Retired attorney and mother of three, Megan Mayer speaks, trains, and writes on improving productivity, team satisfaction, and talent retention. As Chair of Network for Impact, Megan trains corporate and nonprofit professionals using her unique combination of legal research and tactical parenting. Organizations benefiting from her services range from large Silicon Valley companies (Google, Nvidia, etc.), associations (California Association of Nurse Practitioners, National Environmental Balancing Bureau, etc.) for educational credit, to UC and Cal State graduate and undergraduate programs. She founded Carmel Cotillions, LLC to train youth on professional networking skills and continues to train elite high school and college student cohorts.

Megan practiced real estate, estate planning, and business law in Orange County. Prior to practicing law, she worked in the oil and gas, real estate development, and petrochemical industries. She formed, and served as president and director of, holding companies for ARCO Chemical, with over $1.2 billion in assets, saving over $45 million in annual taxes. Megan now eats organic, drives electric, and runs her home on solar with batteries.

Megan received degrees in Economics and Law from UCLA, where she met her husband of 35 years. She has published and spoken on economics, law, leadership, networking, and parenting, and is featured in Insider, The Orange County Register, The UCLA Journal of Gender and Law, Medical Board of California Newsletter, Monterey Herald Health Matters Magazine, The Carmel Pinecone and Monterey on Tonight. Audiences love how her unique family experience with brain injury makes her message relatable and inspirational.
