Covering news from Tunisia and Ennahdha

A WORD FROM RACHED GHANNOUCHI

President and Co-Founder of the ENNAHDHA PARTY

Ennahdha is delighted to announce that Souad Abderrahim, who ran on an Ennahdha list during May's municipal elections, has been elected as the first female mayor of Tunis, making her the first elected female mayor in the Arab world. Of the 68 female mayors elected in the 349 municipalities, 42 are from Ennahdha - an impressive 62 percent. Each of our female mayors ran inspiring campaigns, always epitomizing the party's plurality and embrace of modern values. It is for this reason that we have no doubt that they will all be effective and tireless representatives of Tunisian people of all political persuasions.

Aside from progress in gender equality, Ennahdha continues to build broader momentum in the wake of May's municipal elections. The party is delighted to have the presidencies of 132 municipalities, including the second city and economic capital, Sfax, and the cultural capital, Kairouan.

Elsewhere, the World Bank has approved a new $500 million loan to support economic reform in Tunisia followed by a further $249m loan tranche instalment from the IMF. Ennahdha has always been clear that Tunisia's route to prosperity is best mapped out with the support of our international partners and friends, and this financial support is a welcome development as we seek to attract private investment and provide a safety net to the most vulnerable in society.

Intense discussions continue to be held around Carthage II, the document that determines Tunisia's economic and social priorities. Ennahdha's position remains clear: governmental stability and consensus is necessary to ensure the country can continue to devote its primary attention to an ambitious and necessary program of political, economic and social reform.

Despite the challenges which any country undergoing reform can expect to face, Tunisia has made exceptional strides in the first half of 2018. In addition to holding the region's first democratic municipal elections, the Ennahdha-led Startup Act is well positioned to instill an entrepreneurial spirit in the country. A separate law against racial discrimination, also spearheaded by Ennahdha, continues to make progress through Parliament. Alongside economic reform, these legislative developments act as a positive platform upon which to build from in the remainder of 2018, ahead of next year's legislative and presidential elections.

For more information about Ennahdha's results in the municipal elections please see this infographic.

EXECUTIVE & LEGISLATIVE UPDATES

Tunisian parliament is taking steps to enshrine in law the requirement of companies in both the public and private sectors to commit funds for the preservation of the environment as well as social program in the cities where they are based. Ennahdha was instrumental in drafting the law, which would allow companies to deduct giving from their taxes. The measure will ensure the contribution of funds to cultural programs, as well as to the health and education sectors.

An Ennahdha-proposed bill would require politicians and government employees to declare all types of revenue and priority. The law is designed to encourage transparency and accountability for public officials, as well as reinforce the country's already-existing anti-corruption measures. Politicians will also have to declare their revenue after leaving their official positions. The bill is expected to attract strong support in Parliament.

Parliament is in early discussions with civil society on a bill that would update protection of personal data for Tunisians. Such a bill would follow a previous transparency law which guarantees transparency and free access to data for Tunisian citizens.

Covering news from Tunisia and Ennahdha

A WORD FROM RACHED GHANNOUCHI

President and Co-Founder of the ENNAHDHA PARTY

In what is a significant year ahead for Tunisia with parliamentary and presidential elections set for 2019, I would like to reflect on some of the important developments affecting the country today.

As recent headlines have shown, Tunisian President Beji Caïd Essebsi recently suggested that Ennahdha had chosen to break ties with him and his party, Nidaa Tounes. Whilst we may have differences over some areas of policy – which is itself normal in any healthy democracy – we stressed that dialogue and consensus remains best course of action to resolve those differences.

Unfortunately, the president made this pronouncement not simply because of a policy disagreement, but because Ennahdha has declined to support his calls for the Prime Minister to step down and for change of government to step in. Ennahdha remains committed to the notion that changing the government one year before parliamentary and presidential elections would at best cause unnecessary disruption, and at worst prevent crucial reforms from being implemented for the good of the economy.

Although we do not agree with the president on this point, we still value the role he has played in Tunisia's democratic transition and remain committed to dialogue and consensus between all political stakeholders.

Indeed, political stability and democratic consolidation was a key focal point during the recent EU-Tunisia joint committee meeting that took place in Tunis on September 18. The mixed parliamentary commission spoke highly of the effectiveness of May's municipal elections, as well as post-Revolution laws strengthening political transparency. Pleasingly, those present stressed the utility of cooperation between the EU and Tunisian parliaments. Just as dialogue is essential in Tunisia, so too will our country benefit from collaborating closely with our European friends.

