

Comic Strip

Demonstrate your knowledge of characters and plot.

A Note to Educators

We are so glad you have downloaded this resource! Students really love writing creatively and a comic strip is the perfect way to showcase this and their knowledge of plot, setting, conflict, and characters.

One aspect of this project that I add from time-to-time, and the students LOVE as well, is a picture of them as the protagonist in the introduction. I use a picture of their face and make them the star of their own comic strip!

This culminating assignment is the assessment at the end of our plot, setting, conflict, and character review entering middle school. From here, we take students into a deeper understanding of literature including types of conflicts, character analysis, theme, symbolism, and much more.

If you'd like the lesson plans leading up to this culminating assignment or the units following it, we'd love to have you as a part of our community! Our official launch date is July 1, so sign up for our emails so you can be a part of our Beta group (and lock in Beta group pricing)!!

Comic Strip Rubric

You are going to create a comic strip that will reflect your knowledge of literary elements such as setting, plot, character, and more. Work hard and have fun with the comic strips. Let your creative juices flow!

Use the following rubric and template to complete the comic strip:

Comic Strip Rubric

Antagonist introduced in proper sequence box:	Yes/No	5pts.
Protagonist introduced in proper sequence box:	Yes/No	5pts.
Climbing actions appear in proper sequence box:	Yes/No	5pts.
Climax appears in proper sequence box:	Yes/No	5pts.
Falling actions appear in proper sequence box:	Yes/No	5pts.
Resolution appears in proper sequence box:	Yes/No	5pts.
Comic strip is creative:	Yes/No	5pts.
Character is original (Not Super Man, etc.):	Yes/No	5pts.
Comic strip is attractive:	Yes/No	5pts.

(Space around the comic strip should be decorated as well-NO pencil anywhere!)

On a separate sheet of paper: Introduction

Introduction includes setting explanation: (Includes time and place)	Yes/No	5 pts.
Introduction includes plot explanation:	Yes/No	5 pts.
Introduction includes a picture of the character:	Yes/No	5 pts.
Introduction is colorful and attractive:	Yes/No	5 pts.

(Little-no white space left)

Top of Comic Strip-Title

Introduce Protagonist	Introduce Antagonist	Introduce Conflict	Rising Action
Rising Action	Climax	Falling Action	Resolution

Decorated Space

DO NOT write on the copy for your final draft!! This is just a template to show what should appear in each box.
