

Position Available NURSE-MIDWIFERY Faculty Practice Manager

A full-time practice management position is available in the nurse-midwifery program in the Oregon Health & Science University School of Nursing.

This exciting opportunity is open for someone with at least two years of full-scope clinical midwifery employment, experience as a nurse-midwifery student preceptor, and a Master's degree at a minimum. Management experience is preferred. Duties include management of the OHSU nurse-midwifery faculty practice and full-scope midwifery clinical practice. Midwifery student selection, clinical education and evaluation are integral to the position.

The Midwifery Practice Manager works very closely with the Midwifery Financial Manager and the OHSU Nurse-Midwifery Program Director to represent the midwifery faculty practice at OHSU. This position reports to the Nurse-Midwifery Program Director. The salary range for this position is commensurate with educational level and experience.

Interested applicants should respond to this link by submitting a letter of application, curriculum vitae and statement of employment goals.

A National Leader

The nurse-midwifery program is ranked first among nurse-midwifery programs in the U.S. and the School of Nursing graduate programs consistently rank in the top two percent of 350 graduate programs in the nation. (Rankings provided by U.S. News and World Report.)

OHSU School of Nursing is ranked sixth nationally among schools of nursing.
