

Wildfire Smoke Returns to the New York City Area

By Don Sutherland

Just over three years ago, the New York City area was choked by the thickest wildfire smoke in its climate record. Last week, smoke from wildfires burning through the North Central United States and Canada shrouded the region in bad quality air.

Four photos are below:

New Rochelle, NY

New Rochelle, NY

Sunrise (Larchmont, NY)

Zoomed in Sunrise (Larchmont, NY)