I thought you might find the two articles below of interest as they provide some insight into the UAE's relationship with Iran. Specifically, the recent speech by Dr. Anwar Gargash, UAE Minister of State for Foreign Affairs, cited below, highlights the major areas of disagreement between the two countries - most notably, their approach towards their nuclear energy programs.

Feel free to get in touch with any questions or concerns,

UAE Differs with Iran over N-issue: Gargash Khaleej Times

1 February 2009

ABU DHABI - The need for the Iranian nuclear programme to have "transparency and credibility" is one of three major areas of disagreement between the two neighbouring Gulf states, according to the UAE Minister of State for Foreign Affairs, Dr Anwar Gargash.

The two other major issues that have adversely affected UAE-Iran relations over the years are the Iranian occupation of three UAE islands and topics related to "what we see as (Iran's) political interference in the Arab world."

Gargash also pointed out that Iran's recent escalation of a war of words against the UAE is neither understandable nor justified. His comments came during an interview with the Dubai-based Al Arabia Satellite TV Channel.

He said, "This kind of escalation does not, in anyway, serve the existing relations between the two countries," adding he viewed the escalation as perhaps being related to the internal situation in Iran and the forthcoming Iranian elections.

Reiterating UAE's 37-year-old stance on its three Iranian-occupied islands, Gargash said, there is an imperative need to deal with this long-standing issue, "through bilateral negotiations or through international arbitration."

However, he added, "On these issues, the Iranian side has its views, but that does not mean there are no other areas of mutual interest where we have cooperation and contacts within this framework."

Gargash firmly rejected Iran's claim that its nationals are being mistreated at UAE airports, and that the Shia clerics are being harassed in the UAE. He said those allegations are totally unfounded.

On the question of UAE's absence from the recent Doha Summit, Gargash explained, it was due to the lack of a quorum.

"We sincerely hope we could start to solve the issues which obstruct the growing and flourishing relations between us without the need to start new ones," Gargash added.

Iran Urged to Stop Irresponsible and Hostile Allegations against UAE
January 31, 2009
The Seoul Times

Abdul Rahman bin Hamad Al Attiyah, the Gulf Cooperation Council's Secretary General reiterated on Jan. 29, 2009 the Council's firm stand in support of the UAE's right of sovereignty over the three islands of Greater Tunb, Lesser Tunb, and Abu Musa, occupied by Iran.

Al Attiyah urged Iran to respond positively to the UAE's sincere calls to resolve the issue through direct negotiations or by referring it to the International Court of Justice.

He also called on Iran to "stop making irresponsible and hostile allegations that lead to destabilising the atmosphere of trust and negatively affect Iran's relations with the countries of the region."

He earlier said that Iran's failure to respond to the Gulf Cooperation Council's condemnation of its setting up of installations on UAE's Abu Mousa Island shows the absence of a constructive view by the Iranian side.

In a recent telephone interview with the Abu Dhabi television programme Al Madar, Abdul Rahman Al Attiyah, GCC Secretary-General, said Iran did not reply to the GCC's communique; condemning Iran's setting up of two offices, a marine rescue centre and a registration office for ships and sailors on UAE's Abu Mousa Island.

The GCC called on Iran to remove all illegal installations and stop illegal procedures on the island.

Al Attiyah said historical facts assert the legal status of the three UAE islands that were occupied by Iran, despite British indifference at the time of their pullout from the region and the subsequent Iranian occupation.

He added that the Iranian occupation was not accepted and is being condemned by all Arabs, and Iran has failed until this moment to get international consent for its occupation.

Al Attiyah asserted that there are sincere hopes and wishes in the UAE and GCC countries as a whole to build positive relations with Iran.

"There are only two obstacles that may jeopardise these hopes, one is undermining the building of bridges of trust and the other is solving the issue of the three islands that belong to the UAE, in addition to respecting the sovereignty of neighbouring states ... and their regional waters," he added.

"For us to build a serious partnership that preserves the rights of every country in the region, it is essential to take the case to an international arbitration level. Such procedures have proven their validity over time, and it is the best way to solve problems ... and [its rulings] are never biased," Al Attiyah said.

Al Attiyah said GCC countries have opened their doors, stressing their good intentions, and invited Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad to the last GCC summit. He said Iran should put more emphasis on good neighbourly relations.

U.S.-UAE "123 Agreement"

I. What is a 123 Agreement?

The United States and the United Arab Emirates (UAE) have announced their intention to sign a bilateral "123 Agreement" establishing a framework for commerce in peaceful, civilian nuclear energy. This agreement follows a Memorandum of Understanding on nuclear cooperation signed by the two countries in April 2008.

A 123 Agreement is authorized by the Atomic Energy Act of 1954, and is neither a commitment to supply nor a license to export nuclear material or technology. Rather, it provides the legal framework within which nuclear commerce must take place. Each export of nuclear material, equipment, or technology must receive a specific export license or other regulatory approval. Among other things, 123 agreements authorize the terms of trade in nuclear technology and material, and establish safeguards for the protection of sensitive material, thereby promoting international standards of nonproliferation. Importantly, these agreements ensure a U.S. role in monitoring and controlling the security of sensitive nuclear materials.

II. What does the UAE 123 Agreement Do?

The UAE accord is strong and comprehensive, meeting the highest standards sought by the Atomic Energy Act, and sets a high bar by which future U.S. agreements will be measured. The agreement includes the following obligations:

No Enrichment or Reprocessing. The UAE makes a binding commitment not to further enrich, reprocess, or otherwise alter the form or content of nuclear material.

Safeguards. All necessary safeguards – including those of the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) – will be maintained in perpetuity with regard to all relevant material and equipment, so long as the material and equipment remain under the jurisdiction of the UAE.

No Nuclear Explosive Purposes. No material, equipment, or technology will be used for any nuclear explosive device, or for research on or development of any nuclear explosive device, or for any military purpose.

Sensitive Technology. Any special nuclear material, production facility or utilization facility produced or constructed by the UAE through the use of any sensitive technology transferred from the United States will be subject to all requirements of the agreement.

Right of Return. The United States reserves the right to require the return of any material or technology if the UAE violates an agreement providing for IAEA safeguards.

Consent Rights on Retransfers. The United States has the right of prior consent to retransfer by the UAE of any material, equipment or components and any special nuclear material produced through their use.

Adequate Physical Protection. Adequate physical protection will be maintained with respect to material. The agreement ensures U.S. visits to monitor compliance.

