Impact
In 2013, we closed our 2,000th Low-Income Housing Tax Credit (Housing Credit) investment. Cheryl Chow Court, a 51-apartment new-construction development for low-income seniors, also features an “urban rest stop” that provides free restrooms, showers and laundry facilities for homeless people. Socially responsible, tailored to meet the needs of a local community, informed by our national experience, Cheryl Chow Court is indicative of our investment philosophy as a whole.

One home can make all the difference in the world. Since 1986, the year Enterprise founder Jim Rouse helped create the Housing Credit, we’ve helped build or preserve 124,000 affordable homes through the credit alone. The exponential impact is both profound and humbling.

The Enterprise platform of products, services and solutions is designed to advance our mission of connecting families to opportunity through affordable homes while also meeting the needs of investors and partners.

Last year, Enterprise closed $646 million in Housing Credit business, $50.8 million in New Markets Tax Credit investments and $848 million in multifamily mortgage loans. We deployed $1.5 billion for affordable and workforce housing developments, creating or preserving more than 16,800 homes. Altogether, Enterprise deployed nearly $2.5 billion in capital in 2013.

Innovation
Enterprise launched a $144 million multi-investor fund last year that provides targeted Community Reinvestment Act (CRA) investments at varying yields, enabling investors to choose from multiple regional markets through the convenience of a single fund. This one-stop-shop approach enables us to invest in more projects, deploy more capital, and provide more opportunities to investors than ever before. We believe it has the potential to become the prototype for funds across the country.

Socially responsible, solutions-oriented investments have been the hallmark of Enterprise for more than 30 years. We take great pride in the confidence our investors place in us. The stability we strive to create in the communities we invest in is mirrored only by the reliability we seek to provide our investors.

Thank you for your partnership.
