Dry food
Dry foods consist of hard pieces, bite-sized, biscuits or cracked dog pellets with their back teeth. Food is available in a number of formulas and packed in bags that are easy to store. Sometimes referred to as kibble, dry foods contain higher levels of carbohydrates than other types of dog food and are usually the most affordable dog food options available. Wet Dog Food
Wet dog food comes in several different varieties, including cans, bags, and tubs. Wet dog food contains higher humidity levels, as much as 75 percent, than dry dog food, which on average contains 10 percent. The higher the humidity level, the more hydrated the dog, which can help improve overall kidney and urinary tract health. The lower the humidity level, the longer the shelf life of food. Dogs with teething or mouth problems may find it easier to eat wet dog food, which is softer than dry dog food. Canned dog food is usually more expensive than dry dog food. Semi-moist foods
This type of food has moisture in the middle between dry and wet food. It can be in the form of pellets or chunks and has a soft and chewy texture. Semi-damp is packed in a bag that is easy to store, so it has the same comfort as dry food. Many dog treats are also semi-humid. Semi-moist foods usually carry the same price tag as canned food. preservatives may be required in some brands to extend shelf life. Raw dog food
Raw dog food contains raw meat, whole bones, fresh fruit and vegetables and sometimes milk, eggs and other fresh ingredients. Raw dog food diets claim to increase energy levels as well as the health of suits and teeth. There is always a potential risk with bacteria in terms of consuming raw meat. People often feed their dogs raw dog food as an alternative to commercial dog food, but there is raw or freeze-dried frozen dog food available to buy for raw food that is more convenient and already portioned beforehand. Dry dog food is ideal for dogs facing teething problems , because kibble helps clean their teeth, and is a budget-friendly for pet owners. Wet dog food, on the other hand, is good for dogs with a picky appetite, because the fragrant aroma entices them to eat, and it can be a lifesaver for senior dogs who can no longer chew hard food. Crystal of Bayville, NJ Verified Reviewer Verified Buyer Original review: August 27, 2020 We have a sniffer dog brother and think this brand is the way to go. Earlier this summer, we noticed the two girls were not eating normally, their usually firm stools were straight diarrhea. Several times, they experienced vomiting (including white foam) and explosive diarrhea on more than a few occasions. We changed everything else except their brand/food line (4health's food). After swirling with veterinarians, at least hundreds of vet bills, some carpet cleaners, countless phone calls, and even tears, in desperation, we changed their brand/food line. LUCKILY now they're BOTH MUCH BETTER. We will never return to this line again.... Ever. STAY AWAY FROM THIS FOOD QUEUE! T from Rutledge, TN Verified Reviewer Original review: August 11, 2020 I bought 4 Health canned foods after talking to someone working at TS. Our little dachshund puppy loved it but now it has started with terrible diarrhea. He's been housebroken but he can't come out with how bad this is. He has finished 1 1/2 can but you better believe there will be no more. He sleeps more today and wants to be carried and that's not his personality. Some of our other dogs have eaten it from bowls and they now have diarrhea. I've dumped the rest in the trash and will never buy this again. Joshua from Harpursville, NY Verified Reviewer Original review: May 30, 2020 Ses has an old Pit Lab mix 1yr which I've tried a lot of dry kibble and he won't eat it and lose weight so I tried adding canned food that he ate more but still showed little interest until I bought 4health lamb and canned rice food, he wolfed this food down like nothing and had put on weight His coat looked amazing and he was much happier. I've since started using their kibble as well and he's doing well. He refuses other dog food and doesn't like chicken or beef but hasn't tried fish so might try it at some point to mix it up a bit.Z. FL Verified Reviewer Original review: Jan. 16, 2020 4Health Grain Free Dog Food. I changed my dog to 4Health for just one night giving him a 1/4 cup with regular dog food. That night at 2am she started vomiting and wasn't sure it was dog food so I gave her another meal in the morning and she was fine then mid-morning she started vomiting again until she vomited blood. I'm now in the ER and they're them she has digestive problems and has to spend the night with an IV because she won't store any food. They're getting him X-rays now. I pray he'll be okay. But not sure. DON'T GIVE ME THIS