[Consent Rights on Storage of Weapons-Grade Material. No plutonium or highly enriched uranium transferred under this agreement will be stored in a facility that has not been approved in advance by the United States.]

Restricted Data. There will be no transfer of data concerning the (1) design, manufacture, or utilization of atomic weapons; (2) production of special nuclear material; or (3) use of special nuclear material in the production of energy.

Nonproliferation. Nonproliferation assurances, guarantees, and consent rights will continue in effect notwithstanding the termination or suspension of the agreement.

III. Other UAE Nuclear Cooperation Partners

The UAE has already completed a bilateral cooperation agreement with France, and is in the process of concluding agreements with the United Kingdom and South Korea. A Memorandum of Understanding has also been signed with Japan.

IV. The UAE Nuclear Energy Program

The UAE has determined that a peaceful civilian nuclear energy program will be necessary to meet reasonable projections of its future electricity needs. While a final decision to pursue nuclear energy has not been made, the UAE is committed to a program that meets the highest standards of complete operational transparency, non-proliferation, safety and security. The UAE is working directly with the IAEA and will be conforming its program to IAEA standards. The UAE's commitment to the IAEA and non-proliferation is reflected in the country's strong financial support for the IAEA's nuclear fuel bank.

Growing Energy Needs. The UAE's interest in evaluating nuclear energy is motivated by the need to develop additional sources of electricity to meet future demand projections and to ensure the continued rapid development of its economy. Recent analysis has concluded that national annual peak demand for electricity is likely to rise to more than 40,000 MW's by 2020, reflecting a cumulative annual growth rate of roughly 9% from 2007 onward.

Alternative Resources Costly and Unreliable. Based on these projections, it is clear that known volumes of natural gas that could be made available to the nation's electricity sector would be insufficient to meet future demand. While the UAE possesses large natural gas reserves, it remains a net importer and has faced growing natural gas deficits in recent years. The burning of crude oil is logistically viable, but heavy future reliance on it would entail extremely high economic costs, as well as a significant degradation in the environmental performance of the UAE's electricity sector. Coal-fired power generation would have an even more detrimental effect on environmental performance, while also raising thorny issues related to security of supply. Furthermore, even aggressive development of alternative energies, including solar and wind, could only supply 6-7% of peak demand by 2020.

A Gold Standard for Regulatory Integrity and Transparency. To ensure the highest standards of regulatory integrity and transparency, the UAE has established an independent watchdog agency to monitor the program and has hired a former senior U.S. official from the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to run the agency. The UAE has also established an International Advisory Board to be chaired by Dr. Hans Blix, the former Director General of the IAEA and former Foreign Minister of Sweden. This advisory board will consist of former heads of national regulatory bodies, recognized academic experts, and industry leaders from other countries.

V. The U.S. – UAE Relationship

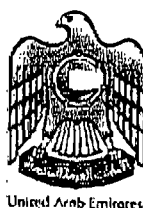

The UAE and United States are reliable allies, with shared security and economic interests. Furthermore, the UAE is a modernizing force in the Middle East, encouraging stability, tolerance, and economic growth.

Long-term Economic Partners. With one of the most open and innovative economies in the world, the UAE is a dependable and substantial economic partner with the United States. The UAE is the United States' largest export market in the Arab World, generating $11.6 billion exports for the year 2007. U.S. companies have played major roles in the development of UAE energy resources, which represent about 10 percent of global oil reserves.

Expanding Relationship. Relations between the countries are growing, especially in the social and cultural sectors. U.S. institutions, including Harvard University, New York University, Michigan State University and the Guggenheim Museum, are working closely with a range of educational and cultural organizations in the UAE, establishing a number of new institutions. In various ways, Johns Hopkins, the Cleveland Clinic and the Mayo Clinic are each contributing to the delivery of health care services and facilities in the UAE. In the days following Hurricane Katrina, the UAE provided $100 million to the United States to assist in relief efforts.

Joint Diplomacy. The UAE works constructively with a range of international entities to find peaceful solutions in the region. Alone and in concert with the Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC), the UAE has called for a nuclear weapon-free Gulf and has appealed directly to Iran on this issue. With the GCC, the UAE supports a peaceful, two-state resolution in Palestine. The UAE welcomes the commitment by the United States to ensure the territorial integrity of Iraq, and to deliver a successful, fair and inclusive political process that engages all Iraqi communities and guarantees the stability of the country.

Confronting Terrorism and Extremism. The UAE works closely with the United States to fight terrorism and extremism in the region and beyond. Cooperation with the United States includes a range of defense and intelligence initiatives, to which the UAE has contributed militarily and financially. More US naval vessels—over 600 in 2006—visit UAE ports than any other port outside the United States. Significant shared law enforcement cooperation helps control illegal money flows and monitor sensitive shipments.

The United Arab Emirates and the United States
Sign Bilateral Agreement for Peaceful Nuclear Energy Cooperation

January 15, 2009, Washington, DC - His Highness Sheikh Abdullah bin Zayed Al-Nahyan, Foreign Minister of the United Arab Emirates, and United States Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice today signed a bilateral agreement for peaceful nuclear cooperation that enhances international standards of nuclear non-proliferation, safety and security.

Known as a "123 Agreement," after Section 123 of the US Atomic Energy Act, the new pact establishes a required legal framework for commerce in civilian nuclear energy between the two countries.

"This agreement will benefit both of our countries, and is another example of the strong relationship between the United States and the United Arab Emirates," said Sheikh Abdullah. "Under the terms of this agreement, the UAE will gain access to significant capabilities and experience in the peaceful use of nuclear energy. This will allow the UAE to develop its civilian nuclear program to the highest standards of safety, security and non-proliferation. The agreement will also open opportunities for US firms to be active participants in the UAE nuclear energy program."

The 123 Agreement follows the April 2008 signing of a Memorandum of Understanding on cooperation in peaceful uses of nuclear energy between the two countries.

The UAE released a detailed policy document on the evaluation and potential development of peaceful nuclear energy in April of last year. The UAE policy is based on the principles of complete operational transparency and the highest standards of safety, security and non-proliferation. The policy was developed following a study that projected massive increases in demand for electricity in the coming decades. The study determined that nuclear energy is a viable and compelling option for meeting the UAE's future electricity demand.

These policy commitments include a pledge to forego any domestic fuel enrichment or reprocessing capability, in favor of long-term external fuel supply arrangements. Additionally, the UAE policy calls for close and continuous coordination with the International Atomic Energy Agency, as well as cooperation with the governments and firms of responsible nuclear supplier nations, including the United States.

