With a calendar that's unique to your family, you'll be reminded of birthdays, anniversaries, events, and vacations.... 5 min read Read I like to-do lists, calendars help provide the illusion of organization and control over tasks and commitments. But not every calendar will do. At least it's my theory that if you don't care about the style and layout of the calendar software or calendar format you use to track events, you probably don't need a calendar at all. Maybe it's a matter of taste or aesthetics, maybe it's a bit of OCD. But if you are a person on the calendar, you have some decent options for heading into the new year. Word has always not offered useful built-in calendar templates – heavy on ugly design elements and light on functionality. So I built this little template which automatically inserts dates for you depending on the number of days that you There is a place to enter meetings and classes. And not much else. It's simple, but practical. (You can keep a little clip art there if you feel the urge. Snowflake for January, whatever.) Then you have slicker choices, courtesy of Microsoft Office Online. These are prefabrication calendars for different applications and purposes. A total of 64 of them. There are several academic calendars in Visio, Excel, Publisher, and Word. Calendars by month, year, and many years. Portrait, landscape, five days, seven. Many extremely ugly PowerPoint calendars, including some erroneous bars and a kind of Madras grille. Lunar calendars for different time zones (who knew the moon worked this way), photo calendars, postcard calendars. And even a basic 12-month calendar in Word without a single piece of art deco nonsense. If your taste works that way. Happy calendar! Calendar!
