Sonia Roberts You say the UK parliament has been disclosing the corruption... but they are part of the corruption... how so?

Karen Hudes Whistleblower Three current members of the UK Parliament (Tracey Crouch, Louise Ellman, and Angela Smith) are following up on this corruption. Sir Tony Cunningham, who recently retired from UK Parliament, described in a 2013 letter to his constituent how Parliament is grappling with the corruption. The UK Parliament has published 3 comments of mine (as well as a comment from Elaine Colville, a Scottish whistleblower from the World Bank) on their website. Comments and correspondence with Parliament follow:

The coalition for the rule of law [the BRICS (Brazil, Russia, India, China & South Africa), the G-77 (133 developing countries), Germany, the US minus the Federal Reserve] is changing everything by using the legal system to end the network of global corporate control (which has the private central banks at its hub). http://kahudes.net/wp-content/uploads/2012/05/exhibit3.pdf

Dear Mr Fulford

Thank you for taking the time to write to me, expressing your concerns with the World Bank.

The evidence submitted by Karen Hudes in June 2012 regarding the work of the Independent Commission for Aid Impact raised several significant points. The creation of effective mechanisms for good governance is one of the key priorities in international development and I wish to reassure you that Labour is committed to ensuring that the good governance agenda is one that applies to all development actors from donor governments to multinational companies and multilateral agencies.

Ms Hudes has a wealth of experience within the World Bank and her personal experience of bringing issues within the institution into the public forum is welcomed. Her evidence in June 2012 stated that "The Independent Commission for Aid Impact has not been sufficiently rigorous in its examination of the UK Government engagement with the World Bank." I can assure you that we monitor the UK’s engagement with all multilateral institutions, but this is something I will raise with parliamentary colleagues.

Ms Hudes also states that in February 2012 she wrote to (The Independent Commission for Aid Impact) ICAI regarding internal control lapses within the World Bank and informed them that three US senators had requested an inquiry which never materialised. I welcome that Ms Hudes continued her work, meeting with the UK Serious Fraud Office in 2010 and testifying at the European Parliament’s Committee on Budgetary Control on May 25th 2011.

Despite Ms Hudes letter to ICAI in February 2012 it is clear she feels their response was unsatisfactory, in particular their choice to use KPMG to undertake a review of the Department for International Development’s (DFID) relationship with the World Bank. I am particularly interested in the relationship with outside consultants and this is an issue I have been engaging with closely.
The World Bank is an essential mechanism through which to achieve international development and scored very highly in DFID’s recent Multilateral Aid Review. However, I agree that its work must be done with effective oversight and monitoring arrangements. DfID will publish an update of the MAR in summer 2013 to assess progress so far against reform priorities set out in 2011. The International Development Select Committee also launched an inquiry into the Multilateral Aid Review (MAR) update in May 2013. You may be interested to know the ‘committee invites written submissions from interested organisations and individuals. The deadline for these is 27 May 2013.

I assure you I will continue to monitor these developments closely and take this into account in any future decisions. I have seen firsthand the difference aid means to people and the projects aid can support therefore I fully I appreciate your concerns, and it is crucial that we hear from those constituents who have strong views about such an important issue. I would like to reassure you that I have taken note of your concerns.

Yours sincerely

Sir Tony Cunningham MP
Dear Louise,

Thank you for your letter of 29 April to George Osborne enclosing correspondence from your constituent, Mr Benjamin Savage of Aigburth, Liverpool, about international gold reserves. I am replying as Minister responsible for this policy area and I am sorry for the delay.

Your constituent has highlighted an allegation made by Karen Hudes that the US Government has 170,000 metric tonnes of gold, hidden from the public in Hawaii. I am not aware of the situation highlighted in your constituent’s letter and would suggest this is a matter for the US authorities rather than the UK Government.

Please pass on my thanks to Mr Savage for taking the trouble to make us aware of these concerns.

 Yours sincerely,

[LORD DEIGHTON]

Dear

I am writing to you on behalf of my constituent Mr Paul Jenkinson,

Mr Jenkinson has expressed his concern with regard to a number of issues related to currency. I enclose a copy of my constituent’s correspondence, which I believe to be self-explanatory, and I wondered if you could look into the issues he has raised.

I look forward to hearing from you.

Yours sincerely

Dear Robert James Rogers KCB

I bring to your attention that I have not yet received a response to my letter dated 25/06/2014 and my emails dated 04/07/2014 and 14/07/2014. Therefore I kindly request that you forward my letter to all the Members of Parliament. I enclose a copy of my original letter [address removed] with attachments and links to useful websites. Furthermore, here is a link https://s3.amazonaws.com/khudes/Goldoutofhiding2.pdf that provides proof that the gold does exist. Moreover, within the link is the “Letter of Intent” that shows Wolfgang Struck is the authorized signatory on the Global Debt Facility to whom Karen Hudes represents through her role as Acting General Counsel for the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development.

I can not stress enough that the International Monetary System collapsed in 2008; while the last 6 years has been marked with smoke and mirror policies such as near zero or EU negative interest rates, “Quantitative Easing” and jawboning by central bankers and politicians to maintain confidence. Unfortunately the real economy is on the verge of exposing this confidence policy as companies reporting job losses are beginning to rise. The people are also feeling the true reality as the recent industrial protests show. However, there is no exit. Debts are rising and the real economy is contracting. The central banks can not increase interest rates back to normal since rising interest rates will slow the real economy further and increase debt repayments.