The agreement signed today reflects the UAE's policy commitments and meets or exceeds all of the guarantees and controls requirements of Section 123 of the US Atomic Energy Act. Various international experts have called the UAE's program the "gold standard" approach to civil nuclear power development. Once signed, the executive branch forwards the agreement to the US Congress for review.

Additional Background

UAE and the Non-proliferation Regime: The UAE joined the Non-Proliferation Treaty in 1995, is an IAEA member, and cooperates with the Missile Technology Control Regime. The UAE is a partner-nation on the Global Initiative to Combat Nuclear Terrorism and a signatory to the Proliferation Security Initiative, which is aimed at stopping shipments of weapons of mass destruction, their delivery systems, and related materials worldwide.

The UAE supports the establishment of an international nuclear fuel bank under the auspices of the IAEA, as proposed by the Nuclear Threat Initiative. The goal of this international fuel bank is to help make nuclear fuel supplies from the international market more secure, by offering customer states in full compliance with their nonproliferation obligations reliable access to a nuclear fuel reserve under impartial IAEA control should their supply arrangements be disrupted. Financial commitments to the initiative have been made by the UAE, the United States, Norway and the European Union.

UAE Electricity Needs: The UAE has a critical need for new, clean, reliable sources of electricity. The national annual peak demand for electricity is calculated to more than double to 40,000 megawatts by 2020. Current, committed capacity can meet only half of this. After studying all viable forms of power generation, the UAE has determined that nuclear energy could make a significant contribution to meeting the electricity requirements of the UAE. As part of a diversified portfolio of power-generation assets, including renewable and traditional hydrocarbon energy sources, nuclear energy would free additional UAE hydrocarbon resources for the global market, reduce the UAE's carbon footprint, assist in meeting the nation's sustainability requirements, and provide a high degree of energy security for the UAE.

123 Agreement: A '123 Agreement' refers to Section 123 of the U.S. Atomic Energy Act of 1954, which will provide the legal framework for peaceful nuclear energy commerce between the UAE and the U.S. The US has more than 20 such agreements in place, including with Egypt and Morocco.

U.S.-UAE Agreement for Peaceful Nuclear Cooperation (123 Agreement)

Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice and United Arab Emirates (UAE) Foreign Minister Abdullah bin Zayed today signed an Agreement for Cooperation Between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the United Arab Emirates Concerning Peaceful Uses of Nuclear Energy. Once it enters into force, the Agreement (also called a 123 Agreement after the relevant section of the U.S. Atomic Energy Act) will establish the legal framework for the United States to engage in civil nuclear cooperation with the UAE under agreed nonproliferation conditions and controls.

The Agreement will not only establish a firm foundation for mutually beneficial cooperation in civil nuclear energy, but also has the potential to usher in an era of responsible nuclear energy development throughout the Middle East. The UAE's approach to development of civil nuclear energy stands in direct contrast to Iran's pursuit of nuclear capabilities incompatible with IAEA and UN Security Council resolutions. The United States is pleased that this Agreement reflects the UAE's renunciation of any intention to develop domestic enrichment and reprocessing capabilities in favor of long-term commitments to obtain supply of nuclear fuel from reliable and responsible international suppliers. In light of the importance to the United States of the UAE's commitment not to engage in enrichment or reprocessing within its borders, activities contrary to that commitment will be grounds for the United States to terminate the Agreement. This Agreement can serve as a model for other countries in the region in pursuing responsible civil nuclear energy development undertaken in full conformity with nonproliferation commitments and obligations.

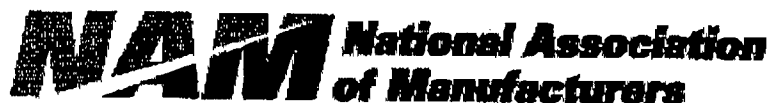

The UAE is an active partner in a range of nonproliferation initiatives, including the Proliferation Security Initiative, the Global Initiative to Combat Nuclear Terrorism and DOE's Megaports Initiative. The United States also welcomes the support the UAE has provided to establishing an International Atomic Energy Agency international fuel bank through its contribution of $10 million and urges other States to make similar commitments. By signing this Agreement today, the United States and the UAE have taken an important step in building a long and fruitful partnership to enhance nonproliferation and energy security in the region. NAM PRESIDENT ENGLER HAILS U.S./UAE "123 AGREEMENT" SIGNED TODAY; URGES QUICK CONGRESSIONAL APPROVAL

123 Agreement Will Be Good for U.S. Exports, Jobs, the Environment, and Nuclear Non-proliferation, Says Engler

WASHINGTON, D.C. January 15, 2009 - National Association of Manufacturers (NAM) President John Engler strongly endorsed the "123 Agreement" on Commercial Nuclear Technology signed today at the Department of State by Secretary Condoleezza Rice and her counterpart from the United Arab Emirates (UAE), Sheikh Abdullah bin Zayed Al Nahyan.

"This is a strong nuclear cooperation agreement and will provide the basis for U.S. companies supplying equipment and services to the nuclear power industry to pursue large commercial opportunities in the UAE," Engler said. "This agreement also bolsters the close friendship and cooperation between the U.S. and the UAE, and provides strict non-proliferation provisions. I commend Secretary Rice and all the U.S. Government officials in several agencies who have worked so hard to achieve this important agreement.

"Given the ambitious plans that the UAE has developed, there will be huge opportunities for U.S. firms across the country and their workers to benefit from much-needed multi-billion dollar procurements from the UAE," Engler said. "Foreign competitors are already out in the UAE aggressively pursuing these contracts. Our best companies and workers need to be able to compete for that work.

"The UAE's nuclear power development, as with nuclear plants in the U.S. and around the world, is essential if we are to reduce global emissions of greenhouse gases while at the same time meet the energy needs of growing economies. I am also encouraged that this agreement includes very strong non-proliferation commitments and structures that are obviously also an important U.S. objective.

"We were honored to host a meeting at the NAM this morning that brought together leaders of the UAE delegation and NAM member companies in the nuclear power equipment and construction sectors," Engler noted. "It was an excellent session. We and our member companies were most impressed with the seriousness with which the UAE is approaching the important issue of nuclear power in all its aspects, including the non-proliferation and environmental commitments.

"Today's 123 Agreement is a very important step, but the U.S. Government, including the Congress, still needs to continue moving forward on these important issues," Engler concluded. "The NAM, along with our member companies, are going to speak forcefully on the importance and urgency of continuing to move forward with our UAE partners. Time is of the essence given the ambitious plans and timeline that the UAE has for moving ahead to implement its nuclear energy program."

