Camp Yom Tov

Over the past many years, we have offered the Camp Yom Tov program to give parents the opportunity to daven, and we would like to continue to offer this program this year and well into the future, b'ezras Hashem.

There are some challenges inherent in managing a safe child-care operation in a facility, and with a staff not normally dedicated to child care. In order to ensure that our children stay safe, we need more robust participation from shul members in the planning and oversight of the program.

We are asking for at least six people to sign up by Sunday, July 24, to share in the responsibility of coordinating CYT operations. With a committee of six people, we do not anticipate that this will be a major time commitment; however, if we do not have a core committee, we will not be able to offer a child care program during Yom Tov this year.

Please contact CYT coordinator emerita Talia Raun at talia@tiferesyisroel.org if you would like to be a part of the Camp Yom Tov team.

The Weekly Parsha

Parshas Chukas

By Rabbi A. Leib Scheinbaum

“This is the decree of the Torah, which Hashem commanded, saying...” (19:2)

One of the close chassidim of the Klausenberger Rebbe, zl, recounts that he had the “privilege” to be with the Rebbe in the Warsaw Ghetto prior to their transfer to Auschwitz. It was Shabbos Parshas Chukas, 1944, as the Rebbe sat down to deliver his Torah lecture during Seudah Shlishis. He cited the opening pasuk of our parshah, then continued with the following. “Zos is an acronym for (zayin) (aleph) (taf), Z’chor al tishkach, ‘Remember and do not forget.’” If one has the desire to retain his Torah study, to hold it in his memory, he can follow three suggestions as guidelines for not forgetting what he has learned. First, tzivah, “was commanded.” The gematria, numerical equivalent, of tzivah is 101, alluding to Chazal’s maxim that one should study everything that he learns 101 times. Indeed, they add that one cannot compare what one studies 100 times to that which he reviews 101 times. That one extra time makes a world of difference.

The second suggestion is Hashem. One should conjure up in his mind that he is standing before Hashem. This will enable him to remember his learning better. Third is leimor, “saying.” He should articulate that which he is learning. This will also assist in the process of internalizing the Torah knowledge into his memory bank.

The purpose of citing this d’var Torah is to emphasize the saintly Rebbe’s ability to think and remain immersed in Torah, despite the pain and deprivation to which he was subjected. It also demonstrates the commitment and devotion of his chassidim who listened and remembered this Dvar Torah sixty years later.

A Divine Kiss

This week’s parsha, Chukas, records the sorrowful deaths of both Miriam and Aharon. In the fortieth year in the midbar, Miriam passed on the tenth of Nissan at the age of 125; Aharon, four months later on the first of Av, at the age of 123. The Midrash states that both Miriam and Aharon died by misas neshika, a Divine kiss; as they each departed, their souls became united with the Shechinah directly through G-d, without the intervention of the Angel of Death (Bava Basra 17a; Rabbeinu Bachye). The Talmud describes this as the most exalted form of death, likening it to pulling a hair from milk; that is, the soul departs from the body with no resistance (Berachos 8a). R’ Tzadok HaKohen explains that to the extent that people sin in life and establish a bond between their soul and the pleasures of this world, it becomes increasingly difficult for them to part from physical life. For these people, our chachamim describe, death is like “pulling embedded thistles from sheep’s wool,” as their soul battles to stay connected to the body.

Chapter 20 begins with “The Children of Israel, the entire assembly, arrived at the Wilderness of Zin in the first month and the people settled in Kadesh. Miriam died there (sham) and she was buried there (sham)” (Bamidbar 20:1). Rashi explains the seemingly superfluous double-usage of the word sham is to suggest that Miriam, like her brother Aharon, also died through a Divine kiss, as the pasuk states, “Moshe divested Aharon of his garments and dressed Elazar his son in them; then Aharon died there (sham) on top of the mountain” (ibid. 20:28). Rashi states: “The two identical words teach us that there was a similarity between the deaths of Aharon and Miriam; just as Aharon died through a kiss, so too did Miriam.” According to the text of other editions of the Talmud, the comparison is to the death of Moshe, in the context of which the word sham also appears (see Devarim 34:5).

This explains why Elazar, who upon the passing of his father and his subsequent role as Kohen Gadol, was permitted to be present at Aharon’s death. Because Aharon died by misas neshika, and the Angel of Death was not present, Elazar did not become tamei from the meis, and did not transgress the prohibition that states, “He [the Kohen Gadol] shall not come near any dead person; he shall not contaminate himself to his father or his mother” (Vayikra 21:11). When he died, Aharon’s neshamah left his body without a trace of tumah left behind.

Rashi asks, “Why is the passage of Miriam’s death juxtaposed with the passage of the red cow? To tell you, just as offerings atone, so too does the death of the righteous atone” (Rashi to 20:1). The laws of the red cow were originally introduced to Klal Yisroel during their second year in the wilderness, on the day that the Mishkan was erected (Gittin 60a), while Miriam died in the fortieth year. That is why the question is raised: Why are the two passages, which reflect times that are so far apart, placed side by side? (Mizrachi; Sifsei Chachamim). Upon her death, the well that had followed the Bnei Yisroel through the midbar providing water suddenly disappeared. The Midrash states that Hashem caused the well to disappear so the people would realize that their well of water had been supplied in Miriam’s merit. Thus appreciating her greatness, they would mourn this tzaddeikes in a befitting manner.

Unfortunately, Miriam’s death, and the loss of the well, led to yet another national tragedy, as the lack of water caused the people to once again rebel against Moshe and Aharon. Angered by their complaints, Moshe struck the rock with his staff, resulting in Hashem’s refusal to allow Moshe or Aharon entry into the Land. A few short months later, Aharon passed away in a cave on Mount Hor.

The Midrash identifies six tzaddikim to whom the Angel of Death was powerless to remove their souls upon their death: Avraham, Yitzchok, Yaakov, Moshe, Aharon and Miriam. All six of these outstanding and prominent leaders in Jewish history departed from this world by misas neshika, a Divine kiss, leaving their souls immortalized and their memory eternal. A gutten Shabbos.
