Gülen's Residency in the U.S. Poses Risks

WASHINGTON D.C. – The United States should accelerate its investigations into the illegal activities of the reclusive cleric living in Pennsylvania, whose organization has ties to the recent coup attempt in Turkey, says lawyer Robert Amsterdam of Amsterdam & Partners LLP.

The United States should support Turkey – a critical NATO ally in the Middle East – when the Ankara government seeks Gülen's extradition. At the same time, it should be noted that Fetullah Gülen's vast network in the United States of alleged interfaith dialogue organizations are fronts for a massive political campaign donation scheme and should be thoroughly scrutinized in the U.S., Amsterdam said.

Gülen heads one of the largest charter school conglomerates in the United States, along with many of for-profit companies that provide goods and services to those schools. In recent months, Amsterdam & Partners LLP has filed complaints with state education authorities against Magnolia Public Schools in California and Harmony Public Schools in Texas, revealing a pattern of fraud, visa abuse, discrimination and illegal campaign donations.

"The Gülen organization receives hundreds of millions of dollars in taxpayer funds to run their schools, but they staff those schools with underqualified Turkish teachers, imported through a massive, fraudulent H1-B visa scheme, and they force those teachers to kick back a portions of their wages to the Gülen organization as a condition of keeping their jobs," said Amsterdam.

Amsterdam added, "These kick-backs are just one category of ill-gotten gains by the Gülen organization, sourced directly from federal and state education dollars, which we believe, based on Turkey and FBI investigations into e-rate fraud, are ultimately laundered into Turkey to develop and support Gülen's network there."

Amsterdam & Partners LLP has been retained by the Republic of Turkey since October 2015 to conduct a global investigation into the activities of the Gülen Organization. Victims of Fethullah Gülen Will Continue Fight, says Lawyer Robert Amsterdam

WASHINGTON, D.C. 30 June 2016 – Following a ruling by a Pennsylvania District Court to dismiss a human rights suit on procedural grounds brought against the fugitive Turkish preacher Fethullah Gülen, international lawyer Robert Amsterdam says that the victims will continue their fight for justice.

“Despite the outcome of this ruling, a very clear message has been sent to Gülen and his co-conspirators in the Poconos: the days of impunity are numbered, and your unlawful conduct will be brought to light,” said Amsterdam of Amsterdam & Partners LLP, referring to the scores of Gülen victims.

Amsterdam said his firm is studying the ruling by U.S. District Judge Robert Mariani, which focused on complex questions of the act of state doctrine, and a narrow interpretation of the Alien Tort Claims Act. The Court did not have the opportunity to consider the factual basis of the claim brought against Gülen, which alleged his direct involvement in the falsified trial and unjust imprisonment of opponents in Turkey.

“In typical Gülenist fashion, we can already see that they are twisting the meaning of this judgment before the public, but the fact remains that the Court has not in any way found them innocent of these grievous human rights abuses,” said Amsterdam. “Our team has collected numerous statements from witnesses in both Turkey and the United States which clearly shows a pattern of abuse, fraud, deception, and illegal political donations by Gülen and his lieutenants.”

Amsterdam said Gülen’s move to seek dismissal of the suit instead of answer the allegations raises questions.

“Gülen is sitting on a war chest of billions of dollars, much of it taken from U.S. taxpayers via his opaque charter school network. We are sitting on a mountain of evidence of wrongful activity,” said Amsterdam.

Amsterdam also dismissed claims by Gülen’s supporters that they are unfairly targeted.

“Neither the President of Turkey nor the Turkish Government has the time for personal vendettas. Don’t forget that Turkey is at war with Islamic extremism, as was tragically demonstrated again this week at the Istanbul Ataturk International Airport. Turkey is now also home to around 3 million Syrian refugees and had been fighting the subversion of Gülen’s movement for years, including coup attempts as recently as 2013,” said Amsterdam.
