Accessibility for Persons with Disabilities
The athletics department staff is acutely aware of the special needs of individuals with disabilities in the New York University community. These needs have been kept in mind in the design and construction of the NYU Athletic Facilities, resulting in barrier-free recreational facilities. Doors and areas throughout the centers are of ample size to allow wheelchair access, and elevator services are available on the main levels of both centers. Braille markings, contrasting color paint, and continuous stairwell railings have been included for those with visual impairments. Stairs, railings, and a hydraulic chairlift make pool access at Palladium easier for persons with disabilities.

In addition to unstructured general recreational use of the centers, these individuals may find instruction and supervision in a number of sports and fitness courses. Interpreters will be available on request for those with hearing impairments. Students and members should not hesitate to call to make arrangements to meet and discuss an individual program.

The instructional recreation program is comprised of more than 140 courses (over 500 sections), available at a nominal fee to the centers’ users. These supervised recreation classes are offered to promote health and physical fitness, to develop leisure and recreational skills, and to impart knowledge of skills, game strategy, and rules for understanding specific sports. Participants can choose from the wide range of noncredit courses listed in the department’s recreation course listing, which is available at the centers’ information desks and online at www.gonyuathletics.com.

Recreation courses are offered on a quarterly basis. A calendar is provided. Primary emphasis is on beginning and intermediate levels of instruction, although advanced instruction is offered in some areas.

Courses are taught by trained and qualified instructors and provide an excellent opportunity for personal development. Unless specified, all classes are open to men and women. Individual private instruction, outside the recreation courses offered, is prohibited. The department does have an opportunity for one-on-one personal training, and it can be found in the Athletics Department Recreation Guide.

For the entire recreation program to be responsive to its users’ interests and needs, the department maintains a wide degree of programming flexibility. As these interests and needs change, the department will innovate and implement new activities and augment its program to meet new demands of the NYU community. We welcome your suggestions. The intention of the department is to increase or improve skills and confidence and to convey to NYU Athletic Facilities members the value of achieving and maintaining physical fitness throughout their lives.

We do accept credit cards (Visa, MasterCard, and Discover) and NYU Campus Cash. The program offers 25-plus sports, activities, fitness programs, and events over a wide range of recreational, fitness and athletic experience. Offerings such as Intra-Run, Intra-Fit, and Powerlift Meets, as well as team sports, such as soccer, basketball, volleyball, cricket, and flag football, are provided and are some of the most participated offerings. Winter and Summer session offerings are also programmed on a limited basis as well. The offerings of sports, events, and activities by the intramural program will differ and vary depending on the semester, on facility availability, and in regards to the current seasonal weather. There are sports and activities for everyone!

In addition to the 404 Fitness Center, the Palladium Athletic Facility, and the Brooklyn Athletic Facility, the Intramural Office uses various locations throughout New York City. Chelsea Piers Sports and Entertainment Complex is one of the most utilized locations. It is located along the Hudson River at West 23rd Street and houses indoor soccer fields as well as ice rinks, roller rinks, and sand volleyball courts. East River Park, Chelsea Waterside Park, and Pier 40 are also popular locations for intramurals sports such as flag football, softball, and soccer.
