Shabbos Shira

Shabbaton with Rabbi Elazar Muskin

מי כמוך באלים ה'

“Who is like you among the heavenly powers, G-d?”

Shmos 15:11

The Talmud presents a homiletical interpretation of the verse altering the word אלים (heavenly powers) into אלם (mute-silent). Sometimes G-d shows His might through His remarkable forbearance. Even in the face of the most vile acts of vitriolic hatred against the Jewish people, sometimes G-d remains silent. Although this may be true, what does that have to do with the song of the sea, the drowning of the Egyptians in the red sea was an example of G-d's fury against our enemies not his forbearance?. The answer is that by seeing this act of unrestrained wrath against the Egyptian people they realized and understood in retrospect the full extent of G-d's restraint, that for two hundred and ten years G-d waited and He showed the Egyptians tremendous forbearance hoping that maybe they would repent, but that was not to be. Therefore, in the end the greatest sign of G-d's power is in His ability to hold back, and not inflict the punishment upon a nation that it truly deserves. This is also a great lesson for us in life,
