SUICIDES ANONYMOUS - Need a human to listen? Call GAB-1000 6 p.m. to 6 a.m. Mon-Fri. Confidential.

ANY STUDENT or faculty member wishing to join the Nigeria/Biafra Relief committee should contact Mary Berrigan, membership coordinator, at 492-0993.

SPEECH CONTEST - Applications for the White-Denison contest, being accepted in room 200 HL. All full-time S.U. seniors are eligible. Speech 7-10 minutes in length, optional topic. First prize - $125. Applications due March 14.

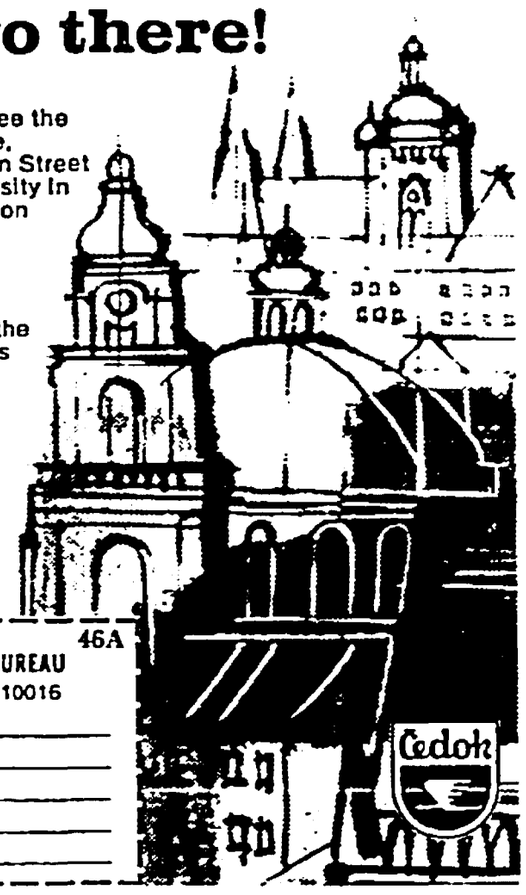
APPLICATIONS for UU Chairman and Vice-Chairman must be given to Mary Franciosi, Haven Hall Main Desk, before 5 p.m. Wednesday. Include name, address, extension, qualifications, and ideas for UU.

URGENT help needed for Newcap's Inner City tutoring program, Wednesday nights. Transportation provided. Please contact Nancy McKee at 474-6934.

ALMOST ORANGE PAGES - those interested can still sign up for an interview by calling Jane Hixon, X3055. Interviews will be this Thur. and Fri.

DRAMA DEPT. - An on campus box office exists! Slocum, downstairs lobby. MWF 10-3, Tues. 9-3, Thurs. - 9-4. Tix for all drama dept. and repertory productions.

BUSINESS MANAGER for Maelstrom needed. All applications should be in to Dean Carleton's Office by Friday. Salary or Commission. Info-Lou Jacobs-X3111, Don Bredes 472-2373.



SALES FORCE for Maelstrom needed for next week. To sell in dining halls at dinner. Call Don Bredes at 472-2373.

DAVE VAN RONK is coming to Syracuse. Only 750 people can see him. Buy your tix early when they go on sale next Monday.

FRESHMEN AND SOPHOMORES - Information and applications for the Liberal Arts-Business Honors Program. See Mrs. Kinney for further information.

Touring Europe in '69?

Remember
CZECHOSLOVAKIA!
It's easy to go there!

Meet the young people of Prague. See the historic landmarks: Hradcany Castle, Wenceslaus Square, the little Golden Street where Kafka lived, the oldest university in Central Europe. And gorge yourself on a feast of all the arts . . . Mediaeval to multi-media, Baroque and Rennaissance, Dvorak and rock, frescoes and films.

Not more than ninety minutes from the farthest point in Europe . .. Prague is one of the most exciting capitals in the world today and Bratislava, the romantic capital of Slovakia on the Danube is just an hour's drive from Vienna.

Group tours from $57 per person for 7 days, all incl.
Visas issued within 48 hours.

Contact your travel agent or write for information:

CEDOK CZECHOSLOVAK TRAVEL BUREAU 46A
10 East 40th Street, New York, N.Y. 10016
Name:_____
Address:_____
City_____
State_____ Zip_____
My travel agent is:_____

The Big "O"

— The fOOd's sO gOOd — Grand Opening Of kitchen at the Big O Restaurant

- Char-Broiled Mammoth Burgers
- Pizza • Great Sandwiches

Attention All Orangemen and wOmen

St. Patrick's Party - mOn., March 17

- Green Beer (On tap)
- Green pOpcOrn • green cOcktails

Fun & Favors

St. Paddy's special cOrn beef, fries, slaw — $1.00

March 14-28 — Open daily 6 p.m. - 1 a.m.
After March 29 - daily luncheon

AIR FORCE SYSTEMS COMMAND

CAMPUS INTERVIEWS

For Civilian Positions with the U.S. Air Force Systems Command

March 21, 1969

The Systems Command utilizes the skills of SCIENTISTS, ENGINEERS, and TECHNICALLY ORIENTED ADMINISTRATORS to meet its mission as the Air Force's single overall manager for the steps involved in the acquisition of aerospace systems. These openings exist throughout the country and offer exceptional first-job involvement in professional work. Most positions are in the Career Civil Service.

Contact your campus Placement Officer to arrange an interview, or write to:

Headquarters Air Force Systems Command (SCPCB-CN)
Andrews Air Force Base
Washington, D.C. 20331

An Equal Opportunity Employer

Opening Tonight.

Take a trip... see

The SCENE

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

ACROSS

1 Whistle down the ___.
5 ___ dividend: 2 words.
10 "___ but known ...": 2 words.
14 Roman road.
15 Menotti hero.
16 Individuals.
17 Rescue.
18 North African city.
19 Congolese river.
20 Immaculate: 4 words.
23 Honey, in pharmacy.
24 ___'majesty.
25 Mountain marmot.
30 High: Lat.
33 Scull.
34 1820 pseudonym.
36 Part of ancient Turkey.
38 Political activity: 2 words.
42 Gorki character.
43 Join.
44 S. A. sorrel.
45 Bushy mass, as of hair.
47 Fee of a kind.
50 Dam.
52 Part of a serai.
53 "Arrangement in Grey and Black No. 1": 2 words.
61 Subject of worship.
62 ___ Loa.
63 Consider.
64 Norwegian name.
65 American philosopher.
66 Byzantine painting.
67 Hebrew letter.
68 Fabrics.
69 French number.

DOWN

1 Wisconsin: Abbr.
2 Italics: Abbr.
3 Relative of a firm.
4 Imagines as possible.
5 Resemblance.
6 "I ___ God made me:" 2 words.
7 Biblical region in Arabia.
8 Garment.
9 One of the Gibsons.
10 Roof.
11 French author.
12 Wooded ravine.
13 Conversational phrase: 2 words.
21 Seine.
22 Long Island resort town.
25 Sensational hits: Slang.
26 Sunken fences.
27 Rose, for example.
28 Elementary: Abbr.
29 Part of a step.
31 Fusion.
32 Subsequently to:
35 To ___ (exactly): 2 words.
37 Ceylon moss.
39 Flaunts: 2 words.
40 Musical direction.
41 Turks or poufs.
46 N. J. poet.
48 Trouble.
49 Of medicine.
51 Author of "Hard Cash."
53 Desist!
54 Dantean setting.
55 Dies ___.
56 Cut of meat.
57 Vigor: Colloq.
58 Food fish.
57 Vigor: Colloq.
58 Food fish.
59 Thames town.
60 Let out.

Gen'l Features Corp. -World Rights Rsvd.

For spring break

Florida no-no's defined

In case you're planning a spring-break trip to Florida this month, the city manager of Fort Lauderdale has some "suggestions and policies" you might study.

In his annual letter to "all students planning to visit Fort Lauderdale, Fla., during the spring holidays," the city manager both welcomes students and warns them of restrictions to assure "a pleasant and memorable experience."

So follow the guidelines and "your vacation will indeed be a pleasant one" (according to the city manager):

Do not come to Fort Lauderdale unless you definitely have a confirmed housing reservation. Policies and ordinances prohibit sleeping in the open.

"Campers and trailers are not permitted to park on the beach. If such a vehicle is to be used for living quarters, it must be parked in a trailer park specifically licensed for that purpose.

"All the laws that govern the conduct of the individual will be enforced. A person must be 21-years-old to purchase or consume alcohol.

"Persons guilty of intoxication, (it should be noted that drinking "in the open" is not permitted), use of narcotics, false identification, creating unnecessary noise, or any other unlawful act, will be arrested and prosecuted. Violations of the traffic code will result in apprehension and prosecution of the offender.

"Parents and school officials of any and all students arrested during this period will be officially notified," the city manager concludes.

Elections set for Hillel jobs

Hillel announces that its annual elections will be held on Tuesday, April 15, at 6:30 p.m. in the Hillel Room of Hendricks Chapel.

The Hillel Executive Council will announce its slate of officers in the next issue of "The Sage." Anyone interested in being included on this slate should contact Arthur Koch at 2753 or leave a message in the Hillel Office, 2904.

Other qualified people who wish to run but who do not wish to be included on the slate must submit a petition to the Hillel Office no later than April 8, containing name, the office, and the signatures of at least ten Hillel members. Copies of the Hillel Constitution stating qualifications for running may be seen in the Hillel Office.

Banjos Honky Tonk.
PEANUTS POPCORN
EXCITING CONTESTS
OLD TIME MOVIES
DRAUGHT BEER
Come for an unforgettable (time of your life) evening on Friday and Saturday nights
FRIDAY NIGHT SPECIAL
Bring this ad and get one Gay 90's Mug or Hat free per couple.
119 W. First St. 437-5652 E. Syracuse

ELIAS' SERVICE CENTER
610 and 700 BURNET AVE.
Get Tuned Up For Spring
Special Rate for University Students with ID Cards

STUDY IN CUERNAVACA
Learn to speak SPANISH
• Intensive courses, with drills, supervised labs, and theory taught by experienced Mexican teachers.
• $135 per month.
Study in the INSTITUTE FOR CONTEMPORARY LATIN AMERICAN STUDIES.
• Examine themes such as "Protest and its Creative Expression in Latin America" and "The Role of Education in Social Change" in 10 to 30 new courses each month.
• Access to excellent library.
• $30 per credit.
Live in CUERNAVACA
• Near Mexico City, at 4,500 feet elevation, with Mexican families or in dorms or bungalows.
• Approx. $80 per month.
Request catalog from Registrar — Cidoc W. Godot, Apdo. 479, Cuernavaca, Mexico

We're in the market for bright young people.
There's never been more action or more opportunity in the stock market than there is today. And at E. F. Hutton this excitement has created important new positions which will have to be filled by important new people.
So, we'd like to talk to graduating seniors about our Operations Management Training Program.
Our Operations Department includes Accounting, Business Administration, Data Processing, Systems. Our training program is designed to help you get established and to excel. We'd like to talk to you about the many opportunities at E. F. Hutton. There'll be a Hutton representative on campus soon. Contact your placement director or keep your eye on the bulletin boards for details.
E.F. Hutton
One Chase Manhattan Plaza
New York, New York 10005

POOR HOUSE
Erie and Walnut
FREE PEANUTS
With Every Pitcher of Beer or 25¢ a Dish
ST. PATRICK'S DAY
It's Party Time Monday
Nite, With Hats, Green
Garters, and Green
Beer by the Pitcher.
POOR HOUSE

Academy Award Winning CAT BALLOU
with
Jane Fonda — Lee Marvin
Saturday March 15
7 p.m. & 9 p.m.
Gifford Auditorium
presented by
Syracuse Film Academy

Father, son service

The Rev. Dr. John H. McCombe, Sr. will be a guest preacher on Sunday at the 11 a.m. service in Syracuse University's Hendricks Chapel. McCombe's son, The Rev. Dr. John H. McCombe, Jr., dean of Hendricks Chapel will serve as liturgist.

The topic for the sermon is "Elijah: A Man for Today."

The senior McCombe, 94 years old, only five years ago gave up his last pastorate. Since then he has been a guest preacher in many pulpits.

He and his wife, a lay preacher, live in Manlius. Before turning to pastoral work 30 years ago, Dr. McCombe toured the country as an evangelist.

Parlez vous 'French II?' language cottage proposed

By DENNIS GBURSKI

Plans for the creation of a French language cottage for girls are now being made by a committee of Inter-Dormitory Council.

Sue Blume, co-chairman of the committee, said that sixteen girls, a French resident adviser, and a faculty member of the French department would live in a cottage to be dubbed "French II."

Pending final approval by the administration and faculty, the committee is considering Smith and Mace cottages and also a wing of Shaw Dorm as possible sites for the project.

Hours for speaking French only and other regulations would be decided by the residents themselves. There would be an effort to include all the girls in as much of the policy-making as possible.

Application for residence is open to any girl with some background in French. Planners hope that future incoming freshman girls will have an opportunity to live in French II by indicating a desire to do so during their admission procedures.

The committee feels that living in French II would be beneficial to any French student and especially beneficial to French students planning on traveling abroad in the summer.

Although similar attempts have previously failed, Miss Blume says there is sufficient interest on campus to try again.

In the past, the main problem has been a reluctance among the girls to leave their old friends and live in a new cottage. This time, less stringent requirements are being made so girls can move in in pairs or even small groups.

The establishment of other language cottages could result if French II proves successful. Similar programs have worked well at other universities.

Get some $$$

The Financial Aid Office has announced the opening of the application period for financial aid for the 1969-70 academic year.

All students desiring financial aid, or renewal of same, for the coming year must file an application by April 15.

Applications are currently available at the Financial Aid Office, 205 University Place. Applications received after April 15 will be termed "late applications" and will be considered on that basis.

Notification of awards will be issued in July.

Photography by
Sarkin Studio
Living Color
Portraits
Bridal Portraits
Candid Weddings
908 Irving Ave.
Near V. A. Hospital
478-1145

COSMO
Pizza Shop
FAST
DELIVERY SERVICE
TO
ALL DORMS
GR 8-9231

ENGINEERS
A representative from the Jervis B. Webb Company will be on Campus —
March 17, 1969
Graduating Students — Opportunities are excellent for those who desire a career in the Material Handling Industry and are interested in diversification of training in all product areas - from designing to wherever your abilities carry you in this exciting industry.
STOP AND TALK WITH HIM
An equal opportunity Employer.

ON CAMPUS
SPONSORED FILM SERVICE
Free Movies!
A new motion picture service, ON CAMPUS FILMS, is now available to all dormitories, fraternities, sororities, clubs and any official university facility.
ASSOCIATION FILMS, INC., a national public relations distributor of informational, educational and entertainment motion pictures, makes this absolutely FREE service available simply because their clients, major airline and travel-oriented agencies along with governments of 97 nations, wish to reach the college crowd.
Programs currently available include: Football, Auto Racing, Yachting, Skiing, Travel, Golf, Tennis, Lacrosse, Baseball, Crew, Diving, Mountain Climbing and many others.
ALL INTERESTED GROUP SOCIAL CHAIRMAN SHOULD CONTACT ME AT LEAST TWO weeks prior to the date that they desire to screen a movie.
CAMPUS REPRESENTATIVE:
BOB AISS, Dell Plain Hall — Room 217
Phone: EXTENSIONS 2020, 2014, 2013.

SYRACUSE REPERTORY THEATRE
season
SIL 3
OPENS MARCH 13
Mar 13-16: 20-23
Thur. & Fri. at 8 pm
Sat. at 2:30 and 8 pm
Sun. at 7:30 pm

SIX CHARACTERS IN SEARCH OF AN AUTHOR
by Luigi Pirandello, directed by Rex Henriot
UNIVERSITY REGENT THEATRE 820 EAST GENESEE ST. SYRACUSE, N. Y. 13210
PHONE BOX OFFICE: 476-4536

SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY
DRAMA DEPARTMENT
Studio Production of a Hatful of Rain
by Michael Gazzo directed by Serhij Bohdan
March 13, 14, 15 at 8 pm
Experimental Theatre of...
UNIVERSITY REGENT THEATRE
820 EAST GENESEE ST.
$2.50 students $1.50

Foreign Study Programs of Syracuse University

SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY offers the undergraduate student an opportunity to spend one semester, preferably during the junior year, living and studying in a foreign country. A student thus may enrich his education with a foreign experience in depth, yet complete his undergraduate program within the normal four-year p[illegible]d.

[illegible]nts from all accredited colleges and universities are eligible for the pro[illegible]ams. Those accepted undertake a full semester of work during their stay abroad. In order to insure opportunity for full participation in the life and culture of the host country, each student will live in a private home for part or all of the semester.

SEMESTER IN ITALY

The Semester in Italy was inaugurated in the fall of 1959. It is unique in that it enables the American undergraduate who has had no previous study of the Italian language to engage in a full semester of liberal arts work within the life and culture of that country.

Courses, except those in Italian language and literature, are taught in English. The faculty is composed of personnel from Syracuse University and Italians appointed as visiting professors or conversation teachers. All students are required to enroll for fifteen hours of work, including six hours of Italian.

SEMESTER IN FRANCE

The Semester in France is offered in cooperation with the University of Poitiers in Poitiers, France. The student may spend either a fall or a spring semester in Poitiers pursuing liberal arts studies while developing a high level of language competence. The language of instruction is French. Six semester credits earned in the University of Poitiers and nine in regular Syracuse courses taught either by a Syracuse Faculty member or visiting French professors.

SEMESTER IN COLOMBIA

The Semester in Colombia is offered in cooperation with the University of the Andes in Bogota. The student may spend one semester, approximately August 15 to December 10, studying in Bogota. Students take one Syracuse University course, one special course offered by the University of the Andes for Syracuse and three regular courses offered by the University of the Andes. The language of instruction is Spanish.

SEMESTER IN THE NETHERLANDS

The Semester in The Netherlands was inaugurated in September of 1967 by the College of Home Economics. The program offers courses in home economics, art history, history and sociology. The language of instruction is English. The program is offered with the cooperation of The Netherlands — America Institute.

ADMISSION TO THE PROGRAM

The curriculum is designed primarily to fit the needs of college juniors. Applicants who would be in their senior year will be considered if they have the support of their home college. (Students are normally expected to take the last thirty hours of work on the home campus.) Applicants who would be in the second semester of the sophomore year may be considered. Ordinarily such applicants are expected to demonstrate that participation during the junior year would not be possible.

The program is open to students from all accredited colleges and universities. An applicant from an institution other than Syracuse must have the support of his home college and must be elegible to take a full program of course work for full credit at his home school.

To be accepted, the student must establish that he has the necessary academic ability and emotional maturity to succeed in the program for which he applies.

Students are advised to begin thinking about a possible semester abroad early in their college career. In many instances, careful planning of the student's total academic program will be necessary. The applicant considering study abroad is urged to discuss the matter with his academic adviser. The student may also obtain advice and assistance by contacting the Foreign Study Programs office at Syracuse University.

It is not necessary to be a major in any particular field or fields of study to be eligible to participate in a foreign study program; past participants have come from all of the undergraduate divisions of the University. However, the applicant whose major field of study is one not included in the curriculum of the program offered abroad must be especially careful in planning well in advance.

FINANCIAL ARRANGEMENTS

The cost of a foreign study program is moderately higher ($300 - $400) than the cost of a semester on the Syracuse campus. The student pays $1,840 for tuition, fees, insurance, orientation, outbound transportation, board and lodging for the semester. All scholarships valid for use at Syracuse University can be applied to the program. There are a limited number of grants-in-aid for a semester abroad.

APPLICATION

Applications must be submitted on forms obtained from the Foreign Study Programs office, 335 Comstock Avenue in Syracuse (13210). APPLICATIONS FOR A FALL TERM ARE DUE BY APRIL 15 AND BY OCTOBER 15 FOR THE SPRING. It is advisable to submit an application early in order to allow for adequate advance planning.

TO: Foreign Study Program of Syracuse University
335 Comstock Avenue, Syracuse, N. Y. 13210
Telephone (315) 476-5541 ext. 3471

Please send me application/information for study semester in . . . ☐ Italy, ☐ France, ☐ Colombia, ☐ Amsterdam.

Name _____

Address _____

City _____ State _____

Zip Code _____

College Now Attending _____

Rust top pick

Matmen try for Eastern crowns

By ADAM DAWSON

Ten members of the SU varsity wrestling team left yesterday morning for Princeton, New Jersey, where they will participate in the Eastern Intercollegiate Wrestling Association tournament today and Saturday. By the admission of coach Ed Carlin, "the team's chances are very small for a title, but a few individuals have a really good shot."

These individuals include 145 pounder Eric Greenberg, 177 pounder Bob Rust and 191 pounder Vince Paolano.

Until last week, it had been assumed that Rust would wrestle in his normal 191 pound class with Paolano manning the 177 pound position. However, Rust felt that he would have a much better chance in the national tournament at 177 and so asked for an elimination bout with Paolano.

Rust was victorious and so the switch in weight classes took place.

Carlin feels that "Rust has the best chance of any of our boys for a crown, especially at the lower weight." The competition at 177 which Rust will face includes tough Bob Funk of Penn State, West Point's Joe Ferraro and Navy's Bob Ahern. Rust's 8-1 slate at 191 will make him the favorite here.

The weight class switch will not be so kind to Paolano. Although unbeaten (5-0), the calibre of wrestlers is much higher at 191. Paolano's chief opposition will come from Colgate's Gene Detwiler, who beat Rust, 4-3, and Lehigh's Frank Paquin, who finished fourth in last year's EIWA as a heavyweight.

Greenberg's 12-2-2 season record ranks him as one of the favorites at 145. However, he'll have to overcome his chief obstacle in Penn State's Clyde Frantz. Frantz humiliated Greenberg, 12-2, in their dual meet encounter. Carlin feels that the revenge factor could make the Greenberg-Frantz meeting interesting.

Co-captain and 123 pounder Joe Palmieri will try to make up for an otherwise disappointing season. However, the competition will be heavy from Lehigh's Dick Meyer and Wayne Boyd of Temple.

130-pounder John Williams will find it even tougher in his bid for a crown. The spunky newcomer has been with the team only one week and will have to face the likes of Army's unbeaten, Dale Stahl.

Keith Clark (137), will be seeking victory number one when he takes the mats today.

Tom Muir of Lehigh and Army's Mark Hoffman stand as the favorites at 152, where Syracuse will be represented by Ray Boland. Boland compiled a 3-4 record on the year.

In perhaps the weakest weight class in the tournament, the Orangemen's Len Zigment will go at 160. Mike Nardotti, Army's representative, seems to be the runaway favorite.

Glen Bateman (167) will have a chance in the easterns to avenge an early season loss to Lehigh's Jack Bentz. Bentz is the defending champ at the weight and will be very hard to dethrone.

Bill Orange will send 170 pounder Joel Tozer to the EIWA tourney as a heavyweight. Regular "big-boy" John Cherundolo, has decided to hang up the knee pads for this season. Tozer, although perhaps the most spirited member of the team, will be totally outclassed by defending champ, Mark Kane of Navy and Pitt's Ralph Cindrich.

BOB RUST RIDES VINNIE PAOLANO in recent wrestling practice. Both grapplers will have good chances of capturing titles in the EIWA tournament which will be held today and tomorrow in Princeton, New Jersey. (Photo by Clemens)

A MEETING OF THE MINDS takes place between swimming coach, Jon Buzzard (center) and an assistant. Buzzard, who is perhaps the most content of the SU minor sport mentors, leads his charges in quest of the Eastern title this weekend. (Photo by Forgham)

SU swim scene o.k. to successful Jon Buzzard

By LARRY CENTER

There may be some discontent on the part of minor sports coaches at Syracuse, but swimming coach Jon Buzzard, coming off a successful season, has few complaints about the SU swimming program.

Buzzard knows that he is in a different position than other coaches on the Hill. "Teams we play against aren't major teams in the East," he said. "The gymnastics and wrestling teams go up against some of the best teams in the country. If we swam against teams of the caliber they face, we'd improve, but we wouldn't win too many meets."

Thus recognizing the possible problems other coaches might face, but that he doesn't have, the coach said he was very happy with the Syracuse Athletic Department's view towards swimming. "We travel, eat and have equipment as good as any team we compete against. We have one of the greatest swimming facilities in the country here," Buzzard said.

"We're taking 16 to the Easterns this week, and the Athletic Governing Board has said that anyone who qualifies for the nationals will go. The only other thing we could ask for are Olympic swimmers," he continued.

Buzzard commented on one of the jobs of a swimming coach that he doesn't really care for. "I hate recruiting, and no coach really likes it. Coaches have told me that they had ninth graders receiving recruiting letters."

He hopes swimming can move away from this trend, although he realizes it is essential for sports like football and basketball, where "if you're going to compete, you have to go out and hustle all over the place."

Advocating a policy he knows would be financially difficult, if not impossible, Buzzard said, "good reputations draw good people and they in turn seek out the good schools. Any student who's accepted should be eligible for aid, regardless of academic or athletic standing. If they want good athletes, they'll have to make it financially possible for students to develop athletically at Syracuse."

The former SU swimmer is happy with the reputation swimming is gaining at SU. For the last few years, the New York State Swimming Association lost money on their upstate championships, but last Friday and Saturday there was a big turnout for this meet at Archbold Pool, and the association made a profit.

Buzzard is realistic about the place swimming holds for the average student. "I can't see us having a general appeal for the student body," he admitted. "The Cornell meet was great, with the stands packed and fans cheering, but most of our meets this year were not good meets."

The coach, facing the Easterns this weekend, expounded on his coaching philosophy that has pulled up the SU swimming program in the last four years. "If kids develop and grow, that's all anybody can expect. You do the best you can with the kids that you have, and I think we're doing that here, academically and athletically."

Buzzard, of course, wants to win every meet, but his two goals go hand in hand. "If my swimmers move towards their potential, we'll beat a lot of teams," he said. "Swimming is a lot mental. You accomplish what you think you're going to accomplish, so you should set your goals high."

Buzzard summarized his ideas on coaching; "Before the Bucknell meet nobody improved. Then we beat Cornell and had good times and we lost to Colgate, but had good times. I'd prefer to lose and have my kids do their best times, than to win and not improve. As a coach, you set a personal goal for a boy, and if he reaches that, there's not much more you can ask."

Hockey club in playoffs

The SU hockey club, after ending regular season action with a come from behind 4-1 victory over Tracy Construction, starts playoff action Monday night, at the state fairgrounds.

The skaters' victory Wednesday night, gives the sextet a final regular season record of 10-2, and temporary possession of first place in the Syracuse Industrial Hockey League. SU leads the second place club, Plante's Restaurant, by one point, but, Plante's has one more game remaining.

Trailing 1-0 entering the third period, the inspired Orange outskated their rivals by ramming home four goals. Jim Reidl and Fred Green got the first two tallies to give SU a lead it never relinquished. Goals by Jeff Davis and Ken Diamond iced the sextet's eighth win in a row.

Leading the Orange scoring this year is George Mechem. The senior has amassed 38 points on 14 goals and 24 assists. Following him is freshman Daren Miller, who has beaten opposing goalies 16 times, and has handed out 12 assists.

SU goalie Vic Wehnau has an impressive goals-per-game average. He has allowed only three goals a game to opponents.

Monday night Wehnau and his mates will face G.E. in the first game of a best-of-three semi-final contests.

Game time at the state fairgrounds is 10:30. Admission is free.

Sports shorts . . .

The SU Lacrosse team, ranked 10th in the nation last year, will play an exhibition game tomorrow afternoon at two o'clock in Manley Field House. The opposition will be provided by the Syracuse Lacrosse Club, a team which boasts last season's All- American goalie, Butch Hilliard.

• •

Radio station WAER-FM will present a special program on the Syracuse Blazers Hockey Team today at 5:00 p.m. Sports staff members, Dan Shein and Howard Corday, who were regular broadcasters of the Blazers' home games, will conduct interviews with player-coach Ray Crew and captain, Ed Skyhar. In addition, Clinton Comet star, Pat Kelley will participate.

Campus conventions' coverage

See page 3

DAILY ORANGE

Syracuse University's Daily Newspaper Since 1903

Vol. 67, No. 81 Syracuse, New York, Tuesday, March 18, 1969 10 Cents

Silence is broken, grievances voiced by black students

". . . But notice, they're still working within the institution. They're not saying simply 'We want to throw over the university.' They're saying simply 'We want to make it over.' The demands made by white radical groups like SDS are generally vague and broad-working against the system-while the black students are still working within the system. They're still very system- oriented, except they've got in mind a revised, restructured, reoriented system."

--Pro. Charles V. Hamilton co-author (with Stokely Carmichael) of "Black Power."

News Analysis by FRED TUCCILLO
News Editor

For years they chafed under a system of higher education they felt was inadequate to their needs and irrelevent to the lives they sought to lead. For years, through various groups, they quietly sought redress from an administration which seemed unwilling to break its silence on the full range of their problems.

Friday the black students of Syracuse University broke the silence themselves.

They marched to the front steps of the Administration Building at 2:30 p.m. carrying a banner that read, "We've got to make it, baby.", and reciting a series of chants that expressed the purpose of the demonstration, called to let the university community know that the members of six black student groups had come together to confront the administration and seek a meaningful response.

BLACK STUDENTS hoisted this banner at Friday afternoon's Administration Building demonstration. (Photo by Jemmott)

While some 100 black students peacefully demonstrated outside the building, six spokesmen, each representing a different group, met inside with Vice Chancellor and Provost Frank P. Piskor.

The six spokesman represented:

- Freshman Action Committee - a group of black freshmen involved in bringing more black students to SU and informing them about the lives of black students on campus.
- Omega Psi Phi - a black fraternity, the second largest fraternity in the United States.
- House of Lords - an off-campus social organization for black students.
- Student Afro-American Society - a group which seeks to promote the social and cultural enrichment of the black community of Syracuse.
- United Society - a group involved in improving the black cultural environment of Syracuse.
- A group of independent black students were represented by the sixth spokesman.

The spokesman informed Dr. Piskor that they wanted a meeting with him and Chancellor William P. Tolley to discuss their problems. They expressed their demand in a press release:

"The gross inadequacies of Syracuse University to the needs of its diverse Black student body can no longer be tolerated by said students on this campus. Throughout the history of Syracuse University the concerns of Black students have been ignored. . .

". . .The time has come for Syracuse University to act in a meaningful and responsible manner. There are a number of concerns about which dialogue with the Chancellor is urgently needed.

"We have therefore gathered here to request again the meeting with Chancellor Tolley and Vice Chancellor Piskor. . ."

After a brief meeting in Dr. Piskor's office, the Vice

(Continued on Page 12)

FRANK P. PISKOR, vice chancellor and provost, was escorted to the Administration Building's front steps by protestors on Friday. (Photo by Jemmott)

CSL may invoke threat of boycott

The student members of the Council on Student Life met for two hours Monday night and decided to raise several specific issues at Friday's CSL meeting. They generally agreed that if satisfactory action was not taken, they will begin to plan for a university-wide student boycott.

"The consensus was that this is what we should do," said Student Government President Chuck Hicks. "We want to get some committment on these things."

The issues to be raised include:

- Dorm Autonomy - the student CSL members want to define the concept and get some committment on implimenting it.
- Student Fee - the students will demand that part of it go directly to fund student organizations.
- Selection of Chancellor - the students want the chairman of the joint selection committees to clarify the selection process.
- Tuition Hike - the students will demand that the rise in tuition be matched by "an improvement in the quality of education," specifically, such things as more professors in the classrooms teaching smaller classes.
- Library Hours - the students want some definite committment on extending the hours.
- UU Building - the students want a definite committment on a date to begin construction of a University Union Building.
- Vice-President for Public Affairs Kenneth G. Bartlett, a New York State Assemblyman, will be asked to clarify his part in and position on a private "eminent domain" bill which would result in the University taking over underprivileged areas surrounding the campus for further expansion and any bill that would cancel state aid to student demonstrators.

Hicks also cited more student-run courses, more opportunity for independent study and more direct contact between students and the heads of various university departments as issues for discussion.

DAILY ORANGE
Syracuse University's Daily Newspaper Since 1903

Editor-in-Chief ..... Angus H. Twombly
Business Manager ..... Steven P. Strobridge

SENIOR EDITORS

Managing Editor ..... Alan Stamm
Editorial Director ..... Karen Wiediger
News Editor ..... Fred Tuccillo
Copy Editor ..... Jean Havens
Feature Editor ..... Roz Mazer
Sports Editor ..... Mike Weber
Campus Affairs Editor ..... Larry Kramer
Photography Editor ..... Clint Clemens

ASSOCIATE EDITORS

Andrij Bilyk, Kay Christensen, Beth Hillson, Rona Kavee, Helene Macdonald, Charles Shapiro, Patti Williams, Roni Ziolower, Bob Zaer, Dan Schloesberg.

BUSINESS STAFF

Assistant Business Manager ..... Art Desmond
National Advertising Manager ..... Janet Meyer
Account Executives ..... Roger Black, Jim Maney, Mike Greenstein

Published Tuesday through Friday during the academic year by students of Syracuse University. Offices located at 200 Brooklea Drive, Fayetteville, N. Y., and 1101 East Adams St., Syracuse, New York. Entered as Second Class matter at the U. S. Post Office, Fayetteville, N. Y. 13066.

Where's Tolley?

The appearance of an organized black student pressure group at SU follows a pattern established on campuses across the nation. At SU, this group stems from a growing black population and at least partially from ignorance on the part of the university community into which they enter.

It is quite improbable that most of the grievances of SU blacks, for example those put forth to the representatives of CSL, are cases of conscious and deliberate discrimination, but it is hard to deny that the discrimination exists. The ID checks in the gym and dining halls are one form it takes. While these checks presumably are meant to stop non-university personnel from using the facilities, tact and basic human respect were the missing ingredients in the crude, half-hearted attempt to do so. There are other objections, perhaps even many of which the DO is not aware. To list them however, is not our intention.

Where the real mistake of the university has come is in its approach to the black students. They do not, as Chancellor Tolley indicated in his now famous Onondaga County Bar Association speech, need "tender loving care." They need progressive, and enlightened programs and a top berth on the administration's list of priorities.

We have several indications that they have neither. There were several attempts made by the blacks to meet with Chancellor Tolley and Vice chancellor Piskor last week before the Piskor meeting on Saturday. Dr. Piskor handled them graciously and expediently. While, of course it is understandable that he is a busy man, especially in the frequent absence of the Chancellor, it is questionable that any meeting for fund raising, or hiring for any other purpose could be more important than the stability of the black student population at one's own university.

The black students have not made outrageous demands. They are an intelligent, well-organized and rational voice with enormous potential. They aren't going to turn white, no matter how long they're here or how hard anyone tries to make them. They're black and they're proud. They are not asking for simple concessions. They ask and deserve a change of attitude--a more informed approach.

The blacks will meet again today with Dr. Piskor. Their meeting was amiable on Saturday, and we expect it will be again. But what more fitting tribute to the future of SU and its centennial goal--"The University and the Needs of Man"--could there be than a display of concern and interest by the Chancellor himself. Similar situations have exploded on other campuses, and it is presumptuous of the Chancellor to think it couldn't happen here. Chancellor Tolley, please come home!

Editorial Policy

Columns appearing on this page are the opinions of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Daily Orange staff. The paper welcomes diverse opinions and will consider all materials submitted for publication on this page

Letters to the editor should be type written, signed and limited to 250 words in length. The Daily Orange reserves the right to correct the letters and articles for grammar and incorrect factual information.

All material submitted to the Daily Orange becomes the property of the paper to print at its discretion. No unsigned materials will be printed but names will be withheld upon request.

Students have a say

Politics is a game

By Karen Wiediger

The game of politics for student government posts at Syracuse University went into full speed over the weekend, showing in one case a well-oiled, active machine and in another a type of mass confusion.

The Campus Alliance Party (CAP) ran an extremely smooth, "open" convention, following parliamentary procedure to the utmost and making sure each candidate was nominated properly. This was done even though it was common knowledge who was trying for positions.

The Greek Independent Alliance (GIA) appeared to be chaotic in comparison. Those who were known to be running were not nominated but their names were read by the president of the party. Only spur of the moment nominations were heard from the floor.

This is not saying one party is better than the other. It is only pointing out differences in the way campus politics are run. If the faults of candidates are overlooked it will be because of the way campaigns are handled and if the conventions are representative of the parties, CAP should have no problems as long as it keeps the "family" united.

And, if GIA is an organization like the CAP family, there appears to be no chance for an independent student to conduct a campaign on this campus and be successful. Both parties are ready for action and have their troubleshooters preparing for April 13, the day active campaigning begins.

Who are the troubleshooters? One could be your roommate, or your best friend on the floor; it could be the girl sitting next to you in class. These people are working for the parties and for individual candidates, attempting to find out how students feel about individuals and how they plan to vote. The troubleshooters are supposed to tell candidates what to stress in what dormitories and the types of audiences to expect.

Some of the troubleshooters may ask their friends what issues are really important, but not enough. And here is where the major problem lies. A student running independently or without the backing of a large number of people will not get the viewpoints he should about the issues with which students are really concerned.

How representative of the campus at large are the candidates in this election? Will they be able to communicate with students from every group on campus--and those who don't belong to groups but who are still members of the SU community?

The last question should be the deciding factor in the campaigns and the elections. It shouldn't be who can print up the most attractive posters (or who can rip down the most so that no one will see the opposing side) or who can wear the most expensive suits. Students should look beyond the superficialty of the campaigns and begin to look at the person behind the words--the way he thinks and the way he listens to students and the questions they are asking him.

The student government president must know what students are thinking and this can best be done by retaining the troubleshooters as liasons between the students and the leaders. The officers must be able to understand how the people who voted for them feel.

That is the crux of the problem The candidates have been chosen. What remains is for the students, who up to this point have had no real say, to choose those with whom they can communicate. And each student will know who listens and who will act by talking with the candidates and looking at their platforms and finding out what each individual has already done on this campus.

And when the votes have been cast it is up to the students to make their points known to the leaders because only if they know, can they lead.

Letters to the editor

Book writing

To the Editor:

James Williams' letter to you last week protests the stress on "writing a book" as a qualification for membership on the faculty. Of course, mere publication, regardless of intellectual quality, is not important; and of course teaching and participation in University affairs are indispensable in the successful member of the faculty.

But these are not normally separable from the kind of focussed and sustained intellectual activity which—not necessarily with great frequency—issues in publications which bring the writer, and so the University, into association with the wider intellectual community. Conceivably that activity and that association may be maintained in ways other than writing, but it is hard to see how some form of permanently recording systematic thought can be dispensed with.

Though I am not very certain what Mr. Williams means by saying that "Our business is to maximize an ecstacy of human awareness," I venture to suggest that genuinely exciting teaching must reflect a continuing contact with intellectual structures of sufficient depth and complexity that they deserve to be recorded.

Donald Meiklejohn

Evaluation

To the Editor:

The undersigned students would like to make it known that we consider the editorial decision of the Daily Orange to bring a portion of a course evaluation grossly unfair, ethically unjustifiable and an example of poor journalistic taste. The evaluation itself, in the case of Professor Bartels, was based on only one month spent in the course. To ask students to evaluate a course before they have completed it, let alone before mid-term, is poor policy. To then publish the results is sheer ignorance.

Professor Bartels is a member of the School of Architecture, but is director of the Urban Planning Program and has been rated considerably higher by planning students in their own course critique. No mention was made of the fact that Professor Bartels' 3.2 rating in "knowledge of subject" was one of the highest given by the architects. No attempt was made, moreover, to explain the pertinence of "creativeness" to their grievances.

The architecture students are supposedly concerned that certain of their courses are not relevant. From the material published in the Daily Orange, all one can deduce is that the Architecture students feel that some professors do not excite them (which may or may not always be the fault of the professor). If, indeed, the fault is with the relevance of the subject matter, as the article implied, then the course content should be criticized, not the professor.

Ralph Catalano
John Patane
Carl T. Steph
Rick Shnitzler
Peter J. White
Kathleen Fredrickson
Ralph Catalano
John Patane
Carl Stoph

Impressions

To the Editor:

Having been accused by Augustus Pallotta (DO, "Letters to the Editor," March 14) of expressing "one of the more disturbing inaccuracies" of the March 7 DO article "Impressions of Italy Semester," I would like to make a few comments in my defense.

Sarah Bookbinder, Norma Bishop and I were grossly misquoted in the entire article. For example, when being interviewed, I specifically avoided generalizations. I was subsequently quoted as having said that "Romans are very nice and cordial to Americans but Florence had a much warmer atmosphere," and "Only the upper class people get to go to college." I did not make either statement.

Anyone who has been to Italy would know that there are slightly more than "five" foreign studies programs in Italy, that the people in Venice do not "dress very strangely in an old-fashioned atmosphere," and that the number of Negroes in Europe is not so small that a person staying there for four months would only see one. Comments of this nature should have been held suspect in the first place.

I realize these are trivial corrections. However, I feel they are necessary since my alleged comment was challenged and since so many of my fellow members of the program were dissatisfied with the superficiality of this "Perspective" view.

Susan C. Voelker

Political parties nominate candidates

Jacobs receives CAP support

By VIC LIVINGSTON

The Campus Alliance Party (CAP) convened Sunday at the Drumlins Country Club, approximately two miles from the main campus, and nominated Louis Jacobs as its candidate for Student Government President.

Jacobs, unopposed, was nominated on a white ballot as were Bob Conner, nominee for SG treasurer and Mary Daley, nominee for SG secretary.

Only the nomination for SG vice-president was contested and Joe Treple, a former president of the Greek Independent Alliance (GIA) outpolled Hank Fishkind, current sophomore class treasurer, to get the nod.

Approximately 140 CAP delegates cast votes for 1,210 rank and file party members. Virtually all districts utilized the proxy vote, one delegate casting a block of votes from a "district." 606 votes were needed to nominate.

In his acceptance speech, presidential candidate Jacobs called for greater student participation in campus affairs and unity within CAP. He said the campus must not be allowed to "pass over" CAP, and that the party should exercise "introspection" in its internal affairs.

"The BMOC is now an activist, but leadership is lacking and the campus apathetic. CAP can't allow the campus to pass us by–our task must be leading students to a better university," Jacobs said.

Treple, CAP's vice-presidential nominee received 727 votes to Fishkind's 483. Treple called for government to be the primary function, not politics. He also called for party unity and leadership in campus government.

In what was one of the more outspoken pro nominations speeches, Robin Erickson, vice-president of the Senior class, speaking for defeated SG Vice-Presidential hopeful Fishkind, urged the convention to "forget about deals and start thinking about the candidates." However, the CAP nominations came as no surprise to delegates most of whose votes were committed in pre-convention caucuses. Most districts, notably the Greek houses, voted by proxy in blocks.

Joe Nicoletti, last year's defeated candidate for SG President, made the keynote address. Terming CAP "one family made up of the best people," Nicoletti urged the delegates present to choose the best possible candidates in an "open convention." He called upon the chosen candidates to sacrifice for the benefit of the student body and to put love and respect above all other considerations when dealing with people.

With the exception of dorms, most of the "districts" were listed by address. In each case the address turned out to be that of a particular fraternity or sorority house. Several delegates, when announcing their votes, used the names of their fraternity or sorority, apparently forgetting either the new system or their own address.

Amy Trump, acting CAP vice-president, spoke of the image of the party to the student body at large. She called for reform of the party and the campus party system, citing the need for change.

"We are viewed as an

(Continued on Page 4)

LOUIS JACOBS

DAVID IFSHIN

Ifshin accepts GIA backing

By DOROTHY NASH and DAVID ROSS

"The way we have it running now all we've got is the viewpoint of the representatives and the hell with the people of the constituency."

John Diamond, Speaker Pro-tempore of the Student Senate, summarized the effectiveness of the party system while delivering a pro (recommendation) for David Ifshin, (GIA) Greek-Independent Alliance nominee for Student Government president. Diamond was addressing approximately 94 delegates who were casting votes for 809 party members at the convention Sunday.

It was apparent at the onset of the convention that the composition of most of the slates was predetermined in party caucuses.

The SG presidential race proved to be the high point of convention activity with Ifshin of Sigma Nu defeating Ed Barron president of St. Mary's, and Howie Zweier, current junior class president. Zweier was also defeated earlier in the convention for the senior class presidential nomination.

Initial voting narrowed the field to Ifshin and Zweier with Zweier receiving more votes but not the required majority.

The deciding vote was cast by Zeta Beta Tau. ZBT which lists 80 party members sent two delegates, Marc Rosenbaum and Bill Gross, to the convention, each casting votes for himself and 39 of his fraternity brothers. The house was called and Rosenbaum announced 60 for Zweier, 20 for Ifshin. In the ten seconds of confusion that followed, Gross decided to switch 20 of "his" 40 votes to Ifshin. He announced "40 for Ifshin and 40 for Zweier." The resulting count was enough to put Ifshin over the top with the nomination.

The other SG nominees, selected on white ballots (without opposition), were: Roger Conners, vice-president; Jean Danziger, secretary; and Bill Legrant, treasurer.

Of the 809 votes cast at the convention, 86 were cast by individuals for independents. St. Mary's represented the greatest show of organized independent strength with 37 votes. Shaw dormitory also sent delegates representing its 20 votes to the convention. Five persons cast one vote each and the remaining 24 were cast "by proxy" through an independent delegate.

The total strength of the 86 independent votes composed eight of the 24 polled districts. The remaining 16 districts were made up of fraternity and sorority houses voting in blocks through selected delegates. Thus, from a head count of persons in attendance at the convention, the remaining 723 votes were controlled by a core of approximately 82 persons, including the candidates seeking the 16 nominations.

Elections Commission representatives attended the convention to oversee the voting procedures and overall management. Andy Winning of Elections Commission said that the parliamentary disorganization of the convention made the voting seem more shady and more confusing than it actually was. Dick Barton, chairman of the Commission, obtained copies of all the vote registrations from

(Continued on Page 4)

Class contenders chosen

Gladden, Hess, Tembeckjian

By LARRY KRAMER
Campus Affairs Editor

In almost methodic proceedings at a smoothly-run convention, Sunday, the Campus Alliance Party nominated three people for class presidencies, two on white ballots (ran unopposed).

Freshman president Bob Tembeckjian received the nomination by a vote of 631-576. In a unity speech, loser John Brewster summed up the mood of the convention when he said, "It seems the Sophomore class has provided the entertainment for this convention." Only one office in the other two classes was contested.

Nominated for Senior Class president was Robert Gladden, former class president during his sophomore year. Lenny Conway, incumbent class of '71 president was also nominated without opposition.

The lone contest in the convention for Senior Class officers occured in the race for Vice-President. Ellen Miller, an independent, defeated Mark Mandel from Phi Epsilon Pi 664-560.

Winning the remaining two senior class nominations were Andrea Ibanez and Lew Brindis, both white ballots, for secretary and treasurer respectively.

In the junior class elections, Ann Replogle, Sue Shapiro, and Rich Rosenstein won without opposition for the positions of vice-president, secretary and treasurer.

In the sophomore class elections, Nancy Hess proved

(Continued on Page 4)

Brown, White, Leibowitz run

By HELENE MACDONALD
Associate Editor

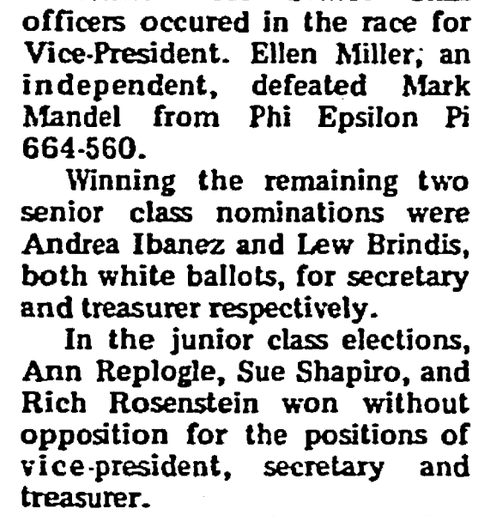
Morgan Brown of Tau Kappa Epsilon won the Greek Independence Alliance (GIA) party's nomination for senior class president by over 400 votes over Howie Zweier, current junior class president, in the only class president race which had more than one contender.

Although GIA had to take roll call votes for nominees for only five class offices, the class slate portion of the convention took almost four hours. Delegates generally knew who the candidates were going to be and there were few bolters from the earlier CAP convention.

Brown, Zweier and Ronny

(Continued on Page 4)

Prohibition Party names slate for campus offices



By JOHN WISNIEWSKI

The Prohibition Party Sunday night selected Joshua Nadel, a junior art student, as its candidate for Student Government President during the party's nominating convention at Men's Co-op 1.

Other SG candidates are Andrew Rosenblatt, vice-president; Walter J. Lewis, treasurer; and Lauren Maertz, secretary.

Louis Jacobs, Campus Alliance Party contender for Student Government President asked for the Prohibition Party's support and placed his own name up for nomination as the party's Presidential candidate. But convention delegates did not feel Jacobs would be beneficial to the party's platform, and Nadel won the nomination handily.

Spokesman Robert Vitello outlined the Prohibition Party platform. He said the party was an outgrowth of the "Student Committee to Elect Chancellor Tolley Student Government

JOSH NADEL

President", campaign of two years ago. The Prohibition Party "will spend absolutely no money, nor will it allow any of its endorsees to spend any money for the express purpose of campaigning," said Vitello.

According to Vitello, "The Prohibition Party is dedicated to the prohibition of any activities or policies which limit the scholastic horizons of any student at Syracuse University."

"Class governments are farces," continued Vitello. "The party will move to expose the fact that the presentation and programming of 'class weekends' is the function of the University Union," he said, "and the existence of a class government to perform this same function constitutes political featherbedding." The party would transfer all money assigned to class governments to the University Union.

Addressing the convention, Presidential candidate Nadel

(Continued on Page 4)

SOAP plans to clean up 'inadequate' political parties

Hoping to revamp the political scene at SU, a group of interested students have formed the Students Organized Against Parties (SOAP).

According to an official statement of purpose, SOAP realizes that "The system has proved inadequate and irrelevant to student needs...in the past, student politics at Syracuse has been restricted to the few rather than the many."

SOAP, planning to run a full slate of Student Government candidates, does see some possibility for student government, calling it "The one possibly viable instrument for change available to the student."

According to Jay Abrahms, presidential candidate, "Student Government and campus politics have become just another Greek Game as a self-perpetuating oligarchy of power brokers have annually divided up the spoils of Student Government offices."

Concerning their possible action, the statement they issued said: "We believe that the avenues of student participation must be widened. To accomplish this feat, Student Government and politics in the present fashion must be abolished."

Also running on the SOAP slate are Andy Rosenblatt, for vice-president, Susan Van Nostrand for secretary, and Albert Johnson for treasurer. Rosenblatt also received the Prohitibion Party nomination for the SG vice-presidency.

CAP-Jacobs . . .

(Continued from Page 3)

unsupported minority of Greeks who are nothing but a machine. For years we have sat back and allowed this organization to be slandered. Society is going through the transition of change. We must change and reform. It is true we are Greek-run, but the reasons given by some, however, are untrue. The Greeks aren't power-mad--this is false. The independents themselves must be more active. SG may be a farce, but we can't accept the blame. The responsibility lies with the majority of apathetic students. Where has the vocal majority been? We must open our eyes and accept the reasons for the joke," Miss Trump said.

She also called for party unity and responsibility in the nomination process.

The CAP leadership repeatedly put the stress on the need for unity. Unity was indeed reflected in a smoothly-run convention where, in most cases, each hand held a score of votes and delivered them by the block.

CAP class . . .

(Continued from Page 3)

victorious over three other candidates when the vote total gave her the exact number of votes needed for nomination. Leading opposition came from Sally Ryder. Anne Adamcewicz won the race for secretary, defeating Edythe Cohen and Nancy Nagamatsu. Herb Schilling became the CAP nominee for treasurer when his lone opponent, Bob Anthone had his name taken out of contention by Phi Epsilon Pi, who had originally nominated him.

In his speech before the convention, Tembeckjian said, "We have already begun work on initiating an exchange program in which professers from other universities will come here and debate our professors and meet our students."

Prohibition . . .

(Continued from Page 3)

said, "No Student Government exists on this campus other than the University Senate." Although Student Senate represents the student body, Nadel feels that it has no voice in University policy.

Nadel said he would introduce a bill to Student Senate calling for its dissolution.

The party also named Senior Class President, J. Alan Heugh; Vice-President, Walter Bess; Treasurer, Thomas Marino; and Secretary, Lucus Li. Running for Senior Class Senators-at-large are Sven Martson, Judy Chesser, Jay Amsterdam and Timothy Ward.

Nominated for Junior Class offices are William Pitcher, president; Alyse McNeily, vice-president; David Moore, treasurer; Thomas Clark, secretary; and Robert Mussey and John R. King, senators-at-large.

GIA-Ifshin . . .

(Continued from Page 3)

both party conventions as "a matter of record."

Party unity was the major objective of the convention, but it seemed to be lost in the parliamentary shuffle. The phrase echoed in campaign speeches for every office and in the recommendation speeches, as well. SG President Chuck Hicks, however, opened the session with a short statement on the need for quality candidates and the responsibility of the party to nominate the most worthy persons, regardless of political deals made. "The people I support," Hicks said, "will not be because of party loyalties, but will be in terms of them as individuals."

Both Ed Feldman, Speaker of Student Senate, and Jeff Portnoy, vice-president of SG, offered pros for candidates. As a result the party seemed to be shaken when faced with the opposing alternatives recommended by Feldman and Portnoy. In most cases the pros delivered were attempts to re-paint the picture of party unity marred by the actual candidates in nomination battles.

There appeared to be a somewhat stronger Greek-Independent unity toward the end of the convention. In the race for SG president, Bob Kelly, president of Inter-Fraternity Council, came out in support of Ed Barron who ran as an independent supported by his living center.

A final attempted show of party unity succeeded in the GIA convention when the delegates were approached by spokesmen from the Campus Alliance Party (CAP). Representatives of the CAP SG slate requested permission to appear before the GIA members to solicite nominations from the GIA convention.

The request was unanimously defeated leaving the party at least temporarily unified against its CAP opposition and eager to face the ensuing battle.

GIA class . . .

(Continued from Page 3)

Horvitz sought the vice-presidential nomination after leaving the presidential race, but was defeated by Meryl Kramer. After Pat Orsino was accepted as the party's candidate for secretary by a white ballot, Horvitz received the nomination for treasurer and was selected by white ballot.

However, later Sunday evening, Horvitz decided not to run on GIA's ticket although he said that he might run as an independent. Party members expected a replacement to be named Monday night.

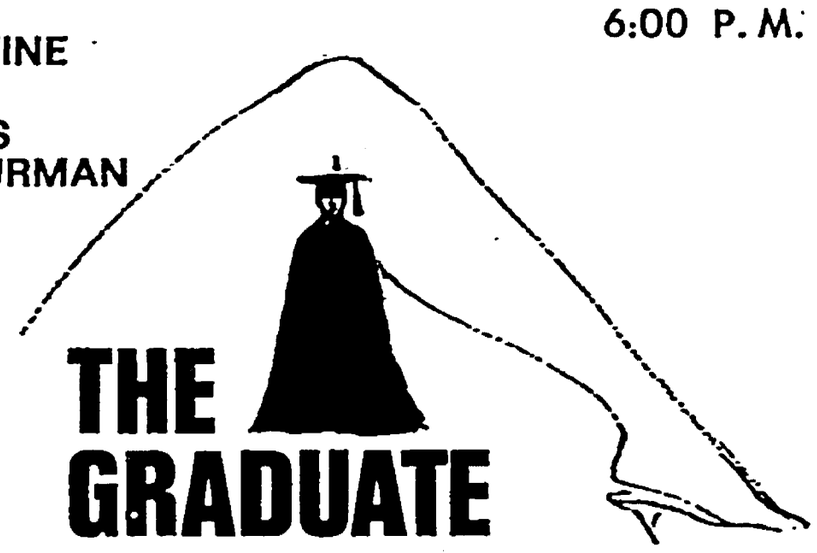
The convention nominated Rod White, president; Adrienne Turner, vice-president, and Andy Biggs, treasurer for the junior class slate. Susie Moore, who had been defeated in a bid for the CAP nomination was opposed by Sue Starr for secretary but won the GIA nomination.

The convention chose Matty Leibowitz for sophomore class president and Howie Lippman from CAP as soph treasurer on white ballots. Ronnie Kemper defeated Cheryl Kagan for the vice-presidential nomination and Miss Kagan dropped down to the contest for secretary.

She was opposed by Nancy Friedman and Fran Pinto, current frosh secretary.

Miss Friedman received the nomination.

Photography by
Sarkin Studio
Living Color
Portraits
Bridal Portraits
Candid Weddings
908 Irving Ave.
Near V. A. Hospital
478-1145



MG
AUSTIN HEALEY
Jaguar
SALES & SERVICE
also
Largest Selection in the East of Used Convertibles--Hard Tops Corvettes-Sports Cars
6 Factory Trained Import Mechanics waiting to serve you. Over $100,000 in parts and accessories in inventory.
Revelle Motors, Inc.
800 W. Genesee Street
Sales GR 4-1009 Parts & Service GR 9-9544

ACADEMY AWARD WINNER

BEST DIRECTOR—MIKE NICHOLS
Mr. Joseph E. Levine appearing Thurs., A-1 Newhouse
4:15 P. M.
Gifford
6:00 P. M.
JOSEPH E. LEVINE PRESENTS A MIKE NICHOLS LAWRENCE TURMAN PRODUCTION

THE GRADUATE
STARRING ANNE BANCROFT AND DUSTIN HOFFMAN · KATHARINE ROSS
SCREENPLAY BY CALDER WILLINGHAM AND BUCK HENRY SONGS BY PAUL SIMON
PERFORMED BY SIMON AND GARFUNKEL PRODUCED BY LAWRENCE TURMAN
DIRECTED BY MIKE NICHOLS TECHNICOLOR® PANAVISION® AN EMBASSY PICTURES RELEASE
film forum
gifford auditorium
syracuse university
March 18, 19, 20
$1.50 6, 8, 10

Levine, producer, here for 'Graduate' showing

Joseph E. Levine, president of Avco Embassy Pictures Corp., will be the guest of Film Forum at Syracuse University March 20. The Rev. Norman O. Keim, director of Film Forum, said Levine will appear in connection with a three-day showing of "The Graduate," which was produced by Levine's company. "I believe this will be the first showing of 'The Graduate' on an American campus," Keim said.

He said Levine will take part in a seminar at 4:15 p.m. (A-1, Newhouse Communications Center) and will make a public appearance in the evening before one of the showings of "The Graduate." Students from the television-radio department, the College of Business Administration and those interested in films and drama are expected to attend the seminar.

Keim said Levine's appearance is "part of an effort to not only bring screen stars to the campus of Syracuse University but the whole gamut of responsible people in the film industry." Past guests of Film Forum have been Henry Fonda, Rod Steiger and Claire Bloom.

Jeffrey Lyons, a student in the Syracuse University College of Law, was instrumental in helping to arrange Levine's visit, Keim said.

Jason Squire, a senior in television-radio, and Barbara Prinzivalli are coordinators for Film Forum.

Request meeting

PFP confronts Bartlett

By STEVE TOBER

In a letter presented to Kenneth G. Bartlett last Friday, the Peace and Freedom Party called on him, in his position as a state legislator, to "vote against bills that penalize students, faculty or administrators beyond what is imposed by courts of law." The issue centers around a state senate-passed Flynn Bill, which, according to the latter, "discriminates against poor and working-class students," whom the letter contends are "in most need of financial aid."

Recently over 1000 students and faculty signed a petition, calling on Bartlett, the vice-president of public affairs, to vote against any bill which would try to "devise strict 'guidelines' for acceptable college protests," a move which many feel has the serious potential of legislating upon freedom of speech. In their letter, The Peace and Freedom Party called upon Bartlett, in light of the petition, to hold a public meeting, the purpose being "to explore the implications of these bills... and to hear your position on them."

According to Eugene Woloszyn, a spokesman for the Party, Bartlett has refused to hold a public meeting, despite the requests for one made by both the Peace and Freedom Party and Student Senate.

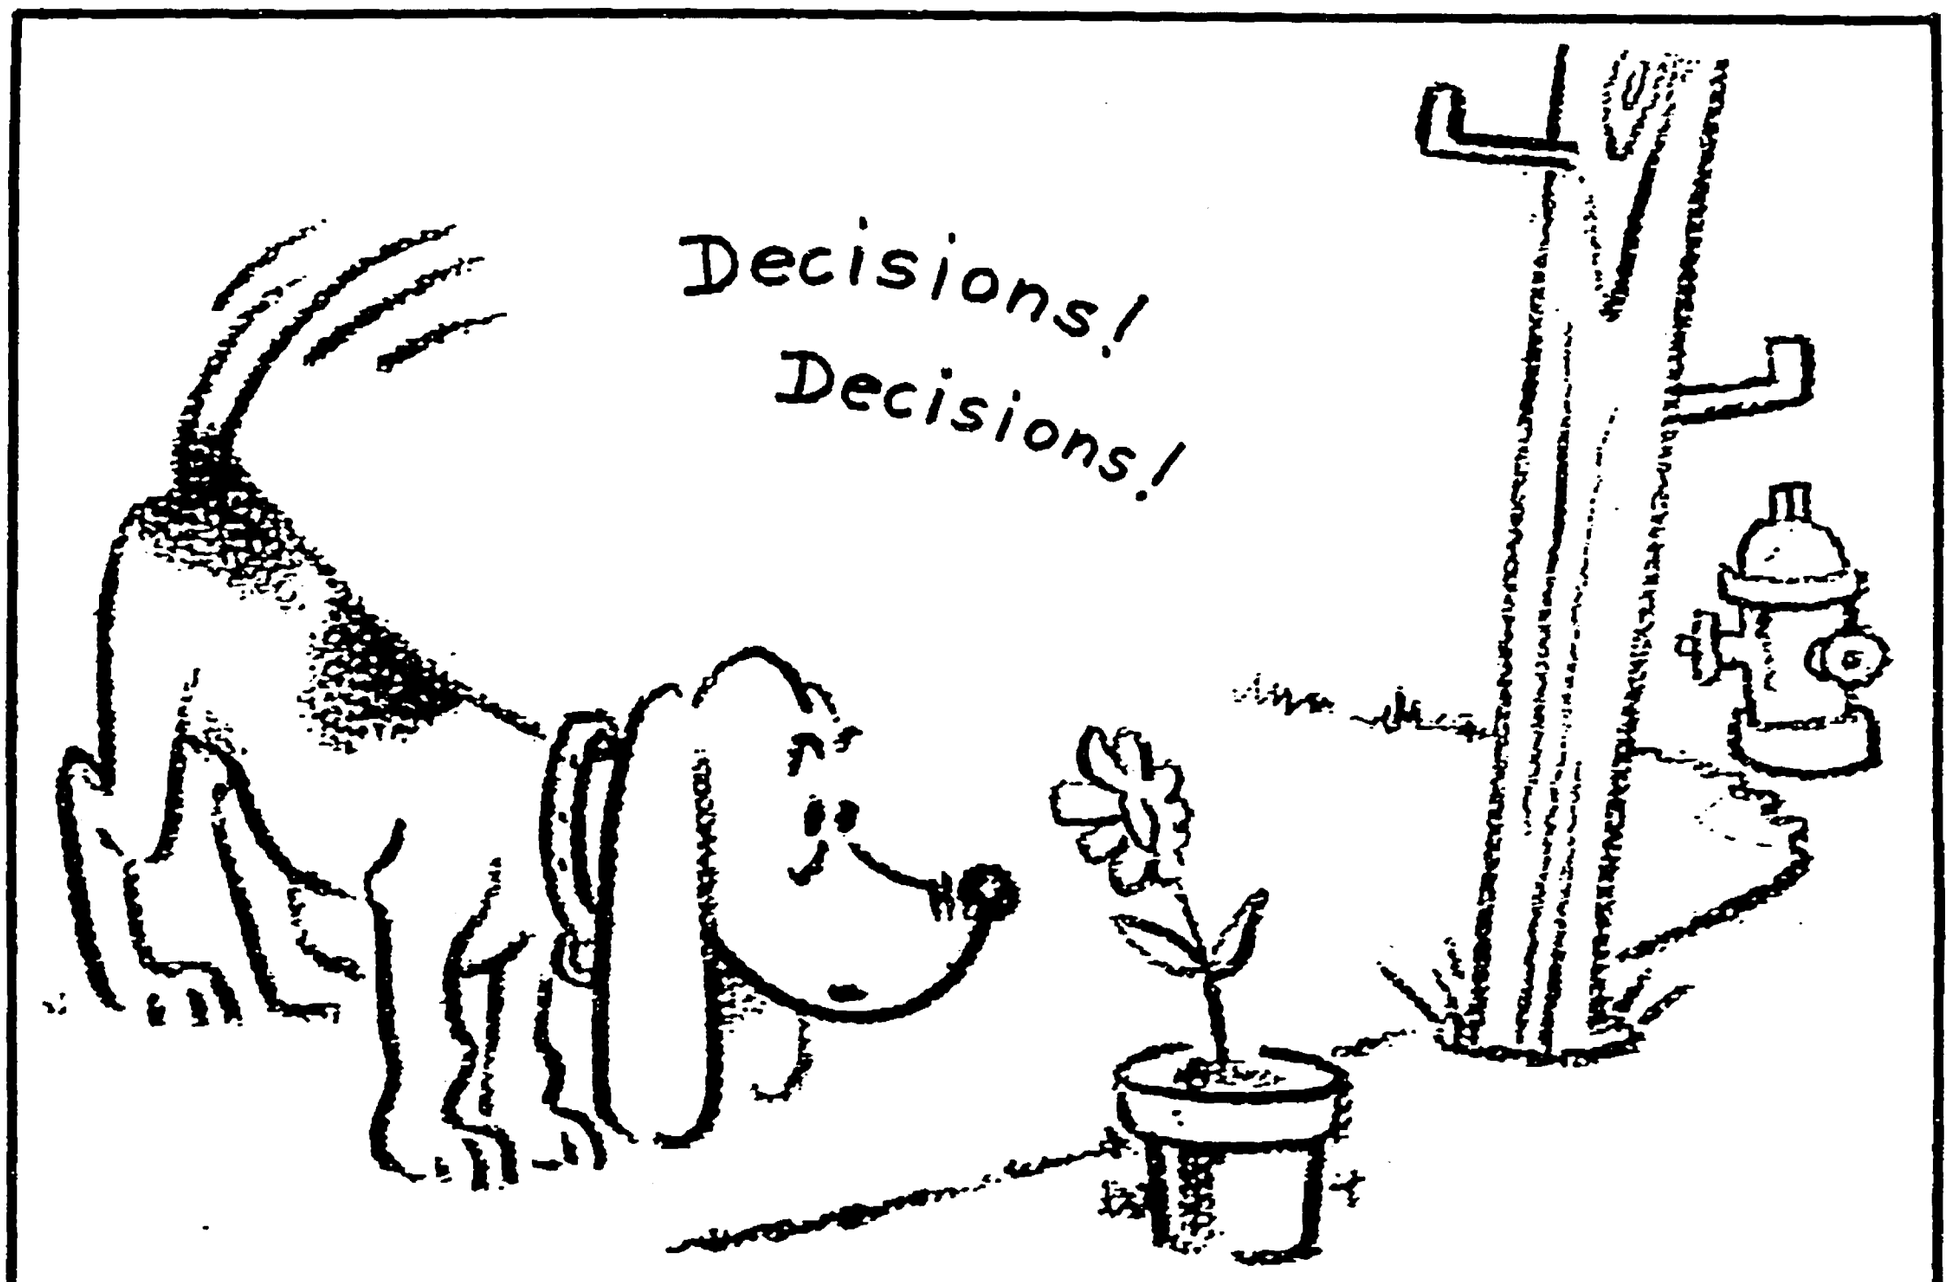
The Peace and Freedom Party's stand on this issue is "that the courts, and courts alone, should determine penalties resulting from campus demonstrations," as the letter outlines.

Dean values collecting art

"Art is valuable; but you buy art because you like it, not as an investment," according to Laurence Schmeckebier, dean of the Syracuse University School of Art.

"Collecting art helps the individual to enrich himself, his life and his environment," Dean Schmeckebier said. "However, you must also recognize that it has value. All paintings, not just Rembrandt works, have gone up in value. Prints that sold for five dollars in the 1930's now bring from $90 to $150.

"Rembrandt etchings have increased in value 2300 per cent. Piranesi works have gone up 1250 per cent. A recent portfolio of Ben Shan's work, released at a price of $4500 dollars, has doubled in value."



Dean Schmeckebier was addressing alumni of Syracuse University at its Joseph I. Lubin House in New York last Thursday.

He said: "Before you can begin collecting art you must know about it. You can learn by looking at art works wherever you can; by reading criticism in newspapers and magazines; and by talking with artists and asking them what they like.

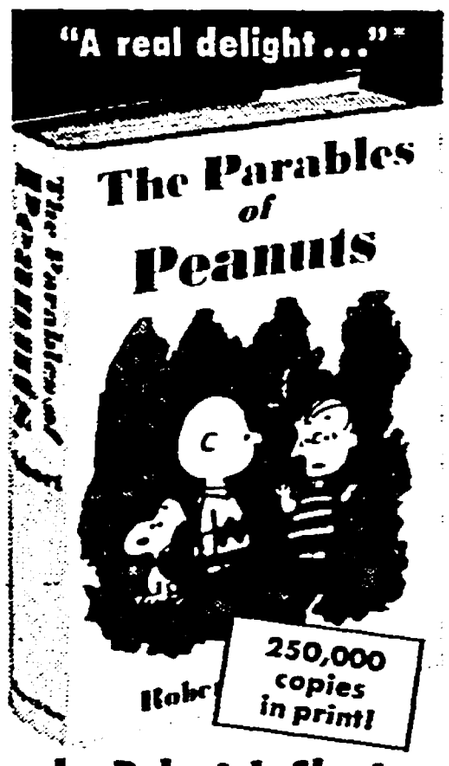
"Save your money and invest it in a print, a watercolor or a drawing. Spend your money on something that gives permanent pleasure."

Sentencing

The sentencing of the Peace and Freedom Party's Bruce Augustyniak and Larry Alexander has been postponed until the morning of March 25, at the judge's request.

Some decisions are relatively unimportant. Where you put your engineering talent to work is not.

As you contemplate one of the most important decisions of your life, we invite you to consider a career at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft. Here, you will find wide-open opportunities for professional growth with a company that enjoys an enviable record of stability in the dynamic atmosphere of aerospace technology.



We select our engineers and scientists carefully. Motivate them well. Give them the equipment and facilities only a leader can provide. Offer them company-paid, graduate-education opportunities. Encourage them to push into fields that have not been explored before. Keep them reaching for a little bit more responsibility than they can manage. Reward them well when they do manage it.

And your decision is made easier, thanks to the wide range of talents required. Your degree can be a B.S., M.S., or Ph.D. in: MECHANICAL • AERONAUTICAL • ELECTRICAL • CHEMICAL • CIVIL • MARINE • INDUSTRIAL ENGINEERING • PHYSICS • CHEMISTRY • METALLURGY • MATERIALS SCIENCE • CERAMICS • MATHEMATICS • STATISTICS • COMPUTER SCIENCE • ENGINEERING SCIENCE • ENGINEERING MECHANICS.

Consult your college placement officer—or write Mr. William L. Stoner, Engineering Department, Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, East Hartford, Connecticut 06108.

Pratt & Whitney Aircraft
EAST HARTFORD AND MIDDLETOWN, CONNECTICUT
WEST PALM BEACH, FLORIDA

DIVISION OF UNITED AIRCRAFT CORPORATION
UA
An Equal Opportunity Employer

by Robert L. Short

"The Parables of Peanuts is filled with wonderful quotes and is a real delight to read from beginning to end. I could not possibly be more pleased." — *CHARLES M. SCHULZ, creator of Peanuts®

Cloth, $4.95 • Paper, $1.95
At all bookstores

Harper & Row
1817

'Six Characters'

Newly interpreted productions creates personality for SRT

By JAMES KING

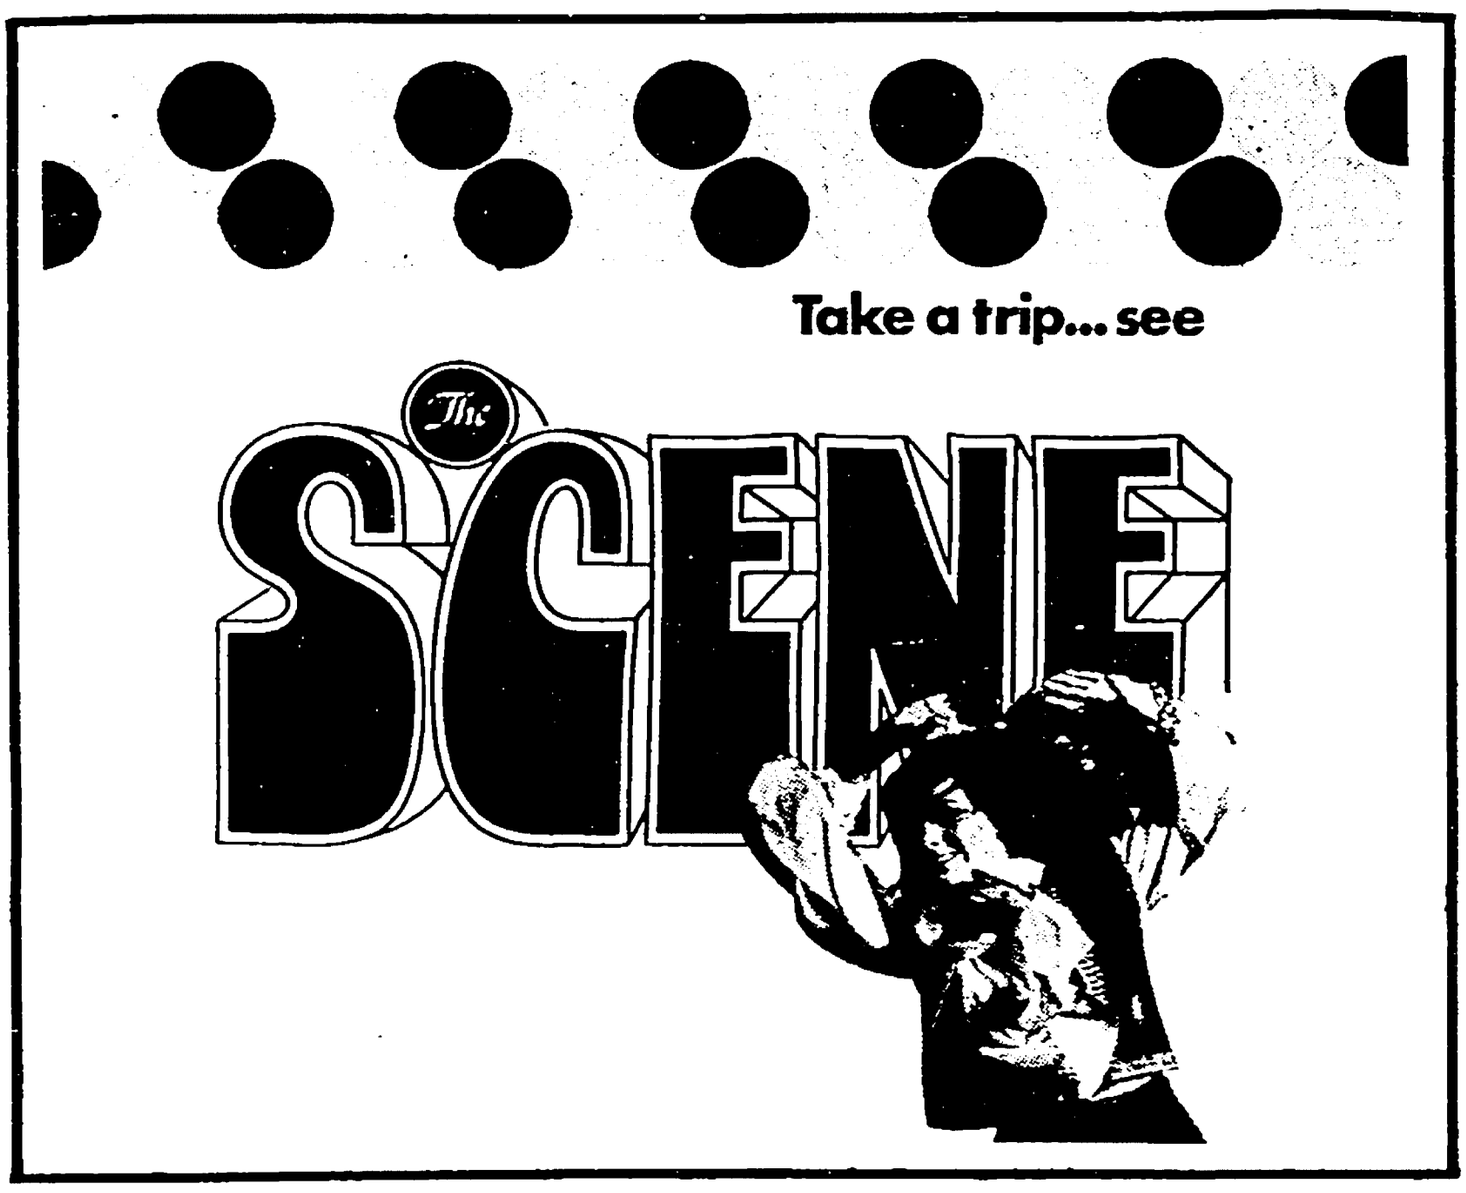
Within the past two years, the Syracuse Repertory Theatre has occasionally made conscious efforts to create a personality for itself. Last year's production of Brendan Behan's celebrated "The Hostage" allowed the actors to relax and clown and mingle with the audience. But this year, with a new company, SRT has to develop a new personality. What Rex Henriot has done to Pirandello's "Six Characters in Search of an Author" will probably send the purists screaming up the aisles, but I was delighted with it: it is more personal and original and "alive" than anything this resident theatre has done in its three years of activity.

Henriot has simply followed through on one of the ideas that emerges from the play--that each man contains his own world. This director has put his production in his own world, but his world is also accessible to the public; the production communicates for precisely this reason.

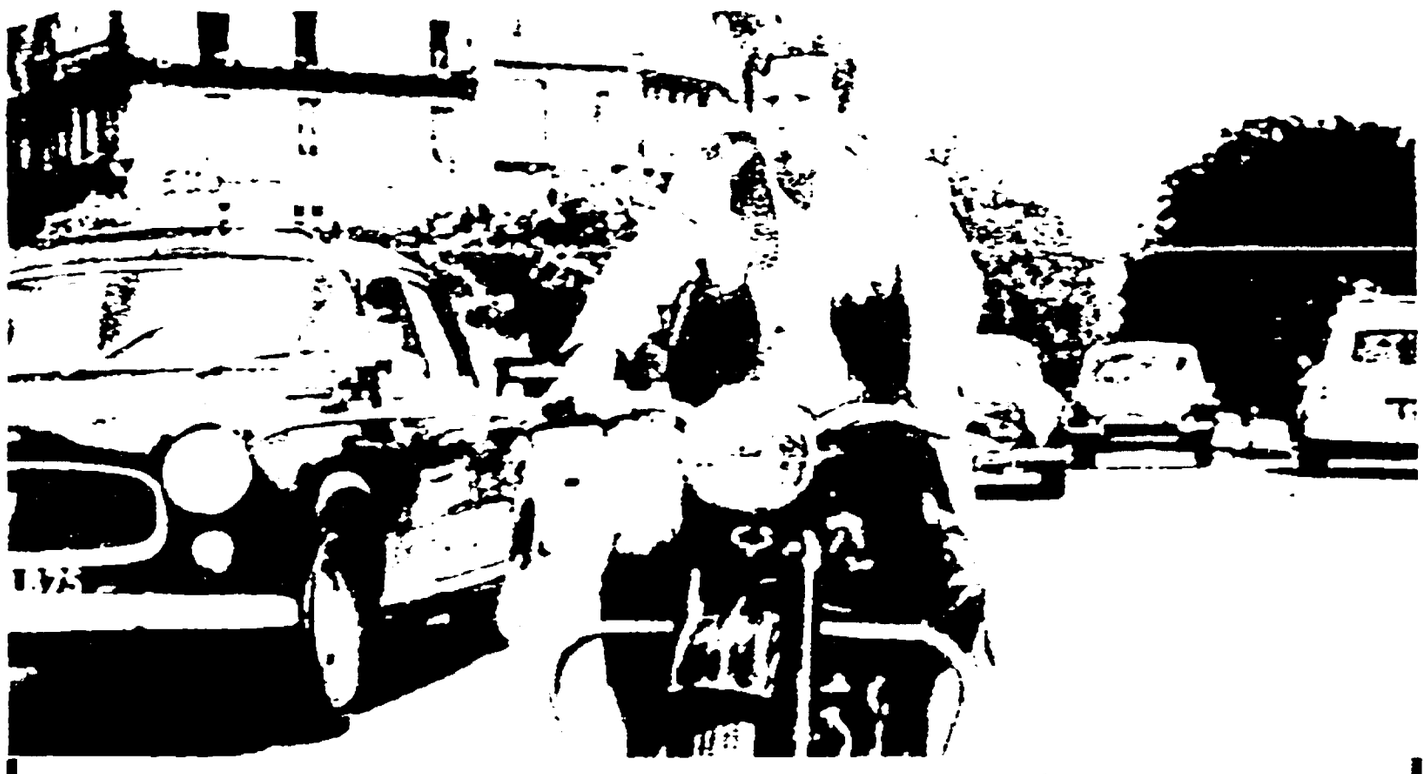
As the play begins, several of the company's actors and a director called Rex arrive on stage to start rehearsing their first production of this season, Brecht's "Three-Penny Opera." The basic set for the Brecht play has been maintained for "Six Characters," (Leonard Dryansky deserved a week off, anyway) and the company takes relish in kidding itself and Mr. Henriot: the actors keep their own names, sip Coca-Cola, trade quips, and make fun of the director's program notes behind his back.

I think this is one of those rare instances where a director has improved upon a play by tampering with it. Mr. Henriot has strongly reinforced the theme of reality and illusion by having his actors play themselves, and by having another actor play Henriot. The device also smacks of provinciality; yet this is a resident theatre that has cultivated a resident audience perceptive enough to appreciate most of those allusions the company makes to itself. The first-night audience seemed pleased and flattered by the exclusiveness and distinctiveness of the production.

The six characters have an impressive first entrance that frames them, dressed in black and grey, at the top of the stage. They have a drama they want to act out, but no author to write it for them. Their author has created them and rejected them, but they have acquired a life of their own, and have apparently come to the theater to confess. Their torment is that they are frozen as figures of Art, and can only repeat their drama again and again. The Father and the Mother are both consumed by shame. Their son refuses to take his part in the drama and remains alienated from the rest. The other three characters are children by the Mother's second marriage--a bitter Stepdaughter and two beautiful but doomed children.



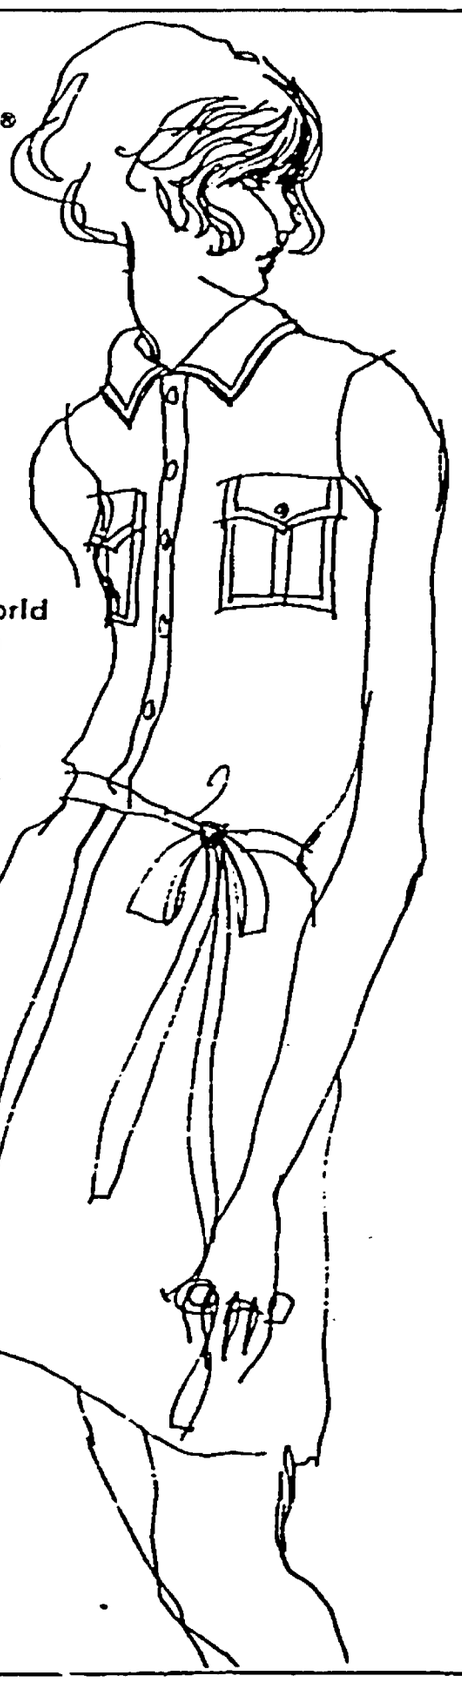
The reality-and-illusion theme activates subordinate theme of Pirandello's play, the absence of communication. The actors initially laugh off the six characters, but become by turns amused, absorbed and confused by their drama. Finally, they either reject the characters or find themselves unable to fully accept them, because they have not been able to understand them. The final, spectral appearance of the characters here is the same as their first appearance, but, coming at the end of such an intelligent and exuberant production, it evokes a thoughtful and memorable image.



But there is one glowing flaw in this production. The "birth" of a seventh character during the evening lacks the mysterious, floating quality which the other characters possess. In fact, Madame Pace comes stumbling on as if she has just literally been kicked out of the author's imagination. The actress in this production proceeds to play the role like Gwen Verdon romping through a musical-comedy piece, which might suggest why the author has rejected her. What intelligent author wouldn't?

The performances are good, but far from ideal: Edgar Daniels, who plays the Father, is an actor of gargantuan proportions who seems to have stepped out of a play by Ibsen. He is an imposing verbal actor, but is burdened by a pair of hands he seldom knows what to do with. He occasionally reduces himself to irrelevant and gross posturings, and his gestures tend to lack meaning; but his readings of Pirandello's lenghthy speeches for the Father are magnificent.

Shirley Ann Fenner, as the bitter and vengeful Stepdaughter, carries off her role in a series of dramatic explosions, yet she doesn't let herself go enough in the role. Her laugh is supposed to be wicked and obnoxious; instead, it is strained. Miss Fenner needs to integrate those little explosions into a performance of sustained passion.



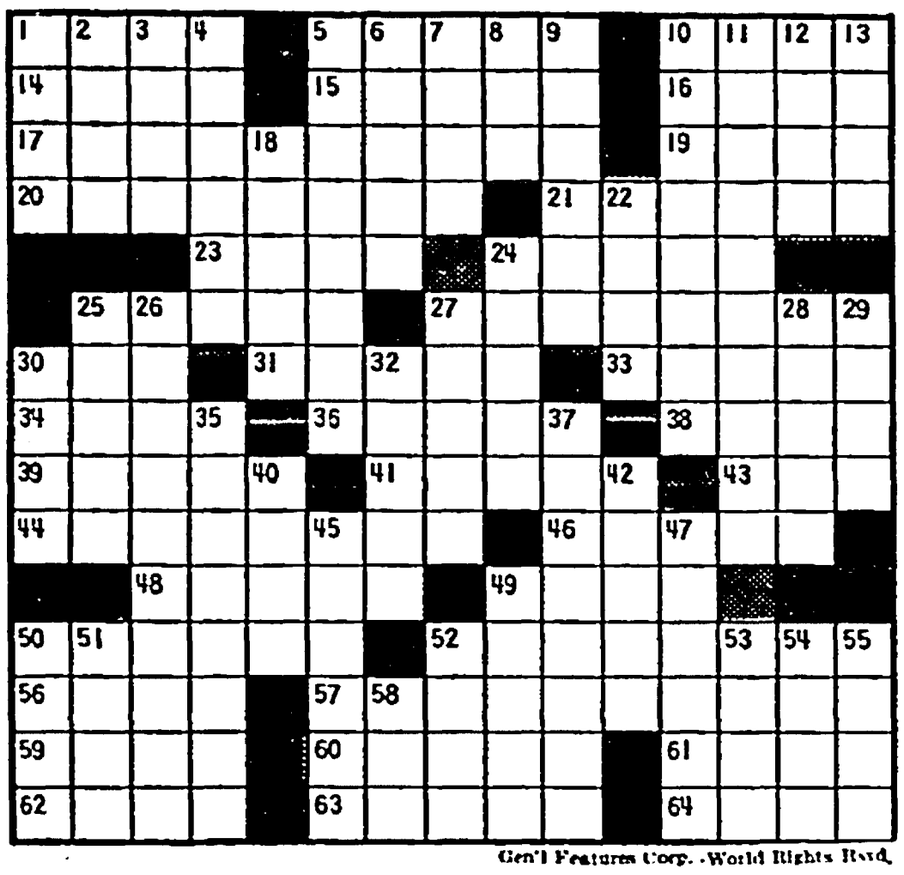
Colin Hamilton's portrayal of the Director may or may not be an occasional parody of Henriot himself, but I was impressed by his virtuosity as a confused man trying to make dramatic order out of the chaos of the six character's lives. Joyce Krempel, after this performance and an earlier one in "The Crucible" this year, is almost in danger of being typecast as the woman who suffers instinctively and unquestioningly; she plays the Mother with great humility and pathos.

JEAN PAUL BELMONDO in:
THAT MAN FROM RIO
SATURDAY, MARCH 22
GIFFORD AUDITORIUM, 7 AND 9:15
ADMISSION $1
SYRACUSE FILM ACADEMY

JOHN MEYER® OF NORWICH

JOHN MEYER SPEAKS YOUR LANGUAGE

Communicate with the world —or look nifty at home—in the wear-it-everywhere Safari shift—impeccably tailored by John Meyer in linen-look rayon-and-flax. Zip back, button front—with high pockets and self-belt in the colors you look best in. The birds are back—communicate! $23.



DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

ACROSS

1 Star performers.
5 Splash through water, mud, etc.
10 Old Italian official.
14 Undulate.
15 Do a grammar lesson.
16 Novello.
17 Too heavy.
19 Bulb plant.
20 Mercy.
21 Undergrounds.
23 Does a math lesson.
24 Quibble.
25 Projection.
27 Went on one's way: 2 words.
30 Pullet.
31 Fumble or bobble.
33 Noted American painter.
34 Finishes.
36 Kinds.
38 Sideslip.
39 Girl's name.
41 Sounds of surprise.
43 Letters.
44 Kind of bars.
46 Gets: Colloq.
48 Bullock.
49 River of Italy.
50 Comedian's talk.
52 Enthusiasts.
56 Medicinal plant.
57 Water ___: 3 words.
59 Opera role.
60 Touch.
61 Laugh: Fr.
62 "That was no ___ ..."
63 Word used with East or West.
64 Days of ___.

DOWN

1 French leave.
2 Bruin's home.
3 Level.
4 TV perennial.
5 Welcome type of tourists.
6 Nonprofessionals.
7 Carousal.
8 Be quiet!
9 Cossack chief.
10 Purifies.
11 Ignored.
12 Advice to a team: 2 words.
13 Greek god.
18 V-shaped piece.
22 Topsy's friend and others.
24 Supermarket items.
25 Famed designer of masks.
26 Comprehended.
27 Dewy, old style.
28 Spikes.
29 Grandstands: Abbr.
30 Pile.
32 Radio operator's term.
35 TV role.
37 Fragment.
40 Nautical term.
42 Abraham's wife.
45 Dormice.
47 Place of entertainment: Slang.
49 Capacious.
50 Bucket.
51 Seaweed.
52 Ward (off).
53 Personal: Prefix.
54 Popular mystery writer.
55 Pintail duck.
58 Year in Ovid's time: Rom.

Gen'l Features Corp. -World Rights Rsvd.

This summer, study a language with the world's most experienced teachers.

TWA will fly you to the language of your choice.

Your teachers will be waiters, waitresses, bartenders, barmaids, shopkeepers, bellboys, chambermaids, hotel clerks, policemen, cab drivers... and just plain and fancy natives.

You'll do more than learn a language. That, you can do through text books.

You'll learn how to communicate with that language.

What language do you want your forte to be? French, Italian, German, Swahili, Spanish, Portuguese, Greek???? You name it. And TWA will fly you there for your summer vacation....

Why TWA?

Because we have more flights going to where you're probably going during the summer, than any other airline.

That means you can leave when you want to leave—not when someone tells you it's your turn to leave.

Call TWA, your travel agent or the TWA campus representative.

TWA

The things we'll do to make you happy.

Silence . . .

(Continued from Page 1)

Chancellor accompanied the six spokesman outside and addressed the assembled demonstrators from the steps of the building.

"I express my deep concern about your problems and say that I want to hear everything you want me to hear, directly and personally," Dr. Piskor said.

The six groups, united in a program dubbed "Project Spearhead" to discuss their problems directly with top university officials, first requested such a meeting through letters to Dr. Piskor and Chancellor Tolley last Monday.

The Chancellor has been out of town for about a week and has offered no direct response but Dr. Piskor went to Beebe Cottage, headquarters for the Freshman Action Committee, to meet with the black students last Wednesday at noon.

They simply told him they wanted to meet with both he and the chancellor and reinterated the request to another letter asking for a meeting last Thursday. Dr. Piskor replied that he had a previous engagement in Washington, D.C. but would meet with them any time Friday or Saturday.

Friday morning they made an appointment with him and Friday afternoon they kept it.

Dr. Piskor met with the black students at Beebe Saturday afternoon. No statements were released and another meeting is set for 2 p.m. today.

Spokesmen for the students told the Daily Orange yesterday afternoon that the seperate groups had made various requests to the administration over the last few years.

"The response was always negative," one spokesman said. "The things wanted were never gotten."

Requests for permanent meeting places and facilities and inclusion, along with other student organizations, in the university budget were cited as examples.

The spokesman said the recent CSL hearings dealt with only a small range of the problems of black students.

Over the last few months, "all the black members of the SU community" have worked to compile information and carefully document their requests and the mode of operation for "Project Spearhead."

The effort follows years of black student meetings and requests. "There was a growing black awareness which comes from dealing with an unresponsive administration," a spokesman explained.

London

$245.00

Only a Few Remaining Places Phone Today!

June 26 - August 28

239 East Genesee Street
Downtown
471-1125

Syracuse University Su

Gordon D. Hoople Spe

Room 201, 805 South Crouse Av

Business Administration, Mathematics, Physical Sciences
June 9—July 18; July 21—August 29

Professional Education, Architecture, Art, Home Economics, Journalism, Liberal Arts, Library Science, Music, Speech and Dramatic Art
June 30—August 8; August 11—September 5

During the six-week sessions all classes will meet five days a week, Monday through Friday, unless other days are listed; all classes will meet for the entire session unless other dates are listed. Classes which normally would meet July 4 will meet instead on Saturday, July 12.

First Six-Week Session
June 9—July 18

COLLEGE OF BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION

ACCOUNTING
251. Elementary Accounting. (3) Mr. Todt. 10:30-11:45.
601. Section 1. Basic Accounting. (3) Mr. Schafer. 9:00-10:15.
601. Section 2. (Army only) Basic Accounting. (3) Mr. Schafer. June 30-August 1. 7:30-8:45.
716. Integrated Programming: Budgeting and Accounting. (Army only) (3) Staff. 9:00-11:50.
755. Theory of Financial Accounting. (3) Mr. Horwitz. 10:30-11:45.
990. Seminar in Accounting. (3) Mr. Bourque. 10:30-11:45.

BUSINESS EDUCATION
608. Principals of Business Education. (3) Mr. Nolan. June 30-July 11. 9:00-12:00.
910. Research and Investigations of Problems of Business Education. (3) June 30-August 8. Staff. Hours to be arranged.
915. Administration and Supervision of Business Education. (3) Mr. Federinko. July 21-August 8. 9:00-12:00.
940. Problems of Investigations in Teaching of Business Education. (3) June 30-August 8. Staff. Hours to be arranged.
Bus. Eng. 135. Written Communication 2. (3) Miss Chandler. 10:30-11:45.
Sec. Ed. 670. Section A. Workshop in Teaching of Shorthand and Office Practice. (3) Mr. Feller. June 30-July 18. 9:00-12:00.
Sec. Ed. 670. Section B. Workshop in Teaching Typewriting. (3) Miss Hall. June 30-August 8. 7:30-8:45.
Sec. Ed. 670. Section F. Family Finance Workshop. (4) Mr. Nolan, July 14-August 8. 9:00-12:00.
Shorthand 37. Beginning Shorthand. (3) Mr. Thompson. 1:15-2:30.
Typing 36. First-term Typing. (2) Miss Chandler. 12:00-1:15.

ECONOMICS
601. (Army only) Economic Processes. (3) Mr. Eggers, Mr. Sufrin. 9:00-11:50.

FINANCE AND REAL ESTATE
355. Money and Banking. (3) Mr. Arsan. 7:30-8:45.
356. Corporation Finance. (3) Mr. Arsan. 9:00-10:15.
556. Investments. (3) Mr. Massa. 9:00-10:15.
RES. 345. Real Estate Fundamentals. (3) Mr. Nielson. 7:30-8:45.
RES. 445. Real Estate Finance. (3) Mr. Bloom 9:00-10:15.

LAW AND PUBLIC POLICY
601. Basic Fundamentals. (3) Mr. Karp. 10:30-11:45.
355. Basic Concepts. (3) Mr. Karp. 9:00-10:15.

MARKETING AND TRANSPORTATION
355. Marketing Principals, Methods and Problems. (3) Mr. Manck. 10:30-11:45.
455. Marketing Communication. (3) Staff. 9:00-10:15.
601. Basic Marketing. (3) Mr. Hauk. 12:00-1:15.
756. Current Marketing Problems. (3) Mr. Hauk. 10:30-11:45.

ORGANIZATION AND MANAGEMENT
Bus. Adm. 145. Management Thought. (3) Mr. Seggev. 7:30-8:45.
Bus. Adm. 709. Business Policy. (3) Mr. Seimer. 10:30-11:45.
Bus. Adm. 710. (Army only) Administration Policy. (3) Mr. Seimer. June 23-July 30. 7:45-9:00.
Bus. Adm. 897. Research Methods and Projects. (3) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
Bus. Adm. 788. (Army only) Seminar in Army Comptrollership. (3) Mr. Quill. June 23-July 30. 9:00-11:50.
Bus. Adm. 897. Research Methods and Projects. (3) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

PRODUCTION AND PERSONNEL
PIR. 355. Personnel Relations. (3) Mr. Hable. 9:00-10:15.
PIR. 656. Personnel Administration. (3) Mr. Hable. 7:30-8:45.
PRM. 365. Production Management. (3) Mr. Rifai. 7:30-8:45.
PRM. 601. Section 1. Basic Production. (3) Mr. DeSalvia. 7:30-8:45.
PRM. 601. Section 2. (Army only) Basic Production. (3) Mr. DeSalvia. June 30-August 1. 9:00-10:45.

QUANTITATIVE METHODS
Bus. Stat. 261. Basic Statistics. (3) Mr. Hannum. 1:30-2:45.
Bus. Adm. 705. Quantitative Aids to Administration. (3) Mr. Hannum 12:00-1:15.

SCHOOL OF EDUCATION

EDU. 760. Section E. Workshop in Education: Reading Conference. (1) Mr. Sheldon. June 23-27. 9:00-5:00.
EDU. 760. Section K. Workshop in Education: Application of the Computer in Education and Educational Research. (3) Mr. Samph. June 9-27. 1:30-4:30.

COLLEGE OF HOME ECONOMICS

NUTRITION AND FOOD SCIENCE
645. Nutrition Problems in Disease. (3) Miss Thiele. June 16-27. 9:00-4:00.

COLLEGE OF LIBERAL ARTS

ANTHROPOLOGY
566. Introduction to Cultural Anthropology. (3) Mr. Mangin 9:00-10:15.
997. Thesis. Staff. Hours to be arranged.
999. Dissertation. Staff. Hours to be arranged.

CHEMISTRY
106. General Chemistry Lecture. (4) Staff. 9:00-10:15.
106. General Chemistry Laboratory. Staff. MWTh, 1:00-4:00.
275. Organic Chemistry. (3) Mr. Botteron. 10:30-11:45.
276. Organic Chemistry Laboratory. (2) Staff. 1:00-5:00.
332. Quantitative Analysis. (2) Mr. Pfluger. MTWh, 10:30-11:45.
333. Section 1. Quantitative Analysis Laboratory. (1) Staff. MWTh, 1:00-4:00.
333. Section 2. Quantitative Analysis Laboratory. (2) Staff. MTWThF, 1:00-4:00.
346. Physical Chemistry 1. (3) Mr. Brumberger. 9:00-10:15.
347. Physical Chemistry Laboratory. (1) Staff. MWTh, 1:00-4:00.
400. Minor Investigations. (1-4) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
997. Thesis. (1-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
999. Dissertation. (1-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

ECONOMICS
205. Structure of American Economy. (3) Mr. Thornblade. 10:30-11:45.
206. Operation of American Economy. (3) Staff. 9:00-10:15.
406. Economic Analysis and Business Policy. (3) Mr. Kelly. 9:00-10:15.
454. Development of Soviet Union. (3) Mr. Popovic. 9:00-10:15.
465. International Trade and Finance. (3) Mr. Thornblade. 12:00-1:15.
475. Economic Development of Underveloped Countries. (3) Mr. Popovic. 10:30-11:45.
485. Urban and Regional Economics. (3) Staff. 10:30-11:45.
601. Economic Processes. (3) Mr. Kelly. 10:30-11:45.
606. Economic Analysis and Business Policy. (3) Mr. Kelly. 9:00-10:15.
654. Development of Soviet Economy. (3) Mr. Popovic. 9:00-10:15.
665. International Economics. (3) Mr. Thornblade. 12:00-1:15.
676. Economics of Underdeveloped Countries. (3) Mr. Popovic. 10:30-11:45.
685. Economic Problems of Metropolitan Areas. (3) Staff. 10:30-11:45.
700. Individual Reading Program. (3) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
999. Dissertation. (3-6). Staff. Hours to be arranged.

ENGLISH
295. American Literature and Culture. (3) Mr. Searl. 12:00-1:15.

FINE ARTS
416. Renaissance Art In Northern Europe. (3) Mrs. Lillich. 9:00-10:15.

GEOGRAPHY
503. World Geography. (3) Staff. 9:00-10:15.
561. Economic Geography. (3) Staff. 10:30-11:45.

HISTORY
255. American History to 1865. (3) Staff. 7:30-8:45.

MATHEMATICS
16. College Algebra. (3) Staff. 7:30-8:45.
117. Section 1. Introduction to Mathematics. (3) Staff. 7:30-8:45.
117. Section 2. Introduction to Mathematics. (3) Staff. 9:00-10:15.
117. Section 3. Introduction to Mathematics. (3) Staff. 12:00-1:15.
118. Introduction to Mathematics II. (3) Staff. 9:00-10:15.

125. Section 1. Elementary Analytic Geometry. (3) Staff. 7:30-8:45.
125. Section 2. Elementary Analytic Geometry. (3) Staff. 9:00-10:15.
217. Calculus with Analytic Geometry. (3) Staff. 7:30-8:45.
226. Differential Calculus. (3) Staff. 7:30-8:45.
227. Integral Calculus. (3) Staff. 7:30-8:45.
295. Analytic Geometry and Calculus. (3) Staff. 10:30-11:45.
296. Calculus 2. (3) Staff. 10:30-11:45.
328. Topics in Calculus. (3) Staff. 10:30-11:45.
397. Calculus 3. (3) Staff. 7:30-8:45.
505. Analysis and Application 1. (3) Staff. 9:00-10:15.
507. Analysis and Application 2. (3) Staff. 9:00-10:15.
521. Introduction to Probability and Statistics. (3) Staff. 12:00-1:15.
525. Mathematical Statistics. (3) Staff. 12:00-1:15.
526. Probability. (3) Staff. 12:00-1:15.
531. Linear Algebra and Matrix Theory. (3) Staff. 10:30-11:45.
534. Introduction to Abstract Algebra. (3) Staff. 10:30-11:45.
541. Elementary Number Theory. (3) Staff. 9:00-10:15.
554. Fundamental Concepts of Geometry. (3). Staff. 12:00-1:15.
581. Programming for Digital Computers. (3) Staff. 7:30-8:45.
585. Higher Mathematics for Engineers 1. (3) Staff. 12:00-1:15.
605. Fundamentals of Analysis. (3) Staff. 10:30-11:45.
635. Modern Algebra. (3) Staff. 9:00-10:15.
661. Introduction to Point Set Topology. (3) Staff. 12:00-1:15.
703. Functions of a Complex Variable. (3) Staff. 12:00-1:15.
706. Functions of a Real Variable. (3) Staff. 10:30-11:45.
790. Intermediate Seminar. (3) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
999. Dissertation. (3) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

PHILOSOPHY
139. Problems of Conduct. (3) Mr. Foreman. 9:00-10:15.

PHYSICS
103. General Physics. (4) Staff. 8:00-10:00. Laboratory, TTh, 1:00-3:00.
104. General Physics. (4) Staff. 8:00-10:00. Laboratory MW, 1:00-3:00.
890. Minor Problems in Physics. (3) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
999. Dissertation. (3) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
999. Dissertation. (6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

POLITICAL SCIENCE
201. American Political Institutions. (3) Mr. Hurley. 12:00-1:15.

PSYCHOLOGY
205. Foundations of Human Behavior. (3) Staff. 7:30-8:45.

RELIGION
255. Introduction to Religious Thought. (3) Mr. Hall. 10:30-11:45.

SOCIOLOGY
301. Human Group Behavior. (3) Mr. Bradshaw. Hours to be arranged.

SCHOOL OF SPEECH AND DRAMATIC ART

DRAMA

390. Honors in Drama. (By permission) (3) Mr. Reidenbaugh. June 16-August 8. Hours to be arranged.

590. Projects in Technical Practice 1. (By permission) (3) Mr. Reidenbaugh. June 16-August 8. Hours to be arranged.

TELEVISION-RADIO
June 9-August 8

The following courses are open only to graduate students in the master's sequence in television.

656. Television Studio Management. (3) Mr. Barnhill. Hours to be arranged.
666. Section 1. Television Documentary. (3) Mr. Andrews. Hours to be arranged.
666. Section 2. Television Documentary. (3) Mr. Treble. Hours to be arranged.
690. Current Problems in Television. (3) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
697. Section 1. Television Research Seminar. (3) Mr. Myers. Hours to be arranged.
697. Section 2. Television Research Seminar (3) Mr. Myers. Hours to be arranged.
698. Public Communications and Television. (3) Mr. Bartlett. Hours to be arranged.

Second Six-Week Session
June 30—August 8

SCHOOL OF ARCHITECTURE

June 30-August 15

201. Architectural Design (Introduction). (3) Staff. 1:00-5:00.
301. Architectural Design (Class C). (4) Staff. 1:00-5:00.
401. Architectural Design (Class B). (5) Staff. 1:00-5:00.
Architectural Sketch Problems* (0) Staff. 1:00-5:00.
*Architectural Sketch Problems fee, $180 (no credit).

June 30-August 8
103. Architectural Drawing and Design Analysis. (3) Mr. Turner. 1:00-5:00.
293. An Introduction to Architecture. (3) Mr. Gotch.
FIA. 570. Studies in Form and Style: Problems in Contemporary Architecture. (3) Staff. 10:30-11:45.
Pla. 761. Principles of Municipal Planning. (3) Mr. Bartels. Hours to be arranged.

Pla. 889. Readings and Research Planning Theory. (3) Mr. Bartela. Hours to be arranged.

SCHOOL OF ART

100. Form and Expression. Miss Wyckoff. (3) MWF 1:00-4:30.
997. Master's Thesis. Miss Wyckoff. (1-7) Hours to be arranged.
CRF. 223. Section 1. Ceramics, Introductory. (3) Mr. Gernhardt. Section 1: MWF, 8:30-12:00.
CRF. 223. Section 2. Ceramics. Introductory. (3) Mr. Gernhardt. MWF, 1:00-4:30.
CRF. 323. Section 1. Ceramics Intermediate. (3) Mr. Gernhardt. MWF, 8:30-12:00.
CRF. 323. Section 2. Ceramics. Intermediate. (3) Mr. Gernhardt. MWF, 1:00-4:30.
CRF. 423. Section 1. Ceramics, Advanced. (3) MWF Mr. Gernhardt. 8:30-12:00.
CRF. 423. Section 2. Ceramics, Advanced. (3) Mr. Gernhardt. MWF, 1:00-4:30.
CRF. 620. Section 1. Crafts Research Problems. (1-7) Mr. Gernhardt. MWF, 8:30-12:00.
CRF. 620. Section 2. Crafts Research Problems. (1-7) Mr. Gernhardt. MWF, 1:00-4:30.
DEG. 131. Section 1. Basic Design 1. (3) Mr. Fricke. MWF, 1:00-4:30.
DEG. 131. Section 2. Basic Design 1. (3) Staff. MWF, 8:30-12:00.
DEG. 231. Section 1. Basic Design 2. (3) Mr. Fricke, MWF, 1:00-4:30.
DEG. 231. Section 2. Basic Design 2. (3) Staff. MWF, 8:30-12:00.
DEG. 331. Design, Intermediate (3) Mr. Fricke, MWF, 8:30-12:00.
DEG. 431. Design, Advanced. (3) Mr. Fricke. MWF, 8:30-12:00.
DEG. 630. Design Research Problems. (1-7) Mr. Fricke. MWF, 8:30-12:00.
DPR. 151. General Drawing. (3) Mr. Trento. MWF, 8:30-12:00.
DPR. 155. Section 1. Figure Drawing 1 (2) Mr. Cortese, MW, 8:30-12:00.
DPR. 155. Section 2. Figure Drawing 1. (2) Mr. Trento. MW, 1:00-4:30.
DPR. 251. Section 1. Printmaking, Introductory. (3) Mr. Cortese, MWF, 1:00-4:30.
DPR. 251. Section 2. Printmaking, Introductory. (5) Mr. Cortese. MTWThF, 1:00-4:30.
DPR. 255. Section 1. Figure Drawing 2. (2) Mr. Cortese, MW, 8:30-12:00.
DPR. 255. Section 2. Figure Drawing 2. (2) Mr. Trento, MW, 1:00-4:30.
DPR. 351. Section 1. Printmaking, Intermediate. (3) Mr. Cortese, MWF, 1:00-4:30.
DPR. 351. Section 2. Printmaking, Intermediate. (5) Mr. Cortese. MTWThF, 1:00-4:30.
DPR. 355. Drawing, Intermediate. (3) Mr. Trento. MW, 1:00-4:30.
DPR. 451. Section 1. Printmaking, Advanced. (3) Mr. Cortese, MWF, 1:00-4:30.
DPR. 451. Section 2. Printmaking, Advanced. (5) Mr. Cortese. MTWThF. 1:00-4:30.

mer Sessions Courses

Education Building

6-5541, ext. 2010, 2539, 2662

TUITION: Undergraduates $67 per credit hour
Graduates $65 per credit hour

HOUSING: Undergraduate women—Haven Hall—$17, $18 per week
Undergraduate men—DeliPlain Hall—$16, $17, $18 per week
Graduate men and women, conferences—Saint Mary's Complex—$18, $19, $20

BOARD: $15.75 per week for undergraduates

Complete information concerning the Summer Sessions will be in the Summer Sessions Bulletin available in April in the Summer Sessions office, 805 South Crouse Avenue.

PR. 455. Drawing, Advanced. (3) Mr. Cortese. MW, 8:30-12:00.
PR. 650. Section 1. Printmaking Research Problems. (3) Mr. Cortese, MWF, 1:00-4:30.
PR. 650. Section 2. Printmaking Research Problems. (5) Mr. Cortese. MTWThF, 1:00-4:30.
PR. 653. Drawing Research Problems. (1-7) Mr. Cortese. MW, 8:30-12:00.
TG. 387. Watercolor. (3) Miss Wyckoff. MWF, 1:00-4:30.
TG. 683. Landscape Painting Research Problems. (3) Miss Wyckoff. MWF, 1:00-4:30.
TG. 685. Mural Painting Research. (1-7) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

RT EDUCATION
217. Problems of the Teacher as an Artist. (3) Mr. Bakke. Hours to be arranged.
510. Special Problems in Art Education. (3) Mr. Bakke. 1:00-2:30.
518. Seminar in Art Education. (3) Staff. 9:00-10:30.
710. Problems of the Teacher as an Artist. (3) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

SCHOOL OF EDUCATION

DULT EDUCATION
411. Survey of Adult Education. (3) Mr. Liveright. 4:30-5:45.

RT EDUCATION
See School of Art, Art Education)

USINESS EDUCATION
See College of Business Adminstration)

ULTURAL FOUNDATIONS OF EDUCATION
301. Introduction to Philosophy of Education. (3) Mr. Dietl. 9:00-10:15.
331. Introduction to Sociology of Education (3) Staff. 10:30-11:45.
900. Seminar: Philosophy of Education. (3) Mr. Dietl. Hours to be arranged.
930. Seminar: Sociology of Education. (3) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

DUCATION
311. Human Growth and Development. (3) Mr. Harootunian. 10:30-11:45.
313. The American School. (3) Staff. 9:00-10:15.
412. (School of Education students only) Principles of Learning. (3) Mr. Harootunian. 12:00-1:15.
508. Urban Teaching Internship. (3) Mr. Churukian, Mr. Lesniak. 8:30-12:30.
556. Section 1. Statistical Methods in Educational Psychology. (3) Mr. Halperin. 9:00-10:15.
556. Section 2. Statistical Methods in Educational Psychology. (3) Mr. Meyer. 10:30-11:45.
602. The American School. (3) Staff. 9:00-10:15.
612. (School of Education students only) Principles of Learning. (3) Mr. Harootunian. 12:00-1:15.
613. (School of Education students only) Methods and Curriculum in Teaching English. Mr. Ash. 9:00-10:15.
635. History of Health and Physical Education. (3) Mr. Shaw. 7:30-8:45.
654. Aptitude Tests and Measurements. (3) Mr. Bligh. 9:00-10:15.
655. Section 1. Educational Tests and Measurements. (3) Mr. Payne. 9:00-10:15.
655. Section 2. Educational Tests and Measurements. (3) Mr. Dunn. 9:00-10:15.
655. Section 3. Educational Tests and Measurements. (3) Mr. Payne. 10:30-11:45.
655. Section 4. Educational Tests and Measurements. (3) Mr. Dunn. 10:30-11:45.
656. Statistical Methods in Education and Psychology II. (3) Mr. Meyer. 9:00-10:15.
676. Motor Behavior: Problems in Physical Education. (3) Miss Lancey. 9:00-10:15.
756. Statistical Methods in Education and Psychology III. (3) Mr. Halperin. 10:30-11:45.
760. Workshop in Education.
Section B: Workshop in Reading. (3) Miss Early, Mr. Sheldon. June 30-July 11. 9:00-3:30.
Section C: Workshop in Occupational Education: Child Care Services. (3) Mrs. Hilfinger. July 21-August8. 9:00-12:00.
Section D: Workshop in Education (Art). (3) Mr. Bakke. (In conjunction with Symposium in Creativity for the Preprimary child.) August 11-22. 9:00-12:00; 2:00-5:00.
Section E: Eleventh Annual Reading Conference. (1) Mr. Sheldon. June 23-June 27.
Section F: Seminar in Urban Teaching. (3) Mr. Churukian, Mr. Lesniak. 1:30-4:30.
Section G: Newspaper in the Classroom. (2) Mr. Price, July 6-18. 9:00-5:00.
Section H: Workshop in Family Finance Education. (4) Mr. Thompson. July 14-August 8. 9:00-12:00.
Section J: Workshop in Supervised Practice with Emotionally Disturbed Children. (6) Miss Beyer. 8:00-1:30. (By permission only).
Section K: Workshop in the Application of the Computer in Education and Educational Research. (3) Mr. Samph. June 9-June 27. 1:30-4:30.
Section R:Workshop in the Development of Programs and Interpersonal Competence in Educating Disturbed Children. (6) Dr. Knoblock. June 30-July 25. 7:30-9:30. (By permission only)
Section S:Workshop: Teaching Gymnastics to Girls and Women. (2) Mr. Romeo. June 30-July 11. Hours to be arranged.
Section T:Workshop: Judging Gymnastic Performance for Girls and Women. (1) Mrs. Merrifield. June 30-July 11. Hours to be arranged.
Section V: Workshop: The Language Movement-Effort-Shape Notation. (1) Miss Dell. July 14-July 19. 10:00-12:00; 2:00-4:00.
Section W: Workshop for Attendance Teachers. (4) Mr. Minnich. June 30-July 18. 9:00-11:45
777. Methods of Educational Research. (3) Mr. Samph. 9:00-10:15.
855. Seminar in Educational Measurements. (3) Mr. Bligh. 10:30-11:45.
899. Special Problems in Research. (1-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
990. Problems in Educational Research. (3) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
997. Thesis. (3-9) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
999. Dissertation. (3-9). Staff. Hours to be arranged.

EDUCATIONAL ADMINISTRATION
635. Supervision of Instruction. (3) Mr. Hough. 10:30-11:45.
646. Foundations of Public School Administration. (6) Staff. 9:00-11:45
647. School Principalship. (3) Staff. 9:00-10:15.
663. Administration and Supervision of School Health Services. (2-3) Mr. Cataldi. 7:30-8:45.

EDUCATIONAL PSYCHOLOGY
335. Psychology of Exceptional Children. (3) Mrs. Romano. 9:00-10:15.
365. Educational Psychology. (3) Mr. Seeman. 9:00-10:15.
565. Mental Hygiene in Education. (3) Mr. Sprafkin. 9:00-10:15.
635. Section 1. Psychology of Childhood. (3) Staff. 9:00-10:15.
635. Section 2. Psychology of Childhood. (3) Staff. 10:30-11:45.
636. Section 1. Psychology of the Adolescent. (3) Staff. 7:30-8:45.
636. Section 2. Psychology of the Adolescent. (3) Staff. 9:00-10:15.
663. Psychology of Elementary School Subjects. (3) Mr. Seeman. 10:30-11:45.
664. Psychology of Learning in Secondary Education. (3) Mr. Seeman. 10:30-11:45.
685. General Counseling Methods. (3) Mr. Eisenberg. 10:30-11:45.
686. Sources and Uses of Occupational and Educational Information. (2) Mr. Dipboye. June 30-July 18. 7:10-8:45.
687. Theory and Research in Vocational Development. (2) Mr. Dipboye. July 21-August 8. 7:10-8:45.
698. Dynamics of Individual Behavoir. (3) Mr. Anderson. 9:00-10:15.
735. Psychology of Disability. (3) Mr. English. 9:00-10:15.
785. Diagnostic Tests in Counseling. (3) Mr. Goldberg. 9:00-10:15.

ELEMENTARY EDUCATION
531. Mathematics for the Elementary School Teacher. (3) Staff. 7:30-8:45.
533. Teaching Geometry in Elementary School. (3) Mr. Cromie. 7:30-8:45.
534. Teaching Elementary School Mathematics. (3) Mr. Glennon. June 30-July 18. 9:00-11:45.
555. Methods and Materials in Early Childhood Education. (3) Staff. 9:00-10:15.
556. Methods and Materials in the Social Studies in Elementary Schools. (3) Staff. 7:30-8:45.
611. Elementary School Curriculum. (3) Mr. Wheeler. 10:30-11:45.
630. Research Seminar in Learning and Teaching Arithmetic. (3) Mr. Glennon. Hours to be arranged.

HIGHER EDUCATION
605. The American College and University. (3) Mr. Splete. Hours to be arranged.
722. Seminar in Administration of Student Personnel Services. (3) Miss Dewey. 10:30-11:45.
899. Special problems in the Administration of Colleges and Universities.
Section 1: Simulating a Constitutional Convention of the Academic Community—Roles and Value Premises of Trustees, Administrators, Faculty and Students in University Policy and Decision Making. (3) Mr. Troyer. June 30-July 18. 7:30-10:00.
Section 2. Current and Developing Issues in the Field of Student Personnel Administration. (2) Miss Dewey. July 21-August 1, 7:30-10:00.

HOME ECONOMICS EDUCATION
(See College of Home Economics)

INSTRUCTIONAL TECHNOLOGY
521. Foundations of Instructional Technology. (3) Mr. Knirk. 9:00-10:15.
522. Still Photography in Education. (3) Mr. Kerns. 8:00-10:00. Laboratory fee of $25 payable to instructor at first class.
621. Research in Instructional Technology 1. (3) Mr. Katzer. 10:30-11:45.
623. Message Design for Instructional Systems. (3) Mr. Tyo. 12:00-1:15.
627. Motion Pictures 1. (3) Mr. McConkey. 10:30-11:45.
720. Script Writing. (3) Mr. McConkey. 9:00-10:15.
723. Programmed Instruction. (3) Mr. Knirk. 7:30-845.
826. Motion Picture Production 2. (3) Mr. Tyo. 1:30-2:45.

MUSIC EDUCATION
(See School of Music)

NURSING EDUCATION
(See School of Nursing)

PHYSICAL EDUCATION AND RECREATION
(See College of Liberal Arts)

READING EDUCATION
611. Teaching of Reading. (3) Mr. Lashinger. 7:30-845.
627. Reading and Study in the Secondary School. (3) Mr. Ash. 10:30-11:45.
644. Basic Reading Remediation. (3) Mr. Lashinger. 9:00-10:15.
645. Advanced Reading Remediation. (3) Mr. Briggs. 7:30-8:45.
747. Reading Clinic, Section 1. (6) Mr. Ward, Mr. Braam. Prerequisite: Read Ed. 645 and permission of instructor. 9:00-4:15.
747. Section 2. Reading Clinic. (3) Mr. Briggs. 9:00-11:45.

SCIENCE EDUCATION
Sci. 504. Science for the Elementary School Teacher. (3) Mr. Caldwell. 12:00-1:15.
Sci. 701. Comprehensive Paper. (3) Mr. Collette. Hours to be arranged.
SCE. 533. Methods and Materials in Teaching Science in the Elementary School. (3) Mr. Caldwell. 9:00-10:15.
SCE. 718. Curriculum Problems in Science Education. (3) Staff. 1:30-2:45.
SCE. 735. Methods and Materials in Teaching Science in Secondary Schools. (3) Mr. Schaff. 7:30-8:45.
SCE. 737. Methods and Materials in Teaching Physical Sciences: Chemistry (CBAC and CHEM).

SECONDARY EDUCATION
543. Advanced Theory of Coaching Basketball. (Men) (3) Mr. Danforth. 7:30-8:45.
545. Advanced Theory of Coaching Football. (Men). Mr. Dailey. 9:00-10:15.
623. Methods and Materials in Teaching Foreign Languages. (French 605, Spanish 605) (3) Mr. Soffietti. 10:30-11:45.
625. Methods and Materials in Teaching Social Studies. (3) Mr. Madden. 7:30-8:45.
670. Section A: Workshop in Teaching of Shorthand and Office Practice. (3) Mr. Feller. June 30-July 18. 9:00-12:00.
Section B: Workshop in Teaching Typing. (3) Miss Hall. 7:30-8:45.
Section F: Family Finance Workshop. (4) Mr. Nolan. July 14-August 8. 9:00-12:00.
685. Principles and Practices of Pupil Personnel Work. (3) Mr. Goldberg. 10:30-11:45.
783. Organization and Administration of Guidance Programs. (2-3) Mr. Eisenberg. 9:00-10:15.
784. Theory and Procedure of Group Guidance. (3) Mr. Dipboye. 9:00-10:15.

DIVISION OF SPECIAL EDUCATION AND REHABILITATION

AUDIOLOGY AND SPEECH PATHOLOGY
550. Clinical Methods and Practice in Speech and Hearing Therapy. (3-9) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
561. Basic Clinical Audiology. (3) Mr. Nodar. 9:00-10:15.
604. Introduction to Speech and Hearing Disorders. (3) Mr. Burkowsky. 9:00-10:15.
605. Articulation and Voice Disorders. (3) Staff. 7:30-8:45.
625. Stuttering and Allied Disorders. (3) Mr. Webster. 7:30-8:45.
671. Nature and Needs of the Deaf. (3) Mr. Lowell. July 28-August 8. 12:30-4:30.
750. Seminar in Speech Pathology. (3) Staff. 10:30-11:45.
799. Independent Research in Speech Science. (3-9) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
997. Master's Thesis. (3-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
998. Individual Study Program. (3-9) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
999. Doctoral Dissertation. (3-18) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

SPECIAL EDUCATION
545. Introduction to Education of Emotionally Distrubed Children. (3) Miss Hargate. 10:30-11:45.
561. Nature and Needs of Mentally Retarded Children. (3) Mr. Winschel. 9:00-10:15.
562. Manual Skills and Analysis of Job Areas. (3) Mr. Mead. 7:30-8:45.
563. Curriculum for Children with Retarded Mental Development. (3) Miss Lawrence. 10:30-11:45.
564. Education of Children with Retarded Mental Development (Theory). (3) Staff. 10:30-11:45. (Pre requisite Spec. Ed. 561 or equivalent.)
566. Education of Children with Retarded Mental Development (Practice). (3) Mr. Niederhuber. 9:00-11:45. (By permission only).
605. Education of Children with Central Nervous System Disorders. (3) Mrs. Woolfolk. June 30-July 11. 1:00-4:00. Lab hours to be arranged. (By permission only).
606. Education for Slow Learners and Educationally Disadvantaged. (3) Dr. Winschel. 10:30-11:45.
636. Education of Multiple Handicapped Children. (3) Mr. Curtis, Mr. Dolon. June 30-July 18. 1:00-4:00. Lab hours to be arranged. (By permission only.)
715. Seminar: Administration, Supervision, and Coordination of Special Education Programs. (3) Mr. Sage. June 30-July 11. 9:30-3:30. Advance permission and registration required.
716. Seminar: Legal, Financial and Organizational Structure of Special Education Programs. (3) Mr. Sage. July 14-July 25. 9:00-3:00.
VOR 601. Nature of Vocational Rehabilitation. (3) Mr. Feinberg. 10:30-11:45.

SPEECH EDUCATION
365. Special Problems in Speech Education. (3) Mr. Ried. 10:30-11:45.
765. Models of Speech Behavoir. (3) Mr. Ried. 9:00-10:15.

COLLEGE OF HOME ECONOMICS

APPLIED ARTS
526. Cultural Aspects of Clothing. (3) Miss Suydam. 9:00-10:15.
550. Problems in Applied Arts. (3) Miss Suydam. 12:00-1:15.

FAMILY ECONOMICS
281. Economic Problems of the Family; Personal Family Management (3) Mr. Langford. 7:30-8:45.
675. Workshop in Family Finance. (4) Mr. Langford, Mr. Nolan. July 14-August 8. 9:00-4:00.

FAMILY RELATIONS AND CHILD DEVELOPMENT
343. Marriage and Family Relations. (3) Mr. Bodine. 12:00-1:15.
532. Creative Activities for Young Children. (3) Miss Robinson. June 30-July 18. 9:00-12:00.
587. Critical Incidents in Family Development. (3) Mr. Bodine. 10:30-11:45.
588. Family and Community Health. (3) Miss Brouillette. July 21-August 8. 1:00-4:00.

HOME ECONOMICS AND EDUCATION
Edu. 760 760. Section C. Occupational Education: Child Care Services (3) Mrs. Hilfinger. Julu 21-August 8. 9:00-12:00.

NUTRITION AND FOOD SCIENCE
225. Nutrition and Dietetics. (3) Mrs. Yorks. 10:30-11:45.
525. Workshop: Problems in Nutrition and Food Science. (3) Mrs. Turkki. June 30-July 18. 9:00-12:00.
645. Nutrition Problems in Disease. (3) Miss Thiele. June 16-June 27. 9:00-4:00.

SCHOOL OF JOURNALISM

ADVERTISING
306. Advertising Principles and Problems (3) Mr. Vance. 9:00-10:15.

COMMUNICATIONS
605. Research Methods. (3) Mr. Ehling. 10:30-11:45.
755. Communications Theory. (3) Mr. Ehling. 12:00-1:15.
997. Thesis. (1-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

MAGAZINE
506. Magazine Article Writing. (3) Mr. Taylor. 10:30-11:45.

NEWSPAPER
205. News Writing. (3) Mr. Vance. 7:30-8:45.
508. Newspaper Editing. (3) Mr. Taylor. 9:00-10:15.

PHOTOGRAPHY
Laboratory fee for photography courses: $25, payable at first class.
*502. Principles of Photography. (3) Mr. Kerns. 10:00-12:00.
*ITE. 522. Still Photography in Education. (3) Mr. Kerns. 8:00-10:00.
*Two 4 hour labs per week to be arranged.

Brass Instruments (BRI)
110, 210, 310, 410, 510. Trumpet Mr. Babcock.
120, 220, 320, 420, 520. French Horn. Mr. Babcock.
130, 230, 330, 430, 530. Baritone. Mr. Babcock.
140, 240, 340, 440, 540. Tromb . Mr. Babcock.
150, 250, 350, 450, 550. Tuba. Mr. ›cock.

Percussion (PRC)
110, 210, 310, 410, 510. Percussion. ‹ f.

Ensemble (ENV)
10. University Chorus. (0) Mr. Johnson. Thursday, 7:00-9:15 p.m.
10. University Band. (0) Mr. Babcock. Tuesday, 7:00-9:00 p.m.

Keyboard Instruments (KBI)
130, 230, 330, 430, 530. Harpsichord. Mr. Pappastravrou.
110, 120, 130, 140, 150, 160, 170. Organ. Mr. Headlee, Mr. Johnson.
120, 220, 320, 420, 520, 620, 720. Piano. Mr. Pappastravrou.

String Instruments (STI)
110, 210, 310, 410, 510. Violin. Staff.
120, 220, 320, 420, 520. Viola. Staff.
130, 230, 330, 430, 530. Cello. Staff.
140, 240, 340, 440, 540. String Bass. Staff.

Voice (VOC)
110, 210, 310, 410, 510. Voice. Staff.

Woodwinds (WWI)
110, 210, 310, 410, 510. Flute. Mr. Soyars.
120, 220, 320, 420, 520. Recorder. Staff.
130, 230, 330, 430, 530. Oboe. Mr. Soyars.
140, 240, 340, 440, 540. Clarinet. Mr. Soyars.
150, 250, 350, 450, 550. Saxophone. Mr. Soyars.
160, 260, 360, 460, 560. Bassoon. Mr. Soyars.

Music Education (MUE)
500. Workshop in Music Education: Choral. (1) Mrs. Hosmer. July 7-July 11. Hours to be arranged.
510. Workshop in Band: Organization and Techniques for Band Directors. (1) Mr. Babcock. July 21-July 25. Hours to be arranged.
615. Introduction to Graduate Study. (2) Mr. Soyars. Hours to be arranged.
710. Historical Research in Music Education. (2) Mr. Soyars. Hours to be arranged.
715. Administration and Supervision in Music Education. (3) Miss Curtis. 9:00-10:15.

Music Literature (MUL)
500. Workshop in Music Literature: The Recorder. (1) Miss Bixler. July 14-July 18. Hours to be arranged.
525. Survey of Keyboard Literature. (2) Mr. Pappastavrou. Hours to be arranged.
560. Workshop in Church Music: Organ. (1) Mr. Johnson. July 28-August 1. Hours to be arranged.
588. Asian Musical Cultures. (3) Miss Curtiss. 10:30-12:00.

Music Theory
Music theory courses are offered as individual instruction or in seminar. Placement tests may be required. Laboratory classes for music education are listed under Music Education.

Music Theory Analysis (MTA)
525. Form and Analysis. (2) Mr. George. Hours to be arranged.
526. Form and Analysis. (2) Mr. George. Hours to be arranged.
620. Advanced Analysis. (2) Mr. George. Hours to be arranged.

Music Theory Concepts (MTC)
625. Evolution of Harmony. (2) Mr. George. Hours to be arranged.
626. Evolution of Harmony. (2) Mr. George. Hours to be arranged.

Music Theory Performing (MTP)
127. Sight Singing and Dictation I. (1) Mr. George. Hours to be arranged. (Either 127 or 128 may be taken in one semester).
128. Sight Singing and Dictation I. (1) Mr. George. Hours to be arranged. (Either 127 or 128 may be taken in one semester).
227. Sight Singing and Dictation II. (1) Mr. George. Hours to be arranged.
228. Sight Singing and Dictation II. (1) Mr. George. Hours to be arranged.
316. Basic Conducting in Music Education. (1) Mr. Babcock. Hours to be arranged.
317. Choral Conducting in Music Education. (1) Mr. Hakanson. Hours to be arranged.
318. Instrumental Conducting in Music Education. (1) Mr. Babcock. Hours to be arranged.
545. General Conducting. (2) Mr. Babcock. Hours to be arranged.
546. General Conducting. (2) Mr. Babcock. Hours to be arranged.
547. Choral Conducting. (2) Mr. Hakanson. Hours to be arranged.
548. Instrumental Conducting. (2) Mr. Babcock. Hours to be arranged.
640. Advanced Conducting. (2) Mr. Babcock. Hours to be arranged.

Music Theory Writing (MTW)
125. (Freshmen). Theory I. (3-4) Mr. George. Hours to be arranged. (Either 125 or 126 may be taken in one semester).
126. (Freshmen). Theory I. (3-4) Mr. George. Hours to be arranged. (Either 125 or 126 may be taken in one semester).
157. Composition I. (1) Mr. George. Hours to be arranged.
158. Composition I. (1) Mr. George. Hours to be arranged.
225. (Sophomore). Theory II. (3-4) Mr. George. Hours to be arranged. (Either 225 or 226 may be taken in one semester).
226. (Sophomore). Theory II. (3-4) Mr. George. Hours to be arranged. (Either 225 or 226 may be taken in one semester).
257. Composition II. (1) Mr. George. Hours to be arranged.
258. Composition II. (1). Mr. George Hours to be arranged.
325. Junior Theory. (2) Mr. George. Hours to be arranged.
326. Junior Theory. (2) Mr. George. Hours to be arranged.
357. Composition III. (1-2) Mr. George. hours to be arranged.
358. Composition III. (1-2) Mr. George. Hours to be arranged.
417. Instrumentation in Music Education. (2) Mr. Soyars. Hours to be arranged.
457. Composition IV. (1-2) Mr. George. Hours to be arranged.
458. Composition IV. (1-2) Mr. George. Hours to be arranged.
525. Modal Counterpoint. (2) Mr. George. Hours to be arranged.
526. Fugue. (2) Mr. George. Hours to be arranged.
528. Survey of Basic Theory. (2) Mr. George. Hours to be arranged. (Credit not applicable to a graduate degree).
535. Orchestration. (2) Mr. George. Hours to be arranged.
536. Orchestration. (2) Mr. George. Hours to be arranged.
538. Band Arranging. (2) Mr. Soyars. Hours to be arranged.
550. Composition. (1) Mr. George. Hours to be arranged.
635. Advanced Orchestration. (2) Mr. George. Hours to be arranged.
636. Advanced Orchestration. (2) Mr. George. Hours to be arranged.
655. Composition. (1-2) Mr. George. Hours to be arranged.
656. Composition. (1-2) Mr. George. Hours to be arranged.
750. Composition. (1-2) Mr. George. Hours to be arranged.

SCHOOL OF NURSING

203. Foundations of Nursing III. (1) Mrs. Landau. MWF, 3:00-4:00.

311. Maternity Nursing. (3) Staff. Lecture, 1:00-3:00, Laboratory, 8:00-12:00.

312. Pediatric Nursing. (3) Miss Lewton. Lecture, 1:00-3:00, Laboratory, 8:00-12:00.

SPEECH AND DRAMATIC ART

AUDIOLOGY AND SPEECH PATHOLOGY
(See Division of Special Education and Rehabilitation)

DRAMA
690. Seminar in Special Topics: Play Analysis and Production Planning for School Theater. (3) Mr. Krempel. 10:30-11:45.

INTERPRETATION
105. Improvement of Voice and Speech. (3) Mr. Irwin. 10:30-11:45.
538. Introduction of Narrative and Dramatic Literature. (3) Mr. Irwin. 9:00-10:15.

PUBLIC ADDRESS
215. Public Speaking. (3) Mr. McKee. 9:00-10:15.
535. Interviewing. (3) Mr. McKee. 10:30-11:45.
660. Selective Reading in Public Address. (1) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

SPEECH EDUCATION
365. Special Problems in Speech Education. (3) Mr. Ried. 10:30-11:45.
765. Models of Speech Behavior. (3) Mr. Ried. 9:00-10:15.

TELEVISION-RADIO
235. Broadcasting and Public Interest. (3) Staff. 7:30-8:45.
245. Television-Radio Writing and Announcing. (3) Mr. Arnoff. 9:00-10:15.
536. International Broadcasting. (3) Staff. 7:30-8:45.
685. Seminar in Television Advertising. (3) Mr. Burton. 9:00-10:15.

Third Six-Week Session
July 21—August 29

COLLEGE OF BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION

ACCOUNTING
252. Elementary Accounting. (3) Mr. Germain. 7:30-8:45.
767. Cost Accounting. (3) Staff. 10:30-11:45.

BUSINESS EDUCATION
Sec. Ed. 670. Section F. Family Finance Workshop. (4) Mr. Nolan. July 14-August 8.

FINANCE
356. Corporation Finance. (3) Mr. Young. 12:00-1:15.
601. Section 1. Basic Finance. (3) Mr. Henry. 7:30-8:45.
601. Section 2. (Army only) Basic Finance. (3) Mr. Henry. August 4-September 5. 10:30-12:15.
Bus. Adm. 703. Financial Controls in Business. (3) Mr. Young. 1:30-2:45.

LAW AND PUBLIC POLICY
557. The Law of Trade. (3) Mr. Collins. 9:00-10:15.
707. Social Influences in Business Decisions. (3) Mr. Collins. 10:30-11:45.

MARKETING AND TRANSPORTATION
355. Marketing Principles, Methods and Problems. (3) Mr. Moller. 9:00-10:15.
356. Distribution Management. (3) Mr. Moller. 7:30-8:45.
457. Marketing Research. (3) Mr. Saunders. 10:30-11:45.
601. (Army only) Basic Marketing. (3) Mr. Saunders. 8:30-10:15.

ORGANIZATION AND MANAGEMENT
Bus. Adm. 246. Management Process. (3) Mr. Kondylis. 7:30-8:45.
Bus. Adm. 345. Human Problems in Business (3) Mr. Gemmill. 10:30-11:45.
Bus. Adm. 701. Management Process. (3) Mr. Hubner. 9:00-10:15.
Bus. Adm. 745. Human Relations in Business. Mr. Gemmill. 9:00-10:15.
Bus. Adm. 999. Dissertation. Staff. Hours to be arranged.

PRODUCTION AND PERSONNEL
P & IR. 755. Problems in Personnel Administration. (3) Mr. Hubner. 9:00-10:15.
PRM. 365. Production Management. (3) Mr. Kondylis. 9:00-10:15.
PRM. 601. Basic Production. (3) Mr. Swanson. 10:30-11:45.
PRM. 765. Factory Management. (3) Mr. Swanson. 12:00-1:15.

QUANTITATIVE METHODS
Bus. Stat. 262. Inference Theory. (3) Mr. Chottiner. 10:30-11:45.
Bus. Stat. 601. Basic Statistics. (3) Mr. Chottiner. 9:00-10:15.
MDS. 558. Advanced Problems in Management Information Systems. (3) Mr. di Roccaferrera. 10:30-11:45.
QUM. 559. Seminar in Quantitative Methods. (3) Mr. di Roccaferrera. 9:00-10:15.

COLLEGE OF LIBERAL ARTS

CHEMISTRY
116. General Chemistry. (4) Staff. Lecture, MTWThf, 9:00-10:15. Laboratory, MWTh, 1:00-4:00.
285. Organic Chemistry. (3) Mr. Matthews. 10:30-11:45.
286. Organic Chemistry. (2) Staff. 1:00-5:00.
356. Physical Chemistry Lecture. (3) Mr. Sage. 9:00-10:15.
357. Physical Chemistry Laboratory. (1) Staff. MWTh, 1:00-4:00.
400. Minor Investigations. (1-4) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
434. Instrumental Analysis. (2) Mr. Macero. MTWTh, 10:30-11:45.
435. Section 1. Instrumental Analys Laboratory. (1) Staff. MWTh, 1:00-4:00.
435. Section 2. Instrumental Analysis Laboratory. (2) Staff. MTWThF, 1:00-4:00.
997. Thesis. (1-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
999. Dissertation. (1-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

ECONOMICS
205. Structure of American Economy. (3) Mr. Price. 9:00-10:15.
206. Operation of American Economy. (3) Mr. Maniatis. 10:30-11:45.
405. National Income Analysis. (3) Mr. Stevens. 9:00-10:15.
406. Economic Analysis and Business Policy. (3) Mr. Price. 10:30-11:45.
425. Money, Banking and Finance. (3) Mr. Stevens. 10:30-11:45.
445. Industrial Organization and Policy. (3) Mr. Maniatis. 12:00-1:15.
605. National Income Analysis. (3) Mr. Stevens. 9:00-10:15.
606. Economic Analysis and Business Policy. (3) Mr. Price. 10:30-11:45.
625. Money, Banking and Finance. (3) Mr. Stevens. 10:30-11:45.
645. Industrial Organization and Policy (3) Mr. Maniatis. 12:00-1:15.
700. Individual Reading Program. (3) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
997. Thesis. (3-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
999. Dissertation. (3-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

ENGLISH
292. American Literture and Culture. (3) Mrs. Herschel. 12:00-1:15.

GEOGRAPHY
511. United States. (3) Staff. 10:30-11:45.
561. Economic Geography. (3) Staff. 9:00-10:15.

HISTORY
256. American History Since 1865. (3) Staff. 12:00-1:15.

MATHEMATICS
16. College Algebra. (3) Staff. 9:00-10:15.
117. Introduction to Mathematics. (3) Staff. 9:00-10:15.
118. Section 2. Introduction to Mathematics 2. (3) Staff. 9:00-10:15.
118. Section 3. Introduction to Mathematics 2. (3) Staff. 12:00-1:15.
125. Elementary Analytic Geometry. (3) Staff. 9:00-10:15.
218. Calculus with Analytic Geometry 2. (3) Staff. 10:30-11:45.
226. Differential Calculus. (3) Staff. 10:30-11:45.
227. Integral Calculus. (3) Staff. 9:00-10:15.
296. Calculus 2. (3) Staff. 10:30-11:45.
328. Topics in Calculus. (3) Staff. 10:30-11:45.
397. Calculus 3. (3) Staff. 10:30-11:45.
606. Fundamentals of Analysis. (3) Staff. 10:30-11:45.
636. Modern Algebra. (3) Staff. 9:00-10:15.
790. Intermediate Seminar. (3) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
999. Dissertation in Progress. (3) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

PHYSICS
104. General Physics. (4) Staff. 8:00-10:00. Laboratory, MW, 1:00-3:00.
999. Dissertation. (3) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

POLITICAL SCIENCE
203. Comparative Political Institutions. (3) Mr. Kean. 12:00-1:15.

SOCIOLOGY
301. Human Group Behavior. (3) Mr. Fitch. Hours to be arranged.

Fourth Session
August 11-September 5.

All classes will meet six days a week, Monday through Saturday, unless other days are listed. All classes will meet for the entire session unless other dates are listed. Workshops or three-week courses scheduled during this session will not meet on Saturday.

SCHOOL OF ART

DPR 151. General Drawing. (3) Mr. Blaine. MWF, 8:30-12:00.
DEG 231. Basic Design 2. (3) Mr. Blaine, MWF, 1:00-4:30.
DEG 331. Design, Intermediate. (3) Mr. Blaine. MWF, 1:00-4:30.
DEG 431. Design, Advanced. (3) Mr. Blaine. MWF, 1:00-4:30.
DEG 630. Design Research Problems. (1-7) Mr. Blaine. MWF, hours to be arranged.

ART EDUCATION
EDU 760. Workshop in Art Education in Conjunction with Symposium for the Preprimary child. (3) Mr. Bakke. August 11-22. 9:00-12:00; 2:00-5:00.
217. Problems of Teacher as Artist. (3) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
710. Problems of Teacher as Artist. (3) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

SCHOOL OF EDUCATION

EDUCATION
760. Section D. Workshop in Education (Art). (In conjunction with Symposium on Creative Education for Preprimary Children). (3) Staff. August 11-22. 9:00-12:00; 1:00-4:00.

INSTRUCTIONAL TECHNOLOGY
775. Workshop in Educational Television. (3) Mr. Barnhill, Mr. Treble. August 11-22. 9:00-11:30; 1:00-5:00.

SCHOOL OF JOURNALISM

COMMUNICATIONS
997. Thesis. (1-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
999. Dissertation. (1-15) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

NEWSPAPER
School Press Institute. (High School Students) Mr. Rawlings. August 10-22.

COLLEGE OF LIBERAL ARTS

ANTHROPOLOGY
330. Human Evolution. (3) Mr. Bowles. 11:30-1:10.
788. People of Japan. (3) Mr. Bowles. 9:30-11:10.
997. Thesis. (3) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
999. Dissertation. (3) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

BACTERIOLOGY AND BOTANY
Bacteriology
600. Special Problems in Bacteriology. (1-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
997. Thesis. (1-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
999. Dissertation. (1-18) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

Botany
530. Special Problems in Botany. (1-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
997. Thesis. (1-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
999. Dissertation. (1-18) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

Genetics
650. Special Problems in Genetics. (1-6). Staff. Hours to be arranged.
997. Thesis. (1-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
999. Dissertation. (1-18) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

MICROBIOLOGY
780. Special Problems in Microbiology. (1-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
997. Thesis. (1-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
999. Dissertation. (1-18) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

ECONOMICS
205. Structure of American Economy. (3) Staff. 9:30-11:10.
206. Operation of American Economy. (3) Staff. 11:30-1:10.

ENGLISH
256. Major Figures in English Literature. (3) Mr. Theiner. 9:30-11:10.
296. American Literature and Culture. (3) Mr. Dullea. 11:30-1:10.
566. Milton. (3) Mr. Bryant. 9:30-11:10.
590. Special Problems in American Literature: Southern Renaissance. (3) Mr. Bryant. 11:30-1:10.
630. Medieval Thought and Literature. (3) Mr. Theiner. 11:30-1:10.
997. Thesis. (3-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
999. Dissertation. (3-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

FINE ARTS
208. Arts and Ideas. (3) Mr. Zimmerman 9:30-11:10.
347. Modern Art. (3) Mr. Zimmerman. 11:30-1:10.

GEOLOGY
700. Special Problems in Geology. (1-4) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
997. Thesis. (1-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
999. Dissertation. (1-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

COLLEGE OF LAW

The College of Law presents an eight-week program for first, second and third year students. Students may elect courses for up to six semester hours of credit. There are no courses available for beginning law students. Courses which give two hours of credit meet for two 100-minute periods per week.

Date: June 16-August 8.
Registration: June 16 and 17.
Tuition and Fees: $65 per credit hour.
Examinations: August 6, 7, 8.
Classes: Monday through Friday, beginning June 16.
Admission: Certificate that applicant is in good standing in a law school approved by the American Bar Association.
For further information write: Dean Robert W. Miller, College of Law, Ernest I. White Hall, Syracuse, New York 13210.0

COLLEGE OF LIBERAL ARTS

ANTHROPOLOGY

505. Cultural Patterns of India. (3) Mr. Islam. 9:00-10:15.
507. Peoples and Cultures of Southeast Asia. (3) Mr. Hart. 10:30-11:45.
564. Political Institutes in Primitive Societies. (3) Mr. Islam. 10:30-11:45.
566. Section 1. Introduction to Cultural Anthropology. (3). Mr. Hart. 9:00-10:15.

DEPARTMENT OF BACTERIOLOGY AND BOTANY

BACTERIOLOGY

600. Special Problems in Bacteriology. (1-6). Staff. Hours to be arranged.
997. Thesis. (1-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
999. Dissertation. (1-18) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

BOTANY

530. Special Problems in Botany. (1-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
997. Thesis. (1-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
999. Dissertation. (1-18) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

GENETICS

552. Heredity and Evolution. (3) Staff. 9:00-10:15.
650. Special Problems in Genetics. (1-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
997. Thesis. (1-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
999. Dissertation. (1-18) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

MICROBIOLOGY

780. Special Problems in Microbiology. (1-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
997. Thesis. (1-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
999. Dissertation. (1-18) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

CLASSICS

105. English Words Derived from Latin. (3) Mr. Graeber. 10:30-11:45.
511. Greek Drama in English Translation. (3) Mr. Graeber. 9:00-10:15.
521. Mythology. (3) Mr. MacLaren. 10:30-11:45.

ECONOMICS

205. Section 2. Structure of the American Economy. (3) Mr. Sedgwick. 7:30-8:45.
416. Labor Legislation and Collective Bargaining (3) Mr. Sedgwick. 9:00-10:15.
616. Labor Legislation and Collective Bargaining. (3) Mr. Sedgwick. 9:00-10:15.
700. Section 2. Individual Reading Program. (3) Mr. Sufrin. 10:30-11:45.
997. Thesis. (3-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
999. Dissertation. (3-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

ENGLISH

101. Basic Freshman English. (3) Mr. Puetzer. 1:30-2:45.
102. Basic Freshman English. (3) Miss Toomey. 9:00-10:15.
103. Advanced Freshman English. (3) Mr. Roesch. 10:30-11:45. (By permission only).
255. Major Figures in English Literature. (3) Mr. Gates. 12:00-1:15.
256. Major Figures in English Literature. (3) Mr. Diehl. 10:30-11:45.
295. American Literature and Culture. (3) Mr. Parsons. 10:30-11:45.
296. American Literature and Culture. (3) Mr. Roesch. 9:00-10:15.
315. Intermediate Composition. (3) Mr. Foster. 7:30-8:45.
386. American Prose Fiction: 1914-1969. (3) Mr. Owen. 10:30-11:45.
536. The Romantic Period. (3) Mr. Brune. 10:30-11:45.
565. Chaucer. (3) Mr. Gates. 1:30-2:45.
567. Significant Modern Writings: Yeats and Joyce. (3) Mr. Price. 9:00-10:15.
657. British Novels: 1850-1900. (3) Mr. Diehl. 12:00-1:15.
690. Greater American Writers. (3) Mr. Parsons. 9:00-10:15.
827. Studies in Contemporary Literature. (3) Mr. Price. 12:00-1:15.
896. Special Studies in American Literature: Mailer. (3) Mr. Owen. 9:00-10:15.
997. Thesis in Progress. (3-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
999. Dissertation in Progress. (3-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

FINE ARTS

205. Arts and Ideas. (3) Mr. Zimmerman. 9:00-10:15.
265. Understanding Music. (3) Mr. Macomber. 10:30-11:45.
385. Romantic Period in Music. (3) Mr. Macomber. 9:00-10:15.
417. Baroque Art. (3) Mr. Zimmerman. 10:30-11:45.
570. Studies in Form and Style: Problems in Contemporary Architecture. (3) Staff. 10:30-11:45.
Arch. 293. An Introduction to Architecture. (3) Mr. Gotch. Hours to be arranged.

GENERAL EDUCATION

105. Section 1. Improvement of Learning. (2) Staff. 7:30-8:45.
105. Section 2. Improvement of Learning. (2) Staff. 9:00-10:15.

GEOGRAPHY

503. World Geography. (3) Mr. deLaubenfels. 9:00-10:15.
504. Physical Geography. (3) Mr. deLaubenfels. 10:30-11:45.
510. Research on Anglo-America. (1-3) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
511. United States. (3) Mr. Thompson. 12:00-1:15.
513. New York State. (3) Mr. Thompson. 10:30-11:45.
520. Research on Latin America. (1-3) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
530. Research on Africa. (1-3) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
536. Geography of East Africa. (3) Mr. Newman. 7:30-8:45.
539. Research on Europe. (1-3) Staff. Hours to be Arranged.
540. Research on Southern and Eastern Africa. (1-3) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
544. South Asia. (3) Mr. Wilbanks. 9:00-10:115.
549. Research on Soviet Union. (1-3) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
550. Research in Physical Geography. (1-3) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
560. Reserach in Economic Geography. (1-3) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
561. Introduction to Economic Geography. (3) Mr. Wilbanks. 7:30-8:45.
570. Research in Cultural Geography. (3) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
580. Research in Geographic Techniques. (1-3) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
999. Thesis (1-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
999. Dissertation. (1-30) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

GEOLOGY

101. General Geology. (3) Mr. Prucha. Lecture, MTWTh, 9:00-10:15. Laboratory, MW, 1:30-4:15.
102. General Geology. (3) Mr. Prucha. Lecture, MTWTh, 10:30-11:45. Laboratory, TTh, 1:30-4:15.
700. Special Problems in Geology. (1-4) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
997. Thesis. (1-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
999. Dissertation. (1-6). Staff. Hours to be arranged.
Sci. 621. Physical Geology. (3) Mr. Prucha. Lecture, MTWTh, 9:00-10:15; Laboratory, MW, 1:30-4:15.
Sci. 623. Historical Geology. (3) Mr. Prucha. Lecture, MTWTh, 10:30-11:45; Laboratory, TTh, 1:30-4:15.

GERMAN

101. Beginning German. (3) Staff. June 30-July 19. 9:00-11:45.
102. Beginning German. (3) Staff. July 21-August 8. 9:00-11:45.
201. Second Year German. (3) Staff. June 30-July 18. 9:00-11:45.
202. Second Year German. (3) Staff. July 21-August 8. 9:00-11:45.
997. Thesis. (3-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
998. Individual Study Program. (3-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
999. Dissertation. (3-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

HISTORY

205. Development of Western Civilization (to 1600) (3) Mr. Powell. 12:00-1:15.
206. Development of Western Civilization (Since 1600) (3) Mr. Ullman. 9:00-10:15.
255. American History to 1865. (3) Mr. Graybar. 9:00-10:15.
256. American History Since 1865. (3) Mr. Morgner. 12:00-1:15.
338. Social and Cultural History of the United States. (3) Mr. Mabry. 1:30-2:45.
405. Europe in the Nineteenth Century. (3) Mr. Lowrie. 12:00-1:15.
406. Europe in the Nineteenth Century. (3) Mr. Lowrie. 3:00-4:15.
455. History of Africa. (3) Mr. Posnanski. 9:00-10:15.
505. Era of Sectionalism, 1820-1861. (3) Mrs. George. 9:00-10:15.
506. Civil War, Reconstruction, and the New Nation (3) Mrs. George. 10:30-11:45.
507. Development of United States, 1890-1919. (3) Mr. Graybar. 1:30-2:45.
582. Latin America Since 1825 (3) Mr. Mabry. 10:30-11:45.
715. Readings and Research in American History. (3) Mr. Morgner. 9:00-10:15.
735. Readings and Research in European History. (3) Mr. Ullman. 1:30-2:45.
816. Seminar in Twentieth Century America. (3) Mr. Morgner. 9:00-10:15.
843. Seminar in Medieval European History. (3) Mr. Powell. 3:00-4:15.
881. Seminar in the History of Eastern Africa. (3) Mr. Posnanski. 12:00-1:15.
997. Thesis. (3-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
999. Dissertation. (3-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

PHILOSOPHY

105. Problems of Knowledge. (3) Mr. Edgar. 10:30-11:45.
106. Section 2. Problems of Conduct. (3) Mr. Peterfreund. 9:00-10:15.
351. Logic. (3) Mr. Edgar. 9:00-10:15.
517. American Philosophy. (3) Mr. Peterfreund. 10:30-11:45.
531. Existentialism. (3) Mr. Molina. 1:30-2:45.
700. Research in History of Philosophy. (3) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
730. Seminar in Modern Philosophy: James, Dewey, and Whitehead. (3) Mr. Molina. 3:00-4:15.
997. Thesis. (3-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
999. Dissertation. (3-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION

100. Section 30. Tennis. (Beginning for Women). (1) Miss Mariol. 1:00-2:00.
220. Section 30. Tennis. (Intermediate for Women). (1) Miss Mariol. 1:00-2:00.
240. Section 30. Tennis. (Advanced for Women). (1) Miss Mariol. 1:00-2:00.
501. Advanced Rhythms and Gymnastics. (3) Mr. Romeo. 7:30-8:45. Prerequisite: One course in rhythms or gymnastics.
508. Applied Anatomy (Kinesiology). (3) Mr. Cataldi. 10:30-11:45.
532. Personal Health and Hygiene. (3) Mr. Shaw. 9:00-10:15.
538. Administration, Organization, Supervision of Health. (2) Mr. Cataldi. 7:30-8:45.
(See also Education and Secondary Education)

POLITICAL SCIENCE

201. American Political Institutions. (3) Mr. McDonald. 7:30-8:45.
203. Comparative Political Institutions. (3) Mr. Bishop. 10:30-11:45.
331. Introduction to Public Administration. (3) Mr. Westcott. 12:00-1:15.
355. World Politics. (3) Mr. Friedman. 9:00-10:15.
361. American Foreign Relations. (3) Mr. Clubb. 9:00-10:15.
381. Ancient and Medevial Political Thought. (3) Mr. McDonald. 10:30-11:45.
631. Advanced Public Administration. (3) Mr. Westcott. 12:00-1:15.
642. Decision Making in the Law. (3) Mr. Sawyer. 1:30-2:45.
651. Theories of International Relations. (3) Mr. Friedman. 9:00-10:15.
681. History of Political Thought 1. (3) Mr. McDonald. 10:30-11:45.
738. Development Administration. (3) Mr. Westcott. 9:00-10:15.
741. Seminar in Constitutional Government. (3) Mr. Sawyer. 10:30-11:45.
750. Problems in International Relations. (3) Mr. Friedman. 12:00-1:15.
770. Special Problems in Comparative Foreign Government. (3) Mr. Bishop. 1:30-2:45.
777. Political Institutions and Politics in South Asia. (3) Mr. Kearney. 10:30-11:45.
970. Readings and Research in Comparative Government: Asia. (3) Mr. Clubb. 12:00-1:15.

PSYCHOLOGY

205. Section 2. Foundations of Human Behavior. (3) Mr. Kutscher. 9:00-10:15.
205. Section 3. Foundations of Human Behavior. (3) Mr. Arenson. 12:00-1:15.
365. Educational Psychology. (3) Mr. Seeman. 9:00-10:15.
393. Personality. (3) Mr. Sprafkin. 10:30-11:45.
545. Behavior Disorders in Children. (3) Mr. Kurz. 9:00-10:15.
556. Section 1. Statistical Methods in Education and Psychology 1. (3) Mr. Halperin. 9:00-10:15.
556. Section 2. Statistical Methods in Education and Psychology 1. (3) Mr. Meyer. 10:30-11:45
565. Mental Hygiene in Education. (3) Mr. Sprafkin. 9:00-10:15.
574. Social Psychology. (3) Mr. Arenson. 9:00-10:15.
594. Abnormal Psychology: Neuroses. (3) Mr. Stacey. 10:30-11:45.
597. Systems of Psychology. (3) Mr. Stacey. 12:00-1:15.
635. Section 1. Psychology of Childhood. (3) Staff. 9:00-10:15.
635. Section 2. Psychology of Childhood. (3) Staff. 10:30-11:45.
636. Section 1. Psychology of the Adolescent. (3) Mr. Gorry. 7:30-8:45.
636. Section 2. Psychology of the Adolescent. (3) Staff. 9:00-10:15.
645. Theories of Personality. (3) Mr. Dean. 9:00-10:15.
656. Statistical Methods in Education and Psychology 2. (3) Mr. Meyer. 9:00-10:15.
663. Psychology of Elementary Subjects. (3) Mr. Seeman. 10:30-11:45.
664. Psychology of Learning in Secondary Education. (3) Mr. Seeman. 10:30-11:45.
697. Dynamics of Individual Behavior. (3) Mr. Anderson. 9:00-10:15.
735. Developmental Psychology: Adolescence and Childhood. (3) Mr. Gorry. 9:00-10:15.
756. Statistical Methods in Education and Psychology 3. (3) Mr. Halperin. 10:30-11:45.
848. Special Clinical Test. (3) Mr. Anderson. 10:30-11:45.
855. Seminar in Educational Measurement. (3) Mr. Bligh. 10:30-11:45.
890. Topics in Psychology. (3) Staff. 10:30-11:45.
894. History of Psychology. (3) Mr. Simonson. 7:30-8:45.
899. Projects in Psychology. (3) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
997. Thesis. (3) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
999. Dissertation. (3) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

PUBLIC AFFAIRS

101. Problems of Public Policy. (3) Mr. Julian. 7:30-8:45.
102. Problems of Public Policy. (3) Mr. Julian. 9:00-10:15.
305. Public Issues. (1) Mr. Julian. June 30-July 11. 10:30-11:45.

RELIGION

105. Introduction to Judaism and Christianity. (3) Mr. Wiggins. 9:00-10:15.
255. Introduction to Religious Thought. (3) Mr. Cavanagh. 10:30-11:45.
265. Introduction to Christian Ethics. (3) Mr. Robertson. 7:30-8:45.
346. Church and Christian Thought: The Modern Period. (3) Mr. Wiggins. 12:00-1:15.
475. Religion and Culture in the Western Tradition. (3) Mr. Miller. 10:30-11:45.
546. Church and Christian Thought: The Modern Period. (3) Mr. Wiggins. 12:00-1:15.
575. Religion and Culture in the Western Tradition. (3) Mr. Miller. 10:30-11:45.

ROMANCE LANGUAGES

Lin. 614. Nature of Languages. (3) Mr. Soffietti. MTWTh. 1:30-3:00.

French

201. Section 1. (Special section for graduates). Intermediate French. (3) Mr. Wynne. June 30-July 18. 7:30-10:15.
201. Section 2. Intermediate French. (3) Mr. Melczer. 7:30-10:15.
202. Section 1. (Special section for graduates). Intermediate French. Mr. Wynne. (3) July 21-August 8. 7:30-10:15.
202. Section 2. Intermediate French. (3) Mr. Melczer. 7:30-10:15.
325. Junior Language Usage. (3) Mrs. Gourevitch. 9:00-10:15.
480. Problems in Literary Research: Poetry of the Nineteenth to Twentieth Century. (3) Mr. Mathews. 10:30-11:45.
605. General Problems. (3) Mr. Soffietti. 10:30-11:45.
607. Language Refresher. (3) Mrs. Gourevitch. 7:30-8:45.
615. Advanced French Usage. (3) Mrs. Gourevitch. 9:00-10:15.
680. Advanced Projects in French Literature: Twentieth Century Theater. Mr. Matthews. Hours to be arranged.

Italian

101. Beginning Italian. (3) Mr. Jackson. June 30-July 18. 7:30-10:15.
102. Basic Freshman English. (3) Mr. Herschel. 7:30-9:10.

Spanish

101. Beginning Spanish. (3) Staff. June 30-July 18. 7:30-10:15.
102. Beginning Spanish. (3) Staff. July 21-August 8. 7:30-10:15.
201. Intermediate Spanish. (3) Mr. Novas-Calvo. June 30-July 18. 7:30-10:15.
202. Intermediate Spanish. (3) Mr. Novas-Calvo. July 21-August 8. 7:30-10:15.
325. Junior Language Usage. (3) Mr. Lichtblau. 9:00-10:15.
327. Junior Spoken Spanish. (3) Mr. Ferran. 7:30-8:45.
605. General Problems. (3) Mr. Soffietti. 10:30-11:45.
607. Language Refresher. (3) Mr. Ferran. 10:30-11:45.
615. Advanced Spanish Usage. (3) Mr. Lichtblau. 9:00-10:15.
628. Advanced Stylistics. (3) Mr. Ferran. 7:30-8:45.
690. Spanish American Literature. (3) Mr. Lichtblau. Hours to be arranged.

ROMANCE LITERATURE

997. Thesis. (1-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
999. Dissertation. (3-9) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

SLAVIC LANGUAGES AND LITERATURE

Slavic

490. Special Projects in Slavic Literature. (3) Hours to be arranged.
899. Graduate Reading Course. (1-3). Staff Hours to be arranged.
997. Thesis. (6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

SOCIAL STUDIES

SOS 511. Major Concepts in Social Science. (3) Mr. Larkin. 9:00-10:15.
(See also Secondary Education)

SOCIOLOGY

301. Section 1. Human Group Behavior. (3) Mr. Taylor. 10:30-11:45.
301. Section 2. Human Group Behavior. (3) Staff. 9:00-10:15.
301. Section 3. Human Group Behavior. (3) Mr. Dannick. 1:30-2:45.
436. Primary Interaction and Personal Behavior. (3) Mr. Dannick. 10:30-11:45.
533. Sociology of Small Groups. (3) Mr. Taylor. 9:00-10:15.
581. The Family. (3) Mrs. Sakuma. 1:30-2:45.
586. Workshop in Human Relations; Program in Afro-American Studies. (3) Mr. Walters. 10:30-11:45.

SCHOOL OF LIBRARY SCIENCE

407. Reference Service. (3) Mr. Arnold. 10:30-11:45.
427. Classification and Cataloging. (3) Mrs. Moore. 7:30-8:45.
513. Literature for Children. (3) Miss Crawford. 7:30-8:45.
514. Literature for Young Adults. (3) Miss Crawford. 12:00-1:15.
515. Library and the Adult Reader. (3) Mr. Allen. 7:30-8:45.
601. Research Methodology in Library and Information Science. (3) Mr. Katzer. 12:00-1:15.
602. Subject Reference. (3) Miss Bailey. 10:30-11:45.
603. Bibliography of Humanities. (3) Mrs. Lemke. 3:00-4:15.
605. Bibliography of Scoial Sciences. (3) Mr. Arnold. 1:30-2:45.
608. Bibliography of Science. (3) Mr. Bottle. 9:00-10:15.
621. Technical Services. (3) Mr. Webster. 7:30-8:45.
622. Advanced Classification and Cataloging. (3) Mr. Allen. 9:00-10:15.
626. History and Theory of Cataloging and Classification. (3) Mrs. Moore. 10:30-11:45.
628. Information Systems in Libraries. (3) Mr. Bottle. 1:30-2:45.
644. School Library Administration. (3) Miss Bailey. 1:30-2:45.
648. Library Administration in Higher Education. (3) Mr. Kaser. 12:00-1:15.
651. History of Books and Libraries. (3) Mrs. Lemke. 9:00-10:15.
654. Library in Society. (3) Staff. 3:00-4:15.
655. Communications and Libraries. (3) Mr. Martin. 10:30-11:45.
662. Audiovisual Materials in Libraries. (3) Mr. Knirk. 9:00-10:15.
998. Readings and Research in Librarianship. (3) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

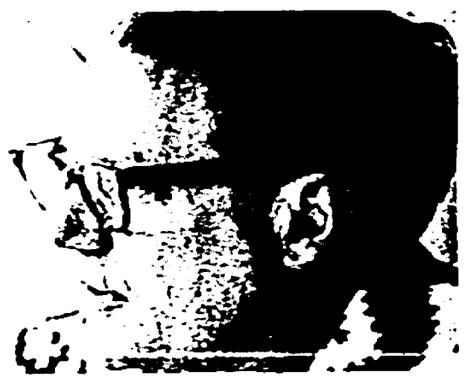
SCHOOL OF MUSIC

PRACTICE ROOM FEES

Fee for the six-week session	$5.00
Organ per hours (practice organ)	.25
Organ per hour (auditorium organ)	.35
Orchestral or band instruments (per memester)	10.00

Applied Music (AMC)

Students will be instructed individually in the following courses; hours will be arranged. Each course is offered for 1-2 credits, unless otherwise noted.



314. Brass Class for Music Educators. (1) Mr. Babcock. Hours to be arranged.
315. String Class for Music Educators. (1) Mr. Bernthal. Hours to be arranged.
316. Percussion Class for Music Educators. (1) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
317. Woodwind Class for Music Educators. (1) Mr. Soyars. Hours to be arranged.
318. Voice Class for Music Educators. (1) Mr. Hakanson. Hours to be arranged.

Award winner

Poet to offer reading here

Robert Bly, winner of the National Book Award for Poetry in March, 1968 for The Light Around the Body (which he describes as "a book of poems mourning the war"), will be giving a poetry reading--with commentary--of his own poems Thursday, at 4 p.m. in Maxwell Auditorium.

Later in the day (at 8 p.m. in Kittredge Auditorium), Bly will participate in a Panel Discussion on Recent American and Hispanic Poetry: The Role of Translation, and will be joined by Fernando Arbelaez, (Colombian poet and translator), and Syracuse professors Jaime Ferran (Spanish poet and translator) and Donald Justice (American poet and translator), who will serve as moderator.

ROBERT BLY

Radio memories

Fred Allen, Edgar Bergan and Charlie McCarthy, The Shadow, and scores of other names familiar to radio listeners of the early days of radio right up to the present day will be featured Thursday evening at 6 p.m. for a 90-minute documentary on the "History of Radio."

Producers Howard Brenner and Don Bayley have researched the history of radio broadcasting and will present the highlights of these exciting years.

Remember the Hindenburg Disaster in New Jersey, and the KDKA first radio broadcast of Election Returns in the Harding-Cox Presidential race? All these and more, including the famous soap-operas of the past: "Ma Perkins," "Stella Dallas" and "One Man's Family" are featured Thursday.

GEOGRAPHY

503. World Geography. (3) Mr. Smyth. 11:30-1:10.
510. Research on Anglo-America. (1-3) Staff. Hours to be arranged. (By permission)
520. Research on Latin America. (1-3) Staff. Hours to be arranged. (By permission)
530. Research on Africa. (1-3) Staff. Hours to be arranged. (By permission).
531. Geography of Europe. (3) Mr. Smyth. 9:30-11:10.
539. Research on Europe. (1-3) Staff. Hours to be arranged. (By permission)
540. Research on Southern and Eastern Asia. Staff. Hours to be arranged. (By permission)
549. Research on Soviet Union. (1-3) Staff. Hours to be arranged. (By permission)
550. Research in Physical Geography. (1-3) Staff. Hours to be arranged. (By permission)
560. Research in Economic Geography. (1-3) Staff. Hours to be arranged. (By permission)
563. Urban Geography. (3) Staff. 9:30-11:10.
570. Research in Cultural Geography. (1-3) Staff. Hours to be arranged. (By permission)
580. Research in Geographic Techniques. (1-3) Staff. Hours to be arranged. (By permission)
586. Quantitative Techniques. (3) Staff. 11:30-1:10.
595. Geography Summer Field Course (6) Mr. Hammond, Mr. Jensen, August 4-August 30. Boulder, Colorado.
997. Thesis. (1-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
999. Dissertation. (1-3) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

HISTORY

206. Development of Western Civilization (Since 1600). (3) Mr. Maxon. 11:30-1:10.
256. American History Since 1865. (3) Mr. Johnson. 7:30-9:10.
455. History of Africa. (3) Mr. Maxon. 7:30-9:10.
478. Twentieth Century Colonialism and Anti-Colonialism. (3) Mr. MacDonald. 11:30-1:10.
755. Readings and Research in African History. (3) Mr. MacDonald. 9:30-11:10.
816. Seminar: Twentieth Century America. (3) Mr. Johnson. 11:30-1:10.
997. Thesis. Staff. Hours to be arranged.
999. Dissertation. Staff. Hours to be arranged.

PHILOSOPHY

105. Problems of Knowledge. (3) Mr. Brown. 9:30-11:10.
106. Problems of Conduct. (3) Mr. Thau. 11:30-1:10.
321. Contemporary Philosophy. (3) Mr. Thau. 9:30-11:10.
351. Logic. (3) Mr. Brown. 11:30-1:10.
700. Research in the History of Philosophy. (3) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
997. Thesis. (3-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
999. Dissertation. (3-6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION

561. Theory and Practice of Rhythmics and Dance. (3) Mr. Romeo. 7:30-9:10.

POLITICAL SCIENCE

201. American Political Institutions. (3) Mrs. Fisher. 9:30-11:10.
203. Comparative Political Institutions. (3) Mr. Browne. 7:30-11:10.
315. Comparative Political Parties. (3) Mr. Hodgson. 1:30-3:10.
347. Civil Rights Courts. (3) Mr. Umbanhowar. 7:30-9:10.
382. American Political Theory. (3) Mr. Umbanhowar. 11:30-1:10.
580. Modern European Political Theory. (3) Mrs. Fisher. 11:30-1:10.
682. History of Political Thought II. (3) Mrs. Fisher. 11:30-1:10.
774. Soviet Government and Politics. (3) Mr. Hodgson. 9:30-11:10.

PUBLIC AFFAIRS

101. Problems of Public Policy. (3) Mr. Haight. 7:30-9:10.
102. Problems of Public Policy. (3) Mr. Haight. 9:30-11:10.
308. Public Issues. (1) Mr. Haight. 11:30-1:10. August 11-23

RELIGION

106. Introduction to Judaism and Christianity. (3) Mr. Williams. 9:30-11:10.
315. Prophets of Israel. (3) Mr. Williams. 11:30-1:10.

SLAVIC LANGUAGES AND LITERATURES

Slavic

490. Special Projects in Slavic Literature. (3) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
899. Graduate Reading Course. (1-3) Staff. Hours to be arranged.
997. Thesis. (6) Staff. Hours to be arranged.

SOCIOLOGY

301. Human Group Behavior. (3) Mr. Videbeck. 9:30-11:10.
405. Development of Social Theory. (3) Mr. Remmling. 9:30-11:10.
501. Human Group Behavior. (3) Mr. Remmling. 11:30-1:10.
563. Urban Sociology. (3) Mr. Videbeck. 11:30-1:10.

SCHOOL OF LIBRARY SCIENCE

664. Evaluation of Filmed and Recorded Material. (3) Mr. Weekes. August 11-August 22. 9:00-5:00.
645. School Library as an Information Center. (3) Miss Cole. August 11-August 29. 9:00-5:00.

SCHOOL OF MUSIC

APPLIED MUSIC

Students will be instructed individually in the following courses; hours will be arranged. Each course is offered for 1-2 credits, unless otherwise noted.

KEYBOARD INSTRUMENTS

120, 220, 320, 420, 520. Piano. Mr. Shake.

PEDAGOGY

527. Piano Pedagogy. (2) Mr. Shake.
520. Piano Pedagogy Workshop. (1) Mr.. Shake.

SCHOOL OF NURSING

203. Foundations of Nursing III. (1) Mrs. Landau. MWF, 3:00-4:00.
331. Medical-Surgical Nursing. (3) Mrs. Luke. Laboratory, 8:00-12:00; Lecture, 1:00-3:00.
332. Medical-Surgical Nursing. (3) Mrs. Luke. Laboratory, 8:00-12:00; Lecture, 1:00-3:00.

SCHOOL OF SPEECH AND DRAMATIC ART

INTERPRETATION

105. Improvement of Voice and Speech. (3) Mrs. Marshall. 9:30-11:10.
225. Fundamentals of Oral Interpretation. (3) Mrs. Marshall. 11:30-1:10.

PUBLIC ADDRESS

215. Public Speaking. (3) Mr. Owen. 7:30-9:10.
235. Discussion. (3) Mr. Owen. 9:30-11:10.
660. Selected Readings. (1-6) Mr. Owen. Hours to be arranged.

TELEVISION–RADIO

775. Educational Television Workshop. (3) Mr. Barnhill, Mr. Treble. August 11-22. 9:00-11:30; 1:00-5:00.

Every effort will be made to carry out the program as announced. The University reserves the right to make changes or to cancel courses.

SPRING FASHION
PROJECTION
'69— Opening Thursday, March 20

presented by
Campus Clothiers

Bell Bottoms
Knits
Jams Bermudas

Music! Clams! Atmosphere!

SU Bookstores
303 University Place

In Front of the Main Store — THE SHED

Judy Collins: from both sides...

Speaks out as 'activist' — sings message as 'artist'

By PATTI WILLIAMS
Associate Editor

To singer Judy Collins, the strike in the architecture school at Syracuse University is a sign of the need for a change in Americans' attitude towards education. She spoke to a few local college journalists in her dressing room before her concert Friday in the War Memorial.

"What the strike means to me more than a protest against a specific situation is a general kind of disgust at the attitude of this country towards education," she said. "If the people who are really involved and interested in their own fields and who want to turn kids onto it can be treated as if they were first class citizens, then I think the situation would change a great deal."

Miss Collins said teachers should receive the respect and the salaries that executives in this country receive.

Judy Collins

Dressed in a green velvet overblouse with lace trim and white crepe bellbottoms, the 28-year-old singer was seated at a dressing table applying eyeliner and green eyeshadow. She powdered her pale, ethereal-looking face with a near-white facepowder. Occasionally her long, fine, light brown hair got in her way and she pushed it aside.

While a question was being asked, Miss Collins concentrated on applying her makeup but when she was speaking, she looked directly at the interviewer with the intense deep blue eyes that helped earn her the name, "Maid of Constant Sorrow."

When speaking about students, the singer included herself even though she is a college-dropout. "I think that all of us in school are facing the problem I had when I was in school which is that most teachers are not teaching anyway. I don't think that the curriculum is as severe a problem as the lack of people who can take you into many, many areas with their own interests and imagination."

Miss Collins, who has participated in voter registration drives among southern Negroes and in anti-war demonstrations, discussed the possibility of improving society.

"We can't change things unless we take a more responsible attitude towards changing them," she said. "It has to come from people who are secure enough in their lives not to be threatened by change and most of the people are young people who are not severely entrenched in careers.

"The values that are being adhered to are values that don't seem to be satisfying the human needs of our country and the kids are trying to change this."

One encouraging sign of change is the resistance to the draft, according to the singer.

"There has been a large group of people who've said 'No, this isn't right, this doesn't make sense," she said. "It doesn't put an immediate end to all war but at least it makes more sense out of the social structure of conscription and if a change can take place in something like conscription, it could be a very positive step towards a lot of things that are more important like life and learning and growing."

In spite of her strong feelings about such issues as integration and the draft, Miss Collins said she does not sing songs specifically related to political issues.

"Those songs are very difficult to come by and most of them are not very good," she said. "They are perhaps a reflection of the times, perhaps a kind of mirror image of what's going on but I find that my own music is strictly tailored to the way I feel about people emotionally, not the way I feel about them politically because I don't feel I can express that in my music."

The singer added, however, that for a song like "Marat Sade" she made an exception to the rule of not singing political songs. She calls that song "great music." Two other songs she recorded, "Both Sides Now" and "Sunny Goodge Street," have social rather than political implications, according to her.

"But that's because they are really works of art in a poetic sense and this is the great transcending magic that art has when it is a good song...," Miss Collins said.

The type of music she performs has changed considerably since the days in which Miss Collins was a solo performer with a guitar. She added a back-up group of musicians and then began to do rock songs and music from the theater.

"I've always needed at some points to go in a different direction which I've always done because it seemed like the natural thing to do," the singer said. "You might as well be the first people to know, I'm going to be in a play in Central Park. I'm going to do Ibsen's 'Peer Gynt.'

"There are all kinds of things to do. I don't think people should be limited by the confines of what other people think you ought to do."

Although Miss Collins has written several songs, she refused to comment on them saying, "Whatever they are to me they can't be to you because I wrote them. It's a different process."

Miss Collins spoke in long rambling sentences, frequently repeating herself. She seldom hesitated although at one point she groped for a word. She was explaining that various types of music such as popular, classical and folk are all borrowing from each other. She searched for an adjective to describe this trend and finally came up with "homogenous." When an interviewer corrected her by saying, "homogeneous," she seemed startled but then laughed and agreed.

(Continued on Page 14

MORE FLICKS AT T. C.

SEE THE OLD-TIME STARS
at T.C. WEDNESDAY NIGHT
FRIDAY AFTERNOON

SPECIAL SOUR RATES
AT T.C.
3-5 p.m.

Tecumseh Club, Waring Road

Banjos Honky Tonk

PEANUTS POPCORN
EXCITING CONTESTS
OLD TIME MOVIES
DRAUGHT BEER

Come for an unforgettable (time of your life) evening on Friday and Saturday nights
FRIDAY NIGHT SPECIAL
Bring this ad and get one Gay 90's Mug or Hat free per couple.

119 W. First St. 437-5652 E. Syracuse

GEN. BREW. CO., ROCH., N.Y.

...a little more exciting! GENESEE Beer

Collins mix . . .

(Continued from Page 13)

The singer was born in Seattle but raised in Denver where she eventually performed as a piano soloist with the Denver Businessmen's Symphony. After 11 years of piano study, at age 16, she turned to the guitar. As she explained in a magazine interview, "Folk music became my contact with other human beings."

Miss Collins left Denver and came to New York City where for the first time she became involved with liberal and left-wing activities. Since then she has participated in civil rights programs and anti-Vietnam War protests, even carrying the anti-war message to Japan on a concert tour. When folksinger and composer Pete Seeger was barred from a network program because of his supposed Communist sympathies, she refused to appear on the program even though she was scheduled to appear.

Miss Collins' life has been filled with misfortunes. Besides dropping out of MacMurray College in Illinois after a year, she has had polio and tubercular pleursy. She is divorced and lost her now 10-year-old son, Clark, in a custody fight.

The two worlds that she represents, that of the political activist and that of the sensitive artist, are meaningfully united when she sings. She once said, "Sometimes the time and energy with which we pursue our political interests tends to undermine our feeling of being people. I try to make my audience feel their common humanity."

Lowe display: variety

A display of student projects in silversmithing, illustration, printmaking and ceramics opened last week at Syracuse University's Joe and Emily Lowe Art Center.

The projects show work in progress in major professional fields in SU's School of Art. Students select the works and arrange the displays.

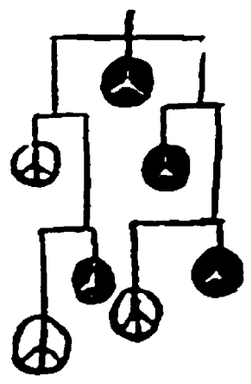
The current display of student work will continue until March 30. Lowe Art Center, University Place and Walnut Ave., is open weekdays 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and 7 to 10 p.m.; Saturdays, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Sundays, 2 to 6 p.m.

EDWARD HOMMEL & SONS
OPTICIANS

VANDERBILT SQ. CENTER
127 S. SALINA ST.
FREE PARKING
474-4644
EYEGLASSES & CONTACT LENSES
REPAIRS
Telex Hearing Aids

LAW–DRAMA–SPEECH

majors



learn the art of verbal persuasion and earn salary plus commission part-time.

Prestige company needs your voice and personality.

Call Mr. Barr 446-8200.

Cooper decoration co.
1211 E. FAYETTE STREET

EVERYTHING THAT'S HOT . . .
PAPER AND "POP"
POSTERS AND LIGHTS FEATHERS AND FABRICS
LANTERNS & FISHNETS

:OBILES

——Happenings on the Hill——

Campus Notices must be brought to the DO Office (1101 E. Adams St., second floor, first desk on the left) by 3 p.m. on the day before they are to be published. We regret that due to the many requests each notice must be limited to 25 words and may not be run more than two days in a row. Notices will not be taken over the phone.

TUESDAY

PLEDGE test for Alpha Kappa Psi 4 p.m. in 208 Slocum. If you can't come, call Henry Chin X3076.

SEMINAR on "Studies of the Host Controlled Variation of Bacterial Viruses." 4 p.m. 225 Sims.

J-SCHOOL Students: Representative of the Wilmington Delaware NEWS-JOURNAL will be on campus to interview students interested in positions on his paper. Sign up and interview data are available at receptionist's desk.

WOMEN ARE INVITED to a presentation concerning careers in the Air Force at 7:30 p.m. room 304 Men's Gym.

I.D.C. meeting at 7 p.m., 214 HL.

SUSKI meeting at 7:30 p.m. in 117 Lyman. Possible trip to Jay Peak to be discussed.

ANGEL FLIGHT meeting at 7 p.m. in Men's Gym. Mandatory and in uniform.

OUTING CLUB meeting at 7:15 in 207 HL. Trip plans and other business will be discussed.

A HUNDRED DOLLARS. . .That's what the Promethean paid its noble salesmen last Friday. To earn part of our bread, call Jim (Skippy) Dalton or Bob Giordano at ext. 3140 or 2770.

WEDNESDAY

STUDENT - Faculty coffee hour of College of Business Administration, sponsored by Alpha Kappa Psi. 9-11 a.m. Town Room Slocum Hall. All students and faculty invited.

ALPHA KAPPA PSI - meeting 7:30 p.m. in Lawrinson Penthouse.

IFC Meeting. Room 206, Newhouse at 7:30 p.m.

SUSKI will not run a bus to Song due to exams.

JOIN UU's program board. They have the money if you have the ideas. 8:30 Chapel House.

UU Elections meeting 7:30 in Chapel House. Mandatory for board members.

ELECTION COMMISSIONERS - meeting, 205 NCC, 9 p.m.

AMERICAN YOUTH Hostels meeting on hosteling at Downing Youth Hostel, 735 S. Beech St. at 7:30 p.m. Several experienced hostelers will discuss hosteling activities. All invited free.

GRAD COFFEE Hour 3:30-5:00 in the Noble Room of Hendricks Chapel. Free coffee and cookies. Sponsored by GSO.

TRADITIONS COMMISSION - There will be an important meeting at 6:30 in the Shaw Rec Lounge (basement). If you can't come, call Nancy Glaser - X2469.

DIRTY POLITICS MUST GO - Student Organized Against Parties (S.O.A.P.) organizational meeting - 7:30, 307 H.L.

THURSDAY

ROOM NUMBER DRAWING for Future senior and junior girls. 9:30 a.m. to noon, and 2 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. in Rec. room of the Women's Building. (Also taking place on Friday). Please bring ID or other identification.

HUMANITIES Lecture. Robert Bley will read his poems at 4:00 p.m. in Maxwell Auditorium.

STUDENT SERVICES meeting. 205 NCC, 8 p.m.

UU OPEN Meeting to explain the progress towards a new UU building. 7:30, upstairs at the Place, 416 Walnut.

LIVING Situation Discussion at 9 p.m. in Haven Penthouse. All women students, head residents, and dean of women's staffers welcome.

ACADEMIC COMMUNICATION Coffee from 3:30 - 5:00 in room 6, Building 24. Students and Professors are welcome.

SOCIOLOGY MAJORS Convocation 3 p.m., Colonial Room Hendricks Chapel. Graduate Student Panel Discussion led by A. C. Higgins. AK Delta initiation.

DRAFT COUNSELING - The Syracuse Draft Counseling Service and Law students Civil Rights Research Council in room 101 White Hall from 7-9 p.m.

FRIDAY

DESERT ADVENTURE! "Beau Geste" is flick, 6, 8, and 10 in Gifford.

ZOOLOGY Seminar. Dr. Jamieson will speak at 4 p.m. at 114 Lyman.

THE ZOO will be open from 8-11 p.m. No admittance charge, and no charge for entertainment. If you wish to sing, read poetry, sell art works, etc. call Ellen Rogers any day before Wednesday X2970.

JAM FACTORY at DEBS, Corner So. Crouse and Erie Blvd. 10-2 a.m.

ROOM NUMBER Drawing for rooms for future senior and junior women will take place from 9:30-12:00 and 2 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. in Recreation room of the Women's Building.

SUNDAY

SEE "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" 7 and 9 p.m. in Gifford. One dollar admission. Benefits UU.

GENERAL

GUITARISTS for week-day masses. Call Newman Center X2600.

SEX, DRUGS AND APPLE PIE - does a city planner have anything to do with these? Students of city planning will be on call at X2617, and X3591 from 1-3 p.m. Basement Admin. Building - Wed thru Friday, to talk about it.

SUPPORT SURVIVAL The UJA seeks funds to aid in saving and Rehabilitating Jewish Refugees. Anyone interested in information please call Harry Dank X3529, Tovie Rome X3905, 478-8796.

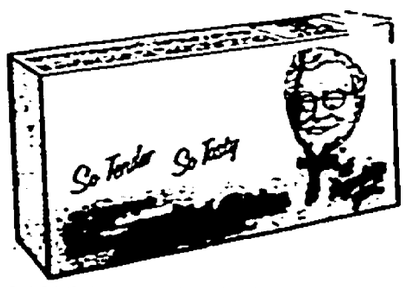
ANY STUDENT or faculty member wishing to join the Nigeria/Biafra Relief committee should contact Mary Berrigan, membership coordinator, at 492-0993.

DRAMA DEPT. - An on campus box office exists! Slocum, downstairs lobby. MWF 10-3, Tues. 9-3, Thurs. - 9-4. Tix for all drama dept. and repertory productions.

FRESHMEN AND SOPHOMORES - Information and applications for the Liberal Arts-Business Honors Program. See Mrs. Kinney for further information.

URGENT help needed for Newcap's Inner City tutoring program, Wednesday nights. Transportation provided. Please contact Nancy McKee at 474-6934.

L. G. Balfour Co.
FRATERNITY and COLLEGE JEWELERS
729 S. Crouse Ave.
Syracuse, New York
Carl Sorenson, Mgr.
GR 5-7837



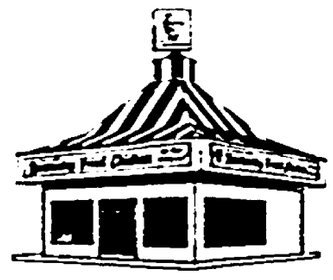
Visit the Colonel

SNACK BOX ..... $. 85

CHICKEN DINNER $1.35

THRIFT BOX $2.49

5 CONVENIENT LOCATIONS



DeWITT
3460 Erie Blvd. East
Below Shoppingtown

DOWNTOWN
1530 So. Salina
Block South of Sears

CAMILLUS
Corner W. Genesee & Columbus
Beyond Fairmount Fair

LIVERPOOL
Old Liverpool Rd. &
Electronics Parkway

NORTH SYRACUSE
2 Blocks North of Sweetheart Corners

THE BARREL $5.49

FAMILY BUCKET .. $4.19

Trustees may vote Corbally

The Board of Trustees of Syracuse University will meet Friday, March 28 at the Hotel Syracuse. It is assumed the purpose of the meeting is to vote for a successor to Chancellor William P. Tolley.

It is speculated the post will be given to John E. Corbally, vice president and provost of Ohio State University. Corbally was chosen by three committees to select a chancellor several weeks ago.

George Alexander, chairman of the University Senate agenda committee, has called a special meeting of the Senate for the same afternoon. The meeting is open to students and the decision of the Board of Trustees will be made known at that time.

Last year, three committees, composed of students, faculty members and trustees, were formed to select a candidate for chancellor. The process began with the committees reviewing over 200 applications for the post and was gradually reduced to about five names. Corbally received a majority of the committee member's votes at a recent meeting.

After the decision of the committees was made known, three trustees went to Columbus, Ohio to meet with Corbally. It is normal procedure for the candidate to be contacted before his name is presented to the Board of Trustees. According to the bylaws of SU, a full board meeting must be conducted to elect a new chancellor and ten days notice for the meeting must be given. It is therefore assumed the chancellor selection will be the main topic at the meeting next week.

Corbally has not yet announced if he will accept the position. After meeting with the trustees he said any decisions for the chancellor's post would be announced by SU officials.

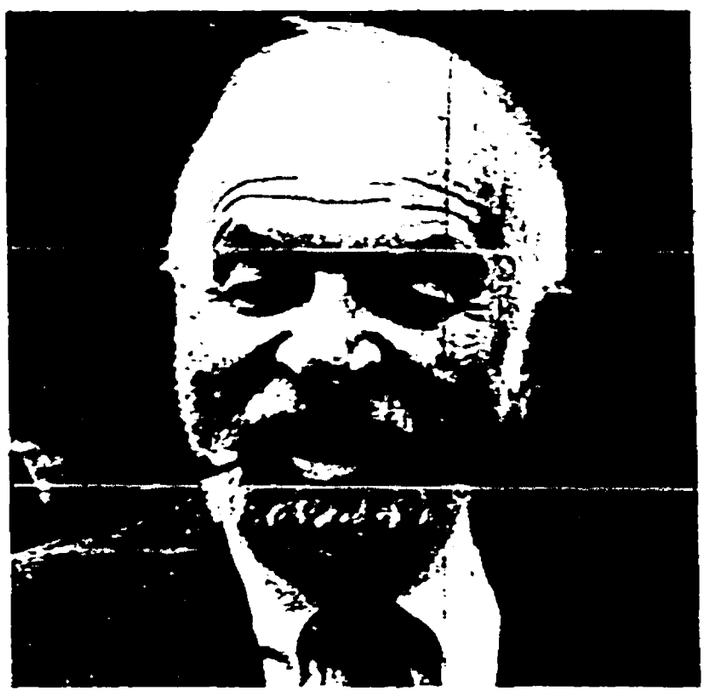
The vice president of Ohio State has been at that university since 1955 and was appointed to his present post as vice president and provost in 1965. As provost he is second in charge of the university, working directly with the president.

He is also responsible for university budget, campus planning and administrative date processing.

As head of academic affairs he is responsible for all degrees, educational programs, professor tenures, and promotions.

Abhorred injustice

Shahn, mural artist, dies



By STEVE TOBER

Ben Shahn, the artist whose works embodied a type of "social communication," died last Friday in New York City, after a short illness. The 70-year-old Shahn had been hospitalized for several weeks, and had undergone major surgery last Wednesday.

Shahn spent the first eight years of his life in Lithuania, where he was born in 1898. He then came to the United States with his family, and was brought up in the slums of Brooklyn. His youth was spent in the ravages of the Depression, and under harsh labor and immigration laws. These molding forces in his life caused him to relate with the inustices of the 1920 trial of Sacco and Vanzetti, a subject to which he devoted his life and art.

When Shahn was 32, he began what was to be a series of twenty-three paintings concerning the case of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, the shoemaker and fishpeddler who were executed in 1927 for a robbery and murder they allegedly committed. The culmination of his art work was realized on October 10, 1967, when Shahn was present here on campus to dedicate his mural, which extends across the HBC exterior. His style embodies a mixture of realism, abstract, and "social-surrealism," in accordance with his belief that an artist "should be actively engaged in his time."

"You paint the things you love and the things you abhor--and injustice is one of the things I abhor," he explained during his visit here. Shahn praised SU for having the courage and conviction to exhibit his mural publicly, and deal with the controversy of rampant injustice in an equitable society.

BEN SHAHN

The SU Press has recently published a book, entitled, "Ben Shahn--The Passion of Sacco and Vanzetti," written by Martin Brush, the assistant Dean for Academic Development here at SU. Over 200 autographed copies were sold for $20 apiece in the first two weeks, but are now unavailable, and are worth upwards of $100.

While here in October, Shahn was asked how he felt about his mural. "I was happy about it artistically, elated about it in spirit," he said. "An artist always feels that his most recent work is his greatest work; I'd have to say that this mural is my greatest work."

Russian music in city tonight

Maxim Shostakovich, the son of one of the world's greatest composers, Dmitri Shostakovich, will conduct the world-renowned Moscow State Symphony Orchestra tonight at 8:30 p.m. in Lincoln Auditorium. The orchestra will perform Dmitri Shostakovich's Fifth Symphony.

Also on the program will be Soviet pianist, Nikolai Petrov, who will play the Prokofieff Third Piano Concerto with the orchestra.

Tickets for the Syracuse performance may be obtained by calling Famous Artists at GR 1-0462.

This Week

Maelstrom 2

★ Featuring ★

Prof. William Wasserstrom

Pres. Richard Nixon

Jacqueline R. Dutton

Watch for it.

Why does a perfect size 7 look perfect only 21 days every month?

It has nothing to do with calories. It's a special female weight gain... caused by temporary water-weight build-up. Oh, you know... that uncomfortable full feeling that sneaks up on you the week before your menstrual period. This fluid retention not only plays havoc with your looks but how you feel as well. (It puts pressure on delicate nerves and tissues, which can lead to pre-menstrual cramps and headaches, leaves emotions on edge.)

That's why so many women take PAMPRIN®. It gently relieves water-weight gain to help prevent pre-menstrual puffiness, tension, and pressure-caused cramps.

PAMPRIN makes sure a perfect size 7 never looks less than perfect. Nor feels less than perfect, either.

Sorensen discusses student revolt

Movements contagious,' says ex-Kennedy aide

By ROZ MAZER
Feature Editor

As Black students awaited the arrival of Vice Chancellor Piskor Saturday, Theodore C. Sorensen, special assistant to the late President John Kennedy and consultant to the late Senator Robert F. Kennedy, was making the rounds at local television stations to speak about a report he prepared for the New York State Democratic Committee meeting held in Syracuse.

Sorensen a 41-year-old lawyer has returned to private practice in New York City since Senator Kennedy's assassination last June, reflected upon issues ranging from student revolt to his work with President Kennedy to his personal ambitions. En route from the meeting to the various stations, then back to the meeting again, Sorensen granted this interview to the Daily Orange:

DO: Last year, if you had visited a dining hall at Syracuse University, you would have seen black students sitting with white students. Now, they sit alone, together, in a corner. Do you think that the black movement on campuses is just a phase--that's it's the most violent phase of what will hopefully be eventual integration of the races?

SORENSEN: I don't know that anyone can predict that. In the open society, in the open institution I'm talking about, no one will be forced to be segregated into either an all white or an all black arrangement of any kind. Blacks have been listening to white liberals telling them what to do for a long time, and I don't think that we've done such a great job by them. So that if they feel that they can perhaps work out their own solutions now, they ought to be given an opportunity to try.

DO:Do you think that black movements on all the different campuses are part of of a conscious, carefully thought out movement, or are they spontaneous and contagious?

SORENSEN: It's contagious. College campuses have always been ripe for contagious movements of one type or another. When one campus moves on ROTC, another does. The same thing holds true for coeducation or objections to the Institute for Defense Analysis.

DO: It seems in the past year, students on campuses have come to believe that the structure of universities, the structure of government, is not neutral—that there can be structured evil. What changes must be brought about in the governing structures of universities?

SORENSEN: I think universities have to be open institutions. I don't want to see the universities controlled by a right wing so that they keep left wing speakers from the campuses or they keep out research and studies on liberal or inter-racial projects. On the other hand, I don't want to see the university controlled by any other group. I don't want to see them prevent speakers of a conservative point of view or recruiters of a conservative point of view from coming to the campus. The university, if it's really going to be a center of learning and thought, has to be an open institution.

DO: Should federal funds be rescinded from students who commit unlawful acts on college campuses?

SORENSEN: Oh, but that's foolish. Who knows what it is the students have done? Who knows what it is that may have provoked them to do it? It's a mistake to blanket all student activities in one brush. I happen to disapprove very strongly of some student activities; I think they're nihilistic, destructive--they have no alternative programs. They're seeking violence, confrontation for the sake of confrontation. But we shouldn't lump in with them those students who have a just grievance and are engaging in legitimate protest, even though some in repressive institutions they may be termed violators. To automatically cut them off without any investigation into the merits is a mistake.

DO: A year ago today, Senator Kennedy was announcing his candidacy and it seemed like all student energies were directed into the McCarthy and Kennedy campaigns. Now, just a year later, those energies seemed to be channeled into some sort of protest, whether in the black student movements or in efforts to gain a larger voice in university policies. Is the torch that was passed to the generation that brought in John Kennedy going to be used to blow up the world?

SORENSEN: No, I don't think so. I think the vast majority of students aren't interested in blowing up the world; they're interested in improving the world, and God knows it needs a lot of improvement. Sometimes they may choose short-range objectives or tactics that are inconsistent with their own long-range ideals. Sometimes they're obnoxious or irritating to the majority of adults. But I'm convinced that the basic concerns of most of the protesting students are legitimate concerns that the rest of the country ought to be listening to.

DO: In regard to voting legislation, why do you think, in principle, that the voting age should be lowered and, in practicality, what would be its effects on the Democratic or Republican parties?

SORENSEN: I think its effect on either party would be small and unpredictable. I'm in favor of lowering the voting age to eighteen simply because I no longer see any reason why we should exclude eighteen year olds--to distinguish between them and twenty-one year olds. That's why we extend the franchise in a democracy to as large a degree as possible, not because one group is better than the next, but because there is no longer any reason to keep them out. I don't see how we can logically say that eighteen year olds deserve to be classified with children, felons, lunatics and aliens.

Nixon So Far

DO: How is President Nixon performing?

SORENSEN: I think so far, Mr. Nixon has handled himself very well in terms of the atmospherics. His trip to Europe succeeded in improving the atmosphere of relationships between the United States and her allies in Europe, and that is important. But it doesn't yet solve the hard problems or resolve the conflicts which divide the Western alliance. The same is true here at home. Mr. Nixon has proceeded with great caution. He has been a friend to all--he has emphasized continuity and, to some extent, hesitation. As a result, he has offended very few people. He has made very few hard decisions on the difficult racial, financial and other problems dividing the American people.

Had JFK Lived

DO: If President Kennedy had lived, what would he have achieved?

SORENSEN: I think if President Kennedy had lived the United States would be in a different position in the world today. Conditions here at home would be very different. I don't blame everything on President Johnson--that's unfair. Events in many ways moved beyond him. President Kennedy had a way about him of reconciling people together--a way of communicating with Blacks and with the poor and with the young. And I think he would have kept them from spitting off into their own separate orbits. After all, it was the escalation of the war in Vietnam that has so much to do with our present state of affairs. I think that President Kennedy, with his ability to look objectively at his own mistakes, to recognize when his policies had to be changed, would not have permitted the war in Vietnam to reach the stage that it reached...Many people often say, "Well, Kennedy had nothing but style." That isn't true, because he had a great deal of substance to offer. Don't ever underestimate the importance of style. It was style that enabled him to inspire the American people, to mobilize the American politic.

DURING HIS SATURDAY VISIT, Ted Sorensen (left) was interviewed by local television commentators. Later, this exchange took place between Sorensen and a Daily Orange staffer:

DO: You are here today to talk about cleaning up the Democratic party. You should see what the situation is at Syracuse University! Do you have any advice for campus politics?

SORENSEN: I must say, when I was in college, campus politics were not very important. The boys who were the biggest operators on campus and the girls who were elected to all the queen positions on the campus did not thereby get very far in the real live world of politics and competition once they left college. I know it's different on each campus. Sometimes it can have some political importance, and I do believe that students should have a greater voice in the conduct of university affairs.

TED SORENSEN mingled with local reporters outside television station WCNY on Saturday. Daily Orange Feature Editor Roz Mazer is in the background, center. (Photo courtesy of WCNY—TV)

Dr. Piskor replies to black students

Negotiations continuing on their list of demands

News Analysis by FRED TUCCILLO
News Editor

The black students of Syracuse University have presented their demands; the administration has given its initial response, a response encouraging enough for the students to continue their peaceful mode of protest.

Vice Chancellor and Provost Frank P. Piskor issued his reply Monday to the list of demands he had been presented with last week. The demands were for:

- the creation of an Afro-American Cultural Center "to provide a way-station for black and white students at Syracuse University, people in the community, and students at other universities, in an attempt to bridge the gap between black and white understanding..."
- the establishment of a Martin Luther King memorial library collection which would serve as a reference area for all SU students on black history and literature;
- establishment of an Afro-American studies program, its courses open to all students of the university;
- development of a black orientation program to introduce the black student to the special world he will encounter at Syracuse;
- an increase in black admissions with 10% of the freshmen class of September, 1969 composed of black students and increased financial aid to meet the needs of such students;
- a house for Omega Psi Phi, a predominantly black fraternity; and a co-op living center for black co-eds;
- a black student directory.

Dr. Piskor's six-page reply began with an agreement to the creation of the Afro-American Cultural Center. A list of available cottages was included. Presumably the most adaptable would serve as the temporary home of the center.

The reply included agreement to the Martin Luther King memorial collection. Dr. Piskor's reply called the accumulation of up to 1,000. volumes during the first year "a realistic objective."

The reply reported "progress" on the development of the Afro-American studies program with work continuing within the College of Liberal Arts.

Dr. Piskor noted that the Student Afro-American Society had been invited to the subcommittee meetings on the planning of orientation week. He left the door open to a black orientation program: "If a different approach to involvement in orientation planning is desired, we are ready to consider an alternative proposal."

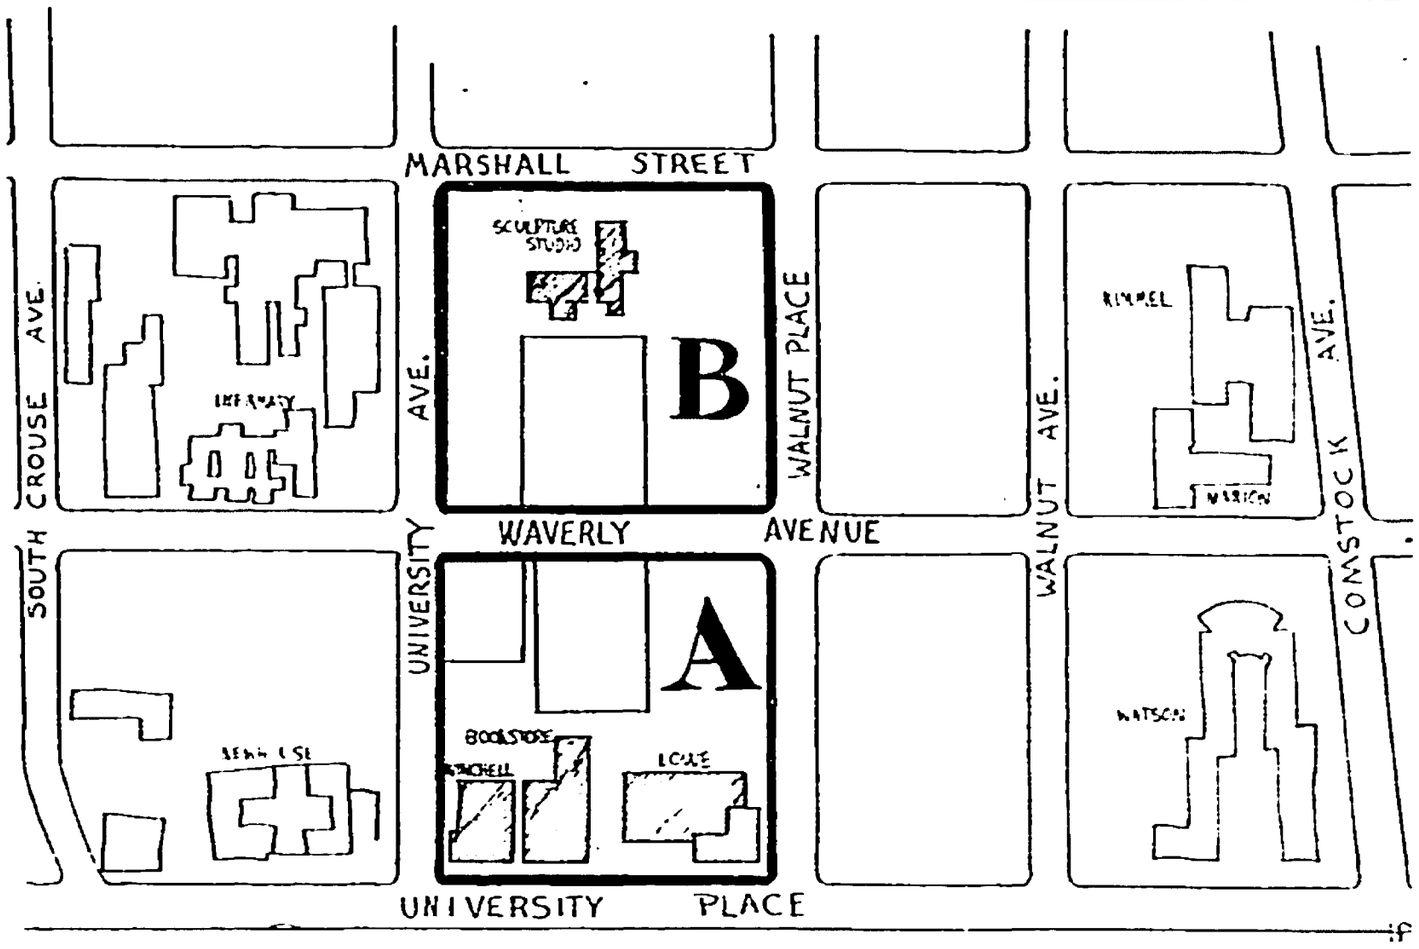
The 10% black admission figure for September, 1969, could not be promised, according to the statement, because the level of black applications would not be high enough to meet it. Increased recruitment to raise that level was promised.

Omega Psi Phi was invited to review the list of vacant cottages to select one for temporary use until a house can be bought or built.

The administration agreed to assist in the publishing of a black student directory.

The most difficult problem was presented by the demand for an all-black women's co-op. Dr. Piskor's reply noted that racially segregated housing is illegal. He also said he would work toward "providing housing situations which preclude random assignments to black students."

Dr. Piskor said that "a series of meetings on many specific projects with me and other representatives of the University will take place this week."



A spokesman for the black students acknowledge that such meetings would be taking place, thus indicating that the first full administrative reply to the black students' "Project Spearhead" was satisfactory enough to take negotiations to the next level of discussion.

"It has produced some results," the spokesman said, "but there is much more that still has to be worked out."

"We consider every single one of our proposals just as important as the other."

DAILY ORANGE

Vol. 67, No. 82 Syracuse, New York, Tuesday, March 25, 1969 10 Cents

PROPOSED SITES being considered for Syracuse University's long-awaited Student Union Building are indicated above. The first- choice location ("A") might incorporate the SU Bookstore directly in the Union. The alternate site ("B") would encompass the large rectangular parking lot bordering on Waverly Avenue. (Sketch by Powers)

'Top priority'

UU building nears reality

By STEVE TOBER

The Council on Student Life, acting upon a proposed timetable submitted by University Union (UU) Chairman Jerry Tatarian, passed a six-point program last Friday which may bring a Union building closer to reality.

The program calls for the consideration of the building as "number one priority" by the University Development Office, committment of a site by the Administration by May 1, 1969 and the naming of a consultant on Unions to aid in the building's development.

Following formal committment on the three points, a committee for the selection of an architect would be established, consisting of representatives from the student body, faculty, and Administration.

Money is the big problem, however. The plan calls for the establishment of an alumni and parent's drive to solicit funds solely for a Union building.

Estimated costs of such a project vary from eight to $10 or 12 million. Aside from donations, UU is considering obtaining capital from a Union Loan Program, set up by the federal government which would allow UU to borrow up to three times the amount in its standing budget and pay it back over an extended period of time at a low interest rate.

Also submitted to the Design Board, is a site proposal for the Union building, which suggests two areas for consideration.

Tract A, the site preferred by UU, encompasses the block between University Place and Waverly Avenue and is presently occupied by the Main bookstore Winchell Hall, and the Lowe Art Center. It has not been determined which of these buildings would be replaced.

Tract B is the block just behind tract A, bordered by Waverly Avenue and Marshall Street. Several Greek houses are located on this block.

The UU proposal outlines ten considerations that make tract A more desirable. These include the facts that the building would be located in the "geometric center of the University," which is expanding in that direction; it would be close to Newhouse, classroom buildings, and most living centers; ample off-street parking would be nearby, and, most importantly, the land is University-owned.

Tatarian stressed that the committment of a tract of land for the building is basic, before anything else can get underway. "After 100 years," he said, "the students deserve to know where their Union is going to be."

Protest may mar Jordanian's talk

By DAN SCHLOSSBERG

Demonstrations may mar a 7:30 Maxwell speech tonight by the Jordanian ambassador to the United Nations, Dr. M.H. El-Farra, one-time President of the UN Security Council.

A representative of B'nai B'rith Hillel, the Jewish students' organization, told the Daily Orange yesterday that there would be a protest tonight but did not elaborate.

Harry Dank, religious vice-president of Hillel and former President of University Religious Council, also criticized a statement by an Arab Student Organization spokesman that El-Farra was coming to campus because there was "a need for him to clarify the ideas held by the American people on the Middle East."

Said Dank: "If clarifying that includes murdering Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, then I think the American people don't want to hear about it.

"An Arab representative at the trial of Sirhan B. Sirhan said that the Arab people look on Sirhan as a great hero. I find that interesting."

Dank also said that it's a mistake to look on Israel as a political state because it is also a Jewish state. He pointed out that since Judaism began, there have always been Jews in Palestine but there have not always been Arabs. His statements came in reaction to an Arab student's remark that the land of Palestine should be returned

(Continued on Page 6)

Goon Squad

Traditions Commission has extended the deadline for Goon Squad applications. They must be brought to the Women's Building, ground floor, by 5 p.m., Wednesday.

Ifshin bolts GIA; convention rerun

By DOROTHY NASH

New developments in campus politics occurred during the week since party conventions were held. Foremost of these was the hearing by Elections Commission of the Greek Independent Alliance. Political upheavals resulted from the investigations adding additional pieces to the political jigsaw puzzle.

- Elections Commission officials heard testimony concerning the misuse of votes in the party convention by members of GIA. The party was found guilty, the persons involved were forced to resign and the party was fined.
- David Ifshin, formerly GIA's candidate for SG president, withdrew from the party and has continued his campaign for the SG seat as an independent candidate. He took with him two of the three GIA nominees for SG positions.
- Another convention was held by GIA Sunday in the multi-purpose room at St. Mary's. Class slates nominated in the previous convention were renominated without opposition.
- Howie Zweier received the GIA nomination for SG president at the convention. He demanded full support of the

(Continued on Page 5)

DAILY ORANGE

Syracuse University's Daily Newspaper Since 1903

Editor-in-Chief ..... Angus H. Twombly
Business Manager ..... Steven P. Strobridge

SENIOR EDITORS

Managing Editor ..... Alan Stamm
Editorial Director ..... Karen Wiediger
News Editor ..... Fred Tuccillo
Copy Editor ..... Jean Havens
Feature Editor ..... Roz Mazer
Sports Editor ..... Mike Weber
Campus Affairs Editor ..... Larry Kramer
Photography Editor ..... Clint Clemens

ASSOCIATE EDITORS

Andrij Bilyk, Kay Christensen, Beth Hillson, Rona Kavee, Helene Macdonald, Charles Shapiro, Patti Williams, Roni Zlokower, Bob Zuer, Dan Schlossberg.

BUSINESS STAFF

Assistant Business Manager ..... Art Depasqua
National Advertising Manager ..... Janet Meyer
Account Executives ..... Roger Black, Jim Maney, Mike Greenstein

Published Tuesday through Friday during the academic year by students of Syracuse University. Offices located at 200 Brooklea Drive, Fayetteville, N. Y., and 1101 East Adams St., Syracuse, New York. Entered as Second Class matter at the U. S. Post Office, Fayetteville, N. Y. 13066.

Experiment

Syracuse University, of all places, has become the testing ground for a new kind of campus protest. It involves research, confrontation and reason. Both the black students and the architecture students have experimented with it and both have discovered a new kind of student power--an impressive breakthrough on a campus that has not known any kind of student power.

Fifteen days ago the students of the School of Architecture began a boycott of classes. They had researched the school's shortcomings and carefully developed proposals for improvement. The boycott was their confrontation. And for days afterward they reasoned with faculty and administration.

The results were encouraging. The faculty sympathized with the complaints and collaborated on the reforms; the administration listened respectfully. Even the local press, with its neanderthal approach to campus protest, came to treat the effort as a sincere and responsible attempt by a group of students to improve the quality of their education.

Eleven days ago the black students of Syracuse University marched to the steps of the Administration Building and conducted a peaceful demonstration. They had researched the University's inadequacies to their needs and carefully developed proposals for meeting those needs. And now they reason with Dr. Piskor.

Again, for the most part, the results have been encouraging. The black students have established some sort of cautious, working relationship with the administration; the administration has demonstrated some recognition of their needs.

Another form of protest would have been much easier for the Administration to dispose of.

Petitioning for redress of grievances through student government would have been worth a good laugh--one step nowhere.

Seizing the Administration Building would have been worth some headlines, some violence, some arrests, some repression-one step backward.

But reason, based on careful research and backed by forceful but peaceful presentation can get results. No university administrator can laugh at such reason and claim to be intelligent or repress it and claim to be enlightened. That is the power of this new kind of campus protest.

But it requires patience, and patience has its limits.

The black students have demonstrated patience. How long it lasts will depend on how far it gets them.

If it gets them the kind of respect and response that Dr. Piskor seems to be demonstrating, the experiment in this new kind of campus protest will be a success.

But if it gets them the kind of reply Chancellor Tolley gave them, the experiment will be a failure. After two letters from them, the Chancellor did not see fit to answer personally. He sent them a five-point sheet on guidlines students should follow when protesting. The black students called his reply "obnoxious." It was more than that. It was incredibly stupid.

Even so, the experiment continues with the rational participants hoping for and working toward its success. For unsuccessful experiments often end in explosions. And explosions end in ashes.

--Frederick J. Tuccillo

Editorial Policy

Columns appearing on this page are the opinions of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Daily Orange staff. The paper welcomes diverse opinions and will consider all materials submitted for publication on this page.

Letters to the editor should be type written, signed and limited to 250 words in length.

Dissatisfaction, unrest

There is significant unrest in the University. The troubles stem from dissatisfaction with curriculum, the administration, in loco parentis regulations and student power. In the face of these major problems, what have this year's elected class officers done?

The sophomore class presented Janis Joplin and Paul Butterfield in a gala concert at the War Memorial. The junior class presented The Fifth Demension and a great "pig book." It seems that the senior class is having too much trouble finding a commencement speaker to get involved in the promotion business, but they would have, if they could have.

Is this what we need from campus leaders?

The standard response is "Look at Rubarb '71, look at all we've done to foster tradition and spirit." This is pure political bullshit.

Granted a few individuals have done some well-appreciated work in the fields of tutoring and student-financed scholarships for students from minority groups. Notably Robert Mussey and Stanley Huntington, for their devotion to Projection '70 and Larry Kramer working with Aspiration '72, have done highly commendable jobs. But, as Kramer stated, "There has been no help from class governments." It seems they are too busy organizing weekends.

In the nominating and pro speeches at the recent conventions only one candidate at GIA and one candidate at CAP did not base their entire campaign on increased spirit, tradition and the success or failure of the incumbant administration's weekend. To add to the insanity, one speaker at GIA said that it was irrelevant to wonder about whether people had fun at the last weekend. What was important, according to this political stalwart, was whether or not the class made a profit.

What Syracuse needs is an abolition of class governments. Their functions could be handled by dorm governments, University Union and Student Government. Although it will be mourned in passing, it won't really be missed.

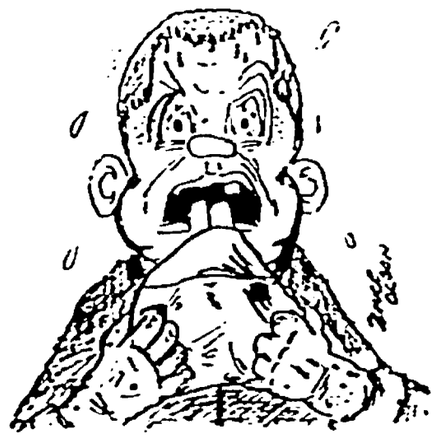
--David A. Ross

Letters to the editor

Biafra

In an article appearing in a prominent place in the DO of March 11, 1969, Andy Rosenblatt has presented a one-sided story of the Nigeria/Biafra issue. As Africans who know the issue better than Mr. Rosenblatt, we would like to present the other side of the story:

1. We are told that Nigeria was a nation created out of colonial boundaries. So are almost all other African, Asian and Middle Eastern countries. The alternative to sticking to colonial boundaries is to break up Africa into thousands of tribal entities. All responsible Africans reject this alternative and the charter and resolutions of the Organization of African Unity have specifically endorsed existing boundaries.



2. For your information, the eventual aims and objectives of we Africans are just in the opposite direction--to create more viable, economically and politically stronger supranational regional units. Hopefully, these regional units would eventually come together to form a United African Nation. We feel that these bigger multinational units are of great importance for the economic development of the continent. Only such groupings can give us a stronger voice in world affairs and get better international trade terms. Thus, any interference will be interpreted by Africans as a deliberate attempt by outsiders to hinder this growth-and perpetuate the dependence of the smaller units on foreign powers.

3. As for Mr. Rosenblatt's doubt of the legitimacy of the federal Nigerian Government because it was established following a "coup d'etat," we would like to remind him that he does not have to look very far to see other governments having similar origins-- most of the governments in Latin America, the present governments of South Vietnam, Indonesia and Pakistan are only a few of the numerous examples.

Finally, we would urge Mr. Rosenblatt and other similar-minded people to go back to the history books and study how modern Germany and Italy were born. Closer to home, we cannot help mentioning the parallel situation in the United States during the Civil War. If the United States' fight against secession was legitimate, why should Nigeria's similar situation be looked at differently?

An attempt to solve the Nigerian/Biafran situation right now is not to justify the legitimacy or illegitimacy of either side, but rather put pressure on the great nations and the United Nations to call for an immediate cease-fire and settle the problem at a conference table.

Tesfaye Donka
Flumo Stevens
El Awad
I.A. Akambi

Draft

To the Editor:

I was surprised that the Howell editorial of Feb. 15 in the Daily Orange, concerning a suggested volunteer-professional army, failed to arouse a response. The issue of military conscription is of paramount relevance not only to America's youth, but also, I believe, to the future of American foreign policy and international involvement. It is my feeling that Mr. Howell's attack upon the proposed abolition of conscription was justified, but primarily for a reason he failed to set forth.

In speaking of the undue influence of the military--industrial complex over American foreign and domestic policy, we must recognize that the sole but grand limiting factor on such an influence rests with the public and its ability to bring its opinion to bear on civil government. The growing unpopularity of the Vietman war has limited the total commitment that the Pentagon has felt inclined to making.

But if public opinion is to be aroused, the public must be spurred. The American people are moved to action only when they feel that their direct interests are being endangered. I firmly believe that if it were not for the increasing pressure the draft has been placing upon the sons of the American people, particulary those of the middle and upper classes, the relative unpopularity of the Vietnam war in particular and war in general, would be considerably less. Of course military conscription places a great burden upon Americans. But,what else is there, besides high taxes, inflation and domestic unrest, to make the dominant middle class aware of the idiocy of such little "involvements" as Vietnam? America should not be permitted to throw its weight around in the world without feeling the consequences of its actions. Abolish the draft, remove the thorn from the side of the public and an important check on future Pentagon pursuits is lost.

The logical conclusion, therefore, is that we should not only retain the draft system, but increase its burdensome effects upon the middle and upper classes by instituting the lottery and eliminating all deferments.

ALAN B. MOLDAWER
Alan B. Moldawer

Apathy

To the Editor:

I recently overheard two SU students downgrading the student body of Syracuse for its general apathetic attitude. I wish to use this opportunity to defend our student body. Not long ago Berkeley was a prestige college because the students were defying the university power structure. Today, however, campus upheaval is too widespread for a mere riot to bring notoriety to the campus. Syracuse has become a member of the elite nobility of schools where the University community is always peaceful and dull. Campus radicals have long journeyed to Syracuse for rest and relaxation where the golden rule is: "Don't do it standing up if it can be done sitting down; don't sit if you can lie down; and if it takes any real effort sleep through it."

This is no time for Syracusans to be proud however, for pride would waste adrenalin which should naturally be saved up for some future emergency.

A True Libertine

Levine discusses

Movie magnate attracts students' questions

By DAN SCHLOSSBERG

The man who played an integral part in seeing "The Graduate" through its commencement to the box-office success it is today, Joseph E. Levine, visited the SU campus Thrusday.

At a session in A-1 Newhouse, Levine, president of AVCO Embassy Pictures Corp. and producer of more than 300 movies in the past 11 years, fielded students' questions covering the motion picture spectrum from film violence to Charlie Chaplin.

Among the Hollywood rumors he dispelled was the statement that Doris Day had originally been offered the role of Mrs. Robinson in Levine's film, "The Graduate."

"Doris Day was never considered," Levine said after the audience stopped laughing at the question.

Levine also revealed that muscular Steve (Hercules) Reeves is alive and well and making movies--and good, money--in Italy. Levine spends quite a bit of his time there too and is the producer of such European films as "Divorce--Italian Style" and "Marriage--Italian Style." His latest success, a Hollywood product, is "A Lion in Winter" starring Peter O'Toole and Katherine Hepburn.

"The Graduate," of course, is the high point in the roller-coaster career of the bespectacled baron of film-making. Levine said the 1968 release, starring newcomers Dustin Hoffman and Kathryn Ross plus veteran actress Anne Bancroft, would soon surpass "Gone With the Wind" as the all-time No. 1 box-office attraction. He admitted he had never envisioned such success for the film.

But not everyone can be a fortune teller. Levine, in fact, almost blew the whole ball game when he and director Mike Nicols were creating "The Graduate."

"Nichols decided to have the Simon and Garfundel songs as the background in 'The Graduate,' "Levine said. "I was against it. I wanted to have an original score, and I wouldn't have objected to Simon and Garfunkel doing it.

One of the reasons will be Dustin Hoffman, whom Levine mistook for a carpenter the first time he saw him.

"You know how I met Dustin Hoffman?" he asked. "Nichols brought him up to my office, opened the door, and pushed him in. You know what I thought? The night before, there had been a bad storm and the window was leaking. I thought he was there to fix the window."

Kathryn Ross also came out of nowhere into a starring role in "The Graduate." Both have catapulted from oblivion into the spotlight due to overwhelming acclaim.

"I think the star system is finished," Levine volunteered. "People don't go to the movies to see Elizabeth Taylor or Audrey Hepburn. As Shakespeare said, 'The play's the thing.' I think that's true, and it's always been true.

" 'The Graduate' is living proof that the star is unimportant. It's the producer, director, writer, script...that's the thing."

Was he excited over the success of "The Graduate"?

"If you make one successful film in seven, you're lucky," he said. "I've made the most successful documentary of all time in 'The Sky Above--The Mud Below,' but musicals can go either way. Action movies, like 'The Dirty Dozen' and 'The Longest Day,' are a good bet."

Another good bet - with Levine at any rate - is Mike Nichols. When producer Levine works with director Nichols, the latter is given complete freedom. Nichols is the only director Levine signs to that sort of contract.

"Once the picture starts shooting, he's the commander-in-chief," Levine explained.

Will he delve into the past as well as the future? Levine had mixed reactions.

"I won't make a silent movie. If you want (Charlie) Chaplin, you can buy him and show him. No, I don't think he'll ever come back."

Asked about a possible return to serials by the film industry, Levine said, "You have that now--on television."

If the film industry does revert to tis "golden era," it may be possible to purchase copies of the old prints by the can.

"Pretty soon, you'll be able to buy 'The Graduate' in a store, take it home, and show it whenever you want. It will be about the size of a napkin. I know, I've seen this thing already.

"But what happens when you've seen 'The Graduate' 58 times? If it's something you love, I guess you can have it. You'll have a record collection and a film collection."

Joseph E. Levine, the man, is part of a collection too. He is the fourth major personality from Hollywood to appear on campus in the last two years. The others were Henry Fonda, Rod Steiger and Claire Bloom.

2.87 SALE 2.87
Check Ad, page 3
Record Rumer

ELIAS' SERVICE CENTER
610 and 700 BURNET AVE.
We Carry a Full Line of Foreign Car Parts and Accessories.
Special Rate for University Students with ID Card
1 3 R 2 4

LAW-DRAMA-SPEECH
majors
learn the art of verbal persuasion and earn salary plus commission part-time.
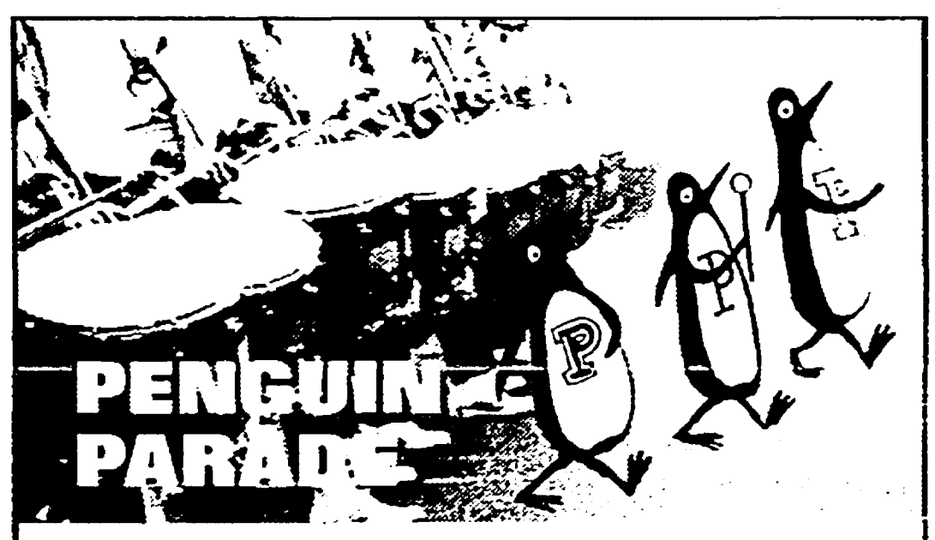
Prestige company needs your voice and personality.
Call Mr. Barr 446-8200.

Ask the 2618 graduates who joined an industry leader last year
—about Ætna.



Even Ætna can't be everybody's thing. But for any graduate with an interest in people and an inquisitive mind, a career with us can stretch your capabilities.

Helping people is our kind of thing. After all that's what insurance is all about. If it's also yours, we have opportunities in three basic areas—administrative, analytical or sales management. And we need engineering and business graduates as well as liberal arts people.

At Ætna, our business is selling insurance. But our concern is people.

Learn about Ætna. Ask for "Your Own Thing" at your Placement Office. An Equal Opportunity Employer and A Plans for Progress Company.

Ætna LIFE & CASUALTY
OUR CONCERN IS PEOPLE

These important new Penguins are available at your campus bookstore now:

WHITE OVER BLACK: American Attitudes Toward the Negro, 1550-1812. Winthrop D. Jordan. The fullest study ever made of the origins and development of Negro debasement in America exploring the white attitude toward the Negro from the sixteenth century through the early years of the Republic. A1056. $2.95

WOODROW WILSON (Revised Edition). Arthur Walworth. This book won the Pulitzer Prize for biography when it was first published in 1958. Now revised in the light of new material that has only recently been made available, the volume forms the most thorough and readable study of Woodrow Wilson ever written. A1067 $3.50

SOCIAL PSYCHIATRY IN PRACTICE: The Idea of the Therapeutic Community. Maxwell Jones. A discussion of a new concept in psychiatric treatment which shapes the conditions of the patient's total daily life to assist the curative process. A956. $1.25

CHARTRES. George Henderson. This companion volume to INIGO JONES (A839) and PALLADIO (A845) in Penguin's Architect and Society series traces the history of one of Europe's greatest cathedrals. A966. $2.25

NEO-CLASSICISM. Hugh Honour. Fifth volume in Penguin's widely-acclaimed STYLE AND CIVILIZATION series. A978. $2.95

NIETZSCHE: TWILIGHT OF THE IDOLS and THE ANTI-CHRIST. Translated by R. J. Hollingdale. L207. $1.25

PENGUIN BOOKS INC 7110 Ambassador Road Baltimore, Md. 21207

Focus on . . .

Fritz — friendly funder with financial flair

By RANDI POLLACK

As the April 15 financial aids application deadline approaches, a three-room office in a pre-fab at 205 University Place becomes the focus for considerable student anxiety.

Heading this office is a man who tries to do all he can to see that as many students as possible receive the maximum benefits at Syracuse University. The place is the Financial Aids Office, and the man is Arthur J. Fritz.

Fritz, who holds a degree in Social Sciences and Social Studies education from SU and also did graduate work here, spoke of his philosophy of education and financial aid last week in a DO interview.

"We award close to $1.5 million in general University scholarships," Fritz explained. "When we're charged with distributing this much money, we want to make sure we're making the right decision."

In addition to outright scholarships, there are two other kinds of aid: loans and campus jobs. There are also funds available from certain state sources and from loan and work programs tied in with the federal government. Fritz noted that even as University costs are increasing, federal funds are dwindling. This is because more and more colleges are applying for these funds and they must be spread out more.

Fritz estimated that approximately 75% of the students are receiving at least minimal financial aid from private, local, state of federal sources. About one-third of the students here are receiving direct assistance from the University.

When a student applies for financial aid, his application goes through several phases and is judged on a number of criteria.

ARTHUR J. FRITZ

Three criteria are considered for each applicant: family need, academic ability, and contribution to the Syracuse University community.

Priority goes to renewals in awarding scholarships. Fritz explained that there has been a change in thinking at the financial aids office in at least one aspect since he became head last July. Previously, he said, "When a student was denied aid as a freshman and his family put all their resources in putting him through one year here, we were kind in picking him up for his remaining years here. Now if a student is denied aid as a freshman and still chooses to come here, we make it clear to him that we have no further obligation to finance his education."

Present pressure from minority groups, especially black students, on all phases of University administration has had some effect on the Financial Aids Office, but Fritz stressed that consideration must be given to other groups for equally important reasons.

Applications of students from minority groups are considered separately from others. According to Fritz, their opportunities for assistance are increased when they compete among themselves rather than with students of higher socio-economic groups. In some cases, however, it is difficult to tell which students are members of minority groups because the information is not specifically requested on any part of the application.

In considering these applications, the priority goes to the economically disadvantaged of the Syracuse metropolitan area. "There's no need to spend $3500 to bring a student from New Orleans, for example, when we have students right here who need the help just as badly," Fritz said. "Tulane University should be taking care of them, and we'll take care of our own."

In discussing these problems, Arthur Fritz showed that he is first of all a man who is concerned with the students of Syracuse University. As evidence of this, he had several pictures on his wall done by a freshman art major at the University, which he is trying to sell to get additional funds for the student because "art students have to lay out so much money for supplies and equipment." Fritz hopes to set up similar galleries all over campus.

Record Prices Slashed

HUNDREDS OF LPs
REDUCED TO AN AMAZING

WE NEED YOUR BUSINESS and Are Willing to Do Anything to Get It

Record Runner 2.87

Your Master's Degree in Library Science can be your passport to a truly interesting career with the Defense Intelligence Agency

To librarians with initiative and perception the Defense Intelligence Agency now offers careers of exceptional scope, challenge and opportunity.

DIA is a unique, independent organization serving diverse intelligence requirements of the Department of Defense. We are active in many areas directly and indirectly related to national security . . . probing not only purely military conditions, trends and forces, but also pertinent economic, social, cultural, physical, geographic and scientific factors. The demands imposed on our library facilities are correspondingly broad, encouraging our library staff to use all the talents, ideas and experience they possess.

Openings are for:

LIBRARIAN (Bibliography)

Requires preparation of critical reading lists, bibliographies or descriptive abstracts in response to specific requests, using all available sources including secondary and peripheral subject matter fields. Develop parameters of the subject, its coverage, language and usage factors. Personally search more difficult subjects, usually confined to English language material but requiring interpretation and initiative. Transliteration skill is highly desirable to meet minimum foreign language literature searching.

LIBRARIAN (Information)

Will provide information retrieval and research support services by exploiting all information sources, applying broad geographic-area and subject knowledge of information sources, reference collections, library index patterns and catalogs, and employing all knowledge and theories of a professional librarian. Provide general support for a major geographic area, involving the collection, selection, evaluation and synthesis of information within the parameters of the user's requirements. Ideally you should be familiar with technological advances in library automation with special emphasis on reference services such as information retrieval systems.

Other openings are also available for a cataloging librarian and an acquisition librarian.

Starting salaries range from $8,462 to $10,203, depending on experience, and are augmented by all the benefits of career Federal service. You do not need Civil Service certification but will be subject to a thorough background inquiry and physical examination. U.S. citizenship is required. For complete information please send your resume or Standard Form 171 (available at any post office) including college transcript or summary of grades to:

defense intelligence agency

Civilian Personnel Division
The Pentagon
Washington, D.C. 20301

An equal opportunity employer

Ifshin...

(Continued from page 1)

party in view of the recent occurrences saying he could walk out just as easily as Ifshin if he didn't get it.

The investigations were initiated after Elections Commission received a complaint from one of the brothers in a fraternity that is politically affiliated with GIA. The complaint charged that his name was registered with the party and voted used in the convention by proxy without his knowledge or consent. Affidavits signed by other members of the house were later received by Richard Barton, chairman of the commission, indicating that the same misrepresentation had occurred in a number of other cases. Testimony during the hearing revealed that the proxy lists were not received by party officials until after the convention was over. As a result of the hearings, GIA was found guilty of "flagrant negligence" and fined $325. The party's executive board was forced to resign. Some members were restricted from further participation in campus politics indefinitely and others were censured for the remainder of this year only. The guilty fraternity was expelled from the party.

The GIA SG slate with the exception of Roger Conner, vice presidential candidate, withdrew its association from the party.

"The basic reason I left GIA is that the whole premise of campus party politics is invalid. The manner in which the convention was carried out, the events that immediately preceded and followed, and the meeting on Tuesday were rapidly deteriorating the whole campaign into one big game."

Both parties hit by probe

By LARRY KRAMER
Campus Affairs Editor

A full-scale investigation has been launched by the Student Government Elections Commission and its chairman Richard Barton, into illegal practices surrounding the recent Campus Alliance Party and Greek Independent Alliance conventions.

Barton's investigations have already led to a second convention for GIA on the grounds that certain votes in the convention were merely "bought" by Greek houses. Allegedly these houses had never properly consulted their members. In fact, a leading GIA official was quoted as announcing to the entire convention, "Anyone wishing to buy more votes may come down and do so now."

Similar accusations have been directed towards CAP and the Elections Commission is presently investigating several houses affiliated with CAP.

Barton was very disappointed with much of the testimony. He critized the attitude of many of the people questioned. "They have shown a lack of concern for the campus in general and they don't understand the importance of what we are trying to do."

Barton continued, "I only hope that none of the people that are involved here said anything about what happened in Chicago this summer because what they are doing here is just the same."

At one of the recent questioning periods, held at a sorority, the president of the house stated that all the members of the house were present when the vote was taken to join one of the parties. However, as each sister would walk into the room, Barton would ask, "How did your house vote to go about paying for joining a party?" Not one of over 20 sisters knew the answer.

Barton's crusade will continue until there has been significant revision of the convention procedure. One of the candidates on the GIA ticket said, "Barton told me that he had enough evidence to hold off the elections until September."

Architecture boycott ends, student-faculty board meets

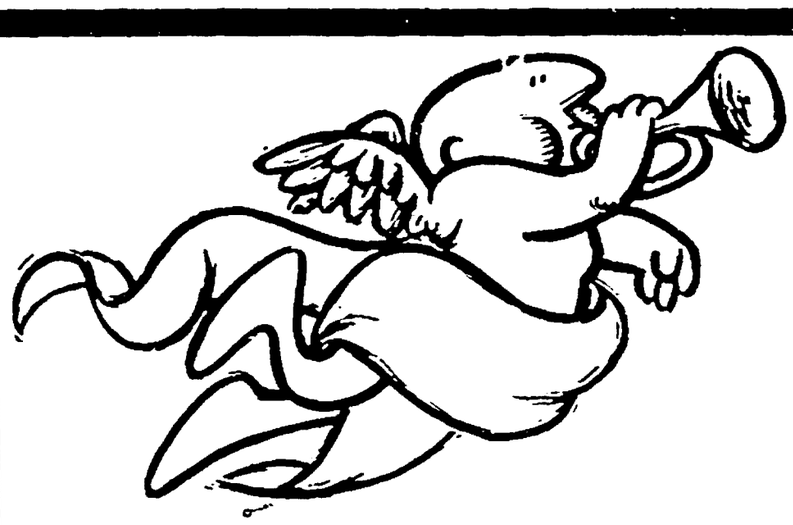
By JOHN WISNIEWSKI

Students in the School of Architecture returned to classes Thursday, ending their 10-day boycott. They now await approval by administrative officials of the newly formed student-faculty board.

Students termed the return to classes "a statement of good faith and appreciation for faculty and administrative cooperation within the school." However, students did not rule out the possibility of another strike, if the board does not win the University's legal approval.

The "School of Architecture Board" met Wednesday for the first time.

Paul Scoville, president of the architecture school's student body, outlined what the board's area of jurisdiction would be if it received legal University approval:



Curriculum -- The board will make recommendations to the Faculty Senate concerning curriculum matters.

Admissions -- The board will take a huge work load from the dean by assisting in interviewing prospective architecture students strictly within the University's rules.

Faculty -- Suggestions will be presented to the Administration on what to consider when hiring new faculty members.

Budget -- The board will have power to review the school's budget and submit objections, if any.

Facilities -- If an article, a desk for example, is needed, the board would request such from the administration.

A CLASSIC OFFER

Full Stock of Budget Classical LP's

Nonesuch

Seraphim

Odyssey

Turnabout

NOW at The Corner Store

SU Bookstores

"Our Business Is People"

S. Crouse and University Pl.

WHY NOT FLY

YOUR OWN JET!

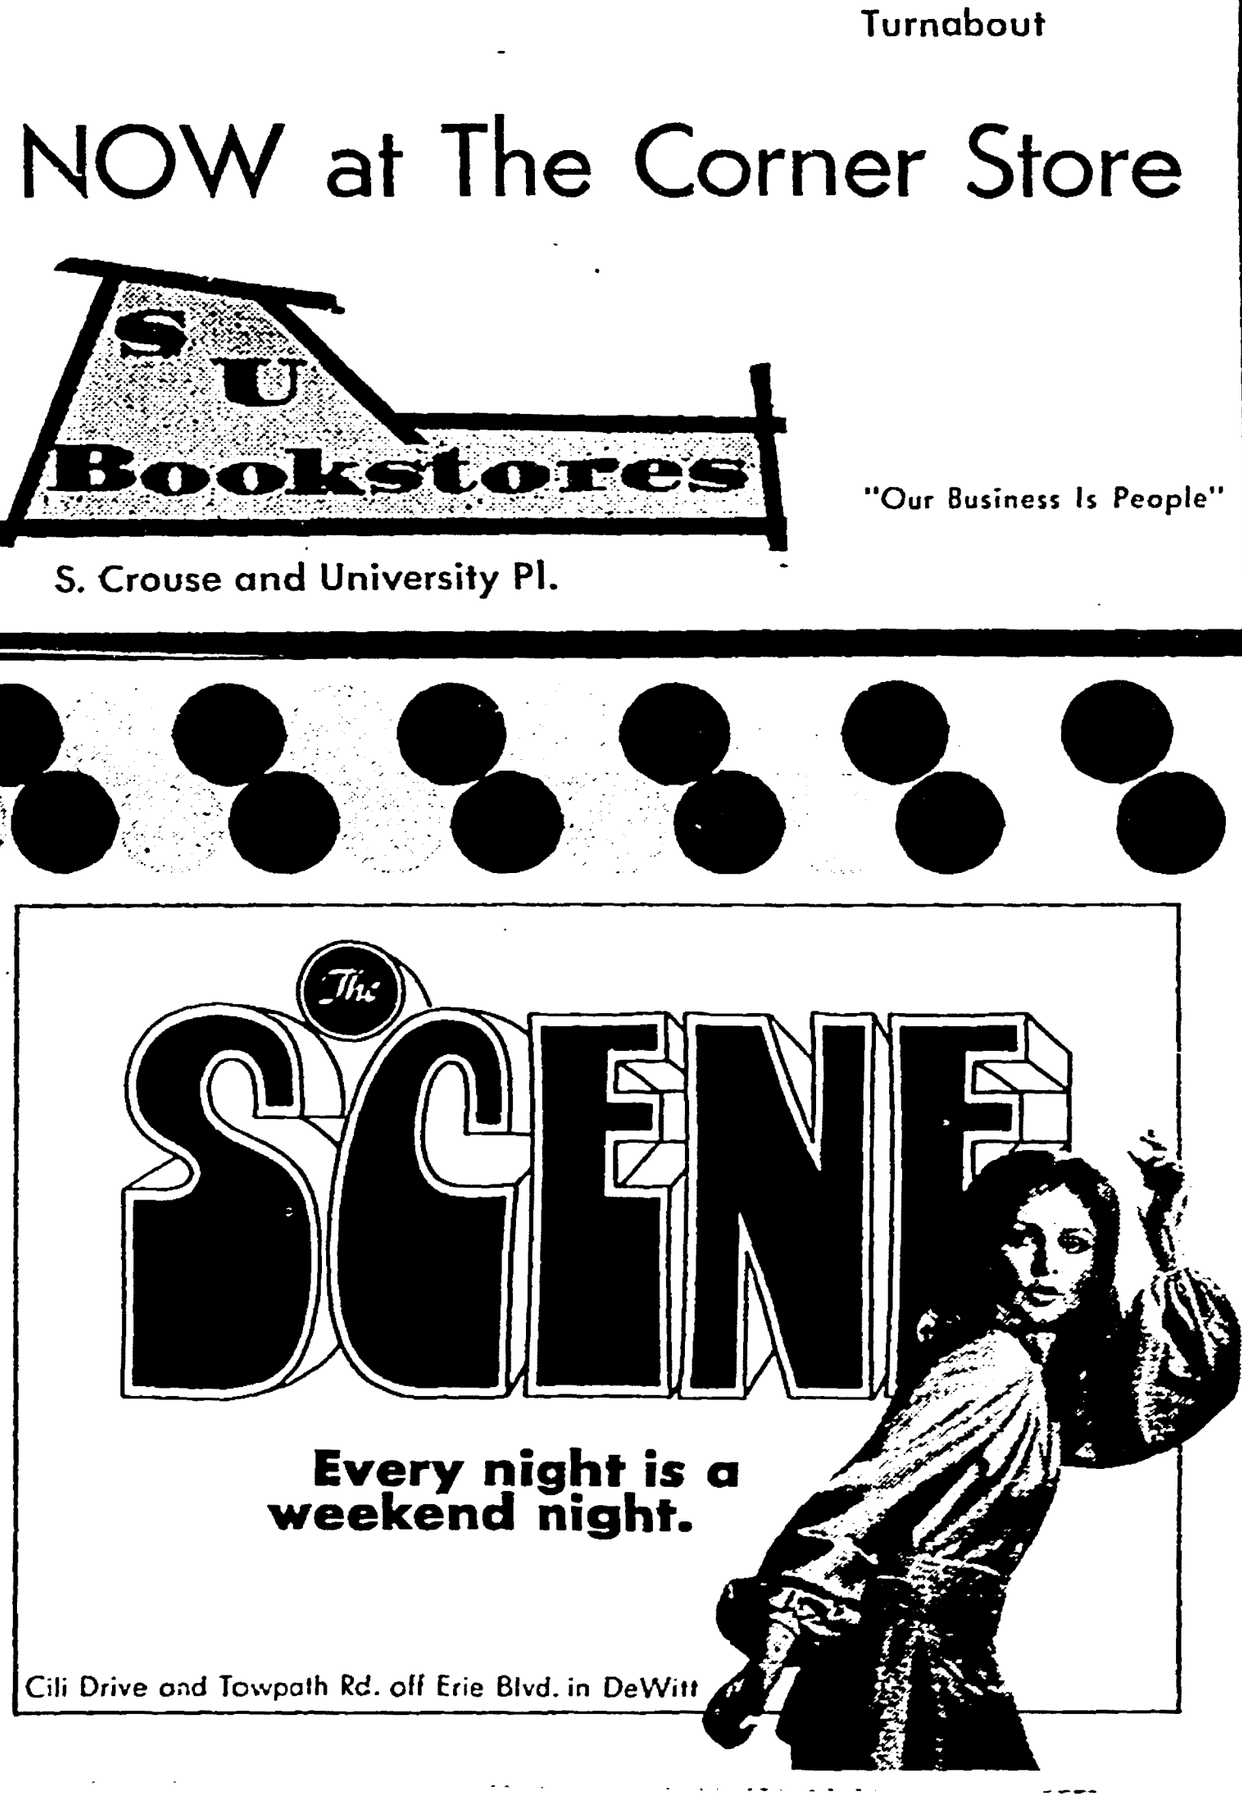
IT DOES 0 to 150 in 2.1 SECONDS

SO WE DON'T HAND OVER THE KEYS TO JUST ANY KID THAT COMES ALONG

See: Lt. Dan Kauffman

Lt. j.g. Marty Polenski

for details on how you can qualify



Team will be on campus 27 and 28 March '69

10 a.m. to 2 p.m. — Placement Center

U. S. NAVY
Aviation Officer Program
Naval Air Station
Brooklyn, New York 11234

NAME ..... AGE .....
COLLEGE .....
GRADUATION DATE ..... PHONE .....
ADDRESS .....
CITY ..... STATE ..... ZIP .....

I understand there is no obligation

Jabberwocky comes to Kimmel

The new student activities center in Kimmel, to be called Jabberwocky, will probably open with a concert Spring Weekend, according to project director Ira Kurzban.

All types of student help are needed to run Jabberwocky, which will include a snack bar, bar, and recreation area. These jobs include checking ID's, accounting, and custodial work. Some positions will be salaried. Students who work this year will have first priority for jobs next semester and in the permanent union building.

Graduate and undergraduate students interested in working in Jabberwocky are asked to attend a meeting tonight at 7 p.m. in 307 HL, or call Ira Kurzban at ext. 3095.

IS THIS YOU

I am opposed to the Viet Nam War (and any such war that is not based upon defense of our country). Please send me application to the Ministry of your church, as well as information as to its beliefs and membership throughout the world.

It is my understanding that if I am accepted to the ministry of your church, I can not conscientiously participate in any military involvement not directly concerned with the defense of our country or its possessions. I further understand that training will not interfere with my normal work or academic schedule — and I can choose my own location of service to God and humanity.

Enclosed is $1.00 to cover clerical expenses and cost of mailing.

NAME ..... AGE .....
ADDRESS .....
CITY ..... STATE ..... ZIP .....

Mail entire ad to: Church of the Humanitarian God
P. O. Box 13236, St. Petersburg, Florida 33733

PRICE EXPLOSION

DOZENS AND HUNDREDS OF

LPs SLASHED

IN PRICE TO AN

Unbelievably Low

2.87

No Gimmicks
No Seconds
Now It's Our Turn

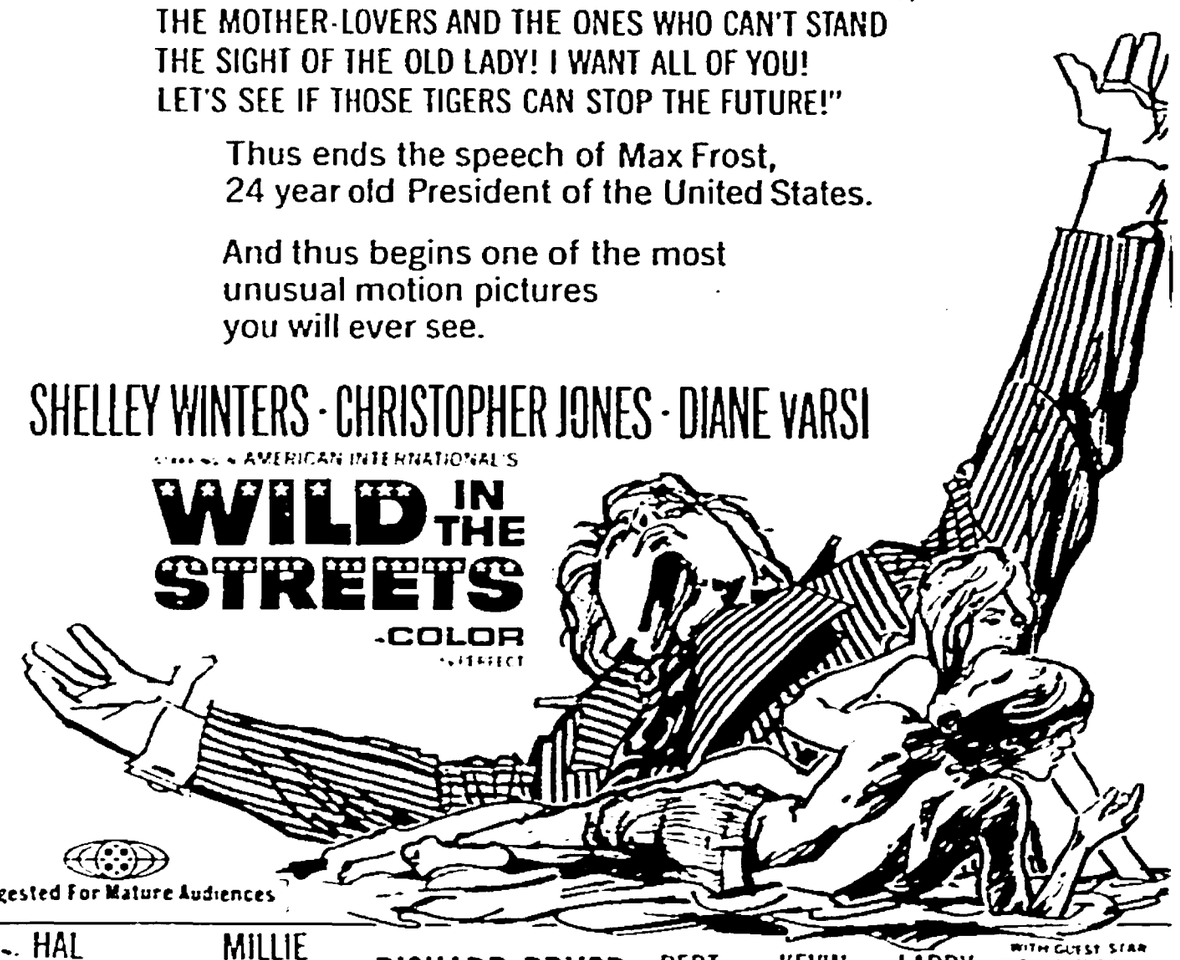
All LPs Must Go

Record Runner

THE OLD TIGERS ARE SCARED, BABY!

"I WANT THE TWO-CAR KIDS AND THE ONE-BEDROOM KIDS, THE MOTHER-LOVERS AND THE ONES WHO CAN'T STAND THE SIGHT OF THE OLD LADY! I WANT ALL OF YOU! LET'S SEE IF THOSE TIGERS CAN STOP THE FUTURE!"

Thus ends the speech of Max Frost, 24 year old President of the United States.



And thus begins one of the most unusual motion pictures you will ever see.

SHELLEY WINTERS · CHRISTOPHER JONES · DIANE VARSI

AMERICAN INTERNATIONAL'S

WILD IN THE STREETS

-COLOR

Suggested For Mature Audiences

HAL HOLBROOK · MILLIE PERKINS · RICHARD PRYOR · BERT FREED · KEVIN COUGHLIN · LARRY BISHOP · WITH GUEST STAR ED BEGLEY

DIRECTED BY BARRY SHEAR · PRODUCED BY JAMES H. NICHOLSON and SAMUEL Z. ARKOFF · EXECUTIVE PRODUCER BURT TOPPER · WRITTEN BY ROBERT THOM · SONGS by BARRY MANN and CYNTHIA WEIL

© 1968 American International Pictures

film forum

gifford auditorium
syracuse university

$1.00

March 25, 26, 27
7 and 9 p. m.

Protest . . .

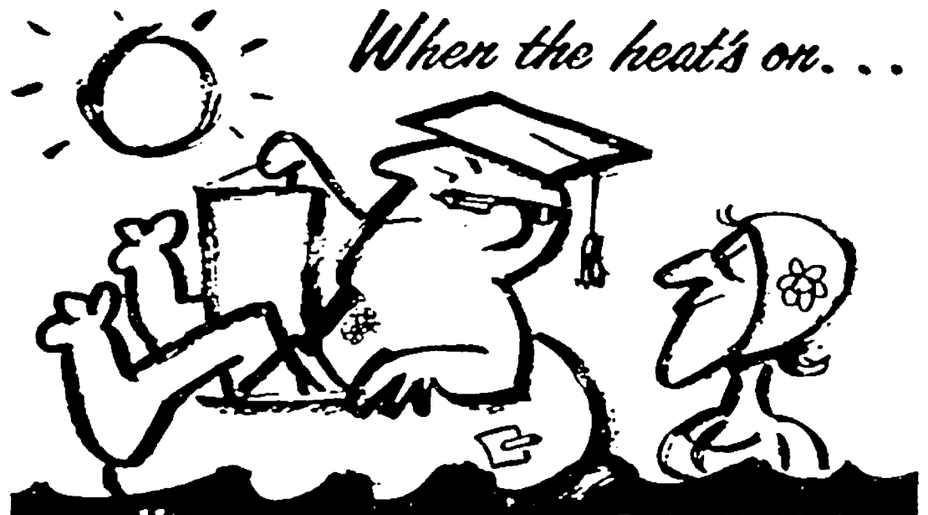
(continued from page 1)

to its rightful owners, the Palestinian people, and that Israelis who did not want to remain there under a Palestinian government could "go back where they cane from."

El-Farra's speech is expected to touch directly on the refugee problem that is the crux of the Arab-Israeli dispute. His title, "The Palestinian Pelple--To Be or Not to Be," reflects the view of the Arab Student Organization that there should be discussion of the problem, particularly now that Israel has refused to accept the Four-Power decision on the Middle East.

Dank said yesterday Israel doesn't accept a big-powers solution because such a solution failed them in 1948, 1956, and again in 1967, when none of the Big Four made an effort to guarantee Israeli access to the Straits of Tairan, closed by the Arabs after a UN troop withdrawal.

Although the same Arab student spokesman said that Palestinians were treated as second-class citizens by Israel, Dank asked what kind of treatment Israelis would have received had they lost the 1967 war.



"Radio Amman and Radio Cairo said they would drive Israel into the sea if the war went the other way," he said, "and then there wouldn't have been two-and-a-half million dead Jews."

"If the Palestinians are second-class citizens," he continued, "what about the Jews in Egypt, who have been in concentration camps since 1967, and Jews of Syria, who have been under house arrest since 1967?"

Dr. El-Farra has been Jordan's Ambassador to the United Nations since 1965.

Among his many diplomatic assignments El-Farra served as president of the United Nations Security Council in March 1966. During 1964-65 he was president of the Arab Council for Economic Unity in Cairo. In 1959-60 he was director of Arab Affairs of the Foreign Ministry of Jordan and in 1969-61 was director of its Palestine division. He was Minister Plenipotentiary to the Jordan Embassy in Cairo and to the ARab Council for Economic Unity in 1963.

El-Farra received his LL.B. degree from Boston University and a Doctor of Juridical Science degree from the University of Pennsylvania. As a spokesman for the Arab States, he has lectured at leading universities in this country and before civic and professional organizations.

the University of MAINE SUMMER SESSIONS make it a matter of degrees!

TWELVE WEEK SESSION
June 16 to Sept. 5

Three-week and six-week Sessions. Regular Six-week session July 7 - Aug. 15

Earning degree credits in the cool, refreshing Maine climate is like being on vacation with recreational opportunities at nearby lakes, mountains and seashore while you take Graduate and Undergraduate courses at Orono or Portland. Distinguished faculty and visiting lecturers, conferences, workshops, summer arts festival. Modern dormitory accommodations.

For information, write:
DIRECTOR OF SUMMER SESSIONS
University of Maine, Orono, Maine 04473

MAKE VACATIONLAND YOUR VOCATIONLAND

TVs

RECONDITIONED
GUARANTEED
"REASONABLE"

— ALSO —

COMPLETE
ELECTRONIC SERVICE

AT STUDENT PRICES, BRING IT IN AND

SAVE $$$

TVs Bought, Sold, Traded

USED TV CENTER

1701 W. Fayette, at W. Genesee

468 - 9854

Happenings

Campus Notices must be brought to the DO Office (1101 E. Adams St., second floor, first desk on the left) by 3 p.m. on the day before they are to be published. We regret that due to the many requests each notice must be limited to 25 words and may not be run more than two days in a row. Notices will not be taken over the phone.

TUESDAY

A COURSE in Theatre of Cruelty? Black Arts? History of Rythmn and Blues? Interested? Come to the Free University Committee meeting at Gamma Phi Beta - 7 p.m. Questions - Brian X2779.

SEMINAR - Dr. D.F. Parsons lecturing at 4 p.m. in 225 Sims on "Electron Microscopy of Biological Materials in the Natural State."

CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTION SYMPOSIUM - sponsored by the Law Students Civil Rights Research Council 8 p.m. in B-115 White Hall (below Grant Auditorium).

SIGMA DELTA CHI Meeting and final spring rush tonight in the Lawrinson Penthouse, 9:30 p.m. Newspaper and magazine upperclassmen are eligable for admission. Officers will be chosen.

RUSSIAN CLUB CHORUS will meet 6 p.m. in 227 HBC.

RUSSIAN CLUB will present the film "Eugene Onegin," at 7 p.m. in 200 NCC. All invited.

TRADITIONS COMMISSION - Important at 500 University Place. Please bring all questions for Goon Interviews. If you can't attend, call Nancy Glazer at X2469.

OUTING CLUB meeting at 7:15 in 207 HL. Discussion on leaders and leadership. Everyone welcome.

THURSDAY

COMMUTERS — All invited to a commuting students Assn. meeting 4 p.m. in 309 Women's Building.

GENERAL

DRAFT COUNSELING - The Law Students Civil Rights Research Council and the Syracuse Draft Counselling Service will hold draft counseling in Room 101 White Hall from 7-9 p.m.

DEADLINE for Campus Chest Applications has been extended to March 26, Wednesday at 5 p.m. Include name, ideas and experience. Turn in to Gamma Phi Beta. ?'s call Trudy - 478-5285, or X2637

ANYONE interested in forming a late night club? Call Neal or Joel X2038.

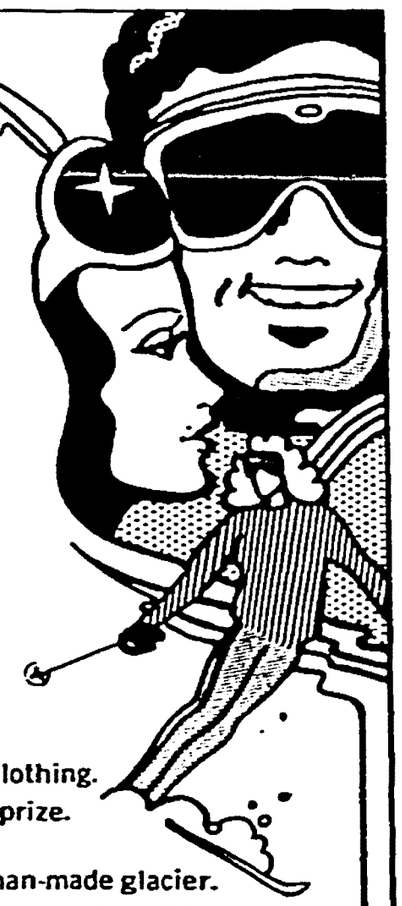
JURISPRUDENCE P.S. 341 Lawrenson Penthouse.

RIDE OR RIDERS Wanted for Spring Vacation? Check the Alpha Phi Omega Ride Board in the basement of HL. Also call the APhiO office at X3433.

GOON Squad application deadline has been extended to Wednesday at 5 p.m. in the Women's Building.

Booth election

The 1969-1970 Booth Dorm Council was elected last week, by residents of each floor. The members took office immediately and will serve until next March.



The members are: Dave Wanetik, Jack Telian, Rich Uhlick, Chris Taylor, Ed Brown, Steve Tober, Bob Bertucio, Tom Lang, and Craig Wilson. Tober was elected president at the first council meeting; he will begin his third year in that position.

Some priorities the council will consider are the purchase of a new stereo and a color TV.

The combination of a highly sophisticated sound system and an electrifying dance floor generates an exciting uninhibited atmosphere.
It has to be seen to be believed.
The SCENE
Celi Drive and Towpath Rd off Erie Blvd in Dewitt

EDWARD HOMMEL & SONS
OPTICIANS
VANDERBILT SQ. CENTER
127 S. SALINA ST.
FREE PARKING

474-4644
EYEGLASSES & CONTACT LENSES
REPAIRS
Telex Hearing Aids

MT. SNOW
SPRING VACATION SKI-IN...
JUST FOR FUN!
Stamp out dull vacations without spending big bread. It's a ski-in, dance-in, swing-in. 5 days of action, on or off the slopes. You'll meet cool people to rap with and do things with. So organize a thing with a kicky group and split for Mt. Snow.
Some of the goings on:
- Big auction of ski equipment and clothing.
- Pie-eating contest with a $50 first prize.
- Fountain Mountain Escapade— exciting skiing on world's largest man-made glacier.
- Plus many other kooky doings and assorted skullduggery.

5 Day Vacation Ski Package from $35 includes:
5 daily two-hour lessons, unlimited use of all lifts, use of heated outdoor pool and indoor ice skating rink, nightly apres-ski, parties, entertainment.
MT. SNOW
So what if it's a little wild.
Box-CM, Mt. Snow, VT. 05356 Phone 802-464-3333

Campus Classified

GR 6-5571, Ext. 2314

Rates minimum of 15 words:

1 day	1.15
2 days	2.25
3 days	3.30
4 days	4.30
5 days	5.25
6 days	6:15

To place a classified ad, call GR 6-5571, ext. 2314, between 1 and 3 p.m. Ad must be placed 2 days in advance. Every word over 15 costs 5c extra per day.
ALL ADS MUST BE PREPAID.

MISCELLANEOUS

RENT if you can't buy! T.V.s, tape recorders, typewriters. By week, month or semester. Reasonable rates. S. U. BOOKSTORE, GR 6-5541, x 2426.

FRAME your works of art at unbeatable prices at S. U. BOOKSTORE. Also signs and posters. In the Art Dept., 303 University Pl.

ALTERATIONS DONE within 24 hours. Call for an appointment. Lillian Potter, 207 Comstock. 478-5847.

PRIVATE DRIVING LESSONS — automatic or standard shift. Full or refresher courses. Qualified professional instructors. Pickup service. Auto Driving Academy. GR 6-3995.

TOP FIT mental, physical health through YOGA exercises; training, meditation. Join classes now. Call 471-7217.

FOR SALE

1967 MGB-GT — British racing green, under 20,000 miles. In excellent condition, new dual exhaust. AM-FM radio, and much more. 445-0821 or S. U. x 3877.

ESTATE OF MARY LAWLOR, 731 Ostrom Avenue, March 14, 15 (10 a.m. to 9 p.m.) Entire contents of house must be sold — furniture, furnishings, appliances, etc. Directed by Marion R. Henley.

1967 BRIDGESTONE CYCLE, 175cc. 1100 actual miles. Priced for quick sale. Call GR 1-3445 or HA 2-4181-x56.

'63 TR3, TR4 engine. Call x2791, 2792. Mike Elmer.

'67 MG MIDGET — Body OK, engine excellent. Snow tires. $1,600.00. Owner marrying. Call Linda, 469-1512.

TRIUMPH MOTORCYCLE, 650 cc.; Bonneville, 1968 model. Like new. Call Mrs. Shultes, 446-2574 or SU x 2459.

'68 PONTIAC GTO Convertible, power steering, positraction, and many extras. 11,000 miles. Must sell. 446-5242.

FOR RENT

FURNISHED 3 ROOM APARTMENT. Near University. Available for immediate occupancy. Call Nancy Sellers, 478-2620.

CATAMOUNT SKI AREA: House for rent on Prospect Lake in Berkshires - cooking facilities. Sleeps eight — weekends or weekly — five minutes from Catamount — Contact Reggie, x3303 or 212-749-1430.

TYPING

THIRTY YEARS EXPERIENCE. Dissertations, term papers, proof-read. Satisfaction guaranteed. Mrs. Raymond Webb. HE 7-8259.

DIANE WALLACE, 472-2115. Theses, dissertations and term papers. IBM electric. 30c per page. 5c copy. Multilith. 45c.

TAKE YOUR MANUSCRIPT to the only professional typing and printing service serving the S. U. area. The knowledge and experience of having done over 2,000 theses and dissertations is behind every job we turn out. Stephanie's Office Service. 469-2795.

Open next week

Orange stickmen eye top ten spot

By ED AGRANOWITZ

After more than 40 years on the job, you would hardly expect Syracuse lacrosse coach Roy Simmons to be bubbling over with enthusiasm when he talks about this year's team.

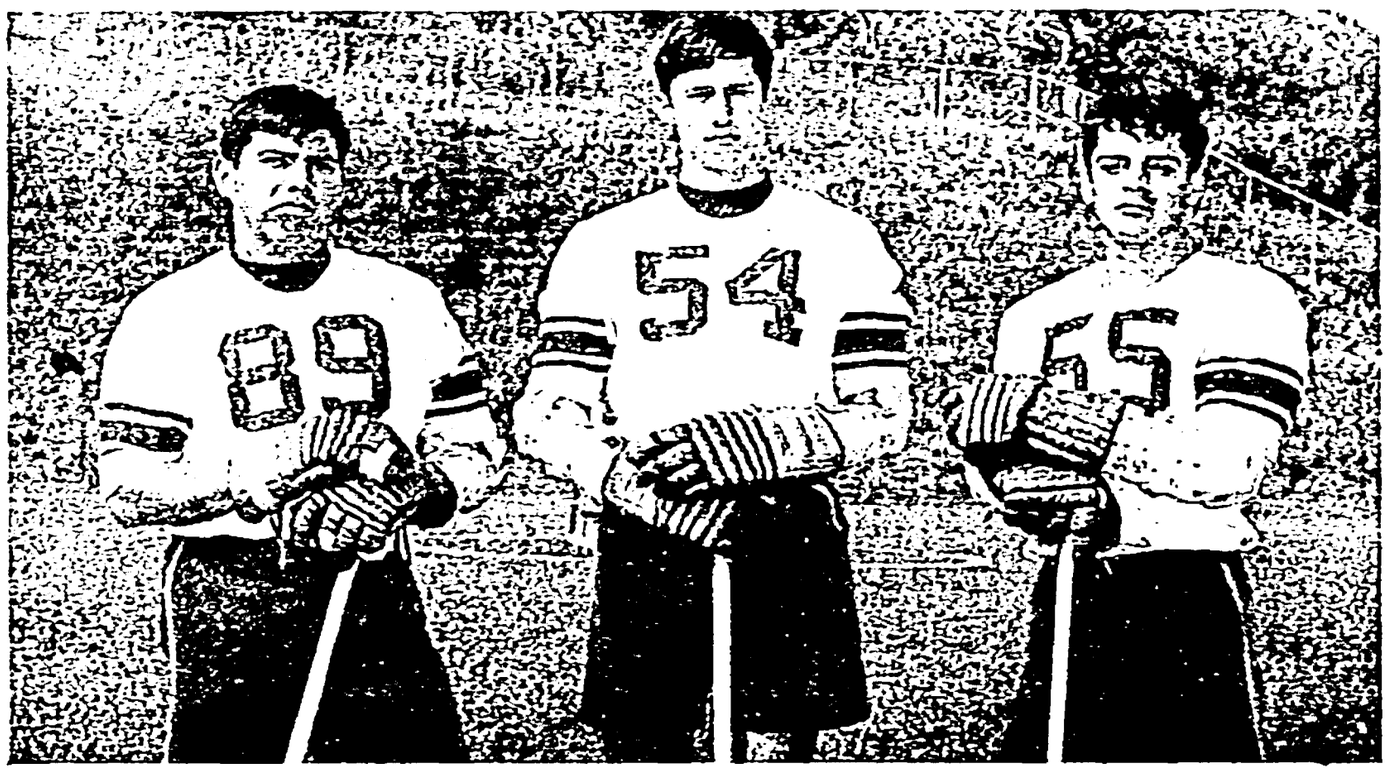
But Simmons has almost everyone back from last season's number 10 nationally-ranked squad, along with some blue chip sophomores, who could push the Orangemen a few notches up the ladder this year.

The only missing faces will be defenseman Andy Lubin,. and John Pappas, who played both midfield and attack.

For the past several years, Simmie's biggest problems have been academic. This year, however, the rash of ineligibilities never came and the stickmen will be at full strength.

"We gained a lot of experience last year and were picking up momentum at the end of the season," says Simmons. "We should be able to improve our record and ranking this year."

Leading the high scoring attack for the Orange will be Verne Doctor, last year's co-captain and a third team All American selection. Doctor, a deft passer and deadly shooter, will join lanky Leo Nolan and co-captain Jeff Davis on the Syracuse front line.



At the vital midfield position, Simmie has both quality and quantity. Because the middies are the only players allowed to run both halves of the field, depth is the key. "We have three excellent midfield units," says Simmons, "and I expect them all to be tough."

Likely to draw the starting nod is the junior threesome of Jim Smith, Mark Austerlitz, and Dick George. Smith, showing no ill- effects from a knee operation, Austerlitz and George formed last season's top midfield unit and work well together, substituting gutty play for a lack of real good size.

The second midfield trio consists of seniors Tony Lappi, Paul Dimartino, and Dick Polgren. "Two years ago, this was our top midfield," says Simmie. "This should give you some idea of our depth."

The unit that make's the coach's eye's gleam, however, consists of sophomores Ron Doctor (Verne's brother), Tom Varley, and Rick Travis. "Those sophs are coming on like a house afire," raves Simmons. "And Ron Doctor is as good as anyone on the team. Once they get a little experience under their belts, they'll really help us."

The Orange defense will be anchored by returning starters Cliff Ensley (co-captain) and John Scipione. Ensley, at 6-1, 190 and Scipione, 6-3, 225 both possess an abundance of quickness and a complete disregard for the physical welfare of opposing attackmen. Junior Ethan Klausner, the ringleader in last year's "extra man" defense (when SU was shorthanded with a man in the penalty box), has garnered the third starting spot and should make his 6-1, 225 lb. frame felt. "The defense has done a good job in the scrimmages," reports Simmons. "They've been hitting real hard."

ORANGE GOALGETTERS Verne Doctor, Leo Nolan and Jeff Davis are SU's starting attackers for the second straight year. All- American Doctor has been victorious in battles with the books and a severely injured ankle and will spearhead this all senior unit which combined for over 60 goals last year.

Rounding out the starting cast will be veteran goalie Butch Brown, the man who knows no fear. The team's lone academic casualty claimed backup netminder Bruce Weir, a promising soph. Junior Bill Ebner will assume the relief duties.

"One of our biggest assets is excellent depth," says Simmie. Attackers Tom Powers, Bill Gudden, and Mark Cudea, defensemen Chris Stringer and Rick Cramer, and middies John Nelson, Mike Costello, Bob Nichols, Mark Smith, and Phil Powers are among the talented reserves. "I wouldn't feel badly about using any of them in any situation," says Simmons.

The Orange open up their difficult schedule with a midwest spring trip. "We have four tough openers in five days," says Simmie. Starting one week from today, the Orange will face Ohio Wesleyan, Denison, Ohio State, and Kenyon College, with the only open date being Friday, April 4.

Denison, the defending Midwest champ, figures to be the toughest of the four. They have won 21 out of their last 22 games, and will provide a stern test for the Orange, whose workouts have been confined to Manley Field House for the past month.

"The boys have terrific spirit and have been working real hard," says Simmie. "If we don't suffer injuries to key personnel, we should have a real good year."

Cards, Braves top NL picks

By DAN SCHLOSSBERG
Associate Editor

Although the St. Louis Cardinals should nail down their third straight first-place finish in 1969, there's no guarantee they'll make the World Series, and chances are they won't.

This strange set of circumstances is the result of the brand new two-division set-up in which the Cardinals are in the Eastern Division but Cincinnati and Atlanta, both in the Western Division, are east of St. Louis geographically.

The NL's geographical miscues are probably as serious as the following predictions, but omitting the annual big league forecast would break tradition, so here goes: EASTERN DIVISION

1. St. Louis Cardinals - Acquisition of outfielder Vada Pinson and pitchers Dave Giusti and Bo Belinsky, gives lustre to a team already with talent. The Cards still have Bob Gibson, Nelson Briles, and Ray Washburn on the hill backed by standouts, Lou Brock, Curt Flood, Tim McCarver and newcomer Joe Torre in the field.

2. Chicago Cubs - Leo Durocher has baseball's best bull-pen, a solid front-line infield, and a solid offense which includes run-makers Ernie Banks, Ron Santo, and Billy Williams. For pitching, Durocher can call on Fergie Jenkins or Bill Hands as reliable starters with Ted Abernathy and Phil Regan in relief.

3. New York Mets - If hitting appears on the New York skyline, pitchers Tom Seaver and Jerry Koosman could enjoy even bigger years this season than in '68. This team is young but has some solid performers in Cleon Jones, Ron Swoboda, and Tommie Agee.

4. Pittsburgh Pirates - The Buccos have five of the NL's finest players in pitchers Bob Veale and Steve Blass and outfielders Willie Stargell, Matty Alou, and Roberto Clemente, but little else. Shortstop Gene Alley can't throw, secondbaseman Bill Mazeroski is aging, and there are rookies elsewhere.

5. Philadelphia Phillies - This club is in desperate need of both pitching and catching. The Phils have some stars, but at least two of them, Deron Johnson and Johnny Callison, must enjoy comeback seasons or the Phils won't go anywhere. Rich Allen at bat and Chris Short on the mound are best players here.

6. Montreal Expos - This new team appears to have some offensive potential: it may offend all the fans in Montreal. Seriously, though, Mgr. Gene Mauch has some hopes in pitchers Jim Grant and Larry Jaster and hitters Mack Jones, Rusty Staub and Maury Wills. But he has no hopes of escaping 6th place in the Eastern Division. WESTERN DIVISION

1. Atlanta Braves - Return of Clete Boyer and Rico Carty, who accounted for 41 home runs a year earlier and then dropped to four in 1968, hypos a Braves team which had its youngest and finest pitching staff ever last season (2.93 ERA). Hitters Hank Aaron, Orlando Cepeda, Felipe Alou, Felix Millan, Carty, and Boyer should form a nice combination with pitchers Pat Jarvis, Phil Niekro, and Milt Pappas to bring the South its first National League pennant.

2. Cincinnati Reds - Five new pitchers since last season began might spell pennant on the banks of the Ohio River in 1969. Or so says Reds pilot Dave Bristol, who counts on Tony Cloninger, Jim Merritt, Wayne Granger, Clay Carroll, and Jack Fisher to improve his pitching. Holdover power-hitters Tony Perez, Johnny Bench, and Lee May plus NL bat champ Pete Rose and star pitchers Jim Maloney and Gary Nolan might spell trouble for the Braves and Giants, the other top contenders in the NL West.

3. San Francisco Giants - Though the Giants have problems at catcher, the outfield, and the infield, any team with pitchers Juan Marichal and Gaylord Perry and hitters Willie Mays, Willie McCovey and Jim Hart should be a contender. The Frisco '69ers will be.

4. Los Angeles Dodgers - Rookie infielders Bill Grabarkewitz and Bill Sudakis may mean more hitting, and so might newcomer Andy Kosco, but L.A. pitching will be the main forte of Walt Alston's 1969 entry. Don Drysdale, Claude Osteen, Bill Singer, and Alan Foster, a rookie, are the chief operatives, and they're good.

5. Houston Astros - Newcomers John Edwards, Jesus Alou, and Curt Blefary have strengthened a hitting crew that already included Jim Wynn and Doug Rader but so weakened the pitching - featuring Don Wilson, Larry Dierker, and Denny Lemaster - that Houston may not recover.

6. San Diego Padres - This new club is probably the weakest of all the expansion teams. Its outfield, with Tony Gonzales, Ollie Brown and Al Ferrara as the leading men, is its strong point. Pitching and catching (aside from veteran hurlers Dick Kelley, Dick Selma, and Johnny Podres) is incredibly weak. The infield may be adequate.

FEARLESS BUTCH BROWN will be in the nets for the Orange stickmen when they open their Spring trip at Ohio Wesleyan next week. The senior goalie has been impressive in three indoor scrimmages with the Syracuse Lacrosse Club.

Sports shorts . . .

All-American, Calvin Murphy of Niagara, heads the 1968-69 Syracuse University all-opponent basketball team.

The indomitable Murphy tallied 100 points in the two contests between SU and the Purple Eagles, 68 of them coming in the first meeting.

Second-ranked LaSalle placed two representatives on the all-star squad, Larry Cannon and Ken Durrett. Cannon ripped the cords for 24 points against the Orange and led the rally that broke a close game wide open. Durrett meanwhile canned 21 points and hauled in 18 rebounds.

Jo-Jo White of Kansas is the fourth member of the team. He pushed home 22 counters as well as putting on a dazzling ball-hawking display as his team triumphed in the Sunflower Classic.

St. John's Joe DuPre rounds out the talented quintet, being named for his tough defensive play against the Orange.

Tabbed for second team honors were Colgate's Rick Caputo, John Warren of St. John's, Paul Ruffner of Brigham Young, Dave Robisch of Kansas and Holy Cross' Ed Siudut.

SEN. EDMUND S. MUSKIE

Muskie revisits campus

U.S. Senator Edmund S. Muskie (D-Maine) will speak at Syracuse University May 2 at the installation of Dr. Alan K. ("Scotty") Campbell as the fifth dean of the Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs.

Muskie will speak at an 8:30 p.m. convocation in Hendricks Chapel. The theme of the two-day installation program, which begins May 1, is "The University and Its Communities."

The program will include a number of seminars on the University and its responsibility to various communities in society.

This will be Muskie's third visit to Syracuse University. He spoke on nuclear arms control in May 1964 and during the 1968 election campaign when he was the Democratic vice-presidential candidate.

DR. ALAN K. CAMPBELL

DAILY ORANGE

Syracuse University's Daily Newspaper Since 1903

Vol. 67, No. 83 | Syacuse, New York, Wednesday, March 26, 1969 | 10 Cents

Arab defense creates storm

By ANDRIJ BILYK
Associate Editor

Before a stormy question and answer exchange, Dr. M.H. El-Farra, Jordan's United Nations ambassador, told an often-excited Maxwell Auditorium audience last night that if Israel implements the UN's 261 Middle East resolutions, "we will come tomorrow to negotiate with them.

"They cannot occupy half of Jordan, the Sinai and Gaza and ask us to sign a note of surrender," he declared.

The Jordanian ambassador said that since its creation, Israel has expanded into Arab territories–"at any price."

Any declaration for peace by the Four Powers or the UN has been accepted so far as they serve the Israelis, he said.

"The Israelis have denounced all but one-third of one UN decision–that which created Israel at the expense of the Palestinian people."

The other two-thirds, said the ambassador, provided for the reparation of refugees and defined where the state of Israel should exist. "You may recall that in 1948, one million Palestinians were forcibly expelled," he reminded his listeners.

"Palestine may have been taken off the map, continued the ambassador, but it remains alive in the hearts and minds of Palestinians.

"For a long time they waited for the UN to do something, but in 1966 and again in 1967 there were new Israeli agressions and more expansion.

"The question now is," said Dr. El-Farra, "should we wait another 20 years for a UN resolution or should we defend our rights, no matter what the cost?

"We want peace with the Israelis, said the ambassador, but peace based on justice–for without justice, peace is meaningless and not lasting."

Throughout most of his speech, the packed auditorium remained respectfully silent. Even the pro-Israel demonstration before his arrival was orderly, becoming unruly only when Arab students refused to allow the Israeli flag into the auditorium.

"We want to demonstrate Israel's disagreement with the Arabs," declared Hillel President Arthur Koch. "It is an orderly protest–we will not disrupt the speaker in any way."

The auditorium erupted after the speech, however, when Jewish students found that the Arab Student Organization would accept only those questions submitted in writing. A shouting match developed which compelled Dr. El-Farra to comment, "I thought I was coming to an open-minded society."

Dr. El-Farra made many comparisons between what he called "the colonial-Zionist conspiracy" and Nazism. Asked how he could equate the two, he replied: "I try to show that occupation is wrong. It does not lead to peace. Peace cannot come through force, but only through justice."

Student power nears reality in SU Senate

By KAREN WIEDIGER

The by-laws governing University Senate may be revised in the near future, giving students power in that body. The proposal which was presented at last week's Senate meeting calls for 45 students, 45 administrators and 90 faculty members.

Graduate students will have 17 voting members while undergraduates will be represented by 28 students. Guidelines have been proposed for the election of faculty members, giving each college and school representation in accordance with the number of professors and students who are members of the respective schools.

However, the process by which student members will be selected has been left up to the student body. John Diamond, speaker pro tempore of Student Senate and a member of the reapportionment committee, has drawn up a proposal for the undergraduate selection process.

"I feel strongly that all the voting student members should not represent just the academic side of Syracuse University," said Diamond. He will therefore present the following plan at a future Student Senate meeting:

- that one undergraduate member come from each of the 14 colleges and schools on the undergraduate level;
- that the remaining members represent the following campus organizations: Commuting Students Organization, Daily Orange, Inter-Dormitory Council, Inter-Fraternity Council and Panhellenic, International Students Organization, Project Spearhead, Projection '70, Reserve Officers Training Corps, sports, Student Government, Student Senate, University Judicial Board, University Religious Council and University Union.

The results of the Senate vote will be placed in a referendum to be held during the student government elections that week. Final approval lies with the present University Senate.

According to Diamond, there is another proposal for student membership which will be presented by Dr. George Stern at the April 10 meeting of Student Senate. Stern will suggest the students all be chosen from their academic fields. Diamond's plan will be given by Dr. Eric Gardner at the next meeting on April 15.

(Continued on Page 5)

Chancellor selection

Student group displeased

By MITCH LANE

"Students of the Chancellor's Selection Committee are not opposed to (John E.) Corbally, but are opposed to the process by which he was chosen," said Amy White, member of the student committee yesterday.

She explained further that the committee's action has not ceased. "We plan to have another meeting of the whole committee to discuss better communication with the trustees." The trustees are the "only ones holding legal power," she said.

Miss White said that the students envision "rewriting the University charter so that students are included."

Frederic J. Kramer, dean of the College of Liberal Arts and chairman of the faculty section of the selection committee, said the committee plans "to meet with the Board of Trustees further to discuss the broader issues of University governance." He explained further that they plan to review the selection process and discuss methods for collaboration among the administration, faculty, and students. A detailed report on the actions of the Chancellor Selection Committee is being prepared, Kramer added.

Although students were allowed to participate in the selection process, "veto power" rested with the trustees. Student members of the committee hope to make revisions in the University charter that would also delegate power to faculty and students.

DAILY ORANGE
Syracuse University's Daily Newspaper Since 1903

Editor-in-Chief ..... Angus H. Twombly
Business Manager ..... Steven P. Strobridge

Published Tuesday through Friday during the academic year by students of Syracuse University. Offices located at 200 Brooklea Drive, Fayetteville, N. Y., and 1101 East Adams St., Syracuse, New York. Entered as Second Class matter at the U. S. Post Office, Fayetteville, N. Y. 13066.

Student power

For some time now students have been calling for a place in the power structure of the University. However, not enough have been working to see that what they want is put into effect.

During the past week the Committee on the Reapportionment and Reorganization of the University Senate presented that body with a proposal which includes students as voting members. The way in which students will be selected has, in part, been left up to their representatives on the committee and the student body at large.

John Diamond, speaker pro tempore of Student Senate, has come up with a plan which seems to be most representative of this campus. Undergraduates will be given 28 seats in the Senate and he proposes that each of the 14 undergraduate colleges and schools have one voting student member with the other voting members coming from student organizations.

The organizations were chosen on the basis of the groups which they represent and the areas they cover outside of academics for undergraduate students.

The power now rests with the Student Senate and the student body to pass this proposal. At the first meeting after vacation, Dr. George Stern will present a plan to Student Senate to have the voting students come directly from their college or school. At the next meeting, the senators will hear Diamond's proposal given by Dr. Eric Gardner.

We urge that Student Senate pass the second proposal and have the resolution placed in the form of a referendum for the student body to vote on during the upcoming elections.

By students becoming voting members of the University, they will have an opportunity to air their views and vote upon changes and policies of the University. However, as one professor commented, 90 per cent of the student body won't care about this matter. Seven per cent will be pleased with it and understand it and the rest will be against it.

If his theory is correct, this shows that only ten per cent of the student body is concerned. What about the majority? We urge members of the latter group to find out all they can about University Senate and attend the Student Senate meetings to hear both proposals.

If students care they will prove the professor's theory wrong by making their views known to their student senators and will vote for or against the proposal during elections.

Although the University Senate has not yet passed the proposal for reorganization, part of the work can not be done by the faculty and the administrators. The students have to show they are ready to accept the power that may be offered to them.

--Karen A. Wiediger

New amendment

The right to abortion

By Karen DeCrow

EDITOR'S NOTE: Syracuse-area groups such as the Central New York Chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union, the local chapter of the National Organization of Women and an inter-university group from SU and the SUNY Upstate Medical Center are actively voicing their views this week as the New York State Assembly takes up the issue of the repeal or reform of the abortion laws. The following viewpoint goes beyond state government and calls for action on the national level.

There is perhaps no more fundamental human right, save the right to life itself, than the right to one's own physical person, a basic part of which is the right to determine whether or not one will give birth to another human being. An egg, a sperm, a zygote, or a fetus is not a person or a human being, and does not have "rights" as a person or a human being. Whatever rights these may have are necessarily because of biological fact completely dependent upon and subordinate to the human bodies which house them.

Constitutional rights are accorded to human beings solely in terms of restrictions on governments. All of the states have laws restricting this right of a woman to her own physical person. The following suggested amendment to the U.S. Constitution would protect this right of women in all the states:

The right of a woman to prevent conception and with proper medical safeguards to terminate her pregnancy shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state.

The effect of such an amendment would be to nullify all existing state criminal abortion laws, leaving the question of whether or not to have an abortion a matter for the woman herself, rather than for the government, to decide.

Criminal abortion laws in 42 states prohibit the performance of abortion unless necessary to save the life of the pregnant woman. In the other eight states -- Alabama, California, Colorado, Maryland, Missippi, New Mexico, North Carolina, and Oregon -- and in the District of Columbia, abortions are premitted in certain other additional circumstances, such as where pregnancy results from rape, incest, or where the physical or mental health of the women is endangered.

Bills to make abortion laws restrictive were introduced in 28 state legislatures in 1967. The Colorado and North Carolina laws, enacted in 1967, are patterned after the American Law Institute's Model Penal Code. They permit abortions where continuance of the pregnancy would gravely impair the physical or mental health of the woman, the child would be born with grave physical or mental defect, or the pregnancy resulted from rape, incest or other felonious intercourse. (It may be noted that the definition of "human being" is the ALI Model Penal Code criminal homocide provisions is "a person who has been born and is alive.")

In spite of the state criminal abortion laws, it is estimated that as many as 2.5 million abortions, illegally done except for a handful in California and Colorado, are performed in this country each year; 4 out of 5 of them are on married women.

Time magazine recently reported the experience in England, where abortions (legal) have recently become easily available. The problem there appears to be women from all over the world, plus English women, crowding the offices and hospitals, to the extent that there simply are not enough facilities (doctor's time, hospital time) to handle the demand. This, while abortion, legal or no, still bears a social stigma. Apparently women are not as eager to over-populate the world as might be assumed from the population statistics.

Purposeful protests

Academics—worthy bone of contention

By DOUGLAS GARR

The two recent student protests on the Syracuse University campus--the architecture boycott and the black student demonstration --had as their origins deep dissatisfaction with the educational system in its present state.

The architecture demonstration was significantly directed to the prime purpose of a college institution; education. Yes, this is the best place to start. No, architecture students aren't any different from the other students on this campus. They want 24-hour parietal hours, drinking in the dorms, and everything else connected with autonomy. Their major concern with their presence here is just a little different, that's all. They want reform primarily in the academic atmosphere, not the social atmosphere.

The black students on this campus have picked up the cue from the architecture students. Last week they, too, staged a protest in reference to their rights as students at this University. Their protest was non-violent and their demands were clear. (No, they didn't take over the Administration Building). This is student power.

And now, isn't it time that everyone on this campus start evaluating the education system? If your purpose here is to receive a $12,000 piece of paper to show to prospective employers, then you'll probably be content with the present state of affairs. If your purpose here is to really learn and digest knowledge, you also will begin to ask "why," like the architecture student and the black student.

The reason that student revolution is coming about,then, is that today's students want to learn and not just be educated. Change may be occuring a little slower at Syracuse, but it eventually will happen. When the number of dissatisfied students overcome the number of satisfied students, reform will take place rapidly.

What changes can take place in the education system at Syracuse? There are many. Why can't some of the primary and secondary requirements in the College of Liberal Arts be waived? Even if a student is not sure about his proposed major, after one semester at college he has some idea of his likes and dislikes.

Also, why can't freshmen and sophomores get the benefit of the top professors of an institution instead of the teaching assistants? What good is having a teacher like Michael O. Sawyer at this University if you can't take his course until you are a senior or graduate student? Unfortunately, it is often the choice of the instructor of what level he wishes to teach, be it freshmen, upperclass, or graduate. As always there are some pleasant exceptions. One of these is the Journalism School's Dr. Roland Wolseley who finds an olbigation to teach introductory courses to freshmen and sophomores. It is impossible to always get the best instructors, however, because teachers are paid for how many degrees they have, not how good they are.

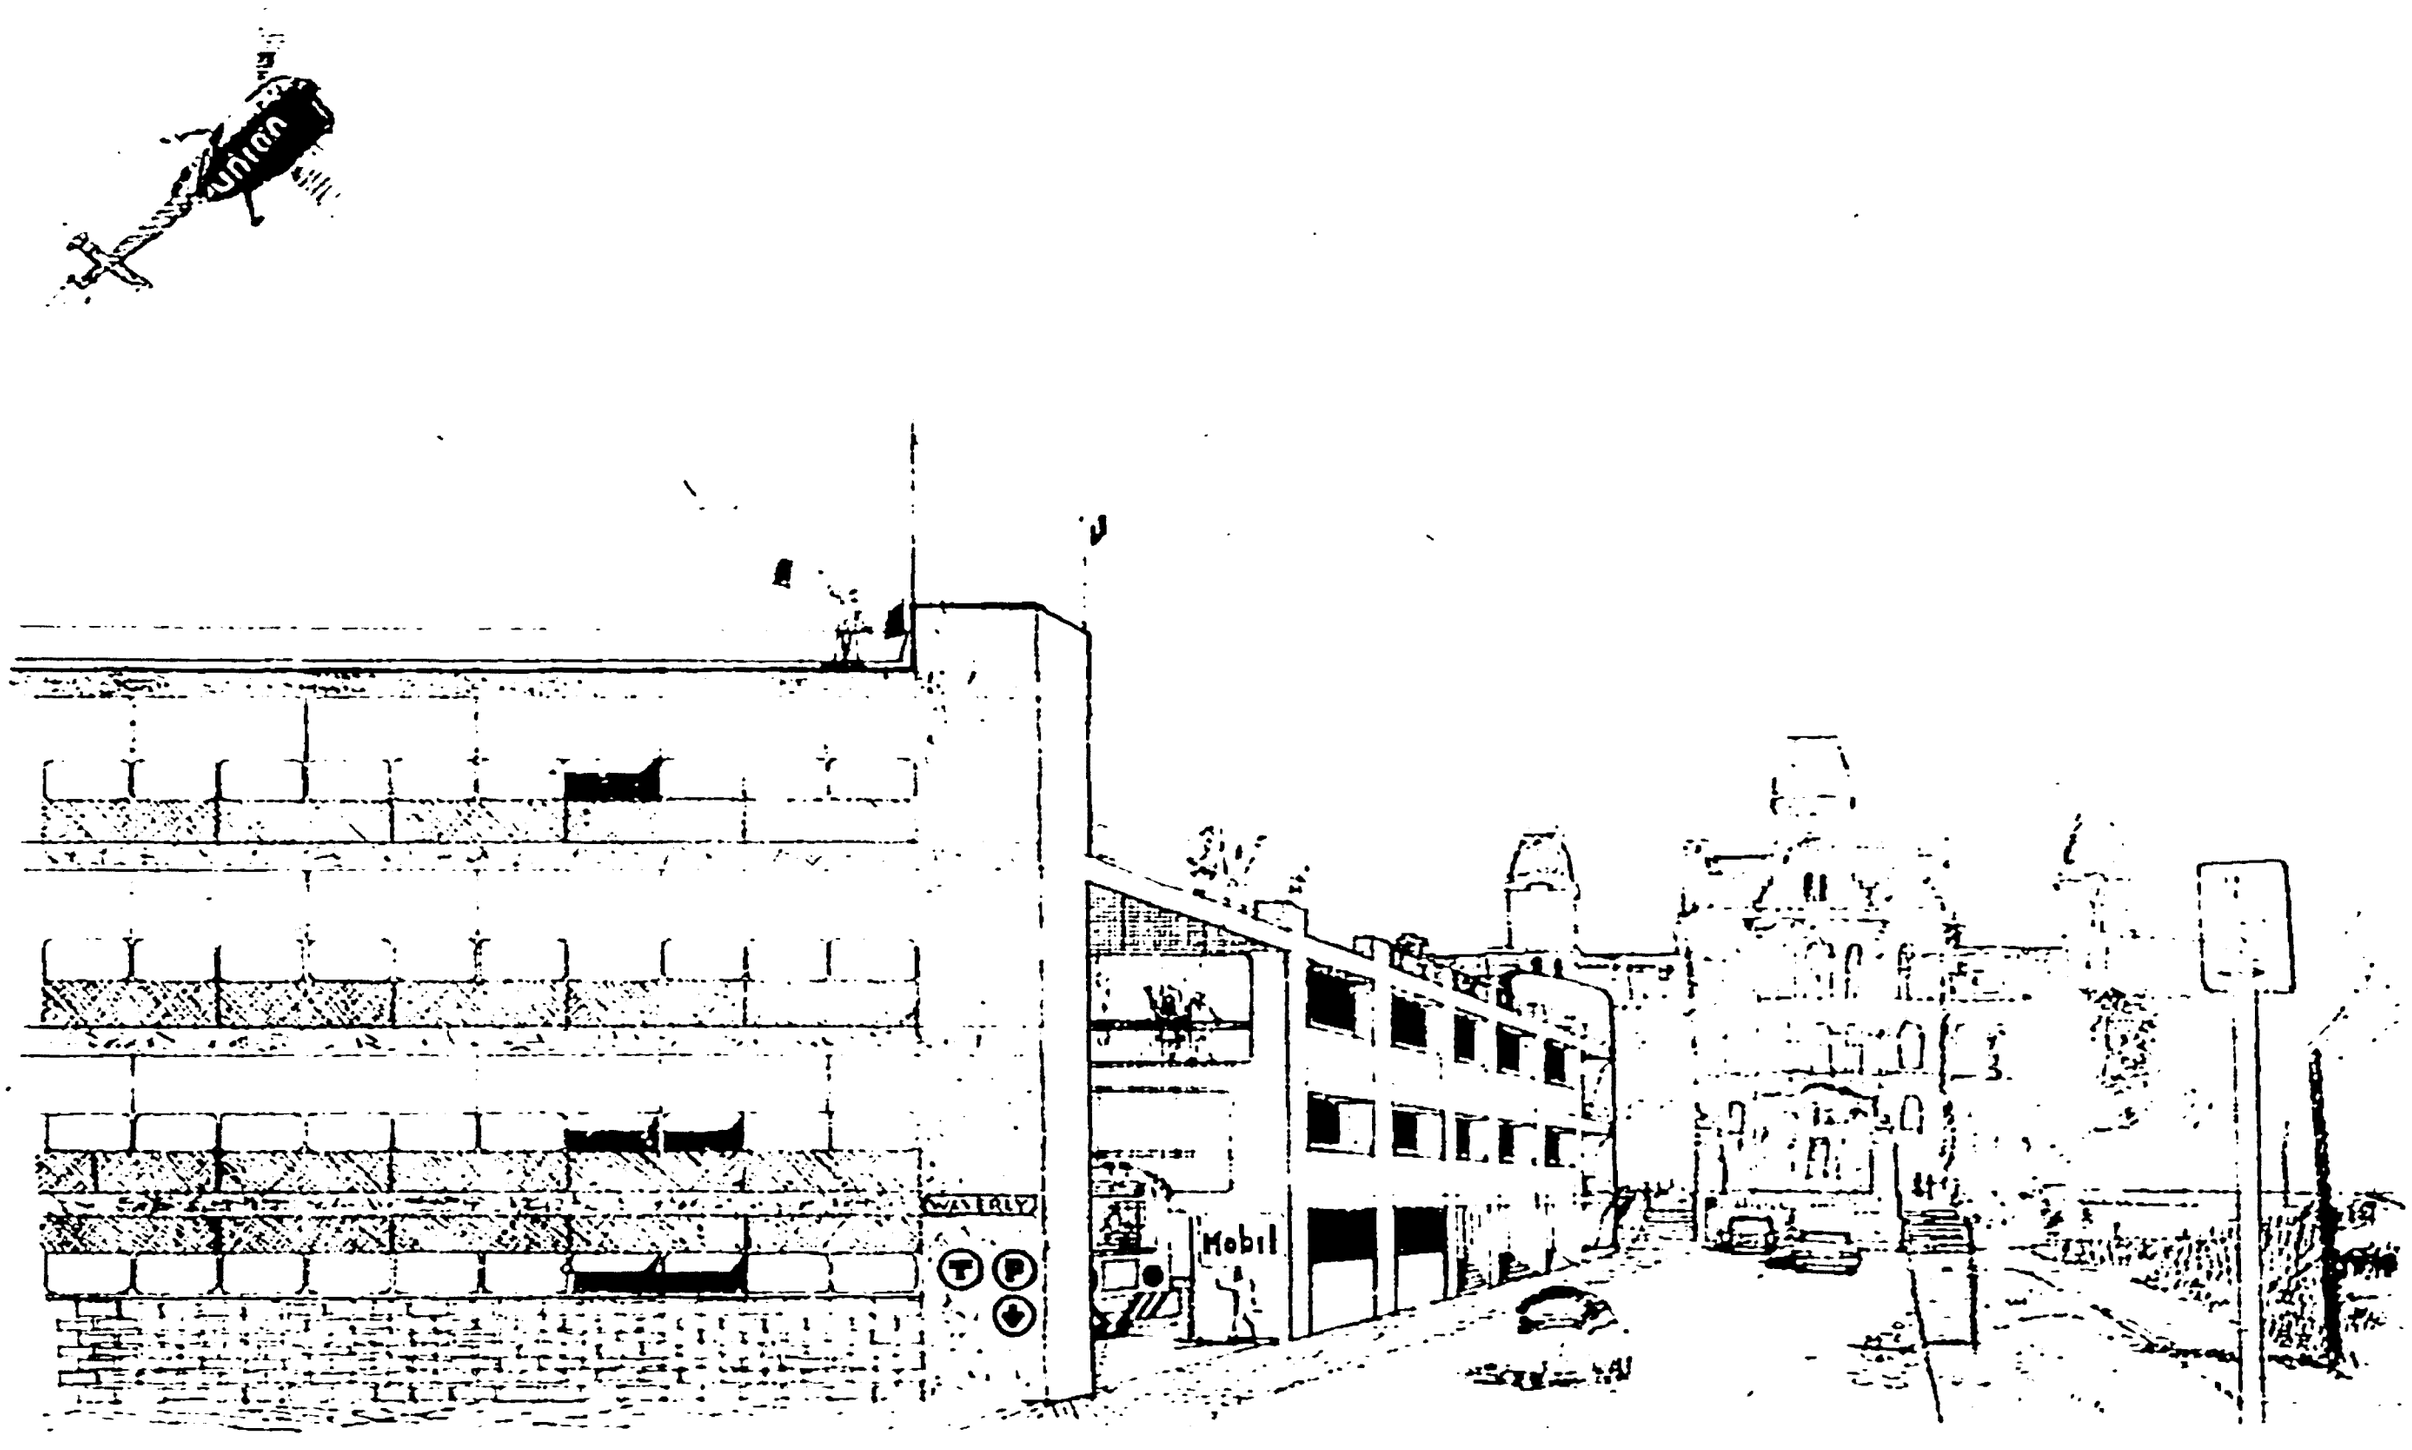
It also seems that much of the learning in various courses takes place in the small discussion groups. Most three hour courses of this type consist of two lectures and one recitation hour. Why can't they be changed to one lecture and two recitation hours?

The list of educational grievances is endless, and should be. Everyone could probably think of something wrong with almost any course here. Many are apathetic in airing their views. But this apathy is waning, and involvement is taking precedence. That is why the architecture and black students reacted the way they did and that is why it is not improbable for the rest of the student body to react in the near future.

Youth fares abolished?

The Transcontinental Bus System Inc. and an examiner of the Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) are calling for the abolition of airline youth fares. They argue that the discounts are "unjustly discriminatory," and are preparing their case for presentation before the CAB.

The youth fares, which have been adopted by every major domestic airline and seven local carriers, provide a 50 per cent discount to anyone holding a youth identification card. The reduced air fares must be kept.



According to Congressman Benjamin S. Rosenthal (D-L. N.Y.) the abolition of reduced fares will threaten many college careers. The New York Congressman added. "Students do not get substantially similar service. The student has to accept delays, inconvenience, and the insecurity of not knowing whether or when he will be flying. He accepts this treatment because he is paying a reduced rate."

According to an American Airlines study, the youth fare provides passengers for seats that would otherwise remain empty, and make it possible for many students to visit areas of the U.S. they might otherwise never see. The same study also revealed that in 1967 a profit of $2,500,000 resulted from the youth fare.

There is one more point that ought to be considered. Since when is the over 21 set considered a deprived lot? Men under 21 can be drafted, but cannot vote or borrow money. Unmarried men and women under the age of 25 are subject to ridiculously high automobile insurance rates.

The National Student Association, American Airlines and Congressman Rosenthal are prepared to fight the proposed abolition, it seems that we're not always in the wrong, just because we're in the minority.

--David A. Ross

THIS PROPOSED DESIGN for Syracuse University's prospective Student Union Building was submitted by Ray Cooke. Cooke, University Union's architectural advisor, is also using this design for his senior thesis. Cooke's plans involve the tract currently containing Winchell Hall, the SU Bookstore, several cottages and a parking lot. This tract is the first choice for the Union. Cooke's central building will include the Bookstore, a gas station and a heliport. Other unusual features, according to the student-architect, include "a drive-in bank, an underground garage for 900 automobiles, a discotheque, student organization offices, a bowling alley and billiards hall, a laundromat, a restaurant, electric typewriters and study carrels." Acutely sensitive to student needs, Cooke has also made drawing-board provisions for "necking nooks with fireplaces."

Young actor sought

A talent hunt has been organized by the Syracuse Repertory Theatre for a young boy to play an important role in the season's final professional production–"Summertree."

Dr. G.F. Reidenbaugh, artistic director of the Syracuse Repertory Theatre and chairman of the University drama department, will direct the play. He is looking for a talented 8, 9 or 10 year-old.

Auditions for the role will be held at the university Regent Experimental Theatre Saturday at 1:00 p.m.

Price Explosion Continues

HUNDREDS OF NEW LP'S IN THE RACK AT A BELOW COST

ALL LPs MUST GO

2.87

Entire Inventory Is Not On Sale

Record Runner

NO QUANTITY LIMITS

CLASS RING DAY

The Josten Co. Factory Representative Will be Here

TODAY - WED., MARCH 26

From 9:00 a.m. - 4:30 p.m.

To Help You

SELECT YOUR CLASS RING

LAST DAY IN TIME FOR GRADUATION !

SU Bookstores

303 University Place

$10.00 deposit required

"Our Business is People"

Enigmatic, inexplicable

Pinter's 'Homecoming' scores puzzling points

"Is the philosopher's wife a prostitute or an enigmatic Mona Lisa...all things to all men?" – Prideaux, LIFE

"Pure theatre...the fat neatly trimmed off." -- Hewes, SATURDAY REVIEW

"Disturbing theatrical venture." -- Watts, NEW YORK POST

"Primitive, oedipal, conjugal" -- TIME

"The Homecoming" created a stir when it opened in New York early in 1967. The candor of its language, the insidiously suggestive sexuality of its characters proved to be shocking to some audiences, stimulating and frank to others and horrifying to all.

Pinter forces audiences to make their own guesses as to the meaning of his plays. There is no standard in "The Homecoming" which has any relevance to what we have come to expect and as a result, one can choose what one will listen to, and what one will assume it means. The consequence with "The Homecoming" was that The New York Times was deluged with letters-some, wildly condemning the overturning of all morality, some praising the depths of understanding which Pinter had made available behind the mask of the dialogue.

What Pinter seems to do is to create a nameless dread, a situation so bizarre that one's mind screams to have it explained so that one can fit it in to the scheme. Unlike the detective in the mystery novel who takes all the strange and threatening elements which have built the mood of the story and sorts them out neatly so each will be explained at the end of the tale, Pinter never gives us the explanation. We are asked to sort it out for ourselves and this we are not accustomed to doing. Most modern playwrigts have a thesis and use their plays to make this thesis explicit. Pinter does not.

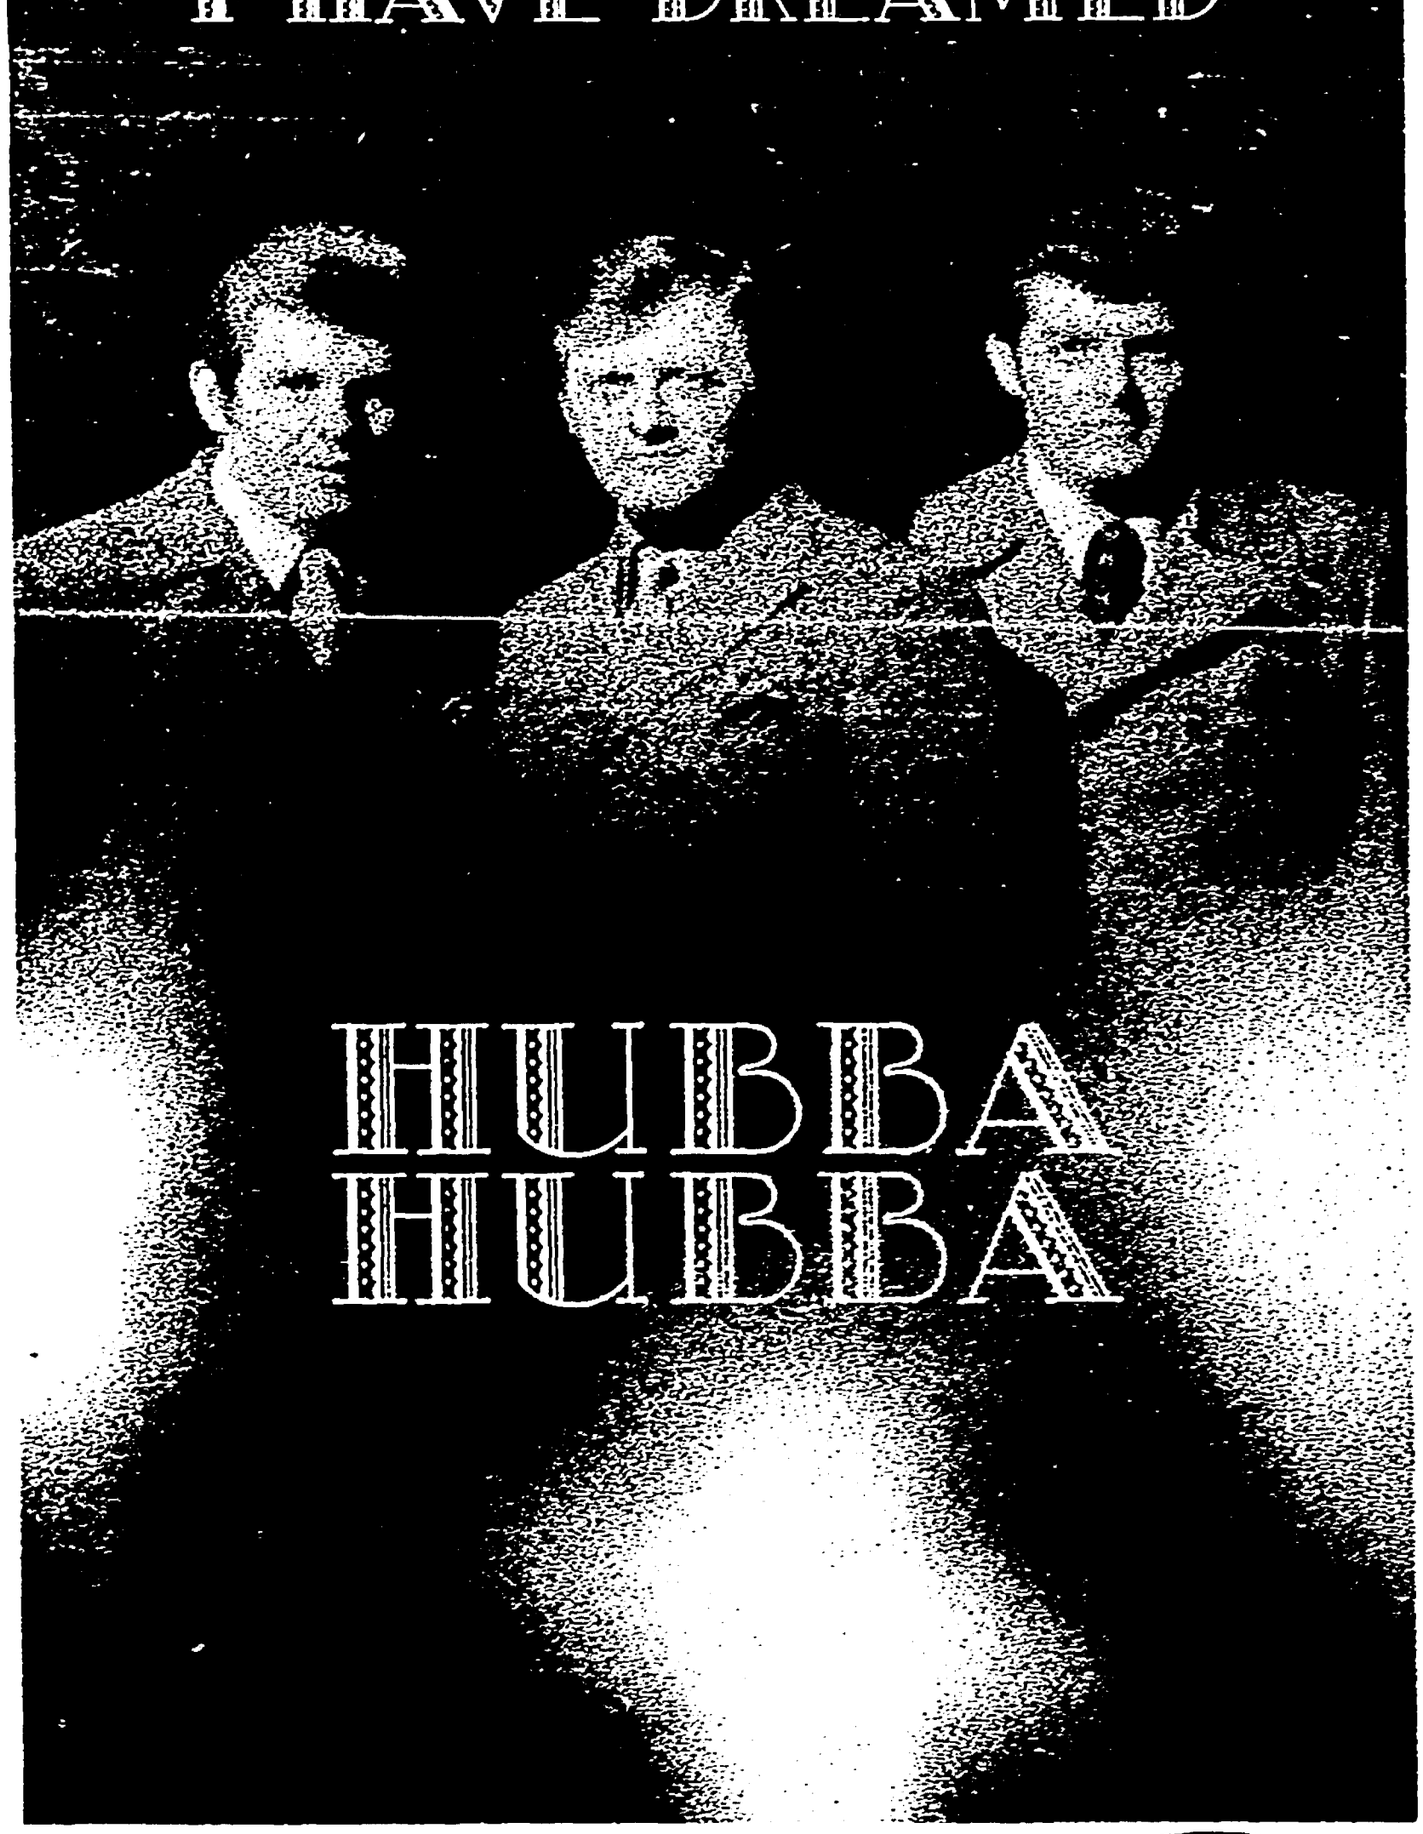
Some people have interpreted the curious behaviour of the characters as Pinter's description of a family's descent into pure evil. Pinter says this was not his intent. Others have asked if it is reasonable for the wife to stay behind with her husband's troll-like family while he goes back to his American University. Pinter says it wouldn't have happened if this had been a happy marriage. Critics and psychiatrists have suggested that the males in Pinter's play are all psychologically impotent and the wife represents a sort of earth-mother. To this Pinter says, "Rubbish."

The quality of menace in Pinter's plays and particularly in "The Homecoming" is not a supernatural menace. One feels that the horror is possible, perhaps that it is often felt and denied in our daily relationships with others, and kept in check by the well- worn channels through which our lives run.

Dates for "The Homecoming" are Thursdays through Sundays, opening March 27. Curtain Time is 8 p.m. The Saturday matinee is at 2:30 and the early curtain Sunday performance is at 7:30 p.m.

For information about reservations or student prices call the Regent Theatre 476-4536.

The Place



Coffee house reopens

The Place, University Union's coffee house, reopens at Heffron Cottage, 416 Walnut Place, after spring vacation for the remainder of the school year.

The vacated cottage, now undergoing rennovations to house The Place, is scheduled to be torn down by the University in late May.

At Heffron, The Place "will be more than just a coffee house," says UU coordinator Elaine Strassburger. "It will be a temporary University Union building, and we'll try to keep it open daily." Hopefully, The Place will remain open each day from 10 a.m. to as long as supervisory help is present. With these hours, the commuting student would have somewhere to go during breaks between classes.

THE LETTERMEN'S NEW ALBUM "I HAVE DREAMED"

HUBBA HUBBA

Now at your favorite record shoppe. Capitol RECORDS

WOLF & MARKVI Present the RASCALS

FRIDAY NITE, APRIL 18, 8 P.M.
at the
Onondaga War Memorial
Tickets — $4, $5, $6

Mail orders now accepted at box office. Tickets on sale April 1st at: The Record Runner, S U Corner Store, Wilson's Leading Jewelers and War Memorial.

WHY NOT FLY YOUR OWN JET!

IT DOES 0 to 150 in 2.1 SECONDS
SO WE DON'T HAND OVER THE KEYS TO JUST ANY KID THAT COMES ALONG
See: Lt. Dan Kauffman
Lt. j.g. Marty Polenski
for details on how you can qualify
Team will be on campus 27 and 28 March '69
10 a. m. to 2 p. m. — Placement Center

U. S. NAVY
Aviation Officer Program
Naval Air Station
Brooklyn, New York 11234
NAME ..... AGE .....
COLLEGE .....
GRADUATION DATE ..... PHONE .....
ADDRESS .....
CITY ..... STATE ..... ZIP .....

I understand there is no obligation

THIS CLIFF-HANGER designed by an SU architecture professor was honored with an award recently.

SU prof honored for unique house

Louis Skoler, architect and professor in the Syracuse University School of Architecture, was honored this month for his imaginative use of steel in the design of a vacation house on Canandaigua Lake. He received the Best Design in Steel award for residential construction, given by the American Iron and Steel Institute.

The four-story home he designed is built at the edge of a steep, remote bluff. It has a completely open interior. Sliding glass doors and windows allow views of the hills and nearby lake.

In an interview published in The New York Times (Sunday, March 9), Skoler explained that "the difficulty of the site, which has ravines on both sides and the lake below, combined with the bad roads leading to the bluff and the frequent strong winds sweeping over it, dictated a structural frame of prefabricated steel."

Skoler designed an exposed, welded steel frame, using 10-inch steel beams and 5-inch tubular steel columns. The steel was fabricated 100 miles away and delivered to the site to be set up.

The design-in-steel awards are given biennially to designers, architects, engineers and artists. The National Design Center of New York coordinated the competition and judges included architects, engineers, industrial designers and museum officials. Winners were honored at an awards dinner at the Plaza Hotel in New York earlier this month.

'Government, business'

Corporate head speaks here today

John J. Powers, Jr., chairman of the board and president of Chas. Pfizer & Co., will address the Association of Graduate Business Students at Syracuse University today at 3:30 p.m. in Arnold M. Grant Auditorium.

Powers' topic is "Government, Business and the Balance of Payments."

The corporate executive heads a worldwide organization of 33,000 persons with operations in 17 states and more than 50 countries. Powers has been a central figure in the company's activities during the period of its expansion from a small chemical house to a large diversified corporation.

Powers has a bachelor's degree from Georgetown University and a LL.B. degree from the Yale Law School. In 1965, he was awarded an honorary Doctor of Laws degree from Georgetown.

He joined Pfizer in 1941 as head of the newly formed legal department. One of his primary interests is the utilization of scientific resources and manpower, particularly in the field of research for human health.

Student power . . .

(Continued from page 1)

Diamond said student representation in the University Senate means more than just voting members in the full body. It will also encompass students serving on most of the Senate's committees, including the agenda committee.

Also stated in the proposal for Senate reorganization is the present relationship between the Senate and the Trustees. The Senate passed a proposal instructing the faculty members of the Academic Policy and Program Committee to inform their counterparts on the Board of Trustees of the Senate's interest in the following matters:

- nomination by the Senate of a percentage of the Board of Trustees
- participation of Senate members on .key trustee committees
- participation of the faculty and students in the selection of senior academic officers of the University.

LP PRICES SLASHED
2 87
Check Ad pg 3
ALL MUST GO
Record Rumer

STEPPENWOLF
plus
CANADIAN FAMED MANDALA
and
JAM FACTORY
March 30th, 8 p.m.
SYRACUSE WAR MEMORIAL AUDITORIUM
Tickets Available at War Memorial Box Office
and
Syracuse University Corner Store
Entertainment Consultants. Inc., Publishers

VISTA LIVES
STOP BEING PART OF THE PROBLEM . . .
BE PART OF THE SOLUTION.
SEE RAY ORMSBY
CAROLYN COBBS
or TOM NICKENS
VISTA RECRUITERS ON CAMPUS THIS WEEK
LOCATIONS:
Placement Center Daily 10 a.m. - 5 p.m.
Vista Mobil Bus —
HBC Parking Lot 9:45 - 11:45 a.m.
Marshall & Crouse Sts. 12N - 4 p.m. Daily
VISTA LIVES

auto europe
16A
dept.
STUDENT/FACULTY GRANT Program
Special rates in European overseas travel for purchase, lease, & rental of cars. For details and brochure write: University Grant Dept., Auto Europe, 1270 Second Avenue, New York, New York 10021.
Name .....
Address .....
Zip .....

PFP protestors imprisoned

Larry Alexander and Bruce Augustyniak, two Peace and Freedom Party organizers, were sentenced yesterday in City Criminal Court to 90 days in Onondaga County Penitentiary for disorderly conduct and resisting arrest.

The two were convicted of the charges, stemming from incidents occurring at the Nixon rally on Oct. 29, after a three-day jury trial two weeks ago.

Defense counsel Richard Mosher said yesterday that although the two are currently serving their terms he expects them to be released on bail soon as he has filed for appeal.

Anti-protest bill draws fire here

SU administrators, feeling that colleges and universities are capable of handling campus disorders themselves, are concerned about three bills recently passed by the State Assembly.

The legislation calls for colleges and universities to prepare a set of rules on which the school would act in case of a disorder. The bills also provide for a punishment of up to one year in jail, a $1,000 fine for students preventing classes, and the discontinuation of state scholarships and aid for those involved in campus disorders.

Dr. F.A. Wingate, vice president and treasurer, thinks more disorder on campus may be the result of the bills' passage, "stating that a number of students would be severely penalized" under this legislation. Noting that it isn't necessary to single out colleges for special treatment, he said that the bills will be poorly received by the academic community.

"You can't run a university very effectively if you have a police state," he charged. "We presently have the tools to handle any campus problem."

