

Unlike ball valves and gate valves, globe valves are designed for limiting the flow of water. They are operated with a wheel and a stem like gate valves, but the stem is attached to a stopper that seals shut a baffle. Ideal for brewery loop applications (or any application with multiple processes where you need to throttle down flow) globe valves effectively consume less pump head/psi and energy than ball or gate valves.