UPDATE

January 15, 2009

Today in Washington D.C., the U.S. and the U.A.E. signed a historic 123 agreement on the peaceful uses of nuclear energy. U.A.E. Foreign Minister Sheikh Abdullah Bin Zayid Al Nahyan, and U.S. Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice officiated at the ceremony in the Benjamin Franklin Room in the U.S. Department of State.

The deal will allow American firms to share peaceful civilian nuclear technology, equipment, and know-how with the U.A.E. This will help the U.A.E. meet the country's skyrocketing electricity demands and generate a significant number of jobs for American workers. Once reviewed by Congress, the agreement could yield wide-scale commercial opportunities for U.S. companies. The U.A.E. program could generate over $41 billion in contracts and unlock a range of business in construction, plant management, logistics, plant safety, and transportation for plant workers.

The program has emerged as a gold standard for nonproliferation because of the robust security and nonproliferation guarantees the Emirates are providing. Unique among countries in the region and globally, the United Arab Emirates is officially renouncing uranium enrichment & reprocessing and is signing an additional I.A.E.A. Protocol. This creates a major barrier to any possible future militarization.

The U.S.-U.A.E. Business Council applauds today's action by the U.S. Administration and urges President-elect Obama to quickly signal his support for the deal by sending it to Capitol Hill as soon as possible. To help advocate and inform on behalf of the Agreement, the U.S. U.A.E. Business Council also announced today that it has launched an industry 123 Task Force.

U.S. Chamber Applauds U.S.-U.A.E. Civil Nuclear Agreement

Congress Must Seize Opportunity to Enhance Security, Create Jobs

WASHINGTON, DC—The U.S. Chamber of Commerce applauded today's signing of the U.S.-U.A.E. civilian nuclear cooperation agreement and urged Congress and the new Administration to quickly support this opportunity to strengthen U.S. security, create jobs, and increase trade.

"This agreement creates an important model for the anticipated global renaissance in nuclear energy," said Danny Sebright, president of the Chamber's U.S.-U.A.E. Business Council. "Not only does it meet the highest standards of safety, security, nonproliferation, and operational transparency, but it also creates a significant number of jobs for American companies."

Unique among countries in the region, the U.A.E. is renouncing uranium enrichment and reprocessing, and has gone the extra step in committing to sign an additional protocol with the International Atomic Energy Agency (I.A.E.A.). The country is also committing to all major international nonproliferation standards.

The agreement is an opportunity to strengthen America's trade relations in the region. Already, the U.A.E. is the largest export market for American goods in the Arab world. There are over 750 U.S. companies and 30,000 Americans working in the country.

"Congress must seize on this opportunity to create jobs for Americans," Sebright said. "A delay on Capitol Hill, while other countries in Europe and Asia move forward on agreements with the U.A.E., will lock out American companies and workers."

National Foreign Trade Council Welcomes U.S.-UAE 123 Agreement

Date: 1/15/2009

Written By: Jennifer Cummings or Eric Thomas, The Fratelli Group for NFTC, 202-822-9491

Washington DC - The National Foreign Trade Council (NFTC) today applauded the signing of the U.S.-United Arab Emirates (UAE) 123 Civilian Nuclear Agreement, and congratulated the two nations for working together to achieve such an historic accomplishment. In response to today's signing, the Council released the following statement:

"We welcome the signing of the U.S.-UAE 123 Agreement because it is a 'win-win' for both countries and our bilateral relationship," said NFTC President Bill Reinsch. "For the UAE, the Agreement will go a long way in helping the country to diversify its energy supply at a time when demand for energy is outpacing the availability of its current resources. Similarly, the United States stands to gain from the Agreement as U.S. companies could play an important role in the development of the UAE's civilian nuclear program."

"The United States and the UAE are both committed to peaceful nuclear programs and work in concert with other nations to discourage the proliferation of nuclear weapons," Reinsch continued. "The UAE's commitment to operational transparency, participation in the full range of international nuclear non-proliferation cooperation arrangements, the creation of an independent nuclear regulatory authority and the renouncing of any intention to develop a domestic enrichment and reprocessing capability serves as a model for other nations to adopt responsible practices that enhance global nuclear non-proliferation goals."

According to NFTC Vice President for Regional Trade Initiatives Chuck Dittich, "The UAE has long been a critical U.S. ally and partner on the diplomatic front in helping to promote peace in the Middle East and the responsible use and development of nuclear technology. Just as significant is our longstanding bilateral economic relationship, which the Agreement will help to enhance."

"With nearly $13 billion dollars in two-way trade in 2007 alone and the UAE serving as the largest market for U.S. exports in the region, the United States has a vested interest in taking steps to expand our bilateral relations," Dittich stated.

In addition to welcoming the Agreement, the NFTC urged the incoming Administration to send it to Congress for consideration in a timely fashion.

The NFTC serves as the secretariat for the U.S.-Middle East Free Trade Coalition created to promote the expansion of free trade between the US and the Middle East and to encourage economic development, transparent and accountable governance, and enhanced prospects for the people of the Middle East region.

Why go nuclear?

Much has been made of the global expansion of nuclear power. While experts discuss the pros and cons, countries are moving forward with their plans to build new plants. Of all the energy technologies available, why nuclear?

A PERSPECTIVE FROM THE UNITED ARAB EMIRATES

UNITED ARAB EMIRATES

Abdullah bin Zayed Al Nahyan

Minister of Foreign Affairs for the United Arab Emirates

ON MARCH 23, 2008, THE cabinet of ministers of the United Arab Emirates (UAE) officially endorsed a policy document entitled, "The Policy of the United Arab Emirates on the Evaluation and Potential Development of Peaceful Nuclear Energy." This policy, which was developed by the UAE government, in consultation with the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) and the governments of major nuclear supplier nations, laid out a set of principles, commitments, and strategies that will guide the assessment and potential implementation of a peaceful nuclear energy program within the UAE.

The government of the United Arab Emirates has been gratified by the positive reception that the UAE policy has received, and I believe that such broad international support is a reflection of the thoughtful and responsible manner in which the UAE is approaching this sensitive issue. Nevertheless, it's hard to ignore a discernable trend among some commentators, who although acknowledging the progressive thinking embodied in the UAE policy, continue to ascribe the UAE's interest in nuclear energy to simple technological one-upmanship. Such commentary is wrong and fails to acknowledge either the inherent advantages of nuclear energy or the impact of the policy commitments undertaken by the government of the UAE.

