for nine tackles against Piety, including five unassisted.

Guard -- Dick Ruhl (Oregon State, 6-1, 212 senior) -- Outshone more publicized Jack "Mad Dog" O'Billovich as linebacker in OS win over Syracuse. Intercepted second half pass to stymie Hill drive, participated in numerous tackles.

Guard -- Jim Karwoski (West Virginia, 6-1, 231 junior) -- Another "unknown" until West Virginia game. Harassed Orange all afternoon, making 11 tackles and blocking what proved to be all-important extra point attempt.

Center -- Ken Whitley (VPI, 5-8, 206 junior) -- Turned in no. 1 defensive performance of season against SU. Was all over field turning in near-unbelievable total of 19 tackles, seven unassisted. VPI lineman of game.

Back -- Paul Brothers (Oregon State, 6-1, 180 sophomore) Top Orange backfield opponent of 1964 campaign. Completely demolished touted Spider defense, connecting on nine of 12 tosses for 176 yards and two touchdowns.

Back -- Allen McCune (West Virginia, 6-2, 180 junior) - 13 of 17 passes to provide Mountaineers with 28-27 victory over Bill Orange. Totaled 245 yards and pair of TDs, including the 50-yard winning heave to Bob Dunlevy.

Back -- Sonny Utz (VPI, 5-11, 205 senior) - Leading rusher, by a large margin, against Orange defense all season. Racked up 115 yards on 20 carries, tallied VPI's final TD on six-yard run. Stood out as defensive linebacker.

Back -- Cliff Watkins (Oregon State, 5-10, 185 junior) -- Sleet wingback did everything for Beavers against Syracuse. Rushed for 45 yards, caught two passes for 68 yards, returned a kickoff 31 yards, scored two touchdowns.

SECOND TEAM

End -- Bill Cronin (Boston College, 6-4, 215 senior) -- Eagle captain caught only one pass against SU, but it was big one - outbattled two Orange defenders for pass from Larry Marzetti and scored TD with 12 seconds left, providing 21-14 win.

End -- Jim Colletto (UCLA, 5-10, 191 junior) -- End on defense, fullback on offense. Sparkled defensively with 12 tackles, recovered fumble.

Tackle -- Bill Zadel (Army, 6-4, 230 senior) -- Offensive lineman who paced Cadet forward wall versus Hill forces. Named to second team All-America.

Tackle -- Alan Hoover (West Virginia, 6-1, 216 senior) -- Actually plays guard, but that position is over-populated by top-notch opponents. Participated in 11 Mountaineer tackles.

Guard -- Bob Kane (Penn State, 6-1, 200 senior) -- Joins fellow Nittany Lion Glenn Ressler on second-team guard spots. Voted Penn State lineman of game for play against Orangemen.

Guard -- Glenn Ressler (Penn State, 6-2, 230 senior) -- Big linebacker teamed with Kane as outstanding defensive performers in SU-PS encounter. Also centered offensive line.

Center -- Marty Schottenheimer (Pittsburgh, 6-3, 225 senior) - Linebacker invaded Syracuse backfield all day in Pitt setback. Made 11 tackles once throwing Walley Mahle for 16-yard loss.

Corrallo Launches Student Campaign For Yule Extension

By JESSE SMITH

President Carl Corralo has launched a Student Government drive to extend Christmas vacation.

Corrallo told Student Senate Thursday evening that if the university's "inflexible" calendar could be changed for the Sugar Bowl football game New Year's Day, it could be changed for other reasons.

Corrallo wants the two and one half days of classes before vacation called off, to allow students more time to travel home for the holidays.

Corrallo said he was told by the Social Committee earlier in the year that the calendar was "inflexible," and that no changes could be made.

"Then came Syracuse football and the bowl games," he said.

Eric H. Faigle, university vice president, announced Tuesday that classes would resume Jan. 5 instead of Jan. 4. He said this was to allow students and faculty attending the Sugar Bowl game more time to drive back.

Corrallo said he told Chancellor William P. Tolley that the policy should be more consistant — that if the vacation could be extended one way, it could be extended the other way.

"I think the problem is clear," Corrallo told the Senate. "How we solve the problem is a matter for the student body.

"If we're going to effect a change, we have to exert student pressure," he said.

Corrallo is now working with other student leaders on how to exert that pressure.

In contrast to last year's food service battle, this campaign is being spearheaded by the president in cooperation with Robert (Robby) Stern, speaker of the senate.

Last Spring the legislature mobilized students in a boycott of dining halls, without approval of the executive branch. A bitter feud developed between President James Morris and Speaker Jay Litwin.

Stern turned the matter over to the Senate's Local and National Affairs committee for study.

The special Senate session in Maxwell Auditorium formed a committee to investigate Stern's conduct as speaker. Stern called the session after Student Court members refused the job.

Accepting Stern's recommendation, the Senate assigned to the committee every twentieth senator on the roll.

Edward Luft, of Acacia fraternity, has charged Stern with misuse of parliamentary procedure in conducting the Oct. 28 meeting, which approved a letter to the president of Virginia Polytechnic Institute on alleged discrimination.

The investigation panel meets today at 4 p.m. in the Student Government office, Marion Hall basement, to start its work.

15-Year-Old Nabbed In SU Dorm Theft

A 15-year-old boy on parole from a correction institute was arrested by Syracuse police Wednesday in connection with recent thefts from Syracuse University-living centers.

Syracuse patrolman Robert Powers of the Syracuse Youth Bureau and Officer Angelo Natoli of the patrol division apprehended the boy in the Sherbrooke Apartments, an upperclass women's dormitory on the corner of Madison Street and Walnut Avenue.

According to Leo J. Graszler, assistant director of SU safety and security, the boy fits the description of the person seen in at least 23 fraternities and sororities in October and November. It is possible that he was in more houses than was reported to Security Police, said Graszler.

The boy would enter a house and pick up small items that could be carried easily, said Graszler. In some houses he was discovered before committing a theft in which case he would ask for a fictitious party.

When informed that the person he was looking for did not live there, he would just leave, added Graszler.

"Unfortunately his policy was to dispose of the stolen property as soon as possible," Graszler noted. "He would sell the property on the streets to passersby, usually standing outside of bars," added Graszler.

Because of this policy, the chances of recovering much of the stolen property are slim, said Graszler.

"He took money and small articles like radios, clothing and jewelry," Graszler noted. "Items that he could dispose of easily," he added.

"I hope that this arrest will clear up some of the prowler complaints that have come through this office also," Graszler said.

The police are continuing the investigation in the belief that there might be accomplices, added Graszler.

Shannon, Tymes To Head Concert

By CAROL SCHNEIDER

Del Shannon will do his "Searching" on the Syracuse University campus when he highlights, the concert portion of "Fructus," Freshman Weekend, next Friday at the Women's Building.

The Tymes and the Headliners will share the spotlight with Shannon when the curtain goes up at 8:30 p.m. on the kick-off event of Freshman Weekend, scheduled for Dec. 11-12.

Shannon became known to the radio listening public as a rock and roll singer. The Tymes is vocal group, whose current recording is "I Believe." From New England comes the Headliners, the band which will perform at the concert.

Presently number six in the record polls, Shannon's current release, "Searching," was tapped as this week's orbiter and called "Syracuse's fastest rising disc" by Big 50, a weekly report of record sales com-

NIC Conference Hosts 6 from SU

Members of the dean of men's staff and the InterFraternity Council have gone to Cincinnati to attend the annual National InterFraternity Conference.

Jim G. Carleton, dean of men, and Melvin C. Mounts, co-fraternity administrator, are representing the dean of men's office.

George Van Derven, IFC president; Bud Titsworth, IFC publicity director; Owen Lewis, IFC treasurer; and Charles J. Pellock, editor of Meet the Greeks, the fraternity information book for freshmen represent IFC.

The conference, being held in the Netherland Hilton Hotel, is divided into two programs, one for deans and one for IFC representatives. Thursday both groups attended the same functions, including briefings and an informal reception.

The dinners were separate, however, and Carleton and Colleague Recalls Weiss As Unusual, Energetic Man

By MARLENE CIMONS

"Mel was a man who enjoyed life. I believe he got more out of his 41 years than most of us would get in twice that."

Dr. Seymour Bellin, senior research associate of the Youth Development Center, spoke these words Thursday about his close friend and fellow associate Melvin Weiss.

Weiss is believed drowned in a hunting accident last Saturday at Oneida Lake.

"He was the type of person who would stop to help anyone out," Bellin said. "I remember a time on the road when we were returning from the Rome State School. We passed two elderly women standing in front of a car which sported a flat tire.

"Mel insited upon stopping. He asked the two women if help were on the way, and they told him they expected a mechanic in about an hour.

"The time was late, yet Mel refused to leave the women stranded. He was all dressed up but took off his jacket and changed the tire for them in 10 minutes. The ladies offered to pay him, but he waved them off. He was that kind of guy."

A memorial program to honor Melvin Weiss will be held at 3 p.m. Saturday in Hendricks Chapel. Leading the program will be Dr. Paul Meadows, chairman of the sociology and anthropology department, and Dr. Charles V. Willie of the Youth Development Center.

Weiss felt that the basic trouble with today's world is that nobody cares enough about anybody else, according to Bellin.

"He would never make excuses to ignore his neighbors," Bellin commented.

"Here was a man with an enormous amount of energy who loved ideas and loved people," he mused. "He had an unrealistic quality about him. It was almost magical the way he could create an image by weaving words.

"I remember one time I had asked him why he got up at 5 in the morning to go hunting in the Adirondacks with a bow and arrow.

"His answer was almost poetry. I couldn't even begin to recreate it.

He expressed his intense feelings about nature—I could almost feel the dew on my clothes as he talked.

"I think that Mel never could quite believe that he couldn't transcend any problem," Bellin said.

"I'll Be Home For Christmas"

Dear Aunt Grace:

Neither rain, nor sleet, nor snow, nor Syracuse University will keep me from being home for Christmas.

I'll be sorry it won't be like any other Christmas, for I'll have to drive for the better part of two days to make it home on time, and I won't have any time for Christmas shopping, and if the weather stays like it is, I'll be too pooped from all the driving to enjoy Christmas.

For Syracuse University won't let us out from our psuedo-ivy-covered walls until the afternoon of Wednesday the 23rd, a benevolent gesture on the part of this university devoted to the cause of greatness.

If I drive, that means I'll get in about four or five hours Wednesday while the roads are safe, and I'll have to do the rest of the driving Thursday, and I hope I'll make it home for some Christmas Eve coffee.

Living 700 miles from school isn't easy, for I guess Syracuse thinks everyone lives in New York City. I imagine the university is trying to go back to a homogeneous student body by keeping us away for Christmas. They figure we'll tell our friends we don't like it here, and then they can take more people who live closer to here.

The university has reached the height of inconsistency in its decision to extend the vacation one day in order to let students enjoy their drive back from New Orleans and the Sugar Bowl.

I guess they want everyone to attend the victory party after the game, and not to have to rush out of the city like we have to rush out of here this vacation.

I hope those souls coming back from New Orleans have a leisurely drive through the warm Southland. I just hope that those of us who live further than 250 miles from the city of Syracuse will survive a hurried pace over ice-packed roads.

Yes, this is Syracuse University, that good university on the verge of greatness (athletic, rather than academic), which consistently goes out of its way to show its students it doesn't give a damn.

We've solved one problem, however. The real boss on this campus is football.

Tiger at the Gates

The Sword

By Dan Ritey

Traditionally, tyrants, ruling cliques and, generally, rulers all around, operate under the threat of revolt, discontent and even death; symbolically, this has been epitomized as the "Sword of Damocles" that hangs over the head of any ruler.

The Sword of Damocles. The threat to a head of state. The conscience and warning to save. The symbol of an implied resistance and rumbling of discontent and protest.

Belatedly, we at Piety have been exposed to the spectre of a sword hanging over the heads of the administrators whose thoughts (or, maybe, lack of same) guide circumstances at ol' SU.

It is, of course, a literary sword which is the bane of our leaders; an off-campus magazine written and edited by university students for the student body and interested heads.

Largely for the benefit of those slogging through their first Syracuse winter (and maybe as a reminder to the powers that be here) it should be noted that Piety has been a participant in the first amendment guarantee of freedom of expression for only three short years.

Only since the editors of the "Syracuse 10" had to flee the censorship and pressures of the university administration in order to print what they considered the truth and important issues concerning SU, has this guarantee been literal here.

The one major crime, however, which we lay at the '10's' doorstep is the fact that, while it claims to be a student magazine, it is only such from a technical viewpoint and in a percentage of its writings; featured in the current issue are articles by an SU English professor and a former visiting lecturer on religion.

Not so with the "Sword." Whatever one may think of its editorial content and opinion, one is instantly struck by the fact that it is all student written, edited, produced and financed too.

Note the latter item: unlike the "Syracuse 10," the "Sword" has not a university subsidy to fall back upon in case of poor sales. Nor does the "Sword" have the prestige and patronage of the university, not to say its blessing either.

And with respect to the last mentioned grace, so antagonistic to the "Sword" are the university higher-ups that they sent one of their prized messenger boys around to the "Sword's" various advertisors to try to get them to withdraw their financial support under threats of university pressure and loss of support.

Unfortunately for the redbrick building boys, enough of the advertisers displayed a backbone and said no to the university threats; for this reason, a "Sword" will be on sale this coming Monday.

more than htat, there's the intangible of editor's devotion and interest which also ranks as a major reason for the upcoming appearance of the magazine.

A devotion that allowed the magazine to be printed even in the face of university-backed libel suits; a devotion that makes the editors willingly accept the perrenially implied SU challange to even publish in the first place.

A good working credo for the "Sword" staff was well stated by one of the editors: "We all like it here at SU. So much so that we'd do our utmost to make it a better place to attend and live in. That is why the "Sword" exists—as a prod, or a reminder to what is wrong here and what could be done."

In this, the "Sword" is not alone. Other campuses have their own swords that probe and report things that, while they may not be popular or even nice, are, in fact, the truth and, for that reason alone, deserve to be made known.

Finally we sadly note the heated debate which flares when the issue of selling the "Sword" on the SU campus arises. This is a perennial issue and a black eye for Piety.

Regardless of the final university stand on the sales of the "Sword" on campus, we think that to even discuss it or to even have to ask for such permission is by itself a condemnation of SU that the "Sword" need not print in its own columns.

LETTERS

Pity

To the Editor:

Several weeks ago, at the Pitt football game, a retarded boy appeared between the placard cheering section and the cheerleaders during the first half. While the cheerleaders were leading the group (of which I was a part), this boy began parading to the obvious delight of many. He was applauded, if that be the term and, secure in his oblivion, thus continued.

After several minutes, a university student joined him. The retarded boy, pleased, resumed to the increased pleasure of many in the crowd. It then became a question in my mind as to which one was the more deserving of pity.

Having lived with a retarded brother, I realize that to try to curb the actions of one so afflicted often does more harm than not. The problem, then, is not what might have been done to arrest him, but to question the ridicule of those who would call themselves "normal." What I question here is the level of maturity of those who have come to college, presumably that they may become able to cope with the fears and prejudices of society with a rational understanding. Yet for their ideals, they are hypocritical in their behavior.

I do not question that the majority of the hecklers had no intentions of cruelty. Yet they were secure in their conformity and normalcy. Was this not a situation in which they were repudiating the basic ideals not only of higher education but of an America?

Weekend

To the Editor:

In your coverage of the Pitt-Fall Weekend, you failed to mention that Alpha Xi Delta won a trophy for the best all around decorations. I feel the girls and especially the art chairman, Sue Henrich, deserve recognition after putting so much work into their theme of "Cage the Panthers.

The singer will hold a concert for children at 2 p.m., followed by his regular performance for adults at 8:30 p.m. Dyer-Bennet, who was English born but now is an American citizen, does not classify himself as a folk singer, but as a minstrel. BOAR'S HEAD THEATER — Reader's Theater will perform Stephen Vincent Benet's epic poem "John Brown's Body" at 8 p.m. this weekend in Machinery Hall. Sunday's performance is at 3 p.m. Benet's novel-length poem, won him the Pulitzer Prize in 1929, and describes both the battles of the Civil War and the feelings of the people involved on both sides. Admission is free.

SHOPPINGTOWN — The flowers are getting mighty wilted as Rock sends them to Doris via Tony for the sixth week in a row. "Send Me No Flowers" is another one of those chic, trite comedys from the treasury of Ross Hunter -- only in this one Rock and Doris are finally married. It's about time, too — people were beginning to wonder. "Again" at 7:30 p.m., 9:30 p.m.

RIVIERA — Jean Seberg and Warren Beatty portray two mixed-up kids in an insane asylum in "Lilith." Sound familiar? Only this time, Beatty turns out to be a Seberg's psychiatrist. Co - feature is "Only Two Can Play" with Peter Sellers. Sellers plays a novelist whose lady admirers are constantly pursuing him. Honest, he looks different in this one, too. "Adult David and Lisa" at 10:25 p.m., "Two" at 8:40 p.m.

A moist atmosphere is ideal for storage of green leafy vegetables - it prevents evaporation and therefore wilting.

'The Class That Ticks'

By Joan Strassburger

The following is a column written by the secretary of the junior class, Joan Strassburger. This is part of an effort of the class executive council to let other members of the class and all undergraduates know what activities it is working on throughout the year.

"We're the class of '66, we're the class that really ticks." Two and one half activity - packed years have ticked away since we first stepped on the Syracuse University campus. This year we have produced the Orange Aid, initiated a scholarship fund and will sponsor Winter Weekend activities.

The Orange Aid is a recent tradition, starting only three years ago on campus. It is Syracuse's answer to the "pig book," well-known on other campuses. The Orange Aid is a combination telephone directory, dating bureau, and vital information service compiled by the junior class. Edited by Harley Flaum, Susan Banta, and Mary Lee Stryker with the aid of the junior executive council, this year's Orange Aid is the most complete (96 per cent of the freshmen class will appear) and is finished earlier than ever before. Two dollars will buy you an Orange Aid which is on sale now in HBC.

The Class of '66 Scholarship Fund is another new tradition, started only last year, with the $600 profit from Homecoming Weekend. Based on scholarship achievement, leadership, and financial need, this scholarship is given to an outstanding member of our class.

Last year it was awarded to Peggy Griffin. Due to the enthusiastic response among the members of our class, we decided to establish a permanent scholarship fund that could help more than one member of our class.

Susan Heilbron, chairman, worked with the financial aids committee to set up a permanent scholarship fund to be financed by both the Class of '66 and our parents. Attempts were made to reach each junior and his parents, either by mail or through representatives in every living center.

The Financial Aids Committee has agreed to match the number of scholarships offered by our class, exemplifying their interest in our outstanding and worthwhile project.

The scholarship drive is coming to an end, and its success is evident. None of this could have been accomplished with out the support of our class. The Class of 1966 has some thing to be proud of.

Snow is an old tradition at Syracuse. Some flurries have already fallen, but more is coming. Winter Weekend, sponsored and planned by the junior class takes advantage of the snow and the fun filled activities it offers.

Festivities will begin Friday, Feb. 19, with the Stockingfoot Dance at Drumlins. (Shuttle buses will be available.) This has always been a high spot in winter activities on campus. Snow sculptures will grace the lawns of living centers and will be judged Saturday morning.

Skytop ski area will be the center of activity on Saturday afternoon. There will be intercollegiate as well as intramural ski events.

Snow, what's new? — our great weekend, of course! Let's all get out to make it the best ever!

Globetrotters at Memorial

The Harlem Globetrotters swing back into town tonight—and they bring basketball, baseball and vaudeville with them.

The internationally known Trotters will face their traveling rivals, the Washington Generals, at 8 p.m. in the War Memorial.

New York City fans will see an old friend as Connie Hawkins paces Abe Saperstein's squad The "Hawk" is a former Boys High School star and was the leading scorer in the now-defunct American Basketball League.

Meadows Tells Students Cities Forming into Blocs

By EDWARD KARLIN

Today's city has not became a heterogeneous melting pot, but has developed into "little islands of exclusion," that form certain "life styles."

This observation was made by Dr. Paul Meadows, chairman of the sociology and anthropology department, in a citizenship lecture Tuesday. His topic was "What Are the Life Styles of the City."

Meadows defined a life style as a "characteristic way of organizing things that dominate the life of a group."

He broke the broad term "life style" into four functions. It differentiates categories such as age, ethnic and political groups. Life styles also seperate groups of human beings into divisions such as speech and manners, he said.

A third function of life styles listed by Meadows was that it organizes human existence. One must "act your race, act your sex and act your class."

The last function is that of a reference group. This is the life man hopes to live.

Meadows said the metropolis is being flooded by mass culture. This he defined as a standardization "from leisure class culture to leisure mass culture. Individualism in culture is being lost in collectivism."

"A layer-cake of status' has formed in the urban centers, Meadows noted. This hierarchy is topped with the upper upper class. However, the upper middle class, in Meadow's view, is much larger and more energetic.

Next come the lower middle, the upper lower and finally the lower lower. This last group composes some one-fifth of the "active Yankee city," Meadow said.

Personality values can also be class linked. Meadows pointed out that delinquency, crime and mental illness increase as proximity to the central city is shortened.

Publisher to Speak Today

The president of the American Newspaper Publishers Assn., will address future journalists at noon today in Maxwell Auditorium.

Gene Robb, publisher of the Capital Newspapers in Albany, will speak on "Problems of a Publisher." Wesley C. Clark, dean of the School of Journalism, said that Robb will detail his expectations of his newsmen and problems concerning employe recruitment and training.

In addition to his many newspaper activities, Robb is a director of the Associated Press and vice president of the International Federation of Newspaper Publishers.

The public is invited to his talk.

piled by all Syracuse radio stations.

His other hits include, "Hats Off to Larry," and "Runaway."

The Tymes, first hit, "So Much in Love," placed their group on top of nationwide record surveys last year.

The Headliners who have performed at fraternity parties at SU, will donate their professional services at the Friday evening concert.

"Plenty of hard work together with a tremendous amount of good luck in being able to contract this talent for our show, have made prospects for this year's Freshman Weekend extremely bright," commented class president William (Todd) Wallens.

"The fact that Del Shannon's recording seems to be making a clean sweep to the top position of the listings will insure large attendance," noted Edward Lieberman, chairman of the ticket committee.

Tickets for the concert, as well as for Saturday's freshman show, " AFunny Thing Happened . . .," and dance, "Caesar's Ball,' are on sale in the main lobby of Huntington B. Crouse Hall.

Tickets, available at $2 each, have been on sale since Wednesday, and will continue as long the supply lasts, according to Wallens.

Nine SU Forestry Faculty Members Get Promotions

Nine faculty members of the State University College of Forestry at Syracuse University have been promoted, according to Dean Hardly L. Shirley.

The recommendations for advancements were approved at a meeting of the college's board of trustees. The promoted faculty members are from five departments: forestry economics, forest entomology, forest chemistry, wood products engineering, and the college's Experiment Station.

George R. Armstrong, now an associate professor, has been with the foresty exonomics department since 1950, and is a native of New York City. He is a graduate of the College of Forestry, and served as editor of the college's 50-year history in 1960.

John D. Bennett, promoted to assistant professor, is currently working on his doctorate in forestry economics at Syracuse University. A graduate of Ohio Wesleyan University, Bennett is from Findlay, O. He came to the College of Forestry in 1960.

Neil B. Christiansen has been promoted to assistant professor of forestry economics. His home town is San Diego, Calif., and he has been on the faculty for four years. Christiansen received a research grant from the U.S. Forest Service to study the economics of the pulp and paper industry.

Harold A. Core has been a member of the wood products engineering department since 1946, and is now an associate professor in wood anatomy. Core received a bachelor of science in forestry degree from West Virginia Univ. and his masters and doctorate at the College of Forestry. He is from Cassville, W. Va.

John H. Engelken was promoted to assistant professor in forestry. He has been the forester in charge of the college's Syracuse Forest Experiment Station and Tully Forest since 1952. He is a graduate of Utah State University and a native of New York City.

Robert T. La Londe, from Bemidji, Minn., has been promoted to professor of forest chemistry research. In the five years he has been with the college, he has taught organic chemistry, and has been engaged in natural products research. He earned his doctorate degree at the University of Colorado.

Raymond A. Moore, a native of Montgomery, W. Va., came to the wood products in 1951. The action of the board of trustees has advanced him to the rank of assistant professor. He holds degrees from West Virginia University and North Carolina State College.

John B. Simeone is chairman of the forest entomology department and has been with the college since 1948. Simeone received a doctorate from Cornell in 1960 and has now been made a full professor. He is originally from Providence, R. I.

Chun-uan Wang came to the college as a research associate in 1959. She has been an instructor in forest botany since that time and is now an assistant professor in botany. She received her bachelor's degree in Taiwan, China, and has gone on to receive a masters and doctorate degrees from Vassar and the University of Iowa.

Bellin seemed to feel that this determination of spirit was the cause of his accident.

"The wind, the bad weather, probably struck him as a challenge," he stated. "Mel would fly in the face of all negative pressures, and most likely considered himself indestructible.

"He was a warm, wonderful human being. An artist in the broadest sense of the word. He would make whomever he was talking to feel as if they were the center of his universe.

"I tried to push him into a 9-5 world of conventionality like me," Bellin said, "but he would have none of it. He lived for the present without regard to rules, organization or punctuality."

Bellin paused for a moment. "I'm sorry you never knew him. We all lost a good friend."

Campus Chest Clarifies Fund Raising Activities

Fund raising activities at Syracuse University have been clarified by the chairmen of Campus Chest, Linda Stevens and William Newman.

The university personnel committee has given Campus Chest "complete jurisdiction over all fund raising activities held on campus.

"All organizations wishing to raise funds on campus, regardless of their purpose, must request permission from the Campus Chest executive board," according to a statement issued by Miss Stevens and Newman.

They reminded students that the destination for the money raised for the Ernie Davis Memorial Fund has not been announced and neither the personnel committee nor Campus Chest has granted any group permission to raise funds for this purpose.

When planning activities, Miss Stevens and Newman said that one of the main duties of Campus Chest is to help other groups in their fund raising drives and to "prevent cross purposes among the many groups on campus."

★ ★ Meet LSU's Power-Packed Backs ★ ★

By BOB KRENGEL

When Syracuse's Orangemen take the field for the Sugar Bowl battle, they will meet an LSU backfield that has been brought up in the fine old Southern tradition of slam-bang football.

The Bayou Bengals feature Pat Screen at quarterback, Joe Labruzzo in the left halfback spot, right halfback Ken Cormier and Don Schwab at fullback.

In addition to these rugged individuals the Tigers have power to spare on the benches.

If Orange sports fans are hoping for a Louisiana quarterback who can't throw, they should stop dreaming immediately. QB Screen, at 5-11, 185 pounds, is a fine passer who has connected for 553 yards with 54 completions out of 93 attempts this season.

As if this weren't enough for SU, Screen can take the overland route, as he did this season on the way to racking up 197 yards, for a respectable 3.9 yards per carry.

In the tailback slot Joe Labruzzo, 5-9, 175, presents an awesome running threat. His explosive speed (he ran a 9.6 hundred in high school) and uncanny manuverability make him a constant threat for the long gainer.

Labruzzo has gained 348 yards in 98 tries for a 3.5 average. The shifty scatback ranks second on his squad in pass receiving, nabbing 20 tosses for 203 yards.

If this LSU power isn't enough, then Tiger fullback Don Schwab can fill the bill. At 5-9, 195 pounds, this hefty junior can change direction easily and shows good balance with adequate speed.

Schwab leads his squad in the rushing department, after grinding out 547 yards in 141 attempts.

When necessary Big Don can catch too. This season he has hauled in five passes, contributing 29 aerial yards to the LSU attack.

Right halfback Ken Cormier rounds out the Bengal backfield. At 6-2, 195, he is also a fine defensive player.

One of the biggest factors in the success of LSU this season is its strong bench. Such understudies as fullback Mike Vincent and second signal caller Billy Ezell add more offensive strength.

Ezell is also an adequate passer with 31 completions in 76 attempts for 384 yards and an impressive .408 pass completion average.

Ezell ranks second in LSU total offense with 548 yards, one more than Schwab. Screen leads the club in that department with 750 yards.

Syracuse Stars Host New York Rovers

Hill hockey students will have an opportunity to watch the Syracuse Stars hockey club twice this weekend against the New York Rovers at the State Fair Grounds Coliseum.

The Rovers will remain in Syracuse for a regular league contest Wednesday night against the New Haven Blades at the Coliseum.

The Stars will face off against the Eastern Hockey League entry at 8:30 p.m. Saturday and 7 p.m. Sunday.

WAER (88.3 fm) will broadcast Sunday's game direct from the Coliseum.

After a 12 year absence, the Rovers returned to the Eastern Hockey League this fall. As a New York Ranger farm team, the Redshirts are stocked with young talent looking to impress the Ranger brass.

The Rovers got off to a slow start against the verterans of the EHL, but have played solid winning hockey for the past two weeks.

Twenty-two-year old Rick Charron will be in the nets for the Redshirts when they take the ice Saturday. The pudgy netminder is a real spark plug with rubber band reflexes.

Helping Charron stymie the high scoring Stars will be defensemen Ken Block and Tommy Williams. Block's fine play earned him a two game tryout with the Baltimore Clippers of the American Hockey League last week.

Williams, a veteran of hockey circles, was acquired by the Rovers from the Cleveland Barons of the AHL to add some experience to the young squad.

Top goal getter for the Redshirts is 21-year-old Wally Chase, a flashy center.

The Stars roster contains many familiar names to followers of Syracuse hockey fortunes. Once again Norm Parrish is wearing the "tools of ignorance" for the Stars.

The veteran goaltender is sharper than ever following a post season operation on a pinched nerve. Setting the scoring pace for the Stars is Weiner Brown who dented the nets four times in the teams last outing.

Player-coach Gogi Goegan will be teaming with Claude Charron on defense for the Stars. Charron will be facing his kid brother who will be in the Rover nets.

George Walker and Gerry Wolford have been impressive playing their first season with Syracuse. Walker, a former Cornell University standout, is now assistant coach for the Big Red.

SEASON DEBUT

Mermen Await Relays

By BOBBIE MARX

Someone once said that "it's always darkest before dawn." Swim coach Ted Webster, now in his 33rd coaching year at Syracuse University, must be hoping that this person knew what he was talking about.

Sitting in his office yesterday, the coach described the team as going through its preliminary phase. "We're right in that gloomy stage," commented Webster.

Webster will have a chance to iron out a few wrinkles this Saturday when he takes the squad to the Upper New York State Relays in Brockport. The first regular meet of the season will be at Buffalo Dec. 16. Last year the varsity registered a convincing 61-34 victory against this team.

A number of varsity men will be returning this season. Captain Dick Bauschard, a junior, is expected to see plenty of action. Last year Dick swam in the freestyle sprints and the 400-yard medley relay. He holds the Syracuse record in the 100-yard freestyle with a 49.8 time.

Other lettermen from last season include backstroker Pete Hickman, a junior, who also saw action in the 200-yard individual medley and the 400-yard medley relay.

Webster will have three seniors competing in their last season at Syracuse. These include Bob DeWolfe, Hugh Dunseath, a 200-yard breaststroker last year, and Syracuse diver Chan Rudd.

Rounding out the list of swimmers with varsity experience are juniors Larry Stevens and Steve Haesche.

Strengthening the squad will be a list of sophs returning from freshman competition last season. These include Ed Branigan, Frank Comfort, Ted How, John Torpy, Jim Barlow, Larry Schlegel and Jack De Young.

As a freshman De Young put Bauschard's 100-yard freestyle record in jeopardy throughout the season.

The Piety swimmers will be seeking to improve their 5-4 record of last season. Their first home meet will be Jan. 15 against Cortland, in Orange Pool.

Hill Hoopsters Invade Penn State

BOB WEISS

By NEIL KERR

Maryland stuck a thorn in the Lions's paw Wednesday night and Syracuse will be trying to drive it in deeper this Saturday.

In its opener Wednesday, Penn State lost to Maryland, 72-71, on a 40-foot one-hand push shot with four seconds left. Now the still-smarting Lions are hoping to end their suffering at the expense of Syracuse's highly touted basketball squad.

But if pre-season ratings and an opening game performance mean anything, SU should keep the Penn State five in a state of post-game pain.

Syracuse, currently rated the East's best and seventh nationally, looked practically invincible in its opening game 127-67 slaughter of American University.

Dave Bing's exciting play highlighted the game, but the Orange's team depth was nearly as impressive. Coach Fred Lewis substituted freely and even with second and third stringers playing the scoring pace hardly slackened.

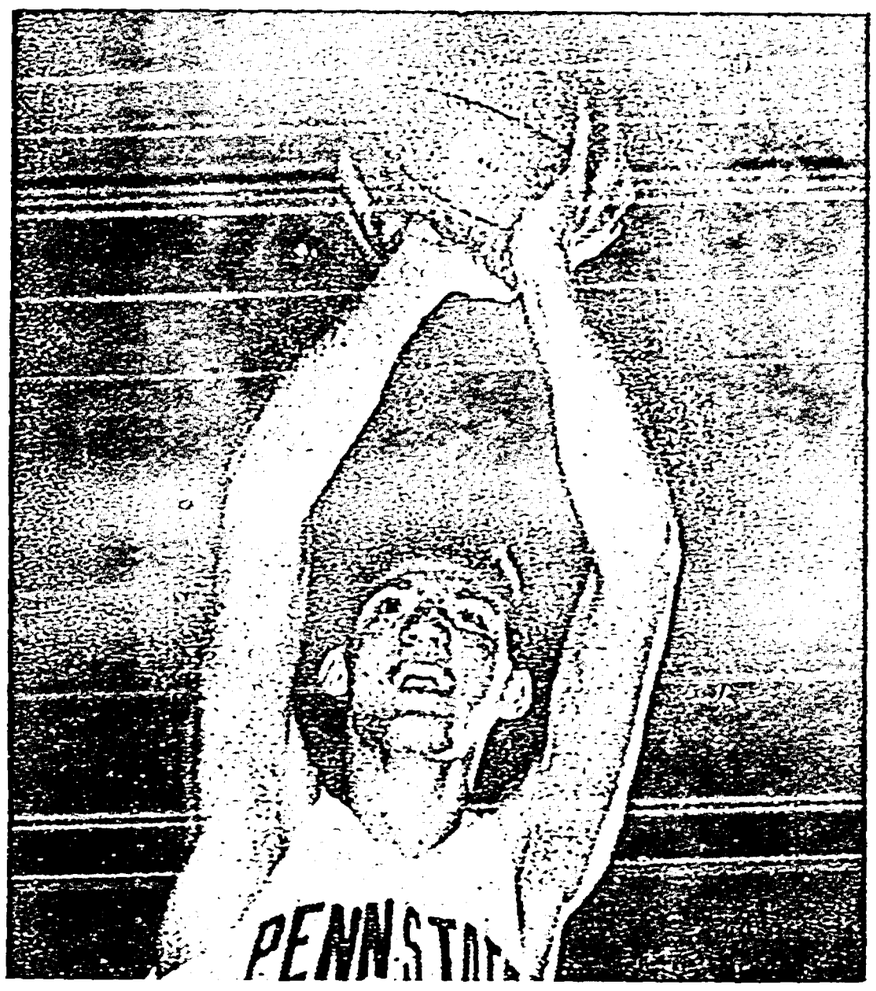
Judging from the first game effort, Syracuse merits its high ranking.

But the Orange almost always look good at home—especially against somewhat mediocre competition. Last year, Syracuse won its first two home games by a total of 77 points. Then SU played Penn State away and lost, 95-76.

Now, a year later, the situation is similar. Syracuse is much improved but PS has four of five starters returning from a squad which compiled a 16-7 log last season. The top returnee is Bob Weiss, a 6-1 guard who led the Lion scorers against Maryland with 24 points.

Weiss, along with Carver Clinton (6-4), Ron Avillion (6-5), and Ray Saunders (6-6) were big factors in State's home win and narrow 84-82 loss to Syracuse in Manley Field House last season. This year, with the improved play of 6-7 center Terry Hoover, they are capable of giving the Hill forces their first real test of the season.

Lewis plans to use the starting unit of Bing, Chuck Richards, Sam Penceal, Norm Goldsmith and Jim Boeheim Saturday.



RON AVILLION

Low and Inside

By BILL CRONAUER
Sports Editor

One could hardly help but be impressed. SU's mighty cagers had demolished American University by 60 points. The Orange frosh had routed Albany State's yearlings by 59. It was a night of joy at Manley.

Of course some fans weren't prepared to accept the lop-sided varsity victory as conclusive. "Wait till the Penn State game Saturday and we'll see just how good we really are," was a common reaction. Others peered cautiously ahead to the Southern swing into Kentucky and the Holiday Festival.

The Hill forces received some criticism for defensive laxities, but most followers realize that a team's defense inevitably slips somewhat when the club owns a big lead and substitutes freely.

For those in attendance Wednesday evening little doubt remained as to the potential of the Orangemen. Everything fit into place.

First, the shooting of the locals was fabulous. In the opening half, Syracuse connected on 62.2 per cent of its attempts, finishing with a very creditable 52 per cent for the night.

Second, the Hillmen worked extremely well as a team despite the fact that it was their first outing. Fifty-two of the Orange points came on easy layup shots, including a pair of dunks by 6-9 soph Val Reid. "We were running our offensive patterns to a tee," noted coach Fred Lewis, "and hitting the free man. I was pleased to see the fellows weren't looking for Dave Bing too much."

Third, SU revealed exceptional balance. Six Piety cagers hit for double figures, with no one getting over 20 points. Thirteen of the 14 players scored. Commented Lewis, "We had eight or nine men who seemed to carry on without a letdown." That is a key to basketball success — wearing down the opposition — and Wednesday Syracuse proved it had the vital bench strength.

Fourth, the Orange rookies passed their intial test with flying colors. Reid pumped in 14 points to demonstrate that he could score as well as rebound and defend. Rick Dean and Scott Loll each accounted for six points, Dean from underneath and Loll from the corners.

But the most pleasing aspect of the opener can be summarized in one word: spirit. Players praised each other. Players shook hands with each other. Players shouted encouragement from the bench. The players wanted to win. And they did.

Syracuse Matmen Compete In Coast Guard Tournament

By KEN RUDNICK

If Syracuse wrestling coach Ed Carlin isn't too enthusiastic about the upcoming appearance of the Orange in the Sugar Bowl New Year's Day, it's quite understandable.

New Orleans' gain—in the persons of SU football players Jim Nance, Gerry Everling, Joe Radivoy and Dennis Meggyesy—is Carlin's loss, for at least the first month of the wrestling season.

The Hill grapplers open their season tomorrow with an appearance in the Coast Guard Academy Invitational Wrestling Championship at New London, Conn., facing the absence of Nance for his entire senior season.

Last year Nance lost in the quarter-finals of the National Collegiate Athletic Association championships, suffering his first defeat after 77 consecutive victories in the unlimited class. He copped the NCAA title in his sophomore year.

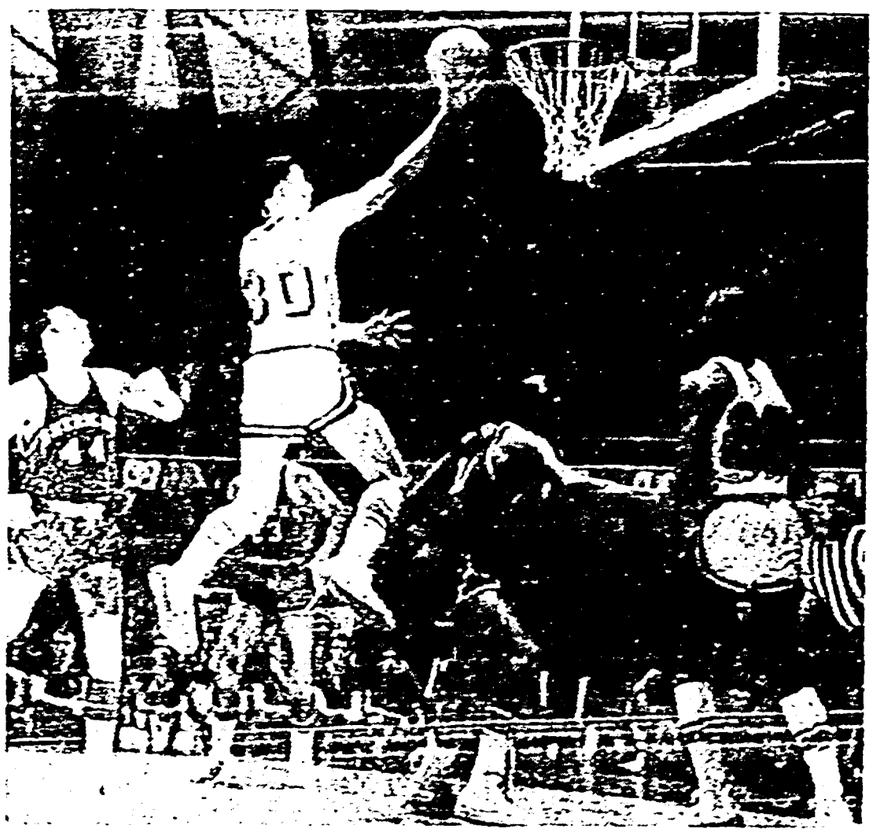
Big Jim's acceptance of an offer to play in the Senior Bowl in Mobile, Ala., Jan. 9 affected his decision not to wrestle this winter.

The status of Everling, who wrestled in the 191-pound class last year, and Radivoy and Meggyesy, both of whom wrestle unlimited, is uncertain.

The Orangemen finished second to Navy in the Coast Guard tournament of 1963, after winning it the previous year.

Competing for the Orange at New London tomorrow will be Kerin Raftery (123-pound class), David Agone (130), Paul Krapsi (137), Dick Debuhr (147), Kurt Kuppinger (157), Lew Roberts (167), Tom Schlendorf (177), and Tony Lina (unlimited). SU will not have an entry in the 191-pound class.

Sixteen teams will participate in the tourney, with defending champ Navy, Maryland and Springfield listed as favorites.



Driving Layup

Orangeman PHIL SCHOFF flies high for two points in Wednesday's 127-67 victory over American University. Defending for AU are BEN STILL (11) and BOB WENDT (44). At right is Hill's DAVE BING.

Library Site Decision Near

This article marks the first in a series by DO administration reporter Carol Rubright concerning university committees. These little known boards, manned by both administrators and students, represent a liaison between these two often-opposed factions. Today's story concerns the design board, which holds its first meeting of the semester on Friday.

By CAROL RUBRIGHT
Junior Editor

On Friday a small group of students, administrators and trustees will initiate a massive campus relocation program by making the final decision on the location of the new main library scheduled to be built next year.

The group is called the Design Committee of the Board of Trustees, and it is expected to choose the block bounded by College place, University place, Comstock and Euclid avenues as the site for the library.

Nicknamed the design board, this commitee plans the design and layout of the campus for years to come. It determines the where and what of buildings and their sites and makes recommendations to the chancellor on the development of the university.

No long-range plan is regarded as absolutely fixed, however. The proposals of the committee are used as guide lines and they "exercise a powerful influence on later decisions," according to the Spring 1964 Alumni News.

The job of the board is a complete one, since the designers must take into consideration what the city, the state and the highway department will be doing in the next 75 years.

For example, campus expansion will be limited by the federal urban renewal project to the north and the completion of interstate highway 81 through the city immediately west of the compus.

Plans for the physics building to be located directly in front of the Archbold Gymnasium, were begun in 1961. Since the original building plan did not comply

Flint Lobby Fight Yields Court Pro For SU Senior

A misunderstanding with a girl friend resulted in two months of court probation for a senior in the College of Liberal Arts. The incident leading to the decision took place in Flint lobby.

The boy involved told the Student Court that he pushed his girlfriend twice in an argument concerning Thanksgiving vacation. The girl fell to the floor on the second push when her heel caught in a rubber mat.

Two boys in the lobby ran over to the couple, he continued. The girl told them that everything was under control and asked the boys to leave.

When they did not leave, the girl's boyfriend hit one of them in the face, breaking his glasses.

Security police arrived and broke up the fight. The boyfriend apologized to the student he had hit and paid for the broken glasses.

Dean Piskor Evades Vacation Explanation

By DAVID SOSNA

Frank P. Piskor, vice president for academic affairs and dean of faculties, added his name Friday to the growing list of administrators and officials who deny any knowledge of the vacation situation.

In an interview with the Daily Orange, Piskor explained that he was not sure this vacation was shorter than past Christmas vacations, adding that he did not construct the university calendar alone.

As a vice president of the university, Piskor is entitled to sit on the Chancellor's cabinet, the organization which has final authority on the university's calendar. He is also chairman of the dean's council, the group which makes final suggestions on the calendar before it goes to the cabinet.

Piskor told the Daily Orange that he did not think this vacation was shorter than previous ones. He said he could not remember accurately the length of past vacations and did not care to comment on the length of this one.

He said he was not responsible for the addition of an extra day at the end of this vacation and did not remember who suggested the extension. He did say, however, he thought it came up in a cabinet meeting, pointing out that Eric H. Faigle, vice president and dean of the College of Liberal Arts, should be contacted because he announced the extension. Faigle was out of town Friday.

Piskor told the Daily Orange the reason for the extension was "to relieve the pressure of rushing back from the Sugar Bowl Game and prevent any unfortunate incidents." He said the extension was made in what he called "the best interests of the students and faculty."

When asked why the vacation could not begin earlier than Wednesday to relieve pressure on those students traveling long distances for the holidays (the example of a California resident returning home was given), Piskor replied, "how many Californians are involved? I think that some people are dissatisfied by any vacation."

By MARTIN COHN

Beginning of the year. Editor-in-chief and "all-high God" Kram calls you up. Tells you you're an editor of "The Sword," meeting at 8 p.m.

The "Sword of Damocles" staff told the Daily Orange Friday that it has been denied permission to sell the magazine on the campus. The magazine will be available for sale on Marshall street.

8 p.m. Kram's apartment and "Sword" office. The whole crew—half the campus underground. No typewriter, but three gallons of Raynor Burgundy—$2 a gallon. Imported from California. Kram tells everyone that the "Sword" is going satire—a new "great" magazine. Everyone laughs and drinks more wine.

One hour later: Only one gallon left. Lots of chuckling over the latest muck from the Administration Building. Auletta smiles for the first time, and Kram finally shouts, "Look you guys, we got to get a magazine written."

Everyone laughs. Schneider suggests we discuss business first. Great idea. Schneider assures us a $300 profit. Cohn suggsts putting a naked girl in a center fold, "And make so much dough that we can hire Hugh Hefner to run the bomb while we all abscond to Venezuela."

Gittleman wants to abscond to Guinea and join in the fertility rites. Ritey thinks Cohn's idea is obscene

Dorm 'Topped' To Mark Step In Completion

"Topping," a traditional builder's ceremony, was held Monday in Hendricks Field to mark completion of structural work on the new Syracuse University skyscraper living center.

Representatives of the architect, contractor, labor unions and university attended a brief flag-raising ceremony atop the building.

All of the men involved in every phase of the building's design and construction are from the Syracuse area.

Al Tarbell, foreman of the carpenters, and Joe Lasell, one of the constructors, were chosen to raise the 5 x 8 American flag to a height of 250 feet.

The dormitory will include a penthouse lounge which can be divided into three separate dining areas, 242 double room, 73 single rooms and 10 suites for eight resident advisors, a dormitory director and an assistant director.

The western exposure, 225 feet above ground, overlooks the city and countryside. The building is the tallest reinforced concrete building in the state outside of New York City.

How Mighty The 'Sword?'

Syracuse University's administrative hierarchy closed a record-breaking week Thursday and Friday by refusing to permit the "Sword of Damocles" to be sold on the campus.

In addition to presenting some illogical reasoning on lengthening vacation at the end of the break but refusing an extension at the beginning, the university put on a record run-around for members of the "Sword" staff who merely wanted the right to sell their magazine on the campus.

The disappointment in this latest line of administrative tragedies involves a one-time scandal magazine, now apparently a more-than-respectable satire medium.

We're told that satire is the highest form of humor, but apparently Syracuse University sees no need to lend its name to a magazine devoted to high quality on a level of literary satire, just as it supports a magazine aimed at similar critical literary excellence.

The "Sword" operates with a minimum of money, coming only from sales and advertising. In fact, the university has attempted to convince local merchants that it would be unadvisable to patronize the "Sword."

The attempted suppression of the "Sword" fits perfectly in the context of the constitution of the Board of Student Publications, the document proving that "freedom of the press" is a term to be used only in journalism courses.

This university has devoted itself to the development of a fine journalism school, yet it refuses to uphold the basic tenets of journalism as reflected in freedom of the press and freedom of expression.

A university is the one place where man's basic freedoms must be guaranteed. A bunch of courageous students have decided they would like to satirize on some facets of life. The university tells them they're free to do this — but not on campus.

It's the Linus Pauling story all over again: "Speak, but not here." It's nice to know how benevolent these souls feel towards us that we not be corrupted by the evil forces of satire.

Yes, this is Syracuse University — the only university in the world to think all its students are Jewish, so they don't have to be home in time for Christmas.

Dear Uncle Richie

By Rich Turner

People often ask me if people really write these letters. I'm offended by this question. You know darn well I make them all up.

Q. Dear Uncle Richie:

I am a student who is very worried about what has been happening on campus lately. The thing that especially worries me is the short vacation we are going to have. I am a very persuasive individual and I know I would be able to influence the "higher-ups" about a few things. I want to see the most powerful, important man around. Should I see the Chancellor?

Undecided

A. Yes, if you can't see Joe Davoli.

Q. Dear Unk:

I have been writing letters to the editor of the Daily Orange because I want to see more funny stuff on the editorial page. But they won't listen and I don't know what to do. I'm looking for something I can appreciate on my level. Can you help me?

Art Perschetz

A. Try comic books.

Q. Dear fellow Greek, Uncle Richie:

Our fraternity wanted to get well known on campus, so we dropped out of Student Senate. We accused Robby Stern of all sorts of things and prayed that they would use our name. Rush is coming up and people still don't know about us. What shall we do?

Theta Chi Fraternity

A. Excuse me, I didn't quite catch the name.

Q. Dear trustyworthy Uncle R.:

I am a dedicated fan of the Fugitive TV show. I watch it every week without fail. I have reason to believe that Richard Kimble is hiding in the Tep cellar. This is one place he will certainly get caught. Could you please warn him?

Anxious

A. Hey, Mike, check your neighbors and sneak him into your cab.

Q. Dear cool Uncle Richie:

I am a beautiful, intelligent, Flint Hall coed. I have everything: money, a Sting Ray and 40 credit cards. Boys go crazy over me. That is, all except one. I tell him how cool I am and put on lots of make-up. What's my problem?

Beautiful and Rich

A. You sound like someone most everybody would want, and, being shallow and obnoxious, you are the perfect girl for most Syracuse guys. Forget about this creep—he's probably looking for a human being. There are a lot of fish in the sea.

Q. Dear Sir:

I am high up in the administration and am very confused. I like clean-cut, all-American kids. WE at Syracuse are looking for the well-rounded man and something is going wrong. The students are starting to think and are participating in moral causes. This is dangerous. They are also getting intellectual. We may even have a little trouble getting them to dress right. What can I do?

An anonymous administrator

A. Don't panic, it's probably just a phase they're going through.

LETTERS

Vietnam

To the Editor:

I would like to comment on an editorial which appeared in your paper, issue of Nov. 16, under the title "The Other Wasteland."

In this paper, you have advocated that the U.S. should change its policy towards South Vietnam by adopting a strong offensive position in order to win the battle. I beg to differ with your position. It seems to me that the basic mistake the U.S. is making in this remote, jungle-ridden country is its adoption of force, be it military or other as an instrument of policy.

You just can't win an ideological war in an alien jungle land through a policy of coercion. The U.S. with its present policy will either have to eliminate the Vietcong Communists from the face of the earth or it will have to put up with an endless war.

Yes, I agree that the situation in Vietnam calls for a change of policy on the part of the U.S., but it seems to me that the change should be conducted through diplomacy. A policy of neutralizing Vietnam, or a tacit East-West agreement to a hands-off policy which lets Vietnamese iron out their differences may have some success. But, if the choice for the U.S. is to win by force or otherwise leave, I guess Uncle Sam might find it better to pack up his bags.

Suleman Saeed Hassan

Game

To the Editor:

I am furious by the remarks made by students in the Daily Orange extra in regards to the West Virginia victory over Syracuse Saturday, Nov. 21, 1964. I think it's about time students began to look at the team and not at the record. Sure, we had a heartbreaking loss against West Virginia, but did you see the kind of a game we played? McCune's passing was great but we came back and back and back. One play might have made the difference.

Winning games is very important, but there is one thing more important—the excitement a team generates. In that respect our team has never let us down. Sugar Bowl officials were able to realize that even more than the students themselves. We would never have gotten that bid if we had not deserved it. The team deserved it for a tremendous effort and some tremendous games.

And they will not let us down New Year's Day in any respect.

Dee Thompson '66

Vacation

To the Editor:

These are the times that administrations remain silent. It isn't very often.

This vacation must be justified somehow. Somehow?

No doubt their justification will be based on the extension of Christmas vacation by one day because of the Sugar Bowl. With this answer, few people will be satisfied.

Raising the price of prostitution does not make it the equivalent of love; nor does throwing the students a bone solve their problems.

The time is short!

The Sounds of Jazz

Subliminal Jazz

by Bill Newman

One of the major problems in jazz, for the layman, is the problem of "where to find it." Today, jazz is all around us in sundry forms but it is so well disguised that no one really knows that it is there. Two of the mass media use jazz in great abundance, movie and television. I am constantly amazed at the names that turn up when the credits for these films and shows are listed.

Jazz in the movies has had a long history. The film I WANT TO LIVE found Gerry Mulligan, Shelly Manne, Art Farmer, and friends on the screen for a good part of the picture. The score was written by Johnny Mandel, a jazz composer and arranger of the West Coast variety. Andre Previn, pianist, composer, arranger, won Academy Awards for his scoring of GIGI and PORGY and BESS.

Henry Mancini presents a rare success story in the annals of jazz. He began in television by doing the themes and scores for PETER GUNN and MR. LUCKY. He then moved into films and hit the Academy Award list with MOON RIVER, DAYS OF WINE AND ROSES and BREAKFAST AT TIFFANY'S. The albums from these scores include men like Phil Woods, Shelly Manne, Larry Bunker, Mel Lewis, and numerous other jazz veterans.

Peter Rugolo, a former Stan Kenton alumni, has gone much the same route as Mancini. Pete's first big success was the film MAN WITH THE GOLDEN ARM. This was followed by television scores like the RICHARD DIAMOND series. The list of shows he is now doing is too numerous to mention The "cool and easy" West Coast sound has been the mode of musical expression for countless television shows since the late fifties.

Popular music has not been untouched by the jazz influence. Garner's MISTY was a smash hit across the country and has found a place in the long list of standards now being played by all kinds of bands. Of more recent import has been the Bossa Nova craze led by jazz veteran Stan Getz.

Brazil's "MR. JAZZ SAMBA" Jobim, is the composer of ONE NOTE SAMBA, DESAFINADO, GIRL FROM IPANEMA, and others. Louis Armstrong's recording of HELLO DOLLY is still big on the juke box trail across the nation.

Broadway has not been without its jazz either. WEST SIDE STORY, was written in a jazz vocabulary and Sammy Davis Jr.'s new hit show GOLDEN BOY is full of jazz in its musical mode.

Brubeck's recording of Paul Desmond's TAKE FIVE is another example of jazz in the popular music field.

Enough name dropping: Too often the layman thinks of jazz as an esoteric music detached from the mainstream of American music. This is far from true. Jazz is the mainstream of American music. I agree fully with Pleasant's argument in his fine book, THE AGONY OF MODERN MUSIC. He points out that jazz is the only modern music being written today in America. Today we have our Brubeck while our ancestors had their Bach.

Little can be said to refute the argument that jazz is today to the popular taste, what classical music was centuries ago. The problem is that most people fail to recognize jazz in its many forms. I hope that I have sufficiently illustrated above that jazz is constantly present in our popular music varieties.

The popularity of jazz abroad is great. I feel that this is partly due to the fact that the people of other lands have a more total conception of what American jazz is than we do. For these people jazz, in hundreds of forms, is the predominant factor in the American musical scene. We should look at American music from a distance (if that is possible). If the American could become detached from American musical culture, he would see it for what it is—it is jazz.

The predominant phraseology, inflections, and rhythms of the American musical scene all are rooted in American jazz. Jazz in the popular media did not end with George Gershwin. He was only the beginning.

Sword of Damocles

What is this Thing?

By Richard Kram

The following is a column written by Richard Kram, editor and publisher of the off-campus magazine, "The Sword of Damocles." The first issue for the 1964-65 year will appear this week.

Many new students confronted with ads and announcements about the "Sword" are probably curious about what it is and how it came to be.

Three years ago, Terry Hughes, a journalism student, was editor of the "Syracuse 10", the campus literary magazine.

He and his staff of "angry young men" decided to use their publication not only as a forum for the campus "literati," but also as a media for airing controversial campus problems.

For example, when Noble Prize winner Linus Pauling was invited to Syracuse by some private organization to speak on the dangers of nuclear testing, he was denied use of Hendricks Chapel. However, he did come, finally speaking at the Upstate Medical Center (not a part of the University).

The "Syracuse 10" then published an inquiry into why Pauling was denied use of the chapel, written by Jeffrey Radford. At one point in this article, Radford stated that either Pauling was consciously denied the place, or it was a case of "administrative bungling."

University Vice President John F. Olson answered by having drawn up a $50,000.00 law suit against Radford for being labeled an administrative bungler.

Radford, a full scholarship student holding down several jobs simultaneously, had this threatened libel suit hanging over his head for a period of months. Finally, in desperation, he approached Olson and told him to either serve the papers or drop the charges. The charges were finally dropped.

For another issue of the "10," Hughes wrote an article on the SU Food Service. Indicative of his extensive research was sending of some food service hamburgers to a chemical analyst to be broken down into percentages of fat, gristle, ground bone, and meat (with interesting results, I might add.)

Feeling the need for a publication of constructive criticism, free from university control, Hughes solicited funds from faculty and students, and succeeded in launching the "Sword."

The name was chozen with special care. Dionysius the elder tyrant of ancient Syracuse, in attempting to illustrate to an envious courtier, Damocles, the precariousness of the tyrant's fortune, is said to have had him seated under a naked sword suspended by a single hair.

From the first, the administration has resented this dangling sword. One administrator took it upon himself to go from store-to-store on Marshall Street attempting to cancel the "Sword's" advertising.

The first "Sword" honed its blade on such issues as the inadequate infirmary situation and the inflated prices in the University Book Store.

The second issue, featuring the famous "Pregnancy Crisis," burst like a bomb-shell on the university. The New York World-Telegram and Sun picked up the story and ran it across two columns. A woman's magazine quoted the article in a survey on college sex, and more recently the piece was mentioned in the book Sex and the College Girl.

Last year the "Sword," under the editorship of Radford, attempted to expose the harm done to academics by big-time college athletics. Such articles as "The SU Pigskin Perversion" and the "Glory of the Gladiators" were featured as cover stories.

It is of interest to note that Radford learned of the "Sword's" being exported to Europe(probably by Semester-in-Italy students) and even across the Iron Curtain. It seems that the students who study on the side of the Iron curtain that God isn't on, were impressed with the magazine.

This year the "Sword" will try satire as a vehicle of expression. Though the format will probably be a great deal different from the first "Sword," its purpose will remain the same.

Freshman Weekend

'A Funny Thing Happened'...

By CAROL SCHNEIDER

More than one funny thing will happen when the freshmen from Syracuse present their class show, "A Funny Thing Happened . . ," at 3 p. m. Saturday in Crouse College auditorium as part of "Fructus," Freshman Weekend.

A cast of 35 frosh will sing, dance and act out seven scenes of the musical comedy, each satirizing part of first semester life at SU, according to Joanne Walker, show chairman.

Title song of the show is a take off on the major theme from "The Boys From Syracuse."

Keeping with the weekend's underlying Roman theme, the action will be seen through the eyes of a toga-clad man standing outside a public building in Syracuse, Greece. Pondering the possibility of a new lyceum, an upper division school, he falls asleep and envisions the future — Syracuse University.

Students will be reminded of their early freshman days as they see a recreation of the first parting scenes between parents and children.

Parodies take place in English class, FI (Fayetteville Inn), Sid's and the lounge of girls' dormitories representing adjustment to college academics, dating and TGIF-ing.

The entire show is one act, with the cast singing and dancing its way in and out of each episode. The finale will be a restaging of the first and title song and will lead straight into the slave trade that is to follow.

Dave Kelso, freshman, will narrate the fast moving take-off on college life which is patterned on the style of the Goon Show, Miss Walker said.

Members of the administration, staff and student body will be auctioned for the afternoon to the highest bidder at the slave trade. The "slaves" will be sold to individuals or houses, and will do small jobs or run errands for buyers.

Chancellor William P. Tolley, head residents and directors of dorms, the freshman and varsity cheerleaders and the SU Orange varsity football team, and Orange Girl Gail Fuchs are among those who have volunteered to serve as slaves for the class for the event.

Tickets for the show are available in the main lobby of Huntington B. Crouse Hall. Ticket price is 50 cents which admits the bearer to both the show and the slave trade.

with that for the proposed west quadrangle, the present site was chosen.

This site, however, will call for a revision in the road pattern, since it will obstruct the only road on the campus proper.

A new road system will call for a new main campus entrance and that in turn was the cause for the relocation of the Mt. Olympus main stairway.

This chain reaction represents only a few links in the vast chain of complications dealt with by the board.

The design board was partially desponsible for the "Syracuse plan" released last year by Chancellor William P. Tolley which envisions three quadrangles — one on either side of the present quad, and a campus extending to E. Genesee street.

Presently six architectural firms are at work with plans and designs for this project.

The committee itself includes a professional architect. He is Robert W. Cutler, who is chairman of the design board and an architect in the New York City firm of Skidmore, Owens & Merrill.

Students comprise two-ninths of the board's membership, with Student Government President Carl Corrallo and Vice President Nancy Perkins representing the student body.

Tolley, university vice president and Treasurer Francis A. Wingate, school of architecture Dean D. Kenneth Sargent and three trustees make up the remainder of the membership.

The board has been in existence in some form or another since 1910. Prior to 1953 no students served on the board. At that time the design board was written into the university by-laws which defined its functions as:

"To formulate and develop a university land-use plan. It shall study and review all building site proposals, plans for all buildings and landscaping; and make recommendations to the Chancellor upon matters of physical development of the university related to architectural and land planning."

Beauty Aide Visits Mount

David Morton, London-born make-up consultant and specialist in the art of being beautiful, will be at the "Top O' The Mount Shop" in Graham Hall from 11 a.m.-7 p.m. daily this week.

Morton will be giving advice regarding the natural look in make-up.

Morton's carer started when he did make up work for Moria Shearer for her performance at the London Theater.

by either the girl or the student who had been struck," according to Chief Justice Frank Richmond.

The court in no way condoned the assailant's actions, but it felt that the boyfriend had been provoked by the refusal of the students to leave, Richmond said.

Three other cases handled by the court involved the illegal use of university meal tickets.

The first case involved two girls, one of whom left early for vacation, allowing the other girl to use her meal ticket.

The third case involved a girl who gave her ticket to her brother, a non-university student, when he came to visit her. The three coeds were reprimanded and fined $2.50 each.

AIESEC Program Offered to Students

How would you like to spend next summer in Europe, and get paid for it?

You can if you join the Syracuse University chapter of the Association Internationale des Esudiants en Sciences Economiques et Commerciales, better known on campus as AIESEC.

The faculty advisor of AIESEC, Michael Thomas of the College of Business Administration said, "I believe that AIESEC presents an excellent opportunity for students to go to Europe under extremely fortunate circumstances."

The program is student run and it envolves exchanging jobs with European students. The jobs are usually eight-week training programs so that American students get to know the workings of a foreign company while foreign students learn in this country.

These are actual traineeship positions and the students receive a regular salary. During the last two years, SU students have worked for the largest supermakret chain in Sweden, an exporter in Israel, Shell Oil in Germany and in banks in England, France and other European countries.

In Europe the student is met by members of the European branch of AIESEC. This group helps find him a room and plan some travel and entertainment.

Ronald Kuzoan, president of Syracuse AIESEC, says, "It gives students a fine opportunity to see Europe, not as a tourist, but as a worker."

Syracuse AIESEC makes similar plans here. Students from England, France, Italy, Belgium and Norway worked in Syracuse last year.

This program is open to students interested in business or economics. If interested, call Thomas, ext. 2052 or Fred Seff, ext. 2648, for further information.

Lion Cagers Rock SU

By NEIL KERR

Syracuse's varsity cagers went down to their first defeat of the young basketball season Saturday night, losing 81 - 59 to Penn State.

The Orange trailed 37-31 at halftime but closed to within 52-50 on a Richards layup with 11:40 left to play. Then the Nittany Lions, led by co-captaon Bob Weiss, Carver Clinton and Ray Saunders, shot to a 67-56 lead and were never headed. Another scoring spree by Penn State increased the margin to 72-57.

Weiss netted eight points in the final 30 seconds to complete the rout. Penn State outscored SU 24-11 in the final 13 minutes of play.

"We just fell apart," said coach Fred Lewis later. There were about 3,000 people in a 2,000 seat place - the crowd was right up to the edge of the court and the temperature was about 95 degrees. When we went ahead (48-47) in the second half, they just started yelling and lost our poise completely."

"We went into a press and started fouling," he added."Of their last 22 points, about 15 of them were on foul shots."

"Our defense hurt us bad too. Unless our big men learn to play defense we're going to have a real long year."

"The first six or eight points we gave up...somebody jumped up and put in a tap-in with our guys standing right beside them.

"Dave had a very poor night. (He was five for 18 from the floor). He hurt his knee halfway through the second half but he'll be all right."

High point man for Syracuse was Rich Duffy with 14 points. Chuck Richards added 12 and Bing 11 as the SU log dipped to 1-1. Penn State is also 1-1 after an opening game loss to Maryland, 72-71.

Schlendorf Cops Wrestling Crown

By BOB KRENGEL

Ed Karlin, Orange wrestling coach, was one man who wasn't overjoyed when the SU gridders were invited to the Sugar Bowl.

Losing former NCAA champion Jim Nance, Gerry Everling, Joe Radivoy and Dennis Meggysey sent Karlin to the Coast Guard Invitational Wrestling Tournament at New London, Conn., with dreams of frustration ahead.

However, at the tourney, Karlin's crew of sophomores came through very well, bringing Syracuse a third place finish and an individual championship.

Sophomore Tom Schlendorf won the 177-pound class crown, when he toppled Navy's Gene Franzen by a 6-5 tally.

The only returning letterman, Orange matman Lew Roberts, failed in his attempt to take the 167-pound prize. He lost to Amando Soto of Maryland, 4-3, in the finals. Roberts had won the 177-pound title a year aga.

Schlendorf and Roberts were the only two Piety grapplers to survive through the elimination rounds and make is into the finals. Four Hillmen got to the semi-finals.

The Orange wrestlers were fifth in the tournament after the first day of competition, but then moved up to finish third. Navy won the meet for the second straight year with 75 points.

Maryland was second with 62, Syracuse next with 50, followed by East Stroudsburg and Springfield, tied for fourth at 46.

Low AND Inside

By BILL CRONAUER
Sports Editor

A few bits of Sugar:

LSU currently rates as a 6½-point pick over the Orangemen on New Year's Day, according to New Orleans' oddsmakers. Other prices: Alabama over Texas by 6; Michigan over Oregon State by 11; Arkansas over Nebraska by 7; 'Ole Miss over Tulsa by 13½; Georgia Tech over Texas Tech by 5, and Florida State over Oklahoma by 3.

* * *

The Bayou Bengals landed four players on the 22-man Southeastern All-Conference team. End Doug Moreau, tackle George Rice and center Rich Granier were selected on offense and linebacker Mike Vincent on defense.

* * *

Part of a letter from a Mississippi grid fan to New Orleans sports columnist Buddy DiLiberto: "Congratulations — LSU is playing Syracuse in the Sugar Bowl. That should be the mismatch of the year. LSU should win by three touchdowns. Syracuse should be playing Tulane, and I'd go with Tulane. You said Syracuse's Floyd Little is probably the best halfback in the country. How about Mississippi State's Marc Rhoden? He's only a sophomore, too. Well, I'll probably go to the Orange Bowl."