David Tatham, dean of men, believes the intention of the bills was to reduce student unrest, "but I don't see that it would accomplish this end." Tatham, like Wingate, advocates that universities could handle their own affairs well enough so that legislation would not be required.

James G. Carlton, dean of student services, has a set of ground rules stating that action will be taken by the University in the case of a campus disorder. He said that the actions were not specific, so as to allow felixibility in any case that might arise.

Carleton said he was "very concerned" because the bill would penalize some students more than others by taking away their scholarships. He was referring to the fact that in the case of a campus disorder, both state and out-of-state students could be penalized by the civil authorities, but that only the New York State students would lose their scholarships.

"My concern" he said, "is that we avoid extra penalties." He suggested that this could be done by limiting penalties to criminal action rather than financial action, or by requiring schools to become "very specific" on the action it will take in the event of a disorder.

SU's University Senate has voiced its opposition to state legislation which would "impose greater penalties on present or potential students or faculty than on others for the same offenses; and bills which would by statue unreasonably prescribe for institutions of higher learning rules on regulations pertaining to conduct or admission."

Subject needed for Psychological Study. Unmarried female subjects between the ages of 28 and 50 needed for study related to normal menstrual functions. Three sessions are involved and a fee of $30.00 will be paid. This study is being conducted at the Upstate Medical Center. If interested call Mrs. Baum at 473-5775 for information.

—Happenings on the Hill—

Campus Notices must be brought to the DO Office (1101 E. Adams St., second floor, first desk on the left) by 3 p.m. on the day before they are to be published. We regret that due to the many requests each notice must be limited to 25 words and may not be run more than two days in a row. Notices will not be taken over the phone.

WEDNESDAY

JOB-HUNTING? Student activities center in Kimmel needs workers (salaried and non-salaried) before Spring Weekend. Meeting in 307 HL at 7 p.m. or call Ira Kurzban at X3095.

PUBLICATIONS - All campus organizations are invited to attend a Traditions Commission Publications meeting to discuss next years's dates and data and all Orientation Week Publication. Meeting in room 206 Women's Building at 3 p.m.

STUDENT SENATE COMMITTEE CHAIRMEN - Emergency meeting at 7:30 in SG office. Student Representation in the University Senate will be the issue. If you can't come, send a representative. Otherwise, contact John Diamond X2919, or X2918.

URGENT meeting of the entire Parish Council Today at 4:30 p.m. Important discussion of the Cab Calloway concert.

ALPHA PHI OMEGA - Brothers, Pledges, Little Sisters. Composite pictures to be taken from 8:30 to 10 p.m. in office.

THURSDAY

COMMUTERS — All invited to a commuting students Assn. meeting

PHYSICS COLLOQUIM - Dr. Kem Seth, of Northwestern U. on "Magic Nuclei - Fact or Fiction" - 4 p.m. in 202 Physics Building.

U.B.A. - chapter meeting tonight on Booth 3 lounge.

DRAFT COUNSELING - The Law Students Civil Rights Research Council and the Syracuse Draft Counselling Service will hold draft counseling in Room 101 White Hall from 7-9 p.m.

GENERAL

IFC ELECTIONS are coming up. All those wishing to run for an office should contact Bob Kelly X3361.

DEADLINE for Campus Chest Applications has been extended to March 26, Wednesday at 5 p.m. Include name, ideas and experience. Turn in to Gamma Phi Beta. ?'s call Trudy - 478-5285, or X2637.

ANYONE interested in forming a late night club? Call Neal or Joel X2038.

JURISPRUDENCE P.S. 341 Lawrenson Penthouse.

RIDE OR RIDERS Wanted for Spring Vacation? Check the Alpha Phi Omega Ride Board in the basement of HL. Also call the APhiO office at X3433.

GOON Squad application deadline has been extended to Wednesday at 5 p.m. in the Women's Building.

Broadway, jazz sounds aired tonight on WAER

The shows of Jules Styne will be featured on Curtain Call tonight at 6 p.m. on WAER radio, 88.3 F.M.

Among selections offered will be many from "Peter Pan," "Bells are Ringing," "Gypsy," "Do Re Mi" and "Subways are for Sleeping."

Curtain Call is regularly heard over WAER every Wednesday at 6 p.m. The program, produced and announced by Arlene Rosen, features music from popular shows of recent years.

Hugh Masekela will be the feature on Just Jazz tonight at 9:30 p.m. on WAER.

Just Jazz is a regularly scheduled program, broadcast over WAER to offer its listeners a cross-section of popular jazz recordings and occasional jazz news. Each show features a prominent performer or a request portion. The program is produced and directed by Doug Cone.

SYRACUSE REPERTORY THEATRE
SEASON 3

presents

the homecoming

by Harold Pinter
directed by G. F. Reidenbaugh

A nightmarish rendering of a raffish, all-male household and their veiled violences when a new in-law drops into their midst -- a cool, sphinx-like trollop.

March 27-30 | Thurs. and Fri. at 8 pm
April 3- 6 | Sat. at 2:30 and 8 pm
Sunday at 7:30 pm

for tickets and parking information,

UNIVERSITY REGENT THEATRE 820 EAST GENESEE ST. SYRACUSE, N. Y. 13210

PHONE BOX OFFICE: 476-4536

LAW—DRAMA—SPEECH

majors

learn the art of verbal persuasion and earn salary plus commission part-time.

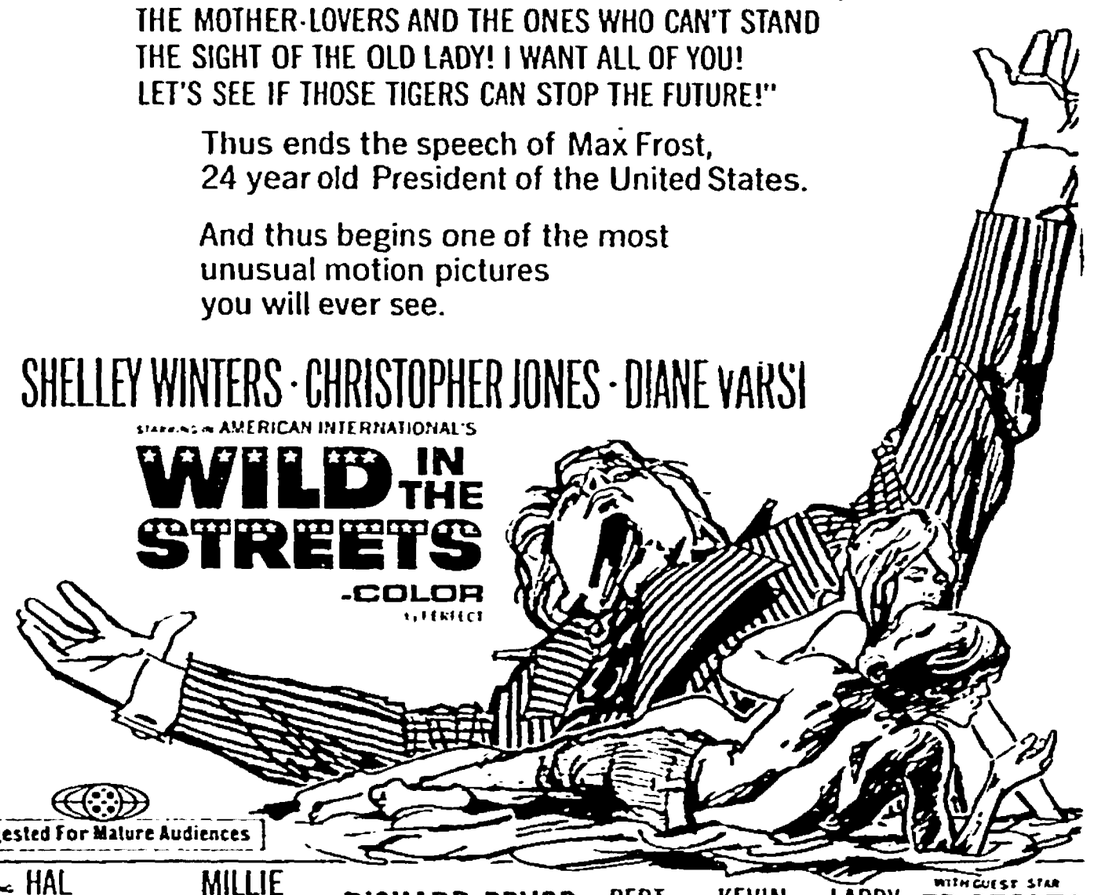
Prestige company needs your voice and personality.

Call Mr. Barr 446-8200.

THE OLD TIGERS ARE SCARED, BABY!

"I WANT THE TWO-CAR KIDS AND THE ONE-BEDROOM KIDS, THE MOTHER-LOVERS AND THE ONES WHO CAN'T STAND THE SIGHT OF THE OLD LADY! I WANT ALL OF YOU! LET'S SEE IF THOSE TIGERS CAN STOP THE FUTURE!"

Thus ends the speech of Max Frost, 24 year old President of the United States.



And thus begins one of the most unusual motion pictures you will ever see.

SHELLEY WINTERS · CHRISTOPHER JONES · DIANE VARSI

starring in AMERICAN INTERNATIONAL'S

WILD IN THE STREETS

-COLOR by DeLuxe

Suggested For Mature Audiences

co-starring HAL HOLBROOK · MILLIE PERKINS · RICHARD PRYOR · BERT FREED · KEVIN COUGHLIN · LARRY BISHOP · with guest star ED BEGLEY

DIRECTED BY BARRY SHEAR · PRODUCED BY JAMES H. NICHOLSON and SAMUEL Z. ARKOFF · EXECUTIVE PRODUCER BURT TOPPER · written by ROBERT THOM · Songs by BARRY MANN and CYNTHIA WEIL

© 1968 American International Pictures

film forum
gifford auditorium
syracuse university

March 26, 27
7 and 9 p. m.

$1.00

Campus Classified

GR 6-5571, Ext. 2314

Rates minimum of 15 words:

1 day	1.15
2 days	2.25
3 days	3.30
4 days	4.30
5 days	5.25
6 days	6:15

To place a classified ad, call GR 6-5571, ext. 2314, between 1 and 3 p.m. Ad must be placed 2 days in advance. Every word over 15 costs 5c extra per day.

ALL ADS MUST BE PREPAID.

MISCELLANEOUS

RENT it you can't buy! T.V.s, tape recorders, typewriters. By week, month or semester. Reasonable rates. S. U. BOOKSTORE, GR 6-5541, x 2426.

FRAME your works of art at unbeatable prices at S. U. BOOKSTORE. Also signs and posters. In the Art Dept., 303 University Pl.

ALTERATIONS DONE within 24 hours. Call for an appointment. Lillian Potter, 207 Comstock. 478-5847.

PRIVATE DRIVING LESSONS — automatic or standard shift. Full or refresher courses. Qualified professional instructors. Pickup service. Auto Driving Academy. GR 6-3995.

DID YOU KNOW? CARROLS on Marshall Street has new hours. CARROLS will now be open from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Sunday through Thursday and 9:30 a.m. through 1:30 a.m. Friday and Saturday, because CARROLS CARES.

FOR SALE

1967 MGB-GT — British racing green, under 20,000 miles. In excellent condition, new dual exhaust, AM-FM radio, and much more. 445-0821 or S. U. x 3877.

'66 LEMANS, 2-door, auto., 8 cyl., P.S. P. B., vinyl top, good condition. $1,550.00. Call Sandy x 3454 or 478-9752.

VOLKSWAGEN '64 white. 2-door, sunroof, excellent condition, 29,000 miles. $695. Call 468-2928.

MOVING, must sell — Men's ski shoes, twin bed room set, freezer, kitchen set, misc. Call 479-6243.

NEARLY NEW TYPEWRITER, excellent condition; bowling ball; ladies sportswear, dresses, coats, sizes 10, 12, 14. Reasonable GR 4-0473 evenings. Sat. & Sun.

1965 PLYMOUTH SATELLITE convertible, good condition. New engine plus more. $750. Call 475-5544 in mornings.

'66 MUSTANG, Hi performance convertible, G. T. Equipment, 4-speed Posi. Perfect for Spring. 478-4341 or 468-5536.

'68 PONTIAC GTO Convertible, power steering, positraction, and many extras. 11,000 miles. Must sell. 446-5242.

'63 TR3, TR4 engine. Call x2791, 2792. Mike Elmer.

'67 MG MIDGET — Body OK, engine excellent. Snow tires. $1,600.00. Owner marrying. Call Linda, 469-1512.

TRIUMPH MOTORCYCLE, 650 cc.: Bonneville, 1968 model. Like new. Call Mrs. Shultes. 446-2574 or SU x 2459.

FOR RENT

2 MILES WEST OF CAMPUS — 3 large rooms, furnished, air conditioned, about $120 including all utilities. Best hours 8 a.m. or 10 p.m. Mr. Vernon 475-3790.

FURNISHED 3 ROOM APARTMENT. Near University. Available for immediate occupancy. Call Nancy Sellers, 478-2620.

CATAMOUNT SKI AREA: House for rent on Prospect Lake in Berkshires - cooking facilities. Sleeps eight — weekends or weekly — five minutes from Catamount — Contact Reggie, x3303 or 212-749-1430.

WANTED

GRADUATE WOMEN. Kitchen. 475-4373. Fri. eve 6-9. Sat. morn. 8-11, eve. 5-9. Mon. eve. 6-10.

PART OR FULL TIME positions available now — option for summer work. Top salary. Liberal Hours. Call 463-3735. 3-5 p.m. weekdays for appointment.

SUMMER JOBS: Counselors, private boys' camp: college men of above average physical fitness and judgment: tripping, canoeing, campcraft, archery, riflery, crafts driver: Love of out-of-doors and children essential. Adirondacks Swim Camp. 39 Mill Valley Road, Pittsford, N. Y. 14534.

TYPING

DISSERTATIONS, THESES, AND TERM papers. IBM electric typewriter. 40c per page 5c per copy. 446-2841. Mrs. Miller.

THIRTY YEARS EXPERIENCE. Dissertations, term papers, proof-read. Satisfaction guaranteed. Mrs. Raymond Webb. HE 7-8259.

DIANE WALLACE. 472-2115. Theses dissertations and term papers. IBM electric. 40c per page. 5c copy. Multilith. 45c.

TAKE YOUR MANUSCRIPT to the only professional typing and printing service serving the S. U. area. The knowledge and experience of having done over 2,000 theses and dissertations is behind every job we turn out. Stephanie's Office Service. 469-2795.

SU 177 POUNDER BOB RUST will be hard pressed to place in the NCAA tournament in Provo, Utah this week. Rust sports an 8-1 dual meet slate and finished third in the EIWA tournament in Princeton two weeks ago. (Photo by Forgham)

Three matmen, two more athletes in NCAA meets

By ADAM DAWSON

Seven long months of hard work will end this weekend for three Syracuse wrestlers. The three are Bob Rust, Vinnie Paolano, and Eric Greenberg and they have earned the right to represent Syracuse at the NCAA Wrestling championships in Provo, Utah. This trio of fine grapplers formed the highly respectable backbone of coach Ed Carlin's team all season long.

During the season the threesome had a combined dual meet record of 20 wins, 2 losses and 2 ties. This fine record plus their showing in the Easterns earned them the trip to Utah. At the Easterns, Eric and Vinnie took thirds while Bob gained a second.

At Utah they will compete against the best collegiate wrestlers in the country. Approximately sixty boys will be entered in each of eleven weight classes. As Carlin said, "The competition is always tough, anything can happen and you don't know exactly who is in your weight class until you get there."

What is known is that all of the boys will have real tough competition. At 145 last year's runnerup Mike Grant and Eastern champ Clyde Frantz seem to be the class of the field. Tough boys Chuck Jean of Iowa State and Charlie Shivers of Oklahoma highlight the field at 177. At 191 returning medalists Tom Kline of Cal Poly and John Schnieder of Michigan State, as well as sophomore Geof Baum of Oklahoma State head the field.

Since the boys may be called on to wrestle seven matches, conditioning is most important. They have been working out twice daily for two hours each session, plus a three hour session Saturday night, and they have been seen running three to four miles daily.

This trip to the Nationals is a first for Vinnie and Eric. Bob went last year but had to default his second match due to injurry. For Eric it is the end of a long wrestling career, since he is a senior.

In addition to the wrestlers, two other SU athletes will be competing in NCAA championships.

Swimmer, Brian Krause, only a freshman, has qualified for three events in the tournament to be held in Bloomington, Indiana. He is the first SU swimmer ever to qualify for more than two events and will be competing in the 500 and 1650 meter freestyles in addition to the 200 meter butterfly.

George Stalter, standout gymnast, is headed for Seattle, Washington. He will be competing in the still ring event; one in which he placed first in six of eight meets this season. He also placed third in his specialty in the Eastern tournament.

Orioles, Twins atop AL as transplants set pace

By DAN SCHLOSSBERG

Former National Leaguers should carry the Baltimore Orioles to the top of the American League heap in the league's Eastern Division this season, but the Minnesota Twins figure to face the National League playoff winners in the World Series.

The Orioles will rely on a newly arrived battery of pitcher Mike Cuellar and catcher Clay Dalrymple, plus the versatile super-star Frank Robinson, the only man to win the Most Valuable Player Award in both leagues.

EASTERN DIVISION

1. BALTIMORE ORIOLES - The Birds have one of the best pitching staffs in baseball with starters Jim Hardin, Dave McNally, Tom Phoebus, Dave Leonhard and Mike Cuellar as the front line. In addition to the hitting of the Robinsons, Frank and Brooks, Mgr. Earl Weaver is leaning heavily on rookie outfielder Merv Rettenmund.

2. DETROIT TIGERS - It's probably a mistake not to pick them again, but the Orioles are stronger on the left side of the infield and this can be what hurts. The Bengals still have solid pitching with Denny McLain, Earl Wilson, and Mickey Lolich plus top-heavy batting power in Willie Horton, Jim Northrup, Bill Freehan.

3. BOSTON RED SOX - This club could finish anywhere in the East, but they have so many question marks that it's probably best to put them right in the middle. Hitters Carl Yastrzemski, Reggie Smith, and Ken Harrelson are proven commodities but former slugger Tony Conigliaro still is not. Neither are pitchers Dick Ellsworth, Ray Culp, Jim Lonborg, and Jose Santiago, the top four Bosox starters and top four Bosox (and other) sore-arm and injury cases of recent seasons.

4. CLEVELAND INDIANS - Pitching galore but holes to deplore. Indians will probably deal one of their stalwart servers for some swat strength. The Tribe front-liners include ERA king Luis Tiant (20-9, 1.60), fireballer Sam McDowell (his 1.81 wasn't far behind), and Sonny Siebert. The hitters are slow in coming, but include Max Alvis and Tony Horton.

5. NEW YORK YANKEES - Youth parade includes Bobby Murcer, Jerry Kenney, Tony Solaita and others but it may not pay off for several more seasons. Veterans Mel Stottlemyre, Joe Pepitone, and Tom Tresh will try to hold club together while younger stars like Roy White and Bill Robinson begin maturing.

6. WASHINGTON SENATORS - It's too bad the manager doesn't play, or Ted Williams would lead the Senators in batting at age 50. The Nats have only pitchers Camilo Pascual, Jim Hannan, and Joe Coleman plus huge outfielder Frank Howard to give Williams solace.

WESTERN DIVISION

1. MINNESOTA TWINS - Plenty of veteran strength here. Harmon Killebrew, Tony Oliva, Rod Carew, newcomer Leo Cardenas and rookie Graig Nettles are only part of Minnesota's Murderers' Row. For pitching, rookie pilot Billy Martin can call on vets Jim Perry, Jim Kaat, Dave Boswell, and Dean Chance. A top team.

2. OAKLAND ATHLETICS - Though the A's lead the league with their .240 average of a year ago, and Danny Cater was second to Carl Yastrzemski, the 1969 outfit doesn't figure to outdo the Twins. Hank Bauer's boys, however, may impress with their young stars, including pitchers John Odom, Catfish Hunter and Jim Nash plus hitters Rick Monday, Reggie Jackson, and Bert Campaneris.

3. CHICAGO WHITE SOX - Pitching comebacks may put the White Sox back in their accustomed position of A.L. contenders. Gary Peters, Joel Horlen, and Cisco Carlos are the men Manager Al Lopez is depending on, but he'll need hitting too.

4. CALIFORNIA ANGELS - Bill Rigney's club is very strong in some places and very weak in others. Around the keystone, where Jim Fregosi and Bob Knoop form the league's finest double-play combiniation (with the possible exception of Carew and Cardenas at Minnesota), the Angels are tough.

5 and 6. SEATTLE PILOTS AND KANSAS CITY ROYALS. These new clubs will round out the AL West, but the order is anybody's guess. Each has some good players and both have a lot of bad ones. They both should have long, long seasons.

ERIC GREENBERG, Orange 145 pounder, takes the pause that refreshes after a dual meet encounter earlier this season. Although coming off his finest year ever, Greenberg would be the surprise of the tourney if he placed in the top six. (Photo by Forgham)

A tip of the hat...

By MIKE WEBER
Sports Editor

They say "give credit where credit is due." The Syracuse University Athletic Department, long the source of blasts from some coaches of "minor" sports, athletes and this newspaper, indeed merits congratulations.

Five SU athletes will depart this week for National Collegiate Athletic Association championship meets across the country. The athletic department is footing the bill.

The big news, here, however, is not the fact that five athletes are going, but that the five represent three of the so-called minor sports on campus. The athletes who are usually forced to drive cars or take busses to meets.

Not this time, however. Three wrestlers, Eric Greenberg, Vince Paolano and Bob Rust will journey to Provo, Utah for the NCAA wrestling tournament. They will do so via the air route at a total cost of $1052. Hotel and meals add approximately $312 for the proposed four-day stay.

Meanwhile, frosh swim standout, Brian Krause will travel to Bloomington, Indiana, accompanied by coach Jon Buzzard. This, done a t a total cost of approximately $398.

Finally, George Stalter will carry SU's colors to the Gymnastics championships at Seattle, Washington. The fee here is about $634.

The athletic department deserves credit because they didn't do what they could have done. None of the wrestlers won the first place award at the recent Eastern tournament. Rust took second while his two teammates placed third.

Stalter took a third in still rings in the Eastern gym meet. Krause, while being superb all season long, will be facing by far his sternest test.

The SUAD could have said that since none of the qualifiers for these post-season tournaments are proven champions, the expense would be too great. Sending the wrestlers to Utah is indeed quite an auspicious undertaking, while the other planned trips are nothing small.

The athletic department could have semi-legitimatley refused to finance the trips. But they didn't. They're giving these fine athletes, who qualified for the events, a chance to prove themselves in the heat of top competition. Therefore, a tip of the hat to Jim Decker and Andy Geiger. Keep up the good work!

SU hockey club wins two; advances to SIHL finals

The SU hockey club puts its 10 game win streak on the line this week, as it faces Plante's Resturant in the final round of the Syracuse Industrial Hockey League playoffs.

The Orange advanced to the finals by clobbering General Electric by scores of 8-4 and 14-1, in the best of three game semi-final round.

The skaters were paced in their easy victories by five goal performances from hard working, Jim Reidl and captain George Mechem. In addition, frosh Daren Miller accounted for four goals in the short two game series.

Things won't be so easy for the Orange, however, in their encounters with Plante's. Plante's finished the regular season one point ahead of the second place Orange with a 10-1-1 record. Their squad, long on depth, includes knowledgable veterans who have played the game of hockey for as much as 40 years, and fast skating youngsters. This combination of youth and know-how has been the real secret to Plante's success.

However, SU was the only team to hand Plante's a loss this year, a thrilling 5-4 triumph.

All action in this best-of-five playoff is scheduled for a 10:30 face-off at the Coliseum. Play began Monday night and will continue every night this week until a team has won three games.

DAILY ORANGE

Syracuse University's Daily Newspaper Since 1903

Vol. 67, No. 84 | Syracuse, New York, Thursday, March 27, 1969 | 10 Cents

Corbally to be chosen by Trustees

"Any institution devoted to honest and free inquiry should and will be subject to tensions."

By KAREN WIEDIGER

It is persumed Dr. John E. Corbally, Jr., vice president for academic affairs and provost of Ohio State University, will be elected chancellor of Syracuse University at tomorrow morning's meeting of the Board of Trustees.

The decision of the trustees' will be made known to the faculty and students at a special meeting of the University Senate at 2 p.m. Friday in Maxwell Auditorium. Corbally, who is planning to be in the Syracuse area, will probably be presented to the University community at that time.

Statements about Corbally have been favorable for the most part. A former student at OSU who is now working for a Columbus newspaper said, "Corbally is probably the fairest person in the administration. When I was on the staff of the student paper there, we knew we could always get a fair deal from him."

She continued, "He seems to get along well with students, knows what is going on and appears more concerned about students than most of the people in the administration."

This viewpoint is backed up by Corbally's statement to administrators that they could be made available to students "by organizing your schedule as best as you can and by giving students high priority in the development of your schedule."

Campus disorders

In his present position at OSU, Corbally, 44, is responsible to the president for all aspects of the university related to educational programs and for general administrative duties assigned to him by the president. During a demonstration at the university last year "he was the administrator who kept his head and did the most to meet the demands of the students," commented a staff writer for the "Ohio State Lantern," the campus newspaper.

"Many people blamed him because not all the promises made at the time of the demonstration were kept," the reporter continued. "But he did his best and that's all you can ask."

Corbally himself believes "campus disorders and their causes are complex and not subject to easy generalizations. The 'quick generalization' has caused more problems than almost any other intellectual error I can think of, and I hope to avoid making that error.

"Any institution devoted to honest and free inquiry should and will be subject to tensions, to debate, to the testing of ideas," he continued. "This kind of 'disorder' should be expected and fostered. Other kinds of disorder which really are efforts to remove the rights of one group or another to honest and free inquiry have no place on a campus and actually occur only rarely in higher education today."

When Corbally was asked recently about his goals as a college president he said he believed he would be assuming the presidency of an institution that is one of quality. His goal would be to keep that institution alive and growing.

In answer to "how do you keep an institution alive and growing?" Corbally responded, "A university remains that way so long as it can attract a student body and a faculty which are alive and growing. The maintenance of conditions to permit the attraction of these kinds of people is the key leadership task of a university president."

If Corbally is named chancellor, he will be the first Presbyterian leader of SU. All other chancellors have been Methodists or Methodist ministers. He will also be one of the most qualified men to hold this type of position.

Career history

A native of South Bend, Wash., Corbally holds the rank of professor in the School of Education at OSU and is the university's representative on the Committee on Institutional Cooperation of the Big 10 and the University of Chicago.

He received a bachelor of science and a master of arts degree from the University of Washington and was awarded a Ph.D. from the University of California at Berkley.

(Continued on Page 5)

"Campus disorders and their causes are complex and not subject to easy generalizations."

Red tape chokes parking decision

By LARRY KRAMER

Apparently, the miles and miles of red tape surrounding administrative decisions have delayed any official action on the Council on Student Life (CSL) proposal for underclass registraiton of cars on campus.

Last Friday, CSL passed a proposal asking the SU parking committee to conduct an experiment "whose purpose is to determine the feasability of permitting underclassmen to register automobiles." The proposal called for the University to notify students through the "Daily Orange" concerning the availability of parking space at Manley Field House, and in University garages, on a pro-rated cast, first-come-first-served basis.

The CSL proposal was to be brought before the SU parking committee at yesterday afternoon's meeting CSL member and Dean of Student Services, Jim G. Carleton sent the proposal to the parking committee's chairman, Rowland Graeber of the Classics Department, Wednesday morning.

In addition to the mailed request a CSL member, Professor Benjamin Burtt of the Chemistry Department, was also supposed to bring up the proposal. Burtt is a member of the parking committee, and according to Carleton, "we assumed he, being aware of the situation, would also bring it up."

Graeber, and the parking committee, never received the mailed proposal. Burtt, although suprised not to find it on the agenda, thought that perhaps Carleton decided not to send it. "I didn't think that this should be a parking committee decision. It really should be handled by the Dean of Men or another administration representative," said Burtt.

When Carleton was notified that the parking committee didn't act on the proposal, he said, "It sounds like they're dodging it, doesn't it?"

Speaker of the Student Senate and CSL member, Ed Feldman noted that a major reason for voting for the proposal now was to give students the opportunity to bring their cars back from spring vacation. "Professor Burtt was supposed to handle it, and now it seems that it won't be handled until after the vacation."

Dorm goes autonomous

By MITCH LANE

Residents of St. Mary's Mens Dormitory declared dorm autonomy yesterday in a move branded by Dick Conrad, president of DellPlain, as the political strategy of Ed Barron, president of St. Mary's, in his quest for SG vice-president.

Conrad said, "It is a political move. Ed Barron is president of St. Mary's and running for student government. We could have moved last week. Ed's been pushing pretty hard--I'm sure it was a political move."

Barron, in defense, claims: "We had planned on presenting our dorm autonomy proposals together at Student Senate last Tuesday, but DellPlain never came to the meeting."

Reliable sources said they "knew of no opposition in DellPlain to autonomy." They feel that Matty Liebowitz, in charge of autonomy proposals at DellPlain and also running for sophomore class president on the GIA slate, withheld DellPlain's participation after Ifshin left GIA and Barron became vice-presidential nominee on his independent slate. The same sources feel that witholding DellPlain's participation would make Barron's autonomy move appear political in nature.

Fred Boss, chairman of the Dorm atuonomy evaluation committee, said "In evaluating St. Mary's the committee was not concerned with the politics of the situation, but with the ability of the dorm to handle autonomy."

St. Mary's autonomy means little at present, as residents are breaking no University rules. Barron did say, however, "at some point a confrontation will be necessary."

Dean David Tatham, when questioned about St. Mary's autonomy stated that he had "heard no declarations on their part." He continued "one risks misleading the student body if one suggests autonomy is near or right around the corner." Tatham concluded, "Any student who violates any of the major rules of the University is under the disciplinary authority of the Dean of Men."

Students have the choice of being disciplined either by the Dean of Men or Student Court. Currently a liberal court has been returning "guilty, no action" verdicts.

DAILY ORANGE

Syracuse University's Daily Newspaper Since 1903

Vol. 67, No. 84 | Syracuse, New York, Thursday, March 27, 1969 | 10 Cents

Corbally to be chosen by Trustees

"Any institution devoted to honest and free inquiry should and will be subject to tensions."

By KAREN WIEDIGER

It is persumed Dr. John E. Corbally, Jr., vice president for academic affairs and provost of Ohio State University, will be elected chancellor of Syracuse University at tomorrow morning's meeting of the Board of Trustees.

The decision of the trustees' will be made known to the faculty and students at a special meeting of the University Senate at 2 p.m. Friday in Maxwell Auditorium. Corbally, who is planning to be in the Syracuse area, will probably be presented to the University community at that time.

Statements about Corbally have been favorable for the most part. A former student at OSU who is now working for a Columbus newspaper said, "Corbally is probably the fairest person in the administration. When I was on the staff of the student paper there, we knew we could always get a fair deal from him."

She continued, "He seems to get along well with students, knows what is going on and appears more concerned about students than most of the people in the administration."

This viewpoint is backed up by Corbally's statement to administrators that they could be made available to students "by organizing your schedule as best as you can and by giving students high priority in the development of your schedule."

Campus disorders

In his present position at OSU, Corbally, 44, is responsible to the president for all aspects of the university related to educational programs and for general administrative duties assigned to him by the president. During a demonstration at the university last year "he was the administrator who kept his head and did the most to meet the demands of the students," commented a staff writer for the "Ohio State Lantern," the campus newspaper.

"Campus disorders and their causes are complex and not subject to easy generalizations."

"Many people blamed him because not all the promises made at the time of the demonstration were kept," the reporter continued. "But he did his best and that's all you can ask."

Corbally himself believes "campus disorders and their causes are complex and not subject to easy generalizations. The 'quick generalization' has caused more problems than almost any other intellectual error I can think of, and I hope to avoid making that error.

"Any institution devoted to honest and free inquiry should and will be subject to tensions, to debate, to the testing of ideas," he continued. "This kind of 'disorder' should be expected and fostered. Other kinds of disorder which really are efforts to remove the rights of one group or another to honest and free inquiry have no place on a campus and actually occur only rarely in higher education today."

When Corbally was asked recently about his goals as a college president he said he believed he would be assuming the presidency of an institution that is one of quality. His goal would be to keep that institution alive and growing.

In answer to "how do you keep an institution alive and growing?" Corbally responded, "A university remains that way so long as it can attract a student body and a faculty which are alive and growing. The maintenance of conditions to permit the attraction of these kinds of people is the key leadership task of a university president."

If Corbally is named chancellor, he will be the first Presbyterian leader of SU. All other chancellors have been Methodists or Methodist ministers. He will also be one of the most qualified men to hold this type of position.

Career history

A native of South Bend, Wash., Corbally holds the rank of professor in the School of Education at OSU and is the university's representative on the Committee on Institutional Cooperation of the Big 10 and the University of Chicago.

He received a bachelor of science and a master of arts degree from the University of Washington and was awarded a Ph.D. from the University of California at Berkley.

(Continued on Page 5)

Red tape chokes parking decision

By LARRY KRAMER

Apparently, the miles and miles of red tape surrounding administrative decisions have delayed any official action on the Council on Student Life (CSL) proposal for underclass registraiton of cars on campus.

Last Friday, CSL passed a proposal asking the SU parking committee to conduct an experiment "whose purpose is to determine the feasability of permitting underclassmen to register automobiles." The proposal called for the University to notify students through the "Daily Orange" concerning the availability of parking space at Manley Field House, and in University garages, on a pro-rated cast, first-come-first-served basis.

The CSL proposal was to be brought before the SU parking committee at yesterday afternoon's meeting CSL member and Dean of Student Services, Jim G. Carleton sent the proposal to the parking committee's chairman, Rowland Graeber of the Classics Department, Wednesday morning.

In addition to the mailed request a CSL member, Professor Benjamin Burtt of the Chemistry Department, was also supposed to bring up the proposal. Burtt is a member of the parking committee, and according to Carleton, "we assumed he, being aware of the situation, would also bring it up."

Graeber, and the parking committee, never received the mailed proposal. Burtt, although suprised not to find it on the agenda, thought that perhaps Carleton decided not to send it. "I didn't think that this should be a parking committee decision. It really should be handled by the Dean of Men or another administration representative," said Burtt.

When Carleton was notified that the parking committee didn't act on the proposal, he said, "It sounds like they're dodging it, doesn't it?"

Speaker of the Student Senate and CSL member, Ed Feldman noted that a major reason for voting for the proposal now was to give students the opportunity to bring their cars back from spring vacation. "Professor Burtt was supposed to handle it, and now it seems that it won't be handled until after the vacation."

Dorm goes autonomous

By MITCH LANE

Residents of St. Mary's Mens Dormitory declared dorm autonomy yesterday in a move branded by Dick Conrad, president of DellPlain, as the political strategy of Ed Barron, president of St. Mary's, in his quest for SG vice-president.

Conrad said, "It is a political move. Ed Barron is president of St. Mary's and running for student government. We could have moved last week. Ed's been pushing pretty hard--I'm sure it was a political move."

Barron, in defense, claims: "We had planned on presenting our dorm autonomy proposals together at Student Senate last Tuesday, but DellPlain never came to the meeting."

Reliable sources said they "knew of no opposition in DellPlain to autonomy." They feel that Matty Liebowitz, in charge of autonomy proposals at DellPlain and also running for sophomore class president on the GIA slate, withheld DellPlain's participation after Ifshin left GIA and Barron became vice-presidential nominee on his independent slate. The same sources feel that witholding DellPlain's participation would make Barron's autonomy move appear political in nature.

Fred Boss, chairman of the Dorm atuonomy evaluation committee, said "In evaluating St. Mary's the committee was not concerned with the politics of the situation, but with the ability of the dorm to handle autonomy."

St. Mary's autonomy means little at present, as residents are breaking no University rules. Barron did say, however, "at some point a confrontation will be necessary."

Dean David Tatham, when questioned about St. Mary's autonomy stated that he had "heard no declarations on their part." He continued "one risks misleading the student body if one suggests autonomy is near or right around the corner." Tatham concluded, "Any student who violates any of the major rules of the University is under the disciplinary authority of the Dean of Men."

Students have the choice of being disciplined either by the Dean of Men or Student Court. Currently a liberal court has been returning "guilty, no action" verdicts.

DAILY ORANGE
Syracuse University's Daily Newspaper Since 1903
Editor-in-Chief ..... Angus H. Twombly
Business Manager ..... Steven P. Strobridge

Campus disorders

The New York State Legislature has passed the buck to Governor Rockefeller. The Assembly and the Senate have passed one bill demanding the automatic revocation of all state scholarships and aid from any students involved in campus disorders. Another bill requires each university to establish a framework of ground rules on actions schools would take during a campus disorder, and one bill calls for a manditory fine of $1,000 accompanied by appropriate civil action for any student convicted of preventing classes. All three bills are being sent to Rockefeller, he must choose the plan he feels will best serve the state's educational system.

The bill calling for a manditory withdrawal of scholarship and loan money would amount to nothing more than discrimination against students from New York State. As Dean Carleton stated, a student from New Jersey could be penalized by civil authorities while a student from New York would face imprisonment and the loss of his state scholarships.

Any bill calling for a predetermined fine of any amount, with no provision for redress, is inherently unconstitutional. With no provision for University determination of severity, the $1,000 fine seems unduly severe.

If Rockefeller signs either of the two bills limiting university control of campus policies, New York State will take one giant step backwards. Although legislative support is behind passage of the "loss of scholarship" bill, Rockefeller should not head their cries of "our taxes aren't for campus radicals." Governor Rockefeller must allow the university the freedom to decide on the severity of campus disorders and the extent of action, if any, to be taken against participants.

--David A. Ross

Anti ballistics

They're mad.

They're absolutely mad.

Everyone can see that things at home are getting worse all the time and that little or nothing is being done about it.

The last thing in the world we need is to spend six or seven thousand million dollars for the down payment on an anti ballistic missle system.

But what can you expect from the type of mind that got us into Vietnam in the first place and that keeps plunging us back in for one-last-victory-try every time it looks as though we might finally extricate ourselves.

Mr. Nixon and Secretary Laird and their advisors in the Pentagon seem to have lost touch with reality.

There are bombs going off in our cities. But they're not coming from China or the U.S.S.R.

The air we breathe is being poisoned, but it's not being done by enemy agents.

Many Americans no longer believe what the government tells them, but it's not because they listen to Radio Moscow.

The gold in Fort Knox is, for all practical purpose, no longer our own--but the job wasn't done by Goldfinger or Smersh.

The war and weapons people have become so obsessed with International Communism, they fail to see that they themselves are laying the groundwork for a state of home-grown anarchy.

A few observations: The figure they use in six or seven billion dollars. But this is just the well-known foot in the door.

Furthermore, there is every likelihood that the "light" ABM system will get heavier and heavier as it goes along, and would ultimately cost over fifty thousand million dollars.

Meanwhile, back in the U.S.S.R., do you think "their" hawks would be standing still for this?

--SANE: a citizens' organization for a sane world.

Black education

Course aims re-stated

Editor's note: When the proposal was first presented to Dean Frederic Kramer it was for the creation of an Afro-American Studies Program. The below article is in support of an Afro-American Studies Department.

There has been some apprehension on the part of the administration and faculty toward the establishment of a Department of Afro-American Studies. Questions have been raised as to its academic credibility and respectability and its ability to attract faculty.

In response to this we would like to remind you of the major aims of the Afro-American Studies Program as proposed originally by the Black students. Specifically this is to give Black students relevant information which they can take back to their communities, making them a positive force in community development and helping them identify with their African roots. Though the program will be open to all interested students, we must not lose sight of its major objectives.

As the department is proposed it will have a Black chairman who will administer the program, decide degree requirements and recruit faculty with the help of a committee of Black students and faculty. Isn't it logical, since the program will be dealing primarily with Black people and Black communities, to have it administered by those who have experienced Blackness and have a vested interest in the program's success? Isn't it also logical to assume that such administrative personnel, realizing the nature and goals of the program, would strive to make it a program of the highest quality. After all no one cares for you and yours better than you do.

On the question of credibility and respectability of a degree granted by a Department of Afro-American Studies we would like to give two specific responses. First, who are we talking about? Respectability of whom? The whole question of respectability is a value judgement...what type of knowledge will be respectable? Since people with degrees in Afro-American studies would be working in the Black Communities and not for IBM, for example, the type of knowledge they get related to Black people will be respectable to the growing Black institutions and helpful in everyday community relations.

Our frame of reference is Black and we know the type of knowledge one receives in an Afro-American Studies Program administered by a Black chairman would be respectable in Black communities.

The second point on the question of respectability is that dual majors would be encouraged and that the chairman of the proposed department of Afro-American Studies will require majors to take relevant courses in other departments. This fact may add to its respectability in the eyes of white people.

On the question of attracting faculty, in addition to Black professors there are many Black experts on various aspects of Black life, arts, music and grass-root community organizations who would be more quickly attracted to an Afro-American Studies Department if they knew they were going to be dealing personally with Black people.

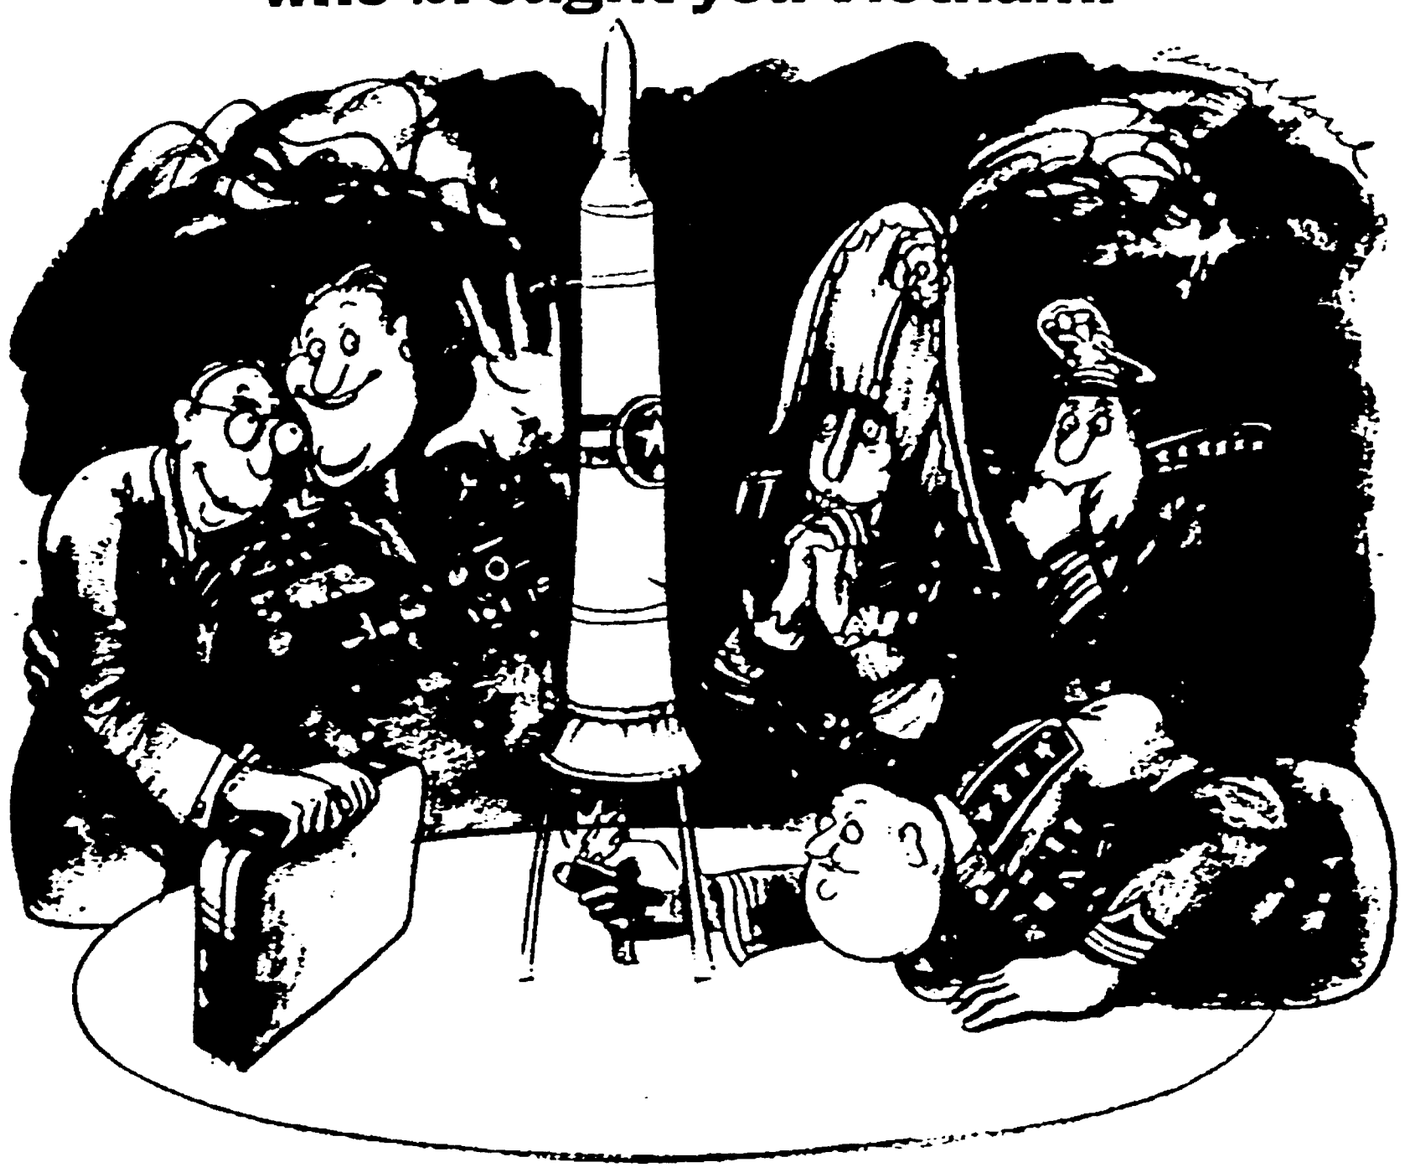
As time goes by, young, progressive, self-aware Black professors will look for positions in an Afro-American Studies Department. The department will not deter other departments from recruiting Black faculty. It would increase the University's ability to attract Black talent.

The power to decide what constitutes Afro-American Studies must remain in the hands of Afro-Americans and they must have a department in order to be able to have a free hand in developing a viable program.

We are dealing with the same basic issue that is at stake today in Black communities around the nation, especially in the field of education--namely self-determination. Will white people trust Black people to educate themselves?

--Black Studies Committee of Students' Afro-American Society

Reaction



The Administration's response to the needs of the Black students has been encouraging despite the initial disrespect shown by Chancellor Tolley. As Black students we negotiated with restraint and in good faith and will continue to do so as long as positive results are forthcoming. However, it must be understood that we consider all of our proposals equally important and action on some will not be an excuse for inaction on others.

We consider our entire program a positive contribution to the Syracuse University community which will make life more meaningful and education more relevant to Black students and enlighten all students. Our proposals are farsighted and foresee the need for the University to address itself to the increasing number of Black Students that will be attending the University. They will also help bridge the gap between Black and White understanding. By implementation of our programs the University will not only be moving to meet its sound responsibility but will also be making real its reputation as one of the best centers of learning in the nation.

The ability of the University to respond to the changing social needs of community and country has been tested. We suspect there are still some keepers of the status quo and brothers of the fraternity of neutrality

(Continued on Page 6)

From the people who brought you Vietnam:

The anti ballistic missile system.

Crisis group to be created

The Syracuse University Senate has voted to form a standing committee of students, faculty and administrators who will "stand ready to convene at very short notice when a crisis arises" on campus.

The Senate's Agenda Committee, headed by George J. Alexander, professor of law, will comprise the faculty membership of the crisis group. Graduate and undergraduate students must still be selected for the committee.

The motion forming the committee stated: "A standing committee of the University comprised of students, faculty and administrators should stand ready to convene, at very short notice, when a crisis arises. Unless emergency conditions preclude, no major actions dealing with the crisis should be undertaken without the advice and consent of this group."

The faculty members of the Senate Agenda committee are Oliver E. Clubb, associate professor of political science; Nathan Ginsburg, professor of physics; Erik Hemmingsen, professor of mathematics; Daniel F. Jackson, professor of civil engineering; Nelson L. Nemerow, professor of civil engineering and William J. Wasserstrom, professor of English.

SU collects winning works

Three of four authors who won Nebula Awards recently for the best science fiction of 1968 are represented in manuscript collections at Syracuse University. The Nebulas are presented each year by the Science Fiction Writers of America (SFWA), whose archives are also at the University.

A Nebula for the best novel went to Alexei Panshin of Brooklyn, author of "Rite of Passage."

The award for the best novella went to Anne McCaffrey of Sea Cliff, secretary-treasurer of SFWA, for "Dragonrider."

The best novelet was "Mother to the World," by Richard Wilson, director of the News Bureau of Syracuse University.

All three have donated manuscripts and other papers to Syracuse University.

The award is a rectangular block of lucite on a black base, enclosing a golden spiral nebula suspended over the crystal surface of an alien world.

Tree-mendous

Forestry aid announced

Fifteen students of the State University College of Forestry have received scholarships of up to $300 each from the college's Alumni Association.

Money for the scholarships comes from special contributions made by College of Forestry alumni.

Recipients of the 1969 grants are:

Peter K. Bosch, a senior majoring in forest zoology;

Robert A. Bye Jr., a senior majoring in forest biology;

Ralph A. Dettman, a junior studying landscape architecture;

Jean M. Dory, a sophomore majoring in resources management;

Alan R. Eakes, a senior majoring in landscape architecture;

John T. Hastings, a junior studying resources management;

Joseph P. Paddock, a sophomore studying biological sciences;

Dennis R. Parent, a junior majoring in resources management;

Bruce D. Reid, a senior majoring in resources management;

Thomas E. Reule, a sophomore majoring in resources management;

George W. Stanislowsky, a sophomore majoring in forest wildlife management;

Peter Testa, a senior majoring in forest engineering;

Daniel T. Thorne, a sophomore studying resources management;

Robert M. Toole, a senior majoring in landscape architecture and Karl-Hans Wurzinger, a junior majoring in forest biology.

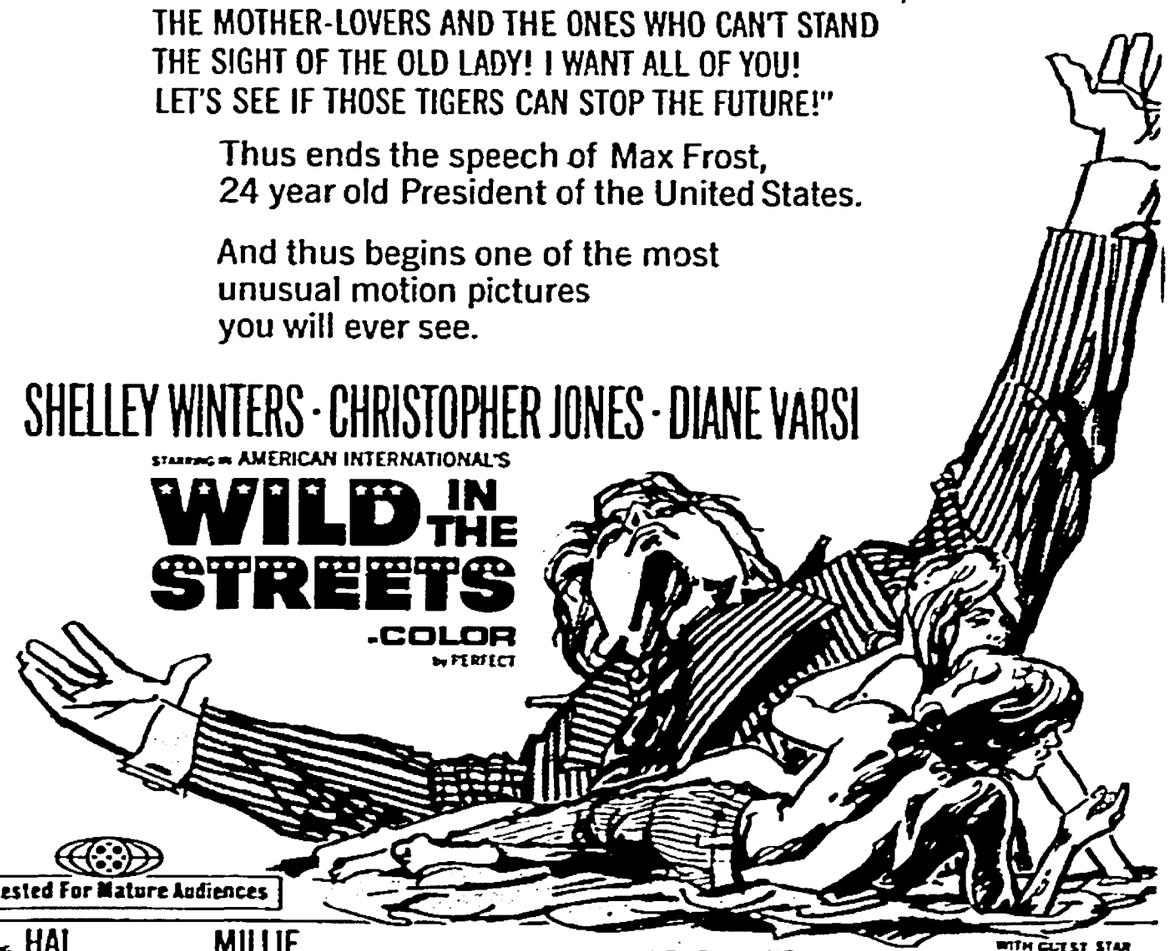
CAMP COUNSELOR OPENINGS
UNDERGRADUATE STUDENTS
(Min. age 19 & completion of at least 1 year of college)
GRADUATE STUDENTS and FACULTY MEMBERS
THE ASSOCIATION OF PRIVATE CAMPS
. . . comprising 350 outstanding Boys, Girls, Brother-Sister and Co-Ed Camps, located throughout the New England, Middle Atlantic States and Canada.
. . . INVITES YOUR INQUIRIES concerning summer employment as Head Counselors, Group Leaders, Specialties, General Counselors.
Write, Phone, or Call in Person
Association of Private Camps — Dept. C
Maxwell M. Alexander, Executive Director
55 West 42nd Street, OX 5-2656, New York 36, N.Y.

Subject needed for Psychological Study. Unmarried female subjects between the ages of 28 and 50 needed for study related to normal menstrual functions. Three sessions are involved and a fee of $30.00 will be paid. This study is being conducted at the Upstate Medical Center. If interested call Mrs. Baum at 473-5775 for information.

Being with each other, doing things together . . . knowing that your affection is growing into precious and enduring love. Happily, all these cherished moments will be forever symbolized by your diamond engagement ring. If the name, Keepsake, is in the ring and on the tag, you are assured of fine quality and lasting satisfaction. The engagement diamond is flawless, of superb color, and precise modern cut. Your Keepsake Jeweler will assist you in making your selection . . . He's in the yellow pages under "Jewelers." Rings from $100 to $10,000. Illustrations enlarged to show detail. ®Trade-mark reg. A. H. Pond Co., Inc., Est. 1892.

REGISTERED
Keepsake®
DIAMOND RINGS

HOW TO PLAN YOUR ENGAGEMENT AND WEDDING
Please send new 20-page booklet, "How To Plan Your Engagement and Wedding" and new 12-page full color folder, both for only 25c. Also, send special offer of beautiful 44-page Bride's Book. $.69



Name_____
Address_____
City_____
State_____ Zip_____
KEEPSAKE DIAMOND RINGS, BOX 90, SYRACUSE, N. Y. 13201

THE OLD TIGERS ARE SCARED, BABY!

"I WANT THE TWO-CAR KIDS AND THE ONE-BEDROOM KIDS, THE MOTHER-LOVERS AND THE ONES WHO CAN'T STAND THE SIGHT OF THE OLD LADY! I WANT ALL OF YOU! LET'S SEE IF THOSE TIGERS CAN STOP THE FUTURE!"

Thus ends the speech of Max Frost, 24 year old President of the United States.

And thus begins one of the most unusual motion pictures you will ever see.

CO-STARRING HAL HOLBROOK · MILLIE PERKINS · RICHARD PRYOR · BERT FREED · KEVIN COUGHLIN · LARRY BISHOP · WITH GUEST STAR ED BEGLEY
DIRECTED BY BARRY SHEAR · PRODUCED BY JAMES H. NICHOLSON AND SAMUEL Z. ARKOFF · EXECUTIVE PRODUCER BURT TOPPER · WRITTEN BY ROBERT THOM · Songs by BARRY MANN and CYNTHIA WEIL
© 1968 American International Pictures

film forum
gifford auditorium
syracuse university

March 25, 26, 27
7 and 9 p. m.

$1.00

Program planner

Fisher nets WAER's top directorship

By PATTI WILLIAMS
Associate Editor

Mike Fisher, newly-elected program director of WAER, said he'll continue the station's afternoon soul music programming because of the large response from the Syracuse black community. Fisher, elected by the station's senior staff early Tuesday morning, helped originate the soul music programming this semester as executive producer of afternoon programming.

"Soul music programming provides a contemporary music service as well as serving the needs of a minority group," said Fisher, a junior, majoring in television-radio.

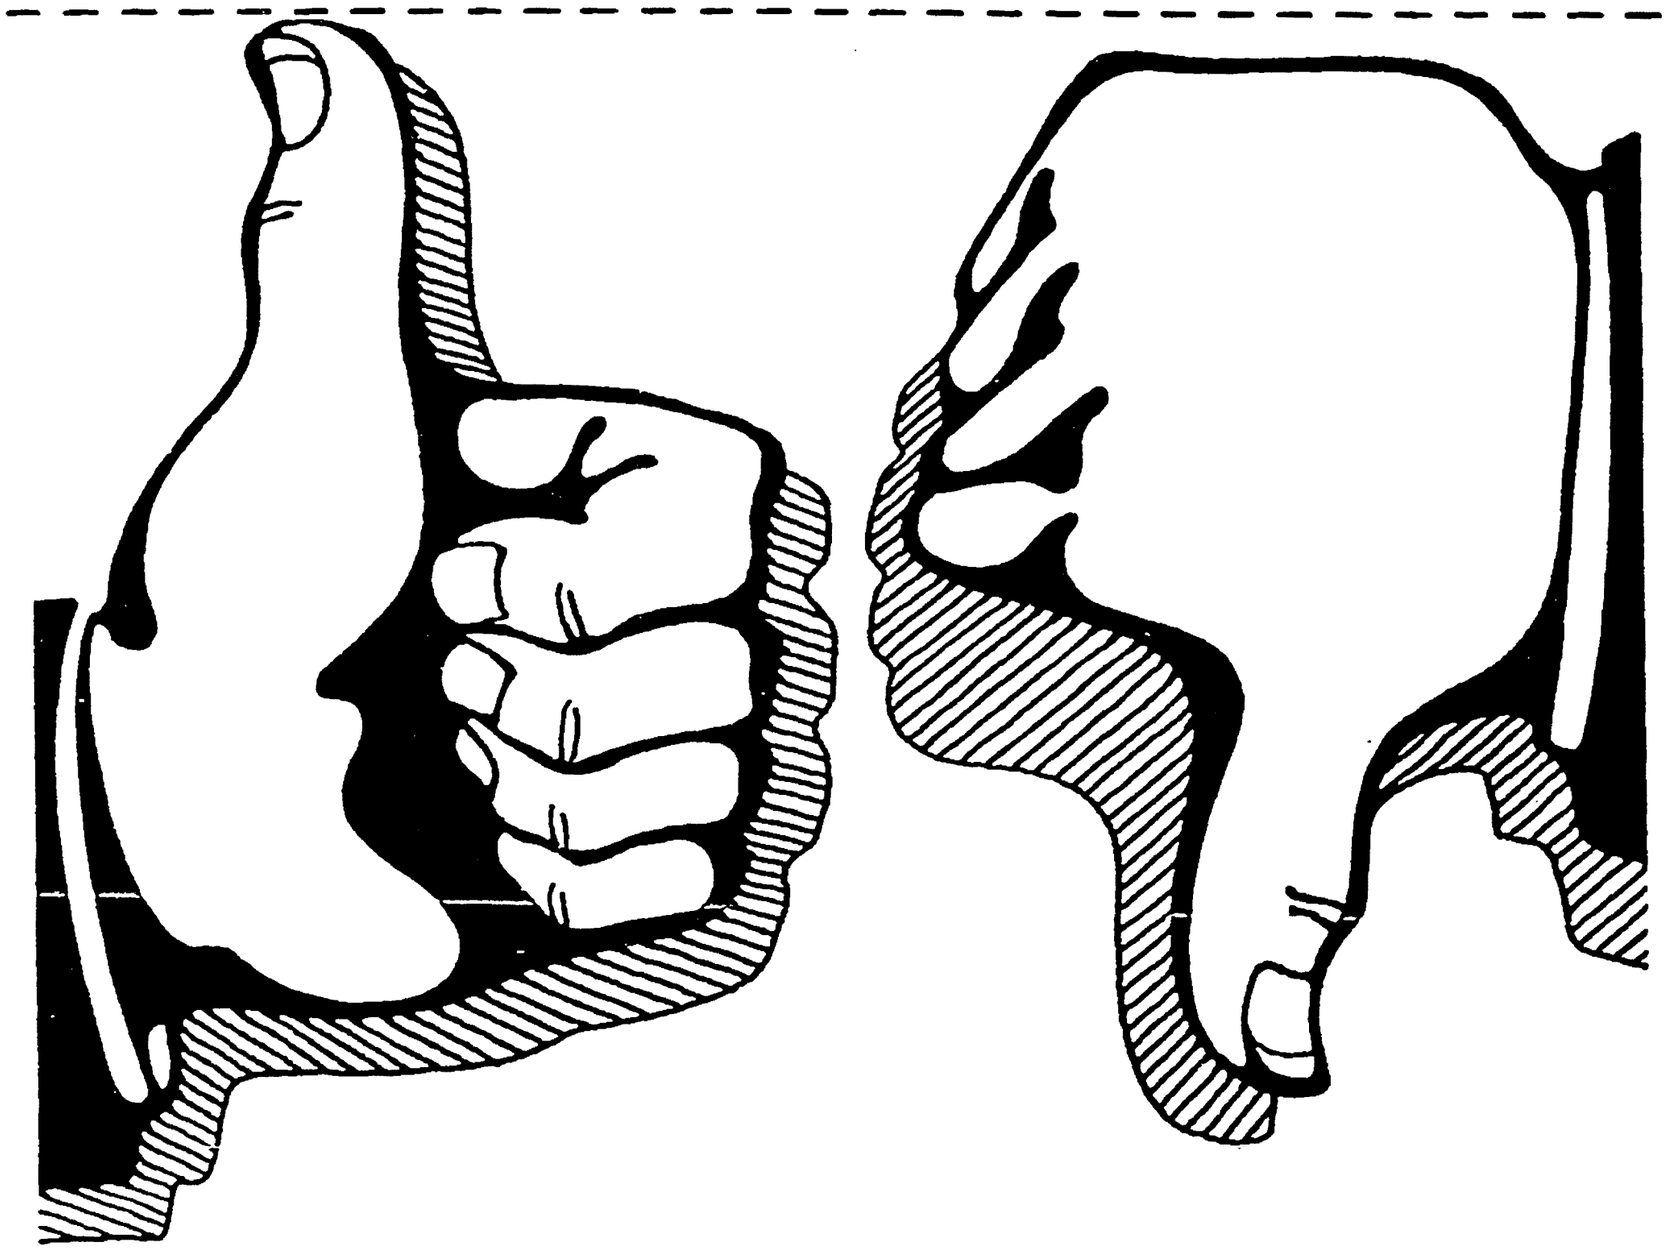
According to Fisher, the afternoon soul music is an example of WAER's ability to broadcast programs which would not be commercially successful. Thus, he said, WAER provides a service other stations in Syracuse cannot.

"We need not so much an increased awareness of the station as we need an awareness of what we are programming," said Fisher. "The students know we are here but they don't know what we are doing."

"I'm interested in tightening up the overall programming," Fisher said slowly as he stared through half-closed eyes. "My concern is with the quality and promotion of shows."

Greater coverage of local news and public affairs is among his goals. He said the station will continue to preempt any show for a major news event, such as a speech by a major political candidate. According to Fisher, WAER makes a special attempt to cover such events live if they are not being covered by the other media in town.

In addition, the new program director said WAER eventually will receive equipment enabling the station to use carrier current to broadcast to the campus dormitories on an AM frequency. Thus, he said, WAER could continue its regular FM programming while handling separate AM programming geared to the students.



MIKE FISHER

The reason WAER can only go AM to campus dormitories and not to the Central New York area, said Fisher, is that there are no full time AM station licenses in the Central New York area available from the Federal Communications Commission.

Another of Fisher's aims is to recruit more students to work at WAER. Although the station holds formal recruiting in the beginning of each semester, Fisher says he would "be happy to set up anyone interested in a phase of radio broadcasting in a department at the station."

He plans to get his masters and a doctorate and then teach or become a broadcasting consultant. Fisher said such consultants are hired by networks and stations to improve the quality of shows.

Two reasons for joining Du Pont, and three for quitting.

1 Du Pont offers open-end opportunity. You don't go into a training program. You go to work—in a series of growth jobs that broaden your base for professional progress and help you find the specific field you want to grow in. We call it "planned mobility."

2 Du Pont works at the outer limits. Sure, everybody claims they do the far-out research. But Du Pont is a world leader in research with the money and the engineering capability to translate ideas into commercial products. If you have a profitable idea, we have what it takes to make it work; and we have a special bonus plan to reward you for it. So Du Pont people grow, personally and professionally. Even men who leave Du Pont often do so because of the professional growth they experienced at Du Pont.

An Equal Opportunity Employer (M/F)

DU PONT
College Relations

1 They go to universities, to teach—recognized authorities in their profession.

2 They go into space, or other government projects.

3 And they go to our competitors, who are smart enough to know where to look for the top men.

We don't like to lose men, and we don't lose many. But when you hire the best, then help them to get better, your people are bound to be sought after.

Du Pont Company
Room 6686, Wilmington, DE 19898

I'd like your latest information on opportunities at Du Pont for graduates with degrees in_____

Name_____

University_____

Degree_____ Graduation Date_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____ Zip_____

Rumer Record
WISHES ALL A HAPPY SPRING VACATION
Entire Inventory Is Not On Sale
2.87 STILL ON

STUDENTS!
We're interviewing now at
MANPOWER for GOOD-PAYING SUMMER JOBS

We've got jobs for women as stenos, typists and general office workers—factory, warehouse and outdoor work for men. You choose the days you want to work—earn good money and still find time for summer fun!

MANPOWER

An Equal Opportunity Employer

Film-makers get funds

Three Syracuse University graduate students have received grants of $250 each from Film Forum to help them with their own film-making projects, which include a documentary, a multi-media program and two films using animation.

Film Forum, sponsored by the United Campus Christian Fellowship to bring rarely-seen and classic films to the campus, last year gave its first grants to encourage student film-making.

The winners this year are: Bruce A. MacCurdy of Easthampton, Conn., who is in the School of Education's Center for Instructional Communications; Stanley P. Sztaba of Maryknoll, N.Y., who is in the television-radio department of the School of Speech and Dramatic Art; and Bruce J. Thompson of Braintree, Mass., who is in the School of Social Work.

MacCurdy will complete "Collage," a short animated film, and work on a project of animation for J.S. Bach's "Fantasia." Sztaba will produce "On the Cities," a multi-media, multi-image program about the problems and the future of cities. Thompson will make a black-and-white documentary, "The Move," about problems of relocating elderly people displaced by urban renewal.

"All rights to completed films will remain in the hands of the film-makers," the Rev. Norman O. Keim, director of Film Forum, said. "There will be no restriction in subject matter and no editorial supervision or censorship."

This year's winning projects were selected from more than a dozen scenarios submitted to a panel of three judges.

Chancellor...

(Continued from page 1)

After having served on active duty in the U.S. Naval Reserve as a lieutenant (j.g.) Corbally began his teaching career.

He joined the staff of Ohio State as an assistant professor of education and six years later was promoted to full professor. During that time he was also named director of the personnel budget.

As an educator, Corbally collaborated with other members of the OSU faculty in the publication of two major works on educational administration and is the sole author of a third.

The search for a new chancellor began last year with the formation of three committees, composed of students, faculty members and trustees. The selection process was narrowed down from over 200 candidates to five last month. At a joint meeting of the three committees early in March, Corbally received the second highest number of votes.

Another meeting was called, however, and Corbally was subsequently chosen. Three members of the Board of Trustees then went to Columbus, Ohio, to discuss the post with him. Corbally recently commented on the selection by saying: "It is always disappointing to hear you're not the first choice, but there are so many posibilities around.

"It is very difficult for people to get to know each other in an interview situation. The true test of any person is how he works out in the position," he continued.

Role of students

Members of all the committees had interviewed Corbally and he is aware of the part students played in the selection process. Subsequent to this, Corbally commented on the role of students in decision making.

"The university community needs to decide what segement(s) of the community has primary responsibility for various kinds of decisions," he said.

"As the primary group moves toward a decision, EVERY GROUP should have the right and procedures should encourage the exercise of the right to supply facts and opinions about the matter under review. The group making a decision should announce the rationale underlying the decision," Corbally continued.

He concluded his answer by stating, "The university community--including students--should have a procedure so that the results of decisions can be evaluated in terms of the rationale which led to the decision."

PHI SIGMA SIGMA

Proudly Announces Its New Officers

Archon — Melinda Hannan

Vice Archon — Mara Goldsmith

Treasurer — Andy Altman

Tribune — Rhonda Linde

Scribe — Linda Garnets

SYRACUSE REPERTORY THEATRE SEASON 3

presents

the homecoming

by Harold Pinter
directed by G. F. Reidenbaugh

A nightmarish rendering of a raffish, all-male household and their veiled violences when a new in-law drops into their midst -- a cool, sphinx-like trollop.

March 27-30, April 3-6 | Thurs. and Fri. at 8 pm, Sat. at 2:30 and 8 pm, Sunday at 7:30 pm

for tickets and parking information,

UNIVERSITY REGENT THEATRE 820 EAST GENESEE ST. SYRACUSE, N. Y. 13210

PHONE BOX OFFICE: 476-4536

Record Runner

PRICE SLASHING CONTINUES !

2.87

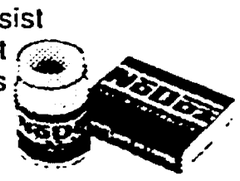
— DON'T BELIEVE IT ?

— COME ON DOWN

AND SEE !

Entire Inventory Is Not On Sale.

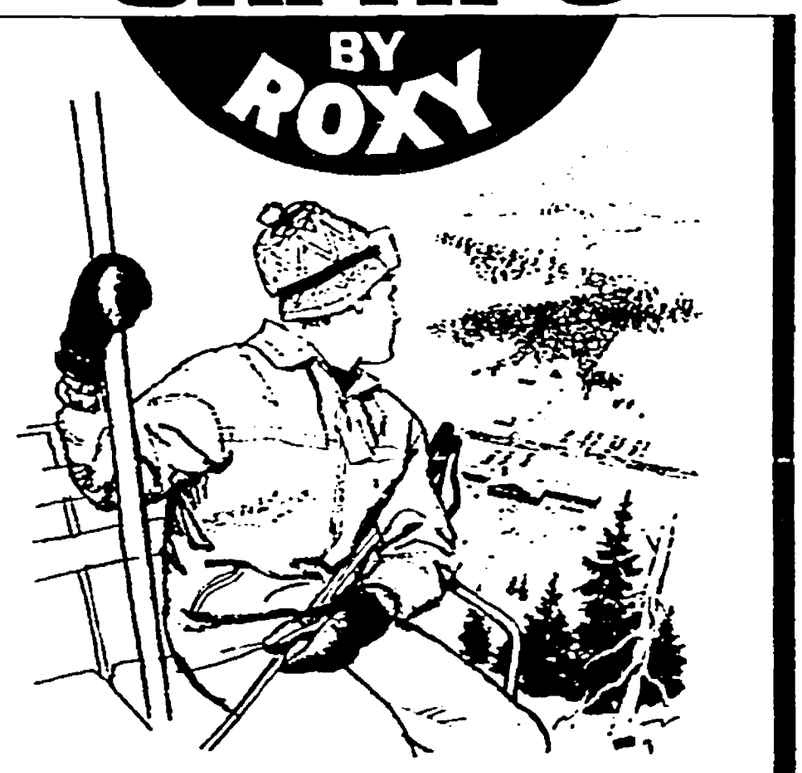
If you let nature take its course you may fail yours.



You were supposed to cram for calculus tonight, but somehow 35-24-35 looked more appealing than the derivative of x^3.

And now it's 1 a.m. And nature can play some pretty mean tricks on a guy at 1 a.m.

Relax, take a couple of NoDoz® and stop relaxing.



NoDoz has the strongest stimulant you can buy without a prescription. And it's not habit forming.

NoDoz will help you resist nature, at least until the next time a cold hard fact loses out to a soft warm one.

Schaefer SKI TIPS BY ROXY

Don't let the heights get you down.

Lots of skiers, like lots of other people, are afraid of heights. But you can minimize this natural—and healthy—fear if you'll just remember one thing: Don't scare yourself.

For instance, when you're riding the chair lift, don't frighten yourself by looking back down at the ground below. Just look uphill. And, when you reach the top of the slope, don't stop and stare at the tiny-looking buildings and people at the bottom.

Instead, just concentrate on the terrain immediately in front of you. You'll find you won't be thinking about heights any more. And you'll find skiing a lot more fun.

Schaefer CIRCLE OF SPORTS — Schaefer BEER

For the most reliable reports on ski conditions in the East, listen to "Ski Reports by Roxy" with Roxy Rothafel, the voice of skiing. On WFBL Radio 1390 in Syracuse—and on other stations throughout the Northeast.

And on your next ski trip, be sure to enjoy Schaefer—the one beer to have when you're having more than one.

Schaefer Breweries, New York and Albany, N.Y., Baltimore, Md.

Project Spearhead. . .

(Continued from Page 2)

within the University. But Dr. Piskor in particular deserves our commendation for taking a step in the right direction. That our meetings have been fruitful and have produced some immediate positive results is in no small part due to the cooperative and understanding attitude on his part. He had a touchy crisis on his hands and has managed, so far, to move toward a solution and preserve the University.

However, we are still cautiously awaiting Administrative action on two fundamental and essential parts of our program, namely the funding of the Afro-American Cultural Center and the establishment of a Department of Afro-American Studies. Inaction here would serve to re-ignite a crisis.

–Project Spearhead for United Black Students

ACC explained

Communication is its goal

By RHONDA CASS

Intellectual relationships between students and professors are possible. By working at a personal level, these members of acadaemia discover that mutual interests exist and can thrive with combined effort.

The method through which these goals are attained is the Academic Communications Corps (ACC), a system that enables students to do volunteer work for professors. The ACC was "set up to stimulate intellectual communication between faculty and students through academic pursuits," according to Arthur Brickman, student director of the program.

With the directed lecture as the basis of education at Syracuse University, few professors get to know students on an intellectual basis. Mrs. Ann Rath, executive co-ordinator of the ACC, feels that students should not stand in awe of professors; instead, they should attempt to communicate by helping professors with "intellectual work." Mrs. Rath reflects that, "ideally, professors should learn, too."

The Academic Communications Corps has no membership policies. If a student would like to work for a professor, the ACC is an available intermediary. Mrs. Rath points out that since professors' time is important, they should avail themselves of these students who want to work. However, the further reaching consequence of a human relationship is of great significance.

The Academic Communications Corps "opens the door," as Mrs. Rath says, to learning, communication and intellectual relationships. It is a foundation for the building of a community of scholars.

Journalism honorary elects, initiates

Sigma Delta Chi, men's professional journalistic honorary, has elected Promethean Editor Harvey Schwartz its president for the 1969-70 academic year.

Schwartz, who also served as Daily Orange news and feature editor, succeeds Dan Schlossberg, who is graduating in June.

Mike Greenstein was elected vice-president.

Outgoing officers include Schlossberg, Vice-President Evan Richert, Secretary Andrew Olstein, and Treasurer John Swank.

All old and new officers will be introduced at the School of Journalism banquet at the Hotel Syracuse April 11. Sigma Delta Chi and their female counterparts, Theta Sigma Phi, are co-sponsors of the banquet.

Initiated as new SDX members Tuesday night were Ira Silverman, Robert Kravitz, Larry Sampson, and Evan Regal. Alan Stamm, DO managing editor and an SDX pledge, was not present for initiation.

IMMEDIATE VENTURE CAPITAL AVAILABLE

for new businesses

We are looking for graduate students who have sound ideas for new products or services as well as the capabilities to head up as principals new organizations to see the projects culminated.

Reply only in writing, submitting detail plans. Do not include confidential information.

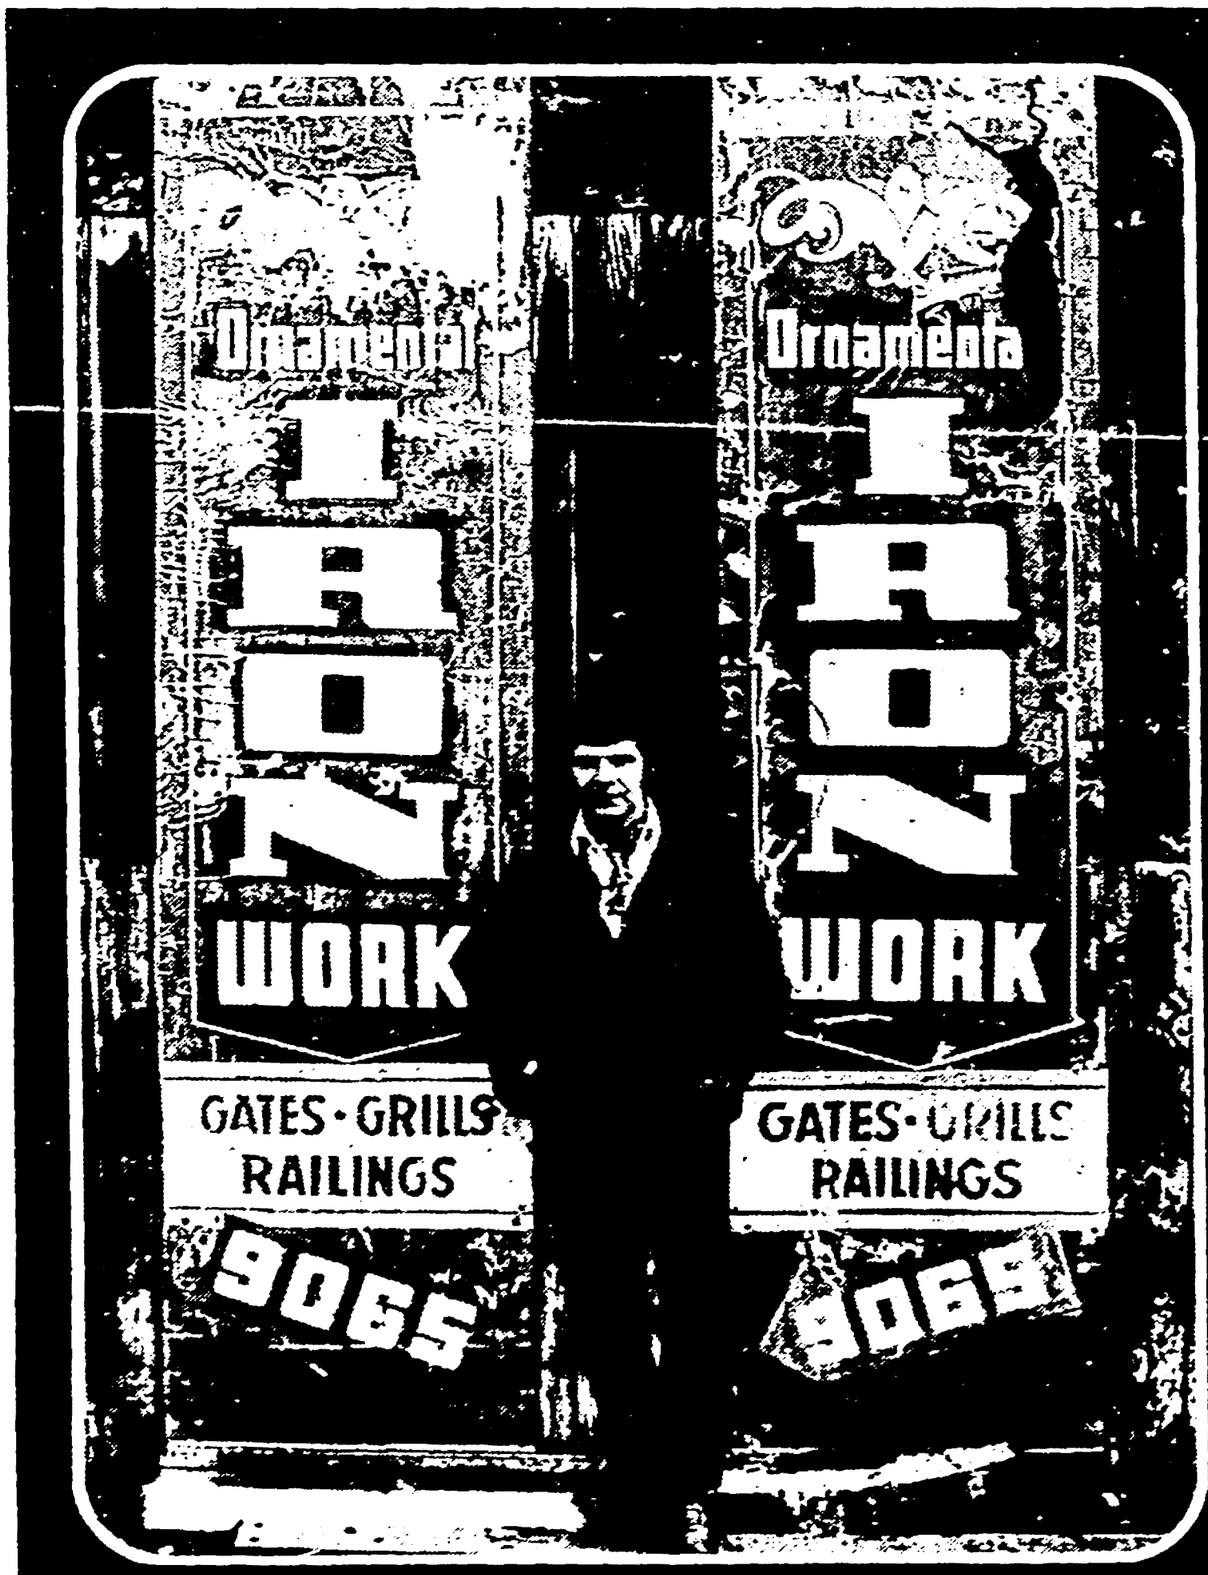
Globus, inc.

25 Broadway, New York, N.Y. 10004

UNDERWRITERS AND INVESTMENT BANKERS

CRESTS



("Sixteen Candles", Step by Step")

and

JAM FACTORY

Friday and Saturday, Campus Inn

Suburban Park Manlius

BOBBY VEE

a young man... a purpose... a dream... his revelations of then, now and tomorrow...

"GATES, GRILLS & RAILINGS" produced by Dallas Smith

LIBERTY

Liberty Records Inc

Grads win prizes in art competition

Two Syracuse University graduate students, Freida Callis and Richard Pascucci, have won prizes in the 4th Annual Central New York Art Open.

Mrs. Freida Callis of Slocum Heights, a graduate assistant in the School of Arts, won first prize of $75 in the Graphics Section for her crayon drawing titled "Judy-D-1."

Mrs. Callis teaches figure drawing and calligraphy. She has a B.S. in Art from Portland State College, and has exhibited at Munson-Williams Proctor Institute in Utica and will be represented in a show in Lowe Art Center the third week in April.

Pascucci won the second prize of $200 in the Painting Section of the Art Open for his untitled acrylic work.

A graduate of Buffalo State College, Mr. Pascucci was represented at the 24th Ceramic National at Everson Museum, a recent show at Munson-Williams-Proctor, and in the 1968 Graduate Student Show at Lowe Art Center.

BELLS BELLS

NOW

NOW is Douglas Stone Ltd. clothing

738 south crouse at marshall

BELLS

- Tom Jones Shirts
- Philadelphian Body Shirts
- Romeo & Juliet Shirts
- Multi-colored Scarfs
- Four Inch Ties

Douglas Stone Ltd.

738 south crouse at marshall

BELLS South Crouse at Marshall BELLS

STEPPENWOLF

plus

CANADIAN FAMED

MANDALA

and

JAM FACTORY

March 30th, 8 p.m.

SYRACUSE WAR MEMORIAL AUDITORIUM

Tickets Available at

War Memorial Box Office

and

Syracuse University Corner Store

Entertainment Consultants, Inc., Publishers

A KENNEDY LANDSLIDE

That's what we need in 1972.

By then Senator Kennedy will have served ten years in the United States Senate. His growth has been phenomenal — growth in knowledge, in stature, in his search for excellence as his brothers searched before him.

He would bring to the Presidency youth, vitality, a forward look, and the important ability to attract unusually capable men to his administration.

Richard Nixon began his campaign immediately after Johnson was elected. We have no desire to undermine the new Administration, but like President Nixon, we believe in the principle of loyal opposition.

We hope Ted will become a candidate. We believe that there is no finer leadership in the country. If you agree and want your opinion heard, help to win a great mandate for Ted.

Start now by displaying an unusual 1¾" x 2¾" oblong KENNEDY-IN-'72 button or an attractive KENNEDY-IN-72 bumper sticker (great for taping on walls, doors, windows). Send $1 for any 2 items of your choice to:

LEADERSHIP 1972, BOX 421, BROOKLINE VILLAGE, MASS. 02147. State which college you attend. (Also, if you want to work early toward his possible candidacy, please indicate this).

Molly's Blooming Iris

"I love leather all kinds of it that buttery soft suede that he wears that I never could resist touching and how it kept me so warm that night when he had the top down and wed driven and driven and I saw the sky so fantastic through my Revlon lashes the slivers of clouds kept trying to tie together to hide the moon shine I didn't even care the way my hair was blowing crazy I just slumped lower into the wrinkled leather seat and watched how he controlled the car everything was so good and beautiful I wished I could keep it all like this inside me so I told him how I felt I just turned to him and smiled and looked up raising my Revlon lashes slowly he dug it he likes my eyes more now I know even though my real lashes weren't bad but now I've been wearing these un-phoney Revlon eyelashes that anyone even me could put on because they're ready to wear you don't have to do anything just remember to take them off because they feel so natural I guess Revlon really knows about eyes because if he knows I'm wearing them he never says anything about it and can he ever go on about something when he wants to like tonight when he came by and was ranting about how apathetic this campus is and I laughed at his seriousness and he didn't like it much but then he laughed and I told him about how I had gotten locked out of the apartment with just my slip on and how it must have looked to those old maids across the way when I crawled in through the window and then we both really laughed and then I asked him with my Revlon lashes stop he asked me stop now and I said stop here and I moved next to him and put my arm around his shoulders so that I would be close enough to put my head on his shoulder stop and I moved closer and I said stop here and he stopped and I ordered the cheeseburgers to go."

Better stop in at

Syracuse University Bookstore

and get Revlon Eyelashes quick!

The SCENE

It is not for the timid.

Cili Drive and Towpath Rd. off Erie Blvd. in DeWitt.

Tonight:
Drink and Drown.
All the beer you can drink.
Guys—$2.50 / Gals—$1.50
Mixed drinks-1/2 price.

Jazz synthesis: Lewis, Beatles

By KIRBY A. WOLF

Even the most occasional listener to present-day music must be aware that this is an "Age of Synthesis." Folk singers are doing rock, rock groups are drifting into jazz, and many jazzmen, whose traditional forms of music are rapidly disappearing, have commercialized in an attempt to keep alive a few years longer.

Unfortunately, it is often the weaker jazz musicians who try to gain a following from amongst the patrons of the more popular musical forms; the truly talented jazzmen, it seems, would rather die out than "sell out."

Perhaps the most popular rock-jazzman is Ramsey Lewis, whose latest album, "Mother Nature's Son," consists of ten Lennon-McCartney songs from the Beatles' new double album. But, despite his popularity, Ramsey Lewis is only a mediocre musician. His success lies, not in his improvisations, which are trite, stale, and do little more than take up time, but in his choice of popular songs and in the fact that his listeners are not generally experienced jazz listeners.

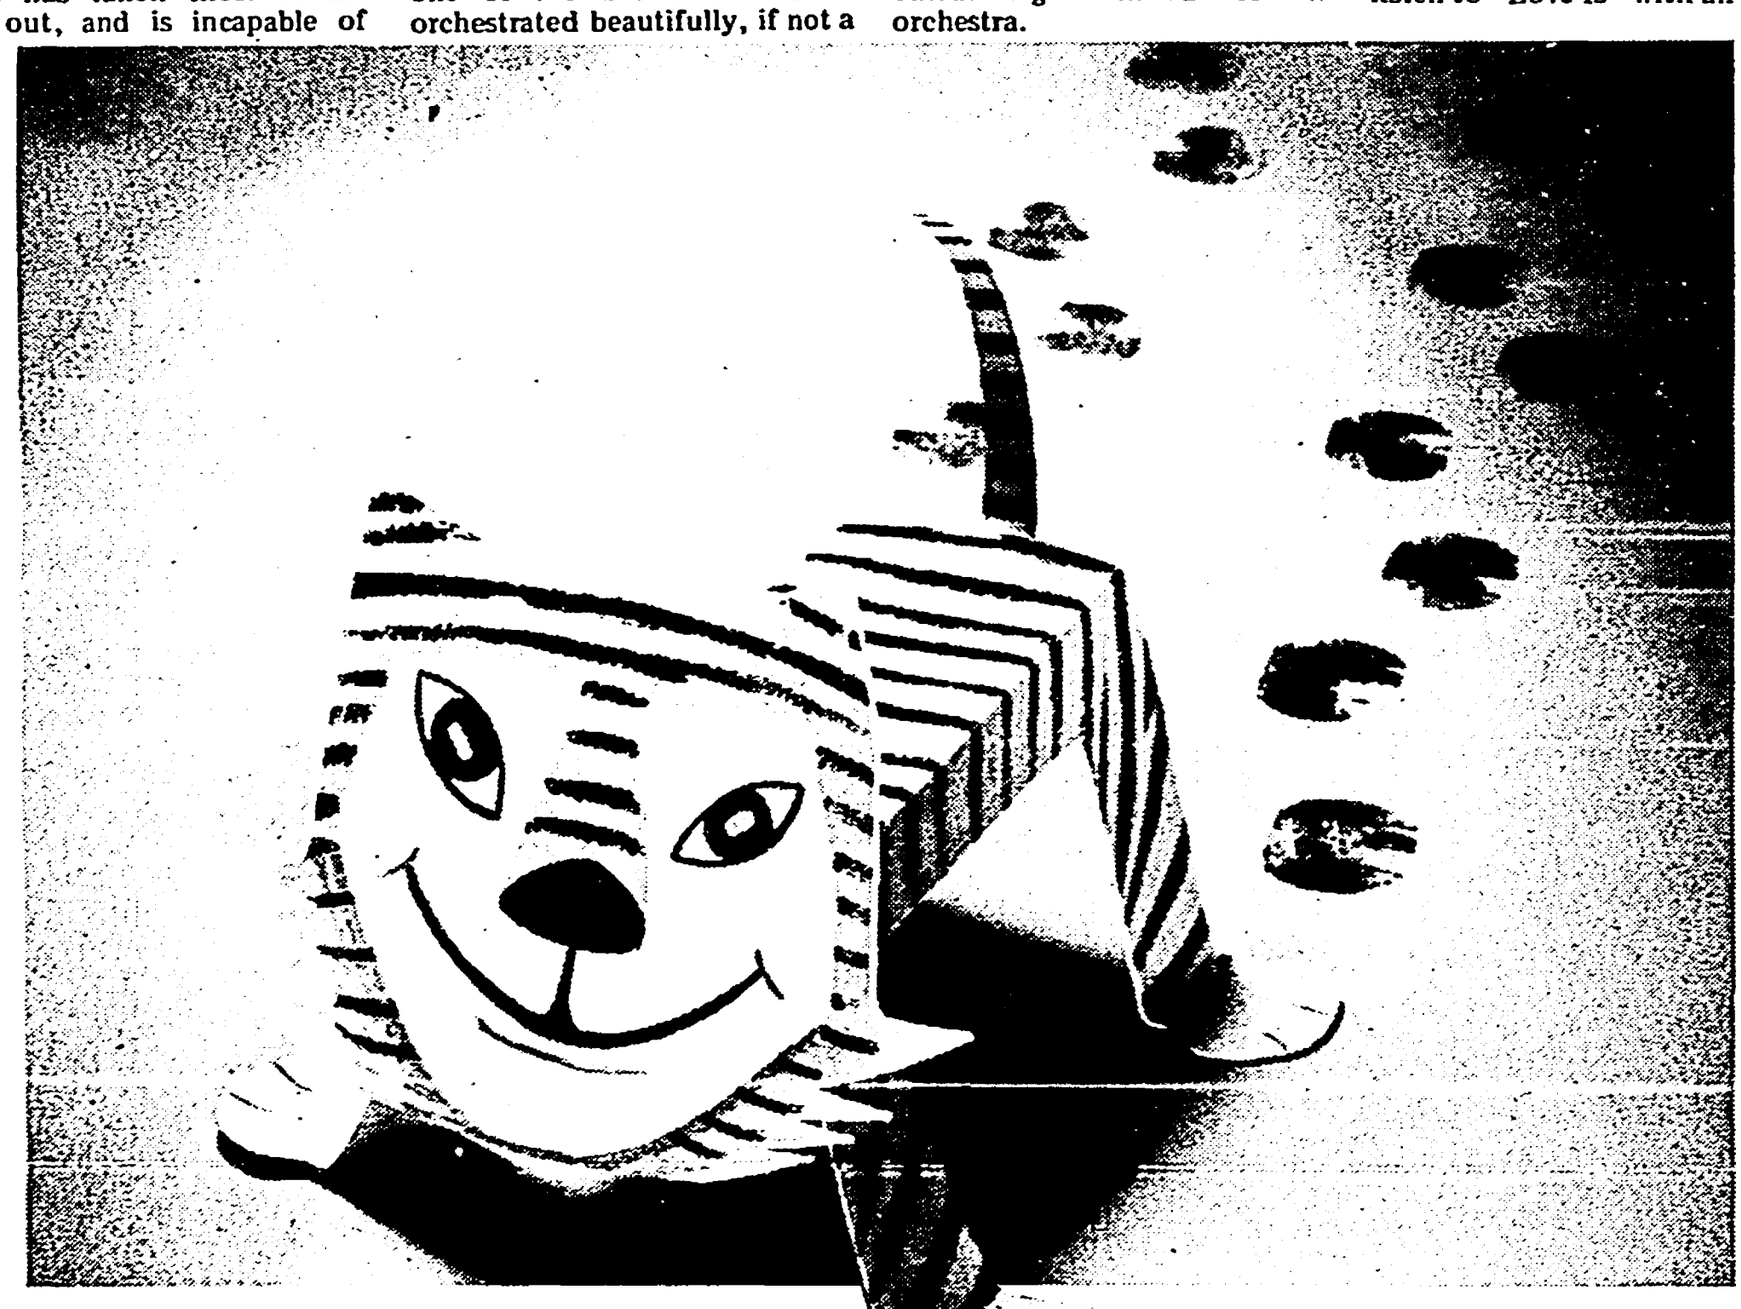
Typically, "Mother Nature's Son" is a very mediocre album. Lewis has taken most of the rock out, and is incapable of putting much jazz in. However, the tunes are orchestrated very nicely by Charles Stepney, and the soft string sections offer, ironically, the most pleasing moments in the recording.

There are two songs in particular that were doomed from the start. The virtue of "Rocky Raccoon" is its humorous tale, not its elementary and repetitious melody. "Back in the U.S.S.R.," is a Beatle-goof on Beach Boy-surf music. Obviously, neither of these songs lends itself to a jazz instrumental. "Cry Baby Cry," on the other hand, is one of the better cuts. It is orchestrated beautifully, if not a little over-dramatically, and has an intriguingly eerie introduction. Lewis, himself, sticks mainly to the melody, which is a good idea. "Good Night" is another spoof, this time on melodramatic Hollywood romanticism. However, Lewis does it as serious romantic Hollywood music, and surprisingly, it comes off nicely. Although it is strictly background music, it is at least pretty background music, which is far more desirable than weak jazz or rock. "Julia" is treated similarly, but Lewis's piano doesn't seem to fit the candle-light mood of the orchestra.

Record reviews

'Unique' sounds: Burdon's new bag

By DAVID A. ROSS
Executive Editor



The latest album by the new Eric Burdon and the Animals is one of this year's heaviest sleepers. Entitled "Love Is" this double album puts forth a really phenomenal sound: sóme are original (those written by Burdon), but they're all unique.

It seems that a really great thing has happened to hard rock. Due largely to the jazz influence it has broken out of the three minute "American Bandstand" bag. Fortunately Burdon was strong enough to give up his old style and experiment.

In "River Deep Mountain High," a soul standard, Burdon puts a fantastic break into a standard arrangement with unusual results. The melody dissolves into a single name: Tina Turner. Then the word Tina is divorced from reality. Through electronic repetition at varying rythms, Burdon explores the sound of Tina until the mundane word is merely the repetition of two sounds--"tee" and "nah." To compare the treatment of this song to its original treatment is pointless, for Burdon has turned a good song into an experience.

On side two, Burdon injects his style into Traffic's "Colored Rain." Although the guitarist (Andy Summers) doesn't quite have the control of Steve Winwood (formerly of Traffic), the added length of the song allows for a more complete development of the original theme.

The album concludes with an 18-minute suite called "Gemini-Madman," an original composition written and arranged by The Animals. It sums up their entire new sound, and a superb album. Forget your past impressions of Eric Burdon and the Animals and listen to "Love Is" with an open mind--it's really beautiful.

Wolf's howl is enhanced electrically

By NED LEE RIFKIN

". . .The thing going on today is not the blues, it's just a good beat people just carry; but now when you come down to the blues, I'm gonna' show ya' how to play the blues. Now you just sit here and watch me."

And you listen, and you know you are listening to the blues. In a voice range somewhere between Louis Armstrong and Muddy Waters, Howlin' Wolf, a veteran of the blues, puts out what seems to be a plea for a return to the old blues which evolved from Negro spirituals and then folk. These old blues are in competition with the contemporary movement vanguarded by John Mayall, Canned Heat, and a few other relatively new names.

The new addition of the electric guitar to blues is picking up momentum. Muddy Waters, also on the Cadet label, has recently released an album with a heavy electric guitar sound, "Electric Mud." Even the Motown sound has tried its hand at electronics, with experiments by The Temptations, the Supremes and David Ruffin.

One of the best parts of the Howlin' Wolf attempt is his drummer, Morris Jennings. His driving rhythms are a perfect balance for the Wolf's earthy voice. Together, they produce the blues. Add electric guitar, and it is possible to get a fine sound. In some cuts, notably "Spoonful," "Backdoor Man," and "Moaning at Midnight," they make it. However, the electric guitar is overdone in "Smokestack Lightning," "Red Rooster" and "Evil".

The album cover is indicative of the music contained within. It says that blues is a simple music, one of feeling and a touch of soul. Even though it is difficult to assess the artist's intention, whether as a satire or as a serious trend in blues, the music must be appraised at face value. It appears to be a step in the right direction, as it were. Perhaps a compromise in the kinds of music would have a wider appeal.

PAPER TIGERS NEED NOT APPLY.

Thanks, but they're just not our type. Young engineers who join us are expected to move in on some rather formidable programs . . . with alacrity and lots of gusto. And a willingness to assume early responsibilities on demanding assignments is an attribute which we welcome warmly. It's the kind of engineering aggressiveness that has brought Sikorsky Aircraft to dominant stature in a new world of advanced VTOL aircraft systems.

If our criteria parallel your outlook, you'll find an excellent career environment with us. You would enjoy working (with a select group) on exciting, full-spectrum systems development. And you can watch your talent and imagination assume reality in such diverse forms as Heavy-Lift Skycranes—Tilt Rotor Transports—High-Speed VTOL Commercial Transports—and much more for tomorrow.

Does this responsibility stir your imagination? Then you probably should be with us. There's ample opportunity for innovation in: aerodynamics • human factors engineering • automatic controls • structures engineering • weight prediction • systems analysis • operations research • reliability/maintainability engineering • autonavigation systems • computer technology • manufacturing engineering • information systems • marketing . . . and more.

And your career advancement can be materially assisted through our corporation-financed Graduate Study Program—available at many outstanding schools within our area.

Consult your College Placement Office for campus interview dates—or—for further information, write to Mr. Leo J. Shalvoy, Professional and Technical Employment.

Qualified?

Honor students sought

Interested and capable freshmen and sophomores are invited to apply for membership in the Liberal Arts-Business Honors Program. At present there are 158 freshmen and 70 sophomores who have been selected as members of the Honors Program. After the first semester of the freshman year acceptance as an Honors Candidate may be granted at the end of each semester, up to the beginning of the junior year, on the basis of college performance, faculty recommendations, and the student's application. Freshmen and sophomores not yet in the Honors Program now have the opportunity to apply.

A "B" cumulative average is minimum requirement, but faculty recommendations, the nature of the courses taken, and the student's personal statement also weigh heavily.

All students who are interested may pick up the application blanks in 108 Hall of Languages. All applications must be completed by April 10, 1969.

Happenings

Campus Notices must be brought to the DO Office (1101 E. Adams St., second floor, first desk on the left) by 3 p.m. on the day before they are to be published. We regret that due to the many requests each notice must be limited to 25 words and may not be run more than two days in a row. Notices will not be taken over the phone.

THURSDAY

COMMUTERS — All invited to a commuting students Assn. meeting

PHYSICS COLLOQUIM - Dr. Kem Seth, of Northwestern U. on "Magic Nuclei - Fact or Fiction" - 4 p.m. in 202 Physics Building.

U.B.A. - chapter meeting tonight on Booth 3 lounge.

DRAFT COUNSELING - The Law Students Civil Rights Research Council and the Syracuse Draft Counselling Service will hold draft counseling in Room 101 White Hall from 7-9 p.m.

GENERAL

IFC ELECTIONS are coming up. All those wishing to run for an office should contact Bob Kelly X3361.

DEADLINE for Campus Chest Applications has been extended to March 26, Wednesday at 5 p.m. Include name, ideas and experience. Turn in to Gamma Phi Beta. ?'s call Trudy - 478-5285, or X2637.

ANYONE interested in forming a late night club? Call Neal or Joel X2038.

JURISPRUDENCE P.S. 341 Lawrenson Penthouse.

RIDE OR RIDERS Wanted for Spring Vacation? Check the Alpha Phi Omega Ride Board in the basement of HL. Also call the APhiO office at X3433.

TAU DELT will not be selling final exams this semester.

NEW – Party Of Thought (POT) will "hash" things out tonight on Marshall Street. It is a real "grass-roots" movement.

PHI SIG Beer Blast at ZBT tonight.

"SPEAK SOFTLY and carry a big brush" – DO sports staff.

PEP MEETING at Onondaga County Penitentiary tonight.

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

J	A	M			A	M	I	S	S			T	W	I
O	L	A	V		H	O	N	E	T		T	W	I	N
G	I	G	I		H	A	T	T	E	R	H	O	R	N
	M	I	C	R	O	B	E		P	O	I	S	E
		C	A	E	N		R	I	O	T	S
R	E	F	R	A	I	N		D	U	S	T	P	A	N
E	N	L		D	A	U	D	E	T		L	A	C	E
S	O	U	P	S		B	E	A		C	E	N	T	S
A	C	T	A		R	I	A	L	T	O		J	O	T
T	H	E	R	M	A	L		S	A	M	B	A	R	S
			E	I	D	E	R		L	E	A	N
	H	I	N	D	I		I	S	L	A	N	D	S
H	O	N	T	I	C	E	L	L	O		D	R	U	M
O	A	K	S		A	L	L	O	W		Y	U	L	E
W	R	Y			L	U	S	T	Y			H	U	G

STUDY IN CUERNAVACA

Learn to speak SPANISH
- Intensive courses, with drills, supervised labs, and theory taught by experienced Mexican teachers.
- $135 per month.

Study in the INSTITUTE FOR CONTEMPORARY LATIN AMERICAN STUDIES.
- Examine themes such as "Protest and its Creative Expression in Latin America" and "The Role of Education in Social Change" in 10 to 30 new courses each month.
- Access to excellent library.
- $30 per credit.

Live in CUERNAVACA
- Near Mexico City, at 4,500 feet elevation, with Mexican families or in dorms or bungalows.
- Approx. $80 per month.

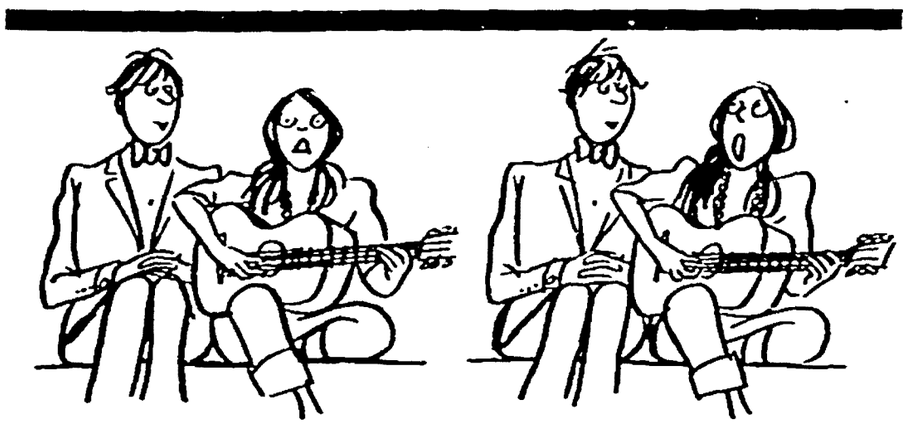
Request catalog from Registrar — Cidoc W. Godot, Apdo, 479, Cuernavaca, Mexico

"Love Affair, or the Tragedy of a Switchboard Operator"

(Yugoslav)

Directed by

Dusan Makcavejev



Mr. Makavjeu will be on campus April 8 and will appear at that morning's performance.

film forum

gifford auditorium
syracuse university

April 8 - 10
7 & 9 p.m.

$1.00

1. You sure are my kind of folksinger, Fran.

"Oh, a lonely minstrel I'm meant to be..."

2. Y'think maybe you and me could, uh, possibly...

"A-singin' my song to humanity..."

3. I've always admired you.

"Forever to roam is my destiny..."

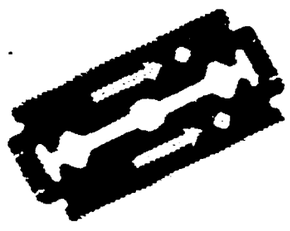
4. And I was hoping that perhaps, somehow, the feeling might be mutual.

"Without any need for company..."

5. But I guess you're just too wrapped up with your music.

"Alone, yes, alone constantly..."

6. It could have been beautiful, because I just got one of the great jobs Equitable is offering college people these days. Real good pay, challenging work, and promotions that come as fast as I can earn them.



Like to hear my version of "Lead Me Down the Aisle, Lyle"?

For details about careers at Equitable, see your Placement Officer, or write: Lionel M. Stevens, Manager, College Employment.

THE EQUITABLE

The Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States
1285 Avenue of the Americas, New York, New York 10019
An Equal Opportunity Employer, M/F © Equitable 1968

It's been single-edged, double-edged, banded, injectored, plastic-coated, and now electro-coated.

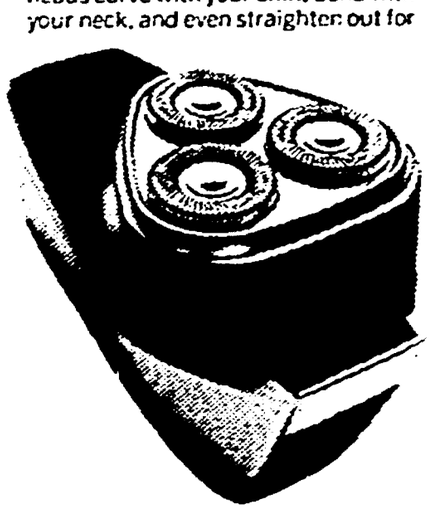
But it's still straight.

The blade.

Whatever else they've done to it, one thing hasn't changed.

It's still straight.

And your face still isn't.



It's round.

The new Norelco Tripleheader gets around this problem.

We put our unique rotary blades into three floating heads that follow your face by going in where your face goes in. And out where your face goes out.

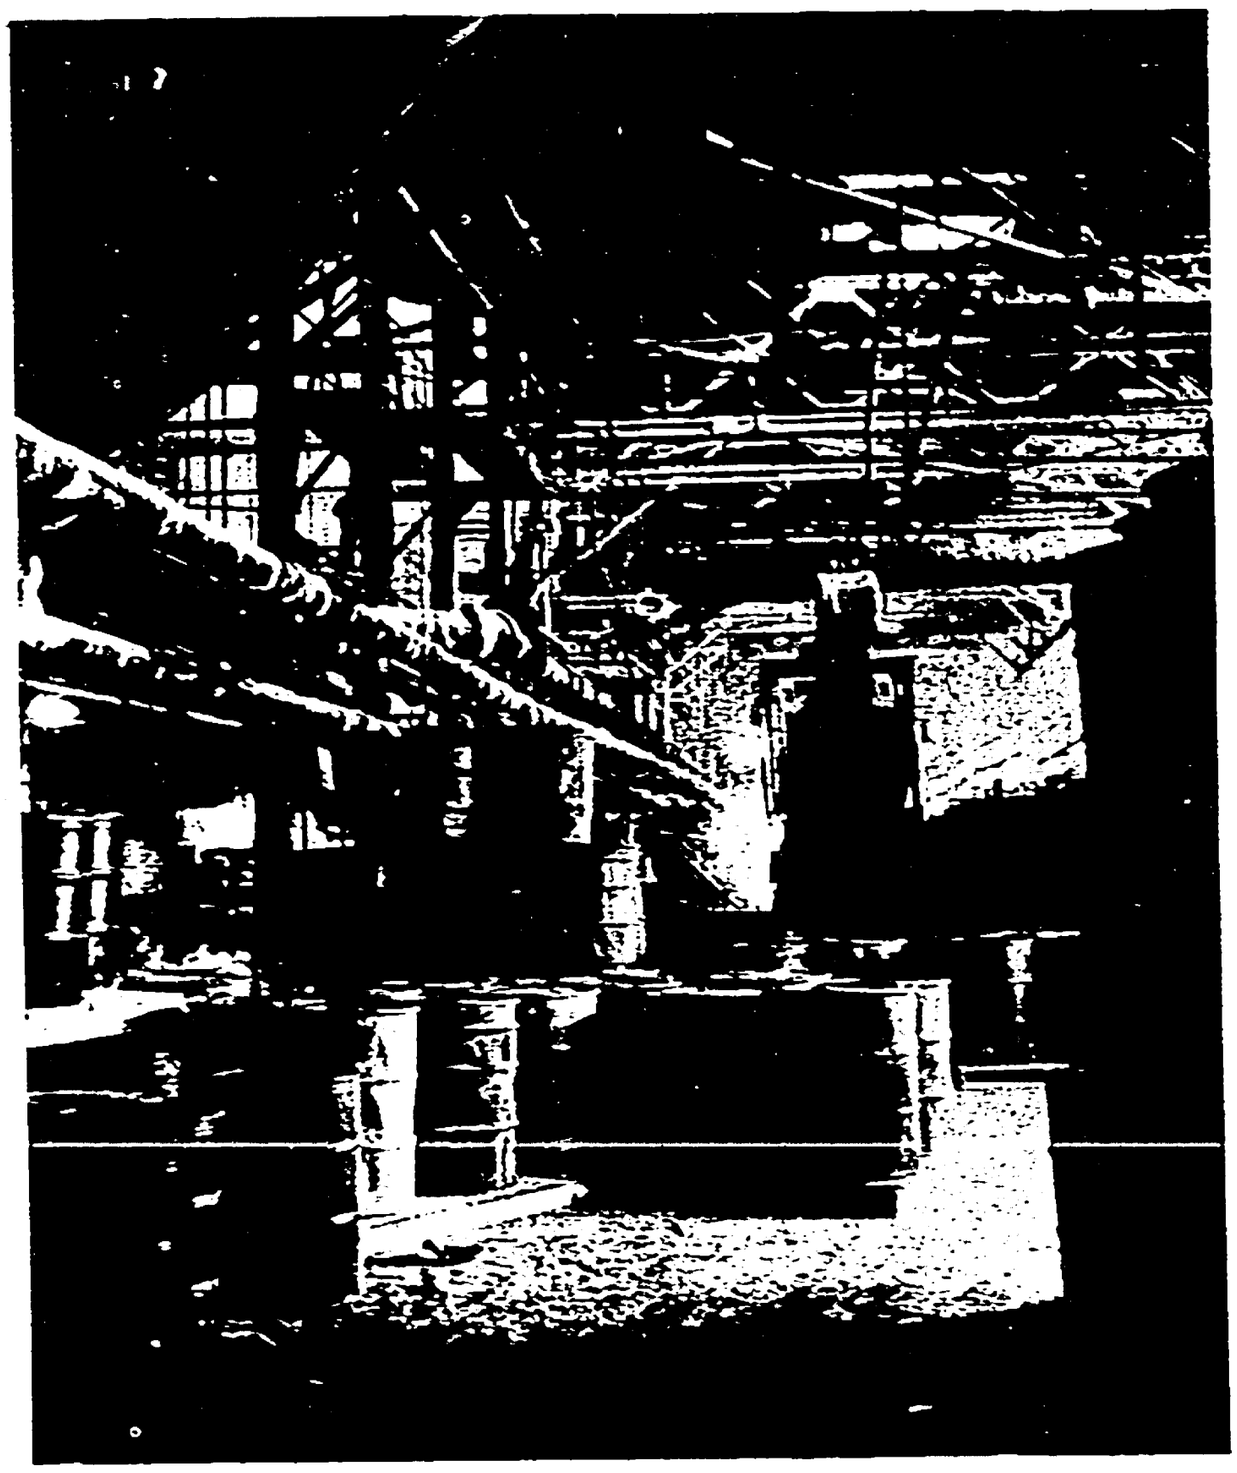
This way the new Norelco gets close enough to shave you as close or closer than a blade. As found in two out of three shaves in an independent lab test.

And you get a comfortable shave because the Norelco floating heads curve with your chin, bend with your neck, and even straighten out for your cheeks. Automatically. And without a nick, pull or scrape.

The new Norelco has a hidden trimmer that pops out for sideburns, and a push button for easy flip-top cleaning. It also comes in a rechargeable model that gives almost twice as many shaves per charge as any other rechargeable.

We can't see you changing the shape of your face.

But we can see you changing to Norelco.



Norelco
you can't get any closer

©1969 North American Philips Corporation, 100 East 42nd Street, New York, N.Y. 10017

Professor Andre Utrouwski, demonstrating vertical lift.

S.U.: A Factory?

Food service receiving dock.

The steps to the Mount.

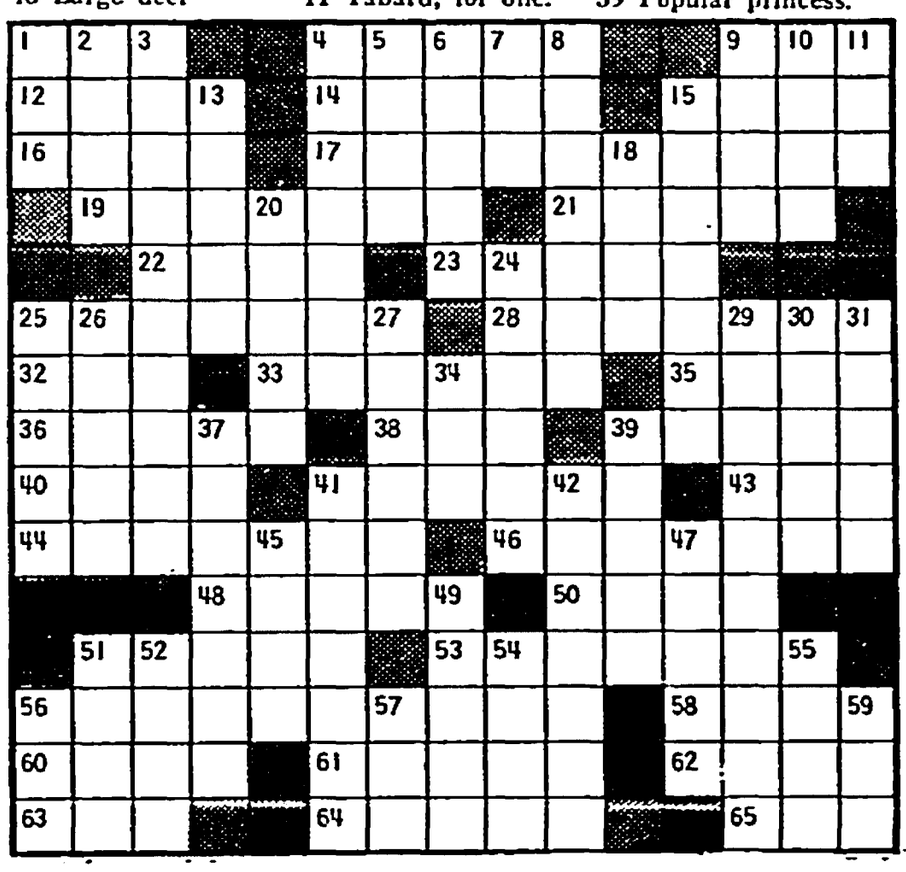
Photographs by Clint Clemens

So long, farewell!

It is with utmost sorrow that the Daily Orange staff covers its typewriters, locks up its editorial blue pencils, takes off its green eyeshades, and walks slowly off into the sunset.

Today's issue will be the last lingering memory of your campus paper before vacation begins. Think of it fondly as you bask in the sunshine at your resort hotel, or home, as the case may be. The next issue will appear, healthy, sun-tanned and rested, on April 10.

Happy vacation from the staff!



DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

ACROSS

1 Bread spread.
4 Faulty.
9 Prefix with light or night.
12 Norse name.
14 French impressionist.
15 Closely resembling.
16 Colette heroine.
17 Sight from Zermatt.
19 Very minute organism.
21 Stability.
22 Capital of Calvados.
23 Raises Cain.
25 Hold back.
28 Household utensil.
32 Photographer's abbreviation.
33 French author.
35 Finery.
36 Menu category.
38 Lillie.
39 Coppers.
40 Deeds: Lat.
41 Great White Way.
43 Tittle.
44 Warm.
46 Large deer of Asia.
48 Duck.
50 Scant.
51 Indic language.
53 Staten and Catalina.
56 Historic Virginia landmark.
58 Tom-tom.
60 Trees.
61 Concede.
62 December time.
63 Grimly humorous.
64 Vigorous.
65 Face: Slang.

DOWN

1 Kind of trot.
2 Moslem religious teacher.
3 Mozart opera (with "the"): 2 words.
4 Volatile alkali.
5 Biblical land.
6 Prefix with pose or act.
7 Motionless.
8 Go on a date: Colloq.: 2 words.
9 Pairs.
10 Send a message.
11 Tabard, for one.
13 Church title.
15 Prickly plant.
18 Goes to pot.
20 Studies.
24 Standards of perfection.
25 Met again.
26 Arden.
27 Marriageable.
29 Cousin of a Pooh-Bah.
30 Trouper.
31 Snuggeries.
34 Goddess: Lat.
37 Members of the household.
39 ___ cropper: 2 words.
41 Extreme.
42 Like suet.
45 Part of France.
47 Exchange, as words.
49 Brooklets.
51 Ancient.
52 Black.
54 Part of a juke box.
55 Sea of the Philippines.
56 Stack of straw.
57 Elected: Fr.
59 Popular princess.

D. O. experts pick the pennant winners

Ed Agranowitz	Dan Schlossberg	Mike Weber	Joe Laguardia	Jeff Posner	Consensus
National League
Eastern Division
Cubs	Cards	Cards	Cubs	Cards	Cards
Cards	Cubs	Cubs	Cards	Cubs	Cubs
Pirates	Mets	Mets	Pirates	Pirates	Pirates
Mets	Pirates	Pirates	Mets	Phils	Mets
Phils	Phils	Expos	Phils	Mets	Phils
Expos	Expos	Phils	Expos	Expos	Expos
Western Division
Reds	Braves	Giants	Reds	Reds	Reds
Giants	Reds	Reds	Giants	Giants	Giants
Braves	Giants	Braves	Braves	Braves	Braves
Dodgers	Dodgers	Dodgers	Dodgers	Dodgers	Dodgers
Astros	Astros	Astros	Astros	Astros	Astros
Padres	Padres	Padres	Padres	Padres	Padres
American League
Eastern Division
Tigers	Orioles	Tigers	Orioles	Orioles	Tigers
Red Sox	Tigers	Red Sox	Tigers	Tigers	Orioles
Orioles	Red Sox	Orioles	Red Sox	Indians	Red Sox
Yankees	Indians	Yankees	Yankees	Red Sox	Indians
Indians	Yankees	Indians	Indians	Yankees	Yankees
Senators	Senators	Senators	Senators	Senators	Senators
Western Division
Athletics	Twins	Twins	Athletics	Twins	Twins
Twins	Athletics	Athletics	Twins	Athletics	Athletics
Angels	White Sox	Angels	Angels	Angels	Angels
White Sox	Angels	White Sox	White Sox	White Sox	White Sox
Royals	Pilots	Pilots	Pilots	Pilots	Pilots
Pilots	Royals	Royals	Royals	Royals	Royals

German visitor

Dr. Reinhard Baumgart, a literary columnist for Der Spiegel, will speak today at 4 p.m. in Maxwell Auditorium. His lecture, "Aspects of Political Drama: Brecht, Walser and Weiss," is sponsored by the Humanities Lecture Series and the German department.

Baumgart, formerly a lecturer at the University of Manchester, Munich and Frankfurt and at the Technical University in Berlin, has served as editor of the Piper Press in Munich. He is the author of six books, including "Aussichten der Romans oder Hat Literatur Zukunft?," published in 1968.

His lecture is open to the public without charge.

A/C PRODUCTION PRESENTS

The Comedy of Bill Cosby

SPECIAL GUEST
RHETTA HUGHES

SUN., APR. 13 — 8 P.M.

TICKETS: $6.50, 5.50, 4.50, 3.00

TICKETS AT BOX OFFICE

SYRACUSE WAR MEMORIAL

Campus Classified

GR 6-5571, Ext. 2314

Rates minimum of 15 words:

1 day	1.15
2 days	2.25
3 days	3.30
4 days	4.30
5 days	5.25
6 days	6:15

To place a classified ad. call GR 6-5571, ext. 2314, between 1 and 3 p.m. Ad must be placed 2 days in advance. Every word over 15 costs 5c extra per day.

ALL ADS MUST BE PREPAID.

MISCELLANEOUS

RENT if you can't buy! T.V.s, tape recorders, typewriters. By week, month or semester. Reasonable rates. S. U. BOOKSTORE, GR 6-5541, x 2426.

FRAME your works of art at unbeatable prices at S. U. BOOKSTORE. Also signs and posters. In the Art Dept., 303 University Pl.

ALTERATIONS DONE within 24 hours. Call for an appointment. Lillian Potter, 207 Comstock. 478-5847.

PRIVATE DRIVING LESSONS — automatic or standard shift. Full or refresher courses. Qualified professional instructors. Pickup service. Auto Driving Academy. GR 6-3995.

ALL UNDERGRADUATES: The United States Marine Corps offers you the opportunity to earn a commission as an Officer of Marines with starting pay as high as $8,835.84 for ground and $10,455.84 for aviation. Captain KARL J. EGE will be at the Placement Center, Thursday and Friday, March 27th and 28th to discuss these programs with all interested students. Stop by between the hours of 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. and find out how you can become a part of this highly selective and extremely rewarding program.

FLY TO EUROPE and back this summer by jet for only $215.00 round-trip. If interested contact Prof. William Courtney at Eisenhower college in Seneca Falls, N. Y. 13148) or call (315) 568-5769 evenings who will give full details and forward number of applications requested.

FOR SALE

'53 TR3, TR4 engine. Call x2791, 2792. Mike Elmer.

'67 MG MIDGET — Body OK, engine excellent. Snow tires. $1,600.00. Owner marrying. Call Linda, 469-1512.

TRIUMPH MOTORCYCLE, 650 cc.; Bonneville, 1968 model. Like new. Call Mrs. Shultes, 446-2574 or SU x 2459.

'68 PONTIAC GTO Convertible, power steering, positraction, and many extras. 11,000 miles. Must sell. 446-5242.

SALE — John F. Phelan, Est., 505 Kinsley St., Sherrill, New York. April 7, 8, 9 - 10 a.m., 1955 Packard Sedan, good condition. Furniture, furnishings, etc. Directed by Marion R. Henley.

1965 PLYMOUTH SATELLITE convertible, good condition. New engine plus more. $750. Call 475-5544 in mornings.

'66 MUSTANG, Hi performance convertible, G. T. Equipment, 4-speed Posi. Perfect for Spring. 478-4341 or 468-5536.

BOZAK B-207A speaker system with woofer and coaxially-mounted tweeter. Excellent condition. $55. 474-4005.

VOLKSWAGEN '66 white, 2-door, sunroof, excellent condition, 29,000 miles. $695. Call 468-2928.

FOR RENT

FURNISHED 3 ROOM APARTMENT. Near University. Available for immediate occupancy. Call Nancy Sellers, 478-2620.

CATAMOUNT SKI AREA: House for rent on Prospect Lake in Berkshires - cooking facilities. Sleeps eight — weekends or weekly — five minutes from Catamount — Contact Reggie. x3303 or 212-749-1430.

2 MILES WEST OF CAMPUS — 3 large rooms, furnished, air conditioned, about $120 including all utilities. Best hours 8 a.m. or 10 p.m. Mr. Vernon 475-3790.

WANTED

SUMMER JOBS: Counselors, private boys' camp; college men of above average physical fitness and judgment; tripping, canoeing, campcraft, archery, riflery, crafts driver; Love of out-of-doors and children essential. Adirondacks Swim Camp. 39 Mill Valley Road, Pittsford, N. Y. 14534.

GRADUATE WOMEN. Kitchen. 475-4373. Fri. eve 6-9. Sat. morn. 8-11. eve. 5-9. Mon. eve. 6-10.

PART OR FULL TIME positions available now — option for summer work. Top salary. Liberal Hours. Call 463-3735. 3-5 p.m. weekdays for appointment.

TYPING

THIRTY YEARS EXPERIENCE. Dissertations, term papers, proof-read. Satisfaction guaranteed. Mrs. Raymond Webb. HE 7-8259.

DIANE WALLACE. 472-2115. Theses, dissertations and term papers. IBM electric. 40c per page. 5c copy. Multilith, 45c.

TAKE YOUR MANUSCRIPT to the only professional typing and printing service serving the S. U. area. The knowledge and experience of having done over 2,000 theses and dissertations is behind every job we turn out. Stephanie's Office Service. 469-2795.

FREE TRAVEL GUIDE

FEATURING
KIBBUTZ HOLIDAYS IN ISRAEL
and Optional Archeological Dig

COLLEGIATES • CO-ED • 17-25

- 51 Days Israel, Italy, Switzerland, France — $ 995
- 52 Days Israel, Greece, Greek Isle Cruise, Italy — 1195
- 54 Days Israel, Italy, Switzerland, France, England — 1095
- 34 Days Israel and England — 795
- 22 Days Israel Holiday — 699
- 22 Days Israel, Italy, England — 749
- 45 Days Grand European Orbit (12 Countries) — 1250
- 22 Days Romantic European Swing (5 Countries) — 599
- 22 Days Classical Quest Italy and Greece — 639

RATES INCLUDE
ALL TRANSPORTATION
MEALS
ACCOMMODATIONS
SIGHTSEEING
TRANSFERS & MORE

Mail this coupon today:

OR SEE YOUR FAVORITE TRAVEL AGENT

EASTOURS, Inc.
11 West 42nd St.,
New York, N.Y. 10036

Without cost or obligation, please rush free Collegiate Travel Guide to:

Name _____

Address _____

City, State, Zip _____ 64A

Orange open Tuesday

Diamond fortunes rest on hurlers

By DAN SCHLOSSBERG
Associate Editor

Syracuse University baseball, which figures to be the winningest sport on campus this year, kicks off a 23-game schedule at Georgetown Tuesday with either John Martell or Greg Lowe scheduled to be the starting pitcher.

Coach Andy Mogish, who says he plays his game on a day-to-day basis, confirmed the other day Martell, his big winner of 1968, or Lowe, his earned run average leader, would pitch. However, he said he'd wait until the day of the game to see who was in better physical condition.

Mogish also said, to nobody's surprise, that pitching is the team's strong point and rattled off the names of Martell, Lowe, Mike Barlow, and sophomore Dave Stone as his top four starters. Another soph, Dave DeLuca, and Carl Novak, Bob Rinefierd, and Bob Clary figure to round out the hill staff.

Catching should also be in good hands with the arrival of strapping sophomore John Unger, who swatted a sizzling .444 for the frosh a year ago and made half of his 12 hits go for extra bases. Unger is rated a top defensive receiver as well and has a strong arm. Versatile Jay Halpern and holdovers Joe St. Mary and Jim Gordon could catch in a pinch, although Mogish considers the latter two as infield candidates.

St. Mary is regarded as the shortstop although he played both second and third base and did considerable catching a year ago. He batted a respectable .278 in 79 trips to the plate.

Gordon, who has looked good defensively around first base, is now trying to master third base due to the ineligibility of John Hahn. Consequently, Junior John Massis wins the first base job by default. Massis, however, can also play the outfield and may battle soph Tony Montiflio for the lone open outfield berth.

Second base remains wide open with Chris Albergo, Halpern, Jeff Bragman, and Art Tyson all in the running. St. Mary could also wind up there, but then Mogish would have to come up with a shortstop. It may be tough for the coach to replace team captain John DeFrancisco, last season's stop-gap at second.

Veteran outfielders Steve Naum in left and Brian Mihalik in center are set but right is up for grabs among Bob Kelton and Rich Vaccaro, both sophomores; junior Jim Medcraf, Massis and Montiflio. Naum hit .300 last year and had 9 RBI in only 30 bats.

In a nutshell, the pitching is deeper with the addition of lefthander Stone (4-2 with the frosh) and with the added year of experience for Martell (7-2, 3.52 earned run average), Lowe (2-4, 2.49), and Barlow (2-1, 4.28). The catching, manned primarily by St. Mary a year ago, should be stronger due to Unger's big bat. The infield, built around St. Mary and possibly Gordon, will have to develop, and the outfield must come up with another starter to play alongside Naum and Mihalik.

Pitching, says Paul Richards, is 90 per cent of the game, so SU should top last year's excellent 15-7 mark and make it to the NCAA this time around. Or so Mogish and his players would like to think.

DAN'S DATE: Visits to American, Navy, George Washington, and Maryland follow Tuesday's Georgetown game before Syracuse returns to the north country for an April 16 contest at Buffalo. The first home game is against Lafayette April 18. . .There are nine games on the home slate. . .This is Andy Mogish's third year as head coach. . .Waer will again present "Orange Baseball Warm-Up" 10 minutes prior to the start of each game. Game time is generally 3 p.m.

BEHIND THE PLATE for the Syracuse nine this season will be heavy hitting slugger John Unger. Unger, in his freshman campaign, last season, hit for a lofty .444 average.

BASEBALL COACH ANDY MOGISH enters the current season with a fine pitching staff, but many question marks in the field. If Mogish can plug up the holes the Orangemen may find themselves in an NCAA playoff berth.

SU athletics bolstered by Canadian imports

By PAT THOMPSON

In athletics, the Canadians just stick to hockey, right? Wrong. If you pull out your tattered football programs from last fall, two Canadians are listed on the roster, sophomores Tony Gabriel and Ed Phillips. In addition, the freshman track team boasts another north-of-the-border resident in Tom Stoyan.

Gabriel, who played split end for the Orangemen this past fall, and Phillips, a halfback who sat out the season with a broken leg, are from Burlington, Ontario.

Gabriel explained that he came to SU mainly because no scholarships for four years are offered in Canada. Phillips added that he came for basically the same reason.

He said, "In Canada, all you can get is financial aid from the government in the form of a loan."

There are other differences between Canadian and American football that Gabriel and Phillips pointed out. Gabriel said, "Competition-wise, it's a lot better down in the states because of the coaching staffs and the money that's put into getting the best recruits."

In the Canadian brand of football, 12 men are employed on each team and the field is both wider and longer. Gabriel said, "You have more room to maneuver yourself with the wider field. And with the three down set-up, it lends itself more to a passing game."

Phillips admitted he prefers Canadian ball because "there's more emphasis on speed and agility rather than brute force."

Although Gabriel spent some time on the bench last season, he said he never thinks about being a starter in Canada, had he stayed. "I think that as long as there's somebody on the field that's better than you, you have no reason to complain."

Phillips, however, feels that he would be a starter if he was playing college football in Canada.

With regard to possible futures in pro football, both agreed that everything depended on their next two years of varsity play. Phillips said, "Every athlete's ambition is at one time or another, to become a pro. It's my ambition also."

When asked where he would prefer to play pro ball if the opportunity ever presented itself, Gabriel replied, "I'd like to go back to Canada because it is home. Right now I don't think I'm good enough to play in the United States." Both athletes agreed, however, that the prestige and higher salaries of U.S. football is a great persuading factor to stay and play here if possible.

Neither of the players felt strange or uneasy when they came here. Gabriel commented that "once you're in the game, it's all the same. Besides, I wanted to get away from home and meet people here at Syracuse."

The track team's Canadian import, Tom Stoyan, is from Toronto, Ontario. He came to SU also because of the financial aid offered. I received a track scholarship here because I really couldn't afford to come if I didn't.

Stoyan, who competed in the 600, 1000 and mile events during the season, said he can't exactly explain why he took up track. "As long as I can remember," he said, I have been running. There are times when you want to quit, like my freshman year in high school. But I didn't and it's always been like that."

Stoyan said the biggest difference between track in Canada and here in the U.S. is financial. He said, "The states have all the good athletes because of the scholarships available. Competition-wise, though, the league we're in right now doesn't have very much. But, when you get hit with all the good competition, you're not used to it."

Stoyan agreed with Gabriel and Phillips in saying that there were few adjustments to be made in coming here. "First," he commented, "I'm making a change from high school to a university. That's a big change in itself. If something comes up that I don't understand, I'll remember I'm in America. Generally, though, you don't notice any difference."

Stoyan also has some goals in sight, the most ambitious being to compete in the Olympics. Another achievement which Stoyan is striving for, is the Canadian junior half-mile record, which is 1:51.5. He has run 1:53.5 already, so that mark appears in sight.

If Stoyan does make the Olympic team, representing Canada, he would prefer running the 800 meters (half mile). However, he added, "My coaches tell me I'm going to be a good miler, maybe good enough to run a sub four-minute mile."

There may be differences between countries, but athletes are the same everywhere. They all have their aspirations--Tony Gabriel, Ed Phillips and Tom Stoyan are no exceptions.

Injured hand sidelines Verne Doctor for month

Verne Doctor, SU's top scoring Lacrosse player and third-team All-American, will be sidelined for about a month following a freak accident to a finger on his right hand on Sunday.

"Verne was saddling a horse," explained coach Roy Simmons, "and somehow had the flesh torn off the end of one finger. All that was left was the stub of one bone."

Rather than amputate most of the finger, the attending physician decided to graft some fatty tissue from the other fingers onto the injured one.

"It's a tough blow to the team," Simmons added. "He was high scorer and the boys on the team had a great deal of confidence in him. I think that each kid will now go out and try to get a goal for Verne."

The injury to Doctor has brought about a shakeup in the starting attack and midfield positions. Dick George will move from midfield to attack while Verne's sophomore brother, Ron, will move into the starting midfield slot.

The team will leave Sunday for their midwest trip, playing four games in five days. The trip might seem a bit longer with the big man in the attack sidelined.

D. O. pennant picks on page 11

APR

DAILY ORANGE

Vol. 67, No. 85 | Syracuse, New York, Thursday, April 10, 1969 | 10 Cents

Turner lectures on racism in U.S., cites no change

By RONI ZLOKOWER
Associate Editor

"The problem of racism in our country today will continue to polarize itself unless there is an actual transferral of power between blacks and whites," said James Turner, graduate student at Northwestern University, black power spokesman, and activist, as he summed up the situation of race relations last evening to students of the Black and White in America course. Turner said that last year's Kerner Commission report was supposed to be "a milestone in race relations, an admission of racism in America."

"The problem of racism in our country today will continue to polarize itself unless there is an actual transferral of power between blacks and whites," said James Turner, graduate student at Northwestern University, black power spokesman, and activist, as he summed up the situation of race relations last evening to students of the Black and White in America course. Turner said that last year's Kerner Commission report was supposed to be "a milestone in race relations, an admission of racism in America."

If we look at the state of affairs in the U.S. today as examined in the year-after follow-up to the original report, he said, we see that there has been 1) no substantial change in the attitudes of Americans toward race relations and 2) little, if any, structural change in the areas and institutions to which the report recommended change.

Turner feels that there are many false assumptions which predicted today's racial dialogues. One example is the assumption that the problems of racism in America today are based on prejudice and attitude. Another is based on black improvement, "the idea that if blacks could change themselves, the social relationship of races would improve. Thirdly, there is the assumption that an increase in love among the races would change racial relations.

The black generation before this one, he said, did work on disspelling stereotypes. Black children were taught that the "burden of truth is on you." The attitude was that, "if we can show whites we have ability, morals, and as much intelligence as they have, things will change."

While the civil rights movement failed in its purpose, Turner said, it helped blacks to redefine their terms.

"We saw the beginning of black consciousness when blacks began to redefine and re-evaluate their cultural level. Earlier, for example, it had been a big event when Marion Anderson appeared at Carnegie Hall, showing that blacks were capable of fitting into white society. Later on blacks began to ask, why not Charlie Parker or James Brown?"

The new black movement seeks to destroy the idea that the black should move into the mainstream of society. "How can Americans say there is a 'mainstream,' Turner questioned, when the blacks have never been allowed to leave the tributaries?"

People are not in ghettos by accident, he said, they are there by structure, on well-defined

(Continued on Page 4)

JAMES TURNER

Unified action worked

By DIANE WEATHERS

Founded in 1951, in Evanston, Illinois, Northwestern University differs from most privately endowed universities. For a long time football and the fraternities have dominated the atmosphere and like many of its counterparts throughout the country Northwestern had previously maintained a quota system in order to insure the heterogeneity of the upper class white Protestants making up its student body.

Within the past decade the situation began to change. In the earlier phases of "integration" the university athletic coaches and admissions directors began seeking more black athletes. Later on the quota system was relaxed in order to admit more students from minority groups.

This in summary is part of the history of Northwestern's movement toward intergration. But for James Turner, a student at Northwestern and last night's lecturer to the student run course, Black and White in

(Continued on Page 5)

Nixon aide

Moynihan to discuss 'impossible' politics

Daniel Patrick Moynihan, assistant to the President for urban affairs and executive secretary of the Council on Urban Affairs, will speak at Syracuse University's Annual Honors Convocation May 8 at 8 p.m. in Hendricks Chapel. The Convocation honors leading undergraduate students.

Moynihan, a former faculty member in the Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs, will discuss "Politics as the Art of the Impossible."

At the time of his appointment by President Nixon, Moynihan was director of the Joint Center of Urban Studies of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Harvard University.

Moynihan was an assistant professor of political science at Syracuse in 1960 and also director of a New York State Government Research Project. He left Syracuse to join the U.S. Department of Labor as a special assistant and executive assistant to the Secretary of Labor, posts he held until 1963. For the next two years he was Assistant Secretary of Labor for Policy Planning and Research, and in 1966 he became director of the Joint Center for Urban Studies.

Moynihan graduated from Tufts College and earned his Ph.D. at the Fletcher School of International Law and Diplomacy. His most recent book is "Maximum Feasible Misunderstanding, Community Action in the War on Poverty," published in 1969 by The Free Press.

Former SU students of Moynihan recall his lectures being tempered with good Irish humor, and remember his emphasis of practical solutions for social problems rather than strict adherence to conventional orthodoxy.

His former colleagues recall his defense of an academian's alleged "defection" or "selling out" to the Government. Moynihan said at the time that it was not even a debatable issue when an American citizen is called upon to serve. He also added that Federal service puts one in more of a position to actually "do things" rather than merely criticize and suggest.

DANIEL PATRICK MOYNIHAN

Election dates changed twice

By LARRY KRAMER
Campus Affairs Editor

In a five-hour Election Commission session last night, Ed Barron, independent SG vice-presidential candidate, had his candidacy revoked by a 3-2 vote of the Commission. Earlier, after arguments basically drawn along party lines, the Commission decided to move the SG elections date back to April 17th.

Barron's candidacy was disallowed on the basis of his outlook toward the office he was running for. During questioning, he gave the impression that his loyalty would go first to the dorm council, second to the office. The Commission felt that a candidate with this disrespect for an office should not run to hold that position. Supporting the April 24 election date, Greek Independent Alliance representative Ed Feldman contended that the move to an earlier date would unfairly hurt his party. Feldman described to the Commission the arrangement made with the printers. According to Feldman, "There is no way now that we can get our campaign materials before April 17th."

The major speaker for the April 17th date was Joe Nicoletti, chairman of Greek Week. Nicoletti reported to the Commission that Greek Week, scheduled for April 20-24, could not risk the consequences of a conflict with the elections.

"Both events will suffer severely if they are held on the same week," said Nicoletti. "There are too many people involved in both activities, and too many conflicting events during the week." Nicoletti also mentioned that Greek Week was a $20,000 investment.

Chairman of Elections Commission Dick Barton contradicted some of Feldman's testimony, telling of a phone conversation with the printer of much of GIA's literature. Apparently the printer told Barton that the material could have been ready by this Friday. The vote to move the election back to April 17 was 2-1, with one abstention.

At the conclusion of the vote, Feldman stated, "You just made it a one-party election."

The rest of the meeting, almost four hours, was taken up by interviews with all the candidates. The first party to present its candidates to the Commission was the Campus Alliance Party. Although certain CAP candidates did not meet the requirements specified by the Commission, the requirements were waived.

Really, a rallye: you 'auto' enter

The Universitas Touring and Rallye Association is sponsoring a Sports Car Rallye, this Sunday at 1 p.m, starting from Manley Field House. Registration is from 11 a.m. - 1 p.m., and the entry fee is $4 per car.

Each car has a driver and navigator, and a rally consists of following a set of printed directions while maintaining an exact average speed. The object is to determine the meaning of clue-like directives and arrive at the final destination on time. Scoring is based on the elapsed time of each car, by seconds. Points are given for each second early and late, with the lowest score winning. Nine trophies will be presented at the finish line.

The rally is open to everyone, regardless of the make or type of car driven, and offers the opportunity for an enjoyable Sunday afternoon drive with the added spice of competition. The course the rally will follow will cover many back country roads, and since all speeds are below the speed limit, participants will be able to see plenty of the beautiful upstate New York spring scenery. Refreshments will also be available.

The last UTARA rally in December had over 60 participating cars.

Vacation robbery

Thieves hit DellPlain

By KAREN WIEDIGER

Between $5,000 and $8,000 worth of merchandise, mainly in electrical appliances, was stolen from DellPlain Dormitory during spring vacation according to Bob Anderson, director of the living center.

The items taken ranged from steros, amplifiers tapedecks speakers, electric typewriters and television sets. Also stolen was one suede jacket, a short wave set, a watch and ring and lava lamps and records.

"The people who did the stealing locked the doors when they were finished," said Anderson. "I don't know how they got into the dormitory or if they used keys. I issued 15 master keys at the beginning of last year and not one has been lost. However, eight were missing when I became dorm director in September."

Anderson had asked the dormitory office to change the locks because of the missing keys but no action was taken

Each year master keys are given to the resident advisers and supposedly are not to leave the possession of the R.A.'s. If the keys are used to unlock individual student rooms, the R.A. does it, not the student.

According to the Crime Control Division of the Syracuse City Police, 12 rooms were entered. However, Dick Conrad, president of DellPlain said more reports of missing items are being turned in and that the number of rooms is 17 or higher.

Conrad is working to see that the students who did not have their stolen items insured receive restitution. The University is not normally responsible for losses in dormitories by fire, theft or other causes.

A spokesman for the Crime Control division said a fraternity house was also broken into during the vacation and a 21-year-old man was arrested by the Security Police in Haven Hall for criminal trespass. His name was not available this morning but the spokesman did say he was not a Syracuse University student.

The power in the University area of DellPlain was turned off between April 4 and 6. Anderson feels the robberies had to take place during the power shut-down because there were resident advisers in the dormitory during the other times and the burgular alarm was working then.

The Crime Control Division and the Security Police are working on the case but have no leads so far. A University spokesman said this incident probably involves the largest amount of merchandise ever taken at the University.

TVR classes to hear exec

Elmo Ellis, vice president and general manager of WSB Radio in Atlanta, Ga., will address graduate students in Syracuse University's television-radio department Monday and Tuesday (April 14 and 15). His appearance is part of the department's guest professor series.

Ellis joined the WSB staff in 1940 as publicity and promotion director. He has also served as script manager, production manager and program director. In addition to his present position, he is executive consultant on programming for the other radio stations of the Cox Broadcasting Corporation and chairman of the NBC Radio Affiliates.

During 1964-65 Ellis served as chairman of the board of the National Association of FM Broadcasters. He was named Broadcaster-Citizen of the Year in 1965 by the Georgia Association of Broadcasters for his service to broadcasting and his leadership in community affairs.

Ellis, who has taught radio and television classes at Emory University and Georgia State College, is co-author of the basic textbook, "Radio Station Mangement."

WANTED

LIBRARY DIRECTOR I

For Finger Lakes Community

(Sixty miles west of Syracuse)

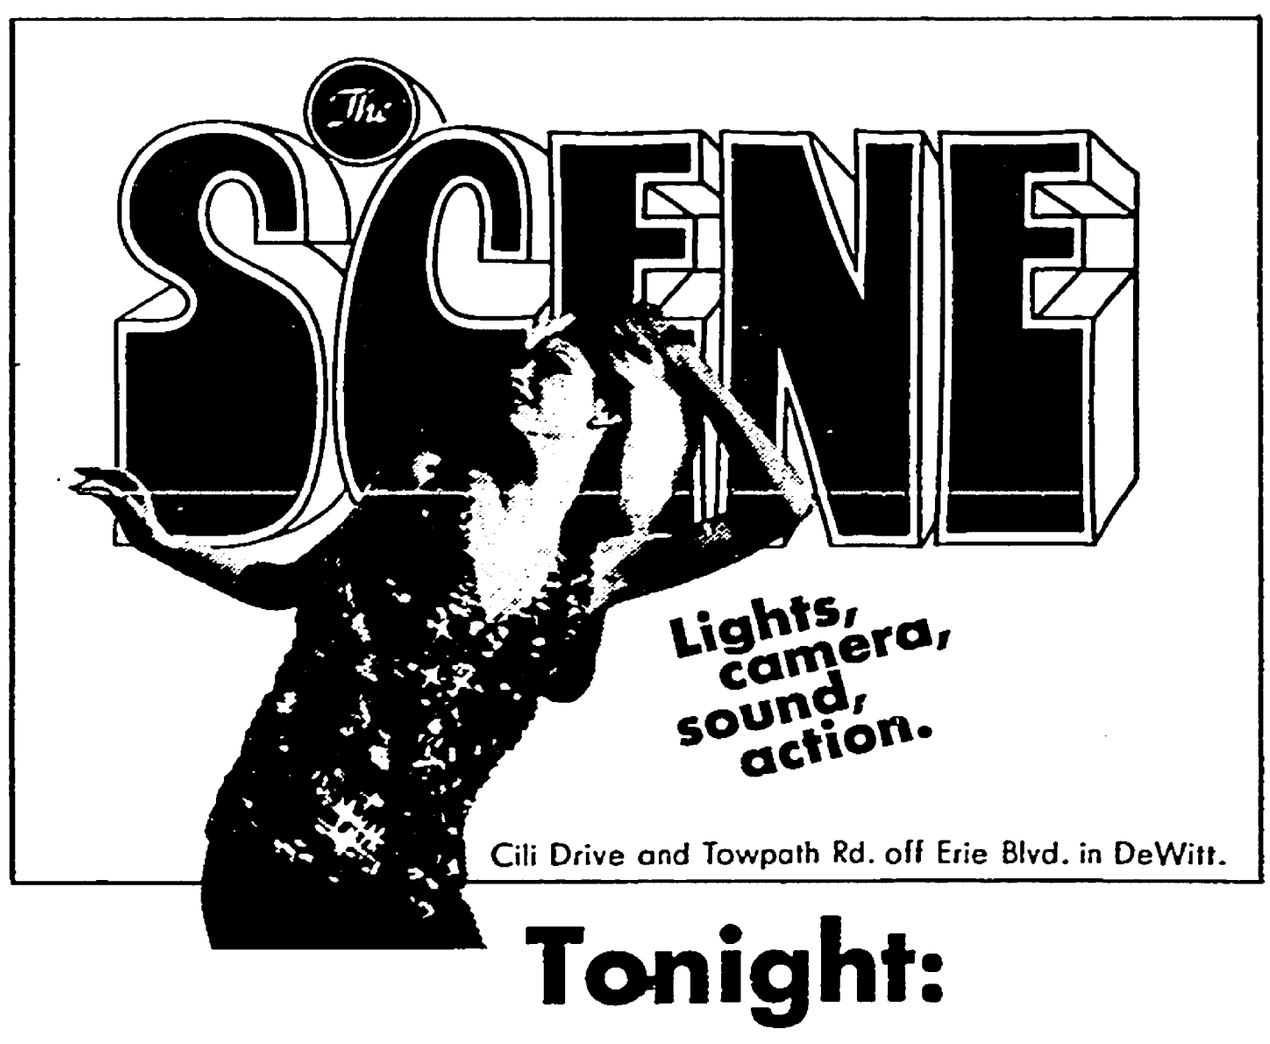
Mr. Burton Ford, President of the Newark (New York) Library Board of Trustees will be at the Placement Center, Syracuse University on Monday April 14 from 9:00 a.m. to 11:00 a.m. to interview any interested Library Science Student. Salary range: $7,500 to $10,000 depending upon experience and qualifications. Also Blue Cross, paid annual vacation, sick leave and retirement program. Village population: 12,000.

For further details, see bulletin in Journalism Library.

Syracuse University

SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY · FOUNDED A·D·1870 · SUOS CULTORES SCIENTIA CORONAT

L'Ecole Hindemith



1969 Summer Music School in Switzerland

Write :

Foreign Study Programs

335 Comstock Avenue

Syracuse, New York 13210

Tonight:

Admission—1/2 price.

JAM FACTORY

FRIDAY 9-1

CAMPUS INN — SUBURBAN PARK

MANLIUS (15 Minutes From Campus, Route 92)

ANGUS H. TWOMBLY — Editor-in-Chief

MANAGING EDITOR— Alan Stamm EDITORIAL DIRECTOR— Karen Wiediger NEWS EDITOR— Fred Tuccillo COPY EDITOR— Jean Havens FEATURE EDITOR— Roz Mazer SPORTS EDITOR— Mike Weber EXECUTIVE EDITOR— David A. Ross CAMPUS AFFAIRS EDITOR— Larry Kramer PHOTOGRAPHY EDITOR— Clint Clemens ASSOCIATE EDITORS— Andrij Bilyk, Kay Christensen, Beth Hillson, Rona Kavee, Helene Macdonald, Charles Shapiro, Dan Schlossberg, Patti Williams, Roni Zlokower, Bob Zuer.

DAILY ORANGE

Syracuse University's Daily Newspaper Since 1903

THURSDAY, APRIL 10, 1969 PAGE 3

STEVEN P. STROBRIDGE — Business Manager

ASSISTANT BUSINESS MANAGER— Art Depasqua, NATIONAL ADVERTISING MANAGER— Janet Meyer ACCOUNT EXECUTIVES— Roger Black, Jim Maney, Mike Greenstein.

Published Tuesday, through Friday during the academic year by students of Syracuse University. Offices located at 200 Brooklea Drive, Fayetteville, N.Y., and 1101 East Adams St., Syracuse, New York. Entered as Second Class matter at the U.S. Post Office, Fayetteville, N.Y. 13066.

What's decent?

"Decency" has joined the ranks of "generation gap," "law and order," and "establishment" as a word that strikes fear into the hearts of hippies, radicals, obscene rock groups, Broadway theater, the motion picture industry, the Smothers Brothers, and other fellow travellers. The term, launched with praise from the VFW, the Nixon Administration, Jackie Gleason and Max Rafferty, was rocketed to national notoriety during a mammoth anti-smut rally in Miami Beach. Decency, unfortunately, is the most obscure of the recent rash of nebulous adjectives making today's headlines. It connotes a life filled with music reminiscent of the John Birch Chorale, early Hayley Mills films, and Ozzie and Harriet reruns.

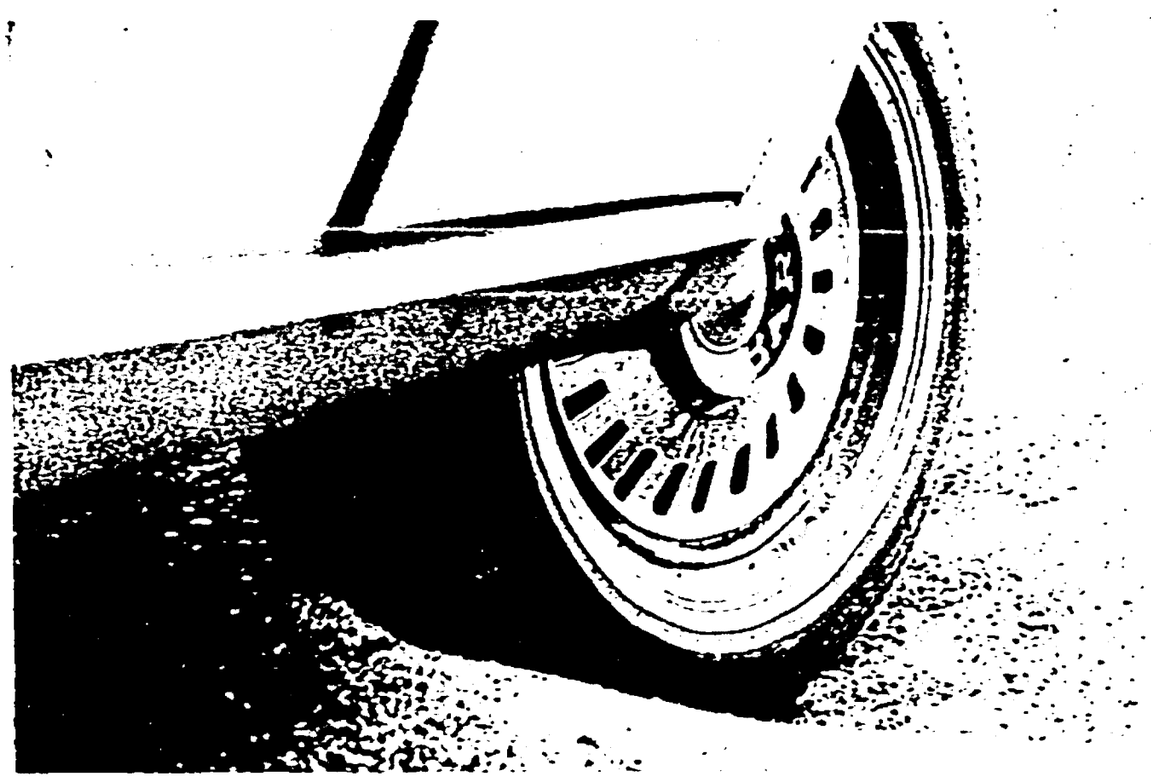
The decency movement is a manifestation of the anti-censorship backlash and for this reason deserves careful observation. Any type of censorship that is not self-censorship is inherently dangerous. When an outspoken leader can arouse public sentiment to censor or silence an artist or a specific publication, we are all made a little less secure.

"It's not that we're prudes or anything," the pro-decency people claim, "it's just that the majority of the American unwashed does not possess the sense of propriety and sophistication to know what they want." It seems that groups, like the Decency people, spend most of their time saving the unsophisticated masses from the weighty decision of what to read, what to watch, and what to listen to.

Decency is fine, as long as it doesn't precipitate pragmatic censorship.

'Puddle wonderful'

Spring at SU is that magic cushion between Easter vacation and May finals. Its signs are the bronzed, bespectacled and bell-bottomed crowd mulling at HBC and on Marshall Street, and rumors that the annual water fight is about to be staged. And staged it might well be. (Funseekers beware.) Yes, its that "puddle wonderful" world of E.E. Cummings again, except at SU the puddle is a bit clouded.



SU is on some indistinguishable threshold of significance and greatness but something is keeping too many people from getting excited about it or doing anything about it. A lot of things can happen this spring--a lot of issues are tossing around.

Dorms and fraternities are approaching autonomy, CSL was working on undergraduate car restrictions before vacation, the paraphernalia of a campus election (perhaps the election of a true campus leader) is about to appear and John Corbally prepares to take the reins of SU in the fall.

Perhaps the most constructive contribution in defining the threshold of greatness has come from the architecture and black students. Both have organized a meaningful but not sensational means of asking for much deserved and long overdue concessions to modernity.

The threshold of greatness extends to other areas. It will be approached as the SU Centennial Planning Committee meets again this week. The threshold lies in the School of Journalism whose students and faculty plead for reality, and it can be found in HL where liberal arts students grumble about group requirements, advisors and credit transfers.

Spring indeed is here, but so is the need for student concern and action. While those warm afternoons certainly are conducive to that famous breed of SU contentment and passivity, let's not spend our "puddle wonderful" days with one foot dragging in the mud.

"... AND HE SHALL MAKE THE ROUGH WAYS SMOOTH..."
But when already?! Potholes like this one on the road down from the Mount punish tires all over campus. Instead of a thorough repaving, however, the university seems content to throw a little gravel in the ruts each spring.

Corbally's on deck

Mike Stephens

Two o'clock in the afternoon on the eve of Spring Vacation may have been a strange time to introduce a new Chancellor. But Syracuse University often goes about things in a strange sort of way.

Dr. John E. Corbally Jr. was introduced to the University Senate by jovial outgoing chancellor William P. Tolley. The 68-year-old Tolley seemed spry and happy, although it was not immediately clear whether this was an indication of pleasure at his successor, or just pleasure to be done with the whole mess.

In fact, not much at all was clear about the introduction of this stranger to the Syracuse campus. Tolley called it "an admirable choice," which was an appropriate platitude. William Clark, head of the Chancellor Selection Committee, remarked that "the value of our work is yet to be seen," which was no news to the many scholars in the audience.

Several things, however, were evident in the short preview:

Corbally is a man of action, not of words. The entire meeting, including three speeches, lasted under 10 minutes. Corbally's remarks were the briefest of all. Catching on to the clinches of his predecessor, he said he was "deeply impressed with Syracuse University." He cut his remarks short because, he said, it was such a lovely Friday afternoon. This may imply he will be on the putting green at TC when the weather turns warmer.

The Chancellor-elect proved to be a man of action, however, by shaking hands for almost a half hour, which makes for a lot of sweaty palms. He demonstrated vim and vigor by pumping at least three times with every party. Tolley, by comparison, gave only a little ripple.

Corbally also showed himself to be a friend to the students. This was obvious when Dean Kramer of Liberal Arts waited with his hand outstretched while Corbally continued his rap with a blond coed in front of him.

The most obvious thing, to those in the know at any rate, is Corbally's marked resemblence to Gil Hodges, the manager of the New York Mets. He has the Hodges' lanky build, long face and easy going, effortless manner.

Hodges inherited a ballclub molded by a very respected man in baseball, Casey Stengel. But in his years with the Mets, Stengel was criticized for being too old and conservative; the game had passed him by. When Hodges took over, he had a second division team with big league pretensions. It was a club made up of veterans and rookies, with few stars upon which to build a reputation.

Many of the same circumstances surround the Corbally takeover. He will take over for a respected educator, Tolley, who may just have remained too long at his post. SU is a second division university, but with definite big league potential. Corbally must decide how best to use his veterans. It was evident from the crowd filing past him that SU is an old university; most of the deans and many of the faculty members are a good deal older than their new mentor.

The time to judge Corbally will soon be at hand. Will he, like Hodges, be able to mold a team that is on the threshold of being a contender? Will he, like Hodges at first base, be able to move quickly to either side to pick up the tricky hops that come his way?

A student coming in at the end of the festivities inquired of another observer what all the people were standing in line for.

"To shake hands with the new Chancellor," he was told.

He surveyed the scene for a moment and said, "It must be quite an honor, for them to be waiting on line for so long." He shrugged. "Well, we'll see."

Letters

To the Editor:

I would like to answer some questions which were raised in the Daily Orange March 27 regarding DellPlain's participation in dormitory autonomy.

DellPlain did not submit its constitution to IDC on Tuesday, March 25, because the residents of the dormitory have not yet voted on the new revised constitution. The IDC autonomy committee was aware of this and reported it to the full IDC.

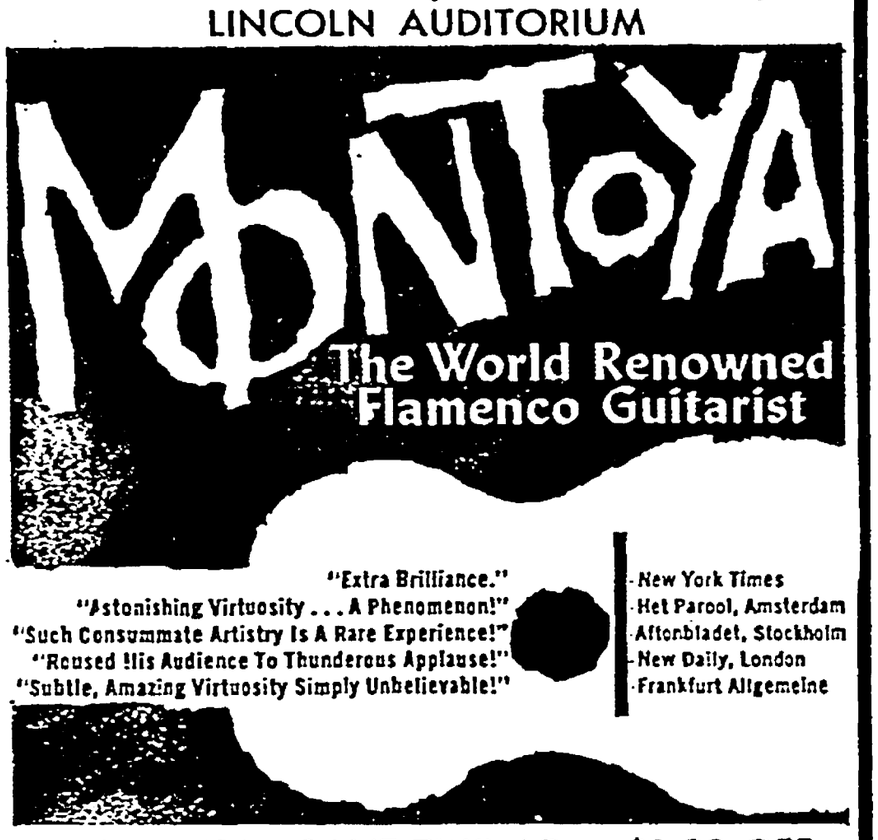
In that both IDC and Senate require that a dormitory referendum be taken on the autonomy proposal, we hardly could have acted at the time of the March 25 meeting.

The charge is unfounded that Matty Leibowitz, DellPlain autonomy chairman and candidate for sophomore class president, forced this delay for political reasons. The decision to submit the revised constitution to floor votes, thus delaying autonomy, was made by vote of the entire council, and was completely out of Matty's hands.

Richard Conrad
President, DellPlain

Columns appearing on this page are the opinions of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Daily Orange staff. The paper welcomes diverse opinions and will consider all materials submitted for publication on this page.

All material submitted to the Daily Orange becomes the property of the paper to print at its discretion. No unsigned materials will be printed but names will be withheld upon request.



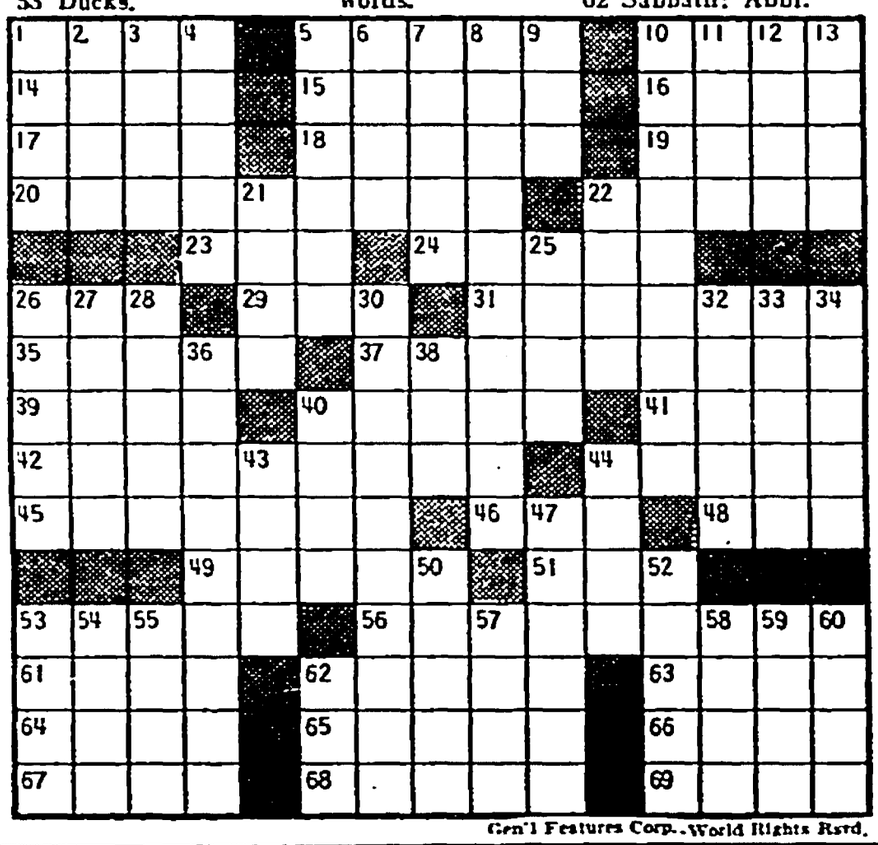
JIFFY KING

SPECIAL

Monday thru Friday, 2-5 p.m.

10¢ OFF ALL SUBS
727 South Crouse
in the Arcade

One Perf. Sat. Eve., April 12th at 8:30 p.m.
LINCOLN AUDITORIUM



STUDENTS! SAVE THIS AD. $1.00 OFF
Regular Price with DO Ad
$4.80, $4.00, $3.60, $3.00
Famous Artists — State Tower GR 1-0462

ACROSS

1 Small fry.
5 Coffee.
10 Ridicule.
14 Not ___ (many): 2 words.
15 Mixture of metals.
16 Mixture of foods.
17 Product of Etna.
18 Moves with speed.
19 Facility.
20 Problem in suburbia.
22 The real ___.
23 ___ Canals.
24 Hebrew word in the Psalms.
26 Seedy fruit.
29 Furthermore.
31 Save: 2 words.
35 Make into law.
37 A women loved.
39 External: Prefix.
40 Square accounts: 2 words.
41 Friday, for one.
42 Robot bomb.
44 Kind of jury.
45 Shake hands on: 2 words.
46 Fodder.
48 European resort.
49 Sky-blue shades.
51 Refrain syllable.
53 Ducks.
56 Popular sport: 2 words.
61 Storage place of a kind.
62 Suffix with land or sea.
63 Time of day: Prefix.
64 To join: Fr.
65 Composer Copland.
66 Italic: Abbr.
67 Secretary.
68 Favor.
69 White House name.

DOWN

1 Soft mineral.
2 From a distance.
3 Hindu angel.
4 Wipes up.
5 ___ of honor.
6 Olive genus.
7 Style: Slang.
8 Guffaw: 2 words.
9 Assents.
10 In ___ of (under supervision): 2 words.
11 Army member: Initials.
12 "This ___ sudden!": 2 words.
13 People.
21 Capricorn's shape.
22 Famous name in medicine.
25 Hurricane ___.
26 "___ cold...": 2 words.
27 In disguise: Colloq.
28 Croc's cousin.
30 Fiendish.
32 Bides one's time.
33 Nautical term.
34 Conference place of 1945.
36 Worker in CIA: 2 words.
38 New York University: Abbr.
40 Man's nickname.
43 Garlands.
44 Fire: Prefix.
47 Greek capital.
50 Panic.
52 Have ___ on the shoulder: 2 words.
53 Sound of a sort.
54 German article.
55 Bird: Lat.
57 Primitive poem.
58 Japanese zither.
59 Of an age.
60 Recipe ingredient.
62 Sabbath: Abbr.

Gen'l Features Corp.-World Rights Rsrd.

WOLF & MARK VI present
RASCALS
FRIDAY NITE, APRIL 18, 8 P.M.
at
Onondaga War Memorial
Tickets 4-5-6 On Sale At Record Runner, SU Corner Store, Wilson's Leading Jewelers and Onondaga War Memorial Box Office.

Turner . . .

(Continued from Page 1)

barriers of land. The concept of natural right land is false since blacks who have worked on and cared for land for so many years still do not own it. Blacks in America have no relationship to land, since they have never maintained any significant quantity of it.

"There are well-worked out plans for population shifts of blacks both in Syracuse and in Chicago, under the guise of University expansion.

Politically, Turner said, Adam Clayton Powell has proven that when blacks use the political system their power can be summarily wiped away.

Turner pointed out that there has been not only no measurable change in black lives up until today, but there has been a resistance to really change the blacks' position by giving him industrial training and skills.

"If no agreement can be reached on anything else we should agree that if a society is to maintain stability it cannot be both free and ignorant."

Turner is presently a doctoral candidate in sociology at Northwestern where last year he led a black student protest. He is the probable candidate for the directorship of the newly proposed Afro-American center at Cornell.

Society cites achievement of UC prof

A member of the faculty at the State University College of Forestry at Syracuse University has been awarded a Presidential Citation from the American Society of Photogrammetry. He is Prof. Bruce T. Stanton, of the College's Department of Forest Management.

In presenting the citation, William A. Radlinski, president of the society, stated, "This award honors Prof. Stanton's many contributions to the Society and towards progress in the field of photogrammetry, especially in its application to forestry and engineering. Over the years he has guided many students into photogrammetry careers--I have the names of at least 70.

TVs
RECONDITIONED
GUARANTEED
"REASONABLE"
— ALSO — COMPLETE SERVICE
ELECTRONIC
AT STUDENT PRICES.
BRING IT IN AND SAVE $$$
TVs Bought,
Sold, Traded
USED TV CENTER
1704 W. Fayette at W. Genesee
468 - 9854

Turner: unified action worked . . . .

(Continued from page 1)

America, who helped coordinate and advise black students at Northwestern in their occupation of the school's Finance Building, these steps toward integration were merely a farce. According to Mr. Turner the bulk of the black students on campus were no more than therapeutic agents--a means of giving the white students the opportunity to find out what blacks were really like.

Meanwhile however, the concerns of the black students were totally ignored and it was assumed that the small number of black students would become totally dissolved in the mainstream of university life. Mr. Turner pointed out that the various experiments made by black students such as involvement in the Greek system and student government did not work and the result was that the black students, although they attended the university, were completely outside the concern of the university.

The only alternative for black students was to become a unified group and pressure the administration to listen to their grievances and respond accordingly. After all of the legal channels for communication had been exhausted more drastic channels had to be used. Such was the case with Northwestern. In this reporter's interview with Mr. Turner he explained that he decided to occupy the Finance Building because it was the heart of the University's functioning. The building housed valuable records and computers and the demonstrators threatened to destroy the property if any police intervened.

On the whole he said with the exception of minor disturbances from minor hecklers, the demonstration was nonviolent. Food and other provisions were taken care of by the demonstrators themselves as well as members of the community. After three days the administration agreed to comply with the demands of the students and since then gradual changes have taken place.

James Turner, a soft spoken native of New York, who is working toward a PhD in political sociology, has been at Northwestern for two and a half years. Since his role in last year's demonstrations he has made television appearances and has received numerous magazine and newspaper write-ups. He said that people often accused him of making demands for black separatism but he feels that it is the nature of the United States to be a separatist country. Ethnic distinctions, he said, are more apparent than class distinctions but in the case of a black man he feels that it has always been separation along with inequality or segregation.

James Turner feels that what the black students at Northwestern have had to go through is not peculiar to Northwestern but is the same all over. The problem of the black students at Syracuse, like Northwestern, he said, can only be alleviated by students demanding that the university adjust its policies so as to correct the numerous injustices against them.

SU, Cornell list theses

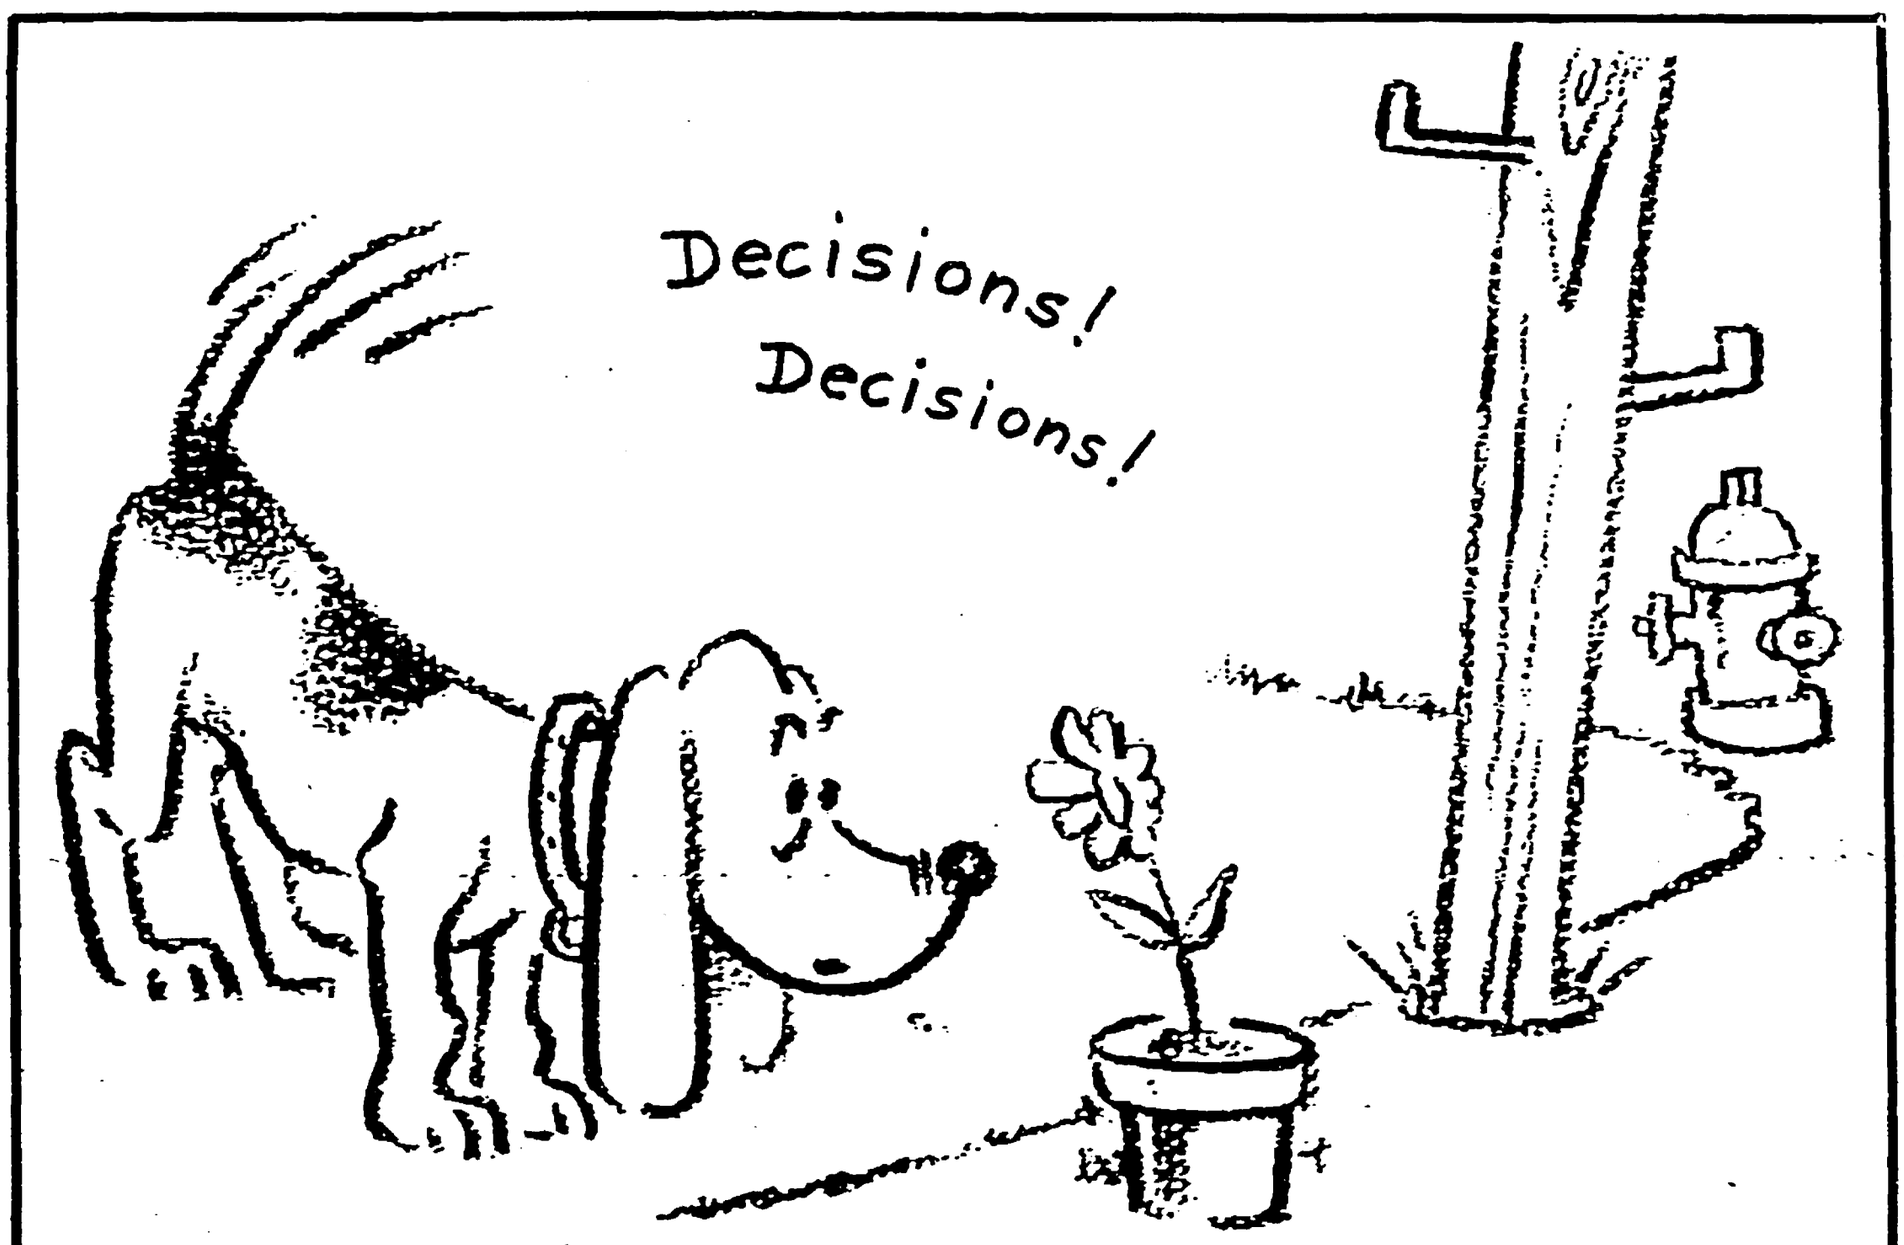
Syracuse and Cornell Universities have jointly published "Manuscripts for Research," a booklet listing selected manuscript collections at their libraries.

Jack T. Ericson, head of the Manuscript Division at Syracuse, said 10,000 copies have been distributed to major colleges and universities.

The collections are listed under such subject headings as agriculture, art history, dramatic arts, industrial design, New York history, publishing and transportation.

Listed under American literature are Stephen Crane, Phyllis McGinley, Vachel Lindsay and others whose papers are at Syracuse University. The listing for mass communications includes Gertrude Berg ("Molly Goldbert"), Bob Considine, Irving R. Levine, Fulton Lewis Jr., Robert L. Sherrod, Dorothy Thompson and Mike Wallace, all represented at Syracuse.

Ericson said: "The brochure points out to students looking for master and doctoral theses what collections are available at Cornell and Syracuse." The Five Associated University Libraries, which include those at the Ithaca and Syracuse campuses, coordinated distribution of the brochure. A revised edition, to be published in the fall, will include manuscript holdings of the University of Rochester and the State University of New York at Buffalo and Binghamton, plus additional listings for Syracuse and Cornell.



Senate meets

Student Senate will have an emergency session tonight at 7, Maxwell Aud. The topic of discussion will be the possibility of undergraduate student membership in the University Senate. Dr. Stern, chairman of the University Senate Committee on Students will be the guest speaker.

COUNSELORS — EXCELLENT MAINE GIRLS CAMP. OPENINGS: Swimming (WSI), Canoeing, Sailing, Waterskiing, Tennis, Archery, Golf, Song Leader, Theater Director. Inquiries invited. Write: Director, Box 553, Great Neck, N. Y. 11022. Tel.: 516-482-4323.

ANSWER TO PUZZLE

T	A	D	S		H	O	C	H	A		T	W	I	T
A	F	E	W		A	L	L	O	Y		H	A	S	H
L	A	V	A		T	E	A	R	S		E	A	S	E
C	R	A	B	G	R	A	I	S	S		M	C	C	O	Y
			S	O	O		S	E	L	A	H
F	I	G		A	N	D		L	A	Y	A	W	A	Y
E	N	A	C	T		I	N	A	M	O	R	A	T	A
E	C	T	O		P	A	Y	U	P		G	I	R	L
D	O	O	D	L	E	B	U	G		P	E	T	I	T
A	G	R	E	E	T	O		H	A	Y		S	P	A
			C	I	E	L	S		T	R	A
T	E	A	L	S		I	C	E	H	O	C	K	E	Y
H	I	V	E		S	C	A	P	E		H	O	R	O
U	N	I	R		A	A	R	O	N		I	T	A	L
D	E	S	K		B	L	E	S	S		P	O	L	K

Some decisions are relatively unimportant. Where you put your engineering talent to work is not.

As you contemplate one of the most important decisions of your life, we invite you to consider a career at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft. Here, you will find wide-open opportunities for professional growth with a company that enjoys an enviable record of stability in the dynamic atmosphere of aerospace technology.

We select our engineers and scientists carefully. Motivate them well. Give them the equipment and facilities only a leader can provide. Offer them company-paid, graduate-education opportunities. Encourage them to push into fields that have not been explored before. Keep them reaching for a little bit more responsibility than they can manage. Reward them well when they do manage it.

And your decision is made easier, thanks to the wide range of talents required. Your degree can be a B.S., M.S., or Ph.D. in: MECHANICAL • AERONAUTICAL • ELECTRICAL • CHEMICAL • CIVIL • MARINE • INDUSTRIAL ENGINEERING • PHYSICS • CHEMISTRY • METALLURGY • MATERIALS SCIENCE • CERAMICS • MATHEMATICS • STATISTICS • COMPUTER SCIENCE • ENGINEERING SCIENCE • ENGINEERING MECHANICS.

Consult your college placement officer—or write Mr. William L. Stoner, Engineering Department, Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, East Hartford, Connecticut 06108.

Pratt & Whitney Aircraft
EAST HARTFORD AND MIDDLETOWN, CONNECTICUT
WEST PALM BEACH, FLORIDA

DIVISION OF UNITED AIRCRAFT CORPORATION
UA
An Equal Opportunity Employer

Crossroads Symposium features African lecturer

By STEVE TOBER

A Symposium on Southern Africa, sponsored by the Syracuse chapter of Operations Crossroads Africa, will be conducted the weekend of April 11-14. The purposes of the symposium are to inform interested members of the campus and community of the critical situation which exists in South Africa, and to provide a medium for a discussion of racism in the United States as well.

Operations Crossroads, which has been in existence for over 12 years, has worked on this campus by sending both American and Canadian college students to various African nations for summer projects. With this symposium, Crossroads offers the Syracuse student the opportunity to understand African problems, by bringing the program to the campus.

The Symposium will be composed of both lectures and discussion sessions, with various professors and visitors from other campuses taking part in the discussions.

The main speaker and leader for the weekend will be Reverend Gladstone M. Ntlabati, himself a refugee from South Africa. Ntlabati, who is an ordained minister of the Methodist Church of South Africa, attended Rhodes University, and earned Masters degrees from Yale and Harvard Universities.

While in South Africa during 1963, Ntlabati was arrested for being a member of the banned African National Congress of South Africa, and for speaking out against the evils of the Apartheid. Since his arrival in the United States, he has spent time lecturing at universities and organizations across the nation, emphasizing that the struggle of the Black people in South Africa and that of the Black people in this country are both products of the same revolution.

Highlights of the schedule include a lecture by Mr. Ntlabati on the "Jewish Community in South Africa," followed by a discussion scheduled for this Friday at 7:30 p.m. in Hendricks Chapel. At 10 a.m. Saturday in Maxwell Auditorium, Ntlabati will lecture on the "Origins of Racism in South Africa," followed by a lecture by Ron Walters of the SU Political Science Department, on racism in the United States, and a comparison to the South African situation. This will be held at 1 p.m. in Maxwell Auditorium.

On Sunday, at 2 p.m. in Maxwell, Ntlabati will continue the Symposium with a lecture on "The Ethics of Violence." While at Yale, he wrote his major work, "The Ethical Justification for Violent Revolution in South Africa."

On Monday, the final day of the Symposium, a panel discussion will be conducted on the topic of "Political Parties in Exile," at 4 p.m. in Maxwell Auditorium.

GUITAR SALE

Guild

Epiphone

Goya

40% OFF

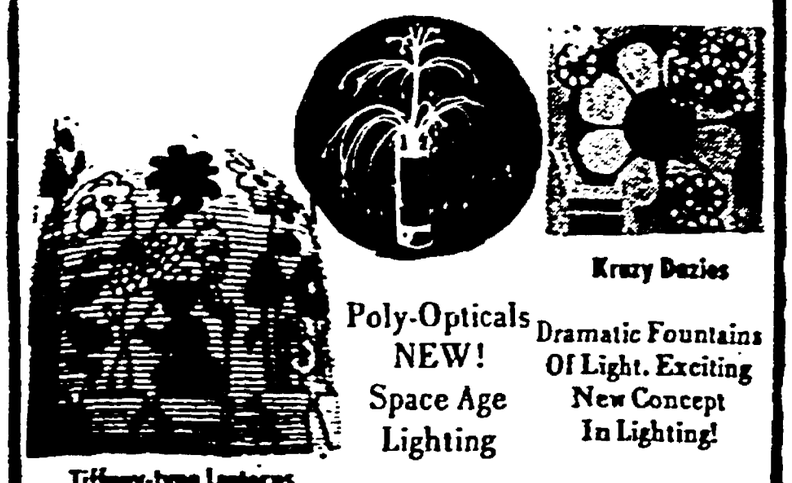
at

The Corner Store

"Our Business Is People"

SU Bookstores

S. Crouse & University



SYRACUSE REPERTORY THEATRE
the lady's not for burning
by Christopher Fry
A SENSATION IN LONDON & NEW YORK
Apr. 10-13 Th. & Fr. at 8 pm
Sat. at 2:30 & 8 pm
Apr. 17-20 Sun. at 7:30 pm
UNIVERSITY REGENT THEATRE
820 EAST GENESEE ST.
parking & ticket info.: 476-4536

COSMO
Pizza Shop
FAST
DELIVERY SERVICE
TO
ALL DORMS
GR 8-9231

EDWARD HOMMEL & SONS
OPTICIANS
VANDERBILT SQ. CENTER
127 S. SALINA ST.
FREE PARKING

474-4644
EYEGLASSES & CONTACT LENSES
REPAIRS
Telex Hearing Aids

Take a trip... see
The SCENE

We're alive with young ideas!

Kreazy Deazies
Poly-Opticals NEW! Space Age Lighting
Dramatic Fountains Of Light. Exciting New Concept In Lighting!
Tiffany-type Lanterns
Cooper decoration co.

'Love Affair'

Yugoslav flick: 'unboring, 'racy

By PAUL WILLISTEIN JR.

"More is happening in American life than in the American film," according to Dusan Makavejev, Yugoslav director of "Love Affair."

"My film is two-leveled: fictional and newsreel," said Makavejev. "It can be conceived as a political satire, if you have political feelings as I have. If you don't like something you can miss it, if you do, you can enjoy it."

Makavejev answered audience questions at Tuesday night's showing of this week's Film Forum movie, "Love Affair, or the Tragedy of a Switchboard Operator." He is currently touring American and Canadian film centers on a Ford Foundation grant.

"Love Affair" was one of the favorite films at the 1967 Cannes Critics' Week and the Montreal Film Festival. The film incorporates Makavejev's approach that a film should not bore the viewer. He uses flash-foward and flash-back, unexpected close-ups and unpredictable cuts.

Judging from the film, Yugoslavia's censorship code may be more liberal than the American code. Makavejev reported that he "had no problem" with his country's censors although the film was "received with sharp remarks." It was "prohibited in England and Spain" and "in France the public hair parts were covered with black streaks."

Along with "Love Affair," Film Forum is showing two shorts. One is "The Wall," by Ante Zaninovic, of Yugoslavia. This clever little film is of the Zagreb School of animation.

Lowe shows mixed art

Stuffed vinyl rope, dyed canvases and a sterling silver chess set are part of the fifth exhibition in "The Artist of the Future" series at Syracuse University's Lowe Art Center until May 2.

The series shows student projects in progress in major fields at the SU School of Art. Displays are arranged by the students. The current one shows the diverse graduate student projects.

"The exhibit is really in four parts," said Merlin Pollock, professor of art and graduate student adviser. "Three to five graduate students will be displaying their projects each week."

Pollock feels there is a wide variety of projects in the exhibit "because each student has evolved as an artist in his own right. He was never told there was only one correct method."

"Our projects could not be classified as belonging to a particular field such as painting or sculpture," said Roger Schimomura, one of the exhibitors. "We have had the opportunity to establish our own definitions of art."

The originator of the stuffed vinyl projects, Robert Manley, said he enjoys working in vinyl because of the texture and shape of the material. "However, that doesn't mean I'll be in this forever. I'll work in whatever area I'm interested in at that moment."

Joseph Pacheco, another exhibitor, is displaying canvases which have open areas within them.

——Happenings on the Hill——

THURSDAY

DRAFT COUNCILING — Session sponsored by LAW STUDENTS CIVIL RIGHTS Research Council and S.U. Draft Counciling Service in room 101 White Hall from 7-9 p.m.

STUDENT SENATE - emergency session at 7 p.m. in Maxwell Aud. Topic of Discussion will be the possibility of undergraduate student membership in the University Senate. Dr. Stern, Chairman of the University Senate Committee on Students will be the guest speaker.

OBOE RECITAL at 8:30 p.m. in Crouse College Auditorium. Miss Patricia Sharpe, senior in the School of Music Education, will give the recital.

UJB - 7:30 p.m. Chapel House.

S.U. SOCCER CLUB and JUNIOR PRE-MED and PRE-DENT Students have both scheduled meetings for 207 HL at 7 p.m. GOOD LUCK! (Ed note-Do they plan on kicking teeth in?)

PSYCHOLOGY GRAD STUDENTS meeting at 8 p.m.

WATSON ACADEMIC COMMITTEE - 8 p.m. in Watson Lounge. Slides and Movies of West Africa by Resident Advisor Meldorf.

IMPORTANT GREEK WEEK Meeting at 7:15 at Tri-Delt. All Committee Chairmen and House Representatives please attend.

THETA SIGMA PHI mandatory initiation begins at 6:30 p.m If you cannot attend call Jill at X2639.

FORESTERS - Tri-State contestants meeting 7:30 p.m. room 11, Illick Hall.

FRIDAY

MARRIAGE ITALIAN STYLE with Sophia Loren and Marcello Mastroianni at 7 and 9 p.m. in Kittredge Auditorium. $1.00 Admission.

GRAD STUDENTS Pot-Luck Supper 6-8 p.m. at Chapel House. Baby Sitting provided by Lutheran Campus Ministry.

FORESTERS - Tri-State team. Final Time Trials Saturday and Sunday 2 p.m.

BOAR'S HEAD Dramatic Honorary presents Orson Well's production of MACBETH at 6, 8 and 10 at Kitteredge. Tickets available at door - $1.00.

PIANO RECITAL by Miss Jane Grim Music Senior at 8:30 in Crouse Auditorium.

GENERAL

SHAKESPEARE FILM FESTIVAL by the Boar's Head Dramatic Honorary will present Orson Well's "Macbeth" (April 12), Max Reinhart's "Midsummer Night's Dream" (April 19), and Oliver's "Hamlet" (May 3) at Kittredge. Season's Tickets for all three may be purchased at the commons in Slocum for $2.

SUICIDES ANONYMOUS Here to help you. 6 p.m. to 6 a.m. Monday to Friday. Call 422-1000.

LIBERAL ARTS Sophomores should file major cards, including departmental acceptances, with the Liberal Arts receptionist now! Additional cards can be obtained from the receptionist if the original cards have been lost by the student.

ALL STUDENTS who would like to act in an independent film, or have made films they would like to show call Stewart Comer X2940.

AMERICAN YOUTH HOSTELS 30 days in Europe by VW bus staying at youth hostels and inexpensive hotels. Contact Ron Cate, 469-6284, 841 Valley Drive.

PSYCOLOGY INVESTIGATION - Volunteers needed with a marked fear of harmless snakes. Contact Clinical Psychology Office, X3597.

The Big "O"

tOnight

nOw fOr the first time — Our free flicks are wide screen in full cOlOr.

bOOkings available fOr tgif's

Ursula Andrews, Woody Allen, Peter Sellers in

What's New Pussycat

Directed by Clive Donner

Saturday, April 12

7 and 9:15 P.M. Gifford Auditorium

Admission $1.00

Syracuse Film Academy

BIG $200,000.00

SALE

36 DEALERS TO CHOOSE FROM

If you like early American furniture, paintings, glass, or primitives, don't miss this big sale. All antiques and other items for sale at prices you can afford.

Mondore's Auto Auction Bldg.

5 miles south of Syracuse, on route 11.
Saturday, April 12th 10 A.M. to 9 P.M.
Sunday, April 13th 10 A.M. to 6 P.M.

Off Street Parking For Over 600 Cars.

ADMISSION 50¢

Restaurant Operated by the Knutsens, Leon and Lois Moody, 167 Parkway Dr., Syracuse, Managers.

IT LOOKS LIKE WE HAVE A "SLEEPER"!

The critics and audiences love this impudent tale of the sexologist, criminologist and Isabela, the nubile switchboard operator, and Ahmed her quiet lover, and other people . . .

"SUBTLE AND SOPHISTICATED SPOOF OF THE MODERN SEX COMEDY!" —Rosiy Crowther, New York Times

"A RICH AND MEMORABLE MOTION PICTURE!" —Joseph Morgenstern, Newsweek

"BOLD, SEXY, ARTISTIC!" —Archer Winsten, New York Post

"DELICIOUSLY SPICY AND CASUALLY FRANK!" —Kathleen Carroll, New York Daily News

Avala Films Presents LOVE AFFAIR... or the case of the missing switchboard operator.

Starring EVA RAS, RUZICA SOKIS, SLOBODAN ALIGRUDIC Directed by Dusan Makavejev A Brandon Films release

film forum

gifford auditorium
syracuse university

April 10th

7 & 9 P.M.

$1.00

Campus Classified

GR 6-5571, Ext. 2314

Rates minimum of 15 words:

1 day	1.15
2 days	2.25
3 days	3.30
4 days	4.30
5 days	5.25
6 days	6:15

To place a classified ad. call GR 6-5571, ext. 2314, between 1 and 3 p.m. Ad must be placed 2 days in advance. Every word over 15 costs 5c extra per day.

ALL ADS MUST BE PREPAID.

MISCELLANEOUS

RENT if you can't buy! T.V.s, tape recorders, typewriters. By week, month or semester. Reasonable rates. S. U. BOOKSTORE, GR 6-5541, x 2426.

FRAME your works of art at unbeatable prices at S. U. BOOKSTORE. Also signs and posters. In the Art Dept., 303 University Pl.

ALTERATIONS DONE within 24 hours. Call for an appointment. Lillian Potter. 207 Comstock. 478-5847.

PRIVATE DRIVING LESSONS — automatic or standard shift. Full or refresher courses. Qualified professional instructors. Pickup service. Auto Driving Academy. GR 6-3995.

FLY TO EUROPE and back this summer by jet for only $215.00 round-trip. If interested contact Prof. William Courtney at Eisenhower college in Seneca Falls, N. Y. 13148) or call (315) 568-5769 evenings who will give full details and forward number of applications requested.

FOR SALE

1963 FORD convertible. 6 cylinder standard. $350.00. Phone 446-1777.

SUNBEAM ALPINE '67 convertible. Excellent condition. 5 year warranty. Good tires. 422-9679 after 4 p.m.

OUT OF PRINT BOOKS. The Country Bookstore. Manlius 682-6402. Open evenings and Saturday.

FOR RENT

FURNISHED 3 ROOM APARTMENT. Near University. Available for immediate occupancy. Call Nancy Sellers. 478-2620.

2 MILES WEST OF CAMPUS — 3 large rooms, furnished, air conditioned, about $120 including all utilities. Best hours 8 a.m. or 10 p.m. Mr. Vernon 475-3790.

FURNISHED APARTMENT — HENRY STREET — 2 blocks from Campus. Kitchenette. 1 bedroom. living room, complete bath with shower. Downstairs. 2 private entrances. off street parking. $110.00 per mo. Call 422-5564-days 476-1481 - evenings and weekends.

ROOM, with kitchen privileges, very close. $50.00. GR 6-3151 x257, 446-6451. 478-5380.

WANTED

SUMMER JOBS: Counselors, private boys' camp: college men of above average physical fitness and judgment: tripping, canoeing, campcraft, archery, riflery, crafts driver: Love of out-of-doors and children essential. Adirondacks Swim Camp. 39 Mill Valley Road. Pittsford, N. Y. 14534.

TYPING

THIRTY YEARS EXPERIENCE. Dissertations, term papers, proof-read. Satisfaction guaranteed. Mrs. Raymond Webb. HE 7-8259.

DIANE WALLACE. 472-2115. Theses dissertations and term papers. IBM electric. 40c per page. 5c copy. Multilith. 45c.

TAKE YOUR MANUSCRIPT to the only professional typing and printing service serving the S. U. area. The knowledge and experience of having done over 2,000 theses and dissertations is behind every job we turn out. Stephanie's Office Service. 469-2795.

TYPIST experienced in thesis, dissertations, and term papers. Electric typewriter. Shirley Savlov. 446-2999 or x2441.

Austerlitz stars

Orange stickmen win four straight

By ED AGRANOWITZ

"If we don't get cocky and big headed and we continue to work hard, we're going to have a helluva year."

Those were Syracuse Lacrosse coach Roy Simmons' thoughts yesterday as his high flying Orangemen were assembling for their first outdoor practice session of the spring at Hookway Tract.

After the spirited SU stickmen had ripped through four tough mid-western teams in five days, last week no one could argue with Simmie.

The Orange disposed of Ohio Wesleyan, 11-3, Denison, 9-6, Ohio State, 9-5, and Kenyon, 10-1, and in doing so beat "four fine lacrosse teams," according to Simmons.

With high scoring Verne Doctor on the sidelines with a damaged finger, the Orange showed a balanced attack with six players hitting the nets three or more times.

Midfielder Mark Austerlitz set the pace with nine goals and was followed by attackmen Leo Nolan (6) and Jeff Davis (5) and middies Ron Doctor (4), Dick George (3), and Jim Smith (3). Nolan was the leader in assists with 6 while Davis and Doctor each had 5.

The opener against Ohio Wesleyan was never in doubt as Syracuse jumped to a 3-1 first quarter lead (goals by Nolan and Austerlitz, 2) and coasted home.

Against defending Midwest champ Denison, the Orange parlayed a strong third quarter into their closest call of the week. Holding a slim 5-4 halftime lead, SU spurted to an 8-4 lead on scores by Doctor, Rick Travis, and Nolan.

Ohio State was next, the team's third game in as many days. "They had a tremendous goalie," says Simmie, "and that's what kept them in the game. We really missed Verne here because he can beat a good goalie."

With the score tied 5-5 late in the fourth quarter, Simmons inserted Austerlitz, normally a middie, into the crease position on attack. With 3:41 to go, Mark responded with the tie-breaker and quickly added another goal, both on Nolan assists. Tom Varley and Jeff Davis added scores to ice the game.

"After the Ohio State game was our day of rest," says Simmons, "and boy did we need it. Against Kenyon the next day, our kids were higher 'n a kite."

The Orange settled the issue early, building a 6-0 lead in the first quarter. The game was played in a steady downpour and slowed both teams.

"It was a real fine trip," says Simmie, "The boys realized they must go all out to beat good teams and they improved each game."

"The defense did a masterful job," he continued, Cliff Ensley, John Scipione, and Ethan Clausner were all outstanding. And Butch Brown did a great job in goal."

Simmie also praised Chris Stringer, Tony Lappi and Dick Polgren for outstanding play as the Orange extra man defense. "On two occasions against Denison we had three men in the penalty box and they didn't score," says Simmons.

"The defense was real tough," agreed Butch Brown. "They were rubilating."

The Orange will play three more road games starting with Penn State next Saturday before opening at home with Hobart, April 30.

Verne Doctor's doctor has given him the go-ahead for the Penn State game and the Orange All-American has whipped himself into shape by running.

When someone good-naturedly remarked to Verne that his brother Ron was now the number one Doctor on the team, Verne flashed a wide smile and said, "We'll have to change that against Penn State next week."

JUNIOR MIDFIELDERS Mark Austerlitz, Jim Smith, and Dick George played big parts in the Orangemen's four game sweep last week. George filled in for Verne Doctor on attack and Austerlitz led the team in scoring as the threesome combined for 15 goals.

FIREBALLING RIGHT HANDER JOHN MARTELL blazes one homeward during practice session yesterday at Lancaster Field. Martell fanned 12 batters while walking only three to pick up the win as SU blasted Georgetown, 10-2, in the season opener. (Photo by Clemens)

Southern trip nets one win, two losses for diamondmen

By DAN SCHLOSSBERG
Associate Editor

Syracuse University's baseball team faces Buffalo next Wednesday a little older, a little wiser, and with a 1-2-1 record for the young 1969 season.

Coach Andy Mogish's charges hit highs and lows on a five-game southern trip shortened to four by steady rain at Maryland four days ago. The high was the opening day 10-2 rout of Georgetown, while the low was a 13-0 whitewash at the hands of George Washington.

In between, Greg Lowe lost a possible no-hitter when another downpour ended a 0-0 SU-American University stalemate after five innings and Navy eeked out a 3-2 bottom-of-the-nineth victory against lanky righthander Mike Barlow.

The big hitters, catcher John Unger and first-baseman John Massis, were in good form at Georgetown but did not repeat their opening day showing during the remainder of the trip.

Unger, a highly touted 6-4, 230-pound sophomore, batted in four of the 10 runs at Georgetown and got two hits in three trips.

He also helped execute a double steal that plated Joe St. Mary with one of two Syracuse tallies in the Navy game, but one play later the slugging receiver was out trying to score from second on Jay Halprin's single. The play, which occurred in the eighth inning, would have broken a 2-2 deadlock had it succeeded.

St. Mary, who is now playing shortstop after floating between catcher and the infield last season, slugged two triples and had one RBI in the game but SU didn't do much else with Navy starter Dennis Losh, who fanned 16 batters.

A triple and single in the bottom of the ninth pinned the defeat on Barlow (0-1).

Massis, who will be the regular firstbaseman when he doesn't have to attend spring football practice, had a pair of safeties in the Georgetown romp, including a triple and three RBIs, but cooled off in the other games.

Outfielders Steve Naum and Bob Clary contributed doubles in the Georgetown game but they, like the rest of the offensive attack, didn't have as much luck against Navy or GW.

"It was just one of those days," said coach Andy Mogish of the embrassing affair at GWU.

Starter Dave Stone (0-1), only lefthander in the four-man starting rotation, and reliever Dave DeLuca, also a sophomore, couldn't hold the good-hitting Colonials.

But coach Mogish was encouraged with the work of his veteran hurlers. John Martell (1-0), whose 7-2 mark paced the staff a year ago, fanned 12 and walked only three in his route-going performance at Georgetown. And Greg Lowe, who will face Buffalo Wednesday, struck out seven in the five no-hit innings he worked at American.

Barlow (0-1), in a losing cause, pitched a strong game, according to the coach, and also went the distance.

Although the 1969 spring trip was not as successful as last year's (the team won four out of six in 1968), Coach Mogish is pleased with the team's development.

"I saw a lot of good things. This is a close-knit crew. You'll see it when we play."

DAN'S DATA: Mogish says he'll stick with his starting eight of Brian Mihalik, Naum and Clary in the outfield and Jim Gordon, St. Mary, Chris Albergo, and Massis from third to first in the infield. St. Mary and Gordon shared the catching on the '68 team . . . Unger, who hit .444 with the frosh last year, was awarded the No. 1 catching job this season. His performance at Georgetown seems to justify the move . . . The coach also plans to stick with his Big Four pitching rotation of Martell, Lowe, Barlow, and Stone. . . WAER's Sports Director Steve Nash says there will be a postgame show this season. The first broadcast will be at 2:55 a week from tomorrow, when SU faces RPI.

SU gridders open drills, main problem on defense

By MIKE WEBER
Sports Editor

The SU football team will begin spring drills today in preparation for their 80th season of intercollegiate competition. The practice sessions will culminate in the annual intra-squad game slated for May 10th in Archbold Stadium.

The big problem which faces coach Ben Schwartzwalder can be summed up in one word: Defense. With six starters on defense being lost to the graduation ranks, plus the loss of tough middle guard Ron Womack for medical reasons, there seems much to worry about.

If Lou Gubitosa can bounce back from surgery which has left him barely resembling the All-East defensive end he was last season, he and Ray White will be counted heavily upon to bolster the defensive line which may be liberally sprinkled with sophomores.

On the bright side of the ledger is the offense, completely intact except for graduating John Bulicz. Big fullback Al Newton, who is reporting to spring drills bigger than he should be, heads the list of returnees. He will be hard-pressed for the starting nod by Mike Chlebeck and soph Marty Januskiewicz.

Also returning is last season's second leading rusher, tailback John Godbolt. However, Godbolt is currently listed behind Billy Knox on the pre-spring charts.

Paul Paolisso is the first string quarterback as of now with Randy Zur listed as his back-up. Ron Trask will also spend the spring as a signal caller. Rich Panczyszyn is being moved to a defensive safety position in the major experiment of the spring.

Also expected to add punch to a fine offense will be the battle for wingback involving senior Lee Castner and soph, Greg Allen. Castner turned in some fine performances last season while Allen runs the 100 yard dash in 9.8 seconds and his elusive running technique is a real crowd-pleaser.

Billy Knox, who has never quite lived up to his potential, could be ready to make the big move this time around. The fact that he is listed ahead of Godbolt could be a great psychological lift for the junior tailback.

Schwartzwalder's chief aim this spring will be to return the zing to the SU running game. He feels that with all the concentration on the passing game a year ago, the rushing game fell apart.

Apparently, a return to three yards etc. is in the offing.

DAILY ORANGE

Syracuse University's Daily Newspaper Since 1903

Vol. 67, No. 86 Syracuse, New York, Friday, April 11, 1969 10 Cents

Elections set amid controversy

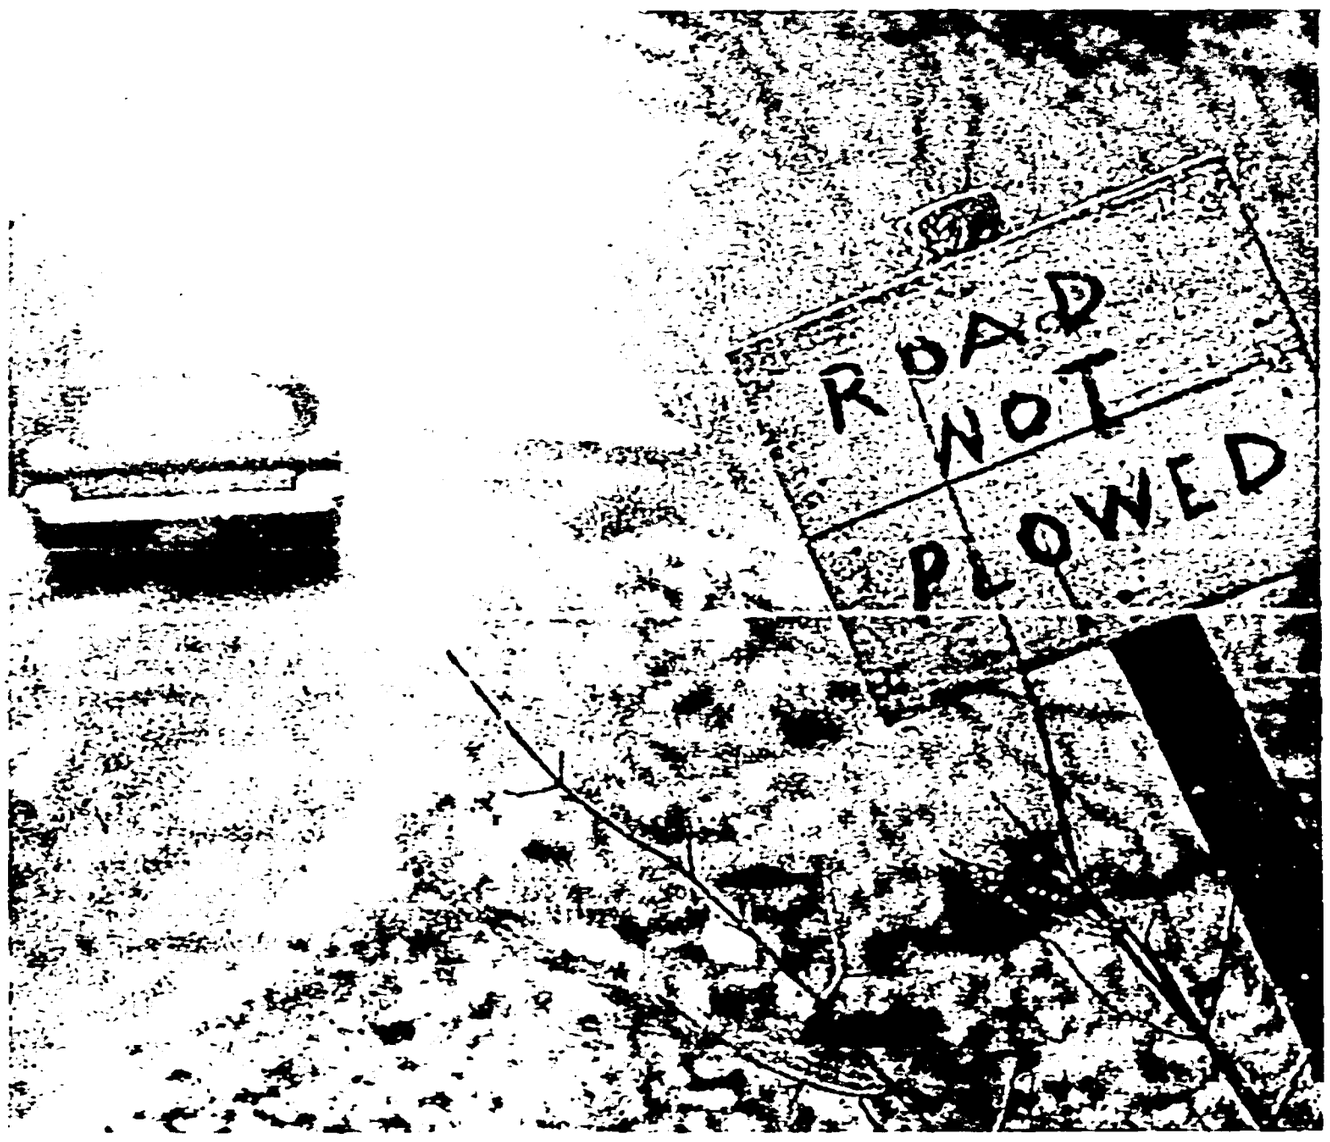
Parties claim surprise date changes leave GIA, Ifshin unprepared; page 5

Barton Committee Challenged

Hicks Questions
Barron's disqualification; pg. 5

Students in Faculty Senate?

Stern speaks at emergency meeting of student senate; pg. 12



'Wonderfulness' here Sunday

Bill Cosby concert scheduled; 'Fat Albert' rides again; pg. 4

Make your own peace

THIS PROMOTIONAL POSTER for the Peace Corps is being distributed nationally as a public service advertisement by the Young and Rubicam agency. In conjunction with next week's Peace Corps recruiting here and the recently-completed VISTA campaign, the Daily Orange is presenting a special section on the two service programs. See pages 7-10.

STUDENTS DRIVING in last spring's automobile rallies encountered the vestigial signs of winter (above) as they navigated the bucolic back roads of Central New York. Competitors will roll again this Sunday at 1 p.m from Manley Field House. Drivers must register there with the Universitas Touring and Rallye Association between 11 a.m and 1 p.m at $4 per car. The event, which will cover a course over country roads, is open to all types of automobiles.

SU parent group meets in New York, praises University's success, flexibility

By VIC LIVINGSTON

The Syracuse University Parents Association of Greater New York, at their latest annual meeting, unanimously approved a suggestion that University issues be handled through a four-way dialogue involving Administration, students, parents and faculty.

The one hundred parents who attended the meeting, seeking a responsible role as members of the University community, plan to use the organization as an appropriate vehicle to voice their opinions concerning University affairs. Concern was expressed that parent's views must not be overlooked.

The New York group included a representative number of parents of black and white students. The Association praised the University for its tradition and success in seeking support from all sectors of the community. Members compared SU favorably to other universities and the group praised student restraint and Administrative flexibility.

The parents agreed that responsibility for their children is binding while their offspring attend SU, and discounted placing the blame for "kids in trouble" with the University.

Herbert Monkmeyer, SU 1935 Valedictorian, DO Editor, and parent of an SU undergraduate, was the keynote speaker. He praised SU as a "pioneering" institution:

"Syracuse is having less trouble than most of our American universities....SU is pioneering, as it has since it began, and is way ahead of all the others in this field of university-parent relations, just as it was ahead of its time in the field of coeducational instruction. What many of the Ivy League schools are abandoning today--educational segregation of the sexes--SU has never had to abandon because it never accepted it."

Co-ed dorms were among the topics of discussion at the meeting. Dr. Allen C. Best, liason officer between the University and parents suggested that perhaps more parents were in favor of co-ed dorms than students. However, other parents at the meeting violently objected to the possibility of bringing unmarried students of both sexes into the same sleeping areas.

Edward Welles, a private-school representative observing the meeting, praised SU for "bringing the University to the parents."

By Lew Howell

Radicals spurred rise of moderates

There has been a surge of articles lately dealing with the rise of the anti-radicals and students who negotiate peaceably with university administration. Most of the commentary, however, takes a position that the new more-moderate groups have risen in reaction to--rather than with the help of--the radical left. Such a position is something of a distortion. And what might be seen as a semantical difference has, in actuality, much to do with forming a realistic perspective on American student radicalism

Time magazine came closest to understanding this in its Essay several weeks ago when it stated: "Pseudo-revolutionary activity sometimes does bring results. Often it has a shock value that awakens complacent citizens to their responsibilities. The very intensity of radical words and deeds communicates a desperate message to less—tormented souls. No doubt the uprising at Columbia University finally jolted the administration into an awareness

Time went on to add that radical activity occasionally does have a reverse effect and can result in repressive legislation. While this is true, it tends to detract from an important point. Five years ago university response to student requests was virtually non-existent. Administrations did not need to respond to students and had nothing to fear when they did not. The situation has, however, changed. Why?

At Syracuse University recently, we have seen an example of two types of administration response to student grievances--one in the traditional manner of ignoring students, the other in a positive response which showed an awareness of both the legitimacy in some of the complaints and requests and of potential student disruptive power. The latter response should be commended for both its rationale and its generosity. But if the grievances are legitimate today, it is likely that they were legitimate five years ago.

We may criticize the motivation of individuals in the radical movements, and most students have an aversion to the violent tactics of the student radical left. But that violence has served a purpose. It has provided a degree of respectability for the students who do not employ it, no matter how radical their course may seem Short of violence, it has now become both safe and productive to "demand" changes from the administration. Consequently, even without violence, this has resulted in success for the student "militant moderates," as has been the case at Syracuse.

Perhaps this is for the best. It must only be remembered that without the radical left, "moderation" would have a totally different hue. Moreover, without the past experience of the university system with student violence, today's "demands" from moderates would be as unacceptable to administrators as they were in the past. Thus, while it obviously is both opportune and productive now to avoid violence in negotiations with university administrations, at the same time we should avoid being sanctimonious about having succeeded where violent rebels have failed. Without violent rebels, we too would have failed.

ITHACA COLLEGE • FOUNDED 1892 •

SUMMER SESSION 1969

"On Campus" Program

IN THE HEART OF THE FINGER LAKES

"ON CAMPUS"

FIRST SUMMER SESSION (Undergraduate Only) June 9 July 12

Intersession (Graduate Studies) June 30 July 12

SECOND SUMMER SESSION (Undergraduate & Graduate) July 14 August 16

Ithaca College's new campus offers excellent opportunities for college students at all levels in the following areas:

- Natural Sciences • Social Sciences
- Humanities • Communication Arts
- Music • Physical Education

Ithaca College

Call (607) 274 3144 or write for Information Brochure
Director of Summer Sessions, S S 200
Ithaca College, Ithaca, New York 14850

JAM FACTORY

FRIDAY 9-1

CAMPUS INN — SUBURBAN PARK

MANLIUS (15 Minutes From Campus, Route 92)

THE LIMBO, OR

"THE PRICE DECLINE SALE" CONTINUES AT THE

the Record Runner

Buy 1st Album at $2.99
2nd at $2.89
3rd at $2.79, etc.
*Limit: 6 per customer

Record Runner

ANGUS H. TWOMBLY — Editor-in-Chief

MANAGING EDITOR— Alan Stamm EDITORIAL DIRECTOR— Karen Wiediger NEWS EDITOR— Fred Tuccillo COPY EDITOR— Jean Havens FEATURE EDITOR— Roz Mazer SPORTS EDITOR— Mike Weber EXECUTIVE EDITOR— David A. Ross CAMPUS AFFAIRS EDITOR— Larry Kramer PHOTOGRAPHY EDITOR— Clint Clemens ASSOCIATE EDITORS— Andrij Bilyk, Kay Christensen, Beth Hillson, Rona Kavee, Helene Macdonald, Charles Shapiro, Dan Schlossberg, Patti Williams, Roni Zlokower,

DAILY ORANGE

Syracuse University's Daily Newspaper Since 1918

Friday, April 11, 1969 page 3

STEVEN P. STROBRIDGE — Business Manager

ASSISTANT BUSINESS MANAGER— Art Depasqua, NATIONAL ADVERTISING MANAGER— Janet Meyer ACCOUNT EXECUTIVES— Roger Black, Jim Maney, Mike Greenstein.

Published Tuesday, through Friday during the academic year by students of Syracuse University. Offices located at 200 Brooklea Drive, Fayetteville, N.Y., and 1101 East Adams St., Syracuse, New York. Entered as Second Class matter at the U.S. Post Office, Fayetteville, N.Y. 13066.

Fair elections

The Campus Alliance Party has received a virtual endorsement by the Elections Commission.

By changing the date of the election twice, the commission has not given the other parties a chance to prepare their campaigns. While CAP is ready because of a well oiled machinery, the shortcomings of the other parties have been exaggerated by an indecisive Elections Commission unable or unwilling to deal with the reality of campaign logistics and too anxious to succumb to the irrelevant and irrational argument presented to the Commission Wednesday night.

Before spring vacation the Commission postponed the election and some parties were only too willing to change their schedules. Now that vacation is over, the candidates are told that there will be a return to the old date even though it will leave these same candidates unprepared.

When the conventions were held, the Commission indicated this election would be the "cleanest and the fairest ever held in the history of the school." It sounded a bit pious and highminded then, and it is ridiculous now.

The Commission's priorities and judgement in reducing the integrity of the election that may choose a real leader to a necessary evil that must be cleared up before the overplayed hurrah of Greek Week shows questionable fidelity to its purpose and a disgusting lack of reasoning ability.

Nix on Greek Week. The Commission has blown an integral part of its job. Regardless of any action by University Judicial Board, the election is off to a blunderous and tainted beginning.

The University Judicial Board decided early this morning not to hear the appeal to have the date of the elections changed. It also reversed the Elections Commission's decision to bar Ed Barron from his candidacy. The $325 fine levied against the Greek Independent Alliance will be maintained, with half of it being paid now and the rest by the time of next year's elections. Details and comments will appear in Tuesday's Daily Orange.

Elections: Part II

The Elections Commission has given a second cause for indignation and student disdain at its mere existence in ruling Ed Barron ineligible to run for the SG vice presidency. In doing so, the Commission has given rise to three important questions.

First, it appears that the Commission questioned not only Barron's motives but his qualifications to run, as his experience in campus affairs has centered on dorm life and dorm activities. That alone is an absurd ruling as dorm issues are among the most pressing on the SU campus.

Second, the present vice president of SG had less experience with campus issues at the time of his election than the disqualified Barron now offers. That is not to question the ability of Jeff Portnoy, but only to point out the absurdity of the Commission's decision. It has been more than willing and almost eager in the past to waive the ridiculous SG experience requirement to give candidate their eligibility. It is an unnecessary burden to the electoral process anyway.

Third, the controversy around the decision gives rise to questions of the legitimacy of the Commission's right to deem candidates acceptable anyway. Let the voter's do it at the polls. Elections Commission should safeguard the elections procedure, not inhibit it. No matter what the UJB finally decides, the Elections Commission has dealt Barron an injustice.

Letters

Since when has the elections commission been instructed by God to decide what students can do and what they cannot do? Ed Barron decided to seek the Vice-Presidency of Student Government through the recognized political channels. He failed to obtain a party nomination and felt so strongly about what must be done on this campus that he felt obliged to do all he could. So he now seeks the Vice-Presidency as an independent, without political and financial support from a party. More people like Ed Barron are needed on this campus - people who refuse to knuckle under to an absurd political party system on campus and take their cause to the students.

The student body, and not the elections commission, should decide whether Barron's conception of the Vice-Presidency is the kind they favor. A Democratic system is one where any qualified man may run for any office he chooses - but at SU this right is trampled by an elections commission that plays God. No one has a right to keep Barron from running as an independent, especially because of his conception of the office he seeks.

Student Government should pay more attention to dorm councils than itself. Dorm councils, particularly Barron's, have accomplished great things this year. Student government has accomplished nothing. The direction student government should take should be decided by the voters, not by an elections commission that would deny Barron his rights simply because they disagree with him.

Bruce Chadwick

Is there a need?

EDITOR'S NOTE: The column appearing below was written in response to the article "Course arms re-stated" which appeared March 27. Ronald R. Cavanagh is an assistant professor in the Department of Religion.

Ideally there should be no need to establish an Afro-American Studies Program at an American university of high standing. Studies in the relevant areas of Black life, arts, music and community organizations should have been an integral part of the university's general curriculum. Actually this has not generally been the case. Heightened and intensive consideration of the areas of study cited above would, I think reveal a degree of discontinuity significant enough to warrant the consideration of establishing a new department within the university.

A consideration of the degree of discontinuity implied in the program of a proposed department is essential for the assessment of the "creative novelty" to be gained through its actualization. Also relevant is the recognition that a correlate of this criterion is significant autonomy for that department. The actualization of a new university department totally controlled by rubrics developed for programs now in existence is a basic self-contradiction. However, it is the discussion of this last point which reveals the need for additional criteria to assess the justification of any new program at the university.

Discontinuity alone does not justify the addition of a new program. In fact it may well have been the "nature of the discontinuity" which lead the Liberal Arts faculty to suggest the removal of R.O.T.C. and A.F.R.O.T.C. from its College. It is the additional criterion of continuity which gives content to the phrases "significant discontinuity" and "creative novelty." A significant addition to the University will contribute, I think, when the uniquenesses of its program are responses to elements and stimuli of the existing university community.

It is my opinion that the proposed A-A.S.P. can meet the dual criteria suggested above. Yet, there were two areas noted in the recent article for which I would like to see further clarification. It was stated that a major aim of the new program would be to "...give Black students relevant information which they can take back to their communities, making them a positive force in community development and helping them to identify with their African roots." It would appear that the clarity and effectiveness of this statement might be increased by indicating in what ways the proposed department would guard against any tendency for it to become a tool of political propaganda or a catechism class for one segment of the University community. The past history of some departments of religion makes this concern an obvious one to me.

Ronald R. Cavanagh

Secondly, I see the need for a clarification of the limits of the autonomy of the chairman of the proposed department. The article states that the chairman "...will administer the program, decide degree requirements and recruit faculty with the help of a committee of Black students and faculty." If this statement implies that the procedures to govern each of the areas cited will be placed outside the existing rubrics of the university, then I must conclude that the degree of discontinuity is divisive and can have demonic significance with respect to the integrity of the University community as a whole.

It is hoped that the further clarification sought will be easily available to the readers of the Daily Orange.

Respectfully,
Ronald R. Cavanagh
Assist. Prof.
Department of Religion

'Right . . .'

Bill Cosby: 'a very funny fellow'

Temple University lost one of its varsity gridders when comedian Bill Cosby decided that he'd rather tackle show business.

After two years at the school on an athletic scholarship, and after two years of deciding he'd rather make money than grades, Bill left the institution of higher learning for the institution of higher earning.

Cosby ran through the field of small niteries until his reputation for wit caught up with him. The Gaslight in Greenwich Village booked him for several nights, during which time a New York Times reporter "discovered" him. His career had been kicked off.

However, Bill returned briefly to Temple. Invitations from other night clubs poured in and helped convince him to give show business a full-time try.

Hungry I

Soon after, Cosby found that he was playing at the leading clubs around the country, such as San Francisco's hungry i, Washington's Shoreham Hotel, New York's Basin Street East, Flamingo at Las Vegas and Harrah's Lake Tahoe. He also has appeared many times on TV's leading variety shows and in numerous one-nighters across the country.

Born in 1937, Bill's first comedy routine took place when he was in the fifth grade in Philadelphia. He entertained the class with an impromptu routine, which his teacher decided was worth presenting again for her benefit.

During high school, Cosby involved himself totally in athletics and devoted no time to academics. After repeating the 10th grade, he left the Philadelphia school system and joined the Navy. While serving aboard a destroyer, he pitched and rolled to a high-school diploma via correspondence courses.

Athletic Prowess

Due to his prominence in service athletics, Bill won an athletic scholarship to Temple. There, he worked his way through by tending bar at night, and providing his customers with a steady stream of comedy material. Many of them exhorted Cosby to give show business a fling. He always replied with his now famous drawnout acknowledgment -- right.

Cosby's humor has been etched in seven comdey albums, all of which have made the top twenty charts. The first was "Bill Cosby Is A Very Funny Fellow...Right!" followed shortly after by "I Started Out as a Child," for which he won the Grammy Award in the comedy division. Then came "Why Is There Air?," which sold more than 80,000 during the first three weeks of sales, and "Wonderfulness," proving to be his most popular to date. This was followed by "Revenge." His latest two are "To Russell, My Brother, Whom I Slept With" and "200 MPH."

BILL COSBY

For a period of months, the first four records were in the top 50 best-selling albums charts simultaneously, making Cosby the first comedian ever to achieve this distinction.

"I Spy"

Bill spent much of the past three years starring in the NBC-TV series "I Spy," in which he played a secret agent under the guise of a Rhodes Scholar.

He got the part when writer-actor Carl Reiner, who heard Cosby doing a comedy routine in a Pittsburgh nitery, introduced the funnyman to producer Sheldon Leonard. Leonard discussed the "I Spy" idea with Cosby, and from that his role was born.

Though the series took up the majority of Bill's time, he continued to cut new facets into his career while polishing the older ones.

His love for personal appearances has not flagged.

When Bill Cosby comes into the Syracuse War Memorial on Sunday, April 13, he will be bringing with him a varied assortment of characters.

Fat Albert

There will be Noah, building the ark right on stage. Old Weird Harold and Fat Albert will be there along with Bill's brother Russell. Bill might even bring his two daughters, Erika and Erinn. Yet only Bill Cosby will be on stage.

The audience will meet the others because Cosby is a story-teller par excellence. His tales are funny because, in them, everyone recognizes something of himself.

Anyone who, as a kid, has ever gone to a horror movie and been afraid to look, or remembers the fat kid on the block, or has used a bed as a trampoline, will see it all again.

"The Cos," through words, movements and a fantastic use of the microphone, brings memories to life.

Bill's special guest for the April 13 performance will be vocalist Rhetta Hughes. Rhetta appeared on the Tonight Show recently.

Singer Too

Cosby also ventured into the field of singing. His style is unique as evidenced by the fact that "Little Old Man," a single from his first singing album, "Silverthroat," captured the number three spot in pop music chartland. On the heels of this success, a second album was released, called "Hooray For The Salvation Army Band."

Radio has not been neglected. He stars in 350 five-minute comedy shows which air on stations in over 500 cities.

Bill Cosby will be back on weekly TV in the fall of '69, starring in his own half-hour series for NBC, portraying a teacher who moonlights in various areas in the city of San Francisco. As part of a $15 million deal between The Campbell, Silver, Cosby Corporation and NBC, CSC will also produce one one-hour Bill Cosby Special yearly, for five years. In addition, CSC will produce two half-hour animated specials based on characters from Cosby's childhood: "Fat Albert" and "Old Weird Harold."

On the personal side of Cosby's life, Bill married Camille while she was still a student at the University of Maryland. They live in Beverly Hills, and have two little girls. The Cosbys expect their third child in May of 1969.

Putting you first, keeps us first.

GM

Camaro SS Sport Coupe with Rally Sport equipment

Instant vacation.

Camaro—the Hugger

A lot of people have the idea that a vacation begins only when you get where you're going.

Obviously, they haven't vacationed in Camaro, the Hugger. You start relaxing the moment you come in contact with Camaro's contoured bucket seats. You feel snug without feeling stuffed in.

Now you're getting in the right frame of mind to consider some other attractions. Like Astro Ventilation in every model. And, road sense that gives you the feeling this is one car that knows its way around—anything.

Start your vacation early this year. The minute you step into a Camaro. Your Chevrolet dealer will make all travel arrangements.

CHEVROLET Sports-Recreation Dept.

Everson display of historical art starts run today

An exhibition of rare historical prints opens today for a month-long run at the Everson Museum of Art. A collection of noted woodcuts, etchings, engravings and lithographs depicts early printmaking in America from 1670 to 1820.

The Everson Museum will also house a May 1 to June 29 exhibition of works by Greek artist Nassos Daphnis. The one-man show of 50 paintings and sculptures displays Daphnis' "pure" color theory and his experimentation with such new medias as plastic, acrylic and wood constructions.

Campaign eve

Quick switch leaves two parties hunting

News Analysis

By LARRY KRAMER

Confusion and controversy will mark the official opening of the 1969 Student Government election campaign Sunday at noon.

The decision of the Election Commission Wednesday night to move the date of the election up from April 24 to April 17, which had been the original date, apparently leaves the Greek-Independent Alliance (GIA) and the independent slate headed by David Ifshin one week's time for two week's worth of preparation.

Just prior to spring vacation, the commission changed the election date from the 17th to the 24th. According to Ed Feldman, interim president of GIA, the extra week was badly needed for the party, which had it's entire executive board swept away by the convention scandal, to rebuild for the campaign.

Ifshin, also stated that the seven-day delay caused his slate to revise most of their preparation schedule.

Wednesday night however, with representatives of the Campus Alliance Party (CAP) concurring, the Election Commission suddenly switched back to the original date.

Both Ifshin and Feldman say their campaign materials will not be ready.

"You just made it a one-party election," Feldman told the commission.

Assessments of the Campus Alliance Party's readiness vary but it seems unlikely that they would have pushed so hard for the earlier date if they were not prepared to campaign.

The explanation given by the commission was basically the argument presented by Greek Week chairman Joe Nicoletti. Nicoletti, who was CAP's candidate for SG president a year ago, claimed there would be too much conflict of time and effort if the election campaign and Greek Week took place at the same time.

The commission meeting had even more in store for Ifshin's slate, revoking the candidacy of his vice-presidential mate Ed Barron.

The reasons given for Barrons rejection were vague. Officially the commission has announced that "He didn't meet the minimum elections commission requirements for two semesters of student government experience." However, the discussion concerning Barron at the elections commission meeting centered around his reported disrespect for the office he was aspiring to. In answering questions concerning a conflict between individual students and "leaders" Barron stated that he would follow the wishes of the students.

Commission members seemed to interpret the reply as "disrespect" for the office of SG vice-president.

But what actually occured was an unprecedented move by the Elections Commission. While in almost every other case where the lack of experience was evident, the rule was routinely waived for those individuals. The rarely, if ever, commission exercises the right not to waive the rule.

Going into the elections with the fewest problems will be the CAP. All the CAP candidates present were approved, and those absent expected little or no difficulty getting passed. One CAP candidate for senior-senator-at-large was, at first revoked, and later, after reconsideration, passed.

The Wednesday night elections commission fiasco resembled the annual goon-squad interviews. Candidates were put in hypothetical situations, questioned concerning trivia of the student senate and in one instance, the first question to greet a female senatorial candidate was "How's your body?" Despite the fact that this question came from a friend, it was very indicative of the questioning.

After the meeting, election commissioners, John Diamond, said, "90% of the kids in there weren't qualified. But better them than nothing at all."

As the election stands now there are four candidates for the office of SG President. Lou Jacobs (CAP), Howie Zwier (GIA), Dave Ifshin, and Josh Nadel (Prohibition).

CAP is running a full slate of officers, as is GIA. Four senior senator-at-large candidates have received the endorsement of both parties.

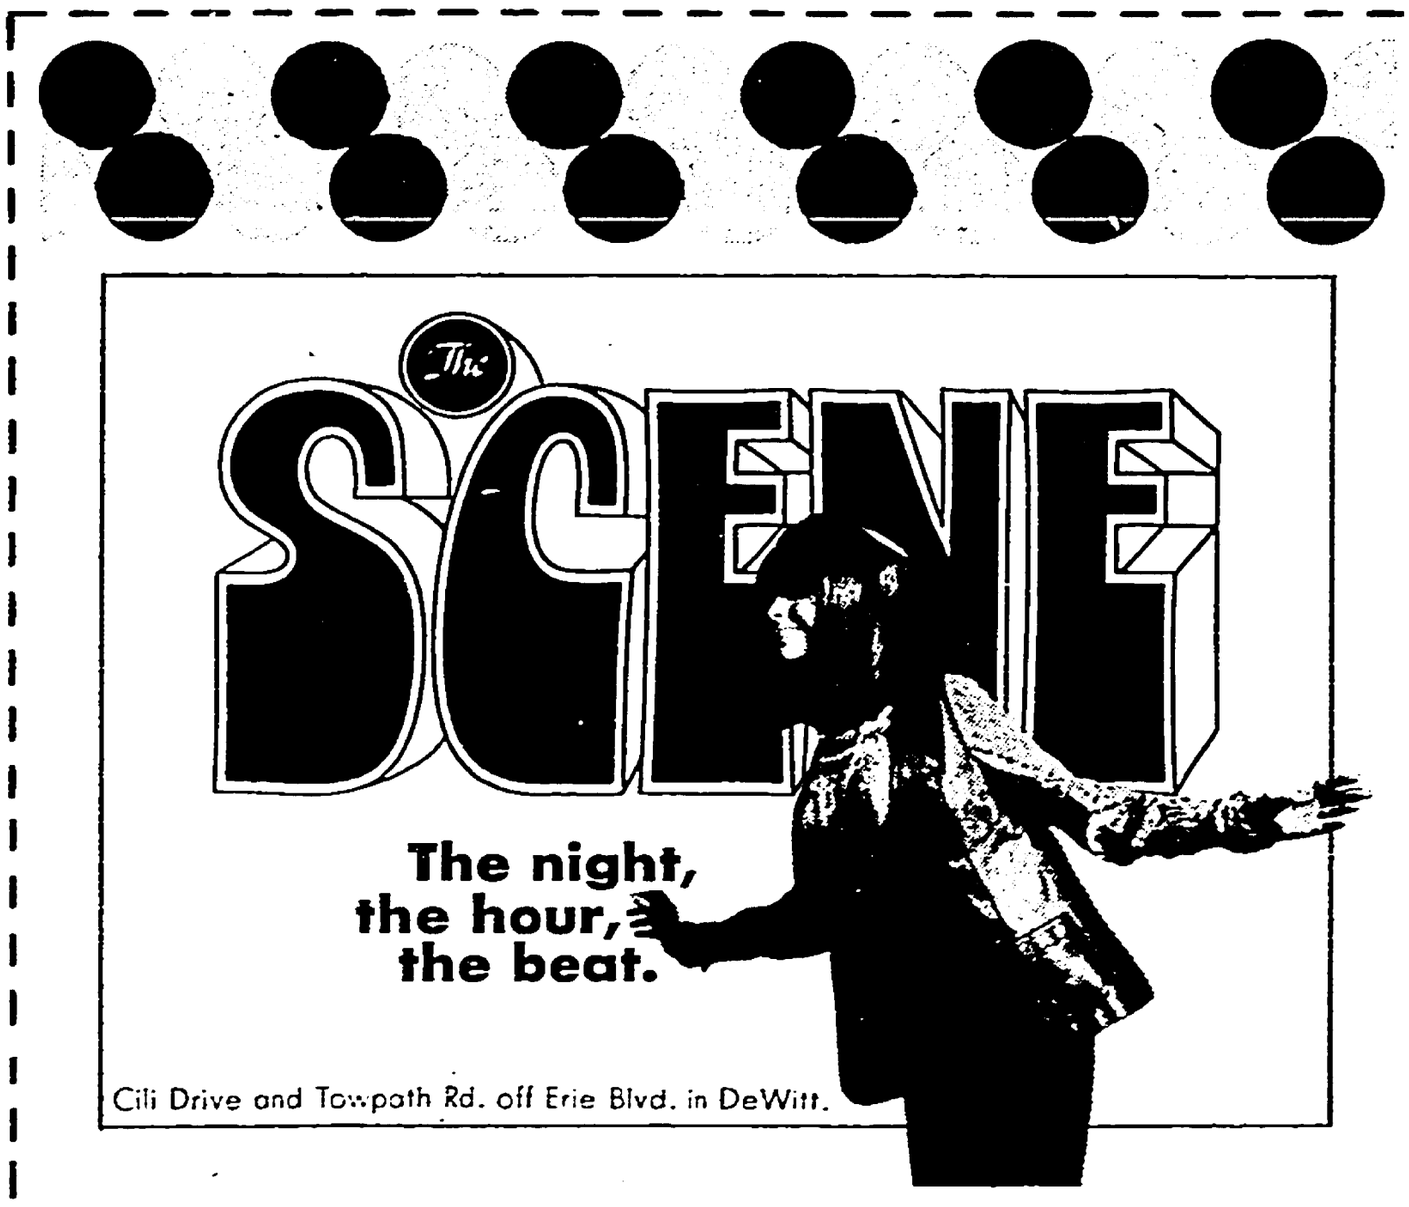
The indpendant slate, headed by Ifshin is running three SG candidates, all but VP, Barron's scheduled slot.

The Prohibition Party didn't have to appear before the elections commission because their platform calls for the abolition of the offices they are running for. They have candidates running in the junior and senior class elections, as well as a full slate for SG office.

Decision justified?

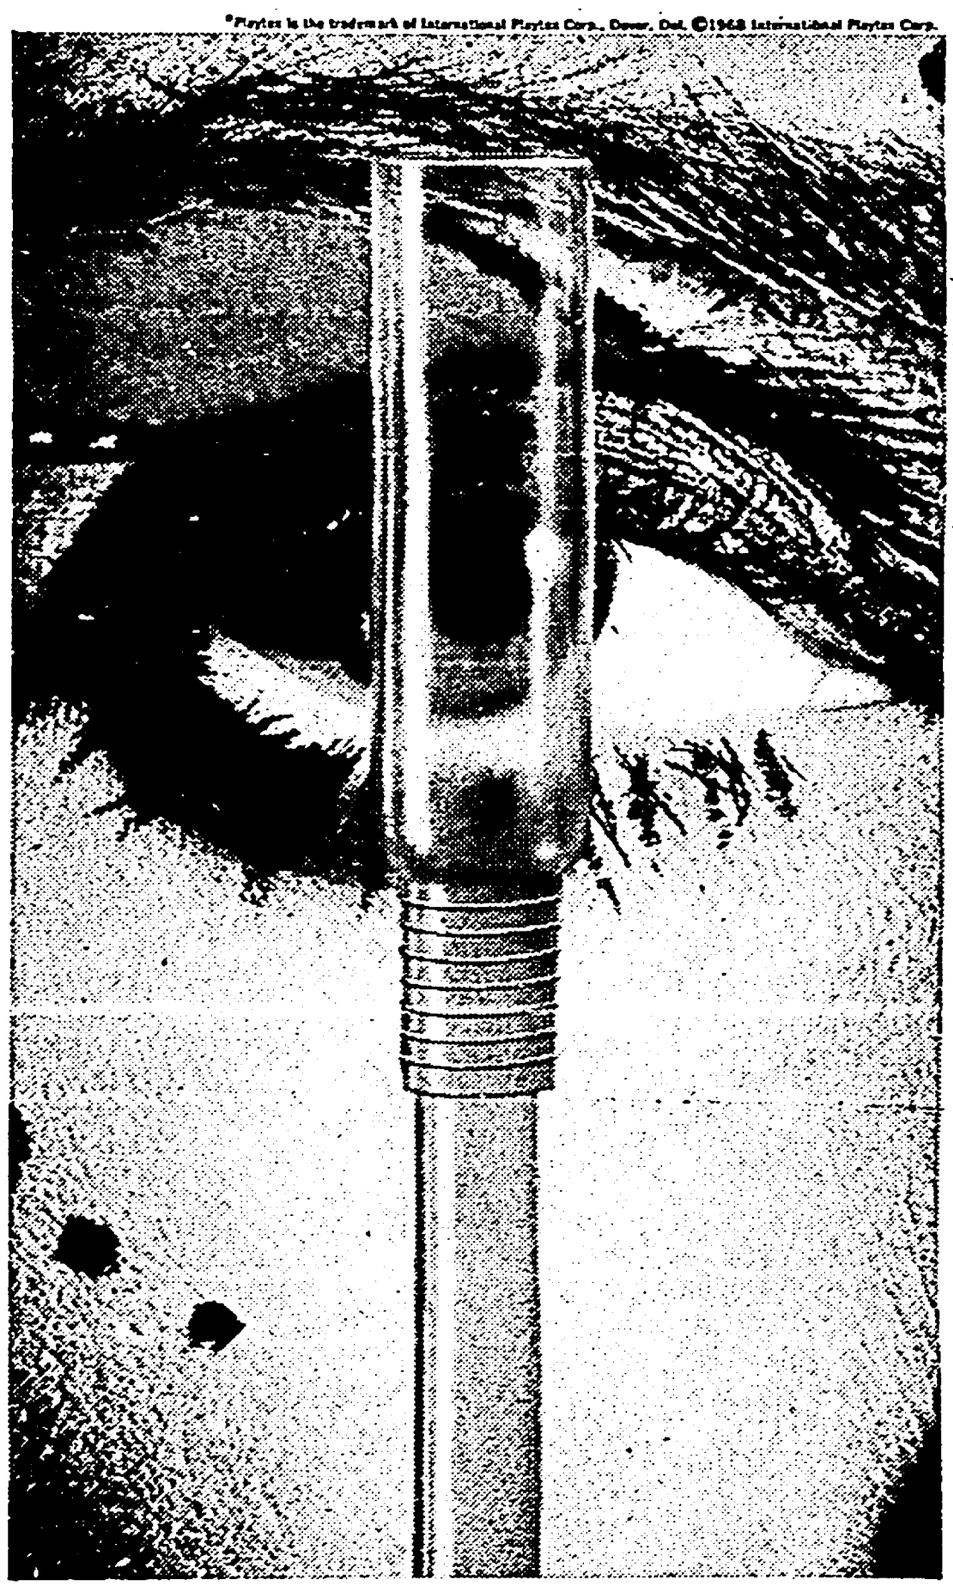
Hicks says Barron qualified

In a letter to the Elections Commission yesterday Chuck Hicks, president of Student Government, said he "was very disturbed that the elections commission voted not to allow Ed Barron, the independent candidate for vice-president, to run for that office."



In the letter Hicks said "It is my opinion that no one has the right to deny any candidate the right to run because his opinions differ from the election commission. Outlooks and issues should be decided by the student body, not the Elections Commission."

At the UJB meeting Dick Barton, chairman of the Elections Commission, recommended to the court that the decision of the elections commission be reversed "because of new information."



"Concerning his experience," Hicks continued, "Ed has worked with myself and the SG executive branch all this year. He has been president of St. Mary's for two semesters and has served on the IDC for two semesters. He is also working on the IDC autonomy evaluation board to extend autonomy to all living centers. He has attended almost all the senate meetings this year, and has written articles on the Council of Student Life, IDC, the University Judicial Board, and the new SG executive branch. Ed is also co-chairman of the Maxwell School Citizenship Conference which will grant 32 scholarships this year."

Hicks cautioned that his letter was an expression of opinion to the elections commission and not an endorsement of Barron.

Hicks also "urged the court to move the election date to April 20—24.

Don't forget Mini-Monday.
Admission: $1 for Guys
FREE admission to mini-skirted girls.
Prize of $25 for the girl in the best mini-skirt.

Playtex invents the first-day tampon™

(We took the inside out to show you how different it is.)

Outside: it's softer and silky (not cardboardy).
Inside: it's so extra absorbent...it even protects on your first day. Your worst day!

In every lab test against the old cardboardy kind... the Playtex tampon was always more absorbent. Actually 45% more absorbent on the average than the leading regular tampon.

Because it's different. Actually adjusts to you. It flowers out. Fluffs out. Designed to protect every inside inch of you. So the chance of a mishap is almost zero!
Try it fast.
Why live in the past?

playtex

Omega Psssi Phi Wins

Omega Psi Phi, intramural fraternity champs, last night won the all-University intramural basketball tournament with a 39-31 victory over Sadler 3, living center champions.

The loser's Chalmers Knight was game high scorer with 11 points, while Vincent Brown and Dennis Ashby each had 10 for the winners.

Sadler 3, down five points at the half, brought the game to within two points with less than two minutes to play, but Omega Psi Phi scored six quick points on two field goals and two foul shots to win by a comfortable margin.

Story and box score on page 16.

Photographs by Clint Clemens
Ron Davidson

PERSPECTIVE CLOSE-UP

Special supplement to the Daily Orange, April 11, 1969

Index

"Andrew Jackson didn't help".....page 8
Shalala: "Where are they now?".....page 8
Recruiters on campus.....page 9
VISTA film and commentary.....page 9
Mangin in Peru.....page 10
Ya wanna join?.....page 10

Feeling

The Peace Corps. In Micronesia, it's establishing credit unions and cooperatives. In Nepal, it's surveying trails and footbridges. In Upper Volta, it's urging mothers to improve nutrition and sanitary conditions for their youngsters.

VISTA. In East Harlem, it's chasing rats out of the kids' beds. On the Sababa Ranch migrant camp in Florida, it's stripping celery leaves. In Hawaii, it's teaching Hawaiian youth to face the twentieth century.

They're crawling all over campus--recruiters and their literature. VISTA was here before spring vacation. The Peace Corps will be on campus next Tuesday through Friday.

Several members of SU's faculty and staff were in the Peace Corps or VISTA from the start. They tell their story here. But they can't tell it all. The rewards are mostly feeling.

Peace Corps

"Your success as a Volunteer will not be measured simply in terms of completing the work assigned, but on your ability to communicate with the members of your community and to stimulate interest in solving problems through group action.

Much of the relevance of the Peace Corps experience must be described in terms of intangibles. As a Peace Corps Volunteer you will learn how to immerse yourself in the life of another culture. Participation in the life of a community new to you, on an equal basis with other members of the community, creates the opportunity to think and feel as they do. New sensitivity and awareness are generated that should ultimately lead to a better understanding of the world in which you live."

VISTA

"VISTA Volunteers listen and learn. They live locally--in the alley, in the hollow, on the reservation--with the poor from morning through night. They share their bread and their angers and their hopes. There is no red tape, no staff meetings. The problem the VISTA Volunteer learns of in the morning can be the one he acts on that afternoon. The poor define the problems. The VISTA Volunteer help find the solutions. If they don't they have no right to be there. The poor, we know, have no need for emissaries from the middle-class who have nice intentions, but no abilities. Once we thought we could make it with the merely well intentioned. We don't anymore."

Mr. and Mrs. Morgner

Peace Corps pair cherish human contact, caper in Chile

By TRISH MURRAY

During the first years of the Kennedy Administration, young idealists with the words, "Ask not what you country can do for you..." ringing in their ears, joined the Peace Corps en masse.

Often they found that the organizational groundwork had not been laid for them and they were forced to rely on their own inventiveness.

SU faculty members Fred and Ramona Morgner can speak with some authority about the Peace Corps' early years. They were members of the third group, and the first coed group, to be sent overseas.

The Morgners were, as a matter of fact, the first couple to become engaged in the Peace Corps, although they did not marry until both had finished their tours of duty and were back in the United States.

Morgner joined because he wanted to get in on something new and because he felt the commitment to change and potential for good reflected in the Kennedy administration. "Then, too," he adds, "there was a lot of indecision in my own life at 21."

Mrs. Morgner had spent a summer in Mexico and had seen the level of poverty at which some Latin Americans lived. She volunteered because she wanted to help these people.

The Morgners emphasize that many difficulties and inefficiencies they found in their Peace Corps experience were present because the Corps was at that time still a pilot project. "A number of Congressmen had come out against it," Mrs. Morgner recalls, "and people were still calling it the 'Kiddie Korps,' because they believed we were a group of young idealists going out to teach people things we didn't know ourselves."

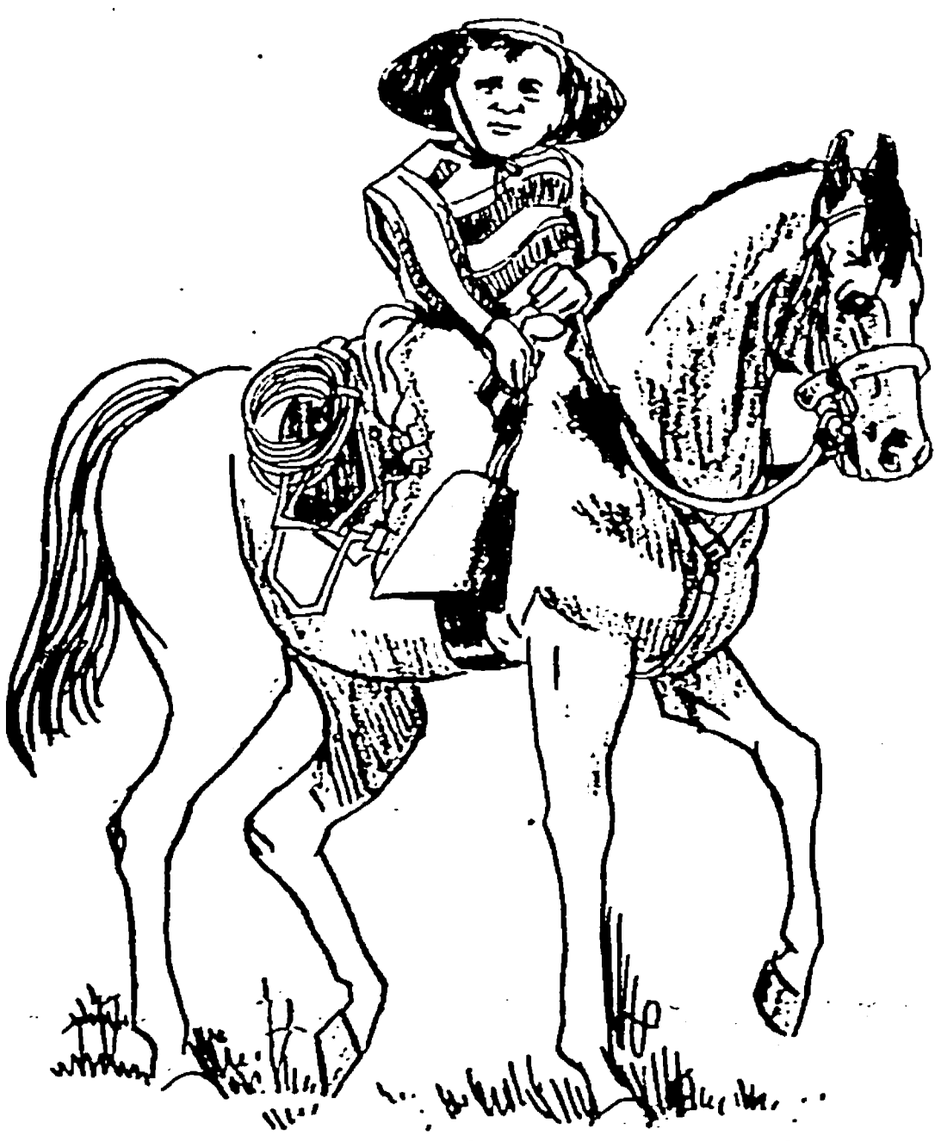
Peace Corps training was in an experimental stage when the first groups were sent to the University of Notre Dame. The emphasis was on Spanish culture and language, taught by native Chilean instructors, and on physical conditioning.

Morgner, now a history professor, comments that the most worthless aspect of training was the American history course, which was not oriented to Chilean experience. "The instructor got bogged down in westward expansion and Jacksonian democracy," he says. "The entire time I was in Chile, no one asked me about Andrew Jackson."

Mrs. Morgner, a home economics major graduate of the University of Idaho, was assigned to handle food supplies for two rural boarding schools at Rancaqua and Curico, in the central valley of Chile.

She planned menus, bargained for food in the Chilean markets, supervised cooks, and taught canning, which had to be done in old wine and beer bottles. She also served as a liason for the Red Cross and National Institute of Health, informing village people of the services available to them.

"As is often the case with Peace Corps volunteers, my job was to set up an operating plan and train a successor so the programs could be continued after we left," she says.



As was also often the case, at least with the early volunteers, no specific tasks or goals had been set up for the liberal arts graduates in the group. Morgner first decided to be an agricultural advisor, but that ended when a Chilean farmer showed him his wheat. "I said, yes, that's excellent, that's very nice wheat," he remembers, "but it turned out to be diseased."

After a brief stint as a pig farmer, he discovered a cache of CARE carpentry tools and machinery in a warehouse, gave himself a shock course in carpentry, and set out to teach apprentice-level skills to young men.

After one false start, when after four months of installation work he learned that the school was to be converted to a girls' school, Mr. Morgner taught six-month courses in Loncoche in Southern Chile, then in Rancaqua and Osorno.

The Morgners believe that their practical contributions to Chile were small. "Several women were trained in home economics skills and 50 to 55 young men developed carpentery. These jobs could

(Continued on Page 10)

RAMON NAVARETTE, Morgner's godson, appears in the costume of a Chilean "huaso" or cowboy. The Morgners value personal contacts with the Chilean people as the most effective part of their Peace Corps experience.

Campbell's cohort

Returnees turn to the US

By MARGARET GENOVESE

The Peace Corps--its aim is to bring people together and since 1962 in underdeveloped countries of the world it has been doing that--now is supplying urban America with the manpower to develop its communities.

Work in the ghetto areas of the United States requires, according to Miss Donna Shalala assistant to Dean Alan K. Campbell of the Maxwell School and Peace Corps volunteer in 1962, "the kind of flexibility, the ability to organize, the ability to find out what people want and to have them do it on their own"-the personal talents which have been the trademark of the Peace Corps from the start.

The organizer, the political activist, those not content with the status quo in the early sixties were drawn to the Peace Corps, explained Miss Shalala, who lectures in a course in urban government, because for their type of involvement it was the only thing to do. "For people like me who had been through the Civil Rights movement, the Peace Corps was just an extension of doing something for other people. There really wasn't much to do from the sit-ins, that phase of the Civil Rights movement, in terms of regular work. People were joining the Civil Rights movement and SDS began about that time, but those were a few hardy souls that in many cases were financially independent or could work in that kind of unstructured situation. For a lot of young Americans who wanted to do something,the Peace Corps coming along with the Kennedy administration was the perfect structural thing--and the urban crisis wasn't a popular thing."

DONNA SHALALA

Miss Shalala did her Peace Corps work in Iran, teaching English, psychology and community development at the University of Ahwaz in Melasani, province of Khuzistan. When the five Peace Corps volunteers arrived, they comprised half of the yet-to-be-finished university. Miss Shalala, one year out of college and the only woman on the faculty, was appointed Dean of Women. The group started student organizations, initiated faculty meetings and started libraries in addition to community development work.

Peace Corps training comprised of language and cultural studies in the United States, and in-country training and intensive technical training has now been going on for half a decade. Miss Shalala, said of her training, "Essentially is was an attempt to get us to understand what a different culture was like. I lived with a Navaho family who didn't speak English and who were very poor. Many of us wanted to stay there and live with the Navahos, because first of all, we were impressed by the need for community organization among the Navahos and second, because it was in our country."

This basic concern for the problems of the United States is reflected in the types of jobs that Peace Corps volunteers have sought when they returned. Many turned to teaching. City school systems, Miss Shalala said, interpreted the Peace Corps experience as being useful because it meant a "total involvement" in the community. The Peace Corps worker showed a willingness not only to teach in ghetto areas but to live there too. Miss Shalala explained, "It wouldn't be simply the kind of a job where they'd go in at eight in the morning and leave at four and forget about it, because they're interested in communities too."

Another group, Miss Shala said, went to graduate schools producing a "generation of area scholars." South Asian and Latin American studies have had major concentrations of Peace Corps returnees. Graduate work by these students cut across all the disiplines including anthropology, history and political science.

A third set of Peace Corps volunteers returned to work on the staffs of the Peace Corps itself or the Office of Economic Opportunity. As the sixties went on and violence and unrest at home came to be termed the national sickness,a new group of college students concerned with domestic issues was emerging. In the first part of the decade the emphasis in college social science study was put on international realtions--that was what people were interested in, that was what the Peace Corps was created to cement. It wasn't until later in the decade that Harrington's "other America" was brought to light and a trend of neo-colonialism, a turning

The Peace Corps has suffered in numbers and spirit because of the isolationist trend. Miss Shalala sees this decrease in participation in the overseas effort not as a reluctance of students to become involved with working toward change, but rather, "we've given them so many alternatives that you are getting fewer and fewer people in the Peace Corps.

The Peace Corps has changed its pitch, urban America and its crisis have become popular, students have shuffled their priorities and a Peace Corps recruiting poster now says, "Maybe it's not just what you do in the Peace Corps that counts, but what you do when you get back."

According to Miss Shalala, the change in students has been threefold. First, there has been a challenging of the quality and relevance of teaching in colleges and universities; second, undergraduates are questioning the involvement of the United States in Vietnam; and, third, students are examining priorities "in terms of whether this country should put its resources into domestic problems, specifically in ghetto problems."

Recruiters at SU: VISTA tells all

By CAROLE WAGEMAKER

Three VISTA volunteers recently visited the SU campus, painted the fence and recruited students proving that VISTA is alive and well.

Carolyn Cobb, Ray Ormsby and Frieda Martinez interviewed students, explaining the program and the opportunities if offers.

The threesome agreed that certain qualities were necessary for anyone interested in VISTA.

Says Ormsby; "We can get any kind of garbage, but then the poor people would suffer."

Ormsby, 21, is originally from East Orange, N.J. He started his VISTA career by doing community work in Newark, N.J.

Ormsby stated emphatically that VISTA is not for everybody. "VISTA is not something you do to groove for a year." He feels that volunteers must be aware of the problems and have some abilities to offer.

"It's fine to want to search for your own identity but, you don't have to do something to hurt the poor while you're doing it."

Miss Cobb 26, lived in Ohio, but worked for two years in Kansas City, Mo. in community organizing.

Miss Cobb feels it is important to recruit people from the minority groups into VISTA.

"Primarily VISTA helps the volunteer; it really changes them and changes in attitude are necessary to overcome poverty from outside the ghetto as well as inside."

Being Black herself Miss Cobb feels it is much easier for her to understand the problems of the Blacks and the poor, than members of white suburbia.

"There aren't enough minorities involved. We get too many people that are mixed up and have problems."

However, Miss Cobb thinks that one of the most important functions of VISTA is the education of the middle class people involved; "they become better voters, they quit judging and don't impose their values on other people. In general they become more understanding."

Miss Martinez originally from San Luis Valley in Colorado has been in VISTA for two years. She spent her first six months in Philadelphia tutoring in the adult education center. She then worked in New York City in housing and rehabilitating development.

Miss Martinez feels that it is hard to get volunteers from the problem areas because of the restrictions placed on the applicants. "They can't have a police record, they have to be single and they can't be on welfare."

According to Miss Martinez, one of the biggest problems confronting the poor in New York City is that many laws protect the landlords, while laws protecting the tenants are almost nonexistent:

"The landlord just pays a $25 fine rather than making necessary repairs."

Commenting on the Black community, Miss Martinez says, "there has been a definite change in attitudes. Black students have come home from college and are saying 'why can't we educate our people'."

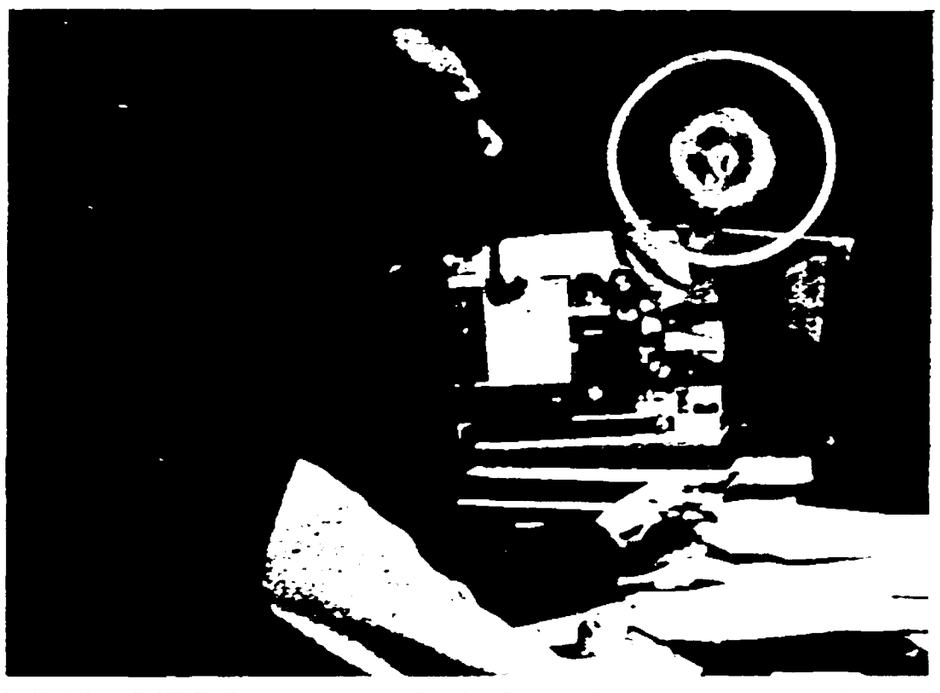
Miss Martinez feels that sometimes VISTA volunteers can get discouraged.

"You get disgusted and realize you can't always reach the people."

At present about 4,500 people serve as VISTA volunteers. The majority of the volunteers are under 27. VISTA recruits usually sign up for a year and receive six weeks training.

VISTA is divided into seven regions. Different colleges offer training programs for volunteers operating on a contract basis with VISTA.

35-40% of the VISTA volunteers graduated from college, but the recruiters do not always consider this an asset.



Says Miss Cobb; "people who come from the core areas with not as much education usually have more understanding of the problems. They can relate their personal experiences to the problems."

Before coming to Syracuse, Ormsby, Miss Cobb and Miss Martinez recruited at Cornell, Princeton, Harvard and the University of Buffalo, where at each they received over fifty applications. They expected to receive at the most 10 applications at Syracuse.

Miss Cobb attributed much of this discrepency to the poor location of the recruiting center and the fact that everybody was leaving for vacation.

"At Cornell we were located in the middle of the campus. People passing on their way to classes noticed us and dropped in."

She added however, "If a student is really interested he should know we're on campus and find out where we're located."

RECRUITERS FROM VISTA showed films as part of their presentation last week on campus.

Apathy abounds

Students respond to the call?

By DONNA JACOBS

"In the souls of the people the grapes of wrath are growing heavy, getting ready for the vintage."

The three Vista recruiters introduced themselves through two film excerpts: "The Grapes of Wrath" and "Babbit."

The Grapes of Wrath opened up the lives of a family of migrant farm workers. Machinery had usurped their jobs. Dismissed, they sought work and a new life in a city which was contemptuous of their poverty and indifferent to their plea for employment.

The film explored the country of the Have-nots. On the way it made some mind-stopping observations:

"The quality of owning freezes you forever into I."

With the poor, who have little, "it's like a fellow don't have a soul of his own, but a piece of a big one. This is the beginning –from 'I' to 'we'."

Maybe this is what Vista is all about--a journey of the Haves into the land of the Have-nots. For one year they will lose a little of their "I" to a community of people.

VISTA is a result of decades of poverty and alienation. It was these same causes that brought forth the revolutions and political movements in history.

"Babbit" sommersaults into the minds and lives of conservative businessmen. There are the "We-happy-few" men who champion the virtues of hard work and their select group. Among them are also the Babbits. These men do question themselves and the meaningfulness of their lives but never risk non-conformity on their search into their raison-d'etre.

After the film showing, discussion began about VISTA, its operation and problems.

During this time, too, about half the students left. (An average of 20 attended each meeting.)

The other half received some candid answers on VISTA. One student asked whether the volunteers are appreciated or even accepted by the communities they enter.

"They don't particularly like you or dislike you. If you're white, you have high visibility in a Black community. But they just think you're a kid with nothing special to do."

Draft status concerned some students. Generally the status granted to the Peace Corps is applicable to VISTA, but this is only a guideline, and the individual draft boards are the determiners.

Another question dealt with education--is it needed to be accepted into VISTA. No, VISTA accepts people with no high school education, retired people and is especially interested in minority group members. Rather than education, VISTA is seeking maturity. This is one important hedge against discouragement with the slow starts and set-backs that often dog the steps of the volunteer.

When asked about VISTA for a summer, the recruiters explained the program for summer volunteers was discontinued. The training program and the length of time it takes to merely know people in a community simply outweighed the benefits derived by either the volunteer himself or the people he was working among.

Despite the candor of the recruiters, and the fairly quiescent response of the students, perhaps forty students out of several thousand on campus now know a little more about an organization called VISTA.

On the Lower East Side...

"When a guy reaches seventeen and has shot speed (methadrine), robbed, and beaten and maybe even murdered, there aren't too many kicks left; life can become a drag--a downhill process of unemployment, drug addiction, weekend drinking sprees, unhappy marriages and broken homes. Such is life for many of New York's Lower East Side gang members.

But five former gang leaders, some with prison records, began to realize that another world existed beyond the streets, a world in which they could participate as students, wage earners, heads of families, homeowners. They started the Real Great Society. It has a basic aim: to get gang leaders and potential leaders into something constructive, to keep them away from the heavy drug traffic and to set an example for their younger brothers."

DEPUTY PEACE CORPS Representative, now anthro professor, William Mangin chats with Peruvians on the site of a home being built by Volunteers in barriada Mariano Melgar, Arequipa, Peru.

More on the Morgners — does Vietnam change it now?

(Continued from Page 8)

have been done as adequately by a Chilean, or even better, since our Spanish was not good," Mrs. Morgner says.

They feel the major value of the Peace Corps program is, instead, the human contact between Americans and foreign people. "Our work shows that government policies do not necessarily reflect the thoughts of a nation's citizens, and that Americans can be concerned about the problems of others," comments Mrs. Morgner.

"The Chileans are very warm and open people, especially in the rural areas," Morgner adds. "We ran into little hostility or resentment, except that when we first arrived we were greeted by 'Yankee go home' and 'Get out Yankee dog' signs posted by the Communists. We had been told to avoid ideological disputes, but I did get into a few all-night discussions with Communists later on."

Morgner had some difficulty adjusting to the speed of life in Latin America. "When you're young, enthusiastic, and ready to change the world," he says, "it takes time to get used to the slower tempo of Chilean rural life. When you do, you find that it's much more enjoyable. People aren't uptight there."

Mrs. Morgner, however, wished to correct the impression that many Americans have of lazy Latins dozing the day away under sombreros. "Part of the day it's simply too hot to work," she says. "And because of the poor diet, few farmers have the energy to produce the crops which would improve their diet. It's a vicious circle."

Mrs. Morgner was unable to complete her two years because of health problems. When she returned to the United States, she says she was appalled by the apathy, lethargy and lack of involvement of Americans.

Morgner says he was appalled by that when he left to join the Peace Corps. "Before we came back, we had some lectures by Washington bureaucrats on readjustment, but they had nothing to do with what it was really like. There's such a gap between the level of life in rural Chile and suburban America."

"I felt in awe of American abundance. One afternoon I just wandered around a supermarket," he says. "When I came back, I was living in a dingy room with a shared bath at the University of New Mexico, but it seemed like a palatial estate to me. No rats playing pingpong in the ceiling at night."

The Morgners feel that they gained a better understanding of culture and concern for other people through their Peace Corps experiences. "The Peace Corps fully develops that awareness which one must have to join in the first place," says Morgner. "You learn so much from personal contacts that you could never pick up by just touring the country by car or bicycle. I would say that you get out of it a lot more than you put in."

Mangin's bag

Peace Corps a la Peru

By CHARLES SHAPIRO

Having served in the Peace Corps while the program was in it's infancy, William Mangin, SU professor of anthropology, has had the opportunity both to gain the experience of the Corps and to observe its evolution.

Mangin joined the Peace Corps in 1962 as a staff member rather than as a volunteer worker. While not quite sure why he joined, he suggests that part of the reason was that the Kennedy administration was the first government he had any hopes for, and the last one since. Because he was a member of the staff, Mangin didn't go through a training program before starting, although he ran two programs later on.

Mangin, as deputy director, worked with director Frank Mankiewicz to launch the Peace Corps program in Peru. Mankiewicz later served as press secretary to the late Senator F. Kennedy. There were 500 volunteers in Peru when they began, half working in the cities, half in the country. The military had taken control of the Peruvian government just before the Peace Corps workers entered the country. This government didn't interfere, and the Peace Corps was able to start whatever programs it wanted to.

The Corps had a blanket agreement with the military government, so programs were not bogged down with the bureaucracy. Mangin feels that "whatever success we had in the program was partly due to the fact that we were able to deal directly with local communities and schools, and we didn't have to go through Peruvian ministries." Since 1963 this direct relationship has changed, so that presently most programs are planned through agencies and a lot of time is spent "battling things out in offices." Mangin thinks that while this may be more realistic, it is less satisfying to the volunteers.

After a year, Mangin became director when Mankiewicz left. In this position, Mangin's was primarily a political and personnel job. As director, he spent half his time traveling. He notes: "I'm not sure what you do when you travel around, because you can't stay very long any place. People wonder where you are when you're not their, and wonder what you're doing when you are there."

As part of his job, Mangin saw Peruvian officials about programs, he tried to find out "what places were complete disasters, what places the government wasn't providing any work to do," and what places volunteers weren't doing anything. He recalls one day when 103 people came to see him, singly and in groups. The visitors included village delegations, deputy ministers, and volunteers. The problems of the volunteers ranged from wanting to get married to wanting new equipment, to wanting to go home.

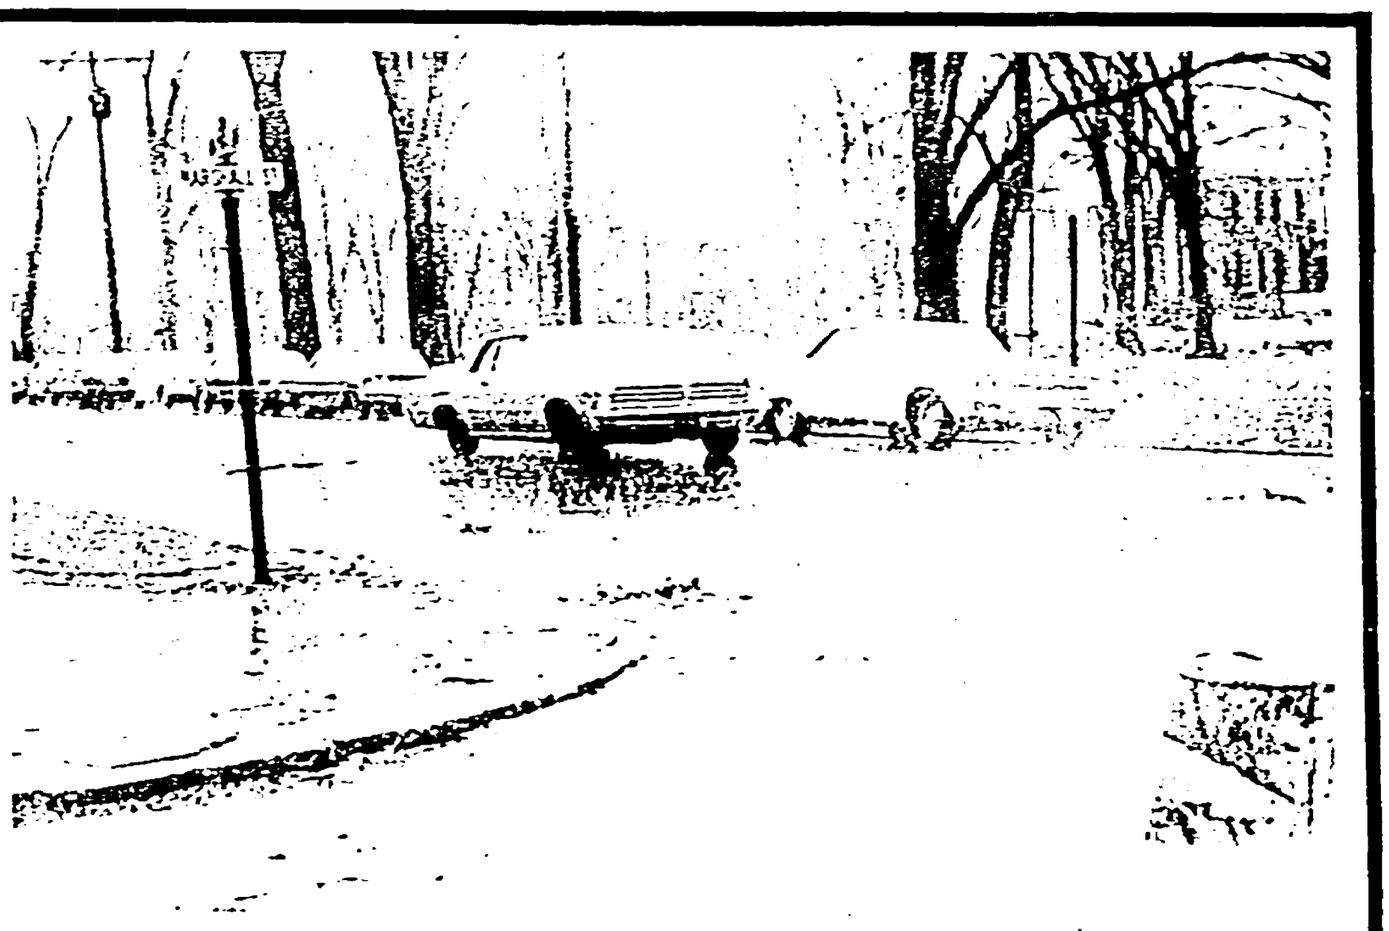
Some volunteers established a "very successful" teacher training institute, others worked in the jungle, or on medical teams. Quite a few workers did community organizing, despite the fact that this was discouraged by the United States embassy and the Peruvian ministries. In recent years all volunteer work has been done outside the cities.

What surprised many of the workers was the tremendous amount of good will the Peruvians had toward the Peace Corps volunteers. While there were small problems, Mangin feels they were usually anti-state maneuvers rather than anti-individual. The volunteers were always personally well-received.

Mangin noted that many volunteers learned the hard way that they were not coming to Peru as benefactors. Many of the situations they had thought of as technical problems were actually political problems. "One of the most difficult things for an American is to be in a position where he is not telling somebody the right way to do something. It is difficult to learn that there are all kinds of ways to do something, to learn that technical expertise is not really what's needed, and to learn that what's really needed is some kind of political change, some change in the local system that has very little to do with learning how to lay bricks or how to be an architect.

"It's not difficult for an American in most countries to work out in the field, outside of the capital city, or even in the city slum. What's hard to do is to work with sophisticated, educated people, because they're very suspicious."

Mangin thinks that what he gained most from the Peace Corps was seeing Americans learn something about Peru. He feels that one of the best things about the Corps is that thousands of Americans have had the chance to learn about what it is like to live in another country, "to see how the Pentagon and the press distort foreign relations."



Two years in the Peace Corps gives volunteers a perspective on foreign countries and thus perspective on their own nation. Returning Peace Corps people are going to be very important in the United States."

Since Mangin left the Peace Corps in 1964, several changes have occurred in the program The Peace Corps volunteers in 1962 included many older and non-college people. Presently, the Corps concentrates on recruiting third and fourth year college students, many of whom will return to grad school after two years of volunteer work.

But even student interest in the Peace Corps is dropping. Today there are only about half the number of volunteers in Peru as there were in 1962. Mangin sees two basic reasons for this. The first is that the novelty of the Corps has worn off. Oversold in the beginning, the program now faces an increasingly cool attitude from the federal administration. Secondly, many students are willing to spend two years as a volunteer in the Peace Corps, knowing that they stand a good chance of being drafted into the "war corps" when they return home.

Despite it's recent problems though, Mangin feels the Peace Corps is "one of the most successful U.S. programs. Compared to many other government programs, it's inexpensive but effective." He still advises, "It's a great thing to do--there's no better way than the Peace Corps to spend two years, to get two years overseas with that kind of experience."

	Peace Corps	VISTA
REQUIREMENTS	United States citizen, permanent resident of US or one of its territories; no upper age limit; must have no dependents under 18.	Must be at least 18 years old, a U.S. citizen, free of dependents under 18; do not have to be a college graduate or speak a foreign language.
EXAMINATIONS	None--you are evaluated on the basis of your application which details your background experience, skills, interests and education.	Upon receipt of your application you may be asked to take the "Modern Language Aptitude Test." The test is used to help determine country assignment.
TERM OF SERVICE	One year after completion of a training course lasting approximately six weeks; may enroll for another year.	Volunteer serve for 24-27 months including a three-month training period; some extensions are permitted.
LOCATION	Questionaire allows you to state geographical and work assignment preference.	You may state a preference for area and assignment.
EXPENSES	Given living allowance which covers housing, food, clothing and transportation; in addition, $75 a month for personal incidentals. For every month of service, VISTA sets aside $50. A Volunteer completing a one year tour of duty would accumulate $675. Your living, travel and medical expenses are taken care of.	For each month of training and service overseas, $75 is set aside until his or her return to the U.S. A volunteer will normally accumulate $1,800-$2,000. Upon completion of training, volunteers may receive an allowance with which to buy special clothing that may not be available overseas. Volunteers also receive a monthly living allowance to cover costs of food, clothing, housing and utilities.
DRAFT STATUS	Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Director of the Selective Service System, has determined that VISTA service is in the "national interest;" Volunteers are generally deferred on this basis, but the final decision concerning your draft status is entirely up to your local draft board.	All eligible male Peace Corps trainees and Volunteers liable for military service must request from their draft boards before training, a deferment and permission to go overseas. Most deferments are granted only after the potential volunteer has successfully completed training.
MARITAL STATUS	If married, you and your spouse may join if you have no dependents under 18. Married couples must complete individual applications individually and submit them jointly. If you are accepted as a couple, you will train and serve together.	20% of Peace Corps volunteers are married. The Peace Corps requires married couples both qualify for the same project, though not necessarily for the same job. Engaged couples may also apply for service in the same area.
APPLICATION REQUESTS	Write The Peace Corps, Washington, D.C. 20525	Write VISTA, Washington, D.C. 20506

THIS BECAME A WET CAMPUS yesterday afternoon as the typically unpredictable weather took Syracuse by storm leaving numerous students with wilted suede coats and soaked heads. (Photo by Clemens)

Crouse baritone featured Sunday

The Crouse College concerts will resume this Sunday afternoon with a performance by faculty member Donald Miller, widely known baritone who is an assistant professor of voice at the School of Music.

Miller received his master of music degree at Yale and then experienced four years of study and professional singing throughout Europe before joining the Syracuse University faculty.

Miller performs very frequently in the central New York area. He has done no less than three roles with the Tri Cities Opera in Binghamton this season as well as roles in each of the three productions here in Syracuse by the Syracuse Symphony. Mr. Miller's piano accompanist for Sunday's concert will be Andre Savoie, a native of Canada and Professor of Piano at Laval University in Quebec. Mr. Savoi is constantly performing in Canada and the United States as well as teaching.

He and Miller have been working together since meeting in Europe and have collaborated in frequent recitals with the Canadian Broadcasting Company and elsewhere in the United States and Canada.

The program for Sunday will include works by Hugo Wolf, Sergei Rachmaninov, Claude Debussy and Gustav Mahler.

Work, travel

Foreign opportunities open

Students can live and work abroad this summer on the U.S. National Student Travel Association's (NSTA) Exchange Visitor Program. NSTA, the official student travel bureau in the U.S., is handling this exchange in cooperation with the official national student travel bureaus in Great Britain, Ireland, Australia and New Zealand.

The aim of the program is to encourage international understanding through the exchange of students for educational and cultural experience. One way to achieve this is by working, living and traveling in these foreign countries. NSTA can arrange a special visa enabling students to work in the four participating countries for a maximum of three months during the summer.

Ordinarily, it is difficult for a foreigner to obtain a work permit, and it is illegal to work without one. Because of the exchange nature of the program, the governments of these four countries have authorized students of the NSTA program to obtain work permits to defray their travel and living expenses.

Students will attend a two-day orientation on their arrival, where they will receive briefings by NSTA's counterparts -- the British Universities North American Club, the Union of Students in Ireland, the National Union of Australian University Students and the New Zealand University Students Association. These meetings will stress detailed information on companies employing Americans, different jobs available and how to look for them so students can choose a job which best suits their capabilities.

Other valuable information will include tips on finding and sharing apartments and customs and living conditions of the country. Students have found that salaries cover not only expenses for living abroad but also enough for traveling around the countryside.

A $55 fee covers all orientation costs -- lectures and briefings, accommodations, meals, activities and meetings with local students -- plus entry permit. In Australia, New Zealand and Ireland, NSTA can prearrange jobs for a $10 fee; these jobs are generally in resort, factory or sales work.

In order to qualify, students must be currently enrolled in a U.S. college or university, be 18 years of age or over, be in good health and have had previous work experience.

Deadline for applications is April 21. For more information about NSTA's Exchange Visitor Program and transportation to these countries, write to NSTA, Dept. R, 70 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10011. Telephone: (212) 989-7070.

ANSWER TO PUZZLE

C	A	C	A	O	■	S	O	M	E	T	I	M	E	■
A	D	O	R	N	■	E	M	U	L	A	T	I	N	G
S	U	M	M	E	R	R	E	S	I	D	E	N	C	E
E	L	B	E	■	A	I	R	E	D	■	M	E	A	N
L	A	I	D	U	P	■	■	D	E	W	■	O	S	T
A	I	E	■	H	I	S	S	■	S	I	S	L	E	R
W	E	N	■	P	E	P	O	S	■	L	E	A	D	Y
■	■	■	F	I	R	E	L	I	G	H	T	■	■	■
P	O	S	E	R	■	D	E	T	R	E	■	H	A	L
O	P	I	N	E	S	■	D	U	E	L	■	E	N	A
T	E	L	■	D	I	V	■	■	A	H	U	L	E	T
A	N	E	T	■	W	A	S	P	S	■	N	O	M	E
G	E	N	E	R	A	L	E	L	E	C	T	I	O	N
E	N	C	L	O	S	U	R	E	■	■	A	I	S	N	E
■	D	E	A	D	H	E	A	D	■	■	B	L	E	E	D

SALE, AFTER SALE, AFTER SALE !
— IS THE
Record Runner
THE # 1 STORE IN THIS AREA ? COME ON DOWN & TEST OUR "LIMBO" SALE.

SYRACUSE REPERTORY THEATRE
the lady's not for burning
by Christopher Fry
A SENSATION IN LONDON & NEW YORK
Apr. 10-13 Th. & Fr. at 8 pm
Sat. at 2:30 & 8 pm
Apr. 17-20 Sun. at 7:30 pm
UNIVERSITY REGENT THEATRE
820 EAST GENESEE ST.
parking & ticket info. : 476-4536

One Perf. Sat. Eve., April 12th at 8:30 p.m.
LINCOLN AUDITORIUM
MONTOYA
The World Renowned Flamenco Guitarist
"Extra Brilliance." -New York Times
"Astonishing Virtuosity . . . A Phenomenon!" -Het Parool, Amsterdam
"Such Consummate Artistry Is A Rare Experience!" -Aftonbladet, Stockholm
"Roused His Audience To Thunderous Applause!" -New Daily, London
"Subtle, Amazing Virtuosity Simply Unbelievable!" -Frankfurt Allgemeine
STUDENTS! SAVE THIS AD. $1.00 OFF
Regular Price with DO Ad
$4.80, $4.00, $3.60, $3.00
Famous Artists — State Tower GR 1-0462

PSYCHOLOGICAL INVESTIGATION
Volunteers needed with a marked fear of harmless snakes.
Contact: Mr. Goldman
Clinical Psychology Office
Syracuse University
x3597 9 a.m. - 5 p.m. 479-7989 After 6 p.m.

Sing Along With
JANE and JOHN SNELL
on the Guitar
Folk Songs Every
Friday and Saturday
9 P.M. — 2 A.M.
HACKNEY HOUSE
646 South Warren
HA 2-0341
LUNCHEON, DINNER and SUPPER

"Ready to accept changes"

Stern says University Senate to seat students

By COLETTE STALLINGS

Speaking to an emergency meeting of Student Senate last night, Dr. George Stern, chairman of the University Senate committee on students said that he feels the University Senate, is ready to accept the changes that have been proposed to include student representation in the university senate.

"The proposed 2:1:1 ration does not seem likely to be debated," continued Stern. "The question is where the 25 per cent of the senate, made up of students, is to come from. No one really knows how to resolve this question."

University Senate expects to have some proposal presented by students giving a detailed description of how senators are to be selected. Stern commented, "I am in no way suggesting that anyone has an answer, I am saying that whatever you work through will probably be acceptable-as long as it is rational."

Whatever procedure is adopted, students must be able to convince University Senate that it is "reasonably representative." "That," said Stern, "is where the rub is."

Stern pointed out that graduate students are organized according to colleges. He pointed out that this would be possible to some degree for undergraduates, but that within the College of Liberal Arts there would be no natural groupings and this would make selection difficult. One solution he proposed was that students within liberal arts be divided in groups of those interested in the humanities, science, and social sciences, with senators elected from within these groups.

"The way the elections are handled influences who gets elected," reasoned Stern. "Whatever you do to insure sophistication in this area will insure the creation of something you can live with. In the long run, the body we have to consider is the All-University Senate."

The number of student senators will be determined by the number of administrators in senate.

At present, the proposed representation is 28 undergraduate and 17 graduate students, but, according to Stern," the Chancellor has not come through with the exact number."

Other options beside the All-University Senate considered by University Senate include a bicameral structure with paralled student and faculty senate and a group of independent bodies that relate to a super-senate. Stern commented that the bicameral system" implies that there is a higher authority that both must negotiate with" while the "membership in the super-senate seems to be so amorphous that, frankly, I don't trust it."

After Stern's address, three proposals for the selection of student senators were presented to the remaining group of 26 senators. A proposal that one representative be elected from one of each of the schools and colleges of the University and 14 representatives be elected from student senate was defeated.

The proposals will be presented to Student Senate on Tuesday.

Stern advocated that whatever procedure is adopted, University Senate set up an ad-hoc committee to review the process and make any changes it feels necessary to develop a formal procedure for the selection of student senators.

DR. GEORGE STERN

Photography by
Sarkin Studio
Living Color
Portraits
Bridal Portraits
Candid Weddings
908 Irving Ave.
Near V. A. Hospital
478-1145

BELLS BELLS
NOW
NOW is Douglas Stone Ltd. clothing
738 south crouse at marshall
BELLS
- Tom Jones Shirts
- Philadelphian Body Shirts
- Romeo & Juliet Shirts
- Multi-colored Scarfs
- Four Inch Ties

Douglas Stone Ltd.
738 south crouse at marshall
BELLS South Crouse at Marshall BELLS

Why does a perfect size 7 look perfect only 21 days every month?

It has nothing to do with calories. It's a special female weight gain... caused by temporary water-weight build-up. Oh, you know...that uncomfortable full feeling that sneaks up on you the week before your menstrual period. This fluid retention not only plays havoc with your looks but how you feel as well. (It puts pressure on delicate nerves and tissues, which can lead to pre-menstrual cramps and headaches, leaves emotions on edge.)

That's why so many women take PAMPRIN®. It gently relieves water-weight gain to help prevent pre-menstrual puffiness, tension, and pressure-caused cramps.

PAMPRIN makes sure a perfect size 7 never looks less than perfect. Nor feels less than perfect, either.

MG AUSTIN HEALEY

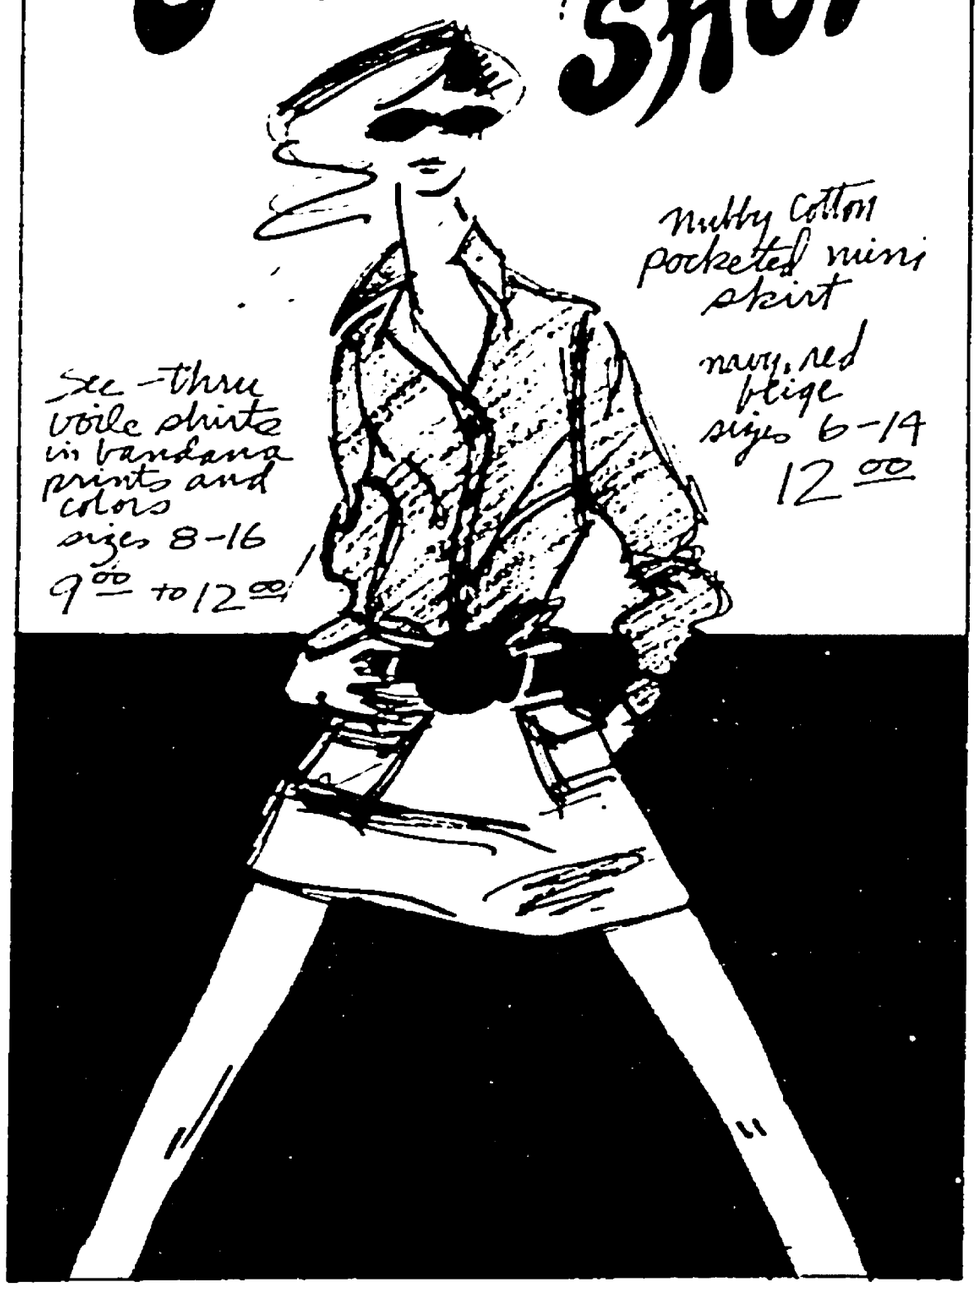
Jaguar
SALES & SERVICE
also
Largest Selection in the East of Used Convertibles--Hard Tops Corvettes-Sports Cars

6 Factory Trained Import Mechanics waiting to serve you. Over $100,000 in parts and accessories in inventory.

Revelle Motors, Inc.
800 W. Genesee Street
Sales GR 4-1009 Parts & Service GR 9-9544

Speech prizes awarded

Paul F. Stavis, a senior from Briarcliff, is the 1969 winner of Syracuse University's annual White-Denison Speech Contest. Stavis, a member of the University's debate team, was awarded the $125 first prize.



Stavis is speaker of the Syracuse University Debate Union. As a freshman he won the Stuart Stevens Award as the outstanding debater.

The second prize winner in the White-Denison competition was Barbara Tannenbaum, a senior.

THE CONSPICUOUS GRAVE adorning the approach to Lowe Art Center represents both the nature of the program inside–the last graduate thesis show–and a harmless joke bidding a fond farewell to the departing graduate students. Says Bob Manley ("dead"), "it's a show meant to be looked at, enjoyed and forgotten."

TOP OF THE MI SHOP

SENIORS, GRADS, Phd's — FOR EACH COMPLETED PART II OF THE JOB INTERVIEW RECRUITMENT QUESTIONNAIRE YOU TURN IN AT THE PLACEMENT CENTER YOU'LL RECEIVE A 25¢ COUPON REDEEMABLE AT ANY S. U. BOOKSTORE. COUPON OFFER EXPIRES MAY 20, 1969.

WOLF & MARKVI Present the

RASCALS

FRIDAY NITE, APRIL 18, 8 P.M.

at the

Onondaga War Memorial

Tickets — $4, $5, $6

Mail orders now accepted at box office. Tickets on sale April 1st at: The Record Runner, S U Corner Store, Wilson's Leading Jewelers and War Memorial.

SYRACUSE

WAR MEMORIAL AUDITORIUM

SUNDAY, MAY 4, 1969

One show only at 7:30 P.M.

CORA PROMOTIONS PRESENTS

the JIMI HENDRIX EXPERIENCE

with NOEL REDDING

Tickets: $4, $5, $6.

MAIL ORDERS ONLY!

Please enclose self-addressed envelope, make check payable to, and mail to Syracuse War Memorial Auditorium, 515 Montgomery Street, Syracuse, New York 13202.

For information call (315) 477-7481.

Class designs vehicles for 'alien creatures'

Inhabitants of a world "lying just beyond the boundaries of imagination" who would like to make an expedition to Earth now have the means to do so. Nineteen Syracuse University students in an industrial design class have each built a vehicle custom-designed for the hypothetical aliens, called Linelanders.

The men and women students, all sophomores in the class of James J. Pirkl, assistant professor of industrial design, devised and built a variety of safe, efficient, attractive vehicles from which the Linelanders might choose.

Pirkl described the denizens of lineland, a "strange world drifting in the void and vacuum of deep space," as creatures the size and shape of 16-penny nails. He saw Lineland as a complex of line-like spines in the constellation Draco. The students were to design vehicles which could land upright without being damaged and without injuring their passengers.

The vehicles had to be very flexible. The basic problem Pirkl said, was one of "tension and compression"--getting all parts of a structure to pull against one another with exactly the right force to absorb the jolt of landing. The most difficult phase, he said, was simplifying the structures so that they contained no unnecessary parts.

After weeks of planning and testing, the students demonstrated their finished products by dropping them several times from a 15-foot height to a hard tile floor. They used nails to represent passengers. Although many of the landing craft were put together of fine wire, light wood or thread parts, making them look like umbrella or kite frames, nearly every one landed successfully.

By designing especially for Linelanders, the students got practice in one of the most important aspects of industrial design, Pirkl said, that of making a product to suit the needs of the consumer. The students can use the concepts they learn in such a project when, as professionals, they design children's toys, structures similar to world's fair pavilions and various consumer products.

Drama group sponsors films

The Boar's Head Dramatic Society is out to dispell the myth of the starving actor.

Boar's Head, the fifteen-member honorary of the drama department, will sponsor a Shakespearean Film Festival to provide a scholarship for an SU drama student. The scholarship will probably go to a sophomore who is already enrolled

The current schedule lists Macbeth, with Orson Welles, on April 12; the Max Rinehardt production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" on April 19; and Lawrence Olivier's "Hamlet" on May 3. All films will be shown in Kittredge Auditorium, where the first film, "Macbeth" will be shown at 6, 8 and 10 p.m.

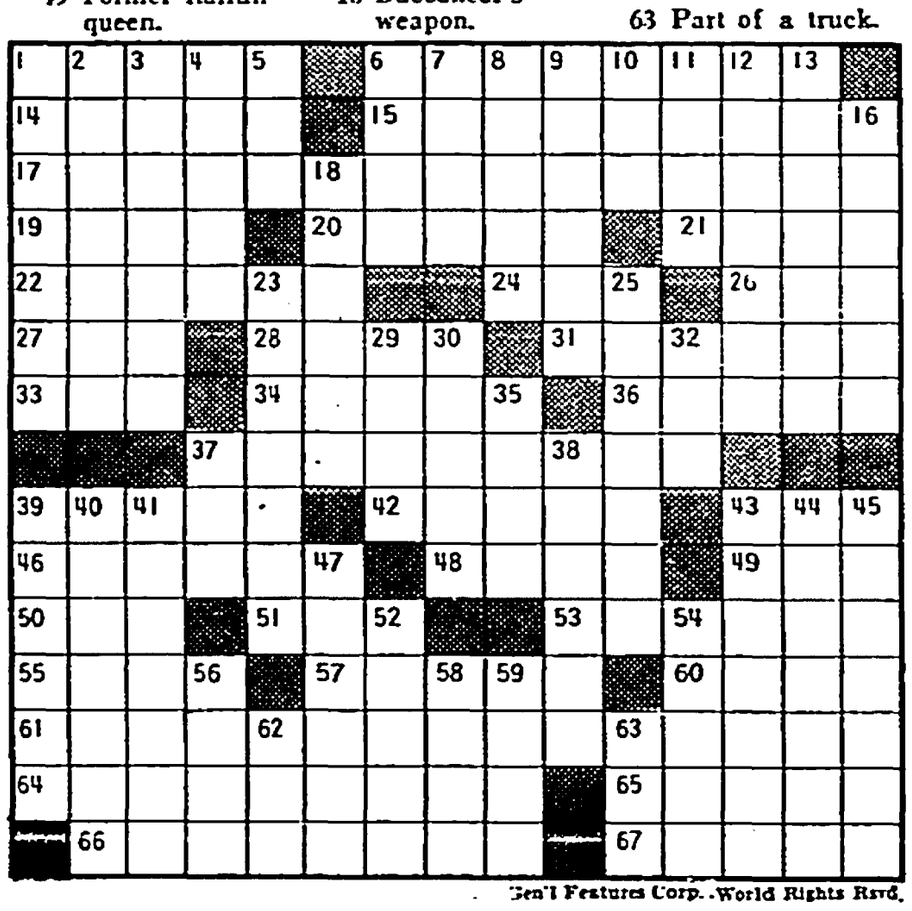
Ticket prices are $2 for a season subscription, or $1 at the door.

Basketball bounce

Pledges of Zeta Beta Tau Fraternity, carrying on an annual tradition, will be bouncing a basketball for 29 consecutive hours today and tomorrow in front of Wilson's Jewlers to help raise money for the American Cancer Fund.

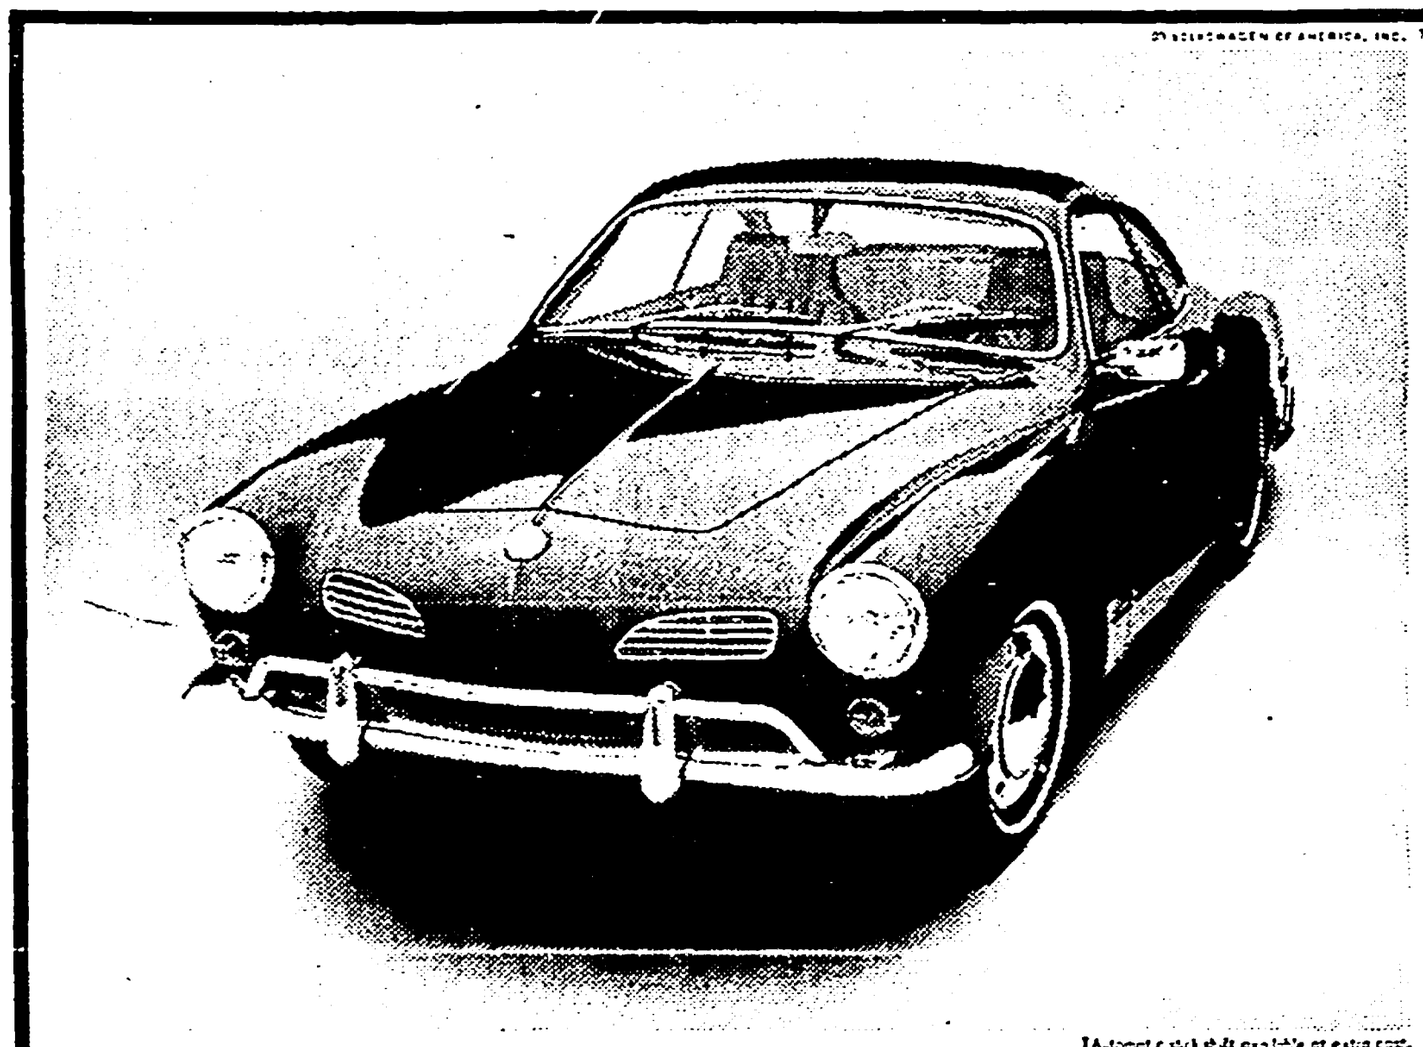
The pledge class of the house will keep the vigil downtown from noon Friday until 5 p.m. Saturday. Money will be collected by two pledges at all times, while a third bounces the basketball.

Making the first donation, at noon, will be Mr. Jim Wilson of Wilson's Jewlers, and Jim Brodsky, vice-president of ZBT at Syracuse.



DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

ACROSS



1 Liqueur flavoring.
6 In the future.
14 Embellish.
15 Trying to equal.
17 Pope's Castel Gandolfo, for example: 2 words.
19 Hamburg's river.
20 Made known.
21 Vexatious.
22 Put in store: 2 words.
24 Symbol of freshness.
26 East: Ger.
27 Used up.
28 ___ Universe.
31 Baseball Hall of Fame name.
33 Old English letter.
34 Gourdlike fruits.
36 Resembling galena.
37 Hearthside's glow.
39 Baffling question.
42 Raison ___.
43 Relative of Henry.
46 Expresses an opinion.
48 Cross swords.
49 Former Italian queen.
50 ___ Aviv.
51 Division: Abbr.
53 Lucky piece.
55 French novelist.
57 Stinging insects.
60 Tourist center in Alaska.
61 Event following a primary: 2 words.
64 Corral.
65 Soissons' river.
66 Relative of a freeloader.
67 Suffer.

DOWN

1 Established judicial ruling: 2 words.
2 Flatter slavishly.
3 How much?: Fr.
4 ___ forces.
5 Pronoun.
6 California Indian.
7 Hebrew measure.
8 Meditated.
9 Leaves out.
10 Youngster.
11 Particular.
12 Long Island village.
13 Sheathed.
16 People.
18 Buccaneer's weapon.
23 Worked at the plate.
25 Physicist Roentgen.
29 Hastened.
30 Did a cobbler's job.
32 Place.
35 In ___ (in position).
37 Marsh.
38 Lubricant.
39 Thick soup.
40 Type of TV program: 2 words.
41 Hamlet's last word.
43 Writer of historic love letters.
44 Pasqueflower.
45 Drew towards night.
47 Hypothetical college, provincial style.
52 Worth.
54 Before.
56 Tissue: Anat.
58 Evening, in Italy.
59 Implored.
62 Stick.
63 Part of a truck.

Gen'l Features Corp.-World Rights Rsrd.

†Automatic stick shift is available at extra cost.

A sports car for people who have better things to spend their money on than a sports car.

If $6,000 sports cars were one of life's necessities, a lot more people would buy them.

Instead, they save their money to get married. To buy a house. To send their kids to college.

And it's the college kids who drive the sports cars.

This didn't seem quite sporting. So Volkswagen came out with the Karmann Ghia.

It looks like a $6,000 sports machine. (The body's an original Italian design.) But it carries a modest Volkswagen price tag.

$2365.00

And that includes the 4-speed stick shift† and front-wheel disc brakes. (They're not part of an optional sports package. They're part of the car.)

The Ghia scrimps and saves on gas. You should get up to 28 mpg. And when it comes to service, it goes to a VW dealer. No costly tune-ups. No temperamental parts to coddle. (We treat it like a VW because, underneath, that's what it is.)

You might say the Karmann Ghia is for people who want everything for their children.

And just a little something for themselves.

Volkswagen Karmann Ghia

Precision Autos, Inc.
on: Bridge St.
East Syracuse
(Across from Gem. Dept. Store)
GI 6-7700

Don Cain Volkswagen, Inc.
1000 West Hiawatha Blvd.
Syracuse
472-4371

* SUGGESTED RETAIL PRICE EAST COAST P.O.E., LOCAL TAXES AND OTHER DEALER DELIVERY CHARGES, IF ANY, ADDITIONAL. WHITEWALLS OPTIONAL AT EXTRA COST

JIFFY KING

SPECIAL

Monday thru Friday, 2-5 p.m.

10¢ OFF ALL SUBS
727 South Crouse
in the Arcade

Banjos Honky Tonk

PEANUTS POPCORN

EXCITING CONTESTS

OLD TIME MOVIES

DRAUGHT BEER

Come for an unforgettable (time of your life) evening on Friday and Saturday nights

FRIDAY NIGHT SPECIAL

Bring this ad and get one Gay 90's Mug or Hat free per couple.

119 W. First St. 437-5652 E. Syracuse

Journalism banquet to feature awards

Twenty graduate and undergraduate students of the Syracuse University School of Journalism will receive prizes and awards from Vice Chancellor Frank P. Piskor at the School's banquet in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Syracuse tonight.

More than 300 men and women connected with the communications industry will attend the banquet which marks the 35th anniversary of the School's founding and the 50th year of the teaching of journalism at the University.

Also to be honored are Frederick G. Vosburgh, editor of National Geographic Magazine, and Vincent S. Jones, executive editor of the Gannett Newspapers, speakers of the evening. Chancellor William P. Tolley will present them with Journalism School medals for distinguished service in journalism.

Dr. Wesley C. Clark, dean of the School, will preside. W. Parkman Rankin, vice president of This Week magazine and a member of the School's advisory council, will pay a brief tribute to Dean M. Lyle Spencer, founder of the School of Journalism, who died in February, 1969.

Among those at the head table will be Rollan Melton, executive vice president of the Speidel Newspapers and a new member of the advisory council.

The council plans a luncheon meeting at Lawrinson Hall at which the chairman, E.A. O'Hara, former publisher of the Syracuse Herald-Journal, will preside.

At the mid-day Council meeting Fred A. Demarest, chairman of the School's photography department, will tell about the new summer program in Munich, the Navy news photography program, the color workshop and the Newhouse citation for fine photography.

'Illuminating'

SU acquires author's works

The career of a professional writer from 1915 to 1968 can be traced in the papers of William Fitzgerald Jenkins, which have been acquired by Syracuse University and catalogued for use by scholars, students and other researchers.

The author, who wrote novels, short stories and articles for national magazines as Will F. Jenkins and whose science fiction and adventure stories were published under the pseudonym Murray Leinster, began to sell at the age of 17. Now 72, he continues to write at his home in Gloucester, Virginia.

Vice Chancellor Frank P. Piskor, the University's chief officer for academic affairs, said of the Jenkins papers: "It is the responsibility of a University to preserve papers, such as those of Mr. Jenkins, that illuminate an area of literature in which scholars are increasingly interested. Syracuse University is privileged to have this important collection, which provides a fascinating reconstruction of the life of a man who has earned his living with pen and typewriter. Mr. Jenkins' output was prolific and much of the value of the records lies in their completeness."

Jenkins' works have been translated into 18 languages and have appeared in many anthologies. He is the author of 14 screenplays. Among the unpublished manuscripts in the Syracuse University collection is an untitled book on writing.

Jenkins was born June 16, 1896, in Norfolk, Va., the son of George Briggs Jenkins and Mary Louise Murry Jenkins. He attended public and private schools in Norfolk and served in World War I with the 98th Army Division and with the Committee on Public Information. During World War II he was an editor for the Office of War Information.

Editors

Students interested in applying for any of the following positions may pick up application forms in Dean Carleton's office, 209 Administration Building: Daily Orange business manager, editor of the Onondagan, business manager of the Onondagan, editor of Maelstrom and business manager of Maelstrom. Deadline for return of applications is Wednesday, April 23.

Crossroads Africa symposium

The schedule for the week of Crossroads Africa events was incorrect in yesterday's Daily Orange. The official program follows:

Friday - April 11: 7:30 p.m. Hendricks. "The Jewish Community in South Africa." Prof. Eric Krystall of Human Relations at Cornell.

Friday - April 11: 9 p.m. Gifford "South African Essay" movie.

Saturday - April 12: 10 a.m. Maxwell Auditorium. "Origins of Racism in South Africa. Rev. Gladstone Ntlabati.

Saturday - April 12: 2 p.m. Maxwell Auditorium. "Racism--Southern Africa and the United States." Prof. Ron Walters, Rev. Gladstone Ntlabati, LeRoy Wright.

Saturday - April 12: 8 p.m. Maxwell Auditorium. "South African Essay" movie.

Sunday - April 13: 11 a.m. Hendricks. "Sanctuaries for Men of Conscience." Rev. Gladstone Ntlabati.

Sunday - April 13: 2 p.m. Maxwell Auditorium. "The Ethics of Violence." Rev. Gladstone Ntlabati. Commentary by Conscientious Objectors: Rev. Leon Sanborne, Rev. William McConaghy.

Sunday - April 13: 7 p.m. First Methodist Church (State and Onondaga). "The Soul Generation." A concert entitled "Let My People Go." Admission $1.

Monday - April 14: 4 p.m. Gifford Auditorium. Discussion. "Political Parties in Exile." Edward Moyo, Rev. Gladstone Ntlabati, Prof. Robert Crane.

Monday - April 14: 8 p.m. May Memorial Church, 3800 East Genesee Street. "South Africa--Is Violent Revolution Justified?" Rev. Gladstone Ntlabati.

IS $2.99 TOO MUCH.
HOW ABOUT 2.89, 2.79, 2.69, 2.59, & 2.49.
Where? — The Record Runner
Record Runner

Italian Film Series
presents
Marriage Italian Style
(IN COLOR)
Sofia Loren &
Marcello Mastroianni
Kittredge Auditorium - 7 and 9 p.m. $1.00
FRIDAY - APRIL 11

L. G. Balfour Co.
FRATERNITY and COLLEGE JEWELERS
729 S. Crouse Ave.
Syracuse, New York
WELCOME BACK
Carl Sorenson, Mgr.
GR 5-7837

COSMO Pizza Shop
FAST DELIVERY SERVICE TO ALL DORMS
GR 8-9231

SOMETHING NEW !
HACKNEY HOUSE
COFFEE SHOP
Ice Cream Bar And Sandwich Shop
Open 7 A.M. to 7 P.M.
646 South Warren
HA 2-0341

College Relations Director
c/o Sheraton-Park Hotel, Washington, D.C. 20008
Please send me a free Sheraton Student I.D. Card:
Name:_____
Address:_____

We're holding the cards.
Get one. Rooms are now up to 20% off with a Sheraton Student I.D. How much depends on where and when you stay.
And the Student I.D. card is free to begin with.
Send in the coupon. It's a good deal. And at a good place.
Sheraton Hotels & Motor Inns
Sheraton Hotels and Motor Inns. A Worldwide Service of ITT

Campus Classified

GR 6-5571, Ext. 2314

Rates minimum of 15 words:

1 day	1.15
2 days	2.25
3 days	3.30
4 days	4.30
5 days	5.25
6 days	6.15

To place a classified ad, call GR 6-5571, ext. 2314, between 1 and 3 p.m. Ad must be placed 2 days in advance. Every word over 15 costs 5c extra per day.

ALL ADS MUST BE PREPAID.

MISCELLANEOUS

RENT if you can't buy! T.V.s, tape recorders, typewriters. By week, month or semester. Reasonable rates. S. U. BOOKSTORE. GR 6-5541, x 2426.

FRAME your works of art at unbeatable prices at S. U. BOOKSTORE. Also signs and posters. In the Art Dept., 303 University Pl.

ALTERATIONS DONE within 24 hours. Call for an appointment. Lillian Potter. 207 Comstock. 478-5847.

PRIVATE DRIVING LESSONS — automatic or standard shift. Full or refresher courses. Qualified professional instructors. Pickup service. Auto Driving Academy. GR 6-3995.

LOST: Male puppy, part Labrador, black with white chest, red collar. Phil Bronstein, Alpha Epsilon Pi. 475-5965.

FOR SALE

SUNBEAM ALPINE '67 convertible. Excellent condition. 5 year warranty. Good tires. 422-9679 after 4 p.m.

'66 AUSTIN - HEALY SPRITE convertible. Fully equipped. Great sports car. Cal. Larry 454-3927.

1968 VOLVO 142 S. 4-speed. AM-FM. Like new, must sell $2150.00. Phone 422-4453, 456-1362.

OUT OF PRINT BOOKS. The Country Bookstore. Manlius 682-6402. Open evenings and Saturday.

FOR RENT

2 MILES WEST OF CAMPUS — 3 large rooms, furnished, air conditioned, about $120 including all utilities. Best hours 8 a.m. or 10 p.m. Mr. Vernon 475-3790.

FURNISHED APARTMENT — HENRY STREET — 2 blocks from Campus. Kitchenette, 1 bedroom, living room, complete bath with shower. Downstairs. 2 private entrances, off street parking. $110.00 per mo. Call 422-5564 days 476-1481 - evenings and weekends.

ROOM with kitchen privileges $15 close. $50.00. GR 6-3151 x257, 446-6451, 478-5380.

WANTED

SUMMER JOBS: Counselors, private boys' camp: college men of above average physical fitness and judgement: tripping, canoeing, camperaft, archery, riflery, crafts driver: Love of out-of-doors and children essential. Adirondacks Swim Camp. 39 Mill Valley Road, Pittsford, N. Y. 14534.

TYPING

THIRTY YEARS EXPERIENCE. Dissertations, term papers, proof-read. Satisfaction guaranteed. Mrs. Raymond Webb. HE 7-8259.

DIANE WALLACE. 472-2115. Theses, dissertations and term papers. IBM electric. 40c per page. 5c copy. Multilith. 45c.

TAKE YOUR MANUSCRIPT to the only professional typing and printing service serving the S. U. area. The knowledge and experience of having done over 2,000 theses and dissertations is behind every job we turn out. Stephanie's Office Service. 469-2795.

DISSERTATIONS, THESES, AND TERM papers. IBM electric typewriter. 25c per page 5c per copy. 446-2441. Mrs. Miller.

Omega Psi Phi Dethrones Sadler 3 in b-ball intras

By ED AGRANOWITZ

Omega Psi Phi fraternity turned back a furious second half rally by defending champion Sadler 3 to win the All University Intramural Basketball tournament going away last night, 39-31.

Tom Smith, the husky 6-5 Omega center canned an 8 foot follow shot with 1:40 to play to put his team ahead 35-31 after Sadler had whittled a nine point lead down to just two. Hensley Jermott added a layup on a nifty pass from Mike Askey, and Vincent Brown's two free throws sealed Sadler's doom.

The "Q's" had opened up a 19-14 hald time lead mainly on the outside marksmanship of slick guard Dennis Ashby (6 pts.) and Brown, a brawny forward, (7pts.).

Sadler 3 started the second half quickly with two clever, slicing drives by Chalmers Knight, and a jumper by Mike Chlebeck to take the lead at 20-19.

The Q's then proceded to rip off ten straight points with Bobby Bancroft's free throw for Sadler being the only interruption. That put the fraternity champs ahead 30-21.

After a Sadler 3 time out the team's traded foul shots before the defending champions made their final bid. Howie Hocevar made a free throw, Chlebeck hit a tap, and Bancroft converted a pair of charity tosses to make it 31-27.

Sadler seemed to be picking up momentum as Omega's flashy guard Rick Sampson fouled out with three minutes to play. Togi Marshall pushed the Q's back up to a 33-27 lead with a jumper, but then Chlebeck banged home another tap and Knight's twisting drive made it 33-31. Then came Smith's clutch basket.

Omega had reached the finals with triumphs over Sigma Alpha Mu's varsity and pledge teams, while Sadler 3 had deposed of Watson West 3 and the Barristers en route to the championship round.

Omega Psi Phi	G	F	T
Brown	4	2	10
Marshall	1	1	3
Smith	4	0	8
Ashby	5	0	10
R.Sampson	3	0	6
Jermott	1	0	2
Askey	0	0	0
L.Sampson	0	0	0
totals	18	3	39

Sadler 3	G	F	T
Chlebeck	3	0	6
Hocevar	2	1	5
Davis	2	2	6
Knight	5	1	11
Bancroft	0	3	3
totals	12	7	31

fouled out - R. Sampson

Omega Psi Phi	— 19 - 20		—39
Sadler 3	— 14 - 17		—31

OMEGA PSI PHI's Rick Sampson looks for an opening in last night's intramural basketball tournament finals. Sampson directed the attack for the Q's who won the campus championship in their first year of entry.

BIG THINGS are expected from a big boy in the person of catcher Jon Unger. The 230 pound sophomore backstop drove in four runs in his first varsity game against Georgetwon before falling off in his other outings. (Photo by Clemens)

South sun ripens Orange golfers

By JAY PETERFREUND

The first Spring trip for the SU Golf team proved to be a fairly good investment by the Athletic Department. The sunny skies of Florida were a welcome relief to the frostbitten linksmen from Syracuse. The team had the opportunity to play competitively before the first match of the season, and this should be a great help to the teams efforts in the coming campaign.

The team played in a tournament consisting of forty college squads from all over the United States. The matches were played over the Cape Coral Country Club and Golden Gate Country Club. While the results are not official, the SU team, consiting of Bob Kouwe, Tom Laydon, John Haber, Brad Benjamin, and Frank Baer, placed 25th.

Coach Jim Boeheim did not seem at all disheartened by the team's performance. "Kouwe played exceptionally well in the tournament and he was well up there in the individual standings." The coach also feels the team will benefit from the trip and the improved record will be the true result.

The competition in the Florida tournament was very tough. One of the squads faced by SU was University of Florida, the national collegiate champions of 1968. Two of Syracuse's regular season opponents, Colgate and Cornell also made the Florida trip. The Red Raiders of Colgate took 22nd place with Cornell taking 23rd. From these facts, it looks as if the competition will be really tough in Central New York.

The linesmen will journey to West Point to play the Army Cadets on April 12th. Boeheim plans on using the men who made the Florida trip. But, the roster is bound to change after tryouts start on April 14th. The team will have two weeks before the next match and Boeheim plans to make the most of this respite.

STEVE NASH

Sports post at WAER goes to Steve Nash

Steve Nash, a junior majoring in Radio-Television, was selected as the Sports Director for station WAER-FM for 1969-70. Nash was selected following meetings of senior staff members of the station held before spring vacation.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Nash of Syracuse and was picked for the position over three other applicants.

