

Advanced CliftonStrengths® Coaching Course

INSTRUCTOR-LED COURSE

The most effective coaches do three things differently: They have 1) acquired effective coaching skills and the language and principles of strengths-based development, 2) practiced integrating this knowledge and skills effectively into their coaching, and 3) learned when to apply their talents, skills or knowledge in a way that helps clients express and integrate their greatest talents and strengths into their lives.

Gallup has identified seven CliftonStrengths developmental milestones that guide a coach to strengths mastery:

- Understanding
- Awareness
- Appreciation
- Focus and Investment
- Complementary Partnerships
- Application and Strategy
- Self-Expression and Self-Regulation

These milestones not only help coaches master their talents and strengths, but they also support coaches in understanding where their clients are on their path to strengths mastery. By exploring the different milestones, coaches will better recognize how people learn about and evolve in their understanding of their talents and strengths and will be able to identify and help manage their clients' potential challenges.

Who Should Attend

This program is for CliftonStrengths coaches and serves as continuous education and development for them.

When Don Clifton first introduced the world to CliftonStrengths, he advised, "To polish even one theme so that it becomes a true strength will test your self-awareness and your resourcefulness. To hone all five is the work of a lifetime." Don was acutely aware that mastering strengths was a lifelong journey — a journey that requires continuous learning and refinements.

If you are looking for ways to advance your development as a coach and better guide people on their strengths journey, this course is for you.
