Legally changing your name can be a challenging task because you need to contact the Social Security Office, creditors, banks, mail and other organizations to notify them. However, notifying the United States Postal Service (USPS) of your name change is a relatively simple procedure and can be easily done online, in person or over the phone. Although the USPS website does not have an official form to change your name, the official form to change your address provides an option to change your name as well. The easiest and fastest way to fill out this form is on the USPS website. Navigate to the official page to change your address. After you fill in your move information, the form allows you to make the necessary changes to both your name and address. Please note that your credit or debit card will be charged $1 (price at the time of publication) when you submit this form. If you choose to fill out an online form to change your name, the USPS provides the option to provide your credit card as proof of your identity. In order to present this proof, you must first change your name on your debit and credit cards. Generally, it is easier to change these names when you have documentation in the form of billing and new social security cards. Once you've received these, call the company or sign in with a name change request, provide them with your account number, old and new names, and change of address, if you have one. If you would prefer to change your name by phone instead of online or in person, you can contact the USPS at 1-800-ASK-USPS -- 1-800-275-8777 and ask to speak to a representative. When you're done with your consultation, the USPS will send confirmation letters, including an address change form to your old address if you haven't already moved, and a permanent change of address form to your new or current address. This method also requires a $1 fee to your credit or debit card. If you want to fill out the online form but do not want to pay the dollar fee or want to submit the form personally for any other reason, you can fill out the form on your computer up to the point where it says to submit; instead of clicking send, print it and turn it to your local post office. If you don't have a computer or the Internet, you can pick up a copy of the form on the post office or call the USPS to have a mail carrier bring the form to you. Whether your company is moving permanently or temporarily, you want to submit a change of address with the United States Postal Service (USPS) so that your mail is forwarded to the correct location. The only way to get an official free change of address form is to drop by your local post office to get a mover guide with the necessary materials. If you are willing to spend a small fee for convenience, you can complete the entire change of address process on the USPS website. way, you will be able to review your request online and make changes if necessary. USPS allows you to submit a change of address request as soon as 30 days before the move date and no later than 90 days after you are at the new address. Whether you decide to do this online or in person, you will use the USPS mover's guide. This includes PS Form 3575, which asks for information about your type of request and the relevant addresses. Along with this form, Mover's guide comes with coupons and offers related to your move. Once you have provided all the details on the physical form or USPS website and submit PS Form 3575, you can expect to receive a draft validation letter in the mail shortly afterwards that serves as verification as you personally submitted the request. A welcome package/customer message will arrive up to five days before your change of address takes effect. After the USPS processes your change of address, your mail will begin to be forwarded to your new location. However, the USPS warns that it may take seven to ten days after the change of address start date for you to receive your mail. You must also contact any individuals or organizations such as suppliers, creditors, business partners or customers to inform them of the new address. To get the form needed to change your address without paying a fee, you simply need to go to your local post office and request a mover guide. Usps does not make this physical package or PS Form 3575 available online to print and complete in advance. Follow the instructions to fill in PS Form 3575 and fill it in black or blue ink as requested. You should provide this information: Your type of entity (individual, family, or company). Whether you move permanently or temporarily. Your basic contact information, including your old and new addresses. Your signature and current date. After completing the form, leave it to a postal worker or drop it into a mailbox to send the form to the postmaster for processing. Your move validation letter and welcome kit/customer notification letter will arrive in the physical mail. The latter will have a confirmation code that will allow you to monitor or update your request on the USPS website. If you're willing to pay a modest $1.05 for identity verification, you can conveniently change your address online. This saves you a trip to the post office and eliminates the need to fill out forms by hand. You need both an email address and a regular credit card to move forward, and this method won't work if your business moves to an international address. Visit usps.com/move to change your address online and look for the Get Started button. You should go through a series of six pages that will ask for the same information as the physical PS Form 3575. However, you enter payment details for the processing fee and your credit card are also for identity verification. The USPS will send you an email to confirm that you have submitted your change of address and will contain the confirmation code to edit the request. You'll also receive the other notifications by mail and can print the coupons from the online move guide. If something happens and you end up moving to another location or not at all, usps allows you to make changes to your change of address request on its website. Just visit managemymove.usps.com, type your request confirmation code (which is on your USPS address confirmation letter or email), and enter your new zip code. Click Get Started to view details of your change of address request and either cancel or edit it as needed. If you don't have the confirmation code, you'll need to return to the record to make changes to the request. If you have moved, please initiate actions to update your address with VA.
