

Two Fighting Cats

One day, two cats found a loaf of bread. Both of them wanted the bread, so they began fighting. They clawed at each other and fought for a long time.

Then one monkey stood in front of them,

Why are you fighting?

Why don't you share it?

We are fighting because we both want to eat the bread by ourselves.

We don't want the other to get more, so we cannot share it.

The monkey tore the loaf into two.

All right, I'll help you to cut it into half.

One piece looks a bit bigger, let me make them the same size.

he said and ate a little from the bigger piece.

Then the other piece looked bigger, so he ate a little of that one too. The cats, busy fighting each other, did not see that the monkey had eaten the bread.

In the meantime, the monkey ate the whole loaf and ran away. The cats did not get any bread, as they were too busy fighting.

When the cats realized the monkey had eaten the bread and left, they knew they should have shared the bread.

We must not fight,
but share.