In recent weeks, there has been much discussion around equal inheritance rights in Tunisia, proposed by the President's Individual Freedoms and Equality Committee. This is a sensitive issue for many families across Tunisia, and Ennahdha sees great value in a national dialogue on the issue to allow us to reach a conclusion best for all in society. Dialogue, after all, has contributed to strong economic and political progress in Tunisia since the 2011 revolution.

As a party we look forward to engaging with this legislation when it is presented to parliament. It does, however, remain our conviction that Tunisians should be free to live their lives in accordance with the fundamental tenets of their religious beliefs.

On the economic front, I am delighted to confirm that Tunisia's GDP is at its highest level since 2016. Preliminary results from the second quarter of 2018 confirm this uptrend, and suggest that the country could achieve its target of 3 percent growth. Although tourism and agriculture are driving results, it is extremely important that Tunisia's economy diversifies. I am pleased that a wide range of sectors, including agribusiness, textiles and chemicals, are contributing positively to these results.

All of this should rightly fill Tunisians, as well as our international partners, with optimism as the country's economy enters the final quarter of 2018.

ENNAHDHA AND TUNISIA UPDATES

Ennahdha calls for continued dialogue with the President - September 25

Following the interview conducted with the President of the Republic on Al-Hiwar al-Tounisi channel on Monday September 24, 2018 during which a number of important issues of concern to national public opinion, Ennahdha Party:

1. Commends the President of the Republic's commitment to reassuring Tunisians regarding holding the next presidential and legislative elections on the agreed dates, which would strengthen the democratic transition process and strengthen internal and external confidence in #Tunisia.

2. Reaffirms its commitment to consensus with the President of the Republic and its appreciation of the national role he has played since the beginning of the revolution in order to establish a culture of consultation and dialogue between political parties as opposed to monopolization, exclusion and conflict. Ennahdha Party had reacted positively to that approach since the Paris meeting, as embodied at all phases during which the President of the Republic found nothing but support and cooperation. The Tunisian exception owes its existence to the path of consensus-building which remains the ideal basis for our country's stability and managing differences within the framework of national responsibility and mutual respect.

3. Stresses the difference in points of view on a number of issues faced by the country, foremost amongst which is the government's stability, does not mean Ennahdha's abandonment of the robust relationship with the President of the Republic, but is rather part of the essence of democratic life and among the requirements of the critical phase and immense economic and social challenges preoccupying national public opinion.

Ennahdha stands with those affected by the natural disaster - September 23

Many areas of #Nabeul, Benarous, Sousse and other parts of the country witnessed exceptionally high levels of rainfall last month. Valleys were flooded leading to a rise in water levels which resulted in casualties, road blocks, traffic disruptions and the flooding of a many homes, establishments and institutions. In the face of the calamity that has struck these areas, Ennahdha Party, while it values all the efforts made by the National Office of Civil Protection (NOCP), the #Tunisia National Guard, the Army, the Security Forces and all the parties involved in reducing human losses and material damages:

1. Pays respect to the souls of the victims and offers its condolences to their families and relatives, and wishes a speedy recovery for those that have been wounded.
2. Salutes the movement of broad solidarity among Tunisian citizens which reflected the depth of social cohesion and the values of humanity and civilisation.
3. Calls upon its activists and supporters to attend to those affected and to support the efforts of the government and civil society.
4. Calls upon the Government to take all measures required to mitigate the impact of the disaster and reduce its negative effect on the lives of the afflicted and to promptly assess the damages.

Ennahdha's statement on recent calls for the postponement of 2019 elections -

August 30

Following the doubts raised regarding holding the presidential and legislative elections as scheduled for late 2019, Ennahdha, out of its full commitment to preserving the democratic transition process:

1. Affirms that freedom from dictatorship and the embodiment of free popular will are realised through holding elections within their set constitutional deadlines, t hereby completing the establishment of our democratic system. Without elections, there is no legitimacy; and any questioning of the electoral process is a deviation from the path of democratic transition.

2. Expresses its pride in #Tunisia's well-established democratic path, which consolidates freedom which was a principal demand of the revolution of the people of Tunisia in 2011, with the full commitment of our political elite to democracy and to the peaceful alternation of power.

3. Reiterates its commitment to consensus before and after the elections regardless of the results, based on the outcome of the ballot box and in light of the need of our young democratic experience to broad partnership in order to manage public affairs and ensure the continued success of the Tunisian model.