The only exit plan we are seeing is the “Elites” representing a network of global control is one of distraction, false flags and pinning the blame on others. We can see this by all the known trigger points for war are currently being turned into flash points. I refer to Palestine, Ukraine, Syria while the western military hardware has been positioned encircling Russia, China and Iran (see ships in the gulf and land bases in Iraq and Jordan). This unprovoked western aggression occurs while Russia stands it grounds in defense along the Ukraine boarder; making trade deals with China, Germany and the rest of the BRICS countries. Truly, these are not the actions of a leader seeking war but peace and rebuild to prosperity. Have we already forgotten the recent Russian diplomatic success with Syria? This is contrary to what the western mainstream media is presenting. I fear that these “Elites” will trigger a false flag. There has been much talk preparing the good people of America mindset of such that includes an attack on the US electrical network or a possible dirty bomb. It would truly send shivers down my spine if the Occult Message in Speech by Christine Lagarde of IMF came true.

The only exit option is the one offer by Wolfgang Struck. The transition from the current collapsing global fiat paper ponzi monetary system to the one presented by Karen Hudes should be simple and pain free. Moreover, it will bring back trust and confidence to the monetary system and stimulate local economies representing a true “Golden Age” last seen pre 1913.

I hope history will show that we prevented a new “Dark Age” of great financial suffering that will affect all people of the world and that we averted the next world war.

Yours sincerely,

Paul Jenkinson

Dear Sir Robert Rogers KCB

I attach a pdf file issues by Karen Hudes on her Tweeter account providing further evidence on the gold held in the Global Debt Facility. I consider that this warrants further investigation if it prevents unimaginable suffering to the UK citizens caused by the collapse of the international monetary system.

I would be grateful if you could respond to my letter and emails; if only to acknowledge that you have read them however I would prefer to know what you intend to do with the information given.

I trust this helps.

Kind Regards

Dear Right Honour Members of Parliament

I have been chosen to represent a growing number of colleagues, friends and family members regarding the dire status and eventual collapse of the international monetary system. It is clear since the collapses in 2007 no financial structural corrective action has been undertaken and history shows postponing collapses makes the next one bigger. It is clear that we have passed the point of any structural corrective action and face either a deflationary default (bankruptcies and a severe shortages of essential goods such as food and medicines) or a technical default through hyper monetary inflation. Although the mainstream media have done a great disservice to the UK people by maintaining a false reality bubble; at some point the UK people will notice and chaos will ensue.

With Austria requesting an audit of their gold reserves; it is clear that there is no trust within the global financial system. It is clear that we are fast approaching a situation that will soon take events out of our control especially the formation of the BRICS & Co countries. To avoid unnecessary chaos and to remove the risk of a totally unjust war with the East; I strongly urge that you support Karen Hudes and associates and I would be grateful if you tell me what are your intentions are and any progress made.
Karen Hudes provides the best option to resolve this crisis.

I respectfully and eagerly await your responses.

Kind Regards

Paul Jenkinson
On behalf of others
Dear Tracey,

Thank you for your letter of 14 January, enclosing correspondence from your constituent, Mr. Darrel Burke, which highlighted the rise in national debt and proposed returning to a gold-backed currency.

The majority of government borrowing is financed through the issuance of UK government bonds known as ‘gilts’ by the Debt Management Office (DMO) and, as such, most of the government’s debt is held in this form. The Office for National Statistics produce the United Kingdom Economic Accounts every quarter, which are available online at this address: www.ons.gov.uk/ons/jsp/index.cfm?Q=J-001382-united-kingdom-economic-accounts/index.html.

The latest report (Q3 2014) shows that the UK’s stock of gilts is worth £1.49 trillion.

The gold standard is a monetary system under which notes are backed by gold and can be exchanged against gold at a fixed price. It was originally introduced in the UK by the 1844 Bank Charter Act, which also gave the Bank of England a formal monopoly of the note issue in England and Wales (Scottish banks continued to issue their own notes but were required to back these with holdings of Bank of England notes). This system spread worldwide during the nineteenth century.

The link between sterling notes and gold was broken during the First World War. Following failed attempts to return to a gold standard system in the 1920s, the UK formally left the gold standard in 1931. Nowadays, no country in the world uses the gold standard as its monetary system.

Under the current UK monetary policy framework, the operationally independent Monetary Policy Committee (MPC) has responsibility for monetary policy. The MPC has the primary objective of maintaining price stability (defined as an inflation target of 2 per cent as measured by the twelve month increase in the Consumer Prices index) and, subject to that, to support the Government’s economic objectives including those for growth and employment. The Government does not believe that returning to a gold-backed currency would enhance its capacity to do so.
For your information, gold is held as part of our foreign exchange reserves and it is not current HM Treasury policy to change the amount. At present, HM Treasury holds 6,975,239 fine ounces of gold, which were valued at $72,030 million at end of 2013. The value of Bank of England notes in circulation, meanwhile, is substantially higher than this – at the end of February 2014, it was estimated at £60,198 million.

The assets backing notes are accounted for separately in the Bank of England’s ‘Issue Department’ accounting entity. Page 124 of the Bank’s Annual Report for 2014 gives the latest statement of balances, this can be found online at this address:

www.bankofengland.co.uk/publications/Documents/annualreport/2014/boerreport.pdf

As can be seen from the accounts, the liability of the notes in circulation is backed by a variety of high-quality securities and assets, including those acquired through the Bank’s open market operations, and UK government bonds.

Please pass on my thanks to Mr Burke for drawing his concerns to my attention. I hope that he finds my reply helpful.

Best wishes,

Andrea
