

Animals & Humans

Once there was a group of 6 friends who used to hunt animals for fun. The children used to hunt animals when their school was over.

Two of the group, Yashoda, and Bala were from the village Gokulpur. But they never supported the others to hunt. They always were against it.

Yashoda and Bala were decent children. They used to stop their friends from hunting, but no one ever listened to them.

In fact, the others used to tease Yashoda and Bala that they do not have the guts to hunt animals.

They called both of them 'LOSERS'. But Yashoda and Bala never minded about it.

Yashoda and Bala always used to say that animals are our friends, who also have families that wait for them to return home. They also have feelings.

They are always taking care of the village. The other children ignored her and went hunting in the forest.

We must treat animals well.

One day, when those children went hunting, some robbers and bandits rushed into the Gokulpur forest and tied them with rope.

All the kids got scared and started shouting, but no one could hear their voices from far away. There was no one around.

The reason why the children were tied up was that they wanted to hunt the animals by themselves.

The children knew that no one would arrive there except for the animals.

After some time, Shantanu and Yashoda were passing by the village when they heard some noise.

When they stepped forward, they saw the children tied up by the tree with ropes.

These goons are from a nearby village. They have killed all the animals of their village by hunting, and now they want to hunt the animals of other villages.

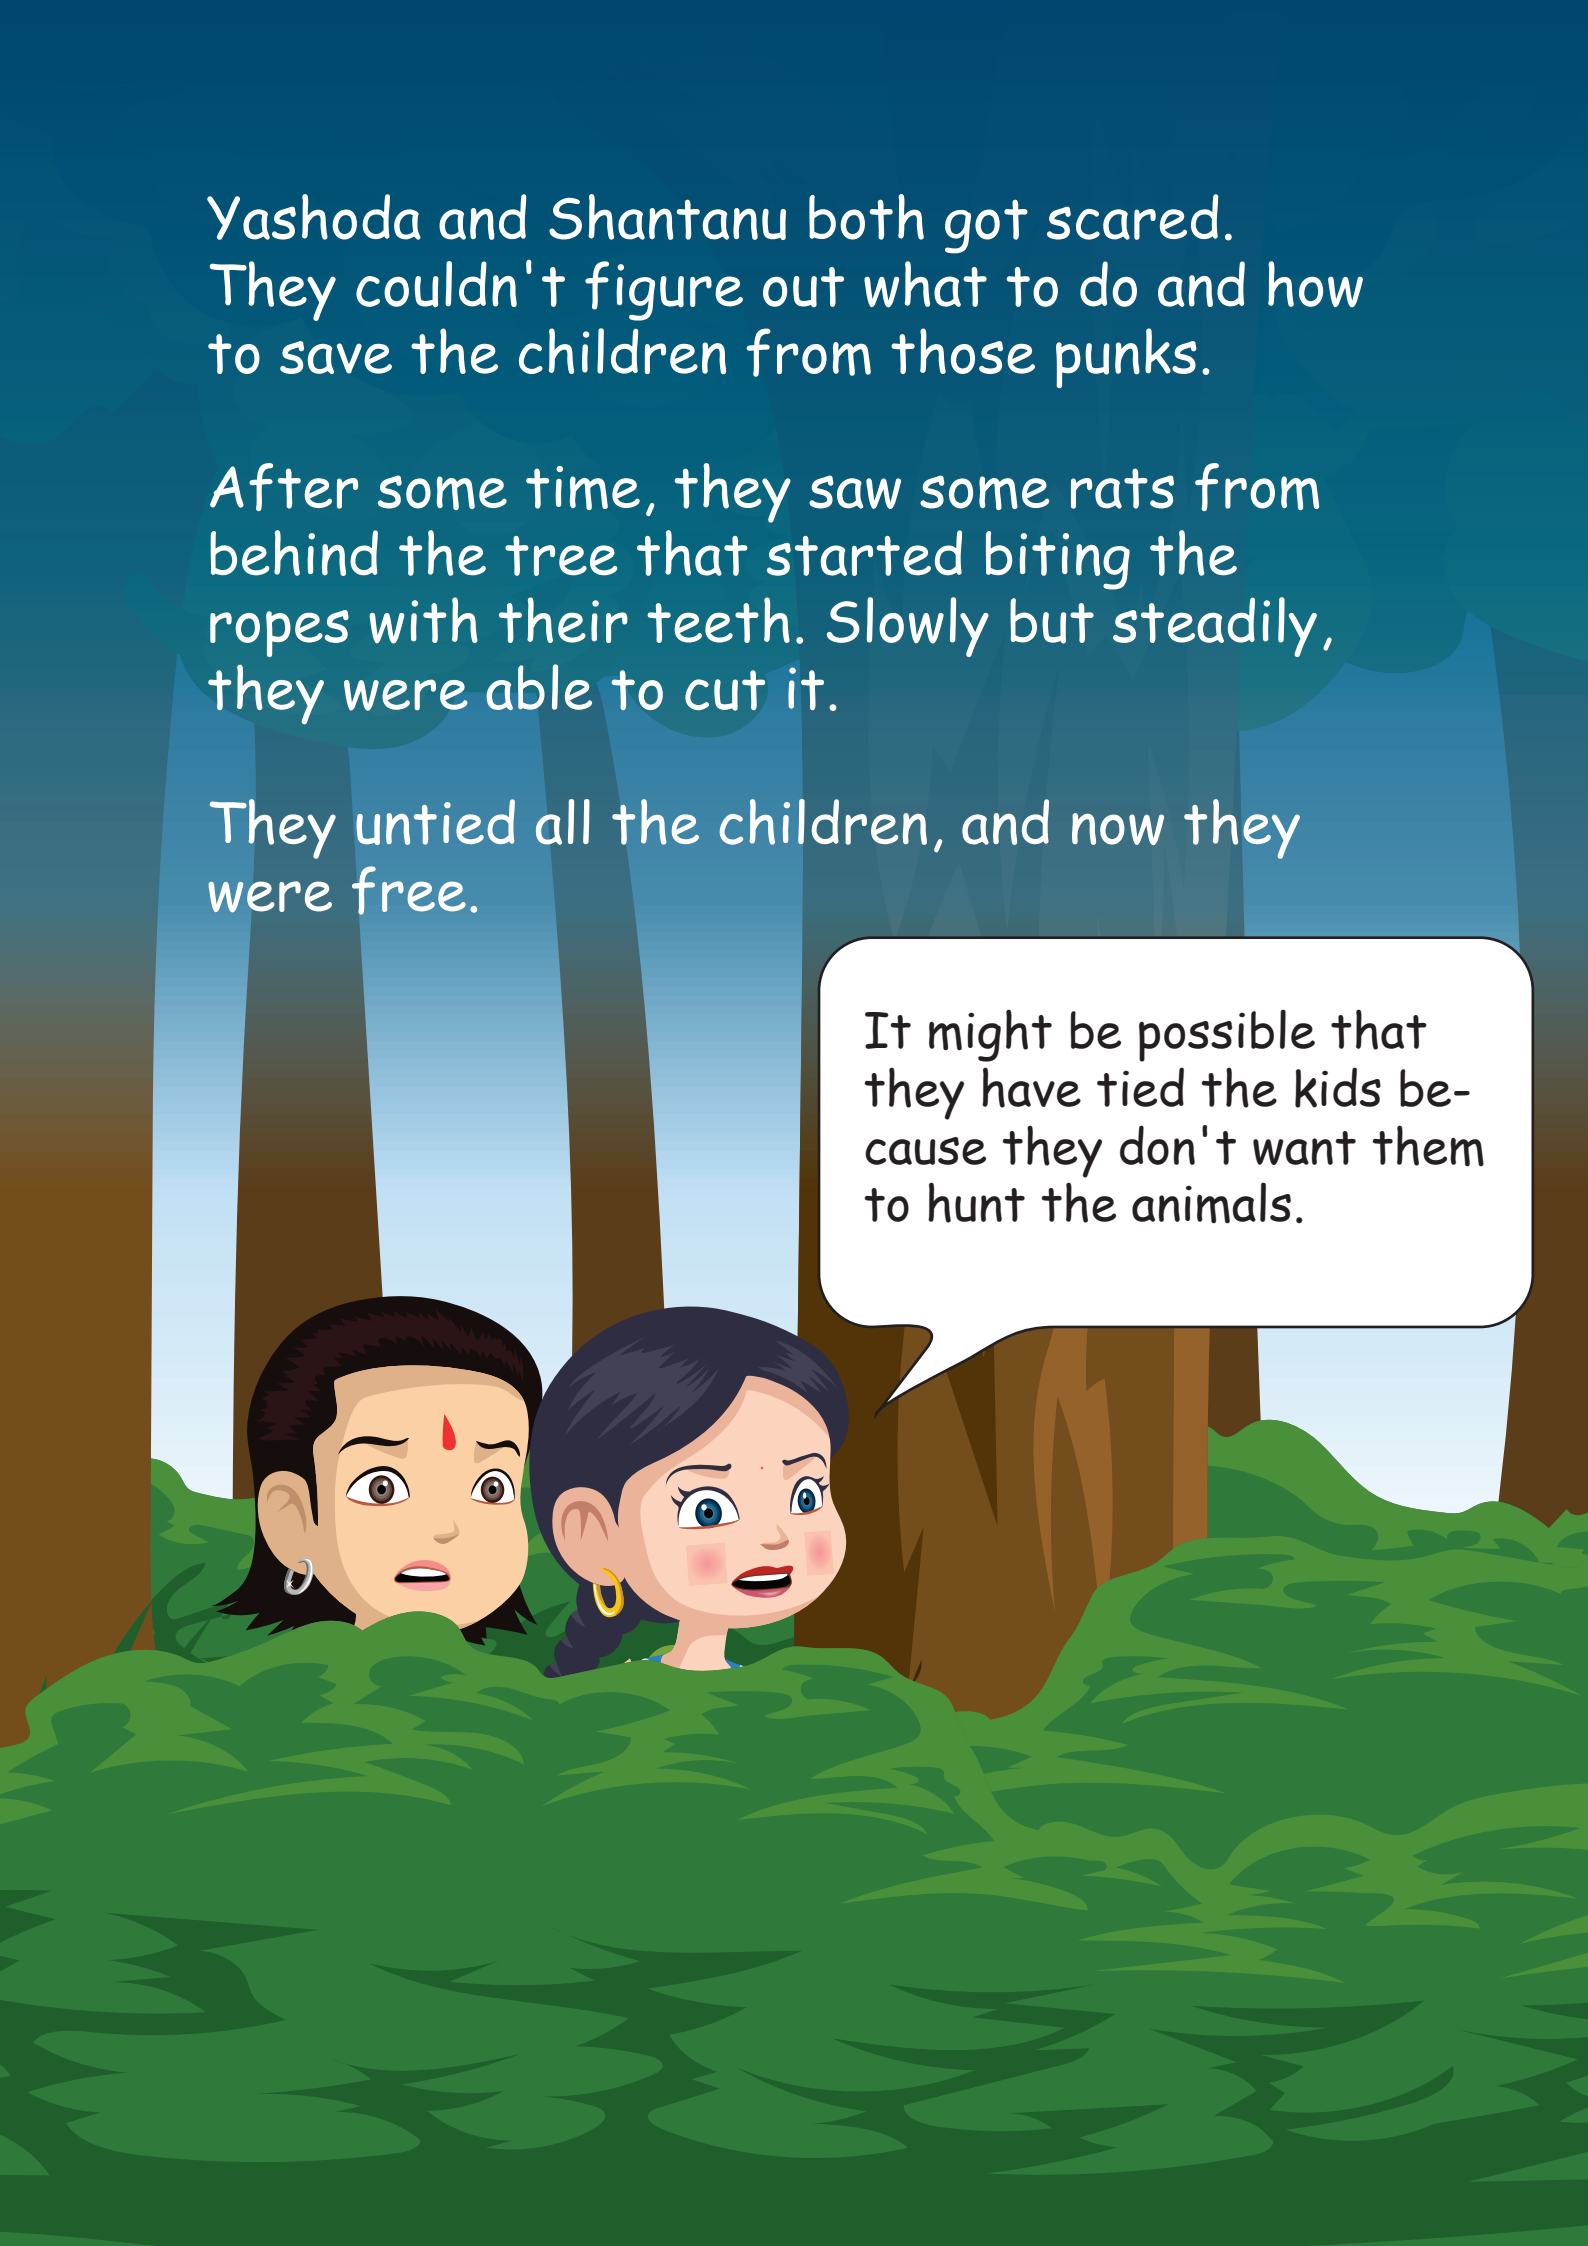

What's this?

Yashoda and Shantanu both got scared. They couldn't figure out what to do and how to save the children from those punks.

After some time, they saw some rats from behind the tree that started biting the ropes with their teeth. Slowly but steadily, they were able to cut it.

They untied all the children, and now they were free.

It might be possible that they have tied the kids because they don't want them to hunt the animals.

Not only this, but the rats climbed on the goons' bodies and started biting them. They bit all the goons.

Now, they heard a lion's roar. They got scared by the heavy voice. The punks were now forced to leave the village.

This way, the animals saved the lives of the children. All the children were now free, but they were scared and were crying.

After the goons left the forest, Yashoda and Shantanu ran to the children and gave them some water to drink.

Now, Yashoda thought this would be the right time to make the children realize the value of the animals' life.

The moment Yashoda started talking about this, one of the children from the group asked Yashoda and Shantanu for forgiveness.

Yashoda, you were right. We must respect animals and save them.

Today, I realized that animals are our friends and how important are their roles in our lives. The goons would have killed us if the rats didn't cut the ropes and the lion didn't roar.

I promise you that I will never hunt or hurt any animal from now onwards, nor will I allow others to do this.

This way, the children realized that the life of animals is just as important as ours.

We must not hurt animals because they also have feelings.
