YORKVILLE URBAN HISTORY HUNT

Each team needs to select ONE phone to become the “game phone”. Make sure the battery is at least 75% charged!

If you have an iPhone:
go to the Apple App store and search for an app called: thegogame (no spaces). Look for the orange logo. Found it? Great! Download the thing. Log in with the game code 240

If you have an Android:
Go to play.thegogame.com/play
Log in with the game code 240

Here are a few points to remember as you play.

• Read missions aloud to your team. Make sure to read the entire text!
• If you’re ever stuck on a mission, guess three times to move on.
• The more missions you complete, the more points you get.

Over the course of the game you’ll solve puzzles, encounter characters, and take creative photos and videos with your team.

Document your fun at any time with the bonus camera! These photos and videos will be added to your game gallery. These are for documentation only; not for creative challenges.

YORKVILLE URBAN HISTORY HUNT

You are about to embark on a mission to find the remnants of this once thriving immigrant community!

Yorkville began as a small village centered around present day 86th Street and 3rd Avenue, what was then known as German Broadway. The area had several working farms, as well as estates belonging to many prominent New York families. With rapid population growth and steady movement uptown, a hundred years ago Yorkville was a bustling immigrant neighborhood predominantly filled with Germans, Hungarians, Czechs, Slovaks, and Irish. Each group settled into their own little pocket of the neighborhood, and felt at home in a strange new city by surrounding themselves with their own language, food, religion, and music.

Yorkville is not the same today, as many of these immigrant groups moved out of the area in the 1950s. But if you act as history detectives, you will discover evidence that these cultures once dominated the neighborhood. That’s your mission today...