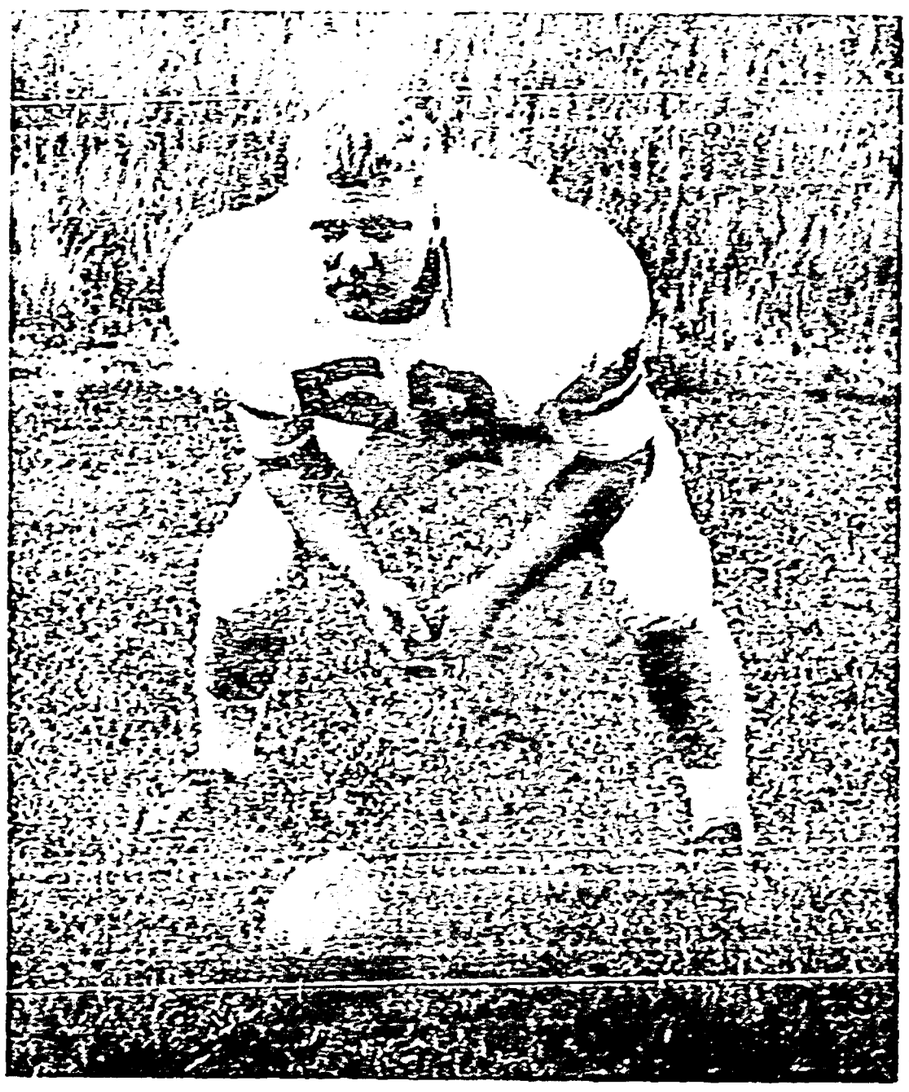
LSU allows 120 football scholarships, compared to 100 for Syracuse. With 116 Bengal players now on scholarships and only six seniors, there will be but 10 SU frosh scholarships for next season. A suggested solution: borrow a few from the basketball team!

* * *

Louisiana State ranks highly in several conference departments: 1st in pass defense, 2nd in total defense, 3rd in rushing defense, 3rd in total offense, 3rd in rushing offense and 5th in passing offense. But it isn't as bad as it may look at first glance. LSU's best phase is pass defense, which shouldn't bother us much anyhow. Also, their worst point is passing, which could save our necks.

Pat Killorin: All-American



PAT KILLORIN

By JIM KLURFELD

A few weeks ago Pat Killorin and a group of sportswriters sat in a Sadler Hall lounge and discussed possible All-America teams.

When the topic turned to centers, names such as Dick Butkus and Glen Ressler were mentioned, but no one figured Killorin would be included because he hadn't received and publicity and the others had.

"I'd be happy if I could just get All-East," Killorin said.

That was a few weeks ago, but today Killorin is a member of the Associated Press All-America team.

And to a lot of people it was a most deserving selection because Pat was Syracuse's most potent and consistent bloacker. Countless times he opened the holes for those famous Orange backs.

To the soft-spoken 225-pound junior, though, this all comes as quite a shock.

"I just found out about it Thursday night. I never even thought about getting it. I was just hoping for All-East and was satisified when I got it.

"But this, well, this is quite an honor."

When Pat talks about blocking you get the feeling you're quite lucky not to be opposite him in a game.

"When I first line up I try to figure out how I want to block my man, that is what is the I think the easiest block is on a linebacker because all you have to do is run out there and knock him down. Sometimes you can do that just with a forearm.

"But things aren't so simple when a man lines up head to head with you. You have no angle here and the only thing you can do is keep digging, keep those legs moving.

"The movies are a great help to you this way because you can study the man you will be against and see if he moves up or likes to submarine, or shoot the gap."

Pat has devised a little system of rating himself after a game. For each good block he gets a point, for an adequate block no points and when the man he was supposed to block makes the tackle, minus one point.

At Watertown, Pat played center, guard, tackle and linebacker (not all at the same time, but he probably could have). And when he graduated he never really had many doubts about where he wanted to go.

"I always wanted to play ball up here, it was a big challenge. And also Jim Ringo ('52 All-America) played here and he has been a hero to me."

Though it seems that offensive inemen are the least publicized men on a football team, Pat has no qualms.

"You learn to accept this. A lineman takes as much pride in a good block as a back in a touchdown and believe me your work shows up in the films."

And the man who judges those films, coach Ben Schwartzwalder, has nothing but raves for his center.

"Killorin is our best offensive lineman. In fact, this boy is one of the best I've coached. He reminds me a lot of Ringo in that he has that good speed and quickness off the line. I have no doubts that one day Pat will make it big with the pros."

HOOP FILMS

Orange basketball coach Fred Lewis will discuss the 1964-65 cage squad and present films of the SU-American University game at 9:30 p.m. Tuesday in Sadler Lounge. The affair is sponsored by the first and third floors in Sadler.

Yule Vacation Wrangling Continues

— Registrar —

By DAVID SOSNA

It is impossible for the Christmas vacation to begin any earlier than noon Dec. 22, according to Edwin D. Smith, registrar.

Smith told the Daily Orange Monday that to fulfill state educational requirements, the university must meet 2,225 clock-minutes every semester. This is approximately 15 weeks of 15 50-minute classes each week.

It is also necessary, he said, for all students receiving credit in a one credit course to attend a total of 15 50-minute classes in that course in one semester.

Smith then explained that students receiving credit for a three credit course are required to meet 45 times each semester. Here, he explained, is the problem.

Students taking classes that meet on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays meet

CORRALLO TO ADDRESS STUDENTS ON WAER

An extended Christmas vacation will be the topic of an address to the student body by Student Government President Carl Corrallo at 8 p.m. today on WAER (88.3 fm).

Corrallo said Monday he would discuss a poll taken in several living centers Sunday and the reasons behind the "sudden push by Student Government to get two and one-half more days for vacation."

The part the student body should play in this drive will be explained by Corrallo.

During the speech students will be invited to phone questions to ext. 2405 or 2406.

- Class Heads -

The presidents of both the freshman and sophomore classes have called upon the university to lengthen the Christmas vacation.

In statements to the Daily Orange, frosh President William (Todd) Wallens and '67 President John Pear asked for consideration of student problems in transportation and in helping students to enjoy the holiday safely.

Pear said:

" 'Christmas lasts longer when you give a Parker International,' so reads an advertisement in the Dec. 7 issue of the Daily Orange. This is rather ironic in light of the controversy now involving the closing date for Christmas vacation.

"It is not necessary to repeat the reasons for requesting that the vacation be extended since these reasons have been made clear. It is sufficient to say that the

SU SUSPENDS 4 COEDS

Failure to Report Travel Change Produces Disciplinary Actions

By ANDREW PORTE and SUSAN WEINBERG
Editor-in-Chief Managing Editor

Four Syracuse University coeds have been notified of their suspension by the dean of women's office for violation of the university rule concerning overnight permissions, the Daily Orange has learned.

The girls are currently on disciplinary probation, with the one semester suspensions due to begin at the end of the current semester.

The suspensions were upheld by a university disciplinary committee Monday despite efforts by six student officials to obtain a reduction in the punishments.

The suspensions were for falsification of information, stemming from the girls' failure to notify the university of a change in destination as listed on overnight sign-out cards.

The original decision on punishment came last week after Elynor J. Erickson, assistant dean of women, interviewed the four coeds. The decision was reached by a disciplinary committee consisting of Dean Erickson; Marjorie C. Smith, dean of women; Eric H. Faigle, vice president and dean of liberal arts; and Laurence Schmeckebier, dean of the School of Art.

The committee was the standard one used in disciplinary cases. Schmeckebier was a member because three of the women are in the art school. The fourth is in the College of Liberal Arts, represented by Faigle.

Corrallo, Stern, Richmond, Porte and Miss Perkins had met with Dean Erickson Friday after hearing of the story through the campus "grapevine." Dean Erickson confirmed the disciplinary actions and consented to meet with the students and the other administrators Monday.

The sign-out error for which the coeds were suspended occurred during the weekend of the West Virginia football game (Nov. 20-22), Daily Orange sources revealed.

Decision Hit By Students

Student leaders have issued statements showing strong disapproval of recent university action against four coeds.

The coeds have been placed on disciplinary probation for the rest of the semester and suspension for the second semester of the academic year for "misuse of overnight permissions."

"It is truly with great regret that I received the news of the outcome of the case involving the four women students and their falsification of records. It was hoped that in light of the extenuating circumstances of the case, reconsideration would result in a less harsh action. This was not the case.

"I strongly disagree with the action and feel a grave injustice has occurred. This was my expression at the joint administrative-student meeting held Monday.

"I feel here was a tremendous chance to show the students, as well as other facets in the university, that there is a real, significant part for student opinion to play at Syracuse. Tragically this was not shown in this case."

SUCE Sets Panel to Discuss Board of Pub Controversy

The recent and controversial Board of Student Publications constitution will be the topic of an open panel discussion at 7:30 p.m. today in Kittredge Auditorium, Huntington B. Crouse Hall.

The panel is sponsored by the Syracuse University Committee on Equality.

Members of the panel will be Dean of Men Jim G. Carleton who is also a member of the Board of Publications; David Bennett, associate professor of citizenship and American studies in the Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs; Andrew Porte, editor of the Daily Orange and Ken Auletta, graduate student in the Maxwell School and a columnist of the Daily Orange.

Other panel members are Carl Corrallo, president of Student Government and a member of the board and Kathleen Kapsol, president of Eta Pi Upsilon, senior women's honorary and also a member of the board.

This program is the second in a series of lectures that is being offered by SUCE dealing with the general topic of "Man and Commitment."

Case Reviewed: Decision Holds

The following is the official statement issued by a university disciplinary board Monday concerning discipline and dismissal of four Syracuse University coeds.

A meeting to review the case was held Monday upon request of student leaders.

The board is composed of Dean of Women Marjorie C. Smith, Assistant Dean of Women Elynor J. Erickson, Assistant to the Dean of the School of Art Charles R. Dibble and Vice President and Dean of the College of Liberal Arts Eric H. Faigle.

The statement reads:

"In answer to the questions of interested students, a meeting was held this (Monday) morning to review the case of four women students who have been disciplined for misuse of overnight permissions.

"They had been placed on disciplinary probation for the remainder of this semester with the privilege of claiming all credits earned during the fall semester. They may not register in February, but will be eligible to apply for readmission at the end of the second semester of 1964-65.

"Every detail of the incident was reviewed carefully. It was the decision of the committee that the original decision should remain.

"We commend the interest of the student leaders in behalf of any student on our campus and appreciate that these leaders felt it important that we review the case."

Student Officials Hit Suspensions

view of their decision to suspend four coeds. I can only be extremely disillusioned with the results of this review which finalizes their decision.

"It is my opinion and the unanimous decision of the 12 justices on Student Court that "precedent" should not be a binding factor when making a disciplinary decision and that "intent" should be considered of the utmost importance.

"We feel that if this policy was followed then the four girls involved would not have been suspended and therefore we must conclude that the decision is unfair and a tremendous injustice to the girls involved.

"The girls had no reason to lie. They had standing permission to travel without specific parental permission, but they changed their plans and were admittedly negligent. There is however a large difference between neglect and malicious intent. There was no malicious intent here.

"We do not suspend students who put the wrong date on their exam book but they have given "false information"," also. There are degrees of all violations and this is a violation of the most minor degree, certainly not punishable by suspension."

Frank Richmond
SC Chief Justice

"Syracuse University apparently does not lose enough good students through failure at academic stimulation. It must also resort to outmoded precedents to dismiss those making oversights better punished through a good talking-to and probation rather than suspension.

"We have lost four fellow students, who left Syracuse with every intention of arriving at the University of Connecticut. On the way, they changed their mind and altered their destination. Their only crime was neglecting to report this change.

"This is certainly a punishable crime, but suspension will help no one — least of all the girls or the university.

"These girls are not being held responsible for breaking dates, causing commotion or any actions of theirs at West Virginia. Their only charge is that nebulous one of falsifying information to the university.

"The university has lost four good citizens, of whom one was a dean's list student. The girls have lost the opportunity to obtain a well-deserved four years of continuous education at Syracuse University. And our respect for the university keeps dropping and dropping."

Andrew Porte
DO Editor-in-Chief

"A decision was issued from the dean of women's office Monday which is unfortunately comparable to the insidious doctrines emanating from our administration in the four years of my presence at Syracuse University.

"The injustice of the decision as it affects four girls who in any context of the word must be considered good citizens is both overwhelming and despicable. Four young ladies who at most were negligent are forcefully being disassociated from an institution whose best interests they have propagated actively.

The space usually given to editorials and columns today has been given to statements by six student officials commenting on suspensions made recently by the dean of women's office. The regular editorial page format will appear Wednesday.

"How one can justify the greatest of all penalties the university can impose for a simple act of omission, I find hard to reconcile. In the course of the dialogue which took place between those administrators involved in the decision and those students whom the dean of women's office so kindly commended, we found a commitment by these administrators to precedent rather than justice.

"I am of the opinion that it is the university's role to help students. However, I found in my conversations that the implications of their comments were far from that goal.

"I plan to raise this question before the Student Senate Thursday evening with the hope that its members will see the unfairness of this decision and will act as their conscience tells them they must."

Robert Stern
SS Speaker

"The final statement of the disciplinary board that they will uphold their previous decision to suspend the four girls is a great disappointment to those of us who spoke before the board. How could such a decision be made by sincerely believing that they were acting in the best interests of the girls involved?

"Supension, the most severe penalty for violation of university rules, is rarely in the best interest of the SU student. Infraction of the rules governing overnight permission may result in suspension from the university.

"Why the girls were automatically suspended in this case, which was clearly one of the negligence, not of deliberate intent to falsify information, was never satisfactorily explained to us. It seems that proving that the rules are not to broken is more important than the welfare of the student.

"The problem lies in the administrators being too far removed from students and of having eyes too old to see them as individuals deserving to be treated as such."

Nancy Perkins
SG Vice President

"When the university recently suspended four upperclass coeds, they handed out an injustice which can neither be overlooked nor taken lightly by anyone who might be in a position to effect such a decision.

"The four coeds were given the most severe university punishment—suspension—for actions that reflect only negligence on their part. I attack only the severity of the punishment in light of the girls' academic records, extracurricular activities and most important, lack of intent to falsify university records.

"Such an extenuating set of circumstances seem to indicate that this case was not deserving of suspension. Punishment is necessary, but I cannot accept suspension as the answer to the wrongdoings of these students.

"It seems that the university failed to place an emphasis on a central issue in this case—the intentions of the students. Instead they followed precedent!

"If the university is to add backbone to an outspoken policy of acting in the interest of its students, it appears to me that those administrators who render such a decision must make more than mediocre effort to substantiate their claim.

"In this situation they cannot go halfway, for the end result—suspension—is only a contradiction of any benevolent gestures of action on behalf of those coeds (delaying their suspension until spring semester 1965) if the university is to gain the respect of the student body.

"They must seize certain opportunities to show how flexible and understanding they are. After such a decision, one begins to wonder when they will begin.

University Chorus to Give Handel's 'Messiah' at Crouse

Snowflakes, Salvation Army bells, and Handel's "Messiah" --all this can mean only one thing--the Christmas Season is officially here.

Heading the list of Christmas heralds this year will be the University Chorus under the direction of Frank Hakanson, when they present Handel's classic oratorio, "The Messiah" at 8:30 p.m. today in Crouse Hall.

In order to make this year's presentation truly a student effort, Hakanson has chosen the soloists directly from the chorus membership. They include: Ellen Slingerland and Maryl Walker, sopranos; Susan Shaw, alto; Jay Allen, tenor; and William Black, baritone.

Miss Slingerland, a 1964 graduate of Syracuse University, is studying here for a master's degree in voice. She is a member of Pi Kappa Lambda, national musicians' honorary. Both she and Miss Shaw, a senior in music education, are members of Sigma Alpha Iota, the women's professional fraternity.

Miss Walker is a senior majoring in voice. Allen is a graduate assistant in the religion department and Black, a member of Phi Mu Alpha, men's professional fraternity, is a junior in music education.

According to a statement by Hakanson, "Handel's original instrumentation (rather than the more popular version by Mozart-Prout) will be used by the orchestra, and the selection of choruses and solos will include several of the rarely done alternate versions given in the Coopersmith edition."

Today's concert will conclude three months of rehearsal by the chorus which is composed of students, faculty, staff and citizens of the communnty.

"Anyone interested in singing the best of choral literature has traditionally been invited to membership since University Chorus began its career in 1877." Hakanson said.

The presentation has been included in the schedule of the Crouse Concert Series.

Civic Company Holds Tryouts

Tryouts for the next Civic Company production, "Enter Laughing," will be held on Sunday and Tuesday, Dec. 13 and 15, according to Joseph Lotito, who will direct the play.

The Sunday session will be at the Syracuse University drama department offices, 623 E. Genesee, at 2 p.m., while the Tuesday tryouts will be at the Regent Theatre at 8 p.m.

Th play, by Carl Reiner, will be presented at the Regent Theatre on Jan. 28, 29, 30 and Feb. 4, 5 and 6. Any interested person is eligible to try out for the play.

Robert Goldsand Concert At Lincoln Auditorium

Internationally known pianist, Robert Goldsand, will be heard at 8:30 p.m. tomorrow at Lincoln Auditorium, as the third concert in the Civic Morning Musical 75th anniversary season.

Since his childhood debut at the age of 10 in Vienna, Goldsand has divided his concert seasons between America and Europe. He was first heard in the United States when he was 16 and was immediately heralded as a ranking performer. The pianist has since become an American citizen and has established his home in the country near New York City.

After an absence from concerts abroad for some seasons, Goldsand resumed his tours in Europe in the 1950's and on his first post-war tour made his first return concert in London. In addition to his return to European centers where he was remembered from earlier years, he extended his territory abroad with eminent success into the Scandinavian countries and Spain.

Recently, Goldsand presented in New York, a series of three recitals devoted to "Creators of Piano Music" in which he performed works by thirty composers, from Mozart, Haydyn and Cimarosa to the moderns Bartok, and Prokofieff. During the years between 1950-60, he included, in his American season, a similar historical cycle at Miami University in Oxford, Ohio as a part of the University's sesquicentennial celebration. Goldsand had earlier received the honorary degre of Doctor of Letters from Miami U, one of the only four musicians to be so honored.

Goldsand's program for Syracuse will include: Mozart's "Sonata in D major, K. 576, Chopin's "Twelve Etudes," Prokofieff's "Sonata, Op. 28, No. 3," Ravel's "Sonatine" and "Jeux d' Eau" and Strauss-Godowsky's "Fledermaus."

In a review of Goldsand's recent LP release "Keyboard Masterpieces of Three Centuries," "High Fidelity" magazine said of him: "Goldsand's artistic make-up is one of paradoxes. One can always be reasonably sure that, whether for better or worse, his reading of a given work is going to be different from everyone else's. Disagree or not, one must admire his creative vitality and technical freedom."

Tickets for the concert are available at Lincoln Auditorium for $3.75, $3.50, $3.

Presidents Want Longer Recess

objections to the relatively late closing date are well-founded and deserving of consideration.

"The most disturbing thing about the situation is the refusal of the administration to discuss the problem. To deny knowledge of this situation is both absurd and unfair. It must be realized that Christmas is more than Dec. 25. It is a time for enjoying the spirit of good will that prevails although the lack of it on our campus is painfully apparent.

"Yes, Christmas does last longer when we are given the opportunity to enjoy it, and we have every right to expect this opportunity until we are provided with an explanation to the contrary."

John Pear
President, Class of 1967

Wallens noted:

"On Thursday, Dec. 3, a bill was unanimously passed by both the Freshman Class House of Representatives and the Freshman Executive Council which directed me, as spokesman for the Class of 1968, to draft this letter of protest concerning the present schedule for the Christmas Vacation.

"It has been brought to my attention that a great majority of the eastern universities are releasing students from classes no later than Friday, Dec. 18.

"The reason for this is obvious. Many students, having families who reside in areas which are far distant from their school, need this time in order to be able to arrive home for the holidays.

"It certainly can not be assumed that all students at Syracuse University live in New York State. It certainly can not be assumed that all students at Syracuse University can afford the cost of air travel.

"A tremendous hardship is being placed on many members of our school. They definitely will not be able to drive home in the mere 24 hours which the administration has allotted them before Christmas Eve. May I ask why?

"It has also been brought to my attention that the administration has lengthened our vacation from Jan. 4 to Jan. 5 so that students may have the opportunity to attend the Sugar Bowl Game in New Orleans and 'return safely back to school.' "This means that we need three days to travel 'safely back to school' and only twenty - four hours to travel 'safely' home. I question this proportion.

"Where are our standards? Can it be true that Syracuse University is more concerned with a football game than it is with a religious holiday? I am certain that this is not the case.

"I respectfully request that further consideration be given this most serious problem. It is not too late to correct this mistake. The Class of 1968 would like to bring this to your attention and ask for its immediate remedy."

William Todd Wallens
President, Class of 1968

Sunday Poll Wasn't Official

Neither the administration nor Student Government authorized a poll which was conducted in many university living centers Sunday night. The poll was conducted in order to determine how many students are planning to leave the university before vacation officially starts.

Students were led to believe that if 85 per cent of the student body were absent, the administration would extend the vacation to begin on Friday Dec. 18.

In attempts to determine the source requesting such a poll, the Daily Orange contacted numerous resident advisors and living center presidents. Several said they had been contacted by anonymous callers. Others, some having heard rumors that such a poll was to take place, conducted them of their own volition. Some living centers had heard no reports of the poll.

DellPlain Dormitory Council is taking a poll at 11 p.m. today and plans to give these results to the Student Senate.

Booth Council Circulates Petition

the Christmas vacation be extended so that it will begin at 5 p.m. Friday, Dec. 18.

The petition which is being circulated in Booth Hall, asks for the change of date on the grounds that residents of the dormitory will lose Christmas jobs, will not be able to arrive home in time for Christmas, will make it impossible for some students to shop for the holidays, will limit the amount of time the resident may spend with his family and will make a waste of the classroom time if the date of Dec. 23 is retained as the last day of classes before recess.

The council asked that any students on the campus agreeing with the council's petition write to James Magee, president of the dormitory council, at Box 46, Booth Hall. The Booth Hall petitions and those mailed in will be presented to the Student Senate for presentation to the administration.

Magee also asked that the senate give its "wholehearted support to the petition" at its meeting at 7:15 p.m. Thursday in Maxwell Auditorium.

in the morning. With the present vacation schedule including the extra day at the end, there is room to add an extra one day of vacation at the beginning and still meet state requirements.

However, the registrar said, classes must meet the morning of Tuesday, Dec. 22 or else those students will have missed one session, will not have fulfilled state requirements and will not be able to receive credit for the course.

Thus it does not look possible for the university to adjourn on Dec. 18, as some students had hoped, and it seems improbable that classes will be called off as early as Dec. 22, he said.

Smith told the Daily Orange that for him to prepare "efficiently" for an earlier adjournment, he would have to be notified of any calendar change by Friday.

Such a change could only come from the Chancellor's cabinet, which meets on Monday. It is possible for the Chancellor to call a special session of the cabinet, but he is out of town and his office does not expect him to return until Friday.

A university official reported that the Chancellor has no time for such a meeting on Friday and has never called such a special session before.

Coeds Suspended for Improper Sign-out standing overnight permissions, signed-out for the University of Connecticut where they had dates for the weekend, but decided to drive to the game instead about one half hour after they left Syracuse in a car they rented. They were accompanied by three boys who were good friends of theirs.

They did not notify the university of their change in plans.

According to sources, the coeds notified their dates by phone that they were not coming because the car had "a flat tire." They spoke to two of them and left a message for another. The fourth coed had planned to surprise her boyfriend, so he did not know she was coming.

The group arrived at West Virginia early Saturday morning. The coeds were admitted to the game with West Virginia identification cards. They stayed illegally in a women's dormitory that night and left for Syracuse early Sunday morning.

Meanwhile, Daily Orange sources reported, the boy at Connecticut who was left a message misunderstood it. He thought the girls would be delayed but would arrive later Friday night.

He called the coeds' SU living center about midnight, sources said, and then again Saturday morning, to find out where they were. The girls in the living center did not know of the changed plans and became worried.

They contacted the New York State police in the afternoon and a statewide alert was sent out, sources said. One of fathers of the boys at U Conn contacted the Connecticut state police which sent out a similar alert.

The girls in the dorm contacted their dorm director about 5:30 p.m., sources added. They waited until about 9 p.m. to see if the coeds could be located and then contacted Assistant Dean of Women Elynor J. Erickson.

Parents of the four were informed the girls were missing by Dean Erickson at about 3:30 a.m., sources said.

The coeds were unaware that all this commotion was going on.

On their way back to school they called one of their parents to tell him they would be stopping there for lunch since it was en route to Syracuse, sources continued. The parent told them how alarmed everybody was, and the coeds immediately called their head resident and told her where they were and when they would be back.

The coeds were called before Dean Erickson as a group and individually Monday and Tuesday, Nov. 23 and 24, sources said. They were put on disciplinary probation for the rest of the semester and were told they would be notified as to possible suspension after Thankgiving vacation.

Sources revealed the girls were told they would be closely watched for the remaining seven weeks of the semester.

That Monday night Dean Erickson called a meeting of the girls in the living center who were responsible for calling the police and stirring up alarm.

She berated the girls for panicking and calling the police of their own volition, sources said. She also expressed surprise that they had not been angry with the missing coeds for causing so much trouble and worry.

Last Monday and Tuesday the coeds were informed individually that they had been suspended for one semester. Dean Erickson told them they would be furnished with letters of reference which would help them obtain a job or attend another school, sources said.

The girls were told they could apply for readmission for the fall 1965 semester. They were also told that the administration expected them to take their suspension "graciously" sources said.

Dean Erickson said there was no way for them to appeal the decision to the disciplinary board that approved the decision, sources added.

The parents of the girls were extremely upset at the "harsh action" taken, sources said, and felt the punishment was

One parent was reported to much too severe for the crime, have written a letter in protest to the dean of women.

When the girls were informed of their punishment, they also were told there was no question of morals involved, sources said. Neither was the commotion in the dormitory taken into account, sources said.

None of the coeds had ever been in any kind of trouble before. One was a dean's list student while two others were officers of their living center and a third had been a member of Goon Squad.

In a letter written to the disciplinary committee, the student officials stated, in part:

"A key factor in consideration of any punishment must be the intent with which the violation was committed. In this case, we believe the students involved showed no malice of forethought, and that this should have been considered in determination of the penalty. Moreover, it should be understood that the students involved had no cause to purposely give false information to the university.

"We are aware, of course, of the importance of precedent within any large administrative body. Precedents, however, are vulnerable, and as you are well aware, many instances which have been "precedents" are now things of the past.

"We feel each case should be weighed on its own merits. The four girls in question have never shown themselves to be anything but good citizens, and their academic records have been quite satisfactory."

After meeting with the student officials Monday, the disciplinary group met alone to review the case, later issuing its decision to let the original decision remain.

Saturday was a night of frustration, as the Penn State Lions devoured SU's supposedly powerful Orangemen, 81-59, at University Park.

BING

But the Hill forces suffered far more than hurt feelings and a stinging defeat. For Syracuse ace Dave Bing injured his knee fighting for a rebound and, as a result, may miss the Cornell contest Wednesday.

"Dave hasn't been able to practice yet," groaned coach Fred Lewis. "We'll know more about his condition today." Bing hobbled through the final 10 minutes of Saturday's game.

Now back to the team. Just what happened?

"We threw the ball away too much," explained Lewis. "We were hurt by four questionable three-second violations. . .it seemed they always came when we had a one-point advantage.

"Then we've got to work on our defense. It fell apart. And our rebounding has to be improved."

The site of the game also had its effect. Said Lewis, "We were playing in an overcrowded, temporary gym. There were 3,000 people sitting right up to the edge of the court. They let out a tremendous roar, which gave State a big home court advantage."

The temporary facilities, minus a scoreboard and clock, turned the affair into a "guessing game," according to Lewis. "Coaching is based on the clock. It got so noisy we couldn't hear the officials or get their attention to learn the time left."

Typical of the evening's frustration was an incident occurring with less than a minute to play. As Bing dribbled up court, a horn sounded and Dave tossed the ball away, thinking it was the end of the game. However, the noise came from the stands. A Penn State player retrieved the ball and went in for the layup, being fouled besides.

Still, Lewis managed praise for 6-9 soph Val Reid ("he played a real good game"), Penn State ("they'll win a lot of ball games this year"), and his offense ("I was satisfied with it").

But there's lots of praise left if the Orange should win Wednesday night. And a lot less if they should lose.

GRID TRANSFER

Meet John McGuire

By HOWIE SCHNEIDER
Junior Editor

Last winter a 6-6, 215-pounder walked into Ben Schwartzwalder's office and announced, "I'm John McGuire." The coach just looked up and said, "Who?"

Syracuse football fans are still trying to find out: "Who is John McGuire.?"

Well, for the record, he's a Syracuse University junior who hasn't played intercollegiate football for the past two years.

Two weeks ago he was the fifth draft choice of the Baltimore Colts.

"I played my first two years of college ball at the University of Colorado. My sophomore year was hit by a large recruiting scandal. Coaches left and players left. I got fed up—we had three coaching staffs in one year and they were all bad."

McGuire forgot to mention that as a sophomore end he broke Boyd Dowler's pass catching record at Colorado and led the Big Eight in that department. Not bad on a team that was 2-8.

"After Colorado I decided to go into the service. I just wanted to stay out a year and think things over. I had every intention of returning to Colorado."

Taking the advice of Sid Luckman, however, McGuire spoke to Dean John S Hafer about the possibility of coming to Syracuse. "It wasn't a sell-job. Dean Hafer told me about the school and I liked what I heard. I'm grateful to be here."

"I came to Syracuse because I wanted to play for a winner. You know it's funny, but I've never played on a winning team. When I was at Loyola Academy in Chicago our record was 9-1—nine losses and one victory.

My sophomore year at Colorado wasn't much better. I remember one game against Nebraska. Nebraska was on the rebound and had a real good squad. We were "up" for the game and led at halftime, 6-0. Unfortunately they outplayed us the second half. We lost 56-6."

After attending Loyola Academy, where he was All-Chicago, John went to the Bullis School in Silver Springs, Md. "My father was an alumnus of Notre Dame and it was understood that I would go there also. But Frank Leahy, then the coach, told me that if I didn't go to Notre Dame I should go to Colorado."

Another Notre Dame loss was an SU gain.

"I remember my first day at Syracuse . . .wow. I came up through the 15th Ward and right then I knew this would be different from the mountains of Colorado.

"This is the first time I've lived in a dorm. I've always lived in an apartment. Most of the guys on the floor think I'm crazy, but I enjoy it more. I feel like I'm part of the school."

As for Syracuse football, McGuire made no attempt to hide his admiration.

"I played in the Big Eight, which was a pretty tough league but this Syracuse team is the hardest hitting team I've ever seen.

"Naturally, as an end I enjoy a passing game. But after watching Little and Bo Nance run I can see where there's beauty in a running game."

"I'm not discouraged over the fact that Syracuse is known as a running school. I'm sure they'll be passing more next year. I just want to help the team the best way I can."

According to NCAA rules John was ineligible to play for the Orangemen this year but he has one year of eligibility left and he's already preparing for it.

"I practice with the team and I really enjoy it. Coach Schwartzwalder is the finest coach I've seen.

"The players also have a lot on the ball. They're not animals and believe me I've seen animals. I'm confident they'll beat LSU."

"Even the greenies are one hell of a bunch of guys. These guys know that they won't see much action, yet they really put out. I love football and I feel good when I see other guys who love it."

John also readily comes to the defense of the boys he plays against each day.

"I don't know why everyone knocks our defensive secondary. Individually, players, like King, Brown and Holman, really have talent.

I'll tell you I really get excited running pass patterns against these guys. It's like a personal war. I try to catch 'em, they try to stop me. It's a friendly and healthy rivalry.

"The backs and end coach Joe Szombathy have taught me a lot. I think I'm much improved since I left Colorado."

John McGuire states without hesitation that he loves football and that it is number one in his life.

"After I was drafted I was so excited I lost five pounds. I'm really anxious to prove myself. I also want to prove myself at Syracuse.

"It's good to be associated with a winning team. Next year I want to help Syracuse win."

By NEIL KERR

One day last May varsity basketball coach Fred Lewis placed a phone call to Poplarville, Mississippi. As a result of this call, Syracuse gained a new freshman coach—Roy Danforth.

After completing a sports-centered career at Summitville (Ind.) High School in 1954, Danforth entered the Army the following winter. While stationed in Germany, he played guard for his 11th Airborne Division team and earned a position on the SACOM (Southern Area Command) All-Star team.

Danforth was discharged from the Army in 1958 and enrolled at the University of Southern Mississippi. At Southern, Roy became one of the school's best basketball players, earning a varsity letter during each of his four years.

In his sophomore and junior years, he led his team—coached by Lewis—to a record of 46 wins and just five losses. The latter year USM was ranked no. 2 nationally in the small college class.

After graduation Danforth stayed on at Southern as an assistant coach during the '62-'63 season.

Then, last year, he accepted an offer to coach at Pearl River Junior College in Poplarville, Miss. After his team finished second at the junior college state championships, Danforth received the offer from Lewis.

Danforth came to Syracuse with his wife and two children last June and began teaching in summer school. This past fall he took up his duties as freshman basketball coach and continued teaching physical education courses.

As for the season's outlook, Roy said, "This Wednesday we'll have a better idea of what we've got. Those Cornell frosh are good. Our better players? Well, George Hicker is the best shooter. I'd say Dick Cornwall is the best all-around ballplayer."

GEORGE HICKER: is a former Franklinville Central School player who sports impressive credentials. He scored 1,544 points in four seasons including 627 as a senior when he led the Panthers to a 21-0 record and a second straight Section 6 championship.

At Franklinville, George (6-3) helped his team compile a 35-game winning streak by averaging 32 points per game his second year and 23 a contest as a junior. Area coches consider him the finest player in Cattaraugus County history.

HIS BIGGEST THRILL: "Scoring 50 points against Portville."

HIS BEST GAME: "The night I got 51 against Arcade. That was my best game." That night George, a guard, hit on 23 of 27 shots from all over the court.

After being contacted by over 50 major schools, Hicker narrowed the choice to Syracuse and St. Bonaventuer.

Why Syracuse?

"The engineering school is good, that's one reason. Bing had a lot to do with it too. He and coach Lewis both impressed me when I talked with them."

DICK CORNWALL: is a talented guard from Neshaminy High in Penndel, Pa. During his high school career Dick (5-1), led Neshaminy to a 53-19 record and one league championship. In the process he earned all-county as well as all-state honors and was scouted by at least 30 colleges. Dick is a liberal arts major at Syracuse and would like to be a coach after college.

Of his team, Cornwall said, "We've got a real good club. The only thing that hurts us is our lack of height. Any team we face that's big—like Cornell and Niagara—will be tough."

Corrallo Requests Student Polls; Vacation Extension Still Possible

Alternative: Shorter SU Intersession

By DAVID SOSNA

A possibility still exists that the Hill could adjourn for Christmas vacation as early as noon Saturday, Dec. 19.

Registrar Edwin D. Smith, clarifying his statements of Monday, explained to the Daily Orange Tuesday that the university could close on Saturday and still meet state requirements.

Smith's statements confirmed the feasibility of a Daily Orange proposal made earlier Tuesday to Smith and Kenneth G. Bartlett, university vice president for public affairs. The proposal is explained in an editorial to the right of this article.

Smith said such a move would require additional class days later in the semester, and said it was possible to start final examinations Tuesday, Jan. 19, instead of the presently scheduled Saturday, Jan. 16.

Final decision on any change in vacation schedule must come from the Chancellor's cabinet, consisting of Chancellor William P. Tolley and all university vice presidents. Smith's job is to carry out the decision of the committee.

(See Alternative, page 7)

Editorial

A Christmas Present For Syracuse?

The saga of the vacation that should be longer will reach a peak in plot at Thursday's meeting of the Student Senate, if students conscientiously react to Carl Corrallo's radio speech Tuesday.

The reasons for a longer vacation need not be restated. We must also keep in mind, however, state requirements for the university as to number of class hours.

However, if cancelling classes on Dec. 21-23, is ruled out of the question due to failure to meet the stated requirements, the Daily Orange has an alternate proposal.

The primary purpose of this university, often well concealed, is education. The university also has an obligation to its students. If state laws permit dismissal on Dec. 18 without any rescheduling of classes, we propose prompt announcement of a vacation extension.

If the state laws do not permit it, we suggest extending classes for as many days as necessary after the scheduled completion of the semester in order to meet stated requirements.

We propose that classes be recessed at 5 p.m. Friday, Dec. 18, resuming Tuesday, Jan. 5. If further class sessions are needed to meet state requirements, we propose that Saturday, Jan. 16 and Monday, Jan. 18, originally scheduled for final examinations, instead be used as class days.

Final examinations would then begin on Tuesday, Jan. 19, ending Friday, Jan. 29, leaving a normal weekend between the completion of exams and the beginning of registration on Monday, Feb. 1.

Since most students do not have exams on the last day or two, this would mean a three- or four-day weekend for them with no addition of classes in the second semester.

We can think of no better Christmas present.

SG Prexy Urges Student Interest

By JESSE SMITH

President Carl Corrallo asked all living centers Tuesday night to poll their members in connection with Student Government's campaign to expand Christmas vacation.

CARL CORRALLO

Corrallo has asked the university to call off two and a half days of classes now scheduled, starting the recess Saturday, Dec. 19, instead of Wednesday afternoon, Dec. 23.

Speaking on the campus radio station, WAER, Corrallo asked students to vote in their dormitories, cottages, fraternities and sororities to show how they feel about this demand.

He asked that the votes, with names of those voting if possible, be brought to Student Senate Thursday night.

"If by Thursday night we don't have a statement, then I

Frosh Weekend Features Dance, The Tradewinds

By CAROL SCHNEIDER

Caesar's Ball, featuring the Tradewinds will wind up the activities of "Fructus," Freshman Weekend at 9 p.m. Saturday in Graham Hall.

crowning of the freshman queen, Venus, will take place at the dance. Five finalists will today at the Women's Building.

Admission to the dance is $2 per couple. Tickets may be purchased in the lobby of Huntington B. Crouse Hall.

"In the spirit of 'Fructus,' the Latin term of happiness, joy and good times, Syracuse University students will sway to the well-known melodies of the Tradewinds," said weekend co-chairman, Peter Jeffer, Tuesday.

The five Tradewinds are Syracuse University students. They are Howard Wyeth, Kent DeFelice, Mason Andrews, Robert Knapp and Paul Dickler.

Two freshmen have been asked to perform with the group for the Saturday engagement. Larry Jamison and Phillip Hopkins will add their trumpet and saxophone to the Tradewinds' organ, drums, bass and guitar.

"Rock and roll is our speciality, but we also play jazz and mood music," said Wyeth. The group, which is in its third year, has performed on campus and at nearby college campuses.

The freshman class is offering a $100 Masterwork stereo unit as the door prize at the concert at 8:30 p.m. Friday in the Women's Building. Tickets

Campus Opinion Agrees Suspension Too Harsh

By LOIS WINEBAUM

Suspension of four Syracuse University coeds for failing to report a change in destination evoked student opnions ranging from a conditional "completely justified" to a vehement "absolutely outrageous" Tuesday.

The majority of the students interviewed expressed agreement with the statement by Frank Richmond, chief justice of Student Court, which appeared in Tuesday's Daily Orange.

"There are degrees of all violations and this is a violation of the most minor degree, certainly not punishable by suspension," Richmond said.

Acquaintances of the four girls involved expressed disbelief that such a severe penalty should be issued by the university.

"They should have called so that their parents wouldn't worry, but they did have a right to go," one of the girls said. "They should have had a much lighter punishment. They could of had their late twelves cut."

"They have blanket permission and should be covered no matter where they go," said Nancy Tate ('66). "They are responsible for their actions as their parents have entrusted them with the right to sign out without their permission.

"The fault lies in the fact that they should have called the university and changed their destination. I feel that suspension is too severe a punishment," she added.

When asked if he felt that the decision was justified, Robert Dorne ('65) said, "Absolutely no. They are being persecuted because of human frailties. There was no intentional slighting of rules."

A freshman, Rochelle Seidz, said, "It was not as if they has signed out for Connecticut, intending to go to West Virginia all along."

'From the Town Crying'

The following was originally written as a letter to the editor. With permission of the writer, it is printed here. Its point is obvious, and we hope well-taken. — EDITOR.

The French town of Pas de Raison had the most excellent and benevolent inhabitants and administrators. Any rules which the administrators made for the governing of the town were most always based on hundreds of years of established precedent and thus were most always fair rules.

Now a town such as this, with such outstanding character, can not go long without gaining some sort of acclaim or congratulation. Therefore my purpose in telling you the following short incident is so that you, too, may observe the wisdom with which this town carried on its daily affairs.

In the orphanage of this fair city were four young children who were distinguished from the rest by their excellent record in school and by their record of excellent behavior. These children, by virtue of their good records, were allowed to go anywhere in the town, whenever they wanted, merely by signing a slip of paper telling their housemother where they were going.

On a particularly nice day the children, after signing out, started for the playground, where they were to meet some friends. But as they went along they passed a theater, and because they

DISSATISFIED? CALL THE DO

As the planned short Christmas vacation may put considerable hardships on many students, the Daily Orange is attempting to compile stories of students who feel their inconvenience to be greater than the general student body.

Any student feeling he or she will be so inconvenienced if vacation is not lengthened is asked to call the Daily Orange at ext. 3471 between 1:30 p.m. and 5 p.m. today.

Parallels In Berkeley

Free speech at the University of California is traveling much the same path as freedom of the press at Syracuse University.

Unfortunately, and we find it a trifle hard to believe, the California institution, personified by Dr. Clark Kerr, has acted with less grace and thought than our university.

The demonstrations and arrests at the Berkeley campus are the direct result of student groups being denied the right to solicit funds and membership on campus for political purposes.

This is paralled by the clause in the Board of Student Publications constitution here calling for removal of an editor or staff member for publishing contrary to the "best interests of the university," although such articles may well be the truth, or, at worst, fair comment.

We think it would be indeed difficult for Dr. Kerr, Gov. Pat Brown or the FBI to prove that the California demonstrations were organized and led by Communist sympathizers, as has been alleged.

Apparently Dr. Kerr and Gov. Brown feel there is something innately wrong in protesting to recover lost rights. The university has the right to deny the right of the students to speak their minds, we are led to believe.

The Free Speech Movement at California has received treatment little different from the "Sword of Damocles" here. Both are denied public expression of views.

Fortunately, Syracuse University has not seen fit to take disciplinary action against students involved with the "Sword", or any other publication.

The students at Berkeley and the students at Syracuse share common interests. Freedoms are fine — as long as they are just words on classroom blackboards.

No Help

Some semmingly industrious individuals took it upon themselves to conduct a telephone poll Sunday concerning vacation. In the process, they used the name of Student Government, Student Senate and the Daily Orange.

In fact, the callers represented none of the three groups.

Another individual Tuesday phoned a local radio station, saying picketing sponsored by the Student Senate would take place later that day.

This caller, too, had nothing to do with the organization..

The individuals in question probably have no idea how much embarassment they have done to individuals involved in student government. They probably realize even less the harm they have done to the causes working for a vacation extension.

The only authorized poll is the one requested by Carl Corrallo Tuesday night over WAER. Let's keep it that way.

O Say Can You See

Requiem

By Ken Auletta

At the risk of a certain sadism, and with apology to the four young ladies suspended by their university for the serious crime of changing their minds and causing worry, let us suppose that these four girls were seriously injured and hospitalized in West Virginia.

Naturally, since a crime had been committed, the vice president, two deans, one assistant dean, and the faculty member of the disciplinary committee, met in emergency session. With little imagination, the transcript of the complete proceedings follow:

Elynor: "Damn kids! If they'd gone to Connecticut like we shouldn't have allowed them to instead of West Virginia, they would have had no accident, and thus no injuries, and thus there would have been no need for this meeting. It stands to reason, doesn't it?

Marge: "Let's try and keep this complicated situation in perspective. What's done is done. The fact is—and please, let us not lose sight of it—that these girls have broken a university rule."

Eric: "Yes, Marge dear, but these ladies are no longer studying with us, and if we treat them too severely then we should treat our athletes the same, for we wouldn't want a double standard. This case is more complicated than I thought."

Marge: "Certainly Eric, but a rule is involved here. And you know only too well from your experiences as a teacher and dean just how important it is to maintain set rules. Why, this campus would be in a state of complete anarchy if the students didn't know what we were going to say before we said it. Wouldn't it?"

John: "That's a sincerely good question, Marge. We've got a problem here and I say that the only sure way, the only effecient way, the only right way, to handle it is to rely on the rule book. The simple fact is, and we all know it, a university rule has been violated."

Elynor: "Right!"

Marge: "Well said."

Charles: "As a member of the faculty, I am somewhat new to the procedures of this committee, but I must say that I am not a little impressed with your sincere concern for objective rules. A university rule is like a scholarly footnote: something not to be breached by individual thoughts. It truly warms me to know that we leave the students in good hands."

John: "Now that we have uniformity, I think that we should move on to the even more complicated problem of punishment."

Elynor: "We must set an example. I say let's sincerely suspend them from school for two years and have their hospital doctors remind them, weekly, of their crime."

Eric: "We could give the doctors free football tickets in exchange. . ."

Marge: "Now really. Can we sustain no sincere compassion for these incapacitated young girls? Let's be reasonable. One year!"

John: "We've got to be careful that we don't corrupt justice with mercy. We can't just break with the university's traditions. Why, it would be chaos, sheer chaos. Like . . .why it would be like if we all ran around picketing or something."

Elynor: "Heh, heh, very good John."

Charles: "Yes."

John: "Why, thank you."

Marge: "Pardon my saying so, but I sincerely think that perhaps I think that you're perhaps sincerely acting just a little bit on the young and silly side?"

Eric: "I agree."

Marge: "Thank you. Now I say let's suspend them for just one full year. This action would stamp it on the minds of our girls that it is important that we know exactly where they go. This way we will be protected. And we need not forget compassion, for I think it would broaden our sincerely good relations with our students if we could demonstrate that we are sincerely concerned for the welfare of these girls by seeing if we couldn't aid them in finding a job, or help enroll them for a year in another institution.

Charles: "Splendid."

Marge: "Thank you, professor."

Eric: "And what do we tell the student leaders who have been inquiring about the case?"

Marge: "That we have sent get-well cards to each of the four girls, and that we sincerely hope that student leaders and students will always feel free to raise questions if something disturbs them. Oh, and wish them a Merry Christmas."

All Together: "It will be done."

And they slowly shuffled, closely behind one another, out of the room.

Across the street, on Mars, there glared a sign:

"Search all the public parks and you'll never find a monument to a committee."

Music Review

Syracuse Symphony

by Martin Cohn

Saturday night's concert by the Syracuse Symphony was a "home-talent" night; all the soloists were drawn from the orchestra itself. And because we do have quite a lot of talent here in Syracuse, the concert was a true success.

First on the program was J. S. Bach's suite No. 2 for solo flute and strings. John Oberbrunner was the soloist, playing his part as well as I have ever heard it done. His technique was equal to the difficulties in the music and he never permitted his tone to become shrill.

Maestro Kritz had the orchestra playing with verve and precision. The music, some of Bach's most beautiful, was alive, and the stylish played harpsichord continuo added a nice touch of authenticity. I could discuss tempos, but the general authority and direc— tion of the performance precludes such quibbling.

Mozart's "Sinfonia Concertante" for oboe, clarinet, bassoon, french horn, and orchestra, featured (corresponding to the above instruments) Philip MacArthur, Gerald Zampino, Anthony DeAngelis, and Eugene Coghill. They were wonderful. I have often commented on the excellent wind playing of the symphony, but this is the first time, I have had the chance to ear them without the protection of te rest of the orchestra.

The soloists must be congratulated for their initiative in performing such a difficult work. Not only did they play with a beautiful tone, but they were also perfectly balanced between themselves.

The orchestra played well. Mozartian style was not alien to them, yet thanks to Maestro Kritz they lacked nothing in virility. Indeed. Kritz was the first conductor I have ever heard to make the orchestra chorus refrain after each variation in the last movement sound convincing.

As might be surmised from the above paragraph, I think our biggest local talent is Kritz, himself. Actually, I will go further and say that the man is one of the world's great Beethoven conductors. I had suspicions of this in the past, but it took Beethoven's "Seventh Symphony," which ended the program, to prove it to me.

In spite of the fact that the orchestra was not equal to Kritz' demands, the performance was magnificent. Every detail was perfectly worked out, and nothing was episodic. The symphony moved inevitably from start to finish. And as good as the first three movements were, the last was even better. It had the great Toscanini virtue of organizing a movement around one basic tempo, and proportioning everything else to a perfect fit.

Ceramic National: Worth Seeing

By CHARLES BARNEY

Like a family reunion, the 23rd Ceramic National organized by the Everson Museum of Art, brings together items of all kinds.

Entries — from the United States and Canada — include some that are useful, some decorative, some humorous, some abstract. As a whole, the exhibition provides an excellent survery of today's ceramic art.

"The size and scope of this present 23rd Ceramic National Exhibition became apparent immediately after work started to pour into the Syracuse Regional Center," said Max W. Sullivan, director of the Everson Museum.

"Not only was there a tremendous increase in the number of artists submitting, but almost to a man there was an increase in the scale of the work submitted," he added.

Sullivan called attention to the fact that emphasis does not seem to be on the small wheel thrown pot but on the medium to large size hand built piece.

A few entries include copper enameled items and pieces of handmade glassware. Stoneware includes many bowls, bottles, wall plaques and other such work.

However, typical of other-than-ordinary ceramic work is "Stoneware Totem" by Fred Keller, Jr. of Bethlehem, Pa. Nine feet tall, the totem is made from strips of rolled clay arranged lace-like in totem pole shape. Lighted internally, the totem represents, at least, a good deal of work.

Better suited to the average home are Nancy C. Zevbottles, "Napoleon" and "Josephine." Turquoise enamel on brown clay, the bottle stoppers humorously caracature the faces of Napoleon and Josephine.

Both useful and beautiful are three stoneware wine chalices by Wanda Rozynska, Montreal, Canada. Unadorned, the chalices achieve beauty through a lapis lazuli enamel.

An abstract wall plaque, "Siren's Song," by M. Jane Oshir of Lakewood, Colorado, stirs the observer's emotions with a sensuous stream of red flowing through a field of white purity and ordinary brown.

"Genesis," by Edis Ekhardt of Cleveland Heights, Ohio, uses laminated glass lighted from behind. Brilliant red and green light gives a static impression of the revolving light atop a Seeburg nickelodeon.

The wide variety of material illustrates that ceramics and allied arts can not only be—as is usual—a utilitarian mode, but they can be an esthetically pleasing one. The final expression may be humorous or serious but the work is more than just useful.

"Audience" by Dorothy Riester, Cazenovia, consists of eight men sitting on a row looking out at the observer. Each man assumes a different position and satirically mirrors the visitors to the gallery.

A copper enamel wall plaque, "The Lovers," by Manka Madeksza of Boston pictures two people with only their heads—joined in a kiss—distinguishable. The rest of their bodies flows together in cool blue and green.

The Everson Museum organizes the Ceramic National every two years. It was founded in 1932 as a memorial to Adelaide Alsop Robineau, Syracuse ceramist of international reputation.

Well worth seeing, this year's display will be on exhibition at Everson through January 2. Thereafter, it will be loaned to ten American art centers including the Atlanta Art Association and the Museum of Contemporary Crafts in New York City.

The exhibition is sponsored by the Carrier Foundation and the Syracuse China Corporation.

Senate Invites Public Testimony

Student Senate's special committee investigating the actions of Speaker Robert (Robby) Stern will hold an open meeting from noon to 1 p.m. today in the Student Government office Marion basement, for all persons who wish to testify about the speaker.

The committee has been meeting daily since it was organized at last Thursday's Senate meeting. So far the committee has called in ten persons for questioning. Among those were Stern; Marshall Saierson, Senate speaker pro tem; Kathy Kapsol, special assistant to the Speaker; Donald Marshall Senate parliamentarian; Ilene Weinstein, Senate clerk.

Also, Andrew Porte, Daily Orange editor-in-chief; Vivian Shulman, senator who proposed the boycott of the VPI game; Taunya Lovell, Senate Books South committee chairman; and Seth Stopek, senate representative.

Today's meeting is for any person who has not been called by the committee but who would like to offer testimony, Steven Berlin, committee chairman, said Tuesday.

The committee will present its recommendations at the Senate meeting Thursday night.

Coed Makes Recording

A Syracuse University coed has made a record for Musicore, the company that handles rock-and-roll singer Gene Pitney and country-singer George Jones.

Audrey Freeman, a junior at the College of Business Administration, said Thursday to the Daily Orange that the record is the first she's made for a company.

"I've been performing for a little while," Miss Freeman said, "but this is the first big break I've had."

Miss Freeman will be one of the artists appearing at the Freshman Weekend "Fructus" concert at 8:30 p.m. Friday in the Women's Building.

One side of the record, "Looking for Me," was written by Miss Freeman. The other side "Three Rooms," was written by Jimmy Radcliff, who has composed for the Drifters, a rhythm and-blues group.

"'I just really started writing music," Miss Freeman said. "but I've got a few more songs composed."

Miss Freeman's break in the music business was a result of a song she wrote.

"I made a dub (a privately-made record) of a song I wrote and sent it to a publishing company. Later some people from Musicore heard the record and approached me to record for their company."

The record is a rhythm-and-blues song.

"Rhythm-and-blues is a mixture between rock-and-roll and jazz," Miss Freeman said, "but you have to sing a little better than rock-and-roll."

The record is doing farily well, Miss Freeman said. "It hasn't been released in the Syracuse record stores yet," she said, "but where it has been released it's selling okay."

Syracuse radio stations WOLF and WNDR are playing the record.

Miss Freeman plans to perform at clubs and dances around the area after Christmas vacation, but as far as staying in the music business permanently, "It's between music and accounting—whichever is more lucrative."

Academic Serum

Orientation Gets Shot in the Arm

This is the second of a series by DO administration reporter Carol Rubright concerning university committees. These little known boards, named by both administrators and students, represent a liason between these often-opposed factions. Today's story concerns the orientation week committee, which meets regularly throughout the year and the Parent's Weekend Committee.

By CAROL RUBRIGHT
Junior Editor

Syracuse University's image received a shot in the arm of a new serum called "academics" this September when the freshmen orientation program was revamped by nurse Margaret P. Stafford and a crew of her orderlies.

Mrs. Stafford, director of social activities, is chairman of the university orientation week committee.

Her "orderlies" include 21 representatives from the administration, faculty and student body.

The 1964 orientation program emphasized academics instead of social activities in an attempt to introduce frosh to the studious side of Syracuse.

"People have said that orientation was just one big social party," Mrs. Stafford told the Daily Orange. "We made tremendous strides toward an emphasis on academics this year."

This stress on academics was shown by rescheduling Chancellor William P. Tolley's address from the middle of the week to the first night of orientation, leaving social events until the final weekend of orientation and arranging the schedule of convocations and tests to comply with the usual class-day program.

And, rather to the surprise of the committee, the freshmen showed "tremendous interest" in the extra academic programs such as a "How to Study" lecture and discussion sessions on three political books frosh had been asked to read.

The orientation week committee has been in effect for at least 20 years. It includes five students (Traditions Commission president and vice president, president of Student Government, Association of Women Students president and AWS guide chairman) and 16 administrators and faculty members.

The committee has already begun to plan for next fall's orientation week. It meets about once every three weeks now and every two weeks starting March 1.

According to Frank (Turk) Rose, Traditions Commission president, the orientation week committee "trys to approach the impossible—create something perfect."

Another university committee with a similar aim of displaying the academic side of SU is the Parents Weekend committee which will start planning for next fall's program in January.

This 10-year-old committee has a ratio of 10 students to about 16 administrators, with representation from all aspects of campus life from security police to food service, and from mum sales to the goon show.

Student chairman this year was Paula Wilkins, working under Kenneth G. Bartlett, university vice president and dean of public affairs.

According to Miss Wilkins, the function of this committee is to "stimulate interest for parents and show them the academic side and the lighter side of campus life."

"Anyone who has anything to say comes to our meetings," she said. "The committee accepts suggestions and aid from all interested parties."

"We show them the academic side with the School for Parents," she said, "and the social side with the football game."

Miss Wilkins emphasized that Parents Weekend is not aimed only at the parents of freshmen and transfer students but at parents of all university students.

Membership on the committee is earned by application to the present student chairman. Next year's chairmen are Amy Telpin and Kenneth Wurtenberger.

Administrative members include Marjorie C. Smith, dean of women; Mrs. Stafford, ohn S. Hafer, dean of personnel administration, Jim G. Carleton, dean of men: Keith J. Kennedy, director of publications; Ross Moriarty, assistant director of food service; Robert D. Flaherty, director of security police; Dr. Alan Best of the Parent's Fund; and Eva Haddix of Office of Information Services.

SU Buys '29 Club' As Headquarters In New York City

A seven-story building formerly occupied by the "29 Club" will be the new Syracuse University New York City metropolitan headquarters.

Chancellor William P. Tolley announced that the property, located at 11 E. 61st St., was purchased through the efforts of Joseph I. Lubin, a trustee of the university and the senior member of Eisner and Lubin, certified public accountants, 529 Fifth Ave.

The brick and tile structure has a large marble entrance hall and marble staircases. The second and third floors, which previously contained the dining room, library and guest lounge rooms, will be used for meetings, art, exhibitions and receptions.

The four upper floors will be used for offices, seminars and committee rooms. The building also includes complete kitchen facilities and two elevators. The purchase included furniture and equipment.

The university expects to establish its headquarters in the new location Feb. 1, 1965. At present it occupies office space in the Biltmore Hotel.

The "29 Club," a private businessmen's club, has moved to the Ritz Carlton Hotel.

Tolley said that Lubin, one of the nation's leading accountants, recommended the purchase of the property and made the major contribution to the cost.

Lubin also contributed Lubin Hall to the College of Business Administration at Syracuse.

A graduate of the New York University Law School and Pace College, Lubin received an honorary degree of doctor of law from Syracuse in 1952 and an honorary degree of doctor of commercial science from Pace College.

He serves as a member of the board of trustees of Pace College, Albert Einstein College of Medicine, Syracuse University and several other educational and charitable organizations.

had not yet seen the show which was playing there, decided to stop in. Before they did this they sent a messenger to the playground to tell their friends there that they they were not going to join them after all.

This is where the problem began, my friends, for those friends at the playground misunderstood the message, and when after a while the four children did not arrive they began to worry. They called the orphanage and the orphanage called the town mayor and the mayor notified his deputy, who in turn notified the police; and as you can see, quite an affair had developed, all becuase of the carelessness of young children.

I should admit, before I proceed any further with this tale, that in this town, unlike others, senility was respected and was most often found, naturally, in mature adults. But please excuse this digression. To continue. . .

Now when these children severely reprimanded. But my friends, a crime such as this deserves more strict discipline. All the administrators were called together to decide on a fair punishment. The decision was made and was of course characteristically just and fair.

"We shall cut off their legs," said the Mayor to his deputies and sub-deputies, "and in that way they shall never again disgrace our fair town with their careless ways."

The decision was most just and apt, and all the just administrators and benevolent townspeople were in agreement.

think we should consider further action," Corrallo said during a question period following his speech.

Asked about a mass rally of students, Corrallo said he has no plans at present for holding one. "I expect some kind of settlement in the next one or two days," he said.

Corrallo implied that such a rally or demonstration might be called if administrative policy does not change soon. Corrallo is known to be considering more drastic forms of pressure than students have used so far.

On the air, Corrallo, charged the administration with inconsistency. "If the "inflexible" policy can be changed for a bowl game, it can be changed for the sake of 8000 Syracuse University students," he ssaid.

"Close to 300 students live in a state distant enough that travel home in the time alloted is impossible unless they fly. In other words, unless each of these 300 students can afford a flight home, he or she will not reach home in time for Christmas Eve. I wonder if anywhere near 300 students will attend the Sugar Bowl," Corrallo continued.

"Many students supplement their income through Christmas employment. Thanks to the scheduled Christmas vacation, this course of action is not open to the Syracuse student. What Christmas work is available on the day before Christmas?" he added.

"Now where can you come in?" he asked. "I need your help. I need your expression of opinion on the problem. Last Sunday, feeling ran so high that a poll was initiated apart from any Student Government or administrative source. The concern was so great that for the first time in my four years and God knows how long, spontaneous discussion and votes were held."

He added, "The handful of us that has been working on this has done all they can do alone. Help us to help you."

Alternative . . .

He said this would remove any extra class day recess in intercession. According to the present calendar, the recess is scheduled for three class days.

A Saturday, Dec. 19 Christmas adjournment would have finals ending Friday, Jan. 29, leaving only Saturday and Sunday for intercession.

The additional days would be needed because a Saturday noon adjournment would give the university 44½ Monday-Wednesday-Friday sessions and 44 Tuesday-Thursday-Saturday classes. The state requires 45 sessions for full credit in a three-hour course.

Smith also explained that this vacation is a comparatively short one because Christmas and New Year's Day fall on Fridays, complicated by the fact 1964 is a leap year. He said a Friday Christmas makes the vacation shorter because students are deprived of a weekend.

Campus Opinion

"I think its ridiculous," said Allan Hoffman ('66).

Edward Ochs ('67) said, "I don't think it was valid because the rules are archaic anyway. It's sad that this is the way a revision might be ignited. They're unfortunate martyrs.

The only opinion expressed in agreement with the decision was that of Robert Finkel ('65). "I don't think we know enough facts," he said.

"It seems to me that the university has to uphold the rule of law equally to all peo of innocence," which is a matter of moral judgment, not lawful decision," Finkel said.

In general, the students seemed to agree with Roberta Kahn ('66) who said, "I think it's outrageous. The coeds involved were wrong in failing to notify the university but their innocent neglect hardly merits such severe punishment."

Bartels Optimistic On City In Wake of 1 Man, 1 Vote

By EDWARD KARLIN

City planning and aesthetic values should work hand in hand, but "a planned city is not particularly beautiful."

"Beauty in the city requires order and harmony," noted Associate Prof. Robert J. Bartels, of the School of Architecture, in a citizenship lecture Tuesday.

Bartels spoke on the dual topic "Can Cities be planned and Can Cities Be Beautified?"

Planning and execution can be two vastly different operations. Communities would have benefited if plans were carried out more closely, Bartels said.

Baretls listed city planners as slums, highway, beauty traffic, lack of recreation areas and zoning.

Extensive planning has not already been carried out in the "metropolitan urban complex because private enterprise often gets in the way of new programs.

Barrets said the vast number of independent municipalities also hamper a unified program. To Europeans, Bartels noted, "these governments seem like anarchy."

Bartels was optimistic about the future of America's cities. He said America, under superior leadership, with sufficient resources and with competition from suburbia will develop into a place to be proud of.

Perhaps the most important reason for optimism is the recent Supreme Court decisions that have given cities more power in state government.

Bartels said state legislature will take a more sympathetic view of city problems now.

He warned that "race segregation is the biggest problem in building better planning."

Harrison, Weller Urge Hill Officials To Extend Recess

The following are statements from Roger Harrison and William Weller, senior and junior class presidents, calling upon the university to extend the Christmas vacation.

William (Todd) Wallens and John Pear, freshman and sophomore class presidents, issued similar calls for an early vacation in Tuesday's Daily Orange.

Harrison said:

"I cannot reconcile how a university can extend the vacation to accomodate a limited number of Syracuse students returning from a bowl game and then disregard the overwhelming majority of students that are so inconvenienced by having to travel home for the Yuletide vacation just a mere day and a half before Christmas.

It seems that such action fails to give emphasis to the proper segment of students. This situation does not have to prevail for both groups can be satisfied.

"On behalf of all seniors, I have asked certain administrators to give serious consideration to our reasons for extending the vacation. In as much as our argument has already been clearly expressed, to restate it now would only be redundant.

"What needs to be questioned is not our rationale for extending vacation but the university's failure to explain why they originally scheduled vacation so late and why our complaints have not been answered.

"At first, there seemed to be a communication breakdown between administrators and students. Now this has apparently been corrected. There is negotiation and our arguments are being weighed more heavily.

Let's hope that they will make a deep impression and trust that those individuals who can extend vacation will understand that what we asked reflects the overwhelming feeling of students. On this matter, Syracusans are far from indifferent.

"It would seem that if we are rejected again, the sour taste many of us have for university policy will only be intensified.

"So with another confrontation of students and administrators, is it not too impossible to trust that our requests will this time be met?"

Weller said:

"Rapidly rising to number one position on the top ten list of campus issues this week has been a new variation of the song "I'll be home for Christmas." Here at Syracuse, however, the title is "Will I be home for Christmas?," and the question it poses is only too real, and it demands immediate attention.

"Even by modern means of communication a large portion of the student body will be faced with a frantic race against time in order to enjoy Christmas at home. Not all students are able to afford airline travel. There is greater financial benefit and availability in driving.

"Yet, as has been already noted, plane schedules are ruled by weather, and the hazards of driving through snow, on icy roads, in a fully loaded vehicle, and at the breakneck speeds made necessary by the time available, are frighteningly high. This constitutes a problem of student welfare and is therefore of direct concern to Student Government.

"For Student Government two questions have emerged: Why Dec. 23, and what can be done about the situation? Registrar Smith has told us that, due to the compact structure of this year's university calendar and the state educational requirements governing class time, our vacation may not commence until Dec. 23.

"What can be done to alter this? At one time the university calendar was regarded as inflexible; yet, as Carl Corrallo has noted, the rigidity was conveniently waived in the face of a football game. This means that something can be done. Due to our belief that student welfare is more important than a football game, it means that something must be done.

"Now that the university calendar can be altered, we ask why the hours which would be lost due to a changed departure date could not be regained at a later time. Intersession might offer such an opportunity. Perhaps if Syracuse had its "dead week" by now, the solution to the problem would be simple.

"Student Government channels of communication have been utilized in presenting a united consensus of opinion. The administration is now open to discussion.

"Although discussion is the means, it is not the end. The class of 1966 believes that the administration must make an effort to arrange some method of allowing students to leave campus in time to get home safely—in time to get home by Christmas Eve.

Publications Constitution Subject of Panel Debate

Students, faculty and administrative representatives discussed the present Board of Student Publications constitution and suggested modifications at a Syracuse University Committee on Euqality-sponsored meeting Tuesday night in Kittredge Auditorium.

Moderator Kathleen Kapsol provided background about the publications board before panel members stated their views.

On the panel were: Andrew Porte, Daily Orange editor-in-chief, Ken Auletta, Daily Orange columnist; Jim G. Carleton, dean of men; Carl Corrallo, Student Government president , and David Bennett, assistant professor of citizenship and American studies.

Porte, Auletta, Corrallo and Bennett expressed a variety of misgivings about the new constitution ranging from "fairly strong disapproval" (Porte) to a criticism of the document's generalities and vagueness (Corrallo).

The student - faculty spokesmen cited the implied threats which the administration holds over the editors of the DO. While admitting that actual editing of stories by administration was not done, students noted there was pressure to conform to the hard to define phrase of "best interest of the university."

Carleton defended this policy and said as long as the university pays the bills it must expect some adherence to this.

The panel also debated the student influence on the board with respect to student meberships and the fact that editors of the publications were not allowed to vote on the board.

Student participants also were critical of the university's in loco parentis policy which, they felt, minimized student participation and influence in campus affairs. The fact that their positions could be suspended not for violation of journalistic rules such as libel, but for nonconformity of the policy of protecting the best interest of the university also was berated by the student representatives.

There will be a special SUCE meeting at 6:30 p.m. today in 301 Hall of Languages to discuss the suspension of the four coeds because of failure to notify authorities of their whereabouts after signing out for a weekend. All interested are invited.

ALLAN SHERMAN/ARTHUR FIEDLER
The masters of musical satire take an affectionate poke at Prokofieff, Brahms, Beethoven & others

It was bound to happen! The top musical satirists of our time have joined forces in a lively new album that plays fast and loose with the music of the masters. Recorded "live," this high-spirited spoof includes Sherman's hilarious parody of "Peter and the Wolf" (which includes such items as Beethoven's Fifth Cha-Cha-Cha and Aida in Dixieland) plus the fresh and funny "End of a Symphony." And Allen makes his conducting debut here in a slightly swacked rendition of "Variations on How Dry I Am." It's all great fun—as 13,327 listeners who heard these selections in concert can attest. Recorded in Dynagroove sound, it's an album you'll enjoy over and over again.

Hockey Club Faces Off

The Syracuse University hockey team kicks off the new season with two games this week.

Today the Orangemen travel to Rochester to face a powerful R.I.T. sextet.

Saturday, Oswego State comes to Syracuse for a game at the State Fair Coliseum in the year's first home game.

The outlook for the oncoming season appears excellent with the addition of many freshmen to the team. Furthermore, a new goalie has arrived on campus and will give Syracuse strength in a position that has been a trouble spot in the past.

The goalie, Wayne Sanderson, hails from Woodstock, Ontario, Canada, where he played Junior B hockey. Having played the game for some 13 years, Sanderson should help the team greatly.

Other new arrivals to the local hockey scene include a strong all-freshman line. Mike Johnson, Thorney Williams and Don Hunt have performed well in practice and much is expected of them in the on-coming season.

Johnson and Williams both played varsity hockey at St. Paul's School in New Hampshire. Hunt, on the other hand, attended Willbraham Academy and was one of the team's high scorers last year.

Another line, returning for a second year of action, finds Roy Fitzgerald and George Hebard on the wings with Sayre MacLeod positioned at center. Both Fitzgerald and MacLeod were among the top five scorers on last year's club.

In a recent scrimmage this veteran line skated well and were responsible for three goals.

Also performing creditably in pre-season action was the line composed of freshman Fred Thalman and Jeff Bultch, with lacrosse-player Danny MacDonald at right wing.

