Back to the question, this article worksheet will help you practice how to use articles, a/an and clear articles, and documents indefinitely. The description and practice of the pictures is a great review activity to make you feel comfortable with these fundamental words in English. We always use them, so it's very important that you know how to use them correctly! First, you should review the page that describes the document. Remember that we use a/a for nouns that we mention for the first time or are not specific. We use it for certain things. Take a look at the example below and remember how to use a clear and indefinite document. Then complete the walkthring and check the answers at the end of the worksheet. Example: A/an We use a/an for nouns that can refer to certain kinds of things. Imagine, for example, that your uncle made cookies. You say: I want cookies! (You wanted one The cookies he created are not specific cookies. So, you a.) The word cookie begins with the sound of a yer, so we use a. When words start with vowel sounds, we use vowel sounds. For example: a scientist had an idea. (We don't know anything about the idea, so it's not specific, the word idea starts with a vowel sound, so we use vowel sounds.) We use it for certain nouns when we know exactly what we're talking about. Use as a singular or plurality of people. For example, Jack fell asleep in a green chair. (We know exactly what particular chair we're talking about.) Eric and Adam are coloring their eggs. (We know exactly what specific eggs we're talking about.) We also use it when there is only one of the things. For example: The sun is shining today! (There is only one sun.) The first time I mention something in a vs. A/an story, we use a/an. After that, we use it. For example, Anna told Rick a secret. The secret was a big surprise! Rick later told Angela the secret. (We use it the first time we mention a secret, because after that, we know exactly what specific secrets we're talking about.) Remember no articles in any case, we don't use articles. When we usually talk about something or we mention a city or country, we don't use articles. For example, a party is a lot of fun! (In general, parties are fun.) I went to Australia last year. (Australia is a country, so we don't use articles.) So, this is how we use a/an, and in English. Now let's practice! Exercise A: A or exercise? View the photo, or complete the sentence with a.1. Bradley is a teacher _ she _ Emily _ in the middle of the park _ they _ exercise B: A, a, or no articles or none? Look at the photo, and complete the sentence without a, a, or article.1. A and indefinite article. They are commonly used to refer to singular calculation nouns for the first time or not. Basic English grammar rules can be tricky. In this article, we'll start with the basics of sentence structure, punctuation, parts of speech, and more. There are two types of worksheet exercises in answer pDFs and articles about Class 3 CBSE: clear articles (in) and articles indefinitely (a, a). We usually use the article 'a' indefinitely first to mention any person or thing. In doing so, we don't need to be clear about what specific person we are or what we're referring to. When we refer back to the same person or thing, we use a clear article indicating the person or what has already been mentioned. Sometimes you don't need to use one of the documents. This situation is called zero articles, the default A and inside is used to introduce noun words. We use A and An to talk about one person, animal or thing. Use 'A' for the first letter of a noun. Use 'Inside' when it's the first letter of a noun. 'The' is used in front of a special noun. We use 'A' before words that start with you and the EU when it sounds like 'you'. Examples: Uniforms, eucalyptus, etc. we use 'inside' before silence 'h'. Example: Honest person, one hour, etc., 'The' is also used in front of noun words previously mentioned, introduced or discussed. Answer PDF A.
