Aflatoxicol is a mycotoxin that was initially produced by Aspergillus; it is a metabolite of aflatoxin B1. Aflatoxicol is a grain contaminant occasionally found in livestock feed. Like other aflatoxins, this compound may form DNA adducts, displaying carcinogenic potential.

References

Caution: This product is intended for laboratory and research use only. It is not for human or drug use.