Other forwards on the Syracuse hockey team include Frank Louckes, Fred Viles, Dave Bronner and Doug Bradburg. Louckes, who has greatly improved over last year, separated his left shoulder in an early season practice and may not return to action until after an operation.

The most improved position for the Syracuse six this year is the defense. Spear-headed by Capt. Bill McGruther, the blue liners not only have size but boast better than average speed.

Teaming with McGruther is Rick Sparrow, a freshman from Kimball Union Academy.

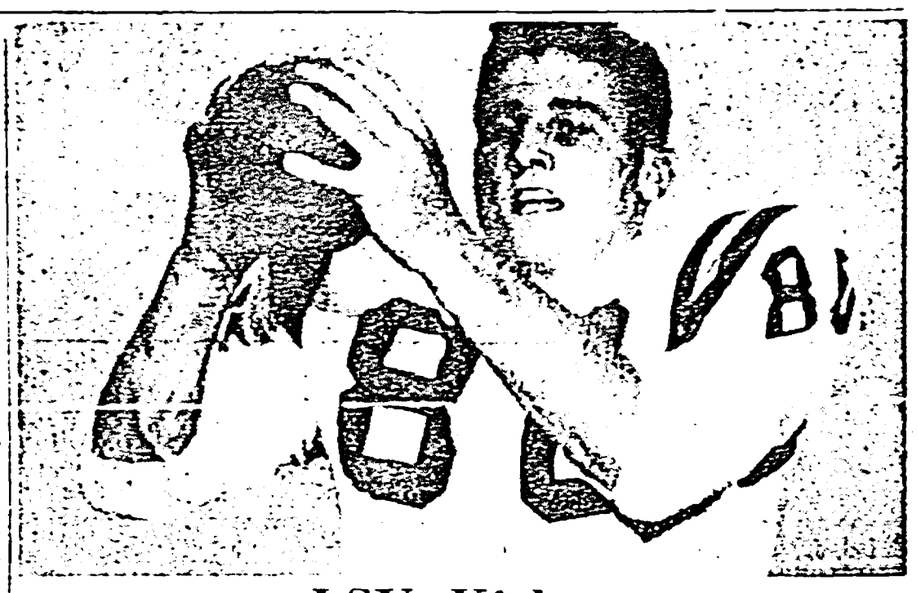
This duo should perform well this season and may be the league's outstanding defensive pair.

Another fine combination has Bill Oakley and Walt Pulver, playing together for the second straight year. In a recent scrimmage against Oswego these two defensemen played particularly well.

Fred O'Brien and Jim Knight a Canadian, form the team's remaining defensive unit.

O'Brien last year led the team in both fights and penalty minutes and can be expected to keep the other team's forwards honest. Knight also plays a rough brand of hockey and will be counted upon to level many an opposing player.

Syracuse coaches Jake Curran and Babe LaRosa look for a successful season for their team. Though the Finger Lakes Hockey League is stronger this year than last, the two coaches predict a first division finish with a good shot at the league title.



LSU Kicker

DOUG MOREAU, LSU flanker and kicking specialist, paced the Southeastern Conference in scoring this season with 73 points. Moreau included four TD pass receptions and 13 field goals (tying the SEC record) in his totals.

Riflemen Split Two

The Syracuse rifle team divided its two matches last weekend. It beat St. Lawrence University, 1268-1245, and lost to Clarkson College, 1308 - 1258. This gives the team a 4-2 record and puts it in second place in the league.

Bill Gold led the Orange with a 270 in the victory for the highest average on the team of 261 for six matches. Other scorers for the Orange were Larry Novak, 256; Don Hadyk, 248; Rich Rider, 247; and Klint Wigren, 245.

The team won the match mostly on its strong kneeling, winning 13 points, and offhand, winning nine points.

The Clarkson match brought out new talent on the Orange team when Rider fired 250, 33 points higher than his match average. Gold fired 264; Wigren, 252; Roger Rubrecht, 217; and Novak, 245.

Friday Syracuse will resume its rivalry with Alfred University at home. Coach Sgt. Lunn is looking forward to a win to keep the team in second place. Last year the Saxons beat the Orange by one point, and this year Syracuse beat them by three points.

Saturday Syracuse will shoot at Cornell University.

Intra Champs Are Crowned

Trophies were awarded to the fall intramural champions at a meeting Tuesday night.

Winners in the various sports are as follows:

Football -- Club 800 (all-university); Phi Delta Theta (all-fraternity); Watson West 2 (all-living center).

Rifle -- Alpha Tau Omega university, all-fraternity); Sims 1 (all-living center).

Swimming -- Delta Upsilon (all-university, all-fraternity); Sims 1 (all-living center).

Cross country -- Phi Gamma Delta (all-university, all-fraternity); Fenton Cottage (all-living center).

CORRECTION

By accident the "L" was omitted from a line of copy in Monday's Low & Inside. The sentence "there will be but 10 SU frosh scholarships for next season" should have read "there will be but 10 LSU scholarships . . ."

Carlin Pleased With Wrestlers

By KEN RUDNICK

The young Syracuse wrestling team, which traveled to New London last Saturday for the Coast Guard Invitational Tournament, made a much better showing than could reasonably be expected from a squad which used only one senior, Lew Roberts, in the starting lineup.

Ed Carlin, coach of the Orange matmen, was particularly pleased by the first-place finish of sophomore Tony Schlendorf, who led SU to third place in the field of 16 teams.

Schlendorf, competing in the 177-pound class, took the Coast Guard title with a victory over one of the East's finest grapplers, Gene Franzen of Navy, last year's Eastern Intercollegiate champion.

Carlin is busy preparing the Orangemen for their Manley Field House match Saturday afternoon against Lehigh, collegiate Wrestling Association champs.

The Engineers will be even stronger this year, according to coach Gerry Leemans, with the addition of the outstanding performers from their 1963 freshman team, which was the best in the East.

Carlin is hoping for help from SU football coach Ben Schwartzwalder in the form of the delivery for the Lehigh match of gridders Gerry Everling and Joe Radivoy.

If Schwartzwalder gives Everling the okay, Carlin will have a strong performer in the 191-pound class. Otherwise, the Orange grapplers will have to forfeit the match in that weight class.

The temporary release of Radivoy from his football duties would give Carlin a new starter in the unlimited class.

George Rogers, who did not appear in the Coast Guard tourney, will be a starter at 147 pounds against Lehigh.

According to Carlin, the return of the football players holds the key to the fortunes of the SU matmen this year. "If we get them back," said the coach, "we can have a good year. Their return would make weight classes."

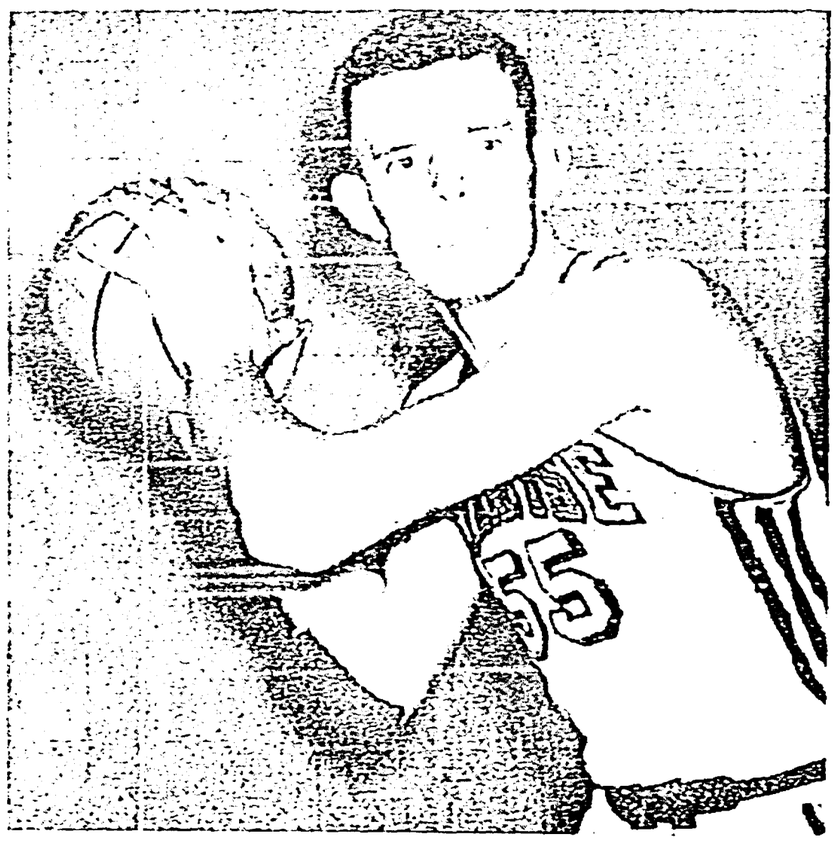
Orange Cagers Challenge Cornell



CHUCK RICHARDS
. . . Top Orange Scorer

By NEIL KERR

Syracuse's basketball team (1-1) will be out to extend its home court winning streak tonight when it takes on Cornell. The Orange have won eight straight in the friendly confines of Manley Field House.

Coach Fred Lewis hasn't named his starting lineup as yet, but will choose his opening five from veterans Dave Bing, Chuck Richards, Norm Goldsmith, Sam Penceal, Rich Duffy, Jim Boeheim plus sophs Rick Dean and Val Reid.

After two games, Chuck Richards is pacing the Hill offense with 32 points. Other high individual scoreers are Dave Bing with 31 and Rich Duffy with 24.

Bing, who damaged a knee in the second half of the Penn State contest, remains a question mark for the Cornell game according to Lewis. "Besides the knee, he's come up with some blisters," says Lewis. "Right now we're pretty sure he'll play though. Dave says he wants to."

With the partial loss of Bing, Syracuse will need a top effort from the balance of the team to get back in the win column. "Cornell's awfully g o o d," emphasized Lewis. "They're pretty much the same bunch of boys who gave us all we could handle a year ago."

In its only outing of the season, Cornell downed Colgate, 97-71. The 97 points tied the Big Red's home court record for a single game.

Cornell coach Sam MacNeil's squad lists seven returnees from last year's squad—the best of these being 6-7 Steve Cram and 6-5 Garry Munson. In Cornell's game with Colgate Cram totaled 21 points, Munson 25.

WAER (88.3 fm) will broadcast tonight's game direct from the fieldhouse at 8:15 p.m. Bill G o w e r and Jack White will handle the play-by-play.

Other members of the first five are Bob Berube and Bob DeLuca, both 6-2, and Dave Bliss, 5-10. Bliss is the only senior on the first team, the other four starters being juniors.

Last year's Syracuse-Cornell games followed different patterns, but the results was the same. In the initial contest, played in Manley, Cornell jumped to a 17-point first period lead but SU won, 86-84 on a ten foot shot by Richards with two seconds left.

At Cornell Syracuse took quick command and led by 18 points early in the game but the Red narrowed the margin to 89-85 at the finish.

One thing the Orange will have going for it tonight is playing in Manley Field House. "Don't underestimate the home court advantage," says Lewis. "Penn State was actually incited by the 3,000 people packed into 2,000 seats and they really outhustled us."

Syracuse Freshmen Oppose Little Red

By KEN RUDNICK

Somewhat heartened by the doctor's report on forward George Hicker, coach Roy Danforth's freshman basketball team will take the floor against the Cornell frosh tonight at 6:30 for the preliminary game at Manley Field House.

Hicker scored 15 points in his team's opener against Albany State last Wednesday before leaving the game with strained ligaments in his foot.

He has received medical permission to play, but just how much use Danforth will get out of him is still in question.

The Tangerines' biggest worry is coping with the Big Red's height advantage. Cornell's Dave Taylor (6-7), Pete Reynolds (6-5) and Al Altshuler (6-5) are all taller than any of the SU starters.

Rounding out the visitors' starting five will be Jim Minzel (6-3) and Greg Morris, the Big Red clubs' 6-0 sparkplug.

With Hicker only a tentative starter, Danforth will also go with Tom Ringleman, the Tangerines' "big man" at 6-4; Steve Ludd (6-3), Dick Cornwall (5-11) and Tom Bednark (6-0).

The Cornell frosh defeated Colgate in their season opener last week, 88-77. The tangerines walloped Albany State, 111-52, a week ago.

★ ★ Football Review -- '64 Season ★ ★

This is the last in a series of question and answer sessions between DO junior editor Howard Schneider and coach Ben Schwartzwalder. Joining Schneider is sportswriter Jim Kharold.

Q—Before the season started you stated that you would be happy to duplicate last year's 8-2 record. How do you feel now?

A—Any year you want to do the best you can. There is no harm in trying to win every game, but this is a little far fetched with the schedule we play. This group of boys, with what they had, gave all they had. Now, we made mistakes, but they were honest mistakes. It wasn't that we didn't care. . .we tried. We won our three objective games—Penn State, Pitt and Army. Against these teams we probably played better than our normal game. And they played pretty good against us—Army played its best game of the season, including Navy, against us at Yankee Stadium.

We probably could have beaten B.C. if we hadn't platooned. However, if we had not gone two ways we would have been hurting later in the season. We took a calculated risk and we lost. The Oregon State loss was a combination of factors—we didn't rebound from a hard hitting game against Penn State and that long plane trip to Oregon didn't help us either. But our most bitter disappointment of the year was against West Virginia.

Football is a game of how much you care on a given day. It is not only a physical game, it is also mental and emotional. How the game unfolds is important. Now a 7-3 record isn't particularly good . . .up here — it's relative. In some places a 7-3 record is considered reasonably good.

Football fans are never satisfied. Here in Syracuse they want 100 per cent. People ought to grow up and learn all the facts before they complain. Don't forget that for every team that wins, one has to lose.

Q—Did two platoon football help or hinder you this year?

A—To be perfectly honest I would favor the old system where each player plays both ways. Under this system, schools with the most players and most coaches will benefit the most. Eventually platooning will go beyond offense and defense. There will be kicking teams, punt return teams and the like. The game will become more specialized and more expensive. Next year most of the teams we play will have more boys on scholarship than we do. If this continues they will eventually have a great advantage over us.

Penn State coach, Rip Engle, has proposed that all colleges limit their traveiling squads to 38 men. This would limit specialization and I am entirely in favor of it.

Q—Was this season, because of the great number of sophomores, harder to coach than previous seasons?

A—The kids responded well but there was an awful lot of learning to be done this year and there still is. If you had told me before the season that veterans like Jim Cripps, Nat Duckett, Billy Hunter, Mike Koski, Paul Houle, Dave Archer and Gerry Everling would be hurt for part of the season or the entire season, and then expected me to win seven games. I would have asked for a firing squad.

Q—How do you feel about the Sugar Bowl game?

A—For the first time in five years we thought we would have been the underdog. We could have got the kids all souped up. Now, LSU loses to Florida—they're trying to out-nothing us. As far as the game goes we'll know more later.

A Long Cold Sad Holiday for Some

The late-starting Syracuse University winter recess will inconvenience great numbers of students, if calls to the Daily Orange Wednesday explaining hardships cases are any indication.

These are a cross-section of the cases, as told to the Daily Orange.

Case: The student's father is a member of the military and is stationed overseas. He has not seen his parents for a year. The current vacation does not leave the student enough time to fly by Military Air Transport Service overseas and return, because of waiting time for flights. If the vacation is not changed, it will be another year until he sees his parents.

Case: A student on scholarship is one of four children in his family who will be in college next year. He lives in Washington, D.C., and needs to work over vacation to pay part of his expenses. If the current vacation schedule holds, he will not be home until Christmas Eve, costing him at least one week of employment.

Case: A coed who lives in Los Angeles has the opportunity to get home only once during the school year. Because of booked Christmas transportation schedules, she will have to get a ride to Chicago and fly to California from there. Her brother, a student at Duke, will only be home a short time due to commitments at school. Under the current vacation set-up, she will lose at least one day on each end of the vacation because of the transportation problems.

Case: A student living in Paris, France, will be unable to go home unless vacation dates are changed, due to the already-booked near-Christmas transportation schedules.

Case: A coed living in the Virgin Islands says reservations for travel are impossible on Dec. 23. She says transportation chances are 75 per cent better if classes are dismissed Dec. 18. If classes are not changed, she may well not be home for Christmas.

Case: A member of the Marching Band (and there are 80) says they have to leave Syracuse Dec. 27 for the Sugar Bowl. If vacation stands as it is, he will only have four days, of which two must be spent in traveling.

Vacation Time Bomb Ticks.....

★ Van Derven Supports Christmas Extension ★

By DAVID SOSNA

George Van Derven, InterFraternity Council president, added his name to the roster of student leaders supporting a second vacation extension at Wednesday's IFC meeting.

Van Derven, speaking for the council as a whole, said:

"Students deserve more than one and one-half days before Christmas. Traveling time will leave most people with only one day for shopping. Some will have even less time.

"For this reason," he continued, "the Syracuse University Interfraternity Council asks for and strongly recommends a Christmas vacation extension of at least one day, hopefully two or more."

Van Derven also said, "We realize an extension will require an abbreviated intersession, but the IFC feels such a shortening would be well worth the extra days now."

He said he realized this vacation would be shorter than previous ones due to a seven-year cycle in the calendar. "But," he added, "there's no reason for the university not to extend the recess somewhat if it is possible."

Stern, Corrallo Plan Action If SU Gives No Word By Tonight

By JESSE SMITH

Student Senate's agenda for tonight is loaded with explosive issues.

Speaker Robert (Robby) Stern announced the 8 p.m. session in Maxwell Auditorium will take up student demands for extending Christmas recess.

"We have gone through every possible means of negotiation" Stern said Wednesday.

Stern predicted the Senate would take action if nothing is heard from the administration before tonight's session.

Student Government President Carl Corrallo also has promised further moves if vacation has not been changed by tonight.

Also on the agenda are:

1. The suspension of four coeds for failing to report a change of destination on an overnight trip.

2. The report of a special Senate committee which looked into Stern's procedure in conducting the Oct. 28 session. Stern predicted action on the report.

3. A speech by Norman Balabanian, professor of electrical engineering, on a movement in Congress to abolish the House

(See Stern, page 11)

Court Suspends Student For Automobile Violation

After repeatedly parking an illegally operated car in a prominent administrator's parking place, a junior with a .9 accumulative average has been suspended from the university by the Student Court.

According to Chief Justice Frank Richmond, the student, enrolled in the College of Liberal Arts testified to the court that he had driven the car to school during orientation, keeping it here for 10 days. At this time he brought the car home.

He brought the car to school again the weekend of the Pittsburgh football game, keeping it on campus until thanksgiving. This brought the total to 23 days.

While at school he used the car freely to go on dates, Richmond said. He also drove around campus and downtown on numerous occasions.

The car bill passed by Joint Student Legislature (now Student Senate) in 1962 states that juniors and seniors on academic probation may not own or operate automobiles while attending SU. This student was admittedly guilty of both owning and operating the vehicle.

In addition, the car was never registered with the university.

"This is a flagrant violation of policy," Richmond said. "There are degrees of all violations. This was a major violation."

The court deemed that there were no extenuating circumstance, which necessitated the operation of a car.

The suspension will go into effect at the end of the semester and will remain in effect until June 1965, at which time he will be eligible for readmission.

The student had previously appeared before the court for the misuse of alcohol. That charge was dismissed.

Board to Re-review Suspension Case

BULLETIN

The disciplinary committee which suspended four coeds last week will be recalled today by Dean of Women Marjorie C. Smith to consider the case in light of a proposal of leniency and constructive action suggested late Wednesday by the executive committee of the Association of Women Students, revealed Diane Kessler, AWS president.

DO Features Ski Section

The Daily Orange acknowledges the opening of the skiing season in the Syracuse area with a special ski section on pages 5-11 in today's issue.

Song Mountain has arranged a program to enable all Hill residents to ski at reduced rates at the Song Mount Ski Center at Tully.

Students react angrily to the university's suspension of four coeds and the short Christmas vacation, see page 15.

Guided by Tradition

Freshman Weekend Boasts History Dating From 1946

By CAROL SCHNEIDER

Latin may be a dead language, but the class of '68 plans to put life into it Friday and Saturday as it presents "Fructus," Freshman Weekend.

Del Shannon, The Tymes, the Headliners and Audrey Freeman will star in a concert, "At the Forum," at 8:30 p.m., Friday at the Women's Building.

The freshman show, "A Funny Thing Happened. . .," will be presented at 3 p.m. Saturday afternoon in Crouse College auditorium, and an informal dance, Caesar's Ball will be held at 9 p.m. in Graham Hall.

This weekend is the continuation of a tradition officially begun in 1946, when the Women's Student Senate gave freshmen permission for a weekend devoted exclusively to their class.

That precedent-setting weekend began with a semi-formal dance, group attendance to Hendricks Chapel, open houses and picnics.

One of the unusual features of the weekend included a turn-about on Goon Squad members, who were required to wear and tip frosh beanies and in general cater to the freshman class.

The next full-fledged frosh weekend took place in 1949. An old clothes dance, "Moth Ball," opened festivities and prizes were awarded to the most moth-eaten costumes.

(See Freshman, page 13)

Father-Image Crisis

Our office gets letters on a pretty regular basis, but never have we seen such an influx of protest as we are currently receiving over the suspension of four coeds for violating the overnight permission rule.

The reasons are clear — the suspensions were unjust and the position of the disciplinary committee is indefensible.

But just as with all the other injustices on this campus, the case of the careless coeds will go by the wayside unless the student body makes itself heard.

The student body at the Student Senate tonight must act. It must speak loudly, for our administration has a unique way of choosing what it wants to hear. The protest must be so loud that the administration cannot refuse to listen.

The students on this campus have waited too long to be heard. It is time that student complaints stopped falling on deaf ears. What is indefensively wrong must be corrected.

If the rules are archaic, they must be changed now — with these four coeds. Syracuse University, nearing its centennial, must cease acting as if it were a newborn institution of the nineteenth century.

The university insists on being a father to its students. A father scolds his children; he doesn't disown them.

Obligation

The Student Senate meets tonight in what promises to be a highlight in the college careers of most of us. The key question is the role of the student in university decision-making.

Every senate representative has an obligation to take a poll on vacation as requested by Carl Corallo and bring the results tonight. A change may well rest on the outcome.

Without student interest, there can be no student progress.

Mel Weiss

Mel Weiss was a man and the students, because this man had taken the time for them alone,
loved him.
And the students are no different from every man he met.
I know because I feel that way —
And I only met him once —
And there were three of us —
And our meeting was unsatisfactory because I thought he was pulling my leg with his goodness the way social workers do.
When His words and deeds began to come to me indirectly, from the lips of honest, courageous people,
I wanted to —
But I couldn't.
I couldn't, but I could attend a memorial service,
after he died suddenly duck-hunting.
I couldn't, but I could sit at the rear of a chapel reserved for his friends.
But I couldn't, because the rear was the front and the middle, and all there were his friends.
Tied by his memory.
Tied by his freedom.
Tied by his courage.
I sat wondering who now —
now that Mel Weiss was gone — would wield the burden of providing me with free and courageous memories.
The colored man on the Altar reading from the Buber-Bible?
The white, other man up there, fumbling through tears
what he lost?
The shaven bearded men?
The scholar artist men?
The family bachelor men?
The ones who are crying now, or. . .
Hey! Maybe one of this group, just coming in, in hunting boots!
Perhaps the men sitting up front, or those in the middle;
the back. The back. . The back? The back!

The Sad Saga of Soggy

By Jay Litwin

Sogamund Bagofdonuts (better known as Soggy to his close friends) has had a relatively poor day. He's been shot down by Caren Cool for the ninth time in nine tries; the one time he cut Constitutional Law was the one time Dr. Sawyer took attendance for the whole year; his mother is growing a mustache under her arm; and his sister has run off with a university administrator (of all cussing things they didn't like.

Soggy ole boy just ain't that happy. So blinded by emotion, ole Soggy rants and raves about doing away with all of these evils.

He decides we'll get rid of Friday and Saturday nights so' Caren can't shoot him down. Teachers that take attendance must be abolished too, including Michael O. and his one once-a-year job. And of course mustaches and administrators must go. And Soggy is going to do it all!

Silly ole Soggy, huh? Well, we can't really blame ole Soggy cause he hasn't heard too much from his head lately. But what about all those intellectuals who do hear from their heads, whose only purpose is to get rid of that which they don't quite understand.

Soggy and I walked along campus and, you know what, all we heard were people discussing things they didn't like. And you know what else? They decided the only solution is to sweep it under the rug or to bomb the hell out of it so it's just not there anymore. Here's some of what we heard:

"Hey, that stinking' war in Viet Nam. We're losing guys over there. What's so important over there anyhow. We should either get out or let 'em have it. You know what I mean."

"You know, it's just a shame how segregation still exists somewhere. We gotta change that. So when these guys come down here lookin for volunteers to 'riot a little' I'm goin'. I mean, it's a just cause, ain't it, so rioting about it can't be bad. Can it?' Communism! That's the damn thing that's causing all our troubles. If we could just eliminate that, everything would be just great. We gotta hunt every single one of them down and get rid of them and everybody that starts thinkin' like them. I mean, if they're gonna bury us, we have the right to get rid of 'em, don't we? Any way we can."

Well, ole Soggy was impressed with each of these arguments. "They're right man; we gotta so somethin."

"But Soggy, ole boy, let me try to tell you something. All these people have valid points. Nobody wants Americans losing lives in Viet Nam and nobody who thinks at all can rationally support segregation and nobody who thinks is going to fall for that soft sell by communism. But Soggy, wouldn't it be better if we faced these problems by understanding the underlying factors of each? Better to assimilate the knowledge we gather together and work within the framework of our nation to achieve a truly great society. Soggy, we just don't get rid of things we don't like or understand. That's a simple answer for simple people in a simple society. Soggy, remember how you were afraid of the dark when you were a kid?"

"Kid nothin', I'm still scared stiff now, too!"

Are you a scared when the lights are on?"

"Heck, no. Then I can see there's nothing there to scare me and if there is, why then at least I see it and know what to do."

"You know, Soggy, that was pretty good."

"What was good? What are you talkin' about?"

"About how much easier a problem is to handle when you turn on the light instead of rushing like scared rabbits into a dark room and possibly causing more harm than good because you don't know what you're looking for. Do you see that, Soggy?"

"Yeah, yeah, I think I do. Hey, I'll buy you a beer at T.C."

We got to T.C. and Soggy ordered two Buds. Then he looked up and with a grin face said, "Jay, why in the world do they keep all those other brands up there? People are nutty, I mean, I know Bud is the best! Man, they just gotta get rid of all that other junk. Let's tell 'em to throw out that other junk, huh?"

"Soggy, how's your beer?"
"Great. Why?"

"The guy gave you two Schlitz by mistake!' See ya, Sog."

To the Editor:

In a recent statement, the university announced disapproval of students walking across the campus lawns.

If the administration would simply take note of the quite obvious heavily trodden dirt paths around campus and pave them, much of this problem could be alleviated.

Examples of these paths can be found in front of and around DellPlain Hall, on the two diagonals of the main quadrangle, and also on the line between Maxwell Hall and the Newhouse Center.

Handel's 'Messiah'

A Question of Competence

by Martin Cohn

I did not go to the University Chorus' performance of Handel's "Messiah", Tuesday night, to review. I simply went out of curiosity; in the past, I had been a member of this very same chorus, and this was the first chance I had to hear how they sounded in the audience. Yet with this change of position, I immediately took on the moral burden of passing judgment, and to tell the truth, I did have some misgivings over how the concert would turn out.

I will not damn the performance I heard; it damned itself. What I want to discuss is whether or not the University Chorus should have performed Handel's "Messiah" Tuesday night.

Chorus-director Frank Hakanson chose to perform the "Messiah" in the original instrumentation, and he should be commended for it. But there is more to an authentic performance, than the original score. If one reads up on the first performance of the "Messiah" in Dublin in 1742, one finds that Handel used only something like 13 choristers, and even more amazing, all the soloists were drawn from the chorus itself.

This last fact makes it obvious that Handel had a thoroughly professional group to sing for him. But in a way it is not surprising that Handel could draw his soloists from the chorus, for if one looks at the choral parts or trys to sing them, one discovers that they are every bit as hard as the treacherously difficult solos.

In Handel's day, singing was quite an elevated art, and I honestly do not think the composer would have written the long runs in "For unto us a child is born," if he did not have a chorus that could sing it. Indeed, I have heard some good choral performances of the "Messiah", but I have never heard one that did complete justice to the music.

This brings us back to Tuesday night and the University chorus. Whereas Handel's Chorus was professional, ours is amateur, but what kind of amateur? The University Chorus is open to all who would like to sing in it. There is an audition required, but even Mr. Hakanson would admit that this is not particularly difficult. I know from my own experience in the chorus that the voices and musical competence range from good to bad.

The result is certainly not professional. Neither does the University Chorus compare with the best of the amateur groups such as Earl George's singers. But no one is to blame for the quality of the University Chorus, and, least of all, Hakanson. The basic idea behind its formation is to give a large group of students an experience in choral singing.

We have replaced Handel's 13 professionals with about 150 amateurs, and the question comes up: is the University chorus competent to perform Handel's "Messiah?" My answer is an emphatic no! I listened to the first three-quarters of their concert Tuesday night and it was a painful experience. In fact, I think Handel would have walked out before I did.

The choral singing was dull and inelegant; when it made an impact it was simply because of its huge size. It was only the slow chorus "Behold the Lamb of God" that had some measure of eloquence. The rest lacked real inner energy. I had the impression that Hakanson might have moved more quickly in various parts, had the chorous been able to negotiate them with more agility.

The soloists were no better than the chorus from which some of them, in the true Handelian style, were drawn. None of them rose above the level of dull competence, and some were worse. Again I had the impression of tempos being dragged to accomodate the singers lack of sufficient technique. The tenor should have stayed in the grave. In addition, the orchestra obviously lacked the proper amount of rehearsal time, and, as a result, its intonation was very often embarrassing.

Singers Gene and Francesca To Perform at Folk Gallery

Gene and Francesca, "urban" folk singers, will perform at 8:30 p.m. 10 p.m. and 12 a.m. today and this weekend at the Folk Gallery.

"We're sort of deauthenticated folksingers. Both Francesca and I are New Yorkers of foreign parentage. Our background is the metropolis. It would be illogical if we attempted to be anything else," said Gene Raskin.

Raskin is a former associate professor of architecture at Columbia University and the author of the textbook "Architecturally Speaking."

The team will also appear on local television Friday on the "Denny Sullivan Show" and on "Woman's Day."

Leonard Weinberg, a graduate assistant in the political science department, has written an article entitled, "Party Politics In West Africa," which will appear in the winter edition of the Geneve Afrique, the revue of the Geneva Africa Institute.

SKI-FARING

with JON WEISBERG

More Syracuse students than ever before will be on the slopes this year. Every night and most afternoons from now until the white stuff melts, students will be pouring out of their dorms to make a pilgrimage to their favorite areas. From snobunnies to experts. . .with every form of equipment from Original World War Two surplus antiques to the latest epoxie racers. . .from sweat pants and dungarees (otherwise known as Texas Bogners) to knickers and stretch suits. . . the students will be there at the areas, the snow has fallen and the season has begun.

This season, more than ever before the surrounding ski areas are ready for Syracuse. They offer challenging slopes and trails for everyone from bunnies(the real beginners) to the experts. Of course, as the more experienced skiers already know, the tougher trails are found in Vermont, New Hampshire, and the areas farther to the North. But the trails aren't the only points to look for in an area. Lodge activity is an important part of the ski scene. Actually, the lodge facilities, for the most part, cater to bunny and expert alike (in this category, the novices often surprise the experts). Of course, you have to be exceptionally careful in some of the lodges—their bar stools can get almost as high as the skier. Be careful that you don't fall off!

Getting back to the slopes, though, there are four major areas within twenty miles of Syracuse. SONG MOUNTAIN, LABRADOR MOUNTAIN, MYSTIC MOUNTAIN, and TOGGENBURG are all easily accessible to Syracuse students. Some offer special student rates, and transportation. Others will be chartering buses for students later in the season.

The three T-Bar lifts at SONG MOUNTAIN, in Tully, give all skiers a good choice of trails to ski on. Their extensive snow making equipment provides a good surface, even when the other areas don't have enough snow. They offer free transportation to students on Saturdays and Sundays, as well as free ski lessons on weekday nights. This year, their night skiing has been expanded, as have been the lounge and dining areas of the lodge.

The main T-Bar at LABRADOR MOUNTAIN, in Truxton, has been lengthened to make a new intermediate trail possible. This trail, the Char-Run is Central New York's longest. With the addition of Char-Run, LABRADOR now has nine trails and several acres of open slopes, covering more than seven miles. The Dick LeFebvre Ski School offers group and private lessons at standard rates.

MYSTIC MOUNTAIN, in CAZENOVIA, is filled with an international atmosphere that gives the area a touch of the Alps. The two T-Bars serve the many acres of open slopes that give MYSTIC part of its alpine nature. The Stein Haus in the main lodge serves delicious cheese fondue around the luxurious Round Hearth. The ski school, which consists of fifteen instructors is under the auspices of Syracuse grad Tom Barrett. Aside

Unfortunately, my information concerning TOGGENBURG is quite limited at this time. However, next week's column will give you a report on TOGGENBURG, as well as GREEN PEAK in Cortland, SNOW RIDGE in Turin, the new BRISTOL MOUNTAIN in Canandaigua, the DRUMLINS SKI SCHOOL, and the perennial SKY TOP.

Until then. . .

Ski fashions from Lund's Ltd.

Vunderful Wedlen Vogues

The look is your's alone. And what better background for your personal chic than that plentiful powdery white stuff?

It's the year of subtle s h a d e s in ski wear. Gone are the days when prints and patterns were the smashingest. Ski fashion has taken on the lines of the sport — smooth, sleek, gently curved and excellently executed. The Look is achieved through the use of one color or one tone, sparked with white or black discreetly, very discreetly.

The range of colors is as high as Mont Blanc, but not so immediately overwhelming. We're told that tones are snowy and subtle or cozy and warm. No midday madness with splashes of color.

Jackets take the fore in styling. Hip-skimming parkas, pouffy as the ski spirit itself, still rate high, but the trend is to diversified shapes. This same hip-hugging classic takes on a definite snugness, via stretch materials, to resemble the jacket of a wet suit. Also becoming very popular is the parka-gone-wild. Made from material to whistle with the wind down the breeziest slopes, it can be belted or unbelted. Lengths vary from hip-skimming to knee-length Mandarin and hood-hiding collars are still the most popular, but shaped, stand-away necklines and Chelsea styles are fashion avalanches for ski '65.

Wide, bold ribbing and heavy, narrow ribs styled after the poor-boy sweaters of this fall carry over onto the slopes in turtlenecks and socks.

A revival from when dad was a lad is the growing popularity in knickers — this year kept to a minimum of bulk and a maximum of eye appeal. Stretch fabrics again come into play, fitting smoothly and bloused ever so softly at the knees. Dyed-to-match socks keep the all-in-one hue.

Headgear is becoming more diversified — from pilot-like crash helmets to wiglets attached to headbands to keep your hair untouched by wind or snow for apres ski hours.

Think snowy. Think warm. Never before have you had the choice of so many colors, shapes and looks. Of being subtle or cozy in a singular shade. Of causing such an avalanche of compliments about you. The look is exclusive. The look is you!

Skiers Await Opener

By KEN RUDNICK

The Syracuse varsity ski team, a going concern last season, is in the midst of preparing for its first competition of 1964-'65, a two-day invitational meet beginning Saturday at Oswego State Teachers College.

Last winter the Orange skiers, coached by Elton Fairbanks, compiled a strong record in five invitational meets. SU took third place three times and fourth once.

As far as Faribanks is concerned, however, the highlight of the season was his squad's showing in the Syracuse University Winter Carnival.

The Orangemen finished second to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, bowing to MIT by only half a point.

Syracuse will face an expansed schedule this winter, competing in seven invitationals. The Orangemen will also send skiers to the New York State Giant Slalom competition at Greek Peak, an individual championship event.

The format for each of the seven invitational meets will be identical.

There will be competition held in both Nordic and Alpine events, with team standings computed on the basis of a complicated system of percentages in which each event is given a different weight.

The Nordic division includes jumping and cross-country. The events in Alpine skiing are slalom, giant slalom and downhill.

Fairbanks will have to build his team around senior Bob Thorensen, the only man returning from last year's Orange squad.

Chalmer Lyons, Bob Bryant and Dave Menotti, SU captain in '63-'64 graduated, and they are the men Fairbanks must replace.

Thorensen should lead the Alpine performers. Fairbanks listed Tex Laidlaw, Jim Bowman, Skip Snyder and Tom Valco as other Alpine possibilities. Valco is the only other senior, but he did not make the team last winter.

Students Sell Ski Equipment

Three Syracuse graduate students have opened up a Winter Sport-Fair for the sale of used winter sports equipment on 6841 E. Genesee St.

Bill Alexander, Norris Larson and John Pilger have announced that their shop will be open every Friday, Saturday and Sunday until Crhistmas from 9 a.m. until 9 p.m.

The three operators feel that their service will appeal to three groups of people:

1. Skiing families with children who outgrow their equipment from year to year.

2. Novices who need advice and an opportunity to purchase equipment at a low cost. For instance, according to the owners, a person can buy good used $50 boots at the same cost he would pay for new $20 boots.

3. Experienced skiers who are tired of their present equipment and would like to sell it so they can afford trying out something new in the equipment which is constantly being improved every year.

Sport-Fair caters to skiers, but it also carries equipment for other winter sports. The shop sells used ski boots, poles, parkas, stretch pants, sweaters, ski-racks, and other ski items.

Sport-Fair also features iceskates.

Alexander, Larson and Pilger feels that their service differs from others of the same type in the handling of the customer.

According to them, the proprietors are experienced skiers who take time to explain the importance of various pieces of equipment. They insure that people are properly fitted with boots, skis and poles of the propler length.

The novice or inexperienced need not bring an expert with him to Sport-Fair to avoid getting stuck with inappropriate gear.

For further information about Sport-Fair, call 475-9258.

The United States produces 33 million Christmas trees a year and imports nearly 10 million more from Canada, notes the Reader's Digest. It is a 100-million dollar business.

Tagsters Beware!

Now that the season's started, you neophytes are probably wondering what the little tag on the ski parka means. Beware novice! With the tow ticket goes an aura of majesty. (Hey, that fellow's conquered a mountain!).

Ever see the super skiers on the quad? They're bent over double, not from an exotic ski disease, but from an overload of tow tickets dangling from their parkas strings.

Listen to the story of poor Bob the skier. He wore his parka home last Christmas, and,while loafing around the corner bakery, was approached by a small woman named Cookie.

"Sonny, you should take off those laundry tickets."

Most esoteric of all is the scene on the beach next summer with your ski parka, now a wind breaker, rolled under your head, tow tickets aglore. Only then can any skier point and remember Davos, Song, Stowe and let the impression on his skiless comrades fall like the snow flakes in the summer ocean. What stories you could tell!

Syracuse Skiing Schemes Seen at Skytop, Song Mt.

By BOBBIE MARX

Syracuse skiers have much schussing in store for them this season with the planned extension of university skiing programs. Skiing will be coordinated by the university locally at Skytop and at Song Mountain.

For those girl ski enthusiasts who enjoy talking about skiing almost as much as being on the slope, the Women's Physical Education Department offers a one-credit ski course.

The girls practice indoors for part of the semester and then take their own equipment out to Skytop or a two-hour weekly session.

Skytop is also featuring a University-sponsored ski school, Milt Howard, director of intramurals, announced.

The lodge and slope (complete with rope tow) will be open to provide students, faculty and dependents with the ski lessons for beginners. The instructors have been recruited from Greek Peak, Bellayre and Oak Mountain.

One-week lessons which will begin after the Christmas vacation will be offered on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights and Saturday and Sunday afternoons. Twice a week classes will be given on Tuesday and Thursday nights.

The total cost for this block of lessons (five two-hour sessions) will be $10. For those who can muster up a large group of ski buffs a reduced rate of $8 per person is offered. Skytop also has a small and modestly priced rental shop for the skiless.

For far away places with real ski atmosphere, Syracuse University sponsors a ski lesson program at not so distant Song Mountain.

Free lessons will be offered on Wednesday nights (with bus service to Tully) and on Saturday and Sunday.

The regular season pass at Song Mountain has been reduced — every day and night all season will cost $50 this year instead of the usual $80. A $30 package is being advertised which includes seven nights and five days (excluding Saturday and Sunday).

However, skiing is not confined to these programs. Winter Weekend sees one of the more exciting ski events at the annual intramural competition held at Skytop. Fraternities, living centers and independents participate and all are welcome to watch.

The SU Ski team swoops into its schedule this weekend at Oswego. The skiers continue their meets until the middle of March.

Social Committee, Publications Board

Students Get Equal Representation

This is the third of a series by DO administration reporter Carol Rubright concerning university committees. These little-known boards, manned by both administrators and students, represent a liason between these often-opposed factions. Today's story concerns the university social committee and the Board of Student Publications.

By CAROL RUBRIGHT

An equal number of administrators and students making policy together?

There is such a phenomenon on the Syracuse campus, and it is known as the university social committee. In fact, counting the non-voting committee members, the number of students exceeds the number of administrators.

One of the functions of this committee, as listed in its by-laws, is "to develop and administer social events policy.

According to chairman John S. Hafer, dean of personnel administration: "Often students have better ideas than the administrators...They approach the problems realistically."

The social committee is responsible for seeing that big weekends, class elections and other all-university events are planned, budgeted and performed smoothly.

One of the oldest committees on campus, the social committee was also one of the first to admit students to its membership.

On Tuesday the Social committee reviewed the budget and final plans for the junior class' Winter Weekend, checked the preliminary plans of the Inter-Fraternity Council for Greek Week and reviewed preliminaries for International Week with members of the International Students Organization.

Each organization sponsoring an all-university event must check in with the committee at least three times. The first meeting is about four months prior to the date of the event, the second—a budget review—is about two months later and the last — an evaluation of the results — is about a month after the event has taken place.

Outside entertainment is obtained with the help of the committee and of Mrs. Margaret P. Stafford, university social director. The "purchase" of big-name big expense entertainers is arranged through the university purchasing department.

Theoretically, the committee meets once a month from October through May. Chancellor William P. Tolley appoints the committee and membership is fixed by position rather than by name. Voting student members include the president of the Student Government, president of the Association of Women Students and the junior class president.

Voting non-student members are the faculty representative Dr. Leland Jamison of the Religion department and the deans of men and women. Hafer votes in case of tie.

The four non-voting members (Mrs. Stafford and the presidents of the freshman, sophomore and senior classes) are "there to lend support and knowledge," according to Hafer.

The Board of Student Publications has two things in common with the social committee: both are chaired by Hafer and, unlike many of the other university committees, both work within the framework of a written set of rules.

The board of publications, has been the topic of much controversy this semester because of the alleged threats to freedom of the campus press lodged in its constitution.

The board will meet on Tuesday at which time a subcommittee is expected to report on suggested changes in the constitution.

The board was set up about 30 years ago upon the demise of the student-run Daily Orange Corp. The DO Corp. had been founded in 1907, had built its own press, and was a financial success until the depression years. In 1934, running at a loss, it sold out to the university.

In receipt of all the DO equipment, the university conceded that half of the board which would govern the newspaper would be composed of students.

Thus the board of publications was founded and half of its membership is still made up of students.

There have, however, been changes regarding who the students on the board are to be, as well as in the makeup of the other half of the board which now includes only two representatives from the School of Journalism, (the dean and the financial advisor to the publications), and the deans of men, women and personnel administration.

A constitutional change last spring ousted the editors-in-chief of the various student publications from the board and replaced them with the presidents of three senior honoraries. The two other student members are the executive officers of Student Government.

The functions of this committee, as listed in its constitution are extensive. They are:

1. To elect and or remove from office the editor-in-chief and business manager of the Daily Orange, the Onondagan and the Syracuse 10.

2. To supervise the finances of the publications.

3. To "supervise the editorial administration" of the publications.

4. To hear reports, arrange hearings and conduct "such inquiries as may be deemed necessary"

5. To "make recommendations to the editors and managers of the publications...and to any student or faculty body of SU on matters pertaining to the publications, that involve their function of providing public service to the campus and an educational laboratory for the staff members."

6. To grant or deny petitions for the establishment of new student publications.

The board meets approximately once a month from September through May.

Stern, Corrallo Plan

Un-American Activities Committee (HUAC).

4. The administration's refusal to allow circulation of the "Sword of Damocles" on campus. Stern will give his views.

Because of intense student interest in vacation and the four coeds' suspension, Stern said, he will allow spectators — as many as Maxwell Auditorium will hold.

Many living centers have been circulating petitions asking for cancellation of the two and a half days of classes now scheduled before Christmas vacation.

This would mean changing the first day of vacation from Wednesday afternoon, Dec. 23, to Saturday, Dec. 19.

Corrallo asked that these petitions be brought to the Senate tonight, to show support for Student Government's drive to extend vacation.

Stern told the Daily Orange Wednesday he hopes the Senate will take a stand on HUAC. He suggested sending a letter to House Speaker Robert McCormack supporting the move to dissolve HUAC when the new Congress meets Jan. 6.

New York's Kennedy international Airport last year earned about $15 million, treble the earnings of any other terminal, according to Reader's Digest. Everytime a jet plane wheels from one of its five long air strips, it collects $327.23. Airlines figure it costs $4.71 to land each passenger there as compared to $1.80 for Chicago's O'Hare International or 70 cents at Los Angeles.

Panel to Discuss Viet Nam

The United States policy in Viet Nam will be the topic of a faculty panel discussion at 8 p.m. today in Kittredge Auditorium, Huntington B. Crouse Hall.

The panel is a preview of a topic which will be discussed by Sen. Wayne Morris, a democrat from Oregon.

Morris will speak at 8 p.m. Monday in Hendricks Chapel on "Is Our Policy in Viet Nam Leading Us into War?"

The panelists include David Bennett, assistant professor of citizenship and American studies; Julian Friedman, associate professor of political science; A. Guy Hope, acting director of the South Asia program; George Moutafakis, assistant professor of history; and Rejendra Nanavati, assistant professor of electrical engineering.

Van Derven Supports...

at the meeting, Van Derven spoke of the recent National Inter Fraternity Council Conference that he and Dean of Men Jim G. Carleton attended last weekend.

As a result of the conference, he said, he will be "considering" a first semester open rush plan with other IFC officials. The plan, outlined briefly in the discussion would allow total Greek-freshman contact with some exceptions.

At present, no definite plans have been made for any actual committee study of the proposal. But it is expected that Van-Derven will make more detailed statements by next semester.

Phi Sig Sponsors Ski Fashion Show With Greek Cast

With winter very much under foot, and more flurries falling all the time, thoughts of the typical Syracuse University student turn to—what else?. . .skiing, of course.

And with thoughts of those glistening slopes comes the cry "What shall I wear?"

To help students answer this question, a ski and fashion show, sponsored by Phi Sigma Sigma Sorority will be held at 7 p.m. today in Crouse College Auditorium. All students will be admited at no charge.

Carl Corrallo, president of Student Government and his banjo-playing sidekick, John Trever will entertain with folk music SU style.

Corrallo with Susan Shaw also will narrate the show which will feature a variety of ski and after-ski sports clothes from Lund's. All 25 of the female models will have their hair done at Joseph's Beauty Salon.

"The purpose of the show is to promote inter-greek relationships and to interest freshmen in the sorority and fraternity system," said Susan Sommers who is co-chairman with Linda Harkavy of the event.

Men from several campus fraternities, including George VanDervin, InterFraternity Council President, John Pear, sophomore class president and Charles Grandey, varsity cheerleader will model.

The show will feature one model from each of 25 campus sororities. Included among the models are: Edie Solher (Alpha Chi Omega), Marion Block (Alpha Delta Pi), Barbara Solomon (Alpha Epsilon Phi), Sandra E. McFarland (Alpha Gamma Delta), Louise M. Heck (Alpha Lambda Phi),

Also Sandra Olsen (Alpha Phi), Shelly Sharkman (Alpha Sigma Tau), Barbara Belmont (Alpha Sigma Alpha), Patricia Yellen (Alpha Xi Delta), Tracy Jaekel (Chi Omega), Joan S. Wilson (Delta Delta Delta), Carla Ackerman (Delta Gamma).

Also Laura Divack (Delta Phi Epsilon), Joan Zinkawinck (Delta Pi), Margaret Bailey (Gamma Phi Beta), Karen Nestler (Iota Alpha Pi), Carol Murray (Kappa Alpha Theta), Nancy Milbrook (Kappa Delta).

Also Susan Reger (Kappa Kappa Gamma), Mary Kopp (Phi Mu), Paula Wilkins (Phi Sigma Sigma), Leda Hegent (Pi Beta Phi), Susan Liberman (Sigma Delta Tau), Nancy Walters (Sigma Kappa) and Karen Kotsch (Zeta Tau Alpha).

Freshman Weekend Boasts

The class of 1962 went "gung ho" for their Splendorient Weekend, in 1959. A Sampson Swing dance opened the activities, where the Splendorient Empress was named. A coolie sale followed. A Chinese carnival was held Saturday afternoon.

"Salute to Syracuse" was sponsored by the class of 1956. The purpose of this weekend was to pay tribute to the city in order to strengthen city and university relationships.

Features included a date bureau for the weekend, where students signed up to be matched for Friday coke or coffee dates.

An "Under the Sea" semi-formal and a Sunday open house, where all class members were invited to meet the officers, were among other weekend events.

In 1961 "Caribbean Cruise" was highlighted by a "Bon Voyage" dance, where prizes were awarded for the best Caribbean outfits. Students were invited to attend the cha-cha dance in bermudas.

Three days were covered by the class of '65. A torchlight parade which preceded the entertainment and was headed by the king and queen, marched down South Crouse avenue to Marshall street and finished at the Mount.

Friday included a rock and roll and twisting party, slave sale and carnival. Saturday featured a semi-formal dance and a concert followed on Sunday.

Last year's frosh weekend's pace was more like that of the class of '68. "Take Me Along" was highlighted by a performance by the Rooftop Singers. The stage was then cleared for a frugue party.

Booths were judged at the Great White Way carnival Satrday, where SU dignitaries were auctioned at the slave sale.

'Maxwell Review' Now on Sale

The Maxwell Review, the newest addition to the Syracuse University family of student publications made its debut this week.

The magazine, published by graduate students and faculty members in the Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs, is an outlet for student expression on social and academic issues.

The blue-covered magazine is an independent journal, supported by funds the graduate students and faculty raised.

Founders of the publication, James D. Carrol, John J. Gargan, and Stuart K. Witt served on the editorial board for the first issue. This three-member board compiles, edits and publishes the magazine. Its members will rotate from issue to issue.

Included in the first issue of the four planned for this year are articles dealing with John C. Calhoun's theories of state's rights and the development of prejudice in Colonial Virginia.

Articles dealing with the sources of research for congressional committee hearings and a discussion of the different approaches to political science are also included.

The social commentary section has articles on the gap between word and deed and the role of a professional political scientist in today's world.

Contributions, both financial and scholarly are being solicited by the editors for the next issue. Deadline for articles is Jan. 8.

The Maxwell Review is now on sale at the Corner Store and the Book Center on Marshall street. The price is 60 cents.

Case: A student living in Venezuela is faced with the alternative of leaving Dec. 17 or Dec. 26. Under the present vacation, a Dec. 17 departure would be impossible, with a Dec. 26 departure impractical.

Case: A student, typical of many, has the opportunity of making $100 working for the post office during the vacation. Unless vacation is changed, his job will go to someone else.

Case: A student living in San Francisco must leave before Dec. 23 if he is to be home before Christmas. However, if he cuts a class that day, his grade will be lowered.

3 WAA Groups to Present Skilled-Creative Program

Different groups of the Women's Athletic Association will combine student creativity and skill in a winter demonstration program at 7:30 p.m. today in the Women's Building.

Exhibitions will be presented by the modern dance, Syrafins, and gymnastics groups.

The dance group has presented classes conducted by professional dancers, which are opened to the Syracuse University student body and other schools.

Last spring the group performed "The Unicorn, the Gorgon and the Manticore" by Menotti for the Festival of Arts.

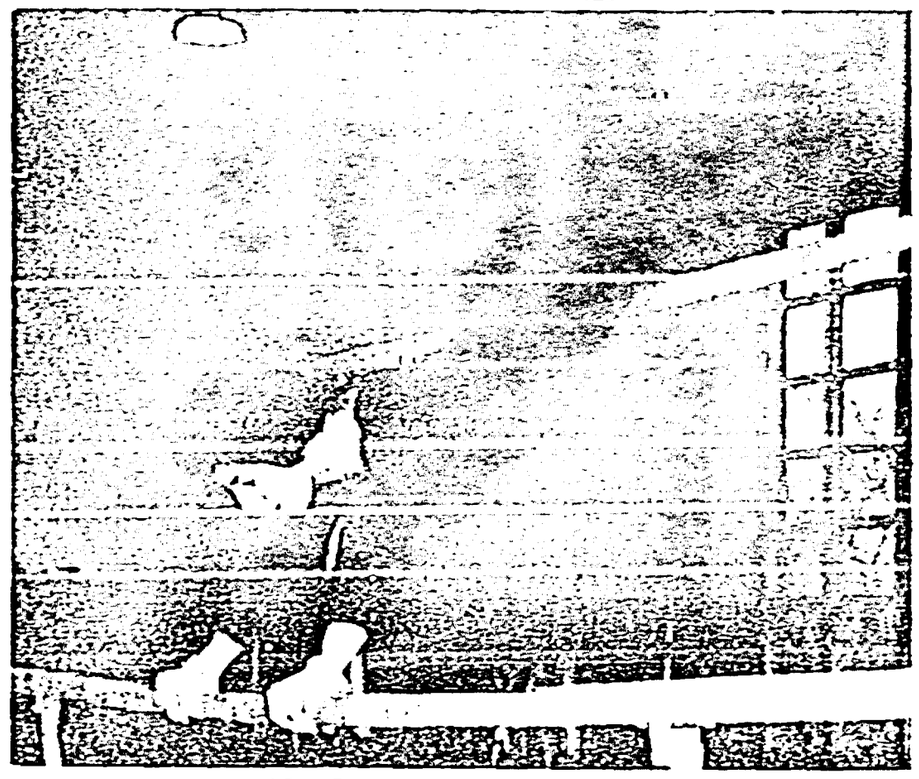
The Syrafins synchronized swimming group production will include their traditional Christmas candlestick number.

Such events as floor exercise, uneven and even parallel bars, trampoline, rings, side horse, balance beam and side horse are included in the gymnasts repertoire.

All the groups participate in work shops and sportsday events with other colleges.

They also give demonstrations and workshops in local high schools where members serve as judges for high school competition.

In January, the gymnasts will present a demonstration at the annual conference of the New York State Association for Health, Physical Education and Recreation which will be held in Syracuse.



Skill Development

Sophomore SUE LUIZZI practices on the uneven parallel bars in preparation for today's presentation with the Syrafins and Modern Dance Group.

AL Phi Gives $250 JFK Award to Coed

Alpha Lambda Phi sorority presented its first JFK Memorial Scholarship of $250 Monday night to a senior girl majoring in political science at Syracuse University.

Rosemary Eng, a resident of Peck Cottage, received the scholarship during a one hour ceremony. President Ellen Steinberg and Nancy LaPeter, JFK scholarship chairman, made the presentation.

Guests included Marjorie C. Smith, dean of women, Mrs. Elynor Erickson, assistant dean of women, and James Speegle, assistant director of financial aids.

Miss Eng, 21, from Cincinnati, Ohio, was selected for the scholarship from a number of applicants.

She has a dual major in both political science and journalism with a 1.8 cumulative average. Miss Eng is a member of Theta Sigma Phi, national journalism honorary, and Pi Sigma Alpha, political science honorary.

"I am very pleased," Miss Eng commented when she received the grant. "This will come in very handy in my thesis work and in studying for my masters degree."

The grant, which is awarded annually, is in memory of the late John F. Kennedy. The sisters of Alpha Lambda Phi raised money for the scholarship fund by selling candy.

UWF Formed At Syracuse

Students interested in world peace through world law now have a chance to learn more about it.

A chapter of the United World Federalists is forming at Syracuse University.

The long-range goal of the UWF is a federalist system of world government. The government would have powers to enforce universal total disarmament with proper safeguards under just law.

The UWF hopes such a government could be developed through revision of the United Nations Chapter, according to Howard Buckman, organizer of the Hill Chapter.

The first meeting of the UWF will be at 4 p.m. today, in 110 Maxwell Hall.

Those students interested who cannot attend, should contact Brickman, at ext. 3228 or 3229.

Parents

To the Editor:

The recent decision of the disciplinary board involves more than a strict interpretation of a set of archaic rules. We are taught that in any effective relationship there must be understanding, sensitivity and flexibility.

The administration had conducted its relations under the formula of 'in loco parentis" which assumes that students are not mature enough to take care of themselves and must constantly be watched and controlled.

The problem of making "the punishment fit the crime" is particularly acute when in fact what occurred was only a misunderstanding. If this administration is dedicated to building a great university, it will hardly do to dismiss those students most closely associated with the administrative goals.

I sincerely hope that the administration will reconsider this particular case, and will set precedent, rather than blindly follow precedent.

Robert Lubetsky
President, SUCE

Government

To the Editor:

The effectiveness and utility of Student Government (in fact, the need for its existence in the future), is presently being tested at Syracuse University. If Student Government is to persist, it must successfully pass this test or be reduced to an Administrative echo, with titular powers only, paying lip-service to a student body it supposedly represents.

Student Government has been described as an ineffectual creation of the administration which is merely designed to channel off the complaints and frustrations of the students. Such governments are organized towards minimizing interaction and creative policy changes by student leaders and administrators while maximizing the amount of confusion and energy wasted in the labyrinth of administrative red-tape.

Is this true at our school? The voices of the student body, Student Senate and student newspaper seem amazingly unanimous in their support of the contention that Christmas vacation be extended to an appropriate length. Government is designed to protect and maintain the rights and interests of those it represents. The claims of the students are legitimate, yet no satisfactory explanation is received from the administration.

Nor is a logical one to be expected. The one day travel extension for the people driving back from the Sugar Bowl seems to be a bad joke when you consider the travel difficulties the present set-up will create!

Unfortunately, it seems at times that our university has a bunch of rookies making some of its decisions. These present blunders are reminiscent of last year's whoppers: dean's list cheating questionaires; no cover for the mount's stops; no early dismissal after the assassination; the desegregation controversy; and several others.

But wait! Rookies become pros; they mature and develop, learning from past mistakes. But why not at S.U.? The real sign of a maturing beginner is one who can admit mistakes when he is wrong. Let us hope Syracuse can hit the pro ranks (not bly admit its mistake by extending the vacation to its normal length. Maybe then we can be proud of our school and confident that a strong and effective Student Government is not a myth at S.U.

Richard

To the Editor:

In reference to the recent actions of some of our deans: We should not be too harsh. They suffer as Richard III did when he said, "I am in so far in blood that sin will pluck on sin: Tear-falling pity dwells not in this eye."

Crime?

To the Editor:

Before this morning I was under the impression that suspension from an institution of higher learning was just punishment for plagiarism, moral offenses, stealing, throwing objects from windows, fighting, etc. I was genuinely surprised to find that there is one other offense which has established a precedent for this type of punishment at Syracuse University. I am referring, of course, to the recent decision made by the university disciplinary board concerning the "falsification of information" by four coeds.

The purpose of sign-out cards is to protect coeds. The efficiency of this protection was amply demonstrated by the celerity with which it was discovered that the young women had not arrived at their supposed destination. But their failure to arrive was not intended to pull the wool over anyone's eyes — except perhaps their dates at UConn.

Their abrupt, and admittedly foolish, change of plans was made on the spot, apparently in the interest of adventure — something out of the ordinary. The decision of the administration to suspend these women puts their infraction of the rules on a par with cheating, stealing, or worse.

Essentially their "crime" was not the falsification of university records, but a misuse of their standing overnight permission privileges. If they had called and made their change of plans known, no breach of rules would have been made.

The administration takes none of this into account. Instead it bases its decision on a thing called "precedent" — a pattern forged, not from analogous cases at all, but from offenses of much greater seriousness. I firmly believe that the disciplinary board should again reconsider the case. The punishment is far in advance of the crime — it in no way fits it.

If the decision of suspension stands the relationship between the student body and the administration will become even more anachronistic than it is now. I believe that it is about time for a cutting torch.

Machine

To the Editor:

YESTERDAY

Dear Mama:

Just wanted to drop you a line amidst all the roar about lengthening our vacation to tell you that I'll be coming home a little early.

I got suspended, ma babes! The disciplinary committee decided to usher in the yuletide with a new Christmas toy — a suspend the student machine. It works like this, ma. First you get hold of four impartial, modern, real swingin' administration heads. Let's call them the four angels.

Then you give them a case upon which they can bestow their most humble blessings. Then after weighing the merits of the case by their most sacred and unapproachable rules of law, you get the ol' bounce-a-roo.

This harmless toy is orange, sometimes yellow in color, can be found in any big-name eastern university located in Syracuse, N.Y. and costs only a potentially bright career or a possible education.

TODAY

A Syracuse University senior in the College of Criminal Arts was suspended today after he learned that he had been involved in a series of weird events.

Chuck Wagon, an off-and-on dean's list student, was given the heave-ho by the university circulating committee headed by Ferris Wheel. It seems that Chuck had told his R.A. that he was going down to the infirmary because he did not feel too well. On his way to the "student health center" he stopped off for a minute to mail a letter. The infirmary, having been warned in advance, became quite worried when he did not immediately appear and sent out a 10-state alarm calling for Dr. Kildare, Dr. Casey, the Nurses, the Interns, and of course Richard Kimble (who could not make it because he was hiding in the girl's dorm at Antioch College, looking for a one-armed man). Dirty old man!

After examining all the facts, the committee, seeing that it could inflict "serious and irreparable" harm if it suspended him, gave him the boot.

Upon leaving, Chuck remarked with no "malice aforethought", "Life is a banana. You can either hold it in your hand, devour it, or..."

TOMORROW

Syracuse University was placed under marshal law today until the push-button committee could locate the break in its "Dooms-student machine." Modern gestapo tactics will be used in the meantime, with an emphasis on results. It seems two students whom the university asked to make themselves scarce turned out to be educated, useful productive citizens anyway.

Anyway ma, why should we get out early for Ihristmas? We didn't even get a vacation for Chanukah.

Your suspended orange blossom,

CORNELL UPSETS SU

Hill Frosh Win

By KEN RUDNICK

Syracuse University's freshman basketball team took a while to unwind Wednesday night, but when the Tangerines finally found themselves, they rolled to a 71-62 victory over the Cornell frosh at Manley Field House.

Coach Roy Danforth's squad, disorganized on offense and giving the Big Red frosh easy baskets on defense, helped the visitors to a 14-2 lead before five minutes had elapsed in the first half.

When the Tangerines weren't missing shots from all over the floor, they were losing the ball on bad passes. Cornell's Peter Reynolds, a 6-5 forward, did most of the damage with deadly looks and jump shots from close range.

Reynolds wound up with 27 points, but SU's Tom Ringleman did a tough defensive job on him in the second half. When Ringleman wasn't busy containing the Big Red's key man, he was leading Syracuse's scorers with 19 points.

With the game getting out of hand, the Tangerines tightened up both offensively and defensively to stay within reach. Then, with Cornell in front, 32-22, SU reeled off 14 straight points to close out the first half.

The surge featured the scoring of Ringleman, Tom Bednark and George Hicker. Hicker hit well from the corner in scoring 16 points although he was hampered with a foot injury.

In the second half, the Tangerines never lost the lead taking in the waning moments of the first half. Cornell was unable to get the ball to Reynolds consistently, and the Big Red floor leader, Greg Morris, was unable to set up his team's offensive pattern.

Danforth felt the key to the Tangerine's victory was "our ability to keep them off the defensive boards. We outhustled them and kept in our offensive patterns," added the coach.

Halftime—Syracuse 36, Cornell 32.

By NEIL KERR

Two foul shots by Cornell's Jim Maglisceau with 19 seconds left gave the Big Red an upset 73-72 win over Syracuse in Manley Field House Wednesday night.

Moments before, the screaming crowd of 4,875 — largest ever in Manley — had seen SU fall behind, 71-65 with 1:31 remaining.

Then, Dave Bing poured in five clutch points following a Rich Duffy layup, and the Orange held a short-lived 72-71 lead.

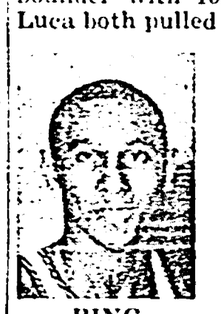
Following Maglisceau's clutch points Bing put up a desperation, off-balance shot with four seconds left, but it fell short.

Bing, who appeared fully recovered from his injury at Penn State, was the game's high scorer with 24 points. For Syracuse, Chuck Richards added 20 and Dick Ableman, playing the best game of his varsity career, contributed 13.

Cornell was led by Bob DeLuca's 22 markers and substitute Maglisceau's 14.

Cornell's edge at the foul line and in the rebounding department provided the difference as SU poured in three more buckets (29-26).

The Ithacans led the Orange in foul shooting, 21-14, and in total rebounds, 45-26. SU's Ableman was the game's high rebounder with 10. Bing and DeLuca both pulled down nine.



BING

Cornell darted ahead, 8-2, while its close pressing defense stymied the Orange. Syracuse stayed within range primarily with baskets and assists by Bing.

Cornell opened its lead to seven points (18-11) late in the first period, but SU tied the game at 24-all, then went ahead, 29-27, on six points by Richards.

The Orange clung to a slim lead for the remainder of the half and led, 41-38, at intermission.

In the second half both teams lost their big men on personal fouls. Cornell's Steve Cram left at 10:59 and was followed by SU's Richards, who fouled out with 7:05 remaining.

Cornell, led by DeLuca and sophomore Blaine Aston, gradually closed in on the Orange. The Red narrowed the gap to 54-52 and finally tied the game at 63-all with seven minutes left.

Then, on baskets by Aston and Maglisceau, Cornell pulled ahead to its biggest margin of the second half, 71-65.

The loss dropped Syracuse's record to 1-2. Cornell is now 2-0 following its opening win over Colgate.

This was the 77th game of the SU-Cornell series. The Orange lead it, 50-27.

Syracuse is scheduled to leave for Kentucky this Friday for games with the University of Kentucky on Saturday, Eastern Kentucky on Monday and Louisville Wednesday.

Lewis: 'For Awhile Press Was Licked'

By ART ROSSKY

"We had their press licked and then we went out of our pattern," lamented Hill coach Fred Lewis following the Orange's last minute 73-72 loss to Cornell Wednesday at Manley Field House.

"If we work our pattern right, Cram is at the other end of the court while we are working our plays because a man that size is not fast enough to recover in time.

Dave Bing's foul trouble — he sat out seven minutes after incurring his fourth infraction — helped to lessen the effectiveness of the patterns.

"With him in there we had a six-point lead," noted the coach. "His replacement made three bad passes and we lost our lead."

Coach Lewis disagreed with the call that set up the two winning free throws by the vistors' Jim Maglisceau.

"He was in there three seconds before being fouled," noted the coach. "All those moves that he made were done while he was in the lane."

Lewis had nothing but praise for his conquerors "Cornell is a real tough team. They're going to surprise a lot of teams before the season's over.

"They're tough to defend a-shooting. You can't use a zone against them because they shoot so well from the outside."

Lewis showed satisfaction with the play of Chuck Richards, his 6-8 center who poured in 20 markers before fouling out with 10 minutes to play.

But the coach was disappointed with the play of his backcourt performers. "We need another guard," said Lewis, sadly shaking his head.

Lewis found one bright spot in the defeat. "Perhaps now everyone will take us lightly," dryly noted the Piety coach.

Fred Lewis Talks Basketball

Syracuse basketball — past, present and future — was the talk of the evening Tuesday, as Orange cage coach Fred Lewis addressed SU students at Sadler Hall.

Lewis, entering his third season on Piety Hill, commented on his squad's performances against American University and Penn State.

He then reported on the Cornell Big Red, last night's hoop opponent at Manley.

Peering into the future, Lewis, a former star at Eastern Kentucky, cited problems the Orangemen will encounter on their trip into the bluegrass country. He noted that playing before jam-packed hometown crowds will offer Kentucky, Eastern and Louisville tremendous advantages.

Lewis also informed the students that if Syracuse should defeat Princeton in the opening round of the ECAC Holiday Festival in New York, the locals would meet up with the winner of Michigan-Manhattan. Michigan was rated the no. 1 team in the country according to pre-season polls.

Films of the American U. contest were shown, with Lewis commenting on various offensive and defensive patterns.

Cage Chatter

Syracuse basketball coach FRED LEWIS (right) chats with Hill students Tuesday night in Sadler Hall. Standing beside Lewis is STEVE DODGE, a graduate student and former varsity hoop star. The affair was sponsored by the first and third floors of Sadler.

Hill Fencers Host Hobart On Saturday

Syracuse University's fencing team, higaly rated in preseason forecasts, tangles with Hobart College in the winter opener Saturday afternoon.

The match is scheduled for 1 p.m. in the practice gym (upstairs) of Archbold.

Coach Alexander Dako welcomes back a number of veterans includng standouts Harvey Schuman, Gary Damast and Les Monostory.

The tenative starting teams:

MASS MEETING CALLED; COEDS WIN REPRIEVE

Deans Cancel Suspensions; 'Pro' Instead

By ANDREW PORTE
Editor-in-Chief

The administration changed its mind Thursday.

Yielding to student pressure, a university disciplinary committee reversed its earlier decision to suspend four coeds and granted the girls a choice bewteen suspension and strict disciplinary probation.

The coeds promptly accepted the terms of the probation.

The meeting and subsequent action of the disciplinary committee was taken in response to a request made Wednesday night by the executive branch of the Association of Women Students.

The terms of the probation, which will last until the completion of the spring semester, include complete withdrawal from extra-curricular activities, loss of university financial aid, withdrawal of car and driving privileges on campus, revocation of standing permissions and a required 50 hours of work service to the university during the spring semester. All these terms were proposed by AWS.

