PRESS RELEASE - EN - <http://ow.ly/TUik30dcrJu> KU - <http://ow.ly/MYcj30dcrNC> KRG and Catalan representatives meet in Washington Ms Bayan Sami Abdul Rahman, KRG Representative to the United States today received the Chief Representative of the Government of Catalonia in North America, Mr. Andrew Davis. Both sides exchanged views on issues of common interest, in particular Kurdistan and Catalonia's aspirations for independence. They stressed that it is the democratic right of the people of Kurdistan and Catalonia to hold referendum on their future and hoped that members of the international community would respect and support such democratic practices. They also discussed the humanitarian and military developments in Iraq and Kurdistan, as well as the post-ISIS era.

2/23: Iraq & @KurdistanRegion After ISIS w/ @BayanRahman, Kenneth M Pollack, @RanjAlaaldin, Eric Brown, @MPPregent <http://bit.ly/2ICRBpl>

Tuesday, February 14, 2017 at 10:28am EST

UPCOMING EVENT: <http://bit.ly/2ILlBEl> The State of Iraq—and the Republic of Kurdistan?—After ISIS Hudson Institute Thursday February 23rd, 2017 12:00pm to 1:30pm Speakers: Eric B. Brown Moderator Senior Fellow, Hudson Institute Bayan Sami Abdul Rahman Speaker Kurdistan Regional Government Representative to the United States of America Ranj Alaaldin Speaker Visiting Fellow, Brookings Doha Center Kenneth M. Pollack Speaker Senior Fellow, Brookings Institution Michael Pregent Speaker Adjunct Fellow, Hudson Institute The coming months will likely see the end of the Islamic State's control of territory in Iraq, but the problems facing the peoples of Iraq will not end there. The country faces myriad problems, ranging from sectarian divisions and dysfunctional governance to unhelpful neighbors. Tensions over budgets, weapons, borders, and oil between the Kurdistan Region and the central government in Baghdad remain unresolved—and may soon precipitate the declaration of an independent Kurdish state. On February 23, an expert panel will examine the challenges and opportunities ahead for Iraq, Kurdistan, and the new U.S. administration. Should the Trump administration continue to invest in the Iraqi State? Are federalism, institution-building, and good governance initiatives in Iraq a lost cause? How should the new administration deal with Iraq's powerful, Iranian-backed Shiite militias? Would an independent Kurdish state bring solutions or additional problems for Kurds and the other peoples of Iraq? Similarly, what would the Republic of Kurdistan mean for the United States? The Kurdistan Regional Government's Representative Bayan Sami Abdul Rahman will join Brookings Institution's Kenneth Pollack and Ranj Alaaldin, along with Hudson's Michael Pregent and Eric Brown, to discuss the implications for Iraq and the region as well as their importance to America's geopolitical interests. This event will be live streamed on Hudson's homepage. A light lunch will be available at noon and the program will begin at 12:10 pm.

KRG calls for urgent, direct assistance to avert humanitarian catastrophe 29 January 2016 The KRG is calling for immediate, direct assistance to minimize a humanitarian catastrophe as a result of a lack of proper shelter and medical care for civilians fleeing Mosul. The KRG has not only supported and hosted fleeing IDPs, but also provided leadership in planning humanitarian response and advocacy for resource mobilization. The purpose of this message is to alert the international community of an impending humanitarian catastrophe and to request additional resources to be provided immediately to deal with the increased burden. The Kurdistan Regional Government (KRG) is struggling to absorb and care for tens of thousands of Mosul residents fleeing the ongoing operations to liberate the city from ISIS terrorists, in addition to the 1.8 million people who had previously fled. The dramatic increase in the volume of critically injured people has flooded Kurdistan Region's hospitals, and is overwhelming the Region's already strained healthcare sector. Conducting adequate security screenings for incoming internally displaced persons (IDPs), as well as maintaining internal security for cleared IDPs, is a responsibility that is growing rapidly in size and complexity and will soon surpass the KRG's technical and personnel capacities. As military planning and preparations are underway to launch the offensive to liberate the west side of the Mosul city, it is estimated that half a million people are still living in ISIScontrolled Mosul and it is anticipated that the majority of them will flee and need the lifesaving assistance. Even, the eastern side liberated, displacement is still ongoing and on daily basis people are arriving KRG due to the dire humanitarian and security situations. READ FULL RELEASE:

In visit to Iraqi @KurdistanRegion , US bishop hears priorities of Iraqi Christians "We don't want to live in a ghetto. That is counterproductive. That makes us a target for our enemies. We have to live in a secure but integrated community where Chaldean Catholics, Syriac Catholics, Sunni Muslims, etc., have relationships with each other," Bishop Cantu told CNS, recounting the remarks made by Syriac Catholic Archbishop Yohanna Moshe of Mosul, Iraq. He said the archbishop told him: "We need an integrated reality, rather than a 'Gaza' where there's a wall and someone is guarding people going in and out." <http://ow.ly/YfFg308iNT9>

"Most of the health services in the Kurdistan Region hospitals go to the Mosul IDPs," KRG Health Minister Rekawt Hama Rasheed said. "After the Mosul operation had begun, 99 percent of Mosul health services were laid on Kurdistan in general and Erbil hospitals in particular," Rasheed continued. He also mentioned "almost 1 percent" of the patients in hospitals in Erbil were people from the Kurdistan Region, the rest consisted of Mosul civilians and wounded Iraqi soldiers. bit.ly/2kdKb8g
