“Chicken Quarantine” - Original Story

One day, Luna walked out of the chicken coop. This day started like all other days: with a nice breakfast of meal worms and grains, but she soon realized that something was different. It was...more quiet than usual. There were no young people there to feed her corn or carrot tops or to gently brush her feathers. She ran in a frenzy all around the chicken yard. She bumped into Frieda, who didn't seem to think anything was the matter. Finally, she decided to go and visit Angel, the oldest and wise-est of all of the chickens, to ask what was going on! She looked up to this chicken and asked, “Where are all the young people, why is it so quiet here? It seems that even all the worms have burrowed underground, and the birds have retreated to their nests. Even the squirrels are lounging in the walnut tree instead of scurrying about!” Angel replied, “We have been ordered to stay home and stay safe. It's called quarantine.” On that note, Luna went to find her favorite spot to take a dust bath and think about ways to help her animal community.