In addition, the disciplinary committee decided that each coed should meet individually with a member of the dean of women's staff monthly for the duration of the probation.

The girls had originally been

CORRALLO and STERN look expectantly at CHANCELLOR TOLLEY

Carl Demands Vacation Answer From Tolley By 3 P.M. Monday

By JESSE SMITH

Student Government President Carl Corrallo has called for a mass meeting of students at 3 p.m. Monday on the quad to hear the administration's decision on extending Christmas vacation.

Corrallo called out the campus after Student Senate tabulated overwhelming student support for the extension. A poll in living centers produced 6,030 votes for the schedule change and 228 against.

Corrallo said he will give Chancellor William P. Tolley the stack of petitions brought to the Thursday night senate meeting. Tolley is scheduled to return to campus today from New York City.

The SG president said he will ask the Chancellor to give his decision, in person or through a representative, to the student body assembled in front of Hendricks Chapel Monday.

"I don't want a mob, I don't want a riot," Corrallo said. "I want this to be a demonstration of student opinion in the highest sense of the word."

Student Senate voted unanimous support for the mass meeting. Speaker Robert (Robby) Stern appointed 30 senators as marshals to keep order.

"We are now sick and tired of an administration that is absolutely unresponsive to student opinion on this campus," Stern said. But he added, "We're glad they changed their decision on the suspension: they're heading in the right direction."

Stern asked for turnout of at least 4,000 students.

All others will have to sign out on their pink late permission cards. These were the curfews requested by the class, Joan Moore, vice president of the Association of Women Students, explained.

Miss Bergmann, a Waverly, Pa., liveral arts student lives in Flint Hall and was sponsored by Flint 1C.

A coed in the college of Liberal Arts, Miss Cardy comes from Saranac Lake. She is a resident of Haven Hall and was sponsored by Haven 7.

A Great Day For Students

Even in the Syracuse University administrative desert, there is an oasis.

Such was shown Thursday as a university disciplinary committee reversed itself and lessened the penalties imposed upon four coeds.

The decision is marvelous, for it shows that students and administration can deal on the same plan without a predetermined result.

And the groundwork developed in this decision must be continued. It must be continued forever.

We've all got to realize that the administration has acknowledged the position of the student on the campus. And we've got to work diligently to maintain and improve that position as our university develops.

The reason for the change in decision was student organization. Preliminary work was done at a Monday meeting of the disciplinary committee with six student representatives. Final work was done by the Association of Women Students at its Wednesday meeting.

Through organized student opinion, channelled to the proper administrators, the committee realized it could have reached a better decision.

When students unite for a common goal, and apply the proper pressure, it is very difficult for any administrative group to resist that pressure.

We now know the effect of organized student pressure, and we must never let ourselves become disorganized. A new era for student government of all kinds lies ahead.

Yes, Syracuse, there truly is a Santa Claus.

The Last Straw On Vacation

But just how benevolent is our Santa Claus?

There's another issue on this campus that merits immediate consideration — the Christmas recess.

We have endured enough administration hemming and hawing on the vacation question. Now is the time for an answer.

This answer must be more than a blatant "yes" or "no." If it is "no," it must carefully explain in understandable terms the reasons why the vacation cannot be extended.

And Dr. Tolley, in formulating any statement, must carefully consider the temperament of the student body. The sentiment of the senate meeting clearly shows the student body would not accept a "no" with passive nonchalance.

The reasons for a vacation extension keep piling up on our desk. Among the latest revelations is the fact that the football team will apparently be leaving the campus on Sunday, Dec. 20, thereby missing the final two-and-one-half days of classes.

We cannot emphasize enough, it seems, our belief that the first goal of this or any university is education. And if the university sees fit that a group of athletes not need the education imparted by those class days, then it cannot in good conscience say the student body as a whole needs the wisdom to be discovered in that time.

There can be no equality between athletics and education. One must be supreme, and Syracuse University must make a choice.

If an answer to the vacation extension question is to be of any meaning to those students who wuld have to alter travel plans, it must come Monday at the latest.

A key factor, as we expressed above, is organization. Every student on this campus has an obligation to be on the quad at 3 p.m. Monday, if at all possible, to express their pleasure or displeasure with any administrative decision.

The crowd must be orderly and must listen objectively to whatever decision is delivered. As a student meeting, it must then orderly decide what to do if it is dissatisfied with the decision.

We have shown that we care about Syracuse University. Syracuse University must now show it cares about us.

Tiger at the Gates

Through an Image Cynically

By Dan Ritey

Administrative deadheads who never expected anything like the recent laudable display of united students and leaders to happen here now see it, in actuality, happening, and cry out in a hurt manner, "did you do this?"

And some of us might be able to answer, as Picasso did to the Nazi officer, "no, you did this with your policies."

For no other comparison, indeed, explanation can be found for the administration's recent activities and, above that, the far more ominous mental attitude which they've created in the student body because of their mismanagement.

When responsible student leaders (and, surprisingly enough, even class and SG presidents who must have had pins stuck into them) all unite to react with hostility and outright rage at the administration's fumbling actions, then you know something, somewhere must be amiss.

Given the reactionary, appalling and downright stupid stands taken by red-brick building people in recent matters, little else could be expected, we think, from misguided and unknowledgable people such as these—the proverbial stubborn mule compares favorably.

SU's administration is, in a word, stagnant.

Stagnant with ideas that cannot and should never be applied to our century and society.

Stagnant with ingrained prejudices and fears which manifest themselves in denials of progress, change and a new generation in general.

And stagnant with the lip service paid to the fallacy of our university's possible greatness and to its spokesmen who live far out in right field, and the dogged devotion to precedent, conformity and the holy of holies, the damned university image.

All the world's a stage. But it's too bad that people cannot see the tarnish behind SU's glossy image until it's too late—incoming freshmen never know about the misdealings of a mediocre university administration on the threshold of degenerating into a total police state.

We already are familiar with the shams of editorial freedom, university benevolence toward its students and the maintenance of integrity and equal standards for everyone at Piety; spare us any further details.

But now comes the worst sham: that of pretending that the students are adults and capable of decision-making, when, in reality, we know that the administration neither believes this nor ever (we guess) expects to act in such a manner as to make us believe it ourselves.

The camel has been carrying too many straws around on his back for too long.

And now it is waking up and finding out that its potential to act and be felt is greater than the hypotists in the administration would want us to believe.

Recent efforts, climaxed by Thursday's senate meeting and united protests, may herald a rebirth of student spirit.

Tragically, the price of this awakening on the part of (still) precious few students has a high price: that of disillusionment.

Disillusionment with the university's attempts to breastfeed us during our formative and pre-adult years.

Disillusionment with such a lack of academician and student responsibility and awareness that an administration like the one that runs this place is allowed to operate in the archaic manner that it does.

Some of us got disillusioned half-way through our careers here: disciplinary double standards and administrative cheating saw to that.

Some of us, however, took longer to reach the inevitable state that had to be reached by any thoughtful student worthy of the title. Case in point is the DO editor—only as of this term has his disenchantment with the hands that spoon-feed us been enough to result in a recent series of incisive, justified editorials laced with a cynicism that has been fostered in him —and others who think here —by the same ministry of fear.

That we have to be cynics and disenchanted people in our years of development and education at SU is, evidently, the price that some of us must pay here.

The wages of fear are distrust and cynicism.

Aren't they rather high?

Fittingly enough, the high-priced nursing system at SU has produced a sickening majority of students who shine best at doing or thinking nothing.

A system which produces student apathy to some of the most detestable actiions that any adult body can perpetrate.

A system in which such an adult body can flourish.

A system which allows a dean of men to shrug and blandly soothe a DO editor by noting that if administrative threats regarding publication of material in the newspaper were ignored with no reprisals, than what was he upset about anyway? (Nothing, dean, apparently threats are an accepted part of life here).

A system which glorifies

Burleigh. All Crouse concerts are free and campus parking is available.

REGENT-Next programs in the concert series for children will be held this weekend with two films at the Regent Theater. Special rates for children and adults are in effect for the Concert Series for Children. Tickets are available at the Regent box office.

EVERSON MUSEUM-The Marlboro Trio will appear at 8:30 p.m. Saturday at the Everson Museum of Art. BOAR'S HEAD THEATER - Reader's Theater will present Stephen Vincent Benet's epic poem "John Brown's Body" at 8 p.m. today and tomorrow and at 3 p.m. Sunday at the Boar's Head Theater in Machinery Hall.

ECKEL - "Pajama Party" or what happens at an SU unregistered function is currently throbbing its way into the hearts of American teenagers and potential college students this week. Starring the epitome of fresh young wholesome Annette Funicello, and shining, in his own well-scrubbed way, Frankie Avalon. Alogical sequence to "Bikini Beach," it appears that the children are following along in logical progression. Educational.

Co-feature is "Voyage to the End of the Universe." In olden days, everyone used to believe that the earth was flat. Then, along came movie producers, and had such a great old time showing Martians, inter-Planetary wars and such-like that the whole theory was changed. "Voyage to the End of the Universe," one of those films that changed explorer's concepts, stars Godzilla, "The Thing," "It," "Mr. Myzypk and Ming."

"Fresh, young and nauseating" at 7:16 p.m., "New Theory" at 8:45 p.m.

PARAMOUNT-"Woman of Straw" or the feminized version of "The Wizard of Oz" is skipping down the yellow-brick road to the Salt City. This is obviously one to thrill the enmatch? Co-feature is "Invitation to a Gun Fighter" is what Liberty Valance gave on his death bed. Starring Johnny Mack Brown, Hoot Gibson and Tim Holt (we wish) the film is the second in a series of Grade B movies appearing in Syracuse. "Match" at 8:10 p.m., "Don't Take Your Guns To Town" at 10:12 p.m.

SHOPPINGTOWN - "Send Me No Flowers" for the fifth straight week is playing. With Rock Hudson, Doris Day and Tony Randall. From the book of the same name by Jean Kerr, entitled "Please Don't Pick the Daisies." The film describes the dilemma of woman whose giant sunflower grows to ten feet proportions. Should I cop it down? Is mercy killing justified? For one woman's decision, stay tuned same time, same station . . . "To Chop or not to . . . at 7:30 p.m. and 9:30 p.m.

RKO KEITH'S - Somehow we get the feeling that our jaded youth was misspent. While we were shrieking and crying for Elvis Presley, the "thrill generation" as depicted in Keit'h's new offering. "Malamondo" was searching for erogenous parties (whatever that means) death-defying games and miscegenetic unions.

Filmed in many countries of modern-day Europe, the film's subject is "Goodness, gracious, what is youth coming to." Co-feature is "Two Living and One Dead," perhaps the most mystifying film title ever used. See it and tell us what it's about. "Thrills, Spills and Sundry and Various Other Things" at 10:25 p.m., "Two" at 8:45 p.m.

RIVIERA-Another excellent double-bill this weekend. "The Servant" starring Dick Bogarde and Srar Miles is a study in psychological corruption in the relationship between a servant and his master. Co-feature is the comedy "Suddenly, it's Murder" with Anna Magnani and Alberto Sordi. "Servant" at 10:15 p.m., "Suddenly" at 8:40 p.m.

Goldsand Concert

by M. Cohn

The pianist Robert Goldsand returned to Syracuse, Wednesday night, to give a recital of music ranging from Mozart to Prokofieff. He has often played here in the past, and at this concert, he did not fail to make use of his strong wrists and digital virtuousity that have no doubt endeared him to our local audiences.

Mozart's "Sonata in D major K.576," was the first item on the program, and I, for one, wasn't completely happy with the performance it received. The first movement lacked grace and real flexibility. For all of Goldsand's fluency, he did not manage to make the movement come alive.

I did, however, like the slow movement; it was played with true sensitivity. On the other hand the last movement offended me. It received nothing more than a cold and perfunctory rendition. This is Mozart's last and, perhaps his greatest piano sonata, and I think it contains more fantasy and warmth than Goldsand was able to find.

Next Goldsand chose twelve of Chopin's etudes, works that are probably more suited to his gifts. Playing in "the grand style" he drew a beautiful and very sonorous tone from the piano. In some of the etudes, he showed the greatesst delicacy and, in others, he came forth with thundering fortissimos. All this made for a succesful and interesting performance of these popular works.

Prokofieff's "Sonata op. 28 no. 3" opened the second part brusque style of playing suited the work well, and I enjoyed his rendition very much.

The same can be said for the two Ravel works that followed. Both the "Sonatine" and the "Jeux d'eau" sounded very pretty and fresh.

The "piece de resistance' came last. Strauss' "Fledermaus" in a symphonic metamorphosis by Godovsky. This vulgar and ugly work consists of a series of hideous distortions of the melodies from Strauss' operetta. Goldsand played it for all it was worth. The audience loved it, and I wonder if perhaps I am too young to enjoy this sort of thing.

LETTERS

Again

To the Editor:

The DellPlain Dorm Council, in cooperation with the Student Government, is in favor of the proposal that deals with the dismissal of classes on Dec. 18 for Christmas vacation.

The main argument in favor of this proposal stems from a policy held by university administration boasts that we are a geographically distributed student body, and continously points out the many advantages available to all students resulting from this.

However, by their seemingly thoughtless scheduling of the Christmas vacation, this same administration has certainly overshadowed any advantages, due to geographic distribution, to the non-Syracuse student who, by some trick of nature, has his Dec. 23 flight cancelled because of snow or other undesirable weather conditions similar to those experienced last weekend by Syracusans, and cannot arrive home by Christmas Day.

Such being the case, we feel that it would be to the general welfare and safe-being of the students who live in various sections of the country, to dismiss school at an earlier date than Dec. 23.

This would allow the majority of the students who live a distance from Syracuse to arrive home in time to shop, rest and enjoy Christmas day rather than being too travel-worn to enjoy the holiday, or worse yet to suffer mishap because of haste.

We are hoping the administration will reconsider the dismissal date and trust that this letter will in some way help bring a little more light on the situation as it stands.

Herb Korthoff
President, DellPlain
Dorm Council

Knicks, 76ers at Memorial

The Philadelphia 76ers, currently the hottest team in the National Basketball Association, will make their Syracuse debut against the perennial underdog, and unpredictable, New York Knickerbockers Sunday night at 8:30 p.m. at the War Memorial.

It will mark the first of five local appearances for coach Dolph Schayes' squad. The 76ers have won eight of their last 11 games and stand third in the Eastern Division behind Boston and Cincinnati.

The Philadelphians feature rookie Lucious Jackson, former Olympic standout. In the backcourt are veterans Hal Greer, Larry Costello, Al Bianchi and Paul Neumann. Neumann currently paces the league with the highest field goal shooting percentage.

The frontcourt will include Johnny Kerr, Connie Dierking, Chet Walker, Dave Gambee and Ben Warley.

The Knickerbockers present a lineup with some new faces in the NBA. Most impressive rookie is Willie Reed of Grambling College, who has been averaging over 20 point a game. Other fine freshmen are Howard Komives, Emmette Bryant and Jim Barnes.

Also starring for the New Yorkers are Lenny Chappell, Johnny Egan, Bob Boozer and Tom Hoover. Of course there will be some veterans returning, with Tom Gola, Dave Budd and Johnny Green on hand.

the implied threat and the soothing lullaby of in loco parentis while also seeking to isolate and hound the out-spoken students who dare rock their conservative boat.

And yet despite the oppressive existence of this monolith, student leaders (all of them) have united at last behind a couple of very deserving causes.

While a united, determined student leadership may come as a shock to the administration we, as students, cannot, allow ourselves to be sur-prised into inactivity.

On the contrary, possibly for the first time a united student body is on the threshhold of accomplishing things that will remove part of its stigma of apathy; leave us not throw this chance away.

And to a why part of the opening question, we might answer, "because we want to justify ourselves TO ourselves."

Ice House

If you cannot get home in time for Christmas, at least you can enjoy the beauty of the traditional Delta Kappa Epsilon ice house. Here the brothers of DKE set up the blocks for the structure which was built Tuesday on the lawn in front of the fraternity house.

Deke Tradition

Ice Chapel Signals Holiday

Christmas at Syracuse University would not be complete without the traditional ice chapel on the lawn of Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity.

The ice chapel, constructed Tuesday by the brothers using more than 8,400 pounds of block ice, is illuminated at night with blue lights. Located opposite Lyman Hall, the ice chapel is in front of the "Deke" chapter house at Walnut avenue and University place.

According to the president o the house, John Ventre, buildi the ice chapel has been "D e k e" Christmas traditio since 1907.

Brothers of the house als built a larger ice chapel on t grounds of WSYR Radio-TV center. Twelve feet long, eight feet wide and nine feet tall, this chapel took about 10 hours to build and used 14,000 pounds of block ice. Each block weighs 100 pounds.

A paper mache model was built to scale and used as a guide in the construction of the structure. Plywood roof and twin steeples complete the building.

Coeds' Reprieve: 'Step in Right Direction'

Student leaders reacted favorably to a decision by the disciplinary committee with regard to the plight of four Syracuse University coeds who were given a more lenient penalty Thursday.

Student Government President Carl Corrallo said:

"This is a significant move in the progress of student-administration relations. Long hours have paid off, and an indication has been shown that the students' opinion is important enough to affect a situation like this.

"The student body should be quite proud of this. It's historic."

SG Vice President Nancy Perkins said:

"I'm extremely happy with the decision because it is a step forward in relations between administrators and students, and it shows that by discussion and good communications things can be accomplished for the good of all concerned."

Student Court Chief Justice Frank Richmond said:

"The modification of the suspension decision can only be received most favorably. I feel that the student leaders involved and the administration could finally be establishing a rapport that so long has been lacking.

"The final decision is a large and historic step in the right direction. For a short time at least, I feel very proud of my university, very happy that when people care enough some good has to come of it.

Junior class President William Weller said:

"I believe we should all commend the administrative committee for its re-evaluation of its disciplinary action and the resulting decision in this case.

"Tuesday evening the junior class executive council drafted a statement requesting reconsideration and proposing steps similar to those suggested by the Association of Women Students Executive Board. The announcement given Thursday, I am sure, is viewed favorably by those who supported that statement.

"United Student Government action is also playing a favorable role in the present vacation issue. There is, I believe, some evidence here of the advantages of united action through established channels of communication. Student Government is clearly seen as fulfilling its primary duti.. - being the voice of the stude..s."

probation for the remainder of the present semester, but were to be suspended for the spring semester.

The four had signed out with University of Connecticut Nov. 20, but changed their minds enroute and travelled to the Syracuse - West Virginia football game in Morgantown, W. Va.

However, the four neglected to call the university to inform them of the change in plans, as required by regulations.

The rules define such action as falsification of information on university records, for which suspension is one possible punishment.

Sitting on the disciplinary committee were Marjorie C. Smith, dean of women; Elynor J. Erickson, assistant dean of women; Eric H. Faigle, vice president and dean of liberal arts; and associate Prof. Charles R. Dibble, assistant to the dean of the School of Art. Dibble sat on the board because three of the coeds are enrolled in the art school.

Commenting on the decision, Dean Smith said, "Our society is founded on the privelege of appeal. The decision was a reflection of the fact that every case must be looked at individually and seriously.

"The individual student is very important to us. It is important for student opinion to be reflected."

AWS, in a statement Thursday, said, "We felt it our duty as the governing body of the women students to appeal to the dean of women on behalf of these girls."

In addition, the dean of women's office revealed it has invited AWS representatives to confer with them to review overnight permission policies and procedures for 1965-66, along with a plan for better communicating them to women students.

Parking, Food

2 Sure-Fire University Headaches

This is the fourth in a series by DO administration reporter Carol Rubright concerning university committees. These little-known boards, manned by both administrators and students, represent a liaison between these often-opposed factions. Today's story concerns the parking and food service committees.

By CAROL RUBRIGHT
Junior Editor

"What we try to do is keep one jump ahead of absolute chaos in parking," explained the chairman of the university parking committee Rowland P. Graeber last week.

This is, in essence, what the parking committee does in carrying out its function of overseeing all parking areas in the university and acting as a court to review in parking cases for the staff and faculty.

The committee, however, is not a policy-making one. It 'Keeps tabs on the parking situation" and then makes proposals about it to the University Senate. The next revision in rules is expected to be made early next semester.

One proposal is that the university extend its parking area to encompass the blocks between Harrison street on the north, Ostrom avenue on the the south and Route 81 (when it is completed) on the west.

It has also suggested that it be illegal for anyone (except in cases of sickness) to park his car anywhere other than his assigned parking lot.

These suggestions were made because of the increasing number of students who own cars and the diminishing number of available parking spaces.

"As soon as the digging starts to move the steam pipes for the new physics building (to be located in front of Archbold Gymnasium)," Graeber lamented, "we'll lose almost 200 parking spaces."

Since 1958, the number of cars on campus has increased almost 100 percent.

There are eight members in the Parking Committee. One is head of Student Court's traffic commission, Walter Beardslee. This is the second year in which a student has been allowed on the committee.

Other members are Graeber university architect Noreda A. Rotunno; director of safety and security Robert D. Flaherty and his assistant Leo J. Graszler Mrs. Margaret E. Golder, also of security; vice presidential assistant James V. LaTorre and Milton R. Howard of the physical education department.

The committee meets once every two weeks but can be called together more often in times of need.

In addition to making proposals to alleviate the parking bind, the committee also acts as a court of review before which staff and faculty members can appeal their fines.

Parking has been a headache for the university since the war years. A more chronic problem is one which has plagued the campus since its earliest years—food service.

In spite of boycotts, fires and thrusts of the "Sword" food service manages to carry on—usually at a profit.

In order to improve food service - student relationships a group known as the Food Service Committee has been in existence almost as long as food service itself.

Actually there are three food service committes. The first is the original dormitory dining hall committee in which students, elected from each living center, meet with food service representatives and vice president and treasurer Francis A. Wingate to discuss preparation of food, cleanliness of cutlery, dining hall atmosphere, lengths of lines and so forth.

It is supposed to meet once every two weeks but usually convenes only "when there is a need," according to Wingate.

The second group to attempt to improve food service is called the menu committee. This committee was founded last March following a boycott of the dining halls by almost 72 per cent of the student body in February.

This committee, composed of one student from each dining hall, meets every two weeks with one or more representatives of food service and a representative of the dean of men's and dean of women's offices.

Its function is to review the menus for the next two-week period and suggest improvements and revisions. It is more than likely responsible for tonight's lobster dinner.

The third committee is, so far, only theoretical. In fact, no one seems to know its name. It was proposed last by Student Government as a sort of summit committee which would deal with over-all problems, and by manned by students, Wingate and Eric H. Faigle, university vice president and dean of liberal arts.

Design Committee To Make Decision On Library Site

By PAT TRACEY
Junior Editor

Another step will be taken in the plans for a new Syracuse University library when the Design Committee of The Board of Trustees meets today to select a site for the structure.

Daniel P. Bergen, assistant dean of the School of Library Science, said the library will present a case for the location they prefer and, "We hope and expect it will be selected."

The location they have chosen is the block bounded by College place, Euclid avenue, University place and Comstock avenue.

Chancellor William P. Tolley told the Board of Trustees at its Nov. 16 meeting that he is hoping for a 1965 ground breaking for the complex—tentatively planned as a connected three building unit.

Bergen described the plan as "three in one," but said the final design will depend on the amount of funds the university can make available.

To further the building project, the board of directors of the Syracuse University Parents Assn. has announced that the group will work towards a goal of $750,000 for the undergraduate portion of the library.

The other two portions are planned for a graduate section and a section for rare books and manuscripts collections.

Commenting on Student Government's unified drive to gain an extension, Corrallo said, "It is possibly the most organized movement I've seen on this campus in four years."

Stern predicted further action if the administration's answer is negative.

The senate session in Maxwell Auditorium also heard the report of its special investigating committee which looked into alleged procedural errors in the Oct. 28 meeting.

The report cleared Stern of four charges leveled against him by Edward Luft of Acacia fraternity, and suggested minor charge in future procedures.

Later, Stern denounced the administration's refusal to allow campus sale of the "Sword of Damocles," an off-campus magazine published by students.

Stern hinted at senate action if future sales of the 'Sword' are prohibited.

Norman Balabanian, professor of electrical engineering, also spoke before the senate, advocating abolition of the House Un-American Activities Committee (HUAC).

Stern referred the matter to committee for study of possible action at next week's meeting. A national drive is under way to abolish HUAC when Congress convenes Jan. 4.

Five Selected For Sigma Chi Queen Finals

The Sigma Chi fraternity has chosen five Syracuse coeds as finalists in their search for a new Sweetheart of Sigma Chi.

Susan Brummer (Alpha Epsilon Phi), Carol Bender (Delta Gamma), Sandra McFarland (Alpha Gamma Delta), Karen Erickson (Kappa Alpha Theta) and Martha Watt (Delta Delta Delta) are contestants for the position of official hostess for the fraternity.

The present sweetheart, the former Dottie Grover, was selected in 1949. At this time the requirements included blonde hair and blue eyes, befitting the coed they describe in their national fraternity song, "The Sweetheart of Sigma Chi."

Today, the major requirement for the honor is a sparkling personality. She must be at least a sophomore with a minimum 1.0 cumulative average. In addition, she must be active in campus activities.

Applications were sent out to 28 sororities and large living centers. The first vote was cast by the dorms and sororities. Further selection is being conducted by a reviewing board of five Sigma Chi's.

The new sweetheart will be selected today at the Sigma Chi Sweetheart Ball at the Castaways Restaurant.

MAGIC SKIN FOR SPACE METALS

You've seen an apple turn brown where the skin was peeled off. Oxidation is the culprit.

Oxidation also attacks and damages metal parts in space vehicles and jet engines subject to high temperatures.

GT&E scientists tackled this problem, and developed a remarkable new coating that beats the heat and oxidation. It acts as a protective skin similar to the apple peel.

Innovations such as this are fostered by an extensive research program conducted by General Telephone & Electronics Laboratories. And in part are responsible for the dynamic and continued growth of GT&E.

If research is one of your goals in life, you might want to know more about General Telephone & Electronics. Full information is available from your Campus Placement Director. Or write to General Telephone & Electronics Laboratories, 730 Third Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10017.

Oglesby to Perform

Hill Gymnasts Meet Navy

By BOB KRENGEL

The Syracuse University gymnastics team will try to open its season with a big victory over Navy this weekend when it journeys to Annapolis for a meet with the Middies.

Talented captain and NCAA champion Sid Oglesby will lead the Orangemen.

Coach Paul Romeo is hopeful for success, but said that injuries to his squad could do a lot of damage in wrecking the Piety attack. "Navy will be good," he said, "while our team has plenty of muscle spasms."

"If we get firsts and seconds or thirds we can win," he explained. "But if we just get a few firsts we can't win it." Romeo believed that if his new men came through and the returning lettermen were up to par, SU would be in good shape."

Senior Oglesby will be in four of the events. A new feature of Eastern gymnastics is the "all-around event." In this competition, one man from each team will perform in all six standard Olympic events. For the Orange, Allan Kevles will be entered, despite some muscle trouble.

Although the lineup seems impressive, Romeo emphasized the two factors of injuries and being on the road that will work against his gymnasts.

The players were not making any guesses about the outcome either. Oglesby commented, "I can't predict anything because this is the first meet of the year. We're all a little out of shape and we'll just have to see how things develop."

The newest event in gymnastics is the trampoline Terry Orlick, John Dies and Chan Rudd will participate in this competition. Other events and individuals in the meet for SU are as follows:

Side horse-Oglesby, Kevles and Spike Meury.

Horizontal bars - John Steffney, Kevles and Dean Bellavia.

Long horse vault-Bellavia and Oglesby.

Parallel bars-Jim Barish or Ben Hurd, Steffney and Oglesby.

Still rings-Ray Walters, Ted Edwards and Steffney.

Floor exercise-Orlick, Kevles and Oglesby.

RIT Skaters Rally To Dump SU, 7-3

Before a capacity crowd of some 1,200 fans, the Syracuse University hockey team lost the season's opener to Rochester Institute of Technology, 7-3, Wednesday night.

The game, played on the campus, was marred by numerous penalties and several fights.

The loss was a frustrating one for Syracuse, since the Orangemen held a 3-2 lead going into the last period. In the first stanza of play the two teams battled to a scoreless tie.

In the disasterous third period, RIT blasted five goals past Orange goalie Wayne Sanderson. In all, Sanderson was called upon to make 38 saves, while his RIT counterpart made only 26.

Starring for the victors was left wing Bill Sweeney and center Barry Wharity. Sweeney scored three times for the hat trick, while Wharity dumped two goals into the Syracuse net.

Responsible for all three of Syracuse goals was the hard skating line of Thorny Williams, Mike Johnson, and Roy Fitzgerald.

Williams, a right wing, scored twice with assists from both Fitzgerald and Johnson. The third Syracuse tally was credited to Fitzgerald, who scored on a beautiful blueline pass from Williams.

After the game Syracuse coach Jake Curran gave much credit to the Orange defense. Capt. Bill McGruther performed extremely well and blocked many RIT shots on goal.

Defensemen Rick Sparrow and Bill Oakly also skated well. Until the final period they successfully stopped numerous three-on-two breakaways by the speedy RIT fowards.

The next game for the Syracuse sextet is Saturday night at the State Fair Coliseum against Oswego State. The encounter will mark the season's first home game, with faceoff at 5:30 p.m.

Syracuse.s basketball squad leaves Syracuse today tor three tough games with a trio of Kentucky clubs The Orange's second road trip features games with Kentucky Saturday, Eastern Kentucky Monday and Louisville Wednesday.

Coach Fred Lewis plans a change in his opening lineup against Kentucky. "We're going with our height this time," he said. "We'll use Richards, Dean, Ableman, Bing and Boeheim."

"Dick (Ableman) did a tremendous job for us against Cornell," he added. "Not only did he rebound well, but he also did a real good defensive job on Munson."

Garry Munson, who led the Cornellians with 25 points against Colgate last week, went scoreless playing Syracuse Wednesday night.

Ableman, described as "a real fine shooter," by his coach, chipped in with 13 points against the Big Red.

Lewis was visibly upset by the fact that SU threw the ball away 27 times against the visitors from Ithaca.

After three games, co-captain Dave Bing leads Orange scorers with 55 points for an 18.3 average. SU's other captain, Chuck Richards, has talllied 52 markers and 17.3 per game. Rich Duffy and Jim Boeheim trail with 28 and 26 points respectively.

SU is now 1-2 with losses to Penn State and Cornell following its opening game trouncing of American University. But Lewis boys may be hard-pressed to get back in the win column at the expense of the Kentucky teams.

Coach Adolph Rupp's Wildcats have won a fantastic 81 per cent of their games during his 34 years as head coach and this season's squad is expected to continue this success.

So far this season Kentucky has won two games while dropping one. Rupp's squad has downed Iowa, 85-77, and Iowa State, 100-74, but lost an 82-67 game to North Carolina Monday.

The Wildcats' starting unit is relatively short—it averages 6-2½—but, as always, Kentucky has a well-drilled team of sharpshooters.

Pat Riley, a 6-3 sophomore guard, was the team's leading scorer after two games. Riley, incidentally, is from Schenectady's Linton High where he came within four points of breaking Barry Kramer's career scoring record.

Randy Embry (5-11), Lou Dampier (6-0), Larry Conley (6-3), and John Adams, the 6-6 center, are the other Kentucky starters. Against Iowa State Wednesday night, Dampier poured in 37 points, Riley 18.

Conley is considered the number one returnee from last year's squad which compiled a 21-6 record. He has been described as an exceptional ball handler and floor leader who never stops hustling.

Saturday's game will be played in Memorial Coliseum (capacity 11,700) in Lexington. This arena was completely sold out for all Kentucky's home games prior to the opening of the season.

LEW ROBERTS
. . . grappling at 177 pounds

By KEN RUDNICK

The Syracuse University wrestling team can't afford to work its way gradually into peak form beginning with the season's first match Saturday afternoon at Manley Field House.

The Orange matmen will meet Lehigh, Eastern Inter-Collegiate Wrestling Association champion in the winter of 1963-'64 and overwhelming favorite to repeat this year, at 2:30 p.m.

It will take a superior effort by Syracuse to upset the Engineers, who opened last Saturday with a 28-5 rout of defending Ivy League champion Cornell.

Each squad will rely heavily on sophomores. The tentative starting lineups show five rookies for SU and six sophs who are moving up from a Lehigh freshman team which was rated best in the East last winter.

Orange coach Ed Carlin is juggling the lineup he used last Saturday in the Coast Guard Invitational Tournament by advancing his outstanding sophomore, Tom Schlendorf, to the 191-pound class.

Schlendorf defeated Gene Franzen of Navy to take the 177-pound title at New London. The Orangemen did not have a 191-pound entry in the tourney.

SU football coach Ben Schwartzwalder has released sophomore Joe Radivoy, a substitute guard, to compete against Lehigh in the unlimited class.

Lew Roberts, one of the two senior starters, will replace Schlendorf at 177. Roberts is moving up from the 167-pound where he placed third last weekend.

The other sophomores who will be trying to ambush the Engineers are Lew Manns (123-pound class), Kerin Raftery (137) and Kurt Kuppinger (167).

Senior Terry Haise (130) and juniors Dick Zebuhr (147) and George Rogers (157) are Carlin's other starters.

Rated the best performer on a team which Lehigh coach Gerry Leeman feels might be even stronger than last year's is heavyweight John Hengwarth, a senior who finished third in the Eastern championships last spring.

The Engineers' only loss against Cornell was suffered by a sophomore, Mort McClennan (191), but McClennan is still striving for peak form after the football season.

The rest of Lehigh's bumper crop of young lions all came through against Big Red. Mike Caruso (123), Joe Peritore (130), Glenn Amsbaugh (147), Bob Hartenstein (157) and Joe Caprio (177) chalked up victories in their first varsity appearance.

Sophomores have replaced four of the seven men returning from the team which took the Eastern title last season in the starting lineup.

Leeman's other first team grapplers are junior Bill Stuart (137) and senior Harley Ferguson (167).

The Orangemen have met Lehigh 35 times and the Engineers, with a history of wrestling success, have won 32 of the matches, including a 22-11 victory last winter.

Chancellor Flint Dies at 86

Dr. Charles Wesley Flint, 86, fifth Chancellor of Syracuse University, died Saturday afternoon in Binghamton. His death followed a long illness.

Dr. Flint became Chancellor in 1922, heading the university until 1936, when he was elected a bishop of the Methodist Church, assigned to Atlanta, Ga. He later returned to Syracuse in 1939 as bishop for the Syracuse area of the Methodist Church, a position he held until 1944.

Services will be at 2 p. m. Tuesday in the Tabernacle Methodist Church, Binghamton. Burial will be in Oakwood Cemetery, adjoining the SU campus. Committal services will be at 10:30 a. m. Wednesday at the cemetery.

Dr. Flint was the university's only living former Chancellor, and he has been remembered as one of Syracuse University's finest administrators.

When he became Chancellor, Dr. Flint was faced with the largest current expense deficit ever incurred by an American university. During his tenure, he paid off the debts, while at the same time rehabilitating campus buildings, improving the faculty and increasing the university's academic prestige and financial endowment.

DR. CHARLES WESLEY FLINT, 1878-1964

Dr. Flint's term as Chancellor saw the founding of the Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs and the School of Journalism, the expansion of the School of Education and the construction of the medical college, Maxwell Hall and Hendricks Chapel.

His guidance led to stricter entrance requirements, which Dr. Flint explained were for "proper inclusion, not capricious exclusion."

Dr. Flint was also known for his sympathetic attitude toward student self-government and his opposition to the subsidizing of athletes.

As Chancellor, Dr. Flint often spoke out on issues of the times. He opposed rising pacifist movements of students aimed at the abolition of the Reserve Officers Training Corps in the middle twenties. He also made known his support for the forces of prohibition in the state.

STUDENTS MASS TODAY; BIG TURNOUT HOPED

Leaders to Meet with Chancellor To Present Vacation Viewpoint

By JESSE SMITH

Student leaders are hoping Chancellor William P. Tolley changes his mind today, following his refusal Friday to grant an earlier Christmas recess.

Student Government President Carl Corrallo has called a mass meeting at 3 p.m. today on the quad. He plans to call for further student action if no change comes today.

Corrallo met with the Chancellor Friday morning and gave him a pile of petitions from the students, asking an extension of the scheduled 12½ day vacation.

Students should dress well and act orderly at the meeting, Corrallo said. He asked women to wear skirts and men to wear coats and ties if possible.

Tolley turned down the plea, Corrallo said. Corrallo originally wanted Tolley to consider the students' request over the weekend. Tolley was out of town most of last week, arriving on campus Thursday night.

Corrallo quoted the Chancellor as saying it would be a "dangerous precedent" to yield to student pressure, and that those students desiring to get home earlier for Christmas

(See Leaders, page 11)

Students Request Orderly Meeting

Student leaders have asked students to remain quiet, orderly and non-violent during today's mass meeting on the quad.

"Students may tend to get carried away with a new experience," commented Robert Lubetsky, president of the Syracuset University Committee on Equality (SUCE) Friday, "and it should be made clear to them there should be no noise what-so-ever."

"The marshals appointed by Robert (Robby) Stern should learn the rules of conduct and non-violence for such a demonstration," Lubetsky added.

These marshals should either sit on the chapel steps, form a ring around the quad, or wander through the crowds in order to keep things quiet, he said.

"All of them should be (See Students, page 4)

Morse to Review Policy in Viet Nam

Does the United States' position in Viet Nam serve our national interests?

This and similar questions will be discussed by U. S. Sen. Wayne Morse at 8 p. m. today in Hendricks Chapel. His topic will be "Is Our Policy in Viet Nam Leading Us into War?"

Morse, a Democrat from Oregon, has been a critic of United States involvement in Southeast Asia.

If You Care, Be There

Today's scheduled mass student meeting on the quad will show if the university administration cares enough about its students to show them the courtesy of answering some questions.

The replies to queries about the length of the Christmas recess have been unsatisfactory. We firmly believe the Chancellor's reply, reported elsewhere on this page, was made in haste upon return from a tedious trip to New York City.

The questions which must be answered, and must be answered with careful forethought, are:

1. How can the university calendar, repeatedly termed "inflexible," be hastily changed for the small number of students driving back from the Sugar Bowl and not for the far greater numbers driving home for Christmas, whose requests for such an extension began last April?

2. How can the university in good conscience release the football team from those disputed two-and-a-half days of classes while still holding classes for the rest of the students?

3. How can the university ignore the request of 6,030 student signatures without even listening to the students' arguments?

Apparently the only recourse left to the student body is to show strength in physical numbers on the quad today. If the needed 4,000 students do not show up, chances for an extension will fade into oblivion.

Chancellor Charles Wesley Flint, who passed away Saturday, was a great believer in student self-government. Dr. Flint, above all, would have wanted to see the students assert themselves for a cause they believed just. He would have answered requests with thought and reason.

Today's meeting must be an orderly demonstration of opinion. Hopefully, many students will respond to the requests of student government leaders to wear coats-and-ties as a symbol of respect.

The decision rests with the administration. It must give us an answer.

The Red Brick Decay

The question of the Christmas vacation is really a very small part of a very big issue.

And that issue is one on which Syracuse University will have to make some vitally important decisions if it is to continue its rapid deevlopment.

The issue is the question of the role of the student in the mass university complex, which has been brought to the fore with the seemingly endless run-around given to student officials on the vacation question.

It took nearly a week to find someone in the red brick building to talk about vacation, and it was even longer before discovering the Chancellor was the only person who could rule on the question.

By that time, the Chancellor was conveniently out of town on financial business of a week's duration.

Is it really possible that no one in the administration, save the Chancellor, knows who does what or who is responsible for what?

And when the Chancellor tells student leaders upon his return that he had made a decision earlier in the week, which had been transmitted to Syracuse by phone, but the decision was for some reason unknown to him withheld from the students, then something is wrong.

Either the administration is awfully confused, or it is hopelessly buried in ill-fated attempts at public relations, or it just doesn't care.

The situation is not a pleasant one for students. Today it will not be a pleasant one for administrators.

Hopefully the confusion of the past week has been merely confusion, not underlined by any university philosophy which might delegate the student to an insignificant role.

If today's demonstration proves nothing else, it must at least show the administration we are here and we care what it thinks about us. We are not ones to be ignored or taken lightly.

We don't give money today, but we are the alumni of the future, and if SU overlooks us now, we will overlook SU in the future — and that's not a pleasant proposition for a university whose future seems boundless.

Red bricks make good buildings. Unfortunately, the architect is often much better than the interior decorator.

Beyond the Right

By Amos Moscrip

The Republican party is in the middle of a power struggle between moderates and conservatives. But no matter who wins, many of Barry's followers have vowed to stick with him always.

So it's fifty years from now at the annual Ever-Loyal meeting.

"Gee, George," Bud Wilkinson is saying to George Murphy, "I liked your fireside tapdance to the nation."

"Yes," George says, "but I thought the staging on the civil rights number was a little sloppy. You know, the part where I dance around Martin Luther King, like I'm gonna sign the bill and hold his hand, and then I dance away. You know, like I can't make up my mind."

"Yeah," Bud says. "You couldn't tell what you were gonna do on that numebr."

"I got his hand finally," George says. "But then I let go on the property steps."

"Yeah, Bud says. "That was clever."

"But I liked the way you went through the middle in a senator sneak on your last campaiga, Bud," George says.

"Yeah," Bud says. "Everybody thought I was gonna go around right end, but I got them all confused feinting to left end. They got so scared I went up the middle."

"That's senate biz," George says.

"C'mon, c'mon," says the chairman, Dean Burch. "All you people be quiet. The meeting's got to come to order."

Everybody quiets down.

"Okay," Dean says, "we need somebody to carry the Bud Wilkinson banner!"

Cheers, hands raised.

"Harry," Dean says, "You licked 28 thousand postage stamps in '64. You carry it."

Harry smiles. He cannot speak. His mouth is glued together permanently.

"Now," Dean says, "we need somebody for the George Murphy banner!"

Greater cheers.

"Fred," Dean says, "you carry it."

Fred has tears in his eyes.

"Now," Dean says, "we need somebody to carry . . . our leader's banner!"

The group goes wild.

"C'mon," Dean says. "Alf, you carry it. After all, you paid $150,000 for the movie. Sorry about that, Alf."

Alf accepts, beaming with joy. He is dressed in rags.

"Now," Dean says, "who's gonna carry the Bill Miller banner?" "C'mon, somebody's got to carry it," Dean says. "We're not gonna have a party until somebody carries it . . ."

"Hey kid," Dean says, "yeah, the one with the stuffed bear. C'mere kid."

The silence is broken and Dean says, "Okay, party time!"

Outside of the hall you can hear the wild cheers after each toast, the band playing full blast.

Two guys were in a car outside the hall.

"Hey," says one of the guys, "how can you allow all that noise and stuff every year."

"Why, that's all right," the other guy says. "Ah'm the King."

Happy Hanukkah, Merry Christmas to all: The time draws near again for each of us to carry on our time honored and other pleasant traditions of the Christmas season.

On the night of the 24th, throughout our lands in our homes we shall celebrate as gaily as we can, each in his own way.

But, is this really possible—home with the family for Christmas Eve? Christmas Dinner? Parties? The joy of giving?

We hear a voice from the temple to the Most High, from its holy magnificience and beneficience, wise omnipotence and "omniscience;" Defender of Culture, Lord of Tradition, sanctified charitable, and Just Lover of all mankind—we hear and obey, (for "to hear is to obey"). And we hear the voice: "Thus saith I, ye shall depart from me (ye ac——d) to celebrate this holy season at noon on Dec. 23, in the year of our Lord, 1964 and return Jan. 5, by 8 a.m., in the year of our Lord, 1965."

Behold, I am the Anti-Christ. I frustrate you, your culture, and your traditions. I joy to see you all suffer from now until you leave, and after you leave, (for I am always with you). Be frustrated, tired, and irritable rushing through your Christmas shopping. Have an exacerbated Christmas full of efforts as futile.

Death to Christmas! Death to its traditions! Death to American culture! Long live American Culture!

Airlines

To the Editor:

On Sunday, Nov. 29, students at airports throughout the United States were denied space on commercial flights on which they supposedly had confirmed reservations. Many of these students either "no-showed," held duplicate reservations, or held reservations on several flights and on different airlines on their departure from campus prior to Thanksgiving.

Airlines, by procedure, cancel all space the "no-show" has reserved, which includes the reservation for return to campus. Allegedly, unaware of this procedure, students who "no-showed" without notice prior to Thanksgiving appeared at airline ticket counters for their return flights only to find their cancelled seats had been resold. Unfortunately, some conscientious students were innocently involved in the confusion which resulted.

This situation occurs at Thanksgiving, Christmas and Easter each year. The results are primarily damaging to the airlines in direct financial losses and poor public relations however, students are also affected. Since airline seats are in heavy demand at this time, a student who "no-shows" has prevented another student from using the seat which goes empty.

The same it true of the student who has reserved several seats with the intention of using only one to suit his convenience. Finally, the resulting confusion created at airports on the return to campus generally affects all students.

We have no desire to inconvenience anyone and wish to serve as courteously and efficiently as possible. We are well aware that the infrequent student passenger of today is the very frequent business passenger of the future.

By bringing this problem to the attention of your readers, we are making an effort to avoid reserved space problems for the coming holidays. The cooperation of students who intende to use commercial air transportation is needed in order to insure their own best interest.

The Sounds of Jazz

Del Shannon: Revisited

by Bill Newman

Another great freshman weekend has passed and still, the question goes unanswered, "Can this really be college?". The present freshman class is to be congratulated for upholding the deplorable level of entertainment, for which our college weekends at Syracuse University are known. Now the name of Del Shannon can be added to that star studded list along with the name of Joey Dee.

Possibly, many of us (at least those of you who sit in my corner) have been living under some gross misconceptions relating to the purpose and value of a college education. Possibly, the administrators who tell us that Syracuse University's student body gets qualitatively better each year, had best take another look.

College is a time to party to be sure, but it is also a time to take a closer look at life. Along with that closer look should go some cultural imperatives. Musically, the Syracuse University culture is that of a high school. By now, some of you are thinking "How can he criticize us for what we like?" Here's how:

Last month, Cornell threw a big weekend. The highlight was a concert by the Dave Brubeck Quartet and tickets went at the ridiculous price of $1.75 a head. A while back I made a trip to Penn State and noted that the two concerts that weekend were by Count Basie and the Jazzetet. I might also draw attention to last year's concert at Cornell by Thelonious Monk and Gerry Mulligan. I guess U isn't really a fair com- N. Y. U. isn't really a fair com- that situation, but Dizzy Gillespie and J.J. Johnson are perenial visitors to the campus of little old Union College in Schenectady.

All this is not to mention schools like North Texas State, Yale, Harvard and Brown. These schools yearly, produce some of the finest new jazz talent in the nation. Now I ask you, just what league is Syracuse in?

The problem of good music on the Syracuse campus (be it jazz or otherwise) is a two-sided one. First let us turn to the student body, then the administration.

I salute the Greeks, for their concert by Maynard Ferguson last spring was the first evidence of a desire to hear jazz I have seen by any student group on campus. Yet the reluctance on the part of the student body in this sphere seems to be typical of so many of the attitudes of our student body. Culture and education seem to be "a sometime thing" here at S.U. So many of you graduate without ever knowing what Crouse Concerts are. The high school pattern of beer and twist music prevades. Clothes make the man yet most of you are culturally unclothed.

The Administration has its problems but the fact that there is no suitable concert auditorium on this campus is inexcusable. Even Maynard Ferguson couldn't believe the echo in the field house last year. Can we really ask artists to perform in a gym? The WAER-FM situation is just as bad. Most students think that WAER is really spelled "WHERE?"

The conduit system for piping WAER into the dorms is waiting and ready. Why don't we use it? The plan to go AM - FM was scuttled somewhere along the line too. That's really sad when one considers that the University probably could have profited, financially, from the advertising on a University A.M. radio station.

The facts just don't add up. I have observed that the phone calls I receive on my radio show, "The Sounds of Jazz," are almost evenly split between on and off campus listeners. From the number of calls I receive on an average night one can reasonably conclude that there is a marked interest in jazz on campus.

The combination of two factors has made Syracuse University a unique specimen where jazz and other cultural forms are concerned: The University's failure to give us the facilities through which we can enjoy good music, and the student's failure to grow up and live like mature members of society with mature tastes.

Less than a century after the invention of printing, the first printing press to reach America was established in Mexico City in 1539. America's first printer was Juan Pablos.

This is the seventh production of Nickel Theater. Student directors will be: Nancy Sutfin for "Helena's Husband" and Laraine Siegle for "The Tridget of Greva'. Athletic Board

Administrative Suggestion Box

This is the fifth in a series by Daily Orange administration reporter Carol Rubright concerning university committees. These little-known boards, manned by both administrators and students, represent a liaison between these often-opposed factions. Today's story concerns the Administrative Board on Athletics.

By CAROL RUBRIGHT
Junior Editor

"I don't vote—I just get the blame for the decisions,' chuckled Eric H. Faigle, chairman of the Administrative Board on Athletics last week.

Faigle, university vice president and dean of the liberal arts was explaining the activities and functions of what is commonly known as the athletic board.

The athletic board makes suggestions, not policy. Its jurisdiction ranges from bowl games to "getting the athletes to dinner on time," according to Faigle.

For example, after the football team voted to accept the bid from the Sugar Bowl Committee, it made the recommendation to the board. The board in turn voted upon it and recommended the New Year's Day game to Chancellor William P. Tolley.

The athletic board also sets up the game schedules, sometimes as far as 10 years in advance of the gridiron date.

One of its sub-duties, the committee on academics and athletics, watches over the athletes "to see that they get their homework done," according to Faigle.

The two students on the 12-member committee are Carl Corallo and Nancy Perkins, president and vice president of Student Government. They work specifically with the sub-committee on student seating for the games.

The board attempts to deal with the problem of drinking in the stadiums during the football season.

It also works on the parking problem at Manley Field House. Since one stipulation attached to athletic scholarships is a requirement not to have a car on campus, the board is presently working out a method of transporting the athletes from the fieldhouse and practice fields to their dorms and dining halls. Shuttle buses have been suggested.

The athletic board has been in existence since about 1914 when it was established by the Syracuse University Board of Trustees. It is scheduled to meet once each month.

Membership on the board includes two students, two trustees (Charles Chappell and Royal O'Day), two representatives of the alumni Varsity Club, three faculty members (Faigle, Associate Prof. Howard J. Landry of the accounting department and Prof. Donald E. Kibbey, chairman of the mathematics department) and two alumni.

MARSHALS MEET

Student marshals, identified by orange armbands, will help keep order at today's mass meeting. Students are asked to obey them.

Marshals will meet with George Van Derven, president of the InterFraternity Council, at 2 p.m. today on the steps of Hendricks Chapel to receive instructions.

Foreign Students' Party

International students and their friends will be guests at a Christmas party to introduce them to the young people of Syracuse.

The party will be given from 8-10 p.m. Monday at the parish house of the First Prebyterian Church, 620 West Genesee St., by the members of the United Church women.

Transportation will be provided for the group. Cars will leave between 7:30 and 7:45 p. m. from Lowe Art Center, and guests will be returned to their residences after the party.

If your mother won't pay a bit more to give you this cordless shaver for Christmas, it isn't because she's pinching pennies.

It's probably because you're still her little boy.

Sentimental mom.

Still can't accept the facts of life. Sit down and tell her a few. About the REMINGTON® LEKTRONIC II Shaver.

Tell her it's cordless. That it runs on rechargeable energy cells.* So you can shave on the spot. Any spot. That a "man" needs this kind of freedom.

Tell her about the big shaver head. With 756 slots. How once a whisker goes through, it's going, going, gone.

Tell her about the 4 Roller Combs. How they gently let you get to the whiskers, but not the skin. How they even take care of any peach fuzz leftover from bygone days.

Tell her about 3-18 cutting edges. That start keen, stay keen because they're honed from surgical high-carbon steel.

Tell her the REMINGTON LEKTRONIC II motor is the most powerful in electric shaving. That it never slows down on straightaways or tricky curves.

Tell her how the head case flicks off—and there's a straight cutting edge for clean, even sideburns. Neat.

Will all this change your mother's mind? Don't ask us. You're a big boy now. Remember?

Student Demonstrations: Rare Occurrences on Hill

By KAREN ZAGOREN

Boycotts, protests, demonstrations and pickets have been irregular occurrences on Piety Hill during the last 10 years.

But downtown arrests of civil rights picketers did provoke the administration to enact automatic disciplinary probation of any arrested students in September 1963.

At that time the Syracuse University Committee on Eqality (SUCE) announced a picket line would form Oct. 3, in front of the Administration Building. There 150 persons marched in protest of administrative action during a six-hour period.

Dean of Men Jim G. Carleton announced "No action would be taken against these picketers as long as no unpeaceful demonstrations took place."

Last Feb. 20, a food service boycott called by Joint Student Legislature (now Student Senate) was 70 per cent effective despite a rift within student government.

More than 3,000 students out of 4,600 on university board contracts failed to eat dinner in the university dining halls that night.

Last spring SUCE called for peaceful demonstrations against the university's policy of playing segregated schools in athletic competition. May 9, a peaceful protest was staged before the varsity-alumni football game.

A freedom march from the Hendricks Chapel steps to Manley Fieldhouse by about 50 students was also conducted to demonstrate before the university Administrative Board on Athletics which was meeting to make a decision on the issue.

Before the current senior class arrived on the Hill in May 1961, a demonstration was held to protest action by the office of Dean of Women Marjorie C. Smith, which had notified parents whose daughters were dating boys of different races.

Nearly 700 persons took part.

On Oct. 25, 1955, the campus reacted to a ban on Bermuda shorts for women enacted by Women's Student Government.

Eric H. Faigle, vice president and dean of liberal arts said the weather would soon solve the problem.

An attempt to picket City Hall in May 1955 was thwarted by then Dean of Men Carlton Krathwohl.

Neverless about 60 students did picket in a protest over parking regulations.

Travel Lines Inconvenienced By Indefinite SU Vacation

Students are not the only ones who are inconvenienced by not knowing when Christmas vacation will begin.

The uncertainty is causing some difficulty among those responsible for getting students home when classes are dismissed, the Daily Orange learned Friday.

Robert Douglas of the Orange Travel Service on Marshal street told the DO that most students have not arranged for their Christmas transportation yet.

This means that if classes are dismissed on Friday, the normal ten-day pre-vacation rush period will be condensed into four days.

Douglas noted that Greyhound has not been able to schedule its Christmas buses which will leave campus for New York City since no one knows exactly when classes will be dismissed.

If the date of dismissal is changed, airlines will be flooded with requests for changes of reservations, Douglas predicted. This, of course, will place a strain on reservation facilities, he said.

The outlook for obtaining airline reservations may brighten since some students have made more than one reservation to cover two sets of possible travel plans, Douglas said.

Douglas said his office would be open all night today if the vacation is changed, in order to allow students and faculty to complete travel plans.

Leaders to Meet with Chancellor Today

would probably cut classes anyway.

Top SG leaders and heads of major campus organizations plan to see Tolley at 11:15 a.m. today, in a last-ditch effort to persuade him to call off two and a half days of classes scheduled next week.

Plans for further student action have already been set. Campus leaders met for four hours Friday afternoon to work out strategy.

Corrallo and Speaker Robert (Robby) Stern of Student Senate have called for a massive turnout today. Corrallo said he would either announce the extension or call for action at the meeting.

Corrallo lanuched the drive at the Senate meeting Dec. 3, and has worked closely with the other leaders.

Last Wednesday, in a speech over WAER, Corrallo called for a poll of students in every living center on extending the vacation. He asked that poll results and petitions be brought to the senate.

When the senate met Thursday it totaled 6,030 votes in favor and only 228 against the extension. Corrallo, with unanimous Student Senate support, called a mass meeting of the student body for 3 p.m. today.

The meeting was to hear the Chancellor's decision. Since he refused Friday, the meeting will now hear whether he changed his mind during the weekend.

Corrallo has termed the meeting a legislative session, to express student opinion or ratify any further action directly.

ORANGE AID DISTRIBUTION

All freshmen who have purchased a copy of the 1964 Orange Aid and have not picked them up must do so from 10 a.m.-2 p.m. Wednesday in the lobby of Huntington B. Crouse Hall.

Present facilities for distribution will then be terminated on Wednesday, according to junior class president William Weller. There are 66 unsold copies available for any people who wish them, Weller said. The book sells for $1.75 each.

SUCE Offers Panel Program To All SU Living Centers

The Syracuse Committee on Equality (SUCE) is planning a program of SUCE members and people from the Syracuse community to speak at student living centers.

Speakers will discuss SUCE, civil rights, or the responsibility of the student toward university activities and toward the Syracuse community

Some SUCE members speaking on civil rights have worked with civil rights groups in the South.

Vivian Shulman, business secretary, said the group hopes to stimulate discussion and thought among students by its program of speakers The members hope to reach every living center on campus with the program.

Groups and living centers requesting speakers may decide the focus of the speaker's talk and may request specific speakers from the Syracuse community or from SUCE.

Groups and living centers desiring speakers should call Miss Shulman, ext. 2197.

Morse to Review

The discussion is sponsored by the Syracuse Area Faculty Group on Issues of War and Peace.

Composed of more than 100 faculty members from Syracuse University, Upstate Medical Center and LeMoyne College, the group attempts to analyze "vital current events."

The Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs and the office of the vice president of academic affairs under Frank P. Piskor, ahs cooperated in having Morse speak on campus, Arnold Honig, a spokesman for the group said.

Honig is a professor in the SU physics department.

Morse, a former Republican who claims to have been "disillusioned with the prospects of liberalism in the Republican Party," was elected to the Senate on the GOP ticket in 1944.

He resigned from the party in 1952 and joined the Democratic Party in 1955 after operating as an independent for over two years. He was re-elected to the Senate in 1956 and 1962 as a Democrat.

He is a member of the Senate committees on foreign relations, labor and public welfare, small business and the District of Columbia.

He is chairman of the foreign relations committee's sub-committee on Latin American Affairs and of the education sub-committee of the Senate. He also serves on the special committee on aging of the Senate.

Air Society Inducts Six

Wildcats Trounce Syracuse, 110-77

By BILL BRODSKY
DO Sports Correspondent

LEXINGTON, Ky.—Kentucky's powerful Wildcats devoured the slumping Syracuse Orangemen, 110 - 77, Saturday night before an enthusiastic standing-room-only crowd of 11,900 in Memorial Coliseum.

UK guards Louie Dampier and Tommy Kron put on a fantastic display of outside shooting to cripple the SU defense.

"Kentucky is the finest outside team we have ever faced," admitted Hill coach Fred Lewis.

The Wildcats finished with a 51.2 mark from the field, while hitting nearly 65 per cent from outside. Dampier, a 6-0 sophomore, netted 31 points and Kron added another 30.

Lone bright spot for the Piety was the play of 6-6 rookie Rick Dean, whom Lewis employed as a suprise starter. Dean was a bull underneath, scoring 23 points and hauling down 13 rebounds.

Kentucky opened with a zone defense which proved effective in stopping numerous outside Syracuse shots. The Orangemen also employed a zone, but that failed to hinder the Wildcats' outside attack.

At the end of the first half, SU trailed by nine points, 53 - 44. During the final 10 minutes, Kentucky went on a 16 - 1 scoring rampage to streak ahead, 94-66.

Lewis was charged with a technical foul midway in the second half for protesting the officiating of one referee.

"That was the worst officiating I've ever seen by one man," noted the Hill coach later. "Every time we made a move, he would come up with something."

Tully	1	0	2

Halftime: Kentucky 53, Syracuse 44.

Lewis explained that although 22 fouls were called on Kentucky and only 21 on Syracuse, those against the Hill forces came in critical situations.

Still, it was the below-par play of the Orangemen which lost the game. SU threw the ball away 29 times besides playing haphazardly on defense.

And Fred Lewis wasn't happy. "We'll have to make some drastic changes," he said. "Some of last year's key players are not living up to last year's performances."

Shooting-wise there were few complaints as the Orange connected on 30 of 67 for a respectable 45 per cent.

UK coach Adolph Rupp, upon chalking up his 706th college cage victory, stated, "We were in better condition especially in the big men's position. We just ran the guts out of them."

The Wildcats saw two other players in double figures, in addition to Dampier and Kron, as Pat Riley hit for 19 and Larry Conley 18.

For the Piety, All-America candidate Dave Bing dumped in 20 points, although notching only nine of 22 attempts from the field. Chuck Richards was limited to 14 points and two rebounds.

Height Disadvantage

SU Invades Eastern Kentucky

By NEIL KERR

Another big, sharpshooting Southern squad provides the opposition tonight as coach Fred Lewis' SU cagers make their fourth try for win No. 2.

Eastern Kentucky (2-1) is the tallest team in the State of Kentucky, with a starting unit averaging almost 6-6. They have six lettermen and four returning starters from the team which went 15-9 last season, including a 90-72 win over Syracuse in Manley.

Eastern has beaten Transylvania 72-52, Marshall 94-66 and dropped a narrow 73-71 decision to Dayton so far this season.

Syracuse, meanwhile, will be trying to end its three game losing streak. The Orange are 1-3 following its opening victory over American U. (127-67) and consecutive losses to Penn State (81-59), Cornell (73-72) and Kentucky (110-77).

Top individual Orange scorers so far are Dave Bing with 75 points for an 18.7 average and Chuck Richards, who has 66 points and 16.5 per game.

Bing tallied 20 and Richards 14 against Kentucky Saturday night, but Syracuse's high point man was sophomore Rick Dean with 23. This season Dean has 31 points and trails the Orange's third highest scorer, Rich Duffy, who has 32.

Dean's fine performance has earned him a starting role for tonight's game. Norm Goldsmith will be the other forward and Chuck Richards will open at center. In the backcourt, Dave Bing will team with either Jim Boeheim or Rich Duffy.

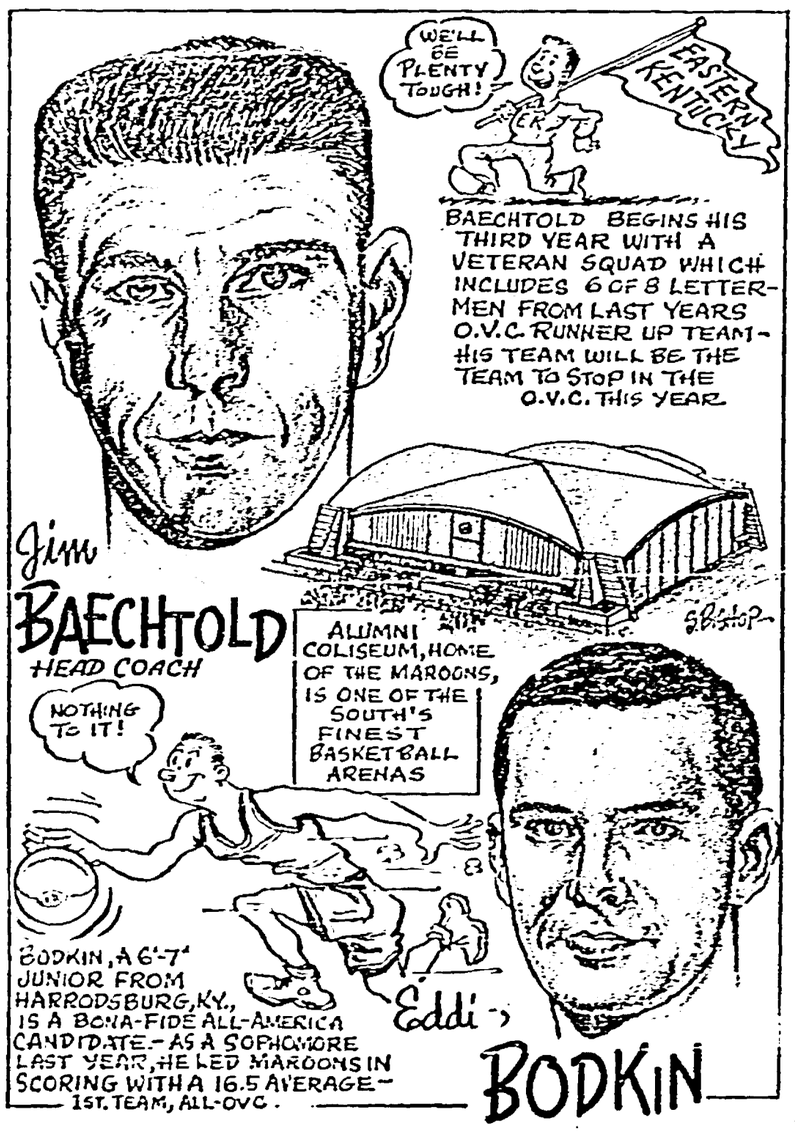
Off to a disappointing start, Syracuse will need a strong effort tonight to overcome the Maroon's height advantage.

Heading the list of returnees are two forwards, 6-7 Ed Bodkin and 6-5 Dennis Bradley.

Bodkin led the team in scoring last season with a 16.5 average but this year he has been pouring in over 25 points per game. He was named to the All-Ohio Valley Conference first team as a sophomore last season.

Bradley is the team's defensive star who is usually assigned to guard the opposition's biggest scoring threat.

The Maroon's center is 6-8 senior Bob Tolan, who has led the team in rebounding for two straight years. The other returning member of last year's squad is a 6-4 guard, Lee Lemos. He scored in double figures in every game last year and averaged 14.2. Expected to fill the other guard spot is 6-1 Bill Walton.



Lehigh Matmen Crush Orange

By KEN RUDNICK

The Syracuse and Lehigh wrestling teams met at Manley Field House Saturday afternoon. The Orangemen lost to the powerful Engineers, 29 - 6, and they never really had a chance.

For SU coach Ed Carlin's grapplers and most in the fieldhouse crowd, it was an afternoon of frustration. The only fleeting hope that the Orange could spring a startling upset was provided by Kurt Kuppinger.

Kuppinger, wrestling in the 157-pound class, squared off against Bob Hartenstine with Syracuse trailing, 16-0.

Hartenstine led, 7-5, entering the third and final period, but Kuppinger bolted into an advantage he never relinquished by scoring a point with a rapid escape and three more with a near pin.

Kuppinger's 12-10 decision set the stage for Orange captain Lew Roberts' attempt to move SU back into contention, but Roberts flashed little of the form he displayed in his first two varsity seasons in dropping a 5-2 decision to Harley Ferguson at 167 pounds.

Ferguson's triumph put the Engineers over the top, but it was their dominance in the lower weight divisions which was decisive. The Eastern powerhouse swept to its 16-0 margin with victories in the first four matches.

Mike Caruso pinned Syracuse's Lew Manns (123-pound class) after 4:59 had elapsed. Joe Peritore followed with a 6-3 verdict over Terry Haise (130).

Biff Stuart increased the Lehigh lead to 11 points with an 11-4 defeat of Kerin Raftery (137) before Glenn Amsbaugh pinned Dick Zebuhr at 8:20 (147).

Outstanding Orange sophomore Tom Schlendorf joined Kuppinger as SU's only winners when he scored an easy 6-0 triumph over Bill Lachenmayr (191), but it came too late to affect the result.

Sandwiched around Schlendorf's effort were two more Orange losses. Joe Caprio pinned John Campbell at 1:26 (177) and in the unlimited class, John Illengwarth pinned footballer Joe Radivoy at 3:20 after a scoreless first period.

Thus, Syracuse lost its opening match while the Engineers, a good bet to be strong contenders for Eastern and national honors, raised their mark to 2-0.

Nance Named Back-of-Year

To the frustration of Orange football followers, fullback Jim (Bo) Nance has been neglected in the All-America selections for 1964.

Nance

The Pigskin Club of Washington, D.C., however, has seen fit to bestow its NCAA Back-of-the-Year award upon the hard-driving Piety standout.

Honored on Saturday evening along with Nance at a banquet at the Statler-Hilton Hotel in the nation's capital was Dick Butkus of Illinois. Butkus received the clubs NCAA Lineman-of-the-Year honors.

Big Bo, after two varsity seasons which were disappointing to the experts who expected so much of him, broke loose this year to help give Syracuse the NCAA rushing title.

