If the Lord wills

Most of us like to plan. One-year, five-year, ten-year plans. What we'll do, when we'll do it, and how we'll get there.

If we invest 10% of our income starting at age 25, we'll retire at 65 with no financial worries. Next year we're going on vacation. Next month we'll take a couple days off from work. Next week we'll get this report done or that chore finished.

"See you Friday night," we say without thinking. "I'll be there at 6:00."

James doesn't particularly like all that, or at least he's got a strongly worded warning about how we do it:

Come now, you who say, "Today or tomorrow we will go into such and such a town and spend a year there and trade and make a profit"—yet you do not know what tomorrow will bring. What is your life? For you are a mist that appears for a little time and then vanishes. Instead you ought to say, "If the Lord wills, we will live and do this or that." As it is, you boast in your arrogance. All such boasting is evil. So whoever knows the right thing to do and fails to do it, for him it is sin (James 4:13-17).

I don't think James is against retirement plans, or saving up for the vacation the family's been dreaming about. What he doesn't like—what God doesn't like—is when we make plans as if we control the future. As if we're certain what will happen. Like the if-then connection between now and future events is inevitable: If I do this, then I get that.

That mindset sneaks up on us. It shows up in our calendars, our budgets, our career paths, even in our prayers. We begin to assume that tomorrow belongs to us, that our health will hold, that the economy will cooperate, that the people we love will still be here, and that life will continue more or less on the schedule we've chosen.

It's me-centered, isn't it? And that's the root problem.

We don't know what will happen tomorrow, but God does. We have no idea what our career will look like in five years, what the markets will do, what our bodies will allow, or what unexpected turns life will take. We don't, of course, but God does.

And that's where James's "If the Lord wills" comes in. We simply don't have the ability to make plans about the future without God's involvement. So we submit all of it to his will. Not with fear, and not with passivity, but with humility and trust.

It doesn't mean we shouldn't plan—see the book of Proverbs, for example—but it does mean we recognize God's hand in overseeing everything we do.

So yes, let's plan what we hope to do this week, next month, and next year. Let's make vacation and retirement plans. Let's dream big and write bucket lists.

But let's do it all with open hands and open hearts, remembering: it's his future anyway.

Booth Saved Lincoln

The very title might offend some people, but it is the truth. Of course, context helps. It was Edwin Booth, not John Wilkes. And it was Robert, not Abraham, Lincoln. Edwin and Robert were among customers buying passage on a sleeping car in Jersey City, New Jersey. Robert lost his balance and fell into an open space between the train and the station platform. By all accounts, he would have been crushed and likely killed if Edwin had not seized him and quickly pulled him out onto the platform.

Context can be very helpful. Without it, we can draw some erroneous and even fatal conclusions. This is especially true with the Bible, a book many may know a little about but neglect to study with depth and purpose. Doctrines and conclusions are based on statements taken out of context.

- “Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and you will be saved” (Acts 16:31).
- “The Lord hardened Pharaoh’s heart” (Exodus 9:12; 10:20; 14:8).
- “Jacob I have loved, but Esau I have hated” (Malachi 1:2-3; Romans 9:13).
- “Whoever calls on the name of the Lord shall be saved” (Joel 2:32; Acts 2:21; Romans 10:13).
- “Where two or three are gathered together in My name, I am there in the midst of them” (Matthew 18:20).

Sometimes, a statement needs to be understood in light of the broader context. That would be the case regarding Pharaoh and Esau. The Lord hardened Pharaoh's heart through the plagues, causing the Egyptian king to rebel against God's will and choose pride over penitence. In the case of Esau, as Paul explains, the idea is God's sovereign choice. God was not unjust. He had a purpose for choosing Jacob over Esau (Romans 9:11). Sometimes, a statement causes us to look deeper into all the Bible says about the subject. Consider the idea of calling on the name of the Lord to be saved. Rather than salvation by confession only, the Bible teaches what is involved in calling on the name of the Lord. Ananias taught Saul that this is done when one is baptized, washing away sins (Acts 22:16).

When we are studying the Bible, we must always do so contextually. It makes the difference in the conclusions we draw. God expects us to handle His word accurately (2 Timothy 2:15). May we be the best Bible students we can be!

It is organized around a thirteen-week small-group program where participants meet together for around two hours each week and watch professionally-designed videos featuring professional grief counselors and also people who are grieving. These presentations are coupled with discussions that are designed to internalize what participants learn in the videos. We have additional information for Griefshare Sessions offered on other days and times in the Birmingham area. Please see Harold or Donna Rhodes if you have any questions regarding GriefShare.