Ennahdha's statement on National Women's Day - August 13

Tunisian women and the whole Tunisian people proudly celebrate today the anniversary of the 13th of August, 1956, the promulgation date of the Personal Status Code.

On the occasion of celebrating this anniversary, Ennahdha Party:

1. Congratulates all Tunisian women and men inside and outside the country, and salutes the leading role played by Tunisian women in all fields in order to build the new Tunisia.

2. Congratulates the Tunisian people in general, and in particular, Tunisian women, for assuming local leadership within the elected municipal councils, as members, mayors, or heads of committees.

3. Calls for further empowerment of Tunisian women and supporting their participation in decision-making, and for the adoption of horizontal and vertical gender parity in the coming legislative elections in order to further strengthen women's contribution to leading change and renewal in our country.

4. Calls for the adoption of the necessary mechanisms and measures in order to activate the law on the prevention of violence against women so as to enable us to put an end to this dangerous phenomenon.

The Tunisian parliament returned from recess on October 2.

Ennahdha's Naoufel El Jammai, Chairman of the Committee on Rights and Freedoms and Foreign Relations, addressed MPs in a plenary session on October 2 regarding key issues around the agenda for the new Parliamentary term. Mr Jammali informed MPs that one area of focus will be the new National Instance for Human Rights, an institution that Mr Jammali's Committee has developed. Ennahdha considered it important to present this progress to the new Parliament before the elections of the new Committee Chairs, estimated to be within one month.

A Statement from the Ennahdha Party

Ennahdha Party statement following the terrorist attack on Habib Bourguiba Avenue

Tunis - October 29, 2018

On Monday, October 29, 2018, Habib Bourguiba Avenue in the capital Tunis witnessed a treacherous attack on a security patrol located in the vicinity, resulting in a number of casualties.

Following this criminal attempt, and pending the Ministry of Interior's disclosure of the circumstances, the Ennahdha Party:

1. Condemns this cowardly terrorist attack against our national security forces which targeted the Habib Bourguiba Avenue and what it represents for the Tunisian people, from symbolizing the values of freedom and democracy to being a public space for leisure and entertainment.
2. Strongly condemns the perpetrators and all those who stand behind them or assist them.
3. Calls on Tunisian citizens to uphold and strengthen national unity and to stand with the security and military institutions to continue their efforts in the name of building a peaceful and democratic Tunisia, and as a clear and appropriate response to all the villainous forces that seek to harm Tunisia and its democratic experience.
4. Reaffirms once again that there is no future for terrorism in Tunisia, thanks to the solidarity and awareness of the Tunisian people, and thanks to the determination of our security and military forces in confronting terrorists and pursuing them wherever they may be.

Ennahdha Renaissance Party President,

Rached Ghannouchi

Ennahdha Party statement on Parliament's approval of the government reshuffle

Tunis – November 14, 2018

With the Parliamentary confirmation of Prime Minister Chahed's reshuffle, Ennahdha calls for all partners in the Unity Government to dedicate their energies on delivering the national reform agenda to revitalize Tunisia's economy.

The Unity Government must overcome differences and deliver real progress through constructive discussions for the sake of future of the Tunisian people. We welcome the opportunity to work with our colleagues in government to strengthen democratic institutions, engage in effective dialogue about key issues and work through differences within the established constitutional framework, and build a strong, secure and prosperous future for all Tunisians.

The Ennahdha Party welcomes the appointment of:

- Ms Sayida Ounissi as Minister of Employment and Vocational Training
- Mr Habib Debbabi as Secretary of State for SMEs in the Ministry of Industry and SMEs
- Ms Bisma Jebali as Secretary of State in the Ministry of Local Government and the Environment
- Mr Ahmed Gaaloul as Secretary of State for Sports in the Ministry of Youth and Sports

Ennahdha also welcomes the reappointment of Mr Zied Ladhari as Minister for Development, Investment and International Cooperation, Mr Taoufik Rajhi as Minister for Economic Reform, Mr Anouar Maarouf as Minister of IT and the Digital Economy, Mr Ridha Saidi as Minister Advisor to the Prime Minister and Mr Khalil Amiri as Secretary of State for Scientific Research.