Nash said, "I hope to continue our diversified sports coverage in the coming year. This includes carrying more Syracuse football games in the fall, if possible."

Nash said the station will carry all the home baseball games this spring and will also air the spring football intra-squad game on May 10th. He added that two specials are now in the planning stages. Head football coach, Ben Schwartzwalder is the subject of one while the Syracuse University crew team will be explored in "Mark of the Oarsmen."

Nash issued a reminder to all current staff members that there will be a meeting, Monday night at 7 o'clock. He added that any student interested in working for the sports department should also attend the meeting.

This selection of questions pertaining to the world of sport is the first in a series which will appear in the Daily Orange every Friday. The questions were composed by two staff reporters, Jeff Posner and Randy Zeibert.

The sports staff cordially invites all readers to participate in this contest by forwarding answers to the Daily Orange c/o Mike Weber, Sports Editor, 1101 East Adams St. The answers must be on the editor's desk by Thursday of the week following the edition of the paper in which the questions appeared.

The reader who scores the highest total correct answers on all the quizzes when the series ends in May will be awarded a free, one-year subscription to Sports Illustrated.

1—Who was the first N.B.A. player to score over 2000 points in one season?

2—Name the 3 N.H.L. stars to score over 100 points this season?

3—Match these basketball players with their colleges:

Jeff Mullins - - - De Paul
Emmette Bryant - - - Bowling Green
Howie Komives - - - Duke

4—Who was the first man to break the 4 minute mile indoors?

5—Name the two ex-baseball players who hold the record for most consecutive hits. How many?

6—Only one player in National League history has been named M.V.P. two years in a row. Name the player and the years.

7—In the 1947 World Series, New York Yankee pitcher Bill Bevens had a no hitter with two outs in the ninth inning. Who was the Dodger that broke up the no hitter?

8—Floyd Patterson was the only heavyweight fighter ever to regain the championship title. Name the boxer he originally won it from and the boxer from whom he regained it.

9—What goalie holds the N.H.L. record for most career shutouts?

10—Name the two San Francisco Giants who played for the team while it was still in New York.

Netmen win one on trip

By JOE LAGUARDIA

Returning home from the Washington area with a 1-2 slate, SU tennis coach Gary Thorne hopes the Sky Top courts and the Syracuse weather are more to his boys' likings.

The netmen were rained out of matches with Catholic University, American University and the final stop on their spring trek, Maryland.

The only bright spot on the tour was a rain—curtailed 5-1 victory over John Hopkins. In their initial win of the campaign, the Orange singles squad of John Schwandt, Mark Pine, Jeff Shankman, Sandy Aronauer and Peter Frank took care of their Blue Jay opponents in two sets each.

In the SU lid lifter, the netmen dropped a close 5-4 match to Georgetown. John Schwandt won the only point in the singles, while the Orange swept the doubles. The pairs of Schwandt and Aronauer, Shankman and Howie Noble, and Pine and Frank made the final score close but, the Orange will have to take more points in the singles match if they hope to have a respectable record this year.

The doubles combinations, which have been the most consistent so far this year, saved the Orange from being whitewashed by a strong Navy squad. The first doubles duo of Schwandt and Aronauer provided Thorne with the only enjoyment on the trip to Annapolis.

Schwandt has been the most consistent on the clay with two wins in three tries in singles play while Jeff and his partner, Sandy Aronauer, are undefeated in two contests in doubles play.

Thorne's netmen resume action April 16 at Buffalo and make their first home appearance April 22 against St. Lawrence.

SU track coach Bob Grieve has issued an invitation to any freshman boy with track experience to come out for the team this season. Grieve said he is especially short on hurlers. Anyone interested should report to Archbold Stadium any day after 2:30 p.m. to talk to coach Grieve.

The spring sports meeting for SU intramurals will take place Tuesday, April 15, at 7:00 p.m. Intramural Director, Milt Howard, said that all managers should report to room 306 in Archbold Gym at the prescribed time. Spring sports include softball, track, tennis, golf and horseshoes.

Campaign oratory begins flowing

Ifshin hits SU parties as 'a farce'

By LARRY KRAMER
Campus Affairs Editor

Mounting an outright attack on the campus political parties last night, SG presidential candidate Dave Ifshin and his Independent Slate went to the most important voters in their campaign--the independents.

"Campus Alliance Party already has 1000 votes," said Ifshin, "and they operate on the premise that only 20% of the campus will turn out to vote, and these 1000 votes are enough for victory. These votes are rah-rahs from fraternities not independents."

Ifshin added, "Parties have made offices a farce. Student Government exists now, only for the sake of existence."

Ifshin and his running mates, Ed Barron (Vice-President), Andy Rosenblatt (Treasurer) and Jean Danziger (Secretary) continued their sharp criticism of other campus establishments, Student Senate, Class Government, Elections Commission, and of course, the administration.

"Student Senate is a lot of bullshit. 200 people sit around and do nothing. We think it's a useless corrupt system," stated Barron. "I only dealt with them twice. Once they stopped us (St. Mary's Dorm Council) from declaring visiting hours when we were ready to in St. Marys, and the second time they told us not to declare autonomy. We did anyway and autonomy is now functioning successfylly."

Ifshin called for the

(Continued on Page 4)

DAVE IFSHIN

LOU JACOBS

CAP's slate thwarted at Lawrinson

By MITCH LANE

Eleven residents of Lawrinson turned out last night to hear CAP's slate speak in the dormitory lounge.

The candidates were barred from speaking on the floors by action of the Lawrinson Dorm countil. Individual candidates visited floors and asked residents to come to the lounge to hear speeches.

Reception on the floors was sarcastic and rude. Lou Jacobs, CAP candidate for SG president, questioned the right of Lawrinson to isolate itself from the University. He felt that Lawrinson's action limited chances for discussion of University issues.

At other dorms, where receptions were more enthusiastic, Jacobs questioned the idea of open revolution. He said, "I'm coming out against revolution, the kind that puts a university in the headlines as well as the obituaries."

Joe Treple, Jacobs' vice-presidential runningmate, asked students to "stay in the system and work with us." Mary Daley, CAP's secretarial contender, proposed a series of lectures on abortion, narcotics and crime.

Bob Connor, running for treasurer, demanded that "part of the tuition increase go into student priorities."

Jacobs was shadowed most of the night by Ifshin supporters who needled him during question and answer periods.

In response to a question concerning a possible debate

(Continued on Page 4)

SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY: FOUNDED A.D. 1870

DAILY ORANGE

Vol. 67, No. 87 Syracuse, New York, Tuesday, April 15, 1969 10 Cents

Election controversy

Evidence seems to indicate CAP no cleaner than GIA

News analysis by FRED TUCCILLO
News Editor

With 48 hours remaining before the 1969 Student Government elections, evidence placed before the Elections Commission seems to indicate that the validity of the Campus Alliance Party's (CAP) nominating convention is as questionable as that of the Greek Independent Alliance (GIA).

Elections Commissioner Dick Barton stated that action is "pending" on complaints against CAP which could result in:

- the party being found guilty of "negligence"
- the treasurer of the party being found guilty of "negligence"
- the assistant pledgemaster of a fraternity long associated with the party being found guilty of "fraud"

The commission took action against GIA March 20 when evidence revealed that members of one fraternity forged the names of some of their brothers on party membership and proxy lists in an effort to manipulate a greater number of votes in convention.

The complaint was brought by several brothers who claim their names and votes were used without their knowledge or consent. The commission declared GIA guilty of "flagrant negligence" and fined the party $300. The party's executive board was forced to resign and several of its officers barred from campus political office.

Elections Commission regulations stipulated that any party member giving over his votes in the form of a proxy to another party member had to do so in a signed statement. In the case of GIA, such statements were forged.

In an Elections Commission hearing yesterday morning, CAP President Amy Trump admitted that her party had never even bothered to use signed proxies.

Also, several pledge brothers of a fraternity connected with

(Continued on Page 4)

THERE'S ALWAYS room for Jello? Summer-like temperatures this weekend and yesterday brought students out of the dorms in droves. None, however, cooled off in quite this fashion. Janice Fudyma and her brother, Gary, are sitting in a pool of Jello. The pool -- complete with 150 pounds of Jello and a slide leading into it -- was created by Janice as an art class project. Eight cases of raspberry, cherry and strawberry Jello were used for the stunt in back of Haven Hall on Saturday.

Watson begins journey to sanctioned autonomy

By COREY SANDLER

Watson Dormitory took its first, halting steps towards dorm autonomy at a mass meeting last night. Amid much confusion from the several hundred spirited dorm residents present, a motion was passed starting the dorm's quest for autonomy through official channels. Coupled with action through Inter-Dorm Council (IDC) and Student Senate was the threat of an independent declaration of autonomy should the Administration veto the request.

Spokesman Thomas Malpass discussed plans for the living center's bid for independent government. "What we are doing is, in effect, presenting an ultimatum to the administration," he said. "There will be dorm autonomy at Watson on Tuesday, April 22, with the approval of the Administration or not."

The Watson Dorm Council was dissolved by President Mark Cavanaugh at the mass meeting. Floors then elected new representatives to send to the late-night meeting to write a new Constitution. Cavanaugh said that he expected the new document to secure for the dorm the right to control all levels of dorm life.

Copies of the Constitution were expected to be mimeographed and distributed to every resident by this morning.

The initial meeting was called by a group of Watson men who complained of the delay in approval of the autonomy bill. Also in attendance at the meeting were several candidates for Student Government office. When they attempted to speak, however, they were shouted down from the floor. "I feel certain that the election campaign will center around Watson from this point on. This action, though, is that of the men of Watson, and no one else," he said.

One application has been made to IDC this week, and that body will undertake a one-week inspection of the dorm. If it is approved, and a constitution is approved by the Senate before Tuesday, Watson will declare itself autonomous.

The only roadblock foreseen in the path to autonomy is Chancellor Tolley and his Deans. Chuck Hicks, Student Government President, in attendance as an observer, was pessimistic. "I think that the chances of dorm autonomy through channels is pretty slim," he said. Hicks said that he expects the Chancellor to veto the autonomy concept in a message he will send to the Friday CSL meeting.

Consumers' report - - part 1

Penny-wise students shop at downtown stores

By KAREN WIEDIGER

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first in a series of articles scrutinizing the discrepency between prices of student commodities at retail outlets on campus and at stores downtown. In future stories, Daily Orange staffers will examine the comparative costs of food, clothes and dry cleaning.

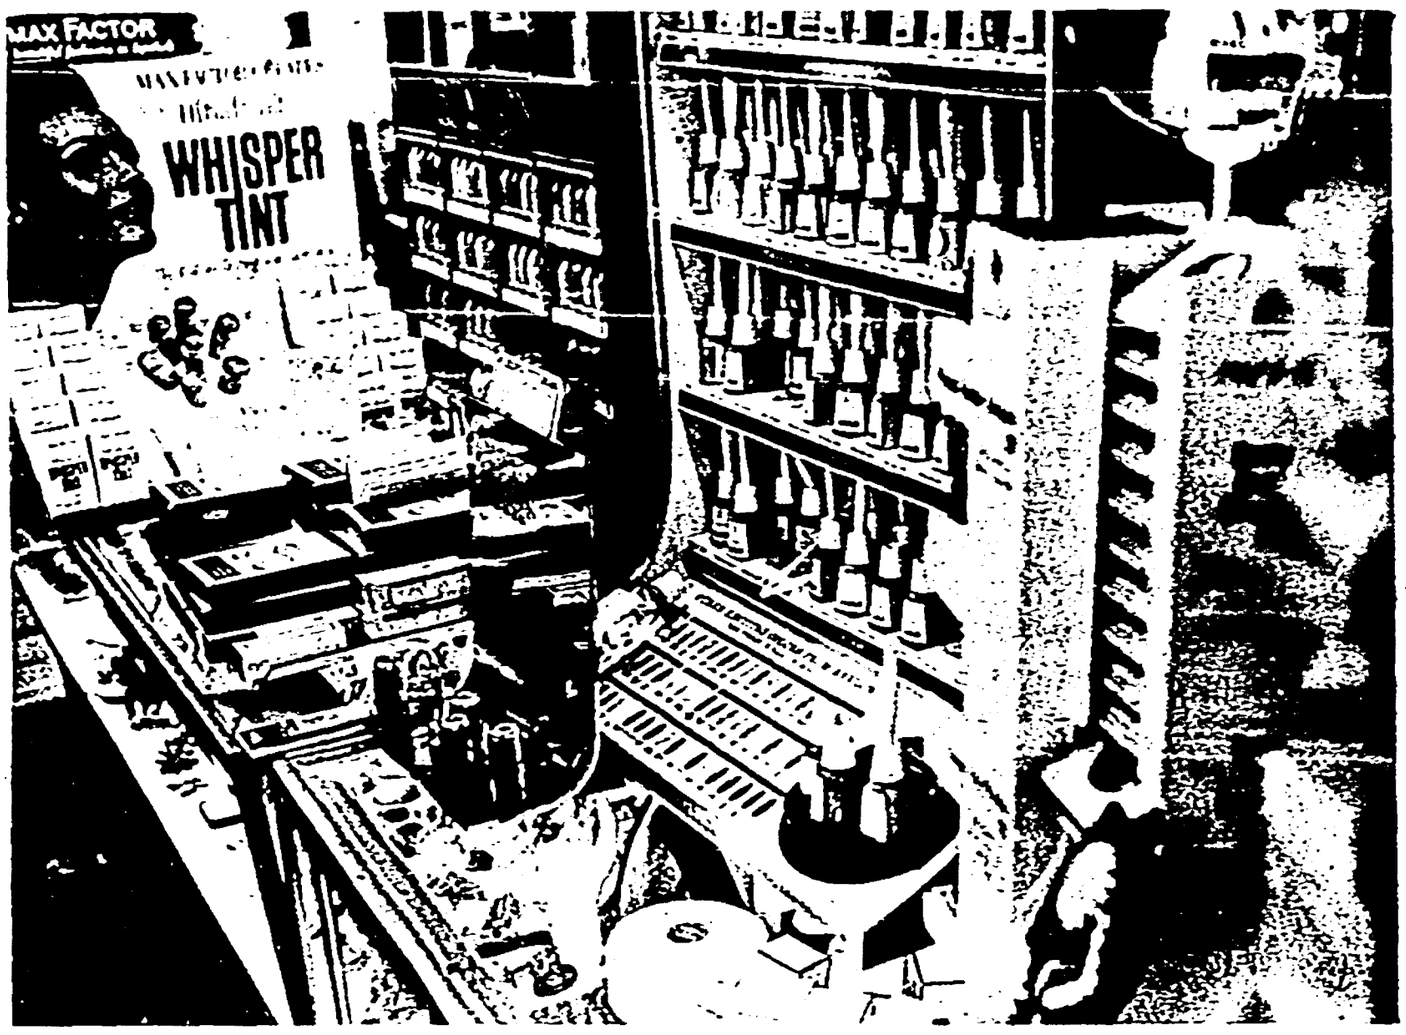
If you believe in saving money, a fifty cent bus ride to the downtown area will help you fill your piggy bank. By shopping outside the Marshall Street and Syracuse Bookstore area it is possible to save untold amounts in cosmetics and drugs alone.

For example a bottle of No Doz containing 60 tablets sells for $1.39 on "M" Street while Woolworths offers if for $1.17 and a discount store for $1.09. The bookstore doesn't even carry it in that size, but has small packages for twice the amount in the downtown stores.

Shaving cream is another commodity which is much higher priced in the SU area. The difference is 20 cents. The stores on Marshall say one of the reasons their items MAY be priced higher is because they buy in smaller quantities than chain stores or places with larger storage room.

"When a chain store puts in an order it is usually much larger than ours. They are given a discount from the manufacturer which is larger than one we could hope to get and can therefore knock off more on their prices," said one merchant.

The store owner then went on to point out the sale on Crest toothpaste which gives five cents off the new flavor. The sale, however, goes on to increase the price of regular Crest to $1.05 in the Bookstore. Downtown stores offer the same size tube for 73 cents.



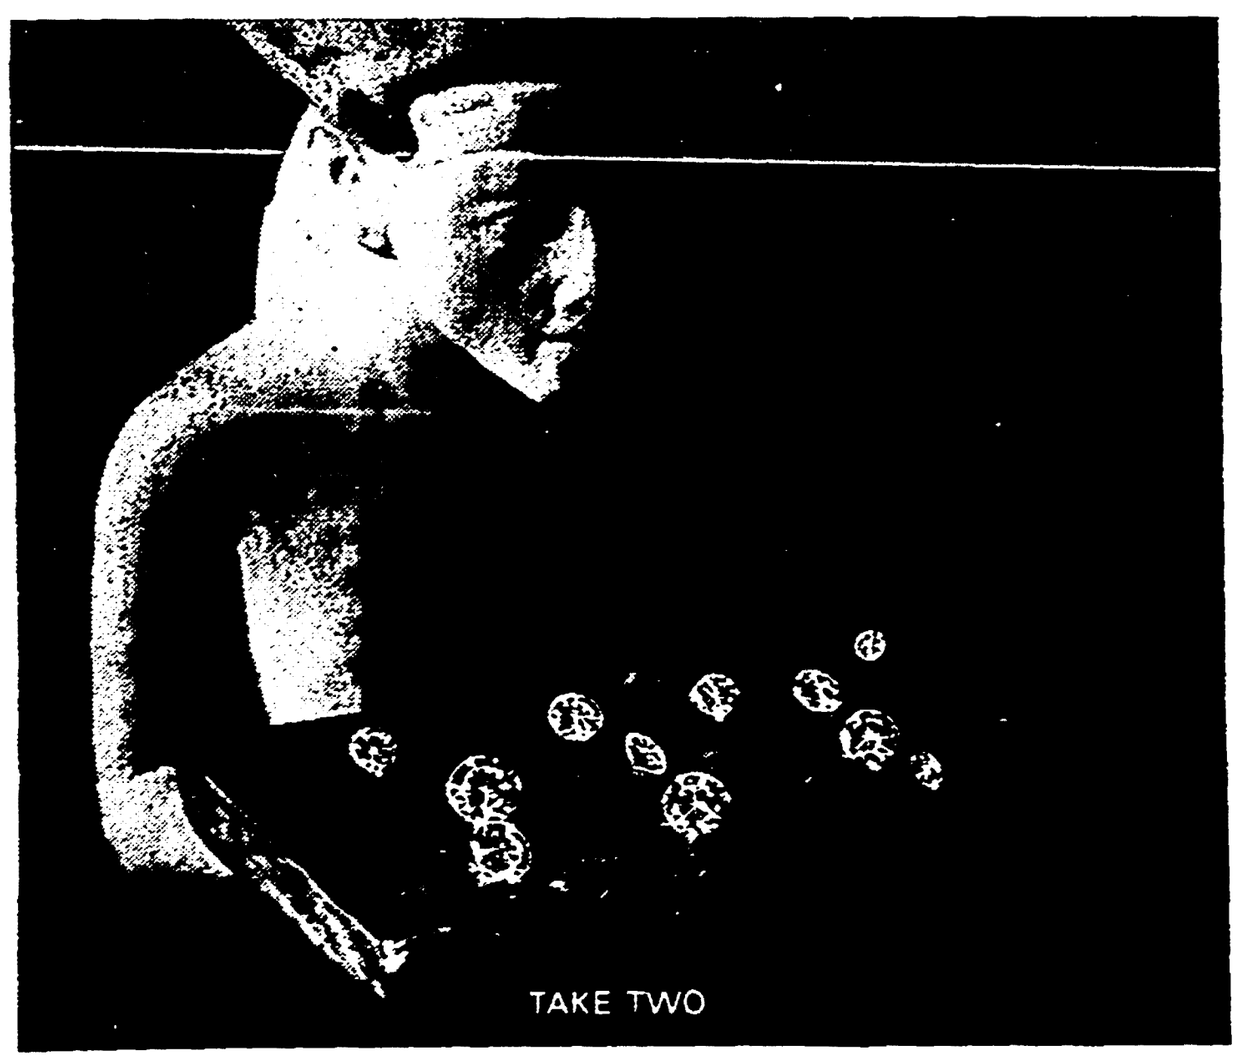
Not only do downtown stores offer lower prices, they have more sizes of the same brand product to offer. With this in mind, potential customers can not only save money on small amounts but also buy in bulk and save more proportionately.

A discount store offers three sizes of Right Guard spray deodrant in comparison to two in a Marshall Street drug store and one in the main bookstore. The same is true of Arid extra dry spray. The prices range form a low of 77 cents in Woolworths to $1.69 in the Bookstore.

Although by shopping in the Bookstore, customers from the University save a three block walk to "M" Street, the price difference between those blocks is quite evident. The bookstore, which is able to buy in large quantities because of its several branches seems to feel that the price difference is justified. Apparently it is because the amount of business done there is evident. Dial soap in the bookstore is 25 cents a bar while a downtown store offers two bars for 43 cents. Although this is only a small savings, when a customer buys several items at once, the inconvenience of a bus ride is worth the extra effort on the part of the shopper.

In the main bookstore, there is also a special section for cosmetics and drugs. Make-up prices range from 50 cents to $2 above those of the downtown stores, including Dey Brothers. These products, which are nationally known, have suggested prices from the main companies. The SU area stores

(Continued on Page 4)



BOOKSTORE COSMETICS: students attracted by the Bookstore's convenient location, rather than by competitive prices, keep the inventory on these shelves moving at a steady clip. Students with enough motivation and time save considerable amount by picking up their supplies at a discount pharmacy downtown. (Photo by Clemens)

Happy Birthday, Both

The heart has its reasons, which reason does not understand.

always, a.

We call our diamonds of the finest color
"Collection Blue." Select yours and let us create an original for her.

Divide your payments

HENRYS
Fine Jewelers Since 1918

348 S Salina Street • Syracuse
Also in Binghamton-Endicott and Watertown

WOLF
&
MARKVI
Present
the
RASCALS

FRIDAY NITE, APRIL 18, 8 P.M.
at the
Onondaga War Memorial
Tickets — $4, $5, $6

Mail orders now accepted at box office. Tickets on sale April 1st at: The Record Rumner, S U Corner Store Vi on's Leading Jewelers and War Memorial.

ONE DAY
Spring Special at CARVEL
Nottingham Shopping Center
THICK SHAKES
SUNDAES
ICE CREAM SODAS
30c
THURSDAY, APRIL 17th ONLY
Make It a Date!

ANGUS H. TWOMBLY — Editor-in-Chief

MANAGING EDITOR— Alan Stamm EDITORIAL DIRECTOR— Karen Wiediger NEWS EDITOR— Fred Tuccillo COPY EDITOR— Jean Havens FEATURE EDITOR— Roz Mazer SPORTS EDITOR— Mike Weber EXECUTIVE EDITOR— David A. Ross CAMPUS AFFAIRS EDITOR— Larry Kramer PHOTOGRAPHY EDITOR— Clint Clemens ASSOCIATE EDITORS— Andrij Bilyk, Kay Christensen, Beth Hillson, Rona Kavee, Helene Macdonald, Charles Shapiro, Dan Schlossberg, Patti Williams, Roni Zlokower,

DAILY ORANGE

Syracuse University's Daily Newspaper Since 1903

TUESDAY, MARCH 15 page 3

STEVEN P. STROBRIDGE — Business Manager

ASSISTANT BUSINESS MANAGER— Art Depasqua, NATIONAL ADVERTISING MANAGER— Janet Meyer ACCOUNT EXECUTIVES— Roger Black, Jim Maney, Mike Greenstein.

Published Tuesday, through Friday during the academic year by students of Syracuse University. Offices located at 200 Brooklea Drive, Fayetteville, N.Y., and 1101 East Adams St., Syracuse, New York. Entered as Second Class matter at the U.S. Post Office, Fayetteville, N.Y. 13066.

Elections

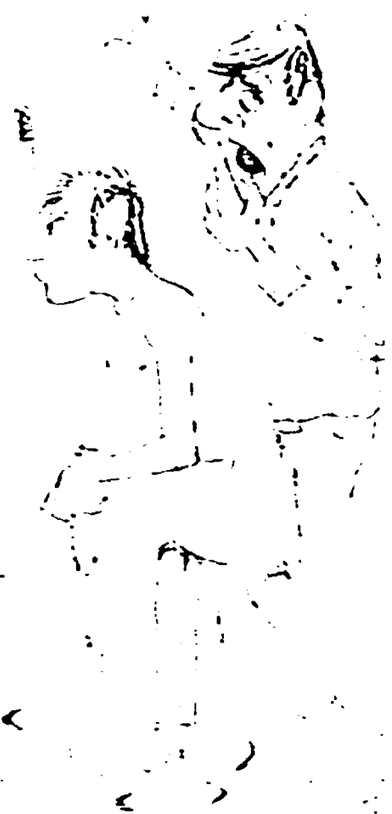
The University Judicial Board, with the encouragement of elections commission chairman Dick Barton, has returned Ed Barron to his SG slate. It was a wise move by the UJB, and at least some of the injustice of the campaign's opening day has been corrected.

There is yet much that leaves the Daily Orange unhappy and disgruntled -- much that should leave the student body disgruntled as well.

After Chicago and Miami, it was easy to see that something was very wrong with the system. It's also easy to see here. But the same problems that will prevail as the Democrats and Republicans work at reforming their convention and nominating machinery will plague us here at SU.

SU politics are petty -- more petty than Chicago ever could have been. There are too many small-minded individuals willing to spread rumor, lies and trickery and twice as many stupid enough to believe them.

Others are only too reluctant to yield the power or the alleged power of the campus political wheel, and, thus, will block the system from the overhaul it needs.



But, today is Tuesday, and, two days hence, an election is at hand. As nice as it would be to pretend that nobody was running, or that none of this was really happening, it is, and someone is going to win. As desirable as it may be to ignore the system, this is not the year to do it.

Look carefully, ye Syracuse voters, at who your next leaders will be. They may lead you and Syracuse to greatness one day.

Make the effort to listen in on speeches. They're usually a lot of rubbish and rhetoric, and, if so, ask questions. Ask candidates what they're going to do to improve your education. Ask them what can make SU more relevant, and, if they talk about weekends, forget them. Weekends and rhetoric will not make us great, my friends. Fun and excitement they may be, but there is so much more here that really is wrong.

Shop around for your candidates. Don't stick to one party label. Find out who's willing to reason. Who will work around and without the establishment but is also willing to give the system a try? Find out who knows that system best, and stick with him.

"We of the Campus Alliance of Greeks and Independents (CAGI) are all choked up over this overwhelming reception which, we feel, justifies the high esteem in which we hold ourselves."

dinner: tour de farce

Syracuse University's School of Journalism did not want to put itself out by coming down from its ivory tower. Last Friday night, it did the next best thing–the mere mortals were invited up.

The J-School's Not-Too-Annual Banquet was held in the dynamic splendor of the East Room of the Hotel Syracuse, 10 full stories above the thriving metropolis. In good journalistic style, it must be reported that dinner was served, speeches were given, and a good time was had by all. Or is it all good people were had?

Admission to the gala affair was $10 a head, with students admitted for half price (this was stamped right on the ticket, reminding the money-soaked undergrad what a bargain he was getting). The most closely kept secret of the night was the existence of an open bar before the banquet. They probably could have sold a lot more tickets had it been publicized.

For the students who were there, the cocktail hour was the highlight of the evening. Generally the faculty talked with the faculty, the downtown people with the downtown people, and the administrators with everybody, thus leaving the younger members of the group to tank in peace. A genial ex-editor of the "Promethean," went flying around the room, telling anyone who would listen, "If I had known it was open bar, I would have been here yesterday." Others simply downed as many as they could in an hour, trying to live up to the pace Jimmy Cagney set as an alcoholic journalist in "Come Fill the Cup."

Mike Stephens

Next on the agenda was supposed to be dinner in the main dining room. Preceding it, however, was an unscheduled game of musical chairs. Sly recruiters from various publications, distinguished or otherwise, came around to the tables of the "outstanding" young journalists. They tried to mask their intentions by luring coeds with such provocative lines as, "We would love to have you at our table." When they had them alone, however, they would make such advances as offering them reporters jobs in Lockport or Batavia at $70 or maybe even $80 dollars a week. With a deal like that, how can you hate it?

Dean Clark took over as master of ceremonies before dessert. His major contribution to the evening was refraining from any remarks other than introductions.

The speeches, of course, were left for last. The longest belonged to the two recipients of the J-School Medal. The first was boring, and provided little excitement. By the time the second had started, however, crowd tension reached a high pitch. Heavy money was being put down under the table on whether or not Drew Pearson would fall sound asleep.

Pearson, author of the Washington Merry-Go-Round, the syndicated column of the "New York Post," as well as the best selling novel The Senator, was seated at the dais, next to Vice Chancellor Piskor. He started bobbing and weaving, in the manner known to all those with eight a.m. classes, about midway through the second speech. Piskor, with a big smile on his face glanced at him once, then quickly turned away, and concentrated on keeping himself awake.

While the two medalists made long acceptance speeches, none of the student award winners were asked to say anything. Maybe somebody was scared about what somebody might say.

Anyway, it was an interesting evening. But you had to be wrecked to enjoy it.

the spring offensive?

The Ides of March welcomed and marked well, the occasion for ritual, renewal and commemoration of the tyrant's demise, the germination of chaotic life and the first year past the sweet moment of Administration-Building-take-over-love-feast, we now look inward into the organism and heave of university life. A spring equinox is just around the revolution of earth about sun, the body-revolution itself is rising in serial insurrection; tyrants beware! a Spring Offensive!

Lookin inward at the innards, we find the colon of structural confinement that is the University masculature to be in bad shape. The student masses, a class comprising the sons and daughters of mid-20th Century suburban bourgeoisie, moment-by moment churning and expanding against these repressive walls. Issues, themselves but reflection, appear divisive and better left behind. Materially surfeited, a cultural revolution has worked its alchemy among these young ones over the dorm and domicile locked winter, and, waking past the Ides from the heavy Bergmanian dreamscape, they will have their day.

Marshall Rosenthal

Scanning, scanning, we sense the hotbed of pothead brush fire intrigue. All issues are treated inversely and are rendered essence. Gatherings will appear and be sensate, inarticulate, pre-verbal. Arcane ritual will baffle the cops and jocks and ROTC's. Circe and Diana will present their gifts, and the sun will receive its odes in worship.

What this means, o crusty University, is that it's melting right out from under you. You needn't move of your own accord, for the soils are already in transit. The wise administrator might take the following paths:
Grant autonomy at all hai
Seek peace in selfless, non Give the Blacks their lion'
Discover in the young the Allow for the turmoil that Celebrate

Grant autonomy at all hands
Seek peace in selfless, non-negotiable gifts
Give the Blacks their lion's due
Discover in the young the Autonomous Theater of the Mind
Allow for the turmoil that collapsing structure seems Celebrate

What, o University, will you receive in return? Perhaps nothing. Perhaps the experience of a stimulation hither to unexpected. Those who can still read will soar into the literary bag. Those who have unlearned may discover new routes.

Good luck. Spring Offensive is upon us!

Orange squeezed dry

Bar owner has sad mug

Trouble may be brewing at The Orange as owner Henry Bloom feels the squeeze of an eight-year-old income tax evasion rap.

Bloom, 4197 East Genesee Street, has pleaded guilty before Judge Edmond Port in Federal District Court to the charge of failing to file an income tax return in 1961.

Everyone who earns more than $600 per year must file a return with the Internal Revenue Service. According to Federal investigators Bloom grossed $88,516.02 in 1961 without filing a return. He faces a maximum sentence of one year in jail, a $10,000 fine, or both.

Also hanging over Bloom's head is a 1962 charge of failing to report that year's $84,122.93 income. That case has not yet come up in court.

In what may be a related development, Bloom faces a disciplinary hearing this Friday before the Onondaga County Beverage Control Board. A hearing officer from the Board's compliance division in Albany, N.Y., will conduct the proceedings at the State Office Building downtown.

Bloom, who also owns the Warren Grill, has the distinction of owning the only liquor license on campus.

Shopping . . .

(Continued from Page 2)

have intentionally ignored or avoided the suggestions, however.

Listerine mouthwash has the suggested price of 99 cents on the 14 ounce size but one store takes off 20 cents from that while the area drug stores go up to $1.19 and $1.49. Again, four sizes and offered in the former with two in the "M" Street area.

One other factor in picking a shopping area for pharmaceutical items is important. The stores with more display space and lower prices also offer more articles along the same line of products. Fifteen different shampoos ranging from Prell and Breck to egg and lemon mixtures are available in most of the downtown stores while one drug store in the SU area has eight.

It is true that some times people don't have the time to go downtown or search for lower prices. But when there is time, money becomes an important factor. The price of a bus ride or the cost of gas does not begin to equal or exceed the savings which are available away from the campus area.

STUDENT GOVERNMENT

Thirteen student leaders including Chuck Hicks met in a closed session yesterday to discuss their grievances. Today they are hoping to speak with administrators in a closed meeting in the Founders Room in Maxwell at 4:30 p.m.

The administrators who have been asked to come are Frank P. Piskor, Jim G. Carleton, F.A. Wingate, David Tatham, Marjorie C. Smith, Lester Dye, Arthur Fritz, Newell Rossman, Kenneth G. Bartlett and Frederic Kramer.

The students will present their questions and grievances to the administrators and their suggestions for ways in changing the matters which they feel are at fault.

Controversy . . .

(Continued from page 1)

CAP charged that their names were placed on membership lists and proxy lists without their consent.

In GIA, the "signed" proxies were forgeries. In CAP, there was apparently no forgery – signed proxies were dispensed with althogether.

Whatever proxy lists might have been used at CAP's convention were destroyed by party officials. "We just didn't need them any longer, Miss Trump explained.

The assistant pledgemaster of the Greek house involved in yesterday's hearing testified that he had, at a pledge meeting, given pledges an opportunity to say whether or not they wanted to join CAP, and that he had contacted and informed those pledges not present at the meeting.

Pledges who filed the complaint deny this. They claim they were simply told they would be members of CAP. Elections Commissioner Barton investigated these conflicting claims at the Greek house last night and said that he would report his findings to the commission.

The assistant pledgemaster could be found guilty of "fraud."

In addition, it was established in yesterday morning's hearing that CAP Treasurer Joe Gorham neglected to secure a proxy or membership list from the assistant pledgemaster, who happened to be his fraternity brother.

Gorham could therefore befound guilty of "negligence."

Whatever the outcome, the findings have strong political implications. The fortunes of GIA were seriously damaged by their March 20 scandal and, of course, CAP benefited.

Now, with the brief campaign nearing a close, voters will apparently be confronted with the facts that CAP's nominating convention was not very much cleaner than GIA's.

Ifshin . . .

(Continued from Page 1)

elimination of all class governments, with their fund turned over to the University Union.

Concerning the administration, Ifshin found many faults with existing policy.

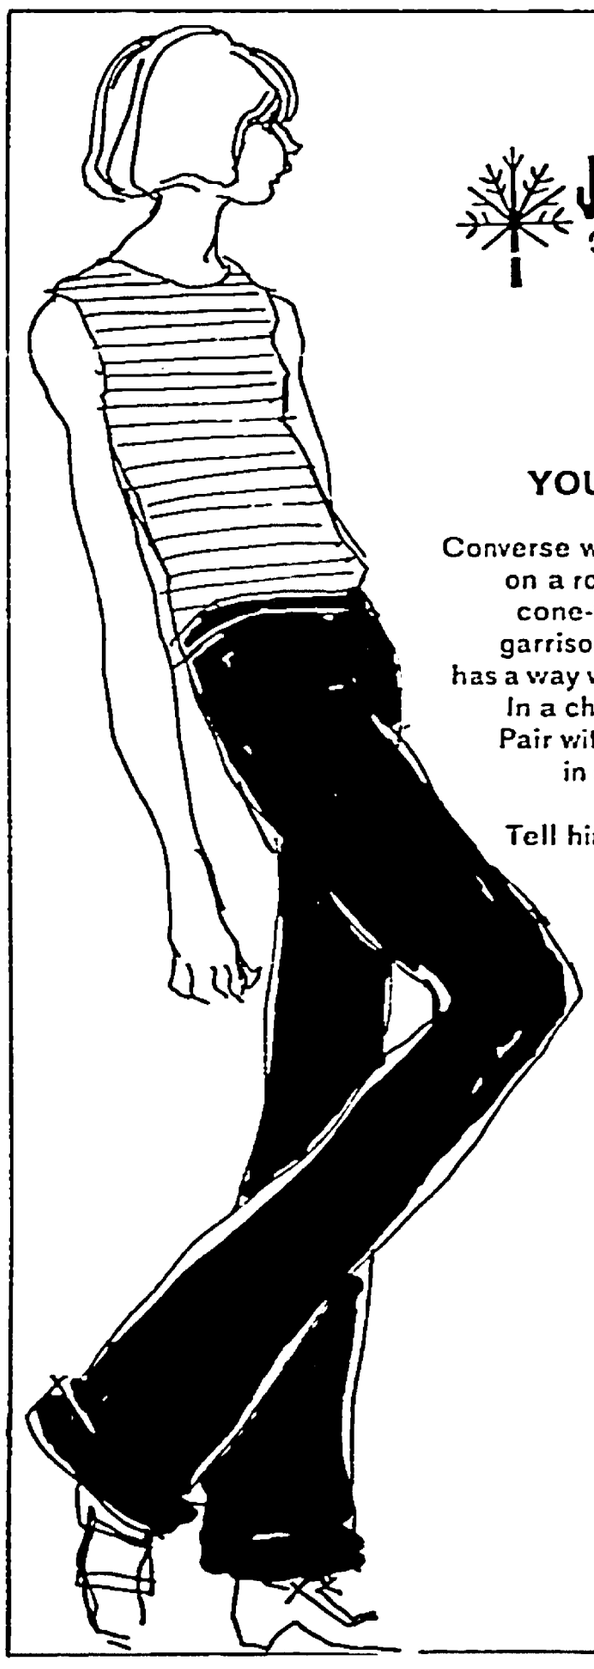
"We want establishment of the "tenant-landlord" relationship in our dormitories. We support full dormitory autonomy and an immediate end to Rule One," continued Ifshin.

A major plan in Ifshin's platform calls for an end to the Pinebrook conference as it stands. "Do you realize that one-fourth ($2000) of Student Governments budget, is spent hosting faculty and administrators in workshops with student leaders during a three-day stay in the Adirondacks. I propose a five-day conference on campus, open to all students, with coffee house-type meetings, and workshops."

Commenting on last night's all-dorm meeting at Watson, Ifshin said,"First, you must decide what are your rights and what are your priviledges. Then you must examine the channels available to accomplish your means. I believe that dorm Autonomy is a right, not a priviledge, there should be no channels to have to go through in this case."

The final topic spoken about at most of Ifshin's floor visits was the "mobilization of students." Ifshin and Barron described the St. Marys drive and eventual success towards getting autonomy.

Barron, originally declared ineligible to run by the elections commission, got back in the race when the University Judicial Board overruled the commission decision.



Jacobs . . .

(Continued from page 1)

with Ifshin, Jacobs said he would attend one.

Jacobs also promised, "area primaries next year and no conventions" in response to a question concerning CAP's political ml machine.

A campaign worker for Jacobs said, "we're in a lot of trouble. People have a bogey-man machine image of our party. It's simply not true."

JOHN MEYER of NORWICH

JOHN MEYER SPEAKS YOUR LANGUAGE

Converse with the crew (even on a rowboat)—in our trig cone-leg pants of cotton garrison twill. John Meyer has a way with a pair of pants. In a choice of colors. $14. Pair with a pin-stripe shell in cotton knit. Lots of colors. $6. Tell him she's yare (even if it's a rowboat)—but communicate!

Campus Clothiers
S.U. BOOKSTORES

BELLS! FASHION VESTS! BODY SHIRTS!

S. U. BOOKSTORE

CAB CALLOWAY

Cab Calloway

Star to shine for Newman

By BOB ZUER

Broadway and television star Cab Calloway will perform this Sunday at 8 p.m. in Hendricks Chapel in a benefit for the Syracuse University Newman Association.

Also on the bill are the Pompeian Players, a theater group founded 15 years ago by Newman Association Chaplain Father Charles Borgognoni, which has since gorwn to be one of the most prominent theatrical groups in the country. They will perform excerpts from their production, "Fiorello." The production stars WFBS radio personality Jerry Sanders, and will be directed by Father Borgognoni.

Calloway, who is currently co-starring opposite Pearl Bailey in the smash Broadway hit musical, "Hello Dolly," is known as one of the most dynamic entertainers in show business and one of the greatest Blues singers of all time. Calloway's concerts are a blend of the big band sounds that rocketed him to stardom and the hits of today's Broadway and popular music scene.

Known as the "King of the Hi-De-Ho," Calloway has spent over 40 years in the entertainment business, yet his style and manner appeal to all age groups.

Calloway's last Syracuse appearance was in October, 1966, as the headliner of the "Post Standard" fashion show. His previous dates here included the Persian Terrace of the Hotel Syracuse and the Three Rivers Inn.

Tickets will be available tomorrow through Friday between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. on the HBC patio and at the Newman Center, 112 Walnut Pl. (X-2600 or 478-5959).

Subjects Needed for Physiological Study

Qualifications: Male or female - 21 to 35 years of age, with at least a high school education. Participants will be paid $15.00 for two sessions of approximately 2 hours each. Only morning appointments are available.

If interested call Upstate Medical Center, 473-5775; ask for Mrs. Jessen.

GEORGE WEIN Presents the 16th Annual

NEWPORT JAZZ FESTIVAL

July 3 thru July 6, 1969

At Festival Field • Newport, Rhode Island

Four Evening Concerts — Thursday: For the Jazz Aficionado — Willie Bobo, Kenny Burrell, Bill Evans/Jeremy Steig, Young-Holt Unlimited, Freddie Hubbard, Sonny Murray, Anita O'Day, Sun Ra, and others. Friday: An Evening of Jazz-Rock — Jeff Beck, Blood, Sweat and Tears, Roland Kirk, Steve Marcus, Ten Years After, Jethro Tull; and others. Saturday: Dave Brubeck/Gerry Mulligan, Woody Herman, Sly and the Family Stone, O. C. Smith, World's Greatest Jazz Band, and others. Sunday: Schlitz Mixed Bag — Herbie Hancock, B. B. King, Buddy Rich Orch., Buddy Tate Band, Joe Turner, Winter, Led Zeppelin, and others.

Three Afternoon Concerts — Friday: Giant Jam Session with Jimmy Smith and Friends. Saturday: Art Blakey, Gary Burton, Miles Davis, Mothers of Invention, Newport All-Stars, Red Norvo, Tal Farlow, Ruby Braff, and others. Sunday: An Afternoon with James Brown.

Evening and Sunday Afternoon Tickets:
$3.50, 4.50, 5.50, 6.50 — Box Seats $10.00
Friday and Saturday Afternoon — General Admission $4.00

THE NEWPORT FOLK FOUNDATION Presents the

NEWPORT FOLK FESTIVAL

July 16 thru July 20

Four Major Evening Concerts Thursday through Sunday; afternoon Workshops Friday and Saturday; Children's Day Wednesday; concert Wednesday evening; Friday and Saturday evenings (additional concerts at another location); Sunday afternoon.

Johnny Cash, June Carter, Len Chandler, Judy Collins, Champion Jack Dupree, Ramblin' Jack Elliott, Everly Brothers, Ike Everly, Jesse Fuller, Arlo Guthrie, Rev. F. D. Kirkpatrick, Tex Logan, Taj Mahal, Joni Mitchell, Bill Monroe, Bernice Reagon, Don Reno & Bill Harrell, Pete Seeger, Otis Spann, Muddy Waters, Billy Ed Wheeler, Mac Wiseman, and many others.

Major Evening Concerts — Thurs., Fri., Sat., Sun.:
$3.50, 4.50, 5.50 — Box Seats $10.00
Fri. & Sat. eve. subsidiary concerts, Sun. aft. concert:
General Admission $3.00
Wed. eve. concert, Fri. and Sat. aft. Workshops: Gen. Adm. $2.00
— Group Rates Available —

SPECIAL DISCOUNT ON MAIL ORDERS PRIOR TO JUNE 1
(Folk Festival only)
20% off on tickets to individual events
40% off on series including all events Thursday thru Sunday

• All Programs Subject to Change

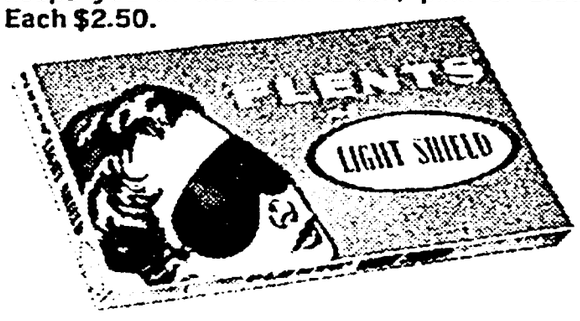
For information and ticket order forms
Write . . . Newport Festivals, P.O. Box 329
Newport, Rhode Island 02840

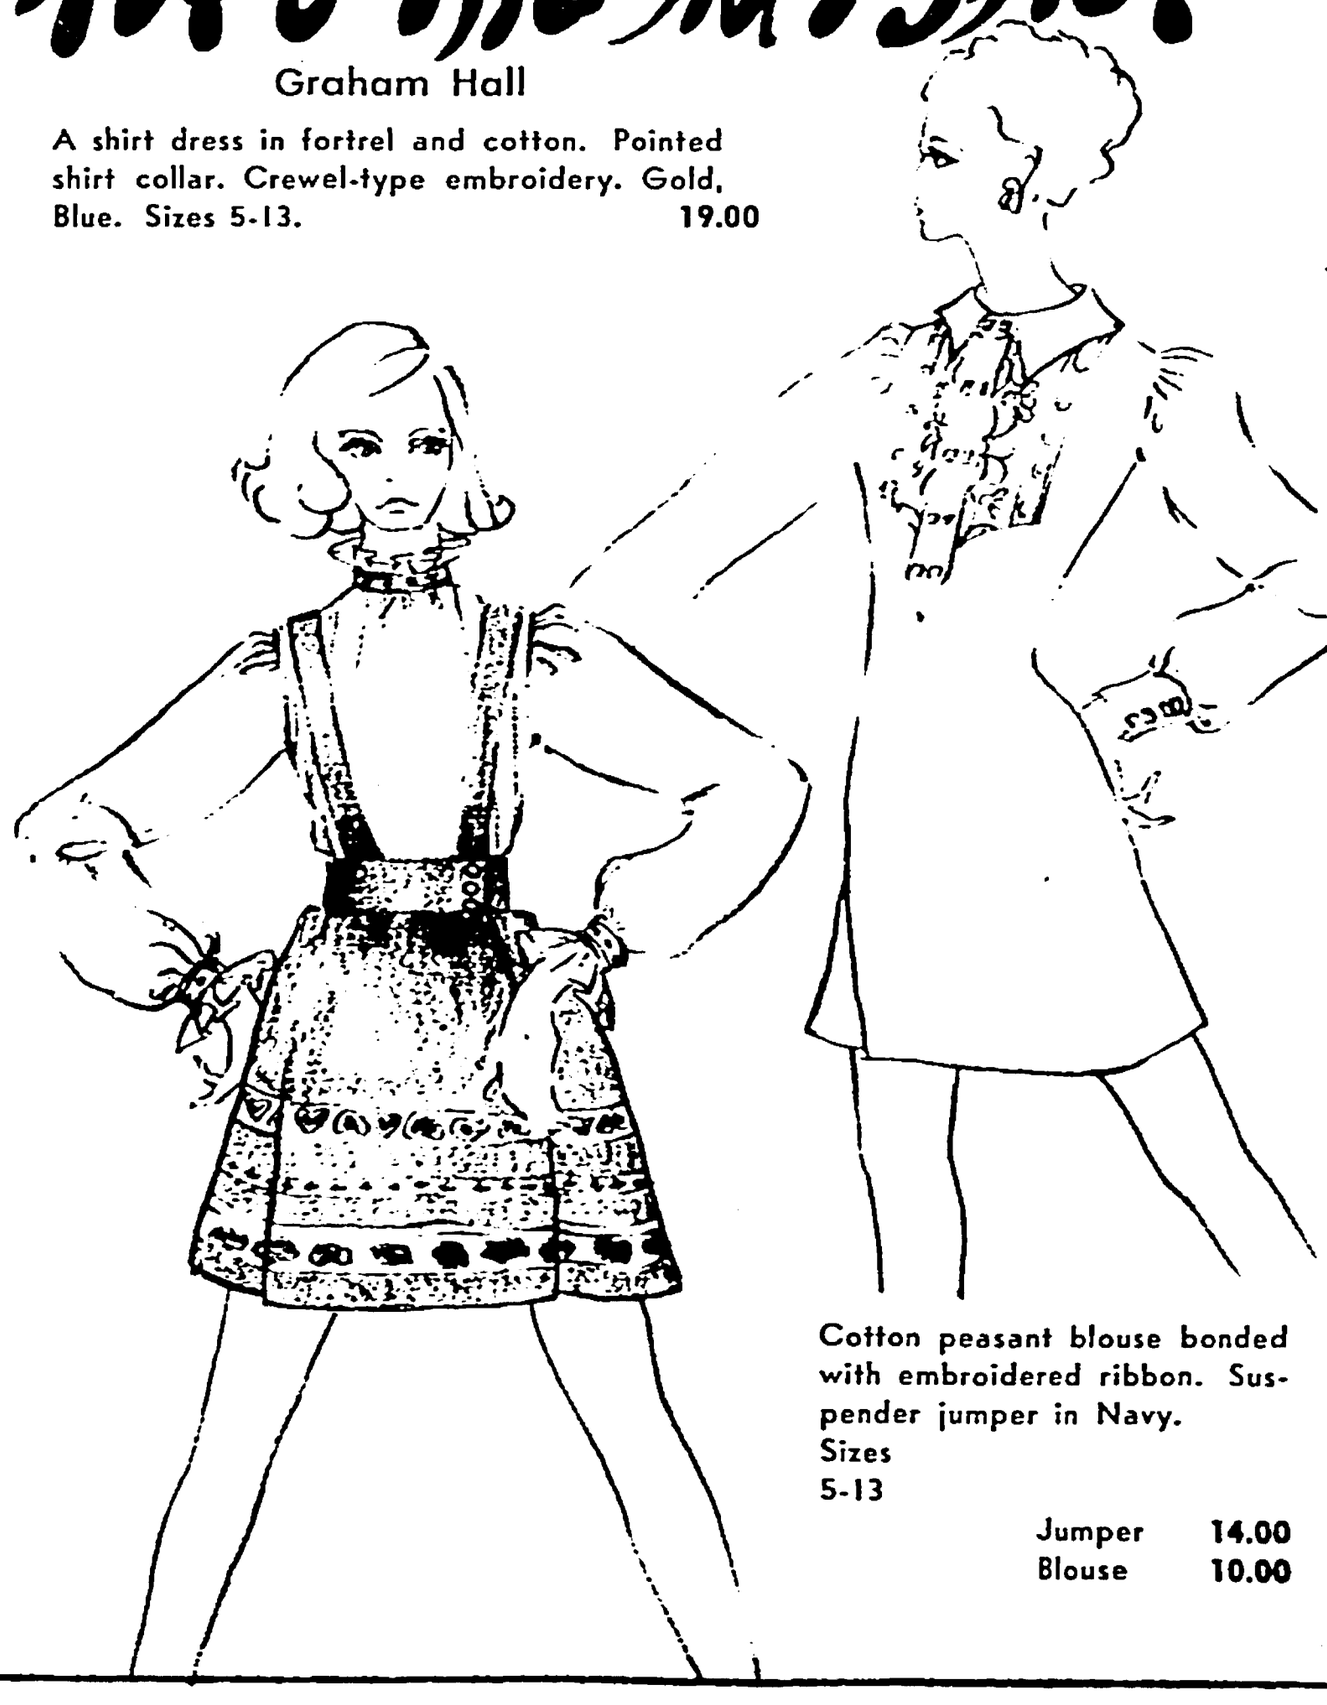


WANT TO TURN OFF THE TURNED-ON WORLD?

Try FLENTS®

When it all gets too much, just put a pair of soft, pliable Flents Ear Stopples in your ears. Instant peace and quiet! Study, sleep, meditate, turn on to your own thing . . . with Flents. One pair 40¢, 6 pairs $1.75.

And if a late-studying, light-burning roommate is the problem, Flents Light Shield is the answer. Comfortable, light in weight . . . it really keeps you in the dark! Black, pink or blue. Each $2.50.

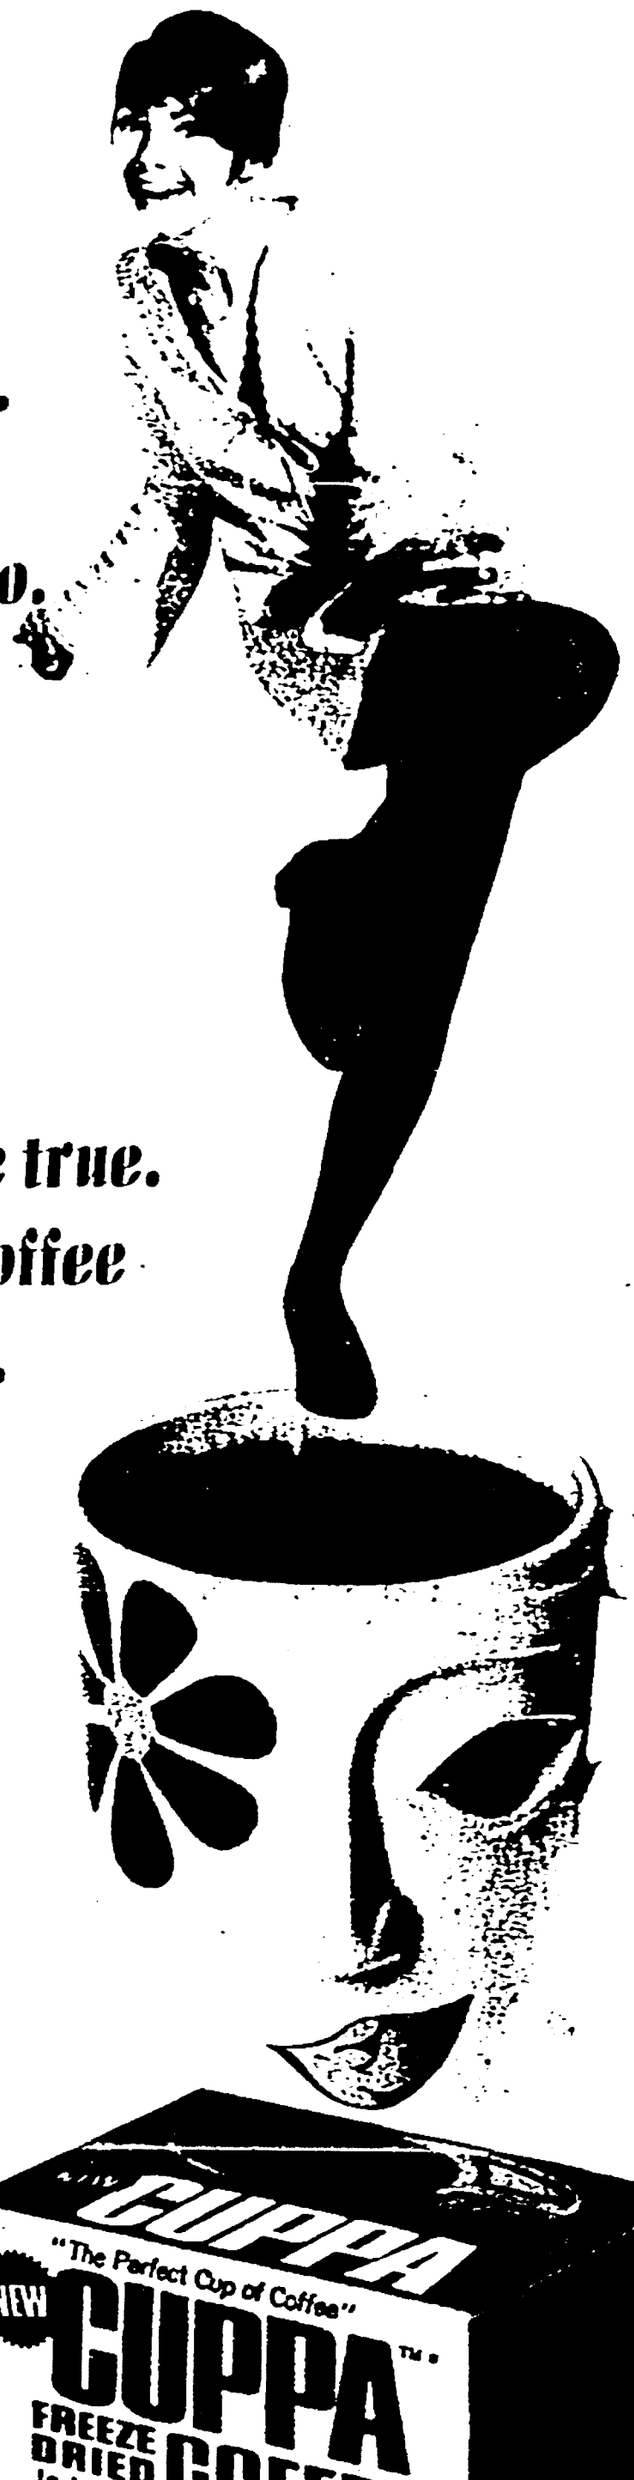


At your drug counter. Or send check or M.O. to Flents Products Co., Inc. Dept. C-1, 103 Park Avenue, New York, New York 10017. No C.O.D.'s.

TOP O' THE MT SHOP

Graham Hall

A shirt dress in fortrel and cotton. Pointed shirt collar. Crewel-type embroidery. Gold, Blue. Sizes 5-13. 19.00



Cotton peasant blouse bonded with embroidered ribbon. Suspender jumper in Navy. Sizes 5-13

Jumper 14.00
Blouse 10.00

CUPPA's™ freeze dried coffee in the cool spoon.

It's the think drink
that makes you go go go.
CUPPA's never stale
or bitter tasting.
No percolator that keeps you waiting.
CUPPA's fresh brew
keeps that perked taste true.
You can take CUPPA Coffee
wherever you go oh-oh.

It's a fact! All you need is water and a CUPPA spoon to make a perfect cup of fresh perked coffee each and every time. Premeasured CUPPA coffee sealed in each foil spoon gives balanced full bodied flavor that's never stale or bitter tasting. Imagine fresh perked coffee in a jiffy without a percolator. Just peel back the lid, pour the CUPPA coffee into water and stir with CUPPA spoon. No messy jars to contend with.

CUPPA spoon is disposable too (though it's so pretty you won't want to dispose of it—some people collect them for serving hors d'oeuvres and for cheese dips. Some people color them for Christmas tree decorations and even make necklaces and matching earrings—groovy!)

Take CUPPA—to school, office, picnics, vacations, and even to your favorite ski resort where the chile may be great but the coffee not so—just ask for hot water. The only way to serve really fresh perked Freeze Dried Coffee is in a premeasured serving spoon.

That's CUPPA™ the "perfect cup of coffee." Now at your local food market.

NEW CUPPA

Ward Foods, Inc., 2 Penn Plaza, New York
© 1968 by Ward Foods, Inc.

Soph hopefuls hit dorms

GIA's Liebowitz hits Watson move

By BOB DAVIS

Matty Liebowitz, a sophomore presidential candidate of GIA, commented last night that the tumultuous Watson dorm autonomy meeting was close to "anarchy."

Liebowitz said he likes immediate action because you then have great student support. He warned, however, that Watson was running in danger of "destroying student channels like Inter-Dormitory Council, not administrative channels," by insisting on instant dorm autonomy.

Earlier in the night, Liebowitz campaigned before small, relatively uninterested crowds in St. Mary's with Ronnie Kemper, the vice-presidential candidate, Nancy Friedman, secretarial candidate, and Howie Lippman, candidate for treasurer.

In response to a question concerning class government, Liebowitz labeled the present class governmental structure as "a joke." He said that he is running for president because he wants to change the system.

Liebowitz said, "Student Government needs decentralization." He feels that class governments can lead the fight for this change. The GIA candidates are running on a platform which they call "Operation Wake-up."

Liebowitz empahsized that this is a program to bring "an intellectual and cultural atmosphere to Syracuse."

Liebowitz would introduce a speaker program where the class government would spend up to $800 to bring famous orators to campus.

After Liebowitz spoke, Miss Kemper told the crowd about the social plans of GIA. She wants to plan an Orientation Week concert based on students' tastes.

With that experience, she feels it would be easier for her to plan a successful Homecoming Weekend.

Her Homecoming plans include a speech by a controversial leader on Friday night. The most novel part of her plan would occur Saturday night, when she would contract a large plastic-producing corporation to erect several huge plastic domes on the quad. In each dome would occur a different "happening" or light show. She also suggests an art sale on the quad with a guest lecturer.

Following this, girls with lunch baskets would be auctioned for the highest price to raise money. This plan seemed to impress last night's crowds the most.

CAP campaigners expound programs

By CONNIE COMAREK

Last night's vote-getting campaign of the Campus Alliance Party sophomore class officers had to be curtailed somewhat due to two events.

Bob Tembeckjian, incumbent freshman class president and candidate for sophomore class president, felt that his presence at Student Government cabinet meeting was more important for the welfare of the University than campaigning. He was the only class president who gave up his time to work for immediate ends. He also felt that his presence was desirable at Watson dormitory in lieu of their move tonight for dorm autonomy.

In spite of these setbacks, he and his running mates Nancy Hess, Vice-president, Anne Adamcewicz, secretary and Herb Von Shilling, treasurer managed to visit Winchell Hall and four floors on Watson East.

Tembeckjian and his running mates stressed in their campaign the need for a more personal University. They proposed a grievance committee to hear the complaints of dissatisfied students and a committee to meet and discuss issues of concern to students with the newly-elected chancellor.

CAP Soph Exec council would like to increase their influence in academic areas by instituting black studies programs including a survey course open to freshmen and sophomores. They also propose to have more faculty forum discussions, to have professors from other universities discuss issues with Syracuse professors and have more academic happenings on the idea of the St. Mary's happenings some weeks ago.

While they wish to deemphasize the social role that class government has had in the past, they are determined to make such events as Homecoming Weekend enjoyable and interesting for the entire student body. They feel it would be beneficial to work with the centennial committee immediately to plan next year's Homecoming. The weekend would begin on Thursday with a noted political or academic speaker addressing students at Manley Fieldhouse. This would be followed by presentation of the Queen and the traditional bonfire. On Friday afternoon, there would be a Sophomore class TGIF with entertainment. Saturday would begin with an alumni student brunch before the football game. Nighttime activities would include films at HBC, a mixed media show, and a discotheque for students, parents and alumni.

ROTC committee meets, discusses program needs

By RONI ZLOKOWER
Associate Editor

Appointed by the Agenda Committee of the Faculty Senate in early March, the Committee on R.O.T.C. is meeting weekly to examine Syracuse University's specific needs concerning its Military Science Program.

On May 7, the committee hopes to make its final recommendations to the Faculty Senate.

Chaired by Nelson Nemerow, professor of civil engineering, the committee includes representatives from the faculty, administration, undergraduate and graduate student bodies and ROTC.

Following is a listing of faculty and administrative committee members: Martin Barzelay, professor of mechanical and aerospace engineering; Melvin Eggers, chairman of the economics dept.; William Wasserstrom, professor of English; Walter Beattie, dean of the School of Social Work; Oliver Clubb, associate professor of political science and Robert McDowell, assistant to the dean of engineering.

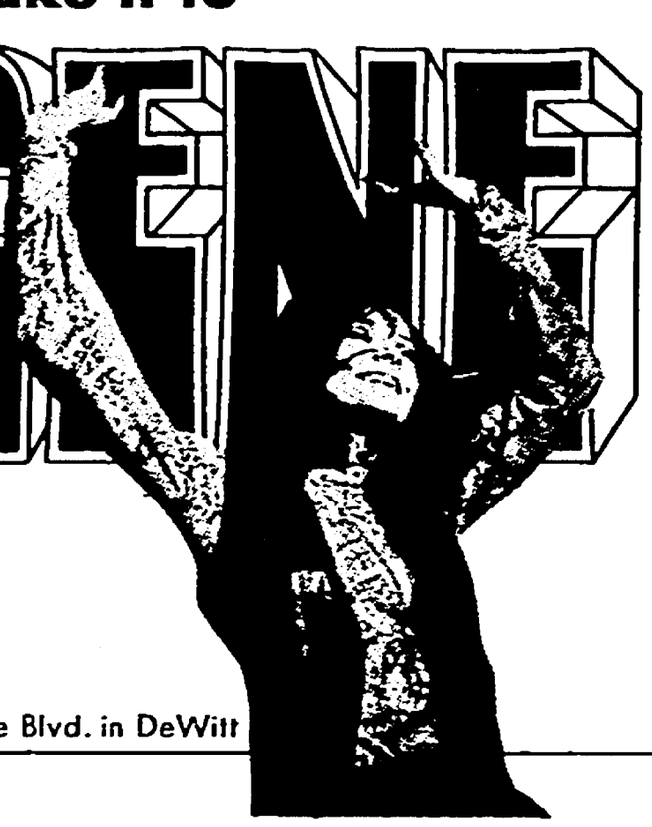
Speaker of Student Senate, Ed Feldman chose the following to represent the graduate and undergraduate student bodies: Robert Clemens, a liberal arts senior and member of ROTC; Dwight Emerson, a graduate student in civil engineering; Paul Finkelman, a liberal arts sophomore; Joe Klein, a liberal arts freshman; and David Moore, a liberal arts sophomore.

Llewellyn Howell, a graduate student in international relations, and Gregory Pratt, a senior in business administration and a member of AFROTC, were later added to the committee to give it proper graduate representation.

Committee members are presently working on subcommittees to investigate the present AFROTC and AROTC campus operations, the attitudes and needs of graduate and undergraduate students regarding military science programs, action taken by Harvard, Yale, Cornell, and Stanford, and the legal, moral, economic, and political effects of the military science program presently in operation at SU.

Any group or individual who wishes to appear before the committee should send a letter to any member of the committee including their stand on the issue of ROTC. Letters are read at the weekly meetings.

JIFFY KING



SPECIAL

Monday thru Friday, 2-5 p.m.

10¢ OFF ALL SUBS
727 South Crouse
in the Arcade

You only have one body, take it to

The SCENE

Cili Drive and Towpath Rd. off Erie Blvd. in DeWitt

Appreciation Tuesday. Admission FREE tonight.

Revlon invents the first Oil-Free Makeup!

Here's the first makeup that can't "feed" more oil to oily skin, because there's no oil in it! That means it won't clog pores, never changes color. Holds back oily shine longer than any other makeup! Medicated 'Flowing Lotion-Makeup'—in 7 shades that smooth on like silk.

Natural Wonder 'Flowing Lotion-Makeup'

Available at:

Syracuse University Bookstore

'Soul Generation' portrays heritage of Afro-Americans

By PAUL WILLISTEIN JR.

A moving portrayal of black heritage was presented by the Soul Generation Sunday evening at First Methodist Church in Syracuse. Using voice, body, and mind in a production named "Let My People Go." each player interpreted his feeling of what America has done to black people.

The Soul Generation is a group of area black high school students who, according to President Raynard Hutchinson are "trying to maintain black togetherness." In the series of songs and skits the students relate the heritage of the Afro-American to the audience.

After a forceful rendition of the song "Let My People Go," the students performed "Tired." It told of a people "lost in the wilderness of white America...which drove us to madness, to Neward, to the streets." Other numbers focused on interracial marriage, black pride and white racism.

A discussion period followed the performance, which was written by Eleanor Russell and Barbara Jason of the group. Barbara was also choreographer. The Soul Generation has around 160 members and is open to all black high school students. Its three specific goals are to send students to Africa, to establish a Uhuru art school, and to begin an expanded group including elementary students.

When asked about costuming, Ava Andrews candidly replied, "the katanga (a type of draped skirt) came from Africa, and the dashikis (a loose patterned man's shirt) came from Africa, and the rest came from downtown."

In response to a question about SU discussion leader Howard Fagan replied, "I wouldn't mind going there. One thing, it's too much money, tuition's too high."

As a result of funds raised in the first year and one-half history of Soul Generation, thirteen of their members were sent to Africa last summer. The Ivory Coast, including Accra and Ghana, was visited. They desired to stay in poorer areas with families and there found that "houses were only two walls draped with canvas." Nairobi was also visited but was disappointing "as soon as we walked into a Woolworth's."

This summer, the group plans to work in the Syracuse community. The Uhuru art school, beginning this summer, will provide tutoring for black youths. In another effort, they will work with white teachers of black history to give them a fuller understanding of the subject from the black's viewpoint.

The Soul Generation has already given "Let My People Go" at Cortland State College and will soon perform at Cornell. Sunday evening's presentation was sponsored by SU's chapter of Crossroads Africa.

By 2000 . . . 'Age of city will be over'

By SUE SHAPIRO

The Urban Revolution is swiftly transforming the country into a national urban society.

A national urban affairs conference that recently met at Rice University in Houston, Texas, concluded that by the year 2000, the age of the city will be over. Urban life will explode into a national lifestyle, no longer limited to the physical boundaries of cities.

Student delegates to the conference from 60 universities met with 14 prominent professors, civic administrators, and urban authorities to evaluate long-range urbanizing trends.

The trends indicate that transportation and communications advancements, technical developments, employment shifts, and cultural diffusion are dissolving the spatially defined city into a country-wide metropolitan area.

In analyzing developments in urbanization, the Urban Futures USA Conference covered a broad spectrum of fields including · theoretical biology, real estate, architecture and engineering, medicine, air pollution and other environmental problems.

Sample forecasts of the urban future are an extension of social insurance, continuing increase of real wage rates, greater acceptance of birth control, and large-scale substitution of group for individual medical practice.

SU sent four delegates to the conference--Lenora Brazell, Chuck Hicks, Celeste Hunte, and Mark Snyder.

Lenora criticized the conference for failing "to really touch on the matter of urban problems."

"There were very few blacks at the conference. There were just too many kids there from the upper-income brackets, kids who saw the urban and ghetto problems as something you read about in the newspaper," she said.

Chapel shows Black art

By ADAM DAWSON

Saturday night marked the premiere of Syracuse's first Black art show. The setting was the Noble Room of Hendricks Chapel. The exhibit consisted of fifty works of art that will remain on display until April 27th. Ranging from photos to oil paintings the show includes works by Charles Earley, Mike Singletary, Diane Reed, Amos Johnson, Karen Washington, Hensley Jermott and Ron Davidson.

The photos by Jermott and Davidson were mostly close-ups of the recent Black demonstration at the administration building. The close-ups showed the emotion that must have been visible to the bystanders at the protest.

Diane Reed, who contributed three abstract landscapes summed up the purpose of the show when she said, "it brings us all together."

The only other female whose work was on exhibit was Karen Washington. She had three works, one of which was a social commentary. It was titled "They call it Integration" and featured black lines on a white background.

Three freshmen exhibited their work in the show. The first, Amos Johnson, had a half-dozen pencil drawings on exhibit.

The two co-organizers of the show, Mike Singletary and Charles Earley, exhibited the bulk of the works. Both Mike and Charles are from New York City and attend Syracuse on art scholarships from the Ford Foundation.

Earley originated the idea for the Black art show and he approached Virginia Drew (Chairman of the URC Cultural Affairs Committee). Together they proceeded to plan the show. Earley described the show as "a chance to do our thing....and help develop the Black culture here at Syracuse."

By far the largest contributor to the show is Mike Singletary. He has over twenty works on display ranging from pentels and collage to oils and acrylic. Most of his canvasses carried heavy social commentary. Titles such as "Free at last," "Crucifixion of Africa," "Black Christ," and "Black Metamorphosis" speak for themselves. His canvasses pull no punches.

Steve says advertising raises prices.

But how come that color TV set his fraternity just bought costs $300 less than it used to?

Ten years ago, a typical 21-inch color TV set sold for $700.

Today, you can get a comparable set for under $400. With a lot of improvements, to boot. Like automatic fine tuning. And less need for servicing.

What brought the price down so dramatically? Many millions of dollars of advertising, mainly.

Weren't there a lot of technological improvements, too? Yes. But they might have actually added to the price—without the vast increase in sales, and volume production, made possible by this advertising.

Maybe you, like Steve, think advertising raises prices, favors big outfits, helps keep useless products on the market. But actual cases prove just the opposite. Advertising lowers prices (like color TV.) Encourages competition. Promotes new ideas. (Contac, for instance.) Helps the imaginative little guy catch up (like Diet Rite Cola, who beat the big cola companies with a good product ...and advertising.)

Interested? Write us. We'll gladly send you more facts about advertising. You'll find they speak for themselves.

In the meantime, keep an open mind.

ASSOCIATION OF INDUSTRIAL ADVERTISERS, 41 EAST 42nd STREET, NEW YORK, N.Y. 10017. AIA

. . . something's lost and something's gained in living every day . . .

BAREFOOT IN THE PARK, a studious but Spring-worshipping Syracuse University coed curls up beneath a tree with her books yesterday afternoon. Summer-like temperatures kept Thornden Park's turf overflowing all weekend. The weatherman reports more of the same to follow! (Photo by Clemens).

Seek new ideas for revamping AWS

By HELENE MACDONALD
Associate Editor

Now that the Association of Women Students (AWS) has transferred its residence function to Interdormitory Council, (IDC), there exists the shell of an organization waiting for women students with ideas for the function and purposes of a new AWS.

Some AWS programs, such as service commission and guiding, will be continued under the sponsorship of IDC, but the feeling remains that there is a need for a women's organization on campus.

Four members of Syracuse's AWS who attended the Intercollegiate AWS convention at the University of Alabama during spring vacation discovered that AWS groups all over the country from campuses with liberalized rules are facing the same identity crisis that SU's AWS did.

Many of the groups have become programming organizations and this is one direction the new AWS can take. The current AWS Exec is seeking applications from women students who are interested in shaping a new organization.

Programming, however, is only one suggestion. AWS exec is looking for women with creative and innovative ideas.

Other AWSes have instituted student-run courses on the differences between men and women, sponsored classes in self-defense and done research on the role of women on campus and academic inequalities between men and women.

Applications for the chairmanship and membership of the steering committee to launch the new AWS are to be given to Cindy Bailey at 1003 Walnut Ave. by this Sunday.

African freedom celebrated today

African Independence will be the topic discussed at a symposium during the African Freedom Day celebration in Syracuse today. The program, sponsored by the Pan African Student Organization, will be held at 1641 South Salina Street beginning at 7:30 p.m. Admission is free and area residents are invited to attend.

Pan Africanism, the Afro-American struggle, the role of African women, liberation, and nation building will be discussed at the synposium. Afterward the film "Silent Revolution," about the development of Tanzania, will be shown. Music will be furnished by a group of Soul Generation Singers.

According to Sikhanyiso Duke Ndlovu, its president, about 80 Syracuse University students belong to the Pan African Student Organizations.

"African Freedom Day and its meaning to African people in independent and non-independent Africa and to black people everywhere is of crucial importance," he said. "Hence Tuesday has been set aside for its observance. Only when all of Africa is free can we say that Africa is independent. For this reason the Organization of African Unity was formed and is working in Addis Abada, Ethiopia."

IF YOU MUST HAVE...

$125.00

OR MORE WEEKLY THIS SUMMER...

Good Humor OFFERS IT!

CAMPUS INTERVIEW APRIL 17

One of the highest paying of all summer jobs
Many students working full summer averaged above $125 weekly. One out of three made $133 or more weekly. One out of four made $139 or more weekly.
How to qualify for interview
(1) Minimum age 18. (2) Need valid driver's license and be able to drive clutch transmission. (3) Be in good physical condition. No experience necessary. Work is easily learned . . . and everything you need to succeed is supplied, free. You're your own boss . . . work in the open where people have been buying GOOD HUMOR for years.
Sign up now for interview
See your Summer Placement Director or Student Aid Officer now.

AN EQUAL OPPORTUNITY EMPLOYER (M/F)

BLACKLIGHTS!

at

THE CORNER STORE

Bookstores

Best Prices on the Hill!
(Check our window display)

S. Crouse and University
"Our Business Is People"

SYRACUSE
WAR MEMORIAL AUDITORIUM
SUNDAY, MAY 4, 1969
One show only at 7:30 P.M.

CORA PROMOTIONS PRESENTS

the JIMI HENDRIX EXPERIENCE
with NOEL REDDING

Tickets: $4, $5, $6.

MAIL ORDERS ONLY!
Please enclose self-addressed envelope, make check payable to, and mail to Syracuse War Memorial Auditorium, 515 Montgomery Street, Syracuse, New York 13202.

For information call (315) 477-7481.

Demonstration's aftermath

Black students' group submits proposals for developing Afro-American studies

The Black Students Committee (S.A.S.) has submitted a nine point proposal for the development and administration of the Afro-American studies program within the College of Liberal Arts. The proposals, which are the outcome of last month's orderly black demonstration, will be discussed by black leaders and faculty and administrative representatives. The proposal follows:

"It has become clear that the uniqueness of the Afro-American Studies Program makes it necessary for us to have a Department of Afro-American Studies. This is in keeping with the main objectives of the program as originally conceived by the black students. If we are to give black students an education which is relevant to the needs of black communities and which will prepare black people to be a major force in black community development, and at the same time help them to identify with their African roots, we must have a department specifically dedicated to these goals. If we are serious about these objectives we must have a staff of professors and other faculty whose primary obligation is to the program. To insure the continued viability of the Afro-American Studies Program, a department of Afro-American Studies should be created, with a university budget and the power to appoint and discharge professors and faculty.

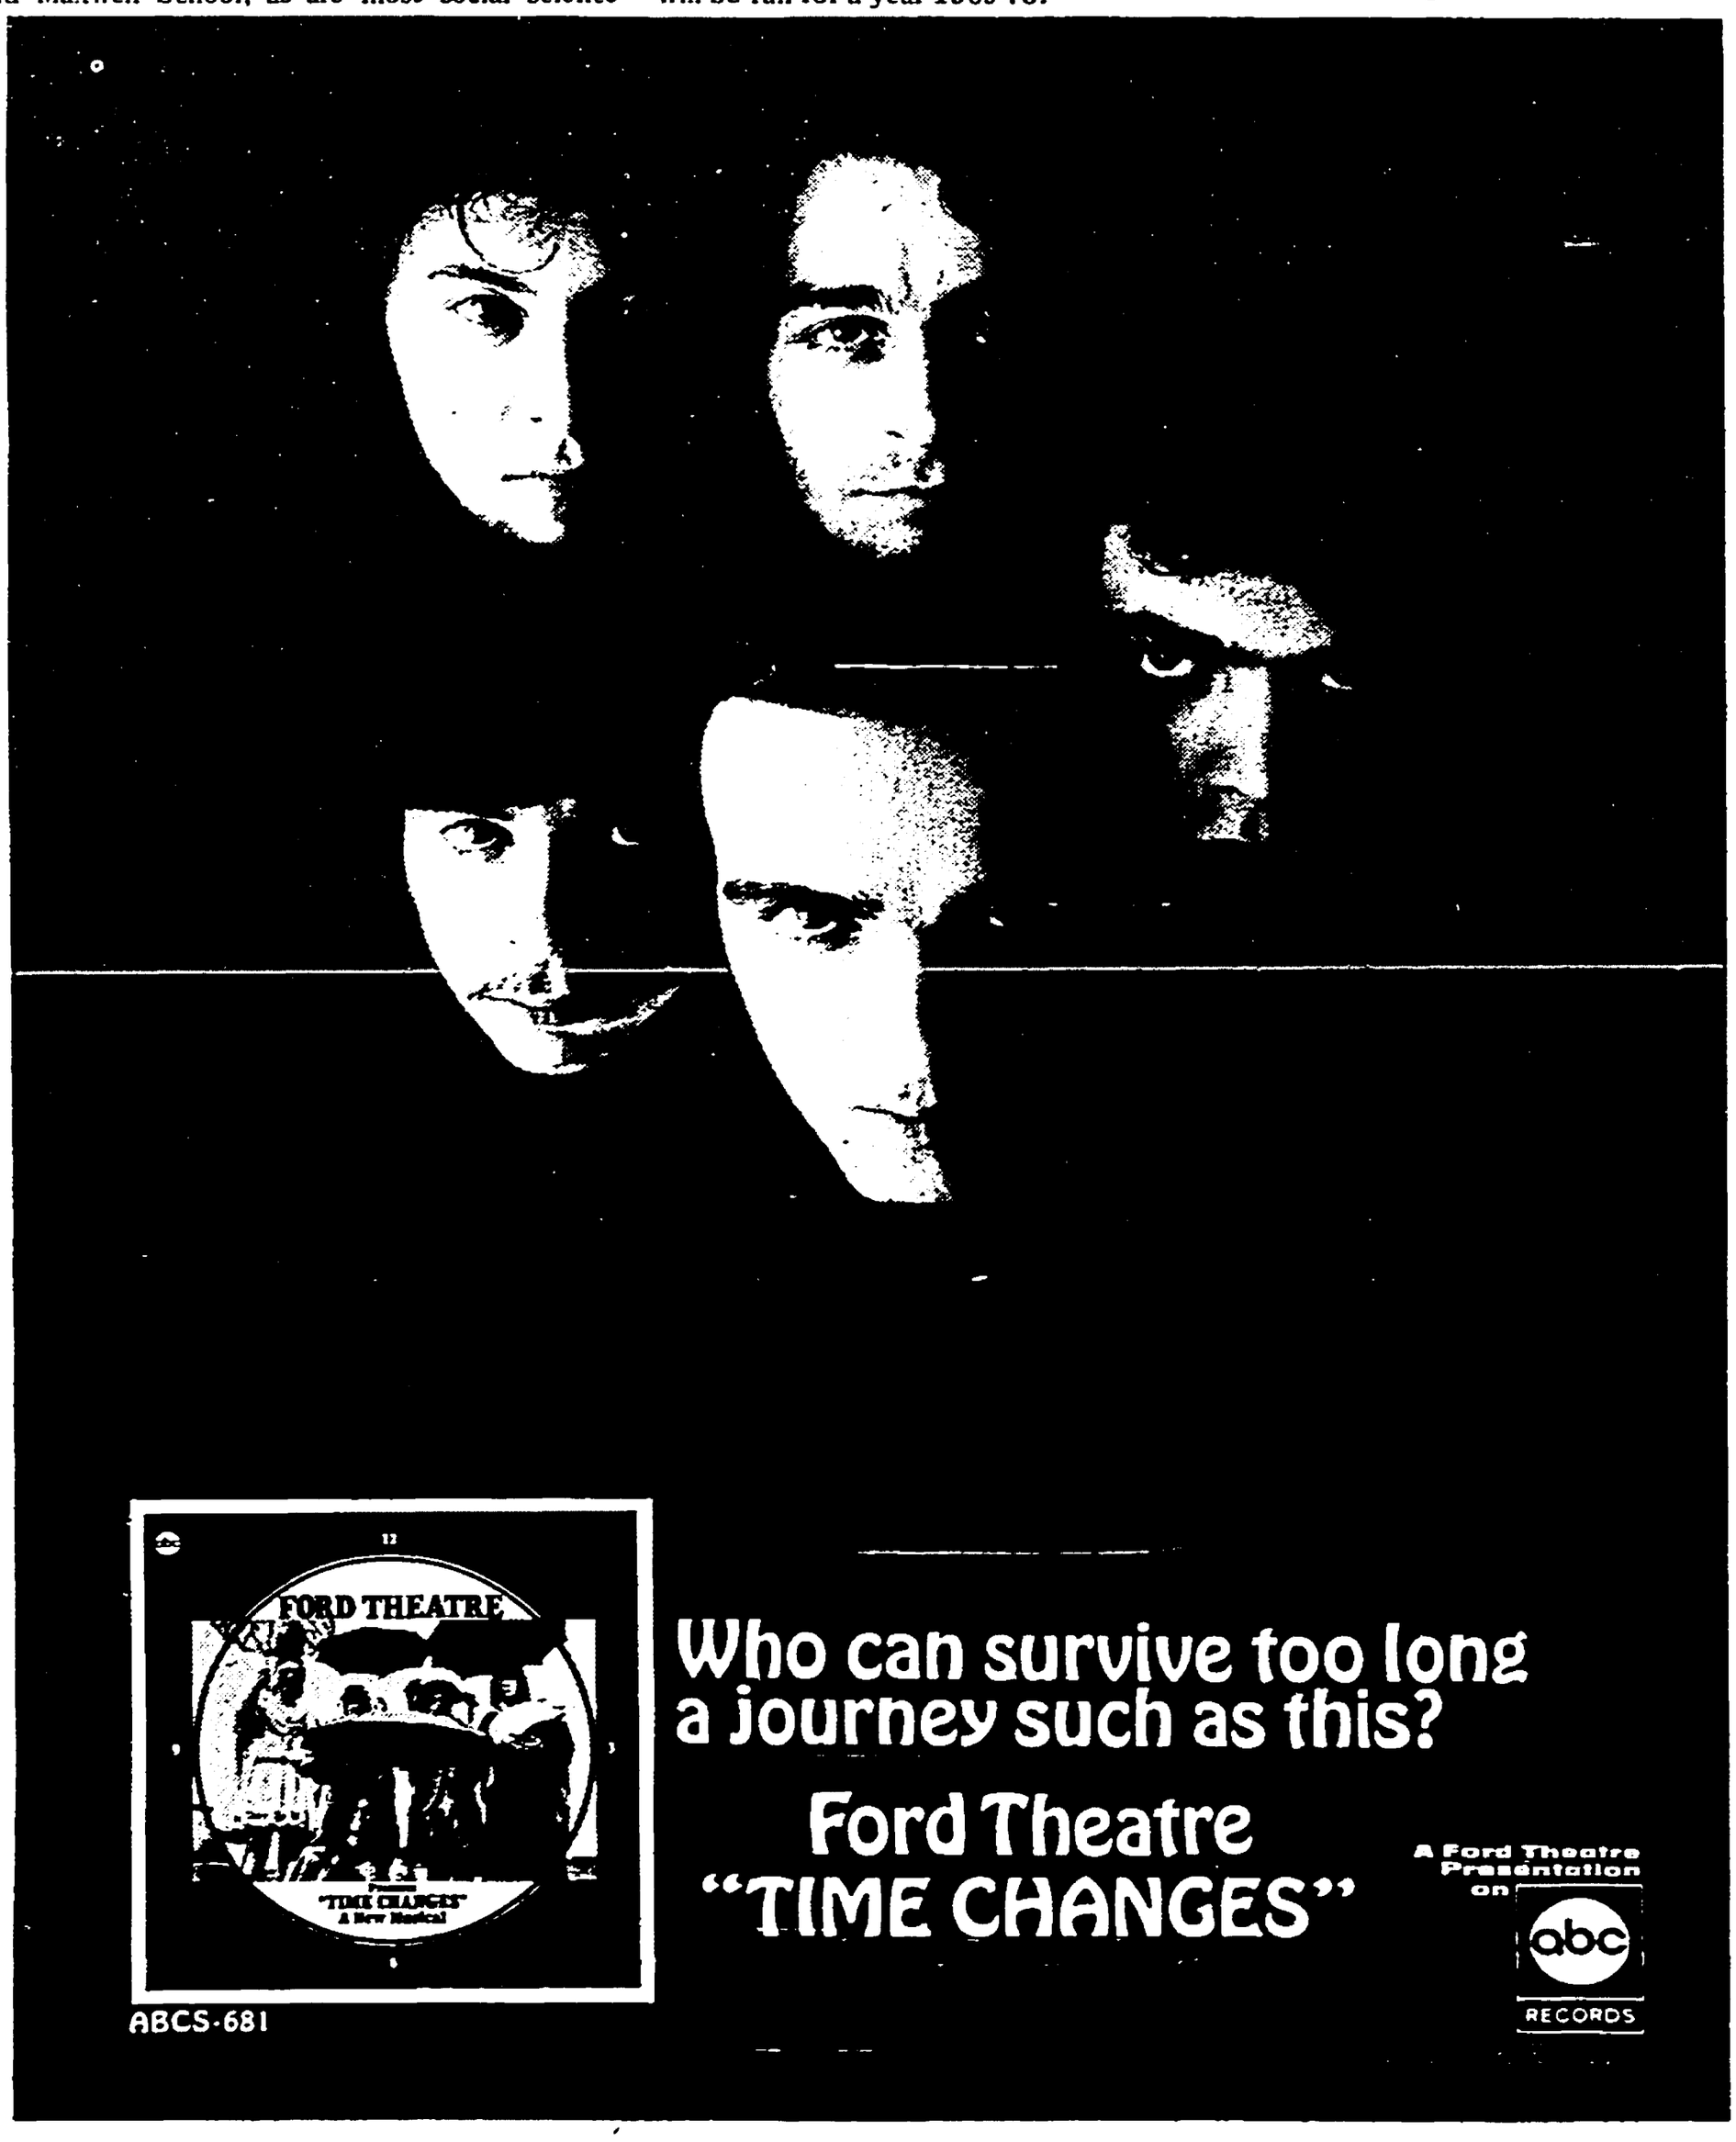
"Basic points:

1. The Department of Afro-American Studies will be jointly under the College of Liberal Arts and Maxwell School, as are most social science departments at Syracuse University.

2. It will be administered by a black chairman and a committee of black undergraduates, graduates, and black faculty (selection process to be decided by SAS Black Studies Committee with the help of black graduate students and black faculty at a later date).

3. Requirements for a degree in Afro-American Studies will be ultimately decided by the administrative staff of the department (see 2). They will follow the general form as outlined in the original tentative requirements.

4. Courses may be jointly in the Department of Afro-American Studies and another department if there is an agreement with the respective chairman.



5. Dual majors will be possible and encouraged.

6. Autonomy of the Department of Afro-American Studies will be maintained.

7. The natures of the course will be such that they draw from the Humanities, arts, language and social sciences as they relate to black people.

8. The Black Studies Committee of the Student Afro-American Society, with the help of all interested black graduate students and faculty, will be responsible for staffing and administering the program until a permanent administrative body is formed (no later than September, 1969).

9. Syracuse University will commit $350,000.00. From this, five (5) professors, six (6) graduate students and four (4) lecturers will be recruited by September, 1969, and the program will be run for a year 1969-70.

ABCS-681

Who can survive too long a journey such as this?

Ford Theatre "TIME CHANGES"

A Ford Theatre Presentation on abc RECORDS

Peace Corps entices students

Peace Corps representatives will be on campus today through Friday to explain their work and recruit potential volunteers.

Redaegzy Gebremedhin, an Ethiopian on a Peace Corps speaking tour, will give a lecture tonight to the Brothers and Little Sisters of Alpha Phi Omega at a closed meeting. He will present a similar lecture at an open discussion sponsored by University Union on Thursday at 8 p.m. in Kittridge Auditorium. At 7:30 p.m. tomorrow in Haven Lounge, Gebremedhin will show a film of Peace Corps work in Nigeria's rebel state, Biafra.

Applications for Peace Corps work will be available at any of the lectures as well as in the Placement Office, 804 University Ave., or from the roving Peace Corps van that will also be on campus this week.

Peace Corps Placement Tests will be given at the Placement Center Thursday at 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. and Friday at 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. The placement examination will last 30 minutes and is designed to determine a student's ability to learn a modern foreign language. Completed applications must be turned in at the examination.

Peace Corps volunteers will be on hand at all lectures to answer questions.

Book award winners named

Eleven students have been named as recipients of this year's Cressey Book Awards. The winners were chosen by a faculty committee from among 37 nominations.

The nominees were "undergraduate students who have shown academic excellence on particular papers, reports, projects or overall class work during the Spring or Fall semesters of 1968."

The awards are named in honor of the late George B. Cressey, a world famous geographer and SU Maxwell professor. The $100 worth of awarded books are provided through the generosity of the SU Bookstore.

Each recipient will receive a book or books selected by the particular nominating faculty members. The individually presented books will be of personal interest or relevance to the student and his field.

The recipients are Christine A. Bailey, Harvey S. Cohen, Dale Denno, Jeffrey R. Evans, Janice A. Goerge, Ernest A. Grafe, Lucille J. Honig, Lucas K. Li, Peter C. Manning, Jill E. Purtell and Harold B. Shapiro.

Campaign coverage

WAER will provide complete coverage of Syracuse University campus elections beginning at 5 p.m. on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Beginning the coverage will be a half hour discussion of the issues and the history of the elections being held.

Following this will be a half hour discussion with the candidates for Student Government leadership from the four major parties: GIA, CAP, Prohibition, and the Independent party.

This coverage, produced by the Public Affairs Department under the Direction of Bob Sikorski, is a special service of WAER radio, 88.3 F.M.

ANSWER TO PUZZLE

E	P	I	C		M	A	R	G	E		G	L	A	D
A	R	N	O		U	N	I	R	E		R	A	G	E
S	O	N	G	A	N	D	D	A	N	C	E	M	A	N
E	V	E		B	I	R	D	Y		H	A	P	L	Y
S	E	R	V	I	C	E		S	E	A	S
			E	D	H		G	U	L	P	E	R	S
F	L	A	R	E		B	R	I	M	S		A	L	L
L	I	L	T		F	R	A	T	S		S	T	O	P
Y	A	H		S	L	A	T	S		F	L	A	T	S
	M	A	L	T	E	S	E		A	L	A
			E	A	D	S		F	L	O	W	E	R	S
A	L	T	A	R		R	A	I	L	S		B	O	A
V	A	U	D	E	V	I	L	L	E	S	H	O	W	S
I	N	N	E		I	N	B	A	Y		A	L	A	S
D	E	A	R		A	G	A	R	S		T	I	N	Y

Visiting prof to talk psychology

Dr. Erik K. Winslow will talk about "Work Motivation and Supervision" when he delivers the fifth Anna Dahlem Memorial Lecture tomorrow at 3 p.m. in Grant Auditorium.

Winslow, assistant professor of psychology at Case-Western Reserve University in Cleveland, will discuss the factors that influence people to do a good job and the problems a supervisor has in getting people to do their jobs, according to Barbara Pomeroy, a senior in the SU School of Nursing and program chairman for this year's lecture.

The lecture is sponsored by the School's Omicron chapter of Sigma Theta Tau, national academic honorary society for nursing. The lecture and the reception following in Grant Lounge are free and open to the public.

Anna M. Dahlem was an assistant professor in the SU School of Nursing from 1961 until her death in 1964. The annual lectures honor Prof. Dahlem for her dedicated service to the School and for the inspiration she gave nursing students, Miss Pomeroy said.

Winslow holds a B.S. from Pennsylvania State University, an M.S. from Western Reserve University and a Ph.D. from Case-Western Reserve. At Case-Western, he teaches industrial and introductory psychology courses.

Festival project

Art sale to aid ALICE

By BOB DAVIS

Art students will conduct a sale of original works all day Wednesday, from 10:30 a.m. at Lowe Art Center to raise money to support the environmental arts project known as ALICE. ALICE will be featured at the upcoming Festival of the Arts. The art projects which will be sold have been donated by interested art students.

The students working on ALICE (Art of Lightning in Creating Environments) are now out of supplies. They need at least $200 to continue the project. This need has led to the art sale. The University administration has not given the students any money, and the art department has only allowed the students to use Lowe Art Center.

Sketches, prints, photos and paintings will be sold. Prices will vary, depending on quality. In addition, painted tee shirts will be sold for $3.00, while coloring books will cost $.75.

There is also the possibility that art students will sketch portraits of willing students for a fee. In addition, if the art students get permission from the University administration, they will conduct drawing seminars on the sidewalk with chalk.

The minimum prices will be set by the organizers of the sale, but they said they will allow bargaining for a lower price. The art students hope, however that students will be willing to pay more than a minimum price, because the money is needed desperately.

Alyce Kaprow and Renee Schwadron, the organizers of the art sale, urge all students and faculty to donate any projects they might have. The donators, however, will not get any money from the sale of their projects. All money will go directly to the students working on ALICE.

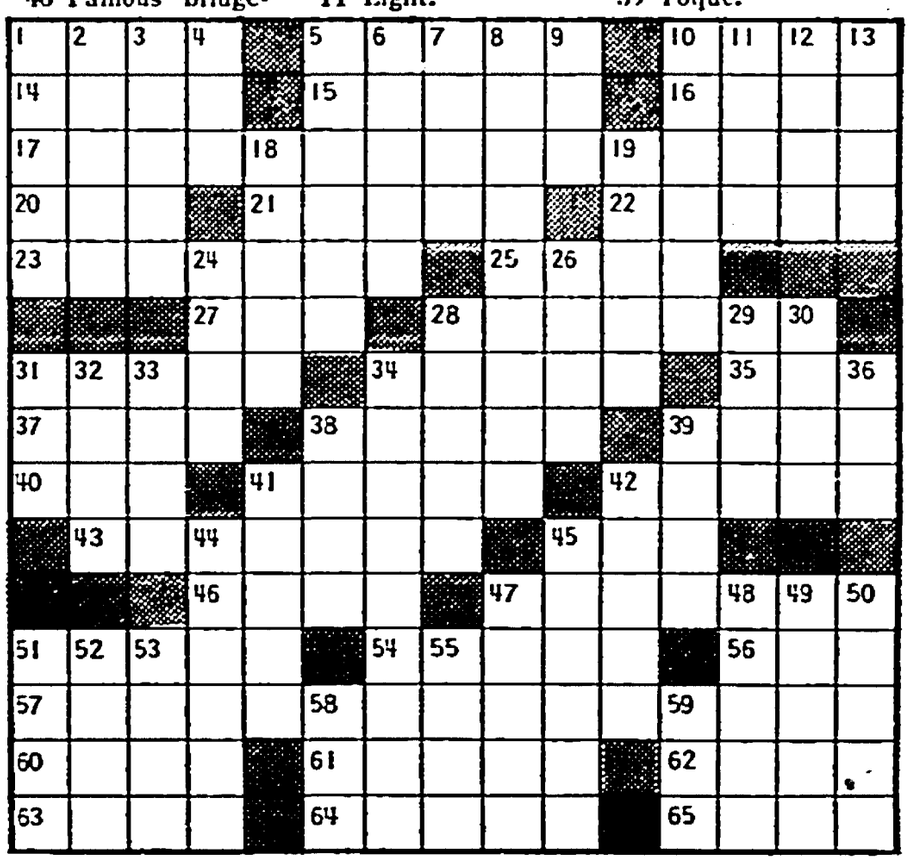
Miss Kaprow termed the sale a "double donation." The art students will donate their wares, while the student public will donate their money for the art projects.

The students working on ALICE will use the donations to continue their experimentation. They have tried to construct a new environment in a prefab formerly used by the police. The artists have coordinated light, sound and touch within the linear environment of the prefab.

A person entering the environment would walk through a hall and touch something on the wall, which in turn would activate music, which then would activate a light show. The idea is to involve all the senses in a sort of total experience.

Art students said they have worked dilligently on this project in hopes of making it one of the best art shows on the East coast this year. The students were quick to point out that no one has worked harder than the faculty adviser, Gale Brooks.

The students say Mr. Brooks has been "fantastic," and has "gone out on a limb" by spending a great amount of time with the students. He has allowed them "complete intellectual freedom."



DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

ACROSS

1 Grand.
5 Girl's nickname.
10 Pleased.
14 Florence's river.
15 To join: It.
16 Item of wide popularity.
17 Fred Astaire, for instance: 4 words.
20 First lady.
21 Like a wren or robin.
22 By chance.
23 Public worship.
25 Global areas.
27 Anglo-Saxon letter.
28 Hasty eaters and drinkers.
31 Blaze of light.
34 Is full.
35 Partner of one.
37 Gay song.
38 College groups.
39 Sojourn.
40 Vegetable.
41 Nickname for a thin man.
42 Pieces of scenery.
43 Cat.
45 Alabama: Abbr.
46 Famous bridge-builder.
47 Roses, mums, etc.
51 Place of worship.
54 Shore birds.
56 Neckpiece.
57 Entertainment of another day: 2 words.
60 Hotel, old style.
61 Put ___, Perry's harbor: 2 words.
62 Ah me!
63 Beloved.
64 Seaweed products.
65 Minute.

DOWN

1 Comforts.
2 Turn out to be.
3 ___ circle.
4 Gear tooth.
5 Site of "appeasement," 1938.
6 One of de Gaulle's names.
7 Lorna Doone's protector.
8 Traditional garb for ad men: 2 words.
9 Poetic time.
10 Lubricate.
11 Light.
12 Bedouin's head cord.
13 Refute.
18 Put up with.
19 Cowboy's garb.
24 Verticle: Abbr.
26 Trees.
28 Scrape.
29 Pro ___.
30 Aperture.
31 Move swiftly.
32 O'Flaherty.
33 ___ Mater.
34 Merry-go-round prize.
36 Some records.
38 Vanished.
39 Cabbage dish.
41 Gaze.
42 River in George Eliot novel.
44 Attachment to a fishline.
45 Sports places.
47 Threadlike.
48 Town near Naples.
49 Former USIA chief.
50 Impudent: Slang.
51 Eager.
52 Footpath.
53 Fish dish.
55 Alberta: Abbr.
58 By way of.
59 Toque.

——Happenings on the Hill——

TUESDAY

IDC meeting at 7:30 in 204 HL. Important.

S.U. SOCCER Club Practice schedule is: Mon, Wed, and Thur, at 5 p.m.; Sat at 10 a.m. at Hendricks field. Interested? - Call John Marchyn or Abe Cohen at 3219.

ATTENTION-SORORITIES! The WAA's Sorority Volleyball games will be held at 7 p.m. Call Stevie Spencer X2973 if your house wishes to participate.

ALPHA PHI OMEGA joint meeting of Brothers and Little Sisters in the Men's Gym at 8 p.m. A peace corps lecture will be given.

RUSSIAN CLUB Chorus will meet at 6 p.m. in 227 H.B.C.

URC - 7:30 Noble Room at Hendricks Chapel. All Chaplains please send your personal reps or let us know who they are. All old and new reps please come--and every interested body welcome.

OUTING CLUB meeting at 7:15 in 207 HL. Elections. All members must attend.

BLUES is the springtime music. Hear all about the invasion of the real blues in Syracuse on Over Yonders Wall, the blues show of WAER - 7:30 to 9:20.

WAER SENIOR STAFF meeting at 7:30 in Lawrenson penthouse. Followed by a General Staff meeting at 8:30. All strongly urged to attend.

WEDNESDAY

PEACE CORPS Film discussion at Haven Lounge. 7:30 p.m.

SENIOR EXEC - Amaze your friends! Come to the meeting at Phi Gam, 7 p.m. and learn all about graduation. Must come, but if you can't call Norma (X2639).

POETRY READING by Mrs. Kobernuss. Honors Cultural Committee - 7:30 in St. Marys.

FILM and discussion of "Foreign Involvement in Rural Development in Ethiopia," 3:30 p.m. - room 5, Illick Hall. Sponsored by College of Forestry Grad Student Association.

UKRANIAN CLUB meeting 6:30 p.m. at the ISO, 230 Euclid Ave. Guest lecture on "Interesting things - we don't know about Ukrane and Ukrainians."

ART STUDENTS - Cooperation is needed so Art Students can participate in the light show for Festival of Arts. Bring everything you are willing to sell to raise money for A.L.I.C.E. to Lowe Art Center by 9:00.

ART SALE - starting at 10:30 a.m. at Lowe Art Center. All proceeds go to the Art Students' participation in the Light show for the Festival of Arts.

JURISPURDENCE P.S. 341 Lawrenson Penthouse.

Maelstrom

The staff of Maelstrom has begun to solicit contributions of poetry, essays and short stories to be considered for publication in Maelstrom 3.

Undergraduates, graduates, faculty and administrators are all invited to submit material. The deadline for submissions is Wednesday, April 23. For contributors' convenience, a mailbox has been provided in the English Office, 203 Hall of Languages.

Anyone with questions should call Maelstrom editor-in-chief Don Bredes. 472-2373, or manuscripts editor Vaughn Polmenteer at Co-op I.

GENERAL

SPECIALL ELECTION Issue of the Promethean will be published Thursday. Carry Change. This will replace the regular Friday gem this week only. Hold your breath.

UJB applications for membership 1969-1970 are available in the Dean of Men's office.

CREATIVE WRITERS are needed to help prepare a "Dummy" issue for a proposed multi-campus college magazine. If anyone is interested contact Steve Vogel X2031 or X2032.

ANYONE wishing a Maxwell News and Notes newsletter may pick up a copy in the Dean's Office, 217 Maxwell Hall.

Subjects Needed for Psychological Testing

Married female subjects between the ages of 18 and 35 needed for a study related to normal menstrual and reproductive functions. Three sessions are involved and a fee of $30 will be paid.

This study is being conducted at the Upstate Medical Center. If interested, call Mrs. Baum at 473-5775 for information.

Campus Classified

GR 6-5571, Ext. 2314

Rates minimum of 15 words:

1 day	1.15
2 days	2.25
3 days	3.30
4 days	4.30
5 days	5.25
6 days	6:15

To place a classified ad, call GR 6-5571, ext. 2314, between 1 and 3 p.m. Ad must be placed 2 days in advance. Every word over 15 costs 5c extra per day.

ALL ADS MUST BE PREPAID.

MISCELLANEOUS

RENT if you can't buy! T.V.s, tape recorders, typewriters. By week, month or semester. Reasonable rates. S. U. BOOKSTORE, GR 6-5541, x 2426.

FRAME your works of art at unbeatable prices at S. U. BOOKSTORE. Also signs and posters. In the Art Dept., 303 University Pl.

ALTERATIONS DONE within 24 hours. Call for an appointment. Lillian Potter, 207 Comstock. 478-5847.

PRIVATE DRIVING LESSONS — automatic or standard shift. Full or refresher courses. Qualified professional instructors. Pickup service. Auto Driving Academy. GR 6-3995.

"BUGS ARE BEAUTIFUL" vinyl, removable stickers. Volkswagens love them on their rear deck lids or bumpers! $1.00 each, postpaid. Unique Products, Dept. DO. P. O. Box 598. Rochester, Michigan 48063.

LOST: Male puppy, part Labrador, black with white chest, red collar. Phil Bronstein. Alpha Epsilon Pi. 475-5965.

NEW EVERY MONDAY MORNING for the lovelorn. "missing you" cards. The Bookstall, 147 Marshall St.

FOR SALE

1968 VOLVO 142 S. 4-speed. AM-FM. Like new, must sell $2150.00. Phone 422-4463, 456-1362.

'66 AUSTIN - HEALY SPRITE convertible. Fully equipped. Great sports car. Call Larry 454-3927.

'54 CHEVY, 235 CID. Auto trans., radio. 4 Dunlops. excellent running condition. $150.00. Call Art 478-2349.

HONDA. 305 Scrambler 68. Black and chrome. Call ext. 3082. ask for Fitzpatrick.

1959 VOLKSWAGEN. sun roof. gas heater. radio. extra snow tires. engine recently overhauled. some body rust but otherwise perfect. $200.00. NE 8 0408 or 476-8362.

NEED TIRES ? Guaranteed discount prices on tires. mag wheels. chrome wheels. etc. All sizes. Call Larry. 475-3987.

1963 STUDEBAKER LARK — Good NEED TIRES ? Guaranteed discount condition. $175.00. 1962 Pontiac Tempest convertibl. very good condition. $250. Call Larry 475-3987.

FOR RENT

FURNISHED APARTMENT — HENRY STREET — 2 blocks from Campus. Kitchenette. 1 bedroom. living room. complete bath with shower. Downstairs. 2 private entrances. off street parking. $110.00 per mo. Call 422-5564-days 476-1481 - evenings and weekends.

ROOMS FOR RENT above Hillel Kosher Dining Club. Immediate occupancy. Call ext. 2904. Mon. - Thurs., 8:30-3:30.

WANTED

EXPERIENCED HORN PLAYER, preferably to work through summer, for working R&B Sour group. 422-9489, 475-3424.

TYPING

THIRTY YEARS EXPERIENCE. Dissertations, term papers, proof-read. Satisfaction guaranteed. Mrs. Raymond Webb. HE 7-8259.

DIANE WALLACE. 472-2115. Theses dissertations and term papers. IBM electric. 40c per page. 5c copy. Multilith. 45c.

TAKE YOUR MANUSCRIPT to the only professional typing and printing service serving the S. U. area. The knowledge and experience of having done over 2,000 theses and dissertations is behind every job we turn out. Stephanie's Office Service. 469-2795.

TYPIST experienced in thesis, dissertations, and term papers. Electric typewriter. Shirley Saylor. 446-2999 or x2441.

Former SU diamondmen make the 'major' dorms

By DAN SCHLOSSBERG
Associate Editor

Pitcher Dave Giusti of the St. Louis Cardinals had an 8-0 record, 1.50 earned run average, and 91 strikeouts in 72 innings of work for the 1961 Syracuse University baseball team.

Giusti, who also contriubuted a .316 batting average and 14 runs batted in in 52 at-bats that season, is only one of several outstanding alumni of the baseball orange who have gone on to greater things...like the major leagues.

Another pitcher from that successful 1961 team (it got all the way to Omaha and the College World Series after a 14-3 season mark) is Mets reliever, Bill Connors. Known more as an infielder then, Connors enjoyed one of the finest games ever played in the College World Series when he went 4-for-5, knocked in four runs, and scored three in the third game of the post-season classic.

Unfortunately, SU blew an 8-1 lead to lose to Oklahoma City by 12-9 and minimize the contributions of Connors, who included two home runs and a triple in his afternoon of work.

The disappointment of that turnabout loss may have been too much for the Schenectady righthander; he lost a starting assignment the next day and never showed much in trials with the Cubs and Mets. He did show a fair bat while with Syracuse, however, hitting .273 with nine runs batted in in 33 trips during the '61 season.

Ironically, scouts who followed the 1961 team doubted Giusti would make the majors because his fast one wasn't presumed to be fast enough. But the scouts apparently were proven wrong by Giusti, who not only enjoyed several good years of work with the Houston Astros, but also appeared as a pinch-hitter on more than one occasion...and with considerable success.

Giusti was 11-14 with a 3.32 ERA in 1968. He was traded to the Cardinals, drafted by the San Diego Padres, and traded back to the Cardinals after the season ended.

He played a lot of shortstop and third base when not on the mound for Syracuse. Then, coach Ted Kleinhans, who came from the major leagues to SU instead of the otherway around, wanted to get Dave's bat into the line-up.

Another player who signed before the 1961 SU outfit could take the field was first baseman-outfielder, Doug Clemens. He played mostly at first with the Orangemen but gained fame as a late-inning defensive outfielder and standout pinch-hitter when he played in the biggies with St. Louis, Chicago, and Philadelphia in the National League. The 1968 season was his last, however.

With the bats of Giusti and Connors in the 1961 line-up, and with their arms adding strength to the pitching, SU attracted considerable attention from the scouts. Infielders Pete DeSilvia and Bucky Winters both went pro briefly, but neither reached the major leagues. But Detroit Tigers scouting chief Ed Katalinas, observing the crew in the College World Series, said the team was "the strongest college baseball team---hitting-wise---I ever saw." The 1968 crew may be just as strong in pitching, and aces John Martell and Greg Lowe are already being watched by big time scouts.

Last year's team also has two outstanding prospects, pitcher Ed Mantie and thirdbaseman Rick Cassata. Mantie was a June draftee of the San Francisco Giants and performed well at Salt Lake City after boosting the Orange with a 3-0 record and 0.90 earned run average, not to mention 31 strikeouts in 20 innings of work. Cassata, recently drafted by Washington, paced SU with .352 while working primarily as a shortstop. Coach Andy Mogish said as far back as two years ago that Cassata's best bet for the majors would be a move to third base, but Herm Card was the incumbent there for SU a year ago and Mogish didn't have a shortstop. Hence, the move sending Cassata to short. The coach, incidentally, is very high on Rick's chances of making the majors.

DAVE GIUSTI, former star hurler for SU, heads the list of ex-SU ballplayers who have made it in professional baseball. Now a St. Louis Cardinal, Giusti recently shut out the Mets, 1-0, and scored the game's only run after rapping a double.

ISOMETRICS. Sophomore Gary Bletsch takes part in isometric exercise as part of Orange spring practice drills. Bletsch, who saw a lot of action last season in the defensive backfield, is counted upon for a starter's berth at safety this year.

Golfers 2nd in triangle meet

By JAY PETERFREUND

Don't be surprised if you see Golf coach Jim Boeheim walking around campus whistling "The Sidewalks of New York." And don't be taken aback if the coach bristles at the sight of an Army R.O.T.C. uniform. If you think that Boeheim is planning to move to New York City or that he is protesting the presence of R.O.T.C. on campus, you are wrong. These are just refelctions on the fortunes of the Golf team after this past week-end.

The squad travelled to West Point, New York, to play in its first regular match of the 1969 season. It was a triangular competition, pitting SU against two of its perennial rivals, Manhattan College and the Military Academy at West Point.

Syracuse, fresh from a week in Florida and full of hope for a better season, met both teams on the West Point Golf Club course. The Orangemen defeated Manhattan 5½ to 1½ in a seven point match. But, the Cadets shut out the linksmen from Syracuse, 7 to 0.

But alas, all was not lost. Senior Bob Kouwe, playing in the number one spot, shot a 75, while Tom Lydon, a junior, shot a 77. The fine play of these two, plus an all-out effort from the rest of the team, are factors to be considered for the future. Army's two top players both had rounds of 71, which did little to aid the Syracuse cause.

Tryouts and practices started Monday at 2:00 PM. They will continue all this week and next week, at the Drumlins links. Boeheim is hoping that these sessions will produce the depth that the team needs if they are to have a successful season.

Boeheim commented, "We have men playing in our four and five spots who should really be playing at the six and seven slots. I'm hoping that the tryouts produce the men we need to fill in the team."

Spirits high as Orange grid machine starts grind

By ADAM DAWSON

With spring football practice only three days old, the 80th Syracuse football team is rarin' to go. The desire to put the pads back on and get back to hitting after four months of inactivity pervades the entire team, from two-letter men to freshmen.

Sophomore fullback Mike Chlebeck said, "It feels great to get back in the groove. I sort of miss it and I am especially looking forward to next year because I will have a year of valuable varsity experience under my belt." During the off-season Mike ran, lifted weights, and played basketball to stay in shape for football.

For Tom Hermanowski spring ball is especially welcome. Tom was out most of last season with a broken fibula after winning a starting berth at defensive halfback. "It's been a long time and I am really anxious to get back," said the junior from New Britain, Connecticut.

To Freshman Bob Zimmerman, spring ball does not mean very much. Bob broke his foot during the off-season and the cast will not come off until spring ball is over. "I am really disappointed because of the hard work I did all winter to get ready for ball and because I will be that much further behind the other ballplayers in the fall."

Another ballplayer who might miss some practice is freshman, Clark Yingst. Clark bruised the bones in his hand and will be out for ten days. "Football up here is tough but it is fun and I enjoy it. I only hope I do not miss too many practices."

Ray Jarosz summed up the time consumming element of spring ball when he stated, "It takes up a lot of time, but you get used to it and you work it into your schedule." Ray also expressed his desire to test his ability with the varsity.

Still another man looking forward to this year is sophomore tackle, Rich Kazarian. With one year varsity experience behind him Rich hopes to make, "a bigger contribution for a better season for a better team." As for the hitting and the soreness he added, "You get used to it after a few sessions."

The only ballplayer who escapes the hitting and the drilling is placekicker, George Jakowenko. George enjoys kicking and "enjoys seeing myself improve in accuracy and distance." He is especially looking forward to this year because, "the coaches have asked me to try punting this year and I have been practicing all winter."

Jim Englehaupt offered a different point of view. Jim is graduating in June and he does not miss spring ball. He misses football, but he hopes to play somewhere in the fall, and the lack of Spring ball gives him a chance to catch up on his golf.

The player who summed it up the best was varsity quarterback Paul Paolisso. He said, "It feels real good to get back. I'm really anxious to get into next year and try to make up for and do better than last year. I know all of the guys feel the same way."

It appears that the 1969 edition of Syracuse University Football is off to a fine start, attitude wise. If this feeling continues, perhaps another big season on the gridiron is in store for coach Ben and his boys.

SU intramural all-tournament team

FIRST TEAM

Greg Allen, Sigma Alpha Mu Pledges
Dennis Ashby, Omega Psi Phi
Vincent Brown, Omega Psi Phi
Tommy Davis, Sadler 3
Howie Silver, Sigma Alpha Mu

SECOND TEAM

Mike Chlebeck, Sadler 3
Jim Goldberg, Barristers
Chalmers Knight, Sadler 3
Tom Smith, Omega Psi Phi
Larry Soffes, Sigma Alpha Mu Pledges

HONORABLE MENTION: Tom Fleming, Sigma Alpha Mu Pledges; Bob Bancroft and John Massis, Sadler 3; Ned Rifkin and Art Tyson, Sigma Alpha Mu; Rick Sampson, Omega Psi Phi; Chet West, Sadler 3(B).

TEAM CHAMPIONS

FRATERNITY (A): Omega Psi Phi (All-University champions)
FRATERNITY (B): Tau Kappa Epsilon Pledges
LIVING CENTER (A): Sadler 3
LIVING CENTER (B): Sadler 3 (B)
INDEPENDENT: The Barristers

A meeting of all Intramural managers will be held tonight at 7:00 in room 306 Archbold Gym. The meeting concerns the scheduling of the spring sports, softball, tennis, golf, horsehoes and track.

Track coach Bob Grieve still needs frosh athletes. Especially in demand are hurlers. Anyone interested should contact coach Grieve in Archbold STadium any day after 2:30 p.m.

Demands Voiced

Hicks calls the play

At a hastily assembled meeting yesterday between 20 student leaders and about half that number of Administration representatives, guidelines were drawn for Administrative action on certain student demands, some of which were presented yesterday. Others will be listed later.

SG President Chuck Hicks arranged the meeting in an attempt to put an end to what he felt was inaction on the part of the Administration. "We came to get commitments on demands made months ago," he said.

The first demand discussed by the students was the $50 sum to be given out as our finance board sees fit."

University Vice Chancellor and Provost Frank P. Piskor called for a budget, describing increase in the student fee. According to Jerry Tatarian, "We get about 40 cents per student ($8,000) to put on a UU program, it's not enough."

Hicks proposed that the University Administration allot $15 of the $50 increase go directly to the student finance board established by Student Senate, to spend as they see fit.

Jeff Portnoy, SG vice-president, remarked, "We want to decide ourselves where the money goes. A total lump the allocation of the funds but Portnoy answered, "We don't know what organizations will need how much money, we need the flexibility."

Piskor than asked for further definition of what organizations would fall under the finance board. It was agreed to have a list created and sent to Piskor by Friday.

Further discussion centered around the UU Building, and its position on the priorities list. Piskor stated, "We're still 3 million short on our library, how can we just stop and begin something else in the middle."

A meeting was arranged between Piskor, and students working on UU. At that meeting, a priority will be established.

A second meeting between the groups was arranged for Monday.

A GENIAL JOSH NADEL, standard-bearer for the Prohibition Party, makes a point as he discusses his opponents for the position of SG president. Criticizing the GIA "messiahs" and the CAP "establishment," he seeks to get rid of SG altogether. See story, p. 10.

DAILY ORANGE

Vol. 67, No. 88 | Syracuse, New York, Wednesday, April 16, 1969 | 10 Cents

Elections Commission finds CAP negligent

Three charges were brought against the Campus Alliance Party (CAP) at an Elections Commission meeting yesterday morning. CAP pleaded guilty to the charges and was fined $250 for violating Elections Commission rules and regulations regarding membership lists and proxy voting.

CAP must pay the fine before the 1970 student elections. The other charges were brought against individual CAP members, including Joel Gorham, CAP treasurer. Gorham must forfeit his position with the party and will not be allowed to hold another.

Another member of the party was placed on disciplinary probation for committing fraud in the representation of 14 proxy votes and membership lists which he turned over to Gorham.

"It's no secret that both political parties manipulate and try to control officers and groups of people to fulfill their own ends," said Chris Carpenter, a CAP member.

"The fault is in their trying to run 34 candidates for political offices in the space of four weeks time or less. It's impossible to run a full slate of qualified people who are prepared to take a place in student leadership. In fact, it's idiotic," he continued.

John Diamond, an Elections Commissioner, had previously stated the crime both CAP and the Greek Independent Alliance (GIA) committed was in trying to run a full slate of candidates.

"The party system is saddled with a structure that almost induces violation of rules," said Diamond. "The charges that we have brought against CAP and GIA are charges that can not even be considered for the Prohibition Party and independent groups due to the fact that they are not officially parties."

Elections Commissioner Dick Barton said he has been working on the evidence for some time, as have the other elections commissioners. He said there may be more evidence brought against the parties but that there is time involved in obtaining the information.

There was lengthy discussion as to the actual charges which were being brought against CAP on which Barton commented, "No one in this room is going to do any good to Student Government as a whole by bickering among ourselves."

He said there was no reason to call for a steeper penalty for CAP because GIA got one. "This should be a proceeding, not a hanging," Barton continued.

Ifshin climbs Mount for votes

By LARRY KRAMER
Campus Affairs Editor

Working against time, The Independent Slate headed by David Ifshin continued speaking to large crowds in dormitories last night.

Ifshin spoke on floors in Day, Flint, Lawrinson, and Sadler, and once nearly bumped into his Campus Alliance Party opponent Lou Jacobs.

Some of Jacobs supporters offered Ifshin the chance to debate Jacobs on the spot. Ifshin answered, "I have very little time to talk to the voters, I don't have a machine working for me, all I can do is talk to them on their floors during the alloted times. If you want to debate, I'll be at the multipurpose room in St. Marys at 4 p.m. tomorrow (today)."

Ifshin altered his talk at every stop along the trail. Among his major points was student apathy and dissatisfaction. He said, "We all sit around and complain about how bad Syracuse is, but we don't realize the good people and good things we do have here." On one floor he added, "We sit in our rooms and play Simon and Garfunkel's "I Am a Rock, I Am an Island' all day long and separate ourselves from reality."

Ifshin described his platform in terms of a wheel. "Student Government should serve as the Hub, and each dorm a spoke. A student should be able to work in his autonomous dorm, and eventually channel his idea into the Student Government in the center to have it circulated around the campus."

In quoting the Danforth Report on academic life at Syracuse Ifshin cited the statement, "Syracuse University deadens more minds than it opens."

As the Independent Slate was leaving one floor in Flint Al Ramy an official of CAP, walked onto the floor to "straighten a few things out." Ramy proceeded to provide criticism of the Independent's platform and political know-how. Ramy entered in a heated argument with Ifshin supporters, whose questions he fielded along with those of the audience.

Expected to bring his campaign to the cottages and Watson tomorrow evening, Ifshin has all intentions of debating with Jacobs at 4 p.m. "At that time," he said, "we both wouldn't be interfering with our speaking times as permitted by the elections rules."

Jacobs criticizes 'silence candidate'

By MITCH LANE

A fired-up Campus Alliance Party (CAP) executive slate stormed the mount rallying voter support for Thursday's election. Large crowds listened to Lou Jacobs, candidate for SG president, and his running mates, Joe Treple (Vice-President), Mary Daley (Secretary), and Bob Conners (Treasurer) comment and strike at issues raised by the opposition candidate, David Ifshin.

Jacobs cirticized Ifshin as a "Sound s of Silence" candidate. "We had all worked out a debate in Flint Hall at 9:30 Wednesday," Jacobs stated. "We got a call late Tuesday night that there would be no debate. The debate was off. What kind of leader is it that refuses to debate? "We have given them an open invitation to debate."

In response to Ifshin's public call for a debate in St. Mary's multipurpose room for this afternoon, John Ross, Jacob's campaign manager said, "We asked them to call us and organize a structured debate. We have not yet been called. We were instructed by Mr. Ifshin's campaign manager, Jody Root, not to listen to him when he talks about debate; but only to talk to the campaign manager."

Jacobs contended that Ifshin wants to "Abolish Student Government." He charged that Ifshin was a "Do-nothing candidate, and would run a do-nothing government."

Jacobs suggested three channels for change in this university. The first is through established channels such as Council on Student Life (CSL). "But if that fails," he continued, "We can take responsibly what we want. I didn't say take, I said take responsibly. No rent-a-cop will carry you out of the library. It would be ludicrous for the university to carry students out of the library. Taking students away from studying is repugnant to the idea of a university.

"The third channel is all take and no responsibility, and its called revolution.

"Next Thursday you get to make your choice. If you make the wrong one, than I seriously doubt that there will be a university left to choose about."

Joe Treple added in support of Jacobs, "We want to approve the structure, not abolish it. If it doesn't work, we'll go outside of it. We won't burn, we won't destroy what it took 100 years to build up."

Mary Daley answered criticism of Pinebrook, pointing out the constructive ideas that have come out of the conference and rejecting the idea that it is nothing but a paid party for campus leaders. She stated, "The isolation of Pinebrook in the Adirondacks prevents students, faculty and administrators from running away in the evening to attend family or social events. More time and concentration can be alloted to discussion of problems."

In response to questions, Jacobs defended student senate. He pointed out that student senate gave the university UJB, "A court that sentences you to 60 days on the rock pile and then dismisses the sentence."

Daily Orange survey

The Daily Orange is currently conducting a survey of 400 randomly selected undergraduate and graduate students from SU. In order to insure the success of this effort, students contacted are asked to cooperate with our staff. It must be emphasized that all responses will be completely anonymous.

Food for thought

SU 'snackers' feel the bite of high costs

NEWS ANALYSIS BY
DAVID A. ROSS and
CHERYL M. WEISBERG

If late night studying kindles your appetite, you would probably be better off patronizing one of the notorious gourmet snack wagons than to prepare your own "midnight snack." Similar to cosmetic and drug cost inequities, campus grocery prices average 16 per cent higher than prices paid for the same items off campus.

In this study, prices were gathered from representative stores on campus (SU Bookstore, Ted's Foods on Marshall Street, Steve's Market on South Crouse and the Delicatessen on Marshall Street), and compared to prices taken from food stores and supermarkets off campus (Peter's IGA, Victory Market, Super-Duper market, and the Euclid Market).

High on the shopping list of the average SU gourmet is peanut butter and jelly. An 18 ounce jar of Peter Pan Peanut Butter costs the student an average of 77 cents on campus while the same size and brand can be purchased off campus for 66 cents. A two pound jar of jelly costs an average of nine cents more on campus.

Another glaring difference is the price of Maxim, one of the new "freeze-dried" instant coffees. The large size eight ounce jar of Maxim is sold for an average of $2.02 on campus with one store going as high as $2.10. In contrast, Maxim costs an average of $1.81 downtown, a considerable difference.

There's a 10 per cent difference in the price of a six pack of Pepsi, and a ten per cent difference in the price of Jiffy Pop. In both cases the lower prices are off campus.

MAN DOES NOT LIVE BY BREAD ALONE, especially if it's expensive bread. This typical grocery store shelf scene does not indicate the discrepancies in food prices between stores close to campus and those outside of the University area.

A seven ounce jar of Tang costs an average of 47 cents on Piety Hill, while the same jar costs 41 cents downtown. Many of the stores on campus didn't even carry Tang in the larger more economical 18 ounce size. Tang is big seller on campus owing to the fact that it doesn't have to be refrigerated. The same is true for Kraft Cheese Spread, for it too needs no refrigeration. On campus a can of Kraft Cheddar Spread costs an average of 66 cents, downtown it can be purchased for an average of 59 cents, a difference of seven cents and almost 10 per cent.

Many of the new dorms are equipped with a refrigerator and stove on each floor. Students taking advantage of these meager facilities are often taken advantage of by the local merchants in return. A dozen eggs costs an average of 10 cents more per dozen on campus while the average campus shopper will pay approximately four cents more per quart of milk. A can of Campbell's Chicken Rice Soup costs 10 per cent more on campus, add this to a 10 per cent difference in the price of potato chips and a quick snack can cost the campus buyer a considerable amount more for patronizing local merchants.

Many students are aware that they are paying higher prices on campus, but don't know why. Many students buy food from the book store with their University charge cards. For this reason, comparison shopping becomes a waste of time to save "a few cents." Students pay almost $4 a carton for cigarettes in the bookstore, while downtown they can pay as little as $3.25. The book store seems to be taking advantage of the apparent lack of price concern, as the charge cards provide them with a fairly captive audience.

The markets on Marshall Street and South Crouse also serve a basically immobile student population. Their high prices reflect their limited store space and lack of volume sales, but the students bear the financial burden.

A bus ride downtown may be the answer to the price inequities, but bus rides are too much trouble for the money saved. No one will ever get the book store to lower their prices, and only urban renewal will remedy the Marshall Street mini-market problem. Perhaps the only way to bring campus prices to an even par would be the establishment of a UU co-op supermarket in the proposed union building. Until then, there's always the dingleman.

EDWARD HOMMEL & SONS
OPTICIANS
VANDERBILT SQ. CENTER
127 S. SALINA ST.
FREE PARKING

474-4644
EYEGLASSES & CONTACT LENSES
REPAIRS
Telex Hearing Aids

HOW ABOUT
$2.69?
— THAT'S RIGHT!
Record Runner
HAS HUNDREDS OF LP'S AT THE LOW PRICE
OF $2.69 PER ALBUM — COME ON DOWN!

ANGUS H. TWOMBLY — Editor-in-Chief

MANAGING EDITOR— Alan Stamm EDITORIAL DIRECTOR— Karen Wiediger NEWS EDITOR— Fred Tuccillo COPY EDITOR— Jean Havens FEATURE EDITOR— Roz Mazer SPORTS EDITOR— Mike Weber EXECUTIVE EDITOR— David A. Ross CAMPUS AFFAIRS EDITOR— Larry Kramer PHOTOGRAPHY EDITOR— Clint Clemens ASSOCIATE EDITORS— Andrij Bilyk, Kay Christensen, Beth Hillson, Rona Kavee, Helene Macdonald, Charles Shapiro, Dan Schlossberg, Patti Williams, Roni Zlokower,

DAILY ORANGE

Syracuse University's Daily Newspaper Since 1903

Wednesday, April 16, 1969 page 3

STEVEN P. STROBRIDGE — Business Manager

ASSISTANT BUSINESS MANAGER— Art Depasqua, NATIONAL ADVERTISING MANAGER— Janet Meyer ACCOUNT EXECUTIVES— Roger Black, Jim Maney, Mike Greenstein.

Published Tuesday, through Friday during the academic year by students of Syracuse University. Offices located at 200 Brooklea Drive, Fayetteville, N.Y., and 1101 East Adams St., Syracuse, New York. Entered as Second Class matter at the U.S. Post Office, Fayetteville, N.Y. 13066.

Letters

To the Editor:

I would like to clarify the misrepresentation of my views on Dorm Autonomy, and the Watson movement to declare their autonomy.

First, I have been working for several months on dorm autonomy as chairman of DellPlain's autonomy movement. I'm fed up with the period of time spent discussing the issue, without anything being accomplished at the last meeting of the Dorm Council. I proposed we try once more by submitting our constitution to the IDC and Senate and then declare our rights as individuals, by declaring DellPlain autonomous.

The meeting at Watson was of great importance to all Syracuse students. For the first time students met in a mass meeting and demanded their rights. They decided on their own to go through existing student channels and then declare Watson Dormitory autonomous with or without the Administration's sanction.

Students for the first time are getting involved in what is going on around us. Last night's meeting was of many which will make this campus autonomous before the end of the semester.

Matty Leibowitz
Candidate President of Sophomore Class

Meeting of minds

An impressive display of SU administrators and about 20 student leaders met yesterday in the first of what promises to be a productive and educational group of dialogues. Let it be said first, that there were hardly any exciting tangible material results to the meeting, but just the mere presence of names like Piskor, Rossman, Wingate, Colway, Smith, Kramer, Tatham, Carleton, Dye, Fritz, means a lot. A few months back, it would have been hard to believe that so many people would be willing to appear at a days notice. They were all there yesterday, willing to talk. Perhaps it took our black students to establish an agreeable atmosphere.

The students that were present let Chuck Hicks carry the ball. Yesterday was his day. Some students, including those from the Daily Orange, came more out of curoisity than anything else. The meeting could have been a farce--it wasn't. The meeting stuck to three issues--the student fee, curriculum committees and UU. Monday's meeting will start covering just about everything that bothers anyone lucky enough to have been asked to attend.

By this optomistic tone, the Daily Orange isn't trying to say we're "up tight" with the boys from the Administration Building and Huntington Hall. We've got gripes and they'll fly fast and furious on Monday. It is hoped, however, that the agreeable tone of yesterday's meeting will not be destroyed by attempts at "sleight of hand" by either side. For now, we've got a good thing going. Hicks is anxious and Piskor seems helpful.

The Chancellor will be in town on Monday. It might be interesting to invite him too.

A host and his guest

Editor's note: The following is an observation of a university and its power structure--SU's or any university. It is to be presented to the Faculty Senate meeting today by its author, Prof. Constant Kerkhoven of the Department of Industrial Engineering. Because of its length, we were forced to omit a series of appendices and diagrams that are mentioned near the end of the article. It is our wish to use them at a later date.

To make up our minds about the basic structure of a university, let us quickly start one, in our imagination. Suppose you are a person who knows something in which you feel that others might be interested. You want to exploit that knowledge for the benefit of both yourself (You must earn a living!) and the others who eagerly need the knowledge also. You put an ad in the paper offering a course for a certain price under specified conditions. The conditions seem acceptable so a few customers - I beg your pardon - students enroll.

Basic principle I: Students are customers of the enterprise; they are paying guests. Everything develops wonderfully. The students like your way of teaching, and your prices, and are grateful for the many things you teach them. They recommend you to others and in no time you must expand. This means that you must move from the original cold basement room in your home to a rented building, and you must hire teachers. You find them on the free market in all kinds and qualities, and you offer them a fee for teaching courses for you under conditions agreed upon. Without them, your business cannot run anymore. The law of supply and demand determines fees and conditions.

Basic principle II: Teachers = faculty, are suppliers to the business; they are paid guests. In the further development, your continuous expansion forces you to new buildings, library, dorms, banks to borrow capital, staff personnel to administer your business, secretarial and other facilities (lab's, etc.) for your faculty, parking space (!) and so on and so forth. When you finally retire, your inheritance is continued by others who run your business by appointing an administrator whose duty is to keep the enterprise in so good a working order that 1) it continues to attract customers (= students) and 2) your suppliers (= faculty) are glad to remain on your campus because the conditions you offer compete favorably with those of your competitors and not only that:just as well because you do not degrade them to paid servants but treat them as your paid guests. This, therefore, leads to:

Basic principle III: Your business (=the University) consists of an enterprise that exploits feasible facilities for the purpose of teaching. The main task of the University administrator is to attract, on the free market:

1) Customers (=students, government agencies, etc.) who must supply the income; (consider and treat them as paying guests);

2) Suppliers; that is the faculty which consumes part of the income, consider them as paid guests (=visiting professors) by offering acceptable contracts; and keep the expenses down in order to make a profit. You cannot expect anymore that the administrator is competent in the selection of all science and knowledge the university teaches. This task is readily delegated to the Faculty, who knows what must be offered, deliberates with you about their demands for teaching facilities, and informs you about the failings and passes.

Schematically, the simplest university looks as depicted in Fig. I.This has expanded to the University as we all know it. See Fig. II.

Nobody will deny that the task of "managing director" of our "enterprise" is huge, strenuous and of the highest responsibility, and governed by the availability of that scarce item: money. That's why he got the title: Chancellor. His skills must be manifold, however his most delicate competences must concentrate on two conflicting requirements: 1) Keep expenses down, 2) Contract for the most competent faculty. In the historic development of such a University, some mistakes will have been made. Some wrong policies may have been adopted. Even Chancellors are men who can make mistakes. Nobody would dare to blame a Chancellor for doing so. If errors have crept in, we must first discover them and second correct them. Errors manifest themselves - in so huge an enterprise - in all kinds of tangible (e.g., dropping profitability) and especially intangible phenomena like unrest, frictions, discouragement, lack of interest, sloppiness, dissatisfactions, lack of initiative, sicknesses, demoralization, and the like. Detecting these phenomena is not difficult. Everybody becomes aware of them sooner of later. But pinpointing the causes is obviously difficult. Speaking for myself, I may report that when I arrived here from Europe 7 years ago, I had never before worked in (or for) an enterprise where so strong a negative incentive for promotion seems to prevail:

1) Professors refuse to be promoted to department heads and/or deans.

2) The Chancellor declares openly that if he ever returned as a young scholar he would prefer a job as professor over his present position,

3) More than 300 college presidency posts, and over 1,000 deanships are presently unfilled on American campuses if my information is correct. At first I blamed myself for it upon grounds of unfamiliarity with American colleges, language difficulties, etc., and certainly never considered for one second the possibility that the cause of this climate would be found in faults in the organizational structure. Is not the U.S.A. the fatherland of scientific management? The supposition that in a big American university where Business Administration and Industrial Engineering are taught, there would be weak spots in its organizational structure simply did not enter my mind. Though I possessed considerable experience in many and diversified enterprises, in the field of investigation of, and implementation of improvements in, their organizational structures, I never studied even for one moment the organizational structure of an American university and that of our own University in particular. I "stuck to my last as a shoemaker" to my job as a teacher. But I did not escape from a slow but gradually increasing discouragement, demoralization and/or dissatisfaction. (The poor communication in the University was admittedly sometimes accused as the culprit.) Again, I blamed mostly myself, my inborn laziness, my age and consequently my degenerating brain power. Until .... I was informed that:

1) the University was running "in the red,"

2) a committee was appointed to make recommendations for a restructure of the Senate,

3) a new Chancellor was being sought.

That is such a unique opportunity to overhaul the existing organizational structure of any enterprise where usually some weak spots will have crept in over so many years, that I (slowly!) started thinking about this structure. What came out provisionally reads as follows:

The famous American inventiveness - about 100 years ago now - gave birth to the so-called management science. We all know of Frederic Winslow Taylor as the "father" of "scientific management." Though the management sciences are:

1) (like all other sciences) in continuous development,

2) unfortunately only applied in business enterprises and never implemented in "halls of Learning" and the like; they are, nevertheless, taught at the universities by competent scholars. We learn form experience and research in typical business enterprises, especially in factories, that among the most often occurring management errors that can creep in with time are found:

1) Overemphasis and even abuse of the principle of subordination;

2) Executive jobs or positions that suffer from "conflict of interest" also called "duality" or the "cashier-bookkeeper" effect;

3) Vicious triangles and even quadrangles.

Ad 1) points at the fact that a person who is subordinated in one form or the other, cannot and wishes not to unfold his full potentialities. For his own benefit he will readily work as hard as he can, but to do so for a boss is another matter - - - (Avoid treating your guests as servants!)

Ad 2) means that nobody should hold a job that contains conflicting responsibilities, like the cashier who is (or appoints!) his own bookkeeper. (Nobody can be host and guest at the same time!) Sooner or later conscience problems undoubtedly arise which such a person can fight only in two equally disastrous ways:

1) Push the problems aside instead of solving them, resulting in a blocking of vertical communication;

2) Become dishonest.

Ad 3) deals with often occurring situations of multiple conflicting interests such as between father, son and teacher or between quality, quantity and price, and the like.

Let us, armored with this minimum basic knowledge of "scientific management," observe the organizational structures of universities (considered as enterprises) and see if these errors could have slipped in and perhaps still flourish undiscovered.

We need not look very long to observe that in most universities the faculty members are subordinates of some university official, usually a Dean. Is that necessary? No, on the contrary. All that is needed is a contract between the university and the supplier (about fee, and the famous what, when, where and how).* Subordination is not only not at all necessary, but even endangers the professor's real creativity and his devotion because he is not responsible for the quality of his teaching (and research) to the University anymore, but his boss is!

In my humble opinion this is the most detrimental error (explainably) made in the past in

(Continued on Page 5)

*Like the policy of our University College which attracts professors from SU and elsewhere

MUSIC DEPT.

Clearance Sale

up to 50% OFF

Guitars
Guitar Straps
Music Books
Guitar Accessories
Color Cue Strings
Guitar Bags
Record Accessories
(adapters, cleaning kits, etc.)
Music Paper
Drumsticks & Pads etc.

at

The Corner Store

S.U. Bookstores

S. Crouse & University Place
"Our Business is People"

Anthro lecture tonight

Dr. David J. Perkin, professor of anthropology in the School of Oriental and African Studies at the University of London, will lecture today at 8:30 p.m. at Syracuse University's Newhouse Communications Center, room 200.

His lecture, "Local Tradition in a Kenya Trading Center," is sponsored by the Program of Eastern African Studies, the department of anthropology and the Anthropology Club.

Perkin, who has worked in Giriama and Nairobi, Kenya, is the author of numerous articles and a soon-to-be-published book on Kampala, Uganda.

His lecture is free and open to the public.

Subjects Needed for Physiological Study

Qualifications: Male or female - 21 to 35 years of age, with at least a high school education. Participants will be paid $15.00 for two sessions of approximately 2 hours each. Only morning appointments are available. If interested call Upstate Medical Center, 473-5775; ask for Mrs. Jessen.

HAVE YOU SEEN "OCEAN IN A BOTTLE"?

FANTASTIC AND MESMERISING

at

THE BOOKSTALL

147 Marshall St.

GREEK WEEK 1969

Presents

Sly and the Family Stone

and

Richie Havens

in Concert

War Memorial April 26th

8:00 p.m.

Tickets on Sale at HBC Cloak Room

Open to All Students

A host

(Continued from page 1)

(most?) American universities.* Luckily, this mistake can easily and quickly be corrected once it is discovered: Simply follow the example of U.C. and/or the International Management Dept.

The word Dean fell, a few sentences before. Just what is a Dean? He is a University executive in charge of an important teaching aspect, selected (usually) out of the faculty. He manages a (tight) budget established by the university administration. But he is also the chairman of the faculty of his department, and his faculty's representative to the University's administration! So he is simutaneously a faculty member and an administrator! Speaking of conflicting interests, is this not one of the most obvious examples that can be presented as a "case " in our studies of management sciences? As our own University employs dozens of Deans, must we still wonder about steadily decreasing profitability? Is it any wonder that the "voice of the faculty," from the shop floor, hardly reaches management of the University? And vice versa?

Here the reader will hit back. He retorts spontaneously that in the organizational structure of the University, there is the Senate, membered by the faculty and chaired by the Chancellor. Here all suggestions, proposals, complaints, etc., can be aired, are discussed and minutes kept. Under the capable and eloquent leadership of the Chancellor every important issue will be treated efficiently, just like in the big Congress of our federal government. Is not the chain tightly closed here?

Let's look at it carefully. Consider first that we have already pin-pointed the subordination of faculty and argued that this is wrong. So the present Senate is not - what it should and is certainly intended to be - to be-a representation of the joint suppliers of the University. On the contrary, it is

(Continued on Page 9)

* Universities in Continental Europe are free of this weakness
 Universities in Continental Europe do not have Deans; a Chancellor in s equally unknown!
 He acts simultaneously as a host and as a guest.....

Squad announced

Here today, goon tomorrow...

The 1969 Goon Squad has been tentatively chosen.

The 290 goons selected will not be official goons until their averages have been verified by the Deans of Men and Women. A 2.0 acum is required. If this average is not attained, the person will be replaced by his alternate. There are 60 alternates.

There is a mandatory meeting Wednesday, April 16 at 6 p.m. in Hendricks Chapel. All goons and alternates must attend.

The chosen goons are:

Nancy Alland, Anne Adesso, Madeleine Anich, Irene Bako, Sherrill Baumgartner, Suzanne Bauschard, Lee Berensen, Ellen Bilofsky, Carol Bishop, Nina Blendman, Judy Blumenfeld, Lynn Boncie, Alexandra Bonds, Jane Borks, Lisa Bossert, Candyce Boutin.

Diane Burgstein, Robin Camhy, Laura Canby, Nancy Cibula, Elizabeth Clawson, Denise Clayton, Edythe Cohen, Colleen Coleman, Joan Colligan, Joan Colombo, Diane Connor, Nannette Curtin, Angela Desantis, Debra Diener, Mary Donahoe, Judith Downing.

Deborah Duncan, Shari Flax, Joanna Franke, Melinda Fried, Bonnie Friedman, Marcia Ginsberg, Jill Golden, Edna Goldstein, Eleanor Gordon, Barbara Gottlieb, Donna Greene, Martha Grimes, Margo Grodzinski, Barbara Gurman, Barbara Hammer, Christina Harris, Diane Hauser, Kathryn Hawvermale, Joann Heffernan.

Nancy Hess, Deborah Higgins, Cathy Hill, Ellie Hirshberg, Carol Hite, Linnea Hollis, Melody Howard, Marilyn Hyder, Cheryl Ishmael, Jacquelyn Jacques, Deborah Jones, Katherine Jenney, Cheryl Kagan, Myrna Kanrich, Janet Kaplin, Jordi Karp.

Laurie Katzman, Ronnie Kemper, Patricia Kenney, Terri Kestenbaum, Nina Klock, Linda Klugman, Constance Komarek, Suzanne Koppelson, Elizabeth Lalor, Brenda Landesman, Jill Langey, Lillian Lasserson, Robin Lazer, Deborah Leoris, Barbara Levine, Jill Levine, Susan Levy.

Jane Lichtensterin, Candace Low, Marie Malnati, Jacqueline Masson, Maura Marshall, Jane Mesinger, Deborah Miller, Sarah Muther, Nancy Nagamatsu, Barbara Nevers, Barbara Newman, Stephanie Noble, Ruth Olsen, Elizabeth Pariser, Joan Pelletier, Alexandra Perle, Judith Pistaki, Toby Prince.

Francis Rauch, Marian Rebarer, Ellen Rickert, Shelley Resienberg, Victoria Ring, Joan Robbins, Carolyn Rogers, Elizabeth Ross, Susan Rothman, Sarah Ryder, Francis Sack, Vicki Sanders, Gail Satter, Ann Schlutter.

Susan Shanik, Emily Shear, Pamela Silverstein, Sally Singer, Patricia Smith, Barbara Sonnenschein, Eliza Spann, Linda Sperling, Alyson Sternberg, Ellen Stettner, Mary Stolz, Sally Suominen, Barbara Sutton, Linda Tillman, Laurel Terens, Nancy Tischler, Anita Uljanov, Sandra Walters, Barbara Watson, Arlyn Weiss.

Florence Weitzner, Bonnie Wilkoff, Dawna Woodward, Marjorie Wright, Susan Wylie, Mary Yetter, Michel Yeuell.

Martin Abo, David Altman, John Anderson, Ray Andrews, Robert Anthone, Lester Artinger, Reed Augliere, Richard Bacher, Kevin Barrett, Stephen Bittman, Paul Blacharski, John Brewster, Howard Brodsky, Craig Brown, Peter Brown, Joseph Busch.

Bill Cadel, Russell Canan, Stephen Codner, David Cohen, Richard Cooper, James Cosman, Harvey Danciger, Robert Danko, Brian Degregorio, Marc Deutsch, Hugh Dinwoodie, Jerome Donnelly, Mark Dresner, Robert Durr, James Dundord, David Dunmire, Thomas Dziedzic.

Kendall Eames, Jeff Epstein, Mark Epstein, Jay Everson, David Falk, James Gangloff, Richard Garfein, William Garretson, William Gaske.

George Giordano, David Girimini, Thomas Glynn, Richard Goldstein, John Gotjen, Richard Gotlieb, Gary Greenberg, Steven Grossman, James Grosso, Christopher Hale, Elwood Houlstein, Bruce Hunter, Joel Ingram, Richard Johnston, Richard Kane, Hyman Kapito.

Dennis Klein, Daniel Knuth, Jeffery Kopelson, Thomas Kostizak, Michael Kulis, John Lambert, John Leader, Stanton Lee, Robert Lefowitz, Matthew Leibowitz, John Lerch, Mitchell Levy, Robert Lewis, Arthur Liberman, Terry Light, Daniel Lowengard, Simon Lyon, Roger Lyons.

Jeffery Mabee, Daniel Marcus, Robert Marx, Frank Mason, Fidel Maynir, John McLeod, Ralph Miller, Reginald Mitchell, Thomas Monti, Donald Moog, Christopher Mucci, Kevin Murray, Donald Nagley, Robert Newmeier, John Nichols.

Dennis O'Brien, John O'Brien, Paul Paglia, Eugene Pantera, Jeffery Parker, Kenneth Pellegrino, Wayne Perra, Michael Poulos, Lawrence Rauch, John Reed, Jeffery Richards, Peter Ritcher, Michael Rider, Duane Roberts, Lewis Rogers, Mark Rosenbaum, David Rosenthal, Lawrence Rudner, Donn Ruotolo, Kenneth Ryder.

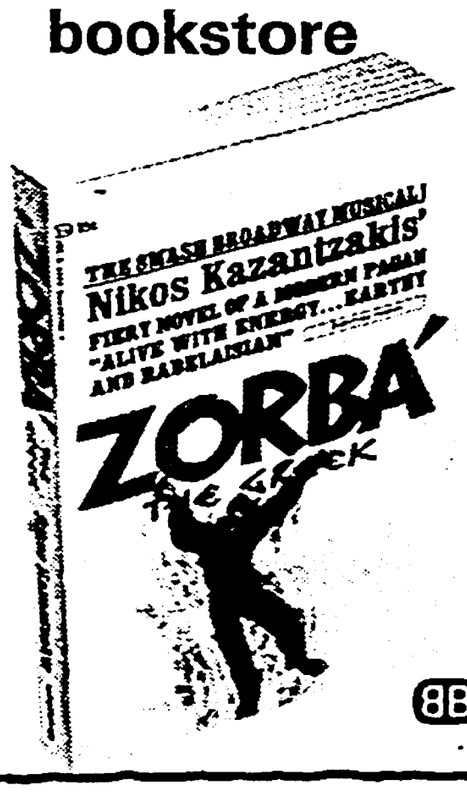
Robert Sacheli, James Sanchioni, Janis Sanders, Alan Sankin, Thomas Sawyer, Ronald Schecter, Richard Schellens,

(Continued on Page 10)

To all Disappointed Goon Squad Applicants:

All of the most worthwhile moments in life are bittersweet. Thus, while we of Traditions Commission are both excited and pleased with our new Goon Squad, we are also aware of the many talented and sincere people who were not chosen. Any system based in large part on one application and one five minute interview for the screening of some 750 people is at best only adequate; but it is necessitated by a despised practicality we could not avoid.

We are sorry that more of you could not be involved in the specific joys of Goon Squad; but we would remind you all, including those that were not selected, that no one should need the recognition of a straw hat and an orange button to actively work to help a body of unsure freshmen who need your help. The knowledge that your individual efforts have been worthwhile, the warmth that comes from human contact--these are the true rewards of Goon Squad. They are open to everyone.



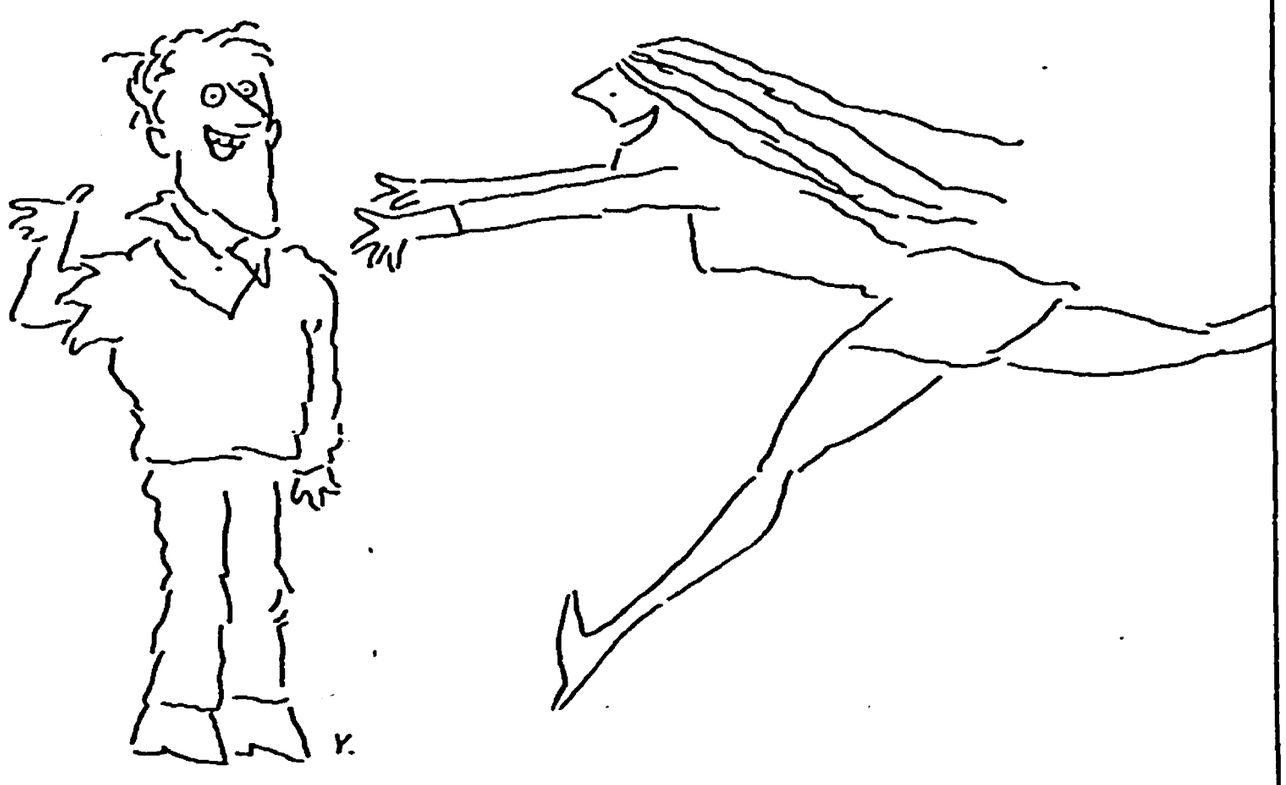
Thank you for applying.

Sincerely,
Traditions Commission

Nikos Kazantzakis' masterpiece

ZORBA THE GREEK

Now at your local bookstore



"Alive with energy . . . earthy and Rabelaisian," says the Saturday Review about this fiery tale of a modern pagan by "the Proteus of contemporary novel writing." — N.Y. Times Book Review. Already an award-winning movie . . . now a smash Broadway musical . . . nearly 1,000,000 copies sold!

And don't miss: New editions of these other superb Kazantzakis novels: SAINT FRANCIS, THE GREEK PASSION, FREEDOM OR DEATH

95¢ each wherever BALLANTINE BOOKS are sold

"I'm a masochist. I threw away my instructions on self-defense."

A little pain is one thing, but sheer disaster is something else. We put instructions on self-defense in every package of Hai Karate® After Shave and Cologne for your own safety, because we know what girls can do to an under-protected, over-splashed guy. So please read the instructions . . . even if it doesn't hurt.

Hai Karate-be careful how you use it.

© 1969 Leeming Division, Chas. Pfizer & Co., Inc., New York, N.Y.

S U Bookstores

Books!

THE CORNER STORE

★ Publishers R[emai]nder Sale! ★

Over 100 Titles a[t] Fantastic Savings!!

Books! S U Bookstores

 99 CENTS EACH ***

1. A LAW UNTO THEMSELVES–12 Portraits by C. Northcote Parkinson. Intimate, glowing gallery of some very uncommon people who, by force of their wit or wisdom, influenced the life of the famous author-historian. Eric Gill, Sir Arthur Bryant, T.H. White, Sibyl Hathaway, others. Illus. Pub. at $4.95. Sale .99

2. AFTERNOON IN SPAIN. By Marc Simont. Vivid, dramatic, often humorous world of the Fiesta Brava, enhanced by the author's colorful drawings. Pub. at $3.95. Sale .99

3. THE WALK OF THE OYSTERS. By Rex Mackey. Fwd. by Charles Goren. Hilarious jaunt through 30 years of Contract Bridge–a provocative perusal of its shadowed origins, rampant growth, flamboyant followers, etc. Illus. Pub. at $4.95. Sale .99

4. Vietnam–THE OTHER SIDE. By S. Lynd & T. Hayden. Report of the authors' forbidden journey to Prague, Moscow, Peking, and Hanoi, interviewing Communist leaders. Pub. at $5.00. Sale 1.00

5. OLD JULES COUNTRY: A Selection from the Works of Mari Sandoz. Generous sampling of the non-fiction writings of one of our most inspired interpreters of the American West. Pub. at $4.95. Sale .99

6. WILLIAM HENRY DRAYTON & THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION. By William M. Dabney & Marion Dargan. Masterful biography of a quixotic patrician who was first a belligerent Tory but changed his views and became a leader of the American Revolution in the Carolinas. An eloquent propagandist, he also commandeered troops, skippered a naval vessel, served as a jurist, and in 1778-79 was a delegate to the Continental Congress. Pub. at $5.00. Sale .99

7. WOODROW WILSON: An Intimate Memoir. By Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson. Fwd. by Bernard Baruch. Warm, revealing portrait of our 28th president–the death of his first wife, the triumphs of World War I and the tragic aftermath of the League of Nations, his death, etc.–based on the diaries of his personal physician and long-time confidant. Pub. at $3.50. Sale .99

8. BASTIDES DE LA FRANCE. By Bottke & Joyaux. A French anthology of literature and contemporary problems, with extensive vocabulary and interesting photos. French text. Pub. at $4.95. Sale .99

9. DOWNWIND OF UPSTAGE: The Art of Coarse Acting. By Michael Green. Mischievious guide to the diabolical undoing of dramatic productions–by both actors and stage-staff. Catalogues many imaginative misfortunes and dirty tricks designed to make a director's hair curl. Illus. Pub. at $4.95. Sale .99

10. THE PRIVATE LIFE OF HELEN OF TROY. By John Erskine. Helen, in a novel about resumption of duties as mistress of Menelaos household, reveals a witty philosophy of love and life. Pub. at $5.00. Sale .99

11. NO LAURELS FOR DE GAULLE. By Robert Mengin. Lively, absorbing account of de Gaulle's rise to power during the crucial London years. Pub. at $6.95. Sale .99

12. SHAW ON RELIGION. Ed. by Warren S. Smith. Brilliant, saucy, and irreverant observations extracted from his plays, writings, and letters. Pub. at $5.00. Sale .99

13. THE AMERICAN MALE: The Masculinity Crisis. By Myron Brenton. Explosive study of outmoded codes that are crippling American men at every level, from job performance to sexual prowess. Pub. at $5.95. Sale .99

14. BRIGHT CAGES. Selected Poems and Translations from the Chinese. By Christopher Morley. 132 best poems by the late great American man of letters who died in 1955, wishing his public thought of him as poet rather than novelist. Pub. at $5.00. Sale .99

15. THE VOYAGES OF COLUMBUS. By Washington Irving. Ed. by Winifred Hulbert. After more than a century, still the best biography of the explorer. Pub. at $4.50. Sale .99

16. DIARY OF A SEDUCER. By Soren Kierkegaard. Trans. by Gerd Gillhoff. Widely-read novel of the philosopher-theologian's early youth and intellectual eroticism. Pub. at $5.00. Sale .99

17. WHAT'S RIGHT WITH AMERICA. Ed. by Frederick Ungar. Reflections by leading Americans on the implications of unparalleled national power with some ideals left unvindicated. Pub. at $4.50. Sale .99

18. THREE HEAR THE BELLS. By Alice Lee Humphreys. Delightful, inspirational chronicle of the effects of school on mothers, children and teachers. Here are the virtues and foibles of all three, written with a loving touch by a long-time teacher. Beautifully bound and printed. Pub. at $3.00. Sale .99

19. NICK CARTER DETECTIVE. Intro. by Robert Clurman. Six turn-of-the-century adventure tales for whodunit fans of all ages. Pub. at $4.95. Sale .99

20. A THINKING MAN'S GUIDE TO BASEBALL. By Leonard Koppett. Diamond-clear fact filled book that entertainingly spotlights the game and the players as no newspaper or broadcast can convey. Pub. at $5.95. Sale.99

21. THE WORLDS OF ROBERT E. SHERWOOD: Mirror of His Times. By John Mason Brown. Stunning biography of the fourtime Pulitzer prize-winning playwright. Pub. at $6.95. Sale.99

22. BEFORE NOON: A Novel in Three Parts. By Ramon J. Sender. Beguiling trilogy in one volume about a boy's childhood in pre-Civil War Spain–probes his conflicts, romantic infatuations, dreams of heroism and glory, education, etc., providing deep insights into the childhood of every man. Pub. at $7.50. Sale .99

23. Francoise Mallet-Joris' UNCOMPROMISING HEART. Dazzling portrait of Louis XIV's first mistress, capricious and tormented Marie Mancini–her provocative life at court, near-marriage to the Sun King, friction with his royal relatives, her role as a pawn to powerful Cardinal Mazarin, her uncle, etc. Pub. at $5.50. Sale .99

24. MY BROTHER BRENDAN. By Dominic Behan. Brother's intimate biography of famous Irish playwright and fellow-carouser, Brendan Behan. Photos. Pub. at $4.50. Sale .99

25. LIGNTNING OUT OF ISRAEL. By Associated Press. A documentary chronicle of the incredibly swift six-day war at the Middle East crossroads of history and faith. Full of unusual pictures in color and black and white. Pub. at $4.95. Sale .99

26. John V. Lindsay's JOURNEY INTO POLITICS. Some informal observations on national, international and local affairs by N.Y.'s dynamic mayor. Pub. at $4.00. Sale .99

 $1.98 EACH ***

27. Cornelius Ryan's THE LAST BATTLE. Unfolds the thrill-taut fall of Berlin in those climactic final days of WW II. Recreates all the horror and suspense cloaking the last great obstacle to the triumphant Allies; portrays leading figures and other participants on both sides and describes what they saw, felt and thought. Illus., maps. Pub. at $7.50. Sale 1.98

28. THE CORRESPONDENTS' WAR. By Charles H. Brown. Superb account of America's war correspondents and sensationalist press during the Spanish-American War. Ranges from Stephan Crane to Richard Harding Davis, Hearst to Pulitzer, recreating the daring exploits of frontline reporters, their colorful dispatches and influence in the last of the pre-teletype wars, the bellicose competition between newspaper giants of the time for higher circulation figures, etc. Many illus. Pub. at $8.95. Sale 1.98

29. Alan Paton's SOUTH AFRICAN TRAGEDY. This truly great biography-history mirrors the deep political conflicts following WW II; Gen. Smuts, Malan, Hertzog, et al; and the "great light that went out in the land" when Jan Hofmeyr, the last hope of South African liberalism, died in 1948. Photos. Pub. at $10.00. Sale 1.98

30. VALENTINO. By Irving Shulman. Stunning biography of the Great Lover that separates the man from the myth. Provides a memorable social study of a celluloid Casanova constantly beset by weight problems, whose two off-screen marriages were probably never consummated, yet nurtured a legend for sexual prowess that has continued long after his death. Photos. Pub. at $6.95. Sale 1.98

31. POWER AND SAIL. By Constance & William Lydgate. Excellent complete guide to the selection, operation and maintenance of boats –from fisherman's outboard to family-size cabin cruiser. Covers size, construction, uses, needs, and adaptability of each type, with buying information on new, used, and even build-it-yourself boats. Glossary of nautical terms. Photos, diagrams, maps. Pub. at $4.95. Sale 1.98

32. The Life of MRS. G.B.S. By Janet Dunbar. Not only did Charlotte Payne-Townshend tame the philanderling Shaw, but she succeeded in fascinating him for 45 years–and this vivid portrait of a remarkable woman and a remarkable marriage reveals how she did it. Photos. Pub. at $4.95. Sale 1.98

33. THE GOLDEN KEY: A Study of the Fiction of George MacDonald. By Robert Lee Wolff. Confidant of Lewis Carroll, friend of Mark Twain and others, his "fantasies" inspired W.H. Auden to call him "one of the most remarkable writers of the 19th century...equal if not superior to Poe." Pub. at $6.00. Sale 1.98

34. Arthur Zaidenberg's DRAWING THE HUMAN FIGURE FROM TOP TO TOE. Superb, easy-to-follow approach with step-by-step instructions and dozens of illustrations depicting the human figure in action and repose. Thoroughly covers anatomy; techniques of converting geometric shapes and designs into three-dimensional body forms; balance, limb articulation, perspective, foreshortening, lighting and shading; drawing from casts, photographs and models; much more. Pub. at $3.95. Sale 1.98

35. Reinhold Niebuhr: COURAGE TO CHANGE. By June Bingham. A brilliant work on the life and thought of one of America's most important theologians. Pub. at $7.50. Sale 1.98

36. SECRET DIPLOMACY: Espionage & Cryptography 1500-1815. By James W. Thompson & Saul K. Padover. Engrossing, documented study of the seamy underside of European statecraft–three centuries of diplomatic Lie, Spy and Bribe. Illus. Pub. at $6.50. Sale 1.98

37. Motivation & Behavior–INCENTIVE. By Frank A. Logan. Detailed study of psychological experiments with 1,000 rats in more than 150 different conditions of reinforcement. "Fascinating, rewarding study of performance"--Psychological Reports. Pub. at $7.50. Sale 1.98

38. GRAPHIC PRESENTATION SIMPLIFIED. By R.R. Lutz. Practical guide and instruction course, shows you how to present facts in their most simple visual form; how to make all kinds of graphic charts and how to use them. Detailed info on curve, bar and circle charts; sector and statistical charts; dot, tack, and flow maps; use of color, etc. Illus. Pub. at $6.00. Sale 1.98

39. ANIMALS OF AUSTRALIA. By Axel Poignant. Exciting text and picture book on the fabulous creatures from the land down under. Over 190 early woodcuts and photos of the kangaroo, koala, platypus, black swan, etc. Pub. at $7.50. Sale 1.98

40. VICKY. By M.M. Marberry. Hilarious, lusty saga of Victoria C. Woodhull, Free Lover, Suffragette, and publisher, who precipitated the great Rev. Henry Ward Beecher sex scandal. Pub. at $5.95. Sale 1.98

41. MADAME SARAH! By Cornelia Otis Skinner. Dazzling, dramatic biography of Sarah Bernhardt. Recreates her glorious career, many love affairs, notable friends and enemies. 28 photos. Pub. at $6.95. Sale 1.98

42. A Dos Passos Anthology--WORLD IN A GLASS. A view of our century (people, nation, universe) from the outstanding novels of John dos Passos, including a choice selection from Manhattan Transfer, the U.S.A. trilogy, Midcentury, etc. Pub. at $6.95. Sale 1.98

43. PUTNAM'S GUIDE TO THE ART CENTERS OF EUROPE. By Donald Braider. Encyclopedic reference to the masterpieces of painting, sculpture and architecture in the 27 most frequently visited European cities--arranged alphabetically. 542 pages. Pub. at $6.95. Sale 1.98

44. CERVANTES. By Rudolph Schevill. Life of the creator of those protean embodiments of Western tragicomedy, Quixote and Panza. Pub. at $6.50. Sale 1.98

45. THE EDWARDIAN AGE. By R.J. Minney. Masterly portrait of Edward VII and his post-Victorian reign, a period of unparalleled vitality in British history. Recaptures the pomp and elegance, the great social and economic advances, Asquith, Lily Langtry (his mistress) the Kaiser, the Tsar, other leading figures of the day. Over 40 photos. Pub. at $5.95. Sale 1.98

46. FELIX FRANKFURTER: THE JUDGE. Ed. by Wallace Mendelson. Eight eminent judges and law professors assess the career of Justice Frankfurter–his views on labor and the law, separation of powers, as the voice of modern Federalism, etc.–revealing why he was one of the most brilliant and influential jurists of this century. Pub. at $7.50. Sale 1.98

47. Thomas Jefferson–To THE GIRLS AND BOYS. Selected letters with notes by Edward Boykin. Delightful, little-known correspondence between our third President and his two daughters and twelve grand-children. Charmingly illustrated. Pub. at $5.00 Sale 1.98

48. PREPOSITIONS. By Louis Sukofsky. Provocative collection of critical essays by a major figure in the modern movement in poetry, with fascinating side-glances as its leading contemporaries: Pound, Eliot, Marianne Moore, Wallace Stevens, many others. Pub. at $5.00. Sale 1.98

49. THE ANCIENT WAY. By J. Franklin Ewing, S.J. Delightfully interprets life, landmarks, customs and attitudes in the Holy Land in the time of Jesus. Covers trades and professions; farming, fishing, food and drink; morality, religion, feasts and holidays of both Romans and Jews; taxes and money; doctors and medicine; caves, temples, towns, countryside, etc. Pub. at $4.50. Sale 1.98

50. DOCTOR KERKHOVEN. By Jacob Wassermann. Powerful Psychological novel of epic proportions that pits bewildered youth against the myriad ramifications of modern life, and subtly evaluates the tendencies of our times. 646 pages. Pub. at $5.95. Sale 1.98

51. THE ECCENTRIC ARK: The Curious World of Frank Buckland. By G.H.O. Burgess. Extraordinary story of a real-life Dr. Doolittle and his passionate interest in every living creature that walked, crawled, flew or swam. Crocodiles, monkeys, spiders, snakes and toads crowd the pages of this 19th-Century saga, as well as numerous human oddities of the Victorian era. Illus. Pub. at $6.50. Sale 1.98

52. LEADERS AND LIBERALS IN 20th CENTURY AMERICA. By Charles A. Madison. Career and personality profiles, in depth, of eight "goads and guides" who typify America's shift from a laissez-faire economy to our present welfare state: Teddy Roosevelt, Wilson, La Follette, Brandeis, FDR, Norris, Justice Black, and Truman. "Thoughtful, stimulating analysis"–Oscar Handlin. Pub. at $6.50. Sale 1.98

53. ONE NATION UNDER GOD: An Anthology for Americans. Ed. by Robert Gordon Smith. Richly represents 185 years of American life and thought from a prayer by George Washington to JFK's Inaugural Address. Pub. at $4.95. Sale 1.98

54. Edwin Way Teale's WANDERING THROUGH WINTER. With 49 spectacular nature photographs. Triumphant finale to beloved Teale naturalist's "Seasons" books–the record of a 20,000 mile journey of adventure through the North American winter. Pub. at $6.50. Sale 1.98

55. Jean Starr Untermeyer's PRIVATE COLLECTION. Frost, the Sitwells, Sandburg, the Barrymores,–these and many other colorful figures inhabit these personal reminiscences. Fascinating reading, rare photos. Pub. at $5.95. Sale 1.98

56. THE ARTS OF THE BEAUTIFUL. With his usual lucidity and wit, Etienne Gilson explains why the fine arts are created for "the making of beauty for beauty's own sake"–and appeal only indirectly to knowledge. Pub. at $4.50. Sale 1.98

57. THE MYSTIC ROSE. By Ernest Crawley. Noted work on primitive love rites, marriage and sex taboos, etc.–from the Mooris of New Zealand to the North American Indian. 715 pages. Pub. at $3.98. Sale 1.98

 $2.98 EACH ***

58. An American Genius–THEODORE DREISER. By W.A. Swanberg. Candid portrait of author of "An American Tragedy," "Sister Carrie," other great novels. New, fascinating material on Dreiser's love affairs, friendships with Mencken, Anderson, and Sinclair Lewis, literary and political battles, etc. 614 pages, photos. Pub. at $10.00. Sale 2.98

59. AFRICAN MYTHOLOGY. By Geoffrey Parrinder. Gods and spirits, oracles and divinations, witches and monsters, wisdom tales, animal fables, symbolism–all the fascinating folklore, striking resemblances and differences of the many tribes and peoples of the Dark Continent. 147 magnificent illustrations, many in color. 8½"x11". $5.00 value. Only 2.98

60. Charles Neider's MARK TWAIN. Masterly revelation of the novelist, humorist, and social critic–passionate, bitter, witty and mysterious Samuel Clemens. Penetrates to the core of his complex character, explores in depth the virtuosity and variety and his achievement, including all major works, travel books, short stories, sketches and essays, little-known pieces, previously suppressed material. Pub. at $6.50. Sale 2.98

61. ONLY ONE NEW YORK. Photos by Jan Yoors. Text by Charles Samuels. An extraordinary journey through the undiscovered worlds of the great city. 120 exciting, evocative photographs and "scenes." 9 Pub. at $7.

62. THE Life and Marshall (1729-1 Longwort authoritati history's unorthoc permanentl folkmyth. his trium Poland, Switzerlan ideas on physical fi men, mu maps. Pub.

63. SHAKESPE Mary Le illustration Beautiful comedies, with exte the orig edition–fo

64. THE By Jame biograph Sachs–Ma demands f the terr posterity extremes makeup. P

65. TH LOST. By study of pre-industr rural, f Shakespe Newton–a today. E customs, motivation the past s, wedding large-scale es, political society of nd crafts of Pub. at $5

66. CO and urban Royal Experience. William I Sale 2.98 with the A CASTLE: countrysi France. By Bercy, Arlaute cuisine Challes at the French great chateaipes from Pub. at $7 Le Prieure,

67. thers of the EYES–A Tribes o Sale 2.98 Henry J INDIAN chronicle Among the Amerindia By Colin and remopologist's description among the that co astal region Christiani Fascinating sex custo Telujah cult Pub. at $ anism and

68. IN yths, songs, By Veroric photos, ancient e Sale 2.98 the basis THOLOGY. religion, treasury of color page and fables, of India's t and Jain $5.00 value. art. 224

69. Ph hotographs D.S. All 8½"x11". Well-reseat Only 2.98 concepts IENCE. By astronom Ordway. energy in the basic electricit chemistry, radioactiv teorology, time and motion, etc.–provi molecules, path tor, fossils, knowledge lar System, layman. Fy-to-follow Pub. at $8 physical intelligent

70. T 825 pp. INDIA: A Sale 2.98 Modern Lacy. CoENCE OF the new, ons in the the Britis Creighton widow India with Ghandi, Nehru ethics, at $7.50. marriage,

71. ughts of ROOSEVE et al. Pub. Knew Sale 2.98 Roosevelt D O R E at his en an As I friends, r Nicholas camping, about TR aloud, a with close tennis–dr children, and mem g, reading photos. Pues, letters

72. Re kinsman t. Many Sale 2.98 Luciano

ghts and Sale 2.98 ICTORY: s of Field Suvorov Philip cent and f one of nd most ils, now n Russian documents paigns in Italy and olutionary ining and re of his illus., and Sale 2.98 FROM Charles and rb color Svolinsky. ons of 20 romances, tions from vish gift 0.Only 2.98 SOCHIST. Intriguing opold von incredible timuli gave hism" to the two emotional Sale 2.98 WE HAVE tt. Pioneer ts between -the largely ociety of mwell and ngland of ed crafts for Sale 2.98 Berti. Lively portrait of the man, his times, and his works. 44 plates in full color. Pub. at $5.95. Sale 2.98

73. THE STORY OF AMERICAN LETTERS. By W.F. Taylor. A definitive history and important critical evaluation of our literature considered as a fine art. Traces the development of a national expression and style from the 17th century to the writings of Hemingway and Faulkner. Pub. at $5.00. Sale 2.98

74. Art of TIEPOLO. Text by Valentino Crivellato. Brilliant study of the 18th-century Venetian painter. 44 plates in full color. Pub. at $5.95. Sale 2.98

75. UNKNOWN LONDON. By Walter George Bell. "Unofficial" guide to London's hidden history, filled with fascinating accounts of curious people, places and events from 1554 through the 1960's. 24 photos. $5.00 value. Special Import 2.98

76. First Gossip Columnist--THE DIVINE ARETINO. By James Cleugh. Intriguing biography of Pietro Aretino, colorful 16th century blackmailer. Feared for his scabrous verse, remarkable for his successful debauch of ladies of low and high rank, one-time mule driver, hangman's mate and pimp, and the "greatest erotic writer in Christendom."–Wayland Young. PUb. at $6.95. Sale 2.98

77. MEXICAN & CENTRAL AMERICAN MYTHOLOGY. By Irene Nicholson. Brings to life the fantastic myths and legends of pre-Hispanic America. Over 100 stunning photo-illustrations, 24 pages in color. 8½"x11". Special Import 2.98

78. THE HOLMES – EINSTEIN LETTERS. Ed. by James Bishop Peabody. The exchange, during the ing correspondence of Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes and diplomat-historian Lewis Einstein, from 1903-1935. Exchanging wit, wisdom and urbane erudition, they savored everything from Plato to Mary Pickford movies. Pub. at $12.50. Sale 2.98

79. VENUS UNMASKED: Collection of 18th-Century Bawdry. Compiled by Leonard De Vries & Peter Fryer. A pre-Victorian potpouri of erotic riddles, divorce court reports, primitive sexology and tales of 'sporting ladies' definitely not for prudes. Pub. at $5.95. Sale 2.98

80. Fifty Best Cookbooks–THE HORN OF PLENTY. By Peggy Harvey. Famous cook's selection of 300 finest recipes from the 50 best cookbooks she knows: James Beard's Shad Roe en Papillote; Helen Brown's Winter Melon Soup; Julia Child's Fish Souffle; Italian, Creole, Russian, other dishes. Pub. at $7.50. Sale 2.98

81. GERMAN ROMANTICISM. By Oskar Walzel. Trans. by A.E. Lussky. The probing of emotion by reason, combined with a yearning to escape dull daily life, which led to a new world-view by 19th-century Germans. Pub. at $6.50. Sale 2.98

82. LORD OF THE BEASTS: Saga Of Buffalo Jones. By R. Easton & M. Brown. Fast-paced biography of Charles Jesse Jones, frontiersman, Indian fighter, buffalo hunter extraordinary, who, lasso in hand, courted danger and fame from the Grand Canyon to the Artic Circle, and African veldt; friend to Teddy Roosevelt, Prince of Wales, Zane Grey, et al. Illus. Pub. at $6.00. Sale 2.98

83. MEN AND MORALS: The Story of Ethics, by Woodbridge Riley. Lucidly written study of all the schools and all the great teachers of ethics–among them, Plato, Buddha, St. Augustine, Spinoza, Rousseau, Nietzsche, William James. "A readable and stimulating book." –N.Y. Times. 16 halftone plates. Pub. at $6.50. Sale 2.98

84. JOYCE KILMER'S ANTHOLOGY OF CATHOLIC POETS. Kilmer's collection updated with a selection from notable Catholic poets of recent years. Pub. at $5.95. Sale 2.98

85. DIALOGUES OF PLATO: From the Third Jowett Translation. Ed. by W.C. Greene. Plato's logical method, profundity, drollery, and poetic fancy. Pub. at $5.95. Sale 2.98

86. A GUIDE TO THE SOCIAL SCIENCES. Ed. by Norman MacKenzie. Ten scholars describe their special disciplines--anthropology, economics, social psychology, political ideology, etc. Contributors include Profs. James MacGregor Burns, Leon Bramson, T.B. Bottomore, and Asa Briggs. Pub. at $6.50. Sale 2.98

87. PSYCHOANALYSIS & SHAKESPEARE. By Norman N. Holland. Far-reaching evaluation of major interpretations of Shakespeare and his works based on the most up-to-date psychoanalytic theory of literature. Provides fresh perspectives on the bard and shows how the psychoanalytic approach can be extended to all literature. Pub. at $9.95. Sale 2.98

88. THE CONTROVERSY OF THE COMETS OF 1618: Galileo, Grassi, Guiducci, Kepler. Trans. by Stillman Drake and C.D. O'Malley. Sparked by the appearance of three comets in the autumn of 1618, scientific canons "obvious" today, but trembling on the abyss of heresy then, arose from this quarrel between Galileo and the Jesuits. Pub. at $6.00. Sale 2.98

89. THE AMERICAN PLAY–PARTY SONG. By B.A. Botkin. Fascinating history of game songs and their place in frontier society. Includes 103 songs, together with 1,000 variants and 62 tunes; plus extensive song index, biblio, and a storehouse of folklore. Pub. at $7.50. Sale 2.98

HIGHER PRICED BOOKS

90. ESQUIRE'S BOOK OF BOATING. By Robert Scharff, et al. Complete guide to the art and joys of yachting for all boating buffs. Chapters on seamanship and traffic rules, navigation, weather, signalling, racing, sports, cooking and entertaining at sea. Full of illustrations and diagrams, including and sections on code flags, cloud formations, visual navigation aids, etc. Bound with flexible, waterproof cover and end sheets. 7½"x11½". Pub. at $12.50. Sale 3.98

91. Ivan Sanderson's BOOK OF GREAT JUNGLES. Magnificently illustrated book that takes you on an unforgettable journey through the great jungles of the world. Provides a rare blending of natural history, travel, and adventure from prehistoric times to the sea voyagers of the Renaissance, the 19th century empire builders, to todays scientific explorers. Over 140 photos, engravings, maps and drawings. Put. at $9.95. Sale 4.98

92. BREAKTHROUGH: A Treasury of Contemporary American-Jewish Literature. Ed. by Irving Malin & Irwin Stark. An unprecedented collection – including works by Irving Howe, Herbert Gold, Bernard Malamud, Grace Paley, Norman Mailer, Karl Shapiro, Lionel Trilling, Leslie Fiedler, Saul Bellow, Delmore Schwartz, Alfred Kazin, Allen Ginsberg, Norman Podhoretz, Philip Roth, and many other novelists, poets, essayists, critics – reflecting Jewish-American life and thought and also the tremendous vitality and scope of these major voices telling about our time. Pub. at $7.50. Sale 3.98

93. THE HISTORIANS' HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES. Ed. by Andrew S. Berky & James P. Shenton. Two-volume pageant of American history ranging chronologically from the landing of Columbus to the aftermath of WWII. Included among the illustrious contributors of every political, sociological and economic persuasion are Francis Parkman, Bruce Catton, Allan Nevins, Henry Steele Commager, Charles Beard, William Allen White, Arthus Schlesinger, et al. 1,384 pages, slipcased. Pub. at $16.95 the set. Sale 9.95

94. DEVILS, MONSTERS, AND NIGHTMARES: The Grotesque and Fantastic in Art. By Howard Daniels. Describes and reproduces over 250 haunting art works by Bosch, Breughel, Callot, Cranach, Goya, Munch, Kley, Kubin and other masters of the disordered imagination. 8½"x 11". Pub. at $12.50. Sale 4.98

95. Victor W. Von Hagen's ROADS THAT LED TO ROME. 64 full-color illustrations, 150 in b & w. Vividly presents the fruit of the Roman Road Expedition, led by the author, a renowned archaeologist. Covers its five years' research through thirty-four countries that followed the course of more than 30,000 miles of ancient Roman roads – providing the first systematic study of the Roman road system since the third century, when Antoninus Agustus prepared a military itinerary for the Emperor Caracalla. Outlines endlessly fascinating trails over snow-covered Alps, through deserts, bogs and moorlands, the arid Atlas mountains and the vast sand seas of Africa . . . spanning 800 yards of Roman history! Pub. at $10.95. Sale 5.95

96. MANNERS AND MORALS IN THE AGE OF OPTIMISM. By James Laver. Brilliant study of the paradoxical, rapidly changing period between 1848 and 1914 – when prudery and excess flourished side by side in European and America. Discusses the conditions of life, pleasures and dissipations of both rich and poor, from Victorian brothels to the beginnings of jazz. Copiously illustrated. Put. at $9.95. Sale 4.98

97. TREASURY OF GRAND OPERA. By Henry W. Simon. New and enlarged edition contains Don Diovanni; Lohengrin; La Traviata; Faust; Aida; Carmen; Cavalleria Rusticana; Pagliacci; La Boheme--with piano transcriptions of principal numbers, singable translations, summaries of plots, more. Nearly 500 large pages, 54 illus. Pub. at $12.50. Sale 7.95

98. John Wellborn Root's MEANINGS OF ARCHITECTURE. Edited & Introduced by Donald Hoffmann. Superbly presents Root's provocative buildings and prophetic writings, reflecting his genius as an architect, major role in the evolution of the skyscraper, and impact on American building art. 104 ILLUSTRATIONS depict the famous Monadnock Block, the Phenix Building, the Montezuma Hotel, many other important buildings--all marked by remarkable innovation, inventive power and virile beauty, and hailed as masterworks by peers, rivals and critics, including Louis Sullivan and Frank Lloyd Wright. 9"x11½". Pub. at $15.00. Sale 7.95

99. Rise & Fall of the Picture Market, 1760-1960: THE ECONOMICS OF TASTE. By Gerald Reitlinger. Absorbing history of taste and 200 years of wildly gyrating prices. Re-enacts dramas in salesrooms, artist studios, collectors' homes, providing an enthralling spectacle of man's fads, fancies and follies in the unpredictable world of art. Countless stories emerge of love, disillusionment, forgery, theft, social ambition, financial acumen, and pride. Illus. 518 pp. Pub. at $8.50. Sale 3.98

100. LAROUSSE ENCYCLOPEDIA OF MODERN HISTORY. Ed. by Marcel Dunan, et al. Fwd. by Hugh Trevor-Roper. Huge, brilliantly written reference guide to world history from 1500 to the present, including a comprehensive record of man's achievement in the arts. Over 500 remarkable illustrations, 32 pp. in color. 8"x11¼". Pub. at $20.00. Sale 9.95

101. ONE HUNDRED YEARS OF MODERN PAINTING. By Frank Elgar and J.E. Muller. Traces the history of painting since Manet's historic "Olympia" with up to two thirds of each page devoted to fine color reproductions, and a brilliant text by two world-famous critics. 258 illus. 9½"x12½". Pub. at $12.50. Sale 9.95

102. David Douglas Duncan's YANKEE NOMAD: A Photographic Odyssey. A lifetime of adventure, war coverage, bizarre assignments from LIFE . . the 500 most dramatic and historic shots, 130 in color, by one of the world's foremost photo-journalists, with over 100,000 words from his journals. Pub. at $23.00. Sale 4.98

103. Arthur Daley & John Arlott--PAGEANTRY OF SPORT. 144 period illustrations in b & w, 16 color plates. Colorful, lavish, breathtaking history of great sports in England and America from the 12th to 19th centuries–archery to tennis, skittles and stoolball to bear-baiting, cock-fighting, fox-hunting, cricket, fisticuffs, racing, Rugby football, etc., etc. Includes lively, authoritative selections by famous writers of each period: Roger Ascham, Izaak Walton, Hazlitt, Nimrod, Mark Twain, Dickens, et al. 15½"x10½". Pub. at $25.00. Sale 12.95

104. Henry James' THE AMERICAN SCENE. Intro. by Irving Howe. Penetrating impressions of the raw, potent, new America James discovered on a return visit to his homeland in 1904-05, after an exile of twenty years – an America of explosive material growth, vast new fortunes and an awkwardly awakening interest in the arts, backdropped by the hectic pace of commercialism, the collapse of old values, and the impact of European immigration. 50 rare photos. Pub. at $7.50. Sale 3.98

105. ENCYCLOPAEDIA OF THE ARTS. Consulting Editor: Herbert Read. So tremendous in size, scope and authoritativeness that it encompasses thirteen separate "dictionaries." 10,250 ENTRIES, 3,550 ILLUSTRATIONS, 79 FULL COLOR PLATES, 384 DOUBLE-SIZE PAGES. A one-volume education in Architecture, Ballet, Biography, Film, Graphics, Literature, Music, Opera, Painting, Photography, Philosophy, Sculpture, and Theatre. Contains thousands of up-to-date entries not to be found in the most expensive general encyclopedias. Biographies, titles, styles, movements, technical terms, techniques and materials. 8½"x11"x2½" thick, bound in library buckram. Orig. $35.00 Sensational at 14.95

106. DICTIONARY OF ITALIAN PAINTING. Ed. by Fernand Hazan. 246 reproductions in full color, 280 authoritative articles by leading art scholars. Complete biographical information and basic criticism of every major painter from the 12th century to the end of the 18th. 6"x8½", printed in France. Pub. at $8.95. Sale 4.98

107. THE LIFE OF ERIC GILL. By Robert Speaight. Lively biography, rich in controversy and personalities, of the master stone carver, wood engraver and type designer who was also one of the most profound Catholic revolutionaries of the 20th century. The evolution of Gill's creative style and canon of "shocking" ideas is counterpointed by the great number of luminaries he knew or tangled with–Epstein, Maillol, Chesterton, others. Beautifully illustrated with photographs and drawings. Pub. at $6.95. Sale 3.98

108. Indian Wars of the West--MASSACRES OF THE MOUNTAINS. By J.P. Dunn, Jr. Unexpurgated, documented narrative of every major engagement fought between the white men and the Indians from 1815 to 1875. Custer's Last Stand, Geronimo and the Apaches, Sitting Bull, Kit Carson, etc., etc. 669 pages. Illus. Pub. at $6.95. Sale 4.98

109. AN ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF ITALY. Ed. by Milton Gendel. Breathtaking picture-text survey encompassing the past twenty-five centuries–from the early Etruscans and Greeks to the glory of ancient Rome, and from the Renaissance to modern Italy. With 48 PAGES OF COLOR REPRODUCTIONS AND 263 PHOTO-ILLUSTRATIONS. Profiles of Italy's great "movers and shakers" from Caesar to Mussolini and after add flavor to this splendid book. 11"x12". Pub. at $25.00 Sale 12.95

110. Art Nouveau–THE BEST OF BEARDSLEY. Ed. by R.A. Walker. The strangely beautiful drawings of Aubrey Beardsley – more than 100 plates from the cover designs of The Savoy and The Yellow Book, the elaborate illustrations for Oscar Wilde's Salome, etc. Pub. at $4.95. Sale 3.98

111. Turks & Tartars vs. Habsburgs--THE SIEGE OF VIENNA. By John Stoye. Rich in incident, alive with fascinating characters, this is the first modern account in English of the origins, course, and results of the Turkish assault on Vienna in 1683–a fatal blow to the Ottoman Empire and the last great trial of strength between Cross and Crescent, signaling a new epoch in European history that lasted until the cataclysmic eruption of WWI. Many illus. Pub. at $6.95. Sale 3.98

112. TRIUMPH OF THE MIDDLE CLASSES. By Charles Morazé. Captivating political-economic-social portrait of 19th-Century Europe as the "work-shop of the world" – dominated by a powerful middle class allied to industry and trade. Describes the spread of technological and financial skills around the world, bourgeoisie values that followed, their influence on nations and cultures, the dethronement of the old order of the 18th-Century and the rise of the new aristocracy of commerce. Illus. 414 pp. Pub. at $12.50. Sale 4.98

113. MOMENT OF LIGHT: Clara Sipprell's Selected Photographs. Splendid tribute to a great woman photographer. 152 studies, executed only in natural light, of the famous and obscure--King Gustav V of Sweden, Grandma Moses, Langston Hughes, Stanislavsky, children, African natives, many others. Pub. at $12.95. Special 4.98

114. Bernard Shaw's COLLECTED LETTERS: 1874-1897. Ed. by Dan H. Laurence. 700 provocative letters, many never previously published, ranging from his eighteenth year in Dublin through the socialist and journalistic apprenticeships in London to his debut as a major dramatist. 170 correspondents, including Charlotte Payne-Townshend, his future wife; Ellen Terry, Sidney and Beatrice Webb, T.P. O'Connor, John Morley, William Morris, many others. Illus. with rare photographs, playbills, etc. Pub. at $12.50. Sale 4.98

115. HISTORY OF PHILOSOPHICAL SYSTEMS. Ed. by Vergilius Ferm. From Plato and Aristotle to modern Existentialism. Informative, stimulating summaries of all the major schools of thought, including the world's great religions. 642 absorbing pages. Pub. at $6.00. Sale 4.98

——Happenings on the Hill——

WEDNESDAY

PEACE CORPS Film discussion at Haven Lounge. 7:30 p.m.

SENIOR EXEC - Amaze your friends! Come to the meeting at Phi Gam, 7 p.m. and learn all about graduation. Must come, but if you can't call Norma (X2639).

POETRY READING by Mrs. Kobernuss. Honors Cultural Committee - 7:30 in St. Marys.

FILM and discussion of "Foreign Involvement in Rural Development in Ethiopia," 3:30 p.m. - room 5, Illick Hall. Sponsored by College of Forestry Grad Student Association.

UKRANIAN CLUB meeting 6:30 p.m. at the ISO, 230 Euclid Ave. Guest lecture on "Interesting things - we don't know about Ukrane and Ukrainians."

ART STUDENTS - Cooperation is needed so Art Students can participate in the light show for Festival of Arts. Bring everything you are willing to sell to raise money for A.L.I.C.E. to Lowe Art Center by 9:00.

ART SALE - starting at 10:30 a.m. at Lowe Art Center. All proceeds go to the Art Students' participation in the Light show for the Festival of Arts.

JURISPURDENCE P.S. 341 Lawrenson Penthouse.

PROHIBITION PARTY will rally at 9:30 on the Quad. The Macedonian call goes out to all friends, relatives, and existentials of the party.

DISCUSSION on Contemporary Theology - Watson Main Lounge - 8 p.m.

GRADUATE STUDENT ORGANIZATION - senate meeting at 7:45 in B115 Grant.

DISCUSSION on sex education at UU Bull Session, Noble room of Chapel at 4 p.m.

IT HAPPENS EVERY SPRING - from 4-5 p.m. the WAA Softball Club dazzles on the diamond. Grab your glove if you have one, and come on anyway if you don't.

ALL-GOON meeting for goons and alternates 6 p.m. in Hendricks Chapel.

THURSDAY

"DRUGS AND THE LAW" will be discussed by Mr. Isadore Greenberg, defense attorney in several recent Syracuse drug cases, at 7 p.m. in the Newhouse lounge. All interested persons are invited.

SUSKI meeting in 117 Lyman. Important matters to be discussed.

BIAFRA meeting 7 p.m. Chapel House.

UU Peace Corps discussion with slides and speaker - 8 p.m.

PC PLACEMENT TESTS, 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. in placement center, 804 University Ave.

UJB 7:30 p.m. Chapel House.

MAKE MONEY Thursday selling the special election issue of the Promethean. Salesmen have made $5 in one hour. Bonus for top sales. Contact Bob Giordano or Jim Dalton ext. 3140.

LECTURE on "The Dawn of the Communicationists Theorists: The Sophists." Noon in the Newhouse Lounge.

GENERAL

EVERYONE! enter photo contest for Negative Space. Submit any number, any kind by April 28th, main office, J-school. For details, call Pam Taylor, 3131.

UJB applications for membership 1969-1970 are available in the Dean of Men's office.

CREATIVE WRITERS are needed to help prepare a "Dummy" issue for a proposed multi-campus college magazine. If anyone is interested contact Steve Vogel X2031 or X2032.

ANYONE wishing a Maxwell News and Notes newsletter may pick up a copy in the Dean's Office, 217 Maxwell Hall.

APPLY FOR a UU Board Position. 16 places open, call Mary Franciosi at X2738 for information.

SOPHOMORE MEN - interested in applying for Orange Key Junior Men's Honorary may pick up an application in Dean Carleton's office. This application must be typed and returned to Dean Carleton's office by April 23rd.

GREAT DECISIONS Discussion Group will meet at the International Student Center, 230 Euclid Av. Thursday evening at 8 for a discussion on "Western Europe and its Relationship with the U.S." Students from Western Europe will participate with Professor Michael Thomas moderating. All are welcome.

In an ugly mood? This is for you

In coordination with Greek Week, Alpha Chi Rho will sponsor an Ugly Man On Campus Contest. Any fraternity, sorority, dorm floor, cottage, etc. can sponsor a contestant to vie for the title.

Judging of the contest will be based on ugliness and ugliness alone. All money received will be put into the Greek Week Scholarship Fund and community project.

An application including the applicant's name, sponsor, address, phone number, and $2 entry fee must be submitted to Alpha Chi Rho by midnight on Thursday, April 17.

All contestants will report to Alpha Chi Rho on Saturday, April 19 at 1 p.m. dressed as ugly as possible. There the five ugliest contestants will be picked by a panel of five judges representing the Greek Week committee.

Pictures of the five finalists will also be taken at this time for display in the lobby of HBC starting Monday, April 21, the opening day of Greek Week.

A jar will be placed under the picture of each contestant, and anyone can donate as much as he wants for the candidate of his choice. The contestant with the most money in his jar by noon on Saturday, April 26 will be announced at the Greek Week concert on Saturday night and will be presented with the UMOC trophy.

For further information contact Ken Brunnke, x2022 or 2183, or Brian Saxe, x 2183 or 2779.

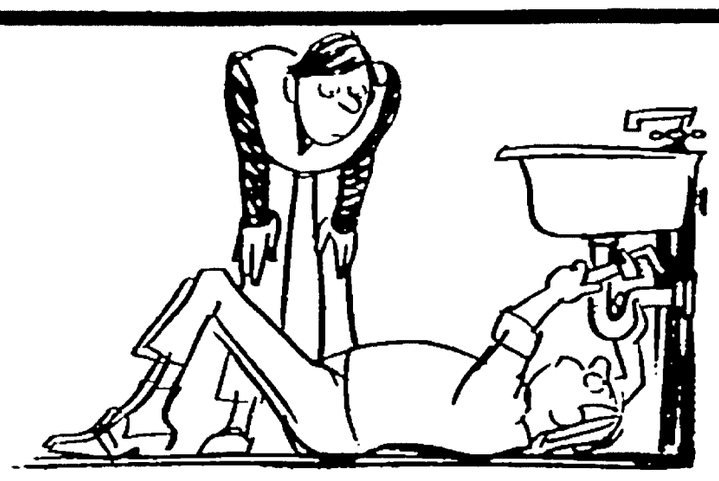
Economic progress in Asian future

By CELESTE LACY

Although war is rampant in Southeast Asia, a variety of nations have come together to increase the economic standard of the lower Mekong Basin region.

This effort is described by Professor Gilbert F. White of the University of Chicago as "an experiment in social structure and process which is unique in the world."

Professor White lectured to public affairs students last night in Hendricks Chapel on the lower Mekong Basin program. It is a project instituted by the United States for the development of that area. A series of dams are being constructed for irrigation, flood control and hydro-electric power.



The Mekong River is 2,000 miles long and runs through Cambodia, Thailand, Vietnam and Laos. Agriculture is the primary source of making a living in those countries.

Today there are 50 million people living in the Mekong Basin region. Although the people have not yet exhausted the use of land, population is expected to rise to 95 million by 1985. Therefore, plans are now underway to increase the agricultural and industrial development at a faster rate of growth than the population.

Several of the Western industrialized countries have contributed funds to support this program. Although the countries have contributed funds to support this program. Although the countries involved are torn with war, they are all working together for a common end.

Professor White stated: "This is a clear demonstration that it is possible to bring together a variety of nations in time of war under the aegis of the UN. "It is a pattern of regional cooperation which should be instituted throughout the world."

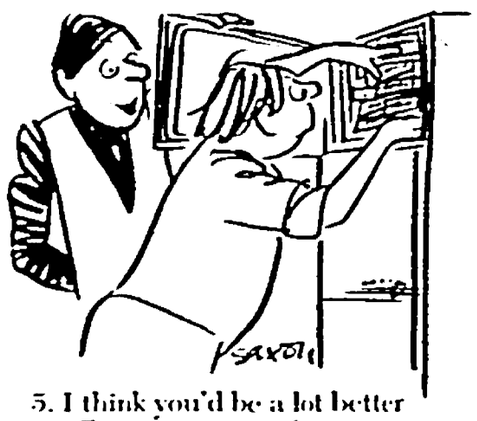
White cited various problems which could mar the success of the project: amount of contributions, the change that would take place in the quality of life, and the need for auxiliary programs such as farm improvement and canal construction. According to White, the people seek no alternative to this project and feel that anything would be better than what they now have.

1. Pipe broken?

No, I'm trying to find where I stashed some dough.

2. That's where you keep your money?

Sometimes I put it in the flower pot.



3. What's wrong with the bank?

I'd only take it right out again.

4. But that's what you're doing now.

Not quite. The beauty of my system is that I usually can't find where I put it.

5. I think you'd be a lot better off putting some of your dough into Living Insurance from Equitable. It not only gives you and the family you're going to have a lifetime of protection, it also builds cash values you can use for emergencies, opportunities, or even retirement.

I wonder if it could be with the french fries?

For information about Living Insurance, see The Man from Equitable. For career opportunities at Equitable, see your Placement Officer, or write: Lionel M. Stevens, Manager, College Employment.

THE EQUITABLE

The Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States
1285 Avenue of the Americas, New York, New York 10019
An Equal Opportunity Employer, M/F © Equitable 1968

Subjects Needed for Psychological Testing

Married female subjects between the ages of 18 and 35 needed for a study related to normal menstrual and reproductive functions. Three sessions are involved and a fee of $30 will be paid.

This study is being conducted at the Upstate Medical Center. If interested, call Mrs. Baum at 473-5775 for information.

SYRACUSE
WAR MEMORIAL AUDITORIUM
SUNDAY, MAY 4, 1969
One show only at 7:30 P.M.
CORA PROMOTIONS PRESENTS
the JIMI HENDRIX EXPERIENCE
with NOEL REDDING

Tickets: $4, $5, $6.

MAIL ORDERS ONLY!
Please enclose self-addressed envelope, make check payable to, and mail to Syracuse War Memorial Auditorium, 515 Montgomery Street, Syracuse, New York 13202.

For information call (315) 477-7481.

IT'S SPRING!
SO COME ON DOWN TO THE Record Rumer
AND BUY AN LP AT $2.69!

LENNY CONWAY

ROD WHITE

Junior class candidates:

CAP convenes

By BOB DAVIS

Lenny Conway, CAP junior presidential candidate, last night termed the CAP pledge proxy scandal a "disappointing, unfortunate occurance." He doubted that it was "intentional" but he said CAP leaders involved were possibly "negligent."

Conway campaigned at Kimmel, DellPlain and Booth with Anne Replogle, the CAP vice presidential candidate, Sue Shapiro, candidate for secretary and Rich Rosenstein candidate for treasurer.

The crowd was small but generally attentive. Kimmel which has a small sophomore population, had the worst turnout. The CAP candidates and their associates outnumbered the people in the audience. The crowd grew in size and interest in the other dorms.

Conway emphasized that the junior class should join University Union in the fight for a union building. He said the junior class government could "raise funds and publicize the building." He then noted the money must come from outside sources, such as wealthy alumni.

Conway also said that next year is the best year to press for a University Union building. He feels the Administration will be "afraid of the students organizing for a building," and will deal with the students. He then said that the Administration doesn't want a confrontation during the centennial year because it wants to make record amounts of

(Continued on Page 11)

GIA gathers

By VIC LIVINGSTON

"Student government can't do everything, but it is an important channel which has been neglected...It is a connection between the Administration and us."

Rod White, the GIA candidate campaigning for junior class president, "made the rounds" last night with his ticket, stressing the role of class government in bettering not only student affairs, but the growing needs in the relationship between SU and the surrounding community.

Visiting floors at St. Mary's and on the Mount, the GIA junior class slate, including Adrienne Turner, vice-presidential hopeful, Sue Moore, candidate for class secretary, and Andy Biggs, candidate for treasurer, outlined their program. Aside from the important delegated duties of junior class officers, such as Winter Weekend and the "Pig Book," the slate urged the opening of all SU athletic facilties to the community, in addition to proposals for a cultural-office complex building on campus, for which the junior class would solicit funds from local industry.

Citing that "between the city and SU there is a great apathy," White promised more campus-community projects, should he be elected. The candidates also included a proposal for an "open" Junior Executive Council, in which all juniors could participate and vote. Under the present system, much "red tape" is involved in the a kind of committee of (part of) the employees. And who is the chairman of this committee of the employees? Is he one of the most capable of employees the university ever hired? No! The chair is held by the manager of the enterprise!!— a buyer who heads his joint suppliers — please present a better example of a duality, or, upon deeper analysis including the customers a triplality, and even a multiplality if we insert the Board of Trustees in the picture. This is no mistake anymore, it is a blunder, let's face it.

(Continued on Page 11)

A host

(Continued from Page 5)

Lastly, the trustees. I do not know one of them. This fact is not astonishing in view of the present set-up. It is obviously a fault as well. I do not presume to give an opinion at present because I

1) do not know anything about this (legal) aspect,

2) have absolutely no experience with such a Board. This is quite in contrast with my knowledge of the Board of Directors of an incorporated business. That particular Board is financially involved in the enterprise. As far as I know, the Board of Trustees does not run a financial risk if profits drop; a Board of Directors does. For the rest, I refer to the attached article, published in PARADE of April 16th, which seems to reveal that trustees and students are further apart than anyone thought. all over the U.S.A.

Record Runner
RUNS DOWN
THE PRICE OF LP'S
— HUNDREDS NOW AT ! !
$2.69

Foreign-Study Programs of Syracuse University
APPLICATIONS DUE! TODAY
FOR FALL SEMESTER IN:
COLOMBIA • NETHERLANDS • FRANCE • ITALY
FOR SUMMER PROGRAMS IN:
• SWITZERLAND — MUSIC
• ITALY — ART & ITALIAN
• GERMANY — PHOTOGRAPHY
• ENGLAND — EDUCATION
CALL EXTENSION 3471 FOR INFORMATION

SENIORS, GRADS, Phd's — FOR EACH COMPLETED PART II OF THE JOB INTERVIEW RECRUITMENT QUESTIONNAIRE YOU TURN IN AT THE PLACEMENT CENTER YOU'LL RECEIVE A 25¢ COUPON REDEEMABLE AT ANY S. U. BOOKSTORE. COUPON OFFER EXPIRES MAY 20, 1969.

Coeducational Summer Sessions
1969
MANHATTANVILLE COLLEGE
Arts, Sciences, and Master of Arts in Teaching
First Session: June 16-July 16
Second Session: July 21-August 19
Undergraduate and Graduate Courses for Men and Women teacher certification courses residence facilities air-conditioned classrooms recreational facilities
special lectures, concerts, films
Music Program: June 23-August 1
Master of Arts Programs: June 16-July 25
For brochure and application forms:
Director of Admissions
Manhattanville College
Purchase, New York 10577

JANIS JOPLIN
ALSO
The Butterfield Blues Band
Friday — May 2 — 8:30 p.m.
Onondaga War Memorial
Tickets now on sale at War Memorial Box Office, S. U. Corner Store, Wilson's Leading Jewelers.
$5.50, $4.50, $3.50

JIFFY KING
SPECIAL
Monday thru Friday, 2-5 p.m.
10¢ OFF ALL SUBS
727 South Crouse
in the Arcade

The Best in Jazz
SOUL and R & B
THE FREDDY McCOY QUARTET NOW APPEARING THROUGH THIS SUNDAY AT THE POPULAR
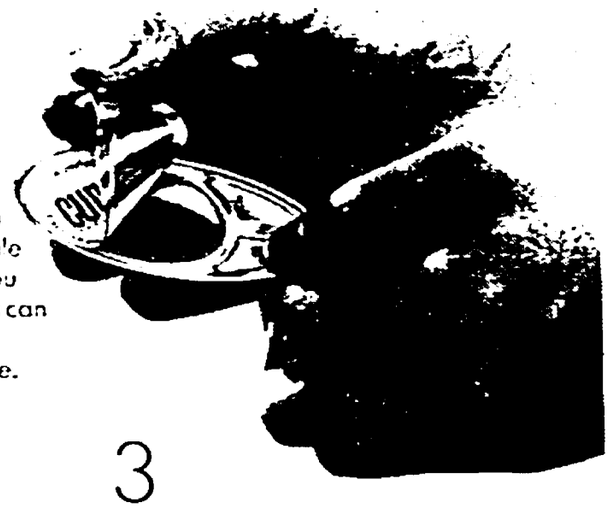
ENGLISH INN
10-3 Weekdays Sunday matinee 5-8
at N. Crouse & Hawley Ave.
Admission $1.00 with this ad.

WOULD YOU BELIEVE



this little serving spoon contains a perfect cup of fresh perked freeze dried coffee?

1

Lift tab from spoon.
Now—for the first time fresh perked freeze dried coffee, sealed in individual CUPPA™ spoons until ready for use, guarantees fresh flavor & aroma for every cup of coffee you make.

2

Peel off cover.
No percolator keeps you waiting! No reheating stale coffee to save time! All you need is hot water and you can have great fresh perked coffee any time, anywhere.

3

Pour and stir CUPPA™ coffee with spoon.
CUPPA™ is perfect for that breakfast rush. Take CUPPA™ coffee to the office, on camping trips, vacations, to college, picnics, on your boat. After dinner, surprise your guests with great perked coffee you can make in seconds!

Fresh flavor & aroma sealed in each spoon for every cup.
The only way to serve really fresh perked freeze dried coffee is in a premeasured serving spoon. CUPPA™ spoon is disposable too (though it's so pretty you won't want to dispose of it—some people collect them for serving hors d'oeuvres and for cheese dips. Some people color them and make Christmas tree decorations...even make necklaces and matching earrings—groovy!).

CUPPA™ individual serving spoons come in this unique reusable bin box—a great storage place for everything from crayons to bobby pins. To open you simply press at the thumb print, pull down and take out an individual serving spoon to make CUPPA™ the "perfect cup of coffee."

Now at your local food market.

Ward Foods, Inc., 2 Penn Plaza, New York
© 1968 by Ward Foods, Inc.

Nadel needles Ifshin, Jacobs

By LANCE WISNIEWSKI

Josh Nadel, Prohibition Party SG presidential candidate, yesterday criticized his two opponents, Dave Ifshin (independent) and Lou Jacobs (CAP).

Nadel accused Ifshin of "clever politicking,' claiming that Ifshin's platform is the same one which the Prohibition Party formulated while he was being nominated by the Greek Independent Alliance for SG president. "Of course, all of a sudden, Ifshin feels that parties are corrupt," Nadel said.

He explained that Ifshin duplicated the Prohibition stand by calling campus political parties and Student Government a farce. "The difference between his stand and ours," Nadel continued, "is that Ifshin and his 'Independents' are convinced they are the messiahs who will make SG work."

"What should be done with SG has been defined by the Prohibition Party ever since the Tolley Write-In Campaign of two years ago -- get rid of it," he added.

"Ifshin believes he will win with the 20 percent of the student body who vote. I hope that Prohibition will win with the remaining 80 percent who are tired of bullshit," stated Nadel. Furthermore, if Ifshin claims to be an "Independent," he continued, "what sort of 'independent' belongs to Sigma Nu?"

Nadel also had some criticism for Lou Jacobs, CAP candidate for SG president. "Jacobs and his gang admit that they are the establishment. They constantly express their desire to 'make class government the best ever.' No one will be sucked into that old system of money-wasting, haranguing, and naive politicians," he said.

In explaining the Prohibition stand, Nadel said the party "will eliminate every false-faced office from SG president to the pious elections commissioner." He concluded that "there is not one committee, from CSL to the Judicial Board, which did not come out of the offices of the deans -- rather than out of 'Student Government.'"

Goon Squad . . .

(Continued from Page 5)

Donald Schuster, Joel Schwartz, Robert Schwartz, Neil Sedwin, David Segal, Mark Sendroff. Richard Shapiro, Michael Sing, Barry Slevin, Donald Smith, Douglas Snelson, Robert Swanson.

Louis Tambackos, Paul Thomson, Alan Tran, James Vermeulen, Herbert Von Schilling, Cary Wardso, David Weiss, Thomas Wendt, Jerry Whitaker, Tom Whitlow, Michael Wohl, William Wygant, Peter Young, Richard Zaretsky.

The alternates are:

Carol Bishop, Laurie Buchanan, Ann Camire, Lyle Confrey, Susan Cutler, Kathleen Fernald, Susan Frey, Sherie Griffith, Linda Haft, Barbara Brinson, Marilyn Hershenson, Susan Hetman, Cheryl Hlesciak, Elisabeth Kay, Lauren Kelly, Debra Labinson, Tina Lyon, Ellen Milgram, Ellen Miller, Gladys Montgomery, Dorothy Nash.

Janet Pollack, Susan Roth, Kathryn Salerno, Elizabeth Schuler, Carol Shaskan, Debra Shein, Elaine Tinkle, Patricia Thomson, Patricia Weiss.

Michael August, Thomas Baker, Neal Cohen, Thomas Flake, Murray Flom, Robert Gilbert, John Helliker, Stuart Hersey, David Hunter, Gray Jacob, Stan Kasmierczk, Robert Klipera, Jonathan Lazar, Alan Levy, Barry Levy, John Noble.

Roger Reed, Richard Reiter, Howard Rosenberg, Raymond Rudolph, Ira Rushwald, Alan Schwartz, Dan Stiefle, Paul Sturm, Michael Tamm, Bill Tucker, Craig Warnick, Peter Weinberger, Randall Wellbrock.

CAB IS COMING

"King of Hearts" Is Back

Saturday, April 19

Gifford Auditorium

7 & 9

Syracuse Film Academy

Admission $1.00

UU posts open to applicants; elections set for next week

University Union elections for next year's board positions will be conducted April 23, according to UU vice-chairman Mary Franciosi.

Applicants for the sixteen places may be undergraduate or graduate students, or faculty members. Present board members must reapply if they want to hold the same post next year.

Applications of two typewritten pages or less must be turned in to Mary Franciosi, Haven Hall, before 5 p.m. on April 23. They should include name, address, extension, other extracurricular commitments, qualifications and plans for the position.

Policy board positions include:

Kimmel Director, who administers the Student Activities Center in Kimmel.

Programming Director, who is responsible for all UU activities, including films, The Place, and special events.

Development Director, who coordinates efforts to build a union building.

News Bureau Director, who handles all press releases.

Secretary, who takes minutes at policy board meetings, manages the office, and acts as communications link for the three boards.

Programming board positions are:

Place Director, who is in charge of programming and maintenance of The Place.

Special Events Director, who is responsible for bull sessions, dances, concerts, etc.

Film Director, who manages the Friday night movies and special film series.

Advertising Director, who is in charge of posters and special advertising campaigns.

Secretary, who is responsible for minutes and clerical work for the board.

Development Board positions include:

Research Director, who checks facts related to Development Board activities.

Fund-raising Director, who is in charge of fund-raising campaigns for the union building.

Architectural Director, who studies building designs, estimates and costs.

Public Relations Director, who prepares all public relations material for UU.

Secretary, who keeps minutes and records of the Development board.

"A number of these positions are held by graduating seniors or by people who wish to move into another Union job," said Miss Franciosi.

GIRLS . . . ARE YOU LOOKING FOR A SUMMER COUNSELOR POSITION? Applicants are now being considered for the 1969 camp season. Must be able to teach one of the following: Arts & Crafts Director, Dancing, Music, Archery, Tennis, Golf, Trampoline, Cheerleading, Riflery, Scout Craft & Nature Study or A. R. C. Swimming Instructor. Also Secretary and Bookkeeper needed. Write: Camp Director, 2409 Shelleydale Drive, Baltimore, Md. 21209.

CAP convenes

(Continued from Page 9)

selection of council members, White explained.

Andy Biggs, GIA candidate for junior class treasurer, promised to work for a "stabilization of tuition" for all students at SU.

"Many universities have a rule that a student pays the same tuition for all four years as he paid as a freshman," Biggs said, indicating that the same situation should exist at SU. Biggs said there is some interest in his proposal within the Administration, and pledged to work for uniform tuition charges throughout the undergraduate years.

Commenting on the campus issue of dorm autonomy, White said: "This is a step in the right direction--now, students have no rights," and indicated that dorm autonomy is merely a step to the higher goal of what he called "self-autonomy" for every student within his own room.

Miss Turner, junior class vice-presidential aspirant, revealed her plans for an expanded "Winter Week" to supplement the traditional Winter Weekend. In addition to the concert and the successful Song Mountain activities initiated this year, Miss Turner proposed the presentation of a dramatic production during the weekend, coupled with greater attention to the competition for Winter Weekend queen.

Pledges to widen the scope of both the "Pig Book" and the Winter Weekend booklet came from Sue Moore, class candidate for secretary.

The slate, in last night's campaigning, spoke to groups of junior class members in their floor visits. Happily distributing campaign paraphernalia such as lollipops and platforms, the slate also entertained questions from their listeners.

GIA gathers

(Continued from Page 9)

money. A confrontation might alienate the alumni.

Later Miss Replogle emphasized the "need for academic freedom at Syracuse." She said that now "classes don't have any meaning for the students." Miss Replogle suggests more "student-run and student-initiated courses" along the lines of Projection '70.

She would also propose a student curriculum committee. This group would channel student demands for curriculum change to the proper faculty and administrators. Miss Replogle then outlined her ideas for next year's Winter Weekend. She would like to have a famous guest speaker like Ted Kennedy or High Hefner on Thursday night. She said it would be easy to get them because they would want the publicity of the centennial celebration.

She would have a big name concert on Friday night. On Saturday there would be a dance. During this time a raffle would be held by University Union. The weekend would also include a day at Song Mountain.

Miss Replogle emphasized the flexibility of her program. She said her plan could change with student desires.

Rich Rosenstein proposed an exchange program with different universities. Syracuse students would be able to "get away for a semester or a year" and try a different college.

Sue Shapiro later proposed a plan whereby juniors would advise new freshmen during orientation week. She feels that present advisers don't have much knowledge in areas outside their fields.

THE HIP HOP

The Hip Hop to Europe on Icelandic Airlines saves you $161 flying to Luxembourg. Daily flights from New York to Iceland • Luxembourg • England • Scotland • Norway • Sweden • Denmark. See your Travel Agent or write for folder CN, Icelandic Airlines, 630 Fifth Ave. (Rockefeller Center), New York, N.Y. 10020 (212) PL 7-8585.

LOWEST AIR FARES TO EUROPE

ICELANDIC AIRLINES
LOFTLEIDIR

You are invited to Israel's 21st anniversary celebration Saturday, April 19, 8:00 P.M. in the Jewish Community Center 2223 East Genesee Entertainment:

Osnat Paz, Israeli singer
the Hillel choir informal singing
Israeli dancing
Israeli refreshments

Sponsored by — Hillel, the Israeli Student Organization and Students for Israel.

WOLF
&
MARKVI
Present
the
RASCALS

FRIDAY NITE, APRIL 18, 8 P.M.
at the
Onondaga War Memorial
Tickets — $4, $5, $6

Mail orders now accepted at box office. Tickets on sale April 1st at: The Record Runner, S U Corner Store, Wilson's Leading Jewelers and War Memorial.

SYRACUSE REPERTORY THEATRE
the lady's not for burning
by Christopher Fry

A SENSATION IN LONDON & NEW YORK

Apr. 10-13 Th. & Fr. at 8 pm
Sat. at 2:30 & 8 pm
Apr. 17-20 Sun. at 7:30 pm

UNIVERSITY REGENT THEATRE
820 EAST GENESEE ST.
parking & ticket info.: 476-4536

Campus Classified

GR 6-5571, Ext. 2314

Rates minimum of 15 words:

1 day	1.15
2 days	2.25
3 days	3.30
4 days	4.30
5 days	5.25
6 days	6:15

To place a classified ad. call GR 6-5571, ext. 2314, between 1 and 3 p.m. Ad must be placed 2 days in advance. Every word over 15 costs 5c extra per day.
ALL ADS MUST BE PREPAID.

MISCELLANEOUS

RENT if you can't buy! T.V.s. tape recorders, typewriters. By week, month or semester. Reasonable rates. S. U. BOOKSTORE, GR 6-5541, x 2426.

FRAME your works of art at unbeatable prices at S. U. BOOKSTORE. Also signs and posters. In the Art Dept., 303 University Pl.

ALTERATIONS DONE within 24 hours. Call for an appointment. Lillian Potter, 207 Comstock. 478-5847.

PRIVATE DRIVING LESSONS — automatic or standard shift. Full or refresher courses. Qualified professional instructors. Pickup service. Auto Driving Academy, GR 6-3995.

DID YOU KNOW? CARROLS on Marshall Street has new hours. CARROLS will now be open from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Sunday through Thursday and 9:30 a.m. through 1:30 a.m Friday and Saturday, because CARROLS CARES.

UNIVERSITY UNION Sunday night at movies presents . . . THE TENTH VICTIM with Ursula Andress, Marcello Mastrianni; plus Man is a Pain and Trumpit. $1.00 Sunday April 20, 7 & 9 p.m. in Gifford Auditorium.

SUMMER JOBS: Counselors, private boys' camp, Adirondacks: College men of above average physical fitness and judgment: tripping, canoeing, nurse-cook jobs open. Love of out of doors and children essential. Adirondack Swim Camp, 89 Mill Valley Rd. Pittsford, N. Y., 14534.

FOR SALE

'66 AUSTIN - HEALY SPRITE convertible. Fully equipped. Great sports car. Call Larry 454-3927.

1968 VOLVO 142 S. 4-speed. AM-FM. Like new, must sell $2150.00. Phone 422-4463. 456-1362.

OUT OF PRINT BOOKS. The Country Bookstore. Manlius 682-6402. Open evenings and Saturday.

1964 CORVETTE (1967 body) 365 HP Black convertibl., Red hood 427. Best Offer. 479-7628.

'54 CHEVY, 235 CID. Auto trans., radio. 4 Dunlops, excellent running condition. $150.00. Call Art 478-2349.

HONDA, 305 Scrambler 68, Black and chrome. Call ext. 3082, ask for Fitzpatrick.

1959 VOLKSWAGEN, sun roof, gas heater, radio, extra snow tires, engine recently overhauled, some body rust but otherwise perfect. $200.00. NE 8 0408 or 476-8362.

NEED TIRES ? Guaranteed discount prices on tires, mag wheels, chrome wheels, etc. All sizes. Call Larry. 475-3987.

1963 STUDEBAKER LARK — Good condition. $175.00. 1962 Pontiac Tempest convertibl. very good condition. $250. Call Larry 475-3987.

MOTORCYCLE — 175 c.c. Bridgestone 4/5 speed trans. 20 horsepower, helmet included. Good Condition. $225. x2569 Steve Wheadon.

'67 MG MIDGET — midnit: blue, body good, engine excellent. Snow tires, new battery. $1600 492-1876.

1962 FORD FALCON — Best offer Call Bob. 478-6485.

'63 FORD CONVERTIBLE. '69-70 N. Y. State Inspected. Best Offer. GI 6-1777.

FOR RENT

FURNISHED APARTMENT — HENRY STREET — 2 blocks from Campus. Kitchenette. 1 bedroom, living room, complete bath with shower. Downstairs. 2 private entrances, off street parking. $110.00 per mo. Call 422-5564-days 476-1481 - evenings and weekends.

APARTMENTS — furnished or unfurnished. 3 rooms, utilities, near campus. Call x 3630. 472-8223 or 475-1631.

ROOMS FOR RENT above Hillel Kosher Dining Club. Immediate occupancy. Call ext. 2904. Mon. - Thurs., 8:30-3:30.

WANTED

FEMALE COLLEGE STUDENT Junior, Senior or Graduate - English, Psychology or Advertising major). Clerical and creative advertising work. $2.00 per hour. Work hours flexible. Call Mrs. McCliment at 463-3373 between 8:30 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. Penn York Champion Co., Inc., 3001 James Street, Syracuse, New York.

FACULTY COUPLE — desires to rent furnished or unfurnished two or three bedroom house or apartment near university. Academic year 1969-70. Call 655-9078.

EXPERIENCED HORN PLAYER, preferably to work through summer, for working R&B Sour group. 422-9389, 475-3424.

TYPING

DISSERTATIONS, THESES, AND TERM papers. IBM electric typewriter. 40c per page 5c per copy. 446-2841. Mrs. Miller.

THIRTY YEARS EXPERIENCE. Dissertations, term papers, proof-read. Satisfaction guaranteed. Mrs. Raymond Webb. HE 7-8259.

DIANE WALLACE. 472-2115. Theses-dissertations and term papers. IBM electric. 40c per page. 5c copy. Multilith. 45c.

TAKE YOUR MANUSCRIPT to the only professional typing and printing service serving the S. U. area. The knowledge and experience of having done over 2,000 theses and dissertations is behind every job we turn out. Stephanie's Office Service. 469-2795.

Soccer club may get SUAD money

By LARRY CENTER

The ball is finally taking some better bounces for the growing SU Soccer Club. Plagued by financial difficulties the past year, the club has been granted $500 as part of the proposed Athletic Department budget. With this show of support from the university, their goal, soccer as an intercollegiate sport at SU is a little closer to reality.

Last December, Steve Kass, the club's past president, Mark Reichard, the new prexy, and the coach, Joe Sayer, went before an Athletic Board meeting and made a presentation on behalf of the team.

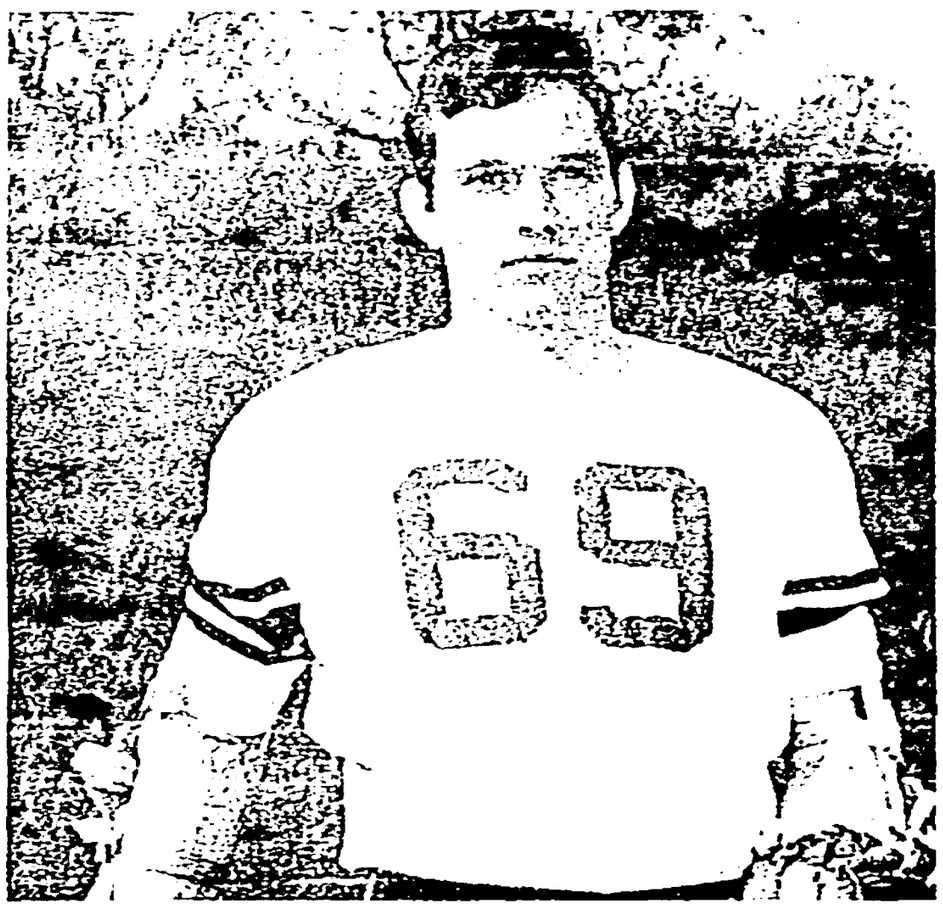
Reichard said, "We presented our record and showed we could stand up against other teams. They could see we had the makings of a varsity team. The board was concerned about the use of undergraduates, and we promised that we would play as many as we could. This season there won't be more than two or three grad students on the field for us."

At the presentation, the three representatives, besides making a plea for money, asked for immediate varsity status, and scheduling and transportation help. A vote to put soccer on a par with baseball and basketball was voted down narrowly, but the board then recommended the $500 appropriation.

This does not mean that the club is now automatically entitled to use of the money, but they are optimistic that it will be passed when the budget comes up for review in the near future.

The aid would start this July and cover the fall and spring seasons. Said Reichard, "How we use it is up to us. It will go for equipment, extra uniforms, transportation to and from games, officials for home games, and field mainteanance."

The new president felt that the Board was very enthusiastic and energetic. "They gave us a big boost, and proved they're interested in us," he said. Even though the Board vetoed soccer as a varsity sport for 1969-70, Reichard said that they implied that, most likely, it would become a varsity sport a year from September "if we don't fall through."



Continuation of backing for the club is the main issue the Athletic Board is concerned about. In the past, other soccer clubs have prospered for a year, only to disband due to lack of support. Reichard recognizes this and is determined to have another successful season.

He says, "They encouraged us to keep going. I guess they still have a little doubt and want to see if we can continue a team that won't collapse by recruiting new players. They're optimistic, but don't want to make a definite move yet."

This viewpoint was confirmed by Andy Geiger, assistant to athletic director, Jim Decker. "We're anxious to see what happens. Soccer is a growing sport and it would be a fine thing to have as part of our program. If the boys continue to demonstrate the willingness and enthusiasm, we'd like to make it one."

With this added incentive, the club will open its five-game spring schedule this Saturday against Colgate at the Hamilton campus. They have two new captains, Abe Cohen and John Malchyn, and a new coach, Brooks Saunders.

Now that the club really has the ball rolling, it may be very difficult for the Athletic Department to find any excuse for denying support unless the boys dribble away their opportunity by themselves.

CLIFF "THE GIPPER" ENSLEY will lead his Lacrosse teammates in quest of their fifth straight win of the season when they oppose the Nittany Lions of Penn State on Saturday. Ensley is a defenseman for the Orange.

Face Buffalo

Injuries hit diamond team

By DAN SCHLOSSBERG
Associate Editor

Leg problems may mean field problems for baseball coach Andy Mogish when he tries to write a starting line-up for today's game at Buffalo.

First-baseman John Massis, who doubles as a football player, has a charley horse in his right thigh and will be out at least 10 days according to the team physician. In addition, outfielder Steve Naum, lone returnee who hit .300 last year, said yesterday he feels a "click" in his right knee and the M.D. says it could be loose cartilege. Naum, a junior, has had operations on both knees, the last occurring during his freshman year at Syracuse.

Unlike the Massis case, Naum's injury is not considered serious and he was in the probable starting line-up given to the Daily Orange yesterday by coach Mogish.

The line-up includes only one left-handed hitter, sophomore outfielder Tony Montiglio, due to the absence of Massis, also a southpaw.

The batting order includes Bob Clary, rf; Naum, lf; Joe St. Mary, ss; John Unger, c; Art Tyson, lb; Chris Albergo, 2b; Jim Gordon, 3b; Brian Mihalik, cf; and control artist Greg Lowe, p.

There is also a possibility that Mogish will move Unger to first base and insert utilityman Jay Halprin behind the plate, but the coach is reluctant to move the slugging receiver, one of the offensive stars of the team's only win, a 10-2 rout of Georgetown.

Lowe, meanwhile, is searching for his first win of the 1969 campaign. He got his first 1968 victory in last year's opener, an 8-4 triumph over Delaware. His first try this season came in the second game and resulted in a more brilliant performance, but the pitcher's number 13 caught up with him.

Though Lowe pitched five no-hit innings at American University, his teammates were unable to socre for him and rain forced a 0-0 stalemate of his only effort thus far.

Only Lowe and outfielder Brian Mihalik wear the same numbers both at home and away (Mihalik wears 5) but Lowe's is the only number which not only is steeped in superstition but which also produces negative results.

In addition to the no-decision no-hitter, Lowe recorded a deceiving 2-4 record for the '68 Orangemen. His won-lost chart doesn't reveal that he led the club in strikeouts (59), complete games (9), innings pitched (65), and earned run average (2.49).

Lowe and John Martell (1-0) are co-captains of the '69 Orange, and both are considered pitching aces by coach Mogish. Martell, slated to hurl the home opener against Lafayette Friday, led the team with a 7-2 mark in 1968 and recorded a 3.52 ERA in 51 innings. He fanned 51 and got off to a good start in the strike-out department this year with 12 K.O.'s in the win over Georgetown.

DAN'S DATE: Massis suffered the injury to his thigh in an abbreviated game against Maryland. A base-runner jammed his knee into the thigh and caused hemorrhaging into the thigh muscle.

Another minor ailment has struck non-roster player Vinnie Paolano. The third base candidate, who is stiff from wrestling, has to wind up a bit too much before he throws.

Buffalo was beaten 3-2 in 11 innings in its 1968 game here. Reliever John (the Vulture) Martell, who threw one pitch, was the winning pitcher.

SU trainers mend ills with skill, luck and tape

By BOB GALLAGHER

Manned with tape, gauze, first aid cream and band aids, the trainers for the Orange athletic teams try to hold together the athletes and with the aid of the training facilities at Manley Fieldhouse, mend their minor injuries.

The trainers administer to newly received injuries as well as to protect the athlete in the areas where he has been injured in the past.

When an athlete reports to the training room with an injury he is quickly taken care of, according to trainer Neil Pratt, who is working with the football team during their Spring practice.

"The first thing that happens," according to Pratt, "is that Dr. W.E. Pelow, the team physician, looks at the injury." If the injury isn't too serious the doctor prescribes medication to be administrated by the trainers.

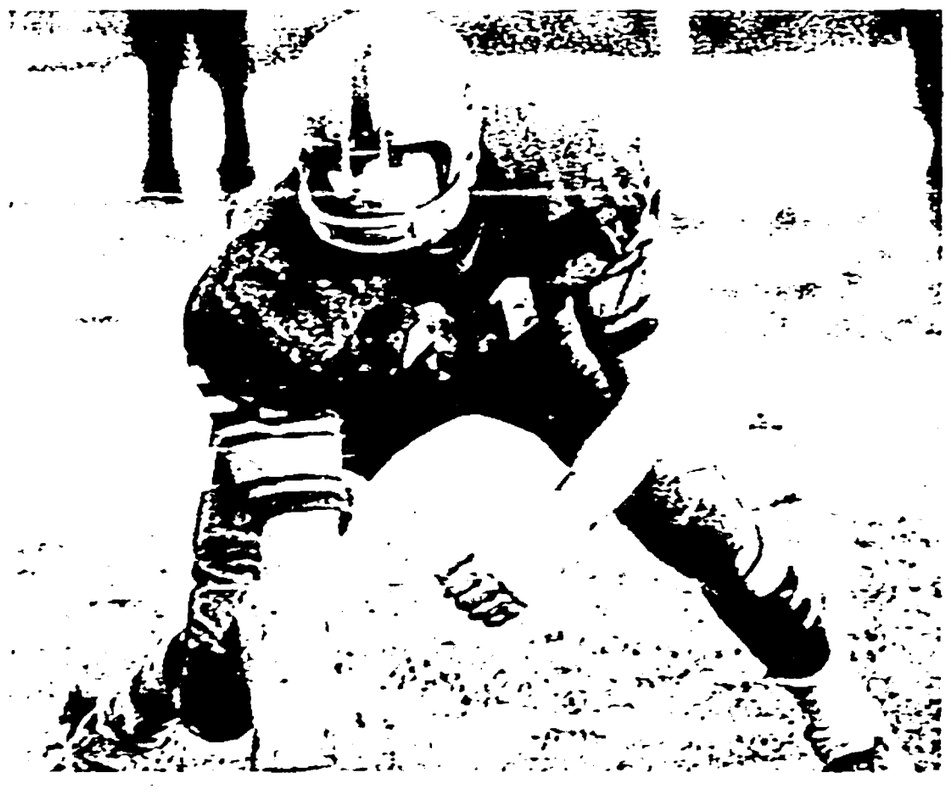
If the injury is of a more serious nature and x-rays are required, the player is sent to the Upstate Medical Center.

"We have eight training tables and three whirlpools as our main sources of treatment," Pratt said. The training room at Manley is off the locker room and also contains two large storage rooms, the doctor's office, another office, and two machines for building up the thigh muscles.

The protective measures taken by the trainers are also an important part of their function. "Most of the taping is to protect injuries the players already have," Pratt said. All the participants in contact sports football, lacrosse, and basketball, he continued, "are supposed to wear ankle wraps. They don't prevent sprains but make them less severe."

The making of special pads is another protective measure which the trainers take. "We make the pads in two ways," Pratt said. They are either made from a plastic which comes in sheets and is heated so that it can be molded to fit the player exactly. After the molding is cooled it is placed over rubber padding and is ready to wear," he concluded.

"The other method of making pads is to use a fiberglass caste," Pratt said, "which provides more protection. The rules in football prohibit the wearing of hard pads on the arm below the elbow but the players wear them at practice," he said.



All the football players are required to wear mouthpieces and the dentist in charge of the Orangemen is Dr. Sullivan. When the football players arrive as frosh, Dr. Sullivan takes an impression of their teeth which he uses for the next four years.

A plastic sheet is placed over the mold and pulled down over it.

The head trainer for the Orange is Julie Reichel who has been a trainer for thirty-five years. His other assistants besides Pratt are Charlie Crandall and George Burroughs.

The trainers distribute vitamins, salt tablets and gatorade to aid the athletes. The salt tablets are necessary because the body doesn't store it and the loss of salt leads to cramps. The gatorade replaces what a person loses in sweating. They also provide food which puts on weight. This has been perscribed for defensive end Lou Gubitosa who is recuperating from off season surgery.

With their 11.8 miles of one foot wide tape, the trainers have been mending the bruised peels on all the injured Orangemen.

ORANGE FOOTBALL FORTUNES may rest on the no longer so broad shoulders of defensive end, Lou Gubitosa. He has been recovering from a leg injury which caused him to lose a great amount of weight and make his status questionable.

Sport shorts . . .

All entries for the Daily Orange sports contest must be on the sports editor's desk by tomorrow, 5 p.m. Either bring them to the office or address them to Mike Weber, sports editor, 1101 East Adams St. Of all the entries received, the top score has been only seven correct answers. So, there's still time and a good chance to take the first week lead.

We apologize for a mistake which appeared in yesterday's sport's page. The Sigma Alpha Mu pledges were the pledge champions while Tau Kappa Epsilon "B" team won the "B" flight Fraternity crown.

DAILY ORANGE

Syracuse University's Daily Newspaper Since 1903

Vol. 67, No. 89 | Syracuse, New York, Thursday, April 17, 1969 | 10 Cents

Dave Ifshin, Lou Jacobs and Josh Nadel debated dorm autonomy, confrontation and other campaign issues at St. Mary's yesterday. Angus Twombly, DO Editor-in-chief, (upper right,) served as moderator.

Representation reapportioned by University Senate

When University Senate convenes this fall, 45 students will join administrators and faculty members in SU's highest legislative body.

The senate voted late yesterday afternoon to approve a proposal which apportions its seats as follows:

* 17 graduate students
* 28 undergraduates
* 45 administrators
* 90 faculty members

There were only four negative votes.

The new plan of representation will take effect Sept. 1, 1969.

The move gives SU students their broad representation in a top level policy-making group. It also represents the peaceful achievement of what has been brought about only by means of violence on campuses of many of the nation's colleges and universities.

Student representation in the senate will also mean student representation on its key committees.

The specific allocations of the 28 undergraduates seats is to be decided by student government. Student senate has already begun discussing proposals.

Allocation of the graduate seats will be handled by the Graduate Student Organization.

In both cases, however, the method of selection will be a tentative one. In September, a student-faculty-administration committee of the new senate will be formed to review the way in which the student seats were allocated and make any necessary changes in the procedure.

Defines radicalism

Jacobs pushes autonomy, outlines stand on revolution

Concluding his campaign with a flourish, Lou Jacobs, CAP exec candidate for president of SG, met head on Ifshin supporters in Watson dorm.

At Watson, faced with a hostile audience, Jacobs handled pointed questions with an ability that won the crowd. At the end of the question and answer period the crowd loudly applauded the candidate.

In response to a question concerning black admission policy to the university, Jacobs said, "You've got to realize that a black, Indian, a Puerto Rican, particulary the black in the ghetto, possibly has a criminal record with the police. They are forced to take college board examinations aimed at middle class whites. He could well have the same intelligence as you or I. You can't have an equal admissions policy with an unequal society."

Jacobs attacked Ifshin for waiting on the autonomy issue. He demanded autonomy immediately and fully supported the Watson bid for autonomy. Joe Treple, CAP vice presidential candidate, pledged that he and the rest of the CAP slate would continue to work for student government regardless of the outcome of the election.

Jacobs charged Ifshin as a do nothing in campus government. He asked, "Where was Ifshin the first three years in student government when the students of the campus needed him? Was he at an NASA conference? If so, what results did he bring back to the students? Or perhaps he was sitting in his fraternity house waiting.

Jacobs clarified further his position on campus revolution. "There is a distinction between phony radicalism and responsible radicalism. Phony radicalism is to take over the administration building. It makes a lot of noise, a few heads get busted, and you lose sight of goals. Issues become which cop hit which kid. In responsible radicalism you don't take over a building. You take over the university. If the administration locks us out of HL and HBC we'll hold classes in the living centers."

Ifshin supporters heckled Jacobs sporadically throughout the evening as Jacobs took time to answer student questions.

Jacobs and his running mates, Joe Treple, (vice president), Mary Daley (secretary), and Bob Connor (treasurer), ended the campaign with a triumphant rally in Flint lounge, where a large crowd cheered the candidates.

Where to vote

Polling areas will be open today between 9 a.m. and 5:30 p.m. Each area will be supervised by 2 representatives from each party and two officials from Elections Commission.

The areas are as follows:

HBC – 2 machines for sophomores

Maxwell – 2 machines for juniors

Physics Building – 2 machines for seniors and 2 for freshmen

Lyman – 3 machines for shophomores and 3 for freshmen

Slocum – 3 machines for juniors

Choose top prof

Seniors will be voting for the Phi Kappa Alpha Professor of the Year award in the SG voting booths today. The professor chosen will be awarded a trophy and his name will be inscribed on a plaque kept permenently in the faculty club. Voting procedures will be explained at the polling places.

Tuition rise: it's up, up and we pay

Syracuse University will once again raise its tuition, fees and room and board charges Sept. 1.

Today's announcement affects all students. Increases for freshmen were announced Feb. 28.

The new rates for one academic year (two semesters), with the current charges in parentheses, are:

Undergraduate tuition, $2,100 ($2,000); general University and student fees, $150 ($100); room and board, $1,000 to $1,500, depending on the type of housing ($960 to $1,000).

F. A. Wingate, vice president and treasurer, said in a letter to parents of undergraduate students: "The trustees and administrative officers regret the necessity of increasing the University's charges. In the light of the continuing inflation the

(Continued on Page 7)

'Hub and spokes'

Ifshin clarifies positions, discusses restructuring SG

In a dramatic 11th hour election eve effort to capture the SG presidency, independent candidate David Ifshin and his ticket barnstormed each floor of the crucial Watson dorm, and floors in Shaw, Lehman, and St. Mary's, clarifying his position on dorm autonomy and student government restructuring.

Speaking to large crowds on Watson floors after introductions from last minute active supporter Chuck Hicks, SG president, Ifshin was pressed to explain his comments at yesterday's debate with CAP opponent Lou Jacobs.

Claiming that those seeking dorm autonomy encounter great personal risk, Ifshin said that dorms should move toward autonomy "when they are ready," and are willing to act as a united front against possible punitive action taken by the administration.

Ifshin denied that he wanted Watson to "wait until next year" for autonomy, saying that he was unaware of the great determination and unity of Watson residents.

"I am not going to decide when you are ready for autonomy – if you're ready now, go. We're with you. If you aren't ready there's Corbally in the fall. But I feel you can win now– it's not my place to come here and tell you what to do. If you go for autonomy Tuesday, I'll be the first to drink a beer with you, whether I win or lose tomorrow."

In a surprise move, Ed Barron, vice-presidential candidate and president of St. Mary's Dorm council, offered to delay his dorms' formal declaration of autonomy until Tuesday night to coincide with the Watson plan, should Chancellor Tolley veto the dorm autonomy proposal at Friday's CSL meeting.

Answering criticism that he spent too little time campaigning at Watson, Ifshin said: "I'm not going to use dorm autonomy as an election issue. I am all for autonomy but you must decide for yourselves. The issue is not political, the issue is what you believe is right.

Ifshin cautioned that autonomy "may be easy now," but the students must be totally united and ready for a possible confrontation. Claiming that residents "confront to win," Ifshin defended his belief that if conditions indicated possible student defeat in a confrontation, it would be sensible to wait until the climate is conducive to victory. However, he said that he was now convinced, that Watson men were united in their efforts and could achieve victory in a confrontation after declaring autonomy. He still made it clear that unity was crucial, and residents must be willing to "go out on a limb to secure their rights."

Ifshin called for the creation of dorm presidents to act as the coordinating body for student affairs. Such a body would act as the "hub" of SG, with the autonomous dorms as its spokes."

"We can't model SG after the federal government, which is designed to govern a nation 3000 miles wide. We are three blocks wide–we must innovate, not imitate."

Concerning his proposal to restructure SG, Ifshin denied that he wanted to destroy the institution but said it must be decentralized.

"There is no reason why senators from Haven must vote whether Watson gets autonomy," Ifshin said, referring to the often discussed channels by which dorms partitioned for autonomy. "We must decentralize SG–authority must be placed in each dorm."

Senior race yields yawns

By LARRY KRAMER
Campus Affairs Editor

The race for the most prestigious presidency this year, has ironically drawn the least amount of reaction for the voters.

Bob Gladden (CAP) and Morgan Brown (GIA), candidates for senior class president, have taken their respective slates to the voters who traditionally make the worst showing at the polls.

This year's senior class presidency is different from past years, though. The newly elected leader will be centennial president. The doors opened to that person will be more plentiful, and more important than ever before.

Gladden's platform is drawn around the centennial celebration. His major goal is convincing the administration to make the creation of a university union building the chief priority of the entire years celebration. "I'd like to use the centennial celebration as a vehicle to accomplish certain needs here, such as academic shortcoming and the need for a university union building," he said.

Brown also plans to take advantage of the centennial year. He proposes a program which would attract instructors from across the nation to teach for a year as centennial professors. "We can pay them out of funds from the donations made through the year from our class alumni."

Brown's, slate, Meryl Kramer" (vice-president), Pat Orsino (secretary), and Darby Gibbons (treasurer) also spoke out for an orientation week concert run with the sophomore class, and the expansion of the LTE program.

On Gladden's ticket, Ellen Miller (vice-president), Andrea Ibanez (secretary), and Lou Brindis (treasurer), are combining their efforts for the UU building as well as certain academic proposals. Their main objective is to channel all the funds raised during the centennial celebration to the UU building objective.

Poor use of stage . . .

Repertory lacks usual spark

By JAMES KING

As its fourth production of its third season, Syracuse Repertory Theatre is staging Christopher Fry's "The Lady's Not for Burning." It will breathe its last this Sunday evening, but this fact is not overly tragic: it wasn't very much alive on its opening night last Thursday. Rarely, if ever, has this resident professional theatre looked so unprofessional and sluggish.

There is a real irony in this. For whatever this repertory theatre has lacked in insight and subtlety, it has tried to compensate for with simple energy. It has at least offered its audiences exciting theater. But this production of Fry's witty and theatrically-mobile comedy is so restrained that it's almost choking to death.

Take, for instance, the use of the thrust stage here, or rather, the lack of use of it. This company is apparently beginning to withdraw from the audience. Pinter's "The Homecoming," which played at the Regent over spring vacation, was a magnificent production, but it kept its distance by tearing down the thrust platform and withdrawing into the proscenium stage. The thrust platform is back on its legs now, but none of the actors in "The Lady's..." are using it. The action centers around the windows near the back of the stage, and the actors almost bend over backwards not to use the thrust stage.

This is strange, because Mr. Fry's play constitutes a fun show. Its view of man is cynical, but its attack oozes charm and wit, as if the playwright foresaw the Mary Poppins philosophy that a spoonful of sugar helps the medicine go down. In a most delightful way, it would seem, had it been blessed with a director less inhibited than Rex Henriot. Henriot is usually a spirited director, and occasionally even an audacious one, but this time he seems to be wearing a muzzle.

The play's hero is a discharged soldier who is so disappointed with the world that he wants to be hung. His prospective executioneers, however, are so absorbed in the persecution of a suspected witch that they ignore his pleas to be put to death. Mr. Fry follows the intensification of the relationship between the two in a play that bulges with little romantic subplots teems with audacious and ludicrous characters, and bristles with what must be termed sophisticated and thoughtful gags.

(Son, to mother: I must tell you I've just been reborn.
Mother, to son: You always think you can do things better than your mother.)

William Shust does a serviceable job with the role of the soldier, but he is singularly unappealing. If Michael McGuire were working with the company this year, he would be playing this role, and with a lot more liveliness and lightness than does Shust, who isn't convincing enough to make us believe he has left "rings of beer on every alehouse table for the salt sea-coast across half a dozen counties."

I've been watching Zoaunne Henriot for three years now, and I still have to force myself to enjoy her performances. She lacks the necessary range for an actress, and her voice is unvariable from role to role. The best I say about her is that she tries, and this time the effort is more successful than usual. By this time it's impossible to doubt her sincerity, but I can't help thinking of her as the Kim Novak of the company.

The supporting cast is an admirable crutch to this production, with Adale O'Brien's well-timed delivery and attractive charm as the hit of the evening; she plays the socially-conscious mother of two marriage-age sons. These two are nicely-etched by Charles Hull and George Wyner. Also a virtue is Gary Gage, who is making his sole appearance with the company this season, although he was in every production in the previous two seasons. He tries to overpower the role of the mayor, but it's a pleasure to see him again anyway.

Buy album — give the cashier three one dollar bills — and get change! Where?
Record Runner

Are you interested in:
- public issues?
- people?
- self-expression?
- getting in on the action?

Consider a career in newspaper reporting and editing. We are interested in young men and women with liberal arts degrees, a proficiency in the language and a thirst for finding out, reporting and interpreting complex issues in simple English for demanding readers seeking not merely facts but comprehension.
Candidates should be curious, intelligent, and willing to dig hard for news and write it accurately, fully and fairly even under pressure from the clock. Trainees selected for our program will work under experienced reporters on-the-job in one of New England's top newspaper organizations. Write or phone John P. Widdison, Telegram and Gazette, 20 Franklin St., Worcester, Mass. 01601. Telephone Area Code (617) 755-4321.

JIFFY KING
SPECIAL
Monday thru Friday, 2-5 p.m.
10¢ OFF ALL SUBS
727 South Crouse
in the Arcade

CAB IS COMING THIS SUNDAY

The SCENE

Every night is a weekend night.
Cili Drive and Towpath Rd. off Erie Blvd. in DeWitt
Tonight: Admission ½ Price

SYRACUSE
WAR MEMORIAL AUDITORIUM
SUNDAY, MAY 4, 1969
One show only at 7:30 P.M.
CORA PROMOTIONS PRESENTS
the JIMI HENDRIX EXPERIENCE
with NOEL REDDING

Tickets: $4, $5, $6.
MAIL ORDERS ONLY!
Please enclose self-addressed envelope, make check payable to, and mail to Syracuse War Memorial Auditorium, 515 Montgomery Street, Syracuse, New York 13202.
For information call (315) 477-7481.

ANGUS H. TWOMBLY — Editor-in-Chief

MANAGING EDITOR - Alan Stamm EXECUTIVE EDITOR - Karen Wiediger NEWS EDITOR - Fred Tuccillo EDITORIAL DIRECTOR - David A. Ross COPY EDITOR - Jean Havens FEATURE EDITOR - Roz Mazer SPORTS EDITOR - Mike Weber CAMPUS AFFAIRS EDITOR - Larry Kramer PHOTOGRAPHY EDITOR - Clint Clemens ASSOCIATE EDITORS - Andrij Bilyk, Kay Christensen, Beth Hillson, Rona Kavee, Helene Macdonald, Charles Shapiro, Dan Schlossberg, Patti Williams, Roni Ziokower.

DAILY ORANGE

Syracuse University's Daily — Newspaper Since 1903

Thursday, April 17, 1969 Page 3

STEVEN P. STROBRIDGE — Business Manager

ASSISTANT BUSINESS MANAGER— Art Depasqua, NATIONAL ADVERTISING MANAGER— Janet Meyer ACCOUNT EXECUTIVES— Roger Black, Jim Maney, Mike Greenstein.

Published Tuesday, through Friday during the academic year by students of Syracuse University. Offices located at 200 Brooklea Drive, Fayetteville, N.Y., and 1101 East Adams St., Syracuse, New York. Entered as Second Class matter at the U.S. Post Office, Fayetteville, N.Y. 13066.

The next President

The next president of Student Government has the potential to take the campus a long way toward the goal that other campuses have rioted and mashed heads for. That goal is a university responsive to student needs and a university that graduates satisfied students--satisfied with the opportunities offered them, and satisfied that they had some control and influence on that education. They weren't just put through the mill.

We as SU students have no right to be satisfied. Many are not. The dissatisfied have appeared at mass meetings before vacation, at talks with the administration on Tuesday, in the black demonstration in front of the administration building and now at political rallies.

What has bothered these dissatisfied students consistently during all of this time has been the present University power structure; the $3,000 a year that we pay the University and what we've been getting for it. These, fellow students, are the issues and you and your next SG president have both the psyche and the momentum to make strides that committee stalemates, red tape and failure to perceive the issues has prevented from happening all year. The time is ripe.

Today we will choose between Louis Jacobs and David Ifshin for the man that will lead us and SU to a better educational experience and a more progressive environment. Both have made impressive steps in that direction already.

To David Ifshin, we owe tribute for delivering an impressive and hopefully final blow to the travesty that is party politics, SU style. Ifshin has attracted support and interest from heretofore unheard-from students. The low key, independent appeal of his campaigning has been his biggest asset.

But it is to Louis Jacobs that the Daily Orange turns to crystallize that sentiment and carry on the fight. A fight it will be, and a fighter Louis Jacobs should be.

It is agreed by many that Jacobs has been running for SG president since his freshman year. It, may be true, but not only has he been running--he's been doing and learning. But it is unfortunate that the vehicle he chose to use to push him into the presidency was CAP.

The Daily Orange endorses Louis Jacobs, the man, and not Louis Jacobs the CAP candidate. This is obviously not the year of the party vote. It's the year of the issues. One of Jacob's greatest assets is that he knows the issues and knows where to carry the fight. The Jacobs campaign is not one of super appeal for student government and its related banality. No matter who is elected, it can be presumed that SG and especially Student Senate will plod along wallowing in the mud of its own mediocrity. The election of either candidate will do little for SG as we know it. What you elect when you vote for an SG president is a man who has power to open doors, get answers and lead students. That important trait has come to the front in the issue of dorm autonomy. If you want autonomy, you won't get it by waiting for Corbally and appealing to the courts as Dave Ifshin has suggested. To wait for Corbally for anything is to destroy that beautiful momentum Dave himself helped to establish. Ifshin may have changed his mind by the time he got to Watson last night, but Jacobs said "take it now" in the St. Mary's debate yesterday and he said it alone.

Don't pass Jacobs by, just because he's not an independent. Affffiliation isn't the issue, its the university. The Jacobs expertise is important--too important to pass by just for someone a bit more unconventional.

Vote for Jacobs, but don't bother to vote a party line. A few people on each of the slates are good. If you know them, vote for them. As for the others, forget them. It's a fitting tribute and they won't make much difference anyway.

Editorial policy

Signed columns appearing on this page are the opinions of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Daily Orange editors. The paper welcomes diverse opinions and will consider all materials submitted for publication on this page.

All material submitted to the Daily Orange becomes the property of the paper to print at its discretion. No unsigned materials will be printed but names will be withheld upon request.

Letters

You may ask, "What has SG done for me?" I'm not going to pussyfoot around and claim great victories for the students in the past year. We have made some progress, not because of the existing structure, but despite it.

There is more involved in this year's student government election than simply choosing between two candidates. Rather, we are choosing between two entirely different systems. If we are to really make a change in ourselves and our outlook toward Student Government we've got to make it now–tomorrow is too late.

It is my understanding that Louis Jacobs is claiming that I'm going to take over the administration building on Friday, and thereafter Ifshin will burn it down. Well that's a lot of bull. I won't say that I'm surprised at Jacobs for such below the belt tactics.

We have got to decide whether anyone has the right to run for an office or only those selected from political parties. We have got to determine–right now–that campus parties are not the only viable political organs on campus. We have got to affirm that individuals, not parties, are what make up this university. But the issue is not voting against parties solely for the sake of voting against parties. There are persons from the parties that are equally as strong as candidates and individuals who are not party affiliated.

For the first time we're on the verge of making real progress in the area of living conditions. Under the leadship of Ed Barron, but with near unanimous student support. St. Mary's has gone autonomous despite the objections of student senators. Similar movements, with tremendous student interest and support, are being initiated in other dorms. Watson is a good example.

Ifshin is willing to consider some of the real issues like what kind of education are we getting for $3,000 a year? Do a bunch of trustees have the right to regulate our lives? What's the relationship of the University to the community? Does the administration give a damn about the poor people who it displaces with its megalomaniac building program. He shows a concern to work with the black students on campus when he is needed.

This year we have a candidate who offers leadership and a chance to break away from traditional type of SG. We have a candidate who was not afraid to stand up to the parties and say, "Your way is no good anymore." That kind of a person, who jeopardized his ambition for what he believes in, is the kind of person who will not be afraid to stand up to the administration. He will put himself on the line for what he thinks is right.

The real power on this campus lies with the students and their ability to organize around specific issue. The old structure of Student Government, which Jacobs proposes to "improve" under his "leadership" is the main stumbling block to real changes on this campus.

I know and Ifshin knows and you know that there's got to be a change in the allocation of power on this campus. This, Louie doesn't seem to know, and man, that's a shame.

Chuck Hicks

To the Editor:

By now it is obvious that the inevitable political dirt has been thrown once again, and consequently many students have concluded that the process is not worth participating in. But, as a campus leader this year, I feel it important to remind students that regardless of how disgusting the process may appear, it will still give us an SG President, who will represent us and with whom we will have to work.

Therefore, I feel that I should make known my personal preference for the presidency. That preference based on my experience in working within and without the university system, would be Lou Jacobs. He, unlike his opponent has a good grasp of how to implement ideas. He knows the problems of the independent dormitory resident, since he is one. Furthermore, he has demonstrated that he can work effectively with administrators. and at the same time, never working for them.

For these reasons I am voting for Lou Jacobs for president. This preference is my personal one, and in no way reflects the sentiments of Interdorm Council, nor was it intended to.

Independent(ly),
Peg Johnston

a UU clarification

This is written to clear up a lot of misinformation that has been circulating about the union building and University Union in this campaign. I say first that I am a senior and will support no candidate but will vote my choice. Here are the facts.

First, it is illegal for a beer company, even Budweiser, to give more than fifty dollars for an exclusive beer concession in New York State. We've tried them all.

Second, only one candidate for any office has ever worked for University Union so most of the people who claim to have worked for UU are stretching the truth.

Third, there is no plan presently to build a union building of any sort. The University is not about to do anything unless the students make them do something and anyone who tells you different is kidding himself and you.

Jerry Tatarian

Fourth, Union has prepared a site proposal which we have submitted for action at the next design board meeting. The proposal was printed in the DO. Also Union (with the development office) has been organizing a presentation to make to prospective donors. We have developed a priority list of programs and an estimate of building costs.

Fifth, no action has been taken by the University Administration on any of the six items which University Union and the Council on Student Life have approved as minimum necessary acts for any student to ever believe the University is serious about a union building.

UU can go through all the motions of getting a building but there won't be a building unless students demand one.

Students have better things to do than be led down the long rosy path toward a union building for four years. And no amount of campaign propaganda can change that. If students want something like a union building it doesn't make any difference who gets elected SG president, because just as we say UU is You, Student Power is You. Maybe it's time for the students' voice to be heard.

SUBJECTS NEEDED FOR PHYSIOLOGICAL STUDY

Qualifications: Male or female, 21-35 yrs. of age with at least a high school education. Participants will be paid $15 for 2 sessions of approximately 2 hrs. each.

Only morning appointments are available. If interested call Upstate Medical Center. 473-5775 and ask for Mrs. Jessen.

$2.69

is a lot of bread for one LP!

But that is what they cost at Record Rumer

GIRLS . . . ARE YOU LOOKING FOR A SUMMER COUNSELOR POSITION? Applicants are now being considered for the 1969 camp season. Must be able to teach one of the following: Arts & Crafts Director, Dancing, Music, Archery, Tennis, Golf, Trampoline, Cheerleading, Riflery, Scout Craft & Nature Study or A. R. C. Swimming Instructor. Also Secretary and Bookkeeper needed. Write: Camp Director, 2409 Shelleydale Drive, Baltimore, Md. 21209.

The Big "O"

tOnight's free cOlOr flick is tOm jOnes

Every Wednesday Kill-A-Keg Party
Free Suds While It Lasts
— Never A Door Charge —

Wanted for Psychological Experiment

Women at least 21 years of age, with at least high school education. Participants will be paid at least $2.00 per hour. If interested call Upstate Medical Center at 473-5777, ask for Miss Lant.

Call between hours 1:00 & 5:00 P.M.

478-1145

Photography by
Sarkin Studio
Living Color
Portraits
Bridal Portraits
Candid Weddings
908 Irving Ave.
Near V. A. Hospital

SYRACUSE REPERTORY THEATRE
the lady's not for burning
by Christopher Fry

A SENSATION IN LONDON & NEW YORK

"Tonight thru Sunday"

UNIVERSITY REGENT THEATRE
820 EAST GENESEE ST.
parking & ticket info.: 476-4536

—Happenings on the Hill—

THURSDAY

"DRUGS AND THE LAW" will be discussed by Mr. Isadore Greenberg, defense attorney in several recent Syracuse drug cases, at 7 p.m. in the Newhouse lounge. All interested persons are invited.

BIAFRA meeting 7 p.m. Chapel House.

UU Peace Corps discussion with slides and speaker - 8 p.m.

PC PLACEMENT TESTS, 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. in placement center, 804 University Ave.

UJB 7:30 p.m. Chapel House.

MAKE MONEY Thursday selling the special election issue of the Promethean. Salesmen have made $5 in one hour. Bonus for top sales. Contact Bob Giordano or Jim Dalton ext. 3140.

LECTURE on "The Dawn of the Communicationists Theorists: The Sophists." Noon in the Newhouse Lounge.

GREAT DECISIONS Discussion Group will meet at the International Student Center, 230 Euclid Av. Thursday evening at 8 for a discussion on "Western Europe and its Relationship with the U.S." Students from Western Europe will participate with Professor Michael Thomas moderating. All are welcome.

SUSKI MEETING, today, 4 p.m., in 207 HL. Important matters to be discussed.

ALL COORDINATORS, committee members and other interested individuals are asked to attend an important meeting at which final preparations for the Magic Box of Tricks will be discussed. The meeting will be today at 9 p.m. in rm. 200, NCC.

COLLEGE OF FORESTRY elections of class officers and Forestry Council officers will be held today and tomorrow. Voting will take place in the Bray Hall rotunda from 9 a.m.-5 p.m. today and 9 a.m.-3 p.m. tomorrow.

IT'S FRENCH! IT'S FREE! The French Club presents "Port of Shadows" in French with English subtitles, tonight at 7 p.m. in Gifford Aud. All are welcome-free.

FRIDAY

RITE OF SPRING Folk Society concert, Friday, 7:30-12 p.m. in Kittredge Aud. Dave Maloney, John Cadley, Peter Allen, and the Down City Ramblers will be featured. Free.

EL CIRCOLO ITALIANO announces a coffee hour in honor of Professor John Freccero, Friday from 3-4 p.m. in rm. 200, HBC. Everyone cordially invited.

Dante lecture

The Italian Department of Syracuse University announces a public lecture for Friday, April 18, at 4 p.m. in Kittredge Auditorium. The speaker will be Dr. John Freccero, Professor of Italian at Cornell University, whose topic - Dante's Medusa: The Allegory of Auto-biography - is based on the 9th Canto of the Divine Comedy (The Inferno).

Professor Freccero is the author of many studies on Dante, and editor of an anthology of the Italian poet which will be published shortly. He is curator of the Fiske Dante and Petrarch Collections at Cornell, and a council associate of the Dante Society of America. In September Professor Freccero will assume a new post as Professor of Italian at Yale University.

GENERAL

RIC MASTEN, Big Sur poet and songwriter, will present a program of folk and protest singing this Saturday at 8 p.m. in the Noble Room of Hendricks Chapel-free-sponsored by the Unitarian Universalist Billings Lecture Fund and SU Student Religious Liberals.

WIN CASH in the sweepstakes at the Women's Building Bowling Lanes. Starts Monday, April 21.

ATTENTION GREEK WEEK CHAIRMEN mandatory meeting Sunday, 9 p.m. at Tri-Delta. You must be there. Problems? Call Joan, x2658.

SUICIDES ANONYMOUS: 'ear to help you. Call 422-1000, 6 p.m.-6 a.m. Mon. - Fri. Non-violent, voluntary.

UU PRESENTS "The Tenth Victim" Sunday, 7 and 9 p.m. in Gifford Aud. Admission: $1.

HILLEL AND ISRAELI STUDENT ORGANIZATION invites you to Israel's 21st Annual celebration, 8 p.m. Saturday, at the Jewish Community Center, 2223 E. Genesee.

AMERICAN YOUTH HOSTELS 30 days in Europe by VW bus staying at youth hostels and inexpensive hotels for $625 including flight. Call Ron Cate, 469-6284, 841 Valley Drive.

ATTENTION PRE MEDS: AED, the premedical honorary is now accepting applications for memberhsip. Please include science accum, overall accum, and activities. Send to Bonnie Morrison, Box 548, St. Mary's dorm. Deadline April 23.

THE NEW LEFT isn't gaining much popular support on the SU campus so far. I am interested in finding out how many conservatives there are on campus-perhaps to later form an organization, complete with publication to present our views. Interested? Call Ernie Grafe, x3098 or 3633 during the evening or write Box 161, 401 Van Buren St.

CampusClothiers
S.U.BOOKSTORES

BELLS!
FASHION VESTS!
BODY SHIRTS!

S. U. BOOKSTORE

SG candidates debate autonomy, confrontation

By JOHN WISINIEWSKI

Dormitory autonomy and confrontation of the administration were the main issues discussed yesterday afternoon during a debate between Dave Ifshin, Lou Jacobs and Josh Nadel, the candidates for SG president.

Approximately 200 people crowded into the multi-purpose room of St. Mary's dorm to hear and question the three candidates.

In his opening remarks Jacobs, the Campus Alliance Party (CAP) contender, refuted charges that his party was a well-financed political machine. He spoke out against "phoney radicalism" in dealing with the administration. "I'm not going to confront the administration. I'm going to make them come to us," he said.

A question was raised as to the status of a bill which the university has introduced into the state legislature calling for the power of eminent domain. All three candidates said they opposed the bill.

Ifshin, the independent candidate, stated that little can be done to stop the passage of the bill now. He spoke of legal action against the university if the bill becomes law. "We're not going to win in Albany," he said, "but later in the courts."

Jacobs stated that positive measures must be taken now to stop legislative approval of the bill. He advocated pressuring of the administration before the bill has a chance to be passed.

Prohibition Party candidate Nadel continued his low-key attack on Student Government, calling for its abolishment. With this accomplished he felt that students would then be able to form an effective governmental structure suitable to their needs.

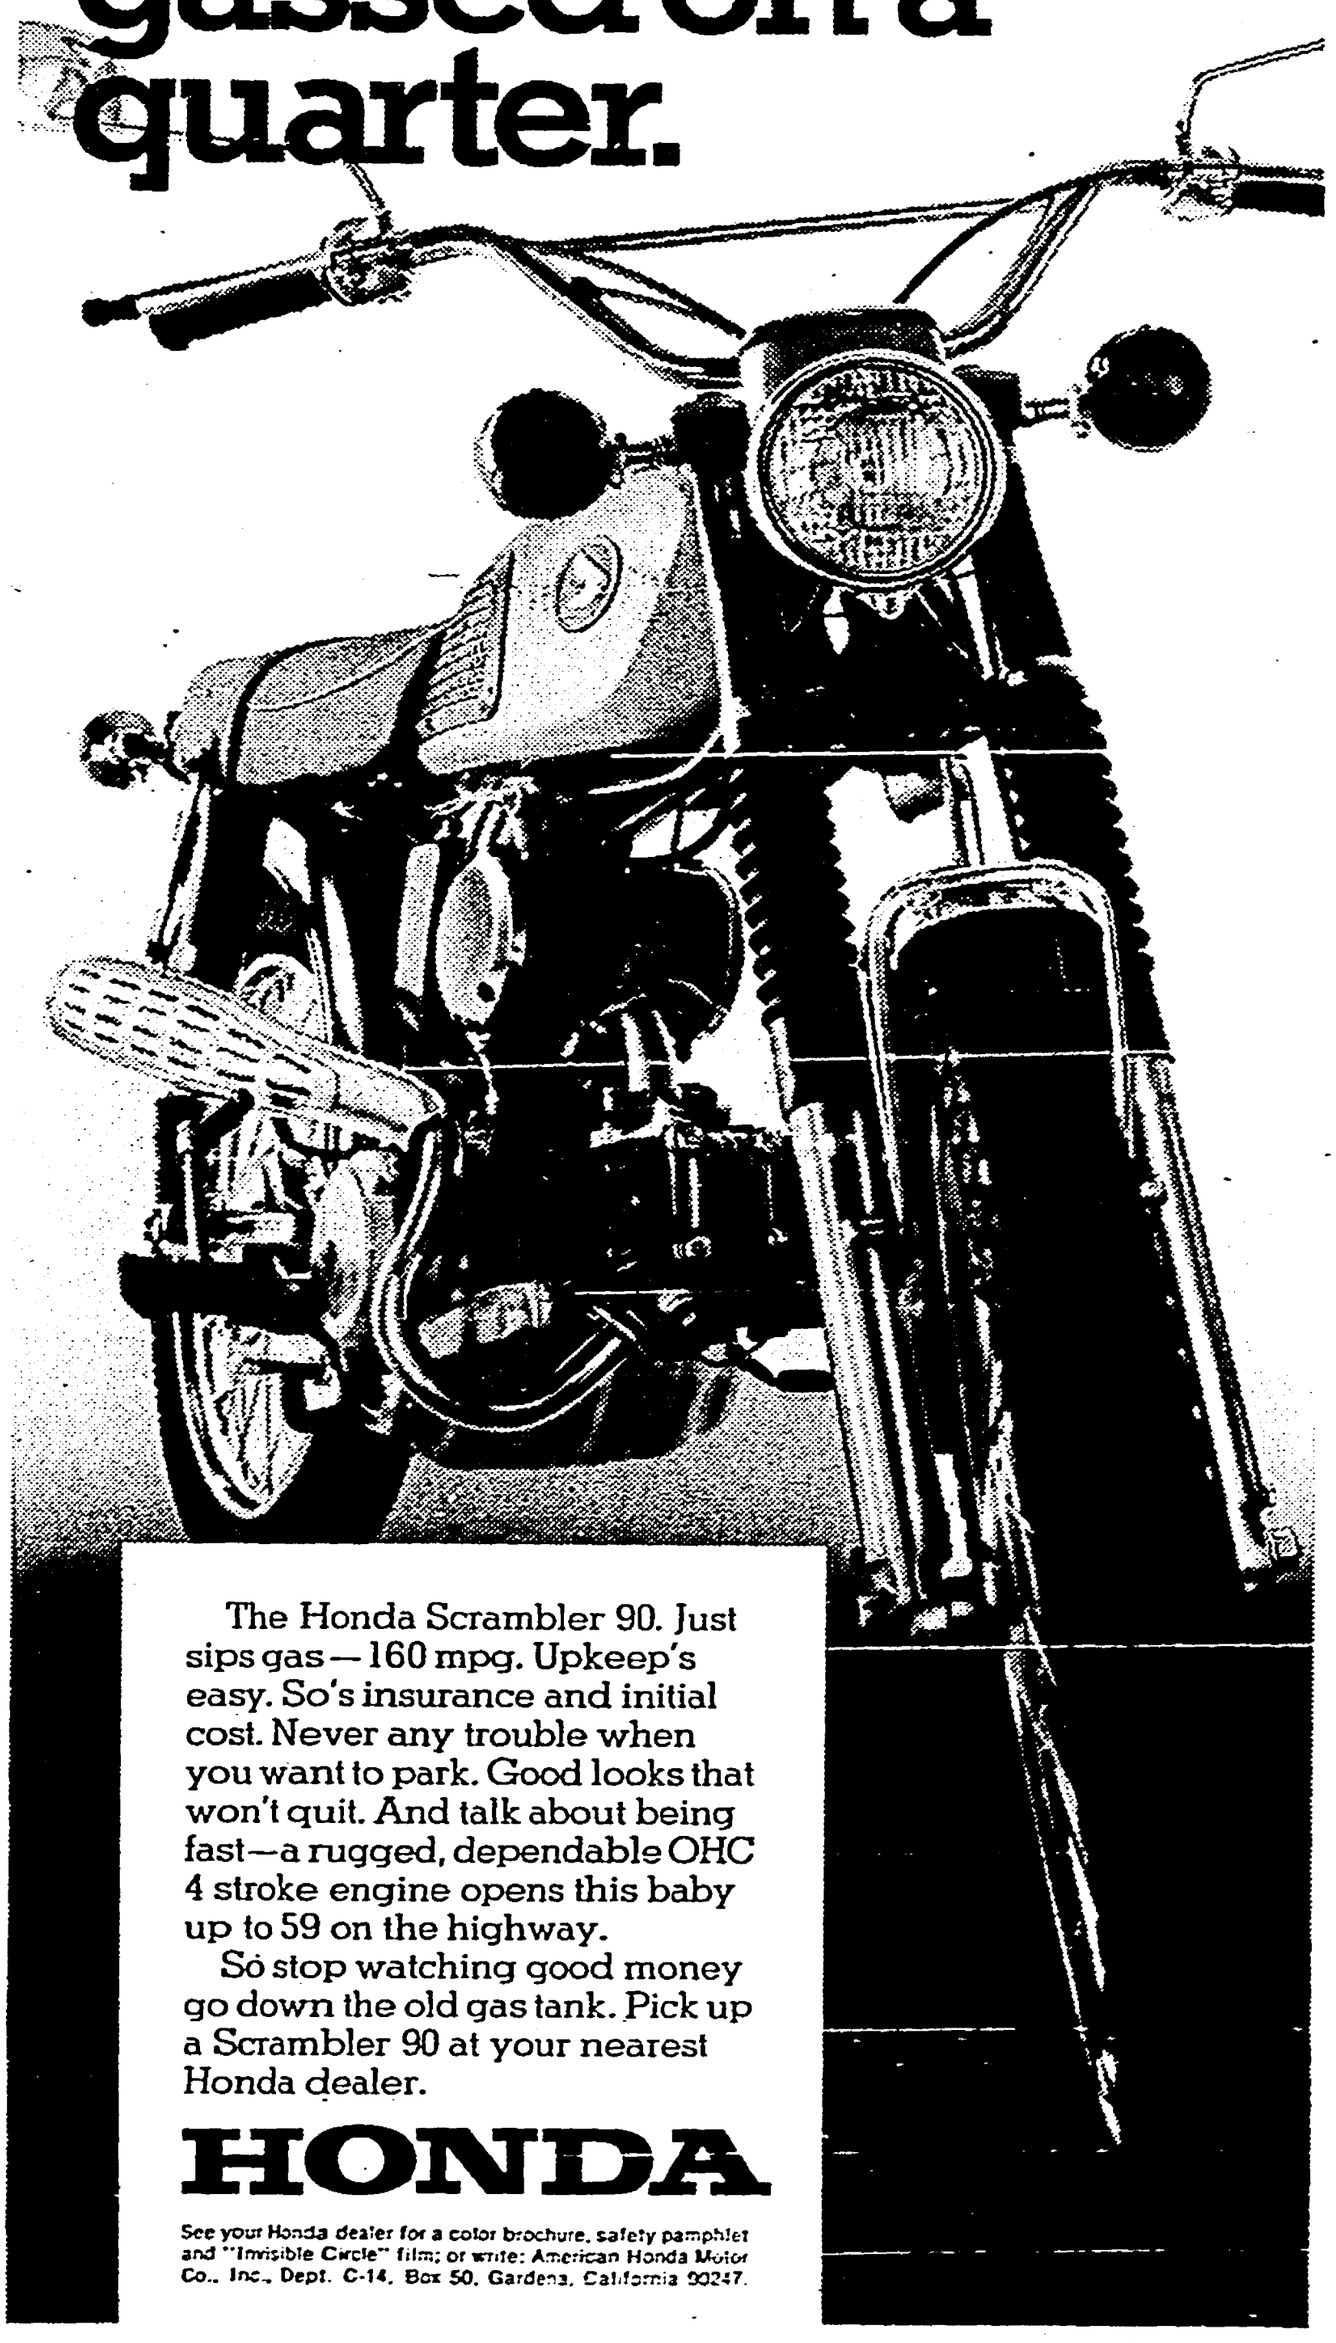
"I have no desire to be a student leader. I am an art student," Nadel continued, "and I only know what changes I want to see within the Art School." He said that students within the various schools of the university have similar viewpoints. Nadel then said he favored the establishment of student committees in each school to function as channels of action in dealing with the administration.

During a question and answer period, Dick Conrad, DellPlain dorm president, said Chancellor Tolley is expected to veto the establishment of dorm autonomy Friday.

Jacobs hoped that the University Judicial Board would resign if the chancellor does veto autonomy. As far as Jacobs was concerned, autonomy was secured through the proper governmental procedures, and the chancellor has no right of veto.

Ifshin felt that no action should be taken against the possible veto until John Corbally succeeds Tolley in the fall. He said, "I'm willing to delay getting my degree for five years, if it takes that long to fight for the right of autonomy in the courts."

Nadel said the candidates agreed that there should be a meeting of campus leaders to draw up a list of student needs and submit them to the administration by the end of this semester. If the administration did not meet these needs, the leaders would then urge all students not to pay their tuition bill at registration until the administration acts favorably.



Cheerleaders

Tryouts for next year's varsity cheerleading squad will take place tonight at 6:30 in the men's practice gym. All present freshmen, sophomores and juniors are eligible for the squad.

Social Committee

The University Social Committee will be reviewing proposed '69 - '70 social calendars for university organizations this month. If your calendar must be reviewed by the Committee, a list of proposed events must be turned in to Mrs. Stafford in the Women's Building by April 25. Groups complying with this deadline will receive preferential treatment.

Completely gassed on a quarter.

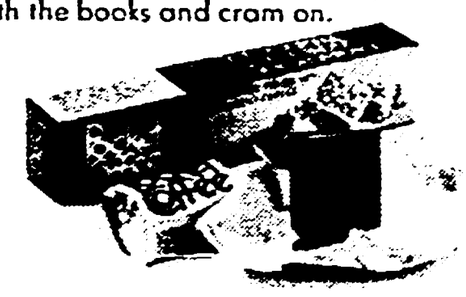
The Honda Scrambler 90. Just sips gas—160 mpg. Upkeep's easy. So's insurance and initial cost. Never any trouble when you want to park. Good looks that won't quit. And talk about being fast—a rugged, dependable OHC 4 stroke engine opens this baby up to 59 on the highway.

So stop watching good money go down the old gas tank. Pick up a Scrambler 90 at your nearest Honda dealer.

HONDA

See your Honda dealer for a color brochure, safety pamphlet and "Invisible Circle" film; or write: American Honda Motor Co., Inc., Dept. C-14, Box 50, Gardena, California 90247.

Pocket Coffee! What's that?



A new kind of coffee break for cramming collegians.

From freshman to senior year, the "cram" is a fact of life for most students. Just before mid-semester and again at end-term you burn the midnight oil, review mountains of books and consume gallons of coffee.

Pocket Coffee, the new kind of coffee break, consists of a delicious chocolate shell full of real liquid coffee ...the space age answer to the students' age old problem.

Don't stop to make or get coffee, pop a Pocket Coffee into your mouth, get your coffee and eat your chocolate too (a great energy source). Pack Pocket Coffee in with the books and cram on.

FC 1007

Engineering and Science at IBM

"You're treated like a professional right from the start."

"The attitude here is, if you're good enough to be hired, you're good enough to be turned loose on a project," says Don Feistamel.

Don earned a B.S.E.E. in 1965. Today, he's an Associate Engineer in systems design and evaluation at IBM. Most of his work consists of determining modifications needed to make complex data processing systems fit the specialized requirements of IBM customers.

Depending on the size of the project, Don works individually or in a small team. He's now working with three other engineers on part of an air traffic control system that will process radar information by computer. Says Don: "There are only general guidelines. The assignment is simply to come up with the optimum system."

Set your own pace

Recently he wrote a simulation program that enables an IBM computer to predict the performance of a data processing system that will track satellites. He handled that project himself. "Nobody stands over my shoulder," Don says. "I pretty much set my own pace."

Don's informal working environment is typical of Engineering and Science at IBM. No matter how large the project, we break it down into units small enough to be handled by one person or a few people.

Don sees a lot of possibilities for the future. He says, "My job requires that I keep up to date with all the latest IBM equipment and systems programs. With that broad an outlook, I can move into almost any technical area at IBM—development, manufacturing, product test, space and defense projects, programming or marketing."

Check with your placement office

If you're interested in engineering and science at IBM, ask your placement office for more information.

An Equal Opportunity Employer

IBM®

Attorney to discuss legality of drugs

Isadore Greenberg, defense attorney in several recent area drug cases, will discuss "Drugs and the Law" tonight at 7 p.m. in Newhouse lounge. Having thoroughly researched the many statutes connected with his topic, Greenberg will be prepared to answer the questions of all those who attend.

Greenberg is the third of four guest speakers being brought to campus as part of the honors seminar "The psycho-pharmacology of erehwon." (Erehwon, "nowhere" spelled backwards, is a reference from a 19th century anti-utopian novel by Samuel Butler.) Members of the seminar discuss current subjects connected with soft drugs.

All those interested in and concerned about this topic are invited to attend.

Tuition rise . . .

(Continued from page 1)
alternative to this action was a continuation of deficit operations accompanied by an inevitable reduction of the quality of the educational program. I am sure that you have read in your newspapers that other universities – both state and privately endowed – have found it necessary to take similar steps. And while this fact does not ameliorate the impact of our adjustments, it does indicate the university of the financial problems facing higher education in this country."

Any changes in rates for off-campus instruction were to be announced by the University offices responsible for such programs.

Increases in tuition for Summer Sessions will not apply before the summer of 1970, Wingate noted.

According to the Admissions Office, basic expenses for an undergraduate in the 1969-70 academic year will be between $3,350 and $3,600. This includes tuition, fees, room, board, books and supplies.

Maelstrom

The staff of Maelstrom has begun to solicit contributions of poetry, essays and short stories to be considered for publication in Maelstrom 3.

Undergraduates, graduates, faculty and administrators are all invited to submit material. The deadline for submissions is Wednesday, April 23. For contributors' convenience, a mailbox has been provided in the English Office, 203 Hall of Languages.

Anyone with questions should call Maelstrom editor-in-chief Don Bredes, 472-2373.

In this time of inflation, high taxes, & the BIG businessmen who try to pinch pennies from the poor, isn't it nice to know that someone or something is still willing to make a sacrifice to keep friends?

$2.69

FOR HUNDREDS OF LP'S AT

Record Runner

"King of Hearts"

Is Back

Saturday, April 19

Gifford Auditorium

7 & 9

Syracuse Film Academy

Admission $1.00

JAM FACTORY

Friday

CAMPUS INN — SUBURBAN PARK

Manlius (Rt. 92) Syracuse's Only Amusement Park

Discount Admission With Ticket From Rascals' Concert

WOLF & MARKVI Present the

RASCALS

FRIDAY NITE, APRIL 18, 8 P.M.

at the

Onondaga War Memorial

Tickets — $4, $5, $6

Mail orders now accepted at box office. Tickets on sale April 1st at: The Record Runner, S U Corner Store, Wilson's Leading Jewelers and War Memorial.

Campus Classified

GR 6-5571, Ext. 2314

Rates minimum of 15 words:

1 day	1.15
2 days	2.25
3 days	3.30
4 days	4.30
5 days	5.25
6 days	6:15

To place a classified ad, call GR 6-5571, ext. 2314, between 1 and 3 p.m. Ad must be placed 2 days in advance. Every word over 15 costs 5c extra per day.

ALL ADS MUST BE PREPAID.

MISCELLANEOUS

RENT if you can't buy! T.V.s, tape recorders, typewriters. By week, month or semester. Reasonable rates. S. U. BOOKSTORE, GR 6-5541, x 2426.

FRAME your works of art at unbeatable prices at S. U. BOOKSTORE. Also signs and posters. In the Art Dept., 303 University Pl.

ALTERATIONS DONE within 24 hours. Call for an appointment. Lillian Potter, 207 Comstock. 478-5847.

PRIVATE DRIVING LESSONS — automatic or standard shift. Full or refresher courses. Qualified professional instructors. Pickup service. Auto Driving Academy. GR 6-3995.

FLY TO EUROPE and back this summer by jet for only $215.00 round-trip. If interested contact Prof. William Courtney at Eisenhower college in Seneca Falls, N. Y. 13148) or call (315) 568-5769 evenings who will give full details and forward number of applications requested.

SUMMER JOBS: Counselors, private boys' camp, Adirondacks: College men of above average physical fitness and judgment; tripping, canoeing, nurse, cook jobs open. Love of out of doors and children essential. Adirondack Swim Camp. 89 Mill Valley Rd. Pittsford, N. Y., 14534.

UNIVERSITY UNION Sunday night at movies presents . . . THE TENTH VICTIM with Ursula Andress, Marcello Mastrianni; plus Man is a Pain and Trumpit. $1.00 Sunday April 20. 7 & 9 p.m. in Gifford Auditorium.

FOR SALE

1966 ALFA ROMEO 2600 Roadster Conv. 6 cyl., 5 speeds. 14,000 mi.s. Michelin X tires, AM-FM radio, very clean. $2300. or best offer. 472-3083.

'66 AUSTIN - HEALY SPRITE convertible. Fully equipped. Great sports car. Call Larry 454-0927.

'54 CHEVY, 235 CID. Auto trans., radio. 4 Dunlops, excellent running condition. $150.00. Call Art 478-2349.

HONDA, 305 Scrambler 68. Black and chrome. Call ext. 3082, ask for Fitzpatrick.

1959 VOLKSWAGEN, sun roof, gas heater, radio, extra snow tires, engine recently overhauled, some body rust but otherwise perfect. $200.00. NE 8 0406 or 476-8362.

NEED TIRES ? Guaranteed discount prices on tires, mag wheels, chrome wheels, etc. All sizes. Call Larry. 475-3987.

1963 STUDEBAKER LARK — Good condition. $175.00. 1962 Pontiac Tempest convertibl, very good condition. $250. Call Larry 475-3987.

1964 CORVETTE (1967 body) 365 HP Black convertibl, Red hood 427. Best Offer. 479-7628.

'66 GTO, Yellow convertible, 4-speed hurst, power steering 5 crager mags, etc. Immaculate condition. Call Bill Osmun x2638 or GR 8-9001.

MOTORCYCLE — 175 c.c. Bridgestone 4/5 speed trans. 20 horsepower, helmet included. Good Condition. $225. x2569 Steve Wheadon.

HOUSE: Village of Fayetteville. Cape Cod, facing park, lot 50'x120'. Three Bedooms, living room with fieplace, family room. 1½ baths, owner selling for $18,000. Call 637-8169.

'67 MG MIDGET — midnite blue, body good, engine excellent. Snow tires, new battery. $1600 492-1876.

1962 FORD FALCON — Best offer Call Bob, 478-6485.

'58 JAGUAR XK - 150 very good condition. Asking $1150.00 or best offer. 475-9243 or 437-2210 after 6.

OUT OF PRINT BOOKS. The Country Bookstore. Manlius 682-6402. Open evenings and Saturday.

FOR RENT

ROOMS FOR RENT above Hillel Kosher Dining Club. Immediate occupancy. Call ext. 2904, Mon. - Thurs., 8:30-3:30.

APARTMENTS all over the city. Nicely furnished. 1, 2, and 3 bedrooms. $85.00 up. GL 8-6100. 458-6101.

APARTMENT TO SUBLET (June 1 - Sept 1). New, modern, furnished 1 bedroom apartment. Outside patio - other extras. 5 min. from University. $110/mo. includes utilities. Call 474-3175.

LARGE FRONT ROOM, with kitchen privileges, etc. Chain smokers not welcome. Call after 5:00 p.m. 457-1261.

APARTMENTS — furnished or unfurnished. 3 rooms, utilities, near campus. Call x 3630, 472-8223 or 475-1631.

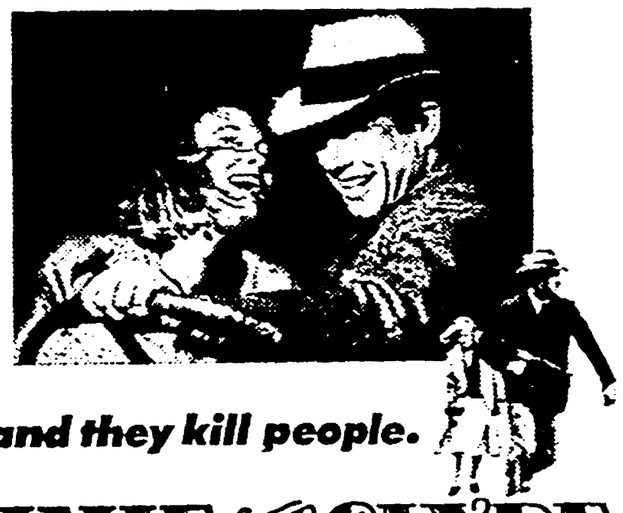
WANTED

COUNSELORS - boys - girls, overnight camp in Berkshires. Tennis, assistant waterfront, golf, pioneering, photography, general. Call 474-3175.

FEMALE COLLEGE STUDENT (Junior, Senior or Graduate - English, Psychology or Advertising major). Clerical and creative advertising work. $2.00 per hour. Work hours flexible. Call Mrs. McCliment at 463-3373 between 8:30 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. Penn York Champion Co., Inc., 3001 James Street, Syracuse, New York.

FACULTY COUPLE — desires to rent furnished or unfurnished two or three bedroom house or apartment near university. Academic year 1969-70. Call 655-9078.

TYPING



THIRTY YEARS EXPERIENCE. Dissertations, term papers, proof-read. Satisfaction guaranteed. Mrs. Raymond Webb. HE 7-8259.

TAKE YOUR MANUSCRIPT to the only professional typing and printing service serving the S. U. area. The knowledge and experience of having done over 2,000 theses and dissertations is behind every job we turn out. Stephanie's Office Service. 469-2795.

TYPIST experienced in thesis, dissertations, and term papers. Electric typewriter. Shirley Saylor. 446-2999 or x2431.

WARREN BEATTY

FAYE DUNAWAY

They're young... they're in love

...and they kill people.

BONNIE AND CLYDE

CO-STARRING

MICHAEL J POLLARD-GENE HACKMAN-ESTELLE PARSONS

TECHNICOLOR® FROM WARNER BROS.-SEVEN ARTS

April 22, 23, 24

6, 8 and 10 p.m.

film forum

gifford auditorium

syracuse university

$1.00

Unger homers

Orange nine upended by Buffalo, 5-2

By DAN SCHLOSSBERG

Too many strikeouts and not enough basehits produced the third straight loss for the disappointing baseball Orange at Buffalo yesterday.

But coach Andy Mogish and his charges are eager to break the streak in the home opener tomorrow.

Buffalo, losers in an 11-inning 3-2 game last year, solved Greg Lowe's tosses for four runs in the third inning and went on to a 5-2 win in sunny Buffalo. The Orange probably would have been better off brushing up on their hitting at the indoor cage in gloomy Syracuse.

The only bright spot of the day for Syracuse was a long home run by catcher John Unger in the fourth inning. Mogish estimated the shot at over 350 feet. It cleared the fence in right-centerfield.

SU scored its other run on walks to Unger and first-baseman Art Tyson, and an RBI single by center-fielder Brian Mihalik.

The line score follows:

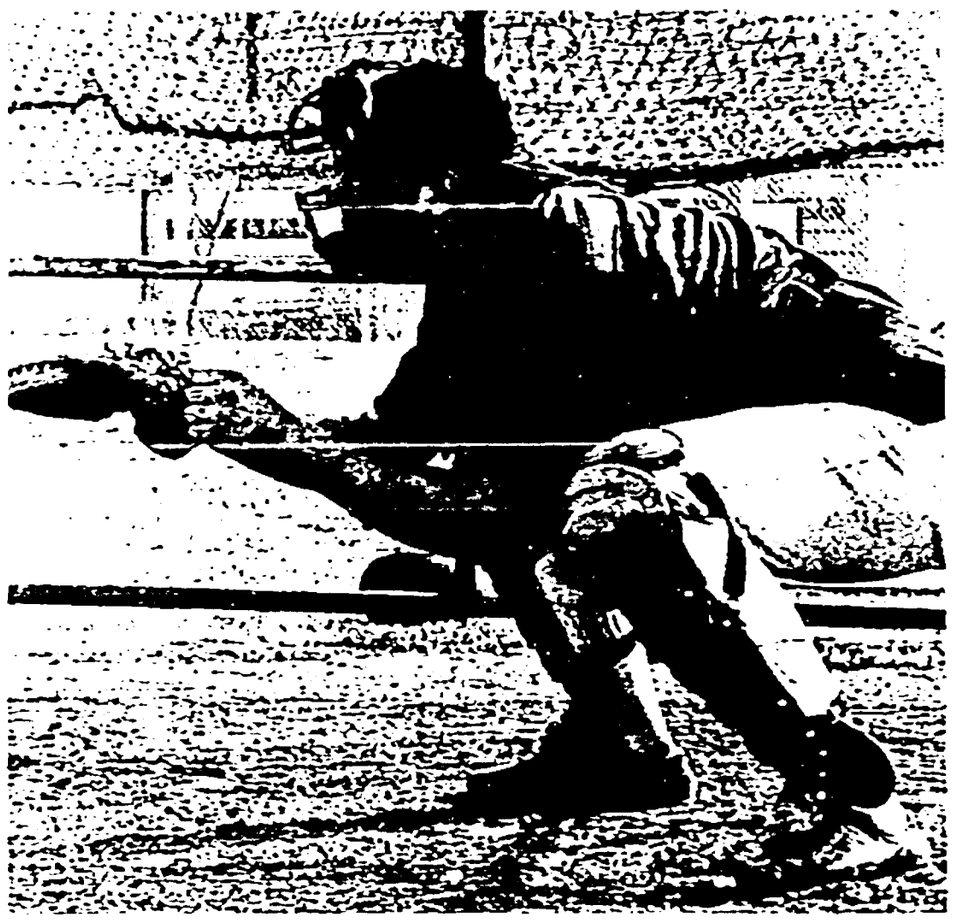
TEAMS	R	H	E
Buffalo	5	8	1
Syracuse	2	4	4

The defeat drops Lowe's record to 0-1. Four of the five Buffalo runs were earned, which doesn't help the righthanders earned run average, but Lowe did record another complete game. He had nine in nine starts a year ago.

Tyson, subbing at first base for the injured John Massis, filled in handsomely, a plus for the losing Syracusans, with one hit in three trips. Though he later missed a tag on a runner and was charged with an error, Mogish said he was pleased with Tyson's performance. He will start again tomorrow.

The remainder of the line-up will also stay intact.

Mogish, meanwhile, is willing to put any hitters he can find onto the field.



"We're not hitting at all," he said after yesterday's game. "We miss that outside practicing. We've been out only two times. It showed up in our hitting. You gotta get out and have the guys throw hard. We've gotta get some hitting somehow, somewhere."

Buffalo starter Paul Lang fanned 14 men, duplicating an earlier high-whiff performance by Navy hurler Denny Losh, who fanned 16 in a 3-2 victory.

Mogish, while he is disappointed with the hitting, says the fielding is "pretty good," with the emphasis on the "pretty." He is pleased with his pitchers, including veterans John Martell, Mike Barlow, Dave Stone, and Lowe.

Martell (1-0) pitches tomorrow. WAER will carry the game at 2:55. A post game interview show will follow.

DAN'S DATA: Martell beat Lafayette 3-1 last year at Eastern, Pa.....Unger's home run was the first by an Orangeman this year. Last year's team leader, team captain and left fielder Jerry Friesinger, hit three...Mogish is undecided on giving the players extra batting practice.

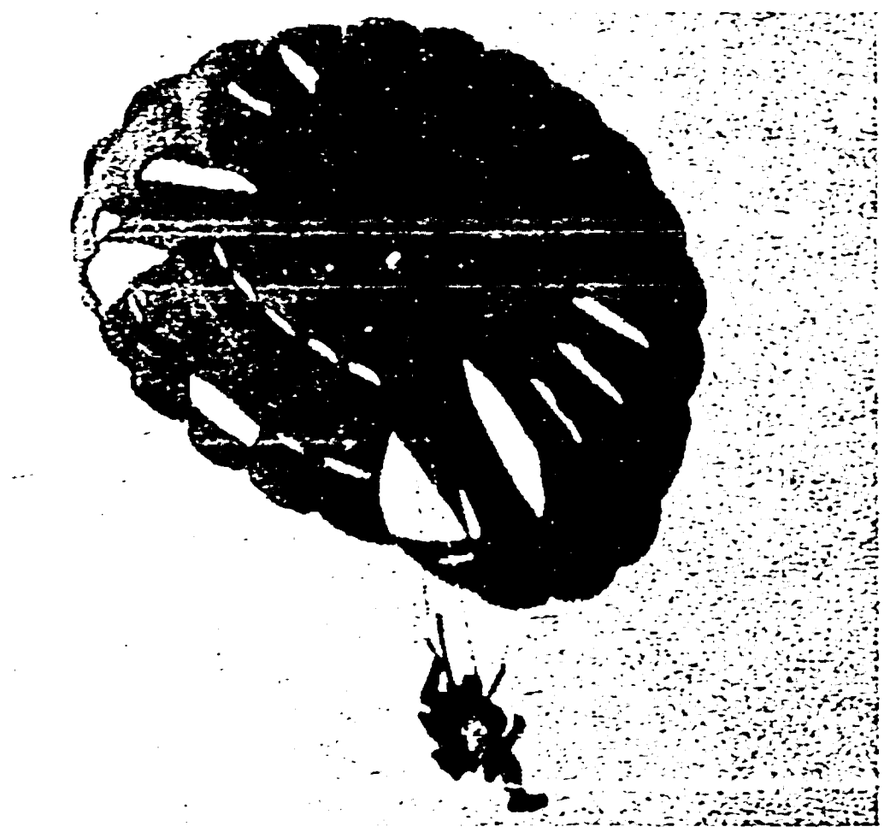
SU catcher John Unger hit the first homerun of the season yesterday, the game's only bright spot.

A kaleidoscope of color; that's the sky diving story

By DOUGLAS GARR

Pilots of the purple twilight, dropping down with costly bales. . .Tennyson.

These are the only lines of verse I could think of to describe the thrill of making my first parachute jump. My mind became a helpless void after making my first leap into space. The earth was simply breathtaking from 2,800 feet and the countryside looked like a kaleidoscope of color.



These were some of the emotions I felt after making my first jump last Saturday at the Green Sport Parachute Center some fifty miles south of Syracuse in Green, N.Y.

It all really began several months ago when I met Bill Smith, a parachute instructor. He had been needling me to try jumping and I kept stalling until I let my emotions get the better of myself last Friday.

On Friday night I took my date (who was also making her first jump) to Captain Mac's thinking that hoisting a few might get up my nerve. Actually I became more excited than nervous because the dream was soon to become a reality. I set my curfew at midnight and when I got in I called Bill to tell him I was really psyched about jumping. All he said was that it was as "easy as eating a piece of cake."

Of course I was more worried about preparing to jump than eating dessert but was certain I would go through with it. After all, 35,000 parachutists made 1½ million jumps last year.

We left early Saturday morning because each student making their first jump is required to have four hours of instruction. After signing my release I was ready to start my instruction. After signing my release I was ready to start my instruction. First, I watched the instructors pack the parachutes. I was taught how the equipment worked and what exactly occurs when the parachute opens.

A STEP INTO SPACE was taken by DO staffer, Doug Garr when he made his first parachute jump from a plane last Saturday. Garr's reactions can be found in the accompanying first-hand report.

The first five jumps any beginner makes, he must use a static line which is designed to open the parachute automatically.

Next, I was taught how to exit from the aircraft. I was told to count to five by thousands and if the main parachute malfunctioned by then I was to pull the reserve chute. (I only got to two before my parachute opened). After learning how to exit the aircraft, I was taught the parachute landing fall. This is done by jumping off a table no more than five feet high.

The final phase of my training was the simulation of falling by being hooked to the harness that extended from the ceiling. One of my instructors, Tom Granato, taught me how to release and put on my equipment in a matter of seconds and to prepare for any emergency that might occur in landing.

By now I was beginning to wonder in the back of my mind if I would be around Saturday night to write this story. I guess I felt more apprehension than fear because I had the utmost confidence in my instructor and equipment. Just then, my instructor bailed out at 8,000 feet and landed grinning like a kid after he hit a 4-inch disk dead center. Anyway, there were nine other SU students (including four girls) that landed safely before me.

I put on my jump suit, boots, flotation gear, main chute, reserve chute, and helmet. I was ready to go. I was very anxious to see if it was easier to jump out of a plane than to eat a piece of cake.

Up we went to 2,800 feet and Bill, now jumpmaster, told me to get ready when we neared the drop zone. When I was on the step and holding the strut, Bill yelled "Go!" over the noise of the engine and I was off. After landing safely I decided I'd rather spend my money sky diving than eating cake. I make jump number two day after tomorrow.

Where are the fans?

By IRA SILVERMAN

Ask any SU athlete about the home-court or home-field advantage at Syracuse and he will probably look at you as if you were crazy.

Simple facts demonstrate that fans just do not come out to Orange sporting events like they do at other schools. Many reasons have been presented for this lack of interest, and the unfortunate thing is that most of them are accurate.

Archbold Stadium is an antique. Although it is centrally located on campus, it still looks like it did when it was constructed in 1907. While it has the capacity to hold 41,731 spectators, many of the seats are located in such horrendous positions as to make viewing nearly impossible. And to top it all off, the students are perenially given the most out of the way seats in the place. Any wonder why the largest crowd of the season last year was just 37,367 against the then fourth-ranked UCLA Bruins?

In all, the varsity gridders attracted about 153,000 spectators, only three-fourths of capacity. When SU went on the road, however, things were different. Over 63,000 saw the Orange lose its opener at Michigan State, while nearly 53,000 more viewed the University of California's drubbing of Ben's Boys.

Things are not any better for the basketball team. Manley Field House is located a mile off campus, certainly a long walk on a snowy winter evening. The 8200-seat capacity came close to being filled only once last season, when Calvin Murphy and Niagara attracted almost 5900. But there were more empty seats than filled ones at the rest of the games, with only 29,000 fans attending the 10 home games. Surely this must hurt the team psychologically.

At the University of Kansas in mid December, for instance, the hoop team played before a full house of 18,500. Needless to say, it had a demoralizing effect on the squad. John Unger, who at that time was a reserve forward, expressed his teammates' observations when he said: "When the cheerleaders cheered, the whole place came alive and cheered. The team really misses that at home. That's why I feel that SU doesn't really have a home-court advantage." And that is from a native of the Salt City.

Now that the snow has finally melted, the baseball and lacrosse teams have come out of the woodwork. Or rather, the confines of the Field House. The lacrosse squad recently completed a spring trip to the midwest that yielded four victories in as many outings. The baseball team's trek south was less successful, as they managed only a win and a tie in four games. But each team appears to have both outstanding and exciting personnel, yet neither will draw more than a handful of fans. Why?

Partly, the problem once again is due to the inaccessability of the playing areas. Both the baseball diamond and the lacrosse field are located behind the Field House. Being "minor" sports, they naturally get less publicity than football or basketball. Yet Roy Simmons' stickmen were nationally ranked in the Top 10 last year, the only SU team to finish in ANY Top 10 in many years.

When the baseball team travelled to the University of Maryland, over 250 people turned out on a rainy day. And this was during the Terps' spring vacation. If more than 25 or 30 attend an Orange home game, it is probably because one of the starters has his whole family in the stands.

Maybe this year it will be different. With an up-and-coming baseball team and a nationally ranked lacrosse squad to attract Orange faithful, perhaps there will be more than a token showing of fans at each contest.

Hopefully, the fans will return to support the spring teams. Hopefully, you won't hear the same question uttered this year by an Orange athlete as one baseball player last year who looked at the empty seats and asked, "Where are the fans?"

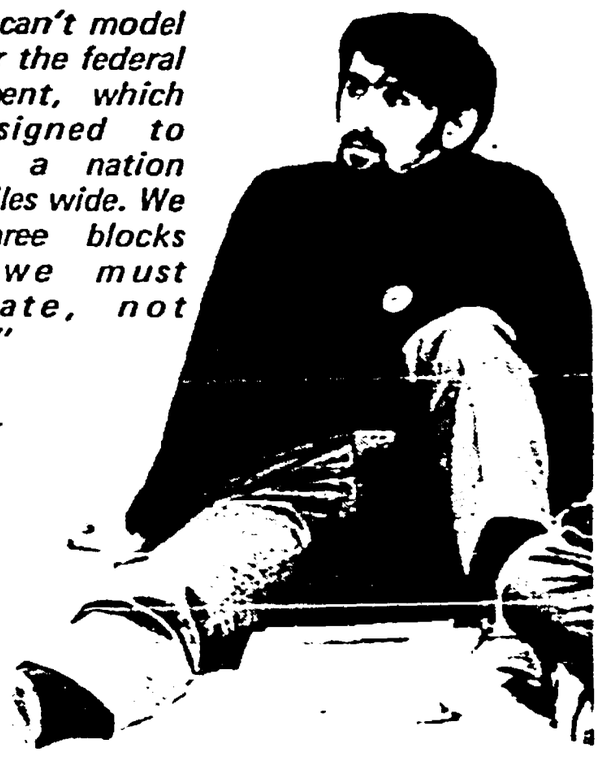
Ifshin wins presidency in Independent sweep

By VIC LIVINGSTON

7:41 p.m.: all was quiet in Sigma Nu, last night's temporary Ifshin headquarters. The Ifshin workers sat quietly, some pacing the floor, others involved in idle conversation, waiting for the first vote tally that could spell victory For David Ifshin.

Suddenly Jody Root, Ifshin's campaign manager, burst into the room---"we did it, Ifshin won!"

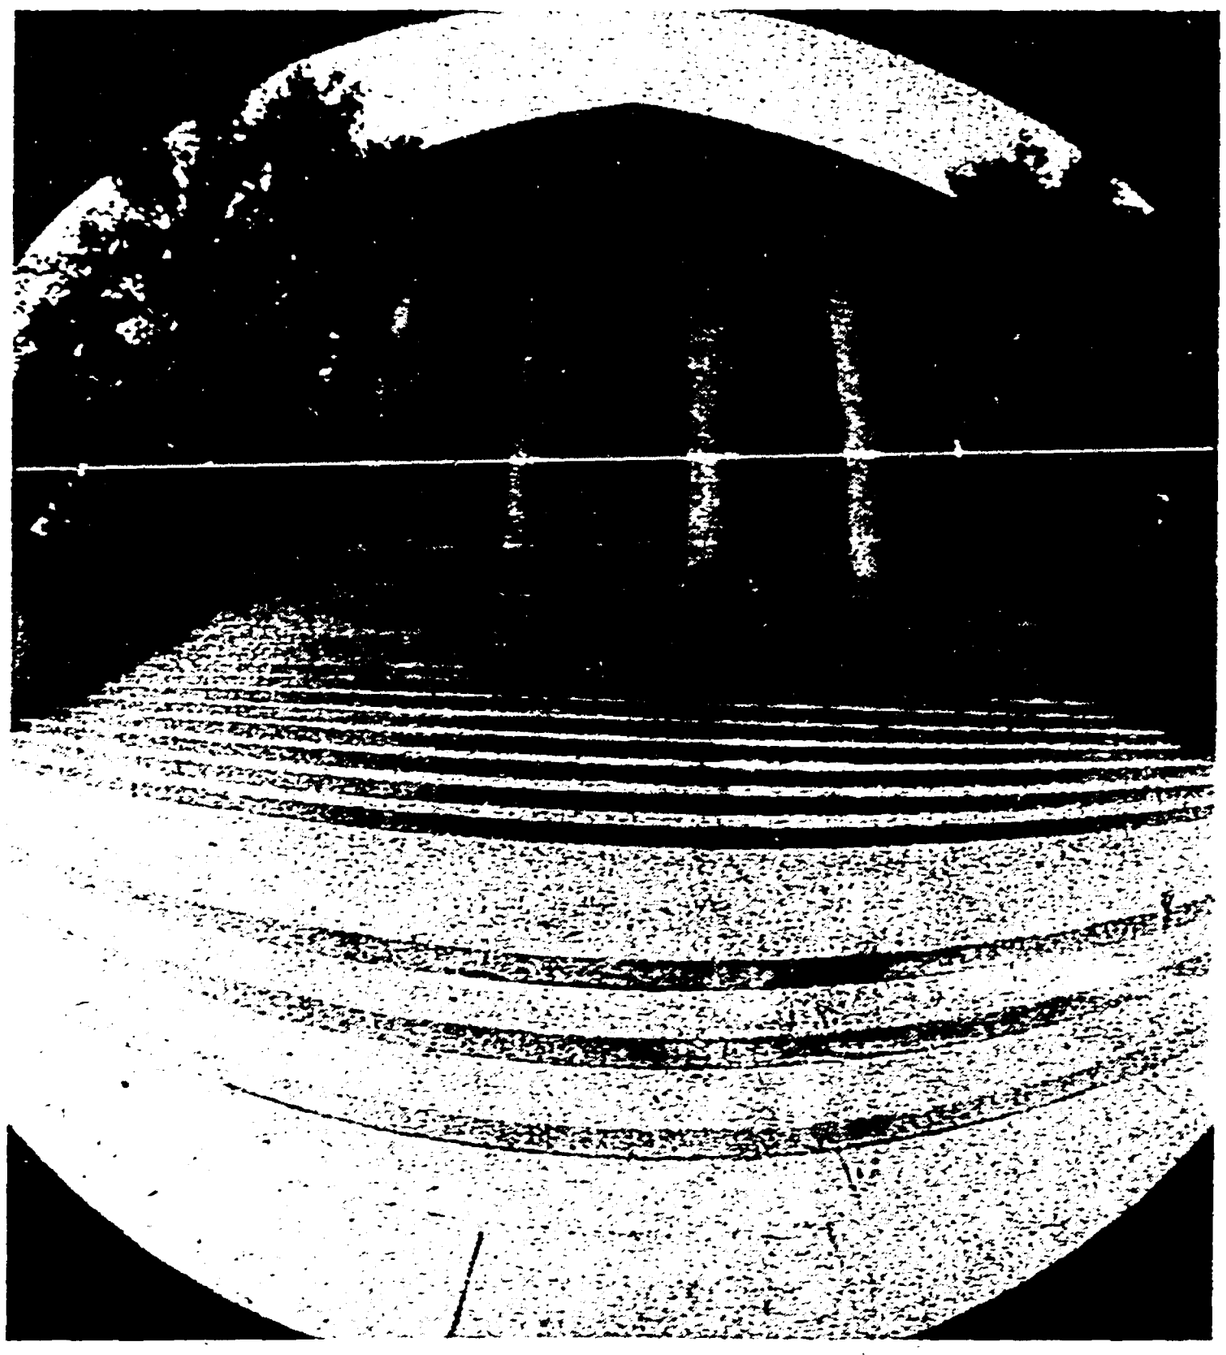
At first, the blissful shock stunned the faithful. Then, the dam broke and the bedlam that was to characterize Ifshin's victory celebration began. Hugging, kissing, anyone, everyone--they had done it. They had, in their words, beat the machine. They had overcome tremendous odds such as the endorsement of CAP Candidate Lou Jacobs by both the DO and the Pro. They had won a victory over the campus party system, and all agreed that things would never be quite the same in the tainted world of SU politics.



Ifshin won with 1630 votes to Jacob's 1192 votes. Independent candidates swept all other student government executive positions with Ed Barron defeating CAP's Joe Trepel, Jean Danziger beating Mary Daly, and Andy Rosenblatt edging Bob Connor.

"We all won, we are all SG presidents" the elated Ifshin screamed above the cheers of his party supporters. Even the victorious candidate was momentarily overcome by his stunning victory as he and his associates headed for St. Mary's.

What had done it? What were the events which led to Ifshin's triumph? "Everybody felt that I was a symbol--the people did it," Ifshin said upon arriving to greet his victorious running mate, Ed Barron. Another factor which weighed in the minds of the Ifshin people at this moment was demonstrated as Ifshin, catching the sight of yesterday's DO editorial hanging prominently on the wall, affixed his



(Continued on Page 15)

"We can't model SG after the federal government, which is designed to govern a nation 3000 miles wide. We are three blocks wide--we must innovate, not imitate."

Dave Ifshin
SG president
'69-'70

DAILY ORANGE
Syracuse University's Daily Newspaper Since 1903
Vol. 67, No. 90 Syracuse, New York, Friday, April 18, 1969 10 Cents

God is not dead

DESPITE ITS PARTY—SCHOOL image, Syracuse University actually has more students enrolled in religion courses than any other secular American university. This campus also boasts the largest Hillel and Newman Associations. For a look at how God is being kept alive here, please see page 2.

Student leaders talk 'revolution'

Victory celebration fosters autonomy meeting; page 14

James Meredith to speak Tuesday

Greek Week will feature integrationist lecturer; page 10

Religion at SU

'Play school of north' also pray school

By DIANE PLUCINNIK

Syracuse University, play school of the North, has more students enrolled in religion courses than any other secular American university. Syracuse University, home of the HBC hang-ers, has the largest Hillel and Newman Associations. Syracuse University, where God was first proclaimed dead, plans to build a larger Interfaith center.

"I think the announcement of God's death was a bit premature," smiles Rev. Dr. John H. McCombe Jr., dean of Hendricks Chapel. His annual report on "Religion on Campus" lists the ecumenical services, the community project, the exhibits and musicals that have made Hendricks Chapel, as he says, "a laboratory, not a museum."

Larger congregations now attend Sunday services on campus; over sixty volunteers carry Christian charity to Syracuse ghettoes; experimental services are held every month at Hendricks. God seems to have risen from the dead. The first question is "How?"

"We don't know if we're doing the right things or if we're headed in the right direction," says Dean McCombe, "but the important thing is that we are doing and being. Religion isn't belief in certain creeds. Religion is concerned with what we are and try to be."

Creative dissent

"At Hendricks we try to create a healthy dissatisfaction with the established Chruch. After all, dissent is really potential creation."

Hendricks Chapel, built in 1930, has a tradition of creativity and dissent. "Just by having different faiths worship under the same roof, we started an ecumenical spirit that was way ahead of its time," Dean McCombe notes. since then there have been Moslem, Hindu and Buddhist groups worshipping at the Chapel, as well as Protestants, Catholics and Jews.

Today Hendricks is being renovated "to express what we see religion to mean," as Dean McCombe explains. Seven new offices, two lounge areas and a new kitchen will provide students and clergy with a place to meditate and talk. However with fifteen campus ministries, neither Hendricks nor the Chapel House on Comstock Avenue can provide room enough for all faiths to organize, worship and relax under the same roof.

A new Chapel House, built on the west quadrangle, would house an interfaith chapel, a Roman Catholic chapel, seminar rooms, a Kosher kitchen, an auditorium, offices and a reading room. "There would be a greater sense of fellowship among students of different faiths if they shared the same building and facilities," Dean McCombe explains. The Chancellor and Cabinet have endorsed the building of the interfaith center as soon as possible. "But first," assures Dean McCombe, "the Student Union Building."

Although the various faiths on campus are physically separated, Dean McCombe describes the campus ecumenical movement as meaningful and moving. "There is a sense of openness among the clergy of different faiths, a greater sensitivity to the traditions and beliefs of each other. No one is surrendering his religious program, but each faith is interpreting itself to others. The result has been a greater respect for different religions."

Experimentation

One of the first ecumenical successes was "A Christmas Happening" staged December 10, 1967. Approximately 800 students made a torchlight pilgrimage to four symbolic sites: The Tower of Babel (Newhouse), The New Jerusalem (Site of new library), The Annuciation (Thornden Park Rose Garden) and Bethlehem (Thornden Park Amphitheater.)

The governing interfaith organization on campus is the University Religious Council, composed of two representatives and a chaplain from each of the fifteen organizations enrolled in the Chaplains' Council. Last fall a celebration of "All Men Under God" with seven religions participating was sponsored by URC as "an authentic heartbeat of faith."

Other experimental services held this year on the first Sunday of each month included a contemporary jazz setting for the celebration of Holy Communion, an interpretive dance of the "Sermon on the Mount," an all-music liturgy and a dialogue instead of a sermon.

Last fall the Chaplains' Council, co-operating with the Department of Religion and University College, sponsored a six-week program to provide local clergymen with information on the most recent academic developments. Meeting in all-day sessions every Tuesday, 35 clergymen participated in seminars in biology, physics, literature, law and political science, with university professors leading the discussions.

Other projects that the Chaplains' Council, headed by McCombe, has continued are Operation Link and Operation Volunteer. Film Forum, now independent, was begun by the United Campus Christian Fellowship. This year Chaplain Earl Schmiesing was appointed by the Council to serve married students by setting up Sunday schools, counselling clinics and social activities.

The Chapel Board meets this week to map out next year's projects and services. Dean McCombe promises that speakers, seminars and joint religious services will be included, as will art displays, poetry readings and musicals.

The Noble Room has already served as a display and conference room; next year every two weeks will mean a change of exhibits. "I think the trend has started this year," Dean McCombe observes. "Last Saturday we had the Black Art exhibit openning in the Noble Room with congo drums and a convocation while the Greek Orthodox students celebrated their Easter vigil upstairs."

From his office in the basement of Hendricks, Dean McCombe looks out at the mural by Harry Freeman expressing in bursts of form and color the concept of continuing creation. Continuing creation will be Hendricks Chapel's program for religion on campus.

"The function of religion is to teach people to dance," Dean McCombe says. "Christ is the Lord of the Dance; we must learn the basic rhythm. The cancer, the fear, the accidents, the pain is part of the pattern, but underneath is the pulse, is creation renewing itself, is God. Religion is our relation to creation and thus our source of joy. Syracuse University is trying to move with the beat."

"Canterbury Tales' is a lusty, joyous musical, acted uproariously by a merry cast."

—Brooks Atkinson

Hear the Merry Original Broadway Cast Album, now on Capitol!

Capitol Records

$3.49

S.U. Bookstores

S. Crouse & University

THE CORNER STORE

"Our Business is People"

YOUNG REPUBLICAN BEER BLAST

Friday April 18

8:00 P.M.

Marion Dorm Rec. Room

• Music •

• All the Beer you can drink •

Members – Free Guests – $1.00

ANGUS H. TWOMBLY — Editor-in-Chief

MANAGING EDITOR - Alan Stamm EXECUTIVE EDITOR - Karen Wiediger NEWS EDITOR - Fred Tuccillo EDITORIAL DIRECTOR - David A. Ross COPY EDITOR - Jean Havens FEATURE EDITOR - Roz Mazer SPORTS EDITOR - Mike Weber CAMPUS AFFAIRS EDITOR - Larry Kramer PHOTOGRAPHY EDITOR - Clint Clemens ASSOCIATE EDITORS - Andrij Bilyk, Kay Christensen, Beth Hillson, Rona Kavee, Helene Macdonald, Charles Shapiro, Dan Schlossberg, Patti Williams, Roni Ziokower.

DAILY ORANGE

Syracuse University's Daily Newspaper Since 1903

FRIDAY, APRIL 18, 1969 PAGE 3

STEVEN P. STROBRIDGE — Business Manager

ASSISTANT BUSINESS MANAGER— Art Depasqua, NATIONAL ADVERTISING MANAGER— Janet Meyer ACCOUNT EXECUTIVES— Roger Black, Jim Maney, Mike Greenstein.

Published Tuesday, through Friday during the academic year by students of Syracuse University. Offices located at 200 Brooklea Drive, Fayetteville, N.Y., and 1101 East Adams St., Syracuse, New York. Entered as Second Class matter at the U.S. Post Office, Fayetteville, N.Y. 13066.

Ten months

Last June, the only man who could have led America out of the darkness that still envelopes us was shot to death by an embittered Palestinian refugee. His untimely death was greatly mourned, but no one really cared enough to remember what he stood for. It seems, a mere 10 months after his murder, that he never existed at all. Where does America stand today?

An increasingly alienated student populace lies poised on the brink of revolution. The New York State Legislature has passed three obnoxious bills providing harsh punishment for student rebels with no room for compromise.

An over-zealous military created an ABM Frankenstein, and proceeded to stuff it down the throats of a war-weary Ameraican public. Meanwhile President Nixon, Mayor Daley and Lester Maddox roam the nation calling for "law and order," "decency," and an investigation of SDS.

Nixon's efforts to "bring us together" has all the trappings of an empty campaign promise, but the summer will tell. Black militancy is no longer the exception to the rule. It is, for many blacks, the only avenue uncluttered by white psuedo-liberals taking on "the white man's burden" for the sake of "humanity."

In short, America is on the critical list, festering from a wound inflicted last year.

Yesterday, Sirhan B. Sirhan was found guilty of first degree murder for the assassination of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy. He will be sentenced tomorrow.

Is he the only one guilty?

What's worth it?

John Arbuckle, while sifting coffee beans, used to say, "You get what you pay for." Unfortunately, this sage old euphimism does not apply to SU education. Next year, for example, the average SU student will pay an additional $150 per academic year. What will he receive in return?

For one thing he will not receive a union building or a new library. He will be granted, however, a dose of an archaic, assinine advising system, a large portion of huge, impersonal lectures, all manteled with a hopelessly intricate beaurocratic administration.

As always, there are two sides to the coin. Next year's lucky students will be able to bathe in the satisfaction that comes with the knowledge that things are improving. For instance, while vainly searching for a book, stumbling around in the bowels of Carnagie Library, he can pause and reflect on the fact that in 20 years, students will have a modern library with ample study space and accessible books. Also, while hanging at HBC and convening on the beach on Marshall Street, next year's feckless students can dream of "cabbages, kings, and the mythical union building."

The average SU student might wonder where his $50 student fee increase is going. "Was there a rise in the cost of my free football tickets," he might wonder, or "has the administration decided to cushion the reserved seats in Manley Field House?" More than likely it's a simple matter of stealing from Peter to pay Paul.

Granted, costs are riding in all over, and the university is in the red. Granted also that the administration must have some valid reason for the hike. Most of the immediate student needs, however, do not involve any unnecessary expenditures, and can be met even without the tuition and student fee hike.

We need more interested and interesting professors, a functional advising system, and more than just a promise of better times for future students. Is that too much to ask for $3400 a year?

Rumblings

The Council on Student Life today will receive the Chancellor's edict on dorm autonomy. Rumor has it that he will turn down the proposal, but our sources indicate that such a result will hardly be the end of the matter.

The students on CSL will be contacting dorm council leaders for a meeting on Sunday planned to discuss further action on the dorm autonomy issue. Tuesday night looks like the big night for St. Mary's, Watson and maybe Dellplain.

Meanwhile student action in other areas is helping to keep the SU momentum and psyche moving along. The student leaders that met with the force of administrators earlier this week are assembling packets of grievances and demands, most of which will be in the hands of the proper people sometime today.

The demands will range from academics, and student fee to dorm autonomy. Specifics will probably come out after the next meeting between the two groups. It's scheduled for Monday afternoon. It will be a closed meeting, but if you're not lucky enough to be in the group, don't worry. Hicks will probably hold another campus-side meeting sometime next week.

It's getting hot!

Nixon's not bad

If someone were to take a poll around campus, he would probably find that most students don't really like Richard Nixon as president. One wonders if there are sound reasons for this or if students are still bitter after supporting Robert Kennedy and Eugene McCarthy during the presidential campaigns.

Or perhaps disliking the President has simply become the "in" thing to do as a carry-over from the Johnson years.

Nevertheless, President Nixon should be judged fairly and realistically by the college community on what he does now, not on past attitudes.

The New York Times has never been known to have a warm spot in its heart for Richard Nixon. An example of this was on the front page of a recent edition where a small news item was developed into a mock criticism of the President.

The "Times" printed a picture of the President stooping to pick up a baseball that he dropped before throwing it to the players in the Washington ballpark to officially open the baseball season. The picture was accompanied with a story which jokingly told how the President made the first "error" of the season by dropping the ball.

Dennis Gburski

Certainly the criticism was in jest, but by citing such a minor point, "The New York Times" demonstrated that so far, Nixon has done little that he can actually be criticized for.

Someone may immediately answer that he hasn't done anything wrong yet because he hasn't really done anything at all. Others might say he is acting slowly and carefully on all matters so he can be sure of the right decisions. The "Times" itself, in that edition, praised by President for restraining his actions on the problem with Peru and the American oil companies until negotiators could have time to discuss it.

