

La rive gauche

La Rive Gauche is where the artists, writers and philosophers are --the heart of bohemianism & counterculture. Stroll around, soak it in! Say hi to John for me!

Musée d'Orsay

Art Museum

Probably my favorite museum in Paris, mostly filled with Impressionist art. Make sure you go to the top and walk behind the clock. It's a really nice shot.

Le Bon Marché

Department Store

Le Bon Marche started in 1838 and is a now high-end department store. It's the setting of Emily Zola novel Au Bonheur des Dames.

Le Plomb du Cantal

French

Try some Aligot, a traditional dish from le Sud Ouest made from melted cheese blended into mashed potatoes, and served with a steak or sausage. It's amazing.

Bonpoint Flagship

Kids Store

The flagship store of the luxury kids clothing brand Bonpoint. Both the space clothes are beautiful.

13 rue de Tournon, Paris

Coutume Café

Coffee Shop

I think you mentioned you need to do a bit of work. Here's a hipster coffee shop with good coffee and wifi.

Jardin du Luxembourg

Garden

When I was a kid, my grandma used to take me here to rent one of the small boats that you push from one end of the fountain to the other. You'll see. Try it!

Place Edmond Rostand, Paris

Pont des Arts

Bridge

Le Pont Des Arts is the only pedestrian bridge in Paris with a beautiful view of the Seine river. I used to cross it everyday to go to Art School.

Mariage Frères

Tea Room

Traditional tea house with hundreds of teas. Head there when you're tired of walking for a relaxing break. A little touristy, but worth it.

La Hune

Bookstore

La Hune is a fine art, photography, visual communication, and design bookshop. Highly recommended. Don't buy too many books, they're hard to carry back!

18 rue de l'Abbaye, Paris