In reality, the UAE's sole interest in nuclear energy is to generate electricity to support its growing and increasingly diverse economy. The UAE continues to enjoy real annual GDP growth rates in excess of 10 percent, as well as an ever-expanding non-oil and gas contribution estimated at more than 66 percent of GDP in 2007. Studies carried out by UAE government entities project that this pace of economic development will result in a tripling of electricity demand by 2020, requiring the installation of more than 30,000 megawatts of new generation capacity. Keeping pace with this demand represents a challenge that requires consideration of every viable option.

Nuclear energy represents a proven, economically competitive, and environmentally promising method for producing electricity. In assessing its options for meeting future electricity demand, the UAE evaluated a comprehensive list of options in addition to nuclear energy, including natural gas-fired power plants, crude oil-fired power plants, and coal-fired power plants, as well as alternative and renewable technologies such as waste-to-energy, solar, and wind. Head-to-head comparisons between these technologies demonstrated the benefits of nuclear energy as a cost-competitive and environmentally friendly form of base-load power generation.

In addition to being virtually free from carbon emissions, nuclear energy was found to be a low-cost alternative to traditional fossil fuel-based options, cheaper than both natural gas and coal, and vastly outperforming crude oil and diesel fuel at current world market prices. Understandably, some parties, observing the abundant crude oil reserves held by the UAE, have suggested that it should simply burn crude oil to generate needed electricity. While such a course is technically feasible, it would result in a dramatic loss of export revenue for the UAE, as well as a proportionate reduction in the amount of crude oil it could supply to the global economy. Importantly for the UAE, nuclear energy also provides a means to address chronic domestic natural gas shortages that have challenged UAE utilities in recent years. Finally, the low variable cost of nuclear energy represents a valuable tool in countering the risk of price volatility inherent in use of fossil fuel-based technologies.

While it is possible to demonstrate cost advantages of nuclear energy over current alternative and renewable energy technologies, the reality is that these technologies do not compete for the same role, owing to the fact that the latter are not base-load technologies. Indeed, the more interesting conclusion arising from UAE analysis is the degree to which these technologies can complement each other in reducing the overall emissions of the country's electricity sector, underlining the fact that the UAE's future energy portfolio is likely to feature fossil fuel, nuclear, alternative, and renewable technologies, as well as focus on demand-side management to increase efficiency.

Importantly, beyond practical energy considerations, the UAE also views its potential adoption of peaceful nuclear energy as an opportunity to drive positive change at the international level. By developing a model for the deployment of nuclear energy that is based on the highest standards of operational transparency, safety, security, and nonproliferation, as well as the principles of long-term sustainability and cooperation with the IAEA and responsible nuclear supplier states, the UAE hopes to chart a new path via which the benefits of nuclear energy may be safely made available to an expanding list of countries. The UAE's commitment to forego domestic enrichment and reprocessing is a key component of its model and is further enhanced by full transparency and cooperation, including the formation of an international advisory board and the favoring of financial arrangements that allow for foreign ownership and operatorship within the country's nuclear energy sector.

Ultimately, the UAE is not trying to simply replicate an existing nuclear program from another state within its borders but is attempting to take an evolutionary step forward in developing a peaceful nuclear energy sector that combines the strengths of its innovative model with the benefits of advanced Generation III light water reactors to create a program that sets new benchmarks for transparency, safety, security, nonproliferation, and sustainability. We believe that success in this endeavor will not only benefit the UAE, its economy, and its people, but will have benefits for the broader international community as well. ■

Commentary on UAE's Approach to Peaceful Nuclear Energy and the US-UAE 123 Agreement

"The United States welcomes the UAE's decision to pursue the development of peaceful uses of nuclear energy. The U.A.E. has committed to complete operational transparency and to pursuing the highest standards of non-proliferation safety and security."

US-UAE Joint Statement, November 17, 2008

"We are very grateful for the important leadership of the UAE in showing the world how nuclear power can be advanced safely, without contributing to nuclear proliferation dangers. The example that the UAE has shown as a state that intends to develop nuclear power based on international sources of fuel services is especially powerful. An IAEA-controlled fuel bank is essential to reducing global nuclear dangers because the same uranium enrichment technology that is used to make nuclear reactor fuel can also be used to make material for a nuclear weapon."

Senator Sam Nunn, Co-Chairman, Nuclear Threat Initiative

"If I was going to write a template on how to begin a new nuclear programme and to get the world behind you instead of against you, I would say Abu Dhabi is doing it exactly the right way. It's best practice multiplied by three."

Lady Barbara Judge, chairwoman of the UK Atomic Energy Authority, in "UK's atomic energy chief praises UAE policy style," The National, November 13, 2008

"The US-UAE defense and security partnership is extensive and deep in a number of areas critical to mutual interests in the region and around the world. In a volatile and dangerous region, the UAE is a friend and a partner in pursuing stability and a path of moderation. The strength of the proposed UAE 123 Agreement is due, in large part, to the forward-looking policies already adopted by the UAE, as building blocks for its peaceful nuclear energy program. The proposed US-UAE 123 Agreement will materially advance important U.S. interests and set an important example in contrast to the one being pursued by extremists."

William S. Cohen, CEO and Chairman of The Cohen Group and former Secretary of Defense and US Senator

"There is a policy instrument immediately available to strengthen Washington's diplomatic position on Iran, while simultaneously demonstrating American support for moderate Arab governments that have been put on the spot by Israel's Gaza onslaught. It is an arrangement known as a 123 Agreement...which would enable the United States to sell nuclear technology and equipment to the United Arab Emirates for a civilian nuclear energy program."

"The UAE approach provides a model that not only Iran but also other nations interested in developing nuclear energy should follow."

Jim Hoagland

"Countering Iran in Gaza and Beyond," The Washington Post, January 4, 2009

"The policies and practices adopted by the next states to embark on nuclear-power projects can set a new standard to help correct the damaging Iranian precedent. Central to this new standard should be a shared understanding that the proliferation risks of nuclear energy are manageable as long as countries accept full transparency with enforceable verification and concentrate on the technologies they really need, while staying away from the sensitive parts of the fuel cycle.

"Examples of this are Bahrain and the United Arab Emirates, both of which have recently stated unequivocally their intention to forgo enrichment and reprocessing. The UAE has also published a white paper on its nuclear policy underlining its non-proliferation intentions, including acceptance of the IAEA safeguards Additional Protocol. This sets a positive model for the region and beyond."

