

Ratification 101

This year, during Foursquare Connection 2014, President Glenn Burris Jr. is up for ratification. If confirmed, Glenn would serve a second five-year term as president. Since we last had presidential elections, our Foursquare bylaws have been updated by the convention body to include absentee voting. Here's your simplified guide to the presidential ratification, or selection, process.

Before you even set foot on Dallas soil, your Foursquare cabinet was at work.

VOTING BY MAIL

At Foursquare Connection 2013, the convention body passed a bylaw change, making it possible to vote by absentee ballot in presidential elections (Bylaw 5.9). Here's a reminder of the absentee voting process:

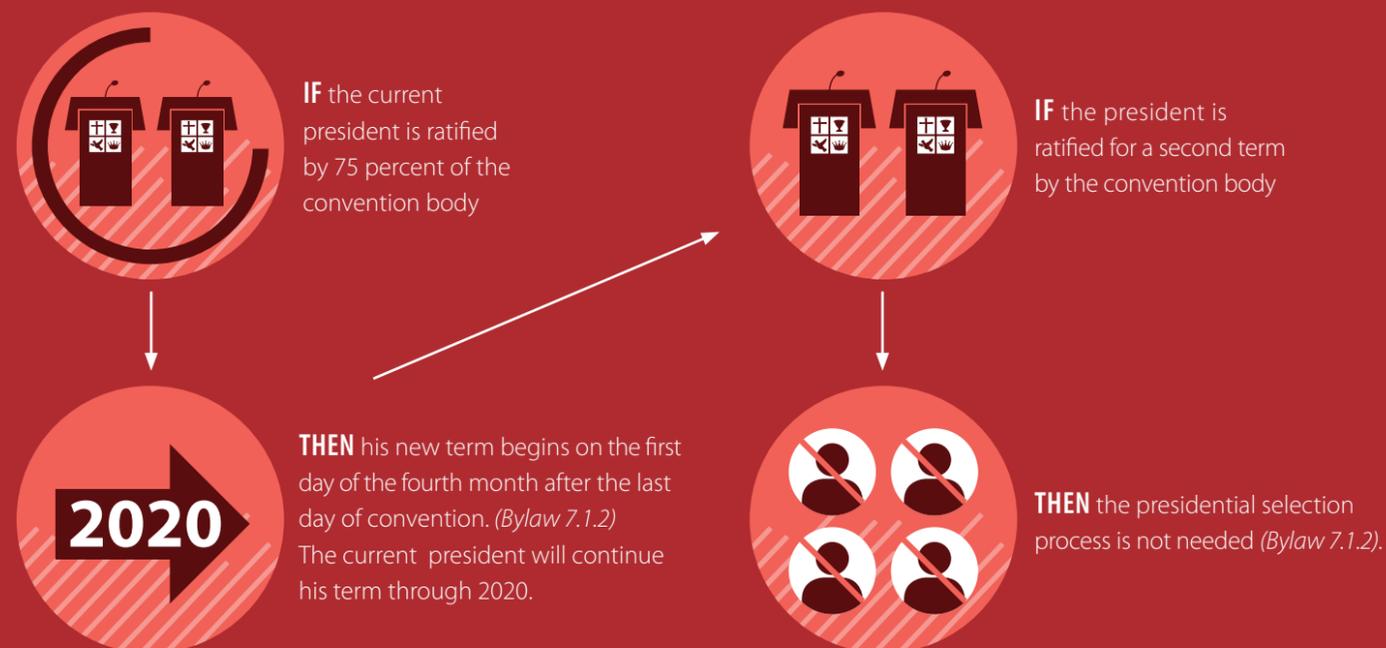

To cast your vote by mail, you are required to do the following:

All absentee ballots will be counted, and voting results will be reported at the same time that onsite votes are tabulated and reported (Bylaw 5.9).

Note: If you requested an absentee ballot, you are not eligible to request a new ballot at Foursquare Connection 2014, nor can you use your absentee ballot to vote onsite in Dallas (Bylaw 5.9).

... Which takes us to Foursquare Connection 2014. Here's how the presidential ratification process works. Note: This is the first year presidential selection will be determined by both onsite and absentee voting.

Presidential Factoids

A Foursquare president can serve for a maximum of two, five-year terms.

10

Percentage of cabinet votes needed to move the vote for ratification of the current president to the convention body

2/3

Minimum percentage of convention body votes (including absentee ballots) required for second-term ratification at Foursquare Connection 2014

75%

Beginning of the current president's new five-year term if ratified, or a new president's first five-year term

9.1.15