Spotlight of Sunshine in January

What a warm welcome our "Getting to Know You" Melave Malka was to the ushering in of winter. Well over sixty women of our community laughed together as we shared bits of our life history, and sang together as an expression of joy and friendship. After the program, we enjoyed a delicious melave malka together into the wee hours of the night!

Thank you Shalomis Koffler Weinreb and Rina Miriam Bethea for setting the joyful mood of the evening with your beautiful music, and to Rebbetzins Ida and Bracha Goldberger, a dynamic duo. Thank you to Deborah Taffel, Elka Rottman, Shulamis Heldoorn, Toby Passe, Sara Weingot, Aviva Paul, Shoshana and Atara Pear for planning and carrying out the marvelous program with our first volunteer event coordinator, Rebbetzin Bracha Goldberger. Thank you to our team of chefs for preparing the delicious food: Talia and Naama Raun, Ann Stiller, Glenna Ross, Bryna Lazarus, Alisa Mandel, Elka Rottman, Natalie Roth, Dvora Sherman, Aviva Paul, Devorah Vidal and Karen Beleck. Thank you to everyone who helped with the set-up and the clean-up - too many to list, I am proud to say, as just about everyone was involved with helping!

Thank you Esther Weiner, Aviva Paul, Elka Rottman and Chana Birnbaum for your most generous sponsorships of the Melave Malka.

Step right up, the position of our next event coordinator awaits you!

The Weekly Parsha

Parshas Bo

By Rabbi Ozer Alport

“And you shall redeem every human firstborn among your sons.” (13:13)

The plague of the slaying of the first-born didn't distinguish between paternal first-born Egyptians and maternal first-borns, as both were killed. If the mitzvah of Pidyon HaBen, the redemption of the first-born son, commemorates the fact that the Jewish first-borns were spared from this plague (13:2), why is it performed only with a maternal first-born and not also with a paternal first-born?

The Avnei Shoham answers by comparing Pidyon HaBen to the mitzvah of bikkurim. After a farmer puts in so much effort into plowing and planting, it seems quite natural that he should enjoy a good harvest. Bringing bikkurim to the Temple combats his instincts to take credit for the products of his labor and forget about the Divine assistance which made it possible. The Torah reminds him Who is really responsible for the crops by requiring him to bring the first fruits to the Temple.

Similarly, when a couple gets married, it seems natural that within a few years the wife should give birth to a child. To prevent the parents from taking this process for granted, the first-born son must be redeemed from the Kohen. This reminds them that what appeared natural is actually miraculous.

However, a reminder is necessary only when the birth would have otherwise appeared natural, such as a maternal first-born. In the event of a paternal first-born, meaning that the mother has previously been married, or a child born by Caesarian-section or following a miscarriage, it is already clear that the traditional order of events isn't being followed, and no reminder is necessary.

Alternatively, Rav Akiva Eiger and Rav Yosef Chaim Sonnenfeld answer by questioning why it was necessary for the Jews to place the blood of the Korban Pesach on their doorposts to protect them. If Hashem slew the first-born, couldn't He differentiate between the houses of the Jews and the Egyptians? It is also difficult to understand whether the first-born were slain by Hashem, as the Haggadah emphasizes that this plague was performed exclusively by Him, or by a destructive angel, as the Jews were told to place blood on their doorposts to protect them from the destroying angel (12:23).

To resolve both difficulties, they suggest that a maternal first-born can be easily distinguished, while a paternal first-born is harder to identify. The destroying angel slew the maternal first-borns where there was no room for error, and Hashem killed the paternal first-borns who required extra recognition.

In light of this explanation, we now understand that it wasn't miraculous that the paternal first-borns were saved, as Hashem knew their identities and they were never in danger of an error. The maternal first-borns, however, required a miracle to be saved from the destroying angel, as the Gemora (Bava Kamma 60a) teaches that once permission is given to this angel to destroy, it doesn't differentiate between the righteous and the wicked. Because Hashem had to miraculously protect them, they became holy for all generations and require redemption from a Kohen.

Rosh Chodesh and Renewal

Chapter 12 in our parsha begins with the first mitzvah in the Torah for the Jewish people as a nation, the mitzvah of Rosh Chodesh: “Hashem said to Moshe and Aharon in the land of Mitzraim, saying, ‘This month shall be for you the beginning of the months, it shall be for you the first of the months of the year’” (Shemos 12:1-2). This commandment was given after the plague of choshech, darkness, where according to the Midrash, 80 percent of the Yidden perished, leaving only 20 percent worthy of redemption. In order to give them a “spiritual boost,” Hashem gave them the mitzvos of Rosh Chodesh, Bris Milah and Korban Pesach right before the final plague of makas b'choros.

It is brought down by our meforshim that the Jewish people are compared to the moon, in that both are in a constant state of flux. Just as the moon waxes and wanes, so too do the Jewish people, both on individual and national levels. The potential for spiritual growth and change is inherent in the Torah lifestyle, and each and every one of us experiences moments of spiritual “highs and lows,” but the opportunity for renewal comes each week with Shabbos, and each month with Rosh Chodesh.

Rashi comments that “This month” refers to Nissan, the month in which this commandment was given, and is to be “the beginning of the months,” even though the new year begins with Rosh Chodesh Tishrei. This is why the Torah refers to Rosh Hashana as the “first day of the seventh month,” and Pesach as the “fifteenth day of the first month.” Rashi adds that “alternatively, the word chodesh should be understood not as month, but as renewal. G-d showed Moshe the new moon and told him, ‘When you see the moon in its new phase, it shall be Rosh Chodesh for you.’”

The commentary in the Artscroll Stone Chumash writes: “Rosh Chodesh symbolizes renewal, the ability of the Jewish people to rise up from oblivion and restore itself to past greatness. Just as the moon disappears at the end of each month, but returns and grows to fullness, so Israel may suffer exile and decline, but it always renews itself – until the coming of Moshiach, when the promise of the Exodus and the Revelation at Sinai will be fulfilled, never to be dimmed again.” May we all be zoche to witness the coming of Moshiach, speedily and in our times. A gutten Shabbos.

Dunkin' Donuts

Dunkin' Donuts stores, located at 1508 and 7000 Reisterstown Roads, are under the certification of Rabbi Sholom Salfer as cholov stam. For those who keep cholov Yisroel, yet eat powdered milk, it is important to note that many of the doughnuts and other food items (including Coolattas) contain real cholov stam milk. The milk (i.e., whole, 2% and skim) used in the coffee served at these two eateries is cholov Yisroel (excluding cream or half and half.) Please see the full list posted at each of the two stores.

As many in the community have either seen and/or heard, a new Dunkin' Donuts store is opening at 1101 Reisterstown Road (corner of Sudbrook). To avoid any misconceptions, please note that this new location is NOT Kosher Certified, as they will be serving non-kosher items such as a real bacon and sausages.
