Fact Sheet: Domestic Violence in Korean Communities

July 2012

1. Demographics

- According to the 2010 U.S. Census, there are 1,706,822 single-race, multi-race and multi-ethnic Koreans of which 1,423,784 are single-race.¹

- According to the Census Bureau’s 2006-2010 American Community Survey 5-Year Estimates, of the 1,104,243 Korean speakers in the U.S., 42.9% (474,125) speak English ‘very well’ and 57.1% (630,118) speak ‘less than very well’.

2. Statistics

A 1986 study involving face-to-face interviews of a convenience sample of 150 Korean women living in Chicago found that:

- 60% reported experiencing physical abuse by an intimate partner sometime in their lives.
- 36.7% reported sexual violence by an intimate partner sometime in their lives.

In a study of 256 Korean men from randomly selected Korean households in Chicago and in Queens (which then had the largest Korean population on the East Coast) in 1993:

- 18% of the respondents reported committing at least one of the following acts of physical violence within the past year: throwing something, pushing, grabbing, shoving, or slapping their wife.
- 6.3% of the men committed what the researcher classified as “severe violence”: kicking, biting, hitting with a fist, threatening with a gun or knife, shooting, and stabbing.
- 33% of “male-dominated relationships” experienced at least one incident of domestic violence during the year, whereas only 12% of “egalitarian” relationships did. [Researchers classified couples into four types of relationships: egalitarian, divided power, male-dominated, and female-dominated—based on the respondents’ answers about how the couple makes decisions.]

Nearly 39% of husbands who were categorized as experiencing “high stress” perpetrated domestic violence during the past year, whereas one out of 66 husbands categorized as experiencing “low stress” did so. [This correlation does not necessarily mean that stress causes or leads to domestic violence. Women and non-abusive men are also exposed to ‘high stress’ and do not resort to domestic violence.]

In a survey of a convenience sample of 214 Korean women and 121 Korean men in the San Francisco Bay Area conducted in 2000 by Shimtuh, a project serving Korean women in crisis:

- 69% of the overall respondents and 80% of Korean respondents reported being hit regularly as children.
- 29% of Korean respondents said a woman who is being abused should not tell anyone about the abuse, whereas 22% of Cambodian, 18% of Chinese, 5% of South Asian, and 9% of Vietnamese respondents did.
- 41% of Korean respondents indicated that a battered woman should turn to a friend for help, whereas 82% of South Asian, 44% of Cambodian, 37% of Chinese, and 29% of Vietnamese respondents agreed with this statement.
- 27% of Korean respondents supported a battered woman calling the police for help, whereas 74% of South Asian, 47% of Cambodian, 52% of Chinese, and 49% of Vietnamese respondents did.

In a questionnaire survey (in the Korean language) of a convenience sample of 136 Korean women in Austin and Dallas, Texas:

- 29.4% reported experiencing physical violence at the hands of intimate partners during the past year.
- 25.0% reported sustaining injuries due to a partner’s violence during the previous year.

A report on 160 U.S. domestic violence related homicides in Asian families based on newspaper clippings and information from advocates for a six-year period from 2000–2005 found:

- 15 of 158 (9.5%) victims with known ethnicities were Korean.
- 11 of 122 (8.2%) perpetrators with known ethnicities were Korean.

From the aborting of female fetuses to intimate homicide, girls and women may encounter numerous oppressions during infancy, childhood, adolescence, adulthood, and as elders. Some of these are confined to one stage in the lifecycle, some continue into subsequent stages.

The Lifetime Spiral reveals patterns of victimization by enumerating the types of violence, vulnerabilities, and harms women and girls face. It also implicitly shows the presence of different abusers located over the lifecourse. A grandmother may withhold nutritious food for a baby girl, a brother may perpetrate incest, a priest may molest a teen girl, a father may insist on a forced marriage, a college student may date rape a classmate, a co-worker may engage in sexual harassment, a husband may batter during pregnancy, a brother- or sister-in-law may stalk, an ex-boyfriend may kill, a community may ostracize homosexuals, a family may silence or shame.

In addition to physical, sexual, economic and emotional abuses; violence is about living in a climate of fear, shame, coercive control, and devaluation. It is often experienced in the context of additional oppressions based on race, ethnicity, age, sexual orientation, gender identity, type of labor performed, level of education, class position, disability, and immigration or refugee status. Raising awareness about the historical nature of gender violence confronts victim-blaming, informs advocacy, and empowers survivors.
