

Good Student

An acharya was very old. He had a lot of students and he wanted to find a good acharya among them to replace him. After careful thinking he chose one of his students. The other sadhus were very surprised to see his choice. The student he had chosen was very obedient but the others felt that he was not very learned.

The chosen student began performing the rituals with his teacher. He listened to his teacher very carefully and respectfully. The rituals were over and the new acharya sat down to give his first lecture. He spoke with wisdom. The other students understood that he had the humility to learn and listen to his teacher properly so now he was learned enough to be an acharya.

If we are sincere then we can learn.