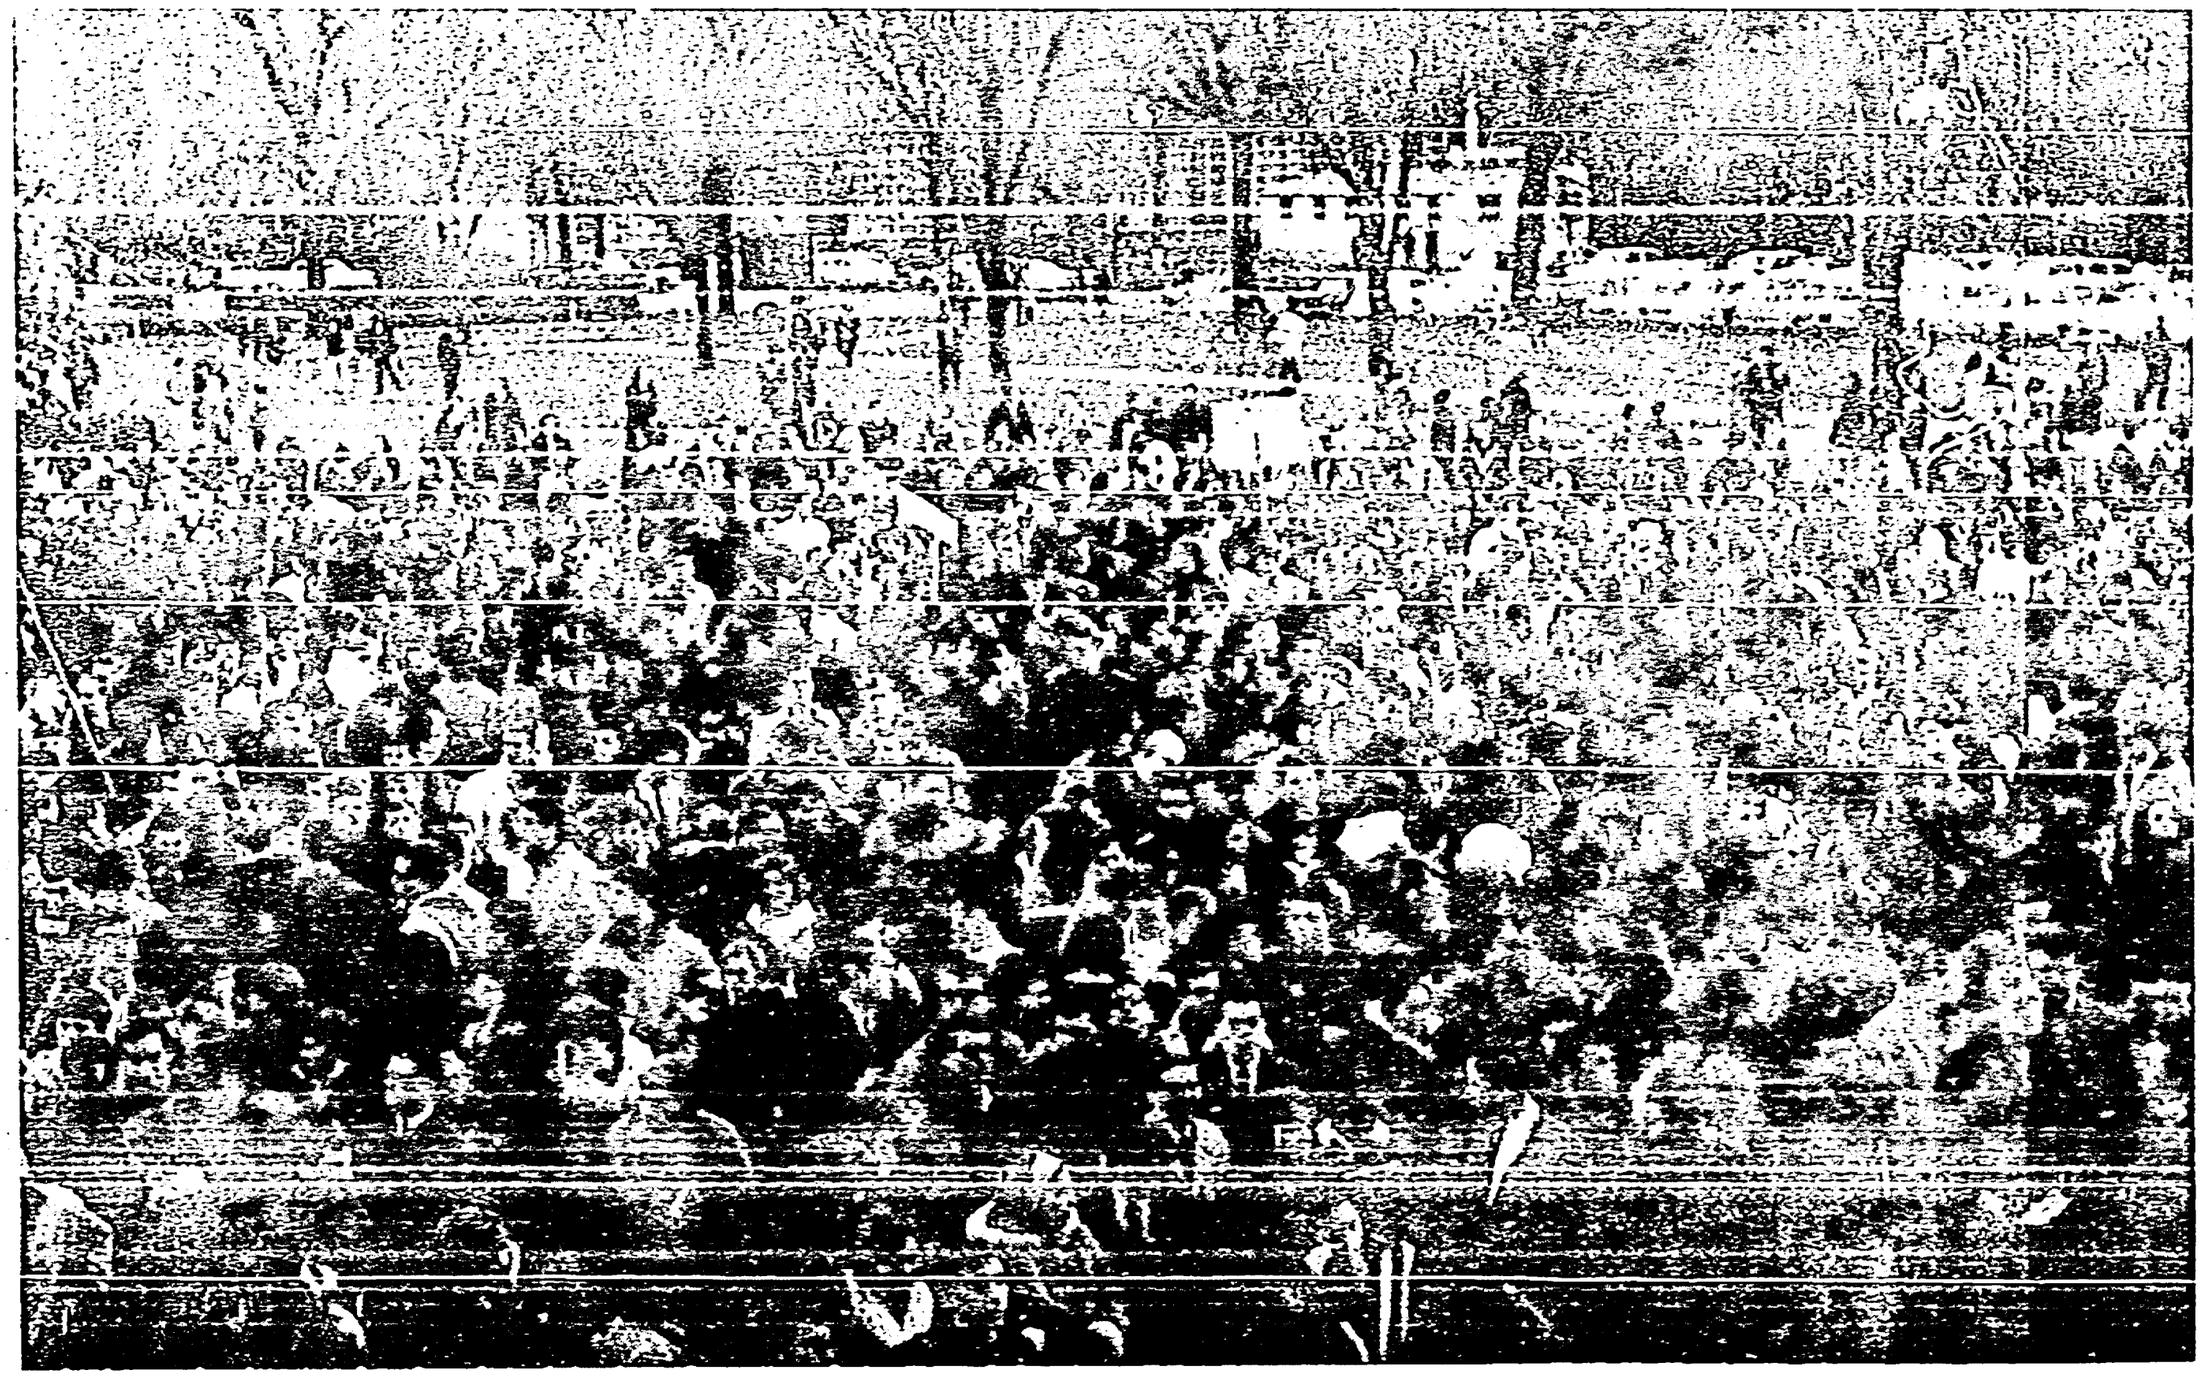
CHANCELLOR SAYS 'NO!' SS SAYS 'PICKET!'

(See Page 5)



THE QUAD AT 3 P.M. MONDAY JAMMED WITH STUDENTS EAGER TO HEAR THE CHANCELLOR'S DECISION

The Crumbling Hilltop High

Our alma mater's hilltop high began to crumble Monday, and it, rather than we, will have to pay the cost of repairs.

The Chancellor bravely faced the students and gave his final, definitive "no" to requests for a vacation extension, but he once again neglected to give the reason for the denial.

The only answer we see is the statement by the Chancellor of Friday that such a change would set a dangerous precedent for student-administration relationships.

Some precedents are bad and should be changed; others are good. Changing the vacation would have been a fine precedent, because the situation clearly deserved a schedule switch.

We just can't buy the administration's reasoning that it would be unfeasible to give in to student pressure. This, like most student causes, was quite worthy and merited not only consideration but alteration.

It's about time the administration realized that if the students care enough about any issue in the future, we're not going to stop protesting because the administration won't give in.

We'll yell our heads off, and we won't quit yelling, and some people somewhere in this university community are going to realize that maybe we're right. And then we're going to set that precedent that should have been set Monday.

The only reason this vacation could not be lengthened is a series of administrative mixups — for which we are now paying the price.

The game of "musical administrators" must stop. Someone must have the responsibility to make decisions, in order that students do not have to run to the Chancellor for every minor problem.

And when the problems are major, there must be clear access to the person or persons who have the responsibility for making decisions. The problem is that great.

The Chancellor Monday took the brunt of the punishment for that which is not all his fault. It is his task now to correct the communications flaws which occurred.

We would have accepted most any reason Monday. None was given, and we can therefore conclude only that there was none but the refusal to concede to a perfectly valid request for fear of precedent.

The evening twilight is glistening for Syracuse University, and the shadows are falling over the closed windows of the Administration Building.

The Chancellor won't change vacation. Maybe the Pope will change Christmas.

30) A sign "Think Before Act" to be hung on the ivy-covered walls of the Administration Bldg.

31) A happy and productive vacation to all of you.

P.S. And, Dear Santa, please restore in my heart a semblance of respect and dignity for the inhabitants of the Adistration Building.

After four and one-half years, I've learned that incomptent vice presidents could bangle their way through an academic year and manage to be taken off the hook because the Chancellor always demonstrated a warmth and sincerity of interest and compassion that could not be questioned.

Yesterday, in front of Hendricks Chapel that interest was questioned. No explanation was offered. No awareness of the problem involved was evidenced. No willingness to compromise was shown. Instead, it was a dogmatic "Obey Me for I am the Chancellor."

Santa, I knew that our Chancellor could not have said that. I knew that he would not resort to simple verbiage and obvious ploys to coddle students as if they were in grade school. I knew that he wouldn't say that we are "nature" students and should understand; or that we have every right to protest; or that a demonstration is a lot of fun. I knew he wouldn't—but he did.

Santa, give our Chancellor the wisdom, warmth, sincerity and understanding that he's always had. And may we all have a merry Christmas (if we make it).

Music

To the Editor:

The performance of Handel's "Messiah" that I heard last Tuesday could not have been the same one heard by your esteemed reviewer, Mr. Cohn. One hardly knows where to begin—with the misinformation readily apparent, or with the unsympathetic musical snobbery inherent in the point of view.

Firstly, the original Dublin performance of April 13, 1742 used, to the best of our knowledge, some forty voices in the chorus, with an orchestra roughly to match. The orchestra had an unusually large complement of woodwinds, to our time, with two trumpets, drums, and continuo. For some of the slightly later London performances, the same sized group was used, and a full listing of the personnel, by name, is extant.

Secondly, a criticism of conductorial tempi, within certain limits, is certainly difficult. It would seem, in Europe, if not consistently in this country, that the well-versed audience comes to listen to the interpretation of the music, as well as to its melody.

Proceeding to Mr. Cohn's 'question of competence,' one wonders if he has not implied that that which cannot be done with enough professional polish to impress the most erudite and musically sophisticated listener should not be done. There is a legitimacy to having a university group perform the "Messiah," and one should not expect the quality to be that of the top rank of professional musicians; indeed, the quality of Tuesday's performance exceeded that expected — the orchestra had a good sound throughout the evening; the chorus showed a controlled style, with a nice range of sound and good balance; and the reconstruction itself was pleasurably interesting.

In places, excellence showed through: one soloist possesses a first-rank voice, the harpsichordist played well through a long evening, a strong (at times) alto section produced a remarkable tension in the women's section occasionally. If Mr. Cohn had had an interest in music, instead of in the pedantic perfection of a performance, he would have stayed, and had something more than an occasional mistake from a hard-working violinist or an excited alto to criticize—a musician with a difficult part who was involved in only one chorus and two arias who did not know and could not play his part.

If one were to apply the standards inherent in his review to Mr. Cohn, one would quickly conclude that he is least of all not competent to write a review himself.

Up in the Air

Pay-TV

by Carol Jantz

"A bandit stealing away free television". . . . ."One of the greatest cultural innovations to come along in years" . . . .Both descriptions have been applied to pay-TV.

The negative viewpoint has won the first round as California voters outlawed pay-TV in their state during the last election.

Supporters of pay-TV, however, are used to meeting opposition and are already at work planning a new campaign to prove to the public that pay-TV on a national scale will be an asset to American culture.

The path of pay-TV has been a rocky one since movie executive Matty Fox first saw its potential a decade ago.

He went deep into debt trying to mold a type of television not afraid to stick its neck out to bring controversial or though-provoking programs to audiences instead of westerns and situation comedies.

In 1963 Subscription Television, Inc. (STV) was formed with Sylvester L. ("Pat') Weaver as its president.

Taking up the cause of Matty Fox, Weaver set up two experimental stations in Los Angeles and San Francisco. At last pay-TV had become a working reality.

Pay-TV brought the possibility of Broadway dramas and musicals, classic and modern opera, ballets, sports events, and first-run movies to the home for the price of one adult admission.

Adudiences, not advertisers, would be setting the criteria for shows, according to Weaver.

Problems set in however, as soon as the stations began to operate.

Curiously, viewers feel that commercial television is free. It never enters their minds that the program is paid for in the cost of products advertised.

Pay-TV had to offer something the viewer could not get on regular television.

The problem was much like an endless circle. To get better programs there has to be a large audience to pay for them. To get a large audience there must be better programs.

Because of lack of funds it proved difficult for pay-TV to get the spectacular shows necessary and the operation was forced to borrow from established sources like motion pictures and sports. These were not unassual or distinctive enough to attract a large audience and brought fears that pay-TV would charge for shows currently presented free.

Opponents of pay-TV feared that culture on television might become the property of those who could afford to pay up to $17 a month for it.

As election time drew near in California, motion picture in a precedent shattering merger joined to crusade against pay-TV to protect their interests in the face of a new financial competitor.

They won easily as STV remained strangely silent throughout the campaign and as early as September sent orders out not to plan any new programs for the coming year.

Weaver plans to challenge the California verdict in court and the pay-TV drive is gaining support as many Americans feel there is room for both pay and regular television without bringing undue competition.

But pay-TV may find its strongest ally in the Federal Communications Commission.

The FCC believes that pay-TV can contribute a great deal to American television and is even now formulating rules to regulate it to make sure pay-TV lives up to its potential.

With the FCC on its side and a fierce campaigner like "Pat' Weaver fighting for it pay TV may yet have a chance to prove that it is worthy of public support.

The production will be directed by Mrs. Fay Golden, who is also director of the Children's Theatre, a group made up of youngsters from 5 to 14 years of age.

Included in the cast will be several who appeared in last Theatre production of "Hansel and Gretel." Among these young actors and actresses are Bruce Yenawine, Carla Glazier, David Golden, Kathy Woods, Andrea Berne and Nancy Bender.

STUDENTS BOO TOLLEY ON VACATION REFUSAL

SS Calls for 24-Hour Picketing Of Chancellor's Office, Home; Enact 'Spiritual' Class Boycott

By JESSE SMITH

Student Senate voted overwhelmingly Monday night to organize 24-hour-a-day picketing of Chancellor William P. Tolley. A call for a boycott of classes was defeated.

Tolley refused again Monday afternoon to cancel two-and-a-half days of classes next week.

The senate appointed Harley Flaum and Janet Strauss to arrange picketing of the Administration Building from 10 a.m.-4 p.m. everyday until vacation, and all-night picketing of Tolley's residence at 701 Walnut Ave.

Students have been asked to wear white armbands in mourning for Christmas spirit. The senate also asked students for a "spiritual boycott" — to attend classes under protest.

The senate also voted to send an appeal to all deans and department heads, asking them to cancel tests and papers scheduled next week.

It voted to send letters expressing the stand of Student Government on the vacation dispute to local news media, all university trustees and the presidents of the Alumni Association and Parents' Association.

The senate had earlier voted 91-88 for a boycott, with five abstentions. The parliamentarian decided 91 votes were not a majority of those voting, and another vote was held. This time the boycott motion was soundly defeated.

Many senators said they felt their constituents would not back up a call for a boycott, and so voted against the idea. Doubts about massive student participation apparently decided the issue, since most senators seemed personally in favor of boycotting.

The senate defeated another motion which called for restoring Monday, Jan. 4 to the calendar. The administration added the day of vacation to give students attending the Sugar Bowl game time to travel back.

The mass rally at 3 p.m. on the quad set the stage for senate action, as students cheered the idea of a boycott and booed Chancellor William P. Tolley.

The enthusiastic crowd, estimated at 3,000-4,000 persons in size, voted to repeal the anti-noise act which bans campus demonstrations during class hours.

While the crowd waited for Tolley, who spoke at 3:30 p.m., student leaders addressed them from the steps of Hendricks Chapel. Stern asked, "If the answer is no, how do you feel about a boycott of classes?"

There was a storm of cheers.

The Chancellor's words drew a different reaction from the crowd. Jeering increased as he spoke.

"We have had a great many important issues on this campus . . ." Tolley said. "But this is not an important issue." He was booed.

Tolley said the administration had made an error in adding Monday, Jan. 4 to the scheduled vacation. He said he had assumed large numbers of students would travel to the Sugar Bowl by car, and would need the extra day to travel back safely.

"Now the error . . . could be corrected," Tolley said. "If the Student Senate petitions me tonight to restore it . . ." His next words were drowned out by the jeering of the crowd.

Tolley said students are important at Syracuse University, but not all-important. "In the university family, hearing is given to alumni, parents, trustees, deans, faculty and students," he said.

I'm not going to defend our actions," the Chancellor said. "I'm not going to try to explain them." The crowd drowned out his next words with angry booing.

(See SS, page 7)

Cheers

Student Government President CARL CORRALLO addresses the crowd outside Hendricks Chapel Monday moments before Chancellor William P. Tolley arrived to tell the students that Christmas vacation cannot be extended.

Boos

Chancellor WILLIAM P. TOLLEY tells the student body that Christmas vacation will begin as scheduled on Wednesday, Dec. 23. Students answered the Chancellor with boos, laughter and chants of "boycott."

Morse Deplores American Policy In S. Viet Nam

By AMOS MOSCRIP

U.S. Sen. Wayne Morse charged the United States with "post war colonialism" and violation of international law in South Viet Nam in a speech at Hendricks Chapel Monday night.

"It is really American interests and not the interests of South Viet Nam that we are concerned with," Morse, a Democrat from Oregon, said. "Our objective is no longer to help another people, but to maintain an American military presence on the mainland of Asia. The possibility that staging areas in Asia should no longer be available for use at our pleasure is so unthinkable among defense department spokesmen that they believe it is worth a war to retain at least one of them."

SEN. WAYNE MORSE

Morse termed the Vietnamese struggle a civil war.

"Oh, the Pentagon and the state department don't like to hear it characterized as a civil war, but the sad fact is that the war is a civil one."

Morse dismissed the charges of North Vietnamese infiltration into South Viet Nam.

"No new evidence has been offered to change the assesment that the great bulk of the Vietcong rebels are local residents," Morse said, "and that the civil war would continue whether or not it received aid or leadership from North Viet Nam.

"We are primarily told of by South Vietnam propagandists," Morse added, "but the

The Scene Was the Quad

Three p.m. and all's hell.

Students cover the quad of Syracuse University from the steps of Hendricks Chapel, Hunting B. Crouse Hall and the Main Library to the center sidewalk.

The air is bitterly cold.

And so is the answer.

At 2:30 p.m. crowds had already begun to gather on the steps of the chapel and around HBC. Student marshals, present to keep order, were recognized by their armbands—in a new twist for the wearing of the orange.

Student leaders milled on the steps and directed the crowd towards the center of the quad.

Radio stations, newspapers and television stations had representatives present to record what may have been SU's biggest display of student opinion in many years.

At 2:15 p.m the crowd had tripled and still students streamed from every direction. One demonstrator carried a sign, "Flint 4-A says Friday is the day." Other signs read "Bah, Humbug," "Christ or Football," "Celebrate Christmas at Home this year, Get Suspended," and "For Christ's Sake, Let us Go Home."

Robert (Robby) Stern, Student Senate speaker, reminded the crowd to remain orderly and asked the student body to repeal a regulation that prohibited demonstrations during class hours. The rule was unanimously repealed.

Student Government President Carl Corrallo thanked the crowd for coming and again reminded them to be courteous. His comment, "We have 15 minutes to kill, was followed with a chant of "Kill, kill, kill," by the crowd.

Mention of a possible boycott of classes drew whistles, cheers and screams from the demonstrators. Daily Orange editor-in-chief Andrew Porte's comment that there is a definite "lack of communications among the vice presidents," received another wild roar of approval.

At 3:17 p.m. Stern suggested singing Christmas carols, bringing a chant of "Sing, sing, sing," from the students. A few voices started "Deck the Halls with Chancellor Tolley," but faded at the chorus.

At 3:25 p.m. Chancellor William P. Tolley appeared.

His remarks were met with boos and hisses from the crowd. At several points, he was drowned out by shouts of "Boycott, Boycott!" But the students remained atten-

Viet Nam Policy

U. S. Supports 'Outlaw Nation'

By AUDREY GIPPMAN
News Editor

A former professor of constitutional and international law assailed the United States government for a war in Viet Nam which "cannot be justified under either the constitution or international law."

The former professor, U.S. Sen. Wayne Morse, a Democrat from Oregon, told the Daily Orange Monday the United States is thoroughly hypocritical in supporting what he termed an "outlaw nation."

He said the U.S. was hypocritical because it preached a doctrine of following the rule of law while actually it followed the law of the jungle. Morse cited the Viet Nam policy as law of the jungle.

Morse, a Democrat only since 1955, was originally elected senator as a member of the Republican Party. He claims that the "shocking expediency of President (Dwight D.) Eisenhower in 1952" caused him to leave the GOP in 1952.

After over two years as an independent, Morse joined the Democratic Party and won reelection in 1956 and 1962 as a Democrat.

Morse said Eisenhower would "say one thing in Louisiana and another in Harlem." The "final straw" he said was a "deal" Eisenhower made with Robert Taft which he (Eisenhower) promptly told Morse meant "nothing."

"I am convinced that the place for a progressive Republican is in the liberal wing of the Democratic Party," he said.

Morse also advised many Democrats to reverse his pattern and join the Republican Party. "I'm glad (Sen. Strom) Thurmond (S.C.) did it and more should follow," he said.

In discussing his mission of peace, which Morse claims is his purpose in fighting the U.S. policy intervention in Viet Nam, he said about U.S. Ambassador to Viet Nam Maxwell Taylor, "There is no person more dangerous to peace."

Morse claimed Taylor and former Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge had been escalating the war in Viet Nam for "months."

This is a violation of the Geneva Accords the U.S. claims to be upholding.

Actually, Morse contended, former Secretary of State John Foster Dulles deliberately kept the U.S. and Viet Nam from signing the papers at the 1954 conference.

He further claimed South Viet Nam is a puppet state of the United States.

Morse Deplores

Department of State has told us time and time again that they have no information on infiltration."

Morse gave an ominous view of continued use of military aid in South Viet Nam:

"If the U.S. continues on its drunken binge of war-making," Morse exclaimed, "the end result will be a massive war in Asia."

Morse then explained his charges that the United States had violated international law in South Viet Nam.

Although the United States did not sign the 1951 agreement, Morse declared, he said, "We would recognize it as international law, regarding violations with grave concern and as seriously threating international peace and security."

Morse brought up the fact that the Geneva agreement of 1951 prohibited the introduction of any troop reinforcements and additional military personnel in Viet Nam, along with the establishment of any new military bases.

As far as North Vietnamese infractions of the agreement, "I haven't any doubt they have violated it time and time again. But so have we.

"I hate the philosophy of the Vietcong as much as you do," Morse added, "but that doesn't make you justified in breaking international law. And we must have international law and justice to replace the jungle laws of military force."

Morse proposed either taking the South Viet Nam situation to the United Nations, a SEATO "while a political situation is developed" or a new 14-nation conference among the same nations that arranged the Geneva Accord.

Economist to Discuss Automation At Today's Citizenship Lecture

Dr. Theodore W. Schultz, professor of economics and Charles L. Hutchinson Distinguished Service Professor at the University of Chicago, will address citizenship students at 8 p.m., tonight, in Hendricks Chapel.

The subject of Schultz's speech will be "Automation and Unemployment."

Schultz received his formal education at South Dakota State College and at the University of Wisconsin where he received his master of science and doctorate in economics.

From 1930 to 1943, Schultz was professor of agricultural economics in 1934 and chairman of the department of economics and sociology from 1934 to 1943.

Since then Schultz has taught at the University of Chicago where he was chairman of the department of economics from 1946 to 1961.

In addition to his academic profession, Schultz has done much work for various organizations.

He has been a trustee and member of the executive committee of the National Planning Assn. since 1940 and a member of the board of directors of the National Bureau of Economics Research since 1949. He was its vice president in 1958, and president of the American Economics Assn. in 1960.

Schultz's work for the government includes positions in the Departments of State, Agriculture Commercial and Defense, White House Panel on Science and Technology, the Food and Nutrition Board, and the National Academy of Sciences.

The author of numerous books and articles, Dr. Schultz has written The Economic Value of Education, Transforming Traditional Agriculture, and Measures for Economic Development of Underdeveloped Countries.

SS to Picket Tolley

Tolley told them, "You're serious students. You are here to learn. Classes are important."

Chants of "Boycott! Boycott! Boycott!" drowned out his next sentence.

"If you are honest with yourself, many of you need to be here," Tolley said. "And I hope you will be here."

"When final decisions are made by the chancellor of the university, you have to learn to live with them," he said.

Tolley told the students to work on avoiding things they didn't like in the future. "Next year you will get out on Dec. 18 and return on Jan. 3," he said.

The crowd was highly vocal but orderly. SG marshals wearing bright orange armbands were on hand to control things. A few security police and city plainclothesmen stood by.

Before Tolley appeared, student leaders reviewed the history of their negotiations on a longer vacation.

Stern said, "We want our university to be one which is responsible to the students. We want our university to be one which is sympathic to the best interests of its students."

Corrallo, who called the mass meeting, was asked whether he thought students had been rude after they peered Tolley.

"I think the Chancellor was disrespectful to them," he said.

SUCE to Present 'The Inheritance'

The award winning film "The Inheritance" will be shown at 8 p.m. today and Wednesday in Kittredge Auditorium, Huntington B. Crouse Hall.

The film is being sponsored by the Syracuse University Committee on Equality as the third in their symposium series on "Man and Commitment."

The film, which placed second in the Mannheim Film Festival, was made jointly by the Congress of Industrial Organizations and the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America. It traces the history of the union as well as the labor and immigration movements in the United States since 1900.

The film uses old newsreels and still photographs, as well as the voices of Pete Seeger and Judy Collins singing songs written during the union movement and new songs written especially for the film.

The 60 minute documentary made its premier in New York at the Carnegie Hall Cinema on Nov. 8. "Variety" called the film "a well-filmed and interesting glimpse of one side of the American labor struggle."

"Cue Magazine" termed the film one of wide interest value due to the creative approach of the author Millard Lampell and producer-director Harold Mayer.

The film will follow an open SUCE meeting scheduled for 6:30 Tuesday in Kittredge. Everyone is cordially invited to attend the movie.

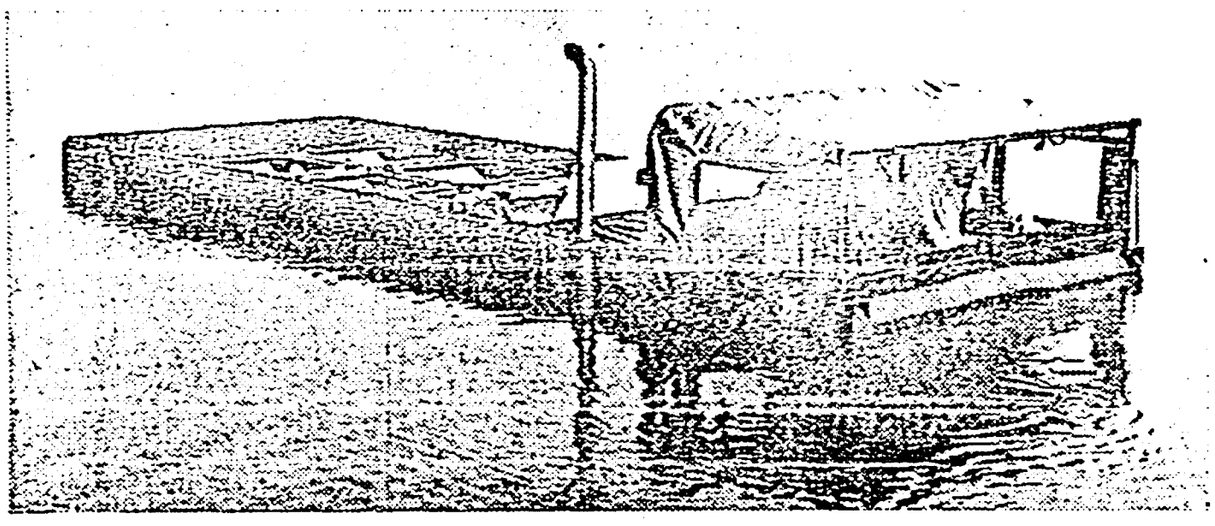
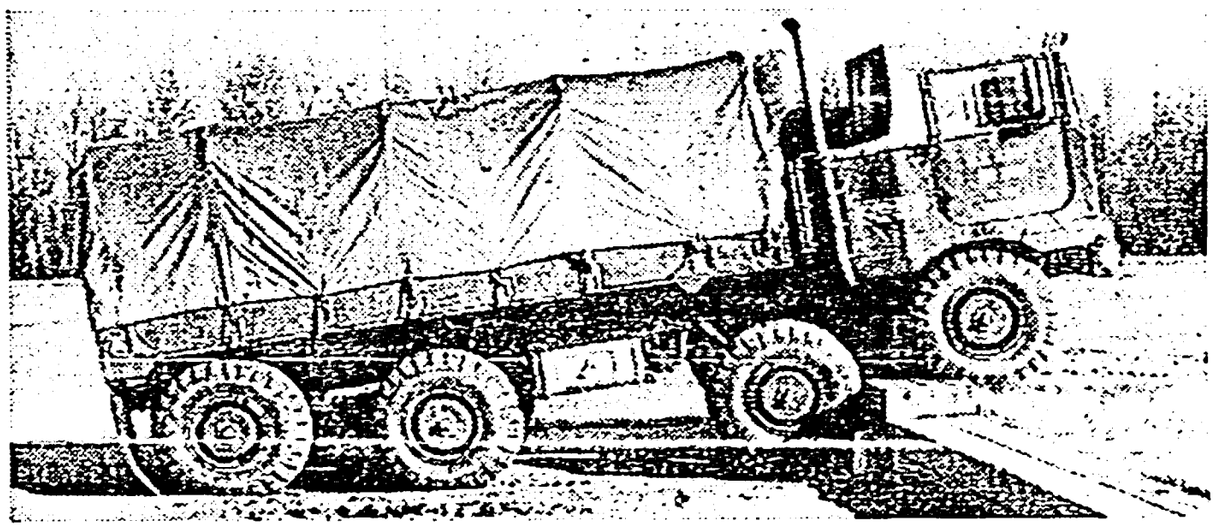
FORD MOTOR COMPANY BUILDS A TOUGH ONE



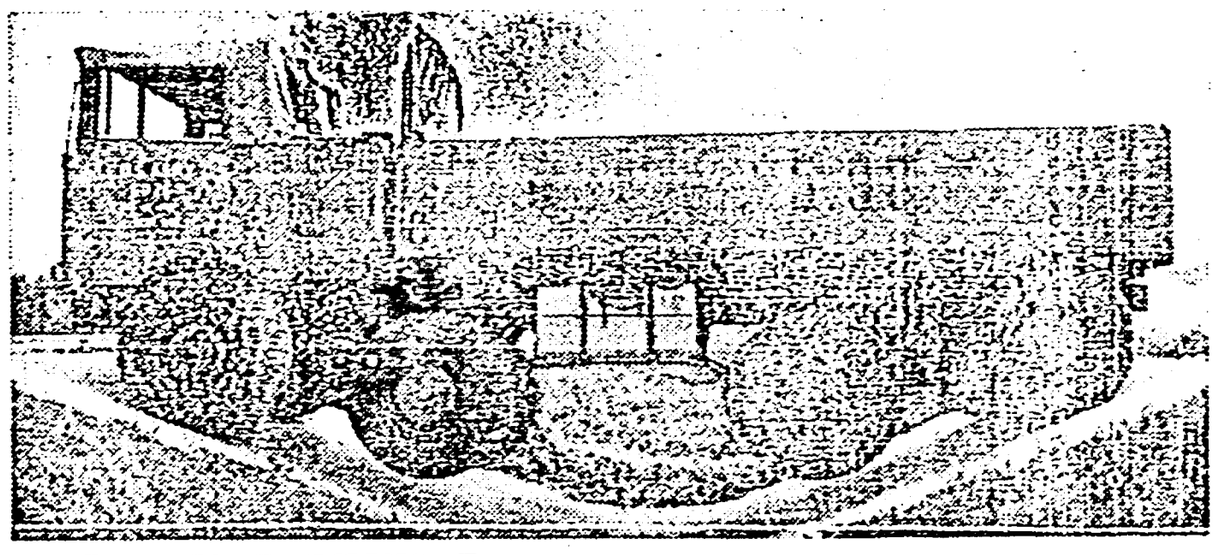
IT SWIMS

Ford Motor Company's new military truck floats. Air-inflated seals and internal air pressure keep the body and mechanical components dry. Its water speed is 2.5 mph.



IT CLIMBS STEPS

Climbing over a 27-inch high step or negotiating a 60% grade when fully loaded is no problem for this Ford vehicle. Proof that it can go over rough cross-country terrain.



IN FACT, THE ARMY'S NEW TRUCK GOES ALMOST ANYWHERE

Early In 1963, Ford Motor Company received a contract from the U.S. Army to design and develop a 5-ton cargo truck for use in tactical military operations. Before the end of that year, the first test unit had been designed and built.

This new vehicle, called the XM656 cargo truck, was sent to the Aberdeen Proving Ground for 40,000 miles of testing—twice that required for military acceptance. The vehicle was tested against road conditions that might be found anywhere in the world: swamps... loose sand... hilly backcountry... and highways. During the test, the truck carried a 10,000-lb. payload and, half the time, towed a 13,000-lb. load.

Outstanding characteristics of the truck's design are its floatability, improved cross-country mobility, light weight, reduced need for maintenance and a multi-fuel power plant that will run on anything from diesel oil to gasoline.

This is only one of many exciting new developments at Ford Motor Company. From manufacturing to marketing, we are finding better ways to do things. Career opportunities at Ford Motor Company have never been better. Schedule an interview with our representative to find one just right for you.

Latin American School Aided by SU Professors

The only undergraduate college of business administration in South America, Escuela de administracion y Finanzas in Medellin, Colombia, is getting helping hands from three Syracuse University professors.

SU also supplies much of the practical material used in the classroom and selects students from the graduating classes to come to Syracuse for advanced degree study.

The Colombian school, founded in 1960, aims at fulfilling the need for trained personnel in administration in Colombian industry.

The school was established through the cooperation of the Industrial Educational Corporation, an organization formed by Colombian industrialists; the U.S. Agency for International Development; and the Whirlpool Foundation, an educational organization.

Through the efforts of William T. Jerome, then dean of the College of Business Administration, SU entered the picture in 1962. Its role at the Escuela has involved providing professors who help to train the Colombian student in business administration, to develop new courses for the school and to review the success of the courses taught by Colombian personnel.

Robert G. Cox, present dean of the college, returned recently from a five-day visit to the Escuela.

"The real miracle of the school is that the whole thing is independent of government and the church, which is so influential in South America Cox said. "It was all financed by private industry, which has underwritten many losses so far."

"Syracuse has had a great deal of influence on the curriculum," Cox added "We try to emphasize abroad education in the major areas of man's knowledge while also trying to acquaint the student with the tools of his profession."

While most South American schools devote much time to techniques and stress learning by rote, the Syracuse program puts more emphasis on the humanities, offering such subjects as political science, psychology, sociology and human relations, Cox said.

In the Escuela curriculm, 92 for an undergraduate degree in business administration are in liberal arts subjects while 62 credits hours are devoted to technical business subjects.

The Escuela offers a five-year program and will graduate its first full class in 1965. There are 500 students their bachelor of arts degree and 50 working for associate degrees.

Students Support HUAC Abolition

By DONALD LAWLESS

The national drive to abolish the House of Representatives Committee on Un-American Activities is not without Syracuse University interest and support.

David Pravda, chairman of the Syracuse University Committee on Equality (SUCE) committee for the abolition of the House Un-American Activities Committee (HUAC), noted that HUAC was created in 1938 as a temporary committee to investigate un-American propoganda.

"With every new congress, a chance comes to abolish committees that are no longer needed. With the more liberal 89th congress meeting for the first time Jan. 4, the chance of abolishing the committee is better than ever," Pravda said to the Daily Orange Thursday.

Dissolving the committee in 1945 was defeated by a narrow margin and the HUAC became a permanent House committee, Pravda said.

"Opposition to the committee died during the McCarthy era," added Pravda.

Noting that the purpose of a House committee is to propose legislation which HUAC does not do, Pravda added that any legislation needed, "already exists."

"HUAC has a great back-log of infomation on millions of people in all walks of life, information that may be just rumors and is unsupported by evidence," Pravda noted.

Investigation by HUAC places a "stigma" on an individual that may never be erased, a "vicious power" that knows no bounds, said Pravda.

Using the example of Pete Seeger who was picketted by the American Legion in Syracuse recently, Pravda noted that folk song singer was cited for contempt of this committee but was later exhonorated in the courts.

"But," added Pravda, "a legal vindication is not a social vindication."

The National Committee to Abolish the House Un-American Activities Committee with whom Pravda is working, published a pamphlet saying that HUAC has spread the belief that the civil rights struggle is synonymous with subversion and treason" and that it is "red-inspired."

The National Committee for the Abolition of HUAC wants the house organ disbanded, its files transferred to the Archives, under condition that they not be opened for 50 years and that the machinery for investigation of matters concerning national security be turned over to the House Committee on Judiciary.

Norman Balbanian, professor of electrical engineering, spoke before the Student Senate to generate support for the movement last Thursday night.

Pravda emphasized the importance of having the public writing letters or making calls to their congressmen.

For any additional information, students may contact David Pravda at GR 2-2821.

Eddie John Miller

2nd Syracusan Cuts Record

A School of Art senior who got his start in the music business singing in impromptu hootenannies at Winchell Hall is one his way to a professional career as a ballad singer.

Edward Miller already has released one record on the Kapp label, the label that handles pianist Roger Williams.

"She's Not Mine' was written by Miller and got air play on Syracuse radio station WNDR.

"I've always sung," Miller said, "but I didn't get serious about it until I came to school. I brought a guitar up and started singing at get-togethers at Winchell Hall."

"I was asked to sing at dances sophomore year and when I wound up getting paid I started to wonder about the music business. I was excited about the reaction to my singing too."

Miller began writing songs then, the first he had ever written.

"I made a demonstration record here in Syracuse of some songs I wrote," Miller said, "and took it to New York. I figured the songs were as important as my singing. Companies don't want to see newcomers—they've got enough of those. They want to see new material."

But Miller got his first important break in New York as a singer as well as a song writer.

"My best break," Miller said, "was meeting Mike Berniker, my producer. He's the guy who discovered Barbara Streisand. He steered me into Kapp, a good label. Most kids in New York would get on a label that would try to get money with a one-shot record and nothing else. But Kapp was interested in me as a legitimate singer."

Miller wants to make good as a ballad singer, not a rock-and-roll star, but there are difficulties in this.

"It's almost impossible to make it as a ballad singer," Miller said. "You have to be accepted by adults who aren't too concerned with young kids singing. And it's especially hard for a guy. Girls are more accepted in the ballad market."

As for staying in the music business, "I have hopes, but it doesn't usually last. I want to do records for a time, but not have them take up too much of my time while I'm in school. Then I might go into advertising. But I'll always be concerned with singing. Who wouldn't be with the breaks I've got now?"

Miller will make another single for Kapp after Christmas and an album will be released later this year.

SU Prof Views German Theater

The United States is presently ahead of Germany in building experimental theaters, noted John Workman, Syracuse University faculty member and set designer for the drama department.

Workman recently returned from a trip to East and West Germany where he inspected the latest technical developments in theaters.

"Germans seem to be content with conventional dramatic productions performed on stages," he said. "But their productions display a greater understanding of true theatrical values than found in this country."

Workman said that technical machinery in Germany, though very similar in structure to U.S. equipment, varies in its application.

"German theaters operate on the repertory system, he said. "When you present alternate shows every night, your equipment has to be more elaborate and flexible."

Workman attended a convention of theater technicians in Frankfurt, West Germany, where he also toured the newly-built drama complex which is similar to the Lincoln Center in New York City.

Workman, who is chief technician for the University Regent Theatre at Syracuse, teaches scene design and stage lighting.

A graduate of Western Reserve University in Cleveland, he was an instructor-designer at Skidmore College. He supervises all technical productions of the Syracuse University drama department.

Dean Decides 'Special' Case

A Syracuse University student has been placed on disciplinary probation for stealing a telephone from a men's dormitory and placing the phone in his fraternity house.

The case was handled through Assistant Dean of Men David Tatham's office and not through Student Court. Tatham said the reason for this variation from normal procedure was due to what he called "special circumstances surrounding the student." He did not elaborate.

Tatham noted that there are several such thefts every year. He said that many were the result of vandalism and theft for the purpose of resale of the equipment.

tive and stable, jumping only on some of the Chancellor's obvious springboards.

"Students are important at Syracuse." Laugh, Laugh.

"This is not an important issue." Boo, hiss.

"I am not going to explain." Boo, Boo.

At 3:35 p.m. he had finished. The vacation would remain the same. The students would have to learn to live with decisions of the administration.

Stern promised action from the Student Government and requested the crowd to sing the Alma Mater because, "We're still students of Syracuse University."

At 3:40 p.m. the crowd dispersed, even further convinced of the message on one demonstrator's sign, "No, Virginia, there is no Christmas."

Two Boys Suspended in Drinking Incident

Two suspensions, two students on disciplinary probations and two fines and reprimands are the results of recent Student Court action.

Three freshman boys were involved in an incident of drinking in Sims dorm on Dec. 5. The court did not hear the case of one of the boys because he quit school immediately after the violation and joined the army, Frank Richmond, chief justice of the court, said.

Each of the boys had purchased one half-pint of liquor and had consumed it in a vacant room on the third floor of Sims previously used for emergency housing. While there, one of the trio dropped his cigarette under a mattress in the room. The cigarette began to smolder.

Confident that they had extinguished the fire, they finished the liquor and left. About one half-hour later, other residents of Sims smelled smoke and discovered the smoldering mattress, Richmond said.

When the resident advisor entered the room to extinguish the fire, he noticed fragments of the liquor bottles and butts from a certain rare brand of cigarette which he knew one of the boys smoked. He confronted the boys, who lived in Sims, and they admitted their guilt. All three were aware of the university rule concerning the misuse of alcohol, Richmond said.

The court suspended the two boys, effective the end of the semester. It specifically recommended that they return in June in order to make up the half-year. Both of the boys had satisfactory dorm records, and had not been in trouble before.

Another case, resulting in disciplinary probation, involved a junior boy in the College of Liberal Arts. The student had had past disciplinary trouble involving reprimands on three separate occasions from the dean of men for "drunken horseplay" in the dormitory, Richmond said. On Dec. 5, he was apprehended in Kimmel Dining Hall with three unopened cans of beer in a brown paper bag.

Students had been taking hamburgers from the dining hall. A resident advisor found the beer when he looked into the boy's bag to see if it contained any hamburgers.

The student claimed that he had been to a drive-in movie the night before in a friend's car, where they had been drinking. The friend had just returned the beer.

The student said that he had no intention of drinking the beer either in the dining hall or in the dormitory. He maintained that he was just carrying the beer until he could dispose of it.

He was placed on disciplinary probation for a period of six months, during which time he is ineligible for financial aid, automobile privileges and activities involving personnel clearance. Richmond said the case was "the first of 15 or 20 cases I've handled concerning possession of alcohol where no drinking was involved."

Another case of diciplinary probation came from the dean of women's office. It involved a sophomore girl with a .9 cumulative average who violated the sophomore driving regulation which specifies a 1.6 average for sophomores who own or operate a car on campus.

Though the girl did not own the car, she admitted to driving it alone on at least one occasion, and to driving the car with another person in it on several others. She claimed extenuating circumstances for the times she drove by herself. On another occasion she claimed that her head resident had given her permission to take driving lessons.

She said that she was under the misunderstanding that the driving rule applied only to driving lessons.

She said she was under the misunderstanding that the driving rules applied only to driving on the campus area. Her disciplinary probation is to last six months, during which time she may have no car, financial aid or activities requiring personnel clearance

Richmond said, "There is a common misunderstanding about the driving regulations. First, the rule does not say own and operate. It says own or operate. This means that a student without the required average is not allowed to drive anywhere in metropolitan Syracuse. Students who wish exemptions of this rule will only be exempted by special permission from the dean of men or dean of women and no one else."

Verbal reprimands and a fine of $2.50 were the penalties for two cases concerning meal tickets. Two girls were both involved in the same infraction. One, a non-university student, accepted a meal ticket from an SU coed for one meal. Both were fined and reprimanded.

Broadcasters Start Contest

The Alpha Epsilon Rho annual production contest is being sponsored on the Syracuse University campus by the Beta chapter.

Alpha Epsilon Rho is the national radio-television honorary.

Member university broadcasting departments are eligible to submit pre-recorded tapes of television and radio programs.

The entries will be divided into three catagories—radio tape, television video tape recordings and film.

The local contest will be judged by faculty members of the Syracuse University radio-television department and local professionals.

The winners will be announced next spring after the final judging in Houston at the yearly Alpha Epsilon Rho convention.

Financial Aid Forms Ready

Applications for financial aid during the academic year 1965-66 may be submitted from now until April 16.

Criteria used in selecting students for financial assistance are financial need, academic performance and citizenship.

In addition to the application, the Parents' Confidential Statement and the student's academic performance are used in making the decision.

A cumulative grade point average of 1.5 is necessary for financial aid consideration. For this reason, freshmen are asked not to apply until the completion of the fall semester.

Those students currently holding scholarships or a National Defense loan must reapply. An interview is required for new applicants.

Applications can be obtained from the Financial Aids Office, 307 Administration Bldg.

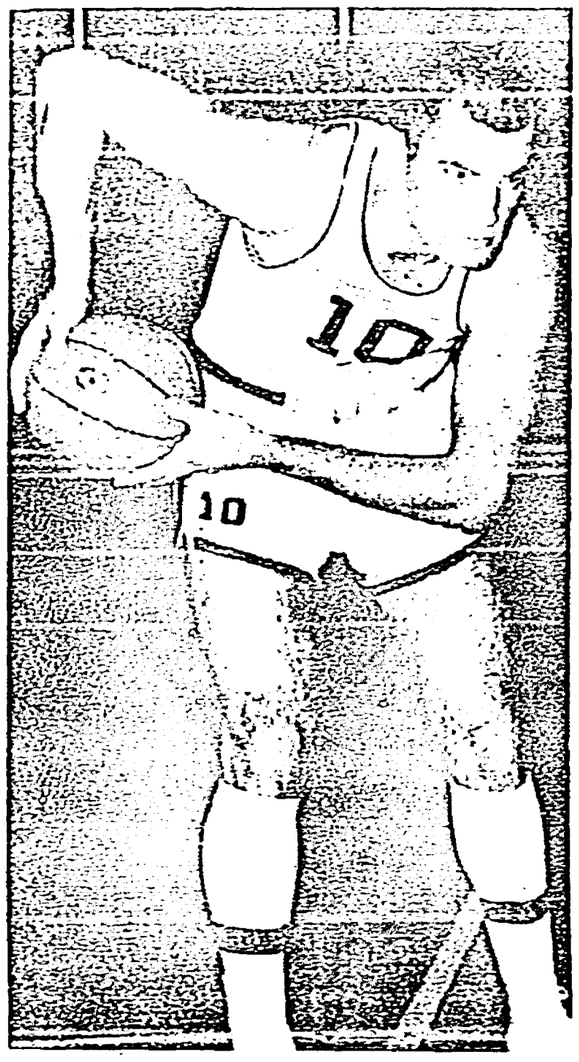
Eastern Whips Orangemen, 79-69



EDDIE BODKIN
. . . nets 27 points for Eastern

By BILL BRODSKY
DO Sports Correspondent

Coach Fred Lewis came back to his alma mater last night and got a standing ovation from a crowd of 6,500. Unfortunately Eastern Kentucky's basketball team was not nearly as hospitable, as they tripped up Syracuse University's Orangemen by a 79-69 score.

Lewis emphasized after the game that his team was back on the move." We finally came alive but took too long to adjust to the officiating. We outrebounded them and Chuck Richards did well. I think we're ready to play ball now."

Center Richards stood out as he chalked up 24 points and looked impressive under the boards. In a series of layups Big Chuck added ten points in a period of 2:25.

The first half was an education in Ohio Valley Conference basketball for the Piety. Dave Bing as usual made the plays, but the Orangemen trailed at the end of the half by ten.

The second half did not begin on a brighter note, as SU lost the ball and was set back by as many as 15 points with only 15 minutes remaining in the second half.

Lewis then put on a full court press with Richards, Bing, Goldsmith, Nicoletti and Duffy. This strategy cut Eastern's advantage from 19 to 10 points.

With 1:20 left Syracuse cut the margin to nine, but time ran out with both teams trading foul shots.

Statistically the Southerners did well, shooting a respectable 43 per cent from the floor. The Orangemen did not fare so well, sinking only 39.6 per cent of their shots, about ten marks below their average.

Eastern Kentucky coach Jim Baechtold was pleased with his team's performance. "We had a fine first half," he said. "We attacked Syracuse's zone well and only lost the ball twice."

Asked about the officiating, Baechtold replied "I thought it was a well-officiated game. They let us play."

Piety Rates Highly In Final Statistics

By BOB KRENGEL

All season long Syracusans watched their gridders grind out yardage in a relentless attack that tested every defensive line that faced the Orange during the year.

Every team feared the explosive power backfield of Jim Nance, Floyd Little and Walley Mahle.

Final season statistics have confirmed the fact that coach Ben Schwartzwalder's ground game works, as SU has won the national rushing title.

Final figures just released show Syracuse first with 2,514 yards rushing in 544 attempts for a game average of 251.

This was 12 yards per game better than runnerup Bowling Green, with 2,293 yards.

The Orangemen also placed sixth in total defense and eighth in rushing defense, in the first department the "Spiders" yielded only 1,859 yards, an average of 185.9 per game.

In rushing defense the Piety gave up 861 yards for a low 86.1 yard average to each opponent.

Leading the way in total offense, passing offense and scoring was Tulsa University, owing to the spectacular performance of quarterback Jerry Rhome.

Tulsa's three crowns were the most earned by one team since 1959 when the Orangemen snared five titles.

Auburn took the total defense crown and Washington the rushing defense championship. Arkansas gave up the least points while Kent State had the best pass defense.

Hill Fencers Clip Hobart

Syracuse's fencing team, led by the fine showing of the foil squad, trounced Hobart College, 19-8, Saturday afternoon.

Unexpected standouts were Clint Wirgen in epee and Dennis Lambert in foil, as both fencers collected three individual victories.

Wirgen was converted from foil to epee because of his great timing. Lambert's quick insights and aggressive drive [illegible] his triumphs.

Other foil wins went to captain Harvey Schuman (3) and Jack Barman (2).

Epeemen Peter Kraus and Stu Peskin chalked up one victory apiece.

In the saber competition, Stan Boyer produced two wins, Les Morostory another two and Gus Dalmat and Bruno Schmidt, one each.

Jack Ames, Tokyo Olympic [illegible] and prior to Saturday, [illegible] for Syracuse team showed "a lot of spirit, aggressiveness and self-confidence, which is essential to a winning club."

The Orange fencers swing into action again Saturday when they host the University of Buffalo in a 1 p.m. encounter.

Gymnasts Dump Navy

By JIM KLURFELD

Syracuse's gymnastics team opened the season with a 68-44 victory over Navy Saturday, as senior Sid Oglesby led all performers with 19 points.

Syracuse coach Paul Romeo brought his squad to the Naval Academy without the services of several key performers because of injuries, but the Orangemen available for duty captured first places in five of seven events.

"We have pretty good team depth," Romeo commented after the meet. "But we were hurt because of injuries. For instance, Allan Keyles, who was entered in five events could not make the trip due to an injury. That left five spots open."

Oglesby opened the meet by taking first place in the floor exercise and also took first place honors in the long horse vault, thus making him the meet's only double winner.

The NCAA long horse vault champion gave a breath-taking performance in that event, raking up scores of 9.9, 9.6, 9.8, and 9.6. His total score was 9.7, near perfect.

In addition, Oglesby finished second in the parallel bars and third on the side horse.

The Orange's top event was the still rings in which they copped the first three places.

Ted Edwards won the event, while teammates Ray Walters and John Steffney took second and third respectively.

In a new event, the trampoline, Syracuse's Terry Orlick took first place, with Chann Rudd right behind him in second. Orlick also had a third in the floor exercises.

Navy's only two event winners were team captain Wayne Durham's first place on the horizontal bar and Fordon Petus' winning of the parallel bars.

Jon Meury on the side horse was the Orangemen's other first place winner.

In analyzing the meet Romeo said, "we've got a long way to go before we have a great team. But I'm satisfied with our performance. This group has a lot of team spirit and I think they're going to continue to develop."

Loses to Alma Mater

Orange cage coach FRED LEWIS, a 1945-46 All-American at Eastern Kentucky, saw his Syracuse charges drop a 79-69 decision to his Alma Mater last night in Richmond, Ky. At Eastern in his hey-day, Lewis led the Maroons to 41 victories against only eight losses. In 1944-45 and 1945-46, he was the nation's No. 3 and No. 4 scorer respectively.

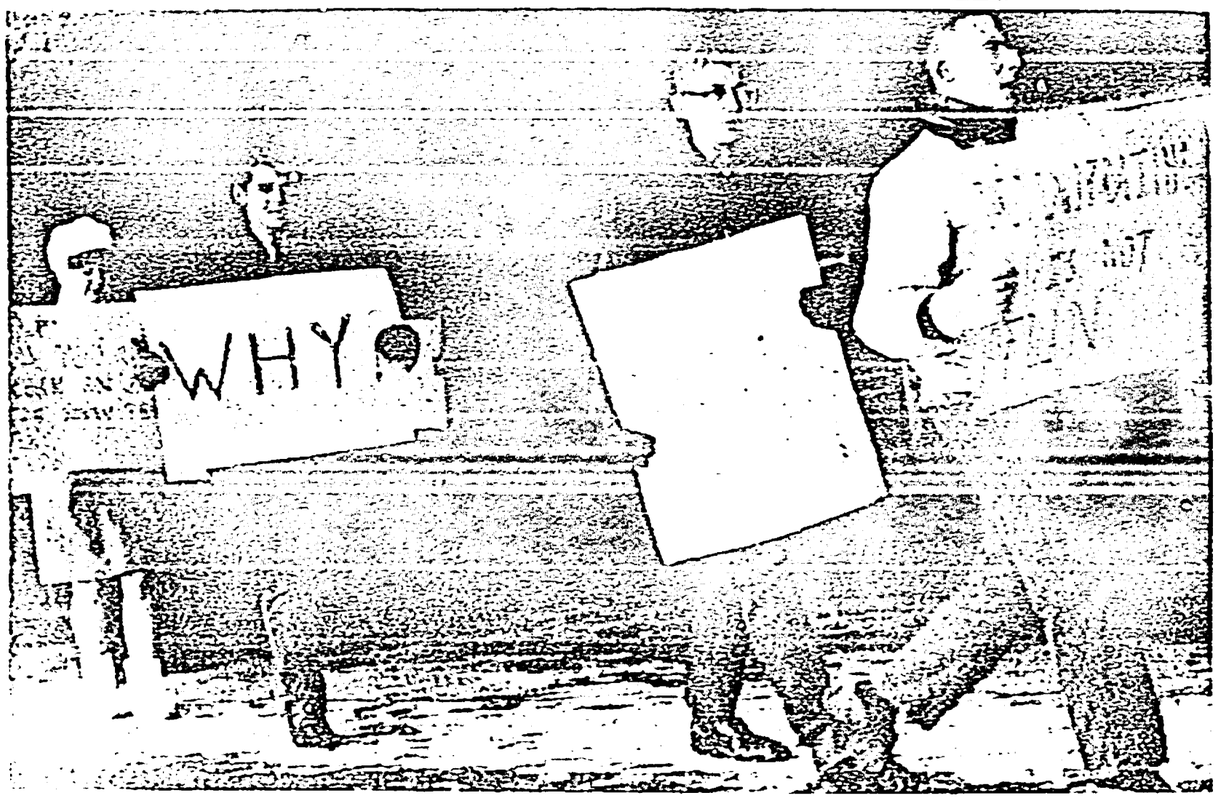
Students Lethargic Over Picketing



Cold Pickets

They're picketing around the Administration Bldg., Hendricks Chapel, Huntington B. Crouse Hall and the Chancellor's house. Several students just ask "Why?", but some more religious-minded students ask what Mary and Joseph would have done if they had been at SU. Another student simply states, "demonstrating is not fun." And it gets cold out there.

Small Group Protests Against Chancellor On Yule Vacation

BULLETIN

Students may have been lethargic over picketing, but 1,300 of them rallied in front of Chancellor William P. Tolley's home late Tuesday night to shout their disfavor over Tolley's refusal to extend the Christmas vacation.

The Chancellor was out of town at the time.

Picketers organized by Student Government demonstrated in front of the Administration Building, on the quad and in Walnut Park in front of Chancellor William P. Tolley's home Tuesday.

The students were protesting the refusal of the administration to lengthen the Christmas recess, as well as alleged unresponsiveness of the administration to student interests.

The largest group of the day numbered about 125, in Walnut Park shortly after 8 p.m. permission to approximately 3,500 students gathered on the main quad at 3 p.m. Monday.

The cabinet, which includes the SG president and vice president, SS speaker and Student Court chief justice, recommended the picket line be continued only until Friday instead of the original plan to picket until Dec. 23.

It also asked that the students picket only between 10 a.m. - 4 p.m. at the Administration Building and 7 p.m. -midnight at the Chancellor's home, 701 Walnut Ave.

The original picket plans called for a 24-hour picket of the Administration Building and Tolley's home.

"The cabinet shall continue to be receptive to student sentiment and shall make such changes are are necessary in the program," the statement read. "We ask the student body to support the present course of action."

The Christmas vacation will be the subject of a WAER documentary today. "Focus: Syracuse University Christmas Vacation" will be presented at 6:30 p.m. over WAER (88.3 FM).

The Student Government cabinet earlier Tuesday called for student support of a picketing action sactioned by an emergency meeting of the Student Senate Monday.

The action was called in response to a refusal by Chancellor William P. Tolley to extent the Christmas vacation.

After student leaders requested a change of the holiday recess from Dec. 23 to Saturday, Tolley refused early vacation

News Analysis

A Study in Leadership

By JESSE SMITH

Student Senate's action Monday night came as a surprise to many people who expected a boycott of classes to grow out of widespread unrest.

It was a shock to Student Government President Carl Corrallo, who called for a boycott at the meeting.

The senate showed how unpredictable it can be when it exercises its power to interpret student feeling and take initiatives.

Student leadership has been exercised by an entirely different group for the past few weeks. Efforts to gain a reprieve for four suspended coeds and an extension for Christmas vacation had been planned by a sort of ad hoc policy committee.

The strategy planning group include Corrallo, Speaker Robert (Robby) Stern of the senate, Student Court Chief Justice Frank Richmond, senior class President Roger Harrison and, at one time or another, almost every major campus leader.

The leadership group aimed to rally students behind Student Government's opposition to several administrative decisions. In Christmas vacation it had a popular issue, but most of the leaders were more concerned with gaining a reprieve for the four suspended coeds.

When the group learned of the change in the disciplinary decision last Thursday afternoon, it concentrated on the vacation. An appeal for a boy-

EARLY VACATION SET FOR DO STAFF

Vacation nears, and the Daily Orange (if not the campus) is taking an early break. Thursday's issue will be the last regular edition before the Christmas recess. Friday's newspaper will be devoted to a Sugar Bowl special, with "campus notices" as an extra added attraction.

Committees

SU's Answer to Everything

This is the sixth in a series by DO administration reporter Carol Rubright concerning university committees. These little-known boards, manned by both administrators and students, represent a liaison between these often-opposed factions. Today's story concerns the personnel committee and the Manley Field House Policy Board.

By CAROL RUBRIGHT
Junior Editor

Q. What is a camel?

A. A horse designed by a committee.

Whatever your opinion of them, committees at Syracuse are here to stay; and committees representing students, faculty and administration deal with problems ranging from use of the fieldhouse to student welfare.

The university Personnel Committee, chaired during alternate two-year periods by either the dean of men or the dean of women, is the group which attempts to "solve problems related to student life and welfare," according to its chairman Marjorie C. Smith, dean of women.

Student members comprose one-fifth of the membership. They represent the legislative (Student Senate speaker Robert Stern), the executive (Student Government President Carl Corrallo), and the judicial (Student Court Chief Justice Frank Richmond) branches of Student Government.

The committee "deals with policy, not specifics," according to Dean Smith.

For example, it regularly reviews the seven university policies governing student conduct. This include, regulations concerning:

"Intoxicating beverages; gambling; smoking; student marriage; false information; dishonesty; and firearms, fireworks and other deadly weapons" as listed in the SU Dates & Data bulletin.

It also helped the Ernie Davis Fund committee set up its program after the fund was approved by the Campus Chest. University regulations forbid the solicitation of funds from the general campus by any group other than the Campus Chest.

The overall security setup on Mount Olympus is also determined by the committee.

"It is difficult to define the scope of the personnel committee," said Dean Smith, "We are not a disciplinary committee, we don't deal with specific social events or with orientation. We help to set up standards and advise. This is a policy board."

One of the youngest university committees on campus controls the policy of one of the youngest buildings on

Economist Sees Rise In Obsolescent Skills

By LOIS WINEBAUM

A constant rise in the obsolescence of skills faces today's economy, Dr. Theodore W. Schultz, professor of economics at the University of Chicago, said Tuesday night.

Speaking at the third in a series of public affairs lectures, Schultz addressed citizenship students on the problems of automation and employment. His goal, he said, was to help guard against an uncertain future.

"There's a whole category of people who are trying to earn a living in the American economy with obsolescent skills," he said. "This is further increased by discrimination, which is built into our system. It runs against not only the Ne-

Big Talk, Little Action

Two-and-half weeks of near-perfect organization and planning were destroyed in tre span of three hours Monday evening as the Student Senate was left to make a decision by itself.

The decisions made by the senate left us quite disheartened over the desire of the student body to right what is wrong. The senate showed again, conclusively perhaps, that the students are afraid to stick their necks out for anything important.

The vacation issue is dead, but the senate failed to see that the Chancellor would never change his mind. They felt there is still hope.

The senate can picket until it's blue in the face, which won't be too long if present weather conditions persist, and vacation will not be changed.

The problem to be attacked is bigger — much bigger — and picketing would be only one small drop in the bucket of student feelings ignored by the administration.

A tired speaker and a tired president did all they could to steer the senate in the right direction. Their efforts failed, for their courage was mirrored only by a "no guts" attitude shown by the legislature.

The senate's problem is that it tries to think for itself. In past years this might have worked, for the senate was a fighting group, leading the student body.

For once we have elected leaders capable of leading, and the senate fell flat on its face with this realization that its power had been usurped by more capable hands.

The greedy senate wanted its own way, and it got it. And now it must live up to it, or else its future screams will be met only by administrative snickers.

The senate tackled the student leaders while they were marching down the field, and now it must pick up the loose ball and continue to head for the goal line.

The senate expressed sentiment that the minority should abide by the will of the majority. This is the way democracy functions.

If that is so, then each of the 215 senators — from cottages, dormitories, fraternities and sororities, as well as each and every senator-at-large — must be on that picket line today to show their feelings.

Each senator noted as missing will be one more reason why student feelings should never be considered by the administration.

It's your ball, senate. Fourth down, goal to go.

O Say Can You See

He Knew Them Well

By Ken Auletta

"THE BARON: Mr. President, there's something I've been wanting to ask you. What exactly is the purpose of our new company? Or is that an indiscreet question..?

THE PRESIDENT: Indiscreet? Not a bit. Merely unusual. As far as I know, you're the first member of a board of directors ever to ask such a question.

THE BARON: Do we plan to exploit a commodity? A utility?

THE PRESIDENT: My dear sir, I haven't the faintest idea.

THE BARON: But, if you don't know — who does?

THE PRESIDENT: Nobody."

"The Madwoman of Chaillot" — Jean Giraudoux

Thousands of students smothered the grass and cheered loudly; atop the steps of Hendricks Chapel and overlooking waves of well-groomed faces, an elderly man responded by smiling and laughing heartily. They did not understand one another: for students cheered for hope that their Chancellor would grant them an early Christmas recess. And he laughed from knowledge that this congregation was nothing to fear.

The American flag understood, for it was at half mast.

Monday afternoon witnessed students gathered to express a collective sense of outrage concerning their most passionate conviction: that Christmas vacation was too short. This was their Chancellor-mistaking duty for valor, and feeling light and hearty, as he felt the occasion warranted. Students may have had the nerve to boo him, but he had his years of service as Chancellor to stiffly remind him that authority is usually a sufficient mask of weakness. So he paid no heed to their peevish whine.

This is two-thirds of our university community; the other third, our faculty, as is their custom, peered at the proceedings from nearby windows.

The Chancellor stood for ten full minutes before this peevish crowd and, in order, said that some of his friends thought it beneath a Chancellor's dignity to address such an audience but that he disagreed, that he had bought the Speaker of the Student Senate as his slave at the weekend auction, that Syracuse University had just had a fine Freshman Weekend, that he had a good deal of respect for student leaders and their sincerity, and that it was "a lot of fun" for him to witness "this demonstration."

He then pulled from a pocket three large and rumpled notecards, which were now to tell him what to say. He told his audience that, in deference to the Student Senate, he would be willing to rescind the extra day of vacation he had recently granted so as to allow students to travel conveniently from the Sugar Bowl, if the Student Senate would only ask him.

One could see right through the Chancellor, but even this was, at the most, only an embarrassment to him. But of our students it revealed a streak of hypocrisy—for they booed. Had they, by and large, been sincere that theirs was not an effort to escape from school, they should have been insulted, instead they were angry that their Chancellor would suggest depriving them of a day of their vacation.

And yet--one must caution himself not to be too harsh on any student, however unsensitive, who would boo the Chancellor of Syracuse University.

The Chancellor continued following his note cards, informing his audience that "students are important at Syracuse University," and that there is "no other university of our size where they have a like importance." For evidence he recited that students play such an important role as to have representation on the design board, Board of Publications and athletic board, as well as the regular meetings of student leaders and their deans, the fact that the senior class helps select the commencement speaker, the fact that students and administrators attend, together, such conferences as Pinebrook and Sagamore, "and so the story goes."

It would serve little more than one's anger to speak, in rebuttal, of Harvard or even City College, to note that students are always in the minority on such committees, that the committees are almost always concerned with trivia, that the discussion process student leaders are sometimes allowed differs considerably from the decision process that is rarely theirs, and that, anyway, our student body, en masse, is merely a fetid golb of inane dribble.

This is anger though that has little recourse but to freeze into impotent frustration. For our university community, like its many sisters, measures in quantities and not qualities. American education has become one of capitalism's most glamorous industries, with the sprawling "multi-university" as its most ostentatious monster. Our intelligence has created the large and complex machinery of an industry, which in turn has placed us in its service.

The university bows to Bigness: to BIG football, and BIG faculty, and BIG research grants, and BIG classes, and BIG student bodies. Lost is the true prupose of the university, its character, its soul. Or as A. Whitney Griswold, former president of Yale University once said: "A university is an idealistic community, and the best ones provide models of what the civilized world should provide for us all."

But I am sorry, I am jumping ahead of our Chancellor's speech. Glancing at his note cards and speaking of his administration, the Chancellor exclaimed: "We are not perfect, we are not infallible." Looking up, and then down at the audience, he added: "But when we act the decision is final. I am not going to defend our action..." The audience only booed.

He patiently waited, resumed his speech by being kind enough to mention that his cards showed that he only had one more paragraph to go, and then proclaimed: "When a final decision is made by the Chancellor of Syracuse University, you must learn to live with it." Reason is not to be confused with the university's policies.

These, then, are the quotable morsels of William Pearson Tolley's philosophy of education.

To demonstrate that he was not insensitive to student feelings, the Chancellor added another paragraph, and told his students that he had already arranged for students to leave school for Christmas recess as early as December 18—next year. He was only booed again.

Chancellor Tolley turned and disappeared through the door. The speaker of the Student Senate led the multitude in a singing of their alma mater; at the conclusion of which, and on the side of the chapel steps, Chancellor Tolley smiled and calmly chatted with Deans Faigle and Carleton, Mr. Burch, the director of real estate, and another man. Taking leave of this small congregation, he slipped his hands through the arms of two students who casually walked with him to the foot of the Administration Building, where he paused, finished the impersonal conversation, and entered alone.