As students, we have to admit that Nixon has done some things that benefit us directly. He has refused to support the idea of federal intervention in the problems on university campuses. He has said the schools must be allowed to solve their own problems without being coerced by the government. Unfortunately, the New York State Legislature apparently does not feel the same way.

Also we cannot forget his plans to de-esclate the war in Vietnam by considering the removal of a large number of American troops by the end of the year. Through peace talks he is definitely trying to end the war as quickly as possible or at least reduce the American involvement.

Surely we remember the problems that Johnson left us and the chaos and disappointments of last year's conventions, but we must look at Nixon honestly even though he was not the students' choice for president. With that in mind, so far, he's really not that bad.

Selection revisited

EDITOR'S NOTE: The recent selection of a new chancellor and, more specifically, the procedure followed have been the subject of much discussion in recent weeks. Robert J. Wolfson is a Professor of Economics.

Now that a new Chancellor has been selected for Syracuse University I think it is appropriate to consider what has been accomplished, and to look at some of the factors which were involved in the process. All the evidence I have seen convinces me that Chancellor-elect Corbally is an excellent choice. While there are legitimate grounds for complaint as to some aspects of the procedure, I think it very important to take note of several things.

First, if the choice had been made by the Trustees alone, we are likely to have had an entirely different sort of result. There were many disquieting rumors afloat last fall. Had any of them turned out to be true we would now be facing a rather bleak prospect. It seems not unreasonable that the chances of those rumors coming true were substantially reduced, if not completely eliminated, by virtue of the involvement of responsible and energetic student and faculty committees in the selection process.

More than that, however, one must consider that the question of student and faculty involvement in this process became a live issue after some events of last spring. Had the episode in the Administration Building in March 1968, and surrounding events (or something very much like them) not occurred it is likely that requests for meaningful faculty and student involvement in the selection of a Chancellor would not have been honored.

There are several conclusions to which I come, and I know that they are shared by a number of people. First, we are in debt to the three committees: to the student and faculty committees for their effective work in identifying and evaluating candidates, and in influencing the trustee committee both as to procedure and candidates; to the trustee committee for an open minded approach to the task, and for conveying their broadened views successfully to the entire Board of Trustees. Finally, and of paramount importance in my view, is our debt to those students who, after finding organizational channels unresponsive to them in regard to matters of great moral significance, engaged in brief and measured peaceful demonstration in order to bring their concerns to the attention of the University community, and thereby stiffened the spines of the faculty and the larger student body. That the Administration exercised some restraint in the whole affair was fortunate, but it was the actions of those students who demonstrated which led, in a clear and direct line, to the choice of John Corbally rather than another whose appointment would have been far less satisfactory.

Robert J. Wolfson

YESTERDAY'S EDITORIAL endorsing Lou Jacobs for SG president was written by Daily Orange Editor-in-chief Angus H. Twombly.

ABM poses more problems than solutions

By LEW HOWELL

The anti-ballistic missile system that has been proposed for the U.S. has received extensive attention in the press during recent months, mostly of a negative sort. Yet the administration of Richard Nixon has come out in favor of the ABM system's deployment. Why?

The case against the ABM has every appearance of being a strong one. A number of scientists have testified that the system, even when fully deployed, probably will be unable to stop a significiant proportion of the incoming missiles in a full Soviet attack. Thirty to forty million Americans might still be killed, despite the ABM. No scientists have testified in favor of the system's effectiveness.

The administration arguments don't seem to make much sense with regard to why we need ABM, even if it did work. There isn't any validity in saying the ABM will protect our retaliatory capability, since that rests primarily with Polaris submarines--which certainly won't be protected by ABM's in North Dakota.

If it is simply retaliation we're concerned with, retaliation can begin from even another land base in the time period after one mssile hits and before another does. Not all Russian missiles can hit simultaneously.

Time may be a factor, it is argued, if the enemy's firing has been accidental. But if we are concerned with accidental firings, we unquestionably will have to deploy an ABM system which protects the entire country, not just two missile sites. Cost? $100 billion, perhaps, for an effective system. And should we be able to destroy a single incoming missile, whether from Russia or China, of course it will be an "accidental" firing in their contention. How do we determine otherwise? No one has ventured to answer that question.

Assume, however, that the Russians were keenly interested in wiping the U.S. off the face of the earth, as Secretary of Defense Laird patriotically contends, and then we deploy our $100 billion ABM system that protects every nook and cranny. If the Russians' intentions are as Laird contends, the Russians can then simply dispatch as many bombs as they wish by means of orbital firings rather than sub-orbital, which, it was indicated in 1967, they are already technologically capable of doing. Treaties on the uses of space will mean little if the Russians really intend to destroy us. The Chinese will not even have to worry about the treaty. If bombs come directly down on the U.S. from orbit, any explosions attempting to stop them--if that is still possible considering trajectory, speed, etc.--will take place immediately over the U.S. And that can do as much damage as a strike on the ground.

What are the facts then? First, if the Russians really wish to destroy the U.S., they can--with or without a fully deployed American ABM system. Secondly, the ABM is not needed to preserve a retaliatory capacity. Thus, the Russians would be unable to halt U.S. retaliation of great intensity. The only roadblcok, then, to Russian attack is their own good sense--to us this represents deterrence. Thirdly, the only real protection that the ABM might provide would be in case of an accidental firing. But it will be virtually impossible to determine whether or not a firing is accidental, and the ABM system as proposed by President Nixon only protects against accidental firing towards two specific non-urban areas. To protect people from accidental missile attack by means of ABM may entail destroying the U.S. economy because of its exorbitant cost.

The whole argument for the ABM by the administration leaves one with the feeling that Drew Pearson's allegations about the ABM lobby representing defense contrators are correct. Or perhaps the SANE advertisement and cartoon captioned: "From the people who brought you Vietnam: the Anti-Ballistic Missile System."

Jade East After Shave from $3.00. Cologne from $3.50, and a complete collection of masculine grooming essentials. As an alternate fragrance, try Jade East Coral and Jade East Golden Lime. SWANK, INC.—Sole Distributor

LATIN AMERICAN INSTITUTE

BILINGUAL SECRETARIAL

Spanish—English and French—English

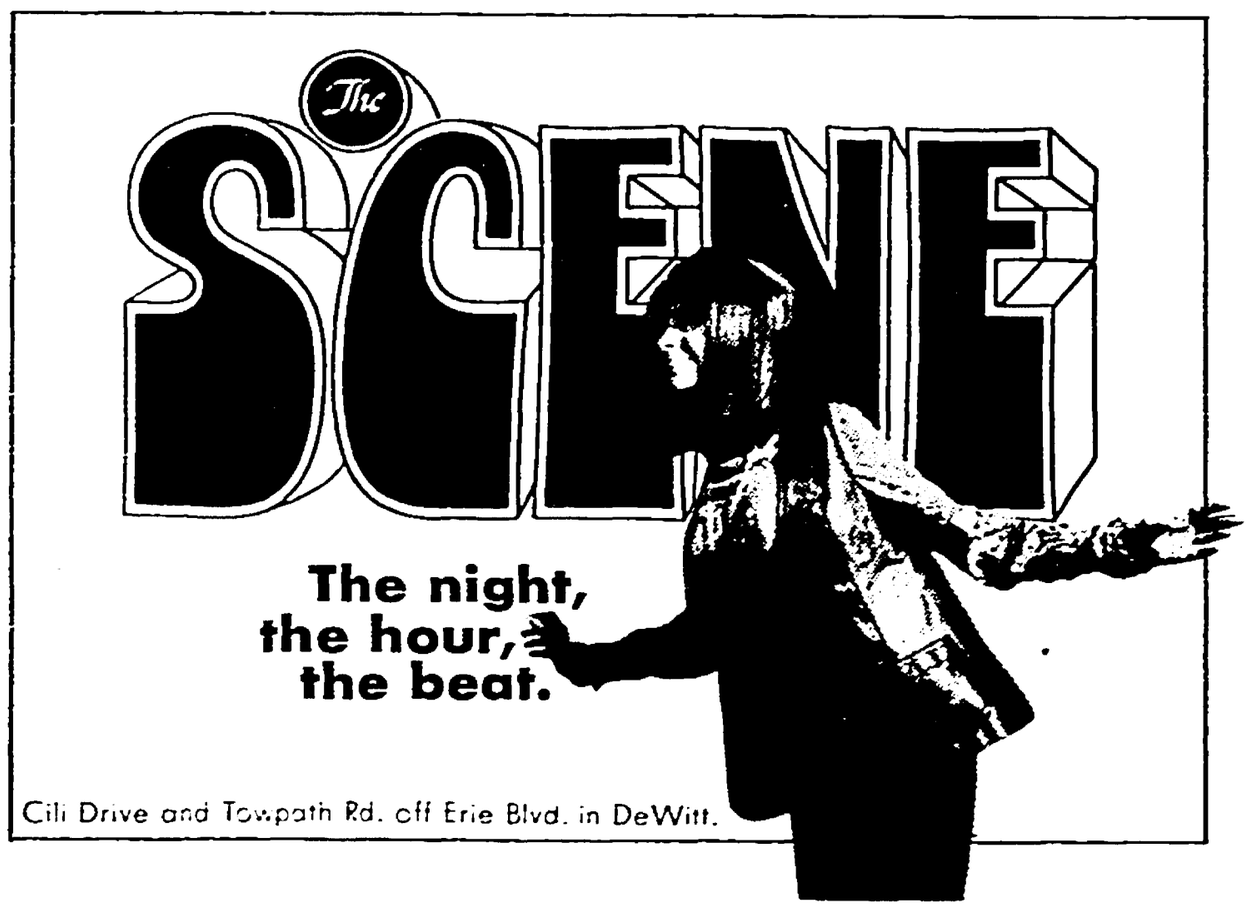
Two or three semester programs. Begin in January, June or September. Also part time courses during the day or in the evening.

Modern air-conditioned classrooms. Nationally accredited by A.C.B.S. Residences recommended. Placement service for graduates.

Room 35, 292 Madison Ave.
(at 41st St.)
New York, N.Y. 10017
Phone:
(212) LE 2-6073

WOLF & MARKVI Present the RASCALS



FRIDAY NITE, APRIL 18, 8 P.M.
at the
Onondaga War Memorial
Tickets — $4, $5, $6

Mail orders now accepted at box office. Tickets on sale April 1st at: The Record Runner, S U Corner Store, Wilson's Leading Jewelers and War Memorial.

$2.69 !! SPEAKS FOR ITSELF

(PER LP)

Record Runner
177 M[illegible] St.
Under 7 HR. Cleaners

Cili Drive and Towpath Rd. off Erie Blvd. in DeWitt.

Don't forget Mini-Monday.
Admission: $1 for Guys
FREE admission to mini-skirted girls.
Prize of $25 for the girl in the best mini-skirt.

Sing Along With
JANE and JOHN SNELL
on the Guitar
Folk Songs Every
Friday and Saturday
9 P.M. — 2 A.M.

HACKNEY HOUSE

646 South Warren
HA 2-0341
LUNCHEON, DINNER and SUPPER

State Department

Distinguished visitors here today

MICHAEL STERNER
U.S. Ambassador to Bolivia

Four members of the U.S. State Department, including the former U.S. Ambassador to Bolivia, will visit Syracuse University today. Three public lecture and discussion groups are scheduled and members of the team will meet with some regular classes during the day.

The guests are Douglas Henderson, who was U.S. Ambassador to Bolivia from 1963 to 1968 and is now consultant to the State Policy Planning Council; Ralph Jans, a member of the Public Affairs Division of the State Department for East Asian Affairs: James L. Carson, Deputy Country Director for Canadian Affairs in the Bureau of European Affairs, and Michael Sterner, Political Officer for Israel and Arab-Israel Affairs in the State Department's Bureau of Near Eastern and South Asian Affairs.

Henderson, Carson and Jans will speak at a panel discussion on American foreign policy sponsored by the Citizenship and Public Affairs program at 3 p.m. in Room 207 Grant Auditorium.

Sterner will discuss the Arab-Israeli conflict at 3 p.m. at the International Student Center, 230 Euclid Ave., under the sponsorship of the political science department.

At 4 p.m. the political science department will sponsor a lecture by Henderson on Latin American politics at the Latin American Studies Center, 135 Stadium Place.

During their visit the four State Department officials will meet formally with graduate students and faculty members.

FCC attorney will address students here

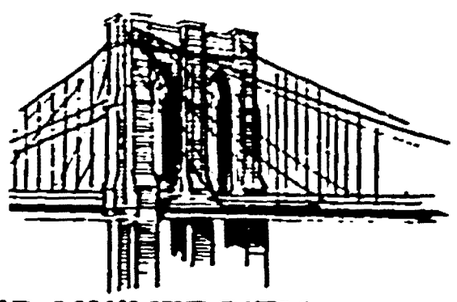
Henry Geller, General Counsel of the Federal Communications Commission, will address graduate students in Syracuse University's television-radio department Monday and Tuesday. His appearance is part of the department's guest professor series.

Geller has served as an attorney adviser in the FCC's Broadcast Bureau and as a trial attorney in the Office of General Counsel. In 1961 he was appointed Associate General Counsel and the following year became Deputy General Counsel. He has held his present position since 1964.

Geller will be speaking from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Monday in the Founders Room of the Maxwell School and from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. Tuesday in A-1 of the Newhouse Communications Center and from 2 to 3:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Penthouse of Lawrinson Hall.

SUMMER IS FOR LEARNING TOO

Study this summer at The Brooklyn Center of Long Island University. It's the smart thing to do.



More than 400 undergraduate and graduate sections will be offered in two sessions:

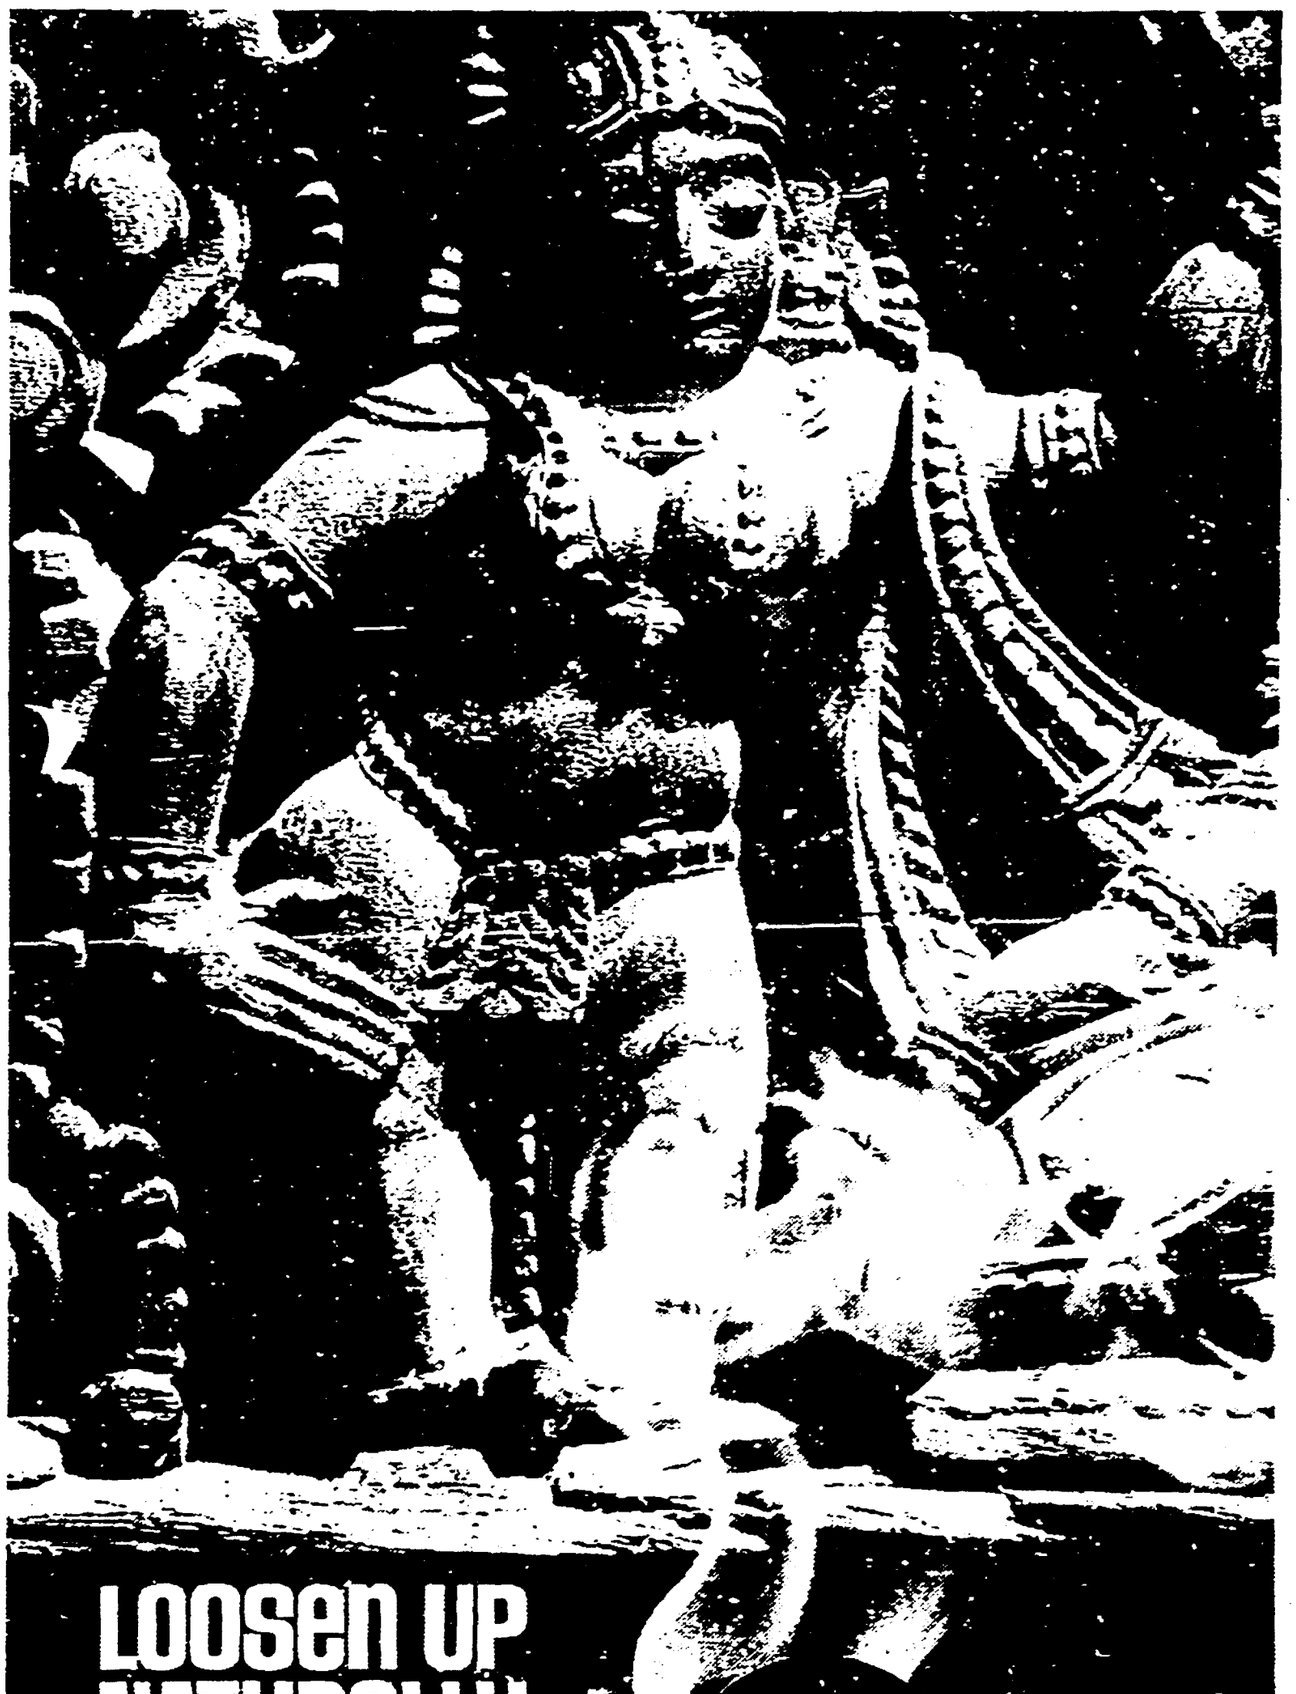
JUNE 9 to JULY 17 and
JULY 21 to AUGUST 28

Course content for each six-week session is the same as during the regular academic year. Visiting students are welcome; credits are transferable to most other accredited colleges and universities.

The Brooklyn Center is located just across the East River from lower Manhattan — only minutes, by subway or car, from Times Square, Rockefeller Center, Broadway and Off-Broadway theatres, museums, libraries, and other places of interest in the metropolitan area which help make life at this urban campus stimulating and rewarding.

On-campus dormitory accommodations are available. All classrooms are air-conditioned.

THE BROOKLYN CENTER
LONG ISLAND UNIVERSITY
Brooklyn, N.Y. 11201 • (212) UL 2-5603



Director of Admissions—The Summer Sessions
Long Island University, The Brooklyn Center
Brooklyn, New York 11201
Please send summer catalog and schedule of courses.

Name_____

Address_____

City, State, & Zip Code_____

College_____

LOOSEN UP NATURALLY
with
THE SONS OF CHAMPLIN

their first album—so much to say it took 2 LP's
(but it's priced like one)...on records...on tape...on Capitol.

The Rascals

The "Rascals" will be performing tonight at 8 p.m. in the War Memorial. Tickets are on sale at the Record Runner, S.U. Corner Store, Wilson's Jewelers, and the War Memorial. They cost $4, $5 and 4

Talks on race, ABM

Nickerson speaking Monday

Nassau County Executive Eugene H. Nickerson, who unsuccessfully sought the Democratic nomination for United States Senator in 1968, will come to campus Monday to speak with two separate groups on the topics of suburban race relations and the anti-ballistic missle system.

Nickerson will lecture for the Black and White in American course at 8:15 p.m. in Maxwell Auditorium on "The Black Influx into Suburbia."

Earlier in the day he will speak on the ABM controversy in the Founders Room of Maxwell. Sponsored by the Maxwell Graduate Students Association, the discussion will begin at 4 p.m.

A strong supporter of the late Robert F. Kennedy, Nickerson received the State Democratic Committee's designation to oppose Republican Sen. Jacob K. Javits in the 1968 election. He was challenged in the primary, however, by Paul O'Dwyer, who got on the ballot by petition, and Rep. Joseph Resnick, who got on the ballot by receiving 25 per cent of the State Committee vote.

Nickerson and O'Dwyer, a backer of Sen. Eugene McCarthy's presidential bid, both attacked the Johnson administration's Viet Nam policy while Resnick defended it. O'Dwyer narrowly defeated Nickerson in the primary and went on to be defeated by Javits in November.

The 50-year-old chief administrator of New York State's largest suburban county is considered to be a potential candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor in 1970.

Nickerson has played a leading role in the fight for increased state aid for school districts. He has been severely critical of Governor Nelson A. Rockefeller's fiscal policies, which he regards as adding to, rather than subracting from, the state's fiscal problems.

EUGENE NICKERSON

"I recognize that it is not sufficient for government to go along from day to day, content to ward off each small, temporary crisis, and avoiding the hard decisions," Nickerson has said. "It is not the function of responsible government to 'play it safe'."

The student instructors in the Black and White in America course will host a dinner for the county executive before Monday night's lecture.

The professionals

It's more than their way of talking and walking and working that makes Mount Sinai nurses stand out as true professionals. What makes them the elite of their field is an over-all natural sense of pride and pleasure in their work, plus the fact that they are treated as professionals from their very first day.

For one thing, we make sure that you know your way around the hospital and your service by giving you a thorough orientation. Then we offer you the type of nursing experience you want, whether diversified or specialized, and encourage your advancement through in-service education as well as tuition refund plans for undergraduate and graduate study. There are many other benefits too, all of which add up to career satisfaction and bring you that special pride and pleasure in your work.

You can join the elite at Mount Sinai and become one of our professionals. Send today for our brochure about nursing at Mount Sinai.

THE MOUNT SINAI
MEDICAL CENTER OF NEW YORK

Personnel Administrator—Professional Nursing
THE MOUNT SINAI
MEDICAL CENTER OF NEW YORK
Fifth Ave. and 100th St. New York, N. Y. 10029

Please send me your brochure about nursing at The Mount Sinai Medical Center of New York.

NAME _____

ADDRESS _____

CITY _____ STATE _____

ALSO
The Butterfield Blues Band
Friday — May 2 — 8:30 p.m.
Onondaga War Memorial
Tickets now on sale at War Memorial Box Office, S. U. Corner Store, Wilson's Leading Jewelers.
$5.50, $4.50, $3.50

Summer Language Institute

FRENCH
GERMAN RUSSIAN
SPANISH

June 23 - August 18, 1969

University of California
Santa Cruz

Living - learning language programs for beginning and intermediate students. Intensive eight-week summer sessions in residence at Cowell College, UCSC. Live-in native speakers. 15 units University credit offered. Financial aid available.

Application deadline: May 1st

Cost: $622 all inclusive for further information, please write:

Coordinator, Ben T. Clark, Summer Language Institute; UCSC; Santa Cruz, California 95060

Edgar Daniels

Actor prefers Syracuse repertory atmosphere to Broadway

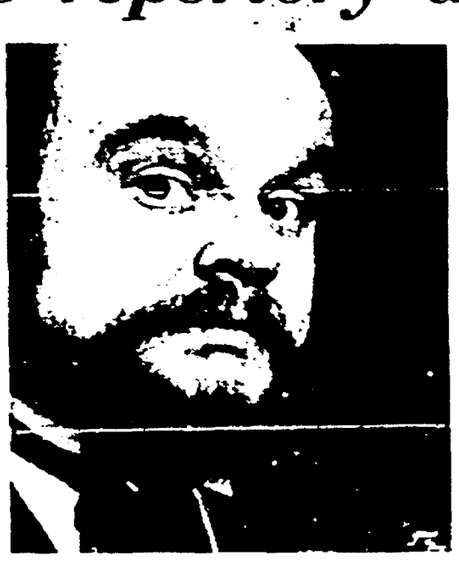
By PATTI WILLIAMS
Associate Editor

There are roles actors can play in Syracuse that they can't play on Broadway, according to Edgar Daniels, a Broadway actor who is with the Syracuse Repertory Theater this season. Daniels said he turned down a part in a New York hit to come to Syracuse.

"Broadway is geared for commerical success," said the actor who has been in such Broadway plays as "Man For All Seasons" and "Baker Street." "The type of person who goes to the theater on Broadway does not want to have to think. He wants to see musicals and light entertainment.

"Here (in Syracuse) it's a different matter. You come here for the chance to do plays for your own good. I find work with repertory theater to be invigorating and mentally exciting."

Wearing a beige turtleneck sweater and a checkered beret, Daniels admitted that he makes more money and has more time in which to rehearse on Broadway. Yet, he does not regret coming here.



"You make a choice and you must live by that decision," the bearded actor said as his pale blue eyes stared intently through the thick lenses of his glasses. "Life is made up of decisions."

In addition to his Broadway work, Daniels was also a member of the Lincoln Center Repertory Company in New York. He said the two years he spent with the company were "a waste." According to him, the group was run by "bankers and lawyers" who did only established hits and refused to experiment with new plays or shows that were failures.

This season, the actor had major roles in four of the five productions of the Syracuse Repertory Theater including the current comedy, "The Lady's Not For Burning." Daniels' favorite play this season was Harold Pinter's "The Homecoming." One of the challenges of that play for an actor, according to Daniels, is the many long pauses Pinter wrote into the script. He said the actor must have the courage to play these silences.

"The meaning of the play is not in the words, it lies beneath the words in what we call the sub-text," Daniels said. "It's what's going on in the background of these people, what they're thinking. The play takes total concentration."

The role Daniels is now playing will be his final part this season with the Syracuse Repertory Theater. He has a comic part in the Christopher Fry play "The Lady's Not For Burning," which is about a man who wants to be hanged and who condequently falls in love with a girl accused of being a witch.

EDGAR DANIELS

"It's a beautiful play that glorifies the English language like nothing else since Shaw," Daniels said in his polished, precise manner.

As Daniels spoke, he fingered the leash of his Welsh terrior named Gus. Gus, who is with Daniels almost constantly, was given to the actor by the man who translated the version of "Threepenny Opera" that the Syracuse Repertory Theater presented this year.

For an actor, Daniels' education was somewhat unusual. He received a masters degree in drama from Columbia University. Daniels regards a college education as something an unsuccessful actor can use to support himself.

"But we're also going into a period of very intellectual plays and more complicated plays, such as 'Marat Sade,'" the actor said. "You have to know what you're talking about up on that stage."

At Columbia, where he worked on both his bachelors and his masters, Daniels said he devoted his full time to study. One of his complaints about the numerous New York acting schools is that they allow their students to work in outside productions. Thus they cannot devote their full time and energy to study. That is not the only flaw of such schools, however, Daniels said.

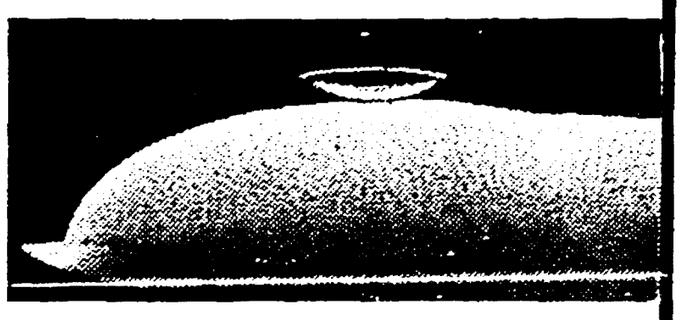
"In New York acting schools, you get up in front of a group and display yourself," he said as he frowned. "Many New York actors can't do anything but five minutes scenes because that's all they do in class."

When Daniels embarked upon his acting career, he encountered strong family opposition. His grandfather founded a newspaper in North Carolina and his uncle was a successful biographer. Thus his family expected him to enter the newspaper business. In fact, when Daniels was in boarding school, he was forbidden to be in play because it interfered with his studies. The actor smilingly said that he was in a few school plays anyway.

In spite of his family Daniels perservered and after receiving his masters became a guest artist with the Columbia University drama department. He was then given a small part in a Broadway show with Gwen Verdon which launched his career. Since then, he has played major roles in such Broadway plays as "A Man For All Seasons" and "Hostile Witness."

Pocket Coffee! What's that?

A new kind of coffee break for the man on the move.



The man who dreamed up Pocket Coffee figured there were probably a lot of people around who at one time or another couldn't take a coffee break when they needed one. The only way they could get their coffee was to carry it with them.

Eureka! He thought up a way of putting some real brewed liquid coffee inside a delicious chocolate shell.

He called it Pocket Coffee because it's the coffee break you can carry with you in your pocket or purse, even your glove compartment. Glove Coffee????

Give your contact lenses a bath tonight

In order to keep your contact lenses as comfortable and convenient as they were meant to be, you have to take care of them. But until now you needed two or more separate solutions to properly prepare and maintain your contacts. Not with Lensine. Lensine is the one lens solution for complete contact lens care.

Cleaning your contacts with Lensine retards the buildup of foreign deposits on the lenses. And soaking your contacts in Lensine overnight assures you of proper lens hygiene. You get a free soaking case on the bottom of every bottle of Lensine.

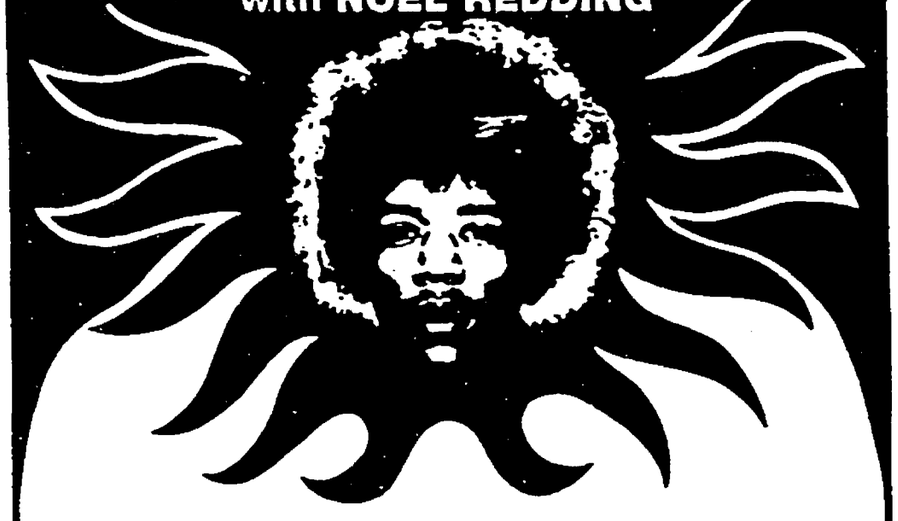
It has been demonstrated that improper storage between wearings may result in the growth of bacteria on the lenses. This is a sure cause of eye irritation and in some cases can endanger your vision. Bacteria cannot grow in Lensine which is sterile, self-sanitizing, and antiseptic.

Just a drop or two of Lensine, before you insert your lens, coats and lubricates it allowing the lens to float more freely in the eye's fluids. That's because Lensine is an "isotonic" solution, which means that it blends with the natural fluids of the eye.

Let your contacts be the convenience they were meant to be. Get some Lensine, from the Murine Company, Inc.

SOMETHING NEW !

HACKNEY HOUSE



COFFEE SHOP

Ice Cream Bar And Sandwich Shop
Open 7 A.M. to 7 P.M.
646 South Warren
HA 2-0341

SYRACUSE
WAR MEMORIAL AUDITORIUM
SUNDAY, MAY 4, 1969
One show only at 7:30 P.M.

CORA PROMOTIONS PRESENTS

the JIMI HENDRIX EXPERIENCE
with NOEL REDDING

Tickets: $4, $5, $6.

MAIL ORDERS ONLY!
Please enclose self-addressed envelope, make check payable to, and mail to Syracuse War Memorial Auditorium, 515 Montgomery Street, Syracuse, New York 13202.

For information call (315) 477-7481.

Future of CAP in doubt despite large 'victory'

In spite of the biggest CAP victory in history yesterday, where CAP won all but the SG slate and one office in the sophomore slate, the future of the party is in doubt.

Party regulars say that CAP will continue to exist as long as there are offices to fill.

Party regulars say that CAP will continue to exist as long as there are offices to fill. "We are stronger than ever before. Nothing can break us up."

Other cite the change in ideology of the university. "The Greeks alone can not win an SG election. The name of CAP will always be associated with the Greek system. The party may exist in the future, but only under a new name."

"The people who ran CAP and the elections this year are all students or grad students," said a CAP member. "It is a great mistake to confuse the change of ideology with the demise of CAP. The party will die because there are no new leaders rising up from the party organization. Sure we have successful class officers, but they can't hold office in the party. There is no one else. Never again will CAP nominate candidates for an election."

Other CAP members made note of winning candidate Ifshin's promise to eliminate class government. "If class governments are eliminated, there will no longer be reason for a number of Greek houses to be an alliance. There simply is no way Greek houses can stay together ideologically. There won't be enough offices to satisfy all the houses if Ifshin eliminates class government."

One member of CAP called it "ridiculous for Ifshin to consider eliminating the class governments. There is no way he can do that. I would like to see him try."

Lou Jacobs, losing candidate for SG president on the CAP slate, was curious to see how well Ifshin would do running class government. He feels that many of Ifshin's ideas are wrong and that he will be unable to adequately govern the university.

MG AUSTIN HEALEY

Jaguar
SALES & SERVICE

also

Largest Selection in the East of Used Convertibles--Hard Tops Corvettes-Sports Cars

6 Factory Trained Import Mechanics waiting to serve you. Over $100,000 in parts and accessories in inventory.

Revelle Motors, Inc.

800 W. Genesee Street
Sales GR 4-1009 Parts & Service GR 9-9544

THE SEVEN ARE YOU READY

One night only . . .
Saturday the 19th, 9 to 1, at The Scotch and Stein, in the Eastwood Shopping Plaza. You won't believe your ears . . . The magnificent sounds of The Seven.

Coeds vie for Greek Week Queen title

By KAY CHRISTENSEN
Associate Editor

Five finalists for the Greek Week Queen contest have been determined this week through a series of judging parties. The queen will be announced Monday night at Hendricks Chapel, at the conclusion of the traditional Torch Run which initiates Greek Week festivities.

Traditionally, however, the Greek Week Queen has been crowned at Friday night's semi-formal dance.

"It was changed to Monday night so the queen could then reign over the entire week," explained Sandy Walters, chairman of the queen contest.

The finalists are:

Nancy Abrams, sponsored by Alpha Epsilon Phi, is a freshman journalism student who aspires to be a sports writer. She is from Tenafly, New Jersey.

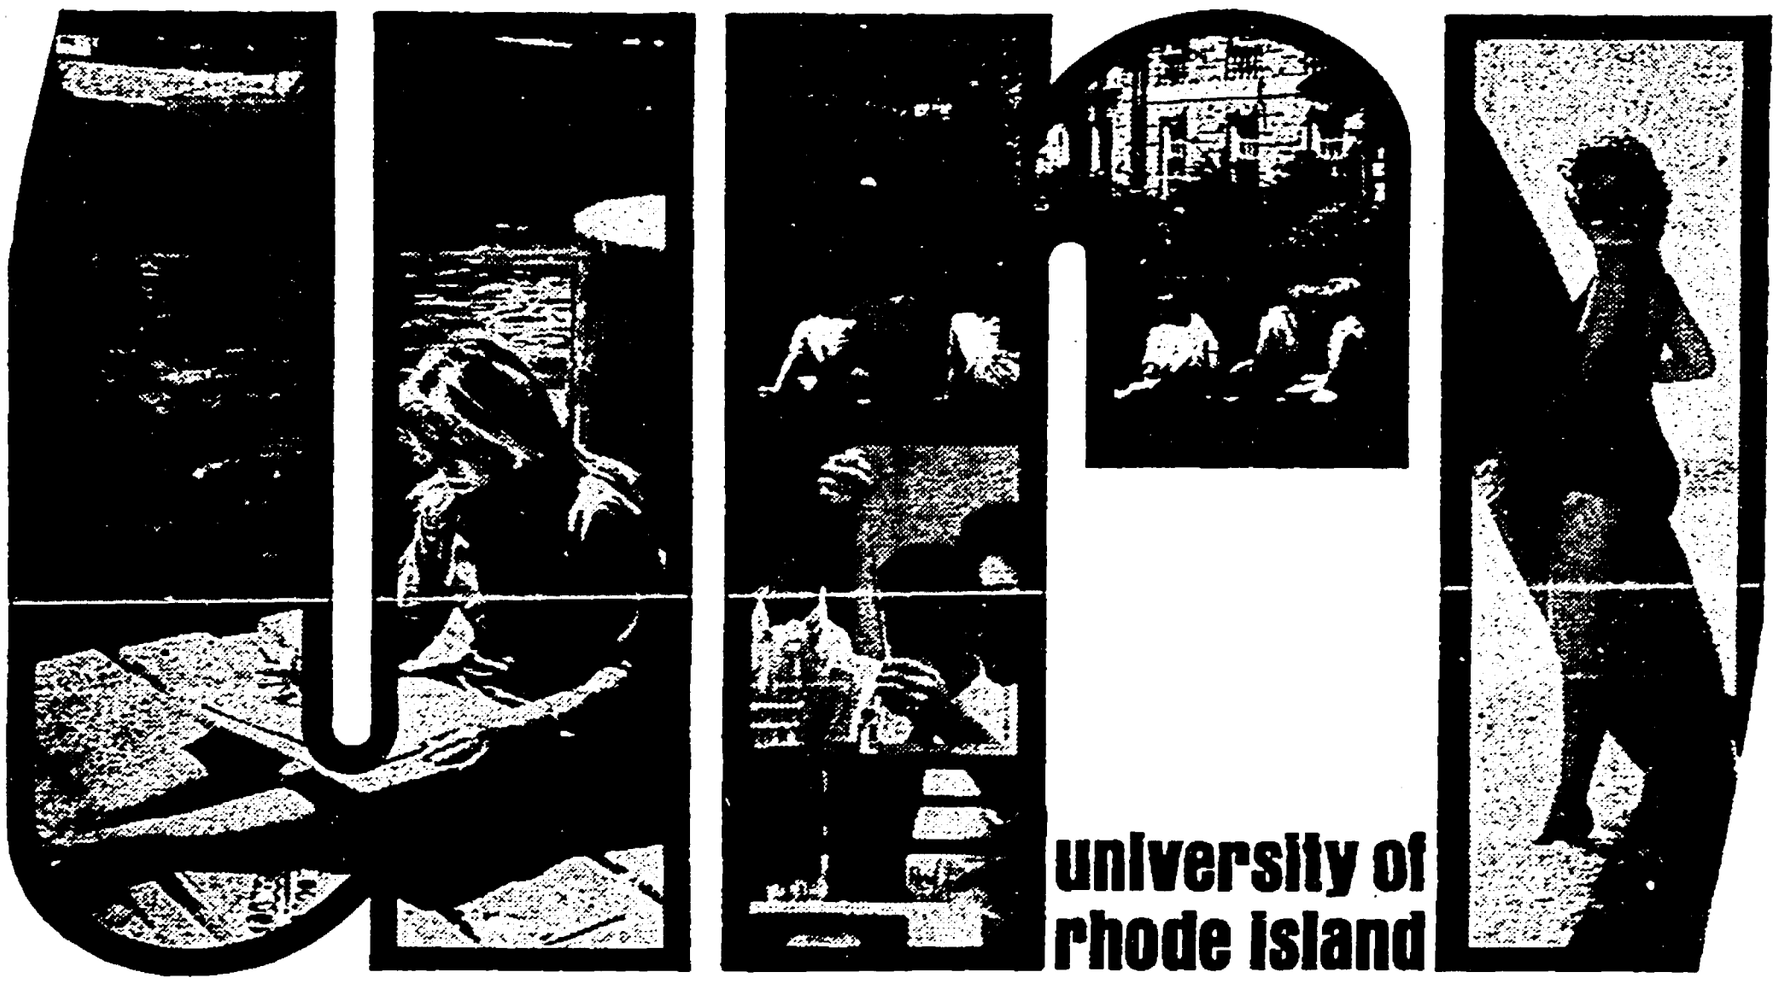
Sophomore Laurie Baum is an elementary education major from Syracuse. Her sorority, Gamma Phi Beta, is sponsoring her. Her activities include Operation Volunteer.

Trudy Cooke, sponsored by Alpha Phi, is a freshman Spanish major. She is from Cedar Knolls, New Jersey and participates in Hendricks Chapel Choir.

Another freshman journalism student is Jackie Masson, sponsored by Delta Gamma. The Long Island co-ed is a member of the freshman executive council and has just become a member of the Goon Squad.

The fifth finalist is Daria Vance, a junior zoology major. Sponsored by Kappa Alpha Theta, she is from Akron, Ohio.

Greek Week chairmen Art Buckland, Joe Nicoletti and Joan Wagner ha.. planned activities throughout the week. The convocation begins at Hendricks Chapel at 7 r ... with Dr. Michael O. Sawyer giving the opening address. It is during this convocation that the queen will be crowned and various awards will be given. Both the Hilton Cup and the Tolley Cup will be presented to designate the outstanding sorority and fraternity for the year.



There will be a coffee hour with Chancellor Tolley at Lawrinson Penthouse at 3 p.m. on Tuesday. James Meredith, the first Negro to enter the University of Mississippi, will speak in the evening.

GREEK WEEK QUEEN FINALISTS (left to right) are Daria Vance, Laurie Baum, Nancy Abrams, Jackie Masson, Trudy Cooke. The winner will be announced Monday night. (Photo by Clemens).

uptight?
cool it this summer at university of rhode island

COMBINE summer study with summer fun. URI is where it's happening —outdoor classes under cool shade trees, distinguished resident and visiting faculty, the finest ocean beaches in the Northeast just minutes away, groovy folk and jazz festivals at nearby Newport, concerts, feature films, dances, sports, lecture series and other special attractions.

CHOOSE from 200 morning and evening courses in each term, beginning June 16 and July 24. EARN up to 14 semester hours of credit by attending both terms. COMPLETE up to 2 yrs. of French or Italian in 11 weeks by attending our accelerated language sessions.

COST — $20 per credit hour for most courses plus $10 registration fee for Rhode Island residents and $20 for out of state residents.

Write or call (401) 792-2107 for complete information.

University of Rhode Island, Summer Session, Kingston, Rhode Island.

uri

Clip and mail to

The Dean, Summer Session, University of Rhode Island, Green Hall
Kingston, Rhode Island 02881

Please send your 1969 Summer Session Bulletin and Application/Preregistration Form to:

Mr. Mrs. Miss_____ _____
Street Address_____
City_____State_____Zip Code_____
Your College/Univ._____Location_____

STUDY IN CUERNAVACA

Learn to speak SPANISH
- Intensive courses, with drills, supervised labs, and theory taught by experienced Mexican teachers.
- $135 per month.

Study in the INSTITUTE FOR CONTEMPORARY LATIN AMERICAN STUDIES.
- Examine themes such as "Protest and its Creative Expression in Latin America" and "The Role of Education in Social Change" in 10 to 30 new courses each month.
- Access to excellent library.
- $30 per credit.

Live in CUERNAVACA
- Near Mexico City, at 4,500 feet elevation, with Mexican families or in dorms or bungalows.
- Approx. $80 per month.

Request catalog from Registrar — Cidoc W. Godot, Apdo. 479, Cuernavaca, Mexico

James Meredith in perspective: from farm to Mississippi march

The first black man to integrate the University of Mississippi will be the guest of Syracuse University and its Greek system next week.

James Meredith will deliver the Greek Week lecture Tuesday at 8 p.m. in Hendricks Chapel. His topic is "Racial Peace in America."

From the day in Sept. 1962 when he set foot on the University of Mississippi campus as an enrolled student, James Meredith became the focal point of national and international attention. Surrounded by U.S. marshals, the U.S. Army and Air Force, scores of newsmen, crowds of hostile observers, and groups of jeering students, Meredith began an academic year that included two deaths, numerous injuries and extensive destruction of property; the involvement of the President of the United States, the Secretary of Defense, the Attorney General, and the Governor of Mississippi; and the expenditure of millions of dollars.

By the time that year had ended, James Meredith had been hailed as a hero, vilified as a scoundrel and troublemaker, commended as a patriot and idealist, threatened with murder; he had been spat upon and ignored--and he had received his degree from the University of Mississippi. Having been guarded night and day, never alone to enjoy the simple anonymity of student life, he emerged unchanged in one vital respect: he was still a staunch individualist, relying ultimately upon his own judgment, apparently unintimidated by the terrible pressures exerted upon him by both white and black groups.

Born in 1933 in Kosciusko, Mississippi, Meredith was one of ten children. His father owned his 84-acre farm and was a registered voter. Of the elder Meredith's influence, Meredith has written: "Of course, I had known that I belonged to a group that was distinctly different from at least one other group, but until I was fifteen I did not know that my group was supposed to be the inferior one. Since then I have felt a personal responsibility to change the status of my group."

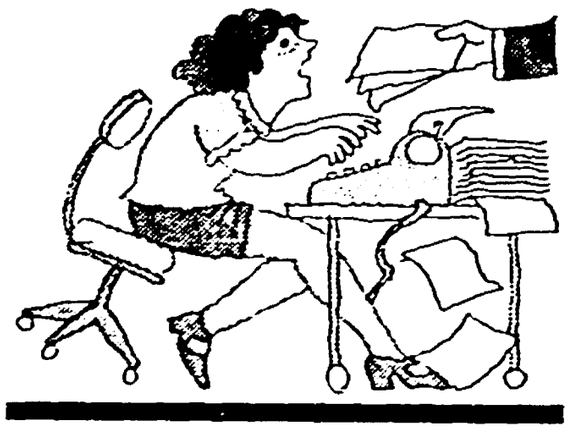
For his last year of high school, Mr. Meredith went to St. Petersburg, Florida, where he won the American Legion Essay Contest with a statement on "Why I am Proud to be an American." After his graduation in 1951, he enlisted in the United States Air Force and rose to the rank of Staff Sergeant. He married in 1956, and spent his last three service years in Japan.

Following his discharge in 1960, he returned to Mississippi and entered Jackson State College, a Negro school, to continue his formal education and seek a law degree. While there he applied for admission to the University of Mississippi. After receiving his degree, he studied Political Science in Nigeria at the University of Ibadan, lectured at major universities in Africa, and toured Europe and the Middle East. When he returned to the United States in 1965, he entered the School of Law at ColumbiaUniversity and set up residence in New York City with his wife and young son.

Meredith has continued in his efforts to secure the rights and privileges of full citizenship for all Negroes, and it was this mission which prompted him to embark on his now famous march in Mississippi. He said that returning to Mississippi without federal marshals would be a personal test. Surviving the trip, he felt, might help other Negroes to see that "if I can do it, they can too." He hoped that his march would encourage the 450,000 unregistered Negro voters in Mississippi to place their names on the rolls.

JAMES MEREDITH

The story of his march has often been told. Shot by a white sniper from ambush, he will probably carry to his dying day some of the 75 birdshot pellets which entered his body. Discharged from the hospital, he continued his march--but he was badly shaken by the shooting. It has made him more militant in his approach to the Negro situation.



In his lecture, Tuesday night, Mr. Meredith will present his views--his own, individual ideas, he stresses, even though they are often at variance with those of the official Negro organizations.

auto europe
dept. 168
STUDENT/FACULTY GRANT Program
Special rates in European overseas travel for purchase, lease, & rental of cars. For details and brochure write: University Grant Dept., Auto Europe, 1270 Second Avenue, New York, New York 10021.
Name .....
Address .....
Zip .....

HAVE YOU SEEN "OCEAN IN A BOTTLE"?
FANTASTIC AND MESMERISING
at
THE BOOKSTALL
147 Marshall St.

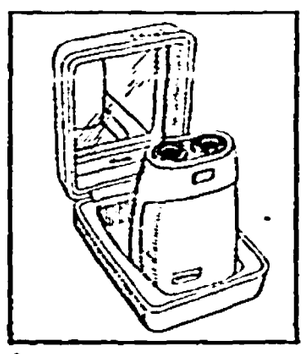
Pocket Coffee! What's that?

A new kind of coffee break for stunned secretaries.

If there's one more letter to type, another card to file, or, one more call to make...you'll quit.

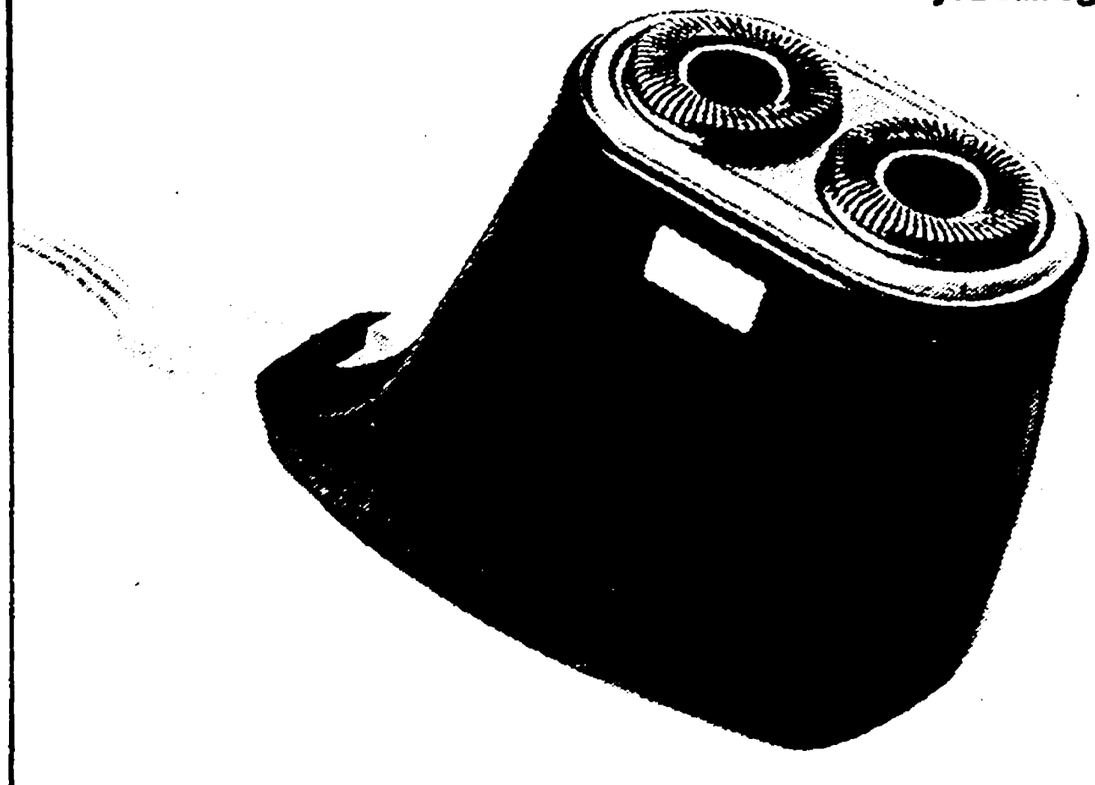
Ever feel that way? What you need is a coffee break. A brand new kind of coffee break. Pocket Coffee.

It takes an instant to pop a Pocket Coffee into your mouth. Just taste that delicious chocolate shell, and, it's absolutely brim-full of real brewed liquid coffee. The kind you drink in a cup.



Pocket Coffee comes in a 3 candy packet you can carry with you. With a coffee break that handy, your hands just barely have to leave the keyboard.

The big bright green pleasure machine



The Norelco Flip-Top 20. Not only does it have flip-top cleaning, a handy on/off switch, and an easy-going carrying wallet, it has two Microgroove™ heads that float comfortably over your face. To make every part of shaving a downright pleasure.

Picture all that pleasure without a cord and you've got the Cordless 20B on the right. All it needs is 4 little pen-light batteries and you've got 30 days of shaves. Without ever having to plug it in! Take it anywhere in its handy, compact travel case.

Two great shavers. Norelco calls them pleasure machines. Because they're a pleasure to use. And because you can buy them for a song..

Norelco®
you can't get any closer

©1969 North American Philips Corporation, 100 East 42nd Street, New York, N.Y. 10017

Czech reformer to lecture today

Dr. Ivan Svitak, who was expelled from the Communist Party of Czechoslovakia in 1964 and accused of "revisionism," will visit Syracuse University today to lecture at 3 p.m. in the Founders Room of Maxwell Hall.

His topic will be "The Czechoslovak Tragedy of August 1968." Svitak's appearance is sponsored by the Russian and East European Studies Program of the Maxwell Graduate School.

Svitak is a former lecturer in philosophy at Prague University and a member of the Institute of Philosophy in the Czechoslovak Academy of Science. He is now a Senior Fellow of the Research Institute on Communist Affairs at Columbia University.

He has been called one of the main driving forces behind the reform movement in the Czechoslovak Communist Party. In his lecture he will discuss both the reforms and the Soviet response to them which finally manifested itself in the invasion of Czechoslovakia by the Warsaw Pact armies.

Editors

Students interested in applying for any of the following positions may pick up application forms in Dean Carleton's office, 209 Administration Building: Daily Orange business manager, editor of the Onondagan, business manager of the Onondagan, editor of Maelstrom and business manager of Maelstrom. Deadline for return of applications is Wednesday, April 23.

Correction

Due to a typographical error, the impending increase in room and board costs was incorrectly reported in yesterday's Daily Orange. The new charges will range from $1,000 to $1,150, depending upon the type of housing. Costs were formerly $960 to $1,100.

Thornden Park is open ...for business

©1969 Bristol-Myers Co

How to take a course in anatomy and stay awake in physics.

If you don't want to give up everything physical for physics, we have something for you.

NoDoz.® The stimulating pill for the unstimulating morning after.

Nothing you can buy without a prescription has a stronger stimulant. And NoDoz is not habit forming.

So after a course in anatomy has done something for your ego, take two NoDoz and do something for your grades.

©Copyright by Sero of New Haven, Inc. 1964

the Purist® by Sero

THE GENTLEMAN'S SHIRT

chairman of the college board

PHOTOGRAPHED ABOARD THE SS FRANCE

The Purist® button-down by Sero is tailored for college students in the know. Clean-cut body lines . . . the exclusive Sero full-flared, soft-rolled collar . . . a seven-button front . . . classic shirtmanship at its finest. A host of exclusive colours and distinctive stripings on both fine combed 100% cotton and superior durable press fabrics.

Available at:

John F. Zell & Son
140 E. Onondaga St.
Syracuse, N. Y.

©GEN. BREW. CO., ROCH., N.Y.

...a little more exciting! GENESEE Beer

Happenings on the Hill

Campus Notices must be brought to the DO Office (1101 E. Adams St., second floor, first desk on the left) by 3 p.m. on the day before they are to be published. We regret that due to the many requests each notice must be limited to 25 words and may not be run more than two days in a row. Notices will not be taken over the phone.

FRIDAY

RITE OF SPRING Folk Society concert, Friday, 7:30-12 p.m. in Kittredge Aud. Dave Maloney, John Cadley, Peter Allen, and the Down City Ramblers will be featured. Free.

EL CIRCOLO ITALIANO announces a coffee hour in honor of Professor John Freccero, Friday from 3-4 p.m. in rm. 200, HBC. Everyone cordially invited.

WHITE ZOMBIE and MARK OF THE VAMPIRE starring Bela Lugosi and Lionel Barrymore will be shown in St. Mary's Multi-Purpose Room at 7 p.m. and 9:30. Donation $.50.

MEETING of the Religion Majors at 3 p.m. in 319 H.B.C.

BRIDGE PLAYERS: Duplicate Bridge Tournament in 2nd floor lounge of Lawrinson, 1:15 p.m. With or without a partner. Rating points will be awarded.

UU MOVIE will be shown at 6, 8, 10 in Gifford Aud.

CAB CALLOWAY Concert. Tix on sale for $2 at Newman Center. Sunday, 8 p.m. in Hendricks Chapel.

HOLY COMMUNION Sunday 10:00 a.m. in Chapel House, sponsored by the Lutheran Campus Ministry. Coffee hour after the service; baby sitting and Sunday School provided for children; Sunday 5:30 p.m. X-CHANGE, with buffet supper and discussion, Chapel House, co-sponsored by UCCF.

MONDAY

SENATE will meet at 7:30 in Maxwell auditorium. Autonomy constitutions will be presented by Dellplain, Watson, and St. Mary's.

GENERAL

RIC MASTEN, Big Sur poet and songwriter, will present a program of folk and protest singing this Saturday at 8 p.m. in the Noble Room of Hendricks Chapel--free--sponsored by the Unitarian Universalist Billings Lecture Fund and SU Student Religious Liberals.

WIN CASH in the sweepstakes at the Women's Building Bowling Lanes. Starts Monday, April 21.

ATTENTION GREEK WEEK CHAIRMEN mandatory meeting Sunday, 9 p.m. at Tri-Delta. You must be there. Problems? Call Joan, x2658.

SUICIDES ANONYMOUS: Ear to help you. Call 422-1000, 6 p.m.-6 a.m. Mon. - Fri. Non-violent, voluntary.

Africa

Dr. Brian Fangan, professor of anthropology at the University of California, Santa Barbara, will lecture today at 8:30 p.m. at Syracuse University's Newhouse Communications Center, room 206.

His lecture, "The Iron Age in Africa -- Implications of Recent Discoveries," is sponsored by the Program of Eastern African Studies, the department of anthropology and the Anthropology Club.

Fangan, formerly with the Livingston Museum in Zambia, was director of a survey of Bantu origins made by the British Institution of History and Archaeology in East Africa.

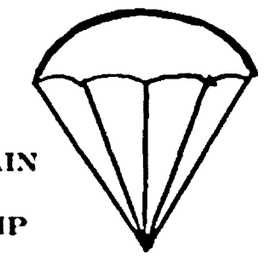
UU PRESENTS "The Tenth Victim" Sunday, 7 and 9 p.m. in Gifford Aud. Admission: $1.

HILLEL AND ISRAELI STUDENT ORGANIZATION invites you to Israel's 21st Annual celebration, 8 p.m. Saturday, at the Jewish Community Center, 2223 E. Genesee.

AMERICAN YOUTH HOSTELS 30 days in Europe by VW bus staying at youth hostels and inexpensive hotels for $625 including flight. Call Ron Cate, 469-6284, 841 Valley Drive.

ATTENTION PRE MEDS: AED, the premedical honorary is now accepting applications for memberhsip. Please include science accum, overall accum, and activities. Send to Bonnie Morrison, Box 548, St. Mary's dorm. Deadline April 23.

THE NEW LEFT isn't gaining much popular support on the SU campus so far. I am interested in finding out how many conservatives there are on campus--perhaps to later form an organization, complete with publication to present our views. Interested? Call Ernie Grafe, x3098 or 3633 during the evening or write Box 161, 401 Van Buren St.



SOPHOMORE MEN - interested in applying for Orange Key Junior Men's Honorary may pick up an application in Dean Carleton's office. This application must be typed and returned to Dean Carleton's office by April 23rd.

ANYONE INTERESTED in being a moderator for the Citizenship Education Conference, Sat., please call X 3098, 3716 or stop at the Maxwell lobby, Friday from 2-9 p.m.

WANTED - white girl needed to read for role of Lula in the "Dutchman" by Leroy Jones. Reading Tuesday 7-9 Regent Experimental Theatre Lobby.

GET HIGH

without getting busted !

TRAIN AND JUMP THE Same Day

For Information
Contact Jim Allison or Doug Garr at x2891

"Joan...this is kind of personal but do you use Tampax tampons?"

"Wouldn't use anything else... they're convenient, easier to use, comfortable, and they don't show..."

"I guess that's why you can wear all those fantastic clothes all the time. Wish I could."

"If that means you don't use Tampax tampons, you ought to give them a try. But don't just take my word for it...ask Ann and Jane and well, millions of girls all over the U.S. would tell you the same thing."

"That many, huh?"

"Probably more."

TAMPAX. tampons

SANITARY PROTECTION WORN INTERNALLY
MADE ONLY BY TAMPAX INCORPORATED, PALMER, MASS.

6 jobs in 6 years is called job hopping?

Not necessarily. Not at Du Pont.

We have a practice called "planned mobility," a kind of intramural job hopping. It means you don't go into a training program. You go to work—at different growth jobs that broaden you professionally, benefit you personally, and help you find the specific field you want to grow in. Here's how it worked for Jim Davis, an M.E. from the University of Pittsburgh:

"My first assignment was installation of improved polymer transfer systems," says Jim. "Then some research. A patent was issued on my device to apply steam to a running threadline. Next I was a college recruiter. After that I worked on a five-year forecast of the company's engineering needs. Now I'm in a cost reduction group."

For Jim, it added up to six assignments in six years. This may be some kind of a record. But he didn't waste time. Every day of it was solid profit.

Your Du Pont recruiter is a guy a lot like Jim. Ask him about planned mobility. Ask him anything. The coupon will get you some background information before you meet him.

DU PONT

College Relations

An Equal Opportunity Employer (M/F)

Du Pont Company
Room 6689
Wilmington, DE 19898

I'd like your latest information on opportunities at Du Pont for graduates with degrees in _____

Name _____

University _____

Degree _____ Graduation Date _____

Address _____

City _____ State _____

Zip _____

Panhel elects new officers

Awards were presented and officers elected Monday night at the annual Panhellenic Awards and Elections Convention.

Sally Shaw (Gamma Phi Beta) was elected president of Panhellenic to succeed Sally Clonninger. Miss Shaw stressed the need of internal Panhellenic unity and the need for a closer liaison with Inter-Fraternity Council, in her address.

Miss Shaw defeated Helen Dworetzky (Zeta TauAlpha) the other presidential candidate. Kate Shiring (Chi Omega) received a white ballot for vice president.

Dean of Women Marjorie C. Smith, noting that all sororties on campus have an average higher than that of the all-women campus average, presented the award for most improvement to Alpha Phi. Runner-up was Alpha Epsilon Phi and Alpha Delta Pi, third.

The scholarship award itself, however, went to Alpha Epsilon Phi which had a house average of 2.9. Chi Omega was second with a 2.89 and Alpha Delta Pi third with 2.85.

The Marjorie C. Smith Inter-Sorority Award was presented to Delta Delta Delta, with Kappa Alpha Theta and Phi Sigma Sigma running second and third respectively.

Individual awards were also presented at the convocation. Sally Shaw received the Loulla Boswell scholarship of $150. Service awards were presented to Sally Clonninger (Chi Omega), Joanne Wilkoff (Kappa Kappa Gamma) and Helen Dworetzky (Zeta Tau Alpha).

Military ball set tonight

The Military Ball, sponsored by the joint corp, will take place tonight from 9 to 1 in the Grand Ballroom of the Hotel Syracuse. A Crown of Laurel is the theme and music will be provided by the Lou DeSantis orchestra.

Winner of the queen contest will receive a $50 gift certificate. There are seven finalists:

Frankie Edelman, a junior majoring in political science, is commander of Angel Flight and a member of the junior exec council. Frankie enjoys reading, playing piano and tennis.

Pam Harwood, is a junior majoring in zoology and education. Her interests include swimming, waterskiing, sailing, and mountain climbing.

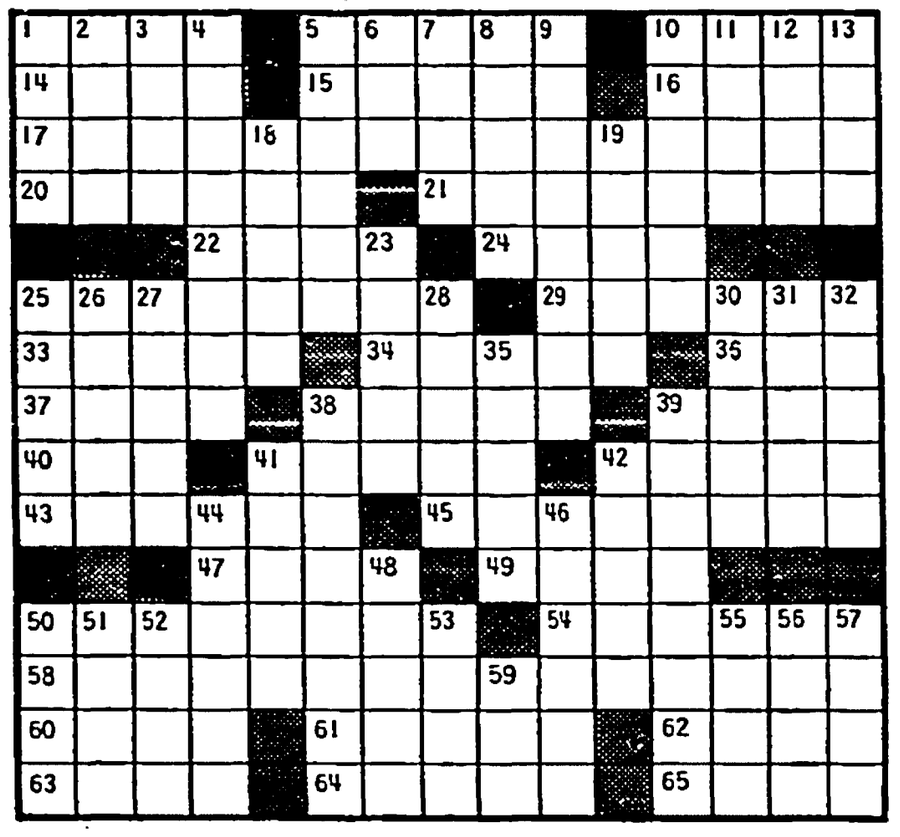
Mary Lynn Mariano, a stenographer at Onondaga Community College enjoys sewing, bowling and boating.

Sue Schaefer, a junior majoring in French and education is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma and was former commander of angel flight. Sue has traveled around the world as a Pam Am Stewardess and has spent a semester in France.

Deborah Shanks, a representative of the N.Y. Telephone Company, completed two years of college, majoring in elementary education. She enjoys skiing and swimming.

Karen Shanley, a junior majoring in nutrition and food science is a member of Angel Flight and enjoys horseback riding, canoeing, and arts and crafts.

Mary-Ann Thompson is a sophomore majoring in public relations and sociology. A member of Gamma Phi Betta and a Lambda Chi Alpha little sister, she is scholastic chairman of her house and a member of soph exec council. Her interests include skiing and travelling.



CROSSWORD PUZZLE

ACROSS

1 Part of a shoe.
5 Ferber novel.
10 Feet: Suffix in zoology.
14 Construction piece.
15 Distinction.
16 One-eyed god.
17 Key words in Supreme Court decision, 1954: 2 words.
20 Evoke.
21 Social: 2 words.
22 Inner: Prefix.
24 Fuss.
25 Crucial confrontation.
29 Eventually: 2 words.
33 "The harp that once through ___ halls..."
34 Trap.
36 Lily, in Lille.
37 Astronomer-poet.
38 ___ Haute.
39 Andalusian aunts.
40 Utensil.
41 Wild.
42 Put to ___ (outshine).
43 Nobel Peace Prize winner, 1933.
45 Meddled: Slang: 2 words.
47 Shrub used in making topees.
49 Poet's "not once."
50 On ___ of (following): 2 words.
54 Mariners.
58 Anthem of the 1960's: 3 words.
60 Old: Ger.
61 Emerge.
62 Patron saint of 54 Across.
63 Yard or gaff.
64 Relaxed.
65 ___ Connery, alias 007.

DOWN

1 Footnote word.
2 Man's name meaning "breath."
3 New African nation.
4 Consumer's opportunity: 2 words.
5 Part of a city.
6 Comparative suffix.
7 Anatomy: Abbr.
8 Lecture reminders.
9 Dissertation.
10 Pictures of sorts: 2 words.
11 Ratibor's river.
12 Assembly.
13 Presidential nickname.
18 Restrains.
19 Book part.
23 Proprietor.
25 Face that would ___ clock: 2 words.
26 Persian exposed by 44 Down.
27 Short for a zoo favorite.
28 Eleanor's relative.
30 Greek epic.
31 Florida mecca.
32 Steel city.
35 Fabric.
38 What George couldn't: 3 words.
39 Off to ___ (on one's way): Colloq.: 2 words.
41 The "Medium."
42 Derisive smile.
44 O. T. heroine.
46 Do a farm job.
48 ___ Craig, Scottish island.
50 Poetic contraction.
51 Assist.
52 This: Sp.
53 No win.
55 Jetty.
56 Austen title.
57 Sign.
59 Sight, in France.

We're putting our money where it does you the most good.

TWA is giving its people a million dollar bonus if they can make you happier than any other airline.

And you students are going to help make sure we put the money in the right pockets.

When you fly TWA, you'll get a ballot. Write in the names of the TWA people who gave you super service.

Drop your ballot into any of the bonus boxes you'll find at all of our terminals.

And we'll see that those people get rewarded with some of that money.

Now, for a change, you can have a chance to grade others on their work.

TWA

Our people make you happy.
We make them happy.

Hicks, Ifshin: 'we're gonna move, now!'

By KAREN WIEDIGER
and
LARRY KRAMER

"You can't fit a revolution into a university schedule," said Chuck Hicks, Student Government president last night during the victory celebration for David Ifshin, SG president-elect. Operating under the premise that the Council on Student Life will hear today that

An analysis

Chancellor William P. Tolley has vetoed proposals concerning dormitory autonomy and visiting hours, Ifshin met with Hicks, Ed Barron, vice-president-elect and student advisors to discuss possible action to be taken by the student body concerning both matters.

"It's the Administration's turn to make the move," continued Hicks. "But as soon as they do, it's our turn and we take over."

Shortly before the meeting, Barron had returned from a St. Mary's Dormitory Council meeting where that body passed a motion to hold a referendum on Monday. The referendum calls for 24-hour drinking in individual rooms and each floor deciding its own visitation hours schedule.

The students decided to wait for the CSL decision, but are preparing for any situation. "We're meeting with the presidents of Watson, St. Mary's DellPlain, Booth and Marion on Sunday to map our plans," said Ifshin. "I can't just take over the office without working with Chuck."

"Everyone's got to work together for autonomy to work. That's why we're going to meet with the dorm presidents and why we won't know our definite plans until after that meeting," he continued.

The time appears right for the students to make their own decisions concerning dorm autonomy and visiting hours. In the past few weeks St. Mary's has declared autonomy, Watson has announced its plans to declare autonomy within a week and most major dorms on campus are discussing the proposal in their councils.

During the campaign, Ifshin, claiming that those seeking dorm autonomy encounter great personal risk, said "Dorms should more toward autonomy when they are ready and willing to act as a united front against possible punitive action taken by the administration."

He continued by stating he was not going to decide when the dorm (Watson) was ready for autonomy. "If you're ready now, go. We're with you. If you aren't ready there's Corbally in the fall. But I feel you can win now-it's not my place to come here and tell you what to do. If you go for autonomy Tuesday, I'll be the first to drink a beer with you."

In the meeting last night, Ifshin proved his readiness to discuss those same issues and act on them.

Although the subject was dorm autonomy, Hicks pointed out that there is strength in numbers and more will be accomplished by several living centers acting together on the ideas of autonomy and visiting hours.

AL MARKOWITZ FLORIST offers
Corsages of Roses and Orchids
As Low as $1.95
Cash and Carry
with this ad

The Newman Association at S. U. proudly presents
THE CAB CALLOWAY SHOW
featuring the co-star of Broadway's
"Hello Dolly"
This Sunday 8 P.M. Hendricks Chapel
Students $2.00 Non-students $2.50
For Ticket Information call St. Thomas More Chapel
478-5959 or ext. 3674

Record Runner
CONTINUES TO DRIVE
DOWN THE COST
OF LP's! $2.69 !!
COME ON DOWN!

L. G. Balfour Co.
FRATERNITY and
COLLEGE JEWELERS
S
729 S. Crouse Ave.
Syracuse, New York
Carl Sorenson, Mgr.
GR 5-7837

Banjos Honky Tonk
PEANUTS POPCORN
EXCITING CONTESTS
OLD TIME MOVIES
DRAUGHT BEER
Come for an unforgettable (time of your life) evening on Friday and Saturday nights
FRIDAY NIGHT SPECIAL
Bring this ad and get one Gay 90's Mug or Hat free per couple.
119 W. First St. 437-5652 E. Syracuse

BEST IN SOUL AND R 'n' B
TONIGHT & TOMORROW — 10 thru 3 with the Freddy McCoy Quartet
at the
ENGLISH INN
Admission — $2.00
— $1.00 with S. U. J. D.'s and this ad
at N. Crouse & Hawley

Ask the 2618 graduates who joined an industry leader last year
—about Ætna.

Even Ætna can't be everybody's thing. But for any graduate with an interest in people and an inquisitive mind, a career with us can stretch your capabilities.
Helping people is our kind of thing. After all that's what insurance is all about. If it's also yours, we have opportunities in three basic areas—administrative, analytical or sales management. And we need engineering and business graduates as well as liberal arts people.
At Ætna, our business is selling insurance. But our concern is people.
Learn about Ætna. Ask for "Your Own Thing" at your Placement Office. An Equal Opportunity Employer and A Plans for Progress Company.
Ætna LIFE & CASUALTY
OUR CONCERN IS PEOPLE

FREE TRAVEL GUIDE
FEATURING
KIBBUTZ HOLIDAYS IN ISRAEL
. and Optional Archeological Dig

COLLEGIATES • CO-ED Ages 17-25
• 51 Days Israel, Italy, Switzerland, France $ 995
• 52 Days Israel, Greece, Greek Isle Cruise, Italy 1195
• 54 Days Israel, Italy, Switzerland, France, England 1095
• 34 Days Israel and England 795
• 22 Days Israel Holiday 699
• 22 Days Israel, Italy, England 749
• 45 Days Grand European Orbit (12 Countries) 1250
• 22 Days Romantic European Swing (5 Countries) 599
• 22 Days Classical Quest Italy and Greece 639
RATES INCLUDE
ALL TRANSPORTATION
MEALS
ACCOMMODATIONS
SIGHTSEEING
TRANSFERS & MORE
Mail this coupon today:
OR SEE YOUR FAVORITE TRAVEL AGENT
EASTOURS, Inc.
11 West 42nd St.,
New York, N.Y. 10036
Without cost or obligation, please rush free Collegiate Travel Guide to:
Name
Address
City, State, Zip

UNOFFICIAL RESULTS compiled in the early hours of the morning showed the following figures for yesterday's student government races:

PRESIDENT

Ifshin (Ind.) 1630
Jacobs (CAP) 1192
Nadel (Pro.) 299

VICE PRESIDENT

Barron (Ind.) 1471
Trepel (CAP) 1071
Paetz (Pro.) 297

SECRETARY

Danziger (Ind.) 1356
Daley (CAP) 1226
Mae (Pro.) 252

TREASURER

Rosenblatt (Ind.) 1298
Connor (CAP) 1228
Lewis (Pro.) 265

Ifshin wins...

(Continued from page 1)

own personal message to the campus publication; "Angus Twombly, goodbye."

However, the astute politician reserved comment on the editorial, thought to be a great barrier to his election by many. On the whole the Ifshin people were happy with press coverage but regretted that the editorial went unsigned.

"That really bothered me," said campaign manager Root. "The endorsement is like a court with two sides looking at the outcome and then deciding. Every court has a majority opinion and and minority opinion, and without the dissenting opinion given, this implies a unanimous court. In this case it was not a unanimous court."

Still, these issues could wait, as more and more Ifshin loyals engulfed their man, showering upon him all the laurels due the victor.

"I am really happy," spurted SG President Chuck Hicks. "The students did it. I think Dave was a different kind of candidate and the students wanted to get out of the tradition. He didn't play games and wear three piece suits--he showed people what he was and they took him for what he was. This was a sign of the tone of the campus."

Ifshin was upset that he had been misunderstood concerning his opponents charge of "phony radicalism." "The point is, if we confront, we confront from strength, and we don't wait around," Ifshin stressed.

"The election was a change from parties to people," explained campaign manager Root. "We started out with nothing, but Dave is the only one that has charisma and maturity. This was the first real straight campaign, the fairest campaign ever run."

Still swarmed by admirers and well-wishers, Ifshin expressed his gratitude to Chuck Hicks, Jody Root, Tom Bryan, Mike Durfor, Bill Hauptman, Lance Wisniewski, and, as he put it, "a cast of 1,625."

The victors now headed to a well-deserved party, still overwhelmed by last night's election results. The roar was deafening, as Ifshin emerged from his car and approached the hoard of supporters.

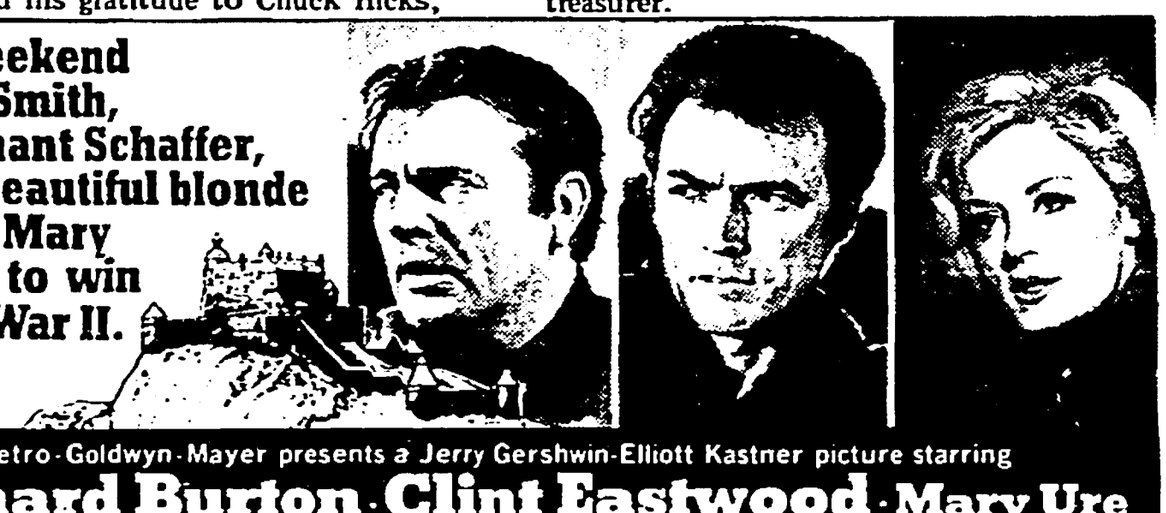
As supporters danced, screamed, downed oceans of beer, and just plain "let it all hang loose," a tape recorder blared the Ifshin radio spots aired in the last days of the campaign. Election results were still unofficial--then word came that Jacobs had conceded, and once again, bedlam.

As Ifshin and his right hand men left for taping of victory statements at WAER studios, the party was still going strong and people still could be heard saying, ' 'do you believe it, do you believe it?" The sweet taste of victory still was dull on the tongues of the loyals--something new and different had happened, something unprecedented in SU history, and these people knew it.

Gladden, Conway

Unofficial results showed Bob Gladden with 291 votes as president-elect of the senior class. Ellen Miller was elected vice-president; Andrea Ibanez, secretary; and Lou Brindis, treasurer.

In the junior class race Lenny Conway was elected president with 378 votes. Others elected were Ann Replogle, vice-president; Sue Shapiro, secretary, and Rich Rosenstein, treasurer.



Bob Tembeckjian was elected sophomore class president with 720 votes. Rounding out the sophomore class executive board are Ronnie Kemper, vice-president; Ann Adamcewicz, secretary, and Herb Von Shilling, treasurer.

TWO GREAT SHOWS !
100% JANIS JOPLIN
And Her Group and
50% PACIFIC GAS & ELECTRIC
Sunday, April 27 - 7:30 & 10 P.M.
$2.50, 3.50, 4.00, 4.50
Eastman Theatre
60 Gibbs St., Rochester, N. Y. 14604

JAM FACTORY
Friday
CAMPUS INN — SUBURBAN PARK
Syracuse's Only Amusement Park
Manlius (Rt. 92)
Discount Admission
With Ticket From Rascals' Concert

WARREN BEATTY
FAYE DUNAWAY

They're young... they're in love
...and they kill people.
BONNIE AND CLYDE
CO-STARRING
MICHAEL J POLLARD-GENE HACKMAN-ESTELLE PARSONS
TECHNICOLOR® FROM WARNER BROS.-SEVEN ARTS
April 22, 23, 24
6, 8 and 10 p.m.
film forum
gifford auditorium
syracuse university
$1.00

One weekend
Major Smith,
Lieutenant Schaffer, and a beautiful blonde named Mary decide to win
World War II.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer presents a Jerry Gershwin-Elliott Kastner picture starring Richard Burton · Clint Eastwood · Mary Ure
"Where Eagles Dare"
also starring
Patrick Wymark · Michael Hordern story and screenplay by Alistair MacLean · directed by Brian G. Hutton · produced by Elliott Kastner Suggested for MATURE audiences (parental discretion advised)
Panavision® and Metrocolor MGM
Watch for them. They start spying on your campus soon!

Campus Classified

GR 6-5571, Ext. 2314

Rates minimum of 15 words:
1 day 1.15
2 days 2.25
3 days 3.30
4 days 4.30
5 days 5.25
6 days 6.15

To place a classified ad. call GR 6-5571, ext. 2314, between 1 and 3 p.m. Ad must be placed 2 days in advance. Every word over 15 costs 5c extra per day.

ALL ADS MUST BE PREPAID.

MISCELLANEOUS

RENT if you can't buy! T.V.s. tape recorders. typewriters. By week. month or semester. Reasonable rates. S. U. BOOKSTORE, GR 6-5541, x 2426.

FRAME your works of art at unbeatable prices at S. U. BOOKSTORE. Also signs and posters. In the Art Dept., 303 University Pl.

ALTERATIONS DONE within 24 hours. Call for an appointment. Lillian Potter, 207 Comstock. 478-5847.

PRIVATE DRIVING LESSONS — automatic or standard shift. Full or refresher courses. Qualified professional instructors. Pickup service. Auto Driving Academy. GR 6-3995.

FLY TO EUROPE and back this summer by jet for only $215.00 round-trip. If interested contact Prof. William Courtney at Eisenhower college in Seneca Falls. N. Y. 13148) or call (315) 568-5769 evenings who will give full details and forward number of applications requested.

UNIVERSITY UNION Sunday night at movies presents . . . THE TENTH VICTIM with Ursala Andress, Marcello Mastrianni; plus Man is a Pain and Trumpit. $1.00 Sunday April 20. 7 & 9 p.m. in Gifford Auditorium.

SUMMER JOBS: Counselors, private boys' camp, Adirondacks: College men of above average physical fitness and judgment: tripping. canoeing. nurse. cook jobs open. Love of out of doors and children essential. Adirondack Swim Camp. 39 Mill Valley Rd. Pittsford. N. Y., 14534.

FOR SALE

'66 AUSTIN - HEALY SPRITE convertible. Fully equipped. Great sports car. Call Larry 454-3927.

1968 VOLVO 142 S. 4-speed. AM-FM, Like new. must sell $2150.00. Phone 422-4463. 456-1362.

OUT OF PRINT BOOKS. The Country Bookstore. Manlius 682-6402. Open evenings and Saturday.

'67 MG MIDGET — midnite blue. body good. engine excellent. Snow tires. new battery. $1600 492-1876.

NEED A T. V.? Magnavox 20" Good Condition. Looks nice. $25. RCA 20" Good condition $15. Call Larry 475-3987.

FINEST STEREO COMPONENTS — excellent condition. turntable-arm-cartridge-$30. Deluxe Amplifier - $95. Couch-$75. 637-9253.

'67 SPRITE. Radio. snow tires. 10,000 miles. Perfect condition. Call after 5. 478-5818.

'58 JAGUAR XK - 150 very good condition. Asking $1150.00 or best offer. 475-9243 or 437-2210 after 6.

'66 GTO. Yellow convertible. 4-speed hurst. power steering 5 crager mags. etc. Immaculate condition. Call Bill Osmun x2638 or GR 8-9001.

FOR RENT

APARTMENTS — furnished or unfurnished. 3 rooms. utilities. near campus. Call x 3630. 472-8223 or 475-1631.

LARGE FRONT ROOM, with kitchen privileges. etc. Chain smokers not welcome. Call after 5:00 p.m. 457-1261.

APARTMENT TO SUBLET June 1 - Sept. 1). New. modern. furnished 1 bedroom apartment. Outside patio - other extras. 5 min. from University. $110/mo. includes utilities. Call 474-3175.

APARTMENTS all over the city. Nicely furnished. 1. 2. and 3 bedrooms. $85.00 up. GL 8-6100. 458-6101.

ROOM. very nice. clean. close to campus, with kitchen privileges. Call GR 6-3151 x257. 446-6451 or 478-5380.

WANTED

FACULTY COUPLE — desires to rent furnished or unfurnished two or three bedroom house or apartment near university. Academic year 1969-70. Call 655-9078.

STUDENTS - for part time positions - option for summer work. $3.15 per hour. Flexible hours. Call 463-3735 weekdays., 3-5 p.m.

YOU NEED MONEY! — I need college men part time. $2.25 per hour plus bonus. Sales. Phone 471-8119 Mr. Kays.

COUNSELORS - boys - girls, overnight camp in Berkshires. Tennis, assistant waterfront. golf. pioneering. photography, general. Call 474-3175.

TYPING

DISSERTATIONS, THESES, AND TERM papers. IBM electric typewriter. 40c per page 5c per copy. 446-2841. Mrs. Miller.

THIRTY YEARS EXPERIENCE. Dissertations. term papers, proof-read. Satisfaction guaranteed. Mrs. Raymond Webb. HE 7-8259.

DIANE WALLACE, 472-2115. Theses. dissertations and term papers. IBM electric. 40c per page. 5c copy. Multilith. 45c.

TAKE YOUR MANUSCRIPT to the only professional typing and printing service serving the S. U. area. The knowledge and experience of having done over 2.000 theses and dissertations is behind every job we turn out. Stephanie's Office Service. 469-2795.

Doctor set to go as Orange stickmen invade Penn State

By ED AGRANOWITZ

The undefeated Syracuse lacrosse team resumes its quest for riches tomorrow when the Orange invade University Park, Pa., to tangle with their old friends, Penn State. The action will be the first for the Orange since their Midwest vacation week trip which produced a 4-0 slate.

The Orangemen have been fighting with the weather and the absence of coach Roy Simmons for the first three days of this week. Simmie returned yesterday from his brother's funeral in Florida and indicated that his team has a lot of catching up to do before the game.

"A Syracuse-Penn State game is a war, any way you look at it," said Simmie before practice yesterday, "and I've been through too many of them to know that I've got to get our kids in the right frame of mind to play this game."

The Orange are free of major injuries and were given a tremendous boost by the news that last year's high scorer and All American Verne Doctor will be ready to go against State. Verne had required surgery after he lost part of his right index finger in a freak accident while saddling a horse. The mishap benched him for the spring trip.

"The doctor fitted Verne with a metal cap which protects the finger and enables him to slip into his glove," explained Simmie, "He'll be in there against Penn State, but we don't know how well he'll hold up after the long layoff."

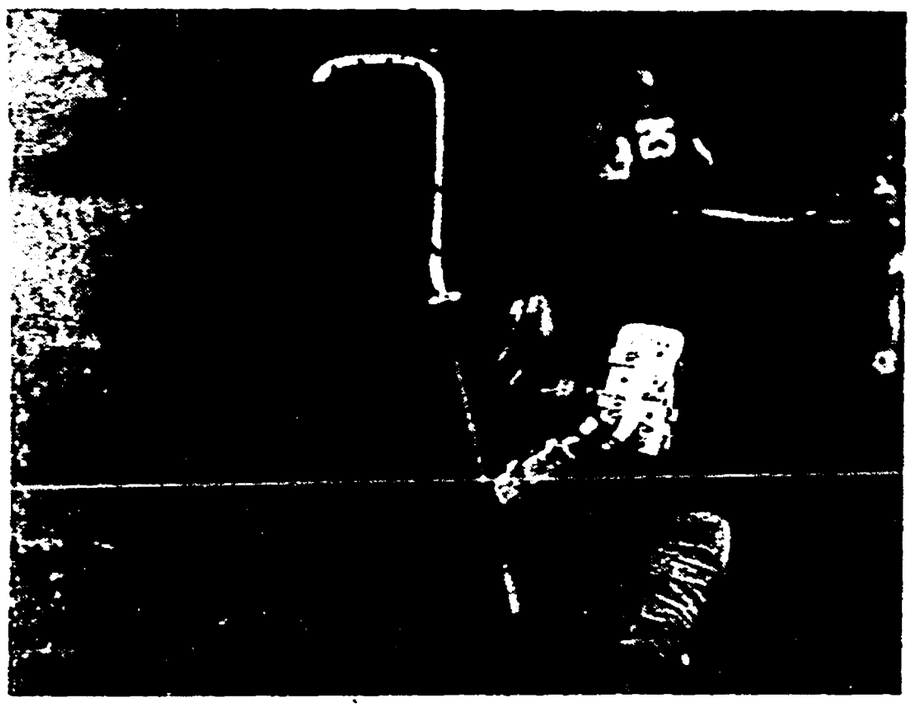
"The finger gives me some pain from sudden movements," said Verne, "but I can handle the stick pretty well and I can't wait to play."

Doctor's return should enable diminutive Dick George to rejoin his midfield mates, Mark Austerlitz and Jim Smith. George had spelled Verne in the crease position on the trip.

The only other questionmark for the Orange is Ron Doctor. The sophomore middie filled the first midfield hold vacated by George and bruised his ribs while performing auspiciously. "He will still being bothered by them the other day," said Verne about his younger brother.

Otherwise, the Orangemen are healthy down the line. Leo Nolan and Jeff Davis will join Verne on attack, and Cliff Ensley, John Scipione, and Ethan Klausner are set on defense.

The remaining midfield units will have Tony Lappi, Paul DiMartino, and Dick Polgren in the senior threesome, with Rick Travis and Tom Varley joining Ron Doctor in the sophomore trio.



Fearless Butch Brown, looking more and more like an All American possibility will tend the goal for SU. Butch will be putting a microscopic 3.75 goals against per game average on the line.

Penn State enters the game with a 2-2 record, with the two wins coming against Franklin and Marshall and a strong Loyola of Baltimore team. Setbacks were inflicted by Washington and Lee, and Maryland.

"They scored six goals against the best goalie in the nation in losing to Maryland (12-6)," says Simmie, "So we've got a tough job ahead of us."

Syracuse's two co-captains, Cliff Ensley and Jeff Davis are not alone in their eagerness to eat the Lions alive. I'll be looking for some revenge from a December 7 football game," says gridiron safety Ensley. When asked if he was familiar with any of Penn State's personnel, Davis replied, "The only thing I know is that we're going to beat them."

ED'S ITORIALS: Syracuse won against the Lions here last year, 13-9....The Lions lost their top attackman, Ken Edwards, for the year with a knee injury. Edwards was named honorable mention All American last year as a sophomore....The Orangemen follow the Lion tilt with visits to Clarkson and Hofstra next week....The first home game is Wednesday, April 30, with Hobart....Penn State lost a pre-season scrimmage to Denison, a victim of the Orangemen....The Lions were 8-3-1 last year....Nittany basketballer Galen Godbey plays midfield with the stickmen....The Syracuse frosh will also open their season at University Park.

VERNE DOCTOR'S QUICK STICK will come out of hiding tomorrow when the Orange try to make it 5 wins in a row at Penn State. Verne went through an all-out practice session yesterday is anxious to start peppering the enemy's nets again. (Photo by Robertson)

Card pleased by Frosh ball club

By FRED KRAVER

"I'm really pleasantly surprised at the team," exclaimed freshman baseball coach Herm Card. "All of these guys look pretty good."

Card could not be sure of what kind of freshman squad he would be inheriting this year. He has recently served with the National Guard, and did not have much time to organize the new edition of the Tangerines.

His observation about the quality of the frosh that tried out for the various positions comes just before the last cut. Card must trim eight players from the group, and the decision may be a difficult one.

But Card has already run into adversity even before the opening game. His number one pitcher, Gary Rainbow, may be ineligable because of academic problems. However, Card likes the remainder of his mound staff, singling out John Goldstein and Don Ligresti.

One of the team's most impressive assets is its speed. The outfield is particularly quick, featuring Tom Fleming in center field, Paul Yarwood in left, and Jim Sanchioni covering right.

When asked about the quality of his hitting attack, Card shrugged his shoulders. Apparently, it is too early to tell whether the offense will carry the burden.

"Defensively, we look extremely good," Card commented. "But the team is new. They have never seen each other, and must learn to play together." Only through experience, and knowledge of teammates' capabilities, could a team possibly become a stingy defensive unit. The double-play combination's effectiveness, the outfield's teamwork, and many other aspects of the game are refined as the players learn about each other.

Card is also pleased with the team's attitude. "A lot of hustle," he describes it. "I try to keep them relaxed, but I won't tolerate any monkey-business." During practice, the players appear relaxed but intense.

Among the problems during practice sessions for the Tangerines is the condition of the field. Cleat-marks left by football shoes has made the outfield look like a bad case of acne.

The field should be ready for Tuesday's opener against Colgate. Commenting about the schedule, Card pointed out that "schools we play always have good teams. It's hard to tell who will be particularly tough, since you can't scout freshman teams."

One of the players summed up the situation when he remarked, "We're optimistic."

Grieve hopeful as track team preps for opener

By HOWIE GROOPMAN

Track coach Bob Grieve looks toward the upcoming spring season with guarded optimism.

Although his squad is "practically the same bunch as the winter squad, with a few additions," Grieve fears that his team has been unable to have enough practice. "We can have a fairly good team if we get a break in the weather," he says.

The team will have its first opportunity to prove itself at the Queens Relays, which will be held in New York City on April 19. Grieve will take with him shotputter Roger Taylor, and probably Gil West (long jump and hop, step, and jump) and Greg Warden (javelin). He also hopes to enter Jack Fitzpatrick and Tom Rothwell in the 120-yard high hurdles.

For the mile relay, Grieve is undecided about whom he will enter. "We'll run sprint men, depending on the conditions of our distance runners. We haven't had much time," he explained. The mile relay will probably include four of the following: David Grieves, Guy Roberts, Al Fairey, Dave Marcus and Bill Swift.

The distance medley will feature Larry Zuller, who has run a 4:10 mile indoors, Dave Crans and one other miler.

Despite his enthusiasm for his team, the veteran coach of 24 years is still looking for experienced track and field men. He asks that freshmen who have high school experience come out for the team, and adds that "it is better to be a has-been than a never- was."

Grieve, who says he has been coaching "long enough to know better," says that the team does not have a good sprinter. This is explained mostly by the fact that track is one of SU's "minor" sports.

"There are no scholarships; that's where the rub is," said Grieve. "It's hard to field a team in 18 events without any scholarships." He explained that schools such as Villanova, Penn State, the Ivy League schools, "even Colgate," offer many track and field scholarships to students.

Grieve said that the best he could show a boy was "the leaves changing in the fall," again scorning local weather. However, if a boy has sufficient academic ability, "then we can help him financially," he explained. Most of the track team comes from either New York or New Jersey.

Becoming philosophical, Grieve offered some of his personal adages about the sport:

"What a man produces is what he puts into it. He can't depend on anyone else--when the gun goes off, he's all by himself.

"A coach dies about 1000 deaths in a career, a runner only one after a bad race. The coach is defeated as much as the runner; mentally I feel just as bad."

"The relays are a team effort. Three men depend on one. It takes away the individuality of other races."

After the Queens Relays, the varsity will compete in the Penn Relays, April 26th. A quadrangular meet against Penn State, Pittsburgh, and West Virginia on May 3rd, and a triangular meet against Boston College and Massachusetts on May 10th will complete the first month of competition.

The first three frosh meets are the Queens Relays, the Mohawk Relays April 23rd, a dual meet on April 30 against Colgate.

LARRY ZULLER AND DAVE CRANS, two aces on the Syracuse track team, go through some practice paces yesterday at Archbold Stadium. The Orange trackmen will be competing in the Queens relays starting today in New York. (Photo by Robertson)

D O quiz biz

1- Who was the 1966 Kentucky Derby winner?

2- Which of these players never won an N.B.A. scoring title:

A- Rick Barry
B- Jerry West
C- Dave Bing

3- Who was the last shortstop to lead the National League in hitting?

4- Who was the first player selected by the Washington Senators in the 1960 expansion draft?

5- What major golf tournament has Sammy Snead never won?

6- Who was the N.F.L. M.V.P. for the 1967 season?

7- What man played in both a college football all-star game and a major league baseball all-star game?

8- Whose home-run record did Babe Ruth shatter when he hit 60 home-runs in 1927?

9- Who was the last pitcher to win 27 games or more before Denny McLain did it last year?

10- Who did the N.Y. Knicks give up in acquiring Walt Bellamy from the Baltimore Bullets?

LAST WEEK'S ANSERS: 1-George Yardley; 2-Bobby Hull, Phil Esposito, Gordie Howe; 3-Jeff Mullins--Duke, Emmette Bryant--DePaul, Howie Komives--Bowling Green; 4-Jim Beatty; 5-Pinky Higgins, Walt Dropo (12); 6-Ernie Banks (1958-59); 7-Cookie Lavagetto; 8-Archie Moore, Ingemar Johannsen; 9-Terry Sawchuck; Willie Mays, Mike McCormick.

DAILY ORANGE
Syracuse University's Daily Newspaper Since 1903

Vol. 67, No. 91 | Syracuse, New York, Tuesday, April 22, 1969 | 10 Cents

Boycott strikes SU tomorrow

Tolley thwarts autonomy move

News analysis by KAREN WIEDIGER
Executive Editor

"The University stands for certain moral and spiritual concepts including decency and temperance," said Chancellor William P. Tolley, when asked why he did not approve some dormitory autonomy proposals.

At Friday's Council on Student Life (CSL) meeting, members were told the Chancellor did not approve prossession and consumption of alcoholic beverages within residence halls nor visiting hours and open houses.

CSL had recommended the two proposals as part of the definition of dormitory autonomy. The other recommendations, that curfews and closing of residence halls were approved by Tolley.

However, dormitories may continue to have visiting hours and may petition for them through Standing Committee Number Three of CSL.

Saturday Meeting

Chuck Hicks, Student Government president, and a member of CSL said he and other student members met with Tolley on Saturday to discuss autonomy. "We talked about it in terms of how we felt it was not just booze and broads. We tried to explain why, when he went to St. Mary's, he saw ciragette burns in the carpets."

Student's Dorms

"The students don't feel the dorms belong to them. They feel the buildings are part of the University but that they, the students, are not," continued Hicks.

Ed Feldman and Cindy Bailey, CSL members and Dave Ifshin, newly-elected SG president, also met with Tolley. Feldman stressed that one of the concepts of autonomy as he saw it was the idea students could have a say over their own rights.

"This would be carried out if the Inter-Dormitory Council would review the petitions of those dorms desiring autonomy.

No Trust

"But the chancellor said CSL must do it. To me this means he does not trust students and wants

(Continued on Page 9)

Faculty support

The following faculty members support tomorrow's boycott and will speak on floors Wednesday night:

Oliver Clubb, Peter T. Marsh, Michael Sawyer, Dean Alan K. Campbell, Donna Shalala, Donald Meiklejohn, Alan Mabe, David Potter, George Alexander, William Neuman, Melvin A. Eggers, Bruce Henry, Sidney J. Arenson, Norman Balbanian, Professor Perea, Professor Raleigh, and Robert Wilson.

Professor Walter Ullmann has cancelled two history examinations tomorrow and rescheduled them for Friday.

EUGENE NICKERSON

Students voice eleven demands

By FRED TUCCILLO
News Editor

The first campus-wide boycott of classes in the 99-year history of Syracuse University is being organized for tomorrow.

A broad based coalition of student leaders, acting on the advise and consent of the student body as expressed in living center meetings, is planning the boycott to draw attention to student dissatisfaction on a wide range of issues.

The group has united under the name - "Students for a Better University."

Students are being asked to stay away from the quad between the hours of 7 a.m. and 5 p.m. and to engage in group discussions of the issues in their living centers.

Such discussions are being scheduled on a formal basis for tomorrow night with members of the faculty invited to participate.

The issues have been drawn from the work of the Council on Student Life, various student organizations, and student meetings in the major dormitories and living centers. More than 50 subjects for discussion and negotiation were grouped by student coordinators into five major catagories. Academics, Cultural, Financial, Social and the University in the Community.

Meaningful Discussion

In order to get meaningful discussions with the administration under way, however, the eleven main points will be introduced initially. They are:

- a five year term for administrators subject to renewal and review by university senate
- the institution of an independent study program which would allow students to spend a certain number of credit hours per semester on individual projects
- student representation on curriculum committees in all schools and departments of the university
- the instituion of dormitory autonomy, the recognition of the student's right to regulate his or her own social life
- a financial administrative and moral commitment to place the construction of a university union building at the top of the priority list after the construction of the new library
- the four-year stabilization of tuition so that sutdents would pay the same rates as seniors that they paid as freshmen
- 20% of the increased student fee to be given to students for student programs and activities
- the elimination of Rule One
- full support of programs now being developed and proposed by the black students of Syracuse University
- A thorough study of the University Hill Corp.
- increased regard for members of the surrounding community, especially concerning relocation and the policy of Eminent Domain.

Open List

Spokesmen are emphasising, however, that the list is not a closed one and that further points might be added as discussions in the living centers take place tomorrow night.

The list of faculty members who have agreed to participate in those discussions was still growing late Monday night as student coordinators were in the process of issuing personal invitations.

Many of the faculty members accepting the invitations also declared their support for the boycott. Even a few who do not particularly care for the tactics of staying away from classes, however, have expressed agreement with many of the student's complaints and a willingness to visit living centers to discuss them.

No penalties

Recognizing the rights of students who wish to attend class despite the boycott, coordinators are asking faculty members who hold classes not to penalize students who join in the boycott and discussions.

No group demonstrations or confrontations of any kind are being planned and all such mass meetings are being discouraged.

'No sympathy or interest'

Nickerson hits suburban whites

By RONI ZLOKOWER
Associate Editor

Nassau County Executive Eugene H. Nickerson described Nassau last night as a "prototype of white suburbia surrounding New York City where we see on a small scale the problems of New York City."

Lecturing in Maxwell, Nickerson noted a tremendous lack of low income housing in Nassau, a county with a population of a million and one-half. It is the largest suburban county in the United States, with a black population of about 65,000.

The causes which he cited for this lack of housing a state constitution which prohibits counties for having housing authority and the overlapping jurisdiction of Nassau's three towns and 60 villages.

"Most of my constituents," he said, "are middle income whites who have no sympathy or interest in poor people and the blacks. They are almost atagonistic toward these groups because they feel the money needed to help these people will have to come from themselves."

In political terms, he said, the solution lies in re-allocating resources on the Federal and local levels. First of all, we must accomplish tax reform so that people with the greatest income will pay the greatest share.

Under the present Federal income tax system, he said, lower income people pay a disproportionate part of local taxes, while the wealthy get back a great part of their local tax payments.

"The progressive nature of the Federal income tax works regressively on the local tax level," Nickerson said.

"To get support from the middle class people, we must couple our social programs with a reform of tax laws, and a redoing of the local tax structure."

Core cities can't successfully reach out to the suburbs for money, he said, because the money doesn't necessarily come from the wealthy. In Nassau, for example, Nickerson cited that one-third of the county budget goes to welfare and medicaid.

"By reallocating Federal and state revenue, we will get the money from the suburbs, from those who are most wealthy and ought to be contributing to the solving of economic problems."

In answer to a question about what positive steps have been made at the local level under his administration, Nickerson noted 1) the creation of county cooperative service centers, such as the one at Glen Cove, which are bringing services relevant to the poor directly to them; 2) the job development center of the Human Rights Commission, presently run on Federal and state guidelines; and 3) the creation of the non-profit housing corporation, for which Nickerson hopes to make community land available.

Nickerson offered no comment on the rumor that he is a probable candidate for the governorship in 1970, but he did say "I would be interested."

SU and the community

Dilemma group seeks social change

By JOYCE ROWE

Editor's Note: This is the first in a series of articles in which the Daily Orange will examine the multifarious roles played by the committees and departments of SU which serve the community.

On February 28, the University of Pennsylvania distributed a letter to its alumni. The topic of discussion was the welfare of the community adjoining the campus. A five-day peaceful demonstration at Penn had aimed to convince the University of its obligation to consider its neighbors, especially those poor whose very homes may depend on the growth of the school. A commission was subsequently organized to achieve adequate housing for low-income families in the neighborhood and direct future physical development to insure housing for those whose homes are demolished.

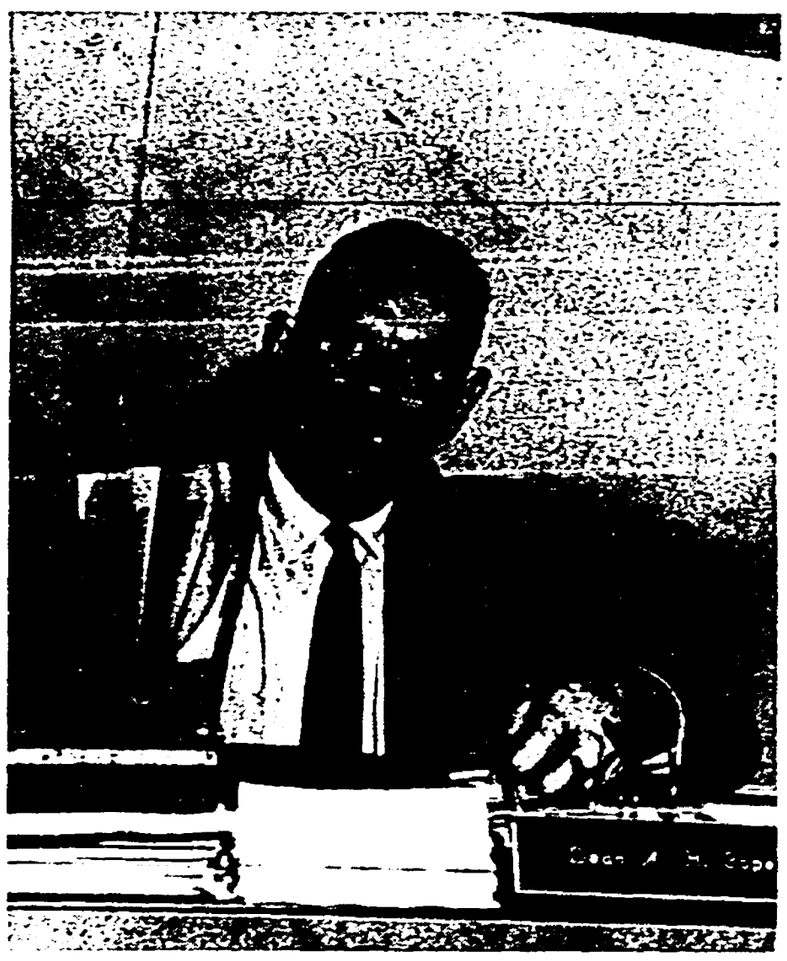
The Maxwell Committee on the American Dilemma circulated a copy of this letter because it is typical of the growing cooperation between educational insitutions and their surroundings. Ironically, rich colleges are never too far from the ghetto. This arrangement really isn't so bad, for the school provides most of the resources and equipment which when utilized can alleviate the conditions of poverty. SU's American Dilemma Committee, headed by Liberal Arts Dean Alfred Cope, is a group of volunteer faculty members concerned with critical issues facing American society and especially those in the urban community. Their activities include "Operation Shoestring," a program designed to offer college course work for non-whites in the Syracuse community; a human relations course in the Syracuse city high schools at the students' request; and a civil service preparation course.

"Ghetto image"

Bob Dicks, coordinator of the Program for Civil Service Familiarization and Preparation, described the biggest obstacle in the path to progress with these projects: the image which the university has created in the ghetto. It seem that SU cannot be commended enough for the wide range of accomplishments in this area, especially the tutoring programs. But even if the record is good, our image has suffered with a few mistakes which evoke ill feeling. The black community tends to look with disfavor and suspicion on everything we do, because there have been incidents when we built up ideas to obtain money without being really interested in carrying out the program. When cash obtained with money promises to help them is distributed to unrelated areas, the black community has reason to believe that we have no real commitment. Hence trust is a key factor in the future success of the committee's inital projects."

High School Project

At the death of Martin Luther King, black and white students in Syracuse high schools requested a human relations program. The idea was brought to the attention of the Maxwell Committee by Mrs. Stephen Bailey. With the usual funding problems, the project got off to a shaky start this fall. Four public high schools aided in the selection of grad students to handle classes and course content. The cost for this is shared by the Social Studies Curriculum Center and the schools, and under the coordination of Richard Tabors the program is now being jointly sponsored by the American Dilemma Committee, the Maxwell School, SSCC, the University and the Syracuse Public School System.



In its trial run, the human relations course met with enthusiasm and success last semester. An elective, it is open to juniors and seniors. The four instructors are not tied down to any definite presentation of material, though the original course outline suggested the general objectives--discussion of interpresonal relations, problems of individuality, discipline and conformity; the aspirations, frustrations, careers and life chances of students; and the changes to be made in schools and the problems of American education.

Japhet Zwana emphasized role playing in his class at Central Technical High. Using "psycho-drama" methods, he got his students to practice moving into situations with which their own experience seldom confronts them. The aim was to help break down those human barriers which people set up against one another.

James Ritter at Nottingham launched his course from an entirely different prespective. He accented the problem of education in a complex society–the fragmentation of the system and subsequent disconnection between students, faculty and administration which results in the "loss of concept of a person." Thus the human relations course was largely experimental this year, and it has revealed the value of this kind of teaching. The board of education continued it into this semester and should make it a standard elective in the future.

Program Controversy

"Operation Shoestring" has been the most controversial activity of the American Dilemma Committee. Debate arose over what was considered a double standard of admission for whites and blacks. The object of "Shoestring" is, in Dean Cope's words, "compensatory education for those who by reason of poverty or discrimination are not prepared for college upon graduation from high school." Tutoring and counseling has been undertaken by committee members in hopes of upgrading the education of blacks to what they would have had in the absence of racial barriers. Some who feel that the causes of social amelioration are best served by large black enrollments want to have them admitted right off, whether or not these students demonstrate academic readiness.

DEAN ALFRED H. COPE

Under director Chris Bladden, "Shoestring" began to operate last August. Any non-white, high school grad in Onondaga County was entitled to sign up and professors were selected for tutoring. This instruction was designed to fill in the education gap between the privileged and underprivileged. The Maxwell Committee raised money so that these students could waive fees and take the College Proficiency Examination when they had done well enough in their work. Of the 17 who entered the program last summer, only one boy has been admitted and is currently studying at the University. But "one winner" is a real accomplishment in this early stage. The boy had never been identified as college material and without both his own efforts and the opportunity which the Maxwell Committee offered him, his life would not be taking its new shape. This low percentage doesn't really tell the whole story, because six students dropped out early, two left and returned, and the remaining are now taking courses again at University College. These setbacks have their roots in another of the socio-economic factors which are inevitable in any undertaking that tries to cast aside the forces of discrimination. From this point of view, Operation Shoestring has been a successful initial endeavor. There are now 12 people working with the program.

Grants sought

In part, the future success of "Shoestring" will be decided financially. Maxwell has requested $75,000 from Esso, and, at Dean Cope's suggestion, University College is trying to obtain a million for a six-year program of study for less privileged students of the county. Programs could be set up to enable them either to continue education in some form or to get better jobs.

In addition to these long-range projects, the American Dilemma Committee is evolving small scale innovations of a similar nature and purpose. What the committee is really trying to do is to instigate greater racial freedom and awareness into our own atmosphere, as well as to render aid without. For instance, it was at the urging of the group that tthe Kerner Report was added to last summer's reading list. A campaign is now on to find more black grad students, therefore encouraging a larger percentage of black professors. As black courses become more popular and relevant, Prof. Ronald Walters takes charge of a summer workshop of human relations in African Studies. The committee is using its influence to encourage black participation everywhere, in private industry as well as our own admissions office.

Without doubt there is ample room for expansion on all of these subjects. The university still has not tapped all of its resources. If the conditions that racial injustice has imposed on the black man can ever find a remedy, ti will only be in nationwide cooperation between those institutions which appear to have it all and the black community. At first the progress is very slow, perhaps hampered by social attitudes, and fear of the futility of past efforts. The university is well equipped for its responsibility and aids itself when helping others. Big social change is a culmination of little bits of progress here and there. This is the value of the American Dilemma Committee as one in the many growing all over the country.

Dr. Ivan Svitak

Exiled Dubcek aide predicts Czech 'wave of terror'

By MARGARET GENOVESE

Dr. Ivan Svitak, expelled from the Czechoslovak Communist Party in 1964 for "revisionism," predicted that the final act of what he termed the "Czechoslovak tragedy" will come soon, "maybe next month." His lectures on campus Friday came one day after the ousting of Alexander Dubcek, a liberal reformer, as head of the Czech Communist Party.

Dr. Svitak spoke at 11 a.m. to students in 221 Maxwell and again at 3 p.m. in the Maxwell Founders Room on various consequences of the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia.

Svitak, who had served as a member of Dubcek's liberal "braintrust," was in exile in Vienna in August 1968 when the first acts of the drama were played out. As a continuation of the consequences of the Soviet occupation he sees a "wave of terror" coming now, eight months after the invasion.

The situation is much more explosive than it was one year ago, Svitak explained, and events may be triggered by unimportant causes such as the Czech defeat of the Soviet hockey team that touched off recent demonstrations in Prague. These incidents, said Svitak, "will have far reaching effects."

"Even after the resignation of Dubcek. the force still exists," he said. He added that although the intellectuals lost in their try at reform, there is "a certain unity" developing between Czechoslovak workers and students.

He paralleled the Soviet occupation of 1968 with the fascist occupation in 1938. He viewed it as a neo-colonial move of Soviet agression. He said, "I am afraid that the Brezhnev doctrine is very dangerous; it is a doctrine of agression and will go farther. Stalin did not dare do what Brezhnev did. Students from Prague in October 1968 were writing on the walls 'Brezhnev is Hitler.'"

He said the "humanization and liberalization" movement within the Czechoslovak Communist party has shown the Soviets a possible alternative to their brand of socialism and the "bringing about the end of the Stalinist institutions." Svitak said, "Therefore, the Soviet power elite preferred the use of force." He sees this use of force as the beginning of the disintegration of the Soviet Union and "not as a sign of strength, but of weakness."

The reason for the invasion was not a strategic necessity or the fear of a German threat, but rather according to Svitak, a "fear of infection" of democratic ideas to the USSR. He called the occupation a "perfectly executed neo-colonialist plan," and " a warning to potential opposition forces inside the Soviet Union." "The Soviet Union is afraid of its own future," Svitak said, "this makes the situation risky."

Dr. Svitak said the crisis in Eastern Europe might help to end the war in Vietnam as "Americans realize the real danger is in Europe and not in Vietnam." He pointed out, however, that during the August invasion, "no one expected that anyone would help us, It was an experiment within a socialist country." He said, "We are not blaming anybody for what happened in Czechoslovakia. I think the only possible people who are to blame, if there is anybody to blame for the failure of the Czechsolvakian experiment, are the Czechs. We ourselves, and not anybody else."

In concluding the first lecture, Dr. Svitak made three observations. First, that the Czechs were not fighting for a "Utopia," but "for the European values and the basic values of man, close to the basic ideas of the great men in history, close to Marxist humanism." However, in the crucial moment the Czechoslovakian people, "gave up the fight." Second, that the "lesson of Prague" was that "it is impossible to make Soviet Communism humanistic," and third, that the Czechoslovakian cause must "lose before it wins."

ANGUS H. TWOMBLY — Editor-in-Chief

MANAGING EDITOR - Alan Stamm EXECUTIVE EDITOR - Karen Wiediger NEWS EDITOR - Fred Tuccillo EDITORIAL DIRECTOR - David A. Ross COPY EDITOR - Jean Havens FEATURE EDITOR - Roz Mazer SPORTS EDITOR - Mike Weber CAMPUS AFFAIRS EDITOR - Larry Kramer PHOTOGRAPHY EDITOR - Clint Clemens ASSOCIATE EDITORS - Andrij Bilyk, Kay Christensen, Beth Hillson, Rona Kavee, Helene Macdonald, Charles Shapiro, Dan Schlossberg, Patti Williams, Roni Ziokower.

DAILY ORANGE

Syracuse University's Daily Newspaper. Since 1903

TUESDAY, APRIL 22, 1969 PAGE 3

STEVEN P. STROBRIDGE — Business Manager

ASSISTANT BUSINESS MANAGER— Art Depasqua, NATIONAL ADVERTISING MANAGER— Janet Meyer ACCOUNT EXECUTIVES— Roger Black, Jim Maney, Mike Greenstein.

Published Tuesday, through Friday during the academic year by students of Syracuse University. Offices located at 200 Brooklea Drive, Fayetteville, N.Y., and 1101 East Adams St., Syracuse, New York. Entered as Second Class matter at the U.S. Post Office, Fayetteville, N.Y. 13066.

Boycott: the means, not the end

SU students are being asked to support a boycott of classes on Wednesday in what can be called a demonstration of "student power." The Daily Orange finds it indeed commendable that students should want to flex their muscles in such a relatively undisruptive manner. It must be stressed at the outset, however, that an academic atmosphere must be maintained during the boycott, or it will turn into just another excuse for cutting classes.

Regardless of what is planned, the boycott will still be just another excuse for cutting classes for many. To those people, "student power" and academic issues are hazy, inconclusive and not entirely relevant to their purpose at SU. That purpose, whatever it may be, is despicable. There is an effort being made to ensure some kind of learning experience during the time that students are boycotting. This is perhaps meant both to reassure the faculty that this is not an easy cop out for the lazy man and to keep some kind of constructive activity open to students so we don't have to watch the protest disintegrate into a children's battleground for war games with real buildings.

There is significant faculty support for the boycott. This support will be a necessary ingrediant in the strike's legitimacy and also, hopefully, an added factor of stability.

The role of the faculty may seem somewhat unsure. Some will be participating in discussions and others will be at class as usual. Faculty boycotts are unnecessary. Should class not be provided, students not wishing to boycott will be wronged, but to these students we say there is no reason to decry the boycott as nonacademic. One day without classes is symbolic, not detrimental to one's education. Moreover, if properly used, this day can be more educational than any day in the classroom.

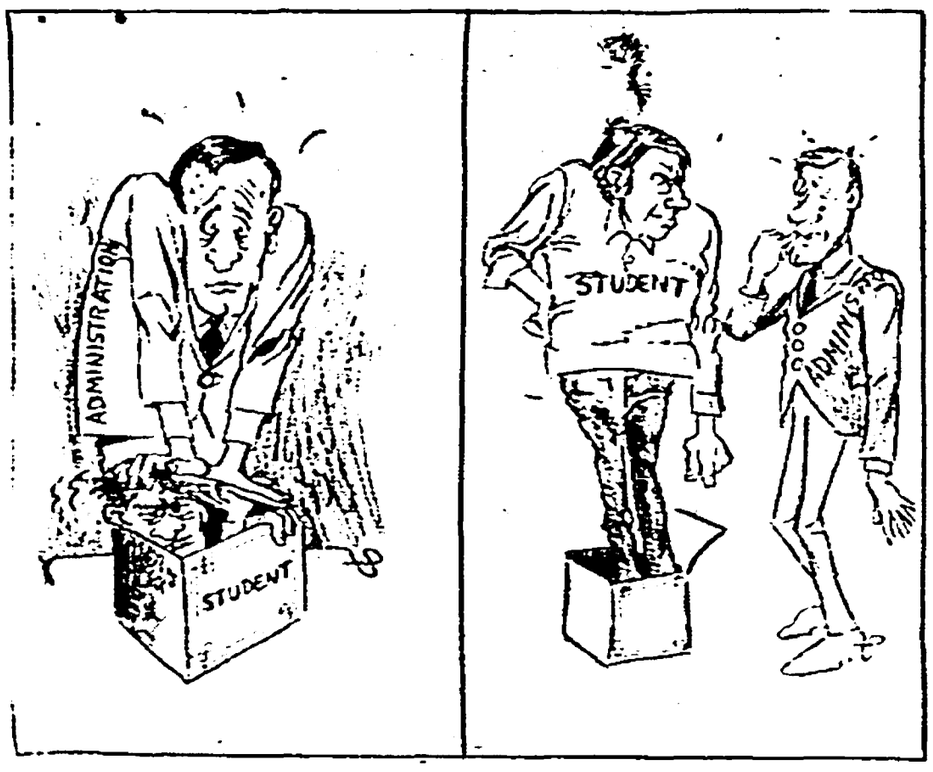
It is unfortunate, however, that such a strike would come at a time when an impressive group of student leaders are making meaningful progress with the administration. The second of the meeting between the two was held yesterday, and the atmosphere was encouraging.

Thus, we have something of a disparity between the groups. Among the groups leading the boycott and the group leading the discussion with the administrators are common goals and mutual participants. That the boycott was planned in advance of yesterdays meeting is somewhat bewildering, but because we interpret that boycott as no more than a manifestation of support and concern, the Daily Orange encourages students to join the picket lines and discussion groups on Wednesday.

Dorm autonomy will be the issue that rallies many to support the boycott. Hopefully concern for academics will arouse others. As of now, there is no reason why the boycott should last more than one day and no reason why there should be violence or any disorder. Legitimate grievances are made against the university, but legitimate progress is also resulting. Show your support students, but no more is needed.

'Join us'

The scheduled boycott of classes tomorrow will serve to demonstrate the belief, expressed over many months of frustrated effort, that there are many serious issues which should be brought out into the open, evaluated, and acted upon.



For the past two days the coordinating body of Students for a Better University have been attempting to indicate the broad scope of these issues and bring them into open discussion during the boycott of classes tomorrow.

The boycott has been designed to demonstrate student agreement and unity in calling for discussion and action on the issues. If students join in the boycott and dorm discussions they will be demonstrating their concern for the issues but, perhaps more importantly, they will be showing student unity in a way that it has never been shown here.

Faculty members are asked to hold classes but not penalize those students who use the day for an evaluation of issues. We hope faculty members will attend and participate in these sessions during their free time.

This boycott will make or break any influence that students will have on decisions which affect all of us. Please join in the campus boycott Wednesday. Make student power a reality.

— — Students for a Better University

"So' right?" "Not Quite."

SG stand

Syracuse University has reached a critical point in its existence. The students have decided that we are going to look beyond social issues to the more substantive problems creating a change in the entire atmosphere of this institution, in order to make the university more responsive to the academic needs of the student body. We now await the administration's response.

But it is not merely enough to say we want change. No one will deny that there are many wrongs within this university. Students are not given enough finances to sponsor speaker programs and public forums. We find that our courses are less stimulating than some we had in high school. Professors do not spend enough time visiting dorms to speak and hold discussions with students, while at the same time atmosphere of the dorm continues to deteriorate and make it increasingly less inviting. These problems have existed for one hundred years. And for one hundred years we, as a student body, have been silent. It is time now for a change.

By boycotting classes tomorrow, we are demonstrating to the administration that we are concerned and will stand up for what we believe is right. We are, in a sense, forcing the administration to take us seriously because we are acting responsively.

— — Chuck Hicks and David Ifshin

'For 100 people, Sunday was a nightmare'

Harvey Schwartz, a brother of Kappa Sigma, is Editor-in-Chief of the "Promethean." A junior in the School of Journalism, Schwartz is also President of Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalism honorary.

"Obladee-oblada life goes on." Driving down Comstock Avenue, the girls in short skirts with bright yellow hair laugh in the sun as a car full of guys whistles by. Two dogs fight over a piece of rope. Cars are being washed. Kites are dancing. And the man on the seat next to you lost his son an hour earlier and you must go to the morgue to identify the body.

"Life goes on, life goes on." And it does, as it must, but colors aren't as bright and smiles aren't as easy because four of your friends won't be around any more. For a hundred people Sunday was a nightmare nobody is going to wake up from...but you still don't really believe it happened. Everything will be all right. But you know it won't.

"La, la, la, la life goes on." You're waiting at Hancock Airport, waiting for the parents of a guy who had the greatest future in the world all lined up for him until something...you still can't believe what...happened to him and five other boys driving to the Toddle House at 3:38 Sunday morning.

There are 45 minutes left until the next flight they could be on will arrive. You wish the hands on the clock would hurry so you won't have to think, for the last thing you want now is 45 minutes along with your thoughts.

You think of the confusion in the morning. "Who, where, WHY?" And you think of the four bodies in the County Morgue and you scream to yourself THIS CAN'T BE TRUE but you saw the coroner pull back a white sheet from four faces so badly mangled they couldn't have been the guys you were up with until ten minutes before they decided to get something to eat.

Harvey Schwartz

And you think of the parents on the way to Syracuse for the last time, parents told at 5 a.m. in the morning their son could not live. My God, you wish the clock would hurry so you can stop thinking.

And you think of the "and now the news" on the radio on the way to the airport and the easy way it said four names and that word--dead--and followed with a deordant commercial.

You remember the hope that through the morning glistened like drops of water in the sunlight...only to fall into a mud puddle, then another drop appearing, another name at another hospital...and again that word...and again the drops falls.

You think of standing between the bravest parents in the world as the doctor calmly explains that their son may live another three hours or another three days, but he will surely die. And these incredible people being asked five minutes later by a machine-made nurse for their son's social security number, much good that will do him now. And, most anguishing of all, you remember hearing parents' prayers change from "Let him live" to "Let it be fast."

There are five minutes left.

You wish the clock would hurry.

No, you wish it would go backwards, back to yesterday. Back before that single second that stands as a dividing line between life and death and which cannot with all the power in the world be crossed again.

You wish it would go backwards, but you know it won't. So you can only sit and think.

Consumers' report, part 3

The price is not right--LP's, art supplies

By SAM HEMMINGWAY

There is a cultural explosion happening these days, so people say, and a random sampling of prices for art supplies and records, two media representative of this movement, reveals that there is a price explosion as well.

However, the price differences between stores selling these commodities on the Hill and in the city are mixed. Especially in the case of the record business, lower prices can be found on Marshall Street. Due primarily to the never-ceasing price wars between Uncle Bruce's Music Box and the Record Runner, the penny-wise student need not travel far.

At these two stores a normal rock album will sell for $3.67. Special double albums by groups like the Beatles, Jimi Hendrix and Canned Heat will go for approximately the same price.

In most cases old folk ablums, by such artists as Judy Collins, Buffy St. Marie, Eric Andersen and Siegal-Schwall are priced at $4.37 at both stores.

Jazz albums are in this same category; such artists as Getz, Mann, Charles Lloyd Quartet, Coltrane and the Modern Jazz Quartet sell for $4.37 at both Uncle Bruce's and Record Runner. Broadway shows are cheaper at the Music Box; movie sound tracks are less expensive at the Record Runner. The soundtrack to "Hair" sells for $4.77 at Bruce's, $4.37 at Record Runner.

The Corner Store admits to slightly higher prices. The single rock album goes for $3.97. Most folk albums list for $4.77. Jazz is bracketed at both the $3.97 and $4.77 categories. Classical albums are cheap, many selling at $2.45. Although in most cases the slightly higher prices are due to the credit card advantage, it should be noted that of the three campus record outlets, the Corner Store has the widest variety of rock and acid-rock albums. After all, whoever heard of a group named "Boa Constrictor and a Natural Vine?"

In all fairness, it should be also pointed out that the Record Runner contains the strongest blues collection, and Uncle Bruce's the best oldie and classical collection.

Prices at the three campus stores stand well when compared with other metropolitan outlets. At Woolworth's and Grant's rock albums sell for $3.77, 10 cents more than on the Hill. At K—Mart, despite a relatively poor selection, the price is 10 cents cheaper than on the Hill. Espeically in the case of Woolworth's, way-out albums in limited numbers are available, ready to infiltrate the collections Syracuse's record-buying youth.

At all three department stores, jazz and classical records are practically non-existent. Muzak-music, by such people as Wayne Newton, sell for prices close to those of rock albums. Movie and stage soundtracks are generally $4.97 at Woolworth's, $5.17 at K—Mart, and $4.77 at Grants.

Undoubtedly the most expensive store visited--even more expensive than the Corner Store--was Watts Record Shop. A normal rock album sells for $4.17. Soundtracks, old folk albums, and most jazz records sell for $4.88. The store's strong points are its soul collection and its quantity of discs from foreign countries.

In the area of art supplies it is difficult to distinguish general differences as each store sells different brands. Primary downtown competition comes from the Economy Bookstore on South Salina Street. Economy lists Artist Charcoal 24 sheets, 18" X 24", by the Strathmore Company for $3.80; Alexis Drawing pad of 24 sheets, 18"X 24" for $2.65; Water Color pad of 12 sheets, 18"X24", for $3.65.

The Bookstore has less variety but larger amounts. Stathmore Alexis Layout paper, 75 sheets, 18"X 24", costs $3.80. LeVine sells the Beverly line for lower prices, in less variety and in less quantity.

In articles where prices can be compared, a bottle of Higgins Drawing Ink sells for $.55 at the Economy, $.60 at LeVine's and from $.55 to $.75 at the Bookstore. Kneaded erasers sell for $.15 at LeVine's, 10 cents cheaper than at the Bookstore of Economy. Oil paints range from $.55 to $1.50 at Economy, $.55 to $1.00 at LeVine's and $.45 to $1.35 at the Bookstore. Water colors are approximately $.20 cheaper at Economy than at LeVine's or the Bookstore but the choice is not as good. "Bestest" 4 ounce cans of Rubber Cement sell for $.45 at LeVine's and the Bookstore and $.45 for the Carter version at Economy. The student, however, enjoys a larger selection of this product at Economy.

For those of us who are not art students, this all may seem quite boring. Economy also sells stationary and other student materials as well. Many will be interested to learn that Economy allows you to buy single Bic ball point pens for $.19. The Bookstore selection limits you to a six-pac of Bics for $.99. It is this type of difference that makes Economy and other stores downtown seem more desirable to students.

Senate ponders boycott position

By COLETTE STALLINGS

After the swearing-in of four senators-at-large to provide a quorum, Student Senate last night passed the constitutions of St. Mary's men, DellPlain and Watson dormitories.

Following the constitutions' passage, Senator Steve Grossman of Watson, requested that Senate pass a revolution pledging support of the autonomous dorms.

The resolution that "Student Senate shall wholeheartedly support all efforts of autonomous living centers" was passed with the understanding that the term "living center" does not refer solely to dormitories.

According to Government Structures Committee Chairman John Ross, one fraternity has submitted its constitution for Senate's approval. "I'm not exactly sure what to do," Ross said, referring to the requirement that all constitutions approved by Senate must have an open membership policy. "I'm not in the mood to exempt the entire Greek system. We will formulate some policy after talking to the president of each house."

Senate passed a resolution that any action taken to support autonomous dorms should be up to individual senators, but postponed until tonight any discussion on the possibility of Senate taking action as a body as requested by Grossman. Lance Wisniewski and John Ross were nominated for Speaker of the Senate. Andrew Winning and Bill Egan were nominated for the position of Speaker Pro Tempore. Nominations will remain open through tonight and elections will be conducted at Senate's meeting next Tuesday.

Reporting on the meeting yesterday of student leaders, administrators and faculty, speaker pro-tempore John Diamond noted:

--5% of the increased student tax will be given to the student, finance board, provided this is approved by the trustees. This increase would give the finance board of approximately $300,000.

--A meeting is to be held next week to establish the priority of campus buildings. If the university union is placed second, after the library, it may be completed within four years. The maximum time, regardless of priority, is ten years.

--The possibility that students be able to contract dorm rooms for only one semester is being investigated.

--Coops will be made available in accordance to demands.

--The resident advisor system will not be substantially revised on paper, it will be in reality. Students will receive a copy of resident advisor's instructions, probably in dates and data.

Watson move to autonomy culminating

By VIC LIVINGSTON

As the campus moves closer to tomorrow's boycott, the men of Watson dormitory have been planning their formal declaration of dorm autonomy Wednesday night, a plan they feel greatly contributed to the current campus movement.

For the past three days, the Watson dormitory council has met to finalize their constitution and by-laws, which were approved by the Inter-Dormitory Council (IDC) yesterday.

The Council heard suggestions to invite dates and guest faculty members to floor lounges to discuss the issues revolving around current campus discontent over glasses of wine and cheese trays. Watson men would then be expressing their interest in providing a dialogue concerning a boycott, while asserting their right of dorm autonomy with the presence of wine and women on the floors.

However, there is great concern over possible punitive action by the dean of men through dorm director Bill Lombardo and his resident advisor staff. Lombardo, in a meeting with dorm leaders, outlined his plans concerning "infringement of university rules." Under this plan, residents will be classified under three major catagories: 1) non--offenders, 2) "orderly offenders" and "one-night (Wednesday) offenders" and 3) "habitual offenders." Persons in the first catagory will not be subject to disciplinary action. Those using the Wednesday night "confrontation" to express their support of dorm autonomy will still be subject to disciplinary action, but action will be milder than that taken against habitual offenders, presumably Watson men who continue to assert their autonomy.

Lombardo's statement aroused fear in some Watson resident. Sunday night, SG President Chuck Hicks, SG

(Continued on Page 9)

Boycott leaders talk on floors

By LARRY KRAMER
Campus Affairs Editor

In a late hour attempt to achieve maximum communication ties with the student body, the student leaders of the Students for a Better University (SBU) are visiting every living center floor in the university.

Chuck Hicks, Dave Ifshin, Cindy Bailey, and Ed Feldman began the floor visitations at Watson and Dellplain Sunday night. The reason given for beginning at those dorms was to postpone their plans to declare dormatory autonomy from Tuesday night to Wednesday night.

Various dormatory presidents carried the talks to their own dorms last night and will continue to tonight. Also participating in the meetings will be the president of the Inter-Fraternity Council, Bob Kelly, and Ed Feldman. Both will be speaking to fraternity and sorority houses.

In Sunday night's visits, Hicks told floors in Watson, "This is your boycott, we want your issues. The issues we've used up to now were brought up by you earlier this year." He continued to stress the importance of student involvement in setting down the issues.

Ifshin basically stressed the same points on his floor. However, he added, "We don't want violence and there's no reason for it. If you go prematurely on Tuesday, I'll stand behind you, but I'm here to tell you how important it is to wait."

There was a different attitude in the other dorms. Instead of having to calm down the residents concerning autonomy, the leaders were basically trying to establish more issues to work with.

Most dorms are individually preparing their own proposals for autonomy. Many will be participating in the autonomy move Wednesday night, following the boycott. They plan to have professors on floors, discussing academics, the boycott, and student unrest generally. Wine and cheese will be served to symbolize the autonomous situation.

Dorm Presidents Steve Tober (Booth), Marc Cavanough (Watson), Ed Barron (St. Mary's Men), Fred Boss (Lawrinson), and Bob Klein (Sadler) were scheduled to speak to their dorms. Also speaking to students are Jeff Portnoy, Cindy Bailey, Joey Edwardh, Jerry Tatarian, Peg Johnston, Craig Baumgarten, Ed Bacal, Andy Rosenblatt, Bob Tembeckjian and Lance Wisniewski.

Crackle, squeak . . .

Electronic Moog music to become the mood music of the future

By SUE SHAPIRO

The swinging cats of the music world have turned on to what may be the hottest, craziest new vogue in music since ragtime--the Electronic Sound.

The Sound is a bunch of wild buzzes, squeaks, crackles and hisses produced by a bizarre looking machine called the Moog Synthesizer. The Moog, an ingenious contraption of transistors, wires, generators, filters, oscillators, circuits and knobs hooked onto what resembles an organ keyboard, has revolutionized contemporary music.

SU has a baby Moog up in room 407 of Crouse College. The synthesizer is the basic piece of equipment in the university's electronic studio.

Installed in 1966, the studio was one of the first in the country, and it is today one of the most complex, sophisticated sound laboratories on any college campus.

According to Richard Burns, Crouse audio engineer, very few universities have invested in such a large, expert system or have a formal program in electronic music.

The mechanical brainchild of Robert Moog, 34, an engineering physics Ph.D. from Cornell, the machine can create an infinite number of variations of a single sound.

The keyboard generates sounds of all descriptions which are amplified, filtered, and modified by varying volume, speed, rate of attack and decay, and by adding artificial reverberations to create echo or vibrato effects.

Sensational sound qualities are manufactured by filtering sounds into narrow bands on the Mogg's two tape channels, and then combining them on multiple tracks of a single tape.

The next step in avant-garde music-making is to put the Moog to work with a computer. Compositions will be coded on punch cards and the computer will be programmed to manipulate the sound controls.

Dr. Franklin E. Morris, director of the Crouse Electronic Studio, argues against claims that all this electronic hocus-pocus and technical wizardy will impersonalize music.

"We should think of the synthesizer as just another instrument. It doesn't dehumanize music any more than the piano does," he says.

The most spectacular thing about the Moog, Morris says, is that, theoretically, it can make any sound at all whereas the traditional instruments have very limited sounds.

Actually, electronic music has been around for the past 15 years. But not until Columbia Records put out an LP called "Switched-On Bach," did the world tune in on the most astounding musical break-through in years.

The record, electronic orchestrations of ten Bach compositions, sold 150,000 copies in four months; the Beatles and the Rolling Stones put in orders for the Moog; and the era of electronic music blasted into being.

"I think it would dumbfound Bach as well as Mr. Moog to know that it took a record of synthesized Bach to win popular recognition of electronic music," Morris said.

The 11 students in the electronic music program here are not concerned with transcribing classical compositions like Bach into synthesized sound. Their work is largely experimental, involving original electronic compositions and instruction in the nature of sound.

The phenomenon of mixed media is a by-product of the Moog mode of music. The SU electronic studio has staged several concerts mixing together sound, visual effects, dance and theatrics. Collaborations of media are becoming more and more widespread, having been used by Warhol, dancer Merce Cunningham, and scores of theatre groups.

Morris thinks mixed media was the result of the feeling that taped synthesized Moog music was "too dull" for an audience.

"An audience likes to see people perform on the stage," he explained.

Mixed media shows in which the music is used in conjunction with a live performance, have been highly successful.

Morris firmly believes that the modern Moog, which costs no more than a Steinway grand piano, will someday become as common an instrument as the piano.

"They'll put the synthesizer in an Italian Provincial case," he said, "and in 25 years you'll be able to buy it in Sears Roebuck."

CROUSE'S ELECTRONIC MUSIC SCENE

Sociologists set parley on welfare, media

The Syracuse University sociology department will sponsor a Conference on Welfare and the Mass Media April 27, 28 and 29.

"Illegitimacy and Welfare," "Aid to Dependent Children" and "Who Are the Urban Poor?" are among topics to be discussed by sociologists and reporters at the conference, the second of two supported by a grant by the National Science Foundation as part of the agency's program to increase public understanding of social science research.

George Wiley, executive director of the National Welfare Rights Organization, Washington, will participate. Lawrence Podell, author of "Families on Welfare in New York City," and James E. Teele of the Harvard School of Public Health are among the speakers. The CBS documentary, "Hunger in America," will be shown during the conference, which is under the direction of Dr. Charles V. Willie, chairman of the Syracuse University sociology department. Willie previously directed a Conference on Crime and the Press at the University Jan. 12-14, 1969.

Willie said: "The purpose of the welfare conference is to increase public understanding of social science analysis of public welfare as a social problem. Newspaper, television and radio professionals are brought together with social scientists to examine welfare and how the public may deal with it, based on recent scientific investigations."

"Speical attention is given to unscrambling the technical language of social science research reports on welfare," Willie added.

The conference begins at 8 p.m. Sunday, April 27. All sessions are in the lecture hall of the University's Center for Continuing Education, 110 Roney Lane, Syracuse. It concludes at noon Tuesday, April 29.

Mrs. Jean Dietz, Boston Globe staff writer on public welfare and mental health, is chairman of the opening session on Illegitimacy and Welfare, which will be discussed by Teele, assistant professor in Harvard's department of maternal and child health.

The controversial CBS television documentary, "Hunger in America" will be shown at the 7:30 p.m. Monday session. Discussion afterward will be led by Robert E. Spearman, news director of WHEN Radio-TV, Syracuse, a CBS affiliate, with a sociologist, political scientist, economist and psychologist participating.

Popular art professor arrested, hospitalized

By JOHN WISNIEWSKI

Art students feel they have lost "one of the most creative and well-liked profs we've had at the Art School in a long while" due to the departure of Dr. Erhardt P. Schlieter, art history professor.

Schlieter, visiting lecturer for a year, was arraigned in Police Court April 11 on charges of second degree grand larceny and resisting arrest. According to police authorities, the 34-year-old professor was released on bail and is undergoing mental examinations at Twin Elms Hospital.

Schlieter is scheduled to re-appear in court May 8. He also faces charges in traffic court of leaving the scene of an accident, reckless driving and failure to produce a driver's license.

Police said that on April 10 Schlieter entered a patrol car parked on E. Fayette Street and sped away. While being chased by police, he hit another patrol car and continued on.

During the chase Schlieter lost control of the car and crashed into a Route 81 bridge abutment. Police apprehended him while he was fleeing the accident.

One student in the professor's art history lecture expressed surprise at the incident and went on to praise Schlieter's teaching ability. "He is a totally lovable person," the student said, "and he was able to give deep meaning to an otherwise unstimulating course."

Another student remarked that "Dr. Schlieter took a very enthusiastic approach toward teaching and knew everything inside out. It wouldn't be an overstatement to say he was liked by everyone."

Schlieter was so well-received by students that he was the personal choice of many to succeed the retiring Laurence Schmeckebier as dean of the Art School next fall.

Following his arrest, sympathetic art students placed a large red and white sign in front of Barclay Cottage saying: "Free Schlieter," and Twin Elms Hospital received numerous calls inquiring about the professor's condition.

In Schlieter's absence, Dean Schmeckebier has assumed duties as art history lecturer.

Aid granted to departmental religion study

Syracuse University's department of religion has been awarded $20,000 by the American Academy of Religion for a research project to improve the teaching of Asian religions.

H. Daniel Smith, associate professor of religion, will do research under the grant and work in cooperation with the Syracuse University Center for Instructional Communications and the South Asia Studies Program in the Maxwell Graduate School. Smith will devote full time to research for a year beginning in June.

Smith, who joined the faculty in 1958, teaches courses in Asian religions. He is currently finishing 11 documentary films showing some previously unfilmed Hindu rituals and celebrations.

Smith said he hopes to visit other campuses across the country to see what teachers are doing in the field of Asian religion and ask them what they might like to do but can't because materials aren't available. Smith said he will investigate advances in computer science to see what might apply to humanistic studies, "particularly in relation to the immense amounts of data that must be collated by historians of religions."

Speaking of the grant, Smith said: "We are grateful to the American Academy of Religion for making it possible to spend time on the vital matter of exploring the various ways to improve teaching.

Memorial service today for accident victims

A memorial service will be held today for four Kappa Sigma pledges at 10 a.m. in Hendricks Chapel.

The four SU students were killed early Sunday morning when the car in which they were riding flipped over in the 1200 block of James Street, skidded 282 feet and rammed into a traffic control pole.

Pronounced dead at the scene was Stephen P. Mears, 18, a freshman from Buffalo. Conrad Stanton-Cornely, 20, a junior from Pleasantville and Timothy J. Hart, 18, a freshman from Willimantic, Conn. both died at St. Joseph's Hospital Sunday morning. Kendall Eames, 19, of Marion, Mass., also a freshman, died at 2:15 p.m. at State University Hospital.

The driver of the car, Charles Vincent Forchelli, 21, of Flushing was admitted to St. Joseph's Hospital in fair condition and was treated for possible head injuries. A sixth passenger, Richard Hartnedy, a junior, was released in good condition from Crouse Irving Memorial Hospital

Hartnedy told police that all six had attended a beer party at Kappa Sigma Fraternity and had left shortly after 3:00 a.m. to get some breakfast. A witness said she had stopped her car at Sedgewick and James Streets and saw the Forchelli car come east down the hill, flip over, and slide down the hill on its roof before crashing into the traffic pole.

Forchelli told police that the car flipped over for no apparent reason and that he did not know how fast the car was going at the time of the accident. He was issued a summons for failure to have an inspection certificate.

A friend remembered...

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following tribute was written by Michael Greenstein, a close friend of one of Sunday morning's accident victims.

Good times provide little opportunity for reflection. It is when things are not going so well that a person has some time to think.

I first heard about the accident on Sunday morning. Just that it happened was bad enough. Instinctively, however, I hoped that a friend of mine, who was in that pledge class, was not involved.

That afternoon I learned that he was dead.

He had not been one of my real close friends, but I knew him well. We lived on the same dormitory floor for two years, and there are few ways I have found to get to know someone better.

Most freshman floors in Watson are pretty tight, but I believe that ours was extraordinarily so. Apathy is something that takes more than one year of college to learn. We were freshmen, we raised hell, and we learned about ourselves. My friend was right there among us.

I can remember painting the fence around the Physics Building the night before the Maryland game. Under his careful direction, we created a masterpiece in the pouring rain. When we came back in the morning, it had washed away.

And studying, or at least pretending to. There was a period of time when we would crowd into his room before a test, and listen to the William Tell Overture. It did not help our grades, but it did wonders for morale. I can recall an all-nighter before Christmas vacation, when both of us were doing rush jobs on papers. His was in Spanish, however, and he was almost blind by the time he got done with the accent marks.

Most of all, that year, there was goofing around. Shaving cream and water guns, food fights and torturing the downstairs RA. Or wading down to Ed's Place in a blizzard, and drinking until Ed threw us out. We finished off at Ike's, of course; a double order of home fries.

He was always scrambling last year. Running to class, or seeing a teacher, or just trying to keep his grades above water. He was intelligent, and industrious, but there are so often more important things to do besides school work. And he was wise; wise enough to be quiet when there was nothing important to say. He worried about money, as most of us do, and always held a job here or there. The cash kept his car running–for most of the year.

We talked about rooming together, at the end of the last year, but we could not get the details ironed out. It was well that we had not planned on it, for the chance for a semester abroad came up, and he took it.

I ran into him at HBC soon after he got back. He was with a bunch of guys from our freshman floor, and we talked for a while. A thin beard now surrounded his dark, thin face, and I noted that not too much more was gone from his gently receding hairline. The gleam still soared out from deep within his eyes, and his strange, raspy voice and high pitched giggle were present as well.

After that, the only times I saw him were in the Grant parking lot, M-W-F at nine. We would be walking in opposite directions, but we would always stop for a second or two to say hello. Before he went abroad, he used to zoom around, collar up and head down. Now he walked a lot slower. Maybe he knew where he was going.

I could have known him better, but there was so little time. When I remember him, however, it will not be as an acquaintance. I will remember him as a friend.

Diverse events scheduled for festival of arts

For 12 days in April and May, Syracuse University will feature a rich variety of cultural events. Thrity presentations planned by 13 schools and departments will make up the University's twelfth Festival of the Arts, taking place from Thursday, April 24 through Monday May 5.

There will be something for every taste and interest, including a lecture and exhibit about light as an art form, the premiere of a University-produced color film about the early 20th century illustrator Maxfield Parrish, and a lecture and several performances by composer Aaron Copland.

Three departments have combined their resources and skills to present a changing succession of communication activities in a "Box of Tricks" in the Newhouse Communications Center lobby. During the festival there will be exhibitions, films, lectures, concerts, dance performances, synchronized swimming, student-directed plays and poetry readings. All events but one are free and open to the public.

In the student-designed program of events Dr. Frank P. Piskor, vice chancellor and provost, says: "Our Fine Arts Festival at Syracuse makes an important contribution to our sense of community. This year it concentrates on the complete environment of man, a focus with exciting possibilities and one which has promoted many new combinations of faculty and students working and planning together in the arts and humanities."

The School of Art has scheduled an exhibit of works by graduate students beginning Thursday, an outdoor sale of student work on Friday and Saturday with on-the-spot portraiture, a lecture by sculptor Jason Seley on Friday, two lectures by painter-illustrator Dean Ellis on April 30, and a fashion show by students in costume design on May 1.

"The Art of Light in Creating Environment" will be demonstrated by the School Architecture. The exhibit includes films, light "pieces" made from neon, and a light and sound system requiring spectator participation.

The Center for Instructional Communication will show student films from other campuses Friday, films from the ghetto on April 28 and films made by S.U. students on May 4.

IFC officer-elect stresses change

Sunday night, Syracuse University's Inter-Fraternity Council held election of officers in combination with its annual Awards Banquet.

Succeeding Bob Kelly to the office of President is Mike Asen of Zeta Beta Tau.

In a speech following his election, Asen expressed the attitudes and feelings current among Greeks. "We must realize," he commented, "that we have an essential task to perform. We must begin to solve the problems that face us as Greeks and as students at Syracuse University. The Greek System needs to progress and shed its outmoded ideas and practices. We can no longer brush these problems under the rug and pretend they don't exist."

Asen added, however, that he does not intend that the Greek System strip itself of its fundamental ideals or traditions.. "I only want," he stated, "to bring forth what is positive about our system and eliminate the negative qualities."

Concerning the role of IFC itself, Asen cautioned that it could only offer suggestions and ideas to the individual fraternities. Change, he stressed, must come from within the separate fraternity houses.

"The climate is changing," Asen said in closing. "But it does not mean that the Greek system must die. Rather, never before in history has there been a greater need for fraternities and sororities. Enemies of the system eagerly cite hazing and drinking incidents, scholastic problems, and social membership disputes as evidence that fraternities and sororities are on their way out. I must disagree. Our potential for growth in both size and stature is now greatest in a climate plagued with apathy, impersonalization, and confusion. It's time for some positive, aggressive action."

IFC Vice-President is Pete Ives of Kappa Sigma, Secretary is Chuck Gabriel of Alpha Epsilon Pi, and Treasurer is John Daly of Kappa Phi Delta.

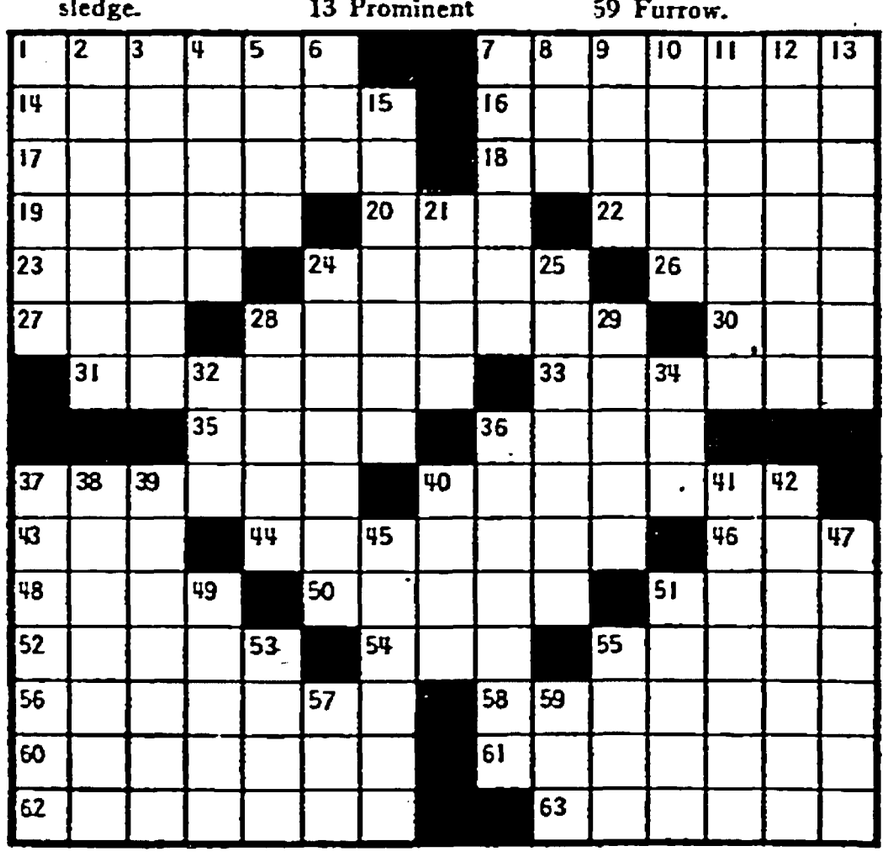
Harvard prof slates lecture

The Syracuse Branch of the English-Speaking Union will present Dr. Peter Riviere, professor of Social Anthropology at Harvard University, as guest speaker Saturday, in the parish house of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, 310 Montgomery Street.

His illustrated lecture will describe the life, customs and problems of the isolated "forest people" of the Amazon region.

Dr. Riviere made his first anthropological expedition in 1957 to film the life and customs of the Indian tribes of central South America.

Following the lecture will be a reception.



CROSSWORD PUZZLE

ACROSS

1 Specter.
7 The little man who isn't there?"
14 Dull.
16 Disinclination to move.
17 Patti.
18 Shows.
19 Convex moldings in columns.
20 "Le ___ s'amuse."
22 Takes out, in editing.
23 Fetid.
24 Opponent.
26 Angry: Colloq.
27 U.S. govt. agency: Initials.
28 Places of entertainment.
30 Connective.
31 Where Dartmouth is.
33 Dogs, in the Bois.
35 Arab chief.
36 Wild beast.
37 Musicale, for example.
40 Ancient Egyptian, for short: 2 words.
43 Ontario: Abbr.
44 Plains Indian sledge.
46 Hang down loosely.
48 In good trim.
50 Old Greek war cry.
51 Large bulrush.
52 Better qualified.
54 Equal: Prefix.
55 Gave (out) sparingly.
56 Private eye business.
58 Windward island.
60 Crazy ___: 3 words.
61 Part of Mexico.
62 Governmental groups.
63 Flair.

DOWN

1 ___ it?: 2 words.
2 Founder of the Hapsburg dynasty.
3 North or South.
4 Took it easy.
5 Thrice: Prefix.
6 Vandal's contemporary.
7 Moses' sister.
8 One: Scot.
9 Reverend: Abbr.
10 Spruces.
11 Go ___: 2 words.
12 Plane part.
13 Prominent Egyptians.
15 Flyby of Mars.
21 Again.
24 Renowned vacation spot.
25 New Hampshire resort.
28 Phenomenon in space.
29 Cloths with rough naps.
32 Saul's uncle.
34 N.Y.C. subway system: Initials.
36 Science.
37 Concert pieces.
38 Kind of hit, in a ball game: 2 words.
39 Verdi, for one.
40 Russian beer.
41 Howl.
42 Resident of an Ohio city.
45 Makes even.
47 Narrow-minded one.
49 "I cannot ___ lie.": 2 words.
51 Of sound.
53 Someone wildly amusing: Slang.
55 Numerical prefix.
57 Early mariner: Fr.
59 Furrow.

Dean Tatham to discuss campus unrest

David Tatham, dean of men, will discuss current campus unrest and the university's contact with the draft boards today at 5:30 p.m. on WAER radio's telephone-talk show, Speak Up. Questions and comments from listeners will be appreciated.

Broadway fans will be treated to five shows on Curtain Call, an historical presentation of the world of musical comedy, Wednesday at 6:00 p.m. The show will feature Bye Bye Birdie, Wildcat, Milk and Honey, No Strings and Sweet Charity.

Curtain Call will be followed at 9:30 p.m. by Just Jazz, featuuring guest performer Charlie Byrd. Questions concerning the guest or general comments on jazz are encouraged.

Big Chum program to include frosh men

Applications for the Big Chum-Little Chum program, sponsored by Traditions Commission, are now available at the receptionist's desk in the Women's Building.

Traditionally a service for incoming freshman women and transfer students, the program has been expanded this year to include freshman men under the Big Sister-Little Brother program.

All women students are eligible for involvement and need only fill out applications before April 30. There will be a convocation to grief everyone on both procedure and plans in Maxwell Auditorium, May 5, at 8:00 p.m.

3 new officers

ROTC cadets commissioned

Three Syracuse University Air Force ROTC cadets have received commissions at ceremonies held at the University.

The new officers are Thomas U. Wholey, Richard H. Karney, and Barry E. Applebee.

Presented their second lieutenant bars by Col. Claude R. Nelon, professor of aerospace studies, the officers are now scheduled for active duty. Lieutenants Applebee and Wholey will enter pilot training, and Lieutenant Karney will receive meteorology training to become a weather officer.

Guest speaker at the commissioning ceremony was Dr. Frederick J. Kramer, dean of the College of Liberal Arts.

Attending the ceremony were friends and relatives of the commissionees, and representatives of the schools and college from which the officers graduates, including Dr. L. Richard Oliker, associate dean of the College of Business Administration, and Dr. Salamon Eskinazi, chairman of the department of mechanical and aerospace engineering.

SUMMER JOBS

WE HAVE A SPECIAL JOB JUST FOR YOU!

National Agency of Student Employment

P. O. Box 52492

New Orleans, Louisiana 70150

Cash ☐ Check ☐ Money Order ☐

GENTLEMEN: PLEASE SEND 1969 SUMMER JOB DIRECTORIES CHECKED BELOW.

☐ VACATION RESORT JOBS $3.00
Work with students at America's finest Resorts.

☐ FOREIGN JOBS $3.00
Gain valuable experiences abroad with pay.

☐ CAREER TRAINING OPPORTUNITIES $3.00
Start your career working with America's best companies.

☐ SPECIAL OFFER — Our latest bulletin which contains all three job fields plus a special job assignment for you. Please state interest and desired location $4.00

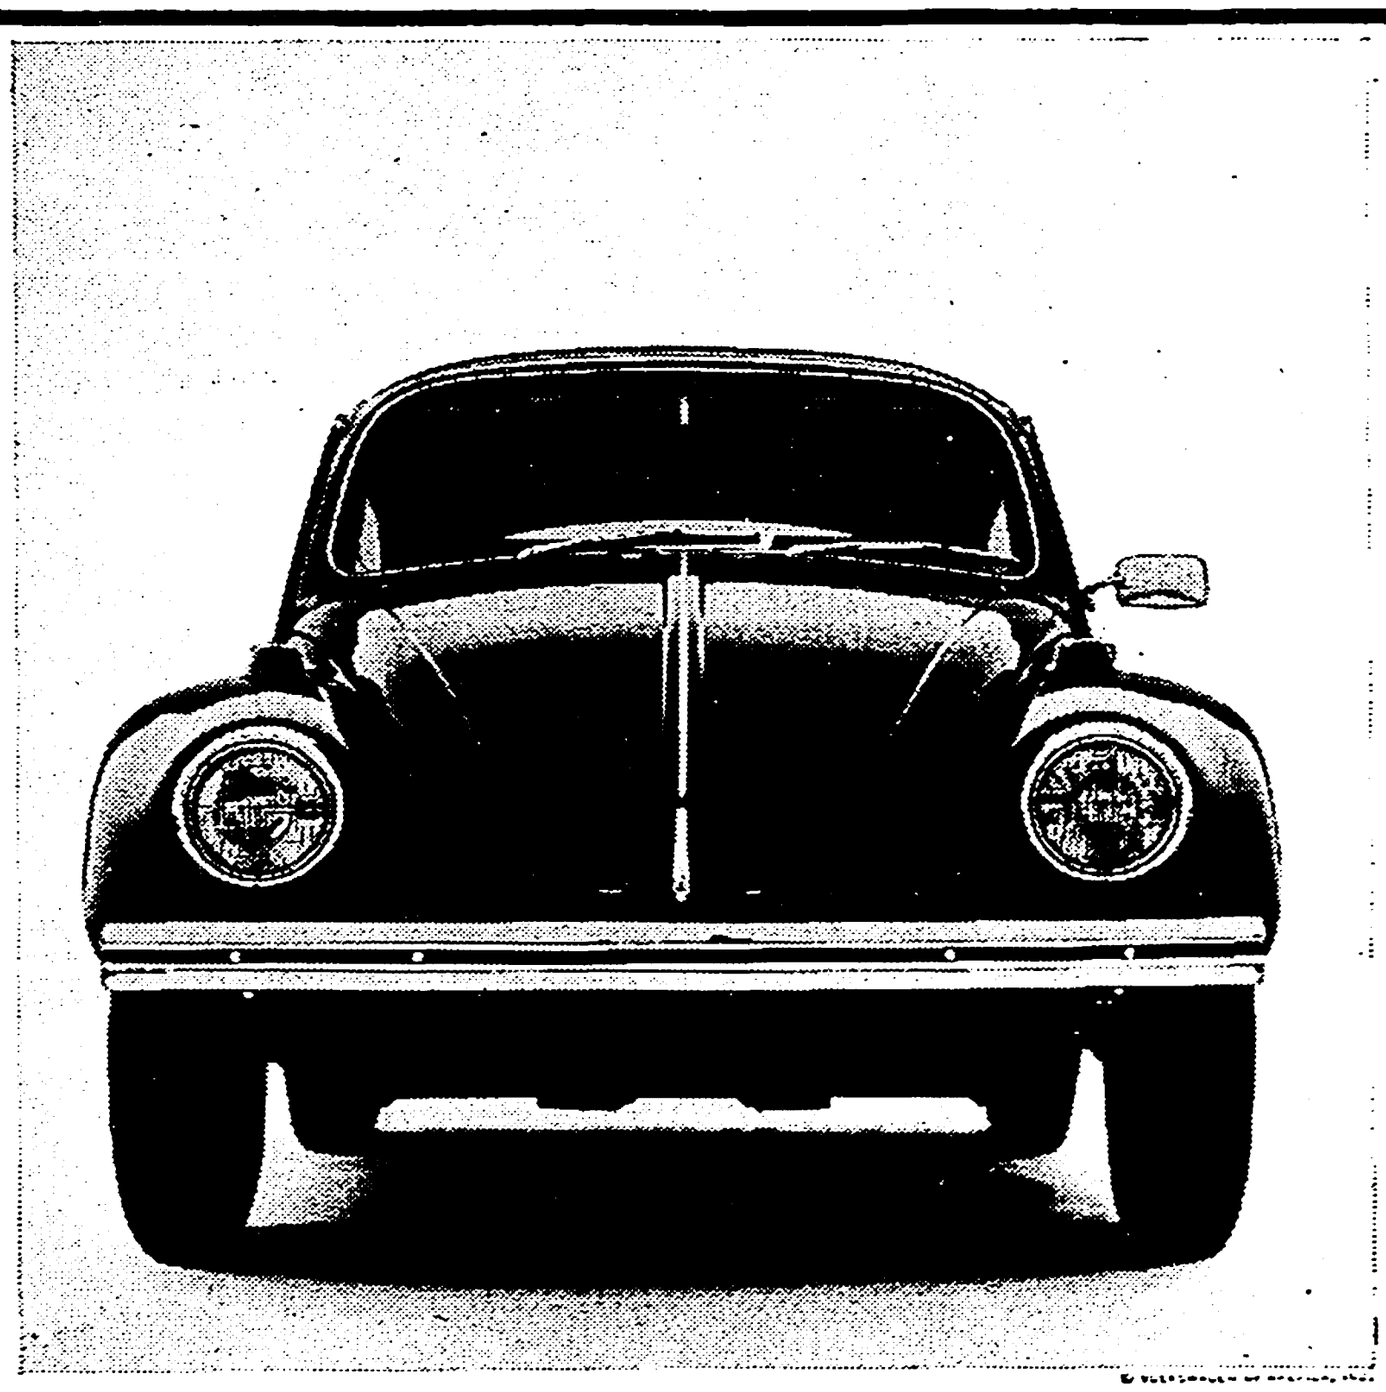
JIFFY KING

SPECIAL



Monday thru Friday, 2-5 p.m.

10¢ OFF ALL SUBS
727 South Crouse
in the Arcade

Wanted for Psychological Experiment

Women at least 21 years of age, with at least high school education. Participants will be paid at least $2.00 per hour. If interested call Upstate Medical Center at 473-5777, ask for Miss Lant.

Call between hours 1:00 & 5:00 P.M.

$2,365

What's the catch?
There isn't any.
$X,XXX* is the suggested retail price at the port of entry for the VW sedan.
The price includes the Federal excise tax and import duty.
It also includes the built-in heater/defroster, windshield washer, electric windshield wipers, outside rearview mirror, padded dash, front seat headrests, and seat belts front and back.
Not to mention the new electric rear-window defogger and the new ignition/steering lock.
It's the price of the real thing, not a stripped-down economy model.
What else do you have to pay?
Transportation from the port of entry. Dealer delivery charge, local sales tax.
One optional extra that makes a lot of sense, automatic stick shift. (It eliminates the clutch pedal.)
Another is leatherette upholstery.
And that's it.

Don Cain Volkswagen, Inc.
1000 West Hiawatha Blvd.
Syracuse
472-4371

Precision Autos, Inc.
on: Bridge St.
East Syracuse
(Across from Gem. Dept. Store)
GI 6-7700

AUTHORIZED DEALER

"Suggested retail price P.O.E. (East Coast). Local taxes and other dealer delivery charges, if any additional. Whitewalls optional at extra cost."

EDWARD HOMMEL & SONS
OPTICIANS

VANDERBILT SQ. CENTER
127 S. SALINA ST.

FREE PARKING

474-4644
EYEGLASSES & CONTACT LENSES
Telex Hearing Aids —REPAIRS—

BLOW YOURSELF UP TO POSTER SIZE

Get your own photo poster. Send any black and white or color photo. Also any newspaper or magazine photo.

A $25.00 Value

PERFECT POP ART 2x3 Ft. for $3.50

Frame for 2x3 Ft. Poster only 3.50 3x4 Ft.—$7.50

PHOTO JIGSAW PUZZLE 1 ft. x 1½ ft. $4.50
Get your own Personalized Photo Jigsaw Puzzle. Send any black and white or color photo. Mailed in 40 easy to assemble pieces. Great gift or gag.

PHOTO DART BOARD 1 ft. diameter $4.50
Get your own Personalized Photo Dart Board. Send any black and white or color photo. Mounted on genuine cork and comes with 3 precision darts.

Poster rolled and mailed in sturdy tube. Your original returned undamaged with poster or jigsaw puzzle or dart board.

Add 50c for postage and handling for EACH item ordered. Add local Sales Tax. Send check, cash or M.O. (No C.O.D.) to:

PHOTO POSTER Inc. 210 E. 23rd St., Dept. C. N.Y. 10010

Happenings on the Hill

TUESDAY

MEMORIAL SERVICES for the four SU students killed Sunday morning in an automobile accident will be held at 10:00 today in Hendricks Chapel. All are invited to attend.

NEW LEFT MEETING — Public meeting to consider issues involved in proposed boycott. 110 HL, 6:30 p.m.

ANGEL FLIGHT meeting, 7 p.m. in room 304, Men's gym. Mandatory Pledge meeting at 6:30 p.m.

TRADITIONS COMMISSION very important meeting at 7 p.m. at 306 Walnut Place.

PAHNEL MEETING 6:30, 305 Wm's Build. Old and new presidents and chairmen must attend.

WAA sponsors the lacrosse club every Tuesday 4-5. Beginners or otherwise. On field or in Gym B.

ARCHAEOLOGY LECTURE on "Excavations at the target of Frontenaz's Invasion of 1696; The Onondaga Capital," has been moved up one day to April 22. 7:30 p.m. in founder's room.

RUSSIAN CLUB Chorus will meet 6 p.m. in 227 HBC.

"PEDAGOGICAL POEM" film will be presented by Russian Club at 7 p.m. in 200 NCC. Admission is free.

WAER Dept of Public Affairs will present an hour and a half forum from 5-6:30 tonight on the Strike. Jeff Portnoy will be the guest.

STUDENT SENATE Important meeting in B115 Grant at 7:30. Very short meeting will include nominations for Senate Offices.

UU BULL SESSION presents Dr. William Bluem, Editor-TV Quarterly, who will speak on the effects of Mass Communications in our society today. Come to the Noble Room in Hendricks Chapel on April 23, at 4 p.m.

WEDNESDAY

GREEK GAMES COMMITTEE--Meeting changed to April 23 at 6:30 p.m. at Alpha Phi. Must attend.

"JURISPRUDENCE P.S. 341 Lawrinson Penthouse"

AMERICAN YOUTH HOSTELS meeting for those interested in hosteling this summer. Discussion of trip to cape cod, slides of Europe. 1047 Lancaster, 7:30 p.m. cal 475-2337 for information and rides. GENERAL

PRE-MEDS --AED the pre-medical honorary is now accepting applications for admission. Please include grades in science courses, science accum, overall accum, activities. Deadline April 26. Send to Bonnie Morrison, Box 598, St. Mary's Dorm.

SOPHOMORE MEN applications for Orange Key Junior Men's Honorary may be picked up in Dean Carleton's Office. Applications must by typed up and returned by April 23rd.

FRESHMEN, SOPHOMORES, JUNIORS IN HONORS PROGRAM — If you are not in St. Mary's and are interested in starting a new honors colony in another dorm Dorm Complex next fall. Come in to Honors Office 108 HL to sign up.

ATTENTION — University Judicial Board applications for 1969-1970 membership are available in the Dean of Men's office. Applications must be returned to the Dean's office no later than 4 p.m. Wednesday.

HONORS FRESHMEN interested in serving as next year's Honors Council student representative or on student committee, please leave your name and extension with Mrs. Kinney at 108 HL.

TICKET MONEY from the Cab Calloway concert will be refunded. Call X2600 or 478-5959 for information.

STUDENT SERVICES Committee meeting in 205 NCC at 8 p.m. Full meeting, all must attend. Questions, call Helen 2663.

WANTED - white girl needed to read for role of Lula in the "Dutchman" by Leroy Jones. Reading Tuesday 7-9 Regent Experimental Theatre Lobby.

GREEKS — If you haven't turned in your Greek games forms please do so by Tuesday night. These are vital. Bring to George at Lambda Chi or Liz Cohen at Alpha Phi.

Doctors slate speeches

Otto B. Kriens, M.D., surgeon at the University of Hamburg, West Germany and Henrik Abrahams, Ph.D., director of the Institute of Speech Pathology in Aarhus, Denmark will speak at the Sixth Annual Symposium on Cleft Palate Habilitation, Friday at the Basic Science Building, 766 Irving Avenue.

The symposium, sponsored by Syracuse University's Division of Special Education and Rehabilitation and Alpha Gamma Delta Fraternity, will be divided into two sessions: the morning session (10-12:15) in which Dr. Kriens will discuss "Surgical Management of Cleft Palates" and the afternoon session (1:30-3:30) in which Dr. Abrahams will discuss "Speech Management of Cleft Palates."

THE CHAMBERS BROS.

In Concert

at

HARPUR COLLEGE GYM

THURSDAY, APRIL 24

8:30 P.M.

General Admission, $3.50

A. C. 607

Information — Dial 798-2165

Unusual Gift Items [from our unusual buyer]!

SUBSTANTIAL SAVINGS!

SU Bookstores

303 University Pl.

IN THE SHED
FRONT OF STORE

FREE—to the first 300 — Peter Max Posters

Boycott . . .

(Continued from page 1)

the faculty and the administrators to have some say in the matter of autonomy," said Feldman.

Tolley replied to this statement yesterday by saying that IDC might be a "better vehicle three years from now but for the moment, we know what the Council on Student Life means and what it represents while the dormitory council is still evolving."

Dormitory autonomy and the right of students to govern themselves is one issue being centered upon during the boycott tomorrow.

Other boycott issues, including University Union Building, were discussed at a meeting yesterday afternoon with 19 student leaders and ten administrators. This group met for the second time to discuss proposals ranging from academics and the increase in the student fee to social regulations and living center regulations.

During the meeting, a list of close to 60 viable student campus organizations were presented in hopes that the newly created Student Finance Board will be given funds to regulate these organizations. Frank P. Piskor, vice chancellor and provost and Victor J. Colway, vice president for business management, agree with the concept of the student finance board and will present the idea to the Board of Trustees.

Also discussed at the meeting in detail was the possibility of placing students on the University housing committee as voting members.

Dean of Student Services Jim G. Carleton saw no reason why this cannot be done and is working with students to formulate the board. Carleton is also looking into the possibility of changing the requirements necessary to live off campus and the feasibility of more co-op living centers.

THE NEW LEFT and the student boycott: Open meeting to decide the issues involved in the student boycott and the new Left's position on those issues and relation to the strike leadership. Six p.m. at 110 H.L. Tuesday, April 22.

• • •

Selection prodecures for next year's housing have been postponed, according to Jim G. Carleton, dean of student services.

Further information concerning housing selection will appear in the Daily Orange when it is available.

Piskor statement

The following statement was issued by Frank P. Piskor, vice chancellor and provost, late yesterday:

"Student leaders have assured me that the symbolic boycott which has been called for is not intended to be disruptive but to provide the opportunity for full discussion of a number of issues on the campus. It is not to be interpreted as resulting from any breakdown of discussions between administrators and student leaders which have been taking place over the past week. In fact these discussions appear to be making important progress which I hope will continue.

"We trust that our faculty will conduct classes for those students who report for class. We trust also that they will help all students think through the issues. I have been especially assured that the student call was not intended to interfere with tests, special reports, guest lecturers or similar presentations.

"Within our pattern of class schedules there ought to be enough opportunities to provide for discussion without imposing hardships on any student or faculty member.

"There will undoubtedly be students who feel deeply about he issues and want to sacrifice class time for discussion time. They will have to be guided by their own conscience in this matter."

Watson . . .

(Continued from Page 4)

President-Elect David Ifshin, and Craig Baumgarten, visited all floors of Watson attempting to allay any apprehension and declared their support for any resident charged with misconduct by the administration.

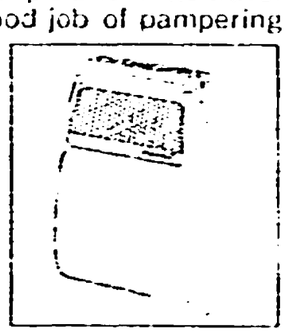
Hicks and Ifshin, the co-chairmen of the boycott, also explained in detail tomorrow's plans. They stressed that although dorm autonomy is an important issue, the boycott involved more than "booze and broads."

"I don't want to see headlines in the paper that '10,000 students strike to drink beer,'" Ifshin said.

" Dorm autonomy is up there but we don't think we can move the campus with one issue-we need the whole university with us," echoed Hicks.

The SG representatives urged total support for the boycott. Polling every Watson floor asking for a committment "to strike or not to strike," 317 Watson men voted "yes," with 59 voting, "no".

"The Chancellor says SU is on the verge of greatness," Hicks said, "he doesn't realize that there is a new type of student here who wants to get off the verge. Students here aren't going to stand for the same crap they've had."



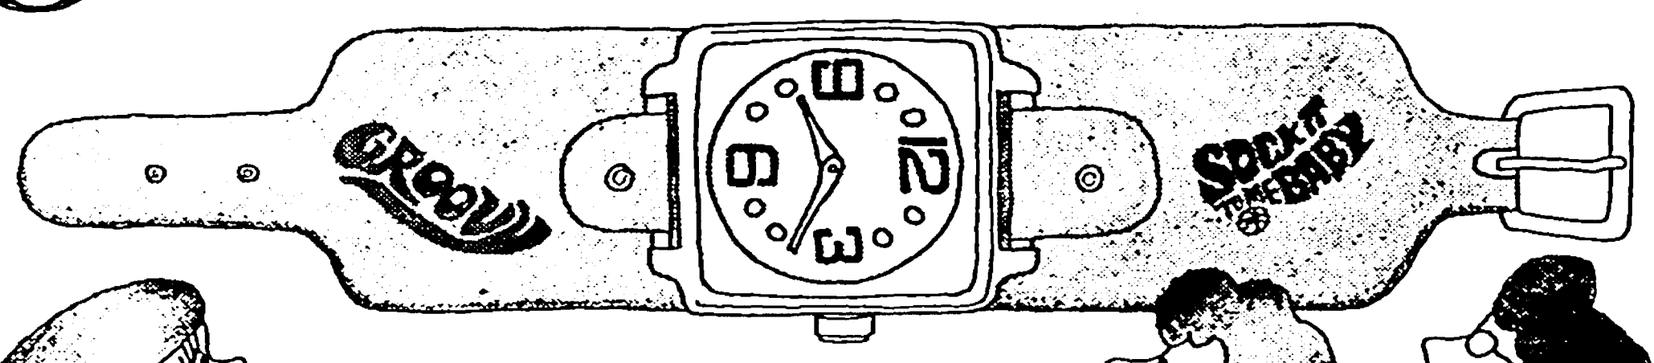
This campus is crawling with leg men

Your legs get the once-over every time you turn around. And they'd better look great. Once over with the sleek new Lady Norelco, and they will.

The rest of you will, too. Because the Lady Norelco isn't just a fast, close, comfortable leg shaver. It's a fast, close, gentle underarm shaver too. And it's even an easy-to-handle trimmer that takes off those wispy little neck strands that sneak up on Sassoons between appointments. It's a whole new way to stay great looking.

So is the new Norelco Ladyshave pictured at right. It comes in a purple and white travel purse and does a good job of pampering your legs, underarms and pocketbook.

Lady Norelco and Norelco Ladyshave. Two fabulous new ladies' shavers. For the benefit of man



Norelco®
you can't get any closer

Good Housekeeping

©1969 North American Philips Corporation, 100 East 42nd Street, New York, N.Y. 10017

Everybody's talking about the BigDumbWatch Thing

MELANIE CLUMP,
sophomore at Idaho School of Warts says, "Yechhhhhhhhhhh"

COURTNEY SMULLION, junior at Mildew A&M says, "Ptui"

ZISH MOLBEGOTT,
senior at The Indiana
Vocational School for the Tall says,
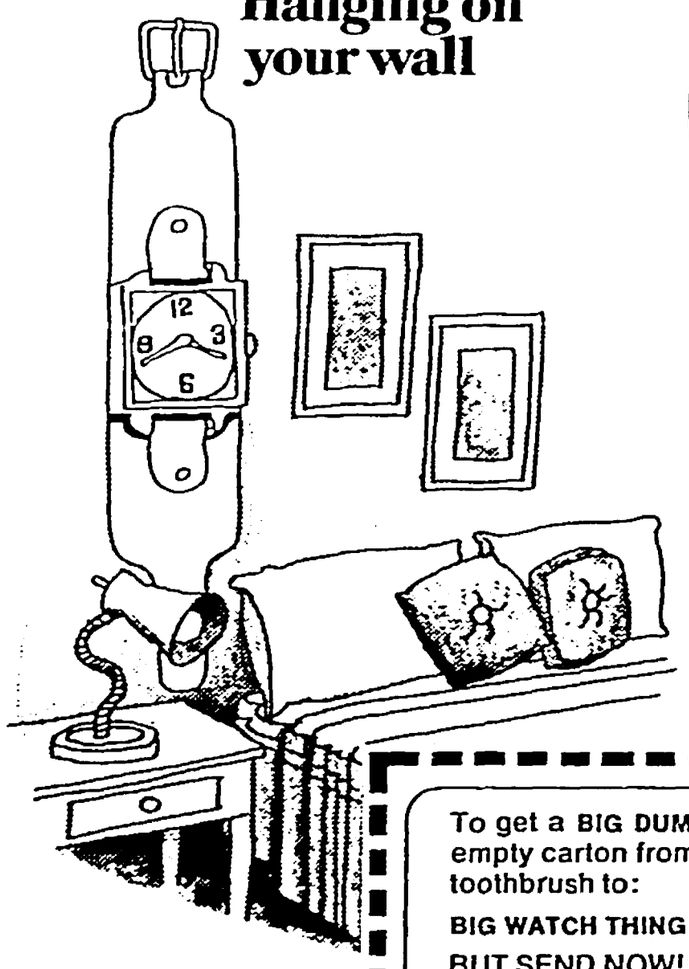
"It's the bee's knees"



It keeps time!
(It's electric, don't you know.)

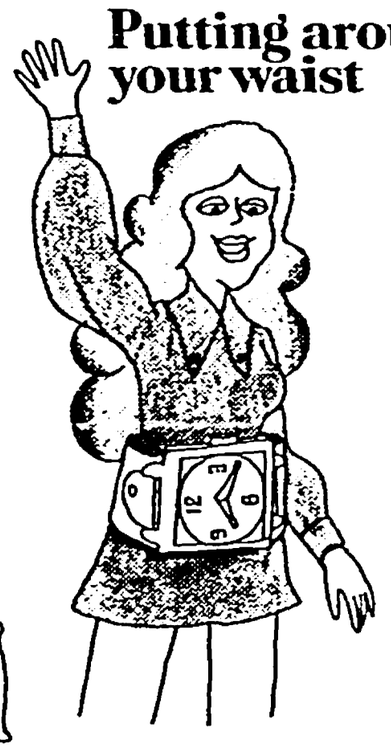
It comes with a packet of "keen" stick-on sayings!
(aren't you just panting now?)



It's sort of colorful!
(A yellow band and magenta face?)

Being a full 36 inches high by 8 inches wide it's perfect for:

Hanging on your wall

Putting around your waist

'Can anybody look us in the eye and honestly say they can do without a BIG DUMB WATCH THING?

YES!

(Sorry about that, BIG DUMB WATCH THING people.)

Who has the gall to bring you the BIG DUMB WATCH THING? Pepsodent Tooth Paste, that's who. Pepsodent gets teeth their absolute whitest. Which means if they were any whiter you'd be arrested for impersonating a headlight. Pepsodent is made especially for smiling at BIG DUMB WATCH THINGS and such happy stuff.

Also, Pepsodent toothbrushes, the toothbrush with the straight line design... preferred by dentists. But not plumbers.

Giving to your 27ft. tall boyfriend

To get a BIG DUMB WATCH THING send only $7.50 (how about that?) and an empty carton from any size Pepsodent Tooth Paste or label from a Pepsodent toothbrush to:

BIG WATCH THING • BOX 9473 • ST. PAUL, MINNESOTA 55177

BUT SEND NOW!! (Actually you can take your time. The supply is vast.)

NAME_____

ADDRESS_____

CITY_____ STATE_____ ZIP_____

Get your BIG DUMB WATCH THING today!! After all, somebody has to be first.
Expires July 31, 1969. Allow 4 weeks for delivery.

Attorneys to discuss legal profession today

Five leading local attorneys, with diverse types of practice, will discuss their respective views of the role of an attorney today at 8 p.m.

William Fitzpatrick, Esq. of Bond, Schoeneck & King will present the views of the large partnership. Mr. Carl Peterson, Esq., Corporation Counsel of the city of Syracuse, will present the views of the public servant. Mr. Jan Farr, Esq. of the Law Dept., Carrier Corporation will present the views of the "House Counsel." In addition, Mssrs. James Morrissey, Esq. and Les Cohen, Esq. will present the views of the small city and country practitioner, respectively. Dean Robert Miller of the School of Law will moderate.

The discussion is sponsored by "The Legal Profession Series," a student co-ordinated lecture series at the School of Law. All are welcome.

ANSWER TO PUZZLE

W	R	A	I	T	H			H	A	R	T	I	A	N
H	U	M	D	R	U	M		I	N	E	R	T	I	A
A	D	E	L	I	N	A		R	E	V	E	A	L	S
T	O	R	E	S		R	O	I		D	E	L	E	S
O	L	I	D		R	I	V	A	L		S	O	R	E
F	P	C		C	I	N	E	M	A	S		N	O	R
	H	A	N	O	V	E	R		C	H	I	E	N	S
			E	M	I	R		B	O	A	R
S	O	I	R	E	E		K	I	N	G	T	U	T
O	N	T		T	R	A	V	O	I	S		L	O	P
N	E	A	T		A	L	A	L	A		T	U	L	E
A	B	I	E	R		I	S	O		D	O	L	E	D
T	A	I	L	I	N	G		G	R	E	N	A	D	A
A	S	A	L	O	O	N		Y	U	C	A	T	A	N
S	E	N	A	T	E	S			T	A	L	E	N	T

Maelstrom

Tomorrow is the last day to submit contributions of poetry, essays, and short stories to Maelstrom magazine. A mailbox for all submissions is in the English Office, 203 Hall of Languages.

All unused manuscripts submitted to the second issue of Maelstrom may be picked up in the English Office beginning today.

Editors

Students interested in applying for any of the following positions may pick up application forms in Dean Carleton's office, 209 Administration Building: Daily Orange business manager, editor of the Onondagan, business manager of the Onondagan, editor of Maelstrom and business manager of Maelstrom. Deadline for return of applications is Wednesday, April 23.

Prof to receive $5,000 grant from Institute of Arts, Letters

George P. Elliott, professor of English at Syracuse University, will receive a $5,000 grant from the National Institute of Arts and Letters in a New York ceremony May 21.

Elliott, a novelist, poet, critic and author of short stories, was one of five writers named to receive grants in literature. William Maxwell, president of the Institute, made the announcement.

Elliott's most recent books are "From the Berkeley Hills" (1969), collected poems, and "An Hour of Last Things," (1968), a collection of short stories. He is the author of three novels, "Parktilden Village" (1958), "David Knudsen" (1962) and "In the World" (1965).

ALSO
The Butterfield Blues Band
Friday — May 2 — 8:30 p.m.
Onondaga War Memorial
Tickets now on sale at War Memorial Box Office, S. U. Corner Store, Wilson's Leading Jewelers.
$.5.50, $4.50, $3.50

WE'VE DONE IT AGAIN

COME ON DOWN . . . AND GET WITH THIS GREAT RECORD BONANZA

INCLUDES: ROCK 'N ROLL / ORIGINAL SOUNDTRACKS RHYTHM & BLUES / JAZZ / FOLK / BIG BRANDS . TV THEMES MOOD MUSIC / VOCALS / COUNTRY & WESTERN / CLASSICAL and Just about every other recorded category.

SPECIAL SELECTION CHOICE FROM $1.19 EACH WHILE QUANTITIES LAST

S.U. Bookstores

THE CORNER STORE

"Our Business is People"

Pocket Coffee! What's that?

A new kind of coffee break for the man on the move.

The man who dreamed up Pocket Coffee figured there were probably a lot of people around who at one time or another couldn't take a coffee break when they needed one. The only way they could get their coffee was to carry it with them.

Eureka! He thought up a way of putting some real brewed liquid coffee inside a delicious chocolate shell.

He called it Pocket Coffee because it's the coffee break you can carry with you in your pocket or purse, even your glove compartment. Glove Coffee????

Campus Classified

GR 6-5571, Ext. 2314

Rates minimum of 15 words:

1 day	1.15
2 days	2.25
3 days	3.30
4 days	4.30
5 days	5.25
6 days	6:15

To place a classified ad. call GR 6-5571, ext. 2314, between 1 and 3 p.m. Ad must be placed 2 days in advance. Every word over 15 costs 5c extra per day.

ALL ADS MUST BE PREPAID.

MISCELLANEOUS

RENT if you can't buy! T.V.s. tape recorders, typewriters. By week, month or semester. Reasonable rates. S. U. BOOKSTORE, GR 6-5541, x 2426.

FRAME your works of art at unbeatable prices at S. U. BOOKSTORE. Also signs and posters. In the Art Dept., 303 University Pl.

ALTERATIONS DONE within 24 hours. Call for an appointment. Lillian Potter. 207 Comstock. 478-5847.

PRIVATE DRIVING LESSONS — automatic or standard shift. Full or refresher courses. Qualified professional instructors. Pickup service. Auto Driving Academy. GR 6-3995.

SUMMER JOBS: Counselors, private boys' camp, Adirondacks: College men of above average physical fitness and judgment: tripping, canoeing, nurse, cook jobs open. Love of out of doors and children essential. Adirondack Swim Camp. 39 Mill Valley Rd. Pittsford. N. Y., 14534.

NEW EVERY MONDAY MORNING for the lovelorn, "missing you" cards. The Bookstall. 147 Marshall St.

NEED A SUMMER JOB? Syracuse YMCA Camp Tousey has openings for Unit Directors, counselors, riding master and waterfront director. Five hundred acre site with 55 staff and 160 campers on Millsite Lake near Redwood, New York. Spend a challenging and rewarding summer working with boys 9 - 14 years old. For details and application, write Robert Fiske, YMCA, 340 Montgomery St., Syracuse, New York 13202.

SUMMER CAMP COUNSELORS — 1.) Program Director - Adirondack Area, minimum age. 21. scouting experience preferred. salary - $500 to $600 for season. family accommodations provided. 2.) Aquatics Director - Adirondack Area and Oneida Lake Area, minimum age. 21. salary - $500 to $600 for season. family accommodations provided (Adirondacks only). 3.) Provisional Scoutmaster - Oneida Lake Area. minimum age. 21. scouting experience preferred. salary $500 for season. 4.) Nurse - Oneida Lake area. minimum age - 21. R. N.. Practical or certified First Aider. salary - $300 to $400 for season, family accommodations provided. 5.) Maintenance Man - Adirondack Area. minimum age. 18. must be good driver. salary $300 to $350 for season. 6) Archery Instructors - Adirondack Area. minimum age. 18. salary - $200 to $250 for season. Season. June 22 to August 12. Onondaga Council Boy Scouts of America. 600 West Genesee St.. Syracuse - N. Y.. 474-8574.

FOR SALE

HOUSE: Village of Fayetteville. Cape Cod. facing park. lot 50'x120'. Three Bedrooms. living room with fireplace. family room. 1½ baths. owner selling for $18.000. Call 637-8169.

'67 MG MIDGET — midnight blue. body good. engine excellent. Snow tires. new battery. $1600 492-1876.

'66 GTO. Yellow convertible. 4-speed hurst. power steering 5 crager mags. etc. Immaculate condition. Call Bill Osmun x2638 or GR 8-9001.

'67 SPRITE. Radio. snow tires. 10.000 miles. Perfect condition. Call after 5. 478-5818.

1966 SAAB. excellent condition. Call ext. 2734; after 6 p. m.. 472-5751.

FINEST STEREO COMPONENTS — excellent condition. turntable-arm-cartridge-$30. Deluxe Amplifier - $95. Couch-$75.. 637-9253.

MGA 1958. rebuilt engine, alarm system. new clutch. hard and soft top. Best offer: 476-4655.

FOR RENT

APARTMENTS all over the city. Nicely furnished. 1. 2. and 3 bedrooms. $85.00 up. GL 8-6100. 458-6101.

APARTMENT TO SUBLET June 1 - Sept 1). New. modern. furnished 1 bedroom apartment. Outside patio - other extras. 5 min. from University. $110. mo includes utilities. Call 474-3175.

FURNISHED ROOMS — share kitchen and baths. Singles. $12.50: doubles $10.00. Call 422-2871.

FURNISHED — three bedroom apartment. garage included. University section. References and security deposit required. Telephone GR 1-2188.

ROOM. very nice. clean. close to campus. with kitchen privileges. Call GR 6-3151 x257. 446-6451 or 478-5380.

WANTED

COUNSELORS - boys - girls. overnight camp in Berkshires. Tennis, assistant waterfront. golf. pioneering. photography. general. Call 474-3175.

FACULTY COUPLE — desires to rent furnished or unfurnished two or three bedroom house or apartment near university. Academic year 1969-70. Call 655-9078.

STUDENTS - for part time positions - option for summer work. $3.15 per hour. Flexible hours. Call 463-3735 weekdays. 3-5 p.m.

YOU NEED MONEY! — 1 need college men part time. $2.25 per hour plus bonus Sales. Phone 471-8119 Mr. Kays

RESEARCH FELLOW DESIRES TO RENT furnished two or three bedroom house or apartment from May or June until September. Call Frocich. x4109.

TYPING

THIRTY YEARS EXPERIENCE. Dissertations. term papers, proof-read. Satisfaction guaranteed. Mrs. Raymond Webb. HE 7-8259.

TAKE YOUR MANUSCRIPT to the only professional typing and printing service serving the S. U. area. The knowledge and experience of having done over 2.000 theses and dissertations is behind every job we turn out. Stephanie's Office Service. 469-2795.

TYPIST experienced in thesis. dissertations. and term papers. Electric typewriter. Shirley Saylor. 446-2999 or x2441.

Three sport man

Ensley named athlete-of-the-year

Cliff Ensley, a three year football star and current co-captain of the undefeated Orange lacrosse team, has been named Syracuse University's Athlete of the Year for 1968-69.

Ensley, who is known as the "Gipper" to his friends and team-mates, came to Syracuse unrecruited after winning nine varsity letters at Scarsdale (N.Y.) High School.

As a sophomore on the Hill he excelled in football, wrestling and lacrosse, and has gone on to great heights in the fall and spring sports.

As a three year starter at defensive safety for coach Ben Schwartzwalder, Ensley tied the season record for most pass interceptions last fall with six and finished his career with a total of 12. He tallied two touchdowns for the Orange, one being a 53 yard interception against Pitt, and the other a 76 yard punt return against Navy.

Orange fans remember Ensley best for his reckless abandon style of play both on the gridiron and lacrosse field. He always hit hard, and was never afraid to field a punt, no matter how many of the opposition were breathing down his neck.

Cliff's biggest thrills on the football field came in the last two years against UCLA. As a junior, Ensley ran back an interception 65 yards deep into Bruin territory (the jaunt was nullified by a clip) as the Orange upset the Uclans 32-14.

"That had to be my biggest thrill because they were rated number one only the week before," says Gip. "I played a decent game and the whole team was just great -- we really did it together."

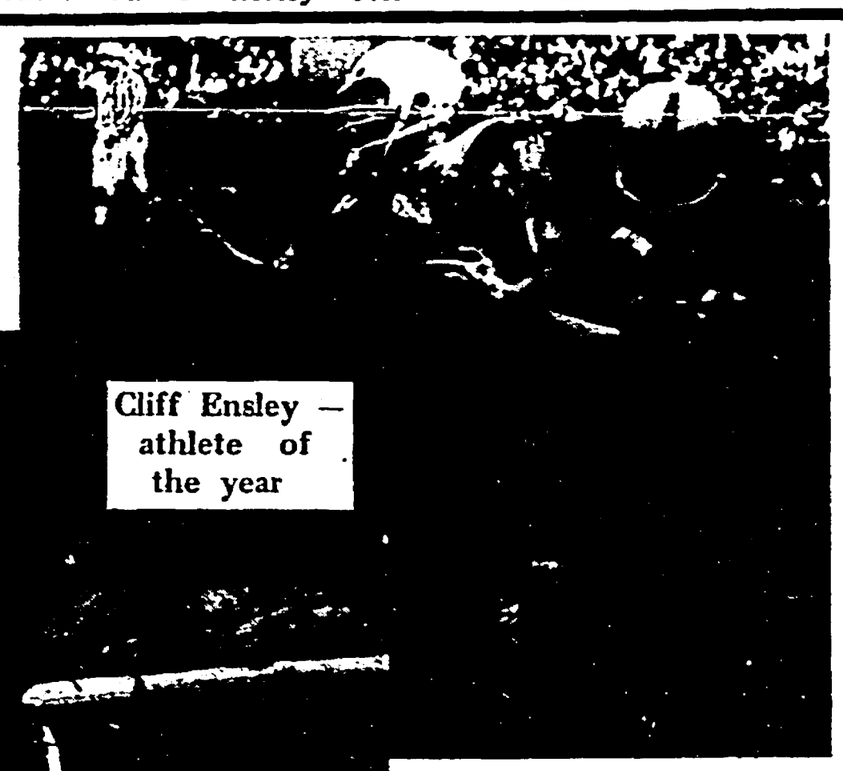
Last year Ensley intercepted in the end zone and later killed the Bruins final rally with another theft as the Orange upset the then fourth ranked UCLA team. "That was another great team effort," he says.

Ensley was awarded the game ball by his mates for his two interception performance in last year's 32-14 victory over Maryland. This starring role against the Terps also brought him the first of two Eastern Defensive Back of the Week titles.

Ensley added to these laurels with an honorable mention to the All American team and a second team All East berth.

In lacrosse, Gip's most satisfying victories were a 10-9 win against Atlantic Conference champion Washington College in last year's opener, and a 9-6 decision over Midwest king Denison this season.

This year, Ensley's stick mates honored him by selecting him co-captain of the squad. Says Gipper, "I like the responsibility of being captain, and I think it makes me play better because I have to set an example. The fact that the guys elected me meant a lot."



The Athlete of the Year still has a lot of athleting to do with the Orange stickmen before he graduates. "This year's team could be a great one," Gip says, "If we beat Army we could finish anywhere in the top three -- but there are a lot of tough games along the way."

Ensley cites Floyd Little as the greatest athlete with whom he has played while on the Hill. "Not only was Floyd a great All American, but he was a terrific leader," says Cliff. "Floyd was a man's man. You couldn't have asked for any more from him. You had to respect him."

Ensley follows such notables as Dave Bing, Little, and Larry Csonka in the receipt of the award, which was established in 1949. The senior economics and industrial engineering major will be feted at a dinner in Toots Shoors by the Syracuse Alumni Club of New York City on May 15.

E. A.

VERSATILITY was Ensley's middle name on the field. He earned three varsity letters as a soph, and played defense, midfield, and attack in the course of his three season stint with the lacrosse team.

Cliff Ensley — athlete of the year

DEVIL-MAY-CARE hitting always characterized Ensley's play at safety for the football Orangemen. Above, he makes an unsuspecting UCLA Bruin pay dearly for a reception with a clothesline tackle.

Stickmen stay unbeaten; down Penn State, 13-9

By ED AGRANOWITZ

Whether or not it be the case in medicine, Syracuse Lacrosse coach Roy Simmons has come to realize that two Doctors are better than one for his Orange stick squad.

Attackman Verne Doctor returned to the SU lineup for the first time this year on Saturday, and joined with younger brother Ron to help the Orangemen to a 13-9 win over Penn State.

Syracuse jumped to a 9-3 third quarter lead over the Nittany Lions and coasted home from there. The win left the Orange with a 5-0 record, a completely healthy squad, and an optimistic eye on the remainder of the season.

Individual scoring honors for the Orangemen went to attackmen Leo Nolan (4 goals, 2 assists) and co-captain Jeff Davis (4 goals). Verne had a pair of goals and assisted three times, while Mark Austerlitz (2 goals, 1 assist) and Jim Smith (1 goal) rounded out the scoring. Ron Doctor and Bill Gudden each picked up one assist.

"Our kids played a real fine game, although there's still room for a lot of improvement," said Simmons. "The one thing that I didn't like was that we had 'em dead bird at 9-3, but we eased up and let 'em off the hook."

The game brought nothing but encouragement for the Orange squad, who now look like a good bet to cut last year's number ten national ranking at least in half.

"I was very pleased with the way Verne played out there," said Simmie. "You could tell that he was rusty because several of his shots hit the pipe. But he showed his experience and he held our attack together. After another week of practice he'll be as good as ever."

Meanwhile, Ron Doctor, the talented soph, has eased his way into the first midfield unit with Austerlitz and Smith. Despite a case of bruised ribs, Ron helped the Orange to an 11-9 advantage in face-offs, a sore spot last year.

"Ronnie won't tell you when he's hurting, so I have to watch out for him," Simmie explains. "But he fits real well with Smith and Austerlitz -- it was a picture to watch the way they moved that ball at times."

The defense also showed well again for the Orange according to Simmons. "This was a typical Syracuse - Penn State game with a lot of hitting," he says. "Cliff Ensley played a helluva game on their star, and John Scipione and Ethan Klausner also did good jobs containing their close attack."

Gipper (Ensley), Scip and Baby Huey (Klausner) all relish hard hitting games, and Saturday they showed the Lions no mercy. "They tried to hit with us for about five minutes of the third quarter," explains Gip, "but then we hit back and completely leveled their entire team."

Another plus for the Orange was the way in which they cleared the ball (moved it from their defensive half of the field up to the attackmen). "Our biggest problem last year was an inability to get possession of the ball," says Simmie. More often than not this resulted from a failure to clear the ball. "Butch Brown (Orange goalie) did a real good job of starting the clears," says Simmie.

The Orange next face Clarkson (tomorrow) and Hofstra (Saturday) before next Wednesday's home opener with Hobart. If the spirit and momentum of this hustling team are reliable indicators, chances look good for a 7-0 homecoming.

ED'S ITORIALS: The victory was the 22nd for Simmie in his last 23 tries against Penn State:....The Lions are the defending Middle Atlantic States Conference champion.....Nittany goalie, Jim McDoune led the nation in saves last year.....The line score:

Syracuse	2	3	4	4	- 13
Penn State	1	1	3	4	- 9

77

JOHN SCIPIONE, a defensive standout for the second straight year, is splitting his time this spring between lacrosse and football.

To tradition: farewell

By MIKE WEBER
Sports Editor

And the days dwindle down to a precious few.

A part of Syracuse Athletic Tradition will die shortly. Sadler Hall, which has housed the greatest of SU's football greats, will become a women's dormitory in September.

It's progress, right? Well, it could have been. A co-ed complex is a natural for a University the size and scope of Syracuse. But the choice of Sadler Hall as the fitting dwelling place for women must be criticized.

Sadler Hall has a distinct ring to it. It conjures up all kinds of connotation-nearly all of them concerning athletics. Sadler Hall is athletics at Syracuse.

Ernie Davis, the late, great number 44, lived in Sadler before his death. A plaque, in memory of one of the finest athletes and gentlemen ever to play on the Hill, adorns the dormitory's lobby. There is a unique, thrilling feeling when one admires the Davis memorial and reads the inscription. It is something that should be held in reverence-and is by Sadler residents.

What will become of the plaque in September? What form of adornment will grace the Davis memory? Let your imagination work. It will come up with some answers.

And what of the intangible memories which run rampant in Sadler? The memories of other athletic giants who once roamed its corridors. A good question, indeed.

One could go on and on about the inter-collegiate traditions which have been nurtured in Sadler. But, there is a great deal more to the story. There is a special pride which Sadler residents feel--the pride of knowing that they are a very real part of this tradition.

Year in and year out, Sadler's intra-mural teams have lead the pack to living center and all-university championships. One need not look long in the intra-mural records book to find the name, Sadler Hall.

In the 1967-68 season, Sadler teams walked off with university titles in football, basketball, softball and golf. In addition, living center division crowns in table tennis and volleyball went to Sadler squads. The list over the years reads in like fashion.

The athletic intensity which permeates Sadler does not stop here. Every year, the dorm conducts what may be the finest intra-dorm football and softball tournaments in the entire university community community.

It's a shame the administration saw fit to abruptly end this tradition. The vast majority of Sadler residents were opposed to the move. A petition, containing nearly 300 signatures, was presented to the Director of Housing-to no avail.

So, Sadler Hall, the men's dorm, the center of SU athletics will shortly be a memory. The glamour which the SU coed can contribute to Sadler remains to be seen. It will not make up for the loss in tradition.

Administrators of SU, you cry that the youth of today is destroying all your traditions. You are destroying one of ours.

DAILY ORANGE

Syracuse University's Daily Newspaper Since 1903

Vol. 67, No. 92 | Syracuse, New York, Wednesday, April 23, 1969 | 10 Cents

All-University boycott today

SBU versus New Left

By KAREN WIEDIGER
Executive Editor

Despite rumors to the contrary, the campus-wide boycott is being held today and the Students for a Better University (SBU) do not support the mass meeting on the quad.

A rumor was circulated in Watson Dormitory earlier in the evening by fliers reading "The boycott is off. Thank you for your support." They were signed "Students for a Better University."

Chuck Hicks, president of Student Government, denied the fliers were passed out by SBU, but was unable to say who was circulating the rumor.

A spokesman for SBU spoke out against a demonstration which the Peace and Freedom Party (PFP), Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) and other New Left groups are holding on the quad at 3 p.m.

In an early morning press release, SBU stated "The planned mass meeting on the quad by the Peace and Freedom Party, Students for a Democratic Society and other New Left groups is in direct conflict with the peaceful boycott.

SBU has stated it will not call any mass meeting today because of the volatile situation it would create. The group plans to have token pickets at the main entrances to the University, but those students who wish to attend classes are urged to do so. "They will be neither harrassed nor physically obstructed and picketers will allow all people to pass freely.

A spokesman for SBU emphasized that "Should a mass meeting be held, we urge the students NOT to attend. We also urge students not to confront those who wish to participate.

"It must be made clear that the mass meeting is called without the sanction of SBU. New Left Groups can no longer be considered a part of the Students for a Better University," he concluded.

PFP had said earlier it was giving "critical support" to the boycott. The group claimed to be in general agreement with the aims set forth by SBU but said, "We regret the fact that full participation by the entire campus may not be forthcoming." PFP feels the official description of the boycott as a "symbolic gesture of student unity" is inadequate.

The members also criticize the in which the 51 boycott issues were chosen. However, a spokesman for SBU said, "We are a student organization, headed by elected campus leaders. The composition of the group is representative of the entire campus."

"We are trying to join together the various elements of the student body in a united effort to bring about the reforms so desperately needed at Syracuse." He reiterated the group's belief, stressing "we do not think that violence, confrontation, or the destruction of property is the answer. It will be up to the decision-making powers of this University to prove to the campus, the community and the press that responsible student action will be viably met by straightforward administrative response."

SBU has attempted to channel the enthusiasm and frustration of the student body at Syracuse in a constructive manner, according to the spokesman.

Boycott business involves profs

NAME	CLASS?	PARTICIPATING in DISCUSSIONS?
David Potter (Pub. Aff.)	Yes	Booth (1-3 p.m.)
Prof. Peter Marsh (His.)	Yes	Booth (1-3 p.m.)
Prof. Charles Giordano (Art)	Yes*	Booth (1-2 p.m.)
Prof. Karl Schmidt (Pol. Sci.)	Yes	Booth (1-2:30 p.m.)
Prof. James Williams (Rel.)	Yes	DellPlain (2-4 p.m.)
Joseph Cavanaugh (Math)	Yes	DellPlain (2-4 p.m.)
Prof. Marian Roth (Pol. Sci.)	Yes	DellPlain (1-4 p.m.)
Prof. Dale Tussing (Eco.)	Yes	Haven (12:30-3:30 p.m.)
Prof. Sidney Arenson (Pol. Sci.)	Optional	Lawrinson (1-4 p.m.)
Prof. Michael Sawyer (Pol. Sci.)	Yes	Lawrinson (afternoon)
Prof. Benjamin P. Burtt (Chem.)	Yes	Flint (2:30-3:30 p.m.)
Prof. Norman R. Simonson	Yes	Flint (12:45-2:30 p.m.)
Prof. James Newman (Pub. Aff.)	Yes	Flint 1-4 p.m.)
Prof. Maurice Troyer (Ed.)	Yes	Day (12:30-3 p.m.)
Prof. Edward Stevens (Eco.)	Yes	Day (1-3 p.m.)
Prof. Robert Wolfson (Eco.)	Yes	Day (12:30-2 p.m.)
Prof. George Alexander (Law)	Yes	Sadler (3-4 p.m.)
Prof. Ronald Walters (Pol. Sci.)	No	Sadler (3-4 p.m.)
Dean Alan K. Campbell (Pol. Sci.)	Yes	St. Mary's (1-3p.m)
Prof. Donald Meiklejohn (Phil.)	Yes	St. Mary's(11 a.m -noon)
Prof. Bruce Henry (Math)	Optional	St. Mary's(2-5 p.m)
Prof. Aubrey Garlington (Fine Arts)	Yes	St. Mary's (2-5 p.m.)
Prof. Oliver Clubb (Pol. Sci.)	Yes	Watson (1-4 p.m.)
Alan Mabe (Pub. Aff.)	Yes	Watson (12-2 p.m.)
Prof. Alan Miller (Physics)	Yes	Watson (1-3 p.m.)
Frederick Glantz (Eco.)	Yes	DellPlain (1-2 p.m.)
Norman Haight (Pub. Aff.)	Yes	Haven (1-4 p.m.)
Prof. Sigmund Simon Hudson (Math)	Optional*	Lawrinson (1-4 p.m.)
Prof. Edward Stevens (Eco.)	Yes	Day (1-3 p.m.)
Prof. Allan Miller (Physcis)	Yes	Watson (1-3 p.m.)
Prof. Norman Balbanian (E.E.)	No
Prof. Leonard Dryanski (Drama)	No
Prof. Daniel Drempel (Drama)	No
Prof. Robert Minkoff (Psych.)	No
Prof. Raja Nanavati (E.E.)	No
Robert L. Tyler (Math)	No
Richard Oliker Prof. (B.A.)	Optional*

* faculty member has indicated that class time will be devoted to discussion of boycott issues.

The following faculty members have cancelled exams for Wednesday: Newman (Geo.), Ullman (Western Civ.), Murray (Psych. 5), Tyler (Calculus 398 and Math 295.)

Despite 'scare'

Watson autonomy urged

By VIC LIVINGSTON

The Watson dorm council, caught in a web of uncertainty regarding declaration and implementation of dorm autonomy, last night encouraged all residents to assert autonomy by participating in tonight's wine and cheese faculty-student discussions, leaving the decision to press for continued autonomy to the council.

The body, faced with ever-growing resident fear promoted by an alleged "scare" campaign conducted by Administration sympathizers sought "as concrete a commitment as possible" from boycott leaders Chuck Hicks and Dave Ifshin.

"We can't guarantee success or amnesty for residents who assert autonomy, unless the campus is behind us," Marc Cavanagh, Watson dorm president, said. However, Cavanagh warned that the Administration could still discipline residents regardless of moral or active support by the strike leaders.

Floor presidents agreed that without this firm backing, Watson's move for autonomy would not be overwhelmingly supported by residents fearful of punitive action, should they continue to assert their autonomy past Wednesday's initial demonstration, called "one-night autonomy" by Watson skeptics.

Several floor presidents indicated that the "scare campaign" will effectively limit any assertion of autonomy involving risk of punishment. However, other officials hoped that a firm and tangible commitment by campus leaders coupled with the wine and cheese discussions, will make autonomy a reality in Watson from 9 p.m. tonight "ad infinitum."

James Meredith views 'the American dream'

By CELESTE LACY

"If white society attempts to continue to exploit black society, then we will have to fight. It is very true that if we fight the whites may win, but there will be a course to winning and the people left will not be sure anybody won."

These words were spoken by James Meredith in Hendricks Chapel last night as he addressed an audience of about 500 on "Racial Peace in America."

Meredith was the first black man to integrate the University of Mississippi and has been active in several civil rights activities. His lecture was part of the annual Greek Week program sponsored by Inter-Fraternity Council and Panhellenic Association.

Meredith's speech was mild in comparison to the philosophy of most proponents of black nationalism. He told the audience that Americans must concentrate on upholding the American dream, and that the racial problem must be worked on by both blacks and whites.

His views appeared more militant however, as he explained the direction of the black man's struggle in America:

JAMES MEREDITH

"the only way blacks can secure their rights is to exercise them at all times. Anyone who gets in the way of a black man securing these rights must be ignored or removed by any menas necessary."

According to Meredith, three of white America's greatest evils are gradualism, tokensim and paternalism. He said that paternalism is the worst of the three because whites take it upon themselves to decide what blacks should have and how long they should keep it. Meredith added that gradualism and tokenism eventually lead to protest and violence and that paternalism will not bring much better results.

In reference to tokenism, he

(Continued on Page 4)

Finalists named in Contest for Ugly Man on Campus

Three finalists have been selected from 17 contestants who applied for the Ugly Man on Campus Contest. The finalists are Pat Walsh, sponsored by Ranger Co.; Chauncey Young, sponsored by Sigma Chi; and Patrick Miller, sponsored by Delta Delta Delta.

Their pictures will be displayed throughout the week in the ticket booth in the lobby of H.B.C.

Students are asked to donate money to the candidate of their choice, and the finalist with the most money at the end of the week will be crowned U.M.O.C. at the Greek Week Concert.

All proceeds will go to the Greek Week Scholarship and Community Fund.

University Union's weekly bull session series today presents Professor William A. Bluem. Prof. Bluem is the editor of "Television Quarterly" and is deeply concerned with the role and the effects of the mass media in our society. Come to the Noble Room in the basement of Hendricks Chapel at 4 p.m. and hear his presentation on mass communications.

TOP O' THE N-T SHOP

MAIDENFORM®
TO WEAR UNDER YOUR SEE THRU FASHIONS AND SPRING MINIS!
FOR JUNIOR FIGURES

FASHIONABLE CREPE SET
WITH SASSY LACE TRIM IN WHITE, YELLOW MIST, MINT MIST

BRAS 32-36, ABC 4.50
DEMI HALF-SLIP 4.00
BIKINI 2.50
SIZES 5-13

S U Bookstore

Wanted for Psychological Experiment

Women at least 21 years of age, with at least high school education. Participants will be paid at least $2.00 per hour. If interested call Upstate Medical Center at 473-5777, ask for Miss Lant.

Call between hours 1:00 & 5:00 P.M.

TEACHERS

STUDENTS

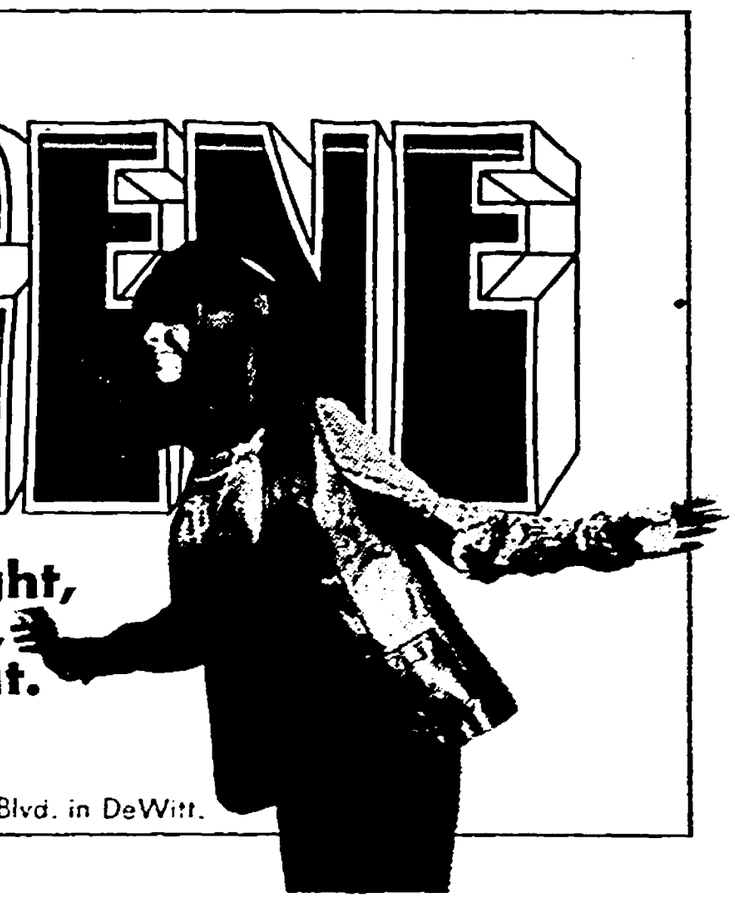
$230 ROUND TRIP TO LONDON; $260 ROUND TRIP TO PARIS/AMSTERDAM AND LONDON BY SCHEDULED JETS OF MAJOR AIRLINES. Several departures this summer. Write for brochure to Division NSA, Travel Wholesalers, ITT Building, Washington, D.C. 20036.

Attention: GRADUATES

Reserve Your Caps & Gowns NOW

Deadline—May 9

at



THE CORNER STORE

S U Bookstores

(Fee payable with order)

"Our Business is People"

The SCENE

The night, the hour, the beat.

Cill Drive and Towpath Rd. off Erie Blvd. in DeWitt.

Tonight:
Drink and Drown.
All the beer you can drink.

GUYS $2.75 GALS $1.75

Mixed drinks-1/2 price.

ANGUS H. TWOMBLY — Editor-in-Chief

MANAGING EDITOR - Alan Stamm EXECUTIVE EDITOR - Karen Wiediger NEWS EDITOR - Fred Tuccillo EDITORIAL DIRECTOR - David A. Ross COPY EDITOR - Jean Havens FEATURE EDITOR - Roz Mazer SPORTS EDITOR - Mike Weber CAMPUS AFFAIRS EDITOR - Larry Kramer PHOTOGRAPHY EDITOR - Clint Clemens ASSOCIATE EDITORS - Andrij Bilyk, Kay Christensen, Beth Hillson, Rona Kavee, Helene Macdonald, Charles Shapiro, Dan Schlossberg, Patti Williams, Roni Ziokower.

DAILY ORANGE

Syracuse University's Daily Newspaper Since 1903

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 23, 1969 PAGE 3

STEVEN P. STROBRIDGE — Business Manager

ASSISTANT BUSINESS MANAGER— Art Depasqua, NATIONAL ADVERTISING MANAGER— Janet Meyer ACCOUNT EXECUTIVES— Roger Black, Jim Maney, Mike Greenstein.

Published Tuesday, through Friday during the academic year by students of Syracuse University. Offices located at 200 Brooklea Drive, Fayetteville, N.Y., and 1101 East Adams St., Syracuse, New York. Entered as Second Class matter at the U.S. Post Office, Fayetteville, N.Y. 13066.

Communication?

Chancellor Tolley's statement printed on this page was issued seemingly with no particular purpose other than to let us know that he is as unsure about what is happening or was intended to happen today as are many of the students. In fact, he makes no reference to the boycott at all.

It would seem that the Chancellor is in a relatively frustrating position, as are many students. Some of the letters appearing on this page, hit the strike's purpose and planning, and suggest that more academic approaches to student problems are more in order.

What both the Chancellor and many students suffer from is a lack of communication. While this no doubt is not an original observation, it unfortunately is probably true. We have reached the point in this student movement, as we did during the recent SG campaigns where students and administrators shouldn't believe anything that anybody says because so many people and organizations are in this thing now that nobody has the facts.

The Chancellor's formal mechanism for information is primarily his deans--Smith, Tatham, and Carleton. The information that gets to these people is not always complete because not all students get to these people. Thus, the Chancellor's information is often second or third hand, and even when he confronts students directly, it's questionable as to whether or not they are either giving or getting all the facts.

We at the Daily Orange are placed in an equally precarious position as rumor and intermingled fact is always floating in and out. We hear the Chancellor will meet with Dave Ifshin at 3 p.m. today and then that he won't. We hear that Dr. Tolley is going to Denver and then we hear it's New York. We hear that Ifshin is declaring a mass meeting and then we hear he hasn't.

At this point, the Chancellor isn't sure who's confronting who, when or why. The letters on this page indicate that those who were pushing academic issues feel somewhat disaffected by the current list of demands that is coming from the Students for a Better University, and we would have to agree that it is rightly so.

The DO is trying not to be discouraged because we know that the other group of students that is working with administrators, and was doing so before the boycott was even mentioned, is planning to focus on the issues that group number two isn't hitting and some they are discussion. Sound confusing, but that's about the way it stands.

There's no reason why the boycott can't come off tomorrow.It started as a simple display of student support with discussion planned for the whole day. Stick to the original plans—go to the discussions and then back to classes on Thursday. There's no need for any leader to harangue. Progress is being made. Don't listen to ultimatums, we don't need them.

Above all, don't tomorrow, for any reason gather in large masses. The whole purpose will be destroyed. TV crews will sensationalize and the threat of violence or needless oratory might be realized. Rumor has done enough to damage the image of the boycott, but with a little restraint, there's no reason why it still can't succeed.

Chancellor's statement

Everyone is in favor of a greater degree of autonomy for University living centers and responsible conduct by students. There is a sharp division of opinion, however, as to what is meant by autonomy, the relationship of dormitory courts to the University Judicial Board, the conditions under which autonomy is revoked, the legal responsibility of the University and other questions.

It appears to have escaped the attention of many students that the reorganization of the University Senate is a revolutionary step forward and gives Syracuse University students a larger voice in the academic and social governance of the University than is currently enjoyed by any student body in America. Other institutions will doubtless follow our example.

It is too early to know the full impact of this change on Student Government itself. It is logical to assume that the inter- dormitory councils as well as the individual dormitory councils will play a more and more important role. It is not clear, however, what the relationship of the inter-dormitory council will be either to the University Senate or to the standing committees of the Senate such as the one on Students. It is also far from clear whether the University Senate will leave the Council on Student Life undisturbed or will relate it in some way to the Senate Committee on Students. Obviously the Senate will create its own machinery and until it does so many questions cannot be answered.

I don't think we need to wait until the new Senate is fully organized to make some decisions with respect to degrees of autonomy for University living centers. I am, therefore, referring a number of questions to the Council on Student Life and I hope the Council will report back to me as quickly as it can.

Syracuse University administrative officers have always been responsive to student opinion and they will continue to be. We believe the faculty will be equally responsive to student complaints and opinions. The reorganization of the Senate will give students a voice in academic policy as well as social policy. Personally, I think students can make a very significant contribution to the improvement of education at Syracuse.

Letters

Dear Sir:

Even discounting strong rumors that Wednesday's boycott is a political gambit to ensure Chuck Hicks' election as NSA president, I cannot support the boycott. Simply because it is irrationally and improperly planned and therefore cannot constructively produce answers to the issues raised. Unfortunately, most of the issues are extremely relevant and important. But let me explain my objections more clearly, yet briefly.

First, the 11 issues are phrased in vague, less than definitive terms. Adequate research has not been done on the issues to define better what is being asked. As a result, we have the case where one top priority issue is the establishment of a major-minor program. Meanwhile most colleges are dropping their minors programs because they limit curriculum flexibility.

Second, how many students really know what is involved in each of the issues? Not many, I suspect. Because the leaders have not explained the issues to the students. How can students boycott for issues they don't understand?

Third, neither faculty nor students were consulted adequately about the boycott, but were merely told it would occur and they should support it. This is no way to gain support for anything. And faculty support is essential to success. Just ask the architecture students.

Fourth, no alternatives have been employed to resolve many issues, nor have any alternative courses of action been presented. Many of these issues cannot be easily resolved by a general strike against the central administration. Some should be negotiated with Faculty Senate or the dean of each department.

Fifth, the game being played is called "brinksmanship." It is but few steps from boycott to open rebellion. And it only takes 50 students to lock-up the Administration Building. This hastily-organized boycott does not have proper planning to handle such an event. And police are known for their efficient clubwork. The stakes are too high and the planning too poor for such risks.

Enough said. If all other channels of negotiation had been exhausted, if the student body and faculty were properly informed of the issues and the action, and if a rational, careful plan guided the boycott, I could support it. Wholeheartedly. But these criteria have not been met. Therefore I am against this boycott. And I hope the Hicks-NSA rumor is false.

Dave Moore
Chairman, Joint Senate-IDC
Academics Committee

The following is a statement issued yesterday by the Peace and Freedom Party.

To the Editor:

The Peace and Freedom Party at SU gives critical support to the boycott sponsored by Students for a Better University (SBU). Because we are in general agreement with the aims of the boycott, we regret the fact that full participation by the entire campus may not be forthcoming. Several factors have led to this situation. We feel that the official description of the boycott as a "symbolic gesture of student unity" is inadequate. Student unity will be mobilized and sustained only around demands which SU students understand to be crucial to their lives.

However, the 11 "issues" of SBU were chosen out of a list of 51 in a locked, SG room by six student government leaders at 4 a.m. Monday. The undemocratic procedure used to select these "issues" has led to some glaring inadequacies. Two of the issues are a "study" of the University Hill Corp. and "increased regard" for the surrounding community. The administration can accept these powder-puff requests by establishing committees which will talk these "issues" into the summer, and eventually to death.

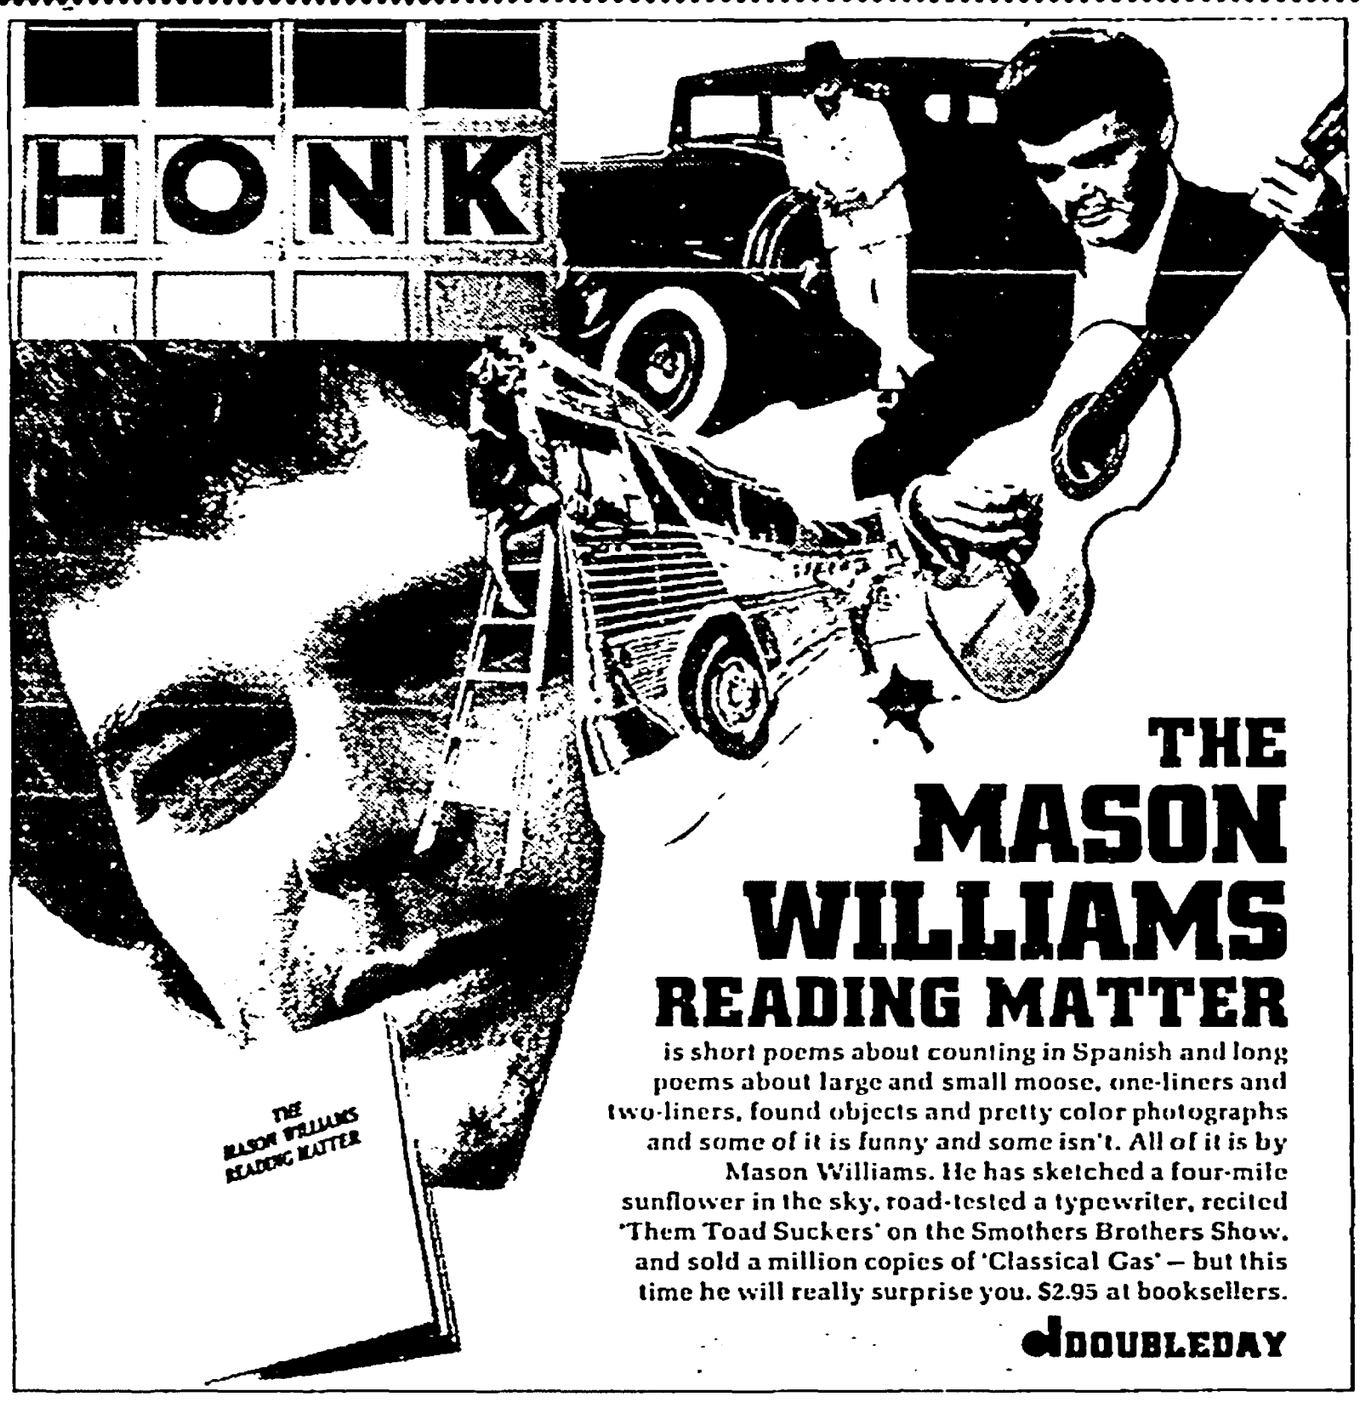
The boycott will be successful only if students define explicitedly their demands and the tactics to be employed to implement them. The DO has editorialized: "Show your support students, but no more is needed." On the contrary, democratic participation necessitates mass involvement in the decision-making of SBU. The only way that issues and tactics can be decided is by an open public meeting on Wednesday evening to decide future policy.

Peace and Freedom has some definite ideas concerning the future course of the boycott. We demand the immediate initiation of dorm autonomy. The leadership of SBU has been vague and contradictory about fulfilling campaign promises with respect to complete, unconditional support of individual dorms which try to implement their own rules. We believe student unity can be best expressed by solidifying the entire campus on this issue. This concern for the problems of student housing is coupled to explicit demands concerning the university's relation to the surrounding community. We demand that the university build or finance new housing (better than their present slum conditions) for all community people before they are forced to move out of their homes due to university expansion. Relocation to ghettoes in other parts of the city is not acceptable because it only intensifies the existing crisis of low-cost housing in Syracuse.

In addition, we demand that SU must make all of its financial and property records open for public insepction so that students and others can evaluate the necessity of university policies, e.g. tuition increases.

Lastly, we demand an end to university complicity with the military. This means that ROTC must be made an extracurricular activity like any other without its present financial and course-credit benefits. Also, all future research at SU, SURI, and SURC must be open for public inspection.

Peace and Freedom Party will be striking tomorrow on these demands by participating in a SBU picket line around the campus. Although we will try to talk people into engaging in a daylong dialogue on these demands, we will not prevent students from going to class if they so chose. JOIN US.



PEACE & FREEDOM PARTY
Eugene Woloszyn

Outstanding ROTC cadet honored

James A. Truax was recently named outstanding ROTC cadet in the study of military history at Syracuse University this year. The award is made annually on every ROTC campus.

Col. Samuel Patton presented Truax with a copy of "The War in the Pacific," a volume from The U.S. Army in World War II series, published by the Office of the Chief of Military History Department of the Army.

Truax is a junior in a pre-medicine program in the College of Liberal Arts.

THE MASON WILLIAMS READING MATTER is short poems about counting in Spanish and long poems about large and small moose, one-liners and two-liners, found objects and pretty color photographs and some of it is funny and some isn't. All of it is by Mason Williams. He has sketched a four-mile sunflower in the sky, road-tested a typewriter, recited 'Them Toad Suckers' on the Smothers Brothers Show, and sold a million copies of 'Classical Gas' — but this time he will really surprise you. $2.95 at booksellers.

DOUBLEDAY

Senate approves representation

By MARY TAYLOR

In a continuation of Monday's meeting the Undergraduate Senate last night unanimously approveda plan of student representation on the Faculty Senate.

Under the proposal there will be one representative from each school and college, representatives of Utica College in proportion to the percentage of undergraduate population, and the remaining students allocated proportionally among the schools and colleges.

The representatives will be chosen by students on the school and college advisory board, to be established immediately.

John Ross, author of the bill, stated this method of advisory boards was chosen since it would force the schools and colleges that do not have boards to establish them. The boards would also handle curriculum and other academic matters.

Ross also proposed the student finance bill providing for the allocation of funds to all undergraduate organizations requesting funds from the University. The bill was passed after extended debate on the position of WAER, the "Daily Orange" and the "Onondagan" on such a matter. The funds would come from a sum equal to 20 percent of the student fee.

A calendar committee, consisting of five appointed members, was established "due to the overwhelming effect the calendar has on the student." It is empowered by the calendar review act, also passed last night, to allow the Senate to have final approval of the official University calendar before it is presented to the Chancellor's cabinet. All changes after approval must be submitted to the Senate. The bills, sponsored by John Diamond and hailed as "long overdue" by John Ross, were passed unanimously.

A bill to grant University Senate the power of veto over CSL proposals was defeated after debate. Passed instead was a request to CSL to establish the Speaker of the Senate as a liason officer to report CSL actions to the Undergraduate Senate.

Ed Feldman, Speaker of the Senate, listed the student leaders involved in the boycott and a brief history and future. "This is a one-day one-shot affair with the possibility of being again a one-day one-shot affair," Feldman stated.

Meredith . . .

(Continued from page 1)

stated "General Motors got one (black executive), General Electric got one, and I imagine one of your local television stations got them one by now, too."

Meredith said that black people can and will destroy America if she doesn't change. Black people have the power to destroy her physically if they have the will to, or they could also destroy her by simply not saving her from herself.

The irony of Meredith's appearance here is found in his lecturing to greeks--to people who base their system on brotherhood. The point of his lecture focused on the fact that if this country does not get herself together completely and rapidly, brotherhood will become another discarded factor of the American dream.

NEW FACULTY AND GRADUATE HOUSING

Construction of the first six story luxury type building of the Nob Hill complex has nearly reached the roof level a short distance from SU.

Opening ceremonies are tentatively planned for June 8, at which time models of the moderately priced suites are to be ready for public inspection.

The Nob Hill site presents a serene atmosphere accented by a panoramic view.

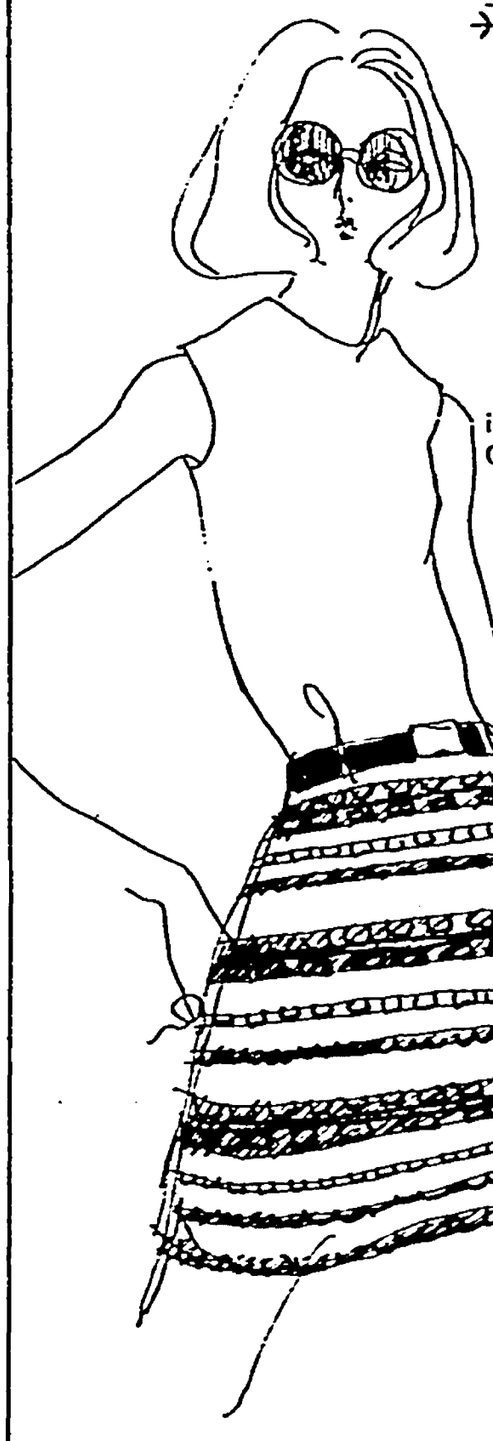
Utilizing concrete and steel rather than traditional wood framing, the buildings provide the utmost in privacy and fire protection.

Nob Hill is planned to include six buildings and a total of 1,200 apartment units with complete recreational facilities, including an indoor-outdoor swimming pool.

Each building will feature a magnificent two-story lobby tastefully decorated and equipped with an inter-communicational security entrance and two high speed elevators.

Adjacent to the lobby is the community room, were planned activities such as bridge, chess, lectures, etc. will be provided for those residents who desire to participate. This room is also for use by residents for private activities and parties.

Other features include individually controlled heating and air-conditioning, a resident maintenance staff, built-in kitchens with dishwashers and disposals, an antenna system, incinerator, laundries, storage lockers and many others.



Additional information will be made available to university faculty, staff and graduate students by phoning 469-3211 between noon and six p.m. every day.

Brochures, floor plans and prices will be sent as requested. Applications for the fall semester are currently being accepted by mail or at the temporary rental office located at the Norstar Apartments on 7th North Street in Liverpool. Occupancy is possible as early as July.

Nob Hill Apartments

JOHN MEYER OF NORWICH

JOHN MEYER SPEAKS YOUR LANGUAGE

Tell it to the oracle—in our bright and versatile Greek stripling of a skirt—web-belted and buckled in chrome. $14. Pick up a batch of John Meyer's cotton knit shells to wear with the skirt—in all the best colors. $6. Discuss the classics—communicate!

'Resource Management'

Kimberly-Clark president to address business grads

Guy M. Minard, president of Kimberly-Clark Corporation, will talk about "Resource Management and Its Problems" at a meeting of the Association of Graduate Business Students today at 3:45 p.m. in Grant Auditorium. Coffee will be served beginning at 3 p.m.

Minard was born in Ottawa and graduated with honors from Queen's University, Kingston, Ontario. He advanced through operating and management positions to the presidency of Spruce Falls Power and Paper Company and of Canadian Kimberly-Clark.

In 1964 he was elected executive vice-president and director of Kimberly-Clark, the American parent firm. In 1967 he became president of the firm and in 1968 its chief executive officer.

Minard's talk, which is part of the Business Lectureship Program sponsored by the Association of Graduate Business Students, is free and open to the public.

GUY M. MINARD

Maxwell grad students state support of the boycott

The following statement from the executive committee of the Maxwell Graduate Students Association was circulated yesterday:

"The Executive Committee of the Maxwell Graduate Students Association fully supports the goals and means of the Student Boycott of classes on Wednesday April 23. In particular,

"1) We support student discussion of the causes of dissatisfaction with the undergraduate student life at Syracuse and the need for remedial actions.

"2) We support the concept that a restructuring of academic and administrative policies at the University is greatly desired at this time.

"3) We support the proposition that the University must be more sensitive to the needs and aspirations of its neighboring community.

"Therefore, the Executive Committee urges all Maxwell Graduate students to:

"1) Not teach any undergraduate courses on Wednesday April 23.

"2) To participate in the discussions of these issues in the dorms.

"3) To discuss these issues in their graduate courses.

"In addition, we urge graduate students to direct their attention to issues affecting graduate education and life."

CHEM COLLOQUIUM

The chemistry department will present Prof. Robert Zwanzig of the University of Maryland on Friday, April 25, as part of its continuing colloquium.

He will be speaking about "Stokes Law and Self-Diffusion" at 4 p.m., Room 303, Bowne Hall.

In Memoriam:

Steve Mears

Tim Hart

Sadler 1

Revlon invents the first Oil-Free Makeup!

Here's the first makeup that can't "feed" more oil to oily skin, because there's no oil in it! That means it won't clog pores, never changes color. Holds back oily shine longer than any other makeup! Medicated 'Flowing Lotion-Makeup'—in 7 shades that smooth on like silk.

Natural Wonder 'Flowing Lotion-Makeup'

Available at:

Syracuse University Bookstore

SPECIAL NOTICE

S. U. BOOKSTORES

is pleased to announce the sale of a Special College Sampler Pac of Toiletries at a fraction of its retail value!

The manufacturers and the

S. U. BOOKSTORES

in cooperation with the Guest Pac Corporation, Mount Vernon, New York offer this Special Pac to familiarize you with these fine products. There is a Male and a Female Pac, each worth approximately $8.00. The principal items in each Pac...

- Gillette Techmatic Razor and Razor Band
- Foamy Shaving Cream
- Manpower Aerosol Deodorant
- Excedrin
- Old Spice After Shave Lotion
- Scripto Word Picker Highlighter
- Macleans Toothpaste
- Dial Soap

- Adorn Hair Spray
- Woolite
- Halo or Enden Shampoo
- Pamprin
- Excedrin
- Scripto Word Picker
- Jergens Soap
- Clairol Kindness

ONLY $2.50 EACH

Other Special Toiletry items and additional Money Saving Offers are in each Pac.

SPECIAL STUDENT PRICE

Hurry! Supply limited to about one for every five students! ONLY ONE PAC PER STUDENT! Get your Pac today.

S.U. Bookstores

303 University Place

WARREN BEATTY
FAYE DUNAWAY

They're young... they're in love

...and they kill people.

BONNIE AND CLYDE

CO-STARRING
MICHAEL J POLLARD·GENE HACKMAN·ESTELLE PARSONS

Written by DAVID NEWMAN and ROBERT BENTON Music by Charles Strouse Produced by WARREN BEATTY Directed by ARTHUR PENN
TECHNICOLOR® FROM WARNER BROS.-SEVEN ARTS

April 22, 23, 24
6, 8 and 10 p.m.

film forum
gifford auditorium
syracuse university
$1.00

Exhibits galore

Festival features variety

Water ballet, dance, drama, music and art exhibits will make up the program for the opening day of the 1969 Festival of the Arts here tomorrow.

A prizewinning fanfare for three trumpets will herald the 10 a.m. School of Music convocation program at Crouse College. Paul Hindemith's Sonata for Four Horns will be played and five songs will be sung by Rosalind Brooks.

In the evening the Dance Production Group will stage "Opus One" at 8 p.m. in the Women's Building, with a repeat performance on Friday night. "Opus One" is a group of 11 compositions for solo or small group choreographed by members of the Dance Production Group. The dances will be in the jazz medium, modern dance or character dance. Mrss. Kathy Daniels, a fine arts major, designed costumes and sets.

The Syrafins, a water ballet group, will present eight synchronized swimming numbers based on Greek myths: the Three Graces, Prometheus, the Birth of Vebus, Apollo, Zeus and Athena, Pandora's Box and Pygmalion. These will be staged at 9 p.m. in the Women's Building pool and repeated the next night.

Two student-written one-act plays will be given by the drama department on Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights at 8 p.m. in the Experimental Theatre Rehearsal Studio at the University Regent Theatre. They are "The Table" by John Wyeth '72, with a drama department cast, and "A Bullet for John" by George Godbold, with a cast from the Salt City Playhouse.

Two art exhibits will be on view at Lowe Art Center, one the work of graduate students and the other consisting of prints and drawings from the Harry and Maria Wickey Collection. The exhibits continue through May 19.

Originally scheduled for opening day, the exhibition called ALICE (The Art of Light in Creating Environment) will now open at noon Friday (April 25) in Prefab Building 19, near Sims Hall, and

(Continued on Page 7)

Summer jobs available for local coeds

Part-time and summer positions are now available to women students who reside in the Syracuse area.

The jobs, varying from clerical work to knitting to selling, specifically include: a clerical position in a drugstore close to campus (daytime or evening hours); creative advertising for a junior, senior, or graduate student majoring in either, English, advertising, or psychology to work 16-20 hours per week and possibly full-time during the summer; a sales clerk for children's shoes in a modern shopping center beginning in July and continuing part-time in the next school year; and students with knowledge fo sewing or knitting beginning this summer and continue part-time next year.

Ten girls are needed now to work part-time as clerks for a fire insurance company and full-time during the summer.

For further information, contact Mrs. Olga Kaish, Counselor, Dean of Women's Staff, Room 110, Women's Building, any day between the hours of 10 a.m. and 2:00 p.m.

Editors

Students interested in applying for any of the following positions may pick up application forms in Dean Carleton's office, 209 Administration Building: Daily Orange business manager, editor of the Onondagan, business manager of the Onondagan, editor of Maelstrom and business manager of Maelstrom. Deadline for return of applications is Wednesday, April 23.

Not sure what you want to do? Join the club.

Du Pont Company
Room 6688
Wilmington, DE 19898

I'd like your latest information on opportunities at Du Pont for graduates with degrees in_____.

Name_____

University_____

Degree_____

Graduation Date_____

Address_____

City_____

State_____ Zip_____

Du Pont wants engineers who want to grow professionally. And we have great respect for the guy who'd like to "know more about it" before he marries a specific kind of job. We even have a plan to help him.

It's called "planned mobility"—a sort of intramural job hop. You don't get into a training program. You get into a job. If it doesn't fit you, or you it, you get into a second job or a fifth or a sixth, until you find the one you want to grow with. It gives you time to decide while you're broadening professionally.

Ask the Du Pont interviewer about it. Ask him anything. He was in your shoes very recently.

An Equal Opportunity Employer (M/F)

DU PONT

College Relations

GIFT SPECIAL
MINI-SIZE YOURSELF
to
POSTAGE STAMP SIZE
Personalize your letters, resumes, greeting cards, invitations, calling cards, gifts, yearbooks, etc. SOMETHING TO REMEMBER YOU BY ... Send any 2¼x2¼ or larger, color or black and white photo.
100 gummed mini stamp or 50 gummed large mini stamps.

for $3.99

Sorry no C. O. D.
Add 45c for postage and handling. Send check or Money Order to:
A & N PHOTO CO.
P. O. BOX 26 - Dept. M
SEAFORD, N. Y. 11783

Happenings on the Hill

GREEK GAMES COMMITTEE—Meeting changed to April 23 at 6:30 p.m. at Alpha Phi. Must attend.

"JURISPRUDENCE P.S. 341 Lawrinson Penthouse"

AMERICAN YOUTH HOSTELS meeting for those interested in hosteling this summer. Discussion of trip to cape cod, slides of Europe. 1047 Lancaster, 7:30 p.m. cal 475-2337 for information and rides. GENERAL

PRE—MEDS —AED the pre-medical honorary is now accepting applications for admission. Please include grades in science courses, science accum, overall accum, activities. Deadline April 26. Send to Bonnie Morrison, Box 598, St. Mary's Dorm.

SOPHOMORE MEN applications for Orange Key Junior Men's Honorary may be picked up in Dean Carleton's Office. Applications must by typed up and returned by April 23rd.

FRESHMEN, SOPHOMORES, JUNIORS IN HONORS PROGRAM — If you are not in St. Mary's and are interested in starting a new honors colony in another dorm Dorm Complex next fall. Come in to Honors Office 108 HL to sign up.

ATTENTION — University Judicial Board applications for 1969-1970 membership are available in the Dean of Men's office. Applications must be returned to the Dean's office no later than 4 p.m. Wednesday.

HONORS FRESHMEN interested in serving as next year's Honors Council student representative or on student committee, please leave your name and extension with Mrs. Kinney at 108 HL.

TICKET MONEY from the Cab Calloway concert will be refunded. Call X2600 or 478-5959 for information.

STUDENT SERVICES Committee meeting in 205 NCC at 8 p.m. Full meeting, all must attend. Questions, call Helen 2663.

WANTED - white girl needed to read for role of Lula in the "Dutchman" by Leroy Jones. Reading Tuesday 7-9 Regent Experimental Theatre Lobby.

GREEKS — If you haven't turned in your Greek games forms please do so by Tuesday night. These are vital. Bring to George at Lambda Chi or Liz Cohen at Alpha Phi.

WEDNESDAY

WAA important Board meeting at 6:30 p.m. in board room. At 7:30 - new officers will be installed.

WAA members vote from 9:30 a.m. - 4:00 p.m. in the Women's Building, for new Board.

ALPHA KAPPA PSI meeting scheduled for Wednesday April 23 will be cancelled.

ALL Campus Peace groups: please send representatives to World Peace Association meeting 7:30 p.m., Chapel House.

FACULTY -STUDENT DISCUSSIONS at Winchell Hall during the boycott, with Dr. Hall, Mr. Moody and others.

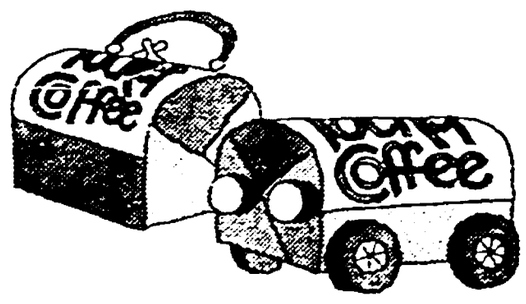
WAA softball club will be performing feats of diamond derring-do from 4-5 p.m. on the field or in Gym A.

STUDENTS FOR A BETTER UNIVERSITY are requesting that all students stay away from classes and the quad today.

Festival . . .

(Continued from Page 6)

continue daily from noon to 6 p.m. through May 4. Created by students of the School of Architecture, ALICE will incorporate light "pieces" made from neon, slides, films, demonstrations, and a light and sound system requiring spectator participation.

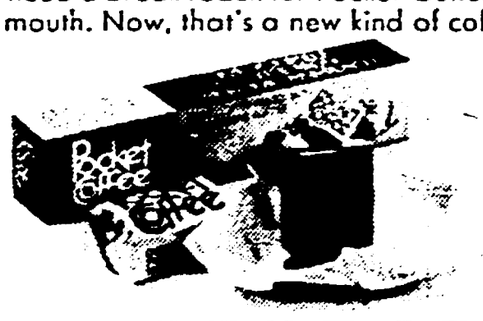


"Light as an Art Form," a lecture by illuminating consultant John Maguire, will also be offered by the School of Architecture. This has been moved to 8:30 p.m. on Tuesday (April 29) in Room A-1, Newhouse Communications Center. Maguire will talk about his work with architects and designers and demonstrate some of his recent light "pieces."

All these festival events are free and open to the public.

TWO GREAT SHOWS !
100% JANIS JOPLIN
And Her Group and
50% PACIFIC GAS & ELECTRIC
Sunday, April 27 - 7:30 & 10 P.M.
$2.50, 3.50, 4.00, 4.50
Eastman Theatre
60 Gibbs St., Rochester, N. Y. 14604

JIFFY KING
SPECIAL
Monday thru Friday, 2-5 p.m.
10¢ OFF ALL SUBS
727 South Crouse
in the Arcade



Pocket Coffee!
What's that?
A new kind of coffee break that goes where you go.

If you're one of the people who often find you can't stop to get a cup of coffee when you need it, listen here. Pocket Coffee is a coffee break you can carry with you.

The man who dreamed up Pocket Coffee invented a way of putting some real brewed liquid coffee inside a delicious chocolate shell. Each piece is double-wrapped and packed in a three candy stick that fits neatly into your pocket or purse.

At work, on the road, or at play (you devil you), when you need a break reach for Pocket Coffee. Pop one into your mouth. Now, that's a new kind of coffee break.

SUMMER JOBS

WE HAVE A SPECIAL JOB JUST FOR YOU!

National Agency of Student Employment
P. O. Box 52492
New Orleans, Louisiana 70150

Cash ☐ Check ☐ Money Order ☐

GENTLEMEN: PLEASE SEND 1969 SUMMER JOB DIRECTORIES CHECKED BELOW.

☐ VACATION RESORT JOBS $3.00
Work with students at America's finest Resorts.

☐ FOREIGN JOBS $3.00
Gain valuable experiences abroad with pay.

☐ CAREER TRAINING OPPORTUNITIES $3.00
Start your career working with America's best companies.

☐ SPECIAL OFFER — Our latest bulletin which contains all three job fields plus a special job assignment for you. Please state interest and desired location $4.00

Campus Classified

GR 6-5571, Ext. 2314

Rates minimum of 15 words:

1 day	1.15
2 days	2.25
3 days	3.30
4 days	4.30
5 days	5.25
6 days	6:15

To place a classified ad, call GR 6-5571, ext. 2314, between 1 and 3 p.m. Ad must be placed 2 days in advance. Every word over 15 costs 5c extra per day.
ALL ADS MUST BE PREPAID.

MISCELLANEOUS

RENT if you can't buy! T.V.s. tape recorders, typewriters. By week, month or semester. Reasonable rates. S. U. BOOKSTORE. GR 6-5541. x 2426.

ALTERATIONS DONE within 24 hours. Call for an appointment. Lillian Potter. 207 Comstock. 478-5847.

PRIVATE DRIVING LESSONS — automatic or standard shift. Full or refresher courses. Qualified professional instructors. Pickup service. Auto Driving Academy. GR 6-3995.

SUMMER JOBS: Counselors, private boys' camp, Adirondacks: College men of above average physical fitness and judgement: tripping, canoeing, nurse-cook jobs open. Love of out of doors and children essential. Adirondack Swim Camp. 39 Mill Valley Rd. Pittsford, N. Y., 14534.

NEED A SUMMER JOB? Syracuse YMCA Camp Tousey has openings for Unit Directors, counselors, riding master and waterfront director. Five hundred acre site with 55 staff and 160 campers on Millsite Lake near Redwood, New York. Spend a challenging and rewarding summer working with boys 9 - 14 years old. For details and application, write Robert Fiske, YMCA, 340 Montgomery St., Syracuse, New York 13202.

FREE ROOM AND BOARD in exchange for twelve hours a week. Pool, tennis court. DeWitt on bus line. Ability to drive and swim required. 446-6458.

LOST — Bell "Shorty" helmet. April 17 on Comstock Ave. Please return to Douz Chara x2918.

SUMMER CAMP COUNSELORS — 1.) Program Director - Adirondack Area, minimum age. 21. scouting experience preferred. salary - $500 to $600 for season. family accommodations provided. 2.) Aquatics Director - Adirondack Area and Oneida Lake Area, minimum age. 21. salary - $500 to $600 for season. family accommodations provided (Adirondacks only). 3.) Provisional Scoutmaster - Oneida Lake Area, minimum age, 21. scouting experience preferred. salary $500 for season. 4.) Nurse - Oneida Lake area. minimum age - 21. R. N. Practical or certified First Aider. salary - $300 to $400 for season, family accommodations provided. 5.) Maintenance Man - Adirondack Area, minimum age. 18. must be good driver. salary $300 to $350 for season. 6) Archery Instructors - Adirondack Area. minimum age. 18. salary - $200 to $250 for season. Season. June 22 to August 12. Onondaga Council Boy Scouts of America. 600 West Genesee St. Syracuse, N. Y., 474-8574.

MEN AND WOMEN — Distribute Proctor and Gamble samples in Syracuse metro area. Work is similiar to that of a mail man. Full or ½ days. $1.75 per hour for more information call Mr. Dennis Prenevost anytim. at 475-4352.

FOR SALE

FINEST STEREO COMPONENTS — excellent condition. turntable-arm-cartridge-$30. Deluxe Amplifier - $95. Couch-$75. 637-9253.

VW CAMPER SPECIAL — Many extras. $650. Call Peter Rennert 478-1486.

1966 SAAB. excellent condition. Call ext. 2734; after 6 p.m., 472-5751.

MGA 1958. rebuilt engine, alarm system. new clutch. hard and soft top. Best offer: 476-4655.

1962 RENAULT DAUPHINE, Excellent condition. $265. 1959 Olds 88 conv. $150. Call Larry 475-3987.

'66 RAMBLER AMERICAN 220. Very good condition. Pritchard x3244 or x2561 or 446-4939.

STUDENT GRADUATING IN MAY. MUST SELL: 16" Zenith portable. 5' x 4' "post" drafting board. 6" inlaid oak bar (4 stools). 6' Simmons hide-a-bed. China — setting for six. '68 VW Squareback 17,000 mi. Call 472-9276.

150 cc. VESPA. Excellent condition. best offer over $200. Call John 476-1866, 475-4681 after 5.

MG-TD, 1952. Excellent condition $1200 Phone 472-3932 after 1 p.m.

FOR RENT

APARTMENT TO SUBLET (June 1 - Sept 1). New, modern, furnished 1 bedroom apartment. Outside patio - other extras. 5 min. from University. $110/mo. includes utilities. Call 474-3175.

APARTMENTS all over the city. Nicely furnished, 1, 2, and 3 bedrooms. $85.00 up. GL 8-6100, 458-6101.

ROOM, very nice, clean, close to campus, with kitchen privileges. Call GR 6-3151 x257, 446-6451 or 478-5380.

FURNISHED — three bedroom apartment, garage included. University section. References and security deposit required. Telephone GR 1-2188.

NEED A SUMMER PAD WITH POOL? Call 472-3420.

FURNISHED ROOMS — share kitchen and baths. Singles, $12.50; doubles $10.00. Call 422-2571.

FURNISHED APARTMENT — Henry Street — 2 blocks from campus. kitchenette. 1 bedroom, living room, complete bath with shower. Downstairs. 2 private entrances. Off street parking. $110.00 per mo. Call 422-5564 days 476-1481 evenings and weekends.

APARTMENTS — furnished or unfurnished. 3 rooms. utilities. near campus. Call x6810. 472-8223 or 475-1631.

APARTMENT TO SUBLET (June - August) furnished, 4 rooms, on campus. $130/month Call 478-4421.

WANTED

FACULTY COUPLE — desires to rent furnished or unfurnished two or three-bedroom house or apartment near university. Academic year 1969-70. Call 655-9078.

STUDENTS - for part time positions - option for summer work. $3.15 per hour. Flexible hours. Call 463-3735 weekdays, 3-5 p.m.

COUNSELORS - boys - girls, overnight camp in Berkshires. Tennis, assistant waterfront, golf, pioneering, photography, general. Call 474-3175.

RIDE TO WORK, weekdays 8:30 to 5. Valentine Drive, North Syracuse to/from corner University Avenue and Place. Phon extension 2105.

RESEARCH FELLOW DESIRES TO RENT furnished two or three bedroom house or apartment from May or June until September. Call Froelich, x 4109.

TYPING

DISSERTATIONS, THESES, AND TERM papers. IBM electric typewriter. 40c per page 5c per copy. 446-2841. Mrs. Miller.

THIRTY YEARS EXPERIENCE. Dissertations, term papers, proof-read. Satisfaction guaranteed. Mrs. Raymond Webb. HE 7-8259.

TAKE YOUR MANUSCRIPT to the only professional typing and printing service serving the S. U. area. The knowledge and experience of having done over 2,000 theses and dissertations is behind every job we turn out. Stephanie's Office Service. 469-2795.

EXPERIENCED TYPIST - specializing in thesis and term papers etc. Call NE 5-5239.

CREW COACH BILL SANFORD gives his charges some pre-practice advice at Lake Onondaga. The rowers open their 1969 season this Saturday with the race for the Goes Cup.

Crew opener

Goes race Saturday

By FRED KRAVER

After months of training, the crew team will take the competitive oars for the first time this weekend. The setting will be Lake Onondaga, and the opponents will be Cornell and Navy for the Goes Cup.

In Syracuse crew history, Clifford Goes was one of the best coxmen in the nation. He donated the trophy for this week's competition in 1956.

Coach Bill Sanford is hopeful. "This will be a very tough meet. Cornell has won it every year since 1961, but we're going on the line to win it." Sanford's problem is depth. Syracuse will have only eighteen men rowing, while "the schools we participate against row forty or fifty."

In the varsity boat, Rich Kortright is coxswain, William Willson handles stroke (eighth position), Duane Hickling is number seven, Gary McKinney six, Paul Biff five, Chuck Harris four, Don Plath three, Steve Rogers two, and captain Frank Doble is at the bow.

Joe Peter is coxswain in the junior varsity boat, Nils Peterson is stroke, Jeff Harriman seven, Bill Duncan six, Hank Ridgeley five, Steve Wheadon four, Bob Furgeson three, George Norcross two, and Tony Valdini is bow.

Both the varsity and the JV row 2000 meters, or a mile and 5/16. In the regatta schedule, the first event at two o'clock will be a frosh event, Cornell versus Syracuse. There are two freshman races, since as many as possible can participate and gain experience. Following the second freshman race will be the varsity forward race between Cornell and Navy. SU does not have enough depth to compete in this event. Then, another freshman race, which pits the faster of the two frosh divisions, and finally, the varsity event.

"Navy has an undefeated JV," Sanford pointed out. "They're really going to be tough, but we'll be right in the thick of things."

Commenting on the varsity's chances, Sanford said that "if they put all the pieces together they'll win." Thus far, neither crew has gone 2000 meters. In practice, they have gone in short sprints, and how they will do in the long one is presently doubtful.

"The physical condition of the crew is better than ever," said Sanford. "They've undergone a difficult winter program, both in land work, and rowing inside in the tanks. They're in very, very good condition."

In training, the crew has worked 100 miles more than they did last year. According to Sanford, "the boats are faster than ever."

The average height of the oarsmen in the varsity boat is 6' 3", and the average weight is 187 pounds. The figures for the junior varsity are 6' 2", 181 pounds, and the frosh stand 6' 3", 188 pounds.

Sanford likes this year's freshman crew. "They're really tough," he says. In regatta schedules, the frosh crews compete in the same meets as the upperclassmen. This is even true for the National Championships which will be held in June.

"This team has excellent potential," Sanford concluded. "No one expects much from us. Last year, we lost six oarsmen due to imcompatibility, and now we're hurting in depth. But we now have the physical size and toughness to row with every crew in the nation. All we have to do is put the pieces together, and gain stamina--and we have to get mentally tougher."

Bruised Orange face R.P.I. in diamond duel; Barlow to be starter

By DAN SCHLOSSBERG
Associate Editor

The limping baseball Orange, saddled with a 1-3-1 record, hopes to get rolling in the opener of a four-game homestand against R.P.I. at 3 p.m. today.

Mike Barlow, the blond righthander who is heir apparent as next year's pitching ace, has been designated as the starter by coach Andy Mogish. He lost to Navy, 3-2, in a complete game performance earlier this season. He is 0-1 and has a 3.10 earned run average.

Fans wishing to see Barlow in action will have to be at Lew Carr Field because WAER program director Mike Fischer has refused to air the game, even though it is the home opener.

Friday's game against Lafayette, which was to have launched the home season, was washed out. It forced WAER to cancel its scheduled broadcast, caused Syracuse and Lafayette to scratch their only 1969 meeting, and made John Martell, the staff's only winner, miss hurling the opener.

Mogish is saving Martell, who has an even 3.00 ERA, and Greg Lowe (0-1, 2.76) for the 1:30 twinbill against Penn State Saturday. That game will be heard on the campus station.

Mogish, visibly miffed at WAER's refusal to carry all home games as it has in the past, has other problems to worry about... such as where his next base hit is coming from.

The team's batting average stands (or maybe sinks) at .178 and the sky-high earned run average of 4.68 doesn't help either. Reverse the two and the anemic Orange would look like the Chicago Cubs.

Only Bob Clary, John Unger, and Brian Mihalik are carrying averages above .200, with Clary on top at .333. Clary, known as Redbird for his flaming red hair, has also poked some flaming hits this season. He leads the team with six.

Mogish has a switch in mind for his former rightfielder, however--a move to first base. The coach plans to give sophomore gardener Tony Montiglio a whirl in right, and is moving Clary, a good defensive firstbaseman with good range, to the gateway.

Clary, meanwhile, fills the spot of the good-hitting John Massis, who is injured. Massis will go to the outfield when he returns.

DAN'S DATA: Unger's five RBIs pace the team...Batters hitting their weight include Unger (.308) and Brian Mihalik (.286)... Opponents' average is .241, 63 points above SU.

Shankman's on the move; 'Bearcat' stalks the net

By ED AGRANOWITZ

Whether behind the wheel of his sleek Buick Electra 225, or charging the net with the grace and aplomb of a puma. Jeff Shankman of the Syracuse tennis team makes it all look easy.

And if you look at his 4-3 record going into yesterday's St. Lawrence match, you might be inclined to think just that. Actually, it's been anything but easy for the affable junior who has established himself as one of the top threats for coach Gary Thorne's improving netmen. As a freshman, Shankman dropped all four of his number four singles matches and was equally as unsuccessful in doubles. He displayed an uncanny tendency to get involved in long, grueling three set marathon matches and run out of gas at the end.

His frosh year measurements of 5-11, 225 lbs. earned him the nickname of "Bearcat." "I couldn't get around too well then," Shankman laughingly remembers.

JEFF "BEARCAT" SHANKMAN did his thing yesterday as the SU tennis team dropped a tough decision to St. Lawrence. Shankman won his singles match and teamed with Howie Noble for a doubles victory.

But now the Bearcat checks in at a trim 185, and is picking up where he left off last year as one of Thorne's most consistent winners. Shankman followed his disasterous 0-8 freshman campaign with a respectable 7-8 last year as a soph for a 3-8-1 team.

Five of his triumphs last year came when he partnered with junior Howie Noble, a southpaw like Shankman. In fact, Shankman and Noble stretched their career doubles record to a guady 6-0 before succumbing to powerful Navy on the team's rain-abbreviated spring trip. They followed the tough 3-6, 6-4, 2-6 setback with a 6-2, 13-11 win in the second doubles match against Buffalo to run their slate to 7-1.

"I get much more satisfaction out of winning a doubles match than I do in singles," admits Bearcat. "Howie and I get each other up for the match and really play well together -- it's a real dual effort."

Shankman is still not worry free on the court. A painful case of bursitis in his money shoulder has hampered his game for three years. "I've been having a lot of trouble with my serve because of the shoulder," says Bearcat. "I can't get any speed or consistency."

The Orange tennis team has been making steady improvements in the past few seasons, and now seems headed to a fine year. Bearcat's sheepish smile and friendly Long Island drawl belie his true tenacity and devotion to the squad.

Shankman who took up tennis at the age of seven, is planning a career as a stock broker when his days on the courts are over. This summer he worked in Johannesburg, South Africa and also worked hard on his tennis game.

The diligence has paid dividends already for Shankman, who celebrates each victory by visiting Soo Lin's Chinese Restaurant. "We've gotten off to a good start and we'll get better as we go along," he says.

Netmen drop heartbreaker

By JOE LAGUARDIA

Academics and a strong St. Lawrence team spoiled the home opener for the SU tennis team yesterday. The Larries staggered away with a hard-fought 5-4 triumph over Gary Thorne's vastly improved netmen.

Thorne had to reshuffle his starting line-up when he learned that No. 3 singles man and stalwart doubles competitor Marc Pine was declared ineligible for the rest of the season for academic problems.

"The loss of Pine definitely cost us the match," sadi the disheartened coach.

"The singles players had to move up a notch and Don Bredes, who hasn't played much this year, teamed with Pete Frank in the doubles to take Marc's place," he added.

"I'm just unhappy with the final score, not with any of the players." He simply nodded and said, "It was a heartbreaker."

In the doubles, the duo of John Schwandt and Sandy Aronauer kept their unbeaten string alive as they notched their fourth straight victory in two sets, 6-2, 6-4.

Howie Noble and Jeff Shankman also desposed of their Larrie opponents in two sets, 6-4, 6-3.

In the singles, the Orange took two points out of a possible six as Shankman defeated Jim Sibley, 6-2, 4-6, 7-5, and Frank ousted Stan Shumkus, 6-2, 6-3.

To achieve the first winning campaign on the Hill in six years, Thorne will have to get more victories out of the singles men. The doubles, so far, has been very consistent. The SU record now stands at two wins and three defeats.

Last week, Thorne's netmen overwhelmed Buffalo, 8-1. He was very pleased with the team's performance. "We kept the ball in play and we made their men run. We had them forcing and chasing," the 27-year-old coach pointed out.

Howie Noble, Thorne's No. 1 singles man, has run into some tough luck. He's always pitted against the opposing team's strongest player and hasn't caught a break yet. According to Thorne, "He's played well but just hasn't had the chance to win."

The next encounter for the Orange will be with Hamilton College Thursday at Hamilton.

DAILY ORANGE

Syracuse University's Daily Newspaper Since 1903

Vol. 67, No. 93 | Syracuse, New York, Thursday, April 24, 1969 | 10 Cents

Autonomy battle won

SBU claims 6000 participated in yesterday's boycott of classes

By LARRY KRAMER
Campus Affairs Editor

The boycott of classes is over. Approximately 6000 SU students chose not attend classes yesterday. Dormitory autonomy has been granted. After six hours of deliberation between students and administrators, eight other demands of the Students for a Better University, were met to the satisfaction of the student leaders.

Also attending the talks was Dr. Michael O. Sawyer from the Maxwell School, who said, "I'm enormously pleased with the student leaders involved." When Sawyer was asked about the effect of the boycott on the talks. he commented, "It helped dramatize the situation." Sawyer guest lectured at three dormitories during the day.

Dean of Student Services Jim G. Carleton attributed the success of the negotiations to "responsible student leadership." However , when asked about the boycott, he said, "It's impossible to evaluate the success of the boycott. Although many students stayed away from class, the real success of the boycott lies in what they were doing while they were out of class."

Following the announcement, Chuck Hicks, outgoing SG president, said, "Students have shown something to the university. They've shown that they will mobilize when they're given the run around. This isn't the end, but the beginning especially for David (Ifshin, new SG head)."

Ifshin, when reached for comment at the SG office, remarked, "SBU has fulfilled its purpose. Its prime function was to act as a catalyst. The movement must now continue on a grass-roots basis, initiated by involvement of each individual."

"Dorm autonomy was the first step in the right direction," Ifshin continued mobilization so that the momentum built up over the past two weeks is not lost."

Ifshin and Hicks met mixed reaction to the announcement when they went from dorm to dorm after the meeting. At Watson, there was an air of jubilance, stemming from the decision on autonomy. In DellPlain, however, students argued stubbornly that they had been "sold out" by the two student leaders in respect to other demands, such as the investigation of the University Hill Corporation.

The demands were discussed in order of appearance on the boycott. Although Chancellor Tolley was not present, Vice-Chancellor and Provost Frank P. Piskor acted on his behalf, possessing all or Tolley's administrative powers. The issues agreed on were:

- Five-year terms for Administrators subject to renewal and review by the University Senate. Piskor offered his committment to ask the agenda committee to place this on the agenda of the next trustees meeting. He even offered his support of this bill to

(Continued on Page 5)

Rally supports Cornell Blacks

United Black Students of Syracuse University rallied on the steps of Hendricks Chapel during yesterday's noon drizzle.

Throughout the peaceful demonstration the students chanted and carried black sticks, which one marcher said "symbolize black power, man, black power." Two marchers led the demonstrators to the chapel, carrying a large sign which depicted black students beneath the slogan -- "We got to make it, Baby."

While addressing the crowd, speakers from Syracuse and Colgate described events at Cornell over the past two months which led to campus disturbances there. They defended the black students' use of guns during the campus takeover. "Blacks are united," one speaker said. "Anything done to one black student is done to all black students," he continued. This led to enthusiastic cries of "we're together, we're together" by the marchers.

"To make publicly known their support of the black students on the Cornell University campus," about 85 A spokesman for the group made it clear that the demonstration "was not intended to undermine the student boycott" which also took place yesterday.

Student boycott opinions: 'a beginning, not an end'

By SAM HEMINGWAY

Walter Cronkite will not have to ask Eric Severeid for his comment on the violence at Syracuse. Huntley-Brinkley won't have a filmclip from WSYR either. The boycott--or at least the first day of it--produced no more than constructive discussion, something that in the eyes of one student, is what this student body needs "to wake up from its social-conscious slumber."

Most students expressed sympathy with the boycott and were aware of the basic issues involved.

Sophomore John Northridge, a Booth resident enrolled in the Liberal Arts program said that he was "afraid students will be satisfied with dorm autonomy. There's other things, like the abolition of Rule One, the eminent domain question involving the University Hill Corporation and the research corporation." He was concerned as well with "what happens after 5 p.m. So far we have shown interest not support."

Duane Hickling, a junior living in Marion, said, "It can't hurt because it will draw attention to these problems." He listed the independent study program, student curriculum committee, tuition stablization and library hour extensions as viable proposals. He was in favor of retaining phys-ed and ROTC academic credit.

Pamela Alibrandi, a Spanish major, said it was the tuition raise that bothered her. For another co-ed, who wished to remain anonymous, it was dorm autonomy. One picket in front of the University Bookstore felt the whole problem stems from a basic lack of interest on the part of the Administration. "That's what happened at Columbia," the picket added, and Tolley, like Kirk, is behind the times." Another student, who did not wish to be identified, agreed. "Tolley is a 1940 man who has managed to stay alive."

Almost everyone was against violence to attain ends, but it was the general opinion that it will take more than a one day boycott to get results.

Major issues in a faculty-student discussion at Booth Hall, which drew about 100 participants, were tuition increases, demands for a higher caliber in the academic sphere and its administration, abolition of Rule One and dorm autonomy. Other issues mentioned less frequently included the upgrading of Food Service, the question of ROTC and the advisor program.

About 60 per cent of those in attendance thought the discussion was good or relevant. Comments like "it's only a start" and "too abstract" reflected the attitude in evidence on the campus all day, that the effort is still at the stage where apathy by both student and Administration could make the boycott and its aftermath a semi-successful event.

Much of the discussion at the Booth meeting centered on opening of communication channels to air grievances. Prof. Karl Schmidt (political science), Prof. Charles Giorano (art), Prof. Peter Marsh (history) and David Potter (public affairs) spoke to the assemblage and answered questions. The meeting was one of nine scheduled in the dorms on campus.

Not all students agreed with the boycott. Locke Ebans, a senior majoring in advertising and a brother of Phi Gamma Delta fraternity, said the boycott was "just a chance for students to miss classes." He proposed that a signed petition be passed around the dorms and greek houses listing demands and see which ones students really prefer. Then, Ebans said, "We can find out the hierarchy of issues. As it exists now the boycott has little direction."

The views varied in character but grew in urgency as the day wore on. The interviews conducted increasingly became arguments and discussions themselves as students began to feel a sense of importance in the issues. It was best summed up by a junior co-ed who said "this all seems like a beginning, not an end.

'Cheers' at Watson

By VIC LIVINGSTON

All the hard work, the planning, the dorm council meetings, the rap sessions at 4 a.m.--suddenly, all these efforts paid off. As of last night Watson men were finally free. They knew their rights, and through a well executed, determined course of action, they firmly entrenched students' rights at SU.

At 8:20 p.m. last night the chattering, anxious crowd was breathless as SBU leaders, Dave Ifshin and Chuck Hicks entered Watson lounge. "We've got some good news--the administration has considered all of the 11 additional demands including autonomy. We got dorm autonomy now!"

For an instant all seemed like a beautiful dream, a magical high possible only with extended strength, threats of violence, and blatant assertions of power. Then all hell broke lose--cheers, backslapping, the whole bit. SU students did what had seemed impossible to do at SU and what other universities achieved only after violent action. But through the orderly, well planned SBU movement, that determined yet threatening stance of the new left coalition and the evident progressivism of the administration negotiations, students at this "apathetic" university finally secured their inalienable rights. For several minutes the walls of Watson lounge shook as the elated students raised their traditional "V" sign.

Although dorm autonomy must be given rubber stamp approval at the CSL meeting tomorrow afternoon, the Watson RA staff, under director Bill Lombardo, all but granted last night's victory celebration, with Watson men openly asserting autonomy with the use of alcoholic beverages and visitation by members of the opposite sex.

Of course, other issues w ill remain undiscussed pending further display of responsible student action--the brand of action that led to Watson's success. Perhaps SBU can now rightly change its appellation, as one student commented at yesterday's Hendricks rally, to "students for the best university."

Festival of the Arts

Art school sponsoring lectures, fashion show

Lectures by visiting artists, a fashion show, a sidewalk art sale and two continuing exhibitions are the contribution of the Sch··l of Art to the Syracuse University Festival of the Arts.

Sculptor Jason Seley, who is chairman of the art department at Cornell University, will talk about "My Ten Years With the Automobile Bumper" tomorrow at 11 a.m. in Gifford Auditorium.

Seley, whose sculpture "Vertical" (1965) is in the collection of Syracuse's Everson Museum of Art, says of his work: "I work, I believe, inspired by the nature of my time and place. To me the automobile bumper is an offering of nature's abundance. I am as much concerned with its pre-history as the woodcarver with the growing tree."

Painter and illustrator Dean Ellis will describe changing aspects of commercial illustration in the last 15 years Wednesday at 10 a.m. in Room 304, Crouse College. Ellis has exhibited his paintings at galleries and museums in several cities including New York and Paris. Two of his paintings are in the Syracuse University permanent collection.

Ellis, who lives in New York and Amagansett, Long Island, will participate in a panel discussion Wednesday at 3:30 p.m. in the Joe and Emily Lowe Art Center. He and Larry H. Bakke, E. Ainslie Burke, Jack D. Nelson and John Vargo of the SU School of Art faculty will discuss problems of the contemporary artist.

Students in costume design classes will present "Evolution of Fashion," showing developments in clothing styles from the time of Adam and Eve, Thursday (May 1) at 8 p.m. in the community room at St. Mary's site dormitory. According to Mrs. Jakobine Hobbs, class instructor, futuristic outfits or "body coverings" and designs for body painting will be featured.

Prints, drawings, paintings in oil and water colors, ceramics and other three-dimensional objects, all the work of School of Art students, will be on sale tomorrow from 1 to 5 p.m. and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. outside Lowe Art Center. The selection and the price range will be wide, according to John Vargo, associate professor of art.

Art students are also working with architecture students on their ALICE (Art of Lighting in Creating Environments) project, to be presented from noon to 6 p.m. daily tomorrow through Sunday (May 4) in Building 19, near Sims Hall.

Lowe Art Center continues to feature graduate students' projects in a variety of media and an exhibition of prints and drawings by Harry Wickey, both until May 19.

These Festival events are free and open to the public.

Two plays at Regent for Festival

The Syracuse University drama department will present a program of two plays by young playwrights Thursday, Friday and Saturday (April 24, 25 and 26) in the rehearsal studio at the experimental theatre of the University Regent Theatre. The program is part of the Festival of the Arts at the University.

"A Bullet for John" was written by George Godbold, a 17-year-old student at Central-Technical High School in Syracuse. It will be performed by a cast from Salt City Playhouse, including several teenagers from area schools. Dr. G.F. Reidenbaugh, chairman of the SU drama department, is director.

The play is about a group of teenagers, who, hoping for excitement as well as money, plan a robbery. Godbold, who wrote the play when he was 16, has the title rqle as the group's leader.

John B. Wyeth, an SU freshman, wrote "The Table" for a cast of drama department students. Phil A. Zarecki, a junior, will direct the production. The play, which has been described as "wildly imaginative," is about the relationships of various people to a table.

The drama department will open its regular departmental convocation to visitors Friday (April 25) at 4 p.m.

Wanted for Psychological Experiment

Women at least 21 years of age, with at least high school education. Participants will be paid at least $2.00 per hour. If interested call Upstate Medical Center at 473-5777, ask for Miss Lant.

Call between hours 1:00 & 5:00 P.M.

JIFFY KING

SPECIAL

Monday thru Friday, 2-5 p.m.

10¢ OFF ALL SUBS

727 South Crouse

in the Arcade

Not sure what you want to do? Join the club.

Du Pont Company
Room 6688
Wilmington, DE 19898

I'd like your latest information on opportunities at Du Pont for graduates with degrees in_____.

Name_____

University_____

Degree_____

Graduation Date_____

Address_____

City_____

State_____ Zip_____

Du Pont wants engineers who want to grow professionally. And we have great respect for the guy who'd like to "know more about it" before he marries a specific kind of job. We even have a plan to help him.

It's called "planned mobility"—a sort of intramural job hop. You don't get into a training program. You get into a job. If it doesn't fit you, or you it, you get into a second job or a fifth or a sixth, until you find the one you want to grow with. It gives you time to decide while you're broadening professionally.

Ask the Du Pont interviewer about it. Ask him anything. He was in your shoes very recently.

An Equal Opportunity Employer (M/F)

DUPONT

College Relations

Are you a JAZZ enthusiast?

Record Runner

announces

2.97!!

Blow Yourself UP and then Go To Pieces

PHOTO JIGSAW PUZZLE

1 ft. x 1½ ft.

Send any Black & White or color photo. We will send you a 1 ft. x 1½ ft. Photo Jigsaw puzzle. Mailed in 40 easy-to-assemble pieces. Great gift or gag.

A $25 value for $4.50

Photo Dart Board 1 ft diameter $4.50
Get your own Personalized Photo Dart Board. Send any black and white or color photo. Mounted on genuine cork and comes with 3 precision darts.

Your original photo returned undamaged. Add 50c postage and handling for EACH item. Send check or M.O. (No C.O.D.) to:

PHOTO JIGSAW, Dept. C
210 East 23 St., New York, NY 10010
Dealer inquiries invited

ANGUS H. TWOMBLY — Editor-in-Chief

MANAGING EDITOR - Alan Stamm EXECUTIVE EDITOR - Karen Wiediger NEWS EDITOR - Fred Tuccillo EDITORIAL DIRECTOR - David A. Ross COPY EDITOR - Jean Havens FEATURE EDITOR - Roz Mazer SPORTS EDITOR - Mike Weber CAMPUS AFFAIRS EDITOR - Larry Kramer PHOTOGRAPHY EDITOR - Clint Clemens ASSOCIATE EDITORS - Andrij Bilyk, Kay Christensen, Beth Hillson, Rona Kavee, Helene Macdonald, Charles Shapiro, Dan Schlossberg, Patti Williams, Roni Zlokower.

DAILY ORANGE

Syracuse University's Daily — Newspaper Since 1903

THURSDAY, APRIL 24, 1969 PAGE 3

STEVEN P. STROBRIDGE — Business Manager

ASSISTANT BUSINESS MANAGER— Art Depasqua, NATIONAL ADVERTISING MANAGER— Janet Meyer ACCOUNT EXECUTIVES— Roger Black, Jim Maney, Mike Greenstein.

Published Tuesday, through Friday during the academic year by students of Syracuse University. Offices located at 200 Brooklea Drive, Fayetteville, N.Y., and 1101 East Adams St., Syracuse, New York. Entered as Second Class matter at the U.S. Post Office, Fayetteville, N.Y. 13066.

Boycott aftermath

As of the middle of last evening, SU students had dorm autonomy and commitments made on several other demands, but there was much uncertainty as to what else. What seems to be confusing many students, and maybe the student leaders as well since they haven't been able to explain it, is why SU has autonomy and what else is going to be asked from the university.

SU does not by any stretch of the imagination have dorm autonomy because of a student boycott. The boycott did several things, but it didn't get autonomy. What it did was arouse some interest in the students and faculty, get a lot of publicity and stir up a lot of unnecessary hurrah. The boycott did not create an atmosphere more conducive to negotiations. It already existed.

What isn't getting across, at least it didn't last night in Dellplain and Hendricks Chapel, is that the negotiations aren't over. SBU wasn't the only group working with the administration. A second group is still meeting and still discussing issues such as academics at length. As might have been expected, students and some leaders made the autonomy issue the focal point of the boycott and expected others to do the same, but the granting of autonomy and the concluding of the boycott are not related. The boycott wasn't called to pressurize for issues. It was called for support. Support was displayed and the talks will go on. They just won't be SBU talks.

Now that all the commotion is over, and anybody that was at SG headquarters knows it was commotion, maybe someone will calmly ask why we had to have all of the boycott business anyway. If it had stuck to its original goal, it might be easy to rationalize, but somehow everyone got the idea that the boycott was going to get autonomy and then a lot of other things.

So everyone's attention focused on eleven demands, and now today we may have picketers and people demanding to see the Chancellor and maybe even causing trouble because they don't think the boycott accomplished enough etc. We say the boycott wasn't supposed to accomplish anything anyway.

If trouble results, even though SBU is dissolving, that trouble will be because of SBU and when more progress is made, it will be in spite of SBU.

Senate outrage

On Tuesday night, the Undergraduate Senate approved legislation implementing a student finance board to approve and provide University funds for the Daily Orange. The Daily Orange considers this bill an offensive encroachment against every imaginable principle of freedom of the press and a politically-inspired hack gesture typical of the chicanery only too characteristic of the Senate.

It is our belief that the bill may be partially motivated by discontent in the Senate over DO coverage of that body's deliberations and such political overtones were heightened by the rampage of charges thrown from all directions during the recent SG elections.

Elections Commission Chairman Dick Barton, himself, at least once had the audacity to suggest that the DO might try to wield financial support by manipulating candidate endorsements before the election, and then Tuesday night in Senate, Barton extended his conspiracy theory to reason that if the DO is going to be pressured he'd rather have it coming from students than administrators.

We suggest that it is ignorance to believe that the DO is tooled by anyone. It's much too easy to sling remarks like that around without being at all aware of the situation. As far as student pressure is concerned, the DO can think of no worse place to put the power of the purse than in the hands of the students whose performance it is our duty to evaluate. Just because we are a student paper it is no excuse to have students control our budget. How viable would any newspaper be if a state or national legislature provided its funds?

Of course Daily Orange money comes from the University--but indirectly from the students. So does SG's money. Should we suggest that it too is tooled by the Administration?

We find the desire to administer our budget extremely questionable and ask support from the necessary channels to thwart such a move.

a bookstore boycott?

Kirby Wolf

Physical education requirements bug me; bad professors bug me; the infirmary bugs me; tuition increases bug me; no student union building bugs me--but the bookstore bugs the hell out of my mother. Tea pots and peanut butter, bellbottoms and biology books: one can get anything at the SU Bookstore. And one thing one always does get is--taken.

Whoever owns the bookstore (and we'll probably never know who that really is, because why should somebody with millions of dollars stay in a hole like Syracuse?) is no dummy. He is aware of two important facts and exploits them to his fullest advantage: the first is that he is closer to the mainstream of campus life than are the stores on Marshall Street; the second is that he cleverly offers charge plates as a "convenience" (a convenient way for someone to retire to the Riviera) to unsuspecting high school seniors and their cashless-society-oriented parents. But the fiend is not content to just issue those golden pieces of plastic, no! He refuses to itemize the bill he sends to our parents, sinisterly enticing us to tell Dad that the $3.97 spent on the Stones' "Beggars' Banquet" was for Shaw's "Caesar and Cleopatra."

The whole matter is really quite simple. Syracuse students are both lazy and rich. And as long as we stay both lazy and rich, we are keeping some bum on the southern coast of France happy. However, though we may very well remain lazy for the rest of our comfortable little lives, we are not going to remain rich if we keep patronizing the SU Bookstore. The SU Bookstore record department doesn't compete with Brucie's or the Record Runner because it doesn't have to. Neither of these establishments offers the purchaser charge accounts. The clothing department can afford to charge the same prices as Brooks Bros. because neither Douglas Stone nor Manny's has the magic card. And when you buy your books, who is it who saves you the trouble of running around the store by wrapping up all the books required for a certain course in a neat cellophane package? Why it's those same people who'll give you 10 cents on the dollar once you tear that cellophane off.

In short, the bookstore can get away with murder, and it knows it. And what can we, the suckers of this enterprise, do about the situation? Plenty. We can make the bookstore compete...but only at the temporary sacrifice of our own convenience. I propose that for a period of no less than fourteen days, no one, but no one, buy a single item from the Syracuse University Bookstore (excepting, perhaps, a book or two which cannot be purchased elsewhere). True, this will mean spending cash that could be spent on entertainment. True, it will mean walking down to Marshall St. for drugstore items. True, you may not be able to buy that new album this week. But it won't last forever. If the entire student body boycotts the bookstore for a two week period, it will have to lower its prices to regain its patronage. If for two weeks, we do our shopping anywhere but the bookstore, it will have to meet competition to survive.

Let's show the bookstore that we're not the biggest push-overs in history. Let's get that thief, whoever he is, back from his vacation playland on the Mediterranean. Let's get prices down...then we can all go back to charging our hearts out, but this time, getting our money's worth.

Letters

To the Editor:

As members of the class of 1971, we are very happy to see that Syracuse University finally has our best interests at heart. SU has come up with a "fair and equitable" housing arrangement for the next school year.

Last year, as freshmen, we were required to use a lottery system to pick our rooms. Not being one of the lucky few who picked a number sufficiently low to get into the dormitory of our choice, we had to settle for what was available after the sophomores and juniors had chosen all the choice living quarters. Not wanting to protest against the long standing Syracuse tradition of dumping on lower classmen we remained silent. Everyone assured us that once we became part of the elite (upper classmen) we would be able to live where we wanted to.

Suddenly, the time for choosing next year's room arrived. It didn't take long to discover that things were not going right. The administration has come up with a brilliant new plan for housing. Tuesday, April 22, was set aside as the day for upperclassmen to sign up for their present room again if they so desired. Wednesday, was the day upperclassmen could sign up for available space in their present residence. On Thursday, all other students (i.e. freshmen) could sign up for available space in their residence. On Friday a list of all available rooms on campus would be put up, and these rooms were to be assigned on a first come first served basis. What all this means is that members of the class of 1971 are virtually prevented from getting a room of their choice outside their present building.

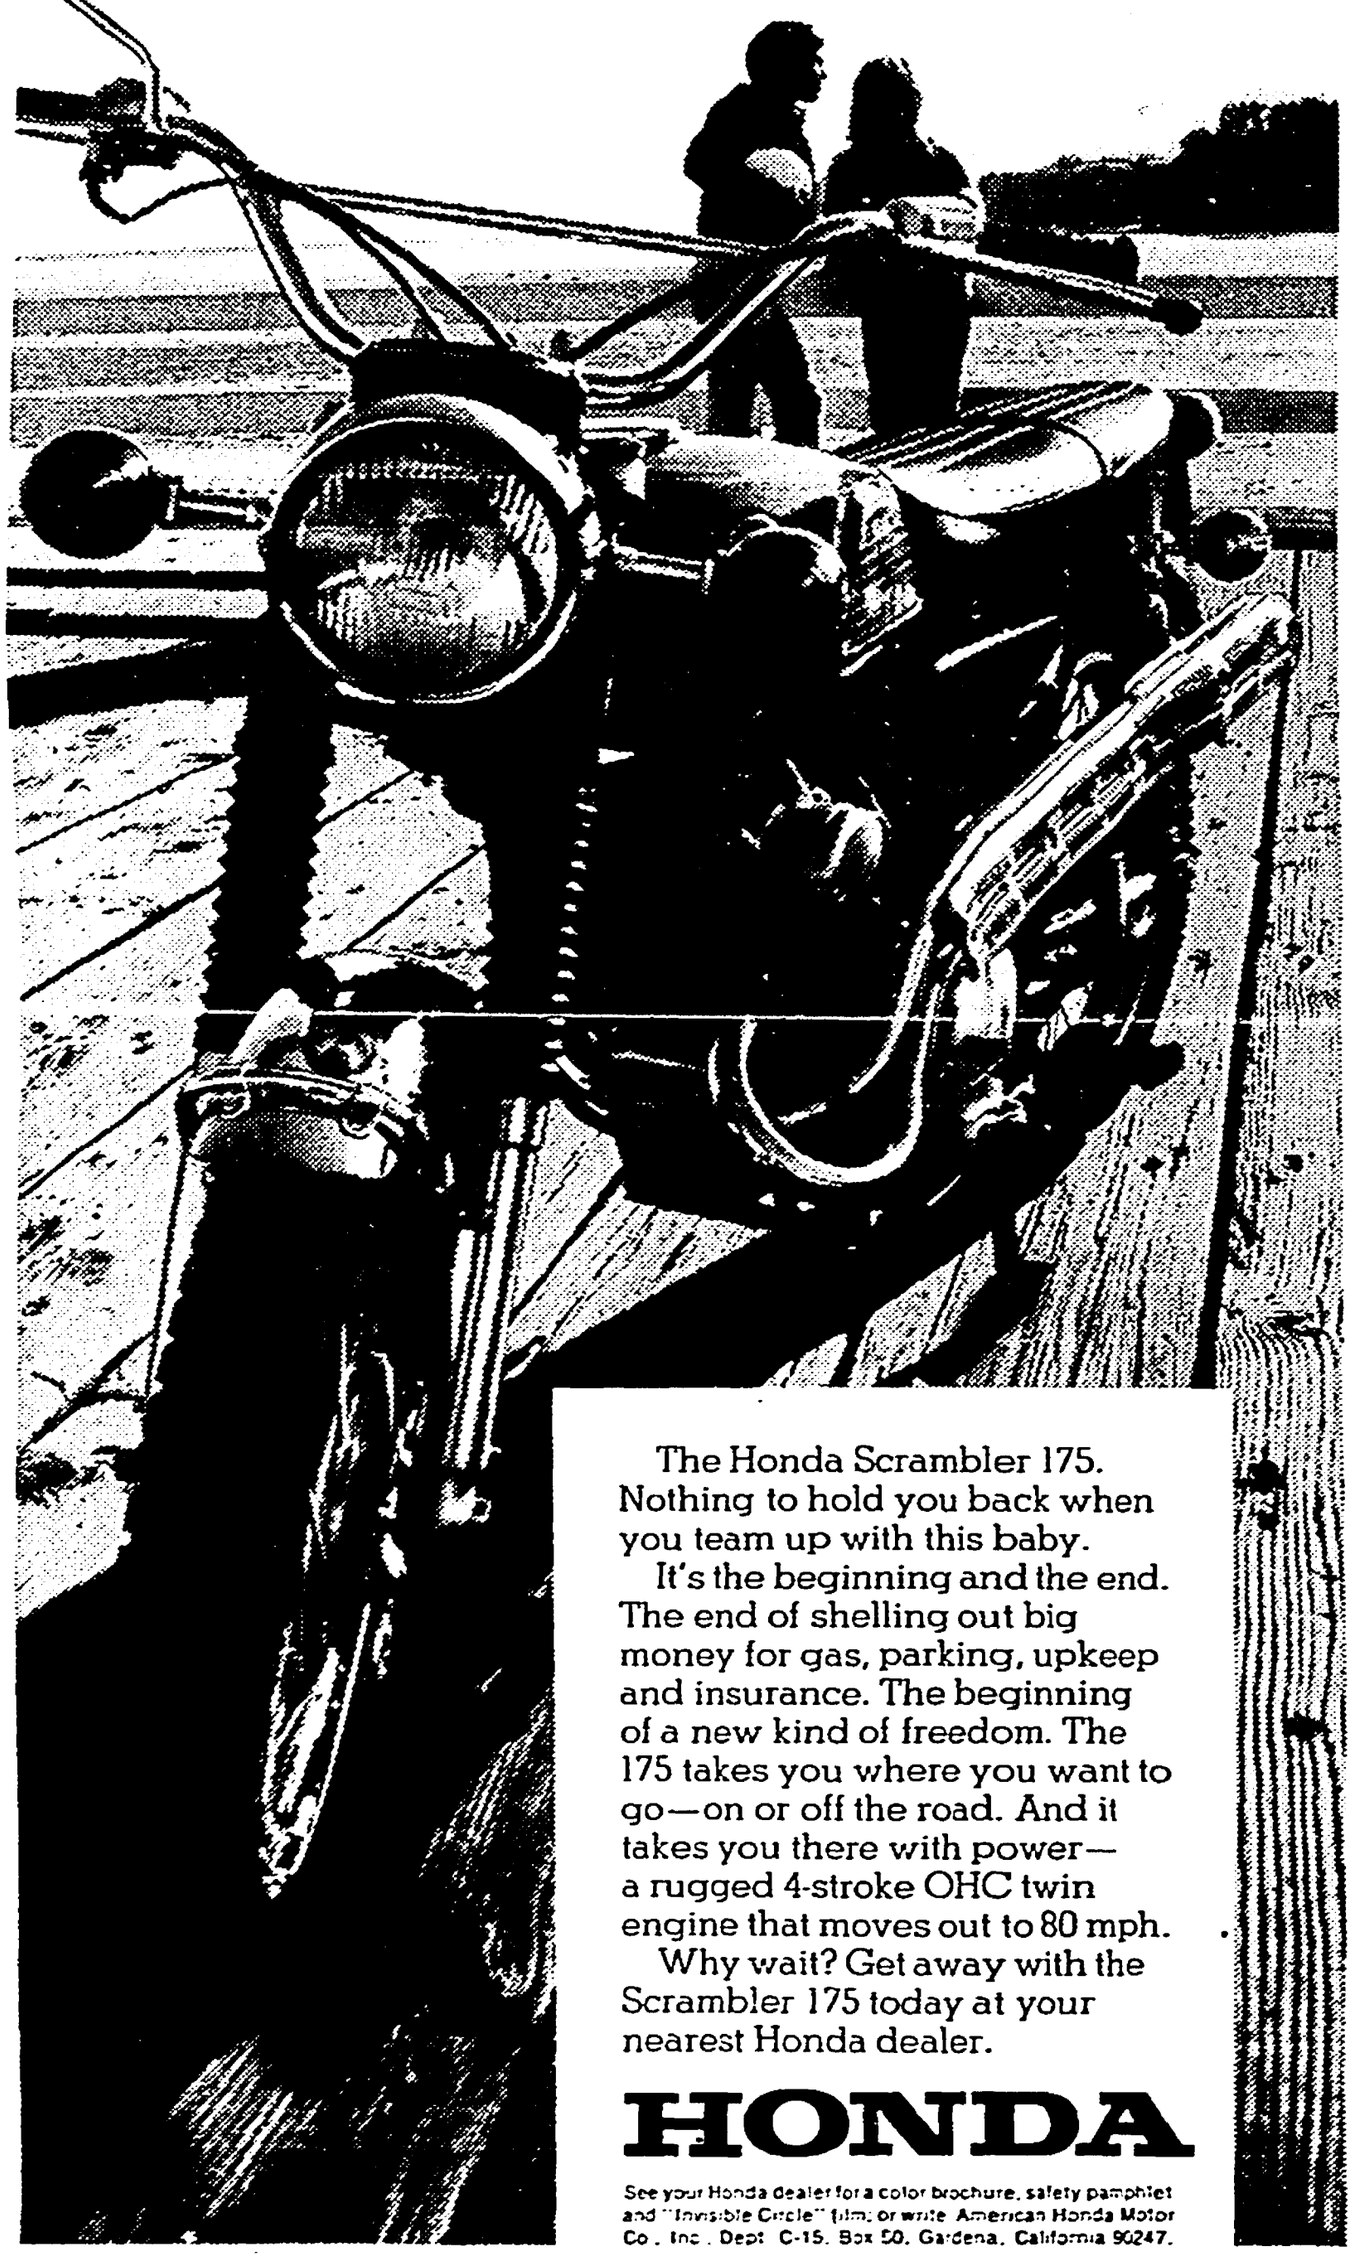
We must wait until the juniors (who had their choice of rooms last year) pick the choice rooms, and the freshmen pick the next best rooms. The rooms alotted for incoming freshmen must also be considered. If a sophomore wishes to change residences next year, he will have to be very, very, lucky to get what he wants.

A conversation with the Assistant Director of Housing did not bring any satisfaction. She was completely unaware of the problems facing the class of 1971. When asked "you could say we are being screwed, right?," Mrs. Quinn replied, "I guess that you could put it that way." We were also told that, "there is nothing that you can do about it."

We feel that something can be done about it. After talking with outgoing Student Government President Chuck Hicks we were assured that attempts were being made to rectify the situation. Soon after, it was announced that the room assigning procedures were being postponed. Student government has done its part to help. Now is the time for class officers to show the merit of their offices. What are our class officers doing?

William Ober
Kenneth Ballard

the Record Runner



HAS OVER 150 JAZZ LP's

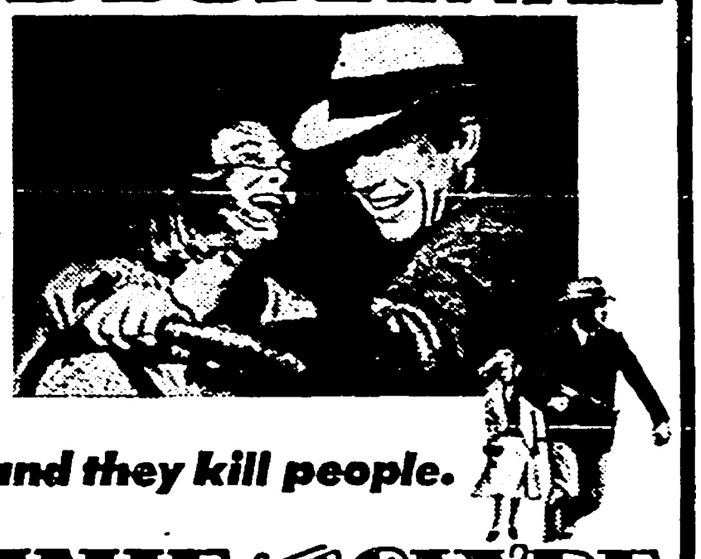
ARTISTS INCLUDE: ADDERLY, PAUL BEY, CHARLIE BYRD, CHARLES LLOYD, WILSON, BYARD & MANY OTHERS.

ON SALE AT $2.97

1969. AHM

Look what you can get away with now.

The Honda Scrambler 175. Nothing to hold you back when you team up with this baby.



It's the beginning and the end. The end of shelling out big money for gas, parking, upkeep and insurance. The beginning of a new kind of freedom. The 175 takes you where you want to go—on or off the road. And it takes you there with power—a rugged 4-stroke OHC twin engine that moves out to 80 mph.

Why wait? Get away with the Scrambler 175 today at your nearest Honda dealer.

HONDA

See your Honda dealer for a color brochure, safety pamphlet and "Invisible Circle" film; or write American Honda Motor Co., Inc., Dept. C-15, Box 50, Gardena, California 90247.

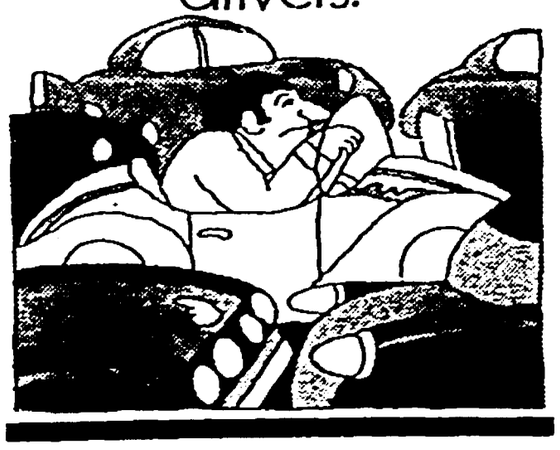
WARREN BEATTY
FAYE DUNAWAY

They're young... they're in love

...and they kill people.

BONNIE AND CLYDE

CO-STARRING
MICHAEL J POLLARD·GENE HACKMAN·ESTELLE PARSONS
Written by DAVID NEWMAN and ROBERT BENTON Music by Charles Strouse Produced by WARREN BEATTY Directed by ARTHUR PENN
TECHNICOLOR® FROM WARNER BROS.-SEVEN ARTS

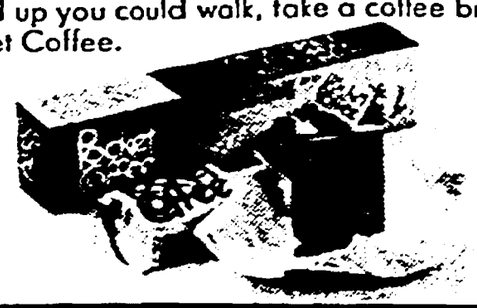


April 24

6, 8 and 10 p.m.

film forum
gifford auditorium
syracuse university
$1.00

Pocket Coffee! What's that?



A new kind of coffee break for discouraged drivers.

Whether you drive a taxi, the school shuttle or the car pool, behind the wheel you're behind the 8-ball. Lights that don't change, mid-town traffic, Sunday drivers, bad tippers, cranky kids. A coffee break would sure help.

Pocket Coffee was invented for you. It looks like a piece of candy; it's a lot more. A delicious chocolate shell filled with real liquid coffee. Coffee break coffee. Wrapped and packed in a handy 3 candy packet, Pocket Coffee's a great traveler.

When you can't stop, when you're stuck in traffic, or, so fed up you could walk, take a coffee break. Reach for Pocket Coffee.

Dorm autonomy . . .

(Continued from page 1)

effect all administrators up to and including himself.

● The institution of an Independent Study Program. Here, Piskor pointed out the fact that the administration had been in favor of this for a long time, but it never was acted upon due to lack of faculty support. Piskor did agree, however, to go with students to see the liberal arts administrators to get some action on the program.

● Students on curriculum committees in all departments. An agreement was reached to have the students and administrators jointly speak to the heads of all committees and formally request that students be given one full-voting member on each.

● The institution of Dormitory Autonomy. Unanimous approval was given to "The principle of dormitory autonomy including increased student responsibility and decentralized authority," as stated by Piskor.

● Support of Black student's programs. In this case, a statement was made to the administration in support of the Black students work on their curriculum.

● Financial, administrative and moral commitment to place the construction of a University Union Building as first priority after the construction of the new library. Piskor agreed with students after the construction of the new library. Piskor agreed with students on this issue, and promised to bring it up at the next trustees meeting on May 2, and there announce his full support of it.

● Stabilization of tuition for the full four years. Piskor agreed with at least a "predictable" system, by which students could know how much they'll pay during their four year stay.

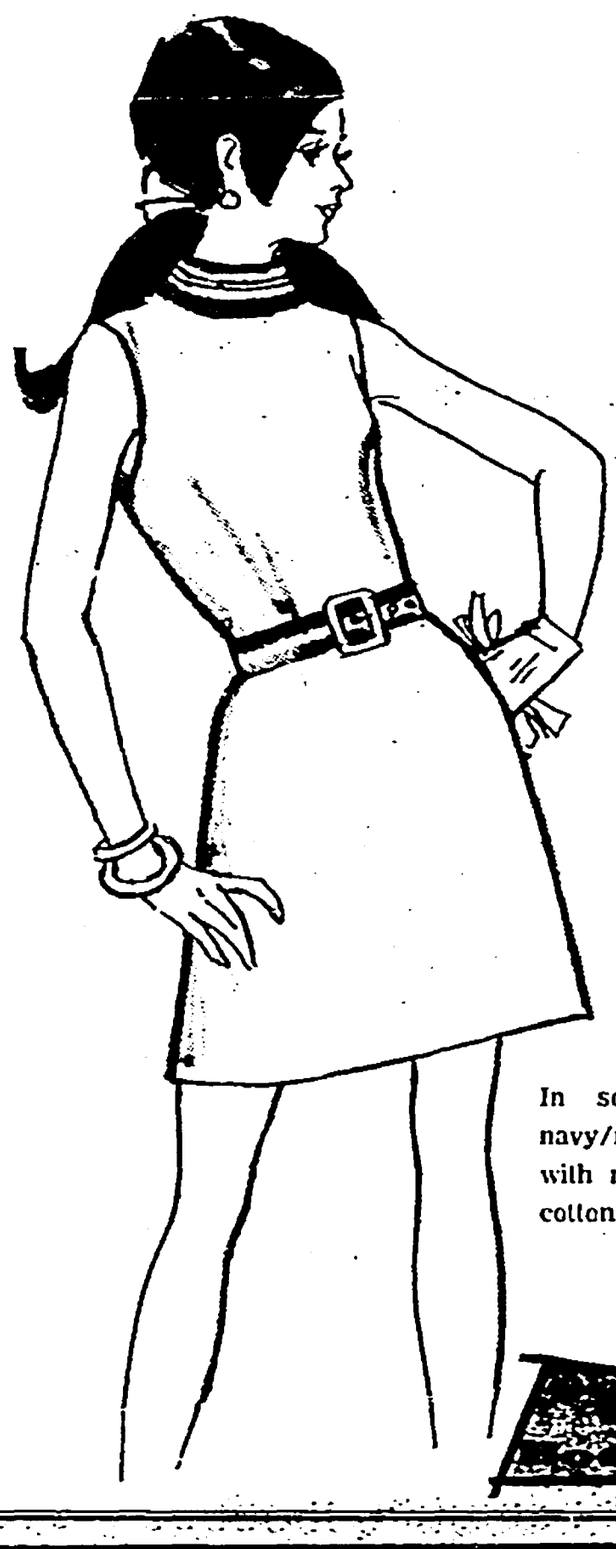
● 20% of the increased student fee to be given to students for student programs. The trustees must make the final approval of this, and Piskor again agreed to bring the proposal, with his recommendation for approval, to the May 2 meeting.

● The elimination of Rule One. Rule One is going to be re-written with emphasis on the fact that due process is available in all cases.

The final two issues, a study of the University Hill Corporation, and increased regard for members of the outside community, were tabled for discussion at the next meeting.

SYRACUSE REPERTORY THEATRE

Apr. 24-27
May 1-4



Thurs. 8 pm
Fri. 8 pm
Sat. 2:30 & 8 pm
Sun. 7:30 pm

summertree
by Ron Cowen
directed by G. F. Reidenbaugh
tickets available in Slocum Hall and Regent box office (476-4536)
UNIVERSITY REGENT THEATRE
820 EAST GENESEE ST.

SENIORS, GRADS, Phd's — FOR EACH COMPLETED PART II OF THE JOB INTERVIEW RECRUITMENT QUESTIONNAIRE YOU TURN IN AT THE PLACEMENT CENTER YOU'LL RECEIVE A 25¢ COUPON REDEEMABLE AT ANY S. U. BOOKSTORE. COUPON OFFER EXPIRES MAY 20, 1969.

red eye

Top O' The Mt. Shop

The knit generation is the now generation, and the now generation says knits, knits, knits. Easy care free skimmer.

In solid navy with navy/red trim or white with navy/red trim. In cotton knit.

13.00

Bookstores

Campus Clothiers
S.U. BOOKSTORES
Bring You Their Collection of Brand Names —

SPORTCOATS: Stanley Blacker Zeeman

NYLON SHELLS: Peters, Lakeland, MacGregor, Woolrich

SPRING JACKETS: Mighty Mac, Peters, London Fog

TIES: Berkley, Reis, Resilio, Rivetz

DRESS SLACKS: Jefferson, Moyer, Austin Hill

CASUAL SLACKS: Farah Broomsticks

KNIT SHIRTS: Moss, MacGregor, MacCleun, Lion of Troy

BELTS: Canterbury, Harness Horns

WALLETS: Tex - Tan

BELL BOTTOM JEANS: Landlubber, H. D. Lee, Creighton, Levi Strauss

DRESS SHIRTS: Creighton

Bookstores
303 University Place

'Issues in Social Development'

Visiting professors to speak at symposium

A symposium on "Frontier Issues in Social Development Theories" will be conducted at Syracuse University today through Saturday in the Founders Room of Maxwell Hall. The symposium is sponsored by the Program of Eastern African Studies and the sociology department.

The speakers and their topics are:

Today:

9:30 - 11:30 a.m., C.B. Macpherson, professor of political science at the University of Toronto: Emergence of civil society and the market economy in the West; resulting problems of political solidarity, sovereignty, and authority in market as against pre-market societies. Resulting cultural dilemmas relating to distinction between "individual and society" and connected issues of social organization.

1:30-3:30 p.m., George Dalton, professor of economics at Northwestern University: The special perspectives of economic anthropology in theory and research. Bearing of the perspective on micro and macro problems of development with special reference to cultural effects of commodity and monetary orientations on a variety of social traditions.

4-6 p.m., Benjamin Nelson, professor of history and sociology, New School for Social Research: The interacting themes of community and society in the West as modes of social organization and orientations toward social and cultural life.

Tomorrow:

9:30-11:30 a.m., Thomas Reiner, professor of regional science, University of Pennsylvania: Emergence of the "region" as a unit of social analysis and its place in development planning. Technocratic and non-technocratic conceptions of regional planning. Types of evidence adduced for existence of regions as social and cultural forms.

1:30-3:30 p.m., Aidan Southall, professor of anthropology, Syracuse University: Are there in sub-Saharan Africa signs of experimentation in new styles of centralized and de-centralized relationships reflecting attempts as new conceptions of communal and societal organization? What is the fate of ethnic association, lineages, kingdoms, socio-religious formations in the struggle for new social forms? Effects of nation-state system and world market.

4-6 p.m., Bert Hoselitz, professor of sociology, University of Chicago: Tradition and modernity -- this distinction, its history and place in economic and sociological theories, its proponents and opponents, will be discussed in relation to development studies.

Saturday:

9:30-11:30 a.m., Irving Louis Horowitz, professor of sociology, Washington University: Qualitative and quantitative research problems in comparative international development.

1:30-3:30 p.m., William Pooler, assistant professor of sociology, Syracuse University: Can an effective social decision to control population rates realistically be made within the bounds of current conceptions of democracy? Population control as "family planning" vs. control of institutions underlying individual decisions. Relationships between values and "optimum" population levels. Is there a point at which population levels become an independent variable to which other institutions must be adapted?

4-6 p.m., Norman Birnbaum, professor and chairman of sociology, Amherst College: New elites, modern education, and tendencies toward technocratic consciousness in modern societies both "socialist" and other. Emerging and changing relationships between education, social organization, and cultural patterns of "mentality."

TEACHERS

STUDENTS

$230 ROUND TRIP TO LONDON; $250 ROUND TRIP TO PARIS/AMSTERDAM AND LONDON BY SCHEDULED JETS OF MAJOR AIRLINES. Several departures this summer. Write for brochure to Division NSA, Travel Wholesalers, ITT Building, Washington, D.C. 20036.

WANTED:
BANJO PLAYER
Friday and Saturday Nights
ONE PIANO PLAYER
(Old Time Music)
FRIDAY and SATURDAY
Miller's Gay 90's
437-5652

We encourage job-hopping. We do try to keep it intramural—within Du Pont that is—and we do have a more formal title for it, "planned mobility."

Saylor Gilbert, CH.E., V.P.I., 1962, tells it like it is.

It only means we don't put you in a training program. We put you in growth jobs—to help you get to the top of your field the way you want to get there.

"Take a good look around you, and you'll see people at Du Pont who've had a lot of movement through very different kinds of jobs. There's no doubt that this diverse experience helps you. For example, I had four assignments concerned with different aspects of polymerizing, casting, stretching and finishing our polyester film base."

"Having had all this, I feel I was better prepared for my present position of training supervisor. But aside from the fact that variety can help you, I believe most people just like a change after working at one job for a period of time."

Your Du Pont recruiter will be a guy like Saylor.. Ask him about planned mobility—or anything else you'd like to know about Du Pont. Mailing the coupon is the surest way to get in touch with him.

Du Pont Company
Room 6687
Wilmington, DE 19898

I'd like your latest information on opportunities at Du Pont for graduates with degrees in_____

Name_____

University_____

Degree_____ Graduation Date_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____ Zip_____

An Equal Opportunity Employer (M/F)

DUPONT

College Relations

Sign up here for the annual Du Pont job-hopping competition.

U IS YOU

Happenings

THURSDAY

REQUIEM MASS will be offered today, 4 p.m. in Hendricks Chapel, for the four SU students killed in the accident Sunday.

GIRLSI NEXT FALL every freshman girl will want a Big Chum and every guy will want a Big Sister–go to the Women's Building now and fill out an application. Deadline is April 30.

GOONS will pick up Big Chum-Big Sister applications at sorority houses Tuesday, April 29.

TODAY is the last day to join the WAA Competitive Tennis Club. Got that competitive urge? Meet at the Women's Bldg. at 4 p.m. for transportation to Skytop.

UJB JUSTICE SELECTION BOARD meeting today, 2-4 p.m. and tomorrow, 1-5 p.m. at 125 Stadium Place.

IMPORTANT IFC RUSH COMMITTEE meeting today, 7 p.m. at Phi Gamma Delta. Anyone interested in working on the committee please attend or call Howard Mason, ext. 2828.

UJB MEETING 7 p.m. today, Chapel House.

COMMUTERS: all are invited to a Commuting Students' Association meeting today, 3:30 p.m. in the commuter's Lounge, 309 Women's Bldg. A bake sale will be planned; nominations for officers will be held. Like to bake something for the sale? Call 446-3946, ask for Bonnie.

SU MODERN DANCE production group will present "Opus I" tonight and tomorrow night at 8 p.m. in the Dance Studio of the Women's Bldg. Admission free.

MEETING OF THE ENTIRE Newman Parish Council today at 7 p.m.

STUDENT-FACULTY Coffee Hour today, 9-11 p.m., Towne Room, Slocum Hall. Sponsored by Alpha Psi and AGBS.

"DRUGS AND THE USER" will be discussed by Henry Jackson, local director of DEN (Direction and Education in Narcotics) at 7 p.m. tonight in Newhouse Lounge. All interested are invited.

DRAFT COUNSELING the Syracuse Draft Counseling Service and Law Students Civil Rights Research Council will hold draft counseling today from 7-9 p.m. in room 101, White Hall.

GENERAL

COOP LIVING? Girls interested in living in Hafts Cooperative Dorm next year attend informal Open House Sunday afternoon between 4 and 6. Refreshments will be served.

GREEKS Your house can earn money and train your pledges simultaneously--interested? Volunteer to clean up the stadium after the Greek games.

CLOTHES women's shoes, hats, skirts, blouses and blouses needed for Greek games. Old, preferably large, won't be returned. Call Liz Cohen, X-2203, if you'll donate.

WANT TO BE ON TV? Have something to say? Interested in performing? Be a part of SU's own Tonight Show–the Boob Tube Cube exhibit for the Festival of the Arts. For details call Jim Morris, X-3544.

GREEK WEEK TGIF beer tickets will be sold in the HBC cloakroom from 12-4 p.m. Cost--5 cents. Beer tickets will also be available from Joel Gorham at Phi Sigma Delta and at the door of the Club 320 on Friday.

SUICIDES ANONYMOUS Miss your calling? 422-1000 Mon.-Fri., 6 p.m.-6 a.m. Non-coercive befriending.

HILLEL GRADUATE BRUNCH will meet as normal this Sunday.

PI SIGMA ALPHA, political science honorary, meeting for all members and initiates. Tuesday, April 29, 7 p.m., 309 Women's Bldg. Commuter Lounge.

GRAD STUDENTS' Pot-Luck Supper 6-8 p.m. tomorrow at Chapel House. Sponsored by Lutheran Campus Ministry. Baby sitting provided.

Drugs and the user

Henry Jackson, local director of DEN (Direction and Education in Narcotics), will discuss "Drugs and the User" tonight in Newhouse Lounge at 7 p.m Attending with Jackson will be an ex-narcotic user.

Jackson is the fourth in a series of guest speakers being brought to campus as part of the honors seminar "The psycho-pharmacology of erehwon." (Erehwon, "nowhere" spelled backwards, is a reference from a 19th century anti-utopian novel by Samuel Butler). Members of the seminar discuss various topics concerning current psychedelic compounds.

All interested persons are invited.

Campus Classified

GR 6-5571, Ext. 2314

Rates minimum of 15 words:

1 day	1.15
2 days	2.25
3 days	3.30
4 days	4.30
5 days	5.25
6 days	6:15

To place a classified ad, call GR 6-5571, ext. 2314, between 1 and 3 p.m. Ad must be placed 2 days in advance. Every word over 15 costs 5c extra per day.

ALL ADS MUST BE PREPAID.

MISCELLANEOUS

RENT if you can't buy! T.V.s, tape recorders, typewriters. By week, month or semester. Reasonable rates. S. U. BOOKSTORE. GR 6-5541, x 2426.

ALTERATIONS DONE within 24 hours. Call for an appointment. Lillian Potter, 207 Comstock. 478-5847.

PRIVATE DRIVING LESSONS — automatic or standard shift. Full or refresher courses. Qualified professional instructors. Pickup service. Auto Driving Academy. GR 6-3995.

NEED A SUMMER JOB? Syracuse YMCA Camp Tousey has openings for Unit Directors, counselors, riding master and waterfront director. Five hundred acre site with 55 staff and 160 campers on Millsite Lake near Redwood, New York Spend a challenging and rewarding summer working with boys 9 - 14 years old. For details and application, write Robert Fiske, YMCA, 340 Montgomery St. Syracuse, New York 13202.

SUMMER CAMP COUNSELORS — 1.) Program Director - Adirondack Area. minimum age. 21. scouting experience preferred. salary - $500 to $600 for season. family accommodations provided. 2.) Aquatics Director - Adirondack Area and Oneida Lake Area. minimum age. 21. salary - $500 to $600 for season. family accommodations provided (Adirondacks only). 3.) Provisional Scoutmaster - Oneida Lake Area. minimum age, 21. scouting experience preferred. salary $500 for season. 4.) Nurse - Oneida Lake area. minimum age - 21, R. N., Practical or certified First Aider. salary - $300 to $400 for season, family accommodations provided. 5.) Maintenance Man - Adirondack Area. minimum age. 18. must be good driver. salary $300 to $350 for season. 6) Archery Instructors - Adirondack Area. minimum age. 18, salary - $200 to $250 for season. Season. June 22 to August 12. Onondaga Council Boy Scouts of America. 600 West Genesee St. Syracuse, N. Y.. 474-8574.

FREE ROOM AND BOARD in exchange for twelve hours a week. Pool, tennis court. DeWitt on bus line. Ability to drive and swim required. 446-6458.

LOST — Bell "Shorty" helmet. April 17 on Comstock Ave. Please return to Doug Chara x2918.

MEN AND WOMEN — Distribute Proctor and Gamble samples in Syracuse metro area. Work is similiar to that of a mail man. Full or ½ days. $1.75 per hour for more information call Mr. Dennis Prenevost anytime at 475-4352.

WE HAVE PART TIME OPENINGS for Inspectors. Must be 21, and have a car. No selling or collection work. Can earn up to $2.50 per hour. Openings available immediately. Prefer persons with 20-40 hours per week. For information call 475-8421.

FOR SALE

150 cc. VESPA. Excellent condition. best offer over $200. Call John 476-1866, 475-4681 after 5.

MG-TD, 1952. Excellent condition $1200 Phone 472-3932 after 1 p.m.

VW CAMPER SPECIAL — Many extras. $650. Call Peter Rennert 478-1480.

'63 PORSCHE COUPE. 1600 Super. AM-FM. Michelin X. after 5:00. 446-8017.

1965 NORTON MOTORCYCLE 400 cc. Newly rebuilt engine. $305.00. 1957 VOLKSWAGON with newly rebuilt Porsche engine. $305.00. 607-749-4094.

'66 RAMBLER American 220. Very good condition. Pritchard, x3244 or x2861 or 446-4939.

'64 PORSCHE. Many extras. Best offer over $1000.00. Call OL 2-2237. evenings.

FOR RENT

APARTMENTS all over the city. Nicely furnished. 1, 2, and 3 bedrooms. $85.00 up. GL 8-6100, 458-6101.

FURNISHED ROOMS — share kitchen and baths. Singles, $12.50; doubles $10.00. Call 422-2871.

FURNISHED — three bedroom apartment, garage included. University section. References and security deposit required. Telephone GR 1-2185.

ROOM, very nice, clean, close to campus, with kitchen privileges. Call GR 6-3151 x257, 446-6451 or 478-5350.