In addition, we welcome the appointment of Rene Trabelsi as the new Minister of Tourism - the third member of the country's Jewish minority to serve in the Cabinet - and look forward to working with him and other key Cabinet members. Mr. Trabelsi's appointment is reflective of the inclusion and tolerance that remain critical in a democratic and stable Tunisia.

A Statement from the Ennahdha Party

Ennahdha statement on false allegations by the Popular Front

Tunis - November 26, 2018

Ennahdha is the Tunisian Muslim democrat political party representing reform, democracy, progress and opportunity for all Tunisians. The party currently holds four ministerial offices and has been part of every democratic Government since the revolution in Tunisia in 2011.

Activities such as those claimed by the Popular Front's 'Defence Committee' would never be undertaken by anyone who believes in Ennahdha's core principles. There is no truth in these claims and we completely refute them. They are pure fabrications by a politicized self-appointed extra-judicial body that is undermining the legal process by continuously seeking to interfere, pressurize and question the integrity of the judiciary, in order to tarnish and demonize a political rival.

The manner in which these false claims have come forward not only undermines the democratic process, but also the transparency and the independence of the judiciary for which Tunisians have fought bravely since 2011. At a time when the country should be coming together to support our institutions and the strengthening of our economy, these false allegations undermine the progress the Government is taking to re-energize the Tunisian economy and grow our democracy. Rached Ghannouchi, President of Ennahdha said: "For those who believe that undemocratic means can be used to exclude political rivals, let them not forget that our hard won freedoms and democracy are a beacon of hope that Tunisians will not allow to be extinguished."

We will continue to work with our partners to uphold an inclusive, democratic and prosperous society and a better future for all Tunisians.

A WORD FROM RACHED GHANNOUCHI

President and Co-Founder of the ENNAHDHA PARTY

With parliamentary and presidential elections set for 2019, Tunisia is at the threshold of a momentous year in its history. Along with preparation for the elections, Tunisia is establishing a number of key institutions and legal texts that further entrench and consolidate its democratic system.

On October 9, the Tunisian parliament, under the guidance of Dr. Naoufel Eljammali MP, then chair of the Rights and Liberties and Foreign Affairs committee, passed the "Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination" Act. As the first Arab and Muslim country to abolish slavery in 1846, Tunisia is now one of the first in the region to criminalize racism. By defining and criminalizing racial discrimination, this law is a significant step toward a just and equitable future for all Tunisians.

Parliament's approval of a separate law establishing a National Human Rights Commission also moves Tunisia ever closer to the ideals set out in its 2014 constitution. This new independent body, mandated under the constitution, will have broad power to monitor for human rights violations, including through visits to detention centers, prisons, and public educational, health and social institutions. The commission's unanimous approval by all lawmakers present at the vote signals an encouraging cross-party commitment to mechanisms that protect all our futures. Comprising judges, psychologists, lawyers and members of Tunisian civil society, the commission is designed to represent the values of equality, justice and political inclusion that sparked the 2011 Revolution.

The Ennahdha Party Annual Conference on October 26–27 brought together party members and leaders from across the country to discuss key policy issues and Ennahdha's vision for Tunisia in the coming years. The conference was, in particular, an opportunity to engage newly elected mayors from Ennahdha and give central importance to local issues within Ennahdha's vision of democratic governance.

To bridge the gaps in Tunisian society, we must also pursue reconciliation and national unity. The approval of a new cabinet by parliament on November 12 will undoubtedly help to achieve this goal, providing a basis for stable government of coalition and much-needed economic reforms. Having suffered under Tunisia's two former authoritarian regimes, Ennahdha understands the power of national dialogue and the need for forgiveness to overcome division. We therefore call on Parliament to adopt a reconciliation law, which would apply to cases in which offenders admit their crimes, reveal the truth and apologize to and compensate their victims. Only by coming together can we hope to build a democratic, united and prosperous Tunisia.

ENNAHDHA PARTY CONFERENCE UPDATE

Excerpts from Ennahdha Party President Rached Ghannouchi's Opening Speech to the 2018 Annual Party Conference - October 27

Ladies and gentlemen,

Esteemed guests,

We are pleased to inaugurate the activities of the Ennahdha Party's second annual conference, which will deal with several important national and party matters. The holding of this conference will provide a space for dialogue and consultation, and a platform for scrutinizing the party's policies and priorities.

This conference also takes place between two important moments in our democratic transition: the moment when our country successfully completed its first local elections on May 6, 2018, and the moment we are approaching with the second legislative and presidential elections at the end of 2019.

