When did you join the HBASE? What benefits have you seen from being involved in the HBASE?

I joined in the winter of 2017. Through the home show booth and getting my name out through the Association, my business has doubled in 2018.

Where did you receive your training?

Southeast Tech. I developed many skills working in the industry after college. I've worked for Ronning, Stencil and Reynolds Construction. Paul Reynolds was a mentor for me. While working for him I worked in both commercial & residential, from sales to design to project management.

How has your business changed/expanded over the years?

The biggest change was in 2015 when I went out on my own. I started out doing some remodeling and small builds. Now I do 1,200 sq. ft. to 5,000 sq. ft. homes. All ranges, and I do every bit of the design work to control quality. Commercially I've now done build-outs for a few restaurants and office spaces along with complete ground-up office buildings and shop spaces.

What do you find most rewarding about your day-to-day business? What do you find most challenging about your day-to-day business?

I find it most rewarding to do a project from design to completion. The smile on the face of a homeowner after they've seen the project complete just warms your heart. The most challenging thing would be being one guy and wearing all the hats. There's always 10 places to be at the same time.

What is the latest trend in your industry?

With current trends I'm seeing a lot of painted millworks and cabinets, varying in colors. Lots of greys are fairly popular now transitioning to whites. Craftsman type style and modern trends from the coast. Transitional to modern.

How do you spend your spare time?

What do you do to relax?

Hanging out with family. To relax I head to Lake Madison with the family and get out on the boat and later sit around the fire.

What hobbies/activities are you involved in?

I used to race sprint cars and had a pretty successful career. I won points champ in 2007 at Knoxville. Now that I'm a business owner, priorities have shifted.

What is something people might not know about you?

Generally, I'm a pretty open book. I'd say maybe most don't know of my racing background.

What would you tell your younger self?

To strive to set the bar higher.

What is your biggest obsession?

Perfection. Trying to make everything perfect for everyone. I think of what I would want as a homeowner to make it 100%.

What is the best piece of advice you have ever received?
To start my own business. I needed a push and leap of faith to get started.

How would your closest friends describe your three most endearing attributes?
Straight-shooter, gets things done and my faith.

What are you most proud of?
My family, starting with my parents. A blue-collar, hard-working family that grew successful businesses. My two awesome daughters; Claire, 13 and Avery, 16.

How do you stay motivated, both personally and professionally?
It comes natural. I do get some prodding from the wife and that helps. I have a great support team.

What is one goal you're currently striving toward?
Continued business growth. I'd like to have my name and business be recognized in the industry so that one day clients come to me and I don't have to work quite as hard. Overall I aim to make integrated design decisions, source high-quality and local building supplies, as well as make cost-effective selections that help build a sustainable home for my client.

What taglines or words would you say describes your business?
Custom build, creativity, design & construction skills & knowledge, hands-on, professional contracting guidelines, pride in every project, never sacrificing the finest details.
