scarce funding from the National Science Foundation, Environmental Protection Agency and other research projects.

The primary goal of the space station— which the General Accounting Office recently said may eventually cost $10 billion more than current estimates—is to study how human beings fare in space in preparation for a long voyage to Mars. But in March the National Research Council's Space Sciences Board reported that the space station "cannot be supported on scientific grounds."

More recently, a number of scientific groups—including several that were not signatories to yesterday's letter—have issued separate statements criticizing the program. In May, the Council of Scientific Society Presidents concluded that "scientific justification is lacking for a permanently manned space station."

Last month the Institute of Electrical and Electronic Engineers—many of whose members derive their livelihoods from space and defense contracts—cautioned that spending more than $10 billion on the station would "seriously detract from other important civilian space programs such as satellite communications and remote sensing."

Nonetheless, about half of the members of the Senate already have expressed support for the space station program.

Last month, Office of Management and Budget Director Richard G. Darman derided protests from scientific groups as "factional cannibalism" and said that space-station opponents were "politically naive" in believing that money saved from the project would be transferred to other research programs.

"We are not sanguine about the prospects for success," Park said. "But we do have an obligation to speak out."

THOUGHTS OF ROC'S FREDRICK CHIEN ON LIFE AND WORK

HON. CLAUDE HARRIS

OF ALABAMA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, July 10, 1991

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. Speaker, I have been made aware of an inspirational article in Taipei's Central Daily News (June 12, 1991) authored by Dr. Fredrick Chien, Foreign Minister of the Republic of China. As many of my colleagues know, Minister Chien served as the Representative of the Republic of China in Washington from 1983 through 1988. During his Washington tenure, Ambassador Chien frequently impressed his friends with his keen intelligence, wit and humor, leading many of us to believe that he was a born diplomat. Yet interestingly enough, in this article Minister Chien reminisces about his bashfulness as a child and his conscientious efforts to be productive in both his studies and his work. To help my colleagues better understand Fredrick Chien and anyone else interested in the thoughts of a great Chinese diplomat, Professor Nathan Mao of Shippensburg University has translated Dr. Chien's article as follows:

"IN THE UNIVERSE THERE IS ABSOLUTELY NO EASY SITUATION; IN THE HUMAN WORLD WHERE WOULD YOU FIND TIME TO WASTE?"
(By Fredrick Chien)

At my home a couplet of two lines calligraphed on two vertical scrolls hang on the wall. It says: "In The Universe There Is Absolutely No Easy Situation; In the Human World Where Would You Find Time to Waste." Every day before I leave my house, I would always glance at the couplet—for self enlightenment and inspiration. After more than ten years, I have truly realized the importance of giving every situation some second thoughts and treasuring the time I have. I have benefitted greatly from the wisdom embedded in the couplet.

I have served a long period of time in the foreign service and on many occasions I have been required to speak extemporaneously with wit and skill. Consequently many people think I am a born diplomat. But, in truth, when I was a young child I was very bashful and even somewhat unsociable. I remember the year when I was four attending kindergarten. Due to my inward nature I was unable to adjust to other children and I cried all the time. Teachers did not know how to handle me, so within a week the principal sent me home to my parents.

To help me overcome my shyness, my parents deliberately sent me to grade school even earlier than usual. Still I kept to myself and I very seldom had anything to do with classmates.

When I was in eighth grade my family moved from Shanghai to P'ei ping. For a year and a half I attended a Christian school which emphasized the intellectual, moral, physical and social development of children. And this progressive curriculum was the key which unlocked my inner self. From then on my loner personality changed as I opened myself.

At Chienkuo Senior High School and later at the National Taiwan University I participated in a number of activities, through which I became not only more open but also more experienced. But I did not dare to ignore my school work. In fact, I became even better at it. During my four years at college, I usually earned the highest or the second highest grade point average. I always feel that maintaining a high academic average is a student's first responsibility and extra-curricular activities are just that—extra things to do after school work has been completed. One's priorities must not be reversed.

After graduating from college I had two years of reserve officer training. The training benefitted me tremendously. It sharpened my sight and auditory abilities, allowing me to concentrate when I studied and to be in control of my surroundings. For many years now, if proper arrangements have been made, I am able to preserve my energy either working or studying. This ability is the end result of my reserve officer training.

At Yale University I made special efforts to avoid wasting time. I acknowledged for a fact that my academic preparation and mental abilities were behind those of my American classmates. Therefore I did not dare to lose any possible moment when I could be studying. Every time professors went to the library to secretly check on students' progress, they would always find me in the library. It did not matter when they would visit the library.

I am too stingy to part with one second, one minute. Even when I am extremely busy I must find time to read a few books. In today's world if a person can't enrich himself he will be ignorant of new knowledge and new information. I have always felt that I don't have enough time at my disposal and I therefore truly realize how important it is to "treasure time." This applies not only to studying but also to working as well.

In nearly twenty years of public service I have a new assignment every five years. Every time I take on a new job I have to start from the beginning. When I was little, elders would always say: "Eat what you have in your bowl, but what is in the pot." I have always kept this maxim in mind. Before an assignment becomes a reality, I always concentrate on my post at hand, trying my best to do it right.

I am a public servant and I try my best in every thing I do. If one day I discover that I can't contribute any more to my country, I will consider giving my post to someone else. Otherwise I will steadfastly keep to my post, any time and any where.

STATEMENT ON UNSUNG HEROES

HON. CARDISS COLLINS

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, July 10, 1991

Mrs. COLLINS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I would like to call the attention of my colleagues to an event that took place in my district recently. Too often, we in the Congress are so riveted to the high profile events within the beltway that the momentous community level events tend to not be recognized for their significance in the day-to-day lives of our constituents. A few weeks ago, a neighborhood newspaper within the 7th Congressional District, The Austin Voice, celebrated the accomplishments of community members whose dedication and commitment have enriched the lives of fellow residents.

By so recognizing the accomplishments of these individuals, the paper is reaffirming the standard measurement to inspire our younger population and manifesting the community's honor in its citizens.

The following are the recipients of the recognition awards:

Mr. and Mrs. Dwayne and Cata Truss for coaching boys and girls baseball and softball teams in the Nelson Mandela Baseball/Softball league.

Ms. Mary Munoz for her unfledgling work with teens in drug prevention and alternative lifestyle modeling.

Ms. Mary Henley for founding the Comprehensive Community Organization to provide adult literacy instruction.

Ms. Cynthia Richardson for instituting cultural and entrepreneurial changes in the Austin community.

Mr. Albert Sharp for this tireless work with young offenders and the forgotten and invisible youths of Austin.

Ms. Susie Haynes and Ms. Amy Conley for their unselfish commitment to rescuing homeless women and children.

I join The Austin Voice in celebrating the accomplishments of these individuals and I thank each of the honorees for the valuable contributions they have made to the 7th Congressional District.
