History of Oerlikon

Oerlikon traces back at least to 946, when the village was first mentioned in print. It grew slowly until 1855, when the railway arrived connecting Germany with Zurich. The town industrialized rapidly, and in 1934 merged with Zurich. As offices replaced industry in recent decades, many new parks have been added.

Traugott Wahlen Park

Park

In addition to large lawns for playing fields, the park holds a grove of linden trees, a shallow pool, and glass benches that glow blue at night. 9 min.