FURNISHED APARTMENT — Henry Street — 2 blocks from campus. kitchenette. 1 bedroom. living room. complete. bath with shower. Downstairs. 2 private entrances. Off street parking. $110.00 per mo. Call 422-5564 days 476-1481 evenings and weekends.

NEED A SUMMER PAD WITH POOL? Call 472-3420.

APARTMENT TO SUBLET (June - August) furnished, 4 rooms, on campus. $100/month Call 478-4421.

APARTMENTS — furnished or unfurnished. 3 rooms. utilities, near campus. Call x3d10. 472-8223 or 475-1631.

WANTED

FACULTY COUPLE — desires to rent furnished or unfurnished two or three bedroom house or apartment near university. Academic year 1969-70. Call 655-9078.

STUDENTS - for part time positions - option for summer work. $3.15 per hour. Flexible hours. Call 463-3735 weekdays, 3-5 p.m.

RESEARCH FELLOW DESIRES TO RENT furnished two or three bedroom house or apartment from May 'or June until September. Call Froelich, x 4109.

RIDE TO WORK. weekdays 8:30 to 5. Valentine Drive, North Syracuse to/from corner University Avenue and Place. Phone extension 2105.

TYPING

THIRTY YEARS EXPERIENCE. Dissertations, term papers, proof-read. Satisfaction guaranteed. Mrs. Raymond Webb. HE 7-8259.

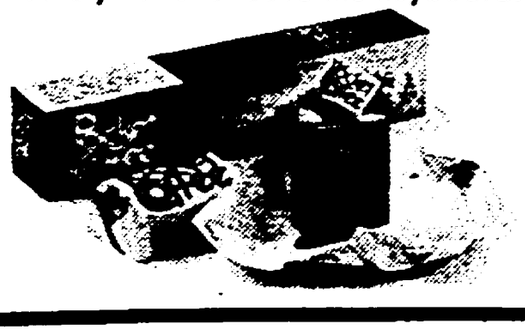
TAKE YOUR MANUSCRIPT to the only professional typing and printing service serving the S. U. area. The knowledge and experience of having done over 2.000 theses and dissertations is behind every job we turn out. Stephanie's Office Service. 469-2795.

TYPIST experienced in thesis. dissertations. and term papers. Electric typewriter. Shirley Saylor. 446-2999 or x2441.

EXPERIENCED TYPIST — specializing in thesis and term papers. etc. Call NE 5-5239.

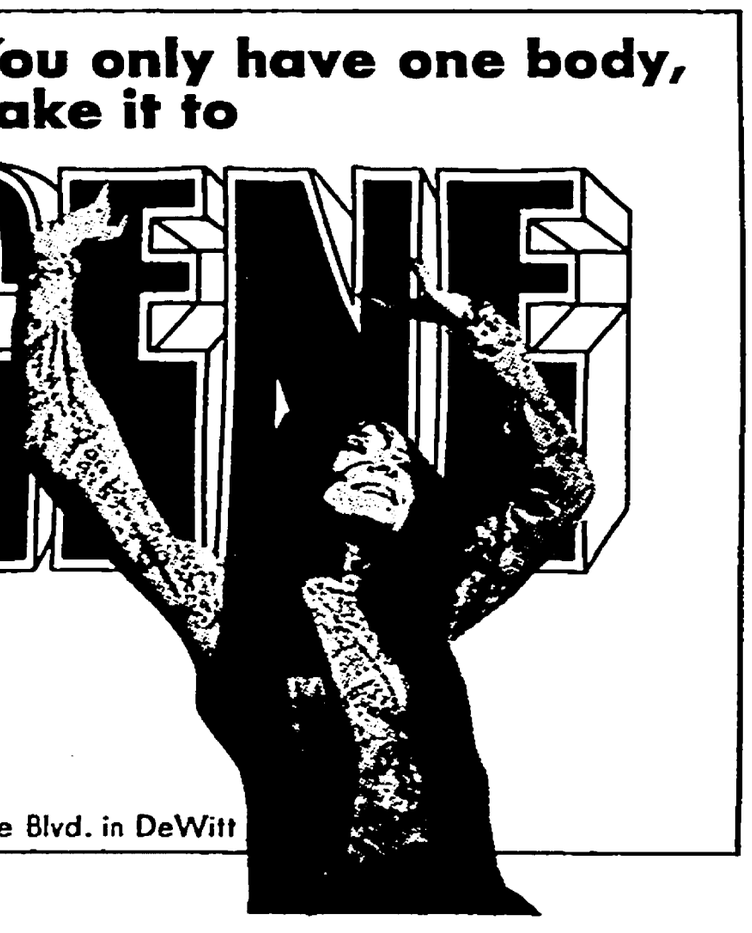
Pocket Coffee! What's that?

A new kind of coffee break for stunned secretaries.



If there's one more letter to type, another card to file, or, one more call to make...you'll quit.

Ever feel that way? What you need is a coffee break. A brand new kind of coffee break, Pocket Coffee.



It takes an instant to pop a Pocket Coffee into your mouth. Just taste that delicious chocolate shell, and, it's absolutely brim-full of real brewed liquid coffee. The kind you drink in a cup.

Pocket Coffee comes in a 3 candy packet you can carry with you. With a coffee break that handy, your hands just barely have to leave the keyboard.

You only have one body, take it to

The SCENE

Cili Drive and Towpath Rd. off Erie Blvd. in DeWitt

TONIGHT: ADMISSION ½ PRICE.

11 players score

Stickmen romp, 22-2; stay unbeaten

By ED AGRANOWITZ

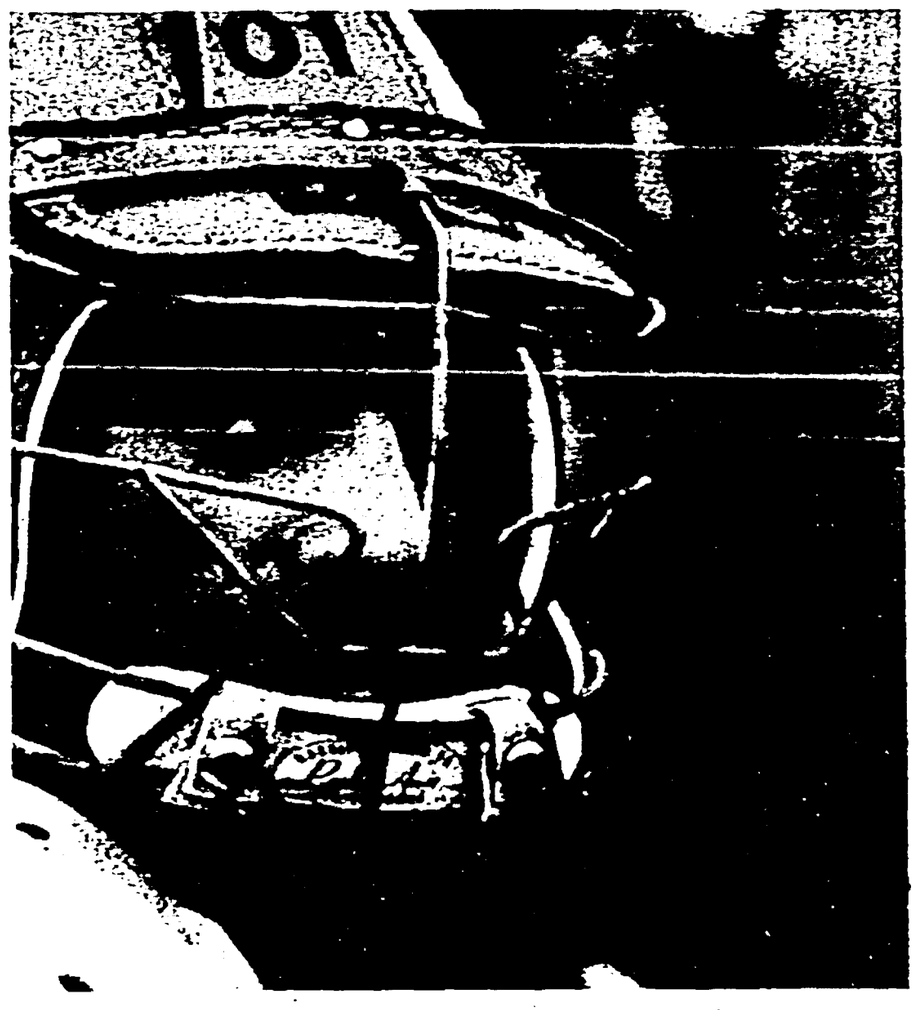
POTSDAM, N.Y.-The undefeated Syracuse lacrosse team raced to a 20-0 lead after three quarters, and then "held on for dear life" to turn back a blistering Clarkson rally and win 22-2 yesterday.

Verne Doctor led the scoring parade for the Orange with four goals and two assists. Leo Nolan was next with three goals and two assists, followed by Bill Gudden (three goals, 1 assist). Jeff Davis (two and two), Mark Austerlitz (two and two), Paul DiMartino (two and one), and Mark Cuda (two goals). Other goalgetters for the Orange were Ron Doctor, Jim Smith, Tom Powers, and Bill Nelson.

Orange goalie Butch Brown shrunk his goals-against per game average to a stingy 3.8 as he worked two scoreless quarters. Backup man Bill Ebner played the first and fourth quarters for the Orangemen and looked good in allowing Clarkson its only two scores.

Orange coach Roy Simmons gave his regulars enough playing time to ensure a good tuneup for Saturday's big game at Hofstra. "I also had a good chance to let our reserves have a good workout," said Simmie, "We took along 35 kids."

The game also gave Simmie an opportunity to get a look at his re-aligned midfields. Ron Doctor has won a job with the first midfield unit, joining Smith and Austerlitz. Displaced Dick George now joins Tony Lapi and Dick Polgren to form the second trio. Simmie's third threesome finds Paul DiMartino teaming with Tom Varley and Rick Travers.



The Orange stickmen now stand at 6-0 but will have to be at their best when they face a tough Hofstra team on Long Island, Saturday night. "We played a real good game, but of course they (Clarkson) aren't as good as Hofstra," said SU goalie Butch "Rubilator" Brown. "We made very few mistakes and took advantage of most of the opportunities they gave us -- we just killed them."

Coach Simmons was able to find some measure of consolation for his battered opponents, however. "The weather up at Clarkson is even worse than ours," said Simmie. "They didn't even start to work out until after their spring vacation."

The Orange will now turn their attention to hefty Hofstra. The game will be played under the lights on the Flying Dutchmen's brand new Astro Turf field at Hofstra University Stadium. Last year's Hofstra squad was composed mainly of football players (including New York Jet linebacker Mike D'Amato) and they were one of the few teams that could match the Orange in the hitting department.

The Saturday night game (8 pm start) will mark the homecoming performance for Syracuse defensive stalwarts John Scipione (East Meadow) and Ethan "Baby Huey" Klausner (New Hyde Park), who were both schoolboy stars on Long Island. "Scip and I can't wait to play in front of the home town fans," enthuses Huey. "We're really up."

ED'S ITORIALS: In addition to his goalkeeping chores, Butch Brown served as special Daily Orange correspondent for this game.....Nolan (13 goals, 10 assists), Davis (11 and 7), and Austerlitz (13 and 3) pace the team in scoring.....The Orange open at home on Tuesday with Hobart.....Scipione remained on the Hill for football practice.....Simmie started his second units on attack and defense.

Mark Austerlitz, junior midfielder, scored two goals yesterday against Clarkson. He's tied for the team lead in goals scored with 13.

Rich Panczyszyn, a quarterback for the last two seasons, has been switched to safety this spring. He may become a split end because of his good hands and running ability.

Football team shapes up; Gubitosa lost for season

By BOB GALLAGHER

It's Spring and a young man's fancy turns to--but if the young man is an Orange football player his fancy turns to Spring football practice. The time is spent trying to find that combination of ability and attitude which will pay dividends in a winning season.

A year ago at this time coach Ben Schwartzwalder was faced with the problem of re-building an offense which had lost such standouts as Larry Csonka, Rick Casatta and Ed Mantie. A veteran defense was to be the key to Orange success last fall.

This season the situation is reversed as Schwartzwalder has veterans returning at every offensive position but is hurting on defense. Graduation and injury have removed most of the bricks from the defensive front wall. Art Thoms, Gerry Beach and Steve Zegalia were seniors last season.

Defensive end Lou Gubitosa, a starter the past two years, has withdrawn from the university due to a leg injury and academics. Gubitosa had an operation on his leg and spent a lot of time recuperating in the hospital. He consequently fell behind in his studies and had to withdraw to make up the imcompletes he received. He will miss all of next season.

Sophomore defensive tackle Ray White returns as the only bright spot on the defensive front wall. Joe Ehrmann, a standout for the frosh last season, is listed as the right defensive tackle. "Ehrmann," Schwartzwalder said, "is a great offensive guard but we need to use him on defense because of our lack of depth there."

With the loss of Gubitosa the defensive unit is without an experienced defensive end. Pete Pietryka, a junior with some experience is taking over the left defensive end position for the injured Gubitosa. Rick Kokosky, a sophomore defensive end, will miss all of Spring practice due to an injury he received playing basketball in the off season. The leading contender for the right defensive end position is Joe Beauregard.

Replacing Gerry Beach at middle guard will be freshman Ted Lachowicz. Ron Womack, a sophomore who filled in for Beach last year, is out due to illness.

Graduation has also left open two starting berths in the defensive backfield which Schwartzwalder is trying to fill this Spring. Replacing captain Tony Kyasky so far at right cornerback is freshman Tommy Myers. Gary Bletsch, a sophomore who saw a lot of action last fall is leading in the fight to replace safety Cliff Ensely. Tom Hermanowski, a veteran who was injured last fall, is trying to regain his timing according to Schwartzwalder so he can keep his cornerback spot. Sophomore Duane Walker is pushing both Myers and Hermanowski for the starting berth.

The linebacking corps is the lone bright spot on defense as far as experience goes but depth is lacking there as well as everywhere else. Don Dorr, Jack Protz and Bob Bancroft form the experienced linebacking trio. Bob Rust is the only other linebacker with experience but he has been hampered by a knee injury.

As much as the defense is a headache to Schwartzwalder the offense helps to free his mind off his worries. Last year's offensive line of tackles John Cherundolo and Andy Fusco, guards Dave McCard and Jim Pritzlaff and center Jerry Vogt returns intact.

The running back positions always a strong point for the Orange is again well manned. Freshman Marty Januskiewicz and John Godbolt, a veteran, are fighting for the tailback spot. Mike Chlebeck and Al Newton, both with a year's experience, battle for the starting fullback.

DO quiz biz

1. Who are the only two pro football players to catch 100 or more passes in a season?
2. Who did the New York Giants give up in acquiring Y.A. Tittle from the San Francisco 49ers?
3. Which one of the following was not a New York Knick draft choice?
   A) Walt Frazier
   B) Willis Reed
   C) Tom Stith
   D) Dave Stallworth
4. Jackie Robinson was the first negro to break the color barrier in baseball's National League. Who was the first negro to play in the American League?
5. Who was golf's rookie-of-the-year in 1968?
6. Who is the only N.H.L. goalie to win the Vezina Trophy five years in a row?
7. What three players did the Philadelphia 76ers give up to acquire Wilt Chamberlin from theSan Francisco Warriors?
8. Who holds the N.F.L. record for most points scored in a season?
9. Match these players with their real names.

Gump Worsely	Forrest
Smokey Burgess	Elijah
Pumpsie Green	Lorne

10. Name three athletes who played both major league baseball and N.B.A. basketball.

RAINOUTS

Mother Nature did it again to Syracuse sports yesterday. The baseball game with R.P.I. and a golf match against Cornell were washed away. The diamondmen will face R.P.I. Friday with the golf match set for Monday.

Cindermen prep for Penn Relays

Track coach Bob Grieve will remember last Friday's trip to New York City as "The Day That The Rains Came Down." The Queen's Relays, which were to have been held last weekend, were washed out due to as much as three inches of water on the track.

Tomorrow, Grieve and his boys will try again. The squad will compete in the Penn Relays, one of the finest events of its kind. Over 6,800 runners from 126 colleges and universities and 600 high schools are slated to take part in the two-day meet.

Guy Roberts and Larry Zuller will attempt to pick up the pieces of their disappointing defeats in the 1C4A competition during the winter track season. Roberts will be going in the mile relay event along with Dave Marcus, Bill Swift and Dave Greaves. He and Zuller will team with Greaves and Tom Rothwell in the sprint medley.

Greg Warden will represent SU in the javelin competition while Roger Taylor is entered in the shot put event. Gil West will vie for titles in the triple jump and long jump.

So, it's off to the "city of brotherly love" for the Orange cindermen. It rained in New York City last weekend and it has rained in Syracuse this week. Perhaps a tribal sun dance is in order.

ORANGE JOURNAL

Published by the members of News 508 in place of today's

DAILY ORANGE
Syracuse University's Daily — Newspaper Since 1903

Richard G. Hatcher

Hatcher coming to Syracuse

— page 17

Architecture classes off

— page 4

CSL gives autonomy to 3 dorms

— page 5

Senate opens ROTC inquiry

— page 5

Greek Week 'a success'

— page 7

Richie Havens

Priorities

Planning: method to the madness

By RONA KAVEE
O–J Staff Writer

Syracuse University circa 1990: great plans in embryonic form lie in a small office within the administration building.

For those who may be cynical as to its existence, there is a master plan to what seems a haphazard expansion of the University's physical plant. There is a method to the madness.

It is the business of James V. Latorre, director of planning to supervise this method, and to coordinate building plans for the University's expansion. Latorre does his work from a tiny office packed with blueprints, sketches and memoranda. Its walls are covered with photographs of scale models of buildings to come, and architects' renderings.

Central to this paraphernalia is a rough drawing of what the University will look like in 1990. It is toward the end result of this design that decisions on planning are directed.

In an interview, Latorre outlined the steps by which a proposed building may become a reality. An "available source of funds" is the usual reason for initiating work on a specific set of plans for a building's construction, according to Latore.

"When there is a potential or actual source of funds, we may do one of two things," he continued. "We may prepare preliminary sketches or plans for a building, or, if there is a specific site in mind, we may have a rendering of a building done, like the one over your head."

Latore gestured towards a detailed painting of a building labelled "International House." Similar in design to HBC, but more ornate, it is to stand near the Law School on its eventual construction.

After this first planning stage, an architect may be asked to prepare what Latorre calls "pre-preliminary studies" on the project. These, in turn, are channeled to a design board for approval and review.

The composition of the design board varies with each project, and usually consists of people who will be making the most use of the building's facilities.

The design committee, on the other hand, is a permanent 12-man body. Its members consist mainly of officers and trustees, each of whom votes on the approval of building plans.

Because plans for a project begin when funds are available, it is not always the most urgent needs that are filled first. Latorre cited the forthcoming geology building as an example.

"A donor with a specific contribution came forward, so plans began even though the building did not have priority," he said.

Whereto the University of 1990?

Latorre explained that plans are being forumlated on he assumption that the school's population will be increased 50 percent by that time. "We anticipate the need to double the physical plant by 1990," he said.

The new library located on Walnut Park, will be the "crossroads of the projected campus as the plans stand now." Further construction will be centered around it in an effort to extend the campus as far north as Harrison and Madison Streets.

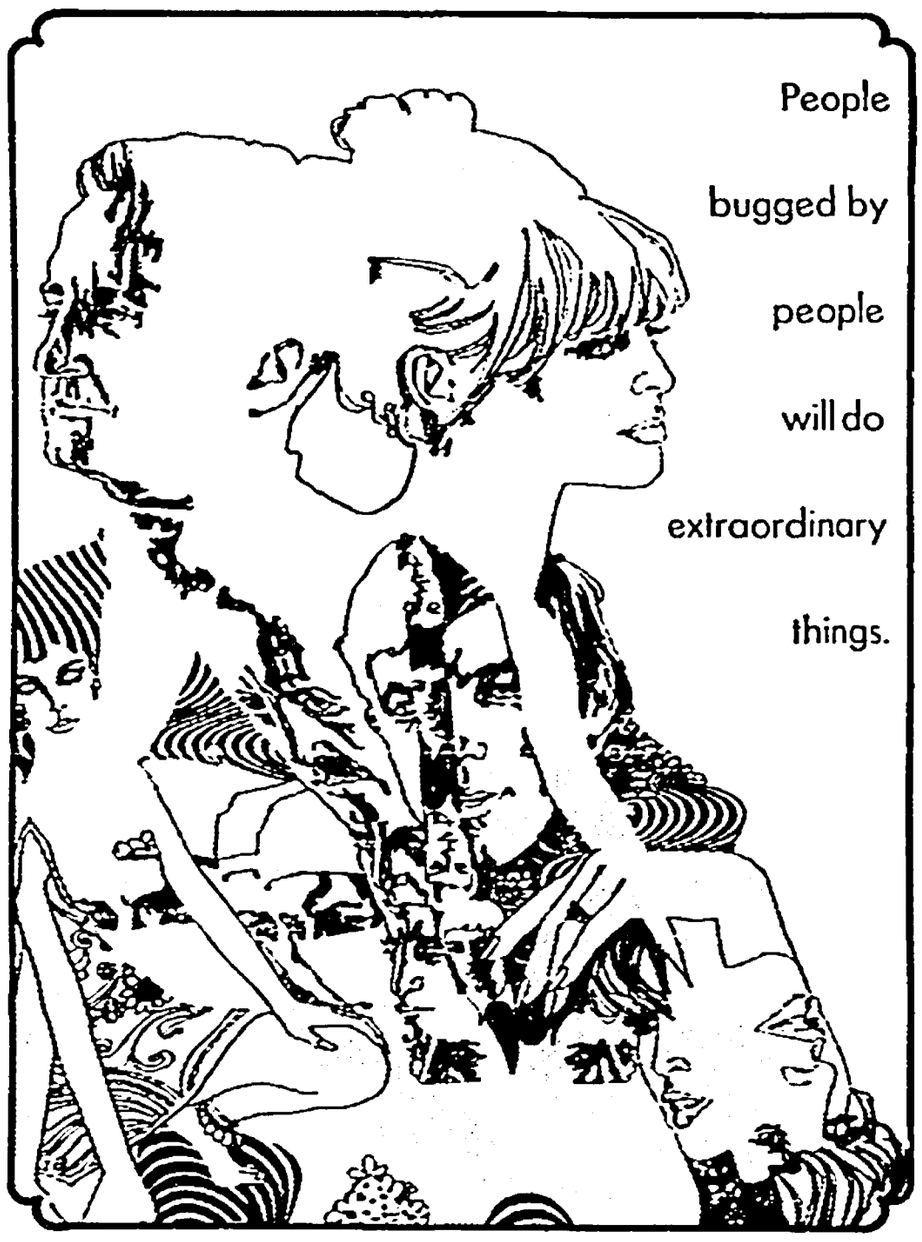
The campus will be polarized to a certain degree by 1990. That is, the projected South Campus, where the present quad is, will probably be the center for the social and natural sciences. Carnegie Library will be devoted exculsively to science.

Of course, a further expanded campus is a logistics problem for students. This must be taken into consideration. "We must retain the University time schedule, including the 10-minute walking distance between classes," Latorre said. Polarizing the campus should help in this respect. Plans to have basic courses taught in a central location are also being forumlated.

As to what the campus will look like, one can make realistic speculations by looking at pictures of scale models Latorre has displayed on his bulletin board.

It will be a modern looking campus, with buildings designed more in the style of Newhouse than Maxwell of HL.

"Many claim that building design should be homogeneous," Latorre commented, in response to the often repeated charge that campus architecture is an ungraceful combination of the old and new.

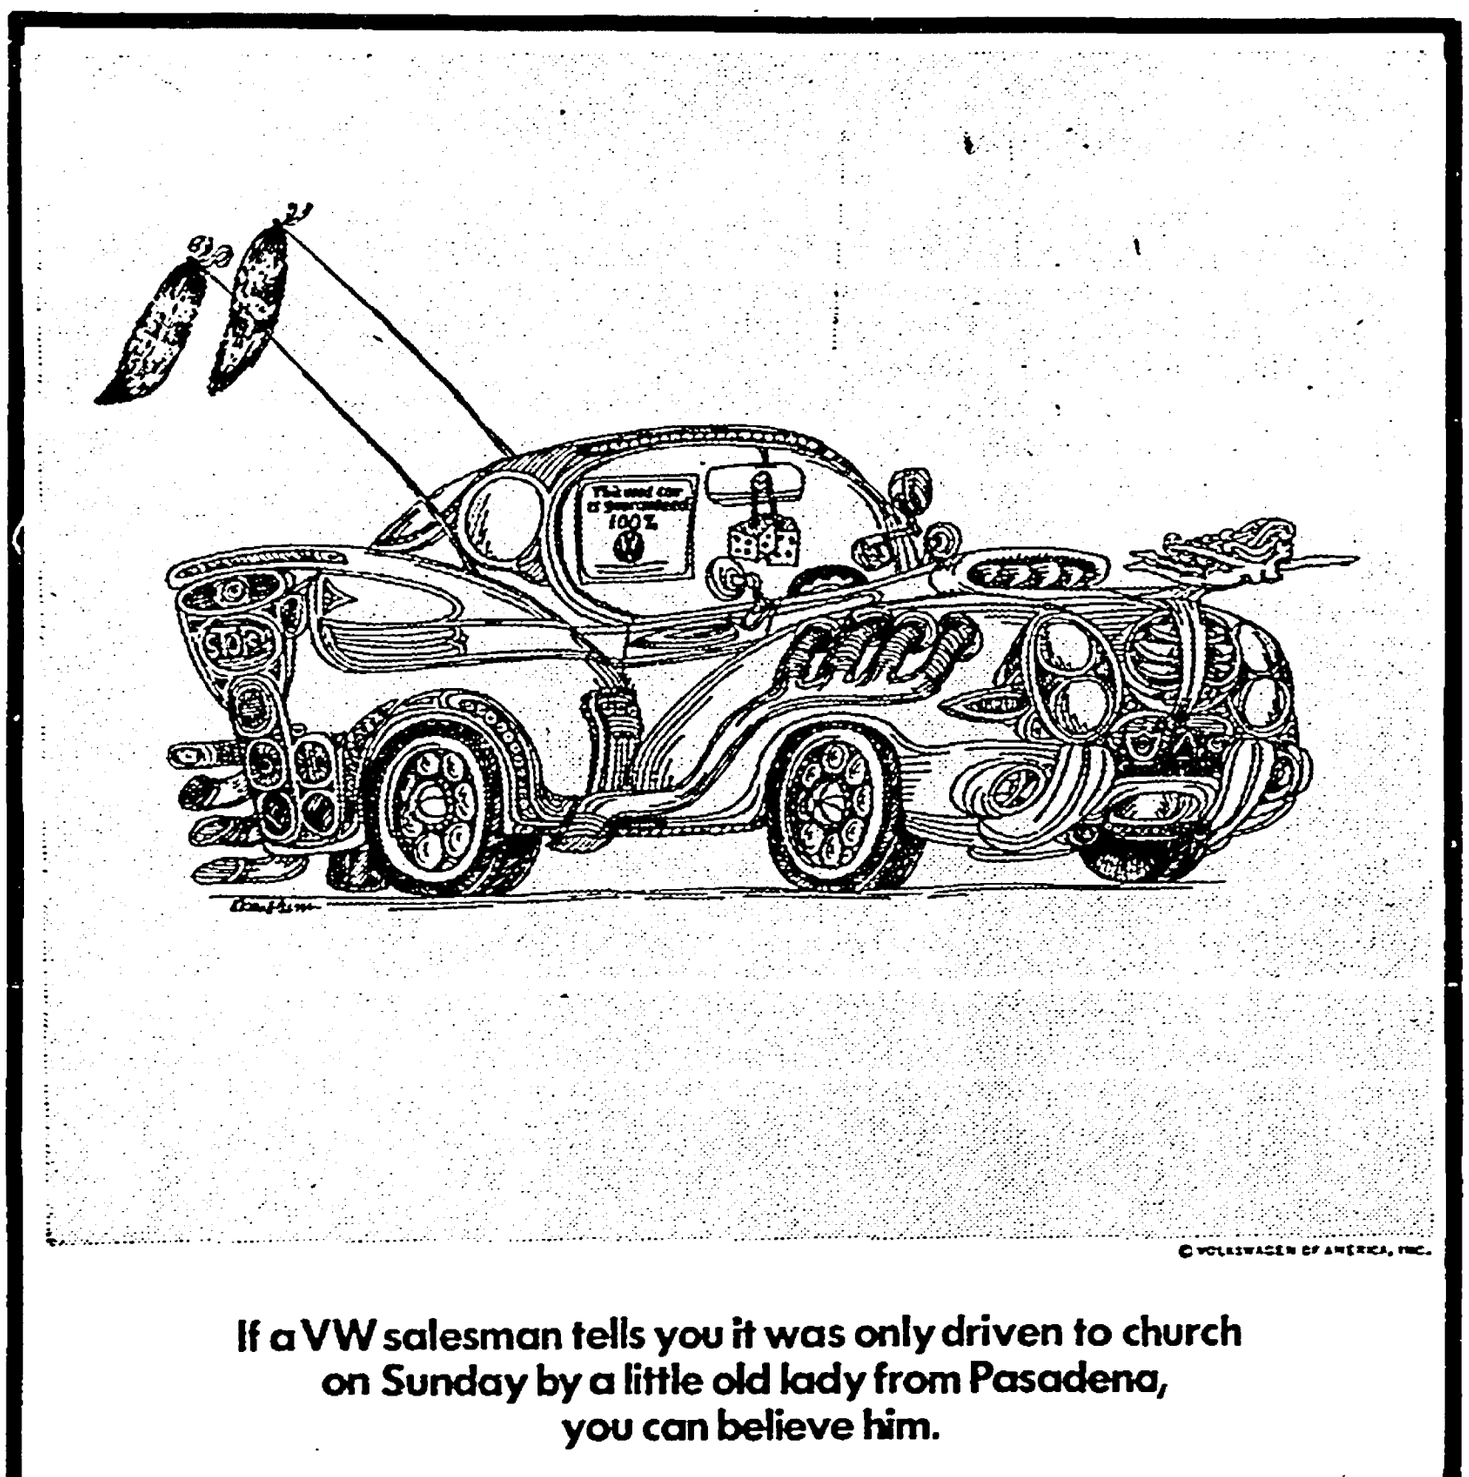


"However," he smiled, "functional concepts have changed. The traditionalists are licked in this respect."

The skilled craftsmen needed to produce buildings such as HL, with its ornate stone facade are far too costly today. "Many institutions such as Colgate that followed the traditional policy had to abandon it," Latorre said.

Buildings are "like the calendar," he said. "They are contemporary for the time they are built."

However, the plans for the expanded campus do defer somewhat to tradition. Latorre explained that such structures as HL, Maxwell and Crouse College, long a part of the University's history will remain indefinitely.



JULIE CHRISTIE · GEORGE C. SCOTT
IN A RICHARD LESTER–RAYMOND WAGNER PRODUCTION

Petulia
...the uncommon movie.

CO-STARRING
RICHARD CHAMBERLAIN AS DAVID DANNER
ARTHUR HILL · SHIRLEY KNIGHT and JOSEPH COTTEN AS MR. DANNER
Based on a novel by John Haase · Music Composed and Conducted by John Barry
SCREENPLAY BY LAWRENCE B. MARCUS · ASSOCIATE PRODUCER DENIS O'DELL · PRODUCED BY RAYMOND WAGNER · DIRECTED BY RICHARD LESTER
SUGGESTED FOR MATURE AUDIENCES · TECHNICOLOR® FROM WARNER BROS.-SEVEN ARTS

film forum
gifford auditorium
syracuse university
$1.00
May 5, 6, 7
7 & 9 p.m.
$1.00

© VOLKSWAGEN OF AMERICA, INC.

If a VW salesman tells you it was only driven to church on Sunday by a little old lady from Pasadena, you can believe him.

Because Volkswagen salesmen are taught not to lie.

They don't have to.

They have the most persuasive selling weapon in the world.

The Volkswagen dealer's 100% guarantee.

(Found only in cars that pass our 16-point inspection.)

This simply states that for 30 days or 1000 miles, whichever comes first, if anything conks out that was guaranteed* not to conk out, we'll fix it free.

And that includes replacements, parts and labor.

So let one of our VW salesmen show you around.

When you spot a car with the VW 100% guarantee, don't worry about how it works.

Just how it looks.

This used car is guaranteed 100%

*engine, transmission, rear axle, front axle assemblies, brake system, electrical system.

Don Cain Volkswagen, Inc.
1000 West Hiawatha Blvd.
Syracuse
472-4371

Precision Autos, Inc.
on: Bridge St.
East Syracuse
(Across from Gem. Dept. Store)
GI 6-7700

"Suggested retail price P.O.E. (East Coast). Local taxes and other dealer delivery charges, if any additional. Whitewalls optional at extra cost."

AUTHORIZED DEALER

Published Tuesday, through Friday during the academic year by students of Syracuse University. Offices located at 200 Brooklea Drive, Fayetteville, N.Y., and 1101 East Adams St., Syracuse, New York. Entered as Second Class matter at the U.S. Post Office, Fayetteville, N.Y. 13066.

DAILY ORANGE
Syracuse University's Daily — Newspaper Since 1908

STEVEN P. STROBRIDGE — Business Manager

ASSISTANT BUSINESS MANAGER— Art Depasqua, NATIONAL ADVERTISING MANAGER— Janet Meyer ACCOUNT EXECUTIVES— Roger Black, Jim Maney, Mike Greenstein.

FRIDAY, APRIL 25, 1969 PAGE 3

Objective?

Objectivity is the first responsibility of any news medium. While the mass media reserve the right to editorial comment, they also recognize that comment should be made only after both sides of a question have been presented. Anything less is misrepresentation of the question, and hardly good journalism.

During the past week, the local news media on the whole have shown remarkable fairness to the activities on campus. In the past, student activities had been given less than adequate or no coverage.

The downtown newspapers printed several lengthy articles on the events leading up to the boycott, and yesterday carried major reports on the results of the negotiations with Dr. Piskor. One of the papers stationed a reporter at Student Government headquarters to pick up releases as they were prepared.

Local radio stations and two of the three television stations likewise gave complete coverage of the boycott and meetings.

One television station, however, chose to continue its policy of paternalistic, one-sided and rather picayune coverage of college student activities. Its Wednesday evening report gave a detailed account of a spelling error on an SBU press release. The 11 o'clock report lumped the activities of the day at SU with those at Cornell in its lead in a subtle attempt to equate the purposes and actions of students at the two schools.

The results of the negotiations Wednesday must be taken more seriously than did the aforementioned television station. The administration certainly takes the issues seriously, and it is obvious from the participation at all-dorm and floor meetings with faculty members Wednesday afternoon and evening that more and more students are showing concern.

Perhaps this irresponsible journalism will be ended when some of the other major issues, such as the University Hill Corporation, are discussed and the Syracuse community becomes involved. Our neighbors in the direction of East Genesee Street do not believe the University students are "playing around" with adult decisions. There is no call for anything less than a very serious appraisal of the accomplishments and goals of the students here.

The Issue

There are several groups running around claiming that the campus has been sold out by the SBU because not all 11 major issues formulated by that group were cleared up Wednesday. The claim has also been made that, instead of dormitory autonomy, an issue such as eminent domain should have received the major emphasis.

It is first questionable whether dormitory autonomy was the "only" issue, as some have charged. To one who attended the all-dorm meetings in DellPlain and Watson Wednesday night, it was obvious that dormitory autonomy was the issue of the moment. But at the floor meetings with faculty which followed the mass meetings, discussion did not center on dorm autonomy. Many of the issues which were settled at the Wednesday meeting of the SBU with Dean Piskor were discussed, not the least among them being the University Hill Corporation and eminent domain.

Eminent domain is not an issue which can be resolved in a five-hour meeting at which nine other issues are covered, even with an emergency long-distance call to the absent chancellor. The University announced two years ago its formal plans for development for the next ten years. Eminent domain is an integral part of these plans, and a spot decision would be impossible for any administrator to make without a great deal of consultation.

For this reason, it is strange that SBU, the organization that organized the boycott and negotiated the nine demands, should disband and put negotations entirely in the hands of the new SG. It will take more effort and manpower to research and develop the eminent domain-University Hill Corporation issue than it took for all the others put together, because it will hit the University harder financially than any of the other issues.

SBU has made a start, but without continued action student government is in danger of slipping back to its traditional mediocrity or of losing its power base--the students--to groups which are not going to let the issue at hand drop.

The eminent domain bill is up before the legislature now. Taking a chance on losing the student's momentum may be the defeat of what has become the crucial issue.

Letters

To The Editor:

"Rally Supports Cornell Blacks" the headline said in the D.O. above a dramatic picture of Blacks and two-by-twos. But the most important piece of new information to most of us was left out: THE BLACKS AT CORNELL ARMED THEMSELVES IN SELF—DEFENSE WHEN THEY HEARD THAT A LARGE GROUP WAS COMING AFTER THEM, ARMED. They went into the Union Building unarmed. They had serious reports attackers were coming. Only then did they ask for (and receive) guns.

It is important that the D.O. (and other papers) report the WHOLE story.

The Rev. Harvey Bates,
Co-Chaplain, UCCF
S.U.

UU means boo hoo

Everybody wants a new, expensive, all purpose campus center...a "University Union" if you must use that term. Students want it so much that the Student Centennial Committee representing graduate and undergraduate students told the august All-University Centennial Committee (made up of the student committee members and similar groups of faculty, administration and trustees) where they could shove all those ubiquitous colloquia, lecture series, special ceremonies, etc.. "You can hold them if you like," said the student contingent, if I may paraphrase a bit, "but if you don't also include as an across the board sub-theme of the Centennial Year support and pressure for visible movement on the part of the SU powers towards construction of a union building soon then watch out."

Surprisingly however, no threat was necessary. Faculty supported the students, trustees supported the students in spirit if they were perhaps a little hesitant to publicly voice this support, and the Administration sat quietly...as they are wont to do. It was passed, and a big club was thus given to the "Union Now" forces if they would learn how to use it.

But just as success spoiled Rock Hunter so it may have dealt a telling blow to the hopes and dreams of the Student Centennial Committee. At its next meeting, joyful in conquest and power, it had to decide how to use what it had. The decision, and a reasonable one, was that while it could act as a powerful publicity force, pushing the concept of a Syracuse University Union into every nook and cranny of Centennial Year activities, the actual organizing, coordinating, developing, planning and fund raising would have to be the job of another committee; one with a broad base in both student and administrative circles and one that, unlike the Centennial Committee, could exist under its mandate until the building was completed.

So far, so good. The students had proposed a novel approach to Centennial observance and had been endorsed. They had decided on a structure necessary to get a good building up within not too many years and it made sense. Even in some "off the record" talks with high-up SU administrators no new libraries or dormitory complexes loomed up to block immediate plans. Believe it or not we are now in a position to get our Union...but...

The "but" relates to the organization decided upon to do the actual organizing, coordinating, developing, planning and fund raising for our multi-million dollar Union and consequently to get the support and push of the Centennial Committee. With a few questionable assertions like "look how much we've already done" and "it would be silly to form another group only to duplicate us" along with a visibly unenthusiastic "we will broaden the base of our organization as you recommend" the ball was tossed to the existing Development Board of that innocuous campus enigma University Union (pronounced "You You"). Morituri te Salutamus!

Jacques Lebel

Don't get me wrong. While I have little respect for UU or for the kind of obsessive-compulsive neurotics who join this type of self-perpetuating, incestuous, womb-like alter-ego they are dedicated hard workers and perhaps with some direction by people who are still alive they can supply the raw materials necessary like building plans, fund raising structures, etc. But what about pushing their ideas beyond someone's file box? They haven't shown much of a tendency toward tenacity in the past. And what about innovation in thought and flexibility in direction? Can old UU really accept that the plans shouldn't include a cribbage nook even though one of the UU forefathers included it back in 1907? I'm not so sure.

The decision is made and for the sake of a Union I am willing to support anybody...for a while. But I recommend to the SU student body to keep a close watch on the UU Development Board and its cohort, Student Centennial Committee. Let's see if the Board significantly broadens its base as promised; let's see if it re-examines the old plans for a UU and revitalizes them, let's see if these two groups include us in their plans and let us know what is going on; and most important let's see if these two groups get together and get a firm commitment for a site, a formal administrative endorsement of plans, and a commitment as to a general timetable for fund raising and building. With some of the best student workers, one of the strongest prods students have been armed with (i.e., the Centennial Committee support) and an apparent receptive ear on the part of the SU administration we have the tools to build a facility everyone can be proud of. I just fear that in the hands of UU it will be just another nice try.

Architecture classes off as board seeks approval

By JOHN WISNIEWSKI
O–J News Editor

The faculty and students in the School of Architecture have begun a 10-day "discretionary suspension of classes" so that they can continuously work toward long awaited legal University approval of the School of Architecture Board.

Through an amendment of the architecture faculty by-laws, the board was established last month following the students' 10-day class boycott. The students ended their boycott with hope that the new board would be legally approved by the University.

Dean Kenneth Sargent is temporary chairman of the board which consists of all 22 faculty members and 22 students.

The original amemdment was part of the minutes of a March 14 faculty meeting.

The issue was discussed at another faculty meeting Monday. The minutes were then corrected and legally approved by Dean Sargent, chairman of the board, without faculty vote.

The original amendment which established the board is:

● Curriculum–The board will make recommendations to the Faculty Senate concerning curriculum matters.

● Admissions–The board will take a huge work load from the dean by assisting in interviewing prospective architecture students strictly within the University's rules.

● Faculty–Suggestions will be presented to the administration on what to consider when hiring new faculty members.

● Budget–The board will have power to review the school's budget and submit objections, if any.

● Facilities–If an article, a desk for example, is needed, the board would request such from the administration.

The faculty will meet today at 4 p.m. to consider amending its by-laws again so that the amendment agrees with the original approved by the students.

While classes are suspended, all committees of the School of Architecture Board are forumlating curriculum proposals for board consideration next week. These proposals will then be submitted to the Faculty Senate for final approval in May.

The board has been meeting since March 19. The only curriculum change it implemented concerns the architecture students' liberal arts requirements for the dual LA–Architecture program.

The dean previously selected specific courses for students to take in fulfilling these requirements. Now students will be able to make their own choices.

THE HIP HOP

The Hip Hop to Europe on Icelandic Airlines saves you $161 flying to Luxembourg. Daily flights from New York to Iceland • Luxembourg • England • Scotland • Norway • Sweden • Denmark. See your Travel Agent or write for folder CN, Icelandic Airlines, 630 Fifth Ave. (Rockefeller Center), New York, N.Y. 10020 (212) PL 7-8585.

LOWEST AIR FARES TO EUROPE

ICELANDIC AIRLINES
LOFTLEIDIR

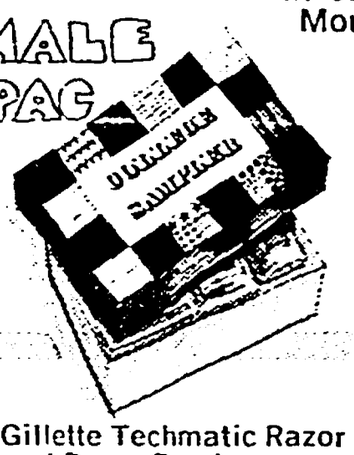
TEACHERS

STUDENTS

$230 ROUND TRIP TO LONDON; $250 ROUND TRIP TO PARIS/AMSTERDAM AND LONDON BY SCHEDULED JETS OF MAJOR AIRLINES. Several departures this summer. Write for brochure to Division NSA, Travel Wholesalers, ITT Building, Washington, D.C. 20036.

SPECIAL NOTICE

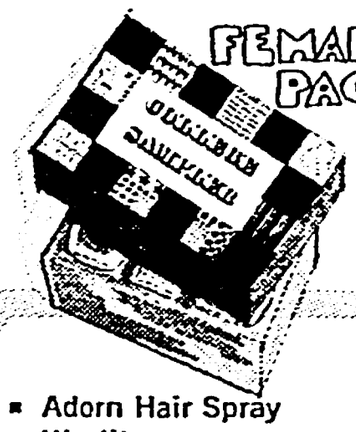
S. U. BOOKSTORES



is pleased to announce the sale of a Special College Sampler Pac of Toiletries at a fraction of its retail value!

The manufacturers and the

S. U. BOOKSTORES



in cooperation with the Guest Pac Corporation, Mount Vernon, New York offer this Special Pac to familiarize you with these fine products. There is a Male and a Female Pac, each worth approximately $8.00. The principal items in each Pac...

MALE PAC

- Gillette Techmatic Razor and Razor Band
- Foamy Shaving Cream
- Manpower Aerosol Deodorant
- Excedrin
- Old Spice After Shave Lotion
- Scripto Word Picker Highlighter
- Macleans Toothpaste
- Dial Soap

FEMALE PAC

- Adorn Hair Spray
- Woolite
- Halo or Enden Shampoo
- Pamprin
- Excedrin
- Scripto Word Picker
- Jergens Soap
- Clairol Kindness

ONLY $2.50 EACH

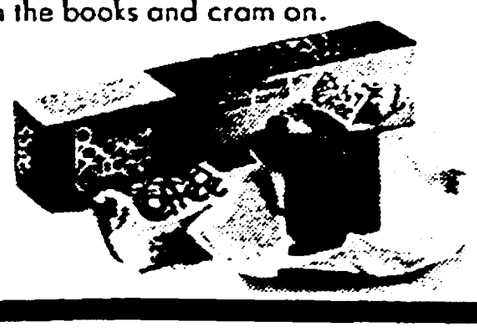
Other Special Toiletry items and additional Money Saving Offers are in each Pac.

SPECIAL STUDENT PRICE

Hurry! Supply limited to about one for every five students! ONLY ONE PAC PER STUDENT! Get your Pac today.

303 University Place

Pocket Coffee! What's that?



A new kind of coffee break for cramming collegians.

From freshman to senior year, the "cram" is a fact of life for most students. Just before mid-semester and again at end-term you burn the midnight oil, review mountains of books and consume gallons of coffee.

Pocket Coffee, the new kind of coffee break, consists of a delicious chocolate shell full of real liquid coffee ...the space age answer to the students' age old problem.

Don't stop to make or get coffee, pop a Pocket Coffee into your mouth, get your coffee and eat your chocolate too (a great energy source). Pack Pocket Coffee in with the books and cram on.

CSL gives autonomy to 3 dorms

By KAREN WIEDIGER
O-J Staff Writer

The review of constitutions submitted by dormitories requesting autonomy was begun yesterday in a special Council on Student Life (CSL) meeting. Unanimous approval was given to the institution of autonomy at a CSL meeting Monday and Dr. Frank P. Piskor, vice chancellor and provost gave University consent to the proposal.

According to Jim G. Carleton, dean of student services and chairman of CSL, Watson, DellPlain and St. Mary's Mens dormitories were able to begin autonomy yesterday. Inter-Dormitory Council and Student Senate have the authority to approve living center constitutions, with review by CSL.

Watson Dormitory has declared 24 hour open houses, with floors determining their own schedules if they desire. St. Mary's Mens has the same hours with the exception of the second floor which does not allow women on the floor between 7 and 11 a.m.

DellPlain has been more rational, according to Dick Conrad, dormitory president. The hours are from noon to 2 a.m. Monday through Thursday and from Friday noon to Monday at 2 a.m.

The issue of autonomy was first presented to Chancellor William P. Tolley after a CSL meeting in March. The five proposals which are part of dormitory autonomy were given as follows:

- possession and consumption of alcoholic beverages within the residence hall.
- visiting hours and open houses for the residence hall.
- curfew and closing of the residence hall.
- programming within the residence hall.
- regulation and enforcement of rules concerning the above definitions.

Carleton told the members of the CSL that Tolley had not approved the first two proposals at a meeting last week. Tolley's negative answer, along with the increase in student fee and other topics of concern to students helped initiate the boycott called by Students for a Better University (SBU).

51 specific issues were drawn up by a coordinating committee of eight elected student leaders after mass student meetings and work done by CSL and other campus groups. The list was then narrowed down to 11 topics which were to be presented to the Administration.

These demands were discussed yesterday in order of their appearance on the boycott list. Although Tolley was not present at the meeting, Piskor acted for the University and the results were:

- Piskor agreed to ask the agenda committee of University Senate to place the idea of "five-year terms for administrators subject to renewal and review by the Senate" on the agenda for the next meeting. He also said he would support the bill to include all administrators up to and including himself.
- It was agreed that a committee would be set up to work with liberal arts administrators to act upon the proposal for an Independent Study Program.
- Another demand was the institution of dormitory autonomy to which Piskor replied "the Council on Student Life unanimously approved the principle of dormitory autonomy including increased student responsibility and decentralized authority....It is assumed that the standards developed by the dormitory councils will be concerned with respect for the rights of others and consistent with the values of the University."
- The Administration received a statement saying support is given by the SBU to the work of black students on their curriculum.
- It was agreed that Piskor will ask the Board of Trustees at the May 2 meeting to place the University Union Building as the first priority after the construction of the library. He

(Continued on Page 18)

Hearing on ROTC today

The Student Senate subcommittee currently investigating the campus ROTC program will hold an open hearing today from 2-5 p.m. in Maxwell Auditorium.

The hearing, to be conducted like an official congressional hearing, is being held to allow additional information concerning ROTC to be placed before the committee.

Any member of the University community may testify before the investigating committee or submit written statements for review.

The committee anticipates that "a fair number of people" will appear before them to offer information concerning the militaty program as it now exists and make proposals

The committee will entertain all pertinent remarks but is specifically interested in these questions:

1. Should there be ROTC at SU?
2. Should ROTC be continued without academic credit?
3. Should ROTC be given credit but be revised?
4. Should no changes be made in ROTC?

All information coming from the hearing will supplement the findings of the committee's investigation and will be considered before the committee submits its final recommendations to the Student Senate on the ultimate fate of the ROTC program.

Now in Paperback

Eldridge Cleaver's
SOUL ON ICE
A DELTA BOOK / $1.95
Dell Publishing Co., Inc.

STUDY IN CUERNAVACA

Learn to speak SPANISH
- Intensive courses, with drills, supervised labs, and theory taught by experienced Mexican teachers.
- $135 per month.

Study in the INSTITUTE FOR CONTEMPORARY LATIN AMERICAN STUDIES.
- Examine themes such as "Protest and its Creative Expression in Latin America" and "The Role of Education in Social Change" in 10 to 30 new courses each month.
- Access to excellent library.
- $30 per credit.

Live in CUERNAVACA
- Near Mexico City, at 4,500 feet elevation, with Mexican families or in dorms or bungalows.
- Approx. $80 per month.

Request catalog from Registrar — Cidoc W. Godot, Apdo. 479, Cuernavaca, Mexico

6 jobs in 6 years is called job hopping?

Not necessarily.
Not at Du Pont.

We have a practice called "planned mobility," a kind of intramural job hopping. It means you don't go into a training program. You go to work—at different growth jobs that broaden you professionally, benefit you personally, and help you find the specific field you want to grow in. Here's how it worked for Jim Davis, an M.E. from the University of Pittsburgh:

"My first assignment was installation of improved polymer transfer systems," says Jim. "Then some research. A patent was issued on my device to apply steam to a running threadline. Next I was a college recruiter. After that I worked on a five-year forecast of the company's engineering needs. Now I'm in a cost reduction group."

For Jim, it added up to six assignments in six years. This may be some kind of a record. But he didn't waste time. Every day of it was solid profit.

Your Du Pont recruiter is a guy a lot like Jim. Ask him about planned mobility. Ask him anything. The coupon will get you some background information before you meet him.

DU PONT
College Relations

Du Pont Company
Room 6689
Wilmington, DE 19898

I'd like your latest information on opportunities at Du Pont for graduates with degrees in _____

Name _____

University _____

Degree _____ Graduation Date _____

Address _____

City _____ State _____

Zip _____

An Equal Opportunity Employer (M/F)

Housing problems?

There will be a meeting Sunday at 2 p.m. in Maxwell for any men or women who are having difficulties with housing. Chuck Hicks, president of Student Government, will send recommendations from this meeting to Dean Carleton.

THE NEW SCHOOL COLLEGE

is the senior college of the New School for Social Research, an urban university located in Greenwich Village with all of New York City for its campus. There are three main New School units. One is the Graduate Faculty, a leading center in the Social Sciences that offers training to 2,400 masters and doctoral students under scholars like Economist Robert Heilbroner, Political Scientist Saul K. Padover, and Philosopher Hannah Arendt. A second is the New School evening division, which provides a vast range of courses, workshops, and lectures for some 12,000 New Yorkers annually, and serves as a major cultural center for the community-at-large with programs of concerts, films, modern dance and art exhibitions. The newest unit is the an undergraduate program, limited to 500 students. The College offers a two-year program for students who have already completed their sophomore year elsewhere, and who are interested in earning their B.A. with emphasis in humanities or social science, in a program which considers undergraduate education important in itself.

NEW SCHOOL COLLEGE

Instead of lectures, every class in the College is designed as a seminar, with about twenty students sitting around a table to learn through participatory discussion. Instead of textbooks, the student confronts the actual works produced by great minds of the past and the present—Aristotle and Sartre, Freud and Erikson, Sophocles and Pinter, Marx and Marcuse, Shakespeare and Picasso, Joyce and Antonioni. Instead of requiring its teachers to engage in specialized research and publication, the College has a faculty whose primary commitment is to teaching, and it frees them from extrinsic demands so that they can concentrate their talents on the instructional program. Instead of taking a collection of unrelated courses, students take a Divisional Program—a set of courses designed by the faculty to fit together into a total educational experience. And instead of a "major," each student pursues his own Individual Study Program, in which he investigates, in considerable depth and over a two-year period, a problem of his own choosing under the guidance of a tutor.

The student takes three year-long courses during his first year and two year-long courses during his second. This constitutes his Divisional Program. The rest of his time is spent in Individual Studies, which he initiates during his first year and pursues for half of his time during his second year.

THE DIVISIONAL PROGRAM: Unlike most colleges, we are not divided into specialized departments like English, History, or Psychology. We have only two Divisions—the Humanities and the Social Sciences. The entering student normally elects to study in either the humanities or the social sciences, but may choose to work in both.

The significance of this unorthodox Divisional structure is twofold. It means that the student takes courses at an advanced level that are genuinely interdisciplinary rather than narrowly specialized. And it means that the student is free, in the Individual Study portion of his program, to investigate a problem that defies the boundaries of conventional departments, perhaps cutting across philosophy and drama, or psychology and economics.

THE HUMANITIES: The humanities comprise all the creations of man—in music, painting, and literature, in history, science, and philosophy. Yet at most colleges, a student who wishes to study these creations at an advanced level must limit himself arbitrarily to the study of a single kind, and even to a single country or period. There is no "department" at most colleges that will allow him to major in both Thomas Mann and Dostoyevsky, both Pinter and Proust. And even when he limits his study to one of these figures, the intellectual tools that he requires for exploring the ideas of that writer in depth can only be acquired by taking courses in still other departments—philosophy or theology or psychology. Similarly, a student who majors in the conventional philosophy department cannot develop, within his specialized courses, the aesthetic sensitivity that he needs to penetrate fully the philosophy of thinkers such as Plato and Nietzsche and Heidegger, whose philosophic visions are expressed by means of image, myth, and dramatic action no less than by rational discourse. It is for these reasons that our study of the humanities is interdisciplinary rather than fragmented into departmental "majors."

We have designed a set of courses that fit together into a comprehensive investigation of the creations of man. It is possible for us in a single course to juxtapose a treatise by Kant, a novel by Barth, and a movie by Godard in order to deal fully with the problem under investigation. The emphasis is less on assembling information about particular works than on discovering the methods of understanding and appreciation that can be applied to any work. The goal is to provide tools of analysis that will extend the student's insight into the humanities when he pursues his own Individual Study.

THE SOCIAL SCIENCES: The most worthwhile research in the social sciences tends to involve two or more specialties simultaneously. Schumpeter was an economist, but Capitalism, Socialism and Democracy is as well philosophic, political and historical. Myrdal is an economist, but The American Negro draws on many fields. Arendt is a philosopher, but Totalitarianism is historical, sociological and psychological. And current efforts to understand such diverse phenomena as the underdeveloped nations, fascism, poverty, and hippies look to all of the social science disciplines. We have therefore constructed an upper-level program in social science that is totally interdisciplinary.

The emphasis is on formulating new problems rather than learning the answers to old problems, on mastering the methods by which truth can be discovered rather than memorizing the truths already known, and on understanding the seminal concepts that have proved to be especially suggestive in illuminating social reality. The problems studied in this program, as well as the readings, exhaust no universe, establish no canon, define no orthodoxy. They provide a strong foundation on which the student can build his Individual Study program.

THE INDIVIDUAL STUDY PROGRAM: One-quarter of the junior year and one-half of the senior year are reserved for individualized study. The student pursues his own special interests under the guidance of a faculty tutor and by means of the analytical tools he is developing in the Divisional Program; his work generally culminates in a written paper. Some students form ther own seminars or enlist members of the faculty to offer special courses; others take courses from the vast programs, graduate, undergraduate, and adult, available at the New School for Social Research—courses taught by such visiting specialists as Paul Douglas, Rollo May, Bayard Rustin, Leslie Fiedler, Lee Strasberg, Allen Ginsberg; and others choose to work independently of any course structure, under the direct supervision of their tutors. The possibilities for Individual Study are initiated by the student himself and limited only by his imagination and intelligence.

THE INTER-DIVISIONAL CORE: At the center of the Divisional Program are the courses in which students and faculty from both of the Divisions come together for intensive collaboration on common concerns. Perhaps no other aspect of the College embodies as radical a departure from the dominant trends in American education as this one, which we call the Inter-Divisional Core. Its purpose is to discover new intellectual arts for dealing with the problems men confront when they try to know and act. We conceive these intellectual arts as modern adaptations of the old "liberal arts," whose original function was to "liberate" men from old ways of seeing and doing.

The readings in these courses are drawn from all the areas of knowledge—humanities, social sciences, natural sciences, and philosophy. They are selected to shed new light on some of the fundamental issues underlying all knowledge and activity, issues like the relation between fact and value, theory and practice, subjectivity and objectivity, thought and action. In a rigorous and serious manner, the courses investigate questions like these: Are there "arts" of discovery—intellectual strategies for hitting upon new solutions to problems? Are there any "hard facts" in the world—facts that can't be altered by the perspective from which they are viewed? Is there a method for making oneself into an innovator rather than a passive transmitter of outside forces?

THIS PROGRAM is now three years old. It has drawn students from over 300 colleges and universities throughout the U.S. Although it emphasizes the value of education for its own sake, substantial numbers of its graduates have been admitted to top-ranking graduate schools. Tuition and fees are $1700. Most of the students live in private quarters near the School. We do not provide housing. We have no gymnasium. Only teachers, students, classrooms and books.

Admissions Office S
THE NEW SCHOOL COLLEGE
New School for Social Research
66 West 12th Street
New York, N.Y. 10011

Please send me the Bulletin and application for the New School College.

I am now attending _____ (College or University)

Name _____

Address _____

City _____ State _____ Zip _____

UHC provides understanding of urban renewal

By MARY ANN DONOVAN
O—J Staff Writer

There are differing opinions on the relation of the urban university to the community surrounding it. Should expansion and land acquisition be based on economics or should the emphasis be placed on community improvement and cooperation?

Despite some accusations, Syracuse University has not totally ignored the surrounding community. It cannot be found guilty of the charge made against Columbia University that it has shown a "callousness and lack of understanding in dealing with its own nieghborhood."

Rather, the university has attempted to show through cooperation with urban renewal and citizens' groups that it believes institutional expansion and neighborhood renewal have a common goal: community improvement.

Specifically the University has cooperated through its membership in the University Hill Cooperation (UHC). This urban renewal agency lists as members Upstate Medical Center, Crouse-Irving and the Veterans Administration hospitals, Crouse-Marshall Businessmens' Association, several local churches and a citizens committee of residents and property holders.

The purpose of UHC is to provide a communication forum through which the total community can share in the planning of urban renewal and institutional expansion. William T. Burch, University director of real estate and member of UHC has stated that UHC "is one of the most important committees in the city of Syracuse. It is the vehicle for the complete reversal of what has happened to people in the past."

The University is the largest contributor to UHC. It pays $25,000 annually in membership fees. Vice-presidents Kenneth G. Bartlett and P. Lockland Peck, Dean Kenneth Sargent of the School of Architecture and four other administrators are UHC members.

In cooperation with UHC the University has made studies of the community-institution complexes surrounding the universities of Pennsylvania and Chicago. UHC has worked through the State Division of Housing and Community Renewal to secure needed reforms in the State's policies for providing assistance to areas adjacent to colleges and hospitals. amounting to $2,456,525 will be matched with government funds intended for urban renewal. The University has built and maintained a Lot on University property on Madison Street. Programs of the schools of Social Work and Education are directed at the immediate community and also support the Martin Luther King, Jr.-On-Campus experimental school for deprived children.

Despite all the contributions, the University cannot be entirely conceived of as the moral champion of the poor. As an equal member of the community the University can better its image by improving the surrounding neighborhood.

In the past six years the University has aquired 154 properties and has displaced an estimated 122 people. In 1963 the University purchased Perry Apartments on East Genesee Street and spent $44,000 to rehabilitate the structure into what Burch called "reasonably first-class shape." However, the Maxwell Committee paper on the American Dilemma reported that most of the tenants were on welfare and that the building was maintained "just above sub-standard."

That the University and other institutions must expand into the crowded urban area is inevitable. But through the community dialogue provided for by UHC a real effort is being made to acknowledge the needs of equal members of the same community. Communication can work here.

FRATERNITY PARTIES . . .
SORORITY PARTIES . . .
FATHER'S WEEKENDS . . .
HOLD THEM AT THE GAY 90's

Weekends — Fridays April 25 & May 2

BANJOS HONKY TONK SING-A-LONGS
CHARLESTON CONTEST ROLLICKING TUBA
BEER-DRINKING CONTEST INTENSE GO-GO CONTEST POPCORN & PEANUTS TALENT SHOWS EXCITEMENT

WITH THIS AD:
For parties of 30 or more on Fridays, We will give your girl a free Gay 90's drinking mug — on Saturdays, we will give her a garter for her chubby leg.

MILLER'S GAY 90's
119 W. First St.
E. Syracuse, N. Y.
437-5652

Note: Please don't throw peanuts at the tuba player. He's doing the best he can.

Greek Week 'a success'

By LESLIE GANN
O–J Staff Writer

This year Greek Week has successfully combined academic, cultural, and social events. It has been open to the entire University–both Greeks and independents.

This balanced program has brought the community together and produced a good cross section of people at the events. Joe Nicoletti, chairman, said "the week has been a complete success." Attendance has been very good throughout the week.

Richie Havens and Sly and the Family Stone will appear in the Greek Week concert tomorrow at 8 p.m. at the War Memorial. The concert is open to everyone; good seats are still available. The HBC ticket booth will be open from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. today. Tickets can be purchased at the War Memorial ticket office tomorrow until the time of the concert, beginning at noon.

Tomorrow the traditional chariot parade will begin at noon. The Greek games will get under way at 1 p.m. For the first time the games will be held in Archibold Stadium. Awards will be presented to the winners at the concert in the evening.

The weekend highlights the social aspect of Greek Week. There will be a TGIF at the 320 Club in Liverpool this afternoon at 2:30.

Any weekend profits will go towards the Kennedy Scholarship Fund. Campus Chest has donated $300, with contributions to the fund also coming from Greek houses.

Greek Week began Monday with a torch run at 7:30 p.m. The event ended at Hendricks Chapel with the opening convocation. The Hilton and Tolley Cups were awarded to Kappa Alpha Theta sorority and Phi Kappa Psi fraternity. Greek Week Queen Jacki Mason was crowned at the convocation. Dr. Michael O. Sawyer also addressed the Greek audience.

Chancellor Tolley attended a coffee hour Tuesday afternoon in Haven Penthouse. The event was open to all students. Tolley spoke to those present concerning the boycott and dorm autonomy. Joan Wagner and Art Buckland, Greek Week co-chairmen, commenting on the coffee hour, said they were surprised more people did not take the opportunity to speak to the administrator.

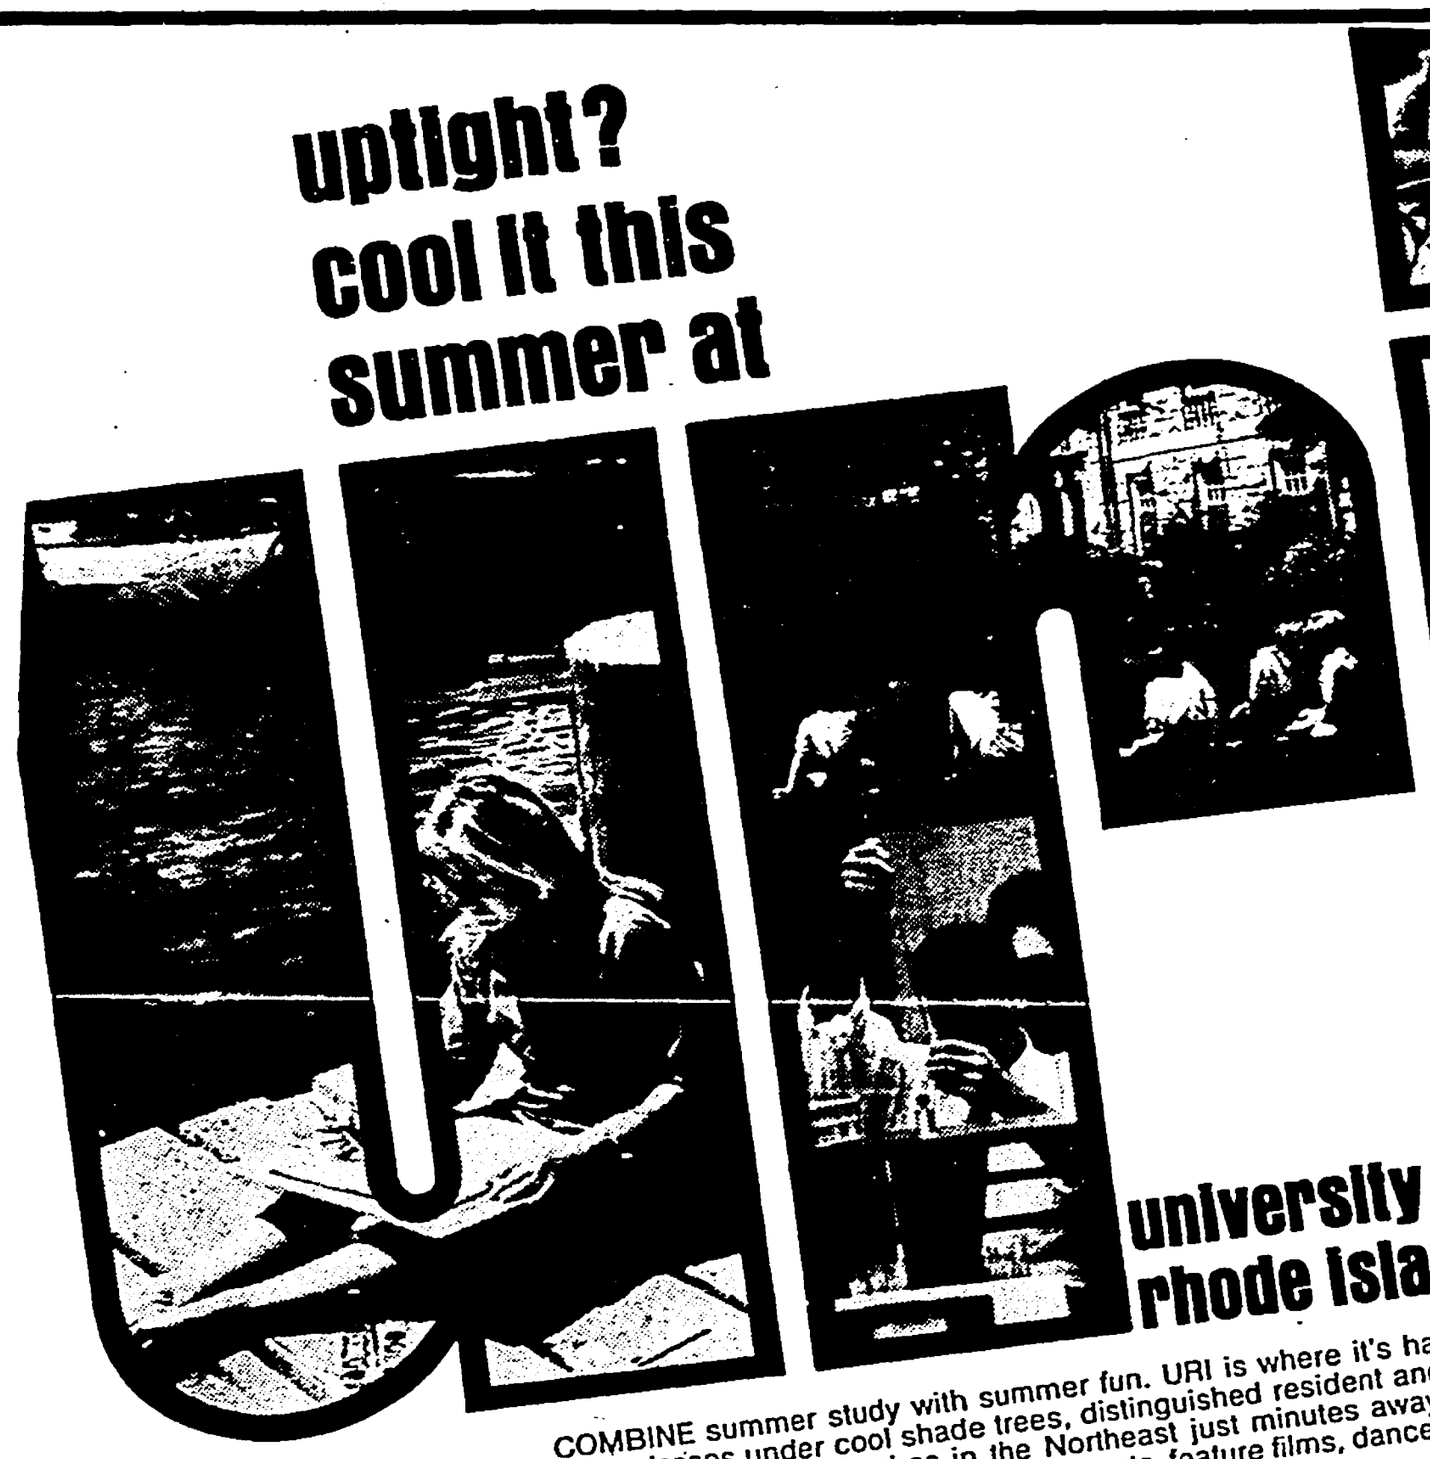
James Meredith, Civil Rights activist, spoke at the Chapel Tuesday evening.

Wednesday afternoon, housemothers from all of the sororities and fraternities on campus attended a tea at Haven Penthouse. They received flowers and Greek Week buttons.

On Thursday afternoon there was an open discussion with Professor Popovic, of the economics department, in Lawrinson Penthouse. Professors LeGacy, Mangin, Walters and Willie conducted an informal debate Thursday evening at the Erie Boulevard Library.

Other cultural events being held in conjunction with Greek Week include the Black Art Exhibition at Hendricks Chapel and the presentation of "The Lady is for Burning" at the Regent Theatre.

Sly and the Family Stone



IDC meeting

Interdormitory Council met last night to nominate officers for 1969-70. Nominations are: President: Mark Cavanaugh (Watson); Vice-President: Connie Steward (Haven), Bill Segur (Sadler); Secretary: Golda Shapiro (St. Mary's); Treasurer: Mike Kleeman (Lawrinson).

The Interdormitory Council evaluation team for dormitory autonomy will meet Saturday, 2 pm, at Watson.

"Sex in Our Society – New Developments and their Implications for Family Counseling" is the topic of an address to be given by Edward R. Wilson of the College of Home Economics at the annual dinner meeting of the Family Counseling Service of Jefferson County at the Holiday Inn in Watertown on Monday.

uptight?
cool it this summer at university of rhode island

COMBINE summer study with summer fun. URI is where it's happening —outdoor classes under cool shade trees, distinguished resident and visiting faculty, the finest ocean beaches in the Northeast just minutes away, groovy folk and jazz festivals at nearby Newport, concerts, feature films, dances, sports, lecture series and other special attractions.

CHOOSE from 200 morning and evening courses in each term, beginning June 16 and July 24. EARN up to 14 semester hours of credit by attending both terms. COMPLETE up to 2 yrs. of French or Italian in 11 weeks by attending our accelerated language sessions.

COST — $20 per credit hour for most courses plus $10 registration fee for Rhode Island residents and $20 for out of state residents.

Write or call (401) 792-2107 for complete information.

University of Rhode Island, Summer Session, Kingston, Rhode Island.

uri

Clip and mail to The Dean, Summer Session, University of Rhode Island, Green Hall
Kingston, Rhode Island 02881

Please send your 1969 Summer Session Bulletin and Application/Preregistration Form to:

Mr. Mrs. Miss _____
Street Address _____
City _____ State _____ Zip Code _____
Your College/Univ. _____ Location _____

Ask the man who never stops going to school —about Ætna.

We teach school.

Seven thousand people each year attend our schools. That's a larger student body than 90% of the colleges in this country. But our training doesn't stop there.

We want every Ætna employee to reach his full potential, use all his capabilities, and be the most knowledgeable in the business. So special programs, advanced study and refresher courses go on all the time.

After all, it's the caliber of our people that made Ætna one of the leading companies in the world handling all kinds of insurance. They taught us a lot too.

Learn about Ætna. Ask for our booklet, "Your Own Thing," at your Placement Office.
An Equal Opportunity Employer and a Plans for Progress company.

Ætna OUR CONCERN IS PEOPLE
LIFE & CASUALTY

Film company on SU campus

A golden opportunity may be in the offing for two Syracuse University students with aspirations along theatrical lines. Officials of Cos Film Productions, a feature film developing company, have announced that two lead parts in a two hour feature- length motion picture will be cast from the SU campus.

The film entitled "Children, Children" is tentatively scheduled to begin filming in July with release date set in January.

The motion picture depicts the return of a college student and his fiancee to his hometown where the town's adult population has disappeared. Hysteria grips them as they are terrorized by the city's children, who, through a lack of parental concern, have turned the village into a living nightmare.

The screenplay has been developed from a short story. Filming will be done on location in Johnstown, N.Y.

The company is looking for two attractive students with talent, although not necessarily drama department students. Qualifications are: female, medium height, preferably blonde or light hair; male, 5' 11" tall, preferably blonde or light hair.

Students interested in auditioning can arrange for an interview by calling Jim Colasanti at extension 2983.

MG AUSTIN HEALEY

Jaguar
SALES & SERVICE
also
Largest Selection in the East of Used Convertibles--Hard Tops Corvettes-Sports Cars

6 Factory Trained Import Mechanics waiting to serve you. Over $100,000 in parts and accessories in inventory.

Revelle Motors, Inc.

800 W. Genesee Street
Sales GR 4-1009 Parts & Service GR 9-9544

Wanted for Psychological Experiment

Women at least 21 years of age, with at least high school education. Participants will be paid at least $2.00 per hour. If interested call Upstate Medical Center at 473-5777, ask for Miss Lant.

Call between hours 1:00 & 5:00 P.M.

COLLEGE SAMPLERS AVAILABLE HERE SOON.

Special College Samplers containing full-size products of nationally-known merchandise will be available here on April 26 according to Sid Waldman, manager of S. U. Bookstores.

Called College Sampler, each contains merchandise worth more than $8.00 and is priced at only $2.50.

Contents of the men's College Sampler will include Gillette Foamy, Sea & Ski suntan lotion, Scripto Wordpicker pen, Macleans tooth paste, Gillette Techmatic razor, Old Spice after shave lotion, Man-Power deodorant and Excedrin.

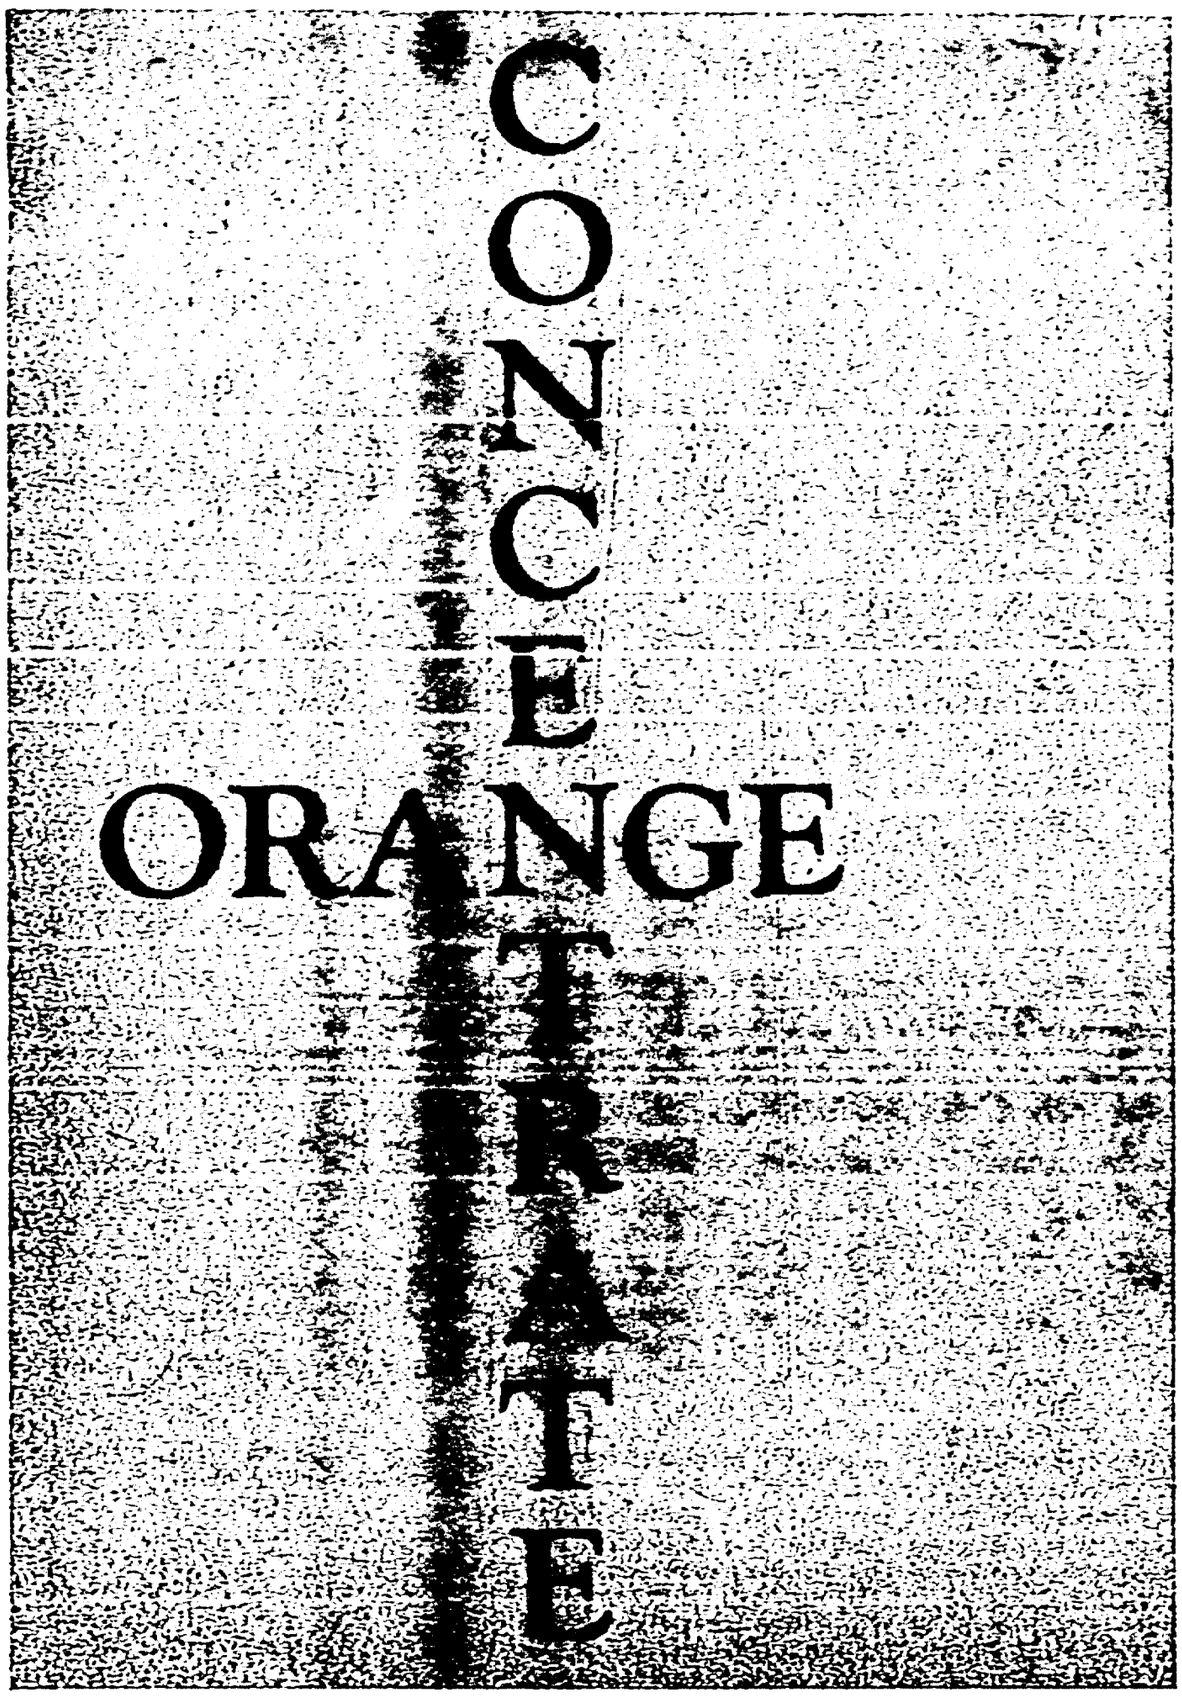
Women's Samplers will contain Adorn self-styling hair spray, Pamprin, Jergens lotion mild soap, Woolite cold water wash, My Own hygienic towelettes, Halo shampoo, Scripto Wordpicker pen, Clairol Kindness conditioner and Excedrin.

Store manager Sid Waldman says, "This is a tremendous value for our students. The top companies whose products are represented in College Samplers want student business and are using this promotion to acquaint students with their products." He added, "College Samplers will be distributed on a one-to-student basis while they last because of limited supply. We will have only enough Samplers for one out of every six students and they will be distributed on a first-come, first-served basis."

Bookstore

IMMEDIATE VENTURE CAPITAL AVAILABLE

for new businesses



We are looking for graduate students who have sound ideas for new products or services as well as the capabilities to head up as principals new organizations to see the projects culminated.

Reply only in writing, submitting detail plans. Do not include confidential information.

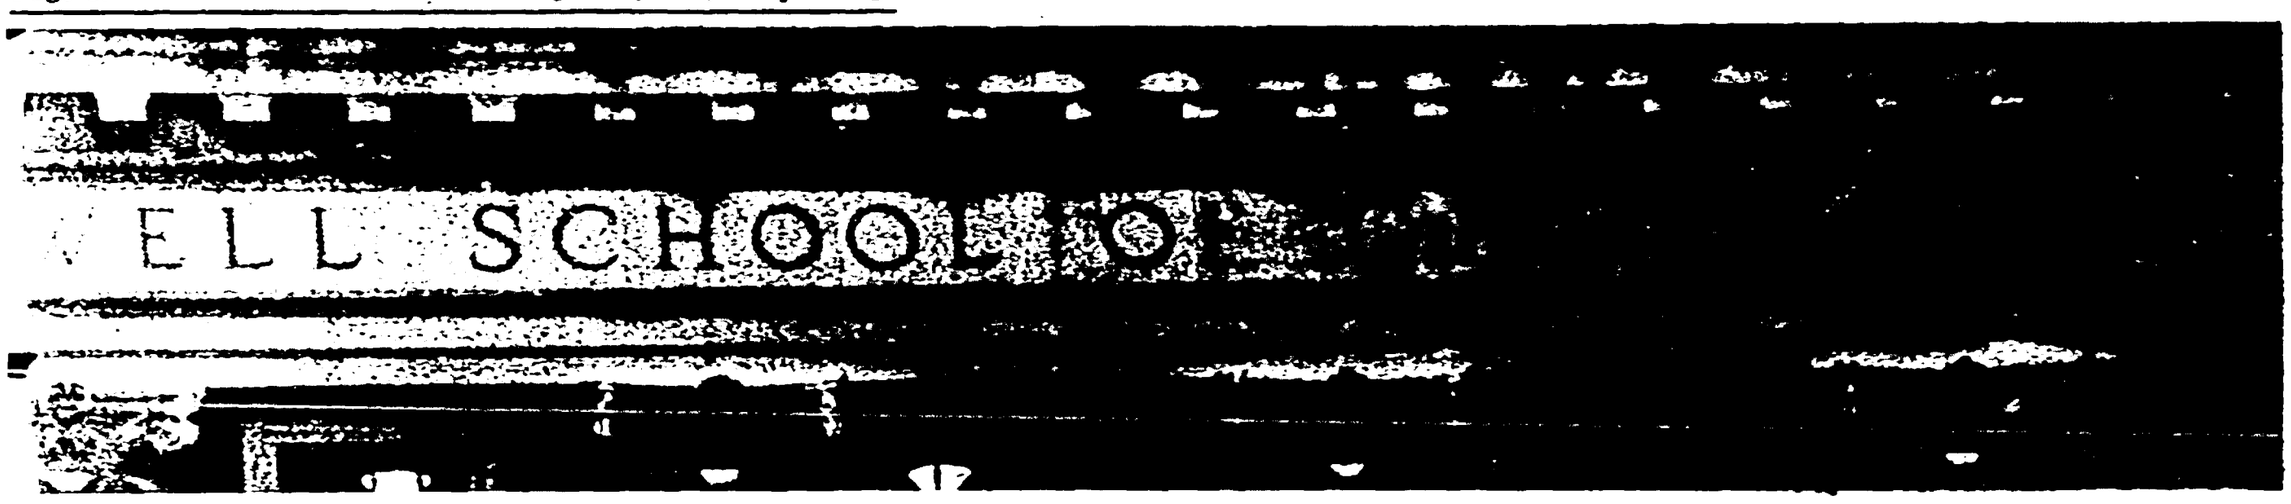
Globus, inc.

25 Broadway, New York, N.Y. 10004

UNDERWRITERS AND INVESTMENT BANKERS



"There seems to be a big gap between what the administration thinks students get out of some courses and what the students think."

Which schools are measuring up?

Maxwell — page 10
Journalism — page 10
Art school — page 11
Architecture — page 11
Drama — page 12
Music — page 12
Forestry — page 13

by Margaret Allan

The Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs ranks high when compared to other schools of its kind in the nation. It boasts high caliber professors, a variety of specialized courses and successful alumni.

Reputation, as may well be imagined, motivated many of the students who are now enrolled in Maxwell to consider the school in the first place. In some cases, reputation was actually the determining factor for students faced with a choice of graduate schools.

Pyung-Gil Choi read articles by a Maxwell professor while he was still working for his bachelor's degree at Yonsei University at Seoul, Korea. He learned of the school's excellent reputation in public administration. Since then he has met the professor, received his Maxwell degree in public administration and is now beginning work on his doctorate in political science. He feels all his courses contribute to his goal of returning to Seoul as a Yonsei professor acting as a consultant to the Korean government.

Other Maxwell students were not so eloquent in their praise of the school, but most of them believed reputation was important. They all seemed to feel that Maxwell is everything that it is said to be.

A fairy tale?

Hardly. For one thing, there are the crowded classes. Kathleen DiTullio estimated there is an enrollment of 30 students in each of her seminar courses, which "is more than I had in my classes as an undergraduate at Penn State." She is no exception. Three other Maxwell students cited this complaint when questioned.

The need for "a second Maxwell building" was made apparent to Chancellor Tolley last year by the report of Stephen Bailey, the school's dean. Dean Bailey noted the building had originally served a 35-member faculty. Now the faculty is almost four times larger. As a result, members of the Maxwell faculty co-occupy offices and buildings with other colleges on campus.

Perhaps it is the building situation that creates the large classroom enrollments that students claim exist in the Maxwell School. And perhaps it is the inconvenience of the office set-up which accounts for the observation of one doctoral candidate concerning the lax approach to office hours some Maxwell colleagues tend to display. "Half of the number of times I have approached professors, they are not there," he said, while diplomatically asserting that such professors were counterbalanced by others who are there when they say they will be.

The same student complained of a lack of closeness in the faculty-student relations at Maxwell -- a situation which, he felt, had been somewhat overcome by the efforts of Dr. Robert Gregg. According to the student, symposiums initiated by Dr. Gregg have brought about improved communications between the Maxwell faculty and students.

Also seeking to establish faculty-student-administration relations is a student organization within the school. The Maxwell Graduate Student Association (MGSA) has planned various coffee hours for students and faculty members. Presently the association has planned one session of the symposium entitled "The University and Its Community," to be conducted at the time of the installation of Alan K. Campbell as dean. The Maxwell student group will also provide a reception which will include Maxwell alumni.

MGSA is attempting to make the courses in the school relevant to current issues by organizing course evaluation groups composed of the students themselves. The association's president, Tom Perloff, said the "small-scale, sample course evaluation" program the students are now conducting should go into effect next fall. This evaluation of courses by students may point toward a greater student role in deciding academic policies.

MSGA is active outside of Maxwell through student recruit teams. Groups of Maxwell students have been sent by MGSA to draw more black students into the school. The Maxwell recruiters have discussed the possibilities of attending graduate school to undergraduate students at various schools in Richmond, Washington and Atlanta. Nashville is next on the recruiters' agenda. Perloff noted that the program was "progressing very adequately" in that the Maxwell administration is not only considering the new black students that are being recruited, but is also "more willing to admit the blacks who had already applied."

In spite of the efforts of MGSA, some of the graduate students at Maxwell continue to feel that there is much room for improvement in the student-faculty relations in the school.

Other Maxwell students did not seem to know that MGSA existed, and if they did, knew next to nothing about that organization's activities. When questioned about his lack of interest concerning the student association, a Maxwell student pointed out that there is a "mammoth amount of work and study" that graduates must do.

Aside from the building limitations and faculty-student relations or lack of the, the Maxwell School appears to be striving academically from the student viewpoint. None of the students interviewed raised complaints concerning courses, although one mentioned that there were "better courses at Indiana University." He had decided to come here, however, because he was offered financial aid.

Maxwell appears to be as liberal as possible to its graduate students when it comes to financial assistance. As far as placement in research or other employment goes, as one student put it, "they try."

There does seem to be a definite interest in Maxwell toward its students. Dean Bailey, in his report, empahsized the importance of the students and that students must be respected "as individuals." He called for relevant courses which the students seem to feel they already have, and asked for a cut in the seven-year period it usually takes for a student to receive a doctorate degree after completing undergraduate studies. The Maxwell program now includes "core" patterns of concentration, which attempt to eliminate what is not essential from the students' curriculum.

The high esteem generally held for the Maxwell School does not appear to be endangered by the difficulties it may be having. For the most part, the courses offered agree with the graduate students. Most of the students appreciate their instructors and the opportunities offered them.

Not quite a fairy tale. But the flaws are not tragic.

"Aside from the building limitations and faculty-student relations or lack of them, the Maxwell School appears to be striving academically...."

J-school: meeting media needs?

by Jean Havens

"If I were starting my journalistic career all over again, Syracuse is the kind of school I'd choose."

"Syracuse is not moving intellectually. It isn't hitting at the problems of journalism and the world which we will have to deal with."

These two statements--the first from a recent "Newhouse News" article written by Dr. Edmund C. Arnold, chairman of the graphic arts department of the School of Journalism, and the second from a senior journalism student--both offer different views of the quality of the journalism program here at Syracuse University.

Since the advent of SU journalism classes in 1919 when such courses were offered by the College of Business Administration, the "j-school" has gained the reputation and prestige required to be ranked equally with such schools as the University of Missouri and Northwestern. Over the years since its three-department (newspaper, magazine and advertising) beginning in 1934 when it became an officially separate school, the j-school has grown to include 12 more areas of study.

J-school in perspective

Approved by the American Council on Education for Journalism, SU has three programs accredited by that group: again the original trio of news-editorial, magazine and advertising. The University of Iowa has the same three accredited programs, while Northwestern has a fourth, radio-television news, and the University of Missouri has six altogether.

Dr. Roland E. Wolseley, retiring magazine department chairman who was appointed to the staff in 1946, recalls the j-school of that time: "When I came as an associate professor, it seemed to be a solid but conventional program. It had mostly practical courses and was doing little research in comparison to others. It had the reputation of being a good journalism school which trained people well."

"Today," he continued, "it has a reputation for having gone in heavily for mass communications research, but at the same time has maintained a balance with practical training."

This problem of maintaining a balance has produced much recent criticism and controversy in the world of journalism training. The late David Boroff of New York University visited a cross-section of the country's j-schools in 1964. Assisted by the Ford Foundation, Boroff then submitted a report, along with further investigation and discussion, on the quality of journalism education in the United States.

Discussing the Boroff report in the January 1966 issue of "The Quill," official publication of Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalistic society for men, John Tebbel stated that j-schools, "like newspapers themselves, are in need of reappraisal and new direction."

Balance sought

In criticising the quality of journalism faculty members, Tebbel cites the balance which should be maintained between professional and academic education. The problem seems to stem from growing antiprofessionalism in j-schools. If professional education is the goal, then the teachers should be professionally skilled.

On the other hand, if academic education is the objective, then the lack of Ph.D.s sets in. Generally required for college teaching, the Ph.D. often indicates no actual professional journalism experience.

Here at out j-school the interest conflict is more of a complement as researchers and professional journalists work side-by-side.

High standards

"We are a better school with better faculty members including people like Dr. Haskins, Dr. Ehling and Dr. McLaughlin who are working on journalism research," continued Dr. Wolseley in his evaluation of the Syracuse situation. "We have a reputation for specialties," he explained, "which has caused deans in other schools to refer students to us." Included among these specialties are the programs in religious journalism, literacy journalism, mental health information and educational journalism.

"We've kept up our standards in spite of the expansion we've had. Syracuse has maintained its accreditation and in the future will add more programs to its accredited list," Dr. Wolseley said. "We also have a reputation for one of the finest physical plants."

Students dissatisifed

Student opinions vary as to whether or not the SU j-school is living up to its supposed reputation. A sophomore journalism student who came to Syracuse specifically because of its reputation feels that he hasn't gotten anything out of the courses he's taken so far. He stated: "There seems to be a tremendous gap between what the administration and some of the journalism faculty seem to think that students get out of the courses offered and what the students themselves think."

This lack of "intellectual exercises in combating journalistic problems" is also cited by a senior student who explained "I've been here four years and nothing's been changed curriculum-wise. No, I don't think it's living up to its supposed reputation. It seems too impermeable to change--there's not enough experimentation."

"My complaint," he continued, "is that I'm not exposed to the research end of journalism. Too much time is spent on stuff like copy reading which could be learned through practical experience such as required work on a campus publication. A lot of the things they teach you can be picked up in this manner, whereas the research work being done by the faculty is hardly ever heard of."

Citing the "Principles of Journalism" course currently being taught by Associate Professor Cathy Covert as the type of course which should be introduced more and more into the j-school program, the student stressed that Syracuse has the personnel to carry out the job if the curriculum were updated.

The theme of a "quick and strong re-examination" of the journalism program seems to be common among dissatisfied students. As Dr. Wolseley feels, the school is getting better, but much too slowly to meet the needs of today's young journalists with their awareness of current problems and concerns. Dubbed the "green eyeshade versus chi-square" debate, the future balance of the professional and the technical here at Syracuse is still in doubt and will continue to teeter from side to side as the journalism school decides what direction it will take.

"Here at the J-school...researchers and professional journalists work side-by-side."

'What kind of art school?'

"What right does the school have to impose a technique on a student?"

by Elaine Ladieu

To a student not enrolled in the School of Art, pointing out its location could include Crouse, Newhouse or those funny-looking buildings in the vicinity of Marshall Street.

Technically, the art school is in the Joe and Emily Lowe Art Center which serves as an art gallery and also houses the office of the dean. But relatively few classes are held there. Where, then, is the art school? Probably more important, where is it headed as an academic element of the university?

Some art students were esked. Sophomore Tom Powers and freshmen Jenny Zucco, Joan Shaffer, Linda Honeyman and two others who asked that their names not be used, discussed the problems and possibilities the school faces.

The main gripe seemed to be a lack of classrooms and classroom space. "You're jammed in, and half the kids can't get the work done. Then the instructor yells at you for not coming to class. I could do my work much better in my room," said Jenny.

But Laurence Schmeckebier, dean of the School of Art, seemed calm. "Complaints, we always have." He pointed out that a building fund has been in existence for 15 years.

The reaction to graduate assistants was mixed. Some, like Tom, were favorably inclined. "Grads don't push you as hard. If you're willing to work, they're willing to help you."

Others had a negative response. Said Jenny, "The grad students are so caught up in 'doing their own thing.' They're paid for 15 hours a week and seem to teach what they want to learn." Dean Schmeckebier mentioned the names of a few outstanding graduate assistants and added, "Complaints, we always have."

Concerning freedom of expression and new ideas in the art school, Joan had this to say, "The teachers can't do what they want to do, and the whole thing depends on authority. From nine to 12 you have to draw a model regardless of whether you have the feeling to do it. Sometimes you just don't feel like drawing. You literally just waste your time."

However, Tom added that he wished students were obliged to experiment in different artistic media in order to obtain a good background. He claimed that a broad knowledge in just one mode of expression was not sufficient. When told of this statement, the dean became emphatic and said, "What right have you to impose a technique on a student? What we're interested in is freedom of expression!"

In the Syracuse Art School catalogue an excerpt reads, "The students are carefully selected on the basis of demonstrated intellectual and artistic capacity...A portfolio of art work is strongly recommended, but not required for admission." Yet Jenny claims, "It's supposed to be a good school, but it's not what I anticipated. My biggest complaint is that just anyone can get into the school. Strict entrance requirements like at other schools are not required."

She also points to the crowded classroom situation as a direct result of this situation, "There are too many students who don't belong in the art school." But Dean Schmeckebier believes that since some high schools do not offer art courses he "would hate to restrict some people because of the thick-headedness of their high school faculties."

Students seem optimistic concerning the new student-faculty committee whose plan is generally to improve the communication between teachers and students. Emphasis now is being placed on the students' participation in the selection of a new dean when Schmeckebier resigns at the end of this semester. As Jenny said, "I sure hope the new art dean will get the school out of its rut."

Another grievance of the students is the cost of supplies. One student feels that "the expense of supplies is something you just can't get away from. My friends go through the same thing in other schools." But Tom disagreed. "I believe that supplies bought at the bookstore could be bought at less cost at other art supply stores."

Although he feels he is unable to make comparisons with other schools, he said teachers have told him that it is less expensive at other institutions where they have taught or studied. A recent comparative study of store prices disclosed a large discrepancy in prices favoring the University Bookstore. Undoubtedly, the art students have felt the results many times.

Most of those interviewed claimed that the School of Art was moving ahead with fresh ideas. Although most professors are "with it," the students feel it is they, themselves, who "liven things up."

Yet when asked to compare Syracuse's art school with others, they faltered. Linda said, "I really don't have anything to compare the school with." No catalogues with art school information could be found in the Carnegie Library reference room for Berkeley, Miami University, American University or Boston University (all well-known for their art schools). A catalogue of the SU art school was readily available upon request. Dean Schmeckebier says both students and faculty contribute to the tempo of the school, but "what I kind of enjoy is the excitement I get from the students."

What kind of art school does SU have? One whose teachers are outstanding but seem more concerned about operating within the framework of authority? One whose lack of funds forces it to accept students other schools would refuse? One whose costs to students is amazingly high? One whose students seem unaware of how other schools compare to Syracuse? One whose main hope is a committee to "improve communication?" With a faculty headed by a dean who, on one hand says, "I've never refused to see a student in all my 15 years here." But on the other hand refuses to deviate from his policies after 38 years of teaching and administration?

Consider my own experience in attempting to obtain some information from a source other than the dean's personal secretary who handles all news media. In the current records office I was refused a statement because "Dean Schmeckebier likes to censor things....shall we say?" With that I was gently and persuasively urged out the door.

Does Dean Schmeckebier wield such authority that the image of the art school is issued from his office and only from his office? Is everyone apathetic or does someone care? Many art students felt they had found this someone, someone who did care about the students' needs, who did care about teaching Art History in a way that meant something.

Professor Schleiter, due to an unfortunate chain of circumstances is no longer teaching this course. He has been replaced by Dean Schmeckebier. As in the words of one anonymous student, "Dean Schmeckebier likes to run things."

No opportunity for expansion

by Anne Berrill
and
Lynda Sherry

Muffled war drums reverberate through the under-graduate design studios of the Syracuse University School of Architecture.

The natives are restless.

Typical of their war cries are "reality gap!" "lack of social involvement!" and "stifling of creativity!"

Freely and articulatly they voice their complaints. Again and again, one hears of lack of social involvement in their courses.

Paul Scoville, president of the undergraduate student body of the school, puts it this way: "Sometimes it seems stupid that we spend almost all our time designing museums and skyscrapers when there are people in this city who don't have plumbing."

The brochure of the SU School of Architecture cites the city of Syracuse as a research/resource laboratory but the students don't agree that it is used as such in reality.

"When we do get to work on a city planning project," Scoville says, "it is purely on a hypothetical basis. We want more actual involvement, especially with the ghetto areas."

One step in this direction was taken recently when design Professor William Scarbrough offered his second year students the opportunity to submit designs for the re-painting of the Bishop Foery Community Center in Syracuse.

The neighborhood people who use the center will select the one they want from the best designs. The students will then paint the building themselves.

The students feel that this type of assignment is being assigned "far too infrequently."

"The whole problem is that there is too much isolation of social and technological problems in the school," says undergrad Mike Munson. "They have to be integrated."

"'Opportunities for creativity hinge on design professors.'"

Second year design student Darrel Rippeteau agrees. "We spend so much time learning how to use space, with almost no concern for people -- the way space can be arranged to best serve the needs of the people."

Another reason the students feel that the city of Syracuse should be used more actively as a training ground is that technical facilities in the School of Architecture are "lacking to an atrocious degree." For example, it doesn't even have its own blueprint machine.

The absence of opportunity for the practical expansion of their studies is one of the causes of the lack of creativity and freedom in the school, according to the students. The organization of the school as a whole is another major cause, they maintain.

"The technical courses are dull, tedious and pedestrian," says Scoville. "Opportunities for creativity hinge on design professors, many of whom all but encourage mediocrity.

"As it is now, there is no real freedom in the architecture school. The curriculum allows for no independent study or honors program."

Although a statistically high percentage of SU School of Architecture graduates do become licensed architects, students are not impressed with the quality of education in the school.

Some of them would like to see a complete and radical reorganization of the administrative hierarchy of the school. Says one, "The present structure should be wiped out and begun all over again with a new dean and a more concerned faculty. We need people who will instill a spirit of dynamism and progress into the school."

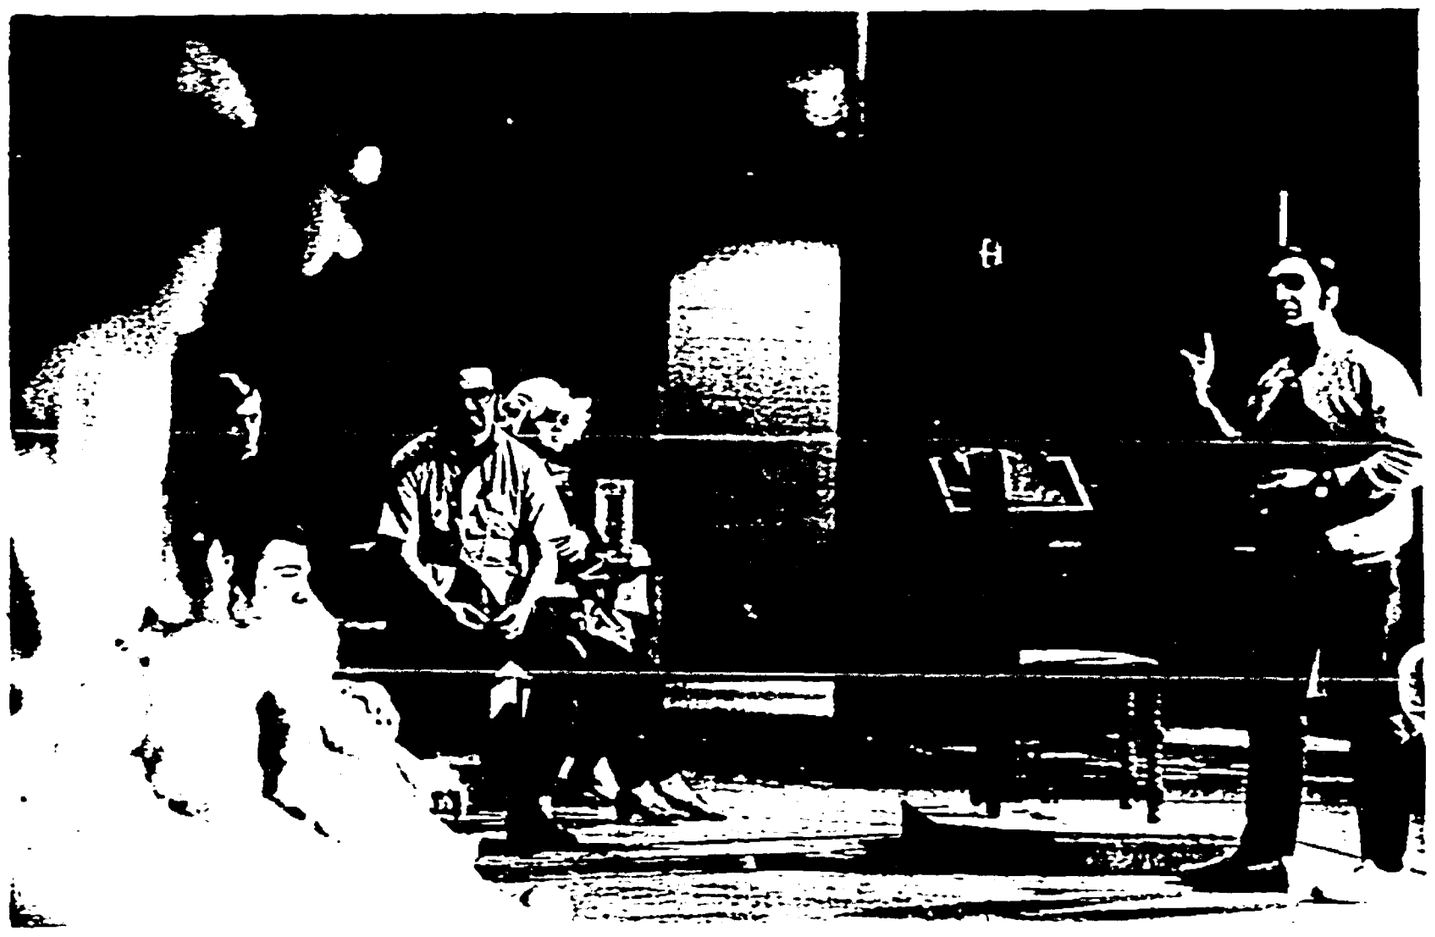
A recent evaluation of teachers compiled by the undergraduate students helped precipitate last month's boycott of classes at the school.

Says Scoville, "The evaluations bear out what most of the students were saying outside of classes -- that the school has too many boring, unimaginative teachers."

This view is disputed by Les Bennetts, one of the design professors. "The evaluations were not fair because they did not take into consideration the nature of the courses taught. Many of the technical courses are inevitably dull, no matter how enthusiastic the teacher."

Bennetts attributes the critical evaluations to the over-enthusiasm of youth, but he thinks that the students have many legitimate gripes. "I agree that the school does stifle creativity to some extent, but I see much potential for future cooperation between students and faculty in designing more worthwhile programs."

Meanwhile, student hopes seem to be waning. The student-faculty review board, set up after the boycott, has still not been officially recognized, and therefore legitimized, by the administration of Syracuse University. As a result, it remains relatively ineffective to date.



One of the more constructive suggested solutions to the problem is the creation of some independent study programs and a broader spectrum in the curriculum that would allow for investigation of specialized areas.

Only if the needed improvements and the upgrading of the creative and involvement aspects of the school occur will the war drums on the fourth floor of Slocum quiet. The lulling atmosphere in the aftermath of the boycott is only temporary, for the more deep-seated dissatisfaction of the undergrads with the school has not been diminished.

The tempo has slowed, but the beat goes on.

Problems beset school of drama; still rated good

by Kay Christensen

"We have an opportunity here to build one hell of a drama department," said sophomore drama student John Urban, reflecting on Syracuse University drama department which is reputed to have one of the nation's top 10 departments.

His reaction is representative of most drama students. Both students and teachers hedge a bit and do not say that SU does in fact live up to its reputation. Rather, they point out that it is a good school -- and that good schools have problems, too.

The department suffers from deficiencies similar to too many liberal arts course requirements, poor lecturers, too little credit for time-consuming courses, no credit for outside work in the field, and on, and on. At the same time, however, students boast of the intimate contact with teachers and the unlimited opportunity for practical application.

If there is a widespread complaint it is that the school itself lacks a philosophy or statement of purpose. Action was finally taken six weeks ago when John Urban and nine other drama students organized the Ad Hoc Committee of Concerned Students.

At a student convocation the committee presented itself and a list of questions which they wanted to address to the faculty. The questions were unanimously endorsed by the students. Committee members were approved with only one dissenting vote. Although such a student mandate, technically did not represent the drama department, it was considered an endorsement by the students and a green light for action.

The Ad Hoc Committee of Concerned Students presented their views in a preface to the list of questions which were addressed to the faculty:

"Our purpose is very simply to attempt to formulate an educational philosophy which the students are aware of. We feel that if there is a generally known and carefully constructed philosophic framework for our department, we will be able to move, both students and faculty, in a more definite direction toward forming the best kind of educational atmosphere possible within the stated framework.

"It is possible that this framework exists and that the students are simply not aware of it, but we feel that it is essential to the growth of this department that students be aware of this framework and be able to help in constructing or modifying it."

The questions following the preface ask the faculty to pinpoint: what a student is expected to be capable of after four years in the department; the objective of the department; the role of the administration; the relationship between the Regent Theatre and the department; the relationship of students to departmental decisions.

These questions have only recently been presented to the drama faculty and as yet a faculty response has not been made. Urban, however, noted that the sole purpose of the committee is to initiate a statement of purpose or philosophy of the school.

Three committees are in existence which operate with student and faculty members. They are the Liason Committee, Boar's Head, and the Agenda Committee, all of which deal with specific complaints. Thus, after the Ad Hoc Committee forces a general framework to be established, it will cease to operate and will let the remaining student committees examine and investigate specific complaints within the established framework.

"Hopefully, this will be a self-destructive committee," said Urban.

Just about anyone in the department, however, will agree that there are not the traditional communication gaps between faculty and students in the drama department. Students proudly boast that they always have an "open door" to any professor's office.

Len Dryansky, designer and production supervisor for the drama complex, noted that the student-teacher relationship is not typical of scientific schools because it transforms into a director-actor-producer relationship.

The "plus" point of unlimited work opportunities is one of the most valuable assets of the drama department. Student convocations -- small productions or one-act plays -- are held almost weekly. And there are always public plays in which students participate, along with numerous scenes produced and performed for class.

The time and work that is involved in extra productions, however, is monumental. Such experience is considered a necessity for a drama student, but no course credit is offered. Preparation is presently being made for the production of Marat/Sade which will be presented the first week in May. Rehearsal schedule for this production is usually four hours a night, seven nights a week.

Although drama students claim that their productions are just as professional as any other university's, they complain of the apathy from the rest of the campus. Fairly good crowds are received for productions, but they cannot compete with any SU-sponsored weekend. All productions have been covered by a Herald-Journal critic.

The drama department, like any other department on campus, needs more money for more and better teachers. But students point out three faculty members who are "the greatest" -- Gerard Moses, Daniel Drempel, and Len Dryansky.

> "Our purpose is very simply to attempt to formulate an educational philosophy which the students are aware of."

Most criticism in the drama department is aimed at the courses rather than the professors. For example, the introductory course to drama, which is usually taken in a student's freshman year, is Theater Arts I. This four-hour credit course has two one-hour lectures, two two-hour labs and four hours of crew work each week. That requires a minimum of ten hours of class time for a four-hour credit course.

Another basic complaint within the curriculum lies with the drama department's conjunction with the speech department. Both are housed together under the School of Speech and Dramatic Art. Consequently, several speech courses are required which many students feel are elementary or are not related to drama.

Concerning liberal arts requirements, Dryansky feels that they are a necessity for students to obtain background. "Some students," he said, "don't want Liberal Arts courses. They want what we call 'show biz orientation' -- acting, being on the stage and hearing applause. This is the Broadway syndrome -- it's a mistaken view." He said only a very small percent of SU grads will appear on Broadway.

Dryansky pointed out that it is necessary for students to know background. There was a row of books on the French Revolution, for instance, on the wall of the secretary's office -- which are being used for the Marat/Sade production.

Dryansky, who believes that the drama department is understaffed, noted that enrollment has increased in the small school since the curriculum has changed. There are two parts to the current curriculum: a large amount of professional training, and a strong emphasis on liberal arts education. There are now about 140 students in the department; less than 10 seniors and about 60 freshmen.

Notes of promise for the music school

by Betty Jean Housman

"They (the examiners) shared the belief that this school will be one of the strong schools of music in the future."

This was the conclusion of the recent examination by the National Association of Schools of Music of which Syracuse University's School of Music has been a charter member since 1928.

With approximately 150 students, the music school is small in comparison to Eastman at the University of Rochester with a 641 enrollment. Unlike Juilliard, an independent music school in New York City, the Syracuse music school must depend on a university bureaucracy for a share of the yearly revenue.

The key word is future. The music school is in a developing stage. By making use of its high standards, traditions and the students' ideas, it is slowly entering equal ground with these other schools.

In order to enter the school, a prospective student must prove his musical ability. Since a series of non-music subjects are also studied, he must be academically capable as well as musically talented.

In order to fit each student's talents, ambitions and taste, three upper division programs are offered: Mus. B., a degree in either performance or theory-composition; Mus. B., a degree in music education which is dually conferred with the School of Education; and A.B. a music degree conferred dually with the College of Liberal Arts.

Each student working for a degree in performing must demonstrate to the faculty by the end of his sophomore year that he is capable of presenting a junior and senior recital, the latter being a full-length program.

Some of the students do outside performances in churches and the Syracuse Symphony if they are able to join the musicians' union, but this depends on the initiative of the individual student.

The school is unusual in that it strikes a balance between the old traditions and modern trends.

The John Crouse Memorial College, a gift of John Crouse in 1888, was designed by Archimedes Russell and is a monumental example of the neo-romanesque mixture of church and castle which was popular at the time.

Although the interior is slowly being remodeled as the money can be found, the stained glass windows and much of the original woodwork remain.

Besides its aesthetic effects, the old structure has its practical aspects. The two-foot thick brick walls which support the building are better soundproofing material than the cinder blocks used in most modern structures.

Despite the setting, modern trends are not forgotten. In 1967 an electronic music studio was installed which enables a musician to compose directly for performance without the use of either a written score or musicians with instruments, only a generating unit which produces sound of almost infinite variety.

The school also possesses modern recording equipment and has been recording the Summer Music Festivals since 1961 on the Westminister-Syracuse album series. There is talk now that the University will be starting its own commercial record company with the help of the music school.

The school seems to be unique in that it has no communications problem between the students, faculty and dean. Melvin Douglas Soyars, lecturer in music education, credits this to the dean, Howard Boatwright.

Dean Boatwright, appointed in 1964, is involved in student affairs and gets to know many of them individually. He personally auditions all incoming students, counsels sophomores during the crucial period of choosing a proper program, and arranges to talk to all seniors.

Besides these official meetings, students are free to come to his office any time to discuss any or all of their problems and many do.

The dean gives the Student Advisory Council, an elective body of eight students from freshman to graduate students that meet with him once every two weeks or more often if they wish, the credit for the smooth pace at which the school runs.

Dean Boatwright calls it his communications channel: "When I want the students to know something, I tell the council and before long its all over the school. On the other hand, its the only way I have to know the success or non-success of courses and anything around the building that's unsatisfactory."

Some of the achievements of the council are:

* the expansion of the listening room, equipped with playback mechanisms for tapes and records, to include a small library of the basic reference books which the students use on the honor system and from which a single book has not yet been lost;

* the senior banquet, started last year, which is held at the dean's home;

* a security system by which the key to the doors on Sunday when there is no custodian help to allow students to use the practice rooms.

At the present time, the council is working on an independent study program. This would allow a music student to study a subject not taught by the school per se or in depth under a professor of his choice who acts as an advisor. At the end of the semester the student would write a paper on the scale of a thesis for credit under the history and theory sequence.

It is also studying the possibility of a master's degree in music therapy which is the study of the phychological effects of music. Only 10 or 12 schools offer such a program at this time in the country.

The faculty respects the council and its purposes. "You can tell when there has been a complaint, because the dean takes action but he does it in a good way without offending," said Soyars. "When you have been teaching something for a good many years, its sometimes easy to think you are teaching something when you're really not. Professors like to know when this happens. It helps keep our standards high."

There are some complaints among students, most of them legitmate. Many would like to see more practice rooms or at least some means to regulate the temperature in the present ones. Many voice students would like to see a joint degree in drama since there is just as much acting as singing in opera and musicals.

There is a small percentage of students which feel the dean is too powerful and that the school is a zoo, but these come from a special group as one senior described as having "an attitude warped by the 19th century romantic image of a starving artist. They feel they have a special burden to carry in society and can't be bothered by the trival in life but can complain."

Stamping out Smokey-the-Bear

by Joseph Dolman

The College of Forestry at Syracuse is the major school of its type in the nation–in terms of facilities, size, staff, and breadth of programs, according to its dean, Edwin C. Jahn.

But how do the students view their school? Do they expect more than they are getting from it, or are they basically satisfied?

Bob Bye, president of the college's Student Council says the school has "fulfilled all expectations" for him. But what he sees as most important may not be shared by all students. "I see the forester as basically white-collar," Bye said. This year "we aren't doing so well in our woodsman competition." As more emphasis is placed on research and managerial training, with less on the basic forestry curriculum, some students may be disappointed in the future at the lack of emphasis on basic courses.

The administration defends the trend toward the "white-collar" forester. According to Jahn, "In today's world a forester no longer deals with trees and wildlife only. He is dealing with people, too. The economic and social impacts are high. So are the aesthetic and political. He must have an awareness of how these forces fit into society."

"We're trying to shake the Smokey-the-Bear image," agreed forestry's assistant dean for administration, David G. Anderson.

"It's a good school," said Gunther Vogt, an editor of the college's student newspaper, newspaper, the Knothole. "One of the greatest things is the close student-faculty contact. You can talk to the faculty and get to know each other. There is no great communications gap."

Bye agrees with this, saying the college has the best communications between students and faculty of any in the Northeast. "I was surprised at how well-off we were," he said.

But this may also change in the future, he allowed, as the college becomes more research-oriented. The rapport could lessen as professors must dedicate more time to research grants and deadlines. "This has happened in one or two courses" already, Bye said.

The college is "very good," according to Norman Booth, a landscape architecture student. "It compares favorably with other schools in the country. I think it is what it is made out to be."

However, there is probably some slight tension between students and the administration, he said. There is a general feeling that they rule "with an iron hand."

Administratively, the college is in a unique situation. It is a unit of the State University of New York, but it has its own board of trustees. Its own trustees formulate policy, according to Jahn, and the SUNY trustees have a veto power.

The College's only administrative tie to Syracuse University is Chancellor Tolley's position as an ex-officio member of their board of trustees.

One of the greatest things is the close student faculty contact. You can talk to the faculty and get to know each other. There is no great communications gap.

One issue that may create the tension is the drafting of new rules and regulations for students, following a controversy over disciplinary measures taken against a student last fall. The rules were drawn up by the college's trustees, according to students, without their consultation. They were then sent to the Student Council for ratification.

They were recognized by the Council, said Bye, only as "wordy" and "adolescent." Students said some rules forbid such things as using profanity and loitering on campus.

The rules are now being revised by the Student Council.

Another issue centers around the landscaping of the college's quad, necessary because of the recent building and expansion on campus.

Plans for the work were made in Albany by SUNY, and the job was contracted to a firm by them. According to students, the college could only accept or reject the plans. They accepted.

But the job was done "with no imagination," one of the students noted. Many of the trees have died, and some have actually spread disease to other trees. A few trees on the campus that were used for classroom study were chopped down by the engineers.

"The students think it's a big farce," said Bye. A few weeks ago they staged a protest, removing the dead trees, and replacing them with a plastic one. The plastic tree is now on display in Moon Memorial Library.

Despite the authoritarian attitude at times, and the few instances of tension, Booth said he thought the students were generally dealt with fairly by the administration–"sometimes in the students favor."

One reason may be a college improvement committee, comprised of faculty, students, and staff. It listens to complaints anyone wishes to raise about the college. The students have a "broad voice" in the affairs of the college, the dean said.

The college participates in the "High Risk" program, created under a special SUNY grant. In this program, five "disadvantaged" students, whose scholastic achievement is lower than that required for admission, are admitted each year.

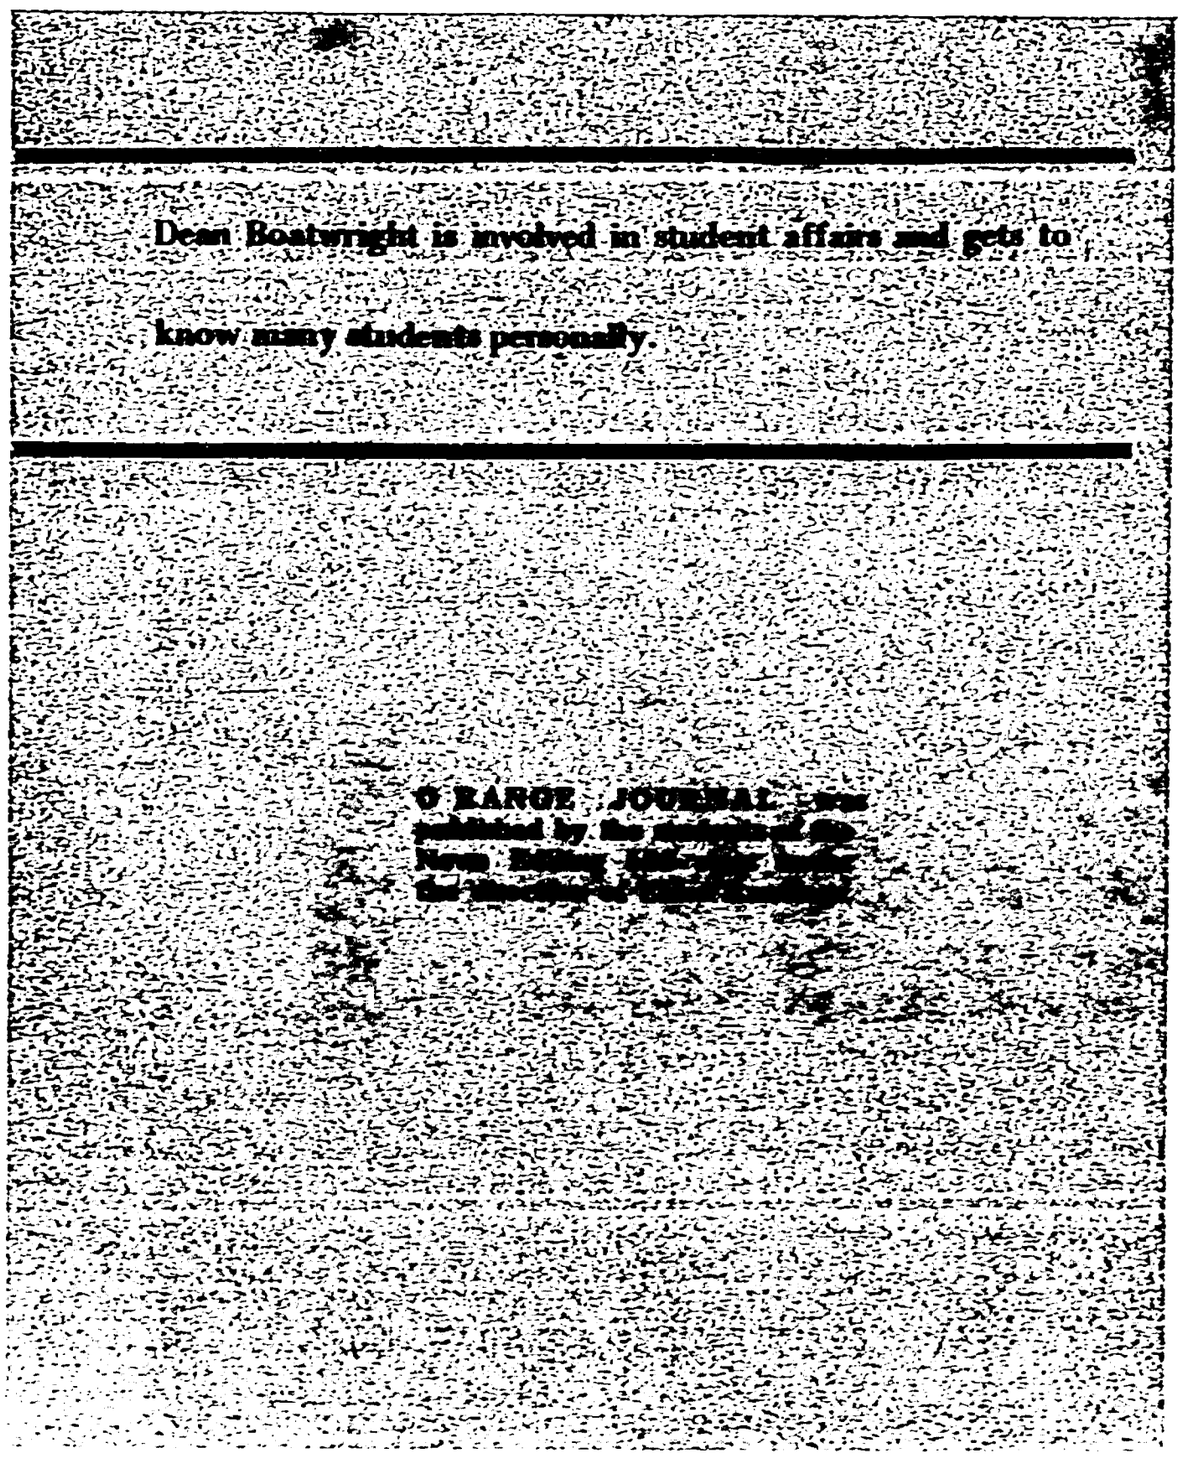
These students are selected on the basis of intelligence and potential. They are allowed to carry a smaller load and participate in remedial programs, Jahn said.

The major undergraduate curriculums in forestry are resource managemen., forest engineering, paper science and engineering, forest chemistry, forest biology, landscape architecture, and wood products engineering.

About 35 per cent of a student's courses are in liberal arts, taught mainly at Syracuse University, according to Jahn. "Academically, we are part of the University," he said. "There are many traditional ties that have built into solid relationships."

The college does teach, however, "a few courses that could be considered general," he added, including freshman and sophomore composition, technical writing, statistics, organic chemistry, and the forestry-oriented biological scienoes.

Some students think the courses at SU are not really related to their field, but are valuable nevertheless. "The liberal arts courses are not directly relevant, but indirectly they are. I think they enrich the forester's background. Anyhow, the college is liberal in letting you take the courses you want," one student said.



Others find a more practical use for the courses. "Most of us think the SU courses are generally not relevant. A lot of people take them to bolster their averages. They are usually easier than forestry courses."

The College of Forestry has no financial ties to SU, Jahn said. As a part of SUNY, its tuition is considerably cheaper than that of SU. New York State residents pay $400 per year, and others pay $600. Prices for room and board, however, are the same as SU's.

Some SU students claim that many enroll in the college for the first two years with no intentions of completing the curriculum. They take mainly liberal arts courses, and then at the end of their sophomore year transfer to SU, having saved several thousand dollars in tuition.

But according to figures offered by the College's registrar, Donald F. Green, these claims have no foundation. In February 1965, he said, 195 sophomores were enrolled in Forestry, and by September of that year only four transferred to SU; in 1966, of 211, only nine had transferred; in 1967, of 241, eight had transferred; and in February 1968, of 245 sophomores enrolled only five had transferred to SU by September.

General harmony and satisfaction seems an accurate description of the College of Forestry. Most students believe their college meets its reputation, and most emphasized that the existing tensions within the college are minimal. And some expressed concern about student apathy, which could explain why the slight tensions are not larger.

Hands of Protest

Photographs by Clint Clemens

Music school features variety of concerts

Musical compositions in styles spanning the centuries are being offered by the School of Music during the 1969 Festival of the Arts. Emphasis is on the contemporary. Selections range from works of the baroque period through Aaron Copland, a Festival participant, to an electronic mixed media event by Aldo Tambellini.

The School's first offering will be a concert by members of Sigma Alpha Iota, the women's honorary music sorority, on Friday at 8:30 p.m. in Crouse College auditorium. They will sing six choruses from "The Women of Trachis" written in 1955 by Howard Boatwright, dean of the School of Music.

Sunday at 4 p.m. there will be a varied program of instrumental and vocal ensembles.

FESTIVAL OF ARTS

The Syracuse University Jazz Workshop will play arrangements and compositions for the large jazz band by Barton, Bernstein, Hefti, Kenton and others at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday in Crouse College. The 22-piece jazz ensemble, a student organization sponsored by the University, will be conducted by Stephen Marcone, a graduate assistant in the band department.

"Moonblack," a simultaneous television film-videotape performance, will be presented by its creator, Aldo Tambellini, in Gifford auditorium, on Friday at 8:30 p.m. Tambellini, a graduate of Syracuse University is a pioneer of intermedia, and a founder of the Black Gate, the first electromedia theatre of environmental lights and sounds in New York City.

Final offerings by the School of Music involve two performance appearances by American composer Aaron Copland. Copland will be guest conductor for the University Orchestra and Chorus concert on Sunday, May 4 at 2 p.m. in Crouse College auditorium. He will be soloist the following day at 8:30 p.m. for the final concert in the Krasner Chamber Music Ensemble series, also in Crouse College.

All events are free and open to the public except the May 5 ensemble concert.

Approximately 20 films by student filmmakers and "Films From the Ghetto" will be shown by the Center for Instructional Communications during the Festival of the Arts.

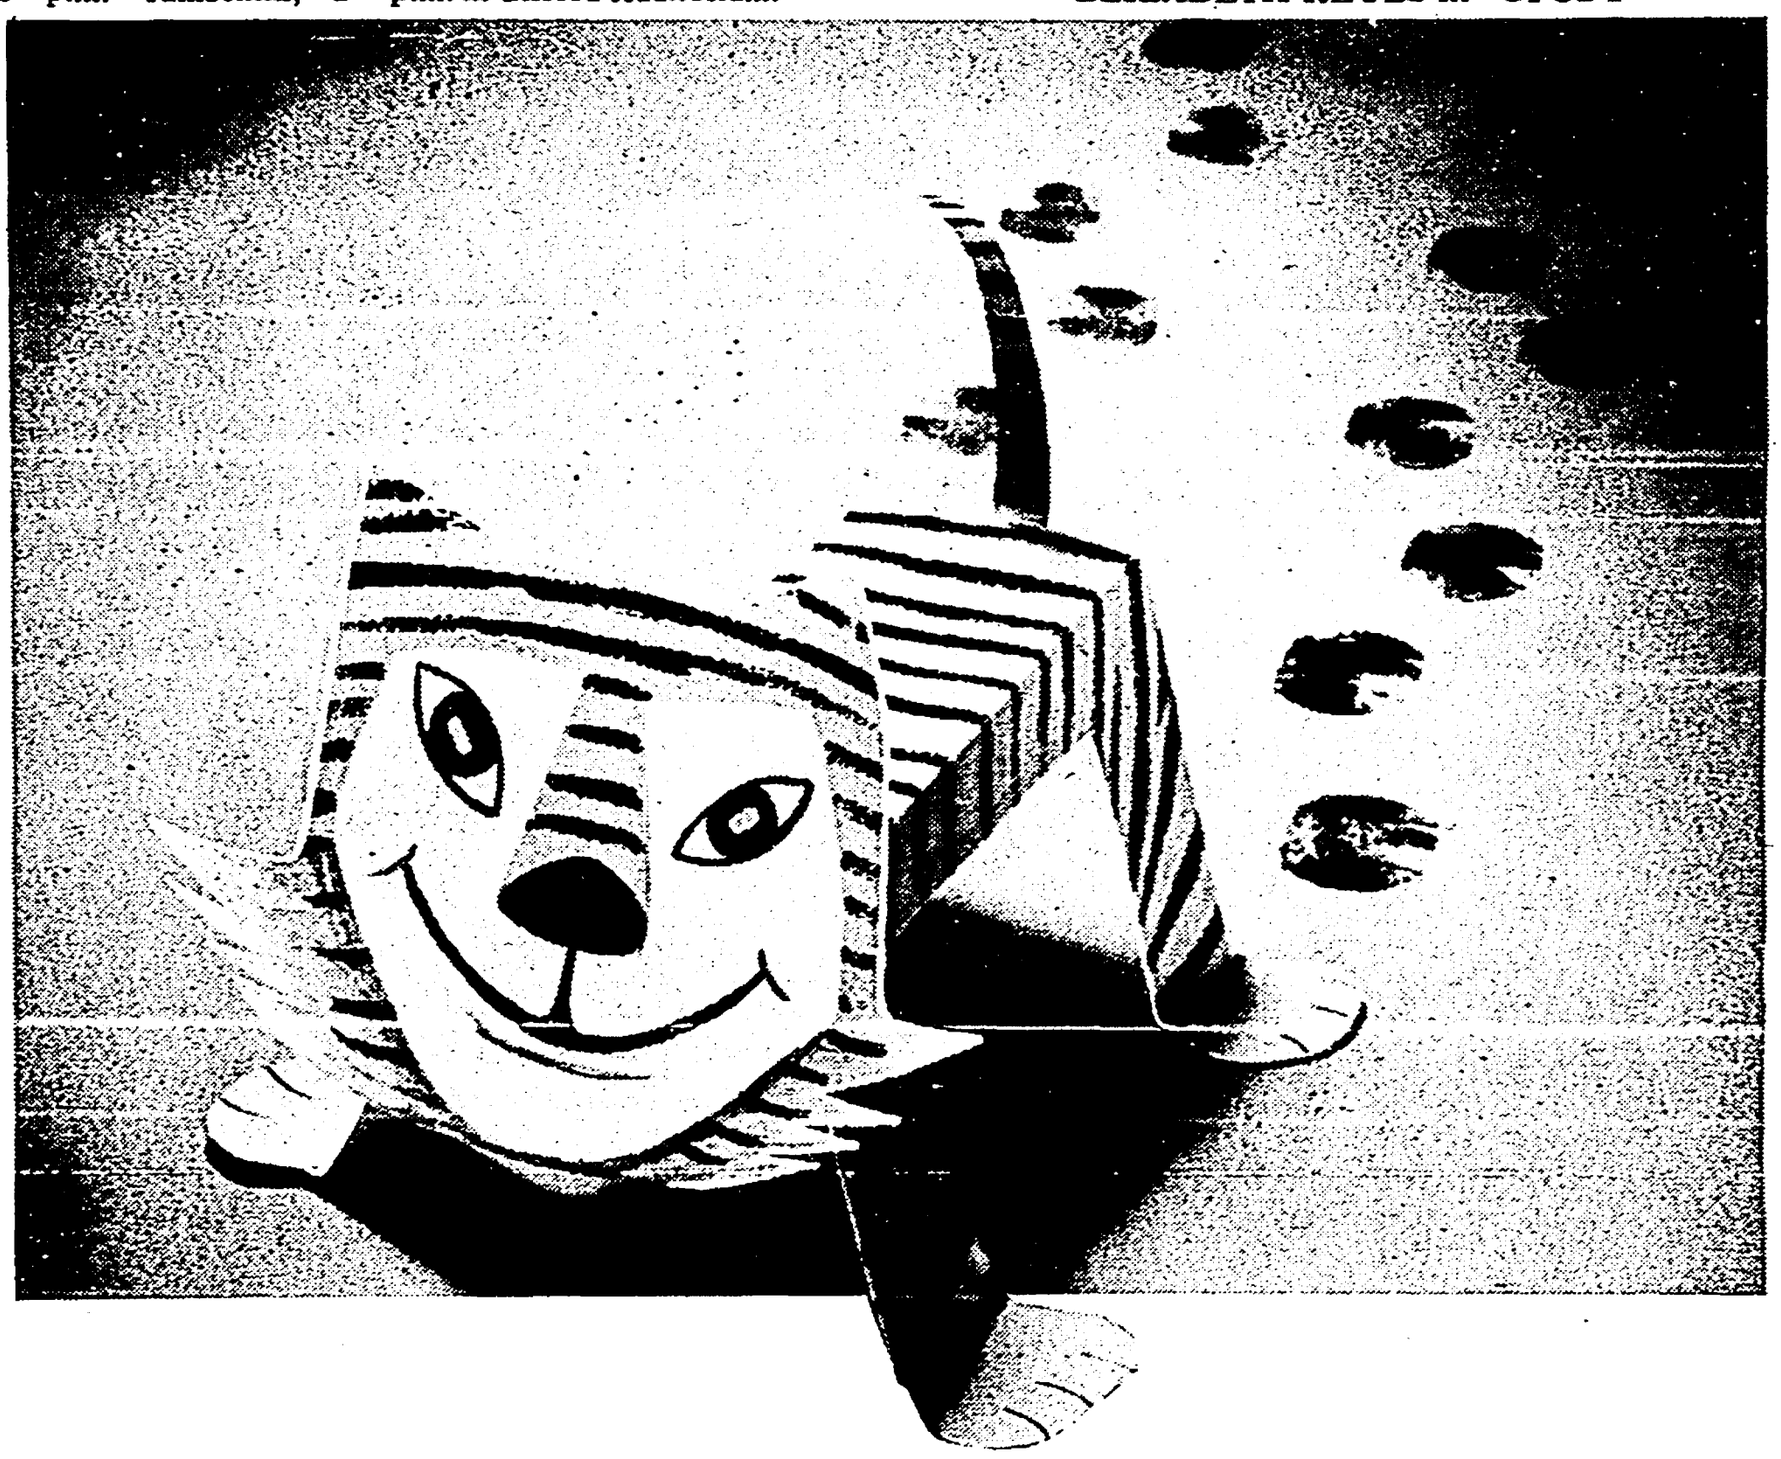
Three films produced in filmmaking classes at Southern Methodist University, Dallas, will be shown today at 7 and 9 p.m. in Gifford Auditorium.

ELIZABETH REYES in "OPUS I"

J-school features "Box of Tricks"

Visitors to the School of Journalism Building tomorrow afternoon will find the lobby filled with a 16-foot cube of white foamcor, a "Box of Tricks" open at the top for viewing from the balconies. A sequence of "tricks" presented in the box will be the School's contribution to the 1969 Festival of the Arts.

During the afternoon the "Box of Tricks" will serve as the world's largest bulletin board on which visitors may scrawl graffiti while the cube shakes with music.



Beginning tomorrow evening the box will offer "The Screen Scene," a multi-media presentation covering most aspects of communication from the appearance of life on earth through 3,000 A.D. Abstract motion pictures by Norman McLaren will be shown on two of the interior walls, with a combination slide and light show decorating the third wall, to the accompaniment of a sound track.

The "Box of Tricks" will become "The Negative Space" on Monday and Tuesday a photographic studio where visitors may have their portraits made and take photographs under the guidance of skilled photojournalists who are students at the School of Journalism. Ultra-modern developments in photography will be demonstrated. There will be a two-day photography contest with a prize, the entries to be voted for by spectators. There will also be a demonstration and talk on halography, or laser photography.

The cube will change to a "Press Box" on Wednesday and Thursday, a newspaper office with reporters who will interview visitors. Their stories and wire service copy will be edited and set in type on the spot and onlookers may try their hands at journalistic techniques. There will also be micro-film projection of headlines and layout since the early 1800s.

The final conversion, May 2 and 3, will be into a "Boob Tube Cube," a television studio where visitors can handle a television camera themselves. They can also sit in front of the camera and be interviewed, then see their performance played back on video tape. Campus radio station WAER will broadcast programs live.

The "Box" will be produced by students of the School of Journalism, in collaboration with the television-radio department and the Center for Instructional Communications. Faculty members working on the project are Dr. G. Harry McLaughlin, Erik Collins, Don Newgren and Ken Sheinkopf.

PAPER TIGERS NEED NOT APPLY.

Thanks, but they're just not our type. Young engineers who join us are expected to move in on some rather formidable programs . . . with alacrity and lots of gusto. And a willingness to assume early responsibilities on demanding assignments is an attribute which we welcome warmly. It's the kind of engineering aggressiveness that has brought Sikorsky Aircraft to dominant stature in a new world of advanced VTOL aircraft systems.

If our criteria parallel your outlook, you'll find an excellent career environment with us. You would enjoy working (with a select group) on exciting, full-spectrum systems development. And you can watch your talent and imagination assume reality in such diverse forms as Heavy-Lift Skycranes—Tilt Rotor Transports—High-Speed VTOL Commercial Transports—and much more for tomorrow.

Does this responsibility stir your imagination? Then you probably should be with us. There's ample opportunity for innovation in: aerodynamics • human factors engineering • automatic controls • structures engineering • weight prediction • systems analysis • operations research • reliability/maintainability engineering • autonavigation systems • computer technology • manufacturing engineering • information systems • marketing . . . and more.

And your career advancement can be materially assisted through our corporation-financed Graduate Study Program—available at many outstanding schools within our area.

Consult your College Placement Office for campus interview dates—or—for further information, write to Mr. Leo J. Shalvoy, Professional and Technical Employment.

Sikorsky Aircraft

U
A

STRATFORD, CONNECTICUT

Stiller, Meara here Sunday

The comedy team of Jerry Stiller and Anne Meara will perform at the awards banquet of the School of Speech and Dramatic Art Sunday at Drumlins Country Club.

Outstanding students in the School and in its various programs of study will receive awards. Dinner is 6:30 p.m. The program is expected to begin at 8 p.m. with the Stiller-Meara performance.

Stiller is a 1950 graduate of the School of Speech and Dramatic Art. He and his wife, both former Shakespearean actors, write all their own material, relying heavily on their Jewish/Irish-Catholic marriage for gags, through their characters Hershey Horowitz

The couple are familiar to television audiences through their appearances on The Ed Sullivan, Tonight, Merv Griffin and Mike Douglas Shows, and other variety shows including Kraft Music Hall.

We're putting our money where it does you the most good.

TWA is giving its people a million dollar bonus if they can make you happier than any other airline.

And you students are going to help make sure we put the money in the right pockets.

When you fly TWA, you'll get a ballot. Write in the names of the TWA people who gave you super service.

Drop your ballot into any of the bonus boxes you'll find at all of our terminals.

And we'll see that those people get rewarded with some of that money.

Now, for a change, you can have a chance to grade others on their work.

TWA

Our people make you happy.
We make them happy.

Campus Scene

University Union board elections, which were cancelled Wednesday night because of the boycott, will be held next week.

Policy Board positions, and those of Personnel Director and Public Relations Director, will be filled after interviews in Chapel House Wednesday, April 30, at 6:30 p.m.

Interviews for Programming Board positions, and for Cultrual Director and Social Director, will be held Thursday, May 1, at 6:30 p.m. Applicants for Development Board will be interviewed at 9:00 p.m. on May 1.

Typewritten applications for all positions should be submitted to Mary Franciosi, Haven Hall before Wednesday night.

Visitors arrive

Twenty-six students from 19 foreign countries attending Syracuse area high schools as American Field Service exchange students to foreign countries who are now SU students.

The international group will attend University classes and be briefed by SU students on such topics as the black power movement in the United States. In the evening they will attend a performance of "Summertree" at the University Regent Theatre. Tomorrow morning they will visit the various Festival of the Arts attractions on campus.

The visitors will have meals and sleep in University living centers.

Hillel elects

The Hillel Foundation has announced the results of elections for its Executive Board for the 1969-70 academic year. Heading the board as president is Steve Greenberg. Assisting Greenberg will be vice-presidents: Pete Basloe, Jane and Marion Perlmutter, Stuart Pobereskin and Danny Shein. Also elected were Nina Blendman, corresponding secretary; Lynn Kassirer, recording secretary and Anne Himelfarb, treasurer.

Big Chums

Lost: a freshman girl and guy last seen walking down the quad in a daze. They are both wearing an orange and blue beanie marked "Class of '73."

Next year over 2000 freshmen and transfer students will arrive on campus completely bewildered and scared. If each had a Big Chum or Big Sister to welcome him in the Fall and show them around Syracuse, his first impressions and orientations would be much more pleasant.

Show them that you care and adopt a girl or guy next year; you will undoubtedly find this a rewarding experience.

Go to the Women's Building and fill out an application. Your concern will be greatly appreciated.

Engineers dine

The senior class of the L.C. Smith College of Engineering will be honored at a dinner tonight at 8 p.m. at El Cid.

Dr. Ralph A. Galbraith, dean of the College, will pay special tribute to Paul M. Nakai, selected as the "best all-around senior."

Nakai received the Syracuse University Trustee Scholarship for 1967-68. He is a member of the senior class executive council, manager of the Varsity wrestling team and has been on the dean's list for five semesters.

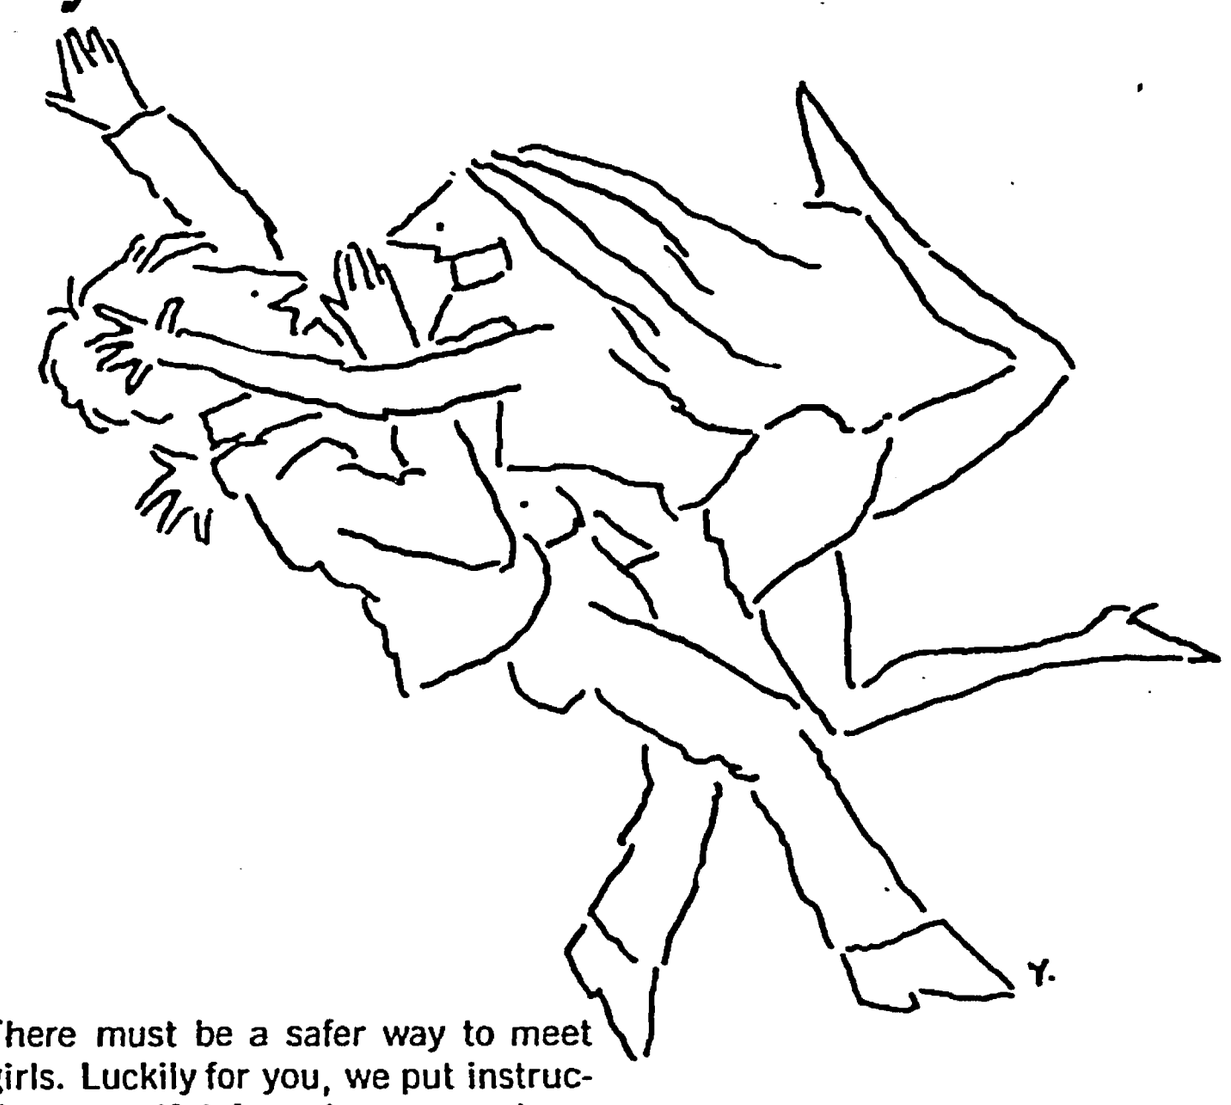
Hatcher accepts student invitation

Mayor Richard G. Hatcher of Gary, Ind., will visit Syracuse Monday to lecture on "The Potential Uses of Political Power to the Black Community." He will speak at 7:45 p.m. in Danforth United Church, 1641 S. Salina St., to Syracuse University students and others. Buses will leave from near Maxwell Hall at 7:15 p.m. for the church.

Hatcher was invited to Syracuse by student instructors in a new course, Black and White in America, which was organized and is taught by undergraduate students. These students and Syracuse's community youth organization, Black Youths United of Syracuse, are co-sponsoring the Hatcher program.

The lecture is free and open to the public.

Craig Baumgarten, student director of the Black and White in America course, said: "It's long past the time for Syracuse University to begin to meet its commitments to serve and relate to the surrounding community. Black and White in America, by holding Mayor Hatcher's lecture at Danforth, is taking a small step toward the desired goal."



He rose to prominence in Gary politics by championing the rights of the underprivileged. As a Councilman-at-large, he led the fight for one of the most hard hitting open occupancy laws in the country. He mustered community support, reintroduced the legislation of the city's public housing units time and time again. As a result of his action, public housing in Gary is now integrated.

Mayor Hatcher also was largely responsible for bringing the Neighborhood Youth Corps to Gary, so that young people can be given a start toward a productive work life.

In recognition of his service Mayor Hatcher has received several awards and honors. Among the most significant are the 1968 Gary Jaycees award as Outstanding Young Man of the Year, the first time a Gary Mayor received this honor, and the Loren Henry Award for outstanding achievement in civil rights, presented by the Indiana State NAACP in 1965.

The Mayor's professional associations includemembership in Phi Alpha Delta; the executive committee of the Gary Bar Association; and the Indiana and American Bar Association.

"What did you say your name was?"

There must be a safer way to meet girls. Luckily for you, we put instructions on self-defense in every package of Hai Karate® After Shave and Cologne. But even so, please be a little careful how you use it. A good social life is fine, but the way you're going you'll be too battered to enjoy it.

Hai Karate-be careful how you use it.

©1969 Leeming Div., Chas. Pfizer & Co., Inc., N.Y., N.Y. 10017

Would you believe: for JAZZ LP's which list price at $5.98 WHERE?

$2.97 !!

Record Runner

SOMETHING NEW !

HACKNEY HOUSE

COFFEE SHOP

Ice Cream Bar And Sandwich Shop
Open 7 A.M. to 7 P.M.
646 South Warren
HA 2-0341

You only have one body, take it to

The SCENE

Cili Drive and Towpath Rd. off Erie Blvd. in DeWitt

TONIGHT: ADMISSION ½ PRICE.

FREE TRAVEL GUIDE

FEATURING
KIBBUTZ HOLIDAYS IN ISRAEL
and Optional Archeological Dig

COLLEGIATES · CO-ED · 17-25

- 51 Days Israel, Italy, Switzerland, France — $ 995
- 52 Days Israel, Greece, Greek Isle Cruise, Italy — 1195
- 54 Days Israel, Italy, Switzerland, France, England — 1095
- 34 Days Israel and England — 795
- 22 Days Israel Holiday — 699
- 22 Days Israel, Italy, England — 749
- 45 Days Grand European Orbit (12 Countries) — 1250
- 22 Days Romantic European Swing (5 Countries) — 599
- 22 Days Classical Quest Italy and Greece — 639

RATES INCLUDE
ALL TRANSPORTATION
MEALS
ACCOMMODATIONS
SIGHTSEEING
TRANSFERS & MORE

Mail this coupon today: ➤

OR SEE YOUR FAVORITE TRAVEL AGENT

EASTOURS, Inc.
11 West 42nd St., 64C
New York, N.Y. 10036

Without cost or obligation, please rush free Collegiate Travel Guide to:

Name _____

Address _____

City, State, Zip _____

Autonomy . . .

(Continued from Page 5)

also declared he will give the proposal his full support.

● The Vice-Chancellor also agreed with SBU that a "predictable" system of tuition stabilization for four years should be initiated. With the institution of this proposal, incoming students would have an idea of how much they will have to spend over a four-year period of time, even with tuition increases.

● Another demand which Piskor has said he will bring to the trustees is that 20 per cent of the increase in the general student fee will be given to students to regulate student programs.

● Rule One, which states that a student may be asked to leave Syracuse University at any time because attendance is a privilege and not a right, is going to be rewritten, with emphasis on the fact that due process is available in all cases. SBU had demanded the elimination of this rule.

A study of the University Hill Corporation and increased regard for members of the outside community were the last two demands and were tabled until discussion at a future meeting. The other demand had been that students be placed on the curriculum committees in all departments. This has already been done to a great extent with proposals being initiated at this time to seat students on the committees where they are not

——Happenings on the Hill——

FRIDAY

(Items marked with * are part of the Festival of the Arts Friday.)

*ART STUDENTS' outdoor sale: Lowe Art Center, 1 pm.

*DRAMA CONVOCATION: "Once Upon a Mattress," 4 pm, New Theatre.

*STUDENT FILMS from other campuses, 7 and 9 pm, Gifford.

*DANCE: "Opus One," 8 pm, Dance Studio, Women's Building.

*DRAMA: One-Act Plays ("The Table" and "A Bullet For John"), 8 pm, Rehearsal Hall, New Theatre.

*SIGMA ALPHA Iota concert, 8:30 pm, Crouse College Auditorium.

*SYRAFINS: Synchronized swimming, 9 pm, Women's Building Pool.

*LECTURE: Jason Seley, Sculptor, 11 am, Gifford.

CHEMISTRY colloquium: "Stokes' Law and Self-Diffusion," Professor Robert Zwanzig, University of Maryland, 4 pm, Room 303, Browne Hall.

HILLEL SUPPER and Friday evening services: Supper 5:30 in Watson Dining Hall, Services 7:30 in Hendricks Chapel Dean McCombe will deliver the sermon.

UNIVERSITY UNION movie: "Gypsy," 6, 8, 10 pm, Kittredge.

SYRACUSE repertory theatre: "Summertree," by Ron Cowen. Directed by G. F. Reidenbaugh, 8 pm, Regent theatre. (Through Sunday, with Saturday 2:30 performance and Sunday 7:30). $3, $4, $4.50, $5, with $.50 student discount.

BLACK ART SHOW, Noble Room, Hendricks Chapel (through Sunday).

GRADUATE STUDENTS' pot-luck supper, 6-8 pm, Chapel House. Sponsored by the Lutheran Campus Ministry.

SATURDAY

*ART STUDENTS' outdoor sale: 10 am, Lowe Art Center.

*BOX OF TRICKS: "The Great Put-on," Newhouse Lobby, 1 pm.

*BOX OF TRICKS: "The Screen Scene," Newhouse Lobby, 7:30 pm.

*DRAMA: One Act Plays, see Friday schedule.

YOUNG PEOPLES science program: "Xrays for Determining Crystal Structures." Dr. Harry Brumberger, Room A-1, Newhouse.

ROMANCE LANGUAGES symposium: "In Honor of the Spanish Poet Damase Alonse," 15 visiting scholars and writers, 11 am and 2:30 pm, Physics Building Auditorium.

SYRACUSE FILM academy: "The Russians are Coming, the Russians are Coming," 7 and 9:30, Gifford, $1.

GREEK WEEK concert: Richie Havens, Sly and the Family Stone, War Memorial, 8:30 pm, $3.50.

ARABIC MOVIE: "Mawal," 6 and 8:30 pm, Kittredge. Sponsored by the Arabic Students Organization.

SUNDAY

*JOURNALISM graphics exhibit: 9 am, Newhouse Lobby (through May 3).

*SYRACUSE SINGERS: Earl George, Conductor, 4 pm, Crouse College Auditorium.

*BOX OF TRICKS: "The Screen Scene," Newhouse Lobby, 7:30 pm.

*GRADUATE STUDENTS in art exhibit: 9 am, Lowe Art Center (through May 19).

*HARRY AND MARIA Wickey collection: 9 am, Lowe Art Center (through May 19).

THERE WILL BE a meeting at 2 p.m. in Hendricks Chapel for all goons and alternates

ORTHODOX CHRISTIAN fellowship: Meeting 6:30 at Chapel House, 711 Comstock Ave. Discussion topic: "Mission or Ghetto."

HOLY COMMUNION, 10 am, Chapel House. Sponsored by the Lutheran Campus Ministry, coffee hour following service. Baby sitting and Sunday school provided for children.

X—CHANGE, with Buffet Supper and Discussion, 5:30 pm, Chapel House. Sponsored by Lutheran Campus Ministry and UCCF.

CO-OP LIVING? Girls interested in living in Hafts Cooperative Dorm next year attend informal Open House, 4-6 p.m. Refreshments provided.

MONDAY

*FILM PREMIERE: "Parrish Blue," 7 pm, Regent Theatrre.

*BOX OF TRICKS: "The Press Box," 7:30 pm, Newhouse Lobby.

*FILMS FROM THE ghetto, 8 and 10 pm, Gifford.

ART OF THE television commercial, Wallace Ross, Director, American Television Commercials Festival, 8:15, Regent Theatre.

BLACK GRADUATE STUDENTS meeting to discuss recruitment of Black Students at S.U., 11:30 am to 12:45 pm, Dr. John Johnson's office, Special Ed. Building.

ZOOLOGY SEMINAR: "Intercellular Adhension-A Molecular Approach," Dr. Charles Orr, Johns Hopkins University, 4 pm, 114 Lyman Hall.

LABORATORY OF sensory communication: "Recent Intra-cochlead Recordings," Thomas F. Weiss, Ph.D., Massachusetts Institute of Technology, 4 pm, Seminar Room, Laboratory of Sensory Communication, 821 University.

GOVERNMENT STRUCTURES committee will meet at 8:30 at the Orange.

GENERAL

BIG CHUM & big sister applications can be filled out NOW at the Women's Building—deadline is April 30.

$2.97 FOR JAZZ LP's
— 8 track car tape deck (Audiovox) $67 complete (speakers FREE !) — pioneer headphones.
Record Rumer
SE. 20: $16.95
SE. 30: $24.95
177 Marshall St.
Under 7 HR. Cleaners

Sing Along With
JANE and JOHN SNELL
on the Guitar
Folk Songs Every
Friday and Saturday
9 P.M. — 2 A.M.
HACKNEY HOUSE
646 South Warren
HA 2-0341
LUNCHEON, DINNER and SUPPER

AL MARKOWITZ FLORIST
offers Corsages of Roses or Orchids as low as $1.95 Cash and Carry with this ad.
AL MARKOWITZ
229 E. Fayette Street
474-5346

ALSO
The Butterfield Blues Band
Friday — May 2 — 8:30 p.m.
Onondaga War Memorial
Tickets now on sale at War Memorial Box Office, S. U. Corner Store, Wilson's Leading Jewelers.
$.5.50, $4.50, $3.50

COSMO
Pizza Shop
FAST
DELIVERY SERVICE
TO
ALL DORMS
GR 8-9231

The Russians Are Coming
The Russians Are Coming
Saturday 7 And 9:30
Gifford Auditorium
Syracuse Film Academy
Admission $1.00

Touring Europe in '69?
Remember
CZECHOSLOVAKIA!
It's easy to go there!
Meet the young people of Prague. See the historic landmarks: Hradcany Castle, Wenceslaus Square, the little Golden Street where Kafka lived, the oldest university in Central Europe. And gorge yourself on a feast of all the arts . . . Mediaeval to multi-media, Baroque and Rennaissance, Dvorak and rock, freecoes and films.
Not more than ninety minutes from the farthest point in Europe . .. Prague is one of the most exciting capitals in the world today and Bratislava, the romantic capital of Slovakia on the Danube is just an hour's drive from Vienna.
Group tours from $57 per person for 7 days, all incl.
Visas issued within 48 hours.
Contact your travel agent or write for information:

CEDOK CZECHOSLOVAK TRAVEL BUREAU
10 East 40th Street, New York, N.Y. 10016
Name:
Address:
City
State Zip
My travel agent is:

World news roundup

Paris--Allies offered three concessions in Vietnam talks. The U.S. is now willing to discuss military and political issues simultaneously without waiting for a decrease in hostilities. The South Vietnamese no longer demand that the Viet Cong renounce their Communist affiliation as the price of political acceptance. Troop withdrawal was conceded to have first priority in the talks.

• • •

Vietnam--B-52 bombers in successive waves attacked North Vietnamese troop units yesterday in what was said to be the heaviest Allied offensive to date.

• • •

Hong Kong--Radio Peking said the 9th National Congress of Red China's Communist party ended with two results. A new central committee was formed and Defense Minister Lin Piao was designated as next party chairman.

• • •

Lebanon--A curfew was imposed after fighting broke out between police and Palestinian refugees demanding that the government help Arab guerrillas against Israel. Sixteen persons were killed, 100 wounded and the Lebanese president resigned as fighting continued into its second day. From Cairo came a statement that it no longer considers itself bound by the 1967 truce agreement.

Washington--President Nixon wants a one cent raise on first class mail and hiked rates on post cards, second and third class mail in order to cut the deficit of the Post Office,

• • •

Miami--Doctors transplanted organs from one female donor to two male recipients.

• • •

Boston--The federal government has appealed a district court ruling which declared that the draft law unconstitutionally discriminates against those who calim consciencious objector status on other than religious grounds. The appeal will go directly to the Supreme Court since it involves an act of Congress declared unconstitutional by a district court.

• • •

Vietnam--B-52 bombers in successive waves attacked North Vietnamese troop units yesterday in what was said to be the heaviest Allied offensive to date. Killed in Vietnam last week were 216 American servicemen and 1,602 were wounded. South Vietnamese forces last 329 men. The Communist body count totaled 3,379.

• • •

Belfast, Ireland--Militant Protestants, rebelling against a decision to give equal voting rights to Catholics, blew up the city's water main, making water rationing necessary. Some 10,000 police reserves were called out to enforce security measures.

• • •

Cambodia--Increased communist guerrilla activities were reported by the Cambodian government to be stimulated by the restoration of diplomatic relations with the U.S.

• • •

France--Results of one public opinion poll of French voters who have made up their mind on the referendum, show DeGaulle may be forced to make good his threat of stepping down if confidence is lost on the vote this Sunday.

• • •

Washington--A release reported six more destroyers were sent to the Sea of Japan, making the total number in the area 29.

• • •

Washington--Arnold Chase, assistant commissioner of the Labor Department's Bureau of Statistics, predicted it will be at least three to four months before the nation sees any slowdown in the rate of price increases.

Subjects Needed for Physiological Study

Qualifications: Male or female - 21 to 35 years of age, with at least a high school education. Participants will be paid $15.00 for two sessions of approximately 2 hours each. Only morning appointments are available. If interested call Upstate Medical Center, 473-5775; ask for Mrs. Jessen.

WANTED:

BANJO PLAYER

Friday and Saturday Nights

ONE PIANO PLAYER

(Old Time Music)

FRIDAY and SATURDAY

Miller's Gay 90's

437-5652

JIFFY KING

SPECIAL

Monday thru Friday, 2-5 p.m.

10¢ OFF ALL SUBS

727 South Crouse

in the Arcade

L. G. Balfour Co.

FRATERNITY and

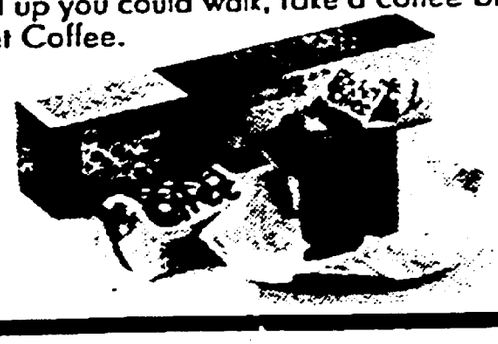
COLLEGE JEWELERS

729 S. Crouse Ave.
Syracuse, New York

Carl Sorenson, Mgr.

GR 5-7837

Pocket Coffee! What's that?



A new kind of coffee break for discouraged drivers.

Whether you drive a taxi, the school shuttle or the car pool, behind the wheel you're behind the 8-ball. Lights that don't change, mid-town traffic, Sunday drivers, bad tippers, cranky kids. A coffee break would sure help.

Pocket Coffee was invented for you. It looks like a piece of candy: it's a lot more. A delicious chocolate shell filled with real liquid coffee. Coffee break coffee. Wrapped and packed in a handy 3 candy pocket, Pocket Coffee's a great traveler.

When you can't stop, when you're stuck in traffic, or, so fed up you could walk, take a coffee break. Reach for Pocket Coffee.

Campus Classified

GR 6-5571, Ext. 2314

Rates minimum of 15 words:

1 day	1.15
2 days	2.25
3 days	3.30
4 days	4.30
5 days	5.25
6 days	6:15

To place a classified ad, call GR 6-5571, ext. 2314, between 1 and 3 p.m. Ad must be placed 2 days in advance. Every word over 15 costs 5c extra per day.

ALL ADS MUST BE PREPAID.

MISCELLANEOUS

RENT if you can't buy! T.V.s, tape recorders, typewriters. By week, month or semester. Reasonable rates. S. U. BOOKSTORE. GR 6-5541, x 2426.

ALTERATIONS DONE within 24 hours. Call for an appointment. Lillian Potter, 207 Comstock. 478-5847.

PRIVATE DRIVING LESSONS — automatic or standard shift. Full or refresher courses. Qualified professional instructors. Pickup service. Auto Driving Academy. GR 6-3995.

NEED A SUMMER JOB? Syracuse YMCA Camp Tousey has openings for Unit Directors, counselors, riding master and waterfront director. Five hundred acre site with 55 staff and 160 campers on Millsite Lake near Redwood, New York Spend a challenging and rewarding summer working with boys 9 - 14 years old. For details and application, write Robert Fiske, YMCA, 340 Montgomery St., Syracuse, New York 13202.

FREE ROOM AND BOARD in exchange for twelve hours a week. Pool, tennis court. DeWitt on bus line. Ability to drive and swim required. 446-6458.

LOST — Bell "Shorty" helmet. April 17 on Comstock Ave. Please return to Doug Chara x2918.

SUMMER CAMP COUNSELORS — 1.) Program Director - Adirondack Area, minimum age, 21, scouting experience preferred, salary - $500 to $600 for season, family accommodations provided. 2.) Aquatics Director - Adirondack Area and Oneida Lake Area, minimum age, 21, salary - $500 to $600 for season, family accommodations provided (Adirondacks only). 3.) Provisional Scoutmaster - Oneida Lake Area, minimum age, 21, scouting experience preferred, salary $500 for season. 4.) Nurse - Oneida Lake area, minimum age - 21, R. N., Practical or certified First Aider, salary - $300 to $400 for season, family accommodations provided. 5.) Maintenance Man - Adirondack Area, minimum age, 18, must b. good driver, salary $300 to $350 for season. 6) Archery Instructors - Adirondack Area, minimum age, 18, salary - $200 to $250 for season. Season, June 22 to August 12. Onondaga Council Boy Scouts of America, 600 West Genesee St., Syracuse, N. Y., 474-8574.

MEN AND WOMEN — Distribute Proctor and Gamble samples in Syracuse metro area. Work is similiar to that of a mail man. Full or ½ days. $1.75 per hour for more information call Mr. Dennis Prenevost anytime at 475-4352.

WE HAVE PART TIME OPENINGS for Inspectors. Must be 21, and have a car. No selling or collection work. Can earn up to $2.50 per hour. Openings available immediately. Prefer persons with 20-40 hours per week. For information call 475-8421.

TRIP WITH WENDI — Europe '69 Group flights on Pan Am. Best dates, best prices. Limited seats available. 475-9642.

FOR SALE

VW CAMPER SPECIAL — Many extras. $650. Call Peter Rennert 478-1480.

'66 RAMBLER American 220. Very good condition. Pritchard, x3244 or x2861 or 446-4939.

150 c.c. VESPA. Excellent condition. best offer over $200. Call John 476-1866, 475-4681 after 5.

MG-TD, 1952. Excellent condition $1200 Phone 472-3932 after 1 p.m.

1968 BSA — 250 c.c., excellent shape. Call 478-5954 between 4 and 10 p.m. Only serious inquiries.

'63 CORVAIR 700 — Gold, body good, automatic, 4 dr., easy to park - easy to drive. $295.00. 472-8967.

FOR RENT

APARTMENTS all over the city. Nicely furnished, 1, 2, and 3 bedrooms. $85.00 up. GL 8-6100, 458-6101.

APARTMENT TO SUBLET, furnished one bedroom apartment. 5 minutes from campus. Call Morris ext. 2821 or 478-8705 $110/month includes utilities.

NEED A SUMMER PAD WITH POOL? Call 472-3420.

FURNISHED ROOMS — share kitchen and baths. Singles. $12.50; doubles $10.00. Call 422-2871.

FURNISHED APARTMENT — Henry Street — 2 blocks from campus. kitchenette. 1 bedroom. living room. complete bath with shower. Downstairs. 2 private entrances. Off street parking. $110.00 per mo. Call 422-5564 days 476-1481 evenings and weekends.

APARTMENTS — furnished or unfurnished. 3 rooms. utilities. near campus. Call x3030. 472-8223 or 475-1631.

APARTMENT TO SUBLET (June - August) furnished, 4 rooms, on campus. $100/month Call 478-4421.

WANTED

FACULTY COUPLE — Looking for furnished or unfurnished two or three bedroom house or apartment near university. Academic year 1969-70. Call 655-9078.

STUDENTS - for part time positions - option for summer work. $3.15 per hour. Flexible hours. Call 463-3735 weekdays, 3-5 p.m.

RIDE TO WORK. weekdays 8:30 to 5. Valentine Drive. North Syracuse to/from corner University Avenue and Place. Phone extension 2105.

ONE OR TWO FEMALE roommates for summer. Furnished apartment. walking distance. Call Ellen. 472-8661.

TYPING

DISSERTATIONS, THESES, AND TERM papers. IBM electric typewriter. 40c per page 5c per copy. 446-2841. Mrs. Miller.

THIRTY YEARS EXPERIENCE. Dissertations, term papers, proof-read. Satisfaction guaranteed., Mrs. Raymond Webb. HE 7-8259.

TAKE YOUR MANUSCRIPT to the only professional typing and printing service serving the S. U. area. The knowledge and experience of having done over 2,000 theses and dissertations is behind every job we turn out. Stephanie's Office Service. 469-2795.

COACH BILL SANFORD'S crew team continues practice here in preparation for their bid for the Goes Cup tomorrow on Lake Onondaga. The orangemen face tough competition from Cornell and highly favored Navy. (Photo by Robinson)

Orange SPORTS

SU crew squad optimistic on chances in Goes Cup

By EDWARD WYSOCKI
O–J Sports Writer

The Syracuse crew team will be rowing tomorrow at 2:30 out on Lake Onondaga but it will not be one of their daily practice sessions. They will be facing the crews of Navy and Cornell for the Goes Cup and Navy is favored to win. The team is not picked to place high nationally but they would not be surprised if they defeat Navy tomorrow and go on to an outstanding season.

The uninitiated would wrongly say that a shell is no more than a machine moving to the coxswain's orders but they are rather a mind that functions together because they row together everyday and have been doing so since last September.

The Syracuse crew consists of over 40 students who really like what they are doing. They also know what they are doing and Coach Bill Sanford confirms that fact. "The upperclassmen are the most consistent I've seen. They are tough their times are good and consistent."

Coach Gary MacLaclan of the freshmen team feels that the freshmen are fast and could prove a surprise.

Crew is one of the minor sports at Syracuse. Their are no scholarships yet the team has been working since school started. During November and December they worked out in the tank in the gym where they practiced their techniques and built up their endurance. They also followed a weight training and running program designed to get them into even better shape.

In January they took to there shells again to row throughout the ice in Lake Onondaga, following Coach Sanford in the launch as he broke up the ice before them. They have been rowing ever since.

Over spring break they gave up most of their vacation to row their 60 ft. long shells that they power with eight 14 ft. cars. The shells cost $3,000 a piece and are made of 1/8 in. cedar and over the months of practice some crew members have been less than careful in getting into their thin walled shells.

In talking with members of team you sense their quiet confidence in themselves and their teammates. A freshman member of the team said, "Crew is mentally taxing but that is what makes it a worthwhile experience. It's something that you are not sorry you went our for."

A sophomore who joined the team because of a friend's influence said, "Little things added together make crew satisfying for me. As bodies were in good shape but in conditioning we are very good. We're going to place high in the top 10."

Rowing in sleet, rain, snow and hail has made the team into a unit and in spring camp that unit came into harmony. The freshmen got their heads shaved and in the traditional pillow fight got some heads together that really did not want to get together.

Navy and Cornell are the first opponents tomorrow and Coach Sanford feels that "Navy is strong." He said "The workouts during the week before the race will show us if we can win on Saturday. The race will be won during practice. We have to cut four seconds off of our 2000 meter times."

Coach Sanford's big worry is the lack of depth of the varsity, "We have only two varsity spares and that lack of depth hurts the competition between the boats. We only have two varsity boats but I would prefer to have a third so they could push the second. It is not that the varsity isn't working but that the extra pressure would be good."

Weekend Roundup

Syracuse teams face opposition on four fronts this weekend. Crew opens its season tomorrow with hopes to capture the Goes Cup as it competes against Cornell and favored Navy on Lake Onondaga. Lacrosse is looking to add another victory to its undefeated season. Baseball will try to pull closer to the .500 mark after being rained out on Wednesday and yesterday, while the track team faces tough competition in the "City of Brotherly Love."

Syracuse lacrosse looks to make it seven straight as it faces a strong Hofstra team tomorrow night on Long Island. The magnitude of their victory may not equal that of their whipping of Clarkson Wednesday, but if they play with the same quality chances are they will walk off with another win.

The baseball team, carrying a 1-3-1 record thus far, faces a doubleheader with Penn State tomorrow on Syracuse home ground. Their game with RPI was rained out yesterday and has been rescheduled. Syracuse hopes that it can control Penn with a good showing by their strong pitching staff, trying to avoid a hitting duel which could be fatal to the orangemen.

Philadelphia is the site for today's Penn Relays, where Syracuse track's hope for victory rest on the efforts of Larry Zuller in the mile event and Guy Roberts in the 600 or 880 yard events. Competition will be tough in facing over 7,000 college and high school opponents, especially after remaining idle last weekend as the Queens Relays were rained out in New York City.

Are there minor sports?

By JAY WILSON
O–J Sports Writer

Students today will no longer sit back and swallow administration policy which they find difficult to digest. Such is the case in their discontentment with athletic administration concerning major and minor sports at Syracuse. However, off in the distant kitchen, the department administrators feel that, whether we know it or not, this is what we ordered. So seemed the overall opinion of Lawrence A. Kimball, dirctor of sports information for S.U.

When asked about the effect student complaints possible have on future athletic department policy, Kimball responded that he was not aware such strong contrasting opinion existed on campus.

Pursuing an answer to the discrepancy over "major" and "minor" sports at Syracuse he said, "I think it is unfortunate that we have resorted to such terminology in discussing sports on campus. In my opinion there is no such thing as 'major' and 'minor' sports." He felt it is only human nature for coaches and players to think of their sport as most important, but offered public acceptance of certain sports as the reason why one is stressed more than the next.

Influential in this acceptance is the fact that today people in America have more leisure time, money and television. In the 1930's baseball was the sport the public primarily followed, and the influence was carried down into the college level. Today more stress has turned to football, basketball and hockey. Professional golf also is viewed over television by millions today, while it does not lend itself to mass audience attendance. Accordingly, sports at the college level such as golf and crew are followed almost solely by the sports enthusiastis. Tradition is also important in deciding which sports are stressed by various colleges. Very few schools across the country boast close to 10 major sports, as does Southern Cal. Traditionally, Lehigh has been a wrestling powerhouse, while football there is not as well followed. At Syracuse we lay claim to football and, more recently, basketball. In football, no other university in this country matches Syracuse's 19 consecutive winning seasons under one coach. You might say this is a result of the calibre of our competition, but beside the less potent of our Big Five area rivals we do face some formidable foes.

If you don't dig tradition there is the old yoke of money. As Kimball stated, "Any school is going to do the best they can with their resources. Everyone has to work within the framework of their budget." Football, even if it were not our major "major" sport, requires a larger chunk of this budget than do other sports. One outstanding reason for this is because football is a "numbers game." With 11 men on the field and the platoon system backing them, quite a sum is needed to medical facilities. Then there is the toucy area of athletic scholarships. If we are going to attract talent to football and basketball we must use the majority of these limited scholarships to do so.

As for practice facilities, we certainly cannot deny that football and basketball teams require access to a more extensive and costly physical plant. With Syracuse's limited resources, the less patronized sports must make certain concessions. The facilities provided for the wrestling team, for example, are considered adequate for the sport, but at less than the level of most prospering colleges.

On the other hand, if we are going to invest in sports wisely, we should receive a return for the university–monetary as well as notoriety. Receipts from attendance at football and basektball events and from television showings offer such a return. If we are going to have sports at all, let's be realistic, they might as well bring in money while they offer what we ordered anyway, know it or not.

Minor sports can't get to first base here!

DAILY ORANGE

Syracuse University's Daily Newspaper Since 1903

Vol. 67, No. 95 | Syracuse, New York, Tuesday, April 29, 1969 | 10 Cents

MAYOR RICHARD G. HATCHER of Gary, Ind., spoke to SU students and Syracuse residents last night.

Hatcher criticizes national priorities

By RONI ZLOKOWER
Associate Editor

"Whatever values and priorities our government adheres to, the blacks and the poor do not come first," said Richard D. Hatcher, the first black mayor of Gary, Ind., last night in Danforth United Church in a talk sponsored by SU's Black and White in America course and the Black United Youth of Syracuse.

"The big question to ask ourselves," he said, "is what sort of people are the Americans? The answer is most frightening when you think of the 300 years of atrocities against the blacks, of the year 1865 when the chains were taken off black bodies and put on black minds, of 100 years of lynching of blacks by whites, and of the devastation of a small country in South East Asia which bears no real relevance to our nation's security."

Hatcher stated that it is frightening when we pay farmers not to produce food while people in the South, in Harlem and in Biafra are starving.

"The real threat to this nation's security is not from without but from within, and millions of Americans don't realize the seriousness of the situation," he ventured.

Hatcher feels that white America is not ready to live up to its Constitution and lofty principles. "In this country the creed is 'get what you can, any way you can'."

The only time there is a call for law and order, he said, is when the ethnic minorities begin to act the way majorities always have.

Mayor Hatcher said that it would be an understatement to say that the urban scene is "bleak." He cited the denial of skills to blacks, public schools which serve as "segregated detention centers, a dire lack of housing, and air and water pollution as some signs of this "bleakness."

"Galbraith's 'affluent society' doesn't exist if we look at the ugliness of our cities. Even the most affluent are poor, since they compose a society which is determined not to solve its own problems," he said.

Hatcher called LBJ's war on poverty "hardly more than a skirmish."

"The poor, both black and

(Continued on Page 7)

Challenge posed to discipline rule

The Students for a Better University (SBU) met yesterday to discuss Rule One with Chancellor William P. Tolley. SBU had listed the changing of the rule as one it its 11 demands made last week as part of the boycott on Wednesday.

Rule One reads: "Attendance at the University is a privilege and not a right and the University may cancel a student's registration for any cause determined through University established procedures.

"The Board of Trustees delegates disciplinary authority to the Chancellor who exercises this authority through designated administrative officers and through various committees and groups established specifically to handle disciplinary matters," states the rule in Dates and Data. It concludes by saying processes used and decisions made by the administrative officers, committees and groups may be reviewed by the Chancellor at his discretion.

During the meeting, Tolley stated that he considers his reviewing authority as another board of appeal for a student and that he has not handled a disciplinary case during his 27-year term as Chancellor, according to an SBU spokesman.

(Continued on Page 7)

SU dean pioneers in rights decision

By JOHN WISNIEWSKI

In a 2-to-1 decision last week, the United States Court of Appeals ruled that a New York State prisoner has the right to a jury trial before being transferred to a state mental hospital.

George J. Alexander, associate dean of the College of Law, and Mrs. Faith Seidenberg, Syracuse attorney, presented the winning brief in a case involving a 64-year-old prisoner.

In 1931 Roy Schuster shot and killed his wife and wounded their lawyer in the latter's office. The wife had been threatening to divorce Schuster. He was found guilty of murder in the second degree and was sentenced to 25 years to life imprisonment.

Ten years later, while serving his sentence in Clinton State Prison, Schuster accused prison officials of being corrupt. He was then examined by a prison physician who found him "a paranoid and suspicious." Schuster was immediately transferred to the Dannemora State Hospital for the Criminal Insane.

While still in Clinton, he taught a course leading to a high school equivalency certificate and expected to be paroled in 1948 with time off for good behavior.

In 1950 Schuster, without legal aid, unsuccessfully began petitioning state courts for his release. He finally asked for a writ of habeas corpus in Federal court. Lawyers were assigned to his case and when Schuster's plea was rejected the matter was taken to the Court of Appeals.

Professor Alexander explained that he worked on the Schuster case for two years. He outlined the main arguments presented on behalf of the prisoner:

- Schuster did not have an adequate hearing on the question of his sanity.
- He was denied equal protection of law, because the legal procedures through which Schuster was committed to Dannemora differed from those applied to civilians.
- Schuster's confinement was cruel and unjust punishemnt, because he was placed in Dannemora without treatment.

In the court's 30-page opinion the concurring judges said:

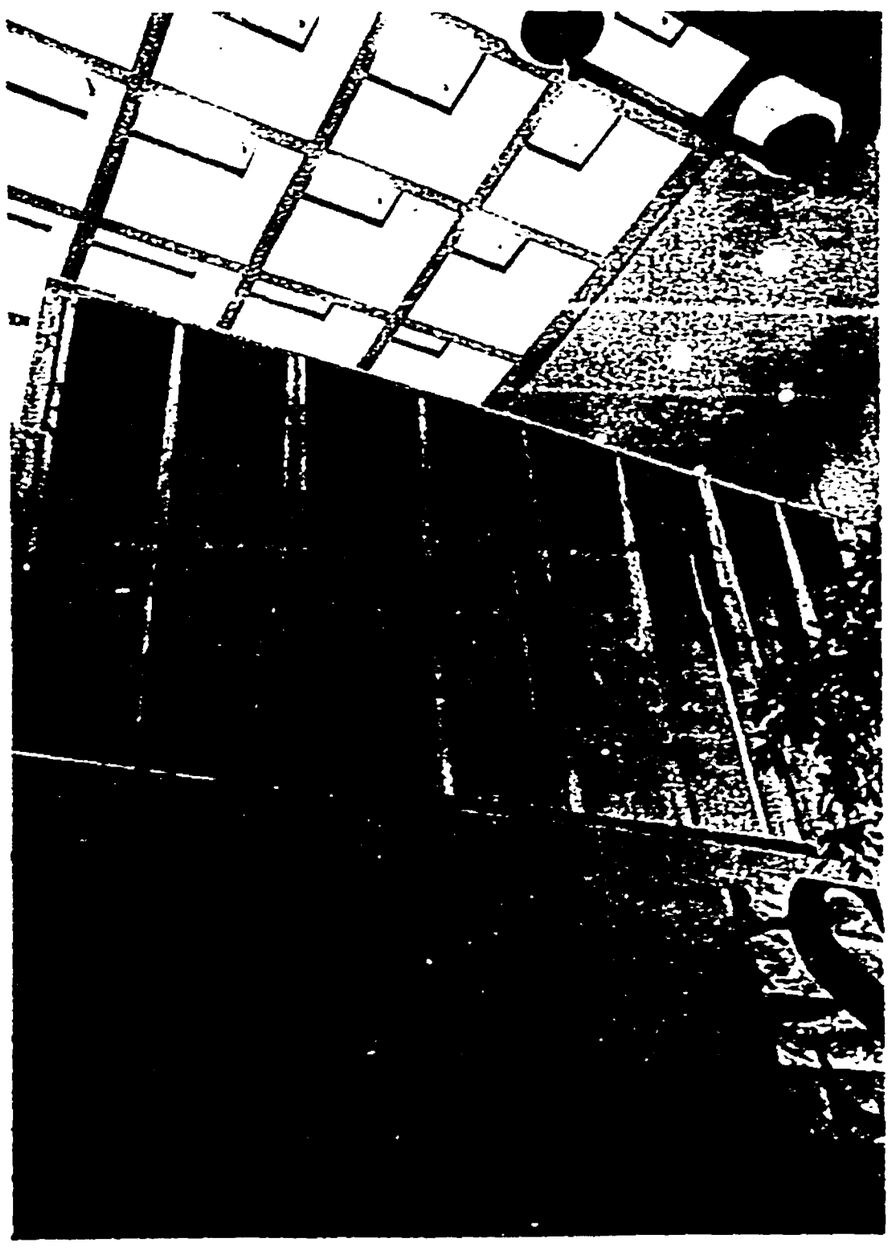
"We have, thankfully, come a long way from the days when ignorance induced fear of the mentally ill. As great strides in psychiatric knowledge have been paralleled by evolving concepts of due process, humane procedures for the commitment and treatment of the mentally ill have replaced snakepits and witchhunts."

In reaching the decision, the court acted upon the first two arguments presented by Alexander. Commenting favorably on the third, the court said of Schuster:

"He is simply a forgotten man in a mental institution which has nothing to offer him. He receives no treatment, is not occupied in therapy of any kind."

The court ruling has immediate affect in New York, Connecticut and Vermont. Alexander said the decision is also expected to affect the remaining states as well. "Within three or four years we'll see this issue tested in the other states and hopefully adopted," he concluded.

Box of tricks features films, photo contest



A "Box of Tricks," sponsored by the University's journalism, television-radio and Center for Instructional Communications departments, and housed in the Newhouse lobby, is one feature of Syracuse University's Festival of the Arts this week.

Tonight, from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m., the Box will feature "Negative Space," including a photo contest for faculty, students and amateur photographers, to be judged by visitors; a photo studio with pictures developed and displayed almost immediately; and a LASER demonstration. In addition, short photography films will be shown.

"The Press Box" moves in Wednesday and Thursday nights, also from 7:30 - 10:30 p.m. It will feature press room scenes from three ears depicting the way major stories were handled each time. Featured stories include "Remember the Main," 1890; a gangster story of the twenties; and the assasination of John F. Kennedy from the present time. Copies of the newspapers will be flashed on screens during the presentation.

Also on display will be different news room equipment, including teletype and Fotofax machines. A copy desk in the

(Continued on Page 6)

BOX OF TRICKS today will feature a photo contest to be judged by visitors, a photo studio with "instant" pictures, a LASER demonstration, and short photography films. (Photo by Clemens)

Toomey-Abbott Towers

Dorm complex shared by elderly

By JOAN BERKES

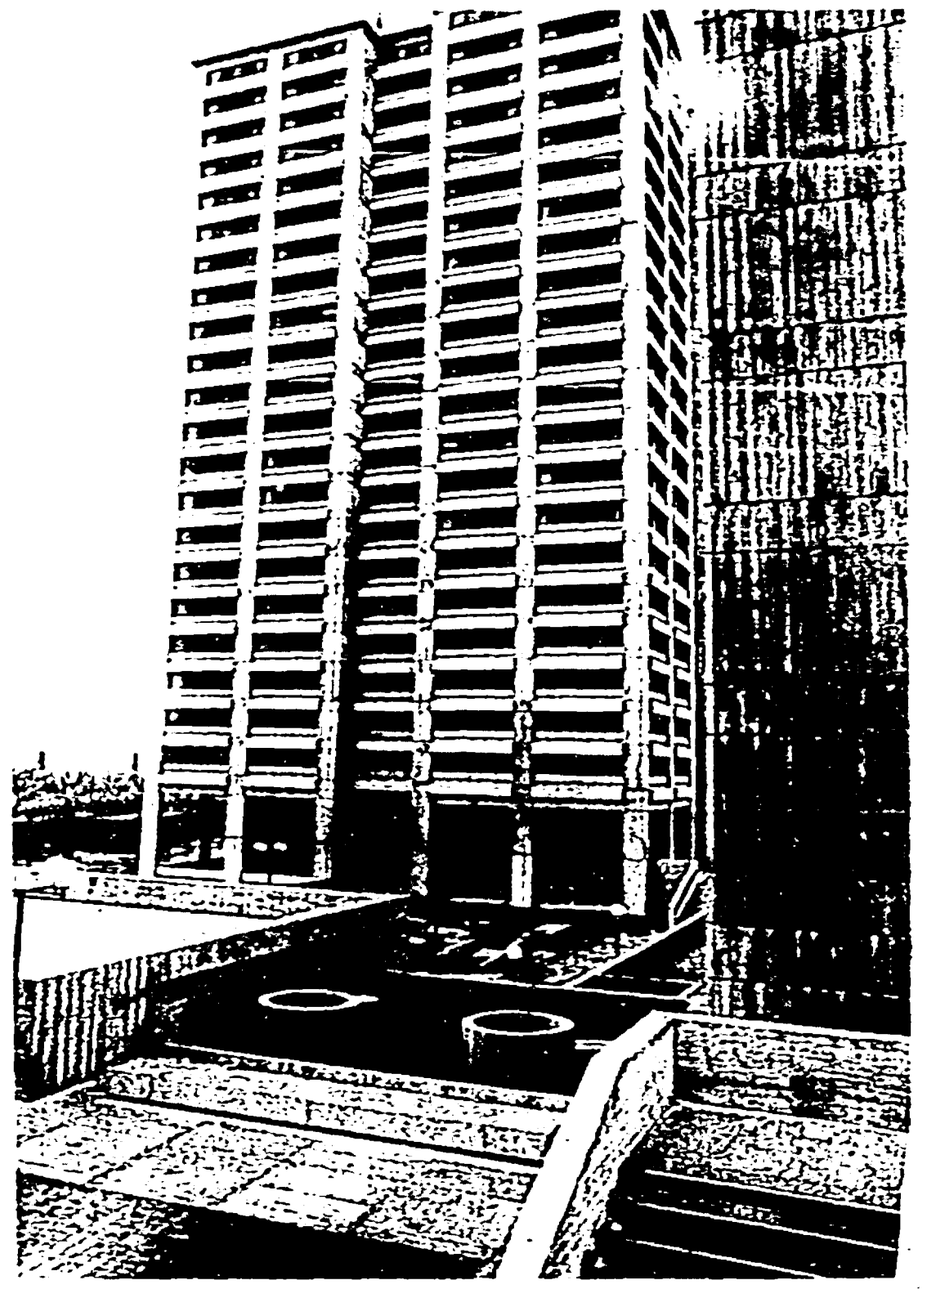
St. Mary's Dorm has presented to its residents a host of new experiences and challenges - the experience of moving into an uncompleted building in September; of contending with roving workmen and construction machinery being started up 7 every morning; the experience of a co-ed living center; the challenges of food service, familiar to anyone who has ever suffered strange stomach pains - in general, the experiences resulting from living in a relatively complete community complex.

No community, however, canbe a complete living reality if it consists only of young people. For St. Mary's, no such problem need exist, for right next door is something else new to most students, a geriatrics housing center for senior citizens.

This housing complex, named Toomey-Abbott Towers, appears naturally to be part of the dorm. It was designed by the same architects responsible for St. Mary's, but the construction of Toomey-Abbott was undertaken by the Syracuse Housing Authority, while St. Mary's was the responsibility of the University.

Twenty-four stories high, the tallest building in the entire complex, Toomey-Abbott Towers provides neat, modern low-income apartments for New York state residents over 62 years of age. Monthly rent is determined mostly by the income and resources of the residents. To be eligible for residence, however, income must be limited. For example, an individual desiring to lease an apartment must have an annual income of less than $3500; a couple, less than $3745; and for three, less than $4280.

Other requirements which must be met are age, which is modified in the case of disabled persons, and residency: applicants must be New York State residents for at least a year before they can move into Toomey-Abbott.



The apartments derive their name from two men: Monsignor Toomey worked with Catholic charities in Syracuse and Abbott was a welfare commissioner.

Together by Necessity

One might wonder how a city housing center for senior citizens and a university dormitory, so opposite from each other in character, came to be built side by side. They were not, according to James V. Latorre, Assistant to the Vice President of Administration and Research, brought together by design. Part of the land involved was owned by the University, part by the city, and both needed it.

Mrs. Marlene Cottet of the Syracuse Housing Authority explains further that one stipulation which must be met in erecting any kind of city housing project is that the project help clear slum land. The Housing Authority was able to buy some of the land from the university as well, and so the two living centers were built.

Location alone, however, does not guarantee that the residents of the buildings will ever mix with one another. Students see senior citizens moving in, and the older folks see college students walking around, but the trend would not be towards meeting each other. To encourage more communication between the two groups, a visiting program has been initiated in St. Mary's by one of the resident advisors, Tom McHugh.

HOUSING FOR SENIOR CITIZENS is offered in the Toomey-Abbott Towers section of the St. Mary's dorm complex. With residents all over 62 years of age, the apartments create a more complete "experience in living" for students living in the adjacent dorms. (Photo by Clemens)

While only in its beginning stages, the program is providing an opportunity for students to go into the apartments to visit people who might be lonely or just enjoy talking. McHugh said that about 30 people responded to a letter sent out to all St. Mary's residents explaining the idea. These students were provided with a list of names, compiled by the Housing Authority, of people they thought would enjoy a student's company for a few minutes. Students have been visiting these people since.

Mr. McHugh feels that the program is appropriate, "since they are our neighbors; but the idea is not to force ourselves on them, but to set up communications so they can get in touch with us. Some people over there would enjoy somebody talking to them, and if they want this they can indicate it."

The experience would be gratifying not only to the senior citizens, though. As Mr. McHugh points out, "Students might wish to talk to someone with an interesting background or to find something out." These people have lived through much of what students can only study in history out of books, and many of them are interested in relating their experiences.

Mr. McHugh would like to see more contact between students and their neighbors, perhaps in the form of bulletins describing the dorm and announcing programs in the multi-purpose room. At least, he believes, a communications system should be set up "to tell them what the dorm is, instead of having them stare out their windows at three grey, cold buildings."

Students who have already visited enjoy the experience, and the older people seem pleased to have students take an interest in them and their lives and knowledge.

The present occupants of Toomey-Abbott are facing many of the same problems which

(Continued on Page 7)

Havens in heaven

TAKING HIS AUDIENCE along on a mind-bending trip, Richie Havens wafted into the War Memorial for a burning concert Sunday. (Photo by Clemens)

ANGUS H. TWOMBLY — Editor-in-Chief

MANAGING EDITOR - Alan Stamm EXECUTIVE EDITOR - Karen Wiediger NEWS EDITOR - Fred Tuccillo EDITORIAL DIRECTOR - David A. Ross COPY EDITOR - Jean Havens FEATURE EDITOR - Roz Mazer SPORTS EDITOR - Mike Weber CAMPUS AFFAIRS EDITOR - Larry Kramer PHOTOGRAPHY EDITOR - Clint Clemens ASSOCIATE EDITORS - Andrij Bilyk, Kay Christensen, Beth Hillson, Rona Kavee, Helene Macdonald, Charles Shapiro, Dan Schlossberg, Patti Williams, Roni Ziokower.

DAILY ORANGE

Syracuse University's Daily Newspaper Since 1903

TUESDAY, APRIL 29, 1969 PAGE 3

STEVEN P. STROBRIDGE — Business Manager

ASSISTANT BUSINESS MANAGER— Art Depasqua, NATIONAL ADVERTISING MANAGER— Janet Meyer ACCOUNT EXECUTIVES— Roger Black, Jim Maney, Mike Greenstein.

Published Tuesday, through Friday during the academic year by students of Syracuse University. Offices located at 200 Brooklea Drive, Fayetteville, N.Y., and 1101 East Adams St., Syracuse, New York. Entered as Second Class matter at the U.S. Post Office, Fayetteville, N.Y. 13066.

Washed-up?

The confrontation has come and gone. No, not the class boycott, the water fight. Thousands of frenzied students ran amuck in what the downtown papers term the SU "rites of spring." We have delved deeper than the sensational headlines, however, to bring you the behind-the-scenes story of the water fight. In traditional fine journalistic style we crossed the police barricades and interviewed this year's water fight chairman Zeke Loomis. Loomis, traditions chairman of Alpha Zeta Bupkis and IFC TGIF coordinator, is a Home Economics major planning for a career in trust busting.

DO: How would you rate the progress made by the water fight?

Zeke: We're about to go into a meeting with the Chancellor, and we think he's going to meet our demands. We feel that we've shown the Administration that the students are 100 per cent behind us. We also proved that the fire hydrants work.

DO: What was the real reason for this confrontation? Academics? Autonomy?

Zeke: Actually, we're for decency, and we felt that a water fight was the best way to confront an indecent Administration. We've drawn up a list of 340 decent demands to be presented to the Administration.

DO: Are there any other specific grievances that you would care to air?

Zeke: We're trying to get the University to revoke Rod Steiger's Centennial Medal, cancel all inherently obscene rock concerts, book only Up With People, and to censor the DO and the Pro, snipping out any references to dirty words.

DO: Do you plan to escalate your confrontation?

Zeke: Only if the Chancellor thwarts our decent efforts, but we doubt that will happen. I happen to know that he blushes if the word "sex" appears in the DO. But if worse comes to worse, we plan to lead the students in a water fight using hard water against non-student targets.

DO: You don't mean....?

Zeke: Yes, we will attack the most blantantly obscene thing on campus, the Dingleman.

John Benson, '68, alias WORM, is currently serving his country in a bootcamp in Pensacola, Florida.

University Union defended

Ira Kurzban, a sophomore majoring in political philosophy, is chairman of University Union. David Fried, a sophomore journalism major, is programing director of Jabberwocky.

My immediate reaction to the editorial in last Friday's Daily Orange, "UU means Boo Hoo," was that Jacques Lebel has done a great disservice to the student body, for which he claims to be so concerned, by not clarifying his vested interest in the relationship of the Student Centennial Committee to University Union. It seems he is still crying over the decision by the Student Centennial Committee, of which he is a member, to support UU as the organizing and coordinating body for the building program. Lebel is frustrated because the entennial Committee overwhelmingly rejected his proposal to scrap the Development Board of University Union and find another alternative.

But rather than discuss Lebel's personal problems or his claim that UU workers are "obsessive-compulsive neurotics" which is childish at best and libelous at worst, I would like to take this opportunity to examine some of his criticisms and answer some of the questions he has raised.

In terms of restructuring the Development Board of UU for the fund raising project, Lebel knows that we have agreed to do this and that we've also asked the members of the Centennial Committee to help us. As of the present time I still haven't received any helpful or constructive suggestions by Lebel to restructure our Development Board. In another respect though, I think he is being very naive if he believes that restructuring is the way to get something accomplished. Rather, it is the individual people, the creative, thoughtful and intelligent people, who can reform government from within. I believe that the most effective change willwill come from the people who work in University Union. At the Centennial meeting I attended, I asked the members of that Committee and any other people they thought could be helpful, to apply for a position on any of the UU boards. Again, I publicly extend this invitation to Lebel, the members of the committee, and aanyone on campus whether he be a graduate, undergraduate, faculty, trustee or administrator, to apply for a position on any of the UU boards.

Ira Kurzban and David Fried

In light of Lebel's unjust and I might add-unresearched criticism concerning what UU has done in the past year, I would like to clarify and publicize some of the things we have been doing in recent weeks. The day before Lebel's editorial was published, the student architect on our Development Board, along with the new Vice-Chairman of UU and myself, presented to the Design Board a proposed site for the Union building. We had been working on the proposal long before Lebel was even concerned about a University Union at Syracuse. The presentation was received favorably and, although no action was taken at the time, the matter will again be brought to the trustees attention at their May 2 meeting. I might add, though, that it is very rare for a building site to be picked before fund raising has begun. Our thoughts then are now directed at the present time toward making the Union building the number one fund raising project of the University. Vice-Chancellor Piskor, and Victor Colway, the comptroller for the University, have both agreed to strongly support this demand at the May 2 meeting. During the past week University Union has also contracted Max Andrews, who is one of the foremost consultants on Student Union buildings. He has agreed to work with us and will be coming to campus the 9 and 10 of May. At this time we will arrange his itinerary so that he can have open meetings with students, faculty and administrators. Andrew's schedule will be made available to all students on campus who wish to attend the meetings.

In closing I would like to say what I said to the Student Centennial Committee over a month ago. We are all students at the University and we all want to see a Union building on this campus. It would be a disservice and a disgrace to the student body if we were too busy obstructing one another to work together for a goal that we both want.

Soviet expert lecturing tonight; bolted Communist Party in 1949

Wolfgang Leonhard, one of the West's most eminent Soviet specialists, will speak at the Public Affairs and Citizenship lecture today at 8 p.m. in Hendricks Chapel.

Leonhard received a rigorous Communist education after he was taken to Russia at the age of 13 by his mother, a German Communist who vanished during the Great Purge. In 1943, after graduating from the Comintern School in Ufa, he was sent back to Moscow to join the Soviet-sponsored National Committee for Free Germany, where he was prepared for his return to Germany in 1945.

During the following years, he held a number of important positions in the Party hierarchy of the Soviet Zone. He broke with his masters in 1949 and fled to West Germany, where he now lives.

Currently a visiting professor of history at Yale University, Leonhard contributes to many publications and is the author of two widely-hailed books, "Child of the Revolution" and "The Kremlin Since Stalin."

UU elections set this week; 19 board posts to be decided University Union elections for next year's board positions will be conducted Wednesday and Thursday, according to UU vice-chairman Mary Franciosi.

Applicants for the 19 places may be undergraduate or graduate students, or faculty members. Present board members must reapply if they want to hold the same post next year.

Applications of two typewritten pages or less must be turned in to Mary Franciosi, Haven Hall, before 9 p.m. Wednesday. They should include name, address, extension, other extracurricular commitments, qualifications and plans for the position.

Policy board positions include:

Jabberwocky Director, who administers the Student Activities Center in Kimmel.

Programming Director, who is responsible for all UU activities including films, The Place, and special events.

Development Director, who coordinates efforts to build a union building.

News Bureau Director, who handles all press releases.

Secretary, who takes minutes at policy board meetings, manages the office, and acts as communications link for the three boards.

Concert Chairman, who is responsible for running all UU concerts.

Programming board positions are:

Place Director, who is in charge of programming and maintenance of The Place.

Social Events Director, who is responsible for running dances, raffles and student entertainment programs.

Cultural Events Director, who is responsible for running Bull Sessions, lectures, plays, art shows, etc.

Film Director, who manages the Friday night movies and special film series.

Advertising Director, who is in charge of posters and special advertising campaigns.

Secretary, who is responsible for minutes and clerical work for the board.

Development Board positions include:

Research Director, who checks facts related to development Board activities.

Fund-raising Director, who is in charge of fund-raising campaigns the the union building.

Architectural Director, who studies building designs, estimates and costs.

Public Relations Director, who prepares all public relations material for the Development board.

Secretary, who keeps minutes and records of the Development board.

Vice Chairman's staff:

Personnel Director, who is in charge or recruitment, leadership training conferences and other training programs.

Public Relations Director, coordinates the general public relations programs which include news articles, press conferences and other major publicity.

Policy Board applicants will be considered on Wednesday at 7:30 at the Chapel House. Applicants for the Programming Board should appear at Chapel House on Thursday at 6:30.

EDWARD HOMMEL & SONS
OPTICIANS

VANDERBILT SQ. CENTER
127 S. SALINA ST.
FREE PARKING
474-4644
EYEGLASSES & CONTACT LENSES
Telex Hearing Aids —REPAIRS—

PROCTER & GAMBLE

Procter & Gamble Needs You
To distribute free samples from door to door. Work similar to mailman. $1.75 per hour. Possible advancement and travel for those qualified. Apply - New York State Division of Employment - 677 S. Salina St., Syracuse. Apply in person, neatly dressed.

An equal opportunity employer

We encourage job-hopping. We do try to keep it intramural—within Du Pont that is—and we do have a more formal title for it, "planned mobility."

Saylor Gilbert, CH.E., V.P.I., 1962, tells it like it is.

It only means we don't put you in a training program. We put you in growth jobs—to help you get to the top of your field the way you want to get there.

"Take a good look around you, and you'll see people at Du Pont who've had a lot of movement through very different kinds of jobs. There's no doubt that this diverse experience helps you. For example, I had four assignments concerned with different aspects of polymerizing, casting, stretching and finishing our polyester film base."

"Having had all this, I feel I was better prepared for my present position of training supervisor. But aside from the fact that variety can help you, I believe most people just like a change after working at one job for a period of time."

Your Du Pont recruiter will be a guy like Saylor.. Ask him about planned mobility—or anything else you'd like to know about Du Pont. Mailing the coupon is the surest way to get in touch with him.

Du Pont Company
Room 6687
Wilmington, DE 19898

I'd like your latest information on opportunities at Du Pont for graduates with degrees in_____

Name_____

University_____

Degree_____ Graduation Date_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____ Zip_____

An Equal Opportunity Employer (M/F)

DU PONT

College Relations

Sign up here for the annual Du Pont job-hopping competition.

ALSO
The Butterfield Blues Band
Friday — May 2 — 8:30 p.m.
Onondaga War Memorial
Tickets now on sale at War Memorial Box Office, S. U. Corner Store, Wilson's Leading Jewelers.
$5.50, $4.50, $3.50

To increase understanding . . .

Psychiatric Hospital conducting open house

A 35-year-old, four-story building in the Upstate Medical Center complex, Syracuse Psychiatric Hospital (SPH) looks like any other building on University hill. Students walking by on Irving Avenue may notice the greenhouse on the front lawn and see basketballers playing nearby. But not all students know that these activities are a part of innovation changes in dealing with the problems of the mentally ill. In addition, the hospital provides fristhand learning situations.

Remembering her first trip to the hospital, Barbara Schrader, second semester senior from Mohawk, New York said: "I had previously visited a larger mental hospital some time ago and expected to find bars on the windows, starched uniforms, identical haircuts and drab clothing. I was pleasantly surprised to find none of these at SPH. But my biggest surprise came at the end of the hospital tour when we discovered that our guide was a patient. When we asked her why she was here she answered: 'I'm just like you. I have problems like yours but I just can't handle them alone.' This was one of the most direct definitions of mental illness I'd ever heard," Barbara said.

A second reaction came from Jackie Smith from Highland Falls, New York: "The nurse at SPH is no longer the keeper of the keys as she was in the old asylum. She takes a more professional role in total patient care."

Barbara and Jackie are two of the 11 University nursing students receiving their psychiatric clinical experience at Syracuse Psychiatric Hospital.

In the School of Social Work there is a course entitled "Field of Practice in Mental Health" with students spending much of their time at SPH. A student will work with an individual patient and attend weekly group discussions at the hospital.

In addition, many students volunteer time at the hospital. Graduate students in Mental Health Information get experience in informing the public through such work and those majoring in Psychology and Sociology devote time each week. Lauri Levinger, a drama major, conducted a patient drama group last semester.

To familiarize other students who have not visited the hospital, staff, patients and volunteers are conducting an Open House Thursday between 1 and 5 p.m. The purpose is to create a deeper understanding of mental illness, its prevention and its treatment at the Hospital.

"Students are our real hope for improving future mental care," said Dr. G. Anthony Ives, Development Consultant at SPH. "I hope everyone at the University will attend the Open House--and ask questions."

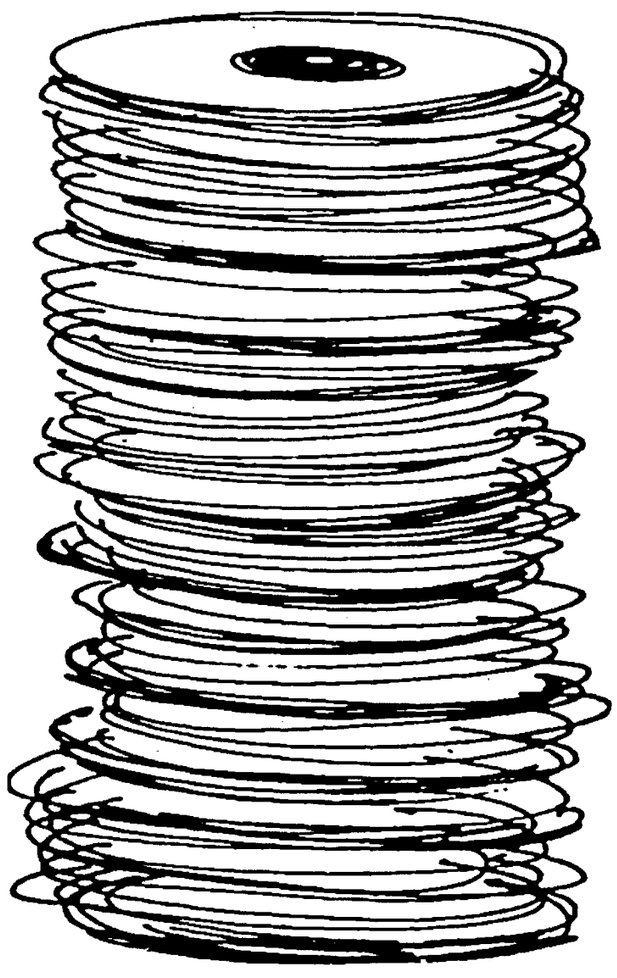
A comprehensive community mental health center, SPH operates, in part, to gather information for the New York State Department of Mental Hygiene. More important, the 130-member-staff strives to assist people with personal and mental problems and return them to their jobs, homes and community as quickly as possible.

The procedures in use have been developed to produce a more community-based approach to mental illness. People are free to come and go and uniforms are not worn by staff or patients. In addition, the patient helps select the therapy that he may require. Patients are regarded as individuals, people with their own lives, who, with help and guidance, can return to the community.

Information of such ideas and procedures will be highlighted at the Open House. Movies, printed material, displays and examples of modern therapy are planned for the afternoon.

HAPPINESS IS MUTUAL for this elderly citizen who spends his days at Syracuse Psychiatric Hospital's Geriatric Day Care Center and Coralee Cole, a graduate student in Mental Health Information at the School of Jornalism.

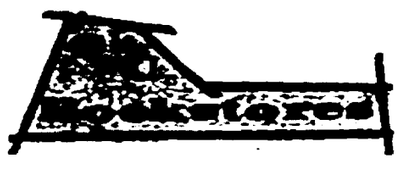
Mayor William F. Walsh at 2 p.m. will present a Certificate of Achievement to the Psychiatric Aide of the Year to Charles Knickerbocker. An attendant in the Hospital's Geriatric Day Care program, Knickerbocker was cited for his devotion and concern in motivating and substaining the elderly people at the Geriatric Center.



The mayor will be introduced by Sidney L. Manes, President of the Onondaga County Mental Health Association. The annual Award is given by the National Association for Mental Health to the psychiatric attendant most "representative of the collective advancements" rendered by the attendants at the Hospital.

Miss Emily Daw, an 86-year-old former teacher, will receive the award for the Volunteer of the Year from Dr. Ives. Miss Daw volunteered more than 170 hours in the past year. She has helped several patients prepare for their High School Equivalency exams.

"We hope the Open House will help cement the word community into our work as a community mental health center," said one staff member. "We want people to know about us. To know what we're trying to accomplish and how we do it."



Incredible Sound.
Incredible Price.

Would you believe. From $1.19

WHAT A WAY TO MAKE BEAUTIFUL MUSIC.

Come in and browse, through our new selection of specially priced Classical recordings.

THE CORNER STORE

Pocket Coffee! What's that?

A new kind of coffee break for the man on the move.

The man who dreamed up Pocket Coffee figured there were probably a lot of people around who at one time or another couldn't take a coffee break when they needed one. The only way they could get their coffee was to carry it with them.

Eureka! He thought up a way of putting some real brewed liquid coffee inside a delicious chocolate shell.

He called it Pocket Coffee because it's the coffee break you can carry with you in your pocket or purse, even your glove compartment. Glove Coffee????

Happenings on the Hill

TUESDAY

"LIGHT AS AN ART FORM" lecture will now be held at 4 p.m. in the 4th floor rotunda of Slocum Hall. This is an Arts Festival event sponsored by the School of Architecture.

SENATE ELECTIONS at 7:30 in 117 Lyman. Strict attendence and voting regulations will be enforced. Seating will be alphabetized so come early.

ALPHA CHI OMEGA little sister meeting will be held at 8 p.m. in the classroom below the office. Exec Committee meeting there at 7 p.m.

TIRED OF institutional dorm life? Want something more independent than a frat? Looking for relief from the high cost of living? Co-op II open house at 7 p.m. We cook our own meals, maintain our house, elect our R.A. 1017 Harrison St. north end of Walnut Park. Questions call X2768.

RUSSIAN CLUB CHORUS meeting tonight, 6 p.m. in 227 HBC.

ALL GOONS who preferenced the Big Chum committee should meet for an organizational meeting, 7 p.m. in Shaw Rec. Room Lounge.

A JUNIOR WELLS record can be yours if you know your blues. Last week no one knew who Blind Boy Fuller was. Listen to Over Yonders Wall, tonight on WAER, 88.3 FM from 7:30 to 9:20.

ATTENTION SPORTS FANS the WAA tennis team takes the courts against William Smith today. Excitement guaranteed.

ETA PI UPSILON meeting tonight 9 p.m. in Newhouse Lounge. For actives and pledges.

LACROSSE FIENDS--don't hide! The WAA Lacrosse Club is where you should be on Tuesdays from 4-5 p.m. on the field or in Gym B.

NEWMAN Any Catholic interested in learning about the workings and duties of the Parish Council should attend a one-hour meeting tonight, 6:30 p.m. at the Newman Center. Any interested Catholic is eligible to apply for a position.

OUTING CLUB meeting tonight, 7:15 p.m., Room 207 HL. Program and discussion of Lake George. Everyone welcome.

FREE JAZZ CONCERT tonight 8:30 p.m. Crouse Aud. as part of Festival of Arts.

DEADLINE TODAY for Big Chum or Big Sister applications at Women's Bldg.

RUSSIAN CLUB will present slides of the Soviet Union, including major cities and Central Asia, today, 7 p.m. in Women's Bldg. Alumnae Lounge.

DATES AND DATA We will hold our third and last meeting for the new Dates and Data in Room 204, Women's Bldg. 3 p.m. today. All Goons who signed up for TC&P, please come also--Summer Orange and Goon Gazette will be discussed.

WAA MEETING today, 7 p.m. Board Room.

DEBATE UNION will hold the annual Presidential Debate tonight, 8 p.m. in St. Mary's multipurpose room. Topic: Resolved that civil disobedience is a privilege, not a right. If you want to speak, call Bob Putnam, X-2184.

CONTRARY TO RUMOR, the WAA Softball Club is very much alive and well. So-fair participations in the national pastime--the place to be is the field or Gym A on Wednesdays from 4-5 p.m.

HOME EC ADVISORY BOARD applications are due May 5 in the Home Ec office. Application should include: name, campus address, extension, major and year. Also the applicant's ideas regarding a Home Ec education and the role of the Advisory Board. Questions? Call Helen X-2663 or Robin X-3793.

UU ELECTIONS tomorrow, 6:30 p.m. for Policy Board positions and Public Relations Director. Thursday, 6:30 p.m. for Programming Board and Cultural and Social directors. Thursday, 9 p.m. for Development Board positions. All applications must be submitted to Mary Franciosi, Haven Hall, before tomorrow night.

HOME EC SENIORS wishing to serve on the Selection Committee for the school Advisory Board should call Robin Ericson, X-3793.

MAKE MORE MONEY selling Pros. We still need salesmen who want to make $5-10 for an hour or more of fun work. Interested? Call Skippy or Bobby G. at X-3140.

GENERAL

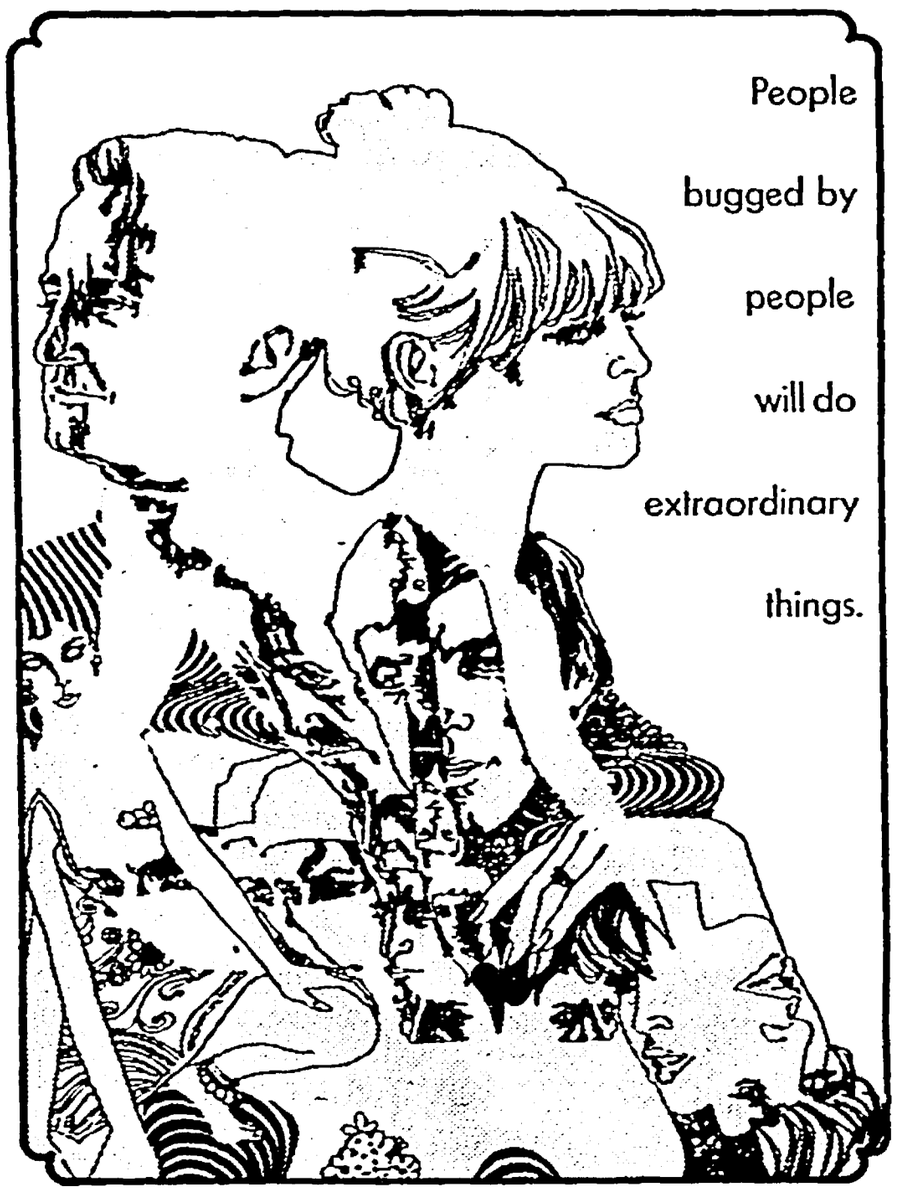
BIG CHUM & big sister applications can be filled out NOW at the Women's Building--deadline is April 30.

Box . . .

(Continued from page 1)

center of the Box will enable visitors to edit copy themselves and participate in news room activity.

Friday and Saturday nights will be devoted to "The Boob Tube Cube." This will feature a "Tonight Show" format involving the audience in 15-minute taped shows which will be replayed during the night.



TEACHERS

STUDENTS

$230 ROUND TRIP TO LONDON; $250 ROUND TRIP TO PARIS/AMSTERDAM AND LONDON BY SCHEDULED JETS OF MAJOR AIRLINES. Several departures this summer. Write for brochure to Division NSA, Travel Wholesalers, ITT Building, Washington, D.C. 20036.

ITALIAN FILM SERIES
presents
The Nights Of Cabiria
FELLINI FILM
with: Giulietta Masina
KITTREDGE - Tuesday - April 29 - 7 and 9 p.m. - $1.

JULIE CHRISTIE · GEORGE C. SCOTT
IN A RICHARD LESTER–RAYMOND WAGNER PRODUCTION

Petulia
...the uncommon movie.

CO-STARRING
RICHARD CHAMBERLAIN AS DAVID DANNER
ARTHUR HILL · SHIRLEY KNIGHT and JOSEPH COTTEN AS MR. DANNER
Based on a novel by John Haste · Music Composed and Conducted by John Barry
SCREENPLAY BY LAWRENCE B. MARCUS · ASSOCIATE PRODUCER DENIS O'DELL · PRODUCED BY RAYMOND WAGNER · DIRECTED BY RICHARD LESTER
SUGGESTED FOR MATURE AUDIENCES · TECHNICOLOR® FROM WARNER BROS.-SEVEN ARTS

film forum
gifford auditorium
syracuse university
$1.00
May 5, 6, 7
7 & 9 p.m.
$1.00

It can manage the whole team.

A Volkswagen Station Wagon will take half a ball game to a ball game.

It will hold nine players, fifteen pieces of luggage, balls, bats, bases and a goodly supply of crying towels.

It will do all that while averaging a good 23 miles to a gallon of gasoline. (A feat comparable to hitting .400 or winning 30 games.)

It will do all that on 5 pints of oil instead of 5 quarts. (Like going 5 for 5 instead of 5 for 20.)

It will do all that without a radiator. (No water to boil over, no errors.)

And finally it will do all that for as little as $2672.*

Now.

Let's play ball.

Don Cain Volkswagen, Inc.
1000 West Hiawatha Blvd.
Syracuse
472-4371

Precision Autos, Inc.
on: Bridge St.
East Syracuse
(Across from Gem. Dept. Store)
GI 6-7700

AUTHORIZED DEALER

Squire cited as leading student

By PATTI WILLIAMS
Associate Editor

Former WAER Program Director Jason Squire was named outstanding student in the School of Speech and Dramatic Art at the school's award banquet Sunday. Squire received the Ethel Disinger Award for the most outstanding School of Speech student and an award for the most outstanding radio-television major.

The Hugh Massey Tilroe Award for the most promising underclassman went to another WAER staffer, sophomore Lynn Friedman. She is an announcer at WAER.

Winner of the Speech Advisory Council award for the senior with the highest cumulative average was Gail Pitman. She also received the award for the outstanding student in audiology and speech pathology. The Zeta Phi Eta-Sigma Tau Rho award for the senior with the highest cumulative average in speech subjects went to Virginia Steeper.

Recipients of departmental awards were: Richard Graves, drama; Sally Cloninger, interpretation; Richard Herrman, public address and Linda Smith, speech education.

The following debate awards were presented: parlimentary debate award, Robert Vitello; American intercollegiate debate award, Carl Dworkin; and Bullingslinger award, James McHugh.

Winner of the White-Dennison speech contest was Paul Stavis.

Rule one . . .

(Continued from page 1)

Tolley also told the students he will take "Rule One" to the Board of Trustees at their meeting Friday and ask them to make explicit what he now considers is implicit in the language of the statement.

Jim G. Carleton, dean of student services, had stated at a meeting of students and administrators last week that the rule might be reworded for the next publication of Dates and Data.

Contrary to statements made last week after the boycott, SBU is not disbanding. According to a spokesman for the group, it will continue to operate until the 11 demands are met. The leaders of SBU will meet with Tolley later this week to discuss the remaining statements which concern the University Hill Corporation and SU's connection with it, and the University 's position on realocation and the community.

Towers . . .

(Continued from Page 2)

residents of St. Mary's did earlier. Construction work is still going on, and new people are continually moving in. Despite the temporary inconveniences, however, most of the residents like their apartments and the building.

The building itself is comprised of a service area involving the first three floors, and 21 apartment floors, with 364 apartments. Entrance is through the first or street level which includes a lobby and reception area. Medical services are found on the second floor, and on the third livel are recreational facilities, library, chapel, lounge and other areas for social gathering.

The apartments are available in three different sizes, each apartment having kitchen facilities supplied. Commerical stores, such as food and drug stores, will open on the ground level when the building is completed.

Other organizations involved in Toomey-Abbott include the Family Service Center, with which the University is concerned, Community Chest, and various other service organizations.

All together, the dorm and the apartments and the anticipated commercial areas make an interesting living community. Once students and senior citizens get to know each other better, the St. Mary's complex will be very nearly a complete experience in living.

Hatcher . . .

(Continued from page 1)

white, are still in poverty," he intoned. He said the only real results are that the affluent are a little more aware of the poor's plight.

"Social workers also benefitted by having more jobs," he stated.

"What is lacking is not the technique to solve the problems but the will," Hatcher said. "Congress will pass $82-billion for defense in a minute, but cannot pass $2-billion for poverty."

He added, "as the new administration came in, we watched and hoped that our energies and creativity would at long last be rechanneled."

Hatcher cited the ABM decision as "not just a Presidential move, but a show of power from the corporations and industries whose existence is based on defense."

Money which could be used for hospital beds is being controlled.

The choices available to blacks, Hatcher said, are 1) to leave the country physically; 2) to demand separate black territory in the U.S.; or 3) to act through violence.

Hatcher said that blacks had too great a share in the building of this country to leave, and in order to build up the ghettos or demand separate states, power must first be acquired. Political power has potential, he said, in cities with large black populations.

"The power we must talk about is not parochial or partial power, but the coming together of all power; black power, the power of the Spanish-speaking people and student power are only hopes in a total demand for people power. If this fails, we will be in despair."

In recognition of his service Mayor Hatcher has received several awards and honors. Among the most significant are the 1968 Gary Jaycees award as Outstanding Young Man of the Year, the first time a Gary Mayor received this honor, and the Loren Henry Award

Washington Seminar openings available

Applications are being accepted for the few remaining Washington Seminar openings. The three week, three credit Maxwell School sponsored course will run from June 9-27.

A basic American government course is suggested, but all undergraduate and graduate students are eligible. Approximate cost is $400, half going to tuition, half to room, board and expenses.

Applications are available in Dr. Karl Schmidt's office, room 17 Maxwell, and must be submitted with references no later than May 21.

NEW FACULTY AND GRADUATE HOUSING

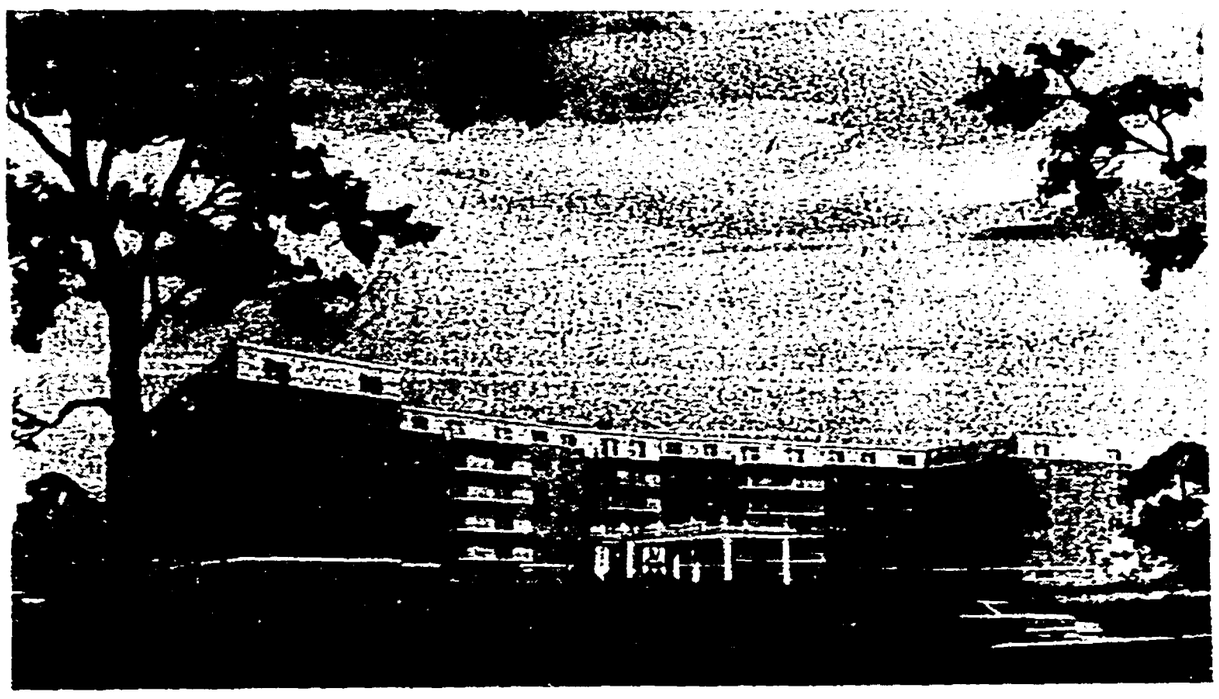
Construction of the first six story luxury type building of the Nob Hill complex has nearly reached the roof level a short distance from SU.

Opening ceremonies are tentatively planned for June 8, at which time models of the moderately priced suites are to be ready for public inspection.

The Nob Hill site presents a serene atmosphere accented by a panoramic view.

Utilizing concrete and steel rather than traditional wood framing, the buildings provide the utmost in privacy and fire protection.

Nob Hill is planned to include six buildings and a total of 1,200 apartment units with complete recreational facilities, including an indoor-outdoor swimming pool.



Each building will feature a magnificent two-story lobby tastefully decorated and equipped with an inter-communicational security entrance and two high speed elevators.

Adjacent to the lobby is the community room, were planned activities such as bridge, chess, lectures, etc. will be provided for those residents who desire to participate. This room is also for use by residents for private activities and parties.

Other features include individually controlled heating and air-conditioning, a resident maintenance staff, built-in kitchens with dishwashers and disposals, an antenna system, incinerator, laundries, storage lockers and many others.

Additional information will be made available to university faculty, staff and graduate students by phoning 469-3211 between noon and six p.m. every day.

Brochures, floor plans and prices will be sent as requested. Applications for the fall semester are currently being accepted by mail or at the temporary rental office located at the Norstar Apartments on 7th North Street in Liverpool. Occupancy is possible as early as July.

Nob Hill Apartments

Campus Classified

GR 6-5571, Ext. 2314

Rates minimum of 15 words:
1 day 1.15
2 days 2.25
3 days 3.30
4 days 4.30
5 days 5.25
6 days 6:15

To place a classified ad, call GR 6-5571, ext. 2314, between 1 and 3 p.m. Ad must be placed 2 days in advance. Every word over 15 costs 5c extra per day.

ALL ADS MUST BE PREPAID.

MISCELLANEOUS

RENT if you can't buy! T.V.s, tape recorders, typewriters. By week, month or semester. Reasonable rates. S. U. BOOKSTORE. GR 6-5541, x 2426.

ALTERATIONS DONE within 24 hours. Call for an appointment. Lillian Potter. 207 Comstock. 478-5847.

PRIVATE DRIVING LESSONS — automatic or standard shift. Full or refresher courses. Qualified professional instructors. Pickup service. Auto Driving Academy. GR 6-3995.

NEED A SUMMER JOB? Syracuse YMCA Camp Tousey has openings for Unit Directors, counselors, riding master and waterfront director. Five hundred acre site with 55 staff and 160 campers on Millsite Lake near Redwood, New York Spend a challenging and rewarding summer working with boys 9 - 14 years old. For details and application, write Robert Fiske, YMCA, 340 Montgomery St., Syracuse, New York 13202.

FREE ROOM AND BOARD in exchange for twelve hours a week. Pool, tennis court. DeWitt on bus line. Ability to drive and swim required. 446-6458.

MEN AND WOMEN — Distribute Procter and Gamble samples in Syracuse metro area. Work is similiar to that of a mail man. Full or ½ days. $1.75 per hour for more information call Mr. Dennis Prenevost anytime at 475-4352.

TRIP WITH WENDI — Europe '69 Group flights on Pan Am. Best dates, best prices. Limited seats available. 475-9642.

PHOTOS — passport, identification, or fine gift portraits. For appointment, 472-5062. Sherman Sable Studio, 550 Wescott St.

FOR SALE

150 cc. VESPA. Excellent condition. best offer over $200. Call John 476-1866, 475-4681 after 5.

MG-TD, 1952. Excellent condition $1200 Phone 472-3932 after 1 p.m.

1965 NORTON MOTORCYCLE 400 cc. Newly rebuilt engine. $305.00. 1957 VOLKSWAGON with newly rebuilt Porsche engine. $305.00. 607-749-4094.

'64 PORSCHE. Many extras. Best offer over $1000.00. Call OL 2-2237, evenings.

1957 VW Bug — 12 years old; runs good. $110.00. Call HO 9-4386 any time.

1966 BARRACUDA — Formula S. four speed, extras. Call 471-1885 evenings for 474-4876, ext. 8. days.

'63 CORVAIR 700 — Gold, body good. automatic. 4 dr., easy to park - easy to drive. $295.00. 472-8967.

1968 BSA — 250 cc., excellent shape. Call 478-5954 between 4 and 10 p.m. Only serious inquiries.

1968 CAMARO SS 350 — Blue w/black vinyl top, 4 speed, posi-traction, radio and reverberator, tachometer and gauges. Call 635-3658.

FOR RENT

FURNISHED ROOMS — share kitchen and baths. Singles, $12.50; doubles $10.00. Call 422-2871.

FURNISHED APARTMENT — Henry Street — 2 blocks from campus. kitchenette. 1 bedroom, living room, complete. bath with shower. Downstairs. 2 private entrances. Off street parking. $110.00 per mo. Call 422-5564 days 476-1481 evenings and weekends.

NEED A SUMMER PAD WITH POOL? Call 472-3420.

APARTMENT TO SUBLET, furnished one bedroom apartment. 5 minutes from campus. Call Morris ext. 2821 or 478-8705 $110/month includes utilities.

APARTMENTS — furnished or unfurnished, 3 rooms, utilities, near campus. Call x3810. 472-8223 or 475-1631.

APARTMENT TO SUBLET (June - August) furnished, 4 rooms, on campus. $100/month Call 478-4421.

WANTED

RIDE TO WORK, weekdays 8:30 to 5. Valentine Drive, North Syracuse to/from corner University Avenue and Place. Phone extension 2105.

FACULTY COUPLE — Looking for furnished or unfurnished two or three bedroom house or apartment near university. Academic year 1969-70. Call 655-9078.

FEMALE ROOMMATES — Wanted to share large house. Separate bedrooms, and/or fall. 478-4251.

ONE OR TWO FEMALE roommates for summer. Furnished apartment, walking distance. Call Ellen. 472-8661.

STUDENTS - for part time positions - option for summer work. $3.15 per hour. Flexible hours. Call 453-3735 weekdays 3-5 p.m.

TYPING

THIRTY YEARS EXPERIENCE. Dissertations, term papers, proof-read. Satisfaction guaranteed. Mrs. Raymond Webb. HE 7-8259.

TAKE YOUR MANUSCRIPT to the only professional typing and printing service serving the S. U. area. The knowledge and experience of having done over 2,000 theses and dissertations is behind every job we turn out. Stephanie's Office Service. 469-2795.

TYPIST experienced in thesis, dissertations, and term papers. Electric typewriter. Shirley Savlov. 446-2999 or x2441.

Hofstra whipped, 9-4

Hobart to test Orange tomorrow

By ED AGRANOWITZ

It's going to take an awful lot to make Syracuse Lacrosse coach Roy Simmons forget his 1957 team. Jimmy Brown, often called the "greatest lacrosse player ever" led the Orange to a 10-0 record that year.

Simmie's 1969 edition, however, has already succeeded in blurring the '57 picture. And if they maintain their current pace, the Orange just may erase their coach's recollections.

The undefeated Orangemen continued to flex their growing muscles Saturday night, and out-bullied a strong Hofstra team 9-4 on Long Island. The stickmen will shoot for number eight in tomorrow's 3 p.m. home opener against powerful Hobart at Manley Field.

"Hofstra was a real dog-eat-dog game," said Simmie, "Their team was mostly football players. They didn't measure up to us in stick-handling ability, but they made up for it with hitting and agressiveness. They made us earn every goal we got. We had a good game, but we'll have to play better if we expect to beat Hobart."

The Orange suffered through a scoreless first quarter Saturday, which legitimately can be blamed on infamiliarity with the Astro Turf field and the night lights. REserve Orange attackman Tom Powers equalized Hofstra's 1-0 first period lead with a goal in the first minute of the second quarter on a Jeff Davis assist.

Mark Austerlitz (also from Davis) and Dick Polgren (unassisted) added scores to give the Orange a slim 3-1 halftime lead. The SU stickmen stretched this to a relatively comfortable 6-2 cushion entering the final stanza (scores by Davis and Ron and Verne Doctor), but the Flying Dutchmen fought back.

"They came back to 6-4 with five minutes to go and were really driving on us," says Simmie. "But we regained the momentum and put 'em away." Marc Austerlitz (from Ron Doctor), Leo Nolan (from Austerlitz), Ron (Davis assist) closed out the scoring.

Syracuse goalie Butch "Rublilator" Brown recorded nine saves and kept his goals-against average at a shade under four per game. "Butch played real well," said Simmie, "And he was toughest at the beginning when we really needed him."

Simmie also had liberal praise for his starting defensive three of John Scipione, Cliff Ensley, and Ethan Klausner. "I'm proud of this defnese – they did one helluva job," he said. "I've never seen Ensley or Scipione play better. Ethan also did a good job containing his man."

Backup defensemen Chris Stringer, Rick Kramer, and Frankie Pfau did well in spot duty replacing Scip, Gip, and Baby Huey. "It was hot and muggy and they did a good job spelling 'em for a breather," said Simmie.

The Orange emerged uninjured from the scuffle and now turn their attention to Hobart. Syracuse cannot afford a letdown in this one, lest its national ranking suffer. With perrenial powers Maryland and Navy already tasting defeat, the Orange are flirting with the top three. Only Army and defending national champion Johns Hopkins (a 14-11 winner over Army Saturday) stand taller than the Orangemen right now.

"There are only two undefeated teams in the business (Su and Hopkins)," says Simmie. "We haven't put together a complete ballgame yet. When we do, we'll be tough."

"ED'S ITORIALS: Austerlitz now has the most goals on the team with 15....Austerlitz trails Nolan (14 goals and 11 assists) and Davis (12 and 10) in total points....Hofstra coach Howdy Myers also coaches the Flying Dutchman football team. The line score:

Syracuse	0	3	3	3	- 9
Hofstra	1	0	1	2	- 4

STEADY PERFORMANCES have been turned in by Lacross midfielder, Jim Smith. Smith, who teams with Ron Doctor and Mark Austerlitz, has tallied five goals and one assist while being a demon on defense. (Photo by Robertson)

IN THE HOUR OF DEFEAT stands a member of the SU crew team after he and his mates were beaten by Navy and Cornell in the annual race for the Goes Cup. The freshman team, however, came through to win in their competition. (Photo by Clemens)

Big Red Wins Goes Cup

The debut of the 1969 edition of Syracuse University crew was spoiled Saturday as Cornell rowed away with the Goes Cup. Navy finished in the second spot while the Orange rowers finished third in the three-school competition.

The Big Red oarsmen turned in a 6:12.8 clocking, besting the Midshipmen's 6:21.5 and SU's 6:25.1.

In the junior varsity meet, the Orangemen again finished third. Navy and Cornell switched finishes in this race, beging clocked in 6:29 and 6:33 respectively. SU crossed the finish line after 6:37.5 had elapsed.

Coach Bill Sanford said that his varsity and JV boats must get faster than they were if they hope to improve their chances for victory. "The only way we can do this," Sanford said, "is to shift around our existing personnel. And we only have 17 or 18 guys to choose from."

The bright spot in the meet, however, was the winning performance turned in by the frosh rowers. They took the initial lead and, rowing at 32-34 strokes, won by seven and one-half seconds over Navy, 6:40 to 6:47.5. Cornell's yearlings were third in 6:50.

Quiz answers - 2

1)Kauai King; 2)Jerry West-B; 3)Dick Groat; 4)Bobby Shantz: 5)United States Open; 6)Johnny Unitas; 7)Jackie Robinson; 8)He broke his own record; 9)Sandy Koufax; 10)Jim Barnes, Johnny Egan, Johnny Green.

Orangemen end one losing streak; then start another

By BOB GALLAGHER

The Orange baseballers applied the brakes to a three game losing skid Saturday by defeating Penn State in the first game of a doubleheader at Griffin Field 8-2. Then they began sliding again dropping the second game 8-0.

In the first game a seven run outburst in the seventh inning crushed a 2-1 Penn State lead and lifted the diamondmen to their second win of the season.

Jim Gordon and Brian Mihalik opened the seventh, the Orangemen's biggest inning output of the season, with walks. Pitcher Greg Lowe's single knocked in Gordon with the tying run. Bob Clary untied the knotted score plating Mihalik and Lowe with a single on the first offering from Penn State's reliefer Bill Renz.

Steve Naum's double brought in Clary. John Unger walked and Tony MoMontiglio reached on an error then second-sacker Chris Albergo singled in the final two runs which safely tucked away the Orange victory.

Lowe, the winning pitcher for Syracuse, went the route with a seven hitter and evened his record at 1-1. His only trouble came in the third inning when Penn State scored both their runs on four hits. He struckout six Nittany Lions and at the plate got two safeties. Coach Andy Mogish in commenting on Lowe's performance said, "Greg pitched a good game as he scattered the hits."

Another plus for the Orangemen in the first game according to Mogish was "outfielder Steve Naum breaking out of his batting slump." Naum collected a triple and a double in four trips.

The birghtness of the first game was soon darkened by Penn State in the next game. Roy Swanson, the Nittany Lion hurler, fired a beautiful two hitter and was never in serious trouble.

The second inning was the undoing of Syracuse as Penn State collected four runs on five walks, two singles and an error off Orange starter John Martell. The Penn State outfielders led the hitting barrage as they collected seven of the Nittany's ten hits. Leftfielder Tom Daley went three for three with two doubles and a single and the rightfielder Fidler had two hits and two RBI's. The two centerfielders got one hit apiece.

Offensively the Orangemen threatened only in the second inning. Montiglio walked and went to third on Gordon's single but that was as far as he or any of the other Orange could get. Catcher Unger got the other hit for Syracuse.

In diagnosing Martell's trouble in the second game Mogish said, "he couldn't quite get the ball in there. He had some stuff but he just kept missing the corners."

The coach believes the team accomplished something beating a good team like Penn State. He stated, "we played real well in the first game but the second one was a different story."

Today the diamondmen face Colgate at home with lefty Dave Stone in the first of four games this week. Mike Barlow is slated to face Cornell there on Thursday. Saturday the team faces Colgate again, this time there for a doubleheader.

Cindermen show well in Penn event

The rains didn't fall but the Orange track team did when the journeyed to Philadelphia to participate in the Penn Relays this past weekend.

Bad weather has been the squad's nemesis, curtailing workouts and washing out the Queen's Relays two weeks ago. However, this time around, the skies were blue and the sun shone bright.

The best showing by the cindermen came in the College Division sprint medley where SU's entry copped fifth honors. Guy Roberts, Bill Swift, Dave Greave and Larry Zuller composed the quartet.

Zuller bettered his own half-mile timing as he roared to a 1:53.9 closking. His previous low time had been 1:55.

In the mile relay, coach Bob Grieve's boys "got nailed to a cross" by his own admission. "We were placed in a qualifying heat with Pittsburgh and Villanova and they really got us," commented Grieve.

Grieve singled out Dave Greave as one of the top competitors along with Zuller. Greave ran a leg of the 220 relay in 21.5 while turning in a fine time of 49.9 in the mile relay.

Grieve said he was pleased with his team's showing, pointing out that it was the squad's first meet. Most of the competing teams had three or four meets prior to the Penn event.

He said, "To even place in a meet the size of this one is a job well done. All in all they did pretty well."

The cindermen will compete in the Big-Four meet this weekend against Pittsburgh, Penn State and West Virginia.

DAILY ORANGE

Vol. 67, No. 96 Syracuse, New York, Wednesday, April 30, 1969 10 Cents

JOHN ROSS

Ross, Winning

Senate heads chosen

In a 76-31 vote, John Ross defeated Ifshin-supported Lance Wisniewski for speaker of Student Senate last night.

Andrew Winning defeated Bill Egan for the speaker pro tempore spot.

Beginning his campaign speech, Ross asserted that he was "defending the Student Senate of Syracuse University." He continued to characterize Senate as "part of a process that has made the myth of student power a reality."

Wisniewski charged, "I think Student Senate is irrelevant. The structure is irrevelant, it holds the students down from making real progress."

While Ross insisted that "we have not already failed to unify" diverse campus groups, Wisniewski proposed that Senate be abolished and a "more relevant structure" be created in its place.

Giving the pro for Wisniewski, Student Government president-elect, David Ifshin, said that the campus was beginning to be characterized by "vital pockets" where students were accepting responsibility. According to Ifshin, "Student Senate is no organ of response to these vital pockets. They should be connected by a University Council."

This hypothetical council would elect representatives from "student groups, such as Inter-Dormitory Council, that are taking responsibility on their own," according to Wisniewski.

Countering an attack by Wisniewski that Senate spent too much time on committee work, and not enough time relating to the students, Ross said, "Part of the function of Senate is to do research." He continued, "There really wasn't a lot of research done on some of the 11 issues we were told were important during the boycott." Ross cited lack of understanding of these issues, in particular dorm autonomy, as a result of this lack of research.

Supporting Ross, Dick Barton reiterated the need for research and countered the attack on the committee system by noting that "It is the function of a legislative body to ask questions."

Commenting on the same issues, and giving a pro for Ross, Speaker Pro Tempore John Diamond reasoned, "Sure, we're cumbersome, a dictatorship is the smoothest form of government and to my mind the most undesirable."

In another pro for Wisniewski, Fred Tuccillo said, "The Syracuse University Student Senate has outlived its usefulness. There is a need for a truly representative structure. This is not an attempt to destroy but an attempt to build."

Ifshin retained the theme of building by quoting John Diamond's statement back, "You can't model a government for a campus three blocks wide after a government for a country three thousand miles wide." Ifshin continued, "You have to revitalize, find out where the power is, and work with it."

"There are many who would draw a veil over their faces and ignore the system when they have never worked with the system," said Diamond.

Ifshin took up a plea for support of student leaders and said,"In the last election you saw a mandate, a mandate for change. In Senate tonight don't stop the progress that has begun."

Concluding his successful campaign for election, Ross said, "I don't promise to be the best speaker, and I will not be the wrost, but I can promise that I will not be the last at Syracuse."

IDC meets, elects officers

By JANE FAYKO

Interdorm Council (IDC) members last night elected officers and discussed further progress in dorm autonomy.

New officers include President Marc Cavanagh; Vice-President Connie Steward; Secretary Golda Shapiro; and Treasurer Mike Kleeman.

The Kimmel-Marion constitution has been evaluated and passed by IDC. It treats autonomy through individual floors rather than the entire complex. Eleven other living centers submitted constitutions at the meeting, among them Hafts Co-op, Richards Cottage, St. Mary's, Washington Arms, Mace Cottage, Sherbrook (Madison), Reed, Flint, Lehman Hall, Winchell and Sadler. IDC will contact each living center when its constitution has been evaluated.

It was stressed that the criteria for dorm autonomy include only the stated "five points." Areas such as vehicle parking and off-campus housing are not to be handled by individual dorm governments.

Action on the Flint-Sadler switch and the problem of whether IDC should have

(Continued on Page 7)

Fear of Czech experiment causes Soviet occupation

By GREG SMITH

The fear of a successful "Czech humanist-Marzist experiment" was the reason for the August, 1968 invasion and occupation of Czechoslovakia, said Wolfgang Leonard, Soviet affairs expert, at a Public Affairs and Citizenship lecture in Hendricks Chapel last night.

Branding the Soviet military maneuver as "the most brutal occupation ever made in the name of Marxism, Communism and Socialism," Leonard declared that the U.S.S.R. feared "a new model of Communism would spread" and that "Prague might become the center of world Communism."

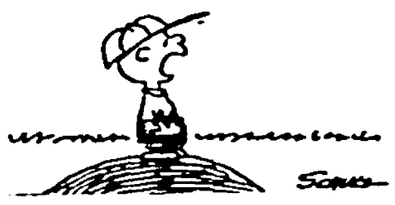
Citing the ouster of Nikita Khrushchev as a crucial turning point in Soviet history, Leonard remarked that a battle between "moderates" and "hard-liners" ensued in which the U.S. decision to bomb North Vietnam helped the hard-liners win.

Leonard traced what he termed "the reforms" of Nikita Khrushchev from his rise to power until his fall on October 14, 1964. Terming the 11 years "a kind of de-Stalinazation" and "a hopeful period in Soviet history" Leonard stated that Khrushchev curved the Secret Police, caused a thaw in literature and arts, allowed more travel and released 11 million political prisoners.

He said two kinds of opponents arose to challenge the premier: those headed by Kosygin, who didn't like Khrushchev's style and those who opposed his policies. After his downfall, a six month intra-party struggle between the moderates and reactionaries resulted in a reactionary victory.

"In 1965 the general line of foreign policy changed at the 23rd Party Congress," stated Leonard. "The doctrine of coexistence was changed and replaced by a Soviet desire to 'secure favorable international conditions for the construction of Socialism and Communism.'

"In August of '65 the first intellectuals were arrested in the Ukraine and in September of '65 the economic reforms were watered down at the Communist Party Plenary Session," Leonard continued.



A "neo-Stalinism" minus the "leadership cult" gained power in the U.S.S.R. and formulated "an agressive defensive stance in foreign policy," said Leonard.

Listing ten major reforms, Leonard the Soviet expert observed that a "Socialist democracy" began to replace a ',bureaucratic dictatorship." This the Soviets feared nad a battle began in the Polit Buro over what method should be met to meet the crisis. The hard-liners won out once again and timed the Soviet invasion before the 14th Czechoslovakian Party Contress could meet to legalize the reforms and bring free elections.

WOLFGANG LEONARD

Good grief! Peanuts joins Daily Orange

"You've gotta move faster than that, Snoopy--you'll never make it to SU by May 6."

Chuck Brown and his entire gang will present their antics in every issue of the Daily Orange, beginning May 6.

The Daily Orange contracted for the cartoon feature with the United Features Syndicate, which has released one year's supply of Peanuts for consumption in these columns.

Permission was also obtained from the Syracuse Herald-Journal, which prints the Peanuts strip daily but does not feel the Daily Orange's maneuver will create insurmountable competitive inroads in its circulation.

SU reaffirms stand against student guns

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following memorandum has been circulated by Dean of Men David Tatham to all Syracuse University resident advisors:

"Recent incidents at other universities have raised the question as to precisely what the University's rule on firearms is. The rule, which appears on page 6 of Dates and Data is as follows:

'Because of the nature of group residence, the possession of firearms, even with a legal permit, or fireworks or other deadly weapons is prohibited in University living centers and on University property, except by authorized personnel.'

"We trust that there are no firearms or other deadly weapons in our residence halls, fraternities and sororities and we expect every Resident Advisor to ensure that that remains the case."

to enlist or not to enlist

To the Editor:

The big day cometh when many drop-outs, grad-students, and graduating seniors must lock horns with reality and come face to face with the draft. Some -- 4-F'ers, reservists, and ROTC -- have no problem. The fencesitting majority, however, who prefer indecision to thinking the "unthinkable" (I was myself a conspicuous example of this type,) often demonstrate implacable naivete anent the realities of the draft. In short, they are uninformed, unprepared. Perhaps they have imbibed too much high-octane theory to concern themselves with such numdane realities of life as doing their homework on the draft. The angry young men of the student left protesting the draft, the "beautiful people" ignoring it, and many other students sheathing themselves in the sanguine hope that the war will soon draw to a close all too often regret their cavalier treatment of their draft status only when the chips are down and they're faced with a "grettings" letter from Uncle Sam. These chosen few, begrabbled and irate, can usually be observed stumbling to their local recruiters office. Completely at sea as to how to handle him, they genuflect and at the eleventh hour sign their life away for two, three, or four years.

The crux of the problem is the lack of meaningful information available to those who face the should-I-enlist-or-be-drafted dilemma. There is no "truth in enlisting" law. Hence, many are taken in by what amounts to the patent wholesale misrepresentations (albeit innocent at times) of recruiters who'll soften the blow by promising you the moon for your signature. Here are a few salient but not readily available facts:

i. The overwhelming incidence of casualties (KIA's -- killed in action, and CIA's -- casualty in action) are sustained by combat infantry.

ii. Many college grads who are drafted wind up in combat infantry. The Army does not make good use of its manpower. What branch you're assigned apparently is a function of dumb luck.

iii. Obviously, the best way to avoid combat is to join the Navy or the Air Force.

iv. Almost without exception OCS enlistees are commissioned in Infantry (majority), Engineers (fewer), or Artillery (fewer.)

v. Almost without exception OCS enlistees, upon commissioning are stationed in Nam. The exception being c. 2%.

vi. OCS drop-outs all receive orders for Nam.

vii. In 1968 roughly between 10% to 30% of combat infantrymen were killed in action.

viii. The Army will use you in a capacity in which it needs you without regard to your preferences. DO NOT listen to promises your recruiter makes unless they're in writing and legally binding. (Some of my friends in Infantry OCS had engineering degrees and had thought that they had enlisted for Engineering OCS)

ix. You can enlist for OCS anytime within your first few months in the service. (Although it is getting increasingly difficult to get in.)

x. If you have a close relative in Nam you won't be sent there.

xi. A conscientious objector may go in to combat without a weapon e.g., medic.

xii. What is OCS like? The Army is highly anti-intellectual. (I recall a major using double negatives.) OCS complies with Parkinson's law, viz., the task expands to fill the time assigned to it. The time (Army) is six months, and the task terribly boring. The emphasis is on home-keeping (spit & polish etc.), discipline, and physical fitness in that order. The result is humiliation and exhaustion.

My best advice is: go ROTC young man, and grin and bear it.

VICTOR B. MEYEN '68

SBU met chief goal

To the Editor:

It is difficult for me to create a reason for your seemingly ardent distaste for the SBU. I do not wish to argue about the impact SBU's boycott had upon the attainment of dorm autonomy and other student demands; for any attempt to evaluate the boycott's success can, only at best, be opinionated. It appears, however, you have dismissed the boycott as mere "commotion," and in the process completely overlooked its real intention.

For the first time the "rich kids" of Syracuse University decided it was time to end apathy. Certainly, there may have been participaters in the boycott who simply desired a day off from classes and a little notoriety. But for most students at SU, it was a sincere attempt at unification. The SBU may dissolve, but now that some 6,000 students at SU have tasted involvement, it isn't likely they'll forget it, and for this reason the SBU has accomplished its chief goal.

Martha Bellinger water fight casualty

To the Editor:

I was on my way home Sunday night—that's why I happened to pass through the University area. There were police cars all around, directing traffic, and I was forced to go through the fraternity area. I heard someone shout "Hey, there's a motorcycle," and a bucket of water was tossed at me.

After ten buckets I lost count. Soaking wet, couldn't see, desperate to get out of there, hundreds of people in the street, another bucket of water. And suddenly everyone was concerned—"Don't move her," "Get some blankets," "Call an ambulance." Police arrived, ambulance came, news camera in my face, two hours in the hospital, and I ache all over.

This is my first year in Syracuse, and I'd never heard about the water fights the frustrated University students carry on each year; and I could not understand how those that caused my accident, afterwards were so willing to help.

Yes, thank-you to those that were really concerned. But to everyone involved—you are all guilty whether or not you tossed a bucket of water. All that I can hope is that you realize the physical and financial pain you have caused. And next time, for I am sure there will be a next time, please think before you recklessly act.

Peace brothers
Mimi Shotland

Slocum Hall art theft

To the Editor:

Several of us have just completed an exhibit of drawings in the basement of Slocum Hall. Included was a large pastel and pencil drawing in muted greys and browns. I did it from an article in Avant Garde magazine entitled, "Living High On The Hog Farm." It was of a girl with long, dark hair and a dark dress sitting with a long haired, moustached guy on a mattress. I am flattered that someone enjoyed the drawing enought to trouble himself with removing it from above the showcase.

I don't suppose that the importance of the drawing to me or the work involved was considered. It is of great value to me for portfolios and future reference. It also carries personal significance. This is an original drawing; not reproduced in quantity as a poster is. I intended to give it to people visually, not materially. From the person who has my drawing I ask only for its return. No hassles or questions involved. If you wish to deliver it anonymously, arrangements can be made. Contact:

Judy McNally
Shaw Dorm
X-2944
phone 472-9572

The Debate Union will hold its annual Presidential Debate Wednesday, April 30, at 8 p.m. in the multipurpose room in St. Mary's.

Happy 6 Months

Jane

NEW FACULTY AND GRADUATE HOUSING

Construction of the first six story luxury type building of the Nob Hill complex has nearly reached the roof level a short distance from SU.

Opening ceremonies are tentatively planned for June 8, at which time models of the moderately priced suites are to be ready for public inspection.

The Nob Hill site presents a serene atmosphere accented by a panoramic view.

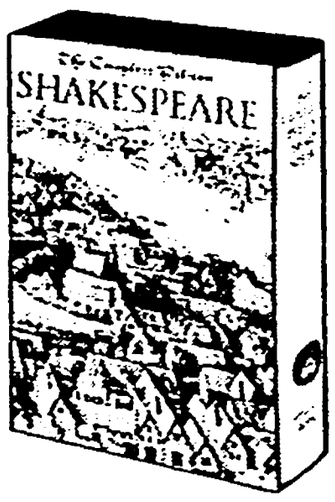
Utilizing concrete and steel rather than traditional wood framing, the buildings provide the utmost in privacy and fire protection.

Nob Hill is planned to include six buildings and a total of 1,200 apartment units with complete recreational facilities, including an indoor-outdoor swimming pool.

Each building will feature a magnificent two-story lobby tastefully decorated and equipped with an inter-communicational security entrance and two high speed elevators.

Adjacent to the lobby is the community room, were planned activities such as bridge, chess, lectures, etc. will be provided for those residents who desire to participate. This room is also for use by residents for private activities and parties.

Other features include individually controlled heating and air-conditioning, a resident maintenance staff, built-in kitchens with dishwashers and disposals, an antenna system, incinerator, laundries, storage lockers and many others.



Additional information will be made available to university faculty, staff and graduate students by phoning 469-3211 between noon and six p.m. every day.

Brochures, floor plans and prices will be sent as requested. Applications for the fall semester are currently being accepted by mail or at the temporary rental office located at the Norstar Apartments on 7th North Street in Liverpool. Occupancy is possible as early as July.

Nob Hill Apartments

"What you do still betters what is done."
The Winter's Tale.

ANNOUNCING... THE COMPLETE PELICAN SHAKESPEARE

The thirty-eight softcover volumes that comprise the Pelican Shakespeare form one of the most highly praised and best-selling editions of Shakespeare's works ever published. The series was recently completed under the general editorship of Professor Alfred Harbage of Harvard, with individual plays edited by leading Shakespearean scholars.

Now, to fill the need for an outstanding, one-volume collection, the thirty-eight books in the series have been brought together in THE COMPLETE PELICAN SHAKESPEARE—with a new General Introduction, new forewords, full bibliographies, and a simplified system of notes. This new hardcover volume is beautifully designed and illustrated, and is packaged in an attractive protective slipcase.

THE COMPLETE PELICAN SHAKESPEARE is the one-volume Shakespeare to read and refer to . . . and to give for important occasions. Your bookstore has copies now.

Special pre-publication price (to December 31, 1969) . . . $12.50

PENGUIN BOOKS INC
7110 Ambassador Road
Baltimore, Md. 21207

ANGUS H. TWOMBLY — Editor-in-Chief

MANAGING EDITOR - Alan Stamm EXECUTIVE EDITOR - Karen Wiediger NEWS EDITOR - Fred Tuccillo EDITORIAL DIRECTOR - David A. Ross COPY EDITOR - Jean Havens FEATURE EDITOR - Roz Mazer SPORTS EDITOR - Mike Weber CAMPUS AFFAIRS EDITOR - Larry Kramer PHOTOGRAPHY EDITOR - Clint Clemens ASSOCIATE EDITORS - Andrij Bilyk, Kay Christensen, Beth Hillson, Rona Kavee, Helene Macdonald, Charles Shapiro, Dan Schlossberg, Patti Williams, Roni Zlokower.

DAILY ORANGE

Syracuse University's Daily Newspaper Since 1903

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 30, 1969 PAGE 3

STEVEN P. STROBRIDGE -- Business Manager

ASSISTANT BUSINESS MANAGER— Art Depasqua, NATIONAL ADVERTISING MANAGER— Janet Meyer ACCOUNT EXECUTIVES— Roger Black, Jim Maney, Mike Greenstein.

Published Tuesday, through Friday during the academic year by students of Syracuse University. Offices located at 200 Brooklea Drive, Fayetteville, N.Y., and 1101 East Adams St., Syracuse, New York. Entered as Second Class matter at the U.S. Post Office, Fayetteville, N.Y. 13066.

David Ifshin: round one

In his first days as an SG leader, David Ifshin has inherited a whirlwind of student activity, and according to the polls, some important student support. Though he won't be official SG president until tomorrow, Ifshin got well into the act during the transition period and is off to a respectable start.

The first observation that we can make about the new president is that he wastes no time. He quickly became caught up in the SBU confrontation, shaky at first with Watson and PFP, but coming out on top with SBU's Central Committee in the end. He rushed into the fight not completely prepared, but his sense of urgency was crucial.

A confrontation with Student Senate may be the next test for this new student leader, or it may be with trustees or the Chancellor.

It is probably with the trustees, the Chancellor and maybe with some other members of the administration that the least understanding of this new student leader may lie. It's easy to say that SBU or David Ifshin represnts a minority, or to accuse them of any other form of detachment from that great security of the mainstream, but the fact is that David Ifshin, Jeff Portnoy, Cindy Bailey et.al. are hardly a voice of the minority.

What Ifshin may face in the days ahead is hostility from the administrative establishment. It will not be from all of that establishment, but it will be there. Ifshin has a beard and talks with high ideals--the conventional signs of a revolutionary. But there is no reason for any of this to deter or scare off progress. Ifshin is no radical, he is a reformer with no obligations to the system. His ideas are not irrational and his actions are not without moderation and restraint.

And so the official tenure of office is about to start. Ifshin has much time and opportunity to distinguish himself and the university. A new Chancellor joins us in September. He will be easier to work with. Though perhaps as vague on student issues as is the present chancellor, he will be more flexible.

For the days until June, it will be important that Ifshin projects what he stands for. The students know, but parts of the administration seem vague and they too must accept him as a leader.

After the semester, few people from the SBU Central Committee will remain, and while the days of May should witness action and progress, they must also see planning. The needs of the SU student community will not all be met this year. Come September, Ifshin and a new Central Committee must be ready to carry on.

Maxwell shows the way

Who says grad student organizations can't be relevant? I would like to give a big cheer for the Maxwell Graduate Student Association (M.G.S.A.) which has shown as much relevance in its programs this year as any student, faculty or administrative body on this campus. I may be a little biased, being one of the charter members of the M.G.S.A. back in 1965 when I was up here getting my masters degree (we may gripe but we seem to return to Piety Hill sooner or later), but the M.G.S.A. record is beyond mere prejudicial support. I won't go into the many minor projects it has undertaken this year like tutoring students from educationally disadvantaged backgrounds with the ultimate goal of admission to S.U. as freshmen, a "get-out-the-vote" campaign last fall, etc.. Rather I will just mention the two big projects this spring.

The first is the program for the installation of Alan "Scotty" Campbell as fifth Dean of the Maxwell School. The M.G.S.A. has worked closely with the Maxwell faculty and administration and has done much to shape the two days of colloquia on The University and its Communities which precedes the formal installation. In fact, the lead-off seminar entitled "The University and its Government" is directly sponsored by the M.G.S.A. That this nationally famous social science center is devoting its major thrust of the year to a topic like the role of the university exudes relevance and I give most of the credit for this to the M.G.S.A.

The other program I want to discuss is entitled "M.G.S.A. Program for Recruiting Black Graduate Students" and shows just what students can do when they transfer their energies from rioting to recruiting. In a unanimous effort the M.G.S.A. presented to the Maxwell faculty and administration a rather detailed proposal and budgetary request aimed at the active recruitment of Blacks to graduate study at

Jacques Lebel

Maxwell. The justifications for the program and perceived implications of it are as cogent as a Maxwell doctoral thesis and I would recommend that anyone interested in the specifics request a copy of the program proposal from the Maxwell School Office.

With general acceptance but limited funding, recruiting teams made up largely of Maxwell graduate students have already been sent to Atlanta, Baltimore, Washington, Richmond, Petersburg and Hampton Virginia and Nashville. Besides this the M.G.S.A. has already lined up committeed for assistantships in the various departments and programs in the Maxwell School and the Dean of Men's Office. But most significant to me is the inclusion in the M.G.S.A.'s proposal that this should just be a pilot program for the entire University. "In particular," states the proposal, "the Law Students Association, the Graduate Student Organization, the Association of Graduate Business Students and groups from the School of Education and School of Social Work should be included in the effort." Representatives from these and any other interested groups should contact the M.G.S.A. through the Maxwell School Office soon so that ground work can be laid for expanding the program next fall.

In a sea of controversy over the worth, beyond their narrow academic bounds, of students in general, graduate students in particular and graduate student organizations above all, the M.G.S.A. has been and continues to be a positive example of what can be. Outgoing M.G.S.A. president Jim Tinnin, whom I am happy to call a friend and colleague, did a hell of a job and deserves the "rest" he will get next year as he writes his doctoral dissertation. Similarly incoming president Tom Perloff has already shown his determination to keep M.G.S.A. up there on top and I am convinced he can and will. From my vantage point in the Graduate Student Organization (G.S.O.) I can only add that our viability and relevance is, in part, a natural outcome of that of the various departmental graduate student groups and if others will only follow the M.G.S.A.'s lead the G.S.O. can't help but become more meaningful. I hope incoming Maxwell Dean Campbell is aware of the great asset and resource he has in his Maxwell Graduate Student Association.

The Companion

Kirby A. Wolf, a sophomore english major in the College of Liberal Arts, has had poems published in several anthologies.

—Who are you? I asked the girl with hair of stellar light
As we flew across the gaping void of emptiness and fright.
—Have we met before? I think we have - last June or maybe December . . .
—We've met many times, and for many long years. Do you not remember?

I was with you those nights as you sat on the pier and the fog lay heavy and green,
When you inhaled the night through those long, lonely sighs, and the dank air made you serene.

While the winter wind wailed and the black sea raged, causing the pier to moan,
And you swayed with its rhythm, your wet eyes closed; then, too,
you weren't alone.

In those surrealistic hours of blaring silence and sharp, black shadows on glaring
white sand,
Did you not feel that eyes were upon you? It was I - your companion- at hand.

And as she talked she flew downwards into that immense, yawning abyss;
And I, who half expected Spring and Music, followed her, now grateful for the nothingness.

An enigma:

Has the left really left?

Mike Stephens, a junior majoring in journalism and a member of Sigma Delta Chi, is the New York State Youth Coordinator for Stassen in '72.

Mark Rudd may well wonder how he went wrong at Syracuse.

The boy wonder of dissatisfied suburban youth made a brief appearance at SU last fall. He got an enthusiastic receiption, and it appeared that the New Left at Syracuse might finally become inspired, pull itself together and mobilize. Alas, poor Mark did not turn out to be the Messiah after all.

The New Left has such little support on this campus that even the ROTC boys feel safe wearing their uniforms on the quad. At a university at which the student leaders represent less than one-third of the student population, it can hardly be otherwise.

Since 20 people marching on the Administration Building would probably make even Dean Carleton laugh, PFP tried to broaded its base of power last week. They attempted to make as much noise as possible during Wednesday's boycott, and even held a couple of open rallies in the Chapel. The shows they put on were definitely worth the price of admission.

Peace and Freedom supported the boycott at first, but then withdrew support when it became obvious that Ifshin and Hicks would be grabbing all the glory. PFP wanted its own headlines, and hung around the Daily Orange offices all week in an effort to get them. Then they scheduled the rally–first for tfiree, then for one, then back to three. It got started about two.

Larry Alexander, martyred already this year for his arrest at the Nixon rally in November, made a valiant effort to chair the meeting, but it looked more like eight heads without a chicken.

The rally proceeded according to the script. A pseudo-revolutionary gave a speech; three plants in the front row, one a paid instigator, stood and cheered; and the rest of the crowd yawned. Every so often Danny, a grad student in quest of his Ph.D., would speed through the audience, screaming some of the best doubletalk since the hey day of Al Kelly.

"No dirty stuff in the house of God,"yelled Danny.

"Will you shut up?" yelled the girl at the podium.

"Soldier Boy, Oh my little Soldier Boy," sang the quartet on the stage.

"Anyone can come up and speak," yelled Larry.

"We want action now!" screamed the paid agitator in the front row.

And then they came to the big question. "How many of you are behind us? Stand up if you'll help." The answer was still the same. Those out to satisfy their curiosity had seen enough. After Dean McCombe broke up a fight by the podium, most of them left.

Apparently Larry was fed up, too. About 12:30 on Thursday afternoon he was standing at the northbound entrance to Route 81, with a sign reading "Albany." He just got the urge for going. There are other cities, other universitites, and if the luck is better, a few good riots.

School of Ed institutes course on US education

By MARY TAYLOR

In an attempt to update curriculum, a new one-semester required course for all undergraduate students in all programs of the School of Education, including those dually enrolled will begin this fall.

The School of Education Minority Curriculum Committee, sponsor of the proposal, hopes the course will make participants sensitive to the racial, cultural, religious, and economic factors which characterize Americans and which influence and are influenced by the educational system. The proposal establishing the course was passed by an overwhelming majority at the committee's April 22 meeting.

The new course, Education 260, will be designed to explore the American educational system's responsibility for the conditions of racism existing in our schools and the educator's role as an agent for social good and provider of equal educational opportunities. The major emphasis of the course will be an attempt to provide positive approaches directed towards the solution of the conflict which results from lack of equal educational opportunities for members of minority groups in America.

Faculty for Ed 260 will consist of a significant number of minority group members as well as regular faculty, regularly enrolled students and members of the surrounding community.

Group encounters with discussion and role-playing techniques will be included to allow students to explore their thoughts and feelings on racism. There will be a lecture-reading-discussion session for the student to systematically obtain knowledge about minority groups and methods of equalizing education. Films and well-known guest speakers will be part of the lectures. Each student will be expected to do field work which brings him in direct contact with a minority group problem. This problem may be social, education, economic, and/or political.

The course is open on a pass-fail basis to those outside the School of Education. Faculty and administrators are urged to attend as auditors.

The Curriculum Committee sees the course as a "short term, stop-gap measure which will operate while systematic revision of the School of Education curriculum and programs is taking place."

The Committee intends to submit further proposals to revise the curriculum to "give appropriate attention to the values of all School of Education Students in the critical areas of racial, cultural, economic, and religious differences."

——Happenings on the Hill——

WEDNESDAY

DEADLINE TODAY for Big Chum or Big Sister applications at Women's Bldg.

RUSSIAN CLUB will present slides of the Soviet Union, including major cities and Central Asia, today, 7 p.m. in Women's Bldg. Alumnae Lounge.

DATES AND DATA We will hold our third and last meeting for the new Dates and Data in Room 204, Women's Bldg. 3 p.m. today. All Goons who signed up for TC&P, please come also-Summer Orange and Goon Gazette will be discussed.

WAA MEETING today, 7 p.m. Board Room.

DEBATE UNION will hold the annual Presidential Debate tonight, 8 p.m. in St. Mary's multipurpose room. Topic: Resolved that civil disobedience is a privilege, not a right. If you want to speak, call Bob Putnam, X-2184.

CONTRARY TO RUMOR, the WAA Softball Club is very much alive and well. So-fair participations in the national pastime--the place to be is the field or Gym A on Wednesdays from 4-5 p.m.

UU ELECTIONS today, 6:30 p.m. for Policy Board positions and Public Relations Director. Tomorrow, 6:30 p.m. for Programming Board and Cultural and Social Directors. Tomorrow, 9 p.m. for Development Board positions. All applications must be submitted to Mary Franciosi, Haven Hall, before tonight.

OPEN HOUSE at Men's Co-op II tonight and tomorrow night, 7-10 p.m. at 324 Ostrom Ave.

UU BULL SESSION this week will present Prof. Edmund Arnold of the j-school, speaking on "The Financial Situation of the University as it applies to Students." Come to the Noble Room, Hendricks Chapel, today at 4 p.m.

SIGMA LAMBDA DELTA freshman women's honorary. Important meeting for tapping of new members. Tonight, 7 p.m. Room 200 Newhouse. Please attend.

JURISPRUDENCE P.S. 341 Lawrinson Penthouse, tonight.

ZOOLOGY SEMINAR today, 4 p.m. in 114 Lyman, featuring Dr. Richard Rayle of the U. of California speaking on "Genetic Analysis of Chromosomal puffing in Drosophila Melanogaster."

THURSDAY

LAW DAY PROGRAM today, 7:30 p.m., Congdon Room, College of Law. Law Day panel discussion. To be discussed: "Law, The Student and The University." Dean Alexander of the College of Law, Prof. Balbanian, Dean Carleton, and a state senator will participate. Questions? Call X-2526.

UNIVERSITY JUDICIAL BOARD 7 p.m. tonight, Chapel House.

UJB JUSTICE SELECTION BOARD 2-5 p.m., 125 Stadium Place.

ZOOLOGY SEMINAR featuring Dr. Oliver Smithies of the U. of Wisconsin at Madison, speaking on "Genes and Antibodies" at 4 p.m., 117 Lyman, today. Coffee 3:30 p.m., 116 Lyman.

CHEMISTRY COLLOQUIA "Recent Advances in Total Synthesis of Steroids" featuring Prof. S. Danishefsky today, 4 p.m. Room 303 Bowne. Coffee at 3:30 p.m.

GENERAL

HOME EC ADVISORY BOARD applications are due May 5 in the Home Ec office. Application should include: name, campus address, extension, major and year. Also the applicant's ideas regarding a Home Ec education and the role of the Advisory Board. Questions? Call Helen X-2663 or Robin X-3793.

HOME EC SENIORS wishing to serve on the Selection Committee for the school Advisory Board should call Robin Ericson, X-3793.

MAKE MORE MONEY selling Pros. We still need salesmen who want to make %5-10 for an hour or more of fun work. Interested? Call Skippy or Bobby G. at X-3140.

GOONS be sure to return both questionnaires and answer sheets by Friday, to Women's Bldg. Main Desk.

GOONS AND ALTERNATES who missed Sunday's Convo. pick up folders and preference cards at Women's Bldg. Main Desk by Friday.

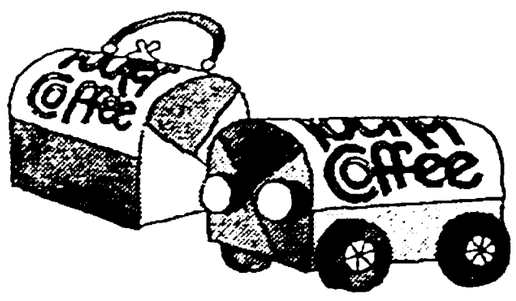
BUILD A FLOAT or decorate a car for the annual spring Float Parade, Saturday, May 10. The theme is: "The Dawning of the Age of ——————" (you fill in the blank). Open to greeks, dorms, floors, organizations. No entry fee. Applications can be picked up at 300 Walnut Place (Tri-Delta) and are due May 5. Questions? Call Marilyn x-2658.

SUICIDES ANONYMOUS awaiting your call 6 p.m.-6 a.m., 422-1000.

INTERNATIONAL STUDENT ORGANIZATION will hold its annual elections on Sunday, May 4, 7:30 p.m. in Maxwell Auditorium. All international students are requested to participate. There will be a supper preceding the elections at ISO, 230 Euclid Ave. from 5-7 p.m. to which all are invited.

AMERICAN YOUTH HOSTELS VW bus trip to Europe. Leave July 28, return August 28. Price $625 including flight. Call Ron Cate, 469-6284, 841 Valley Drive.

SENIORS, GRADS, Phd's — FOR EACH COMPLETED PART II OF THE JOB INTERVIEW RECRUITMENT QUESTIONNAIRE YOU TURN IN AT THE PLACEMENT CENTER YOU'LL RECEIVE A 25¢ COUPON REDEEMABLE AT ANY S. U. BOOKSTORE. COUPON OFFER EXPIRES MAY 20, 1969.



Wanted for Psychological Experiment

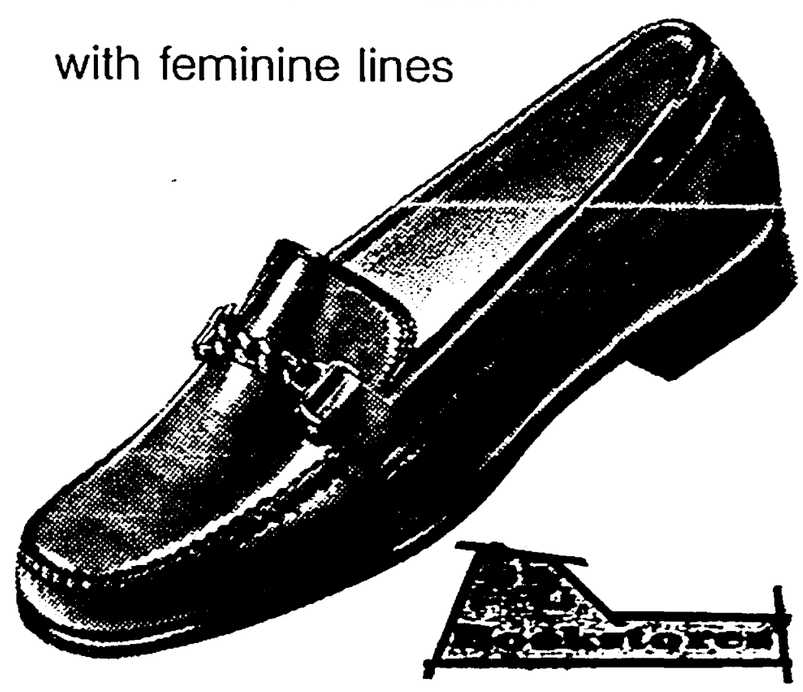
Women at least 21 years of age, with at least high school education. Participants will be paid at least $2.00 per hour. If interested call Upstate Medical Center at 473-5627, ask for Miss Harter.

Call between hours 1:00 & 5:00 P.M.

Pocket Coffee! What's that?

A new kind of coffee break that goes where you go.

If you're one of the people who often find you can't stop to get a cup of coffee when you need it, listen here. Pocket Coffee is a coffee break you can carry with you.



The man who dreamed up Pocket Coffee invented a way of putting some real brewed liquid coffee inside a delicious chocolate shell. Each piece is double-wrapped and packed in a three candy stick that fits neatly into your pocket or purse.

At work, on the road, or at play (you devil you), when you need a break reach for Pocket Coffee. Pop one into your mouth. Now, that's a new kind of coffee break.

A man-tailored moc...

with feminine lines

Lady Bostonians

In a new antique-finished, wood-stained leather with semi-squared toe, and a genuine burnished brass chain for that touch of fashion. Another delightful, perfect-fitting moccasin from our Lady Bostonian collection. Come try a pair!

Sizes 6 to 10 17.00

TOP O' THE MOUNT SHOP

Graham Hall Ext. 2226

ALSO

The Butterfield Blues Band

This Friday, May 2, 8:30 p.m.

Onondaga War Memorial

Tickets now on sale at War Memorial Box Office, S. U. Corner Store, Wilson's Leading Jewelers.

$.5.50, $4.50, $3.50

SYRACUSE

WAR MEMORIAL AUDITORIUM

SUNDAY, MAY 4, 1969

One show only at 7:30 P.M

Tickets: $4, $5, $6.

Tickets at

Wilson Jewelers—Main Store—Camillus Plaza

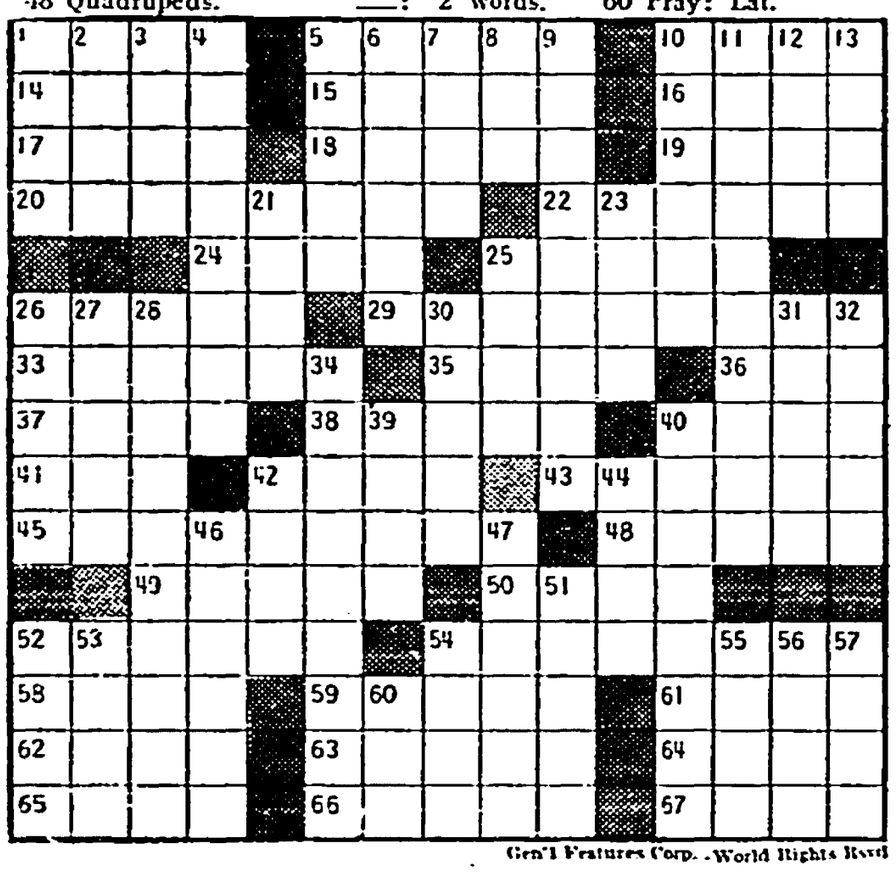
Northern Lights Shopping Town Dewitt

Syracuse University—Corner Bookstore

Mail Orders Please enclose self-addressed envelope, make check to Syracuse War Memorial Aud. and mail to 515 Montgomery Street Syracuse New York 13202

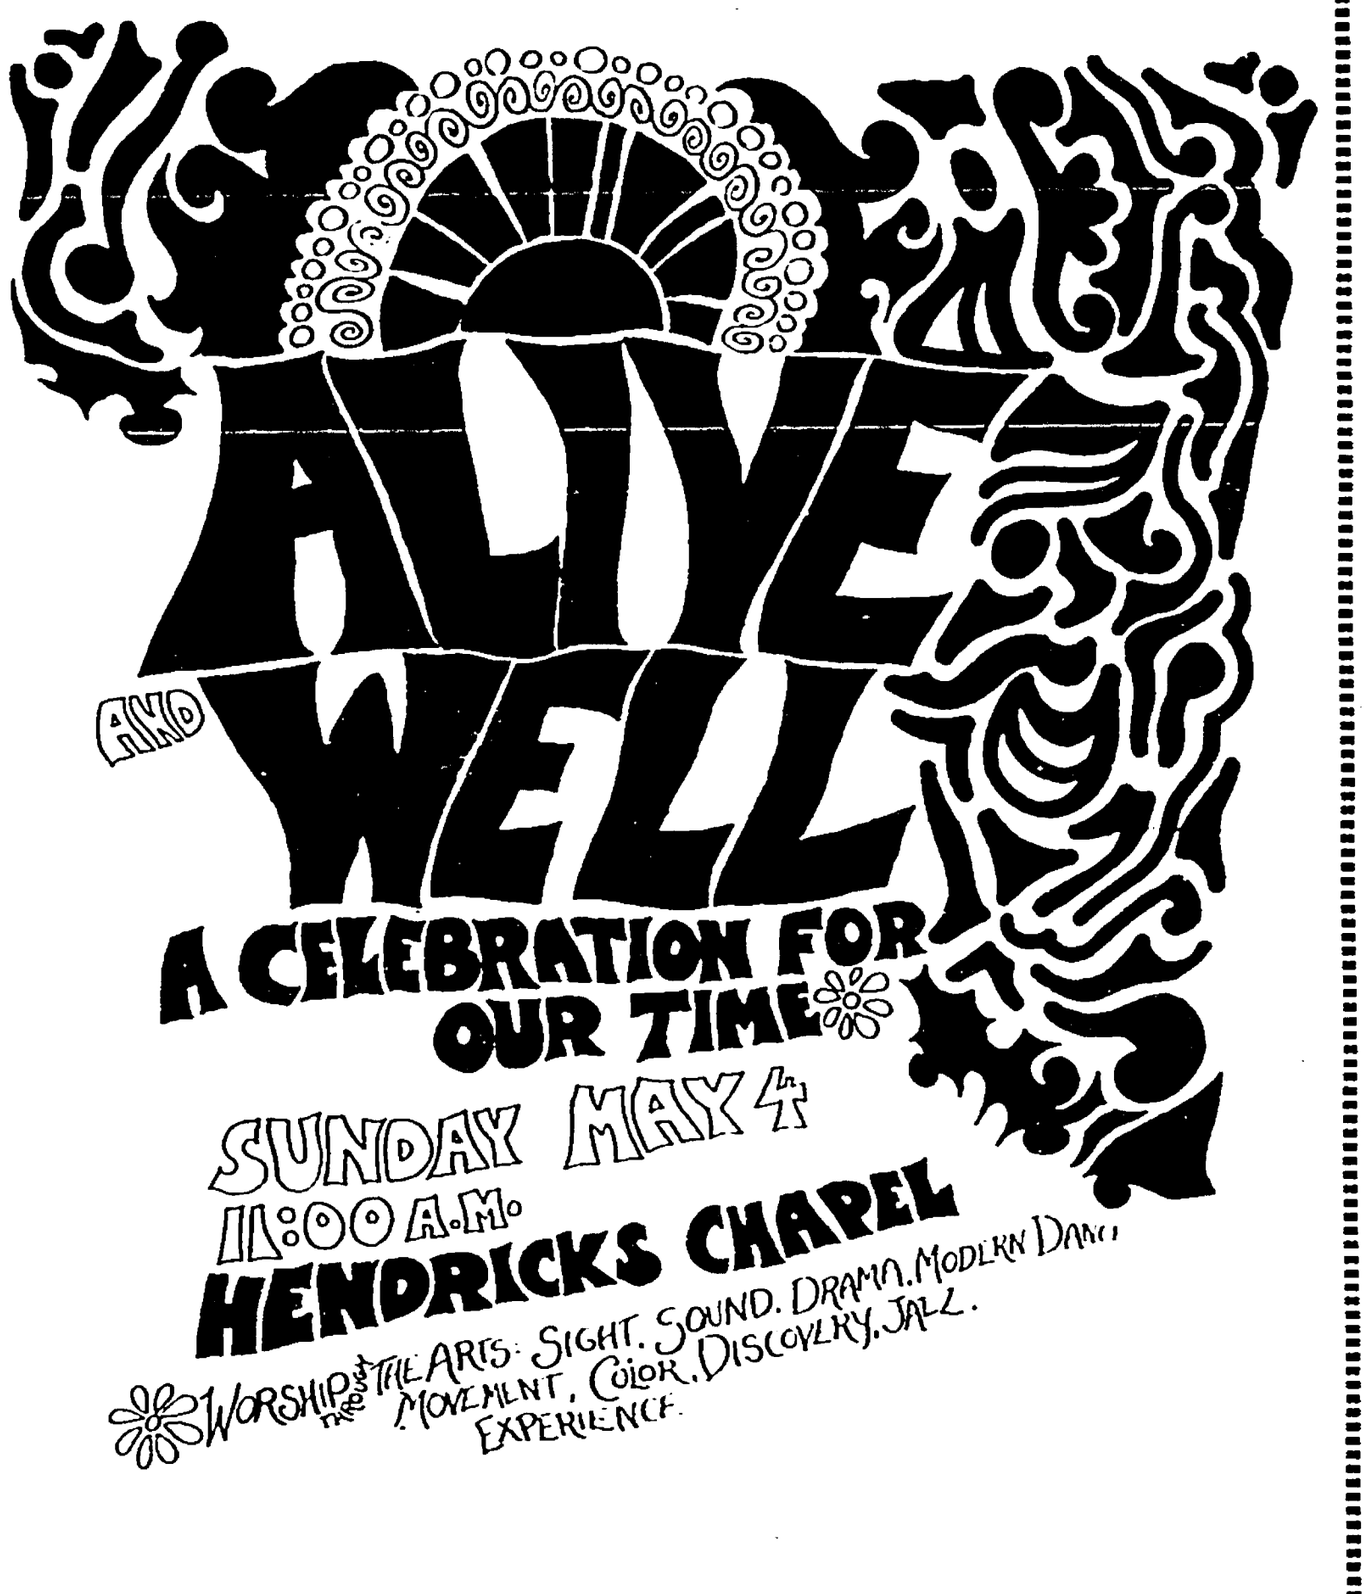
For information call (315) 477-7461

Actress sought



White girl needed to read for role of Lula in the "Dutchman" by Leroy Jones. Reading Thursday 7-9 Regent Experimental Theater Lobby.

ACROSS

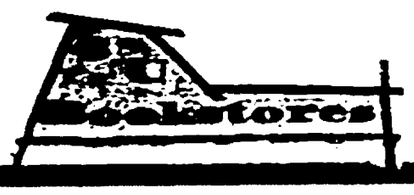


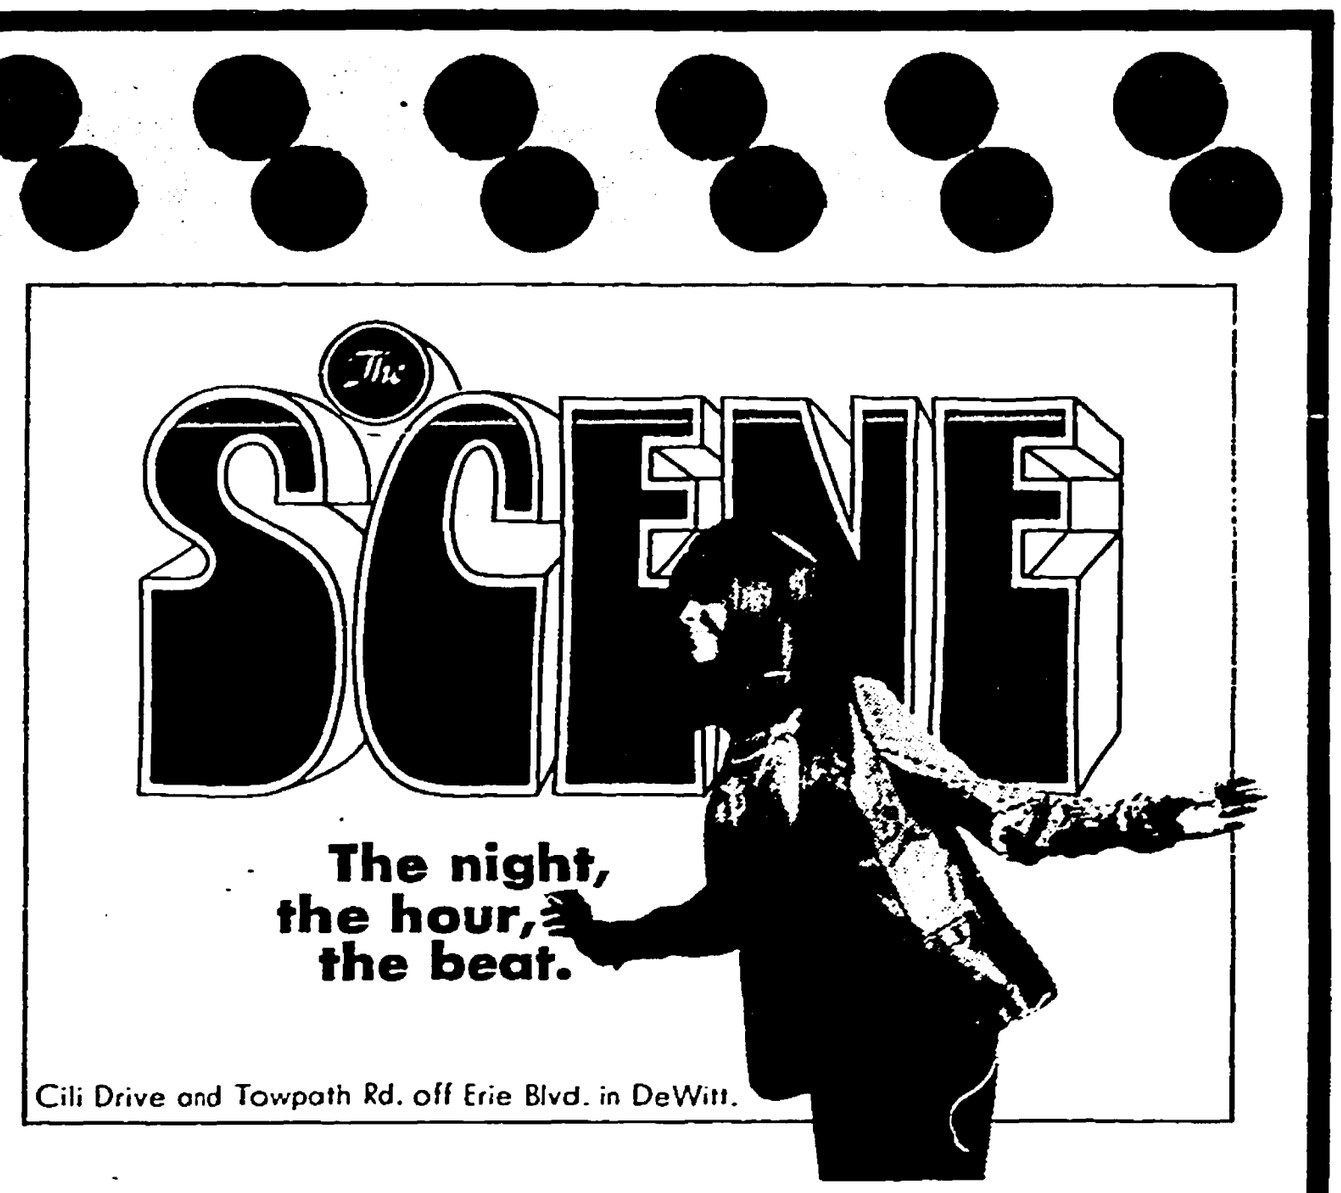
1 Miscellaneous: Abbr.
5 Sharpen.
10 King in Norse myth.
14 Nurse of a kind.
15 Vine.
16 English trolley.
17 Homonym of 44 Down.
18 Wrath.
19 Cut of beef.
20 Alienate.
22 Eton's river.
24 Ceremony.
25 Dowdy one.
26 Companionway.
29 Burlesque features.
33 Cartoon character.
35 Hot —.
36 Pacific porgy.
37 God of love.
38 Famed football coach.
40 Go: Poet.
41 French lily.
42 Surveyor's nail.
43 Come into view.
45 Alcott book: 2 words.
48 Quadrupeds.
49 Erects.
50 Came to rest.
52 Microscopic animal.
54 Fulcrum for an oar: 2 words.
58 Immersed: Poet.
59 Defense system, for short.
61 Fixed charge.
62 Word with head or back.
63 Astrological aspect.
64 Times of day.
65 Sea: Ger.
66 Kilns.
67 Democrats: Abbr.

DOWN

1 Famed Auntie.
2 "— restless as a willow in a windstorm...": 2 words.
3 Kitchen staple.
4 Fruit for pies.
5 Incline.
6 Slight colorations.
7 Storm.
8 Unity.
9 Game bird.
10 "The Lady Is —:" 2 words.
11 Musicians.
12 Rich fabric.
13 Demons.
21 Light.
23 Words used to urge on horses.
25 Leaper.
26 Charm.
27 Shinto gateway.
28 Punctuation mark
30 Purpose of the Common Market.
31 Mountain chain.
32 Heads or tails.
34 Artificial language.
39 Caps.
40 Turned in a certain direction.
42 Thick piece.
44 Letters.
46 Seesaw.
47 Resort near Boston.
51 Miners' finds.
52 First man.
53 Cartoon characters.
54 Mr. Speaker.
55 Prepare (the way).
56 Entry.
57 TV character.
60 Pray: Lat.

Gen'l Features Corp. - World Rights Reserved





Campus Clothiers
S.U. BOOKSTORES
Buy Brand Name Merchandise!!

BELLBOTTOMS:
Land Lubber
H. D. Lee
Contact
Levi

BODY SHIRTS:
Moss
Viscount

FASHION VEST
English Sportswear

Tonight:
Drink and Drown.
All the beer you can drink.
GUYS $2.75 GALS $1.75
Mixed drinks-1/2 price.

Tribute given to foreign poet

Damaso Alonso, president of the Royal Academy of the Spanish Language, critic of Spanish literature and poet, visited the Syracuse University campus Saturday and participated in a day of tribute planned for the author. He came at the invitation of Dr. Jaime Ferran and Dr. Daniel Testa of the Spanish Department to celebrate the 25th anniversary of the publication of his most important volume of social poetry, "Hijos De La Ira" (Children of Anger).

Dr. Ferran opened the six part program in the Physics Auditorium with a preface to the poetry of Alonso. It was followed by readings of papers by such prominent literary critics as Juan Marichal, Harvard University; Andrew P. Debicki, University of Kansas; Inman E. Fox, Vassar College; Philip Silver, Oberlin College; Patrick Dust, Washington University; and Daniel Testa of Syracuse.

Jose P. Rona, University of Ottawa, then presided over a panel discussion which was conducted in Spanish. Panelists included Manuel Zapata Olivella, University of Toronto; Eugenio Suarex, Galban, Mt. Holyoke; The Rev. P. Angel Zorita, West Virginia State; and Michael J. Flys, Bowling Green State College.

"Date with the master, Damaso Alonso" was held after a break for lunch, with another series of papers being read. The people involved in this discussion were Concha Zardoya, Indiana University; Fernando Arbelaez, University of Iowa; and German Bleiberg, Vassar College. Bleiberg then moderated the fourth portion of the program, a round table discussion of Alonso's works.

Novelist Eulalia Ganarriata, Alonso's wife, was then honored at a concert in Crouse College. Professor Enrique Vila-Selma arranged a recital of the words of Antonio Soler, an 18th century composer. Professor Frederick Martin of Syracuse University who is credited with the rediscovery of Soler's works, played the compositions.

A typical Spanish dinner at the El Cid restaurant concluded the program.

Composer-conductor

Copland to perform here

Composer Aaron Copland will arrive for a five day visit on campus, Thursday, during the University's 1969 Festival of the Arts. He will give a lecture, conduct a performance of the University orchestra and perform with the Krasner Chamber Music Ensemble.

Copland will talk about "A Composer's View of Music" Thursday at 4 p.m. in Room 400, Crouse College. His talk is the Humanities Lecture for the Festival.

He will conduct the Syracuse University orchestra in a performance of his own compositions Sunday at 4 p.m. in Crouse College Auditorium. The program includes portions of his opera "The Tender Land" with the Syracuse University Singers.

Copland will appear as pianist with the Krasner Chamber Music Ensemble in an all-Copland program, the season's final concert in the Syracuse Friends of Chamber Music series Monday at 8:30 p.m. in Crouse College auditorium. He will play with a trio performing "Vitebsk: A Study on a Jewish Theme." This is the only Festival event for which tickets are required.

Copland, whose compositions were first heard in the United States in 1924, has in recent years been increasingly active as a conductor. He was the first director of the American Festival of Contemporary Music at Saratoga Springs.

He has lectured extensively, abroad on American music and in the United States on contemporary music. His works have several times been chosen to represent the United States at international music festivals. In 1964 he received the Presidential Medal of Freedom for service in peacetime.

He has composed the scores for "Our Town," "The Red Pony," "Of Mice and Men" and "North Star," and for documentary films. His score for "The Heiress" won an Oscar in 1949. His many commissions include works written for Martha Graham and for Benny Goodman.

Copland has written four books: "What To Listen For in Music," "The New Music (1900-1960)," "Music and Imagination," and "Copland on Music."

Dr. Carleton Sprague Smith, in Music Today, wrote of him: "Aaron Copland is without question North America's leading composer. He has a flavour which is at once personal and American....He can be grand, solemn or gay -- bleak or 'juicy.' As a teacher, public lecturer, author, pianist and conductor, Copland has had the greatest influence of any composer now active in the United States."

A student remembered . . .

The following eulogy by Bruce Henry was written in memory of Walter Pugh, a graduate student who died of cancer earlier this month.

Walt Pugh was a mathematics graduate student -- one of the very best in Smith Hall. He was good. He had finished his Ph.D. research and was writing it up, expecting his degree in June. I met him when I came to the department in August. Subsequently I often heard "Walt Pugh said...." His having said something made you think it was true.

Personally Walt was friendly, interesting and strikingly pure. If he didn't want to go out for coffee he would say so and tell you why. Often he did, however, and he would often ask you. He did not trade small talk. He could quote chapter and verse on many topics and often held you with fascinating descriptions of watches, knives, a chunk of history....

When I met Walt in August I quickly noticed his pureness but also that he shook. He was a hard-nosed, wolf-like weight lifter and I thought probably he overdid it.

People were surprised when he went home early in December with stomach pains. Everyone was asking "Do you know what's wrong with Walt....how is he?" It crossed my mind then as news came back of cysts and cobalt that he might not make it. I telephoned him at the hospital in Philadelphia about his classes that I was carrying and got the usual right-on-the-mark responses, but in a weak voice.

He started the second semester. He returned to Syracuse very thin. Mid-March he went home again because ugly symptons persisted. His objectivity and stoicism were wonderful. Just before he left he lost some of his friendliness.

He never came back. He died April 17 of cancer. Though I was not as close to him as many people in Syracuse, reflecting on his life and death still provokes my anguish.

Bruce Henry

Not sure what you want to do? Join the club.

Du Pont Company
Room 6688
Wilmington, DE 19898

I'd like your latest information on opportunities at Du Pont for graduates with degrees in_____.

Name_____

University_____

Degree_____

Graduation Date_____

Address_____

City_____

State_____ Zip_____

Du Pont wants engineers who want to grow professionally. And we have great respect for the guy who'd like to "know more about it" before he marries a specific kind of job. We even have a plan to help him.

It's called "planned mobility"—a sort of intramural job hop. You don't get into a training program. You get into a job. If it doesn't fit you, or you it, you get into a second job or a fifth or a sixth, until you find the one you want to grow with. It gives you time to decide while you're broadening professionally.

Ask the Du Pont interviewer about it. Ask him anything. He was in your shoes very recently.

An Equal Opportunity Employer (M/F)

DUPONT

College Relations

Bookstore addition planned; interim facility ready by fall

SU Vice-President Victor J. Colway, Bookstore Director Sidney Waldman and the Student Services Committee of Student Senate have announced the construction of a temporary addition to the main bookstore to be ready for the fall semester.

The interim facility will be a prefabricated steel structure, designed by Ken White, a prominent national bookstore designer. It will be set on concrete pads and will be air-conditioned. This building will be reuseable by simply unbolting it and rebolting it on another location.

Of the 6,000 square feet of the temporary facility, 80 per cent will be used for books, except for a student bulletin board and for a display of prints and posters. The remaining 20 per cent will be used for nonselling areas. The temporary addition will include books now sold in the Corner Store. The books currently sold in the Main Bookstore will also be moved into the interim facility. This will mean that textbooks, tradebooks, and review books will all be in one location. In addition, a line of technical books will be added. According to Mr. Waldman, "This will tremendously improve book operations." With the increased facilities, there will be more shelf space which will help eliminate the shortage of books on shelves during rush period. This will greatly facilitate student textbook purchases.

The existing textbook section will be used to absorb the records and greeting cards from the Corner Store. The remaining space will be rearranged to allow for expansion of the art, engineering, and photography departments.

The 6,000 square foot temporary structure, less the 2,500 square feet of the Corner Store will add 3,500 square feet to the 3,560 square feet of the Main Bookstore. Despite the improvements to service that will result with this temporary additional space, National College Bookstore Association recommends that a university the size of Syracuse should have a bookstore of 60,000 square feet.

Continuing the close supervision established with the Bookstore, the Student Services Committee is setting up a Bookstore Advisory Board. Students on this committee will assist the Bookstore in determing merchandise lines and policy.

IDC . . .

(Continued from page 1)

control over fraternities and sororities is still delayed. However, the return of Dean Carleton on Thursday may bring a decision on the Flint-Sadler change.

Volunteers through IDC are needed to work in cooperation with the Goon Squad as guides in freshman living centers

In summarizing IDC's present role on campus, outgoing President Peg Johnston stated that IDC is now serving students as an advisory rather than a legislative organization.

ANSWER TO PUZZLE

M	I	S	C		S	T	R	O	P		A	T	L	I
A	M	A	H		L	I	A	N	A		T	R	A	M
H	A	L	E		A	N	G	E	R		R	U	M	P
E	S	T	R	A	N	G	E		T	H	A	M	E	S
			R	I	T	E		F	R	U	M	P
S	T	A	I	R		S	T	R	I	P	P	E	R	S
P	O	P	E	Y	E		R	O	D	S		T	A	I
E	R	O	S		S	T	A	G	G		W	E	N	D
L	I	S		S	P	A	D		E	M	E	R	G	E
L	I	T	T	L	E	H	E	N		A	S	S	E	S
		R	E	A	R	S		A	L	I	T
A	H	O	E	B	A		T	H	O	L	E	P	I	N
D	I	P	T		N	O	R	A	D		R	A	T	E
A	C	H	E		T	R	I	N	E		E	V	E	S
H	E	E	R		O	A	S	T	S		D	E	M	S

TEACHERS

STUDENTS

$230 ROUND TRIP TO LONDON; $250 ROUND TRIP TO PARIS/AMSTERDAM AND LONDON BY SCHEDULED JETS OF MAJOR AIRLINES. Several departures this summer. Write for brochure to Division NSA, Travel Wholesalers, ITT Building, Washington, D.C. 20036.

PROCTER & GAMBLE

Procter & Gamble Needs You
To distribute free samples from door to door. Work similar to mailman. $1.75 per hour. Possible advancement and travel for those qualified. Apply - New York State Division of Employment - 677 S. Salina St., Syracuse. Apply in person, neatly dressed.

An equal opportunity employer

FREE TRAVEL GUIDE

FEATURING
KIBBUTZ HOLIDAYS IN ISRAEL
and Optional Archeological Dig

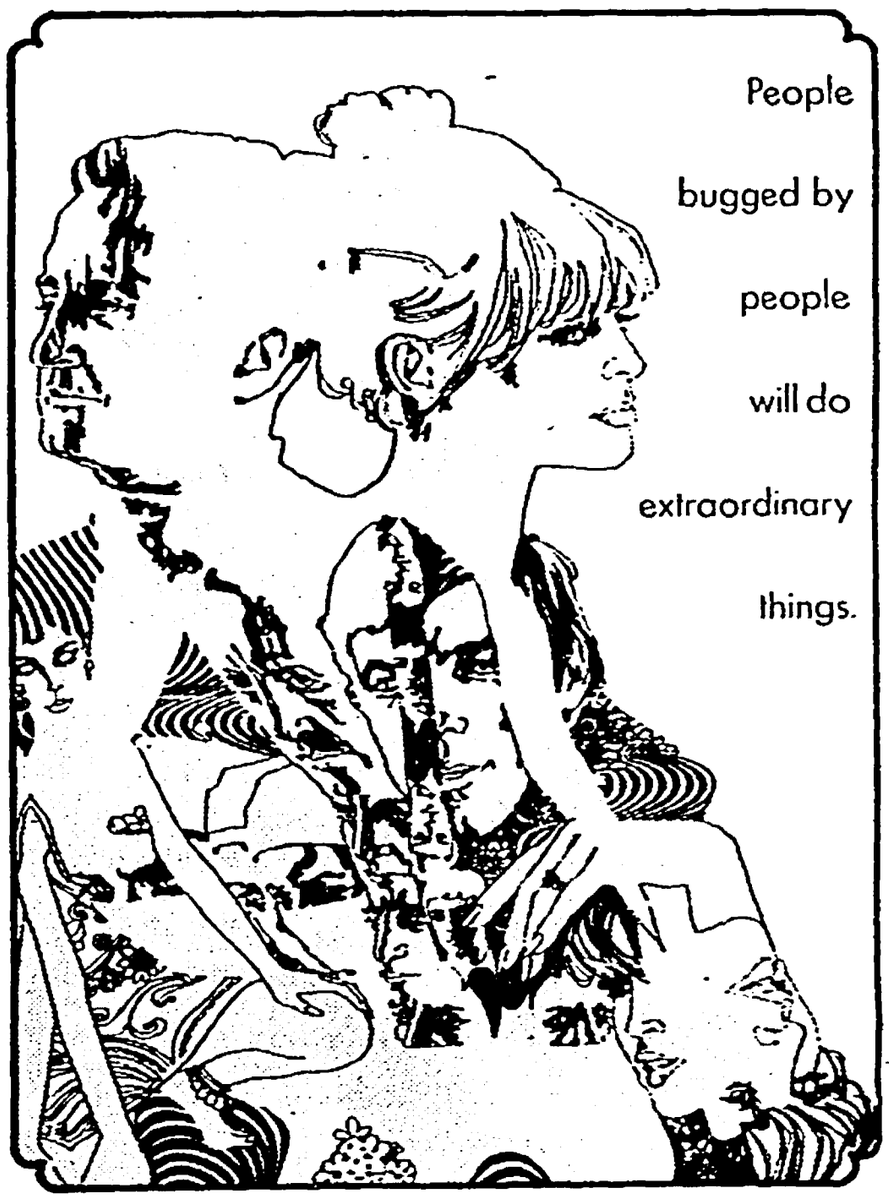
COLLEGIATES • CO-ED 17-25

• 51 Days Israel, Italy, Switzerland, France	$ 995
• 52 Days Israel, Greece, Greek Isle Cruise, Italy	1195
• 54 Days Israel, Italy, Switzerland, France, England	1095
• 34 Days Israel and England	795
• 22 Days Israel Holiday	699
• 22 Days Israel, Italy, England	749
• 45 Days Grand European Orbit (12 Countries)	1250
• 22 Days Romantic European Swing (5 Countries)	599
• 22 Days Classical Quest Italy and Greece	639

RATES INCLUDE
ALL TRANSPORTATION
MEALS
ACCOMMODATIONS
SIGHTSEEING
TRANSFERS & MORE

Mail this coupon today:
OR SEE YOUR FAVORITE TRAVEL AGENT

EASTOURS, Inc.
11 West 42nd St., New York, N.Y. 10036 64C



Without cost or obligation, please rush free Collegiate Travel Guide to:

Name _____

Address _____

City, State, Zip _____

JULIE CHRISTIE · GEORGE C. SCOTT
IN A RICHARD LESTER–RAYMOND WAGNER PRODUCTION

Petulia
...the uncommon movie.

CO-STARRING
RICHARD CHAMBERLAIN AS DAVID DANNER
ARTHUR HILL · SHIRLEY KNIGHT and JOSEPH COTTEN AS MR. DANNER
Based on a novel by John Haase - Music Composed and Conducted by John Barry
SCREENPLAY BY LAWRENCE B. MARCUS · ASSOCIATE PRODUCER DENIS O'DELL · PRODUCED BY RAYMOND WAGNER · DIRECTED BY RICHARD LESTER
SUGGESTED FOR MATURE AUDIENCES · TECHNICOLOR® FROM WARNER BROS.-SEVEN ARTS

film forum
gifford auditorium
syracuse university
$1.00
May 5, 6, 7
7 & 9 p.m.
$1.00

Campus Classified

GR 6-5571, Ext. 2314

Rates minimum of 15 words:

1 day	1.15
2 days	2.25
3 days	3.30
4 days	4.30
5 days	5.25
6 days	6:15

To place a classified ad. call GR 6-5571, ext. 2314, between 1 and 3 p.m. Ad must be placed 2 days in advance. Every word over 15 costs 5c extra per day.

ALL ADS MUST BE PREPAID.

MISCELLANEOUS

RENT if you can't buy! T.V.s, tape recorders, typewriters. By week, month or semester. Reasonable rates. S. U. BOOKSTORE. GR 6-5541, x 2426.

ALTERATIONS DONE within 24 hours. Call for an appointment. Lillian Potter, 207 Comstock. 478-5847.

PRIVATE DRIVING LESSONS — automatic or standard shift. Full or refresher courses. Qualified professional instructors. Pickup service. Auto Driving Academy. GR 6-3995.

NEED A SUMMER JOB? Syracuse YMCA Camp Tousey has openings for Unit Directors, counselors, riding master and waterfront director. Five hundred acre site with 55 staff and 160 campers on Millsite Lake near Redwood, New York Spend a challenging and rewarding summer working with boys 9 - 14 years old. For details and application, write Robert Fiske, YMCA, 340 Montgomery St., Syracuse, New York 13202.

TRIP WITH WENDI — Europe '69 Group flights on Pan Am. Best dates-better prices. Limited seats available. 475-9642.

PHOTOS — passport, identification, or fine gift portraits. For appointment, 472-5062. Sherman Sable Studio, 550 Wescott St.

FOR SALE

HILLMAN — 3 door station wagon '53, good body, engine & transmission excellent, dependable transportation. $75 firm. Call 472-6882 evenings.

SUNBEAM ALPINE CONVERTIBLE 1967 - excellent condition. 8800 miles. reasonable. 476-1008 after 5:30 p.m.

'67 GTO Convertible posi, 4-speed. Stereo. Reverb, real clean Phone GR 6-4992 after 5 p.m.

ROOM AIR CONDITIONERS — 5,000. 6,000, 7,000 and 9,000 BTUS. These are '68 Models, some scratched or dented, some used, all guaranteed — priced for students pocketbooks 446-6321.

1965 OLDSMOBILE convertible. Red. 442. Power steering. Power brakes, excellent condition. reasonable. Call 637-3430 after 5.

1966 BARRACUDA — Formula S. four speed, extras. Call 471-1885 evenings for 474-4876, ext. 8, days.

1968 CAMARO SS 350 — Blue w/black vinyl top, 4 speed, posi-traction, radio and reverberator, tachometer and gauges. Call 635-3658.

1968 BSA — 250 c.c., excellent shape. Call 478-5954 between 4 and 10 p.m. Only serious inquiries.

'63 CORVAIR 700 — Gold, body good, automatic, 4 dr., easy to park - easy to drive. $295.00. 472-8967.

FOR RENT

APARTMENT TO SUBLET (June - August) furnished, 4 rooms, on campus. $100/month Call 478-4421.

TO SUBLET (June 1 to Sept.1) 2 bedroom apartment furnished, OFF Street parking 5 min. from Campus. 476-7164.

HOUSE - from June to Sept. 3 bedrooms, $175/month, furnished, within walking distance of university, garage included. Call 475-7624.

WANTED

RIDE TO WORK, weekdays 8:30 to 5, Valentine Drive.- North Syracuse to/from corner University Avenue and Place. Phone extension 2105.

STUDENTS - for part time positions - option for summer work. $3.15 per hour. Flexible hours. Call 463-3735 weekdays, 3-5 p.m.

MALE TO SHARE large apartment, clean quiet cooking, res. area university area. 10 minutes to campus. GR 5-5743.

SUMMER CAMP COUNSELORS - MALE, Program Director — Minimum age 21 scouting experience preferred. Salary - $500 to $600 season. family accommodation provided. Aquatic Director-minimum age 21. salary $500 to $600 season, family accommodations provided. Nurse — minimum age 21, R. N. practical or certified First Aider, salary $300 to $400 season, family accommodations provided. Maintenance Man — minimum age 18, must be good driver, salary $300 to $350 season. Archery Instructors — Minimum age 21. salary $200 to $500 season. Riflery Instructor — minimum age 21, salary $500 to $600 season. family accommodations provided. Boy Scouts of America. 600 West Genesee Street. 474-8574.

FACULTY COUPLE — Looking for furnished or unfurnished two or three bedroom house or apartment near university. Academic year 1969-70. Call 655-9078.

FEMALE ROOMMATES — Wanted to share large house. Separate bedrooms. and/or fall. 478-4251.

ONE OR TWO FEMALE roommates for summer. Furnished apartment, walking distance. Call Ellen. 472-8661.

TYPING

DISSERTATIONS, THESES, AND TERM papers. IBM electric typewriter. 40c per page 5c per copy. 446-2841. Mrs. Miller.

THIRTY YEARS EXPERIENCE. Dissertations, term papers, proof-read. Satisfaction guaranteed. Mrs. Raymond Webb. HE 7-8259.

TAKE YOUR MANUSCRIPT to the only professional typing and printing service serving the S. U. area. The knowledge and experience of having done over 2,000 theses and dissertations is behind every job we turn out. Stephanie's Office Service. 469-2795.

EXPERIENCED TYPIST — specializing in thesis and term papers, etc. Call NB 5-5239.

String on the line

Unbeaten stickmen home today

Hobart to offer Orange stiff test, sport 8-1 mark

By [illegible] AGRANOWITZ

It's called momentum.

It started with romps against Ohio Wesleyan and Kenyon and squeakers over Denison and Ohio State early in April. It continued with a 22-2 destruction of Clarkson, and a pair of bruising, but decisive wins over Penn State and Hofstra.

Momentum exudes confidence. Aside from defending national champion Johns Hopkins, the Syracuse Lacrosse team boasts the only undefeated record in the country. Co-captain Cliff Ensley typifies the Orange spirit by saying, "We're really psyched now and ready for anything."

The Orangemen will be putting this buoyancy on the line and seeking win number eight this afternoon when a dangerous Hobart team invades Manley Field for a 3 o'clock battle.

Hobart sports a lusty 8-1 slate including a sudden-death triumph over Hofstra. They have also disposed of R.P.I. and Cornell, two future Orange foes.

"Hobart is the best team we've faced up to this point," says coach Roy Simmons. "Our kids will have to be at their very best if we're going to win."

Hobart's powerful attack features Frank Boyer, last year's national scoring leader. Boyer, however, has taken a back seat thus far to sophomore John Topichak, who canned nine goals in his team's 14-11 win over Cornell.

Simmie will stick with his starting ten of Leo Nolan (14 goals, 11 assists), co-captain Jeff Davis (12, 10), and Verne Doctor (7, 8), and Jim Smith (5, 1) at midfield, Ensley, John Scipione, and Ethan Klausner on defense, and Butch Brown in goal.

The remaining midfields find Dick George, Tony Lapi, and Dick Polgren in one unit, and Paul DiMartino, Tom Varley, and Rick Travis in the other.

"Lacrosse is Hobart's claim to fame," says Simmie, "They don't do much in the other sports, but they go all out for Lacrosse and can play the big boys on even terms."

Simmie expects Hobart to bring about 500 fans along for the game and is hoping that the Hill partisans respond in similar numbers to support the streaking Orangemen. "We have a real exciting team this year, and it's gonna be a real donnybrook," he says. "I hope the weather doesn't keep the crowd down."

So the fired up Orange will be looking to keep the goose egg on the right side of their won-lost mark today against the sternest test yet. Says co-captain Ensley, "We're gonna kick the living †%$&! out of them."

It's called momentum.

THE WISDOM OF EXPERIENCE is imparted by Lacrosse coach Roy Simmons as he preps them for their match against a tough Hobart unit today. The stickmen will be going in quest of their eighth straight win of the year.

Sport began as Indian war games

Springtime in Syracuse is traditionally a frustrating time of year for the sports enthusiast. After six months of action-packed enjoyment of football and basketball spectating, the fan finds himself at a loss for excitement. Virtually his only avenue of activity, in fact, is to cuss at the Salt City weather which keeps him away from the golf course.

If this dilemma sounds familiar to you, chances are you've never seen a game of lacrosse. Today, "the fastest game on two feet" comes to the Hill when the undefeated Orange stickmen tangle with Hobart in the 1969 home opener. Game time is 3 p.m. on Manley Field, right behind the field house.

Lacrosse, the fastest growing sport in the country, has tremendous spectator appeal. It combines many attractive features of other sports into one exciting burst of speed and fury. The fan sees the shifty broken field running and bone crunching contact of football, the fastbreaking, passwork, and offensive patterns of basketball, and the lightning pace of hockey. Scoring is anything but scarce in lacrosse, with typical scores being 13-9 and 15-6.

In its earliest form, lacrosse was played by the American Indian, not only as a pastime, but as a training school for war. Goals were often many miles apart, and teams were sometimes composed of entire villages. Today, all lacrosse sticks are manufactured at one of the several Indian-operated stick factories, and are hand-strung on the reservations.

Modern lacrosse has changed considerably from the old Indian version, but it still remains a test of speed, stamina, and skill--not size and strength.

In addition to a goaltender, each team fields three attackmen, three defensemen, and three midfielders. An "offsides" rule keeps play wide open by dictating that only the middies are allowed to run both ends of the field. Each squad must keep at least three men (plus the goalie) in its defensive half of the field and at least three men in its attack half at all times.

Goals are scored by throwing the lacrosse ball (2 1/4" of solid India rubber weighing 5½ oz.) into the opponent's six foot square cage, using the stick to throw, catch, and hold the ball. Most players can whip a lacrosse ball about as hard as a pitcher can hurl a baseball.

The referee calls penalties and sends the offending player to the penalty box for anywhere from 30 seconds to three minutes. As in basketball, five fouls and you're out.

Lacrosse action is fast, furious, hard hitting, and full of finesse and teamwork. The game is played virtually non-stop and the fittest survives.....it is, indeed, the fastest game on two feet.

What more could you ask for, bored sports fans? Come on out this afternoon and watch the exciting Orangemen in action. Satisfaction guaranteed or double your money back. E.A.

TV sports: the age of the instant replay

By STEVE RADICE

The Syracuse football scissors has been confusing opposing linemen for years, but it has also been confusing television cameramen trying to follow the play.

The televising of Syracuse football games, and indeed most sporting events, has in the past ten years become a thriving, but complex business. The main creative aim of all sport telecasts is to present the action completely and cleanly, without bringing attention to the telecast itself. Sometimes however, a telecast does not go as well as the producer or viewer would wish.

Take for example a cameraman missing a Fran Tarkenton fake and following the halfback (without the ball) into the line, missing Fran (with the ball), bootlegging around end for the winning touchdown.

Viewers also cry when, for example, the power fails at a hockey rink just before a winning goal, leaving the anxious and frustrated fan staring bleekly at a blank screen.

