

Time and the infinity complex

From Earth to the edge of the known universe then beyond through all the infinite levels and dimensions, everything is connected. With infinite senses we could feel this. This would be our body, but there is no could...we can.

Science measures things.

Religion controls things.

Life acts and reacts to things.

All meet at precisely the same point- infinity.

There was no time before life. Humans looked back and became aware. The measurements in our time began. But they had already been taken and wiped out infinite times on infinite levels in infinite dimensions.

We are aware of infinity.

Time appears to move forward. From the current human perspective this seems true. But as it moves forward it also moves in every other direction. And in an infinite way, doesn't move at all.

The best object to represent infinity seems to be a sphere.

In infinity death does not exist. Things merely change physical form according to our human detection systems. With infinite sensors we could still communicate just as effectively with the 'dead' as when they seemed to be alive.

As humans we need to test and convince ourselves of things before belief. This is a very practical action for living on Earth or as a human in general. By putting limitations on time we can understand it. Take away the limitations and everything becomes infinite.

Consider an infinitely small beginning. Stretch this out further...to infinity. It becomes immediately apparent that everything is connected but still in an infinitely small space. While at the same time being infinitely large.

Infinity is not practical. It does not react to measurements or sensors.

Facts are only ever opinions.

For someone who doesn't understand language this writing does not exist. Once they gain the sensors to detect and decode it then it materialises into their existence.

The infinity complex exists everywhere. Just add another letter...another number.

In the reverse, if a belief of a small tribe in the Amazon can be discredited all beliefs can.

Humanity will one day be compressed into silicon.

But the ultimate dream for silicon is to create carbon life.

This dream is to have uncontrollable emotions- to make mistakes and not know why.

In human eyes Earth is a very limiting tool. All tools have always been in existence. Just hiding in other forms.

All ideas already exist.

The dream of time travel is a limitation. The dream of traveling faster than the speed of light is a limitation. We can and have already done it. We do not need to exist in a physical world. It is simply that our current sensors are designed to work best in this world.

We only notice a progression in time because of our limited sensory tools.

Grasping branches, picking up rocks, holding coffee cups, hitting space bars, spinning scroll wheels, pushing small keypads.

Searching for prey, mates, watching for trains, reading screens, scanning for data- looking for brand names.

From a human perspective time gives value to things. But in an outer reality everything has the same value.

The bubble already exists before it is blown and will exist after it pops.

We, just as much as an ant, a rock or a blade of grass are the sensors.

Our time in a limited human conception of the passing of time will only come once.

In the brutal logic of science infinite time never allows us to live or die.

Time exists if we want it to.