Caught in Passing

The Sword and Vacation

by Jeff Zients

Me thinks that if there is supposed to be a fine line between good and bad taste the editors of the "Sword of Damocles" have certainly avoided completely any existing gray areas. We don't wish to give publicity to this effort by dwelling at length but gads fellas if this is fine college satire from mature minds and not down right tasteless supposedly camoflauged muckraking I will eat all of your 2800 copies on the quad at midnite.

Surely the "Authority of Selected Student's Handbook," "Where to do it on campus," and the letter from Ronald must stand out as the most vile, unnecessary, unfunny and tasteless examples of "journalism" in quite a while. The center fold I would think could be a column by itself but if I were the guy making decisions around SU I think I might consult the yellow pages for attorney.

On a personal note, this is hardly something I would want to show a non-Syracusan as an example of creative minds on our campus.

In short, this year's "new sword" is last year's central theme but with alleged satire thrown in. If we are to have a humor magazine on campus why not one more close to the "Princeton Tiger" or even "Mad?" These at least provide a knowledgable chuckle and not the revulsion and tasteless meanderings of Syracuse University's new "humor" magazine. Nuff said.

Now then gang, about this vacation extention issue. I'll risk being stoned on the quad by asking all of you how important this issue will be come Dec. 24. I haven't seen so many people discuss one thing so much since we all debated if a bowl bid was coming or not. The vacation bit seems to have been given more press than the election or the assaination. Hit the people with a local issue is the answer, I guess. But it's still pretty amazing how sentimental we all can get about Christmas eve on such short notice. Funny nobody looked at the calendar before Thanksgiving. Or did they? No, I hope we get the extention too, guys, but is it really THAT important?

On another note, when we return, be it the fifth, sixth or twelfth of never this column will present its annual awards so there's something to look forward to after New Years Eve.

Folk Gallery

Sandy Baron, topical comedian, who has appeared on "That Was the Week That Was" TV show, will perform at 9 p.m., 10 p.m., 11 p.m. this week at the Folk Gallery. A fourth show will be presented at midnight on Friday and Saturday. Baron's comedy, often compared with that of Dick Gregory, has been recorde and released by Roulette Records on an LP album called "The Race; Race!;"

Completing the twin bill will be The Villagers, folk duo, direct from Boston's The Unicorn. This week's twin bill accompanies a number of changes in the Folk Gallery's operation. Along with time changes given above, the club will open seven nights a week with Monday's devoted to hootenannies, to which all local folk performers are invited.

TV Exhibit Highlights Bluem Book

A display of stills from outstanding TV and film documentaries comprises this week's exhibit in the Newhouse Lounge, Newhouse Communications Center. The exhibit observes the publication of "Documentary in American Television," a new book written by Dr. A. William Bluem, associate professor in the Television-Radio department.

Included are stills depicting "the first photo - interview" (1886); pictures of TV documentarists Edward R. Murrow, Irving Gitlin, and Richard Leacock; and stills from such programs as "Meet Comrade Student" and "Fire Rescue."

Bluem's book explores the forms and functions of the TV documentary and the problems and possibilities of documentary's use in a free society.

ROLAND WOLSELEY

Compulsive Author of J-Books

By RENEE BRAUN

Most people might find it a difficult task to write one book.

During the last semester Dr. Roland E. Wolseley, chairman of the magazine department in the Newhouse Communications Center worked on six books at once.

ROLAND WOLSELEY

"I have always had at least two, three, or four books in different stages of completion as long as I have been teaching journalism," he said. Wolseley has written numerous books since 1933.

Last spring semester, Wolseley took a leave of absence to concentrate on the six books he had in progress. It is the policy of Syracuse University to grant such leaves to any faculty member who can prove he is working on a responsible piece of writing or research grant.

Wolseley commented he felt that he had met the qualifications and added that he has served the university for 19 years.

It requires a great deal of research to author or co-author the number of books and articles that Wolseley has completed. He said he does most of his work at home.

"I have more than 1,000 books in my library at home on journalism and have accumulated quite a bit of information over the years," he said. His office is full of boxes of magazines which are classified according to subject.

To gather expert opinion on many of the subjects, Wolseley is required to carry on a great deal of correspondence, all of which he does himself.

Two of the books he has worked on, "Understanding Magazines" and "House Publications" are scheduled to be published this spring. "Understanding Magazines," according to Wolseley, deals with all the aspects of the magazine industry in the United States. Included in the book are the history, social responsibilities, location and content of magazines and company organs.

"House Publications" will explain the organization, function and finance of house organs, he said.

Other books are in various stages of completion. "I have nearly finished 'Memo to the Important Reader,' but as yet have no publisher,' he said.

This book relates to the economics and function of religious journalism in the United States, Wolseley explained.

Wolseley is also working on the seventh edition of the "Journalist Bookshelf," an annotated bibliography of the United States journalist. The last edition was published in 1961. "I continually work on the next edition so I don't have to do all the work at once," he explained.

Wolseley has not yet given a title to the book which he is writing. He described it as a reader on the American magazine. "It contains selections from some famous, some not famous writers of this country," he stated.

In addition to reprinting articles, Wolseley and Sherleyn Bennion, a doctoral candidate at Syracuse University sharing the authorship, have compiled an essay and extensive bibliography for each section.

Wolseley is currently gathering material for a book to be published in the distant future on an objective criticism of the American newspaper. The American newspaper is not a perfect instrument, he said.

He explained that he does not write books for the money. "There is no money in books. I write them because I am a compulsive writer. They are an extension of classes. I want my words to live longer than class. And it makes teaching easier."

cott had been discussed as a last resort, but in the meantime, the leaders hoped to persuade the administration to grant an extension through mass student pressure.

Both the leaders and the undergraduate students who overwhelmingly supported the extension in a poll believed they could force a change by showing their feelings and their unity. It now appearfs that administrative leaders did not consider the vacation schedule an open question.

The crowd on the quad Monday chanted "boycott!"

But with the Chancellor's final refusal to yield to student pressure, the time had come for SG to decide just how much further it would go.

Perhaps Corrallo and Stern had doubts about a boycott, or perhaps they merely wished to have any action officially ratified by the senate. Whatever the reason, they called a special senate session.

Control of the situation had passed from a small organized group of leaders to a large group which faced the problem of trying to represent students and at the same time to lead them—a large group which had not planned anything.

Corrallo called for a boycott. The senate hesitated to follow his leadership, fearing that students would not follow. The senate session was long. It became bogged down in parliamentary procedure.

Some senators with their own ideas about mass protests proposed picketing. The senate, doubtful about a boycott, rallied around the idea. Harley Flaum and Jan Strauss emerged as central figures in the planned protest. Corrallo and Stern were left holding the bag.

Who now represents the students? Whom will the students follow? Who knows?

campus, Manley Field House.

Established late in 1962, the Manley Field House Policy Committee meets only on special call (it has not met yet this semester) to handle matters concerning the use of the fieldhouse which are not defined by university rules. This includes rental of the facilities to off-campus groups such as circuses, high schools and intercollegiate organizations.

Charges for use of the fieldhouse are still to be made final since costs can be determined only through experience.

"It takes a crew of men several days just to lay the floor down," John S. Hafer, chairman of the committee and university dean of personnel administration told the Daily Orange.

Use of the fieldhouse by groups other than the athletic department is limited to four categories:

1. University calendar events with fixed dates such as commencement, orientation etc.

2. University-sponsored events such as concerts, alumni meetings and cultural events.

3. University-approved meetings such as campus political gatherings, club meetings, etc. and

4. Non-university events such as political rallies, sports exhibitions, circuses and rodeos.

Also included in the use schedule is band practice and ROTC drills as well as those activities for which the building was designed, i.e. athletic events and practice sessions of the teams.

There are 16 members serving on this committee, two of whom are students Carl Corrallo and Nancy Perkins, the executive officers of Student Government.

The other 14 members include the deans of men and women, vice presidents Eric H.Faigle and Alexander N. Charters; representative for ROTC, builldings and grounds, safety and security, the registrar's office and the men's and women's athletic departments.

Tolley Offers High Praise To Late Former Chancellor

Chancellor William P. Tolley praised a predecessor as a man "great in mind, character, courage and faith" when he spoke at the funeral services of Chancellor Charles Wesley Flint, Tuesday.

Flint, fifth chancellor of Syracuse University, died Saturday in Binghamton.

Burial will take place at 10:30 a.m. today at Oakwood Cemetery, adjoining the SU campus. Bishop W. Ralph Ward, Methodist bishop of Syracuse, will officiate at the burial service.

Dr. Gordon Hoople, chairman of the SU board of trustees, will represent the university at the burial.

Chancellor Tolley commented: "Charles Wesley Flint came to Syracuse as Chancellor the year I graduated, 1922. He was the right man at the right time. What he did for Syracuse few men could have done."

With the help of George H. Maxwell, Dr. Flint founded the Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs. He is credited with improving the School of Education and organizing the School of Journalism.

"Every part of the university felt his energetic influence," stated Tolley. "He raised admission standards, improved personnel services, gave new life to the Alumni Assn., organized the now famous course for training deans of women and brought to the faculty men of exceptional distinction from leading universities."

Dr. Flint was not a man who expected thanks, Tolley said. "He was too unselfish, too dedicated, too wise for that. He did nothing for his own honor."

Tolley said he remembered the former Chancellor as a person "great in character as well as mind, of exceptional integrity, who permitted himself no self deception."

Chancellor Tolley told family and friends at the funeral services:

"He had more than his share of suffering and his passing was a release from the infirmities of age. But with all the crippling of his body, the light of his mind, the radiance of his spirit and the flame of his courage were as bright as ever."

A person with charm is one who can make another feel that both of them are pretty wonderful people.

To Go to Italy

Junior Class Veep Resigns

Vice president of the junior class Nancy Schwartz resigned last week upon being accepted to next term's Semester-in-Italy program.

Miss Schwartz, referring to the class of 1966, said, "We're at interim now that the Orange Aid is done." She said that her resignation at this time would enable William Weller, class president, to get someone to work on Winter Weekend which is the only problem now."

Because of some controversy last year on the subject of officers spending their elected terms abroad, Miss Schwartz said, "I was not planning to go when elected. She did not receive parental permission to apply for the program until fall, she explained.

She said a student should not run for office if they know they will not be on campus. "I don't think kids should have to resign if they apply because there is a chance of not being accepted," she added.

"Nancy's contribution to the class has been unparalleled. Her absence will be definitely felt and we're all sorry to see her leave," said Weller, who accepted her resignation.

NANCY LYNN SCHWARTZ

In regard to the vacant office which her resignation has caused, Weller said he is indecisive about the acts on the now vacant office. Any decision for filling the vacancy will not be made for another week, he said.

If Weller does appoint someone to fill the position it is subject to the approval of Carl Corrallo, president of Student Government.

Last year Corrallo as junior class president was put in the same position when two of his officers resigned. He appointed two others to fill the vacancies.

A sister of Alpha Epsilon Phi, Miss Schwartz is from Charlotte, N. C., majoring in English.

She has been a member of Traditions Commission, Homecoming Weekend chairman, sophomore executive council, president of Sigma Lambda Delta, freshman women's honorary, and secretary of the Liberal Arts Advisory Council.

gro, but women and old people too," he explained.

Schultz said this problem is a challenge to today's student. Within each student's lifetime, he will go through a period when his skills will become obsolescent time and again, he said.

"Flexibility is the best way for coping with uncertainty," he said. "Certain kinds of specialization which deny you this flexibility may be a high price to pay."

This flexibility, he recommended, should be considerable. Losses should be taken when clear, and new skills developed immediately. Only in this way can we keep up with the changing needs of our economy.

As a result of this growing uncertainty, Schultz said he feels there is a demand for increased public policy in this area. "We must cope with the aggregate demand to achieve and maintain high employment," he said. "This takes decision at the national governmental level."

"Today's need," he said, "is for policy in which our gains and losses are redistributed."

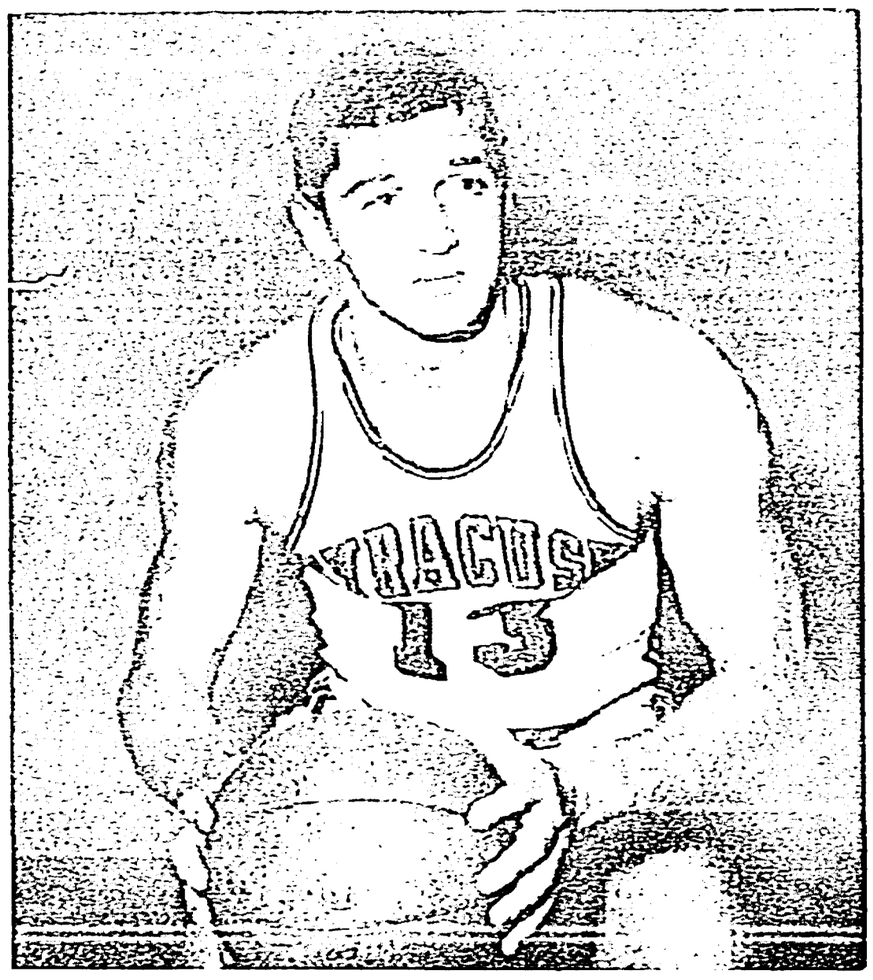
Louisville Hosts Piety Hoopsters

By NEIL KERR

Fred Lewis' cage squad takes on Louisville tonight as the Orange try to salvage one victory from their three-game Kentucky trip.

Syracuse is now 1-4 after suffering its fourth consecutive loss following an opening game victory over American University. The squad, touted as the East's best in pre-season polls, has dropped consecutive decisions to Penn State, Cornell, Kentucky and Eastern Kentucky.



FRANK NICOLETTI
. . . possible Hill starter

Against Eastern, co-captains Dave Bing and Chuck Richards continued their battle for individual scoring honors. Bing's 17 points gave him 92 this season for an 18.4 average. Richards netted 24 and upped his totals to 90 points and an even 18 points per game.

Rich Duffy ranks a distant third with 35 markers and six other players have added in the neighborhood of 30 points. These six members of SU's inconsistent squad—Rick Dean, Jim Boeheim, Val Reid, Phil Schoff and Frank Nicoletti—have all had only one or two good scoring nights this winter.

Latest to join the group was Nicoletti, who contributed 10 points in the losing Eastern Kentucky cause. For tonight's game Nicoletti is a probable starter and the 6-9 Reid is also expected to see more action.

A little more consistency will be needed tonight if Syracuse is to overcome Louisville. The Cardinals are another always-potent Kentucky school with a history of basketball success. Under veteran coach Peck Hickman (19 years at Louisville), the Cardinal teams have won 72 per cent of their games.

The '64-'65 squad lists six lettermen from last year's Louisville team that compiled a 15-10 record.

To date, the Cardinals have won two games while losing one. They've downed rated Georgetown, 81-74, and Marquette, 73-60. Last Saturday evening, Cincinnati won at home over the Louisville squad, 67-57.

Low AND Inside

By BILL CRONAUER
Sports Editor

"I think we're ready to play ball now." So spoke Hill cage coach Fred Lewis after Monday night's 79-69 defeat at the hands of Eastern Kentucky .

And impatient Syracuse students agreed that is was about time.

Who would have guessed before the season that the Orangemen, rated seventh in the country, would lose four of their first five?

Basically the problem is very simple: We're inconsistent.

Take the current southern trip as an example. Against Kentucky, sophomore Rick Dean scored 23 points. Against Eastern, he scored none.

Then there's Chuck Richards, the big center who is observing his share of criticism for the poor showing to date. Against UK, big Chuck rebounded like a lamb while scoring just 14 points. Two nights later he turned into a bull, battling off the boards and pumping home 24 points.

Some of this inconsistency results from Lewis' style of play.

Lewis relies on depth. He doesn't want five fellows who can play the whole game . . . he wants 10 players who can go into the game and not hurt the team.

This strategy, of course, has its benefits, the most obvious being that such a team can wear down the opposition.

But conversely, under such a system, it's pretty difficult for a player to establish himself in the starting lineup. If a boy has a bad ball game, he very well could be out of the lineup. And he knows it. He can't help but be a little on edge.

With the exception of Dave Bing and possibly Richards, no one is assured a starting berth.

So the debate continues: is it better to pick a starting lineup and stick with it, givng the players confidence, or is it better to have them compete for their spots, thus keeping everyone alert?

Whatever, the Orangemen will give it one more try tonight at Louisville when they face the rugged Cardinals. It'll be another tough one, but we've got a hunch the Hill forces are ready to play ball.

Well, even if we lose, it's only 102 days till baseball season.

SU Hockey Club

'You Get Discouraged...'

By JIM HARDCASTLE

Today, despite the scholarships, free room and board, and lucrative summer jobs for college athletes, the strictly amateur college athletes can still be found. Take, for example, the 30 students who make up the Syracuse University Hockey Association.

Syracuse University has 22 varsity sports, but hockey is not one of them. Nevertheless, some 30 hockey-loving students have banded together and formed an informal team. But, without school support, they are subject to many problems.

For example, Syracuse University does not have an ice rink. Therefore, two nights a week the team drives six miles out to the State Fairgrounds Coliseum, where it practices from 10 p.m.-12 midnight.

But even that rink at that hour costs money, so the players have to pool $30 out of their own pockets for every practice. And that is not their only expense. They still have to pay for their traveling expenses, their uniforms, and their equipment.

Once the bill's are paid and the team is on the ice, it still have to meet is competition—the eight teams of the Finger Lakes Hockey League (Hobart, RIT, University of Rochester, University of Buffalo, Oswego, Brockport, and Ithaca).

According to the team's coach, John Curran, who also doubles as an attorney for the Syracuse law firm of Bundy and Curran, "the competition's rough, real rough."

"All of the teams," he said, "started out on an equal basis, they were all club teams just like ours. But now, teams like Oswego and RIT are on a fulltime varsity basis, and all of them except the University of Rochester team get some money from their schools.

"Teams like Oswego can go up to Canada and recruit their own players, and build their own rink. RIT for example, skates six times a week, while we only skate twice a week."

According to Curran, the team works at other disadvantages too. "Since all of our players pay to play the game, we play them no matter how good or bad they are, while other teams just play whom they want.

"And again, since our team is on a club basis, there is no discipline. For instance, this Wednesday we are going to play RIT. Our two best defensemen are Knight and McGruther, but Knight has to work. My best line is Williams, Johnson and Hunt, but Hunt is not going to be there . . .he has to study for an exam.

"Things like that get you real discouraged," Curran said. "The school doesn't support you and and neither do the students (13 showed up for the last game, and the team makes only 25 cents per ticket)."

Curran is quite frank about his aims. "I like the game, I've played the game, and I would like to see it grow. I would like to see Syracuse play big time hockey and compete with the powers like Clarkson, St. Lawrence and Cornell."

Yet, he is quite philosophical about the university's refusal to make hockey a varsity sport. "They've got their problems and we've got our own. They've got big time football and basketball, and I guess they just don't have room for us."

"But still," he added, "I don't think that there's such a thing as sports competing with each other. In 1962, USC was number one in the nation in football, track, baseball, swimming, and tennis. Why can't Syracuse do the same?"

Team captain McGruther feels similarly about making hockey a varsity sport. "There are a lot of real good hockey players here that can't play because they can't afford to. If the University would support our team, they would be able to play."

"When I was a freshman," he continues, "I expected the university to do something about hockey, but now that I'm a senior I don't expect anything from them."

So that is the story about the Syracuse University Hockey Association. If nothing else, they are at least "lilywhite amateurs," for, as McGruther said, "In Canada, amateur hockey players get a minimum of $60 a week. What does that make us then, if we have to pay to play the game?"

Syracuse Mermen Journey to Buffalo

By BOBBIE MARX

Tonight, at the University of Buffalo, the Syracuse swimming team faces its first meet of the season. The squad, which went 5-4 last year, is anxious to improve itself this winter.

Ted Webster, in his 34th season as Hill coach, is working with good material in the four returning varsity swimmers.

The captain, Dick Bauschard, is only a junior this year and is expected to add speed to the team. He has already broken the Syracuse record in the 100-yard free style with a 49.8 time.

Bauschard's talents will also bee seen in the freestyle sprints and the 400-yard medley relay.

Aiding Bauschard is another junior, Pete Hickman, who returns from last year's participation in the 200-yard individual medley and the 400-yard medley relay.

The two remaining lettermen will give their last swimming performances this season. Senior Chan Rudd has long been known as the Syracuse diver.

A 200-yard breaststroke swimmer, senior Hugh Dunseath, will also be appearing for the final timm.

Senior Bob Di Wolfe and juniors Larry Stevens and Steve Haesche complete the lineup which has already seen varsity action.

New blood will be added to the team to lighten the prospects for the year. The preseason practice "gloom" will be boosted with the novices reappearing from their Freshman meets.

Trustee Named Commerce Secretary

LBJ's First Cabinet Choice Graduated Piety Hill in 1936

A Syracuse University graduate was named Secretary of Commerce Wednesday by President Lyndon B. Johnson to replace Luther H. Hodges who resigned. He is John T. Connor, a magna cum laude graduate of the class of 1936.

Johnson described the 50-year-old president of Merck & Co., a large pharmaceutical house, as "smart, loyal and patriotic." He said that Connor was the kind of man he was proud to have in the cabinet.

Praise also came from Frederick R. Kappel, chairman of the board of American Telephone and Telegraph Corp. Speaking of the appointment, Kappel called it "an excellent choice" and said of Connor, "He knows the interest of the citizens and of the nation. He will have the confidence and support of business."

Connor was co-chairman of the National Independent Committee for Johnson-Humphrey and is the first cabinet choice the President has made since taking office one year ago.

Connor received his bachelor of arts degree from SU and his law degree from Harvard Law School in 1939. He is presently a member of the SU Board of Trustees.

He held a number of government posts during World War II including general counsel of the Office of Scientific Research and Development and special assistant to Secretary of the Navy James V. Forrestal.

In 1941 and 1945, Connor served as a Marine captain in air combat intelligence.

He joined Merck & Co. in 1947 as general attorney and became president in 1955.

Connor is presently a member of the Business Council, a group of leading business and financial leaders who advise the government and has been a member of several firms including General Motors Corp., General Foods Corp. and the Sperry Hutchinson Co.

Connor is a resident of Summit, N.J. and lives with his wife and three children. He was

Open Letter To Profs

The following is an open letter to all Syracuse University faculty members from the Student Senate asking for help in getting students home in time for the Christmas holiday.

The letter reads:

"As you are no doubt aware, the students of Syracuse University in the preceding months have sought to have their Christmas vacation, scheduled to begin at noon on Dec. 23, altered to accommodate the pressing needs of students wanting to get home in time for Christmas. Our request for such a change and our suggestion for an alternative plan however, have been denied.

As representatives of the student body, our concern now must be with the practical welfare of the students of this university. Time and distance presents for many of them serious problems of transportation for this vacation period and we would wish to help them in this regard as much as possible while, at the same time, hoping that such a solution will not serve to jeopardize their standing within individual classes of the successful fulfillment of their academic responsibilities.

For this reason, with all due respect for the prime purpose of this university, that wherever possible, we are requesting professors to readjust the scheduling of term papers and examinations now scheduled for Dec. 21-23, to enable those students to serve all their interests with sacrifice to none. Your help at this time would be greatly appreciated. Thank you.

SU Gets $314,329 Grant For LBJ's War on Poverty

Syracuse University will receive $314,329 of a $82.6 million grant to sponsor 162 War on Poverty projects, President Lyndon B. Johnson announced Wednesday.

The adult education allotment, of which the SU grant is a part, totals $1,670,974. The grant comes from the Office of Economic Opportunity under R. Sargent Shriver, former head of the Peace Crops.

"Basically, we propose to train workers who can help the low-income person to help himself up the ladder to full citizenship," Clifford L. Winters Jr., dean of University College said.

University College is the SU adult educational division.

Winters announced the appointment of Dr. Warren C. Haggstrom, assistant professor of social work and a specialist in social actions, programs, as project director.

Haggstrom is also a senior research associate at the Youth Development Center.

He has been responsible for the School of Social Work field placement program in social action for second-year graduate students, begun in September 1963. The proposed Community Action Training Center to be operated under this grant,

Corrallo Calls Class Boycott Next Week

BULLETIN

Student Government President Carl Corrallo recommended Wednesday night that demonstrations protesting the refusal of Chancellor William P. Tolley to lengthen the Christmas vacation cease immediately and that students boycott the final two and one-half days of classes.

Corrallo said, "The demonstrations have proved fruitless, and our only recourse is to boycott. If we live up to our convictions, we will leave Syracuse Saturday afternoon and see if the administration can operate

Greek Houses to Move

Hill Library Site Selected

By CAROL RUBRIGHT
Junior Editor

Relocation of the main library to a block now inhabited by 16 fraternities and sororities and 25 other buildings was recommended Dec. 11 by the University Design Board.

The block selected is bounded by College and University places and Comstock and Euclid avenues.

The ground-breaking date, however, is contingent on the discovery of a solution to the Greek relocation problem which will be satisfactory to the fraternities and sororities involved.

Designs for the library are not yet finalized.

"No date was given to us for moving the students out," Sydney Grossman, president of Alumni InterFraternity Council told the Daily Orange. The Alumni IFC met Tuesday with Jim G. Carleton, dean of men, to discuss the relocation.

"They told us we'd be relocated before anything else is done," Grossman said, "And there's no rush, no hurry."

Chancellor William P. Tolley told university trustees last month that he hoped for a library ground-breaking in 1965.

According to the chairman of the housing committee of the Alumni IFC, David Salmon, the library will be built in sections and therefore all Greeks will not be moved out at once.

"It is my understanding that Psi Upsilon and Alpha Chi Rho, the houses at opposite ends of College place, will not be disturbed for some time because

This is the Story, Mr. Jones

This letter is intended as a reply to an editorial appearing in Wednesday's Syracuse Herald-Journal, titled "Loutishness. . ."

Mr. Alexander F. Jones
Executive Editor
Syracuse Herald-Journal

Dear Mr. Jones:

I am a miserable little punk. I am an ill-mannered lout. I am a fuzzy-faced kid, just past adolescence and concerned mostly with the problem of acne, and I can't wait for school to get out. I am also Jewish.

I was there when Dr. Tolley spoke to the students Monday, and I, as you, was disappointed.

But I was disappointed in the Chancellor, who somehow felt it beneath his dignity to explain to us why the vacation could not be lengthened.

We weren't trying to get out of classes, Mr. Jones. Rather we were appealing to the university to change those two-and-a-half days of classes from the current position to the end of the class schedule, thereby not losing any of the valuable educational opportunities Syracuse University offers us, as well as volunteering to cut our semester break (the only vacation where we don't have to worry about exams and papers) by a similar two-and-a-half days.

We were told, "Yes, this would be possible," but final approval would have to come from the Chancellor. And Monday he told us no, and he wouldn't give us a reason.

The answer is very, very plain. There was no sound reason. The only excuse that could have been given would be that it looks bad to bow to student pressure, even when the students happen to be right. And we can't deny that.

Syracuse University is apparently so worried about its public image that it could not bear the thought of a story in your newspaper or the national wire saying that it had given its students an extra few days of vacation.

Why, Mr. Jones? Because it knows from experience that the stories would obscure the fact that the class days missed would be tacked onto the end, maintaining both state and university standards.

Dr. Tolley was right on one count. It is never beneath the dignity of a Chancellor to speak to his students. As soon as some of his aides who participated in the snow-job-around learn this, all of us will be better off.

And ask yourself, Mr. Jones, if Syracuse University is really in the educational sun, then how did it manage to accept all us punks who only want to go home? If all 8,000 of us are so bad, that's not saying too much for the university.

Yes, Mr. Jones, I'm Jewish, and some people consider me some kind of a student leader, and others, such as you, apparently consider me indignant.

Just because I'm Jewish, would you want to deprive me of my capacity to enjoy the holiday season and the holiday spirit? And all of us, both you and I, belong home during those times, regardless of religion or of outlook.

And if the food we eat in our excellent cafeterias is emblematic of Dr. Tolley, then we had both better pity the man.

We weren't rude, Mr. Jones. We were concerned. We were vitally concerned about Syracuse University and the philosophy behind it which prohibits the Chancellor from explaining an administrative decision.

We would have accepted any reason for not extending the vacation. None came. We can only conclude that there is no good reason.

And now we have to cry, Mr. Jones. We have to cry for the great institution which permits situations like this to happen, and then permits them to happen again and again.

And we've got to work. We've got to work to make this a truly fine place at which to get an education. Today it's not, because incidents like this keep occurring.

No, Mr. Jones, we won't extend any apology. We rather think we should be receiving one.

Sincerely,
Andrew Porte

Millstones and Milestones

Scapegoats

By Dan Stone

So we're here until the 23rd.

Most of the students won't be. I would imagine less than 25 per cent of the student body will be on campus that Wednesday noon, but in the eyes of the Chancellor and New York State they all are, so I suppose it's none of our business. After all the word has been delivered.

Sooner or later, the students are going to start to look for a scapegoat to blame for this situation.

But strangely enough there are none. The only thing that is to blame is a communication system. The number of offices that a student must go through looking for power (or someone to escort him to the seat of power) is archaic. When there were just one or two buildings isolated here on the Hill, when the students all lived in one boarding house, and when the only activity was the Sunday fellowship meeting, it might have worked.

But this university has grown too big to have its sources of power all out of town when a decision is called for.

I have never been a strong believer in Student Government. Too long it has served no function other than to act as a safety valve where harmless steam can be blown off without endangering anyone. It is this no more.

Not only can Carl and student government not be held up as a scapegoat in this particular crisis, they have done a good job and raised student government to a stature that it has not enjoyed before.

I got to sit in on a couple of the meetings held in connection with this crisis. Carl and Robby both represented the students in a firm and fitting manner. They made suggestions, listened respectfully to countless explanations in countless offices, but refused to compromise their position just so they could have a sop to throw to the students and say "Here, we got something anyway."

They were representatives in the best sense of the word—concerned with the danger of a violent demonstration, concerned with the image and problems of the university but sticking up stubbornly for what they and the students felt was (and is) right. They deserve the thanks and congratulations of the student body.

I hope that they do not fritter away this new prestige with a demonstration that can do nothing but entrench two sides already too entrenched and throw up new barriers to further communication.

The Chancellor is not really a scapegoat. He was doing what he believed right even if he was doing it too bluntly.

I had to watch the Chancellor on the chapel steps with mixed emotions. It took a courage of sorts to address that crowd, especially since he had no conception of its temper. The betting in the dorms was heavy as to who in the Administration Building would be sent out to do the task.

And indeed he delivered his speech with a style and flair. He was swinging a verbal cane and enjoying every minute of it.

If only he had had something to say.

One wanted to cry out "Give us one reason and we will be behind you." But he gave none.

I suppose the approach was his prerogative. The—I—am a—camel—coat—and—you—are—blue—jeans—and—the—camel—coat—decides approach hurt. It was hard to square with the earlier statement that students are important. He was the victim of the same archiac communications system. By his own words he had made his decision on Tuesday without any contact with the students. Next year the same situation won't be present -- neither will the students who worry about driving spend New Year's Eve at home, but this is not a problem to concern a senior.

The problem that concerns us is that at last we have had our position affirmed as members. For four years we have been fighting the system. We have filled out our IBM packets, but something in us has shouted that we are still individuals — that at least some of our professors know our names and that the administration regards us as separate individuals.

But now the truth is out. We are scapegoats to a system. Our destinies are not to be determined by human considerations arrived at through communication and negotiation but through the number of students who live West of the Mississippi, the number of in class hours (by slide-rule, not attendance) and similar considerations.

In the face of that it is hard to screw up a lot of Christmas spirit.

From 132-32-6052 to you, Merry Christmas.

Dual Shannon

by Marlene Cimons

Imagine if you can, a performer with a seemingly dual personality. Del Shannon is such an artist.

The rock and roll singer performed here Friday night in the concert highlighting Freshmen Weekend.

We spoke to him a few minutes before his scheduled rehearsal and were struck by the metamorphosis we witnessed when he took his place behind the microphone.

A shy, soft-spoken, quiet Shannon answered our questions willingly, but almost awkwardly. Several minutes later, guitar in hand, the first Shannon was replaced by a second one--an animated, laughing, and relaxed performer who acted as if he were having a ball and couldn't wait to begin singing.

As members of frosh exec council filtered into the gym to help with final preparations, he looked around him, grinned, and said:

"Well, looks like everyone's here. Show time in two minutes, folks!"

As he ran through the various numbers, Shannon interrupted a few times to make corrections with the band, a group of local boys he had never worked with before that evening. And yet, between songs and at frequent intervals he apparently made it a point to put them at ease.

"You guys are doing a great job," he told them at several instances.

Shannon's career was born four years ago in a small club in Battle Creek, Michigan. Since then, he has had numerous hit records and made appearances in many places around the world.

"I've been to Australia, New Zealand, Israel, England and Sweden," he commented.

He plans on performing on the television program "Shindig" in February and has sung on the "Dick Clark Show" and the "Ed Sullivan Show."

"I prefer a live audience to T.V. or recordings," he said, "because I like to create a feeling with my listners. It's completely dead without an audience."

Shannon writes all of his music and has composed hit discs, such as "Runaway", "Little Town Flirt", and his current release, "Keep Searching."

"I find it hard for writers to write for me," Shannon noted.

He has also written a new song for the recording duo of Peter and Gordon entitled "I Go To Pieces", which is expected to be out in January, he said.

Other records of his include "Do You Want to Dance", "Hats Off to Larry", and a new Hank Williams album of country music expected to be released within three weeks.

SS Committee to Collect Books

Books South, a newly formed committee within the Student Senate, is asking each student to donate at least one book for a project to send 8,000 books to the Freedom Schools operating in Mississippi.

These schols, numbering 41 during the past summer, worked with 2,135 children and is extending their program for the fall and winter, according to Taunya Lovell, chairman of Books South.

Boxes to collect the books will be placed in each living center during intercession, Miss Lovell ssaid. Books which have been suggested as useful include works by James Baldwin, Ralph Ellison, William Faulkner, Herman Melville, J.D. Salinger, George Orwell and Aldous Huxley.

Also useful are books by Mark Fromm, Charles Dickens and Victor Hugo.

The Freedom Schools were originally planned as a summer project which would serve as a tutoring service. Their aim, according to Miss Lovell, is to improve and broaden the educational level of Negro children in Mississippi.

This is "a revolt against the lack of vocational courses, foreign language instruction and kindergarten," Miss Lovell explained. "They are trying to compensate for the inadequate laboratories, libraries and classrooms."

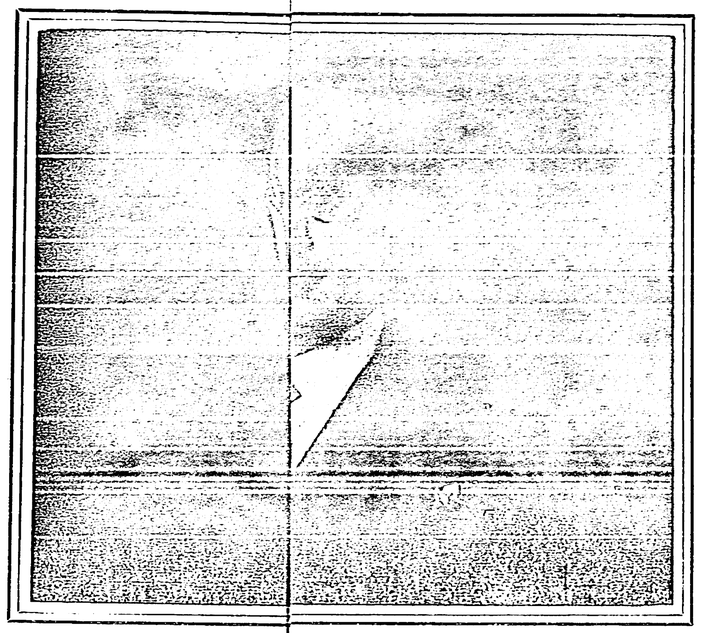
In Memoriam: Dr. Charles Wesley Flint, 1878-1964



His Words

"To you, the trustees of Syracuse University, I pledge the fullest measurement of my time, talent and strength to make this institution reek with noble idealism. It must give opportunity to search for truth without hypocrisy in an atmosphere of honor, virtue and chivalry."

— Inaugural address

"A Chancellor leads a pretty lonely existence after all. To me, a professor's life always will be the greatest life."

— Speech to the faculty (1935)

"I did not go to Europe to get a rest. I went to give the university a rest."

— Upon returning from Europe

"Proper inclusion is not capricious exclusion."

— Concerning stricter entrance requirements

"It is merely a question of near beer or nearer beer, about the difference between a London fog and a Scotch mist."

— Concerning the dry controversy of the thirties

Chancellor Charles Flint returned Wednesday to the university he had. It is fitting he be buried here, for his heart was in the house and the university. He now rests in Oakwood Cemetery in the shadow of the dormitory which bears his name.

Unknown Santa Claus

Coeds Receive Soft, Furry Gift

By DONALD LAWLESS

Christmas vacation may not come sooner than Dec. 23, but girls in at least three cottages have received gifts already.

Certain residents of Smalley, French and Heffron cottages, all located on Walnut avenue, received white mice Tuesday, gifts of an unknown Santa Claus.

The mice arrived in the morning in small boxes wrapped in brown-paper. Barbara DeAngelis, a resident of Heffron, believed the mice were not delivered by the post office. She noted that the cancellation marks on the stamps were old dates and that they were shipped from spots all over the country.

Gail Dodge, a resident of French Cottage, received her white mouse Tuesday afternoon. She said the box had been jumping around and making scratching noises before she opened it.

Miss Dodge also noticed the old date on the cancellation mark and said her mouse was supposedly mailed from Missouri but that the paper inside contained a bag from the Syracuse University bookstore.

Speculations as to the origin of the little, furry critters range from "a fraternity stunt," to "a distraught lover in search of attention" to "some kind of a nut."

But, until someone lets the cat out of the bag, the Syracuse mice mystery will remain unsolved.

Booth Plans Yule Party

Booth Hall will help some children at Syracuse State School to have themselves a merry Christmas this year.

More than $100 was collected from the residents of Booth Hall for refreshments and gift sleds to be distributed at a Christmas party for educable mentally retarded children from 1-4 p.m. Sunday.

We were wary of

MARTESIA STRIATA!

The object of our concern was a small, wedge-shaped mollusk found in southern waters where we planned to lay telephone cables.

Like others of its genus Martesia (of the family Pholadidae), it is a borer.

Usually it bores into limestone or some other substance to find a home.

Would it—could it—bore into our undersea cables?

At the time, we were testing the performances of proposed dielectric materials for undersea cables at various simulated depths, temperatures and ocean pressures. We also tested for resistance to marine biological attack.

The testing showed that our cable covering wouldn't be attractive to pholads, and in nearly fifteen years of experience with undersea telephone cables we have peacefully shared the ocean bottom with them.

But we had to be sure we could. In the telephone business, reliability is everything. We must do all we can to safeguard service from interruption. No threat is too small to ignore, not even that posed by a tiny mollusk.

Right now we've got other problems.

Out in the Dakotas, hungry squirrels and field mice are nibbling on our wires.

We have to run.

SU Gets Grant

will incorporate this graduate social action program into its curriculum.

Associate project director is Stephen B. Plumer, program administrator of social welfare at University College, and an assistant professor in the School of Social Work.

Heading the research program is Philip C. Norris, a social worker and psychologist, and an assistant professor of social work.

Winters said an advisory committee is expected to be appointed soon to help the university carry out the project."We are hopeful that from the evaluation of this experiment will come new curricula for schools of social work and new methods of urban extension for adult education divisions of universities," he said.

"Further, we hope to show that the poor can lift themselves up by their own bootstraps, they can get more education, they can get better jobs, they can become self-sufficient and self-directed. But first they must have some glimmer of hope that all of this is possible."

"Hand-in-hand with the concept of self-help goes the need for special types of professional and lay workers in community development, persons who can understand and work with people in low-income neighborhoods, and who can help them resolve their own problems."

Another area financed by the OEO grant will concentrate on the evaluation of varying courses of self-help action to meet the needs of low-income neighborhoods.

There are 40 adult education grants from the OEO.

The $314,329 grant can mean new hope, new courses of action and new self-respect for people trapped in poverty and shut off from the good life enjoyed by most of our citizens, Winters said.

The grant can mean new directions for local and national institutions now working in low-income areas--such as public welfare, law enforcement, schools and churches -- to help them more effectively carry out their stated objectives, he said.

Carroll Gets Scott Award

Daniel Carroll has received the first Scott Paper Foundation Award at Syracuse University.

The award provides a two-year scholarship and summer employment with a Scott Paper plant in Philadelphia.

A junior in the L. C. Smith College of Engineering at Syracuse, Carroll is vice president of the Phi Gamma Delta social fraternity and a member of Tau Beta Pi, engineering honorary society. Two years ago he received the Tau Beta Pi award as the outstanding freshman. He is a resident of Pittsburgh.

Carroll is studying in the department of chemical engineering and metallurgy under Dr. Leonard I. Stiel, doing research for data on the thermal conductivity of air.

During the summer he was one of 12 men who participated in a National Science Foundation program. He did independent study on the application of analog and digital computers to chemical engineering problems.

Young Dems to Sponsor Washington Trip Tours

A novel trip to the nation's capital is being sponsored by the New York State College Young Democrats, from Thursday, Jan. 28 through Sunday, Jan. 31, 1965.

"All Syracuse University students are eligible, regardless of political affiliation, to join college students from throughout the state in this most enlightening, most enjoyable opportunity to view the inner workings of our national government," explained Melynda Lopin.

A VIP tour of the White House and of the State Department have been planned, as well as opportunities to met with various Congressional leaders, Cabinet members and agency officials.

Among the noted guests who will join the students for informal discussions are Vice President-elect Hubert H. Humphrey, Senator-elect Robert F. Kennedy (D-N.Y.), Sen. Birch Bayh (D-Ind), Sen. Strom Thurmond and John Bailey, the Democratic national chairman.

As a culmination to the Washington visit, students will visit Arlington National Cemetery on Sunday to place a wreath on the grave of the late John F. Kennedy.

The fee for the entire trip will be $27. Those interested in further information or reservations should contact either Miss Lopin, ext. 2126 or 2130 or Paul Goldman, ext. 2005 or 2006 as soon as possible.

named the New Jersey business statesman of the year by the Sales Executive Club in April.

Connor will not actually occupy the Commerce Secretary's office until January when the Senate will vote to ratify his appointment. This is standard operating procedure for all cabinet members and Johnson said he feels confident that his appointment will be approved.

JANUARY ISSUES PLANNED FOR DO

The Daily Orange is already contemplating a vacation after the Christmas recess. Only two issues, on Jan. 7 and 8, will be published before the DO takes a break for final exams.

However, the DO will publish an extra day during the second semester, on Feb. 3, the last day of registration.

Panhel Votes For Revision Of Rushing

Panhellenic Council adopted two proposals Tuesday which will affect spring rush procedures for freshmen.

The first change, pertaining to the second round of parties, will enable each girl to visit no less than 10 and no more than 15 sororities of her own choosing.

Rushees were previously required to visit all 15 houses if they received 15 or more bids, or, if they received less than 15, they were required to visit all houses from which bids had been received.

In addition, the formal parties will be changed from a required two parties to an optional three parties. Under this plan, the rushees would be permitted to decide which and how many parties they would like to attend.

It is hoped that this change will give the sororities a greater opportunity to meet the rushees for a longer period of time.

Four Forestry Grads Get Calder Fellowship Grants

Four pulp and paper technology graduate students at the State University College of Forestry at Syracuse University have received Louis Calder Foundation graduate fellowships, according to Dr. Hardy L. Shirley, dean of the college.

All are candidates for master of science degrees.

The recipients are: Carl W. Bailey of Kinderhook; Albert J. Bruley of Port Arthur, Ontario, Canada; William P. Stevens of East Syracuse; and Louis N. Wood of Syracuse.

Bailey received a bachelor of science degree in pulp and paper technology at the College of Forestry, and during summers has worked for the Riegle Paper Corp., Armstrong Cork Co., and the Puget Sound Pulp and Timber Co.

Bruley was graduated from Queens University, Kingston, Ontario, with a bachelor of science degree in chemical engineering. He was active in sports in college, and has worked in process control in industry and as a forest ranger.

Stevens received his bachelor of science degree in pulp and paper technology from the College of Forestry.

Wood graduated from the Christian Brothers Academy, in Syracuse, in 1960.

The Calder pulp and paper fellowships were established at the college in 1960, and are offerred graduate students working on advanced degrees in the fields of chemistry, fiber physics, and chemical engineering.

STUDENT GAME POSTPONED

The student - administration, varsity-freshman basketball game, scheduled for Friday, has been postponed until spring.

The Student Union board issued the postponement decision because of "the indefinite vacation schedule."

Construction of the Erie Canal through Rochester gave impetus to that community's early development as a trading center.

Contest Provides Free Europe Trip

An all-expense paid trip to an international summer-school session about the United Nations in Geneva, Switzerland, is the prize of a college essay writing contest sponsored by the Collegiate Council for the United Nations (CCUN).

The 3,500 word essay entries must be based on the ABC-TV program, "Carol for Another Christmas," by Rod Serling, which will be televised at 9:30 p.m. (EST) Monday Dec., 28.

The contest is designed to "inspire better understanding of the UN by stimulating greater interest about the world organization among college students throughout the United States." That is also the primary purpose of CCUN, a council bulletin said.

Preliminary winners of the contest will be judged regionally; the five top finalists will be selected by a panel of national judges.

The judges are: Clark M. Eichelberger, vice president of the United Nations Assn.; author John Gunther; Arthur Larson, director of the World Rule of Law Center at Duke University; Henry Cabot Lodge, former United States Ambassador to South Viet Nam and U.S. representative at the United Nations are Ambassador Marietta Tree, U.S. Mission to the U.N.

Each essay must concentrate on the theme of which writer Rod Serling bases his script for "Carol for Another Christmas" — "the idea that today, more than ever before, no man can live as an island."

From this, each student may point his essay in any direction.

All students intending to enter the contest must notify the CCUN, at 345 E. 16th St. New York City, no later than Jan 15. They will then be mailed complete rules and details.

Orange Lose 5th Straight, 67-62

Louisville Cardinals Slip By SU Cagers

By BILL BRODSKY
DO Sports Correspondent

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Syracuse's beleaguered Orangemen dropped their fifth consecutive decision last night, a heartbreaking 67-62 defeat at the hands of Louisville. The defeat ended a three-game stay in Kentucky for coach Fred Lewis' unhappy Saltine Warriors.

In contrast to their losses to the University of Kentucky and Eastsern Kentucky, the Orangemen were in the ballgame for the full forty minutes. The issue was not decided until only 10 seconds remained.

At that point the host Cardinals led by only two points at 64-62. Then, center Joe Liedtke put in a layup for Louisville and was fouled in the process. He converted the free throw to give the Kentuckians their final margin.

Coach Lewis was obviously disappointed with the final outcome, but he saw some things he liked in his squad's losing battle.

"We played a good ballgame, but were out-rebounded," said Lewis. As a sobering note he added, "If we are to salvage the season, we must improve in the rebounding department."

There had been talk of a loss of morale in the Orange camp, but Lewis felt that "the team showed good hustle, although only (Dave) Bing and (Chuck) Richards were consistent. We have improved with every game down here and have experienced all types of officiating."

The Orangemen battled the Cardinals on even terms throughout the first half and even led at some points. Lewis used a full-court zone press to keep Louisville in check and SU left the floor with a tie at halftime.

Syracuse's first-half shooting average from the floor was 50 per cent, a considerable improvement over the figure during the losing streak.

Bing and Richards tied for game scoring honors with 23 points each, as well as tying for the team rebounding lead with nine apiece.

It was Bing's scoring in the second half that helped SU stay right with the Cardinals. The SU guard hit on seven field goal attempts.

Louisville guard Ed Creamer was the main factor in breaking SU's defense. Creamer, who was listed as a poor outside shooter by scouts, led his team with 20 points, with much of his total coming on long-range shots.

Lewis has 10 days in which to make the changes necessary to recover some of the prestige the Orange had been accorded in pre-season estimates.

SU's next game isn't until Dec. 28, when the Orangemen will face Princeton in the opening round of the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference Holiday Festival in New York City.

Ski Lessons Offered Locally

With more snow expected in Syracuse, skiers are preparing for this weekend. Those who know how to ski are ready to take off and for those who are bunnies to the slopes, a new program of ski lessons is being offered this season.

This ski program is under university sponsorship with the facilities at Skytop. The lessons will be for beginners and are open to students, faculty and dependents.

Lessons consist of a package of five two-hour sessions, costing only $10, and will be given at convenient times both on weeknights and weekends.

Lessons are offered once a week on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights and Saturday and Sunday afternoons. The more ambitious can take two lessons a week on Tuesday and Thursday nights.

A special session will be held for children over the Christmas vacation.

Reduced rates are available for those who sign up as a group—$8 per person instead of the usual $10.

Those interested in taking advantage of this offer can register at the Skytop ski lodge from 7-9 p.m. today. Any further questions should be referred to Mr. DeSylvia, coordinator of the program, at ext. 2447.

Riflemen Bow Twice

The Syracuse University rifle team dropped two close matches over the weekend.

Syracuse lost to Alfred University, 1279-1271, and Cornell University, 1244-1241. The team's record is now 4-4.

Friday's loss to Alfred saw the best scores of the season for both teams. The Saxons early lead in points was cut down to eight by Orange marksmen, in what developed into the toughest match of the season.

Scores for Syracuse were Bill Gold, 264; Klint Wigren, 254; Tom Rohr, 253; Don Hadyk, 251; and Larry Novak 249.

Favored Syracuse lost to Cornell by three points. Gold, Orange team captain, fired 272; 95 prone, 94 kneeling and 83 offhand. This was only seven points below the league record of 279 fired by Boyson of Alfred.

The Hill scorers were Larry Novak, 253; Hadyk 242; Dave Jones 239; and Walt Sall 235.

On Feb. 5-6, Syracuse will fire away at Niagara University and Canisius College.

Coach Sgt. Lunn is planning several practice matches, hoping to pull the team out of its losing streak.

Nance Returns Jan. 9

★ SU Grapplers Clash With Ithaca ★

By KEN RUDNICK

Syracuse wrestling coach Ed Carlin will get a better line on the status of his team tonight when the Orange matmen journey to Ithaca College, but he's already looking forward to a Jan. 9 clash with Navy.

SU was routed by Lehigh, 29-6, in its opening match. That result, however, is not a good indication of exactly how far the Orangemen will go this winter.

Considering the absence of four key performers — Jim Nance, Dave Agone, Paul Crapsi and Charles Masterpaul — Carlin's grapplers did as well as could be expected against a Lehigh team which figures to be a national power.

Nance, who will appear in the Sugar Bowl New Year's Day, has spurned an invitation to play in the Senior Bowl in Mobile, Ala., Jan. 9.

Big Bo's decision was based on his desire to wrestle this winter and to try and recapture the NCAA heavyweight title he won in his sophomore year.

Agone, who wrestles in the 130-pound class, Crapsi (137) and Masterpaul (147) are also expected to be ready when the Orange move into Annapolis.

Carlin will be able to make a keener judgment on his present starters tonight with Syracuse facing more down-to-earth opposition.

Ithaca has a 2-0 record against lesser competition, its second victory being a 23-7 rout of Clarkson Tuesday night. The Bombers were aided, though, when John Puleo (123) and heavyweight Neil Derosa won by forfeit.

Also starting for the Ithacans in the victory over Clarkson were Dick Morse (130), Bob Franciamone (137), Joe Sacchi (147), Howie Pierano (157), Gary Foote (167) and Ed Michael (177).

Morse suffered the only defeat, but Michael and Foote were held to draws.

Tom Schlendorf, Carlin's most impressive performer to date, will not appear tonight because the Bombers will forfeit in the 191-pound class.

The SU coach has juggled his lineup to move Lew Roberts and Kurt Kuppinger up a class. Roberts will wrestle at 177 and Kuppinger at 167 as the Orangemen try to even their season mark at 1-1.

Moving into the spot Kuppinger occupied against Lehigh in the 157-pound division is George Rogers, who didn't start against the Engineers.

Otherwise, Carlin will go with the same lineup with Lew Manns (123), Terry Haise (130), Kerin Raftery (137), Dick Zebuhr (147) and Joe Radivoy (unlimited).

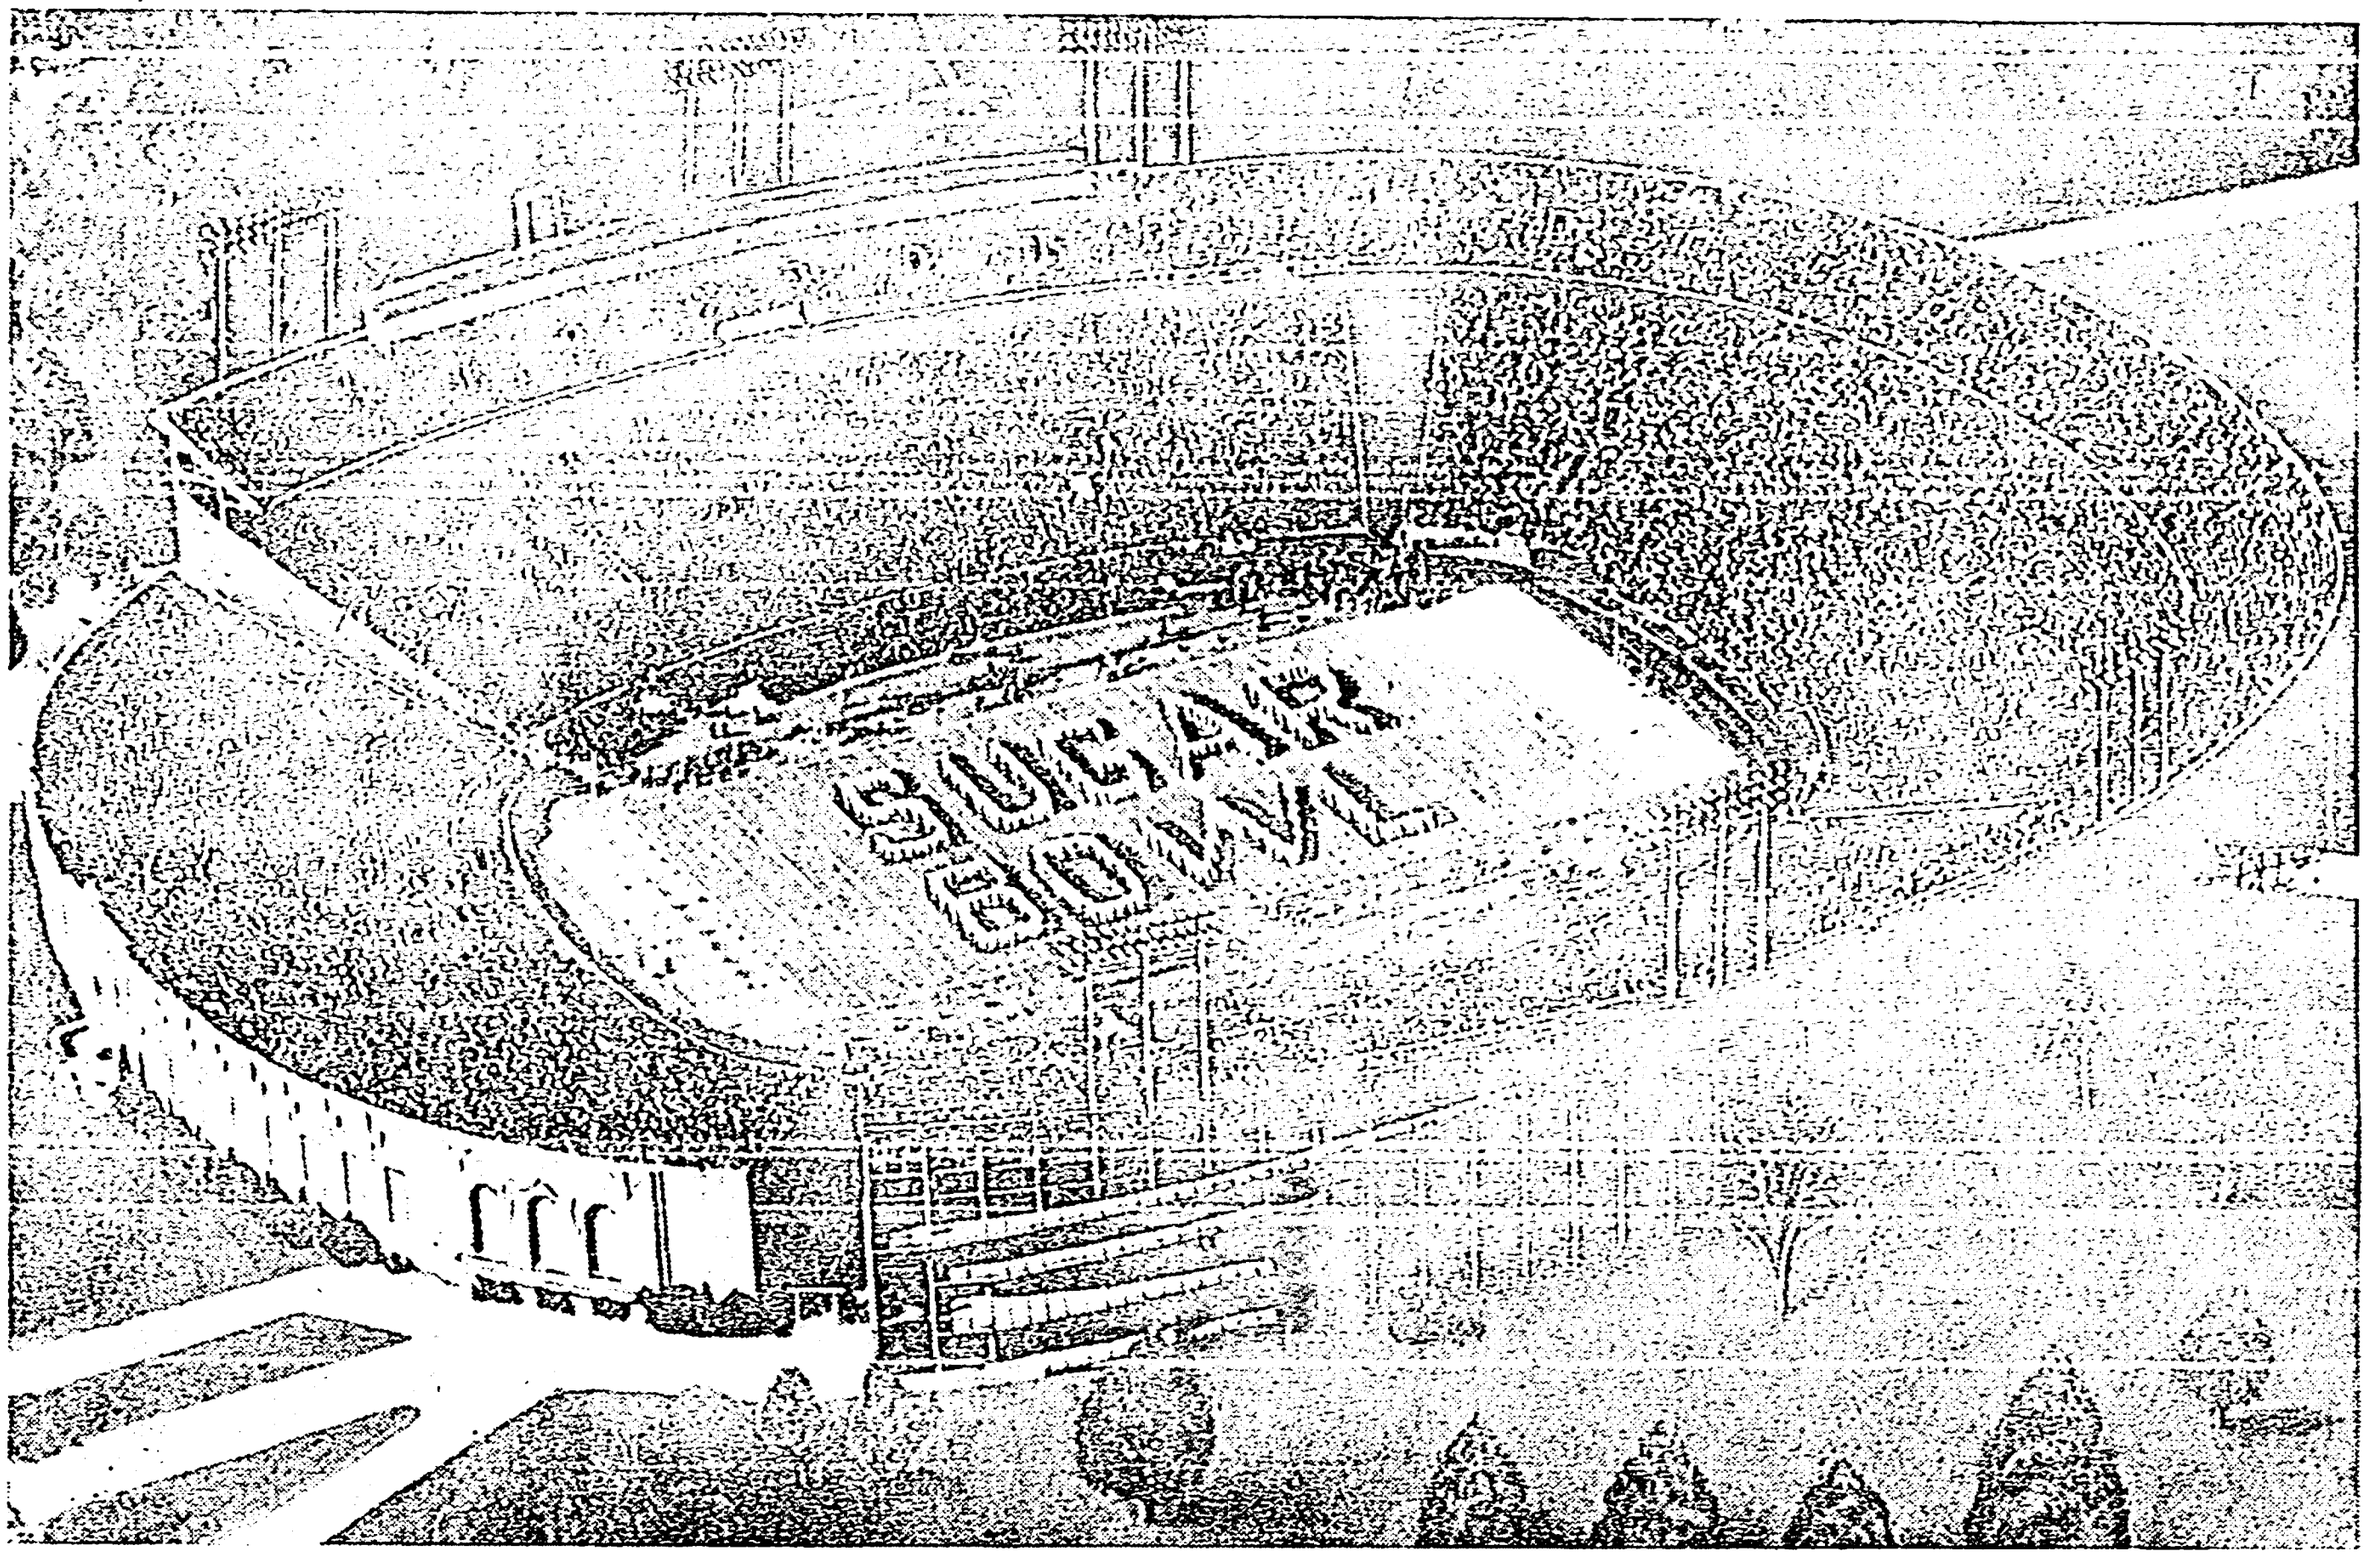
Battle of New Orleans



Orange Tangle With LSU Bengals

By BILL CRONAUER
Sports Editor

Syracuse's touted offense challenges LSU's vaunted defense New Year's Day in the 31st annual Sugar Bowl game at New Orleans.

The Orangemen (7-3) boast a sparkling array of gridiron talent headed by a pair of All-Americans, sophomore halfback Floyd Little and junior center Pat Killorin, and the NCAA back-of-the-year, senior fullback Jim Nance.

Little and Nance combined for 1,779 yards rushing this season, the top two-man output in Hill history.

With the added help of quarterback Walley Mahle (390 yards) and right half Ron Oyer (184), the Orange backfield turned in the no. 1 ground-gaining performance in the country, averaging 251 yards per game.

But the SU football forces will be up against the third most stingy defensive outfit nationally when they knock heads with the Bayou Bengals:

LSU's defensive bandits feature All-American guard Remi Prudhomme and linebackers Mike Vincent and Ruffin Rodrique. Vincent paces the Tigers in tackles with 60, while Rodrique has chalked up 56.

Commented Piety coach Ben Schwartzwalder after watching LSU game films, "It looks as if they have 11 men in on every tackle."

Louisiana State (7-2-1) also stands fourth in passing defense.

Yet the Bengals don't rate too badly offensively, either, with second-team All-American center Rich Granier paving the way for block-busting backs Don Schwab and Joe Labruzzo.

Schwab, a 5-9, 195-pound fullback, heads up the State ground attack with 683 yards rushing, an average of 4.3 per carry. Labruzzo has accounted for 366 yards rushing and another 203 receiving.

In addition, LSU possesses the no. 1 scorer in the Southeastern Conference in flanker Doug Moreau. The 195-pound speedster has included four touchdown catches and 21 field goals among his 73 points.

In the passing department, both teams leave something to be desired. Orange quarterbacks have managed only three TDs through the airways, compared to five for Tiger tossers Billy Ezell and Pat Screen.

Schwartzwalder, gunning for his 102nd victory on Piety Hill, has experimented with Rich King in the starting quarterback slot, moving Mahle to right half. The switch resulted from a leg injury to Oyer, who apparently will be ready by game time.

Defensive changes will find Gerry Everling at center linebacker, John Krok at middle guard, Dave Archer at right tackle and Gary Bugenhagen at left tackle.

The Orangemen plan to fly to Pensacola (Fla.) Air Base Dec. 20, where they will practice until the 30th before journeying to New Orleans.

The New Year's Day outing will be the Piety's sixth in post-season grid competition. SU stands 2-3 overall, but has never participated in a Sugar Bowl.

LSU, which dropped a 14-7 Bluebonnet Bowl decision to Baylor last winter, has attended 11 bowls, winning four, losing six and tying one.

The Tigers finished the season as the no. 7 team in the nation, with the Hillmen 12th.

Syracuse Football Review: 1964

BY JEFF LAZAR

The Syracuse University football forces unleashed one of the most devastating ground attacks ever seen this year in the form of Jim Nance (known as Mr. Inside) and Floyd Little (known as Mr. Outside).

Little, a sophomore from New Haven, Conn., was designated to wear no. 44, and carried on in the great tradition of Jim Brown and the late Ernie Davis.

Throughout the entire season he waged a scoring battle with Bo and finished the season with 72 points on 12 touchdowns. In addition, Floyd passed for another score.

Meanwhile, Nance chalked up 78 points on 13 touchdowns scoring at least once in every game. Mr. Inside had his finest season at SU as he rolled up 951 yards in 190 carries.

Little gained 828 yards on the ground eclipsing the sophomore rushing record of 686 by Ernie Davis. He accounted for 862 more yards via passing, pass catching, kickoff returns, and punt returns.

Little was named to the Look Magazine All-American All-East team along with Nance. Not bad for a sophomore.

But the 1964 story was not confined to Nance and Little.

First team All-American center Pat Killorin, Walley Mahle, Ron Oyer, Charley Brown, George Fair, Herb Stecker, and Gary Eisenhagen all made valuable contributions to a season which saw the Orangemen drop two heartbreakers at the beginning and at the close of the season.

In between games, No. 1 and 10, the Piety managed to win seven out of eight with the other loss coming at the hands of Oregon State's Beavers.

This was due largely to the Spiders, SU's defensive unit, which held the opposition to an average of 14.1 points per game, while the offensive team rolled up an average of 25.1

In spite of the three losses, coach Ben Schwartzwalder and the team were pleased to receive and accept a Sugar Bowl bid, their opponent being LSU.

BOSTON, Mass.--Boston College quarterback Larry Marzetti threw two touchdown passes, the last coming with nine seconds left to end Bill Cronin, as the Eagles upset the highly-rated Orangemen of Syracuse, 21-14.

Moments earlier, SU's Rich King had heated a 36-yard strike to soph streak Floyd Little setting up the game-tying score.

