We have lost a great leader. Dr Najmadin Karim was incredibly smart, pragmatic, and patriotic. The times I worked with him, he was always on time, made an effort to remember names, and was respectful to those around him. Dr Najmadin knew what was important and worth fighting for. https://t.co/zGmOtxFJ6o

2020 was filled with economic hardship and loss of life. My thoughts are with all who lost a loved one due to COVID-19 or other causes. Your heart is broken and you weren't able to say farewell as you would have wished. Wishing all of us a peaceful, healthy & successful new year https://t.co/3owOTrAYye

#Kurdish forces in #Iraq and #Syria have been important partners for the United States in the fight against the Islamic State terror group. During President-elect Joe Biden's years in the Senate and as vice president, he was deeply involved in U.S. policy in the region, and #Kurds are hopeful about what that could mean for them in the coming years. Sirwan Kajjo reports from Washington.

A discussion about ARCH International's restoration of the tomb of the Prophet Nahum

Friday 25 December 2020

With ISIS only a few miles away, you'd think that the last thing an American NGO would want to do is start considering restoring a tomb in Iraq of a prophet from the Old Testament. But that's exactly what ARCH International did in 2014 when it began to look at the tomb of Prophet Nahom in Al Qosh.

Kurdistan in America Podcast: Interview with MAG's Kathy Keary

Monday 30 November 2020

In this episode of the Kurdistan In America podcast, our guest Kathy Keary, the US Strategic Partnerships Advisor for the Mines Advisory Group (MAG)—a demining organization that has been working in the Kurdistan Region in Iraq since 1992—discusses her experience in the Kurdistan Region and Sinjar. Ms. Keary says that Kurdistan Region alone would be in the top five most contaminated countries in the world affected by landmines and unexploded ordnance, while Iraq as a whole is in the top three. She also shares what MAG is doing to empower local communities in Kurdistan, Sinjar, and across Iraq to clear their farms, villages, and towns from these deadly devices.

This episode of the Kurdistan in America podcast is a special Christmas edition.

With ISIS only a few miles away, you'd think that the last thing an American NGO would want to do is start considering restoring a tomb in Iraq of a prophet from the Old Testament. But that's exactly what ARCH International did in 2014 when it began to look at the tomb of Prophet Nahom in Al Qosh.

In this episode, I speaks to Sophia Schultz from ARCH International and Katherine Vecchi and Julie Fether, two recent graduates of Johns Hopkins University. The nonprofit organization and the university came together around this cultural heritage site. The KRG was the first major sponsor of this fascinating multi-year project that succeeded against all the odds as ISIS was still in Mosul around the time the nonprofit first assessed the site. In the time of the ongoing pandemic, Katherine Vecchi and Julie Fether looked into ways of making the site accessible and exciting for visitors online and learned much about #Kurdistan along the way.

Listen to the latest Kurdistan in America podcast to get the latest news update about Kurdistan and learn about the landmine situation in Kurdistan.

Kathy Keary, the US Strategic Partnership Advisor, from the Mines Advisory Group (MAG), shares her experience about Kurdistan and Shangal region. MAG has been working in Kurdistan since 1992. Ms. Keary says that Kurdistan Region alone would be in the top five most contaminated countries in the world affected by landmines and unexploded ordnance, while Iraq as a whole is in the top three.

Also, find out in this interview what MAG is doing to empower local communities in Kurdistan, Sinjar, and across Iraq to clear their farms, villages, and towns from these deadly devices.

"The trauma of the genocide committed by ISIS against the Yazidi community in August 2014 continues to haunt nearly all Yazidi community. A recent report published by Médecins Sans Frontières (MSF), an international humanitarian medical non-governmental organization of French origin, asserts that the community is experiencing a severe mental health crisis, including a high number of suicides and suicide attempts. However, lack of funding, resources, and capacity has left the community in a precarious situation.

Sheren, a Yazidi mother whose husband and son were killed by ISIS in August 2014, committed suicide by setting herself on fire in the Khanke IDP Camp in early September. Currently, about 220,000 displaced Yazidis are living in the Kurdistan Region, and Sheren, like hundreds of others, was one of the displaced who was suffering from severe depression."

Read KRG's August 2020 Humanitarian Bulletin. It was punished on the occasion of the World Humanitarian Day 2020.

This August marked the sixth anniversary of the Yazidi and Christian Genocide. In August 2014, the Islamic State (ISIS) attacked the Yazidi homeland of Shingal (Sinjar) and the predominately Christian Nineveh Plains, committing genocide against the indigenous communities. More than 5,500 Yazidis were killed, and about 6,300 people, mostly women and girls, were systematically forced into slavery—about 3,000 of whom are still missing. Moreover, Christian churches, Yezidi shrines and other cultural and religious heritage sites were destroyed as ISIS tried to annihilate the ethnoreligious communities, including their history and culture.

Six years later, more than 220,000 Yazidis and 51,540 Christians are still displaced in the Kurdistan Region as the security and socio-economic situation in Sinjar and Nineveh Plains has prevented them from returning to their homelands.

Today marks the 6th anniversary of ISIS's genocide against the Yazidis, where more than 5,500 Yazidis were killed, and about 6,300 people, mostly women and girls, were systematically forced into slavery—3,000 of whom are still missing. Additionally, more than 90 percent of the estimated 360,000 Yazidis living in Sinjar and its surrounding areas have been displaced since the terrorist organization unleashed its fighters on the Yazidi community. Close to 220,000 Yazidis remain in camps in the Kurdistan Region.

We bow to the victims of this genocide and pay tribute to the survivors. We honor all who remain missing and pray for their safe return to the embrace of their families.

We stand in solidarity with our Yazidi brothers and sisters and continue to support their call for justice and accountability.

Read the story of Barakat Ali, a Yezidi who fled ISIS' genocide with his wife and two daughters. He sings a lament to the lost children of Sinjar. And Watch the documentary, I Was A Yazidi Slave, depicting the Story of Shirin and Lewiza, two Yazidi women captured by ISIS below:

"Since the beginning of Turkey's military ground and air offensive into the semi-autonomous Kurdistan Region of Iraq (KRI) at the end of June, five civilians have been killed, and dozens of villages have been vacated, including ten Assyrian Christian villages. Moreover, the offensive has disrupted the return of Yazidis to Sinjar and endangered the Kurdish refugees from Turkey as the Turkish military has targeted not only PKK fighters along the border but also the Yazidi district of Sinjar and the Makhmour refugee camp near Kirkuk, which is home to Kurdish refugees from Turkey."
