Good afternoon, Linda.

After reviewing your document, we have a little insight into research topics of interest to Alor. We will watch for funding opportunities that align with your interests and let you know what we find. There haven't been many solicitations on battery technology development recently. Perhaps that will change once the US government gets through the current budget cycle.

If there are specific research activities you would like us to consider under a direct commercial contract with Alor, we could certainly discuss. To do this I'd request you provide us a detailed scope of work that describes your goals and tasks. All disclosures and technical details would be protected within or confidentiality agreement. With your scope of work, we could prepare a cost estimate and iterate as necessary to develop a formal research proposal.

Thank you, again for your interest in the EERC. We routinely review research funding opportunities and assess them relative to research ideas and industry partners. We will be sure to contact you when we identify a match. In the meantime, if you have questions or would like to discuss other collaboration opportunities, feel free to email or call.

Hello Chad.

Cristina is much better but now I'm at home with COVID-19 with my 7-year-old daughter. We are doing all right.

Attached you will find the EERC proposal. I suggest we will have a Teams meeting after you have reviewed the document.

Best regards,
Linda Fanney.

Hello Chad and Curtis.

Thank you for your e-mails. Cristina is getting better every day, and I believe we can deliver the document soon.

Best regards,
Linda Fanney.

Good morning, all. Thank you for the update. I'm sorry to hear about your colleague and hope she recovers soon. We will continue to stand by and know that there is no urgency on our end.

We will keep you updated if we have research ideas or discover research funding that would help us meet your technology development and commercialization goals.

Chad

Góðan daginn Linda,

Thank you for your message and my apologies for the slow response. I have been very busy getting my State Senate campaign up and running and I made my public announcement last Friday. Meanwhile, I am on a knee scooter for 8-10 weeks recovering from foot surgery while launching my campaign. Call me crazy!

I am sorry to hear about your colleague. On our end, we look forward to hearing from you when you get back on track. Covid has created a lot of problems for everyone all around the world, sadly. I have copied Chad Wocken from UND so he is informed of the reason for the delay in getting the document to them.

Kær kveðja,

Góðan daginn Curtis!

I hope you are doing well. My family has been going from one COVID quarantine to another but luckily no illness yet. Working from home is a norm here in Iceland these days.

I wanted to explain to you that Cristina who is a key member from the Spanish team has been very ill with COVID and is recovering very slowly. Therefore, we have not been able to finish the document for the EERC. I hope she will get back on track soon.

Valgeir and I have been busy figuring out the best ways for the company to fundraise. We are meeting with advisors this week and are optimistic that we will move forward soon.

Best regards,
Linda Fanny.

Subject: ALOR research and development project

Good morning gentlemen,

Chad, thank you for the very cordial phone call yesterday. As we discussed, I have drafted a simple document in cooperation with my ALOR colleagues in Iceland and Spain outlining the goals for a research/development project at EERC. See attached. I can be available on Thursday or Friday of this week to meet with the two of you for further discussions, or late next week on the same days.

All my best,

Curtis Olafson