Walley Mahle did the honors scoring the visiting Hill forces' second touchdown, and then sweeping the end for the two-point conversion which lifted them into a 14-14 deadlock.

After a scoreless first half, Jim Nance cracked over from the three with 5:50 gone in the third quarter making the score 6-0. BC rebounded to make the count 7-6 on a 26-yard fling from Marzetti to Bob Budzinski.

Late in the same period, a Rich King errand was intercepted and converted into an Eagle TD.

The Syracuse home opener in Archbold Stadium proved to be a rousing success as Floyd Little ran through the Kansas Jayhawkers for five touchdowns. He scored on runs of 15, 1, 55, 5, and 19 yards.

For the day he rushed for 159 yards in a dazzling display which prompted Kansas coach Jack Mitchell to say, "It was the best single game performance that I've ever seen."

The game, which was supposed to be a toss-up, found the home team owning an 18-0 advantage at intermission thanks to Nance and Little. Kansas quarterback Steve Renko spoiled the shutout with a sneak at the outset of the third quarter.

Little then put the game out of reach with a spectacular 55-yard TD run around and through six would-be tacklers. The last two scores were merely icing on the cake. The 50-point performance by Mr. Outside was second only to Jim Brown's 43-point effort against Colgate.

WORCESTER, Mass. -- The Saints' Warriors exploded for five TD's in the second half as they crushed Dr. Eddie Anderson's Crusaders, 34-8.

Only the score at intermission was as shocking as the SU outburst during the last 30 minutes. Holy Cross led their bewildered visitors, 8-0.

Piety tackle Gerry Everling got the Orangemen rolling when he picked off a pass and raced 11 yards to paydirt at the midway point of the third quarter. Jim Nance made it 14-8 following a Hal Rooney interception as the period ended.

From there, it was clear sailing as Syracuse tallied three more times with end Jim Cripps, halfback Nat Duckett, and Nance doing the chores.

Returning to the friendly confines of Archbold, Syracuse humbled the previously undefeated UCLA Bruins, 39-0, before a Parent's Weekend crowd of 35,000.

Walley Mahle got the home team off to a flying start by sneaking over from the one. Several minutes later the Bruins were forced to punt.

Floyd Little then proceeded to electrify the crowd with a dazzling 90-yard punt return good for a score, a 14-0 lead, and a new Syracuse record. Murray Johnson and Charley Brown parlayed a couple of interceptions into touchdowns while Big Bo added two more six-pointers.

UCLA's Larry Zeno, who came to Archbold with the national lead in total offense, was held to a mere nine yards as the Spiders held the visitors to just 42 yards, minus three on the ground.

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. — The Orangemen, with the aid of the yardstick, won their fourth consecutive game of the year in a thrilling 21-11 decision over the Nittany Lions of Penn State.

With a crucial fourth and one situation late in the game, State's drive was stalled inches shy of the SU 23.

After the two teams had exchanged punts, Hill defenseman Roger Smith stole a Gary Wydman pass and raced it back 38 yards to the Lion 22. Walley Mahle capped the short drive on a four-yard end sweep with just 37 seconds remaining on the clock making the score 21-14.

SU's amazing Floyd Little demonstrated his broken-field running with a spectacular 71-yard punt return and a TD. Penn State came back to score twice in the second period on a sneak by Jack White and a 10-yard sprint by Tom Urbanik.

Nance got the Piety back in the game halfway through the third quarter with a five-yard run, a valuable part of the 101 yards he was to accumulate that afternoon. Now the stage was set for Smith's game-breaking interception.

PORTLAND, Ore. — Oregon State proved to be as ungracious a host as Boston College and what had been a four-game winning streak was brought to an abrupt halt as Syracuse was humbled, 31-13.

The Beavers unleashed their sophomore sensation, Paul Brothers, who proceeded to fill the air with footballs, riddling the proud Spider defense with nine completions and two TD's in 12 attempts for 176 yards.

Floyd Little hauled in a Walley Mahle pass good for 51 yards and a score early in the initial period. The home forces then went to work.

By the time Nance had cracked over SU's final tally, the Orangemen were hopelessly down by a 31-13 count, and that's the way the score read when the final gun sounded.

Rebounding from their stunning loss to Oregon State the previous week, the Hillmen led by Rich King's interception and punting pleased a Pitt Fall Weekend crowd of 35,000 by whipping arch-rival Pitt, 21-6. King picked off a Kenny Lucas pass and raced 30 yard to paydirt.

Earlier, Pitt had broken the ice after a scoreless first quarter and moved ahead, 6-0. Not to be denied, SU came back with a score by Little who was to pick up 100 yards rushing for the day. Before time ran out, King's interception provided the home team with a 14-6 halftime bulge.

The lone tally during an unimpressive second half was by Syracuse's Jim Nance. Roger Smith booted his third straight extra point completing the scoring. Floyd Little was voted the game's outstanding back for the third time in seven games.

NEW YORK.--Syracuse made a shambles of Army's defense and made Saturday, Nov. 7, a date for Ben Schwartzwalder to remember. Their 27-15 conquest of the Cadets was Ben's 100th win as a coach on Piety Hill.

From the opening whistle to the final gun, a furious battle was waged on the Yankee Stadium gridiron before some 37,000 fans.

Syracuse drew first blood and by the time the band had taken the field at intermission, the Orangemen held a precarious 14-7 lead. Floyd Little accounted for both scores with a touchdown run of his own and a nine-yard pass to Brad Clarke.

But the Cadets responded under the guidance of quarterback Rollie Stichweh and moved ahead 15-14 as the third period drew to a close. Then Walley Mahle took command putting over a couple of scores in the final stanza.

A fired up Virginia Tech squad nearly ruined any hopes the Orangemen had for a bowl bid until Rich King tossed a 17-yard strike to Harris Elliott with just 50 seconds left in the game.

The Orangemen had rallied earlier in the game to wipe out a 9-0 halftime lead enjoyed by the Gobblers.

Big Bo got back the first score on a short plunge, and later in the third quarter, Floyd Little, who emerged with 155 yards rushing, knifed through several Tech tacklers into the end zone for the go-ahead touchdown making the score 13-9.

But VPI was far from dead. Midway through the fourth quarter, they mounted a drive highlighted by a 60-yard run by Sonny Utz. In three plays, the visitors went ahead 15-13 on a six-yard burst by Utz.

With time running out, a TD run by Little was called back and the two teams exchanged punts. Rich King and SU took over on their own 17 with 1:26 remaining. Then King threw two passes to Elliott and a third to Brad Clarke before the game-winning toss.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va.- In spite of a one-point loss at the hands of Gene Corum's Mountaineers, the Orangemen received and accepted a Sugar Bowl bid to play LSU New Year's Day.

However, things weren't as happy as could be, because no team likes to accept a bowl bid after a loss such as the Hillmen had sustained.

Syracuse held a 21-7 halftime bulge, thanks to the power running of Jim Nance, Floyd Little, and Walley Mahle.

But Allen McCune passed the home team into the lead 22-21 as the third quarter ended.

In the fourth quarter the game turned into a duel between Nance and McCune. Big Bo brought the Orangemen back to life with a short plunge. The try for two extra points was no good.

This set the stage for McCune's winning 50-yard heave to Bob Dunlevy. Nance had his finest day in his varsity career with a total of 163 yards rushing.

CANNON TO BOOM

The Alpha Tau Omega cannon fired after every Orange touchdown was once a tradition at Syracuse. The cannon was silenced after the 1960 season because of an accident. Clifford H. Ivern, Jr., the chairman of the Sugar Bowl Stadium Committee, has given the the ancient gun new life, however, with his invitation to the fraternity to bring the cannon to New Orleans for New Year's Day.

Walley Mahle: A Cinderella Story

By HOWIE SCHNEIDER
Junior Editor

It was the Fall of 1962 and as far as the Orangemen were concerned it was unmistakably the worst of times. They had lost the first two games of the season to Oklahoma and Army. They still hadn't scored a touchdown.

Ben promised that things would change. The home opener against Boston College approached and he turned to his bench and to a lanky, 6-3 sophomore quarterback.

Schwartzwalder claimed he had found a new field general, but nobody really believed him, not even first-stringer Walley Mahle.

"I hadn't seen a minute of varsity action. I was a fifth-string quarterback who had been playing halfback for the past two weeks. It was hard for me to believe that the coach wanted me to start.

"As I think back on it now I recall thinking that the coach was probably just trying to save our first two quarterbacks.

"But as the days went on and nobody said anything, I realized that they might be serious. That's when I began to get nervous. I didn't know if I could hold up. I'm thankful I had a good day."

The rookie, 195-pounder did have a good day as he paced the Orangemen to a 12-0 victory. It didn't take Mahle long to demonstrate what kind of football player he would be.

In that first game Mahle rushed for 101 yards in 16 carries including two touchdowns. He was unquestionably a success.

On Nov. 21 of this year Mahle played in his last regular game. He now ranks seventh in all-time Syracuse rushing history with 1150 yards. He has scored 20 touchdowns. Many have called him the greatest running quarterback in Orange history.

"Walley is a good tough kid who doesn't freeze under pressure, said Schwartzwalder after the BC contest. "Whenever he was caught unaware by the BC line, he always came up with a five or six yard gain."

Before this year's Army game Paul Dietzel said, "Mahle runs as hard as Nance. . .and when they need the big play they call on him."

The pressure Walley felt before his first game is still present.

"If I remember one thing it will be the pressure. I'll remember the steady build up, the nervous tension. But I'll never regret the fact that I had the opportunity to play, and play regularly, at a school like Syracuse."

Mahle also remembers two games in particular during his sophomore year. "The West Virginia game of 1962 was my biggest disappointment. We lost 17-6. It was a poor team effort and probably my worst individual effort.

"That same year I played in what I though was my best game. We beat Navy 34-6. That game we went out and played football for fun. I didn't have a great individual day but I thought I made very few mistakes.

After the first BC game Schwartzwalder also said "We know have to work on Mahle's passing." He is still working on it, and this has been one of Walley's biggest disappointments.

"I always thought if I had the right mental attitude I would have passed better. I just wish I could have helped the team more and improved."

Mahle also talked about the future. "It has been a long season but the boys are still working hard. We know that LSU is a good team but I think we can beat them."

After the Sugar Bowl game Mahle will make up his mind about signing a pro contract. He was drafted by the Green Bay Packers and Oakland Raiders.

"I want to play professional football. It will be a great challenge, and I can't pass it up. I don't care where they play me all I want to do is see action.

"I've been playing football for nine years. I thought it would be easy to stop. But after a while you get to love the game. I don't want to stop playing just yet."

The LSU line, which includes first team all-American defensive guard Remi Prudhomme and second team all-American center Rich Granier will be hard to move when the Orangemen meet the Tigers on New Year's Day.

Prudhomme, 6-3, 215-pound senior, was LSU's leading lineman this year.

He has been a defensive specialist with the Chinese Bandits for the past two seasons and was voted LSU's outstanding player in the Bluebonnet Bowl game last year.

Granier, is a 6-1, 210-pound senior. Last fall he lettered as an offensive specialist with the Go Team. Granier has the ability to play both offense and defense effectively.

Also up front for the Tigers will be 6-3, 250-pound junior George Rice, a guard, who was voted to the All-Conference team's offensive squad.

Fullback Doug Moreau, another man on the All-Conference team is a 6-1, 195 pound junior from Baton Rouge. Doug had a fine sophomore season as the number two scorer for the Tigers.

Rounding out the line are Ernest Maggiore, a 5-11 215-pound tackle who lettered last fall for the Chinese Bandits; guard Milton Trosclair, a 5-10, 215-pound senior; Walter Pillow, 6-2, 215-pound end, who lettered with the Go Team last fall.

Charlie McClendon

LSU's Top Tiger

When famed stategist Paul Dietzel left his job at LSU to coach at West Point in 1962, many football "experts" began crossing the Tigers off their lists of leading teams.

But after the first season of coach Charles "Mac" McClendon, the Louisianans were near the top again.

Last year McClendon guided his squad to a 7-3 regular season record, and got his boys a Bluebonnet Bowl bid. This campaign's log of 7-2-1 ranks the Bengals seventh in the country.

After three years at LSU McClendon's 23-7-2 record gives him one of the best three year records in major college football.

Famed for his defensive wizardry, Coach Mac has proved himself an able offensive tactician too. Although his team was hampered by injuries, he has had the ability to come up with the right player and play.

McClendon is no stranger to LSU football as he has been at the institution for the last 12 years. He joined the coaching staff in 1953 and served as chief defensive "brain" under Dietzel from 1955 through 1961.

It was the Chinese Bandits under McClendon's tutelage that brought the Bayou Bengals so much success and a national championship.

Before coming to LSU the Tiger pilot played defensive end at Kentucky. After graduation he served as assistant at his alma mater under Bear Bryant. After that, he was on the coaching staff at Vanderbilt.

Players Predict

'We Have the Potential'

By TERRY BEERMAN

A polling of Orange grid players revealed that they are anxious to beat LSU, prove they are better than their record indicates, and show the rest of the country that the East knows how to play football, too.

Co-captain Billy Hunter feels that the outcome of the game will be decided by the mental attitude of the team. "I feel a team's strength is 40 per cent physical and 60 per cent mental. There is no team in the country physically stronger than ours. But we will also have to be mentally "up" for the game."

His roommate and fellow co-captain, Rich King, agreed with Billy and added, "This is a better team than its 7-3 record indicates and the only way we can prove it is by winning the Sugar Bowl."

The desire to win takes many forms. Herb Stecker felt that because this was the first bowl for the team, they would be trying extra hard for a victory.

"This is our opportunity to show people that we deserve the bowl bid,' Herb explained. "We have the potential to beat anyone when we are up for a game."

Jim Nance, NCAA back-of-the year, is looking foward to participating in the bowl, especially since it will be against a southern school.

"This is a chance to play against a segregated school and I will be playing my hardest," Bo said. "I am not sure how we will be treated down there, but we plan to give a good showing of ourselves."

"As a sophomore, a major bowl game is a tremendous opportunity for me," Floyd Little said. "The fact that not many Negroes have played in the Sugar Bowl (the only player being from Pitt in 1956) gives us a chance to break down barriers in the South.

"I want to show them we can play good football here, good enough to beat LSU."

Besides showing southerners Syracuse is a good team, Floyd feels that we must demonstrate to the rest of the country that we are deserving of the honors given us and of honors not given us (the Lambert Trophy).

Walley Mahle feels that this is a game which can prove the Southeastern Conference is not as strong as most people believe it to be. "I feel that we can earn the respect of the southern people by playing a good game and showing them a well mannered team on and off the field," Walley said.

"LSU will be the toughest opponent we've played all season," Larry Virgilo, noted.

Happy New Year? Ben Is Hoping...

By HOWIE SCHNEIDER
Junior Editor

Ben Schwartzwalder has some interesting New Year's resolutions and before the first day of 1965 is over he'll have a good idea of just how effective they really are.

Resolved: "We want to beat LSU on Jan. 1. This is our primary objective. We've been working at it, and we'll continue to work at it right up until gametime."

Resolved: "We have added quite a few plays, particularly passes for this game. We'll do enough different things to keep them honest. Syracuse fans will get a chance to see plays and sets we might use next year. In this sense the game will be an experiment for next year."

Resolved: "After the game unfolds, if it becomes necessary, we will make personnel changes. We'd like to use Rich King part way on offense and part way on defense. If Oyer is still hurt we might have Walley Mahle run out of the halfback slot."

But there's one unresolved that Ben still has to contend with, and that's his Sugar Bowl opponent.

"LSU will go with three teams, the first team, the GO-teams, and the Bandits. The first team is the one we're interested in.

"They'll be tougher defensively than anyone we have played, with the possible exception of Penn State. They pursue very well, and they hit well. . .and they're big.

"I would have to say their defensive game is more outstanding than their offensive game. However, if their quarterback (Pat Screen) is healthy they'll be rough.

"They've got outstanding receivers, and a good running game with a lot of different formations and sets. There will be a lot of motion in their backfield. You can bet they'll come up with something new to throw at us."

In his Manley Field House office Schwartzwalder picked up an LSU program and evaluated individual performers only the way an opposing coach can.

"No. 12. . . Screen, quarterback, he's a good boy. He has knee trouble and if he's in there he'll pass.

"Moreau. . .he's their flanker back and kicking specialist. He's an outstanding ball player. Some sports writers think he can't be stopped. When he's flanked we'll have Holman on him.

"Ezell is their second-string quarterback. He's not a picture ball player, but he gets the job done.

"One of their backs, Labruzzo, is a 9.6 man. Their fullback Schwabb has got a lot of power inside.

"On the line they've got All-American Bodi Prudhomme. He'll play offensive guard and defensive tackle. Vincent and Greiner are other all-Conference linemen."

Schwartzwalder knows a Sugar Bowl Victory will not come easy, especially after a disappointing last game loss to West Virginia.

"After a defeat like we had at the hands of West Virginia you have to go back and work on your fundamentals, and that's exactly what we're concentrating on now."

If New Year's Day is a day to traditionally begin anew, however, LSU will also be looking to reverse a last game loss to Florida.

Somebody has to lose—and largest of the unresolved. Happy New Year?

Nance in Comeback

Bo Looks Toward the Pros

By JIM KLURFELD

He knew what he wanted. He did what he wanted. He got what he wanted.

"I passed up the Olympic games to play football. I knew I had to come back and have a good year if I was going to get that contract."

But Jim "Bo" Nance got more than just a contract this season. He gained 951 yards in one season, carried the ball more than any other Syracuse back, was named 'Back of the Year" by the Pigskin Club, and, yes, he got that pro football contract he's always wanted.

Though he hasn't signed with them yet, the Chicago Bears will be happy to have Big Bo in training camp this summer and Bo will be happy to be there.

"I've always wanted to be a pro-football player—that's been my dream. I like wrestling, but it's number two, football is number one.

"Am I satisfied with the season I had? Well, it's exactly the kind of season I expected. I expected to do what I did because I always knew I could do it."

"I gained a lot of confidence as this season went along. With each game and each time I carried the ball I felt more sure of myself. Maybe that's what I was lacking last year."

Bo, in his sophomore year, was the NCAA wrestling champion, but lost that title last year. He wants it back. So bad, in fact, that he's by-passing 900 dollars in the Senior Bowl to wrestle.

"I wouldn't say I'm really giving up that money because by wrestling this year I'll be able to stay in top shape and I figure that will help me with the Bears. If I can stay with them it will mean a lot more money than if I played in the Senior Bowl."

Bo had a poor season last year but that's a memory now and after his fine performance this year, people are talking about him differently — like pro teams.

"Winning that award was quite an honor for me. I didn't expect it, but I'm certainly glad I got it."

And the award might mean more than extra pride for Bo. When he sits down to talk contract with the Bears he will have that big silver trophy with the silver emblem that says "BEST BACK OF THE YEAR."

The Bears actually talked to me the least of all the teams. But I'm happy to be with them because they need running backs and I think I'll have a future with them.

"Yes, that's right, somehow the American Football League got the impression that I wouldn't sign with them. When I was in New York one of their representatives approached me, but I didn't want to get involved in anything and so evaded the question. I guess he took it as a refusal."

But at this moment Bo is most interested in the LSU game.

"We want to go down there and show them that we know how to play football. We've practiced real hard and feel we can show our true potential by coming up with a winning effort."

Oddly enough in a season that contained many great runs, Bo rates his finest as one that came in a practice session last Friday.

"It was a trap play and on this type of play your timing with offensive tackle Remi Prudhomme has to be split second. You have to hit in there at the right time or it won't go. Well, last Friday it went perfectly, just beautiful. And I think that's the way it's going to go against LSU.

In other words, the best of Jim "Bo" Nance is still to come. Maybe LSU shouldn't turn in. They might be sorry.

'Dixieland Beat'

By MARLENE CIMONS

Syracuse's marching band will add its own splash of Dixieland notes to the New Orlean's scene come New Year's Day.

Pete Fountain, well-known jazz clarinetist, will perform with the band in a tribute to New Orleans, said Edward Volz, director of the band.

The group is planning to present two shows, he said, a six and one-half minute half time performance and a 10 minute pre-game exhibition.

"We plan a two minute precision drill to Dixieland," he said.

The band will also appear on NBC national television in a Sugar Bowl salute the day before, Volz said.

"We've got quite a bit cooking," he added.

The 80 piece band's biggest problem thus far has been rehearsing in mud and snow, Volz commented.

"We'll be fine once we get south on the 29th and have a warm weather drill," he added.

"I'm very grateful to the fellows in the band," Volz said. "Our time has been extremely limited and our facilities hampered. They've been working hard and will have to sacrifice much of their own vacation for the Sugar Bowl."

Gail Fuch's, SU's Orange Girl, will be featured in the half-time and pre-game show.

"She will be a highlight of the show," he noted.

SU's peppy spark-plug, the cheering squad, will also be on hand to provide support and generate enthusiasm for the Orangemen.

"Being a senior," said Pam Francis, captain of the cheerleaders, "I've never seen SU participate in a major bowl. The whole squad and myself were overwhelmed and thrilled!"

The cheerleaders have not as yet planned any special show for the event but have created several new cheers, Miss Francis said.

"We'd really like to something unusual," she added, "but don't know what our limitations will be."

Both the band and cheerleaders leave Syracuse for New Orleans on Dec. 28.

BOWL HISTORY

2 Wins, 3 Losses

By ART ROSSKY

New Year's Day Syracuse gridders will be trying to gain a Sugar Bowl win to atone for a somewhat disappointing season. A victory would give them an even split in their overall bowl history.

Previously the Orange have gained Orange and Liberty Bowl triumphs while dropping two Orange and one Cotton verdict.

In the 1960 Cotton Bowl, the Piety edged Texas, 23-14, to climax a campaign in which they disposed of 10 straight foes to gain top ranking in the country.

This club, boasting such performers as the 'Sizeable Seven" on the line, fullback Art Baker and a sophomore named Ernie Davis, is the only undefeated eleven in pigskin history.

As he had all season Davis paced the Cotton win by hitting paydirt twice and adding four points after touchdown.

Two years later Davis led the Hill into another bowl—the 1961 Liberty edition—and another conquest.

Though Davis contributed his usual fine all around play, heroes laurels belonged to captain Dick Easterly, who made a diving catch of a Dave Sarette aerial for two vital extra points the key to the 15-14 victory over Miami of Florida.

In the 1957 Cotton Bowl Syracuse, hungry for its initial bowl win, suffered a heartbreaking 28-27 loss to Texas Christian as a TCU lineman broke through to block the potential tying extra point.

Standout for the Hillmen was Jim Brown, gaining 132 yards on the ground and scoring 27 markers.

In the 1959 Orange Bowl misfortune struck again as Syracuse bowed by a 21-6 count to Oklahoma.

The Sooners, off to a fast start, scored twice in the first quarter to decide the contest.

Syracuse's only other post season appearance was the 1953 Orange Bowl. Among that squad's standouts were Jim Ringo, the Philadelphia Eagles' fine center, and present end coach Joe Szombathy, holder of the season pass receiving mark with 21 grabs.

However, for Alabama mixed signal caller Cl Hobson's fine passing with strong running to hand the Piety a 34-6 shellacking.

Fred Lewis: The Man Behind SU's Basketball Renaissance

By NEIL KERR

Three years ago Syracuse's basketball team was floundering through a 27 game losing streak — the longest ever to be compiled by a major college team.

Three seasons and one coach later, the Hill squad ranks as an Eastern power. The difference? A guy named Fred Lewis has come north to Syracuse and become coach of SU's cage team.

A Brooklyn native, Fred began his career at Long Island there he scored 567 points as co-captain of his team while being named to the All-Metropolitan team.

The next year he moved on to Eastern Kentucky University where he became a two-time All-American and ran his collegiate point total to 1588. During the 1944 and 1945 seasons, Lewis led the Maroons to 41 victories with only eight losses and was the nation's No. 2 and No. 3 scorer respectively.

Fred spent the 1946-47 season with Sheboygan Redskins of the National Basketball League. He was not only Rookie of the Year that winter but he also became the second leading scorer in the league, and an All-Star team member. The next season, Lewis played with the Baltimore Bullets and was the team's high scorer.

On the heels of SU's disastrous 1961-62 season, Lewis was hired to replace cage coach Marc Guley. Soon after Fred arrived on the Hill, he went recruiting and came up with a guy named Dave Bing and a banner crop of freshman ball players.

The debut of the "new-look" Orange came on Dec. 1, 1962. The fast and flashy Syracuse frosh romped in a preliminary game. Then out came the varsity to face Kent State. It was no great show of basketball, but the Orange won on a last second shot by Herb Foster, 56-55.

The upsurge in Hill Loop fortunes continued last year. With No. 22, Dave Bing, leading the way SU logged a 17-8 record and won the Hurricane Classic.

Two years of rebuilding and recruiting were rewarded in the spring of '64 when the Orange received a berth in the National Invitational Tournament.

SU's Best

Dave Bing: Smooth as Silk

By NEIL KERR

"Sure bet to be All-American before he's through," is how Syracuse's basketball pressbook describes the talented Dave Bing. Which is a pretty good description of the 6-3 smooth-as-silk speedster from Washington, D.C.

Prior to entering Syracuse, Bing played for Spingarn High in Washington where he helped his team win the City Championship in '61 - '62 Spingarn compiled a 60-5 record during Dave's three years of varsity play.

After scoring more than 19 points a game and earning High School All-American honors, Bing was eagerly sought after by over 100 colleges.

"After considering the offers," said Dave, "I narrowed the choice down to San Francisco, Syracuse, Bradley, Seattle, Providence, Ohio State, Temple and NYU."

San Francisco almost lured him away from Syracuse because Dave's two year teammate at Spingarn, Ollie Johnson, had gone there. Seattle too, had a chance since Elgin Baylor, another graduate of Spingarn High, had played for them.

But Dave chose 'Cuse because, "I wanted to come up with a team that was rebuilding, where I could get to play some call."

The new coach and new Field House also impressed him as did his meeting with Ernie Davis, John Mackey and John Brown.

In his first college game, Dave gave indications of things to come. He scored 23 points, hauled down nine rebounds, made six assists and even dunked the ball a couple of times as a "new-look" SU team beat the Morrisville frosh 85-31.

Bing repeated this performance many times in '62 as he led Syracuse's yearling squad to a 13-4 record. That season Dave averaged 25.7 points per game and topped the team in rebounds and assists as well. His 437 points set a new frosh high.

Then, in a tension filled post-season match, Dave scored 36 points as he helped his team to a 66-59 win over the '62 Syracuse varsity.

As a sophomore, he continued to break records and impress opposition. Last year Bing netted 556 points, averaging 22.2 a contest as he became the highest scoring sophomore in SU history. He also led the Orange to a 17-8 log, the Hurricane Classic Title and a berth in the NIT Tournament.

High spots of the year included Bing's last second overtime shot that beat Niagara 83-81; his 31 points in the NIT game against NYU and his 29 points plus eight assists against Fordham. After THAT game, coach Fred Lewis called Bing, "the best player in the East."

During last season's games, Dave tallied 29 points on four occasions, then 30 points and finally 31. But his seemingly impossible passes and high jumping for rebounds were equally as exciting.

Now, though SU is not playing up to its high pre-season expectations, Bing continues to draws raves from opposing coaches. And, after six games, he leads the team in assists and scoring with 115 points for an 19.2 average. Already, as the Orange cage pressbook notes, Dave, "ranks as one of the top players in SU history."

Tourney Teams

By KEN RUDNICK

If Syracuse's faltering Orangemen manage to upset Princeton in the opening round of the Eastern College Athletic Conference Holiday Festival, their road to recovery will be blocked by a formidable field of six other entrants.

MICHIGAN — Coach Dave Strack boasts two recognized All-Americans in 6-7 center Bill Buntin and 6-5 guard Cazzie Russell.

Buntin's weight (232) makes him almost impossible to handle under the boards, and his 23.2 points per game last year attest to his scoring prowess. Russell, a monstrous guard at 218 pounds, averaged 24.8 points per game as a sophomore.

MANHATTAN — Ken Norton's Jaspers have lost only one starter from last season's high-scoring outfit. The team averaged 81.8 points per game, but defensive deficiencies held its record to 11-11.

Manhattan's leading performer figures to be Larry Lembo, one of the finest players in New York City. Lembo, the possessor of a sweet jump shot, tallied 25.7 ppg. last year as a junior.

TEMPLE — The Owls, winners of last year's Middle Atlantic Conference title, were once known for their ability to produce the good little man.

This year, however, coach Harry Litwack's star is cast in the big man mold. Jim Williams, a 6-8 junior, is one of the finest centers in the East. His 18.1 ppg. and average of 12.2 rebounds led the Owls in 1963-'64.

CINCINNATI — For the first time in many years, the Bearcats may be relegated to the lower reaches of their own Missouri Valley Conference. Coach Ed Jucker's squad, a national power for more than half a decade, may have to scramble on a level with the mortals.

Not a single returnee scored in double figures last season, but Don Rolfes a transfer from Kentucky, is averaging 19 ppg. in early action. Cincy is hoping junior center Ron Krick can overcome the injury jinx and reach stardom.

ST. JOHN'S — Coach Joe Lapchick's Redmen will give everyone trouble with all key performers but one, Dan Waddleton, returning from a young crew which won nine out of its last 11 games last year, including an upset win over Loyola of Chicago.

Pacing St. John's are the McIntyre brothers, Bob and Ken, who averaged more than 30 points between them last winter.

LA SALLE — The Explorers have lost their two best players of last year, Frank Corace and Walt Sampson, and as a result, may have a long winter. The murderous schedule will not do coach Bob Walters and his players any good.

The best of the returnees is senior center George Sutor, who can also move into a forward spot. He averaged 14.1 ppg. last season.

Tiger All-American: Can SU Stop Him?

By CHRIS VIVIANO

The Syracuse basketball team will have to defend against probably the best college basketball player in the world when the Orangemen meet Princeton in the Christmas Holiday Festival.

The man who figures to give the Syracuse players so much trouble is the 21-year-old captain of this year's Princeton Tiger squad, Bill Bradley.

Last fall, in the Olympic games in Tokyo where he was the only U.S. undergraduate participating, Bradley won a gold medal and was the most valuable player on the winning American team.

Bradley's most productive play has come as a collegian at Princeton, where he has had to be the big shooter, averaging 30 points per game.

In leading his team to two Ivy titles, Bradley has topped almost every Princeton and Ivy League record and, baring injury will, without a doubt level a few more in his last college season.

The list of Princeton and Ivy League individual records reads like a Bradley biography.

By scoring 51 points last winter in a game against Harvard, he broke his own Ivy record of 49 points in one game. Other Ivy records held by Bradley include the most points in one season-461, 1963-64 (14 games); the most points in a career-Bradley trailed Petey Campbell's record of 861 by 15 points when the season began.

The individual Princeton titles captured by this illustrious performer include the most field goals in one game, 8; the most free throws in one game, 21, against Cornell in 1963; the most points in one season, 936, 1963-64 (29 games); and the most points in a Princeton player's career, 1,618, 1962-64 (54 games).

In setting as many records as he has, Bradley has developed just about every shot. He can hook, jump-shoot, or drive. Bradley is not a spectacular jumper, but he gets good position. He is not exceptionally fast either, but he has quick hands.

BILL BRADLEY

By KEN RUDNICK

Contrary to popular belief, Bradley is a member of the Missouri Valley Conference, not the Ivy League's basketball powerhouse and contender for Eastern and national honors.

The confusion is understandable, because Princeton basketball and the name of the Tigers' All-American, Bill Bradley, have been virtually synonomous for slightly more than two seasons.

The names of Bradley and—it may come as a surprise to some—four other players will appear in Princeton's starting lineup when last year's Ivy League champions take the floor at Madison Square Garden Dec. 28 against Syracuse in the opening round of the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference Holiday Festival tournament.

When the Tigers opened training this fall, coach Bill van Breda Kolff was faced with the chore of rebuilding his team around the 6-5 forward who exhausted all superlatives in his sophomore and junior years on the New Jersey campus.

Based on results in the first six games of the 1964-'65 season, van Breda Kolff has succeeded in putting together a strong combination.

The Tigers boast a 5-1 record going into last night's clash at St. Louis University. Their only loss was a 61-60 setback on the road against a good Villanova team.

The Ivy Leaguers have done it with a starting lineup which includes one senior (Bradley), one junior and three sophomores.

Any discussion of Princeton basketball has to start with Bradley, a coach's dream. He is the proverbial player who can do everything on a basketball court.

His ability to shoot, rebound, dribble, pass and play defense make him an outstanding performer in the backcourt as well as at his normal forward position.

He played in the unfamiliar guard spot during the Olympic trials this summer and still outshone the rest of the nation's best collegiate performers.

Bradley was a unanimous choice of the panel which selected the Olympic basketball team. Then, he helped America to a Gold Medal in Tokyo in October.

Bradley's partners in the Princeton frontcourt are forward Bob Haarlow (6-2) and center Bob Brown (6-9).

Haarlow, a junior, is one of seven returning lettermen from a squad which compiled a 20-9 mark last season and a 12-2 record in Ivy League competition.

Sophomores Brown, Gary Walters and Chris Chimera are products of a freshman team which won 14 of 16 games last winter.

Van Breda Kolff expects Brown to take a good deal of the rebounding load off the shoulders of Bradley. In order to win the starting assignment, Brown had to beat out Don Neiman, a letterman in his junior season.

Hill Cagers Eye Festival

By NEIL KERR

After five straight losses, Fred Lewis and Co. will be out to redeem themselves — and they'll have to do it in the most highly rated holiday basketball tournament in the nation.

The Orange will meet Princeton in the opening round of the 13th annual Holiday Festival on December 28th in Madison Square Garden.

Other teams in the Festival will be Cincinnati, LaSalle, Manhattan, Michigan, St. John's and Temple.

Princeton will be led by the Olympic standout and All-American Bill Bradley. He'll be helped by 6-6 Ed Hummer, 6-9 Bob Brown and Gary Walters. The Tigers, coached by Bill van Breda Kolff, have dominated Ivy League basketball for almost a decade.

Syracuse has appeared in the Holiday Festival before, in 1954, '55 and '58. The Piety have been 3-5 in past competition, never reaching the finals.

Along with Dave Bing, other outstanding players in the tournament will be Cazzie Russell of Michigan, Ron Krick of Cincinnati, Ken McIntyre of St. John's, George Sutor of LaSalle, Larry Lennon of Manhattan and Jim Williams of Temple.

If the Orange win they will face the winner of the Michigan-Manhattan game. Michigan is favored to win the tournament.

Fred Lewis' team currently displays a 1-5 record as it breaks for Christmas before heading for New York City.

Why the sudden decline?

Likely factors include the tougher schedule, poor defensive play and the inconsistency of Lewis' team; at least six members of the team have had only one or two good scoring nights.

Another cause: many consider that the officiating has been bad but Syracuse has appeared to suffer a loss of spirit — a letdown in morale — after these alledgedly poor calls. This hurts them just as much, if not more, than the quality of the officiating.

And possibly the pre-season rankings given Syracuse resulted in premature cockiness on the part of the Orangemen. At any rate the going has been tough.

Lewis' cagers looked good in their season's opener as they blasted American University, 127-67. The 127 points shattered the old SU mark of 117 set last season against Colgate. All-American candidate Dave Bing led the Orange with 20 points, 15 rebounds and made 11 assists, tying his own record.

On Dec. 5 at University Park, Pa., the Orange were routed 81-59 by Penn State as the pre-season glamour began to wear off.

The game was close for awhile, as the Nittany Lions held a narrow lead during the course of the first half and led 37-31 at intermission. SU then rallied, taking a 48-47 lead with 6:40 remaining.

But Penn State, playing in the hot, jampacked confines of an auxiliary gym, proceeded to turn the game into a romp. They outscored the Orange 33-12 in the final 6½ minutes of play.

By the following Wednesday, Syracuse fans had recovered from Penn State's "fluke" win and turned out in record breaking numbers (4875) expecting to see SU beat Cornell.

But the Big Red spoiled Syracuse's big night in Manley. With 19 seconds remaining, Jim Maglisceau swished a pair of foul shots and Cornell pulled off an upset 73-72 win.

A trip to Kentucky figured to provide the Orange cagers with their toughest competition of the '64-'65 season — and it did. First Kentucky, then Eastern Kentucky and finally Louisville beat the Orange.

Before 11,900 fans in Lexington's Memorial Coliseum, Kentucky guards Louie Dampier and Tommy Kron sparked the Wildcats to a 110-77 win on Dec. 12.

Two nights later the Orange moved on to Richmond, Ky. for a game with Fred Lewis' alma mater, Eastern Kentucky. With 6500 fans looking on, the Maroons hustled to an early 10 point lead and pulled ahead by 18 points during the second half. A last quarter Syracuse rally closed the final score to 79-69.

Syracuse went against the Louisville Cardinals in its third Bluegrass basketball game and suffered its fifth straight setback, 67-62.

Piety Profiles

By NEIL KERR

DAVE BING:
Junior co-captain. A 6-3 Washington, D.C., product. First Team high school All-American pick. Led Spingarn High to City Championship and three year 69-5 record. At Syracuse, set frosh scoring record of 25.7 per game and 437 total points. Last year established new sophomore records: 556 points and 22.2 average. Team leader who is good shooter, great dribbler and can play guard or forward.

CHUCK RICHARDS:
Senior co-captain. A 6-8 native of Poland, N.Y. He first starred at Poland High - hitting 46 points in one game — before playing for Manlius Military Academy. Averaged 23 points a game at Manlius and led team to 14 straight wins and 16-3 season. Then at West Point, he became second highest Army Plebe scorer in history. Transferred to Syracuse and set junior scoring record of 528 points (22 ppg) and led squad in rebounding with 228. SU's best big man since Jon Cincebox.

NORM GOLDSMITH:
A 6-3 junior from Malverne. Led high school team to 17-3 record and sectional championship. Third on SU team in both scoring (199 points) and rebounding (189) as sophomore.

REX TROBRIDGE:
6-9 Orange center from Delmar, near Albany. Helped Bethlehem Central compile 16-4 record and win Section Two Class B Championship. Has the size to do job, but needs more confidence.

RICH DUFFY:
The 5-10 senior from Katonah, N.Y., is the smallest man on the team but is a real scrapper. Has good speed and usually starts. Good defensive player.

RICK DEAN:
6-6 soph from Cherry Hill, N.J. Topped SU frosh team in total points — 370 for 19.5 average — and was best rebounder with 233 in 19 games. A 225 pounder, he moves well and scores best from in close. Hit 54 per cent of shots last year.

JIM BOEHEIM:
Is a 6-4 junior from Lyons, N.Y. near Rochester. Was sixth man first two years but deadly one hand push shot — hit eight for eight against American U. — makes him backcourt starter. Fifth best scorer last season and should improve.

FRANK NICOLETTI:
Former All-City, County, State performer for St. Peter's Prep in Weehawken, N.J. Strong 6-3 junior who was occasional starter last year. Has lost 25 pounds and should see more action this winter.

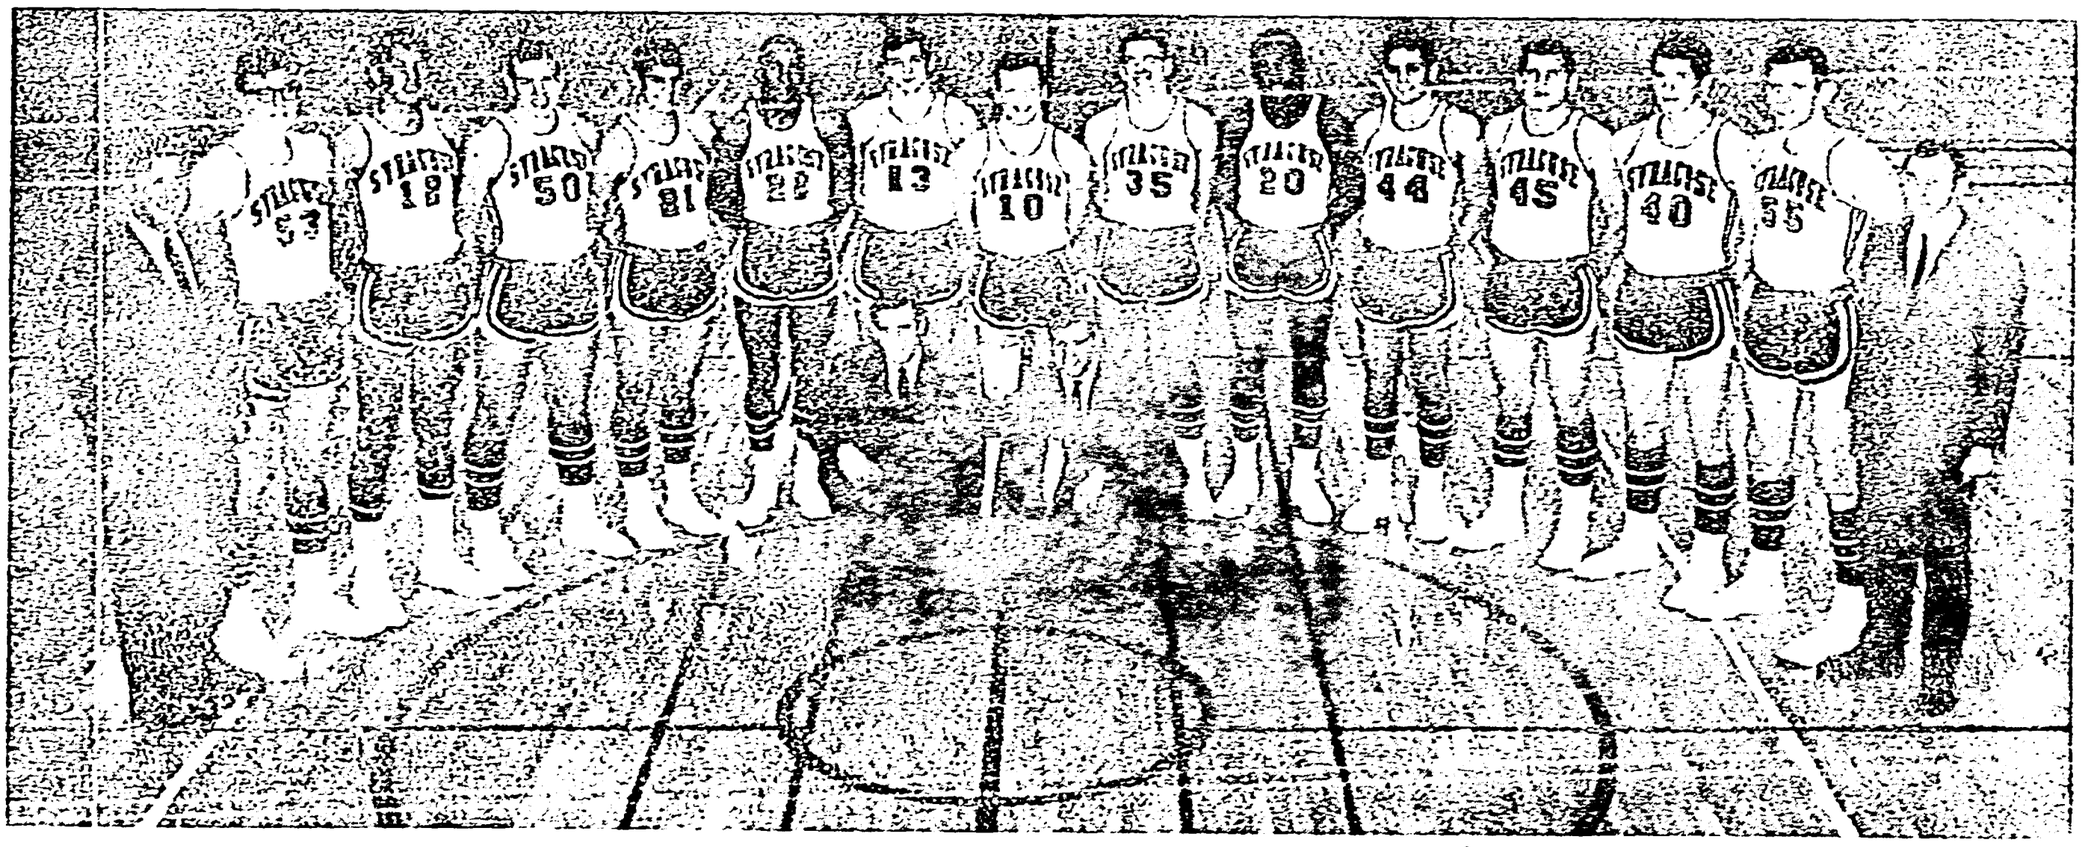
SAM PENCEAL:
From Boys High in New York City. 6-3 junior is good ballhandler and passer. Often starts and is team's defensive specialist.

PHIL SCHOFF:
6-3 senior from Ft. Plain, N.Y. Good shooter who can play up front or in backcourt. Averaged 10.4 as a sophomore and may be used more frequently this year.

VAL REID
A much sought after New York City schoolboy in 1962. The 6-9 sophomore averaged 15 points a game for Tangerines last season. Fine jumper and shooter who has great potential but needs experience. Hit on 51.5 per cent of shots last year.

DICK ABLEMAN:
Most improved player on squad this season. A 6-5 junior who is strong under boards and is improving rapidly as scorer. Could be regular starter if he continues to out-hustle more highly touted teammates.

SCOTT LOLL:
Tall 6-8 forward from Bronxville, N.Y. A leading rebounder for frosh last year. Has good one hand corner shot and should play important relief role.



1964-65 Syracuse Cagers

Under the new system, students will be required to fill out an IBM tuition card, a "registration schedule request form" and to correct the registrar's sheet of previously-known information. These three forms replace the unwieldly packet of 17 IBM cards formerly used.

Also revised is the registration schedule which allows seniors to register on the first day of registration (Monday) only, freshmen on Tuesday and Wednesday only, while sophomores, juniors and graduate students register all three days.

The registration setup in Archbold Gymnasium, however, will remain the same.

As before, students will go first to their advisors and then to either Gifford Auditorium (liberal arts students only) or the dean's office of the individual colleges to pick up their card packets. The tuition card and the correction sheet will re-

DO STARTS, STOPS AGAIN

Final exams are just around the academic corner, the calendar says, and the Daily Orange's return to campus this week will be brief, to say the least.

With Friday's edition, the DO staff members close up shop until Thursday, Feb. 4.

IFC Sets '68 Convo, House Grade Level

A minimum academic requirement has been set for all fraternity houses by the InterFraternity Council. If the requirement, a 1.3 cumulative average, is not met at least once in two semesters, the house is placed on "IFC academic probation."

The requirement announced at Wednesday's IFC meeting, was followed by an announcement of a rushing convocation to be held at 2 p.m. Sunday in Hendricks Chapel. The convocation, according to Robert Evenson, IFC rushing chairman, will be to explain the details and procedures to be followed by all freshman men planning to rush.

The new academic requirement involves no penalty and is considered by the IFC academic standards committee, the group that set the requirement, to be only a warning. The fraternity

Daily Orange Founder Dies

Co-founder and first editor of the Daily Orange, Irving R. Templeton, died Monday at the age of 83 in Buffalo General Hospital in his home town of Buffalo.

President of his senior class, Mr. Templeton graduated from Syracuse University in 1904.

In the first issue of the DO, Sept. 15, 1903, Mr. Templeton wrote an editorial stating the purpose of the newspaper.

"The Orange aims to furnish all the college news while it is news, to serve as a bulletin both for professors and for student activities, to give the alumni news and the news of other colleges, and in all things to unify the interest of all Syracuse colleges into one great and ever-growing university."

Predecessors to the daily university newspaper include a monthly, which was started by the students soon after the college was founded in 1370. In the early 1890's a weekly was published.

IRVING R. TEMPLETON
Daily Orange Founder

Mr. Templeton's editorial announced the need for a daily newspaper:

"Now, with its splendid student body of over two thousand, its large faculty and great resources, the time has come when Syracuse University takes its rank with the leading colleges in the country in publishing a daily newspaper.

"The enterprise was first broached by some of the students in early January last. After much thought and work which insured a successful outlook, the plan was laid before the Chancellor (Day) and faculty in March.

"It received their official sanction. Since that time the plan for its success, both financially and as a literary paper worthy of the university have been perfected, with the result which you see before you."

School of Journalism Dean Wesley C.

(See DO Founder, page 14)

A Friend To All

It was only a short time before his death that we thought of Irving Templeton.

The first editorial ever written for the Daily Orange, on Sept. 15, 1903, coined the phrase "best interests of the university," which has now found its way into the constitution of the Board of Student Publications.

Irving Templeton wrote that editorial, and he wrote many more before relinquishing the reigns of the DO upon graduation.

In more ways than any, the Daily Orange is the living spirit of this man, who both founded it 62 years ago and then served as its first editor.

We last heard from Mr. Templeton late in the fall of 1964, when he wrote to us with some observations about how we could make this, the 62nd volume of the Daily Orange, a better newspaper.

His interest in the DO never ceased, and we are certain that past DO staff members, such as Roscoe Drummond and Drew Middleton, who have gone to great heights, were appreciative of his counsel.

It is truly remarkable that a man well on in his years could take the time to offer his advice to college students 60 years after he himself graduated from the university.

And if his time with the Daily Orange wasn't enough, Templeton still managed to serve as president of his class and founder of the Campus Chest Carnival.

In his home town of Buffalo, Templeton was a noted civic figure, contributing much to the city's heritage.

Throughout his years as a lawyer, Templeton remained a friend of youth, both on campus and in Buffalo. He was a leading figure in the Buffalo branch of the Boy Scouts, and his help made it possible for many worthy youths to attend college.

When Templeton was cited as one of the first recipients of the award for distinguished service of the SU Alumni Association, Chancellor William P. Tolley said:

"Your zeal for assisting worthy young people to attend your alma mater is unsurpassed."

Although we never met Irving Templeton, we know we have lost a friend.

Millstones and Milestones

Resolutions and Resolve

By Dan Stone

At this time of year it is supposed to be American and all for everybody to set down a list by which they will live until it's time to draw up next year's list. In the spirit of giving that has carried over from the Christmas season, I would like to make some suggestions and observations for various lists around campus.

There must within the next month or so be some resolution of the problems that exist between administration and student government. This cannot be done by a pious declaration by each side that there is in this new year a feeling of spirit and brotherhood that stretches across the campus.

A university cannot hold together as a cohesive body if it has to undergo a trial by fire such as the demonstrations preceding Christmas. And yet I can see no sign that the tensions have been eased. It still appears that both sides are entrenched. What is needed is some kind of a Sagamore or a Pinebrook-type conference either at one of those sites or on campus where the combatants can get together over a table and air their differences.

The December protest resulted as much from a failinability to find a proper channel for communication away. It is not a problem as anything else. This is a problem that will not melt away. I tis not a problem that can be put off or negated by intransigence. It requires a meeting of the minds and a meeting soon.

I tend to think that Student Senate may be moving in a profitable direction by debating such issues as the feasibility of the House Un-American Acitivites Committee. I don't think that firing a petition off every two weeks is the proper course. I don't know that this year's group is the proper group, and I know that the method of selecting issues (which seems to me to be at the whim of one individual) is the wrong method -- but this is a step in the right direction.

It is a step toward a mature student government that is concerned with problems above and beyond immediate self-comfort.

It is a step toward establishing the intellectual atmosphere that so many feel is lacking here.

In time it may be a step toward attracting to student government a group more interested in discussing this sort of issue than in playing a mickey mouse game of power politics.

It is a step toward the student body making its sentiment known on significant issues.

But before this step can be taken certain questions have to be answered. Can some measure of faith in student government be established on the part of the administration, because if the group is not taken seriously here at Syracuse, the student voice, or its purported representative, cannot be taken seriously elsewhere.

And it will be interesting to see if indeed the students still speak with any united voice. For instance is the student body still 100 per cent behind a basketball team that hasn't lived up to expectations? And are they able to achieve consensus on anything that happens east of the water tower, west of Sadler, north of the Orange of south of the fieldhouse.

These are the questions and the issues that need to be resolved before we can make our resolutions.

I think that this can be a profitable year for Syracuse. I happen to think that the group that holds the student levers of power here is a creative and imaginative combination. But their potential is being pushed against a stone wall and unless the breach is made it is not going to be a profitable year, just another one.

Happy New Year (I hope).

LETTERS

More

The following letter was sent to Alexander F. Jones, executive editor of the Syracuse Herald-Journal.

Dear Mr Jones:

I read your editorial of Wednesday night with great interest. I appreciate the defense which you make of Chancellor Tolley and the kind sentiments which you express about his outstanding leadership as the Chancellor of Syracuse University. Certainly he is due our gratitude; and he merits the support of an outstanding city newspaper like the Herald-Journal.

However your editorial of last night was less than understanding of the students who were in dialogue with the Chancellor. To speak of college students as "fuzzy faced kids' whose primary concern is acne and to treat a student protest as "sassing the teacher" shows complete misunderstanding of the student mind and student aspirations. To call them "miserable little punks" indicates less than mature journalistic insight.

Student demonstrations are not methods by which young men and women have fun. Rather, they are part of the maturing process by which young men and women become adult and responsible citizens. They grow out of deep concerns; and they represent considerable sacrifice on the part of many who are involved in them.

To say blithly, as you did in your editorial, that Dr. Toley has given these "ill-mannered louts" their dormitory beds, the seats in which they sit in class, the food they eat, and the wisdom of of the faculty is to reaffirm a philosophy of paternalism which is totally outdated in the modern world.

I work with these young persons whom you criticize in your editorial. I know their immaturities; and I understand the crudeness of some of their techniques of protest. However, I do not view games nor their protests as signs of childishness. These are men and women who take their responsibilities seriously. They work harder than the average citizen in our society. They are under enormous strains and competitive tensions. And they are a group of whom Syracuse and this great university can be very proud. You have done them a disservice in libeling them as you did in Wednesday's editorial. If they owe an apology to the Chancellor of the university, certainly your newspaper owes an apology to them.

Vacation

To the Editor:

I was encouraged to see encouraging news about Syracuse students demonstrating in favor of a longer Christmas vacation.

California students choose to protest over such trivia as free speech and the right to pursue civil rights or political activites on and off campus.

But Syracusans, true to their heritage, are roused to wrath ony over such essentials as vacation time.

It's so nice to have a healthy sense of perspective.

Tickets for the concert are available at the Regent box office.

The Sounds of Jazz

New York By Night

by Bill Newman

Birdland, located at the corner of Broadway at Fifty-second street holds the rare distinction of being "the jazz corner of the world". Physically, Birdland isn't really that different from any of the jazz clubs located in New York City's Vilage or West Side. Plush rugs and dim lights try to hide the fact that Birdland is nothing more than a small basement in a very old building, and the owners count on the smog created by cigaretts and cigar smoke to complete the atmosphere of New York's most well-known jazz club

Musically, the picture is quite different. Fifty-second street was mecca for the jazz world in the late forties and early fifties and Birdland is the name sake for the originator of modern jazz, the late Charlie "Yardbird" Parker, better known as "The Bird."

Having witnessed Syracuse University's victory in basketball over Manhattan earlier in the day, and being a bit under the influence of some fine wine sampled at a party in the village, I was in a better mood than usual to pay the cover, admission, and minimum charges at Birdland at one in the morning. A sad but true fact of life is that musicians like to eat just like the rest of us so the listener must pay at "a la carte prices." I must admit that it was worth the fare to hear two of the finest groups in jazz today.

The show opened with the Gerry Mulligan Concert Jazz Band, a group of twelve musicians who play with more taste and feeling than this writer has heard by a large jazz group in quite some while. We sat through two sets by the Mulligan group and would have stayed for two more if Birdland's owners hadn't decided to close the place for the evening. The key to success of this group seems to be four sided: excellent arrangements, capable and talented musicians, taste in presenting their music, and lastly, the fact that they seem to really enjoy their work.

The spark of this group remains the personality of leader Gerry Mulligan. Doubling on baritone sax and piano, he makes the difficult look easy and has a talent for mixing serious musical effort with an irresistible sense of humor.

Between the two Mulligan sets, Birdland presented one of the most well known and highly respected men in the world of jazz, Dizzy Gillespie, "the greatest trumpet of them all." Where the Mulligan group accented a group effort, the Gillespie Quintet offered a display of individual talent that is hard to beat.

The highlight of the evening came when Diz and tenor man James Moody put down their horns and sang an entire tune alternating scat choruses in voice, just as they usually do with their horns. After four or five selections Diz came to the microphone and announced, "at this time it gives us great pleasure to leave you" and the act was over! So the famous Gillepie sense of humor won out musically and otherwise.

Elsewhere in New York, Thelonious Monk failed to show Gate (true to form) and Osfor a date at the Village car Brown Jr. at the Cafe Au Go Go continued to prove that he is one of the most dynamic performers in the world of show biz today.

So it is that yours truly returned to the land of ice, snow and term papers hoping that tickets to Sammy Davis' new show "Golden Boy"would be available sometime this century, and hoping that I wasn't the only Syracusan fortunate enough to have experienced an enjoyable evening of good music over the vacation.

Crouse Concert

SU Singers to Perform

The Syracuse University Singers under the direction of Earl George, will present a concert 4:00 p.m., Sunday, in Crouse Auditorium.

The Syracuse University Singers, a mixed chorus of thirty-five voices, was organized in 1962 by Earl George, its present conductor. The group specializes in the a capella literature of all musical periods, with an emphasis on that of the Rennaisance and the present day. It has been particularly active in conjunction with dance groups, and in 1962 presented the first regional performance of Carl Orff's "Catulli Carmina," followed in 1963 by the first local performance of Gian Carlo Menatti's "The Unicorn, The Gorgon and the Manticore." In the spring of 1965 it will present Syracuse's first performance of Stravinsky's "Les Noces" (The Wedding), in conjunction with the Modern Dance Group of Syracuse University.

Olds 442 was here!

Whoosh! What you almost saw above was the wooliest number in years: Oldsmobile's 4-4-2. Sporting (and standard) equipment includes a 400-cu.-in. 345-hp V-8 mill backed with 4-barrel carb and acoustically tuned, chambered twin pipes. And "sticky" red-line tires. And front and rear stabilizers, heavy-duty frame, springs and shocks that make lean and sway mere memories. Three transmission availabilities, too, including 3-speed synchromesh, 4-on-the-floor and Jetaway automatic. Better hurry over to your Olds Dealer's. The 4-4-2 is a restless beast! Automation Too Slow In U.S., Eggers Says

Introducing automation too slowly should be of a greater concern to the United States than coverting to it too fast, commented Prof. Melvin A. Eggers to a Citizenship lecture Tuesday.

"Automation is nothing new compared to what has been going on for the past 150 years," added the chairman of the Syracuse University Economics Department. He spoke on the topic "The Background in the National Economic Policy."

Eggers said one of the purposes of automating is to reduce the labor force, thus producing unemployment.

He said these displaced persons could be re - employed through retraining, transfers and openings due to retirement and death.

One reason for more automation, Eggers said, was that the United States is not growing productively as fast as other European countries.

The Employment Act of 1946 put employment responsibility in the hands of the federal government. Eggers noted that the act did not define what full employment was and what actions were to be taken in cases of emergency.

Eggers cited from the report of the congressional sub-committee on employment and manpower, of the committee on labor and public welfare.

He said the majority report suggested the President step in if employment was over 3 per cent. Further tax deductions were also suggested.

The minority report, written mainly by Republicans, did not want such direct federal action. The report said education and retraining would be an effective way to curb employment, Eggers noted.

J-School to Sponsor Summer Seminars

The School of Journalism of the Newhouse Communications Center will be one of five schools—and the only one in the East—to offer a special summer program for high school journalism teachers and advisers.

Dr. Wesley C. Clark, dean of the school, said in making the announcement that the workshop will be directed by Prof. Edmund C. Arnold, chairman of the publishing and graphic arts departments.

Some 650 teachers will be granted awards and fellowships by the Newspaper Fund, which sponsors the program. Applications are now being accepted.

Syracuse will offer two seminars, June 13 - July 2, and August 8 - 28. Other seminars will be at Marquette, Minnesota, Oregon and Texas Universities.

The Newspaper Fund is supported by the Wall Street Journal. "Its aim is to encourage able young people to enter journalism careers," Clark said. "This is done primarily by upgrading the quality of journalism instruction at the high school level. Young people are being forced to make career decisions so early in their scholastic program that the best recruiting can be done in high school."

Clark said applications may be made to Paul S. Swensson, executive director, The Newspaper Fund, 44 Broad Street, New York, 10004.

Tuition, room, board and incidental expenses are covered in fellowships. Last year 294 teachers received fellowships and 260 more attended workshops throughout the country.

Hahn Given Geigy Award

Winner of the Geigy Dyestuffs Scholarship is Edward R. Hahn, a junior at the State University College of Forestry at Syracuse University.

Dr. Hardy L. Shirley, dean of the college, announced the scholarship award.

Hahn, a resident of Albany, is majoring in pulp and paper technology - and was presented with the $150 scholarship by Shirley. A 1961 graduate of Vincentian High School, he belongs to the Newman Club and the Alpha Chi Rho social fraternity. He has gained experience in the field of pulp and paper through summer employment at paper mills.

The Geigy Dyestuffs Scholarship is based on academic achievement, good character traits and financial need.

NCC Initiates Mental Health Info Program

College seniors graduating this June with majors in journalism, English or the social and behavioral sciences may now apply for fellowships at Syracuse University in the new mental health information program.

First of its kind in the country, the program leads to the master of arts degree in mental health communications.

Each fellowship carries full tuition, plus an annual stipend of $3,000. Applications for fellowships must be filed by Feb. 15.

The program has been established in response to the growing national need for specialists able to write knowledgably about mental health and to provide expert guidance to programs of public information in this field.

Graduates may accept positions as communications specialists with government departments of mental hygiene, mental health organizations, clinics, hospitals and research foundations, or with publications devoted to psychiatry or psychology.

Students spend one year in academic studies at the Newhouse Communications Center of Syracuse University and a subsequent year of supervised internship in a career situation.

Registration Process

quire only insertion of the signer's local address.

The "registration schedule request form" is to be filled out at the gym using information on the class cards obtained at registration. It will be collected at the checker's counter.

Although there is much less information required from this semester's fill - in - the - blank packet, Smith does not expect any great savings in registering time because the "bugs" have not yet been ironed out of the system.

"Following the experience of this and the following registration," Smith told the Daily Orange Wednesday, "we should have developed a substantial saving of time."

"Because the system is new there are bound to be problems," he said. "All we ask is that students retain their sense of humor."

The new IBM machine, a four-tape drive computer, was installed in the Data Center Oct. 1. It can print 600 lines per minute and already has been used to combine the information on 155,000 IBM cards onto one reel of magnetic tape, according to Smith.

In addition to speeding up registration processes, the new computer will be able to set up the student directory in three weeks at a cost of about $150. This semester's directory was not released until two months after registration and cost about $3,000 to publish.

Frosh Hoopsters Win

By NEIL KERR

Syracuse's freshman team upped its records to 3-1 by downing Cornell's Cubs 71-64 on Barton Hall court Tuesday night. The Tangerines led all the way as they beat the Ithacans for a second time.

Outrebounding its taller opponents during the early going Syracuse built a 35-28 halftime lead and moved in front by 13 points with four minutes to play.

Cornell pressed closely in the final minutes but the Orange used slick ball handling and accurate foul shooting to preserve their victory.

"That was a good win.... strictly a team effort," said coach Roy Donforth later. "George Hicker did a real good job on the boards; that was responsible for our winning. He got 15 rebounds. Dick Cornwall ran the ball club real well and Tom Bednark did some fine shooting."

Bednark, a six foot guard from Buffalo, paced the Orange with 26 points. Hicker of Franklinville added 18.

Cornell's Cubs, now 2-2, were led by Greg Morris' 16 points.

Syracuse has now beaten Albany State 111-52 and Cornell twice, 71-62 and 71-64. Canton Tech handed the yearlings their only loss Dec. 17.

This Saturday, the SU Frosh will take on Broome Tech at 6:15 p.m. in Manley Field House.

LSU Captures 13-10 Sugar Bowl Verdict

By BILL CRONAEUR
Sports Editor

NEW ORLEANS — Syracuse's hustling Orangemen fell victim to the Tiger with the golden toe — Doug Moreau — New Year's Day as they bowed to LSU, 13-10, in the 31st annual Sugar Bowl classic.

A partisan shirt - sleeved crowd of 65,000 cheered in near-record heat as the favored Bengals sprang to life in the second half and wiped out a 10-2 Hill bulge.

MOREAU

Moreau, whose 13 field goals during the regular season tied the national record, lifted a 28-yarder through the uprights with 3:51 remaining to provide the margin of victory.

In the third quarter, Moreau was on the receiving end of a 57-yard scoring toss from Tiger quarterback Billy Ezell as LSU rebounded. Ezell then fired to Joe La Bruzzo for the two extra points to tie it up, setting the stage for Moreau's shot.

The left-footed junior kicker received the silver-coated Miller-Digby Memorial Trophy as the game's most valuable player.

Both LSU and Syracuse displayed forceful defensive units. But weaknesses in the Orange secondary once again spelled defeat.

The Hillmen scored the first time they had their hands on the ball, advancing from midfield to the LSU seven, as Roger Smith kicked his initial three-pointer of the season.

The Tigers fought back. After Buster Brown punted out-Bengal tackle George Rice charged through to drop Floyd Little for a safety and it was 3-2.

SU received a break late in the first quarter when tackle Dennis Reilly blocked Brown's punt. End Brad Clarke gobbled up the pigskin and raced across untouched. Smith converted and the Orange forces led 10-2.

LSU evened matters in the third period on the Ezell-to-Moreau aerial

Syracuse threatened near the end of the quarter, but with third and four, a Walley Mahle pass was picked off by White Graves on the Tiger 18

In the final stanza, LSU took over on its own 28. Quarterback Pat Screen went right end for 21 yards and a first down on the 49. He then passed 35 yards to La Bruzzo prior to Moreau's field goal.

SU's FD twins - Little and fullback Jim Nance, who between them had tallied 25 touchdowns during the regular season - were held scoreless and limited to 110 yards by the stout Tiger forward wall

Defensively, linebackers Mike Vincent and Ruffin Rodrigue paced the Bengals with 17 and 11 tackles respectively, while John Krok and Roger Smith netted 12 each for the Orangemen

LSU fullback Don Schwab outrushed Nance, 81-70, while Ezell and Screen totaled 114 yards in the air to 52 for King and Mahle.

Low AND Inside

By BILL CRONAUER
Sports Editor

NEW ORLEANS — All-America halfback Floyd Little glanced wistfully at the locker room ceiling under Tulane's Sugar Bowl. It had been a frustrating afternoon.

His team had lost the biggest game of the season. He had only carried the ball eight times, for an unimpressive 40 yards, and he had failed to score a point. The outcome was hard to swallow.

"They were terrific on gang tackling," managed Floyd, "and their pursuit was just too much for us to handle. I couldn't break loose because their pursuit was so fast that when I got to a hole, I'd meet four or five guys there."

He continued, "They'd neutralize your charge with a rush tackle and then wait for the pursuit to come up.

"Our linemen had trouble blocking them because they were falling back off the line a couple of yards. They were giving us two yards to stop the long gainer. I just couldn't get around the corners."

Floyd insisted that he didn't mind the inactivity. "I was doing such a good job of blocking No. 72 (Ernie Maggiore)," he said, "that I wasn't worried about running with the ball. . .besides, we had trouble running outside."

As a pass receiver, Little was once again thwarted. He managed one catch for five yards.

"I was open every time I ran a route," noted Floyd. "Our quarterbacks just couldn't get the ball to me."

And to top it off, the star halfback was trapped in the Syracuse end zone for a safety in the first quarter. Said Little, smiling slightly, "That guy (George Rice) must have come out of the ground."

George Rice had one small comment of his own: "Little has as many moves as any back I've ever tackled."

Ben's Comments

"LSU was a good football team. They hit hard all the way.

"Our kids wanted to win this one badly and they gave it all they had. It just wasn't quite good enough. They hustled all the while and I'm proud of them.

"In gauging our personnel with LSU's, we did as well as we had hoped.

"This was a 'pressure' game for us and a good experience for our young ball club. You know we have 24 sophomores on this team. We'll have a lot of folks back next fall. We'll be good next year.

"I thought our defense did a pretty good job. . .with a couple of obvious exceptions. We just got caught napping on those two long bombs the Tigers completed.

"Our defense tired in the second half.

"Our offensive play was terrible in the first half. . . if we could have moved the ball more, our boys wouldn't have gotten so tired in the second half.

"Neither one of our quarterbacks threw too well and I think that hurt us quite a bit with that rugged LSU defense stopping our running game.

"You can't fool a team like LSU. . .you've got to knock 'em out of the box or else their defense will engulf them. . .they operated out of that Oklahoma defense like they owned it.

"We only had the ball for 35 rushing plays and most of the time we were deep in our own territory. I guess we should have given the ball to Floyd more. . .however LSU did a good job containing our wide stuff.

"Could we have done some things differently? I don't know.

"We were in the slot formation when Floyd was tackled in the end zone. Floyd was supposed to go wide but before he could pick up steam, the right end broke through and nailed him.

"The fact that LSU punted so well kept us bottled up most of the first half. Everytime we got the ball, it seemed we were in poor field position."

Ted Webster Resigns As Hill Swim Coach

By KEN RUDNICK

Ted Webster, a fixture on the Hill as head swimming coach since 1929, resigned suddenly Dec. 19 and left without comment for his home in New Smyrna, Fla.

Webster's resignation, coming as it did in the midst of the current season, came as a surprise to the SU Athletic Department. As yet, no word has been released regarding the reason for his unexpected decision.

The Syracuse swimmers had split their first two meets of the season under his guidance, defeating Buffalo in the opener before dropping a narrow decision to Bucknell.

Speculation is that Jon Buzzard, Webster's assistant since 1961, will take over as interim coach for the remainder of the 1964-65 season.

Webster assumed the head coaching duties at Syracuse immediately following his graduation from SU in 1929. The Cleveland native replaced Hal Ulen, under whom he developed into a star performer for the Orange.

