

The Brave Railway Man

Near the city of Chennai lived a railwayman whose job was simple but quite important. He had to make sure that the railway tracks were kept in order so that no trains would ever have an accident with each other.

Though he was not very educated, he was good at his job. He knew that if he made a mistake, the trains would crash with each other, and many people would die.

One day, as he was changing the tracks, he saw a cobra climbing to the stick. He knew he could not leave, otherwise, an accident would occur. He remembered his duty and put his life on the line to save innocent lives. He did not move his hands as the snake came up and wrapped itself around the stick and his arm.

He kept pulling the stick so he could change the railway tracks to avoid any crashes. Without any fear, he held the stick and changed the lines. After a few minutes, the snake left his arm and went on its way.

That day, he saved hundreds of lives because he obeyed his rules.

We must obey
rules and do what
we've been told.
