

Media Mondays and Writing Wednesdays

For The Month of May -

Due on Wednesday, May 28th

The "Passion Project" was so well-received that we're going to do another one in May, but with a bit of a twist. Here are the rules for this Passion Project:

1) It must connect with something that we've learned this year. This can be learning in any subject area (i.e., Language, Math, Science, Social Studies, Art, Music, Drama, Phys-Ed, and/or Health). We'll make a list of some general topics in class that I can share on the class blog as well for students that need some ideas.

2) The completed Passion Project must include a media text component. This can be any media text including a poster, video, comic strip, commercial, or brochure. If your child has another idea, he/she can let me know, and use this other idea instead. The Passion Project can also include an element that is not a media text, but it needs this media text component as well.

3) Students can work alone or in a small group, but if they're working with others, they need to arrange times to collaborate outside of school. This is a homework activity. During our sharing time on the 28th, all students must be able to answer questions about their Passion Projects, so even if working in a group, they all need to know what's being shared.

I can't wait to see what the students share! Learn lots and have fun!
