Earn undergraduate credits while spending the summer in New York City and studying the fundamentals of the U.S. legal system and U.S. law. The Pre-Law Institute will expose you to the rigors of law school while you experience the Big Apple.

Classes are taught by Fordham Law School faculty, who will introduce the Socratic method of teaching that is common in legal education. In addition to the course topics, optional sessions will prepare you for the law school admissions process, the first year of law school studies, and legal professional development.

You may choose to receive 3 undergraduate credits or to take the course without credit at a reduced cost. This course is designed for those contemplating law school but all are welcome.
