Cardiff is the capital of Wales and the biggest solution. It is the centre of Welsh commerce, culture and sport and home to the National Assembly of Wales. Cardiff has a number of attractions and landmarks. The great centre of Welsh politics, the National Assembly of Wales, consists of a striking set of structures. the Franco-Gothic Renaissance Pierhead Building and the modern Senedd, which houses the debating chamber. The historic castle adds some ancient design and the performing arts centre of St David's Hall, a more 80s vibe. The National History Museum at St Fagans Castle in the west of the city offers the joy of seeing dozens of buildings from all over Welsh history and is an excellent open-air museum that can be enjoyed by the whole family. The country has a lot of domestic and international airports, so moving between the most remote points of the state will be fast and comfortable. Moreover, the price of air tickets is perfectly acceptable. It is possible to move around the city on bicycles. The authorities zealously support this trend, constantly expanding the network of cycle paths. You can rent a two-wheeled vehicle in any city. This is especially true in large cities where the old streets are very narrow and traffic jams can be as long as several kilometres. You can also rent a car, but only with an international driving licence. Such an option will cost you at least $60 per day. ...
