EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

SUPPORT FOR HUMANITARIAN ACTION IS ON THE DECLINE

- The survey shows skepticism about individual or collective ability to make a difference
- There is low trust in organizations and in political leaders
- There is significant ambivalence in defending social values over perceived self-interest, which indicates a growing isolationism
- The readiness to act shows a downward trend

POPULISM HAS CROSSED OVER FROM POLITICS

- The survey results reflect a rise in isolationism and nationalism in many countries in recent years
- Most believe their country has done more for refugees than their country has actually done
- Most believe migrants take more than they contribute into the economy
- Most express sympathy, but not empathy

THERE ARE POCKETS OF HOPE

- The younger generation is more positive across the board
- More informed publics recognize the contribution of migrants
- Women and the younger people value diversity
