Leap Back in Time

Andrew Carnegie lived during America’s Industrial Revolution. It was a period of great change. From 1870–1900, our society began transforming into the world we know today. The automobile was perfected. The telephone was invented. And, for the first time, people bought newspapers on the street and watched motion pictures in theaters. Some people vacationed in Europe or took trips to Coney Island, New York, to experience the arts and culture of the time. How else do you think this time period helped shape our world today?

Ferris Wheel at the World’s Columbian Exposition, Chicago

Vintage Camera

World’s Columbian Exposition Tickets

The Adventures of Tom Sawyer Book Cover

Charlie Chaplin in Sunnyside

Silent Movie Poster

19th Century Piano