Dr John Chipman, Director General and Chief Executive
International Institute for Strategic Studies

"The United States and the UAE can meet critical economic and commercial goals with the 123 Agreement. US companies would have access to an important and potentially large market—and better position themselves for the global nuclear renaissance. The US government would gain a greater role in supporting the UAE's model for the development of peaceful, civilian nuclear energy. Moreover, the UAE would have access to some of the world's safest and best nuclear energy technologies."

Danny E. Sebright, President
US-UAE Business Council

"The UAE appears to recognize that the expansion of nuclear energy programs in the Middle East is perceived internationally as carrying with it the potential threat of further proliferation. Through added transparency and the explicit adoption of a proliferation-resistant nuclear fuel cycle, the Emirates appear to be seeking to allay such concerns to the extent possible."

"Algeria, Emirates Plan Nonproliferation-Friendly Nuclear Programs; Egypt Keeps Fuel Cycle Options Open, Rejects Expanded IAEA Monitoring," WMD Insights, June 2008

"Some people have been concerned with this explosion of interest in nuclear energy in the Middle East, an area that has seen at least three countries violate their (Non-Proliferation Treaty) agreements and pursue nuclear weapons," said Mark Fitzpatrick, a proliferation expert at the International Institute for Strategic Studies in London.

"But Fitzpatrick said the UAE looks set to follow a different path if it does go ahead with its nuclear program. It has committed to full transparency and plans to import its nuclear fuel, which would be a barrier to building nuclear weapons.

"The UAE has accepted several conditions that would create a strong wall between nuclear power on the one hand and nuclear weapons on the other," he said. "They've said they will accept full transparency ... and they would not pursue any sensitive fuel-cycle technologies, which are necessary in the development of nuclear weapons. And with export regulations tightened and the ports of the UAE strictly controlled, Fitzpatrick said Abu Dhabi was now setting an example for the region.

"The UAE is standing as a kind of model and it's creating a positive cascade and it's also a strong contrast to Iran," he said. "The UAE and Iran are on opposite ends of the spectrum here."

What They've Said About UAE Electricity Needs

Electricity Demand in Region

UAE power demand is among the largest in the region due to financial and tourist projects as well as a growing population. According to Global Insight, UAE has added 24 percent electricity-generating capacity at an annual rate over the last 30 years. Current total capacity for electricity production is around 16.7 gigawatts (GW), but will need to increase further considering the 10 percent per year demand rise expected through 2010.

Abu Dhabi's peak electricity demand is forecast to rise a whopping 304 per cent to 23,554 mega-watts (MW) in 2030, driven by surging demand in every sector, a senior official of the Abu Dhabi Water and Electricity Company (Adwec) said yesterday.

Nuclear Energy

Facing growing energy needs, the UAE is assessing the possibility of developing a peaceful nuclear energy program. The UAE government is acutely aware of the sensitivities involved in the deployment of nuclear reactors and even the simple evaluation of the possibility. Accordingly, the UAE government has worked to make its peaceful and unambiguous objectives clear, in terms of its current evaluation of a peaceful nuclear energy program as well as its potential future deployment.

Need for Electricity

The UAE's interest in evaluating nuclear energy is motivated by the need to develop additional sources of electricity to meet future demand projections and to ensure the continued rapid development of its economy.

Recent analysis has concluded that national annual peak demand for electricity is likely to rise to more than 40,000 megawatts by 2020, reflecting a cumulative annual growth rate of about nine percent from 2007.

Based upon these projections the UAE has taken steps to evaluate viable options to meet future demand. As part of this evaluation, it was determined that the known volumes of natural gas that could be made available to the nation's electricity sector would be insufficient to meet future demand, providing adequate fuel for only 20,000-25,000 MW's of power generation capacity by 2020.

While the burning of liquids (e.g., crude oil and/or diesel) was found to be logistically viable, this option would entail extremely high economic costs, as well as poor environmental performance. Coal-fired power generation offered a lower relative price, compared to liquids-fired power generation, but its widespread use would have an even more severe detrimental effect on environmental performance. The coal option also raised thorny issues related to security of supply.

Evaluation of alternative energies, including solar and wind suggested that, while these options are being deployed within the UAE, even aggressive development could only supply a small portion (4-5%) of peak electricity demand by 2020.

Commitment to Peaceful Program

In order to make clear its intentions with specific regard to nuclear power, the government of the UAE released an in-depth policy paper to the public, addressing how the potential development of nuclear energy would be pursued safely, securely and peacefully. The UAE government formally endorsed the following policy statements as a reflection of its views on the potential establishment of a peaceful civilian nuclear energy program in the UAE:

1. The UAE is committed to complete operational transparency.

Embassy of the United Arab Emirates

3522 International Court, NW Suite 400 | Washington, DC 20008 | T (202) 243-2400 | F (202) 243-2432 | www.uae-embassy.org | www.uae-ua.org

2. The UAE is committed to pursuing the highest standards of non-proliferation.
3. The UAE is committed to the highest standards of safety and security.
4. The UAE will work directly with the IAEA and conform to its standards in evaluating and potentially establishing a peaceful nuclear energy program.
5. The UAE hopes to develop any peaceful domestic nuclear power capability in partnership with the governments and firms of responsible nations, as well with the assistance of appropriate expert organizations.
6. The UAE will approach any peaceful domestic nuclear power program in a manner that best ensures long-term sustainability.

Through the adoption of these policies and actions, the government of the UAE hopes to establish a new model through which non-nuclear states may explore and potentially deploy nuclear energy with the full support and confidence of the international community. Steps in the process have included:

- In March 2008, the UAE cabinet approved a memorandum submitted by Foreign Minister HH Sheikh Abdulla bin Zayed Al Nahyan on the UAE's potential development of a peaceful nuclear energy program.
- In April 2008, the full details were released in the Policy of the United Arab Emirates on the Evaluation and Potential Development of Peaceful Nuclear Energy.
- Mr. Hamad Al Kaabi was named Special Representative of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs for International Nuclear Cooperation and Ambassador to the International Atomic Energy Agency.
- Virginia-based Thorium Power is providing consulting services to the UAE on the design, development and management of the key organizations required to implement a nuclear energy program according to the highest international standards.
- In June 2008, UAE government entities began informal talks with international contractors regarding the appointment of a managing agent to assist in the possible design and construction of nuclear power plants within the UAE. The Emirates Nuclear Energy Corporation invited leading international firms to an exploratory conference in Abu Dhabi and continues to assess the capabilities of interested firms with the aim of identifying an ideal candidate for the potential role of managing agent.
- In June 2008, a UAE delegation met with representatives of the IAEA in Vienna to brief the latter on the UAE's ongoing evaluation of the potential for a peaceful nuclear energy program in the UAE. The UAE delegation sought to obtain IAEA guidance on means for improving the evaluation process, as well as agreeing upon new areas for technical cooperation with the IAEA.
- In August 2008, the UEA pledged $10 million to support an IAEA-administered international uranium fuel bank initiative, resulting from a proposal by the Nuclear Threat Initiative (NTI). The fund is designed to provide assurances against supply disruptions, while strengthening the nuclear non-proliferation regime.
- Englewood, Colorado-based CH2M Hill won a 10-year contract to manage the UAE's nuclear program in October 2008.