Most remote sport telecasts do go well however, and because of this viewers have seen some of the greatest sport thrills in history-the winter and summer Olympics, Roger Maris' 61st homer, the New York Jets upset of the Baltimore Colts in the 1969 Super Bowl, to name a few. What goes into these remote telecasts to insure that the viewer sees all these thrills?

A college football telecast, to be specific, starts months before the day of the game. The producer of the show plans and co-ordinates all of the elements that will go into the show-the equipment such as cameras, microphones and cables, the people such as announcers and engineers, and the location and time of the event.

Most major league sport stadiums around the country have permanent television cables strung. But, this is not true in most college stadiums. So, about a week before the college football telecast, a remote TV truck, a television studio on wheels, arrives at the stadium to begin actual physical preparations. Camera and sound cables are strung, microphones are set, and cameras are positioned in strategic spots around the stadium.

The day of the telecast arrives, and the director and his crew go through a complete rehearsal of everything to be done that day.

At game time, the show is on. The action on the field is almost equalled by that in the TV control room. For three hours, the director and his assistants are constantly busy covering the action in the best way possible.

Two recent technical innovations have greatly aided this coverage. One is the "shotgun mike," a long single directional microphone which can pick up sounds such as the quarterback calling signals from over 50 yards away. The "instant replay" has also become very popular. In this, the video tape of an especially important play is played back so that the viewer can see the great action again.

And then, the show ends, the equipment is retrieved, and the remote truck and its crew move on to next week's game in whatever city that may be.

The future of televised sports is bright. Greatly expanded sports coverage is planned for 1970 by all three major networks. Sport telecasting has become a complex and demanding business, but is as exciting as the sports it covers.

GOLF COACH JIM BOEHEIM will send his linksmen into competition against Clarkson tomorrow in a home match at the Drumlins course. Boeheim has a pair of hot shooters in Tom Lydon and Bob Kouwe. (Photo by Robertson)

Sport shorts . . .

The first perfect weekly score on the Daily Orange sports quiz when George Bromley turned in 10 correct responses for quiz number two. Bromley now leads the contest with 18 correct responses out of a possible 20.

The question which was missed most on last week's quiz concerned Jackie Robinson's playing in both a college football and a major league baseball all-star game. The answer given most frequently was Jackie Jensen, who played in the Rose Bowl, but not in a college football all-star contest.

The sports quiz will continue for three more weeks, with the best score on all 50 questions being declared the winner.

MAY

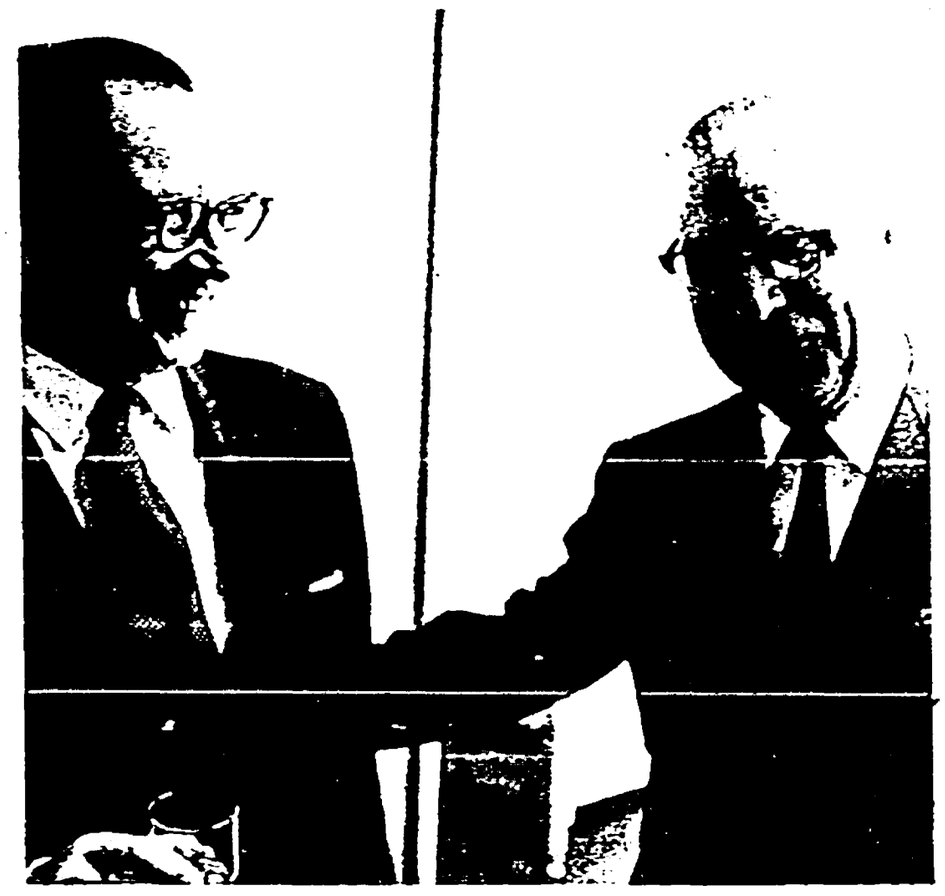
Tolley attributes protest to 'kids having some fun'

By LARRY KRAMER
Campus Affairs Editor

Chancellor William P. Tolley, in an interview held before his speech at a Zeta Beta Tau testimonial last night, attributed campus protests to "college kids having some fun and working off aggressive instincts."

The testimonial was given in honor of Ted Pierson, retiring head trustee of Zeta Beta Tau Fraternity. Tolley presented Pierson with the fourth SU Centennial Award given out. In Tolley's words, the award is "the highest commendation that can be bestowed on anyone by SU."

The testimonial offered an interesting contrast. Tolley, representing the outgoing traditional administration, spoke against the rapid change caused by campus disorders. Speaking directly after Tolley, however, ZBT National Secretary Barry Siegel strongly advocated the immediate and constant modernization of the fraternity system.



Although his speech was a tribute to Pierson, Tolley had much to say after dinner in a question and answer session concerning his stand on campus protests. "The trouble is," said Tolley, "the moderate students are ahead of the faculty; at Columbia, the faculty granted amnesty to those bastards. If they know they won't be punished, they'll just continue to break laws."

Tolley equated campus protests with the recent water fight saying "kids come here with a protest level and little to protest about."

When asked specifically about the recent administration building take-over at Harvard, Tolley remarked "all they really wanted was to have some fun."

Tolley was asked about his decision to leave after this year rather than after next year, SU's centennial: "The centennial year should be one not filled with sentiment, looking backwards," he replied, "but it should have young aggressive leadership, and look forward to progress. Right now, what's good for the university is what's good for me."

Tolley referred favorably to the recent SBU boycott, "an orderly boycott is fine. But there's a big difference between dissent and destruction. I wish we could have had more discussion similar to what went on during the boycott."

CHANCELLOR WILLIAM P. TOLLEY talks over old times at a testimonial dinner given in honor of Ted Pierson, retiring head trustee of Zeta Beta Tau Fraternity.

DAILY ORANGE

Syracuse University's Daily Newspaper Since 1903

Vol. 67, No. 97 | Syracuse, New York Thursday, May 1, 1969 | 10 Cents

Corbally can't visit this month

Dr. John E. Corbally, who is to succeed William P. Tolley as SU Chancellor, has replied to a letter inviting him to visit the campus and participate in student life. He stated that he hoped to start his program at Syracuse "with exactly the kind of program" outlined in the letter.

The Student Government leaders suggested that Dr. Corbally visit the campus in early May, stay in a dormitory, eat meals in a University dining hall and participate in discussion sessions with students. Dr. Corbally stated that his duties at Ohio State University would not permit him to plan a visit, as was outlined in the letter in May.

JOHN E. CORBALLY

The text of their correspondence:

"The student body of Syracuse University would like to take this opportunity to extend our congratulations to you on being selected Chancellor of Syracuse University. It is our hope that your term as Chancellor will be marked by a great degree of cooperation between students and administrators.

"With the idea in mind of enhancing these possibilities for cooperation, the students of Syracuse University invite you to visit the campus as their guest for several days during the first part of May. In order to provide personal contact between you and the students, arrangements will be made for you to stay in a dormitory and to take meals in University dining halls. During your stay, there will be opportunities for you to attend discussion sessions with students and student leaders, an open meeting with the student body, social activities, and several classes. Such a visit may enable you to establish a better rapport with the students and could serve to ease the tension which has been growing among students in recent weeks.

"The students of Syracuse University look forward to meeting you."

Dr. Arnold condemns vandalism on campus

By JOHN WISNIEWSKI

Professor Edmund C. Arnold yesterday criticized the "conspiracy of silence which is protecting vandals here on the SU campus" during University Union's bull session in the basement of Hendricks Chapel.

"Vandalism is a cost that doesn't have to exist at all," he said. Arnold, chairman of the graphic arts department in the School of Journalism, stated that the university spends a minimum of $100,000 each year for dormitory repairs. Another $25,000 is spent for clearing the campus of trash. "It's not the normal cleaning," he said, "but it's the cleaning up after 'slobs' that is costly."

Stating that vandalism occurs in every building on campus, Arnold made particular mention of the Newhouse Communications Center. The elevator, laboratory drawing tables and the UPI wire machine have been damaged several times during the year. He said that damage to books is most serious. "It is a loss that can't be measured in dollars and cents."

Arnold expressed surprise that students and administrators have done little to solve the problem. Anyone who witnesses an act of vandalism and does not report it to the authorities is an "accessory after the fact," he said.

"Vandalism is a question of a person's character," he continued, "and it is a sign of a perverted mind. But how do you go about finding a sick mind on an admissions application form?"

Arnold feels that if a person has enough intelligence to gain college admission, then that person should also have enough intelligence to respect the property of others. "Otherwise he ought to be kicked out."

According to the professor, studies show that most of the vandalism in large corporations occurs where the ignorant laborers are concentrated. He said, "Vandalism gives lie to the claim that the university is a community of intellectuals."

Arnold believes that student desire for more freedom and an important role in administrative affairs must be coupled with a greater sense of responsibility.

"I'm not anti-student at all," he said. "In fact the next priority after the new library should be a student union center. I've felt this way for years," Arnold continued. "But I don't think the student union should be completely out of the administration's hands," he concluded.

THE LIBRARY PROBLEM was the topic for discussion when the Council on Student Life met in the Noble Room of Hendricks Chapel yesterday afternoon. CSL has yet to reach a decision on adjusting the library's availability to students during finals, but some thoughts on the problem are offered on today's editorial page.

FRED G. BURKE

JOHN C. HONEY

LAWRENCE C. HOWARD

JOHN R. SEARLES, JR.

Maxwell to install new dean

By MARILYN MILBACK

A two-day program, The University and Its Communities, has been planned for the installation of Alan K. Campbell as the fifth Dean of the Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs. The programs will convene in the Founders Room, Maxwell Hall.

Today at 4 p.m., John C. Honey will speak on "The University and Its Government." Dr. Honey is the vice president for governmental affairs and research at Syracuse University. Panel members for this discussion include Peter T. Marsh, Melvin A. Eggers, Joan M. Howard, and Edward H. Ruhe. This presentation is sponsored by the Maxwell Graduate School Association.

"The University and Metropolitan Syracuse" will be the topic for today's meeting at 8 p.m. The speaker is John R. Searles, Jr., executive vice president of the Metropolitan Development Association. Panel members include Lee L. Smith, Louis Kriesberg, Norman T. Pinkard, and E. Barbara Phillips. The Continuing Education Center for the Public Service is sponsoring this presentation.

Lawrence C. Howard, vice president of the Danforth Foundation, will begin Friday's session at 10 a.m. with a discussion of "The University and Urban Society." Howard will be joined by panel members Guthrie S. Birkhead, William P. Mangin, Thomas N. Perloff and Rudolph J. Lombard. Sponsor for this presentation is the Metropolitan Studies Program.

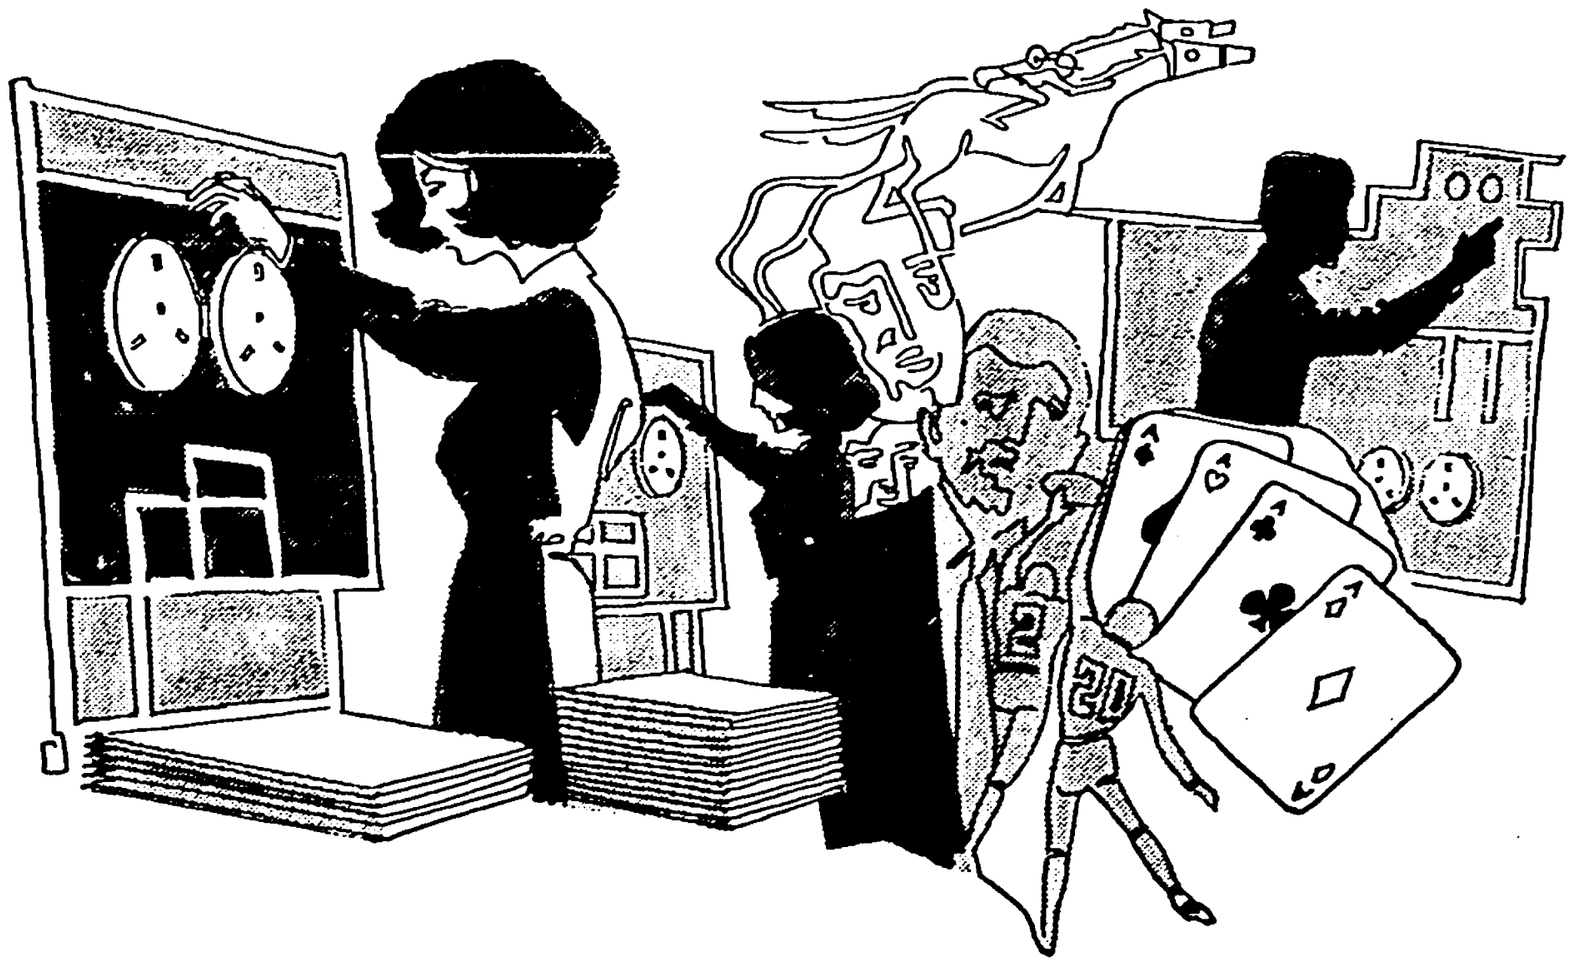
At 2 p.m. the International Students Association will sponsor a discussion led by Fred G. Burke. Burke, dean of international studies at the State University of New York at Buffalo, will speak on "The University and International Affairs." His panel members include Irving Swerdlow, Robert W. Gregg, David G. Curzon and Itzhak Galnoor.

After Burke's presentation, there will be a reception for faculty, alumni and Maxwell graduate students in the Founders Room, Maxwell Hall.

The two day program will end with the installation of Dean Campbell at 8:30 p.m. in Hendricks Chapel. Senator Edmund S. Muskie (D-Maine) will speak. A reception will follow.

ROTC

An open hearing on the position of ROTC on campus will be conducted today from 2 to 5 p.m. in B115 Grant by the ROTC Committee, a subcommittee of University Senate.



Persons who did not get a chance to speak last time are invited to today's hearing.

Concert refunds

Students desiring refunds on last week's Greek Week concert (Richie Havens, Sly and the Family Stone) can get back half of the price of their ticket at HBC between 10 a.m. and 12:30 today and between noon and 3 p.m. tomorrow.

the only way to beat the system

The System.
It's exacting. Competitive.
It demands your utmost.
Go ahead and "do your thing."
But it better be good . . .
A better product,
A more useful service,
Or a more sustaining vision.
The System adapts itself to new ideas
And makes itself a little better in the process.
But the System is far from perfect.
It's vicious at times. Hypocritical.
Still, it's the only system we have.
And the only way you can beat it
Is to make it better.
That's what the System is all about.
We hope you realize this. Because
You are our life insurance.

Phoenix Mutual LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY
HARTFORD CONNECTICUT

ANGUS H. TWOMBLY — Editor-in-Chief

MANAGING EDITOR - Alan Stamm EXECUTIVE EDITOR - Karen Wiediger NEWS EDITOR - Fred Tuccillo EDITORIAL DIRECTOR - David A. Ross COPY EDITOR - Jean Havens FEATURE EDITOR - Roz Mazer SPORTS EDITOR - Mike Weber CAMPUS AFFAIRS EDITOR - Larry Kramer PHOTOGRAPHY EDITOR - Clint Clemens ASSOCIATE EDITORS - Andrij Bilyk, Kay Christensen, Beth Hillson, Rona Kavee, Helene Macdonald, Charles Shapiro, Dan Schlossberg, Patti Williams, Roni Zlokower.

DAILY ORANGE

Syracuse University's Daily Newspaper Since 1908

THURSDAY, MAY 1, 1969 PAGE 3

STEVEN P. STROBRIDGE — Business Manager

ASSISTANT BUSINESS MANAGER— Art Depasqua, NATIONAL ADVERTISING MANAGER— Janet Meyer ACCOUNT EXECUTIVES— Roger Black, Jim Maney, Mike Greenstein.

Published Tuesday, through Friday during the academic year by students of Syracuse University. Offices located at 200 Brooklea Drive, Fayetteville, N.Y., and 1101 East Adams St., Syracuse, New York. Entered as Second Class matter at the U.S. Post Office, Fayetteville, N.Y. 13066.

Distorted perspective

We don't know where the Chancellor has been for the last two weeks but from his remarks at Tuesday's Block "S" Dinner, it seems that he's been somewhere around 1947. Our retiring Chancellor is still under the impression that students will do anything for fun.

"Students are not fools," he said," "So long as no one is punished why shouldn't the fun continue!" If Chancellor Tolley had been on campus last Wednesday, or if he had talked to Vice Chancellor Piskor, Vice President Muller of Cornell University, or any one of many administrators who have taken the time to get involved in the problems of their campuses, he could never have made such a simplistic statement.

Students are not looking for fun, they are searching for justice and equality. We "arrogant adolescents," as the Chancellor termed us, want an educational system that is relevant, and flexible enough to meet the demands of a world in turmoil. We are, contrary to the Chancellor's antiquated opinion, asking questions. We will not, however, settle for patronizing, nebulous answers, and in that respect, the Chancellor's statement that we have "voices but no ears" is right.

Furthermore, the Chancellor should realize that the disruptions in American colleges are not the sole work of SDS, PFP, and the myriad other "new left" groups who, unfortunately, make more news than their numbers warrant. The major portion of the demonstrators, protestors, and "naive professors," are the same moderates whose support he seeks. The professors are not, however, as naive as the Chancellor would have us believe. They know that any increase in equality and relevance will not impair their academic freedom, for equality and relevance are so contageous that wherever they appear everyone benefits in the long run.

Finally, we can't help but feel that the Chancellor's cry for a jail sentence solution to campus disorders sounds slightly like the panic-stricken cry or the right wing. It is evident that the coming months will be filled with testimonials in which the Chancellor will be called upon to speak out on his solution to college disorders. The Chancellor was once known as a "fighter for academic freedom." We only wish that in the last months of his service he could somehow recapture the enlightenment and understanding that marked its beginning.

Study rooms needed

A tentative library hours schedule has been proposed by the main library. It calls for the closing of the building during examinations at 2 a.m. The Council on Student Life, however, is planning to discuss the schedule and decide whether or not these hours reflect student needs.

Hopefully, before making this decision, the Council will review its records from last year. To the members surprise, they may discover that what is needed is not a 24 hour library but a study room which is open for the entire examination period.

Not too many students need the use of reference materials at 3 a.m. nor do they need to take books out of the library at that hour. These things can be done during the regular hours.

There is, however, a vital need for a room where students can study in comfort and smoke, drink or eat at the same time. There is also a need for a place where a group can discuss subject material together, and the library is a place for quiet, not group discussion.

The Council on Student Life could solve this problem by doing one of two things: It can make sure that the dormitories which have requested autonomy have the program working by exam time so that students can use the study rooms and libraries to their best advantage.

The Council can also look into the possibility of using the old Sims Dining Hall, which is now used as a branch for the main library, as a study room. With this open during exams, those students living in dormitories without autonomy would also have a good place to study.

What is most important, however, is that before the Council decides to change the library hours, it should make sure that what is needed is a library and not a study room.

Letters

To the Editor:

"Implicit in every institution are the seeds of its own destruction." A manifestation of Marx's axiom is the SDS within the institutions of higher learning. This self-styled, gladiatorial lunatic fringe, was just a few months or at best, a few years ago, the infant terrible in some high school sand box. Alas, in 1969, these leaders of the apocalyptic have finally surfaced with the psychology of an embryonic Phi Beta Kappa V.D. germ, and are in want of dictating policy to their mesmerized lackeys and establishment orgres. This cataclysm is directed against all dullards and bunglers over 30 years old possession LL.D.'s, PhD.'s, M.D.'s and other capitalistic certificates of corruption.

The SDS postulates that the spavined, distempered sloth and his jackels who are running this lecherous cesspool called "The Establishment" must be overthrown. The universities should be a place to snort smack, read Winnie the Pooh, The Checkered Demon, Super Warthog and other meaningful relative things. The present curriculum and all profs who subscribe to the sanctity of mom's old fashioned brontosaurus pie must be strapped firmly to a skate board and exiled to the far reaches of the Bronx Zoo. No more straight freaks may visit the academic crash pad. Only drag queens, seven-foot lesbians, warlocks, sorcerers, swamis, one-eyed St. Bernards, Abominable Snowmen and the Loch Ness Monster will be allowed to recruit on campus.

Our school diplomas will increase in value as we follow our SDS stillborn saviors like storm petrel up and out of this valley of buffoonery to the Light, the Truth and the Glory that hides in the Giant Womb in the sky. Amen.

Maddy Madison
SABE

From the right

Recognize the problem

Ernie Grafe

Well, what have we here? Bayard Rustin, civil rights activist, calling on college and university officials (Sunday) to "stop capitulating to the stupid demands of Negro students." He says they need remedial training, not soul courses. Also, "A multiple society cannot exist where an element of that society, out of its own sense of guilt and masochism, permits another segment of that society to hold guns at their heads in the name of justice." If Rustin weren't a Negro himself, he would undoubtedly be dubbed a racist, as was Dr. Daniel Patrick Moynihan for his book, "Beyond the Melting Pot," in which he tried to point out some of the tragic problems that exist in Harlem and other Negro communities. The recognition of a problem is a big step toward solving it, but almost everyone who tries...well, you see what happens. Such are the perils of telling it like it is.

IN SUPPORT OF THE ABM

There is a wide-spread feeling in this country that the U.S.S.R. is really a peace-loving country. They would never consider launching a nuclear war. Assure the Russians that they have nothing to fear, so the theory goes, and they will sit back and mind their own business. All our troubles will be over.

We have a question to ask: what did Russia have to fear about her own internal security from the Czechs in 1968? Or the Hungarians in 1956? Or the Poles and East Germans in the late forties? A direct attack? Hardly. With every new Russian administration, the Liberals of this country take great pains to point out how "liberal" the new government of the U.S.S.R. are. Yet every Russian government has insisted on showing the world that it considers force a legitimate tool against weaker nations. We hope this is not an American Liberal position.

In 1933, Hitler came to power in Germany. Although many people were apprehensive, the belief was widespread that if we just showed him he had nothing to fear, he would be satisfied. This was much easier to believe and accept than what Hitler outlined in "Mein Kampf." And today people continue to ignore the statements of communist leaders.

In Red China, for instance, the decision was recently made to prepare for war, listing the U.S. as China's primary enemy. (Russia placed second.) Lin Piao, heir-designate to Mao, said the country should start working on its nuclear arms arsenal.

In the face of all this, American Liberals still say the ABM—a strictly defensive deployment—is a provocation.

We contend that the ABM system is a regrettably costly but necessary addition to the U.S. arsenal. This demonstrates to any potential enemy that they do indeed have something to fear should they decide to attack our country. It is vitally important that we do not become the "weaker nation." Actually, the ABM is one way of avoiding world war. Appeasment has been tried, and it failed.

Nor can the ABM be a provocation...not when the Soviets have two such systems already, and are presently working on their first-strike capability.

Are we being alarmist? Perhaps. But then the same label must be applied to Churchill in his repeated attempts to warn the world of the danger that was Hitler.

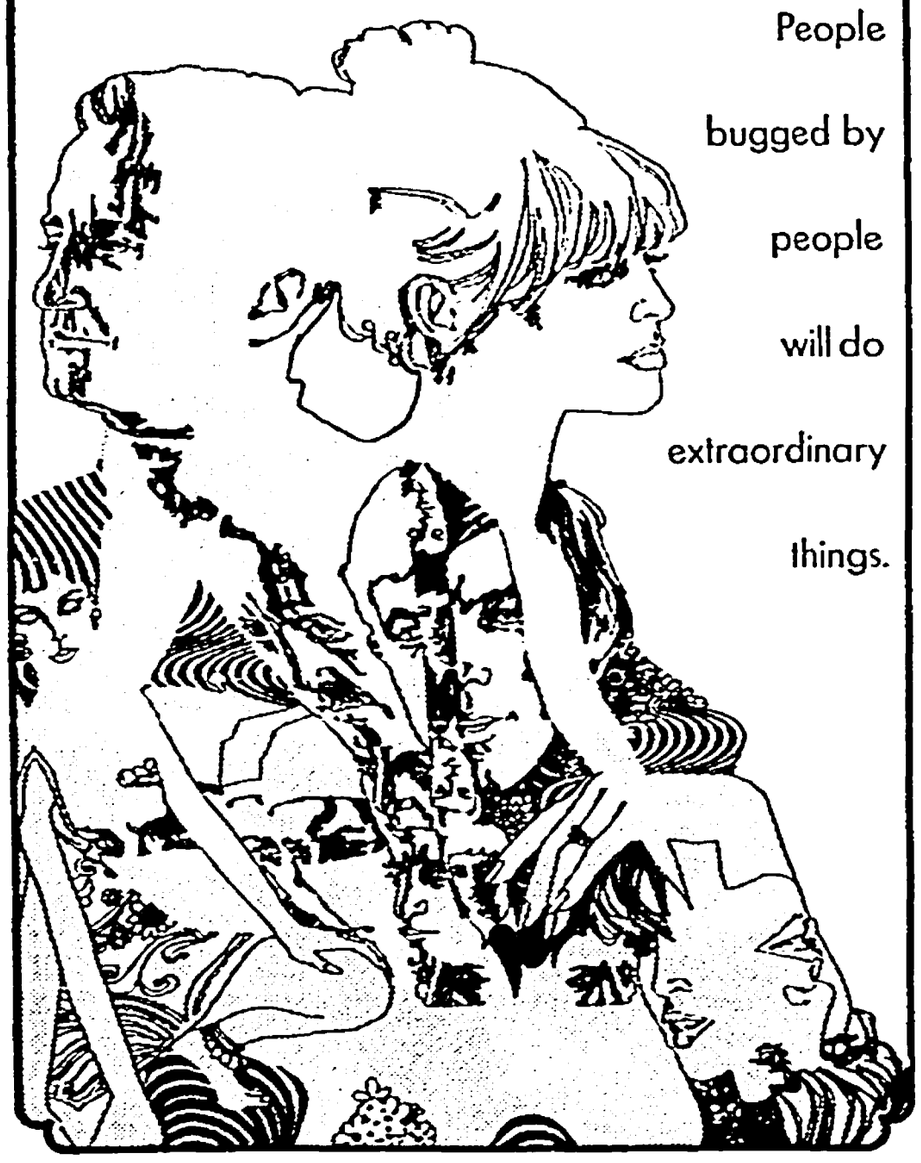
ERNIE GRAFE, a sophomore in the school of journalism, is the spokesman for Up From Liberalism, a campus conservative movement.

Columns appearing on this page are the opinions of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Daily Orange staff. The paper welcomes diverse opinions and will consider all materials submitted for publication on this page.

Letters to the editor should be type written, signed and limited to 250 words in length. The Daily Orange reserves the right to correct the letters and articles for grammar and incorrect factual information.

TEACHERS

$230 ROUND TRIP TO LONDON; $250 ROUND TRIP TO PARIS/AMSTERDAM AND LONDON BY SCHEDULED JETS OF MAJOR AIRLINES. Several departures this summer. Write for brochure to Division NSA, Travel Wholesalers, ITT Building, Washington, D.C. 20036.



STUDENTS

PROCTER & GAMBLE

Procter & Gamble Needs You
To distribute free samples from door to door. Work similar to mailman. $1.75 per hour. Possible advancement and travel for those qualified. Apply - New York State Division of Employment - 677 S. Salina St., Syracuse. Apply in person, neatly dressed.

An equal opportunity employer

JULIE CHRISTIE · GEORGE C. SCOTT
IN A RICHARD LESTER–RAYMOND WAGNER PRODUCTION

People bugged by people will do extraordinary things.

Petulia
...the uncommon movie.

CO-STARRING
RICHARD CHAMBERLAIN AS DAVID DANNER
ARTHUR HILL · SHIRLEY KNIGHT and JOSEPH COTTEN AS MR. DANNER
Based on a novel by John Haase · Music Composed and Conducted by John Barry
SCREENPLAY BY LAWRENCE B. MARCUS · ASSOCIATE PRODUCER DENIS O'DELL · PRODUCED BY RAYMOND WAGNER · DIRECTED BY RICHARD LESTER
SUGGESTED FOR MATURE AUDIENCES · TECHNICOLOR® FROM WARNER BROS.-SEVEN ARTS

film forum
gifford auditorium
syracuse university
$1.00
May 5, 6, 7
7 & 9 p.m.
$1.00

Union substitute

Jabberwocky springs to life next weekend

Jabberwocky's official opening May 8, with concerts by Junior Wells and John Hammond, is the realization of many months of effort to establish an on-campus meeting place for students. Its success could provide more impetus to plans for a permanent University Union building.

Since UU people have been getting the blues for years in their attempts at getting a union building, it is appropriate that for the opening of this temporary facility in the Kimmel basement, the performers both be blues singers. Junior Wells, who will appear with his electrifying blues band, is representative of the Chicago blues. His three albums on Vanguard emphasize the frustration of his people, with roots in the south, yet somehow existing in a northern city.

John Hammond draws more heavily on the black country blues but also performs what is known as urban blues. Songs on his six Vanguard albums include ones written by Muddy Waters and Blind Lemon Jeggerson. Whereas the Stones, Beatles, and other groups are retracing their steps back to rock music's traditional country and blues roots. Hammond has been there all the time.

Jabberwocky is designed so that its atmosphere will be informal. Textured yellow wall covering, subdued lighting and a portable stage lend to this coffee house effect. There will be a beer bar in addition to the snack and food area. Jabberwocky will be open to students daily from noon to 1 a.m. Approximate seating capacity will be 180.

Eight individual shows will be given by Wells and Hammond. The Thursday, May 8 sets will be at 8 and 10 p.m. Both Friday and Saturday night's performances on May 9 and 10 will begin at 7:30, 9:30, and 11:15 p.m. Tickets for each show are now on sale for $2.50 at HBC cloakroom. Because of Jabberwocky's relatively small size, the number of tickets is limited.

The concert, presented in cooperation with the Syracuse Folk Society, is the main show for this year's Spring Weekend. Next year's schedule for Jabberwocky is being planned, including films, poetry, and light shows. This year, however, after May 8, students will at least have a warm weather alternative other than "M" Street to gather, get into some good raps and have some cold beer.

Studio Theatre 479 9911 823 WESTCOTT STREET

Now Showing

"It is right on target with some keen potshots at Viet Nam, smut peddling, nymphomania, underground newspapers, pop art and sex and the single hot-blooded young man!"
—Bob Salmaggi, WINS Radio

""AN OVERGROUND SEX-PROTEST FILM!""
Archer Winsten, New York Post

Revlon invents 'Un-Lipstick'!

'Un-Lipstick'? It's bare, but the color's there. Pale, but the shine won't fail. 20 blushy little mouthcolors like Nothing Frosted, Polar Bare Pink, Grapevine and Pithy Peach. All clear as tinted glass, and gleaming with fresh young color.

Natural Wonder 'Un-Lipstick'

Available at:

Syracuse University Bookstore

APO needs information

Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity (APO) is compiling information for their 1969-1970 "Dates and Data." This publication gives information on all Syracuse University student organizations.

Questionnaires have been mailed to most organizations on campus, and should be returned to Alpha Phi Omega, Archbold Gym, by Friday, May 2.

APO is asking an advisor or officer of the following organizations to call X3433: Aspiration '72, Cinema Vendredi, Leadership Through Education, Projection '70, Greek-Independent Alliance, Young Americans for Freedom, Young Democrats, and United Nations Association. APO has been unable to contact these organizations.

Any organization formed within the past year which has not been contacted, should call APO immediately.

For class of '73

O-Week now in planning stage

Traditions Commission is in the process of finalizing the orientation schedule for next year's new students. The scope of Orientation Week is being broadened to include more campus organizations and more events so as to expose the student to the whole University.

Organizations wishing to have a booth on the quad during O-Week for "Activities on Parade" should contact Connie Steward (extension 3409).

Groups interested in participating in the orientation program should contact the appropriate TC Program Chairman. They are:

Academics--Lou Jacobs (3111) or David Cohen (2629); Residence Halls--Bill Hettig (2569) or Carolyn Sykes (2480); Cultural-- Barb Grossman (2955); College Programs-- Leigh Smith (2639) or Bill Eimicke (2729); Special Groups--Jim Brodsky (2712) or Tom Sicora (2035); Student Activities--Mark Herwig (2828) or Sally Comando (2356); and Publications--Jeff Shapiro (2664) or Dave Robbins (2664).

If there are any questions about programs or participation, call Jim Duryea (2681) or Helen Dworetzky (2663).

The SCENE

TONIGHT: ADMISSION ½ PRICE.

Snoopy is coming!

FREE TRAVEL GUIDE

FEATURING
KIBBUTZ HOLIDAYS IN ISRAEL
and Optional Archeological Dig

COLLEGIATES CO-ED 17-25

- 51 Days Israel, Italy, Switzerland, France ..... $ 995
- 52 Days Israel, Greece, Greek Isle Cruise, Italy 1195
- 54 Days Israel, Italy, Switzerland, France, England 1095
- 34 Days Israel and England 795
- 22 Days Israel Holiday 699
- 22 Days Israel, Italy, England 749
- 45 Days Grand European Orbit (12 Countries) 1250
- 22 Days Romantic European Swing (5 Countries) 599
- 22 Days Classical Quest Italy and Greece 639

RATES INCLUDE
ALL TRANSPORTATION
MEALS
ACCOMMODATIONS
SIGHTSEEING
TRANSFERS & MORE
Mail this coupon today:
OR SEE YOUR FAVORITE TRAVEL AGENT

EASTOURS, Inc.
11 West 42nd St., 64C
New York, N.Y. 10036
Without cost or obligation, please rush free Collegiate Travel Guide to:
Name .....
Address .....
City, State, Zip .....

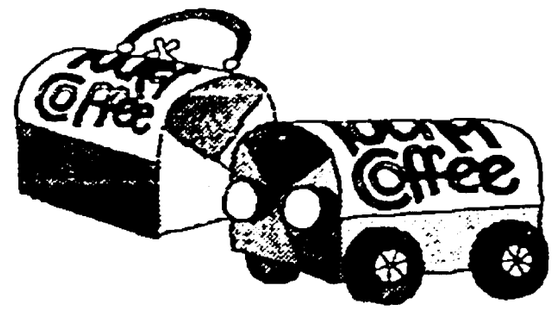
POTPOURRI SALE!

Last 3 Days

Straw Beach Bags!
Animals!
Glassware!
Posters!
Giant Inflatables!
(Pepsi, Coke, Beer, etc)
Indian-print yard goods!
Leather goods!
Sunglasses!
Ashtrays!

Unusual Gift Items [from our unusual buyer]!

SUBSTANTIAL SAVINGS!

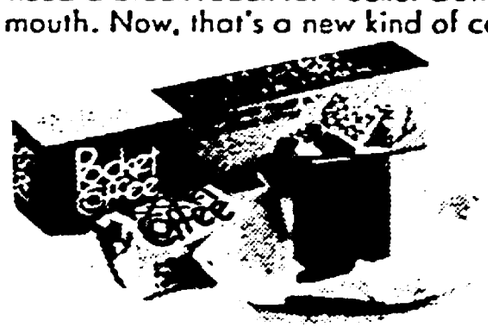


IN THE SHED
FRONT OF STORE

303 University Pl.

FREE-to the first 300-Peter Max Posters

Pocket Coffee!
What's that?



A new kind of coffee break that goes where you go.

If you're one of the people who often find you can't stop to get a cup of coffee when you need it, listen here. Pocket Coffee is a coffee break you can carry with you.

The man who dreamed up Pocket Coffee invented a way of putting some real brewed liquid coffee inside a delicious chocolate shell. Each piece is double-wrapped and packed in a three candy stick that fits neatly into your pocket or purse.

At work, on the road, or at play (you devil you), when you need a break reach for Pocket Coffee. Pop one into your mouth. Now, that's a new kind of coffee break.

Available at

DARRYL WELLS, who is starring the Syracuse Repertory Theater's production of "Summertree."

'Summertree' portrays collegians' emotions about conflict in Vietnam

By PATTI WILLIAMS
Associate Editor

The play "Summertree" expresses the way most college students feel about the Vietnam war, according to actor Darryl Wells. The 26-year-old actor is starring in "Summertree," the final Syracuse Repertory Theater production of this season.

"It's a very now play," the actor said in a soft voice with the hint of a southern accent. "The play makes you think."

Wells plays a college freshman who wants to become a pianist. According to the actor, the boy's father refuses to allow the boy to transfer into a music school because he thinks the boy will make money as a pianist.

"The boy says, 'I can no longer go to school and study something I don't want to study,'" Wells said as he ran his fingers through his light brown hair. "The guy drops out of school and is drafted. He goes to Vietnam where he's killed.

"The guy is dead. What contribution is he going to make not only to the field of music but also to the rest of the world? It's nothing but a complete waste."

"Summertree" also explores the problem of the lack of communication between the father and son, Wells said. The father felt that the army would make a man of his son, according to the actor.

"The play shows you how people try to justify the reasons for a soldier's death," the blue-eyed actor said.

The playwrite, Ron Cowen, was only 21 when he wrote the play which later won the Drama Desk-Veron Rice award for "outstanding achievement in the Off-Broadway theater." Wells said Cowen has "a sense of conversation that's terrific." Cowen will speak at a drama department convocation tomorrow at 4 p.m. in the Regent Experimental Theater.

Although Wells has only been acting for three and one-half years, he played Barbara Parkin's hometown boyfriend in the movie, "Valley of the Dolls" and he had a major role in the soap opera "The Nurses."

"One of the things that impressed me most about movie making was the wasted time and money," the actor said. "It was like I could see the money to down the drain before my eyes. We filmed on location in Danbury, Connecticut.

"It took lots of time to set up the equipment. We'd be in make-up at five or six in the morning and sometimes not do anything for four or five hours."

Scenes were shot as many as 10 or 11 times so that various camera angles could be recorded, according to Wells. Throughout those takes, he said, the actors and the lighting had to remain the same. When the sun suddenly came out, they had to stop filming until it went back under a cloud, according to Wells.

"They edit the film so that it all flows into one scene," he said. "If the lighting or the actor change from one take to another, the audience will notice it."

Although Wells found he had quite a bit of idle time when making a movie, he said when doing the soap opera, "The Nurses," he worked under pressure.

"The actors don't have much time but they have to produce," Wells said. "Acting in soap opera involves fantastic discipline."

The actor said his schedule when doing "The Nurses," a live, half-hour show was like this: 8-11 a.m. rehearse, 12:45 camera angles and blocking of positions on the set, 1:45 p.m. dress rehearsal, 2:30 do the show live, 3-3:30 free time, 3:30-6:30 rehearse the next day's show with scripts. At night, Wells said he had to memorize lines for the next day.

"You won't believe the fan letters I got when I was on that show," the actor recalled. "I played a guy named Mike Crane whose girl friend had been raped. Mike was going to do the noble thing and marry her. I got letters saying, 'Mike, that's good you should marry her.' They went on talking to me as Mike until the last paragraph when they suddenly referred to me as Darryl Wells and asked for an autographed picture!

"I went shopping in Bloomingdales with an actress from the show who was playing a girl with a serious illness. It blew the minds of the ladies who saw us to learn that the girl was out of bed. Women who watch soap operas want to believe in the characters in the show. They want to think that there are people who have more problems than they do."

Wells said actors who remain in a soap opera for a long time become sterotyped as one character. Such actors have a difficult time getting other acting jobs, except in summer stock, according to him. Wells said soap opera stars are big hits in summer stock theaters because women are eager to see them.

Wanted for Psychological Experiment
Women at least 21 years of age, with at least high school education. Participants will be paid at least $2.00 per hour. If interested call Upstate Medical Center at 473-5627, ask for Miss Harter.

Call between hours 1:00 & 5:00 P.M.

478-1145

Photography by
Sarkin Studio
Living Color
Portraits
Bridal Portraits
Candid Weddings
908 Irving Ave.
Near V. A. Hospital

6 jobs in 6 years is called job hopping?

Not necessarily.
Not at Du Pont.

We have a practice called "planned mobility," a kind of intramural job hopping. It means you don't go into a training program. You go to work—at different growth jobs that broaden you professionally, benefit you personally, and help you find the specific field you want to grow in. Here's how it worked for Jim Davis, an M.E. from the University of Pittsburgh:

"My first assignment was installation of improved polymer transfer systems," says Jim. "Then some research. A patent was issued on my device to apply steam to a running threadline. Next I was a college recruiter. After that I worked on a five-year forecast of the company's engineering needs. Now I'm in a cost reduction group."

For Jim, it added up to six assignments in six years. This may be some kind of a record. But he didn't waste time. Every day of it was solid profit.

Your Du Pont recruiter is a guy a lot like Jim. Ask him about planned mobility. Ask him anything. The coupon will get you some background information before you meet him.

DUPONT
College Relations

An Equal Opportunity Employer (M/F)

Du Pont Company
Room 6689
Wilmington, DE 19898

I'd like your latest information on opportunities at Du Pont for graduates with degrees in _____

Name _____

University _____

Degree _____ Graduation Date _____

Address _____

City _____ State _____

Zip _____

Happenings on the Hill

THURSDAY

LAW DAY PROGRAM today, 7:30 p.m., Congdon Room, College of Law. Law Day panel discussion. To be discussed: "Law, The Student and The University." Dean Alexander of the College of Law, Prof. Balbanian, Dean Carleton, and a state senator will participate. Questions? Call X-2526.

UNIVERSITY JUDICIAL BOARD 7 p.m. tonight, Chapel House.

UJB JUSTICE SELECTION BOARD 2-5 p.m., 125 Stadium Place.

ZOOLOGY SEMINAR featuring Dr. Oliver Smithies of the U. of Wisconsin at Madison, speaking on "Genes and Antibodies" at 4 p.m., 117 Lyman, today. Coffee 3:30 p.m., 116 Lyman.

CHEMISTRY COLLOQUIA "Recent Advances in Total Synthesis of Steroids" featuring Prof. S. Danishefsky today, 4 p.m. Room 303 Bowne. Coffee at 3:30 p.m.

THERE WILL be a brief meeting of the Nigerian Biafra relief committee at 7 p.m. the chapel house.

MAYDAY: Newsreel films on Black Panthers, riot-control weapons, women's liberation, etc. PFP St. Mary's Multipurpose Room -4 p.m.; 207 HL-7 & 9 p.m. - 25 cents.

FRIDAY

CHEMISTRY COLLOQUIA - "Rate of solution of electrolytes in H20 and D20," 4 p.m. room 303 Bowne Hall.

SA6BATH EVE Services, at 7 p.m. in Hendricks Chapel.

GENERAL

HOME EC ADVISORY BOARD applications are due May 5 in the Home Ec office. Application should include: name, campus address, extension, major and year. Also the applicant's ideas regarding a Home Ec education and the role of the Advisory Board. Questions? Call Helen X-2663 or Robin X-3793.

HOME EC SENIORS wishing to serve on the Selection Committee for the school Advisory Board should call Robin Ericson, X-3793.

MAKE MORE MONEY selling Pros. We still need salesmen who want to make %5-10 for an hour or more of fun work. Interested? Call Skippy or Bobby G. at X-3140.

GOONS be sure to return both questionnaires and answer sheets by Friday, to Women's Bldg. Main Desk.

GOONS AND ALTERNATES who missed Sunday's Convo. pick up folders and preference cards at Women's Bldg. Main Desk by Friday.

BUILD A FLOAT or decorate a car for the annual spring Float Parade, Saturday, May 10. The theme is: "The Dawning of the Age of ----------" (you fill in the blank). Open to greeks, dorms, floors, organizations. No entry fee. Applications can be picked up at 300 Walnut Place (Tri-Delta) and are due May 5. Questions? Call Marilyn x-2658.

SUICIDES ANONYMOUS awaiting your call 6 p.m.-6 a.m., 422-1000.

INTERNATIONAL STUDENT ORGANIZATION will hold its annual elections on Sunday, May 4, 7:30 p.m. in Maxwell Auditorium. All international students are requested to participate. There will be a supper preceding the elections at ISO, 230 Euclid Ave. from 5-7 p.m. to which all are invited.

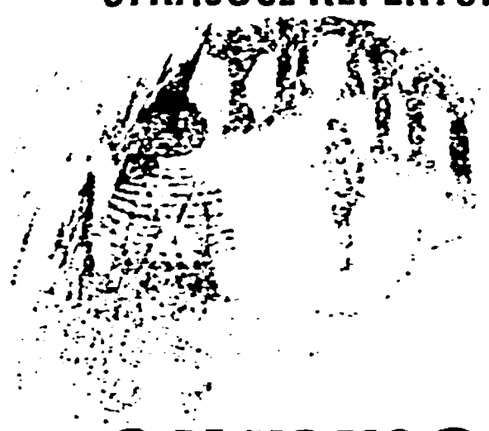
AMERICAN YOUTH HOSTELS VW bus trip to Europe. Leave July 28, return August 28. Price $625 including flight. Call Ron Cate, 469-6284, 841 Valley Drive.

HILLEL Sunday Suppers have been suspended for the remainder of the semester. They will resume in September.

PANHEL EXEC Applications are due Friday at the Main Desk of the Womens Building, Gamma Phi Beta, or Chi Omega. Questions, call Sally Shaw, X2637.

APPLICATIONS are being accepted for the Sophomore Exec Council. They should be mailed to Bob Tembeckjian, 1000 Irving Avenue. Applications should include why you wish to join the Exec and what experience you have had in student government, though there are no formal requirements.

BLUES POWER comes to Syracuse May 8, 9, 10 with Junior Wells and John Hammond in concert at the Jabberwocky. Tickets on sale $2.50 per show at HBC.



HISTORY MAJORS - pre-enrollment for history courses for the fall semester will take place from May 5th through May 9th. You may pick up pre-enrollment materials in the history office, 311 Maxwell.

SUNDAY, APRIL 27, 1969

GUNSHOTS AND SIRENS IN THE NIGHT . . .

THE REVOLUTION HAS BEGUN.

SYRACUSE REPERTORY THEATRE

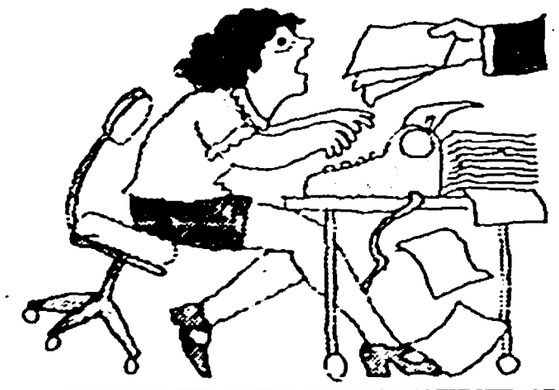
Apr. 24-27
May 1-4

Thurs. 8 pm
Fri. 8 pm
Sat. 2:30 & 8 pm
Sun. 7:30 pm

summertree
by Ron Cowen
directed by G. F. Reidenbaugh
tickets available in Slocum Hall and Regent box office(476-4536)
UNIVERSITY REGENT THEATRE
820 EAST GENESEE ST.

Always something new at the

The Big "O"



- Kill-A-Keg Parties — Wednesdays — Free Beer
- Win a weekend trip mOnthly tO the city Of yOur chOice On schedule
  plus
  a majOr league game Or brOadway shOw.
- Best in flicks every Thursday.
  tOm jOnes tOnight
- impOrted LOwenbrau on tap
- plenty Of free parking
- never a dOOr charge

ALSO
The Butterfield Blues Band
This Friday, May 2, 8:30 p.m.
Onondaga War Memorial
Tickets now on sale at War Memorial Box Office, S. U. Corner Store, Wilson's Leading Jewelers.
$.5.50, $4.50, $3.50

Pocket Coffee! What's that?

A new kind of coffee break for stunned secretaries.

If there's one more letter to type, another card to file, or, one more call to make...you'll quit.

Ever feel that way? What you need is a coffee break. A brand new kind of coffee break, Pocket Coffee.

It takes an instant to pop a Pocket Coffee into your mouth. Just taste that delicious chocolate shell, and, it's absolutely brim-full of real brewed liquid coffee. The kind you drink in a cup.

Pocket Coffee comes in a 3 candy packet you can carry with you. With a coffee break that handy, your hands just barely have to leave the keyboard.

Available at

Campus Classified

GR 6-5571, Ext. 2314

Rates minimum of 15 words:

1 day	1.15
2 days	2.25
3 days	3.30
4 days	4.30
5 days	5.25
6 days	6:15

To place a classified ad. call GR 6-5571, ext. 2314, between 1 and 3 p.m. Ad must be placed 2 days in advance. Every word over 15 costs 5c extra per day.

ALL ADS MUST BE PREPAID.

MISCELLANEOUS

RENT if you can't buy! T.V.s, tape recorders, typewriters. By week, month or semester. Reasonable rates. S. U. BOOKSTORE. GR 6-5541, x 2426.

ALTERATIONS DONE within 24 hours. Call for an appointment, Lillian Potter, 207 Comstock. 478-5847.

PRIVATE DRIVING LESSONS — automatic or standard shift. Full or refresher courses. Qualified professional instructors. Pickup service. Auto Driving Academy. GR 6-3995.

NEED A SUMMER JOB? Syracuse YMCA Camp Tousey has openings for Unit Directors, counselors, riding master and waterfront director. Five hundred acre site with 55 staff and 160 campers on Millsite Lake near Redwood, New York. Spend a challenging and rewarding summer working with boys 9 - 14 years old. For details and application, write Robert Fiske, YMCA, 340 Montgomery St., Syracuse, New York 13202.

TRIP WITH WENDI — Europe '69 Group flights on Pan Am. Best dates, better prices. Limited seats available. 475-9642.

PHOTOS — passport, identification, or fine gift portraits. For appointment, 472-5062. Sherman Sable Studio, 550 Wescott St.

ATTENTION FDDAT CHAIRMAN - Fulton paper has a surplus of seconds in toilet tissue - decorative colors - FREE DELIVERY. GL 8-6100 or GL 8-6101. Phone 24 hr. service.

OCEAN IN A BOTTLE! 'Tis true. A new brainstorm from California for twiddlers! Nassau blue, ocean green. Bookstall, 147 Marshall St.

BEAUTIES! Pure silk scarves from India, last bastion on hand-loomed, hand-blocked prints, gorgeous colors. Various sizes. Bookstall, 147 Marshall St.

FOR SALE

1966 BARRACUDA — Formula S, four speed, extras. Call 471-1885 evenings for 474-4376, ext. 8, days.

'63 CORVAIR 700 — Gold, body good, automatic, 4 dr., easy to park - easy to drive. $295.00. 472-5967.

1965 OLDSMOBILE convertible. Red. 442, Power steering. Power brakes, excellent condition, reasonable. Call 637-3430 after 5.

ROOM AIR CONDITIONERS — 5,000, 6,000, 7,000 and 9,000 BTUS. These are '68 Models, some scratched or dented, some used, all guaranteed — priced for students pocketbooks 446-6321.

'67 GTO Convertible posi, 4-speed, Stereo, Revrib, real clean Phone GR 6-4992 after 5 p.m.

SUNBEAM ALPINE CONVERTIBLE 1967 - excellent condition, 8800 miles, reasonable. 476-1008 after 5:30 p.m.

'62 VW GHIA, blue and white, good condition. Must sell NOW! Call Jo: Bauer: x2451.

HONDA 50 - c110 super sportsier. Excellent condition. $150.00. Call 445-0849.

FOR RENT

HOUSE - from June to Sept. 3 bedrooms, $175/month, furnished, within walking distance of university, garage included. Call 475-7624.

TO SUBLET (June 1 to Sept.1) 2 b d-room apartment furnished. OFF Street parking 5 min. from Campus. 476-7164.

SWIMMING POOL FREE! Sublet faculty apartment, summer (moving) 3 br, $150/mo. 437-6382.

FURNISHED ROOMS from $40.00 and up. Very close to campus. Kitchen privileges. 446-6451 or 478-5380.

WANTED

RIDE TO WORK, weekdays 8:30 to 5. Valentine Drive, North Syracuse to/from corner University Avenue and Place. Phone extension 2105.

FACULTY COUPLE — Looking for furnished or unfurnished two or three bedroom house or apartment near university. Academic year 1969-70. Call 655-9078.

STUDENTS - for part time positions - option for summer work. $3.15 per hour. Flexible hours. Call 463-3735 weekdays, 3-5 p.m.

MALE TO SHARE large apartment, clean quiet cooking, res. area university area. 10 minutes to campus. GR 5-5743.

TYPING

THIRTY YEARS EXPERIENCE. Dissertations, term papers, proof-read. Satisfaction guaranteed. Mrs. Raymond Webb. HE 7-8259.

TAKE YOUR MANUSCRIPT to the only professional typing and printing service serving the S. U. area. The knowledge and experience of having done over 2,000 theses and dissertations is behind every job we turn out. Stephanie's Office Service. 469-2795.

TYPIST experienced in thesis, dissertations, and term papers. Electric typewriter. Shirley Savlov, 446-2999 or x2441.

Orange destroy Hobart, 21-5

By ED AGRANOWITZ

Wednesday, April 30 will go into the record books as the day that lacrosse made it to the "majors" on the Hill.

The streaking Syracuse lacrosse team gave an overflow crowd of about 3,000 an exhibition of the exciting stick sport at its finest yesterday, and in so doing whipped a highly rated Hobart team into complete submission, 21-5.

The undefeated Orangemen (8-0), visibly inspired by the tremendous turn out for their first home game, took command at the outset, and had the Statesmen talking to themselves for the entire afternoon.

Mark Austerlitz (who finished with three goals) got things rolling with an unassisted score 55 seconds into the game. Before Hobart knew what hit them, the Orange added three more quickies-Jeff Davis from Leo Nolan, Nolan from Verne Doctor, and Verne from Leo-to build a 4-0 cushion with the first quarter less than 2½ minutes old.

The Orange led 7-2 at the close of the initial period, and again came out running in the second quarter. Four goals in the first 3:13 of play made it 11-2 and the rest was easy.

The final totals showed the Orange attack to be well balanced as usual, and made Hobart net minder Dave Creighton look like a piece of swiss cheese. Nolan was high with four goals and four assists, followed by Verne (four and three), Davis (two and two), Jim Smith (three goals), Austerlitz, Ron Doctor (one and four), Tom Varley (two goals), and Dick George and Tom Powers (one goal each). Picking up single assists were Rick Travers, Bill Gooden, and defensemen Cliff Ensley and Ethan Klausner.

"That first quarter was the best lacrosse we've played all year," said a pleased coach Roy Simmons after the game. "We keep improving every time out-our kids are doing a terrific job."

Orange goalie Butch Brown played another magnificent game in the nets, recording nine saves, and helping the team clear the ball upfield effectively. "Butch was sensational," raved Simmie. "He really broke their back."

The Orange defense turned in another superlative performance. Ensley, Klausner, and John Scipione combined to render Hobart's big guns helpless. Frank Boyar, Hobart's defending national scoring leader, and John Topichak, the team leader this year, could manage only one assist between them. "When you have an offense like we had today," said Scipione, "there isn't much you have to do on defense."

Gip, Scip, and Baby Huey also made themselves felt on the attack side of the field in addition to several rib-rattling checks.

To a man, the Orange squad was delighted with the size and enthusiasm of the crowd. The fans were given an obvious lift by the pre-game soul sounds, and gave the stickmen tremendous home field advantage. "It's easily the biggest crowd we've had in the last ten years," says Paul DeMartino, a senior midfielder who grew up in Syracuse, "and it's just the greatest thing that could happen to the team."

Verne Doctor (89) races to receive a pass in yesterday's triumph over Hobart. Verne had his best day since returning from a finger injury. Two of his four goals were on passes from his brother Ron.

Bob Kouwe, number one golfer for the Orangemen, pauses between holes. Rain couldn't keep him from trying to break par. He once shot a 66 on a par 70 course in his home town, Rochester.

ECAC medal to Kortright at sports awards banquet

By MIKE WEBER
Sports Editor

The emphasis was on athletics Tuesday night when the Annual Athletic Awards Banquet for Syracuse University was held at Drumlins. Senior members of all athletic squads on campus as well as underclassmen award winners were present.

Dean John McCombe of Hendricks Chapel kicked off the after dinner program with a few words of wit before presenting James Decker, SU's athletic director. Decker conducted the awards ceremonies, assisted by respective coaches.

Tops on the list of award winners was Rich Kortright, who was presented with the ECAC Medal of Merit for having the highest scholastic average for an athlete. Kortright, a senior and coxswain of the crew team, accumulated a 3.64 average in his pre-law studies.

The team scoring the highest grade point average as a group were the gymnasts, turning in a 2.695 accum.

The outstanding sophomore student-athlete prize went to gridder Tony Gabriel, who owns a 2.55 average in Engineering. Teammate John Massis, who won the sophomore award a year ago, copped the junior student-athlete award this time around. His 2.96 average in Psychology was tops for the juniors.

Wingback John Bulicz was the recipient of the senior student-athlete trophy.

Other award winners were: Crew-Frank Doble; Fencing-Phil Connor; Track and Cross-country-Guy Roberts and Larry Zuller; Tennis- John Schwandt; Swimming-Walt Keck, Pete Schacht and Al Comly; Skiing-Al Seeling; Wrestling-Bob Rust and Eric Greenberg; Golf- Tom Lydon; Lacrosse-Jeff Davis and Andy Lubin; Baseball-Jerry Freisinger, Herm Card, Rick Cassata, John Martell and Greg Lowe; and Basketball-Bob Kouwe.

Ernie Santangelo also was presented with an award for being the outstanding physical education major while Steve Zegalia won the Outstanding athlete-student-citizen award.

Following the induction of seniors into the Varsity Club by President Ed Thompson, Chancellor William Tolley gave his after- dinner remarks.

Tolley used this opportunity to chastise professors who support student revolts, calling them "incredibly naive." He called upon all students to vent their agression on sports, both inter-collegiate and intramural, instead of against the administration.

He said that if he could do it over again, he would place a greater emphasis on "minor sports" saying, "We have been far too niggardly in our support of sports other than football and basketball."

The outgoing president was himself presented with two awards at the banquet. One was a gold lifetime pass to all Syracuse athletic events and the other, a mahogany cane. The cane bore the simple inscription, "Thy rod and thy staff, they comfort us," commemorating what Tolley termed a time when "I just lost my cool."

SU cager no handicap to golfers; Kouwe paces Orange off tee in '69

By BOB HERZOG

This year's golf team at Syracuse is led by senior Bob Kouwe. Kouwe, of SU basketball fame, is a scratch handicap golfer. His scores have consistently been in the low 70's.

By his own evaluation, Kouwe says the SU linksmen "have a lot of potential." At present, their record is 1-3. But basically the team is young, and there has been a surprisingly large turn out. This creates competition for each position, and helps to upgrade the caliber of play. Kouwe thinks the Spring trip to Florida was a great help to all team members. He himself said he "never hit the ball better."

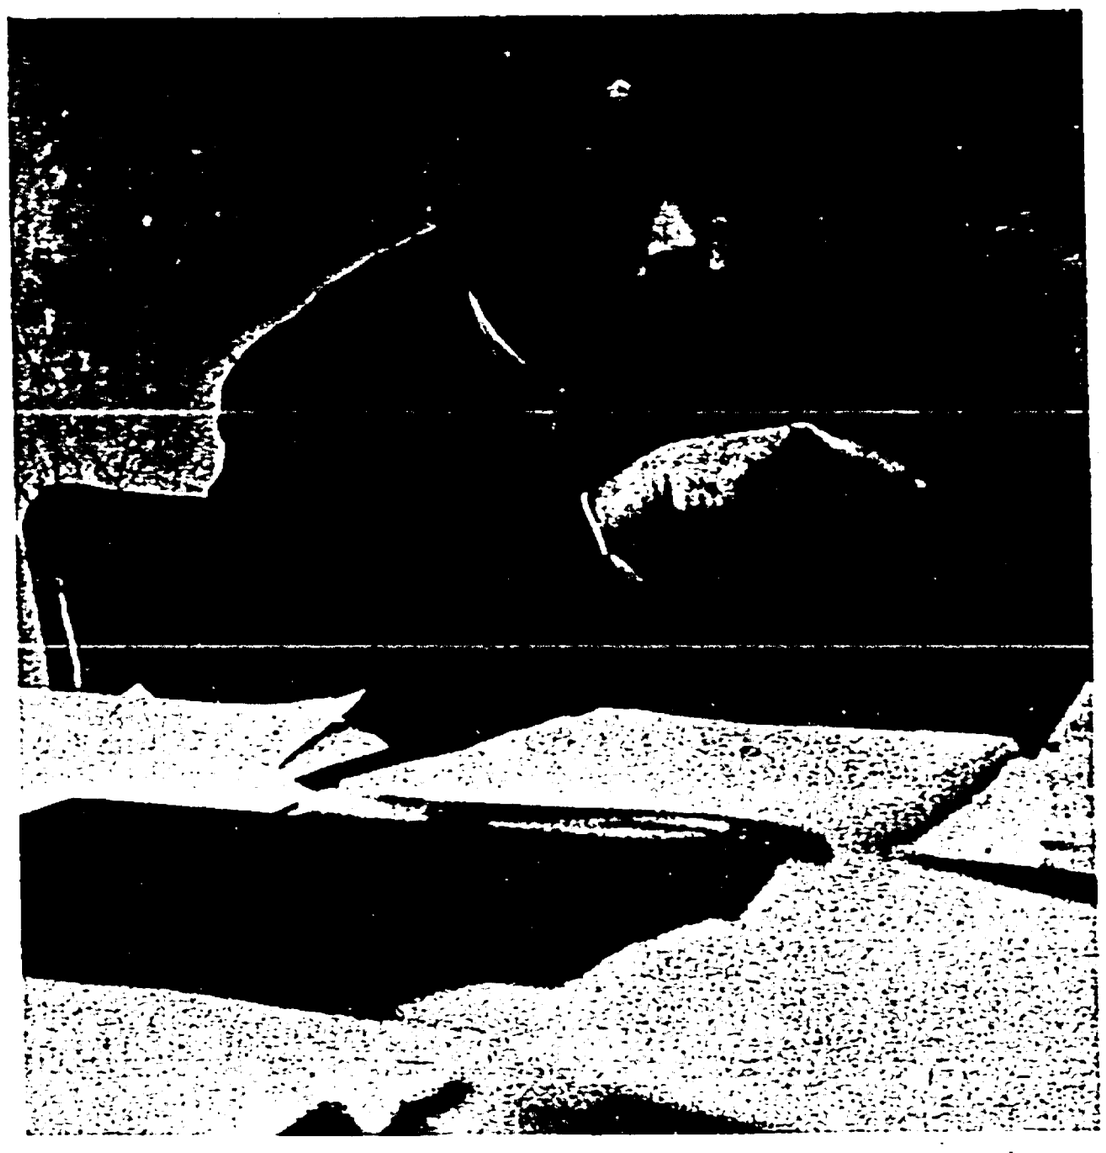
The high point of the season will come May 10 when the team competes in the Spring Easterns at Cornell. In this event, both team and individual performances are honored. Based on his showing so far this season. Kouwe rates as a good shot for top individual honors.

He has worked hard to get to where he is now. He practices 3-4 hours a day during the season. In the summer and off season, he practices 3-6 hours a day, and sometimes more. Kouwe considers practice to be the most important factor in his game. Golf, he says, is a game of intense concentration and perfection. He makes it a point to study his swing at every opportunity. He is working under the watchful eyes of a golf pro, who films his swing regularly. Kouwe attributes much of his success to having knowledge of his own swing. He can best spot his own flaws and quickly work to erase them.

Commenting on his own game, Kouwe says "I aim for consistency." He says that no one part of his game is better than any other. He believes "To be real good, a golfer can have no weaknesses." This goes along with his firm belief in long, diligent practice sessions.

But in Kouwe's case, we must realize that he was also a varsity basketball player. In fact, at Tuesday night's Varsity Club Banquet, he was named "Most Improved Basketball Player" of the 1968-69 season. Obviously he had to devote much time to this sport also. When asked if basketball effected his golf, Kouwe replied "It would be nice to golf twelve months a year, but that's impossible in Syracuse. Basketball kept me in good shape, especially my legs."

As for a preference, Kouwe expressed a much stronger interest in golf than basketball. He prefers the individual sport to the team sport because in golf there are no variables; everything depends on the golfer. "I know myself and my capabilities," says Kouwe, "and I would rather depend on my own performance." He believes golf "is 80% psychological." And he calls it "the most challenging game I've ever played."



Bob has overcome many of the challenges of golf already. One of his biggest problems was rushing his game. He had to learn to pace himself out on the course.

His biggest thrill on the course comes when he can "set the ball down where I want to." Bob believes controlling your shots is a necessity for good golf.

Like millions of Americans, Bob admires many of today's professional golfers. His favorites are Arnold Palmer "for being one of sport's most colorful performers" and Jack Nicklaus "for his great concentration while playing." With the dedication he has shown for golf, and the efforts he has made to improve his game, Bob Kouwe may someday be the favorite of a new generation of duffers.

Golfers win

The Syracuse golf team defeated Clarkson 4-3 at Drumlin's yesterday. Jim Echnoz was the medalist with a 71. Other Orange winners were Brad Benjamin, John O'Malia, and John Haber.

Maxwell's New Dean

GALA INSTALLATION ceremonies for Dean Alan ("Scotty") Campbell kick off this afternoon at 4 p.m. with a reception for Maxwell graduate students, faculty members and alumni. Numerous dignitaries, including Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, will attend Dr. Campbell's formal installation in Hendricks Chapel tonight. See page four for complete details.

DAILY ORANGE

Syracuse University's Daily Newspaper Since 1903

Vol. 67, No. 98 | Syracuse, New York, Friday, May 2, 1969 | 10 Cents

Aaron Copland visiting Syracuse

Famed composer to conduct, perform for Festival; page 5

Senior housing rules changed

Off-campus requirements lowered; story on page 9

COMPOSER AARON COPLAND will conduct the Syracuse University orchestra Sunday at 4 p.m. in Crouse College, and will perform with the Krasner Chamber Music Ensemble there on Monday. Both events, part of SU's Festival of Arts, are described on page 5.

WAILING, FLAILING Janis Joplin screams into Syracuse tonight for an 8:30 p.m. concert at the Onondaga County War Memorial. Tickets are still available at the door and at SU's Corner Store.

Janis Joplin sets the stage jumping

Janis Joplin hit the national scene in the summer of 1967 at the Monterey Pop Festival when, feet slightly apart and hair streaming in the wind, she tensed her slight body as for a high jump, seized the microphone and split the air with notes that bolted from her throat.

The following February, Janis hit New York and the Eastern seaboard for the first time, bursting through the usual complacency of East Coast audiences and critics.

As Vogue magazine worded it: "Janis Joplin...makes bunk of the history of singing the minute she opens her mouth." Cashbox reaching for inspired metaphors, called her..."kind of a mixture of Leadbelly, a steam engine Calamity Jane, Bessie Smith, an oil derrick and rot-gut bourbon, funneled into the 20th century somewhere between El Paso and San Francisco."

A year later, Janis performed in New York with her new band, a seven piece back-up group which she formed after leaving Big Brother in December. Janis Joplin redefines gracefulness, spinning in frenzy, feet stamping. hips pumping with feverish impudence. In her warm, tough gentleness, she turns the meaning of beauty counterclockwise.

As for her parting with Big Brother and the Holding Company; it was painful, necessary--and greatly misunderstood. They had made an LP together, Janis' first on the Columbia label, which went to number one in the United States almost immediately after its release and, just as immediately, won a Gold Record for sales in excess of $1,000,000. They had worked, laughed and had fun together for two years.

But as Janis has explained it: "It was a very sad thing. I love those guys more than anybody else in the whole world, they know that. But if I had any serious ideas of myself as a musician, I had to leave. Getting off, real feeling, that's the whole thing of music for me. But by the end, we were shucking. We worked four, six nights a week for two years, doing the same tunes, and we'd put everything into them we could. We just used each other up."

In the view of Peter Albin, Big Brother's bass player, "Janis was the best musician; she could experiment on stage, we needed time and rest to do new things. So for us it got to the point where all we wanted to do was play our tunes and split."

JOINING JANIS will be the eight-member Butterfield Blues Band.

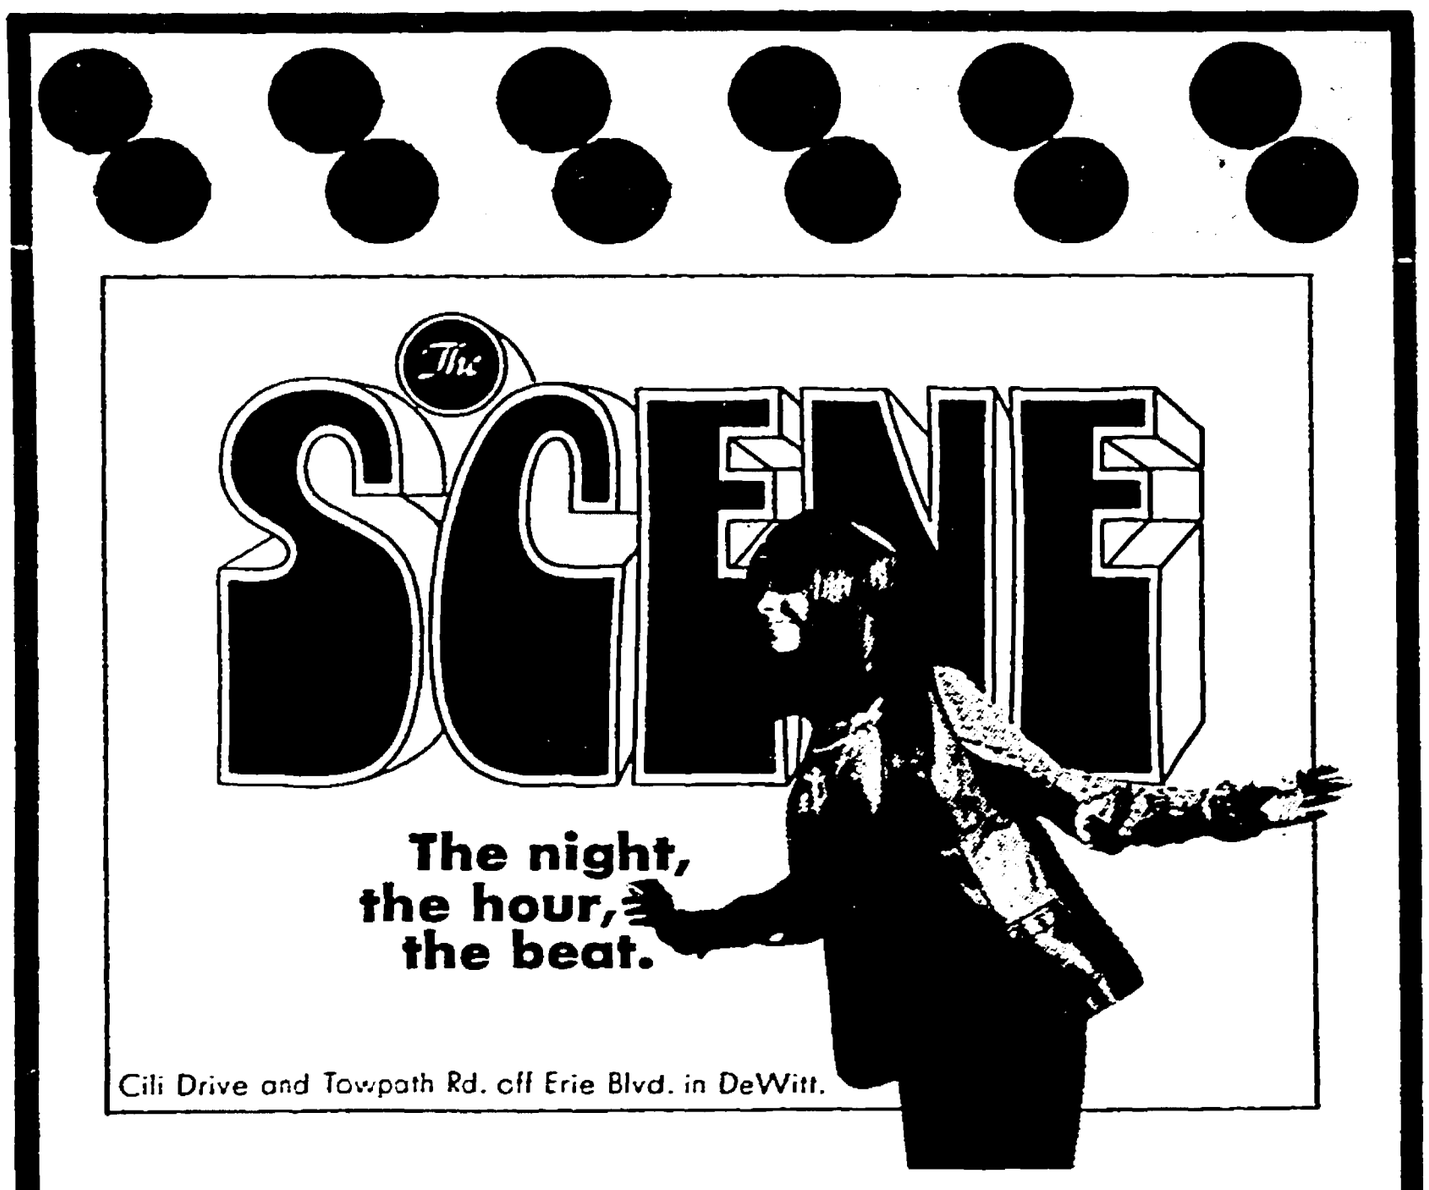
With her new band, (Sam Andrew of Big Brother remains; the other members have various backgrounds), the spark may have been revived.

Port Arthur, Texas, where Janis was born, is an oil-refinery town populated by some 60,000 middle-income-bracket people who like their drive-in movies, corner drug stores and get-married-to-the-guy-next-door way of life left undisturbed.

Janis Joplin's father works for the Texaco Canning Company; her mother is employed as registrar of a business college. If one doesn't decide to buck it, Port Arthur can be a "comfortable" place to live. Janis began bucking like a wild colt when she was about fourteen.

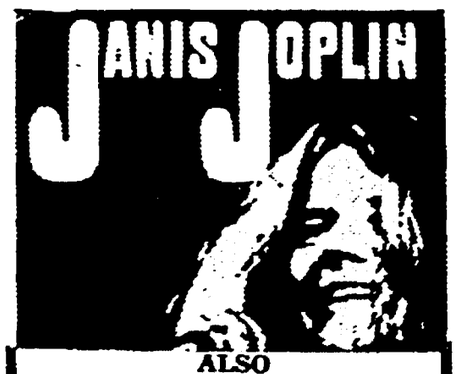
"I was a sensitive child," she recalls. "I had a lot of hurts and confusions. You know, it's hard when you're a kid to be different. You're all full of things, and you don't know what it's about."

In her private moments, Janis painted and read poetry. More conspicuously, she set out with ferocious rebellion to be as beat as Port Arthur would tolerate. That wasn't very much, and Janis still harbors something less than kindly feelings towards her hometown. "Man, those people hurt me," she says grimly.



When she was seventeen, Janis ran away: Houston, Venice Beach, San Francisco, Austin, anyplace. She dropped in and out of four colleges, worked a little and drew unemployment a lot. Somewhere along the line, she began to sing.

"Back in Port Arthur, I'd heard some Leadbelly records, and, well, if the blues syndrome is true, I guess it's true about me. So I began listening to blues and folk music. I bought Bessie Smith and Odetta records, and one night, I was at this party and I did an imitation of Odetta. I'd never sung before, and I came out with this huge voice."



Not yet aware of just what that voice was capable of displaying, Janis used it smooth and easy in the folk clubs and bars of Venice Beach and San Francisco.

Janis went back to the hillbilly bars of Austin, and there, a friend of Chet Helm's found her and brought her back to San Francisco. "He told me Big Brother was looking for a chick singer, so I thought I'd give it a try," she recalls. "I don't know what happened. I just exploded. I'd never sung like that before. I'd been into a Bessie Smith-type thing, you know. Big open notes. I stood still, and I sang simple. But you can't sing like that in front of a rock band, all that rhythm and volume going. You have to sing loud and move wild with all that in back of you. It happened the first time, but then I got turned on to Otis Redding, and I just got into it more than ever. Now, I don't know how to perform any other way. I've tried cooling myself and not screaming, and I've walked off feeling like nothing."

All good singers convey something of their private selves. Janis Joplin puts her guts on the line. "I'm a victim of my own insides," she says. "There was a time when I wanted to know everything. I read a lot. I guess you'd say I was pretty intellectual. It's odd. I can't remember when it changed. It used to make me very unhappy, all that feeling. I just didn't know what to do with it, but now, I've learned how to make feeling work for me. I'm full of emotion, and I want a release. And if you're on stage and if it's really working and you've got the audience with you, it's a oneness you feel. I'm into me, plus they're into me, and everything comes together. You're full of it. I don't know. I just want to feel as much as I can. It's not wise always, but it's super-valid, and maybe it's much wiser. It's what 'soul' is all about."

Don't forget Mini-Monday.
Admission: $1 for Guys
FREE admission to mini-skirted girls.
Prize of $25 for the girl in the best mini-skirt.

ALSO
The Butterfield Blues Band
Tonight, May 2, 8:30 p.m.
Onondaga War Memorial
Tickets now on sale at War Memorial Box Office, S. U. Corner Store, Wilson's Leading Jewelers.
$5.50, $4.50, $3.50

ANGUS H. TWOMBLY — Editor-in-Chief

MANAGING EDITOR - Alan Stamm EXECUTIVE EDITOR - Karen Wiediger NEWS EDITOR - Fred Tuccillo EDITORIAL DIRECTOR - David A. Ross COPY EDITOR - Jean Havens FEATURE EDITOR - Roz Mazer SPORTS EDITOR - Mike Weber CAMPUS AFFAIRS EDITOR - Larry Kramer PHOTOGRAPHY EDITOR - Clint Clemens ASSOCIATE EDITORS - Andrij Bilyk, Kay Christensen, Beth Hillson, Rona Kavee, Helene Macdonald, Charles Shapiro, Dan Schlossberg, Patti Williams, Roni Zlokower.

DAILY ORANGE

Syracuse University's Daily — Newspaper Since 1903

FRIDAY, MAY 2, 1969 PAGE 3

STEVEN P. STROBRIDGE -- Business Manager

ASSISTANT BUSINESS MANAGER— Art Depasqua, NATIONAL ADVERTISING MANAGER— Janet Meyer ACCOUNT EXECUTIVES— Roger Black, Jim Maney, Mike Greenstein.

Published Tuesday, through Friday during the academic year by students of Syracuse University. Offices located at 200 Brooklea Drive, Fayetteville, N.Y., and 1101 East Adams St., Syracuse, New York. Entered as Second Class matter at the U.S. Post Office, Fayetteville, N.Y. 13066.

New Dean in Maxwell

A great SU academic happening will conclude tonight with the installation of Alan Campbell as Dean of the Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs. Much has been done to make this an important and relevant educational experience for the SU community, and its impact on the Maxwell School's reputation and thus, the university, should be great.

Campbell is an important figure in the field of metropolitan studies and it is indeed significant that a scholar from this area should be chosen to head the Maxwell School in a time where the problems of America's cities are among the nation's greatest concerns.

Thus, in keeping with this theme, Senator Edmund S. Muskie a national leader and spokesman in urban affairs will come to SU tonight to speak at Campbell's installation. Muskie has been responsible for much urban legislation during his distinguished Senate career and his presence enhances an already significant occasion.

Tonight's installation in Hendricks Chapel and the reception later in the Maxwell School will be open to all members of the university. It is a valuable opportunity for students to see and hear two distinguished Americans, both of whom may well be close to greater achievement both in the worlds of universities and politics.

The Daily Orange will salute the installation ceremony and associated seminars with a special edition on Monday. We encourage all SU students not to miss tonight's installation, the academic event of the semester.

UJB

To the Editor:

The beauty of the law is its ability to articulate and anticipate social change. As art predicts the course of events to be, so "Guilty, No Action" decisions prepared the campus for dormitory autonomy. This judicial legislation anticipated the results of the boycott. Self-governing dormitories finally enforce their own regulations in their own dormitory courts.

The University Judicial Board will continue to explore new areas of student conduct, applying logic to University rules, and interpreting those rules in the light of facts. We stood alone when we handed down the "Guilty, No Action" decisions. We shall stand alone again, anticipating.

Paul Snyder,
Chief Justice, UJB

Letters

Cornell answers

To the Editor:

I am sending this letter to correct some of the inaccurate reports concerning recent events on the Cornell University campus.

Background: By minor demonstrations in December: The Afro-American Society manifested their dissatisfaction with what they felt to be the slow progress of the committee formed to lay the foundation of a Black Studies Program. Six blacks were charged with misconduct and were asked to appear before a judicial board. They refused, challenging the Board's judicial legitimacy. At a Faculty Meeting on March 12, it was decided that the board could try the cases. On Thursday, April 17, the board rendered reprimands to three of the students. The Society continued to question the legitimacy of this board.

Tension arose over harassment of the blacks and heightened when a cross was burned on the porch of the Black Women's Cooperative.

In an attempt to have their dissatisfaction with both the Black Studies Committee and the judicial board recognized, and partly in response to the cross-burning, unarmed black students entered Willard Straight Hall early Saturday morning. A group led by the Students for Democratic Society formed around the Hall offering protection and support for the students inside. On Saturday afternoon, threats and a forced entry by whites (involving a minor scuffle) resulted in a feeling on the part of the blacks that their safety was imperiled, and they introduced arms for self-defense. On Sunday, April 20th, administration officials and the AAS reached an agreement, and the occupation of the building ended.

On Monday, President Perkins announced that bearing of arms or seizure of a university building would result in suspension or arrest. That afternoon a faculty meeting was called to consider nullifying the reprimands previously given by the judicial board. The faculty decided against nullifying them at that time.

On Tuesday, the AAS called for a reversal of the faculty decision by 9:00 p.m.; otherwise further action would be taken. A number of faculty pledged non-violent support. That evening, 5000 students met in support of the AAS. In an atmosphere stressing non-violence they decided to remain in Barton Hall (a large gymnasium) to support the AAS and discuss the issues and to await faculty action expected the next day. 2,500 people remained overnight and voted to underscore their support by calling their action a "seizure" despite the University's permission to remain in the building. There was open access to the building.

The next morning, many students left to discuss the issues with their professors. At 1:30 p.m., an estimated 10,000 persons met for a teach-in at Barton Hall. The faculty announced its decision to rescind the reprimands and to re-evaluate the judicial system. President Perkins and others addressed the Barton Hall assembly.

As a direct result, concrete proposals for restructuring the university are being considered and discussions on racism, academic freedom, and the role of the university in our society are being held. The Afro-American Society has announced that its guns have been removed from campus, and they have opened their buildings to inspection. Other students have removed weapons from their buildings. Most classes have been resumed.

This is the situation at Cornell.

John Kimberly
Chairman, Comm. Mass Media
Cornell University

Student Senate seems more sad than funny

TONY VINCENT, a sophomore in the College of Liberal Arts. His favorite poets are Robert Frost and Alfred Lord Tennyson and his girlfriend's nickname is "Devil."

If you get far enough away from it, the saddest thing in the world can seem damn funny. But if you live on campus and do your traveling on foot, how far away can you get from 117 Lyman?

What happened in 117 Lyman Wednesday night was that the Student Senate elected a Speaker. His name is John Ross. If you know anything about him or Lance Wisniewski, the guy who ran against him, you're probably way ahead of most of Wednesday night's senators. For that matter, if you know anything about Student Senate, you're probably way ahead of most of Wednesday night's senators.

Not that being way ahead of those people is anything to get excited about. Most of them are at a tremendous disadvantage in that they serve what you could call "sporadic-spontaneous terms." They take office something like 45 minutes before Senate elections and leave office as soon as they can squeeze through the mob trying to get out the door after the votes are counted. Wednesday night everybody and his roommate decided to take office. It looked like one of those mixers they have during Orientation Week except that a lot of people knew each other. And in most cases that's about all they knew:

-"Hey, what'da 'ya say! Haven't seen you since the last election."

-"What'da 'ya talking about? I was at one of the SE meetings in March."

-"Yeah, well, who are ya' voting for this time?"

-"Who's running?"

Such conversations served one useful purpose. They killed time. It took 55 minutes to check the credentials of the 80 or so "instant senators" before they could join the regular crowd of between 30 and 40. Not that it made much difference. The quorum is set at something like 37, which is an interesting place to put it when your Senate is supposed to be composed of more than 200 people who are supposed to represent more than 9,000 undergraduates.

That's one reason there is a large group of people who want to do away with Student Senate. These people are called "students."

Tony Vincent

Of course, on the other hand, there is another group of people who want to keep Student Senate. These people are called "senators."

Wednesday night some of the students scraped together enough votes to run Mr. Wisniewski for Speaker. Mr. Wisniewski wanted to replace Senate with some sort of all-University council and put its academic functions in the University Senate, where student representatives will join faculty members and administrators in the fall.

Mr. Ross said you needed the Senate to do research. Mr. Wisniewski said that a Senate with only 18 per cent of its seats filled wasn't doing the student body much good.

Then Fred Tuccillo gave a pro for Mr. Wisniewski and asked the Senators to give up fun and games for the sake of the students. He also threw in a lot of quotations from Robert F. Kennedy and the Bible. So much for his originality.

Next Dick Barton gave a pro for Mr. Ross. According to Mr. Barton, Mr. Ross is responsible for every major advancement except the invention of disposable underware.

Then newly-elected SG president Dave Ifshin, who was so angry he slowed down the 50,000 words a minute, gave a pro for Mr. Wisniewski and said that you can't create power where it doesn't exist; you have to find out where the power already is and work it.

Mr. Ifshin was wasting his time. You just don't walk into a large room and try to use logic on once-a-year senators. You've got to give them a show. And with the final pro for Mr. Ross they got one.

John Diamond delivered it and Mr. Diamond was highly agitated. And he pointed out that he was making his last speech in the Senate.

That even brought tears to the eyes of one of Mr. Wisniewski's supporters, who pointed out that he always cries when he gets heartburn.

Mr. Diamond's valedictory address contained loud references to dictatorship and democracy, for whatever that had to do with anything, and the instant senators went wild. They gave Mr. Diamond a standing ovation. Then they gave Mr. Ross the speakership. Then they gave Andrew Winning the job of Speaker Pro Tempore. Then they left.

Mr. Wisniewski and friends should have known better. They should have known that the very reason Senate should be replaced is the very reason it will never do away with itself. But it was a nice try.

For everyone else, a long walk down by the Forestry School gets you pretty far away from 117 Lyman. But even at that distanceStudent Senate seems more sad than funny.

Maxwell's Dean Campbell

Noted guests here for installation

U.S. Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, New York State Senate Majority Leader Earl W. Brydges and U.S. District Court Judge Anthony J. Travia will receive honary degrees at the installation of Alan K. Campbell as fifth dean of the Maxwell Graduate School tonight.

The three men will be awarded honorary doctor of law degrees at a formal convocation at 8:30 p.m. in Hendricks Chapel. Muskie will be the guest speaker at the convocation.

Speaking of the honorary degree to Muskie, Syracuse University Vice Chancellor and Provost Frank P. Piskor said: "Sen. Muskie's concern and contributions to solving America's urban problems and bettering federal-state-local relations makes it particularly appropriate that he should be honored at the installation of a new Dean of Maxwell. His concerns match those of the Maxwell Graduate School. Both he and the School attempt to apply rational analysis and quality research to the solution of public problems."

Dr. Piskor said of Brydges and Travia: "These two state leaders are being recognized by Syracuse University for their dedication to the kind of public service education and research the Maxwell Graduate School has pioneered and for their general support of higher education in New York State."

Each of the three honorary degree candidates will have a faculty sponsor. Muskie's sponsor is Charles V. Willie, professor and chairman of the sociology department. Brydges will be sponsored by Michael O. Sawyer, professor of political science, and Travia's sponsor is Stephen K. Bailey, chairman of the Syracuse University Research Corporation's Policy Institute and former dean of the Maxwell Graduate School.

The Daily Orange will publish a special edition Monday, May 5, to present coverage of Dean Campbell's installation ceremonies and Sen. Muskie's visit.

Among the guests will be A.W. Johnson, economic adviser to Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau. Johnson was a fellow graduate student with Campbell at Harvard University.

More than a dozen of Campbell's former students will attend. They include Douglas Montgomery, assistant professor of urban government at Cornell University; Dr. John J. Gargan, assistant professor of political science, Kent State University; Robert P. Fairbanks, assistant professor of political science at the State University of New York at Albany; Hendrik Dullea, assistant to the president, State University of New York at Buffalo; Ronald D. Corwin, assistant professor of sociology, New York University; James D. Carroll, assistant director of the government division, Library of Congress, and Miguel Rivera-Rios, budget director, director of planning and assistant to the mayor of San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Other former students who will attend are Cynthia Brown, assistant to the director for civil rights, U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare; Kenneth Auletta, assistant to Howard Samuels; Lawrence W. O'Connell, assistant professor of political science, University of New Hampshire; Robert D. Lee, Jr., assistant professor at the Institute of Public Administration, Pennsylvania State University; Yong Hyo Cho, assistant professor of political science, University of Akron; Nicholas Thomas, special assistant to the Secretary in the Department of Housing and Urban Development; Francine Stein, project director for Planned Parenthood in New York City; David S. Michel, U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, Rochester regional office, and Donald S. Glickman, staff analyst for the Ways and Means Committee, New York State Assembly.

DEAN ALAN CAMPBELL

Close personal friends of Campbell's who will attend are Howard Samuels, former director of the Small Business Association and a candidate for Lieutenant Governor during the last election; Paul Bragdon, director of governmental relations at New York University; Paul Buiar, of Paul Buiar Associates, New York, and Peter Crotty, former Erie County Democratic Chairman and a delegate to the 1967 New York State Constitutional Convention.

Other special guests at the installation program will be Mrs. Dollie Robinson, Brooklyn labor leader; William Casselle, executive director of the National Municipal League of New York City; Howard Miller, director of the New York State Department of Social Service, Social Develppment Planning Commission; George Gregg, president of the New York State Association of Towns, and New York State Senator Joseph Galiber.

A number of state, county and city legislators will attend, including State Senator Tarky Lombardi, Jr.,; Assemblymen Kenneth G. Bartlett and Mortimer P. Gallivan; County Executive John Mulroy; County Commissioner Willis Sargent; City Councilman Lee Alexander, and Neal McCurn, a candidate for Council president.

We encourage job-hopping. We do try to keep it intramural—within Du Pont that is—and we do have a more formal title for it, "planned mobility."

Saylor Gilbert, CH.E., V.P.I., 1962, tells it like it is.

It only means we don't put you in a training program. We put you in growth jobs—to help you get to the top of your field the way you want to get there.

"Take a good look around you, and you'll see people at Du Pont who've had a lot of movement through very different kinds of jobs. There's no doubt that this diverse experience helps you. For example, I had four assignments concerned with different aspects of polymerizing, casting, stretching and finishing our polyester film base."

"Having had all this, I feel I was better prepared for my present position of training supervisor. But aside from the fact that variety can help you, I believe most people just like a change after working at one job for a period of time."

Your Du Pont recruiter will be a guy like Saylor.. Ask him about planned mobility—or anything else you'd like to know about Du Pont. Mailing the coupon is the surest way to get in touch with him.

Du Pont Company
Room 6687
Wilmington, DE 19898

I'd like your latest information on opportunities at Du Pont for graduates with degrees in_____

Name_____

University_____

Degree_____ Graduation Date_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____ Zip_____

An Equal Opportunity Employer (M/F)

DU PONT

College Relations

Sign up here for the annual Du Pont job-hopping competition.

Composer on campus

Copland: much honored man of music

By PATTI WILLIAMS
Associate Editor

Aaron Copland, composer of such pieces as "Billy the Kid" and "Rodeo" and winner of an Oscar and the Presidential Medal of Freedom, is visiting Syracuse University. As part of the Festival of Arts, Copland will conduct the University orchestra Sunday at 4 p.m. in Crouse College. The orchestra will perform compositions by Copland. On Monday, he will be the pianist with the Krasner Chamber Music Ensemble at a performance at 8:30 p.m. in Crouse College.

Copland, who holds an honorary degree from Syracuse University, has visited here twice. According to Professor Louis Krasner, director of the University orchestra, Copland was one of the main reasons the University's first Festival of the Arts was a success. Krasner said Copland was the main attraction at that festival 10 years ago.

According to Krasner, he first met Copland 25 years ago when Krasner was concertmaster with the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra and the composer came to the orchestra's concerts.

"Copland has been one of the most important and influential composers of the American scene and one of the first to free American music from the domination of the European influence," said Krasner. "He's the originator of the American tone in music as distinguished from the attitude of the European tradition which goes back to the classical period."

"He was one of the first to express the lightheartedness, exuberance and optimism of Americans in music."

Copland also was one of the first Americans to organize efforts to sponsor American music at a time when American music had no recognition, according to Krasner.

Although much of Copland's music is reminiscent of plains and cowboys, Krasner said Copland has also composed abstract music such as the piece "Inscape" which will be performed by the University orchestra Sunday. "Inscape" was commissioned by the New York Philharmonic Orchestra in celebration of its 125th anniversary. The word "inscape" was invented by poet Gerald Hopkins to suggest "a quasi-mystical illumination." The New York Philharmonic commissioned "Inscape" in 1967 and it is one of Copland's newest compositions.

Born in 1900, Copland studied in New York and France and in 1924 became the first composer to be awarded a Guggenheim Fellowship. The first orchestral performance of one of his works, "Symphony for Organ and Orchestra," was given by the New York Symphony Orchestra in 1925. Copland organized the Copland-Sessions Concerts which presented American music during the years 1928 to 1931. He was the first director of the American Festival of Contemporary Music and is co-chairman of the League of Composers.

Copland composed the scores for the films, "Our Town," "The Red Pony," "Of Mice and Men," and others. For the score of "The Heiress," he won an Oscar in 1949. His ballet scores include "Billy the Kid," "Rodeo," and "Appalachian Spring." For "Appalachian Spring" he won the Pulitizer Prize and the New York Music Critics Circle Award in 1945.

In 1954, his full length opera, "The Tender Land," was premiered by the New York City Opera Company.

The composer has written five books, among them, "What to Listen For in Music," "The New Music," "Music and Imagination" and "Copland on Music."

Voice recital scheduled

Rosalind Brooks, a senior in Voice, will give a recital on Saturday, May 10, 1969 at 8:30 p.m. in Crouse College Auditorium.

The program consists of works by Scarlatti, Handel, Telemann, Puccini, Poulenc, Copland, Persichetti, and LaForge.

Miss Brooks studies at the School of Music with Professor Frank Hakanson.

The performance is open to the public. Campus parking is available.

RENT ANY 3 TOP HIT CARTRIDGES FOR ONE MONTH FREE!

THE BEATLES - The Beatles
GLEN CAMPBELL - Wichita Lineman
5TH DIMENSION - Stoned Soul Picnic
THE SUPREMES - TCB
TOM JONES - Help Yourself

Join RENTAPES CLUB — rent all the top stars, top labels on 8-track stereo. First 3 cartridges RENT FREE! Write for details, free catalogue. No obligation.

THE RENTAPES CLUB
Dept. S
Box 149, E. Northport, N. Y. 11731
Name .....
Address .....
City .....
State .....
School .....
Zip .....

OUR MAN FLINT

SATURDAY

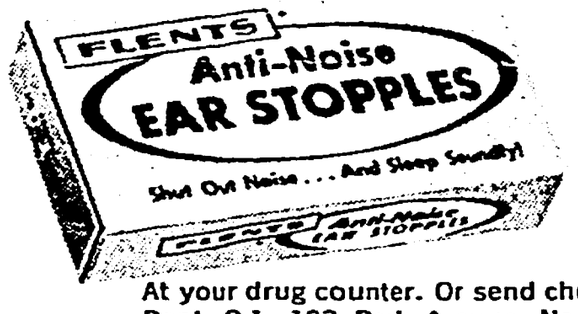
7 and 9:15

GIFFORD AUDITORIUM

Admission $1

SYRACUSE FILM ACADEMY

BRAZIL



SUMMER STUDY IN RIO

-EIGHT WEEKS JULY-AUGUST 1969
-UNIVERSITY COURSES: Brazilian History, Govt., Literature, Anthrop, Econ. Devel., Portuguese, etc.
-FACULTY: Harvard, Columbia, M. I. T., N. Y. U.
-EXCURSIONS: Bahia, Brasilia, Sao Paulo, etc.
-WORKSHOPS: Cinema, Architecture, Music, Art.
ENROLLMENT FEE includes: Air Passage, lodgings, Tuition, Excursions, Workshops - $1220.
WRITE INTERAMERICAN SUMMER STUDY ASSOC.
310 Madison Ave. - New York, 10017
APPLICATION CLOSING DATE: MAY 15, 1969

WANT TO TURN OFF THE TURNED-ON WORLD?

Try FLENTS®

When it all gets too much, just put a pair of soft, pliable Flents Ear Stopples in your ears. Instant peace and quiet! Study, sleep, meditate, turn on to your own thing . . . with Flents. One pair 40¢, 6 pairs $1.75.

And if a late-studying, light-burning roommate is the problem, Flents Light Shield is the answer. Comfortable, light in weight . . . it really keeps you in the dark! Black, pink or blue. Each $2.50.

At your drug counter. Or send check or M.O. to Flents Products Co., Inc. Dept. C-1, 103 Park Avenue, New York, New York 10017. No C.O.D.'s.

Sing Along With
JANE and JOHN SNELL
on the Guitar
Folk Songs Every
Friday and Saturday
9 P.M. — 2 A.M.

HACKNEY HOUSE

646 South Warren
HA 2-0341
LUNCHEON, DINNER and SUPPER

Campus Clothiers
S.U. BOOKSTORES

The Complete

BASS WEEJUN

Line is now being presented at the Syracuse University Main Bookstore.

"Our Business is People"

303 University Place

SU profs comment

Harvard alums view the scene

By JACK KRONENBERG

Harvard University has long been known as one of the world's most prestigious institutions of higher learning. Recent developments there, however, have caused many to speculate as to whether this distinction will be deserved in the future. With this in mind seven SU faculty members who at one time or another had attended Harvard, were interviewed.

Initially many were rather hesitant about granting the interview because it had been so long since they had been at the school and because their knowledge of recent events at Harvard had been acquired primarily via the news media. Most did consent to be interviewed, however. All were distressed at what had happened, but their evaluations of the events were quite varied.

When asked why it had happened at Harvard, a school long noted for its tradition of working out controversial issues rationally and where the channels of communication between student and administrator had allegedly been open, Professor Donald Meiklejohn, professor of public affairs and citizenship, and philosophy, said:

"I don't believe that the channels of communication were ever really open; they were open enough, however, to permit able students to see the desirability of opening them even more .... There never is a revolution until things get better."

Against Cops

Professor John H. Hodgson, professor of political science held a similar opinion. He felt that the calling in of the police by President Pusey was the significant factor in mobilizing the students against the administration.

"The student turmoil was the result of the use of the police by the administration. A small minority occupied the building. If the administration had not called in the police, nothing would have happened. When force is used, support is always crystallized against those who use it."

Police Intervention

Professor Thomas H. Walnut of the chemistry department disagreed. "The more liberal a school is, the more likely it is that this sort of thing will happen. This type of student unrest did not occur at schools like West Point or Texas A&M."

Replying to a question concerning the justification of calling in the police Walnut said: "I believe that the calling of the police was justified. I don't believe that too much force was used. There may have been individual policemen who swung a bit too hard, but there also may have been individual policemen who didn't swing hard enough." Professor Walnut felt that one reason for the police action was the fact that confidential files were opened, and that hitherto unknown information had been made public. He said: "The University had an olbigation to the people affected by the disclosure of this correspondence."

No Alternative?

Professor Fritz Rohrlich of the physics department called the police action "very unfortunate." He added: "I don't see what else could have been done, however. I deplore any police action on a campus, but one can envision circumstances where such action is necessary."

Professor Rohrlich also pointed out that throughout history students have been active politically. He added: "The university as a place of free inquiry and unrestricted discussion should permit student activism but this should not be carried out to the extent that it would destroy the university." He also mentioned the fact that in Israel where he studied as an undergraduate, no movements against the establishment are in existence. Political necessities don't permit such dissent. He maintained that here in America a possible factor in student disruptions is a feeling of aimlessness on the part of a large number of students.

Professor Eric F. Gardner, chairman of the psychology department, mentioned the difficulties inherent in judging this, or any other, situation from the vantage point of an outside observer. "A person who doesn't have a responsibility is apt to adopt cetain attitudes and call for certain courses of action. When one gets into a position of responsibility, however, one is very likely to make a different judgment. Responsibility makes a very big difference."

Philosophy Department Comments

Professor Sheldon P. Peterfreund of the philosophy department felt that during friction between the faculty and the administration. He was also of the opinion that the police action was too strong. "Some sort of action, however, had to be taken. When deans are tossed out of a building, something must be done."

Professor Joel H. Kidder, also of the philosophy department, had a somewhat different idea as to what might have been one of the many interacting variables resulting in the disturbances. "Harvard has always been a place that attracts an ambitious class of students. If a student with a personal inclination towards revolt is also attracted, then the most ambitions of these might also be found at Harvard. They would have a correspondingly higher motivation."

Impact on the future

What then of the future of Harvard? There was unanimous concern for the near future. Professor Meiklejohn foresaw an increase in tension, fear and the possibility of backlash in the forms of stringent laws and outside influences on the behavior of the administration. He also predicted that a broadening of the base of policy-making would result.

Professor Hodgson saw no irreparable damage being done. He did foresee changes. "Some heads will roll. It may be time for a change. Maybe Pusey should go."

Professor Walnut saw the disturbances as a major disaster. He also saw Harvard's administrators as being as fallible as all humans are. He thus felt that mistakes have been and will be made. But, he felt that mistakes have been and will be made. But, he felt, the administrators have the best interests of all in mind. He said: "Both students and administrators build up their arguments from different fundamental axioms. If it comes to a situation where people feel very strongly, conflict is inevitable."

Professor Peterfreund expressed the surprise and concern of all when he said: "There is no way of knowing how this will affect Harvard's future. The fact that it took place there means that it will have much impact on other institutions. The administration and the trustees will probably pay a bit more heed to the students now. If, as many students claim, however, the channels of communication are in fact not open, then there is no hope at all."

Tanya grooves on your body.

The older folks have their own tanning products. Tanya is new. It turns on a new breed of sun worshipers. That's you. You want a natural Hawaiian tan—deeper, faster. Only Tanya can give it to you. Because Tanya has Hawaii's favorite tanning agents—coconut oil and cocoa butter. So Tanya boosts the sun's natural tanning rays. Make today happen . . . your way . . . get with Tanya. A full line of suntan products for today's sun children—at your bookstore.

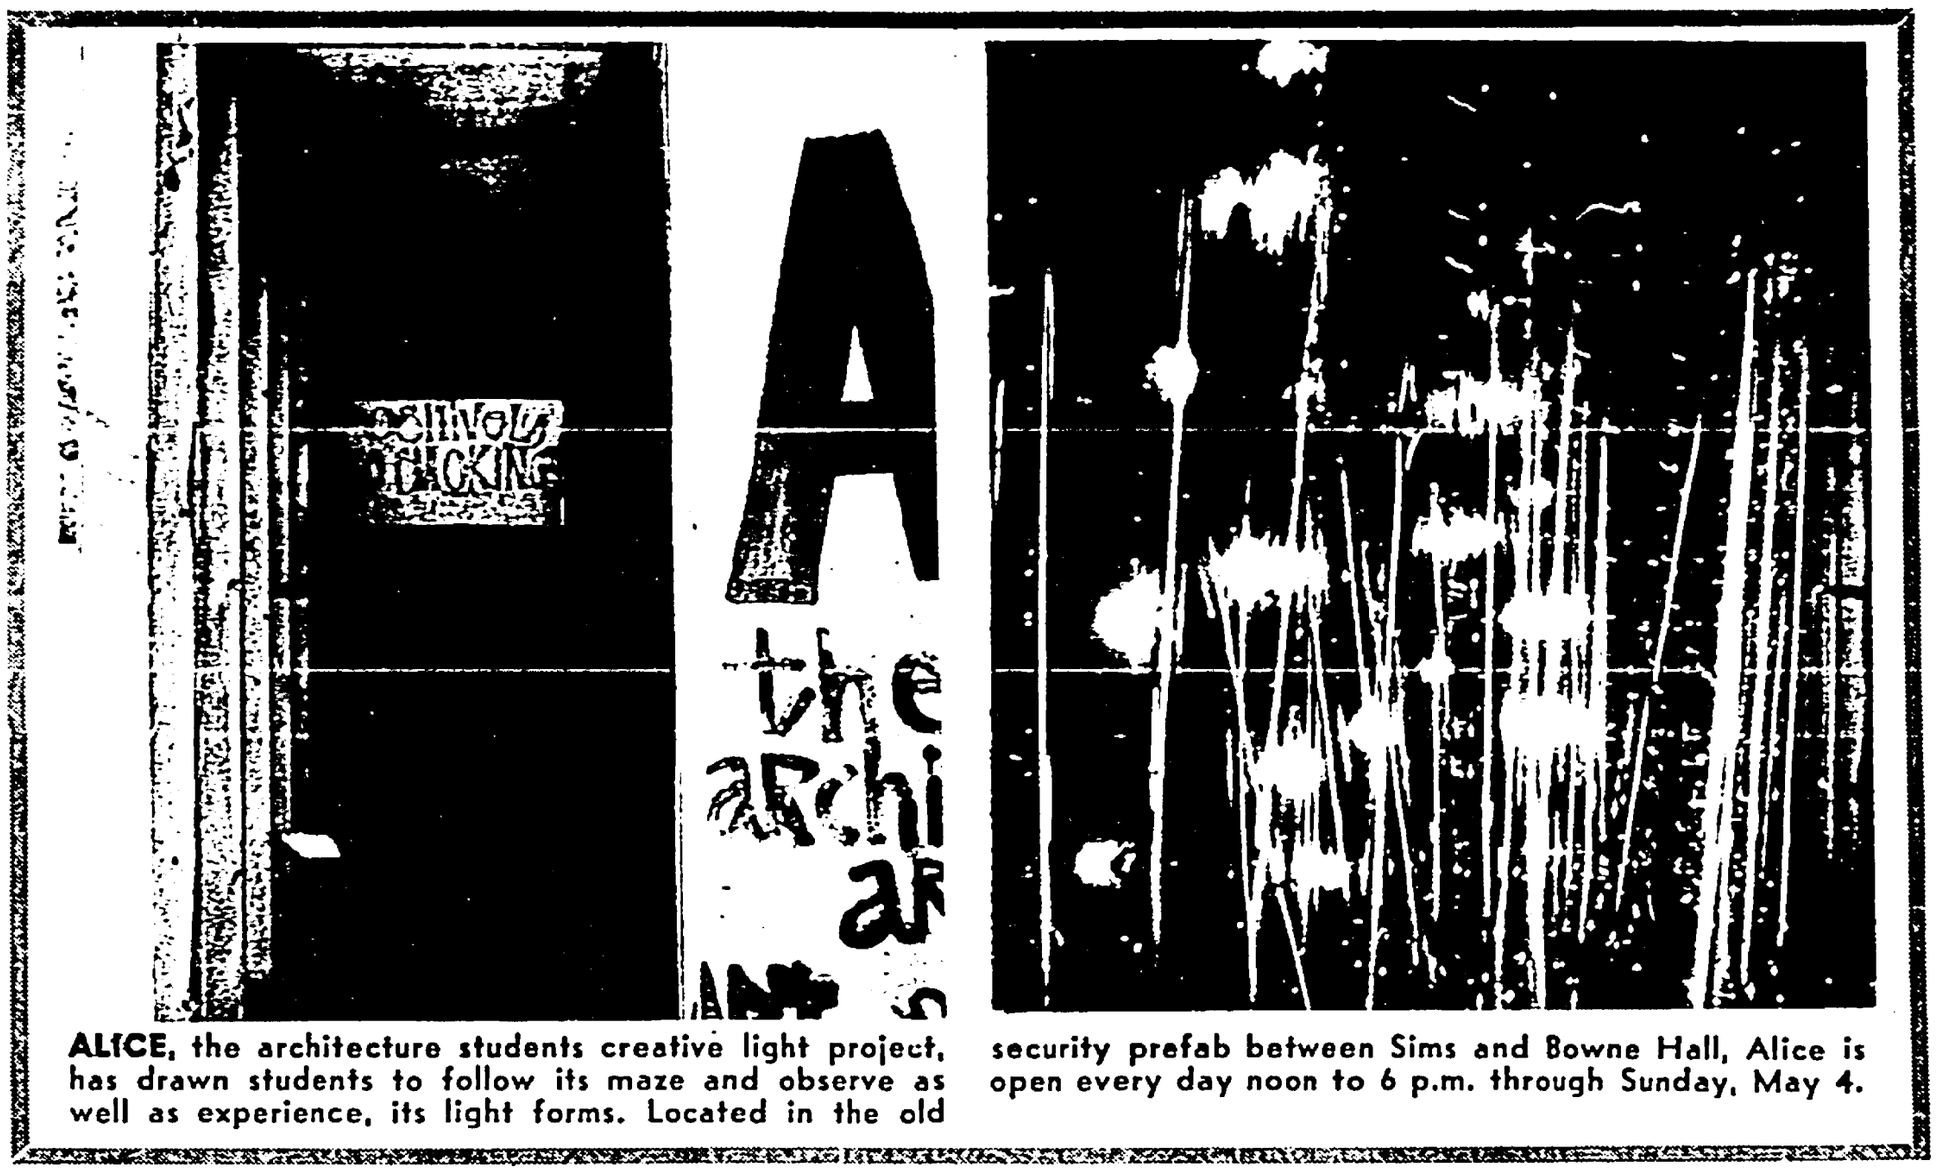
TANYA®

COCONUT OIL AND COCOA BUTTER

Searles in installation symposium

Last night, the first program for the installation of Alan K. Campbell as fifth dean of the Maxwell School convened in the Founders Room of the Maxwell School. John R. Searles, executive vice-president of the Metropolitan Development Association, spoke on the "the University and Metropolitan Syracuse."

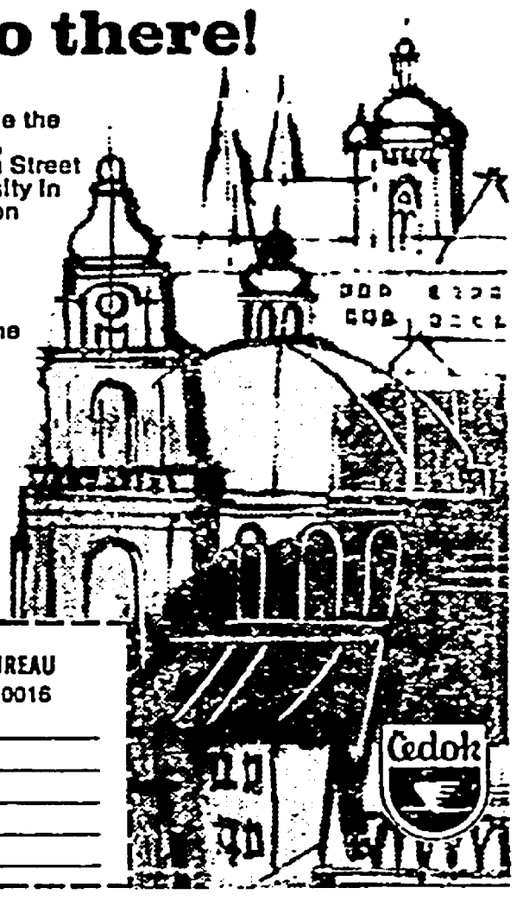
Mr. Searles is known as "Mr. Metropolis" in upstate New York. He is one of the nation's most skilled brokers of urban affairs. His speech was a detailed analysis of the relationship, in his words "a model for town and gown," which exists between the Syracuse community. Searles described the balance, contrasting SU with places like Princeton which tends to dominate rather than cooperate with its community.



To support his argument Searles cited examples of mutual cooperation in financial, cultural and governmental projects. Many of these activities are coordinated by the Maxwell School, which he labeled as "the greatest school of public administration in the nation and in the world." The administrators and businessmen who come here are attracted by the proximity of the Maxwell School as well as the city. Searles main issue was the governmental structure of Syracuse; the metropolitan problems of race, poverty, transportation, and finance which have their roots in governmental fragmentation. Searles feels that the attitude of the Maxwell School will influence the city in its formation of a strong county government which, according to the geographical structure of this area, is the most logical unit.

The university is a financial asset for the community--the place which provided a huge payroll and the great purchasing power for students. But Searles recognizes that both units are hurting financially. SU is seeking state aid and at the same time our expansion is reducing the city's revenue. He cited the University Hill Project as an example of the way in which community and university can work together to solve economic problems.

As for cultural resources, Searles said that the members of the SU community are impressed by our facilities--the region, Crouse Concerts, our musicians, and the architecture. This is a vital point because small communities don't have their own theaters like New York City. Summarizing his discussion, Mr. Searles praised this relationship in which "university belongs to the community and the community to the university." Though the interdependancy is strong now, there is still room for greater understanding and cooperation. Under Dean Campbell, he foresees even greater efforts and accomplishments.



ANSWER TO PUZZLE

	P	L	A	N	S			V	A	L	O	R
F	R	I	G	A	T	E		L	E	X	I	C	O	G
R	E	C	O	V	E	R		A	G	I	T	A	T	O
A	C	E		E	N	I	G	M	A	S		R	A	W
C	I	N	E		S	T	O	P	S		H	I	T	E
A	S	S	E	T		R	L	S		Z	O	N	E	S
S	E	E	S	A	W	E	D		R	E	P	A	S	T
				L	E	A		D	E	S
D	E	S	P	O	T		H	E	A	T	H	E	R	S
O	N	I	O	N		P	U	B		Y	E	M	E	N
S	T	A	T		B	A	L	A	S		H	I	L	O
A	R	M		E	R	R	A	T	U	M		R	A	P
G	U	E	S	S	A	T		E	M	U	L	A	T	E
E	S	S	E	N	C	E		S	P	R	I	T	E	S
	T	E	N	E	T			S	K	I	E	D

ALICE, the architecture students creative light project, has drawn students to follow its maze and observe as well as experience, its light forms. Located in the old security prefab between Sims and Bowne Hall, Alice is open every day noon to 6 p.m. through Sunday, May 4.

Touring Europe in '69?
Remember
CZECHOSLOVAKIA!
It's easy to go there!

Meet the young people of Prague. See the historic landmarks: Hradcany Castle, Wenceslaus Square, the little Golden Street where Kafka lived, the oldest university in Central Europe. And gorge yourself on a feast of all the arts . . . Mediaeval to multi-media, Baroque and Rennaissanco, Dvorak and rock, frescoes and films.

Not more than ninety minutes from the farthest point in Europe . .. Prague is one of the most exciting capitals in the world today and Bratislava, the romantic capital of Slovakia on the Danube is just an hour's drive from Vienna.

Group tours from $57 per person for 7 days, all incl.
Visas issued within 48 hours.

Contact your travel agent or write for information:

CEDOK CZECHOSLOVAK TRAVEL BUREAU
10 East 40th Street, New York, N.Y. 10016
Name:
Address:
City
State Zip
My travel agent is:

Perfect symbol of the love you share

Being with each other, doing things together . . . knowing that your affection is growing into precious and enduring love. Happily, all these cherished moments will be forever symbolized by your diamond engagement ring. If the name, Keepsake, is in the ring and on the tag, you are assured of fine quality and lasting satisfaction. The engagement diamond is flawless, of superb color, and precise modern cut. Your Keepsake Jeweler will assist you in making your selection . . . He's in the yellow pages under "Jewelers." Rings from $100 to $10,000. Illustrations enlarged to show detail. ®Trade-mark reg. A. H. Pond Co., Inc., Est. 1892.

REGISTERED Keepsake® DIAMOND RINGS

HOW TO PLAN YOUR ENGAGEMENT AND WEDDING
Please send new 20-page booklet, "How To Plan Your Engagement and Wedding" and new 12-page full color folder, both for only 25c. Also, send special offer of beautiful 44-page Bride's Book.
S-69
Name
Address
City
State Zip
KEEPSAKE DIAMOND RINGS, BOX 90, SYRACUSE, N. Y. 13201

Airline tailors Europe tours for students

By ANGUS H. TWOMBLY

NOTE: Angus Twombly and five other college editors from the United States traveled in Europe for nine days during spring vacation as a guest of Pan American World Airways.

Now that the American college student has earned his place in the ranks of the nation's conspicous consumers, business and industry are reaching for their share of the new wealth. Among them are commercial airline companies that are trying to woo the increasing numbers of student European travelers.

Traditionally, the cheapest way for a student to get to Europe has been via obscure charter flights, some for as little as $90 one way. That price is still difficult to beat, but some of the packages now offered are fairly reasonable in terms of cost and features included.

In conjunction with Open Road International, Pan American Airlines has put together a "Freewheeler" package which is a 22 day trip to Great Britan or one of several countries on the European continent. Included in the package is round-trip air fare from New York, one night in a hotel near your destination, 19 nights in "modest guest house accommodations" and the use of a Hillman or Fiat for 20 days with 1000 free miles, car insurance and maintenance.

The cost of this package ranges from $275 for Ireland to $338 for Germany. It is also available in England, Scotland, Portugal, France and Holland. All of these tours are available for the summer months and some can be arranged year round.

The "Freewheeler" is known in the trade as a throw-away package because it is unlikely that a student with a car would want to room in the same guest house for all of the 19 nights. Thus, he may throw several nights of accomodations away should he move on.

A great advantage to the "Freewheeler" is that it provides a car for the full three weeks. The increased mobility adds greatly to what one can see during the trip and avoiding the need to rely on public transportation makes your itinerary more flexible.

Pan Am and Open Roads have teamed up for a second tourist package that starts at $315 for two weeks. They call it the "London Showtime." Included in the package are round trip air fare from New York, 13 nights in a London hotel, tickets to eight shows in London and a car for three days for in or out of town traveling. A variation of that plan offers seven days in London with tickets to four shows and another seven days with a car for traveling in the countryside. Accomodations for the second seven days are in a guest house in the Manchester/Buxton area. This package will be available all summer.

Included in the Pan Am campaign for the college dollar is a book called "Where the fun is abroad." It's a close relative of "Europe on $5 a Day" and TWA's Harvard-produced book "Let's Go, The Student Guide to Europe."

"Where the Fun is..." is written by American and foreign college students who have studied and traveled throughout Europe. Also featured are sections on North Africa, the Near East and the Carribbean Islands. Each section includes descriptions of living quarters, restaurants, night spots, fun spots, points of interest and shops all within a student's budget. A student can live for considerably less in Europe than he can in this country, so don't let the cost of meals and necessities be a deterrent from traveling.

Pan Am is also willing to offer attractive rates to student and faculty groups that organize their own tours. An ambitious student that can corral 15 friends into letting him guide them through Europe can travel round-trip for free.

Information on these and other Pan Am tours can be obtained by writing Willard Dreslin, on the 45th floor of the Pan Am Building, New York, New York, 10017.

STUDY IN CUERNAVACA

Learn to speak SPANISH
- Intensive courses, with drills, supervised labs, and theory taught by experienced Mexican teachers.
- $135 per month.

Study in the INSTITUTE FOR CONTEMPORARY LATIN AMERICAN STUDIES.
- Examine themes such as "Protest and its Creative Expression in Latin America" and "The Role of Education in Social Change" in 10 to 30 new courses each month.
- Access to excellent library.
- $30 per credit.

Live in CUERNAVACA
- Near Mexico City, at 4,500 feet elevation, with Mexican families or in dorms or bungalows.
- Approx. $80 per month.

Request catalog from Registrar — Cidoc W. Godot, Apdo. 479, Cuernavaca, Mexico

MG AUSTIN HEALEY

Jaguar

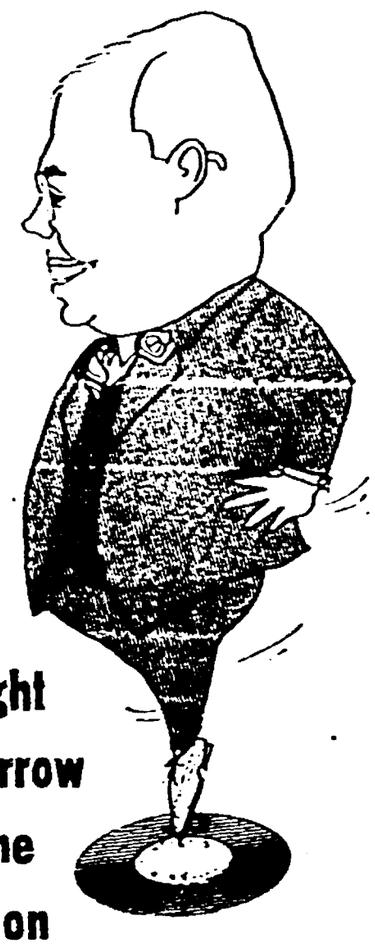
SALES & SERVICE

also

Largest Selection in the East of Used Convertibles--Hard Tops Corvettes-Sports Cars

6 Factory Trained Import Mechanics waiting to serve you. Over $100,000 in parts and accessories in inventory.

Revelle Motors, Inc.



800 W. Genesee Street

Sales GR 4-1009 Parts & Service GR 9-9544

UNCLE BRUCE

JANIS JOPLIN

KCS 9700/18 KO 0488*

The album everyone has or wants. Janis Joplin will wipe you out with "Piece of My Heart," "Ball and Chain" and "Turtle Blues."

See Janis Tonight
Buy Her LP Tomorrow
The Sound of the Revolutionaries on

COLUMBIA RECORDS

University Hill MUSIC BOX

SUNDAY, APRIL 27, 1969

GUNSHOTS AND SIRENS IN THE NIGHT . . .

THE REVOLUTION HAS BEGUN.

FRATERNITY PARTIES . . .
SORORITY PARTIES . . .
FATHER'S WEEKENDS . . .
HOLD THEM AT THE GAY 90's

Weekends — Fridays April 25 & May 2

BANJOS HONKY TONK CHARLESTON CONTEST SING-A-LONGS ROLLICKING TUBA TALENT SHOWS INTENSE GO-GO CONTEST POPCORN & PEANUTS BEER-DRINKING CONTESTS EXCITEMENT

WITH THIS AD:
For parties of 30 or more on Fridays, We will give your girl a free Gay 90's drinking mug — on Saturdays, we will give her a garter for her chubby leg.

MILLER'S GAY 90's
119 W. First St.
E. Syracuse, N. Y.
437-5652

Note: Please don't throw peanuts at the tuba player. He's doing the best he can.

IDC plans program for frosh guides

By HELENE MACDONALD
Associate Editor

Next fall, the AWS guide program will be replaced by Contacts In Action (CIA), a co-ed guiding program operated by Interdormitory Council (IDC).

In expanding and modifying the old AWS guide system, IDC is attempting to place three Contacts in each large dorm and one in each other living center with freshmen to help the frosh learn about floor and dorm government.

Each Contact will be trained in dorm government and program, campus government, judicial processes and issues. These will be available to advise and counsel freshman floors. Goons will work under Contacts in conducting floor elections and similar duties.

Training for the 30 men and 30 women who will be selected as Contacts will consists of correspondence over the summer, training to prepare for opening day. and discussions during the year.

Kate Shiring, IDC co-chairman of CIA, stresses the fact that contacts will have a year-long responsibility to educate and orient the freshman and may be called on as a "ready group" to explain issues like dorm autonomy or boycotts.

The role of the Contact and CIA will be explained at an informational meeting, at 7 p.m. Mon., May 5, in 200 Newhouse lounge. Applications will then be available and group interviews and selections will take place during the week.

Peg Johnston, past president of IDC, described the group envisioned by IDC as "top people who will be experts in dorm government."

SU coeds among those vying for title

Nine SU coeds are among the 16 area young ladies named to compete in the 1969 Miss Greater Syracuse Pageant, sponsored by the Syracuse Jaycees.

The event, to be held Saturday at 8 p.m. in the Henninger High School auditorium, will include bathing suit and evening gown competition, plus a three-minute talent presentation by each girl.

The nine ladies representing SU are: Lynn Baltimore; Cathryn Berger; Maureen Bisnow; Jill Doremus; Gladys Gable; Elizabeth Noto; Alexandra Parnassus; Mary Jo Sanders; and Mary Ann Vassenelli.

The winner will receive a $300 scholarship from Best Photo, a trophy, a diamond ring, a shoe ensemble, a complete wardrobe, and an all-expense paid trip to compete for the Miss New York State title in Olean, N.Y. this July.

At the state pageant, she will enter a week-long competition for more scholarships, monetary awards, and prizes, plus an all-expense paid trip to Atlantic City representing New York in the Miss America Pageant this September.

SBU and ad hoc committee still negotiating

Several more of the demands of Students for a Better University (SBU) were discussed with Chancellor William P. Tolley yesterday and a larger group of students and administrators met to review men's and women's housing rules, the student health center and security police.

During the SBU meeting, the university's purchase of Drumlins Country Club, the University Hill Corporation and the Syracuse University Research Corporation (SURC) were discussed according to Dave Ifshin, Student Government president.

Relating to SURC, Ifshin said they were told that it was not involved with any chemical warfare project and that the corporation receives its contracts mainly through private firms, not directly from the government.

In discussing Drumlins Country Club, the Chancellor said it was bought to keep the land from being used for housing projects and that it will be fully paid for in 20 years.

"Tolley spent a lot of time explaining all of this to us," said Ifshin. "He even went into depth on how SURC was formed and how it operates."

Involved in the second meeting was the ad hoc committee composed of about 20 student leaders and 10 administrators. It has been working for several weeks on student grievances in social and academic spheres. During yesterday's meeting, several committees were formed to discuss dissatisfaction with the infirmary and security police. Students with complaints in either area should contact Karen Wiediger for the infirmary and Ed Barron for security police.

Jim G. Carleton, dean of student services, discussed progress on housing grievances and reported that seniors meeting the criteria listed elsewhere on this page may petition for exemptions from university housing. Carleton also indicated that more men's and women's co-ops will be established providing there is the student demand for them and the facilities will be available. Only one living center has been designated as a potential new co-op to date.

Carleton also said that one-semester housing contracts will be possible only for cottages and some apartment buildings. It had been asked that major dorms provide similar contracts but Carleton indicated that steep mortgage payments on these dorms prevent the university from being able to risk the loss of income on empty rooms that might result during second semester.

New Housing Rules

Under new housing regulations, the following criteria must be met by seniors to obtain off-campus housing:

1. Must have a 2.0 accum.
2. Must be 21 years of age by October 1.
3. Must not be on academic or disciplinary probation.

Seniors who qualify and want off campus housing for next semester must file for University housing exemptions by Monday, May 12 in the office of the Dean of Men or Dean of Women.

We're putting our money where it does you the most good.

TWA is giving its people a million dollar bonus if they can make you happier than any other airline.

And you students are going to help make sure we put the money in the right pockets.

When you fly TWA, you'll get a ballot. Write in the names of the TWA people who gave you super service.

Drop your ballot into any of the bonus boxes you'll find at all of our terminals.

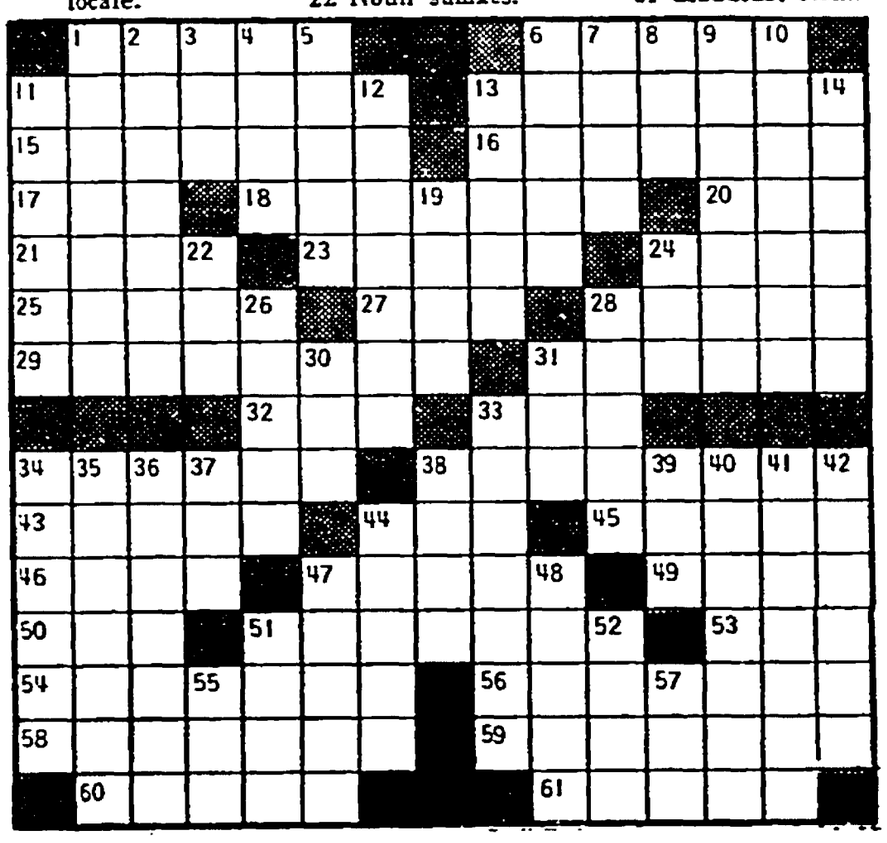
And we'll see that those people get rewarded with some of that money.

Now, for a change, you can have a chance to grade others on their work.

TWA

Our people make you happy.
We make them happy.

JIMI HENDRIX will bring his electrifyingly unique guitar style to Syracuse Sunday, in a concert at the War Memorial. Hendrix, who will be joined by the rest of the Jimi Hendrix Experience,



DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

ACROSS

1 Outlines.
6 Bravery.
11 Old Ironsides, for example.
13 Lexicographer: Abbr.
15 Make up for.
16 Direction in music.
17 Particle.
18 Riddles.
20 Inexperienced.
21 Movie, in Spain.
23 Intercepts.
24 Small creature.
25 Resource.
27 Famous writer: Initials.
28 Sections.
29 Moved up and down.
31 Meal.
32 Mead.
33 Jardin —— Plantes.
34 Autocrat.
38 Plants with purplish flowers.
43 Vegetable.
44 Alehouse.
45 Near Eastern locale.
46 Statute: Abbr.
47 Ruby spinel.
49 Venus de ——.
50 Appendage.
51 Typo.
53 Knock.
54 Make a surmise: 2 words.
56 Try to equal.
58 Perfume.
59 Goblins.
60 Principle.
61 Slalomed.

DOWN

1 Accurate.
2 Certificate.
3 Long ——.
4 Wheel hub.
5 British guns.
6 Las ——.
7 Central line.
8 Ignited.
9 Wind instrument.
10 Turns.
11 Brawl.
12 African country.
13 Household appurtenances.
14 Greeley's advice: 2 words.
19 Shade of yellow.
22 Noun suffixes.
24 Household implement.
26 Claw.
28 Piquant.
30 Rainy.
31 Part of the U.S. Dept. of Agr.: Initials.
33 Certain college contests.
34 Medicinal amount.
35 Commit (to).
36 Oriental.
37 Poker term.
38 Dance.
39 Edge.
40 Near Eastern realm.
41 Told.
42 Family in Faulkner books.
44 Ex —— (one-sided).
47 Modified leaf.
48 Mining pits.
51 Laborer, circa 1066.
52 Darkness.
55 Sun Yat-——.
57 Year in reign of Claudius: Rom.

Gals' rights

SU COEDS interested in women's rights! The local chapter of the National Organization of Women is sending a bus full of SU students down to Washington Wednesday to protest for Women's rights.

If you're interested in taking part in the demonstration or any of Freedom for Women Week call Karen DeCrow at 474-1682.

Finnegan listed in Who's Who

Alan D. Finnegan, assistant director of student services at the State University College of Forestry at Syracuse University, has been selected for the distinction of biographical listing in the 1969-70 edition of "Who's Who in American College and University Administration."

This standard reference work contains authoritative information on all the outstanding men and women directing the affairs of our principal institutions of higher education. It includes the names of Chancellors, Presidents, and Deans who are the key administrative officials of American Colleges and Universities and have made a personal contribution to the history of American Higher Education.

Finnegan began his career teaching in the Public Schools of Potsdam, New York before moving to the State University College of Potsdam as the Assistant Director of Admissions. In 1964 he was named the first Dean of Students and Director of Admissions at Jefferson Community College in Watertown, New York.

Since September 1968, Finnegan has been serving as the assistant director of student services at the S.U.N.Y. College of Forestry and pursuing Doctoral studies at Syracuse University.

A graduate of St. Lawrence University in 1955, Finnegan received a Master in Education degree from the same institution in 1959. Additional graduate study has been conducted at Oswego, Harvard University and California State College at Los Angeles.

Finnegan currently resides with his wife and two children in LaFayette, New York.

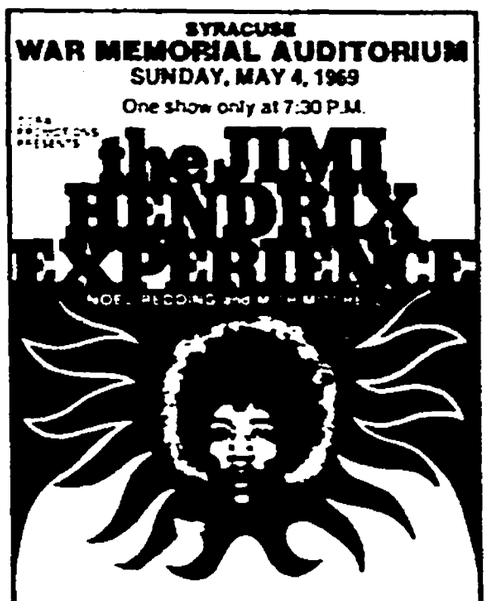
JULIE CHRISTIE · GEORGE C. SCOTT
IN A RICHARD LESTER–RAYMOND WAGNER PRODUCTION

Petulia
...the uncommon movie.

CO-STARRING
RICHARD CHAMBERLAIN AS DAVID DANNER
ARTHUR HILL · SHIRLEY KNIGHT and JOSEPH COTTEN AS MR. DANNER
Based on a novel by John Haste · Music Composed and Conducted by John Barry
SCREENPLAY BY LAWRENCE B. MARCUS · ASSOCIATE PRODUCER DENIS O'DELL · PRODUCED BY RAYMOND WAGNER · DIRECTED BY RICHARD LESTER
SUGGESTED FOR MATURE AUDIENCES — TECHNICOLOR® FROM WARNER BROS.-SEVEN ARTS

film forum
gifford auditorium
syracuse university
$1.00
May 5, 6, 7
7 & 9 p.m.
$1.00

Studio



Now Showing

"It is right on target with some keen potshots at Viet Nam, smut peddling, nymphomania, underground newspapers, pop art and sex and the single hot-blooded young man!"
—Bob Salmaggi, WINS Radio

"'AN OVERGROUND SEX-PROTEST FILM!'"
Archer Winsten, New York Post

SYRACUSE
WAR MEMORIAL AUDITORIUM
SUNDAY, MAY 4, 1969
One show only at 7:30 P.M.

Tickets: $4, $5, $6.

Tickets at
Wilson Jewelers–Main Store–Camillus Plaza
Northern Lights Shopping Town Dewitt
Syracuse University–Corner Bookstore

Mail Orders Please enclose self-addressed envelope, make check to Syracuse War Memorial Aud. and mail to 515 Montgomery Street Syracuse New York 13202

For information call (315) 477-7451.

Happenings on the Hill

FRIDAY

CHEMISTRY COLLOQUIA - "Rate of solution of electrolytes in H20 and D20," 4 p.m. room 303 Bowne Hall.

SABBATH EVE Services, at 7 p.m. in Hendricks Chapel.

POETRY READING by Grad students in Lawrinson Penthouse at 3:30, presented by English Department.

SATURDAY

HILLEL MOVIE, "The Cincinnati Kid" at 8:30 and 10:15 in Kittredge. Admission - $1, members - $.50.

FILMS, FILMS, FILMS - Bear's Head Dramatic Society Presents Laurence Olivier's Academy Award winning production of Hamlet. All proceeds go into a scholarship fund. Tix at door for $1.00 at Slocum Box office. Showings at 7 and 9:30 p.m.

SUNDAY

HILLEL GRAD Brunch will meet Sunday at 11:00 a.m. in Hendricks Chapel.

HOLY COMMUNION Sunday 10 a.m. in Chapel House. Sponsored by the Lutheran Campus Ministry. Coffee hour after the service; baby sitting and Sunday School provided for children; 5:30 p.m. X-Change, with buffet supper discussion Chapel House, co-sponsored by UCCF.

SOFTBALL - between urban planners and Geographics, Barry Park at Wescott and Broad Sts. at 2 p.m.

MONDAY

IMPORTANT - Big Chums - Big Sisters! There will be a meeting at 8 p.m. in Maxwell Auditorium - there are some surprises in store! If you still have Big Chum or Big Sister applications be sure to bring them along.

TUESDAY

PI LAMBDA THETA - An orientation meeting for members-elect will be held at 7:15 p.m. in the W-building Alumnae lounge.

DORM REP GOONS! We will be holding our first all-dorm Rep goon meeting on May 6 at 7 p.m. in Maxwell Auditorium. We have some special information to give out. We also need information from you. Questions - Mark at X2828 or Carolyn at X3451.

WEDNESDAY

SOCIOLOGY MAJORS: All those AKD members interested in Submitting their names in nomination for office for next year, please contact John Firch X3518 or Kay Brown X2663; those interested in steering committee position call Dan Guilt - 469-1521.

PSYCHOLOGY MAJORS should contact their advisors during the week of May 5th in order to preregister for the fall semester.

TC COMMITTEE CHAIRMEN - Please submit your evaluation questions to Eileen Day or Stu Ben by May 8.

GENERAL

HOME EC ADVISORY BOARD applications are due May 5 in the Home Ec office. Application should include: name, campus address, extension, major and year. Also the applicant's ideas regarding a Home Ec education and the role of the Advisory Board. Questions? Call Helen X-2663 or Robin X-3793.

HILLEL Sunday Suppers have been suspended for the remainder of the semester. They will resume in September.

PANHEL EXEC Applications are due Friday at the Main Desk of the Womens Building. Gamma Phi Beta, or Chi Omega. Questions, call Sally Shaw, X2637.

APPLICATIONS are being accepted for the Sophomore Exec Council. They should be mailed to Bob Tembeckjian, 1000 Irving Avenue. Applications should include why you wish to join the Exec and what experience you have had in student government, though there are no formal requirements.

BLUES POWER comes to Syracuse May 8, 9, 10 with Junior Wells and John Hammond in concert at the Jabberwocky. Tickets on sale $2.50 per show at HBC.

HISTORY MAJORS - pre-enrollment for history courses for the fall semester will take place from May 5th through May 9th. You may pick up pre-enrollment materials in the history office, 311 Maxwell.

GOONS be sure to return both questionnaires and answer sheets by Friday, to Women's Bldg. Main Desk.

GOONS AND ALTERNATES who missed Sunday's Convo. pick up folders and preference cards at Women's Bldg. Main Desk by Friday.

BUILD A FLOAT or decorate a car for the annual spring Float Parade, Saturday, May 10. The theme is: "The Dawning of the Age of ————" (you fill in the blank). Open to greeks, dorms, floors, organizations. No entry fee. Applications can be picked up at 300 Walnut Place (Tri-Delta) and are due May 5. Questions? Call Marilyn x-2658.

INTERNATIONAL STUDENT ORGANIZATION will hold its annual elections on Sunday, May 4, 7:30 p.m. in Maxwell Auditorium. All international students are requested to participate. There will be a supper preceding the elections at ISO, 230 Euclid Ave. from 5-7 p.m. to which all are invited.

MAKE MORE MONEY selling Pros. We still need salesmen who want to make %5-10 for an hour or more of fun work. Interested? Call Skippy or Bobby G. at X-3140.

AMERICAN YOUTH HOSTELS VW bus trip to Europe. Leave July 28, return August 28. Price $625 including flight. Call Ron Cate, 469-6284, 841 Valley Drive.

AL MARKOWITZ
FLORIST

offers Corsages of Roses or Orchids as low as $1.95 Cash and Carry with this ad.

AL MARKOWITZ
229 E. Fayette Street
474-5346

SOMETHING NEW !

HACKNEY HOUSE

COFFEE SHOP

Ice Cream Bar And Sandwich Shop
Open 7 A.M. to 7 P.M.
646 South Warren
HA 2-0341

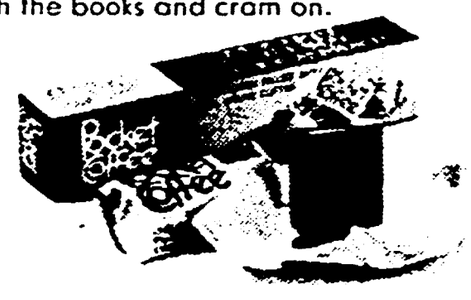
L. G. Balfour Co.
FRATERNITY and
COLLEGE JEWELERS
729 S. Crouse Ave.
Syracuse, New York
Carl Sorenson, Mgr.
GR 5-7837

PROCTER & GAMBLE

Procter & Gamble Needs You
To distribute free samples from door to door. Work similar to mailman. $1.75 per hour. Possible advancement and travel for those qualified. Apply - New York State Division of Employment - 677 S. Salina St., Syracuse. Apply in person, neatly dressed.

An equal opportunity employer

Pocket Coffee!
What's that?



A new kind of coffee break for cramming collegians.

From freshman to senior year, the "cram" is a fact of life for most students. Just before mid-semester and again at end-term you burn the midnight oil, review mountains of books and consume gallons of coffee.

Pocket Coffee, the new kind of coffee break, consists of a delicious chocolate shell full of real liquid coffee ...the space age answer to the students' age old problem.

Don't stop to make or get coffee, pop a Pocket Coffee into your mouth, get your coffee and eat your chocolate too (a great energy source). Pack Pocket Coffee in with the books and cram on.

Available at Bookstores

Campus Classified

GR 6-5571, Ext. 2314

Rates minimum of 15 words:

1 day	1.15
2 days	2.25
3 days	3.30
4 days	4.30
5 days	5.25
6 days	6:15

To place a classified ad, call GR 6-5571, ext. 2314, between 1 and 3 p.m. Ad must be placed 2 days in advance. Every word over 15 costs 5c extra per day.

ALL ADS MUST BE PREPAID.

MISCELLANEOUS

RENT if you can't buy! T.V.s, tape recorders, typewriters. By week, month or semester. Reasonable rates. S. U. BOOKSTORE. GR 6-5541, x 2426.

ALTERATIONS DONE within 24 hours. Call for an appointment. Lillian Potter, 207 Comstock. 478-5847.

PRIVATE DRIVING LESSONS — automatic or standard shift. Full or refresher courses. Qualified professional instructors. Pickup service. Auto Driving Academy. GR 6-3995.

NEED A SUMMER JOB? Syracuse YMCA Camp Tousey has openings for Unit Directors, counselors, riding master and waterfront director. Five hundred acre site with 55 staff and 160 campers on Millsite Lake near Redwood, New York. Spend a challenging and rewarding summer working with boys 9 - 14 years old. For details and application, write Robert Fiske, YMCA, 340 Montgomery St., Syracuse, New York 13202.

TRIP WITH WENDI — Europe '69 Group flights on Pan Am. Best dates, better prices. Limited seats available. 475-9642.

LATEST FADS — in clothes made to order. Vests. Pants. Shirts etc. Some alterations done. 478-5873.

ATTENTION FDDAT CHAIRMAN - Fulton paper has a surplus of seconds in toilet tissue - decorative colors - FREE DELIVERY. GL 8-6100 or GL 8-6101. Phone 24 hr. service.

OCEAN IN A BOTTLE! 'Tis true. A new brainstorm from California for twiddlers! Nassau blue, ocean green. Bookstall, 147 Marshall St.

BEAUTIES! Pure silk scarves from India, last bastion on hand-loomed, hand-blocked prints, gorgeous colors. Various sizes. Bookstall, 147 Marshall St.

FOR SALE

SUNBEAM ALPINE CONVERTIBLE 1967 - excellent condition, 8800 miles, reasonable. 476-1008 after 5:30 p.m.

'67 GTO Convertible posi, 4-speed, Stereo, Reverb, real clean Phone GR 6-4992 after 5 p.m.

ROOM AIR CONDITIONERS — 5,000, 6,000, 7,000 and 9,000 BTUS. These are '68 Models, some scratched or dented, some used, all guaranteed — priced for students pocketbooks 446-6321.

1965 OLDSMOBILE convertible. Red, 442, Power steering, Power brakes, excellent condition, reasonable. Call 637-3430 after 5.

'63 CORVAIR 700 — Gold, body good, automatic, 4 dr., easy to park - easy to drive. $295.00. 472-8967.

HONDA 50 - c110 super sportster. Excellent condition. $150.00. Call 445-0849.

'62 VW GHIA, blue and white, good condition. Must sell NOW! Call Joe Bauer: x2451.

NEED A GOOD, dependable used car for the lowest possible price? Call Larry 475-3987.

FOR RENT

TO SUBLET (June 1 to Sept.1) 2 bedroom apartment furnished. OFF Street parking 5 min. from Campus. 476-7164.

HOUSE - from June to Sept. 3 bedrooms, $175/month, furnished, within walking distance of university, garage included. Call 475-7624.

LIVINGSTON AVE. — 3 blocks from university, 2 bus lines. Bedroom $12.00. 479-7653 or 476-8296 Mrs. Wilson.

FULLY FURNISHED HOUSE — 4 bedrooms, 2 bathrooms, appliances, furnished basement in residential area, gardens, to rent for one year from September 1, preferably to a visiting professor and family. Call mornings until 10:30 or after 5 P.M. 446-2448.

SWIMMING POOL FREE! Sublet faculty apartment, summer (moving) 3 br. $150/mo. 437-6382.

FURNISHED ROOMS from $40.00 and up. Very close to campus. Kitchen privileges. 446-6451 or 478-5380.

WANTED

STUDENTS - for part time positions - option for summer work. $3.15 per hour. Flexible hours. Call 463-3735 weekdays, 3-5 p.m.

MALE TO SHARE large apartment, clean quiet cooking, res. area university area, 10 minutes to campus. GR 5-5743.

FACULTY COUPLE — Looking for furnished or unfurnished two or three-bedroom house or apartment near university. Academic year 1969-70. Call 655-9078.

ROOMMATE — for New York City. Starting summer or September. Call Linda (after 4) 474-4774 or 492-0876.

APARTMENT FOR SUMMER — furnished, 3-4 girls, near campus, call evenings 475-0940.

ROOMMATES to share large house. Separate bedrooms. $60 month, utilities included. Summer 478-4251.

TYPING

DISSERTATIONS, THESES, AND TERM papers, IBM electric typewriter. 40c per page 5c per copy. 446-2841. Mrs. Miller.

THIRTY YEARS EXPERIENCE. Dissertations, term papers, proof-read. Satisfaction guaranteed. Mrs. Raymond Webb. HE 7-8259.

TAKE YOUR MANUSCRIPT to the only professional typing and printing service serving the S. U. area. The knowledge and experience of having done over 2,000 theses and dissertations is behind every job we turn out. Stephanie's Office Service. 469-2795.

Panzy back to QB

Ben: 'Offensive line is getting licked'

By LARRY CENTER

The most common word in sports is that old nemesis "if..." It's used by fans replaying their team's latest loss, coaches bemoaning faculty officiating and players who felt they never got a chance. "If" also happens to be the term used most frequently by coach Ben Schwartzwalder in talking about the prospects for the 1969 Orangemen.

To a large extent, spring practice has been inconclusive. Many players have been hurt, others have been trying new positions, and some expected good points have not materialized yet. Ben seems to feel that it is too early to tell how the team will perform in September.

Injuries have prevented Ben from clearly assessing the team. Important boys have been out, and, he laments, "three or four boys, if they were healthy, would mean so much." Lou Gubitosa's loss and Rick Kokosky's injury have greatly weakened the defensive line. John Massis has been hurt, and Ron Trask hasn't been able to practice, coming off that foot operation.

The biggest spring disappointment has been the offensive line, intact from last year. Ben says, "We were fearful the defensive front wouldn't be too much, but right now they're licking our offensive line something awful--Ray White and Joe Ehrmann are solid, and Bucky McGill has improved a great deal."

"The offensive line just hasn't improved any. Actually, the offense to defense relationship is worse than it was last year. Do they have senioritis or are they self-satisfied? They haven't been impressive at all and that really scares me."

The backfield picture is hazy. Greg Allen is hurt now and Mike Chlebeck had been out with a strep throat. Adding excitement to the battle for starting spots has been the showing of frosh Steve Sanson, "the most pleasant surprise. If he keeps up, he'll give Lee Castner a run for his money."

Ben likes Marty Januskiewicz, "a solid football player." Januskewicz will start somewhere, at tailback or full. Al Newton has also looked pretty good. He has some potential and you know he does his own hitting. If he comes back in good condition and inspired, he could be a real fine ball player. Billy Knox, who came on at the end of last year, "works real hard and hangs in there. We're pleased with him, and if he keeps hustling, he'll do a lot of playing this fall," he continued.

The Rich Panczyszyn safety experiment is over. Panz is back at quarterback, and could play some split end. Randy Zur has more speed and is starting to come around, but still top man is Paul Paolisso, who, compared to Trask, "doesn't have the physical ability, but gives it all he's got."

On defense, Ben is shuffling his line. George Kokinis and Tom Smith have been hurt, and Bob Schoonmaker has been shifted to end. Right now Pete Pietryka, Joe Beauregard and Howie Goodman have the edge at the end spots.

The linebacking is Ben's least area of worry. Bobby Bancroft, Don Dorr and Jack Protz all have improved and Bob Rust also has shown well. There is a real battle for starting berths in the secondary. Tommy Meyers "has looked good," and Gary Bletsch is "all right." Duane Walker is even with Tom Hermanowski, and "better on passes, since Tom's foot isn't 100%."

Fans will get a chance to make their own judgments on the Orange when the number one offense and second-line defense goes against the top defense and second offense in the annual spring game Saturday, May 10.

IN QUEST OF PERFECTION, two Syracuse lineman hit the blocking sled during workouts yesterday. Head coach Ben Schwartzwalder is his usual pessimistic self in rating next year's grid squad. (Photo by Robertson)

Vernon Downs course is added to SU curriculum

By STEVE RADICE
and
JEFF POSNER

In light of recent student demands for more interesting and relevant courses of study, two hands of the student body have come up with a novel course which began last night.

The title for the proposed revolutionary course is "Vernon Downs 1A" with plans for "Vernon Downs 1B" to begin next fall semester. The course is divided into two sections; Trotting and Pacing. Classes will be held six days a week starting at 8:10 PM at Vernon Downs, "home of the miracle mile."

Syracuse University has brought in a special, hand picked faculty from neighboring tracks. Among the renowned professors are Dr. Angus Allen, who received his doctorate at Pocono Downs, Dr. Lucien Fontaine, who earned his degree at the ivy-covered stands of Yonkers, and Assistant Professor Mac Weaver, late of Batavia Downs.

Although this course is open to the entire student body, certain primary requirements must be met. Fat Wallet 205, and also Transportation 28 (subtitled "Thruway Exit 33, Route 5 to Vernon Downs"), are prerequisites. Fat Wallet 205 credits can be earned with a collect call home, or a sociable stroll to your friendly Marine Midland branch office. Transportation 28 credits are considerably more difficult to earn, but any student with the will is sure to find a way.

There are nine quizzes a day, with the first two daily quizzes rated double. To qualify for this "daily double," students must be in their seats by 8 p.m. sharp. Quizzes will be in multiple choice form, with eight choices per quiz. On any given day, quizzes may be given in either sloppy, fast, good, slow or muddy conditions. Quizzes will be graded: A-win, B-place, C-show, D-bankrupt.

Attendance at all classes is encouraged, but is still on a voluntary basis. Students are advised, however, to attend class not more than three times a week, lest they find it necessary to re-take "Fat Wallet 205." It is often impossible to attend even the minimum quota of classes per week. In such a case, students may call "Randy's Bar and Grill" at 444-4444, and ask for "Bernie the Bookie." Bernie will be happy to take your quizzes for you.

The course itself does not require much outside work, but it does demand a great deal of reading. The required text for this course will be the "Vernon Downs Daily Scratch Sheet." Unfortunately, the Syracuse University bookstore has refused to carry this softcover booklet. It is available, therefore, outside the classroom entrance, or advance copies may be purchased at the bus station near the Yates hotel. Reading the required text will not suffice however, and outside reading such as "Bud's Picks," and "Harry Hanover's Crib sheet" is recommended.

Plans are being formed now for summer seminars at neighboring tracks such as Monticello, Yonkers and Roosevelt. These seminars are being formed under the grand auspices of the New York State Racing Commission.

For interested students, related courses will be offered next semester. Following the "Vernon Downs 1A" final examination, "Batavia Downs 1B" will be offered near Buffalo. "Finger Lakes Flats 1C" will be offered to all interested day students at Canandagua.

Speaking of the course potential, Dr. Allen said that he was sure the course would be a tremendous success with the student body. He added, "Great opportunities are now opening up in the field of horse racing." When asked for advice to prospective students on what they might expect from the course, Dr. Allen said: "What you get out of the course might not be what you put into it."

THE MAN BEHIND THE MAGIC of Syracuse Lacrosse is Roy Simmons. "Simmie" has guided his charges to an 8-0 record and will lead them into a 2 p.m. home encounter Saturday with Colgate. (Photo by Robertson)

DO quiz biz

1. What two players did the Green Bay Packers give up to acquire Leroy Caffey from Philadelphia?
2. Who was the first player drafted by the New York Mets in the expansion pool?
3. What baseball umpire is famous for the quote, "I never made a wrong call in my life?"
4. Who is the only golfer to win the Masters two years in a row?
5. Name the stars who portrayed the following baseball greats in the movies of their lives.

Jackie Robinson
Lou Gehrig
Babe Ruth

6. Which of the following never won a batting title?

Ferris Fain
Ernie Banks
Pete Runnels

7. What NFL team that has been playing since 1958 has never finished above .500 for any season?
8. Who was the National Baseball League's rookie-of-the-year in 1967?
9. What baseball player is nicknamed "Hondo?"
10. True of False--The second man selected in the NBA draft the last three years has gone on to win the rookie-of-the-year award?

LAST WEEK'S ANSWERS--1) Charlie Hennigan and Lionel Taylor; 2) Lou Cordelione; 3) all answers taken due to error in wording; 4) Larry Doby; 5) Bob Murphy; 6) Jacques Plante; 7) Paul Neuman, Lee Shaffer, Connie Dierking; 8) Paul Hornung; 9) Lorne "Gump Worsley, Forrest "Smokey" Burgess, Elijah "Pumpsie" Green; 10) Ron Reed, Dick Groat, Dave DeBusschere, Gene Conley.

GC takes bowling crown

Paced by a 210-560 match from team captain Bob Zuer, Grover Cleveland overcame a 27 pin deficit and went on to capture the living center bowling championship for the second straight year by a score of 6-3.

Stu Sanders turned in a 527 series for the Watson West 4 team in a losing cause. Zuer's series is even more amazing considering that up until thirty minutes before game time he was a doubtful starter suffering from a badly sprained ankle.

Tau Kappa Epsilon ran away with the fraternity title with a 9-0 victory over Delta Tau Delta. Bob Rockwood was the high man for TKE with a 534 series. Bob Capone had a 530 series for DTD. TKE meets Grover Cleveland Tuesday night at the Women's Building Lanes for the all university championship.

Trustees' recommendation

Union building granted first priority

By JOHN WISNIEWSKI

The executive committee of the Board of Trustees Friday recommended that planning for the construction of a University Union building be given first priority and that it be identified as a Centennial project.

DeWitt C. LeFevre, secretary of the Board of Trustees and chairman of the University Centennial Committee, said the recommendation will be presented to the entire board which holds its semi-annual meeting June 6.

LeFevre said the executive committee unanimously approved the following resolution:

"The executive committee of the Board of Trustees recommends to the full Board of Trustees that the University Union building be identified as a Centennial project and become the first priority of the development office after funding of the library project is completed."

He added that a University Union fund raising campaign will begin upon completion of the library funding project. "We're going ahead as fast as we can," LeFevre said.

The executive committee's recommendation followed months of intensive work by University Union officials toward such a recommendation.

UU chairman Jerry Tatarian proposed a timetable for the development of a student union building and submitted the proposal to the Council on Student Life March 21. The proposal called for:

*Consideration of the builsing as "number one priority" by the University Development Office.

*Committment of a building site by the administration by May 1, 1969.

*Naming of a consultant on Unions to aid in the building's development.

A Design Board was formed and two areas were submitted to the board for consideration as building sites. The site preferred by UU encompasses the block between University Place and Waverly and is occupied by the main bookstore, Winchell Hall and the Lowe Art Center. The alternative site is the block on Waverly Avenue between Walnut Place and University Avenue.

Victor J. Colway, University vice-president, said a site cannot be determined until the proposed areas are fully considered. However, he added that the final selection of the site would not be difficult.

Max H. Andrews was named College Union consultant. He has been in the College Union profession for twenty years and served as an official of the Association of College Unions-International. His salary will be paid by the university.

Since UU was founded in 1926 it has never had a permanent home. Union activities took place in the "Club Sahara" in the basement of Slocum Hall during the late '30's. The club was turned into a mess hall during World War II. After the war the Union was housed in a cottage on the present site of Watson dormitory. When Watson was built, Union activities were moved to the Place which has changed locations many times.

DAILY ORANGE

Syracuse University's Daily Newspaper Since 1903

Vol. 67, No. 99 Syracuse, New York, Tuesday, May 6, 1969 10 Cents

Student activities to receive part of student fee

By KAREN WIEDIGER
Executive Editor

A hefty chunk of SU's student fee has been diverted for exclusive delegation to student activities. At Friday's Board of Trustees meeting, Victor J. Colway, vice president for business management, requested a $300,000 reallocation of the fee.

This amount represents one third of the newly-increased general student fee and will be set aside solely for student activities. The funds will be regulated by the newly-created Student Finance Board which was formulated by Ross Starek, treasurer of Student Government.

Jeff Portnoy, vice president of SG, who has been working on the student fee question for several months said, "It is revolutionary for Syracuse University to give students a voice in finances. The students won't be told what to do with their money or how they can spend it!"

Specific request

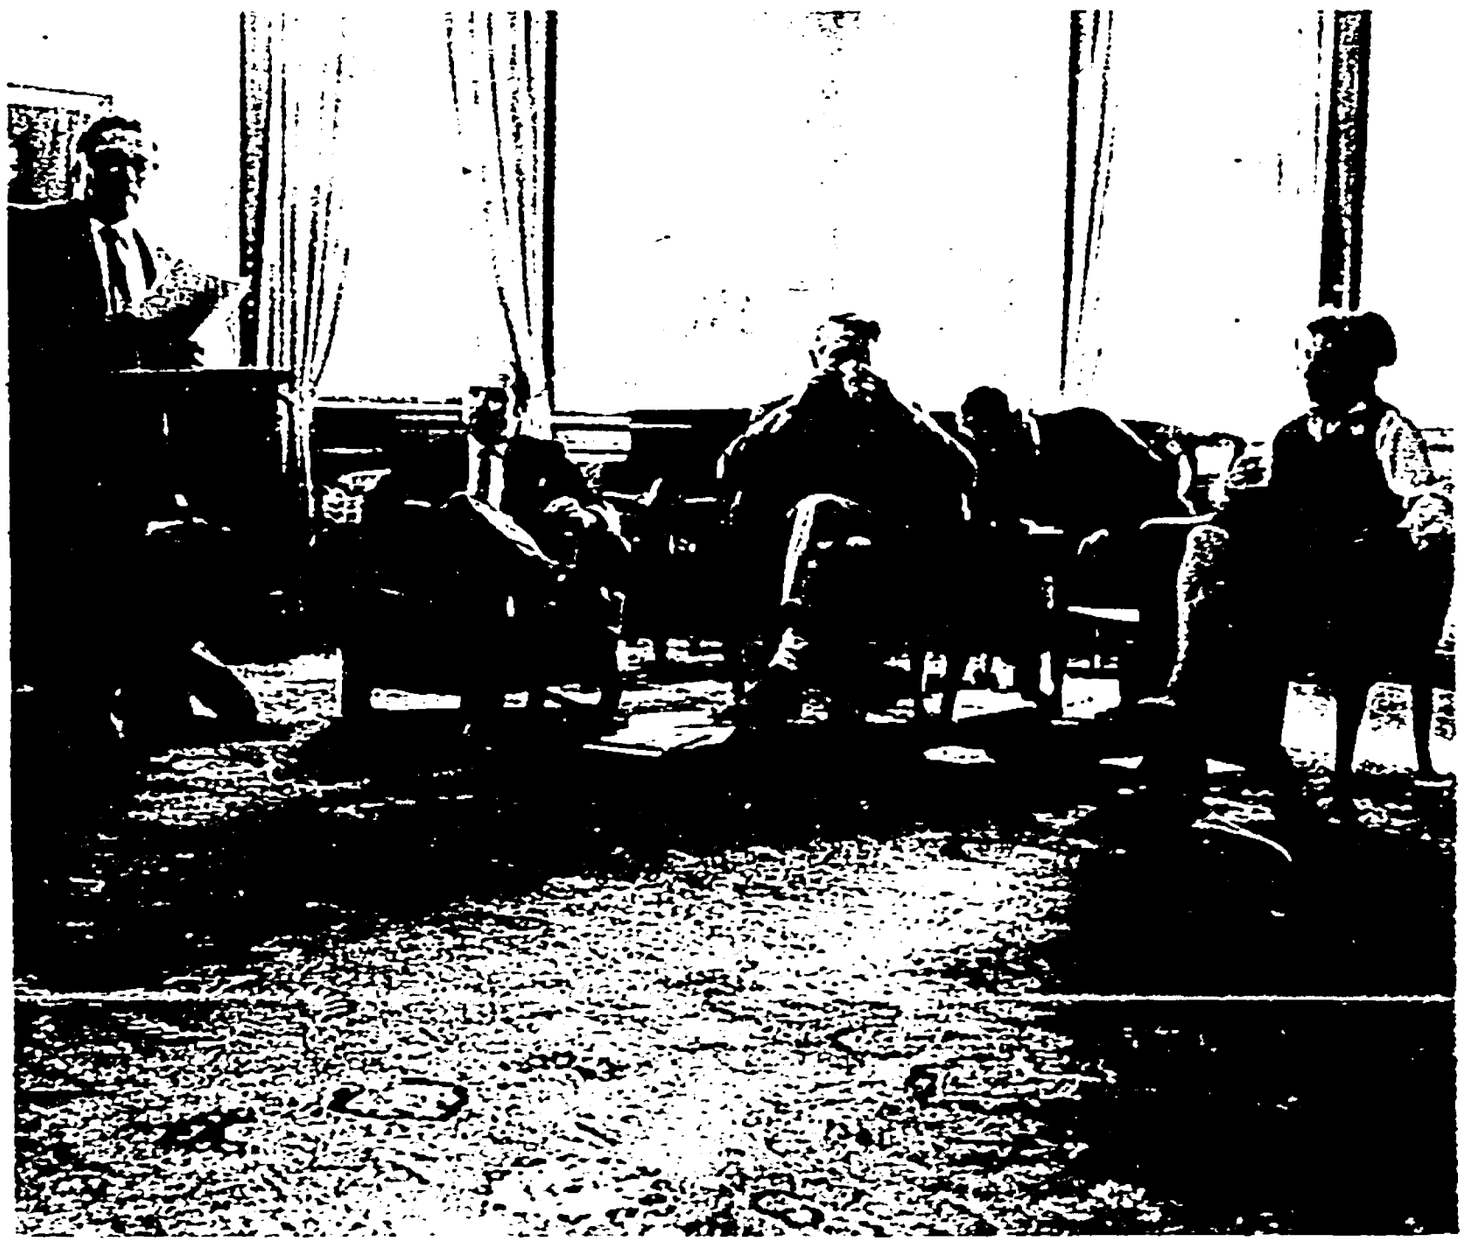
The second part of Colway's presentation asked specifically that the funds be student administered, with the accounting and audit administration remaining with the Comptroller's office.

He said, "With respect to part two of the request, there now exists a long history of student administered activities budgets in other colleges and universities. In this regard, Syracuse University is clearly late in developing similar programs.

"No disagreement"

"Therefore, with respect the the prinicple of student stewardship of the student activities budget, there is no disagreement on the part of University administrators," he continued.

In recent meetings between students and administrators, the student fee was discussed in detail. One of the reasons for setting up the meetings was the raising of the fee to $150 and the increase in tuition.



In the past there have been differing opinions as to where the fee actually goes. In part, it is used for the infirmary, services rendered by publications, student activities, and the offices of the deans of men, women and student services.

More money

Because of the increase in the fee, the students requested more money for student activities. However, the administrators could not give a committment for the appropriation of funds. The students were told this was a matter for determination by the trustees or the trustee budget committee. Colway pledged his support of the proposal and subsequently made the presentation.

He said any appropriation for student activities is subject to the same budget cutbacks as may be experienced by any other University budget. He will submit the full amount of $300,000 for consideration, but has no idea how much will be given in the final budget.

By administering their own funds, and with the increase, the Student Finance Board hopes to be able to include more activities in the student budget. The board, composed of six students and one administrator, is still accepting proposed budgets from student organizations in the Dean of Student Services' office.

THIS INFORMAL MEETING of SU's Board of Graduate Studies yesterday afternoon unanimously approved a proposal for accelerating all doctoral programs here.

Acceleration is approved for all doctoral programs

By TOM BRYAN

The Board of Graduate Studies unanimously approved a proposal for accelerating all University doctoral programs, in action taken at yesterday's meeting.

Under the new requirements for a doctoral degree, each department, college or school currently authorized to award the doctorate will submit to the Graduate School each year a set of requirements which students will satisfy in order to receive the degree. These requirements will describe in a general way whatever is expected in the way of courses, seminars, field work, examinations, tools of research, residence, etc. It will also be comprehensive enough to provide a clear picture of what is actually necessary in achieving the degree within that department, college or school.

The tuition for the doctorate shall be a sum equal to full tuition for three academic years. The Administration will release at a later date a system for tuition credit and payment.

The Board of Graduate Studies, under the Graduate Student Organization, will review the requirements for degrees each year and will have the right to approve or veto any changes in the submitted programs and procedures.

Vice President Frank Piskor was unable to say whether this proposal will go into effect next September. The proposal had been submitted by Professor S. Eskinazi, chairman of the Special Committee of the Graduate School to Re-examine the 90 Hours Requirement for the Doctorate (Ph.D., D.P.A.).

The Board also voted unanimously to seat two graduate students on that body. Method of selection was not determined.

Also approved was a new doctoral program in Slavic languages and literature. This program will go into effect in September and will actively recruit candidates for the following year.

By Lew Howell

Youth shun principles Church represents

President Richard Nixon expressed a hope last week that young Americans would find in religion an answer to today's "crisis of the spirit." He stated that he hoped that by offering church services in the White House, the young people in the universities and elsewhere "might come to think there was something to be gained through religion after all." He seemed to think that young people avoided churches because religion wasn't "in" and that the nation's youth placed too much emphasis on the materialistic side of life.

Despite the appearance recently of several "decency crusades" among America's youth, President Nixon seems to have provided a perfect example of the generation gap in action. Both his interpretation of today's youthful interests and his conception of possibilities for America's religious future reflect a lack of understanding and perhaps even knowledge of what concerns the younger generation.

I doubt, for example, that the non-religious young in America are any more materialistic than were past generations in this country. In fact, a good case can be made that the young in the middle and upper economic levels are beginning to emerge from any interest in the material at all and are going on to an emphasis on the non-material. Achievement can be measured by individuals in a number of ways, one of which is the ability to disregard the material. In this sense, the modern non-conformists have a feeling of achievement as much as do the materialists.

Even within the younger generation, it can be contended that those who consider themselves church-goers are as 'materialistic' as those who do not. This is so because the church in America has come to represent the point of view of the country's traditionalists, that what is good is to work hard, to save one's money and invest, to be responsible, to obey, etc. The nation's church system has retained these original American values more than any other non-commercial institution and has attempted to pass them on to America's youth.

To many of the younger generation, however, these values are the perfect representation of the materialsim they wish to avoid. Thus, they also avoid their institution of communication--the church.

If President Nixon really intends to entice youth back to religion by holding church services in the White House, he probably has not only taken the wrong tack, but instead has taken the opposite one to that he should have taken, particularly at this time in America's history. Since the beginning of our involvement in Vietnam, the younger generation has grown increasingly sceptical of the advisability of following the dictates of authority and centralized choice. And yet, whether or not religious leaders themselves see the situation this way, the church is viewed by many as a symbol and proponent of such hierarchical authority. If that principle is being rejected by youth with regard to national political decision-making, it can't very well be accepted as a philosophical guideline. As Michael York, a Catholic theologian who is a dean at the State University of New York at Old Westbury, has recently stated, young people are being forced to turn away from the established answers because they have come to feel that "there is no moral or visionary leadership given us by our government."

Identification of government with religion, consequently, certainly won't help religion, nor will it help government. For, not only is there considerable doubt about the concepts of religion with regard to the social structure, there is also growing doubt about the premises of religion itself. And, if the American government has doubts about its ability to maintain its lines of authority, it certainly should not look for support to an institution with similar difficulties.

SUNY FULL-YEAR STUDY PROGRAM 1969-70
TEL AVIV UNIVERSITY
An accredited program open also to Non-SUNY students. Earn 36 credits. Courses offered in all disciplines. Some scholarships available.
For applications and more information fill in and mail coupon immediately to:

ISRAEL YEAR PROGRAM
State University College
Oneonta, N. Y. 13820

Year in school ---------- Major ----------
School now attending ----------
Name ----------
Address ----------
City ---------- State ---------- Zip ----------

JIFFY KING
SPECIAL
Monday thru Friday, 2-5 p.m.
10¢ OFF ALL SUBS
727 South Crouse
in the Arcade

Businessman to address grad seminar

Leslie H. Warner, president of General Telephone and Electronics Corporation, will speak on "Management of Change" tomorrow at a meeting of the Association of Graduate Business Students at 3:45 p.m. in Grant Auditorium.

Warner has been with General Telephone since 1955. He was elected president in 1961 and became chief executive officer in 1966. He is a director of Charter New York Corporation, Continental Can Company, Textron Inc., Thorn Electrical Industries of London and Dunlap and Associates; a trustee of Teachers Insurance and Annuity Association, and a member of the visiting committee of the Harvard University Graduate School of Business Administration.

The seminar, which is free and open to the public, is part of the Association of Graduate Business Students' business lectureship program. Coffee will be served at 3 p.m. A question and answer session will follow.

6 jobs in 6 years is called job hopping?

Not necessarily.
Not at Du Pont.

We have a practice called "planned mobility," a kind of intramural job hopping. It means you don't go into a training program. You go to work—at different growth jobs that broaden you professionally, benefit you personally, and help you find the specific field you want to grow in. Here's how it worked for Jim Davis, an M.E. from the University of Pittsburgh:

"My first assignment was installation of improved polymer transfer systems," says Jim. "Then some research. A patent was issued on my device to apply steam to a running threadline. Next I was a college recruiter. After that I worked on a five-year forecast of the company's engineering needs. Now I'm in a cost reduction group."

For Jim, it added up to six assignments in six years. This may be some kind of a record. But he didn't waste time. Every day of it was solid profit.

Your Du Pont recruiter is a guy a lot like Jim. Ask him about planned mobility. Ask him anything. The coupon will get you some background information before you meet him.

DU PONT
College Relations

Du Pont Company
Room 6689
Wilmington, DE 19898

I'd like your latest information on opportunities at Du Pont for graduates with degrees in _____

Name _____
University _____
Degree _____ Graduation Date _____
Address _____
City _____ State _____
Zip _____

An Equal Opportunity Employer (M/F)

ANGUS H. TWOMBLY — Editor-in-Chief

MANAGING EDITOR - Alan Stamm EXECUTIVE EDITOR - Karen Wiediger NEWS EDITOR - Fred Tuccillo EDITORIAL DIRECTOR - David A. Ross COPY EDITOR - Jean Havens FEATURE EDITOR - Roz Mazer SPORTS EDITOR - Mike Weber CAMPUS AFFAIRS EDITOR - Larry Kramer PHOTOGRAPHY EDITOR - Clint Clemens ASSOCIATE EDITORS - Andrij Bilyk, Kay Christensen, Beth Hillson, Rona Kavee, Helene Macdonald, Charles Shapiro, Dan Schlossberg, Patti Williams, Roni Ziokower.

DAILY ORANGE

Syracuse University's Daily Newspaper Since 1919

TUESDAY, MAY 6, 1969 PAGE 3

STEVEN P. STROBRIDGE -- Business Manager

ASSISTANT BUSINESS MANAGER— Art Depasqua, NATIONAL ADVERTISING MANAGER— Janet Meyer ACCOUNT EXECUTIVES— Roger Black, Jim Maney, Mike Greenstein.

Published Tuesday, through Friday during the academic year by students of Syracuse University. Offices located at 200 Brooklea Drive, Fayetteville, N.Y., and 1101 East Adams St., Syracuse, New York. Entered as Second Class matter at the U.S. Post Office, Fayetteville, N.Y. 13066.

Big shot legislation

The New York State Legislature has passed a bill forbidding the possession of firearms on college campuses. We find it ironic that the appearance of guns at Cornell last week should prompt the hasty approval of such legislation when three assassinations of national figures have failed to produce any significant nationwide gun control.

The bill, which was signed into law by Governor Rockefeller the day it passed the State Senate, calls for a prison term of up to seven years for any campus resident convicted of possession of a firearm on campus.

It is probably safe to assume that most American colleges have restrictions against possession of firearms on campus. At Syracuse, general regulation 2a in Dates and Data states that the possession of firearms and dangerous weapons is "prohibited in University living centers and on University property, except by authorized personnel."

We strongly support such a regulation, but also wish that such a regulation would be enforced by the various universities rather than having to rely on police powers of New York State to do so.

What this bill may symbolize is the start of a public backlash and righteous indignation against campus upheavals. It is unfortunate that we will have to witness an increasing encroachment of university regulatory powers by the state. The inability of some colleges to deal with their students is a poor excuse to give the state and maybe the federal government an inroad to university policy making.

Peanuts is run with the permission of The Syracuse Herald-Journal.

UU unclear on Jabberwocky beer

As you probably know by now, this campus is finally going to see some sort of organized student center. University Union is opening Jabberwocky, a student coffeehouse, cultural center, and general "hang-out" in the basement of Kimmel Dining Hall. This weekend marks the formal opening of Jabberwocky, and UU is bringing up blues men Junior Wells and John Hammond to help celebrate the center's first three nights.

Most of the preparations for the opening of Jabberwocky seem to be coming along smoothly. However, in one area of operations –the food and beer concessions--we are experiencing difficulty.

Over two months ago, the chairman of UU met with Chancellor Tolley, at which time a tentative agreement was made that the profits made by the snack bar and the beer bar in Jabberwocky would go to the students.

Later in that week, in a meeting with Dean Carleton, the Dean of Student Services, more definite plans about the food and drink concessions were agreed to. First of all, it was decided that, although Food Service would operate both the snack bar and the beer bar, all the profits made at Jabberwocky would go back to University Union to be put into more programming for the students. Secondly, it was agreed that University Union would, with the advice of Food Service and Dean Carleton, control all policies conerning the food and beer in Jabberwocky. In other words, this means that University Union has the right to decide: the price of all food and beer, the type of food and beer to be served, who is to be hired to work behind the counters, i.e., students rather than local employees, and the opening and closing hours of the snack and beer bars.

At the time of those first meetings, Dean Carleton said that he would write up the agreement immediately. This has not happened. Here it is, two days before the opening of Jabberwocky, and we still do not know what the story is with the food and drink concession. Dean Carleton has now said that he has to check back with the Chancellor before any definite decision can be reached, but, since the Chancellor seemed to agree with the idea of the students taking the profits, we don't see such a great problem involved that it should take so much time to give us an answer. It seems that for the past two months, the students of this University have been given the "run-around" as far as this issue is concerned.

What might be causing all the trouble is that Food Service, that great "non-profit making organization," probably just does not want to go into any endeavor in which they cannot make a profit. And, there is simply no reason for the University rather than the students themselves to take in money spent by students in a student center. So, we have a conflict of interests.

Tomorrow, the chairman of UU is meeting with Chancellor Tolley to once again discuss the issue. If the proposal is rejected, or even it if is not definitely answered, we will have a serious decision to make, because Jabberwocky opens the next night. We must decide whether or not to open the snack and beer bars if we cannot get the profits from them. Do students still want to pay for beer and hamburgers at their student center, even if the University will be taking in all the profits? Or, would the students rather have us wait and keep the snack and beer bars closed, until we can work out an agreement so that the money you spend for a glass of beer can go towards helping to bring you a movie on the following weekend?

So, if you're sweating along with Junior Wells and John Hammond at Jabberwocky this weekend, please know that your thirst just might be serving a purpose.

View master

Up from naivete

DAVID COHEN, a sophomore majoring in English, is a member of Traditions Commission. He is currently working on the academic program for next fall's Orientation Week.

The week of April 28-May 2, 1969, despite its generally fair weather, has a certain gloomy cast for any enlightened student of American foreign and domestic policy. The storm clouds drifted over us from three distinct personalities: Ernie Grafe, a student conservative organizer; faculty-administrator Dean Alfred H. Cope; and Chancellor William Tolley. In a DO article, Mr. Grafe superficially attacked black student demands and quite dangerously defended the ABM; in a position paper tacked on an HL wall, Dean Cope trumpeted fourteen chauvanistic points to remember on foreign policy; and at various speaking engagements around the Syracuse area, the Chancellor irresponsibly denounced student protest in terms that were both abusive and condescending.

No doubt Mr. Grafe is sincere. His effort to promote conservatism in a predominantly liberal atmosphere is well within the best traditions of American free speech. But unless such promotions are responsible and intellectually sound, they weaken rather than strengthen political debate. The issues raised by Mr. Rustin and other men who question certain policies of black protesters are certainly valid; they certainly demand a good deal of attention. But instead of any real examination of the issues involved, we get merely self-righteous pomposity concerning the fact that Mr. Rustin is not a white man, thereby absolving any white of charges of racism. We get no feeling that Mr. Grafe's purpose is to show that the issues are complex and not easily dismissed by automatic responses; rather the predominant sense is one of self-justification (underlined by a flaunting use of the word "negro" as opposed to "black" which, though it may seem petty to many, is of great significance, if for no reason other than its betrayal of a lack of flexible realization of current black attitudes).

Mr. Grafe's discussion of the ABM system growns from the same naivete and small-mindedness that gives rise to the Fourteen Points submitted by the Liberal Arts dean. It is an attitude, a position, with which it is hard to "Cope." The Dean's basic premise, labelled Number One with the same authority as was the First Commandment, is simply that "American democracy is the best form of government"--a point which is certainly debatable here at home, which is idiocy when applied to the world at large. No doubt Cope is sincere when he writes that the cardinal fact to remember in the shaping of American diplomacy is that we are morally superior to any nation on earth, and, as such, must always consider ourselves justified, regardless of means; but, sincerity is no excuse for a patriotism that is essentially fascist, for a foreign policy that is not only immoral but insane and self-destructive. Dean Cope's position is reaction in its purest sense--reaction against the searching-out of issues, reaction against the facing-up to complexities that is the moral responsibility of any great power. Essentially, his is a retreat into simplicity.

And as for Chancellor Tolley...

It is tragic when a man of talent and foresight in his early career lapses, in older age, into a position insensitive to the conditions of change that surround him. Perhaps it is an attempt to defeat time's inevitability; perhaps it grows from a hope that, if only we can hold our grasp on the security of what we once knew--on the security of 'how it was when I grew up'--then we can resist the ever-moving procession toward death that is man's lot. This who can say? What we can say, is that statements so utterly irresponsible and out-of-touch are damaging and insulting to the concern of sincere students for a country they want desperately to love--but whose actions they can only despise. The real issues of campus protest revolve around crucial questions of academic freedom in the university; they stem from an honest distress about the continuation of the learning process in a society that demands a sophisticated and aware middle class to survive. They do not stem from "kids that come here with a protest level and nothing to protest;" they cannot be dismissed as "kids having some fun." Yes, there are irresponsible radicals; yes, many protesters are as busy venting unresolved authority conflicts as they are protesting. But to over-simplify and over-generalize is to miss the anguished plea of a generation.

CUPPA's™ freeze dried coffee in the cool spoon.

It's the think drink
that makes you go go go.
CUPPA's never stale
or bitter tasting.
No percolator that keeps you waiting.
CUPPA's fresh brew
keeps that perked taste true.
You can take CUPPA Coffee
wherever you go oh-oh.

It's a fact! All you need is water and a CUPPA spoon to make a perfect cup of fresh perked coffee each and every time. Premeasured CUPPA coffee sealed in each foil spoon gives balanced full bodied flavor that's never stale or bitter tasting. Imagine fresh perked coffee in a jiffy without a percolator. Just peel back the lid, pour the CUPPA coffee into water and stir with CUPPA spoon. No messy jars to contend with.

CUPPA spoon is disposable too (though it's so pretty you won't want to dispose of it--some people collect them for serving hors d'oeuvres and for cheese dips. Some people color them for Christmas tree decorations and even make necklaces and matching earrings--groovy!)

Take CUPPA--to school, office, picnics, vacations, and even to your favorite ski resort where the chile may be great but the coffee not so--just ask for hot water. The only way to serve really fresh perked Freeze Dried Coffee is in a premeasured serving spoon.

That's CUPPA™ the "perfect cup of coffee." Now at your local food market.

NEW CUPPA

Ward Foods, Inc., 2 Penn Plaza, New York
© 1969 by Ward Foods, Inc.

Campbell heeds protestors' calls; 'He was sharp'

By EVAN RICHERT

"Kids come here with a protest level and little to protest about...So long as no one is punished, why shouldn't the fun continue?"

--Chancellor William P. Tolley

"Whatever the causes and the results of the discontent, it must be recognized that some of the charges being made against today's system posses great merit."

--Dean Alan K. Campbell

At a time when most university and government officials cry for campus "law and order," Alan K. Campbell, new dean of Syracuse University's Maxwell School, apparently will try to remedy some of the university's real problems.

Amid new campus-regulating state legislation and investigations of campus disorders, Dean Campbell said in his installation speech Friday that he will accept the challenge of today's protestors.

For much of the installation's audience, this was a refreshing return from the colorful fringe of current protest to issues central to that protest--"the general charge of hyprocisy," student-faculty relations, the ability and willingness of scholars to influence public policy and find solutions to public problems.

"The validity of the charges being made against today's system must be judged by their content, not by their manner of presentation," the new dean argued.

"He was sharp," said one Maxwell professor after the installation, and a student agreed: "He focused on things that are important. And he spoke to us person-to-person, not superior-to-inferior."

It was, perhaps, as much the attitude of the speech as it was the substance that drew priase from some students and faculty. While vague at times, it was nevertheless clear that he was moving away from the clichés often invoked to defend the status quo.

He rejected, for example, the call to "reason and order" (the values university is said to represent) was a weapon against demands for change.

"To invoke the values of reason and order against demands for change surely requires that the status quo be able either to justify itself or demonstrate its capacity to grow," said Campbell, quoting New York Times columnist Tom Wicker. "The Maxwell School contribution, I believe, must be to growth and adaptation."

An analysis

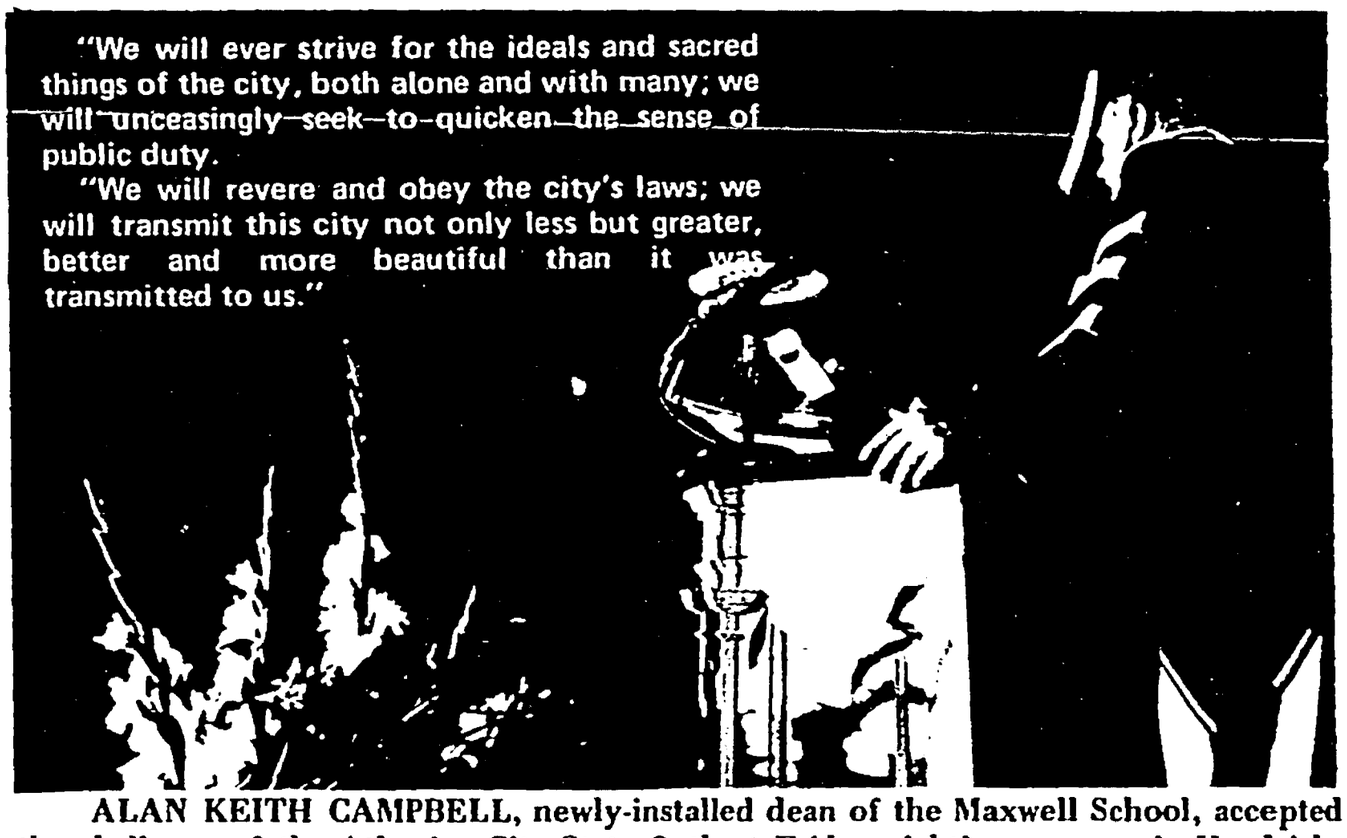
And, realizing that students have questions, but some answers too, and ears, but also voices, Campbell referred to them as colleagues. "Teaching requires the treatment of students as colleagues," he said, "not junior colleagues, but colleagues." Thus, the elusive "channel of communication" was opened.

Such an attitude drives to the root of the problem left virtually untouched by SU's recent boycott of classes. For it reflect's Campbell's basic faith in intellectual challenge, and charges the classroom with the responsibility of implementing it.

"The classroom should be characterized by openness and intellecutal challenge, a place where students may test their insights and knowledge against that possessed by fellow scholars," the dean said.

For the student, this means greater participation "and involvement in the process of intellectual discovery". For the professor, it means recognizing that "students no longer will tolerate the jet-propelled scholar who sees students only on infrequent stopovers at this home base."

"Universities can no longer act, just as highway engineers, urban renewers and others may no longer act, as if they have inalienable rights to put their buildings and facilities wherever they wish."



But Campbell took Maxwell still deeper: "Some way, too, must be found to make the expertise in a university available to the community which surrounds it. That such expertise should be available only to the highest bidder, as it too often now is, violates the basic commitment that I know we all have to our profession."

There undoubtedly is a relationship between Campbell's involvement with the cities--"the crisis of the 60's"--and his ability to recognize urgent issues of our times. Perhaps other administrators will take his cue and look to the university's real problems.

Maxwell House (organ)

Daily Orange, May 6, 1969 Page 5

This special supplement was scheduled to appear yesterday, but was postponed because of mechanical difficulties.

ALAN KEITH CAMPBELL, newly-installed dean of the Maxwell School, accepted the challenge of the Athenian City-State Oath at Friday night's ceremony in Hendricks Chapel. (Photo by Clemens)

Friends and scholars see Campbell installed

By BOB ZUER
Associate Editor

On Friday night, Hendricks Chapel was filled with representatives of nearly every major field of social science. Professors, politicians, students, and friends and associates of the Maxwell School came to Syracuse University for the installlation of Alan K. Campbell as fifth dean of the Maxwell School and meshed into an evening of interdisciplinary sharing.

During that evening Sen. Edmond S. Muskie (D-Maine) told his audience in crowded Hendricks Chapel. "You are rightly concerned about the inadequacies of our society for they are there." The Maxwell School represents a need for change and continuity in today's society," he said. "We are all more concerned about conditions in our society," he emphasized. And he added this result stems from student concern.

Muskie spoke of a "ferment, turbulence and creativity" which has heen unleashed on college campuses and indicated that a "renewed sense of involvement was borne of student unrest." Campbell himself affirmed during his speech that conflicts in our universities have forced a reevaluation of priorities and goals. Society must be restructured and it is part of the university's role to determine in what way, he emphasized.

Though Muskie's and Campbell's speeches were the highlights of the evening, the installation, which was billed as the academic event of the semester, was not without its formal ceremony.

The evening began with a procession of notables, both administration and faculty members. Nearly 100, dressed in robes and hoods signifying various academic distinctions, took part in the procession led by the Dean of the College of Liberal Arts, Alfred H. Cope.

Chancellor William P. Tolley formally installed Campbell during the ceremony noting the university was grateful for Maxwell's "influence and accomplishments." He said SU was proud of Maxwell's past Deans, including NATO ambassador Harlan Cleveland and Stephen K. Bailey who is now head of the Policy Institute here. The Chancellor expressed optimism that the university would be as equally proud of Campbell.

Muskie on youth: "What you need above all else is what we needed and have not found completely, to your frustration, and that is an infallible way of making sound judgments."

After Muskie's and Campbell's speeches, honorary doctor of law degrees were presented to Muskie, New York State Majority Leader Earl W. Brydges and U.S. District Court Judge Anthony J. Travia. Vice Chancellor and Provost Frank P. Piskor presided over the installation which lasted nearly 90 minutes.

Muskie said the university's role must be to "create the new spirit that will make the world better than the past. The university has been our gateway to history--to its study and its making," he added.

Not enough people have responded to the challenge of creating a better world, according to Muskie. Allusing to last fall's presidential campaign, Muskie said it was the students who provided the needed "shot in the arm" for political reform. The contemporary student movement is worldwide, a kind of "international happening."

Similarly Campbell envisioned a dynamic role for the university and in turn the Maxwell School. "As scholars we; must be willing to attack the big questions," he said.

In laying out his plans for Maxwell School, Campbell attacked President Richard M. Nixon's chief advisor on Urban Affairs, Daniel P. Moynihan's statement that universities should examine public programs only after they have been implemented. Campbell said this would limit the social scientist to "picking up the pieces."

Campbell pledged Maxwell to an examination of the status quo. "The Maxwell School, though not rich in endowment, has never turned its back on the challenges of the times," he said. Muskie warned his audience they must be aware of the lessons of the past.

"The University & its communities"

By MARGARET GENOVESE

Lawrence C. Howard, vice president of the Danforth Foundation, in a talk Friday, called on the occasion of the inauguration of the new dean of the Maxwell School to cause the University to "celebrate the black man."

Speaking in the Maxwell Founders' Room, in the third of four panel discussions marking the installation of Alan K. Campbell as the fifth dean of the school, Howard directed his remarks to the topic of "The University and Urban Society."

The symposium on the topic of "The University and its Community" was the first time graduate students have been asked to join with faculty members in commenting in this format. Members of the panel included William P. Mangin, Professor of Anthropology and graduate students Thomas N. Perloff and Rudolph J. Lombard.

LAWRENCE C. HOWARD, Danforth Foundation vice president, discussed "The University and Urban Society" at Maxwell Hall Friday. (Photo by Clemens)

Howard, who holds degrees from Drake, Wayne and Harvard Universities and his written books in the fields of African Studies and American racial problems, delivered his talk in a literary, poetic style on the theme of identity. The consequences of the identity crisis for blacks was to see "black as one color which embraces all colors, elevating none." The consequences of the same search for identity in American universities he saw as "concern about the patterns of thought that prevail in higher education." These movements he illustrated, were concommitant to one another. They came together in a "linking of soul to Socrates."

The crisis in universities he saw in terms of "the student culture versus the college culture." The traditional college culture he equated with an "analytical and morally detached" mental process. This, he said, was coming to be confronted with a "counter culture". In the student culture students advocate "a morally committed style."

DEAN CAMPBELL chats aimiably with several friends and colleagues in the Founders' Room of Maxwell before Friday morning's seminar on "The University and Urban Society," sponsored by the Metropolitan Studies Program. Dean Campbell's wife is seated at his right. (Photo by Clemens)

The role of the blacks has been to "spark" the crisis of identity in the universities, first by their demands in civil rights and then in their demands for a more relevant university. Howard said, "The new abolitionists, the liberators have done more for liberating whites than getting goals for the blacks." The silent generation of college students," according to Howard, "became activists by the work of Southern activists."

Howard also spoke of the university's role in response to "the challenge of technotronics" and what he called "the erosion of the human dimensions of life."

Man, Howard said, is becoming increasingly subject to deliberate programming. And he stressed that the university is becoming "the creative eye" of the technotronic society.

A failure of the university, he said, has been its refusal to "form a counterweight to the industrial-military complex." This has resulted in a cerain "rigidity" according to Howard and the failure of the university to relax this "comes out as oppression."

Blacks and what Howard called "obsolete" people now "loom as a creative resource" to counter this technocratic challenge because they're "unprogrammed." Their ability to speak out against oppression he termed "the black legacy."

He commented that blacks have taken "the lead in recasting human values." They are achieving this, Howard said, "by smashing idols and turning symbols inside out."

In his comments after the talk, Perloff, president of the Maxwell Graduate Student Association, said he agreed "with the spirit and hypothesis" of Howard's remakrs but said he was "skeptical of the messianic role of the blacks." He said he saw their major contribution as "one of style."

Speaking on the broader topic of the university and the community, Perloff said the university has a responsibility to set an example of moral behavior to educate tomorrow's leaders, to develop a curriculum to reflect tomorrow's careers, to develop new knowledge and to function as a service organization.

Professor Mangin, in his comments, said his political orientation was different from Howard's. He said he did not "expect final solutions to things," but rather saw confusion, chaos and conflict in the university context safer for diversity. He said, with a note of anthropological witticism in his voice, that he would "back a black leader until he gets power; then, he said, he would prefer to return to a conflict situation.

Mangin, who has served as Peace Corps administrator in Peru, also commented that he does not see "any inherent racial goodness about anybody."

Graduate students Rudolph Lombard commented that his position on the responsibility of the university to the urban community was a practical one. He disagreed with putting the emphasis on a black identity because that concept "doesn't get at the problems we all face."

He proposed the university educate "teams" to work effectively in practical ghetto problems.

Remember the girl you left behind---

Mother's Day, May 11

Giftware - Candy - Fragrances - Cards

Apparel - Books - Stationery - Jewelry

We will mail all Anywhere!

at
The Main Store
Top o' the Mount
St. Mary's Dorm
The Corner Store

SU Bookstores

"Our Business Is People"

AT FRIDAY afternoon's Maxwell Graduate Student Association reception (left photo), Professor Michael O. Sawyer (left) chats with Anthony J. Travia, United States District Court Judge (middle) and Dean Campbell. Following the installation ceremonies Friday evening, Dean Campbell and Senator Muskie greet friends and associates in Maxwell's lobby.

Muskie amid academia

'To take the risk-to trust one another'

By ROZ MAZER
Feature Editor

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article is based upon exclusive interviews with Sen. Edmund Sixtus Muskie. Daily Orange Editor-in-Chief Angus H. Twombly and Feature Editor Roz Mazer peppered the Maine Democrat with questions during Friday afternoon's drive from a news conference at the Syracuse Press Club to a reception at Maxwell.

Edmund Sixtus Muskie would answer questions on everything - questions on youth, campus violence, the generation gap and political leadership. He would not answer one question: "Are you Abraham Lincoln?" In the course of the evening, one's imagination was led to believe that every now and then he and Abe exchanged winks.

During the invocation ceremonies, Senator Muskie had these words for Syracuse University students:

"What you need above all else is what we needed and have not found completely, to your frustration, and that is an infallible way of making sound judgments. I often tell my teenagers there are three ways to learn - by reading, by listening to advice and by making mistakes. And I guess the greatest criticism that can be made against parents and adults is that for too long we have tried to restrict you to the first two, and that we ought to allow you to use the third earlier in life in more instances and on more occasions than we're inclined to do out of our overprotectiveness for you. So I'm all for letting you make mistakes in the hope that most of the time, initially, you'll make the small ones that won't cripple your capacity to deal effectively with the tough ones - and that you'll learn enough to make the wise ones, the larger ones."

The vulnerability of youth

Most of the standard rhetoric we hear about student unrest provides little insight into the intangibles of protest sweeping American college campuses--what really is behind all the guns and all the vulgarity. The Muskie perspective on today's youth:

"They have a different set of values than my generation. We were preoccupied with a set of problems in the thirties and forties. The policies of our country today are a reflection of the preoccupations we had and the slants that those preoccupations gave us. This new generation has a different perspective. They did not face the economic insecurity of the thirties; they did not experience the threat of Hitlerism and of the consequences of a lack of military preparation on the part of western democracies that led to the rise of Hitlerism. Not having had those experiences and seeing the consequences of policies my generation has achieved they have a different perspective and they are not happy at all with the results. It's perfectly understandable, and, I think, a healthy reaction, basically.

"This generation is going to be just as susceptible to apathy, indifference and prejudice as ours. I don't think the Creator has identified this generation of college students as being omnipotent or all-wise or all-effective. It's a lot easier to identify the mistakes of the past than it is to anticipate the mistakes of the future. Right now, they are at the peak of concern, of interest, of dedication. They undoubtedly think this is going to continue all their lives. But they're going to be just as as vulnerable to apathy and indifference as previuous generations, and, more than that, they'll be just as vulnerable to making mistakes. And this is the danger.

On political leadership

It is not hard to recall what Dean Campbell called, "the note of sanity Senator Muskie contributed to last year's campaign" as the Democratic party's vice presidential candidate. Many of us became attached not only to ideals last year, but more than that, to one man. Senator Muskie on political leadership:

"Leadership obviously is important in any society--especially in a democratic society. But the other side of it is that of followship also. A democratic society is the one society above all that doesn't believe in the indispensable man. Are these students telling us that there is such a thing as the indispensable man, that when one thing goes, everything goes? I don't believe it. The method by which we elect presidents is a reflection of our refusal to accept that thesis. Franklin Roosevelt, the man who came closest to being regarded as the indispensable man, died, and the country went on. Heroes are important. But they shouldn't be regarded as indispensable. I guess with the emergence in recent year of Franklin Roosevelt and Jack Kennedy and Bobby and all of the charisma and the tragedies involved and the hero cult, or the personality cult as they call it in other societies, it has grown stronger. It will be interesting to see how long it persists. And it's understandable. Young people, when they get a hero, and he's lost or tarnished or defeated, they feel a personal involvement that discourages them and cools them off--but it shouldn't and they must come to recognize that if they're going to have a continuing, meaningful impact on their society."

A merging of two worlds

The relationship between academia and the political world is often clouded in esoteric terms with suspicions on both sides as to each other's partisan concerns. The interests of the two worlds, however, often overlap. The Congress is currently investigating campus violence and will pass major legislation on the policies to be instituted. Senator Muskie said:

"I think we ought to respond by letting the university and the university community deal with campus problems in the way that it is traditionally identified with--the approach of reason, the approach of rational dialogue, the approach of communication, the approach of study and understanding rather than emotional confrontation which rejects the idea of dialogue and rational approach.

An SU farewell

It seems inevitable that every time Senator Muskie comes to SU, his visit is somehow tarnished. As the Senator departed from campus, it seems an SDS devotee came up to him and placed a button in his hand--a button which had a picture of Karl Marx on it and said, "workers of the world unite."

Senator Muskie tells the story! "So he handed it to me and said, 'Well, aren't ya going to wear it?' And I said of course not. And he said, 'Why not? Don't you think the workers of the world should unit?' And I said, 'Yes, but not under Karl Marx's banner.'"

The Senator chuckled. "But he wanted to debate or something like that..."

We hope that Senator Muskie carried away with him a sense of the commitment we have to his world that we know he has to ours.

Earl W. Brydges, New York State Senate majority leader, was tied up in legislative session in Albany and could not make it to the installation ceremonies. His wife accepts his honorary degree.

Howard Samuels, former candidate for New York State Lieutenant Governor, and his wife, close personal friends of the Campbells, greet each other in the Founders' Room.

Searles in installation symposium

By JOYCE ROWE

The first program of the installation ceremony for Dean Campbell convened last Thursday in the Founders' Room. John R. Searles, executive vice president of the Metropolitan Development Association, spoke on "the University and Metropolitan Syracuse."

Mr. Searles is known as "Mr. Metropolis" in upstate New York. He is one of the nation's most skilled brokers of urban affairs. His speech was a detailed analysis of the relationship, in his words "a model for town and gown," which exists between the Syracuse community. Searles described the balance, contrasting SU with places like Princeton which tends to dominate rather than cooperate with its community.

To support his argument Searles cited examples of mutual cooperation in financial, cultural and governmental projects. Many of these activities are coordinated by the Maxwell School, which he labeled as "the greatest school of public administration in the nation and in the world." The administrators and businessmen who come here are attracted by the proximity of the Maxwell School as well as the city. Searles main issue was the governmental structure of Syracuse; the metropolitan problems of race, poverty, transportation, and finance which have their roots in governmental fragmentation. Searles feels that the attitude of the Maxwell School will influence the city in its formation of a strong county government which, according to the geographical structure of this area, is the most logical unit.

The university is a financial asset for the community–the payroll and the great purchasing power for students. But Searles recognizes that both units are hurting financially.

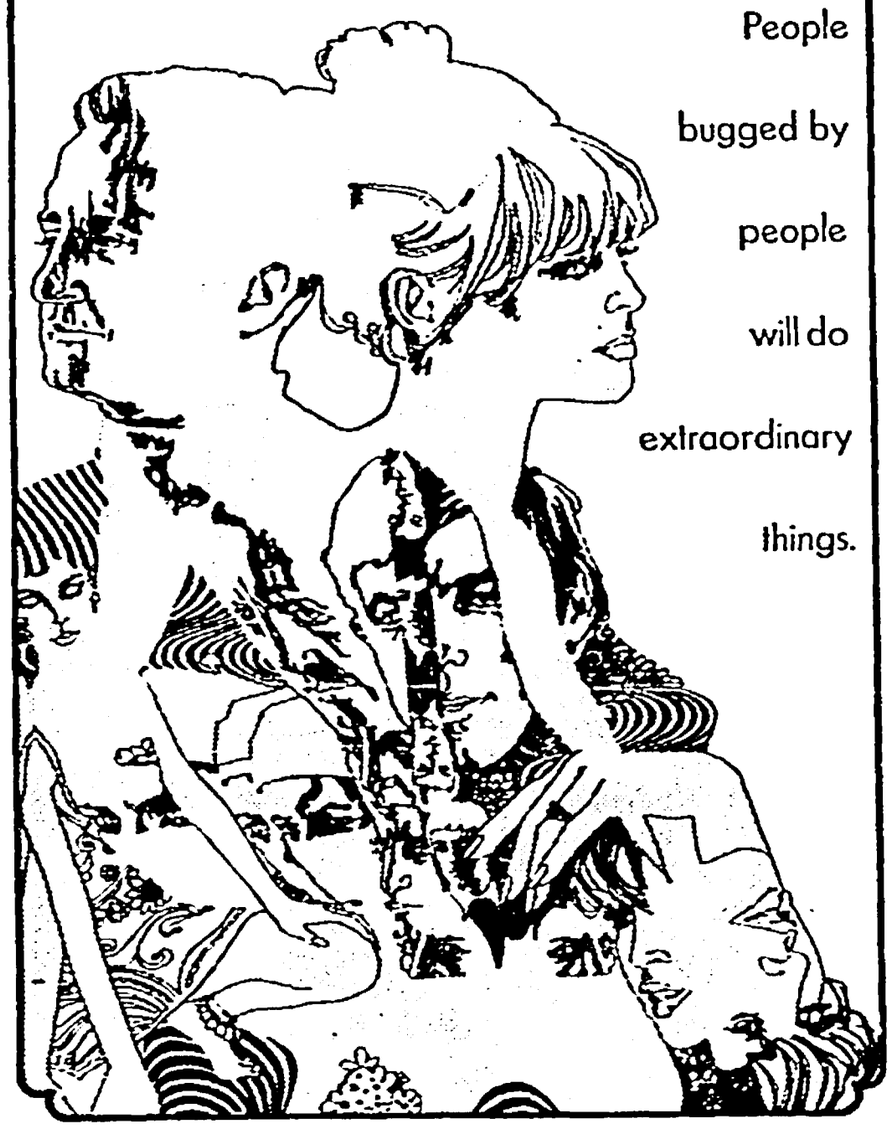
NEW FACULTY AND GRADUATE HOUSING

Nob Hill, only a few minutes from SU, offers all the conveniences of luxury living in a serene atmosphere accented by a panoramic view. Applications for the moderately-priced suites are currently being accepted for the fall semester.

Full-color brochures and other information describing the abundant amenities are available to faculty, staff and graduate students by phoning 469-3211 between noon and 6 p.m.

WANTED for PSYCHOLOGICAL EXPERIMENT

Women at least 21 years of age, with at least a high school eduaction. Participants will be paid at least $2.00 per hour. If interested, call Upstate Medical Center at 473-5627. If no answer, 473-5632. Ask for Mrs. Harter.



Call between hours 8:30 to 5 p.m.

ATTENTION SENIORS:

Final Week for Ordering Caps and Gowns at The Corner Store

Bookstores

JULIE CHRISTIE · GEORGE C. SCOTT
IN A RICHARD LESTER–RAYMOND WAGNER PRODUCTION

People bugged by people will do extraordinary things.

Petulia
...the uncommon movie.

CO-STARRING
RICHARD CHAMBERLAIN AS DAVID DANNER
ARTHUR HILL · SHIRLEY KNIGHT and JOSEPH COTTEN AS MR. DANNER
Based on a novel by John Haase · Music Composed and Conducted by John Barry
SCREENPLAY BY LAWRENCE B. MARCUS · ASSOCIATE PRODUCER DENIS O'DELL · PRODUCED BY RAYMOND WAGNER · DIRECTED BY RICHARD LESTER
SUGGESTED FOR MATURE AUDIENCES — TECHNICOLOR® FROM WARNER BROS.-SEVEN ARTS

film forum
gifford auditorium
syracuse university
$1.00
May 5, 6, 7
7 & 9 p.m.
$1.00

Now here! Europe's favorite tanning preparations AMBRE SOLAIRE

Seven beautiful, French-formula bronzers.

Sun yourself with Continental know-how! Ambre Solaire is now in America to help bring you a glowing, glorious tan. Here are preparations for every skin type and every need . . . all distinctively packaged in France, all made to travel, and all created to help you acquire a rich Mediterranean tan.

Choose the one best suited for you:

TANNING SPRAY SATIN: Special formulations for Dry Skin and for Normal/Oily Skin. $3.00.

TANNING FOAM: Softens as it tans. $3.00.

TOTAL TANNING CREME: Protects dry skin. Large Size: $2.50; Small: $1.50.

TANNING LOTION: Special formulations for Dry Skin and for Normal/Oily Skin. $2.50.

TANNING OIL: Velvetizes as it tans. Large Size: $2.50; Small: $1.50.

Bookstores

303 University Place

SALE

IF BUSHELS ARE YOUR BAG . . .

make the scene at SHACK 303 (in front of our Main Store.) Bushels of bargains . . . a little bit of this, a little bit of that . . . from soup to nuts (make that apples and bananas at 2c per) . . . gifts and gadgets . . . photography stuff . . . boutiqueries . . . books . . . supplies (from 1 penny) . . . ugly sweatshirts . . . whatever we can dump in two weeks.

SU Bookstores

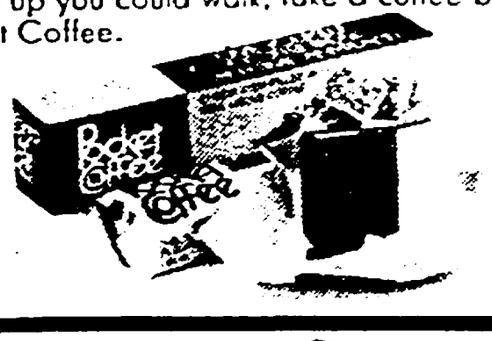
Looking for a great meal?
Try Red Barn's combination of a
BIG BARNEY®
French Fries & Coke

If you haven't had a Big Barney, you don't know what you're missing! Two delicious hamburger patties, cheese, lettuce, pickle, and our own special sauce on a double-deck roll. Try it with French Fries and a Coke today! Regular Price 00c

57¢ SPECIAL

Where it's fun to eat
RED BARN®
1514 Erie Blvd., East
731 South Crouse Ave.
519 Oriskany Blvd, Utica
3605 Brewerton Road
Special ends June 1

Pocket Coffee!
What's that?



A new kind of coffee break for discouraged drivers.

Whether you drive a taxi, the school shuttle or the car pool, behind the wheel you're behind the 8-ball. Lights that don't change, mid-town traffic, Sunday drivers, bad tippers, cranky kids. A coffee break would sure help.

Pocket Coffee was invented for you. It looks like a piece of candy; it's a lot more. A delicious chocolate shell filled with real liquid coffee. Coffee break coffee. Wrapped and packed in a handy 3 candy packet. Pocket Coffee's a great traveler.

When you can't stop, when you're stuck in traffic, or, so fed up you could walk, take a coffee break. Reach for Pocket Coffee.

Available at Delstores

JUNIOR WELLS (RIGHT) AND JOHN HAMMOND bring the excitement and drive of the blues to Syracuse when they appear at Jabberwocky, Spring Weekend, May 8, 9, and 10. Tickets for each of eight shows will be on sale at the HBC cloakroom this week.

Ifshin seeking volunteers for SG's new branches

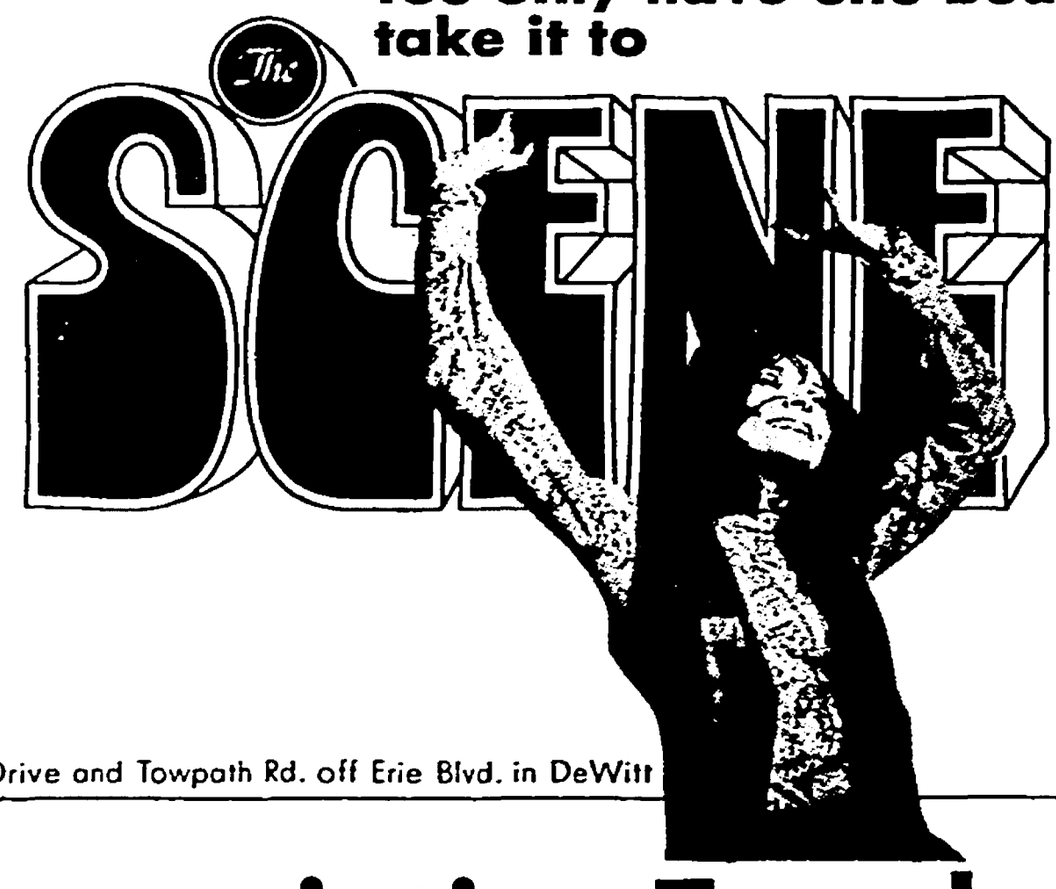
By VIC LIVINGSTON

Student Government President Dave Ifshin has announced plans for the restructuring of Student Government organizational branches, involving the greatest possible number of student volunteers. Under the new plan, applications will be accepted for the four new branches. The new executive branches and application procedure are:

1) Commissioners--applications are being accepted for commissioners of athletics, NSA, publications, dorm life and intellectual revitalization. Applicants must submit a resume including experience in the prospective field and conception of the desired position.

2) Issue Coordination Committees will be formed from students submitting a 3x5 file card stating the issue to be pursued. Also, students may apply in a general issue capacity. These issue cards will be cross-filed, and resultant committees will fomulate and investigate student action in these fields. In this way, as many students as possible will have a voice in SG policy execution, Ifshin said.

3) Students for a Better University--This mobilization force will be completely re-vamped, with 14 new members to be chosen from applicants by the Council on Student Life. The new body will be chaired by the SG President and will be autonomous body under Student Government.



4) SG Task Force--This group will be a carry-over from the volunteer enthusiasm displayed during the recent boycott. The all-purpose force will have stand-by capacity, ready to act in a variety of activities, such as publicity, promotion, campus s mobilization, etc.

Any student may apply for any of the four areas, and applications will be accepted for more than one category, Ifshin said.

"We are trying to transform the involvement and awareness that came up from the boycott and direct this force to keep the momentum building on campus," Ifshin explained. The four new branches will be equal and on . parallel levels.

Students interested in work in any area should contact any of the following persons: Mike Durfor, 3921, Tom Bryan, 2626, Bill Watson, 3095, Lance Wisniewski, 3553, Mary Zeiss, 2167.

You only have one body, take it to
The SCENE

Citi Drive and Towpath Rd. off Erie Blvd. in DeWitt

Appreciation Tuesday.
Admission FREE tonight.

UJB and Court

New justices selected

New members have been appointed to the University Judicial Board and the University Appeals Court by the Justice Selection Board. This board reappoints present justices upon a favorable decision by board members and appoints new justices to fill the posts vacated by graduating seniors.

New UJB members are Michael Beck, a junior; Mary Lou Leary, a sophomore; and three freshman: Murray Flom, Jack Adelson and Elizabeth Lalor. Alternates include Mike Shapiro, a junior; Peter Basloe, a sophomore; and David Karp, a sophomore.

Selected as justices on the University Appeals Court were Carol Caldwell, a sophomore and Tina Potecha, a junior. Doug Widman, a sophomore, was chosen as an alternate. This court has six justices, three students and three professors.

Members of the Justice Selection Board are Ronnie Shorenstein, a senior on the court; Paul Snyder, chief-justice, and two professors: Randall Brune, English department, and Nhaman Horowitz, physics department. The members of this board chose students to fill the six court positions and four alternate spots from among 31 applicants. Paul Snyder "would like to thank the members of the selection board for devoting their time to the selections of new justices."

Elections for new chief-justice and associate chief justice are set for Thursday. The chief justice must be a senior next year, while the associate chief justice may be either a junior or a senior. Thursday's meeting, 6:30 p.m. at the Chapel house, will be a full court session. All new members and alternates should attend.

Summer program in city offers pay and involvement

By PETER MATHON

One major demand of the recent student boycott was that the University examine its role in the changing community. For those unsatisfied with the University's response, there is now another opportunity for students to get involved.

A summer program titled "Adventures in Education," which provides learnings and recreation experiences for Syracuse's East Side children between the ages of 3 and 18 from low-income families is offering paid summer jobs to college students.

The program, which runs from June 30 to Aug. 27, will reach about 200 children, but there will be only about six to ten in each group. This will require a large number of personnel.

Adult and teenage residents of the East Side, as well as college students, will serve as group leaders.

Each group will determine its own activities, from sports and recreation to handicrafts, vocational training, and field trips.

The program is co-sponsored by Grace Episcopal Church and the University Methodist Church where interested students may stop in for information and applications forms, or call Esther Green at 478-0901 or 472-0634.

——Happenings on the Hill——

TUESDAY

DORM REP GOONS! We will be holding our first all-dorm Rep goon meeting on May 6 at 7 p.m. in Maxwell Auditorium. We have some special information to give out. We also need information from you. Questions --Mark at X2828 or Carolyn at X3451.

SCENES FROM the novel War and Peace by L.N. Tolstoi will be performed by students of the Slavic Dept., at 7 p.m. in the Women's Building. Refreshments will follow the performance.

CLASS OF '71 only, meeting for Orange Aid organization at 7 p.m. - Shaw Rec Lounge. Questions call Sue Shapiro X2952, 2960.

STUDENT SENATE will meet at 7:30 p.m. in B115 Grant.

ANGEL FLIGHT meeting 7 p.m. 304 Men's gym in uniform. Mandatory pledge meeting - 6:30.

MEMORIAL MASS for Owen T. Farrelly at 12:05 in Hendricks Chapel.

WEDNESDAY

YOUNG REPUBLICANS Annual meeting. Guest Speaker - D.A. Frank Gualter, Rep. candidate for Mayor. Nominations and elections for next year's officers. 307 HL - 8 p.m.

CASUAL Communications between students and Faculty come to "Revelations," at 9 p.m. in St. Mary's Multipurpose. Wine and cheese will be served.

UU BULL Session has as its guest this week the Rev. Harvey Bates of UCCF, who will lead a discussion on "Co-ed and Co-op Dorms." Noble Room of Hendricks Chapel at 4 p.m.

SAINT GERAUD will give a reading of his Poetry at 4 p.m. in 407 HL.

AWS recolonization meeting at 9 p.m. in 206 NCC. All those interested in reorganizing AWS are invited to attend this meeting.

WAA meeting at 7 p.m. in the board room. - Soft ball club - 4-5 p.m.

PI LAMBDA THETA Initiation will be held at 7:15 p.m. in the Alumnae lounge of the Women's Building.

GENERAL

SENIOR EXEC applications. Submit an index card including name, address, extension; on back activities and ideas to Phi Psi c/o Lou Brindis by May 9.

JUNIOR WELLS and his Chicago blues band plus John Hammond at Jabberwocky for Spring Weekend, May 8, 9, 10. Tix on sale for $2.50 at HBC.

GREEK MEN - Applications for an undersecretary to the IFC are now open. Please submit your name, residence, extension, accum. and house affiliation to Chuck Gabrial c/o the Dean of Men's office no later than Friday.

SOCIOLOGY preregistration. Majors should see advisors during the week of May 12-16. You will preregister at that time. Non-majors may register for sociology courses May 15-16 at the Sociology office, 203 Steele between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m.

STRAWBERRY BREAKFAST tickets are on sale all this week from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the counter in HBC lobby. Price $1.25 per ticket.

DAILY MASSES - 12:05 and 4:05 Monday to Friday at Hendricks Chapel. Saturdays at 5:05, St. Thomas More Chapel.

GIRLS--do you feel that some good exercise is needed before the day your bathing suit is tried on? Try WAA Lacrosse, Tuesdays from 4-5.

SPORTS FANS--the WAA's victorious tennis team is back home for a two-match stand, Tuesday vs. William Smith and Wednesday vs. Brockport. Both games are at Skytop, 4 PM. Don't miss it!

Married students protest rent hike

By LARRY KRAMER
Campus Affairs Editor

The administration of Syracuse University has still another student lobbying group to hear from. The students living in married students housing are up in arms over proposed rate increases in rent.

Odds are, though, there won't be too many occupied buildings or seized administrators because of the married students. Acting in a quiet, methodic manner, the Graduate Student Organization established a Housing Committee to look into the reasons and validity of the pay hike. The committee was formed in late March and terminated its work in the form of a written report, submitted to Vice Chancellor Piskor and Vice President Colway on April 28.

The students discovered, and found objection to the fact that their rents were to be raised in order to place the added money in the University's general fund. The married students feel that they, as the group with the largest financial burden, shouldn't be made to suffer for general university deficiencies. According to Committee Chairman Llewellyn Howell, "We (married students) pay approximately 44% of our educational stipend for rent. With the increase, it will be almost 50%. How much can a guy with a family afford?"

To further complicate the problem, the report listed a comparison of SU with 22 other schools and their educational stipends to Grad students. The schools were broken down into three catagories, according to prestige, with SU in the middle one.

Figures showed that SU was the lowest paying employer in its class, and, in fact, lower than schools that can afford to pay less due to high application rates.

In a letter to Howell, Vice President Colway wrote, "Let me say that we share your concern and are working toward a solution to these problems. Until such a time as we may resolve answers to these problems, there shall be no rental increase made in the Married Students Housing facilities."

Howell, commenting on the letter said, "We have at least delayed the increase, but we have to make plans for the future." He announced a meeting concerning the problem, Sunday at 7 p.m. for all married students to attend. At the meeting, plans will be formulated to create a liason committee to work on the program. The meeting will be at the upper playground at New Slocum Heights.

CSL applications

Applications for at-large members of the Council on Student Life may be turned in to any present undergraduate member of the Council by 5 p.m. Thursday. Applications should include name, campus address, extension, class and average. Applicants should offer their views on the role of the Council in University governance and the role of the at-large member.

Photography by
Sarkin Studio
Living Color
Portraits
Bridal Portraits
Candid Weddings
908 Irving Ave.
Near V. A. Hospital
478-1145

EDWARD HOMMEL & SONS
OPTICIANS
VANDERBILT SQ. CENTER
127 S. SALINA ST.
FREE PARKING

474-4644
EYEGLASSES & CONTACT LENSES
REPAIRS
Telex Hearing Aids

Campus Classified

GR 6-5571, Ext. 2314

Rates minimum of 15 words:

1 day	1.15
2 days	2.25
3 days	3.30
4 days	4.30
5 days	5.25
6 days	6:15

To place a classified ad, call GR 6-5571, ext. 2314, between 1 and 3 p.m. Ad must be placed 2 days in advance. Every word over 15 costs 5c extra per day.
ALL ADS MUST BE PREPAID.

MISCELLANEOUS

RENT if you can't buy! T.V.s, tape recorders, typewriters. By week, month or semester. Reasonable rates. S. U. BOOKSTORE. GR 6-5541, x 2426.

ALTERATIONS DONE within 24 hours. Call for an appointment. Lillian Potter. 207 Comstock. 478-5847.

PRIVATE DRIVING LESSONS — automatic or standard shift. Full or refresher courses. Qualified professional instructors. Pickup service. Auto Driving Academy. GR 6-3995.

TRIP WITH WENDI — Europe '69 Group flights on Pan Am. Best dates, better prices. Limited seats available. 475-9642.

ATTENTION FLOAT CHAIRMAN — Fulton paper has a surplus of seconds in toilet tissue - decorative colors -

FREE DELIVERY — GL 8-6100 or GL 8-6101. Phone 24 hr. service.

BEAUTIES! Pure silk scarves from India, last bastion on hand-loomed, hand-blocked prints, gorgeous colors. Various sizes. Bookstall, 147 Marshall St.

SUMMER JOBS: Counselors; private boys' camp: Adirondacks; College men of above average physical fitness and judgment; tripping, riflery, canoeing, nurse and cook jobs open. Adirondack Swim Camp, 39 Mill Valley Road, Pittsford, New York 14534.

LATEST FADS — in clothes made to order. Vests, Pants, Shirts etc. Some alterations done. 478-5873.

SUMMER JOB — Full time, Syracuse area, need car and phone. Call on established customers. Eight year old business needs new representative. Contact Dean Wallace, Jr., 2 Oakwood Circle, Storrs, Conn., 06268 or call 203-429-6152.

NEW EVERY MONDAY MORNING for the lovelorn, "missing you" cards. The Bookstall, 147 Marshall St.

FOR SALE

SUNBEAM ALPINE CONVERTIBLE 1967 - excellent condition, 8800 miles, reasonable. 476-1008 after 5:30 p.m.

'62 VW GHIA, blue and white, good condition. Must sell NOW! Call Joe Bauer: x2451.

1965 OLDSMOBILE convertible. Red, 442, Power steering. Power brakes, excellent condition, reasonable. Call 637-3430 after 5.

ROOM AIR CONDITIONERS — 5,000, 6,000, 7,000 and 9,000 BTUS. These are '68 Models, some scratched or dented, some used, all guaranteed — priced for students pocketbooks 446-6321.

1966 MUSTANG — Blue power steering, power brakes, automatic transmission, excellent condition. 474-0471 after 5.

1966 BULTACO CAMPERA MOTORCYCLE with two helmets, low mileage. Call Jeff 446-1112 after 7 during week days and all day on weekends. Asking $425.00.

'54 CHEVY — Excellent condition, low mileage. 235 CID, auto. trans., 4 Dunlops, 2 studded snows, radio, etc. $150.00. Call Art, 478-2349.

'63 RED CORVAIR Monza — Excellent condition. stick shift, radial tires. Azria's Esso, 2974 E. Genesee.

1963 FORD Fairlane — Sedan Standard 6 cylinder. Call 457-7390.

1968 DODGE DART—Radio, snow tires, excellent condition. Call after 6 p.m. $1,900.00. 437-4679.

FOR RENT

TO SUBLET (June 1 to Sept.1) 2 bedroom apartment furnished, OFF Street parking 5 min. from Campus. 476-7164.

FURNISHED ROOMS from $40.00 and up. Very close to campus. Kitchen privileges. 446-6451 or 478-5380.

UNIVERSITY WALK'G DISTANCE — Furnished, heated efficiency and one bedroom apt. sub-let for summer only or year. Also one bedroom apartment and efficiency available Sept. 1st. Students or teachers. Parking or garage. 446-0493.

APARTMENT TO SUB-LET (June 1 to Sept. 1) — Furnished, one bedroom. 10 min. from campus. $55 per mo. Call 479-7336.

LIVINGSTON AVE. — 3 blocks from university, 2 bus lines. Bedroom $12.00. 479-7653 or 476-3296 Mrs. Wilson.

APARTMENTS all over the city. Nicely furnished. 1, 2 and 3 bedrooms. $55.00 up. GL 8-6100. 458-6101.

APARTMENTS — Furnished or unfurnished. 3 rooms, utilities, near campus. Call x3630. 472-8223 or 475-1631.

WANTED

FACULTY COUPLE — Looking for furnished or unfurnished two or three bedroom house or apartment near university. Academic year 1969-70. Call 655-9078.

GIRL — Part time at Tecumseh, food counter. Mon. thru Thurs. 5-9, GI 6-5650.

APARTMENT FOR SUMMER — furnished. 3-4 girls, near campus, call evenings 475-0940.

ROOMMATE — for New York City. Starting summer or September. Call Linda (after 4) 474-4774 or 492-0876.

FACULTY COUPLE — No children, looking for two or three bedroom house or apartment near University. Call 457-5420 after 6.

RIDER WANTED — To San Diego or Los Angeles, leaving after exams (about June 5). Call Bob at 446-5757.

TYPING

THIRTY YEARS EXPERIENCE. Dissertations, term papers, proof-read. Satisfaction guaranteed. Mrs. Raymond Webb. HE 7-8259.

TAKE YOUR MANUSCRIPT to the only professional typing and printing service serving the S. U. area. The knowledge and experience of having done over 2,000 theses and dissertations is behind every job we turn out. Stephanie's Office Service. 469-2795.

TYPIST experienced in thesis, dissertations, and term papers. Electric typewriter. Shirley Saylor, 446-2999 or x2441.

Simmie unhappy

Stickmen sluggish in Colgate romp

By STEVE RADICE

Just moments before last Saturday's Lacrosse game against Colgate, Orange attack star Jeff Davis was heard to say, "Regardless of our opponents, let's play really good lacrosse, and get tuned up for the big game against Army."

Just moments after the Lacrosse game, Roy Simmons, coach of the Syracuse Lacrosse team, was heard to say, "They played a terrible, listless game. They were all thinking ahead to the Army game instead of playing this one."

Obviously, coach Simmons didn't go for the team's way of tuning up for Army. In spite of the seemingly easy 17-3 Syracuse victory, the coach was not at all happy with the team's performance, and credited the victory to goalie Butch Brown. "Without Butch," the coach said, "the game might have been very different."

Brown did indeed have a terrific game. He made ten great saves, often diving and leaping to prevent a goal. Brown was all over the field, bringing the ball up, making key passes. Coach Simmons called him "undoubtedly the best player out there today."

The rest of the team scored well and often, but did a lot of standing around too. Coach Simmons later called them "listless, and sluggish, nobody did any hard work or hustling." He contrasted them to Colgate's players who, in spite of tremendous odds, "kept hitting and trying throughout the entire game."

The Syracuse scoring was once again in the hands of the Doctor brothers, Verne and Ron, who scored three goals apiece. Jeff Davis also scored three goals. Other scorers for Syracuse included Mark Cuda (2), Jim Smith (1), Tony Lapi (1), Leo Nolan (1), Mark Austerlitz (1), Richard Travers (1), and Frank Pfau (1).

Dave Ayres, Eric Anderson and John Tripp all scored goals for the now 6-4 Colgate team.

Speaking of the notorious Army game coming up next Saturday at West Point, Simmie said that the Orange would "never win if they play like they did today." He said that the Army team had five midfields alone who could "run like deer."

Since the entire Army starting team has been nominated to the All-American Lacrosse team, Simmons said that Syracuse would need a lot of luck to win. "Since Army mauled Hofstra 15-2, and we fought till the end to beat Hofstra, it'll take a lot of work and luck to win."

Jim Smith, star midfielder for the Orange, concurred with coach Simmons' opinions after the game. "We were playing the Army game in our minds all day," Jim said. Asked about Syracuse's chances next week, Smith said that they had a real good chance if everybody was really up for the game, and if they all worked especially hard this week. As Smith put it, "Army is just as ripe for the killing as everybody else, I just know we can beat them."

SIDENOTES: The game drew still another turnaway crowd, larger even than last Wednesday's game against Hobart. Since Lacrosse has become such a moneymaker for SU, it might be a good idea to add a couple more scholarships next year...Ethan "Baby Huey" Klausner had a rough game, being called three times for offsides...John Scipione played an excellent defensive game, at one time three Colgate players charged him at once, but "Scip" went right through them, still holding the ball....

Line score:

Colgate 1-0-1-1 -3
Syracuse 5-3-6-3 -17

THE OTHER HALF of the Doctor demolition duo is Ron, a midfielder. Ron and brother Verne scored three goals apiece in Saturday's somewhat listless rout of visiting Colgate. The talented pair will face their sternest test against Army on Saturday. (Photo by Robertson)

UNSUNG HERO is the term which most aptly fits Lacrosse defenseman, Ethan Klausner. "Baby Huey" has been using his sizable frame to his advantage in decking opposing players and has been praised by coach Roy Simmons. (Photo by Robertson)

Cindermen last in Big-4 event

Managing a few high finishes where they were unexpected, but faltering in usually strong events, the SU track team finished a disappointing fourth in the Big Four meet in Pittsburgh.

Coach Bob Grieve's cindermen have thus failed to crack the winner's circle in their two outings. The team will meet Boston College and Massachusetts in a triangle meet on Saturday.

In the Big Four event, Penn State ran away with the team title with 72½ points to runner-up Pitt's 59 markers. West Virginia tallied 31½ points while the Orangemen managed only 20.

Gil West leaped 21 feet 10¾ inches to cop the long jump crown. He also finished third in the triple jump event.

Shotputter Roger Taylor tossed the iron ball 51 feet to take a second in his event while Bob Tuttle took fourth in the discus with a heave of 135 feet. Greg Warden also placed fourth in the javelin with a throw of 202 feet

In the running events, SU figured to fare much better than they did. Last year's 440 yard champion, Guy Roberts, managed only a second this year with a 48.9 clocking. However, he was but one-tenth of a second behind the winner.

Larry Zuller finished third in the mile in 4:14.8, two seconds behind the top time while Dave Greaves took a fourth in the 220. The mile relay team was third in their event.

The triangular meet with Boston College and Massachusetts will be the final prepping for the cindermen before their first and only home meet of the campaign against Colgate on May 13th.

JV, Varsity crews lose; frosh remain unbeaten

By GINA BELL

One of the crew team's more articulate members put it best, "What can you say about losing a race? You can look at the times, and you can see that they were faster than we were. What more is there to say?"

In a way, he's right. You can look at the times for Saturday's race with Brown out on Onondaga Lake, and you can see that Brown beat both the Varsity and the JV by a good five seconds each, although the frosh chased Brown off the water.

There's not much more to say if all you're interested in is a handful of statistics. But that's not really fair to sixteen guys who have rowed for seven months; who have laid off liquor and cigarettes and who have turned in early more nights than they wanted to; who spent their spring vacation rowing at Long Branch while half the campus soaked up the sun in the Caribbean; who came out of a loss to Cornell last week determined to win this one.

They almost pulled it off, despite the fact that Brown had a much heavier crew. It wasn't a lack of strength or skill, of determination or desire, that caused their defeat. It was, to a great extent, the Syracuse weather.

They rowed into a headwind so strong that it turned the race into the slowest 2000 meters that coach Bill Sanford can remember. It required so much effort to combat the wind, which Sanford could only describe as "brutal," that when they reached the half- mile mark, the rowers were amaxed that they had another half to go.

In the varsity race, Brown took an early lead at the start, but Syracuse kept up stroke for stroke, rowing a quick 33. After 700 meters, Brown was still rowing 33 but Syracuse lowered its stroke to 30, and by the last 500 meters, the crew was eight seconds behind. In a final burst of power, Syracuse cut three seconds from Brown's lead, and one oarsman was confident that "the varsity could have taken the race if it was a little longer."

The JV kept up with Brown for the first 1000 meters, but when Brown raised the stroke, Syracuse fell behind, unable to keep up the pace.

Sanford is confident that if his crew could have continued to match Brown stroke for stroke, their superior strength and endurance would have won them the race. He saw a vast improvement in the crew's performance which he credits to a week of shuffling the lineups.

"Last week they weren't rowing well together. I shuffled the boats until we got a good combination. Everyone knew that he had a chance to make the first boat, so the changes helped to psyche the guys."

This week, the crew is preparing to meet the finest crews in the country in the Eastern sprints. Sanford is concentrating on speed this week rather than endurance. "When I get through with them this week, they'll row 35 and think it's slow," he promised. If Sanford manages to keep his promise, his crew just might row themselves into the big leagues.

Orange nine loses pair; record drops to 2-7-1

By BOB HERZOG

The SU varsity baseball squad continued its losing ways this past Saturday. They traveled to Hamilton for a twin bill with the Colgate Red Raiders. The results added credence to the theory that pitching is dominating the game, as the Orangemen suffered 9-2 and 2-0 set backs.

The first game was decided quickly. Colgate jumped on SU starter John Martell for six runs in the first two innings. The cushion was more than enough for Raider starter Paul Fleischauer. He gave up seven hits, including a double to Orange left fielder Steve Naum for their only two runs. Doug Hale and Ed Roug led the Colgate attack with three hits apiece. Hale had the game's only homer.

In the second game, Colgate's right hander Barnes and Syracuse's Greg Lowe hooked up in a pitcher's duel. For five innings neither team could push across a run. In the bottom of the sixth (of a seven inning game), Colgate put runners on second and third with two out, and Steve Goebel laced a single to left to drive home the game's only two runs, and make Greg Lowe an undeserving loser. Lowe (now 1-2), like the rest of the mound staff, is being hurt by the weak bats of the Orangemen. Last week, SU southpaw, Mike Barlow, pitched a nifty two-hitter, but was the victim of six fielding miscues and nine quiet bats in dropping a 3-1 decision to Cornell.

With the season half over, the Orange diamond problems mount. The fielding is erratic and the hitting is weak. The pitching is fair, but the hurlers haven't been getting enough offensive or defensive support to win ballgames. As soon as these problems are ironed out, SU will be a force to be reckoned with between the foul lines. Until then, one should remember that the St. Louis Cardinals are a half game out of last place. Hope springs eternal!

DAILY ORANGE

Vol. 67, No. 100 Syracuse, New York, Wednesday, May 7, 1969 10 Cents

Chancellor interviewed

Tolley defends remarks on campus violence

By LARRY KRAMER
Campus Affairs Editor

In a special interview yesterday afternoon, Chancellor William P. Tolley clarified his stand on campus disorders and violence, a stand that has undergone sharp criticism in recent weeks.

"I'm not against protest, open diologue, debate or even campus unrest, but the use of violence destroys a university," said Tolley.

The Chancellor also spoke in favor of academic freedom, when he related, "At a luncheon meeting today (yesterday), attended by faculty of the forestry school, I was asked, 'Can't you do something about what members of the faculty do and say.' I replied that when a president can do something about what members of the faculty do and say, then it is not a university."

SUPPORTS TALKS

Tolley felt that the recent talks that have been going on between the students and administration here are representative of the way problems should be handled. "We were already making excellent progress with the talks," was all Tolley would say concerning the boycott.

Speaking strongly against violence, Tolley said, "The universities of South America were the first to be destroyed. Many of the universities of Asia have been effectively destroyed as institutions of free intellectual inquiry. Many of the universities in Europe are being destroyed by violence."

"The student movements of Asia, South America and Europes are essentially anti-intellectual movements. Like the student revolutions is China, they are an attack on the very idea of the university. They are an assault on reason itself."

FACULTY-STUDENT COALITION

When asked about a solution to the violence problem, Tolley referred to statements he made at a speech to the Block S athletes dinner last week. "The truth is that violence will stop on the campuses of our colleges just as soon as students learn that they are no longer protected by en loco parentis and that a jail sentence awaits them whenever they break the law. The problem of campus disruption cannot be solved by presidents alone. It can be solved only when the moderate students and the moderates on the faculty agree that rules must be enforced and that all who are guilty will be punished. Administrators have been trapped between the arrogant adolescents on one hand, and incredibly naive professors on the other." He continued, "The professors still plead for amnesty regardless of the offense. Students are not fools. So long as no one is punished, why shouldn't the fun continue."

In the same address, Tolley warned, "What the faculty doesn't appear to recognize is that they are the group who have the most to lose. What is threatened is their academic tenure and their academic freedom. The danger is the loss of the autonomy of the university. . . My hope is that the members of the faculty wake up before our autonomy is lost."

CHANCELLOR WILLIAM P. TOLLEY hosted 30 members of the Academic Communications Corps in a tea in his office yesterday afternoon. The ACC was formed three years ago after a Michael O. Sawyer recommendation for an organized student group to serve as faculty "helpers." Each student volunteers to work for a professor of his choice.

JOHN WILLIAMS, author of "The Man Who Cried I Am," will be speaking to students during two appearances here today. A Syracuse University graduate, Williams will speak informally in St. Mary's multi-purpose room at 2:30 p.m. He will also address the Black and White in America class at 7:30 p.m. in Maxwell Auditorium. That lecture is also open to the public. Williams' son, Greg, is a senior at SU.

IDC rejects Booth, autonomy explained

By JOHN WISNIEWSKI

In a seven to six vote last night, the Inter-Dormitory Council decided not to approve Booth Hall's proposal for dorm autonomy. Marc Cavanaugh, IDC president-elect said that the Booth Dorm Council did not sufficiently explain the available academic and cultural programming options to the students. He said the problem in Booth Hall is "the apathy of upperclassmen."

Steve Tober, Booth Dorm president, refuted the charges. He said the dorm council members presented the programming options to students by visiting the student rooms individually. Tober added that students wanted to see the dorm's film program continued.

Haven Hall received a unanimous provisional approval upon election of its new dorm council. Sherbrooke received unanimous unconditional approval.

Before last night's meeting Connie Steward, IDC vice-president, outlined the criteria for evaluating a dorm's readiness for autonomy:

*In the dorm constitution there must appear, as required by student senate, a stated purpose, a democratic election of officers, a membership policy statement, a provision for regular meetings and a provision for amendment with notification of the student senate.

*All by-laws must be passed by referenda. It is recommended that the referenda be voted on by at least two-thirds of the dorm members and pass by a two-thirds majority.

*There must be a provision for a judicial process. The dorm council and dorm court shall be separate bodies. The court will act in accordance with the University Judicial Board and the judicial code. The court will have the power to handle all cases involving infractions of the dorm's own rules.

*Social regulations shall be incorporated into the by-laws and must be passed by referenda.

*The dorm must consider what services its members may need and then present them in referendum form to the residents for approval and choice.

*The dorm council must research many different options for academic and cultural programming in order to give residents information about the possibility of such programming.

Feminists

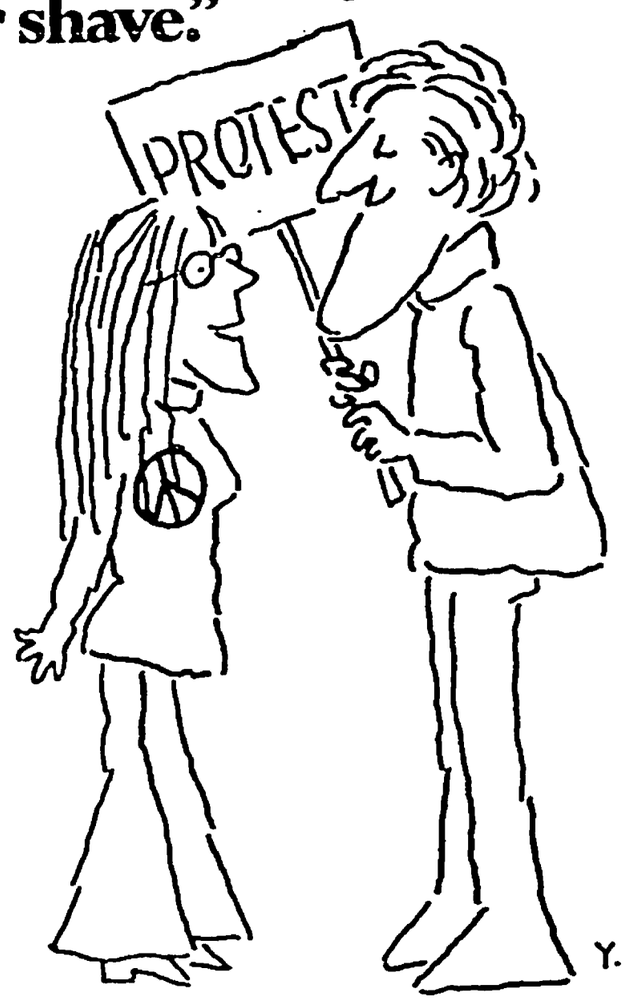
Women's group protests

By MARY TAYLOR

If you disagree with Vice-President Agnew's recent statement that the three hardest things to tame are "fools, women, and the ocean," NOW is your chance to fight against the oppressive limits on your freedoms. It is Freedom for Women Week until Sunday.

The week is sponsored by NOW (National Organization of Women), whose president, Betty Friedan, is known for her outspoken views on the emancipation of women.

You can have your pick of demonstrations throughout the country all week over various issues of women's subservience to men. Syracuse will be the scene of a sit-in to protest "discriminatory" abortion laws. All students objecting to abortion laws may join pickets at Upstate Medical Center lobby in a one-hour sit-in from noon until 1 p.m. on Thursday to protest the fact that women can't get abortions in New York State, except in extreme cases.



The highlight of the week will be today's picket around the White House, the first feminist picket there since 1920. About forty local women, including eight Syracuse University students are representing the Syracuse community.

Karen DeCrow, an SU law student is one of the two national co-ordinators for today's picket. (Anselema Dell'Olio, the other co-ordinator has been working on the event in the New York City area.)

The purpose of the picket today is to demonstrate to the country the need for passage of the equal rights amendment to the constitution now before the House of Representatives. It already has been passed by the Senate.

Miss DeCrow stated yesterday before leaving for Washington that the pickets wanted to "bring the attention of the country to the fact that women need this amendment."

"Remember, we're nonviolent, so be careful of your after shave."

Wild-eyed coeds can turn any peaceful demonstration into a full-scale riot, so be careful how you use your Hai Karate® After Shave and Cologne. But just in case your hand slips, we include instructions on self-defense in every package. (If you're a pacifist, maybe you'd better read the instructions twice.)

Hai Karate-be careful how you use it.

©1969 Leeming Division, Chas. Pfizer & Co., Inc., New York, N.Y.

Spring Weekend: sunshine & music

It's gotta be a sunny Spring Weekend, because the Friday night dance might spill onto Watson's courtyard and the Strawberry breakfast band will play on the patio at Shaw.

The float parade and moving-up ceremony are always outside Saturday morning. The Saturday afternoon folk concert will be in the amphitheater at Thornden Park, and a balloon contest needs sunny skies.

The weekend starts Thursday night when John Hammond and Junior Wells open at Jabberwocky in Kimmel's basement. Concerts will be held Thursday through Saturday nights at 7:30, 9:30 and 11:30. Tickets cost $2.25. But combination concert and dance tickets only cost $3.

Friday night's dance at Watson will feature the Creative Act from Ithaca. Running from 9 to 12 p.m. the dance alone costs $1., but the beer is free.

Throughout the weekend Alpha Phi Omega will be selling helium balloons to buy a new television for the infirmary. Prizes will be given to those whose balloons travel the farthest.

Saturday morning the Goons traditionally awaken the campus at 7 a.m. The Strawberry Breakfast and Hard Purple band begin at 7:30 in Shaw. Tickets and a big strawberry button cost $1.25.

The float parade begins at 10 a.m. and will pass before the judges' stand on Newhouse steps. The old and new campus leaders will be introduced on the steps, and the beanie and senior thesis will be burned there also.

At two that afternoon Syracuse Folk Society is sponsoring a free folk fest in the amphitheater at Thornden Park.

Saturday night the Jabberwocky concerts continue. Sunday morning there will be an Ecumenical Service in Hendricks Chapel.

All tickets can be purchased this week in HBC, and most can also be bought at the door.

Presidential photographer to receive citation here

Yoichi Okamoto, photographer to the President of the United States from 1963 to 1969, will receive the Newhouse Citation from the School of Journalism Thursday in the Physics auditorium.

Dean Wesley C. Clark will make the presentation at ceremonies preceding an illustrated lecture by Okamoto. Fred Demarest, chairman of the photography department will preside.

The Newhouse Citation is given each year to photographers who have made significant contributions to the field of visual communications. Among those who have received the citation since its first presentation in 1961 are Margaret Bourke-White, Yousuf Karsh, Arthur Rothstein, Philippe Halsman, Gordon Parks, Roy Stryker, Larry Burrows, and Ernst Haas.

Born in Yonkers, New York, and graduated from Colgate University in 1938, Okamoto began his photographic career in Syracuse on the Post-Standard. During World War II he served first as a photography instructor and later as a photography officer for General Mark Clark. After the war he was in charge of all photographic service for the United States Information Service in Austria.

In 1954 he was named Chief of the Still Pictures Branch of the U.S. Information Agency in Washington, D.C.

In 1963 he became the first photographer to chronicle thoroughly the Presidency of the United States during a full term of office.

You only have one body, take it to

The SCENE

Cili Drive and Towpath Rd. off Erie Blvd. in DeWitt

Tonight:
Drink and Drown.
All the beer you can drink.

GUYS $2.75 GALS $1.75

Mixed drinks-1/2 price.

STUDY THIS SUMMER AT UPSALA COLLEGE

- More than 100 courses in liberal arts, sciences, education. Most classes in air-conditioned Puder Hall.
- Special offerings — Computer Programming, Drama Seminar-Workshop.
- Two daytime sessions: June 9 to July 18, July 21 to Aug. 29. One evening session: June 9 to July 31.
- Campus is 40 minutes from midtown Manhattan, 45 minutes from New Jersey shore.
- Dorm space for resident students. Air-conditioned apartments with swimming pool privileges also available.

For catalogue and application contact
Director of Special Sessions

UPSALA COLLEGE

East Orange, New Jersey 07019
(201) 266-7259

ANGUS H. TWOMBLY — Editor-in-Chief

MANAGING EDITOR - Alan Stamm EXECUTIVE EDITOR - Karen Wiediger NEWS EDITOR - Fred Tuccillo EDITORIAL DIRECTOR - David A. Ross COPY EDITOR - Jean Havens FEATURE EDITOR - Roz Mazer SPORTS EDITOR - Mike Weber CAMPUS AFFAIRS EDITOR - Larry Kramer PHOTOGRAPHY EDITOR - Clint Clemens ASSOCIATE EDITORS - Andrij Bilyk, Kay Christensen, Beth Hillson, Rona Kavee, Helene Macdonald, Charles Shapiro, Dan Schlossberg, Patti Williams, Roni Zlokower.

DAILY ORANGE

Syracuse University's Daily Newspaper Since 1903

WEDNESDAY, MAY 7, 1969 PAGE 3

STEVEN P. STROBRIDGE -- Business Manager

ASSISTANT BUSINESS MANAGER— Art Depasqua, NATIONAL ADVERTISING MANAGER— Janet Meyer ACCOUNT EXECUTIVES— Roger Black, Jim Maney, Mike Greenstein.

Published Tuesday, through Friday during the academic year by students of Syracuse University. Offices located at 200 Brooklea Drive, Fayetteville, N.Y., and 1101 East Adams St., Syracuse, New York. Entered as Second Class matter at the U.S. Post Office, Fayetteville, N.Y. 13066.

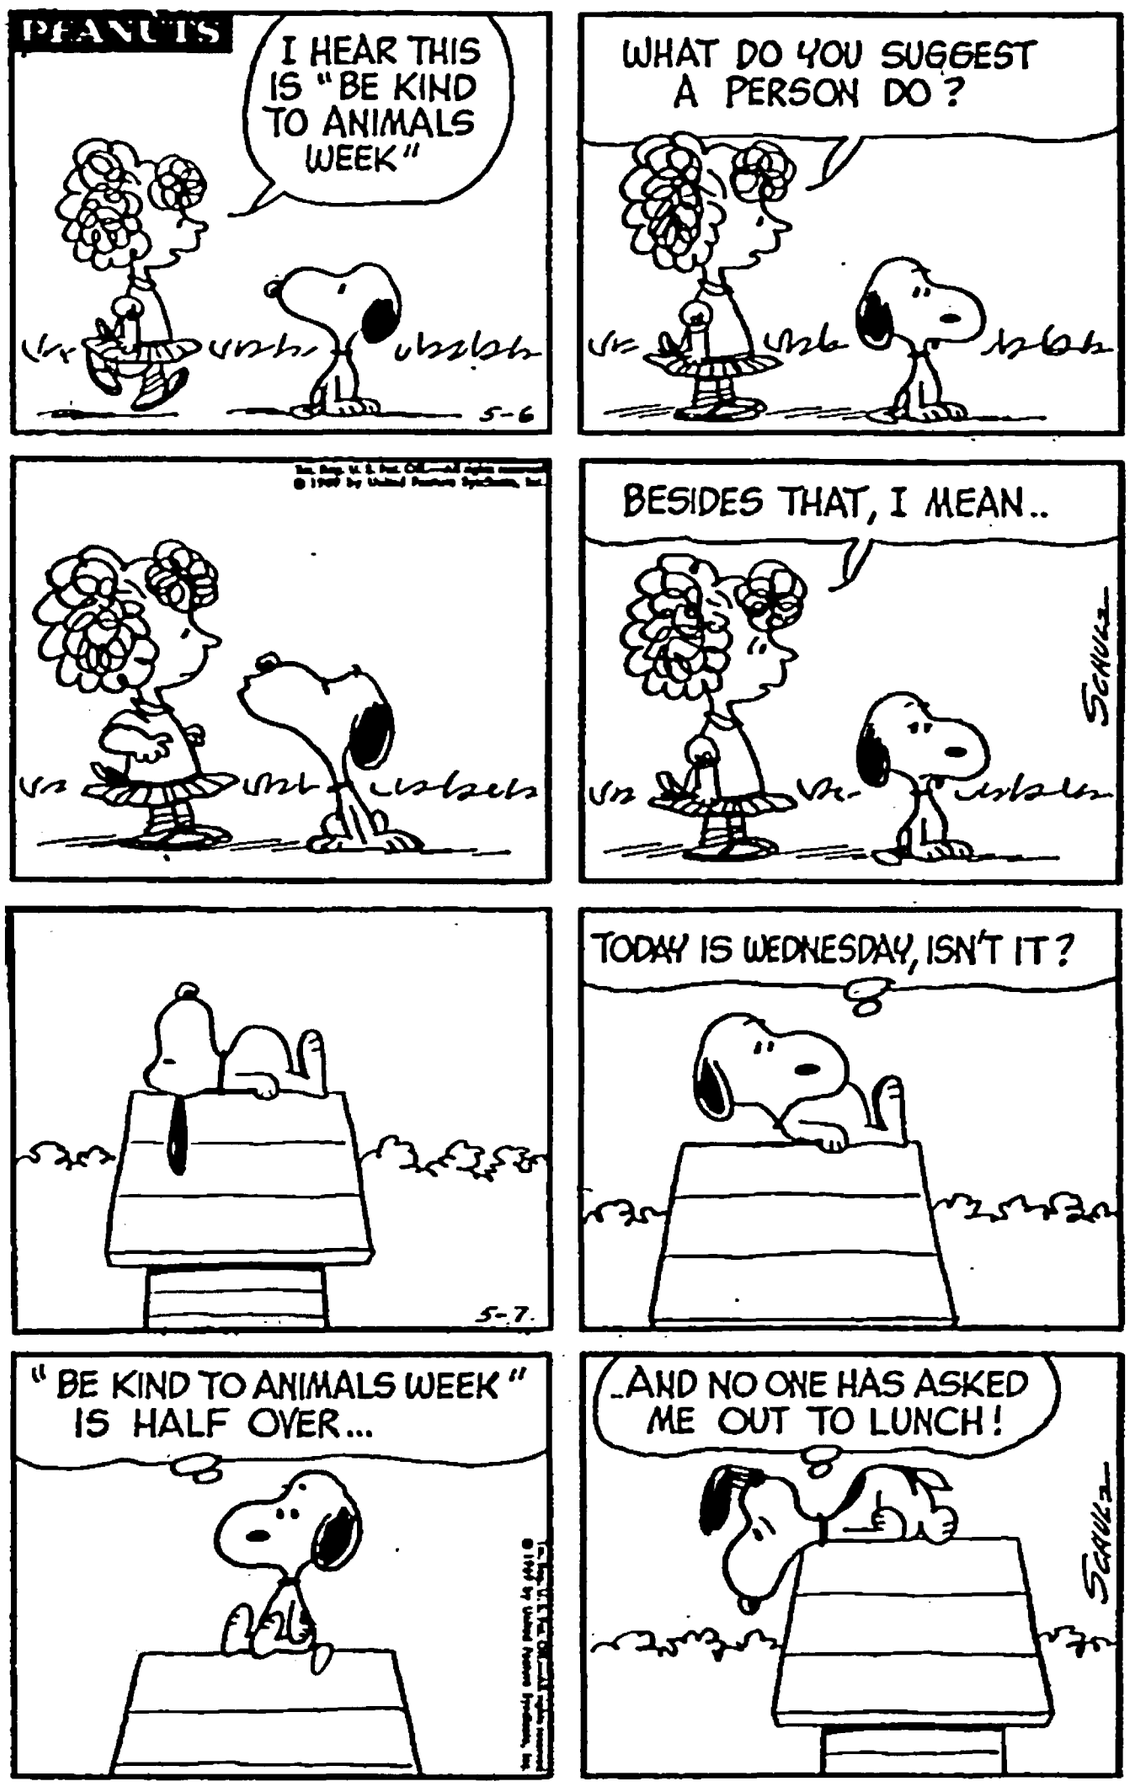
One step closer

A University Union building at SU now seems to be one step closer to reality. As reported in yesterday's DO, the executive committee of the Board of Trustees has endorsed the construction of the building as a centennial project.

Construction of the UU building will not begin for quite some time. It probably won't even be during the centennial year, but what the trustees' action represents is the first real commitment to the Union that students have had.

The quest for UU has not been short, and it's hard to explain why it has been so long and hard. There obviously has not been a real moral commitment to it in the administration until now. The lack of commitment may not be, however, entirely inexplicable.

Chancellor Tolley has tended to support a more regionalized form of UU meaning activity and recreational areas located in the areas of living centers rather than in a centralized spot on campus. This concept is not without merit as the St. Mary's dorm complex would seem to indicate. St. Mary's has more facilities for socialization and activities than any other dorm or complex, and the result has been what we would observe as the most active and motivated living complex on campus.



Thus, the search of UU funds will begin soon. It must wait, as it should, for the completion of library funding. Paying for the library has not been easy, and paying for the UU building will also present problems. It will not be impossible, however.

It is often rumored that a beer manufacturer has offered to give financial aid for such a project. We have no information to support such a rumor, but it sounds like a good idea. A beer franchise sold for a considerable sum should be the first cash put in the UU fund.

A second source of money may be that somewhat overtaxed but always willing group of financial backers, SU parents. This for the first time might be a project that students might strongly urge their parents to support. This sort of fund drive seemingly would be a little easier for parents to get enthusiastic about as well.

University Union will be the first test of the fund raising abilities of John Corbally. In these days of considerable desire on the part of college administrations to offer agreeable overtures to their students, we suggest, or hope, that Corbally will take the cue.

The battle of UU probably isn't over. No doubt there will be hassles over the cost, the design and maybe even the site, but we are on our way. There is at last more than a casual commitment to the building and evasion or procrastination from here on would be hard to accept.

Peanuts is run with the permission of The Syracuse Herald-Journal.

The Rhinoceros

by Kirby Wolf

Cut off my ears! Tear out my eyes!
Take the pink from out of the skies !
There's an old rhinoceros pawing softly — he does not even feel the flies.
Rhinoceros. Grey. Sky. Pink. Grey, pink, grey, pink...
Oh, not to think!
And not to feel?
The orange of an orange peel...
So wet and fleshy and living inside,
And sweetly stinging juice on your fingers-
And apples and grapes and pears besides!
Each sensation's so intense; how each memory lingers!
Is there room in my brain for even the fruits
Of this world? And the heat of the sun, the sound of the flutes...
Stop! I'll go mad! My eyes close, my teeth clench.
Can the rhinoceros smell his earthy stench?
And people! I know each thought and their every desire;
And none are real — each one's liar
To me and to himself.
Like a row of bad books lining a shelf,
Waiting to be read
And fill my head
With hate and fear and sadness.
A rhinoceros cannot feel the gladness
That he should. He does not care
That he's so — oh, deep envy! — unaware.

KIRBY WOLF, a sophomore majoring in English Literature, has had poems published in several anthologies.

Speaker speculation

Mike Stephens

It appears that the date of the Senior Lawn Party, otherwise known as commencement, has crept over the shoulders of those choosing the commencement speaker. June 7, the appointed day, is only a month away.

Last year as the candidates for senior class president do every year, both Barry Randell and his opponent, footballer Cliff Ensley, promised to give the class its choice of speakers for commencement. At that time, of course, the campus knew how everyone from Edwin Walker to Norman Thomas had refused the invitations of the Class of 1968. The eleventh hour selection last June was Walter Cronkite, who by chance had a daughter here at the University.

Barry has already earned himself a niche in the Orange Hall of Fame by guiding his class through the Sophomore Slump, the Junior Jolt and the Senior Sickness. Now, the biggee of his career is only a month away. Unfortunately for Randell, he is not endowed with such a famous parent in his class.

Nobody can accuse Randell of not trying. Rejections to feelers have been coming in regularly from all parts of the country. A few weeks ago his list was down to Secretary of State William Rogers, with only HEW chief Robert Finch left before all cabinet possibilities were exhausted. Next come senators, then congressmen, and so on down the line to Mayor Walsh. Syracuse University, it seems, just is not up there as a desirable place to make a quaint little speech.

Time is running out for Randell. He must now explore new possibilities. Chancellor Tolley is retiring this year; retirement could be the commencement theme. Randell could then take his pick from among such notables as Mao Tse Tung, Charles DeGaulle and the Smothers Brothers, all of whom will be joining Tolley in retirement next year.

From the sporting world, Casey Stengel could be called back to confuse the public again–the "Ol' Perfesser" and Tolley generally talk the same language, anyway. Or from big business, maybe Howard Hughes could be located in time. If not, Organization songbird Joe Valachi, under an armed ROTC guard, could deliver a brief musical interlude. Jurists make good commencement speakers; perhaps Randell could pull a last minute coup de grace and find Judge Crater.

And, if all else fails, there is one speaker Randell could get who might draw every graduating senior into the stadium. The man has been away in the service of his country for three years now, and few remember him. But don't be surprised if the voices again start to echo the chant, "Bring back Jeff Moebus."

Daily Orange drug survey results will appear Friday

Looking for a great meal?
Try Red Barn's combination of a
BIG BARNEY®
French Fries & Coke

If you haven't had a Big Barney, you don't know what you're missing! Two delicious hamburger patties, cheese, lettuce, pickle, and our own special sauce on a double-deck roll. Try it with French Fries and a Coke today! Regular Price 00c

57¢ SPECIAL

Where it's fun to eat
RED BARN®
1514 Erie Blvd., East
731 South Crouse Ave.
519 Oriskany Blvd, Utica
3605 Brewerton Road
Special ends June 1

Convo tomorrow to honor scholars

An unprecedented number of guests have accepted invitations to Syracuse University's annual Honors Convocation tomorrow at 8 p.m. in Hendricks Chapel. Some 1,900 parents of students and other special guests have indicated they will attend.

The University has arranged for closed-circuit television in two extra auditoriums to handle the expected crowd. Hendricks Chapel seats only 1,250. Prof. Rowland P. Graeber, the University marshal, said Grant Auditorium and Kittredge Auditorium (in H.B. Crouse Hall) will be opened for extra seating and the proceedings in the chapel will be televised in these halls.

Daniel Patrick Moynihan, Assistant to the President for Urban Affairs, will be the speaker at the convocation, which honors outstanding undergraduate students. He will be awarded a Centennial Medal by the University for outstanding achievements in his field.

Moynihan is a former faculty member at Syracuse University. When he was appointed by President Nixon to the White House staff Moynihan was director of the Joint Center for Urban Studies of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Harvard University. He taught at Syracuse in 1960.

Students who have the highest grades in each of the four undergraduate classes will be among those honored.

The top men and women students will be recognized and the valedictorians and salutatorians of the University and of Utica College of Syracuse University will be introduced.

The top student in the Syracuse University senior class is Peter M. Silvaggio, of Syracuse. Silvaggio, a physics major, has maintained a 3.907 average of a possible 4.0 during his four years at the University. He is the Syracuse University valedictorian.

The salutatorian is Peggy Anne Lentz, of Buffalo. Miss Lentz has earned a 3.890 average in the College of Liberal Arts.

Other top seniors are Paula C. Sullivan, and Neal J. Maresca.

PETER M. SILVAGGIO

Both are in the College of Liberal Arts.

The top junior woman, who has an A average, is Jeanne Dervin O'Brien. Michael W. Beck is the top junior man.

Second honors in the junior class went to Ruth L. Goldstein and Robert W. Putnam.

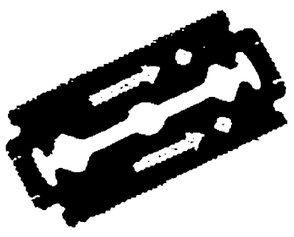
Three sophomores have straight A averages: Jeffrey S. Katcher, Linda Doris Garnets, and Diane M. Plucinnik.

Honors for second highest grades among sophomore women went to Elaine Louise Tritten, a student at Utica College.

Second highest grades for a sophomore man were earned by Michael L. Heck.

There is a six-way tie for top honors in the freshman class. Three men and three women have received all "A's" during their first year at Syracuse. The three women are Gail M. Casamento, Judith C. Lipnick, and Judith Ann Pistaki.

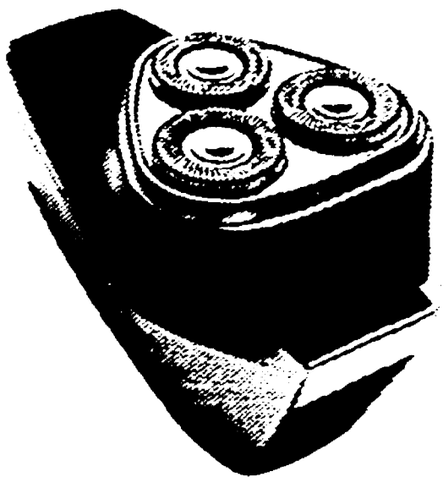
The three freshmen men with straight A's are David H. Lodge, Daniel E. Marcus, and John B. Wyeth.



Poet reads

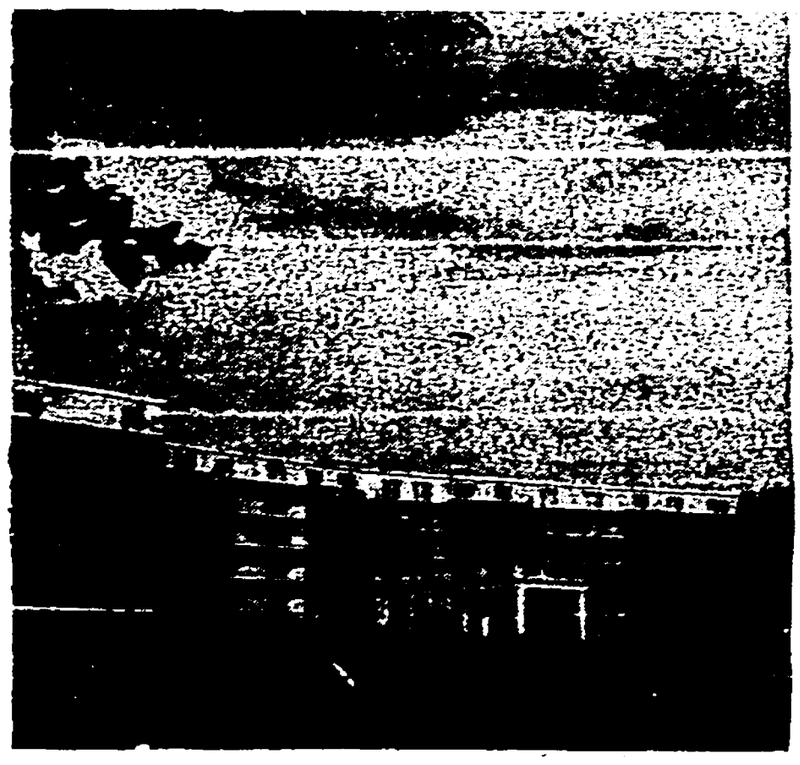
Saint Geraud, considered by many to be one of the most important poets of this generation, will give a reading this afternoon at 4, in 407 Hall of Languages. Saint Geraud, whose book "The Naomi Poems: Corpse and Beans" was published in 1966, has been touring the country, giving readings at universities, grade schools, and other places.

Born Bill Knott, in Michigan in 1940, he was raised in an orphanage and ended his education before finishing high school. He worked as a night orderly for seven years in the terminal ward of a hospital, and upon leaving last year, took up residence in Iowa City, Iowa.



FOR MOTHER'S DAY
(Next Sunday)
our special gifts and cards are the greatest !
THE "BOOKSTALL"
147 Marshall Street
Fascinating Gifts — Fine Stationery — Fabulous Cards
43 years by the Campus
Your Friendly Alum Mrs. "B."

It's been single-edged, double-edged, banded, injectored, plastic-coated, and now electro-coated.



But it's still straight.

The blade.
Whatever else they've done to it, one thing hasn't changed.
It's still straight.
And your face still isn't.
It's round.
The new Norelco Tripleheader gets around this problem.
We put our unique rotary blades into three floating heads that follow your face by going in where your face goes in. And out where your face goes out.
This way the new Norelco gets close enough to shave you as close or closer than a blade. As found in two out of three shaves in an independent lab test.
And you get a comfortable shave because the Norelco floating heads curve with your chin, bend with your neck, and even straighten out for your cheeks. Automatically. And without a nick, pull or scrape.
The new Norelco has a hidden trimmer that pops out for sideburns, and a push button for easy flip-top cleaning. It also comes in a rechargeable model that gives almost twice as many shaves per charge as any other rechargeable.
We can't see you changing the shape of your face.
But we can see you changing to Norelco.

Norelco
you can't get any closer

©1969 North American Philips Corporation, 100 East 42nd Street, New York, N.Y. 10017

NEW FACULTY AND GRADUATE HOUSING

Nob Hill, only a few minutes from SU, offers all the conveniences of luxury living in a serene atmosphere accented by a panoramic view. Applications for the moderately-priced suites are currently being accepted for the fall semester.

Full-color brochures and other information describing the abundant amenities are available to faculty, staff and graduate students by phoning 469-3211 between noon and 6 p.m.

SU's Marat Sade bombards senses with flood of ideas

Between 1797 and 1811 regular theatrical entertainment was provided at the Asylum of Charenton under the direction of the Marquis de Sade. The inmates were employed as performers and the shows were frequented by Parisian high society. To visit the aslyum was to be fashionable.

These facts are the basis for Peter Weiss' play "The Persecution and Assassination of Jean-Paul Marat as Performed by the Inmates of the Asylum of Charenton Under the Direction of the Marquis de Sade." Weiss deals with the subject of revolution on a primary level, yet the pyschological, religious, and sociological implications are far more important.

"Marat/Sade" will be presented by the S.U. Drama Dept. at the Regent Experimental Theatre, May 8-10, 15-17 at 8 p.m. The following is an excerpt from the notes of the director, Gerard E. Moses:

"Starting with the title of this "improvised play" extremes of action, feeling and idea, are jammed against one another to cause conflicts of the most major order.

"The madhouse of Charenton, where human actions, political, religious, psychological have been pushed to their extremes in madness, provides the chaotic background in front of which a sometimes cool, sometimes impassioned agrument on the French Revolution is jostled back and forth by two inmates, one who plays the historical revolutionary, Jean-Paul Marat, and one who is the actual Marquis de Sade.

"Polite theatrical conventions have been forgotten. The action becomes a barrage on the scenes. Sounds, improvised movements, exercises and sometimes words all scramble in an attempt to maintain focus. The result is an assault of voices and bodies, passions and ideas to wake us up with a flood of cold water, an electric shock, a kick in the groin. Above all a kind of theatre working towards arousal and release by way of all the senses.

THE CAST OF "MARAT/SADE" rehearses for Thursday night's opening. The play, which is based on the theatrical entertainment provided by the inmates of the Asylum of Charenton between 1797 and 1811, is being presented for two weeks at the Regent Experimental Theatre.

Education honorary induction tonight

Syracuse area women in education who belong to Pi Lambda Theta will meet for the induction of new members today at 7:15 p.m. in the Alumnae Lounge of Syracuse University Women's Building. A social hour will follow.

Pi Lambda Theta is a national honor and professional association for women in education. Beta chapter, founded at Syracuse University in 1918, includes SU faculty, undergraduate and graduate student members as well as area residents who have been elected to membership at SU or at other colleges and universities.

Twenty Syracuse University graduates and undergraduates will be inducted by Beta chapter this year. Members are selected for their high professional standards, personal integrity, leadership and ability to live and work with others, as well as for academic achievement.

Newly-elected chapter officers are: Lynne Schran, a Ph.D. candidate at Syracuse; and Linda Zingerline, a senior in the SU School of Education.

Outgoing officers are Mrs. Ronald P. Bouverat and Mrs. Alden B. Starr.

ITALIAN FILM SERIES

presents

YESTERDAY, TODAY, TOMORROW

SOPHIA LOREN and MARCELLO MASTROIANNI

KITTREDGE — Thursday — May 8 — 7 & 9 p.m. — $1.

Spring Weekend

JUNIOR WELLS

and his Chicago Blues Band

JOHN HAMMOND

Thursday 8, 10 p.m.

Friday and Saturday 7:30, 9:30 and 11:15 p.m.

TICKETS — $2.50 Per Show at HBC or Door

SPRING WEEKEND SCHEDULE:

Friday, 9-12 P.M. Watson Courtyard dance with band and beer
$1.00, 50¢ with Wells/Hammond Ticket.

Saturday, 7:30 A.M. Strawberry Breakfast — Shaw

Saturday, 10 a.m. Moving up ceremony — Newhouse

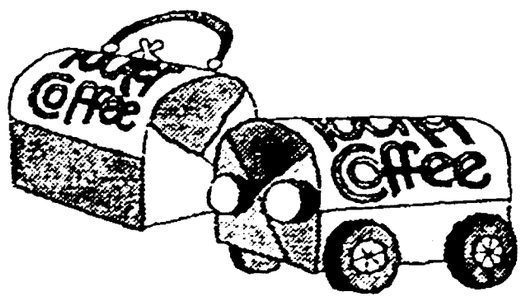
Saturday 2-4 P.M. Free Folk Festival — Thornden Park Amphitheatre

DA to address students

Frank Gualteiri, Syracuse District Attorney and Republican Mayoralty candidate, will address the Junior Young Republicans tonight at their meeting in 307 HL at 8 p.m.

From LONDON Gangsters makes fun of the wet look, in raincoats, skirts, pants, etc.

Umberto Salon and Boutique

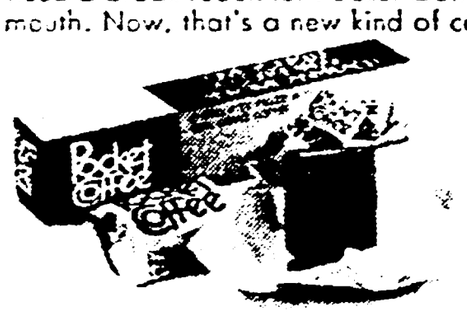


302 S. Warren St. Syracuse, N. Y.

422-9500

Pocket Coffee!

What's that?



A new kind of coffee break that goes where you go.

If you're one of the people who often find you can't stop to get a cup of coffee when you need it, listen here. Pocket Coffee is a coffee break you can carry with you.

The man who dreamed up Pocket Coffee invented a way of putting some real brewed liquid coffee inside a delicious chocolate shell. Each piece is double-wrapped and packed in a three candy stick that fits neatly into your pocket or purse.

At work, on the road, or at play (you devil you), when you need a break reach for Pocket Coffee. Pop one into your mouth. Now, that's a new kind of coffee break.

'Berry' good time

Strawberry Breakfast: SU's merry meal in May

By HELENE MACDONALD
Associate Editor

A Syracuse student of 1914 wouldn't recognize anything at the Breakfast except for the strawberries if he attended this year's edition on Saturday morning in Shaw dining hall.

Back in 1914, SU coeds sponsored the May morning breakfast on the lawn of Yates Castle, which stood on Irving Avenue.

During the early years of the May Morning Breakfast, hot dogs and rolls, cereal and coffee were served, the hot dogs being replaced by bacon in 1927.

This fare was standard for years to follow, except during World War II when the breakfast was discontinued because of food rationing.

During the twenties, the breakfast became known as the Strawberry Breakfast and ever since, it has immediately followed the awakening of the campus. Next year's Goon Squad does this, although in earlier years, four "heralds" rode around campus on horseback, blowing trumpets to wake up sleeping students.

Entertainment has been a recent addition to the breakfast. In 1955, a group of faculty including Dr. Ralph Ketcham, now chairman of the American studies program; Dr. Charles Willie, now chairman of the sociology department; Dr. Theodore Denise, now chairman of the philosophy department, and Marjorie Smith, current dean of women, presented a skit called "Teachers' Day in Thornden," a parody on the musical "Pajama Game."

Bands began playing during the breakfast with an 18-piece jazz band in 1961. Rock bands took over as the "Countdowns" provided twisting music in 1963 and the popular "Page One" played in 1967 and 1968.

The "Hard Purple" will provide dancing music this year while members and pledges of Lambda Sigma Sigma, the junior women's honorary and Eta Pi Upsilon, the senior women's honorary, serve strawberries, cereal, pastry and coffee, tea or milk from 7:30 a.m. to 9:30 a.m.

Tickets will be on sale for $1.25 all this week at the counter in HBC and can be bought at the door.

Library bids in, ground breaking set

Bids for construction of the E.S. Byrd Library were received by the University yesterday.

U.J. Smith Company, the firm that built both Lawrinson and St. Mary's, submitted the lowest bid, $11,690,000. The only other bid was submitted by the J.G.A. Construction Corp., who is currently working on Engineering Building number two.

It is anticipated that ground will be broken at the end of this month. The architects estimate a 28 month construction period, with completion and occupancy scheduled for September 1971.

Ernest Stevenson Byrd Library, named in honor of a member of the Class of 1916, will be built between University Place and Waverly Avenue, at the south end of Walnut Park.

The new library building will be a general library for the social sciences and humanities, and will contain the central administrative and processing facilities for the University library system. When completed, it will encompass 266,166 gross square feet.

The building is designed for subject arrangement with appropriate staff on each floor. It can also operate with traditional patterns of organization similar to those found in other universities.

FROM THE QUALITY LEVEL...

sophisticated avant

Campus Clothiers

S.U. BOOKSTORES

Sportcoats by

Stanley Blacker Zeeman

SU Bookstores

303 University Place

"Our Business is People"

Happenings on the Hill

WEDNESDAY

YOUNG REPUBLICANS Annual meeting. Guest Speaker - D.A. Frank Gualter, Rep. candidate for Mayor. Nominations and elections for next year's officers. 307 HL - 8 p.m.

CASUAL Communications between students and Faculty come to "Revelations," at 9 p.m. in St. Mary's Multipurpose. Wine and cheese will be served.

UU BULL Session has as its guest this week the Rev. Harvey Bates of UCCF, who will lead a discussion on "Co-ed and Co-op Dorms." Noble Room of Hendricks Chapel at 4 p.m.

SAINT GERAUD will give a reading of his Poetry at 4 p.m. in 407 HL.

AWS recolonization meeting at 9 p.m. in 206 NCC. All those interested in reorganizing AWS are invited to attend this meeting.

WAA meeting at 7 p.m. in the board room. - Soft ball club - 4-5 p.m.

PI LAMBDA THETA Initiation will be held at 7:15 p.m. in the Alumnae lounge of the Women's Building.

IFC GENERAL MEETING for all presidents or permanent IFC delegates. Today, 8 p.m. in A-1 NCC. Election of treasurer will take place.

"REMBRANDT AND THE OLD TESTAMENT" is the subject of today's humanities lecture by Prof. Wolfgang Stechow of Smith College, at 4 p.m. in Gifford Aud. Open to public.

PI MU EPSILON will hold its annual Initiation Banquet today at 6:30 p.m. at the Yates Hotel. All who need rides should meet behind Smith Hall by 6 p.m. The banquet is for all new members and officers.

THURSDAY

CHAPEL CHOIR MEMBERS remember this Thursday's rehearsal is from 10-12 p.m. Co-chairman elections will also take place.

GOON SHOW GOONS rehearsal today, 7 p.m. Women's Bldg. Rec. Lounge. Most important-all must attend. Questions? Call Ned Fleischer, X2629.

YESTERDAY, TODAY AND TOMORROW, Italian film starring Sophia Loren. This color flick can be seen tonight in Gifford Aud. at 7 and 9 p.m. Admission $1, sponsored by Il Circolo Italiano.

UJB FULL SESSION 6:30 p.m. Chapel House, to elect officers.

BOOTH 3-CLASS OF '69 reunion tonight, 8 p.m. at Lee's on Wescott St. Questions? Call Etsler, X3071.

WATSON ACADEMIC COMMITTEE 1968 Syracuse football season with Ben Schwartzwalder as chief speaker in informal discussion, tonight, 8 p.m., Watson Main Lounge.

DRAFT COUNSELING the Syracuse Draft Counseling Service and Law Students Civil Rights Reserach Council will hold draft counseling from 7-9 p.m. in room 101, White Hall.

CONFESSIONS at St. Thomas More Chapel today, 7-8 p.m.; Saturday 3:30-5 and 7-8 p.m. Before or after any mass upon request.

GENERAL

"FIORELLO" tickets can be purchased at the Newman Center. The Pompeian Player's production will be at Loew's Theater, May 13-15. For info call the Newman Center, X2600 or 478-5959.

SUICIDES ANONYMOUS: the night ear-Call 422-1000, 6 p.m.-6 a.m., M-F.

SU DRAMA DEPARTMENT will present "Marat/Sade" at the Experimental Theater, May 8-10; 15-17, 8 p.m. A new concept in theater

UU PRESENTS "Othello," Sunday, 7 and 9 p.m. in Gifford Aud. $1 admission.

SENIOR EXEC applications. Submit an index card including name, address, extension; on back activities and ideas to Phi Psi c/o Lou Brindis by May 9.

JUNIOR WELLS and his Chicago blues band plus John Hammond at Jabberwocky for Spring Weekend, May 8, 9, 10. Tix on sale for $2.50 at HBC.

STRAWBERRY BREAKFAST tickets are on sale all this week from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the counter in HBC lobby. Price $1.25 per ticket.

DAILY MASSES - 12:05 and 4:05 Monday to Friday at Hendricks Chapel. Saturdays at 5:05, St. Thomas More Chapel.

Rembrandt

Prof. Wolfgang Stechow of Smith College will lecture on "Rembrandt and the Old Testament" Wednesday (May 7) at 4 p.m. in Gifford Auditorium, Syracuse University.

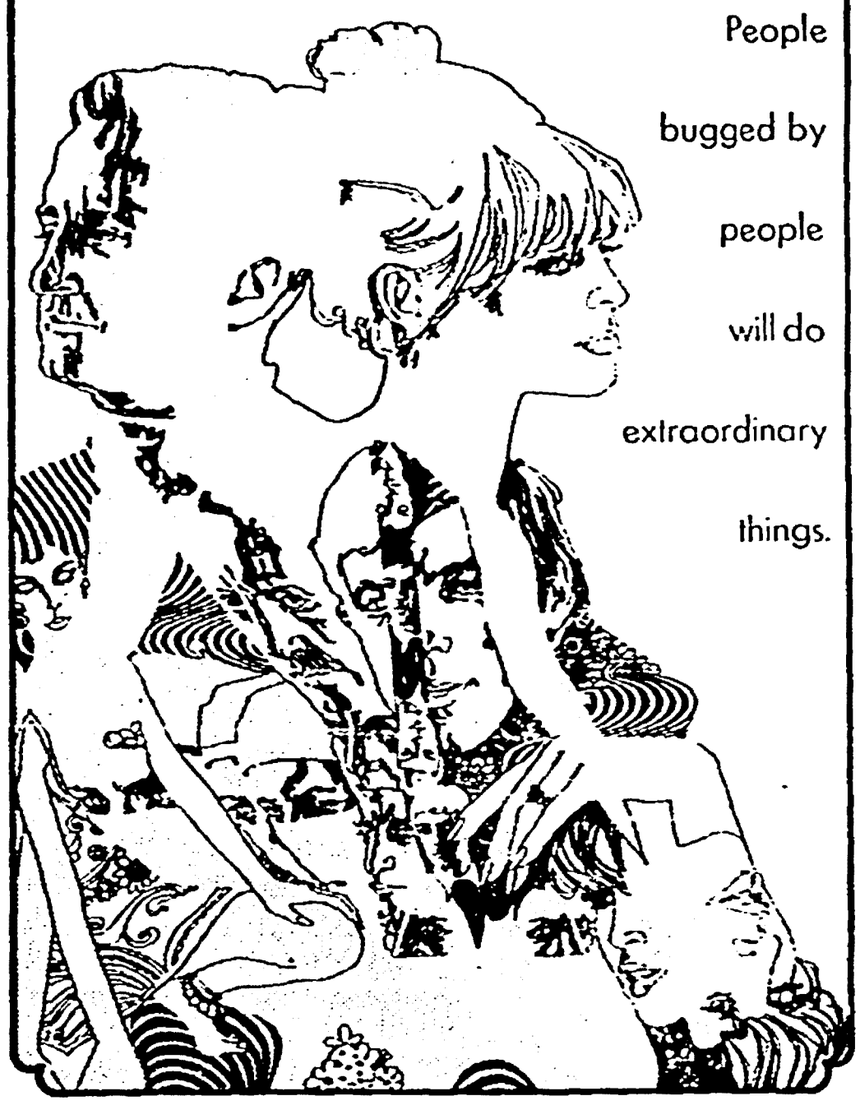
The Humanities Division is sponsoring the visit of Stechow, a Dutch art scholar, as part of the commemoration of the 300th anniversary of Rembrandt's death in 1669. The lecture is free and open to the public.

JIFFY KING SPECIAL

Monday thru Friday, 2-5 p.m.

10¢ OFF ALL SUBS
727 South Crouse
in the Arcade

WANTED for PSYCHOLOGICAL EXPERIMENT



Women at least 21 years of age, with at least a high school eduaction. Participants will be paid at least $2.00 per hour. If interested, call Upstate Medical Center at 473-5627. If no answer, 473-5632. Ask for Mrs. Harter.

Call between hours 8:30 to 5 p.m.

SUMMER FASHION OPPORTUNITY

In your home town - World Leader in Fashion Magic "®" Jewelry will have both summer and part time job openings for university students in various parts of the country. You will earn above average pay, set your own working hours, and find fun and glamour in the wonderful world of Fashion. Interviews will be held on campus soon. Contact Mrs. Jones at the Placement Center Ext. 3618.

JULIE CHRISTIE · GEORGE C. SCOTT
IN A RICHARD LESTER–RAYMOND WAGNER PRODUCTION

Petulia
...the uncommon movie.

CO-STARRING
RICHARD CHAMBERLAIN AS DAVID DANNER
ARTHUR HILL · SHIRLEY KNIGHT and JOSEPH COTTEN AS MR. DANNER
Based on a novel by John Haase · Music Composed and Conducted by John Barry
SCREENPLAY BY LAWRENCE B. MARCUS · ASSOCIATE PRODUCER DENIS O'DELL · PRODUCED BY RAYMOND WAGNER · DIRECTED BY RICHARD LESTER
SUGGESTED FOR MATURE AUDIENCES · TECHNICOLOR® FROM WARNER BROS.-SEVEN ARTS

film forum
gifford auditorium
syracuse university
$1.00
May 5, 6, 7
7 & 9 p.m. $1.00

Campus Classified

GR 6-5571, Ext. 2314

Rates minimum of 15 words:

1 day	1.15
2 days	2.25
3 days	3.30
4 days	4.30
5 days	5.25
6 days	6:15

To place a classified ad. call GR 6-5571, ext. 2314, between 1 and 3 p.m. Ad must be placed 2 days in advance. Every word over 15 costs 5c extra per day.
ALL ADS MUST BE PREPAID.

MISCELLANEOUS

RENT if you can't buy! T.V.s, tape recorders, typewriters. By week, month or semester. Reasonable rates. S. U. BOOKSTORE, GR 6-5541, x 2426.

ALTERATIONS DONE within 24 hours. Call for an appointment. Lillian Potter, 207 Comstock. 478-5847.

PRIVATE DRIVING LESSONS — automatic or standard shift. Full or refresher courses. Qualified professional instructors. Pickup service. Auto Driving Academy, GR 6-3995.

NEED A SUMMER JOB? Syracuse YMCA Camp Tousey has openings for Unit Directors, counselors, riding master and waterfront director. Five hundred acre site with 55 staff and 160 campers on Millsite Lake near Redwood, New York Spend a challenging and rewarding summer working with boys 9 - 14 years old. For details and application, write Robert Fiske, YMCA, 340 Montgomery St., Syracuse, New York 13202.

ATTENTION FDDAT CHAIRMAN — Fulton paper has a surplus of seconds in toilet tissue - decorative colors -

OCEAN IN A BOTTLE! 'Tis true. A new brainstorm from California for twiddlers! / Nassau blue, ocean green. Bookstall, 147 Marshall St.

BEAUTIES! Pure silk scarves from India. Last bastion on hand-loomed, hand-blocked prints, gorgeous colors. Various sizes. Bookstall, 147 Marshall St.

SUMMER JOBS: Counselors; private boys' camp; Adirondacks; College men of above average physical fitness and judgment; tripping, riflery, canoeing, nurse and cook jobs open. Adirondack Swim Camp, 39 Mill Valley Road, Pittsford, New York 14534.

SUMMER JOB — Full time, Syracuse area, need car and phone. Call on established customers. Eight year old business needs new representative. Contact Dean Wallace, Jr., 2 Oakwood Circle, Storrs, Conn., 06268 or call 203-429-6152.

FOR SALE

ROOM AIR CONDITIONERS — 5,000, 6,000, 7,000 and 9,000 BTUS. These are '68 Models, some scratched or dented, some used, all guaranteed — priced for students pocketbooks 446-6321.

1965 OLDSMOBILE convertible. Red, 442, Power steering. Power brakes, excellent condition, reasonable. Call 637-3430 after 5.

1966 MUSTANG, 289 BRG, 4-speed, best offer. 478-4421 after 7 p.m.

UNIVERSITY EAST, 2 family house, 2 bedroom flats, modernized, fireplace, porches, 2 car garage, 2 bedrooms 3rd floor $15,500. Owner, 469-4095.

1960 CHEVROLET — runs excellent, body very good, 12,000 miles on engine overhaul, burns no oil, new brakes, $150.00 firm. Call 475-3214 after 5:30 p.m.

'63 PORSCHE COUPE - AM-FM, 1600-super, Michelin X. Call after 4:00 446-8017.

1960 CHEVROLET BELAIR 2-door hardtop. Beautiful condition, mechanically perfect, $190. Larry 475-3987.

1967 MGB convertible, wire wheels, snow tires, radio, rear deck carrier, phone — 468-4128.

MUST SELL — going into Service — 1956 Ford V8 292. Call 478-0091 after 5 p.m.

1953 PACKARD CLIPPER — 47,000 miles, good body, very good engine $125 or best offer 478-1140.

1966 MUSTANG — Blue power steering, power brakes, automatic transmission, excellent condition. 474-0471 after 5.

1966 BULTACO CAMPERA MOTORCYCLE with two helmets, low mileage. Call Jeff 446-1112 after 7 during week days and all day on weekends. Asking $425.00.

'54 CHEVY — Excellent condition, low mileage, 235 CID, auto. trans., 4 Dunlops, 2 studded snows, radio, etc. $150.00. Call Art, 478-2349.

1968 DODGE DART—Radio, snow tires, excellent condition. Call after 6 p.m. $1,900.00. 437-4679.

'63 RED CORVAIR Monza — Excellent condition, stick shift, radial tires, Azria's Esso, 2974 E. Genesee.

FOR RENT

LIVINGSTON AVE. — 3 blocks from university, 2 bus lines. Bedroom $12.00. 479-7653 or 476-3296 Mrs. Wilson.

APARTMENT FOR SUMMER — furnished, 3-4 girls, near campus, call evenings 475-0940.

EUCLID FURNISHED APARTMENT - convenient location from June, air condition, garage 446-6451, 446-5360.

2 BEDROOM apartment to sublet — (June-August) Kitchen, living room, bath, on campus, $125/mo. 476-0885 (nights).

TO SUBLET SUMMER — Modern 2 bedroom furnished; Hollywood kitchen picture windows, garage, lawn; 5 min. from campus $110 per month. Tel: 475-9607.

AVAILABLE IMMEDIATELY — share in 3 bedroom apartment with two male grad. students. Near campus. Call 476-4655.

ON-CAMPUS APARTMENT — June-Aug. Excellent condition.furnished, 3 bedrooms. $165/mo. including utilities. Call 478-9073.

SUBLET, 3 months, June 1. Completely furnished new deluxe, townhouse (on 3 levels) 2 br., 1½ baths, balcony, grads or prof. $220.00 per month. Phone 478-3925.

APARTMENTS — Furnished or unfurnished, 3 rooms, utilities, near campus. Call x3630, 472-8223 or 475-1631.

UNIVERSITY WALK'G DISTANCE — Furnished, heated efficiency and one bedroom apt. sub-let for summer only or year. Also one bedroom apartment and efficiency available Sept. 1st. Students or teachers. Parking or garage. 446-0493.

APARTMENT TO SUB-LET (June 1 to Sept. 1) — Furnished, one bedroom, 10 min. from campus. $85 per mo. Call 479-7336.

APARTMENT TO SUBLET - furnished, one bedroom 5 minutes walking distance. Call Morris ext. 2821 or 478-8306 (evenings) $110/month includes utilities.

WANTED

FACULTY COUPLE — Looking for furnished or unfurnished two or three bedroom house or apartment near university. Academic year 1969-70. Call 655-9078.

ROOMMATE — for New York City. Starting summer or September. Call Linda (after 4) 474-4774 or 492-0876.

RIDER WANTED — To San Diego or Los Angeles, leaving after exams (about June 5). Call Bob at 446-5757.

FACULTY COUPLE — No children, looking for two or three bedroom house or apartment near University. Call 457-5420 after 6.

GIRL — Part time at Tecumseh, food counter. Mon. thru Thurs. 5-9, GI 6-5680.

TYPING

DISSERTATIONS, THESES, AND TERM papers. IBM electric typewriter. 40c per page 5c per copy. 446-2841. Mrs. Miller.

THIRTY YEARS EXPERIENCE. Dissertations, term papers, proof-read. Satisfaction guaranteed. Mrs. Raymond Webb. HE 7-8259.

TAKE YOUR MANUSCRIPT to the only professional typing and printing service serving the S. U. area. The knowledge and experience of having done over 2,000 theses and dissertations is behind every job we turn out. Stephanie's Office Service. 469-2795.

Eight stickmen tabbed for laurels

By BOB HERZOG

The key word in describing Syracuse's success in Lacrosse is team. The Orange attack has featured consistent scoring and a tight defense. This balanced effort has given several SU players recognition for All-American honors.

Syracuse is in the category of Big School All America. Other schools in this class include perennial powers John Hopkins, Army, Navy and Maryland. Ohio State, Rutgers, Virginia, and the Ivy League schools are also "big time." A committee of coaches sends out lists with nominations for All-Americans to each school. The list can be supplemented by a school's coach when he feels it necessary. On the initial list, SU had five players nominated: Verne Doctor (attack), Ron Doctor (midfield), Mark Austerlitz (midfield), Jeff Davis (attack), and Cliff Ensley (defense). Coach Roy Simmons added three more for consideration: Butch Brown (goalie), Jim Smith (midfield) and Leo Nolan (attack).

Verne Doctor, a third team All-American last year, has been hampered by two severe injuries. His statistics are impressive never the less. He has scored 14 goals and assisted on 12 others. His partner on the attack is Jeff Davis, who is the team leader in assists with 17 and second in goals scored with 15. His point total is the highest on the squad.

The midfielders have contributed heavily to the offense. Ron Doctor has 11 goals and 13 assists and is quite adept at winning faceoffs. Mark Austerlitz is the team's most prolific goal scorer with 19. He has also added six assists.

With this kind of offense making the news, the defense must not be forgotten. Cliff Ensley is a standout. He has snuffed out many opponents charges with his aggressive play. His speed in clearing the ball upfield has been a great help to the offense.

The focal point of a team's defense is the goalie. Butch Brown has handled the job masterfully. In nine games he has allowed just 33 goals and recorded 76 saves. These statistics do not reveal all of Butch's value to the team. He is often responsible for starting an offensive rush by alertly passing the ball upfield. In effect this gives Syracuse an extra attacker.

With such an array of talented performers the Orange stickeman's 9-0 record is no surprise. But, as Simmons says, "The toughest games are ahead." He cites Army, Cornell and Cortland as especially tough opponents. It is in these games that SU must prove itself as a national power.

It is also in these games that the eight All-American nominations must prove their individual worth. The All-American squad is generally staffed with players from the top ranked teams. Simmie says that if SU can meet the challenge of its upcoming games, it has a good shot of landing some players on this years All-American team. Last year, Syracuse was tenth ranked nationally, and had one man selected for All-American honors (Third team). Simmons admits "It will take quite a bit of luck, but the 1969 stickmen are a good bet to improve on both records."

FEARSOME FOURSOME-From left to right Jim Davis, Mark Austerlitz, Vern Doctor, and Ron Doctor have combined for 59 goals and 48 assists. They will be heavily counted on to score for the Orange against Army.

Frosh rowers unbeaten; seek Eastern crown

By GINA BELL

Last September, when he was recruited for freshman crew, Tom Gilbert had never seen an oar, let alone been in a shell, in his life. In a brief eight months, he and seven other oarsmen, including only two experienced rowers, have developed into a crew of potential national champions. They share with Penn the distinction of being the only undefeated freshman crew in the East, having beaten Navy, Cornell and Brown.

Gary MacLachlan, in his second year as freshman rowing coach, attributes his crew's success to their unusual size (the varsity averages 6' 3", 188 lbs.), strength, and determination. "I can't push these guys hard enough," he claims. "I give them what should be a tough workout, and they can still take more."

The frosh have given MacLachlan none of a freshman coach's usual headaches of academic ineligibility and competition with fraternities. Those few who joined fraternities in the winter have since depledged, finding the Greek system not worth the time and effort which it detracts from rowing. Furthermore, only one man in the first boat had anything resembling an academic problem; another had a 3.6 average. The frosh crew's spirit is unique, as was demonstrated during the spring camp at Long Branch. It is traditional for the varsity to haze the frosh each spring, capturing each freshman and shaving his head. This year the frosh turned the tables, and before the varsity had the chance to "scalp" them, they gave one another the traditional crew cuts.

MacLachlan's first boat, while it contains only two experienced rowers, presents a solid front whose ranks are impossible to break without tremendous effort from the second frosh.

Pete Washburn, the stroke, is the smallest, and according to MacLachlan, the gutsiest man in the boat. Because of his experience in high school crew, he was placed at stroke, where he is able to set a rapid pace which the heavier rowers can easily keep up.

Tom Gilbert, in the seven seat, is, despite the fact that he'd never rowed before this year, what both coaches describe as the most technically perfect rower they've seen.

Gordon Scott, whose brother strokes the BU varsity, has added to his family's rowing tradition by working his way into the number six seat without previous experience. Ted Schuler, in the five seat, is a man who, as the coach puts it, "could move the boat all by himself."

Reed Augliere, at four, is the boat's only real pro, having rowed for the team that won the Schoolboy Championship in England last year. As one who has already experienced success, he fulfills the function of "backbone of the team," pushing the crew when necessary and keeping them from becoming over-confident.

John Hession, in the number three spot, has worked his way into the first boat after quiting the crew temporarily last winter. Tom Sawyer, at two, and John Lambert, at bow, are what MacLachlan describes as "real fighters."

The frosh defeated Navy by 2½ lengths, Cornell by 3½, and Brown by 4, but have yet to show what they can do under pressure. They will have all the pressure they could possible ask for this weekend at the Eastern Sprints, where, seeded third behind Penn and Harvard, they'll face their first real test.

BIG EIGHT-These eight Orange Lacrosse players were nominated for the All-American team. They are Jeff Smith, Jeff Davis, Ron Doctor, Leo Nolan, Cliff Ensley, Vern Doctor, Mark Austerlitz, and Butch Brown. Also, the entire Army starting ten was nominated.

Grid offense starting to gel; lineman's lack of conditioning could present big obstacle

By LARRY CENTER

ed. note–This is the first installment of a three part series on Spring football practice. Today–the offense.

The basketball season is finally over and the Celtics, as usual, have won the NBA Championship. The hockey season at last is ended and the Canadians, as usual, have captured the Stanley Cup.

Football comes to the Hill this Saturday as the Orange battle each other in the annual Spring game, and Coach Ben Schwartzwalder, as usual, is pessimistic in his appraisal of the team. And when the Russells and Beliveaus are all gone, the odds are Ben will still be here, complaining about the Orangemen's lack of talent.

All that Ben says about the squad must be viewed in the context of "The Coach's Prerogative." At this time of year, every coach feels that he has the privilege to feel sorry for himself (and psyche out his Fall opponents). Even Woody Hayes is probably saying that the Buckeyes are vastly overrated and will have a lot of problems.

But, Ben does have a right to complain. Spring practice has revealed a lot of problems that must be patched up by September. One of his least worries should be the offensive unit, which returns ten of 11 starters.

The backfield has a lot of depth with most of last year's starters being pressed by talented rookies. Al Newton, who the coach keeps saying "could be a real fine football player," and Mike Chlebeck, who saw a lot of action last year, are the veteran fullbacks. Frosh Dick Phillips has "shown something this spring," and Marty Januskewicz is playing some fullback.

Says Ben, "Newton and Januskewicz shouldn't be at the same position. Marty is not a natural tailback," but to spread the talent around, that's where he may wind up. Behind Januskewicz as of now are Billy Knox, "who looked better Saturday than in a long while," and Jon Godbolt, who also "showed something in Saturday's scrimmage."

Ben calls his wingbacks "average," but Corky Castner showed a lot of promise last season and could be tough. Frosh Steve Sanson has been biting at Castner's heels all spring and has pleasantly surprised the coach. Out of the picture now because of a bad shoulder is Greg Allen, who is small, but has more speed than any other back, and could move up fast if he comes back in good shape. Ben is counting on him to run back punts.

The quarterback situation is the same as last year. Paul Paolisso figures to be number one, with Randy Zur and Rich Panczyszyn behind him. Some fans have predicted a return to the "three yards and a cloud of dust" offense because of last season's interception. problem, but Ben promises to "continue to throw quite a bit."

He is looking for more effective running and passing, not trying to emphasize one aspect over the other. However, he believes that "the team that runs better wins more, like Penn State, Ohio State, Texas, and Missouri, who beat Alabama badly without completing a pass."

The relativity of offense to defense looked better Saturday, thanks to an improved performance by this line, particularly Dave McCard. Ben feels that his returning linemen could be in better shape, especially the centers, all of whom he terms "mediocre." Gerry Vogt, Lenny Smith and John Lobo... have disappointed him, moreso than the guards and tackles. John Massis is still out at end, but Tony Gabriel and Bill Maddox are doing "a good job."

Booth Dorm Council says IDC unfair

By JOHN WISNIEWSKI

Residents of Booth Hall yesterday harshly criticized the Inter-Dormitory Council for not approving the dorm's proposal for autonomy.

At a meeting Tuesday night Marc Cavanaugh, IDC president-elect, said the Booth Dorm Council did not sufficiently explain to residents the academic and cultural programming available to them. IDC then voted to postpone approval until Booth was re-evaluated last night. The council will vote again on the dorm's autonomy proposal this evening.

"IDC should act in an advisory capacity and not as a dictator of policy," said one Booth resident. "The whole thing smells like dirty politics to me," claimed another student. "Steve (Tober) worked hard for us all year," he continued, "and if anyone deserves autonomy, it's Booth."

Tober, dorm president, said "because the IDC evaluation team Monday night couldn't sense a type of rapport between the dorm council and residents, it felt there was none."

"But the dorm council representatives on each floor have been responsive to residents all year," Tober said. "Through individual and collective meetings with residents, council members have gained a consensus of what the residents want to see implemented."

He explained that students favored continuation of their Sunday evening film program and the establishment of an "open university" featuring guest lecturers. Other possibilities mentioned were art exhibits, talent shows and tutoring programs.

The dorm council claimed that IDC's evaluation Monday was unfair. Making the evaluation were Cavanaugh, Fred Boss, Mike Kleeman, and Pete Baskin.

One resident asked how IDC could make a fair evaluation by posing such "silly questions" as: "What would you do if a guy falls off a roof?" or "What would you do if you saw someone breaking a phone?"

The dorm council charged that IDC did not speak to a representative sample of residents. "What do you expect to learn by questioning just 16 students?," he asked. Tober added that the evaluation team visited only six of Booth's eight floors.

Gary Bacal, making last night's re-evaluation with Fred Feld, defended the legality of the council's actions. He said that IDC received its power to implement the autonomy program from the Council on Student Life. Bacal pointed out that establishment of the evaluation committee was in accordance with the by-laws of IDC.

IDC by-laws provide for the following allocation of voting power:

An analysis

- The Inter-Fraternity Council and the Panhellenic Association each have two votes.
- Each living center with 400 or less residents has two votes.
- Each living center with more than 400 residents has three votes.

The IDC Constitution states: "No meeting shall be considered official unless there is a quorum present of membership votes." Tober questioned the legality of the last IDC meeting. Thirteen members were present to vote on Booth's proposal. When Bacal was asked if this number constituted a quorum, he answered, "I don't know."

Tober then said Booth's argument for approval could be supported by a letter the dorm council received from Dean of Men David Tatham.

The dorm council and the evaluation team agreed that last night's session eliminated misconceptions by both parties. IDC committeeman, Fred Feld, concluded: "I think IDC is in the process of changing from a dictorial body to an advisory body."

DAILY ORANGE

Vol. 67, No. 101 Syracuse, New York, Thursday, May 8, 1969 10 Cents

Williams looks at his role

By DIANE WEATHERS

"Make no mistake about it: John A. Williams is a first rate talent of unquestionable authenticity and the peer of any man writing today."

Saturday Review

This quote, appearing on the back cover of the paperback edition of "The Man Who Cried I Am" is only one among many of the words of praise bestowed upon its author John Williams. This work, which was published in 1967, has been on the reading lists of two courses this semester: the student taught Black and White in America and Professor David Owen's course, The Blacks in American Literature.

Taking these factors into consideration, how does one sophomore journalism student go about interviewing such a person? During the informal discussion period which took place yesterday afternoon in the multi-purpose room of St. Mary's dormitory, Williams had already expressed his views on the traditional questions concerning separatism. militarism, and "what-can-we--as-whites-doism."

JOHN A. WILLIAMS

Speaking in a mild and soft-spoken manner, for approximately one hour and a half, he answered numerous questions, some of which concerned his book and his role as a writer, but most dealing with his role as a black man and his opinions concerning, black-white relationships.

The American system, William's believes, must undergo tremendous alterations, if racial tensions are ever to be alleviated. He compared the role of the black in society to a pyramid

(Continued on Page 5)

Author lectures on blacks

By CELESTE LACY

A very quiet and soft spoken John Williams addressed about 200 students of the Black and White in America course in Maxwell auditorium last night.

Williams is the author of "The Man Who Cried I Am" and several other works dealing with contemporary racial problems. He lectured on a variety of subjects ranging from the revolution on college campuses to the new rage for soul food.

"I think that in a way white America has come to see, like black America, that they are on the outside looking in too," Williams said.

"I think the entire nation is being deluded," he added. "The white masses are now as helpless as the black masses. White people have allowed themselves to be bought off by brassy politicans."

In reference to campus revolutions, Williams stated that what happens in a university ultimately affects those in Washington. The author told the audience that Washington must maintain the status quo and is

(Continued on Page 5)

Honor society taps seniors

Eighteen members of the Class of 1969 at Syracuse University have been elected to membership in Phi Beta Kappa, the national honor society. Phi Beta Kappa selects members twice a year. Those chosen during the second semester of their senior year must have maintained a grade point average of 3.5 on a 4.0 scale. They are:

Ruth Baum, Linda Brooke, Margaret Berry, Margaret Casey, Dorothy Edwards, Lucille Honig, Doris Korbin, Mrs. Rita Richard, Harold Dunn, Martin Gordon, David Guss, Michael Reza, Richard Kortright, Melvyn Minot, Michael Silverman, Michael Sussman

Phi Beta Kappa is the oldest American college Greek letter fraternity. It was organized Dec. 5, 1776, at William and Mary College, Williamsburg, Va. Originally founded as a secret fraternity, it was recognized in 1883 as an honor society.

Commencement plans

The following schedule of Commencement Week events was released yesterday afternoon by Barry Randell, president of the senior class:

PARENTS HOUSING

Male dorms will be open to parents for $2.50 a night.
-arrangements are made through the R.A.'s
-Watson reservations are made through the Dean of Men's Office.

SENIOR CONVOCATION

Monday evening at 7 p.m. in Hendricks Chapel.
-all seniors are to attend
-one hour long
-Commencement information
-marshalls will be announced
-Dr. Michael O. Sawyer will be guest speaker

COMMENCEMENT SCHEDULE

For all seniors and parents.
Thursday -TGIG (Thank God its Graduation) The Scene 3-5 p.m.
Friday -11-1 p.m. Picnic on the Quad. One free ticket for each senior. Extra tickets for parents are available at the administration building until May 16th.
-5-7 p.m. Reception at Grand Ballroom of the Hotel Syracuse. Tickets are available at the administration building this week and next week at $1 apiece. Orchestra and hors d'oeuvres are included.

SENIOR BALL

June 6, 8:30 p.m. at the Three Rivers Inn.
-Tickets go on sale Monday in HBC.
-All graduating seniors and their parents can buy tickets.
-Semi-formal
-$5 per person-pays for talent and admission, NOT dinner.
-David Frye and Lou Rawls
-11 piece orchestra
-jazz quartet
-can come just for entertainment.

SENIOR MAGAZINE

Photo story of last four years at SU.
-60 pages.
-Edited by Norma Douglas
-available at the end of classes, free.

CAP AND GOWN

Can be picked up at the corner book store.
should be ordered before the end of the week or $1 penalty.

COMMENCEMENT SPEAKER

U Thant is on tap to speak, but a definate answer hasn't been received.

INFORMATION

Questions can be answered by Ann Dobe, X2513, 2514; or Sandra Stathatos, Commencement Secretary, X2431.

Alfred Cope: A look at American Democracy

Editor's note: The following is a long standing statement of foreign policy views by Alfred H. Cope, assistant dean of the College of Liberal Arts.

FOURTEEN POINTS
Principles and Practice for American Foreign Policy
By...Alfred H. Cope

1. The American Democracy is the most preferable form of government in the world.

2. The comparative freedom provided by American Democracy is so substantial and important that it not only should survive, but spread as a system of freedom for the oppressed, or uncertain countries.

3. In the long run, democracy cannot co-exist with dictatorship. The doctrine of co-existence is a communist ruse to gain time.

4. The United States is the only free country of sufficient strategic base and resources to withstand the dictatorships which seek to capture world hegemony.

5. In no case could other free countries remain free without our help. Countries like France, individuals like DeGaulle, can damage our opportunities to serve the cause of freedom, but, as noted, none of these aspirant countries can defend or lead freedom by themselves. Our diplomatic pressure must cause the return of such countries to the cause of freedom.

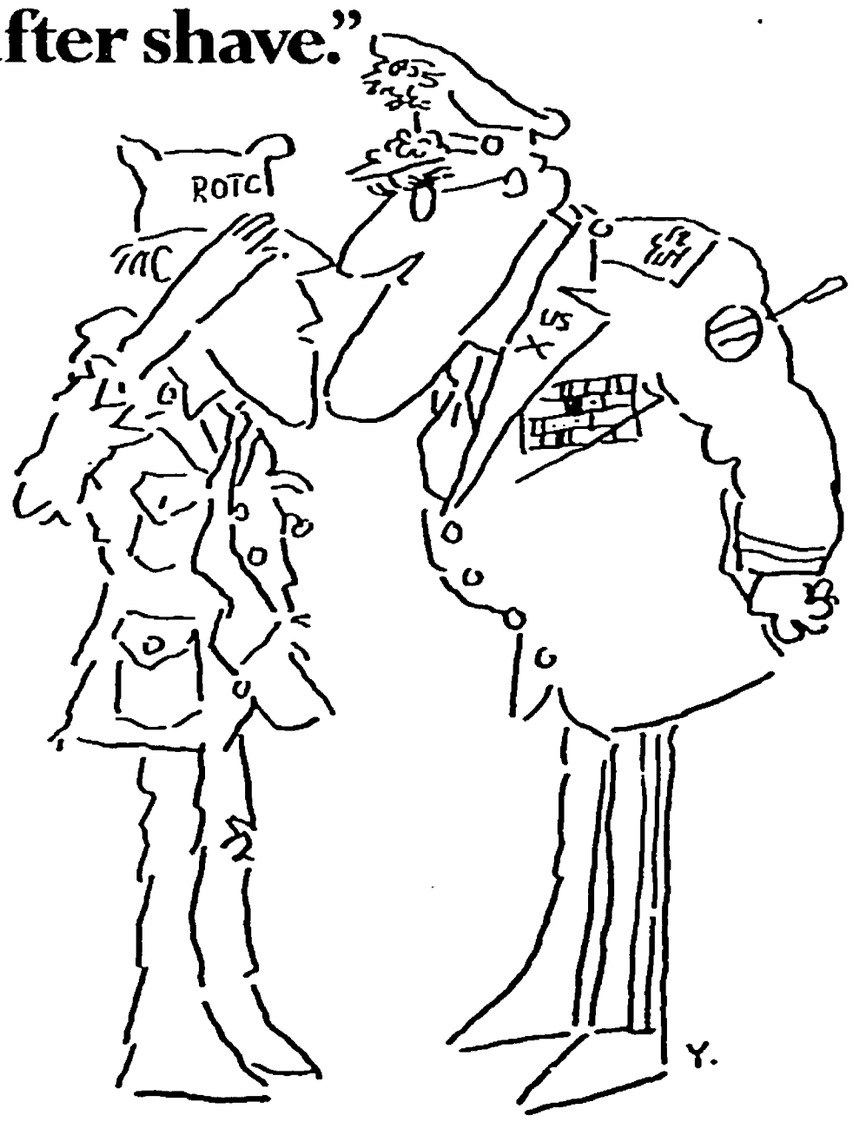
6. In our proper efforts to obtain a higher social conscience and democratic liberalism at home, we should not inhibit our forceful policy abroad. Instead of emphasizing our impairments for world leadership, we should turn our full resources against our enemies, the dictatorships. Since our cause is primarily just, we should not apologize for democracy; we should be aggressive in behalf of world freedom. This involves a continual diplomatic policy, short of war, to bring about democratic reforms among our associates. Also, when in war our forces confront the Communists in Viet Nam, or elsewhere, we should take the position that we are morally more than two equal contestants. Before the bar of history we have a cause which must win for the benefit of the human race.

7. We should make it clear that American Foreign Policy, American power, and our armed forces should be appreciated as the policemen for the future, arresting the irresponsible forces of anti-democratic oppression. It cannot be illegal or immoral for us to act in just causes. The ultimate purpose of our foreign policy is to bend the enemy to do our will, to make the enemy a cooperating part of a world democratic free society. Intermediate objectives are not sufficient. About each international action we must ask: does it serve international freedom and thus preserve the United States?

8. We do not have alternative choices. Freedom and justice are the absolute necessities of modern world existence; it is better to be dead than red. The enemies of freedom should know now that, if needed, we intend to give our lives, our wealth, and our honor in the cause of freedom. (When Kennedy confronted the Russians over missiles in Cuba he faced them down. They knew he was ready for war and sacrifice, not surrender. In a sense we won World War III fight then.)

9. While we have no desire to frustrate the legitimate desires for freedom of the emergent nations, we will not tolerate them as emergent dictatorships, nor will we allow the other dictatorships to capture them with false promises of freedom. The right of a nation to emerge, or remain is to be based upon its acceptance of responsibility for world freedom.

10. As far as economic activity and foreign aid is concerned we should make it clear to applicants that they must either be with us or against us. Our differential policies for friend or foe should be so selective that nations will need to choose freedom.



11. The subversion of dictatorships to bring them down and substitute free democratic institutions should be considered honorable and necessary. We should do all in our power to weaken internal institutions of those dictatorships which we cannot overthrow immediately; this includes active comfort and support for freedom movements. If our enemies cannot be deterred from aggression we should contrive to allow them to destroy each other, not the United States.

12. We should pick the best strategic lines to fight, but particularly in the case of the Chinese Communists, no further ground should be granted. The totalitarian forces must understand that they cannot engage in local encroachments without expecting the destruction of their central resources, such as Hanoi, Havana, Peking and Moscow; in this we have an overwhelming ability. If we retreat in Viet Nam, then we shall have to fight at Singapore, in the Philippines, in Japan or in Australia, or Hawaii, or Alaska, or at home.

(Continued on Page 11)

JAM FACTORY
Thursday
Scotch and Stein
3507 James St. Eastwood Shopping Center

"I'm sorry about your parade, sir. I guess I splashed on too much after shave."

Even the might of the military can't protect you if you're not careful how you use Hai Karate® After Shave and Cologne. One whiff and females get that "make love not war" look in their eyes. So to maintain military discipline and keep your uniform intact, we put instructions on self-defense in every package. Just in case it comes down to hand-to-hand combat.

Hai Karate-be careful how you use it.

© 1959, Leeming Division, Chas. Pfizer & Co., Inc., New York, N.Y.

NOW, COLOR POWER IN TAPERED UNDERWEAR
by REIS
Precisely color-mated in SKY BLUE
FERN GREEN
MELON
and WHITE

to give you that trim, athletic look.

100% fine quality cotton

TORSO T-SHIRT
$1.75 each, 3 for $5.00
Side vents. Perma-Sized®.
S-M-L. XL in white only.
SHORTI-SHORT™
$1.50 each 28-40.
Reinforced side-vents.
Lustrous broadcloth.
TAPERED-BRIEF
Hip-hugging fit.
$1.50 each. S-M-L-XL.
SHORT SLEEVE MOCK-TURTLE
$2.50 each. Side-vents.
S-M-L-XL

Campus Clothiers
S.U. BOOKSTORES
SU Bookstores

ANGUS H. TWOMBLY — Editor-in-Chief

MANAGING EDITOR - Alan Stamm EXECUTIVE EDITOR - Karen Wiediger NEWS EDITOR - Fred Tuccillo EDITORIAL DIRECTOR - David A. Ross COPY EDITOR - Jean Havens FEATURE EDITOR - Roz Mazer SPORTS EDITOR - Mike Weber CAMPUS AFFAIRS EDITOR - Larry Kramer PHOTOGRAPHY EDITOR - Clint Clemens ASSOCIATE EDITORS - Andrij Bilyk, Kay Christensen, Beth Hillson, Rona Kavee, Helene Macdonald, Charles Shapiro, Dan Schlossberg, Patti Williams, Roni Zlokower.

DAILY ORANGE

Syracuse University's Daily Newspaper Since 1903

THURSDAY, MAY 8, 1969 PAGE 3

STEVEN P. STROBRIDGE -- Business Manager

ASSISTANT BUSINESS MANAGER— Art Depasqua, NATIONAL ADVERTISING MANAGER— Janet Meyer ACCOUNT EXECUTIVES— Roger Black, Jim Maney, Mike Greenstein.

Published Tuesday, through Friday during the academic year by students of Syracuse University. Offices located at 200 Brooklea Drive, Fayetteville, N.Y., and 1101 East Adams St., Syracuse, New York. Entered as Second Class matter at the U.S. Post Office, Fayetteville, N.Y. 13066.

Too big a job?

The Inter-Dormitory Council (IDC) has decided that Booth Hall is not prepared to handle the responsibilities of dorm autonomy. IDC has turned down Booth's bid on the grounds that there was not sufficient communication concerning academic and cultural activities between the dorm council and the residents. Before we judge the validity of the IDC accusation, we must examine exactly who is making these changes.

The IDC has been dubiously empowered to "evaluate" each dorm's readiness for autonomy. To do this they sent around a team of evaluators to each living center, and charged them to investigate prevailing social and cultural conditions and report their findings back to the IDC. Because of an acute manpower shortage, however, these teams were anything but qualified to evaluate. In several instances, freshmen from all freshmen dorms were sent to pass judgment on the totally different lifestyle of an upperclass dorm. Students from small dorms and cottages were asked to judge the readiness of huge dormitories with lifestyles totally alien to their own living experience. Most ridiculous was the fact that some of these judges were not even members of IDC, and were therefore completely unqualified to evaluate responsibly and fairly.

The evaluators roamed each dorm for an hour or so, and from the random sampling of discussions held, decided whether or not there was a lack of communication. That an hour of shoddy investigation could produce such a profound revelation seems absurd, but it was accepted verbatum.

The IDC is necessary for dorm autonomy, but it does not belong in the role of the self-rightous investigator passing moral judgment. SU students have had 99 years of moralizing from the Administration. The IDC should serve as a co-ordinating body helping each dorm to live the way each choses to live. IDC could be a valuable link between the student and the Administration, if it would only re-evaluate its role.

The Administration once argued that dorm autonomy was too big a job for the IDC to handle. It would be a pity now if IDC proved them right.