Our success in the recent local elections marks the beginning of a new test of our ability to strengthen local governance, and to bring forth a talented generation of grassroots leaders, in which young people and women hold a significant proportion of senior positions. This reflects our conviction that empowering youth and women and opening doors for them to assume public office is a key priority.

Our country has been living through a political crisis for some time that has weakened the public landscape and deepened the difficulties of our democratic transition, which are mainly the continuation of structural economic challenges. Major reforms have been delayed in many sectors and institutions, despite the remarkable improvement in many economic indicators, the recovery in the tourism sector, and an improved trade balance.

Since the Carthage 2 dialogue, Ennahdha has clearly expressed its position on this crisis, stressing the country's need for political stability, improved government performance on economic and social issues, progress on major reforms, and combating corruption.

Through active diplomacy within the framework of our country's foreign policy, Ennahdha has sought to promote Tunisia as an attractive destination for investment and trade. This outreach has also sought to strengthen Tunisia's relations with a number of neighboring and friendly countries, particularly in North Africa and the Arab and Muslim worlds. Tunisian-African relations must be taken seriously as Tunisia's future lies in Africa. For this purpose, we call for the creation of a ministry or department specifically focused on African relations.

Ennahdha are also forming a team of experts from across the country to prepare a comprehensive economic and social vision for Tunisia 2030. We will present this vision to Tunisia within our electoral manifesto for 2019. This vision will present a strategic approach drawing on our country's points of strength including its exceptional geostrategic position, enlightened cultural and civilizational heritage, advanced and competent human resources, and constructive and fruitful international relations.

We want this vision to draw the outlines of the path towards an historic leap on the economic, developmental, social, financial and civilizational levels, achieving our dream of a prosperous, strong and shining Tunisia.

In its transition to democracy, Tunisia has achieved a great deal despite the difficulties and obstacles it has faced. This is thanks to the choice of dialogue as the primary approach to the management of public affairs, and consensus, which Ennahdha considers to be the best means to achieving national progress.

Our democratic transition will continue. But it needs more time, stability and dialogue in order to fully achieve its objectives – freedom, dignity and development. In this context, it is the responsibility of political parties to enhance their contribution to public governance, to understand society's problems, to provide appropriate solutions to Tunisian women and men, and to improve their standard of living, especially vulnerable and marginalized groups and deprived regions.

Ennahdha Renaissance Party President,

Rached Ghannouchi

EXECUTIVE & LEGISLATIVE UPDATES

Racial Discrimination Law - With the support of Ennahdha, the Tunisian parliament passed the "Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination" Act on October 9. This law criminalizes racial abuse and discrimination against Tunisia's ethnic minorities, especially the 10-15 percent of Tunisians who identify as black. Those convicted of racist speech will face one month of prison time and a fine of $350, while incitement to racial hatred, racist threats or membership of a racist organization carries a prison sentence of between one and three years, and fines of $185-$1,110.

Human Rights Authority - The Tunisian parliament have also fulfilled a major promise of the 2014 constitution by unanimously approving the establishment of an official human rights authority. Under the Basic Law approved on Tuesday, October 16, the rights commission will have a nine-member board chosen by parliament, including two judges, a lawyer, a doctor, three psychologists and two members of civil society organizations.

Cabinet Reshuffle - On November 6, Prime Minister Youssef Chahed announced a proposed cabinet reshuffle, subject to the approval of Parliament. On November 12, Parliament approved the following Ennahdha members to the following positions:

- Ms. Sayida Ounissi as Minister of Employment and Vocational Training
- Mr. Habib Debbabi as Secretary of State for SMEs in the Ministry of Employment and Vocational Training
- Mr. Ahmed Gaaloul as Secretary of State of Youth and Sports in the Ministry of Sports
- Ms. Besma Jebali as Secretary of State in the Ministry of Local Government and the Environment

Ennahdha also welcomes the reappointment of Mr. Zied Ladhari as Minister for Development, Investment and International Cooperation, Mr. Anouar Maarouf as Minister of IT and Communication, and Mr. Khalil Amiri as Secretary of State for Scientific Research.

2019 Budget Approved - On the December 10, Tunisia's parliament approved a budget for 2019. This budget will impose no new taxes on Tunisian citizens, and lowers taxes on the vital technology, textiles, engineering and pharmaceutical sectors. Taxes on bank profits were also raised from 35 percent to 40 percent to provide more funding for social and economic reforms.