- Paul C. Rizzo Associates, a leading global engineering and consulting firm based in Pennsylvania, is working on siting and engineering during the planning process.

A number of international agreements have been concluded or are underway:

- In January 2009 HH Sheikh Abdulla and US Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice signed a bilateral agreement for peaceful nuclear cooperation, which enhances international standards of nuclear non-proliferation, safety and security. Known as a "123 Agreement," the new pact establishes a required legal framework for commerce in civilian nuclear energy between the two countries. A Memorandum of Understanding on cooperation on peaceful uses of nuclear energy had been signed in April 2008.
- In January 2008, the UAE and France agreed to cooperate on a peaceful nuclear program. The agreement set a framework for continued and future cooperation on nuclear energy between the two countries.
- In May 2008 the UAE has signed a memorandum of understanding with the United Kingdom for cooperation in the use of nuclear energy.
- In January 2009 Japan's Ministry of Economy, Trade and Industry and the UAE's foreign ministry signed a memorandum of cooperation on the development of civilian nuclear energy in the UAE.

Other Steps to Support Nonproliferation

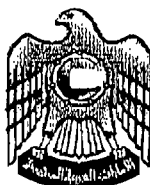

- The UAE joined the Nonproliferation Treaty in 1996, is a member of the International Atomic Energy Agency, and cooperates with the Missile Technology Control Regime. UAE is also a partner nation on the Global Initiative to Combat Nuclear Terrorism.
- Dubai Port participates in the US Department of Energy's Megaports Initiative, a cooperative effort aimed at deterring terrorists from using the world's seaports to ship illicit materials; detecting nuclear or radioactive materials if shipped via sea cargo; and interdicting harmful materials so they cannot be used by terrorists.
- The UAE is a signatory to the Proliferation Security Initiative (PSI), which is aimed at stopping shipments of weapons of mass destruction, their delivery systems, and related materials worldwide.
- The UAE participates in the US Container Security Initiative (CSI), a security regime that includes a team of US Customs and Border Protection officers permanently stationed inside Dubai's ports, where they work closely with Dubai Customs to screen containers destined for the United States.
- Ports operated by Dubai Ports World participate in the Security Freight Initiative, a US Department of Homeland Security pilot program to test the methods used to screen US-bound cargo for radiation.
- Dubai Ports World has been certified as a partner in the Customs-Trade Partnership Against Terrorism, a government-business cargo security initiative led by the US Department of Homeland Security's Customs and Border Protection component.

- The U.S. Department of State, through its Export Control and Related Border Security Assistance program, is helping the UAE improve its enforcement and licensing capabilities aimed at curbing the transshipment of illicit materials.

United Arab Emirates-US Memorandum of Understanding on Cooperation in Peaceful Uses of Nuclear Energy

Monday 21 April 2008, Manama: UAE Foreign Minister, His Highness Sheikh Abdulla bin Zayed Al-Nahyan, and US Secretary of State, Condoleezza Rice, signed a Memorandum of Understanding on cooperation in peaceful uses of nuclear energy on April 21, 2008 in Bahrain.

The signing of the UAE-US MOU follows the public launch by the United Arab Emirates of a detailed policy document on the evaluation and potential development of peaceful nuclear energy within the UAE. The UAE policy is based upon the principles of complete operational transparency and the highest standards of safety, security and non-proliferation. It also contains a number of commitments and strategies designed to ensure that these principles would be upheld by any UAE domestic nuclear program, including a pledge to forego any domestic enrichment or reprocessing capability in favor of long-term external fuel supply arrangements. Additionally the UAE policy calls for close and continuous coordination with the IAEA, as well as cooperation with the governments and firms of responsible nuclear supplier nations.

Commenting on the MOU signing, the Foreign Minister remarked that "the UAE-US Memorandum of Understanding represents an excellent example of the kind of cooperative relationships that the UAE hopes to forge with responsible nuclear supplier states in the area of peaceful nuclear energy." Noting the potential mutual benefits to both parties from deepening cooperation in the development of the UAE's domestic nuclear energy sector, the Foreign Minister further welcomed the prospect of negotiating a more extensive bilateral agreement for peaceful nuclear cooperation (known as a "Section 123 Agreement" in the United States) which would establish the necessary legal basis for trade in significant nuclear commodities between the two countries.

The Foreign Minister also presented Secretary Rice with a diplomatic note endorsing the Global Initiative to Combat Nuclear Terrorism. The United Arab Emirates is the 67th nation to join the Initiative, which is an action-oriented, flexible network of partner nations working to address all aspects of the nuclear terrorism threat, including deterrence, denial, detection, material confiscation, and response.

U.S.-United Arab Emirates Memorandum of Understanding on Nuclear Energy Cooperation

Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice and UAE Foreign Minister Sheikh Abdulla bin Zayed Al-Nahyan signed a Memorandum of Understanding on cooperation in peaceful uses of nuclear energy on April 21, 2008 in Bahrain. The UAE's recently-announced policy on domestic nuclear energy, which notes that the UAE chose to forgo a costly domestic reprocessing and enrichment capability in favor of long-term arrangements for the assured supply of foreign-manufactured nuclear fuel, serves as a model for the economical and responsible pursuit of nuclear power.

The approach of the United Arab Emirates is consistent with the principles emphasized in the Joint Declaration on Nuclear Energy and Nonproliferation, issued by Presidents Bush and Putin on July 3, 2007. The U.S.-UAE Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) is a tangible expression of the United States' desire to cooperate with states in the Middle East, and elsewhere, that want to develop peaceful nuclear power in a manner consistent with the highest standards of safety, security and nonproliferation. As President Bush and Secretary Rice have stated on several occasions, nuclear power will be an increasingly important clean energy source throughout the world as states strive to meet growing energy needs while at the same time controlling greenhouse gas emissions.