"Sure Dorm Autonomy means you can live the way you want. We're just here to tell you HOW you want to live."

Letters

To the Editor:

As one of the four officers of the senior class, I must reply to Mike Stephens' article in yesterdays paper. As usual with many of your paper's columns on campus affairs, it is grossly inaccurate and unfair.

Yes, Barry Randell promised to give the senior class its choice for commencement speaker, mainly because he had already done it by surveying the class as junior president. Number one choice of our class, the serious-minded leaders of tomorrow, was that erudite scholar, Johnny Carson. The number two choice was Everett Dirksen. Very consistent.

When these men proved unavailable, as well as the other names that were tallied in the poll last year, the members of the Senior Executive Council began a new list of names. Let me point out that there are close to ninety members on the Senior Exec, so we have a good cross-representation of the class.

Exec wanted William Buckley, who was willing to speak. Word reached some of the more radical members of the campus, who promised a violent protest during commencement if Buckley appeared.

Barry worked on a speaker over the summer and early in the school year, but since the Faculty Senate and our Chancellor have to approve any persons suggested, we encountered miles of red tape. They told us to hang it up for a while, that it was too early to ask anyone. You see, Mr. Stephens, we are powerless to invite a speaker ourselves. The invitation has to come from the University. And since they chose to sit on their executive posteriors and wait there was not much we could do.

Finally around mid-winter they began to send out invitations. We got rejections from Prime Minister Trudeau, Senator Edward Kennedy, and everyone else of any prominence. By the way Mr. Stephens, I suggest you check your sources. If you had, you would have found we have not asked congressmen "and so on down the line to Mayor Walsh." Good God!

We asked for Mayor Lindsay and were refused by the University, along with a sizable list of other choices of the Senior Exec. So speaking for myself and the other class officers, and the Senior Exec Council, who have all been working hard to plan a good commencement program, we would appreciate you recognizing the fact that it is not our fault that we do not have a speaker representing the wishes of the senior class. We tried, but you can't fight city hall or the Administration Building.

Jim Roe
Senior Class Treasurer

Booth apathetic?

Tony Vincent

There must be something to all the talk about God being dead. There sure are enough people bucking for his job.

An entire slate of candidates checked in this week. They're called the IDC Evaluation Committee and, like The Man Himself, they are apparently all-seeing and all-knowing.

Take Monday night, for instance. The committee descended upon lowly Booth Hall and condescended to mingle with the dorm council and its humble constituents to see if they were worthy of dorm autonomy.

The chief evaluator was Marc Cavanaugh, the newly elected president of IDC. Cavanaugh, a freshman from Watson, gave the upper classmen of Booth's dorm council a good talking to. They were all kinds of impressed.

In fact, one of them was heard to remark after the meeting, "Hey, I'm all kinds of impressed."

Mr. Cavanaugh told the dorm council that its "cultural and intellectual programming" was inadequate, that it did not sufficiently explain the various academic programming options to the dorm residents.

Then Steve Tober, president of Booth, informed Mr. Cavanaugh and his fellow evaluators that the dorm council members had discussed programming options with the residents, visiting them in their rooms. Mr. Tober said the residents generally wanted to see the dorm's movie program continued and more student-faculty discussions planned. The dorm council members said yes, that was right and they were in the process of arranging both things.

Mr. Cavanaugh and company seemed dismayed to learn that the residents of Booth Hall did not have 5,000 different programming proposals and told the dorm council they'd better get with it. For a freshman, Mr. Cavanaugh is pretty tough. (No, girls, not that kind of tough.)

Mr. Tober tried to explain to the evaluators that Booth is a fairly small dorm, whose residents are mostly upper classmen and that they are kept busy with little trivialities like studying and involved in one activity or another and that they didn't have time to participate let alone organize, very many "cultural and intellectual programs."

The evaluators would have none of it, however. A couple of them went out and spoke to some Booth residents. Once again they were shocked and dismayed.

"Do you know," said an evaluator, shaking his finger in righteous indignation, "that I asked one upper classman about dorm autonomy and all he talked about was the right to live as he pleased? Not a word about cultural and intellectual programs!"

Just shocking. No wonder when the Judgement Day, Wednesday night, came the heretics were damned to non-autonomy.

Funny thing about that, though. Nobody else has been damned to non-autonomy, not even good old Haven. IDC said Booth's upper classmen were apathetic, but the closest thing to a mass meeting anywhere near Haven occurred a few weeks back when some girl forgot to close her curtains.

When Haven distributed some survey's to its girls recently, it took two weeks to get the desired amount of returns. After a while they had to resort to putting up signs that read: "Only 20 more to go," then, "Only 10 more to go," and so on till the magic number was reached.

In Booth most of the 275 residents respondend to a visiting hour survey within three days.

But at the Judgement, Haven presented its petition, outgoing IDC president Peg Johnston said they were ready for the big step and "poof," Haven was autonomous. Booth was "apathetic."

"Wow, if Booth's apathetic," said one Haven resident, "I don't know what you'd call this place."

'Hard on crime' candidate; 'we have to have stability'

By KAY CHRISTENSEN
Associate Editor

Republican mayoral candidate for the city of Syracuse, Frank Gualteri, stressed his "hard on crime" position last night as he spoke to SU's Young Republicans in Hall of Languages.

"There is no question that we have to have stability, we have to have order, and we have to have law," said Gualteri. His emphasis on the crime problem reflects his background -- he is presently district attorney of Onondaga County.

"Our basic concern as prosecutors of Onondaga County is to protect the interests of the people and to make it as safe a community as possible," Gualteri explained.

While outlining the basic system of criminal government, Gualteri denounced the use and sale of narcotics, including marihuana. He also denounced the service of the Chief Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court, Earl Warren, noting that laws in the past decade have become more liberal.

Gualteri also apparently disapproves of the recent actions of the Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) on the Cornell campus. "Before SDS comes into Onondaga County, they had better think twice," he said. When a YR pointed out that SDS already exists at SU, there was laughter.

Concerning demonstrations in high schools, Gualteri advocates tighter internal discipline with both students and teachers. He does not believe that it is necessary to have policemen patrol schools, but "if necessary and if asked" he will delegate policemen to do so.

"Right now I'm too occupied with being District Attorney of Onondaga County to get down to specifics," offered Gualteri when asked questions by the YRs. He refused to comment specifically on low income housing, tax exemption lands of a private university, tax revenue, and capital punishment. He emphasized that it is only May, and the fall offers plenty of time to delineate specific proposals and views. He said he is studying the programs and issues, however.

Gualteri also commented on SU, calling it a "very active, very thriving institution." He noted that the University is the largest employer in the city of Syracuse, and the second largest in Onondaga County. Gualteri was graduated from SU and also attended law school here.

After Gualteri's short speech and question and answer session, the Young Republicans elected officers for the next year. Chuck Stoffel was elected president, defeating Neil Wallace; and John Reed was elected vice president, defeating Tom Malpass. Elected by white ballots were Greg Smith, treasurer; David Daland, corresponding secretary; and Mary Jo Hosney, recording secretary.

Outgoing officers are: Andy Rosenblatt, president; Chuck Stoffel, vice president; Sue Johnstown, treasurer; Lex Braley, corresponding secretary; and Mary Jo Hosney, recording secretary.

Daily Orange drug survey results will appear Friday

Marat Sade

directed by
g. e. moses

may 8-10, 15-17
8:00 p. m.
$3; students $2

a syracuse university
drama department
production

experimental theatre of...

UNIVERSITY REGENT THEATRE
820 EAST GENESEE ST.

NEW FACULTY AND GRADUATE HOUSING

Nob Hill, only a few minutes from SU, offers all the conveniences of luxury living in a serene atmosphere accented by a panoramic view. Applications for the moderately-priced suites are currently being accepted for the fall semester.

Full-color brochures and other information describing the abundant amenities are available to faculty, staff and graduate students by phoning 469-3211 between noon and 6 p.m.

University College lists offerings

University College, the continuing education college of Syracuse University, has planned approximately 100 courses for students who wish to attend the summer session. Among the courses offered in the humanities are: mythology, basic freshman English, major figures in English literature, beginning French, introduction to philosophy, logic, introduction to Judaism and Christianity and beginning Spanish.

Business courses to be offered will include: elementary accounting, corporation finance, marketing principles, personnel and industrial relations, and fundamentals of real estate.

Departments offering courses in the social sciences are anthropology, economics, history, geography, political science, psychology and sociology.

Registration is on June 5-6. Classes start on June 9 and continue through August 22.

GM

Why is Camaro the pace car again?

Official Indianapolis 500 Pace Car, Camaro SS Convertible with Rally Sport equipment and new Super Scoop hood.

Because it's the Hugger.

Camaro SS has been chosen to be the Indy 500 pace car for the second time in three years. That's because it has what it takes.

Engine choices start with a standard 300-hp 350-cu.-in. Turbo-Fire V8 and run up to a 325-hp 396-cu.-in. Turbo-Jet job. There's even a new Super Scoop hood you can order. It opens on acceleration, pouring cooler air into the engine for more go power.

The SS version of the Hugger grips the road with wide-oval tires on 14 x 7-inch-wide wheels, beefed-up suspension and power disc brakes.

The transmission comes linked to a 3-speed floor shift. If you want still more, there's a 4-speed Hurst shifter available.

Indy's tough. So's Camaro SS.

When it comes to pacesetting, it's pretty clear that Camaro knows its way around.

Start setting a pace of your own. At your Chevrolet dealer's now.

Putting you first, keeps us first.

CHEVROLET Pacesetter Values at our Sports Department.

Williams speech . . .

(Continued from page 1)

with the black people at the base. If black people were to leave, there would be no more base. Either some other group would have to take on the role of the "nigger" or everything else would fall apart and the people would just go mad. While he does not advocate the formation of a separate Afro-American nation, Williams did suggest that if it were possible it would be a good idea for all blacks to temporarily leave in order to see what would happen.

Not only does he feel that a re-vamping of the American system of government is necessary, but changes must also take place in education. Just as the notion of any pure white history or white economics is false he feels that the same holds true for pure black history or pure black economics–the one necessarily relates to the other.

Upon talking at length with John Williams, immediately following the discussion and later on at dinner, he expounded on the universal themes in "The Man Who Cried I Am" as well as his background. Williams feels that Max Reddick, a black writer and the central character of his book, is very much like any other man trying to establish an identity. It is harder, however, for Max Reddick because he is a black man in a white world–a world which will let him do everything but be what he is.

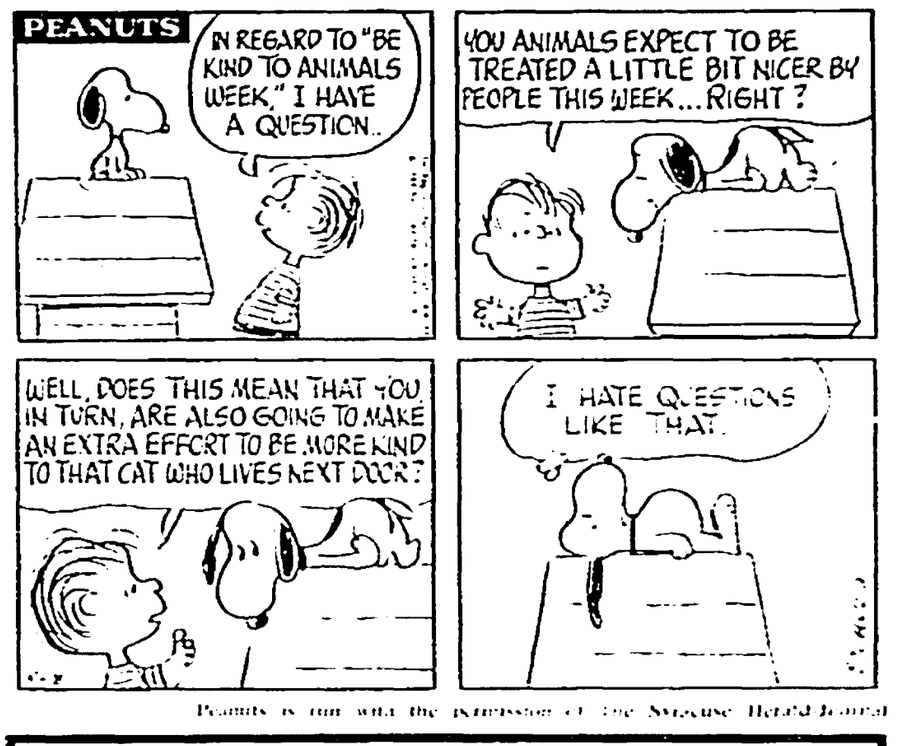
John William's career has also followed a pattern similar to that of Max Reddick. In 1950 William's received a degree from SU, in English, with a minor in journalism. He then worked for a brief time in Syracuse, later going on to work with various magazines.

Williams' first book was published in 1960, although he had previously published several brief articles and stories. Future plans include a novel which will be published some time next month and a literary anthology for college students, which he is working on at the present time.

Williams interview

(Continued from page 1)

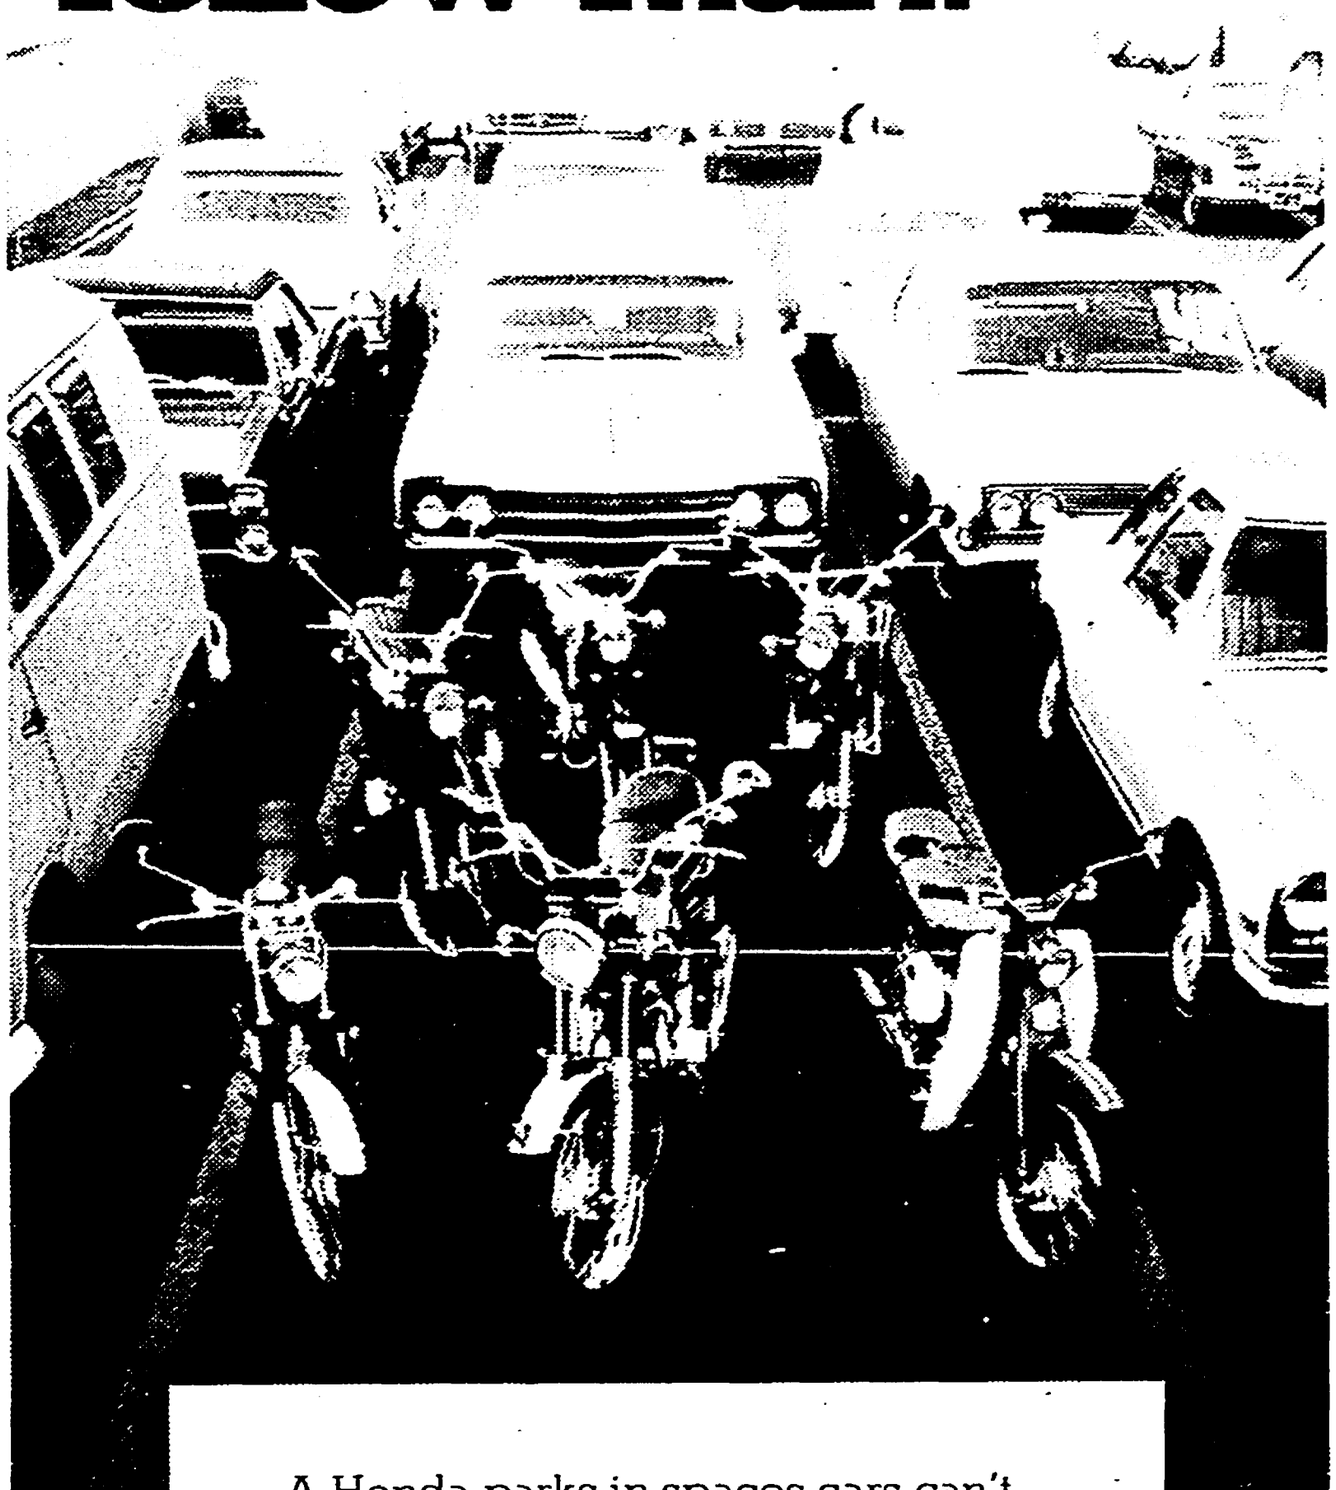
committed to opposing change.



Williams added that black students should not be involved in confrontations merely to act as the white man has acted for years. He advised that the students "be black, be better and be kinder than history has been to us."

Williams spoke of the legitimacy of Afro-American studies courses. There are several proposals however, with which he does not agree. He is against the barring of white students from these courses, the limiting of the faculty to black only and the creation of courses merely for the sake of expediency.

"What should be taught is the truth and it should be taught to all kinds of students and by all kinds of teachers."

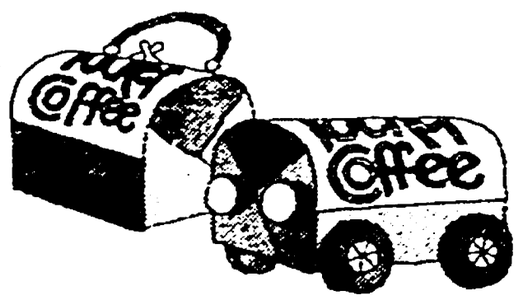


He told white students that they should demand their rights in taking such courses. "Truth," he explained, "hasn't been instituted in the curriculum simply in order to create a superior white man. Everyone should be enlightened."

Although he supports black community control, Williams said he is opposed to separatism and segregation. With a smile he told the audience "this nation has been integrated for a long long time in a nitty gritty sort of way—in between the bedsheets."

Peanuts is run with the permission of The Syracuse Herald Journal

Share the world with your fellow man.

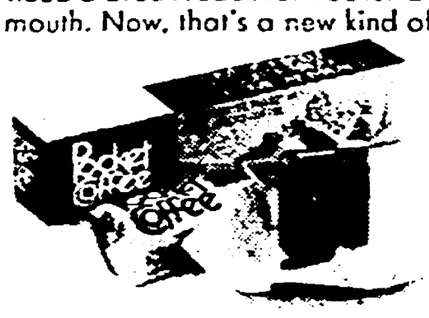


A Honda parks in spaces cars can't use. Runs around all week on a gallon of gas. Slashes your insurance tab. Costs less to keep up. And can cost less initially than a car down-payment. With so many things it's little about, isn't it ironical that a Honda can make you such a charitable B.M.O.C.?

HONDA

See your Honda dealer for a color brochure, safety pamphlet and "Invisible Circle" film, or write American Honda Motor Co., Inc., Dept. C-16, Box 50, Gardena, California 90247.

Pocket Coffee! What's that?



A new kind of coffee break that goes where you go.

If you're one of the people who often find you can't stop to get a cup of coffee when you need it, listen here. Pocket Coffee is a coffee break you can carry with you.

The man who dreamed up Pocket Coffee invented a way of putting some real brewed liquid coffee inside a delicious chocolate shell. Each piece is double-wrapped and packed in a three candy stick that fits neatly into your pocket or purse.

At work, on the road, or at play (you devil you), when you need a break reach for Pocket Coffee. Pop one into your mouth. Now, that's a new kind of coffee break.

Nobel prize-winning researcher to address sensory colloquium

Dr. H. Keffer Hartline, who received the 1967 Nobel prize in medicine or physiology, will be the speaker at the colloquium of the Laboratory of Sensory Communication, Syracuse University at 4 p.m. May 12 in Grant Auditorium at the Syracuse University College of Law.

Dr. Hartline, professor of biophysics at Rockefeller University, New York has made numerous pioneering contributions to research on vision for more than 40 years. It was for these contributions that he was awarded the Nobel prize. The subject of his lecture at the colloquium is "Visual Receptors and Retinal Interaction."

It was Dr. Hartline's pioneering research and development of research techniques that laid the foundation for today's understanding of the neural processes of vision. Through the use of Dr. Hartline's technique: scientists in many fields--chemistry, physiology, psychology and opthalmology--were able to make decisive steps in the investigation of animal and human visual systems.

As Dr. Hartline remarked in his Harvey Lecture (1942), "Individual nerve cells never act independently; it is the integrated action of all the units of the visual system that give rise to vision." For the past decade, Dr. Hartline's research has been devoted mainly to this problem.

Dr. Hartline was the first to record electrical signals directly from the human eye. Most of his research, however, has been done on eyes of the ancient horseshoe crab which, "although far removed in evolution," are suprisingly like those in higher animals and man.

Dr. Hartline received his M.D. from The John Hopkins University, studied physics as a Johnson Research Scholar, and subsequently joined the Johnson Foundation for Medical Physics at the University of Pennsylvania. In 1949 he became professor of biophysbiophysics at Johns Hopkins University and moved to Rockefeller University in 1953.

Dr. Hartline's honors and awards include the Howell award, the Warren medal, the Michelson award, and an honorary Sc.D. from Lafayette College. He is a member of a number of scientific societies including the National Academy of Arts and Sciences and is a Foreign member of the Royal Society in London, England.

DR. H. KEFFER HARTLINE

WAER shows: varied fare

The Black press will be the subject of a discussion at 5 p.m. today on WAER radio's Syracuse University Forum. Announcer Ken Montero will host Dr. Roland E. Wolseley, chairman of the Syracuse University School of Journalism magazine department.

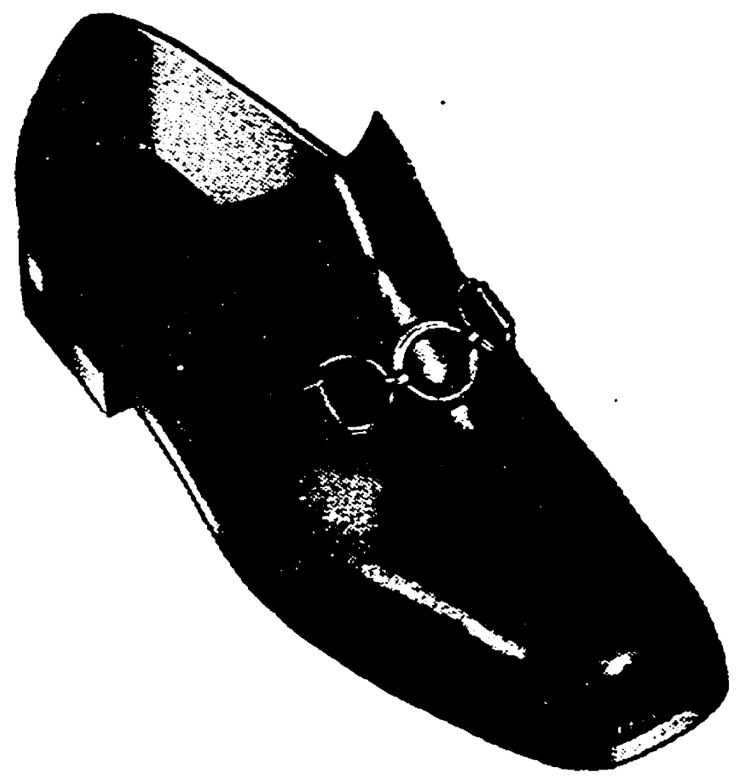
Also tonight, at 6 p.m., WAER will play recent motion picture soundtracks on the Hollywood Soundstage. Host Jason Squire will present music from "The Lion in Winter," which stars Peter O'Toole and Katharine Hepburn. The film won the Academy Award for Best Scoring.

The Hollywood Soundstage will also play the music from "Goodbye Columbus," which is based on Philip Roth's novella of the same name. Its music was written by the Association.

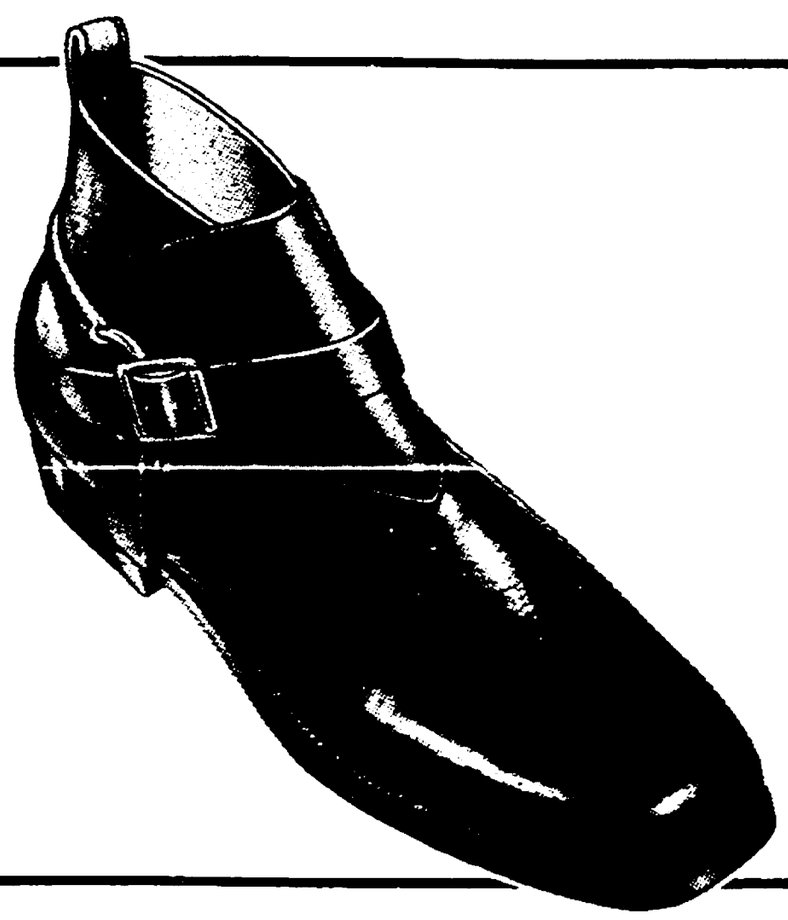
Senate rejects 10 constitutions

The following organizations have had their constitutions rejected by Undergraduate Senate, and will not be permitted the use of University facilities as of September 1, 1969. In order to be reinstated, these groups should contact either John Ross, Co-Op 1, or Gerald Horn, DellPlain 1.

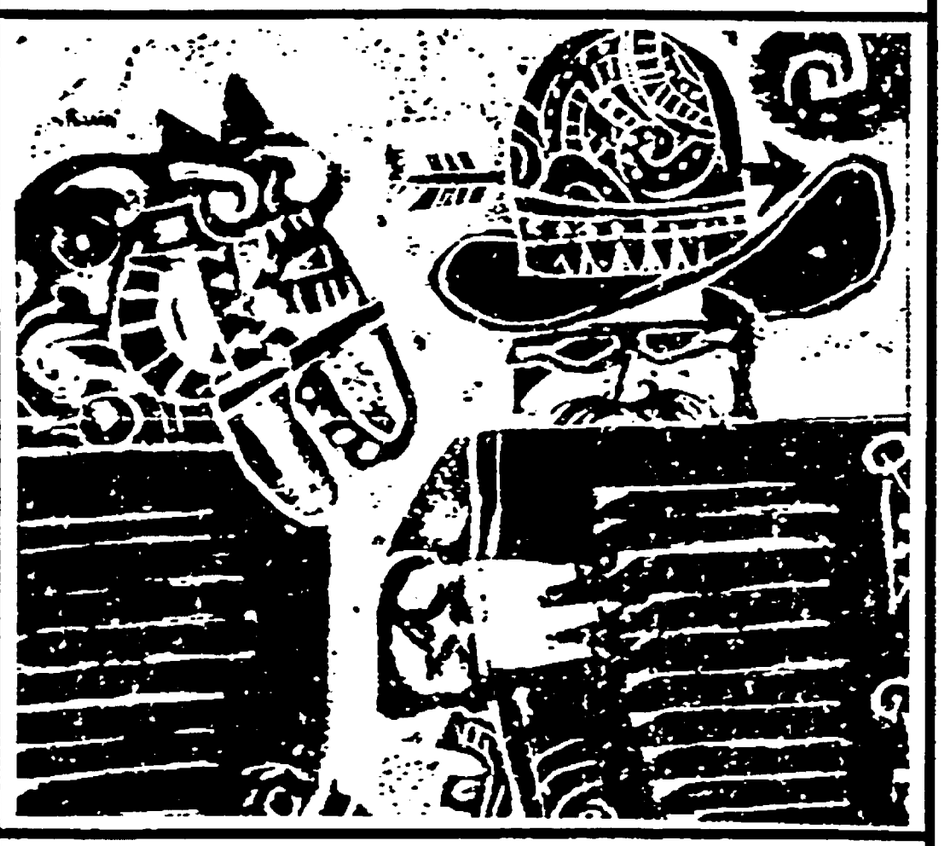
Society for Advancement of Management, Sound and Fury, Scabbard and Blade, Hillel, Spanish Club, Film Forum, Young Republicans, Wood Engineers Club, Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship, Students International Meditation Society.



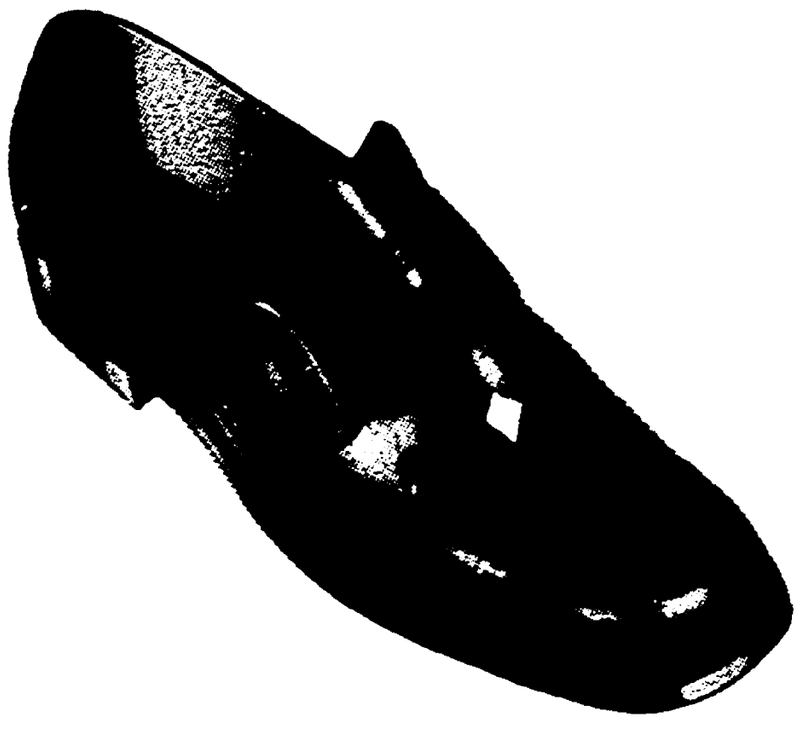
h.i.s



now at



Park Brannock



Big Brass with the blunt well-balanced European look and bold styling. In Dark Brown or Light Tan stained leather.

$20.00

PARK BRANNOCK

MEN'S DEPARTMENT • LOWER LEVEL

Anita Bolowsky and Jerry Sanders rehearse a scene from "Fiorello," a musical about the life of New York mayor Fiorello La Guardia. Miss Bolowsky plays La Guardia's first wife and Sanders, WFBL disc jockey and music director, plays the title role. The Pompeian Players production is being directed by Father Charles Borgogonoi of St. Thomas More Chapel. "Fiorello"will be shown May 13, 14 and 15 at 8 p.m. in Lowe's State Theater.

Prof finds teaching by TV in college as effective as classroom instruction

Teaching by television can be just as effective as classroom instruction, according to a Syracuse University professor.

Dr. Lawrence Myers Jr., chairman of the University's television-radio department, made a study for the U.S. Office of Education which showed that teachers can affect student behavior as much by a televised presentation as by being physically present in the classroom, and may even be able to project their personalities better on television.

Myers reported that "teachers on television can achieve significant changes in the moods of students, and can do so in positive directions and independently of student personality characteristics." Televised instruction, he said, "gave all students, no matter where located, a similar view and perception of the lesson."

His findings, Myers said, "constitues a strong endorsement for the use of television" and show that "television at the college level can, indeed, be a stimulating intellectual experience for students."

The experiments in the project, "Improving the Quality of Education by Identifying Effective Television Teachers," took five years to complete under a $71,075 grant.

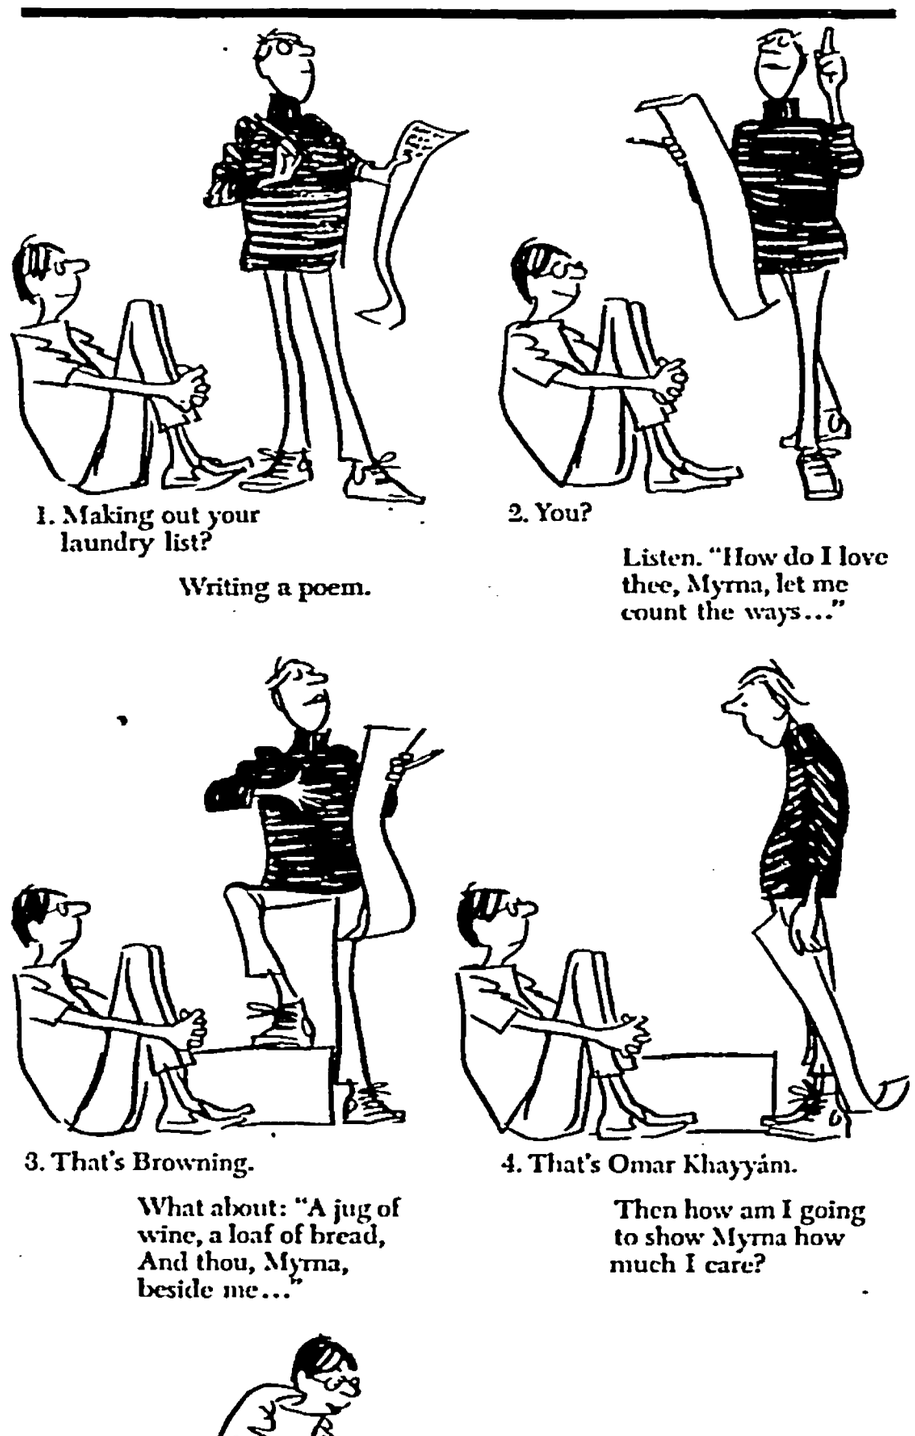
Myers wanted to devise a means of measuring the performance of the teacher on television. He developed a rating scale which he tested with a wide variety of teaching experiences, subject matter and forms of presentation. Professors presented televised and in-classroom lectures on chemistry, public address and communications, among other subjects. Students reported on their moods before and after the lectures.

In one phase of the project students representing a cross-section of Syracuse University undergraduates were asked to rate the importance they attached to adjectives describing an ideal teacher. Communicative ability and stimulation ("interesting and stimulating vs. boring and deadening") were rated "essential" by students. Control, assertiveness, composure, dynamism and friendliness were considered of "great importance." Wit, profundity ("profound and brilliant vs. shallow and mediocre") and intimacy were of "some importance."

When asked to define the ideal teacher men and women responded differently. Women rated friendliness, control, dynamism, composure and ease of note-taking as important in a lecturer. Men said they valued wit and intimacy in the presentation.

Orchestra to perform popular works

A family pops concert by the Syracuse Symphony Orchestra will officially close the orchestra's 1968-69 season Sunday, May 25 at 4 p.m. in Nottingham High School Auditorium.



The dollar concert will be conducted by Calvin Custer, assistant conductor. Featured soloists will be Philip MacArthur, principal oboist of the orchestra; Ellen Vincent, soprano and Michael O'Hanlon, tenor.

Custer has programmed "Rosamunde" Overture by Schubert, "The Winter's Passed" by Barlow, "Night on Bald Mountain" by Moussorgsky, "Sempre Libera" from Verdi's "La Traviata" as well as a duet from the opera's fourth act, Selections from "Brigadoon" by Loewe, "Marche Slave" by Tchaikovsky and "Pavane Pour L'Enfant Defunte" by Ravel.

Two special arrangements have been prepared by Custer for the pops program, Selections from "Oliver!" by Bart and "Mission Impossible" by Schifrin.

The Symphony Guild is in charge of ticket sales for the event.

FOR MOTHER'S DAY
(Next Sunday)
our special gifts and cards are the greatest !
THE "BOOKSTALL"
147 Marshall Street
Fascinating Gifts — Fine Stationery — Fabulous Cards
43 years by the Campus
Your Friendly Alum Mrs. "B."

For details about careers at Equitable, see your Placement Officer, or write: Lionel M. Stevens, Manager, College Employment.

THE EQUITABLE

The Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States
1285 Avenue of the Americas, New York, New York 10019
An Equal Opportunity Employer, M/F © Equitable 1968

The SCENE

Every night is a weekend night.

Cili Drive and Towpath Rd. off Erie Blvd. in DeWitt

TONIGHT: ADMISSION ½ PRICE.

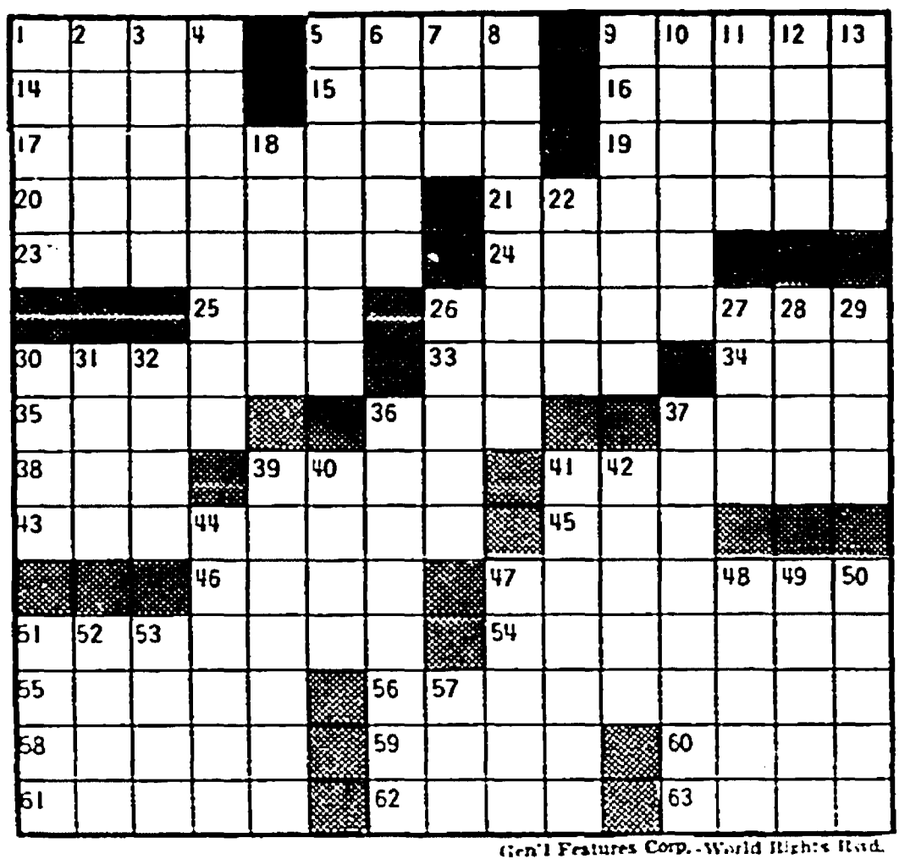
Violin recital

Christine Haarvig, a Junior in Violin, will give a recital on Tuesday, May 13, at 4:15 p.m. in Crouse College Auditorium.

The program consists of works by Bach, Beethoven, Vieuxtemps, and Copland.

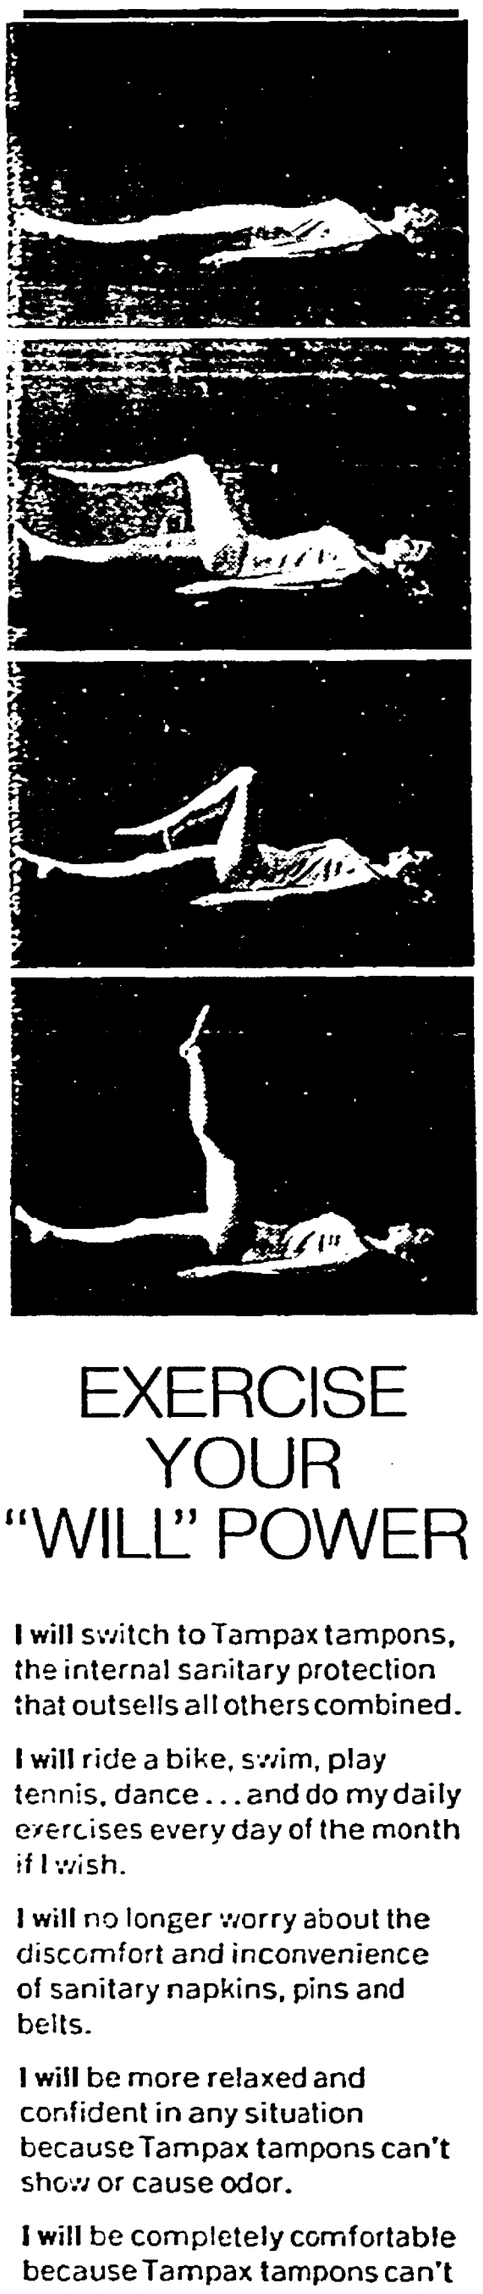
Miss Haarvig is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L.M. Haarvig of Des Plaines, Illinois. She studies at the School of Music with Professor Louis Krasner.

The performance is open to the public.



DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE

ACROSS



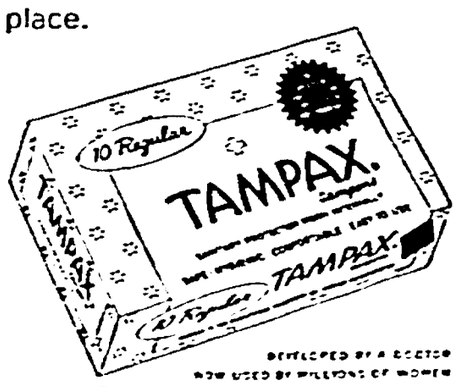
1 Strike with hand.
5 Hurry along.
9 Greek letter.
14 Mostel.
15 River into the Seine.
16 Talk of the town.
17 Pine tree, for instance.
19 Sluggish.
20 Kid.
21 Planet.
23 Homework.
24 Famous English merchant (1649-1721).
25 Air group: Initial.
26 Star.
30 Puck, for one.
33 Misplaced.
34 Winter sport gear.
35 Blow.
36 Opposing vote.
37 Ancient city of Greece.
38 Trouble.
39 River into the Severn.
41 Trees.
43 ... heart, garden plant.
45 French month.
46 Amsterdam: Abbr.
47 Does damage to: Colloq.: 2 words.
51 Man from Indiana.
54 Say again.
55 Luther of stage and screen.
56 Among other things: 2 words.
58 Loner among the elephants.
59 Attire for a ballet dancer.
60 Famous Connie.
61 Lobstermen's gear.
62 Progenitor of the Hebrews.
63 Strike down.

DOWN

1 VIP in the musical world.
2 Landing place a for riverboat.
3 Districts.
4 Egyptian city: 2 words.
5 Playwright Rattigan.
6 Contrite ones.
7 Cinnabar.
8 Poet laureate. (1850-92).
9 One of three.
10 College in New York City.
11 Ostrich's cousin.
12 In shreds.
13 "Vissi d'____"
18 Character in "Hamlet."
22 Dines.
26 In company with.
27 Royale, for example.
28 Outer layer.
29 Buss.
30 Thrust.
31 Man's nickname.
32 Prevail.
36 Humbly penitent.
37 Witty statements.
39 Thinks the world of.
40 Carpentry accessory.
41 Unpaid athlete.
42 More levelheaded.
44 Slacken: 2 words.
47 Please: Ger.
48 Pacific Coast shrub.
49 City on the Mohawk.
50 Pointed.
51 Deer.
52 Fragrance.
53 Girl's name.
57 Gist: Colloq.

Gen'l Features Corp.-World Rights Rsrd.

EXERCISE YOUR "WILL" POWER



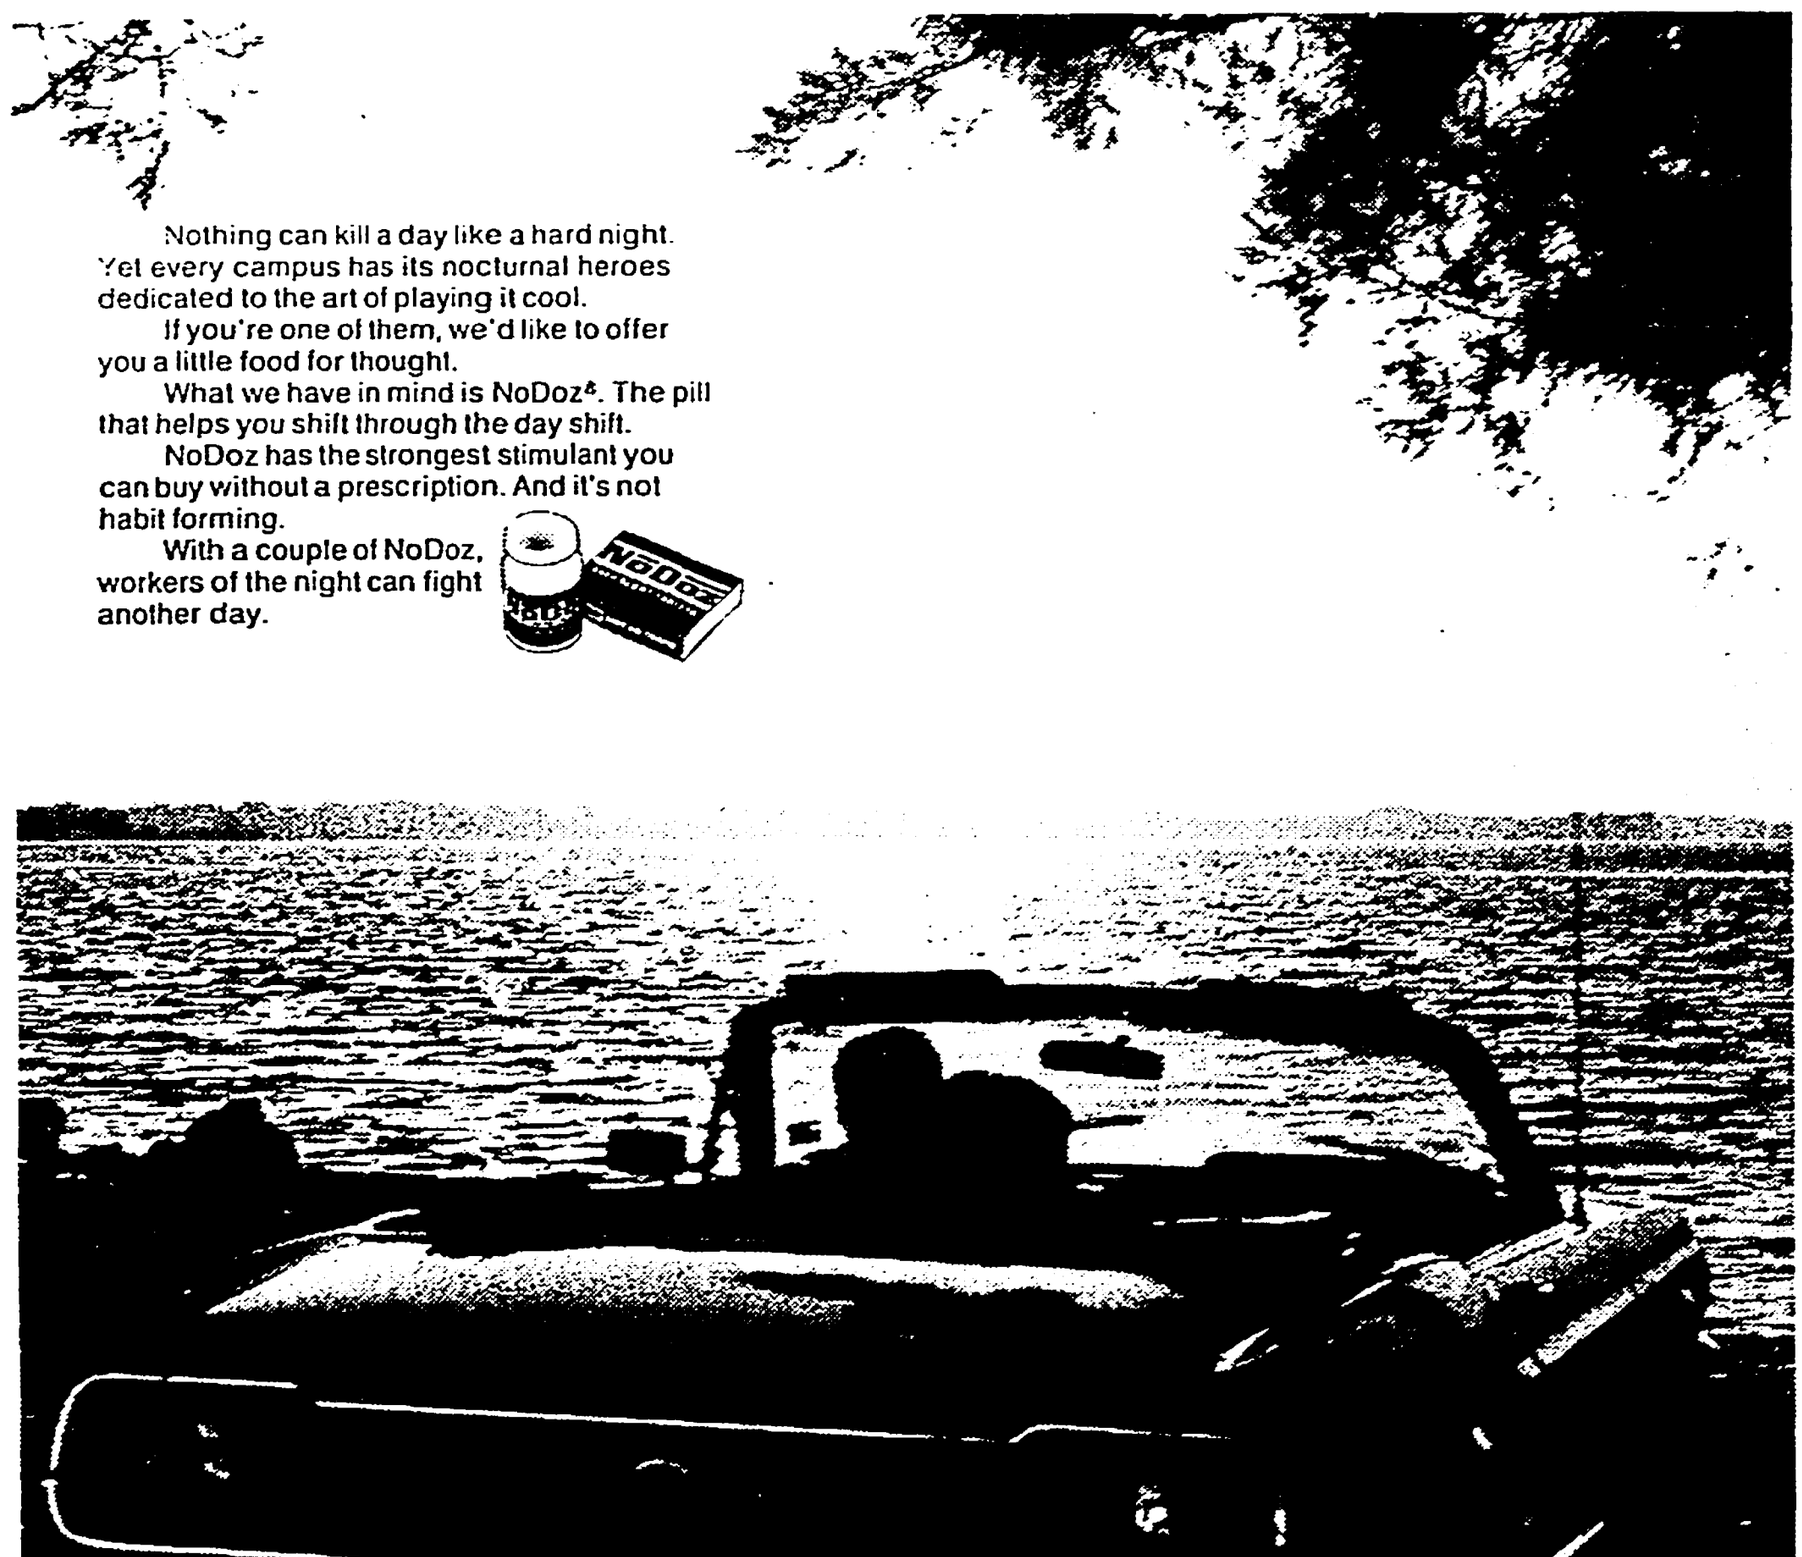
I will switch to Tampax tampons, the internal sanitary protection that outsells all others combined.

I will ride a bike, swim, play tennis, dance . . . and do my daily exercises every day of the month if I wish.

I will no longer worry about the discomfort and inconvenience of sanitary napkins, pins and belts.

I will be more relaxed and confident in any situation because Tampax tampons can't show or cause odor.

I will be completely comfortable because Tampax tampons can't be felt when they're properly in place.



DEVELOPED BY A DOCTOR
NOW USED BY MILLIONS OF WOMEN

TAMPAX® TAMPONS ARE MADE ONLY BY TAMPAX INCORPORATED, PALMER, MASS.

©1969 Bristol-Myers Co

For guys who work night shifts a pill for the day shift.

Nothing can kill a day like a hard night. Yet every campus has its nocturnal heroes dedicated to the art of playing it cool.

If you're one of them, we'd like to offer you a little food for thought.

What we have in mind is NoDoz®. The pill that helps you shift through the day shift.

NoDoz has the strongest stimulant you can buy without a prescription. And it's not habit forming.

With a couple of NoDoz, workers of the night can fight another day.

'Sole power'

Syracusans walk to raise funds

By KAREN ELDEN

"Sole Power," not of the spirit but of the foot, is the catchword for the Walk of Development program on Sunday, May 18.

The Freedom from Hunger Campaign is sponsoring this 27-mile march around Syracuse to raise enough money to build two Peace Corps schools, one in Botswana and the other in Ghana, and a second Day Care School in Syracuse.

The march begins at 8 a.m. at LeMoyne College and should reach the University area around 10 a.m. Anyone can participate in the march who has a sponsor or sponsors--a friend, a family, a sorority or fraternity, a small business, or a corporation. There will be checkpoints along the way (refreshments will be served) so that one can pick up the walk anywhere en route.

Within the next week, sponsor sheets will be available at Richards Cottage, 900 University Avenue. Prior to the march, the sponsor must decide to pay either a lump sum or so many cents per mile--there must be an agreement of price before the walk is begun.

Such programs have been held before: students in Fargo, N.D., raised $70,000 through the Walk for Development program and 3,500 participants in Eugene, Ore., walked 32 miles, raising $30,000.

If there are enough SU students interested, a car pool or bus will be provided to take the participants to LeMoyne. There is a meeting tomorrow night at 6 p.m. at Richards Cottage. For further information, call Diann Kleinman or Ellen Colombo, X2786.

UU bull session plans unique co-op

By MARILYN MILBACK

"Right now you have the chance to hear a poetry reading or an art historian speak. Should we all leave?"

This is the way Rev. Harvey Bates started the University Union Bull session on co-ed and co-op dorms yesterday afternoon in the Noble Room of Hendricks Chapel.

In his opening comments, Rev. Bates described an experiment in urban living he had been thinking about for some time. In his co-op the young, old, professional and members of the working class would all live together. They would eat together and participate in discussions of various social problems. Ideally, the members would re-work the Ten Commandments for modern use. The only prerequisite for joining the co-op would be a Christian belief.

The discussion was then opened to the group with the focus on working out a model co-ed, co-op for the University community. Ideas from students living in co-ops, fraternity houses, cottages and dorms were offered.

Rev. Bates suggested that perhaps his plan could be modified to fit the University community. In the co-op would be students, faculty members and administrators. It was generally agreed by those attending, that this would be a very difficult arrangement, because it was felt that the atmosphere would not be a relaxing one for everyone.

One student suggested that the University should provide more apartment housing. He felt that this met the needs of the more mature student better than any facility now existing. The apartments could have a common lounge for TV, card playing and general relaxation.

The discussion strayed far from its topic when the group began to discuss the greek image on campuses today.

One student felt it was impossible to organize any kind of "living experiment." She felt that people find their own friends and living companions and this experiment would not allow this freedom any more than the present system.

WANTED for PSYCHOLOGICAL EXPERIMENT

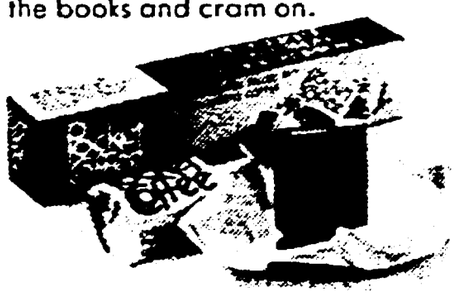
Women at least 21 years of age, with at least a high school eduaction. Participants will be paid at least $2.00 per hour. If interested, call Upstate Medical Center at 473-5627. If no answer, 473-5632. Ask for Mrs. Harter.

Call between hours 8:30 to 5 p.m.

SUMMER FASHION OPPORTUNITY

In your home town - World Leader in Fashion Magic "®" Jewelry will have both summer and part time job openings for university students in various parts of the country. You will earn above average pay, set your own working hours, and find fun and glamour in the wonderful world of Fashion. Interviews will be held on campus soon. Contact Mrs. Jones at the Placement Center Ext. 3618.

Pocket Coffee! What's that?



A new kind of coffee break for cramming collegians.

From freshman to senior year, the "cram" is a fact of life for most students. Just before mid-semester and again at end-term you burn the midnight oil, review mountains of books and consume gallons of coffee.

Pocket Coffee, the new kind of coffee break, consists of a delicious chocolate shell full of real liquid coffee ...the space age answer to the students' age old problem.

Don't stop to make or get coffee, pop a Pocket Coffee into your mouth, get your coffee and eat your chocolate too (a great energy source). Pack Pocket Coffee in with the books and cram on.

"GO!—FOR THE FURY, FORCE AND FUN OF if_
A movie so brilliant, so special that it's dangerous to write about if_ I'll be talking about if_forever."—LOOK

"ANGRY, TOUGH AND FULL OF STING!" -LIFE

"WILL PROBABLY BE THE BIGGEST MOVIE ON COLLEGE CAMPUSES SINCE 'THE GRADUATE'!"—VILLAGE VOICE

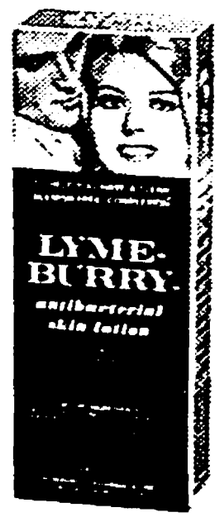
"LET IT SUFFICE TO SAY THAT if_IS A MASTERPIECE, reason enough to rank Anderson among cinema's major artists."—PLAYBOY

"THE MOST INTERESTING FILM SO FAR THIS YEAR...
A superb job... if_is a brilliant and disturbing film." VOGUE

"IF YOU'RE YOUNG, YOU'LL REALLY DIG if_If you're not so young, it's more reason than ever to go see what it's all about!"
—COSMOPOLITAN

PARAMOUNT PICTURES presents A MEMORIAL ENTERPRISES FILM

if....



....which side will you be on?

Introducing MALCOLM McDOWELL · CHRISTINE NOONAN · RICHARD WARWICK · DAVID WOOD
Screenplay by ROBERT SWANN · DAVID SHERWIN · Directed by LINDSAY ANDERSON · Produced by MICHAEL MEDWIN and LINDSAY ANDERSON · COLOR · A PARAMOUNT PICTURE

COMING THIS SUMMER TO A THEATRE NEAR YOU!

Tropical LYME-BURRY

a new anti-bacterial skin lotion that soothes, clears complexion

A new, young way to refreshen your skin . . . Lymeburry anti-bacterial lotion gives fast relief from acne pimples*, oily skin and minor skin blemishes. Its exclusive formula makes it an invigorating after shave anti-bacterial lotion as well. Lymeburry—the soothing first aid treatment for your skin, made from the aromatic oils of fresh tropical limes.

*externally caused

"The refreshing breeze in a bottle" $1.25

FREE

sample of Lymeburry Lotion at your local drugstore with this advertisement

Top two seniors: very busy people

Peggy Ann Lentz, salutatorian, and Peter Michael Silvaggio, valedictorian, of the Syracuse University Class of 1969, will be introduced at the annual Honors Convocation in Hendricks Chapel tonight at 8 p.m.

Miss Lentz, is a geography honors candidate in the College of Liberal Arts. She has maintained a 3.890 cumulative average out of a possible 4.0 in her four years at Syracuse.

A member of Phi Beta Kappa, Miss Lentz now holds a University Trustee scholarship and a New York State Regents scholarship. She has accepted a National Science Foundation fellowship to Clark University, Worcester, Mass., for graduate work in September. She will work at Clark this summer, writing a book on "American Urban Places" with Gerald J. Karaska, associate professor of geography at Syracuse University.

Although she accepted the NSF fellowship to Clark, she had been offered National Defense Education Act fellowships at Clark, Cornell University and the University of Chicago, a fellowship at the University of Wisconsin and a Herbert H. Lehman Fellowship.

Miss Lentz worked in Clevelend, Ohio, last summer as an intern in public administration sponsored by the American Society for Public Administration. She spent the summer of 1967 working in mental health research, and traveled to a spa in Bab Salvuflen, Germany, in the summer of 1966 to work in a children's cure home.

Peter Michael Silvaggio, has a 3.907 average and is in the physics honors program.

Elected to Phi Beta Kappa in his junior year, Silvaggio is also a member of Phi Kappa Phi, Pi Mu Epsilon and Phi Eta Sigma.

He won a fellowship from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration last summer for the Summer Institute on Space Physics at Columbia University and graduated first of 30 students in the program. He has a teaching assistantship with the same program for this summer, and will leave the first week in August to travel to NASA centers throughout the United States.

Silvaggio has accepted a fellowship at Cornell University for graduate work in September, but was also offered a scholarship to the University of Colorado, a fellowship at the University of Wisconsin, an alternate fellowship at Harvard, and a New York State Regents fellowship. He has been named a Woodrow Wilson fellowship designate, and an alternate for a New York State Regents scholarship in arts, sciences and engineering.

PEGGY ANN LENTZ

SU soph wins beauty crown

By MARY TAYLOR

A native of Burlington, Vermont, Miss Sanders enjoys sky-diving during the summer. For the talent competition, the new Miss Syracuse exhibited several of her art works and played a piano solo.

Her prizes include, besides the traditional trophy, a $300 scholarship, a diamond ring, a wardrobe, and a record library.

Miss Sanders, a sister of Alpha Chi Omega, was Miss Aphrodite last year.

Mary Jo Sanders, a sophomore sky-diver in art education has won the Miss Greater Syracuse Pageant.

Miss Sanders won the title Saturday night in the contest sponsored by the Syracuse Jaycees. She will represent the city of Syracuse at the Miss New York State Pageant at Oleans in July. Miss New York will go to the Miss America Pageant in the fall.

Declaration for art degree

Freshmen enrolled in the School of Art who wish to earn the Bachelor of Fine Arts degree in Art Education should file a declaration of intent before the school year ends.

Dr. Michael F. Andrews announced that this should be done so that the freshmen applications for dual enrollment in the Art and Education Schools can be processed during the summer. Application forms are available in the Art Education Offices, 31-32 Smith Hall.

JIFFY KING

SPECIAL

Monday thru Friday, 2-5 p.m.

10¢ OFF ALL SUBS
727 South Crouse
in the Arcade

LABORATORY ASSISTANTS

Full time-to do research on solution properties of proteins. B. S. Degree in chemistry preferred, but Biology Major with background in chemistry will also be considered. Interested in instrumental techniques desirable but not an absolute requisite.

If interested, contact M. J. Kronman, Dept. of Biochemistry, State University of N. Y., Upstate Medical Center 473-5865

An Equal Opportunity Employer.

6 jobs in 6 years is called job hopping?

Not necessarily. Not at Du Pont.

We have a practice called "planned mobility," a kind of intramural job hopping. It means you don't go into a training program. You go to work—at different growth jobs that broaden you professionally, benefit you personally, and help you find the specific field you want to grow in. Here's how it worked for Jim Davis, an M.E. from the University of Pittsburgh:

"My first assignment was installation of improved polymer transfer systems," says Jim. "Then some research. A patent was issued on my device to apply steam to a running threadline. Next I was a college recruiter. After that I worked on a five-year forecast of the company's engineering needs. Now I'm in a cost reduction group."

For Jim, it added up to six assignments in six years. This may be some kind of a record. But he didn't waste time. Every day of it was solid profit.

Your Du Pont recruiter is a guy a lot like Jim. Ask him about planned mobility. Ask him anything. The coupon will get you some background information before you meet him.

DU PONT
College Relations

An Equal Opportunity Employer (M/F)

Du Pont Company
Room 6689
Wilmington, DE 19898

I'd like your latest information on opportunities at Du Pont for graduates with degrees in _____

Name _____

University _____

Degree _____ Graduation Date _____

Address _____

City _____ State _____

Zip _____

Happenings on the Hill

CAMPUS NOTICES must be brought to the Daily Orange, 1101 East Adams St., before 3 p.m. on the day before publication. They are to be typed, double space, and left on the first desk on the left as you enter the second floor.

THURSDAY

CHAPEL CHOIR MEMBERS remember this Thursday's rehearsal is from 10-12 p.m. Co-chairman elections will also take place.

GOON SHOW GOONS rehearsal today, 7 p.m. Women's Bldg. Rec. Lounge. Most important--all must attend. Questions? Call Ned Fleischer, X2629.

YESTERDAY, TODAY AND TOMORROW, Italian film starring Sophia Loren. This color flick can be seen tonight in Gifford Aud. at 7 and 9 p.m. Admission $1, sponsored by Il Circolo Italiano.

UJB FULL SESSION 6:30 p.m. Chapel House, to elect officers.

BOOTH 3-CLASS OF '69 reunion tonight, 8 p.m. at Lee's on Wescott St. Questions? Call Etsler, X3071.

WATSON ACADEMIC COMMITTEE 1968 Syracuse football season with Ben Schwartzwalder as chief speaker in informal discussion, tonight, 8 p.m., Watson Main Lounge.

DRAFT COUNSELING the Syracuse Draft Counseling Service and Law Students Civil Rights Reserach Council will hold draft counseling from 7-9 p.m. in room 101, White Hall.

CONFESSIONS at St. Thomas More Chapel today, 7-8 p.m.; Saturday 3:30-5 and 7-8 p.m. Before or after any mass upon request.

STUDENT SERVICES meeting at 10:00 p.m. in room 354 Dellplain. Questions, call Steve 2023.

WAA TENNIS TEAM match with Brockport scheduled for yesterday has been postponed until today at 3 p.m. at Skytop. In case of rain, the match will be held in Gym A of the women's building.

ALL WAA board members and club participants going to the picnic today meet at the Women's building at 4:30 for a ride.

ANYONE INTERESTED in being a WAA Chairman write an application and leave in 202 WB.

JUNIOR WELLS and JOHN HAMMOND at Jabberwocky. Two shows at 8 and 10 p.m. Tix at door for $2.50.

FRIDAY

DRAMA DEPT.: Would you believe? 5 p.m. Dracula will be presented at the Experimental Theatre. A natural follow-up to Marat/Sade.

PHI DELTA THETA Informal rush Sunday, May 11, from 2-4 p.m. All are invited.

ITALIAN FILM SERIES: "Before the Revolution" (1964) directed by B. Bertolucci. Kittredge, 7 and 9 p.m. -- $1.

GRAD STUDENTS Pot-Luck supper from 6-8 p.m. at Chapel House. Sponsored by Lutheran Campus Ministry. Baby Sitting provided.

SABBATH EVE services, 7:30 p.m. Hendricks Chapel.

JUNIOR WELLS AND JOHN HAMMOND at Jabberwocky. Three shows 7:30, 9:30 and 11:15 p.m. Tickets $2.50 each show at HBC or door.

WAA RIDING CLUB members and other interested women students - club meeting at 7:30 p.m. in the Alumnae lounge of the Women's Building. Questions, call Kristi X2138.

GENERAL

"FIORELLO" tickets can be purchased at the Newman Center. The Pompeian Player's production will be at Loew's Theater, May 13-15. For info call the Newman Center, X2600 or 478-5959.

SUICIDES ANONYMOUS: the night ear--Call 422-1000, 6 p.m.-6 a.m., M-F.

SU DRAMA DEPARTMENT will present "Marat/Sade" at the Experimental Theater, May 8-10; 15-17, 8 p.m. A new concept in theater

UU PRESENTS "Othello," Sunday, 7 and 9 p.m. in Gifford Aud. $1 admission.

SENIOR EXEC applications. Submit an index card including name, address, extension; on back activities and ideas to Phi Psi c/o Lou Brindis by May 9.

JUNIOR WELLS and his Chicago blues band plus John Hammond at Jabberwocky for Spring Weekend, May 8, 9, 10. Tix on sale for $2.50 at HBC.

STRAWBERRY BREAKFAST tickets are on sale all this week from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the counter in HBC lobby. Price $1.25 per ticket.

DAILY MASSES - 12:05 and 4:05 Monday to Friday at Hendricks Chapel. Saturdays at 5:05, St. Thomas More Chapel.

ANY FRESHMEN, Sophomores, or Juniors interested in a new girl's co-op call Linda Jansen X3046 or X3047 or attend the IDC meeting Thursday 7:30 at 204 HL.

Cope: 14 points . . .

(Continued from Page 2)

13. Population, resources, and the state of productivity throughout the world must not be in such imbalances and tension that nationalism and aggression are encouraged. We should endeavor to reduce the quantity of world population, but this must include selective procreation and increase of those with the best genetic heritages. Birth control is a weapon of international politics. After consideration of the balances of resources and peoples, free countries should be encouraged to increase their populations to the optimum. Dictatorships should be induced to reduce their populations.

14. Our foreign policy is hampered by a noisy minority of complainers. Many policy critics are frustrated individuals who have a personal need to feed their sense of importance by criticizing our government. In spite of good intentions, in effect, the critical claque weakens the power of American foreign policy to defend freedom. This critical claque show inexperience, immaturity, and lack of judgment. Either they do not have the facts or the facts are disregarded. Actually, most of these individuals involved are quite sincere, some are dupes of our enemies, and a few are enemy agents themselves. The plaintive and piteous cries about our alleged shames and crimes, when used as a reason for a foreign policy retreat, in fact, represents an inappropriate method of national self-criticism. Noisy critics of our foreign policy should be disregarded until they will spend a decent and proportionate amount of time in investigating the schemes of opposition. Then they will have to admit the realistic and disagreeable fact that the major problem is the conspiracy of dictatorship, under a guise of false morality, intent upon the destruction of our freedoms, our wealth, and our democratic power.

In conclusion, it is time to be tough for liberty, it is time for liberty to be tough!

ANSWER TO PUZZLE

S	L	A	P		T	R	O	T		T	H	E	T	A
Z	E	R	O		E	U	R	E		R	U	M	O	R
E	V	E	R	G	R	E	E	N		I	N	E	R	T
L	E	A	T	H	E	R		N	E	P	T	U	N	E
L	E	S	S	O	N	S		Y	A	L	E
			A	S	C		A	S	T	E	R	I	S	K
S	P	R	I	T	E		L	O	S	T		S	K	I
T	H	U	D			C	O	N			E	L	I	S
A	I	L		A	V	O	N		A	S	P	E	N	S
B	L	E	E	D	I	N	G		M	A	I
			A	M	S	T		B	A	N	G	S	U	P
H	O	O	S	I	E	R		I	T	E	R	A	T	E
A	D	L	E	R		I	N	T	E	R	A	L	I	A
R	O	G	U	E		T	U	T	U		M	A	C	K
T	R	A	P	S		E	B	E	R		S	L	A	Y

Brigit Bardot

and

Jeanne Moreau

in

VIVA MARIA

at

Gifford Auditorium

Saturday Night

7 p.m. & 9:15 p.m.

Presented by Syracuse Film Academy

Admission $1.00

Get in on GANGSTERS by Valstar

From LONDON Gangsters makes fun of the wet look, in raincoats, skirts, pants, etc.

Umberto Salon and Boutique

302 S. Warren St. Syracuse, N. Y.

422-9500

Campus Classified

GR 6-5571, Ext. 2314

Rates minimum of 15 words:

1 day	1.15
2 days	2.25
3 days	3.30
4 days	4.30
5 days	5.25
6 days	6:15

To place a classified ad, call GR 6-5571, ext. 2314, between 1 and 3 p.m. Ad must be placed 2 days in advance. Every word over 15 costs 5c extra per day.

ALL ADS MUST BE PREPAID.

MISCELLANEOUS

RENT if you can't buy! T.V.s, tape recorders, typewriters. By week, month or semester. Reasonable rates. S. U. BOOKSTORE, GR 6-5541, x 2426.

ALTERATIONS DONE within 24 hours. Call for an appointment. Lillian Potter, 207 Comstock, 478-5847.

PRIVATE DRIVING LESSONS — automatic or standard shift. Full or refresher courses. Qualified professional instructors. Pickup service. Auto Driving Academy, GR 6-3995.

ATTENTION FDDAT CHAIRMAN — Fulton paper has a surplus of seconds in toilet tissue - decorative colors - FREE DELIVERY — GL 8-6100 or GL 8-6101. Phone 24 hr. service.

BEAUTIES! Pure silk scarves from India, last bastion on hand-loomed, hand-blocked prints, gorgeous colors. Various sizes. Bookstall, 147 Marshall St.

SUMMER JOBS: Counselors: private boys' camp: Adirondacks: College men of above average physical fitness and judgment: tripping, riflery, canoeing, nurse and cook jobs open. Adirondack Swim Camp. 39 Mill Valley Road. Pittsford, New York 14534.

SUMMER JOB — Full time, Syracuse area, need car and phone. Call on established customers. Eight year old business needs new representative. Contact Dean Wallace, Jr., 2 Oakwood Circle, Storrs, Conn., 06268 or call 203-429-6152.

FOR OLD FASHIONED MOTHERS ! (Some still Cook.) Julia Childs and Joyce Chen Cook Books. Hottest T. V. cooking program on the air. Bookstall.

AUTO DRIVING - three hour prelicensing course given Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. SULLIVAN'S DRIVING SCHOOL - 463-3451.

MOTHER'S DAY CARDS for Grandma and Dad, yet! Specials for aunt like a mother, friend's mother, etc. The Bookstall, 147 Marshall St.

LOST: Monday p.m. vicinity Smith. White wool shirt with black pin stripes. Please call Judy 3304.

"IT MUST BE HARD TO BE A MOTHER" - cutest book ever. Mother will laugh and maybe drop a tear. $1.95. with mailing envelope. Hill Bookstall.

FOR SALE

1965 OLDSMOBILE convertible. Red. 442. Power steering. Power brakes, excellent condition. reasonable. Call 637-3430 after 5.

ROOM AIR CONDITIONERS — 5,000, 6,000, 7,000 and 9,000 BTUS. These are '68 Models, some scratched or dented, some used, all guaranteed — priced for students pocketbooks 446-6321.

1966 MUSTANG — Blue power steering, power brakes, automatic transmission, excellent condition. 474-0471 after 5.

'63 RED CORVAIR Monza — Excellent condition. stick shift. radial tires. Azria's Esso, 2974 E. Genesee.

1953 PACKARD CLIPPER — 47,000 miles, good body, very good engine $125 or best offer 478-1140.

1966 MUSTANG, 289 BRG. 4-speed, best offer. 478-4421 after 7 p.m.

'63 PORSCHE COUPE - AM-FM, 1600-super, Michelin X. Call after 4:00 446-8017.

UNIVERSITY EAST, 2 family house. 2 bedroom flats, modernized, fireplace, porches, 2 car garage. 2 bedrooms 3rd floor $15,500. Owner. 469-4095.

1968 CHEVROLET — runs excellent, body very good. 12,000 miles on engine overhaul, burns no oil, new brakes, $150.00 firm. Call 475-3214 after 5:30 p.m.

1967 MGB convertible, wire wheels, snow tires, radio, rear deck carrier, phone — 468-4128.

MUST SELL — going into Service — 1956 Ford V8 292. Call 478-0091 after 5 p.m.

MERCEDES '59 - 219 engine record, AM-FM, 6 new tires. Fine condition throughout. 655-8353.

USED FURNITURE. Also 1962 Valiant, 4-door, r and h, auto. trans. call 474-0190.

GRADUATING - desperate to sell 6' inlaid oak bar, barnwood facing, shelf space, 4 stools, $45.00. 474-8393.

1964 PORSCHE SUPER, like new, leather, AM-FM new Pirellis, Fog lights, ski rack, after 5 p.m. 474-2674.

VW '68 BUG - warranty, AM-FM radio, factory air cond., low mileage. Excellent condition. 446-3795.

1968 CORVETTE convertible, blue, 2,900 miles, full power, perfect condition $4600.00 GR 9-6250 or 474-5335.

FOR RENT

FURNISHED ROOMS from $40.00 and up. Very close to campus. Kitchen privileges. 446-6451 or 478-5380.

UNIVERSITY WALK'G DISTANCE — Furnished, heated efficiency and one bedroom apt. sub-let for summer only or year. Also one bedroom apartment and efficiency available Sept. 1st. Students or teachers. Parking or garage. 446-0493.

APARTMENT TO SUB-LET (June 1 to Sept. 1) — Furnished, one bedroom, 10 min. from campus. $85 per mo. Call 479-7336.

LIVINGSTON AVE. — 3 blocks from university, 2 bus lines. Bedroom $12.00. 479-7653 or 476-8296 Mrs. Wilson.

APARTMENTS all over the city. Nicely furnished. 1, 2 and 3 bedrooms. $85.00 up. GL 8-6100. 458-6101.

APARTMENTS — Furnished or unfurnished. 3 rooms, utilities, near campus. Call x3630, 472-8283 or 475-1631.

APARTMENT FOR SUMMER — furnished, 3-4 girls, near campus, call evenings 475-0940.

UNIV.-Wild, unusual apt. for rent - June 1 - "Old Viking Banquet Hall" with 18x36 ft. living room - FIREPLACE - GRAND PIANO - vaulted ceiling -skylight - panelled and antique velvet walls! A collectors item ! 2 yr. lease. GR 4-5558.

ROOM FOR RENT: near Drumlins Bus, kitchen privileges, off street parking. 472-2406.

SUBLET, for the summer, 3 room apartment, near campus, 479-6018.

STUDIO APARTMENT, Swimming pool. Beautiful area. Near University. Unfurnished. Utilities included. $115.00/mo. 479-9616. 475-3209.

SUBLET, 3 months, June 1. Completely furnished new deluxe, townhouse (on 3 levels) 2 br., 1½ baths, balcony, grads or prof. $220.00 per month. Phone 478-3925.

EUCLID FURNISHED APARTMENT - convenient location from June, air condition, garage 446-6451, 446-5360.

AVAILABLE IMMEDIATELY — share in 3 bedroom apartment with two male grad. students. Near campus. Call 476-4655.

2 BEDROOM apartment to sublet — (June-August) Kitchen, living room, bath, on campus. $125/mo. 476-0885 (nights).

FULLY FURNISHED HOUSE — 4 bedrooms, 2 bathrooms, appliances, furnished basement in residential area, gardens, to rent for one year from September 1, preferably to a visiting professor and family. Call mornings until 10:30 or after 5 P.M. 446-2448.

ON-CAMPUS APARTMENT — June-Aug. Excellent condition.furnished. 3 bedrooms. $165/mo. including utilities. Call 478-9073.

TO SUBLET SUMMER — Modern 2 bedroom furnished; Hollywood kitchen picture windows, garage, lawn: 5 min. from campus $110 per month. Tel: 475-9607.

APARTMENT TO RENT - Stadart St., 1 block from campus. June occupancy, no lease till Sept. perfect for 2. Call 474-8393.

WANTED

FACULTY COUPLE — Looking for furnished or unfurnished two or three bedroom house or apartment near university. Academic year 1969-70. Call 655-9078.

TYPING

THIRTY YEARS EXPERIENCE. Dissertations, term papers, proof-read. Satisfaction guaranteed. Mrs. Raymond Webb. HE 7-8259.

TAKE YOUR MANUSCRIPT to the only professional typing and printing service serving the S. U. area. The knowledge and experience of having done over 2,000 theses and dissertations is behind every job we turn out. Stephanie's Office Service. 469-2795.

TYPIST experienced in thesis, dissertations, and term papers. Electric typewriter. Shirley Savlov, 446-2999 or x2441.

SU diamondmen drub RPI, 13-4

By STEVE RADICE

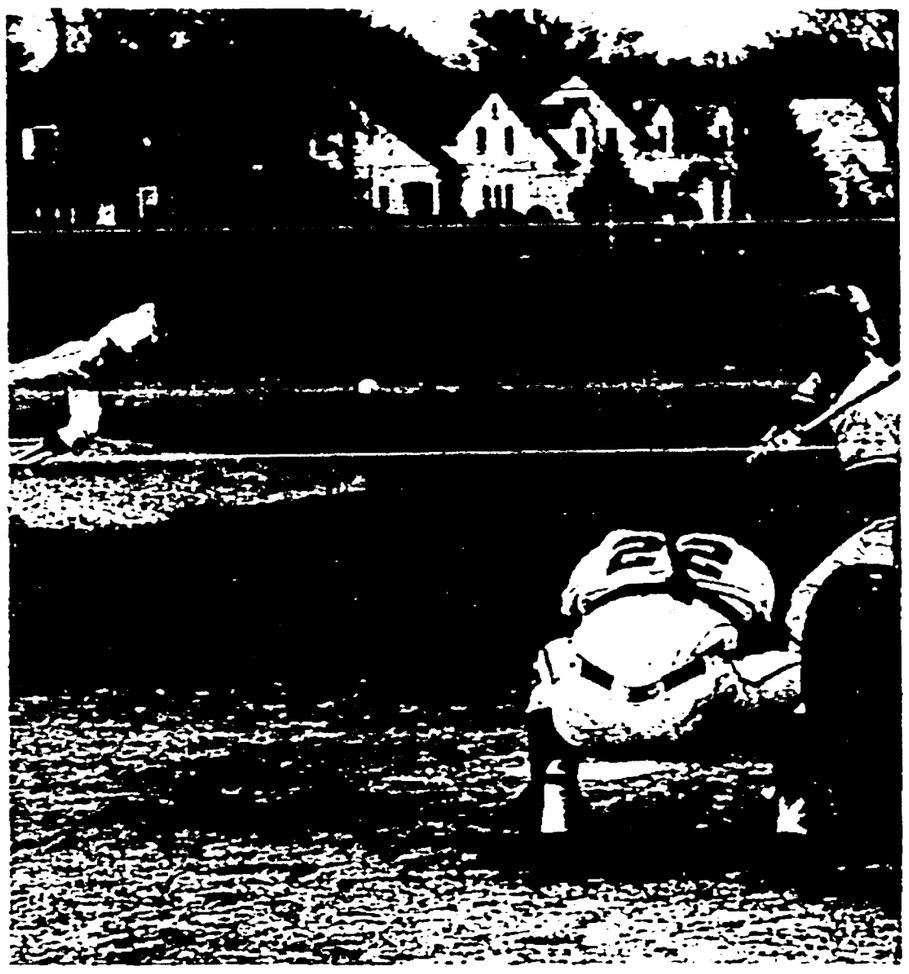
The Syracuse University baseball team mauled Renassler Polytechnic Institute's team yesterday at Lew Carr field, 13-4.

The Syracuse pitcher overcame early troubles to pitch the entire game. Errors by third-baseman Jim Gordon put pitcher John Martel in both first and second inning jams. Martel was able to pitch his way out of the first, but was hit for three runs in the second inning.

R.P.I. action began in the first inning when after Allen grounded out, Bill Dick singled to left. John Apple then reached base on an error by third baseman Jim Gordon. Gordon booted an easy grounder to put runners on second and third. Dave Schopp then walked to load the bases. Martel bore down, however, and struck out both Rich Scammel and Charlie Lapp to retire the side.

In the Syracuse half of the inning, a base-running miscue by Bob Clary killed Syracuse chances of mounting a rally. Clary, after reaching first base, ran a few steps towards second after the ball got by the first baseman. Clary then tried to return to first, and was tagged out. Naum and St. Mary also made outs to end the inning.

R.P.I. continued threatening in the top of the second. Hart reached first after another error by Gordon, and then reached second following an error by left-fielder Naum. Ditesso followed with a Texas league single to put men on first and third with one out. After Martel got 2 outs on R.P.I., he walked Dick to load 'them up. Apple then drove in three runs with a blast to center which Brian Mihalik misplayed.



Syracuse retaliated in the bottom of the second with two runs. Unger beat out a single, and went to sedond on a passes ball. After a walk, Bob Kelton bunted safely to score two runs.

In the third, R.P.I. had runners on first and third, when Martel struck out opposing pitcher McKay for the second out. Martel, however, then wild pitched a run in before the side was retired.

Syracuse made the score 4-3 in the bottom of the fourth. Gordon and Mihalik both singled, and after Gordon stole third, he raced home when the throw went into left field.

Syracuse's big inning was the bottom of the fifth, in which they scored 5 runs. Naum, up first, hit a short grounder to third which the third baseman threw way over first. When the catcher leisurely retrieved the ball, Naum had already hustled to third, and finally slid home safely with a ground ball homer. Joe St. Mary followed with a booming homer to left. Syracuse scored three more runs before being retired.

Syracuse added more runs in the sixth and seventh innings to make the final score, 13-4. SU is now 5-7-1 on the year, and R.P.I. drops to 3-7.

Syracuse pitcher John Martell hurling against R.P.I. Martell survived a shaky start to complete the game.

Superior soph track trio able to make Grieve smile

By ADAM DAWSON

Just as football has its unsung heroes (the lineman), so does the track team. On Bob Grieve's team they are the weightmen. Shot putter Roger Taylor, discus man Bob Tuttle and javelin hurler Greg Warden form Grieve's fine trio.

Said Grieve, "I have here three of the finest young weightmen in the East." Their recent showing at the Big Four meet at Pittsburgh backs up that statement. Taylor took a second in the shot, while Tuttle and Warden took fourths in their respective specialties.

All three boys are sophomores and Grieve states, "Their inexperience and youth hurts them, especially when they throw against the older boys on some of the other squads like Penn State, Pittsburgh, Boston College, Villanova, Manhattan, and St. Johns."

This inexperience is exemplified by Bob Tuttle. He started throwing the platter at Syracuse last year. In high school he did not even go out for Track until his senior year and even then it was to shot put, not throw the discus.

When asked why he started he replied, "I just picked it up and started. I love it. It's my thing." The microbiology research major continued, "When your out there throwing you are all alone. If you lose it is your fault, not the discus, the circle or the weather but yours."

At present the man from Brockton, Massachusetts is throwing from 130 to 140 feet. His fourth place toss at Pitt was 135 feet. However, he desires to increase this distance to 170 to 180 feet. Said Grieve of his desire, "Bob is a fanatic about the discus. He has this fantastic desire that great athletes have to have. If he wants to throw 170 to 180 feet before he graduates then I am sure that with his fanatical drive he will make it."

In contrast to the newcomer to the sport is Greg Warden. He started throwing the javelin in his freshman year at Mount Hermon Prep and before he was finished he held the New England Prep School record. The Illustration major from Littleton, New Hampshire has had his difficulties this year. "He has had to learn to control his body, you can not just throw blindly. This year he has shifted his style, which accounts for his problems," commented Grieve.

He has thrown as far as 207 feet and his fourth place toss at Pitt was a hefty 202 feet. According to Grieve, "Anytime you get it out over 200 feet it is a good toss."

"He is still learning by observing others, but he is young and he will be a really good one," continued the veteran track mentor.

So far this season Grieve's best performer among his sophomore trio has been Roger Taylor, He came to Syracuse from Canandaigua, New York with impressive credentials. Taylor was 1967 New York State Public High School shot put champ. He won his crown with a toss of 64 feet and 11 inches which is still the record. He started putting in high school because his father interested him in it. He said, "My father was a pretty good shot putter and he wanted me to try it. So I tried it and I have stuck with it."

"Because of his youth and relative lack of big time competition Taylor has a problem. He lets little disappointments bother him too much and he lets his more experienced opponents "psych" him out," commented Grieve. "All that will be cured by experience and competition. Then he will be among the premiere putters in this part of the country."

The sophomore physical education major chose Syracuse from two other schools. Manhattan and University of Buffalo both courted the Canandaigua star.

Eventually he would like to reach 60 feet with the steel ball but, "At present I am very discouraged with my failure to increase my distance significantly, " said Taylor. His second place put at the Big Four meet only traveled 55 feet and he would like to see some more distance from his tosses.

With this fine trio of weightmen here for another two full years of competition, coach Grieve has "three young hurlers who should rank among the best in the East."

The classic hitting form, as exhibited here by an R.P.I. batter, wasn't enough to win yesterday as Syracuse beat R.P.I. 13-4.

Young defense is key on gridiron

By LARRY CENTER

This is the second of a three-part series. Tomorrow, a wrapup of spring practice and preview of Saturday's intrasquad game.

Last season the Syracuse defense was packed with veterans and counted on to hold up the team in the early games while the offense got its motor going. This year the situation is reversed.

Gone from the country's fourth-ranking defense are Art Thoms, Tony Kyasky, Gerry Beach, Steve Zegalia, Cliff Ensley, and Jerry Ruccio. Ron Womack, who was supposed to take over for Beach, is not available, and to top it all off, Lou Gubitosa, who was counted on to anchor the line with Ray White, is back home in New Jersey. His operation was not succesful enough for Lou to play ball, and while he recuperated, he fell too far behind in his studies and was forced to drop out of school.

Ben is thus faced with a major rebuilding job. The way in which the inexperienced defensive unit comes through could very well determine the fate of the 1969 Orangemen.

Surprisingly, the defense was outplaying the offense at the start of spring practice. Only recently has the offense come on stronger. Still, Ben is worried about his lack of depth at almost all positions.

If some of his biggest problems are on defense, so are his two biggest assets. They're named Ray White and Joe Ehrmann. Both could be great on offense or defense. Ehrmann, 6-5 and 256, is replacing Oakland-bound Art Thoms, but it looks as if Syracuse isn't losing anything in the exchange. Ben calls White, who is switching from tackle to middle guard, "a player of All-American talent."

He says, "If they all copy a page from White and Ehrman, who punished themselves all winter getting into shape, we'd be all right, but everyone has a different definition of what work really is."

Another plus factor has been the play of Bucky McGill, "who has improved a real lot." The end positions are giving Ben the biggest headaches. After Gubitosa left, Rick Kokosky was injured and has missed all of spring ball. Right now Pete Pietryka and Joe Beauregard, who both saw limited action in '68, are listed as starters. Behind them are rookies–George Bodine, Howie Goodman, and Dan Yochum.

Ben is relatively happy with the linebackers, "who have improved from last year, although they're not in White and Ehrman's class." He can call on four veterans here–Bobby Bancroft, Don Dorr, Jack Protz, and Bob Rust. Especially impressive so far has been Protz, who "has worked real hard to improve."

The experience of this crew is balanced by the youth of the secondary. Tom Hermanowski is the only real veteran, but he is being pushed hard by Duane Walker. Gary Bletsch, who replaced Tom when he got hurt near the end of the season, is now starting at safety and newcomer Tommy Myers, who has looked good, is at the other halfback spot. Behind these boys are unproven juniors D.J. Harrell and Ed Phillips, and sophs Dennis Finnegan and Karl Lombell.

If this defense can keep other teams out of the end zone and limit them to field goals, then the Orange will have the advantage in most kicking battles. Little George Jakowenko, one of the country's highest-scoring kicking specialists last year, has the strength and accuracy to hit from over 40 yards.

DAILY ORANGE

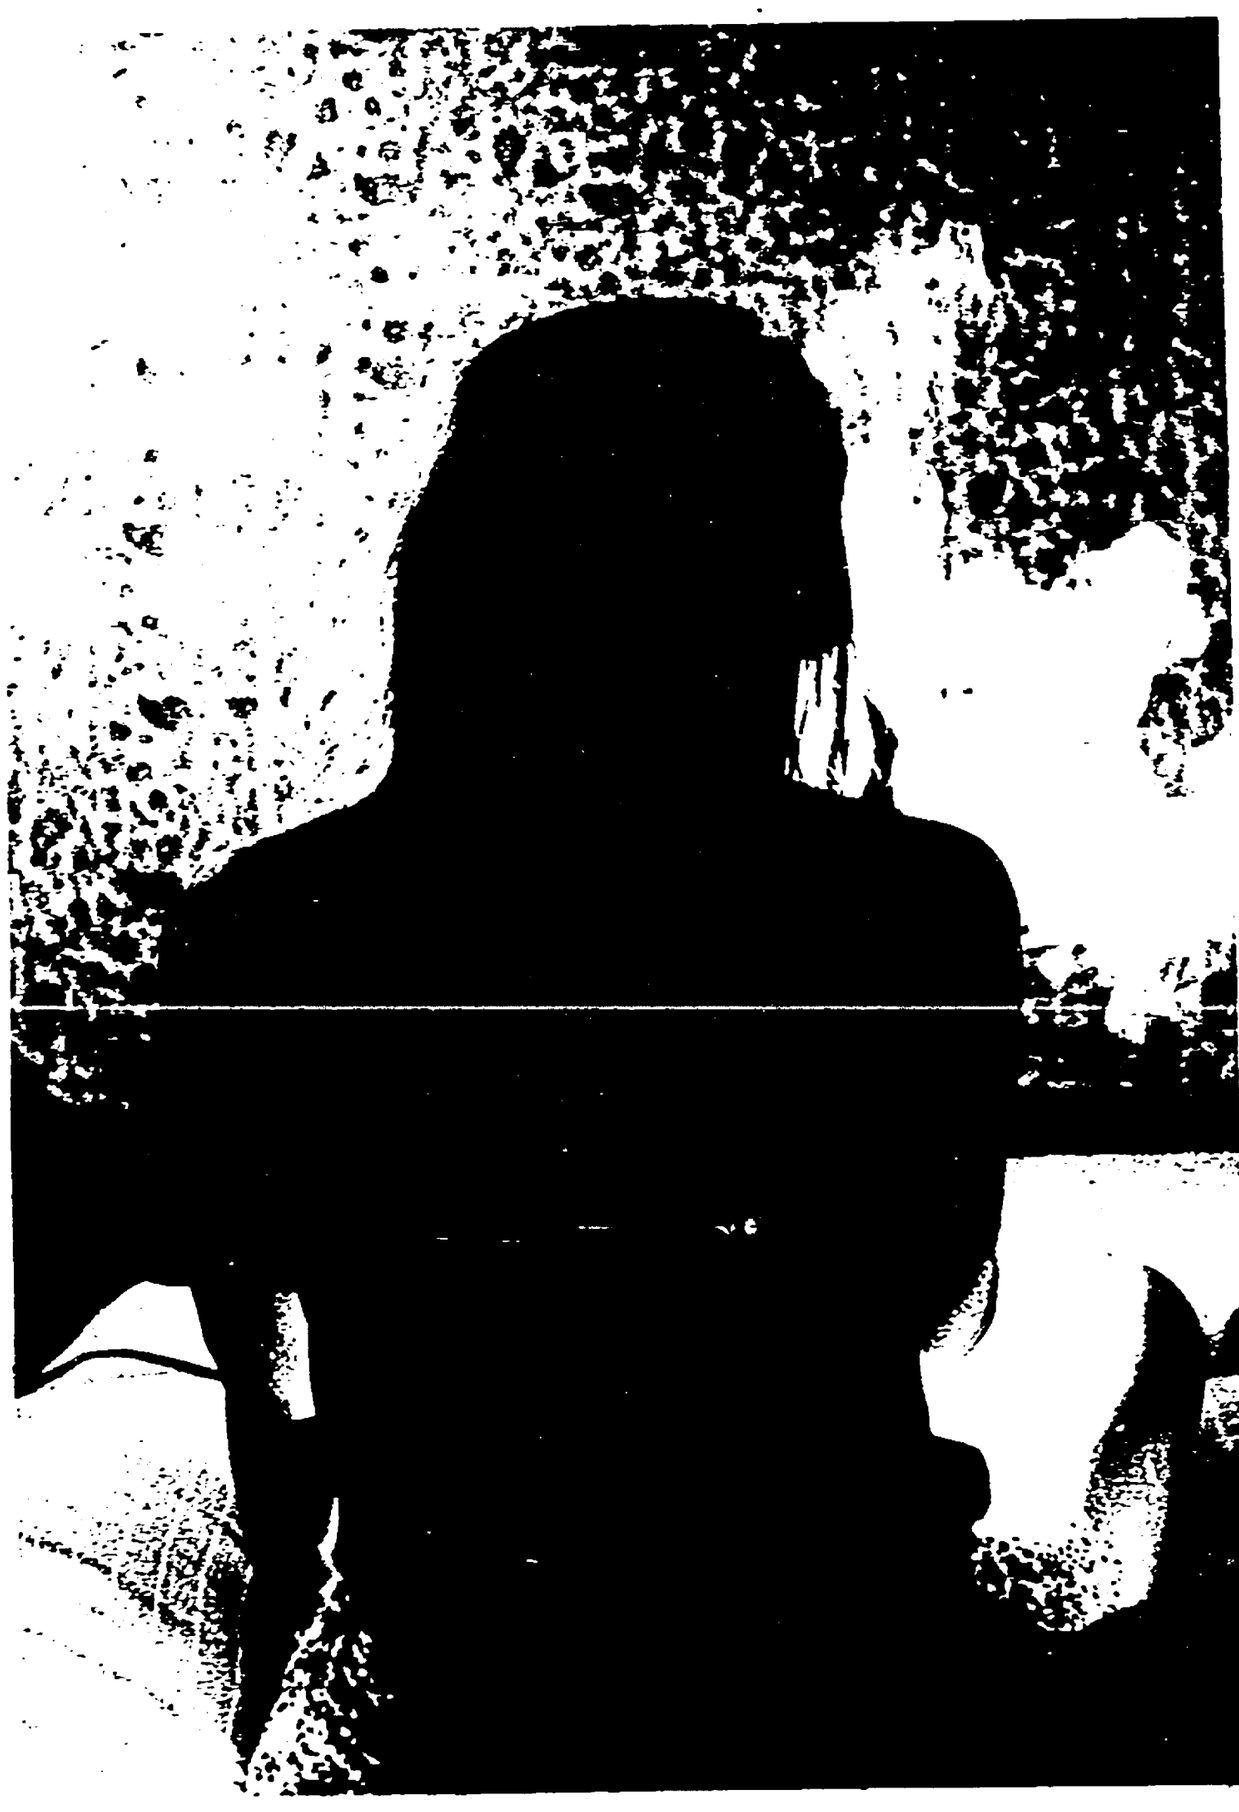
Syracuse University's Daily Newspaper Since 1903

Vol. 67, No. 101 Syracuse, New York, Friday, May 9, 1969 10 Cents

Nixon to stress state, local role

Top aide hints at new urban policy; details of Moynihan speech on page 2

UJB housing case: student is "guilty"



Lived off campus while paying for on-campus housing; page 22

Grand opening at Jabberwocky

Kimmel basement comes alive with blues, beer; page 7

The dawning of Spring Weekend

Dance, breakfast, float parade among festive highlights; page 22

A burning question

A SEARING AND OFTEN STARTLING STUDY of SU students' drug habits begins on page 9 as the Daily Orange presents an eight-page drug supplement based on the results of an exclusive survey conducted this semester. (Photo by Clemens)

Hike in urban aid hinges on wars' end

By KAY CHRISTENSEN
Associate Editor

Daniel Patrick Moynihan, presidential urban affairs adviser, outlined a possible national urban policy last night at Hendricks Chapel, which is the first generalized policy statement on urban affairs for the Nixon administration.

Probably the most significant national goal stated by Moynihan was that of doubling the amount of federal aid to the national total of state and local government expenditures. Such an action would increase federal aid from 17 percent or $20 billion to 33 1/3 percent or $40 billion. Although Moynihan stated that "a clear opportunity exists" for such a proposal, he limited it to take place "in the aftermath of the Vietnam war."

Such a generalized policy speech can possibly be regarded as setting the direction of the new Nixon administration, since no definite goals or plans on urban affairs have been proposed thus far. Moynihan was careful to state, however, that the ten national goals he proposed "might constitute a national policy" and did not specify whether or not the stated goals are to be considered as the present administration's aims.

The presence of a nationally prominent speaker at SU's annual Honors Convocation drew an unusually large crowd last night. Hendricks Chapel filled to capacity, turning more visitors away to view the convocation over closed-circuit television in Gifford and Kittredge Auditoriums.

Other major points in Moynihan's speech included a proposal that the federal government should provide incentives for the reorganization of local government in order to respond to metropolitan conditions. Here Moynihan is encouraging the decentralization of local government in favor of a consolidated and stronger government.

In the case of the city of Syracuse, for example, the local government includes both a city government and separate towns and villages which are autonomous. All of these small governments integrate to work together, but there is no central government controlling all of the separate units. Moynihan's proposal would probably call for the city government to consolidate with the remaining local governments. It is also probable that the above-mentioned incentives would be some sort of money or federal aid to the city.

DANIEL PATRICK MOYNIHAN

Moynihan also called for the equalization of public services provided by different jurisdictions in metropolitan areas. An interpretation of this proposal would suggest that the poor areas of a city would be delegated more money than the rich suburbs so that an equalization of monetary funds would exist.

Another major point made by Moynihan was that he encouraged the involvement of state governments in the role of urban affairs management. Noting that the recent trend "has been to establish a direct federal-city relationship" and that states have been bypassed, he said that state involvement "must be supported and encouraged by the federal government."

The enaction of such a proposal is parallel to the Nixon administration viewpoints on urban affairs. At last week's meeting with ten city mayors, President Nixon adamently encouraged his thoughts of channeling urban aid through state governments. All of the mayors present at the White House, including Mayor Walsh of Syracuse, disagreed with Nixon's views and encouraged the administration to grant federal aid directly to the cities. If state governments begin to shoulder more responsibility in handling city problems, however, Nixon's views would probably be more readily acceptable.

Academically speaking, Moynihan said that "the federal government must provide more and better information concerning urban affairs, and should sponsor extensive and sustained research into urban problems." He further specified that longitudinal research over long periods of time would be sponsored. Such an idea would probably be receptive to academicians since most government-sponsored research grants have been short-term to date.

In his speech the tall, gray haired and flushed speaker included several other points of consideration in determing an urban policy, but these remain somewhat vague and general. For example Moynihan cited the poverty and social isolation of minority groups as the most serious problem of contemporary American cities.

"It must be attacked with urgency, with a greater commitment of resources than have heretofor been the case, and with programs designed especially for this purpose," vaguely stated the urban affairs adviser. He somewhat specified his aims by stating that the first goal of urban policy must be the transformation of the urban lower class into a stable community, but failed to state how such a transformation would take place.

Moynihan also said that economic and social forces in urban areas must be changed to a state of equilibrium. He further called on the federal government to assert an interest in the movement of people from rural to urban areas and from urban to suburban areas.

"The federal government, by its own example and by incentive should seek to add to the amminities of the urban environment."

Dr. Alan K. Campbell, newly installed dean of the Maxwell School, said that he is not surprised that there is an effort to create an urban affairs policy. In fact, Campbell and economics professor Jessee Burkhead, commented on such a possibility last year in their joint article, "Public policy for urban America."

"In the polemics surrounding American urbanism and metropolitanism there is a persistent demand for a unified federal urban policy...An overriding urban policy would make possible, it is believed, the mesihing of specific programs into a meaningful framework," reads the article.

Commenting directly on Moynihan's speech last night, Campbell said, "I'm basically in support of the direction in which he is moving. I wish he'd gone further, I wish he'd committed funds (to the cities) apart from the Vietnam war."

Moynihan's major points

In his speech last night, Daniel Patrick Moynihan, urban affairs advisor to President Nixon, offered the beginnings of a national urban policy. The major points covered in his speech were:

* The proportion of federal aid to the national total of all state and local governments should be doubled, increasing the present $20 billion figure to $40 billion.
* The federal government should provide incentives for the consolidation of small, separate local governments into a stronger, more effective centralized government in order to better handle metropolitan needs.
* The federal government should seek to equalize local jurisdictions in their abilities to provide public services.
* State government has an indispensible role in the management of urban affairs, and must be supported and encouraged by the federal government in the performance of this role.
* The federal government should sponsor extensive and sustained research into urban problems, providing more and better information concerning urban affairs.

SOMETHING NEW !

HACKNEY HOUSE

COFFEE SHOP

Ice Cream Bar And Sandwich Shop
Open 7 A.M. to 7 P.M.
646 South Warren
HA 2-0341

ANGUS H. TWOMBLY — Editor-in-Chief

MANAGING EDITOR - Alan Stamm EXECUTIVE EDITOR - Karen Wiediger NEWS EDITOR - Fred Tuccillo EDITORIAL DIRECTOR - David A. Ross COPY EDITOR - Jean Havens FEATURE EDITOR - Roz Mazer SPORTS EDITOR - Mike Weber CAMPUS AFFAIRS EDITOR - Larry Kramer PHOTOGRAPHY EDITOR - Clint Clemens ASSOCIATE EDITORS - Andrij Bilyk, Kay Christensen, Beth Hillson, Rona Kavee, Helene Macdonald, Charles Shapiro, Dan Schlossberg, Patti Williams, Roni Ziokower.

DAILY ORANGE

Syracuse University's Daily Newspaper Since 1908

FRIDAY, MAY 9, 1969 PAGE 3

STEVEN P. STROBRIDGE — Business Manager

ASSISTANT BUSINESS MANAGER— Art Depasqua, NATIONAL ADVERTISING MANAGER— Janet Meyer ACCOUNT EXECUTIVES— Roger Black, Jim Maney, Mike Greenstein.

Published Tuesday through Friday during the academic year by students of Syracuse University. Offices located at 200 Brooklea Drive, Fayetteville, N.Y., and 1101 East Adams St., Syracuse, New York. Entered as Second Class matter at the U.S. Post Office, Fayetteville, N.Y. 13066.

Drug use—a sign of the times

Today the Daily Orange carries a lengthy section on drugs and the drug culture. It represents several months of research and survey by DO staffers and is an attempt to communicate rather than one to draw conclusions. There is much left to learn about drugs. As yet, research has been inconclusive, yielding only scraps of information proving both harmful and beneficial effects of drug practices such as smoking.

The widespread use of drugs at SU and most other colleges is probably just another sign of the times. Drugs have gained prominence in our generation, but have caused fear and sensation in generations a few steps removed from ours. This is not an entirely unpredictable or incomprehensible situation. Much of what research does prove will satisfy or alarm the skeptics, perhaps without seriously detering our generation of users.

We are the drug guinea pigs. We are the experimenters. Doctors and hospital emergency rooms, parents and peers are learning by our generation of users. In our time we have proven that some are incapable of handling themselves on drugs, as some of our parents have proved incapable of handling themselves on liquor. Others have used drugs to excess and have met with death or permanent injury. But cirrhosis of the liver has also killed.

We are not trying to equate the effects of drinking to those of drugs. No one has the information to do that yet. What we are saying is that drugs used with moderation taught by experience may become an institution in our society. It may be accepted. Even the discoveries of science may not deter people now using drugs or those desiring to. People still smoke commerical cigarettes even though a health warning is printed on the package they come in.

To condemn drugs without knowing about them. is ignorant and to use them in great quantity may be foolhardy. What we probably have at SU is a lot of people who smoke occasionally and such cases have yet to be proven detrimental to one's scholarship or character. While smoking is illegal by statue, there seems to exist some kind of tacit "hands off" policy by the University as smokers aren't hard to find, but few are stopped. The University is probably still waiting to apprehend the big ones--the pushers, etc. So while illegal on the books, smoking and drug use goes on with little apparent alarm on either side. It seems more likely that common practice rather than scientific data will determine the outcome.

Peanuts is run with the permission of The Syracuse Herald-Journal.

PFP perspective

Since the April boycott of classes ended, many issues have remained unresolved which PFP hoped would be seriously examined during the boycott. Also, many persons have not had a chance to hear what our stance and conduct was towards the boycott. Hopefully, this article will clear the air somewhat.

Peace and Freedom Party supported the boycott critically because of feelings that issues on campus which should be dealt with, such as ROTC, war research, university expansion into the community and others, would be ignored by the SBU, put into committees or put off into the indefinite future. The SBU proposed eleven "issues," most of which were social or academic, but two of the remaining three would significantly change university policy towards the surrounding Syracuse community. These two were "greater regard" for the community and a "study" of the University Hill Corporation. However, the wording of both issues was very vague.

Jim Burzycki

SBU has claimed publicly that eight of their eleven issues have been "won," but in reality only dorm autonomy was granted outright. All the others were predictably put in committees, though SBU leaders still hailed these as victories. And two of the three issues left unresolved were, of course, those concerning university expansion--a "hot" issue no matter how gently it was raised. (Even the DO recognized this, though they did not bother mentioning or crediting those who had been talking about it all semester.) SBU spokesmen claimed that these issues had not been resolved because sufficient time and information were lacking. But the information is public and though two weeks have passed SBU remains silent.

In concluding, we would like to describe the set of events surrounding the "break" between SBU and several groups in the New Left Coalition. The latter ad hoc body scheduled two public mass meetings on the day of the boycott. At a prior New Left mass meeting Tuesday night David Ifshin and Ed Barron had publicly supported the idea of Wednesday mass meetings. But SBU later issued press releases condemning these as being in "direct conflict" with the aims and means of SBU. The two meetings drew over 400 and 700 people respectively, despite a strong publicity campaign by SBU against attending. We feel that the real reason for the break with SBU was their fear that many students were not clearly behind them and that the success of any other organization would threaten their own.

Letters

To the Editor:

After the confusion, caused by yesterday's Daily Orange articles about dormitory autonomy and Booth Dorm Council, a few clarifications are in order.

Interdormitory Council (IDC) is committed to the dorm autonomy proposal submitted and passed by the Council on Student Life (CSL). IDC was empowered by the Council to evaluate dorms' readiness for autonomy. The criteria were established by IDC and reviewed by CSL. The proposal and the criteria have been available for a long time. It is this definition of autonomy that IDC is acting on.

A distinction must be made between the liberalization of social rules and dorm autonomy. Dorm Autonomy is defined by the original proposal to include "academic, social, cultural, governmental and service" areas. It is to be considered as a whole and IDC is pledged to the evaluation of autonomy in terms of this definition. The desire for rule liberalization is not properly the sole concern of autonomy. It is unfortunate that students have missed this vital distinction. The time for argument was when the proposal for dorm autonomy was still a proposal, not now when the administration of the concept is in operation.

To reiterate the council's position on Booth Dormitory points four and five of our own criteria, i.e. the consideration and presentation of service and programing options, it was felt to be lacking. IDC does not care whether Booth or any other dorm is apathetic, just that the residents be asked if they want to be apathetic. This was not evident from either the first evaluation or the IDC meeting Tuesday.

Students have been given the opportunity to exercise their responsibility; the question is whether this responsibility is too big for the students.

—Peg Johnston, IDC President
—Mark Cavanaugh, IDC President-elect

To the Editor:

I am only going to speak about one organization, but, in general, I could be speaking about any organization. As a member of the junior women's honorary, I wish to focus on this group.

To be selected and recognized for one's participation and contributions to the campus community is unquestionably an honor. Initially, one doesn't participate in campus activities for the sake of being recognized. One feels a useful contribution might be made. I have since been totally disillusioned at the possibility of making any contribution through participation in such organizations as dorm government or the association of women's students. These aren't the only organizations that take up time and space and sometimes any one of these existing groups makes a meaningful contribution to student life.

Nevertheless, I was disillusioned and at the beginning of my disillusionment, I was informed of my membership in Lambda Sigma Sigma, the junior women's honorary. I was barely awake (they tap at six o'clock in the morning) when I was struck by the first inconsistency of this group. I was told what I must wear to the first ceremony (there are two) before initiation. It had been a long time since anyone made such a suggestion to me.

I have two major objections. I do not see the purpose or the necessity for this organization being structured along greek lines. What need is there for pledges, mothers and daughters? Secondly, I feel this group should not call itself a service organization. Though, this is supposed to be a distinguishing characteristic, it more often becomes a burdensome, additional responsibility. There is no option for not serving without being derelict and those being requested to serve are supposed to be the most active on campus who in addition maintained a respectable average. I would like now to offer my respect and admiration to those who have amazingly maintained a high level of participation in this group and others.

Nevertheless, I, as a member, am suggesting that this organization needs to re-evaluate itself. I feel it is suffering from an ailment common to this campus. It is another (student) organization" requiring participation and attempting perpetuation among a sea of many, fragmented student groups.

Thank you
Justina Johnson

JUST A FEW of the disks WAER will spin this weekend for a Spring Weekend feature of 61 hours of near-continuous music. The campus FM outlet will play both rock and soul sounds, according to Music Director Jeff Chard. (Photo by Robertson)

WAER features marathon of Spring Weekend music

By PATTI WILLIAMS
Associate Editor

WAER will present 61 hours of near-continuous music this weekend for the first time in the station's history. This tribute to Spring Weekend begins today at 2 p.m. and ends Monday at 1 a.m. The weekend broadcast will feature only two non-musical offerings, coverage of the float parade and the spring football game.

The station will play rock, soul and progressive music during the weekend, according to Jeff Chard, WAER music director. He defined progressive music as a combination of other types of music including rock, folk and blues.

"Spring Weekend is a campus event and WAER is trying to participate by playing the type of music that the students and young adults in Syracuse like to hear," the music director said. "This is being organized and programmed by people who know what students want to hear because they, themselves, are students.

"This year we are trying to be an integral part of the weekend by doing what we do best--playing music."

Chard gave the following weekend schedule: soul music will be played primarily in the afternoon as is done currently on WAER, rock and progressive music will be on the air during the evening morning hours, and as the sun rises, WAER gradually will switch to straight rock music.

"We expect this weekend to demonstrate WAER'S new programming concepts," Mike Fisher, WAER program director said. "Our programming schedule for fall includes a nightly progressive music show."

This afternoon, Fisher will do a "Soul '69" show from the HBC patio. He'll be on the air from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. Tonight from 5 to 8 p.m., Bob Lowry, WAER and WNDR air personality, will do a remote broadcast from Flint Hall.

Saturday morning reports on the float parade will be interspersed with music. At about 1 p.m., coverage of the varsity-alumni football game begins from Archbold Stadium. After the game, WAER disc jockeys will broadcast in front of WAER'S studios, next to the men's Gym.

Throughout the weekend, students are urged to call in their song requests at extension 3801, Fisher said.

ATTENTION SENIORS.

Final Week for Ordering

Caps and Gowns

at

The Corner Store

SU Bookstore

WANTED for PSYCHOLOGICAL EXPERIMENT

Women at least 21 years of age, with at least a high school eduaction. Participants will be paid at least $2.00 per hour. If interested, call Upstate Medical Center at 473-5627. If no answer, 473-5632. Ask for Mrs. Harter.

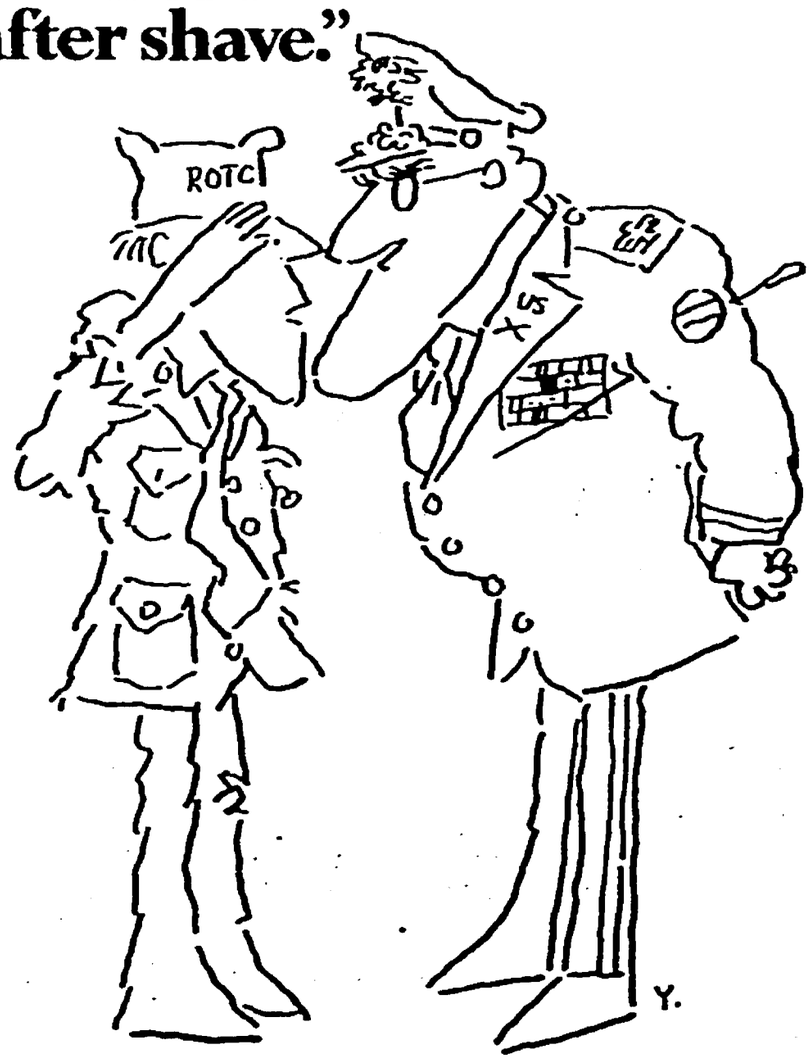
Call between hours 8:30 to 5 p.m.

THIS STUDENT STANDS OUT FROM ALL THE REST

She's one of many who have turned their backs on 'ponies,' canned opinions, and gimmicky review notes. For exams and term papers she uses TCIs—collections of the world's most outstanding literary criticism by the world's most outstanding authorities. And then she forms her own opinions. You too can be an outstanding literature student with TCIs. Each: $1.25

TWENTIETH CENTURY INTERPRETATIONS

Look for the TCIs you need. Among the many books in the series: Twentieth Century Interpretations of



Adventures of Huckleberry Finn ● Gulliver's Travels ● Hamlet ● Keats's Odes ● The Scarlet Letter ● The Sound and the Fury ● Walden

Available at your bookstore

SPECTRUM BOOKS

Write for your complete listing of TCIs:
Dept. CAC-N, PRENTICE-HALL, Inc., Englewood Cliffs, N. J. 07632

"I'm sorry about your parade, sir. I guess I splashed on too much after shave."

Even the might of the military can't protect you if you're not careful how you use Hai Karate® After Shave and Cologne. One whiff and females get that "make love not war" look in their eyes. So to maintain military discipline and keep your uniform intact, we put instructions on self-defense in every package. Just in case it comes down to hand-to-hand combat.

Hai Karate-be careful how you use it.

©1969, Leeming Division, Chas. Pfizer & Co., Inc., New York, N.Y.

"A computer has no mind of its own. Its 'brainpower' comes from the people who create the programs," says Rod Campany.

Rod earned a B.S. in Math in 1966. Today, he's an IBM Systems Programmer working on a portion of Operating System/360, a hierarchy of programs that allows a computer to schedule and control most of its own operations.

A mixture of science and art

"Programming" means writing the instructions that enable a computer to do its job. Says Rod, "It's a mixture of science and art. You're a scientist in the sense that you have to analyze problems in a completely logical way.

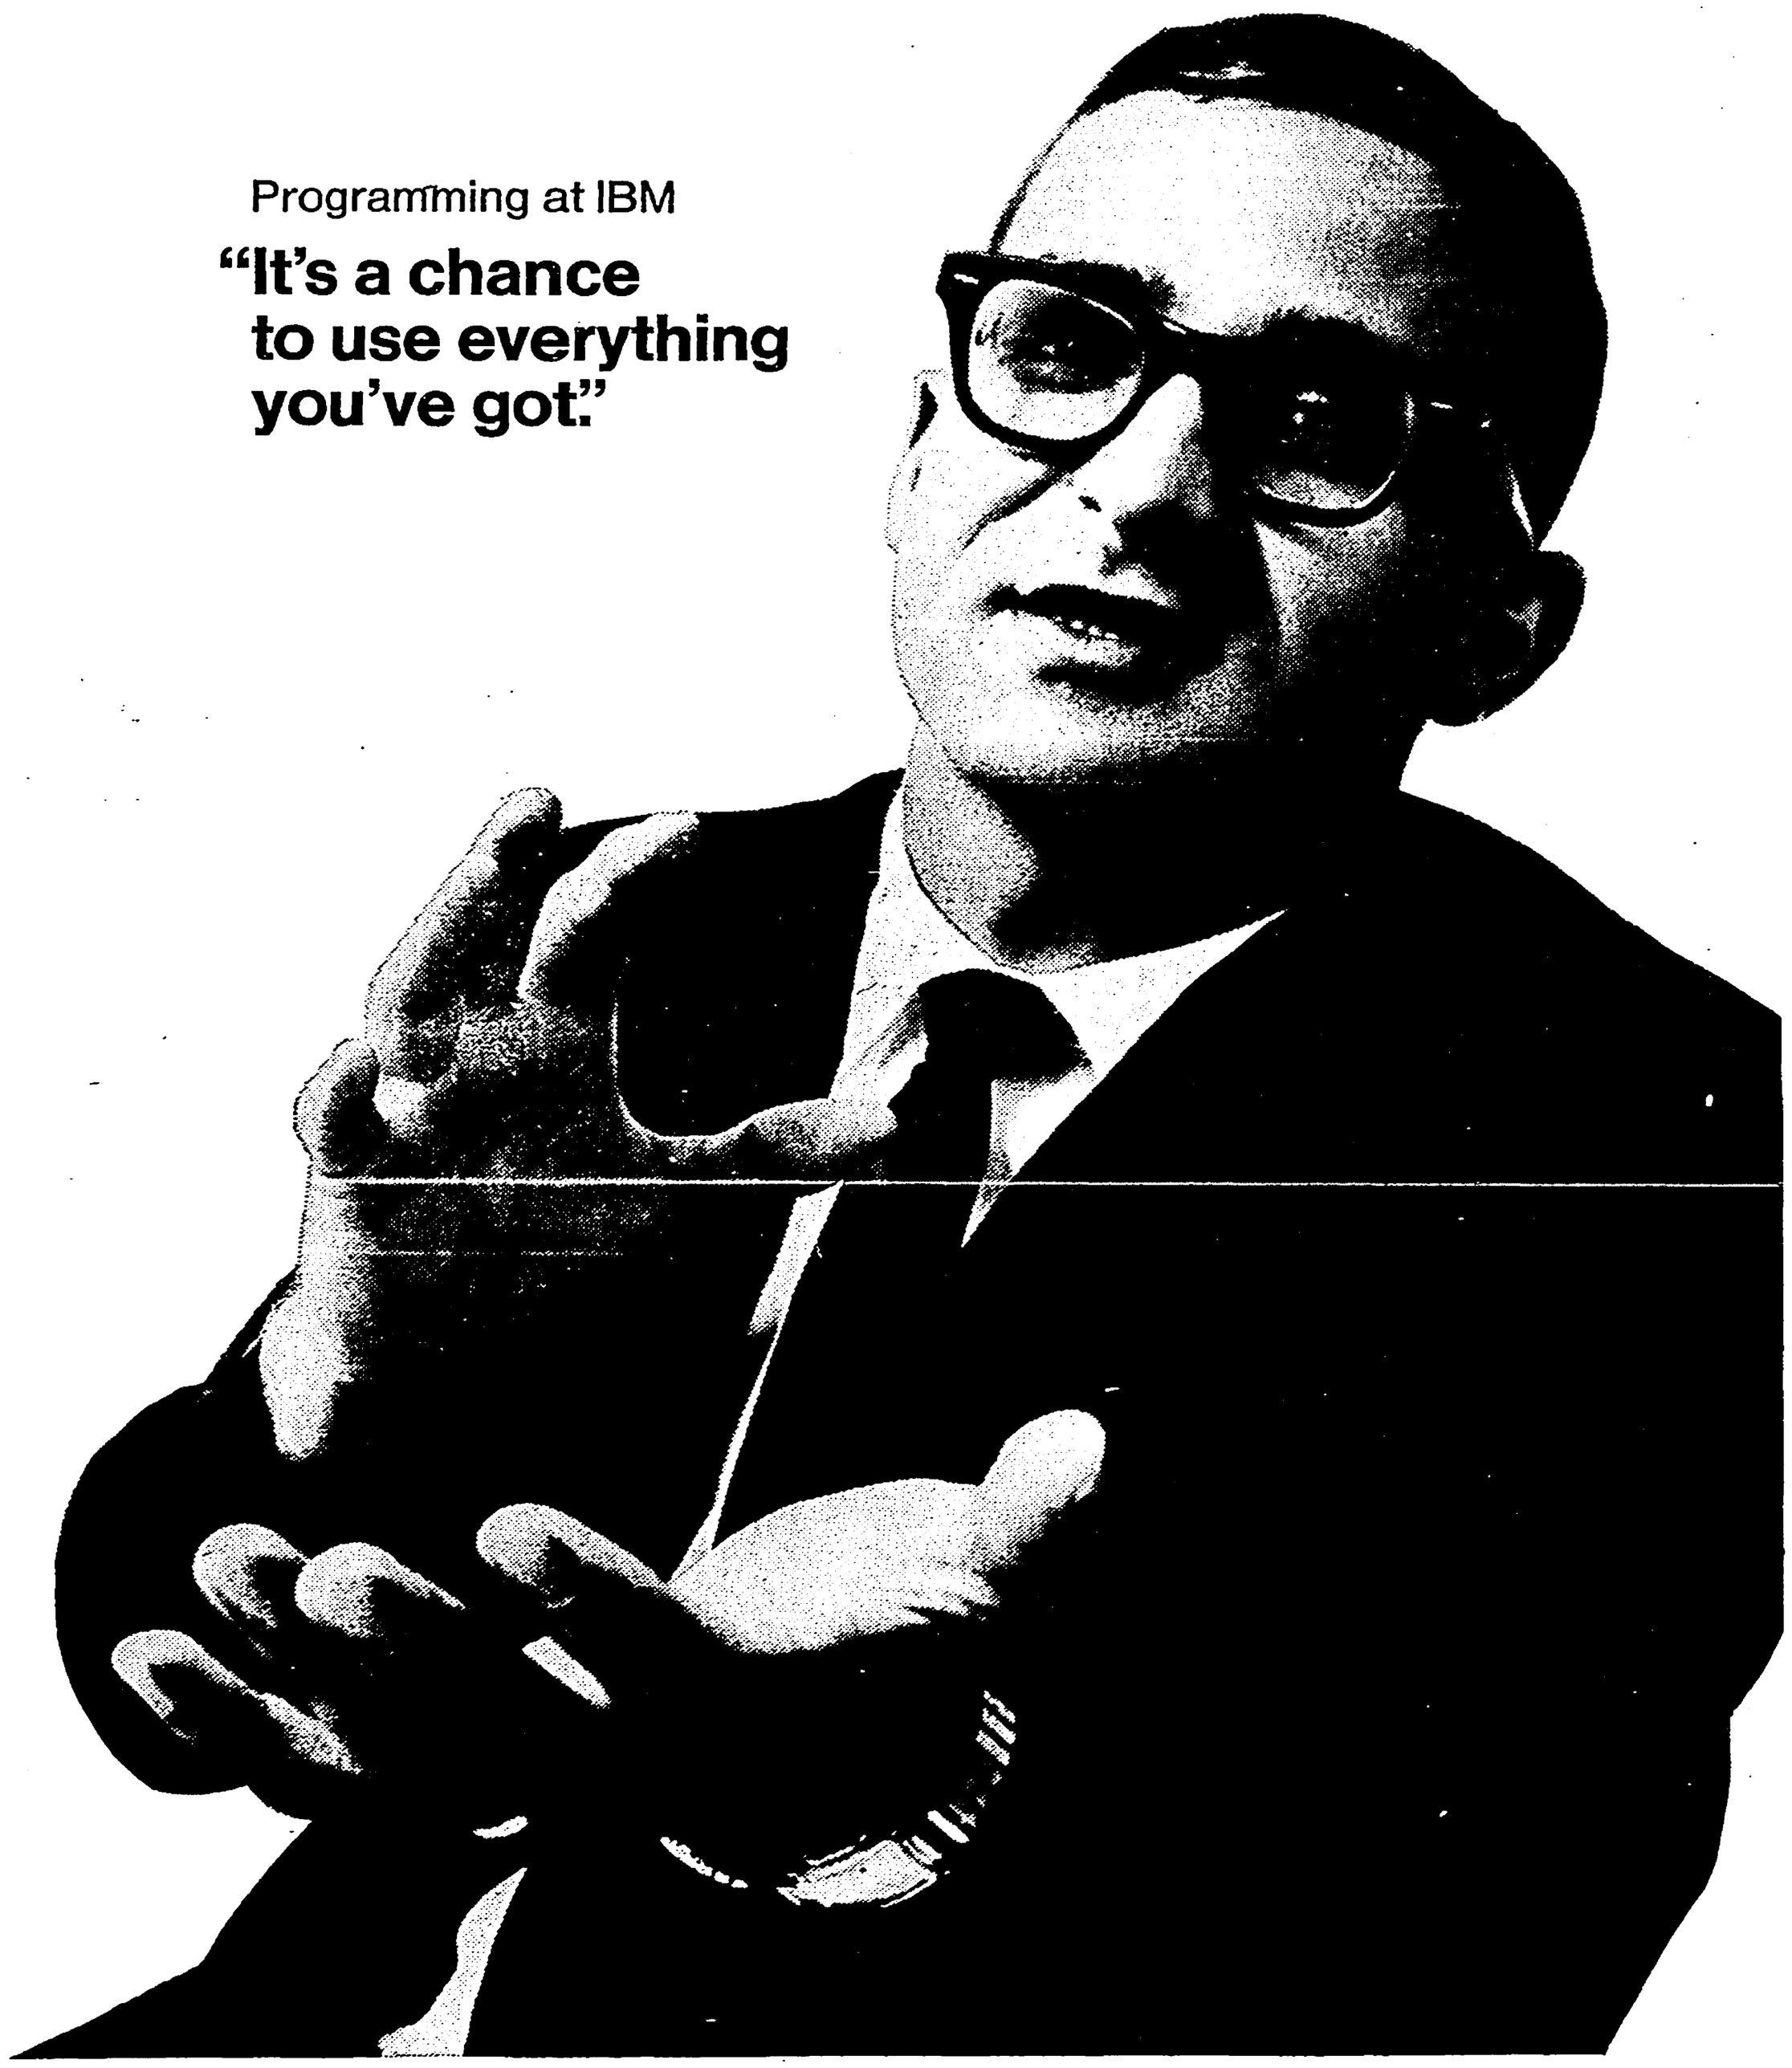
"But you don't necessarily hunt for an ultimate right answer. There can be as many solutions to a programming problem as there are programmers. That's where the art comes in. Any given program may work, but how well it works depends entirely on the ingenuity of the programmer."

Programmers hold a key position in the country's fastest growing major industry—information processing. Business Week reports that the computer market is expanding about 20 percent a year.

You don't need a technical degree

If you can think logically and like to solve problems, you could become an IBM programmer no matter what your major. We'll start you off with up to twenty-six weeks of classroom and practical training.

Check with your placement office



If you're interested in programming at IBM, ask your placement office for more information.

An Equal Opportunity Employer

IBM®

Programming at IBM

"It's a chance to use everything you've got."

Council on Student Life looks ahead

By KAREN WIEDIGER
Executive Editor

How effective is the Council on Student Life (CSL)? This question is being raised by many as the accomplishments of the group are coming to the foreground.

Since its formation in Nov., 1967, the Council has been meeting to review aspects of student life. CSL is a joint administration, faculty and student organization, constituted by the Board of Trustees, to take up any issues regarding student life on campus.

However, the Council only has the power to recommend modifications of policies in the areas of student activities and social life. These recommendations, in turn, must go to the Board of Trustees, through the Chancellor, for approval.

The Council has been instrumental in implementing dormitory autonomy and was the main force behind the extension of library hours during last semester's examination period.

However, some of the accomplishments must be attributed to the student body, according to Joey Edwardh, a student member of CSL. "I think it has obviously been very effective to the point that it has provided the student body with a channel to the administration," she said.

"The students on the Council have seen the lack of communication that exists within the Administration and we have found out exactly where the power lies," continued Miss Edwardh.

She is disappointed with CSL because it has dealt mainly with social issues and has not gone into the other aspects of student life. "No one can say what CSL will be able to accomplish next year. A lot depends on the student body and the direction it wants to take."

Senate will take away some of CSL's purpose.

"The student body will have more avenues to use to reach administrators," he commented. "Students will also have more power by being on policy-making committees."

"CSL is damn good and it has done a lot this year," according to Cindy Bailey, a member of the Council and president of the Association of Women Students.

She cited visiting hours, drinking in dormitories, the change in library hours and dormitory autonomy as accomplishments of the Council. "It moves very slowly and, as an institution, is still in the experimental stage itself." Miss Bailey continued, "However, it has come to be reputed as a valuable organization."

On a negative note, Jerry Tatarian, former University Union chairman and CSL member, said he does not feel the Council will be effective next year. "It has no real power. All it can do is look at information and pass on recommendations to the Board of Trustees."

However, Ed Feldman, past speaker of Student Senate and a CSL member, sees the Council in a better light. "If it can continue to move in the direction it has taken recently, there is great potential for CSL. This year, unfortunately, the Council was bogged down trying to find answers to questions that should not even have been posed.

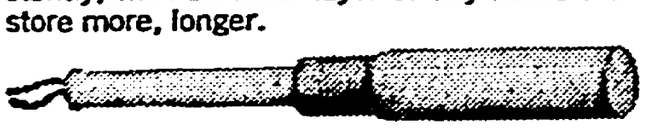
Applications for student-at-large members are being accepted until Sunday. Those interested in applying should submit name, average, extension and tell what they feel the goal of CSL should be and the role of the at-large member. The applications may be handed in to any current CSL student member: Ed Feldman (TKE), Cindy Bailey (Chi Omega), Chris Mudd (Phi Kappa Psi), Chuck Hicks (St. Mary's), Jerry Tatarian (Booth) or Joey Edwardh.

One of the faculty members of the Council, Lawrence Feer, feels CSL is "rather effective because it is looked up to by the campus." He sees no reason why it can't continue to operate next year but does feel the placing of students on the University

SUMMER FASHION OPPORTUNITY

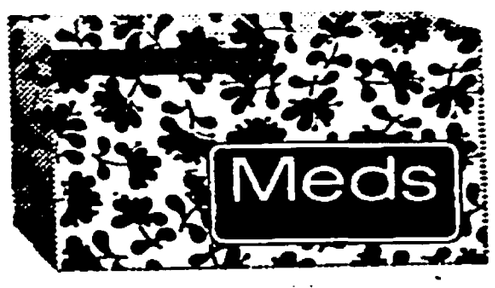
In your home town - World Leader in Fashion Magic "®" Jewelry will have both summer and part time job openings for university students in various parts of the country. You will earn above average pay, set your own working hours, and find fun and glamour in the wonderful world of Fashion. Interviews will be held on campus soon. Contact Mrs. Jones at the Placement Center Ext. 3618.

SOMETHING NEW !



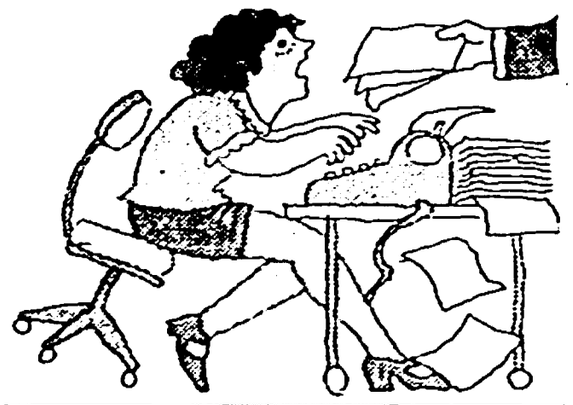
HACKNEY HOUSE

COFFEE SHOP



Ice Cream Bar And Sandwich Shop
Open 7 A.M. to 7 P.M.
646 South Warren
HA 2-0341

Faster absorbency. Longer protection. That's the extra security you get with new Meds, the only tampon with this double-protection design: an outer layer of larger fibers that absorb instantly, with an inner layer of tiny fibers that store more, longer.

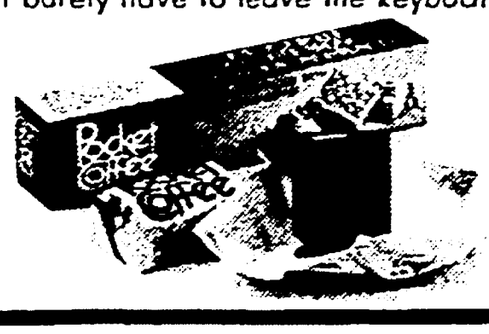


Comes in the first gentle, flexible plastic applicator.

MEDS AND MODESS ARE TRADEMARKS OF PERSONAL PRODUCTS COMPANY

Pocket Coffee! What's that?

A new kind of coffee break for stunned secretaries.



If there's one more letter to type, another card to file, or, one more call to make...you'll quit.

Ever feel that way? What you need is a coffee break. A brand new kind of coffee break, Pocket Coffee.

It takes an instant to pop a Pocket Coffee into your mouth. Just taste that delicious chocolate shell, and, it's absolutely brim-full of real brewed liquid coffee. The kind you drink in a cup.

Pocket Coffee comes in a 3 candy packet you can carry with you. With a coffee break that handy, your hands just barely have to leave the keyboard.

Available at

Jabberwocky opening

Blues groups shine

By KEVEN BROSNAHAN

"Fantastic, unbelievable, magnificent," often used adjectives to describe a performance, and how they are applicable to the performances of Junior Wells and John Hammond at Jabberwocky.

Moderate audience size did not detract from their performance, because it was on both the personal and audience level. Blues is a special, personalized thing. It is a feeling you get deep in your heart, that touches your very soul--that magnifies the misery and tragedy, happiness and joy of human experience. But it comes across hard and strong to the audience who does not view, but participates in the performance.

This is what occurred when John Hammond took the stage; those music country blues, bridge a gap of emotion. A fantastic combination of harp and axe, provide for the listener, a beautiful experience. His breaks on the guitar fit perfectly into his music. His harmonica complements his guitar work, and his vocals bring across to the audience the feeling of the blues. The raw motion enables people to communicate.

And then Junior, and his Chicago Blues Band,--what an act! The band is excellent and provices a depth that is needed. Lead guitar is superb, if not often inspired, and the sax is just right. The drummer offers a good and steady beat to provide a foundation for the band.

Of course, without Junior, it's good, but not great. His vocals, and work on the harmonica are exciting, and pulsating. His emphasis is not at all misplaced. He carries his blues to the audience like few others can. His performance in true blues style is both a personal one, and one which sets the audience on its listening ear.

Hammond, like Wells, excited his audience with his personal sincerity. With the enthusiastic response of the audience, the sweat formed at his brow as he did his utmost to give the crowd what it wanted. His facial expressions gave his songs more meaning and emphasis, a true personal experience. The strength of John's voice amazed those who might have expected only strong guitar and harmonica work. But he is, in the truly complete sense, a virtuoso performer.

And Wells was no less exciting. His performance completely captured the audience, and held them in rapture--not silent but respondent rapture , yet still keeping it in its original context but with his own personal style. He laughed with the audience and the audience laughed with him. He cried with the audience and the audience cried with him. Junior really got them going.

UU Jabberwocky open for business

By SAM HEMINGWAY

The Jabberwocky, the latest attempt to give the University Union a permanent quarters on the campus, opened last night to an enthusiastic audience of 250 blues lovers. John Hammond with Junior Wells and his Chicago Blues Band kicked off the weekend performance schedule for the Jabberwocky located under Kimmel Dining Hall. The UU plans plays, dances, lectures and poetry readings in their coming weekend itinerary.

According to Ira Kurzban, chairman of UU, the Jabberwocky plans to turn over all profits to the University Union for student activities.

Other activities planned for the Jabberwocky are a conference room for any campus organization and an information control agency to give all students information on student activities. (for information call ext. 4169)

University Food Service will serve beer, soda and sandwiches everyday from 11 a.m. to 2 a.m.

Kurzdan said he hopes to keep the Jabberwocky open during the summer and the academic year for faculty and students to meet informally. Tickets for the Hammond-Wells concert are available for $2.50 at the HBC cloakroom and at the door. Shows for Friday and Saturaday are at 7:30 p.m. and 10.

WANT TO TURN OFF THE TURNED-ON WORLD?

Try FLENTS®

When it all gets too much, just put a pair of soft, pliable Flents Ear Stopples in your ears. Instant peace and quiet! Study, sleep, meditate, turn on to your own thing . . . with Flents. One pair 40¢, 6 pairs $1.75.

And if a late-studying, light-burning roommate is the problem, Flents Light Shield is the answer. Comfortable, light in weight . . . it really keeps you in the dark! Black, pink or blue. Each $2.50.

At your drug counter. Or send check or M.O. to Flents Products Co., Inc. Dept. C-1, 103 Park Avenue, New York, New York 10017. No C.O.D.'s.

UU IS YOU

Tanya grooves on your body.

The older folks have their own tanning products. Tanya is new. It turns on a new breed of sun worshipers. That's you. You want a natural Hawaiian tan—deeper, faster. Only Tanya can give it to you. Because Tanya has Hawaii's favorite tanning agents—coconut oil and cocoa butter. So Tanya boosts the sun's natural tanning rays. Make today happen . . . your way . . . get with Tanya. A full line of suntan products for today's sun children—at your bookstore.

TANYA®

COCONUT OIL AND COCOA BUTTER

In search of self-knowledge, author diversely 'turns on'

By RONI ZLOKOWER
Associate Editor

EDITOR'S NOTE: One step beyond the drug generation, Rasa Gustaitis seeks full knowledge of herself through many breeds of meditation including drugs. Because experiences, as much as those of any drug user in the "turned on generation," represent a trancendence from saturated society, the Daily Orange feels this review is pertinent to today's drug section.

"Turning On" by Rasa Gustaitis, 326 pp., The Macmillan Company, New York, 1969.

Drug virgin or acid head, professor or psycho-therapist, student or Zen master, whatever your status, you can take a safe and meaningful "trip" through the realms of mind expansion with Rasa Gustaitis in her book, "Turning On."

Miss Gustaitis, a New York City journalist and free lance writer, sampled sensitivity training, LSD, ranch commune life, the San Francisco scene, Zen discipline, love and hate labs, and sensory awareness sessions in order to realistically present today's turned on world.

She was drawn from one expert to another by the belief that what is happening in the field of self-expansion is the answer to how man will be able to maintain his creativity and integrity in an increasingly dehumanizing environment. Because you as the reader share with Miss Gustaitis her personal mind expansion, you never feel that she undergoes her experiences just for her book or simply because it would be deemed hip.

The history of the mind expansion movement in the U.S. and the concept of "turning on" is explained by Miss Gustaitis in the beginning of the book since both these things are so often related only to drugs.

She writes of the concept of "turning on." It is not a matter of performing well but of fully being; not a question of developing a mature attitude toward adult responsibilities but of experiencing anger, love, grief, and joy, perceiving subtle inner and outer relationships and responsing to them clearly and directly.... There are many ways to travel there. Drugs are one, meditation another, encounter groups, fasting, sensory awareness, practice, music, and dancing are others. Anything that will blow your mind, blast you out of your frame of reference and into direct contact with the nature of your being and the world around you is a trip. Looking at a flower may do it under the right conditions. So might a sexual orgy. The important thing is to break through "mind-sets."

During the 60's, many in the middle class who had once been interested in social reform and politics joined the drug scene and were exposed to a new way of viewing what was becoming for them a stifling and contradictory society.

The hippies, Miss Gustaitis explains, popularized the "turned on" way of life. But by the summer of 1967, they had to publicly declare their movement dead and move on to quieter places because their haunts had become so polluted with phonies and squares (thanks to overexposure by the press).

The history ends here as Miss Gustaitis dives into the action herself. She started at the Esalen

Institute, the largest mind expansion center in the country, where for six weeks she participated in awareness games, Gestalt therapy, communal baths, messages and the other activities which make up Esalen life.

No drugs are allowed on the premises of Esalen, mostly because of strict drug laws, so Miss Gustaitis took her first trip with a group of people from Esalen at a weekend retreat. The trip was a structured one, with a guide, rules, and the proper drugs available for anyone who wished to come down.

Description of Miss Gustaitis' trip and the preception she achieved as a result of it is highly personal and graphically described. Somehow, she allows the reader to enter into it in such a way that the experience is shared and not intruded upon. She wrote after her trip, "I see that all of us walk in different contexts and our conversations are often disembodied, but still we answer each other. We walk as if on ice and delude ourselves believing it is solid ground. Beneath our feet, all the time, is all that I and everyone saw last night and this morning: the hate, the fear, the music, the childishness, the unity-separateness and the beauty of the moments when we meet. Nothing I experienced was an illusion. It was, as the guru said, all in me. It was all familiar once recognized."

At the Zen Budhist monastery at Tassajara Springs in California, Miss Gustaitis found the beauty of ritual in meditation, in discipline, in mealtime, and in silence.

In direct contrast to this disciplined life was the life she led at Morningstar Ranch, a disorganized communal camp for those who "can't make it in straight society and don't want to."

At Morningstar, the majority of people are transient and live and find food in any way they can. Legal authorities have tried desperately to close it down as a health and fire hazard but its owner and inhabitants have managed to keep it alive.

All the ways of life and techniques Miss Gustaitis adopted were very different, the Zen camp and Morningstar ranch being in direct contrast to each other. Yet, she found they all had the same basic goal: "to

In her introduction, Miss Gustaitis explains that much of what she experienced is impossible to describe because our vocabulary is inadequate when used to describe the activities of the consciousness. She also convey's the idea that words often block rather than aid communication and perception.

This review, in those terms, is more than twice removed from her original experiences when she watched, listened, and felt. Her writing becomes for the reader though, as close to mind expansion as one can get without himself experiencing it.

TRACES of Love...

Faded photograph, covered now with lines and creases. Tickets torn in half, memories in bits and pieces. Traces of love long ago that didn't work out right, Traces of love.

*Ribbons from her hair, souvenirs of days together. The ring she used to wear, pages from an old love letter. Traces of love long ago that didn't work out right. Traces of love with me tonight.

CLASSICS IV
Featuring Dennis Yost

*© 1968 Low-Sal Music, Inc.

A new album for now moments

LP12429

Available on Liberty 8 & 4 track Stereo Tape Cartridges & Compatible Cassettes

Head on

Drugs at SU

Special supplement to the Daily Orange: May 9, 1969 - Page 9

Index

This section was prepared by Beth Hillson and Karen Wiediger.

Survey results.....page 10
Laws and drugs.....page 11
Marijuana marathon.....page 12
Breaking the law.....page 13
Drugs and the arts.....page 14
Medical aspects.....page 15
Legality of drugs.....page 16

Are you in the fifty-six percent?

By Karen Wiediger
and
Beth Hillson

"Fifty-six per cent is much too low."

"No, it's way too high."

Either one of those statements may represent your feelings. They are comments made by students who have seen the results of the drugs survey recently conducted by the Daily Orange.

No previous data has been collected giving accurate figures of drug usage on campus. Our study shows that 56 per cent of the students sampled at Syracuse University have had experience with illegal drugs; 34 per cent are currently using them.

The study was based on a random sample of 400 students picked from a complete mailing list of graduates and undergraduates. The seven page survey was completed by 274 people and included questions about drug usage, habits and personal data.

There is no reason to believe the surveys are in any way atypical or unrepresentative of the Syracuse unrepresentative of the Syracuse student population. However, of this per cent, the breakdown by sex, class and independent-Greek membership corresponds closely with the actual figures for the total University population.

One interesting set of facts disclosed indicates that of the freshmen sampled who have used drugs, the majority smoke either marijuana or hashish. More specifically, 16 per cent use the former while 12 per cent smoke hashish. This information was gained from a table listing 15 drugs for the respondent to check.

From this table, it was determined three other drugs are being used by freshmen but to a lesser extent. The response for cocaine, dexedrine and opium was two per cent each. The other drugs listed did not receive any responses.

In contrast, 43 per cent of the sophomores use marijuana with two per cent less using hashish. Whereas freshmen said they have not tried LSD, 15 per cent of the sophomores questioned indicated they now use the drug. A relatively higher per cent of the sophomores use dexedrine and other stimulants.

The high percentage of users in the sophomore class corresponds to figures obtained last year. A survey taken on a small scale by students in a political psychology course showed similar results for last year's freshmen (our sophomore sample.)

Responses from the juniors sampled were closely related to those of the sophomore class, with 40 per cent using marijuana and 30 per cent, hashish. The difference between the two classes using stimulants is even lower. Both groups indicated ten to 15 per cent response to most of the other drugs, with LSD being lower within the junior class representation--nine per cent saying they are now using acid.

Again, in the senior class sample, the percentage of students using marijuana and hashish corresponds closely with the figures of the two preceeding classes, 36 per cent answering to each question.

Although a lower per cent use acid (five per cent) the response deviated little from that of the other classes. It is interesting to note that two per cent of the senior class sniffs glue as compared to no per cent in the other three classes.

Thirty-one per cent of the graduate students sampled use marijuana and 26 per cent, hashish. These figures and those relating to the other drugs are markedly lower than those of the freshman class. However, in the category of "have used" 11 per cent of the graduates answered they have at one time sniffed glue.

Though any correlation of these facts to the individual classes may be coincidental, it may be assumed that the graduate students and seniors were part of the glue sniffing craze which hit the country several years back.

One might also note the distinct rise in percentages using "soft drugs" from the freshmen to senior and graduate classes. And again the rise in figures of those who use "hard drugs" is proportional to the classes. (Sophomores, juniors and seniors use more opium, cocaine. herion and the like.)

	have used	use now	have sold	sell for profit
Freshman	36%	20%	10%	4%
Sophomore	70%	48%	22%	9%
Junior	64%	38%	25%	2%
Senior	57%	39%	25%	2%
Graduate	52%	29%	18%	5%

	have used	use now	have sold	sell for profit
Total	56%	34%	19%	7%
Male	65%	40%	25%	9%
Female	46%	25%	12%	4%
Independent	54%	31%	18%	7%
Greek	62%	41%	25%	7%

Possibly it is coincidence, but it can also be said that members of the "turned on" generation have their first experiences with drugs from glue, marijuana or hash, progressing to the "bigger and better"—cocaine, opium, LSD, heroin and speed as they mature in age and college class. Certainly this notion cannot be completely discounted.

Whatever the conclusions from the figures, it is safe to say the majority of students in any class use marijuana and hashish, whether they use any of the other drugs or not.

Another interesting correlation can be found between the student and his living center. When the 56 percent is divided into groups according to residence units, there is a large difference between the number of students in cottages and Greek houses and those living in major dormitories or at home.

Whereas 65 per cent of the cottage residents use drugs, the figures fall to 37 per cent in a medium dorm and 25 per cent in a large one.

Again there is a notable rise among those who live in Greek houses–50 per cent represents the usage within that group. However, only 16 per cent of those who live at home are currently using drugs.

In considering these figures, it must be remembered that 34 per cent of the students now use drugs. The two smaller units considered indicate a noted increase from the norm.

Looking at this same figure, the survey showed over half the people now using drugs were motivated by curiosity. Although 13 per cent began because of the influence of friends, 23 per cent became drug users due to social pressures.

A significant "social pressure" may be the student's home atmosphere. The survey indicates 73% of those students whose parents are separated or divorced, have tried drugs. This number dwindles down to 33 per cent in regard to those who are still using drugs. In contrast, only 57 per cent of the students coming from unbroken homes have tried drugs; 35 per cent of this group are still using them. In marked contrast, only 30 per cent of the students who come from environments where one or both parents are deceased used drugs.

The percentage of users in the $10-15 thousand and $15-20 thousand range was substantially higher than those in the other brackets, both higher and lower. (20 per cent in the middle income brackets as corresponding to 12 per cent in categories above and below this.) Contrary to popular opinion, the majority of users do not seem to be in the highest income brackets but rather in the middle class range.

Again looking at the per cent of students currently using drugs, little over half state they "break the law" less than four times a week. 18 per cent use drugs infrequently while 12 per cent admit to more than four times a week. Relatively insignificant is the five per cent who state they use drugs daily.

Another fact which can be drawn from the survey results is the circle of friends in the life of the student who uses drugs. When asked how many of their close friends use drugs as often as they do, 30 per cent of the respnpondents replied "75 per cent or more." Looking at those who have tried drugs but don't use them now, the answer was lower; only 19 per cent of their friends were thought to be users.

With green papers endlessly spilling out of the computer, the figures to be gained from the survey results are countless. But the comparative changes from one year to the next bring the most interesting data.

Plans are already underway to run a similar survey next year, bringing answers to such questions as "Has the drug fad reached its peak?" and "Do students climb the scale from 'soft drugs' to 'hard drugs' as they progress in college status?"

	have used	use now	have sold	sell for profit
Off-campus	52%	32%	20%	3%
Greek house	72%	50%	34%	12%
Cottage	81%	65%	31%	12%
Medium dorm	54%	37%	12%	4%
Large dorm	48%	25%	18%	8%
At home	55%	16%	0%	0%

	have used	use now	have sold	sell for profit
Married	57%	35%	19%	7%
Sep. or div.	73%	33%	21%	6%
1/both deceased	30%	17%	13%	0%

Inconsistent drug laws

By John Wisniewski

"ANOTHER STUDENT WAS GIVEN A TWO-YEAR SENTENCE . . . FOR POSSESSION OF MARIJUANA . . . HE ATTENDS WISCONSIN STATE UNIVERSITY DURING THE DAY BUT MUST SPEND HIS NIGHTS FOR A YEAR IN THE STATE REFORMATORY."

"Whoever, knowingly, with intent to defraud the United States, imports or brings into the United States marijuana contrary to law . . . or in any manner facilitates the transportation, concealment, or sale of such marijuana . . . shall be imprisoned not less than five or more than twenty years and, in addition, may be fined not more than $20,000."

--Federal Code Annotated 21 (sec. 176a)

While penalties for violations of federal drug laws become more severe, the manners of enforcing these laws often show inconsistency and contradiction.

Consider the matter of warrants, for example. Court decisions vary with regard to the necessity of having a warrant for a person's arrest before authorities can make the arrest.

In the case of "Gibson v. U.S." narcotics officers made an illegal entry into the defendant's house. The officers saw him throw away a cigarette they believed to contain a prescribed drug. Despite the officers' illegal entry the court ruled that they had reasonable grounds for suspecting the commission of a crime and that the arrest of the defendant was in accordance with their duty.

"Johnson v. U.S." produced a different decision. Federal officers received a tip that opium was being smoked in a hotel room. They traced the odor of the burning opium to the defendant's room and entered.

The court said the entry violated the Fourth Amendment. While sufficient to justify issuance of a search warrant, the presence of odors does not by itself justify search without a warrant, the court said.

An opposing opinion resulted in the case of "U.S. v. Sam Chin." While passing a building, police detected the distinct odor of burning opium coming from an open door. Here it was decided that there was reasonable cause for the arrest of the defendants and seizure of their opium and smoking paraphenalia.

The "Mattus v. U.S." decision supported this rationale. The court said authorities may enter a house to arrest a person without a warrant if they have knowledge that the person committed a felony. They may also search the house and seize any drugs found without having to obtain a search warrant.

The courts have also ruled that a person does not have to be in possession of a drug at the time of an arrest, as in the case of "Brady v. U.S."

A husband and his wife were dining out one evening while under surveillance by narcotics agents. Prior to her arrest the wife dropped a package containing drugs on the floor of a public garage into which the husband had just driven his car. The agents reasoned that they were recognized by the wife and she dropped the package to avoid detection. The court declared her arrest valid.

Recent cases indicate an unreasonable severity imposed by federal drug laws. A 23-year-old Maryland student was sentenced last month by a county court to six months in prison for illegal possession of amphetamines. However, the drugs are available legally by prescription and millions of doses are sold annually.

Another student was given a two-year suspended sentence in Wisconsin for possession of marjuana. The 28-year-old man was placed on probation. He attends Wisconsin State University during the day but must spend his nights for a year in the state reformatory. He also must pay all court and attorney costs and submit to psychiatric examination and treatment.

In its December issue, "Playboy" magazine reported that a 21-year-old man was sentenced to 20-to-40 years imprisonment for selling a quantity of poinsetta as marijuana to a police informer in Cleveland. Poinsetta is neither illegal nor a drug. But the court ruled that narcotics laws applied since both the defendant and the buyer thought it was marijuana.

"The New Republic" last year said such "practices are so inconsistent and unfair as to encourage flagrant disregard for the law." The magazine concluded that "taken together, these cases and enforcement practices would seem to constitute a compelling argument for uniform drug laws, with scaled-down punishments, consistently administered."

Thanks for helping

We would like to thank the following, without whom the survey could not have been a success: The Herald-Journal and News Bureau for the use of their files; Dave Sherrill, Barry Feinberg, Len Kubas, Dr. Gardner, Dr. George Stern and Dr. Haskins, for their patient guidance in helping us structure the survey; Dean Carleton, Dean Kramer, Dr. McLaughlin, Mr. Fontaine, Lt. Seib (of the Narcotics Bureau) and Jim Gies for their ideas and assistance in helping organize this section; and the Daily Orange staff members and our friends who helped distribute the surveys.

Kata and Bessie

Marijuana marathon

By Sue Shapiro

"WE'RE TOLD BY UNCLE SAM THAT WE CAN'T HAVE ABORTIONS, CAN'T TAKE A PILL, CAN'T SMOKE POT. THE STATE OWNS EVERYTHING, EVEN OUR BODIES. . . INSTEAD OF TELLING US IT'S WRONG TO TAKE DRUGS, THE ESTABLISHMENT SHOULD ASK WHAT'S WRONG WITH OUR SOCIETY. IT'S SAD THAT SO MANY PEOPLE NEED DRUGS TO BE HAPPY."

Late one afternoon four and a half weeks ago, a kid walked onto campus with around $2,000 worth of hash, mescaline, THC and marijuana.

Dozens of dealers probably hit SU's campus that same week; hundreds sold illegal drugs to students on college and university campuses from here to the West coast.

There is no way to accurately measure the size of the nation's drug population, with college estimates alone ranging from five to 85 percent. What was once a casual run on drugs has exploded into a marijuana marathon, and the few "crazy kids" who used to experiment with narcotics have mushroomed into a Turned-On Generation that has the Establishment in a frenzy over the still growing drug sub-culture.

Frantic parents, themselves members of the pill society (take a tablet for anything that ails you from arthritis and headaches to insomnia and acid indigestion), shake their heads and ask why their offspring smoke pot, shoot speed and swallow acid.

"Why not?" snapped a freshman girl, "I smoke every two or three days. I like it. It makes me aware of things I've never seen or understood before."

A junior who has been smoking for three years and takes the heavy stuff "only on weekends since I have to study," said drugs help him cope with day-to-day problems.

"I couldn't see much meaning in life," he said, "until I started taking drugs. If a chemical can help you see what little beauty there is in the world, you'd be a fool to condemn it."

Surprisingly, several students admitted that they were coerced into trying drugs by their friends. "Listen, man, you're like out of it if you don't smoke. Hell, when all your fraternity brothers smoke, what can you do? Sounds really archaic to say you're pushed into it by the need to be accepted, but that's what it amounts to."

Irrate and often misinformed, adults assert that drug users are only kids who are out for kicks, insecure heads and pill-poppers who need a charge. "I think some people take drugs just to get high, but most of the users I know are really sincere people who are searching for meaningful answers to social problems and relationships," claims a head.

Students argue vehemently against contentions that the narcotics crowd includes mostly those of below-average college mentality. They cite the fact that drug busts have been staged at such intellectually elite institutions as Harvard, Berkeley, Princeton and scores of other schools where a significant number of highbrows and eggheads are also potheads.

According to one student, "Kids take drugs because they aren't achieving any great insight into social problems through institutional education. "Classroom learning isn't all that edifying, and it's not exciting by any stretch of the imagination. Drugs help you to see the real meaning of things, and they're exciting," he said.

A non-user conceded that if colleges are so concerned with the drug problem, they should revamp their programs and vitalize their teaching methods. "If education were more purposeful and interesting, boredom wouldn't lead to pot," he reasoned. "If the answers are only to be found in drugs, maybe we should all get stoned."

Marijuana is by far the most commonly used narcotic on American campuses. Barbituates, because they are relatively inexpensive and easy to get, run second. Tripping on LSD has not reached the epidemic proportions implied by recent publications.

Acid is not only more expensive than the soft drugs, but has a more severe and long-lasting effect. One student who claims to have tried "just about everything" says that tripping is reserved for the weekends because it takes a couple of days to straighten out afterward.

"LISTEN, MAN, YOU'RE LIKE OUT OF IT IF YOU DON'T SMOKE. . . SOUNDS REALLY ARCHAIC TO SAY YOU'RE PUSHED INTO IT BY THE NEED TO BE ACCEPTED, BUT THAT'S WHAT IT AMOUNTS TO."

"I only know a handful of people who have tried acid, and it's not a big thing on this campus," he says, "even though any med student or chemistry major could make it."

One misconception which looms large in the horrified minds of the Establishment is that marijuana, usually the first stop on the drug route, is pushed by organized crime syndicates.

According to a narcotics official, organized crime has entered the marijuana business only within the last three to five years because it has become such a lucrative enterprise on college campuses. The syndicate still concentrates on hard drugs.

Campus dealers are not malicious syndicate men. They're kids—most of whom buy the stuff in quantity in New York and Boston, and sell it at a profit to fellow students. One sophomore who pushes marijuana says he makes a trip to New York twice a month for his supply, and then sells it to his friends.

"It's a fairly profitable hobby," he laughs. "I pick up a load at $2 a bag and can sell it for $6."

Nearly everyone who has tried hard drugs graduated from the marijuana class and moved on to the stronger drugs. A non-student, now a mother of two, started on the habit when she was still in grade school by drinking cough medicine. "I used to drink up to 13 bottles of cough medicine a day," she remembers. "Then I went to grass, and kept on going until I wound up addicted to heroin." She committed herself to a Connecticut rehabilitation center for drug addicts because, she says, "I didn't want to go to jail."

Bring up the issue of the illegality of narcotics, and you're sure to stir up the ire of every weed worshiper within earshot. The Establishment is crazy, they bellow, if it thinks labeling drugs illegal serves as a deterrent to drug use.

An angry art student says "People will take drugs whether they're illegal or not. The idiots that claim the country would be overrun with junkies if they made pot legal should take a look at what happened with capital punishment. They took away the death sentence is one state, and the whole population wasn't wiped out. The murder rate even decreased."

A number of students resent what they consider the government's attempt to run their lives. "We're told by Uncle Sam that we can't have abortions, can't take a pill, can't smoke. Who the hell is he? The state owns everything, even our bodies," they say.

A business student who "really messed up on mescaline," says drugs are as lethal as grenades.

"I'd hate to take a chance on the government saying it was up to you whether you wanted to use a grenade or not. Maybe its different with marijuana, but the hard stuff kills. A friend of mine died on speed. I don't think the government should hand a grenade or LSD to little kids."

Another argument levied against narcotic laws is the fact that alcohol and cigarettes, which are known to be potentially dangerous, are not illegal while drugs are. ("Alcohol ruins your liver, cigarettes ruin your lungs. What does marijuana ruin?") Why is the alcoholic "sick" and the drug addict a criminal?

Asked why he doesn't just go and get drunk, a perfectly legal pasttime, rather than get stoned, one boy said that pot was simply more intellectually stimulating than alcohol. "Alcohol deadens your senses, makes you oblivious to what's going on around you," he said. "Pot stimulates your senses, makes you acutely aware of reality."

An ex-addict now working for Direction in Education in Narcotics tells people that ask for help in drug rehabilitation programs that taking drugs "is a way of closing yourself off from the rest of the world. It has the same effect as going into a closet. When you come out, the problems are still there. Drugs haven't solved anything."

A onetime LSD taker who hasn't touched drugs in three months now, agrees. "There's a paradox involved in the drug scene," she says. "You're detatching yourself from reality while trying to be more aware of reality."

Finding it difficult to either condemn or wholly approve of narcotic use, one student philosophizes that we should "take a look at the amusement parks and rockets to the moon. Men will go to any length and expense just to have fun."

Once upon a time, kids used to swallow goldfish. Then they sniffed glue and mixed coke and aspirin. Now they smoke grass, take sugar, pop dexies, and dig drugs.

One "relatively straight" blonde spoke pensively about society and her experience with drugs.

"Instead of telling us it's wrong to take drugs," she said, the Establishment should ask what's wrong with our society. It's sad that so many people need drugs to be happy."

Breaking the law 'casually'

By Dorothy Nash

"KIDS THAT WOULD HAVE NEVER SMOKED GRASS AT HOME DO IT HERE JUST BECAUSE THEY'RE AWAY . . . YOU SEE YOUR FRIENDS DOING IT – KIDS YOU KNOW AND RESPECT FOR HAVING BRAINS . . . . IT'S LIKE DRINKING – EVERYBODY DRINKS."

"It's no big deal to smoke pot anymore. You go to a party and there are the smokers and the drinkers. There's not much difference. Probably more kids are smoking here than a year or so ago but still, it's no big thing."

Statements such as this, from a junior fine arts major, characterize the 1969 attitude toward drugs. Times are changing but people aren't standing still. They are adjusting their attitudes and moods to accommodate today's pace.

Primarily among students and young adults, this increased open-mindedness mainfests itself with regard to the drug scene.

Students at Syracuse express many opinions on the subject of today's "attitude" but for the most part they vary little. There is a "casualness" that seems to make drug use more accepted – if not acceptable – than in the past two or three years. However, this attitude seems to extend only as far as the smoking of marijuana or hashish. The use of hard drugs is not yet as acceptable.

"You hear more about it than you used to. More is written in the papers so you really see how widespread it is. With so many people smoking it just doesn't seem wrong anymore."

The same freshman coed added that more people are encouraged to try drugs because they are more "out in the open." A similar opinion was expressed by a sophomore.

"You see your friends doing it, kids you know and respect. They've got brains. So it's not wrong. It's like drinking – everybody drinks."

Changing values are cited as another reason for the outgrowth of a more lenient position on drug use. Several students compared the evolution of a freer stand on drugs to that of sex during the past years. According to a sophomore forestry student, "You have different values than you had in high school. Like sex, people aren't afraid to talk about or even teach it to little kids in school. Same with drugs. If a guy uses them he obviously sees nothing wrong with it."

Another sophomore girl talked about the difference between home and campus life. "It's freer here. You're away from your parents and the hometown types. Kids that would have never smoked grass at home do it here just because they're away."

Professional people who come into contact with the drug "problem" seem to hold somewhat flexible opinions. They have a greater awareness of the situation because of their closer association with young people. Such a man is The Rev. Harvey Bates, a chaplain at SU. He spoke of drug use within a religious context.

"For some of these people pot is a kind of communion – a communication. Drug users, those with some religious background, understand this; for those without, they must be some kind of idealists. Hard line realists don't go for the drug scene."

Rev. Bates disapproves of cults that use religion as a pretense for drug use. "That's what Leary did with his New American Church. He made a lot of hackneyed critiques of the Church. Religion was his crutch. There are some who have found the Western religious traditions incomplete. They try to supplement it with Eastern tradition through drugs. Now the thing to do is to come down from pot but keep your high through meditation and relations with God. It's part of the bundle."

Dr. David Miller, a professor in the religion department here, spoke of the attitude toward drugs.

"It's almost a casualness. It used to be a big deal to take pot – not any more. I think it stems from a desire on the part of younger people to lose control, both conscience. There's a great relief in being able to let go."

Miller mentioned the increase of pot use as compared to the stronger hallucinogens.

"There's a real reticence to be curious about speed, heroin or even LSD. Two years ago there was more willingness to experiment with hard line drugs. This is no longer true. Casual experimenting with pot is increasing. From what I've seen, the increase is higher in the spring and summer, strangely enough. I don't know why but it is."

Students seem to feel that with the freer attitude there has been a definite increase of narcotics use among students. A cause of this is the availability of drugs on this campus. And with this there is less fear of the consequences of drug use – both disciplinary and physical.

"You can get almost anything very easily at Syracuse. And kids aren't as afraid of getting busted because they know it's the dealers that cops are after. They wouldn't do much to the users; there are just too many of them. They'd have to bust half this campus," said a sophomore boy.

Melvin Mounts, assistant dean of men, feels it is impossible to be certain of the numbers of drug users at SU.

"It's impossible to assess. I've had reports ranging from 2% to 60%. But it is important to differentiate between the person who is a habitual drug user and one who is merely an experimenter." However, he added that the Dean of Men's office finds out about drug users only when narcotics are connected with other problems – academics, social, housing adjustments, etc.

There is an "aura" about the dean's office that prohibits the administrators being any closer to the situation. Possibly it is this isolation that leads college administrators to underestimate the scope of drug use while students admit to much larger numbers.

A member of one of SU's larger fraternities estimated that "at least 60% of all fraternities here have guys that smoke pot frequently. And that's underestimating, I'm sure. In answer to this statement Mounts said, "I remain unconvinced that there is a great deal of drug use within fraternity chapters. By chapters I mean the actual houses here. Just by the nature of the fraternity system, it would seem difficult for very many men to engage in drug use. From what I understand many of the houses have outlawed drug use in their by-laws."

But another student disagrees. "If a guy joins a house and some of the brothers smoke then it's easier for him to start, too, especially if he's a pledge."

Most students and professional people agree there has been increased drug action at Syracuse as compared to the past few years. Dr. William Alsever of the Student Health Service admits "To me the action is more brisk than two years ago. There is quite an increase in this past year, more than in the past three years put together." Referring to the situation locally, Alsever called it a "problem" but "not a crisis" yet.

"Even in the high and junior high schools around here there is a situation we have never had before. The whole thing has mushroomed – age-wise and georgraphically."

He agreed with Miller on the increased use of pot, as compared to LSD, for example. He cited the warnings of possible chromosome and genetic danger as primary reasons for this. Without any specific figures to refer to, Alsever guessed that numerically, alcohol is still a bigger problem than drugs but the possibility of drugs replacing drinking is not totally inconceivable.

A freshman language major sees that possibility as occurring right now. "Drugs are easier to bring along on a date. There is no hang-over, no side effects. It's a much pleasanter feeling than being drunk because pot heightens the senses rather than dulling them like alcohol does."

The question of legalization of marijuana use must also be asked in considering changing moods towards drugs. Dean Robert Miller of the College of Law sees no likelihood of this occurring.

"Why encourage anything that is detrimental to a person's self control? Law school students are usually pretty conservative. They would like to prevent the incidence of legal liability. You won't find anyone over the 30 advocating any of that trash. There's nothing of it in the law school. You won't find it in any graduate school."

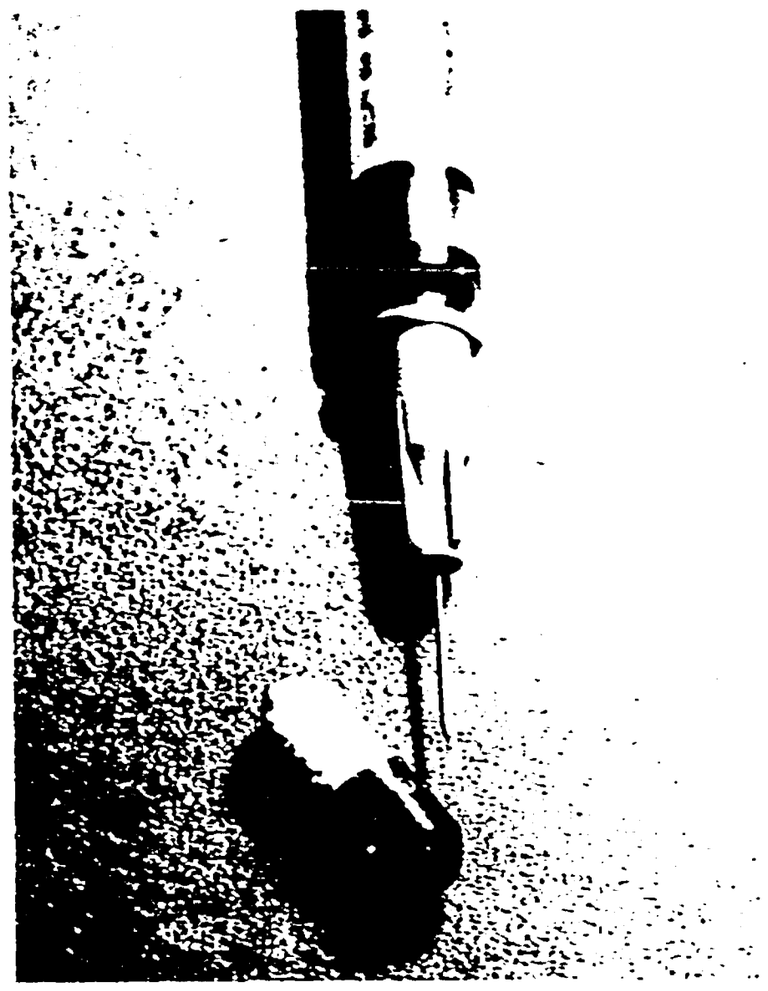
Both Dr. David Miller and Rev. Bates mentioned the aspect of organized crime. Rev. Bates would see it legalized "only to get it out of the hands of the Mafia. They have an enormous control of the drug traffic in this country."

Miller said that it worked with Prohibition. Also he sees no good in a law that is unenforceable. "It would stop the social order function as repressing that which does exist. I'm not unequivocably in favor but I'm not unequivocably opposed either. But a law that can't be maintained makes a mockery of all law."

A graduate student teaching at the University doubts that legalization could ever occur. "Right now they're trying to outlaw regular cigarettes. There's no chance that they will ever legalize the smoking of anything else, least of all pot."

Alsever brought up another possible obstacle to the legalization of marijuana which is a multilateral agreement signed by over 50 nations. At the suggestion of the United States an international conference on "The Supression of Opium and Other Drugs" was assembled in Dec. 1911 at the Hague. Originally the countries signed agreements to work for the supression and curtailment of manufacture and sale of opium, morphine, cocaine, heroin. In 1925 the Geneva Convention amended the Final Protocol to include "all derivatives of morphine, cocaine, opium, and their salt."

Most recently, in 1953, the agreement was again revised to include "all drugs, particularly synthetics capable of producing addiction." With this last amendment in mind it seems to be enough to hang-up any immediate legalization of marijuana. Like Alsever, many other physicians are unconviced that pot is not in any way addicting.



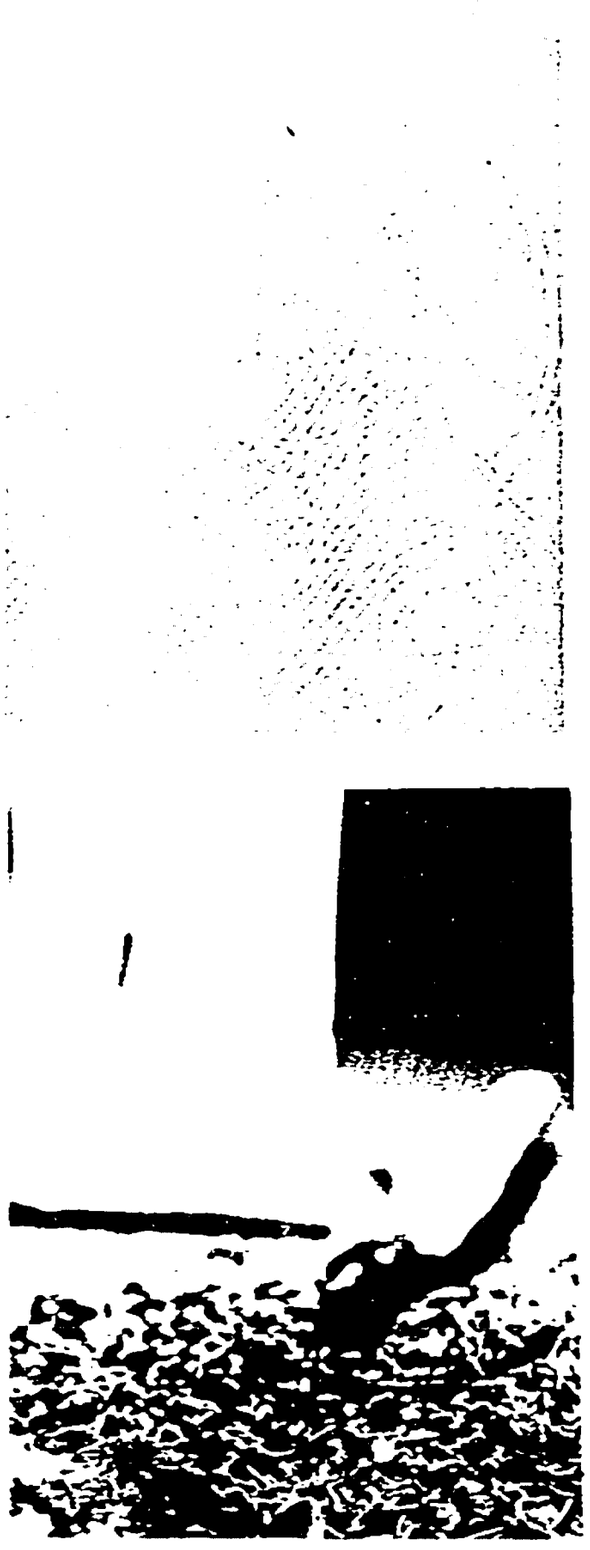
Students, although they seem to have undergone a liberalization of morals in the past years, do not foresee this liberality extended to the point of legalized pot. To some students it is highly unlikely and even undesirable.

"It distorts reality to make things seem beautiful when they aren't. If the world is ugly then why run away from the fact? It is stupid to make it easier for people to run away."

"It's dangerous that kids want to get high. Now they do it for kicks but if it were legal they'd do it all the time. People would be in a constant cloud; no logic, no stability."

"While it's illegal it isn't around all the time. You are at least a little limited–though it's getting less every day–in how often you can smoke and go up and get stoned. If pot were legal it would be around always and people would tend to turn to it more and more. It wouldn't be just a high."

"I like to smoke but drinking is my forte. I couldn't give it up to smoking all the time."



". . . IT'S THE DEALERS THAT COPS ARE AFTER. THEY WOULDN'T DO MUCH TO THE USERS; THERE ARE JUST TOO MANY OF THEM. THEY'D HAVE TO BUST HALF THIS CAMPUS."

". . . ISOLATION LEADS COLLEGE ADMINISTRATORS TO UNDERESTIMATE THE SCOPE OF DRUG USAGE. . . ACCORDING TO LAW DEAN ROBERT MILLER, 'YOU WON'T FIND ANYONE OVER 30 ADVOCATING ANY OF THAT TRASH. THERE'S NOTHING OF IT IN THE LAW SCHOOL. YOU WON'T FIND IT IN ANY GRADUATE SCHOOL.'"

Art and drugs and sex...

By Rona Kavee

"IS THERE A CONNECTION BETWEEN THE INCREASED USE OF DRUGS IN AMERICAN SOCIETY AND WHAT SOME DEEM TO BE A GREATER USE OF SEX AS A SUBJECT MATTER IN THE ARTS?"

"In Xanadu did Kubla Khan
A stately pleasure dome decree:
Where Alph, the sacred river, ran Through caverns measureless to man
Down to a sunless sea.
So twice five miles of fertile ground
With walls and towers were girdled round."

--William Coleridge-1797, under the influence of opium

Consider the connection between drugs and the artist. From Coleridge to Ginsberg and back to ancient Greece and Inida, the creator in the visual, the theatrical and the literary arts, has, in some instances, depended on the effects of narcotics for his inspiration.

Take this idea and apply it to the art in America, circa 1969. Add to it a third dimension, sex, and one comes up with a question plaguing students of contemporary culture. Is there a connection between the increased use of drugs in American society and what some deem to be a greater use of sex as a subject matter in the arts?

"Life" and "Newsweek" magazines the glossy-paged gurus of mass culture, see this connection as a clear one. With a society reveling in licentiousness (so what else is new?) we are called upon to decide whether the undraped bodies in the musical "Hair" are in any way connected with the kid lighting up a joint while his parents watch the Johnny Carson show ten yards away.

Or, is it possible both of these behavioral trends are symptoms of the same change and are not interconnected at all?

Aghehenanda Bharati is a professor of anthropology at Syracuse with a wide knowledge of the ways a drug-oriented society might be reflected in the arts it produces.

He holds the belief that there is some connection between the use of drugs and the degree to which sex is used as a subject in the art forms.

Drugs such as marijuana, LSD, opium and hashish all create what Bharati labels a "synaesthetic experience," the combination of audio and visual perception becoming very strong.

"Most of these drugs have an aphrodesiac effect," Bharati said. "The combination of increased sexual desire and greater aesthetic sense is a significant one." But it is the condemnation of sensuality in the arts that disturbs Bharati most. "Obscenity is morally neutral," he contends.

Bharati coined the term "noxious fusion" to describe the attitude in which one evil becomes blamed for the next. "This is the idea that any number of things that sand against one's own notions may be bundled together as a set of quasi-criminal charges to let off steam." As a result, the individual whose behavior deviates from the orthodox becomes responsible for dragging an entire society down into the muck with him. Along this line of thought, he who takes drugs is responsible for the rise of obscenity in the arts and is placing America on a collision course with moral disaster. It is this thought pattern that Bharati condemns.

But it is, perhaps, for the artists themselves to say whether the drug culture has given rise to a new, bolder freedom of expression.

". . . IT IS, PERHAPS, FOR THE ARTISTS THEMSELVES TO SAY WHETHER THE DRUG CULTURE HAS GIVEN RISE TO A NEW, BOLDER FREEDOM OF EXPRESSION."

To a graduate instructor in the School of Art, it seems "very naive to think that there's a definite hookup, No artist expects to do great masterpieces under the influence of drugs," he said.

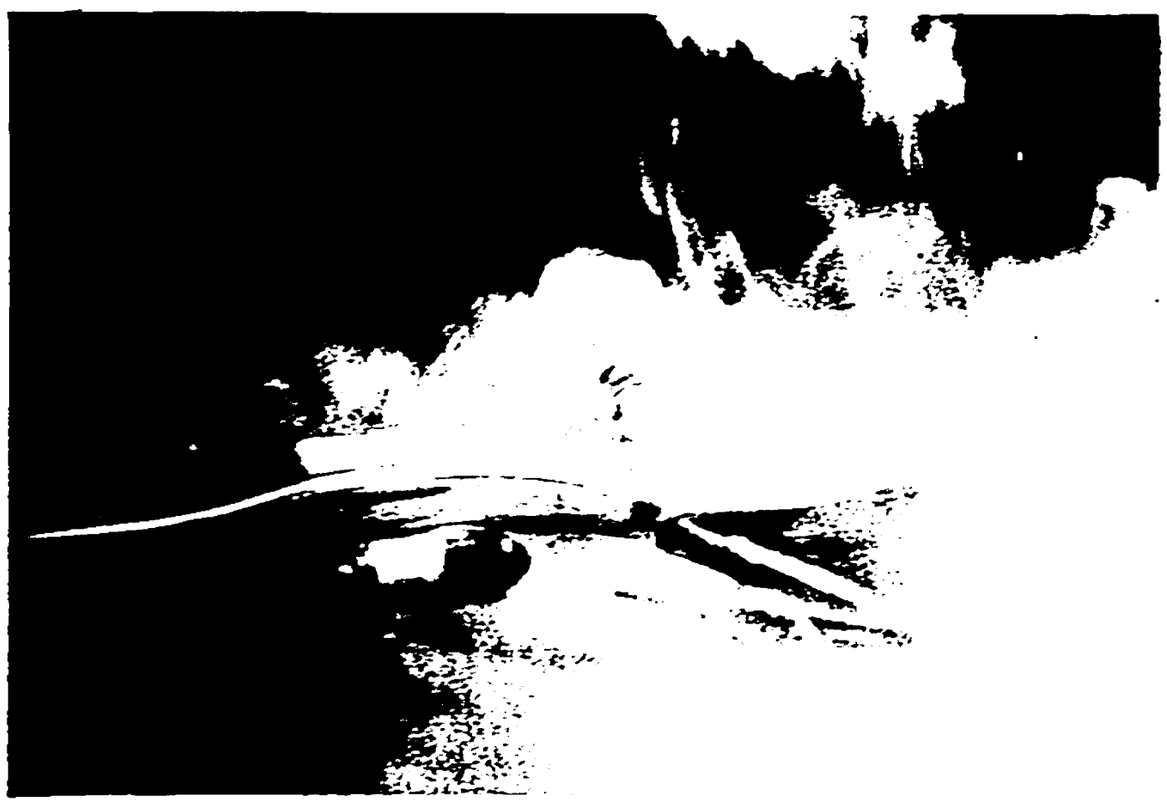
Nor does he consider the use of sex as subject matter in art to be a particularly novel one. "It's not like this just suddenly happened," he said. "Both India and Japan have had erotic art for thousands of years. Drugs are just a convenient scapegoat to explain erotic art in America."

Probably the target of greatest controversy is the theater. Recent plays, both in the underground and legitimate theaters, have served to horrify, titillate or in some way ruffle the calm of their respective audiences. Several of the plays have achieved this through extensive nudity, and explicit representations of sexual acts.

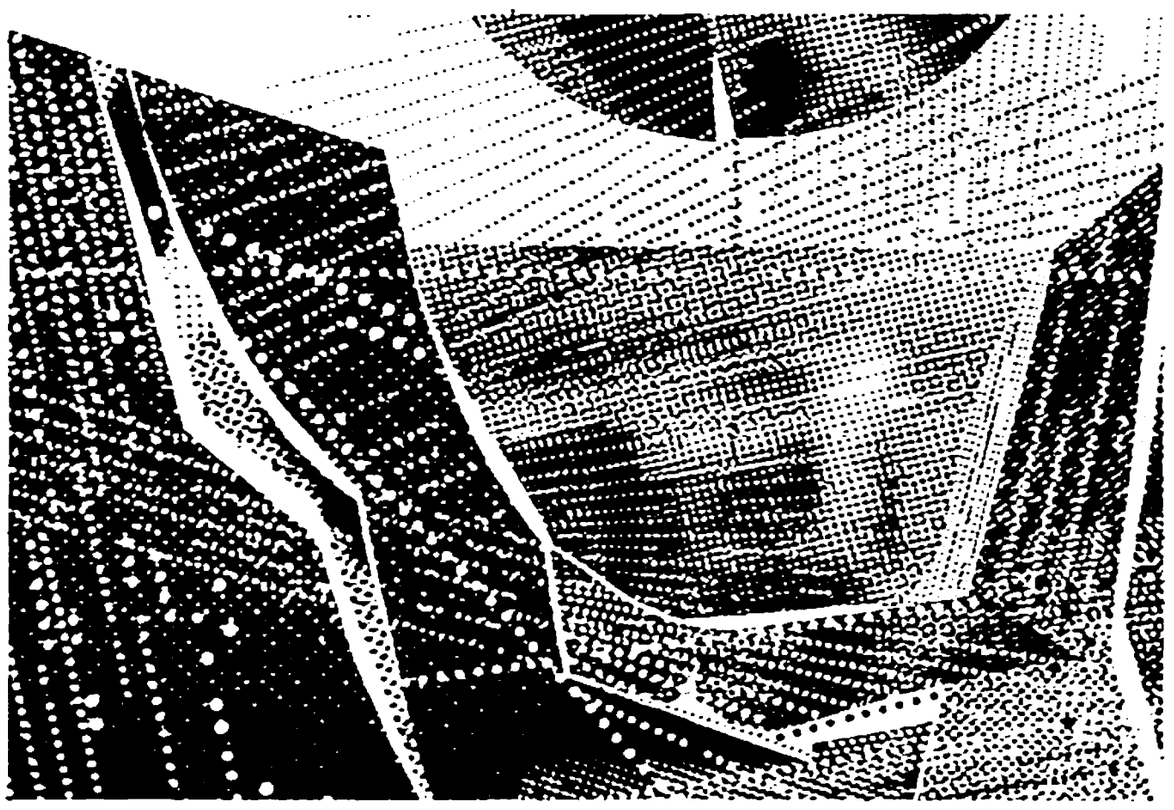
Leonard Dryansky, assistant professor in SU's drama department, believes any relation between the increase in drug use and greater freedom in the theater is "rather minimal. What we see in terms of sex and nudity is not a unique or revolutionary phenomena," he said. "It has been on the stage for thousands of years."

Dryansky sees the "reaction to nudity as a way of latching onto something that indicates reluctance to accept a total change in the world view."

"The question of what is obscene or pornographic is a smokescreen. We are unwilling to come to grips with what the real problems are-perhaps what we need to examine is our escape from solving these problems."



Sex, in Dryansky's opinion, has always been present in the American theater, but it has been a "sneaky, smirky, nauseating eroticism." As far as the commotion over the new forms of eroticism goes, Dryansky sees much of the shock as being "rather hypocritical . . . mock horror. A lot of these people are pretty damn dirty."



He cautions society not to lose sight of the theater as an art form. "It behooves us to evaluate plays as plays."

Drugs and the arts, drugs and the rise of sex as subject matter for the arts and finally, sex degenerating into what is often labelled pornography. Is this the cycle the lively arts in America have made? Or is this a synthetic phenomena, born of the much abused mass media? (Last month, for example, "Life" magazine ran sizeable photographs of scenes from avant-garde plays to give living proof to their lewdness).

Are we guilty, as one English graduate student put it, of seeing "trends" in separate events that in reality may be unrealted? If this is the case, then perhaps we are mistaking the symptoms for the illness, presuming that increased drug use and obscenity in the arts are in themselves the evils.

It could be then that the explanation for their existence and relationship may lie in the deeper and more elusive challenges confronting American life as it has always been.

The high cost of getting high

By Margaret Genovese

By their users they are called bennies," "yellow jackets," "joy," acid," "grass," "weeds" and mushrooms" and they can take you up, own and all around. By the New York tate Department of Health they are alled "Dangerous Drugs" with a capital D."

Narcotics have been inducing various ates of mental agitation for 5,000 years ut the medical states they induce have mained, for the most part, unknown. nd the controversy between those for id against drug use rages on.

A report on the "long-term mptoms" of the use of specific drugs sued by the New York State Narcotic ddiction Control Commission is ppered with "not known except," tends to," "possibility of," "no dication of," "not known although," nounting to a multitude of speculation it little fact.

On campus, dispensing what fact there in the field of the medical risks in drug e is the job of Dr. William D. Alsever, sociate professor of health and eventive medicine in the SU Student ealth Center.

Dr. Alsever admitted that research in e drug field is a long way from being mplete, but when asked how he would uncil a student on the use of drugs he id, "I would point out what I see as the edical and legal risks associated with the king of drugs. All I want to do is to ake sure he understands the possible ks in taking drugs. Then it's his oblem. I think students should be ated like adults. I think that fits in th the current thinking of students – at they are desirous of being treated e adults, shown in the issue of dorm tonomy. They want to function like ults and make decisions like adults. If y take on these new things they are er, including the use of illegal drugs, n it seems to me they should be lling to accept the responsibility for y difficulty they get into."

The question of drug use, in the sence of concrete evidence of adverse ysical effects becomes one of dibility to the student – who to lieve.

A prime example of this area of doubt in the use of marijuana, the most ely used drug on American college mpuses.

Dr. Alsever, commenting on the stion of marijuana said, "Kids who are ng pot obviously are in favor of it and e seen or heard of countless friends of irs who smoke grass and never get into trouble. I would agree with them that majority don't have any trouble. at these kids won't believe is there are ne medical and legal risks involved h marijuana. These risks or hazards are umented in medical literature. Any tor who takes care of younger people, ecially those who take care of college dents, has seen a few adverse reactions m marijuana. You can't say marijuana completely innocuous drug."

In an article in the journal "Attack," published by the New York State Narcotic Addiction Control Commission, the detrimental physical effects of the use of marijuana are listed as "a mild rise in blood pressure, an insignificant increase in pulse rate and a slight dilation of pupils." The New York State Department of Health amplifies that and adds that marijuana has an effect lasting for three to four hours during which the initial "symptoms" of the user are, "relaxation, perception and judgment mildly altered, and mood intensification."

Dr. Alsever, also Onondaga County's assistant medical examiner, said these symptoms can be lethal when the user drives a car. "Some kids tell me they drive cars when they are stoned. They see things in the road that aren't there and take defensive action; they tailgate and they miscalculate speed because of a decrease in visual perception."

that it is hard to drink enough at one time for the effect of alcohol to be fatal but with drugs this is not the case. Medically there is no way to withdraw an excess and an antidote, if it is known, may come too late.

Dr. Alsever cited other alleged medical consequences of the use of marijuana:

"One is what we call drug dependence, meaning not physical addiction, but rather, a psychological craving and habituation of marijuana.

"I've seen several students here that get so involved with marijuana that they neglect other aspects of their lives. They lose their motivation. Their goals are exclusively oriented toward drugs and they drop out -- from school or any other activities. They become pot heads and just deteriorate, but it's not a physical deterioration.

LSD use and breakage of chromosomes - the carriers of genetic information from parent to child. A break in chromosomal structure in a parent may result in congenital deformities in his child.

Doctors at the State University of New York Upstate Medical Center in Syracuse are currently conducting research into the effect of LSD on chromosomes. Thus far, findings at Upstate have been negative.

Dr. Gerald J. Bargman, chief resident in pediatrics at the center, has been exposing chicken embryos to LSD. Dr. Bargman, in explaining his results said, "With my chick embryos I didn't find any breakage. I want to stress, it may be a reflection of my method and/or species specificity." According to Dr. Bargman, different species react differently to the drug with certain abnormalities in other species being documented.

He explained that the same research problem was found in the testing of the drug thalidomide which was discovered to cause gross congenital deformities in children. The species of laboratory test animals, rats in this case, was not found to be effected by the drug.

LSD, a synthetic compound, was discovered by accident and as facts about it are uncovered, its workings become more puzzling. Although the main symptomatic effect of the drug on the user is in the central nervous system, according to Dr. Bargman, in post-mortem studies no traces of it are found in the brain. Most is found in the liver and kidneys.

Another puzzling aspect is the length of LSD's viability in the body. Research has found that it requires 175 minutes to use up half of its substance. Dr. Bargman explained, "The important issue here is that it persists for a relatively long time for a drug."

Although all examinations of chromosomes exposed to LSD at Upstate have resulted in no evidence of breakage, that facility has documented a recorded case of a deformity in a child, one of whose parents may have been using LSD.

Dr. Lytt I. Gardner, director of the Genetics and Endocrine Unit at the center, one of the three doctors submitting the report, said that a chromosome test conducted on the child showed no evidence of breakage.

Even in the absence of any proof of a connection between LSD and the deformity, Dr. Gardner explained the responsibility of doctors to document such cases, "We always have to suspect congenital deformities with a new drug unless proven otherwise. Especially since thalidomide; certainly, everyone is aware of this."

In the absence of conclusive medical evidence on the effects of narcotics, doctors are suspending sentence until all available testimony is entered. What they will say is "we're just not sure, and we cannot be sure - we're treating it like a poison without an antidote."

"ANOTHER THING WE DOCTORS FEAR IS ESCALATION TO STRONGER DRUGS, HASHISH, SPEED, LSD. WE'VE ALL SEEN A FEW STUDENTS WHO GET WHAT WE CALL THE MULTIPLE DRUG HABIT, WHERE THEY START AS A POT HEAD, THEN THEY BECOME AN ACID HEAD AND THEY MAY END UP AS A SPEED FREAK. I'M NOT SAYING THIS HAPPENS VERY OFTEN, BUT AS A DOCTOR YOU ONLY HAVE TO SEE A FEW TO NOT WANT IT TO HAPPEN ANY MORE."

Marijuana users say that the same thing can happen when a person is in a state of drunkenness from liquor, a legal intoxicant. Dr. Alsever countered that arguement and said, "Being a medical examiner and all that entails at the morgue, I am just as opposed to people being drunk on alcohol as I am people being stoned on marijuana, LSD and speed (mescaline). If you could prove today, which no one has done, that pot was safer than alcohol, it is not in my estimation, a valid reason for legalizing grass and making one more intoxicating drug available to the American public. We already have tremendous problems with alcohol and drugs. The average adult American does not drink to get drunk.

This is a fact. But you ask any student why he blows grass and you get one answer – to get turned on, to get stoned."

Another aspect of the same problem is

"Another thing we doctors fear is escalation to stronger drugs, hashish, speed, LSD. We've all seen a few students who get what we call the multiple drug habit, where they start as a pot head, then they become an acid head and they may end up as a speed freak. I'm not saying this happens very often, but as a doctor you only have to see a few to not want it to happen any more."

"There are adverse mental reactions known as 'bum trips.' Medically they are attacks of acute anxiety, acute panic, acute paranoia and/or acute depression. These are temporary mental upsets. They are not psychotic and they are not insanity. They are nothing to compare with the psychotic reactions we've seen with LSD and speed. They aren't major, I'll admit, but who needs them."

In addition to the psychotic reactions evidenced from LSD, recent medical research has suggested a link between

" . . . THE REAL DAMAGE DONE TO POT SMOKERS IS DONE WHEN THEY BECOME LABELED WITH PEOPLE THEY HAVE TO ASSOCIATE WITH TO GET THE DRUGS. ONCE THEY ARE SUSPECTED OR PICKED UP, IT GOES ON THEIR RECORD AND WILL PROBABLY FOLLOW THEM FOR THE REST OF THEIR LIVES. THEY WILL ALMOST CONSTANTLY BE WATCHED BY THE POLICE."

What if it were legal?

By Bob Zuer

Susan didn't look very different from any other freshman girl at Syracuse University when she first arrived here. She had bright blue eyes, long flowing blonde hair and a nice figure.

After one semester had passed, Susan had changed. She dropped out of school. Her eyes were dark and lifeless; her hair was dull and stringy, and her figure was thin. She had become a dope addict.

Susan started out smoking pot. She was a sensitive girl and found that getting high offered her a chance to escape. But her money supply soon ran out, so she had to find new ways of getting pot. She began posing for pornographic pictures that were, in turn, sold by her supplier. She received marijuana cigarettes in return.

Later she was talked into trying some addictive drugs. Then she became a junkie and found her new habit would cost 60 to 70 dollars a day to support. To get the money she became a prostitute.

Now Susan is cured of her habit. But she remembers what drugs did to her and she hopes something can be done to prevent the same thing from happening to other girls. But she fears the laws won't help because they did not stop her.

The laws governing the use and sale of narcotics are extremely harsh in most states. In New York, for example, the law is very specific as to numbers and definitions of crimes. (Possessing 25 marijuana cigarettes is a class "D" felony that carries with it a jail sentence of from one to seven years.) Yet illegal drug traffic continues, and if anything, is increasing despite stringent penalties.

If this is true apparently the laws may not have had the deterrent effect they were supposed to have.

A Syracuse attorney, who prefers anonymity, said all drugs have been envisioned as dangerous by society at large so restrictions were placed on them. His clients, however, have told him that soft narcotics (marijuana, hash, etc.,) are no more dangerous than cigarettes or alcohol.

James K. Weeks, professor of law here, believes our lawmakers have every reason to object to the use and sale of hard drugs (addictive drugs and the hallucinatory drugs) except for medical purposes. Weeks is not quite sure, however, what should be done about soft drugs.

Soft drugs are a relatively new thing, according to Weeks, and more scientific study is necessary to determine if there are any harmful effects. He acknowledged that present medical studies might indicate marijuana is not dangerous but until more information can be gotten there should be no lessening of the law.

Most pot users still argue that it is not addicting. Yet Susan started out smoking pot and eventually began using harder stuff.

The Syracuse attorney agreed probably no one becomes addicted physically to pot but was worried about the psychological effects smoking has on the individual. "Pot users think it should be legalized," he said. "They become really indignant and think society is trodding on them."

The chances of progressing to more dangerous drugs, he said, depend on the individual; but he has found among his clients a "tendency to equate with the elements they take drugs from." The lawyer said drugs are now finding their way into our high schools and the real damage done to pot smokers is done when they become labeled with the people with whom they have to associate with to get the drugs. Once they are suspected or picked up it goes on their record and will probably follow them for the rest of their lives, he added. They will almost constantly be watched by police, he emphasized .

"I suspect the neophytes who are trying pot just to find out what it's like will regret it when they are caught," he said. "But the hard core don't give a damn."

An SU junior who has smoked pot since his freshman year and has taken LSD several times told the Daily Orange these drugs make him "feel good" and he did not care what society thought of him as long as he was doing what he wanted to do.

But out of all this still remains the question of what must be done to stop the flow of drugs, for they are illegal. The amount of money going to the underworld warrants enforcement of the law according to the Syracuse attorney.

Narcotics laws may be an "adult overreaction to today's youth," according to Weeks. "The punishments are barbaric especially for use and possession," he said. "Instead law enforcement should concentrate on stopping the seller," he emphasized.

Weeks suggested removing the profits from selling narcotics would be the best way to regulate the dope trade. He acknowledged that perhaps the only way to do this would be to make drugs legal and have them controlled by a government monopoly. He recommended copying the English plan whereby narcotics would be made available to addicts through clinics. Under this plan the addict can get a fix and at the same time receive treatment that might eventually cure him. This plan might have saved Susan and girls like her from so much pain and humiliation.

Perhaps a better example from the "older generation," which seems to concerned about what the "younger generation" is doing might help too.

"We live in the age of the 'Valley of the Dolls'," Weeks said. "It's a drug-consuming nation. Mom and Dad are using more and more tranquilizers and their children are emulating them with drugs in an attempt to turn on in this new era of self-awareness."

But the laws will probably become more stringent in the short run as legislators are faced with this highly emotional issue. Parents will be afraid their children will become junkies "en masse," not realizing, as Weeks contends, that legalizing some of the drugs may take away some of their appeal.

Until something is done, however, the drug trade will remain highly profitable for some and highly destructive for others like Susan.

"SHE WAS A SENSITIVE GIRL AND FOUND THAT GETTING HIGH OFFERED HER A CHANCE TO ESCAPE. BUT HER MONEY SUPPLY SOON RAN OUT. SO SHE HAD TO FIND NEW WAYS OF GETTING POT. SHE BEGAN POSING FOR PORNOGRAPHIC PICTURES AND RECEIVED MARIJUANA CIGARETTES IN RETURN."

IDC does about-face, grants Booth autonomy

By JOHN WISNIEWSKI

The Interdormitory Council last night unanimously approved Booth Hall's proposal for autonomy. Winchell Hall, Saint Mary's (Women) and Washington Arms were also unconditionally approved by unanimous vote.

IDC member Gary Bacal motioned for unconditional approval for Booth. In a prepared statement he told council members:

"Last night Fred Feld and I re-evaluated Booth Hall as a part of the process in its gaining dormitory autonomy. After speaking with the Dormitory Council at a special dorm council meeting, and talking individually to approximately 60 residents of Booth, we concluded that there has been substantial discussion of the educational and cultural aspects of dorm autonomy, and if at any time in the future, any problems, criticisms and/or suggestions should arise, the residents do now and would then have an effective means of expressing themselves and securing action.

"We recommend passing autonomy for Booth Hall."

After last night's meeting Connie Steward, IDC vice-president-elect, commented on yesterday's Booth-IDC controversy.

"It was caused by a lack of communication between IDC and Booth," she said. "We find it difficult to communicate effectively with the campus in general, and the dorms in specific, due to the small task force we are working with."

She added: "Unless more interest in IDC is shown by increased attendance at our meetings, this difficulty will continue."

Steve Tober, Booth Dorm president, said the problem resulted from "a misconception as to what powers IDC actually has with regard to autonomy."

"I'm glad that responsible people have taken responsible action in interpreting what the criteria for autonomy really are," he concluded.

ABM conference set for Monday

By SAM HEMINGWAY

Speakers from the educational, military and political worlds will participate in an open discussion on the strengths and weaknesses of the proposed anti-ballistic missile system Monday at 8 p.m. in Gifford Auditorium.

Organized by a group called the Syracuse Area Faculty Group on Issues of War and Peace, the session will feature Representative Jonathan B. Bingham (Dem.) of New York's 23rd district, physics Professor Jay Orear of Cornell University and a civilian representative of the Defense Department, as yet unnamed.

Bingham is presently serving on the Committee on Foreign Affairs and is a member of a bipartisan Steering Committee of Members of Congress for Peace Through Law. Orear is a past president of the Federation of American Scientists.

Local Coordinator for the conference is Prof. Joshua Goldberg of the physics department. Goldberg said that the issues involved in the controversy "have become quite clear recently and we felt it was time to present our entire argument."

Interest by scientists and educators in other fields has grown since then-Secretary of Defense MacNamara came out against the system but advocated a less expensive thin line defensive system. After the inaguration, President Nixon ordered a review of the Sentinel program which was constructed to protect major American cities. The President brought the issue into national focus when he called for passage of the Safeguard missile plan, which is constructed to protect military sites.

The American Physics Society came out against the system last January after statements by Dr. Jerome Weisner, a provost of M.I.T. and other leading scientists. Following a meeting on the west coast last March, in which Weisner, Sen. George McGovern and Ronald Brennan, founder with Herman Kahn of the Hudson Institute and a physicist for the Rand Corp. participated, Goldberg began to work on a similar symposium on the SU campus.

JONATHAN BINGHAM

Goldberg himself was against the ABM. "It doesn't serve its purpose and is a waste of money and time." Other professors from different departments on campus generally agreed with Goldberg. Prof. Oliver Clubb of Political Science echoed MacNamara's words, "In military thinking the offense can always keep ahead of the defense. Thus the ABM, a defensive system, would produce an offensive response from the U.S.S.R. This makes defense expenditures more expensive."

Clubb also listed the results of the ABM as dubious in terms of national security and the arms race. He felt that "absolute security is out of the question. It produces an upward spiraling arms race and strengthens the atmosphere of fear in the American people."

Bill says advertising only benefits big companies.

But who started aerosol shave cream?

A small outfit, who backed a good idea with advertising.

Back in the '50's, a modest-sized company named Carter Products came up with something new: an aerosol push-button lather called RISE.

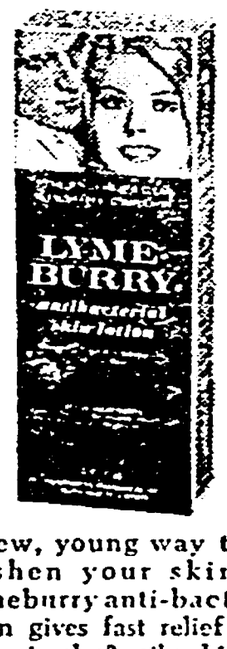
They didn't have much money for advertising—barely one-tenth of what the leading brushless shave cream was spending.

But that was enough. RISE was a hit.

Naturally, the big companies came back with their own aerosol brands. But the hotter competition got, the more people tried RISE. Today, RISE sells over 15 times what it did in its first year—thanks largely to all this advertising.

Maybe you, like Bill, think advertising favors big companies, raises prices, keeps unwanted products on the market. But actual cases prove just the opposite. Advertising helps lower prices (look at color TV). Promotes new ideas (like RISE). Gives us a choice. Helps imaginative smaller companies compete (Volkswagen, for instance).

Interested? Write us. We'll gladly send you more facts about advertising. You'll find they speak for themselves.



In the meantime, keep an open mind.

ASSOCIATION OF INDUSTRIAL ADVERTISERS, 41 EAST 42nd STREET, NEW YORK, N.Y. 10017. AIA

Tropical

LYME-BURRY®

a new anti-bacterial skin lotion that soothes, clears complexion

A new, young way to refreshen your skin . . . Lymeburry anti-bacterial lotion gives fast relief from acne pimples*, oily skin and minor skin blemishes. Its exclusive formula makes it an invigorating after shave anti-bacterial lotion as well. Lymeburry—the soothing first aid treatment for your skin, made from the aromatic oils of fresh tropical limes.

*externally caused

"The refreshing breeze in a bottle" $1.25

FREE

sample of Lymeburry Lotion at your local drugstore with this advertisement

Happenings on the Hill

CAMPUS NOTICES must be brought to the Daily Orange, 1101 East Adams St., before 3 p.m. on the day before publication. They are to be typed, double space, and left on the first desk on the left as you enter the second floor.

FRIDAY

DRAMA DEPT.: Would you believe? 5 p.m. Dracula will be presented at the Experimental Theatre. A natural follow-up to Marat/Sade.

PHI DELTA THETA Informal rush Sunday, May 11, from 2-4 p.m. All are invited.

ITALIAN FILM SERIES: "Before the Revolution" (1964) directed by B. Bertolucci. Kittredge, 7 and 9 p.m. -- $1.

GRAD STUDENTS Pot-Luck supper from 6-8 p.m. at Chapel House. Sponsored by Lutheran Campus Ministry. Baby Sitting provided.

SABBATH EVE services, 7:30 p.m. Hendricks Chapel.

JUNIOR WELLS AND JOHN HAMMOND at Jabberwocky. Three shows at 7:30, 9:30 and 11:15 p.m. Tickets $2.50 each show at HBC or door.

WAA RIDING CLUB members and other interested women students - club meeting at 7:30 p.m. in the Alumnae lounge of the Women's Building. Questions, call Kristi X2138.

TRADITIONS COMMISSION-There will be an important meeting 9 p.m. at the Orange. (Including Seniors) Mandatory meeting.

ALL QUESTIONAIRES on campus organizations should be in to Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity by today.

SATURDAY

LAMBDA SIGMA SIGMA actives and pledges and Eta Pi Upsilon pledges: remember to come to Shaw dining hall at 7:15 p.m. Friday to set up for the Strawberry Breakfast and be at Shaw at 6:45 a.m. to serve breakfast.

ATTENTION GOONS-Any goon who can drive for the car parade before the Strawberry Breakfast please bring your car to Shaw at 6 a.m.

SPRING WEEKEND FLOATS-All groups please have your float lined up on College Place by 9:15 Saturday morning. Moving-up ceremonies and the parade will begin at 10:00 a.m. on the Newhouse Steps.

THE CINCINNATI KID at Kittredge 8:30 and 10:15. Hillel Members .50, general admission $1.

THE ANNUAL PICNIC for volunteers and education majors in the Institute of Common Psycology will be at the Bishop-Forey Day Camp in Jordon N.Y. from 10 a.m. to 12 noon. Call Steve Apter at 2330 for information.

BELLY DANCER at Day Hall from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. Arabic Food and Beer.

SUNDAY

PAN AFRICAN STUDIES meeting at Bebe cottage at 2 p.m. for presentation of constitution.

OTHELLO - 7 and 9 p.m. in Gifford $1.

OUTDOOR SERVICE at Thorndon Park - 10 a.m. sponsored by the Lutheran Campus Ministry. X-change at 5:30 with buffet supper and discussion, Chapel House, co-sponsored by UCCF.

MONDAY

FORESTRY HONORS CONVOCATION will be held at 4:15 in Illick Auditorium. Guest speaker will be author and professor Norman A. Graebner. Everyone is invited.

SEMINAR for Laboratory of Sensory Communication at 4 p.m. in Grant Aud. Topic: "Visual Receptors and Retinal Interaction." -H. Keffer Hartline.

ABM—YES OR NO a public discussion on the ABM with Jonathon Bingham, Jay Orear, and a spokesman from the Department of Defense, 8 p.m. in Gifford Auditorium.

ANYONE INTERESTED in becoming an IDC living center guide next year should attend a meeting at 8 p.m. in Newhouse Lounge. Questions, call Kate Shirling at X2634 or Dan Lowengard at X3547.

GENERAL

"FIORELLO" tickets can be purchased at the Newman Center. The Pompeian Player's production will be at Loew's Theater, May 13-15. For info call the Newman Center, X2600 or 478-5959.

SUICIDES ANONYMOUS: the night ear-Call 422-1000, 6 p.m.-6 a.m., M-F.

UU PRESENTS "Othello," Sunday, 7 and 9 p.m. in Gifford Aud. $1 admission.

SENIOR EXEC applications. Submit an index card including name, address, extension; on back activities and ideas to Phi Psi c/o Lou Brindis by May 9.

JUNIOR WELLS and his Chicago blues band plus John Hammond at Jabberwocky for Spring Weekend, May 8, 9, 10. Tix on sale for $2.50 at HBC.

STRAWBERRY BREAKFAST tickets are on sale all this week from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the counter in HBC lobby. Price $1.25 per ticket.

DAILY MASSES - 12:05 and 4:05 Monday to Friday at Hendricks Chapel. Saturdays at 5:05, St. Thomas More Chapel.

ANY FRESHMEN, Sophomores, or Juniors interested in a new girl's co-op call Linda Jansen X3046 or X3047 or attend the IDC meeting Thursday 7:30 at 204 HL.

Lost

LOST yesterday afternoon -- a grey suede pouch with cash and keys. Please call Gretchen Dorrington at extension 3718 if you find it.

Onondaga alums increase giving

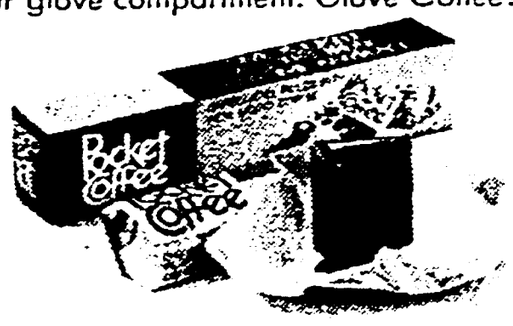
The drive for a better University reaches all the way back to the alumni. And figures from this year's alumni fund drive show that SU alums are contributing more than ever before.

As of May 1, Onondaga County alumni participation in annual giving was 20 per cent, or almost $12,000 higher than last year, said Ted Hoople, director of the University's annual giving program.

These figures do not include the results of this year's Phone-a-thon, which was held last Monday and Tuesday and in which both the number of contributors and the amount of contributions was up from last year.

FOR MOTHER'S DAY
(Next Sunday)
our special gifts and cards are the greatest !
THE "BOOKSTALL".
147 Marshall Street
Fascinating Gifts — Fine Stationery — Fabulous Cards
43 years by the Campus
Your Friendly Alum Mrs. "B."

Spend your summer learning at Hofstra.



As day students you can complete up to 14 credits — virtually a full semester's work — during Hofstra's two five-week summer sessions. Evening students can complete up to 8 credits.
Almost 400 undergraduate and graduate courses to choose from. Classes are taught by regular Hofstra faculty supplemented by outstanding visiting professors.
These courses are also available at Hofstra's Extension in Commack.
First Session: June 18 - July 22
Second Session: July 25 - August 28
Registration information and catalogues may be obtained by writing or calling Director of Summer Sessions, (516) 560-3511. Spend your summer at this exciting university . . . learning.
Hofstra University
Hempstead, N.Y. 11550

Pocket Coffee! What's that?

A new kind of coffee break for the man on the move.

The man who dreamed up Pocket Coffee figured there were probably a lot of people around who at one time or another couldn't take a coffee break when they needed one. The only way they could get their coffee was to carry it with them.
Eureka! He thought up a way of putting some real brewed liquid coffee inside a delicious chocolate shell.
He called it Pocket Coffee because it's the coffee break you can carry with you in your pocket or purse, even your glove compartment. Glove Coffee????

Available at

Spring Weekend

JUNIOR WELLS
and his Chicago Blues Band

JOHN HAMMOND

Friday and Saturday 7:30, 9:30 and 11:15 p.m.
TICKETS $2.50 Per Show at HBC or Door

SPRING WEEKEND SCHEDULE
Friday, 9-12 P.M. Watson Courtyard dance with band and beer
$1.00, 50c with Wells/Hammond Ticket
Saturday, 7:30 A.M. Strawberry Breakfast - Shaw
Saturday, 10 a.m. Moving up ceremony -- Newhouse
Saturday 2-4 P.M. Free Folk Festival Thornden Park Amphitheatre

Yearbook available

The senior yearbook will be available on May 13. Details about distribution will be presented in Tuesday's Daily Orange.

Central New York builder/developer has opening in a widely diversified building field for eager, intelligent, young college graduate. Must be aggressive, willing to follow directions, possess supervisory capabilities and be capable of accepting responsibility. No construction experience necessary. Send resume to P. O. Box 1356, Syracuse 13201.

College Relations Director
c/o Sheraton-Park Hotel, Washington, D.C. 20008
Please send me a free Sheraton Student I.D. Card:
Name:_____
Address:_____

We're holding the cards.

Get one. Rooms are now up to 20% off with a Sheraton Student I.D. How much depends on where and when you stay.

And the Student I.D. card is free to begin with.

Send in the coupon. It's a good deal. And at a good place.

Sheraton Hotels & Motor Inns

Sheraton Hotels and Motor Inns. A Worldwide Service of ITT

Conference to encourage formation of compensatory education program here

By PAUL WILLISTEIN JR.

A program of "special courses and activities to compensate for substandard education of minority freshmen from disadvantaged areas" will be the goal discussed at the Summer Compensatory Education Conference this Sunday from 2 to 5 p.m. in Maxwell's Founder's Room.

The conference features speakers and workshops to encourage the formation of a compensatory program at Oswego State University College.

The principle speaker will be Prof. Carner. Other speakers include Byron Merrit, From Spearhead, Betty Hubbard, member of Minority Group Enrollment Committee, and a yet unnamed person from Traditions Commission.

People attending the conference will be able to participate in six workshop groups. With the focus being on the organizaton of a compensatory program at SU, the workshop topics are: Curriculum Development, Faculty Selection, Financing Expenses, Extracurricular Activities, Participant Accommodations, and Program Administration.

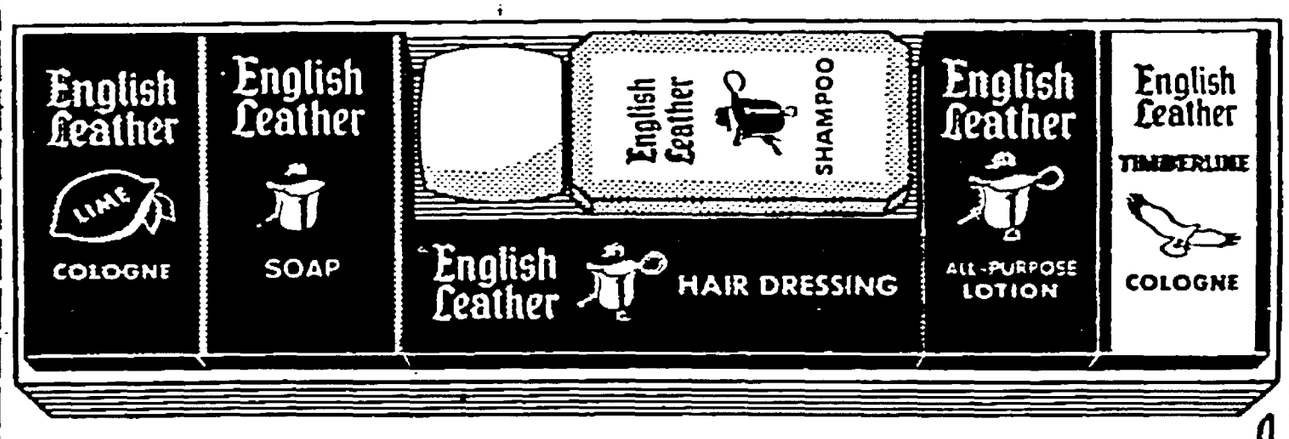
Sunday's conference is being sponsored by Spearhead, the Maxwell Graduate Student Association, Minority Group Committee, and Traditions Commission. The planned duration for the summer courses would be from August to September or a total of five weeks. Funding would be by alumni donations and provate foundations.

The compensatory program's three main expectations are (1) to increase the achievements of black freshmen and black students in general, (2) to orientate them to survival on a white campus, and (3) to give them self-confidence essential in college.

"As a result of the conference, we hope to motivate the compus toward a compensatory program for this summer," commented Willette Hunt. She is co-chairman of the conference along with Ed Ruhe.

SENIORS, GRADS, Phd's — FOR EACH COMPLETED PART II OF THE JOB INTERVIEW RECRUITMENT QUESTIONNAIRE YOU TURN IN AT THE PLACEMENT CENTER YOU'LL RECEIVE A 25¢ COUPON REDEEMABLE AT ANY S. U. BOOKSTORE. COUPON OFFER EXPIRES MAY 20, 1969.

Marat Sade
directed by
g. e. moses
may 8-10, 15-17
8:00 p. m.
$3; students $2
a syracuse university
drama department
production
experimental theatre of...
UNIVERSITY REGENT THEATRE
820 EAST GENESEE ST.



WISE CATS KNOW you save when you buy COOK'S TRAVELERS CHEQUES

STILL ONLY
75¢ issuance charge ON $100
Backed by the world's largest travel organization
THOS. COOK & SON

JAM FACTORY
VS.
OZ And THE ENDS
At The Warehouse, Ithaca Friday, May 9

Six ways to say I love me. $1.00.

Sample the delights of three different English Leather fragrances plus soap, shampoo and hair dressing. You can love yourself to pieces if someone soft doesn't get to you first.

English Leather.

MEM COMPANY, INC.
P.O. Box 122, New York, N.Y. 10045

Here's my dollar. Send me my English Leather Sampler.

Name_____
Address_____
City_____ State_____ Zip_____

SBU officials push for demands

By VIC LIVINGSTON

Although the campus-wide boycott was over two weeks ago, the Students for a Better University are continuing their efforts to present all demands formulated during the strike to administration officials.

SBU officials have met with Chancellor Tolley three times, and the negotiators are hopeful that further progress will be made in all areas.

"It is the general feeling of the students on SBU that the Administration did everything that it can do at this time," Dave Ifshin, SG President and chief SBU spokesman explained.

SBU now plans to follow up student action through the new SG organizational committees and expansion of both SBU and CSL. Applications are currently being accepted for various SG commissioner posts, issue coordination committees, positions on the new SBU, and the SG Task Force. A summary of the positions available and application appears below (see box).

A major pursuit of SBU is a complete investigation of all university finances, involving the disclosure of all financial transactions by the Administration.

A subcommittee is being formed to investigate the activities of the Syracuse University Research Corporation and other university organizations dealing with financial matters. In addition, a thorough investigation of all student charges, tuition, room and board and other fees is planned.

Regarding the university's relations with the surrounding community, SBU is pushing to place students on the board of the University Hill Corporation. According to Ifshin, the Corporation, a federation of community groups to plan relocation of residents displaced by university expansion, "is not the big ogre it has been made out to be." Certain charges against the Corporation levied by certain student groups actually stem from action taken by the Upstate Medical Center, and SU cannot be held responsible, Ifshin said. The SG president cited the Frisbee Court project as an example of an Upstate Center project independent of SU control.

Ifshin plans to continue the strengthening of SBU through increased student action on issues investigated by the new committees and direct pressure of SBU officials. "SBU will become more and more militant. The strategy is to be as strong as possible. We are dealing with SU benevolence and SU is not known to be a benevolent organization," Ifshin said.

The SBU is currently compiling a detailed report explaining all its recent activity to be made available to all students.

Positions open

1) Commissioners--applications are being accepted for commissioners of athletics, NSA, publications, dorm life, and intellectual revitalization. Applicants must submit a resume, including experience in the field and conception of the position.

2) Issue Coordination Committees--to be formed from students submitting a 3X5 file card stating the issue to be pursued. Students may also apply in a general capacity.

3) SBU--applications are being accepted for 14 new positions to be chosen by CSL members. Will be chaired by the SG president and will be an autonomous body under SG.

4) SG Task Force--This all-purpose group will be placed on stand-by capacity, ready to act as a volunteer mobilization force in a variety of SG projects.

Any student may apply for any of the four areas. Interested students should contact any of the following persons: Mike Durfor (3921), Tom Bryan (2626), Bill Watson (3095), Lance Wisniewski (3553) and Mary Zeiss (2167).

Band schedules spring concert

The Syracuse University Symphonic Band has scheduled its spring concert for this coming Sunday afternoon at 4 p.m. in Crouse auditorium on the campus.

The program includes a Vivaldi Concerto Grosso, Vincent Persichetti's "Pageant" a Stravinsky Suite, "Tulsa," by Don Gillis and Haydn Wood's "Mannin Veen." Campus parking is invited for all Crouse College concerts.

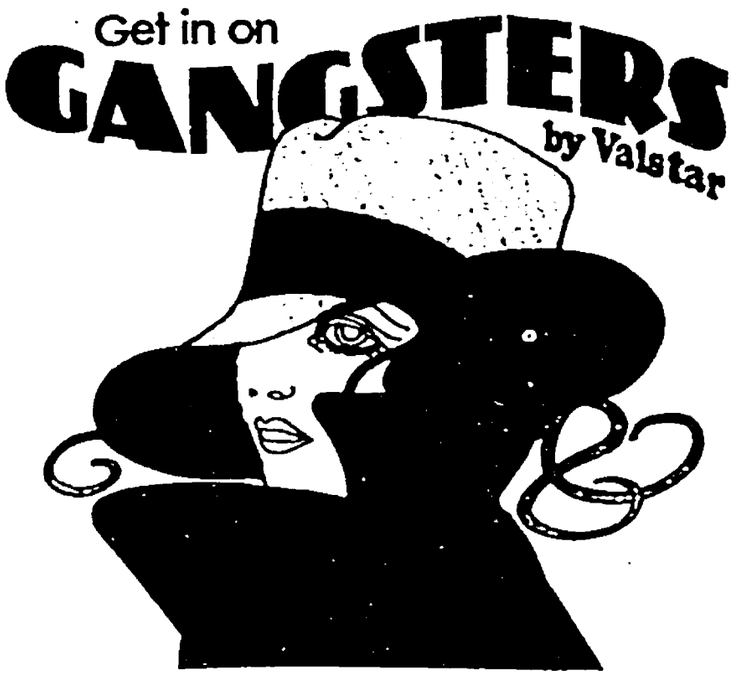
The next concert will be the Honors Concert by students in the School of Music, Sunday, May 18 at 4 p.m.

FRATERNITIES . .

SORORITIES . . .

Order Your Christmas and holiday cards at a discount to save money and work in the fall.

L. G. Balfour Co.
729 S. Crouse Ave.
(Next to the Post Office)
Carl Sorenson, Mgr.
GR 5-7837



LABORATORY ASSISTANTS

Full time-to do research on solution properties of proteins. B. S. Degree in chemistry preferred, but Biology Major with background in chemistry will also be considered. Interested in instrumental techniques desirable but not an absolute requisite.

If interested, contact M. J. Kronman, Dept. of Biochemistry, State University of N. Y., Upstate Medical Center
473-5865

An Equal Opportunity Employer.

Get in on GANGSTERS by Valstar

From LONDON Gangsters makes fun of the wet look, in raincoats, skirts, pants, etc.

Umberto Salon and Boutique

302 S. Warren St. Syracuse, N. Y.
422-9500

LATIN AMERICAN INSTITUTE

BILINGUAL SECRETARIAL

Spanish—English and French—English

Two or three semester programs. Begin in January, June or September. Also part time courses during the day or in the evening.

Modern air-conditioned classrooms. Nationally accredited by A.C.B.S. Residences recommended. Placement service for graduates.

Room 35, 292 Madison Ave. (at 41st St.)
New York, N.Y. 10017
Phone:
(212) LE 2-6073

all work and some school makes jack...

Start a summer work-study program. Earn up to nine credits during the evening in courses taught by Syracuse University professors.

Visiting students are welcome and credits are transferrable to most other accredited colleges and universities.

- Summer Session June 9 to August 22
- Free Professional Counseling
- Registration: June 5-6; 4:30-9:00 pm
- For information write the Counselor's Office, 610 E. Fayette St., Syracuse, N. Y. 13202: or call 476-5541, X 3261.

University College

THE CONTINUING EDUCATION COLLEGE of SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY

Revlon invents 'eye-lushes'

(We call them 'Fluffy-Full')

They're the lushest, plushest eyelashes around. (We've perfected a sexy, shaggy, 'feather-cut' that's the absolute end in eye-lushery.) Yet they feel so light on your lids, you wouldn't know them from your own. What else is new? They're permanently shaped and curled. Even water-proof! So you can swim in them. Sleep in them. Weep in them. They'll never wilt. Or droop. Or lose their 'eye-lush' look.

From the incomparable collection of eyelashery by Revlon

Available at:

Syracuse University Bookstore

Italian Club to present modern Adam and Eve

Il Circolo Italiano will present Cesare Pavese's Italian play, "Si Parva Licit," Tuesday, May 13, in Kittredge Auditorium at 8 p.m. The one-act play, which depicts Adam and Eve in a modern light, is being produced by the Italian Club under the supervision of Mrs. Elizabeth Nobile.

The play will be performed entirely in Italian, though a detailed English synopsis will be provided for the non-Italian speaking members of the audience.

The stage director is Edward Snowdon, a senior in drama, who also portrays the leading role of Adam. Eve is played by Heather Shaner, a senior who studied one semester in Florence.

"Si Parva Licet" treats the Adam and Eve fable with both gentle and biting irony. Author Pavese, one of the most influential writers of his generation, reflects many of his personal feelings in the characters.

There will be one performance only. The admission is free and coffee will be served following the show.

Consultant visits to aid UU plans

By SUE SHAPIRO

Max Holt Andrews, one of the nation's leading planning consultants and program directors for union buildings has been hired to direct the planning of the all-campus student union project.

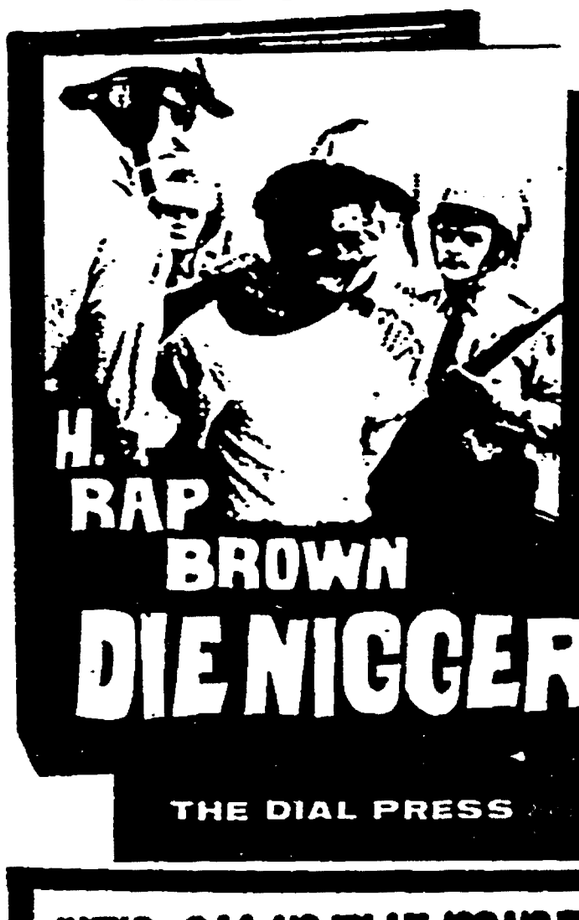
Andrews will meet with all interested students at 2:30 p.m. today in the Noble Room of Hendrick's Chapel to explain his role in the union building project. All campus groups which plan to work with UU will meet with Andrews and UU directors tomorrow morning to discuss union plans.

Andrews, planning consultant for over 50 college unions in the United States and Canada, will sign a formal contract with UU Chairman Ira Kurzban and Vice Chairman R.C. Rockefeller this afternoon.

His hiring is the most significant step to date in getting the union blueprints into an active planning stage.

The Development Board of University Union is currently meeting with the University Design Board to select a site for the student building, and has already made fund raising approaches to a number of beer and soft drink cocompanies.

The executive committee of the Board of Trustees has recently recommended that the full board make the union building the first priority fund raising project after funding of the new library has been completed.



Andrews, who has served in nearly a dozen executive positions in the Association of College Union-International and raised over $55,000 for ACU–I projects, has been responsible for planning, financing, constructing, directing, and maintaining numerous multi-million-dollar student union buildings.

MAX HOLT ANDREWS

His current projects include unions at Rutgers U., Adelphi U., U. of Texas, Queens College, and the U. of Western Ontario. The $11 million union at Queens College is due to be completed next year.

In addition to being a noted planning consultant for university unions, Andrews is an author, teacher, personnel authority, program administrator, and sports instructor.

film forum
gifford auditorium
syracuse university
$1.00
MAY 13, 14, 15
6, 8 & 10 p.m.

IMMEDIATE VENTURE CAPITAL AVAILABLE
for new businesses

We are looking for graduate students who have sound ideas for new products or services as well as the capabilities to head up as principals new organizations to see the projects culminated.

Reply only in writing, submitting detail plans. Do not include confidential information.

Globus, inc.
25 Broadway, New York, N.Y. 10004

UNDERWRITERS AND INVESTMENT BANKERS

Touring Europe in '69?
Remember
CZECHOSLOVAKIA!
It's easy to go there!

Meet the young people of Prague. See the historic landmarks: Hradcany Castle, Wenceslaus Square, the little Golden Street where Kafka lived, the oldest university in Central Europe. And gorge yourself on a feast of all the arts . . . Mediaeval to multi-media, Baroque and Rennaissance, Dvorak and rock, frescoes and films.

Not more than ninety minutes from the farthest point in Europe . . . Prague is one of the most exciting capitals in the world today and Bratislava, the romantic capital of Slovakia on the Danube is just an hour's drive from Vienna.

Group tours from $57 per person for 7 days, all incl.
Visas issued within 48 hours.

Contact your travel agent or write for information:

CEDOK CZECHOSLOVAK TRAVEL BUREAU 46P
10 East 40th Street, New York, N.Y. 10016
Name:
Address:
City
State Zip
My travel agent is:

Art museum, honored with State Award

By CELESTE LACY

The new Everson Museum of Art has received the 1969 State Award from the New York State Council on the Arts for "an outstanding contemporary building which has generated public pride and even greater interest in the arts in Syracuse."

Opening late in 1968, the museum is located in downtown Syracuse and is the architectural creation of I.M. Pei, who also designed the Newhouse Communications Center.

John B. Hightower, executive director of the New York State Council of the Arts said:

"The New York State Award gives recognition to the efforts of people collectively and individually who care about the quality and appearance of our state not because "pretty things are nice" but because the look and liveliness of our surroundings is a mark of its integrity–ethical, asthetic–call it what you will."

The museum represents a new partnership between large private donations and broad community support through hundreds of small gifts. The Syracuse community had been involved in fund raising efforts for the building for five years.

Twelve other recipients were cited for the award including the American Museum of Natural History, the Brooklyn Academy of Music, Lincoln Center and the Geneva Historical Society.

Hightower said, "We hope the New York State Award will encourage others to make similar efforts. It would probably be more fun giving booby prizes, but, not only would this be a little impolitic, the negative aspects of life get enough emphasis as it is.

UJB housing case: student is "guilty"

By MITCH LANE

Choosing to move through a fog of undetermined facts instead of striking the constitutional issue at hand University Judicial Board (UJB) last night sentenced Joe Treple to two semester's board probation, (probation without penality), for falsifying records and violating housing regulations.

The Dean of Men charged Treple with implying that he was going to live with a blood relative when in fact he wasn't and living in off-campus housing while holding dormitory housing.

David Ifshin, Student government president-elect, speaking to the court as commissioner of legal rights for the National Student Association (NSA) advised the court that the real issues concerned "whether a student who occupies approved University housing can be bared from holding other residence."

Ifshin continued "The student does not waive any constitutional rights when he joins the University. This is not a private University. Dorms are built with federal funds. A great deal of state funds come to the University. In the courts it has already been determined at the State University that a student can live off campus merely by notifying the administration of that fact."

Treple wished his defense before UJB to proceed on the constitutional issues of in loco parentis. The court refused this line of defense and instead insisted on "hearing the facts of the case." The justices questioned the defendent at length concerning such issues as when did he pay his rent, how did he meet his room mate, the exact date of his petition and other questions relavant to the question of Treple's actual violation of the University regulation.

During the proceedings, the court asked Treple to change his plea to "guilty" so that the court might address itself to the more important issue at hand. Because Treple refused to change his plea the court contends that it was forced to rule on the factual issue of Treple's guilt rather than the real issue of in loco parentis.

Treple contends, "Guilt involves wrong doing. I won't plead guilty when I haven't done anything wrong. There are laws higher than the University. To me the Constitution of the United States is higher than Dates and Data."

In his brief Treple charged "This case is a fine example of the University interfering with a student's life without cause. University regulations should be assiduosly enforced as long as they have a legitimate and justifiable purpose. It may even be up to the student to break regulations when he finds the University will not bargain in good faith and comply with federal dictum."

"I asked the court to uphold the student constitutional rights in the field of in loco parentis. The courts have declared the theory and practice both unconstitutional. The University does [illegible] they have given the [illegible]p. But when they want [illegible] it. [illegible] it. The [illegible] are a perfect [illegible] of the [illegible]."

[illegible] have [illegible] City of Syracuse for a week. Is that illegal? Is a month illegal? The point is that I had a legal residence in Grover Cleveland paid in full. Doesn't a residence truly give you the right to stay away as well as stay?"

Treple plans to appeal the decision next week.

Spring Weekend schedule

Friday, May 9

JABBERWOCKY – Junior Wells and John Hammond in Kimmel basement. Shows at 7:30, 9:30 and 11:30. Tickets available at HBC for $2.50 per person or can be purchased at the door.

SPRING WEEKEND DANCE--in Watson courtyard from 9 till 12. In the lounge in case of rain. Music by the "Creative Art" from Ithaca. Price is $1 per person or $3 if combined with a Jabberwocky ticket. FREE BEER. Sponsored by Alpha Phi Omega.

Saturday, May 10

STRAWBERRY BREAKFAST heralding parade--6:30 a.m.

STRAWBERRY BREAKFAST--in Shaw dining hall. Music by the "Hard Life" Tickets $1.25 at the door or at HBC. Assisted by Alpha Phi Omega, Lambda Sigma Sigma and Eta Pi pledges.

FLOAT PARADE and Moving Up Ceremony--10 a.m. Newhouse steps. Don Bombard as MC. New members of honoraries will be introduced. In case of rain, in Hendricks Chapel.

FOLK FEST--2 p.m. in Thornden Park amphitheatre, in Hendricks Chapel in case of rain. Acts from Syracuse Folk Society. Free!

INTER-SQUAD FOOTBALL game--2 p.m. at Archbold stadium. Float parade winners announced.

JABBERWOCKY--Kimmel basement. Same show and times as Friday.

COSMO
Pizza Shop

FAST
DELIVERY SERVICE
TO
ALL DORMS
GR 8-9231

ITALIAN FILM SERIES presents

BEFORE THE REVOLUTION (1964)

Directed by Italian poet Bernardo Bertolucci at the remarkable age of 22, his first film is a probing look at a bourgeois youngster coming of age — a revolutionary theorist who tries to preach against the church, against his parents, and against himself. He dallies with Marxism and becomes involved in a love affair with his aunt. Bertolucci was guest of the Museum of Modern Art on April 8 in a series the Museum is doing on young Italian directors.

The film will be shown in Kittredge on Friday - May 9 - at 7 and 9 p.m. $1.00.

Brigit Bardot
and Jeanne Moreau
in
VIVA MARIA
at
Gifford Auditorium
Saturday Night
7 p.m. & 9:15 p.m.
Presented by Syracuse Film Academy
Admission $1.00

Sing Along With
JANE and JOHN SNELL
on the Guitar
Folk Songs Every
Friday and Saturday
9 P.M. — 2 A.M.
HACKNEY HOUSE
Mother's Day Special Dinners This Sunday.
646 South Warren
HA 2-0341
LUNCHEON, DINNER and SUPPER

NEW Studio THEATRE 479-5911
524 WESTCOTT STREET
LIMITED ENGAGEMENT!
2 WEEKS ONLY
"THE BEST FOREIGN FILM OF THE YEAR!"
—New York Film Critics
—National Board Of Review
Academy Award Winner

THE TWO PART PRODUCTION OF LEO TOLSTOY'S
WAR and PEACE
PRESENTED BY THE WALTER READE ORGANIZATION AND SATRA • IN COLOR • RELEASED BY CONTINENTAL
STARTS May 21 2 p.m. & 8 p.m.
PART I "NATASHA AND ANDREI"- THE BATTLE OF AUSTERLITZ
THE ENTIRE PRODUCTION OF "WAR AND PEACE" WILL BE SHOWN IN TWO PARTS. EACH PART WILL BE SHOWN FOR ONE WEEK!
Monday thru Thursday Eves ... 2.50
Friday and Saturday Evening .. 3.00
Wednesday & Saturday Matinee 2.00
Sunday Matinee & Evening 2.00
TICKETS MAY BE PURCHASED SEPARATELY FOR EACH PART.
PART II "NATASHA AND PIERRE - THE BURNING OF MOSCOW"
Not Reserved — Each Ticket Guarantees A Seat
Special ½ Price Coupon.
STARTS 2 p.m. & 8 8 p.m.
PART II COUPON
½ Price - College Student Discount
All Times Except Friday & Saturday Evenings
PART I COUPON
½ Price - College Student Discount
All Times Except Friday & Saturday Evenings

New dorm buildings named for alumni

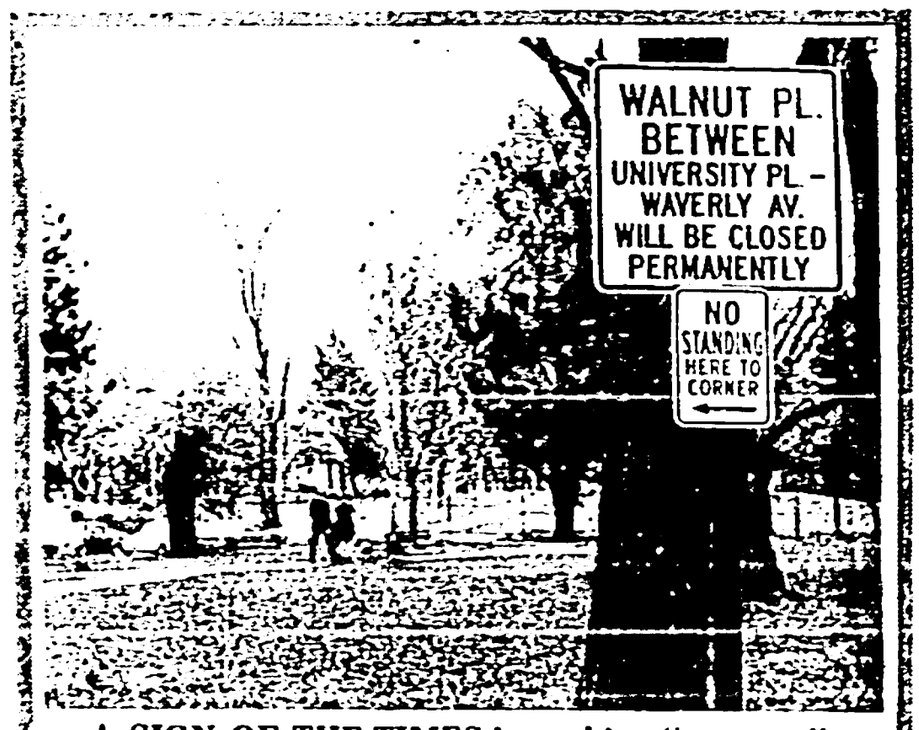
The building in the men's and women's dormitory and dining hall complex at the western edge of Syracuse University were named yesterday for alumni.

Chancellor William P. Tolley said the buildings, previously known as "St. Mary's site," will be dedicated formally in the near future.

Dr. Tolley announced that the 13-story men's living center, housing 469, will be known as Brewster Hall, in honor of Neal Brewster, a 1902 graduate of the College of Law, and his late wife, Mabel Pierce Brewster. Brewster was Comptroller of the City of Syracuse from 1922 to 1926 and for many years was a University trustee. He now lives in retirement in Syracuse.

The nine-story women's dormitory, with space for 284 coeds, will be called Boland Hall in memory of the late John C. and May L. Boland. John C. Boland was a graduate of Syracuse University and its College of Law. He was a member of the Syracuse Board of Supervisors from 1908 to 1913.

The three-story dining hall, lounge and multi-purpose building, which is connected to the living centers, was named Brockway Hall for the late Dr. Perle Brown Brockway, a 1908 graduate of the Syracuse University College of Medicine, now part of the Upstate Medical Center.



"Brewster, Boland and Brockway all made major contributions to Syracuse University," according to P. Lachlan Peck, vice president for development.

Construction of the living center-dining hall complex began in February of 1966 and the first students moved in last fall. The units, built at a cost of $8.4 million, are adjacent to the Toomey-Abbott Towers, a 23-story specialized Syracuse Housing Authority facility for the elderly.

Dr. Perle Brown Brockway, who went into the general practice of medicine after his graduation from Syracuse in 1908, was a member of the resident staff of Kings County Hospital and on the honorary staff of Prospect Heights Hospital, both in Brooklyn, N.Y., where he practiced all of his professional life.

John C. Boland received the degree of Ph.B. from Syracuse in 1899 and his LL.B. from the Syracuse College of Law in 1901.

Neal Brewster was a member of the Syracuse law firm of Meatyard, Brewster and Cooney and from 1915 to 1920 was a Collector of Internal Revenue. After his term as Comptroller of Syracuse, he was a member of the Public Service Commission. In 1945 he received the George Arents Pioneer Medal, Syracuse University's highest award to an alumnus.

A SIGN OF THE TIMES is marking "progress" on Walnut Place as construction crews prepare to break ground for SU's Bird Library. Automobiles will soon be merely a vestige of the past on Walnut between University and Waverly (both directions). Along with the traffic detour will come the loss of over 30 daily parking places. (Photo by Robertson)

Senior convo

All seniors are requested to attend the Senior Convocation at 7 p.m. Monday night in Hendricks Chapel.

JIFFY KING

SPECIAL

Monday thru Friday, 2-5 p.m.

10¢ OFF ALL SUBS
727 South Crouse
in the Arcade

MG AUSTIN HEALEY

Jaguar

SALES & SERVICE

also

Largest Selection in the East of Used Convertibles--Hard Tops Corvettes-Sports Cars

6 Factory Trained Import Mechanics waiting to serve you. Over $100,000 in parts and accessories in inventory.

Revelle Motors, Inc.

800 W. Genesee Street
Sales GR 4-1009 Parts & Service GR 9-9544

Campus Classified

GR 6-5571, Ext. 2314

Rates minimum of 15 words:

1 day	1.15
2 days	2.25
3 days	3.30
4 days	4.30
5 days	5.25
6 days	6:15

To place a classified ad, call GR 6-5571, ext. 2314, between 1 and 3 p.m. Ad must be placed 2 days in advance. Every word over 15 costs 5c extra per day.

ALL ADS MUST BE PREPAID.

MISCELLANEOUS

RENT if you can't buy! T.V.s, tape recorders, typewriters. By week, month or semester. Reasonable rates. S. U. BOOKSTORE. GR 6-5541, x 2426.

ALTERATIONS DONE within 24 hours. Call for an appointment. Lillian Potter. 207 Comstock. 478-5847.

PRIVATE DRIVING LESSONS — automatic or standard shift. Full or refresher courses. Qualified professional instructors. Pickup service. Auto Driving Academy. GR 6-3995.

NEED A SUMMER JOB? Syracuse YMCA Camp Tousey has openings for Unit Directors, counselors, riding master and waterfront director. Five hundred acre site with 55 staff and 160 campers on Millsite Lake near Redwood. New York Spend a challenging and rewarding summer working with boys 9 - 14 years old. For details and application, write Robert Fiske. YMCA, 340 Montgomery St., Syracuse, New York 132[illegible]

ATTENTION FDDAT CHAIRMAN — Fulton paper has a surplus of seconds in toilet tissue - decorative colors -

BEAUTIES! Pure silk scarves from India, last bastion on hand-loomed, hand-blocked prints, gorgeous colors. Various sizes. Bookstall. 147 Marshall St.

SUMMER JOBS: Counselors; private boys' camp: Adirondacks: College men of above average physical fitness and judgment: tripping, riflery, canoeing, nurse and cook jobs open. Adirondack Swim Camp, 39 Mill Valley Road, Pittsford, New York 14534.

SUMMER JOB — Full time, Syracuse area, need car and phone. Call on established customers. Eight year old business needs new representative. Contact Dean Wallace, Jr., 2 Oakwood Circle, Storrs, Conn., 06268 or call 203-429-6152.

MOTHER'S DAY CARDS for Grandma and Dad, yet! Specials for aunt like a mother, friend's mother, etc. The Bookstall, 147 Marshall St.

AUTO DRIVING - three hour prelicensing course given Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. SULLIVAN'S DRIVING SCHOOL - 463-3451.

LOST: Monday p.m. vicinity Smith. White wool shirt with black pin stripes. Please call Judy 3304.

"IT MUST BE HARD TO BE A MOTHER" - cutest book ever. Mother will laugh and maybe drop a tear. $1.95, with mailing envelope. Hill Bookstall.

FOR SALE

ROOM AIR CONDITIONERS — 5,000, 6,000, 7,000 and 9,000 BTUS. These are '68 Models, some scratched or dented, some used, all guaranteed — priced for students pocketbooks 446-6321.

1965 OLDSMOBILE convertible. Red. 442. Power steering. Power brakes, excellent condition, reasonable. Call 637-3430 after 5.

1966 MUSTANG — Blue power steering, power brakes, automatic transmission, excellent condition. 474-0571 after 5.

1960 CHEVROLET — runs excellent, body very good. 12,000 miles on engine overhaul, burns no oil, new brakes, $150.00 firm. Call 475-3214 after 5:30 p.m.

1953 PACKARD CLIPPER — 47,000 miles, good body, very good engine $125 or best offer 478-1140.

1966 MUSTANG, 289 BRG, 4-speed, best offer, 478-4421 after 7 p.m.

'63 RED CORVAIR Monza — Excellent condition, stick shift, radial tires. Azria's Esso, 2974 E. Genesee.

MERCEDES '59 - 219 engine record, AM-FM, 6 new tires. Fine condition throughout. 655-8353.

USED FURNITURE. Also 1962 Valiant, 4-door, r and h, auto. trans. call 474-0190.

1964 PORSCHE SUPER. like new, leather, AM-FM new Pirellis, Fog lights, ski rack, after 5 p.m. 474-2674.

1958 CORVETTE convertible, blue, 2,900 miles, full power, perfect condition $4600.00 GR 9-6250 or 474-5335.

MGA 1958, rebuilt engine, alarm system, new clutch, hard and soft top. Best offer. 476-4871.

GENTLEMAN'S Dress Suit for sale, including the white coat, medium size, very reasonable. Call HO 8-5570.

SCUBA EQUIPMENT — U. S. Divers aqualung matched tank, harness and regulator, perfect condition. Call 457-4837.

JAGUAR 1961 MK LX Classic 4-dr. sedan, sunroof, new paint, automatic, builtin picnic tables, many extras 472-3090 Bet. 5-6:30.

'68 GTO — 4 speed stereo, must sell, x6-8419.

VOLKSWAGEN 69 — Sedan, sun-roof, automatic, AM-FM radio, snow tires, 4,000 miles, receiving co. car. GR 9-6717.

FOR RENT

LIVINGSTON AVE. — 3 blocks from university, 2 bus lines. Bedroom $12.00. 479-7653 or 476-0296 Mrs. Wilson.

APARTMENT FOR SUMMER — furnished, 3-4 girls, near campus, call evenings 475-0940.

EUCLID FURNISHED APARTMENT - convenient location from June, air condition, garage 446-6451, 446-5360.

2 BEDROOM apartment to sublet — (June-August) Kitchen, living room, bath, on campus, $125/mo. 476-0885 (nights).

TO SUBLET SUMMER — Modern 2 bedroom furnished; Hollywood kitchen picture windows, garage, lawn; 5 min. from campus $110 per month. Tel: 475-9607.

FURNISHED ROOMS from $40.00 and up. Very close to campus. Kitchen privileges. 446-6451 or 478-5380.

APARTMENT TO SUB-LET (June 1 to Sept. 1) — Furnished, one bedroom, 10 min. from campus. $85 per mo. Call 479-7336.

UNIVERSITY WALK'G DISTANCE — Furnished, heated efficiency and one bedroom apt. sub-let for summer only or year. Also one bedroom apartment and efficiency available Sept. 1st. Students or teachers. Parking or garage. 446-0493.

SUBLET, 3 months, June 1. Completely furnished new deluxe, townhouse (on 3 levels) 2 br., 1½ baths, balcony, grads or prof. $220.00 per month. Phone 478-3925.

ON-CAMPUS APARTMENT — June-Aug. Excellent condition, furnished, 3 bedrooms, $165/mo. including utilities. Call 478-9073.

FULLY FURNISHED HOUSE — 4 bedrooms, 2 bathrooms, appliances, furnished basement in residential area, gardens, to rent for one year from September 1, preferably to a visiting professor and family. Call mornings until 10:30 or after 5 P.M. 446-2448.

APARTMENT TO RENT - Stadart St., 1 block from campus, June occupancy, no lease till Sept. perfect for 2. Call 474-8393.

ROOM FOR RENT: near Drumlins Bus, kitchen privileges, off street parking. 472-2406.

UNIV.-Wild. unusual apt. for rent - June 1 - "Old Viking Banquet Hall" with 18[illegible]6 ft. living room - FIREPLACE - GRAND PIANO - vaulted ceiling -skylight - panelled and antique velvet walls! A collectors item! 2 yr. lease. GR 4-5558.

MODERN TWO BEDROOM — furnished, garden apartment for summer 5-minute walk from campus. Call 457-4837.

APARTMENT FOR TWO STUDENTS— furnished, 3 rooms, bath, all utilities, large desk, campus area, available June 1. 478-0501 evenings, Saturdays.

WANTED

FACULTY COUPLE — Looking for furnished or unfurnished two or three bedroom house or apartment near university. Academic year 1969-70. Call 655-9078.

ROOM AND BOARD in exchange for work during 1969-70 academic year. Male student. Last summer groundskeeper, this summer hospital orderly. Dick Taylor. x3920.

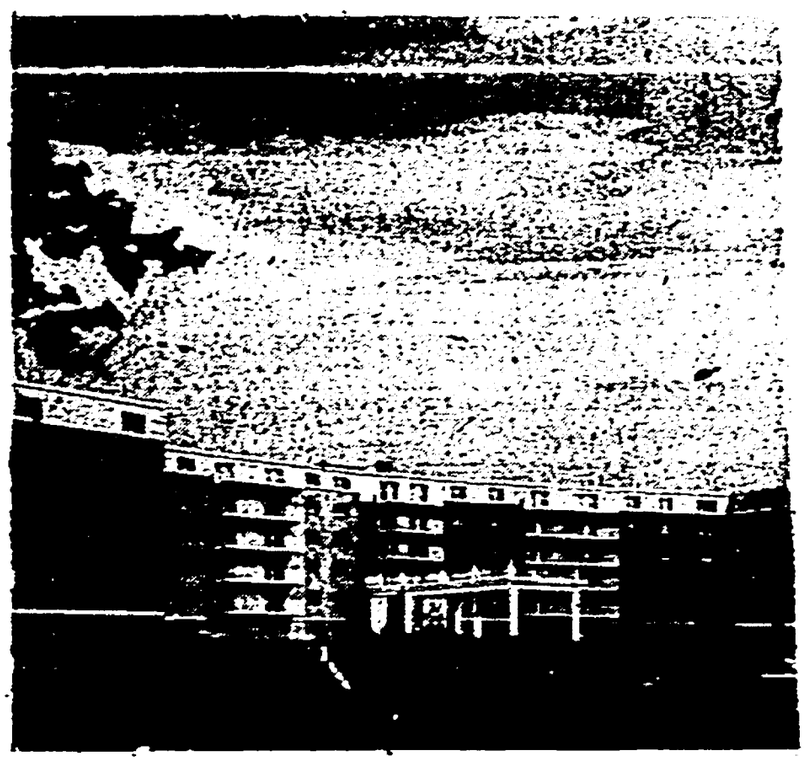
RIDERS: to West Point - Saturday - SU-Army lacrosse game - return after game. Call Paul 437-4426.

ROOMMATE FOR SUMMER and/or Fall. 3 Bedroom apartment. 5 minutes from university. $35/month. 476-6020.

TO SUBLET (July 1 - Aug. 30) a studio apartment in or within commuting distance of James Street or University area, by New York City school teacher. Contact Ardy Meluzzi Tel. 474-8229 and leave message.

PUPPY — for 2 softhearted sophomores, small breed, preferably male. Call Nancy or Jana-Lyn, x3131.

TYPING



DISSERTATIONS, THESES, AND TERM papers, IBM electric typewriter. 40c per page 5c per copy. 446-2841. Mrs. Miller.

THIRTY YEARS EXPERIENCE. Dissertations, term papers, proof-read. Satisfaction guaranteed. Mrs. Raymond Webb. HE 7-8259.

TAKE YOUR MANUSCRIPT to the only professional typing and printing service serving the S. U. area. The knowledge and experience of having done over 2,000 theses and dissertations is behind every job we turn out. Stephanie's Office Service. 469-2795.

TYPIST experienced in thesis, dissertations, and term papers. Electric typewriter. Shirley Saylor, 446-2999 or x2441.

EXPERIENCED TYPIST — thesis, term papers, etc. reasonable rates. Call 635-5239.

NEW FACULTY AND GRADUATE HOUSING

Nob Hill, only a few minutes from SU, offers all the conveniences of luxury living in a serene atmosphere accented by a panoramic view. Applications for the moderately-priced suites are currently being accepted for the fall semester.

Full-color brochures and other information describing the abundant amenities are available to faculty, staff and graduate students by phoning 469-3211 between noon and 6 p.m.

Face Army tomorrow

Simmie's boys seek promised land

By ED AGRANOWITZ

The Old Tests

In the beginning, Simmie created the midfield and the attack. The attack was without Verne Doctor, and darkness was upon the face of the Orange.

And Simmie said, "Let there be defense," and there was defense. And Simmie saw that the defense was good. And Simmie called the fleet one Ensley and the chubby one Klausner and the mean one Scipione. And there was Ohio State and there was Denison, and there was a 4-0 Spring trip.

And Simmie said, "Let there be stickhandling in the midst of the midfielders, and let them assist the attackmen in the scoring of goals." And Simmie let Ron Doctor handle the face-offs and run and shoot with Austerlitz and Smith. And it was so. And there was Penn State and there was Clarkson and they were 6-0.

And Simmie said "Let the attack be gathered together into one unit, and let teamwork appear." And it was so. And Simmie called the thin one Nolan and the round one Verne and the quick one Davis. And Simmie saw that it was good. And there was Hofstra and there was Hobart and they were 8-0.

And Simmie said, "Let there be a fearless one in the crease to separate the ball from the goal." And it was so. And Simmie called the goalie Brown. And Simmie saw that Butch was good. And there was Colgate and there was ten saves and they were 9-0.

And Simmie said, "Let the earth bring forth a challenge for my Orange, and let their middies run like deer, and their defensemen claw like tigers, and their attackmen strike like rattlers, and their goalie pounce like a leopard." And it was so. And Simmie saw that it was good. And Simmie prepared his forces to meet the Army with rugged workouts Monday thru Thursday. And today the Orange will practice lightly and tonight they will hallow the evening and rest from all the preparation which they have done. And tomorrow all Hell will break loose.

The New Test

The moment of truth is rapidly descending upon the shoulders of the new pride and joy of the Hill. The Orange lacrossers will be putting their 9-0 slate in serious jeopardy tomorrow afternoon when they face-off against a murderous 6-1 Army team at West Point.

Goalie Butch Brown is "up" for tomorrow's game.

The Cadets' only wound was inflicted by number one Johns Hopkins, 14-11 in a real dogfight. The West Pointers bounced back from that one and whipped perennial power Maryland, 14-6 in what Black Knight coach Jim Adams calls "our best game of the year."

"Army is in the same class as Hopkins," says Orange mentor Roy Simmons, "they have tremendous size speed and depth. But our kids are competitors and they're not afraid of a challenge -- we're going down there to win a ballgame."

To do that, the Orange will have to stop Army's potent-plus offense. All American Pete Cramblet is ringleader, having a six goal game against Hopkins and a five score show with Maryland to his credit. "We're gonna go with the Gipper (Cliff Ensley) on Cramblet," says Simmie, "Cliff has one mission in life and that is to shatter Cramblet. If he goes to the sidelines for a drink Ensley will follow him and deck him."

The Orange will also have their hands full with high scorers Tom Cafaro, Darby Boyle, and Marty Knorr, as well as footballer Chareley Jarvis (who will defense Verne Doctor) and middie Steve Wood, a high school teammate of Ron Doctor.

"We'll have to get a great game from Butch Brown in goal, and everyone must be at their very best if we're going to be in the ballgame," says Simmie. "If we could catch fire early and lay the wood to 'em, it could be a horse race."

ORANGEMEN SCRIMMAGE for tomorrow's intra-squad game. End Nile Evans sprints out on a pass pattern as Marty Januskewicz gets ready to block. (Photo by Robertson)

Intra-squad game set for 2 p. m. kickoff; Paolisso out

By LARRY CENTER
and ADAM DAWSON

At approximately 5:15 p.m. Wednesday night, head coach Ben Schwartzwalder's plan for the Spring game received a severe jolt. At that time his number one quarterback, Paul Paolisso, was hit on the right knee during an intra-squad scrimmage. He collapsed to the ground and was carried off the field on a stretcher.

Preliminary x-rays have revealed that the junior letterman does not have a broken knee or torn cartilidge, the two most serious knee injuries. Pressure x-rays are scheduled to be taken and they should reveal the exact extent of the injuries. Early reports indicate a sprain or torn ligaments, and three to four weeks on crutches for the ex-Madonna High School star.

As Paolisso said, "You can not tell for sure. My biggest concern at present is that I am 100% when the team starts practice in late August."

With Paolisso out of action, the first team starting nod should have gone to Rich Panczyszyn. However, Panzy will also sit the game, nursing a bruised hip. It's now up to Randy Zur to carry the load in the intro-squad game which gets underway at 2:00 p.m. in Archbold Stadium.

The reason behind Spring practice is to give the coaches a chance to analyze the sophomores and get everybody properly positioned for the Fall. However, the unusually large number of injuries has made it difficult.

In addition to Paolisso and Panczyszyn, three big "ifs" for next year are John Massis, Ron Trask and Rick Kokosky. Massis and Kokosky should mend their ills over the summer but the situation with Trask is less certain.

His foot operation was not enought of a success for him to play any this spring. But he's still determined. "The doctor said I have abrasions on the heel. I'm going to try and build it up as much as I can over the summer. I want to come back and prove I can play quarterback."

Ben has promised Ron a quick look there if he merits it, but he would still be at a great disadvantage, never having played the position and lacking in quarterback techniques. Still, he is a strong runner and could really help on the sprint-out and option plays.

Another big question mark is what kind of shape the players come back in. Ben is hoping they'll "pledge to be maniacs, get in good shape, and be ready to hit hard."

Assuming the team is in shape, the season could be much more successful than Ben is inclined to predict. If Paolisso heals the offensive backfield will be strong and deep. Al Newton and Marty Januskiewicz could be one of the best running combinations around. They both run hard and are good blockers. Mike Chlebeck and Billy Knox aren't far behind them.

Corky Castner doesn't get the publicity of the other backs, but he averaged 5.6 yds. a carry in '68. Steve Sanson's surprising showing only makes things look brighter.

Probably the biggest factor in the play of the offense, however, is the line. They are the ones who make the team move. They may not get all the headlines, but without their support, the runners have nowhere to go.

The Orange line is all veterans--Maddox, McCard, Vogt, Pritzlaff, Fusco, Cherundolo, and Gabriel. If these boys come back in shape, the offense could really go.

The defensive middle front is solid with McGill, White and Ehrmann. No one will really know about the ends until the season starts. If Pietryka, Beauregard, Goodman, and Bodine come through, it would take a lot of pressure off the first three.

The linebackers are all better and more experienced. Protz should do a good job of replacing Ruccio, and Bancroft and Dorr are going on their third year as starters. Last year, with the Puma and Gipper in the backfield, the Orange gave up only five TD passes. Those two will be sorely missed. Tom Hermanowski is the only starter back deep who has a full season's play behind him. Only time will tell how Bletsch and Myers come through.

There are several big concerns, SU must establish a consistent offense that can still keep going inside the 20-yard line. The defense suffers from a great lack of depth, and the play of the ends and the backs is the key there. If injuries heal and the sophomores can come through, Syracuse could go 7-3. If not, the Orange might fade to 5-5. Come out tomorrow for a preview and make your own judgments.

DO quiz biz

1. Who holds the National League record for most home runs in a season? How many?

2. Match these football players with their college:

Mike Pyle	Yale
Billiy Ray Smith	West Virginia
Sam Huff	Arkansas

3. What pole vaulter was the first to break the 16 foot barrier?

4. What boxer is the only person to hold three championship titles at the same time?

5. In 1955 the Dodgers finally beat the Yankees in a World Series. Who was the winning pitcher for the Dodgers in the seventh game?

6. Who was golf's leading money winner last year?

7. What basketball team originally had the draft rights for Bill Russell?

8. Who won the only gold medal for the United States in the 1968 Winter Olympics?

9. Match these players with their sport:

Wayne Zahn	Tennis
Tom Okker	Golf
Deane Beman	Bowling

10. Hame a pitcher now playing has both lost 20 games in a season and won 20 games in a season.

Last Week's Answers: (1) Jim Ringo, Earl Gros; (2) Hobie Landrith; (3) Bill Klem; (4) Jack Nicklaus; (5) Jackie Robinson, Gary Cooper, William Bendix; (6) Ernie Banks; (7) Washington Redskins; (8) Tom Seaver; (9) Frank Howard; and (10) True.

Sport shorts . . .

The Women's Athletic Association Tennis team kept its winning streak alive Tuesday by shutting out William Smith, 4-0.

Greta Melford took her singles match by scores of 6-1, 5-7, 6-1 while Mary Allinson won her match in straight sets, 6-1, 6-4.

In doubles competition, Barb Sweet and Susan Blout scored a 6-2, 4-6, 6-3 victory while Vivian Schkesinger and Bette Eydenburg triumphed 6-4, 7-5.

The WAA squad also registered a first place finish in a five way competition with Cazenovia, Cornell, Harpur and Mohawk Valley.

●

Radio station WAER will broadcast the annual Spring football game on Saturday May 10th at 2:00 p.m. Sports Director Steve Nash and Bill Asnes will broadcast the play-by-play account of the annual intro-squad clash.

DAILY ORANGE

Vol. 67, No. 102 Syracuse, New York, Tuesday, May 13, 1969 10 Cents

Beta Theta Pyre

FIREMEN ERECT their ladder moments after responding to Saturday morning's blaze at Beta Theta Pi. Severe damage was inflicted to the house's second and third floors. (Photo by Clemens)

Fraternity flames on Walnut place

"We've been known to flame around but this is ridiculous," commented one brother of Beta Theta Pi fraternity as flames lept from the top two stories of their Greek house. The blaze was discovered by one of the brothers shortly after 10 a.m. Saturday.

Two floors suffered extensive smoke and water damage, according to the Syracuse Fire Marshall's office.

All brothers of Beta Theta Pi are currently living in dormitories and other fraternity houses until the end of the semester while a search for a house for next year is being conducted.

"We are grateful to the firemen," said Dave Robbins, pledge master of the house. "They fought the fire from the inside and saved the lower part of the house and two of the rooms on the third floor."

No official estimate of the damage has been made. The building was covered under Syracuse University insurance, according to David Tatham, dean of men. The fraternity's national council carried insurance for the furnishings but individual brothers are responsible for personal losses.

The cause of the fire has not been determined but it is believed to have started by a cigarette in the attic.

Bill Buckley tapped for commencement

By STEVE TOBER

William F. Buckley, Jr., editor of the "National Review", apparently, will be this year's commencement speaker. According to a spokesman for the Senior Class, Buckley has accepted the offer to speak here, and his selection has been approved by Chancellor Tolley. All that bars an official announcement of the selection is the formality of approval by the Board of Trustees for Buckley to receive an honorary degree.

Buckley's selection was announced briefly by Chancellor Tolley at the "Moving Up" ceremony on Saturday, and the official announcement is expected tomorrow.

Buckley, a renowned Conservative, gained national attention in 1950, just after his graduation from Yale, where he was editor of the student newspaper. His "God and Man at Yale," a heated indictment of liberal trends in education, catapulted him into social circles and journals. He furthered his conservative stance when he defended the late Senator Joseph McCarthy, and justified the Communist scare of the '50's, in his book, McCarthy and His Enemies.

In 1955, Buckley became the editor-in-chief on the "National Review," and expanded his conservative outlook beyond political science, and into the realms of education and economics.

The highlight of his political career was his candidacy for Mayor of New York City in 1965. When he was once asked what would be the first thing he'd do if he won, Buckley replied, "I'd demand a recount."

After gathering some 13 percent of the vote, Buckley hit the bestseller list once again with his Unmaking of a Mayor, and in 1966 began to host a weekly television talk show entitled "Firing Line." During the 1968 Presidential campaign, Buckley and writer Gore Vidal made

(Continued on Page 2)

STAUNCH CONSERVATIVE William F. Buckley Jr. has been approved as this June's commencement speaker by Chancellor Tolley. Buckley's bid still awaits an OK from the Board of Trustees.

STUDENT SENATE will meet at Maxwell Auditorium at 7:30 p.m. tonight.

Onondagans here today

Distribution of the 1969 yearbook will get under way at 1:30 p.m. today. Every graduating senior is entitled to receive one copy without charge, but must present his or her ID Card in order to obtain the book.

Liberal Arts seniors should pick it up at HBC patio from 1:30 to 4 p.m. today. All other graduating seniors get it in their own schools, at these rooms: Architecture 417; Art 205; Bus. Ad. 105; Education 217; Engineering Room 8, Prefab 6; Forestry 107; Home Econ. 300; Journalism 100; Law 204; Nursing 16; Speech & Dram. Art 200.

Each yearbook subscription

(Continued on Page 5)

JUBILANTLY CELEBRATING their distinction as "most outstanding seniors" are Robin Erickson and Mike Sussman.

'Dynamic duo' receives honors

By TOM BRYAN

Robin M. Erickson and Michael F. Sussman were honored as "most outstanding seniors" at the moving-up ceremony Saturday.

Tau Theta Upsilon, senior men's honorary, presented Sussman with the second annual Eric Faigle Award for outstanding service to the campus and the community. He was selected by a committee composed of the Dean of Men, the presidents of the senior men's honoraries, the Director of Social Activities and the president of AWS. The award named in honor of Eric Faigle, former dean of the Liberal Arts College and Vice President of Student Services. He retired last June.

Sussman is currently president of Traditions Commission and has served on the Student Advisory Board. He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, scholastic honorary; Phi Kappa Pi, senior men's honorary; Phi Eta Sigma, freshman men's honorary; and Sigma Chi. He is listed in "Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities."

He has studied at Western Reserve under a Medical Research Grant and plans to go to medical school at Case Western Reserve.

Robin Erickson, a child development major, was honored as "most outstanding senior woman," based on extra curricular activities and cumulative average. She is presently vice president of Traditions Commission and is outgoing vice president of the senior class. She is a member of Eta Pi Upsilon, senior women's honorary, a sister of Alpha Chi Omega, and is also listed in "Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities."

She has been on class exec for four years and was chairman of the Leadership Through Education drive in 1967. She plans to be married in August.

Debaters ponder ABM proposals

By JOHN WISNIEWSKI

Rep. Jonathon B. Bingham (D-N.Y.), Jay Orear, physics professor at Cornell University, and Rep. Sam Stratton (D-N.Y.) last night expressed their views on the Nixon administration's proposed anti-ballistic missle system in Gifford Auditorium.

Orear, a past president of the Federation of American Scientists, criticized President Nixon's motives for the deployment of the ABM system.

At first, Orear said the administration told congress that the system would not impede an attack by the Soviet Union, but that it was designed as a defense against an attack by Red China. However, the administration later claimed that the ABM system would serve as a defense against a supposed Soviet threat to 1000 U.S. minutemen missles, the professor charged.

Orear stated that, "The ABM will not protect one single minuteman missile." The components of the ABM system were "designed to protect our cities, not the minuteman system," Orear added.

Rep. Bingham questioned the effectiveness of the proposed ABM system. He said that, "It's impossible to fully test the system."

He argued that limited tests in the Pacific did not deal with the complexity of an actual attack consisting of many missles. "It just cannot be tested under operational conditions."

The ABM system is "positively harmful to our national security," Bingham added. The enemy would have to assume that the system would work, he said, and then increase the power of their offensive weapons accordingly.

The congressman explained that the limited ABM proposal might eventually lead to the development of a full ABM system costing from "$25 to $40 billion."

Bingham also doubted that an attack by the Soviets is capable of destroying the entire U.S. minuteman system. Even if that were possible, Bingham said, the U.S. could still employ its underwater nuclear deterant force in retaliation.

Bingham emphasized that the development of the ABM system is impractical at the present time. "But I don't rule out future necessities to deploy an ABM," he concluded.

Congressman Stratton said deployment of the ABM system provided an important psychological advantage for the U.S.

He believed that the only sure prevention against nuclear was is the alleged "balance of terror" existing between the Soviet Union and the U.S. "The most important thing for the world is to maintain this balance of terror," Stratton claimed.

He pointed out that four years ago the Soviets began to develop a limited ABM system around Moscow. This prompted the U.S. towards similar action.

When the White House announced the proposed U.S. system, Stratton said, the Soviets quickly offered to sit with the U.S. for nuclear arms control talks. The threat of an effective ABM system "is our main device for getting an arms limitation agreement with Russia," he explained.

Stratton said talks with the Soviets would hopefully result in a decrease in offensive weapons by both the Soviet Union and the U.S. and a limited amount of defensive weapons as protection from attack by a third country.

Buckley . . .

(Continued from page 1)

headlines as they offered commentary and traded barbs as part of ABC News' coverage of the conventions and elections. Buckley has since instituted legal action against Vidal for remarks made during the appearances.

Buckley, it seems, was born fighting. As early as age six, he wrote a letter to the King of England, demanding that the country pay back its war debts to the US. And Buckley has not stopped. In recent years he has attacked the Warren Court, the New York Times, education, and other liberal trends and institutions in our society. He sometimes even attacks his own right-wing. "Robert Welch thinks I'm a Communist plot," he quipped.

Buckley was on campus in 1961, when he delivered the second in a series of the St. Thomas More Chapel philosophy lectures. In his speech, Buckley urged a return to the system of classical education. He said that there should be "no educational talk about the social utility of education or the interrelation of education and social harmony." He continued by adding, "A good education is sufficient just in what it renders to the individual and no external reason is needed."

His comments at that time created quite a stir among some of the professors at SU, and prompted one to accuse Buckley of having "attacked the basic freedoms of the United States while plainly advocating thought control." His appearance for Commencement will be the first since that time.

Buckley has been said to "possess an ego that would shame deGaulle," but that facet of his personality may be what has kept him in great demand as a lecturer, syndicated columnist and author.

'Yellow Submarine' screened

Film Forum has announced that the "pleasant surprise" performance of a film listed on the Spring 1969 Schedule for May 13, 14 and 15 will be YELLOW SUBMARINE. The full length animated fun film stars the Beatles and Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band, filmed on location in Pepperland. The showings will be in Gifford Auditorium at 6, 8, and 10 p.m. The ticket office will open at Gifford each evening at 5 p.m.

Appreciation Tuesday.
Admission FREE tonight.

Students:
Get on top of your outside reading... save 350 hours a semester!

1 Come to a free one hour Reading Dynamics Demonstration

You'll see a documented film of actual interviews with Washington Congressmen who have taken the Reading Dynamics Course. You'll learn how to increase your reading speed from 3 to 10 times, with equal or better comprehension and greater recall. All your questions about Reading Dynamics will be answered.

2 Enroll in the result-guaranteed Reading Dynamics Course

We positively guarantee (see below) to triple your present reading ability. The Course consists of eight 2½ hour sessions, plus one hour a day of home practice.

3 Read Dynamically

You read whole groups of words and not just one word at a time. You read without hearing and saying all the words. You read with a purpose and learn to quickly grasp the main thoughts and ideas. You learn to pace yourself according to the material you read. YOU LEARN TO REDUCE YOUR TIME ON OUTSIDE READING ASSIGNMENTS FROM 500 HOURS TO 150 HOURS PER SEMESTER!

Ask about our special arrangements for on-site Group Classes in Reading Dynamics

The Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics Institute

Phone 716-854-5858, collect, for class information and availability of special student tuition rates. Summer classes also will be held in Rochester and Buffalo, N. Y. Call the above number for additional information.

LIFETIME MEMBERSHIP

As a Reading Dynamics graduate, you are entitled to take a Refresher Course at any time, and as often as you wish, at any of the 150 Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics Institutes in the United States and in Europe.

Summer Classes Start July 2nd
8 week course — 2½ hour lesson each week
All classes will be held at the Christian Brothers Academy, Randall and Kimber Roads, DeWitt, N. Y. 13214.

OUR POSITIVE GUARANTEE OF TUITION REFUND

The Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics Institute will refund your tuition if you do not at least triple your reading rate (reading rate multiplied by comprehension percentage) during the Course as measured by our standardized testing program. This policy is valid when you have attended each classroom session and completed the minimum daily assigned home drill at the level specified by your instructor.

Life's a song . . .

a beautiful Melody

ANGUS H. TWOMBLY — Editor-in-Chief

MANAGING EDITOR - Alan Stamm EXECUTIVE EDITOR - Karen Wiediger NEWS EDITOR - Fred Tuccillo EDITORIAL DIRECTOR - David A. Ross COPY EDITOR - Jean Havens FEATURE EDITOR - Roz Mazer SPORTS EDITOR - Mike Weber CAMPUS AFFAIRS EDITOR - Larry Kramer PHOTOGRAPHY EDITOR - Clint Clemens ASSOCIATE EDITORS - Andrij Bilyk, Kay Christensen, Beth Hillson, Rona Kavee, Helene Macdonald, Charles Shapiro, Dan Schlossberg, Patti Williams, Roni Zlokower.

DAILY ORANGE

Syracuse University's Daily Newspaper Since 1908

TUESDAY, MAY 13, PAGE 3

STEVEN P. STROBRIDGE -- Business Manager

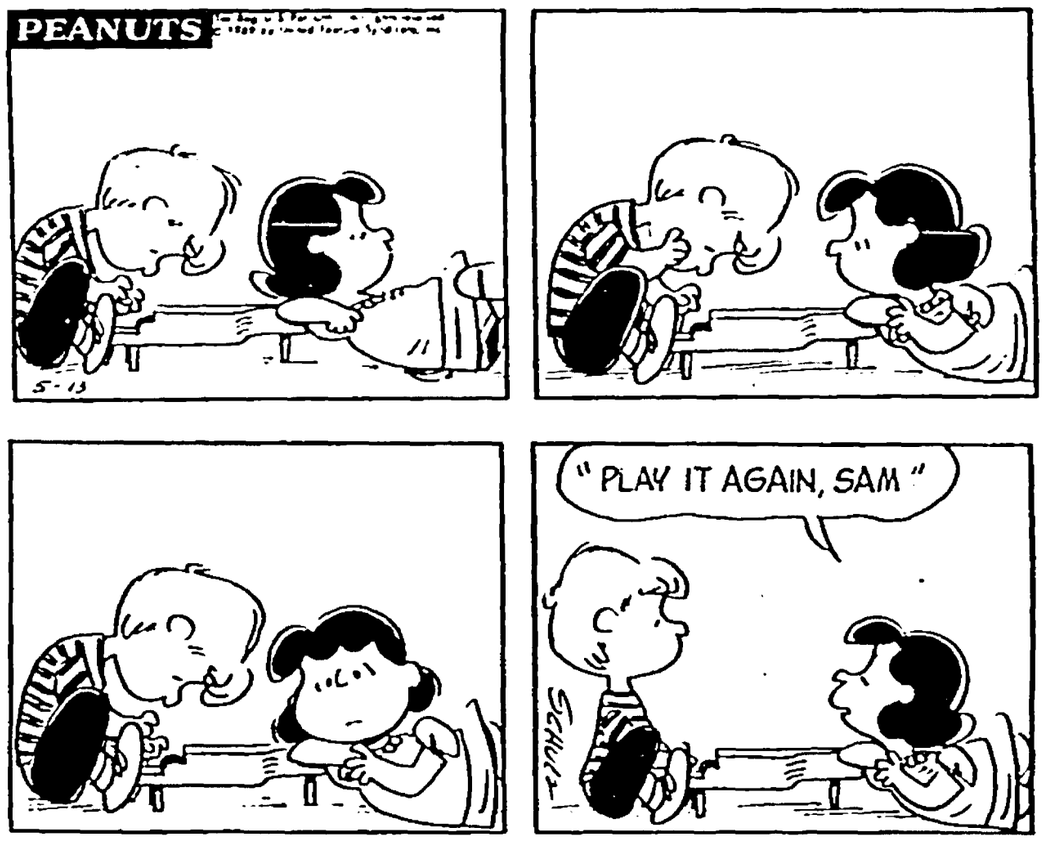
ASSISTANT BUSINESS MANAGER— Art Depasqua, NATIONAL ADVERTISING MANAGER— Janet Meyer ACCOUNT EXECUTIVES— Roger Black, Jim Maney, Mike Greenstein.

Published Tuesday through Friday during the academic year by students of Syracuse University. Offices located at 200 Brooklea Drive, Fayetteville, N.Y., and 1101 East Adams St., Syracuse, New York. Entered as Second Class matter at the U.S. Post Office, Fayetteville, N.Y. 13066.

Moving where?

Outstanding student leadership and participation was honored in a strange and unfitting way last weekend at the traditional "Moving Up" ceremony. In past years, "Moving Up" may have been a popular and enjoyable tradition, but this year's was ill-attendended, awkward and left us with the impression that they shouldn't have bothered.

Academic accomplishment at SU is fittingly recognized at the prestigious and always successful Honor's Convocation. While we willingly concede that this is, of course, first an academic institution, it would be a dull and lackadaisical place without student activities and participation.



Each year, those making significant contributions to SU student activities, as well as mainting academic accums that are respectable at a minimum, are recognized by honorary faternal organizations and by special awards to outstanding people in each class. This indeed is an admirable practice because, from our way of thinking, the contribution these people that are recognized make is actually the most significant student contribution to SU.

Thus, "Moving Up," a ceremony attended by few others than some new goons and principal student leaders, is really a poor forum in which to recognize accomplishment such as those of Robin Erickson and Mike Sussman outlined in our paper today.

Not only was the attendance inappropriate, but the time (10:30 Saturday morning) was impractical. We were also distressed to note that while there were awards for outstanding coeds from each class, the only male award was the Faigle Award sponsored by Tau Theta Upsilon, the senior men's honorary. We have been hearing about women's rights and equality here at SU for several months, how about a little male equality Dean Tatham?

What we are saying is that there is a more fitting way to honor the hard working and dedicated people that actually get things done at SU. Their friends and fellow workers that were in the audience on Saturday aren't the ones that need to hear about the accomplishments of others, they've been working with them all along. There has to be a better forum for such recognition. Even making the awards at the Honor's Convocation itself would be more appropraite. Perhaps the definition of the word honors indeed needs some further interpretation to include excellence in student participation.

While the tradition of "moving up" the classes etc. was for a time an enjoyable tradition, and it was fun to see the Chancellor's lighter side as he pantomimed the beanie burning on Saturday, why don't we forget the corny dramatics and get down to a little bit of relevant backslapping?

Peanuts is run with the permission of The Syracuse Herald-Journal.

Our union

In the 1930's "The Sahara Club" was the campus flop, last year students virtually ignored "The Place," but now after years of frustrated efforts, the University Union has given the students an exciting, fresh and entertaining substitute for a Union building. Jabberwocky, the beautiful imitation to New York City's Cafe Au Go-Go in the basement of Kimmel Dining Hall, opened its doors last weekend with a great blues show and fantastic audience response.

Granted, UU hasn't built the university a union building, but they have given students a place to relax, drink and talk in a congenial atmosphere. Not forgetting their primary function, UU has brought SU to the brink of having their own union building. The Union building has been given first priority, as soon as the new library is completely funded. Max Andrews, a famous union building architect, has been hired to draw up plans for the building, and a site has been picked for the building's location.

We think that these accomplishments are an indication of what UU can do with hard work and dedicated leadership. UU has finally stopped complaining about lack of funds from here and lack of support from there and have done something. And, what they've done in the past few months, is more than UU has done in its long unaccomplished past. As UU Chairman Ira Kurzbin stated "The entire concept of Union has changed, we're no longer just a publicity tool for Crouse College Concerts, we're trying to bring students together."

Letters

To the Editor:

Dean Cope has made it clear in his 14 points on the ideal of American foreign policy that he is the prototype of Chancellor Tolley's "incredibly naive" faculty member-turned administrator. It is clear, of course, that the Chancellor did not have such tough-minded types as Dean Cope in mind when he decried the willingness of many faculty members to accept or even promote a basic restructuring of the university concept.

Assuming first that Dean Cope's statement is not to be taken simply as a tounge-in-cheek Americanized resurrection of Kipling's "White Man's Burden," it is a bizarre misunderstanding of the situation to say that we are fighting to promote democracy in South Vietnam, any more than we are using our influence to democratize Fascist Spain or Fascist Greece.

Aside from the question of whether the U.S. possesses the resources to act as "world policeman" or to try to export "American Democracy," there is the question as to the basis on which Dean Cope can assert that "American Democracy," as opposed, say, to Swedish, British, Japanese, Indian, or Israeli democracy, is the optimal system to be transplanted by a crudely interventionist proselytizing American foreign policy into every nation.

Dean Cope's last two points are almost unbelievable in their call for an openly racist population control policy and an end to serious dissent on basic foreign policy issues. Dean Cope asserts that present foreign policy, especially with regard to Vietnam, one must assume, is perfect, and therefore all critics must be dismissed or dealt with as, at best, "frustrated individuals," or "dupes of our enemies," or "enemy agents themselves." It is precisely this easy dismissal of one's critics as either incompetants or traitors which prevents reasonable solutions to the conflicts in our nation and our universities. Rather than engaging in debate on the issues themselves, Dean Cope, prefers the tactic of impugning the character of their opponents, thus side-stepping any discussion, let alone solution to the real problem.

John D. Nagle
Dept. of Political Science

To the Editor:

We, the undersigned Jewish students of Syracuse University, protest the views expressed by Alfred H. Cope, Assistant Dean of the College of Liberal Arts, in his "Fourteen Points: Principles and Practices For American Foreign Policy.

It seems inconceivable that an administrator of Syracuse University--or, for that matter, any educated and humane man--could possibly urge the "selective procreation" of those peoples "with the best genetic heritages." The idea that "Birth control is a weapon of international politics" was, we thought, buried for all time with the defeat of Nazi Germany.

The world saw the horror and madness of the concentration camps, and we--many of us the children of the survivors of those camps--deplore this latest outbreak of racism on the Syracuse campus. Dean Cope's threats against any minority group which he might deem "inferior" raise serious questions about his abilities to carry out fairly and with humanity his role as assistant dean of the College of Liberal Arts. We urge the administration to investigate what processes of "selection" might be employed by Dean Cope's office in dealing with the academic and personal affairs of the students and faculty of the College of Liberal Arts.

Nine Concerned Students

To the Editor:

Thursday night's UJB hearings showed me that the court lacked the ability to discern their true function. Their purpose should not be to allow the student to get off with an easier sentence than he might normally get from a group of administrators. They are supposed to ascertain facts, determine the meaning of regulations, and dispense justice. Thursday night they certainly failed two objectives.

The court was so frustrated in failing to determine a bunch of unimportant dates, that they were not receptive to listening to a defense based on the illegality and vagueness of the regulations.

In their rush to decide the case they did not even read evidence that I submitted to them on the objection that they had dismissed the constitutional issues.

Joseph Trepel

TOP O' THE MOUNT SHOP

FINAL CLEARANCE

END OF THE SEASON REDUCTIONS UP TO 60%

SKIRTS – SLACKS – BLOUSES – SWEATERS
SLEEP WEAR – HANDBAGS – GIFTS – JEWELRY

- JACKETS
- BLOUSES
- VESTS

Reg. to 14.00 25% off

WOOL • SKIRTS • SLACKS

5.00

Reg. to 17.00

Entire stock of Spring SKIRTS

up to 30% off

Reg. to 14.00

One Group of BLOUSES

3.00

Reg. to 8.00

Limited in quantities . . . while they last

- DENIM JEANS
- COTTON SHELLS
- MINI HALF SLIPS
- PETTI PANTS
- NYLON GLOVES

many other items

1.00

Reg. to 8.00

SWEATERS

one group 3.00

Reg. to 14.00

one group 5.00

Famous Makes

HANDBAGS

up to 50% off

Leather Patent
Good Selection. Reg. to 17.00

New PANTS

25% off

Bells, Prints, Solids. Entire Stock. Sizes 5 to 15
Reg. to 16.00

NYLON SLEEPWEAR

3.50 to 5.00

Gowns Mini Styles Pajamas
Reg. to 10.00

SUMMER SANDALS

6.50

Reg. 10.00
Colors Sizes 5 - 10

sale . . . MOJUD hosiery special

2 for 1.00

Reg. 1.00 each

Half-price savings. Regular, mesh, demi heel. Beige, taup, suntan.
8½ - 11 Short, aver., tall

- Antron Knee Sox, good colors; reg. 1.50 . . . . sale 69c
- Gloves, lined, leathers, black, brown, reg. 8.50 Sizes 6-8 sale 6.30
- Gloves, unlined, leather, shortee, white, Navy reg. 7.00 sale 5.00
- Bras, sizes 32 to 38, a, b, c cups, reg. to 6.00 sale 2.00-3.00
- Arnel culotte, pajamas, prints, reg. to 9.00 . . sale 4.50

Sale . . . famous names, nationally advertised DRESSES
new pantdresses, shifts
cotton, arnel, spun linens
Sizes 5-15, 6-14
Reg. to 23.00

up to 30% off

CORDUROY JEANS 3.00

Brown Navy Green
Sizes 6 to 16 Reg. to 6.00

- JEWELRY Reg. to 5.00
- CHARMS, WALLETS Reg. to 6.00
- ATOMIZERS Reg. to 4.00

½ Price

GIFTWARE
drastically Reduced!

- TOTES Reg. to 14.00
- PIN CURL BONNETS Reg. to 1.50
- MOD WATCHES Reg. 14.00 Now 5.00

½ Price

SU Bookstores

Open Daily, 11-7
10-4 Sat.

Phone
x2226
x3636

"Our Business Is People"

Nationally advertised
GIRDLES
25% off

Yellow, blue, white pink, chocolate Reg. to 11.00

Striped Cotton SHELLS
2.00

Reg. 4.50 Sizes S - M - L

SOMETHING NEW !
HACKNEY HOUSE
COFFEE SHOP
Ice Cream Bar And Sandwich Shop
Open 7 A.M. to 7 P.M.
646 South Warren
HA 2-0341

Central New York builder/developer has opening in a widely diversified building field for eager, intelligent, young college graduate. Must be aggressive, willing to follow directions, possess supervisory capabilities and be capable of accepting responsibility. No construction experience necessary. Send resume to P. O. Box 1356, Syracuse 13201.

NEW FACULTY AND GRADUATE HOUSING

Nob Hill, only a few minutes from SU, offers all the conveniences of luxury living in a serene atmosphere accented by a panoramic view. Applications for the moderately-priced suites are currently being accepted for the fall semester.

Full-color brochures and other information describing the abundant amenities are available to faculty, staff and graduate students by phoning 469-3211 between noon and 6 p.m.

Looking for a great meal?
Try Red Barn's combination of a
BIG BARNEY
French Fries & Coke

If you haven't had a Big Barney, you don't know what you're missing! Two delicious hamburger patties, cheese, lettuce, pickle, and our own special sauce on a double-deck roll. Try it with French Fries and a Coke today! Regular Price 00c

57¢ SPECIAL

Where it's fun to eat
RED BARN
1514 Erie Blvd., East
731 South Crouse Ave.
519 Oriskany Blvd, Utica
3005 Brewerton Road
Special ends June 1

Deans delay autonomy for six IDC-approved dorms

Citing a lapse in communication, Dean of Men David Tatham and Dean of Women Marjorie C. Smith have delayed action on autonomy for six living centers previously granted autonomy by Inter-Dormitory Council.

Administrative response was based primarily on the question of whether the Council on Student Life must review IDC's decision before autonomy goes into effect. IDC President Marc Cavanagh says there shouldn't be any question, since CSL decided at an April 30 meeting that autonomy could be granted without review by the Council. Peg Johnston, past president of IDC, noted that while CSL has the right to review IDC decisions, "only a full CSL meeting can revoke autonomy and until that occurs, dorms remain autonomous."

In addition, Cavanagh and Miss Johnston were told Friday that IDC should have notified Jim G. Carleton, dean of students services, immediately after each dorm had been granted autonomy. The main purpose of this notification was to enable Dean Carleton to inform the resident hall staff of regulations regarding autonomy.

Miss Johnston said IDC "would have been happy to notify Carleton of any autonomous dorms, but he never asked us" before. In addition, Cavanagh noted that it should be the dorm council that is responsible for informing the resident advisors of any new regulations.

Deans Tatham and Smith said a clarification of the entire matter would be made yesterday. When no statement was issued, Cavanagh and Miss Johnston tried unsuccessfully to contact Dean Carleton.

Living centers affected by Friday's decision are Haven, Shaw, St. Mary's womens', Sherbrooke (Madison), Washington Arms, and Richards. Encouraging these dorms to take autonomy; Cavanagh and Miss Johnston stated that "According to understood procedures, those dorms that have gone through the proper channels and have had their proposals approved by Student Senate and IDC, are autonomous."

SUMMER SPECIAL!
Student I. D. card discount on Tune-ups
$1.00 a cylinder plus parts
WESTCOTT MOBIL
500 Westcott Street Syracuse, N. Y.

Yearbook . . .

(Continued from page 1)

ticket holder may obtain his copy of the 1969 Onondagan by presenting his ID Card and surrendering his ticket stub at the counter in the HBC foyer between 1:30 and 4 this afternoon.

Holders of partially-paid subscription tickets may make final payment and pick up the yearbook at the same time and place.

A limited number of yearbooks will also be available there for purchase at $11 each by those who have not bought subscription tickets.

Tropical
LYME-BURRY®
a new anti-bacterial skin lotion that soothes, clears complexion

A new, young way to refreshen your skin . . . Lymeburry anti-bacterial lotion gives fast relief from acne pimples*, oily skin and minor skin blemishes. Its exclusive formula makes it an invigorating after shave anti-bacterial lotion as well. Lymeburry—the soothing first aid treatment for your skin, made from the aromatic oils of fresh tropical limes.
*externally caused
"The refreshing breeze in a bottle" $1.25
FREE
sample of Lymeburry Lotion at your local drugstore with this advertisement

SALE

1-WEEK ONLY!

ALL D, E, F, G RECORDS

50c OFF Our Regular Selling Price

Selected Hardbacks-1.00 Up

Selected Paperbacks-1/2 Price

Prints & Posters

Drastically Reduced

Guitars - 40 % Off

Instruction Books & Records-40-50% Off

Musical Accessories - 40% Off

New from San Francisco - Black Light Posters

★ Also: Black Lights ★ The Lowest Prices on the Hill! ★

THE CORNER STORE

SU Bookstores

"Our Business Is People"

Variety is the spice of WAER's programs

WAER, 88.3 fm, features a wide variety of radio entertainment. Tonight's programming includes Speak Up, an audience participation show, and The Blues/Over Yonder's Wall.

Speak Up host Bob Kravitz will interview William Allison, director of alumni programming, at 5:30 p.m. tonight. The WAER listening audience may enter into the discussion by calling.

British blues will be the subject of tonight's 7:30 p.m. blues show. Hosted by Carl Apter, the program's overall aim is to present music of the blues manner from the Delta to Chicago and beyond.

WAER's Syracuse University Forum will discuss "Business and College Students" Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday night. On the air from 5-5:30 p.m. Forum discusses vital topics with guests from Syracuse University and the Syracuse community.

Tuesday, host Bob Sikorski talks with Gary Coram and Anthony Balino of Niagra Mohawk and Bob Burwell a member of the Junior Achievement Program.

JIFFY KING

SPECIAL

Phone Orders Accepted; No Deliveries
Monday thru Friday, 2-5 p.m.

10¢ OFF ALL SUBS
727 South Crouse
in the Arcade

EDWARD HOMMEL & SONS
OPTICIANS

VANDERBILT SQ. CENTER
727 S. SALINA ST.

FREE PARKING

474-4644
EYEGLASSES & CONTACT LENSES
Telex Hearing Aids —— REPAIRS ——

Revlon invents the 'status glow'

A new breed of blusher in an easy-to-use stick. For a healthy, wealthy, copper-bronze glow. Shine it over makeup. Or gleam it on bare. Cheeks. Chin. (Everywhere!) It colors you rich. In one shade for all complexions: Terra Copper. It's a healthy helping of color-and-shine. (And to light up the night, it comes frosted, too.)

New 'Terra Copper' Face Gleamer by Revlon

Available at:

Syracuse University Bookstore

Group proposes program to orient blacks to college

By CELESTE LACY

About 40 administrators, faculty members and students representing various campus organizations met in the Founder's Room of the Maxwell School Sunday to discuss plans for a summer compensatory education program for incoming black students.

The proposal for the program has come from the Minority Group Enrollment Committee and Project Spearhead. Project Spearhead is the representative organization of the several black groups on campus.

The function of the proposed program is to compensate for the sub-standard education that incoming black students may have received in their respective high schools. Two-fold in nature, the program will attempt to create a sense of black self-awareness while developing basic skills in English, math and science. A special program for engineering majors is also included.

Willette Hunte, Spearhead member and co-chairman of Sunday's conference told the group, "We want to emphasize the fact that these black students are not high-risk students--they are not inferior, but their education has been inferior."

Elaborating on this point, Spearhead member Byron Merritt stated:

"The issue at hand is the creation of a supportive environment for black students who have already been accepted."

He explained the term "supportive environment" as the ability of the student to understand who he is and what his role is in the University and American society. The black student can best achieve this self-identity through knowing his culture and realizing the gifts of his culture to society.

Dean Alfred H. Cope of Liberal Arts asked if the program should concentrate on black students and leave white students out. To this Merritt replied:

"It is true that the freshman year is a shock to white students as well as black students. But there is already a supportive environment for white students which does not exist for blacks. That puts them at less of a disadvantage than black freshmen."

The major problems for the program at this point involve official University commitment and financial support. Although none of the administrators or faculty members present were able to give a University commitment, several were confident that support would finally be given. In terms of financial backing, the University Development Office has agreed to solicit funds from several foundations. Estimated costs for the five week program, beginning August 1, range from $80,000 to $158,000.

Merritt said, "It is most important that you recognize the urgency of this program. If the University is going to improve race relations, it must give full support so that this program may be realized this summer."

The results of the financial committee are as follows:

1. An ad hoc faculty committee is to be established to gain faculty support. Letters to the faculty are in the process of being drafted.
2. Financial commitment is to be sought from Dean James R. Manwaring, summer session director.
3. The waiving of room and board fees for the 50 to 120 students expected to participate is to be sought.
4. A definite candidate is to be chosen for program director.

In the curriculum workshop, a general outline of course content was formulated:

1. Speed reading and comprehension based on black literature.
2. Seminars in blackology.
3. Methods of test-taking and essay writing.
4. Development of basic math skills.
5. Orientation to lab sciences with special emphasis on lab techniques.
6. Seminars with white SU faculty to establish rapport.

WANTED
SINGERS and DANCERS
Call for Audition
437 - 2941
2360 James Street
Bonnie Hide A Way Ask for Mr. Pakin

Campus Classified

GR 6-5571, Ext. 2314

Rates minimum of 15 words:

1 day	1.15
2 days	2.25
3 days	3.30
4 days	4.30
5 days	5.25
6 days	6:15

To place a classified ad, call GR 6-5571, ext. 2314, between 1 and 3 p.m. Ad must be placed 2 days in advance. Every word over 15 costs 5c extra per day.
ALL ADS MUST BE PREPAID.

MISCELLANEOUS

RENT if you can't buy! T.V.s, tape recorders, typewriters. By week, month or semester. Reasonable rates. S. U. BOOKSTORE, GR 6-5541, x 2426.

ALTERATIONS DONE within 24 hours. Call for an appointment. Lillian Potter, 207 Comstock. 478-5847.

PRIVATE DRIVING LESSONS — automatic or standard shift. Full or refresher courses. Qualified professional instructors. Pickup service. Auto Driving Academy. GR 6-3995.

SUMMER JOBS: Counselors; private boys' camp; Adirondacks; College men of above average physical fitness and judgment; tripping, riflery, canoeing, nurse and cook jobs open. Adirondack Swim Camp, 39 Mill Valley Road, Pittsford, New York 14534.

SUMMER JOB — Full time, Syracuse area, need car and phone. Call on established customers. Eight year old business needs new representative. Contact Dean Wallace, Jr., 2 Oakwood Circle, Storrs, Conn., 06268 or call 203-429-6152.

AUTO DRIVING - three hour prelicensing course given Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. SULLIVAN'S DRIVING SCHOOL - 463-3451.

GO WEST, anyone? Driving through Colorado, Nevada, Calif. in June — share expenses. Call Hecker x 3079-80.

NEW EVERY MONDAY MORNING for the lovelorn, "missing you" cards. The Bookstall, 147 Marshall St.

SHARE GAS AND DRIVING - to California during June. In air conditioned Cadillac. Max. 2 adults - Contact 457-7911.

FOR SALE

1964 HEALY SPRITE, red, some rust but runs well. Dependable. $400. Call 474-0471 after 5.

1965 OLDSMOBILE convertible. Red. 442, Power steering. Power brakes, excellent condition, reasonable. Call 637-3430 after 5.

ROOM AIR CONDITIONERS — 5,000, 6,000, 7,000 and 9,000 BTUS. These are '68 Models, some scratched or dented, some used, all guaranteed — priced for students pocketbooks 446-6321.

1966 MUSTANG — Blue power steering, power brakes, automatic transmission, excellent condition. 474-0471 after 5.

1964 PORSCHE SUPER, like new, leather, AM-FM new Pirellis, Fog lights, ski rack, after 5 p.m. 474-2674.

1968 CORVETTE convertible, blue, 2,900 miles, full power, perfect condition $4600.00 GR 9-6250 or 474-5335.

1957 VW BUG, sun-roof, good mechanically. $300.00 or best offer. Call 446-5516.

TENNIS RACKET. Gut strung. $15.00. Like new. Original cost $37.00. Call evenings 472-3914.

1956 VOLKS - Black sedan. Radio, two never used tires. $100.00. Call 656-7589 after 6 p.m.

'68 GTO — 4 speed stereo, must sell, x6-8419.

VOLKSWAGEN 69 — Sedan, sun-roof, automatic, AM-FM radio, snow tires, 4,000 miles, receiving co. car. GR 9-6717.

JAGUAR 1961 MK LX Classic 4-dr. sedan, sunroof, new paint, automatic, builtin picnic tables, many extras 472-3090 Bet. 5-6:30.

GENTLEMAN'S Dress Suit for sale, including the white coat, medium size, very reasonable. Call HO 8-5570.

COMET '61, good mechanical condition. You decide the price - Call 457-7911 after 5.

1966 MUSTANG hardtop, V8, 4-speed, power steering, low mileage, excellent condition many extras. 476-6476 or 446-0504.

LARGE WARDROBE TRUNK - excellent condition. Phone GR 2-3496.

FOR RENT

UNIVERSITY WALK'G DISTANCE — Furnished, heated efficiency and one bedroom apt. sub-let for summer only or year. Also one bedroom apartment and efficiency available Sept. 1st. Students or teachers. Parking or garage. 446-0493.

LIVINGSTON AVE. — 3 blocks from university, 2 bus lines. Bedroom $12.00. 479-7653 or 476-8296 Mrs. Wilson.

APARTMENTS all over the city. Nicely furnished. 1, 2 and 3 bedrooms. $85.00 up. GL 8-6100, 458-6101.

UNIV.-Wild, unusual apt. for rent - June 1 - "Old Viking Banquet Hall" with 18x36 ft. living room - FIREPLACE - GRAND PIANO - vaulted ceiling - skylight - panelled and antique velvet walls! A collectors item! 2 yr. lease. GR 4-5558.

ROOM FOR RENT: near Drumlins Bus. kitchen privileges, off street parking. 472-2406.

SUBLET. 3 months, June 1. Completely furnished new deluxe, townhouse (on 3 levels) 2 br., 1½ baths, balcony, grads or prof. $220.00 per month. Phone 478-3925.

TO SUBLET SUMMER — Modern 2 bedroom furnished: Hollywood kitchen picture windows, garage, lawn: 5 min. from campus $110 per month. Tel: 475-9507.

2 BEDROOM apartment to sublet — (June-August) Kitchen, living room, bath, on campus. $125/mo. 476-0885 (nights).

APARTMENT FOR TWO STUDENTS— furnished, 3 rooms, bath, all utilities, large desk, campus area, available June 1. 478-0501 evenings, Saturdays.

EUCLID, FURNISHED ROOMS - with kitchen privileges from $45 and up. 446-6451.

APARTMENT TO SUBLET, June-September, 2 bedrooms, furnished, on campus. Carol x2774 or 472-9550.

NEAR UNIVERSITY AND MEDICAL SCHOOL, 6-room unheated completely nicely furnished apartment (3 bedroom) 1st floor. Garage. Quiet. Ideal for medical students. Available July 1st. $175.00 month. 446-6192 or 446-1685.

WANTED

ROOM AND BOARD in exchange for work during 1969-70 academic year. Male student. Last summer groundskeeper, this summer hospital orderly. Dick Taylor, x3920.

TO SUBLET (July 1 - Aug. 30) a studio apartment in or within commuting distance of James Street or University area, by New York City school teacher. Contact Andy Meluzzi Tel. 474-8229 and leave message.

ROOMMATE FOR SUMMER and/or Fall. 3 Bedroom apartment. 5 minutes from university. $35/month. 476-6020.

FACULTY COUPLE — Looking for furnished or unfurnished two or three bedroom house or apartment near university. Academic year 1969-70. Call

TYPING

THIRTY YEARS EXPERIENCE. Dissertations, term papers, proof-read. Satisfaction guaranteed. Mrs. Raymond Webb. HE 7-8259.

TAKE YOUR MANUSCRIPT to the only professional typing and printing service serving the S. U. area. The knowledge and experience of having done over 2,000 theses and dissertations is behind every job we turn out. Stephanie's Office Service. 469-2795.

TYPIST experienced in thesis, dissertations, and term papers. Electric typewriter. Shirley Savlov, 446-2999 or x2441.

EXPERIENCED TYPIST — thesis, term papers, etc. reasonable rates. Call 635-5239.

PROFESSIONAL TYPING. 463-8782.

They'll be back

Dream ends, stickmen bow, 14-5

By ED AGRANOWITZ

Saturday night twenty five young men traveled what was probably the longest 200 miles of their lives. Only hours before, sophomore Tom Varley had taken a quick pass from Verne Doctor and whipped a bounce shot past Army goalie Rob Stewart to give the Orange Lacrosse team a 3-1 lead with six minutes left in the first quarter.

For a fleeting moment, it looked as though the dream might come true. Ron Doctor was battling Army's Steve Wood to a standoff in the face-offs, and the Orange were in control of the ball for about half of the quarter. The passwork of the attackmen and midfielders was never better, and the defense was playing hard-nosed lacrosse despite a slopppy field.

In the second quarter, however, the Cadets took command of the ballgame. They denied Syracuse possession for most of the period. When the Orange did get the ball, they could not cope with Army's relentless double-teaming tactics. Army built a lead of 8-4 at halftime, and then put the game away with a 5-0 third quarter, 14-5.

In the end, it was Army's superior speed and size that told the story. "They just had too many legs out there," said Orange coach Roy Simmons. They forced the play, and made us lose our poise."

Army had jumped to a quick 1-0 lead at the three-minute mark on a score by John Connors. But with 300 Orange faithful urging them on, Simmie's boys fought back. Dick George beat Stewart at 3:53 on a Jeff Davis assist. Four minutes later, Davis converted on a pass from Leo Nolan. Then came Varley's goal.

Army's All-American attacker, Pete Cramblet, knotted it for the Cadets with two goals in the first two minutes of the second period. The first one was a fast-break from the face-off and the second a semi-breakaway following a steal.

Army made it 5-3 at just under five minutes with Bob Opatovsky and Marty Knorr hitting, before the Orange made their last bid. Leo Nolan canned an unassisted goal midway through the quarter to bring the Orange back to within 4-5, but three more by Army did the trick.

For the Cadets, Knorr (three goals and one assist) and Tom Cafaro (two and three) led the way, while Nolan (two and one) and Davis (one and two) each tallied three points for the Orange.

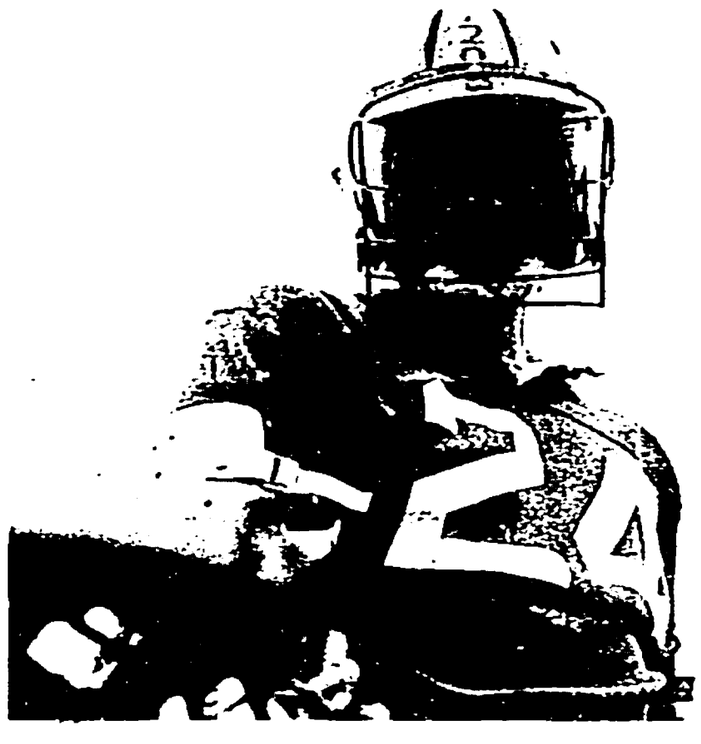
Orange goalie Butch Brown played a fine game, as the score fails to indicate. Many of Army's goals came from close range and on fast breaks. Brown's total of 25 saves indicates the heavy bombardment which he was under.

Cliff Ensley did an excellent job containing Cramblet, who scored a total of 11 goals against John Hopkins and Maryland. Ensley was beaten only once by the Army star. The entire Orange defense, in fact, did an admirable job under the constant pressure.

ED'S ITORIAL: For the cheering throng of Orange fans who made the three-and-one-half-hour drive down to scenic West Point, and the thousands more who awaited the result back on the Hill, the loss was a genuine disappointment, to be sure.

This edition of Syracuse lacrosse has compiled not only its finest record in more than a decade, but has outdone all other varsity sports this year. The fans which have responded in unprecedented numbers need not be ashamed of their team's performance on Saturday. This is a team that refused to quit, even when defeat was a certainty.

This is a team that will win their remaining four games for a 13-1 record, and will land somewhere in the top five in the nation. Certainly that is no disgrace.



In this game, they wanted victory more than anything for their coach, who, pending an athletic department decision, may be in his final season. Witness a statement by the Syracuse co-captains:

"We were sorry to disappoint all the fans that followed us to the Point Saturday. The loss was a great disappointment to us because our goal was an undefeated season. But our biggest sorrow is that which we feel for our coach.

"He is the greatest guy and is a tremendous inspiration to us on the field and off. He treats us like men and is always anxious to help us in any way he can. We know that this game meant a lot to him.

"We would also like to thank our fans for their support. The tremendous following has made us try just a little harder. We hope you don't give up on us, because we have no intentions of giving up on ourselves. We're going to go out and win our last four games for our coach and our fans. We hope you'll be there to help us out."

—Cliff Ensley and Jeff Davis for the Syracuse Lacrosse Team

OUTSTANDING IN DEFEAT was SU attacker Leo Nolan. His two goals and one assist tied him with Jeff Davis for the team lead in points scored in the 14-5 loss to Army. Nolan, who has scored well all year, was one of the Orangemen's eight nomines for All-American.

Offense shines in Blue-White grid scrimage

By ADAM DAWSON

From the opening toss of the coin on Saturday the White team showed a definite superiority over the Blues in the annual Spring football game. The White team consisted of the first offense and the second defense while the opposing Blue team was composed of the first defense and second offense.

The White team's 35-16 victory came in front of 1,600 fans, numerous pro scouts, and the Iowa State head coach. The Cyclones are Bill Orange's first opponent in the fall and they had two men in the press box busily charting every play.

"We thought the second offensive line would beat the second defense, but it worked out the other way around," said grid mentor Ben Schwartzwalder.

The second defense featured fine playing by linebackers Bob Rust and John St. Peter, free safety Karl Lombell and middle guard Ted Lachowitz.

"Ted had a field day," continued the veteran coach. Indeed he did, spending a good portion of the afternoon embracing Blue backs. Lombell, also a sophomore, showed excellent lateral movement and provided good pass coverage. The play of Rust and St. Peter further brightens the already glowing linebacking position.

The Blue defense seemed a bit sluggish during the game. much the same as last year. Only the linebackers stood out in performance. The line consisting of Joe Beauregard, Joe Ehrmann, Ray White, Bucky McGill and Pete Pietryka played almost the entire game. Their relative unfamiliarity with their positions hurt the team. Only Pietryka was at his present position last fall.

THE MAN OF THE HOUR during the annual intra-squad football game was quarterback Randy Zur (29). Zur replaced the injured starter, Paul Paolisso, and guided the White team to a 35-16 win over the Blues, scoring himself on a 29 yard scamper. (Photo by Clemens).

The absence of Rick Kokosky at end as well as that of Lou Gubitosa has hurt the defense. While Kokosky is expected back, Gubitosa is not. Also missing from the game was the bone-cruching tackles of middle guard Ron Womack who will unfortunately not be playing next year.

Linebacker is the only position about which Ben has no worries, as was evidenced Saturday. His starting trio of Jack Protz, Bob Bancroft and Don Dorr turned in an excellent game. Standing out even further was Dorr who picked off the games only interception and played a fine defensive game against both the pass and the run.

"The defensive secondary lacks the necessary speed," commented Schwartzwalder.

After Randy Zur settled down at quarterback for the White team during the second half, he riddled the Blue secondary for 151 yards passing. In fairness to the first string it must be pointed out that most of those yards came late in the game against the second string linebackers and deep backs.

Tony Gabriel was Zur's favorite receiver grabbing seven passes for 66 yards (one less reception than last year). Bill Maddox with three, Marty Januskiewicz with two, Lee Castner and Al Newton with one each handled the rest of the White team's receiving chores.

The White backfield of Zur, Januskiewicz and Newton accounted for 193 yards rushing and four of the team's five touchdowns. Januskiewicz gained 82 yards on 12 carries with one TD, Newton gained 49 yards on 13 carries with two TD's, while Zur showed excellent scrambling ability in gaining 62 yards with 17 carries and one score.

Fine offensive line play highlighted the White attack. The line was anchored by the fine play of Dave McCard and John Cherundolo.

Originally the Blue offense was to be handled by Zur but Paolisso's injury necessitated a change in plans. Zur was to direct the White team with Larry Hatalsky and Frank Ruggiero co-piloting the Blues.

Ruggiero seemed more at ease at quarterback than did Hatalsky as he directed the team to their two last period scores. The first came on a five yard run off tackle by Billy Knox and the second was a 23-yard pass to Nile Evans. Blue's only other tally came on a second quarter field goal by George Jakowenko from 34 yards out.

Rowers fourth in Eastern Sprints

By DAVE ROSENTHAL

Expected success, welcome surprise and bitter disappointment characterized the performance of the SU freshman, JV and varsity crews in the 24th annual Eastern Sprint Championships.

Coach Gary MacLachlan's frosh led the way by placing third behind Penn and Harvard. Only the 1961 frosh sprint champions ever placed higher.

The combined finishes of the three crews put SU in a tie for overall fourth place behind Harvard, Penn and Cornell. Again, one must look back to 1961 to find a higher finish.

In the freshman final, the Orangemen came off the line at 40 strokes per minute, three below Harvard and four below Penn. This caused the Orange to fall behind from the beginning. Despite this, less than three-quarters of a length separated the three for most of the first 1000 meters.

Slowly, Penn and Harvard began pulling away and SU found itself battling Yale for third spot. By the 1500 meter mark, Penn and Harvard were out of reach and the Orange had taken a lead over Yale at 1700 meters when the Yale bow man broke an out-rigger and their team faded to last.

SU continued driving and at the finish was 11 seconds behind Penn and 9.3 slower than Harvard. The Orange held almost a length lead over fourth-place Brown.

The Syracuse jayvees, averaging 180 pounds a man, came within an eyelash of beating mighty Harvard in the morning qualifying. The Orange had a length lead over the field at the 500 meter spot, but by 1000, Harvard had taken over while Yale was making its move. SU battled back to pull even with the Crimson boat at 1500 meters and continued to do so for the final 500 meters. A phototimer was required to separate the two crews at the finish.

