Paperless Expert

We’ve all heard that going paperless is the newest way to preserve resources while reducing waste. Even so, how can it be accomplished? There is just something calming about having paper in hand when making decisions. You’ll probably be surprised to learn that a paperless expert lives among us.

Paul Nobles, Purchasing Coordinator with the Escambia County Board of County Commissioners is bravely blazing the paperless trail. He will be presenting on the paperless process at this year’s NIGP National Forum on August 29th in Maryland. Escambia County only accepts electronic documents when they need A&E services. Paul has become the expert in championing electronic documentation for A&E services, as shown by his repeat performances on this topic at the Forum (it’s his third).

Best Practice Runner-Up

The University of West Florida Procurement and Contracts was awarded the National Association of Educational Procurement (NAEP) Best Procurement Practices of 2010 based on a new and easier PCard process. Eric Engelmeier and Dora English presented at the NAEP Florida Regional Annual Conference held in Daytona Beach, Florida on March 1-4, 2011.

A Perfect Ten!

The University of West Florida Procurement and Contracts is the proud recipient of the Achievement of Excellence in Procurement for the 10th year.
