

The Greatness Of Munni Angarshi

Long ago, there was a Upadhyay called Kaushik who had two students, Angarshi and Roudrak. They were very different from each other Angarshi was very calm and patient, while Roodrak was angry and ruthless.

One day their Upadhyay sent the two of them to collect wood. Angarshi went straight to the forest and collected the broken twigs all around, while Roodrak went to have some fun.

After a while, he realized that it was getting late. Wondering what to do, he started wandering. On the way, he saw an old woman carrying a big bundle of wood. Being a cruel person, he killed her and took the bundle, and ran with it to the Upadhyay.

Roodrak arrived early and told the Upadhyay,

"Look what your favorite student Angarshi has done. He has killed a poor old woman and grabbed her bundle of sticks."

Hearing this, the Upadhyay got very angry, and as soon as Angarshi came, he threw him out.

Angarshi left the place calmly and did not say anything. He wondered what made his teacher so much angry and felt sorry that he was upset. He then thought about his karmas and past deeds he might have committed.

Angarshi went into deep meditation and burnt all his karmas, and attained kevalgyan or omniscience. All the gods came to bow to him, and when his teacher Upadhya Kaushik found out, he also bowed to him.

We must be patient
even if things do not go our way.