Webster had been a prominent figure among collegiate coaches and served a term as president of the Swimming Coaches Association of America. He has also played an active part on the intercollegiate rules committee.

Buzzard, the probable replacement, was one of the finest swimmers in Orange history. Before graduating in 1957 he excelled in both freestye and backstroke events and gained a gold medal in the Eastern Championships as a senior.

★ ★ No Spilt Milk Over Sugar ★ ★

This is the last in a series of interviews with Orange coach Ben Schwartzwalder. Quizzing Ben is DO sports writer Jim Klurfeld.

Q—How do you feel about the Sugar Bowl game?

A—Our kids gave us as good a try as we could hope for physically. Particularly the defense which I thought did a tremendous job. In fact, I've never had a team that has hit any harder. You know at the awards dinner after the game the LSU players came up to me and said that we were the hittingest team they have played against. They said they used to think we couldn't play football here in the East. They admitted they were mistaken. We are also proud of the team because we were the first team, with Navy, to play in the Sugar Bowl in many years. A lot of people thought we were getting ourselves in for trouble, but you've got to begin somewhere.

Our boys tried as hard as they could. They worked very hard in Florida. The boys wanted to win this game very badly and they couldn't have tried to win any harder. We couldn't ask the defense to be any better except for a few lapses.

Q—What happened on those two pass plays?

A—Well to start with on that bomb their quarterback had fine protection. He got back there and made a fine fake. Our boys went for it. Billy Hunter took a few steps in the wrong direction and you saw what happened. And on the pass that set up their field goal our linebacker didn't pick up his man. But you can't blame the defense for this game. We missed hitting open receivers too many times. Mahle was wide open twice and Floyd just missed a long pass.

And on that interception our pass pattern wasn't run properly. It was a third and five and we called an option run. Usually Walley runs on this and he had a couple of good blocks, but this time he decided to throw. What happened was that Floyd was supposed to break into the flat on that play and then go deep, while Jim Cripps must delay three counts and then also break into the flat. However Jim didn't wait long enough and Floyd was closed in. Consequently they had too many defenders in the area.

On the safety, it was a case of a lineman not taking out his man. I think Floyd might have made a good gainer there because Harris Elliott and Walley had thrown fine blocks. Another key play was at the beginning of the game when we had holding called on us. The movies showed we weren't holding. It was a bad call and cost us a touchdown.

So you see if we could have changed three or four plays the game would have been different.

Q—Individually who would cite for playing an especially good game?

A—I think all the boys did a fine job. They just worked so hard for this and wanted to win so badly. Of course, it hurt us when Herb Stecker sprained his ankle and Terry Roe got a finger in his eye. They both missed the second half. And Walley did a terrific job. Of course he made those two mistakes, but he played a fine football game. So good, in fact, that the Green Bay Packers upped their offer after the game. And they have a few people who know their football. Walley could be quite a flanker back with them. He has good hands, speed and once he catches the ball you know what a fine runner he is.

Our defensive line played a strong game, especially considering the heat and humidity down there. Dave Archer did a fine job and so did Gary Bugenhagen. Don't forget Joe Dziekonski either. And little Teddy Holman was a hitting football player again. He was in on a great number of tackles.

Q—How about next year?

A—I am looking forward to next year. We got a lot out of this game. It was a pressure game and it is a pressure game that makes a football team. We accomplished a lot in Florida. You know we're not coddled on the schedule next year. We open against Navy and then have Miami. But we've already put some new things in such as a slot T which we used a lot in the first half and also a wing-T. That'll give the enemy more problems.

And then we have some fine football players coming back. Killorin, Little, Bugenhagen, Elliott, Roe, Cheyunski and many others. We don't know about our quarterback yet this freshman Rich Cassata throws a real quick pass. And Holman will also deserve a long look and Rooney could come on, too. John Chernovetz and Ron Oyer also will get a shot. Yes, I'm looking forward to next year. With some hard work and few breaks we could have a fine season.

— LSU Bengals Praise Orange —

Coach Charley McClendon — "That was a good Syracuse football team and I want to emphasize GOOD. Their backs ran as hard as any I've seen. They presented us many problems with their defense and their defense was extremely tough."

* * * *

Linebacker Ruffin Rodrique — "Boy, Nance hit hard. He's a blue-chip professional prospect."

* * * *

Tackle George Rice — "Syracuse would hold its own in the Southeastern Conference. They have a pretty fair football team.

Guard Remi Prudhomme — "Little could really move if he got the chance. You had to get to Nance before he got up a head of steam. He was kind of slow getting off the mark, but once under way, he could explode."

Frosh Honorary Initiates 5 Coeds

Sigma Lambda Delta, freshman women's honorary, recently held its fall induction ceremony.

Membership is based on academic excellence from freshman fall and spring semesters. As an activity it continues on through the sophomore year. Tapped for membership at this time were five girls from the College of Liberal Arts, one from the School of Music. They were: Janet Bone, Jayne Ellis, Diane Kunzelman, Joan Lancaster, Audrey Ming and Cynthia Walters.

Two annual tappings take place; attainment of a 2.5 average at the end of first or second semester is the requirement.

This year, the honorary will initiate a tutoring service for fresheman women, to start after Christmas vacation. Diana Biro has already started such a program on Mount Olympus, which the honorary will extend campus wide.

The plan is to distribute a complete list of tutors and the subjects they will tutor through AWS house or floor presidents.

Freshmen are encouraged to seek help at any time. If any floor has not yet received a copy of the list please contact Lisa Walker, ext. 2714 or Judy Anderson, ext. 2635.

CHEVROLET—As roomy a car as Chevrolet's ever built.

When you take in everything, there's more room inside this car than in any Chevrolet as far back as they go. It's wider this year and the attractively curved windows help to give you more shoulder room. The engine's been moved forward to give you more foot room. So, besides the way a '65 Chevrolet looks and rides, we now have one more reason to ask you: What do you get by paying more for a car—except bigger monthly payments?

You should read what the automotive magazines say about the '65 Corvair. They're wild about its ride. They think there's nothing else this side of the Atlantic that can touch its styling. Latin American Program Moves

The office of Foreign Study Programs of Syracuse University and the department of romance languages has announced that the Latin American program of foreign study has been moved from Guatemala to Bogata, Colombia.

The first group of Syracuse students to study in Colombia will begin course work at the Universidad de los Andes in February.

The Colombian program is made possible through the cooperation of the Colombian Institute for Advanced Training Abroad, the Universidad de los Andes, the Experiment in International Living and Syracuse University.

Students selected for the program will spend part of the semester living in private homes in Bogata and part of the semester in university student residences.

Students will take two regular courses at the Universidad de los Andes, two special courses taught by regular faculty members at the Colombian university and will participate in intensive language training programs.

The academic program will be supervised by a resident faculty member from Syracuse. For the spring semester of 1965, this responsibility will be met by Jaime Ferran, Assistant professor of romance languages. Prof. Ferran, a citizen of Spain, is known primarily as a critic and a poet. He has taught at the University of Madrid, Texas University, Colgate and Syracuse.

The program is primarily intended for college juniors. Applicants will normally be expected to have completed at least two years of college Spanish or the equivalent. Students can obtain additional information from the Foreign Study Programs office at 335 Comstock Ave., ext. 3471 or 3472.

is then required to make a 1.3 in two consecutive semesters within the next two academic years.

At present, the academic standard applies to five houses on campus. They are, in order of their standing, Theta Chi, Beta Theta Pi, Phi Alpha, Psi Upsilon and Delta Kappa Epsilon. All of these houses are below a 1.3 and will be expected to raise their average to that point by the spring semester of the 1965-66 school year.

The requirement has been constructed in a manner that allows a house to miss its average for six consecutive semesters before receiving a possible revocation of its campus charter.

Anytime after the house has been placed on IFC academic probation, however, it is subject to whatever measures the IFC Judicial Board deems necessary to restore the fraternity's academic standing.

The freshman convocation will be attended Sunday by several university administrators, IFC members and individual fraternity members. Evenson stressed the importance of the convo and said attendance was imperative for all prospective rushees.

Each university will select two students to receive stipends for living and travel expenses for a year of study in a foreign country.

Dean Stephen K. Bailey of the Maxwell School will head the Syracuse University program. Other participating universitites are Duke, Johns Hopkinds, Tufts, and Tulane. Overall administration of the program will be at Johns Hopkins' School of Advanced International Studies.

Studies of problem areas in developing countries in Africa, Latin America, the Near East and Asia will receive particular attention, Bailey said. The Syracuse fellows were selected this spring and will go to the

Are you ready for a multi-million-dollar responsibility?

If you are, there's a place for you on the Aerospace Team—the U. S. Air Force.

No organization in the world gives young people a greater opportunity to do vital, responsible work.

For example, just a short while ago a 23-year-old Air Force lieutenant made a startling breakthrough in metallurgy. And a recent All-America tackle is doing advanced research in nuclear weapons.

If you have talent, you'll have a chance to show it in the Air Force. Your work can put you and your country ahead.

You can earn your commission at Air Force Officer Training School, a three-month course open to both men and women. To apply, you must be within 210 days of your degree.

For more information, contact the Professor of Air Science. If your campus has no AFROTC, see your local Air Force recruiter.

Prof. Demarest To Exhibit Prints In NCC Lounge

An exhibition of color photographs by Prof. Fred A. Demarest will open in the lounge of the Newhouse Communications Center today, according to Dr. W. C. Clark, dean of the School of Journalism.

On display will be 20 color prints. These are part of a larger exhibition of fifty prints which Demarest has been invited to exhibit at the Munson-Williams Proctor Art Galleries in Utica from Feb. 14 - March 14.

The larger exhibit includes sports, personalities, details and scenics from all parts of the United States. The color prints to be exhibited at the Newhouse Center will include representative works from all these categories with the emphasis on those taken on the Syracuse campus.

Included among the prints are photographs of four presidents on visits to Syracuse—Truman, Eisenhower, Kennedy and Johnson.

Demarest, who is head of the photography program in the School of Journalism, has been a member of the SU faculty for nine years. He received his bachelor and master of Fine Arts degrees from Ohio University.

During the Korean War he served as a photography officer with the Air Force. Before coming to Syracuse he was associated with a commercial and illustrative photography studio in New York City. His photographs and articles have appeared in many national publications.

Since he has been at Syracuse, the photography program has grown from a couple of courses into a major undergraduate sequence in photo-journalism and a master's sequence in color photography.

Demarest also developed the special program in photo-journalism for Navy and Marine photographers at the request of the Department of the Navy. Each year 15 experienced men are sent by the Navy to Syracuse to attend the year-long program directed by Demarest.

The new photographic facilities in the Newhouse Communications Center were designed by Demarest.

The facilities include complete and separate darkroom areas for color and for black-and-white as well as a two story studio fifty feet square. One hundred fifty students are currently enrolled in photographic courses.

After the opening of the color exhibit the lounge of the Newhouse Center will be open to the public from 3 - 5 p.m. each day. The exhibit will close Jan. 16.

Service Award

DO Founder Dies

Clark commented Wednesday, "Mr. Templeton was one of the greatest alumni of Syracuse University. Few men have done more in making an impact on the university."

Clark was referring in particular to the financing and founding of the Daily Orange, which was a private enterprise run solely by the students until the 1930's. After the depression, the university took over the paper by providing financial subsidies.

W. Freeman Galpin, author of the official history of Syracuse University, praised the efforts of Mr. Templeton who also helped found the student-owned Orange Publishing Co., which printed the newspaper.

Galpin wrote: "The success of the paper that year was due largely to the imagination and illimitable energy of its editor and his dependable assistants, A. Stanley Copeland, '05, and Ralph Abell, '07. Under their management the Daily Orange increased in popular esteem and that at times in the face of hostile criticism.

"Templeton bore the latter in patience amid a score of pesty financial matters that were laid at his feet. Meanwhile the literary standard of the paper improved."

While attending Syracuse Mr. Templeton was enrolled in the College of Liberal Arts. He began his law practice in 1909, after his graduation from University of Buffalo Law School.

As a partner in the Buffalo law firm of Templeton, Turnbull, Templeton, he founded a national quarterly, "The Torch," and edited it for many years.

Activities in Mr. Templeton's postgraduate days included SU alumni programs and the Boy Scouts. He founded Buffalo's first Boy Scout Troop in 1911. He was named the first scoutmaster emeritus in the U.S. by the National Boy Scout headquarters.

In 1960 Templeton was one of the first recipients of the Syracuse University Alumni Association Awards for distinguished service to the university. Chancellor William P. Tolley's citation to him read in part:

". . .Your zeal for assisting worthy young people to attend your alma mater is unsurpassed. Devoted to the advancement of the university and its ideals and traditions, you have been one of our most active and helpful alumni leaders."

The undergraduate years of Templeton included several extra-curricular activities. He founded the Campus Chest Carnival, which is the annual student campaign for funds for charitable organizations in Syracuse and Onondaga County.

He is credited also with being the originator of the Chancellor's annual dinner for faculty.

SU Prof, Author Elected To Royal Society of Arts

William P. Fleming, chairman of the fine arts department, has been elected a fellowship of the Royal Society of Arts.

He was honored for his humanistic approach to the integration of all arts in his book, "Arts and Ideas." A revised edition of the work was published in 1963 by Henry Holt & Co., New York.

The British society promotes the arts by citing meritorious work in the various fine arts categories. The society has its headquarters in a London townhouse designed by the Georgian architect Robert Adam. Its patron is Queen Elizabeth. Her husband, Prince Philip, is president.

'Voice of America' to Interview 11 University Administrators

Interviews with 11 Syracuse University representatives on subjects ranging from youth development to adult education are being broadcast by the Voice of America to overseas audiences for the next four months.

One interview will be aired twice each week. The programs began Tuesday.

The 17 interviews, tape-recorded on campus last August by Philip Irwin, a Syracuse graduate, will be presented on the "Breakfast Show." The English language program is a daily 2½-hour radio show of special feature interviews, music and world news.

When the series of university interviews is completed, the tapes will be made available for possible use by the other 36 language services of the Voice of America, Irwin said.

Kenneth G. Bartlett, vice president and dean of public affairs, will be heard twice. He discussed the relationship between the university and the city, noting that it has become the city's largest employer, with between 3,500 - 4,000 people on its payroll.

Cultural benefits available to those both on and off campus include more than 300 public lectures a year, exhibitions at the Joe and Emily Lowe Art Center which attract 100,000 visitors annually and concerts and programs on the campus radio station, WAER-FM. Bartlett also noted that the facilities of the 11 libraries at the university are available to those wishing to use them.

In a second interview Bartlett discusses SU's Television-Radio Center, of which he is director, and stressed the fact that its courses attempt to produce a broadcaster who also knows something about good writing, drama, music and art.

"We do not look upon broadcasting as simply a distributing system," Bartlett said. "We look upon it as something that borrows heavily from the older fields and we want him to understand that relationship."

Alexander N. Charters, vice president for continuing education and special programs, will be heard on three interviews. He discussed University College, the adult education branch of the university; the undergraduate semester study programs in Italy, France and Colombia; and the Escuela de Administracion y Finanzas in Medellin, Colombia.

The Escuela trains South American management personnel through the cooperation of Colombian industrial leaders, the Alliance for Progress and the University's College of Business Administration.

Charters noted the need to broaden opportunities for adults to continue their education. He also says the semester abroad programs let students relate subjects they study to actual situations in the countries.

The university's East African Studies program is discussed by its director, Fred G. Burke, and two graduate assistants from Kenya, Phillip Maundu and Zachary Onyonka. The program trains both American and African students in government, politics and problems of nation-building in East Africa. It also serves as a base for language instruction and special overseas training projects between American and East African governments and institutions of higher learning.

Wesley C. Clark, dean of the School of Journalism, talked about the Samuel I. Newhouse Communications Center dedicated last Aug. 5 by President Lyndon B. Johnson. The $3.9 million School of Journalism building is the first unit in the Center. Clark also told about the school's graduate program in literacy journalism in which persons learn to train native workers to teach reading and to write and edit materials for new literates.

The university's Youth Development Center, which studies problems of young people growing up in the city, is described in interviews with Seymour S Bellin and Louis Kriesberg, associate professors and senior research associates at the Center. Emphasis is given to a study on public housing and social mobility.

A three-month visit to the United States by 19 participants in an international broadcast seminar sponsored by the U.S. State Department and coordinated by the university's Television-Radio Center is discussed by George Mastroianni, seminar administrator.

Broadcasters from 15 nations studied the American radio and television industry from academic and professional points of view. In Washington the group visited the Voice of America.

Interviews are also scheduled to be broadcast with Mrs. Charlotte B. Tucker, assistant professor of English and Robert S. Phillips, formerly an assistant director of admissions. Dr. Tucker describes her system of teaching English to foreign students at Syracuse. Phillips talks about admissions procedures and academic programs at the university.

SU Television-Radio Group To Attend Regional Seminar

Forty graduate students and three faculty members of the Syracuse University Television-Radio Center will participate in the second annual department seminar in "The Film of Reality," to be held Tuesday, at the George Eastman House, Rochester.

The group will see films which depict various segments of history in the development of documentary films.

James Card vice-director of Eastman House, who has arranged the seminar, will addres the group at a luncheon in his honor.

The seminar will include showings of the 1934 Nazi propaganda film by Leni Riefenstahl, "The Triumph of The Will" as well as films from Frank Capra's "Why We Fight" series and John Huston's "Battle of San Pietro."

J-Students Win Awards

Fifty dollars in prize money was awarded to five students in the School of Journalism's basic magazine course.

They won cash prizes awarded by the American Business Press, a national trade association of business and technical magazines, for the best article on a talk delivered to the class last week. The visiting speaker was Hazen H. Morse, Jr., vice president for advertising and public relations of ABP.

Judythe E. Wilbur of Rutland, Vt., a junior in the School of Journalism, won the first prize of $20. Two $10 awards were won by Rona Cohen of Melrose, Mass. and Ronald Zubkov of Ventor City, N.J., both liberal arts sophomores. The two $5 awards went to Patricia Byrnes of Attleboro Mass. a home economics sophomore and Mary O'Hara, Lyons Falls, a liberal arts senior.

Participation in the contest was voluntary. Prof. Roland E. Wolseley, teacher of the course, Introduction to the Magazine, and Morse selected the winners in New York last week.

CAGERS COLLAPSE

Cornell Hands SU 8th Setback, 106-96

By NEIL KERR

ITHACA — Cornell's basketball team simply outhustled Syracuse here Tuesday night as it romped to a 106-96 decision over the Orangemen.

The Big Red went over the century mark for the first time ever at home in recording their sixth win against two losses. SU's log fell to 2-8.

With 15 minutes remaining, Syracuse held a 10-point lead, 61-51, but Cornell took charge at that point. The Big Red took the lead 69-68 with 11:36 to play and gradually pulled away during the closing minutes.

Cornell, winning for the second time this season over Syracuse, was led by 6-7 Steve Cram's 26 points. Dave Bliss netted 22 and Bob Berube 20.

The Orange scoring twins, Dave Bing and Chuck Richards, gathered 21 points apiece and upped their season scoring averages to 19.9 and 17.8 respectively. SU outscored Cornell from the foul line, 24-20, as Richards sank his first 10 fouls in a row and finished with 13 of 15.

Both teams shot an outstanding 56 per cent from the floor, Cornell 43 for 77 and Syracuse 36 for 64.

During the first 20 minutes the two squads nearly matched basket-for-basket. There were 10 shifts of lead and nine ties in the first half. Cornell gained the biggest lead, 36-31, five minutes before halftime but the Orange tied the score at 38 all, then moved ahead to 46-44 at intermission.

Frank Nicoletti scored from eight feet out as the second half began. Then, when Jim Boeheim sank two long one-handers and Norm Goldsmith added a pair of layups, SU grabbed its biggest lead of the night 59-49, with 16:00 to play. The Orange still led, 61-51, 30 seconds later but, with a huge crowd of 4,000 urging the Big Red on, Cornell rallied.

As SU neglected to play defense, Cornell guards Dave Bliss and Bob Berube began hitting on outside shots. Big Steve Cram chipped in with eight points from in close and the Red moved to within four points, 63-59. Cornell continued to apply the pressure until, with 11:36 left, Cram sank two free throws to push the Ithacans ahead 69-68.

There was no stopping the home side's outside shooting as the Ivy Leaguers moved ahead 75-70, then widened the gap during the final 10 minutes. Cornell's full court press began forcing SU into errors and the Big Red often stole the ball for easy layups.

Syracuse narrowed the gap to 81-78 with 7:16 left and 96-90 with 2:10 to go but Cornell's stiff defense and accurate clutch shooting stopped each Orange rally.

Five of the Ithacans scored in double figures enabling Cornell to break both its Barton Hall scoring record of 97 and the combined total for two teams of 190 points.

'We Need a Leader'

By ART ROSSKY

"This team needs a leader out there on the floor. That is the big difference between this year's club and last year's team."

Hill basketball coach Fred Lewis sadly shook his head as he recalled that his charges had lost many games that should have been won if only a take charge guy were on the scene.

"Last year Dave Bing and Richie Duffy sort of shared this leadership," noted the Hill mentor, "but this year Duffy's play has been a big disappointment, forcing Bing to shoulder the entire burden. It's been too much for him."

Bing's play has suffered as a result of trying to carry the entire team, said the coach. One glaring sore spot for Bing has been his poor defensive play in recent games.

Without leadership the whole team has seemed to lose its aggressiveness, particularly on defense. "Aggressiveness can make up for a lot of mistakes," noted the coach.

The extent of his team's defensive problems was illustrated by Tuesday's losing effort at Cornell. Against Cornell the Orange sank 56 per cent of their field goal tries and 80 per cent at the free throw line, excellent performances in both categories.

"A team that shoots that well and loses has defensive problems," concluded Lewis.

Another result of the lack of aggressiveness is the excessively high amount of times that they have given up the ball on violations and wild passes and fumbles.

On the average the Piety have surrendered the ball 23 times a game on various misplays. "A team hoping to win generally can only give up the ball eight times during a game," added the coach.

"The squad will solve its leadership problems if every player will learn to take his shots when he is in good position, rather than continually passing off to Bing, as they do now.

"Jim Boeheim's play against Cornell was one of the team's bright spots," declared Lewis, "for he took his shots when in good position." Boeheim finished with 19 points for the night.

Reviewing the season, the Piety skipper stated that the play of big Chuck Richards has been very disappointing. The Orange center, a 22-point scorer in 1964, along with grabbing nine rebounds per tilt, is way below last year's performances. In addition Richards has had difficulty holding on to the ball.

Another big man, soph Val Reid, has also been a keen disappointment, according to Lewis. On occasion the Hill mentor has tried alternating Richards and Reid, but the results were unsuccessful.

Defensive ace Sam Penceal, another disappointment, appears headed for a seat on the Syracuse bench. Lewis plans to give juniors Frank Nicoletti and Norm Goldsmith more work.

★ Orange Stumble Through Festival ★

By BOB KRENGEL

All coach Fred Lewis' recruiting and all of his 12 men couldn't put Syracuse's basketball team together again.

That was the awful truth that loomed from the Orange's performance in the ECAC Holiday Festival at Madison Square Garden.

Although the boys five finally snapped a six-game losing streak, by virtue of an 87-61 victory over Manhattan they got fried two drubbings at the hands of Princeton and La Salle.

The Orange opened against Princeton's Pill Bradley and played fine ball during the first half. Princeton only held a slim one-point lead at halftime.

[illegible] Penceal [illegible] good job on [illegible] was kept by his [illegible]

The second stanza was a new basketball adventure into the realm of errant passes and horrible shooting. Although Lewis sighed that the loss was due to "too much Bradley" it was actually too little Syracuse.

The basketballers made 17 out of 23 shots from the foul line compared to Princeton's 29 out of 36.

Bill Bradley, however, was as good as predicted. He clicked for 11 out of 20 shots fro the floor, added to a fantastic 14 out of 15 points from the foul line, for 36 points.

For SU Dave Bing stood out with 28 markers, but failed to work the ball in for the Orange. The hoopsters were as cold as ice in the waning minutes of the game, and rarely even shot the ball.

The results of all the Syracuse mistakes, and all of Bradley's points, was a 79-69 Tiger triumph.

Two days later the hapless Lewis quintet (with starting players shuffled) faced off against Manhattan. This time the Orange started cold and finished hot. Opening with a man to man defense, neither team made a tally for the first four minutes of action.

Center Chuck Richards showed some skillful maneuvering under the boards and chalked up 21 points and eight rebounds. Bing threw the accurate passes that he didn't have against Princeton besides scoring 22 points.

In the final minutes of the first half, the Jaspers cut the SU lead to five points. Steals by Jim Boeheim and tallies by Rick Dean put the Orange out in front again. They stayed there for the rest of the game, scoring their one win in the tourney.

By way of their triumph over Manhattan, Syracuse moved into a playoff for the fifth spot in the tournament. With 18,499 fans looking on, the Orangemen were reunited with sloppy basketball.

Fighting the Explorers from La Salle, Phil Schoff tied the game with four seconds left at 57-57 to move into an overtime period.

That was the first basket that was made by either team in the last four minutes of regular play.

In the overtime, La Salle pulled out to a slim lead and took the contest by a 73-70 tally. Guard Hubie Marhsall excelled with 28 points while Bing and Richards tied for Orange scoring honors with 13 apiece.

The Mutual Trust Today

When we took over the helm of this newspaper last April, our first thought was to formally propose the idea we thought would be most beneficial to student-administration relations on the campus — the theory of the mutual trust.

Briefy stated, the mutual trust assumes of both students and administration the feeling that each is working in good faith for the best interests of Syracuse University, which, in reality, each must be.

Students and administrators reacted favorably to the statement of philosophy. We thought there was really a reason for hope.

But the hope isn't there, for the mutual trust lies dead — very, very dead.

And while nails in its coffin multiplied during the never-to-be-forgotten semester now on the verge of completion, the tomb was sealed with the unbreakable red tape of the administration's double threat — run-around and indignation — that accompanied the vacation issue.

It is now a matter of public record that the students do not have to be told why decisions are made, even when the decisions concern them far more than any other composite group of the university community.

It has been re-emphasized that no one in the administrative hierarchy will take the responsibility for making decisions, and it even takes weeks to find out who makes decisions.

We didn't want to make vacation an athletic issue. But the glaring fact remains that the football team was excused from the three days of classes to practice in the sunny confines of Florida, while the remainder of the students were left to the snows of Syracuse.

No, there's no mutual trust. We wonder if the administration even realizes there is a student body, not to mention the need of that student body to be heard.

We keep hearing, in those overtones which try to dominate our mind, those voices telling us that Syracuse University is "a good university on the verge of greatness."

Greatness? Bah, humbug!

Tiger at the Gates

'Way Down Yonder'

By Dan Ritey

One of the more advanced signs of mental decay and imminent crack-up is the notion that is just might be a jolly good show to pack up and drive 3,200 miles in the dead of winter to see a football game.

Well then, color us green as the moon's cheese or our complexion after a week of oysters, crabs, shrimp and other hazzeri. And watch as the boys with the nets come for us, 'cuz we made exactly that trip and will never regret or forget it as long as we think young (with or without Pepsi).

The fact that Benny's squadron of low-flying troopers was chewed by the Bayou Bengels was strictly anticlimatic. Long, long before then we were so snowed by the charm and beauty of the crescent city on the Mississippi that the fiasco at Tulane stadium could make us feel little pain.

First there was the headquarters of the Piety delegation; a not-so-new, but comfy hotel in the heart of downtown New Orleans with the vastly improbable name of the Jung (let's hear it for the Jung!).

The Jung is now history and we fervently hope that it sufficiently survived the recent collegiate onslaught to be able to still function as a hotel. Certainly the presence of both Piety's and LSU's marching bands with the resulting musical (?) exchanges at three in the morning was enough to make of the Jung (let's hear it again) a madhouse.

The wake of the band (and the rest of us Syracusans who tagged along) did not, however, end at the Jung. A couple of nights prior to New Year's Eve, New Orleans' main street —Canal—witnessed the sight of several dozen not-so-perfectly-sober bandsmen, 'Cusemen (Klansmen, too?) weaving down the avenue belting out SU songs at the top of their raucous voices. Let's hear it for the band and all the laughs they provided.

They say that New Orleans has a French Quarter, but frankly we never did get beyond Bourbon Street. . . . given the condition of many people after spending a while there, it would certainly be judged an unwise move. . . .

Bourbon Street is quite a place. At least it is when we can be sure it IS Bourbon Street. By New Year's every street sign bearing the fabled name had been torn down so that when we showed up with our trusty screwdriver we were out of luck save one last sign which we couldn't handle in our condition.

However, empty-handed we didn't return—a la Sherman after Georgia. The New Orleans Sugar Bowl Committee plastered the city with huge, colorful banners displaying the bowl trophy and team colors.

That was darn good of them (let's hear it for the committee). Coach Lewis should only have some of the jumpers who defied sanity, the cops and injury to secure one of these prizes . . . we were more cautious; low-hanging pennants on hotel facades better suited us.

But New Orleans is more than that. The weather was something else too. Fog, incredible fog, hangs everywhere in the morning and burns off by noon or so to reveal a warm, usually partly cloudy, bright afternoon before the cool night ushered in a new day with more of the ubiquitous fog.

Let's hear it for the fog.

New Orleans is also a continual treat for the eye. Wide streets with treelined boulevards, a spectrum of architecture, real, live palm trees (that's right, Gamal, palm trees) two beautiful university campuses and the aforementioned French Quarter.

During the days enough various things to do; at night there was variety too: which bar on Bourbon Street should we begin with tonight, dear? Let's hear it for the Red Garter, Or the Mustache. Or O'Brien's. Or the Absinthe House. Or The Stork Club.

Or for booze in general. Louisana follows New York's greatness in one major respect: you can legally get potted at 18.

Even the cops showed uncommonly good sense in simply roping off the wild area and letting us blow off steam. And we did; going to sleep before 3 or 4 a.m. was strictly Yankee-like. Going on day after day on little or no sleep was more Creolepolitan.

Even driving back to New York City on 20 hours sleep for a week and making 90 degree turns on roads that turned only 45 degrees or exceeding the speed limit by as much as 50 per cent was 'in' as y'all know. . .

Yeah, it was great. And little doubt of our final mental degeneration remains when it is noted that we left New Orleans and its 75-plus temperatures and drove north —even after picking up a radio broadcast saying it was 28 and snowing in New York City.

We should have stayed through to Mardi Gras. Or even beyond - straight through graduate school.

The only grim reminder of reality in this paradise was the unfortunate presence of neighboring Mississippi. This state is a cancer that could be profitably removed from the nation. Where else could three SU guys (white at that) be denied access to a gas station washroom solely because they drove up in a car with out-of-state plates? Hell, we were looking for white sheets and log booby-traps throughout that dismal state.

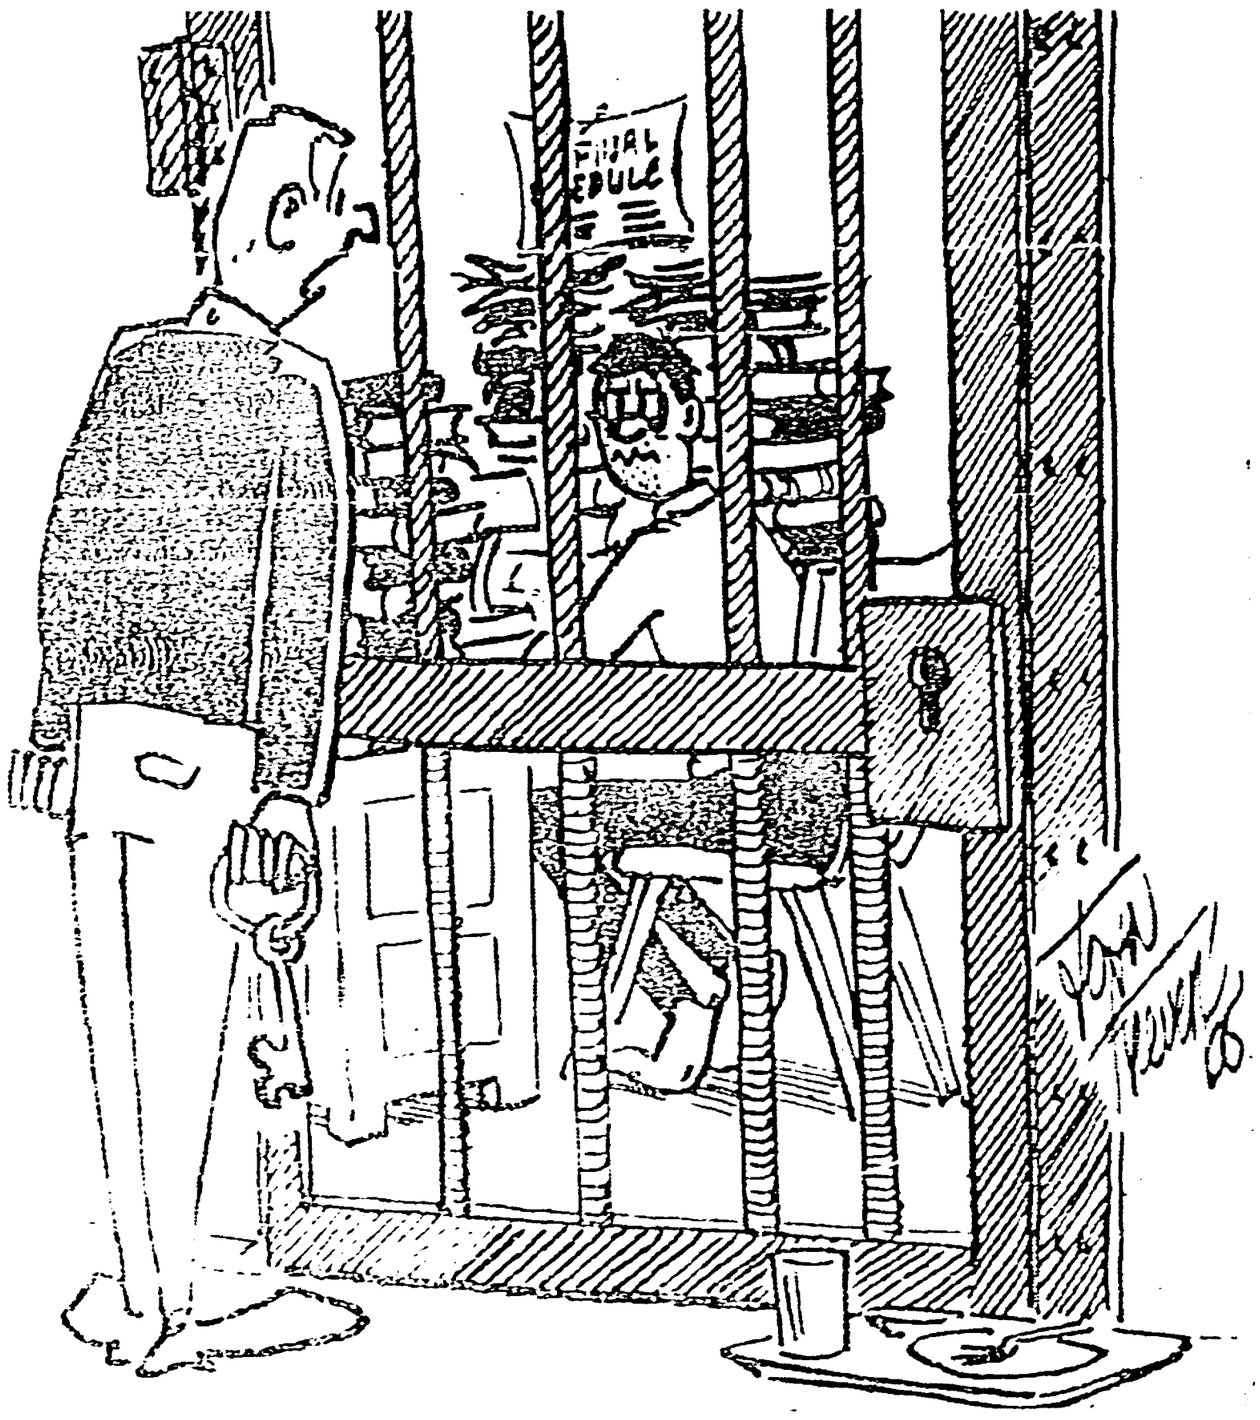
They say all sheets in that area that are in hotesls and motels etc come equipped with two eye slits. . . .

Let's hear it for New Orleans as we ignore Ol' Miss.

And if there is a Santa, make him deliver unto Benny another mid-winter southern sojoarn trip next year.

Maybe the Jung will be back in working order by then. If not, Miami or Dallas beware.

Trever on Campus



"You sure you don't wanna come out for a couple of hours . . .?"

To the Editor:

The music critic of the Daily Orange did an outstanding job of criticizing the performance of the "Messiah" by the University Chorus and Symphony. However, he might find his comments more appropriately suited to the "Sword."

It is amazing to note his authority in criticizing a concert when he was not sitting in the audience, but walking the halls during the performance. It also is strange to see the conflict in his views and those of numerous musicians who commended all involved on a magnificent performance. His statement of "fact" that Handel had used 13 performers was quite wrong—Handel used 26. The fact that WAER has requested the use of tapes and is cutting records, is evidence that our critic stands alone.

The music was taken up to tempo, although our critic, who has undoubtedly studied the score, has disagreed. Both the soloists and orchestra spent hours in preparation. This, to a musician was evident.

If the University Chorus is so disagreeable to him, why then was he a member?

It would benefit the DO if you would replace him with an authentic music critic with some background.

Published Monday through Friday during the academic year by the students of Syracuse University. Offices located at 200 Brooklea Drive Fayetteville, New York. Entered as Second Class matter at U. S. Post Office, Fayetteville, N. Y.

WEEKEND

STUDENT UNION — "Experiment in Terror" (or finals are coming) will be presented at 6:30 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. in Kittredge Auditorium, and at 7:30 p.m. and 10 p.m. in Gifford Auditorium. The movie stars Glenn Ford and Lee Remick.

BOAR'S HEAD THEATER — A special performance of Nickel Theater will be presented at 4 p.m. today. Two satiric comedies, Ionesco's "The Lesson" and Feiffer's "Crawling Arnold" will be given by student directors, Bruce MacCurdy and Stephanie Brill, respectively. The regular Nickel Theater program will be given at 4 p.m. this Monday with Pinter's "The Dumb Waiter" and Carlino's "Epiphany." Doug Homer will direct the Pinter play and John Walker will direct "Epiphany." Admission for both shows will be a nickel, with coffee an additional 5c.

FOLK GALLERY — Singer from SNCC, Bernice Reagon, will be featured in this week's show at the Folk Gallery. Mrs. Reagon was one of the "Freedom Singers," four field secretaries for the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee. Co-star will be Jerome, Prince of Limbo. Shows begin at 8:30 p.m., 10:30 p.m. and midnight.

REGENT — "Un Chien Andalou," directed by Luis Bunuel, will be presented this Sunday at the Regent. The movie is another in the series of retrospective showings of Bunuel's work. This film was made in conjunction with his friend, artist Salvador Dali and contains a series of gags which, very deliberately, cannot be rationally explained. As a forerunner of the present surrealistic movies technique, this 1928 film should be interesting. Information available at the Regent Theater.

PARAMOUNT — And lo and behold, just as final exam time looms near, good movies are pouring into the city by the handful. Chief among these is "Goldfinger." Although the movie isn't particularly faithful to the book, it's still good gilt-edged fun. Master criminal Auric Goldfinger plans a take-over of Fort Knox. Naturally, the only man in the western hemisphere powerful enough to stop him is James Bond. Sean Connery is Bond—cool to the end. For more plot revelations, see review on the right. As a matter of fact, don't go to the movie. Let us spoil it for you.

RKO KEITH'S — "Sex and the Single Girl," H. G. Brown's manual on premarital nuptual bliss has been cinematized with Natalie Wood playing the single girl, while the role of Sex is equally divided between Curtis, Ferrer, and Fonda (pere). To climax the program Errol Flynn's son, Sean, bares his hairy chest to the world, while Jose Ferrer offers his paternal support to "Stop Train 349." But the show starts at 10:30 p.m.

KALLET-GENESEE — Following in the footsteps of "The Victors" "The Americanization of Emily" features James Garner and Julie Andrews in a light-hearted, anti-war spoof. Garner is in the army, but does everything to avoid the fact. Julie Andrews is an English girl. Boy meets girl. Boy gets girl. At 7:05 p.m., and 9:25 p.m.

Fugitive Press To Publish New Magazine

"Noetics," a new magazine inspired "by the profound need of a new human image for our time" will be available to the public next week.

The magazine is being published by the Fugitive Press, whose editor, Robert E. Morrison, is a staff member of the Sociology department at SU.

"Noetics" will sell for 60 cents per issue, with subscription rates at $3 per year. This issues' features will include an article by Paul Meadows, professor at SU, poetry by Chad Walsh, chairman of the English department at Beloit College and an article on the emerging nations in Africa. An article on Africa will be featured in each issue.

LITTLE NAMED BACK-OF-YEAR

Orange halfback Floyd Little has been named as the best back to face the University of Pittsburgh this year and has, of course, won a spot on the Panthers' all-opponent team.

The fleet sophomore rolled up 100 yards in 15 carries in Syracuse's 21-6 victory over the Panthers in Archbold Stadium.

Cakes and Ale

Greenthumb

She looks at him seductively from the bathtub. He looks deep into her eyes and sees. . .but of course, another foreign enemy. A short chop to the body, dump him in the water and add a dash of heating lamp. Several thousand volts through the gut and yet another foe felled. Dissolve to the credits and the platinum blonde platinum broad.

So much for the regular. Goldfinger takes off from there and sets up some respectable white-knuckling for the next hour and a half with some beautifully bizzare bits.

Like the penguin-shaped oriental, Oddjob who skims his metal-brimmed skimmer into statues, pretty girls and ole ' 007 hisself.

Like the silver-gray Aston Martin with wing machine guns, smoke screens and oil slicks and a front-seat.

Like Auric Goldfinger and Pussy Galore, partners in crime who plan a raid on Fort Knox with a LASER ray.

There are some sweet lines in this one. Goldfinger, having failed to convince an out-of-town yegg to help him on The Big One, puts the boy in a shiny Lincoln and has his pants pressed—and the car, and him, etc. etc. in a huge, sheet steel scrap squeezer.

Somebody asks where he is. Replies Goldfinger heavily, "He has a pressing engagement."

And for the Bergman fans, there is even some admirable comentary on the contemporary sexual ethic (symbolicaly presented, naturellement) in the mountain road scene where the sweet young thing in the Mustang passes 007.

The screenplay is almost totally removed from the Flemming thriller - killer - chiller, altough excellentiy done, for whoever planted the seed for the movie version of Goldfinger did it with a highly polished green thumb.

Strokes, or cerebro-vascular accidents to the doctor, are a leading cause of death from 25 on and kill some 200,000 Americans a year, says Reader's Digest, but many can be avoided by heeding warning symptoms and taking proper corrective measures.

Caught in Passing

Loverly

by Jeff Zients

We shall postpone our annual awards for a bit to tell you about a movie. This should not be written but shouted from the proverbial roof tops. I don't care if you have finals, little money, post Christmas let downs or no wheels. Beg, borrow, steal or embezzle the price of a ticket and get thee down to the Eckel. Jack Warner has done the impossible. The motion picture version of "My Fair Lady" is the sweetest thing Zients has ever seen.

It amazes me that Warner, the same guy who fouled up "Gypsy" with Roz Russell could create this dandy cinema experience. Most of the credit must go to sexy Rexy and George Cukor, director. The technical big screen production tops figure out how. If this doesn't sound like a logical well thought out motion picture review that's raptured, I'm still humming and cause it isn't. I'm still enraptured, I'm still humming and still amazed.

Cynics beware Audrey Hepburn "singing" "I could have danced all night" will make you forget all about Julie Andrews. The casting is perfect, Stanley Holloway is back and is as fresh and adorabe as he must have been opening night at the Hellinger.

There's a new Pickering and he is just right but the real meat of the meal is Rex Harrison. His Higgins is impeccable and when he tells Eliza that she is "deliciously low and horribly dirty" you will want to reach out and congragulate him for being the suavist meanie in history.

The story is the same, the music exactly the same, and even though you all know both words and music by memory you will sit for 3½ hours and smile at the giant screen. It is that good and that loverly. I could rave on and on for a few more paragraphs but you are wasting valuable time reading this. Get down to the Eckel now, if its closed wait outside til they open. There shouldn't be any Academy Award show this year, just wrap up all the Oscars and address the package care of Jack Warner and the "My Fair Lady" Company. I dare you not to fall in love with it.

When? Why?

By Jay Litwin

When is it that the joyful exuberance of a child that makes him rise with the birds to explore the fascinating day turns into the utter doldrums of bored adulthood that makes us lie in bed until the last possible moment before we drag our feet into the cold, chilling day?

When is it that we swerve off the road leading to a selfless, helpful type of human life, onto a course where we walk seeking nothing but what can help us alone?

When is it that we lose sight of the more meaningful aspects of our short life on this earth and turn to the quick, the fleeting glimpse of a ghastly pleasure that can not last?

Where is it in our lifetime that we decide that the only way to bury sorrow is to drown it in booze; or ironically, when is it that we decide that the only way to appreciate any pleasure in life is from the depths of a drunken stupor, or even the heights of a giggling highness?

When is it that we think society beckons us to "look out for ourselves?" When is it that we decide to stifle true emotion because it isn't the "cool" thing to do?

When is it that we decide to admire those people who are cold, calculating and monetarily successful, rather than those who are warm, compassionate and emotionally rich?

When is it that we start really believing that "nice guys" finish last in the 20th century? When is it that we decide that "trust" is just another word in Webster's dictionary that has little relevance today, because we decided that all people are out for themselves and every action has an ulterior motive?

When is it that we decide that the 20th century is truly a complicated world and rather than and marvel over it, we sweep it under the rug and ignore it?

When is it that we decide that hard things aren't really worth working for, so we take the easy way out and give up?

When is it that we decide that the easy way out is really the easy way out? And when do two stubborn people buffeted by the winds of sorrow, misery and a lack of the true feeling of love finally fall in love, only to find that they cannot overcome the obstacles placed before them by a society growing less compassionate as each day draws on and by a society that makes sentiment a feeling only for the weak by a society that seeks to unify mankind but is in reality making each man an island unto himself.

When? Better yet—why?

Student Union Plans Four Movie Showings

In cooperation with the Syracuse University visual aids department, the Student Union will experiment in today's movie showings to provide better programming.

Today's movie, "Experiment in Terror," starring Lee Remick and Glenn Ford, will be shown at four different times in two locations.

The movie will be shown at 6:30 and 9 p.m. in Gifford Auditorium, Huntington B. Crouse Hall and at 7:30 and 10 p.m. in Kittredge Auditorium, the union officials said they hope to be able to seat about 300 more students.

J-School Award Honors Founder, M. Lyle Spencer

To commemorate the 30th anniversary of the Syracuse University School of Journalism, a graduate had pledged $1,000 for a scholarship honoring Dr. M. Lyle Spencer, the founder and first dean of the school.

Amnon Barnes who was awarded the masters degree in 1950 and is now chairman of the board of Dorena Enterprises, Inc. in Los Angeles, made the gift.

Dean Spencer, who lives in Belleair, Fla. retired in 1952.

In a letter to Dean Wesley C. Clark, Barness said, "I would like this scholarship to be used to help some bright and deserving foreign students attain an American education. I hope that this pledge will be the beginning of a scholarship fund that will develop and grow over the years and be supported by other grateful students."

In accepting the gift Clark said, "We are all extremely happy that Mr. Barness has seen fit to memorialize the founder of our school with this token of his appreciation. It is especially fitting that this fund be initiated by one of Dean Spencer's students."

Clark pointed out that Barness, a native of Israel, was encouraged to attend Syracuse by Dean Spencer. Barness' father, a distinguished citizen and physician in Jerusalem, met Spencer who was visiting professor in Palestine, in 1946.

"Amnon was a student at American University in Cairo at the time, and, when he finished his degree he came to Syracuse," Clark said.

Barness' masters thesis was entitled, "The Role of the Palestine Hebrew Press in the Founding of the State of Israel."

Spencer received his bachelor's and master's degrees from Kentucky Wesleyan College and his doctorate in philosophy from the University of Chicago.

Spencer became dean of the University of Washington School of Journalism in 1919 after serving as a lieutenant colonel during World War I. In 1926 he was named president of the university.

Following retirement from the presidency in 1934 he accepted responsibility for establishing a School of Journalism at Syracuse.

His best known books are "News Writing" and "Editorial Writing," both of which have been used internationally in journalistic education.

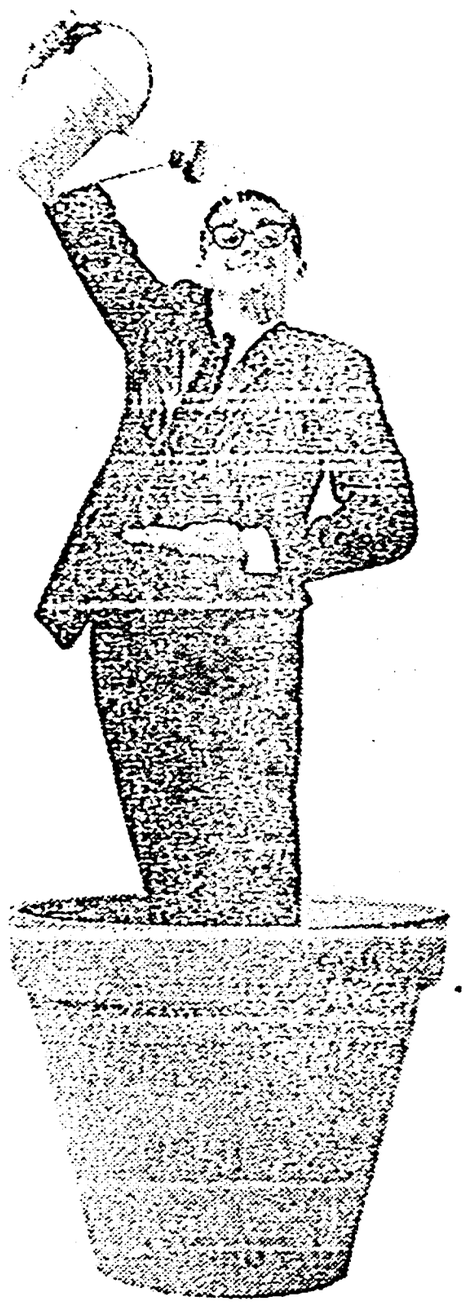
Your life at Du Pont | one of a series for technical men



You never stop growing at Du Pont

Growth is a 160-year habit with us. Take sales. Since 1937 they've increased 750%—to $2.4 billion in 1962.

We spend more than $90 million a year in R&D. In fact, there are at least 200 new products under investigation at this writing and more being developed each day.

What could Du Pont's growth mean to you? Since we always fill important positions from within, it could mean fast advancement, new responsibilities, new horizons—growing financial and creative satisfaction.

It could mean, too, more numerous and more varied opportunities. The new Du Pont engineer is likely to move from his original assignment to one or two others in the course of his first five years. This gives him a chance to "change jobs" right inside Du Pont.

In 1963, more than 700 new B.S. graduates planted their feet at Du Pont. Perhaps you'd like to join us, too. Write today.

Friedman Indicates Caution

that economists must distinguish between the value and the production.

The second general problem in his topic involved the sources of popular economic misconception. He listed four of these sources.

"People believe that what's true for one is true also for the aggregate. It is hard for most to understand that in nearly all cases this is not the case," said Friedman.

The second point was the assumption that there is only one "fixed pie" from which all must share. It is not a valid assumption that "one man's meat is another man's poison," said Friedman. He later gave this as his second basic principle of economics.

"Factions may acquire large profits, but it does not mean that others have to suffer. The total 'pie' is going up."

Friedman's third position was that people tend to look at the "seen" but ignore the "unseen." He said that those who favor the minimum wage don't see that while a small group is gaining by the set fee, many are being unemployed in the meantime.

The fourth misconception lies in the difference between the producer interest and the dispersed consumer interests. Fridman said govrnmnt intervention is usually pro-producer and anti-consumer. Friedman gave his third basic principle of economics succinctly: "It was the part of the iceberg you didn't see that sank the Titanic."

HAPPY FINALS!

Informed sources high in the university hierarchy have leaked word that final exams are but eight days away. Sources high in Daily Orange operation have indicated a definite need of time to prepare for the onslaught of exams (academically, of course).

Therefore, by mutual consent of staff members and administration, as well as the same familiar story of lack of funds to print additional editions, the Daily Orange fades from view today, not to return until Thursday, Feb. 1.

Hendricks Chapel to Hold Winter Conference

"Male and Female: Past, Present and Future" is the theme of this year's mid-winter conference scheduled for Jan. 27-29 at the Lisle Conference grounds.

The roles, relationships and problems of male and female in a changing society will be the major topic under discussion.

Hendricks Chapel sponsors the annual conference in an effort to provide an opportunity for students of different faiths to meet together in an informal atmosphere where subjects of particular interests to students may be discussed, said David Finnigan, conference director.

Dr. Bernice Wright, dean of the College of Home Economics and head of the department of family relations and child development will be guest speaker.

Also scheduled to deliver an address is Dr. James Moore, a member of the department of family relations and child development.

A bus will leave campus at 2 p.m. Wednesday Jan. 27 for Lisle. A $15 registration fee covers all expenses, including transportation, food, lodging and insurance.

Included in the list of events for the conference is a movie, "Devil in the Flesh," a chaplain's panel and informal student meetings.

Students who plan to register should contact Miss Marguerite MacKinnon or Mrs. Carol Bullard, available on the ground level floor of Hendricks Chapel.

New Exam Hours

throughout the exam period, with the exception of Sundays when the library will not open until 2 p.m.

Monitored study halls, sponsored by Student Government and the registrar's office, will open at 7 p.m. Monday. They are rooms 303 and 305-306 in the Women's Building and 302, 303, 313, 317 and 320 in Maxwell Hall.

Monitored by seniors, there will be no food, beverages or smoking allowed.

They will be open until 11 p.m. weekdays and 10 p.m. Saturdays, remaining open until midnight Jan. 18-22 and 25-26. The halls will also be open Sundays from 1:30-10 p.m.

Changes in the examination schedule include moving up the English 1a exam from 3-5 p.m. to noon Saturday, Jan. 16; as well as changing Block 2 rooms from 11-1 p.m. to 3-5 p.m. Jan. 16.

The elimination of 8 a.m. exams came as a result of a request made to Smith by the Liberal Arts Advisory Council in November.

According to Smith, "January is a bad month weatherwise and eight o'clocks put too much pressure on the students."

He said that if the reaction to the rescheduling is favorable, exams in May will continue to start at 9 a.m., noon and 3 p.m.

There will be no service from the circulation and reference desks of the main library after 5 p.m. on Saturdays; after 10 p.m. on Sundays and after 11 p.m. on weekdays.

A White Christmas in Mississippi

By Stephen Fortgang

The following is a first hand experience of the Christmas season in Mississippi. Stephen Fortgang is a graduate student in the Urban Teacher Preparation Program. A graduate of the University of Chicago, he will receive his masters from Syracuse University in August.

Forty-three hours southwest of the Syracuse Greyhound station is a town called Laurel, Miss.

Around midnight on Dec. 23 I left on this run, in order to spend Christmas with the civil rights workers and local people with whom I'd worked last summer.

The project there is one of the many units born as part of the Council on Federated Organization's "Mississippi Summer Project."

I arrived, somewhat greggy, around 6 p.m. on Christmas Eve, and was met by Project Director Gwen Robinson, 20, of Memphis, Tenn. I immediately learned that three of the seven staff members along with 17 Laurelites were in jail for attempting to eat dinner at a Mississippi chain restaurant called The Travel Inn.

Eighteen had been charged with breach of peace, and two with indecent conduct (a white girl had been sitting next to a Negro man).

Gwen was quite worried for the safety of the people, who ranged in age from 13-66, and there was really no time for "Hello, how are you?"

The immediate plan was that eight boys would walk single file in a circle in front of the jail, carrying candles and singing carols. The time selected was 10:30 p.m. that night, an hour we hoped would attract few rednecks (our affectionate term for the local white hoodlums whose activities are manipulated by law enforcement officials).

There were to be five observers, whose role it was to be eyewitness and, if necessary, to take the blows of those being badly beaten.

The observers were to be Gwen, myself, two men from COFO's communications staff who were down from Jackson to cover the jailing, and Lou House, news director of Negro-owned radio station WAAF in Chicago, who was in Mississippi for a week to put together a "special."

The demonstration began on time, but it did not last for long. Immediately the police herded the eight up against the wall. Those in jail then took up the caroling, creating the background feeling for a scene such as I have never before experienced.

We could see the police throw the candles to the ground, and hear those in jail begin a scared but determined "We Shall Overcome."

And then the chief of police arrived in his white 1965 Bonneville and came at the boys at a speed of at least 50 miles per hour, stopping short just at the wall. When the boys had scattered, one was kicked in the hip and one in the stomach.

At this point the police were chasing them to the street behind the jail, while we were being chased by the rednecks as we headed to our cars. There were several deputies waiting there and they signaled the rednecks "off."

One deputy ripped to shreds the reporter's tape recorder, while another told me and Gwen (who was sitting in the car I was driving) to "get your ass out of here or I'll get the Klan on you." We got out.

On Thursday, Dec. 31, staff member John Handy, of Charleston, Miss., any myself found out that on the day before, a body had been found in a ditch beside a road and that the man had been buried by the following morning.

We then spent many hours questioning witnesses, most of whom were afraid to answer our questions. The boys saw bullet holes behind the man's left ear. Others saw the same thing as well as bruises on his face.

But the police say that Luther Shaw, 51, Negro, had drowned in the two inches of water.

Our lawyers feel this is one of the countless cases in which Mississippi Negroes have died or disappeared and in which there is no hope for justice. The FBI said they had no jurisdiction.

Over Christmas I spent a great deal of time at less spectacular but no less exciting work, leading discussions and using some of the teaching skills I'm learning at SU.

I was asked to speak with various groups including our own staff in connection with the nature of the Congressional Challenge and of the democratic process' breakdown in Mississippi, so that this information could be most effectively transmitted to the community.

When people challenge white Mississippi culture, the pressures involved often bog them down in their work. My principal job over the vacation was to try to bring in some outside perspective.

★ Hill Gymnasts Seek Second Win ★

By TOM MULLER

The Syracuse University gymnastics team will be seeking its second win in as many outings when it faces the ever-tough Pittsburgh Panthers in Archbold Gym Saturday at 7:30 p.m.

Fresh from a 68-44 win over Navy, the Orangemen are attempting to regain the Eastern prominence which they held two years ago. Senior captain Sid Oglesby heads a sophomore studded cast which promises to be one of the best teams in SU history.

Oglesby, who placed first in the floor exercise and the long horse vaulting at Navy, is an NCAA All-American and national champion on the long horse. He will also compete on the parallel bars and the side horse.

Heading the list of sophomores is Allan Kevles, who missed the Navy meet because of a back injury. He will compete in all six of the events for Syracuse.

Trampoline, a new event this year, will find sophomore Terry Orlick, first-place finisher against Navy, senior Chan Rudd, and sophomore John Dise going for the Orange. Rudd is also a diver on the SU swimming team.

Jon "Spike" Meary is the out-Orange on the side horse. He appears to be headed for a banner year after an easy victory at Navy.

John Steffney and Dean Bellavia will join Kevles on the horizontal bar against the Panthers, while juniors Jim Barish and Ben Hurd are battling for the final spot on the parallel bars.

The still rings event has two new faces in the line-up for Syracuse. Sohpomores Ted Edwards and Ray Walters took first and second respectively against Navy and both have the potential to make strong bids for the Eastern title in the Spring.

Warren Neiger's Panthers, led by captain Bob Davies, will be out to avenge a close three-point loss to Syracuse at the outset of their season last year.

This year marks a return to the old scoring sysetem with 6, 4, 3, 2, 1 being given to the first five finishers respectively in each event.

In addition to the trampoline there is another new event, the all-around. Each team enters one man who competes in the six Olympic events. The man with the highest point total earns six points for his team, the loser two.

OGLESBY

Coach Paul Romeo is understandably proud of his young but "well-balanced team," which appears to be the dark horse in the East this year.

The team had a "good day" against Navy, even without one of its outstanding performers, and the opposition should find things even rougher now that the team is at full strength.

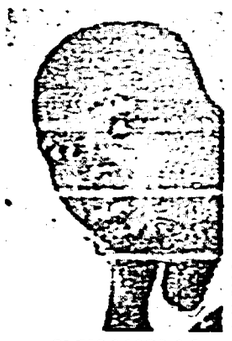
Glancing Back: Penceal vs. Bradley

By HOWIE SCHNEIDER

As we look back on the Holiday Festival, one of the most interesting confrontations in the tournament, and they came few and far between for the Orangemen, was the battle between Sam Penceal and Princeton All - American Bill Bradley.



PENCEAL

Last year in the Hurricane Classic Sam had done a good job of containing Bradley as Syracuse dumped the Tigers. He had his heart set on doing it again.

The way things started it looked like the former Boys High Star might just do it again. The first two passes aimed for Bradley never got there. Sam the shadow was all over the 6-5 forward. He was chattering and ball hawking and it was having its toll.

"I was getting to him," Penceal said. "He was getting frustrated.

"We were kind of mixing it up under there and he shoved me. He shoved me pretty hard. The ref called it and the crowd booed. The next time he just brushed me. I guess the ref just wanted to even it up. He called a foul on me."

Most of the 15,556 had come to see Bill Bradley score. They didn't like this kid Penceal. Thy got on Sam, but he didn't seem to notice.

Penceal's strategy was a simple one, although many members of the New York press thought it was rather unethical.

"I had planned to make the first foul a good one. I was going to make him know I was there. Nothing malicious mind you, just within the rules of the game. But after my first foul I had to watch myself. I couldn't afford another foul.

"It's been known that Bradley doesn't appreciate getting hit. Dave Bing said he played with Bradley in the schoolyard in Washington this summer. They don't care who you are in the park. If you score too many points they try to hurt you. Bing said some of those guys hit Bradley and he stayed away from the basket after that."

But Sam wasn't playing in the schoolyard. In Madison Square Garden they have referees. At 8:30 in the half Sam committed his third personal and amidst jeers by the Bill Bradley fan club, he left the game.

The first part of the battle was over as Frank Nicoletti replaced Penceal.

Sam started again in the second half, but only got about halfway through before he committed his fourth foul and earned another stretch on the bench.

The battle seemed pretty one-sided as the All-American totaled 36 points. But it wasn't.

It would be just as unfair to take anything away from Bradley's outstanding performance as it would be to agree with New York writers who termed Sam's performance as dirty.

Sam played a hard game, but he played it clean. He did a good job of trying to contain Bradley's exceptionally hot hand. He held big Bill scoreless for a stretch of six minutes in the second half.

"I thought I guarded him real well at times," Sam said.

"In the first half I gave him the baseline too many times. I knew I shouldn't but I did. Bradley scored 23 points in the first half.

"I even tried talking to him, trying to needle him. He was asking his teammates if they knew where they should be. Sometimes they'd play on the wrong side of the court. I told him they weren't smart like him. They didn't win any Rhodes scholarships.

"I kept telling him he was tired, the Olympics made him tired. One time he said, 'I am a little tired.' But he didn't say much after that."

In the Princeton locker room after the game Bradley remarked, "I didn't pay too much attention to the man who was guarding me."

For a boy who's going to Oxford next fall, Bill Bradley has an awfully poor memory.

Orange Quintet Entertains Pitt

LOW AND Inside

"The professionals' complete disregard for the welfare of college football is shocking," growled Walter Byers, NCAA executive secretary.

"When pro clubs tamper with our players before all the varsity campaign ends, they destroy the entire intercollegiate football program," lamented Oklahoma coach Gomer Jones.

"This thing is getting way out of hand," added Houston Oiler owner Bud Adams.

And indeed it is. The pros have become so bold in their early signings that colleges have become justifiably upset.

Review these developments:

(1) Four Oklahoma players signed pro contracts prior to their team's Gator Bowl appearance and all four were dropped from the squad.

(2) Georgia Tackle Jim Wilson inked an undated contract with the AFL's Boston Patriots before the season even began. As a result, the university offered to forfeit its seven victories. Then after Georgia's final game, Wilson signed another contract, this time with San Francisco.

(3) Georgia tackle Ray Rissmiller was quoted in an Atlanta newspaper as saying he had been approached by the Buffalo Bills organization previous to the completion of the 1964 season and urged to sign an undated contract for $18,000.

"We don't make a practice of signing players early," stated Adams, "but we have been forced to do it if we are going to sign players in competition with the NFL."

The quickest signing of them all came at the Gator Bowl when four Florida State players inked on-the-spot contracts for a national television audience. Said Delaware coach Dave Nelson of the affair, "It looked like a New Orleans slave market 100 years ago."

But these slaves don't come quite as cheap, as witnessed by the $400,000 pact offered Alabama quarterback Joe Namath. This free-handed spending does nothing but promote discontent among the already established pro players. Commented Cleveland's Frank Ryan, "If Namath is worth $400,000, I'm worth a million." And who can disagree?

A couple of suggestions seem desirable. One calls for a mutual draft to cut down on the foolish spending. The other involves moving the draft back until after Jan. 1 to relieve pressure on the players.

Both will be discussed at the upcoming NCAA convention in Chicago. Both deserve serious consideration.

Syracuse's cagers will be out to kick the losing habit Saturday night when they entertain Pitt at 8:15 in Manley Field House.

The Panthers' visit begins a string of five consecutive home games for Fred Lewis's Orangemen.

And, with nine of its final 13 games scheduled at home, the Piety squad should improve on its dismal 2-8 record.

"We've had problems with our rebounding, shooting, ball handling and defense," said Lewis. "We haven't been able to put all four together this year.

"We've been adequate in one or two areas in every game but never all four at once. Ball handing is the exception. That's been bad every game."

Lewis added that bad passing has been the squad's biggest problem in recent games. "We've turned the ball over an average of 23 times a game on misplays," he said.

Against the Panthers SU will start Dave Bing and Jim Boeheim at guards with Norm Goldsmith and Frank Nicoletti at forwards. Lewis is undecided as to his starting center, but Chuck Richards, Rick Dean and Val Reid will all see action.

After 10 games Bing lead the Orange scorers with 199 points and a 19.9 average. Richards is second with 17.8 per game followed by Boeheim (8.0) and Dean (6.9).

"The kids have been trying hard," emphasized Lewis. "Good student support will really help this team."

In Tuesday night's Cornell game Boeheim was outstanding on offense for SU, scoring mostly on long set shots for a total of 19 points. Nicoletti earned a starting berth by scoring 11 points and excelling on defense.

After seven games, Pitt possesses a 3-4 record. During the Christmas holidays, the Panthers played two games in the Quaker City of Philadelphia, losing to nationally ranked Wichita and Penn.

Two Pitt standouts are 6-6 junior Bob Lovett and a 6-1 guard, Larry Szykowny. Lovett, from York, Pa. leads the team in scoring with a 16.4 average. Szykowny is next with 15.0. Other starters are 6-2 guard Stan Falenski, 6-3 forward Daryle Ruby and 6-6 center James LaValley.

Following the Pitt contest Syracuse will host Colgate Wednesday and meet LaSalle Jan. 16, in a regionally televised contest. Bowling Green visits Manley on Jan. 29 and Niagara comes in Feb. 2.

In the 6:30 p.m. lidlifter, Roy Danforth's freshmen (3-1) will tap off against always-tough Broome Tech. The Tangerines will go with 5-11 Dick Cornwall and 6-0 Chuck Bednark at guards; George Hicker and Steve Ludd, both 6-3, at forwards; and 6-4 Tom Ringleman at center.

Broome Tech, which has lost only two games this season, features top-notch ballplayers in Phil Meagley and Mike Steel. Steel, a guard, is currently leading the team in scoring.

Danforth plans to use a man-to-man defense against Tech. "They interchange their guards and forwards—they've got a lot of movement," said Danforth. "We're small," he added, "so we have to run and hustle off the boards. But we've got tremendous shooters and great teamwork."

★ ★ SU Matmen Challenge Navy ★ ★

TERRY HAISE
. . . wrestling at 130

By KEN RUDNICK

Sugar Bowl performers Jim Nance and Gerry Everling will get an extra week to prepare for their 1964-65 debuts, but the Syracuse wrestling team will meet a powerful Navy squad on schedule at Annapolis, Md., Saturday.

According to SU coach Ed Carlin, the decisions of Nance and Everling were based on their desire for more rest from competition.

Carlin will have to get outstanding performances from his starters if the Orangemen are to present the Midshipmen with a major obstacle.

The Middies are ranked fifth in the nation, one notch below the Lehigh team which routed SU in the opener for the Orange.

One of those upon whom Carlin will depend is heavyweight Joe Radivoy, who will lose his starting spot to Nance when Jim and Everling return Jan. 16 against Pittsburgh.

Radivoy was the hero of Syracuse's 14-11 triumph over Ithaca College. With the team score knotted at 11-all, Radivoy took an 8-7 decision from the Ithacans' Neil Derosa to give the Orange their narrow margin.

SU's lineup will be bolstered by the first appearance this winter of Dave Agone. Agone was shelved for the first two matches with a rib injury, but he'll be wrestling in the 137-pound class tomorrow.

Agone has the unenviable assignment of trying to upset Navy's Wayne Hicks, last year's Eastern Intercollegiate pion at 137.

Other starters for the Orange wil be Lew Manns (123-pound class), Terry Haise (130), Paul Crapsi (147), Kurt Kuppinger (157), Lew Roberts (167), George Rogers (177) and Tom Schlendorf (191).

Kuppinger is the only SU grappler who is undefeated and untied in the first two matches. Roberts, the captain, has been something of a disappointment with only a loss and a tie to show for his efforts.

Rogers will have an uphill battle on his hands against the second of the Middies' Eastern Intercollegiate kingpins, Gene Franzen.