Secretary Rice also received from Foreign Minister Sheikh Abdullah a diplomatic note endorsing the Global Initiative to Combat Nuclear Terrorism. The United Arab Emirates is the 68th nation to join the Initiative, which is an action-oriented, flexible network of partner nations working to address all aspects of the nuclear terrorism threat, including deterrence, denial, detection, material confiscation, and response.

In addition to signing these two documents, the two parties affirmed their interest in negotiating a bilateral agreement for peaceful nuclear cooperation (sometimes referred to as a "Section 123 Agreement" after the relevant section of the U.S. Atomic Energy Act) to establish the necessary legal framework for trade in significant nuclear commodities between the two countries.

Countering Iran in Gaza and Beyond

By Jim Hoagland
Sunday, January 4, 2009; B07

A strange brew of wishful thinking and studied inaction passed for George W. Bush's Middle East peace policy for eight years. But in his final days, this president must act to contain the consequences of a regional conflict he has allowed to fester.

Israel's brutal assault on Hamas rocketeers -- and the Palestinian civilians among whom they hide in the Gaza Strip -- is not just another tactical round of mutual, if unequal, bloodletting by ancient adversaries. Israel's campaign was skillfully conceived with strategic aims that involve Iran, the American political calendar and perhaps the nature of pan-Arabism today.

Bush must respond at that strategic level -- within his time-limited means. It is pointless to expect him suddenly to exert pressure on Israel for lasting concessions to the Palestinians. He did not just give Israel a green light to inflict as much damage as possible on Hamas once that radical movement foolishly renounced a six-month-old truce. Bush knocked down the traffic light post and waved the Israelis through the intersection.

His unwavering support will not have amazed Israeli leaders. However outwardly positive Barack Obama was about Israel during the campaign, the president-elect is an unknown quantity for them. To Israel it must have made sense to slam Hamas as hard as it could under Bush and start with a theoretically clean slate with Obama on Jan. 20.

In the interim, U.S. policy must concentrate on limiting any political gains the spasm of violence in Gaza could bring for Iran and Syria, which are both happy to fight Israel to the last Palestinian. Israel launched the Gaza operation to disrupt the enervating proxy warfare that Iran wages through Hamas and to demonstrate to Iran that Israel is not a toothless tiger that can be ignored.

Today only Israel poses any threat of military action to halt Iran's drive to enrich enough uranium to build a nuclear bomb. Bush's departure and Obama's promises to engage Iran will limit U.S. action in 2009 to diplomacy.

Fortunately there is a policy instrument immediately available to strengthen Washington's diplomatic position on Iran, while simultaneously demonstrating American support for moderate Arab governments that have been put on the spot by Israel's Gaza onslaught. It is an arrangement known as a 123 Agreement (after Section 123 of the Atomic Energy Act), which would enable the United States to sell nuclear technology and equipment to the United Arab Emirates for a civilian nuclear energy program.

The agreement is entirely valid and desirable on its own terms, which I will detail in a subsequent column. The short version for now is that the UAE, a small but influential Persian Gulf state dominated by Abu Dhabi, has convincingly demonstrated through the international agreements it has already signed that it will not pose a proliferation threat. The commitments to inspections it will undertake in the new accord with the United States would strengthen outside controls.

Most important, the UAE has explicitly renounced ever acquiring its own uranium enrichment or reprocessing systems and will require vendor nations to take back all spent nuclear fuel.

Iran's refusal to consider those safeguard arrangements has blocked progress in international negotiations and convinced analysts that it secretly is working on a bomb. The UAE approach provides a model that not only Iran but also other nations interested in developing nuclear energy should follow. And support by the United States would establish that Washington is not against other countries acquiring peaceful nuclear programs, as Iran charges.

U.S. and UAE officials have discussed the possibility of a mid-January signing of the 123 Agreement, which would then be sent to Congress. The Democratic majority should wave the deal through.

Seizing the chance to highlight U.S. cooperation with Abu Dhabi -- which has sent troops to Afghanistan and taken other steps to fight terrorism -- would finally give content to U.S. verbal commitments to Gulf Arabs, who fear Iran and its proxies, Hamas and Lebanon's Hezbollah.

Tariq Alhomayed, a courageous columnist for Saudi Arabia's London-based Asharq al-Awsat newspaper, noted last week that Iran's Arab spokesmen in the region have attacked Egypt much more savagely than Israel for the Gaza tragedy. This shows, he continued, that "Iran is a real threat to Arab security, as today it launched a war against Egypt, tomorrow against Saudi Arabia . . ." American policy did not produce the strategic changes occurring in the Middle East. But Washington should work to understand and use them to reengage decisively in a problem too long neglected.

New Web Site Provides Information, Data on Proposed US-UAE 123 Agreement on Nuclear Energy Cooperation

Washington, DC - The Embassy of the United Arab Emirates (UAE) launched a Web site containing extensive information about the proposed development of a peaceful, civilian nuclear energy program in the UAE and about a US-UAE bilateral agreement for peaceful nuclear cooperation (known as a "Section 123 Agreement"), which is now being finalized by the two countries. The Web site is at www.usuae123.com.

The Web site includes UAE policy documents and statements, statistics related to electricity needs, commentary from third-parties about the UAE plans, as well as frequently asked questions. The site will be a useful resource for members of the media, the US government, and the general public who wish to learn more about the UAE's plans for a peaceful, civilian nuclear energy program and the 123 Agreement.

Additional Background

The UAE released a detailed policy document on the evaluation and potential development of peaceful nuclear energy within the UAE in April 2008. The UAE policy is based upon the principles of complete operational transparency and the highest standards of safety, security and non-proliferation. It also contains a number of commitments and strategies designed to ensure that these principles would be upheld by any UAE domestic nuclear program.

Those commitments include a pledge to forego any domestic enrichment or reprocessing capability in favor of long-term external fuel supply arrangements. Additionally, the UAE policy calls for close and continuous coordination with the International Atomic Energy Agency, as well as cooperation with the governments and firms of responsible nuclear supplier nations.

The pending 123 Agreement reflects and enhances these commitments and meets all of the guarantees and control requirements of Section 123 of the US Atomic Energy Act. The Agreement promotes mutual security and economic interests in the region. Both countries are especially focused on stability and security in the Arabian Gulf, confronting terrorism and extremism, and encouraging global trade.