FOOD!!! Melissa of Clarks Summit, PA Verified Reviewer Original review: November 29, 2019 My dog recently stopped wanting to eat this food and has been sick. It was only realized today that the inside of the can is coated with a gray paint/chemical skin type coating that peels into the food. I will return the rest of the cans I have and will never buy this food again. I thought I was buying food that would keep my dog healthy. It doesn't matter what's in the food if it's packed responsibly. I pray my dog is not seriously ill and would like to warn others who feed this food to their dogs. Margarita from Virginia Beach, VA Verified Reviewer Original review: November 10, 2019 SI hadn't read reviews of this food before we switched our 8-year-old Weimeraner to this food (wet and dry food combo). She had some unusual skin problems on her claws and with hair loss in some areas of her body that we couldn't know about and the sales person at Tractor Supply co suggested that we try this (not the vet). We were shocked. First, she really liked the food and secondly, all her skin problems were cleaned up in a few weeks eating this food. He has no problem with his GI channel as described in other reviews at all. Cindy of Manor, TX Verified Reviewer Original review: Sept. 30, 2019 We recently switched our three dogs to 4Health dog food. They all started vomiting within a week. Two of them recovered but one did not. He continued to vomit white foam that eventually turned into pure blood. Shortly afterwards he began diarrhea which is pure liquid blood like a water tap. We rushed him to the pet ER. She was diagnosed with hemorrhagic gastroenteritis due to changes in dog food. She was immediately put in iv antibiotics. IV fluids, anti-nausea medication, anti-diarrhea medication and they ran several tests on her. Three days in critical care and THOUSANDS of dollars then we took him home. That's today. We had the most horrible weekend not knowing if we were going to lose a member of our family because of the food we chose to give him. How can this company continue to sell this poison!!! It's horrible that it kills animals. Something has to be done. Class-action lawsuit??? I have a document from the vet stating the dog was the cause.... please whatever you do.... NEVER GIVE THIS POISONOUS DOG FOOD TO ANIMALS You!!! Read the full review of Penny of Yelm, WA Verified Reviewer Original review: Sept. 8, 2019 After reading everyone's reviews, I'm stupid. My dog Gracie switched to 4H and within a week I saw her vomit constantly and defecate her diarrhea at night and at home. He's He Hold it. She was a 14-year-old miniature schnauzer, and she refused to eat again. I took him to the vet and short story he had kidney failure. We tried desperately to save him, I spent thousands on inpatient care and an IV to get him back. He eventually died after a two-week battle for life. I am so heartbroken now, if I only read this review first! It's exactly the same as the others describe. I fed him canned 4Health dog food in grain-free variety. It's worth a class action lawsuit. My poor baby Gracie, get away from me because she's too old to fight whatever poison is in this food! Scott of London, AR Verified Reviewer Original review: July 13, 2019 We switched to 4health after an employee at TS suggested we give it a try because it was made by Diamond. Our dog was at Diamond Naturals before and this was supposed to be the same food. After a good night through part of the bag all 3 dogs had started gasping and one started having bloody benches. Then we started to find vomit. After a few days all 3 do not want to eat. We thought they didn't like the food and probably had a bug and took it to the vet. Nausea and shots later he was better but did not eat dry dog food. We went back to TS and bought lamb and rice to see if they liked it. After the first bowl all 3 dogs are now sick. Vomit white foam or all pieces of food. Gasp and now won't eat. We're looking for another brand right now. We will never buy this food again! Zabrina from Bonneau, SC Verified Reviewer Original review: June 3, 2019 I has a german short pointer and difficulty keeping weight on her. I tried 1 4health because I received a coupon for a free bag. He loved it. Other dog food he would eat a little when he was hungry, but not enough to keep the weight on him. She was always under weight despite being fed free. With the 4health performance formula, he enjoys eating it and maintaining a healthy weight, despite almost constantly walking on the farm during the day. I have also fed 4health wet and dry food to the beagle puppies we have. Very healthy and fat puppy! I admit I am wary at 1st, not being a fan of Diamond dog feed, but I no longer have reservations, regardless of what I have read on this page. Next Next Next