In the finals, Syracuse finished fifth in 6:23.5, three-tenths of a second behind third place Penn and less than a second slower than Navy, who finished second.

The crew has one more meet during the regular season, that coming this Saturday in Hanover, New Hampshire. Following that encounter will be nearly a month layoff before hosting the IRA Regatta from June 12th to 14th.

DAILY ORANGE

Syracuse University's Daily Newspaper Since 1903

Vol. 67, No. 103 | Syracuse, New York, Wednesday, May 14, 1969 | 10 Cents

TOM SAWYER NEVER HAD IT SO GOOD. When some anti-ROTC students decided to paint the engineering site's construction fence with a commerical announcement yesterday, they suddenly had a lot of "help" from the University Physical plant. The Physical plant had already painted the fence once, covering a series of similiar student messages in the morning. When the anti-ROTC message appeared, it was apparently time for a second coat.

PFP artists color ROTC march with fence-painting ploy

By KAREN WIEDIGER
Executive Editor

The only confrontation which took place yesterday in connection with the Chancellor's review of Reserve Officers Training Corps (ROTC) was a battle of wits between physical plant workers and fence painters.

Members of the Peace and Freedom Party (PFP) had painted anti-ROTC slogans on the fence around the engineering building site during the night. However, physical plant workers received instructions early Tuesday morning to "paint the entire fence gray," according to one painter. It is believed the call came from Security Police.

While this was taking place, several students began to paint the slogan "Vote 'No' on ROTC." Their actions lead physical plant workers to paint over the new signs, presenting the only skirmish of the day.

During the ROTC review about 30 PFP members sat together to watch the activities in Archbold Stadium. Seven signs representing anti-ROTC feelings were held. PFP has come out against ROTC in previous statements.

The issue of ROTC and its place on campus will come before the University Senate at a meeting today. A sub-committee of the Senate will recommend the following:

- a revised ROTC program should be continued at Syracuse University.
- Only courses taught by the faculty of academic departments, in accordance with academic standards, be granted academic credit.
- Those ROTC programs which wish to supplement academic departmental course offerings with more strictly military training activities conducted by military instructors may offer such training. However, these activities should not be granted academic credit.
- Weapons, close-order drill and field exercises should not be permitted on campus.

The ROTC question has been under study here since 1967.

Law students seeking reforms from Piskor

By JOHN WISNIEWSKI

Dissatisfied law students have submitted a list of grievances to Vice Chancellor and Provost, Frank P. Piskor, calling for reforms within the College of Law.

Richard B. Boddie, president of the college's Student Bar Association, outlined the law students' requested changes. In a letter to Piskor, Boddie and other Student Bar Association officials recommended that "appropriations be made immediately to increase the number, variety and quality of the law and related material in the law library."

Boddie requested "The library facilities in the Earnest I. White Hall, presently used by the engineering department, be immediately turned over for the exclusive use by the College of Law for the expansion of its library facilities."

The Association of American Law Schools requires that the library of the school to be accredited must accommdate 60 per cent of the school's enrollment at one time. Boddie said the present law library is unable to do so.

The Student Bar Association asked that "additional faculty should be added on a full-time basis so as to reduce the faculty-student ratio to a meaningful and managable level."

Law students also recommmended that the B-2 level of Grant Hall "be used to rectify the accute shortage of faculty office space, administrative office space, carrels for independent study and faculties for law school clinical programs."

Boddie feels that the law school has been neglected by the University for a long time. "We will be paying the $150 student fee in the fall like everyone else," he said. "But we're the last people to get football tickets."

In October, 1963, the late Dean Ralph Kaharas of the law school and Vice President and Treasurer F.A. Wingate signed a contract granting the Student Bar Association $900 annually for its scholarship program "to be derived from the percentage of profit earned from the vending machines located in the law building. Boddie said the association received no such payments until this year, when it was given $500. He said there has been a breach of contract in the matter.

Boddie is hopeful the administration will meet the law students' recommendations. He feels that the present status of the school has caused many alumni not to make monetary contributions to the school which they might have made otherwise.

He was asked what the students will do if their demands are not met. Boddie said the following steps would be taken as a "last resort" if agreed upon by a majority of the students:

* The students' tuition would be held in escrow for the fall semester.
* The Student Bar Association would possibly write and explain the situation to Arnold M. Grant, of the Board of Visitors.
* Lastly, prospective students would be urged not to attend the College of Law.

Unless the recommendations are met, Boddie said, it is doubtful that the law school will receive future accrediation. He concluded that a law degree from Syracuse would then be almost worthless.

No 'student leaders'

CSL setting at-large posts

By LARRY KRAMER

The student members of the Council on Student Life have decided not to allow two "elected" student leaders to be interviewed for the position of at-large member of CSL. The decision was reached earlier this week during the initial screening -of-applications meeting.

Approximately 18 applications were received, according to a CSL member, he added "We decided to cut down the number of those that were to be interviewed." Four of the applicants were denied interviews. According to another CSL source, two were denied on the basis of a general lack of understanding of the position and its responsibilities. Two others, Bob Tembeckjian and Steve Tober, were denied because they were "elected leaders with large constituencies." Tembeckjian is president of the sophomore class, Tober is president of Booth Dormitory.

According to Dave Ifshin, SG president, and CSL member, "We (CSL) want students that are informed about the campus and have been involved to a limited degree."

Explaining his position further, Ifshin added, "If we felt we needed the president of the Sophomore Class on the Council, we would put the presidents of all three classes on automatically. We don't want a

(Continued on Page 7)

Senior ball

Senior Ball tickets are available daily between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. at HBC cloakroom for $5 each. Graduation announcements may also be purchased.

THE BEATLES WILL FACE THE BLUE MEANIES tonight, tomorrow and Friday at 6, 8 and 10 p.m. in Gifford Auditorium, as Film Forum offers the feature flick "Yellow Submarine."

Foreign Study Programs of Syracuse University

SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY offers the undergraduate student an opportunity to spend one semester, preferably during the junior year, living and studying in a foreign country. A student thus may enrich his education with a foreign experience in depth, yet complete his undergraduate program within the normal four-year period.

Students from all accredited colleges and universities are eligible for the programs. Those accepted undertake a full semester of work during their stay abroad. In order to insure opportunity for full participation in the life and culture of the host country, each student will live in a private home for part or all of the semester.

SEMESTER IN ITALY

The Semester in Italy was inaugurated in the fall of 1959. It is unique in that it enables the American undergraduate who has had no previous study of the Italian language to engage in a full semester of liberal arts work within the life and culture of that country.

Courses, except those in Italian language and literature, are taught in English. The faculty is composed of personnel from Syracuse University and Italians appointed as visiting professors or conversation teachers. All students are required to enroll for fifteen hours of work, including six hours of Italian.

SEMESTER IN FRANCE

The Semester in France is offered in cooperation with the University of Poitiers in Poitiers, France. The student may spend either a fall or a spring semester in Poitiers pursuing liberal arts studies while developing a high level of language competence. The language of instruction is French. Six semester credits earned in the University of Poitiers and nine in regular Syracuse courses taught either by a Syracuse Faculty member or visiting French professors.

SEMESTER IN COLOMBIA

The Semester in Colombia is offered in cooperation with the University of the Andes in Bogota. The student may spend one semester, approximately August 15 to December 10, studying in Bogota. Students take one Syracuse University course, one special course offered by the University of the Andes for Syracuse and three regular courses offered by the University of the Andes. The language of instruction is Spanish.

SEMESTER IN THE NETHERLANDS

The Semester in The Netherlands was inaugurated in September of 1967 by the College of Home Economics. The program offers courses in home economics, art history, history and sociology. The language of instruction is English. The program is offered with the cooperation of The Netherlands — America Institute.

ADMISSION TO THE PROGRAM

The curriculum is designed primarily to fit the needs of college juniors. Applicants who would be in their senior year will be considered if they have the support of their home college. (Students are normally expected to take the last thirty hours of work on the home campus.) Applicants who would be in the second semester of the sophomore year may be considered. Ordinarily such applicants are expected to demonstrate that participation during the junior year would not be possible.

The program is open to students from all accredited colleges and universities. An applicant from an institution other than Syracuse must have the support of his home college and must be elegible to take a full program of course work for full credit at his home school.

To be accepted, the student must establish that he has the necessary academic ability and emotional maturity to succeed in the program for which he applies.

Students are advised to begin thinking about a possible semester abroad early in their college career. In many instances, careful planning of the student's total academic program will be necessary. The applicant considering study abroad is urged to discuss the matter with his academic adviser. The student may also obtain advice and assistance by contacting the Foreign Study Programs office at Syracuse University.

It is not necessary to be a major in any particular field or fields of study to be eligible to participate in a foreign study program; past participants have come from all of the undergraduate divisions of the University. However, the applicant whose major field of study is one not included in the curriculum of the program offered abroad must be especially careful in planning well in advance.

FINANCIAL ARRANGEMENTS

The cost of a foreign study program is moderately higher ($300 - $400) than the cost of a semester on the Syracuse campus. The student pays $1,840 for tuition, fees, insurance, orientation, outbound transportation, board and lodging for the semester. All scholarships valid for use at Syracuse University can be applied to the program. There are a limited number of grants-in-aid for a semester abroad.

APPLICATION

Applications must be submitted on forms obtained from the Foreign Study Programs office, 335 Comstock Avenue in Syracuse (13210). APPLICATIONS FOR A FALL TERM ARE DUE BY APRIL 15 AND BY OCTOBER 15 FOR THE SPRING. It is advisable to submit an application early in order to allow for adequate advance planning. Late applicants are considered as possible alternate candidates.

TO: Foreign Study Program of Syracuse University
335 Comstock Avenue, Syracuse, N. Y. 13210
Telephone (315) 476-5541 ext. 3471

Please send me application/information for study semester in . . . ☐ Italy, ☐ France, ☐ Colombia, ☐ Amsterdam.

Name _____

Address _____

City _____ State _____

Zip Code _____

College Now Attending _____

ANGUS H. TWOMBLY — Editor-in-Chief

MANAGING EDITOR - Alan Stamm EXECUTIVE EDITOR - Karen Wiediger NEWS EDITOR - Fred Tuccillo EDITORIAL DIRECTOR - David A. Ross COPY EDITOR - Jean Havens FEATURE EDITOR - Roz Mazer SPORTS EDITOR - Mike Weber CAMPUS AFFAIRS EDITOR - Larry Kramer PHOTOGRAPHY EDITOR - Clint Clemens ASSOCIATE EDITORS - Andrij Bilyk, Kay Christensen, Beth Hillson, Rona Kavee, Helene Macdonald, Charles Shapiro, Dan Schlossberg, Patti Williams, Roni Ziokower.

DAILY ORANGE

Syracuse University's Daily — Newspaper Since 1908

WEDNESDAY, MAY 14, PAGE 3

STEVEN P. STROBRIDGE -- Business Manager

ASSISTANT BUSINESS MANAGER— Art Depasqua, NATIONAL ADVERTISING MANAGER— Janet Meyer ACCOUNT EXECUTIVES— Roger Black, Jim Maney, Mike Greenstein.

Published Tuesday, through Friday during the academic year by students of Syracuse University. Offices located at 200 Brooklea Drive, Fayetteville, N.Y., and 1101 East Adams St., Syracuse, New York. Entered as Second Class matter at the U.S. Post Office, Fayetteville, N.Y. 13066.

ROTC, action may not help

Today the University Senate will decide the future of ROTC at SU. The status of ROTC has been a point of friction between campus military and campus radicals since October 1967 when the Liberal Arts faculty introduced a resolution calling for the expulsion of Military Science and Aerospace Studies from their college. The Liberal Arts resolution was passed by the University Senate, and a committee was formed and charged with the task of finding a home and/or a final resting place for the controversial departments.

It is the findings of this committee that the University Senate will vote on today. The committee has recommended that a revised ROTC program, banning weapons, close-order drills, and field exercises on campus, be continued at the University.

We feel that this proposal represents nothing more than an irrational lashing out against program that is already plauged by inadequacy. The recommendation says nothing to the moral issue, and treats the entire situation as a declaration of their anti-war sentiments.

The problems are really quite basic, and so are the solutions. Firstly, the courses that ROTC cadets are required to take are, for the most part, superficial and inadequate. Many of the courses are far too lacking in substance to be included in a college of liberal arts.

Secondly, ROTC is a branch of the military establishment, and is therefore considered as immoral as the war in Viet Nam is. As Chancellor Tolley pointed out, students and faculty tend to hold ROTC responsible, and will do so as long as the war rages.

Neither of these two problems are dealt with by the University Senates proposal. The only thing that removing drilling and guns from ROTC training would do would be to make it more Mickey Mouse than it already is. This castration would serve no purpose other than to make ROTC even less fit for this campus. ROTC would still remain immoral to many, and the students would still be learning nothing.

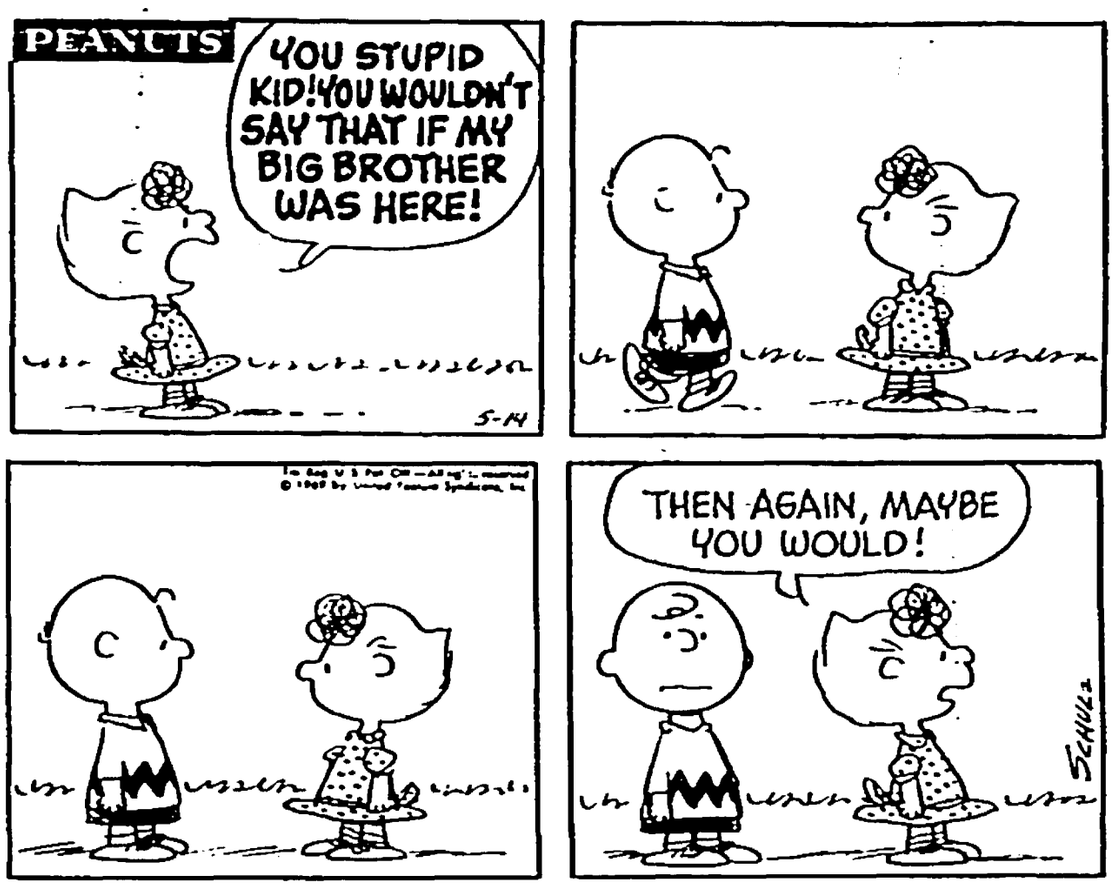
Depending on the sentiments of the University Senate, ROTC should either be completely removed in tact from the university and delegated to extra-curricular status or completely revamped academically so that the future leaders of the American military establishment might receive an education worthy of this university. Any other move would be pure irrational folly.

Relevant weather?

Students have been complaining at SU this year for RELEVANCE--in their courses, their professors and in overall attitudes toward a university education.

There is a new gripe. Syracuse isn't the best or the worst university, all would agree. But the students have a just grievance against the weather in Syracuse, New York.

For five days, Syracuse has experienced scattered thunder showers, not an uncommon experience, but these past days, the sun has been shining amid the downpour. The ordinarily erudite student gazed at the sky for the expected--a rainbow--but, alas, there was none.



If there ever were a natural, inalienable right we should demand as residents of the world community it is for the rainbow justly deserved by a driving rain. The Hancock Field weatherman's statement that "maybe SU is on the wrong side of the shower" is totally unacceptable.

May the rainbow issue be the last cause students demand this year--the last in the spectrum of issues the '68-'69 year has brought forth.

We demand relevant weather.

Editorial policy

All material submitted to the Daily Orange becomes the property of the paper to print at its discretion. No unsigned materials will be printed but names will be withheld upon request.

Peanuts is run with the permission of The Syracuse Herald-Journal.

Who's qualified?

Harold Wollinsky is a freshman in the College of Liberal Arts.

With only three weeks left in SU's school year, the air hasn't yet been cleared of the lingering odor left by "campus politicians." Today's news pages carry a story concerning the CSL (student branch) decision not to even interview two applicants for the job of at-large student member of CSL. Apparently, the decision was made because these students were "student leaders" already, and because of their offices, they wouldn't represent the masses properly.

One CSL member told of an incident involving one of the applications screened. "When her name was brought up, one member voted to deny her an interview because he didn't like her, personally."

The student members of CSL are acting the same as a fraternity does during rush. They have taken it upon themselves to decide who would be too busy to hold the job. They have criticized elected student leaders as being too busy to hold the job they presently hold.

Harold Wollinsky

But who exactly is doing the criticizing.

The first member is the president of the Student Government. Although there are rumors to the contrary, he is a busy man on campus, probably the busiest elected student leader, but he seems to find time enough to be on CSL.

Next we have the president of University Union. With the new UU "room" he could easily be the busiest elected student leader on campus.

The third member is the Speaker of the Student Senate. With the advent of the new University Senate, the Speaker will be concerned with the changing role of the Student Senate and obviously busy.

Fourth is the new president of the Inter-Dormitory Council. With the proposed reforms of David Ifshin, this person will find the importance of his role multiplied many times. He will be the chairman of powerful committee of Dorm presidents.

The argument that "Student leaders are too busy" doesn't hold much water coming from the mouths of the present members, for they are among the busiest of the group. That argument would be valid if and only if it applied to all the members. If one member is the president of Student Government, how can he claim to be an effective member of the council when he is claiming at the same time that the president of the sophomore class is too busy to do an effective job.

One applicant reported, "CSL cannot become an elitest group if it is to be successful." Unfortunately, they already are an elitist group. Politics has and always will enter in the decision to pick the at-large members of CSL. The posts offer an excellent way to repay a friend who hasn't really proven himself as being truly concerned.

When Bob Tembeckjian was notified of the decision, he was questioned by a Daily Orange reporter concerning his role in the University. His main gripe was, "CSL should be asking me these questions, not the Daily Orange, that's the problem.

I go one step further. The automatic student members of CSL shouldn't be asking anyone anything. If two students are to be picked for at-large membership to the CSL, then they should be voted on "at-large" in an election. If the student members of CSL don't want to create a "clique of student leaders," then they better let someone else choose "at-large" members.

It would seem even more practical and effective if all the student members would be elected by the student body in special elections each year. But because of the improbability of this proposal ever being realized, a reasonable compromise would be to have the two present at-large position filled by election rather than default.

Senate bill contradicts UJB housing decision

By COLETTE STALLINGS

Student Senate last night passed a bill providing that students holding University housing should not be prohibited from owning, renting or maintaining residence in off-campus housing. The bill was introduced as a direct result of the University Judicial Board's decision against an SU student for maintaining an off-campus apartment in addition to campus housing.

Discussion of the issue among the 30 senators present ranged from a boistrous affirmation that such prohibition violates one of the students inaliable rights, to a suggestion by Speaker John Ross: "It is advisable when dealing with the administration or a University disciplinary body that the student request the decision be presented in writing."

Two bills introduced by Government Structures Committee Chairman Gerry Horn were moved into committee for further investigation.

The first provides that students participating in executive, judicial, legislative or class branches of Student Government, be given one hour of credit per semester upon completion of a paper. Such credit would be on a pass-fail basis and would not be included in the student's academic average.

"In other words," according to Ross, "Mr. Horn wants to give you credit for sitting on your asses."

The second bill, called the Open Housing Act, provides that any student not on any kind of probation and under 21 years of age, shall be allowed to live off-campus with the written consent of his parents or guardian. Students over 21 may move off campus without stipulation.

Chairman of committees that will continue in existance are: Richard Barton, student services; Gerry Horn, government structures, Bill Egan, academics; and Bob Connor, finance.

New committees and their charimen named by Ross are SU education committee, Pogi Marshall; SU and the federal government, Paul Finkelman; commuications, Bob Morse; Greek communications, John Rafferty; public relations chairman, Beth Durchschlag; Student Senate newspaper, Mary Taylor and Marsha Smelkinson. None of the new committees, except SU and the federal government were described by their creator.

'Marat/Sade' presents an 'exciting . . . experience'

By HOWARD MANDEL

The SU Drama Department's production of "Marat/Sade" is an absorbing and exciting theater experience. I never expected to see such a fine job done with such a difficult play in Syracuse, New York; a trip to the Regent Experimental Theater during the next three evenings will be well rewarded. The direction, the cast, the sets: all were deserving of the standing ovation they received by an obviously impressed audience on opening night.

"The Persecution and Assassination of Jean-Paul Marat As Performed by the Inmates of the Asylum of Charenton under the Direction of the Marquis de Sade" presents a play within a play. The complexities of such an undertaking are enormous; the concept calls for the actors to take on two roles, that of the inmates, and that of the characters the insane are to portray. The relation between the two roles necessitates subtle and disciplined interpretations, and almost without exception the fine cast maintains the proper distinction between involvement and distance.

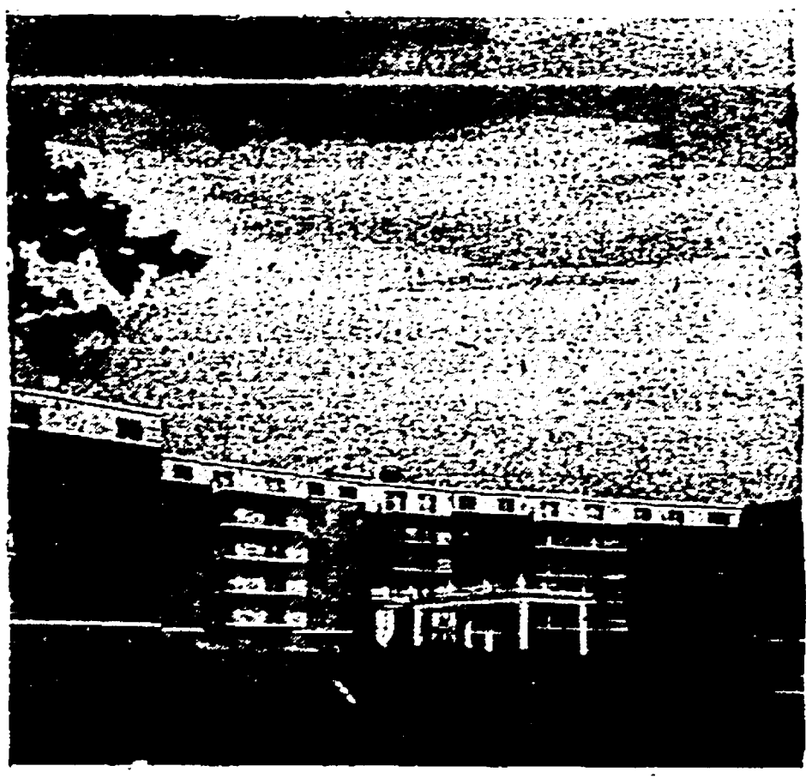
David R. Fendrick, as de Sade, has developed a bearing and presence unusual student actors; he is obviously in control of the inmates, his actors. Though at times he seems somewhat amused and perhaps disinterested in his play's proceedings, the audience cannot ignore the power of de Sade. His understated responses to the asylum's director, Monsieur Coulmier, played by Howard Roller, are perfect. His dialogues with Marat, performed by Drew Katzman, are stunning.

Peter Weiss has written an extremely literate play, unusual for its confrontations with the abstract and philosophical. Katzman is superb as a paranoic, there is no inconsistency between his sickness and the problems of the intellectual Marat, attempting to sustain the Revolution while acting as a restraint upon an impatient lower class. The tension between Marat and de Sade, who points out Marat's failure and the selling out of the Revolution by its leaders, provides much intellectual involvement.

But the success of the play really depends upon the inmates. Consistently engrossed in their roles, the supporting cast is excellent. Their madness is the perfect metaphor for the impatience of the mob, and their concentration is admirable. They are constantly moving, aware of what is happening only in the most vague way. Yet they cannot help but respond to the exhortations of de Sade, ignoring the rhetoric of Marat and Jacques Roux, correctly interpreted by John Urban.

The weakest job is done by Dulcie Arnold as Charlotte Corday, Marat's assassin, although director Gerard E. Moses shares this failure because of a seemingly inconsistent interpretation of the role. Corday is supposed to be suffering from melancholia and sleeping sickness, yet Miss Arnold performs as though she was Joan of Arc, fanatic and bold. Corday is not an intellectual; her political views are confused at best, and perhaps irrelevant. Miss Arnold alone is unable to detach her role as Corday from her role as an inmate. She represents determination and deliberation rather than the apathy which is beginning to affect some of the followers of the Revolution. She sings her musical numbers as though they were ballads, and she an ingenue.

Corday is unfortunate in that she is involved in another seeming inconsistency of interpretation: the reality given to the whipping and assassination scenes. The reasoning behind using a real whip on de Sade, and a real knife to slay Marat, is not apparent. These devices only distract from the careful realism which has been constructed throughout the production.

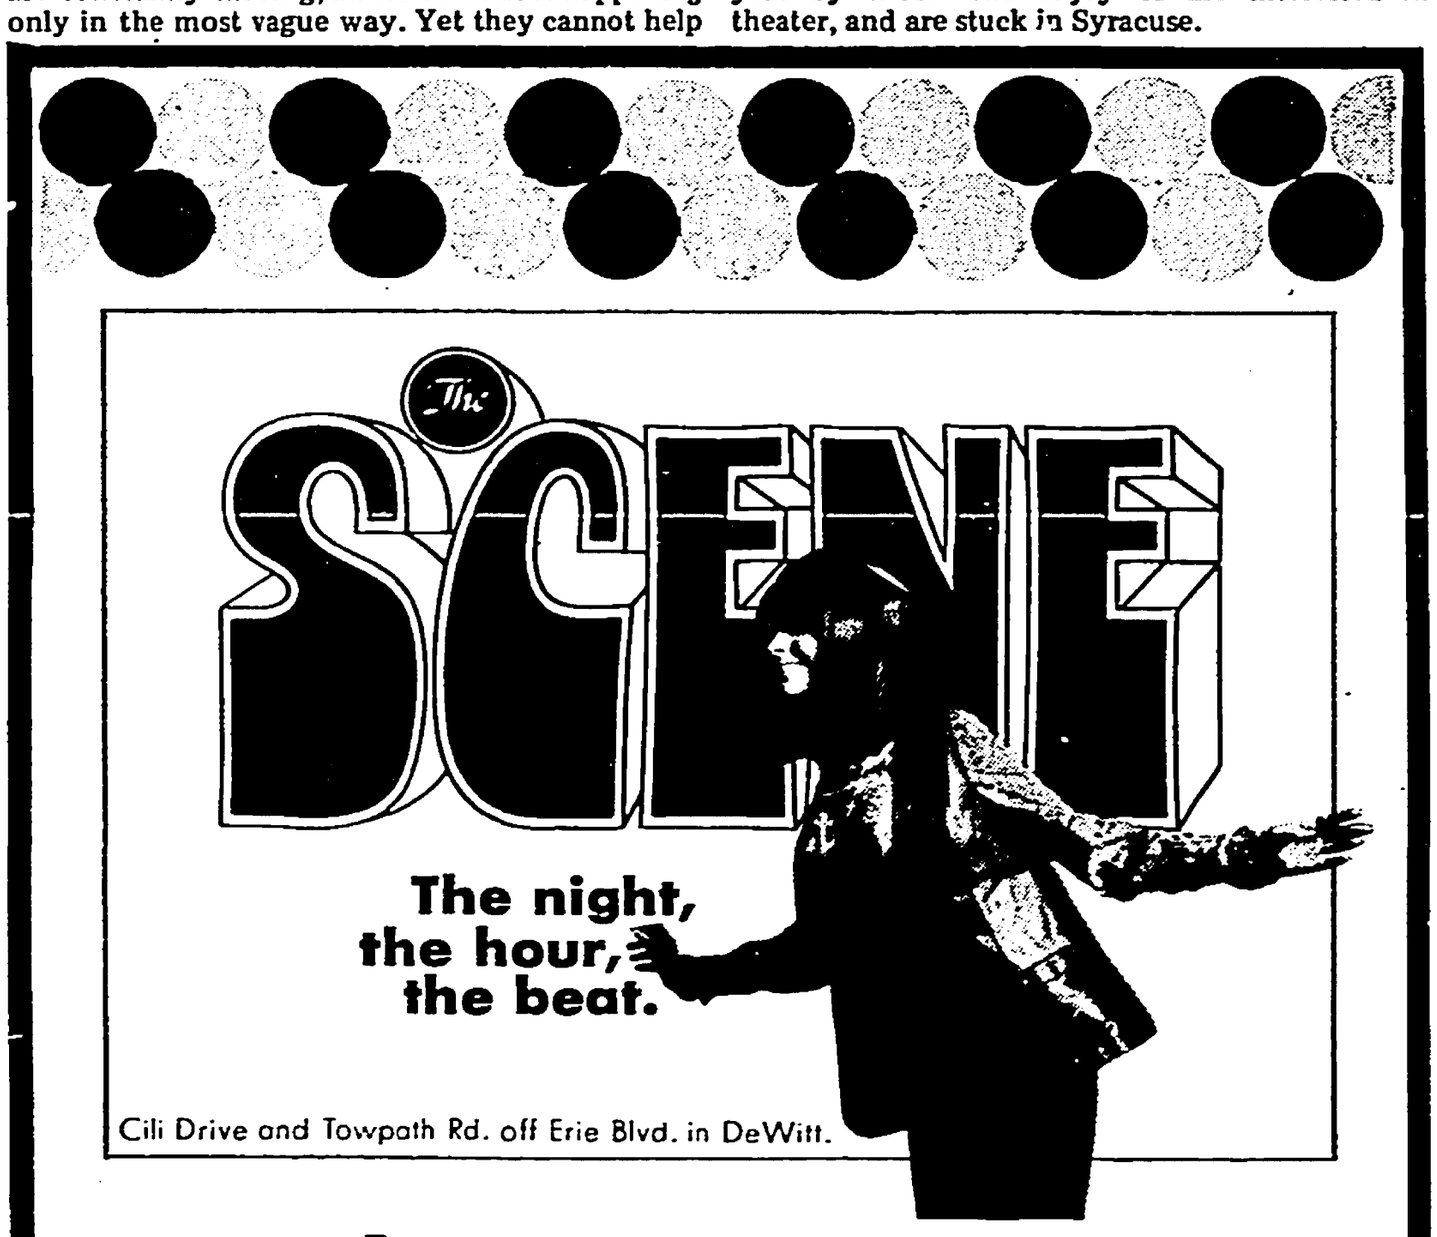


Good support is provided by John Neville, as Corday's lover, Duperret. John G. Seavers, the Herald, is much too strong; his sarcasm destroys the tension which should exist between he and M. Coulmier, by overpowering Roller. De Sade needs no inciter to stimulate the inmates, a role Seavers seems to take.

The theater itself is used imaginatively, with each act opening with the scurrying of the inmates, like mice, across the rafters above the stage. Moses has restrained himself by not allowing the inmates to attack the audience; he realizes that the show is strong enough to carry itself, without needing physical contact between the cast and the audience. The musical numbers are on the whole well done; they are not rousing just to keep the play alive, as in so many musicals; they actually contribute to the play's movement. The musical inmates deserve special commendation; they do not break their insane concentration even when playing.

This production is the one not to be missed this year by those who enjoy or are interested in theater, and are stuck in Syracuse.

WANTED for PSYCHOLOGICAL EXPERIMENT



Women at least 21 years of age, with at least a high school education. Participants will be paid at least $2.00 per hour. If interested, call Upstate Medical Center at 473-5627. Ask for Mrs. Harter.

NEW FACULTY AND GRADUATE HOUSING

Nob Hill, only a few minutes from SU, offers all the conveniences of luxury living in a serene atmosphere accented by a panoramic view. Applications for the moderately-priced suites are currently being accepted for the fall semester.

Full-color brochures and other information describing the abundant amenities are available to faculty, staff and graduate students by phoning 469-3211 between noon and 6 p.m.

Tonight:
Drink and Drown.
All the beer you can drink.
GUYS $2.75 GALS $1.75
Mixed drinks-1/2 price.

Projection '70

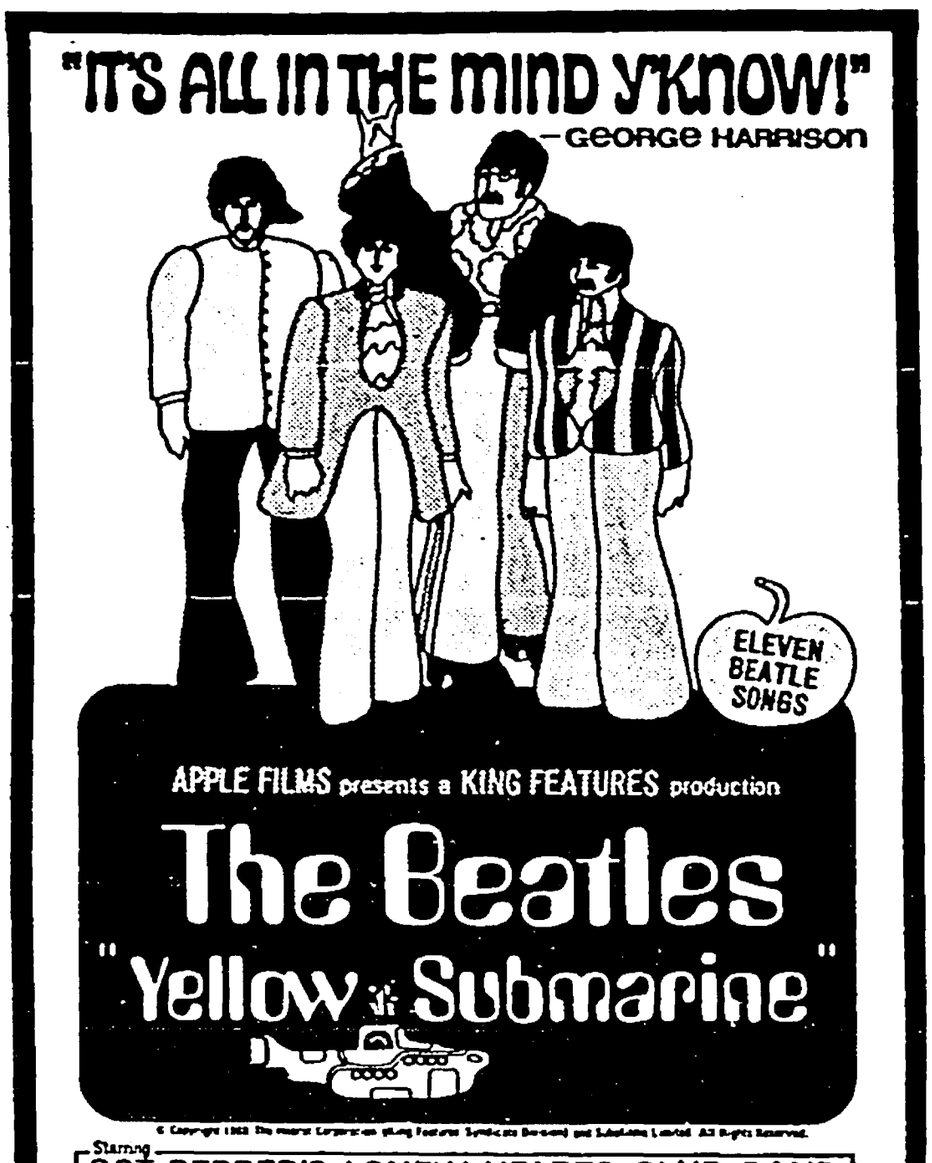
Two tutoring programs to be offered

By MARY TAYLOR

In the past year 120 students from several schools and departments have been working with primary school children from the Syracuse ghetto. Through a tutorial program the children and students have learned from each other. The children have been helped in reading and other learned content skills while the tutors have come away with a deeper understanding of relationships with children, particularly black children.

Projection '70 is recruiting students from all University schools and colleges for the next year.

Tutors will take Education 324 which involves a two-hour training session with a student trainer, one class hour with a professor from the School of Education and about two and a half hours each week in a one to one tutoring session with a child.



The project director for 1969-70, David Moore, and the director of training, Chrisi Louro, are in the process of planning a new addition to the program. A special session of Education 311 (Ed. 101 previously) will be open to student trainers who have had tutorial experience, researchers, material development specialists, and course administrators.

These two courses will enable volunteers in the program to get up to six credits a year for their participation.

The course leaders, Bob Mussey and Gene Kane, put a heavy emphasis on the value of a seeker-resource relationship rather than a learner-teacher relationship in approaching the tutors. Tutors are given a minimal amount of theory and pre-training before meeting their child to determine his particular learning problems. Student trainers and five advisory professors are available to do specific training and to provide direction in analyzing these experiences. They assist the tutor in finding possible resources to use.

A major assumption made by the course leaders is that traditional teaching methods, presentation of theory and content, in class has very little value. In Ed. 324, students learn through direct experience the problems facing them as teachers and then attempt to interpret these experiences and seek solutions for them.

Students interested in any of the positions may be interviewed between May 14 and May 25. The 85-100 students admitted to the course will be notified before the end of the semester. For further information or to schedule an interview call ext. 2650 or 3138.

formerly Guido's Salon Heinz

UMBERTO

Salon Boutique

The look doesn't just happen — it's put together with spirit and directed at every inch of girl — try all sorts of things — then try us —

422-1666 - SALON
422-9500 - BOUTIQUE
302 S. Warren St.
Open 6 days 3 evenings

film forum
gifford auditorium
syracuse university
$1.00

MAY 13, 14, 15
6, 8 & 10 p.m.

Campus Clothiers
S.U. BOOKSTORES

TIE SALE

S U Bookstores

Our Entire Stock of Ties

Buy One and Get Another at 1/2 Price

Volunteers needed for SG

Student Government is still seeking student volunteers for the newly created executive branches:

1) Commissioners--applications are being accepted for commissioners of athletics, NSA, publications, dorm life and intellectual revitalization. Applicants must submit a resume including experience in the prospective field and conception of the desired position.

2) Issue Coordination Committees will be formed from students submitting a 3x5 file card stating the issue to be pursued. Also, students may apply in a general issue capacity. These issue cards will be cross-filed, and resultant committees will formulate and investigate student action in these fields. In this way, as many students as possible will have a voice in SG policy execution, Ifshin said.

3) Students for a Better University--This mobilization force will be completely revamped, with 14 new members to be chosen from applicants by the Council on Student Life. The new body will be chaired by the SG President and will be autonomous body under Student Government.

4) SG Task Force--This group will be a carry-over from the volunteer enthusiasm displayed during the recent boycott. The all-purpose force will have stand-by capacity, ready to act in a variety of activities, such as publicity, promotion, campus mobilization, etc.

Any student may apply for any of the four areas, and applications will be accepted for more than one category.

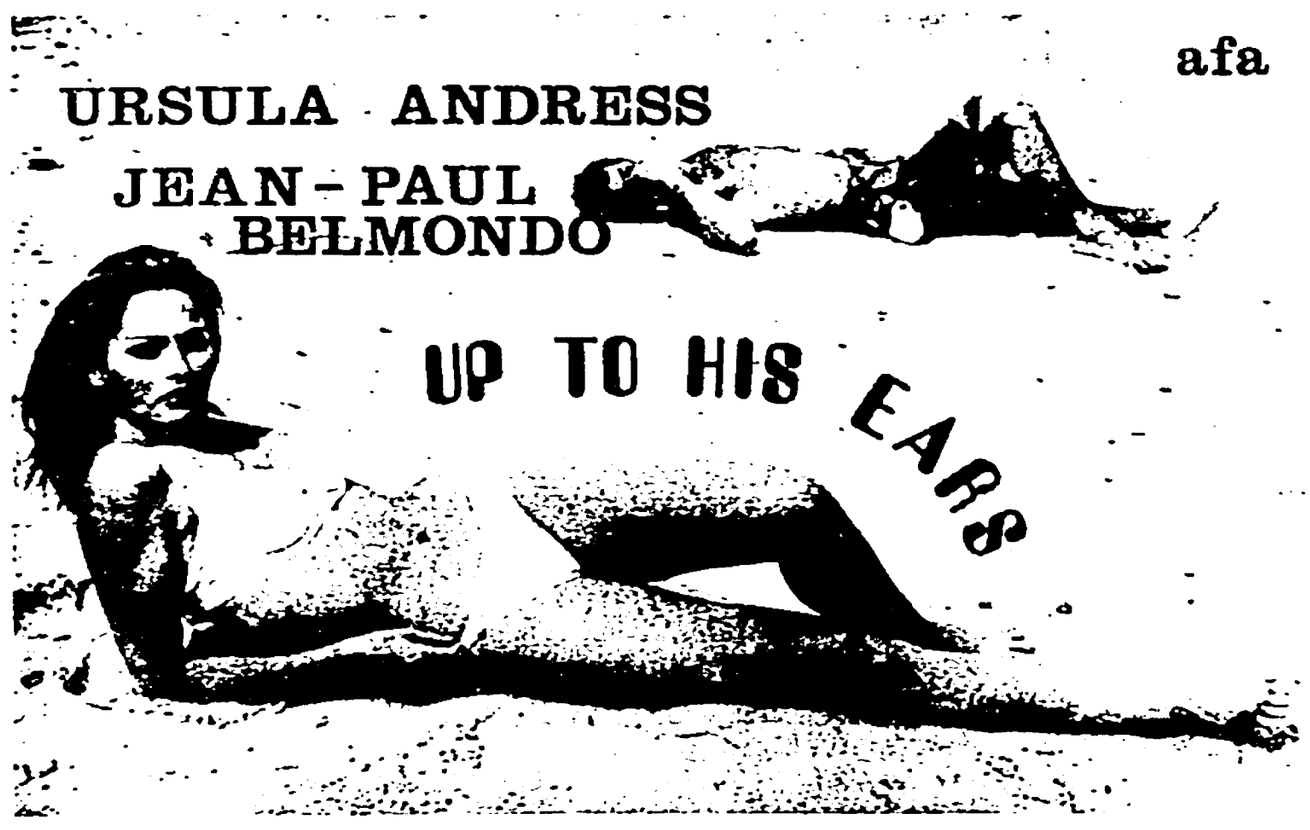
Students interested in work in any area should contact any of the following persons: Mike Durfor, 3921, Tom Bryan, 2626, Bill Watson, 3095, Lance Wisniewski, 3553, Mary Zeiss, 2167.

SUBJECTS WANTED FOR PSYCHOLOGICAL STUDIES

Qualifications: Female 18-30 years of age with at least a high school education. The session will involve several hours primarily answering questionnaires. If interested, call Upstate Medical Center, 473-5775. Ask for Miss Barrett. Participants will be paid $2.00 per hour.

JIFFY KING SPECIAL

Phone Orders Accepted; No Deliveries



Monday thru Friday, 2-5 p.m.

10¢ OFF ALL SUBS

727 South Crouse
in the Arcade

Central New York builder/developer has opening in a widely diversified building field for eager, intelligent, young college graduate. Must be aggressive, willing to follow directions, possess supervisory capabilities and be capable of accepting responsibility. No construction experience necessary. Send resume to P. O. Box 1356, Syracuse 13201.

afa

SYRACUSE FILM ACADEMY

Saturday, 7 and 9 Gifford Aud. Admission $1.00

Only plant on the Hill

Don't Forget

STORE YOUR WINTER CLOTHES WITH US.

They will be cleaned, stored on hangers in our climate controlled vault, and pressed fresh when you return.

Nothing to pay til Fall.

Professional protection from fire,

theft,

moth damage.

7 HOUR Cleaning & Laundering Inc.

175 Marshall St. Cor. University Ave.

Bring total beauty to your hair with the exquisite Hair Colors and Conditioners of

L'ORÉAL® OF PARIS
MADE IN THE UNITED STATES

EXCELLENCE PERMANENT SHAMPOO-IN COLOR, automatically timed to bring you exactly the shade you want, complete kit $2.00.
SUPER BLONDE, new hair pre-lightener, complete kit $2.50.
SUFFRAGE HAIR CONDITIONER, conditions hair to hold sets longer, $3.00.
ELNETT SATIN, brush-away hair spray, $3.00.
Many others, too . . . conditioners, sprays, shampoos, color removers, developers . . . everything you need for the total beauty of your hair.

SU Bookstore

'Unity' dinner

Blacks explain Cornell unrest tonight

By JANE FAYKO

Harry Edwards, organizer of last year's Olympics boycott, will be among the speakers at the United Black Brothers Black Awards Dinner, 7:45 tonight, at the Martin Luther King School. His topic is "Black Unity."

Other speakers will include members of the Afro-American Society at Cornell. They will present the Society's version of what happened in the recent Cornell uprisings.

There is a possibility that James Foreman will also speak.

Among the recipients of "defender awards" will be Ed Whitfield and Bob Armstrong, AAS chairmen, and the black students of Cornell University. These awards are given "for the defense of the black community."

According to Earl Irons, member of United Black Brothers, the dinner's purpose "... is not to make a profit. It is a service to the black community."

The major accomplishment of UBB since its founding in October, 1968, is its establishment of a home for homeless men. Irons sees this as "... a gigantic step for the brothers. These men have been called bums and derelicts... They have had to sleep among condemned buildings, dying of overexposure and malnutrition and not even knowing it. Now, we provide meals and shelter for some 45 to 50 men each night, and, at the same time, we're providing a service to the black community."

The awards dinner will not be open to the public. However, the concert following it, featuring Sun Ra, "Master of Jazz," is open, and "all white students are invited to attend, to observe black unity."

'Fiorello!' opens

By ED GABRIEL

One of the most popular and certainly most nearly professional of the amatuer theatrical groups in the Syracuse area is the Pompeian Players. For almost 20 years they have annually entertained Syracuse audiences by presenting such classics of the American musical theater as South Pacific, Guys and Dolls, My Fair Lady, and The Most Happy Fella.

The popularity, as well as the professionalism, of the group was demonstrated once again last night ..... as an enthuisastic audience cheered the opening of their production of Fiorello! at the Loews State theater. Biographical musicals are usually bad news, and biographical musicals about political figures are almost always pure disaster, but the Pompeian Players managed to turn Fiorello! into something just a notch above the average musical entertainment one is likely to find in Syracuse.

Guided by the competent hand of their director, the Rev. Charles Borgognoni, the cast performs admirably. Outstanding is WFBL radio personality Jerry Sanders in the title role as former New York Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia. A critic wrote of Tom Bosley, who played the role in the original – broadway production of Fiorello!, he "captures more of LaGuardia's essence than the man himself did when he was alive."

Ditto for Sanders. He is pure energy, and a high-strung delight. Also worthy of special attention are Patricia Ilacqua, LaGuardia's secretary, Luke Oscuro, one of LaGuardia's legal assistants and Armond Magnarelli, a politician. They all turn in fine performances. Fiorello! unhappily, is not one of the outstanding musical plays of our time. That the Pompeian Players do so much with it is to their credit.

Personal opinions about the show notwithstanding, Fiorello! was the third musical ever to be awarded the Pulitzer Prize for drama (the others were Of Thee I Sing! and South Pacific). It should be worth going to see for this reason alone. That the Pompeian Players should choose it as their annual presentation this year may also be of note, for both Syracuse and New York will be electing new mayors come fall. But it is not likely that we will ever see the likes of Fiorello! again.

CSL vacancies . . .

clique of student leaders. For one reason, student leaders in general do not have enough time to put in the necessary work for CSL."

Representing the dissenting opinion on the Council, John Ross remarked, "New members should be chosen on the basis of what they can add to student representation and not on the basis of what they have or have not done. Council membership practices should be as far removed from the fraternity rush procedures as possible.

In a letter to the Council, Tembeckjian said, "This student body is not led by non-entities. If one who does not hold office is qualified, he should be considered with the rest. But not even granting interviews to officers is unfair and undemocratic."

Happenings

HILLEL EXEC meeting - 6:30 in the Hillel Office.

GSO final senate meeting - 7:45 B115 Grant.

STUDENTS WISHING TO work on SG Exec - go to HBC cloakroom from noon to 4 p.m.

WAA TENNIS club plays Cornell - 4 p.m. at Skytop.

SIGMA LAMBDA DELTA Induction tonight at 7:30 in Haven lounge.

LAMBDA SIGMA SIGMA initiation - 9 p.m. in Haven Penthouse.

FINE ARTS meeting - undergrad majors - room 10 H.B.C. Hall at 7 p.m.

PRE-REGISTRATION for all journalism courses is being held Wednesday, May 14 thru Friday May 23. Hours - 8:30 to 5 p.m. J-office-room 100 NCC. Everyone is eligible to pre-register.

Minolta introduces the Rokkor

f/1.2

Rokkor f/1.2 is also bench tested with the same Minolta SR-T 101 camera with which it is to be sold.)

The viewfinder is unequaled for brightness. And it stays bright because the automatic lens diaphragm is wide open until the instant you shoot.

There's a microprism center to snap the image in sharp focus. And the entire viewfinder is uniformly bright.

Take a 35mm SLR with the usual standard lens out when it's dark and you end up with a nightmare. The maximum aperture is never maximum enough, so you need a slower shutter speed and a tripod. Maybe a time exposure and cable release. Or a set of floods that'll make your night shot look like a sunset.

Or take a Minolta SR-T 101 with Rokkor 58mm f/1.2 lens. It lets in more than a 1.4, for you to use a faster speed and hand hold the camera in available light situations.

The lens has a computer system that gives correct exposure in all areas including backlighted areas.

Sold with SRT-101 Body and Case Only $275.00

f/1.4 Now $235.00

f/1.7 Now $195.00

Don't Wait.

Minolta Stores

Campus Classified

GR 6-5571, Ext. 2314

Rates minimum of 15 words:

1 day	1.15
2 days	2.25
3 days	3.30
4 days	4.30
5 days	5.25
6 days	6:15

To place a classified ad, call GR 6-5571, ext. 2314, between 1 and 3 p.m. Ad must be placed 2 days in advance. Every word over 15 costs 5c extra per day.

ALL ADS MUST BE PREPAID.

MISCELLANEOUS

RENT if you can't buy! T.V.s, tape recorders, typewriters. By week, month or semester. Reasonable rates. S. U. BOOKSTORE. GR 6-5541, x 2426.

ALTERATIONS DONE within 24 hours. Call for an appointment. Lillian Potter, 207 Comstock. 478-5847.

PRIVATE DRIVING LESSONS — automatic or standard shift. Full or refresher courses. Qualified professional instructors. Pickup service. Auto Driving Academy. GR 6-3995.

AUTO DRIVING - three hour prelicensing course given Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. SULLIVAN'S DRIVING SCHOOL - 463-3451.

GO WEST, anyone? Driving through Colorado, Nevada, Calif. in June — share expenses. Call Hecker x 3079-80.

SHARE GAS AND DRIVING - to California during June. In air conditioned Cadillac. Max. 2 adults - Contact 457-7911.

FOR SALE

1965 OLDSMOBILE convertible. Red, 442, Power steering. Power brakes, excellent condition. reasonable. Call 637-3430 after 5.

1966 MUSTANG — Blue power steering, power brakes, automatic transmission, excellent condition. 474-0471 after 5.

'68 GTO — 4 speed stereo, must sell. x6-8419.

VOLKSWAGEN 69 — Sedan. sun-roof, automatic. AM-FM radio, snow tires. 4,000 miles. receiving co. car. GR 9-6717.

1968 CORVETTE CONVERTIBLE. Blue white top. 327. 4 speed. Only 3,000 miles. Excellent condition. 7 tires. Best offer over $4,000. Call 479-6250.

'61 FORD FALCON, new electrical system. standard trans., cheap. Dave Miller x2451.

'62 VW GHIA. good condition. must sell now. all offers considered, call Joe Bayer x2451.

1968 OLDSMOBILE — "88" convertible. full power, many extras, new transmission. exhaust system. brakes. shocks. Excellent condition. $1,200. 479-8296.

1964 HEALY SPRITE. red. some rust but runs well. Dependable. $400. Call 474-0471 after 5.

1966 MUSTANG hardtop. V8. 4-speed, power steering. low mileage. excellent condition many extras. 476-6476 or 446-0504.

COMET '61, good mechanical condition. You decide the price - Call 457-7911 after 5.

TENNIS RACKET. Gut strung. $15.00. Like new. Original cost $37.00. Call evenings 472-3914.

1957 VW BUG. sun-roof. good mechanically. $300.00 or best offer. Call 446-5516.

1956 VOLKS - Black sedan. Radio, two never used tires. $100.00. Call 656-7589 after 6 p.m.

FOR RENT

2 BEDROOM apartment to sublet — (June-August) Kitchen. living room, bath. on campus. $125/mo. 476-0885 (nights).

UNIVERSITY WALK'G DISTANCE — Furnished, heated efficiency and one bedroom apt. sub-let for summer only or year. Also one bedroom apartment and efficiency available Sept. 1st. Students or teachers. Parking or garage. 446-0493.

APARTMENT FOR TWO STUDENTS— furnished, 3 rooms, bath, all utilities, large desk, campus area, available June 1. 478-0501 evenings, Saturdays.

UNIV.-Wild, unusual apt. for rent - June 1 - "Old Viking Banquet Hall" with 18x36 ft. living room - FIREPLACE - GRAND PIANO - vaulted ceiling -skylight - panelled and antique velvet walls! A collectors item ! 2 yr. lease. GR 4-5558.

UNIVERSITY WALKING DISTANCE - 2 bedroom flat, stove, fireplace, porch, garage. Availabe August 1st. $100.00 per month. Phone 469-4095.

FOR SUMMER or year round, furnished 3 rooms or 4, $115 or $130, utilities included. 2 miles west of campus. Air conditioning available. Steensland 475-3790.

6 ROOM APARTMENT, furnished, close to Sadler and Lawrinson. GR 5-5743.

SUMMER RENTAL beginning June 1st or may be leased for one year. Heated and furnished apts. Efficiency at $75.00 per month and three rooms and bath $85.00. Parking or garage available. GI 6-0493.

APARTMENTS — furnished, 3 rooms, utilities, near campus. Call x3630, 472-8223 or 475-1631.

NEAR UNIVERSITY AND MEDICAL SCHOOL. 6-room unheated completely nicely furnished apartment (3 bedroom) 1st floor. Garage. Quiet. Ideal for medical students. Available July 1st. $175.00 month. 446-6192 or 446-1685.

APARTMENT TO SUBLET. June-September. 2 bedrooms. furnished. on campus. Carol x2774 or 472-9580.

FURNISHED, HEATED recently remodeled apartments. Crouse near University. available June 1st and seventh. $115. 623-7731 after 4 . Dick Taylor. x3928.

EUCLID, FURNISHED ROOMS - with kitchen privileges from $45 and up. 446-6451.

WANTED

FACULTY COUPLE — Looking for furnished or unfurnished two or three bedroom house or apartment near university. Academic year 1969-70. Call 655-9078.

ROOM AND BOARD in exchange for work during 1969-70 academic year. Male student. Last summer groundskeeper, this summer hospital orderly. Dick Taylor. x3920.

ROOMMATE FOR SUMMER and/or Fall. 3 Bedroom apartment. 5 minutes from university. $35/month. 476-6020.

TO SUBLET (July 1 - Aug. 30) a studio apartment in or within commuting distance of James Street or University area. by New York City school teacher. Contact Ardy Meluzzi Tel. 474-8229 and leave message.

BANK TELLERS — permanent part time teller position available at Mattydale office to work on Fridays from 12:00 to 7:00 P.M. We will train you on the job. Call 473-2256. First Trust and Deposit Co.

2 GIRLS TO SHARE 7 room apartment. Laundry, near Lawrinson. Reasonable. GR 5-3569 or 478-4473 after 6 P.M. Call anytime weekends.

TYPING

DISSERTATIONS, THESES, AND TERM papers. IBM electric typewriter. 40c per page 5c per copy. 446-2841. Mrs. Miller.

THIRTY YEARS EXPERIENCE. Dissertations, term papers, proof-read. Satisfaction guaranteed. Mrs. Raymond Webb. HE 7-8259.

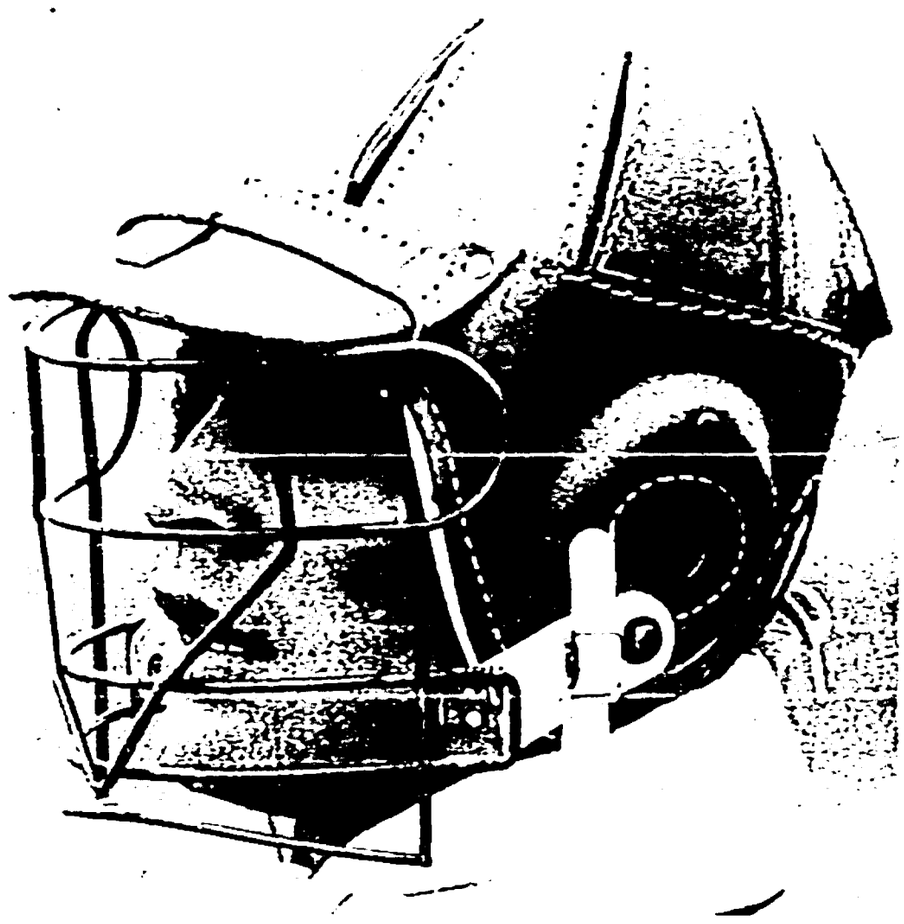
TAKE YOUR MANUSCRIPT to the only professional typing and printing service serving the S. U. area. The knowledge and experience of having done over 2,000 theses and dissertations is behind every job we turn out. Stephanie's Office Service. 469-2795.

Looking for a great meal?
Try Red Barn's combination of a

BIG BARNEY
French Fries & Coke

If you haven't had a Big Barney, you don't know what you're missing! Two delicious hamburger patties, cheese, lettuce, pickle, and our own special sauce on a double-deck roll. Try it with French Fries and a Coke today! Regular Price 00c

57¢ SPECIAL



Where it's fun to eat

RED BARN

1514 Erie Blvd., East
731 South Crouse Ave.

'9 Oriskany Blvd, Utica
605 Brewerton Road

Special ends June 1

TEAM SCORING CO-LEADER Jeff Davis will be out to better his pace setting performance against Union tomorrow. Davis scored one goal and tallied two assists in the weekend loss to the Cadets of West Point. (Photo by Robertson)

Stickmen try to come back; Union squad is next foe

By FRED KRAVER

Many times teams have lost crucial games, and have suffered fierce letdowns afterwards. One game often represents the climax of the season, whose outcome is critical to the entire season. But after having its nine game winning streak snapped by Army, the Syracuse lacrosse team realizes that the season is very far from over.

Four games remain to be played, and SU must win at least three to finish first in the Cox division. The first contest will be played at 2:30 today against Union in Schenectady. Saturday, the stickmen will travel to Cortland for a very tough match, will face RPI Wednesday at home, and finish against Cornell here on May 24.

Coach Roy Simmons was still lamenting the 14-5 beating his squad took from Army. He feels that Army has an excellent chance of a number one rating, particularly if Maryland beats Hopkins. "They're so fast," he emphasized. "They have tremendous speed. They chased the ball around the field like bees after a flower."

The main difficulty with competing against such swiftness was clearing the ball out, so that it could be brought upfield for the attack. "They got the majority of the face-offs," Simmie added. "Ronnie Doctor is terrific on face-offs, but they were a step or two quicker, and therefore got the possession most of the time."

Simmie wanted to sincerely thank the SU faithful who travelled with the team to Army. "We appreciate the fans travelling to West Point very much," he said. "I'm sorry we let them down. But I'm glad we gave them some thrills in the first quarter." Syracuse led 3-1 after the first period Saturday.

Looking to the future, Simmie did not want to make any predictions about how high the Orange will finish in the national ratings. Too much depends on the outcome of the next four games. Cortland and Cornell provide top competition for the stickmen. The latter is the defending Ivy League champions, and defeated Cortland by only one goal this season.

Though Union will not present big problems, they do have the home advantage. They edged Colgate by one goal. Colgate was trounced by the Orange 17-3, in what was considered a sloppy game for SU. Union does, however, have two players who have made the final ballot in the voting for the Little All-American lacrosse team.

In some statistics to date, Leo Nolan leads all scorers with 21 goals and 19 assists. Co-captain Jeff Davis has 18 goals, 16 assists, Verne Doctor (14-13), Mark Austerlitz (19-6), and Ron Doctor (11-13) round out the high scorers. Goalie Butch Brown has 100 saves in 10 games, and has allowed 47 goals. In all, SU has outscored the opposition 126-52.

Despite the Army loss, the stickmen will not suffer a letdown because of the team's great desire. As Coach Simmons puts it, "It's just that too many guys want to win."

Diamond picture brightens as hurlers shine for SU

By BOB HERZOG

It is often said that pitching is 90 per cent of baseball. If so, the Syracuse varsity nine should have little to worry about 90 per cent of the time.

The Orangemen are blessed with four fine hurlers in John Martell, Greg Lowe, Mike Barlow and Dave Stone. Despite SU's 5-7 record, they have been a source of pleasure for coach Andy Mogish.

The right handed Martell is currently 2-2 in his senior season. Last year's ace has had some rough going thus far. He pitched the season's opener against Georgetown and was the winner in a 10-2 rout. He was superb, striking out 12 and walking none.

But, he ran into trouble in his next outing in the form of opposing bats. Against Penn State, he absorbed an 8-0 defeat and was rocked 9-2 by Colgate.

However in his latest outing, he allowed only one earned run in whipping RPI, 13-4. He fanned 13 in that game as well as belting a towering triple to right-center field. Martell is currently tied for the team strike out lead with 32 in 31 innings of work.

The other senior on the staff is Greg Lowe, also a right-hander. He also owns a 2-2 slate but has been more consistent than Martell. In his first performance, he tossed no-hit ball for five innings against American University only to have his effort washed away by rain with the score tied, 0-0. Up to that time he had struck out seven without issuing a walk.

His next foe was Buffalo, which beat him, 5-2. He bounced back in fine fashion against Penn State, winning 8-2. Again he did not walk a man while fanning six.

Then came a heartbreaking 2-0 loss to Colgate. The winning tallies were scored in the last inning to pin a tough defeat on the chunky right-hander.

Again, he came back following defeat, turning in a masterful 10-inning stint to win over Clarkson, 5-3. He fanned 12 and walked none.

Mogish calls him "the most scientific pitcher on the staff." He has exhibited the best control with only three free passes issued in 38 innings of work. He is also tied with Martell for the strike out lead (32) and owns a fine 2.13 earned run average.

Junior right-hander Mike Barlow is the hard luck case of the diamondmen. Against Navy, he tossed a three-hitter only to lose, 3-2. Against the Big Red of Cornell, he yielded only two hits, but poor fielding pinned a 2-1 setback on him.

In 17 innings, he has walked 10 while striking out five and posts a team leading ERA of 1.64. He throws the hardest of the SU chuckers and when he gets his 6-3 frame behind a fastball, opposing batters see only smoke.

Sophomore Dave Stone is the lone lefty on the mound crew. He has pitched two games, giving two completely different accounts of himself. On the Spring trip against George Washington, Stone was knocked out of the box in the fourth inning, after allowing eight earned runs. However, a week ago, Stone whiffed 11 in a route-going 3-2 win over St. Lawrence.

Mogish, although pleased with his pitchers, cites three factors which have hurt them. First, the predictably unpredictable Salt City weather. Postponements have seriously disrupted the starting position.

In addition, Mogish says losses to graduation forced him to play several men out of their normal position.

Finally, mental errors or, as Mogish puts it, "errors of omission rather than commission," have cost the Orangemen at least three ballgames.

Presently, the Orange are on a three-game winning streak. The pitching has been good all year and should continue. Couple this with the meshing of the rest of the squad and you have ample reason to highly rate the SU diamondmen from here on out.

SENIOR RIGHTHANDERS John Martell (left) and Greg Lowe have been the mainstays of a fine Orange pitching staff this season. Martell posted a 7-2 mark last season although he is only 2-2 at the present. Lowe is also 2-2 and has a fine ERA.

SU lures a sleeper; Manlius lineman to enroll

By PAT THOMPSON

The name Steve Joslin probably doesn't sound familiar to football fans at SU. Well, in this case that may be justified because he doesn't attend SU-not yet, anyway. You see, Steve is an athlete belonging to a group known as football recruits. He's also the member of an elite few who are granted full scholarships to come here.

"Jos," as his teammates call him, was recruited by SU out of the Manlius School. As for his playing position the 6'1", 212-pounder started out as a defensive tackle, "but last year at Manlius they switched me to defensive end. I expect to play defense at Syracuse, but they have shown an interest in me as an offensive back. It really depends on how I develop and how my speed is."

Surprisingly enough, the fact that he received a scholarship was not a major factor in Steve's decision to enroll at SU. He said that one of the major factors is that "Syracuse has always been close and is one of the best football schools in the East. But a really big reason was the way the coaches and everyone else has accepted me."

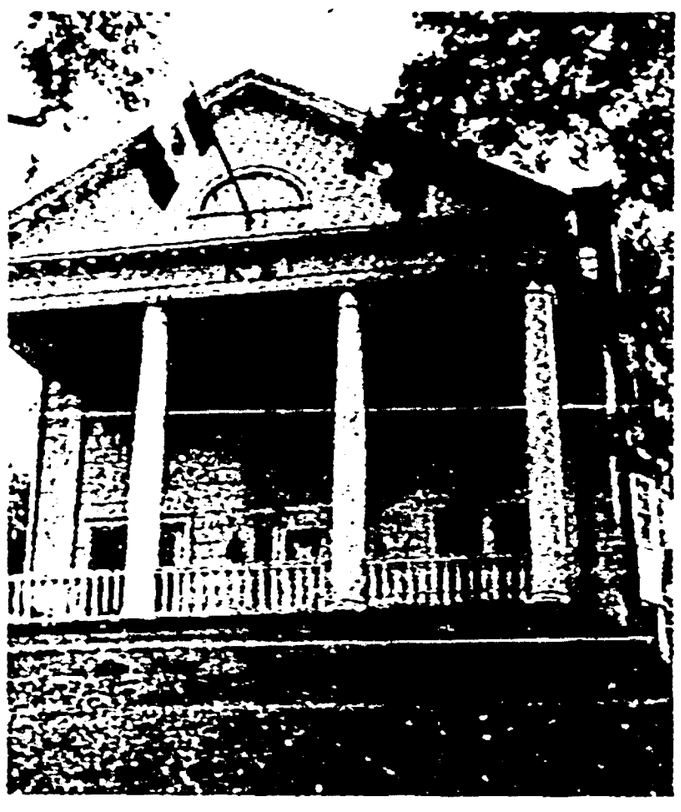
"Jos" was also attracted to the Hill by SU's academic reputation. "I was interested in other schools for awhile," he admitted. "But then I took a look at the academics and Syracuse had a lot to offer. Not only in the Liberal Arts area, but also in several other majors which I might be interested in. It was not actually the scholarship which influenced me most, but rather the academics."

One might think that with Steve's credentials, he would have been wooed by several other big-time athletic schools. However, when asked what other schools had recruited him, he laughingly replied, "none."

He explained that the "lineman at Manlius aren't the glory boys and weren't so heavily recruited. We had a couple of backfield stars who were sought by all the big schools in the East and out West too."

Steve felt that there were two additional factors which were responsible for his not being heavily bombarded by college coaches. He was only interested in SU to begin with and secondly, he considered himself only an average ball player while at Manlius.

Steve explained what recruiting was like for him. He said, "Well, after our season was over, a half dozen schools came in and told us what they had to offer. It was sort of like propaganda. Syracuse had me won over already, so it wasn't that competitive for me though for other kids it was."



Steve, who will be enrolled in the College of Liberal Arts, has a variety of interests and he really isn't sure about his major. "Right now I could see myself doing almost anything. I may go on to fine arts or biology or chemistry. There's many different fields that I'm really interested in, but I have no one high choice."

As for football in the long range future, Steve pointed out, his enjoyment of the game as well as the financial benefits that could come from playing pro football. He added that he would consider it a great honor to play pro football, saying, "If I could, it'd be great, if not, it won't be the end of the world. I'm going to be working to be a success at Syracuse, and will be trying my utmost. If I don't succeed, it won't be because I haven't tried."

Remember the name — Steve Joslin. If the recruiters here at SU are any judges of talent, Steve should be heard from in the future.

Sport shorts . . .

The SU track team will try for win number one today when they host Colgate at 2:00 p.m. in Archbold Stadium. The meet is the only home encounter of the year for Bob Grieve's cindermen, who are winless in three outings.

KAPPA SIGMA (LEFT) AND PHI DELTA THETA were ordered closed yesterday by the Dean of Men's office because "they have constantly been in violation of city fire regulations." (Photo by Clemens)

Safety crackdown closes two houses

By LARRY KRAMER
Campus Affairs Editor

In a surprise crackdown on house safety violations, the Dean of Men's office has ordered two fraternities to vacate their living centers by Friday afternoon at 5 p.m.

Kappa Sigma and Phi Delta Theta were notified yesterday by Robert Massey, Fraternity advisor that due to increased pressure from the City Fire Marshals, the Dean of Men's office had to take immediate action against the houses. Dean of Men David A. Tatham decided that the above two houses, the presumably worst of the many violators, would have to be closed. "They have constantly been in violation of the city fire regulations," said Tatham.

"We were notified at 3:30 p.m. (Wednesday) that we had until Friday afternoon at 5 p.m. Have you ever tried to move out 40 brothers in two days? We have our house weekend starting Friday, and exams begin for some brothers next week," said John Sweeney, President of Phi Delt, "Why now, with only two weeks left in school? The fire marshals were here in December."

Kappa Sigma also is staging its house formal this weekend. "We already have a $10,000 loan set from National this summer to take care of the repairs necessary. Just because another house burned, why should we have to move out. If a cottage burned, would they close down all university housing?"

(Continued on Page 4)

DAILY ORANGE

Vol. 67, No. 104 Syracuse, New York, Thursday, May 15, 1969 10 Cents

SU's Ed School involved in study of model teachers

The School of Education has been selected by the United States Office of Education to be one of eight universities throughout the nation which will be involved in feasibility studies of model elementary teacher education programs. The study–funded at a level of nearly $160,000–is directed by Dr. Will Weber of the Center for the Study of Teaching.

The study is the second phase of a three phase project. During Phase I, each of nine institutions created a blueprint of an ideal elementary teacher education program; Syracuse University was one of nine institutions selected to participate in that phase. This resulted in the development of a model program which was described in a 550 page document submitted to the Office of Education on Oct. 31, 1968.

Model Program

The model program, a product of numerous fertile minds under the direction of Dr. Jack Hough, has been hailed by educators elsewhere as being innovative, exciting, and as possessing great potential. The features which would appear to be most attractive to students include an emphasis on:

*Individual instruction: there are many opportunities for independent study; to a large extent students can design their own curricular sequence and to some extent design the curricular content.

"Self-Pacing"

*Self-pacing: students are given the opportunity to work through the program at their own rates in so far as possible; this includes the possibility of a student "testing out" of certain requirements.

*Elimination of courses per se: instructional modules varying in length from 20 minutes to two months will replace the course/credit hour concept.

*Field-experience: attention is given to actual experiences in school settings.

Contacts

*Professor-student contacts: relationships between faculty and students are greatly improved; they are more frequent, more student-oriented, and much more emphasis is given to one-to-one relationships and small group seminars; the whole advising system will be revamped to make it more relevant, more personal, and more helpful.

*Specialization: students are given an opportunity to specialize in a special area (teaching in the inner-city, the teaching of reading, or the teaching of the visually handicapped, for example) while still undergraduates; this would include opportunities to work with such specialists in the schools.

Partnership teaching

*Partnership teaching: the program is built to allow the student to continue in the program through a fifth year; during this time the student would earn a master's degree in his area of specialization and would share responsibilities for a class with another person in the program; while one person was teaching the other would be observing, assisting, or taking graduate work; such partners would share a salary.

Phase II runs from May 1 to Dec. 31, 1969 and involves a study of the feasibility of the model program.

Phase Three

The third phase of the project–the dates of which have not yet been announced–involves the implementation, development, and operation of the model program. Syracuse University hopes to be selected for funding for Phase III as this is where the real payoff is for the student. Even without outside funding, many of the ideas contained in the model program are likely to be incorporated into the elementary teacher education program as well as other areas of the School of Education.

Senate revamps ROTC, no credit for some courses

By KAREN WIEDIGER
Executive Editor

A revised Reserve Officer Training Corps (ROTC) program was passed yesterday by the University Senate and will be sent to the Board of Trustees for approval.

The recommendation came from a joint ROTC and Senate Agenda committee and stated:

● A revised ROTC program should be continued at Syracuse University.

● Only courses taught by regularly appointed faculty members shall carry academic credit, except for experimental courses.

● Those ROTC programs which wish to supplement academic departmental course offerings with more strictly military training activities conducted by military instructors may offer such training. However, these activities should not be granted academic credit and therefore the instructors teaching them should not have academic standing for conducting such courses.

● The committee, recognizing at the same time the interests of the students currently enrolled in the program, proposes that these recommendations be enacted as expeditiously as possible.

Another point of the recommendation stating "Weapons, close-order drill and field excercises should not be permitted on campus," was defeated.

Also presented to the Senate was a minority report recommending the complete abolition of ROTC.

The question of ROTC's place on campus has been under study here since 1967. In February of this year, the Senate voted in favor of housing the ROTC departments in an all-university unit. Prior to this, it was part of the College of Liberal Arts.

Currently, students receive full academic credit for those courses taken in military science and aerospace studies.

Before making the recommendation to the Senate, the ROTC committee held a series of weekly meetings to study the programs. The committee considered various alternatives from retaining ROTC in its current form, severing all connections between the University and ROTC, to modifying the program to bring it into accord with accepted University procedure.

In deciding against the complete removal of ROTC the committee wrote ". . .a university by removing ROTC from its campus, can in this way demonstrate its opposition to the Vietnam war and dramatize its fear that American

(Continued on Page 4)

Talk with Piskor

Law students dissatisfied with outcome of meeting

By JOHN WISNIEWSKI

Vice Chancellor and Provost Frank P. Piskor met yesterday with law students to discuss their suggested reforms within the College of Law.

These are the main reforms being called for by the Board of Governors of the Student Bar Association of the College of Law.

● Library facilities must be expanded to meet the needs of the student body of the College of Law which are, at the very least, the standards required by the Association of American Law Schools.

● The faculty, classroom facilities and areas for independent study must be immediately increased so as to meet the basic needs of the law school.

● In that the students of the College of Law do not receive sufficient benefit from or adequate explanation regarding the University Student Activities Fee, such fee should be paid directly to the Student Bar Association of the College of Law for the benefit and use of law students.

● All facilities of the law school should be primarily under the control of the administration of the College of Law.

After the meeting Piskor said: "We had an hour of very useful exchange and will continue our talks with representatives of the student body. I am confident we can work with Mr. (Richard) Broddie and representatives of the law students." Broddie is president of the college's Student Bar Association.

Law students expressed dissatisfaction with regard to the outcome of the meeting. Most of the students felt the talks with Piksor were unproductive.

The Student Bar Association called for a meeting of law students in the afternoon to determine further action. Broddie is expected to make the results

(Continued on Page 4)

APL program places sophisticated computer system at students' disposal

By BILL ROBINSON

Syracuse University students have the opportunity to solve in a few minutes those math problems that normally take hours of tedious calculating. This becomes possible through SU Computing Center's APL Program which places an expensive and sophisticated computer system at the disposal of every university student.

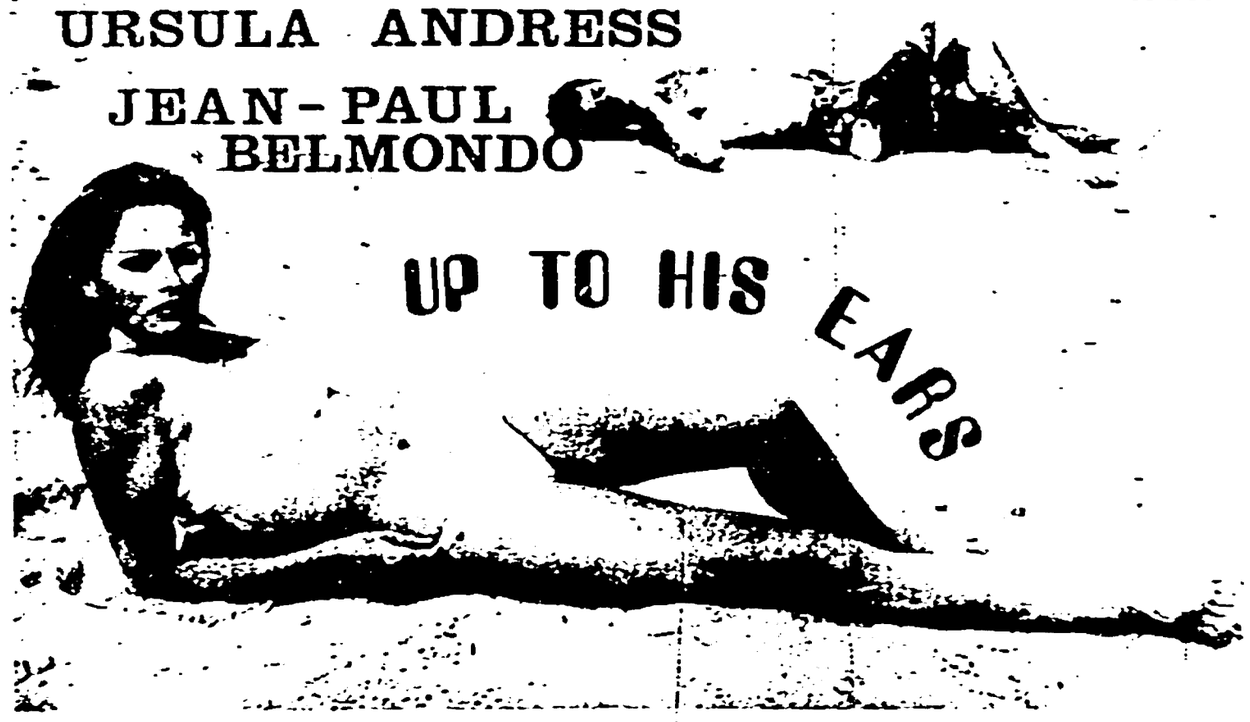
Named by Kenneth Iverson, formerly of Harvard and presently of IBM, APL stands for A Programming Language. The program allows a person using a special keyboard to send in questions to a computer system. An answer will be sent from the computer back to the keyboard terminal.

At this time, 31 keyboard terminals are scattered around SU, including one in St. Mary's. Within a year, the center hopes to have a terminal installed in every fair-sized dorm.

A student who has a complex mathematical problem can make arrangements with his department's chairman to reserve some work space in a computer in Machinery Hall. This becomes the student's private space, closed to use by anyone else.

With his space reserved, the student can use the computer in two ways. He can either take advantage of previously programmed statistical packages (averages, means and other useful tables) or put into the computer his own program. The computer does the difficult work, while the student reads the answers, as they are typed before him on the terminal.

Of course, to take advantage of this program, students must learn the computer's language. The Computing Center plans to announce in the near future that a computer language course will begin. It takes four sessions, two hours in length each, to become adequately skilled in the language.



'Pig Book' editor named

Rachel M. Miller has been named Editor-in-Chief of the 1973 Orange Aid. A sophomore in the school of Speech, she has experience in journalism. The Orange Aid is published each year by the Junior class as a service to the University.

afa

URSULA ANDRESS

JEAN-PAUL BELMONDO

SYRACUSE FILM ACADEMY

Saturday, 7 and 9 Gifford Aud. Admission $1.00

Revlon invents the 'status glow'

A new breed of blusher in an easy-to-use stick. For a healthy, wealthy, copper-bronze glow. Shine it over makeup. Or gleam it on bare. Cheeks. Chin. (Everywhere!) It colors you rich. In one shade for all complexions: Terra Copper. It's a healthy helping of color-and-shine. (And to light up the night, it comes frosted, too.)

New 'Terra Copper' Face Gleamer by Revlon

Available at:

Syracuse University Bookstore

3 BUSHEL DAYS

Sale ends Saturday .... everything priced to go so get them before they're gone !

Shack 303 — in front of the Main Bookstore.

SU Bookstores

303 University Place

Only plant on the Hill

Don't Forget

STORE YOUR WINTER CLOTHES WITH US.

They will be cleaned, stored on hangers in our climate controlled vault, and pressed fresh when you return.

Nothing to pay til Fall.

Professional protection from fire,

theft,

moth damage.

7 HOUR Cleaning & Laundering Inc.

175 Marshall St. Cor. University Ave.

ANGUS H. TWOMBLY — Editor-in-Chief

MANAGING EDITOR - Alan Stamm EXECUTIVE EDITOR - Karen Wiediger NEWS EDITOR - Fred Tuccillo EDITORIAL DIRECTOR - David A. Ross COPY EDITOR - Jean Havens FEATURE EDITOR - Roz Mazer SPORTS EDITOR - Mike Weber CAMPUS AFFAIRS EDITOR - Larry Kramer PHOTOGRAPHY EDITOR - Clint Clemens ASSOCIATE EDITORS - Andrij Bilyk, Kay Christensen, Beth Hillson, Rona Kavee, Helene Macdonald, Charles Shapiro, Dan Schlossberg, Patti Williams, Roni Ziokower.

DAILY ORANGE

Syracuse University's Daily Newspaper Since 1903

THURSDAY, MAY 15, PAGE 3

STEVEN P. STROBRIDGE -- Business Manager

ASSISTANT BUSINESS MANAGER— Art Depasqua, NATIONAL ADVERTISING MANAGER— Janet Meyer ACCOUNT EXECUTIVES— Roger Black, Jim Maney, Mike Greenstein.

Published Tuesday through Friday during the academic year by students of Syracuse University. Offices located at 200 Brooklea Drive, Fayetteville, N.Y., and 1101 East Adams St., Syracuse, New York. Entered as Second Class matter at the U.S. Post Office, Fayetteville, N.Y. 13066.

Poor timing

Two houses full of fraternity men have suddenly found themselves faced with the prospect of moving to other housing with less than two weeks of classes remaining in the semester. Perhaps at any other time of the year, the closing down of these houses by the Dean of Men's office could be rationalized, as both undoubtedly have persistently violated fire regulations set by the city. But this close to the end of the year, it seems like something else is behind the order.

That something else may well be the fire disaster that hit another fraternity over the weekend. In the advent of preventing a recurrence of such incident and perhaps to mollify whatever pressure from fire authorities may arise, the Dean's office may have ordered the shutdown.

Whatever the motivation, the Daily Orange finds the order poorly timed and an unfortunate way to handle a problem that could have been solved as easily by barring a re-opening of these houses next fall if the necessary repairs weren't made. The violations each house is now committing are admitted as long standing by both, and it appears to be administration by afterthought to take action now just as final exams are about to begin.

Be it ever so humble

SU housing regulations are more than illegal, according to National Student Association Commissioner of Legal Rights, David Ifshin. The housing rules, he says, are unconstitutional because the student is not allowed to choose where he wants to live, where he can eat, or, in many cases, how he can live. The student usually cannot look for cheaper accommodations, or cheaper food in price not quality. The student is not allowed to do what he can do legally if he wasn't in college.

The University uses mortgage payments as a defense for their unconstitutional actions. If the dorms are not filled to near capacity, the University loses money. Therefore the University must enforce regulation forcing all undergraduates (except seniors over 21) to live in what is nebulously termed "university approved" housing.

If the University allowed students to live where they wanted, they would have to offer services to induce students to fill their dorms. Food service would have to be made edible and inexpensive, and no parietal control (other than complete self-regulating floors) could exist.

As the housing situation now stands, the University may discover that it has too many dorms anyway. Officials are probably crossing their fingers hoping that all seniors won't leave campus next fall and create too many vacancies. We suggest that it would be poor planning for the University to build any more dormitory space. Housing regulations are being liberalized, though not as fast as students would like, and in another few years it may be impossible to fill any but the major dorms. It probably wouldn't hurt if the University started building efficiency apartments and, thus, cases like the one UJB handled this week would never arise.

Questions of reality

This column was to be on the students' role in academic policy making, but the times will not allow such frivolity.

I was shocked back to reality by Huntley - Brinkley's superb piece of broadcasting journalism. On Saturday night David Brinkley assessed the "progress" in the one year of Peace Talks in Paris.

In that time, 12,262 young American men have been killed.

In that time, 83,133 young American men have been wounded.

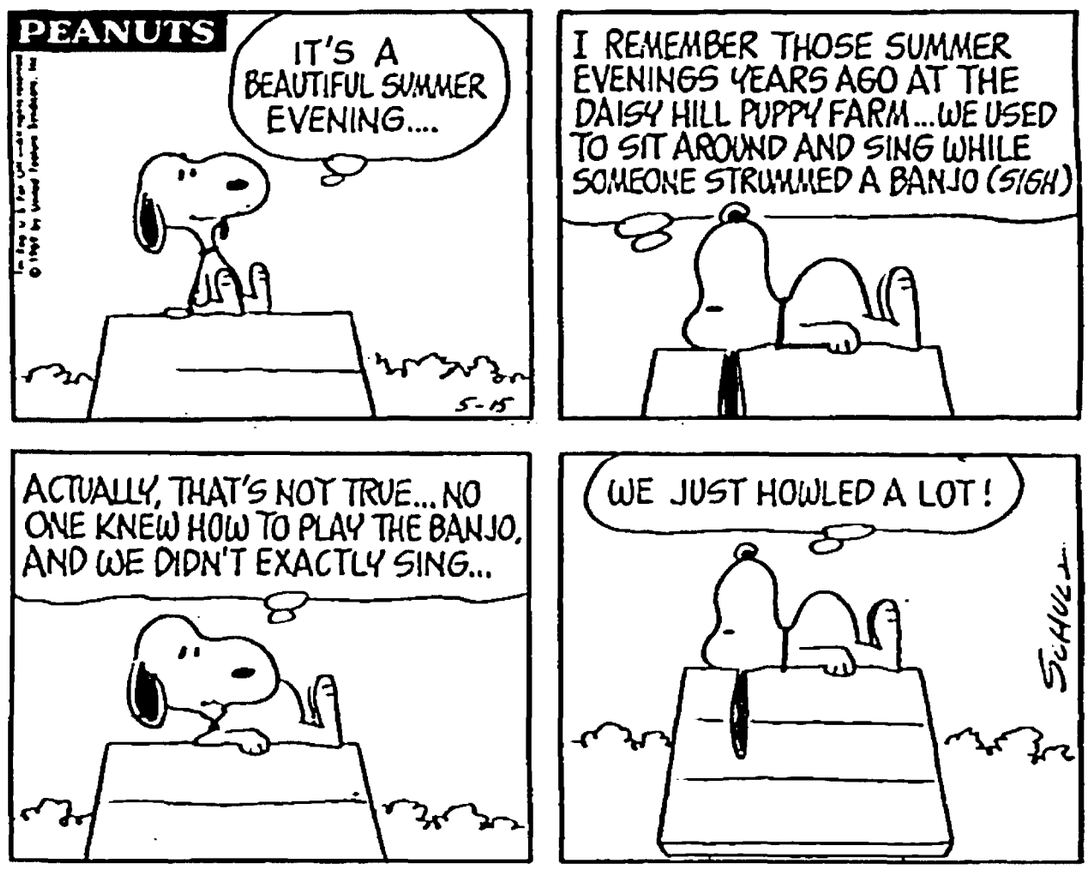
And what computer will tell us how many Vietnamese have been killed, in that time?

Yet, we are told by "informed sources" that a command decision has been made to terminate the war, and that a few of our 543,000 troops will be withdrawn soon.

Will the American people believe this charade of publicity? Or will they demand that the war be ended?

Will our universities turn out diplomats to explain "that these things take time?" Or will they turn out citizens who ask "why?"

Will the graduates sit and listen to platitudes on the "promise of the future?" Or will they question the inhumanity of the present?



Perhaps these thoughts will be accused of being naive and sentimental. I must surely confess that they are filled with emotion and phrased in rhetoric.

Yet, just as surely, Mary McCarthy was correct that it is the role of the people to pass on morality, not to design strategy.

Just as surely, liberty means we must not follow corrupt authority.

It will be commencement time soon, and mixed with nostalgia and congratulations will be thoughts of tomorrow. Optimistic? Salutary? Pedestrian? Frightening?

Will there be a beginning in this commencement or just greetings?

Peanuts is run with the permission of The Syracuse Herald-Journal.

Piety Hill revisited

Oh, the brazeness of it! Here I shell out for $3,400 worth of decency and temperance (that's $1900 for temperance and $1500 for decency - temperance is a hell of lot more expensive these days) and now it turns out that the campus is full of all sorts of sin and decadence.

Only last week it was discovered that a student was living, not in his safe, secure, paid-for university residence, but somewhere off campus, out there in the (shudder) "real world."

Fortunately, some clean-cut

Tony Vincent

All-American good citizen must have tipped off the Dean of Men:

– "Psssst. Listen, there's a guy around here who's been keeping a campus residence but who really spends most of his time off campus."

– "What do you want from us? We don't have any jurisdiction over Chancellor Tolley."

Of course it was finally established the scoundrel was a student and the Dean of Men and the University Judicial Board really socked it to him.

Not that we should feel any more secure. There's probably a lot more of this kind of thing around and there's no telling what goes on (snicker) in those "off-campus apartments."

The very thought of it has sent a wave of revulsion through this wonderful pious community. Witness just a few of the many outraged reactions (with appropriate comments, off course):

STUDENT SENATE: "We hereby resolve that Government Structure chairman Jerry Bugle should stick his tongue out at Dean Tatham and say, 'Nyaa, Nyaa, no more doing that!'" (This resolution was passed, 21-3, with five abstentions, three of them by proxy).

SU SECURITY STALWARTS: "Duh, paint da fence, paint da fence!" (This was a written order and "duh" was spelled correctly).

SYRACUSE VFW (Victims of Forever defending our honor all over the World): "I say we go in there with everything we got and really let 'em have it!"

DEPARTMENT OF MATHMATICS: "There are basically three sides to this issue and as soon as we've studied the fourth, we intend to comment on both of them." (Ever get the feeling the Math Department is a little weak on the basics?)

DEAN ROPE OF THE UP-FROM-LIBERAL ARTS SCHOOL: "I say we go in there with everything we got and really let them have it!" (The last of 15 points; if applied consistently, the first 14 are irrelevant).

SU BOOKSTORE VICE–PRESIDENT IN CHARGE OF EDUCATIONAL TOYS: "Say, we haven't had a scandal like this since we accidentally put the "Visible Man" on the same shelf with the "Visible Woman."

Well, that just goes to show what happens when such debauchery is introduced among decent, moral, ever-loving, church-going people.

And they don't even know the worst of it yet. It turns out that there are even some (blush) female students living off campus like that. Think of it! Innocent young girls out there in "off-campus apartments," alone, unprotected! Imagine the reactions when word of this gets out:

SU MALE ON THE STREET: "I say we go in there with everything we got and really . . . (Forget it).

A peaceful war . . .

By Brett Scheid

Let us call the troops together
Let us have a peaceful war
Bigotry has seen its day
Hypocrisy must die

I hear the voice of a crying Czech
As tanks again disturb his peace
Marx is turning in his grave
His words were so well meant

I hear Torquenata laughing-crying
As he cooks his victims well
Christ is turning in his grave
His words were so well meant

Ghandi lies in front of tanks
And people heed him well
Hear me now o men of peace
We can do it too

The edifices of power wait
They are your tanks today
Get before them-lie before them
Till they crumble-till they rot away

The answer is so easy
The starved may eat today
Listen for the word
And peace may come your way

ROTC...

(Continued from page 1)

military-industrial power is destroying this nation and threatening the world. . .A University Senate ought not to decide problems of curriculum on grounds dictated by current political sentiment."

The committee stated it realized the situation involving ROTC was a special one. "To recommend continuing the program in its present form would be not vastly different from recommending an arrangement whereby General Motors or the Methodist Church or the Bureau of the Budget provide faculty to teach courses for credit to students who are expected to commit themselves to a period of service with those institutions. The committee therefore recommends against continuation of this sort of agreement with the military services."

Law students...

(Continued from Page 1)

of the meeting public today.

Vice President and Treasurer F. A. Wingate refuted charges that the administration breached a contract between it and the Student Bar Association. The contract grants the Student Bar Association $900 yearly to be derived from profits earned from the vending machines located in the law building.

Happenings

JOURNALISM Pre-registration will continue until Friday, May 23. 8:30 to 5 p.m. - room 100 NCC.

HENDRICKS CHAPEL Choir members rehearsal at 7:30 p.m. Saturday extra rehearsal is from 10-12 a.m.

AWS REORGANIZATION Meeting - 303 Women's Building - 7:30 p.m. All may attend.

CELEBRATION in honor of deMarquis Armando Phrittz Massusst at Gumbahs',

ALL IDC CIA applicants must sign up tonight (W-Build.) as to where they'll live next year. Deadline 5 p.m.

WAA COMPETITIVE tennis club very important meeting at 4 p.m. Final meeting.

UJB full session at 7 p.m. Chapel House. All old and new members.

SOCIETY AND THE SYNDROME - symposium - Main Auditorium - Basic Science Building, 766 Irving Ave. - 8 p.m. Thursday.

SUICIDES ANONYMOUS - Life and Death meeting - 8 p.m. 107 HL discussion of status.

SPANISH CLUB - Slides on Spain - 309 Women's Build. - 7:30 p.m. - all welcome.

SDX MEETING 7 p.m. in Newhouse lounge. Discussion of survey of J-courses and birthday party for officers.

Girl student assistants selected for next year

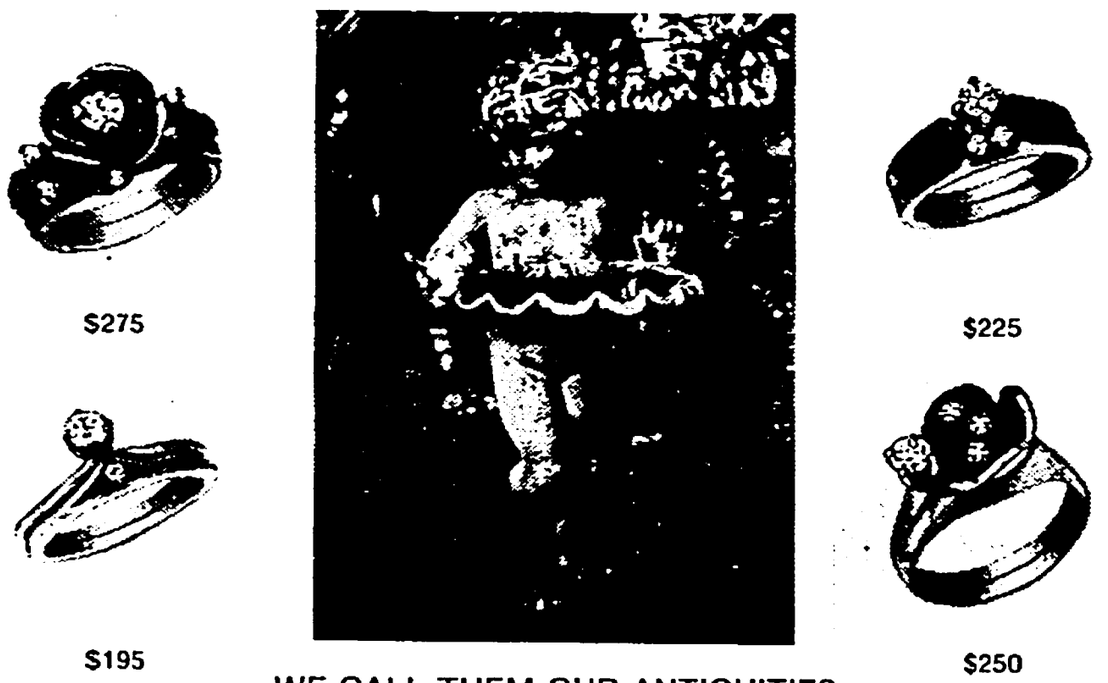
Seven girls have been selected out of 50 applicants to serve as student assistants in Shaw, Winchell, and Sadler. Two assistants from this year have been reappointed to serve as senior advisors for next year.

The new assistants and their majors are: Susan Barnes, journalism; Mary DeLisi, psychology; Carolyn Ericksen, interior design; Susan Nowak, journalism; Sheila Payton, journalism and sociology; Gwen Reiss, housing and interior planning; and Carolyn Sayre, a religion major. All are juniors except Miss Nowak who is a sophomore.

Reappointed to senior advisor posts in Haven and St. Mary's were Barb Brinkerhoff and Barb Stasiuk.

All girls will be on floors there with freshmen.

Frat closings...



(Continued from page 1)

When asked if the Beta Theta Pi fire had any effect on the crackdown, Tatham remarked, "It brought the problem into focus."

Tatham announced that university housing would be made available to the students involved at a pro-rated cost, and they "could do what they wanted for the remaining two weeks." Because of the improbability of getting an apartment, it is believed that most students will be forced to take, and pay for, university housing.

Among the rules broken were faulty sprinkler systems, improper fire alarm system, lack of fire escape facilities, empty fire extinguishers, messy rooms, shingles and barnwood on room walls and too much decoration on the wall.

Both brotherhoods held late-night meetings last night in order to determine their respective courses of action.

$275 $225 $195 $250

WE CALL THEM OUR ANTIQUITIES

This may look like a brand new look in wedding sets.
But, the fact is these are based on designs from yesterday.
Black color and soft finished 14 karat gold combine for a striking new look.

DIVIDE YOUR PAYMENTS

HENRYS
Fine Jewelers Since 1918
348 S. Salina Street • Syracuse
Also Binghamton-Endicott and Watertown

"IT'S ALL IN THE MIND Y'KNOW!" —GEORGE HARRISON

ELEVEN BEATLE SONGS

APPLE FILMS presents a KING FEATURES production

The Beatles "Yellow Submarine"

© Copyright 1968 The Hearst Corporation (King Features Syndicate Division) and Subsidia Limited. All Rights Reserved.

Starring SGT. PEPPER'S LONELY HEARTS CLUB BAND

Produced by AL BRODAX · Directed by GEORGE DUNNING · From an original story by LEE MINOFF

Based upon a song by JOHN LENNON and PAUL McCARTNEY · Screenplay by LEE MINOFF and AL BRODAX and JACK MENDELSOHN and ERICH SEGAL

Design HEINZ EDELMANN · COLOR by DeLuxe · United Artists

film forum
gifford auditorium
syracuse university

MAY 13, 14, 15
6, 8 & 10 p.m.

$1.00

Campus Clothiers
S.U. BOOKSTORES

NEW SHIPMENT
DRESS BELLBOTTOMS

JUST ARRIVED STRIPES
SOLIDS

SU Bookstores

Chromosome balance becomes legal point

By JOAN BERKES

Almost everyone today, whether science-oriented or not, has heard of genes and chromosomes, the basic units of heredity. They were especially in the news after Watson and Crick proposed their model for DNA, the basic chemical substance of genes, and won a nobel prize for it. Now chromosomes have again come into the news, but from an unexpected area: not from science, but from law.

To help insure that the same species will continue in existence, reproduction and heredity have evolved to specific, constant procedures. One aspect of this constancy involves the number and arrangement of chromosomes, which is constant for each species. In man, the normal number is 46, arranged in 23 pairs. Members of a pair generally carry genes for the same traits; one set of 23 chromosomes, including one member for each pair, comes from the father, and the corresponding set is from the mother.

Among the 46 chromosomes are two sex chromosomes, labelled x and y, which determine whether the person is a male or female. Males carry an xy combination, and females, an xx.

Occasionally, however, a mistake happens, and the genetic makeup of a person may lack a chromosome or have one too many. For example, if a duplicate of a certain chromosome is received besides the regular one from one of the parents, mongolism in the child results. Each chromosome type has different functions, so each has a different effect if something is wrong with it.

When an extra sex chromosome is inherited, a new condition arises; this abnormal condition is what has recently been cuasing problems in law courts and has been causing an intermingling in the professions of the geneticists and lawyers.

It has been found that some men carry an extra y chromosome, so that their genetic makeup is xyy, instead of xy. Not a great deal is known yet about the effects of this particular genetic mistake, except that it may lead to unusually emphasized male characteristics, such as greater height than usual and perhaps more agggressive tendencies than normal.

Studies of certain patients of institutions for the criminally insane have revealed a somewhat higher occurance of the xyy syndrome than would normally be expected from a population sample.

Following these discoveries, some lawyers have attempted to use the xyy condition as a grounds for insanity. Richard Speck, convicted of murdering eight Chicago nurses, has based an appeal on the claim that he has an xyy imbalance, and other defenses have tried to offer the condition as evidence.

According to Professor Travis Lewin of SU's Law School, the trend in most cases is to not accept the xyy syndrome as court evidence. He explains from the definitions of the processes used in law, which involve three phases.

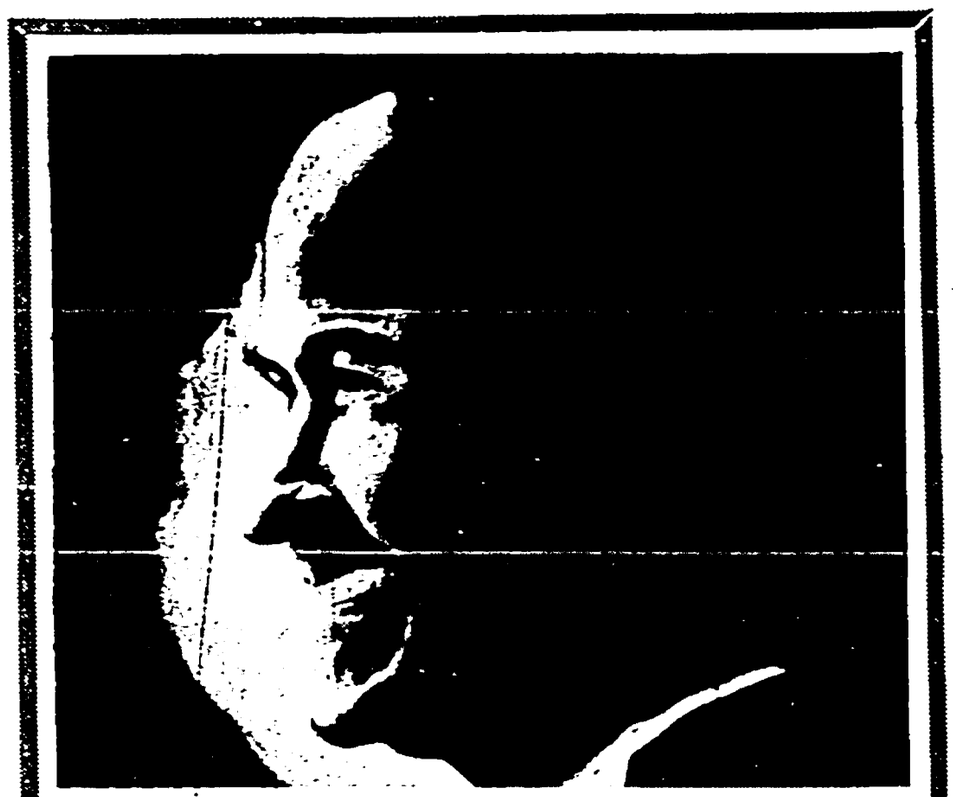
The first phase is the investigative, the second concerns the accusatory process, and the third is the disposition phase. This last deals with the rehabilitation of a criminal, and it is here that Professor Lewin believes that the xyy condition will be taken into consideration. The first two phases, however, do not include a place for such evidence as the condition might allow.

In deciding whether or not a person is or was at the time of his act insane, a test of responsibility is employed: if he did not know what he was doing, or if he knew what he was doing but could not judge whether it was wrong or not, he is designated insane or deranged. In admitting evidence, only those facts which bear on his ability to tell right from wrong are accepted; evidence must relate to the responsibility test.

As far as the xyy condition goes, Prof. Lewin asserts that "evidence showing that this person is different does not mean that he cannot tell right from wrong." According to the setup of the law, then, the fact that a defendant has a chromosomal imbalance of xyy does not qualify as evidence of insanity, basically because not enough is known about the condition.

He furthers this point, explaining that "we have no scientific evidence as yet that just because a person has an xyy, that this person is more violent or dangerous than his normal counterpart."

Lawyers are still trying to get consideration of the xyy condition in court, however, mainly to reduce the charge or sentence to a lesser degree. Prof. Lewin foresees the breakthrough to occur not in the realm of evidence, but rather as a tool in sentencing.



Caution must also be employed here, he warns. Too little is known about the true nature of the effects of the condition to justify treating these people as different. He observes, "Whenever we classify people as different and devise special rehabilitation before knowing all the scientific facts, we get unfair rehabilitation."

While he feels it is as yet unjustifiable to treat all people found to have an xyy makeup as different or potentially dangerous, he also feels that "the condition must be subject to further study." However, "the law is not the form by which these things should be tested."

Professor Lewin's opinions receive support from another SU professor, Dr. Marvin Druger, a geneticist in the zoology department. Dr. Druger substantiates Prof. Lewin's conclusion that not enough is known about the condition.

"Having an extra y chromosome," Dr. Druger maintains, "may contribute to more agressiveness, which can get one into trouble in our society, but this does not mean that such a person cannot be responsible for his actions."

He also feels that much more study must be done, not only on the xyy condition itself, but on chromosomes in general; not all is known about them and the way they act.

Jane Hixson, a sophomore art student, did this oil painting of NBC news correspondent Sander Vanocur. Although originally intended to be a "fun" project, Miss Hixson sent the painting to Mr. Vanocur's New York apartment where it now hangs. (Photo by Genovese)

Luncheon honors top SU engineers

An awards luncheon honoring students in the College of Engineering was held Wednesday in the private dining room of Graham Hall.

Students who earned special College of Engineering awards were invited to this luncheon by Dean Ralph A. Galbraith.

Assistant Dean Carson P. Buck presented awards to the following recipients: Michael Heck, the George M. Berry Award for excellence in freshman English; the Tau Beta Pi Award as the outstanding engineering sophomore; the Pi Tau Sigma Award as the outstanding mechanical engineering sophomore. Robert Silverman, the George M. Berry Award for excellence in freshman English. Charles Sabolis, the George M. Berry Award for excellence in freshman mathematics; the George M. Berry Award for excellence in freshman chemistry. George Alexander, the George M. Berry Award for excellence in engineering graphics. Joseph Godlewski, the Eta Kappa Nu Award as the top electrical engineering sophomore. Stephen Price, the American Institute of Chemical Engineers Award as the top chemical engineering student for freshman and sophomore years combined. John J. Mooney, the American Institute of Industrial Engineering Award (Syracuse Chapter) as the outstanding industrial engineering senior.

Dean Galbraith presented the Hamilton Watch Award (a gold watch) to Robert McCarty as the outstanding senior in the College of Engineering.

Paul Nakai, who was also invited to this awards luncheon, had previously received the George M. Berry Award as the best all-around senior at the senior class banquet which was held recently.

The following department chairmen and members of the faculty attended the luncheon: Dr. Paul J. Brennan, chairman, department of Civil Engineering; Dr. Salamon Eskinazi, chairman, department of Mechanical Engineering; Dr. Wilbur R. LePage, chairman, department of Electrical Engineering; Dr. James A. Luker, chairman, department of Chemical Engineering; and Dr. Paul M. Stafford, department of Industrial Engineering.

SU students win prizes in current art display

Six artists from Syracuse University have won prizes in the 1969 Rochester-Finger Lakes Exhibition at the Memorial Art Gallery of the University of Rochester, which continues until June 8.

They are D. Lee Du Sell, Frank A. Goodnow, Jerome J. Malinowski, John C. Marshall and George Vander Sluis, faculty members in the SU School of Art; and James L. Hendershot, a graduate student in art.

Vander Sluis received the Jurors' Show Award, which is an invitation to hold an exhibition at the gallery during the coming year. His "Plaza of the Sun II" and "Temple of Light," paintings in acrylic, are in the current show.

Goodnow's "Summer Spectrum," an oil painting, received the B. Forman Company's award ($200) for an outstanding painting.

Malinowski's "Rococcomo Canary," a cast bronze sculpture, was given the Gertrude H. Moore award ($100).

Du Sell's brass and bronze sculpture "Earth Angel" received the Inez D'Amanda Barnell award ($100).

Marshall's silver and gold pendant received the award for decorative arts ($50) given by the Women's Council of the Rochester Museum.

Hendershot's woodcut "Two Figures in Landscape" received the purchase award ($50) of the Print Club.

Student marsh ıls

To lead class in final walk

Twenty-eight student marshals have been selected to lead the class of 1969 at Syracuse University's 115th Commencement on June 7.

The class marshals, chosen by the Senior Executive Council, will lead the entire graduating class to the commencement ceremony in Archbold Stadium. They are Frederick H. Clas and Justine R. Perdunn.

Individual college marshals were selected by the deans of their respective colleges and schools, and will lead the members of their colleges in chronological order of the date the colleges were founded. They are:

College of Law: David Slook and Roger Bradley.

College of Liberal Arts: Charles Hicks and Paula Sullivan.

School of Journalism: Charles W. Babcock II and Gretchen Dorrington.

School of Architecture: Dale Herbert Cutler, Jr. and Michael Stephen Zdepski.

School of Art: Seth Banks and Nina Schmeckebier.

School of Music: Patricia Ann Sharpe and Jane Mary Grim.

College of Engineering: Cary Cottrell and John Hannum.

School of Education: Mary Lynch and April Rowland.

College of Forestry: Paul A. Schwonke and James W. Derrick.

College of Home Economics: Louise Bond and Robin Erickson.

College of Business Administration: Robert McGaffic and Thomas Shaw.

School of Speech and Dramatic Art: Jason E. Squire and Gail Frances Pitman.

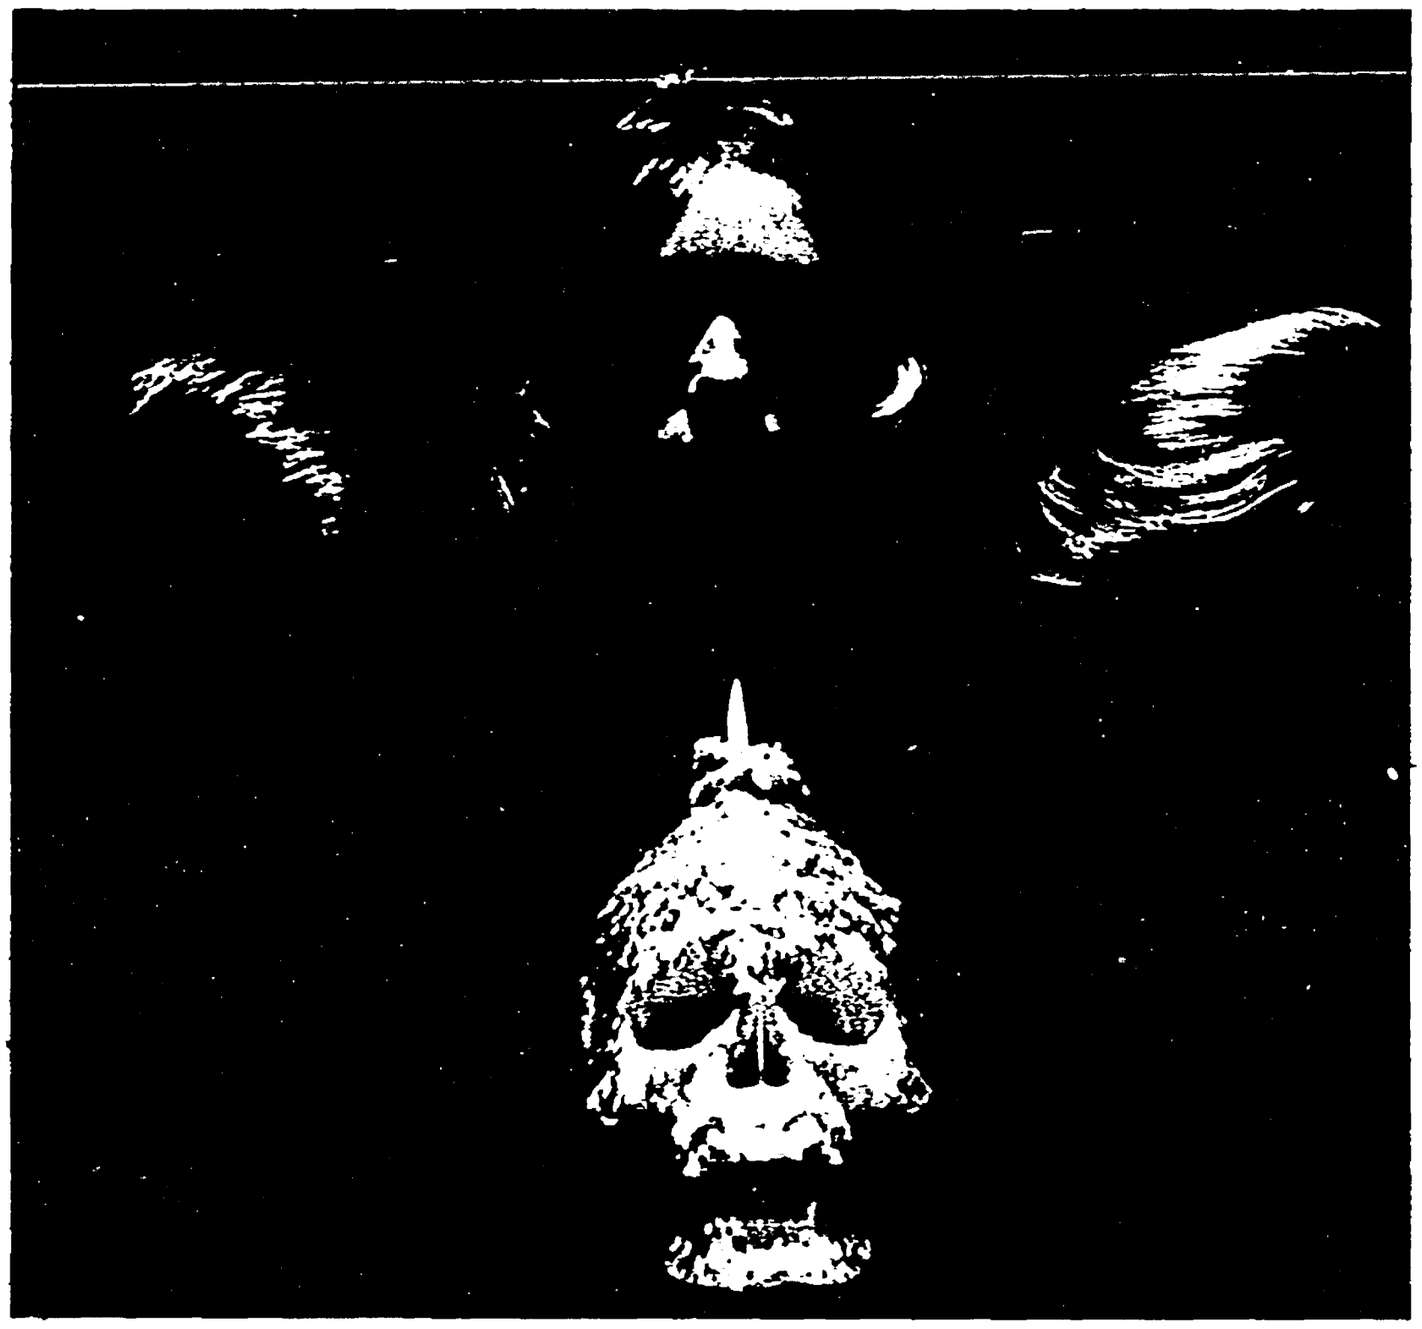
School of Nursing: Barbara Pomeroy and Judith Kay Sarver.

Students to write, act in movie

By MARGARET GENOVESE

What has a cast of hundreds, an original script, backing by a major motion picture studio, lights, cameras, action? For eight Syracuse University students it will be summer vacation.

Jawn MacKinley, John Neville and Mark Reichard have been selected for leading roles in a feature-length motion picture, "Children, Children!--Do You Know Where Your Children Are?" The film, to be produced by Cos Film Productions, will be shot on location in Johnstown, N.Y. during July and August.



The screenplay for the two-hour film was written by Syracuse University sophomore Karl Dorn. It involves the return of a college student and his fiancee to his hometown where all of the city's adult population has disappeared.

Dorn, a resources management major, in explaining his script said, "What it involves is the psychology of children today and relationships they have with their parents which tend to bring out their hostilities." Dorn, along with James Colasanti, a junior majoring in art, will be supervising the production.

Colasanti, who produced and filmed an experimental picture "Alone in the World" on campus last year, said the picture will be filmed in black and white to increase its dimension of suspense and "stark realism." The cast, according to Colasanti, will include over 100 children from the Johnstown area ranging in ages from 8 to 16 years.

Jawn McKinley, a sophomore in the School of Speech and Dramatic Art and daughter of bandleader Ray McKinley, will play the female lead. She has appeared in several stage productions including the current drama school production of "Marat/Sade." Her film work includes a role as a sorority girl in the Paramount picture "The Sterile Cuckoo" which stars Liza Minelli and will be released this summer.

Commenting on the direction the group will be taking, she said the main problem will be maintaining a sense of continuity and suspense throughout the film. Because it will not be filmed in sequence, she said, "You have to have a very strong internal grip on the story."

THESE THREE Syracuse University students will have leading roles in the feature length film "Children, Children! -- Do You Know Where Your Children Are?" to be produced on location in Johnstown, N.Y. From left are John Neville, Jawn McKinley and Mark Reichard.

For John Neville, a junior in the drama school, involvement in the film has necessitated changing his name to Richard Neville because of the English stage actor of the same name.

Neville, a transfer student from Colgate University, also appeared in "Marat/Sade." He has appeared in several stage productions, an underground film produced by Stan Van Der Beek and a promotional film for Colgate University.

Cast as the returning college student, Neville sees the opportunity as one of being in the right place at the right time. "This is not the usual," he said, "I was very lucky."

Playing the part of a 14-year-old will be sophomore Mark Reichard who is a zoology pre-med major. Reichard who has no stage experience was chosen for his resemblance to the boy in the original story.

Other Syracuse students involved in the production are Sue Aiken, a sophomore art major, who will assist in casting; Joyce DeComillo, a sophomore in the School of Music, who will compose the "Children, Children" theme song and background music and Katherine Jones, a sophomore in the drama school, in charge of overall production.

Once filming begins an approximate 24-hour schedule will be maintained to work around the activities of the location town. The film is tentatively scheduled for release in January.

Awards to be presented for theater leadership

The 1969 Sawyer Falk Awards for creative leadership in the art of the theater will be presented at the annual Boar's Head banquet of the Syracuse University drama department Sunday (May 18) at 7:15 p.m. at the Round Table restaurant in Syracuse.

Falk was head of the drama department from 1927 until his death in 1961. He was often called to Broadway as a "play doctor" and served abroad frequently as a lecturer and consultant on theater.

"Sawyer Falk sought through his teaching to foster creative leadership in his students, that they might by their efforts contribute to the cultural spirit of the nation," Dr. G. F. Reidenbaugh, chairman of the drama department, said.

The awards of $100 for first place and $50 for second place come from contributions made to the Sawyer Falk Memorial Fund, begun at the time of Falk's death by his friends at Syracuse University. The winners are selected by the drama faculty from among upperclassmen and graduate students in drama, who are nominated by fellow students. The awards may be given for work in acting, directing or technical areas.

The first Sawyer Falk awards were presented by Chancellor William P. Tolley at the 1968 Boar's Head banquet.

George P. Elliott, novelist, poet and professor of English at Syracuse University, will be guest speaker this year.

Boar's Head is the drama department's honorary society, whose members are chosen for outstanding and devoted work in departmental activities.

College sports relevant says SU cheerleader

By HENRY NICOLELLA

In an era when the accent is on student involvement in social and political affairs, do college sports have any relevance at all?

Teddi Fitzmorris, head of the cheerleading squad, thinks they do. "People want tradition-that's why we're here," she says. "They're used to it. They expect it. They'd miss it if it wasn't there. Even if they jeer at the cheers, they still come."

Teddi admits that the response to the cheers is seldom enthusiastic. "The freshmen eat it up, though," she says. "To them, it's a part of college life. Most of the others don't respond too often."

"People have gotten the idea that it's not chic or cool to get excited about sports," she continues. "Even the Goon Squad this year has changed. They're not so rah-rah. And look at the spring float parade. It used to go on for hours, but this year? Only two floats."

Teddi feels that the new interest in politics and "serious" subjects in college have made people reluctant to get enthusiastic about sports. "Some people want to cheer, but when they don't see anyone around them doing it, they're embarrassed to try it. However, in the out-of-town games, alums are very enthusiastic. I think it's because they want to believe that Syracuse hasn't changed since they've been here and that there aren't a lot of radicals here."

Teddi doesn't think that sports is either a social subject or just escapism. "It's a part of being young," she claims. "I think people should get excited at the games. It's natural exuberance. They shouldn't be so concerned about what other people think. Cheering would make them feel better. They would relax. At the California game last year everyone was enthusiastic. The whole crowd was yelling and screaming. It was just fantastic! Sometimes, if our team is losing and then the crowd gets psyched up, the team tries even harder."

The University budget for the cheerleading squad is inadequate, according to Teddi. "The students are always complaining about the University raising tuition. Not everyone knows this, but the University has a phenomenal budget."

"We get only $2000 a year. It cost $1400 to go to the California game alone. We couldn't afford to go to the West Virginia game. At least, we're going to have a better communication system next year. With the system we had this year, only the freshman section could hear the cheers."

Sometimes, the crowds are less than kind. People wander on the field during the game and others yell obscenities at the opposing team. "Last year," Teddi says, "the crowd echoed our cheers. We would finish doing all this cheering without getting any response. Then, after we sat down, they began to mimic our cheers. There was none of that this year, though."

Teddi was particularly annoyed at the University's attempt to raise money by selling basketball tickets to the students. "It's hard enough getting people to come to the basketball games as it is. Fewer people than ever showed up. Nobody is going to pay two dollars to sit on a lot of dirty benches squished in between about 1000 people."

Teddi is enthusiastic about next year. She says that the squad has eight new "exceptionally skilled" members: Howie Mason, Jed Riddle, Peter Tapscott, Jim Kervin, Ellen Zigman, Cindy Belle, Janet Cox and Jean Kovalak.

Registration schedule – Fall 1969

	Tuesday September 9	Tuesday September 9	Wednesday September 10	Thursday September 11	Friday September 12
	SENIORS ONLY		SOPHOMORES AND GRADUATE STUDENTS
8:00 - 8:30	70 - 79	8:00 - 8:30	85 - 87	17 - 19	50 - 52
8:30 - 9:00	80 - 89	8:30 - 9:00	88 - 91	20 - 23	53 - 56
9:00 - 9:30	90 - 99	9:00 - 9:30	92 - 94	24 - 27	57 - 59
9:30 - 10:00	00 - 09	9:30 - 10:00	95 - 97	28 - 30	60 - 63
10:00 - 10:30	10 - 19	10:00 - 10:30	98 - 99	31 - 32	64 - 66
10:30 - 11:00	20 - 29	10:30 - 11:00	00 - 02	33 - 35	67 - 69
11:00 - 1:00	NO ADVISING DURING THIS PERIOD	11:00 - 1:00	NO ADVISING DURING THIS PERIOD
1:00 - 1:30	30 - 39	1:00 - 1:30	70 - 72	03 - 05	36 - 39
1:30 - 2:00	40 - 49	1:30 - 2:00	73 - 76	06 - 09	40 - 42
2:00 - 2:30	50 - 59	2:00 - 2:30	77 - 80	10 - 13	43 - 46
2:30 - 3:00	60 - 69	2:30 - 3:00	81 - 84	14 - 16	47 - 49

	Wednesday September 10	Thursday September 11	Friday September 12
	FRESHMEN AND JUNIORS
8:00 - 8:30	70 - 72	03 - 05	36 - 38
8:30 - 9:00	73 - 76	06 - 09	39 - 42
9:00 - 9:30	77 - 80	10 - 13	43 - 46
9:30 - 10:00	81 - 84	14 - 16	47 - 49
10:00 - 10:30	85 - 87	17 - 19	50 - 52
10:30 - 11:00	88 - 91	20 - 23	53 - 56
11:00 - 1:00	NO ADVISING DURING THIS PERIOD
1:00 - 1:30	92 - 94	24 - 27	57 - 59
1:30 - 2:00	95 - 97	28 - 30	60 - 63
2:00 - 2:30	98 - 99	31 - 32	64 - 66
2:30 - 3:00	00 - 02	33 - 35	67 - 69

Attorney coming to discuss 'U.S. concentration camps'

Are there concentration camps in America today? Does the McCarran Act of 1952 allow Americans to be detained without the constitutional rights of trial and bail?

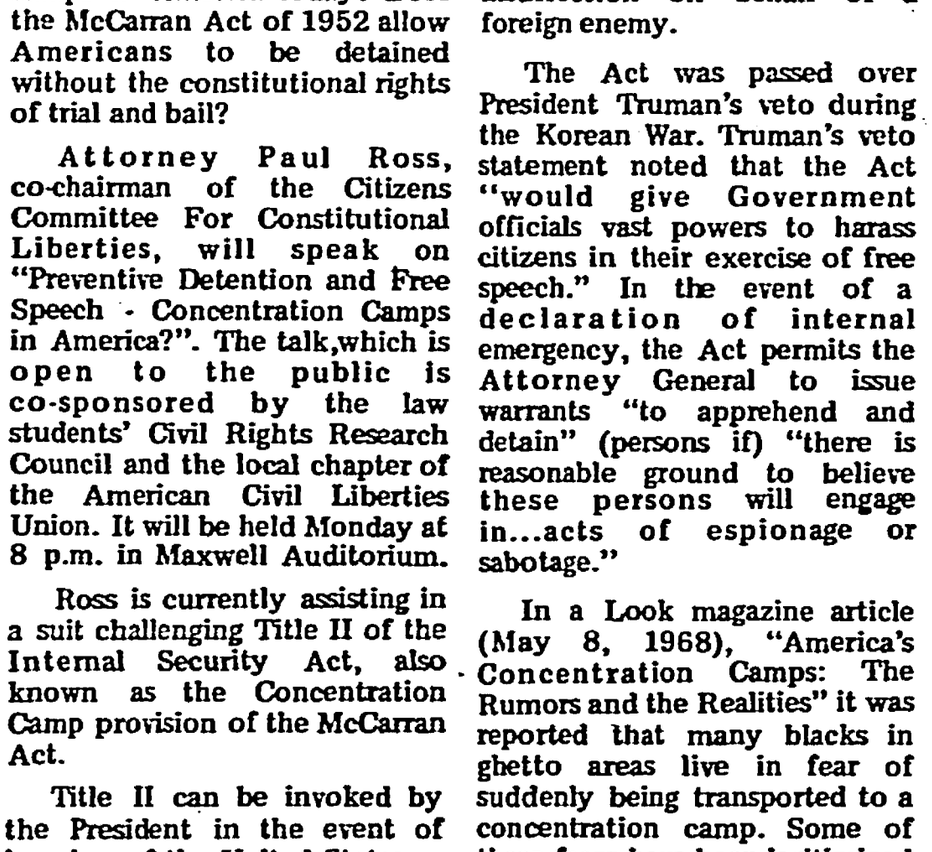
Attorney Paul Ross, co-chairman of the Citizens Committee For Constitutional Liberties, will speak on "Preventive Detention and Free Speech - Concentration Camps in America?". The talk,which is open to the public is co-sponsored by the law students' Civil Rights Research Council and the local chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union. It will be held Monday at 8 p.m. in Maxwell Auditorium.

Ross is currently assisting in a suit challenging Title II of the Internal Security Act, also known as the Concentration Camp provision of the McCarran Act.

Title II can be invoked by the President in the event of invasion of the United States or its territories, congressional declaration of war or insurrection on behalf of a foreign enemy.

The Act was passed over President Truman's veto during the Korean War. Truman's veto statement noted that the Act "would give Government officials vast powers to harass citizens in their exercise of free speech." In the event of a declaration of internal emergency, the Act permits the Attorney General to issue warrants "to apprehend and detain" (persons if) "there is reasonable ground to believe these persons will engage in...acts of espionage or sabotage."

In a Look magazine article (May 8, 1968), "America's Concentration Camps: The Rumors and the Realities" it was reported that many blacks in ghetto areas live in fear of suddenly being transported to a concentration camp. Some of these fears have been legitimized by proposals by the House on Internal Security Committee to use McCarran Act concentration camps for detaining "guerilla ghetto" fighters.



Ross will discuss the effect of Title II on the First Amendment rights to free speech, association, and redress of grievances. He contends that Administration officials have proceeded on the basis that the Tonkin Resolution is tantamount to a Congressional declaration of war, and that many have characterized large anti-war and anti-poverty demonstrations as "giving aid and comfort to the enemy."

Ross will also discuss the separate but related issue of preventive detention clauses which have been incorporated in anti-crime packages on the federal and state levels. He notes that such legislation is unconstitutional, and that once on the books has historically been aimed against political dissidents rather than criminals.

A preventive detention provision was included in the recent New York State proposal for revision of the Criminal Code. Consideration of the proposal has been postponed for a year. Ross said this is largely due to pressure brought on legislative leaders by the New York Civil Liberties Union, Legal Aid Society, the Vera Institute, the Committee for Constitutional Liberties and various political and citizens groups.

In May, 1968, the House Un-American Activities Committee discussed guerilla warfare in the ghetto. One point of a seven point plan specified that "Acts of overt violence by the guerillas would mean that they had declared a 'state of war' within the country and, therefore, would forfeit their rights as in wartime. The McCarran Act provides for various detention centers to be operated throughout the country and these might well be utilized for the temporary imprisonment of warring guerillas."

ENTRANCE to a 4,200-acre camp at Allenwood, Pennsylvania. Ready for any emergency? Attorney Paul Ross will discuss "Concentration Camps in America" at 8 p.m. Monday in Maxwell Auditorium. (Photo by Heist)

MELVIN C. MOUNTS

Melvin C. Mounts appointed to post of associate dean

Melvin C. Mounts, assistant dean of men at Syracuse University since August 1967, has been named associate dean of men. His appointment was announced yesterday by Dean of Men David Tatham

Mounts came to Syracuse in 1963 as a personnel intern in the office of the dean of men. A year later he was named an assistant to the dean and then assistant dean of men. He is a doctoral candidate in sociology.

Mounts graduated in 1959 from Trinity High School in Washington, Pa. He earned his bachelor's degree in sociology from Franklin and Marshall College in 1963. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Mounts of Washington, Pa.

Mounts is married to the former Johnna Reynolds. They have two children, Hillery, 8 and Suzanne, 2.

He is a member of the Onondaga County District Attorney's advisory committee on crime and delinquency, the National Association of Student Personnel Administrators, and Phi Kappa Psi, national social fraternity.

Humanities offer course to mark centennial year

The humanities division of the College of Liberal Arts will offer a new course as part of the University's centennial celebration.

"The Shaping of the Modern Mind: The Development of Ideas and Culture from the American and French Revolutions to the First World War," listed as humanities 305, will be an interdisciplinary effort to examine issues affecting the realities of the modern world.

There will be three faculty members. David Miller, associate professor of religion and Aubrey S. Garlington, Jr., assistant professor of fine arts have already been named. The third faculty member will be announced in the near future. Garlington will serve as program director.

"Syracuse University is, of course, a product of the nineteenth century. So many present-day accomplishments and problems can be traced to significant, fundamental changes in the order of things during this time that it seems entirely appropriate to make a special study of this extraordinary era during our own centennial celebrations," states Prof. Garlington.

The course is to be organized as a combination of formal lectures and panel discussions with as many opportunities for informal discussions, contacts, etc. as possible. In addition to the program participants, distinguished local faculty members will be invited to lecture on special topics.

Central to the program will be visits to the campus by some of the greatest scholars in the world. While on campus the visitor will deliver a significant public lecture, cooperate with departmental programs and meet with students.

There will be pre-registration for the course, and the number of students will be limited. Students accepted for the course will be expected to write a series of papers in addition to an extensive reading list. There will only be one section offered each semester. Humanities 305 will carry four hours of credit each semester and can be used to satisfy certain secondary group requirements in the College of Liberal Arts. The course can also be taken on a "pass-fail" option and is open to all undergraduates in the University above the freshman level.

More detailed information as well as forms for pre-registration can be obtained from the College of Liberal Arts office, Hall of Languages. Selection will be made during the next six weeks and students will be notified as to their status during the summer.

"We hope we can encourage students to explore a new kind of course. For the right kind of student humanities 305 should prove to be the best thing that happens to him while he is here," states Prof. Garlington.

LOU RAWLS (left) and DAVID FRYE will entertain at this year's Commencement Ball, Friday June 6 at the Three Rivers Inn.

Rawls is a versatile soul singer who has appeared on virtually every variety show, even hosting his own soul hour earlier this season.

Frye is an exciting young comic who doessatirical impressions of celebrities from Rod Steiger and Marlon Brando to Richard Nixon and William Buckley and has an uncanny knack for making himself look like the man he is imitating.

Tickets are $5 each and are available at the HBC cloakroom this week and next. There will be two performances, at 9 and 11:30 p.m.

Library hours

LIBRARY HOURS ..... Examination Period
May 19, 1969 - June 4, 1969

Carnegie (Main) Library

Monday, May 19-Saturday, May 24	8:00 a.m.-2:00 a.m.
Sunday, May 25	12:00 noon-2:00 a.m.
Monday, May 26-Saturday, May 31	8:00 a.m.-2:00 a.m.
Sunday, June 1	12:00 noon-2:00 a.m.
Monday, June 2-Tuesday, June 3	8:00 a.m.-2:00 a.m.
Wednesday, June 4	8:00 a.m.-5:00 p.m.

Commencement Weekend, June 5-8

Thursday, June 5-Friday, June 6	8:00 a.m.-5:00 p.m.
Saturday, June 7-Sunday, June 8

Guest religion prof to speak on church-state relationship

Relations between religious and civil authorities will be discussed here today by Dr. Jacob Neusner, professor of religious studies at Brown University. Neusner was described by his sponsor in SU's religion department, Prof. A. Leland Jamison, as a young man who "in the last 10 years has risen to the top rank of Jewish scholars in the United States." Neusner, 36, will speak at 8 p.m. in Grant Auditorium of the Syracuse University College of Law.

Neusner's topic is "Theology and Politics in Talmudic Babylonia." Such church-state relationships are still a problem in our time, Jamison noted. The Brown University scholar will be delivering the seventh B.G. Rudolph Lecture in Judaic Studies.

Neusner is president of the American Academy of Religion, the largest society of teachers of religion in higher education.

B.G. Rudolph of Syracuse established the lectureship in 1963. "The printed addresses are widely distributed by the University and the American Jewish Historical Society, and they have received international recognition as distinguished interpretations of Jewish history and culture," Jamison said.

"Neusner's major work is his five-volume 'A History of the Jews in Babylonia.' His scholarly interests, however, extend to contemproary affairs, and he is a frequent contributor to leading Jewish journals. He serves as a consultant to numerous learned societies and publications and is active in the National Hillel Foundation, which serves Jewish students on university campuses throughout the country."

The lecture, which is free and open to the public, will be followed by a period of questions and discussion.

All groups to share fee

With the passage of the Student Finance Bill, all student campus organizations are eligible for funds to be allocated from the general student fee. Organizations entitled to funds include dorm councils, service groups, political clubs, religious groups, publications and most other organizations. As much as $300,000 may be available for student activities funding. Consideration of budgets for the academic year 1969-1970 begins Monday. Please submit budget requests and questions to SG Treasurer Andy Rosenblatt, ext. 2703.

Advising available

English majors plan pre-registration

Pre-registration for all English courses will be held Thursday, May 22 at 4 p.m. Juniors (class of '70) will go to 307 HL; sophomores (class of '71) to 301 HL; non-English majors and freshmen (class of '72) to 207 HL. Advisors will be present.

There will be a special advising session conducted entirely by students, on Monday, May 19 at 4 p.m. in 307 HL. The students' opinions on courses, the professors teaching them, and information such as book lists, number of tests and papers and more will be available.

Copies of next year's courses are on the Liberal Arts Bulletin Board, outside the English office in HL.

Any sophomore taking an English course must stop in the English office before Tuesday, May 20 to fill out a card. These are not the same as the cards used to declare a major. All sophomores should fill out these cards or preregistration will be delayed.

The Undergraduate English Majors Organization has elected David Hahn as their new president for next year. The group is planning to reinstitute the English Honor Society next fall. Debates have been scheduled on topics such as, "Should Grades be Abolished?" There will also be more informal discussions involving faculty and students.

Engineering students plan new city

Seventeen Syracuse University senior civil engineering students will present their plans for "The Development of a New City" today at 8 p.m. in Kittredge Auditorium, Syracuse University.

Using visual aids, the students will propose a long-range development plan for a large unoccupied land area north of Syracuse. Proposals for transportation, industrial and commercial development, recreation facilities and waste treatment will be part of the program.

The program is free and open to the public.

'Once Upon A Mattress' to be presented Friday

A repeat performance of the musical comedy, Once Upon A Mattress will be given tomorrow at 4:15 p.m. in the Regent Experimental Theater. It will be presented for the benefit of the Boar's Head Dramatic Society scholarship fund. Although the performance is free, donations will be accepted. The musical is based on the fairytale, "The Princess and the Pea" and stars Delores DonVito as Princess Winnifred, Morris Vishner as Prince Dauntless, Lenore Naxon as the talkative Queen Aggravain, and Phil Zarecki as the mute King Sextimus. The young lovers Lady Larkin and Sir Harry are played by Jawn McKinley and Jim Ackerson.

The cast also includes Serhij Bohdan as the Minstrel, Tommy Gerard as the Jester and John C. Seavers as the Wizard with Cornelia Owens as Lady Rowena, John Neville as Sir Luce, Suzanne Bonnie Schorr as Lady Lucille. Sir Studley is protrayed by Bert Silverberg, Lady Merrill-Mabel by Barbara Block and Lady Beatrice by Ruth Homer. Helene Berkowitz plays Princess number 12.

The production was directed by Becki Davis, a senior drama major with Joyce Di Camillo as the musical director. The choreography was inspired by Cornelia Owens.

Umberto
formerly Guido's Salon Nouveau
Salon Boutique

The look doesn't just happen — it's put together with spirit and directed at every inch of girl — try all sorts of things — then try us —

422-1666 - SALON
422-9500 - BOUTIQUE
302 S. Warren St.
Open 6 days 3 evenings

Central New York builder/developer has opening in a widely diversified building field for eager, intelligent, young college graduate. Must be aggressive, willing to follow directions, possess supervisory capabilities and be capable of accepting responsibility. No construction experience necessary. Send resume to P. O. Box 1356, Syracuse 13201.

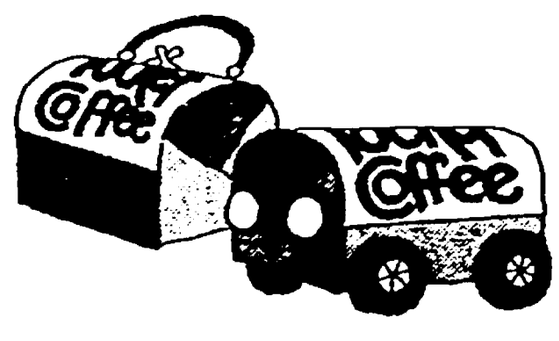
do your contact lenses lead a clean life?

Contact lenses can be heaven . . . or hell. They may be a wonder of modern science but just the slightest bit of dirt under the lens can make them unbearable. In order to keep your contact lenses as comfortable and convenient as they were designed to be, you have to take care of them.

Until now you needed two or more separate solutions to properly prepare and maintain your contacts. You would think that caring for contacts should be as convenient as wearing them. It can be with Lensine.

Lensine is the one lens solution for complete contact lens care. Just a drop or two, before you insert your lens, coats and lubricates it allowing the lens to float more freely in the eye's fluids. That's because Lensine is an "isotonic" solution, which means that it blends with the natural fluids of the eye.

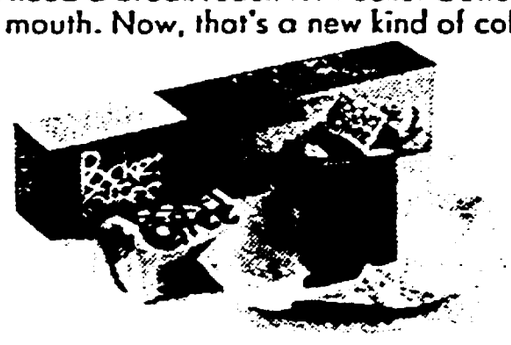
Cleaning your contacts with Lensine retards the buildup of foreign deposits on the lenses. And soaking your contacts in Lensine between wearing periods assures you of proper lens hygiene. You get a free soaking case on the bottom of every bottle of Lensine.



It has been demonstrated that improper storage between wearings may result in the growth of bacteria on the lenses. This is a sure cause of eye irritation and in some cases can endanger your vision. Bacteria cannot grow in Lensine which is sterile, self-sanitizing, and antiseptic.

Let your contacts be the convenience they were meant to be. Get some Lensine, from the Murine Company, Inc.

Pocket Coffee! What's that?



A new kind of coffee break that goes where you go.

If you're one of the people who often find you can't stop to get a cup of coffee when you need it, listen here. Pocket Coffee is a coffee break you can carry with you.

The man who dreamed up Pocket Coffee invented a way of putting some real brewed liquid coffee inside a delicious chocolate shell. Each piece is double-wrapped and packed in a three candy stick that fits neatly into your pocket or purse.

At work, on the road, or at play (you devil you), when you need a break reach for Pocket Coffee. Pop one into your mouth. Now, that's a new kind of coffee break.

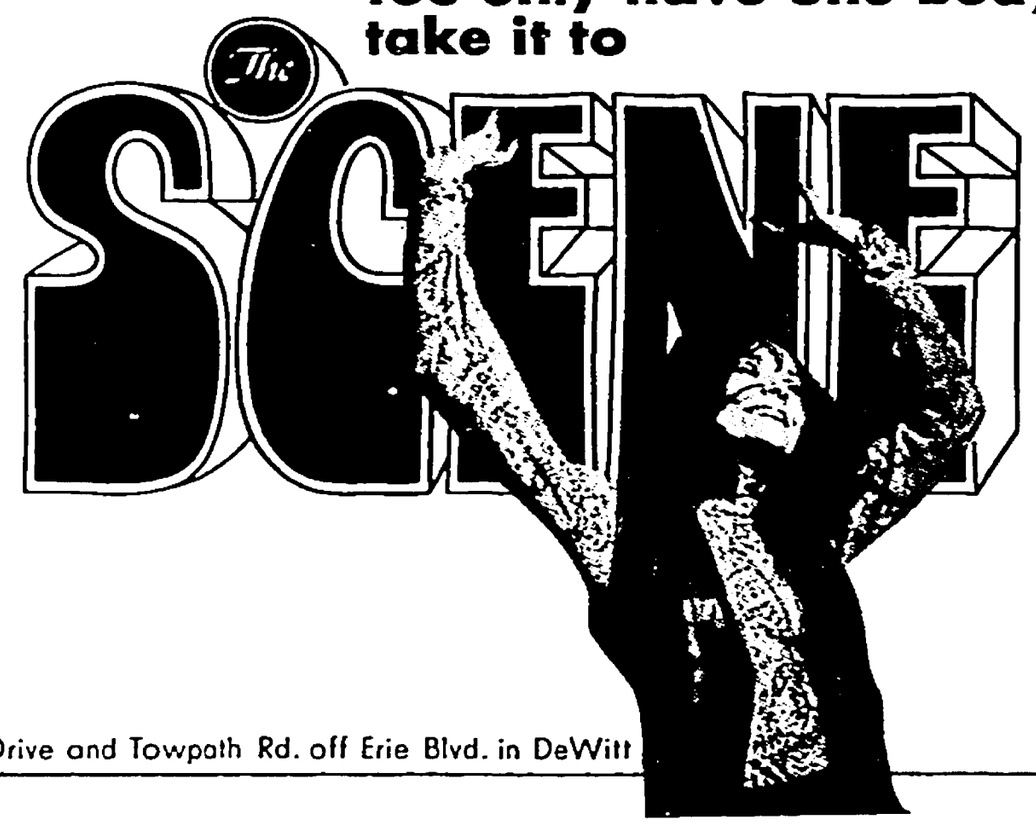
Bill Orange trophy to go to 'best' frosh floor

Traditions Commission is urging all freshman floors to submit applications for the Bill Orange trophy, the annual award for the "best" frosh living center.

The application must include the following:
- the names of all freshman residents of the floor or living center
- their individual averages and campus activities
- floor activities throughout the year
- names of officers and Goons; names of any upperclass residents of floor or living center
- reasons the residents consider theirs the best frosh living center on campus.

The applications will be judged on "neatness, originality and overall display of the floor's unity and spirit throughout the year."

All applications may be turned in to Roy Sykes (732 Comstock Ave.) or Shelley Rosen (306 Walnut Place). The deadline is Monday, May 19.



'Requiem' concert slated for Sunday

The Hendricks Chapel Choir will present their annual Spring Concert Sunday, May 18, at 7:30 p.m. at Hendricks Chapel. Brahms' "German Requiem" will be performed, featuring baritone soloist Daniel Walsh. The concert is free and open to the public.

The full story of Election '68 and what it means for the future

"A brilliant and incisive analysis. The Ripon Society not only offers a fascinating study of 'what-happened', but also considers with keen perception the long term trends now operating in American politics."
—SENATOR JACOB K. JAVITS

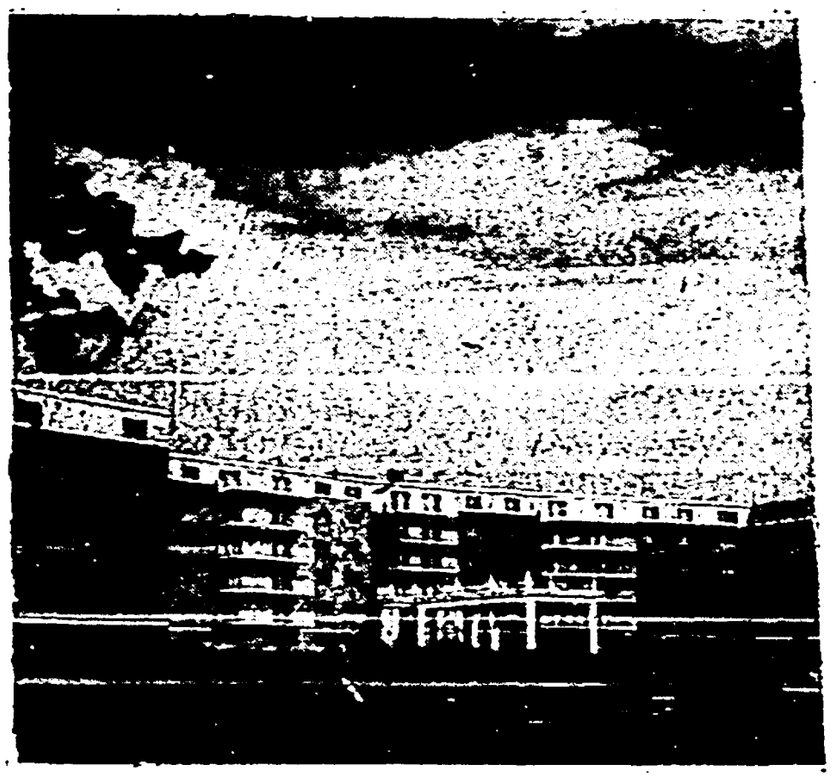
THE LESSONS OF VICTORY
By THE RIPON SOCIETY
$6.95, clothbound; $2.65 paperbound
Now at your bookstore THE DIAL PRESS

You only have one body, take it to
The SCENE

Cili Drive and Towpath Rd. off Erie Blvd. in DeWitt

TONIGHT: ADMISSION ½ PRICE.

ANNOUNCEMENT



Opening date Friday, May 16

A BOOK SALE That
YOU WON'T BELIEVE. YOU MUST COME DOWN AND BROWSE

ART
BUSINESS POETRY
RELIGION
LITERATURE MEDICAL HISTORY
GARDENING
PHILOSOPHY
PSYCHOLOGY
SOCIOLOGY
CHEMISTRY
MECHANICAL
MATHEMATICS
LAW
SPORTS ARCHAEOLOGY
EDUCATION LANGUAGES ZOOLOGY
TEXT BOOKS

Open every nite. We carry back date magazines. Most of the books are ½ price and less.

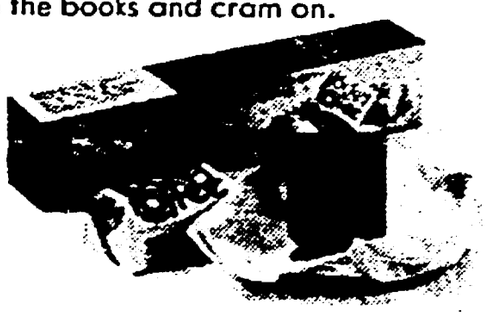
126 South Salina St.

NEW FACULTY AND GRADUATE HOUSING

Nob Hill, only a few minutes from SU, offers all the conveniences of luxury living in a serene atmosphere accented by a panoramic view. Applications for the moderately-priced suites are currently being accepted for the fall semester.

Full-color brochures and other information describing the abundant amenities are available to faculty, staff and graduate students by phoning 469-3211 between noon and 6 p.m.

Pocket Coffee! What's that?



A new kind of coffee break for cramming collegians.

From freshman to senior year, the "cram" is a fact of life for most students. Just before mid-semester and again at end-term you burn the midnight oil, review mountains of books and consume gallons of coffee.

Pocket Coffee, the new kind of coffee break, consists of a delicious chocolate shell full of real liquid coffee ...the space age answer to the students' age old problem.

Don't stop to make or get coffee, pop a Pocket Coffee into your mouth, get your coffee and eat your chocolate too (a great energy source). Pack Pocket Coffee in with the books and cram on.

Mohan S. Mehta

Indian educational leader to receive Tolley Medal

Mohan S. Mehta of Udaipur, India, will receive the William Pearson Tolley Medal for Distinguished Leadership in Adult Education at Syracuse University Monday (May 19).

Dr. Tolley, chancellor of the University, is the donor of the award, a silver medal designed by M. Peter Piening, professor of art.

Alexander N. Charters, vice president for continuing education, said: "Dr. Mehta, an educator, lawyer, diplomat and public servant, has made contributions to education. Syracuse University is honoring him particularly for his outstanding contributions to adult education."

The medal will be presented to Mehta at a 7 p.m. dinner in the penthouse of Lawrinson Hall, after which he will speak on "The University and the Community."

Mehta, president of the Indian Adult Education Association, with headquarters in New Delhi, and vice chancellor emeritus of the University of Rajasthan, Jaipur, will be the second recipient of the Tolley Medal. The first was Dr. Cyril O. Houle, professor of education at the University of Chicago, who was honored Sept. 28, 1966. Candidates for the award are selected by a special committee of the Syracuse University board of trustees.

Mohan Sinha Mehta was born April 20, 1895, in Bhilwara, Rajasthan. He had his early education in Ajmer and graduated from Agra College, Agra. At the age of 23, he passed the law examination at the University of Allahabad. He started his teaching career as an assistant professor at Agra College in 1918. A year later he joined Government College, Ajmer. Mehta then went to England and earned his Ph.D. at the London School of Economics and Political Science. On his return to India he joined the Administrative Service of Mewar State, where he served for 14 years. In 1937 he was appointed Chief Minister of Banswara State, a State in Rajasthan. He was re-appointed to another three-year term in 1944.

Mehta was a member of the Constituent Assembly, which framed independent India's Republican Constitution. In 1949, he was appointed India's Ambassador in the Netherlands and served as India's High Commissioner in Pakistan, and Ambassador in Switzerland, Austria and the Vatican.

CONGRATULATIONS

JACQIE and JERRY

ON YOUR ENGAGEMENT

JIFFY KING SPECIAL

Phone Orders Accepted; No Deliveries

Monday thru Friday, 2-5 p.m.

10¢ OFF ALL SUBS

727 South Crouse
in the Arcade

Campus Classified

GR 6-5571, Ext. 2314

Rates minimum of 15 words:

1 day	1.15
2 days	2.25
3 days	3.30
4 days	4.30
5 days	5.25
6 days	6:15

To place a classified ad. call GR 6-5571, ext. 2314, between 1 and 3 p.m. Ad must be placed 2 days in advance. Every word over 15 costs 5c extra per day.

ALL ADS MUST BE PREPAID.

MISCELLANEOUS

RENT if you can't buy! T.V.s, tape recorders, typewriters. By week, month or semester. Reasonable rates. S. U. BOOKSTORE, GR 6-5541, x 2426.

ALTERATIONS DONE within 24 hours. Call for an appointment. Lillian Potter, 207 Comstock. 478-5247.

PRIVATE DRIVING LESSONS — automatic or standard shift. Full or refresher courses. Qualified professional instructors. Pickup service. Auto Driving Academy. GR 6-3995.

SUMMER JOB — Full time, Syracuse area, need car and phone. Call on established customers. Eight year old business needs new representative. Contact Dean Wallace, Jr., 2 Oakwood Circle, Storrs, Conn., 06268 or call 203-429-6152.

AUTO DRIVING - three hour prelicensing course given Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. SULLIVAN'S DRIVING SCHOOL - 463-3451.

GO WEST, anyone? Driving through Colorado, Nevada, Calif. in June — share expenses. Call Hecker x 3079-80.

SHARE GAS AND DRIVING - to California during June. In air conditioned Cadillac. Max. 2 adults - Contact 457-7911.

FOR SALE

1965 OLDSMOBILE convertible. Red, 442, Power steering. Power brakes, excellent condition, reasonable. Call 637-3430 after 5.

1966 MUSTANG — Blue power steering, power brakes, automatic transmission, excellent condition. 474-0471 after 5.

1957 VW BUG, sun-roof, good mechanically. $300.00 or best offer. Call 446-5516.

1956 VOLKS - Black sedan. Radio, two never used tires. $100.00. Call 656-7589 after 6 p.m.

COMET '61, good mechanical condition. You decide the price - Call 457-7911 after 5.

VOLKSWAGEN 69 — Sedan, sun-roof, automatic, AM-FM radio, snow tires, 4,000 miles, receiving co. car. GR 9-6717.

DRUMLINS AREA — charming home, fireplace and walkout basement. Phone Mrs. Peiffer 446-0150.

1968 CORVETTE convertible, blue, 2,900 miles, full power, perfect condition $4600.00 GR 9-6250 or 474-5335.

'61 FORD FALCON, new electrical system, standard trans., cheap. Dave Miller x2451.

'62 VW GHIA, good condition, must sell now, all offers considered, call Joe Bayer x2451.

1964 HEALY SPRITE, red, some rust but runs well. Dependable. $400. Call 474-0471 after 5.

MG-TF CLASSIC - new paint, interiors, 4,000 miles since engine overhaul. 1600.00. 446-8357 after 6.

1967 SUZUKI SCRAMBLER - under 2,000 miles, good condition. $400.00. x2940. ask for Wey.

FENDER PRECISION BASS with hardshell case, excellent condition, reasonable price, call Kevin McMurray, x2683.

1965 CORVAIR CORSA convertible, 4-speed 140 hp, two new tires, $700.00 will bargain. Al Byrne, x3092, 3093.

THREE PIECE LIVING ROOM SET. Ideal for student apartment. Can sleep two. $55.00. Call 475-4327.

FOR RENT

APARTMENTS all over the city. Nicely furnished. 1, 2 and 3 bedrooms. $85.00 up. GL 8-6100, 458-6101.

EUCLID, FURNISHED ROOMS - with kitchen privileges from $45 and up. 446-6451.

FURNISHED, HEATED recently remodeled apartments, Crouse near University, available June 1st and seventh. $115. 623-7731 after 4 . Dick Taylor, x3928.

UNIVERSITY WALKING DISTANCE - 2 bedroom flat, stove, fireplace, porch, garage. Availabe August 1st. $100.00 per month. Phone 469-4095.

FOR SUMMER or year round, furnished 3 rooms or 4. $115 or $130, utilities included. 2 miles west of campus. Air conditioning available. Steemland 475-3790.

6 ROOM APARTMENT, furnished, close to Sadler and Lawrinson. GR 5-5743.

SUMMER RENTAL beginning June 1st or may be leased for one year. Heated and furnished apts. Efficiency at $75 00 per month and three rooms and bath $85.00. Parking or garage available. GI 6-0493.

APARTMENTS — furnished, 3 rooms, utilities, near campus. Call x3630, 472-8223 or 475-1631.

FURNISHED APARTMENT to sublet June 1, 1969. Cliff House. Pool and sauna, private club. $135.00. Call Mr. Van Kleef after 9:00 p.m. 479-5463.

SUBLET - SUMMER. $180.00 takes it for whole summer starting June 20. 2 bedrooms 5 rooms utilities. 478-3523. Dick Taylor x3928.

WANTED

TO SUBLET (July 1 - Aug. 30) a studio apartment in or within commuting distance of James Street or University area, by New York City school teacher. Contact Ardy Meluzzi Tel. 474-8229 and leave message.

ROOMMATE FOR SUMMER and/or Fall. 3 Bedroom apartment. 5 minutes from university. $35/month. 476-6020.

2 GIRLS TO SHARE 7 room apartment. Laundry, near Lawrinson. Reasonable. GR 5-3569 or 478-4473 after 6 P.M. Call anytime weekends.

BANK TELLERS — permanent part time teller position available at Mattydale office to work on Fridays from 12:00 to 7:00 P.M. We will train you on the job. Call 473-2256. First Trust and Deposit Co.

ROOM AND BOARD in exchange for work during 1969-70 academic year. Male student. Last summer groundskeeper, this summer hospital orderly. Dick Taylor, x3920.

TUTOR IN ENGLISH CONVERSATION 3 or 4 hours a week for a Japanese. Willing to pay. Contact 478-2412 after 6.

TYPING

THIRTY YEARS EXPERIENCE. Dissertations, term papers, proof-read. Satisfaction guaranteed. Mrs. Raymond Webb. HE 7-8259.

TAKE YOUR MANUSCRIPT to the only professional typing and printing service serving the S. U. area. The knowledge and experience of having done over 2,000 theses and dissertations is behind every job we turn out. Stephanie's Office Service. 469-2795.

TYPIST experienced in thesis, dissertations, and term papers. Electric typewriter. Shirley Savlov, 446-2999 or x2441.

EXPERIENCED TYPIST — thesis, term papers, etc. reasonable rates. Call 635-5239.

Verne Doctor stars

Simmie's boys score 14-7 triumph

By EVAN REGAL

SCHENECTADY, N.Y. Paced by Verne Doctor's four goals and three assists, the Orange stickmen had to battle a tough Union squad for three quarters before pulling out a 14-7 victory yesterday at Schenectady.

According to Coach Roy Simmons, Union was "a good tough, hustling team. It was a real squeaker for a while," he said. The score was only 2-2 at the end of the first quarter. The Orange started to pull away in the second and it was 7-5 at the half. Simmie's stickmen garnered four goals in the third quarter to increase the lead to 11-6 and three in the final quarter for the 14-7 total.

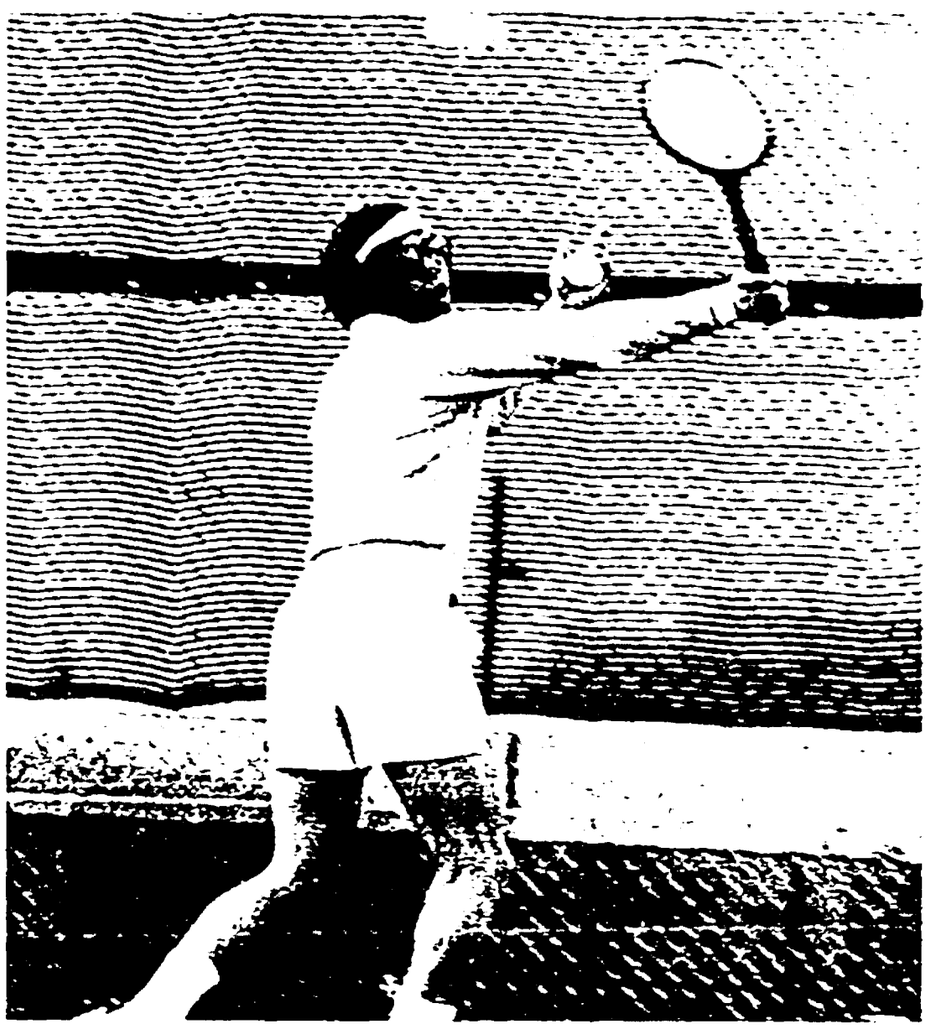
Besides Verne, who Simmons said "looked like his old self in spots," other Syracuse scorers were Leo Nolan (2 goals and 1 assist), Jim Smith (2 goals), Rick Travers (2 and 1), Jeff Davis (2 and 1), Ron Doctor (1 and 1), Paul DeMartino (1 and 1) and Tom Powers (1 assist).

Simmie named DeMartino in particular as playing an outstanding game. "He gave flashes of his potential and really came to life. Paul was magnificent in the second half," the coach said.

"They outhustled us. They were hungry," Simmons explained. "I can see how they win ballgames." Union had an outstanding goalie in Ed Green, who had 17 saves. Simmie went on to say, however, that "I don't know if he was that good or we were that bad."

The Orange stickmen took 52 shots to only 29 for Union. Simmie stressed that "we did not shoot well. But I don't know what to attribute this to." One possibility is the 11 penalities called against the Orange. The extra-man defense (the penalty killers) was highly praised by Coach Simmons. "They did a fine job," he said.

Although the Orange upped their record to 10-1, Simmie felt that the defense could have played better. He explained that "they gave up five goals. That is too many." On the brighter side, Butch Brown had 10 saves for Syracuse.



In terms of separate units, the third-line midfield consisting of Rick Travers, Paul DiMartino and Tom Varley, played the best according to Simmie. The threesome netted three goals and two assists.

Although the stickmen escaped without any new injuries, Simmons said that Ethan Klausner is still not ready yet. "I wanted him to sit this one out but he insisted on playing." He went on to say that "we will need Ethan at his best Saturday. Cortland has a fine post attack." Saturday Syracuse will travel to Cortland to meet Cortland State.

Because the Red Dragons of Cortland have lost only one game this season, Simmie emphasized that "we will have to do better Saturday or we won't be in the ballgame. We will have to be more determined and tougher. We have the potential, we only need the proper attitude."

Cortland, whose only loss was to Cornell by one goal, has beaten every team that Syracuse has beaten and by wider margins, Simmons declared. He stressed that the Cortland game "is for all the marbles. The winner should take the Cox Division."

"We are going to work hard the next couple of days," Coach Simmons stressed. Although he admitted that "we will have to play our best if we are to win," Simmie added optimistically, "I think our kids are up to it."

ALL FOR NOUGHT is return by SU singles player Peter Fr nk who, along with his teammates, could not manage to win a set in a 9-0 white wash at the hands of the Colgate Red Raiders.

Frosh trackmen squeak by, Varsity edged by Colgate

By BOB GALLAGHER

In a close meet at Archbold Stadium yesterday, the SU cindermen fell to their fourth loss of the season, bowing to Colgate 76-69. The Tangerines came from behind, winning the mile relay, to salvage a 74-70 win over the Colgate frosh.

There were many outstanding individual performances turned in by the Orange as they won seven events. Senior Guy Roberts, running with a broken foot showed no ill effects as he sped around the Archbold tract. He won the 440 yard dash in 49 seconds flat.

The Orangemen's only double winner was Jack Fitzpatrick. He was victorious in the 120 yard high hurdles in 15.1 and the 440 yard intermediate hurdles with a 56.4 clocking.

Tom Baesl, who placed in three events, was the leading scorer for the Orange with 11 points. He earned a first place in the triple jump leaping 43 feet 7 inches and second in the high jump and 44 yard intermediate hurdles. Baesl also ran a leg on the losing 440 yard relay team.

Basketball player Dave "the Rave" Harmon turned in a fine performance his first day out with the trackmen. He won the high jump, placed second in the triple jump and third in the broad jump.

Distance man Larry Zuller, with six points, also took a first for the Orange, winning the half mile after placing third in the mile. Sophomore Greg Warden placed first in the javelin with a heave of 192 feet 10 inches.

Dave Greaves, finished second to Roberts in the 440 and ran the first leg of the winning mile relay. Jim Derrick came through with a second in the 100 yard dash against a fine trio of Colgate sprinters.

Sophomore Roger Taylor, finished second in the shot put despite a sprained ankle. Dave Crans earned a second for the Orange in the two mile.

The Colgate Red Raiders were paced by sprinter Ed Morris. He took the 100 in 10.1 and the 220 in 22 seconds flat. Morris also ran the opening leg on the winning 440 yard relay team.

The frosh needed a victory in the mile relay to win the meet as they trailed Colgate 70-69 before the final event. The team of Mike Affiek, Nate Allison, Mike Sweeny and Tom Stoyan came through with a 3:30.5 to take the event and the meet.

Affleck turned in an "iron horse" performance for the frosh. He took the 440 yard intermediate hurdles, finished second in the 440, third in the triple jump and ran a leg for the winning 440 yard relay team.

Stoyan, Bob Quinlan and Greg Allen were major contributors to the frosh victory. Stoyan anchored the 440 and mile relay teams to victory. His 1:57.4 clocking in the 880 was close to the frosh school record.

Quinlan was a double winner, taking the mile and the two mile. Football player Allen, out for the team just for this meet, won the 100 in 10 seconds flat. He also ran a leg on the victorious 440 yard relay team.

This was the final dual meet of the season for the cinderman. However, ten members of the team have qualified for the IC4A track championships.

Netmen trounced

By ADAM DAWSON

Two great disappointments were the results of the tennis match against Cornell yesterday. The varsity was shut out 9-0, while the freshman lost 8-1.

This makes the varsity's record 2-8, with matches against Rochester on Saturday, and Hamilton on Tuesday remaining.

"We should have beaten Cornell. The boys were not as sharp as they should have been because they have not been able to practice since last Wednesday," commented coach Gary Thorne. The reason the netmen could not practice is the famed Syracuse sun which has been in hiding of late.

During the six varsity singles matches and three doubles matches, the Orangemen did not win a single set. Howie Noble at first singles, John Schwandt at second singles, Sandy Aronauer at third singles, Jeff Shankman at fourth singles, Peter Frank at fifth singles and Don Bredes at sixth singles all went down to defeat before the booming serves of the Big Red. The doubles teams of Schwandt and Aronauer, Noble and Shankman and Bredes and Frank all lost.

The freshman team made a better showing. Dale Patterson and Pat Mason playing first doubles won the Orange's only points in match play. They beat Dirk Dugan and Arnie Resnick from Cornell 6-2, 4-6 and 6-2. The second doubles team of Joel Schwartz and Joe Valenti lost their match in two sets, while the previously unbeaten third doubles team of Howie Lippman and Eliot Levine lost an abbreviated one set match 6-8.

Mason's loss at second singles was his first this year. He had beaten his man earlier in the season. His doubles victory with Patterson was especially heartening for coach Thorne because, "They are finally playing well together."

In addition to Mason's loss at singles, Patterson, Schwartz, Lippman, Levine and Don Lowengard lost their singles matches. Lowengard lost a grueling three set match 6-8, 6-4 and 7-9.

Tough breaks have been the hallmarks of this tennis season. Matches with Catholic University and American University that Thorne feels the Orange would have won were rained out. Also, the mid-season ineligibility of Marc Pine has hurt the team. His last match was against Buffalo, and the Orange won it 8-1. The team has not won a match since then.

The tough schedule the netmen face does not help their record. Matches this year with perennial powerhouses Navy, Maryland and Penn State as well as two with the Colgate "meat grinder" highlight the season.

Looking towards the end of the season, Thorne feels confident the team will close out the year on a winning note.

DO Sportsman of the Year to be named tomorrow

The Daily Orange will name the recipient of its Sportsman-of-the-Year award for 1968-69 in tomorrow's edition. Through a poll conducted among DO sports staffers, the winner has been selected from the fine athletes and coaches on the Hill.

Also appearing tomorrow will be the answers to the final edition of the DO quiz biz contest. As soon as the final results are tabulated, the person with the most correct answers out of the 50 questions will be awarded the years subscription to Sports Illustrated.

SETTING THE PACE in the mile run is SU distance standout Larry Zuller. He took a third in this race. But he bounced back later in the meet to win the half mile.

DAILY ORANGE

Syracuse University's Daily Newspaper Since 1903

Vol. 67, No. 105 Syracuse, New York, Friday, May 16, 1969 10 Cents

Corbally to meet with students

Three scheduled to talk with Chancellor-elect, page 2

Law students vote on further action

Demand law library expansion, charge contract broken; page 2

Seniors to face 'outside world'

Several seniors, active at SU, state post-June plans; page 4

Is this learning? Let's take a look

SU professors and deans evaluate the '68-'69 academic year; pages 7-12

Sports roundup

pages 19-20

BROTHERS OF KAPPA SIGMA are not protesting the Vietnam war with this sign of the times, but are rather indicating their displeasure (to say the least) with orders to vacate their house because of alleged fire violations. The Kappa Sigs were given a one-day extension of the deadline, which was originally set for today. Rumors that other Greek houses not meeting fire code regulations will have to be vacated could not be confirmed. (Photo by Clemens)

Problems persist within law school

By JOHN WISNIEWSKI

The Student Bar Association (SBA) of the College of Law last night decided on further action to bring about change in the Law School. The students claim that future accreditation for the school is doubtful unless the law library is expanded.

As to the kind of action decided on, Richard B. Boddie, SBA president, said; "We are not in any position to make a statement." The action was approved by unanimous vote.

"I would like to give Dr. (Frank P.) Piskor the benefit of the doubt that he is sincere in his attempts to alleviate the problems in the Law School," he added. Boddie emphasized that he was expressing his opinion and not necessarily that of the SBA.

Vice-President and Treasurer F.A. Wingate Wednesday answered charges that the Administration breached a contract between it and the SBA. The contract, dated October 24, 1963, states:

"The Student Bar Association of Syracuse University College of Law has agreed to accept an estimated $900 a year to be paid semi-annually in September and February. The source of this fund is to be derived from the percentage of profits earned from the vending machines located in the law building."

The contract was signed by the late Ralph Kharas, former dean of the Law School, Vice-President Wingate and the president of the SBA.

Boddie said that the Student Bar Association received no such funds until this year, when it was given $500.

Wingate replied that the following payments were made:

August	1962	December	1962	$194.27
January	1963	December	1963	527.35
January	1964	December	1964	251.21
January	1965	December	1965	176.52
January	1966	December	1966	370.10
January	1967	December	1967	563.23
January	1968	December	1968	774.46

Informed of Wingate's statement, Boddie said the SBA received none of the payments, although the money may have been sent to the Law School.

Corbally conference

John E. Corbally, Jr., who will assume the post of Syracuse University chancellor in September will meet with three SU students this weekend at Ohio State University, where he is the vice chancellor and provost.

David Ifshin, Student Government president, Mary Lou Leary, a member of the University Judicial Board and David Ross, Daily Orange editorial director will fly to Columbus, Ohio for the meeting.

Ifshin said the discussions will give the new chancellor an opportunity to find out what the students expect to get out of Syracuse and how they hope to benefit from the new administration.

The SG President said that during a telephone conversation with Corbally yesterday, the Chancellor-elect seemed genuinely concerned about student problems and quite willing to consider student requests.

MG AUSTIN HEALEY

Jaguar

SALES & SERVICE

also

Largest Selection in the East of Used Convertibles--Hard Tops Corvettes-Sports Cars

6 Factory Trained Import Mechanics waiting to serve you. Over $100,000 in parts and accessories in inventory.

Revelle Motors, Inc.

800 W. Genesee Street

Sales GR 4-1009 Parts & Service GR 9-9544

THE CLASS of 1969

presents

THE SENIOR CLASS BALL

JUNE 6, 1969 8 p.m.

3 Rivers Inn (Route 57) Clay, N. Y.

FEATURING

DAVID FRYE

AND

LOU RAWLS

Tickets - HBC thru May 23 $5.00

OTHER ACTIVITIES

Thurs. - TGI Graduation - The Scene 2-5 p.m.

Fri. 11 a.m. - 1 p.m. Picnic on Quad

Fri. 5-7 p.m. Reception - Hotel Syracuse

SAT. 10 A.M. GRADUATION

SPEAKER

WILLIAM F. BUCKLEY, Jr.

ANGUS H. TWOMBLY — Editor-in-Chief

MANAGING EDITOR Alan Stamm EXECUTIVE EDITOR - Karen Wiediger NEWS EDITOR - Fred Tuccillo EDITORIAL DIRECTOR - David A. Ross COPY EDITOR - Jean Havens FEATURE EDITOR - Roz Mazer SPORTS EDITOR - Mike Weber CAMPUS AFFAIRS EDITOR - Larry Kramer PHOTOGRAPHY EDITOR - Clint Clemens ASSOCIATE EDITORS - Andrij Bilyk, Kay Christensen, Beth Hillson, Rona Kavee, Helene Macdonald, Charles Shapiro, Dan Schlossberg, Patti Williams, Roni Zlokower.

DAILY ORANGE

Syracuse University's Daily Newspaper Since 1903

FRIDAY, MAY 16, 1969 PAGE 3

STEVEN P. STROBRIDGE -- Business Manager

ASSISTANT BUSINESS MANAGER— Art Depasqua, NATIONAL ADVERTISING MANAGER— Janet Meyer ACCOUNT EXECUTIVES— Roger Black, Jim Maney, Mike Greenstein

Published Tuesday through Friday during the academic year by students of Syracuse University. Offices located at 200 Brooklea Drive, Fayetteville, N.Y., and 1101 East Adams St., Syracuse, New York. Entered as Second Class matter at the U.S. Post Office, Fayetteville, N.Y. 13066.

Come September

In a Harris Poll taken this year, 89 per cent of Americans said they wanted police to quell campus rebels, regardless of what the consequent ramifications the spectre of force in the world of academe holds for the future.

On college campuses across the United States this academic year, we have witnessed confrontative actions which threatened the very foundation of academic freedom as we know it today. Some speculators foresee a rising tide of repression, as evidenced by public opinion polls and pending legislation, that will eventually stiffle what is now, to a large extent, cherished academic liberty.

At the heart of campus unrest this year is the growing, and we feel justified, feeling among college students, that their professors-turned-entrepreneurs spend more time in their labs and on the shuttle to Washington than in their classrooms. And if they do show up for class, the quality of their performance is severely hampered by a medieval curriculum structure.

Here at SU this year, we have seen that our University is too, happily, vulnerable to change. Some of that change will come in a natural and healthy manner such as the resignation and retirement of a chancellor or a dean of women. Some of it, however, will come painfully with unrest and discontent undermining the long undeserved tenure of some faculty members.

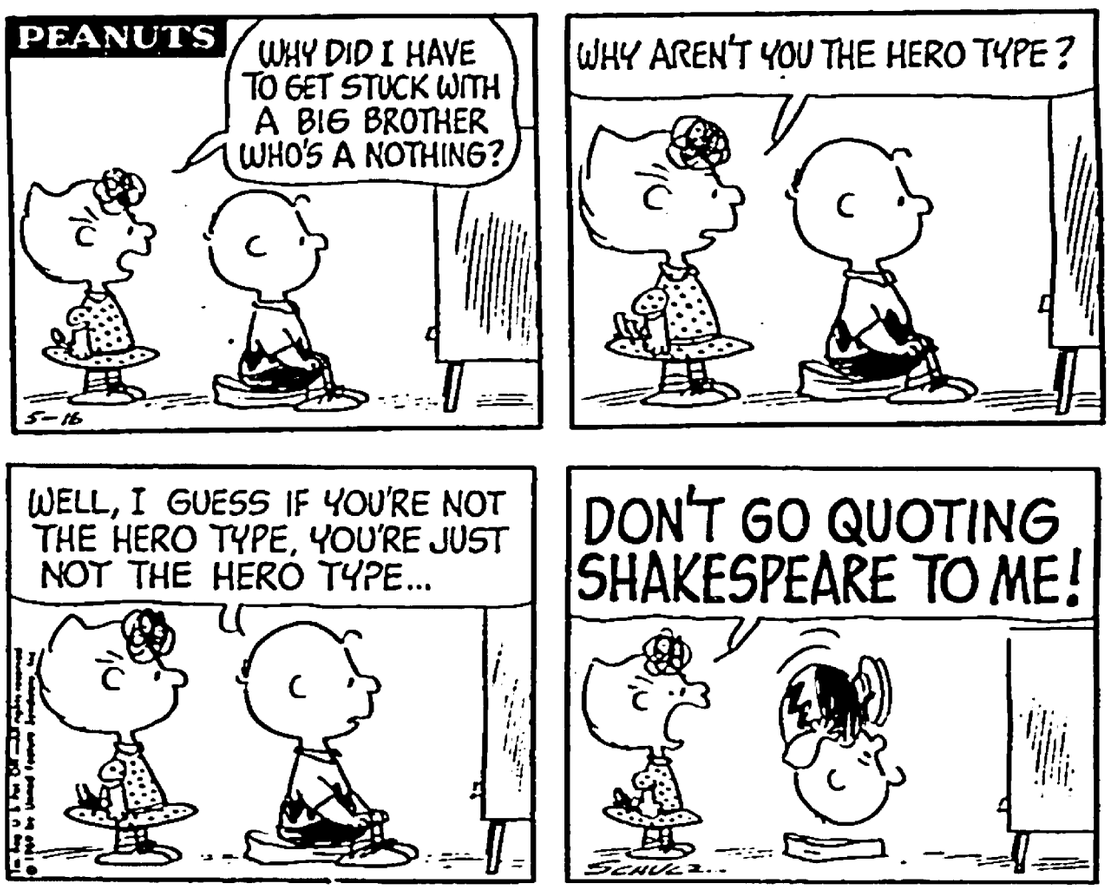
That change has started to come at SU. This has been a year of bargaining, mollifying and enthusiastic discontent. But it may only have been the harbinger of the coming year which may bear frustration, impatience and more discontent.

This has been a year which has seen man (in the form of SU students) satisfy his natural desire for what a former instructor at SU called "creature comforts." And now it is to the real question, and most legitimate problem that we must turn--education.

In addition to our regular news coverage today, therefore, we have devoted most of the issue to exploring the central question of the quality of education we receive here. ''Quality'' has many components--Our relations with the community, the usefulness of services provided for students, curriculum structure, the way we shall respond to new black demands -- but, most of all, "quality" depends upon the individual's ability to reap maximum benefits from the resources both within and outside the University community.

The Daily Orange thus ceases publication for the '68-'69 academic year, leaving somewhat undefined the substantive issues concerning our educational institutions, in the hopes that they may be thoroughly examined during the summer and attacked with renewed vigor in September.

Off to Ohio



Communication between outgoing Chancellor Tolley and his subjects (students) has been inadequate to say the least. Come September, Chancellor Corbally will usher in a new era at SU, an era that will hopefully foster stronger lines of communication between a concerned Chancellor and a responsive student body.

The communication lines will be strung this weekend when David Ifshin, a member of UJB and a member of the editorial staff of the DO, travel to Ohio State University to discuss campus problems with the Chancellor-elect. They will meet all day to discuss issues relevant to SU and college turmoil in general.

We feel this is an indication of Corbally's genuine desire to hear the "student's side of the story," an attribute we applaud and find encouraging.

Editorial policy

All material submitted to the Daily Orange becomes the property of the paper to print at its discretion. No unsigned materials will be printed but names will be withheld upon request.

Peanuts is run with the permission of The Syracuse Herald-Journal.

Urban renewal?

Jim Burzycki

Some quick lessons about how institutions like Syracuse University operate in America can be learned from an examination of the University Hill Corporation, (UHC) a private corporation set up to plan neighborhood renewal around the borders of SU. If University expansion occurs, it will take place as part of urban renewal under the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968, which requires that any proposal for community renewal must be given final approval by an elected community committee. This community committee is separate from the UHC and exists in Syracuse as the Temporary Citizens Committee. June 1st is the day scheduled for its election, so it is important for people to be aware of the political forces at work.

The over-riding factor in any renewal decisions will probably be the University's policies. On record, the University pictures itself as a benevolent but maligned institution which is not a slumlord. But the reality, as shown, in a draft report by Jesse Burkhead of the Economics Department for the Maxwell Committee on the American Dilemma, is that the University has been worse than a slumlord: it simply keeps housing until it falls below city standards--then it demolishes it. This is done when this country is facing a crisis in low income housing.

Other groups involved in the Hill Corporation include the Upstate Medical Center, local businessmen's groups, churches and citizens' groups, but there is evidence that these groups are marginal in comparative influence. For example, the UHC budget of $25,000 is supported annually by $15,000 of SU money. Kenneth Bartlett, SU, Vice-President and Dean of Public Affairs, is chairman of the board of University Hill. The reason for the University's interest is obvious: it is slated to get most of the land. As of today, the University has 38.2 percent of all land in the Hill area; after urban renewal, the figure will rise to 97.5 percent. In the meantime, many families will be displaced and many homes torn down.

A positive response is possible to this state of affairs. The Temporary Citizens Committee is choosing, on June 1st, the members of the committee which must approve the renewal plan. TCC officials have indicated their willingness to allow SU students to vote on it. A place has not been yet set for the voting nor has a method of nominating candidates. Anyone in the Hill area, however, who realizes the importance of this vote should try to attend the meeting. A second and equally important response would be to demand that the University sponsor a non-profit low income housing project for those people displaced. This housing would have to be completed before residents actually move so as not to merely intensify the existing problem. Such a housing project as this can be financed through federal loans at very low interest rates under Section 221 (d) (3) of the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968.

Letters

To the Editor:

Although no longer a UJB member, having been present at the recent housing hearing, which the defendant requested be open, I will reveal facts unnoticed by the DO, but which reduce the abuse and controversy this decision has engendered. The defendant was not merely charged with violation of housing rules. He was also charged with falsification of information.

Where in the United States Constitution is a defendant given the right to falsify information? If the facts were as undetermined as reporter Lane alleged, would it not have been impossible for the UJB to decide an issue of such magnitude as a violation of the Constitution? Since when is the UJB either competent or authorized to rule on violations of state law? Had the defendant argued that the housing rule was unjust, had he argued that it was not logical, he might have fared better. Instead, he subjected the UJB to a disorganized presentation, in which he inaccurately cited a precedent he had not even read.

Paul Snyder
Ex-Chief Justice
UJB

Prominent seniors offer future plans

Grad school, travel, work, VISTA among choices

By CAROL WAGEMAKER

The past-graduation plans of several prominent SU seniors are as diverse as their kaleidoscopic personalities. To provide some motivating contemplation for those of us who must remain behind, the Daily Orange is presenting this run-down of the paths they will be pursuing.

CHARLES W. BABCOCK

CHUCK HICKS

CINDY BAILEY

Chuck Hicks - past president of Student Government; chairman of University Union, Jr. year; member of Council on Student Life.
Future plans - Hicks has applied to grad school at Brandeis, Harvard, Cornell, University of Michigan and Syracuse. He wants to study higher education connected with Afro-American studies. Along with this, he hopes to work out a program, which will include drama. Ultimately, Hicks wants to teach and do some type of community work. Says Hicks, "after four years in college, I'm more confused than ever. I want to take a lot of different courses."

Ed Feldman - former speaker of the Senate; former justice of the Court; fraternity Man of the Year.
Future plans - Feldman will attend either New York University or Fordham law school. While attending, he will probably teach during the daytime and attend school at night. After law school Feldman will prusue a career of teaching in law school or possibly enter politics. Feldman hopes to be an active alumnus. "I will probably give money to the University, when I get some."

Jeff Portnoy - vice president of Student Government; one of the leaders of the recent class boycott; only undergraduate on the committee to choose a new Liberal Arts Dean.
Future plans - Portnoy will attend law school at Duke University, Durham, N.C. He chose Duke in large part, because it is completely different from Syracuse. "The atmosphere is calm and quiet. After law school, Portnoy wants to practice law in Washington. Ultimate aim: "I want to be the first Jewish President of the United States."

Barry Randell - president of the Class of '69, since his sophomore year.
Future plans - Randell has no definite plans right now. After graduation, he wants to take some time off and travel around. "I have no plans for grad school, I want to travel around in and out of the country. Randell has had several job offers, but says, "I don't want to rush into anything. I'm hoping the draft doesn't interfere with my plans."

CLIFF ENSLEY

Charles W. Babcock II - Former editor-in-chief of the Daily Orange; managing editor of the Daily Orange under Woody Rothe.
Future plans - Next year Babcock will man the suburban desk of the Dayton, Ohio "Journal-Herald." He eventually hopes to work on the "Journal-Herald's" city desk. Babcock's reasons for choosing Dayton: "I hoped to get a job in the West or northern Midwest. I wanted to work in a part of the country other than in the industrial Northeast." Babcock liked the "Journal-Herald" staff, because he feels they are young, energetic and intelligent. "I sense a spirit of cameraderie there."

Joe Nicoletti - This year's Greek Week chairman; CAP candidate for SG president in '68; CAP Executive Committee.
Future plans - Nicoletti will probably attend graduate school here at Syracuse, majoring in either political science or social science. Eventually he wants to work with people in some capacity or another. He cited, as an example, work with retarded children. Nicoletti says, "I want to work in some field, where I can have a feeling accomplishment."

Evan Richert - former managing editor of the Daily Orange; former vice-president of Sigma Delta Chi, journalism honorary.
Future plans - On June 24, Richert and his wife will enter VISTA. They will serve somewhere in the northeast area, possible in New York City. After the year in VISTA, Richert says he will probably work as a reporter, possibly for a newspaper in the Gannett chain.

Sally Cloniger - past president of Panhellenic Association; selected as the outstanding junior woman; 1st undergraduate to direct a Chamber Theater production, a part of the Interpretation Department.Future plans - Miss Cloninger will work towards a master's degree in directing and acting at Ohio State. While there whe will assist in the theatre. Eventually she hopes to earn her Ph.D. in either theatre or directing.

Paul Snyder - chief justice of the University Judicial Board.
Future plans - This summer Snyder would like to take an archeology course in Israel or an art course in Paris.

Cliff Ensley - defense safety on football team, ran for Senior Class president in '68: member of senior men's honorary Phi Kappa Alpha.
Future plans - This June Ensley will receive a BA in engineering. Enrolled in a six year program, at the end of his fifth year he will receive a degree in industrial engineering and will spend his sixth year in the business school. During his next two years at SU, Ensley hopes to serve as assistant coach for the freshman football team. Commenting on his future after Syracuse, Ensley says, "It's too early to get a lot of ideas about what I'll be doing, but it will probably in management or sales for an engineering firm."

Bruce Chadwick - former editor of the Promethean; former sports editor of the Daily Orange; served in Senate for two years

Future plans - Next year Chadwick will work as a general assignment reporter for the "New York Daily News." In this capacity he will write news, feature and sports stories. Chadwick who has lived in the New York metropolitan area all his life says, "I'm very happy to be working for a newspaper as prestigious as the 'Daily News." Chadwick is presently working on a novel.

Carol Valmy - Homecoming Queen, 1968; captain of the cheerleaders, senior year; CAP Executive Committee.

Future plans - After graduation in August, Miss Valmy has two job offers awaiting her, one with a public relations firm in New York City and one with the Syracuse "Post Standard." Miss Valmy, dually enrolled in newspaper and history has already worked part time for the "Post Standard." Still undecided about her future, Miss Valmy might have the opportunity to work in the London advertising office of J. Walter Thompson.

Ross Starek - past treasurer of Student Government; president of Phi Kappa Psi fraternity, spring of junior year and fall of senior year.

American University preparing for a career in corporate law.

Future plans - Starek will serve in the Army Reserves for one year after graduation and will enter law school in the fall of 1970. He hopes to attend either George Washington University or Cindy Bailey - president of AWS; member of Council on Student Life; listed in Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities.

Future plans - For the next few years Miss Bailey plans to travel, perhaps participating in community organization work. "I want to dabble in what might be in the outside world." Miss Bailey does not want to "become programmed in a grad school, marriage or profession. I majored in sociology here and I want to meet different people, a sort of practical experience in sociology," she said.

John Diamond - former speaker pro tempore of the Senate; worked on the committee for the reorganization and reapportionment of the University Senate.

Future plans - Diamond reamins undecided between working and graduate school. At the moment he is looking for a job in New York state through an employment agency. Having majored in personnel and industrial relations as an undergraduate, Diamond might attend grad school at Syracuse, in the School of Education's department of student personnel administration.

Says Diamond, "If I don't like business I might end up in edication." Diamond says he is interested in industrial relations because, "it is the only aspect of business that deals with people."

JEFF PORTNOY

Good-bye Tolley . . . hello Corbally

By SAM HEMINGWAY

There will be dinners of honor, speeches of tribute and perhaps another special degree for SU's retiring Chancellor William P. Tolley in the coming month but they will be forgotten quickly, and students, faculty and friends of the University will begin to look over its new leader, John Corbally.

What the campus will experience when the new regime is installed this fall has been witnessed only seven times previously in SU's 100 years. If the fanfare is half that which took place when Tolley became Chancellor it will be quite an affair.

Tolley had returned to the campus in 1942 after an 18 year absence during which he established himself as one of the leading personalities in American education. In high school he recorded the highest scholastic average and was named valedictorian of his senior class in Binghamton, New York. He worked his way through Syracuse University, gaining his Bachelor of Arts degree in 1922 and M.A. degree in 1924.

His list of accomplishments during his four year stay here is interminable. He belonged to Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity, and was a member of no less than seven assorted honoraries, among them Pi Kappa Phi, Phi Beta Kappa, Pi Delta Epsilon, Tau Theta Upsilon, Delta Sigma Rho, Janus and Tambourine and Bones Club. He was editor-in-chief of the Onondagan, a Varsity debater and sang in the YMCA glee club.

Tolley began an administrative career in 1921 as the head of religious affairs for men at SU. Three years after that he was the alumni secretary at Drew University and was promoted to assistant to the president of Drew two years later. At the age of 27 he became acting dean of Brothers College at Drew and before he reached the age of 31, he was chosen to be the thirteenth president of Alleghenny College, the youngest president of a class A college in the U.S.

In his inaugural address in 1931, Tolley advocated a strong college of liberal arts "to teach the whole man rather than parts of him." He went on to state "If people of our nation come to yearn for something more than circuses and jumping jacks, they will find it in the liberal arts college."

During the next 12 years Tolley initiated a fund drive that yielded $1,300,000, a monumental feat during the depression. He began an educational guidance clinic to help students decide on a prospective college and in 1940 was elected director of the Association of American Colleges. Two years later he was handed the reins of one of the largest universities in the nation, Syracuse.

Tolley returned to Syracuse as though he always belonged here. His wife was a Syracuse native who had been a home economics major at SU and a sister of Alpha Phi sorority. Advance stories, photographs and daily reports on his every move during his first months of office could be found somewhere in the local newspapers. The Post-Standard described him as "young in appearance, with snapping eyes, a ready smile and a hardy handshake" but added that "there is something about Dr. Tolley's demeanor that marks him as a man who gets things done with a minimum of effort."

His first years were filled with keeping SU going during the war years and participating on the local and national level inin post-war policy. A May 15, 1949 feature story in the "Herald-Journal" reported the Chancellor made as many as 20 speeches a week. Tolley made it a habit to keep a list of 50 to 60 students who, due to physical or financial handicaps, needed special consideration and encouragement.

In his 10 year report of 1952 Tolley announced his intention to keep SU a privately endowed University because, in his words, "Any legislation that weakens the dual system of privately endowed and tax-supported colleges tends to undermine the foundations of a free society."

SU saw many firsts in the next 10 years. Research became a big practice of SU faculty members; Utica College was founded;grad sequences in several courses were born; University Press was founded; married student housing was constructed, an enormous building program was initiated. Tolley continued receiving degrees from various institutions, the number now is over 30.

On July 16, 1960 Tolley was hit by a car on University Avenue breaking his leg and injuring his back. In 1964 it was Tolley who did the injuries–striking a student ROTC protester with his cane after reviewing the cadets in front of a UPI photographer. The incident received much publicity, especially on campus after one of the protestors admitted the Chancellor "smiled" after hitting the protestor and said "Get off the grass you, bums."

Another crisis which brought on student wrath occurred in 1967 after SG president Peter Jeffer drank a can of beer on campus to protest the drinking regulations. Tolley was said to have replied, "But the students are not going to run the University single-handedly."

For all the criticism leveled at Tolley it must be remembered that his accomplishments in the field of education and his pushing for what he felt was best for SU far outshadow remarks like the one he made on hearing 600 students were protesting a $180 raise in tuition in 1967. He was quoted as saying "It's spring."

THE SALE GOES ON...

AND ON..AND ON..

D, E, F, G RECORDS
50c OFF
our regular selling price

GUITARS
40-50% OFF
MUSIC ACCESSORIES

SELECTED HARDBACKS – 1.00 up
SELECTED PAPERBACKS – ½ PRICE

BLACK LIGHTS & POSTERS
Best Prices on the Hill !

PRINTS & POSTERS....
Reduced to Sell !

THE CORNER STORE

SU Bookstores

"Our Business is People"

LATIN AMERICAN INSTITUTE

BILINGUAL SECRETARIAL

Spanish–English and French–English

Two or three semester programs. Begin in January, June or September. Also part time courses during the day or in the evening.

Modern air-conditioned classrooms. Nationally accredited by A.C.B.S. Residences recommended. Placement service for graduates.

Room 35, 292 Madison Ave. (at 41st St.) New York, N.Y. 10017 Phone: (212) LE 2-6073

STUDENT / FACULTY SCHOLARSHIPS AVAILABLE*

You don't have to speak Russian for a CEC 3 week THINK-IN in the USSR. $1,024 less awards

STUDY EXCHANGE VISITS LEAVE NYC: JUNE 7, JULY 5, AUG. 2

CEC FIELD INSTITUTE: American and Soviet faculty. Frank, open debate, discussion, lectures; field trips, COUNTERPART MEETINGS, and free time to meet Soviets. and 23 or MEET CEC in Moscow.

For details How You May Qualify:

CITIZEN EXCHANGE CORPS

Name _____

Address _____

City _____

School _____

Dept. Scholarships 10 W 46th St., NYC 10036 or call LT 1-8113.

Academic reform lies in hands of new Senate

By VIC LIVINGSTON

Amid the current political reorganizational activity on campus, perhaps the most far-reaching innovation is the reapportionment of University Senate. Under the new plan, students will for the first time be given an active voice in Senate representation, holding 45 seats. Faculty members will have 90 seats, and administrators 45 seats, on an equal footing with students.

This Senate reorganization, to become effective this fall, promises to add new dimensions to the deliberations of the body. Prof. George Stern, a Senate member and chairman of the Senate Committee on Student Participation, sees the Senate as becoming a "more significant body" under the reapportionment proposal:

"Administrators, faculty and students will be engaged in debate face-to-face. Students in the past have had to bring issues together outside of the Senate. Now, these issues can be discussed openly as they take form--both the administration and faculty will be responding directly and the salient factors will be brought directly to the Senate floor," Prof. Stern said.

Selection of the new student members will be conducted by SG. Each school of the university will be apportioned delegates according to an SG apportionment plan.

Although student representation promises a broader role for Senate decision-making, the body will still in reality be an advisory group, with final decisions resting with the Chancellor and the Board of Trustees. However, it is hoped by Prof. Stern and other Senate members that decision of the Senate will carry more weight under the all-university structure.

"The true power of the Senate is the legislative function. Currently, the Senate is not in the position to actively legislate, but the new organization makes it possible to intrude a little further. The Senate still is a relatively limited body, though," Prof. Stern commented.

Prof. Stern feels that more responsibility should be delegated to the Senate by the Board of Trustees to make the decisions of the body binding without further consideration. In addition, he feels the Board of Trustees itself should be a more representative body, including some form of student and faculty representation.

Similar views are echoed by former Speaker of the Student Senate Ed Feldman, who has been active in the drive to secure student representation on the University Senate. However, he emphasized that all legislative campus bodies act in an advisory capacity to the Chancellor and Board of Trustees, and with the Chancellor serving in an active capacity on the Senate, the decisions of the Senate would indeed be "binding."

"The Senate will move a lot faster with undergrads on it," Feldman said. "They like to light fires under the tails of people and they'll get things moving."

Feldman stressed the importance of student representation on the Senate, claiming that "trustees do not have a clear cognizance of the needs of students." Feldman termed academics the main concern of the University Senate, and stated that academic proposals would be the first dealt with by the student Senate representatives. Several of the primary issues outlined by Feldman for Senate consideration were:

* elimation of the 12-hour rule
* establishment of a minor program
* the implementation of student representation on Curriculum Committees of all schools
* liberalization of group requirements
* abolishment of the Phys. Ed. requirement

"I do not think the Senate has the wish to get into any other areas which infringe on the academic matters of the Senate," Feldman said, explaining that the Senate members are "true experts" on academic affairs, and should devote a large segement of their efforts to improve the quality of an education at SU. As this year draws to a close, the hope of academic reform so sorely needed by this institution is on the horizon. Whether true reform will come lies mainly in the hands of conscientious students and faculty, and their voices will finally be heard through the reorganization of University Senate.

CSL chooses student reps

One of the major links between administrators, faculty members and students at Syracuse University is the Council on Student Life (CSL). Since its formation in Nov., 1967, the Council has been meeting to review aspects of student life.

Four of the six student members are on the Council because of the positions they hold on campus. They, in turn, select the remaining at-large members. The six students who will serve on the Council this year are David Ifshin, president of Student Government; John Ross, speaker of Student Senate; Marc Cavanagh, president of Inter-Dormitory Council; and Ira Kurzban, president of University Union.

They, along with the student members of last year's Council, selected Dorothy DeVoe and Joe DiPrisco as at-large members.

Miss DeVoe feels the Council will be playing a similar role as the University Senate, which will have 45 students as voting members in the fall. "However, the CSL will be a closer liason betwene faculty and administrators and students because it has been around longer, working with students all the time," she said.

At this time the Council only has the power to recommend modification of policies in the areas of student activities and social life. These recommendations, in turn, must go to the Board of Trustees, through the Chancellor, for approval.

DiPrisco, the second at-large member, feels CSL was first set up by the University to patronize students. He agrees that the Council must be given more power if it is to be effective next year.

"CSL as a committee has served as a catalyst to get things done. It provides a common level of communication between students and administrators," he said.

Looking back

Dean Smith exits after 34 years

The autumn of 1969 will truly be a season of changes. Along with a new freshman class and a new academic year there will come a new Chancellor and a new dean of women.

For present Dean of Women Marjorie C. Smith, the advent of the new dean will signify the end of 34 years of service at Syracuse University.

Dean Smith arrived on campus in 1935 as an administrative assistant to then Dean of Women M. Eunice Hilton. She later became the director of women's housing, and, ultimately, in 1949, became the dean of women.

Born in Troy, N.Y., she graduated from the New York State College for Teachers at Albany. An English and public speaking major, Dean Smith then taught English and Latin at Morrisville High School. She also taught English literature and dramatics at Troy High School and Troy Lansingburgh High School before deciding to go into full-time guidance work.

After acting as advisor to girls at Troy Lansingburgh High School, which she attended as a girl, Dean Smith came to Syracuse. Continuing her education, she received her Master's degree from Columbia University in 1937.

Active in community affairs during her early years here, Dean Smith was elected president of New York State's Business and Professional Women's Clubs in May of 1948. In 1940 she had been chairman of Women's Organizations Day at the New York State Fair.

Her work in aiding the women of New York State was recognized by Governor Thomas Dewey in 1950 when he presented her with a citation. In 1956 she became part of the first delegation of American women to visit San Jose, Costa Rica, as part of the first Pan-American Conference for Women.

Cited as the Syracuse "Post-Standard's" Woman of Achievement in Education in 1960, Dean Smith also led her local chapter of Zonta and the SU Faculty Women's Club. She has been active in the local Girl Scout council and on the School of Nursing committee of Syracuse General Hospital.

In her years as Dean of Women, Dean Smith has seen many changes in the life of the SU coed. After an AWS battle in 1966, curfews were extended to 2 a.m. Friday and Saturday and midnight on Sunday. Since then Dean Smith's administration has approved the passage of the honor dorm, parietal hours, optional hours, and, most recently, 24-hour visiting hours.

As chief advisor to SU's feminine population, Dean Smith has often found herself opposed by her constituents, represented

As chief advisor to SU's feminine population, Dean Smith has often found herself opposed by her constituents, represented by AWS. During a 1966 AWS-dean of women dispute concerning the dean's jurisdiction over curfews, she stated: "To make any progress toward changes or extensions of jurisdiction, there must be more dialogue and procedures established."

The conflict caused Dean Smith to further declare' "There is no antipathy between AWS and us–it's a matter of defining lines." So the lines were defined, with the dean declaring that her office is concerned with security and responsibility for the women students on this campus, while AWS is concerned with privileges.

Since then the responsibilities of the dean of women's office have branched out into new fields of concern for the coed. The recent issue of dorm autonomy found Dean Smith, along with the dean of men, delaying action on IDC-approved dorms. The times have certainly changed, and the issues along with them, throughout Dean Smith's administration.

TONIGHT
Dellplains sponsors
a
BEER BLAST with the Page 1
and free beer
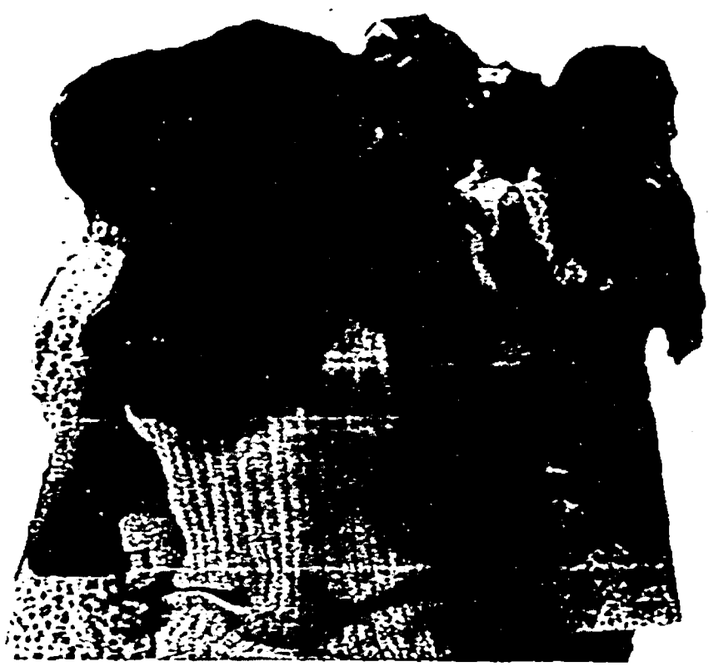
Admission $1.00
All Girls — Free
All Dellplain residents free
Place — Kimmel Hall
Time — Friday Night, May 16
8:30 — 1:30

formerly Gricco's Salon Reaux
UMBERTO
Salon Boutique
The look doesn't just happen — it's put together with spirit and directed at every inch of girl — try all sorts of things — then try us —
422-1666 - SALON
422-9500 - BOUTIQUE
302 S. Warren St.
Open 6 days 3 evenings

The quality of undergraduate education at SU



EDITOR'S NOTE: The Daily Orange deems it most appropriate now to examine the progress we have made this year in reforming and improving the structures and programs that affect the quality of undergraduate education. The following stories deal with several of the blatant inadequacies--the frosh curriculum, the advisory system and the ubiquitous teaching assistant--the student and faculty opinion on the proposed black curriculum and five perspectives from clearly differing SU professors and deans.

In the beginning...

By HOWARD MANDEL

For freshmen beginning their college career by planning their first year program, the current curriculum hardly seems to conform with the dreams of academic freedom they may have conjured up while in high school. "The normal Freshman program is from 30-32 hours in addition to Physical Education or ROTC," states the Syracuse University College of Liberal Arts Student Requirement Sheet.

"To meet Primary Group requirements the student will take English (unless notified of special exemption) and choose additional courses from four out of five groups... for Secondary Group Requirements, the student continues in four groups."

Most freshmen opt to get rid of their primary and secondary group requirements as soon as possible. This means they may have as few as one elective in their first two years at Syracuse University.

Educate where ignorant

What is the value of the program as it is now set up? "The issue is a broad-minded and liberal education versus a narrow-minded and restrictive one," Dean Alfred Cope of the College of Liberal Arts, says. "One of the roles of the University is to educate people in areas in which they are ignorant. Many complaints about the freshman cirriculum and the group requirements are a matter of appetite outrunning capacity."

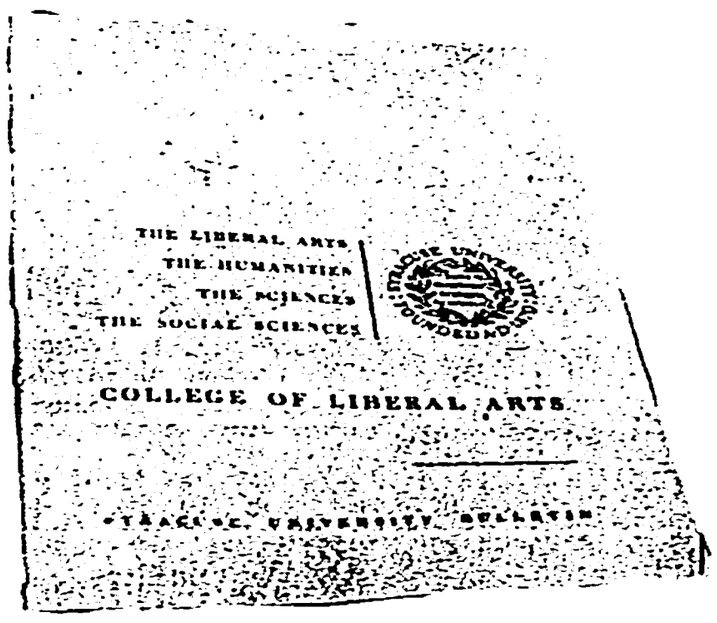
Dean Cope feels that the exposure to a large number of disciplines is helpful towards success in the field finally chosen by the freshman for concentration.

He also approves of the current system because of its complexity and flexibility.

"You graduate with 120 hours," he explains. "The manimum number of hours applied to group requirements are 54. That leaves 66 hours for majors and electives. Now, out of the 54, 12 hours are taken in the area of the student's major. That leaves 42."

He continues to mention that many students come to Syracuse with Advanced Placement exemptions, and many more have taken more than two years of a foreign language, or can apply their high school math towards fulfilling part of the group requirements.

"Elementary, superficial, of little value"



"We in the University must investigate how we can most effectively get the freshmen and sophomore students involved with college level work," James H. Powell, associate professor of history, says. He recognizes the present commitment to general education as preparation and provision for a broad background, but wonders whether the Syracuse system is the best approach.

He feels that if for some, the introductory courses are elementary, superficial and of little value, while for others they may be most valuable experience. Basically, he wonders whether earlier, perhaps at the beginning of the sophomore year.

"There is merit in the idea that college courses in some disciplines are much different at the college level than at the high school," Dr. Powell says. "But there is also merit in the idea that not everyone has to be exposed to the same disciplines in order to be truly educated."

Need for updating

"There can be a more imaginative approach than we have shown up to the present. We have been laboring for a long time under the throes of education as it was approached in the 1920's and 1930's, the concept of general education, that every student should be something of a universalist at the college level. But chiefly through the development of the larger high school, modern high schools have met with some success in providing for general education, on a level which promotes some awareness of the complexity of the world, if not perhaps at a level equal in sophistication with college."

Clyde L. Hardin, associate professor of philosophy and advisor to the Honors Program, believes there is more flexibility in the present scheme than most students believe, citing as an example that only about one third of the entering class next fall will take freshman English. He is also excited about new ways of fulfilling requirements, such as a 9 hour, two semester inter- disciplinary course with guest lecturers that the Liberal Arts college will be offering next year.

Improvements sought

"Much of the complaints should be leveled less at the

(Continued on Page 13)

The 'teaching' assistant?

By DONNA JACOBS

Armed with about $2,000 and little or no teaching experience, most of the current 1,000 teaching assistants advance towards their graduate degrees at SU.

$2,000 ($200/month) stretches thinly over rent, food, living expenses (and such optionals as car payments and upkeep, family expenses, books and travel). Where it leaves holes, a working wife or moonlighting may patch them.

A teaching assistant, distinguished over the campus by his briefcase and perhaps conservative clothing, is in a line of crossfire. Time and money are behind the guns--his time, the University's money and the undergraduates money and expectations.

Time: his own career schedule urges him to complete his course work and thesis or dissertation as soon as possible.

His contract says divide your time between teaching and your own work, with roughly 20 hours a week devoted to teaching activities.

The University's money: there isn't a great deal available as witnessed by undergraduate tuition increases over the past five years from $51 to $70 per credit hour, and $750 to $1,050 per semester.

Swap teaching for degrees

Without teaching assistants the University would be hard put to keep its head above water trying to educate the same number of students employing professors only. Therefore teaching assistants lighten the financial burden by rendering teaching services in exchange for their degrees and simultaneously receive experience as instructors.

The undergraduate's money: the freshman comes to college wanting at least two things for his money; one, interesting courses and two, proficient, stimulating professors.

Instead he finds over half his class hours are taught by graduate assistants, frequently inexperienced as instructors.

Money matters most

The University's shoestring budget has been laced so tightly that increasing graduates' stipends has meant a reduced number of assistants could be accepted into graduate programs.

As a result, stipends have remained relatively static over the past five years.

Explaining the University's financial position, Victor J. Colway, vice president for business management, said the University as a service industry is having a difficult time adapting to inflation because its output and product are people and cannot be cut back as can production in hardward industries.

Colway said, however, that for the 1969-1970 year, teaching assistant stipends would be increased. He didn't specity the amount.

Current stipends are in some cases below those offered by universities with comparable facilities. An example would be the Maxwell School where stipends range from $1,900 to $2,100. In a study done by a doctoral candidate in economics at SU, published in the spring 1968 issue of the "Maxwell Review," SU ranked lowest in its group of eight other universities with academically comparable graduate degrees in the social sciences. In most cases, SU stipends were below those in schools with poorer academic facilities than ours.

Tuition profit at $6,011

The mathematics of teaching assistantships speaks for itself as a great financial saying to the University.

Suppose an assistant teaches two classes of 20 students each for a three credit course. The University takes in $7,560 with $63 per credit hour as a base. It pays out about $1,000 that semester for the stipend of the assistant and $549 in free tuition since each graudate is given nine credit hours free each semester. In most cases the graduate credit hour is $2 less than the undergraduate, so the base is $61.

The "profit" on the basis of tuition is $6,011 from the one teaching assistant.

Research has priority

There are several reasons for the few professors who actually teach lower division courses. First, they too are interested in research and specialization since their promotion, recognition, presitge and mobility rest upon the amount and quality of their publications. Upper division courses come closer to their own interests and areas of study.

"Professors are interested in junior senior and graduate courses. You can't keep a professor if you force him to teach lower division courses unless it's a small percentage of the total teaching burden," said Dr. James Harrison, executive for Graduate Programs. He feels that the reason graduate assistants are employed is in a large part due to professors' pressure

(Continued on Page 13)

'Man without a country'

By LEE IRWIN

Michael Dunay is, of course, a foreign student. His name, his face, his voice and his surprising height show this without anyone's asking.

But there is a difference.

Even a simple question like, "Where are you from?" presents a problem. Duany was born near the town of Akobo in Southern Sudan; but there is no such place. That's the difference. Akobo is there, all right (or at least it was there). But "Southern Sudan" is officially an integral part of the Sudan. So it doesn't exist.

There is a government; but you won't find it in a parliament building. It, like Duany, is in exile. There is an army; but you won't find it on a parade ground. It is deep in the equatorial bush. There is even a name Azania; but you won't find it on the map. It is in the hearts of the Southern Sudanese.

Duany was born some time about 1938 or so (no one wrote it down at the time).

In those days the British administered the country, and they required that his father send a son to school as an example to the other people. His father was not strongly opposed anyway, since a cousin had already gone to school and had become a medical assistant. And so Duany left his family and went to a Presbyterian mission boarding school at Wanglel. There he started the difficult task of learning strange new subjects in a strange new language - English.

He managed it well enough to pass on to the government intermediate school in Atar. But there his life changed abruptly. In 1956, the British withdrew from the Sudan, granting it independence and leaving over 800 vacancies in the government and civil services.

Laws were passed closing mission schools (almost the only ones in the South) and requiring teachers in all schools to pass proficiency tests in Arabic - a language few of the Southerners knew. As a result, great numbers of them lost their jobs.

MICHAEL DUANY, who graduates as an international relations major this June, left his native Southern Sudan after being called a "subversive" by the North Sudanese government.

Duany and other students protested. Stones were thrown. The police came. Duany and seven friends were taken from the school and sent to a "reformatory" far from home in the North. He was kept there for two years learning Arabic, having the Government's position toward the South "explained," and being reformed.

Duany returned to his family for a year to help with the farming and cattle herding. But he sensed that he could help out more by continuing his education. So he left his family for the last time and went to high school in Omdurman.

Upon graduation in 1962, he went to Khartoum to work as a youth officer for the Christian Literacy Center, a library and recreation center.

Thwarted twice and branded as a subversive, Duany decided to join the growing flow of Southern refugees to neighboring African countries. And so he left for Ethiopia, where he found work as a librarian for the Lutheran radio station, Voice of the Gospel. Further reverses quickly ended this opportunity.

Word came that Akobo had been attacked and burnt to the ground in retaliation for a guerrilla raid on a police post. Duany headed for the Ethiopia-Sudan border to look for relatives among the refugee survivors. But just then the Sudan Government signed an extradition agreement with Ethiopia which would oblige him to return to the Sudan and the police.

Instead, he received permission to go south to Kenya. Without a job and without a passport, Duany found himself unwelcome among East African countries already suffering the strain of a constant stream of refugees. But he stayed there long enough to become an officer of the Azania Liberation Front and to win a scholarship to the U.S.

After a six month preparation at Lincoln College, Michael Duany came to Syracuse. In two weeks he will graduate with a major in International Relations.

The modern mariner — his rimes

By JOAN BERKES

As the typical freshman progresses through freshman English, his dominant concern is probably passing and never taking another English course again as long as he lives.

Try to tell him SU has some amazing English professors and he just may think you're crazy.

Professor George P. Elliott, who teaches Shakespeare and fiction writing, has to his credit three novels, two collections of short stories, one book of poetry, a collection of essays and eight or nine years of reviewing for various magazines. He has also recently completed a play, the product of about three-and-one-half years of work.

GEORGE P. ELLIOTT, poet, critic and novelist, has been teaching at SU since 1963. In addition to teaching a popular Shakespeare course, Dr. Elliott is currently engaged in writing a narrative poem entitled, "The Permitted Wife."

When asked what stimulated his desire to write, Professor Elliott replied: "When I was 12 I read the "Rime of the Ancient Mariner," and I decided I was going to do that, too."

Freedom and authority

One of Professor Elliott's favorite themes is "the whole question of freedom, law, and authority, and the question of governing and how to do it adequately.

"Lack of freedom is terrible, but too much freedom is worse. There is always a tug of war between freedom and equality, and authority and responsibility.

"Automatic rejection of authority is just as absurd as automatic submission. This whole set of questions I find endlessly fascinating."

The problems these questions present are reflected in Professor Elliott's concern over the modern application of such ancient conflicts. He sees the manifestation of these problems not only in formal government, but also in the more familiar dealings of living, such as child-raising and husband-wife relationships. His short stories often deal with these topics.

Campus unrest

He views campus disturbances and the general dissatisfaction around the country as stemming in part from the handling of authority. Cornell, for example, was "very badly governed. The people running it were not giving adequate connections to the people being governed, especially Blacks." The administration, he believes, was "too rigid and too remote."

However, "terrible blowups, like those at Columbia and Berkeley, are more damaging than anything, especially when they could have been avoided."

On a larger scale, Professor Elliott's opinion of President Nixon was expressed by wordless moaning. "We are," he feels, "being governed badly," adding that the quality of leadership has been undergoing a steady descent. However, he observes: "I don't see rebelling as being all that lively. The art of rebelling has been advanced a lot more than the art of governing. People should think more of governing than rebelling."

Professor Elliott views drugs as another form of rebelling. Smoking marijuana, he believes, is mostly an expression of social rebellion - getting pleasure from something illegal instead of something legal, like alcohol. The strong drugs "cut you off from people, and this seems to me to be hell."

The situation at Syracuse, as far as governing and rebelling go, is on the whole optimistic. The administration was "not too rigid to allow change." Students and faculty are now participating in administration, and this, Professor Elliott thinks, is healthy. "Now," he feels, "it is possible for Student Government to mean something."

Likes SU best

From a teaching point of view, Proffessor Elliott says, "I like it better here than any other place I've ever taught. The university is low pressure, it leaves you alone to your work. I like my colleagues, and I find the students agreeable." Besides these aspects, Syracuse is an "ordinary American city." He does not miss the tensions and pressures of a large city.

Some problems he sees in the university include a lack of money, which affects the English department in its staffing - he recognizes a shortage of teachers as one of the departments shortcomings. As for our freshman who was in dire dread of taking more English courses, Professor Elliott considers it a "pity that freshman English has to exist - everybody hates it. I would like to see schools teach students how to write so it wouldn't be necessary." Smaller classes and a combination of writing instruction and literary appreciation would be improvements, but such a change requires money.

Professor Elliott received his B.A. and M.A. degrees from Berkeley. Before coming to Syracuse he taught at St. Mary's College in California, Cornell, Barnard and the Writer's Workshop in Iowa. He enjoys teaching, claiming, "If I had all the money in the world, I would still want to teach a little bit.

"The way I prefer to spend a day is to get up in the morning and read some poetry and then write." He usually prepares his classes at night, writes for about three hours in the morning, and teaches classes in the afternoon.

Present projects

Professor Elliott is currently working on a narrative poem entitled "The Permitted Wife." He is also concerned with his play; he has a couple of possibilities for it, but nothing definite. Titled "Michael of Byzantium," it is a tragedy set somewhere in the middle ages about a man who becomes the emperor of Byzantium and a representative of Christ on earth. At the same time, however, he is having a love affair with a pagan queen. The play deals with "how he ends up destroying himself with this conflict."

His collection of poetry, "From the Berkeley Hills," came out in January, although the poems in it range over 25 years in origin. He admits to being best known for his short stories, however. The two collections are called Among the Dangs and An Hour of Last Things.

As Professor Elliott puts it, "That's all I do in life is words."

Blacks seeking change; debate stirred on how

By MARGARET GENOVESE

Syracuse University will have a Black Studies program fall semester in the College of Liberal Arts. Dean of the college, Frederic J. Kramer announced plans for the new program Wednesday. A black student calls it "a pacifier," and says, "If there had not been a show of force, in maybe 10, 15 or 20 years the university might have thrown it out as whites so often throw lollipops, but we can't wait 10, 15 or 20 years."

For Syracuse University, the show of black force came on March 14, a Friday afternoon, with clubs and chants and demands made outside the administration building. It hadn't been expected and it found many administrators away from their offices.

Subsequent meetings were held and black students aired their various grievances. This demonstration of approximately 200 black students in front of the administration building followed closely on a show of black unity at the Syracuse-Niagra basketball game on February 27 at Manley Field House. A statement issued at that time said the silent vigil during the playing of the National Anthem was "in protest of the racist attitudes existing in Syracuse University, as well as in the community... We stand united as black students."

United, black students believe they have found the channel for implementing change at Syracuse University. Byron Merritt, a junior political science major and a member of Spearhead, a coalition of the black student groups on campus, explained, "The present structures to implement change are the primary reason the blacks are as powerless as they are, be it on college campuses or within the black community. We realize at this point that the present structures are not responsive to our needs nor to the problems that face black people as a group. We realize that we must utilize whatever power or whatever means are available to us, to have changes made so that we can be about the business of improving ourselves."

Programs proposed

The "business" at Syracuse now will revolve around the Black Studies program. According to Dean Kramer, the student—faculty committee on black studies within the College of Liberal Arts reported favorably on the concept of black studies at Syracuse. He said, "there is a recommendation that has been passed by the Curriculum Committee and the faculty of the College of Liberal Arts that a black studies program be inaugurated this fall and further that the mechanism be created to plan for a black studies department." The faculty-curriculum committee vote came Monday; the matter now must go to the University Senate.

Dean Kramer outlined the prospective program: two courses in Afro-American history, two courses in the history of Africa, a seminar in the history of East Africa, a sociology course dealing with ethnic minorities, a seminar in the political science department dealing with America's urban politics and an economic course on the economic activity in the black community. Dean Kramer also said courses in the schools of Social Work and Education will relate to the program as will the current black literature course, the student Black and White in America class and the public affairs courses. The program will be open to both black and white students.

A member of the faculty-student committee, sociology professor Howard Taylor said, "white students would benefit to a greater degree than the black students. White students must be encouraged, not only permitted to take this course." He pointed up divergent views on campuses concerning black culture and black studies. "Blacks already know quite a bit about it," he said.

Dr. Willie comments

Professor Charles V. Willie, chairman of the sociology department takes the view that the program will be an experiment in reciprocity. "Any black studies program organized by any university must be available for all students because all students need it, black and white." He added, "all students should be encouraged to study black studies and study together."

Defending black studies as a distinct entity, Willie said, "the world needs the perspectives of many people who have had different experiences. This means that black people may be able to make their greatest contribution to the United States by sharing some of their unique experiences in coping with adversity and oppression. It is indeed possible that black students may want to deepen their knowledge by studying black history. It is a mistake to think that all black people understand their history because of their race."

Black priority?

In a discussion of the black role in the University, black students form six organizations on campus expressed a third view—that the Black Studies program should benefit the black primarily.

D.J. Harrell, a sophomore and a member of United Society, an organization of black athletes on campus, said, "It is the black student who must have the compensation work done. True, the white student may very well profit by these courses, but this is not the main objective. The black student needs to know more about himself so he can be a fuller person."

Merritt, who also belongs to the House of Lords, a black social group, explained that a dual major in Black Studies is hoped for. "In regard to the idea that blacks really need to seek the higher skills, the higher education, we agree to that 100 per cent.

"We consider the seeking of these skills extremely important in that we consider ourselves about the task of nation building. However, because of the lack of the educational process in the elementary and secondary levels we feel that a definite and concerted effort needs to be made to make this information available."

The pivotal consideration becomes, in terms of black studies, a finding of identity but not in terms of, or within the white community.

Denying a pre-defined role

"One of the fundamental problems facing black students on college campuses today is that we realize that we have been predefined, a role has already been set aside for us to play and although this is 1969, people still have their "place," Merritt explained. "The black college student is offered the educational advantages of the system, is offered the opportunity to procure a high paying job and, in this respect, his "place" tends to become the alienated middle class. However, this does no tremendous good whatsoever for the rest of the black race. In viewing the problems of blacks that exist in oppressive and racist societies we realize that we must make fundamental changes in the structure if the black race as a whole is to rise and improve itself. We are in the process of a new definition in terms of ourselves; we are defining what the black role will be; we are defining what black manhood is. We do not want to be a Negro middle class."

Weekend activites

"Black Awareness Weekend" will celebrate the achievements of blacks at Syracuse University to date. At 2:30 this afternoon the Black Culture Center at 104 Walnut Place will open. Sponsored by United Society, the center, according to member Harrell, "is for the purpose of creating a black awareness, a black atmosphere." The center will feature two permanent art galleries, one a black America art gallery, the other featuring African art. Classes will be given in instrument-making and jazz workshops will be conducted.

Omega Psi Phi, a national fraternity comprised primarily of blacks, and the social-service oriented House of Lords fill in gaps that black students have found in the social side of Syracuse University. Thomas Smith, a junior and a brother of Omega Psi Phi said the fraternity's "main purpose on this campus is to offer black males an alternative to the white fraternity system, the Greek system."

"IT IS THE BLACK STUDENT who needs the compensation work done" is the view of D.J. Harrell, member of United Society, an organization of black athletes.

Blacks at Syracuse say they are not satisfied with a Black Studies program and will push for a Black Studies department. Merritt said, "what we are attempting to do is to take control of our communities, or the resources that we have and to improve ourselves." At Syracuse, the emphasis is on redefinition of role, a uniquely black role, within a primarily black organizational structure seeking no acceptance from the white power structure but rather response.

In a recent article in "Harper's Magazine," Peter Shrag referred to the search for a black identity and heritage in this way:

"The American Negro, in other words, is supposed to turn himself into an African so that he can become a Jew and thereby transform himself into a WASP." Black students at Syracuse University have denied that model, denied that the goal is to turn black to white, or even try.

CHARLES V. WILLIE, chairman of the sociology department, sees the new Black Studies program as an experiment in reciprocity.

Syracuse professors speak out on:

Inflexible university systems

My complaints about Syracuse would be pretty much general complaint about universities. I don't think that Syracuse is particularly in fault in things; I suppose one of the things that makes it look that way is that there is not as much money here as other places. The problems, though, are about the same.

Universities can't change: they're part of society and society needs to change, but it's not doing it. As long as the present system goes on, the university becomes a sort of middle class preserve – everybody's comfortable, everybody is making a lot of rules to protect themselves; trustees are about 100 years back, administrators are about 50 years back, faculties are about 20 years back, and students are about 20 years back.

WILLIAM P. MANGIN

The war in Vietnam is one of the main things behind what people call 'unrest.' We're fooling around elsewhere, spending billions of dollars on all this nonsense, and it's only now that people are beginning to talk about it.

Public and private is a funny distinction. Private industries get billions of dollars from the government; that's public money going to a private company and yet people don't look at it that way. I don't see why Syracuse shouldn't get as much money for a student entering from New York State as a state university. I don't see why that's such a big jump for people to make, that the state should support private universities.

We get locked in; everybody has to go to school for so many years. They're all tied to these degrees and departments. These were all things that were put into medieval universities for who knows what reasons. The system is completely inflexible.

There's a tremendous emphasis on students going on to Ph.D. programs. But if you think of the main purpose of a university as being to gear all your courses so that the only one who is going to get the most out of these courses is someone who's going to be a professional in that field, that's a great disservice, to the community in general as well as yourself. I think there should be more emphasis on special training programs and programs that people want.

I think the university should be very much involved in the community; I think there ought to be some kind of program where students can get credit for working and finding out what the city's all about. It's alright to sit in a library and read and listen to people, but students also ought to be finding out what's going on.

I don't want to single out Syracuse; I don't think Syracuse is uniquely at fault in any of these things. It's probably better than a lot of other places. We have a remarkably good faculty. When you look at comparable places in terms of finances and status in general, the faculty here is very good.

Student concern for society

The academic year 1968-69 probably will be called the Year of Student Impatience. Conceivably it also will be called the Year of Administration Reaction and of Faculty Indecision; but it seems reasonable to hope that these latter titles may not be so much in order. In any case, the meaning of this year must be as much in the future as in what has happened so far.

The great good that has so far occurred has been the stirring up of the University, at Syracuse as elsewhere, to think about the job it is doing for the wider society. Students have correctly perceived that the University is the reflection of that society, that it perpetuates the society's structures and commitments, and that it is in their experience the most clearly vulnerable point at which to launch effective criticism. One does not have to agree with any of the specific criticisms which students offer to be convinced that the educational process gains tremendously by the challenge to the University to say what it is doing in society and how that is being done.

Of course the tactics of forcible seizure of buildings and of interrupting classes are deplorable and may require the employment of legal counter-force. But resort to such tactics has not yet occurred at Syracuse, and it surely will not occur if effective communication can be maintained (as it was during the Boycott) on the many proper topics of student concern. I do not believe that we are likely to change very much the assignment of functions as between administration, faculty and students, provided we can keep really clear and vital our understanding of those functions. I am not inclined to think that real student self-government is much advanced by having students act like trustees, or administrators, or faculty.

But I think that such self-government is advanced by an effective process of consultation which involves a steady process of student participation. Students are bound - as students - to complain better than they can construct; and this is why their complaints should be heard and encouraged.

DONALD P. MEIKLEJOHN

Student 'games'--political vs. intellectual

I am particularly concerned by the fact that students are showing a lack of motivation. I think they are concentrating too much on politics and not on their courses.

I used to hear students years ago say, 'My courses don't interest me.' Now they're saying, 'My courses are not relevant to our problems today.' They don't use the term 'motivation' but 'irrelevance.' I wish they would supply me with some criteria of irrelevance.

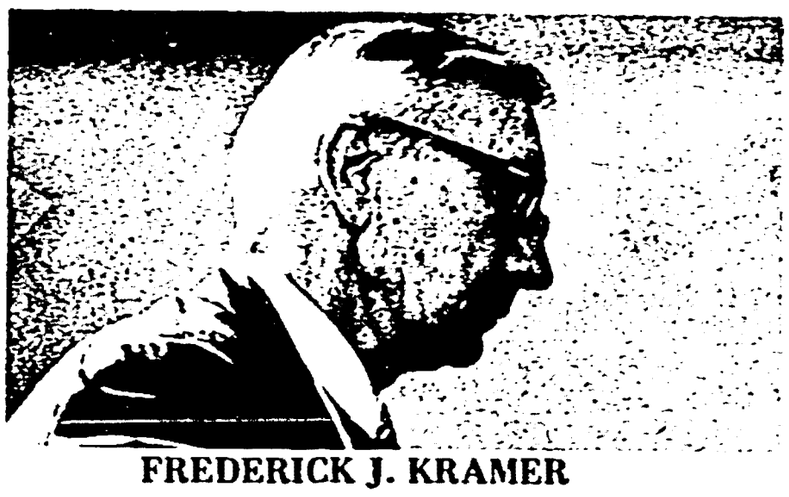
Maybe the whole problem is that they don't understand the purpose of a university. Certainly they shouldn't use the university as a stepping stone for political purposes.

I suspect also that there are a number of students who don't know why they are here. They don't know why they have to take certain courses, and how do you make them see the importance? If they have to go about asking why, there is something lacking in their makeup – curiosity, perhaps.

After all, a man is only on this earth for some 75 years; if he has to ask why he should be learning these things, he's lacking something.

I wish students would stop political games and start playing intellectual games. They often say that we don't have an intellectual atmosphere here. But what is an intellectual atmosphere? Is it a building you find and go into, or is it something you help create?

While they are still in the university, students should still have ideals, but when they begin this political maneuvering, they've already developed a cynical attitude, and I think this is improper in a young person. They've grown old too fast in their lives; they take things too seriously while they still have so much promise in front of them. They should be excited and gay and looking forward to life instead of somber and depressed before their lives have even begun.



SHELDON P. PETERFREUND

That's just one side of it. Another is the size the university is attaining, and this presents a problem in communication between the students and the faculty and administration. In some cases – as I suspect happened at Berkeley – there is almost no touch between faculty and students. I don't think this is typical at Syracuse, though.

I agree that dissent is necessary, but disruption is another thing. I think that the administration had heeded the words of the students. A university cannot and should not operate in terms of demands; it can only operate in terms of rational exchange between students and faculty and administration.

I think that the quality of courses given at Syracuse is as a whole quite high; I think the faculty that teaches these courses is generally quite good. I think a lot of students are dissatisfied here because they didn't get into the institution they wanted, but what they fail to realize is that the teachers and courses are of the same quality.

I'm not suggesting that there is anything radically wrong with the students. I will admit that the immensity may contribute to some of the problems that plague us, but if a student becomes annonymous or just a statistic, I think it lies in part with the student, that he doesn't try to make it otherwise. The students are active, but in the political exchange, not in intellectual matters.

FREDERICK J. KRAMER

Specious demands for life as 'outside'

When one considers the quality of undergraduate education today, one can quickly come to the conclusion that it should be at an all time high. Professors are better trained, a larger percentage of them hold the doctorate, and many have specialized in areas of knowledge that were unknown even twenty years ago. The number and variety of course offerings at a modern university represent an extraordinary richness. Physical facilities are better, laboratories more sophisticated, library holdings greater. In addition, we think we know more about how students learn and how we should teach. There is a minor technological revolution in instructional media.

In spite of all this, it is not clear that undergraduate education has improved in all areas. or for all students. The reasons are very obvious. Above all, there is ambiguity in the minds of many students about the purpose of education and the reasons for being at the University. The primary purpose, of course, is the cultivation of the mind. In this sense the undergraduate years must be referred to as years of preparation, although many are impatient with this concept and demand that the university be a replica of life 'outside.' Such students place a high premium on experience, on 'living' and on activity, especially political activity. Still others are in attendance only because it is expected of them, or because they think society demands it, or to avoid other obligations. For many such students who find most knowledge 'irrelevant,' it is doubtful that the quality of their education reaches anything approximating optimum levels.

Nevertheless, I believe that most undergraduates are indeed serious about the quality of their education and that their education, imperfect though it is, represents superior quality. For example, approximately 1/3 of the students in the College of Liberal Arts achieved a B average or better this past semester. I am not sure that this 'proves' anything, but it suggests that there are many serious students and faculty involved with their principal tasks of learning and teaching.

Seeking dignified, meaningful lives

This has truly been the year that was.

The purposes that have been vigorously advanced at universities, largely by students, are magnificent. They include an increased emphasis on idealism as opposed to materialism, a concern for meaningful participation in the life of the University community, support for the just aspirations of the blacks at the University and the disadvantaged everywhere, and a determination that there shall be a life of meaning and dignity rather than a technological system of impersonal imputs and outputs.

The great test that is still with us is whether we can move fast enough and imaginatively enough toward those goals so that we avoid damaging the very bases of existence of a university--a climate of reason, a willingness to consider contrary to fact hypotheses, and a tradition of civility.

Of late I have been reminded more and more of the wisdom of the constitutional fathers who sought to set up a continuing peaceful revolution which would proceed with concern for the rights of all. And there also is the wisdom of the father of the founding fathers, William Penn, who said, "Whatever be the form there is free government wherever the laws, rule and the people are a party to those laws, and more than this is tyranny, oligarchy and confusion."

MICHAEL O. SAWYER

SU-community relations

Head Start: Joint effort yields mixed views

By BOB ZUER
Associate Editor

Everyday is an "educational happening" for the three and four year old children in the Syracuse School District Special Projects' Pre-Kindergarten program.

The program operates on the basis that child development is most important during the first five years of a child's life. The pre-kindergarten program was designed to help disadvantaged children form correct patterns of response to stimuli from their environment.

There are 10 centers, including the Syracuse University Nursery School, 724 Comstock Ave., dispersed throughout the Syracuse area. The Bureau of Child Development And Parent Education is funding seven of the centers as a Demonstration Project under Special Projects, Syracuse School District. One center is funded under Title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act. Two programs are funded under special state urban aid. The program runs the full 10 months of the public school calendar.

During the interim summer period, many of the children attend Head Start centers. Summer Head Start for inner city five-year-olds was administered under the pre-kindergarten program for the first time last summer.

EDITOR'S NOTE: An often debated question which relates directly to the quality of SU's educational programs is the role the University should play in the Syracuse community. SU is now involved in the controversy surrounding Head Start's efficacy and is taking part in local debate.

Funding Programs

Head Start is entirely funded from grants of the federal government and has been sharply criticized lately for its alleged inadequacies. Conclusions reached by the Westinghouse Learning Corporation and Ohio University in a study they made between June, 1968 and March, 1969 indicate that poor children who participated in Head Start programs were not appreciably better off than equally disadvantaged youngsters who did not.

Though not a part of Head Start, the pre-kindergarten program uses the same basic teaching approaches, according to Mrs. Hannah L. Hayman, an instructional specialist for pre-kindergarten and supervisor of instruction for Head Start. This report, therefore, might cause some feelings of apprehension about both programs here.

Mrs. Hayman contends there has not been enough time to evaluate the Head Start program here since last year was the first time it was administered under the auspices of the Syracuse School District. In addition the program only lasted six weeks. But a study made by the district of the pre-kindergarten program indicated as an average participants gained four to five I.Q. points, she added.

Proposed Move to HEW

The Westinghouse report, which recommended basic changes in Head Start, is being used by the White House to bolster President Nixon's plan to move Head Start from the Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO) to the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW). Under terms of its contract with OEO, Westinghouse attempted to measure the extent to which children in the first, second and third grades who had attended Head Start preschool programs differed "in their intellectual and socio-personal development from comparable children who did not attend."

Prof.. William T. Meyer of SU's Psychology Department who works closely with both the pre-kindergarten and Head Start programs downtown, lashed out at the report and Nixon's plans to place Head Start under the direction of HEW, calling it a purely "political move." Taking Head Start out of OEO will put the money into hands that can manipulate it for political leverage, he contended. Control of funds would permit certain individuals to do whatever they wanted.

The report did find, however, that the year round programs had at least a marginal impact on poor children but the summer programs were "wholly ineffective in improving cognitive and affective development."

Facilities Limited

Mrs. Hayman feels the area should have a year round Head Start program in addition to pre-kindergarten. Currently pre-kindergarten accommodates slightly over 400 students. They are selected on a first come first serve basis because of limited funds, according to Mrs. Hayman. Limited facilities also hamper expansion of the program. Many of the children who miss out on the pre-kindergarten program might be able to qualify for the Head Start program if it were expanded, she said.

Meyer criticized the report for not going deep enough nor far enough. "It's premature to make social decisions about negative results," he said.

There are also decided biological variables that influence intellectual development. according to Meyer. Malnutrition in infants is known to retard intellectual development. Meyer compares this with a child who is biologically deficient in two vitamins. Because there is no appreciable change in his development, even though he is receiving injections of one, is no reason to cut off the injections, he contends. Instead, research has to be done until the other deficiency can be found and corrected.

Another thing the report fails to mention, according to Mrs. Hayman, is that "Head Start means parent involvement." In a study entitled, "Compilation of Head Start Research," by Edith Grotberg for the educational research organization ERIC, indicated that the more often parents get involved in programs like this, the more often a child's IQ will rise. Head Start parents here play an important role as advisors in choosing teachers and aides and helping set up other local aspects of the program.

Because Head Start is a new program, there has been a lot of experimenting to find new and more effective ways to improve the development of these disadvantaged youngsters, Mrs. Hayman admitted. "But because it is not perfect doesn't necessarily mean it should be dropped."

So while the debate over the political future of Head Start continues in the executive and legislative branches of government in Washington, locally debate will continue on the best ways to improve the educational function of the program which local administrators apparently feel is worth keeping.

Advisors: An 'impossible dream'?

"THE ADVISORS, IN TOO MANY CASES, FAIL TO OUTLINE A STUDENT'S COURSE OF STUDIES SO THAT HE UNDERSTANDS HIS NECESSARY REQUIREMENTS AND POSSIBLE ELECTIVES. BECAUSE OF SUCH INEFFICIENCY, IT'S A WONDER THAT STUDENTS STILL MEET WITH THEIR ADVISORS."

BY KAY CHRISTENSEN
Associate Editor

Although the advisory system at SU has not been revamped for next year, two new facets will be involved which should help the efficacy of the system.

For the first time, head residents and resident advisors will be invited to the initial academic advisory convocation to receive general information. In this manner, they will be able to tell questioning freshmen – and other undergraduates – who to see, where to go, etc., for basic academic advice.

The second improvement in the advisory system is the inclusion of departmental letters into new students' packets which outline freshman courses. Thus, each frosh who has designated a major area of study will easily understand his first year of courses for which to register.

Although these two new facets of the advisory system should add efficiency to the system, will it make a worthwhile, effective one?

It is doubtful. Unfortunately, the system has so many flaws that--in the eyes of the undergraduates--it is in need of complete overhaul.

"I think the advising system is a big farce. I have no faith in it all," commented a graduating senior. And her view is typical of most students on the SU campus.

The reason for this perspective is not merely speculative rumor, either. Most students are speaking from experience.

Complaints Pervasive

One co-ed, for instance, was told by her advisor that a particular course was required for her sequence. After registering for the course, she wasn't allowed in the classroom by the teacher because she had already met the requirement with another course. Consequently, she had to go through the drop and add sequence to change courses.

Surprisingly enough, however, only 1.7 percent of the drop-add courses is the result of mis-advising, according to a University survey.

Others complain that many times a whole freshman year is wasted due to mis-advising. The advisors, in too many cases, fail to outline a student's course of studies so that he understands his necessary requirements and possible electives. Because of such inefficiency, it's a wonder that students still meet with their advisors.

A senior nursing student, for example, has not seen her advisor since her freshman year. Although she admits that the nursing program is fairly well outlined so that not much advising is necessary, whenever she needs advice, she merely seeks out someone whom she knows is interested and will be helpful. She claims that this system works "very well."

Probably one of the biggest complaints is the time involved just to see one's advisor for five full minutes. Most students complain that it takes several hours just to find their advisor, then a few more hours waiting in line–all just for a five minute interview, where he merely signs the DOS card for registration.

Dearth of Expertise

It's not true that all the advisors do not share any interest in the student's predicament, but it is true that the advisors are not adequately prepared to help the students. Even when they show a sincere effort to help, they merely consult the catalogue and read just what anybody else can read. Usually they offer no extra assistance as far as content of course, but they do check to see if students are filling requirements and pre-requisites.

It is difficult to imagine that SU's advisory system is so ineffective–or rather, lacks a student mandate--when so much time, which can be translated into thousands of dollars, is involved. The red tape, however, which is typical of SU, is predictable.

Dean Alfred H. Cope re-evaluates and updates the advisory system each year.

"There will never be perfection in advising, particularly at Syracuse," said Dean Cope. This is due to the fact that there are over 100 courses for the freshmen to choose from.

ON THE SURFACE, it seems that face-to-face communication that is both profitable and meaningful to the student prevails. More often than not, however, students and their advisors are misguiede, misinformed and mismatched.

For comparison, Dean Cope noted that only 17 courses are available for frosh at the University of Wisconsin, which, or course, eliminates much of the necessity of advising. Dean Cope admits that such a reduction could be made at SU, "but the courses wouldn't fit the students as well which would increase the flunk-out rate." SU's over-all flunk-out rate has decreased from 10.2 percent in 1958 to 4.7 percent in 1966.

Advising Procedure

SU's system of advising begins with the frosh as soon as they complete their Admit Cards to the University. The University immediately sends these students a letter of welcome, and asks them to offer some information–majors, professional interest, fields of interest and plans for teaching.

The next batch of red tape is the Advance Payment Card which carries more specific information–high school, class rank and size, SAT scores, CEEB scores and codes for special admissions programs.

These cards are then paired up with advisors who have the knowledge and interest to guide the students. Thus, the students are assigned advisors which should last at least their first two years of college. Then, when they choose their major fields of interest at the end of their sophomore years, they are re-assigned an advisor who is more specifically in that field.

The advisors themselves should be well-prepared for their tasks, also. In addition to attending a four-hour orientation program in which all of the freshmen courses are considered, the advisors are issued thick packets which contain information ranging from psychological profiles to course statements.

Theory Versus Reality

It sounds great in theory, but the reality is hard to take. When the freshmen come to campus, they attend an academic convocation during Orientation Week which familiarizes the frosh with the academic system. After the general introduction to the Liberal Arts school, the frosh then attend smaller convocations within their own schools. Then, they attend meetings with their advisors.

It is at this point that the system falls down. At the most, the frosh only vaguely understand the academic system after the two convocations, so they desperately need the aid of their advisors to help them plan their years of study.

Freshmen are primarily concerned with basic L.A. requirements such as language and math. Much difficulty has been reported here because advisors place students according to school years rather than ability. It would probably be advantageous and more equitable to promote testing for the placement of students in languages, math, and science.

Also, because most freshmen are not positive about their directions of study, they need to know if their courses are transferable to other schools. Many students have complained that after they switch majors, they find out that their "general L.A. courses" were not so general after all–and no longer serve as fulfilling requirements.

And, even more important, freshmen need the extended hand of a friend to convince them that there are people–human beings–in the University who mean something–not just red tape, ready to file away another card.

And it is here that the advising system obtains its reputation as a poor, ineffective system. Jill Purtell, now a senior, recalls that when she was a freshman, she sat in a room with eight others. The advisor merely asked if anyone had any questions. The students, of course, were so confused that they didn't even know what to ask. So, the advisor concluded with, "When you figure out what you want to take, come on back so I can sign your card."

Thus, the main feeling on campus is that the advisor should be a helping hand. A junior in political science explains that he feels he is imposing on his advisor. He realizes that his advisor is a teaching assistant and has much work to accomplish, so he doesn't want to take up her time.

"I can easily get the card signed. She makes sure that all the requirements are met, and then says I can take any other courses," explains the undergraduate. "But, you need somebody to talk to. I don't blame her–it's the system."

Is it the system? Page two of the Academic Advisory System Draft clearly shows that the administration is aware of the problems involved. Advisors were reported:

1. not in offices at registration; do not post or keep office hours thereafter.
2. to have inadequate interest or time for some interviews.
3. not generally informed of academic rules and course content outside their own field.
4. without information on exact courses needed to satisfy graduate schools.
5. unable to suggest substitute courses, particularly for closed courses on the last day of registration.
6. lacking outlines of required courses for majors–the Liberal Arts Bulletin not being sufficient.

Thus, the problems are recognized, but the administration's red tape seems unable to solve them. The crux of the failure of the advising system? The advisors themselves.

"It's (the advising system) a good idea but just not everyone can be an advisor," summed up junior Sharon Murphy, a fine arts major. "You need people who are interested in students, ones who care. Too many don't care, and they just sign the DOS cards."

frosh program . . .

(Continued from Page 7)

group requirements than at the quality of the courses the student has to take. A number of the faculty members see teaching freshman classes as an odious chore. Many departments have to give more attention to the quality of the freshman courses they are providing. What we want to do is find a way of rewarding unusually good under-class teaching. There have been some great improvements upon the cirriculum, and generally they have come from interested, imaginative faculty."

Randall Brune, as chairman of the Faculty Committee on Curriculum, has been involved with collecting opinions from department heads and interested professors as to what kind of changes they recommend on primary and secondary requirements.

"My own opinions," says Dr. Brune, "are middle-of-the-roadish. I think there are important values in having primary and secondary requirements, and something like a 12 hour rule. But the rules with which we are operating we have been living with for some time now, and they do have to be re-examined, so that students who have good reasons to be exempt from them are not restricted. There is nothing sacred about our present rules, but if they are changed, I think they probably should be replaced with something which does the same kind of thing in different ways."

Assuming agreements on changes could be reached early next fall, they would get to University Senate sometime late in the first semester, or at the beginning of the second. In any case, implementation of changes could probably not be effected until 1970, because of the red tape involved for the dean's office.

"We plan to do big things, starting next fall," Dr. Brune smiled.

grad students . . .

(Continued from Page 7)

rather than simply the economics of the University.

In both cases of professors and graduates, they receive greater recognition for their work in research than for their good teaching, since they are judged by the field to which they contribute. If a professor is a good instructor as well as researcher, this is a happy coincidence and a purely personal matter. Teaching or administrative posts are not offered to him by other universities on the basis of his teaching ability.

English department comments

Dr. Randall Brune, director of Lower Division Studies in English, said the underclassman has "considerably lower priority than the upperclassman and graduate. It's not that anyone wants to short change the underclassman–but there are limited resources available."

Dr. Brune admits that grads have problems of inexperience but said, "I'm absolutely convinced as a generalization that underclassmen get better teaching from graduate students than they would from permanent staff members.

"The kinds of problems with professors teaching elementary courses would be lack of interest and lack of enthusiasm and downright hostility towards the nature of the course," he said.

Discussing the assigning of teaching assistants to freshman courses, Dr. Brune said that teaching assistants "know next to nothing about teaching a composition course. One reason is that a significant number haven't even taken a composition course because they were exempted when they were freshmen."

DO $$$$

Any student interested in earning approximately $2,000 next year as Daily Orange business manager should contact Jim G. Carleton, dean of student services in the administration building immediately.

Applications will be reviewed at a Board of Publications meeting tentatively scheduled for next week.

DO staff

There will be a Daily Orange general staff meeting Monday at 4 p.m. followed by a senior editor's meeting.

Yearbooks

Yearbooks will be sold and distributed form 2 till 4 p.m. all next week in Room 12 of the Student Publications Building at 1101 East Adams Street.

SBU

All those who have not submitted applications for Students for a Better University (SBU) and would still like to apply should call Bill Hauptman, ext. 3073 today to arrange an interview for Saturday. Those who have already applied will be contacted.

Folk concert

The Syracuse Folk Society is closing its most succesful year in its old tradition with a free concert to be held this Saturday night at Jabberwocky. Performing will be all of the Folk Society's regulars of the last three years including the Down City String Quarsextet, John Weissman, John Cadley, Peter Allen plus many more. Everyone is invited to join in at 8:00 p.m. as folk music happens till all hours of the night. The snack bar will be open, and beer will be on sale.

★ FINAL ★

GRADUATION

Campus Clothiers

S.U. BOOKSTORES

SALE

S U Bookstores

EVERYTHING MUST GO!

½ PRICE ON:

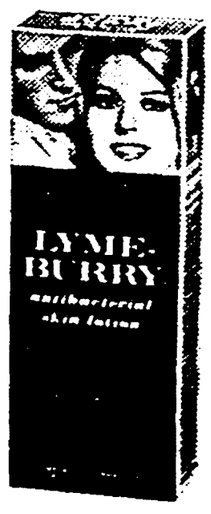
★ KNIT SHIRTS ★

★ CASUAL SLACKS ★

★ DRESS SHIRTS ★

★ SPORT SHIRTS ★

★ SWEATERS ★



BEGINS MAY 21

- IN SHED IN FRONT OF MAIN S.U. BOOKSTORE -

Tropical

LYME-BURRY®

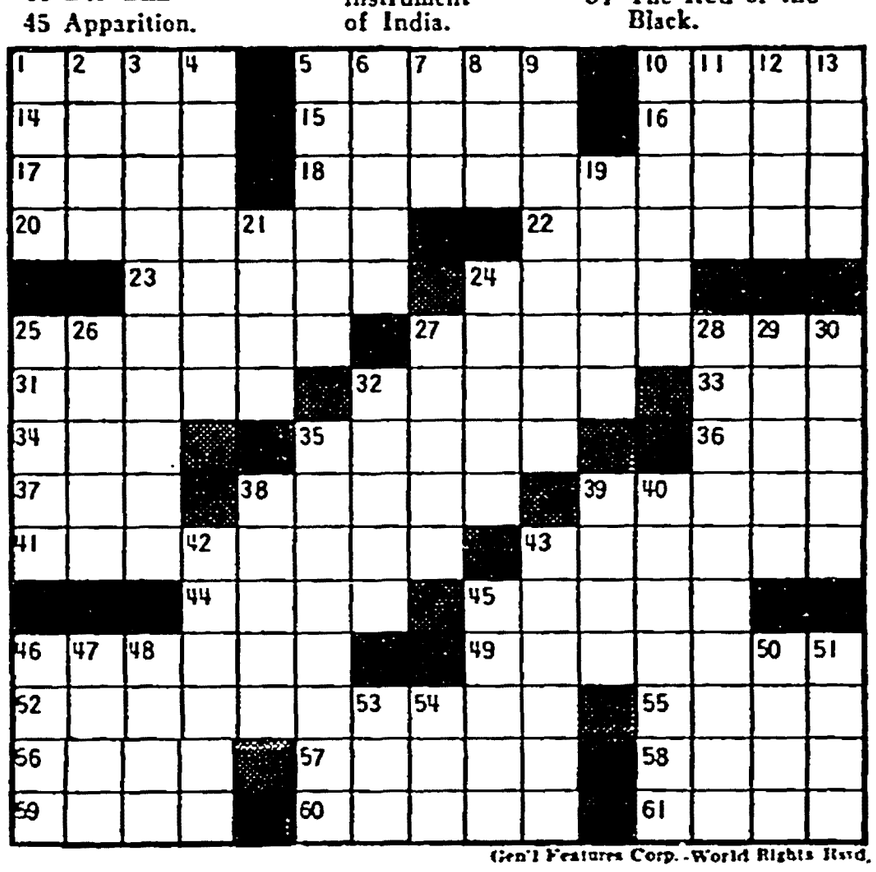
a new anti-bacterial skin lotion that soothes, clears complexion

A new, young way to refreshen your skin . . . Lymeburry anti-bacterial lotion gives fast relief from acne pimples*, oily skin and minor skin blemishes. Its exclusive formula makes it an invigorating after shave anti-bacterial lotion as well. Lymeburry—the soothing first aid treatment for your skin, made from the aromatic oils of fresh tropical limes.

*externally caused

"The refreshing breeze in a bottle" $1.25

FREE



sample of Lymeburry Lotion at your local drugstore with this advertisement

ACROSS

1 Peter or Paul.
5 The French.
10 Busy place.
14 Impost.
15 Musical tone: 2 words.
16 Scene of strife.
17 Riffian.
18 People of Transylvania.
20 Moor of Spain.
22 County in Ireland.
23 — water: 2 words.
24 Feature of the hobble skirt.
25 City in Arizona.
27 Part of "As You Like It."
31 Identical.
32 Wooded vales.
33 Aide-de-camp. Abbr.
34 Zodiac sign.
35 Starr of the Wild West.
36 Cambridge school: Initials.
37 Ratite bird.
38 Jury.
39 Office worker.
41 Notorious Russian.
43 Kitchen utensil.
44 Der —.
45 Apparition.
46 Composer de Falla.
49 Native of North Carolina.
52 Time for good hunting: 2 words.
55 18th century portraitist.
56 Miscellaneous: Abbr.
57 Businessman.
58 Photographer's purchase.
59 Ornamental ribbon.
60 Expensive pictures of a kind.
61 Whilom.

DOWN

1 Chowder base.
2 Cipher.
3 Grasping.
4 City on the Volga, now Shcherbakov.
5 Waiter in Paris.
6 On shank's mare.
7 Curved knife used by Eskimos.
8 Wallop.
9 Certain dance guests.
10 "— the Chief:" 2 words.
11 What "vidi" means: 2 words.
12 Guitarlike instrument of India.
13 Simple.
19 Synonym for hardness.
21 Brogan.
24 Charm.
25 Old German coin.
26 Body of Moslem scholars.
27 Lady of Loch Katrine.
28 Warden of a kind.
29 City near Venice.
30 King Arthur's foster father.
32 Aladdin's friend.
35 Formidable female: 2 words.
38 Whimpers.
39 Take wing.
40 First-class, in England.
42 Falstaff's special feature.
43 Plain songs.
45 Unyielding.
46 VIP's on the home front.
47 Port of the South Seas.
48 Suffix with thin or fat.
50 German number.
51 In case.
53 Agriculture: Abbr.
54 The Red or the Black.

Gen'l Features Corp.-World Rights Rsrd.

Job agencies good source for student summer work

Looking for summer work?

College students across the nation shouldn't overlook the temporary help services as employers. A major company in the field reports it is seeking many thousands of students and teachers with business and industrial experience for summer jobs.

Manpower, Inc., world leader in supplying men and women of all ages on work assignments with customer companies says it hopes to employ more than 20,000 students and teachers in summer, 1969. The company is an "equal opportunity" employer.

A few temporary help service companies rank among the world's largest employers, offering temporary work in almost every occupational category. They furnish their employees on short and long term assignments to offices, factories, sales and technical departments and other private and public customers. No fees are charged to employees.

Applicants can apply to Manpower offices in nearly 400 U.S. cities.

Honoraries tap juniors

Tau Theta Upsilon, senior men's honorary, recently tapped the following for membership: Jim Brodsky, Mike Fisher, Bob Gladden, Stan Hunterton, Lou Jacobs, Gene Kane, John Massis and Angus Twombly.

The senior women's honorary, Eta Pi Upsilon chose the following for membership: Carol Cohen, Nancy Crocker, Judy Cullather, Sally Ann Davies, Helen Dworetsky, Joey Edwardh, Gale Frank, Nancy Glazer.

Also, Andrea Ibanez, Judy Johnson, Peg Johnston, Helene Macdonald, Judy Matthews, Marilyn Metz, Ellyn Miller, Sheila Payton, Kathy Reddick, Sally Shaw, Bonnie Urchiolli, Barbara Woods, Rhonda Whipple and Jane Yetter.

SUMMER SPECIAL!

Student I.D. card discount on Tune-ups
$1.00 a cylinder plus parts

WESTCOTT MOBIL

500 Westcott Street Syracuse, N. Y.

STUDY IN CUERNAVACA

SPRING TERM 1970

ALTERNATIVES IN EDUCATION

A THREE MONTH TERM

Twelve seminars on the practice and ideology of schooling, especially in Latin America, and the investigation of alternative educational possibilities. The aim is to develop a fundamental critique of existing and alternative educational systems.

Seminars are scheduled to accommodate students from U.S. Colleges (Quarter or Semester Plan) and can be combined with Intensive Spanish and other courses at CIDOC

Write:
CIDOC-SPRING 1970
APDO.479, Cuernavaca, Mexico

Vietnam and World Freedom... Is there a connection?

IN PRAGUE
The Soviet Army marches in, students defy Soviet tanks, but censorship and thought control are reimposed.

IN MOSCOW
Sinyafsky and Daniel and thousands of Russian intellectuals are sent to Siberian labor camps or committed to asylums by a regime that seeks to stifle all voices of dissent.

FROM CHINA
The Red Chinese Army conquers Tibet, practices genocide, and then is launched on an unprovoked attack against India.

ON THE AMERICAN CAMPUSES
Extremists man-handle professors, burn libraries, seize and vandalize buildings, and create a climate of intolerance and anti-intellectual terror.

IN VIETNAM
Thousands of teachers and civic leaders are murdered by the Viet Cong while a struggling underdeveloped country, seeking to improve the quality of life, finds itself under assault by an ideology that would deny freedom to all men.

It is our belief that there is a connection between all of these developments. The places are different, the circumstances vary, but the phenomenon of totalitarian aggression against freedom is the same.

The Vietnam war has been widely misunderstood because of the tendency to view it in isolation. This war assumes a clear and compelling significance, however, when it is viewed in its global context — when it is seen as an integral part of a world-wide struggle by the forces of total tyranny against the human mind and the free spirit of man.

Over the coming critical months of the Paris peace talks, some of those who oppose our Vietnam commitment will do everything in their power to compel the Administration to scuttle and run so that the Communists can take over there. This imposes a duty on all of us, liberal and conservative, who are committed to an honorable peace, to make our voices heard.

If you believe as we do, and if you want to do something about it, either as an individual or as a leader of a student organization, please write to

STUDENT COORDINATING COMMITTEE FOR FREEDOM IN VIETNAM AND SOUTHEAST ASIA
P.O. Box 1451, Main Post Office
Washington, D.C. 20013

It's SENSUAL
It's SEXUAL IT'S UNI-SEXUAL

THE PHILADELPHIAN
by
Babe Shore

Bells by Viceroy and Stona
Body Shirts by Philadelphian

Douglas Stone Ltd.

738 south crouse at marshall

Art students to sell prints

A sale of prints made by students of print-making classes of the School of Art, Syracuse University, will be conducted Saturday from noon to 4 p.m. in front of Lowe Art Center.

Prints for sale will include etchings, lithographs, engravings and wood cuts.

Leslie King, a senior from Amherst, N.H., is arrangements chairman.

Folk concert, forceful drama among Jabberwocky events

By PAUL WILLISTEIN JR.

Beginning a full weekend of activities at Jabberwocky will be an open poetry reading Friday night featuring SU poet Douglas Eichhorn. He will be reading his own poems, including those from his recently published book of poems, "Rituals."

In addition to Eichhorn, another publishing poet at SU, Ben Howard, will also read. The evening of readings will begin at 8 p.m. Other grad and undergrad students are invited to participate with their readings.

For its final concert of the year, the Syracuse Folk Society will be bringing to Jabberwocky a newly-discovered group, the "Down City String Quinsextet." Their style is described as "unusual" and they are coming to Syracuse from a recent engagement at a NYC club named "Sin City." Also in the Saturday night show will be Peter Allen, who performed in the recent Spring Weekend folk concert. No admission for this event which will begin at 8 p.m.

Sunday evening, the University Theatre Group will present the forceful "Twelve Angry Men" at the Jabberwocky. The performance will begin at 9 p.m. Admission is 50 cents.

"Black God, White Devil" has been banned from America since its completion by revolutionary filmmaker Glauber Roche in 1964. After 40 international awards, retrospectives in Paris, Berlin, and Moscow, the films of "Nova Cinema Brazil," the film group to which Roche belongs, are finally being shown in the U.S. "Black God" is the masterpiece of these young filmmakers. Shown at the Museum of Modern Art last fall it received a standing ovation.

Due to its violent revolutionary nature, the film will never be shown commercially. Allied Artists, however, has acquired rights to distribute it to universities. The first 16mm prints were only finished this April. Film Forum is sponsoring this Friday night's showing of the film at SU in Kittredge. Currently, the film has only been shown at Harvard and will be shown at Berkley next week.

Black God, White Devil will be shown only Friday night. Showings are at 6:15, 8:15, and 10:15 p.m. with admission being $1.

all work and some school makes jack...

Start a summer work-study program. Earn up to nine credits during the evening in courses taught by Syracuse University professors.
Visiting students are welcome and credits are transferrable to most other accredited colleges and universities.

- Summer Session June 9 to August 22
- Free Professional Counseling
- Registration: June 5-6; 4:30-9:00 pm
- For information write the Counselor's Office, 610 E. Fayette St., Syracuse, N. Y. 13202: or call 476-5541, X 3261.

University College

THE CONTINUING EDUCATION COLLEGE of SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY

HOLLYWOOD
Route 11, Mattydale
"DAZZLING" —LIFE
FRANCO ZEFFIRELLI'S ROMEO & JULIET
454-0321
Weekday - Shows 6:45 - 9:15
Sat. - 1:35, 6:45 - 9:15
Sun. - 1:30 - 4 - 6:45 - 9:15

8 TRACK STEREO TAPES FOR $5.79 !!
Record Runner

JIFFY KING SPECIAL
Phone Orders Accepted; No Deliveries
Monday thru Friday, 2-5 p.m.
10¢ OFF ALL SUBS
727 South Crouse
in the Arcade

Students:
Get on top of your outside reading... save 350 hours a semester!

1 Come to a free one hour Reading Dynamics Demonstration
You'll see a documented film of actual interviews with Washington Congressmen who have taken the Reading Dynamics Course. You'll learn how to increase your reading speed from 3 to 10 times, with equal or better comprehension and greater recall. All your questions about Reading Dynamics will be answered.

2 Enroll in the result-guaranteed Reading Dynamics Course
We positively guarantee (see below) to triple your present reading ability. The Course consists of eight 2½ hour sessions, plus one hour a day of home practice.

3 Read Dynamically
You read whole groups of words and not just one word at a time. You read without hearing and saying all the words. You read with a purpose and learn to quickly grasp the main thoughts and ideas. You learn to pace yourself according to the material you read. YOU LEARN TO REDUCE YOUR TIME ON OUTSIDE READING ASSIGNMENTS FROM 500 HOURS TO 150 HOURS PER SEMESTER!

Ask about our special arrangements for on-site Group Classes in Reading Dynamics

The Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics Institute

Phone 716-854-5858, collect, for class information and availability of special student tuition rates. Summer classes also will be held in Rochester and Buffalo, N. Y. Call the above number for additional information.

LIFETIME MEMBERSHIP
As a Reading Dynamics graduate, you are entitled to take a Refresher Course at any time, and as often as you wish, at any of the 150 Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics Institutes in the United States and in Europe.

Summer Classes Start July 2nd
8 week course — 2½ hour lesson each week
All classes will be held at the Christian Brothers Academy, Randall and Kimber Roads, DeWitt, N. Y. 13214.

OUR POSITIVE GUARANTEE OF TUITION REFUND
The Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics Institute will refund your tuition if you do not at least triple your reading index, reading rate multiplied by comprehension percentage, during the Course as measured by our standardized testing program. This refund is valid when you have attended each Course session and completed the minimum daily assigned home drill at the level specified by your instructor.

Only plant on the Hill

Don't Forget
STORE YOUR WINTER CLOTHES WITH US.

They will be cleaned, stored on hangers in our climate controlled vault, and pressed fresh when you return.
Nothing to pay til Fall.
Professional protection from fire,
theft,
moth damage.

7 HOUR Cleaning & Laundering Inc.

175 Marshall St. Cor. University Ave.

Keystone to goals

Pan-Afro society outlines demands on SU community

By SUE SHAPIRO

The Pan-African Student Organization of Syracuse University (PASOAU) yesterday outlined four demands it is making on the university community in an effort to win campus-wide recognition and to improve communications between the association's 89 members and the whole student body.

Sikanyiso Duke Ndlovu, acting president of PASOSU, said in a written statement that the top priority demand is for a university-allotted operating budget.

A tentative annual budget of $2,546 will be asked Monday pending official ratification of the budget proposal by the organization's entire membership.

Ndlovu said PASOSU has been operating this year on its own funds, with "virtually no money form the university."

African students feel that the requested budget is fair, claiming that they receive none of the benefits of the $150 Student Fee they pay.

PASOSU, whose active membership is comprised of students from 23 African nations co-sponsors projects with the Student Afro-American Society, and plans to enlarge the scope of its activities if the budget request is granted.

The second demand is that the university grant Assistantships to Africans to teach African Courses. PASOSU members are also asking active participation in evaluating African studies.

They have formed an African Education Sub-Committee and are distributing names of African students to various departments of the program "so that they can be used as a reresource of relevant information about their own countries."

Ndlovu also said that the university is being asked to make efforts to bring visiting professors from African universities to SU.

If the proposed budget is approved, PASOSU will be able to supplement the visiting professor program by bringing African officials from the United Nations and ambassadors from the African Embassies in Washington to speak in special seminars here.

The association's third major demand is that campus news media give PASOSU "equal treatment" in coverage of campus organizations.

"We need to create inroads in communication with the rest of the university," Ndlovu said. "Our organization has been active for several years now, but we have received very little publicity."

Orsino selected as yearbook chief

Patricia Orsino, a junior in the College of Journalism was chosen editor of the 1970 Onondagan by the Board of Publications yesterday.

Miss Orsino, a native of Utica, New York based her application on the idea of a two volume yearbook to commemorate the University's Centennial.

The vice president of her sorority, Alpha Xi Delta, she is a member of the Junior Executive Council and was layout editor for the Class of '72 Orange Aid and the Winter Weekend booklet.

In other Board of Publications results, Tom Ahern, a junior majoring in English, was chosen editor of Maelstrom and Robert Leitzell was chosen business manager of the Onondagan.

DO YOUR THING AT

MILLER'S GAY 90's

- BANJOS
- PEANUTS
- SING-A-LONGS
- POPCORN
- BEER DRINKING CONTESTS
- CHARLESTON and GO-GO CONTESTS
- PITCHERS of BEER

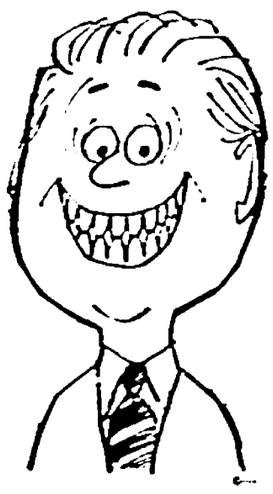
Bring Your Sorority and Fraternity Parties. Have your last college fling with us.

119 W. First St., East Syracuse

437-5652

FUN WORKING IN EUROPE

GUARANTEED JOBS ABROAD! Get paid, travel, meet people, SUMMER and YEAR ROUND. 20 countries, 9 paying job categories offered. For FREE cultural program literature including details and applications, write: "ISTC admissions, 866 United Nations Plaza, New York, N.Y. A Non-Profit Student Membership Organization.



STUCK FOR A GIFT FOR THE SHOWER? THE BRIDE? THE GROOM? THE GRADUATE?

THINK

S. U. BOOKSTORES

YOU'LL FIND IT!

SU Bookstores

"Our Business Is People"

Pocket Coffee! What's that?

A new kind of coffee break for cramming collegians.

From freshman to senior year, the "cram" is a fact of life for most students. Just before mid-semester and again at end-term you burn the midnight oil, review mountains of books and consume gallons of coffee.

Pocket Coffee, the new kind of coffee break, consists of a delicious chocolate shell full of real liquid coffee ...the space age answer to the students' age old problem.

Don't stop to make or get coffee, pop a Pocket Coffee into your mouth, get your coffee and eat your chocolate too (a great energy source). Pack Pocket Coffee in with the books and cram on.

Available at Bookstores

Senior honorary presents Dr. Sawyer with outstanding faculty member award

Dr. Michael O. Sawyer, professor of political science, has received the first annual Phi Kappa Alpha Outstanding Faculty Member Award. The members of Phi Kappa Alpha, senior men's honorary society, presented the award to Sawyer at the University's Spring Weekend Moving-up Ceremonies held Saturday.

"Each senior was given the opportunity to vote for the faculty member who had contributed the most to his education," said Jeffrey Portnoy, a member of Phi Kappa Alpha. Sawyer received 22 per cent of the votes cast.

Sawyer, who holds B.A., M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Syracuse is a member of the Council on Student Life, University Senate, executive committee of the College of Liberal Arts, the American Dilemma Committee and the advisory committee for the Policy Institute of the Syracuse University Research Corporation. In the community he is active with the Community Health Planning Board and the County Republican Committee. He is vice chairman of the Five County Regional Planning Board.

Interview with son of Chan to air Monday on WAER

Host Ed Gabriel will answer the musical question, "Who is Keye Luke?" on "On Stage and Screen" Monday at 6 p.m. on WAER.

The question will be answered in a special taped interview with Charlie Chan's famed number one son.

On Stage and Screen is a weekly tour of the theatres of Broadway and the soundstages of Hollywood.

C	Z	A	R		G	A	U	L	S		H	I	V	E
L	E	V	Y		A	F	L	A	T		A	S	I	A
A	R	A	B		R	O	U	M	A	N	I	A	N	S
M	O	R	I	S	C	O			G	A	L	W	A	Y
			I	N	H	O	T		S	L	I	T
T	U	C	S	O	N		E	P	I	L	O	G	U	E
A	L	I	K	E		G	L	E	N	S		A	D	C
L	E	O			B	E	L	L	E			H	I	T
E	M	U		P	A	N	E	L		S	T	E	N	O
R	A	S	P	U	T	I	N		C	O	O	K	E	R
			A	L	T	E		S	H	A	P	E
M	A	N	U	E	L			T	A	R	H	E	E	L
O	P	E	N	S	E	A	S	O	N		O	P	I	E
M	I	S	C		A	G	E	N	T		L	E	N	S
S	A	S	H		X	R	A	Y	S		E	R	S	T

Honors concert

Musicians to perform

Sunday afternoon is the date set for the annual honors concert at Crouse College.

Five programmed segments have been listed, featuring students who have achieved outstanding records in the Music School. Three of the performers have attained 4.0 averages thus far in their college careers. They are Martin Stepper, Patricia Sharpe and Judith Munroe.

Sunday's program will open with Addison's inventions for oboe and piano. The soloist will be Patricia Sharpe, oboist, and Judith Munroe, pianist. Allan Travis, freshman flutist, will follow with Edgar Varese's "Density 21.5." After the flute solo, the honors concert lists Schumann's Faschingschwank aus Wien, opus 26 No. 1 (Carnival Jest from Vienna) and Franz Liszt's Lose, Himmel, meine Seele. These will be performed on the piano by Alice Valentino, a junior piano student.

Next on the program will be five verses from the Rubaiyat with original music by Martin Stepper, junior piano major, and the verses will be sung by Carol Manuel, a senior voice major soprano.

Final work on the honors concert will be an organ performance by Eunice Diemer, a senior organist. Miss Diemer will play the Orgelpartita "Wacht Auf, Ruft uns Die Stimme," composed in 1935 by Hugo Distler.

COSMO
Pizza Shop

FAST
DELIVERY SERVICE
TO
ALL DORMS
GR 8-9231

FRATERNITIES . .

SORORITIES . . .

Order Your Christmas and holiday cards at a discount to save money and work in the fall.

L. G. Balfour Co.
729 S. Crouse Ave.
(Next to the Post Office)
Carl Sorenson, Mgr.
GR 5-7837

Photography by
Sarkin Studio
Living Color
Portraits
Bridal Portraits
Candid Weddings
908 Irving Ave.
Near V. A. Hospital
478-1145

Campus Classified

GR 6-5571, Ext. 2314

Rates minimum of 15 words:

1 day	1.15
2 days	2.25
3 days	3.30
4 days	4.30
5 days	5.25
6 days	6:15

To place a classified ad, call GR 6-5571, ext. 2314, between 1 and 3 p.m. Ad must be placed 2 days in advance. Every word over 15 costs 5c extra per day.

ALL ADS MUST BE PREPAID.

MISCELLANEOUS

RENT if you can't buy! T.V.s, tape recorders, typewriters. By week, month or semester. Reasonable rates. S. U. BOOKSTORE. GR 6-5541, x 2426.

ALTERATIONS DONE within 24 hours. Call for an appointment. Lillian Potter. 207 Comstock. 478-5847.

PRIVATE DRIVING LESSONS — automatic or standard shift. Full or refresher courses. Qualified professional instructors. Pickup service. Auto Driving Academy. GR 6-3995.

AUTO DRIVING - three hour prelicensing course given Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. SULLIVAN'S DRIVING SCHOOL - 463-3451.

GO WEST, anyone? Driving through Colorado, Nevada, Calif. in June — share expenses. Call Hecker x 3079-80.

SHARE GAS AND DRIVING - to California during June. In air conditioned Cadillac. Max. 2 adults - Contact 457-7911.

SUMMER JOB — Full time, Syracuse area, need car and phone. Call on established customers. Eight year old business needs new representative. Contact Dean Wallace, Jr., 2 Oakwood Circle, Storrs, Conn., 06268 or call 203-429-6152.

TRAVEL ALMOST FREE — San Antonio - Tampa - N. J. (over 21 only) 458-3773 Auto Driveaway Co.

FOR SALE

1965 OLDSMOBILE convertible. Red. 442, Power steering. Power brakes, excellent condition, reasonable. Call 637-3430 after 5.

VOLKSWAGEN 69 — Sedan, sun-roof, automatic. AM-FM radio, snow tires. 4,000 miles, receiving co. car. GR 9-6717.

1968 CORVETTE convertible, blue. 2,900 miles, full power, perfect condition $4600.00 GR 9-6250 or 474-5335.

'61 FORD FALCON, new electrical system, standard trans., cheap. Dave Miller x2451.

'62 VW GHIA, good condition, must sell now, all offers considered, call Joe Bayer x2451.

1964 HEALY-SPRITE, red, some rust but runs well. Dependable. $400. Call 474-0471 after 5.

1966 MUSTANG — Blue power steering, power brakes, automatic transmission, excellent condition. 474-0471 after 5.

COMET '61, good mechanical condition. You decide the price - Call 457-7911 after 5.

MG-TF CLASSIC - new paint, interiors, 4,000 miles since engine overhaul. 1900.00. 446-8357 after 6.

1967 SUZUKI SCRAMBLER - under 2,000 miles, good condition. $400.00. x2940. ask for Wey.

DRUMLINS AREA — charming home, fireplace and walkout basement. Phone Mrs. Peiffer 446-0150.

1964 OLDSMOBILE — "88" convertible, full power, many extras, new transmission, exhaust system, brakes, shocks. Excellent condition. $1,200. 479-8296.

1964 PORSCHE SUPER, like new, leather, AM-FM new Pirellis, Fog lights, ski rack, after 5 p.m. 474-2674.

66 MALIBU CONVERT. 327, Hurst, excellent condition, best offer. Bill GR 8-2349.

CORVAIR SPYDER — Turbo - charger, 1964 hardtop, 4-speed synchro shift, inspect and drive to appreciate. 446-5993 after 5 p.m. Humbert Ave., DeWitt.

MUST SELL — 1962 Rambler Ambassador 2 door H. T. R. & H. Good condition. $115.00 Call Larry 475-0987.

1965 CORVAIR CORSA convertible, 4-speed 140 hp, two new tires. $700.00 will bargain. Al Byrne. x3092, 3093.

FENDER PRECISION BASS with hardshell case, excellent condition, reasonable price. call Kevin McMurray, x2883.

THREE PIECE LIVING ROOM SET. Ideal for student apartment. Can sleep two. $55.00. Call 475-4327.

FOR RENT

UNIVERSITY WALKING DISTANCE - 2 bedroom flat, stove, fireplace, porch, garage. Available August 1st. $100.00 per month. Phone 469-4095.

FURNISHED, HEATED recently remodeled apartments, Crouse near University, available June 1st and seventh. $115, 623-7731 after 4 Dick Taylor, x3928.

EUCLID, FURNISHED ROOMS - with kitchen privileges from $45 and up. 446-6451.

UNIVERSITY WALK'G DISTANCE — Furnished, heated efficiency and one bedroom apt. sub-let for summer only or year. Also one bedroom apartment and efficiency available Sept. 1st. Students or teachers. Parking or garage. 446-0493.

FOR SUMMER or year round, furnished 3 rooms or 4, $115 or $130, utilities included. 2 miles west of campus. Air conditioning available. Steensland 475-3790.

6 ROOM APARTMENT, furnished, close to Sadler and Lawrinson, GR 5-5743.

SUMMER RENTAL beginning June 1st or may be leased for one year. Heated and furnished apts. Efficiency at $75.00 per month and three rooms and bath $85.00. Parking or garage available. GI 6-0493.

APARTMENTS — furnished, 3 rooms, utilities, near campus. Call x3630, 472-8223 or 475-1631.

APARTMENT FOR RENT - furnished, one bedroom 5 minutes walking distance, call Morris ext 2821 or 478-8306 (evenings) $100/mo. includes utilities.

1116 E. GENESEE, June thru August, furnished and heated one bedroom and efficiency apts. 475-2885.

FURNISHED APARTMENT to sublet June 1, 1969. Cliff House. Pool and sauna, private club. $135.00. Call Mr. Van Kleef after 9:00 p.m. 479-5463.

SUBLET - SUMMER. $180.00 takes it for whole summer starting June 20. 2 bedrooms 5 rooms utilities. 478-3523. Dick Taylor x3928.

WANTED

ROOMMATE FOR SUMMER and/or Fall. 3 Bedroom apartment. 5 minutes from university. $35/month. 476-6020.

TO SUBLET (July 1 - Aug. 30) a studio apartment in or within commuting distance of James Street or University area, by New York City school teacher. Contact Ardy Meluzzi Tel. 474-8229 and leave message.

BANK TELLERS — permanent part time teller position available at Mattydale office to work on Fridays from 12:00 to 7:00 P.M. We will train you on the job. Call 473-2256. First Trust and Deposit Co.

2 GIRLS TO SHARE 7 room apartment. Laundry, near Lawrinson. Reasonable. GR 5-3569 or 478-4473 after 6 P.M. Call anytime weekends.

4 GRAD STUDENTS looking for a furnished or unfurnished. 3-4 bedroom house near university. 150-200/ mo. Call 478-9758.

ARTS AND CRAFTS counselor, co-ed camp in Berkshires: experience required, top Salary. Call 474-3175.

GIRL TO SHARE - apartment. $50. per month. June thru August. 10 min. from campus. 478-7626.

ROOM AND BOARD in exchange for work during 1969-70 academic year. Male student. Last summer groundskeeper, this summer hospital orderly. Dick Taylor, x3920.

NEED MALE GRAD ROOMMATE FOR SUMMER - East Genesee St. near Wescott. Reasonable Call 475-3734 after 6.

ONE OR TWO GIRLS — to share house June-Sept. near campus. $40/ month. Call Ellie or Barbara x3301

TUTOR IN ENGLISH CONVERSATION 3 or 4 hours a week for a Japanese. Willing to pay. Contact 478-2412 after 6.

TYPING

DISSERTATIONS, THESES, AND TERM papers. IBM electric typewriter. 40c per page 5c per copy. 446-2841. Mrs. Miller.

THIRTY YEARS EXPERIENCE. Dissertations, term papers, proof-read. Satisfaction guaranteed. Mrs. Raymond Webb. HE 7-8259.

TAKE YOUR MANUSCRIPT to the only professional typing and printing service serving the S. U. area. The knowledge and experience of having done over 2,000 theses and dissertations is behind every job we turn out. Stephanie's Office Service. 469-2795.

PROFESSIONAL TYPING. 463-8782.

TYPING DONE IN MY HOME — 45c/ page, for appointment call Mrs. Shaughnessy 488-2020.

Studio THEATRE
524 WESTCOTT STREET

2 WEEKS ONLY

LIMITED ENGAGEMENT!

"THE BEST FOREIGN FILM OF THE YEAR!"
—New York Film Critics
—National Board Of Review

Academy Award Winner

THE TWO PART PRODUCTION OF LEO TOLSTOY'S

WAR and PEACE

PRESENTED BY THE WALTER READE ORGANIZATION AND SATRA • IN COLOR • RELEASED BY CONTINENTAL

STARTS May 21 2 p.m. & 8 p.m.

PART I "NATASHA AND ANDREI - THE BATTLE OF AUSTERLITZ"

THE ENTIRE PRODUCTION OF "WAR AND PEACE" WILL BE SHOWN IN TWO PARTS. EACH PART WILL BE SHOWN FOR ONE WEEK!

Monday thru Thursday Eves . . . 2.50
Friday and Saturday Evening . . 3.00
Wednesday & Saturday Matinee 2.00
Sunday Matinee & Evening 2.00

TICKETS MAY BE PURCHASED SEPARATELY FOR EACH PART.

PART II "NATASHA AND PIERRE - THE BURNING OF MOSCOW"

Not Reserved — Each Ticket Guarantees A Seat
Special ½ Price Coupon.

STARTS 2 p.m. & 8 8 p.m.

PART II COUPON
½ Price - College
Student Discount
All Times Except
Friday & Saturday
Evenings

PART I COUPON
½ Price - College
Student Discount
All Times Except
Friday & Saturday
Evenings

Dean studies student representation

By ROGER CONNER

Student representation on all—University, college or school, and departmental policy and curriculum committees has "increased substantially" this year according to a study conducted by Dr. Allen P. Splete, assistant dean of academic affairs.

In a nine-page report presented yesterday to Vice Chancellor Frank P. Piskor, Dr. Splete listed facts and statistics that were collected over a three month period beginning this semester.

The study shows that a total of 25 students are currently sitting on six all-University policy-making committees. In addition to this, 17 graduate students and 29 undergraduate students will be included in the University Senate membership beginning next fall.

Also noted in the report is that eleven students, seven undergraduates and four graduates, were represented on the Selection Committee for a New Chancellor, making the committee of 33 equally divided among students, faculty and trustees.

A total of 27 graduate students are included on eight all-University committees. However, as the report indicates, this figure does not include dozens of graduate studen s working on various Graduate Student Organization committees.

On the college or school level, Dr. Splete found that student participation on curriculum or planning committees is now an essential part of every school. Currently, only three out of the 13 University schools, excluding the College of Liberal Arts, do not give voting privileges to student committee members.

Jane M. Stanicki, 36, named dean of women

Jane M. Stanicki, former dean of students at Rockland Community College and administrative assistant to the director for Graduate Programs in Counseling at Columbia University, has been named dean of women at Syracuse University, effective Aug. 15.

She also has been appointed a lecturer in the School of Education. Miss Stanicki's appointments were announced today by Jim G. Carleton, dean of student services. Miss Stanicki succeeds Marjorie C. Smith, dean of women at Syracuse since 1949. From 1935 to 1949, Miss Smith was assistant dean of women.

Miss Stanicki, 36, is a 1955 graduate of Montclair State College, Montclair, N.J., and received a master of education degree from Springfield College, Springfield, Mass., in 1956. She is scheduled to receive her doctorate from Columbia University in September.

Miss Stanicki has served as assistant dean of students at the State University of New York at Cortland, dean of freshman at Elmira College, associate dean of students at the State University of New York at Geneseo, and most recently was dean of students at Rockland Community College.

She currently holds a Sara Sturdevant fellowship at Columbia. Miss Stanicki's academic interests include the organization and functioning of institutions of higher education with emphasis on student service and the education of women.

She is a native of Roselle, N.J.

Happenings

FRIDAY

WAA BOARD members, chairmen, and managers call Terri Robinson X2138 by Friday noon if you can attend retreat on Sunday - 2 p.m.

ONCE UPON A MATTRESS, musical - at Regent theatre, Free - 4:15 p.m.

ALL RETURNED volunteers (Peace Corps, VISTA, AFSC etc.); meeting at 8 p.m. 227 LeMoyne Ave. for info call 479-7618 or 472-6031.

GRAD PARTY - Lee's restaurant - 505 Wescott St., 9 p.m. Sponsored by GSO.

JABBERWOCKY - Poetry readings begin at 8 p.m. Grads and undergrads invited - Basement of Kimmel.

SUDAN: Conflict and bloodshed. Meeting to discuss the strife and settlement. 4:30 in Room 102 Maxwell.

SATURDAY

ALPHA PHI OMEGA Car Wash at the Chevron Station; Erie and Walnut from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Fee is $1.

PLANNING MEETING for a Phi O at office - 9 p.m.

SUNDAY

CHAPTER PICNIC for A Phi O; meet at office at 1:30 p.m.

PAN AFRICAN STUDENT ORGANIZATION - General Elections meeting at Beebe Cottage. Also on the agenda - proposed 69/70 budget.

MONDAY

ENGLISH PRE-REGISTRATION and course description will be in 304 HL at 4 p.m.

NEW SOPH EXEC meeting will be at 8 p.m. in either 207 or 407 HL. New members are required to attend. Homecoming plans will be announced. Rally afterwards in the Orange.

UP FROM LIBERALISM meeting at 6:30 in 110 HL. To discuss ideas for next year and possible affiliation with Young Americans for Freedom.

PANEL DISCUSSION on Czech-Polish problem. World Affairs Council - May Memorial Unitarian Church. 8 p.m.

TUESDAY

ORANGE PAGES MANDATORY Meeting - 8 p.m. in Haven Penthouse. Must attend.

ALL PLACARD CHEERING GOONS - meeting at Stadium Gate 6 at 5 p.m.

PANHELL REPS - Meeting at 7 p.m. in Al Newhouse.

OPEN CLASS OF 71 Exec council meeting at 7 in Shaw Rec. Lounge. Final information on the Orange Aid and O-week.

A PHI O Elections - little sisters - 7 p.m., brothers - 8 p.m.

GENERAL

WAA BOARD MEMBERS - chairmen and officers pick up report for in 202.

GREEK MEN AND WOMEN - help is needed for the Pan Hel-IFC party to be held next fall. Area students and/or summer students please contact Chuck Gabrial in writing c/o Dean of Men's office; Box 538, 303 Stadium Pl.; or Lawrinson Hall room 1914.

GREEKS - Need $25? Design needed for a new Greek Button. For information contact Bobbi Corenthal X2177 or Steve Rodick X2451.

LAW STUDENTS DRAFT counseling - Thursday, May 22, White Hall 101, 7-9 p.m. Info. 472-9827.

J-SCHOOL registration continues through May 23; 8 a.m. - 5 p.m. Room 100 NCC.

THE RECORD RUNNER

ANNOUNCES ITS INTRODUCTION of 8-TRACK STEREO TAPES

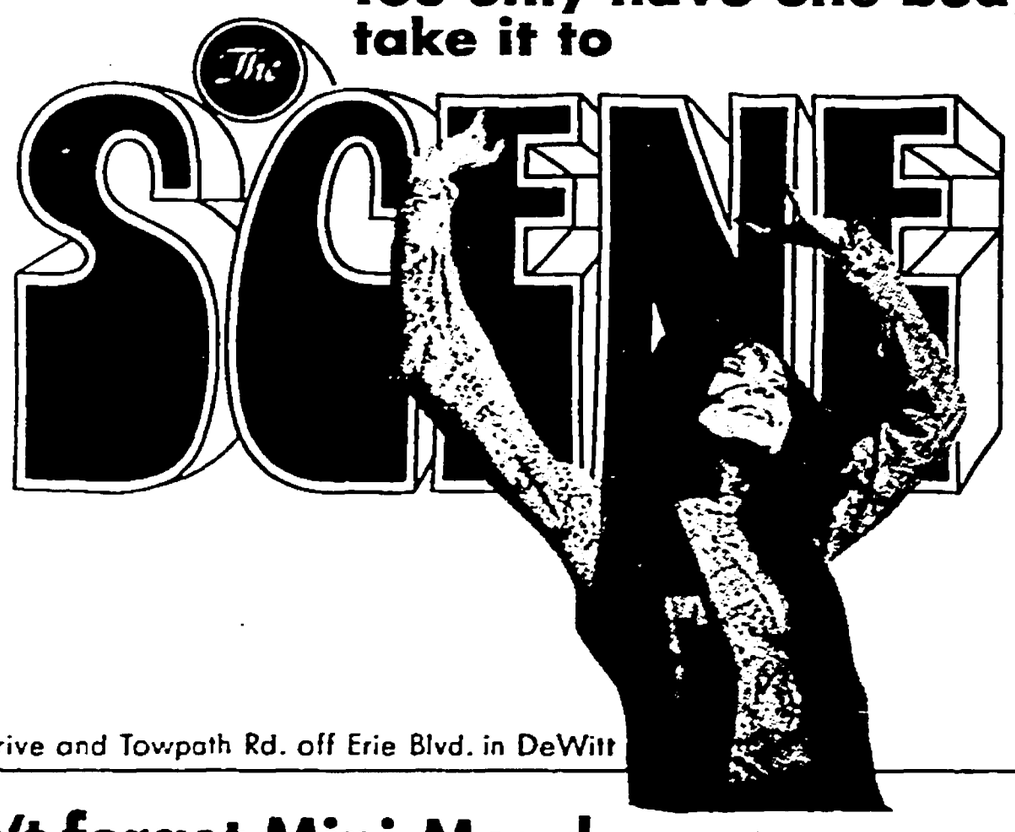
AND ITS LOW PRICE OF $5.79 !!

Blood Sweat and Tears . . . Hair . . . Jimi Hendrix . . . Paul Butterfield . . . Bob Dylan . . . . Peter Paul and Mary . . . . Jeff Beck . . . Traffic . . . Beatles . . Three Dog Night . . . Donovan . . . Byrds . . . . Big Brother . . . . Miracles . . . . Temptations . . . Cream . . . . Stones . . . . Sly and Family Stone . . . Baez . . . Miles Davis . . . Len Cohen . . . Laura Nyro . . . Iron Butterfly and Many, Many, More.

8 TRACK STEREO TAPE DECK (AUDIOVOX) FOR $67.00 ! !

The Record Runner



NEW FACULTY AND GRADUATE HOUSING

Nob Hill, only a few minutes from SU, offers all the conveniences of luxury living in a serene atmosphere accented by a panoramic view. Applications for the moderately-priced suites are currently being accepted for the fall semester.

Full-color brochures and other information describing the abundant amenities are available to faculty, staff and graduate students by phoning 469-3211 between noon and 6 p.m.

You only have one body, take it to

Cili Drive and Towpath Rd. off Erie Blvd. in DeWitt

Don't forget Mini-Monday.
Admission: $1 for Guys
FREE admission to mini-skirted girls.
Prize of $25 for the girl in the best mini-skirt.

45 years as coach

Simmie--Sportsman of the Year

By ED AGRANOWITZ

In 1922 and '23, Notre Dame's famed Four Horsemen were the rulers supreme of the college football world. They were beaten only twice by a powerful Nebraska team, who in turn was handed its only two setbacks by Syracuse. The '23 Orangemen received a Rose Bowl invitation, in fact, but Penn State made the trip instead because SU's chancellor said no go.

Those great Orange teams of the early Twenty's were led by a young spirited quarterback who also led the 1924-25 Syracuse lacrosse teams to consecutive national championships, and played baseball and threw the discus and javelin in his spare time.

THE SMILE OF A WINNER belongs to Orange lacrosse coach Roy Simmons. Simmie's charges take a gaudy 10-1 record into tomorrow's crucial battle with Cortland. The lacrosse Hall of Famer has been granted a one-year coaching extension even though he has reached the mandatory retirement age.

Four and one half decades later, this man is still in the thick of the athletic scene on the Hill.

The man is Roy D. Simmor-- known affectionately as "Simmie" to his endless list of friends and admirers. The years have whitened his short-cropped hair, and added a wrinkle of time here and there, but they have failed to dampen his fiery competiveness and will to win.

This year, Simmie is completing his 38th season as head coach of the Orange lacrossers, and their current 10-1 record should carry them to one of their most successful campaigns ever. This outstanding performance, turned in with a "minor sport" budget and only one scholarship a year at his disposal, have led the Daily Orange Sports Staff to honor coach Simmons as its "Sportsman of the Year."

Simmie's past coaching triumphs have been many. In 1925 he organized a boxing team on the Hill which captured 14 Eastern titles and the 1936 national championship. His 1957 lacrosse team, led by the great Jim Brown, finished at 10-0. And, of course, Simmie had a hand in the 1959 football national championship as the Orange defensive back coach.

But this continued verification of coaching genius tells only part of the story. The respect and affection which his players hold for Simmie is real -- whenever the coach is the topic of discussion, the words "greatest guy" always manage to find their way into the conversation.

It is this admiration that can, and has made a difference on Simmons-coached teams. It is common in college athletics to spot athletes who play for their personal glory and satisfaction. But the Orange stickmen are unanimous in their desire to "win for Simmie."

And though the wins have defied tabulation in Simmie's 45 years of coaching, no one victory or team stands out in his mind as the biggest thrill. "The real joy of coaching is associating with all of the great kids, and getting them up for games, and seeing them play up to their potential," says Simmie. "It's given me a few more white hairs and an ulcer on top of an ulcer, but when I see a kid give a game all he has and play his best, this is what coaching is all about."

Simmie's success formula for coaching is nothing elaborate--it boils down to hard work and good attitude. "I've always had a definite philosophy on sports," says Simmie. "First, you must never give your opponent the advantage of better physical conditioning. Second, you must never let them change your attitude and get you down--attitude is so damned important. If you're gonna be a winner you've gotta hang in there."

Apparently, Simmie's current charges have heeded well their mentor's advice, as their momentum should land them in the top five in the final national polls. "This is as nice a bunch of kids as I've ever had," says Simmie. "They're dedicated and they're working harder 'n hell."

Simmie is planning to retire from coaching after next year, the centennial year for Syracuse University. He has gone a long way with his one-scholarship-a-year allowance, and his final edition of stickmen promises to be another powerhouse. But regardless of what record the '70 Orange put together, Roy Simmons is assured of going out a winner -- a man of his character is truly the exception rather than the rule.

Stickmen oppose Cortland; Cox Trophy on the line

By ED AGRANOWITZ

The resurgent Syracuse lacrosse team heads south tomorrow to battle tough Cortland State, and hopes to bring home the big prize -- a second straight Cox Division championship.

A win over the 8-1 Red Dragons would give the Orange a one game lead with their only remaining league game being against R.P.I. this Wednesday at Manley Field (3 p.m.).

Cortland represents the biggest challange on the Orange schedule this year, save Army. The Red have met and disposed of several teams which the Orangemen have victimized Most noteable were defeats of Penn State and Hobart. They also ran up a 30-3 score on a St. Lawrence team which beat Union, a 14-7 loser to Syracuse on Wednesday.

"Cortland has a fine lacrosse team this year," says Orange coach Roy Simmons. "And they're always pointing toward us – we'll have a real fight on our hands."

As if they won't be busy enough with the Dragon stickmen, the Orange will also have to cope with the murderous Cortland crowd. "The Cortland fans are tremendous hecklers, and they can really upset a team," says Simmie, "The last time we were down there, a couple of our kids almost charged into the stands after some of the hecklers."

After Cortland comes R.P.I., the easiest of the three remaining games, but by no means a soft touch. "They've been up and down this season," says Simmie, "but they could give us trouble."

The Orange will put a lid on the 1969 season a week from tomorrow when they host arch-rival and Ivy power Cornell (2 p.m.). The Big Red are not as strong as last year when they pasted the Orange 16-5, but they should be a stiff test nonetheless. "Cornell has a lot of fine Canadian players," says Simmie. "And they handed Cortland their only loss (8-7) earlier this season."

The Cornell encounter will mark the final Manley appearance of some outstanding Orange seniors. Goalie Butch Brown, attackman Verne Doctor (34 points), defenseman Cliff Ensley, and midfielders Dick Polgren (2), Tony Lapi (3), and Paul DiMartino (9), will be calling it a career.

Returning regulars for next year will be attackmen Leo Nolan (43 points) and Jeff Davis (38 points), middies Mark Austerlitz (25), Jim Smith (12), Ron Doctor (26), Dick George (8), Rick Travers (8) and Tom Varley (4), and defensemen Ethan Klausner and John Scipione. Simmons also expects footballer Tom Myers to be a big boost to next year's offense.

"It's been a good year, but it's far from over," says Simmie. "Our defense must toughen up – last game they played like Vassar JV's. But we're the defending league champs, and if we play like champs, we can win the rest."–E.A.

LAST WEEK'S QUIZ ANSWERS: (1) Hack Wilson-56; Pyle-Yale, Huff-West Virginia, Smith-Arkansas; (3) John Ueleses; (4) Henry Armstrong; (5) Johnny Podres; (6) Billy Casper; (7) St. Louis Hawks; (8) Peggy Fleming; (9) Zahn-bowling, Okker-tennis, Beaman-golf; (10) Dick Ellsworth and Mel Stottlemyre.

A solution for Syracuse

Anyone have a spare ballpark that seats 8,000, has adequate lighting and is ready for occupancy?

Well, if you do call Syracuse Chief general manager Don Labruzzo.

Yesterday's early morning fire at MacArthur Stadium the Chief's home, which destroyed the grandstand behind home plate, the main concession stand, and the club's office, left the International League entry without a park.

It seems the fate of baseball in Syracuse this summer will be decided within the next few days.

The options open to the city and the Chiefs are numerous. 1) Repair the fire damage and play ball at MacArthur Stadium at the same time; 2) be a road team; 3) demolish the stands and rebuild the park; 4) move the team elsewhere for this season. Options two and four are most unlikely and unacceptable.

The city engineers will inspect the stadium to see if it is feasible to repair the stands. The crux of the dilemma then is to repair or build a new stadium.

Bye-bye big time

By MIKE WEBER
Sports Editor

It's time for SU sports fans to face the facts. Face the facts that Syracuse is not just in the midst of falling from the big-time athletic picture, it has already fallen.

Year in and year out, the Orange football team schedules three or four patsies, the "sure win games" of the year. Teams like Maryland, Holy Cross and Pittsburgh constantly show up on the grid slate. Teams that Athletic Director Jim Decker and coach Ben Schwartzwalder should be embarrased to play.

However, there is always the saving factor of having a few really good teams listed. Last year, Michigan State, Penn State and U.C.L.A. were the supposed major powers on the Piety Hill schedule. To be sure Penn State was, with their unbeaten record all the testimonial they need.

However, the Uclans fell apart after being humiliated by SU and struggled to a 3-7 record. The Spartans, while beating Syracuse, managed only a 5-5 ledger. So, what is there to be proud about in beating a team such as Pitt, which finished with a 1-9 season mark?

However, the worst is yet to come. The schedule which has been lined up for next year's basketball team is the supreme insult. Perhaps, the proposed slate would provide a fair test for an average junior college team, but not for what shapes up to be a top-notch squad.

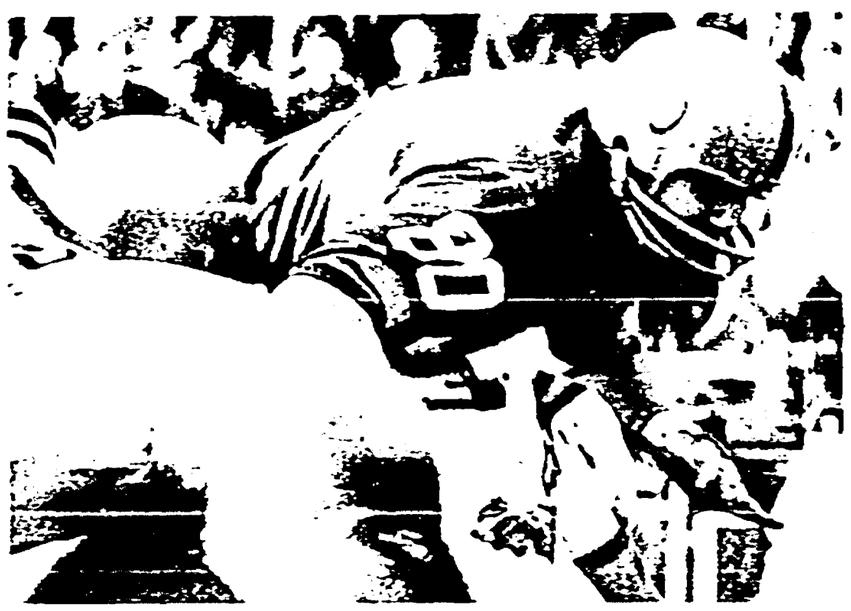
Decker has contracted with such perennial nothings as Rochester, Lafayette and worst of all Westminster. Who's kidding who with this type of schedule?

All in all, the Orange will play only three teams which ranked in the top 50 this past season, St. Johns, Davidson and LaSalle. For a team returning with four of its five starters, Syracuse should face this type of competition every game.

There's an old adage which states "Pride goeth before the fall." The cage slate simply serves as a graphic example.

Basketball season next year should have been one which all SU faithful could have looked forward to with great expectations. The team was rebuilt under first-year mentor Roy Danforth and now appears ready to mix it up with the best. Only the best will not face Syracuse, with the aforementioned exceptions.

If visions of tournament bids and national rankings are busily dancing inside the heads of the athletic department, coach Danforth etc., they'd better look again.



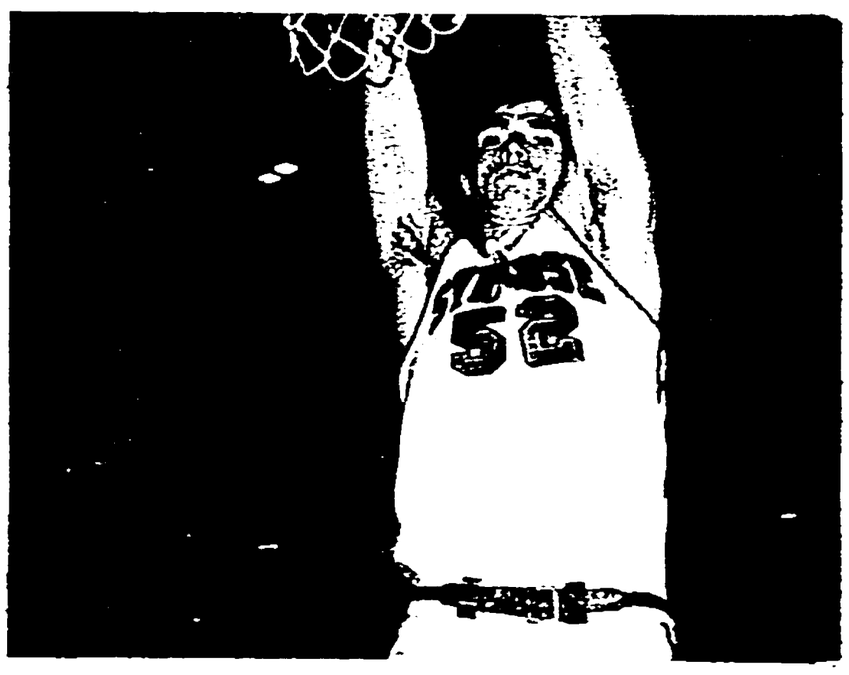
The cagers will play 22 regular season games in addition to the Charlotte Invitational Tournament where, hopefully, they will meet Davidson in the finals. However, if they lose more than four or five games, there is little hope of national recognition.

Playing the type of schedule they do, it will be all too easy to become complacent. The first seven games of the 1969-70 schedule should result in seven wins. However, then comes the tournament and successive games with LaSalle and St. John's. The results of this playing mediocre teams and suddenly facing some of the best could be disasterous. And should one of the "easy wins" become an upset loss, the season may as well end there, for all intents and purposes.

Next basketball season should have been the big one. It should have brought the crowds back to Manley and national recognition back to the Hill. But, it won't. It will, in all probability be one of easy wins and high hopes for the few big games which remain intact.

Someone had better wake up before Syracuse becomes firmly entrenched in "the land of the nobodies." It's easy to turn the other way and let your prominence slide. Once you've fallen, an incredible amount of energy is needed to rise again. Hopefully, that energy is still here.

Orange sports: one of those years



ON TO BIGGER AND BETTER THINGS is hopefully where Art Thoms is headed. A first round draft pick of the Oakland Raiders, Thoms was the big man in the very big Orange defense during his three varsity years with Ben's gridders.

BOB RUST was nearly perfect this year for Ed Carlin's wrestlers. He sported an 8-1 dual meet record, losing his final bout in a controversial 3-2 decision and then placed second in the Eastern Intercollegiate tournament in Princeton. (Photo by Clemens)

MASTERFUL MERMAN Pete Schacht sits poolside following a meet this season. Schacht won titles in the 500 and 1650 meter freestyle events in the Upper New York State Championships in addition to being outstanding in dual meets. (Photo by Forgham)

THE LONG ONE RETURNS. Bill Smith, 6-11 center for Roy Danforth's cagers, led the late season drive that gave the roundballers a final 9-16 record. With a year of experience behind him, SU court fortunes rest squarely on his broad shoulders.

MIKE WEBER
Sports Editor

It was that type of year in Syracuse sports. The type of year where if things went right, the skies would be bright. But things didn't go right most of the time and the sun seldom shone, literally or athletically.

It started on an optimistic note. Ben Schwartzwalder's gridders looked good in soundly whipping U.C.L.A. With Paul Paolisso beginning to mature, the number 10 ranking the Orange enjoyed seemed destined to improve.

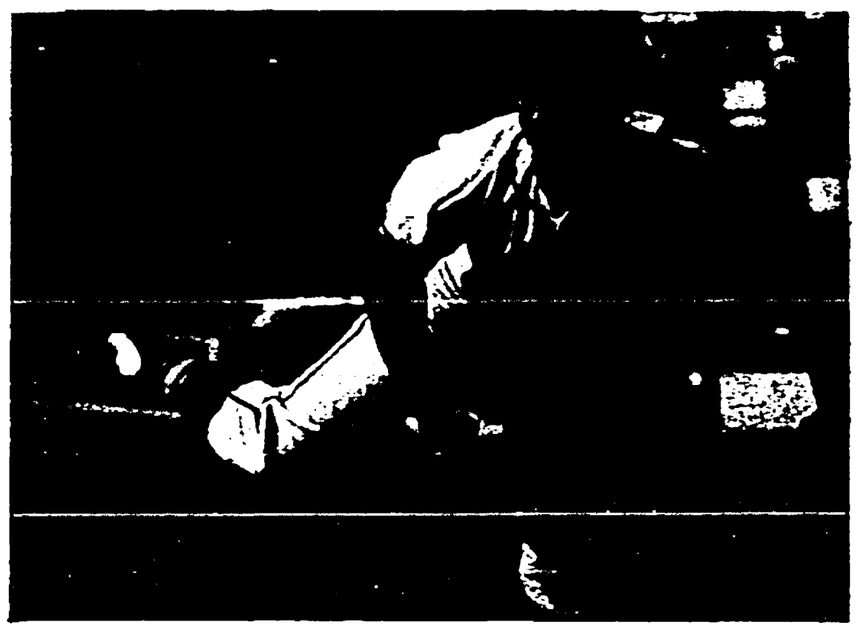
However, along came the Golden Bear to unmercifully maul the Saltine Warrior. Dropped passes, missed blocks and tackles and a huge turnout of partisan Californians spelled disaster for SU. The team's 6-4 final record was much too mediocre for the talent-laden club.

As the snow began to fall, so did Piety Hill's basketball fortunes. Ten of eleven games on the road crippled team spirit during the season's first half. Then the return of Ernie Austin seemed to bring back some of the zing which was missing from the cage attack. Bill Smith continued to develop into a top center while Bob Kouwe and super-sub Bill Finney added punch to the attack. However, the damage had been done and even with a late season spurt, the hoopsters finished at 9-16.

Other winter sports saw a mixed picture as the swimming team established itself as a power while the gymnastics and wrestling squads fell further into oblivion.

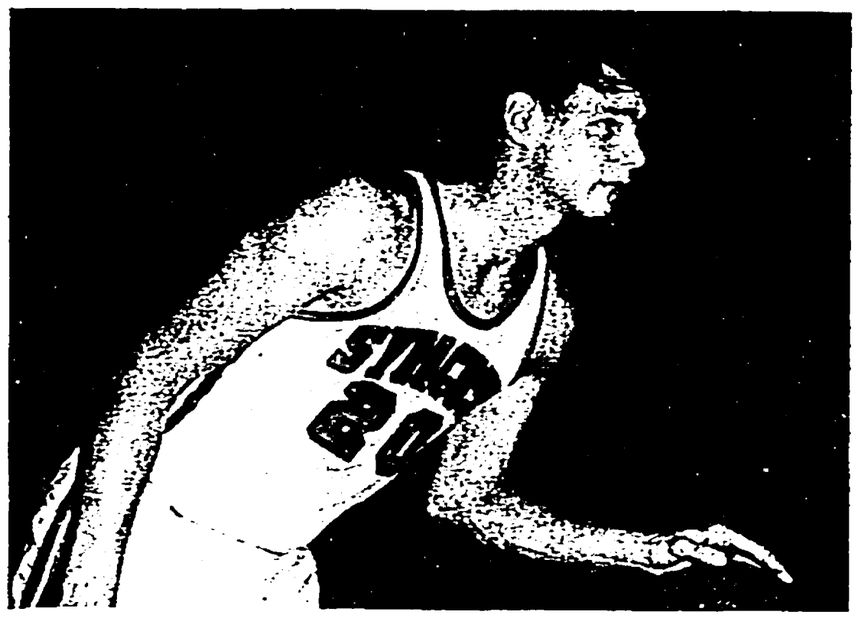
Co-captain Pete Schacht led the mermen to an 8-2 season and the Upper New York State Chapionship title. Frosh-phenom Brian Krause and Ross Prossner will return to add more glitter to their already glowing records.

In wrestling, injuries and dissatisfaction with their coach, their facilities and the athletic department caused one of the finest teams in recent years to struggle through a dismal 3-8 year.



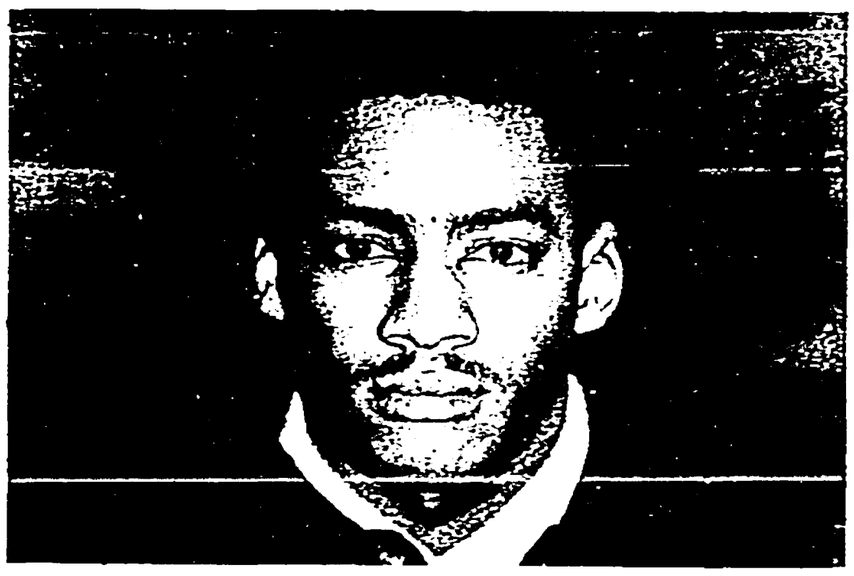
Menawhile, the gymnasts had only two steady performers in George Stalter and Ernie Santangelo. Two men do not win many meets as their 2-6 record indicates.

Spring arrived in the Salt City and once again, optimism reigned. Andy Mogish's baseball team had a fine pitching staff and all they needed to turn in a winning campaign were a few active bats. Sophomore John Unger, who hit .444 as a frosh, seemed likely to finish with another high average in his initial varsity campaign. However, as he fell into a slump, so did his teammates, both at bat and in the field, which helps explain the team's current record of 5-8-1.



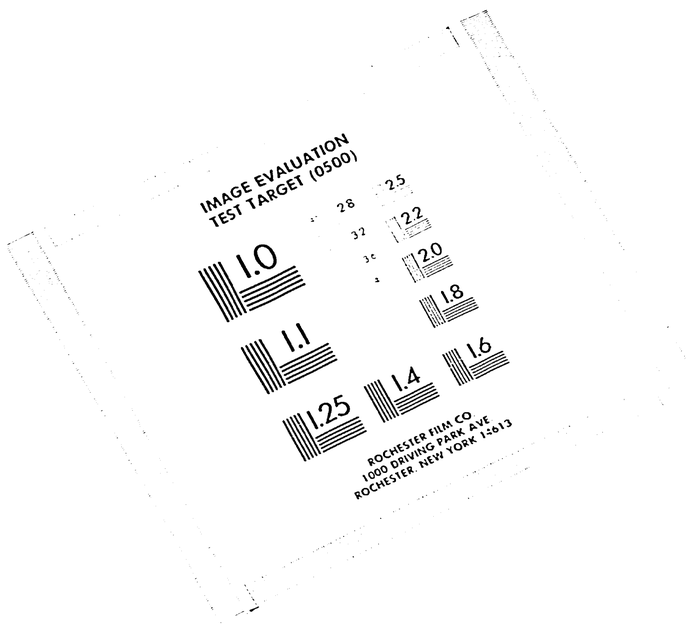
Far and away the brightest spot in the 1968-69 edition of SU sports was the Lacrosse team. Winning their first nine games before being defeated by Army, the stickmen have taken a big step in establishing Lacrosse as the major spring sport on the Hill.

A year of hope--for the most part a year of disappointments. The outlook for the next time around looks promising. A young football team with desire on their side, a mature group of cagers and a Lacrosse unit which will largely return intact all point to 1969-70 as "The Year of the Orange."

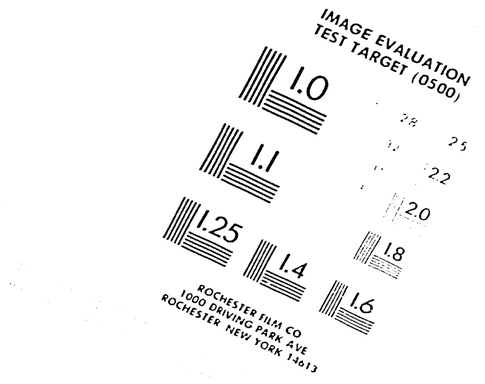


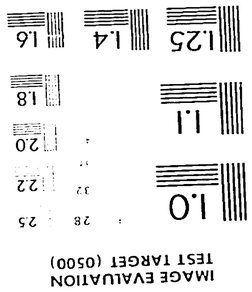
More sports on page 19

GREG LOWE has performed well for Andy Mogish's diamondmen, despite his mediocre won-lost record. His 2.13 earned run average testifies to the fact that shoddy fielding has been largely responsible for his defeats.

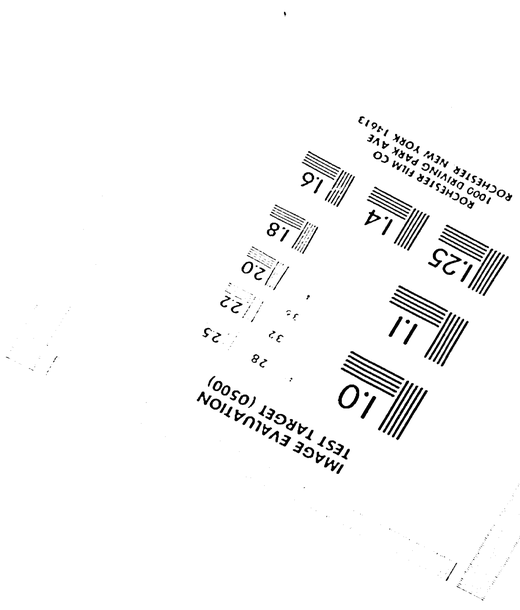


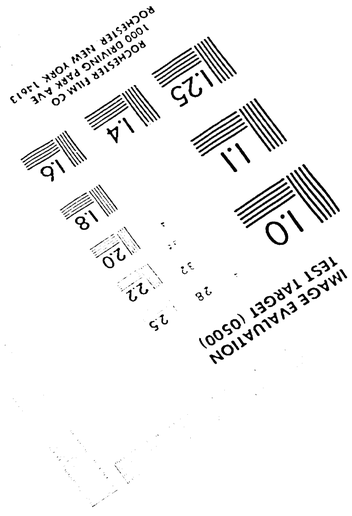
DRIBBLING OR DRIVING, Bob Kouwe was superb. The Newark, New York senior was second high scorer for the Orange basketeers as well as being the top golfer on coach Jim Boeheim's links squad.





THE RECORD RUNNER in more ways than one was track star, Guy Roberts. Not only does he have part-interest in the Marshall Street record store but set his share of SU records in his specialty, the 440 yard dash.





A BIG MAN DOING A BIG JOB was senior Verne Doctor, who starred for Roy Simmons' nationally-ranked Lacrosse team. Doctor was a third team All-American selection a year ago and recently tallied seven points in SU's 14-7 win over Union. (Photo by Robertson)

IMAGE EVALUATION
TEST TARGET (0500)
1.0
1.1
1.25
1.4
1.6
2.0
2.2
2.5
2.8
3.2
3.6
4
ROCHESTER FILM CO
1000 DRIVING PARK AVE
ROCHESTER, NEW YORK 14613

IMAGE EVALUATION
TEST TARGET (0500)
1.0
1.1
1.25
1.4
1.6
1.8
2.0
2.2
2.5
2.8
ROCHESTER FILM CO
1000 DRIVING PARK AVE
ROCHESTER, NEW YORK 14613

IMAGE EVALUATION
TEST TARGET (0500)
1.0
1.1
1.25
1.4
1.6
1.8
2.0
2.2
2.5
2.8
3.2
ROCHESTER FILM CO
1000 DRIVING PARK AVE
ROCHESTER, NEW YORK 14613

IMAGE EVALUATION
TEST TARGET (0500)
1.0
1.1
1.25
1.4
1.6
1.8
2.0
2.2
2.5
2.8
3.2
ROCHESTER FILM CO
1000 DRIVING PARK AVE
ROCHESTER, NEW YORK 14613

IMAGE EVALUATION
TEST TARGET (0500)
1.0
1.1
1.25
1.4
1.6
1.8
2.0
2.2
2.5
2.8
3.2
ROCHESTER FILM CO
1000 DRIVING PARK AVE
ROCHESTER, NEW YORK 14613

AT SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY • SYRACUSE, NEW YORK 13210

The funding for the microfilming of the Syracuse Daily Orange was provided by the State of New York through grants for Preservation and Conservation of Library Research Materials. The collection was filmed by Amtek, Syracuse, New York.

REDUCTION RATIO: 20X
FILMING DATE: 1986

The inconsistent assignment of volume, number, and date makes it difficult to accurately collate the Syracuse Daily Orange and ascertain missing issues. The following is an indication of the problems encountered.

Volume 67	number	06	09/20/1968	Friday
	number	17	09/24/1968	Tuesday
	number	22	10/01/1968
	number	13	10/02/1968
	number	17	10/07/1968	Monday
	number	19	10/09/1968	Wednesday
	number	65	02/14/1969	Friday
	number	65	02/18/1969	Tuesday
	number	101	05/08/1969
	number	101	05/09/1969

GEORGE ARENTS RESEARCH LIBRARY

SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY

Syracuse, New York

Section I Original Material (as filmed)

Title: Syracuse Daily Orange.

Period Covered: February 04, 1969 to May 16, 1969. Volume 67.

Place of Publication: Syracuse University, Syracuse, New York.

Holder of Original Material: Syracuse University Archives.

Editor and Publisher of Microfilm Edition: Syracuse University, Syracuse, New York.

Holder of Master Negative: Syracuse University Archives.

Restrictions: None.

Section II Technical Microfilm Data

Producing Laboratory: Syracuse University Archives. Date: 1986.

Processing Laboratory: Amtek, Syracuse, New York.

Film Size: 35mm.

Reduction Ratio: 20X

Image Placement: 2B

SYRACUSE DAILY ORANGE
VOL. 6 7
FEB 4 1969 - MAY 1 6 1969

SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY
SUOS CULTORES SCIENTIA CORONAT
FOUNDED A.D. 1870

SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY
LIBRARIES
1986

END